STATE ALLOWS HIGHWAY FUNDS AS FEDERAL AID IS ASSURED

DEALS CALL FOR OVER $700,000 U. S. ASSISTANCE

GRANTS OF $337,000 ARE MADE WITH MORE PROMISED

IS BIG PROGRAM COUNTRIES TO ADVANCE FUNDS WHICH WILL BE REPAID

(By The Associated Press)
AUSTIN, April 11.—Definite assurance that federal road aid again is to be available soon to the Texas highway system, was seen today when the highway commission made allotments involving about $700,000 in federal money.
Roughly estimated, $337,000 in state aid was allotted. In addition, tentative promises of perhaps $500,000 in state aid and about that sum in federal aid, were made, both sums to be paid out provided certain conditions are met, within three years.
Practically all the major allotments, however, were made on the condition that countries benefitting will furnish all funds for the present and will later be reimbursed by the state.
All allotments could be cancelled should the federal government fail to agree, but the commission, having delayed making grants for some time, is known to feel confident their recommendations in all probability will be treated favorably.
Approximate allotments made included:
Webb county $184,000 in state aid and $184,000 in federal aid for construction of concrete top on 15.5 miles of highway number 12-A from Laredo to Duval county line.
Nolan county, $97,000 state aid and $194,000 in federal aid for gravel base and macadam top on 15 miles of highway number 1 from Sweetwater east to Nolan county line.
Jim Hogg county, $14,000 in state aid and $14,000 in federal aid for top-siding 10 miles of highway 12-A through the county. Total cost was estimated at $48,000.
Hamilton county, $4,000 in state aid for grading and drainage structures on seven miles of highway number 108 from Hamilton to Hico.
Fayette county, $54,000 in state aid for construction of 8 miles of gravel road from Fayetteville to the Austin county line.
A tentative promise of allotment of about $600,000 in state aid over a period of three years, and about $500,000 in federal aid to be paid during the same period, was made by grayson county with the understanding that it will be voted on the county vote of 10-0. Work would be on highways numbers 8, 9 and 11.
The commission during the session made public a plan that will prohibit state aid allotments for gravel highways without the understanding that hard surface will be applied "in due time."

ELECTRICITY TO REMOVE LIMITS OF HUMAN EYE SCIENTISTS SAY

By NEA Service
NEW YORK, April 11.—Human eyesight's range lifted electrically to 200 miles to 2,000 miles—across oceans and continents—that is television, brought by American Telephone and Telegraph Co. scientists to what might be called "the ultimate perfection."
How far the electrical extension of eyesight will go by means of the mechanism just placed in actual operation here, no one yet knows.
At one end of the line between two green points, "electric eyes" see persons and things placed in front of them—will or in motion. At the other end, what these "electric eyes" see is reproduced in miniature on a small screen much as a movie film reproduces motion pictures in a theater.
Both the seeing and the reproduction are continuous.

On a Current of "Electrons"
Either telephone wires or radio can be used as the means of transmission. Billions of "electrons"—infinitesimal units of electrical life—form a flowing current through the telephone wires or through the ether. On this current, "electric eyes" travel—the human being of whom this winged eyesight becomes a part and parcel sitting still, biding the while.

The "electric eyes" of the television apparatus are photo-electric cells, which resemble radio sets in tubes of huge size. These cells are mounted in a cabinet, before which is the scene to be transmitted. In the first formal demonstration, this scene was Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce, sitting in a chair and holding a telephone, over which he was talking.
Behind the "electric eyes," a dynamo is mounted. It turns a perforated disc. By the arrangement of the perforations and the disc's speed, the subject on which the "eyes" are gazing sweeps constantly by beams of reddish electric light, moving across the field of vision of the "electric eyes" in fired jumps or bands and thus repeating the process—all at dizzy speed.
A film of potassium inside the photo-electric cells is sensitive to every change in the shading when the beams strike the picture subject. It records constantly the changing reflections. Thus its function as an eye is performed.

Electric Impulses Set Up
The recording consists of setting up electric impulses of varying strength. These impulses vary in number 28,000 to the second.
The current from the cells—a continuous picture dissolved into an electrical flow—is led from the photo-

How Television Really Works

Television in action is pictured here. Herbert Hoover sat in Washington talking over a telephone (inset). President Walter S. Gifford of the A. TEDFORD TRIAL BEGINS

Dallas Woman Pleads Self Defense In Shooting of Her Mate on April 8 Here

DALLAS, April 11.—Self defense will be the plea of Mrs. Clara Tedford, who went on trial here Monday for the murder of her husband, O. A. Tedford, slain Sunday March 8, after the couple had returned from a drive with friends. Six jurors had been selected Monday night.
Although the state is seeking a penitentiary sentence, each prospective juror is being qualified on his regard for the death penalty, being excused if he does not believe some cases warrant such a penalty. Mrs. Tedford has filed application for a suspended sentence, and jurors not in favor of the suspended sentence law are being excused.
The shooting occurred in a vacant lot next to Tedford's garage in Oak Cliff.

DEL RIO STORM UNROOFS HOUSES WITH BIG DAMAGE

SAN ANTONIO, April 12.—(AP)—Several houses were unroofed by a severe wind and electrical storm which struck Del Rio late Monday afternoon severing wire communication until after midnight. Property damage was heavy, but no casualties had been reported, trainmen declared.

An unidentified airplane was forced down by the disturbances 14 miles southwest of Bracketville, but reports were lacking as to whether there were casualties.

The storm struck northward and then east from Del Rio, centering between there and Spofford Junction, early reports indicated. Some hail and heavy rains were reported throughout the area.

RANGES IN FINE SHAPE

Cattle Are In Excellent Condition And Prospects for Industry Are Favored Good

HOUSTON, April 11.—(AP)—Cattle ranges generally are so good that there are more ranges than cattle to use them and cattle are strong, healthy and are fattening. H. H. Schell, government statistician, says in his April 1 livestock report which he released Monday.
The calf crop is called very promising. Sheep, goats and their ranges are 97.4 and 100 percent respectively of normal, the report says, the same as last year, but goats have not improved as fast as sheep owing largely to wet weather.

FOREIGN POWERS DEMAND PAY FOR CANTONESE ACTS

STERN WARNING GIVEN IN EVENT OF A REFUSAL

CONCERTED ACTION NO REPLY ISSUED YET BY LEADERS OF CHINESE

(By Associated Press)
SHANGHAI, China, April 11.—The Nanking disorders on March 24, which resulted in the deaths of seven foreigners, including one American, today resulted in the delivery of identical notes at Shanghai and Hankow by the five principal foreign powers in China containing three demands on the Cantonese government.
There was no official reaction to the communication delivered at the Cantonese foreign office here by the consuls general of the United States, Great Britain, France, Japan and Italy. The Cantonese officials stating merely that their duty was simply to transmit it to the higher authorities.

The only Chinese comment made in Shanghai was by Joo Tai-Chi, Cantonese commissioner of foreign affairs who said that the note did not suggest any mean of determining those guilty of the Nanking disorders and predicted that the first reply might include a suggestion that a joint commission be formed to investigate the incident and fix the guilt. The demands made upon the Cantonese were as follows:

- (1) Punishment of the commanders and troops responsible for the killing and wounding of foreigners; for the indignities to which others were subjected and for the material damage done.
- (2) A written apology by the commander in chief of the Cantonese armies and a formal promise to abstain from violence against foreigners' lives and interests.
- (3) Full reparation for the injuries and damages.

Warning Included
In the communication the powers warned that unless the Cantonese proved their intention to comply without delay, they would be compelled to take such steps as they considered necessary.

Inasmuch as the contents of the communication delivered by the consuls general had been generally anticipated, today's development was greeted with comparative indifference both by foreigners and Chinese in Shanghai.

Already much speculation has developed.

Livermore Makes That Much During a Manipulation Of Stock On New York Market

NEW YORK, April 11.—The New York Times says that Jesse L. Livermore, stock broker, has made $4,000,000 in a cleverly maneuvered pool operation in the stock of the Freeport Texas company.

The sensational advance of this stock in Wall street is said to bear out the story of Mr. Livermore's cleanup. The stock of the Freeport Texas company has been a market spectacle for some weeks. It touched a high today of 74 5/8, which is within an eighth of a point of its high for all time, reached on Saturday. It had a bad break today and closed at 72, with a net loss of two and a half points. The stock sold as low as 19 5/8 in 1924. Its low mark in 1925 was 12. Dividend payments on a basis of 12 were resumed in February, 1927, and this rate was increased to $4 recently by the declaration of a $1 dividend payable on May 2.

Mussolini Denounced By Would-Be Assassin

(By The Associated Press)
ROME, April 11.—Characterizing Premier Mussolini as an impostor and declaring hatred for Fascism, Tito Zaniboni, former socialist deputy, today defiantly admitted his guilt as he went on trial on a charge of plotting to kill the premier on November 4, 1925.
"If the police, instead of arresting me at 8:30 o'clock, had arrested me at 11:30 my project would have been accomplished," Zaniboni told the court in a cool, steady voice.
"I've never had a moment of weakness or indecision," he added. Everything has been done to prove that there was a plot to revolt against the state. But witnesses will come here to testify that I intended to replace the School Deals Made Involve $600,000

AUSTIN, April 11.—(AP)—Financial transactions involving nearly $600,000 in connection with the Texas Public school system were consummated by the state board of education at its regular meeting today.
The board purchased a total of $247,960 in bonds, carrying from five to six percent interest, from 11 school districts, and authorized retirement of bonds totalling $175,000.
An allotment of $261,300 state aid to 722 rural schools was approved.
One hundred thousand dollars of the bonds purchases went to the Sinton independent school district, the interest rate being five percent.
Sitting as the state board of vocational education, the board approved the state plan for home economics education.

EVIDENCE IS BEGUN IN GERMANY TRIAL

ONE COUNT OF INDICTMENT IS QUASHED IN GROUND OF FAULTY BILL

The jury was completed and taking of evidence begun in the trial of J. R. Germany, former city secretary, on the first of five indictments charging embezzlement in connection with alleged irregularities and misappropriations in handling of city funds, here Monday in 99th District court.
W. S. Posey was the first witness for the state, testifying that Germany was for several years an employee of the city. The case will be continued today and many witnesses have been called to testify.
One of the counts in the indictment now being tried was quashed by Judge Sullivan on the grounds that the bill wholly fails to show that the city is an incorporated city or town, and that it fails to show that the defendant was such an officer of the city that his misapplication, if any, would constitute the offense named. The defense had moved to have all counts quashed on the ground of faulty bills.

The four remaining indictments involve $2,299.16, claimed to have been misapplied at various times between February 2, 1925 and January 30, 1926. The case which went to trial yesterday involves $1,733.28.
The law firm of Lockhart and Gardner will assist District Attorney Durwood H. Bradley with the prosecution while Hedges and Crenshaw, and Cleburne Campbell and Schenck will represent the defendant. A hard legal battle is anticipated by court officials as the case is of prominence and subject to close technicalities.
The trial is expected to be completed by the latter part of the week.

TENTATIVE DATE DECIDED UPON IN FT. WORTH MEET

GOVERNOR MOODY IS TO GO ON TOUR OF EAST

WILL BE DIGNIFIED

STATE LEADERS GATHER TO MAKE PLANS FOR EVENT

(By Associated Press)
FORT WORTH, April 11.—Tentative date for the departure of an all-Texas special train, designed to advertise Texas through the north and east, was set for June 19 at a meeting of about forty representatives of railroads, newspapers and chambers of commerce here tonight.
The idea of a special train to advertise the state was conceived by the Texas daily press league and nurtured at a meeting of this organization in Dallas recently.

The train, if finally dispatched, will be manned by a carefully chosen personnel in order that it may command respect in any northern and eastern cities it may visit. Only men of recognized attainments in business and the professions will be invited to board it, if plans of a committee adopted by the meeting are carried through.

Moody To Go
Governor Dan Moody has already approved the idea of the advertising special train and has said he would accompany it, it was stated at the meeting. He will be extended a special invitation to make the trip.
Cost of the train will approximate $25,000, a committee reported, while the cost to an individual on the train will be about $225, this sum to include sleeping accommodations, transportation and meals. The report of the same committee advised that all unessential "frills and trappings of the old style train trip" be eliminated to further the idea of dignity and decorum.

Corry Traynor Must Serve Out Sentence As Result of Implications in Store Robbery

AUSTIN, April 11.—For fourteen years free from the shadow of a life term in prison, Corry Traynor of Jefferson county, convicted of murder, must again enter the walls and serve on his sentence.
Traynor, was convicted in Jefferson county in 1913 and sentenced to life. He was granted a conditional pardon in 1915 by W. H. Magoo of Austin, then acting governor. Governor Dan Moody today revoked the pardon on the ground that he has reliable information that Traynor is in custody in England, "charged with being implicated" in a store robbery.
Traynor must now return to the penitentiary, the proclamation said.

We are fortunate in obtaining this dealership for the fastest selling washer in the world—the washer that won World Leadership in less than 600 days. The Maytag has proved conclusively that it washes cleaner, faster and easier.

The Maytag is the ONLY washer with a cast-aluminum tub that is life-lasting because it will not corrode, rot, rust, split, crack nor break. The tub holds more clothes than ordinary washers, is heat-retaining, and drains and cleans itself in 30 seconds after the washing is done. In spite of its big tub capacity, the Maytag is so compact that it can be used in any space that will accommodate a chair. Through adjustable legs the Maytag is easily raised or lowered to suit your height. The famous Maytag wringer automatically and instantly adjusts itself to a handkerchief or a blanket and wrings both equally dry.

PARENTS MUST REALIZE THE SERIOUSNESS OF TRAINING THEIR CHILDREN

If there is a lack of restraint in pleasure, a too loose relationship between sexes, vulgarity of speech and manner, we are sure that it is not a spontaneous thing, without deep-rooted causes, and we agree with Mrs. Borden Harriman, one of the distinguished social leaders of the nation writing in one of the leading magazines of the day nothing happens without antecedent causes, and anything we see, even in the social phenomena, is the effect of what has gone on a long time before.

Instead of censuring the children of today, if we want to help to bring them back to a more normal balance of conduct and sanely governing ideals, we should seek to find out what is at the basis of their unrest and to remedy that.

We had the same instincts for pleasure and freedom that youth has today, and some would probably have revolted had they known in what way and how. We lacked opportunities for development, and in many ways were mentally inferior. Nor do we believe we were morally much better off, but we did find happiness in our home, and our lives revolved around them. This is not the case now, and the youth of today seem to regard home as a sort of boarding place, and we wonder if there is not something more wrong with the parent than with the child. We are thoroughly convinced that most of the wilderness of the youth, granting the claims of some that they are exceedingly wild, we believe that it springs from the misunderstanding that exists between the parent and the child. Parents we believe have gone to the extreme. In days of long ago, we hear men of age tell of how strict their parents were and how they were brought up under the shadow of a switch, there are many of the parents entirely too lax now. Much of the trouble is seen in the fact that too many of the mothers of today have decided that they do not want to build homes. They want to either have a position down town, or spend all of the time in a automobile or three-fourths of their time in the bridge party, or other diversions that are not calculated to build character or homes, while the children are turned loose to play in the street or on the vacant lots, boys and girls together, and this is bound to develop into a certain amount of coarseness and familiarity that is not the very best for refining characters.

There are fathers who, when their sons begin sowing wild oats, stop their incomes and turn them out of doors. A man of this sort doesn't consider how far he was responsible for his children's undisciplined acts; that when the boy was young he failed to gain his confidence, never took the time to exert a needed vigilance over him or teach him to respond to proper guidance. And at a crucial time when this neglect had its results, instead of trying to make amends and set the boy right or get him out of trouble, the father's impulse was to punish him and cast him adrift to shift for himself.

We have in mind families in which the children were practically ignored by their parents from their kindergarten days until the time they went to college. And what shall we say of the mothers who have gone in for dancing and the excesses of this age of upset and transition; who haven't been able to adjust themselves and live up to their jobs; who, instead, outdo their children in over-painting and over-dressing themselves and the extremes of fashion and frivolity; and at forty or fifty act like girls and twenty; who spend their nights in the night-clubs and turn their homes into saloons where drinking goes on all the time. Can we expect their daughters to be any better? If there has been a demoralization among the young, there has been a let-down in social barriers, in the ordinary decencies of proper conduct, in all decorum and self-restraint among older people as well. And there is nothing more deplorable than the hostess who turns her home into a clubhouse.

What has the older generation to offer? It is the older which has given them jazz, the trashy songs of the day, indecent plays, and the general idea that everything savoring of "puritanism" must go into the discard. It is older people who have set the example of breaking the prohibition laws. In the reaction against puritanism we have gone into vulgarity. And the miracle is that the young are as decent as they are. It is amazing what children are doing for themselves against adverse influences and conditions.

"If we of the older generation do not realize our faults, how shall we seek to correct those of the younger? If we are to prevent the young from plunging into folly, parents must have the ambition to influence their children to be better than they were themselves. They must give them the advantages of past experience, so they may in turn be prepared to teach the next generation to be better than the present. Only that way can civilization advance."

THE FILTHMONGERS

Under the guise of "freedom of the press" the pouring of filth into the reading matter of the day has finally reached a stage where even the press itself has commenced to protest. And when the counting-room has to give way to the late wakened conscience of the editorial room the condition must have assumed most noisome proportions. Decent people all over the country have long submitted to a recital of nastiness as a part of the news of the day, played up by the papers with thirty- and four-pica scare-heads, under constant self-mentorship of the copy on the part of the editorial room, that it seemed as though there never would come a limit or a let down in the dirty details published. The power of the press, used in news, editorial and cartoon, to bring into ridicule him who protests against its printing what it wishes, without let or hindrance, has held back many who desired no notoriety of this kind, though the decency of the reading public was offended almost constantly and by practically every newspaper. The dirtiness has been largely one of degree rather than quality. The extra editions which have chased each other off the presses to satisfy the morons of each community, who crowded the court rooms as well, have been maverick exhibitions of the want of moral responsibility on the part of the publishers of American dailies as a rule. Having for the last few years argued for the right to control their own pages, to determine what they can sell as mental pabulum as absolutely no one's business except their own, no matter how unhealthful it might be, they are now in a quandary as to how they can accomplish a reform of the panderers to putridity in their ranks without putting themselves in an inconsistent position relative to their previous contentions. That something should be done the most decent among them admit. The same papers which have shrieked for stringent pure food laws, which have devoted columns to a demand for clean milk supply, uncontaminated water, rigid contagious disease law enforcement, have taken the contents of the moral cesspools of the world into the home of their subscribers and spread them broadcast on the streets of their cities under the guise of freedom of the press. This they have all done, with exceptions so rare that they are regarded as curiosities and singled out to be put on exhibition. Quantity of circulation has been the aim and quality considered as a negligible element.

Just how long would these newspapers permit the producers of foodstuffs to test their own wares, the milk dealers to search out the purveyors of injurious milk, public utility corporations to pass on the condition of the water or the heads of households in which were contagious diseases to make the quarantine regulations, or the lawyer for the defense to sit on the bench in a criminal case, and not raise such a protest that they would have to send out their papers in asbestos containers? Yet their contention is that they shall be allowed to sit in judgment on their own violations of the rules of decency and establish their own censorship. If they have become sufficiently awakened to the seriousness of the situation to scrape the filth off their own clothes first then insist on its being generally eliminated, there is hope, and it might be well as an experiment to discover just how real is their willingness to make the fight for cleanliness and how effectively they can accomplish the purpose. They must first begin their own establishments in a contest with the counting room and the circulating department. In discussing the matter, the editor of a newspaper, himself a high-minded and excellent character, said:

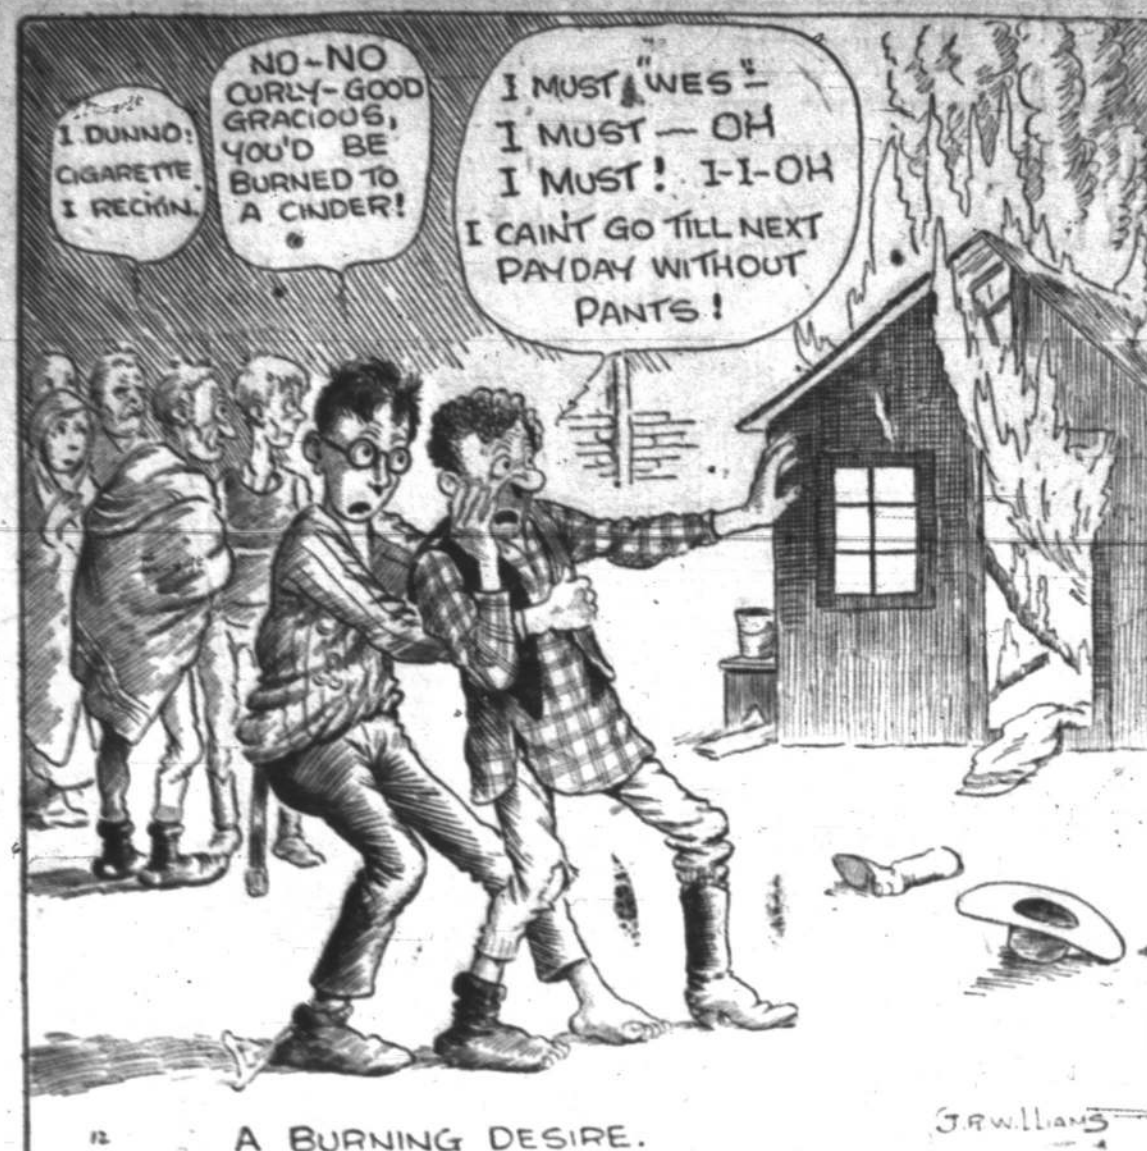

No one regrets more than myself the demand for this sort of news. But what are we to do? The public demands it and if you don't give it to them, played up with big type the circulation department, the newsboys and all connected with the movement of the paper in the community complain bitterly. If our circulation falls the advertising goes with it.

With this as the viewpoint of the men in charge of the editorial policy the problem assigned to them of clothing the news in language appropriate for home consumption, in other words "fit to eat," is far from solution and difficult in the extreme. They claim they do not need any help by law or even moral support. Give them their chance. At the same time let the decent people of the United States stand ready to assume the burden of cleaning the press, even at the expense of the vicious attacks which they shall be compelled to endure in attempting to make the printed matter which goes into the homes as healthful for the growing mentalities therein contained as the food on the table shall be to the growing bodies, the water from the faucets or the air breathed.

Rev. M. Ray, of Popular Bluff, Mo., recently had his faith in humanity rudely shaken and later restored again. First, some miscreant stole 34 of his choice hens, which caused him to feel that his labors in the Lord's vineyard had gone for naught, but when members of his congregation clubbed together and replaced the missing fowls he was fully reassured.

William Openheim, living near Humboldt, Ia., tells the season's best hog story. Missing one of his prize-winning hogs last November, he supposed that the animal had been stolen. A few days ago, while hauling straw from a stack he uncovered the hog, which had been buried all winter. It was able to walk, though very weak and reduced in weight from 230 to about 100 pounds, and is now convalescent.

OUT OUR WAY

SO THINK WE

We think that truth can always await opportunity and it usually comes that time that it will reveal itself.

We think that ceremonies may differ but politeness should be the same all over the world.

We think that public officials should be paid a good price for their services but we are not in favor of the fee system. Pay them living salary, and they will perform their duty without being influenced by the fee that they will get out of the job, and we believe the service will be better.

We think that police officers should be paid well. It is a dangerous job, and a job that requires long hours on the job, and they are paid a very ordinary salary. Men who have to make a living for their family cannot afford to work for the pay that some of them are getting, and hence many good men are forced to seek more remunerative positions.

We think that if a fellow hi-jacks us he will certainly be disappointed, or at least the joke will be on him. He won't get anything.

We think since the government is assisting on "borer" being cleaned up they may be some action. The government is beginning at the top and cleaning down, and this usually insures a pretty good cleaning. Some people start at the bottom and never get any where with the job.

We think that editor who is getting so much excited over the women becoming dowdy need not be so much excited over it, for there really may not be much difference. You probably just see more of them.

We think some people are willing to waste half as much food as they use and then complain at the high cost of living.

We think it strange that a farmer will make a big crop, and then leave it in the field to rot, when it could have been stored and kept in good shape with only a few days work.

We think a stay at home woman would be the most useless thing that could be pulled, and it would be so unusual.

IT IS REPORTED

It is reported there is a strong sentiment existing for the 1938 Texas Chamber of Commerce convention to go to Fort Worth.

It is reported that the ground is more often too dry to show or too wet to show than it is just right. That may be the reason the farmers are always calling for help from congress.

It is reported that Idaho is vexed at the Denver road missing the town by several miles. The way to fix that will be for the town to build to the railroad. That is possible too for Idaho.

It is reported that borer will soon be placed under martial law if the law breakers do not cease their operation. Dan Moody is going to see that the place is cleaned up, if it takes all of the peace officers in Texas to do it. Hurrah for Dan!

It is reported that the West Texas Chamber of Commerce is making a strong fight for the revision of the tax laws of Texas. We are of the opinion that this subject is certainly a very worthy one.

It is reported that the Oklahoma bank robbers are still at large. They have been seen in nearly every community recently, but have not been seen behind the bars.

It is reported that Chicago is going to do away with her municipal orchestra. The members wanted a raise of $10.00 per week, and got fired.

It is reported that the Prince of Wales is not going to marry the Spanish Princess. What does the Princess say?

It is reported that there are still a few chickens running loose where gardens are wanting to grow. The chicken will always win in a contest with the garden.

It is reported that there will be another coal strike started pretty soon so as to keep the price of fuel up during the summer.

It is reported that there is one old fashioned man in Lubbock. He was seen drinking his coffee out of the saucer.

TIME

It is not time—seconds, minutes, hours, even years—but the use that men make of time that makes the difference in men's fortunes.

Nature is absolutely impartial in the distribution of her hours. She gives to no man time that she does not give to another. The same morning gives every man an equal start with his fellow and the same night finds each another day further on the journey or lost by the wayside.

But all the time that nature gives to any man is the present. She makes his own past and future. Grasp the opportunity if the golden present that the past may not bring regret nor the future be without hope.

The great, promising but evanescent now must be grasped in its fullness while to secure the future and end the past of regret.

Are six, eight, ten, twelve, or eighteen hours a day man's allotted work? Not by all eternity. There are twenty-four hours on the clock and in twenty-four hours of sleep, recreation, eating and labor. There are no hours in the diurnal circuit for idleness, misused recreation and idleness in eating and sleeping. After the day's work has been earned there is still life's wage, the dues of evolution which man has earned in fruitful reading, healthful thought and deep-drawn introspection.

Too many—wreck-a-day men end work with the eight hours and wish for less, sleep ten hours and crave for more, eat to fullness and leave the table unsatisfied, hope in vain for the "luck in leisure," accept no opportunities to improve mind and body and see not that those who are getting ahead in this life are those for whom every "waking hour" is a "working hour."

Working hours are found for the unwise, but the wise find hours in which to work.—Cleveland Times.

A Five-Mile Legion Parade In Paris

A five mile line of parade of The American Legion through the heart of Paris on the opening day of the national convention next September has been tentatively agreed upon. It was announced recently by Allen C. Aker of Dallas, Department France Convention Officer of this state, upon information received from Howard P. Savage, National Commander of the legion. A cablegram from the French capital to Commander Savage announced that that line of march had been mapped out by James F. Barton, National Adjutant of the Legion, Howard P. Elder, National Chairman of The France Convention Committee, John J. Wicker, Jr., National Travel Director, and Albert Greenlaw, resident member of the France Convention Committee in Paris, after consultation with French officials.

The parade will lead through the heart of the downtown Paris along streets followed by victorious armies for centuries. A holiday has been declared Sept. 19, the day of the parade, and the greater part of the three million population of the city capital will be along the line of march. Ferdinand Foch, Marshal of France and supreme commander of the Allied Armies, General John J. Pershing, war-time commander of the A. E. F., and Howard P. Savage, National Commander of The American Legion, will be among the distinguished officials in the reviewing stand. General Gouraud, military governor of Paris, a war-time commander known to thousands of American soldiers, co-operated in arrangements for the coming parade.

The host of Legionnaires will gather for the parade in the Place des Invalides. Towering above the veterans will be the dome of this famous structure which houses the tomb of Napoleon and the relics won on blood soaked fields of Europe by the Allies. From this central point the veterans will proceed down the Avenue du Gd. Senat, named in honor of the moving spirit of the "Marschals," and on to the face of the Germans as they advanced almost to the French capital. The tramp of the Legionnaires will then be heard as they cross the tranquil waters of the River Seine on the bridge of Alexander III.

The veteran host will then turn left down the Court Reine, for a long time held for the exclusive use of the royal family, enroute to Versailles. The parade will then lead down the Court Albert I, then west to the Place de Alma further west on the Avenue President Wilson, named in honor of our wartime commander-in-chief. The line of march will then be right to the Avenue d'Iena and on to the Arc d'Triomphe. Here rests the immortal remains of the French unknown soldier, representative of a million men who died in battle in northern France and Belgium. The veterans will then pass down the world famous Avenue des Champs-Elysees to the Place de la Concorde. Here stands an Egyptian obelisk, the counterpart of Cleopatra's needle, marking the exact spot where stood the guillotine during the days of the bloody revolution. The flag leading the veterans will then turn left down the Rue Royale and into the Grand Boulevards. The parade will lead along the Boulevards Madeleine, des Italiens, Poissonniere, past the old stone gate of Fort St. Denis and then south along the Boulevard des Champs-Elysees to the Rue de la Vierge and then west to the Jardin des Tuilleries in the heart of the famous shopping district of the French capital. Here the veterans will disband.

The great number of musicians and bandmen that have made reservations and the international aspect of the parade promise to make it the most colorful in the history of national Legion conventions.

SIGNS OF GENTLENESS

I like a house that shows me these:
A cat, a dog, or singing bird.
In such a place I'm at my ease.
And certain of a cherry wood.
A bowl of gold fish on a stand.
Becays a gentle, friendly hand.

I'm always glad when "I come
Where there is love for living things.
A potted red geranium.
Which mucks the winter's bluster-ings.

In peace in spite of every care,
They still have time for beauty there.
(Copyright, 1937, Edgar A. Guest)

Some houses are severe and prim,
The lives within are old and gray.
And though it may be just a whim,
A bird house where the martens stay
Tell me as down the street I fare
That gentle folk are dwelling there.

For I have found that those who love
A dog, a cat, a bird and flowers,
Are usually thoughtful of
The larger need which may be ours;
Who for God's creature small will
Will seldom wrong his fellow man.

DAUGHTERS OF MIDAS

By Anne Austlin

THIS HAS HAPPENED
CLAY CURTIS, returning to
New York, where his father, THOMAS CURTIS, known to every employee of his mammoth department store as "Old T. Q." by announcing he will no longer remain under his father's roof.

He admits that CLAUDE DON-NELL, a musical comedy star, has thrown him over because she has learned that their marriage will mean Clay's disinheri-tance. To regain his self-respect, Clay declares he must make his own way and give the lie to Claire's jeer that he couldn't support himself.

Old T. Q. then offers him the assistant management of the store. Clay refuses, as he recognizes the offer to be just another soft berth prepared for him, by his father, whom he admires tremendously and whom he wishes to imitate by making his own way.

The old man yields to the advantage of view and the two part in sorrow rather than anger.
Clay prepares to leave. He has been a student of music and his ambition is to become a great composer. Old T. Q. is a dim with sadness when he is left alone.
He wonders how things would have been if he had had a daughter instead of a son. In his reverie he murmurs, "Well—maybe I will."

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER II

When Clay Curtis left his father to brood alone in the library, he went to his own rooms on the second floor—
an apartment that had seen little of him since his college days, but which was always kept in readiness against his return.

There was a library-sitting room,
with one wall of book shelves devoted almost exclusively to volumes on music. A grand piano that had cost T. Q. Curtis ten thousand dollars dominated one corner in the center of the room, looking about him as if he had never seen the place before. Then he went about the room slowly, touching the ivory keys of the piano with loving fingers, staring at the stacks of music
as if he were trying to read it all,
to memorize it, so that he could hold
it in his heart and brain forever.

He went to the photograph, opened a drawer and took out the first big red record that his fingers touched.
It happened to be a reproduction of the first movement of Beethoven's "Eroica"
symphony, as played by the New York Philharmonic Orchestra. He adjusted the needle, and as the music flooded forth, he stepped into the second of the suite of three rooms: his bedroom, and began to pack.

The suitcase which he had brought with him from his flying trip to New York contained dinner clothes, a business suit, four custom-made shirts,
three suits of silk pajamas, half a dozen pairs of silk socks, a dozen of his favorite collars, a yoke's supply of handkerchiefs, five suits of his made-to-order underwear, four cravats from the stock he had laid in on his last visit to Paris, and a heavy dark-blue silk dressing gown.

Two suits, counting the one I've got," he muttered to himself. "Reckon that's about all any struggling young Hornet to Alger hero has a right to take away with him. Might as well leave the 'Tut' in there. May get an invitation to the Bollinger's Ball."

From his dressing room he brought a second suitcase, and taking it into the library of his suite, he began filling it with a carefully selected stock of music, three or four of his most prize volumes and a great pile of manuscripts that he himself had written.
Into it, too, went the tools for setting
music down—ink, special pens, music manuscript paper, ink erasing fluid—anything that he could lay his hands on, for, as he told himself, the "trick"
could be of no use to anyone but himself, and without it he would be lost.

In his bedroom again, he filled up the suitcase to bursting point with odd and ends of clothing that he deemed absolutely essential, and which the other suitcase did not contain.

He paused at the door of the bedroom for a last look at the ease and comfort and luxury he was voluntarily giving up. How big his rooms were! How soft and thick the carpets, how sturdy and genuine the heavy furniture! He would miss his piano, his photograph with its records of symphonies and operas, his musical library. Suddenly he wondered why he was going, where he was going. Wasn't he just a melodramatic, sentimental kid, making a fool of himself? He had known soft carpets and white silk, down beds, and the luxuries of a perfect bathroom, all of his life. He couldn't earn why he couldn't earn enough to pay the rent on one room as good as these he was giving up! He who loved beauty and music and peace and leisure was hurrying himself into ugliness and noise and struggle and vicious poverty. Why? Why?

He dropped his suitcase, turned toward his piano, the beautiful, perfect instrument that responded to his touch as if it loved him. Then, as plainly as if it were in the room, he heard

EXCESS FAT IS NOT SO COMMON

Not nearly so common as it was.
One great reason is Marmola's Prescription Tablets. It reduces fat by correcting the gland cause, without abnormal exercise or diet. It is the modern, scientific way. Marmola has been used for 19 years. The results are seen in the tinkling lilted laughter of Claire Donnell.

"Why, Clay, you couldn't get a job
if they were giving them away as Christmas presents!"

He couldn't help it. He laughed shortly, snatched up his suitcase, and ran downstairs. At the foot of the stairs Mrs. Moore, the housekeeper, was waiting.

"There you are, Clay. I was just coming up to tell you I have a nice little supper set out for you in the breakfast room. Or would you like to have it with your father? We're all glad you're home again, Clay. Stay a while this time."

She was pretending that she did not see the suitcase. For off again, Mrs. Moore. Thanks a lot, but I don't want to eat now. You've been awfully good to me. And he put his hands on her shoulders and stooped over to kiss her soft, fat cheek.

"Well, Dad, I'm off. I'm taking a few things—just what clothes I'll be
sure to need before I get on my feet,
and some music that I knew no one else would want. That all right, I think."

Old T. Q. rose from his chair, standing six feet two. He frowned down on his son, who was an inch and a half shorter.

"Don't talk like a fool, T. Q. said gruffly. "How about money? Got any thing left in the bank?"

The boy flushed. "I'm afraid I'm overdrawn. I gave Claire a sapphire and diamond bracelet before I told her your decision, and she didn't offer to give it back. I wouldn't have taken it anyway, of course. But I've got a little loose change in my pocket. I think."

He thrust his hand into a pocket and drew out a silver bill clip and a handful of small coins. "About twenty-one dollars, I think. Enough to do me until I get a job of some kind. No sir, I don't want any more."

"Well, Dad, I'm off. I'm taking a few things—just what clothes I'll be
sure to need before I get on my feet,
and some music that I knew no one else would want. That all right, I think."

"Twenty-one dollars and thirteen cents! Thirteen cents! What did people do with thirteen cents? Where had the extra three cents come from anyway? Change from paper boys, probably. But he usually let them keep the change."

It was odd, Clay Curtis thought, as he walked briskly through the bitter cold of the early January night, that he should be thinking about dollars and cents, instead of about his father and his father's heartache and loneliness, and his own future.

Twenty-one dollars and thirteen cents! Why, that wouldn't keep him a day at hotel, the kind of hotel he'd been used to. Was that why his father had grinned when he looked at the money? Though, he'd be speaking home again in twenty-four hours, broke and willing to be a good boy and mind his Dad. Funny now that cold kept coming back to him. And now he'd loved her! Her gold and pink and white beauty! Her perfect body, displayed like a white statue to all who had five dollars and a half to pay for a ticket to the mid-air revue in New York. She'd never been real, he knew now, until that last half hour, when she'd mocked him, laughed at him, and kicked him out for a bald-headed butter-and-egg man.

Well, he couldn't walk the streets all night. He hardly knew where he was, had not been paying much attention. But he had turned instinctively toward the poorer part of the town, the section where working people lived in small cottages. He must have walked fifteen or twenty blocks,

he thought as he looked about him.
He was cold and tired.

He was looking for a street sign
when he became conscious of music.
Violin music. He stopped without realizing that he was doing so, leaned against a low picket fence and listened. It was odd that such music should come from a funny little house like that. There were lights in the front room, showing along the edge of a cracked green shade.

"That's real playing," he told himself incredulously, forgetting the cold and the future. "Who would have dreamed of hearing Chopin played by a genius on the violin in a funny little dump like this?"

He heard nervous drinking in the pure, clear beauty of the notes, until the music was stopped suddenly, in the middle of a measure. He woke from the spell the violin had cast upon him and stared at the window.

Then he became aware of a white cardboard letter in his black, tacked upon the corner of the house near-ed the little scamp of front porch. He could not read the lettering but he had an instinctive knowledge of what it said. Lifting his suitcase, he pushed through the little gate, stopped at the signs and looked at a match to read the card. He had guessed correctly. The lettering was "Furnished Room for Rent. With or Without Meals."

"With meals—and music," Clay Curtis cried to himself in the dark as he was rapped on the door.

A girl opened the door, stood startling at him, her white thing cradled
in her arm.

Lure Of Out-Of-Doors Gripping Everyone Each Reacts To Spring With Own Sports

The out-of-doors has made its call today, after a long winter of indoor life. Fatigued business men, schoolboys, and office girls and students stagnant with a rest from the work of labor and a few breaths of fresh air, playing, hiking, golfing, swimming, playing tennis—many are taking advantage of outdoor recreation.

Country roads are spotted with automobiles. Whole families and workmen are out to see signs of spring.
They are picnicking and riding; trying to find comfort and leisure.

Adolescent youth is everywhere
on motorcycles around the square up Broadway and back on Main. They not only sport friends in the street, and some drive slowly alongside an automobile to carry on a flirtation. Kneeker clad girls are not averse to riding behind a speed demon who makes his machine do everything but climb a tree for a thrill.

Tech students lounge lazily around Cherryman, the Tech Drug Store and other, shady places watching expectantly the vortex of drivers for a ride.
They half girls whose attentions become noticeable.

And so into the night, football maniacs find delight in rolling over the "skins" adjoining the municipal golf links. From the club house of the links the silhouette form of hills is similar to a bank of clouds and the sudden rising and dipping of the lights appear like lightning.

44. COTTON TRADES NARROW
NEW ORLEANS, April 11 (AP)—The cotton market was rather quiet today and price fluctuations were narrow and without definite trend. Following an opening dip of 4 to 5 points which soon increased to 6 points on all active positions due to lower Liverpool cables, the market gradually rallied on a little trade buying and covering and on predictions for unsettled and rainy weather in the belt as soon after noon prices showed a recovery of 3 points from the lows which brought the price back to within a single point of Saturday's close. The market remained quiet to the end, ending off 3 points from the highs in the late trading on some realising and closing steady at net losses of four points.

As Liverpool cables were 6 to 7 points lower than at this time, the market here opened easier, first trading showing losses of four to six points. Right after the call May traded down to 14.14; July to 14.21 and October to 14.45.

The subsequent rally gradually advanced prices to 14.19 for May, 14.26 for July and 14.50 for October, or five points on front end, but still off a point below Saturday's close. The market closed off three points from the best in the late trading, showing a trifling net loss for the day.

Exports totalled 35,052 bales.

45. COTTON OIL QUIET
NEW YORK, April 11 (AP)—Cotton seed oil was quiet today. After opening 1 to 3 points higher on opening, prices closed off under commission house selling, reflecting the irregularity of the seed market and new easier spots. Final quotations were 2 to 10 points lower with sales of only 5,000 barrels. Prime crude 7.50; prime summer yellow spot 9.50. May closed 9.00; July 9.25; September 9.40; October 9.25; November 9.20.

46. COTTON STEADY
NEW YORK, April 11 (AP)—The cotton market was quiet, but generally steady today. An early decline in response to relatively easy Liverpool cables was followed by recoveries on reports of further gains in the Mississippi valley, but the slight bulges were not fully maintained. After selling up from 14.25 to 14.26, July closed at 14.21. The general market closed steady, at net declines of 1 to 2 points.

The opening was barely steady at declines of 4 to 5 points in response to the easier showing of the English market. May sold off to 14.08 and October to 14.24, net declines of 5 to 6 points on active positions, as a result of liquidation by recent buyers and a little southern selling. Comparatively smaller offerings were soon absorbed, and the mid day market steadied up on unsettled weather reported in the central belt which served to increase the apprehension of floods in that section.

May advanced to 14.14 and October to 14.27 or about 1 to 2 points net, higher during mid afternoon, but the bulges seemed to meet some realizing or hedging and the close was 3 to 4 points off from the best.

Private cables attributed the relatively easy showing of Liverpool to hedging and Bombay selling. The latter, according to their advices received here, represented the unding of straddles between Bombay and Liverpool, the former market having been depressed by the liquidation of long accounts with the widening of the difference between the two markets sufficient to show a profit on the straddle operations. Favorable reports from the domestic goods markets seemed to create no trading interest of consequence, and business during the greater part of the day here was quiet.

Parents Are To Blame For Mistakes Of Youth States Veteran Texas Educator

(By the Associated Press)
ATLANTA, Ga., April 11.—An old fashioned Texas gentleman arrived in Atlanta today with some 1927 advice for parents on "how to make your child successful in life."

The Texan is Frank Marion Allen, who, after hearing the problems of college students for 23 years as registrar of Baylor University, Waco, says the parents are to blame. The advice he gives is:

Remember that the word "shant" is a colloquialism; in other words, take the strings off your child and teach him to know that he is an individual and not a "shant."

Mr. Allen says that parents and teachers of the nations are "challenging the mischief of youth by saying 'You shant do this,' or 'You can't do that.' It is better to inspire in children, by your own life examples, the difference between right and wrong, than to tell the child he cannot do this or that thing. When you say to an American 'You can't do this,' it means one or two things. He is going to do it, or break his neck trying. Parents are better prepared today, however, than ever before in the training of children and this I think accounts for the fact that the college students today are keener, broader and better in every way than their fathers were," Mr. Allen says.

Mr. Allen is here for the fifteenth annual convention of the American Association of Collegiate Registrars opening tomorrow. He is one of the oldest registrars in point of service at the convention, officials say.

Students of football and basketball will have difficulty recognizing their own children when the 1927-28 models of these games are put before them next season. Extraction of the dribble from basketball is regarded as an even more radical step than the work of the football rule makers in setting back the game posts, opening up the use of the lateral pass and preventing touchdowns from fumbled punts.

How Television Really Works

veloped as to which of the two wings of the Cantonese revolution, which have been at odds some time, will reply to the powers.

Within an hour after Quo Tai-Chi, commissioner of foreign affairs, had made his comment on the communication, the national news agency announced that he had been expelled from the Kuomintang party (the Cantonese) presidential organization because he had been improperly appointed to his post by general Chiang Kai-Shek, the Cantonese generalissimo.

Demands Made

WASHINGTON, April 11 (AP).—The identical demands growing out of the Nanking outrages, described by the state department as "studiously moderate," but presented with all the force of joint action by the five great naval powers, were served to day on the political and military heads of the Chinese nationalist regime.

They called for punishment of nationalistic officers held directly responsible for attacks by their troops.

With these specific terms went the stern warning, unless the nationalist authorities demonstrate to the satisfaction of the interested governments their intention to comply promptly with these terms, the said governments will find themselves compelled to take such measures as they deem appropriate.

electric cells, or "eyes" to amplifying tubes. Feeble impulses are amplified into powerful ones. Then they go to telephone wires or to the radio antenna to be flung far across space.

At the receiving station, the sending process is reversed. The electrical impulses are fed into a "neon tube" which glows with reddish hue. The brightness of the glow is regulated from instant to instant by the strength of the impulses it is receiving.

Another perforated disc, revolving at exactly the same speed as the one in the sending station, transforms the varying glow into beams or bands. These sweep across a glass screen 2 1/2 inches in diameter, showing from top to bottom and also, in tiny jumps, from side to side, and repeating.

Television thus recreates its picture.

Eighteen times a second the "electric eyes" of the sending station "see" all of the subject in front of them. The beams from the revolving disc cover the field of vision again and again at that speed.
