L. E. (Luke) Wilson Dead.

After being ill a few days L. E. (Luke) Wilson died Friday afternoon, July 15, at the home of his father, D. R. Wilson, in Del Rio. He had been conducting a restaurant in Langtry and died as the result of eating some chili which gave him ptomaine poison.

Mr. Wilson would have been 49 years old if he had lived until August 1, having been born in West Texas on August 1, 1878. He was married about 30 years ago and had lived in this section of the State for 27 years. Mr. Wilson was an employee of the Southern Pacific for several years, being located in Longfellow for five years. Recently the family moved to Sanderson and he had been conducting a restaurant in Langtry.

In addition to his widow Mr. Wilson leaves seven children, namely: Hollie Wilson and Mrs. Walter Babb, Langtry; Berry Wilson, Warren Wilson, Mrs. Bessie Buchanan, Coleman Wilson and Perry Wilson, all of Sanderson, Perry being only four years old. He is also survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. R. Wilson, Del Rio.

The funeral was held Saturday afternoon in Del Rio and interment took place there, the religious services being in charge of the Rev. J. M. Garner, pastor of the First Baptist Church. Friends of the family in Sanderson extend sympathy to Mrs. Wilson and the children.

A. B. Chambers Looses Suit Against Railroad

The suit of A. B. Chambers, who was suing the G. H. & S. A. Railway for damages alleged to have occurred when his truck was struck by a freight train, was finished Tuesday of this week when the jury returned a verdict in which the Railroad Company won.

The case, which went to trial Thursday of last week, required much time, in fact several night sessions were held in order that the Court might get through in time. The case went to the jury on special issues last Saturday night, and after being out 48 hours a verdict was returned.

SANDERSON TO HAVE ADVANTAGE OF AIR AN MAIL ROUTE

El Paso, July 16.—Anthony F. Joseph, president and general manager of The Colorado Airways, Inc., today announced that mail posted in Sanderson by 11:20 a. m. will reach El Paso in time for the early mail plane his company proposes to operate from El Paso to Denver.

The mail plane will leave El Paso at 1:00 p. m., arriving in Denver five and one-half hours later. It will make all night connections with east and west mail routes.

Passengers will be carried on this route in large cabin planes that are being built especially for the El Paso-Denver route.

Sanderson business houses and citizens will be asked to send their mail via air routes it was stated today.

The bride is the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Freeman of Marfa. The groom recently came here from Alpine and is employed as grocery salesman at the Kerr Mercantile Co.

They arrived here Sunday night and have an apartment at the home of Mrs. Tom Parsons. Their many friends extend congratulations and best wishes.

POWER COMPANY TO MAKE IMPROVEMENTS

Walter Dildy, manager of the local Texas-Louisiana Power Co., announced this week that this company has purchased approximately five thousand dollars worth of new pumping machinery for the two wells now in existence and for the one nearing completion.

The company now has under advisement and consideration, Mr. Dildy says, of the removing of all the wooden mains and replacing them with six inch cast iron mains.

Further improvements are contemplated, in that a new two hundred thousand gallon water storage tank is to be built and will be placed at least one hundred feet higher than the present ones. When this storage tank is completed, our city will not only have ample water supply, but will have a good water pressure and will be assured plenty of water at all times. Then with the installation of fire plugs our city should be able to reduce its fire insurance key rate.

When all of these improvements are made our citizens will be assured of plenty of water at all times.

E. S. Harrison Dead.

Friends in Sanderson of Conductor E. S. Harrison were sorry to hear of his death, which occurred at 9:12 Friday night, July 15, at his home in Del Rio. Mr. Harrison had been unable to work on the railroad for two years, and was employed as an inspector at the International Bridge in Del Rio.

He was 53 years old, having been born in Canada on June 25, 1874. He had resided in Del Rio 29 years. Mr. Harrison is survived by his wife and seven children.

AN OVERSIGHT

In the article carried in last week's issue covering solution of the water crisis no mention was made of the fact that Mr. Dildy, local manager of the Texas Louisiana Power Company had worked real hard and done all that he possibly could to relieve the situation. It should also be known that all costs incidental to linking up with the railroad's supply were borne by the utility company.

SANDERSON LOSES GAME TO DEL RIO COWBOYS

The Del Rio Cowboys defeated the Sanderson Boosters in one of the most interesting games we have had this year, by a score of 3 to 1. The "Limberger" and "Swiss Cheese," as the umpire dubbed our Pitcher Maddox and Catcher Barnes, allowed the mice to play, when they left the cage open and they nibbled. But we are going this coming Sunday to get our "Cheese" back. Dickey White said that they did not treat him right as they walked him twice and allowed him only two hits. But in the coming Sunday he will get more.

The "Swiss Cheese" ran the mice off and got on two pans, but stole the third one on them. Adams, "the goat herder," also got two pans and stole the third one while the mice were asleep. "Stump Post" batted for Barnes in the ninth inning, his sacrifice gave the "Goat Herder" his home seat. This is the first time we have lost a game since we have had the "Cheese" in the box.

"Bag worms" are reported in Bryan in greater numbers than ever known before. They are doing great damage to shade trees, especially cedars.

Bell County members of the Farm Bureau Cotton Association will shortly begin erection of a new gin in Belton to cost approximately $35,000.

A total of $80,268.66 was expended by Harris County during June for road and bridge construction, according to the monthly report of County Auditor Washburn.

Hundreds of acres in the Brownsville section have been planted to cowpeas or soy beans as soil builders, following demonstrations of their value as such.

Road District No. 6 in Karnes County, Saturday voted a $40,000 bond issue for work on the remaining seven miles of the San Antonio-Corpus Christi Highway.

School census of the Brenham Independent School District, Chappell Hill Independent School District and rural school districts show that Washington County has a total of 7065 school children.

Peanuts made the greatest gain in acreage of all Texas field crops this year, the acreage of this crop being 105 per cent of normal, according to an estimate made by George B. Terrell, commissioner of agriculture.

Contracts totaling $200,000 were awarded this week by the State Board of Control to 26 wholesale grocery companies for feed-supplies for the 18 state eleemosynary institutions during the six-month period beginning with September, 1927, and ending Feb. 28, 1928.

The United States will have to produce more than 14,000,000 bales cotton per year and at a cheaper price than 12 to 15 cents per pound, if she expects to continue doing business with England, John A. Todd, principal of the city school of commerce at Liverpool, England, told cotton marketing conferees at Austin last week. "America's greatest fault is fluctuations in price and crop," he said.

The State Board of Education adopted recommendation of State Superintendent S. M. N. Marrs and set aside $1,017,000 from the state textbook fund for purchase of school books for one year for 1,360,000 school children of the state. The sum represents 90 cents a child and will require about 4 cents of the 7-cent maximum levy allowed on the $100 property valuation for school purposes.

Total pipe line runs from the Luling field for the month of June, closing on June 25, was 517,220 barrels and the daily average was 17,243 barrels, total for Lytton Springs was 61,500 and the daily average 2,050 and total from the Mirando district was 272,800, with a daily average of 9,096 barrels. The daily average for June in each field is nearly the same as that for May, the decline being very slight.

The state's 17 eleemosynary institutions were operated during May at an average cost per person of $2.24 less than the average cost for the last nine months. In figures released Saturday by the State Board of Control, the average per capita cost was shown to be $21.64 for May. Total cost for the 13,230 inmates was $371,807.03. Construction costs for the month totaled $33,082.22. The average monthly salary for 1,875 employes was $56.99.

Southwest Texas leads the entire state in number of gas wells brought in during the first six months of 1927, with a total of 82 completions, compared with 60 for the North Central Texas counties, 30 for the Panhandle and 13 for the remainder of the state.

Final installment of the $67,500 annual rent on the American Legion memorial hospital at Kerrville for the three-year period before it was purchased by the federal government, was received last week by the board of control. It was a check for $4,317.74.

More oil went out of storage in the Panhandle field the past week than went into storage. Runs to storage averaged but 26,074 barrels a day, while withdrawals totaled 26,684 barrels per day, leaving a loss to storage of 610 barrels a day.

Prospects that business of the State Land Office will yield the state more than $13,000,000 during the biennium, were seen Saturday by Commissioner J. T. Robison, who revealed that his department has taken in $5,440,538 since last September 1.

COTTON FIELDS TURNING WHITE

Approximately 300,000 Persons Will be Needed to Pick Texas Crop This Year.

Fort Worth, Tex.—Approximately 300,000 persons who do not live on farms will be needed to pick the cotton expected to be grown on Texas farms this year, C. W. Woodman, director of the United States farm labor bureau office, Fort Worth, states.

Picking will be in full blast by next week in the South Texas areas where farmers are said to be already offering 75 cents a 100 pounds to pickers. Prospective pickers, especially those with families, are warned to consult with the bureau before going into either South Texas or the Rio Grande Valley region in order that they may be sent to areas that really need their services. Two men have already been sent to San Antonio to serve as special agents in making surveys of cotton and labor conditions in the southern part of the state, and others will be sent into all parts of Texas to make similar surveys as the season of picking develops, Woodman said. About 60,000 workers probably will make their annual trek into the Rio Grande Valley between San Antonio and the Mexican border, beginning soon. The purpose of the government's bureau is to direct workmen to localities most in need of workers and paying the best wages.

United States' Illiteracy Bill a Heavy Tax on the Nation

By FLOYD PARSONS, Professor of Economics.

IN AMERICA, we find a lot of people educated so far beyond the capacity of their intellects that they live in a world of impractical theories. Then, turning in the other direction, we find that here in our own country, nearly one-quarter of our adult population cannot read a newspaper or write an intelligent letter.

Furthermore, out of 35,000,000 population between the ages of five and seventeen, 3,000,000 do not go to school. If there is any truth in the conclusions of one group of investigators that an ordinary school education doubles a child's potential earning powers, then it is conservative to say that America's illiteracy bill now totals at least a billion dollars a year.

Along with the challenge of illiteracy to American education is the menace of propaganda. The educator is interested in how people think—the propagandist in what they think. And the principal desire of the educational propagandist is that people act promptly without further thought or investigation. Teachers are pulling for maturer thinking and propagandists for hastier thinking.

And the battle is one-sided. The compensation given the propagandist is many times more than that paid the professional educator. Until, therefore, we pay our teachers better money, we may expect to see propagandists winning the battle for looser thinking and hastier conclusions and a more errorful America. Each new convert to propaganda increases the army of people who refuse to think. And a nation made up of a minimum of doubters and skeptics will not make rapid advances in education. Doubt is the foundation stone of progress.

University Students Interested in Public Policies Only as Citizens

By DAVID KINLEY, President University of Illinois.

In the years since the war there has been a notable increase in the attempts to use college and university students for purposes of propaganda. Conferences have been called by individuals, "representatives" of students and institutions have been sent to attend them, and resolutions have been duly drawn up to be presented to congress or the President, or to some other public authority.

I have refused to participate in any of these conferences. I have taken the ground that if the students wish to participate, they are free to do so; that if they wish my help I will give it; but that I have no right to send one or two students, picked by myself, to any conference and say that they represent the 13,000 men and women of the University of Illinois. They do not represent them in any true sense, because they were not selected by them.

Conferences of the kind referred to have been called mainly to help on movements for or against some particular public policy. Such matters are not students' business. Their interest in those matters is their interest as citizens and not as students. Such attempts to "use" college and university students seem to me highly objectionable. In some other than English-speaking countries it has been customary for university students to interfere in governmental matters, national and international. The practice has never prevailed among university students in English-speaking countries. Such practice, in my opinion, is unfortunate and not within the province of university students.

Atmosphere of Fear From Bottom to Top in World of Business

By ANNE W. ARMSTRONG, Business Problem Lecturer.

Our great businesses are breeding atmospheres in which fear flourishes. Granite walls, marble corridors, smart uniformed guides, hushed anterooms, luxurious suites—the environment conspires to awe what with all its bravado is the essentially timid human spirit.

But it is not merely a question of the problem of the right kind of home-like and amiable scenery. To be candid, it is the business leader far more than the business scene that prevents business life from fulfilling more of the conditions of the good life. They have become unapproachable and cold in their personal relations with their employees. And this has made their employees afraid of them. And so there is fear in the ranks of labor in our great corporations.

But there is also fear at the top. Business leaders are plagued day and night by visions of Bolshevists and a hundred other bugaboos. Many business men see industrial spooks everywhere and they live in a state of perpetual fear.

If it is not fear, what is the source of that savage abuse heaped upon anyone who presumes to point out a singe business blemish? In Roosevelt's day, he was, at worst, a muckraker. Now even the most friendly and good-humored critic of business has become the garbage gatherer. Or he has fastened upon him the supreme epithet of condemnation—"Uplifter."

We must get rid of fear in business. It is destroying character. It is limiting production. It is keeping business back.

Speed of Modern Life Cuts Into Time for Meditation and Reflection

By DR. SELDEN P. DELANY, New York.

The breakneck speed of the Twentieth century and the ever-growing duties of a modern pastor are occupying some clergymen to such an extent that they do not have time to pray.

The speed and intensity of modern life have virtually eliminated any time which once was given over to meditation and reflection on the part of clergy and laymen. The lack of reflection is one of the greatest evils of modern life.

America needs silence and solitude. The question recently was asked: "Is the woman of leisure a danger to society?" If her leisure time is properly applied, there is no question but that such a woman would be a decided asset to society. We need more leisure in this day and age, but we also need to apply our leisure time to better ends. Religion, in its true sense, is what a man does with his solitude.

No one will doubt the effectiveness and value of two minutes of silence on Armistice day, or when the Unknown Soldier was buried in Washington. If such a short period of meditation and reflection is so effective, what a tremendous effect a period of ten or fifteen minutes a day given to quiet thinking would have upon the nation and Christianity!

Clergymen of today expect their parishioners to regard their churches as "houses of prayer," yet too often the clergyman does not observe the church as such himself. Faith and depth of character can be developed only through meditation.

WILL VISIT "LOST WORLD" OF NOVEL

American Museum Expedition Will Explore Place.

New York.—The scene of Conan Doyle's famous novel and movie, "The Lost World," will be visited and its animal life studied this summer by T. D. Carter and G. H. H. Tate of the American Museum of Natural History in their expedition to Mount Roraima, Brazil, under the auspices of Lee Garnett Day.

Mount Roraima, which is in the northern tip of Brazil bordering on British Guiana, is an ancient district geologically. With some of the country south of the Amazon it formed a continent ages before the formation of the rest of South America. This was long before the existence of the Amazon river. Later the Amazon divided the old continent, and new land appeared, forming the South America of today.

Mount Roraima consists of a plain from which rises a sugar-loaf mountain with sharp cliffs. The geological structure of the plain differs from that of the mountain. The plain is thought to date back to the proterozoic era, one of the earliest periods in which life is known to have existed. The mountain, however, is of red sandstone, probably of the Jurassic period of the age of reptiles, a much later time.

Because of the early formation of this land, Mount Roraima became one of the first strongholds for mammals and birds when they appeared upon the earth. Little is known of the present-day animal life of this region and it is hoped that the expedition will bring to light some interesting species. The dinosaurs and pterodactyls of Conan Doyle's romance have, of course, been dead for many ages, but relics of archaic mammalian and bird faunas probably haunt the region still.

15,000 Cypriotes Roam About Without Country

Cairo.—The unhappy plight of the "man without a country" seems to be multiplied many times in the case of Cypriotes, as the natives of Cypress are called in Egypt, and that entirely without any fault of their own. It will be recalled that Cyprus formally was annexed by Great Britain at the outbreak of the war with Turkey, in November, 1914, and in that act all the inhabitants of the island were made British subjects. There were and are today in Egypt, however, about 15,000 Cypriotes, for whom no provision was made in the act of annexation.

For a dozen years they have occupied an equivocal position, not having renounced their allegiance to Cyprus, and yet not being recognized as subjects of the new sovereign of that island. Now the Egyptian government puts them in an awkward quandry by demanding peremptorily that they either become Egyptian subjects or citizens or else quit the country as undesirable aliens.

The Cypriotes have sent a delegation to London to appeal to the British government for its protection, assuming that if it extends its citizenship to them, as it did to the actual residents of Cyprus, they will be enabled thus to remain in Egypt, where their interests chiefly lie, or else to return to Cyprus as citizens of that island.

Mountain Fort Stands Guard on Adriatic Sea

Vallona, Albania.—Saseno (or Sazan), the mountain in the sea that guards the entrance to the landlocked harbor of Vallona, has acquired the new name of "The Italian Sentinel of the Balkans."

Albanians say the Italians, who acquired it from Albania a few years ago, have so fortified it that it not only protects the harbor but that its guns, uniting their fire with those of Brindisi can close the Adriatic to any sort of navigation. They can also command the Albanian coast as far north as Durazzo.

The island, rising gradually from the sea to a height of 500 feet, is of limestone. Roads the Italians have built to the summit and the earthworks erected there and on the flanks of the mountain may be seen from a distance.

War Delays Hunt for Cradle of Mankind

Tacoma, Wash.—War and science should be divorced. At least so thinks Roy Chapman Andrews of the expedition in Mongolia and the Gobi desert seeking the cradle of mankind.

Because of disturbed conditions in Mongolia and China the scientists have postponed exploration work for a year and all members of the party will return early to the United States.

George Olson, member of the expedition reached here recently on the President Jefferson and reported the scientific equipment assembled at great expense was menaced in the first leg of the journey toward Gobi and that Andrews decided to take no chances of meeting brigands.

Humor Found Even in Somber English Jails

Rev. Eustace Jervis, at one time or another chaplain at some of the largest English jails, tells these two stories in his book, "Twenty-five Years in Six Prisons":

There was a very refined but sad looking doctor at one prison. A man who was under sentence of death complained of toothache. He asked the doctor if he would take the tooth out for him. The doctor looked at him sadly for a moment or two, and said: "Do you really think that it is worth while?"

A wife whose husband was "doing" three years wrote that she would have nothing to do with him when he came out. She said she had met a very nice gentleman, who had taken her and the three children to live with him. They had tea for dinner every night, he took them to the pictures, and had bought the children new clothes and boots. She had never been so happy and comfortable and cared for in her life. After bidding him farewell, she signed herself: "Your broken-hearted wife, Clara."

Just Why Hobo Had to Leave His Happy Home

Frederick A. Wallis, New York's commissioner of corrections, believes that prisons should maintain themselves.

"Prisoners must work," he said. "After all, prison is a punishment, and there's no call for reformers to pamper the lawbreaker.

"A tramp asked a farmer's wife one day for a piece of bread. As she gave him a piece of pie she said:

"'Poor fellow, you look as if you'd seen better days.'

"'Yes, so I have, ma'am,' said the tramp. He shoveled about a cubic foot of pie into his mouth with his knife and added, 'Once I dwelt in marble halls.'

"'And how,' said the farmer's wife, 'did you come to lose such a nice home?'

"'Term expired,' said the tramp.

Cleveland, Ohio.—"After having my first baby, I lost weight, no matter what I did. Then a doctor told me I would be better if I had another baby, which I did. But I got worse, was always sickly and went down to 98 pounds. My neighbor told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it helped her very much, so I tried it. Rays Solve Crime

Criminals who alter documents with any ink that contains iron can be detected by ultra-violet rays, according to Professor Bruning, Berlin scientist, in Popular Science Monthly. Postal thieves who open letters and reseal them also are branded guilty by the rays; one kind of mucilage, for instance, glows with a flourescent light under the rays, while another does not.

Artificial pearls, however skillfully made, are revealed as false, as are imitation diamonds. The finest genuine diamonds shine with a magnificent purple light under rays of the ultra-violet lamp.

CHAPTER XVII

A Little Look Forward

"So Shaw told you!" muttered Epstein a few moments later.

"You bet he did!" Laurie blithely corroborated. "He had to, to save his skin. But he was pretty game, I'll give him credit for that. I had to fire one shot past his head to convince him that I meant business. Besides, I had said, I thought he was reaching for something. I suppose I was a little nervous. Anyway, we clenched again, and—well—I'd have killed him, I guess, if he hadn't spoken."

He smiled reminiscently. All three were tactfully ignoring Bangs, who had walked over to the window and by the exercise of all his will-power was now getting his nerves under control.

"Shaw didn't do the tale justice, he hadn't time to," Laurie continued, "and I was in such a hurry to get back to Miss Mayo that I didn't ask for many details. But on the way to the garage it occurred to me that I had a chance for a come-back that would keep you three from feeling too smug and happy over the way I had gulped down your little plot. So I planned it, and I rather think," he added complacently, "that I put it over."

"Put it over!" groaned Epstein. "Mein Gott, I should think you did put it over! You took twenty years off my life, young man; that's von sure thing."

"You'll revive." Laurie turned to Rodney, who was now facing them. "All right, old man?"

"I guess so," gulped Rodney. There was no self-consciousness in his manner. He had passed through blazing hell in the last twenty minutes, and he did not care who knew it.

"Then," urged Laurie, seeking to divert him, "you may give me the details Shaw had to skip. How the dickens did you happen to start this frameup, anyhow?"

"How much did Shaw tell you?" Rodney tried to speak naturally.

"That the whole adventure was a plant you and Epstein had fired up to keep me out of mischief," Laurie repeated, patiently. "He explained that you had engaged a company to put it over, headed by Miss Mayo, who is a friend of Mrs. Ordway, and who has a burning ambition to go on the stage. He said you promised her that if she made a success of it, she was to have the leading role in our next play. That's about all he told me."

"That's all I know," ended Laurie. "But I want to know some more. Whose bright little idea was this, in the first place?"

"Mrs. Ordway's."

"Louise's!" Unconsciously Laurie's face softened.

"Yes. I went to see her one day," Bangs explained, "and I mentioned that we couldn't get any work out of you till you'd had the adventure you were insisting on. Mrs. Ordway said, 'Well, why don't you give him an adventure?' That," confessed Rodney, "started me off."

"Obviously," corroborated his friend. "So it was Louise's idea. Poor Louise! I hope she got some fun out of it."

"You bet she did!" corroborated Bangs, eagerly. "I kept her posted every day. She said it was more fun than a play, and that it was keeping here alive."

"Humph! Well, go on. Tell me how it started." Laurie was smiling. If the little episode just ended had been, as it were, a bobolink singing to Louise Ordway during her final days on earth, it was not he who would find fault with the bird or with those who had set it singing.

"The day we saw the caretaker in the window across the park," continued Rodney, "and I realized how interested you were, it occurred to me that we'd engage that studio and put Miss Mayo into it. Miss Mayo lives in Richmond, Va., and she had been making a big hit in amateur theatricals. She wanted to get on the legitimate stage, as Shaw told you; so Mrs. Ordway suggested that Epstein and I try her out—"

"Never mind all that!" interrupted Laurie. "Perhaps later Miss Mayo will tell me about it herself!"

"Now, what I meant to do was this—" Rodney spoke briskly. He was recovering poise with extraordinary rapidity. His color was returning, his brown eyes were again full of life. And, as always when his thoughts were on his work, he was utterly oblivious to any other interest. "The second act was to be—"

He stopped and stared. Epstein had risen, had ponderously approached him, and had resolutely grasped him by one ear.

"Rodney," said the manager, with ostentatious subtlety, "you don't know it, but you got a date up-town in five minutes."

His voice and manner enlightened the obtuse Mr. Bangs.

"Oh, er—yes," stammered that youth, confusedly, and reluctantly got to his feet.

"Wait a minute," said Laurie. "Before you fellows go, there's one more little matter we've got to straighten out." They turned to him, and at the expression of utter devotion on the two faces the sternness left young Devon's eyes. "I was pretty mad about this business for a few minutes after Shaw explained it," he went on. "You folks didn't have much mercy, you know. You fooled me to the top of my bent. But now I feel that we've at least broken even."

"Even! Mein Gott!" repeated Epstein with a groan. "You've taken ten years—"

"You've got back ten already," the young man blithely reminded him. "That's fine! As I say, we're even. But from this time on, one thing must be definitely understood: Henceforth I'm not in leading-strings of any kind, however kindly they are put on me. If this association is to continue, there must be no more practical jokes, no more supervision, no more interference with me or my affairs. Is that agreed?"

"You bet it is!" corroborated Epstein. Again he wiped his brow. "I can't stand the pace you fellas set," he admitted.

Bangs nodded. "That's agreed. You're too good a boomerang for little Rodney."

"For my part," continued Laurie, "I promise to get to work on the new play, beginning next Monday."

"You will!" the two men almost shouted.

"I will. I've got to stand by Louise for the next two or three months, and we'll write the play while I'm doing

"You'll Make a Man of Me, Doris," He Said Brokenly, When He Could Speak.

it. Then, whether America enters the war this spring or not, I'm going to France. But we'll talk over all that later. Are you off?"

He ushered them to the door.

"And it's all right, boy?" Epstein asked wistfully. "You know how vell ve meant. You ain't got no hard feelings about this?"

"Not one." Laurie wrung his hand. Then, with an arm across Rodney's shoulders, he gave him a bearish hug. "I'll see you a little later," he promised.

Rodney suddenly looked self-conscious.

"Perhaps then you'll give me a chance to tell you some news," he suggested, with a mixture of triumph and embarrassment. Epstein's knowing grin enlightened Laurie.

"Sonya?" he asked eagerly.

"Yep. Great, isn't it?"

Laurie stared at him.

"By Jove, you have been busy!" he conceded. "Between manufacturing a frame-up for me, and winning a wife, you must have put in a fairly full week even for you." His arm tightened round his chum's shoulders. "I'm delighted, old man," he ended, seriously. "Sonya is the salt of the earth. Tell her she has my blessing."

When he re-entered the room he found Doris standing in its center, waiting for him. Something in her pose reminded him of their first moments together in that familiar setting. She had carried off the original scene very well. Indeed, she had carried off very well most of the scenes she had been given.

"Laurie—" Her voice trembled. "You have forgiven the others. Can't you forgive me?"

"There's nothing to forgive," he quietly told her. "You saw a chance and you took it. In the same conditions, I suppose any other girl would have done the same thing. It's quite all right, and I wish you the best luck in the world. We'll try to make the new play worthy of you."

"You're not going to forgive me!" she cried. "And—I don't blame you!"

She walked away from him, and, sinking into the chair Epstein had so recently vacated, sat bending forward, her elbow resting on its broad arm, her chin in her hand. It was the pose he knew so well and had loved so much.

"Can't you understand?" she went on. "I've hated it from the start. I've hated deceiving you. You see—I didn't know you when I began. I thought it was just a good joke and awfully interesting. Then, when I met you, and you were so stunning, always, I felt like a beast. I told them I simply couldn't go on, but they coaxed and begged, and told me what it would mean to you as well as to me— They made a big point of that."

He took his favorite position by the mantel and watched her as she talked.

"I don't want the play," she cried passionately. "I wohldn't appear in it now under any conditions. I don't want to go on the stage. It was just a notion, an impulse. I've lost it, all of it, forever. I'm going back home, to my own people and my—own Virginia, to—to try to forget all this. I'm going tomorrow."

"You're excited," said Laurie, soothingly. He took her hands and held them. "I've put you through a bad half-hour. You understand, of course, that I wouldn't have done it if I hadn't been made to realize that your whole thought, throughout this experiment, has been of the play, and only of the play."

She drew back and looked at him.

"What do you mean?"

"Why—" It was hard to explain, but he blundered on. "I mean that, for a little time, I was fool enough to hope that—that—some day you might care for me. For of course you know, you've known all along—that I—love you. But when I got the truth—"

"You haven't got the truth." She was interrupting him, but her face had flashed into flame. "You haven't had it for one second; but you're going to get it now. I'm not going to let our lives be wrecked by any silly misunderstanding."

She stopped, then rushed on.

"Oh, Laurie, can't you see? The only truth that counts between us is that I—I—adore you! I have from the very first—almost from the day you came here— Oh, it's dreadful of you to make me say all this!"

She was sobbing now, in his arms. For a long moment he held her very close and in utter silence. Like Bangs, but in a different way, he was feeling the effects of a tremendous reaction.

"You'll make a man of me, Doris," he said brokenly, when he could speak. "I'm not afraid to let you risk the effort. And when I come back from France—"

"When you come back from France you'll come back to your wife," she told him steadily. "If you're going, I'll marry you before you go. Then I'll wait and pray, and pray and wait, till you come again. And you will come back to me," she whispered. "Something makes me sure of it."

"I'll come back," he promised. "Now, for the first time, I am sure of that, too."

• • • • • • • •

Four hours later Mr. Laurence Devon, lingeringly bidding good night to the lady of his heart, was surprised by a final confidence.

"Laurie," said Doris, holding him fast by one button as they stood together on the threshold of the little studio," do you know my real reason for giving up my ambition to go on the stage?"

"Yes. Me," said young Mr. Devon promptly and brilliantly. "But you needn't do it. I'm not going to be the ball-and-chain type of husband."

"I know. But there are reasons within the reason." She twisted the button thoughtfully. "It's because you're the real actor in the family. When I remember what you did to the three of us in that murder scene, and so quietly and naturally, without any heroics—"

She broke off. "There are seven million things about you that I love," she ended, "but the one I think I love the best of all is this: even in your biggest moments, Laurie darling, you never, never 'emote!'"

CHAPTER XVIII

"What About Laurie?"

From the New York Sun, January 7, 1919: "Among the patients on the hospital ship Comfort, which arrived yesterday with nine hundred wounded soldiers on board, was Captain Laurence Devon, of the American flying forces in France.

"Captain Devon is an American 'ace,' with eleven air victories officially to his credit. He was awarded the French Croix de Guerre and the American Distinguished Service medal for extraordinary heroism on August 9, 1918, when he went to the assistance of a French aviator who was fighting four Fokker planes. In the combat the four German machines were downed and their pilots killed. The Frenchman was badly hurt but eventually recovered.

"Captain Devon is well known in American social and professional life. He is the only son of the late Horace Devon, of Devondale, Ohio, and the brother-in-law of Robert J. Warren, of New York. Before the war he was a successful playwright. Just before sailing for France last year, he married Miss Doris Mayo, daughter of the late General Frederick Mayo, of Richmond, Virginia. On reaching his New York home today he will see for the first time his infant son, Rodney Jacob Devon."

[THE END.]

Passion Music

Passion music is music that endeavors to picture the suffering and death of Christ. The subject has been a great favorite with composers. Probably the greatest masterpiece of this kind is the passion music by Bach. The passion may be said to consist of the seven last words of the Savior on the cross.

PIONEERS' TRAILS TRACED OVER U. S.

Magnitude of a Journey Through Wilds Shown.

Denver, Colo.—The courses traveled by the pioneers of the West are much better known by students today than by those hardy adventurerers.

This is the result of five years spent by Prof. Archer Butler Hulbert in mapping the trails. He is with the Stewart Commission on Western History at Colorado college, Colorado Springs.

The Oregon, Santa Fe and Mormon trails, the route of the pony express, those lines of communication made famous by Kit Carson, John C. Fremont, Buffalo Bill, Jim Bridger and others, have been traced and mapped in terms of section, township and range.

Pony Express Is Traced.

The trek of the overland wagon trains, the westward push of the pony express and its allied caravans, the routes they traversed, the places where they stopped, now are definitely known for the first time.

A general map of the roads of Fremont, Carson and the "Forty-niners" shows lines following the shadow cast today by the air-mail planes as they wing their way across the continent. The landing places usually are near points made famous a century ago by overland caravans.

"If, in imagination," declares Professor Hulbert, "one swings the old Oregon trail or the Santa Fe trail eastward from Independence, Mo., instead of westward, he will find a clearer idea of the length of the journey which the covered caravans made from the Missouri river to the Pacific coast. Going east on the Oregon trail, one would cross South Pass in northwestern Pennsylvania and find that Portland, Ore., was in Nova Scotia. Going east on the Santa Fe trail, one would find that Santa Fe was in the Tennessee mountains and that Los Angeles was 400 miles beyond Cape Hatteras in the Atlantic ocean.

Shows Magnitude of Trip.

"With this rearrangement of the routes one can readily grasp the magnitude of the trips undertaken by those intrepid pioneers who carried civilization into the wilds beyond the Ohio river."

The work of Professor Hulbert was accomplished through the co-operation of the American Geographical society, the Library of Congress, Harvard, Yale and other universities. The results have been compiled into five volumes, containing some 275 maps showing about 7,000 miles of trails in more than 2,300 townships in twelve western states.

The work is to be followed by the compiling and editing of journals and diaries of the pioneers, which will form a documentary history of the West from the war of 1812 to the completion of the Union Pacific railroad.

Deaf Can Hear Through Finger Tips, Is Claim

Northampton, Mass.—The discovery that the ability of the human skin to detect rapid vibrations is much greater than has previously been supposed has been made here by Dr. Robert H. Gault, director of the vibro-tactile research laboratory of Smith college. Doctor Gault has been engaged for several years in experiments to enable the deaf to hear through their finger tips by touching a telephone receiver.

Previously scientists have supposed that a vibration faster than 1,600 times a second was too fast to be detected by the skin. According to Doctor Gault, however, these touch organs can detect vibrations as fast as 2,700 a second. Though many of the vibrations of the voice are more rapid than this, "oo," for instance, as pronounced by the average male voice being about 3,700 a second, and "ah" 3,682, Doctor Gault states that if the skin can receive vibrations as rapid as 2,700, it is amply sensitive to understand speech.

Indian Boys and Girls Active in Farm Clubs

Washington.—More than 5,500 Indian boys and girls have been enrolled during the last year in juvenile agricultural clubs, statistics at the Interior department show.

Last year Indian club members raised products valued at $43,752, including corn, potatoes, other vegetables, poultry and farm animals. Canning clubs and sewing circles are credited with splendid work.

Among those winning high honors in the corn club was Hannah High Hawk, a twelve-year-old full-blood Sioux girl of the Cheyenne river reservation in South Dakota. She was awarded a free trip to the National Corn congress.

Use of American Matches Under Ban in Peru

New York.—Lighting an American match in Peru may be the cause of a $20 fine. Such is the news brought back by some sadder but wiser Americans. Several passengers on the liner Essequibo said that not until they were arrested did they learn that a Swedish match company has a monopoly on the sale of matches in that country and that all other matches are highly dutiable, and, if brought in without duty, cost their owners $20.

DOG DAYS

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

"STUBBY"

"SERGEANT JIGGS"

THESE are dog days, that period in the months of July and August when Sirius, the dog star, rises and sets with the sun, and it is the time when, unless the weather is unusually capricious, man can expect the warmest weather during the whole year.

But for the dog lover every day in the year is a "dog day," marked by the warmth of his affection for the animal which is traditionally known as "man's best friend." That man recognizes this fact is shown by the numerous instances in which he has paid signal honor to certain individuals of this race of what is often so inappropriately referred to as "dumb animals."

There is the case of Sergeant Major Jiggs, the mascot of the United States marine corps, who died on January 9 of this year and was buried with full military honors by his friends, who are proud to call themselves "devil dogs."

There is the case of Stubby, the internationally famous mascot of the A. E. F., veteran of four major engagements, wearer of one wound stripe, and recipient of numerous medals and decorations, who also died recently but who has been mounted and given a place of honor in the American Red Cross museum at Washington.

There is Rufus, the Newfoundland hero, who accompanied Lou Wescott Beck, the "Samaritan of Death Valley," on all of his errands of mercy into that earthly inferno to rescue prospectors perishing from thirst—and who is honored with his master, since their deaths, with a monument in the city of Los Angeles.

Who has forgotten Balto, the Alaskan husky, who won fame in his dash to Nome two years ago as the leader of a dog team bearing the diphtheria serum to the plague-stricken city? According to press dispatches, Balto is to have a permanent home in the Cleveland zoo for the rest of his life instead of leading the wandering life of a vaudeville trouper or a sideshow exhibit.

But monuments are not the only enduring memorials to the dog's fidelity to man. Another memorial, and perhaps the most famous of all is the eulogy once pronounced by Senator George G. Vest of Missouri, which, delivered before a jury in that state famous for its hound dogs, has been reprinted in newspapers and repeated as a popular bit of American oratory more times, since it was uttered fifty years ago, than any other speech of its kind.

Famous as is this eulogy, there has gathered around it a cloud of myth and tradition which has obscured the facts of the case and the circumstances under which it was uttered. The true story of the lawsuit over the killing of Old Drum, the houn' dog, made famous by Vest's eulogy, was recently made public by Will C. Ferrill, editor of the Rocky Mountain Herald at Denver, Colo., who was a nephew of the two litigants in the case and who is therefore in a position to know the facts. Mr. Ferrill's story follows:

This hound case seems to be developing in the East into as much of a myth as those exaggerated tales of Jesse James. The litigants in this case were two uncles of mine. There have been many versions of the narrative, but the inside family story is that the killing of Old Drum really was an accident, the result of an overcharge of beans in a shotgun which was "planted" to give him a good scare. If proper explanations had been offered, the whole affair might have been settled amicably, but the explanations were neglected and as a result two families were involved in a bitter court feud and the hound case became famous.

The squabble came into public notice when Leonidas Hornsby, my mother's brother, was accused by Charles Burden, who had married my mother's sister, of having killed Hornsby's favorite hunting dog, Drum.

Both families were well-to-do, or the case never would have been tried again and again and carried to the Supreme court of Missouri in lengthy and expensive litigation.

Drum was as popular at the Hornsby place in Johnston county, Missouri, as at the farm of his master, Charles Burden, who lived nearby. Drum would go over to the Hornsbys and during those visits was often used by Uncle Lon and others for hunting. Game was then abundant in that part of Missouri, which had been much desolated by the Civil war.

Some animal, wild or tame, was disturbing the pans of milk at the Hornsbys; finally it was discovered that Drum was the guilty one. Uncle Lon, as I have heard the story, told or suggested to one of the younger members of the family, that he load a shotgun with beans and pepper old Drum with a shot. It so happened that the shotgun was overloaded, or the range too close, and instead of giving Drum a good "peppering," the hound was killed. There was no intention at all, according to this story, to kill Drum. This story about a poor man losing his favorite hound through the wicked act of another is Eastern myth.

The mistake was that Uncle Charley was not informed of the accidental killing of Drum. The body of Drum was hid and later found, and, as no explanation was made, the legal row began. The Hornsbys were from Tennessee and North Carolina, and the Burdens from Kentucky and Virginia. Both sides were stubborn. Burden sued Hornsby November 9, 1869, before Justice of the Peace George Norman. The jury hung. The case was tried again, and again the jury hung. At another hearing in January, 1870, Burden obtained a verdict of $25 against Hornsby in a jury trial.

Hornsby appealed to the Court of Common Pleas, where the jury gave a verdict in his favor. On May 2, 1870, a motion for a new trial was granted. The original claim by Burden for damages was $50, and in the new trial in the Circuit court, Burden was given a jury verdict for $50, as was first demanded, and Drum, the old hound won.

It was in this later litigation that the big legal guns appeared. Uncle Lon Hornsby employed Crittenden & Cockrell and Uncle Charley retained Phillips & Vest and Elliott & Blodgett. This was Col. Thomas T. Crittenden, later governor of Missouri, and Colonel Cockrell, later United States senator from Missouri. Blodgett became general solicitor of the North Missouri railroad, afterward of the Wabash system. Elliott was also an eminent lawyer. Phillips and Vest were distinguished in their profession and later prominent in the public service. John F. Phillips became United States judge at Kansas City, and George G. Vest, United States senator from Missouri. Such was the array of learned counsel when the case was tried before a jury September 23, 1870. Judge Foster P. Wright was the presiding judge. Blodgett opened for Drum, followed by Crittenden and then Cockrell in opposition, all three making brilliant speeches. Oratory ran high. Then Vest spoke and won the case for the hound, for by this time the interest centered more in Drum than either Uncle Charley, the plaintiff, or Uncle Lon, the defendant.

Vest's speech has become a classic on the dog in American literature, in the case of old Drum who was accidentally shot with an overcharge of beans, when he was disturbing the pans of milk at the old home place of my grandfather, Brinkley Hornsby. Uncle Lon appealed to the Supreme court of Missouri.

So much for the facts in the myth story so often told, as to the parties involved, the story of the poor, friendless man whose hound was ruthlessly killed, and the remarkable statement that the plaintiff demanded $200 for the death of Drum and the jury awarded him $500.

Senator Vest's Tribute

The best friend a man has in the world may turn against him and become his enemy. His son or daughter that he has reared with loving care may prove ungrateful. Those who are nearest and dearest to us, those whom we trust with our happiness and our good name may become traitors to their faith. The money that a man has he may lose. It flies away from him, perhaps when he needs it most. A man's reputation may be sacrificed in a moment of ill-considered action. The people who are prone to fall on their knees to do us honor when success is with us may be the first to throw the stone of malice when failure settles its cloud upon our heads.

The one absolutely unselfish friend that man can have in this selfish world, the one that never deserts him, the one that never proves ungrateful or treacherous, is his dog. A man's dog stands by him in prosperity and in poverty, in health and in sickness. He will sleep on the cold ground, where the wintry winds blow and the snow drives fiercely, if only he may be near his master's side. He will kiss the hand that has no food to offer; he will lick the wounds and sores that come in encounter with the roughness of the world. He guards the sleep of his pauper master as if he were a prince. When all other friends desert, he remains. When riches take wings and reputation falls to pieces, he is as constant in his love as the sun in its journey through the heavens.

If fortune drives the master forth an outcast in the world, friendless and homeless, the faithful dog asks no higher privilege than that of accompanying him, to guard him against danger, to fight against his enemies. And when the last scene of all comes and death takes his master to its embrace and his body is laid away in the cold ground, no matter if all other friends pursue their way; there by the grave side will the noble dog be found, his head between his paws, his eyes sad, but open in alert watchfulness, faithful and true even in death.

Relieving Body's Tension

French gymnastics are to make the body flexible and to free it from habits of muscular tension, and relaxing exercises are used. These consist in making absolutely limp one part of the body after another, and finally the whole at once by removing all tension from the articulation.

Geographic Division

"Piedmont Plain" is a name used in the physiography of the United States to designate that part of the Atlantic coast plain which lies between the Appalachian highland and the low coastal plain proper. It is distinguished from the latter topographically by being more rugged and eroded with deeper river valleys and geologically by consisting of much older and harder rock strata. The change from the hard to the soft and recent formation is marked by a definite line of escarpments over which nearly all the Atlantic rivers fall in rapids or cataracts, and the line is known as the "fall line." The Piedmont plain is less defined in New England than in the southern states. It is narrowest and also approaches closest to the sea in New York and broadens southward, being about 300 miles wide in North Carolina.

London has a goldfish hospital.

Early Christian Basilica

The church of St. Apolinaris, in Ravenna, Italy, is perhaps the most important existing early Christian basilica. It was begun in 534 and is noted for its very singular circular tower, which is 120 feet high.

WHEN THE NEW FORDS WILL BE OUT.

The following article was handed to us by W. J. Ferguson, local Ford dealer, and was taken from the advertisement of the Floresville Motor Company of Floresville. Mr. Ferguson says, upon reading it, the question is solved as to when the new Fords will be out. At any rate it is a good article and we pass it on:

ADVERTISING IS CAUSE OF GAIN.

B. & O. Superintendent Tells of Railroad's Prosperity.

The past five years, in which American railroads have done more advertising than ever before have been the most prosperous years of recent times.

So said Donald C. Stevens, B. & O. Railroad western division superintendent, before Akron Advertising Club Tuesday night at White Pond Inn.

For obtaining definite results, railroads have found newspaper advertising far the most profitable medium, Stevens said.

Stevens traced the gain of popularity for the B. & O. in the 17 years since Daniel C. Willard became president.

Much of the gain is the result of advertising, he said, but in the background is a superior service.

"The service has to be there or the advertising would have gained us no lasting benefits," he said.

Emphasizing the guiding hopes of Willard's ambition, Stevens quoted one of the president's early slogans: "If our railroad must be a good neighbor to each town that we serve."—Akron Times.

Mrs. Chester Barnett and son have returned from a visit with her sister, Mrs. John Rowland. She was accompanied home by her sister-in-law, Mrs. John Hayre of this city, who went from the first of the week for several days in Del Rio.

Nuts Now Quickly Dried

Nut growers in the United States have found one more way to beat nature at her own game. They now dry walnuts by electricity in 24 hours instead of waiting weeks for sun and wind to do it by the method used previous to the past season. This enables them to ship to market when the market is ready. More than 30 per cent of the California walnut crop was dried by the new means in 1926 and a greater proportion is expected this year.

MAHALIA'S SONGS

Now, Mahalia, the cow, the pet of a little girl named Molly, was able to talk because of the weed which she had eaten.

She did enjoy talking to her little friend Molly, who had always loved her so much, and who had always taken such great care of her.

She was telling Molly of all the things she never had to do which Molly had to do.

"I never had to make beds or clean my shoes or wash my hair or shell peas or weed the garden or water the flowers," she said.

"I never had to brush off the front steps or the back piazza, or practice scales on the piano.

"I never had to arrange flowers or wash vases, or hoe the beans or put sticks around the tomato vines.

"Nor did I have to thin out the lettuce and pick it just where it was thickest and then wash the dirt all off it.

"I never had to bring in kindlings," Molly laughed.

"Dear me, Mahalia, I never knew how much I had to do until you told me all the things you don't have to do."

"But I did make up a lullaby for myself," Mahalia continued, "for I'm so fond of being lazy. And now that I can speak I will tell it to you."

Looking at Molly and Smiling.

"Sing it," said Molly.

"I don't know how much of a singer I am," said Mahalia, "but I'll try."

So in a funny, mooing voice Mahalia sang this song:

Chew and dream,
Chew and dream,
Cow, you're deserving of rest.
Chew and dream,
Chew and dream,
For you give milk of the best.

Chew and dream,
Chew and dream,
Cow, you're a lazy old dear,
Chew and dream,
Chew and dream,
For it's so very nice here.

"That's a fine song," Molly said, admiringly. Mahalia was looking at Molly and smiling.

"I made up another song, too," she said.

"Do sing it," asked Molly.

"Well, I hoped you would ask me to sing again," Mahalia said. "I rather like singing—particularly since I don't have to stick to any particular song. I called my other song a marching song."

"But you never go marching," said Molly. "I just can't think of you as marching."

"That's just it," said Mahalia. "My song is a regular cow marching song without any marching in it. You'll see."

So Mahalia began:

Sit and lie,
Sit and lie,
This is my marching song.
Sit and lie,
Sit and lie,
There's no sense in moving along.

Sit and lie,
Sit and lie,
I will not wonder more,
Sit and lie,
Sit and lie,
My pasture I adore.

"That certainly isn't a very brisk marching song," said Molly, "but I like it," she added, as Mahalia looked at her a little as though she wanted admiration.

The Flirtatious Flower

A single seed, no bigger than a pea, has been planted at the Royal Botanic society's gardens at Regent's park, London. In the space of the next four months it will completely cover the surface of an indoor pond with flowers as big as dinner-plates and leaves eight feet long.

It is a seed of the Victoria Regia, a water-lily from the River Amazon.

When it first blooms it lifts up a dazzlingly white and shining face for moths and other night-flying insects to kiss.

Not content with its nocturnal conquests, it changes its color to a vivid red when dawn comes and so lures to its fragrant beauty the infatuated butterflies and bees!

Buddy Was Satisfied

Buddy, aged four, insisted on writing a letter to his friend Betty, and scribbled away diligently for almost an hour.

His mamma, wishing him to run and play, remarked: "Run along now, dearie. You know you don't know how to write, anyway."

"Well, Betty don't know how to read, either," said Buddy.

FLOUNCES, SLEEVES, AND BONNETS WIDE OF BRIM

IN THE fluttery, flowery chiffon dresses which glorify this summer's mode and which are so flattering to the modern woman, Dame Fashion fulfills her promise of recapturing the for-a-time lost art of an alluringly feminine styling. It would seem as if these lovely frocks had filled the cup of beauty to the brim and overflowing—yet their program of enchantment continues.

One of the fascinations lately thrown upon the screen of fashion is the dainty gown of diaphanous print which has a skirt adorned with tiers of hemstitched petals, and sleeves flowing open from the elbow with untold grace, just as you see in this picture.

It is astonishing how many tiers, drapes, jabots, floating panels, flounces and the like can be lavished on one chiffon frock without overdoing the matter. However, such is the scheme of design for these sheer frocks now so popular, they must achieve a soft elusive silhouette through intriguing manipulation of the fabric, independent of any applied trimming.

Another item of interest in regard to the adorable gown as illustrated is that it is made of white chiffon trimmed with the flowered rather than being entirely of the print. A word should be said concerning the large rose patternings, such as this model reveals. These single immense florals either on dark or light grounds are the top o' the mode for dressy wear. To be sure, the prevailing style trend is toward tiny figures, but the enormous rose motif is one of the many exceptions to the rule.

It is also part of the "elegance in dress movement" that the sheer summer frock be accompanied with a picture chapeau, especially favoring transparent capelines in entrancing pastel colorings tuned to the frock. The last word in midsummer millinery is the exquisitely colorful flat feather skull cap.

Dainty footwear, too, harmonized to the general color scheme is an essential to the ensemble. Satin slippers in colors are in excellent style for formal wear.

Modern woman, at least so far as fashions are concerned, has recovered her femininity. She now wears picturesque frocks with picturesque millinery — which means for the latter, brims which frame the face in a most enchanting manner.

Even the tailored straw and felt hats have yielded to the wide-of-brim idea. Types of straw with felt, such as pictured first in this group, are among leading midsummer millinery numbers. This ultrafashionable model has a complementary way of banding the felt crown with straw, at the same time bordering the straw brim with felt.

It is, among other things, the versatility of the new wide brims which fascinate. Some of them flippity-flop in such a winning way, others assume a cartwheel aspect, while many recent types suddenly narrow at the back, suggesting a bonnet-like silhouette. She who wears this type must "right about face!" else who can tell whether her eyes be blue or brown such a teasing way have these brims of shutting off the view from the side. That this type is the cunningest ever, is a truth attested by the clever model of black straw, centered below in the picture. It is simply banded with ribbon, of course, for the ribbon trim is outstanding at this moment.

The zig-zag fabric applique is a feature worth taking note of as it appears on the hat at the top to the right. It's a new way of embellishing the chapeau without disturbing its contour. There is a pretty play of color in the interworking of several shades of taffeta for this model.

There is also an effective two-color scheme displayed in the straw-and-fabric hat pictured to the left below. The newest wide brims show straws of many colors sewed together in around-and-around stripe effect.

The last hat is a beige hair body, with beige velvet ribbon. It's the correct thing this summer to trim the straw hat in matching velvet ribbon. Pink roses at the side unite with a fan of velvet by way of a finishing touch.

One Desperate Measure

By AD SCHUSTER

(Copyright.)

DOLLY CAMLIN arranged the cushions on the front porch and awaited the scheduled call of Mark Kimball. As she did so she could hear, from a room upstairs, Cousin Teresa singing while she added the finishing touches to a complexion which was the talk of Minden. Dolly sighed.

Mark had no more than arrived and finished the customary preamble concerning the weather than the song from above ceased. Teresa's steps were heard on the stairs and the picture of surprise she made in the open doorway was calculated to captivate and convince.

"Oh, Mark Kimball!" Teresa bubbled. "I didn't know you were here!" She looked questioningly at Dolly. "I was just coming out to enjoy the breeze. You don't mind, do you?"

And Teresa proceeded to monopolize Mark while Dolly reflected on the burdens of having one's guest an attractive and undeniably vampish young woman from the city.

The worst of it was, Dolly told herself, Mark would be going away before long. She had thought that before he would go he would say something; they would make plans, and, perhaps, he would take her. But with Teresa determined that the two should never be alone, with Teresa beguiling and ogling him shamelessly, what chance had Mark to propose if he wished?

"Of course not," Dolly answered the question. "Mark was going to tell me something about his plans. He is going to move to the city, you know."

Teresa beamed. "And you must tell me all about it. Let me know where you live, look me up, and all. We will have some perfectly splendid times, for I believe I will return shortly after you go."

With the hour for Mark's departure approaching, this scene had been enacted several times. Teresa met them on the street, dropped into the Palace of Sweets when they had soda, and made a third in the party, and, exercising the privileges of guest, seldom let Dolly out of her sight.

Mark's last evening in Minden arrived, and Dolly arranged the cushion on the front porch. Upstairs Teresa was outdoing herself in the way of preparation. Dolly smiled as she wondered what Mark would say if he could see the city girl now, for Teresa's face was covered with clay, and Teresa was planning to emerge in half an hour more beautiful than ever. Dolly dabbed powder on her freckled nose. If Mark Kimball was going to propose he would have to do it this evening, and if he preferred Teresa, who was only playing with him, to the girl he had known all his life, it was time everyone found it out.

When Mark arrived Dolly was smiling as sweetly as if Teresa and her marvelous complexion and city clothes were far removed from her thoughts.

"You are going away tomorrow, Mark," she said, and so abridged the usual five minutes of weather report and prediction. "We are all going to miss you."

Mark looked at the door and listened for the familiar sound of Teresa descending the stairs.

"It's kind of good o get a chance to talk to you," he said nervously. "Blamed if I didn't think I would have to write you or send a telegram."

"Why, Mark, what did you want to say?"

"What do you think, Dolly? What else, but the only reason I am going away is to get a better job so we can afford to get married, that is, if you'll take me." Again he looked nervously over his shoulder at the door as if doubting the fortune that had kept Teresa away.

And so as the evening fell in Minden the two on the front porch made their plans and a girl's head rested on a man's shoulder and there was no interruption from Teresa. Finally Mark departed and Dolly, happy and a little frightened, crept to the room of her guest. There was Teresa, weeping and angry and grotesquely transformed. What little of the facial clay remained on her face was caked and as hard as stone. That which had been removed had left red blotches testifying to desperate and painful measures. Teresa was defeated and she knew it.

But she did not know the cause of the strange behavior of her adorning clay: Dolly had mixed cement in the preparation.

Tenants Buy a Town

The greater portion of the town of Gort, in South Galway, the heart of the Kiltartan country, made famous in the works of Lady Gregory and the poetry and painting of the brothers Yeats, will shortly pass into the hands of the tenants living in it. The town has been for generations in the hands of the Gough and Lahiff families, and during recent years protracted negotiations have been carried on for its sale to the tenants. Gort now has a population of about 1,200.

CALOMEL ATTACKS THE BONES AND DEADENS THE BOWELS

Never take calomel. It is mercury—a dangerous drug. If you are constipated, bilious, sick, headachy, stomach sour, meals don't taste right, hot days make you drowsy and lazy, take Dodson's Liver Tone. That's all you need.

Calomel salivates. That's why you have to take salts the next day to get it out of your system so it will not eat your bones. You have to stay at home a day to recuperate from the shock it gives you. No wonder Dodson's Liver Tone is so popular. All you do is take a spoonful at night. By morning you are cleaned out good, head is clear, you feel as light as a feather; you are not sick, no danger of salivation, and you can eat anything you want. Think of that.

Get the big bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone from your nearest store. They all have it. Keep it in the house so you will have it handy to take nights before going to bed.

Big Rats in Rochester

Rats not only grow large, but they grow hard in the Granite state's Rochester. A rat was recently caught in a trap in that city which measured 15½ inches from tip of its nose to the tip of its tail. This giant rat, claiming to be twenty years old, always turned the trick on the cats of the town. Residents claim that during its life the rodent killed seven cats.

The Majority

"Energy and courage bring sure success in America," said Secretary Hoover at a dinner in New York. "That's why so many foreigners want to immigrate here.

"Our failures are generally lazy and faint-hearted. A famous doctor who labors 18 hours a day said to me the other evening:

"'Worry kills more people than work.'

Then he laughed and added:

"'More people worry than work.'"

No Danger

Daughter—"Don't worry. He won't get away."

It intimidates the public somewhat to tell it, that something it likes is "immoral," even if it isn't.

DR. W. B. CALDWELL AT THE AGE OF 83

A Child's Laxative Which Mothers Can Rely On

To Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, it seemed cruel that so many constipated infants and children had to be kept "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

While he knew that constipation was the cause of nearly all children's little ills, he constantly advised mothers to give only a harmless laxative which would help to establish natural bowel "regularity."

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin mothers have a regulating laxative which they can depend upon whenever a child is constipated, bilious, feverish or sick from a cold, indigestion or sour stomach. All children love its pleasant taste.

Buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine or write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, for a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE and just see for yourself how perfectly it cleanses and regulates the bowels of infants and children.

Motorists are beginning to learn that there's a big difference in tires, although they all look pretty much alike.

Some are made with skimpy, short staple cotton. Some have an overdose of "filler" in the rubber of the tread. Some are long on looks and short on quality.

But you won't need a microscope to be sure that the Goodyear Tire you get from me is a real buy. Goodyear mileages tell [illegible] story.

Goodyears are performing so satisfactorily for my customers that they invariably come back—not with a kick but with a boost, and for another Goodyear when they need tire equipment.

I have your size—in fresh, new stocks.
