

American business productivity up

WASHINGTON (AP) — The productivity of American business and workers rose at an annual rate of 0.1 percent in the third quarter, reversing two consecutive quarters of sharp declines, the Labor Department reported today.

However, the slight rise was not likely to cheer government economists who predict that a stagnant productivity rate will mean high inflation and a diminished standard of living for the foreseeable future.

Productivity, a measure of goods and services that the economy turns out per hour of paid working time, has drawn increased attention from economists lately because of its sluggish growth and resulting impact on inflation. Today's figures pointed to a continuation of that poor growth.

Productivity declined at an annual rate of 2.2 percent in the second quarter and 3 p 2.2 percent in the second quarter and 3 percent in the first quarter, according to revised Labor Department figures. Both declines were the sharpest since the 1974-75 recession.

The 0.1 percent productivity rise in the three months ended Sept. 30 applied to all private businesses. Among non-farm businesses, the rate rose 0.2 percent, and among manufacturers the annual increase was a healthier 3.2 percent, the government reported. Output by the private sector rose at an annual rate of 2.5 percent during the third quarter, while hours worked rose 2.4 percent, thus accounting for the slight productivity gain.

Worker compensation per hour rose at an annual rate of 8.5 percent during the quarter, while unit labor costs increased 8.3 percent. Both figures are the smallest since the fourth quarter of last year.

Separately, the department reported that major union contracts negotiated during the first nine months of the year provided average first-year increases of 7.5 percent. That is down slightly from an average of 7.6 percent in such boosts in all of 1978.

The figures do not include fringe benefits or cost-of-living raises that employees might receive in addition to wage increases.

Among larger contract settlements, those covering 5,000 or more workers, the department said first-year wage and fringe benefit increases are averaging 9.1 percent this year, up from 8.3 percent last year.

The department also reported that contract provisions for cost-of-living pay increases accounted for only 56 percent of the inflation rate so far this year, as measured by the Consumer Price Index.

Charles L. Schultz, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, warned last week that unless productivity improves, Americans can expect inflation to run at 8 to 9 percent a year for the indefinite future.

Inflation now is running at a 30-year high of 13 percent annually. Schultz said soaring prices for energy, housing and loans are causing nearly half the current inflation, with prices for other goods and services rising at less than 10 percent a year.

If fewer goods and services are turned out each hour, the cost for producing each item goes up and the increase is passed on to the consumer.

Aspires to operatic career

Voice of Oilers visitor

By DON WOODS

An excited young opera singer named Michael White visited Big Spring this weekend where he lived before he moved to Houston seven years ago.

White's tenor voice blasts the Star Spangled Banner through the AstroDome public address system at Houston Oilers home games. He also sings the national anthem for the Houston Rockets in the Summit Coliseum at their home basketball games.

Though opera is White's first love, he has recently agreed to record an album of inspirational music for Music World Recording Studios. White will record the album in a small town in a studio away from the hustle and bustle of Houston. A large orchestra will back him up, according to World Music President Don Hoxworth. The album will feature "The Lord's Prayer," "Ava Maria," and other classics.

Hoxworth "discovered" the 21-year-old when he heard him sing in the AstroDome. They met on the field after the game. White called him a few days later and the deal was arranged. Their contract is still in the negotiation stage.

White once wanted to sing on Broadway. It had been his goal since he began singing at three. His career began with voice lessons under Shirley Wiss in Houston when he was 17.

His next high note was his audition for the Houston Grand Opera Chorus. He sang with the chorus from 1977 through this year's season.

It was during those years that White decided opera was to be his life. He was attracted to the aura, the formality surrounding the stars when they appeared on stage. He performed with Beverly Sills in the Merry Widow. He admired stars like the late

MICHAEL WHITE

Mario Lanza and "would most want to be like" Luciano Pavarotti.

"I want to be the best I can be; an opera singer," said White.

White also sang in a Gilbert and Sullivan summer production of the Gondolier in 1978 where he performed the lead tenor role. He said he tried to sing in every production he could.

He even sings at the Pipe Organ Pizza restaurant in Houston where a friend who plays the huge organ calls White from the audience for a few songs.

"I don't want to feel like I have to be in an opera house to sing. I like to give of myself to people," he said.

He did a concert for the Muscular Dystrophy Association called "A Night with Michael John White." He appeared on Houston television presenting the check for his performance. He also auditioned his talents off in a black tie fund-raising affair in Houston. A donor gave several hundred dollars for White to spend an evening and do a concert in his home.

White sang in the 1978 Big Spring Community Concert series.

The next big event will be the National Association of Teachers in Singing competition in Oklahoma. Students from Texas, New Mexico and Oklahoma compete.

White is currently under the tutelage of Norma Newton, Houston Baptist College. She is an opera singer and has been able to get White contacts with other singers.

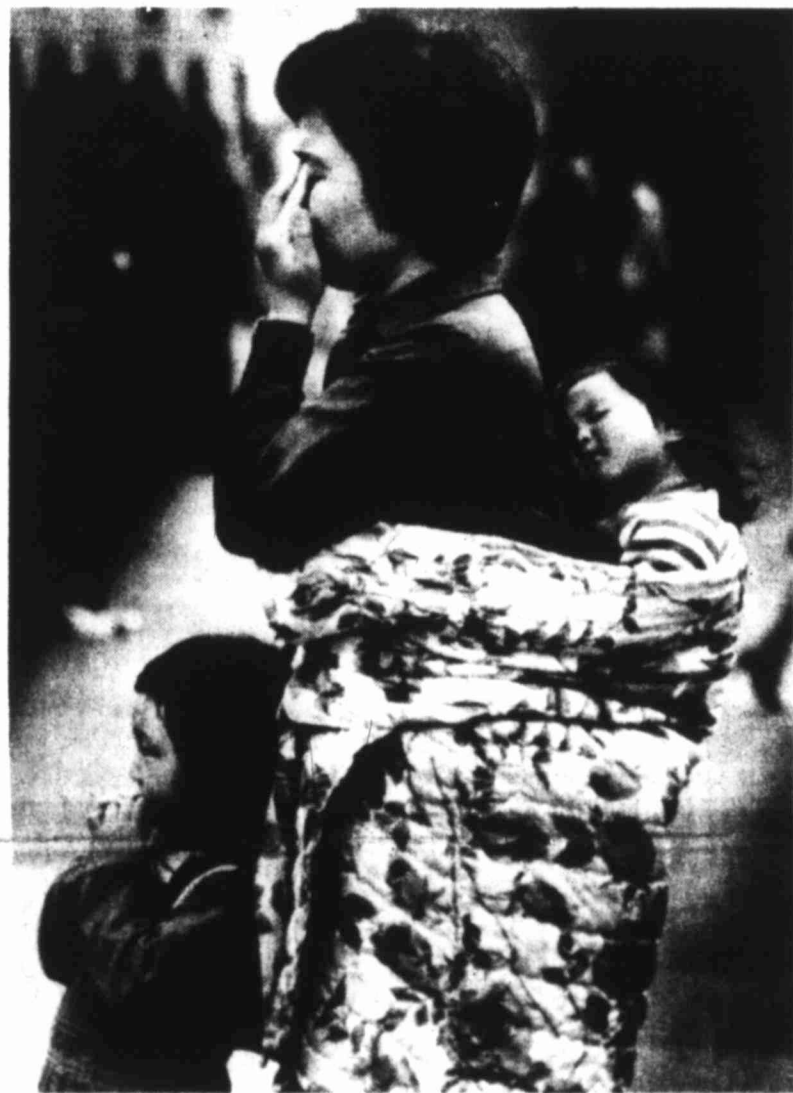

His biggest challenge so far will be the Metropolitan Opera Auditions in San Antonio in February. The auditioner has to sing five tough arias in a row. Judges will test their stamina. Area winners will compete against each other in New York. At 21, White is considered a young competitor at 21. No one younger is accepted. Winners will receive positions in the prestigious opera association.

His first time at the AstroDome Mike was very exciting, but, though it is still "enjoyable," it has become "an everyday thing." He sings frequently at weddings, school productions and churches. He hasn't had time to think seriously about marriage.

Through his singing he has met Houston players Dan Pastorini, Earl Campbell and coach Bum Phillips. His career has also put him in touch with luminaries such as Andy Williams. He described himself as "always on the go."

John M. White, Michael's father, was vice-president in charge of Coca-Cola for McCann-Erickson advertising firm until his death.

His aunt, Alpha Morrison, is manager of Coronado Hills apartments. She is married to G.P. Morrison.

Increased crime threatens rural Americans

By the Associated Press

Indiana farmers used to worry about kids cherry-bombing their mailboxes. Now those same kids are often high on drugs or booze, and farmers are locking their doors against thieves and vandals.

Cattle-rustling in New Mexico jumped 300 percent in the past year.

Fruit by the truckload is routinely ripped off in Florida.

From the cornfields of Ohio to the coalfields of West Virginia to the cow country of the Southwest, an almost fivefold increase in crime in the past two decades is threatening the easygoing, secure lifestyle of rural America.

Annual FBI statistics show that since 1960, crime in rural America is increasing more rapidly than in urban areas.

In 1960, the rural crime rate was 423 incidents per 100,000 population. In 1977, the latest year for which figures are available, the rate stood nearly five times higher at 2,012 per 100,000 population. During the same period, crime in metropolitan areas rose about four times higher.

Put another way, in 1960 the odds of someone in a rural area being a crime victim were about one in 236. By 1977, the odds were one in 49.

Professor Howard Phillips of Ohio State University says the FBI figures show that rural crime is now roughly equal to urban rates reached in 1967.

"The question I have," says Phillips, "is do you have to catch up to the problems of urban centers before Washington and others will pay attention?"

Information on the nature and extent of the problem is sketchy, but researchers generally agree rural crime has certain characteristics:

—Property crime is the leading problem, especially vandalism and theft. Phillips estimates that in rural Ohio, vandalism accounts for as much as 50 percent of crime. Purdue University studies of two Indiana counties found vandalism accounted for 23 percent of crime.

In Hampshire County, W.Va., farm equipment theft is the most prevalent crime, according to researchers Thomas Bean and Layle Lawrence, and a local hunter there was recently caught shooting up a farmer's house.

This summer, someone took a four-wheel drive vehicle and ripped through cornfields on the outskirts of Toledo, Ohio.

Around the country, tractors, combines and other expensive farm machines are easy prey for thieves, because many rural Americans can't get used to the idea of locking things and removing keys.

—Rural crime is generally not as violent as urban crime, but the murder rate in rural areas is only slightly less than in cities.

—Rural criminals are almost always young males. They usually commit their crimes in their home county, although not in the same town.

"One thing's for sure. It's not people from metropolitan areas running out and victimizing rural areas," says Purdue researcher Joseph Donermeyer.

Several reasons are offered for the rise in rural crime. A leading cause cited is the lack of law enforcement personnel in rural areas.

A second factor is the wealth in many country towns: there's plenty worth stealing and not much protecting it. Rural America is much more affluent these days.

In Montmorenci, Ind., Thunderbirds are parked in front of $100,000 homes. As often as not, the keys are left in the cars, and the front doors of the houses are unlocked.

Inside are stereos, color TVs and microwave ovens.

New highways and new industry have helped open the way for crime in rural America. Strange cars cruise through, strangers move in.

In many towns, city people buy country homes. The distinction between country and suburb is gradually blurring.

Phillips notes that the past decade witnessed the first increase in rural population in years. Rural communities are losing their first line of defense: knowing your neighbor, knowing who belongs.

"What you have is homogeneous communities becoming more heterogeneous. People don't know each other," he says.

Life for rural teen-agers has also changed.

Commissioners

face law suit

LAMESA — A group known as the Southwest Voter Registration Project has sued Dawson County commissioners, along with commissioners in ten other Texas counties, in federal court over precinct voting lines.

Other West Texas counties involved in the litigation are Lynn and Crosby. Rolando L. Rios, director of litigation for SVREP, said the voting strength of the Chicano citizen has been diluted by the manner in which precinct voting lines are drawn.

Dawson county commissioners say they have not received copies of the suit.

Police beat Parties keep cops busy

A few doors down they're laughing and drinking and having a party, police were repeatedly told Saturday night.

Janice M. Hirst, 4209A Walnut reported to police that an unknown person had pried the lock off her car between 8 and 9 p.m. Saturday. She noted that there was a wild party going on in the neighborhood. Damage on her car was estimated at $50.

George Murry, 4209B Walnut, also reported a lock pried off of a car in his driveway between 8 and 9 p.m. Saturday. A windshield had also been broken on his pickup. Damage was set at $250. He noted that there was a wild party in progress near his residence.

Police received a request for an ambulance from 4207 1/2 Walnut at 10:50 p.m. Saturday. Upon arrival, transportation was refused.

Police arrested a 36-year-old man and a male juvenile for public intoxication at 11:57 p.m. and arrested a male and female juvenile, 8:40 a.m. Sunday, charging them with a child in need of supervision. The two later arrests were in connection with the damages on the cars and pickup.

The party on Walnut was not the only one Saturday night.

Police were responding to a report about a fight at Cuatro Copas, 1:10 a.m. Sunday, when they observed a man, Rafael C. Lopez, 508 N.W. 6th, lying in the middle of property at 3300 W. Hwy. 80. The man was transported to Malone-Hogan Hospital.

Apparently the victim of an assault, he was admitted to the hospital with lacerations to the head. He's in good condition.

At 1:20 a.m. Sunday, Malone-Hogan Hospital reported that a stabbing victim had been brought in. Ismael Juarez, 1003 N.W. 2nd, was stabbed in the abdomen during the reported fight in the Cuatro Copas parking lot. He remains in the hospital where he is also listed in good condition.

Police received a report from the Starlight Club, W. Hwy. 80, 11:58 p.m. Saturday, that a man entered the club and cut Gov. G. Montoya, 800 Lorilla, in two places with barbed wire. The victim said he knows his assailant.

Empty beer bottles were discarded by flinging them into businesses Saturday night. Numerous beer bottles were found beneath a broken window of an abandoned gas station, 2008 S. Gregg St. at 11:55 a.m. Sunday. The remains of beer bottles were also found inside the building. It did not appear that the building had been entered.

Sometime between 6 p.m. Saturday and 6 a.m. Sunday, a plate glass window on the front of W. 3rd Exxon, 500 W. 3rd, was cracked with a beer bottle. Glass on a door to a car parked in front of the station was also shattered by a beer bottle. Total damages were set at $185.

In addition to the parties, police were kept busy with a large number of other incidents over the weekend.

Carl Chatman III of Odessa reported that someone entered his room at Mid-Continent Inn between 8:30 p.m. Saturday and 5 a.m. Sunday and took a shirt, two pairs of jeans and several pairs of socks. Total value was set at $108.

Franklin Foster, 632 Tulsa, reported that someone had gone through his car and glove compartment between 9 p.m. Saturday and 5 a.m. Sunday while it was parked at his residence. No damages were reported and Foster told police that he has not kept valuables in his car since the last time it was burglarized.

A knife was used to damage a 1988 tire and to scrape paint from the rear to the front on a car, driven by Patsy Olague, 207 E. 19th, while it was parked in the Bogarts parking lot, between 11:30 p.m. Saturday and 2:15 a.m. Sunday. Damages to the paint were undetermined.

Valerie Lynn Jones, 507 Avilford, reported that aluminum frames on a window were bent and several holes were kicked in her front door by unknown persons between 9 a.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. Sunday. Entry was not gained, but $100 damages resulted.

She told police that her bedroom window had been broken the previous week.

Elizabeth Mason, 1615 Cardinal, reported 50 cement blocks, valued at $100, stolen from her back yard between 5:30 p.m. Saturday and 12:30 p.m. Sunday. The cement blocks, owned by her landlord Robert Miller, were stolen once before by juveniles and recovered by police.

While parked at Bowl-A-Rama, between 10:30 a.m. Saturday and 1:05 a.m. Sunday, a car driven by Billy Dean Wagoner of Odessa was stripped of four hubcaps, valued at $150.

Teresa Morren, 304 E. 13th, reported that an unknown person had entered her residence by prying a door open and had stolen her clock radio, valued at $23, sometime Friday.

A man stole some Spam, valued at $1.12, from Bolinger's Grocery, 300 N.W. 3rd, 6:50 p.m. Saturday.

Oracio Lopez, 810 Andree No. 3, says he suspects neighbor children of stealing the tires, rims and reflector from his bicycle in his backyard between 1:30 p.m. and 5:15 p.m. Saturday. The missing goods were valued at $22.

Sometime between 8 p.m. Saturday and 6:15 a.m. today, glass was broken to gain entrance to Borden Company, 1004 W. 4th. Nothing was missing from the ransacked file and desk drawer. The intruder wrote obscenities on an office wall with black shoe polish. A radio, valued at $30, was discovered missing from a truck at the business.

A three-car major collision at 3rd and Gregg, 5:21 p.m. Saturday, sent two of the drivers to the hospital. Eliaz Rodriguez of Stanton was treated and released from Malone-Hogan Hospital and Erma McCarrell of Abilene was admitted with superficial wounds. She's listed in good condition. The third driver, Randy Faulkner of Knott was uninjured.

Accidents Saturday included a collision between cars driven by Juan Juarez, 209 Johnson, and Scharon Toombs, 1515B Sycamore, at 1516 Sycamore, 5:24 p.m.

Rudolfo Sanchez of Odessa and Ken Huckabee, Rt. 1, Box 636, were drivers of vehicles that collided at the 2100 block of Scurry, 11:29 p.m. Saturday.

Vehicles driven by Marian Jones Nichols, 1615 State; and Mitzi Lyn Sanderson, 1305 Barnes, collided at the intersection of State and E. 17th, 8:10 a.m. today.

LANDMARK REMOVED — Movers were busy this morning removing the house once occupied by the late Mr. and Mrs. Sam Hathcock at 611 Scurry Street. The structure was purchased by James Baker of Coahoma from J and B Investments, a development and law firm owned by Bob Moore and John Burgess. Moore and Burgess have acquired 200 frontal feet or four lots in the block, which they intend to develop as commercial property.

Business as usual Bill Bullock undaunted

By JIM DAVIS

Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Feisty is an overworked word in journalism, but it's probably the shortest and best description for Texas Comptroller Bill Bullock.

A heart attack put Bullock in the hospital Oct. 11 but didn't put him out of touch. Four days after the attack, he had a telephone at hand and used it.

From his hospital bed, the colorful comptroller attacked one proposal to give Texas cities more sales tax revenue and another that would mean a federal value-added tax.

Surrogates relayed the messages but the wording, as flavorful as ever, was pure Bullock.

Tony Profitit, the comptroller's press aide, says his boss not only dictated the attacks from his hospital bed but also originated them.

Bullock learned from aides that a legislative committee planned to receive testimony on the cities sales tax proposal and that one aide would present some statistical information.

Statisticians, Bullock said, unless they make the office look good in a news release, he'll tell the office and dictate a statement attacking the proposal.

That got him in trouble with several Texas mayors. But Bullock didn't pull in his stinger; he put it out.

He told the mayor of Amarillo through a prepared statement that the state needed the sales tax for its revenue base and suggested that a home-rule city can institute a city income tax any time it wishes.

Any talk of an income tax would be upsetting in a conservative town such as Amarillo, and we can be sure Bullock realized that.

His release on the federal value-added tax called the proposal by Rep. Al Ullman of Oregon "the income tax wolf in sales tax sheep's clothing."

While the heart attack may not have mellowed Bullock, it has slowed his response time a bit. The comptroller generally has the latest news releases in town, but his hit on the sales tax proposal came four days after a mayors' group announced support for it.

Bullock went home from the hospital last week, one week earlier than expected.

His doctors say the heart attack was mild and damage to the heart virtually negligible.

The doctors would like to see him stay home three or four weeks before coming back to the office. Profitit said last week, "I'm just saying they would like to see."

Profitit obviously knows Texas Republicans anticipate Gov. Bill Clements' four-year term as a first-time century chance to get more GOPers into state government.

But the hardcore party people are complaining that Clements is too nonpartisan in his appointments to state posts.

The governor proved their point at his news conference last week. He said he had narrowed the possibilities for appointment to a Texas Supreme Court vacancy to two persons.

Carter speaks to coalition of New England governors

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — President Carter, declaring "we have everything on our side," said today the nation will find its way out of the energy morass with passage of his proposed oil "windfall profits" tax.

Carter called upon the Senate to restore the tax to the original $292-billion level he had proposed. Otherwise, he contended, "this could become a $1 trillion giveaway to the oil companies."

He said the version of the tax before the Senate would return to the oil companies $374 billion, but with future inflation and price hikes by oil-exporting nations this figure could rise to $1 trillion.

Speaking to the Coalition of Northeast Governors in the New England political base of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, Carter maintained that the United States is in transition between the days of cheap oil and expensive oil.

"There is no reason for us to fear," he said. "We are going through a temporary time of inconvenience and change. We were not adequately prepared for it, but now we understand the problem much better."

The president said the United States had 24 percent of the world's energy resources in such forms as wood, coal and geothermal. By contrast, he said, the oil-exporting nations have only 5 percent. "So we have everything on our side," he said.

Carter reiterated his assurances that the Northeast will receive adequate supplies of home heating oil this winter, saying his goal of having a 240-million-barrel reserve has been met.

He announced he was creating a fuel oil management group, based in Boston, to quickly handle any problems in distributing supplies of heating oil quickly. The group will include representatives of the departments of Energy and Transportation.

The Northeast, more than any region of the nation, is heavily dependent upon imported oil for heating fuel.

Mobile home is burglarized

The burglary of the mobile home of James Morris, 600 N. Birdwell, occurred between 4:45 p.m. Friday and 3:30 p.m. Sunday.

Stolen was a television, stereo, clock, watch, two guns, linen and assorted other objects. Howard County Sheriff authorities believe a car entered the premises from Birdwell Lane. The car is believed to be of intermediate size with radial tires. A small boot print was found on the property.

Trio from here on coast tour

Three local residents left this morning for a tour of industrial sites in California.

Bob Hurt, manager of Southwestern Bell in Big Spring, Jack Redding, divisional manager of Texas Electric and Joy Redding are part of the West Texas Chamber Industrial Tour.

The tour will end Thursday.

Bonilla will be speaker

ABILENE — Ruben Bonilla Jr., National President of the League of United Latin American Citizens (LULAC), will be the guest speaker at a banquet held in his honor in Abilene, Nov. 3.

The banquet is slated for the Briarstone Manor in Abilene, Texas.

Bonilla was instrumental in the establishment of a joint commission between Mexico and Hispanic leaders in the United States. The Commission was initiated after a series of meetings with President Jose Lopez Portillo, President of Mexico. The Joint Commission will address a multitude of mutual interests — undocumented workers, health care, education, commerce, and energy.

The media is invited to attend the banquet and direct any specific question to the National LULAC President.

Lee Ann Smith recuperating

Lee Ann Smith, injured over a week ago in a one-car accident near Elbow, is recuperating at Malone-Hogan Hospital. A family spokesman said Friday, that she will be in the hospital through next week, and will enjoy seeing friends.

Lee Ann experienced multiple pelvic fractures, and one superficial scalp laceration, when the station wagon in which she was riding, blew a tire, causing the driver to lose control, and the car to overturn.

She is expected to be dismissed from the hospital sometime next week.

Panel of jurors ordered to appear

SEGUIN, Texas (AP) — A panel of 150 prospective jurors has been ordered to appear in state district court today for the trial of two Vietnamese refugees charged in the shooting death of a Seadrift fisherman.

Sau Van Nguyen, 21, and his brother, Chinh, 20, are charged in the Aug. 3 slaying of crab fisherman Billy Joe Alpin, 35.

The shooting has been the focal point of a feud between native crab fishermen and the Vietnamese refugees who have relocated in Seadrift, a town of about 1,000, including about 200 Vietnamese.

The natives say the Vietnamese have taken up crabbing without regard for traditional methods of determining territorial rights.

After Alpin's shooting death, three Vietnamese-owned fishing boats at Seadrift were burned and a Vietnamese house was firebombed, but no one was hurt and no arrests were made.

Tensions between factions were running so high that State District Judge Clarence Stevenson moved the murder trial from Calhoun County, where it happened, to Seguin.

The judge scheduled the pre-trial portion of the trial to begin at 9 a.m. and ordered the prospective jurors to report at 10 a.m. Monday.

The Vietnamese brothers are being held in the Guadalupe County jail at Seguin. Defense attorney

Pat Maoney said he made no effort to have the men freed on bond because he feared for their safety.

Sau is held on $100,000 bond and his brother on $75,000 bond.

Mrs. T.L. (Juanita) Rich, 62, died Saturday afternoon at her home on the Rankin Ranch.

Services will be at 2 p.m., Tuesday in Nalley-Pickle Rosewood Chapel, with the Rev. Monroe Teeters, First Baptist Church of Coahoma, officiating. Burial will be in Trinity Memorial Park.

Mrs. Rich was born Sept. 3, 1917, in Baton Rouge, La. She married Thurman Lee Rich Nov. 24, 1934, in Stanton. She was a member of the Coahoma First Baptist Church. She moved to this area as a child.

She lived in Martin County, then Mitchell County on Spade Ranch and in Howard County for the past 25 years.

Survivors include her husband of the home; three sons, Donald Lee Rich, Odessa, Raymond Carl Rich, Mineral Wells, and Larry Richard Rich, Coahoma; two daughters, Lora Nell Rich, of the home, and Neda Dolores Evans, Arlington; ten grandchildren; her mother, Mrs. Carl Smith, Riverbank, Calif.; two sisters, Mrs. Pearl J. Mitchell, Los Banos, Calif.; and Mrs. Robert Rawls, Cleveland, Tex.; five brothers, P.C. Smith, Big Spring, Chester Smith and Joe Smith, both of Riverbank, Calif.; Howard Smith, Valley Home, Calif.; and Robert Smith, Ripon, Calif., and an aunt, Della Jones, Abilene.

Pallbearers will be Bud Rankin, Horace Nash, Leon Menser, George Sloan, Bobby Capps and Clarence Massey.

Koreans admit President Chung-hee assassinated

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — South Koreans closed ranks against North Korea today, and the United States moved an aircraft carrier closer to the Korean coast as the government admitted that President Park Chung-hee was assassinated by the head of the Korean CIA.

Opposition leader Kim Young-sam, a strong critic of Park's government, said the entire nation united in warning North Korea it "should by no means miscalculate this misfortune of ours as an opportunity for invasion, and it should bear in mind that the nation is determined to defend free democracy under any circumstances."

Another leading opponent of Park, 1971 presidential candidate Kim Dae-jung, also warned the communists "not to try to take advantage of the situation....The entire people's voice is united, transcending political differences."

Warnings to the North and support for acting President Choi Kyu-hah also came from President Carter, Defense Secretary Harold Brown and the commander of U.S. forces in Korea, Gen. John A. Wickham Jr.

U.S. officials said they saw no evidence of unusual North Korean military activity. However, Brown said the United States had sent two airborne warning and control aircraft to South Korea and moved an aircraft carrier, already on station between Japan and Korea, closer to the Korean coast.

Wickham, who also heads the combined U.S.-Korean Command, sent a letter to Choi pledging that "should hostilities occur the combined forces command will defend the republic....(and) will remain ready and totally dedicated to the security of the republic."

Choi, the defense, home and foreign ministers and other key officials met for two hours this morning and declared: "Everything is in order and calm has been restored."

However, the Korean armed forces remained on emergency alert, and the nation was still under martial law. There were no disturbances.

Park's body was in a closed casket at the presidential residence, the Blue House, and hundreds of thousands gathered at public altars across the country to burn incense and mourn the dead leader. His funeral was to be held Saturday.

Rioting against Park's 18-year dictatorial rule erupted last week in the southern cities of Pusan and Masan, and North Korea's Communist Party newspaper, Rodong

Shinmun, said Sunday that Park's killing "proves how serious the political crisis and social disorder in South Korea are."

Park was shot Friday by the head of the Korean Central Intelligence Agency, Kim Jaekyu. The government said at first the shooting was accidental but the chief of the investigation, Gen. Chon Doo-hwan, admitted at a special news conference Sunday that Kim assassinated the president.

Chon said Kim shot Park and Park's chief bodyguard three times each during a dinner Friday night while five of Kim's men killed four other presidential bodyguards and seriously wounded another in the next room.

Cha was Park's constant companion, one of his closest advisers and a longtime enemy of the KCIA chief.

New York Stock Exchange stays open

Anti-nuclear protestors arrested

NEW YORK (AP) — Police arrested more than 600 anti-nuclear protesters this morning as they tried unsuccessfully to shut down the New York Stock Exchange on the 50th anniversary of the stock market crash of 1929.

The demonstrators, who numbered more than 1,000, sang and chanted as they sat in small circles on streets around the exchange, waiting for police officers to lift them onto stretchers and take them to vans for a ride to headquarters for booking on disorderly conduct charges.

But the market opened as usual at 10 a.m. with the sounding of the gong after hundreds of annoyed Wall Street workers had been passed through barriers around the exchange by flashing identity cards to police. Initial trading was described as active.

Outside, the mood was almost festive, with little acrimony displayed among the protesters and hundreds of police officers on hand. A 15-piece brass band played circus music and spectators watched the protest from nearby vantage points, including the steps of the Federal Building.

"I haven't had this much fun since the 1960s," Police Capt. Thomas Ryan told some of the demonstrators.

"Tell my mom I'll be late for dinner," a young woman called out as she was lifted onto a stretcher.

Among those taken into custody was Daniel Ellsberg, the key figure of the Vietnam-era, Pentagon Papers case. The protesters were from a group calling itself Wall Street Action. Leaders said the demonstration was a move to protest investment in the nuclear industry and "expose the abusive role of corporations and the financial community in controlling people's lives."

"This is a new focus for the anti-nuclear movement," said Sharon Tracy, a leader of the action. "Until now it's been focused just on the installations. Now we're targeting the financiers."

Stock exchange officials had asked employees to arrive early and were planning to close their doors once all employees were inside. Hundreds of employees either stayed overnight in offices or straggled in during the hours after midnight.

The group had approached officials of the stock exchange earlier this month to request that the 61 corporate members doing business in nuclear weapons and power be suspended.

Abducted Dallas girl still missing

Psychics' tips not very helpful

DALLAS (AP) — Searchers acting on tips from psychics have continued a relentless but unsuccessful hunt for a 7-year-old girl abducted last week.

Elizabeth Barclay was last seen Tuesday by two young friends who said she was taken, as they walked to a neighborhood store, by a man who said he would "take her ... and throw her in the water."

Linda Barclay pushed through thick grass and waded in Northwest Dallas creeks, but by late Sunday night there was still no trace of her missing daughter.

She said her weekend search was inspired by unidentified psychics who told her they envisioned the missing girl near trickling water, high grass and trees.

"When I first started talking to the psychics, every time they'd mention something I'd say, 'I know where that is,'" Mrs. Barclay said. "But you go here and you go there and it all looks the same."

"I've been in some places that I just don't want to leave because I feel so strongly that she's there."

Mounted police units and helicopter patrols have conducted an intensive and fruitless search for the girl since Tuesday night. And the officers said their efforts are being complicated by callers claiming to have psychic powers.

"They would have to get a map now to find an area in Dallas we haven't searched," said Police Sgt. Harold Rice.

The police searches included White Rock Lake in the Dallas city limits and Garza-Little Elm Reservoir, about 30 miles north.

Rice said about 50 self-styled psychics have called in from as far away as California and Pennsylvania to offer their services and tips.

Police said they will check out all information, regardless of its source.

"No matter how ridiculous they are, we're going to check them out," Rice said. "One of these times someone is going to give us something to go on, and we'll find her."

Mrs. Barclay said, "Elizabeth is a real gutsy little girl. She's very strong and very outgoing and I think it takes a personality like that to make it through something like this."

Mrs. Barclay and her husband are estranged, but he flew to Dallas from California to help in the search for his daughter.

Southwesterly winds build up in West

By The Associated Press

A thick blanket of Halloween fog enshrouded the eastern third of the state today, clouding visibility in many areas to near zero and severely restricting travel.

A rush of warm, moist air formed low clouds that hovered over South Central Texas from Austin and San Antonio west to Del Rio.

Winds continue to be very light over the eastern half of the Lone Star State while southerly to southeasterly winds reaching up to around 15 mph developed over the western half of the state. The winds will gradually increase as a storm center develops over southeastern Colorado.

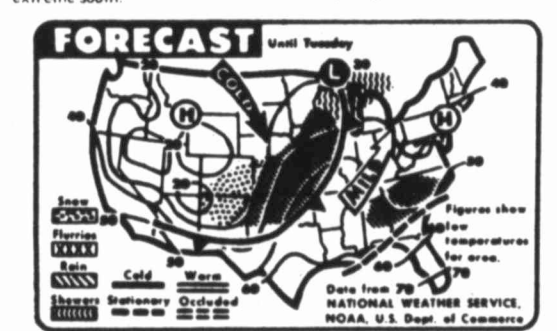

FORECAST

WEST TEXAS — Fair and continued very warm today. Partly cloudy tonight, turning colder north with occasional rain in the Panhandle late tonight. Cloudy and much colder with rain north, partly cloudy and cooler south Tuesday with rain possibly mixed with snow northwestern Panhandle. Highs today near 70. Low tonight middle 30s panhandle to middle 50s southeast.

EXTENDED FORECAST
WEST TEXAS — Partly cloudy and cool. Chance of rain toward the end of the week. Highs mainly 50s north and 60s south except upper 70s lowlands of the Big Bend. Lows 30s north to near 50 extreme south.

Oil museum accepts bid of $494,700 for wing

MIDLAND — The Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Midland, has accepted a low bid of $494,700 for construction of its planned north wing. Building of the 9,000 square-foot addition is expected to start in late November or in December.

J.W. Cooper Construction Company, Odessa, was the successful bidder. The concrete block addition, which will join the present building along its north wall, will require about eight months to build. It will provide approximately 40 percent more exhibit space than the museum now has.

Russell J. Ramsland, museum president, said that the total cost of the addition, including exhibits, fees, and other related items, is likely to run "close to a million and a half dollars." The museum decided to put the building shell under construction while fund-raising proceeded on the rest of the needed monies.

A majority of the funds currently available came from generous gifts by the late George T. Abell and Mrs. Abell. Ramsland said. Abell, who was the museum's first president, was chiefly responsible for the museum's creation beginning in 1967.

Other recent contributions have come from long-time friends of the museum: the Davidson Family Foundation, Fort Worth; the Atlantic Richfield Foundation, Los Angeles and Midland; the Potts and Sibley Foundation, Midland; and Mr. and Mrs. Fred T. Hogan, Midland, Ramsland added.

Ramsland said that the museum has a "double-barrel need for dollars", partly to equip the expansion area with exhibits and partly to provide the museum with operating funds for 1980 and beyond.

We're glad you asked!

HOW DOES A WIDOW "FIT IN" SOCIALLY?

When a widow (or widower) begins to renew her social life, she must look first for group activities, those which do not involve couples or "pairs" of people...singing groups, school classes, arts and crafts, etc. In this way, the widow is not placing herself in the awkward position of being a "fifth wheel."

She will wish to find pursuits which will return to her a feeling of accomplishment which quickly leads to one of confidence...the more creative the better. Realizing one's own individuality and capabilities helps build up personal courage and makes a widow's social re-entry more rewarding.

Often during a happy marriage one mate may enjoy an activity not shared by the other. As a widow, she may pursue such an activity she once enjoyed. Sometimes she doesn't because she feels guilty...as if enjoying it would be unfair to her deceased husband. Rather, she should seize on this activity to express herself and bring out her total personality.

Thorn pulled out of Mexico's side

Arrangements have been worked out with Mexico to import some of that country's natural gas into the United States.

Negotiations, which went on for two years, weren't always easy and sometimes threatened to bog down.

The arrangements, which appear to be a compromise, may serve to help alleviate some of the other problems between the two countries.

THE AMOUNT OF Mexican natural gas to be piped across the border will, at first, be relatively small — about 300 million cubic feet per day. The gas will start flowing next Jan. 1. That is far less than the 2.2 billion cubic feet per day as spelled out in the original agreement reached in July 1977, a pact voided by the Carter Administration. The new agreement provides the opportunities for shipments to be stepped up.

The cost to the U.S. will be high by domestic standards — $3.625 per thousand cubic feet, compared to the current U.S. market price of $2.25. It is also considerably higher than the $2.80 we have been paying for gas from Canada. An upward adjustment in that pricing schedule has already been announced.

The price, however, is less than that negotiated two years ago. The earlier deal tried the price of Mexican gas to the price of high-grade heating oil delivered in New York. That would mean a price now of about $4.95 per mcf.

The compromise reached ties the price of a formula including cheaper residual fuel oil. The result is no bargain-basement price for this country, certainly, but is a better deal than previously.

MOST IMPORTANTLY, the Mexican gas will not cause a significant increase in the price paid by consumers, because it will represent only a fraction of the natural gas used in this country. And, by striking the deal, the United States has pulled a thorn out of Mexico's side — which could and should lead toward improved relations, and a more certain supply of Mexican crude oil which we badly need.

The agreement is welcome — not as cheap energy, for there no longer is none, but as insurance for our energy future and as a step toward more cordial U.S.-Mexican relations.

Favorite binges

Around the rim

Andrea Cohen

Let's discuss a subject people do not like to talk about. It is more personal to some than their yearly salaries.

Binges. Several celebrities came out of the closet in an article recently describing their favorite binges.

The article didn't go into why they binged, just what they ate or drank when they did it.

THE RANDOM HOUSE Dictionary describes a binge as an informal word that means a period of excessive indulgence, as in eating, drinking, etc.; spree.

Most of the celebs had the usual answers, chocolate, peanuts, beer, ice cream.

Craig Claiborne, food columnist for the New York Times and the last I heard, a very distant relative of one of my college roommates gave a simple answer — and I swear this is true — "My favorite binge is an old but elegant standby: a pound of large-grained caviar with toast, neatly trimmed, cut into rectangles, brushed with butter, and cautiously baked until it's crisp and golden on both sides (turn it once). The toast is eaten hot, the caviar at refrigerator temperature. As a garnish, I like lemon wedges — with seeds carefully removed — and finely chopped onion. (The onion is put in cheesecloth, run under cold water, and squeezed dry.) With this I drink vodka kept for several hours in the freezer, and finish with one of several ices — raspberry, grapefruit, or cassis. Everything's in crystal and sterling silver."

Bless his heart. He must have a good salary.

Julia Child, another master cook, one who specializes in French food says that "Life itself is the proper binge." There are two in every crowd. A binge, by the dictionary's standards is food or drink, right? So why do people like Cher try to tell us her's is not taking a shower for three days?

LIZ TAYLOR TELLS us her favorite is chili, which is a good answer until she adds it must be from a certain restaurant in Los Angeles that is flown to her anywhere in the world where she happens to get the craving.

In my college days, after my four roommates and I studied long enough to hopefully put some food in our brains, my roommate Theresa would yell, "Let's pig out." It didn't take very long for her to convince the rest of us. Before we know it the popcorn was in the popper or the Wheat Thins out of the box. It was Craig Claiborne's distant relative who was the Wheat Thins freak. I never really believed Theresa's motives, though. I always believed her favorite binge would be to give the rest of us a thorough rundown on how to keep an apartment clean, one of her favorite subjects.

Now that I'm out of college, older and in my elderly years, my favorite binge is, chicken soup, like Mom used to make, of course. It tastes exactly the same, but the thought that I now have to cook it myself, sometimes make me lose my appetite.

Nathan Poss told me his favorite binge depends on what time of year it is. His favorite summer binge, believe it or not, is sitting out in the sun, nude, in his backyard to get a tan. I was afraid to hear about the rest of the year.

Well, let's face it. His salary isn't as good as Craig Claiborne's.

At Caribbean East

William F. Buckley, Jr.

They are the last places. Sun-soaked, unpolluted, pin-clean. A crescent of hundreds of islands, islets and cays stretches enticingly down from Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands to the South American continent. It is a sailor's paradise. Green seas beat at rust-colored reefs, leggy palms fringe legendary beaches. Uniformed children, the boys in holed knee-pants and cricket caps, make their way to school, the girls' skirts immaculately pleated. Where there is cricket, can there be Castro? Not many are noticing, but the ex-British Caribbean is in turmoil, weathering, leeward and windward, the first wintry blasts of Communism.

IT BEGAN IN MARCH. On the 12th of that month, Grenada's elected prime minister, Sir Eric Gairy, left his sunny satrapy for New York to consult with his U.N. Mission (Grenada is the second smallest member of the U.N., but by no means the least talkative). Before leaving, he had impounded a boat labeled "Grenada," which however was gun-laden, courtesy of Cuba.

He was apparently confident that by taking the boat, he had aborted a coup d'etat, but other arms had been infiltrated into the country, and on the 13th, the so-called Jewel Movement announced over the radio that its new People's Revolutionary Army had taken possession of the island, that the "criminal dictator" Gairy was abroad, his ministers in jail, the state's barracks burnt to the ground. Individual police stations had been "thoroughly captured" by the revolutionary forces, acts of heroism that required, in most cases, overwhelming country stations comprising two men and a dog.

WITHIN WEEKS, heavy armament from Castro was on its way to Grenada (population about 100,000): artillery, anti-aircraft weaponry, pretty sophisticated stuff. The militia consists primarily of 15-year-olds, who alone are permitted to bear arms and, in their exuberance, have been known to shoot or castrate themselves endeavoring to master the loading techniques of Czechoslovakian rifles. One boy recently proved his machismo by firing 600 rounds of ammunition at a coconut tree. The official propaganda is resolutely anti-American specifically, and anti-white in general, a social tragedy in an island that has been racially integrated for generations. The island that has been racially integrated for generations. The island's leaders instantly acclaimed random leftists about the world, not excluding the Khmer Rouge.

Were there protests? Yes, St. Lucia (about 100 miles north) fired off a cable to the Queen, just as in the good old days, asking that her government not recognize the revolutionaries. The reply was as expected: Her Majesty's Government need neither recognize nor not recognize the new government. The fact of it is that Great Britain is tired of the West Indies, which for a generation have cultivated anti-English sentiment, have achieved independence and made economic demands on the most straitened country in Europe. Count Great Britain out.

Meanwhile, of course, there is chaos in Guyana, where Kleenex sells (on the black market) for $6 a box, and a Marxist government proceeds chaotically to destroy the country. In Dominica, another palace coup (pronounced "coop" in the area). And on July 2, St. Lucia's prime minister lost in the polls to an ex-judge who talks hysterically on the podium, terminating his speeches with "Viva la Revolution!" (The Wisecrack is that in the Caribbean the optimists learn Spanish, the pessimists Russian.)

Lithium use requires monitoring

Paul G. Donohue, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I would like your comment on some medication I am taking. I had a manic-depression problem about 10 years ago. At the time the doctor put me on lithium carbonate. The dosage has been adjusted over the years. Before I go to see the doctor I have to have a lab test for lithium level in the blood. It has held constant for 10 years.

I am taking other medicines (list included). I wonder if they are compatible with the lithium. I have developed considerable trembling in my left hand, plus some in my right hand. Could this condition be reversed if I stopped taking medicine? — J.C.

Lithium, a chemical element, is in the same family as the more familiar sodium and potassium. Lithium is used to calm patients in the manic phase of manic-depressive mental illness. These are people subject to great mood swings between elation and depression.

Too much lithium can cause the trembling you describe, and it can mean you are getting too high a dose. This should be determined by your lab tests.

None of the other drugs you take (mentioned elsewhere in your letter) interfere with the action of lithium. People on diuretics (water pills) do have to be careful about their lithium level. There is a fine balance between lithium and sodium in the body. Diuretics remove body sodium, and that can leave the lithium level too high. The same might occur when a person is on a salt- (sodium) free diet. You should report your trembling to your doctor.

I hope you are also getting psychiatric help in addition to the lithium treatment. Such therapy may correct the problems for which you are using the medicine.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Please give me information on hydroceles. What causes them? Where does the fluid come from? Does it fill a vein or a testicle? What is the treatment for it? Surgery? Are they dangerous? There is no discomfort except when walking. — L.B.

A hydrocele (HY-dro-see) is an accumulation of fluid in a delicate sac that lies in the scrotum close to the testicle. They are usually non-tender. The beam from a small penlight will pass through the fluid, and this helps doctors make the diagnosis. The light would not, of course, pass through solid tissue (such as a tumor).

Sometimes infections or an injury to the area can cause the fluid to accumulate. In many men the cause is just not known, although the possibility of a tumor associated with a hydrocele has to be ruled out.

The usual treatment is drainage with a special needle. The fluid does tend to recur, and sometimes surgical removal of the sac itself is necessary.

Hydroceles are not dangerous in themselves, but can be annoying, as is your problem when walking.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I remember reading somewhere that if a person starts taking a blood thinning medicine he must keep taking it for the rest of his life — that it would be dangerous to stop. — M.K.

Not true.

Blood thinners (anti-coagulants) need to be taken for life only if the condition for which they are prescribed lasts for life. For instance, a person who has had a blood clot in the lungs may have to take the thinner only for six months or so. It is not dangerous to stop if it is done under a doctor's control.

The dosage is reduced over three to four weeks, not all at once.

My answer

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: Just a few minutes before my mother died she claimed she had a vision of Jesus, welcoming her to heaven. Do you think this was true? — Mrs. O.F.

DEAR MRS. O.F.: Yes, it is possible that God allowed your mother a glimpse of heaven just before she went into the presence of God. I have known of other situations like that, and while such experiences are not to be normally expected, there is nothing in the Bible which would deny their reality. Such an experience was given to the dying Stephen, who exclaimed, "I see heaven open and the Son of Man standing at the right hand of God" (Acts 7:56).

Death is the experience through which every individual must pass. The Christian knows death is not the end, but is simply a transition to a far greater life — eternal life with God in heaven. The Christian knows he has hope for the future — hope based firmly upon what Jesus Christ has done. We believe in eternal life — not because it is wishful thinking on our part, or even because of experiences such as your mother had.

We believe in life after death because we have committed our lives to Jesus Christ who died and rose again from the dead. God "has given us new birth into a living hope through the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, and into an inheritance that can never perish, spoil or fade — kept in heaven for you" (1 Peter 1:3-4).

Your letter indicates that your mother was a great woman of faith. She was trusting Jesus Christ for her salvation, and she looked forward to the day she would go to be with Christ. But what of your own faith? Perhaps God allowed her this little glimpse of heaven in the last moments of her life so she could point you to the reality of heaven. If you have never come to Christ personally I urge you to do so without delay. It is a wonderful thing to know you will be in heaven some day, and that God has given you responsibilities right now also.

Carter boosted

WASHINGTON — Far from White House anger over young Joe Kennedy's blast at the Carter presidency during the John F. Kennedy Library dedication, Jimmy Carter and his top political advisers were actually thankful.

"Joe made it easier for us," a key presidential political aide told us. "The overkill in that blunderbuss attack was clearly out of place in what everybody wanted to keep as a non-political tribute to John Kennedy. Joe created on-the-spot sympathy for the president." That sympathy made Carter's speech look all the better when it came right after Joe's.

Carter's speech was perhaps the best he has made as president. It was written by chief White House speech writer Rick Hertzberg after several meetings of the inner staff at which Carter laid down two rules of what he wished to say: that he had had a feeling of President Kennedy that approached hero worship; and that Kennedy's own emphasis on the inevitability of "change" should be used to make Carter's point that political challenges faced by Kennedy had completely changed in the intervening 20 years, making Carter's presidency much tougher to handle than Kennedy's.

CONNALLY SNARES FINDLEY One unexpected offshoot of John B. Connally's highly controversial Middle East speech calling for Israel to withdraw from the West Bank and linking an Arab-Israeli settlement to U.S. Mideast oil policy was the conversion of Rep. Paul Findley from anti-to pro-Connally.

Findley personally intervened with Gerald Ford at the 1976 Republican presidential convention to argue against Connally as a possible Ford running mate. The Illinois Republican was regarded as one of Connally's chief congressional enemies.

But after Connally's Mideast speech — which was attacked by pro-Israeli politicians and praised by pro-Arab interests — Findley wrote him a letter calling the speech one of the best ever made on the Mideast.

Findley is the foremost congressional advocate of the Palestine Liberation Organization (P.L.O.) and has long argued that the U.S. should negotiate the West Bank question directly with the P.L.O. (ruled out by the Ford administration's pledge to Israel not to talk with the P.L.O. until it recognizes Israel's sovereignty). CARTER'S P.A. MAN.

Federal railway Administrator Jack Sullivan, who won widespread praise running Jimmy Carter's 1976 campaign in Pennsylvania, may not be on board this time.

Although Pennsylvania politicians had expected Sullivan to manage Carter's uphill fight against Sen. Edward M. Kennedy in their state, he has privately suggested he may pursue his own political interest this time. Specifically, Sullivan is thinking of joining the stampede of Democratic candidates for trying to replace Republican Sen. Richard Schweiker, who is not seeking re-election.

Whether or not Sullivan actually runs for the Senate, he may pass up a major role in the presidential campaign anyway. An Annapolis classmate of Carter's he has not enjoyed good relations with the men around the president.

Dear Editor:

We, as parents, who have formed together to back our band program, wish to express our appreciation to the Herald for the coverage and announcement under the daily calendar about our spaghetti supper at the High School Cafeteria Oct. 19, before the Permian football game.

We would like to express our thanks to all of the merchants of Big Spring and surrounding towns who were kind enough to donate the necessary items and food for our spaghetti supper. Without their help, we could not have had the supper. This was a dream come true.

A big West Texas Thank You goes out to the Radio Stations, 1st National Bank, State National Bank, Security State Bank and Citizens Federal Credit Union for their assistance in letting the people know about the supper and various donations for our Band Drawing.

Last, but not least, we do love and appreciate the citizens of Big Spring and community for allowing us to serve them. We tried to make it possible so no one went away hungry, but if anyone did not get enough to eat, sorry for the oversight. Give us a chance next year, as we plan to have it again. For the ones who did come and eat with us, but were not able to stay for the band drawing, we would like to announce the winners of the four $25 Saving Bonds. They were Mrs. Susan Rains, Hayes Stripling Jr., James Walker, Sr. and Mrs. Mildred McFall. We are proud of our band program and are planning for a bigger and better program for the future.

Big Spring Band Boosters

Dear Editor:

While we realize there is a rabies scare around, it would behoove trigger-happy people to check first to determine whether or not dogs do have current tags before wantonly killing three healthy, tame pets.

Three dogs belonging to my son's family were stolen from their home sometime after 8 p.m., Saturday (Oct. 20).

Taken were a very valuable Saluki, registered; a Scottish Terrier, registered; and a cross-breed bird dog. As we have had two with us for several years and another for nine months, we are convinced they would not voluntarily go off.

After much help from a radio station, the police and sheriff's office and a man at the dog pound, my daughter-in-law found all three shot and killed on a dirt road a great distance from their home.

All three dogs had current rabies shots. To my knowledge, none has ever or would attack a human being nor another animal, until the Terrier was attacked by another male.

These dogs were children's pets and two of them were valuable show dogs.

Good riddance guys

By Robert Wallace, Ed. D.

Dr. Wallace: I am a very respectable 17-year-old girl who enjoys dating but it seems that all the guys want to do is "make out."

What's the deal? — Tilly, Odessa, Texas

Tilly: Almost all boys will try to "make out" but, once they see that your moral standard is impeccable, they will treat you with respect.

Those who are really interested in you will call again. Those who don't — good riddance.

Dr. Wallace: Recently in your column a 17-year-old guy said that his friends are laughing at him for dating a 13-year-old girl. You responded that he should date girls closer to his age. I totally disagree with your answer.

My husband is five years older than I and his father is 10 years older than his mother and they have been married for 33 years. They are happy and get along great.

I was taught in school that girls mature faster than boys. When I was single, I dated guys my age and they acted like children. I'm sorry, but I feel your answer was wrong. — Carole, Colorado Springs, Colo.

Carole: Don't feel sorry. Everyone is entitled to an opinion. Personally, I feel that teens should date teens close to their age while they are in high school. Dating someone older usually hinders participation in school social functions which are important to high schoolers. After graduation, age is far less important, and your marriage and that of your in-laws prove that.

Dr. Wallace: My mom and dad are always fighting because he has a girlfriend and my mom has a boyfriend.

Well, this boyfriend comes over to see my mom when, naturally, my dad isn't home. (He is at his girlfriend's apartment).

My mom and I were very close but now she wants me to leave when this guy is over.

Now my mom and I aren't close anymore. What should I do? I'm 12. — Nameless, Sidney, Ohio Nameless: At 12, you seem to be more mature than either your mom or dad, so, in fact, they both need your wisdom. The worst thing you can do is to give up on them. Whenever you are around your parents, be pleasant and cheerful and let them know you love them. Let's hope your love rubs off on them.

Send questions to Dr. Robert Wallace, TwEEN 12 and 20, in care of this newspaper. For Dr. Wallace's teen booklet, "Happiness or Despair," please send $1 and a 28-cent stamped, large self-addressed envelope to Dr. Wallace, in care of this newspaper.

Miss Parks honored

A wedding shower honoring Sherrie Parks, bride-elect of A. J. Stanley, was held Oct. 26 in the home of Mrs. Bill McDonald.

Special guests were Blanche Parks, San Francisco, grandmother of the bride, Kim Hillman and Debra Cole, sisters of the bride, and Betty Thixton, sister of the groom, all of Big Spring.

The honoree, her mother and grandmother were presented peach and yellow daisy corsages.

The refreshment table was covered with a white lace cloth and centered with a silk flower arrangement. Crystal appointments were used.

Other hostesses were Terri Cole, Mrs. Max Moore, Mrs. Bill McDonald, Mrs. Jan Brown and Mrs. Cecil McDonald.

The couple will be wed Nov. 3 at College Baptist Church with Rev. B.W. Briggs performing the ceremony.

Thanksgiving plans made

The Sew and Chatter Club met Oct. 24 in the home of Mrs. Marvin Sewell. Mrs. Bill McIlvain presided at the business meeting, making plans for Thanksgiving and Christmas activities.

A donation was made to the Big Spring State Hospital to help with parties and gifts.

The Thanksgiving Dinner for the club will be held Nov. 14 at 1 p.m., at Herman's Restaurant on Gregg St. The regular meeting will be held following the dinner, in the same room.

Drifters to camp at Water Valley

The Western Drifters Camping Club met Oct. 23 in the Pioneer Gas Flame Room. A potluck supper was enjoyed by the 17 members attending. Vice president Bill Blalack presided in the absence of the president, Evelyn Vigar. The Vigers are attending the State Sambaore for Good Sams in Bellville.

Members were reminded that the November campout will be held in Water Valley on Nov. 16-18. A Thanksgiving Dinner is planned with the club furnishing the turkey and members the remainder of the meal. Vern and Evelyn Vigar, host couple of this campout plan a pancake breakfast and ask individual members to furnish sausage or bacon.

The Christmas Party is planned for Dec. 15 at the Brandin' Iron Restaurant. More information will be available next month. Gifts will be exchanged and should be something to be used in the trailer.

The group resolved to write letters to their

Congressmen and Representatives expressing concern over the excessive profits currently being reported by the major oil companies. A similar letter will be written to the TRAILER LIFE Magazine's Action Line Column.

A motion was passed requesting that members write to the Tom Green County Commissioners Court in San Angelo requesting the erection of a dump station and more hook-ups at the park in Water Valley.

The club by-laws which were recently amended concerning the duties of officers will be printed and distributed to all members before the beginning of the new club year in January.

A report of the Campout held Oct. 19-21 in Colorado City State Park showed there were 8 rigs in attendance with one visiting couple, Fred and Marge Olson. Grace and Edna Owen visited on Saturday afternoon.

Meeting adjourned and a time of fellowship followed.

Christmas party scheduled Dec. 10

The Centerpoint Extension Homemaker's Club met in the home of Mrs. Zela Lindley recently. Mrs. Vernon Kent was co-hostess. Mrs. J.R. Petty, president, presided.

The devotional was II Corinthians 12:9 and roll call was answered by 15 members naming the last book each read.

Gene Davidson announced the Christmas party to be held Dec. 10 at 2 p.m. at the First Methodist Church.

The club will gather for a Thanksgiving dinner Nov. 13.

The group is invited to visit the Snyder Extension Club Nov. 1 for a Christmas in November Style Show. An invitation was read from Stanton Extension Club for Oct. 25.

Mrs. Davidson won the door prize. Mrs. Joe Mitchell was welcomed as a new member. Refreshments were served. The next meeting will be Nov. 13.

Dear Abby

Heed Hazards Of Halloween

DEAR READERS: With Halloween just around the corner, may I point out that this happy holiday sometimes ends in disaster for some. According to the National Safety Council, 135 Halloween fatalities occurred last year. Some were children who died in Halloween-related traffic accidents. Some were youngsters who were fatally burned due to flammable costumes. And others died after eating booby-trapped "treats."

The American Optometric Association, whose 22,000 members are concerned with the need for seeing and being seen, offers the following safety tips:

- Buy FLAME-PROOF costumes only. Or if costumes are made at home, treat the fabric with a flame-resistant solution.
- Because masks, floppy hats, wigs and veils often interfere with a child's vision, use MAKEUP instead.
- Accessories such as swords, broomsticks, hatchets, wands, etc., should be made of CARDBOARD rather than plastic, metal or wood. Sharp items are dangerous.
- Provide youngsters with flashlights to prevent falls on sidewalks or porch steps. (Positively NO lighted candles should be carried!)
- Decorate your child's costume and trickster bag with reflective tape to make them highly visible to motorists.
- Remind children that they should NEVER enter the home of a stranger or accept rides.
- Adults can help by keeping their yards well-lighted. Parents should check all "treats" before allowing children to eat them.
- Very young children should always be accompanied by an adult.

DEAR ABBY: A woman physician, married for nine years to a career officer in a foreign military service, says their marriage was never consummated. She signed herself DOING FINE WITHOUT.

I am reminded of a quotation from Voltaire, who said (re sex): "The only aberration is abstinence."

Respectfully,
JOEL FRIEDMAN

DEAR JOEL: One could say, "Abstinence makes the heart grow fonder."

DEAR ABBY: The invitations are out, the wedding gifts are coming in and the wedding is to take place soon. My fiancé and I went to see a counselor because we can't seem to agree on many things. (We argue constantly.) I am beginning to think it's a mistake to continue. The counselor says to either postpone the wedding or forget it. What does one do (and how) at this stage? It can only get worse.

CHICKEN

DEAR CHICKEN: Cancel the wedding either by telephone or telegram immediately. It will be somewhat sticky, but far better than being stuck in a bad marriage.

Talk is cheaper than you think.

How to save up to 60% on Long Distance.

If you're one of those who thinks a Long Distance call is a luxury, read on.

The trick to saving money while keeping in touch with family or friends is knowing when to call, and calling One-Plus.

Call between 11pm and 8am.

Before you groan about how you can't stay up late or see straight in the morning, think about it. You'll be saving up to 60%! If you're a night person, you probably don't start counting sheep until after 11 pm anyway. And if you've got friends and family to call out west, it'll be a perfectly civilized 9 or 10 pm when their phone rings. If you like to see the sun rise, and you know folks back east, it'll be an hour later on their end.

Call out of state anytime before 8 am and you can talk all day if you want and still save 60%. In-state calls are also greatly reduced. Just remember to dial One-Plus.

Reach out on the weekend and save up to 60%.

Now this is a stroke of good luck: a really cheap Long Distance phone call just when you may want it most. Call any time between 11 pm Friday and 5 pm Sunday and really save. For instance, dial One-Plus and you can make a ten-minute call to Atlanta for only $1.55. That's almost worth making a new friend in Atlanta for.

Even on weeknights, save up to 35%.

Sometimes you can't wait for the weekend. Or you don't want to. But you can still save plenty Sunday through Friday from 5 pm to 11 pm. Think about what a bargain it is to call someone 1900 miles away, talk it up for ten minutes, and only run a tab of about $2.00. There's just no other way to get close to a faraway friend or relative so quickly, so cheaply.

On weekdays it's still a bargain.

Here's a surprise. From 8 am to 5 pm, a Long Distance chat still doesn't cost very much. A five minute call out of state, to anywhere in the continental U.S. is only about $2.50 when you dial One-Plus. Think of how good the sound of your voice would be to a friend (not to mention your mother!) right in the middle of the day.

Reach out and touch someone.

ON LOCATION — Singer Buffy Sainte-Marie is shown filming a segment of the "Perry Como's Christmas in New Mexico." at the ancient Indian ceremonial cliff's of Santa Clara Indian Pueblo in New Mexico.

Reputation not best way to choose right charity

Before you know it, street corner Santas will start to "Ho, ho, ho." The familiar black kettles will dot the sidewalks. There will be new appeals: "In a season of joy, remember the less fortunate."

Americans gave nearly $40 billion to charity last year, up almost 10 percent from 1977. Most of the money — some $33 billion — came from individuals.

There are thousands of charities. Some seek money on a year-round basis; others run one-time fund-raising drives; and still others count on the Christmas spirit to fill their coffers.

Which charity should you support? How can you be sure your money will reach the people it's intended for? Which cause is the most worthy? Who needs help the most?

"Reputation alone ... is no surefire guide to wise giving," writes Carl Bakal, author of a new book, "Charity U.S.A." Bakal says: "Many well-known and highly regarded organizations are efficiently run and dedicated to a real social need. Others, however, although equally sincere in purpose, are badly run or directed toward an outmoded or not particularly urgent need."

More than half the states have laws regulating the solicitation of charitable contributions, but the statutes vary widely. Some limit the amount that can be spent on fund raising; others merely require the filing of an annual report.

The National Information Bureau and the Council of Better Business Bureaus publish rating lists of charities, indicating whether they meet organization standards. The lists cover only a few hundred charities each, but they can be useful. For information write: Philanthropic Advisory Division, Council of Better Business Bureaus, 1150 17th St. N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036 or National Information Bureau, 419 Park Avenue South, New York, N.Y., 10016.

The final decision about giving is up to you, but experts advise consumers to follow these general rules:

—Restrict donations to groups you are familiar with. Don't give to organizations you have never heard of or know nothing about.

—Ask for a financial statement before you give. Check to see whether the charity has been independently audited by a certified public account.

—Figure out how much of your dollar will go to fund-raising costs. There is no rule of thumb you can use to determine whether the amount is too high. Better Business Bureau standards require that a "reasonable percentage" of the money raised — generally 50 percent or more — go for program purposes.

—Don't give in response to a telephone call from a stranger. Ask the caller to write giving detailed information about the organization in question.

Legs gone from chicken pox

Boy, parents don't give up

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Little Eddie Smith clutched his doll with sympathetic understanding as the two left Children's Hospital, where Eddie's legs were amputated after complications from chicken pox.

A child psychologist who had prepared the 2-year-old patient for the surgery had removed the doll's legs and replaced them with bandaging similar to Eddie's.

The boy suffered a rare blood-clotting complication of the common childhood disease and underwent surgery four times to treat the problem before gangrene forced the amputation.

"It's been a long ordeal, but we got him back. They said he wasn't supposed to live," Eddie's mother, Linda, said Sunday as they left for home in Manteca.

"I believe he understands that he doesn't have any legs. And I also think he accepts it. We knew if we accepted it, he would," said Mrs. Smith, 23. Dr. Byron Aoki, director of the pediatric intensive care unit at Children's Hospital, said the complication is somewhat of a mystery.

"No one knows why it happens. It is known to accompany chicken pox on rare occasions and is nearly always fatal," he said.

Eddie's illness began last June while he appeared to be getting over a simple case of chicken pox. Mrs. Smith noticed him rubbing a large purple spot on his leg, but thought it was an insect bite.

She said when the spot grew bigger, she took him to a local hospital. Then more spots, and bruises, appeared and spread to Eddie's thighs and calves. His doctors sent him 85 miles by ambulance to the Oakland hospital.

Physicians diagnosed purpura fulminans, a disorder of the clotting system triggering internal bleeding and rapid coagulation of the blood in the lower extremities.

Eddie's blood was replaced twice to stop the bleeding and bring him out of shock, and the anti-clotting drug heparin was administered in an attempt to stop the clotting, hospital officials said.

The blood replacements worked but the drug did not give up," Mrs. Smith said.

failed to stop the clotting and lesions appeared on his legs. Sores on his thighs turned black and he had no pulse in his feet. Eddie became comatose, the officials said.

Vascular surgery was performed in an unsuccessful attempt to relieve the pressures cutting off circulation in Eddie's legs.

More surgery to remove swollen and encrusted skin followed in July, and skin grafts in early August. But the clotting persisted, and, finally, gangrene developed.

To prepare for Eddie's homecoming his parents have remodeled their house, widening doorways for his wheel chair, and installing special bathroom and kitchen fixtures. Eddie's father, Gary, 24, works in a furniture store.

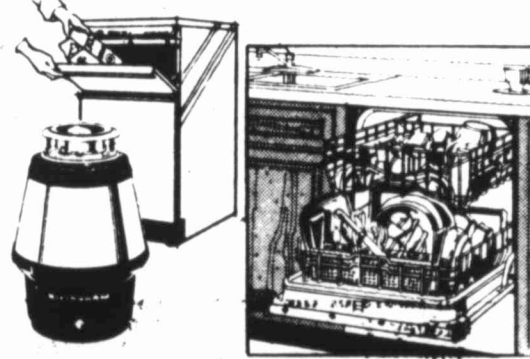

A physical therapist will come four times a week to exercise Eddie's body until his mother has mastered the routine.

In about six months, he will be fitted for artificial legs.

"I hope he can be an inspiration to other people

Jockey's tour educational

WALTON, Ky. (AP) — Jockey Steve Cauthen says his recent tour of duty in Europe has enabled him to better handle the celebrity status he earned by riding Affirmed to the Triple Crown.

"Possibly I've matured a bit more. I met a lot of different people," said Cauthen, 19, during a visit to his parents home in this small northern Kentucky town.

Cauthen was enthusiastic about his seven months of racing in Europe, and said the British experience was special to him.

"The best part of England is to be with the people themselves and find out what things they like and believe," Cauthen said. "The sights and the countryside are all right."

The first jockey to win $6 million in purses in the United States in 1977, Cauthen rode 52 winners in Britain this year and another 15 throughout the rest of Europe.

Cauthen will shortly leave for riding engagements in Japan, South Africa, Australia and possibly Hong Kong.

First child star active

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — One of Hollywood's first child superstars has reached retirement age, but he hasn't quit working.

Jackie Coogan, who starred in Charlie Chaplin's 1920 classic, "The Kid," says laws are not adequate to protect child entertainers, and he and his producer-son, Anthony, are out to change that.

Coogan, who turned 65 Oct. 26, and was honored at a surprise party over the weekend, said he earned $4 million as a child star. In 1938, he sued his stepfather and mother after the money disappeared, and the scandal resulted in the "Coogan Law" which protects the earnings of California minors.

Coogan said more teeth have to be put into the laws.

"The child's money should be maintained in a separate trust fund, so that come hell or high water he or she will receive it at the age of 18. It shouldn't be left to the discretion of the court or the parents, who nine out of 10 times are the worst factors in embezzlement."

Coogan has lived in Palm Springs for 17 years, and considers himself "semi-retired."

"But I'm working tomorrow in a picture called 'Pray.' Send me a good script and I'll be there."

First step in challenge of Carter

Kennedy forms campaign committee

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, eager to "get going" with his campaign for the presidency, is taking a major step toward challenging President Carter with the formation of a campaign committee.

Stephen Smith, the senator's brother-in-law, summoned reporters to a former Cadillac automobile showroom about a mile from the White House for today's announcement of the creation of the Kennedy for President committee.

Establishment of the committee, which makes Kennedy a candidate in the eyes of federal election laws, is expected to be followed shortly by a formal declaration of candidacy by the Massachusetts senator.

"I'm tired of screwing around with this," Kennedy told reporters Friday night on a flight across Massachusetts. "I want to get going."

Kennedy made it clear he intends to declare for the 1980 Democratic presidential nomination before President Carter's scheduled announcement on Dec. 4.

Kennedy's candidacy got a boost over the weekend when Mayor Jane Byrne of Chicago, after repeated hints she would support the president, let word out she will back Kennedy.

The mayor said a major factor in her decision was her judgment that Carter could not win renomination or re-election.

"I told the president I could support him until I thought he could not win," she told reporters.

Formation of the Kennedy campaign committee makes him subject to federal laws requiring regular reports of contributions and expenditures to the Federal Election Commission, as well as to the limitations on how much candidates can spend and accept in donations.

Contributions are limited to $1,000 from individuals. Autonomous draft-Kennedy committees, which the senator disavowed as they were formed, were allowed to accept individual donations of up to $5,000.

Carter's re-election committee was formed last April. Lawyers for that committee recently asked the FEC to require that money spent by the draft-Kennedy committees be charged against the total the senator is allowed to spend on his campaign for the nomination.

The senator's entry into the race will make him the third of the Kennedy brothers to seek the presidency. All three were senators when they ran for president.

After John F. Kennedy was elected president in 1960, he named his brother, Robert, attorney general. The youngest of the three, Edward, was elected to the Senate in 1962 to fill the seat once held by John Kennedy.

Tour Cambodian refugee camps

Governors appeal for health care

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — After touring a muddy Thai camp crammed with 30,000 refugees from Cambodia, six American governors appealed to President Carter for 30 doctors and nurses to help them.

"For those dying at Sa Kaew, every hour counts," the governors told a news conference after their visit Sunday to the new camp set up out of range of Cambodian guns near the Thai border.

Calling conditions at the camp "appalling," the governors said they radioed Carter a plea for medical aid. "About 50 people died the day before we arrived and several died while we were there," said the message.

"What is happening to the border people represents a moment of great suffering and shame. The situation in Cambodia is grave," Michigan Gov. William Milliken, leader of the delegation, said in a statement.

"The suffering of those fleeing Cambodia and the prospect of famine for those remaining inside Cambodia require an accelerated worldwide response to prevent further loss of life."

"As we walked among the dying, it was apparent that there is an urgent need for more medical help."

The governors also endorsed a proposal for daily truck convoys to carry food from Thailand into Cambodia to feed the millions said to be starving there. The proposal, made by three U.S. senators who visited Thailand and Cambodia last week, was rejected by Cambodia's Vietnamese-backed government because part of the food would have gone to areas controlled by the forces of ousted Premier Pol Pot.

The Vietnamese army invaded Cambodia December, drove Pol Pot's Khmer Rouge regime from Phnom Penh in January and has since been fighting the remnants of the Khmer Rouge army. It is this fighting, which has escalated with the end of the monsoon season last month, that has sent thousands of Cambodians streaming into Thailand for refuge.

The governors dodged questions about Cambodian politics, saying their mission was entirely humanitarian one. But they criticized the Phnom Penh government's refusal to admit the truck convoys.

The party of governors came to Thailand after a visit to China and also includes Thomas Judge of Montana, Robert Ray of Iowa, Richard Lamm of Colorado, Richard Snelling of Vermont, Albert Quie of Minnesota and five of their wives. Mrs. Judge did not make the trip.

Cowboys still lead division Steelers win four-straight from Pokes

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Steelers have the respect of the Dallas Cowboys. Do they also have their number?

"Somebody said that we beat 'em when it don't count, and they beat us when it does," Dallas linebacker Thomas Henderson said Sunday after Pittsburgh beat the Cowboys 14-3.

"You know, what can I say? I'm at a loss for words," he added.

"Hollywood" Henderson at a loss for words?

That's as rare as Dallas scoring just three points, which hadn't happened since a 23-3 loss to the New York Giants in 1972.

But it happened Sunday as Pittsburgh blunted the Cowboy ground game, sent quarterback Roger Staubach to the sideline with a fourth-quarter concussion, and turned Franco Harris loose for two touchdowns, including a 48-yard bolt.

"But," said Henderson. "I have a feeling we're gonna get them when they think they got us."

The Cowboys may get that chance in Super Bowl XIV in Pasadena, Calif. Both teams are now 7-2 and atop their divisions.

But the Steelers have won four big ones in a row over Dallas, and the Cowboys would trade any of those for their five straight preseason wins over Pittsburgh.

"This was a very satisfying victory, to say the least," tackle Joe Greene said after Pittsburgh held Dallas to 79 rushing yards, 73 by Tony Dorsett.

After the Steelers beat Dallas 21-17 in Super Bowl X, there were suggestions Pittsburgh had gotten away with excessive physical intimidation of Cowboy receivers.

Pittsburgh beat Dallas again 28-13 in the 1977 regular season, but it wasn't a must game for the Cowboys.

After the Steelers bowed Dallas 35-31 in Super Bowl XIII, there was much talk about a controversial pass interference call against Cowboy cornerback Benny Barnes.

"There's was nothing fluky about it today,"

Greene said. "It was top-notch competition, a heck of a game. They came out to play and they played well. But we played better."

Might Pittsburgh have a psychological edge over Dallas?

"What?" winced Coach Chuck Noll. "I'm not a psychologist. I'm just a poor old football coach. All we do is practice techniques and play the game."

The Cowboys tried one pass from punt formation, but the Steelers were ready for it. Dorsett wanted to throw another pass on an end sweep, but the Steelers were ready then, too.

"We wanted it so bad, and things didn't go right," said Dorsett, who came here with four consecutive 100-yard games.

"We didn't execute. When you play a team of that caliber and don't execute, you're gonna be in for a long afternoon."

Early in the second quarter, the Steelers faced fourth-and-the Dallas one. Tight end Randy Grossman went in motion through the backfield, and Harris followed him off right guard for a touchdown.

Dallas then drove to the Pittsburgh 12 before settling for a 32-yard field goal by Rafael Septien.

Later in the second quarter, Danny White appeared ready to punt as Dallas faced fourth down at its 31. But White called a pass in the huddle.

"They moved their up-backs to the wing position.

When people do that, we play the pass every time," said Noll.

Nobody was open. White's pass was incomplete.

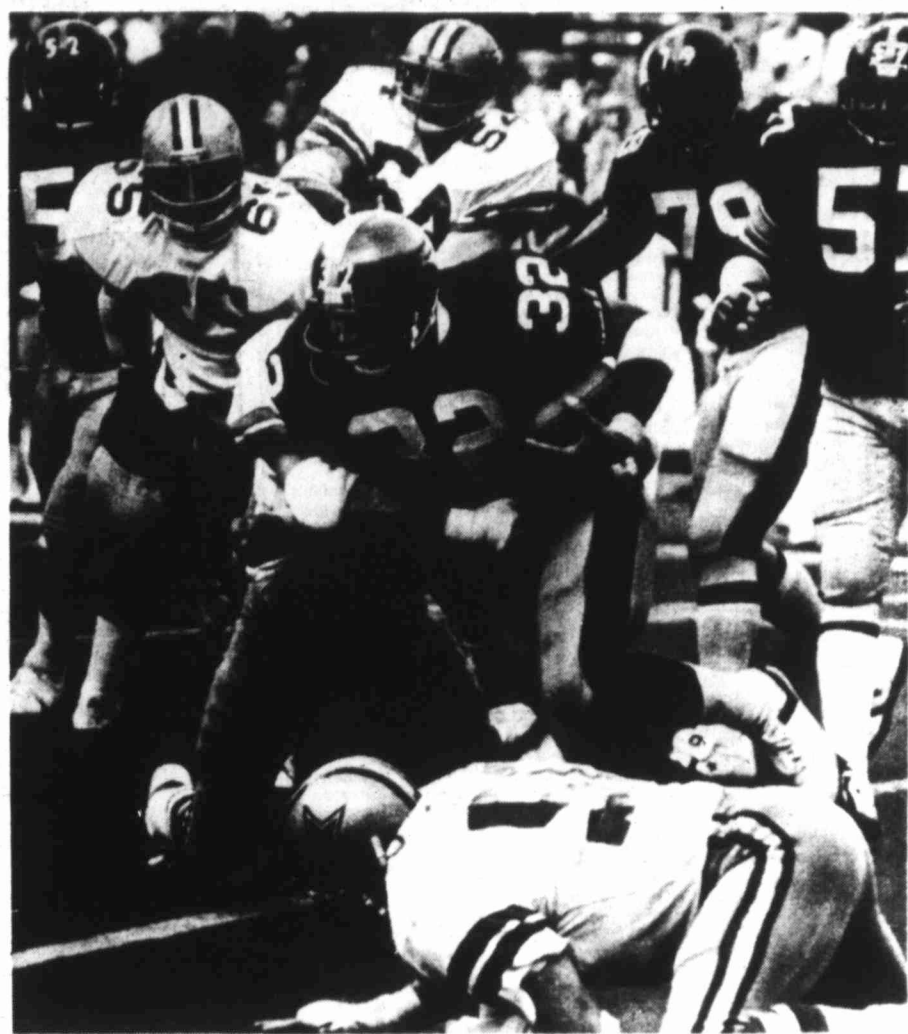

"He (White) obviously thought he could make the play," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry. "It wasn't a good play to make."

Does White have an option to call that play? "He won't any more," said Landry.

It didn't hurt, however, as Pittsburgh's Matt Bahr missed a 32-yard field goal try.

In the third quarter, Franco Harris bolted off left guard, eluded an arm-tackle by Randy White and deked past safety Cliff Harris on his way to a 48-yard touchdown.

Harris finished with 102 yards rushing. The game before, he rushed for 121 yards and two touchdowns in a 42-7 win over Denver.

HARRIS ROLLS — Franco Harris of the Steelers goes over 100 yards on his run in fourth quarter action against the Cowboys in Pittsburgh on Sunday. Harris scored the game's only two touchdowns and ran for 102 yards in the Steelers' 14-3 victory.

Fritsch's toe comes through again

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers Coach Bum Phillips tipped his western hat to the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service Sunday and cast a broad smile in the direction of Austrian-born Toni Fritsch.

"Every time I look up and see that kid going onto the field I thank God for our immigration laws," Phillips said of the 34-year-old refugee from the soccer field of Europe. "He's one heck of a player."

For the second time this season, Fritsch's last-gasp rallies with a 35-yard overtime field goal that gave the Oilers a 27-24 victory over the stunned New York Jets. Fritsch's 29-yard kick beat Cincinnati 30-27 earlier this year.

The phere Fene on the AstroDome floor appeared to be just the atmosphere Fritsch needed. While the teams lined up for the play of the game, Fritsch stood waiting patiently, hands clasped behind his back.

"I had to go in and make it," Fritsch said matter-of-factly. "I was trying to stay ready. The kicker has one or two chances to show how good he is and I make my living off of kicking."

And so do the Oilers. The Oilers offense sputtered and popped well enough to take a 24-10 lead into the final minutes of the game despite a total of 104 yards on 10 penalties, including 35 yards on one touchdown drive.

Houston quarterback Dan Pastorini, booted for his ineffectiveness in the first quarter, rallied the Oilers to a 17-10 halftime lead on Fritsch's 47-yard field goal and touchdown runs of one yard by Rob Carpenter and four yards by a hobbled Earl Campbell.

Pastorini, who finished with 18 completions on 36 attempts for 212 yards, regained some of the crowd's confidence in the third quarter with a 37-yard touchdown pass to tight end Mike Barber.

But the boo-birds returned in the fourth quarter when Pastorini could not ignite the Oilers while New York rallied on quarterback Richard Todd's 15-yard touchdown pass to Jerome Barkum with 5:33 to go and Todd's one-yard run with 55 seconds left in regulation play.

Then came Toni's second chance. "I'm 2-0 in overtime and I'm glad to get a shot at kicking the winner," said Fritsch, who earlier missed a 31-yard attempt, breaking a streak of 12 consecutive field goals.

"It's simple, we lost the game, we just didn't have it," Jets Coach Walt Michaels said. "We've lost two games in overtime that we could have won and we couldn't stop them on third down."

The Jets, 4-5, lost to Cleveland 25-22 in overtime.

Todd hit Wesley Walker with a 39-yard touchdown pass in the first quarter and Toni Linhart added a 31-yard second period field goal to take a 10-3 lead before Houston started its surge.

The victory left Houston with a 6-3 record and still in second place in the American Football Conference's Central Division behind Pittsburgh, which defeated Dallas 14-3.

Booster Club meets Tuesday

The Big Spring Sports Booster Club will recognize members of the Junior Varsity Football Team at its regular meeting, 7 p.m. Tuesday.

The boosters hope for a large crowd to support the team. Parents of JV players are especially encouraged to attend.

All Big Springers, including non-members, will be welcomed at the meeting. In addition to the special ceremonies, films of Saturday's game against Midland Lee will be shown.

HOWSER NAMED YANKEES MANAGER — Dick Howser gets a congratulatory lick on the ear from his dog "Napper" here late Sunday shortly after Howser learned he would be the new manager of the New York Yankees. Howser replaces Billy Martin who was fired by the team's owner.

Yanks ax Martin again

NEW YORK (AP) — Billy Martin is out, after another strike call.

In the wake of an alleged fight in Bloomington, Minn., the free-swinging Martin was fired Sunday as manager of the New York Yankees and replaced by one-time coach Dick Howser.

Yankee owner George Steinbrenner, supportive of Martin in many of his earlier controversies, apparently had reached the limit of his endurance after the manager's latest news-making incident last week.

Martin, who has a long history of similarly sordid affairs, was accused of punching an Illinois man last Wednesday night in the lobby of a Bloomington hotel. His alleged victim, Joseph Cooper of Lincolnshire, Ill., was sent to a hospital where he required 15 to 20 stitches to close cuts on his lip.

Martin denied throwing any punches. But just the news was enough to get Steinbrenner up in the air over the weekend, jetting off to New York from his home in Florida to investigate the case. The owner appeared to prejudice Martin when he commented:

"We just can't have him getting into these things every two months. It's not good for organized baseball."

But Steinbrenner had nothing to say Sunday after letting Martin go, ending a stormy relationship that started in the middle of the 1975 season. No definitive statement concerning

Martin was included in the news, but these succinct words:

"The New York Yankees announced tonight that Billy Martin will not be returning as manager of the Yankees."

It was the second time in his controversy-studded career that Martin has parted with the Yankees.

In the middle of the 1978 season he resigned under pressure after a series of problems with management and superstar Reggie Jackson, uttering his infamous phrase that Steinbrenner and Jackson deserved each other because "one is a born liar and the other is a convicted liar."

But less than one week after Bob Lemon had been hired to replace Martin, Steinbrenner reversed his field with the shocking announcement that Martin would return as manager in 1980.

It didn't take Martin quite that long to come back, however. He returned prematurely in the middle of 1979 in an effort to fire up a flagging team. Martin's return did no good as the Yankees finished a desultory fourth in the American League East.

While neither Steinbrenner nor Martin was available for comment Sunday, Howser was.

"I've been around New York 12 years," he said. "I understand what a manager of the Yankees has to go through."

Howser said he then flew Sunday to Ocala, Fla., where Steinbrenner has a farm,

Seattle favored in tonight's game

ATLANTA (AP) — The record doesn't reflect it, but Coach Leeman Bennett of the Atlanta Falcons says, "I still feel like we're a better team than we were last year."

Bennett, hoping to regain the intensity that sent Atlanta to the playoffs last year for the first time in its history, returned to preseason-type practice sessions in preparations for tonight's nationally televised (ABC) battle with the Seattle Seahawks.

The Seahawks entered the first Monday Night Television appearance in their history as a two-point favorite in a game matching National Football League teams with 3-5 records.

Atlanta, needing a victory to remain within one game of the lead in the National Conference West race, has lost five of its last six games, including the single first-half victories recorded by the Detroit Lions and the San Francisco 49ers.

The Seahawks, meanwhile, have won two of their last three outings and turned in an impressive 34-14 victory over Houston last week in which quarterback Jim Zorn passed for 252 yards and three touchdowns, two of which went to his favorite receiver, Steve Largent, who had six catches for 135 yards.

Zorn, who sparked the Seahawks to a 30-13 victory over Atlanta in the only previous meeting between the two teams, in 1976, passed for 1,660 yards and eight touchdowns during the first half of the season.

Atlanta's Steve Bartkowski, who has had an up-and-down season, has thrown for 1,554 yards and 10 touchdowns, but he already has been sacked 17 times.

Seattle will open with Dan Doornink and Sherman Smith at the running back spots and Atlanta will counter with a pair of rookies, William Andrews of Auburn and Lynn Cain of Southern California.

This will mark Atlanta's ninth appearance on the primetime NFL weeknight telecasts, with the Falcons shooting for their fifth victory and their third in a row.

They came to life at this same time last season when they stopped the Los Angeles Rams 15-7 on a Monday night game in which Tim Mazzetti booted five field goals shortly after leaving a Philadelphia bartending job to become the Falcons' kicking specialist.

Coach cries 'foul'

Big Spring Junior Varsity Volleyballers were annoyed by what Coach Carole Bartasek called "unethical" play in District 5-4A action Saturday.

The JV defeated Odessa High, 15-3, 13-10, in the opener. The spikers then took Abilene High, 4-15, 15-12, 13-11, in a hard-fought semi-final match.

Holly Peurifoy was high-point in both games, scoring 18 in the first and nine in the second.

The final match was played at 9 p.m. against Odessa Permian, and the locals fell, 13-15, 14-16.

"The reason we lost, and took only second place, was because Permian was playing a varsity-laden team," said Coach Bartasek.

The rules specify that if a player has ever played in a varsity capacity, she is ineligible for JV play, explained the coach. Permian fielded several such ineligible players, she claimed.

"I think it was an unethical procedure," said Bartasek, today. "On top of this, we were playing without a clock. The clock broke, so we just played a 15-point game. Ordinarily we would be playing eight-minute periods. It was hairy," she added.

The ninth-grade team traveled to Snyder, and also took second place in the tourney. The team reached the finals with defeats of Plains, 8-15, 15-2, 15-7, and Snyder, 15-9, 15-7. The locals lost to Seminole in the finals.

"The highlight of this tourney was a superb team effort in defeating Snyder. We had lost twice to them in the past, and this was a big moral victory," said the coach.

Freshman will meet La Mesa here, 6 p.m. today. The JV and varsity will travel to Midland Lee, Tuesday night, with JV action beginning at 6 o'clock, and varsity action following at 7 o'clock.

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, OCT. 30, 1979

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Except for the favor and support of an influential man, you do not have any good possibilities of achieving much of importance today. Your judgment in dealing with other persons is not good. Listen closely to what experts advise and follow their suggestions.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You feel limited and that you cannot accomplish much, but by obeying all rules and regulations you carry on nicely. Try to please.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Don't waste time with friends today since you have much to do with associates in business. Don't be forceful in getting what you want.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Use diplomacy in dealing with powerful individuals and handle credit matters wisely. Attend a worthwhile social affair this evening.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Not a good day or evening to get into new projects, make drastic changes, so pursue regular activities. Use good sense.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Come to a better understanding with a co-worker and relieve tensions thereby. Keep an open mind where a close tie is concerned.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) A clever associate stops you from making a big error, so be glad for it. Take time to get the information you need and get it easily.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Consult with a money expert so that you can better your financial position. Improve conditions at home or place of business.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You have good judgment and can also help others, but avoid those who could give you trouble of some kind. Dress in style.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) The situation at home could be difficult, so get advice from one you trust. Talk little and you get the information you need.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Look to a clever friend for the assistance you need to solve a problem. Go out socially and add to prestige.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Study how to handle problems with the aid of an expert. Plan how to make needed repairs to your property. Avoid a gossip.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Listening to suggestions to one with varied experience is wise. Plan that trip for both personal and business reasons. Be economical.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will understand problems that plague mankind and know how to alleviate conditions. Teach to play an instrument of some kind to relieve tensions.

Mayorial election most contested

Houston voters will go to polls with city under haze of confusion

HOUSTON (AP)—Under the cloud of a federal grand jury investigation on alleged City Hall corruption, and a fog of confusion on a new council selection process, Houston residents will vote for a mayor and 14 councilmen Nov. 6.

There will be 97 candidates on the ballot, eight of them wanting to be mayor of the nation's fifth largest city.

Among that group are incumbent Jim McConn, a businessman seeking a second two-year term; Councilman Louis Macey, a bitter and vocal foe of the mayor; and Leonel J. Castillo, who recently resigned as commissioner of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Because of the bulky field, runoff races are expected in most of the contests.

Under a new formula, voters will select five council members on a citywide vote, and nine others from specific districts. That means each voter will have a shot at picking six council members.

In the past, the council had only eight persons and all were selected at-large.

But the U.S. Justice Department stepped in and demanded a change be made because recent annexations may have diluted the voting power of minorities.

Most of the new areas brought into the city were predominantly white.

The new districts, carved out after weeks of debate, include two in predominantly black areas and one in the Hispanic eastside.

Currently there is one black and no Mexican-Americans on the council.

The grand jury investigation began with federal extortion charges filed against a former city purchasing director.

U.S. Attorney J.A. "Tony" Canales ordered the probe into allegations of City Hall bribery and extortion halted until after the election. Canales said the investigation should not be a political issue.

Then Noble C. Ginther Jr., who announced for mayor and later withdrew for health reasons, filed a motion in federal court asking that Canales be forced to resume the probe. No action is expected on the motion before the election. Seven councilmen are seeking reelection, five of them for at-large positions.

The other 82 council candidates include a former fire chief, a former school board president, and three state legislators.

All in all, it has been a rather subdued campaign with most of the attention focused on the grand jury question and the complaints of many voters that they are confused about the district-and-at-large system.

McConn and Macey have traded a few verbal shots and Castillo has sniped at the incumbent mayor's record, but otherwise it has been a quiet campaign.

Political observers said the silence is caused by a lack of campaign funds for most candidates. Contributors apparently are expecting a runoff Nov. 20 and are holding back on funds until they know who has a shot at winning.

The major campaign issues thus far have been the poor conditions of city streets and a lack of a mass transit system.

Houston, growing at the rate of about 1,000 persons per week, is plagued with a rash of pot-holes on major arteries feeding the downtown area and freeways that at rush-hour resemble parking lots.

The Metropolitan Transit System is another gripe of Houston residents. Some candidates claim the MTA should be revamped, others say only time is needed to solve the problems.

On an average day last week, the MTA, with a total fleet of 490 buses, reported 187 out of service, 52 runs canceled, 13 late starts and 112 road breakdowns.

The Harris County Women's Political Caucus has endorsed Castillo for mayor, while the Houston Police Officers Association called for the re-election of McConn.

The Houston Gay said it would spend thousands of dollars in an effort to defeat incumbent councilman Frank Mann.

To which Mann replied, "I want to thank you very much for you oddwads and queers fighting me."

Texas Democrats fear publicity of party purge

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas Democrats want to remove any party officers who publicly support or endorse Republicans but they fear too much airing of such problems could do more harm than good.

The State Democratic Executive Committee today was to receive recommendations for enforcing a 1971 rule requiring all officers to support all the party's nominees or be removed.

But a rules subcommittee refused Sunday to establish procedures for either side in such party squabbles to appeal decisions made by county and district chairmen, and, in the case of state officers, by the state chairman.

An amendment on appellate procedures was defeated, 7-6, with Carrin Patman, the rules subcommittee chairman from Galveston, breaking a 6-6 tie.

Harold Hammett, Fort Worth, was among those siding with Mrs. Patman.

"I'd hate to see the party 99 percent pure but with only 49 percent of the vote," Hammett said.

The defeated amendment would have permitted a SDEC majority to rule on appeals.

Wanda Britton, Gainesville, said that would put the SDEC in a position of serving as a grand jury over every precinct chairman in the state "and I have a feeling we wouldn't have time for anything else."

"To drag dirty linen from the precinct level to Austin would destroy the Democratic Party," she said.

The SDEC ordered the search for procedures for implementing the party purity rule after Republican Gov. Bill Clements was elected last November.

The names of Clements and Republican presidential hopefuls John Connally and Ronald Reagan, were mentioned frequently during the five-hour Sunday session.

The SDEC was to be asked today to schedule a special meeting before mid-December to act on the rules change proposals that require 30-day notices.

Chairmen at the county, district and state level would be required to notify suspected defectors, with supporting evidence of specific allegations, by certified mail. If written denials of the specific allegations are not received within 10 days the chairmen then would declare the offices vacant and take steps to fill the vacancies.

The subcommittee began work Sunday with a draft written by a group headed by County Judge Ed Miller of Tarrant.

Miller said it would be presumed anyone denying such allegations would be telling the truth.

"It might be the wrong presumption, but it would avoid widely publicized trials that could damage the party," he said.

Miller said the recommendations should correct 90 percent of the party problems.

"Let's not overkill," he said.

Firewood offered to people in Colorado

PUEBLO, Colo. (AP) — While the Senate considers providing $1.6 billion to help the poor heat their homes this winter, a federally financed poverty agency here is offering low income people cords of firewood.

About 60 cords of ponderosa pine had been given out so far, according to the agency, called Pueblo Action.

Director Phil Gama said rising fuel prices have pressed low-income people into "heat or eat" decisions.

"Senior citizens were calling us to see if we had any wood available," he said. "One lady was tearing down her fence and burning it. She had no means of chopping wood."

So Pueblo Action started "Operation Paul Bunyan" this summer.

The National Forest Service offered to mark dead trees, killed by pine beetles, if the agency wanted to cut them down.

With $50,000 from the Pueblo Manpower Administration, the agency hired nine unemployed workers to cut and stack the wood.

Starting in June on National Forest lands and moving later to private property, the crew has downed 50 to 75 trees a day and will keep cutting until the first heavy snowfall.

Gama said they have cut more than 120 cords so far.

A cord is a pile of wood 4 feet by 4 feet by 8 feet.

Distribution began in August at two sites in Pueblo. Any person meeting poverty guidelines can get up to two cords, and more in special circumstances. The average income of families served by Pueblo Action is $3,500 a year.

Commercial woodcutters in Colorado are selling pine at $65 to $95 a cord this year. Gama said his agency was paying about $35 a cord for the wood it distributes.

Two to three cords should be enough to keep most houses warm through the winter, according to the Forest Service.

Marie Roman, 86, and her 91-year-old husband, Francisco, live with a granddaughter and great-granddaughter and get $110 a month from Social Security.

"They gave me two cords of wood. We have one of those old pot-bellied stoves and it will really help warm our house this winter," said Mrs. Roman. "I am very grateful."

Davis defense lawyers may rest case today

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Defense attorneys indicated they may rest their case today in the retrial of millionaire Cullen Davis after they attempt to bolster their contention the defendant knew he was being recorded when he discussed mass murder with an FBI informant.

FBI recordings of an Aug. 18, 1978 meeting between Davis and informant David McCrory are central to the state's case against the industrialist accused of trying to hire the murder of his divorce judge and others. Judge Joe Eidson was never harmed.

Davis has testified he knew he was being recorded because McCrory, who was wired for sound by the FBI, showed him a second, handheld Norelco recorder when he climbed into the car where the two met.

The defendant has maintained he thought he was cooperating with the FBI to uncover an extortion plot when he discussed multiple murder with McCrory.

An FBI agent testified earlier that he searched McCrory and the car both before and after the pivotal parking lot meeting and that he did not find a recorder.

Dana Smith, 21, a commercial photographer who has shot pictures of the car's interior, testified Friday that such a "device" could have been hidden in an air conditioning vent, among other places.

Desegregation arguments due

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorneys fighting to preserve a 3-year-old Dallas school desegregation plan and lawyers for minority plaintiffs working to scuttle it are scheduled to present oral arguments before the nation's highest court today.

The U.S. Supreme Court scheduled two hours of arguments today on the propriety of the plan approved by U.S. District Judge William Taylor Jr. but objected to by the 5th U.S. Court of Appeals.

School officials defend the plan as a reasonable approach to school desegregation, but the plaintiffs contend it perpetuates one-race schools in two areas of the district.

A decision is not expected for several months, but the arguments represent the final phase of a legal battle that began in 1970 when a group of 21 black and Mexican-American plaintiffs filed a federal lawsuit.

The appeals court has ordered Taylor to study a new student assignment system and to justify the maintenance of any one-race schools.

School district attorneys are expected to argue that the appeals court's emphasis on busing as a tool for integration is too inflexible and that the student population will continue to be largely minority unless the court allows a more realistic desegregation plan.
