Philippine secession threatened

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Moslem leaders warned of possible secession and civil war Saturday, and more than 2,000 Manila slum dwellers roared "Marcos Resign!" at an anti-government rally.

Eleven Moslem leaders issued a manifesto calling on President Ferdinand E. Marcos to proclaim a general amnesty for all political prisoners, to pave the way for a peaceful dialogue between his government and those opposed to it.

They said the turmoil stemming from the Aug. 21 assassination of opposition leader Benigno Aquino could plunge the nation into civil war. Aquino supporters accuse the government of complicity in the killing, but Marcos denies any involvement.

"The Moslems of the Philippines have no desire to be dragged into the impending chaos and bloodbath," the manifesto said. It warned that "unless national reconciliation with justice for all is speedily effected, we may be constrained to reassert the historic identity of the Moro (Moslem) nation."

Former Sen. Domocao Alonto told a news conference this meant Filipino Moslems would break away from the republic and revert to their former sultanates in the southern Mindanao and Sulu islands where government forces have been fighting for more than a decade against Moslem guerrillas demanding autonomy.

Of the Philippines' 50 million people, 4.3 percent are Moslem and 85 percent are Roman Catholic, according to 1981 census figures.

Alonto said all Filipinos were crying out for national reconciliation. "If we do not achieve that, the consequence will be a civil war and in civil war there is no central government, no entity that can speak legally for any particular segment of the population," he said. "If that happens, then we will just revert back to what we were more than 80 years ago when we were an independent state. ... We will re-establish the sovereignty of the Sultan of Sulu, the Sultan of Mindanao..."

Meanwhile, the residents of Tondo, Manila's worst slum, massed in a square in front of the Church of the Holy Child to protest Aquino's assassination and demand Marcos quit.

Former Sen. Salvador Laurel, speaking from the top step of the church, challenged Marcos to face the people of Tondo and ended his speech by singing Aquino's favorite song, "The impossible Dream." The crowd roared "Marcos Resign! Marcos Resign!"

About 50 policemen stood by and did not attempt to crush the demonstration, the latest in a string of protests since Aquino's murder. The authorities had refused to give the demonstrators a permit, saying communist guerrillas were plotting to shoot protesters and blame the deaths on the government.

The rally was attended by market workers, vendors, dockhands and many jobless. Anti-government demonstrations have become an almost daily occurence in the Manila area but this was the first in the capital city's most populous district.

It began with a Mass attended by more than 800 people, including Aquino's widow, Corazon, and her mother-in-law. Before the service began, a 21-year-old woman, crying hysterically, approached Mrs. Aquino and kissed her on the cheek, saying, "I want to get even. I want to kill Marcos."

Mrs. Aquino later addressed the demonstrators, some of whom were perched on the roofs of apartment buildings, showering confetti on the crowd. One group flew a large red kite with "Marcos Resign" scrawled on it alongside a yellow kite bearing Aquino's nickname "Ninoy."

More than 20 men stood on the roof of a truck trailer adorned with a streamers proclaiming, "All Tondo Says Fight."

A spray of roses

Van Anderson, left, with Paul Hamilton verbally assisting, points the spray to hit a section of roses during their Saturday work session in the Midland Rose Garden on Texas Avenue. The two, who are members of the Midland Rose Society, were in charge of the annual chore of spraying fungicide and insecticide to kill mildew and insects on the flowers.

Seven killed in collision

Seven people are dead and one is critically injured following a two-car, head-on collision on Texas Highway 158 about three miles west of Garden City about 6:15 p.m. Saturday.

Five persons in the cars were killed outright in the collision, according to the Texas Department of Public Safety.

The DPS identified the dead as:
—Arturo Lopez, 25, of Odessa.
—Frank Tarin, 13, of Odessa.
—Jose Gambo, 22, of Odessa.
—Frank Moreno, 29, of Odessa.
—Margie Moreno, 8, of Odessa.
—Adrianne D. Browne, 17, of San Angelo and driver of a 1976 two-door Pontiac. She died while undergoing an operation in Midland Memorial Hospital.
—Vanessa Ramos, 3, of Midland and a niece of Ms. Browne. She was pronounced dead on arrival at Midland Memorial Hospital.

Injured was Guadalupe L. Smith, 19, of Odessa. Ms. Smith, driver of the vehicle carrying five passengers, was listed in critical condition in Midland Memorial Hospital. She suffered head, internal and leg injuries.

The DPS reported the westbound car driven by Ms. Browne crossed over the center stripe and into the path of the Smith car. Two cars between the two vehicles veered off the highway to avoid the collision. Bodies in the cars were crushed, the DPS reported.

Seven persons died in a head-on collision Saturday evening that involved this Plymouth Duster and a Pontiac. The accident occurred 2.7 miles west of Garden City on Highway 158.

Ms. Browne and her niece were in the Pontiac.

The accident was investigated by DPS Troopers Matt Andrews and K.W. Pittman of Midland.

Rally 'banking' on FNB's survival

Speakers, refreshments and music, plus what backers call "the most important ingredient of all," an outpouring of Midland citizens, are expected to be combined Tuesday night in a major show of support for troubled First National Bank of Midland.

The organizers' plan: An old-fashioned "town hall" meeting with many of those attending speaking out in an open forum of their support for First National as it continues to battle serious financial problems.

The meeting, endorsed by Midland Chamber of Commerce and Midland Jaycees, among other organizations, will begin at 7:30 p.m. in Midland Center. The public is invited.

The grassroots plan, which began as an idea among a few Midland residents but quickly broadened during the past two days, is one of several support-FNB projects to surface since announcement that the bank's shareholders would meet Friday to seek solutions to First National's financial problems.

Watt vote: A 'no-win' situation

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Senate Republicans, already edgy about the 1984 elections, don't want to be forced to vote on whether Interior Secretary James Watt should remain in office.

For them, it's a political no-win situation of the first magnitude.

That was the consensus view that emerged as Congress headed home to face constituents for a weeklong congressional Columbus Day recess — and to await Watt's decison on whether to resign.

When they return on Oct. 17, a Democratic-sponsored "sense of the Senate" resolution urging Watt's dismissal will be the first order of business pending on the Senate calendar.

Many families have 'dirty secrets'

Editor's Note: From the newborn to the elderly, from the poor to the wealthy, abuse is found in every category of human life. This six-part series explores various forms of abuse and the impact on its victims. Where first names of the victims are used, these names are fictitious. But the stories are true. This article is an overview of "the unreported epidemic."

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

After a 33-year-old woman received fractured ribs and a black eye, she pressed charges on the assailant — her husband.

Abuse
The unreported epidemic

When an 80-year-old man was too feeble to take care of himself, he moved in with friends. Nine months later the man was dead, and his hosts were accused of abusing him.

A 3-month old baby was brought into the hospital weighing five pounds. The baby's 3-year-old sibling was found at home with multiple bruises and contusions. The children were immediately put into foster care.

WHEN A FATHER engaged in incest with his 9-year-old daughter, the girl told her mother. The mother said she was imagining things. At age 13, the girl was pregnant with her father's child.

Physical abuse, neglect and sexual assault are society's "dirty secrets" which are creeping out of the closet.

Victims are talking. More cases of abuse are being reported.

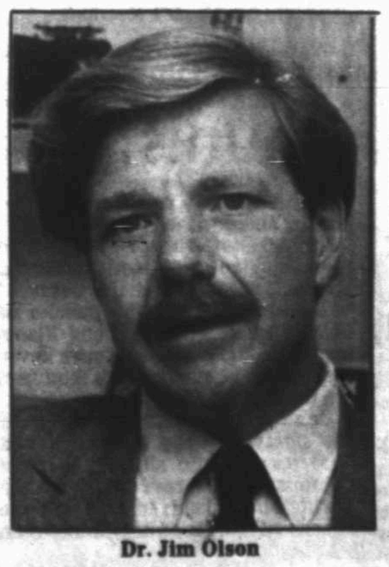

According to an Associated Press report, President Reagan — recognizing widespread abuse throughout the nation — named a task force in September to study family violence, which he described as the "darker side of family life in America."

In the same report, Attorney General William French Smith said: "Family violence in America is a serious and complex crime problem.

"Yet, this problem has for too long been viewed as a private matter best resolved by the parties themselves without resort to the legal system."

While some sociologists blame a complicated society for more family violence, a Midland psychologist said abuse merely is merely reported more.

WEATHER SUMMARY

The National Weather Service forecast for Sunday predicts showers for most of the Northwest including parts of California. Showers are also predicted for the southern plains states and coastal states from Virginia to Florida. Pennsylvania and parts of New York, West Virginia and Ohio are also expected to receive precipitation.

Enough rain falls 'to wet ground'

Just enough rain "to wet the ground" and nothing to soak in or break the drought fell over much of the Midland area Saturday.

However, Lamesa, the hub of a major cotton-growing area, got no rainfall.

Neither did Andrews.

"No," said a weather observer there, "We didn't get nothing but dirt. We're just not paying the preacher."

Lamesa got a sprinkle, "but it never did rain."

Down in Rankin, "not enough (rain fell) to measure." Big Lake got "a little bit — not much," and Crane got a sprinkling — "just barely enough to wet the ground."

Odessa got a sprinkle, though heavy rain reportedly fell west of there.

Midland reaped a light shower — .01 inch, according to the weatherman with the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

The shower brings the year's rainfall total to 4.40 inches, which is about a third of the yearly average rainfall of 12.51 inches. The average rainfall through September is 11.24 inches.

The weatherman forecast a 40 percent chance of showers today, a high into the mid-70s and winds southeasterly at 10 to 15 mph. Skies are to be partly cloudy Monday, when the high is to be in the mid-70s.

Saturday's peak temperature was 81 degrees, while the record high for an Oct. 8 is 100 degrees set in 1979. Saturday's overnight low was 65 degrees. The record low for an Oct. 9 is 36 degrees in 1970.

Many families have 'dirty secrets'

"I'm convinced because the media has helped surface this more, people are coming for help," said Dr. Jim Olson, Midland psychologist.

"IN THE PAST, society pointed to the raped woman as provocative," he added. "Physically abused children wouldn't say anything. Sexually abused children would say something, but the parent wouldn't do anything.

"It was like the old idea about the alcoholic," Olson said. "These people are weak. They just lack strength. Not true, they have a disease. It's not such a bad deal any more to have your neighbor know your husband is an alcoholic.

"We're seeking help," he said. "And now we're seeking help for sexual, physical and emotional abuse."

Olson attributes inappropriate learning from inappropriate parenting as the main cause of abuse.

"There are fewer and fewer models of good parenting," he said. "One can only learn how to parent from watching his/her own parent. The same goes for being a spouse.

"If the parents have a messy, screwed up relationship, it will invariably carry through to the child."

In Midland during 1982:

— 444 women and children sought refuge at the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children.

— 526 complaints of child abuse, including neglect and sexual abuse, were reported to Midland County Child Welfare.

— 72 cases of sexual assault were reported to the Midland Rape Crisis Center.

IN ADDITION, THE Department of Human Resources Protective Services Division is investigating some 60 cases of elderly abuse.

Although no statistics are available, many experts noted men are also physically and emotionally abused.

"Nobody knows what actually causes people to abuse other people," said John Young, executive director of Family Services of Midland.

"People don't marry people to be mean to them," he said. "They don't have children to be mean to them.

"But people do suffer disappointments. If they feel defeated and angry often enough, violence could occur. It's a cycle. Many abusers have been abused. Alcohol plays a big part.

"Therapy is not an adequate response," Young added. "The emphasis should be put on prevention."

While Young sees prevention in the form of education, Olson said most children will grow up to imitate their parents' actions.

"You're abusing the child when you don't provide positive consequences for positive behavior."

Young contends child abuse is caused by parents' unrealistic expectations of their children.

"THERE WAS A time when we tried to label abusers as sick," he said. "Some are, some aren't. Often when a person abuses a child, he is correcting in the child's best interest. The abuser doesn't see it as abuse."

The Region VI Child Abuse and Neglect Resource Center at the University of Texas at Austin prepared a report from 1975 to 1977 on "Child Deaths in Texas, A Study of Child Deaths Attributed to Abuse and Neglect."

The report's summary stated:

"It appears from the data of this study that we are dealing with severely troubled and multi-problem families, who through desperation, inadequate parenting skills or social and neglectful behavior implicated in the deaths of their children."

According to Wanda Douglas, Midland Memorial Hospital emergency room supervisor, "(Abused) kids act so strangely, it's hard to pick up on abuse. If you beat the fire out of them, who else do they have? Who are they going to tell?"

By law, the DHR is required to investigate reports of abuse and neglect. It also is mandated by law to try to prevent abuse.

Lela McClung, DHR child care licensing supervisor, said there are 200 licensed day care homes in the Permian Basin and 300 to 400 registered homes. The DHR is not required by law to visit the registered homes, Ms. McClung said.

"THE ONLY THING we respond to in the registered homes is complaints," she said. "We have averaged 15 to 20 complaints a month in the licensed and registered homes. One to two complaints each month involve abuse."

Child abuse and neglect have always been around, but experts say the problem is increasing. According to the American Humane Association (AHA), there were 788,844 official reports of child maltreatment in 1980 which involved about 1.2 million children. This was an increase of 91 percent over 1976 and many cases are estimated to go unreported.

But it doesn't stop with children. Reports of spousal, elderly and sexual abuse are increasing.

According to statistics compiled by the Texas Council on Family Violence:

—The FBI estimates that one out of every two women will be physically abused at some point in their lives by men with whom they live.

— Conservative estimates indicate that more than 100,000 Texans will be abused on a weekly basis.

— Twenty percent of all hospital emergency room visits by women are attributed to wife beating and 70 percent of all emergency room assault cases are wives.

— Absenteeism from work because of domestic violence results in an estimated economic loss of $3 to $5 billion to businesses each year.

ELDERLY ABUSE HAS been dubbed the "well-kept secret." Although spousal and child abuse goes unreported, more teachers, nurses, doctors and others may recognize the signs. But the elderly person is often isolated. According to the Gray Panthers (a coalition of senior citizens) of Austin, it is this isolation which has made it difficult to determine the extent and cause of elderly abuse.

"The best kept secret" is sexual abuse. The diagnosis of sexual abuse of a child is difficult because often the child does not suffer physical injury, according to Miriam Nisenbaum, program specialist/director for Stars for Children — Child Abuse Prevention Center.

"Even if sexual abuse of a child is not admitted or recognized by the family, it is imperative that we believe the child's story," Ms. Nisenbaum said. "The mere fact of children's knowledge of explicit sexual behavior inappropriate for their age is a signal for further investigation."

Although Ms. Nisenbaum said the actual number of sexually abused children in the U.S. is unknown. Yet, the NHA estimates about 4,000 cases occur annually in every large city. Other reports indicate as much as one-third of the population has had some form of childhood sexual abuse.

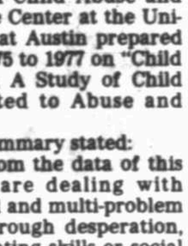

"I know it (abuse) goes on everywhere," Olson said. "(Abuse) transcends all economics, social status and location. We're just seeing more because people are reporting it."

Monday: Spousal abuse.

Mary: Law unequipped to help retarded woman

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Mary needed help five years ago. She was abused and neglected. Today she's dead.

Mary was 25 years old when it was discovered her home environment was a threat to her life.

She was mentally retarded, living in the Permian Basin with her elderly father. He was unable to make decisions about Mary's health care.

Five years ago the law provided children, the elderly and battered women help through the police or protective agencies at the Department of Human Resources.

Today, the law covers protective services from birth to death.

But in 1978, Wayne Chester, who was a Midland DHR social worker, couldn't legally force Mary's father to seek medical attention for her.

"When we first became aware of the case, it was reported that they were living in unsanitary surroundings," Chester said. "Upon investigation I learned Mary was fecally impacted and needed medical attention as soon as possible."

Mary had spent the majority of her life in bed. She couldn't do anything for herself. Her father always kept her in a diaper and she was bottle-fed.

"This no doubt accounted for her chronic elimination problems," Chester said, remembering the case, his first as a social worker.

"The house was always dirty and smelled strongly of urine.

"We managed to convince the man to allow us to send a homemaker into the home every week to bathe Mary, feed her, change her bed linens and to sit her up in a chair for a little while every day," Chester said.

One day a relative, who was caring for Mary while her father was out of town, called Chester. Mary's stomach was hurting her. She was pregnant. The "hurt" was the onset of labor. She had been raped by a relative who was later charged with the crime.

Mary, who weighed 51 pounds, gave birth to a two-pound baby who died a few days later. Because of the rape charge and community outcry, Chester said a judge ordered that Mary be moved to a nursing facility.

She died recently.

Although it was a true, but extreme, example of an Adult Protective case, Chester said the law five years ago didn't "give us more authority to seek solutions to problems such as this one.

"Mary's parents loved her, the father was just not equipped to care for her," he added.

'Miraculous' statue placed

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (AP) — A 32-foot stainless steel statue of the Virgin Mary, credited by some with miraculous properties, has been dedicated at a shrine near San Jose.

About 1,500 people gathered Friday for the dedication of the six-acre Shrine of Our Lady of Peace, located on flatlands near the southern edge of San Francisco Bay.

The statue created by artist Charles Cropper Parks drew crowds across the nation as it was transported across the country from Wilmington, Del., to California.

Some viewers claimed they saw the statue's arms move. Others said they stood dry in the midst of rain while viewing the virgin.

'Cheerleaders' seek pledges to rescue First National Bank

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A pledge campaign to elicit financial support for Midland's troubled First National Bank has been launched by three Midlanders who want to see the bank recover and prosper.

"We're just the cheerleaders," said developer Ken Lough, who wants to help ensure "the First National's 11th hour turnaround."

Lough, Midland real estate developer Goodrich Hejl and financial consultant Margaret Captain are spearheading a campaign to record pledges of deposits to show support for the 93-year-old bank.

"That bank should not be allowed to go under by members of the community," said Ms. Captain, a former commercial lender for Chemical Bank of New York.

This afternoon and all day Monday the "cheerleaders" will be taking telephone calls at 683-4864 or personal visits at 205 E. Michigan Ave. Pledges will be tallied and reported to bank officials Tuesday, when the bank opens following the Columbus Day holiday Monday.

"We don't have any money to gain or lose (in the drive)," said Lough. "We're not stockholders."

Lough noted that relatively small depositors need not be afraid of any bank failure, since the Federal Depositors Insurance Co. insures the account of each depositor up to $100,000.

"They (depositors) need not be afraid," Lough said.

"I don't want your grocery money pledged," Ms. Captain said.

Presidents and chief executive officers of major corporations have pledged deposits with FNB, and bankers, including the chairman of the board of a Midland bank, are supporting FNB and do not want it to fail, they said.

Were the bank to collapse, it "is going to be a detriment to the community," Lough said.

Among those supporting the bank are corporation officers who withdrew money from the bank. One corporate officer said he was going to deposit $200,000 in the bank but in two accounts of $100,000 each.

"I want the high rollers to get on it, and the little ones, too," said Ms. Captain.

"The major corporations and the oil companies will support the bank," Lough said.

No individuals or entities, including other banks would benefit from the failure of FNB, Lough said. A failure could create a stigma and might make investors and corporations wary of investing in Midland or moving into the city.

"An old, faithful hand...in West Texas is in trouble. I know that everybody needs to get behind it."
— Goodrich Hejl

"Everybody we've talked to is 'rah-rah' " in support of FNB," Ms. Captain said. "I feel that West Texans will pull it off. And only in West Texas could you pull it off. West Texans are proud, determined and never say die."

Lough noted that a resurgence in deposits should give the bank added strength in its capitalization program and should work favorably from the viewpoint of the FDIC officials and bank examiners.

"We're trying to help First National estimate its new deposits, between our pledges and their own existing capitalization plans," Lough said. "We hope their progress can be accelerated.

"We will be contacting directly many corporate and business presidents to bring as many dollars as possible back to the First National. It's hard to believe the fear recently expressed (via the so-called "runs" on the bank last week), knowing this bank's history (of community service), plus the fantastic security given to the banks insured by the FDIC."

Hejl, 61, is re-pledging his support for the bank even though he occasionally has gotten "mad" at it.

"An old, faithful hand...in West Texas is in trouble," Hejl said of FNB. "I know that everybody needs to get behind it. Something needs to be done to turn things around.

"The bank was trying to take care of every need that came along," Hejl said, and eventually got into financial trouble. He said the bank seemed to made loans as if it expected oil to reach $100 a barrel instead of dropping in price.

Hejl observed that those who deposit up to $100,000 in the bank are running "no risk." The average withdrawal in Thursday's "run" on the bank was $3,000.

"That's panic," he said. "That same emotion that creates panic can create support."

In his years of dealing with the bank, Hejl said he has grown angry at the bank from time to time.

"I get mad at my wife, too, but I'm not going to change."

Senate Republicans don't want to vote on Watt

Senate GOP leaders have made it clear to the White House that, while they were able to delay such a vote until after the recess, they will be unable to block it any longer — and that if Watt insists on trying to keep his post, he will lose the vote, probably by a wide bipartisan margin.

And Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., who calls himself an "honest messenger" between the Senate and the White House on the Watt matter, reportedly relayed this sentiment in the clearest of terms last week to White House aides.

"People (in the Senate) are waiting to hear what happens," Baker said.

GOP sources who spoke on the condition they not be identified said Baker and other top Senate Republicans desparately hope that the Watt issue will have resolved itself by the time the recess ends — and that Senate Republicans, already facing a tough challenge in retaining control of the chamber they won in the Reagan landslide of 1980, won't have to carry any additional political baggage into next year's elections.

Watt, meanwhile, on continued his vaction in California.

China's Communist Party prepares to purge three million

By VICTORIA GRAHAM
Associated Press Writer

PEKING — Chinese leaders will purge at least 3 million of the Communist Party's 40 million members in a re-registration campaign aimed at expelling adherents to the late Chairman Mao Tse-tung's radical views, diplomatic sources said Saturday.

The sources, who requested anonymity, said they have information that the party's investigators are gathering evidence on 3 million members in order to build cases against them in a purge expected to last for about three years.

China's state-run press refers to the campaign as a "rectification," a housecleaning to rid the party of leftist opponents to the policies of China's ranking leader Deng Xiaoping. But official accounts have never specified how many party members are likely to be expelled.

Deng is the ranking member of the party's ruling Politburo and chairman of the Military Affairs Commission. He rose to power following Mao's death in 1976 and the arrest of Mao's subordinates, an unpopular radical clique known as the "Gang of Four," including Mao's wife Jiang Qing.

In contrast to Mao, Deng has allowed peasants to engage in limited private enterprise, invited foreigners to invest in China, reinstituted aptitude testing in colleges, shifted the economic emphasis to consumer goods and made state-run industry more accountable for profit and loss.

These changes have angered party members who adhere to Mao's philosophy of unending revolution, class struggle and self-reliance. Many of these members were able to join the party during the 1966-76 Cultural Revolution, a chaotic period inspired by Mao's radical directives aimed at expelling those he considered rightist "capitalist roaders" — such as Deng.

Much of Deng's work in the last seven years has been aimed at putting associates in senior positions in order to more effectively purge leftists in the party's lower ranks.

"They already know pretty well who they want to get rid of and who the targets will be," said one Western diplomatic analyst, "but they are taking pains to allay fears of bloody purge and persecution."

The rectification campaign probably will be launched formally when the party Central Committee meets Sunday or Monday, diplomats say.

About 10 million people entered the Communist Party during the Cultural Revolution. The 3 million said to be marked thus far do not meet what Deng's associates call the requirements of education, competence, honesty and willingness to change.

Lebanese troops battle Shiite Moslems in Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanese troops and Shiite Moslem militiamen battled in southern Beirut Saturday, and efforts were under way to halt Druse-Christian fighting in the Kharroub mountains overlooking Israel's defense line near the Awali River.

One soldier and two civilians were killed late Friday and early Saturday morning as Lebanese army troops and Shiite Moslem militias exchanged small arms and rocket fire in Beirut's southern neighborhoods, authorities said.

Attackers also hurled explosives at a French army vehicle patrolling Fuad Chehab Avenue, a main road between the city's Moslem and Christian sectors, but no one was hurt, the French command said.

The French participate in the multinational peacekeeping force in Beirut, which also includes U.S. Marines, Italian soldiers and British troops. The force has been in Lebanon since last summer, after the Israelis invaded and drove the Palestine Liberation Organization out of their west Beirut stronghold.

The Israelis pulled back from the central mountains to the Awali River in the south last month in an effort to cut casualties, and on Saturday Lebanon's cease-fire committee ordered fighting to stop in the Kharroub region overlooking Israel's defense line near the Awali.

Red Cross trucks bring relief food supplies to the Christian population of Deir al-Kamar in the Chouf Mountains of Lebanon Friday.

The Lebanese Forces militia command said that it had ordered its Christian fighters to abide by the new cease-fire order. Druse militiamen also were expected to comply. But it was not immediately known if the battles had ended.

The Druse and Christian fighters have been fighting almost daily in the Kharroub, an area populated largely by Sunni Moslems. The Kharroub is adjacent to the Chouf and Aley regions, which were caught up in gunbattles Sept. 4 after the Israelis pulled back. A cease-fire declared Sept. 26 has held, despite occasional skirmishes

Christian refugees claim militia provoked Druse

DEIR AL-KAMAR, Lebanon (AP) — Many Christian refugees jammed into this mountain village to escape the civil war blame Christian militiamen for their plight, claiming the militia presence provoked the fighting with the Druse sect.

They complain that the militiamen are seizing food and medicine sent by the Red Cross and selling the items to the thousands of civil-war victims who are forced to stay here because the Druse militia controls every road out.

"Look at this, they sold it to me for 50 pounds," said a woman who called herself Noor, a 40-year-old Maronite Christian, pointing to a tin of cooking oil. The price she paid equals about $10.

As she shouted to reporters who visited the town Friday, many others came up to scream out their own bitter complaints about the Lebanese Forces, the Christian militia dominated by the Phalange fighters of Pierre Gemayel, father of President Amin Gemayel.

"Before the Lebanese Forces came to the mountains, we were living with the Druse like brothers. Not even a slap had been exchanged," said Farajallah Saleh, who escaped from the village of Rashmaya in the Aley mountains.

"If that is what they want, I want to be a Druse," cried a Maronite refugee who called herself Malisa. "They won't slaughter us."

Phalangist militiamen overhearing the complaints denied they are profiteering from the relief supplies and blamed their Druse enemies for the refugee situation. One fighter, who identified himself only as Michael, said the militiamen are as hungry as everyone else in town.

"We try to protect and help the refugees before we take ourselves," he said.

Deir al-Kamar is a Maronite village in the Chouf mountains 13.6 miles southeast of Beirut. It once was at peace with adjacent areas populated by Druse, an Islamic offshoot among the poorer of Lebanon's sects.

Kissinger leaves for Central America

WASHINGTON (AP) — Henry A. Kissinger and his Bipartisan National Commission on Central America leave Sunday night on a week-long trip to the region in quest of new ideas on how the United States should handle one of its most troublesome foreign policy areas.

For a diplomat who once negotiated questions of war and peace in the Middle East, Kissinger's mandate in Central America will be modest.

The commission's goal is to gather facts, not negotiate. It is scheduled to meet with leaders of the government, the democratic opposition, the church, academia, labor groups and peasant organizations. No meetings are planned with guerrilla leaders of either the left or the right.

"I think what we will get out of the trip is a flavor for the country, a judgment of the personalities, an opportunity to ask questions that have been bothering us," Kissinger said when summing up the panel's goals.

From Monday through next Saturday, the commission will start early each day and work until after dark with few interruptions in their visits to Panama, Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras and Nicaragua.

"Obviously, in a week, in a day in each country, we will not become expert in each country," Kissinger said recently, adding with a smile, "We may manage it in one or two."

Lamenting the dizzying pace and the brief stop in each country, Rep. Michael Barnes, D-Md., said, "This is an awful way to do it. I hope a lot can be learned even under these circumstances."

Argentina allows 'lifting of the lid'

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — The censors have sheathed their scissors, editors have grown bold and Argentines are seeing and reading things that were blacked out in seven years of military government.

They call it "destape" — "the lifting of the lid" that has accompanied the current transition toward civilian rule.

The generals have scheduled elections for Oct. 30 and the transfer of power to elected authorities for Jan. 30.

Among the movies Argentines now are permitted to see is the 1982 film "Missing." Its recent opening here is perhaps the most dramatic evidence that the armed forces have relinquished their mandate for "protecting" public sensibility and that virtually any theme is open to treatment.

Entitled "Desaparecido" in Spanish, the Oscar-winning movie by Greek director Costa-Gavras is about a left-leaning American journalist's abduction and murder by military men following the overthrow of the Socialist government in neighboring Chile in 1973.

It is particularly poignant here, where human rights organizations accuse the security forces of the kidnapping, torture and summary execution of more than 10,000 people, suspected of being leftists, during the repression of urban-guerrilla violence in the 1970s.

The Classification Entity, as the movie censorship panel is known, recently approved uncut versions of such long-prohibited films as Liliana Cavani's "The Night Porter" and Lina Wertmuller's "Swept Away."

European allies ambivalent about U.S. goals, actions

By DAVID MASON

An Analysis

LONDON (AP) — Relations between the United States and its main European allies are a mosaic of good and bad as the North Atlantic alliance faces off with the Soviet Union on a crucial nuclear arms issue.

If the U.S.-Soviet nuclear missile talks in Geneva fail over the next three months, the United States will begin deploying 572 modern rockets on the soil of an often reluctant Western Europe.

Europeans have frequently pushed Washington to take a more flexible stand in the Geneva talks, and there was wide praise for President Reagan's more conciliatory offer before the United Nations on Sept. 26.

Although the missile issue is the dominant one, other slower-burning questions are present, such as an overpowering U.S. dollar and what many Europeans see as trade protectionist tendencies in Washingon.

They all influence the transatlantic climate and go into the concerns of Americans and Europeans as to whether they can count on one another in critical times.

Many Europeans have felt Reagan has taken too strident an attitude toward the Soviet Union. Such Reagan characterizations of the Soviet Union as an "evil empire" and claims that the Soviets are apt to "commit crime, to lie, to cheat," raised some hackles in Europe.

But European criticism of Reagan's anti-Soviet outbursts was dampened when the Soviet warplane shot down a South Korean airliner Sept. 1, killing all 269 people aboard.

Even neutral Switzerland joined a nearly solid Western European front in condemning the Kremlin in terms as strong as those from Washington.

And when Reagan replied with only minimal sanctions and American officials urged Europeans to give Moscow a signal of discontent with a two-week airline embargo, most countries joined in.

Iran calls plane delivery plot by 'arrogant powers'

PARIS (AP) — Iran said Saturday that the reported delivery of five French Super-Etendard fighter bombers to Iraqi forces is part of what it called a U.S.-Zionist plot by "arrogant world powers."

The commentary by the Paris correspondent of Iran's state-run radio came one day after informed sources in the French government said the Super-Etendards had been delivered to Iraq despite Iranian warnings that they could provoke a full-scale conflict in the Persian Gulf, the lifeline for Western oil traffic.

Iran and Iraq have been warring since September 1980 over the Shatt-al-Arab Waterway, Iraq's only outlet to the gulf. Neither country has shown any intention of making peace or gaining an advantage in the conflict.

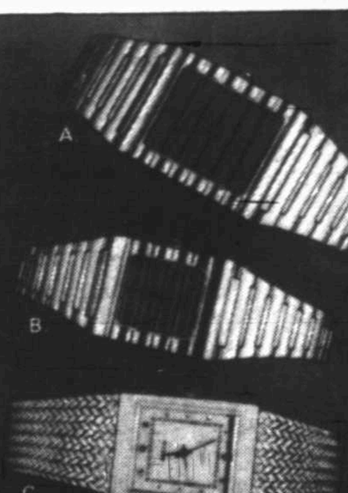

But the Super-Etendards could significantly alter the balance in favor of Iraq because the warplanes have the ability to launch France's feared sea-skimming Exocet missiles, used with such deadly effect by Argentina in the Falkland Islands war with Britain last year.

France, which already has delivered Exocets to Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's forces, agreed earlier this year to provide the jets to Iraq. Diplomats say Iraq wants to use the Exocets to choke off Iran's oil revenues.

"Despite international protests against the policies pursued by America and its allies, particularly the Zionist leaders of the French government...France has already delivered its Super-Etendard aircraft to Saddam," Tehran radio said, referring to the Iraqi leader.

As Frank Borman, left, Charles Bryan and Pat Fink listen, former U.S. Secretary of Labor William Usery tells a press conference Friday morning that Eastern and the three labor unions have reached a peace pact. They hope to reach an agreement that can save the carrier from its financial nosedive.

Eastern, union resume talks

MIAMI (AP) — Negotiators for Eastern Airlines and the flight attendants' union were making "continued progress" toward a contract agreement Saturday as they met at an airport hotel, a mediator said.

Without a pact, the union has said it will strike Eastern starting at 12:01 a.m. Thursday.

The Miami Herald reported Saturday that only the question of wages in the three-year contract separated Eastern and the team bargaining for 5,800 of the Miami-based carrier's flight attendants.

The attendants were demanding a 29 percent pay increase over three years, while the carrier was offering 20.3 percent, the Herald said.

"What we're talking about is a series of counterproposals in which the parties have been moving closer," Harry Bickford, a federal mediator brought in to referee the talks, told reporters.

"We feel there is continued progress and we have continued optimism."

But there was little optimism in Houston, where negotiations broke off Friday between the pilots' union and another financially struggling carrier, Continental Airlines.

A union official accused Continental of refusing to negotiate emergency work rules instituted after the airline filed for reorganization under federal bankruptcy laws. Those contracts cut salaries in half and drastically altered work rules.

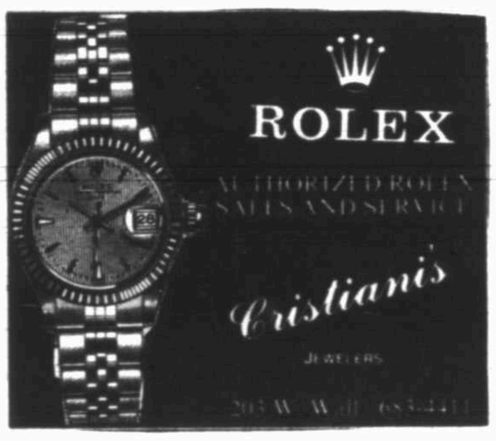

In Miami, Bickford and the negotiators refused to comment on the specifics of Saturday's progress.

Patricia Fink, president of Local 553 of the Transport Workers Union, which represents the flight attendants, said: "I'd say we're about halfway there."

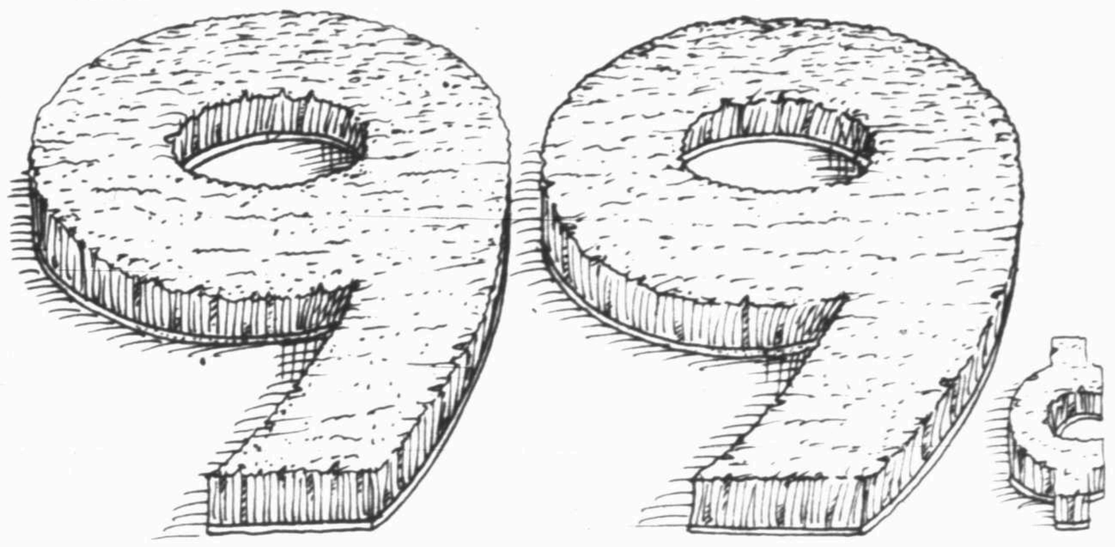

Friday was the first time in months that anyone connected to Eastern labor relations could use the word optimism. A crisis atmosphere was partly eased earlier in the day when Eastern Chairman Frank Borman withdrew his threat to file for bankruptcy unless the Miami-based airline's 37,500 employees accepted 15 percent pay cuts by Oct. 12.

In return, Ms. Fink and leaders of Eastern's two other unions agreed to "do whatever is necessary" to keep the carrier in the air.

Eastern and its unions promised Friday to abide by the recommendations of Lazard Freres & Co. and Locker-Abrecht Associates, both of New York. The firms are expected to complete an examination of Eastern's books before the end of the month.

The coffin of Cardinal Terence Cooke is carried into New York's St. Patrick's Cathedral Friday for a weekend of prayer, mourning and ritual. An honor guard of city police officers and firefighters in dress uniforms line the front steps of the cathedral as the coffin carrying Cooke's remains was brought inside for a service and evening prayers. Cooke will be buried Monday afternoon in the crypt beneath the altar.

Multitudes view cardinal's body

NEW YORK (AP) — Thousands of people filed past the coffin of Cardinal Terence Cooke and gathered to pray for his soul at St. Patrick's Cathedral on Saturday.

Cooke's body, which was brought to the cathedral Friday night, was clad in a white vestment worn while celebrating Mass, a gift from students at Monsignor Farrell High School on Staten Island.

The body was guarded by police officers and firefighters wearing dress uniforms and white gloves. The mourners filed past the body silently, some pausing to kneel and cross themselves.

A throng of people lined up outside, waiting quietly in the autumn sunshine for a chance to enter the cathedral. Some pushed babies in strollers. Some wore suits and Sunday clothes, and others wore jeans and sneakers.

Cooke, spiritual leader of 1.8 million Catholics in New York and another 2 million associated with the armed forces, died Thursday of leukemia.

A funeral was scheduled for Monday, to be led by the Vatican's U.S. representative, Archbishop Pio Laghi, with a homily by William Cardinal Baum, the highest-ranking American at the Vatican.

Railroad station damaged

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — The historic Main Street railroad station was heavily damaged by an arson fire, authorities say.

The Friday night blaze began on the fifth floor of the station, Fire Chief Ronald C. Lewis said.

Firefighters contained the blaze to the fourth and fifth floors of the 82-year-old building, Lewis said. The structure was saved and planned renovation work probably can proceed, he said.

The blaze, reported at 7:05 p.m., brought about 110 firefighters to the scene before the flames were controlled about 9 p.m.

At the peak of the fire, 22 of the city's 30 fire companies were at the scene.

NRC fines power company

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission has proposed a $40,000 fine against Niagara Mohawk Power Corp., saying control room workers at the Nine Mile Point 1 nuclear power plant failed to fix a pair of radiation monitors for 27 hours last summer.

The monitors' failure meant an automatic shutdown system would not have worked in case of high radiation levels in the Oswego plant's main steam line, the NRC said in a notice received by the utility Friday.

Niagara Mohawk spokesman Robert Burtch said Saturday the utility hasn't decided whether to pay the proposed fine or contest it.

Wife found innocent by jury

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (AP) — A woman who testified she shot her abusive husband after an argument over how their children should pose for a Christmas photo has been found innocent by a jury of second-degree murder.

Cheng Chin Jen, 30, testified during the week-long trial that she shot her husband Edward twice Dec. 11 with a .22-caliber handgun during one of their many arguments. He died a few hours later.

Mrs. Jen testified her husband had a quick temper and that he hit her in the face, pulled her hair and tauntingly held a shotgun to her head during his rages.

The jury reached its verdict Friday night.

Firm fined for overpricing

CINCINNATI (AP) — A firm that makes compressors used by the U.S. Air Force was fined $3 million for inflating its prices to the Defense Department, a government lawyer says.

The Davey Compressor Co. of suburban Blue Ash, Ohio, pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court on Friday.

The fine included $1,704,429 the government said it was overcharged, plus penalties. The firm also agreed to pay $250,000 in a civil suit by the government, U.S. Attorney Christopher Barnes said.

Davey Compressor was given permission to continue doing business with the government.

John D. Falso, 55, a former executive vice president, has pleaded guilty to falsifying the prices for the spare parts.

Boy kills uncle with knife

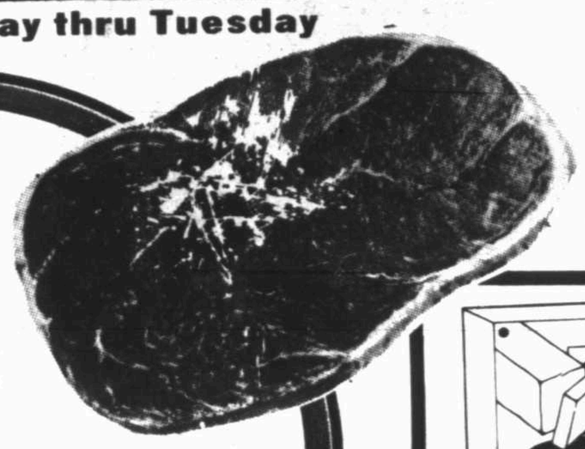

NEW YORK (AP) — A 14-year-old boy who "got fed up of being beat up" stabbed and killed his uncle with a kitchen knife in an argument over whether to watch cartoons or Sesame Street on television, authorities said.

Police arrested Gregory Baley, an eighth grader from Queens, on a charge of second-degree murder Friday evening.

Uproar speads against Social Security's rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — A governors' rebellion is spreading against Social Security's rules for handling disability reviews, with eight states now unilaterally declaring moratoriums on cutting people off the rolls.

In many other states, court rulings are forcing the federal government to keep people on disability unless examiners can show that the recipient's medical condition has improved since he or she initially won benefits.

Some observers have called it the most wanton disregard of federal rules since the 1960s when several governors in the South resisted federal efforts to force desegregation of their public schools.

Alabama Gov. George Wallace, who was one of those governors, is also among those now refusing to follow the Social Security Administration's rulebook for determining which of the 2.6 million disabled workers should lose their benefits.

THE REAGAN ADMINISTRATION has taken no punitive action against any of the states involved in the rebellion. Top Social Security officials disavow any intention of cracking down on the states. Instead, they express confidence that legislation now pending in Congress will straighten out the bureaucratic imbroglio.

The federal government paid the states $540 million last year to administer the disability program according to federal rules. It has the authority to take over a state-run disability office, but it has never done so in the 17-year history of the program.

"This has always been a federal-state partnership and we want to keep it that way. I don't want to talk about a federal takeover," Lou Enoff, Social Security's acting deputy commissioner for programs and policy, said in an interview. "We want to work it out with the Congress and try to come up with some medical improvement standard."

Enoff added, "I'm not sure how many cases aren't being processed at this time."

SINCE NEW YORK declared a moratorium on July 22, seven states have followed suit: Alabama, North Carolina, West Virginia, Virginia, New Jersey, Maryland and Pennsylvania.

Several other states, including Massachusetts, Georgia, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Kansas, are not complying fully with the federal rules, according to Social Security spokesman John Trollinger.

Pennsylvania was the latest to join the rebellion when Gov. Richard Thornburgh imposed a temporary moratorium last Thursday. Thornburgh became the first Republican governor to do so. Maryland and Pennsylvania also imposed their moratoriums last week.

Enoff said he has been asking his regional offices to ascertain just what each of the moratoriums entails. He said he believed that in most cases, the governors' orders protected people whose medical conditions had not improved.

"Frankly, some of these executive orders — there's a long way between what is written by a governor and what is actually implemented," he said.

FROM 1969 TO 1976, Social Security did not allow the state disability agencies to terminate people's benefits unless an improvement in their medical conditions could be demonstrated. But then the agency abandoned that policy through internal directives.

Several courts have ruled that that action was illegal. The 9th Circuit Court of Appeals in California has twice ruled that Social Security must demonstrate either medical improvement or clear errors in the original award. As a consequence, a medical improvement standard is in force in nine western states, California, Arizona, Hawaii, Nevada, Alaska, Idaho, Oregon, Washington and Montana.

Reagan: Syria has new Soviet missiles

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, saying the Soviet Union is supplying Syria with a new generation of missiles, today questioned Syria's "protestations of their peaceful intentions" in Lebanon.

In his weekly radio address to the nation, Reagan said the increased Soviet presence in Syria leaves no doubt about the need for the continued presence of 1,600 U.S. Marines in Lebanon.

"Can the United States or the free world stand by and see the Middle East incorporated into the Soviet block?" Reagan asked rhetorically. "What of Westen Europe's and Japan's dependence on Middle East oil for the energy to fuel their industry?"

Reagan accused Syria of reneging on an agreement to withdraw its troops from war-torn Lebanon if Israel did.

He said Syria "today has some 5,000 Soviet advisers and technicians and a massive amount of new Soviet equipment in its country — including a new generation of surface-to-surface missiles, the SS-21."

This is not Moses' burning bush, but a lone mesquite burning amid 500 acres of charred range land on the Griffin Ranch four miles southeast of Lawn, located in west central Texas. Rural firefighters around West Texas have been kept busy fighting numerous fires, due to the extremely dry conditions prevalent in the area. This fire was caused by a stray spark from a welding rig.

Prison board promises tighter reins on system

AUSTIN (AP) — The W.J. Estelle era is over at the Texas Department of Corrections, and the prison board made it clear Saturday that the new state prison director will not wield the clout that Estelle did.

In a 900-word statement issued from Huntsville, the board said it would exercise "more complete and direct control of all operations" of the 36,000-inmate system.

And, in counterpoint to board chairman Robert Gunn's laudatory remarks about Estelle on Friday, the Saturday statement acknowledged there were problems that "leave the board with no alternative but to adopt a new plan for operating the department."

In what insiders said was a forced resignation, Estelle stepped down Friday. He will stay on the state payroll through Feb. 1, a date Gunn said Estelle initially had picked for his resignation.

House Law Enforcement Committee Chairman Ray Keller, R-Duncanville, said the earlier resignation date was symbolic of the nine-member board's plan to wrest control back from the TDC staff. Keller said board members had previously fallen under the direction of a "charismatic" director in Estelle.

Attorney General Jim Mattox said, "The board in the past has been criticized as a rubber stamp."

The board statement promises change.

"Recent disclosure of financial and construction management problems, deteriorating communications with the legislature and state officials, and unfavorable reports of noncompliance in the Ruiz vs. Estelle litigation leave the board with no alternative but to adopt a new plan for operating the department to ensure greater fiscal responsibility, restore credibility with all state officials, improve relations with the office of the special master, and increase the effort of TDC to provide inmates with greater opportunities for safety, productivity, education and rehabilitation," the board said.

Estelle, who told Gunn he was tired of being the "lightning rod" that attracted criticism for the prison's problems, was unavailable for comment Saturday. A housekeeper at his state-owned home in Huntsville said he was out for the day.

Board members want TDC lawyers to end the Ruiz vs. Estelle litigation "as soon as possible." That lawsuit resulted in a federal court order for major changes, and the appointment of Special Master Vincent Nathan to oversee the prisons.

In a recently disclosed report, Nathan's staff said brutality by prison guards is unchecked. The board statement calls for swift and sure remedies, if the reports are true.

"The Board of Corrections realizes that the use of some force in a penal institution is necessary. However, the board will not tolerate the utilization of force for punishment," the statement said.

TDC staff members were directed to cooperate with Nathan's office in the investigation of brutality reports.

"The board thereby directs its personnel to refamiliarize themselves with the standards for use of force and standards for chemical agents previously adopted by the administration of the Department of Corrections. The board expects its personnel to comply with these standards in their entirety."

Trial to be held in Texas

LIPSCOMB (AP) — The murder trial of Michael Anderson, who allegedly was ordered to kill a member of a Panhandle drug syndicate, has been moved to this town of 190 where jury selection is scheduled to begin Monday.

Anderson, 26, is charged with the shooting death of Robert Eugene Hall, 28, of Sayre, Okla., who died from four .45 caliber shots to the back of the head.

Wheeler County deputies found Halls body buried in a shallow grave behind Anderson's isolated home near Kelton, about 35 miles east of Pampa, March 2.

An autopsy showed the victim had been dead about a week. Anderson surrendered to police in Lake Charles, La., the next day.

Authorities in Oklahoma and Texas had battled for jurisdiction, each wanting to prosecute Anderson for the murder which occurred near the state line. The dispute was resolved April 19, when Gov. Mark White refused to extradite Anderson.

County declared disaster area

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The Agriculture Department declared drought-stricken Glasscock County a disaster area Friday, making farmers there eligible for federal aid.

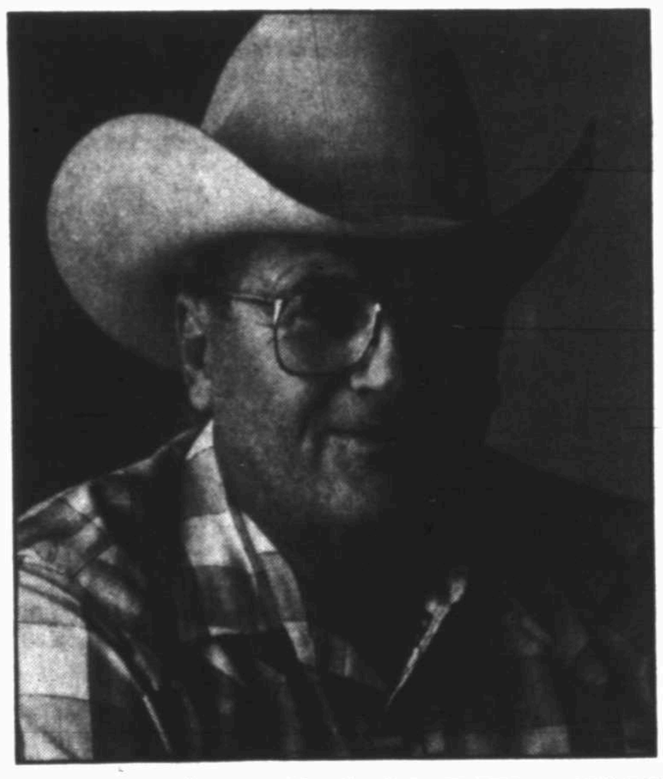

Up to $500,000 in low-interest federal loans now are available to each farmer to help them recover from the worst U.S. drought in 50 years.

The interest rate on the loans is 5 percent for the first $100,000 and 8 percent in excess of that.

The rates apply only to farmers who cannot obtain credit through normal commercial sources. Those who can get credit elsewhere are still eligible for federal aid, but at a 13.75 percent interest rate.

In addition to Glasscock, two other west Texas counties -- Irion and Crockett -- were declared disaster areas Friday, said a spokesman for Rep. Tom Loeffler, R-Hunt.

They join 23 other drought-scorched counties in the state, including Midland and Ector counties.

"WITH RATES LIKE THESE, YOU BETTER GET 'EM WHILE THE GETTIN'S GOOD."

Lonesome-looking town has colorful past

AP Laserphoto

Women walk along the beach at the mouth of the Rio Grande separating Texas and Mexico. A lighthouse sits on the former location of Bagdad, Mexico, that once had thousands of residents.

BOCA CHICA, Texas (AP) — Desolation creeps in like a slow-moving fog on Texas 4 out of Brownsville. You're heading for the southernmost tip of Texas, a wilderness of sand and sea where the Rio Grande slips into the Gulf of Mexico.

Brownsville's bustling Boca Chica Boulevard — the last thoroughfare of civilization on the way to nowhere — guides you past a mishmash of fast-food restaurants, gas stations, used car lots, grocery stores, billboards.

Traffic thins as the boulevard becomes Texas 4 out past the airport turnoff. Mobile home parks and hole-in-the-wall groceries and tortilla factory appear, then disappear, giving way to lush green fields, yellow sunflowers, palm and spruce trees.

Those, too, fade away as the rich soil dissolves into a barren flatland of sand, sage, mesquite and cacti.

THE STEEL spiderweb legs of an oil platform climb toward the clouds at the Port of Brownsville more than a mile away.

In the distant haze, silhouettes of South Padre Island's luxurious resort hotels and condominiums beckon travelers to a world of sophistication, conspicuous affluence and running water.

But this road goes to Boca Chica — "little mouth" in English — a vast emptiness isolated from Brownsville by 20 miles of lonesome highway and cut off from the rest of civilization by the Rio Grande, the Brownsville Ship Channel and the gulf.

A highway sign warns motorists to "Drive Carefully When Dust is Blowing."

BOCA CHICA HAD its heyday more than a century ago during the war between the United States and Mexico and the Civil War. But few reminders linger of the historic battles, the great steamships and schooners that once anchored in the gulf near here or of the vanished settlements of Clarksville, Texas, and Bagdad, Mexico, that claimed more than 15,000 residents between them.

A lone lighthouse sits overlooking the gulf on Bagdad's former location. Clarksville has been lost completely to time, storms and sand.

The state historic marker commemorating the Civil War Battle of Palmito Hill — the last skirmish fought weeks after the war had ended — has a bullethole through it.

Another marker points out the barely visible palmetto and cypress pilings that once supported a railroad and a floating bridge built to transport military supplies down south.

ISOLATION, hurricanes and lack of fresh running water have stymied attempts to settle the area, although a developer's sign points to "Executive Home Sites" on the Rio Grande and a Brownsville real estate firm is taking reservations on beachfront properties that will sell for thousands of dollars less than similar sites on South Padre Island.

Despite the desolation, a last-stop gas station and a lonely looking collection of one-story brick homes have survived.

The weatherbeaten shell of a restaurant and crumbling brick pillars sit at the entrance to Kopernik Shores, settled in the 1950s and 1960s by Polish families from Detroit and Chicago.

Anastazja Pinczuk, who retains a thick Polish accent, says developer John Caputa of Chicago "made a big party" and convinced her and others to buy land in secluded South Texas.

BUT AFTER 13 years of living here, Mrs. Pinczuk says she wants out.

"It's so dusty over here, like Africa," she said.

Lawyer wants delay in trial of nurse

GEORGETOWN, Texas (AP) — A judge has been asked again to delay the Oct. 17 trial of a nurse accused of murdering a 15-month-old patient at a Kerrville clinic.

Jim Brookshire of Georgetown, who is defending the nurse, Genene Jones, said he filed the request Friday because he wants to get copies of a test that was performed on the exhumed body of Kerrville infant Chelsea McLellan.

Residents await study on hole

BOLING, Texas (AP) — Texas Highway Department officials say they hope a geological study will tell them whether to repair or abandon a section of rural road destroyed two months ago by a sinkhole which gobbled two pickup trucks.

Land along the section of Farm-to-Market road 442 has become worthless since the hole, 150 feet wide, 300 feet long and 23 feet deep, opened shortly after midnight Aug. 12.

Two pickup drivers buried their vehicles in the hole's muddy water shortly after it opened about 60 miles southwest of Houston, sheriff's officers said, but no one was seriously injured.

Clyde Schulz, Texas Highway Department engineer in Wharton County, said the sinkhole does not appear to be growing. He said an Austin-based engineering and environmental consultant is due to return results of a study Nov. 1.

Schulz said a decision will be based on that information.

"We would like to build (the road) as close as possible to the original one, but until the survey comes in, we don't know if that is safe or feasible," he said.

Schulz said about 2,000 cars a day used the road before the sinkhole opened.

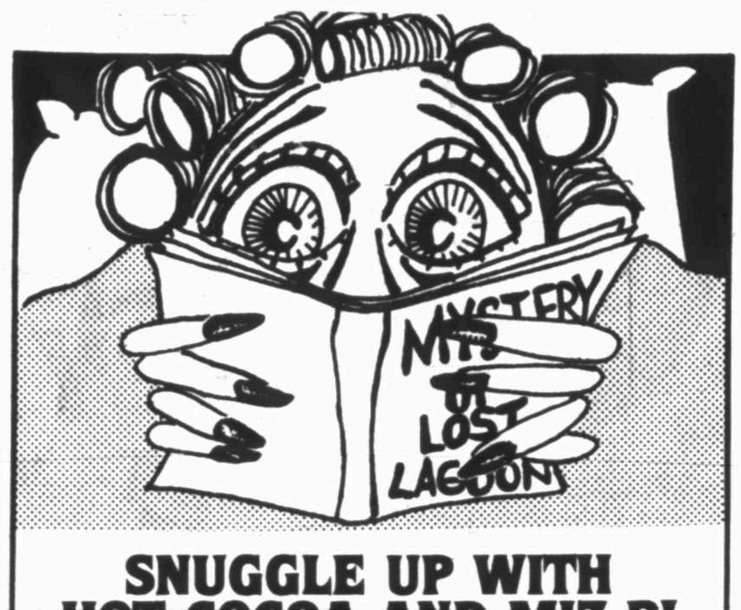

Boling was built above the world's largest known salt dome, the Boling Dome, said Clinton White, a spokesman for Texasgulf Inc., which mines sulphur in the area. Sulphur is mined by melting the substance with hot water, then pumping it to the surface. The process can leave a deep cavity.

Real estate around the hole no longer has any value.

Betty Brod, whose house borders the sinkhold, said her family has been ruined and is awaiting the results of the survey to decide whether or not to abandon its home.

"We really don't know what to do," she told the Bay City Tribune Friday. "The land is totally worthless now because of this and the insurance companies won't pay a cent. We've worked 31 years on these 33 acres and now they're worthless."

Mrs. Brod said she has already packed many of the household possessions.

The ruins of soldiers' barracks at Fort Lancaster, near Sheffield, Texas, are all that is left now of one of the sites where camels were brought to train as pack animals for the U.S. Army. The Army experiment lasted from 1855 until the Civil War, but some think camels may still be alive in California from the beast's descendants.

Camels' descendants may be in California

FORT LANCASTER, Texas (AP) — It has been more than a century since the U.S. Army gave up on an experiment to use camels as pack animals, but Tom Pulliam believes descendants of the imported camels still may be living in California's desert.

"It'd be a long time for camels to survive and not be seen by anyone, but it's possible. I've heard stranger things," said Pulliam, park superintendant at Fort Lancaster, a West Texas military post where camels once were kept.

Texans were so outraged when the camels were brought from the Mideast in the 1850s that the dromedaries sometimes were shot on the spot. Others thought the creatures were so unpersonable — camels often spit at strangers — that ranchers believed the humped animals were evil.

Using camels as pack animals was the brainchild of Maj. George H. Crossman, who felt the animals were invaluable because water was scarce in the Southwest and forts were few and far between on the overland trail between San Antonio and Fort Tejon, Calif.

Historian Eva Jolene Boyd described the newly arrived camels as "ships of the desert." When U.S. Secretary of War Jefferson Davis warmed to the idea of using camels in the West, 33 camels and several Arab handlers landed in 1856 at Powderhorn — near Victoria on the Gulf Coast.

The camels spent four weeks getting acclimated to Texas summers, then were marched to Camp Verde, 40 miles northwest of San Antonio. North African khans, or camel corrals, were set up. Apparently the camels were so intriguing, two immediately were stolen, Ms. Boyd said.

When 41 more camels arrived in 1857, impressions of the foreign animals were something else, one witness wrote. (Camel-like creatures lived in Texas about 50 million years ago, but died out 12,000 years ago, archaelogists say.)

"The first intimation we had ... was the jingling of large bells suspended from the necks (of) these huge ungainly beasts of the desert," wrote May Stacey, who kept a journal of the camel's arrival in Texas.

A camel caravan was driven north to Fort Bliss at El Paso, Albuquerque, N.M., and west to California. The camels were wonderful, wrote Maj. Edward Beale. Camels are "infinitely more workable than mules," carry heavier loads and eat desert shrubs along the way, he said.

"My admiration for the camel increases daily ... they pack water for others for days under a hot sun and never get a drop. They pack heavy burdens of corn and oats for months and never get a grain."

A third shipment of camels arrived near Houston, where an Englishwoman housed them. Aide F.W. Lubbock swam the camels daily in Galveston Bay and regularly rode them to Houston, where he said they were "a constant curiosity as they swayed down Main Street."

By 1859, Secretary of War John Floyd had replaced Davis — he headed the Confederate nation — and recommended the Texas Military Department use camels between the Pecos River and the Rio Grande.

Camels soon operated overland between San Antonio and El Paso. But in 1861, when the Civil War broke out and Confederates took over 18 abandoned Texas forts, Union troops evacuated to San Antonio. Most of the camels then were allowed to wander from the camps into the hills.

After the Civil War, the federal government never resumed the camel experiment. The reason, Pulliam hypothesized, was because Davis, unpopular for leading the Confederates, supported the camel experiment.

By 1866, the remaining Army camels were auctioned off. Austin attorney Bethel Coopwood purchased several, selling some to circuses and to handlers carrying freight between Laredo and Mexico City.

Texas wins Red River showdown, 28-10

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

DALLAS— Edwin Simmons appeared to be sprouting chin whiskers and looked like the kind of horned critter who might like a tin can or two for dessert following his fumble to set up Oklahoma's touchdown in the first period.

Quarterback Danny Bradley capped the 49-yard drive with an eight-yard touchdown pass to wingback Steve Sewell to give the Sooners an early 7-0 lead and for Texas fans, it was almost like 1982 all over again.

But it was Simmons' 67-yard run late in the third quarter that gave Texas a 28-10 lead and effectively terminated the annual Red River hostilities. Texas, still undefeated at 4-0, wound up a 28-16 winner and the 6-4, 226-pound freshman from Hawkins, wound up the center of media attention after the game.

"Coach just told me to shake it off," Simmons said of the first period fumble. When asked what he thought after committing the costly bobble, Simmons replied, "I thought I wouldn't get to play anymore."

After Texas tied it in the second period on an eight yard run by Simmons, the Sooners, now two-time losers, capitalized on a Longhorn fumble on the first series of the second half for a 28-yard field goal by Tim Lasher for a 10-7 lead.

AFTER THAT, it was a long half for OU. Texas retaliated with an 80-yard drive to send Ronnie Robinson across from the two-yard line, a drive on which Rob Moerschel's 16-yard pass to wide receiver Brent Duhon for 16 yards was the only pass in 11 plays.

Then things quickly got out of hand. Boomed back to the Oklahoma 14 n the kickoff, the Sooners' Bradley tried to pass his way out of trouble but was intercepted by Mossy Cade who returned 10 yards to the OU 20. Six plays later, fullback Ervin Davis crashed in from the two with 2:52 left in the third period.

Twenty-five seconds remained in the quarter when Simmons broke up the middle for the 67-yarder that erased the last vistage of suspense. Although only a freshman, Simmons showed Heisman Trophy potential with his post-game statements.

"The play was 75 Base. The entire line just opened it up and I went through. The defense and offensive line deserve all the attention. If it weren't for them we wouldn't have won and I wouldn't have scored."

What's more amazing is that Simmons was playing with extra large pads to protect a hip pointer suffered in last week's Rice game.

As for his first dip in the Red River rivalry, Simmons was not disappointed. "OU-Texas was everything they said it would be. They said Oklahoma would hit and they did."

SIMMONS SHOWED plenty of respect for the Sooners and so did Moerschell. Rob noted, "They got to our defense by taking advantage of our offensive mistakes in the first half. In the second half, we did a better job of opening holes but you couldn't say we controled the line of scrimmage or dominated Oklahoma. At halftime, even though it was tied at 7-7, we thought we could move the ball, but we knew we had to take the pressure off our defense by cutting down the mistakes."

The pass that set up the first touchdown was thrown to Mike Luck and labeled aptly "Luck 70" and it was an audible.

"When the backs came in tight, it was what we expected Oklahoma to do," said Moerschell. On third down and short yardage, they have a tendency to stack the line. On third and short we have a tendency to run, so when the backs came up tight, we went with the pass. I though Luck might get deep before they could recover. The free safety saw him, but couldn't recover in time."

Moerschell completed only four of 10 passes but they accounted for 95 yards. Texas rolled up 240 yards rushing, led by Simmons' 100 yards while the Sooners gained just 158 on the ground and only 39 in the air. And to add insult to injury, quarterback Bradley, with 63 yards, outgained one-time Heisman Trophy candidate Marcus Dupree, who gained 50 yards on 14 carries.

Oklahoma's last hope for victory came when the Sooners recovered a fumble on the first play after the second half kickoff at the Texas 18. They moved seven yards in four plays before Lasher kicked his field goal when the drive stalled at the Texas 11.

Texas stormed back with its 80-yard drive as Robinson proved the work horse of the march, carrying six times out of 10 running plays and finally slanting over the right side from the two for the score.

The pass picked off by Cade was thrown from the Oklahoma 17 and was intended for Buster Rhymes. The Sooners drove the 20 yards in six plays with Terry Orr, of Abilene Cooper, carrying three times for 11 of the yards. Simmons' long touchdown burst wrapped up a 72-yard drive for Texas.

Oklahoma scored a consolation touchdown in the fourth quarter, driving 83 yards in six plays to score with 1:45 left on the clock. Bradley rolled left for 36 yards and the touchdown.

Lobos use seven Tech turnovers to good advantage

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

LUBBOCK— Anyone who can count to seven can figure out how the University of New Mexico Lobos pulled off a stunning 30-10 victory over Texas Tech at a very dreary Jones Stadium Saturday night.

Seven is the number of turnovers the Red Raiders gift-wrapped and handed the Lobos — five fumbles and two interceptions. If the math is right, that should add up to seven, however in this age of new math, it adds up to 20 because that's how many points the Lobos turned in out of the seven Raider miscues.

To say the least, it was an embarrassing loss for Texas Tech, who entered the night atop the Southwest Conference with a perfect 2-0 record. This wasn't an SWC outing, but the final result did little to add luster to the Conference image or that of Tech.

Still, Tech's defensive tackle Brad White of Tahoka found that fact comforting, "We're still unbeaten in conference. We have to bounce back from this and get after Rice next week. We've been able to bounce back from losses before and we'll do it again."

Going into the game, Tech had beaten New Mexico 23 times in 28 outings, but now Tech is 0-2 against the Lobos in the last two years, losing 14-0 last year.

Tech's mistakes mounted early and the Raiders were simply never in this one as a dismayed and disbelieving crowd of 36,543 watched in horror at what they were seeing. Parents were covering the eyes of kids. It was too early for a Halloween spook show.

The Lobo Christmas started early in the first quarter when David Branch recovered an errant pitchout by quarterback Jim Hart at the Raider nine. Lobo quarterback Buddy Funck, who completed 9 of 11 passes for 132 yards, hit Derwin Williams for a 7-0 lead with 9:00 left in the first period.

Tech fumbled at its' own 10 the next time they touched the ball and Richard Mellow's recovery set up a 19-yard field goal by Joe Bibbo, his first of three on the night, for a 10-0 lead.

A third Tech fumble in the first period at the 32 produced no Lobo points and Ricky Gann kept the Raiders in the game with a 37-yard field goal.

But the second quarter started no better for the bumbling Raiders as New Mexico's Steve Sauter recovered a Tech fumble at the Raider 41. The Funck-to-Williams show worked again for 37 yards and Willie Tural gave the Lobos a halftime margin of 17-3.

"I don't know about the fumbles. We had the same guys running, the same guy handing off as we've had the last three games. It was just something that hit us. It was a bad night," said Texas Tech coach Jerry Moore.

The Lobos earned a 20-3 margin on a 51-yard field goal by Bibbo and he cashed in again with a 28-yard boot after Wes Henson recovered fumble number five at the Tech 29. It was gettong awful by this time as the Lobos led 23-3 with still another quarter to play.

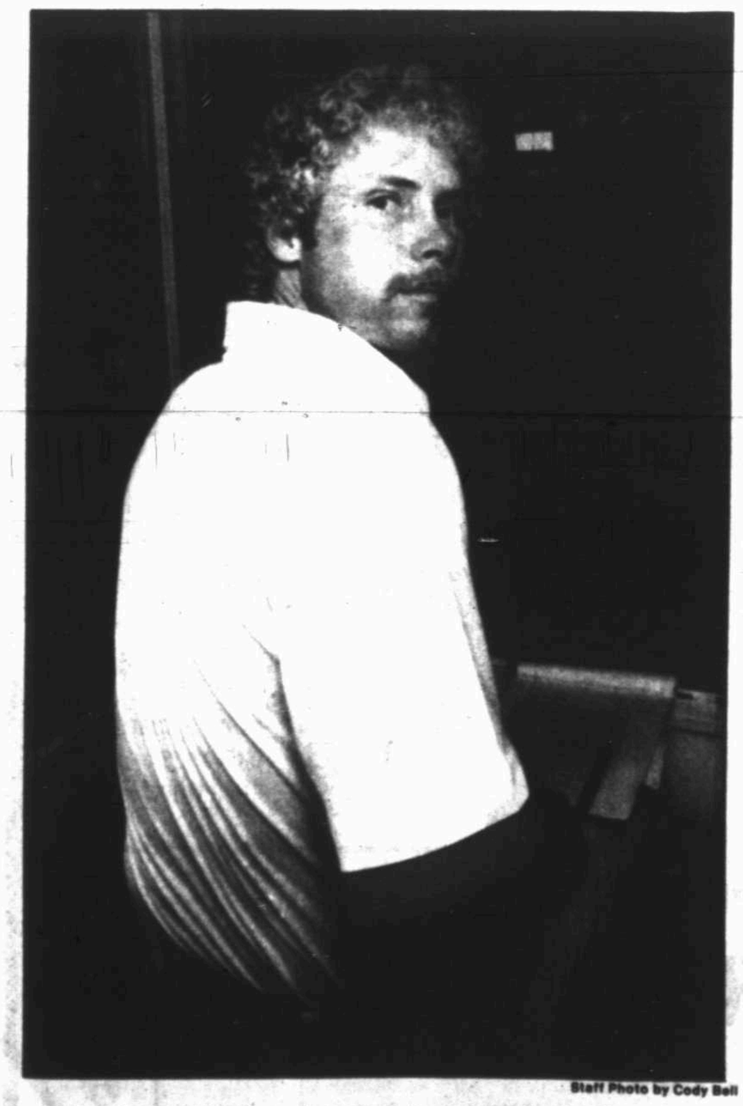

"Everybody's down right now. The effort was there. We wanted to win the game. We just couldn't hold on to the ball," said Tech's Hart.

The Raiders finally broke the string of seven consecutive quarters without a touchdown as Hart directed an 80-yard, 21-play drive to cut the margin to 23-10, hitting Buzz Tatom from six yards out. But even in a lone moment of glory, Tatom made the catch after the ball bounced out of the arms of Lobo defender Darren Jenkins.

If Tech had comeback hopes, the Lobos squashed them with a 63-yard march on eight plays to stash away the impressive upset. Funck's three yard run ended the drive.

Hard work means promotion for Wood

Rick Wood has a press box view during MHS varsity games

Sports Special

By Bob Brundage

(Editor's Note: This is the final part of a three-part series on junior high coaching)

Midland High junior varsity coach Rick Wood came to the Midland junior high system from Lubbock four years ago because of the opportunites for advancement.

"In Lubbock I went from eighth grade coach to ninth grade and the high school coaches never once came over to watch us though we were only a half mile apart," said Wood. "The coaches didn't know who we were. The athletic director didn't know. The atmosphere here is completely different.

"When I came here Pat (Culpepper, MHS head coach) and Gil (Bartosh, director of athletics) said if I worked hard I'd be able to move up. They like to hire within the system and they've been true to their word."

Wood's time in the Midland junior high system was quickly rewarded.

"I was at San Jacinto for one year and then at Midland Freshman for a year," he said. "This will be my second year at the high school level.

"I enjoyed working with the junior high age kids. They're eager, just a good group of kids to work with. Working with the varsity you have the same enthusiasm but the skill level is so much different. On the varsity level the kids do more what you say than on the junior high level because they understand more about the ball game.

"Learning comes from their previous football experience, but the intensity at the high school level is so much more because the emphasis is on winning. I like that atmosphere."

Something Wood prefers about high school coaching is "the difference in the skill level," he said. "You can ask a player to do something different. A player might try it in junior high but the skill might not be there. That, along with the dedication of the players themselves. At the junior high level, kids are just starting to grow and feel their oats. At high school they will dedicate themselves to football for three or four months of the year."

When Wood was at San Jacinto, the coaches would be divided up into units, "offensive linemen, defensive linemen," said Wood. "It was individualized but not like it is in high school where I coach defensive ends and that's my responsibility. During the season I may help out in other areas but I don't actively coach any other position."

A&M romps to easy 30-7 win over Houston

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Freshman quarterback Kevin Murray tossed three touchdown passes, and Texas A&M's defense stopped Houston for no-gain three times on fourth-and-one as A&M defeated the Cougars 30-7 Saturday in a Southwest Conference football game.

Alan Smith booming kickoffs and Kyle Stuard's punts gave Houston terrible field position, and three fumbles inside the A&M 20-yard line kept Houston out of the A&M end zone except for one long scoring play.

That play was an 82-yard pass and run from freshman quarterback Gerald Landry to flanker Jeffrey Fields with 3:30 left to go in the second quarter.

A&M tied the game 7-7 with 4:45 left in the third quarter on Murray's 8-yard scoring toss to halfback Rod Bernstine.

After A&M had stopped Houston on fourth-and-one at the A&M 29, the Aggies scored in four plays with Murray drilling a 30-yard pass to Jimmie Williams on the last play of the third quarter.

A 12-yard Murray pass to freshman Shea Walker in the fourth quarter gave A&M its third touchdown.

Linebacker Jeff Paine tackled Landry in the end zone with 4:04 remaining to give the Aggies a safety.

Frogs pick up first SWC victory, beat Rice 34-3

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas Christian quarterback Anthony Sciaraffa ran for two touchdowns and passed for another Saturday to help the Frogs defeat Rice 34-3 and give first year coach Jim Wacker his first Southwest Conference football victory.

The victory improved TCU's record to 1-3-1 and ended an eight-game non-winning string for the Horned Frogs. Rice lost for the 16th time in 17 games and is 1-5 for the year.

Sciaraffa ran one and 20 yards in the first quarter and hit Greg Arterberry with a 24-yard touchdown pass in the third period to pace the Frogs to their first league victory.

The Owls played generous hosts allowing the Frogs two quick scored en route to a 17-3 halftime lead on Sciaraffa's runs of one and 20 yards in the first quarter and a 28-yard field goal by Ken Ozee as time ran out in the first half.

Rice punter Dale Walters squibbed his first punt of the game for only 20 yards giving TCU a first down at the Rice 49. On the first play, Sciaraffa hit James Maness with a 47-yard pass to the Rice two and two plays later Sciaraffa rolled into the end zone.

TCU scored again in the first quarter with Sciaraffa going 20 yards aftehitting halfback Blandord Paul with an 18-yard pass.

Sciaraffa struck quickly again in the third quarter, hitting Arterberry for a touchdown to end a five-play 40-yard drive after Rice quarterback Phillip Money fumbled and TCU's Kyle Clifton recovered.

The Frogs put on a late scoring surge with a 20-yard field goal by Ozee and a 2-yard dive by Egypt Allen following a 46-yard interception return by TCU7s Byron Linwood.

Rice now is 0-3 in SWC games and the Frogs are 1-2.

SCIARAFFA FINISHED with eight completions on 17 attempts for 198 yards. He threw an interception to Rice's Brian Patterson in the fourth quarter, but the Owls were unable to capitalize on the miscue.

Kenneth Davis led TCU rushers with 75 yards on 20 carries and Rice's Antonio Brinkley received his first extensive playing time of the year, rushed 64 yards on 12 carries.

Sciaraffa burned Rice cornerback Alvin Rettig to set up the Frogs' first touchdown. Maness circled the left cornerback and Rettig fell down just as the ball arrived.

Rice didn't get a first down until late in the first quarter when the Owls drove to the Frog 3-yard line. The drive ended early in the second quarter, however, when tight end Eric Barkett dropped a pass in the end zone on fourth down.

Rice's only first-half points came off Hamrick's 30-yard field goal with 1:13 left in the half.

Rice got the ball at its own 42 after TCU attempted a fake punt that was fumbled by David Davis and recovered by Troy Cates. The drive bogged down at the Frog 13 before Hamrick's field goal.

McIlhenny has field day against Bears; Ponies win 42-26

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Lance McIlhenny threw four touchdown passes — three of them to Marquis Pleasant — and ran for a fifth and 13-ranked Southern Methodist's defense stopped Baylor's rushing game cold as the Mustangs defeated the Bears 42-26 Saturday night in a Southwest Conference shootout.

McIlhenny's scoring tosses of 15, 62, 6 and 5 yards moved him ahead of Don Meredith to third on the all-time SMU touchdown passing list.

The Mustangs, anchored by the tailback tandum of freshman Jeff Atkins and sophomore Reggie Dupard, extended the nation's longest major college unbeaten streak to 21 games and kept pace atop the SWC standings.

Both Atkins and Dupard ran for more than 100 yards for the second straight game.

SMU took the ball 46 yards on its first possession, with McIlhenny capping an 11-play drive with his 4-yard touchdown run — his first rushing of the season.

Baylor's Bruce Davis responded by returning Jeff Harrell's kickoff 99 yards for a touchdown and a school record for Baylor.

After safety Russell Carter intercepted a pass from Baylor's Cody Carlson and returned it to the SMU 21, McIlhenny capped an eight-play scoring march with a 15-yard TD pass to Pleasant.

Baylor tied the score at 14 after Davis caught a 53-yard touchdown strike from Carlson.

McIlhenny threw 62 yards to Pleasant for a 21-14 Mustang advantage at the half. A 34-yard gain by Atkins to the Bear's six set up McIlhenny's third touchdown toss to Pleasant.

Atkins finished an 89-yard drive with a 14-yard scamper into the end zone for SMU's fifth touchdown. Less than two minutes later, in the fourth quarter, McIlhenny passed five yards to tight end Ricky Bolden for the Mustang's final TD.

With 4:31 left in the game, Carlson passed 10 yards to split end Gerald McNeil for one Baylor touchdown and with 12 seconds left Carlson threw 12 yards to McNeil again for Baylor's final score.

Baylor fell to 3-2 on the season and 1-2 in the SWC, while SMU moved to 5-0 and 2-0 in the conference.

BAYLOR, WHICH entered the game first in the conference in total offense with 413 yards per game, mustered only 90 first-half offensive yards — and minus one yard rushing.

SMU's defense sacked Baylor quarterbacks three consecutive times to stop the Bears only sustained drive of the first half.

Carlson's first touchdown pass to McNeil capped a 66-yard Baylor drive and his second to the split end, who moved to fifth on the all-time SWC receiving list, finished a 99-yard, nine-play march. The two late scores were the reward for Baylor's only sustained drives of the second half.

Baylor middle linebacker Kevin Hancock was credited with 18 tackles and two sacks.

McIlhenny's four touchdown passes tied him with several other SMU quarterbacks for most scoring passes in a game.

Abilene Christian rallies to beat Texas A&I, 38-24

KINGSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Loyal Proffitt tossed three touchdown passes, including two in a 21-point last quarter rally, to guide Abilene Christian to a 38-24 win over Texas A&I Saturday in a regionally televised Lone Star Conference football game.

Proffitt started the rally with a three-yard scoring pass to Dale Fife, then threw a 34-yard touchdown pass to Lembia Kinsler, who later closed out the 21-point surge with a 22-yard touchdown gallop.

The victory in the LSC opener for both schools raised Abilene Christian's record to 4-0 and dropped Texas A&I to 0-5 for the season.

Bishop rallies to victory

PRAIRIE VIEW, Texas (AP) — David Parker threw four touchdown passes, including three in the final 17 minutes, to rally Bishop College to a 32-20 victory over Prairie View Saturday afternoon.

Parker, who hit 15 of 34 for 263 yards, hit Tommy Jones for 11 yards in the first half, then returned with scoring tosses of 38 and 75 yards to Kenneth Holland and 29 yards to Calvin Witherspoon.

Prairie View, 0-6, lost its 11th straight game dating back to last season.

Darryl Terral, making his first start at quarterback, completed a 57-yard touchdown pass to Dwight White for Prairie View. The Panthers also scored on Calvin Farria's 33-yard run and Reggie McNary's field goals of 22 and 41 yards. Terral completed 8 of 23 passes for 99 yards and rushed for 96 yards on 18 carries.

Texas Schools

Trinity gets first win

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Steve Dunks booted a 32-yard field goal with just over two minutes to play to lift Trinity University to a 10-7 college football victory over Colorado College.

The San Antonio, Texas, team had trailed throughout the entire first half after Tom Southall ran back the opening kickoff 88 yards for a TD for Colorado College.

Trinity mounted a threat in the second period, but it ended with a fumble on the Colorado College 3.

In the third period, Trinity tied the game 7-7 on Greg Caffey's 1-yard run, setting the stage for Dunks' game-winning field goal in the final period.

The victory improved Trinity's record to 1-3, while Colorado College fell to 1-4.

Indians skunk Lamar

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Tailback Bobby Craighead scored touchdowns on a 69-yard pass play and a 1-yard run to lead Northeast Louisiana to a 17-0 victory over Lamar University in a Southland Conference game.

Craighead ran for 79 yards on 19 carries. He hauled in the long pass from Indian quarterback Rodney Horn in the second quarter and scored his other TD midway through the final period.

Northeastern, the No. 9-ranked Division I-AA team in the NCAA's poll, improved its record to 3-0 in conference and 4-1 overall. Lamar fell to 1-1 and 2-4.

Lamar had only two serious scoring threats. A Cardinal first-quarter drive ended when cornerback David Outley intercepted a Ray Campbell pass in the Indians' end zone. The other Lamar opportunity was stopped on downs at the Indians 12 late in the first quarter.

N. Texas blanks ASU

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Walk-on kicker Todd Smith booted a 43-yard field goal and the Lester Harper-led defense did the rest as North Texas State opened Southland Conference play with a 17-0 victory over Arkansas State.

Smith, a freshman who had tried only one field goal this year, connected with 13:45 left in the second quarter. The Eagles made it 10-0 when Greg Carter threw 6 yards to Tim Wasson on a fade route midway through the second period.

Harper, a senior linebacker, was in on 17 tackles, including 11 unassisted.

ASU, now 0-2 in the SLC and loser of four straight, controlled the ball almost the entire third quarter but came up empty-handed. The Indians ran 12 plays but wound up punting from the North Texas 40 the first time they had the ball in the third quarter. They ran another dozen plays on their next possession, and, after two procedure penalties Scott McDonald was right and short on a 52-yard field goal.

During the third quarter, the Eagles ran six offensive plays.

North Texas is 4-2 - their only two losses were to Texas and Oklahoma

SFA beats Angelo

NACOGDOCHES, Texas (AP) — Quarterback Tod Weder scored from four yards out with 2:40 to play to lift Stephen F. Austin to a 14-10 victory over Angelo State Saturday night in a Lone Star Conference game.

Angelo State went ahead 10-0 in the third quarter on Eddie O'Brien's 1-yard run and Mike Thomas' 41-yard field goal. But SFA fullback Doug Jefferson capped a 69-yard drive with a 15-yard TD run early in the fourth quarter, and Weder's scoring plunge was the game winner.

SFA improved to 3-2 overall and 1-0 in LSC play. Angelo State fell to 2-3 and 0-1.

SWT keeps streak alive

SAN MARCOS, Texas (AP) — Neal Neunhoffer kicked a 27-yard field goal with 30 seconds remaining to give Southwest Texas State, ranked No. 1 nationally in NCAA Division II, a 16-14 victory over Northwestern Louisiana in a non-conference football game.

Neunhoffer's kick, which atoned for a missed extra point and an errant 31-yard field goal try earlier, helped SWT extend the nation's longest collegiate winning streak to 21 games.

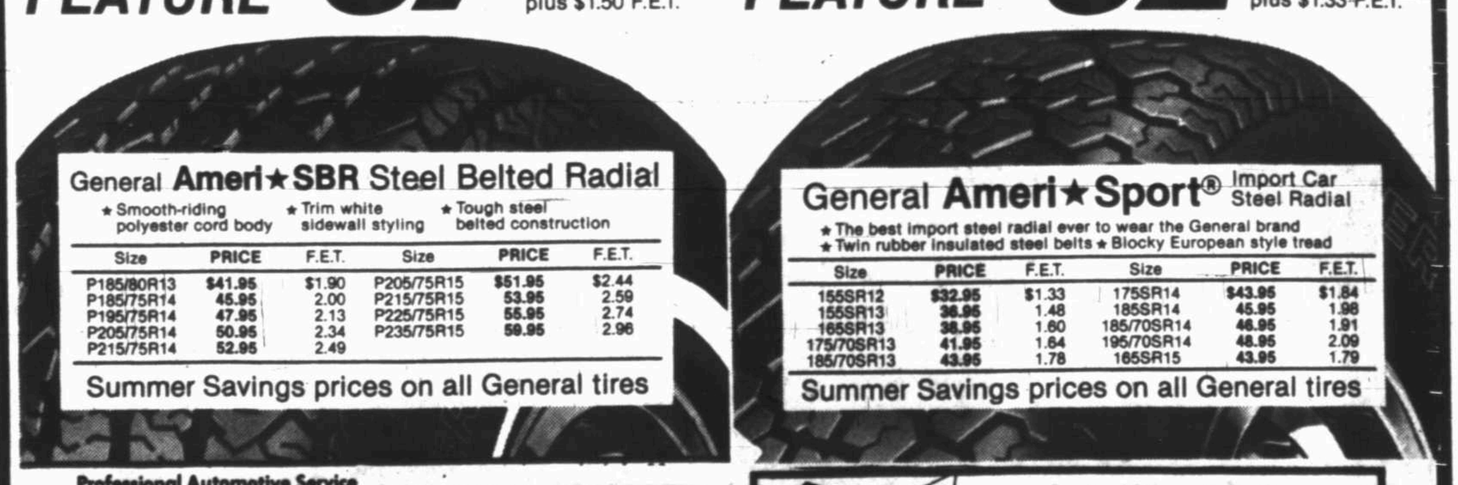

Northwest Lousiana scored first on a 24-yard pass from Wayne Van to tight end Mark Johnson with 2½ minutes into the game. SWT tied the game on an 8-yard pass from Rene Maldonado to Vaughn Deary in the waning seconds of the first quarter.

Birds take American League pennant with 3-0 win

Baltimore catcher Rick Dempsey (left) and winning pitcher Tippy Martinez do a victory dance after the Orioles beat the White Sox, 3-0, putting Baltimore in the World Series.

CHICAGO (AP) — The Baltimore Orioles have emerged from the shadow of Earl Weaver and into an era of Joe Altobelli.

Winners of five American League pennants under Weaver, who managed the club for 15 years, the Orioles won their first under Altobelli Saturday by beating the Chicago White Sox 3-0 in 10 innings.

The victory, engineered by the combined 10-hit pitching of Storm Davis and Tippy Martinez and sparked by Tito Landrum's 10th-inning homer, gave the Orioles a three-games-to-one victory in the best-of-five AL Championship Series.

"We are all heroes," Landrum said afterward. "We had to get to this game for me to do what I did today."

The Most Valuable Player award of the series went to rookie right-handed pitcher Mike Boddicker of Baltimore, who pitched a five-hitter and struck out 14 batters in the Orioles pivotal 4-0 victory in Game Two. That victory came on the heels of Chicago's opening-day 2-1 victory at Baltimore in which LaMarr Hoyt tossed a five-hitter.

"We just try to stick with what we do best," Boddicker said. "Most of our guys know the hitters pretty well, and those who don't go to the older guys, like (Jim) Palmer or (Scott) McGregor."

Pitching was perhaps the overriding reason the Orioles continued as the winningest team in baseball. They allowed the White Sox, who scored a league-leading 800 runs during the season, to score only three times in four games. After winning Game Two 4-0, they won Game Three 11-1, then shut out the White Sox again Saturday.

The Orioles now have played in more playoff games (26), won more games (18) and played in more series (7) than a/u7q (ry.

Landrum may have typified the Orioles' success in this series. There was Boddicker, the rookie; platoon player Gary Roenicke, who, in three playoff games, drove in four runs, had three hits, including a homer, and walked five times, and Eddie Murray, who had gone 0-for-29 in postseason games dating back to 1979 before hitting a three-run homer in the first inning of Game Three.

They were, in some ways, the least likely heroes.

And then, there was Landrum, who joined the Orioles from St. Louis on Aug. 31, the final day for eligibility in the playoffs, in a deal that sent third baseman Floyd Rayford to the Cardinals. Landrum began the season with the Cards, but he was at their AAA farm club in Louisville when he got the call.

He only started Games Two and Four because Dan Ford reinjured his right foot in Game One.

"I found out about the trade on the 28th (of August)," Landrum said. "We were in Indianapolis, so I packed my bags and joined the team in Toronto.

"It was definitely a blessing for me," he said. "I start the season with St. Louis, go down to Louisville, and here I am with the Baltimore Orioles."

And for Altobelli, the man who had to answer all the questions about succeeding Earl Weaver, this win was a relief.

"This was a big game, because if we had lost, we would have had to face a very tough pitcher (LaMarr Hoyt) tomorrow," Altobelli said. "Boy, am I glad we won this one."

White Sox Manager Tony LaRussa had no postmorten to make at the day's end.

"They outplayed us, and they deserved to win," he said. "We weren't quite good enough at the end."

The Orioles had squandered one scoring opportunity after another Saturday against White Sox left-hander Britt Burns, and they finally ended it on an unlikely note.

Burns, who had struck out eight and walked four, fanned John Shelby to start the 10th, and he had the count 1-0 when Landrum hit his fourth major league homer into the upper deck in left field against a howling wind. Landrum had hit one homer in 41 at-bats for the Orioles.

The homer chased Burns in favor of Salome Barojas, who yielded consecutive singles to Cal Ripken, Eddie Murray and Roenicke, the last driving in Baltimore's second run. The Orioles made it 3-0 on Benny Ayala's sacrifice fly.

The victor in this clinching game was Martinez, who pitched the final four innings.

The game was only the seventh in AL Championship Series history to go into extra innings, and Baltimore has been involved in five of them, winning four.

The only other game to go into extra innings in a scoreless tie was in 1969 when Baltimore beat Minnesota in 11 innings, 1-0.

Neither team was able to generate much offense on this cold Saturday, with 20 mph winds blowing in from left field and temperatures in the 50s.

The Chicago offense was further hampered by the absence of outfielder Ron Kittle who missed the game with a swollen left knee, the spot where he was hit by a Mike Flanagan pitch Friday night.

The White Sox got a runner as far as third with two out in the third inning, but they came up dry. With one out, Julio Cruz walked. He had stolen 57 bases during the regular season, and he stole another one Saturday. When Rudy Law, who had seven hits in the first three games of the series, hit a fly deep to right, Cruz advanced to third.

But he was stranded there when Storm Davis got Carlton Fisk to pop up to at first base.

The Orioles had two men aboard in the second inning, but they, too, came up empty.

Murray led off the inning with a single off Burns, who then walked Roenicke on four pitches.

He struck out Ken Singleton, Rich Dauer lined to left and Todd Cruz grounded into a forceout.

Julio Cruz singled and stole his second base — tying an American League playoff record held by many — in the fifth inning. His hit came with two out, though, and after he stole second, Law popped to short center. Shelby, a rookie outfielder, nearly misjudged the ball as it drifted closer to the infield in the wind, but he got there in time to keep the game scoreless.

Through five innings, the Orioles and White Sox had stranded four runners each, and each pitcher had given up only three hits.

The Orioles again had the first two men aboard in the sixth inning, but Burns was equal to the challenge.

Gary Matthews and Sixto Lezcano congratulate each other en route to a pennant-clinching 7-2 win over Los Angeles.

Phils eliminate Dodgers, 7-2 Series opens Tuesday night

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Hot-hitting Gary Matthews smashed a three-run home run and Sixto Lezcano added a two-run shot Saturday night, leading Philadelphia to a 7-2 victory over Los Angeles that clinched the National League pennant and sent the Phillies into the 1983 World Series.

Philadelphia, celebrating its centennial season of professional baseball with its fourth league title, opens the Series Tuesday night in Baltimore against the American League champion Orioles with 19-game winner John Denny likely to pitch for the Phillies against Scott McGregor.

Matthews, selected the Most Valuable Player in the four-game National League Championship Series, staked Steve Carlton to a quick lead when he drilled his third homer of the playoffs in the first inning against loser Jerry Reuss. It was his fifth straight hit, setting an NLCS record, and gave him eight runs batted in, tying a playoff record set by the Dodgers' Dusty Baker in 1977.

Carlton, the 300-game winner who combined with reliever Al Holland to shut out the Dodgers 1-0 in the first game of the series, was not nearly as sharp this time. But he had more margin for error, thanks to the three-run shot by Matthews. He worked six innings with Ron Reed and Holland finishing up.

Reuss, who has never won a playoff game in six decisions, retired the first two Philadelphia hitters before Mike Schmidt, whose homer beat him in the opener, singled. Lezcano followed with another single, bringing up Matthews.

The man the Phillies call "Sarge" took one ball, then crushed Reuss' next pitch, sending it high and deep into the cool, clear night. Left fielder Baker never moved, shaking his head as the ball smashed into the press level between the first and second decks at Veterans Stadium, soaring directly over the sign commemorating Philadelphia's 1980 world championship.

The fired-up crowd of 64,494 demanded a curtain call from Matthews, just as they had on Friday. And he obliged, again flashing a snappy salute to the fans.

Largely ignored in the team's dash to the East Division crown, Matthews came off the bench to flourish in the playoffs with six hits and four runs scored as the Phillies avenged NLCS losses to the Dodgers in 1977 and 1978. His home runs in three successive games tied the playoff record set by Hank Aaron in 1969, the year division play began.

The four-game elimination marked the first time in five playoff appearances since then that the Dodgers have lost a championship series.

To its credit, Los Angeles did not go quietly. Steve Sax opened the game with a single but just as he had in the first inning of the opener, Carlton picked him off. It was important because Pedro Guerrero drilled a two-out double. Carlton then walked Baker, preferring to pitch to young Mike Marshall. He struck the youngster out and the next time he went to the mound, he was leading 3-0, thanks to Matthews.

In the fourth, Baker ripped a home run leading off and Marshall followed with a double. When Steve Yeager was hit by a pitch, the Dodgers had Carlton in trouble. But with Ken Landreaux squaring to bunt, Marshall got careless at second base and catcher Bo Diaz picked him off. It was the lift Carlton needed.

15,000 O's fans greet AL champs

BALTIMORE (AP) — The American League champion Baltimore Orioles arrived at Baltimore-Washington International Airport late Saturday night to a tumultuous welcome by an estimated 15,000 fans, police said.

An enormous traffic jam developed outside the airport shortly before 10 p.m., the arrival time of the Orioles, leading state police to issue an alert asking people still headed to BWI to turn back.

The Orioles won the American League pennant by defeating the White Sox 3-0 on Saturday in Chicago. The World Series gets underway Tuesday in Baltimore.

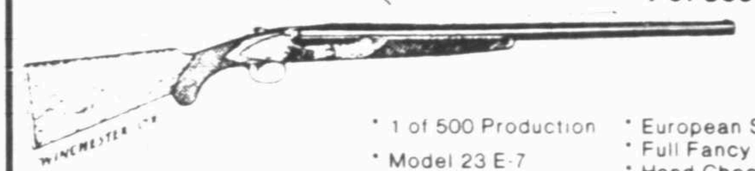

Fans awaiting the Orioles at a staging area at BWI began chanting, "Tito, Tito," in appreciation of the efforts of Tito Landrum.

Landrum, who was acquired by Baltimore Aug. 21 and was substituting for the injured Dan Ford, hit a 10th-inning home run to break a scoreless deadlock.

Oriole designated hitter Ken Singleton told the crowd, "You're the No. 1 fans in baseball. We're going to try to give you the No. 1 team."

Among those on hand to lead the cheers was the Orioles unofficial cheerleader, Wild Bill Hagy.

Alabama tailback Kerry Goode is stopped at Penn State's one yard line by defensive back Mike Zordich in the second period Saturday. Goode fumbled on the play but a teammate recovered. Alabama fumbled again on the next play and Penn State recovered.

Penn State shocks 'Bama

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Quarterback Doug Strang led a big-play offense by firing three touchdown passes as Penn State took advantage of six Alabama turnovers and held on to stun the third-ranked Crimson Tide 34-28.

Alabama, which rallied from a 34-7 deficit, took over after a blocked field goal on their own 49 with 2:56 left. They moved to the Penn State 2 with one second remaining, but the Penn State defense stopped Kerry Goode short of the goal line as the clock ran out.

Strang, a junior, hit on scoring tosses of 80, 38 and 16 yards and freshman D.J. Dozier rushed for 163 yards to become only the fifth Penn State runner — and the first freshman — to eclipse 100 yards in four straight games.

The opportunistic Nittany Lion defense intercepted three passes from quarterback Walter Lewis, and recovered three fumbles.

Penn State, holding a 17-7 halftime lead, scored on touchdown drives of 80 and 72 yards in the third quarter, and Nick Gancitano booted a 39-yard field goal to make it 34-7.

But Lewis led the Crimson Tide on fourth quarter drives of 87, 69 and 78 yards to cut the lead to six. Kerry Goode scored from the 1 to make it 34-14, and Lewis hit Jesse Bendross for a 24-yard score to make it 34-21 with 11:14 to play.

Then Lewis hit Bendross again, this time from 8 yards away, to make it 34-28 with 5:36 left in the game.

Pitt edges Seminoles

PITTSBURGH (AP) — John Congemi lofted a 20-yard scoring pass to freshman Chuck Scales on the first play of the fourth quarter as Pittsburgh, rallying from a 13-point deficit, edged Florida State 17-16.

The Panthers, ending a two-game losing streak, shut down Florida State in the second half after allowing the Seminoles to take a 13-0 lead on their first two possessions.

With Pitt trailing 13-10, Congemi drove the Panthers 55 yards for what proved to be the deciding touchdown, throwing 10 yards to Dwight Collins for a key first down before Scales ran for 13 yards to the Seminoles' 21.

Two plays later, Scales came out of the backfield to catch a Congemi pass and Eric Schubert added the extra point to give the Panthers a 17-13 lead with 14:55 remaining in the game.

The Seminoles, 2-3, threatened to retake the lead when Kelly Lowery hooked up with Jessie Hester on a 40-yard pass play for a first down at Pitt's 8-yard line.

But the Panthers' defense then stopped Greg Allen for no gain and two Lowery passes fell incomplete before Philip Hall kicked a 25-yard field goal with 8:34 remaining.

The Panthers never allowed Florida State to get the ball back, running off the remaining time with a drive from their own 12 to the Seminoles' 5 before time ran out.

Air Force sinks Navy

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Quarterback Marty Louthan ran for five touchdowns, leading Air Force to a 44-17 victory over Navy and evening the series between the two academies at eight victories each.

Navy, playing before a record home crowd of 34,257, held the lead briefly when halfback Napoleon McCallum broke loose for a 60-yard touchdown run on the first play of the second quarter to put the Middies ahead 10-7.

But the Cadets retaliated quickly, retaking the lead midway through the second half on a 1-yard plunge by Louthan. Halfback Mike Brown set up the score when he took a pitchout from Louthan and raced 74 yards to the Navy 2.

From that point, it was all Air Force. The Cadets added another touchdown and a field goal before the half and put the game out of reach with a quick score in the third quarter.

Indians edge Green

HANOVER, N.H. (AP) — Dave Scanlon's third touchdown of the fourth quarter, on a six-yard pass from Dave Murphy, capped a 21-point William & Mary rally and gave the Indians a 21-17 non-conference win over Dartmouth.

Scanlon's touchdown catch, with less than a minute remaining in the game, ended an 88-yard drive that started with 3:56 left on the clock.

Colgate falls, 21-18

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) — Reserve quarterback Tom Heffernan threw a 20-yard touchdown to Bill Cowley with less than 5 minutes remaining as undefeated Holy Cross rallied for a 21-18 victory over previously unbeaten Colgate in a football meeting of nationally ranked Division 1-AA powers.

Cowley also grabbed two scoring passes from starting quarterback Peter Muldoon as the Crusaders came back from an 18-point deficit for their fifth victory of the season.

Muldoon, who completed 13 of 19 passes for 226 yards, got Holy Cross rolling on a decisive 89-yard drive midway through the fourth period.

Harvard ties Cornell

ITHACA, N.Y. (AP) — Harvard placekicker Jim Villanueva hit a 44-yard field goal as time ran out to salvage a 3-3 tie with Cornell in Ivy League football.

Villanueva's field goal followed a nine-play, 53-yard Crimson drive which began with less than two minutes remaining in the game. Villanueva had apparently tied the game with three seconds to go, but his 39-yard field goal was nullified because of an illegal procedure penalty.

Pete Baccile's 49-yard field goal midway through the first quarter had stood up as the only scoring of the day until Villanueva's kick.

The tie leaves Cornell at 0-3-1 on the season, 0-1-1 in the Ivy League. Harvard is now 2-1-1, 1-0-1 in the Ivy League.

Penn, Brown even

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Dave Shulman kicked a 37-yard field goal with 4:22 left to play to lift Penn to a 24-24 tie with Brown in an Ivy League college football game.

Shulman's field goal followed a 60-yard Quaker drive that stalled at the Bruin 20.

Penn is 2-1-1 for the season and 2-0-1 in the league while Brown is 1-2-1 and 1-1-1 in the league.

Tigers rally past CU

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — Senior tailback Ralph Ferraro rushed for 230 yards, including a 52-yard touchdown run in the third quarter, as Princeton rallied from a 13-point halftime deficit in a 35-26 Ivy League victory over winless Columbia.

Sophomore quarterback Doug Butler threw two touchdown passes in the second half and scored on a 1-yard run in the third quarter as Princeton rallied from a 20-7 halftime deficit to boost its record to 3-1 overall and 2-1 in the Ivy League. Columbia fell to 0-4 and 0-3.

BC bombs Yale, 42-7

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Quarterback Doug Flutie passed for 325 yards and four touchdowns as Boston College crushed Yale, 42-7, and handed the Elis their fourth straight loss.

Yale has opened its season by losing its first four games.

Flutie threw all of his touchdown passes in the first half as BC took a 33-0 lead.

BC is now 5-1.

Bullets tear up Rockets, 120-105

By The Associated Press

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. — Jeff Ruland spoiled Ralph Sampson's National Basketball Association debut in his home state of Virginia as he led the Washington Bullets to a 120-105 victory Saturday night over the Houston Rockets in an exhibition game before a sellout crowd of 9,000.

Ruland used his size and experience to get Sampson into early foul trouble. The former University of Virginia player and three-time college player of the year finished the game with 8 points, 7 rebounds and 3 blocked shots, fouling out with 4:33 to play.

Sampson played only 21 minutes in his return to University Hall.

Washington, which sprinted to a 15-2 lead in the first six minutes and was never headed, got 19 points and 9 rebounds from rookie forward Mike Gibson and 15 points each from Ruland and rookie Darren Daye.

Lewis Lloyd led Houston with 18 points with Elvin Hayes adding 16 and former University of Virginia player Wally Walker and James Bailey 14 apiece.

Sampson, who picked up only two personal fouls in 30 minutes of action while scoring 24 points in the Rockets' exhibition opener Thursday night against Dalls, got four fouls in the first eight minutes against Ruland and the Bullets.

Stastny leads Nordiques to 9-2 win

By The Associated Press

NHL

QUEBEC — Anton Stastny scored three goals and defenseman John Van Boxmeer and Dale Hunter each scored twice Saturday night to give the Quebec Nordiques a 9-2 National Hockey League triumph over the Buffalo Sabres.

It was a measure of revenge for Van Boxmeer, now in his 11th NHL season, who was left unprotected by the Sabres in last week's waiver draft. Quebec chose the veteran, who scored six goals in 1982-83.

He rewarded his new employers by scoring twice in a four-goal, second-period outburst that enabled the Nordiques to win for the second time in three starts. Quebec put the score far out of reach by scoring three goals in the final 90 seconds of the game.

For Hunter, the goals were his fourth and fifth in three games. Defenseman Normand Rochefort and Michel Goulet completed the Nordiques' scoring. Peter Stastny collected four assists.

The Sabres, 1-1, got goals from Ric Seiling and Real Cloutier, who was making his first return to Quebec since the Nordiques traded him last June.

Despite four power plays in the third period, Buffalo managed only one goal against goaltender Dan Bouchard. The Sabres, who had Bob Sauve in goal, outshot Quebec 28-26.

Devils 6, Red Wings 3

DETROIT — Jan Ludvig scored his second goal of the season and assisted on three others to lead the New Jersey Devils to a 6-3 victory over the Detroit Red Wings, spoiling the Red Wings' home opener before a record crowd.

Ludvig converted a pass from Don Lever midway through the final period to give New Jersey a 5-2 lead.

The 22-year-old forward earlier set up goals by Jeff Larmer and rookie Pat Berbeek as the Devils overcame an early 1-0 deficit.

Greg Smith opened the scoring for Detroit at 11:18 of the first period, but Phil Russell tied the score for New Jersey with his first goal 3:05 later.

First-round draft choice John MacLean added his first NHL goal late in the second period for the Devils.

John Ogrodnick and Ed Johnstone had third-period goals for Detroit before Aaron Broten closed out the scoring with an empty-net goal in the final minute.

New Jersey's victory, before an all-time Detroit opening night crowd of 18,956 fans gathered for the official dedication of the arena, snapped the Devil's two-game losing streak, while Detroit fell to 0-1-1. The attendance figure broke the old mark of 17,343 set last year.

Flyers 6, Canadiens 3

MONTREAL — Dave Poulin, Ray Allison and Glen Cochrane scored second-period goals to spark the Philadelphia Flyers over the Montreal Canadiens 6-3.

Montreal led 2-1 in the second period before Poulin tied it at 4:58 of the middle period. Allison scored at 11:58 to put Philadelphia ahead and Cochrane scored to make it 4-2 after two periods. Paul Holmgren and Bill Barber added third-period goals for the Flyers.

Marino gets first starting role; Elway gets bench

By The Associated Press

Dan Marino, the 27th player and sixth quarterback selected in the college draft last April, moves from No. 2 to No. 1 on the Miami depth chart Sunday, getting his first National Football League start as the Dolphins face the visiting Buffalo Bills.

And John Elway, the first player — and first quarterback, obviously — taken in that draft, is headed for the Denver bench.

David Woodley, who never has been secure in his role as the Dolphins' starter, was ineffective last Sunday, completing only four of 12 passes for 34 yards in a 17-7 loss to New Orleans.

In past seasons, Coach Don Shula would rush Don Strock to Woodley's rescue. This year, though, Strock got into a salary hassle, was a late arrival and lost his backup job to Marino, the rookie from the University of Pittsburgh.

Last Sunday, against the Saints, Marino took over in the second period and completed 12 of 22 passes for 150 yards and a touchdown. Earlier in the season, e came on in the closing minutes of a lost cause — a 27-14 defeat in Los Angeles — and threw two touchdown passes against the Raiders.

"This is something I felt I had to do at this time," Shula said of the change in starting quarterbacks. "Our offense is 26th in the league and 28th in passing. Each week we keep hoping that it gets better, and it hasn't."

Despite those numbers, the Dolphins are 3-2 and in a four-way tie with Baltimore, Buffalo and the New York Jets for first place in the American Conference East.

The Bills are coming off a 34-10 shellacking by the Jets last Monday night, when quarterback Joe Ferguson was sidelined by a concussion. He was expected to be back in the lineup against the Dolphins.

SUNDAY'S OTHER NFL games are Denver at Houston, Tampa Bay at Dallas, Washington at St. Louis, Minnesota at Chicago, the Jets at Cleveland, Green Bay at Detroit, New Orleans at Atlanta, New England at Baltimore, Seattle at San Diego, Kansas City at the Raiders, the Los Angeles Rams at San Francisco, and Philadelphia at the New York Giants. Monday night's game is Pittsburgh at Cincinnati.

The Broncos, with Steve DeBerg coming to Elway's rescue, won their first two games this season, squeakers over Pittsburgh and Baltimore, even though Elway appeared shaky at best. Then Elway, the league's No. 1 draft choice (by Baltimore, out of Stanford, then traded to Denver) went the route in the next two games, both losses.

Last Sunday, in a 31-14 loss at Chicago, Elway completed only four of 10 passes for 36 yards and had an interception by cornerback Les Frazier returned for a touchdown. Coach Dan Reeves yanked Elway and put in DeBerg, who completed 17 of 30 passes for 235 yards and a touchdown.

After the game, Elway — last in the league's quarterback rankings with 38 completions in 83 pass attempts with one touchdown and five interceptions — said he would welcome a change. And Reeves said he was thinking about making DeBerg the starter for Sunday's game in Houston. At midweek, Reeves made it official.

"For five weeks our offense has been last in the league, and I felt we had to make a change," he said. "The responsibility for our offensive problems rests with all of us, not just John...I would love to have seen him play better, but I probably expected too much."

The Oilers are the only winless team in the American Conference. They haven't won since the second game of the 1982 season — a 12-game skid. "I'm tired of losing," said quarterback Gifford Nielsen. "I don't want to keep saying, 'It's a loss we can build on.' The fact is, we have not won in a long time and I want to build on a win."

IN DALLAS, the Cowboys, the league's only unbeaten team faces Tampa Bay, the National Conference's only winless team. The Bucs are coming off the worst pounding of the season, a 55-14 loss at Green Bay — and that has Cowboys' Coach Tom Landry somewhat concerned.

"I hate games like this," he said. "They've been stung. They'll come to play." Tampa Bay's offense and defense are 13th — next-to-last — in the NFC.

Washington, which has won four in a row since dropping its season-opener to the Cowboys at home, shoots for its ninth consecutive road victory, two short of the NFL record held by San Diego. The Redskins have dominated St. Louis in recent years, winning three in a row and 12 of the teams' past 14 meetings.

The Vikings, 3-2, share the NFC Central lead with Green Bay, despite having the conference's 11th-best offense and 12th-best defense. They're hoping to duplicate last year's 35-7 pounding of the Bears, when cornerback Willie Teal tied a Minnesota team record with three interceptions.

The Jets' visit to Cleveland is their first since 1981, when they managed their first victory in seven games against the Browns. Wesley Walker of New York, going against a Cleveland secondary which ranks 22nd in the league againstthe pass, is the AFC's No. 2 receiver in catches with 26 and No. 3 in yardage with 399. Brian Sipe of the Browns shares the conference lead with Dan Fouts of the Chargers in touchdown passes with 12.

The Lions are on a four-game losing skid and are running into a Packers' team which set an NFL scoring record last week with 49 points in the first half. Last year, Detroit beat Green Bay twice — 30-10 and 27-24.

New Orleans is gunning for its first 4-2 start in the 17-year history of the franchise. The Saints figure to have running back George Rogers back in the lineup after his recuperation from knee surgery. Not that they missed that much. In his place, Wayne Wilson rushed for 160 yards against the Dolphins, his second 100-yard game in a row.

Baltimore is in an unusual position — in recent years, at least — of sharing the lead in the AFC East at 3-2. The Colts' three victories this year surpass the total of the past two seasons, none in 1982 and two in '81. And those two victories came against New England, whom they also beat 29-23 in the '83 season opener.

Seattle, which has not won in San Diego in four tries, is shooting for a season sweep of its meetings with the Chargers, who lead the AFC in scoring (142 points) and share the league lead with St. Louis in points allowed (153).

The Raiders still are the AFC's winningest team at 4-1 following last Sunday's wild 37-35 loss in Washington, but they've had problems in recent seasons with the Chiefs, losing five of seven games. Los Angeles committed six turnovers against the Redskins, while Kansas City was taking advantage of nine by St. Louis for its second victory in five games.

Rookie Eric Dickerson of the Rams, who has rolled up an NFL-high 645 yards in five games, runs into the NFC's Western Division leaders. The 49ers, 4-1, will be hoping to put a crimp in Los Angeles' drive for contention the way the Rams eliminated San Francisco from the playoffs last year with a season-ending 21-20 victory.

The Giants, who had a shot at tying San Diego last week in the final minute before quarterback Scott Brunner lost the handle on the ball with a third down at the Chargers 12-yard line, go for their third consecutive victory over the Eagles. They swept Philadelphia 27-3 and 26-24 last year.

Rebs second in Big Spring

BIG SPRING — The Midland Lee Rebels, led by the third and fifth place finishes of David Myers and Derrick Westbrook, finished second in the Big Spring Invitational cross-country meet Saturday.

Myers, with his best finish of the year, ran the 5K course in 16:28 for third while Westbrook finished in 16:37.

Other varsity finishers for Lee were Tim Chauncey in 17th place, Van Tolar in 20th, Miles Goodyear 32nd, and Pat Ison 38th.

San Angelo won the meet, beating Lee 26-55.

In boys' junior varsity action, Mark Price placed 10th, Ike Carden 14th, Rick Prigmore 22nd and Jeff Reed 29th.

For the girls varsity, Megan Pace, who also competes for the Rebel volleyball team, placed 5th. Luz Gonzales finished 17th for the girls JV and Mona Lisa Enriquez 36th.

Next week the Rebels will compete in the Texas Tech Invitational in Lubbock.

Sam Torrance fires 66 to gain three-shot Southern Open lead

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) - Scotland's Sam Torrance, threatening to run away with the $250,000 Southern Open Golf Tournament, fired a 66 Saturday for a 11-under-par 199 and a three-stroke lead after three rounds.

The 30-year-old Torrance, a member of the European Ryder Cup squad, playing here as a tuneup for the matches next week at West Palm Beach, Fla., held the halfway lead after rounds of 66 and 67 over the par 70, 6,791-yard Green Island Country Club course.

He expanded that Saturday with a near-flawless round and leads Ronnie Black by three strokes entering Sunday's final round in a bid for the $45,000 first prize.

Torrance, who in 10 previous tries on the PGA Tour since 1973, never had made the cut until this tournament.

"Yeah. But it's 10 straight cuts over 10 years. It's not like 10 weeks running," joked Torrance.

He opened with a two-foot birdie on his first hole, added another of two feet on No. 8 and had consecutive birds on 10 and 11 to go along with pars in his round over this hilly southwest Georgia course.

Torrance said he was not surprised by his showing. "I've been playing well lately," finishing in the Top 10 in four consecutive tournaments in Europe before coming here this week.

If Torrance wins here, he will be exempt on the PGA tour for two years, and the winner of six European tournaments said he would compete in this country.

"I'd be exempt if I win, so I could play here, and I will. If not, I won't because if I don't win, I'd have to go to qualifying school," said Torrance.

He said money is n his main objective to joining the tour, but "because it's the best in the world."

Black, a second-year player from Lamar University in Texas, never has finished better than a 14th place in the Milwaukee Open this year. He ranks 108 on the money list with just over $40,000 this year and earned only $6,329 a year ago.

But the 25-year-old Black shot rounds of 68 and 69 before Saturday's round that included five birds and no bogeys for a 202 total.

First-day leader Payne Stewart and Mark McCumber were next at 205, six shots off the pace. Stewart had a 68 and McCumber, the tournament's best round, a 64.

At 206 were Dave Eichelberger and Rod Curl. Eichelberger had a 67 and Curl a 68.

Joe Inman, who only was one shot behind Torrance before Saturday, shot a 73 and was at 208.

Larry Mize and Mike Donald were at 207. Mize had a 66 and Donald a 67.

Defending champion Bobby Clampett was at 209 after a 70. Jim Colbert, who won last week's Texas Open, also had a 70 and was at 212, the same as Johnny Miller, who faltered to a 73.

Miller 500 field one of fastest

HARRISBURG, N.C. (AP) — One of the fastest fields in the history of the Charlotte Motor Speedway will vie Sunday for $417,270 in the Miller High Life 500 Grand National stock car race.

The top 15 qualifiers had average four-lap speeds of better than 161 mph.

Pole sitter Tim Richmond, who won the top spot with a speed of 163.073 mph, will have to hold off challenges by Buddy Baker, who has four victories at Charlotte, and Winston Cup points leader Bobby Allison, the top all-time winner at Charlotte with five victories.

A record crowd of 125,000 was expected for the race, which starts at 12:30 p.m.

"I've got to win this one," said Richmond, who will be driving a Pontiac. "This is a real important race for me. We worked hard, we won the pole and we want to go on and win the whole thing."

Baker, starting third in a Ford, said he would like to add a fifth Charlotte victory to his record.

"I want this one, this is a big one," said Baker. "This is home for me and it means a lot."

Allison, starting in the 13th row and 22nd position, goes into the race with a 91-point lead over defending champion Darrell Waltrip. A victory for the Hueytown, Ala., driver, who had 4,078 points going into Sunday's race, would move him closer to clinching the points championship from Waltrip, who has 3,987 points.

"I think the remainder of the schedule is in our favor, but that's something we'll have to prove," Allison said. "A victory here at Charlotte would certainly give us an advantage we feel we need to beat out our toughest competitors."

The remaining races are the Warner W. Hodgdon American 500 at Rockingham Oct. 23, the Atlanta Journal 500 in Atlanta Nov. 6 and the Winston Western 500 at Riverside, Calif., Nov. 20.

Colorado Mines posts 28-14 win over N Mexico Highlands

GOLDEN, Colo. (AP) — Runningback Mike Scialla rushed for 186 yards and scored two fourth quarter touchdowns to lead Colorado Mines past New Mexico Highlands 28-14 in Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference football Saturday.

The victory boosted Mines record to 3-1 in both overall and conference play. The Cowboys fell to 0-4 in RMAC and overall.

Scialla's 54-yard scoring romp with 3:37 left in the game pushed the Oredigger lead to its final 28-14 score.

Mines led at half 7-0 thanks to a Larry May TD reception from quarterback Mike Scherrer in the opening period.

A Greg Gordon 11-yard touchdown run increased Mines' lead to 14-0 in the third quarter but the Cowboys responded with a 19-yard touchdown pass from quarterback John Chisholm to Mark Gates to narrow the lead to 14-7. Gates finished with 122 yards receiving.

But Scialla ran 48 yards for a score to pad the lead to 21-7 early in the fourth quarter.

Chisholm finished with 197 yards passing and a pair of TDs.

Western New Mexico wins

ALAMOSA, Colo. (AP) — Runningback Randy Plair ran for 130 yards and scored the game-winning touchdown late in the game to give Western New Mexico a 24-17 Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference football victory Saturday.

With the scored knotted at 17-17, Plair plunged for a 1-yard touchdown at 3:18 left in the final period to make the score 24-17 and give the Mustangs a 3-1-1 overall record, with a 2-0-1 mark in league games. Adams State fell to 2-3 and 2-2.

Western New Mexico opened the scoring with a 32-yard field goal early in the game by Carry Starnes. Adams State went up 7-3 when Brian Littin hauled in a 21-yard scoring strike from quarterback Pat Sandoval.

Later in the first quarter, Doug Spencer rambled 41 yards for a score to give the lead back to Mustangs, 10-7. But Western New Mexico broke a 10-10 tie just before half when Rich Dailey picked off an errant Indian aerial and scampered 30 yards to give the Mustangs a 17-10 halftime advantage.

Sandoval evened the score at 17-17 midway through the final period with a 2-yard run. Five minutes later, Plair scored the winner.

Salisbury passes USC to 38-17 win over Cougars

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sean Salisbury threw for 256 yards and three touchdowns, including a pair of third-quarter scores, as Southern Cal pulled away from a 17-17 tie en route to a 38-17 Pacific-10 Conference victory over Washington State.

Salisbury, a rangy 6-foot-5, 210-pound junior, completed 19 of 25 throws.

Tailback Fred Crutcher rushed for 106 yards on 25 carries and scored on a 9-yard run for the Trojans, now 2-2-1.

Southern Cal is 2-0 in the Pac-10, but ineligible for the conference title this year because of NCAA sanctions.

WSU, 2-3 overall and 0-2 in league play, battled back from a 17-7 deficit to tie the contest on Kerry Porter's 1-yard touchdown run with 5½ minutes left in the first half.

That was all the scoring for the Cougars, however, as the Trojan defense stiffened in the second half and Southern Cal took a 31-17 advantage in the third period on Salibury's scoring throws to Cormier and Ware.

BYU rides Cowboys

LARAMIE, Wyo. (AP) — Quarterback Steve Young engineered five first-half scoring drives to lead No. 20 Brigham Young University over rival Wyoming 41-10 in a Western Athletic Conference football game here.

Young, the nation's total offense leader, passed for 356 yards and two touchdowns and ran for another 32 yards against the outmanned Cowboys. Cougar running backs Casey Tiumalu and Waymon Hamilton each scored two touchdowns.

The victory gave BYU a 4-1 overall record and a 2-0 mark in the WAC. Wyoming dropped to 3-3 overall and 2-1 in the conference.

BYU's defense shut down Wyoming's vaunted wishbone rushing attack and quieted a record Wyoming crowd of 31,084.

Far West

Montana tops Weber

MISSOULA, Mont. (AP) — Tailback Joey Charles rushed for 158 yards and three touchdowns as undefeated Montana held off previously-unbeaten Weber State College 28-26 in Big Sky Conference football.

Charles, who scored on runs of 1 and 44 yards in the first half, staked Montana to a 28-7 lead midway through the third quarter on a 1-yard scoring plunge.

Montana is now 4-0 overall and 3-0 in the conference.

Weber, 4-1 and 2-1, started a comeback by scoring on a blocked punt with 42 seconds left in the third quarter.

Fullback Freddie Cook's 2-yard touchdown dive closed the gap to 28-26 with two minutes left in the game.

The Wildcats got the ball back at their own 10-yard line with 24 seconds remaining, but managed just one first down before the game ended.

Ducks surprise Cal

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Flanker Lew Barnes used his big play skills to give Oregon one first-quarter touchdown and to set up another as the Ducks upset California 24-17 in a Pacific 10 conference college football game.

With less than 2 minutes gone in the game, Barnes took a trick play pass from tight end Dave Christensen for a 48-yard touchdown play.

Less than five minutes later, Barnes ran 41 yards to Cal's seven-yard line, and two plays later, quarterback Mike Jorgensen ran one yard to score and give Oregon a 12-0 lead.

Oregon went to 2-3 overall and 1-0 in Pac-10 play. California's record is 2-2-1 for the season and 0-1-1 in the league.

Huskies dog Beavers

SEATTLE (AP) — Tailback Jacque Robinson ignited a second-half Washington offensive explosion with a 68-yard burst to set up one touchdown and scored a pair of TDs on short runs as the 16th-ranked Huskies defeated Oregon State 34-7 in the Huskies' Pacific-10 Conference football opener.

Robinson, the Pac-10 rushing champion as a sophomore but a disappointment in his first four games as a junior, rushed for 121 yards on 11 carries, all in the second half.

The Huskies, 4-1 and prohibitive favorites againt the Beavers, coughed up four fumbles in the opening half and came away with only a 7-7 intermission deadlock.

But it was all Washington in the second half. Oregon State fell to 1-5 overall and 0-3 in the Pac-10.

Long Beach wins late

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Running back Lenny Montgomery broke two tackles on a 19-yard touchdown run with 1:45 remaining, lifting Long Beach State to a 20-13 non-conference football, victory over host San Diego State.

San Diego State's Dan Gaston returned the ensuing kickoff 36 yards to the Long Beach State 42-yard line, but he later fumbled at the 49ers' 27-yard line after a pass reception with 51 seconds to play.

Defensive tackle Darryl Harris recovered the fumble, blunting the final San Diego State threat.

Long Beach State now has a 4-1 record after winning its third straight game while San Diego State fell to 2-3-1.

The Beavers, who have not won a Pac-10 game and are now 3-35-1 in four seasons under Coach Joe Avezzano, took advantage of Washington's inability to hang onto the football in the first half.

New Mexico evens record

"We grew up offensively with that fourth quarter drive. That put the game out of reach and we knew the win was ours," said Lobo coach Joe Lee Dunn. "It was just a great victory for us."

Victories have been hard to come by for New Mexico this year, now owning a 3-3 mark, but Dunn knew it was time for something good to happen. "We got all those breaks early with all those turnovers. The bad breaks have happened to us all year and we finally got a few."

The Lobos got a season full of breaks Saturday, but no one in the press box could ever remember another Tech team playing so poorly.

Nimitz remains unbeaten

The Nimitz ninth grade football team survived a high-scoring duel with Ector Saturday to keep its' unbeaten record intact, 34-26.

Nimitz, 5-0, faces a big season showdown next Saturday with a game against Crockett. Crockett is now 4-0 after a 13-2 win over Lee White Thursday.

In other ninth grade action Thursday, Midland Gold squeaked past Midland Purple (2-2) 6-0 for their first win of the year. Saturday, it was Bonham 12, Lee Maroon 8. Bonham is 3-2 and has as its' next foe Bowie. Lee Maroon is 2-2-1 and meets Midland Gold on Thursday.

In the eighth grade Midland-Odessa Conference, Alamo (4-1) blasted San Jacinto 32-6 Saturday while Nimitz edged Crockett 19-6. Alamo and Nimitz (2-2) meet next Saturday. San Jacinto, 2-2, plays Saturday against Hood.

Midland Bapt rips West Park Christian, 67-26

Midland Baptist Temple's six-man football team utilized a potent rushing attack Friday night to score a 67-26 victory over the West Park Christian Warriors of Pecos.

Leading the Eagle onslaught was David Piercy with 254 yards rushing. Richie Carter accounted for another 235 yards on the ground.

The Eagles got off to a fast start by scoring on their first three offensive plays. The 26-0 lead MBT held after the first quarter was never checked thereafter.

Kelly Streun led the Eagle defense with 18 solo tackles.

MBT and Midland Christian meet Friday for the six-man football championship of Midland.

East Texas claims easy 51-14 victory

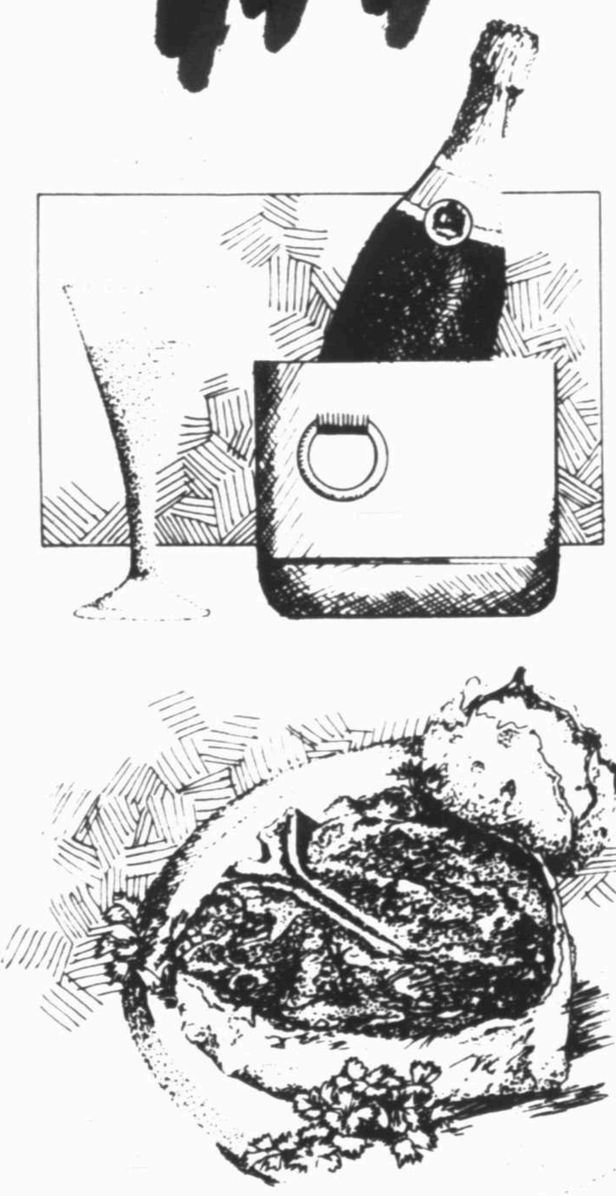

COMMERCE, Texas (AP) — Tailback Ricky Dirks scored two touchdowns as East Texas State University rolled up 507 yards of total offense enroute to a 51-14 Lone Star Conference win over Sam Houston State University Saturday.

Dirks rushed 27 times for 167 yards for the Lions. Quarterback Kyle Mackey hit on 9 of 18 passes for 154 yards and two touchdowns.

ETSU is now 3-1, 1-0 in conference play. The Lions scored 44 unanswered points after SHSU (3-2, 0-1) got out to a 14-7 first period lead.

North Carolina blasts Wake Forest

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Eddie Colson, Ethan Horton and Tyrone Anthony each ran for more than 100 yards as undefeated and fourth-ranked North Carolina posted a 30-10 Atlantic Coast Conference football victory over Wake Forest.

Colson rushed for 119 yards on 13 carries and scored two second-half touchdowns as the Tar Heels climbed to 6-0, 2-0 in the ACC. Horton gained 116 yards in 13 tries, including a 20-yard scoring run with 25 seconds left in the third period, giving the Tar Heels a 24-10 lead.

Irish rip Gamecocks

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Notre Dame relied on the kicking of Mike Johnston and two touchdown passes by freshman quarterback Steve Beuerline to score the first five times it had the ball on the way to a 30-6 win over South Carolina.

The Fighting Irish got field goals of 49, 27 and 41 yards from Johnston to run up a 23-0 halftime lead, then hold off a South Carolina comeback try in a rainy second half.

South Carolina fell to 3-3. Notre Dame is now 3-2.

Auburn tames 'Cats

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Bo Jackson ran for three touchdowns and Randy Campbell added two scores as No. 7 Auburn exploded in the second quarter en route to a 49-21 victory over Kentucky in Southeastern Conference football Saturday.

The victory boosted Auburn to 4-1 overall and 2-0 the SEC while Ken-

Hokies smoke Duke

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP) — Virginia Tech's defense, led by tackle Bruce Smith, stopped winless Duke cold in the first half and propelled the Hokies to a 27-14 football victory Saturday.

Tech, which has allowed 236.5 yards a game to rank fourth in NCAA Division I-A statistics, held Duke to 27 total yards in the first half, including minus 16 rushing.

Meanwhile, Tech scored three times for a 20-0 lead.

Gators eat Vandy

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Fullback John L. Williams ran for 101 yards and scored three touchdowns, two on pass receptions from Wayne Peace, as ninth-ranked Florida crushed Vanderbilt 29-10 in Southeastern Conference football action.

Peace passed for 214 yards to lead a balanced offensive attack that outgained Vandy's passing show 436-281.

Place-kicker Bobby Raymond also booted field goals of 27, 20 and 38 yards as the 5-0-1 Gators boosted their record to 3-0 in the SEC, the school's best start in league play since 1976.

Vanderbilt, which got 262 yards passing from junior quarterback Kurt Page, fell to 2-3 overall, 0-2 in the conference.

Clemson mauls Cavs

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Kenny Flowers scored three touchdowns and Kevin Mack two as Clemson continued its dominance over Virginia, 42-21 in Atlantic Coast Conference football.

Saturday's victory was Clemson's 23rd straight win over Virginia against no losses in the series.

Clemson is now 3-1-1 while Virginia lost its second straight, after winning its first four games.

Flowers scored twice in the third period to put the game out of reach.

Eagles blast Miss. St.

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Quarterback Robert Ducksworth and tailback Tracy Gamble each threw a first-quarter touchdown pass, starting the Southern Mississippi Golden Eagles to a 31-6 football victory over the Mississippi State Bulldogs.

The Golden Eagles thus extended their victory streak over Mississippi State to nine, counting two forfeits, while improving their record 4-1. Mississippi State dropped to 2-3.

Win not in the Cards

MIAMI (AP) — Fullback Albert Bentley ran for two touchdowns, while quarterback Bernie Kosar accounted for two more scores as 12th-ranked Miami of Florida beat Louisville 42-14 in college football action.

The victory pushed the Hurricanes to 5-1 as the Cardinals dropped to at 3-3.

Ramblin' Wreck wins

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Robert Lavette dashed 29 yards for a touchdown and Ron Rice kicked two field goals as previously winless Georgia Tech defeated North Carolina State 20-10 in Atlantic Coast Conference football.

Lavette rushed 31 times for 125 yards as Georgia Tech improved its record to 1-4 and 1-1 in the ACC, its first official conference triumph since joining the league three years ago. The Wolfpack fell to 2-3 and 1-2.

The Ramblin' Wreck took a 13-10 lead at intermission and held the sputtering Wolfpack offense scoreless in the second half.

Oklahoma State spooks Nebraska, 14-10

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Turner Gill's second touchdown pass of the game, a 32-yarder to Todd Frain, capped a quick 92-yard strike early in the third period Saturday that rallied No. 1 rated Nebraska to a scary 14-10 victory over previously unbeaten but unranked Oklahoma State.

The 6-0 Cornhuskers, rolling up points and yards at a record clip in their first five games, turned the ball over four times in Oklahoma State territory, twice at the goal line in the second half. Their closest game previously this season had been a 42-10 rout of UCLA.

Nebraska, which had been averaging 57.8 points a game but struggled all afternoon against the nation's 10th-ranked defense, scored its first touchdown on a 62-yard pass play from Gill to wingback Irving Fryar midway through the second period.

Ohio St. boils PU

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Garcia Lane returned punts 71 and 63 yards for touchdowns, leading sixth-ranked Ohio State to a 33-22 beating of Purdue in Big Ten Conference football.

The victory played before Siesta Bowl scouts and 89,384 fans, kept the Buckeyes in the Big Ten title chase with a 2-1 record. Purdue suffered its first league defeat and fell to a 1-1-1 record. Ohio State is 4-1 overall and Purdue 1-3-1.

Lane's punt returns broke open a close game in the third quarter. The heavily favored Buckeyes led 12-7 at halftime before Lane, a senior cornerback, lifted Ohio State out of danger.

Iowa buries 'Cats

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — Senior quarterback Chuck Long passed for three touchdowns and ran for another as the No. 15-ranked Iowa Hawkeyes defeated Northwestern 61-21 in college fotball.

Iowa set a Big Ten conference record with 713 total yards offense.

Mizzou stuffs Buffs

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Junior quarterback Marlon Adler completed 6-of-6 passes for 142 yards and two touchdowns and ran for another score as Missouri crushed Colorado 59-20 in a Big Eight football opener for both teams.

With Adler at the controls, the Tigers dominated early, scoring on their first five possessions to roll to a 31-0 lead early in a second quarter.

The victory raised Missouri's overall record to 3-2, while CU fell to 2-3.

Wood spends games in box

During a junior varsity game Wood, like any other head coach, is walking up and down the sidelines, calling plays, instructing players, etc., but when the varsity is playing he's in the press box "seeing how their offense is attacking our defense and how we need to adjust to it," said Wood.

Wood, who graduated from El Paso Andress in 1973 and from Texas Tech in 1978, is at the level of football coaching he'd like to remain at. It's another sport that he'd like to be a head coach in baseball.

"Right now my aspirations are to be a varsity football assistant and a head baseball coach," said Wood. I don't really prefer baseball more that football, but the atmosphere is different. I enjoy both sports. With the level of play in football, I'd just as soon be a varsity assistant.

On the Road Again

with Allen and Jackie Cason

A trailer hitch is an important link between the tow vehicle and the trailer. It is essential that the proper hitch is used when towing a trailer. If you are towing a foldout camping trailer a 2000 lb. Class A hitch is sufficient. However, if the trailer you are towing is a self contained travel trailer and especially if you are towing with an automobile and not a pick up, then the equalizing hitch is your answer. This equalizing hitch transfers the weight from the hitch ball area equally to the axles on the trailer and the drive axle and the steering axle of the tow vehicle. The hitch ball supports a weight known as the "trailer tongue weight". Having the proper hitch installed at the proper height (measurement from the ground to the top of the hitch ball on your trl. when it is sitting level) will help to ensure your towing ease and comfort.
If you are thinking about buying a travel trailer or you have one and have traded tow vehicles, let us help you with your hitch and wiring needs at Billy Sims Trailer Town, 520 E. 2nd, Odessa. Our staff is eager to assist you in making your time in your R.V. more enjoyable. Our service dept. is open Mon.-Fri. 9 to 6. We have over 40 years combined years of experience in the R.V. field. Won't you let us help you? Just give us a call 337-6635 or Midlanders 683-4800.

Maintenance is always a good idea to keep things running better. Check your hitch at the spots where welded or bolted to your frame periodically to see that all is secure.

Beale Street no longer sings the blues

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Beale Street, "the birthplace of the blues," overflowed with people Saturday as the avenue was dedicated as a national historic district.

"I think he couldn't have been anything but happy if he were here," said Mrs. W.C. Handy of New York, the widow of the musician credited with inventing the uniquely American music form 74 years ago.

"It's beautiful," Mrs. Handy said.

Two U.S. senators, two mayors and a platform full of other dignitaries were on hand to dedicate the remodeled Beale Street, which was a starting place for so many black musicians and businessmen.

For almost a century, Beale Street was an entertainment district for poor blacks as well as the working-class whites who found music, strong drink and gambling there.

It was also a center of commerce, leaning heavily on pawn shops and cut-rate clothing stores. Some businesses that began there grew to be major Memphis retail establishments.

Beale Street was where W.C. Handy took folk tunes brought to Memphis by the blacks escaping from the Delta cotton fields and turned them into an American music form that has influenced jazz, popular music and rock 'n' roll.

But by the late 1950s, Beale Street was decaying. Handy had gone to New York years before, and musicians such as Furry Lewis, Gus Cannon, Jim Jackson and others played only rarely at the few clubs still open.

An urban renewal project cleared the blocks around Beale Street in 1969 and most businesses fled to other areas of Memphis. Only a few stores remained open.

It wasn't until 18 months ago that the redevelopment of the street began with the infusion of $11.5 million in state, federal and local money.

This week, with workmen still putting the final touches on many of the new businesses, Beale Street was again alive with people. Nightclubs, cabarets, restaurants and retail businesses were again open for business.

"Beale Street was a place where people used to be because they were separated from the rest of the community," Shelby County Mayor Bill Morris told a crowd of several thousand people at the dedication ceremony.

"Today, people are here because they want to be together...This is a place that holds the promise of the future for this city."

Morris, Memphis Mayor Dick Hackett and Sens. Howard Baker Jr. and James Sasser of Tennessee were among the speakers at the ceremony in W.C. Handy Park as the plaque designating the street as a historic district was unveiled.

At the edge of the park, a statue of the legendary trumpet player stands, his horn in his hand.

"My grandfather would have been happy to see this," said Carlos Handy, a professor of physics at Atlanta University, as he looked toward the statue. "I think he would have been flabbergasted."

"Georgina's Menagerie" will be on stage Saturday during Midland's Shrine Circus being held at Chaparral Center Saturday. Performance times for the all new Shrine Circus are 2:30 and 7:30 p.m. Advance tickets, which may be purchased at Chaparral Center, are priced at $4 for general admission and $5 for reserved seating. Tickets the day of the show are $1 more. Part of the proceeds from the circus go to the Shriners' burn and crippled children's hospitals. The rest is used locally to provide transportation for patients from this area.

Michael Caine learns to drive

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The city's large and growing British film colony was agog at the news: actor Michael Caine was taking driving lessons.

It was a signal that the actor, currently starring in "Educating Rita," might be sinking roots. Caine has driven in brief scenes before the movie camera, but never on the streets or freeways.

His lack of driving skills acquired in his native England also meant no entrenched left-lane habits to unlearn.

Caine recently passed his driving test, but not before the resident British press corps besieged him with requests to watch him take it. Caine was darkly certain they wanted to see him hit a curb or another vehicle.

Analysis to follow program on fictional nuclear attack

By RICK DU BROW
Hearst Feature Service

Showing its commitment to broadcast a graphic drama about a nuclear attack on America, ABC now says it will follow its controversial TV program, "The Day After," with a discussion hosted by Ted Koppel.

Although ABC has stood by the drama, to be shown Nov. 20, the news department announcement about Koppel represents an important added boost. It comes amid reports that the horrifying tale has scared off some advertisers, while other sponsors feel that hawking their products would be inappropriate on such a show.

As of Thursday, ABC has not sold any commercials for the 2-hour-and-15-minute drama, according to network spokesman Tom Mackin, "but we're very close to selling a couple. We feel confident we'll have advertising. There's seven weeks to go."

Stu Samuels, vice president of TV movies at ABC, confirmed that the cost of "The Day After," which deals with a nuclear holocaust in Kansas, is in the range of $6 million to $7 million. That's two to three times the cost of a typical TV movie of roughly the same length.

In addition to the price and nature of "The Day After" and the problem of selling ads, the show has become further embattled as a new focal point of the nuclear freeze movement. Although the drama blames no one specifically for the start of a nuclear war, pro-freeze supporters are certain to capitalize on the TV message of the horror. And this seems equally certain to bring a response from those who feel the drama's impact may affect support for the Reagan administration's negotiations on arms limitations.

"The Day After" may be only fiction, but the awesome and unquestioned impact of TV on public thinking is no trivial matter in this case. It is a real factor.

Country singer to appeal ruling

SHERMAN, Texas (AP) — A lawyer for country-singer Hank Williams Jr. says that the performer will appeal a jury's decision to award the owner of a defunct nightclub $160,000.

Ed Mears, owner of the Spurs Club in nearby Denison, about 60 miles north of Dallas, won the award in a suit claiming Williams was drunk during a June 1981 performance that the singer cut short.

The jury decided in Mears' favor after testimony ended Thursday.

Rosemary Clooney thriving on success

By DOROTHY TRELOAR
Hearst Feature Service

HOLLYWOOD — Rosemary Clooney recently finished a nation-wide and European tour, but she's not resting before she hits the road again. The singer-performer is cresting on a new wave in her career, and at the moment is taking a couple of weeks off to be with her children. She's back in the kitchen, where — next to the stage — she's happiest.

The day we meet she's preparing food for some 75 friends of her daughter Maria, 27, who is celebrating a birthday. Those friends relish her fudge brownies, a special dessert. I remember when working for Louella Parsons that Louella called Rosemary to get the story of her divorce — one of two — from Jose Ferrer, and Rosemary was in the kitchen making her fudge brownies.

"My five children give me such joy, and I have them all around the house whenever I'm home," she says. "Two girls and three boys who range in age from 23 to 28. Gabriel, who is married to Debbie Boone, has already blessed me with a grandson, and they are expecting twins in September. Isn't that wonderful?

"After this time at home, I'm off for jazz concerts in Northern California before I go on to Japan, England, Canada and some American cities for more concerts. Along the way, I'm doing commercials for Coronet Paper Products and cutting more albums."

It all seems a bit much for this singer, who went through hell with breakdowns and addiction problems during the '60s, when her career came to a standstill. She not only went through two divorces from Jose Ferrer, but also lost her sister Betty, with whom she was very close, from an aneurism.

"Those days were and will remain a nightmare," Rosemary says with a sigh. "I was in an emotional tailspin, and thank God Bing Crosby came to my rescue and got me started on my long road back to sanity and being normal again.

"I had over five years of psychoanalysis and group therapy sessions," she continues, "and I still go to group sessions when I am in town and have the time. They are important, and I don't want to lose touch."

Rosemary's perseverance has paid off. Every one of her concerts to date has been a sellout, and when she appeared with Tony Bennett, ticket scalpers had a field day. The same is true when she appeared on stage with Helen O'Connell, Rose Marie and Kay Starr in "4 Girls 4." The four headlined aboard a cruise ship from Hawaii to Japan earlier this year.

"I also did a couple of benefits for a retirement home to be built for older people who have no place to go. I told my brother Nick, who is an ABC news anchorman in Cincinnati, we were getting old and would have someplace to go when we retire," Rosemary chuckles, her blue eyes sparkling.

Rosemary's 55, has been in the business for over 40 years, and except for some added weight, doesn't look her age.

Fall's movies falter, fly

A Review

It has been 12 years since Sean Connery last appeared as British agent 007, James Bond, in "Diamonds Are Forever." And it is hoped he'll stick by his new title "Never Say Never Again" when deciding about a return to the screen as Bond.

Essentially a remake of the 1965 "Thunderball," wherein Miami is held ransom by SPECTRE (Special Executive for Counterintelligence, Terrorism, Revenge, and Extortion), "Never" is about the threathened nuclear destruction of two unknown areas of the world unless a ransom is paid to SPECTRE by every nation.

Connery is wonderfully masterful of all he surveys and, as usual, that includes the best food, wine and women Hollywood can muster. This time it's the delectable Barbara Carrera as arch villainess, Fatima Blush, and the stunning Kim Bassinger (who demonstrates her agility as a dancer and actress) joining Bond to thwart SPECTRE. Running the show for the bad guys is the sadistically wicked Maximillian Largo (played all too convincingly by Klaus Maria Brandauer).

Of course, super spy hardware abounds, from a laser watch and fountain pen that shoots, to a sleek, inky black, supercharged motorcycle. But the most fascinating invention for "Never" is the video game called "Domination."

It looks like a Ping-Pong table and in the center is a holograph of the globe. At either end is a video console where Bond and Largo fight it out, with the loser receiving electric shocks through the control handles.

Also, filled with more chase scenes and unbelievable escapes than one movie can bear, "Never" is more than two hours long and 30 minutes short of the end it begins to wear. Nevertheless, it's a "jolly good" romp with all the Bond ingredients working at full tilt.

Rated PG, "Never" has sexual innuendo aplenty and scores of evil fellows blown away spy style, but for the return of Connery alone, to a role he fills like no other, don't miss "Never Say Never Again."

• • •

"Romantic Comedy," starring Dudley Moore and Mary Steenburgen is about timing — missed romantic timing.

They meet on his wedding day, become playwriting partners, and spend most of "Romantic Comedy" yearning for each other in silence.

As the years go by, Phoebe (Mary Steenburgen) decides there is no use languishing and marries a journalist (Ron Leibman) on his way overseas. And then, of course, Jason (Moore) is divorced by his wife (Janet Eilber) and the timing is once again all wrong for them.

Do they ever find happiness together? That is what the "Romantic" in "Romantic Comedy" is about, but what is the "Comedy" in "Romantic Comedy" about?

Never blatantly funny, there are fast and acerbic one-liners that zing around, but the timing is missing here as well. Moore seems sadly caught in a script that even he fails to squeeze a laugh from and Miss Steenburgen is forced to substitute a broad-toothed grin for what's missing.

Leibman, however, stands out as the guy who just wants his share of love and very nearly walks away with this picture.

The screenplay, and stage play it was based on, are by Bernard Slade with direction by Arthur Hiller ("Silver Streak" and "Plaza Suite"). Rated PG, "Romantic Comedy" suggests that timing may be a factor in more than just romance.

• • •

"Tender Mercies," a simple, yet powerful, story of an alcoholic down-on-his-luck country and western singer, provides Robert Duvall with a tour de force performance.

Filmed on location in Palmer and Waxahachie by Russell Boyd, there is an uncompromising look at the landscape so familiar to this area — flat and dusty. And where others would have focused on the people to the exclusion of a seemingly uninviting panorama, Boyd embraces the vastness of the land and sky and makes it an extension of the people — more than a backdrop.

Directed by Bruce Beresford ("Breaker Morant"), and written by Horton Foote ("To Kill a Mockingbird"), "Tender Mercies" takes a sensitive and endearing look at a Texas family, brought together like a patchwork quilt from disparate parts.

For Mac Sledge (Duvall), the trip back to sanity is a fragile one, spurred on by the loving and gentle hand of his new wife, Rosa Lee (Tess Harper) and her all-boy son, Sunny (Allan Hubbard). But it is one he makes, first just by writing a tune, then by singing, and finally by letting go just a little.

His voice, husky from years of whiskey straight and his body bowed like a cowboy, Mac learns there are no answers to why things happen and have happened, save the "tender mercies" of the Lord, and that awareness makes for him an uneasy peace.

As slow moving as a West Texas summer sun, "Tender Mercies" showcases the considerable acting talents of Duvall (who does his own singing — reminiscent of the style of early country vocalists), Miss Harper (whose finely chiseled face comes from the "grassroots" Texans), Betty Buckley as Sledge's second wife, now country music star, Dixie Scott, and Wilford Brimley as her manager.

Rated PG, "Tender Mercies" is one movie you won't want to miss — that is, if you savor the essence of Texas existence at its most basic and can read between the lines of life.

• • •

"Beyond the Limit," a John Mackenzie film, has one good scene and it comes at the end of the movie. In it Elpidia Carrillo ("The Border") as Clara, begs her husband, played by Michael Caine, to forgive her for having an affair with Dr. Eduardo Plarr (Richard Gere).

Too bad it doesn't come sooner, before the ramblings of misguided revolutionaries in this South American state, before the inconsistent portrayal of Gere's apolitical physician bent on saving his politically imprisoned father, and before we've sat through almost two tedious hours of this adaptation of Graham Greene's novel, "The Honorary Consul."

As disappointing as Gere's attempt at a British accent, is the screenplay by Christopher Hampton. The story is one of a young doctor, separated from his father by the political vagaries of life south of the equator, who gets reluctantly drawn into a plan to kidnap a visiting diplomat in hopes of exchanging the official for his father and others. Michael Caine, as an honorary British consul, is mistakenly kidnapped instead. Clara comes in not as an afterthought, but as a central character adrift between the two men.

Rated R, due to explicit sexual scenes with Gere and Miss Carillo, and the graphic execution of the revolutionaries, "Beyond the Limit," is one place you are definitely bound to be led should you decide to take a chance on this one.

Brash actress star by day and night

From Wire Reports

NEW YORK — Actress Dorothy Lyman — alias Opal Gardner, alias Naomi Oates Harper — not only survived criticism for leaving her husband and two children for her career, she's become television's first simultaneous day-and-night-time star.

The outspoken Miss Lyman has achieved daytime fame for her Emmy-winning portrayal of the brassy, tacky, captivating Opal on ABC's "All My Children." Among her devoted fans is Carol Burnett, who arranged for Miss Lyman to play Naomi on the NBC nighttime series, "Mama's Family."

Miss Lyman is leaving "All My Children" next month. She's signed an exclusive contract with NBC to appear in nighttime programming. (She intends to continue directing plays though; her latest effort, "Boo Hoo," opens off-Broadway Oct. 18.)

Miss Lyman admits she is "scared to death" about leaving "All My Children." She comments: "I've done soaps for 15 years. I've lived in New York, I've had my little life very well worked out. Now I've chosen to throw my cards up in the air once again and see where they're going to flutter down."

But career gambles are nothing new for Dorothy Lyman. Her daytime success came only after severe conflicts with former "All My Children" producer Jorn Winter. They clashed over how Miss Lyman should interpret her role.

Two years after their battles, Jorn Winter is no longer with "All My Children." Since he left, Miss Lyman has won Emmys for Best Supporting Actress in a Daytime Series (for 1981-1982) and Best Actress in a Daytime Series (for 1982-1983).

Dissenting voice doesn't upset Golding

LONDON (AP) — British author William Golding said Saturday he wasn't upset that a member of the committee which granted him the 1983 Nobel Prize for Literature had objected to the selection.

"I would expect there to be a dissenting minority," the 72-year-old novelist said. "After all, the committee is not a dictatorship."

Artur Lundkvist, a member of the Swedish Academy that chose this year's winner, broke a Nobel rule of silence about deliberations and told reporters in Stockholm after the selection Thursday that he felt Golding was "of no importance whatsoever" internationally. Lundkvist, a Swedish writer, complained that other committee members unfairly gave Golding the award.

"I would like to stress that Mr. Lundkvist, I understand, has retracted it (the criticism)," Golding said in a telephone interview from his home in Broad Chalk, Wiltshire, about 85 miles southwest of London. "He probably was irritated into it by having journalists down his neck."

Lars Gyllensten, head of the Swedish Academy, told The Associated Press on Friday that Lundkvist had "beaten a retreat" and acknowledged that Golding was a worthy winner.

The 18-member Swedish Nobel committee cited Golding's novels for their clarity, diversity and "universality of myth" that "illuminate the human condition in the world today."

Golding said a different committee might well have chosen a different winner.

"After all, the judgment over the relative merits of books is highly subjective and a very delicate and subtle thing. I think the constitution of the committee decides on who is decided on," he said.

"It is always very difficult because so many people are in the running so I think if there was a different panel, they might well have chosen a different author," Golding said.

He was the first Englishman to win the literature prize since Winston Churchill in 1953. He said he was still elated Saturday, but tired by the steady stream of telephone calls from the media.

"My wife and I went out to dinner by ourselves last night just to get away from the telephone and enjoy a private celebration of our own. But I wouldn't describe it as a wildly exciting celebration," he said.

Golding told Milan's Corriere Della Sera newspaper that he had mixed emotions about winning the award, as some English newspapers had reported.

"This certainly does not signify that I am indifferent to the honor. I have enough patriotism to feel proud to be the first Englishman to receive this prize in 30 years," he was quoted as saying.

Golding began writing stories at the age of 7, but didn't begin his professional writing career until he was 43, when his best-known novel, "Lord of the Flies," was published. It has sold 4.5 million copies, 3.5 million outside Britain.

Show's winners announced Friday

The winners in Midland Arts Association's third annual "Juried Art Exhibition" were announced Friday night during the exhibit's opening reception in the McCormick Gallery at Midland College.

The following were $250 award winners:

— Keith Chambers, for his pencil "Outside the Cantina;"

— David Hyatt for his photograph "Down to the Wire;"

— Jane Becker Lunson for her drawing "A Biography;"

— Nancy Neeley for her weaving "Cochiti I;"

— Pam Price for her mixed media work "Star Pack;"

— Ruth Hill Radcliffe for her drawing "A Passing Fancy;"

— and Ted Rose for his painting "December."

Honorable mentions went to M. Andrews for her photo "Red Rabbit;" Paula Babb Cox for her mixed media work "Lolita;" Suzy Ervin for her ceramic piece "Big Pot;" Deborah Hamilton for her drawing "Reflections Gone Astray;" M. Jurras Mayberry for her drawing "Random Occurances;" Jean Posey for her fiber work "Kaleidoscopic;" and Warren Taylor for his watercolor "Par-du-Calais."

Juror for the show was John Palmer Leeper, director of McNay Art Museum, San Antonio. The exhibit will hang in the McCormick Gallery through Oct. 28.

Can Reynolds, Pryor top Laurel and Hardy?

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Laurel and Hardy. Reynolds and Pryor?

Burt Reynolds and Richard Pryor will star in a remake of the famous comic duo's two-reel film, "The Music Box."

Warner Bros. has acquired the rights to the film, which won an Academy Award in 1932 as best short film, from Hal Roach Studios.

Blake Edwards will write and direct the movie, which will go into production in February.

Movie studios go after pirates

By MEG SPRATT
Hearst Feature Service

The folks in Grass Valley don't have much to do on the weekends. Two small movie theaters and a bowling alley provide some entertainment. Until recently many effects of the communications revolution hadn't reached the little Northern California community.

But three years ago, the owner of a small electronics store decided to change that. Joe Hallawell set up a satellite dish, began intercepting cable television transmissions, taped some movies and formed a tape-sharing club.

The folks in Grass Valley call it fun, but the folks in Hollywood call it video piracy — and they say it's costing them money.

Earlier this week, eight movie studio giants filed suit against Hallawell and his company, the CBSS Video Tape Club, claiming that he was stealing their copyrighted movies and taking away hard-earned profits.

But this latest move in the war against video pirates — who also are opposed by satellite TV companies and video retailers, both of whom complain of revenue losses — has left some residents in the small, rural town baffled.

Hallawell, who taped about 300 movies and charged members an initial membership fee plus monthly dues, explained "It's a non-profit, sharing thing" for the people "out in the boondocks."

"We pool our money to copy the tapes for our own use," he said.

Most of the tapes, he added, were copied from television signals picked up by a 12-foot satellite dish, although some were made at home by members with video recorders.

The club has occasional meetings to discuss what movies they would like to tape, and Hallawell sends newsletters to the 50 members. "It's a friendly operation," he said.

The suit "astounded" the club's members, who "felt they were personally violated," Hallawell added.

Spokesmen for the studios pressing the suit, including Paramount, MGM-UA, Walt Disney Productions and Warner Bros., say they are simply standing up for their rights.

The issue, Beverly Hills attorney Dorothy Wolpert says, is copyright infringement. Wolpert, who represents the studios, said they have proof the tapes were copied illegally, including sworn testimony of a club member and a copy of club rules.

Officials at the Motion Picture Association of America, to which all the studios belong, say the suit is only one step in an eight-year-long campaign against piracy.

Richard Bloeser, director of film security for the MPAA, said the suit is justified. Although home use of the satellite dish is relatively new, Bloeser says video piracy has been going on for years, and must be stopped. The worldwide cost to the motion picture industry can run up to $1 billion a year, he said.

MCT to hold 'Arsenic' auditions

Auditions for Midland Community Theatre's production of "Arsenic and Old Lace" will be held Oct. 23 and 24 at 7:30 p.m. in the Redfern Room at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

"Arsenic and Old Lace" is a 1941 American comedy classic which follows the antics of two old ladies who've murdered 12 elderly men in their effort to help them to a better life.

Roles are available for 11 men and three women. The production will be directed by Don Bachmann, MCT's executive director.

Thouvenel Quartet to begin music series

The Thouvenel String Quartet will begin its 1983-84 Chamber Music Series Saturday at 8 p.m. in the Allison Fine Arts Auditorium at Midland College.

During the past six months, the quartet has performed on the NBC Today Show, in two concerts at the San Antonio Festival, one performance at Carnegie Recital Hall in New York and a concert, presented by the Argentine Embassy in honor of the composer Alberto Ginastera, at the 92nd Street YMCA Concert Hall in New York City.

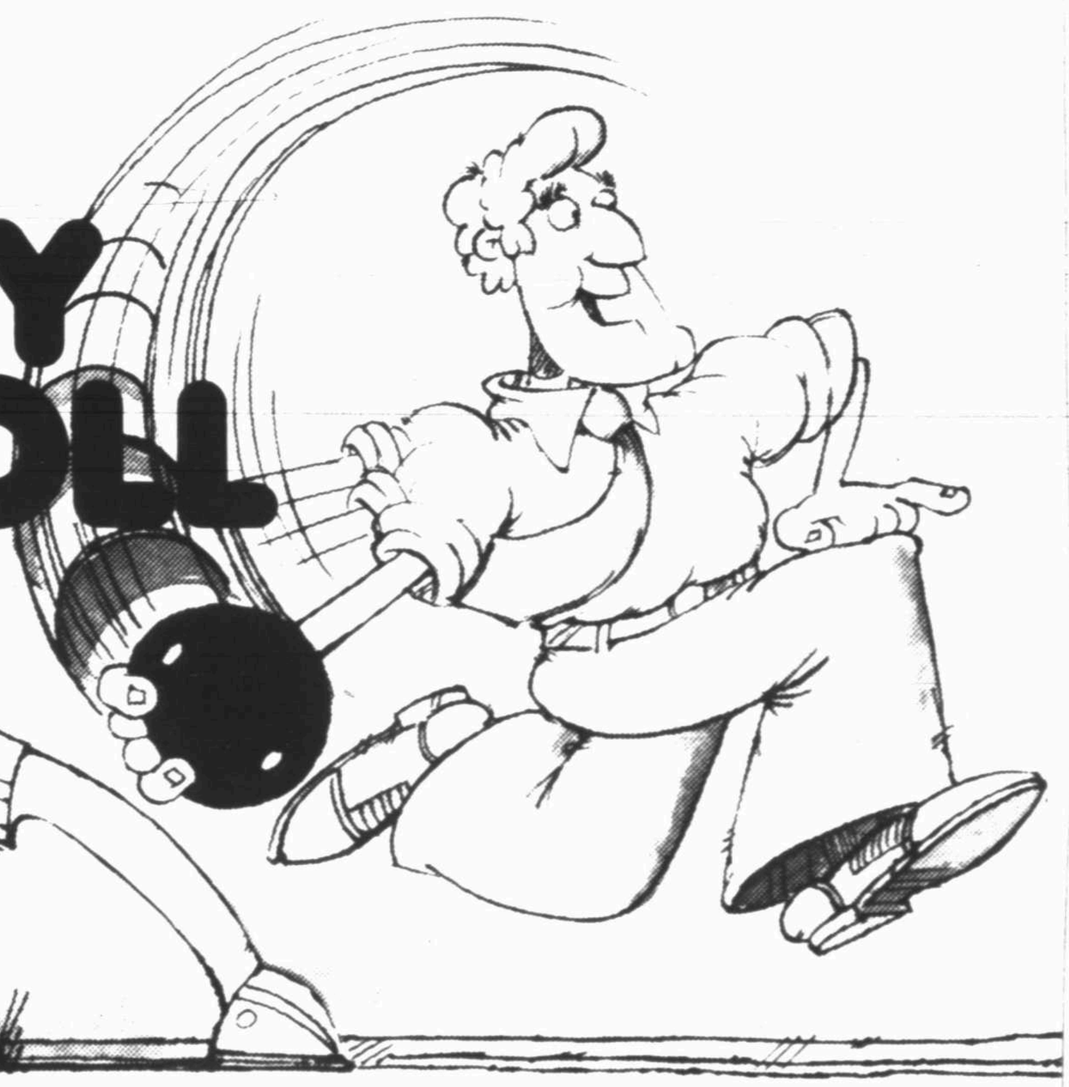

Over the summer, the quartet was featured in the June issue of Texas Monthly and recorded two works in Los Angeles for release in 1984.

Members of the Thouvenel are Eugene Purdue and Edmund Stein, violin; Sally Chisholm, viola; and Jeffrey Levenson, cello.

Season tickets are available by calling the Midland-Odessa Symphony, 563-0921, or they may be purchased at the door. Season ticket prices are $20 for adults and $10 for students and senior citizens. Single admission tickets are available at the door.

POSITIVE THINKING

Be philosophical, optimistic about life

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

A vice president of a large industrial company not long ago organized what he calls his "Coronary Club." The membership rules say "Make your job a hard job — take your office work home evenings, Saturdays, Sundays, holidays...accept all invitations to banquets, meetings and committees."

The regulations of the "Coronary Club" also enjoin the member to regard "fishing, hunting, golf, bowling, billiards, gardening as a waste of time and money;" forbid him to "take all the vacation allowed;" and insist that he "work all day and drive all night to keep an appointment the next morning." No sure way to have a heart attack is overlooked by the "Coronary Club."

On the other hand, a medical school faculty member, outlined a prescription to protect his doctor students against early heart attacks.

He recommended:

1. One less hour of worry for one more hour of laughter.
2. One less week of high-pressure living for one more week of restful vacation.
3. One less luncheon conference for one more midday period of relaxation.
4. One less evening of a social event for one more evening with a good book.
5. One less hour under the electric light for one more hour in the sunshine.
6. One less hour in the automobile for one more hour jogging or walking on foot.

Every businessman would do well to clip this prescription and put it under the glass of his desk top or in his wallet as a constant reminder. As Dr. Arnold A. Hutschnecker pointed out in his book, "The Will to Live," too many people devote the first half of their lives to making money, only to spend it in the second half getting their health back.

But perhaps the most important prescription of all for those who want to live to a ripe old age was that of Sara M. Jordan, longtime director of the gastroenterology department as Boston's famous Lahey Clinic: "That man is blessed who has a philosophical and optimistic outlook on life. But even the born pessimist and mental defeatist can change his spots. I have seen it happen often in patients who learn by teaching or experience the value of optimism and philosophy in guarding against their disease."

There was a wonderful old man, an inspiring friend of mine, who had learned this lesson well. At ninety-three, he needed no glasses and stood straight as a ramrod. Formerly an American ambassador, he liked to spend his time working with his hands — carpentry was his hobby. "There is more trouble avoided," he said, "by working with your hands than any other way except praying." He did both. As a result of this sound philosophy, he lived with health and vigor until 96 years of age.

It would be pretty smart to make his formula your own. Learn to take it easy, find time for relaxation, and cultivate an optimistic outlook. Take advantage of the quieting and relaxing effect of your religious faith — it can assist you in having good health and strength. Your health, according to psychologists, is largely determined by focusing your attention upon the things which make for mental happiness. Find this happiness — and you will find health and a ripe old age.

Sexist robot exhibited at art show

HAYWARD, Calif. (AP) — A buxom, coffee-pouring robot that was kicked out of a science museum after complaints of sexism has been put on display at a California State University art show.

"Sweetheart," the robot built by Hayward State art professor Clayton Bailey, had been part of the "Rendezvous With Robots" exhibit at the Lawrence Hall of Science in Berkeley, a part of the University of California.

But the tutu-wearing robot, which makes coffee, was removed from the hall Oct. 1.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Most women will experience hot flashes

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am in my forties and I'm beginning to think about the menopause and the hot flashes that I remember hearing my mother talk about. Is this something that all women get, or is it only those (like my mother) who have a vivid imagination? — Mrs. K.D., Austin, Texas

Dear Mrs. D.: Hot flashes are real; they are not the product of a woman's imagination. It is estimated that up to 75 percent of women will experience hot flashes; most will continue to have the symptoms for longer than one year, and many will have it for more than five years. However, the hot flashes seem to decrease in frequency with the passage of time, and eventually disappear in the large majority of women.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My nephew is being seen by a psychiatrist. My sister (his mother) tells me he has been depressed ever since his father died. But I recently spent two weeks with them and, while the youngster does appear to be downcast, it doesn't seem to have affected his sleep. He would go to bed fairly early and apparently slept through the night. Isn't this unusual for someone who is depressed? — Mrs. Y.R., Queens, N.Y.

Dear Mrs. R.: There is some evidence that depressin does not have the same effect on a child's sleep as it does on an adult's. The findings in one Canadian study of 12 depressed chilren showed no difference in their sleep behavior when compared with that of a control group.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Would you recommend swimming for a person with scoliosis? She is otherwise in good health and was always quite active. — Grace, Dover, N.J.

Dear Grace: I would recommend swimming as an activity for everyone for whom it is not contraindicated. It is an activity that can be beneficial for almost everyone, regardless of age or general physical condition. Even quite obese persons can profit from a swimming program.

However, according to a physical therapist who has studied and treated scoliosis patients, swimming does not involve the specific kind of stretching and strengthening exercises required by patients with scoliosis.

Dear Dr. Solomon: There have been times when I have shopped for some non-prescription medication and I found that it came in a cream or an ointment. I always thought that a cream and an ointment were the same thing. If there is a difference, what is it? — Florence, Midland, Texas

Dear Florence: A cream is an emulsion of oil in water, and an ointment is a mixture of water in oil. With a cream, water is the primary component; with an ointment, oil is the primary component. Therefore, ointments feel greasier when they are applied to the body.

Tentative contract reached

From Wire Reports

Striking teachers reached a tentative contract settlement Saturday with the Oakland, Calif., schools after the mayor stepped in and met with union leaders. Both sides pledged to return to the classroom Monday after a four-day walkout that affected 49,000 students.

Meanwhile, public school officials in Chicago and bargainers for 27,000 teachers agreed to sit down with each other at 2 p.m. Sunday to work at settling a strike over pay that has closed the nation's third-largest school district for a week.

The agreement in Oakland came at 1:10 a.m. after 34 hours of nonstop bargaining with the help of a state labor mediator.

The key to the agreement was the intercession of Mayor Lionel Wilson, said Ned Hopkins of the California Teachers Association. Hopkins said things started moving after Wilson met with union president Roger Gooden and executive director Hal Boyd of the striking Oakland Education Association.

No details of the settlement were released, pending a ratification vote Sunday.

However, the Oakland Tribune, quoting an unidentified source, said the district offered a 6 percent pay raise beginning Nov. 1 and a 2 percent raise in April. The source said there would be another 6 percent raise next July, depending on how much money the schools get from the state.

The district earlier offered a pay raise of 5.5 percent.

Apprehension of aliens up in Marfa area

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

MARFA — In the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, an unprecedented million-plus illegal aliens were apprehended by the U.S. Border Patrol.

More than 200,000 were captured in the El Paso Sector alone. Another 83,727 were picked up in the Del Rio Sector. And 20,800 were caught in the Marfa Sector, which includes the Midland area.

It's a situation which worries Marfa Sector Chief Hugh Rushton.

"It's important for the people of the United States to realize the nation is facing a grave immigration problem, and that we're going to have to formulate some solution," he said.

The 22-year Border Patrol veteran added that while he has "empathy for these poor people," the nation must draw a line at some point to halt the deluge.

"We don't have to have a fence to keep people from leaving, and we should all be thankful that we live in a country like that. But we must ensure that the country remains as attractive and beneficial to us all," he said. "We have a right to determine our destiny, as far as controlling our own border and determining who comes into our country. Somewhere, somehow, along the way, we are going to have to start on our program of controlled immigration."

Rushton noted "there is a recognition by our politicians now that there is a problem and that it should be addressed, but whether we'll see anything in legislation, I'm not sure."

The Simpson-Mazzoli Bill, which encompasses far-reaching reforms in immigration law, has passed the Senate and is in a House committee. If passed into law, it would legalize some aliens already in the country, increase appropriations and manpower for the Border Patrol, and make it a crime for an employer knowingly to hire an illegal alien.

Rushton noted that sanctions against employers, while controversial, "would reduce the incentive for (aliens) to come here. But you'll still have those hungry people over there. As long as you have those conditions over there it's going to be a problem that's not going to be solved by legislation alone.... The problem that drove these people into the United States is not going away."

That problem is in part an economic one, not only in Mexico but in Central America, from which more and more illegal aliens are originating. Devaluation of the peso in Mexico has been a prime reason for the 1983 flood of immigrants, and an anticipated further devaluation by the end of the year may unleash even greater numbers.

"I think that we're going to be dealing with this problem for the unforeseen future," said Rushton. "Part of the problem is simply the population explosion to the south of the United States. It's going to continue to push people into other areas where they will be able to find a way to make a living. And until governments of those other countries take care of their populations we're going to see this continue."

To cope with the situation, the United States has but 2,200 border patrolmen, said Rushton. About 125 of those are stationed in the Marfa Sector, in which apprehensions were up 3 percent while alien smuggling arrests were down 35 percent.

"That's attributable to vacancies of personnel who normally would have been in the anti-smuggling program," said Rushton.

Border patrolmen in the Marfa Sector experienced 21 armed encounters, most of them involving firearms.

"We quite often encounter a person who has a concealed weapon on him," said the sector chief. "It seems to be more prevalent now days that illegal aliens are carrying weapons of some sort. The ones we consider the dangerous encounters would probably be the narcotics smugglers, and then the alien smugglers after that. We're fortunate that we haven't had any injuries since a year ago in August."

The greatest ally of patrolmen in the Marfa Sector is the very nature of the region, situated as it is in the midst of the Chihuahuan Desert, he noted.

"The very rugged and rough terrain (aliens) would have to cross in the immediate area in the Marfa Sector always will be a limiting factor," he said. "Also, there's no large population center across in the Marfa sector that would be a hub."

One indication of the hopelessness which reigns south of the border, said Rushton, is reflected in the repatriation program. Designed to return an illegal alien to his homeland at U.S. cost if he agrees, the program has failed to make an appreciable difference in the Marfa Sector because almost all apprehended aliens opt to be released directly across the Rio Grande.

"I thing this points out the desperation these people feel," said Rushton. "They think they have no reason for going back there and the only hope these people have is to stay here in the United States."

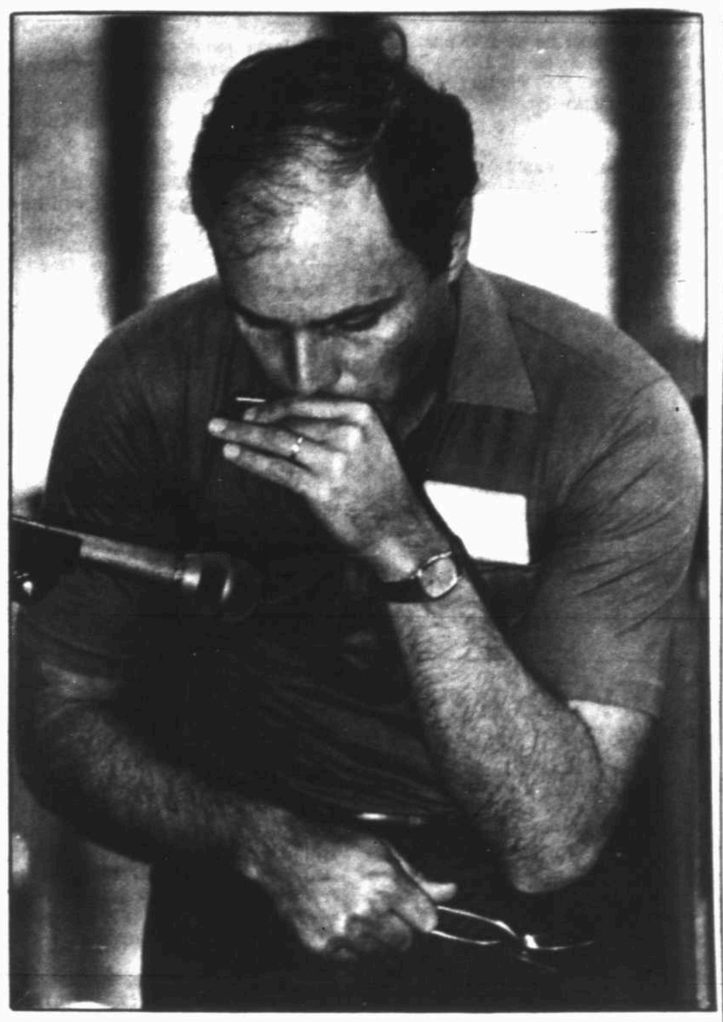

Note-able

David Holt, right, Texas' answer to folk music and bluegrass, taps spoons and blows the harmonica in one demonstration Saturday as area music teachers, above, try to recreate his rhythm. A paper bag, like the one at left, can become a musical instrument, says Holt. He also uses much of his body to make music, including the cheeks, elbows, forearms, fingers, palms, thighs, knuckles and feet.

His music is 'instrumental'

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Where can you find a roomful of adults hitting paper bags and playing with spoons? Only at a workshop for music teachers lead by Texas' answer to folk music and blue grass, David Holt.

Holt, born and raised in Texas, is old-time mountain music personified. He plays more than a dozen instruments — as well as such unlikely music-makers as bones and paper bags — while he entertains his audiences with music, jokes and stories.

Using hambone rhythms he can play his entire body like an instrument — utilizing cheeks, chest, elbows, forearms, fingers, palms, thighs, knuckles, knees and feet — each making a sound all its own.

Holt has performed on the Grand Ole Opry as well as in Nepal, India, Thailand, Burma, Bolivia and Columbia. He has a weekly program on the Nashville Network called "Fire on the Mountain" and has appeared on all three networks as well as the Public Broadcasting System.

During the Saturday morning workshop at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin, Holt's listeners were kept busy playing the spoons and paper bags, learning hambone rhythms and clog dancing, absorbing his storytelling techniques and singing folk songs.

He began by showing the 60 teachers how to hold and play two teaspoons. Soon the entire audience was clacking away like runaway horses on cobblestone, learning the various sounds produced by different techniques. Like the children they would soon be teaching, they continued to play even after Holt had stopped and was trying to speak.

"The spoons can be a highly irritating instrument," he said half-jokingly.

While it was all most could do to keep pace with the various rhythms, Holt was able to play the harmonica and spoons at the same time.

"Like any folk instrument, it's something you diddle around with a little each day. And the more you practice, the better you'll get," he said, demonstrating how the spoons could be raked across the fingers to imitate a drum roll.

More rhythms were tried as he brought out a banjo and then a squeeze box.

Finished with the new-fangled gadgets, they moved on to the basics — finger-snapping, hand clapping, palm-slapping hambone rhythms. He demonstrated various sounds produced by thumping different parts of the body different ways, right down to the "clam clap" in which he clicked his fingernails together. As the teachers slapped thighs, hands and chests in a desperate attempt to keep up he giggled. "You really look ridiculous."

They began inventing rhythms for songs, sentences, even their names, and then combined different rhythms.

Next they tackled paper bags. Smacking the sides of the bags with their fingers they sounded like so many snare drums. Different-sized bags produced different "notes," and once again Holt was able to combine the harmonica and the bags to create his own unique music.

Moving on to the cheeks, and rather resembling a fish, Holt played a convincing if astounding version of "Turkey in the Straw." And, with a few shakes of the wrist, he duplicated the spoon rhthyms on a new medium — bones. "I came from five generations of Texas bone players," he boasted.

He entranced the audience with folk stories accompanied by music, songs and sound effects. And the teachers eagerly joined in the sing-along. After giving everyone a change to make up a story drawn from personal experiences, he continued to the most difficult part of the workshop.

Clogging is a combination of tap-dancing and doing hambone rhythms with the feet, to the accompaniment of mountain music on the banjo. With everyone in a large circle he proceeded to demonstrate the toe-tapping, heel-stomping dance technique.

At the end of the workshop the teachers, proud of their new-found rhythmic talents, left smiling — if slightly bruised.

Counties 'draw' for TWC hearing

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The legal battle over the use of Monahans Draw will be fired up again Nov. 28 when Midland County gets its "first rattle in the box" in a hearing before a Texas Water Commission (TWC) examiner in Austin.

"That will be our first rattle in the box when we go back," said Ted Kerr. He is the Midland lawyer waving the county's banner in a dispute over Odessa discharging treated wastewater into the draw.

The city and county of Midland are arguing against the TWC renewing Odessa's two permits to drain its effluent into the draw. The Midland faction contends the discharge is polluting the fresh water zones, ruining agricultural and homesteading land and occasionally washing out roads.

Odessa says otherwise and demands proof, which Midland plans to tender in late November. During two previous hearings — in July at Odessa and in September at Austin — Odessa presented its case for getting the permits renewed.

"We'll be putting on evidence on how, when and where we collected the water samples (along the draw)," Kerr said. Among those testifying will be Midland father-son hydrologists, Ed and Joe Reed.

Midland is suggesting that Odessa use the water for irrigation rather than discharging it down the draw. Odessa says its effluent is cleaned up, doesn't damage fresh-water zones and is fit for cattle to drink.

ODESSA, HOWEVER, is adamant. "Odessa takes the position it is not seeking an irrigation permit," noted Kerr. "They are seeking to dump the water in the draw," which cuts eastwardly through Midland County and south of the city into Midland's extra-territorial jurisdiction (ETJ).

In the Austin hearing, there has been some consideration for recycling the water through tertiary treatment. But, said Kerr, that clean-water treatment is "an extremely expensive way to go." The city of El Paso, he said, treats wastewater beyond tertiary and returns it to the aquifers for re-use.

In its permit applications, Odessa is seeking to dump a maximium of 22.5 million gallons of wastewater per day into the draw from its older South Dixie Water Reclamation Plant in Odessa and its new East Water Reclamation plants in far west Midland County.

DPS deals with changes in traffic laws, their enforcement

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

When Lt. Wesley Johnson and Capt. Julian Whitley worked together at Houston's Department of Public Safety about 20 years ago, they were two of four troopers assigned to handle more than 200 customers.

Actually, the lines stretched longer, but only 200 of the persons, some of whom had slept in sleeping bags overnight to get a place in line, were given a chance for renewing or acquiring their drivers licenses.

"We might have to turn away 400 others," said Johnson, who works in Midland's DPS license and weight service. "It was crazy."

"They'd have pictures in the Houston paper of people stretched all the way around two blocks," agreed Whitley, who still works in the drivers license service in Midland's DPS. "Drivers licenses then were pretty simple, too. They'd have only 20 questions and a six to eight minute driving test."

TESTS TODAY are 40 questions long and require a 15-minute driving test, Whitley said.

Things have changed since then, including several of the laws that went into effect Sept. 1, and more that will follow Jan. 1, 1984. The men reviewed those changes at the 24th annual conference of the West Texas Justices of the Peace and Constables Association here this weekend.

According to Whitley, amendments and additions to traffic rules pertaining to bicycles have changed. Under the new legislation, bicycles are defined as vehicles.

In Senate Bill 843, effective Jan. 1, 1984, provisions state a person riding a bicycle slower than the speed of other traffic shall ride as near to the right curb or edge of the road except when passing another vehicle, preparing for a left turn, or the conditions of the road make it unsafe.

Also, bicyclists may not ride more than two abreast except on paths or areas set aside exclusively for the use of bicycles.

The revisions state, "Persons riding two abreast shall not impede the normal and reasonable flow of traffic on the roadway. If persons are riding two abreast on a laned roadway, they must ride in a single lane."

"THE MAIN CHANGE has to do with impeding traffic," Whitley said. "Before, there was no regulation governing bicycles."

Drivers license address changes by mail, surrendering out-of-state licenses when acquiring Texas licenses and a new classification of the drivers license system also have been amended, according to Whitley.

Under House Bill 444, also effective Jan. 1, 1984, drivers licenses, identification or handicap certificate address changes may be handled by mail, although the method to be used has not been decided, Whitley said.

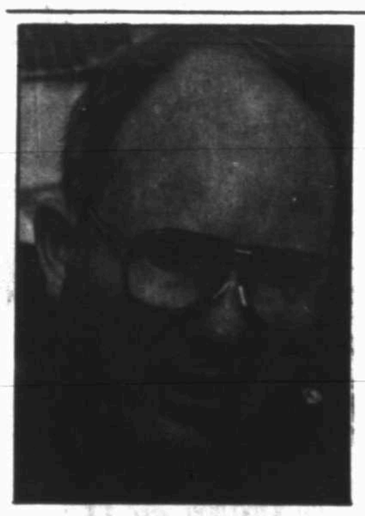

The previous law required changes of address to be made within 30 days at the DPS office for $1. The new law will allow changes of address to be mailed in for $3.

According to Major Ira Dees of the DPS, the new law probably will allow drivers licenses to be renewed by mail only if the person has a clean driving record for the past four years. While persons might be able to renew them by mail only every other four years, Dees said the process still should help cut down on the long lines at the DPS.

HB 1273 revises the drivers license by eliminating definitions such as operator, commercial operator and chauffer; defines gross weight as the actual weight of the vehicle plus net carrying capacity; and defines seating capacity, allowing one passenger for every 16 inches of seat, excluding the driver's seat.

Before HB 1273, persons with a drivers license from another state could retain it while receiving a Texas license. "That allowed some people to spread out all of their driving offenses over several states," Whitley said.

Troopers 'weighing' new limits

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

New weight, height and width limits and the authority of law officials to enforce those and other violations went into effect Sept. 1, Lt. Wesley Johnson of the Midland Department of Public Safety said at the West Texas Justices of the Peace and Constables Association's 24th annual conference this weekend.

Under House Bill 1571, DPS troopers and policemen can arrest violators and take them immediately to a judge.

Previously, Johnson said, out-of-state truckers sometimes would accept the ticket with no intention of paying it.

"The chances of that particular trooper catching the driver in his way back through the state were pretty remote," Johnson said. "This gives police officers the legal authority to make a standard arrest and take them before the judge."

Arrests can be made on the following:

— Offense mandating personal appearance, such as a driver refusing to sign a ticket;

— Moving violation which alone carries a suspension, such as a DWI, failure to stop and render aid, and driving under the influence of drugs;

DEATHS

Roy Yarbrough

Roy Yarbrough, 32, of 1409 S. Colorado St., died Friday in San Angelo after being injured in a car accident near that city.

Services will be at 1:30 p.m. Monday at Ellis Funeral Home chapel with the Rev. Bob Porterfield of the West Kentucky Baptist Church officiating. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park.

Yarbrough was born Sept. 21, 1951, in San Angelo and reared at Midland. He attended school here. He was a house mover.

Survivors include his mother, Euleta Yarbrough of Midland; and six brothers, Terry Wayne Yarbrough, Mike Yarbrough, Bobby Lee Yarbrough, Jimmy Yarbrough, Jackie Yarbrough and Alex Yarbrough, all of Midland.

Maurine Thomas

Services for Mrs. W.L. (Maurine) Thomas were Saturday at Thomas Funeral Home chapel. Burial was in Resthaven Memorial Park.

Pallbearers were John Davidson, Calvin Hubert, Lonnie Richardson, Manuel Munoz, Vic Dieringer, Marty Garcia, Bobby Garcia and Gilbert Melendez.

Honorary pallbearers were Judge Robert H. Pine, Dr. Gregory Bartha and James. L. Roberts.

Gladys Nelson

ODESSA — Gladys M. Nelson, 70, of Odessa and formerly of Midland, died Saturday in her home following a lengthy illness.

Services will be at 10 a.m. Tuesday in the Eisenhower Church of Christ in Odessa with ministers Loy Mitchell, Vernon Williams, and Don Carroll officiating. Burial will be in Andrews Cemetery, directed by Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home.

Mrs. Nelson was born Dec. 15, 1912, in Navarro County and was a longtime resident of the Midland-Odessa area. She was a member of the Eisenhower Church of Christ.

She was married to William L. Nelson on Nov. 12, 1932, in Corsicana.

Survivors include her husband; a son, L. Keith Nelson of Odessa; four brothers, Rube McKey of Quinlin, E.G. McKey of Texas City, Joe McKey of Tucumcari, N.M., and J.B. McKey of Bakersfield, Calif.; a sister, Nelma Lee Bennett of Quinlin; five grandchildren, and three great-grandchildren. A son, William K. Nelson, died in April 1981.

Changes in traffic laws outlined

THE LAW WILL require a person receiving a Texas drivers license to surrender all valid drivers licenses from other states. Follow-ups will be conducted through the national records to see if the person is licensed elsewhere, Whitley said.

Other changes include eliminating classifications such as operator, commercial operator and chauffeur. The new classifications will be as follows:

— Class A: permits driving of any vehicle or combination of vehicles except motorcycles or mopeds.

— Class B: permits driving a single vehicle with a gross weight exceeding 24,000 pounds or towing a vehicle with a gross weight that doesn't exceed 10,000 pounds or a farm trailer with a gross weight not exceeding 20,000 pounds; a bus; a vehicle included in Class C.

— Class C: permits driving a single two-axle vehicle with a gross weight not exceeding 24,000 pounds alone, or towing either a vehicle with a gross weight not exceeding 10,000 pounds or a farm vehicle with a gross weight not exceeding 20,000 pounds; and a bus with a seating capacity of less than 24 passengers.

— Class M: permits driving a motorcycle or moped.

— Class P: permits students in drivers education classes to drive.

Also under HB 1273, the DPS has the option of issuing licenses to persons possessing valid licenses from other states after they pass vision exams and paying fees and certifying other organizations to train and test drivers.

According to Whitley, bus companies and large trucking companies won't put unqualified drivers on the road. Therefore, the DPS can waive driving tests for applicants who've completed successful training and testing by the certified entities.

THE BILL ALSO changes references of 21 years old to 18 years old; the definition of motor asssisted bicycle to moped; the definition of motor driven cycles from 100 cc to not exceed 125 cc; provides for one fee of $10 and a standard of four years.

Occupational licenses, given to persons who have been convicted of felonies, are changed as of Jan. 1, 1984, under Senate Bill 24 to essential need licenses. They may be awarded when a person needs to operate a vehicle in the performance of an occupation or trade, transportation to or from an educational facility; in the performance of essential household duties.

Before the license is granted, the county or district judge will consider the driving record and any evidence presented at a hearing. If the applicant was convicted of DWI, involuntary manslaughter or criminally negligent homicide, the court must notify the attorney representing the state by certified mail of the petition and notice of hearing. The state's attorney may attend the hearing and present evidence against granting the petition.

The essential need license will have new restrictions including specific reason for travel. A certified copy of the court order must be carried with the driver at all times. Failure to do so will result in a Class C misdemeanor, and conviction will result in the terminaton of the license.

HARDSHIP LICENSES will be granted to persons 15 years and older if failure to do so will result in an unusual economic hardship on the applicant's family or the applicant is enrolled in a vocational education program and requires a license to pursue the program. Also, a hardship license will be granted if a member of the family is unable to drive due to sickness or illness. But a doctor's statement must be presented and the driver's license of the ill family member will be suspended.

"We hear all these sad stories," Whitley said of parents trying to get hardship licenses for their children. "So we say 'OK, but we'll have to take your license away.'

"We cure a lot of people," he added, with a grin, "we just don't get paid like doctors."

Troopers may now arrest offenders

— Violations of rules on equipment, inspection, parking or standing, size and weight, hazardous material, lease, registration or the Motor Carrier Act, which requires authorization from the Texas Railroad Commission to haul for hire.

Under Senate Bill 303, all of the above violations will be recorded on the person's driving record. But only the moving violation and offense mandating personal appearance can be used against the driver for suspension of license or insurance hikes, Johnson said.

"HB 691 gives cities the right to enforce the weight limit in cities with populations of 1.5 million or more," Johnson said, adding Houston is the only city in the state which falls in this category. Other cities may enforce the weight limits if a city ordinance has been passed. On state-maintained highways, the limits can be enforced.

The bill also changes fines for weight violations, previously $25-$200, to $100-$150 and allows the owner to be fined if he causes the driver to overload a truck by 15 percent or more.

"You have to prove he intended to overload it but the law comes back and says proof of intent is 15 percent or more added on," Johnson said. Agriculture commodities are exempt.

Other bills which change present laws include the following:

— House Bill 1966: Weight limits for solid wastes — defined as garbage, refuse, sludge from a waste treatment plant, water supply treatment plant or air pollution control facility, and other discarded material — 20,000 pounds on a single axle, 44,000 on a tandem axle and 64,000 on gross weight.

To receive the added benefits, Johnson said trucks must have a security bond posted with the highway department for damages.

"This came about mainly from industry in big metropolitan areas that have a lot of waste," Johnson said, "It will benefit the operator, make it more economical and feasible for them to do."

— HB 1601: The length of a truck-tractor used in combination with a trailer or semi-trailer is allowed 57 feet for the trailer or semi-trailer. There is no limit on the truck-tractor or the total of the combination.

When connecting a truck-tractor with two trailers or semi-trailers, each trailer is allowed 28½ feet. No overall length is specified for a three-unit combination. A truck coupled with a trailer or semi-trailer has an overall limit of 65 feet.

The length law applies in the city to truck-tractors and trailer or semi-trailers. It does not apply in the city to trucks pulling trailers or semi-trailers.

— HB 897: Eliminates all laws pertaining to mobile homes under the Operation of Vehicle Statutes Uniform Acts and Registration Law. No size or time of moving regulations apply to mobile homes if they are 8-feet wide or 40-feet long, or larger. Previously, mobile home sizes were regulated and oversized vehicles could be moved only during daylight. Mobile homes no longer fit the definition of vehicles.

— House Bill 1602: All public maintained roads, including city streets, must be 102-inches wide, according to the bill. This brings them in accordance with federal regulations, Johnson said.

Trucks carrying pollution material, such as sand, dirt or garbage, must be traveling 30 mph or faster to be in violation of the Anti-Spillage Law. Agriculture commodities are exempt.

Another change, according to Johnson, is in the height of cotton seed modules. Previously, modules could be only 13-feet, 6-inches high. The standard was increased to 14-feet, 6-inches, effective Sept. 1.

Workers claim OSHA hid report on fungus

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Several U.S. Occupational Safety and Health Administration workers claim that the agency may be guilty of hyprocrisy, accusing officials of hiding a report on health problems at its Fort Worth office.

Six current or former OSHA employees told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram Friday that the agency hid from them a 1982 medical report showing that OSHA's former Fort Worth office was contaminated by a fungus associated with lung disease.

OSHA denies that it failed to protect its employees, but agency compliance officers said that a private business would have been cited and fined if it had acted similarly.

The report was not released to OSHA employees, and the recommendations for c orrelating laboratory results with employee blood samples were not followed, employees and regional OSHA officials said. Two of the fungi have been linked to hypersensitivity lung disease.

"Here we are an agency to protect people, and we don't even protect our own workers," said Gerald Forrester, an OSHA health and safety compliance specialist. "That's what has people up in arms, that they hid it from us."

Some former or current employees questioned the effects of the contaminants on their health. A former secretary suffering from a malignant brain tumors aid she submitted the findings to her physician to determine where they are related to the contamination.

But Dean Wingo, industrial hygienist in OSHA's Dallas regional office said he conducted private interviews with each exposed employee and said other officials went even further.

"I think I told them as much as I knew about it at the time," he said.

The employees also were given questionnaires asking them to list any symptoms they might have and were given forms on which to file worker's compensation claims, Wingo said. The ventilating system in the office was disinfected, but the OSHA office was later closed and consolidated with the Dallas-area office.

But Wingo said he was not aware that Dr. Jordan Fink, who was hired by the government to analyze dust samples from the office, had reccomended tha blood tests be given to the employees.

Fink found that nearly all the 17 dust samples taken from the office contained thermophilic actinomycete — organisms "proven to be associated with hypersensitivity lung disease of one form or another."

TWC hearing set on Monahans Draw dispute

Since the mid-1970s, Midland County has been on one side of a tug-of-war with Odessa about the draw. This year the city of Midland joined the county in contesting Odessa's permits.

The city expressed concern over health hazards — via mosquitoes and polluted waters — caused by Odessa's use of the draw.

Since 1980, when the Midland County Commissioners' Court threatened to sue Odessa and seek a court injunction to prevent dumping into the draw, Midland County has spent about $124,000 in legal fees and in hydrological studies on the draw. Of the sum, $32,000 represents legal fees, said Midland County Auditor Johnnie Thompson.

Odessa claims that Midland's contesting its permits is costing that city about $100,000 in legal fees and other expenses.

IN 1977, THE OLD Texas Water Quality Board (now, the Texas Water Commission) approved Odessa's requests to increase discharges into the draw.

Midland County Commissioner Win Brown, who was in Austin to protest Odessa's permit requests in 1977, noted that Midland County "really didn't have much evidence" to combat the requests. "Odessa did its homework very well," he said.

"I was asked one question," Brown recalled, "and it was not even relevant." Brown contends the old board's decision to grant Odessa its request "was already decided before" the hearing. "It was railroaded — a payoff. They (the board) did not listen to the evidence."

Brown declined to even estimate the damage Odessa's effluent has caused along the draw and to the fresh water zones.

"If you look at it from the perspective of buying a place along the draw and drilling for good, clean, fresh water, forget it."

The high nitrate levels in the water wells, allegedly polluted by Odessa's effluent, along the draw "far exceed the state's maximum," he said.

He cited damage to the agricultural and homesteading land, its contamination of the fresh water zones and health hazards presented by mosquitoes.

"There is still the mosquito problem, even during this dad-gum drought," Brown said.

If Odessa "would get off their duff" and use the effluent as irrigation water, then the problems with mosquitoes and fresh-water zones would be headed toward solution, he suggested.

BROWN NOTED the city of Midland "can't run (waste) water down its own (Midland) draw and never had a permit to do so." Midland's TWC permit allows using the effluent for irrigating crop land. To be consistent, the TWC should not renew Odessa's permits, he said.

"If the commission renews the (Odessa) permits, ol' Win Brown is going to be most unhappy."

Brown, who said he plans to attend the next month's hearings, missed the September sessions.

"We (county commissioners) should have been down there or at least one representative of the court. I didn't know about it until I heard it on the news," the commissioner said. "That's just a cocklebur under the blanket." Brown attended the first hearing in Odessa.

So did Commissioner C. DeWayne Davis, who expressed disappointment over not getting in on the September hearing. None of the commissioners — Brown, Davis, C. Wallace "Wally" Craig or Durward Wright — was there.

"We were deprived of the hearing," Davis said. "I think it was an irresponsible gesture that we were not notified of the hearing."

Following the three preliminary hearings before TWC hearing examiner Kaylene Ray, the testimony and findings will be presented to the three-member board, which is made up of Felix McDonald, Lee Biggart and John Stover. Later, the TWC will hold a formal hearing and announce its decision to grant or deny Odessa's permits and to suggest alternatives.

Woman finds bones in yard

Midland County sheriff's deputies are turning bones dug up in a backyard Saturday over to a pathologist to determine if they are human.

A woman in far west Midland County found the bones as she was digging to work on a plumbing problem, according to the Midland County Sheriff's Office.

The bones were located near the Old Bankhead Highway at County Roads 1308 and 123 just east of Odessa.

Odessan woman charged with solicitation of murder

ODESSA — A 28-year-old Odessa woman, Diane Celeste Alford, has been charged with solicitation of capital murder.

She had contacted what she supposed to be a "hit man" to kill her husband, said a spokesman for the Ector County Sheriff's Office. But the man she initially contacted told another, who in turn told sheriff's officials. Her initial contact has been "very cooperative," the spokesman said.

Mrs. Alford was released under a $25,000 bailbond Friday night.

"I believe that (divorce) is his intent now," the spokesman said of the husband.

Solicitation of capital murder, a first-degree felony, carries a penalty from five to 99 years to life in prison.

Coloradan to run to Dallas

DENVER (AP) — A Louisville, Colo. runner who says she hopes to encourage people to "believe in themselves" will begin a run from Denver to Dallas on Sunday.

Viisha Sedlak, 35, says the run, which she expects to take about a month, is designed to encourage people "to take care of themselves, however they can do it.

"Running isn't for everyone, but fitness is," said Ms. Sedlak, who said she has been running for seven years.

Saturday, Ms. Sedlak made an 18-mile warm-up jog from Boulder to Westminster. She said she will set out on her Denver-to-Dallas run Sunday from the steps of Denver's City and County Building, where she expects to receive a pro-fitness statement from Denver Mayor Federico Pena for her to deliver to the mayor of Dallas.

"I believe in people. I believe in their potential and see that sometimes they don't believe in themselves," she said. "I find that my running inspires people."

Governor appoints Midland women

AUSTIN — Two Midland women and an Odessa man were named to state commissions Friday by Gov. Mark White.

Lois Carpenter, 46, was named to the Juvenile Probation Commission for a term ending Aug. 31, 1987.

Mrs. Carpenter is a graduate of Principia College, Elsah, Ill., and is president of the League of Women Voters of Texas. She also is vice president of the Texas Coalition for Juvenile Justice in Dallas.

Patsy Bohannon was named to the Real Estate Advisory Committee for a term ending Jan. 31, 1989. This is a re-appointment.

Mrs. Bohannon, 51, is a director of the National Association of Realtors and regional vice president of the Texas Association of Realtors.

BY DON HARVEY

INHERITING REAL ESTATE

The tax law gives special benefits to persons inheriting real estate. Unfortunately, to take advantage of this tax break, someone has to die - a rather extreme action!

The general rule is that a person inheriting property receives it at its fair market value on the date of the decedent's death. All untaxed capital gains are forgotten.

For example, suppose you inherit some land worth $100,000. The decedent paid only $10,000 for it years ago. If he had sold it the day before he died, he would have owed capital gain tax on the $90,000 profit. But that potential capital gain is forgotten upon death. If you sell the inherited property for $100,000, you owe no profit tax since your basis is the $100,000 fair market value on the day the decedent died.

In the case of joint tenancy property received by a surviving joint tenant, this stepped-up basis rule applies only to the portion received from the decedent.

making the grade

The Texas Tech University Music Department has announced three Midlanders are scholarship recipients for the 1983-84 year. They are juniors Stacy Lewis and Eddie Pleasant and freshman Robert Rumbelow.

Miss Lewis, a music education major studying flute, has been awarded a Music Scholarship. Pleasant, a vocal performance major, has received the Hewitt Vocal Scholarship. Rumbelow, a piano performance major, is the recipient of a Piano Scholarship and a Marching Band Scholarship in trumpet.

THE MIDLAND Texas-Exes Club, consisting of local alumni from the University of Texas at Austin, has awarded scholarships to two Midland students. They are Jill Steward, 4403 Lanham, in computer science; and Emily Goodfellow, 2512 Sinclair, in petroleum land management.

THE UNIVERSITY of Texas at Austin has released a list of summer session graduates who received bachelor of arts degrees in architectural studies. Those from Midland include Barbara Koonce, 3801 Suncreast, John Nichols of Midland and Jeffrey Rea, 1206 Community Lane. Mary Hall of Big Spring was also awarded a degree.

WINIFRED WALKER, a graduate of Midland High School and Texas Tech University, received her master of arts degree in child development from San Francisco State University. She is the daughter of John and Frances Walker. Miss Walker teaches homemaking at Union High School in Etna, Calif.

Adams

Jouette

Madonna

Barnes

THE MIDLAND Downtown Rotary Club recently recognized two Midland High School seniors at its weekly meeting. Thomas Madonna, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Madonna, 2000 Neely, is treasurer of the National Honor Society, a member of the student council president's cabinet and was appointed to Boy's State. He is also active in Junior Achievement and the Latin Club and has won academic letters and merit academic awards.

Michlene Barnes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Scott Barnes, 2811 W. Louisiana Street, is treasurer of the German Club, foreign exchange chairman student council and was formerly a member of the student council president's cabinet. She is involved in varsity volleyball, Westminister English Handbells, National Honor Society and has received academic letters and German competition awards.

Also recognized recently, but whose pictures were omitted last week, were Jack Jouette and Brenda Adams. Both are seniors at Midland High.

Merriman

DENISE MERRIMAN, a senior at Lee High School, was recently elected president of the local chapter of Health Occupation Students of America. Members work as dental or medical assistants.

AREA STUDENTS named to the A Honor Roll at Odessa College first summer session were John Turpin of Midland, Peggy Piper and Connie Schulenberg of Andrews and Jo Napier of Crane. Turpin was also named to the A Honor Roll for the second summer session, as was Cynthia Cavett of Andrews.

Students on the A Honor Roll must have a 4.0 grade point average.

TEXAS STATE Technical Institute in Sweetwater has released a list of local honor students for the summer quarter. Robert Gaston, son of Kenneth Gaston of Midland, was named to the President's Honor Roll. He maintained a 4.0 grade point average to qualify.

Kevin Conder, son of Sue Conder of Midland, and Gary Fikes, son of Chestor Fikes of Midland, made the Vice-president's Honor Roll. They maintained at least a 3.5 grade point average to qualify.

Ray

LEE HIGH senior Greg Ray was honored by the Midland Lions Club recently. His photograph was unintentionally omitted from last week's "Making the Grade."

DEVIN PHIFFER, son of Mr. and Mrs. Don Phiffer, 322 Tanglewood, was recently selected to receive the Youth Merit Award from Midland West Rotary. He is a senior at Lee High School.

Phiffer is active in drama, debate, varsity diving team, football, JETS, Key Club, Young Life, acting, National Forensic League and is currently vice president of the student council.

Phiffer

DOREEN McGOOKEY of Midland has been selected as a member of the 1983-84 Austin College Brass Ensemble. The sophomore is a member of the horn section of the ensemble.

"Making the Grade" features students who have received degrees, awards, scholarships or other honors. Items submitted should be delivered or mailed to Rhonda Rigenhagen at the Reporter-Telegram.

Wrong girl crowned homecoming queen

PACKWOOD, Iowa (AP) — Football captain Steve Dahlstrom still doesn't know how it happened. All he knows is that he was nervous.

"First I dropped the envelope," he said. "Then I picked it up and couldn't get it opened. But I knew who was queen anyway, so I thought it would be OK. Then I said the 1983 homecoming queen is — and the wrong name must have come out."

Thursday night, he realized he had crowned his second cousin, Mindy Shy. Dahlstrom, Principal Joe Morgan and a guidance counselor had to tell the girls the queen was really Carla Deutsch.

education in brief

Public School Week events scheduled through Friday

Midland Independent School District will celebrate Midland Public School Week Monday through Friday. Midlanders are invited to visit any and every school during the week.

Parents are encouraged to eat lunch with students at school. Most schools have designated a specific day for parents to lunch with their children, according to grade level. Parents who do not know what day to join their child for lunch should call the school's office.

A special flag raising ceremony will be at 10 a.m. Tuesday at Bonham Elementary featuring the Alamo Junior High Band. An open house will begin at 7:30 p.m.

Santa Rita will have an open house and dedications of the new facility at 7 p.m. Tuesday, followed by a balloon launch at 12:30 p.m. Thursday. Bowie will have a balloon launch at 10 a.m. Friday.

Open houses will be as follows: Bunche at 7 p.m. Monday, DeZavala at 7 p.m. Thursday, Henderson at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Houston at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Pease at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Sout at 7 p.m. Tuesday and Washington at 7 p.m. Thursday. Rusk will have an open house for kindergarten through first grade parents at 7 p.m. Monday, second through third grade parents Tuesday and fifth grade parents Thursday.

Midland Freshman High School will have an orientation of the new four-year plan for parents of its students. It will be at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

PTA meetings on calendar

Bowie, Long, Travis, Santa Rita and Henderson elementary schools will hold Parent-Teacher Association meetings this week. St. Ann's Parent-Teacher Organization will meet at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the school gymnasium. Students will demonstrate physical education activities and hold a wrestling exhibition.

Santa Rita PTA will meet at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the elementary school. Second graders are scheduled to perform.

A short initial unit meeting followed by an open house will be held at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at Henderson, 4800 Graceland. The purpose is to acquaint parents with their child's teacher and daily activities in the classroom. Members and non-members are urged to attend.

Bowie PTA will meet at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Long at 7 p.m. Thursday and sixth-grade students at Travis will perform at its PTA meeting 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Credit procedure changing

The Midland Independent School District has implemented a procedural change for extension of credit for school lunches. Under the new procedure, a student charging lunch receives a copy of the bill for his parents which requests payment the next day.

If a student accumulates two unpaid charges the parents will be notified by the principal. Except for unusual circumstances, a student will not be able to charge another lunch until the other two are paid.

Under no circumstances will a child be deprived of lunch. If a student's family is unable to pay because of financial hardship, the student may qualify for reduced-price or free lunches.

After parents have been notified of two unpaid charges, and in the event it is inappropriate to provide reduced-price lunch, free lunch or additional credit, the student will receive a peanut butter sandwich and milk at no charge. A student will receive this alternative after all other options have been exhausted and it is determined no other arrangement is possible.

MC offering short courses

Christmas decorating, defensive driving and microwave cooking II will be offered by the Midland College Department of Community Services beginning this week.

Decorating will be six Tuesdays from 7-9 p.m. It includes instruction on making decorations, ornaments, wall hangings and simple gifts. Fee is $18.

Defensive driving will be Monday and Tuesday and again Wednesday and Thursday from 6:30-10:30 p.m. Fee is $18.

The cooking class will meet Thursday from 6:30-9:30. It is a continuation of the beginning course and offers more detailed information on microwave performance. Fee is $8.

For further information call 684-7851, extensions 147 or 216.

Gardening courses slated

Midland high schools' vocational agriculture departments will sponsor an adult short course covering vegetable gardening, fruits and nuts and ornamental landscaping. It will begin 7 p.m. Monday in the vocational agriculture department at Lee High School and will conclude Thursday evening.

The course will be taught by John Williamson of Texas A&M. For additional information call 682-7367 or 694-2551.

PSAT exams to be given

The PSAT/NMSQT (Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test/National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test) will be given to juniors at Lee and Midland High schools Oct. 18 during the first three class periods.

Juniors must pre-register to take the test. During lunch hours Monday through Friday registration tables will be set up at both schools. The deadline is Oct. 14 at the end of lunch hour.

The $4.50 fee must be paid during pre-registration. Checks should be made payable to the high school. Students must have registration receipts when they take the test. Pre-registered students will be excused from classes the first three periods Oct. 18.

The PSAT/NMSQT can help students, parents and counselors plan beyond high school. It may also be used to estimate a student's performance on the College Board's Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT), which is required for admission to many colleges. It is also the qualifying test for entry into the nationwide scholarship competitions conducted by the National Merit Scholarship Corporation.

Oakland teachers reach settlement

By The Associated Press

Striking teachers reached a tentative contract settlement Saturday with the Oakland, Calif., schools after the mayor stepped in and met with union leaders. Both sides pledged to return to the classroom Monday after a four-day walkout that affected 49,000 students.

Meanwhile, public school officials in Chicago and bargainers for 27,000 teachers agreed to sit down with each other at 2 p.m. Sunday to work at settling a strike over pay that has closed the nation's third-largest school district for a week.

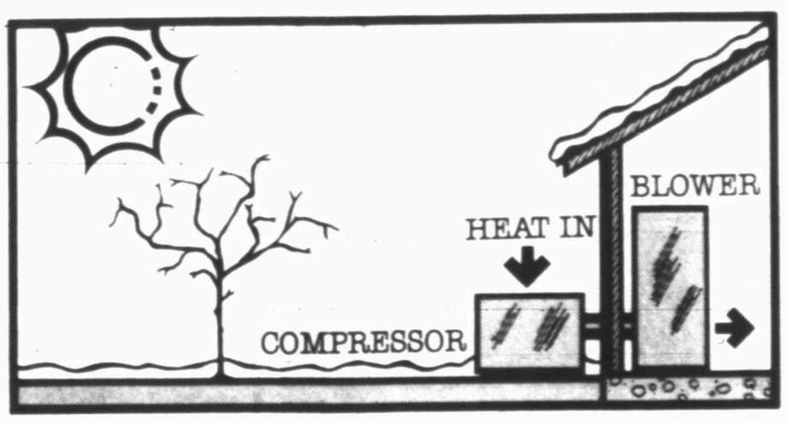

The agreement in Oakland came at 1:10 a.m. after 34 hours of nonstop bargaining with the help of a state labor mediator.

The key to the agreement was the intercession of Mayor Lionel Wilson, said Ned Hopkins of the California Teachers Association. Hopkins said things started moving after Wilson met with union president Roger Gooden and executive director Hal Boyd of the striking Oakland Education Association.

No details of the settlement were released, pending a ratification vote Sunday.

However, the Oakland Tribune, quoting an unidentified source, said the district offered a 6 percent pay raise beginning Nov. 1 and a 2 percent raise in April. The source said there would be another 6 percent raise next July, depending on how much money the schools get from the state.

Save energy with a heat pump.

If you're planning to install a new heating or cooling system, consider a high-efficiency heat pump. It's an energy-saving, year-round alternative.

The heat pump provides year-round heating and cooling, using only electricity. During the winter, it extracts heat from the outside air (even very cold air contains heat) and brings that heat inside where it's needed. In the summer, the heat pump is a regular air conditioner, removing unwanted heat from the inside air.

The heat pump is the most efficient combination heating and cooling system that can be installed in your home today.

To learn more about the heat pump, call your air conditioning contractor. And when you call, ask about the year-round heat pump that qualifies for a bonus check from Texas Electric.

Newly chartered chapter of MADD to hold meeting

The Midland-Ector counties chapter of Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD) has received its charter from the national organization. It will have a meeting for all interested persons at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Pastoral Counseling Center, 202 Pilot Road near Midland Regional Airport.

"Drunk driving is a major problem in this area and we have a great deal of work to do," stated President Cynthia Grubb. "Our initial goals are to inform the Midland and Odessa public of the intensity of this crime, as well as to work closely with the police departments in both Midland and Odessa to find a solution.

"A big obstacle that we have to overcome is the fact that drunk driving is so accepted, especially in Midland and Odessa," she continued. "There are a lot of nice people who drive while drunk, but that will not keep them from killing and injuring innocent children and adults. MADD is striving to make drunk driving as socially unacceptable as other heinous crimes. The public needs to know the actual problems drunk driving presents."

Based on official Texas figures, deaths involving alcohol have risen 70 percent from 1976 to 1981. Total traffic deaths have increased 46 percent in the same time. The chances of a person being involved in a crash with a drunk driver are one in two.

The local chapter will provide speakers for clubs or organizations interested in knowing more about drunk driving. It also provides support for victims of drunk drivers.

"We are organizing a court watch program by which we can monitor the proceedings of the drunk driving cases," Mrs. Grubb said. "We want to keep an eye on how the judges and juries are handling this crime."

MADD has 90 chapters in at least 30 states. It was founded in 1980 by Candy Lightner after a drunk driver struck and killed her daughter.

Other officers include Jim McFadden, first vice president; Curtis Shelburne, second vice president; Rhonda Walls, treasurer; and Jan Randolph, secretary. Members do not have to be mothers or even women. For more information write Box 8874, Midland, Texas 79708, or call 694-4870.

THIS WEEK IN GOVERNMENT

City Council to consider future of Midland Air Park

The future of Midland Air Park will be opened at 10 a.m. Tuesday before the Midland City Council in a regular meeting at City Hall.

The city had advertised it was seeking bids on selling a tract of land at Air Park and these offers will be revealed then. The council has said this is a sampling of what they might get if the entire Air Park were up for sale, hoping these bids may come up with what would be enough money to justify moving Air Park or a trade of land.

Public hearings comprise a majority of the agenda after the council handles the quick items on the consent portion and second readings.

An 11 a.m. hearing will look at a resolution declaring certain structures to be dangerous and public nuisances and ordering their removal.

A 1:35 p.m. hearing will look at merits of a specific use permit for the sale of beer and wine in a restaurant in Mission Square on North Big Spring Street.

A 1:50 p.m. hearing will air the request by Langtry Village, Inc., and a city-initiated proposal for a zone change from O-1, Office district, and 2-F, two family district, to PD, planned district. The tract is along Alta Street and between Pecos and Loma.

A 2 p.m. session will consider a request by Richard Cornett and a city-initiated proposal for a zone change from MF-2, multiple family, to LR-2, local retail, on a tract south of East Industrial, north of Illinois and between Adams and Madison streets.

Jackson Properties is asking for a zone change from 1F-2, single family, to LR-2, local retail, on the northwest and southwest corners of the intersection of Elm and Lamesa Road. That request will be heard at 2:30 p.m.

At 3 p.m. a public hearing will air the request of Parker & Parsley, Inc., for a permit to drill an oil well on Lot 44, Block 8, in 349 Ranch Estates on the north side of Sioux Court.

Residents in the 3500 block of West Wadley will ask the council to reconsider No Parking ordinance for that area.

The council also will hear E.J. Pryor ask to lease the old Krueger Building, study an ordinance that would establish minimum widths and lengths for mobile home regulations, an ordinance concerning alcoholic beverages in certain places with the exception of special events and ordinances dealing with city employees and the Texas Municipal Retirement System.

—Consider hiring a director for the county's federal rent subsidy and community development programs. The former director, 22-year-old Richard Nunez, resigned Sept. 12 after he was charged with theft of federal rent subsidy funds.

—Consider appointing an ad hoc committee for the Midland County Public Library.

—Discuss the recent Texas Water Commission's examining hearing on Monahans Draw in Austin.

—Discuss a special training seminar for videotaping driving-while-intoxicated suspects.

—Open bids for automobiles for the Sheriff's Department, an Energy Management System and an automtic rotary filing system.

—Discuss changes in the 1983 budget for the County Welfare Office.

—Discuss use of office space in basement of the courthouse.

—Consider a new filing system for District Clerk Vivian Wood's office.

—Discuss filling in a natural draw.

—Nominate directors for the Midland County Appraisal District for 1984-85.

—Consider Tax Assessor-Collector Frances Shuffield's tax roll totals.

—Get with Charles Webb of Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation to discuss drainage at Texas 158 and curbing and guttering Farm-to-Market Road 1788.

—Discuss with Lester Irvin and J.D. Crawford Loop 250 South.

—Discuss acquisition of drainage easements for Loop 250 project.

—Discuss geophysical damage-indemnity bond for Midland County.

—Consider closing City View Street.

County Commissioners

Midland County commissioners on Monday once again will get with Sheriff Dallas Smith and architect Walter Pate in discussing the proposed jail.

The session begins at 9 a.m. Monday in the Midland County Courthouse.

The commissioners are considering building a jail near the Midland County Exhibit Building and converting the courthouse's first floor — now the jail — to use by the judiciary.

In other business, the commissioners are to:

Housing Authority

Lack of a quorum at Wednesday's regularly scheduled meeting of the Midland Housing Authority pushed the body into holding a special session at 2 p.m. Tuesday in City Hall basement Conference Room.

Primary item on the agenda is selecting a new executive director and secretary with the appointment to be effective immediately. Fred Kester's resignation from those posts will be accepted prior to appointing a replacement.

The board will consider a resolution that would change the authorized signatures required on checks on all accounts at the First National Bank.

Another resolution, if approved, would dedicate a north-south alley in Block 19 of Kelview Heights Addition to the city.

Susan Howell, community development coordinator for the city, will report on the status of Section 202/8 housing project for elderly and handicapped persons. The city has received a grant from the U.S, Department of Housing and Urban Development to construct the project, to be called Langtry Village, Inc.

Ms. Howell and Horace Berry will update the board on the 1982-83 program for rehabilitating homes with CD money and on the housing program being done under the Jobs Bill.

FmHA accepting applications

TEMPLE — Farmers Home Administration is now accepting applications for drought emergency farm loans, according to J. Lynn Futch, state director, and representatives are being sent to each eligible county.

On Friday, he asked farmers and ranchers who want to apply for the loans to get their applications in as soon as possible.

This action has come in response to action two weeks ago by Agriculture Secretary John Block who said he would lower interest rates on the loans and allow ranchers to apply.

The deadline for applications is Feb. 16, 1984. Futch said if applications wait too long, a backlog could develop and cause delays in receiving loan checks.

Generally, farmers and ranchers who have lost 30 percent of their production due to the drought are eligible for the emergency loans.

Futch said that a FmHA employee will be in each county in which emergency loans are authorized at least one day this week to discuss the program with farmers and ranchers.

The schedule is as follows:

Coke County: Thursday morning, courthouse at, Robert Lee; that afternoon inthe First National Bank of Bronte.

Reagan: Wednesday, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., courthouse at Big Lake.

Schleicher: Thursday, courthouse at El Dorado.

Sutton: Wednesday, ASCS office, Sonora.

Mitchell: Friday, FmHA office, Colorado City.

Pecan seminar, trade show set

I would like to remind all pecan producers of the Permian Basin Pecan Seminar and Trade Show which is scheduled for October 15 at John and Nadine Sims Pecan Orchard in Gardendale.

There will be some of the most knowledgeable people in the pecan industry present to help us with the problems we encounter in the West Texas-New Mexico area. There will also be many exhibitors to display and demonstrate materials and equipment used in growing and harvesting pecans.

We will have programs of interest to all people concerned with pecans, whether they have only a few trees or a large orchard. In addition to demonstrations there will be orchard and shelling plant tours.

Registration begins at 9:00 a.m. At noon there will be a barbecue lunch. The program concludes at 2:30 with a field tour and demonstrations.

For further information give our office a call.

• • •

Martin County has scheduled an Ag Appreciation Day on October 12. This will include a Marketing and Farm Policy Conference.

The meeting will begin with registration at 9 a.m. in the Community Center at Stanton. Speakers will include Dr. William E. Black, Extension Economist-Marketing and Policy, and Dr. Ron Knutson, Extension Economist-Marketing and Policy. The luncheon speaker will be Larry Don Shaw, State Representative from the 69th District.

This meeting should be of interest to all Midland County farm producers. It will be a good time to learn the latest on marketing alternatives for increasing producer income.

All Midland County agricultural proucers are urged to attend this Ag Appreciation Day.

• • •

The Annual Midland County 4-H Open Horse Show will be held October 15, at the 4-H Arena, located behind the County Exhibit Building on East Highway 80.

Entries will be accepted at 8 a.m., and the show will begin promptly at 9 a.m. Age groups will include: 8 and under; 9-13; 14-18; and open. Age will be determined as of January 1, 1983. The judge will be Kathi Greeman of Midland.

All youth are invited and urged to participate. Trophies will be awarded to High Point and Reserve High Point for each age group; and ribbons will be given through 6th place.

For additional information give your County Extension Office a call.

China has record wheat harvest, crop yield

WASHINGTON (AP) — China reportedly has harvested a record whea crop this year and apparently has beat the U.S. record for yield per acre.

The Agriculture Department's Foreign Agricultural Service said Wednesday in a brief report that China's wheat crop is estimated at a record 80 million metric tons. The average yield was estimated at 2.8 tons per hectare.

Allowing 36.7 bushels in each metric ton of 2,205 pounds and 2.47 acres per hectare, China's wheat harvest was about 2.94 billion bushels — an average of 41.6 bushels per acre.

The 1983 U.S. wheat harvest last month was estimated at about 2.4 billion bushels, with a record average yield of 39.5 bushels per acre.

Block's refusal of grain not 'last word,' Hightower says

ODESSA — U.S. Secretary of Agriculture John Block's refusal to release deteriorating, government-stored corn to drought-plagued West Texas ranchers "is by no means the final word on the subject," vowed Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower.

"In fact," said Hightower, "I am encouraged by the growing sentiment in Congress to pass legislation to force Block to turn that grain loose."

Hightower recently met with Block in Washington, D.C., to plead the case of the West Texas ranchers and talked with congressional leaders.

"Our ranchers don't have any crop land, so they don't even have access to federal crop insurance. They don't have any land set aside in the PIK (payment in kind) program that they could graze now, and they don't have any PIK entitlements coming to cushion the impact of the drought."

Hightower said that the PIK program and drought combined to drive "the price of feed up, so it's costing them a fortune to try to hold onto a few head. And they've bred their livestock over many, many years to come up with strains that can survive in West Texas."

AAM convention scheduled

FLOYDADA — The American Agriculture Movement of Texas will be holding its Texas Convention in the Holiday Inn in Plainview Nov. 4 and 5.

The AAMT is suggesting that its members and others interested in the movement's goals make plans to attend the convention.

Farm debt 'in better shape'

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. — The farm economy is "in better shape than many suspect," Durant, Iowa, banker Oliver Hansen told Angus breeders at the 100th anniversary of the American Angus Association here recently.

"Half the farm debt is owned by only 14 percent of the farmers," Hansen said. "...Most of our people in agriculture are on very solid footing, but the 14 percent who owe half the debt are the ones who have the problem. They are the ones who will need good cash flow in order to meet their obligations. More credit is not necessarily the answer," said the banker.

"There will be some liquidations. If your neighbor has to liquidate, don't criticize him for mistakes. Look at it as something that could have happened to you if you had made a wrong judgment call."

Another speaker, Cornell University's Dr. Danny Fox, told the Horizon Conference gathering that "the only reason" cattlemen may need to get their cattle "a little bigger is to satisfy the carcass requirements for boxed beef. Size, he suggested, has little to do with production efficiency in beef cattle.

On the other hand, fertility is the one trait most directly related to profitablity, he said.

Fox offered a means to measure the cost efficiency in animals: "For cattle of the same mature size, you figure out which one will grow the fastest. It is that simple."

Fair to feature horse shows

DALLAS — The annual State Fair of Texas here will feature a vast assortment of horse show attractions, as 2,793 exhibitors compete in this year's "Best of Shows" through Oct. 23.

Horse aficionados will be viewing classical Arabians to petite miniature horses to hefty draft horses.

The Quarter Horse Show, which runs through today, opened the pre-fair horse festivities.

The Saddle, Walking and Roadster Horse Show, which runs through today, will be drawing 300 entries from Texas, Mississippi, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Louisiana and Tennessee.

The coliseum will liven up Wednesday and Thursday when events by the National Cutting Horse Association and the American Quarter Horse Association take place.

Next weekend will afford horse buffs a color array of 616 Appaloosa, Palomino, Pony of America, Paint and miniature horses.

The Hunter and Jumper Show will be held Oct. 17 and 18.

During Oct. 20-23, the classic and graceful Arabians will perform in the coliseum, and the draft horses, mules and donkeys will be shown in the livestock pavilion. The 300 Arabian entries will be in native costumes, and park events will feature the high-stepping action and formal driving classes. Draft horses, donkeys and mules will be in the closing activities.

Twelve horse shows make up the "Best of Shows."

Cattle feeders set convention

AMARILLO — The 1983 Texas Cattle Feeders Association annual convention will kick off Nov. 13 in San Antonio's Hyatt Regency Hotel for the "most stimulating and exciting get-together that Texas cattlemen have had in years," according to Lee Wilcox, TCFA's communications director.

Sessions will deal with strategies for success in cattle raising, exports and balancing cattlemen's lives.

Speakers will include Charles E. Koontz, general manager of the Olton Feedyard at Olton; Henry G. Cisneros, mayor of San Antonio; James Humes, speech writer for Presidents Eisenhower, Nixon, Ford and Reagan; Dr. Ann McGee-Cooper, author and consultant in creative thinking and "building brain power;" Don Butler, chairman of the U.S. Meat Export Federation; Jim Mullins, chairman of the National Live Stock and Meat Board; and W.J. Waldrip, president of the National Cattlemen's Association.

Tide of support

When an elderly man, viewing the Thursday crowd in First National Bank's lobby, said "It's a shame that Jno. P. lived to see this happen," he was paying high tribute to the bank as well as its chairman. Both are Midland institutions in the most respected meaning of the word.

And his comment exemplified what many people here have felt this past week even as others moved to withdraw their funds from FNB.

In such situations people will do what they believe they should do but many of those in the bank lobby Thursday and Friday were not there to get their money.

Many were making deposits, some of those hefty ones, and making no bones about it. Others stood in line to visit with officers and directors, to assure them "I'm still with you." Still others came into the bank to watch. The bank had played a role in the lives of many of them as well as had an influence on their businesses.

Their feelings for First National were not unlike how they might feel about a trusted physician who had seen them through the worst or an understanding pastor who knew their darkest secrets.

Later, what appeared to be the beginning of a groundswell of support emerged. Individuals took upon themselves the task of gathering signatures of those wishing FNB well in its attempt to reverse its financial condition. A town hall-type meeting is planned Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in Midland Center for the same purpose. On Friday the Midland County Bar Association and Executive Committee of the Chamber of Commerce passed resolutions of support.

All of that probably comes as no surprise to anyone who has paid much attention to what makes Midland the envy of cities across the country. It is the people who live here who have done that and it was in complete character for large numbers of them to rally around "their" bank in its time of distress.

Calls began coming into this paper's newsroom. Some callers were critical. Very critical. Referring to news stories appearing in The Reporter-Telegram since the bank's problems first surfaced, "You've done everything you could to bring that bank down," said one.

Others commented on what they said was fair coverage of one of the most important stories in Midland in years. One reminded us of an editorial which appeared in this space on August 12 and asked that we publish it again.

"We are mindful of the decades of service FNB has given to this city and region ... It often has been said and rightly so, we believe, that Midland would not be the city it is had FNB not committed itself, in lean years as well as in good ones, to the people and to the business and industrial growth of the Permian Basin ... We wish only the best for those entrusted with the course First National will take," the editorial said.

We feel the same way today.

Educational visit

During recent months, public education has taken a beating in the form of criticisms about low achievement test results and high school graduates who can't cope in our increasingly technical society. Without a doubt those criticisms are justified when viewed on the national level.

The National Commission on Excellence in Education, which earlier issued a report deploring the mediocrity in the schools, accomplished at least one positive result: Focusing the attention of the nation's people on the schools. That is exactly what's needed to bring about a resurgence of quality education — or to recognize outstanding public school systems.

Tomorrow marks the start of Midland Public Schools Week and all Midlanders are being urged to visit their public schools to see first-hand the educational opportunities being made available to their children. That's the first step, but only the first. The education of children is a continual process that, to be truly effective, requires strong parental support.

When you visit the schools this week, we think you'll learn that Midland public schools are not "wallowing in mediocrity" but offering quality educational opportunities. In fact, MISD policies currently meet and, in most cases, exceed recommendations made by the National Commission on Excellence in Education.

But don't take our word for it. Visit Midland's public schools this week and see what you learn.

Another View:

Cash connection

Soon the food consumers are going to get burned by this year's hot summer sun. But first will come the farmers, who are suffering through one of the worst growing seasons in recent history. They have watched the sun dry up their big investments and hard labor in America's heartland.

Consumers have yet to make the farm-wholesaler-grocery store linkage. All fruits and vegetables, avocados to zucchini, they think, grow out of the display case. Yet, the lion's share of the profits (consumer's costs) lie along the delivery chain. And when Mother Nature hammers the farmer, there are many who take advantage of adversity within the price structure and go far beyond the old supply-and-demand scale.

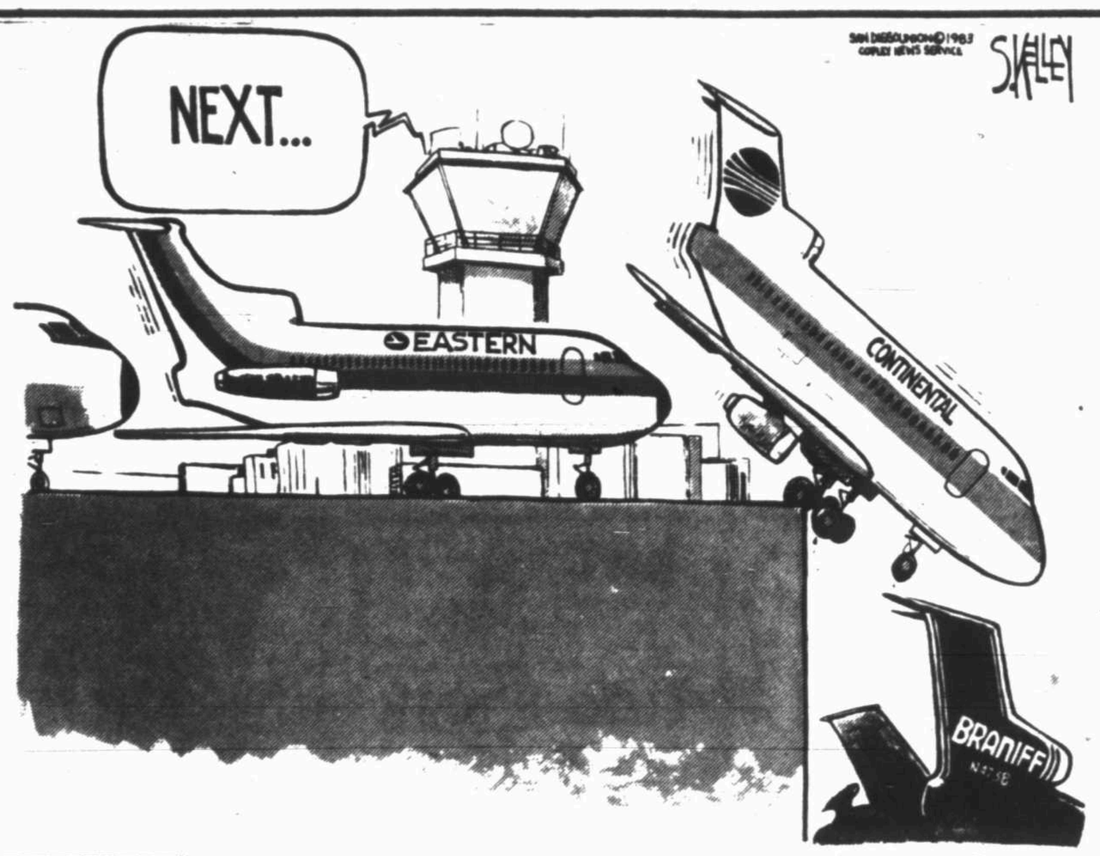

The farmer is in the most vulnerable position. He has the most to lose and the least defenses (against the weather or politicians). He is not visible or expressive. He doesn't have a great deal of voting clout. And that's why some areas are losing food-producing land at an alarming rate. But most of all, that's why food prices are going to go into orbit.

People are going to become angry. They are going to go around blaming President Reagan and the Russians. But very few will care about what happens to the farmer. They simply don't see the cash connection.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Tobacco firm 'bought' favors

WASHINGTON — Embarrassing evidence that American businessmen were paying millions in bribes to foreign officials caused Congress in 1977 to pass the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act. It explicitly prohibits payments to curry favor with foreign officials so they'll purchase U.S. goods or services.

Jack Anderson

Ever since then, American industry has been complaining that this enforced purity puts them at a terrible disadvantage when they try to compete with foreign companies that are under no such restrictions.

But if the case of one enterprising American company is any indication, the corporate crybabies need only to exercise a little ingenuity. The law is as full of holes as a sharpshooter's target.

The sharpshooter in this case, Philip Morris Inc., was apparently able to buy favorable concessions from the Venezuelan government — all quite legal and aboveboard. My associates Jon Lee Anderson and Dale Van Atta investigated the Byzantine manipulations. Here's what they found:

A Philip Morris board member, who is also the president of a Venezuelan tobacco company in which Philip Morris is a major stockholder, arranged the payment. His company and one other donated an estimated $11 million to a private Venezuelan foundation in return for price, wage and tax breaks from the government.

How could a private charity — the Fundacion del Nino (Foundation of the Child) — grant the tobacco companies such concessions? Perhaps it's because the foundation's president is Betty Urdaneta de Herrera Campins, the distinguished first lady of Venezuela. Yet her husband, President Luis Herrera Campins, is not mentioned in the legal documents that spelled out the deal.

The Justice Department tried to determine whether the law had been violated. Without naming the parties involved, a department official, Roger M. Olsen, alluded to the case in a speech last August to members of the American Bar Association in Atlanta.

"A major American tobacco producer entered into a contract with a South American country and a charitable organization of that country, in which the tobacco producer agreed to pay several millions of dollars in donations and was to receive in return pricing concessions from the country's price controls on cigarettes," Olsen told the assembled attorneys. "The wife of the country's president was the head of the charitable organization."

Olsen explained that "this matter was declined (for prosecution) since there was no evidence of any illegal payments to government officials."

My associates obtained a copy of the actual legal contract that sealed the Venezuela deal for Philip Morris. They then questioned Andrew Whist, vice president for corporate affairs of Philip Morris International.

Whist acknowledged that the agreement had been the subject of a Justice Department investigation, but insisted that neither U.S. nor Venezuelan law had been broken.

"The support given by the (Venezuelan) government," he said, "was no more than what we enjoy elsewhere: the right to set prices. Nor is it unusual for governments to grant tax credits or other tax incentives in connection with socially desirable activities."

There are two things to note about this answer, though. First, if the right to set prices is nothing special, why did the tobacco companies apparently feel it necessary to pay $11 million for the privilege?

Whist also chose to ignore the fact that Philip Morris got a lot more for its millions than just tax breaks on charitable donations. The contract itself makes this clear.

The document is unusual to say the least. It deals with official actions to be taken by the Venezuelan government, yet the only signatories were private individuals. The chief signee for the two tobacco companies was Jose Antonio de Corddido Freytes, president of Tabacalera Nacional de Venezuela and identified by Whist as a Philip Morris board member. Philip Morris owns more than 40 percent, but less than 51 percent, of Tabacalera Nacional.

Signing for the foundation was the president's wife, guaranteeing concessions that would normally require approval by Venezuelan government agencies. For example:

"The prices of the cigarettes manufactured by The Industrialists (as the tobacco companies are called) will be totally free of regulation — in the sense that The Industrialists have the power to establish their prices without any limitation whatsoever," one clause reads.

Each donated amount mentioned in the contract is made conditional on a considerable price-per-package increase for what is referred to as the companies' "popular brand of cigarettes." The payments were intended for use by the foundation in "socially beneficial" activities among "the rural population working or living in the tobacco production zones" of Venezuela.

Less socially beneficial, perhaps, was the contract's stipulation that the wage and price contracts signed by The Industrialists and their tobacco growers "remain the same without modifications."

GEORGE F. WILL

Bush: Long-distance politician

WASHINGTON — Kaiser Wilhelm's aides prepared for him each morning a newspaper of carefully excerpted items, printed in gold. Vice President George Bush gets less gilded, but better, information.

George F. Will

Tucking into scrambled eggs at his office at 7:30 a.m. last week, Bush looked forward to a day that began with the feeding of a columnist but soon became interesting. It included several meetings with the President and ended with a political fundraiser, the sting of which was assuaged by the fact that it involved playing tennis. By 8:30 a.m. he was receiving his daily briefing from the CIA — the brutality of facts, not printed in gold. He went from there to another national-security briefing with the President.

Most thoughtful people entering government are dismayed by, and their dismay steadily deepens about, the weak information base on which decisions are made. So Bush works to be a supertanker loaded to the Plimsoll mark with information.

His experience during the last three years is a case study in the natural mortality of the silliness the flourishes during campaigns. References to Ronald Reagan as "a B-movie actor" are dead. So is the science of preppyology. That involved the scrutiny of Bush's wristwatch bands for signs of terminal Yale influences. Another melody no longer heard is the refrain that his conservative credentials are not in good order. He has now extinguished the suspicions of all conservatives except those who need suspicions the way plants need sunshine.

Bush only became suspect because he was Reagan's opponent. Leave aside those conservatives who themselves wear white collars and whose manual labor extends only to moving the carriage of a typewriter, but who think Bush can not relate to — as they can — blue-collar America. If Bush would just do something ungenteel — drink the water from the finger bowl, perhaps — he might complete his conquest of conservative holdouts.

It is to the credit of the current President and especially his predecessor — two former governors with no Washington experience — that the vice presidency has become a serious job. Walter Mondale was the first vice president to have an office in the White House West Wing, as does Bush. Hitherto, vice presidents had offices next door, in the Executive Office Building. That building is just a 30-second walk from the Oval Office, but (in the words of a Bush aide) "politically, it's Baltimore."

Bush can attend any meeting the President has, except those which heads of state traditionally have alone. He speaks his mind only in private with the President, for several reasons.

The author of the most memorable phrase of the 1980 campaign — "voodoo economics" — must feel somewhat inhibited about entering the intramural debate between those who still say the tax cuts will be self-financing (because economic growth will close the budget gap) and those who say tax increases are necessary. Furthermore, Bush speaks circumspectly when not alone with the President because he knows it would be a matter of minutes before any real or imagined differences with the President became common gossip.

Bush has had the sort of career common in Britain but rare here. That is, he has passed through a series of significant offices (congressman, chairman of his party, ambassador to the U.N. and to Peking, director of the CIA). He is the most comprehensively experienced person to serve as vice president. This is a political asset because of Reagan's age. That was expected to be an issue in 1980 and was not. It is not expected to be in 1984, but may be. Perhaps it will be less an "issue" than a vague anxiety. If so, Bush and his many credentials will be important again.

Last time, he was important as evidence of Reagan's pragmatism and taste for quality. "Exit polls" taken among voters leaving polling places showed that 9 percent of those who voted for Reagan listed his choice of Bush as the reason. It is hard to know exactly what those polled were saying, but 9 percent is a large number of persons saying it.

Of all mortals in their 60th year, Bush is the least weatherworn, perhaps because he has come to terms with the fact that there is only so much, and not very much, any man can do to control events. His cheerful absence of anxiety about The Question (will Reagan run?) reflects his certitude that Reagan will run, and his general knack for cheerfulness. Happiness often is a by-product of a mature person's fatalism, and a certain fatalism is essential to the emotional well-being of a long-distance political runner.

ART BUCHWALD

Write nice letters or don't write!

Almost every time President Reagan gives a speech he makes reference to a letter he received from some student backing him on the particular issue he's trying to push at the moment. It has always made me wonder if the president ever gets mail from kids who don't agree with him.

Art Buchwald

Well, it turns out he does. Sen. Orrin Hatch angrily brought it up in the Senate a few weeks ago. In an emotional speech he revealed the White House averages 100 letters a day from school children voicing their fears about nuclear war.

Hatch maintained that these letters were inspired by teachers who belonged to the National Education Association, and cited a book NEA had published titled, "Choices: A Unit on Conflict and Nuclear War." The book encourages pupils to write to the president and world leaders to express their fears.

The senator from Utah said he was outraged by the anti-president bias in the letters, which he described as "pervasive evidence of political propaganda."

The NEA denied their book was responsible for the anti-nuclear mail because only 3,000 had been sold. (With a title like that I believe them.)

My first reaction to Sen. Hatch's speech was that I was happy to learn there were 100 students a day who could still write letters. This shows the country's educational situation is not as bad as it has been painted.

The second was that the letters had somehow been read by top aides in the White House and had gotten under their skins.

But then, I had to come down on the side of Sen. Hatch and here is why. School children do not have the intellectual capacity to express themselves on something as serious as nuclear war. They don't understand it and never will. All they are doing are mouthing the biases of their parents and teachers who have been influenced by the liberal anti-Reagan media.

No child has ever seen a "window of vulnerability" close up, nor does he or she understand the importance of hardened MX missile silos, multi-warheads, first-strike capabilities and all the other little things that go into maintaining a superior deterrent arsenal. All the kids seem to worry about is getting killed.

Playing on this gut emotion, teachers tend to point out the negative side of the nuclear arms buildup, and never mention the fallout from the pluses. Is it any wonder President Reagan is getting so much mail from school children telling him that they are afraid of nuclear war?

Sen. Hatch doesn't like it and neither does the White House. Pupils are supposed to write to the president telling him how much they love him, and how much they pray for him, and how happy they are his policies are working to get us out of a recession. Those kind of letters written from the heart are passed all around the White House to make everyone on the staff feel good.

The ones instigated by pro-freeze teachers have no place on the president's desk. He hears from Congress and from misguided grown-up doves all day long. He doesn't want to be told the same thing by a bunch of scared school kids.

There is no law you can't write to a president disagreeing with him on what he is doing. But sending pervasive political propaganda to the White House goes beyond the boundaries of good manners. To paraphrase Sen. Hatch, "If a student doesn't have anything good to say about the nuclear arms race — he shouldn't say anything at all."

Rank-and-file union members resent leader's tactics

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

EDITOR'S REPORT

Hearst

NEW YORK — It did my heart good to see that the independent spirit of American free trade unionism had not wilted one bit. Instead, as a nationwide poll disclosed, the AFL-CIO leadership, at the insistence of Lane Kirkland, their president, may well have wildly miscalculated in their high-handed and authoritarian decision to tell the rank and file to support Walter Fritz Mondale for the Democratic nomination for president of the U.S. in 1984.

The average union member doesn't take kindly to being told for whom to vote, the poll showed. While Kirkland and his sycophants plumped for Mondale in an extraordinary first-time-ever advance selection of a candidate, members polled showed a closer race.

MANY OPTED for Sen. John Glenn as their first choice, with Mondale far behind. The computer results revealed that at this stage there only is a 5 percent difference: 34 percent for Mondale in the nationwide telephone poll; Sen. Glenn, 25 percent with five percentage points allowed for a margin of error. That 5 percent, by the way, in a rapid and unscientific re-run, shows Sen. Glenn practically neck-in-neck with the former vice president in a union contest for the nomination. Kirkland definitely hasn't wagged the union; as a matter of fact he becomes the frayed tail of the dog.

Labor is the bulwark of this nation. George Meany knew how to lead the membership and fight for its status and rights. There was nobody quite like him in his crusade against communism. He rooted it out wherever it existed in union locals, thus enabling American unionism to hold its head free and high against chained Soviet labor.

IN THIS national poll, the other candidates for the Democratic nomination trailed badly, all 10 percent and under. The don't knows added up to 15 percent which actually made the dubious the third bloc next to Mondale and Glenn. It also revealed the gossamer nature of the Maine straw poll which Mondale won and where he spent big bucks on a cosmetic victory. Only half of the 3,800 delegates eligible to vote in this non-binding contest attended the convention.

A vast segment of the voters like Sen. Glenn and his decidedly centrist views. His feats as a Marine pilot and an astronaut are historical but Glenn emphasizes instead his views on defense, the national economy and external affairs for consideration. Mondale's strategy, at this juncture, is to try to put together an amalgam of unionism as a gathering steamroller. With the first caucus of the Democratic party only five months away. Mondale is trying hard to have the apparatus of assorted union support flatten opposition by that time.

YET MANY American labor leaders are furious with Kirkland and his panel of union presidents endorsing Mondale. I've sampled several from different parts of the country in the last few days. They are in the main Democrats, but interestingly half of those voted for President Reagan in 1980. Right now, they are infuriated with Kirkland's decision to anoint Mondale without consulting them.

No wonder the union leaders are so sore. The national poll reported that 70 percent of the members questioned reported that the Kirkland leadership had grandiloquently not asked their views. I submit that this type of high-handed method smacks of a totalitarian mentality. Hard-working men and women union people in this country won't put up with such elite selectivity.

I found it most interesting that 63 percent of those polled said the AFL-CIO endorsed candidate would have absolutely no effect on them. If anything, the Kirkland & Co. endorsement could have a boomerang effect and some of these following remarks from union members show it:

"WE ARE the union," declared LeRoni Mervin, a New York subway conductor. "We should have a say in who they endorse and who they don't. They should ask us. It makes us feel bad that they don't."

And a lady who works with her husband for Pontiac Motors in Davisburg, Mich., said it on the line for all union members: "We're individuals," she commented bitterly. "We have our own minds."

In a further breakdown of the poll, 52 percent of AFL-CIO members felt Sen. Glenn was favorable. Against that figure, Mondale garnered 46 percent favorable. But the unfavorable proportion was much higher against Mondale than for Glenn. You'd think that the AFL-CIO hierarchy would have even conducted a secret test of preferences before an endorsement.

The formal endorsement of Mondale by the AFL-CIO came only a couple of days ago at its annual conference held in Hollywood, Fla. There was no count, mind you, just standing acclamation by the Kirkland faithful. His entourage, which had much earlier leaked pro-Mondale support around the country, was obviously stung by results of the national poll revealing a narrow gap between Mondale and Glenn.

THESE UNION leaders came up with a defense claiming that "hundreds of thousands" of members were contacted and assented in support of Mondale. My own and other random samplings suggest this wasn't the case at all. The membership is split on rank-and-file lines. At the conference a California union leader warned Kirkland that he better pay attention to the rank-and-file desires or face the mass defection of union members at both nominating convention time and the national elections.

I would have thought that Kirkland would adhere to his predecessor's hands-off, patriotic policies on candidacies. Instead he faces the possibility of the fate that chopped up unions in Great Britain. They thought they could run the Labor Party and the economy. Prime Minister Mrs. Margaret Thatcher proved those union leaders dead wrong and British unionism is seriously divided.

That's a very recent history lesson which Lane Kirkland hasn't heeded or learned. His experience with the real world of independent American labor is just ahead of him.

I wouldn't feel right if I didn't make some mention today of Terence Cardinal Cooke's tragic passing this week at his residence behind St. Patrick's Cathedral.

In addition to being the spiritual leader of two million Catholics in New York and the chief chaplain for all Catholics in all of the armed services, he was my mother's priest, coming frequently to her apartment to say Mass for her. The cardinal presided over her funeral service at the cathedral, so you see he was in truth a dear friend of mine.

I'm sure he and Mom are exchanging notes wherever good people go when their Maker calls them. I'll always miss them both.

Parental involvement key to quality schools

By MOLLY BEDRICH

Molly Bedrich moved to Midland from Austin in 1977. She is president of Midland City Council PTA.

When parents are involved in a positive way in their children's educational programs, everyone benefits. Research has proven that one of the keys to improving or maintaining quality schools is parental and community involvement. Improved academic performance, better student attitude and behavior, and greater cooperation and support between parents and school personnel are the results.

In Midland we are fortunate to have administrators in the public school system who encourage parental and community involvement in the education of our chilren. They are active participants in activities designed to promote open communication between the home and school, give parents access to the schools, and provide them the opportunity to be part of the decision procedure. Their goal is the same as ours — to provide the most effective education possible. They believe this can best be achieved when schools have a partnership with parents and the community.

WE ARE fortunate to have numerous banks, businesses, and civic organizations which recognize the benefits of community support for schools. The quality of education affects every citizen for we will depend upon those who occupy the classroom today to be prepared to take responsibilities in the families and the world of the future.

Studies have found, all other things being equal, students achieve better in schools that have active Parent-Teacher Associations. Not only do PTAs provide support to improve school programs and facilities, but they also offer tangible proof that parents do care about their children's education and want to share responsibility for it. There are few organizations, such as PTA, who lobby for children. As the largest child advocacy group and the largest volunteer organization in the nation, we in PTA have in the past and will continue to make a difference. Midland PTAs and their Volunteers in Public Schools (VIPS) provide a natural vehicle for adults in the community to have a positive impact on the quality of education. The world of a child revolves around the home and school. PTA can often provide a meeting ground for answering children's needs in both places.

A COMMITMENT to parental involvement in the educational process, however, means more than attending an occasional meeting. Parents are the child's first and most influential teachers. We provide the foundations on which teachers can build. Attitudes about learning are shaped and molded in the home long before most children reach the classroom. Every parent, regardless of their own educational background, work schedules, economic limitations or other demands on their time can have a positive influence on their child's education simply by caring enough to share with the child an enthusiasm for learning and respect for those who are trying to help them learn. We should avoid undermining school rules and disciplines and goals as these are necessary for learning to take place.

All too often school-related problems are left unsolved because parents look for someone to blame rather than ways to solve a problem. "Who is at fault?" is of far less importance than "How can we work together to solve this problem?" Conflict is easily diminished and the same effect achieved by cooperative, positive approach. This is not only more pleasant for the adults involved, but serves as an excellent example for the students.

MOST PROBLEMS can be solved simply by good communication. School personnel are guided by numerous laws, regulations, budgets, and standards. It is not unusual for a parent to approach the school to focus attention on a specific area which they feel is a problem only to come away as the school's most ardent supporter once they have been exposed to the complexities of running a school.

Often parents visit the school or talk with a teacher or principal only after a problem arises. Midland Public Schools Week is October 10-14. I urge you to join your child for lunch and a visit to his class to see the good things that are taking place. Being interested in classroom activities is the responsibility of a parent. When children observe their parent's interest, they know that we care about them and are motivated to do their best. Time spent in the school provides a parent with a basis for meaningful conversation with a child. It tells the teacher that we are concerned about what he is doing and that we think that it is important. While you are at the school join the PTA and fill out a volunteer recruitment form. There is a place where your help is needed.

"Speaking Out" columnists are invited to submit articles on subjects of their choice. They should be limited to 850 words or less.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Thanks, FNB

To The Editor:

Now is the time, fellow Midlanders, to THANK the people at First National Bank — by our support in every way. They are going to make it! This is the time for being wise, and not foolish.

First National is having difficulties, as much of the oil-related businesses are, but they have strong leadership, wise counsel and many, many long years of experience to weather this period in their long history of service to Midland and Midlanders!

What individual or organization has not benefited from First National's leadership! From the early days when this was a vast, unpopulated area of wasteland, the days of the first cattlemen, the coming of oil industries, tall buildings, and much wealth, First National has been and is Midland! They have been and are Midland's foundation!

If you were so unwise as to take out your dollars, few or many, reconsider your move. If you believe in Midland it is almost synonymous with believing in First National.

If the bank officials agree on Oct. 14 to allow stock purchases, now is the time to invest in your future, in Midland's future, and in First National's future! It just could be the wisest financial decision you ever made. Think it over, very seriously.

U.S. can respond

To The Editor:

As the solution to the barbaric Soviet murder of that great American, U.S. Rep. Larry McDonald, and 268 others on the Korean jetliner, may I suggest that immediately we:

—Cancel all low-cost loans and giveaways helping to build the Communist military.

—Cancel shipment on all goods used directly or indirectly that bring aid and comfort to the military of the U.S.S.R. and its satellites.

—Cancel imports on all goods from Soviet slave labor camps.

—Close all Soviet consulates used openly for espionage.

—Disallow Soviet inspections of U.S. defense plants.

—Send home Soviet "students" studying at our high-tech schools.

—Cancel permits for Soviet KGB agents to attend congressional hearings and meetings. Get them off Capitol Hill and send them home.

—Forbid Soviet Bear bombers from flying over our cities.

—Bring home U.S. technicians repairing Soviet missile systems supplied by IBM.

—Stop pretending the above solutions do not exist.

If President Reagan and Congress would simply stop supplying, supporting and financing communism, it would soon become a non-problem, and we could soon cut defense spending drastically.

Right now you can help. Clip out this letter and send it to President Reagan. Then send another copy to your U.S. representative and your two U.S. Senators (call your local government office for names and addresses). The life you save could be yours. And sooner than you think.

Letters Policy

■ Readers are invited to submit letters to be considered for publication. They may be on any subject, but should not be slanderous or defamatory. They must be signed by the writer and must include the writer's correct mailing address and a telephone number at which the writer may be contacted during the day, either home or office.

No letter will be published anonymously and names will appear. Addresses and phone numbers are for verification only and will not be published.

Writers should be as concise as possible and the right to condense letters is reserved. They will be published as soon as possible after being received.

They should be addressed to: Letters to the Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland, Texas 79702 or brought to the newspaper's editorial department.

Good business

To The Editor:

Last week I came to Midland to visit my son and his family and, while I was here, I experienced some trouble with my new eyeglasses.

I have had numerous heart problems and, in late years, have had quite a difficult time in walking any distance.

My glasses were made in Houston at T.S.O. and we decided to find the local T.S.O. representative in Midland, which we found to be in the new Midland Park Mall. We had no idea where it was located in the mall, so my daughter-in-law explored the place and found that it would be a hard walk for me to get there.

Mr. Bernie Mobbs, the assistant manager of this T.S.O. store, was kind enough to come out to the parking lot, look at my glasses, take them inside and adjust them, and bring them back to me in the parking lot — all at no charge.

His kindness gave me a very good impression of the way a businessman can do things in a town like Midland. His actions made me feel like maybe I'd like to move to Midland.

I feel that he should be commended by the local people as well as this wayfaring stranger.

Good job, MRT

To The Editor

This is a rebuttal to a letter that appeared Sunday, October 2, 1983, written by Barbara Tibbitts of Midland, who stated that the Midland Reporter-Telegram doesn't print enough local stories. Ms. Tibbitts, come on, there's more to life than Midland, Texas! I, for one, am from out-of-state (no, I'm not a Yankee!) and I thoroughly enjoy when I read something that's close to home. Apparently you don't receive the Sunday paper which is always packed with articles about Midland and Midlanders. I enjoy reading these and learning more about my new home. Sure, the Midland Reporter-Telegram is lacking in some areas, but certainly not in the subject of Midland. And, yes, the editorials speak to national issues, but every newspaper I've ever read does! One more thing Ms. Tibbitts, you remarked about the name of our paper. Well, what's in a name? And that's just what it is — a name.

GISD does care

To The Editor:

After reading several "Letters to the Editor" about the tax rate in the Greenwood School District, I feel obligated to write my own letter.

We moved to Greenwood four years ago because of the school. We were looking for a small school system that cares about the kids. We found that the teachers, principals, administration and the school board really do care.

The tax rate may be a bit more than other school districts in the Permian Basin but it's less for us than sending our children to private school, which is my only alternative.

As for the surplus fund which was mistakenly misplaced, let he who is without fault or he who never makes a mistake cast the first stone.

Worst stadium

To The Editor?

I saw on the news that the Midland Independent School District has decided to spend a lot of money on Memorial Stadium.

This came as a great surprise and regret since, for many years, I have been hoping that Midland would have a sports complex similar to or better than Odessa.

Of all the stadiums that I have sat in, Memorial Stadium is by far the worst of any class or size. I cannot imagine that any renovation could begin to bring this stadium up to what the sports fans and people of Midland need and deserve. I know that they tried to do renovation on W.T. Barrett Stadium here in Odessa and it was really just money thrown away and did not solve the problems.

Midland and Odessa have a super sports rivalry and one I enjoy immensely, but every time I have to go to Memorial Stadium I get the hives thinking about having to sit in this crowded, splintery, dark place. Even the turf and field is usually uneven and hard to run on. Due to the small number of seats in Memorial Stadium we have to fight for tickets and stand in line for days hoping to get one or two so we can see the games.

I know I speak for all of the Odessa sports fans when I say that I hope Midland will some day have a sports-facility they can be proud of as we are of ours. I cannot imagine that any amount of money could make Memorial Stadium such.

Society doesn't allow for courtesy on the highways

Bill Modisett

Midland drivers aren't necessarily bad drivers. In fact, they might be better than those in other cities.

I know that statement won't meet with wholehearted agreement. After all, Midland drivers have been the topic of more than one pointed comment in recent weeks.

The problem — and I do mean "problem" — is that our society doesn't give them the time to observe a basic rule of driving safety: Courtesy. Without courtesy on the part of drivers, what you get is madness. Literally.

I'll give you some examples. As most of the city's residents are aware, Midland has experienced tremendous growth in recent years. Streets throughout the city, and particularly in the downtown area, have been destroyed — seemingly by design.

There's nothing worse than driving on rotten, pothole-riddled streets. It frays drivers' nerves, particularly when they realize the chassis, tires and wheels of their vehicles are getting the worst of the beating and that the traffic is comparatively worse than anything they ever encountered in Dallas or Houston.

Now, drivers could just "grin and bear it," but there's always some fella in the crowd who has the opinion that the rules of common decency weren't designed for him. He's the guy who's speeding anyway, changing lanes every 7½ seconds and trying to run down pedestrians.

Some would say that half the problem in Midland's downtown section is attributable to the pedestrians anyway, but that's another topic altogether...and another column.

Well, back to the speed demon. I really didn't know until recently that discourtesies reproduced that rapidly, but they're just like rabbits: Discourtesy breeds discourtesy. Let one guy run down some elderly lady or first-grader in a crosswalk and every motorist on the street thinks it's open season.

Drivers really aren't totally to blame for their actions. Seriously. Our hectic daily lives leave only minutes for driving back and forth to work. What are we supposed to do? Drive slower and be late? Or leave earlier and still be on time?

What would happen if drivers were to do something really out of the ordinary like yielding to oncoming traffic, driving through school zones at the posted speed limit, slowing slightly when another vehicle is trying to slip in front of them in the lane they're in or even treating driving like what it really is: A dangerous undertaking.

What would happen? First of all, we'd probably all be late for work. But courtesy on the part of drivers might actually become contagious. Think we could stand that many nice people on the street at once?

What happened in Plano's 'paradise?'

Six teen-agers in as many months 'give up,' commit suicide

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer

PLANO, Texas — The streets of Plano are smooth and wide, the homes new and well-appointed, the people tanned and confident. The schools produce national scholars, the churches draw hundreds on Sunday mornings, the football team collects championship trophies.

Plano promotes itself as "a warm and sunny paradise." The people are nice, too. Everyone says so.

The kids' suicides began in February.

Six teen-agers are dead, and this Dallas suburb of 93,000, still an infant growing into Texas-sized boots, is angry over the national attention it has gotten and afraid it's being blamed for the drastic action of a few.

Six weeks after the latest suicide, Plano worries that more suicides will follow.

A FAMILY THERAPIST is getting more calls from parents who think they see signs of depression in their children. More people from Plano are calling a crisis line in Dallas, reaching out to strangers. And, from the first suicide in February to the sixth in August, police have recorded 15 suicide attempts among youngsters.

Plano wants to know: what happened in paradise?

Strong, steady growth has brought Plano more than its share of new kids, trying to distinguish themselves in a community built by success. As sophomore Jana Dillon sees it: "Unless you want to be put down, you need to succeed at something."

The people who live here are successful or they wouldn't be here. From the polo and soccer teams to the poker and bridge clubs, "everyone is striving for excellence," said one housewife.

THAT STRIBING, that emphasis on success makes it "tough for the community to understand why we have some unhappy kids," said Johnnie Spies, guidance counselor at Plano Senior High School. "We have many more happy ones than unhappy ones."

Six kids were unhappy or they'd be alive.

Bruce Carrio, 16, was guilt-stricken over the death of a friend in a drag-racing accident. Glenn Currey, 18, was feeling the pressure of school and a time-consuming romance. Henri Dariot, 14, was upset over Bruce's suicide.

Steven John Gundlah and Mary Bridget Jacobs, both 17, were depressed because their parents had asked them to stop seeing so much of each other. Scott Difiglia, 17, was distraught over breaking up with his girlfriend.

Why? Why were they upset enough to choose death? Why Plano?

THE PEOPLE OF PLANO are searching for answers. They have considered their success, their growth, their lifestyle, their competitive spirit, their sheltered children and their mobility — half the people in town have been here for less than five years.

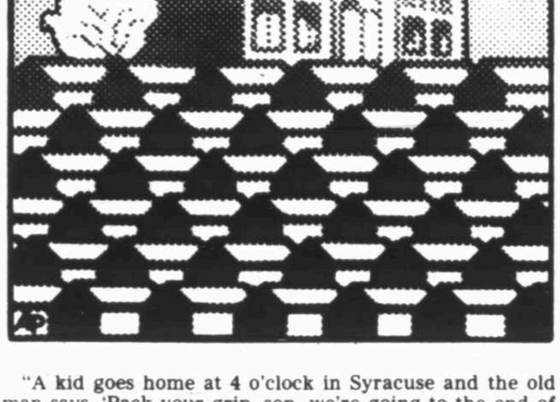

"I know it's unusual. But I cannot point to any one thing that went wrong," said Ted Dickey, community leader, funeral director and former justice of the peace.

The townspeople are examining themselves. Parents are meeting formally to talk about adolescent problems. Classes on stress are being offered to ninth and 10th graders. Three dozen parents are being trained to help with a 24-hour phone crisis line that opens in Plano Dec. 1; 15 volunteered after the August suicides.

"It makes you want to really listen to your children, and help them find a place in the community," said Ann Stokes, mother of two teen-agers and a crisis line volunteer. She moved here two years ago from Tulsa, Okla., when her husband was transferred.

PLANO RESEMBLES any of a dozen suburban communities in America, molded by young executives transferred to high-salaried jobs in large nearby cities. Central Expressway, Plano's four-lane lifeline to downtown Dallas, 20 miles south, is backed up hours each day with commuters.

New families arrive every day. Half the houses in town were built within the past two years, and the senior high school has 140 new students from 35 states and eight foreign countries. Many know what it means to be uprooted.

"A kid goes home at 4 o'clock in Syracuse and the old man says, 'Pack your grip, son, we're going to the end of the world — Plano, Texas.' He ends up in our community grieving," Dickey said.

But this is hardly the end of the world. In many ways, Plano is the Sun Belt's own Eden.

Shopping malls beckon from a dozen street corners. The crime rate is lower than that of any Texas town half its size. Hundreds of new $160,000 homes — with wet bars, game rooms and solariums — line up neatly in neighborhoods enclosed by 6-foot-tall brick walls.

ONLY A DECADE AGO, Plano was a settlement of genteel ranches and 3,000 people. Now with almost 100,000 people, it is growing at the rate of 10,000 a year, mostly to the west, where new streets crisscross vacant fields, the gridwork for a city that expects to be as big as Fort Worth in two decades.

Certainly there are no obstructions to growth on this flat, featureless landscape. Plano was named for its topography on the belief that "plano" meant "plains" in Spanish. Actually, it means nothing.

As large as it is becoming, Plano remains a family place. The average household has one child more than the national average. New schools have opened in eight of the past 10 years. Next year three ribbons will be cut at more new buildings.

The senior high school, sitting on 100 acres, has an indoor swimming pool, a greenhouse and a community day care center run by students. Of its 2,300 students, all juniors and seniors, 96 percent are white. The school boasts the biggest graduating class in the state.

On the gridiron, the Plano Wildcats are conquerors. They lost only one game last year and won the district football title for the sixth time in seven years. The school has its own 16,000-seat stadium, on artificial turf with an electronic scoreboard. Most games are sellouts.

Plano's "Standard of Excellence," a motto written in red on the cover of the 1983 yearbook, is evident in the classroom and the school's 60 clubs. Seventy percent of the graduates go to college. There were 15 National Merit Scholarship finalists among last year's seniors.

The kids play with their home computers, park their pickups and expensive sports cars on the outskirts of town and drink beer, drive to clubs in Dallas or while away free afternoons at Nickelodeon or Texas Time Out, shopping mall video arcades where the cacophony of Pac-Man and Turbo competes with piped-in country music.

The engineers, accountants and sales managers of Plano's adult population often gather to watch their kids play soccer or baseball, then retire to their backyards for a swim and charcoal-broiled steaks.

Indeed, backyard barbeques, the performance of the school's football team, and weekend tennis games used to be the most popular community topics.

ONE SATURDAY NIGHT in February, that changed.

Bruce Carrio, a curly haired blond, was racing his 1972 Buick Skylark against another friend's 1973 Chevy Corvette. Bill Ramsey, Bruce's best friend, was the signalman. They were "just some kids out messing around," police Sgt. J.C. Randall said later. But the Corvette spun out of control and struck Ramsey.

Bruce and his parents cried together over Ramsey's death. A day after the funeral, Lucy Carrio returned home to find her son lying on the back seat of his car, a crucifix in his hand.

The motor was on and the garage door was down. The last song played on the car's cassette player was "Goodbye Cruel World," by Pink Floyd.

"In two days' time," said Bruce's father, Louis, "he went from a happy child to a dead child. We knew Bruce was upset, but the possibility of suicide? It never entered our minds."

Perhaps the combination, grief and guilt, was too much. Being a teen-ager, "he couldn't know it would get better, that the pain he was feeling would ease," Carrio said.

"He hadn't gotten sophisticated yet. He had just started dating. He was still into games. He had his own Apple computer and he spent hours and hours writing programs and playing games on that."

The Carrios came to Plano two years ago from Minnesota, where they'd spent 10 months after five years in New Jersey. They don't blame Plano.

"It's just an area like any suburb," Mrs. Carrio said. "As a parent, you just pick a neighborhood that's nice, that's near churches, with good schools, and then you watch your kids like crazy. That's true anywhere."

HANDSOME, SANDY-HAIRED Glenn Currey didn't know Bruce Carrio. But he had heard about the suicide. Everyone had.

"When one child does it," Glenn's father, Bob, said later, "it sparks an idea in another." On March 1, Pat Currey found her son in the front seat of his blue 1966 Mustang parked in the family garage. The radio was blaring. The air was thick with exhaust.

Glenn had been taking advanced classes at Plano Senior High School, was a member of the commercial art club and had a job and a girlfriend. But as graduation approached, he decided to break up with the girl.

"You could really tell he was in love with her. But he knew he had a responsibility to do well in school, had to keep his job, and I think he felt that something had to go," Currey said.

"He put a lot of pressure on himself to make things go the right way. I think he just felt this was a way out."

AFTER GLENN'S DEATH, Janet Van Beek, a friend of Glenn's, and two other girls at school formed a group called BIONIC, Believe It Or Not I Care.

"It was a fairly cold atmosphere and we wanted to reach out to people," Janet said later.

But on April 18, it happened again. Henri Dariot, a 9th-grader at another Plano school, shot himself in the head with a .22-caliber Winchester.

Newspaper clippings about the deaths of Ramsey and Carrio were found pinned to Henri's bulletin board. They had been his friends. There was also a pencil drawing, a stick figure with the handwritten legend: "The Ghost of Death."

The six counselors at Plano Senior High saw a hundred kids after the suicides, said Mrs. Spies, head guidance counselor. Some were upset about Ramsey's death; others about the suicides.

"At that point, no one discussed the possibility that we would have more suicides," she said.

Schools trying to deal with depression

BUT IN AUGUST, more teen-agers died. Again, there were three.

The night of Aug. 16, Steven John Gundlah and Mary Bridget Jacobs drove to the highest point of Homestead II, a new housing development. They pulled their car into the garage of an unfinished tan brick house, shut the door and took out a notebook.

To his parents, Steven wrote: "We both love you very much. I couldn't go on living without Bridget so we're both leaving together so we'll always be happy. Love, Steven."

To her parents, Bridget wrote: "I love you and this is what I wanted, to die with Steven. Sorry I disappointed you. Love always, Bridget."

They would have been seniors this year. Instead, they chose to die of carbon monoxide poisoning a week before school began.

Donald Gundlah, who moved his family here from New York state three years ago, said he and his wife had recently told Steven that they thought he and Bridget were getting "too deeply involved. We were trying to slow it down, not stop it."

"Anything that bothered him, he held it in," Gundlah said. "You couldn't detect what was wrong with him. I wish he would have come out with it."

A WEEK LATER, Scott Difiglia, a May high school graduate, called his ex-girlfriend. Their romance had broken up several months earlier, and she had recently begun dating someone else.

Scott said he was going to kill himself and leave a gift for her. She rushed to the house but arrived too late, finding him in a pool of blood in the bedroom, a .22-caliber rifle at his side.

In his truck was an envelope containing $200 and a note to his girlfriend, saying it wasn't her fault. To his parents, he wrote: "I can't go on living with the pain."

Kaycee Cannon, a 1983 Plano graduate, learned of Scott Difiglia's death her first day at college. Remembering her crush on him in eighth grade, she cried.

Then she sat down to write her parents a note, thanking them for "bringing me up in the way I would bring up my own children." But mindful of the uneasy atmosphere of Plano, she began: "This is NOT a suicide note."

PLANO IS NOT the first community to discover the contagious nature of teen-age suicide. In North Salem, N.Y., a small town in New York's Westchester County, two youngsters killed themselves this spring. And in the Kettle Moraine school district, in a lower middle-class suburb of Milwaukee, there were three suicides last year.

"One of the most important things in adolescence is joining, and whenever there is a series of suicides it's almost as if they figure they can join the way out," said Glenn Weimer, a family therapist in Plano.

Some people think the kids in Plano simply aren't accustomed to dealing with pain, be it the end of a romance or the death of a friend.

"Almost very suddenly, at age 14 or 15 or 16, kids become exposed to significant trauma, and they don't have the experience to recognize that the pain is only temporary," said Dickey, the funeral director.

Dickey is teaching a daily class at one school to help 9th and 10th graders cope with the stress every adolescent eventually faces, whether it's the death of a relative, girlfriend-boyfriend troubles or just being the new kid on the block.

The Rev. Don Smith, a Methodist church youth director, is worried about the 7th and 8th graders. "They are so impressionable and have such a need to be popular. If suicide is seen as something everybody in trouble is doing, I worry about them," he said.

DEALING WITH UNHAPPY KIDS is one of the schools' tougher tasks. Larry Guinn, an associate principal, formed SWAT, Students Working All Together, a group that helps kids with adjustment problems. This year he added five students to the 15-member team, and plans to set up a similar team of parents.

Jana Dillon ended up seeing a professional counselor for four months after her family arrived from Huntsville, Ala., two years ago. This year, she's the first female drum major at one of the town's three high schools, which are for 9th and 10th graders.

"I had trouble getting to know the people at first," said Jana, 15. "They had little cliques, and it was hard to get in."

Scott Difiglia's funeral mirrored what Plano is and wants to be. His favorite cap, the one with the logo "Skyline Graphite," was placed on his oak casket. One friend put a tin of snuff beside the cap.

The funeral procession, led by the ministers in a white Mercedes, wound through North Dallas, past the signs of success, the signs of a jewel on the prairie, the signs of a reason to live: construction sites, shopping malls, glittering office buildings, and sprawling one-story corporate parks.

It went over and around the wide open highways, past police officers holding their hats over their hearts, and stopped on a flat patch of Texas land dotted with saplings.

"We are puzzled," the Rev. Leon Duesman had told the mourners.

"Let us continue to look at sunsets and all those other beautiful things in the world and be glad we're alive," he said.

"Let us be people who don't give up."

In Plano, six kids already have.

Board member says school officials don't need 'saints'

AUSTIN (AP) — A State Board of Education member who also serves on H. Ross Perot's special committee on education said Saturday that longtime school officials don't need "latter-day saints" to tell them what to do.

Also Saturday, the board tentatively voted to require students to be passing four courses in order to participate in University Interscholastic League activities.

The escalating animosity between Perot, chairman of the Select Committee on Public Education, and some education officials jumped a notch as board members responded to published criticism from Perot.

Chairman Joe Kelly Butler, target of stinging criticism by Perot, told the board that the Dallas computer magnate bent on education reform has held 15 meetings but has not led a committee review of information "so crucial to our public education system."

Butler, a member of the Perot committee, said some members of that panel have "not as yet been allowed to speak to any issue."

Perot has blamed the State Board of Education for some of the school problems. Last week, he told a reporter that Butler, a 10-year board member from Houston, has held office "since the ark docked."

"What you've got is a bunch of good old boys in a clique and the kids get lost in all of this," Perot said of education officials.

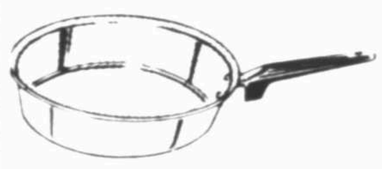

Butler's desk was decorated Saturday with a plastic file box decorated to look like an ark — complete with pairs of stick-on animals. Perot was not at themeeting.

Board member Will Davis of Austin, also a Perot panel member, said the select committee's work has shown that the State Board of Education has worked in recent years to keep Texas education in a "leadership" role.

"The quality of the apartment is much better than any others I've seen in Midland."

Mary and Perry Nelson talk about The Clusters:

"The extras included seem like a real bonus. We're former homeowners, so it takes a really nice apartment complex to satisfy us."

"I have a lot more kitchen appliances than I ever did in my own home. Dishwasher, trash compactor, garbage disposal, side-by-side refrigerator, built-in microwave, washer and dryer."

But that's not all. You also get French doors to patios/balconies, mini-blinds, ceiling fans and your choice of wall coverings.

Plus unmatched amenities such as luxurious clubhouse, two pools with Jacuzzis, lighted tennis courts, 4-station jogging trail, aerobics classes and exercise room.

Come and visit and you'll see why the Nelsons' say, "There have been many days we've come home and said, 'They've really done it again, they've gone first class.'"

The Clusters. Midland's finest adult community. Special pricing now available.

"WE WANTED A QUALITY LIFESTYLE, NOT GIMMICKS AND GIVEAWAYS..."

"...That's why, when John and I were transferred to Midland, we chose to live at Oakridge Apartments. Sure, we passed up a few gimmicks and giveaways offered by the other communities. But what we got instead is an apartment community superior to anything else we saw. Now on the market this year, Oakridge Apartments are bright and beautiful with sparkling new amenities and lots of extras. But more than that, Oakridge is a real quality neighborhood. The people out here are just great, and the management team is the best we've ever had.

1-, 2- and 2-bedroom studio apartment homes are available now. Take Loop 250 to N. Holiday Hill Road and look for the giant American flag.

How Safe are They When You're Gone?

You're gone. They're home alone. A problem? Who would be there to help? At a planned community like Buckingham Place secured estates this wouldn't be a problem.

A six foot six inch solid cedar and brick fence offers privacy and prohibits trespassing. The security gate and guardhouse limits unauthorized access to the estates, while ample lighting in the common areas provides safety and peace of mind.

An unsecured community is like an unlocked door...A mistake.

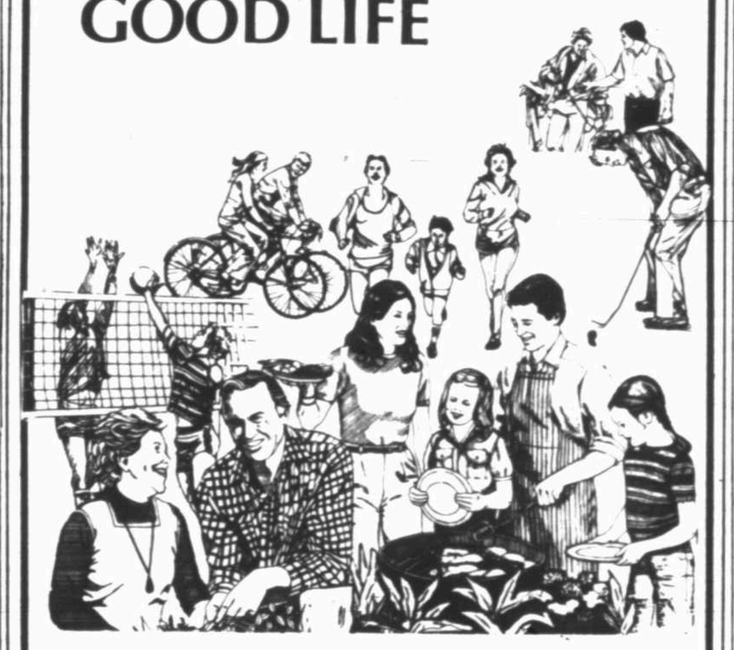

GRAND OPENING SATURDAY AND SUNDAY, OCTOBER 8-9.

Chef Marchello Finati does what he does best as Claudio Brugalossi observes.

The Masters Club brings from Rome

Brugalossi & Finati

Paul Gilbert

Finati, head chef of the Sans Souci Restaurant in Rome, Italy, will be the head chef of Midland's new private club, The Masters Club. Brugalossi will be the general manager. The club is scheduled to open in 1984.

Although the fire singed his mustache and eyebrows, Claudio Brugalossi pretended to be calm as he served his customers and then excused himself.

"I was making crepe suzette and I flamed too hard," Brugalossi recalls, now able to laugh at the painful memory.

At the time, Brugalossi was working for his cousin, Bruno Borghesi, owner of the Sans Souci Restaurant of Rome.

Brugalossi is moving from Rome to become general manager of The Masters Club, Midland's newest private club. Tentatively scheduled to open in January-February, The Masters Club will be located at 3720 Edwards St., adjacent to the Midlander Health Spa off North Big Spring Street.

In an interview during his last trip to Midland, Brugalosi attributed his ability to remain cool in such a hot situation to his years of training by his cousin.

When Borghesi started the Sans Souci, Brugalossi had the opportunity to witness firsthand, the time and effort required of such an undertaking.

"We lived in the same apartment, and I remember he used to wake up very early in the morning and wander around the house smoking very heavy. He was really a nervous wreck. Slowly, slowly, working very hard 17, 18, 19 hours a day, he made a success of it.

"He trained the people, the waiters, like soldiers. Whenever celebrities, political or movie or music people came to Rome, there was a place for them. He did a lot of PR himself. He built a reputation."

Brugalossi started working as a bar busboy at the Sans Souci when he was 16. He worked his way up to head waiter before his family decided to send him to the United States.

"Even though I had a diploma in foreign languages — French and English — I couldn't speak English very well."

After two years in the States, Brugalossi worked in Paris and Rome, before he returned to the Sans Souci where he was a manager for the next 7 years.

Brugalossi admits to some embarrassing moments during his career.

"I was the general manager of the restaurant. I called at 6'o'clock even though it was my day off. I called one of the maitre d' and I said, 'Do we have many reservations tonight?' And he said, 'Yes.' 'I come to work,' I said. 'I'll be there at 7:30.' I took my shower and shaved, put my tuxedo on and arrived at 7:30, very punctual, as usual at Sans Souci."

Borghesi was waiting for him halfway down the front steps when he arrived.

"What are you doing tonight?" Borghesi asks.

"I thought I'd come to work," Brugalossi replies. "There are reservations."

"No. You go home because you are not the one who decides when you come to work or when you don't come to work," Borghessi tells him. Looking very unhappy, he continues, "Today's your day off. Take a day off. When you are supposed to come to work, you come to work."

"But..." says Brugalossi.

"If you say 'but' one more time you stay home three days," warns Borghesi.

The two exchanged harsh words, Brugalossi turned away, yanked off his bow tie, jumped in his car and drove away.

"I was so mad, I didn't go to work for three days. I didn't have the guts to face the people who were working for me."

When he did return, "everybody was very friendly.

"I never give a lecture in front of other people. I call them into the office." Still, Brugalossi's philosophy is reminiscent of his cousin's.

"I never call anybody to say they're good because then they sit down and they think they're good."

It was at the Sans Souci that Brugalossi met his future (American) wife, Sherri, who at the time was working as a fashion model.

"One night she came for dinner and she liked the service so much she never left," Brugalossi says, his tone decidely not serious. The two were married four months later in her home state, Florida. Mrs. Brugalossi will be the receptionist at The Masters Club.

She isn't the only one coming with Brugalossi. Although he plans to hire an American chef to cook the American dishes, Brugalossi is bringing Marchello Finati, head chef at the Sans Souci for the past 15 years, two other chefs and six waiters from the Sans Souci with him.

"We agreed for me to train people here (to serve in the continental manner) would be much harder than for him (Borghesi) to call the waiter's school. He'll train them in six weeks," Brugalossi said of his cousin's decision to allow him to bring so many members of his Sans Souci staff to Midland.

But, to lose a head chef is a different story.

Finati's background includes working as chef at The Hotel Excecsior, Rome; The Hotel Negresco, Nice; The Hotel Savoy, London; The Restaurant Jackie O,' Rome; and as head chef at The Hotel Quirinale, Rome. A first place in 1969 at the Italian RAI Cooking Festival and a second place in 1983 in the Nestle Competition in Tokyo are among the prizes he has won.

"When I talked to him I said, 'It's a challenge. In Midland, for me, it's very difficult. I really need you.' To be honest, I made my decision when I knew that Marchello was coming. He's very good."

The reason Brugalossi is transplanting himself is a common one for anyone who has spent their life working in a family business. "It's for my own satisfaction. It's time for me to be successful on my own."

He brings with him his philosophy of what a restaurant should be. It is an attitude acquired not only through his own experience, but from working with his cousin for so many years.

"The restaurant business is very personal. If you are a cold person you give to the customer your coolness. If you're a warm person, you have to transmit that to the customer. Otherwise it's an eatery, it's an eating place. It's not a restaurant.

"There's a big difference to me," Brugalossi says. "There is a place where you go sit down, have you're meal and leave. And there's a place where you go to see good looking waiters and waitresses, nice music, nice food, the place smells good, the table cloth is impeccable, the wine is served properly — that is what I call a restaurant."

How Safe are They When You're Gone?

You're gone. They're home alone. A problem? Who would be there to help? At a planned community like Buckingham Place secured estates this wouldn't be a problem.

A six foot six inch solid cedar and brick fence offers privacy and prohibits trespassing. The security gate and guardhouse limits unauthorized access to the estates, while ample lighting in the common areas provides safety and peace of mind.

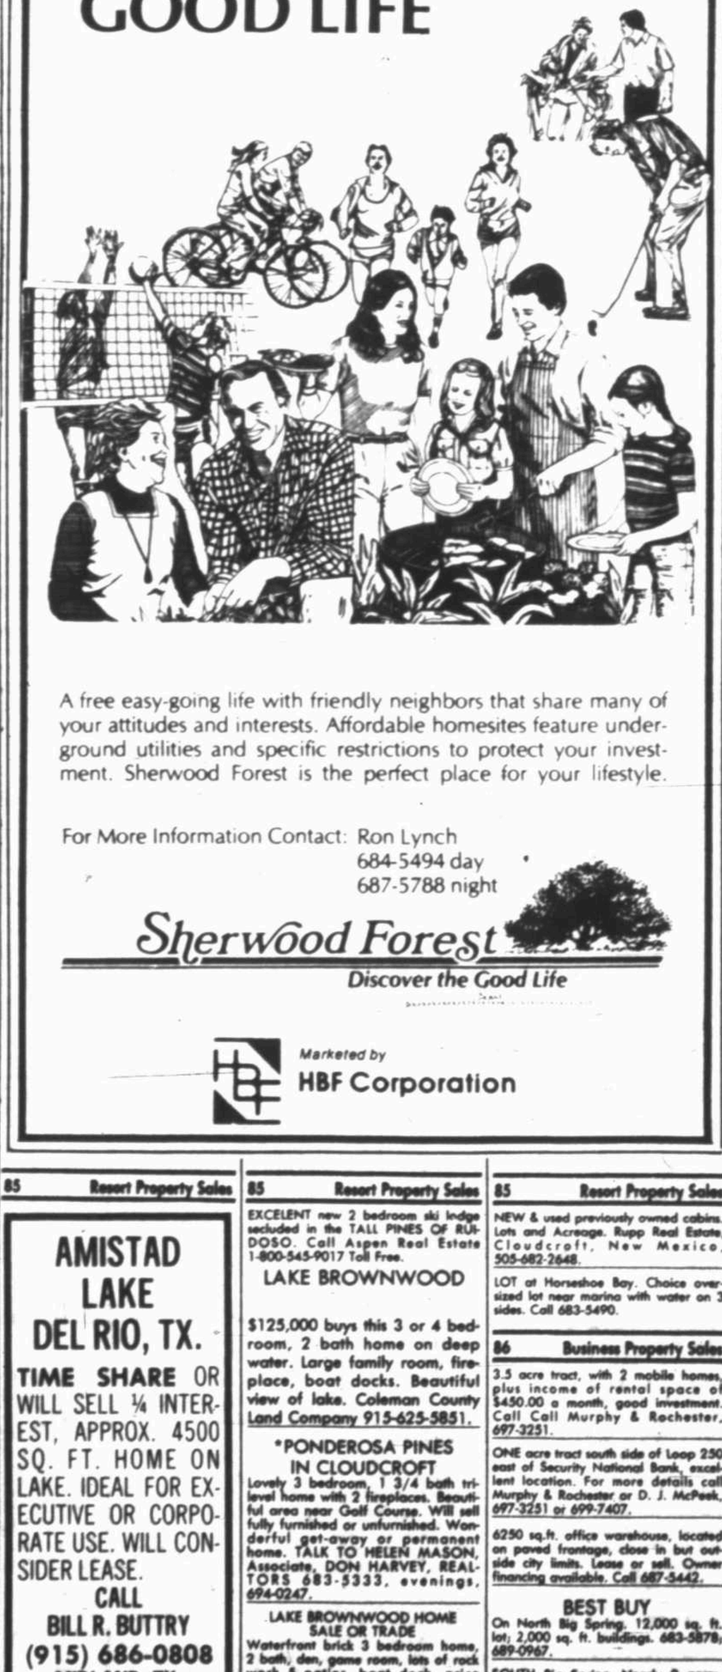

An unsecured community is like an unlocked door...A mistake.

Chef Marchello Finati does what he does best as Claudio Brugalossi observes.

The Masters Club brings from Rome

Brugalossi & Finati

Although the fire singed his mustache and eyebrows, Claudio Brugalossi pretended to be calm as he served his customers and then excused himself.

"I was making crepe suzette and I flamed too hard," Brugalossi recalls, now able to laugh at the painful memory.

At the time, Brugalossi was working for his cousin, Bruno Borghesi, owner of the Sans Souci Restaurant of Rome.

Brugalossi is moving from Rome to become general manager of The Masters Club, Midland's newest private club. Tentatively scheduled to open in January-February, The Masters Club will be located at 3720 Edwards St., adjacent to the Midlander Health Spa off North Big Spring Street.

In an interview during his last trip to Midland, Brugalosi attributed his ability to remain cool in such a hot situation to his years of training by his cousin.

When Borghesi started the Sans Souci, Brugalossi had the opportunity to witness firsthand, the time and effort required of such an undertaking.

"We lived in the same apartment, and I remember he used to wake up very early in the morning and wander around the house smoking very heavy. He was really a nervous wreck. Slowly, slowly, working very hard 17, 18, 19 hours a day, he made a success of it.

"He trained the people, the waiters, like soldiers. Whenever celebrities, political or movie or music people came to Rome, there was a place for them. He did a lot of PR himself. He built a reputation."

Brugalossi started working as a bar busboy at the Sans Souci when he was 16. He worked his way up to head waiter before his family decided to send him to the United States.

"Even though I had a diploma in foreign languages — French and English — I couldn't speak English very well."

After two years in the States, Brugalossi worked in Paris and Rome, before he returned to the Sans Souci where he was a manager for the next 7 years.

Brugalossi admits to some embarrassing moments during his career.

"I was the general manager of the restaurant. I called at 6'o'clock even though it was my day off. I called one of the maitre d' and I said, 'Do we have many reservations tonight?' And he said, 'Yes.' 'I come to work,' I said. 'I'll be there at 7:30.' I took my shower and shaved, put my tuxedo on and arrived at 7:30, very punctual, as usual at Sans Souci."

Borghesi was waiting for him halfway down the front steps when he arrived.

"What are you doing tonight?" Borghesi asks.

"I thought I'd come to work," Brugalossi replies. "There are reservations."

"No. You go home because you are not the one who decides when you come to work or when you don't come to work," Borghessi tells him. Looking very unhappy, he continues, "Today's your day off. Take a day off. When you are supposed to come to work, you come to work."

"But..." says Brugalossi.

"If you say 'but' one more time you stay home three days," warns Borghesi.

The two exchanged harsh words, Brugalossi turned away, yanked off his bow tie, jumped in his car and drove away.

"I was so mad, I didn't go to work for three days. I didn't have the guts to face the people who were working for me."

When he did return, "everybody was very friendly.

"I never give a lecture in front of other people. I call them into the office." Still, Brugalossi's philosophy is reminiscent of his cousin's.

"I never call anybody to say they're good because then they sit down and they think they're good."

It was at the Sans Souci that Brugalossi met his future (American) wife, Sherri, who at the time was working as a fashion model.

"One night she came for dinner and she liked the service so much she never left," Brugalossi says, his tone decidely not serious. The two were married four months later in her home state, Florida. Mrs. Brugalossi will be the receptionist at The Masters Club.

She isn't the only one coming with Brugalossi. Although he plans to hire an American chef to cook the American dishes, Brugalossi is bringing Marchello Finati, head chef at the Sans Souci for the past 15 years, two other chefs and six waiters from the Sans Souci with him.

"We agreed for me to train people here (to serve in the continental manner) would be much harder than for him (Borghesi) to call the waiter's school. He'll train them in six weeks," Brugalossi said of his cousin's decision to allow him to bring so many members of his Sans Souci staff to Midland.

But, to lose a head chef is a different story.

Finati's background includes working as chef at The Hotel Excecsior, Rome; The Hotel Negresco, Nice; The Hotel Savoy, London; The Restaurant Jackie O,' Rome; and as head chef at The Hotel Quirinale, Rome. A first place in 1969 at the Italian RAI Cooking Festival and a second place in 1983 in the Nestle Competition in Tokyo are among the prizes he has won.

"When I talked to him I said, 'It's a challenge. In Midland, for me, it's very difficult. I really need you.' To be honest, I made my decision when I knew that Marchello was coming. He's very good."

The reason Brugalossi is transplanting himself is a common one for anyone who has spent their life working in a family business. "It's for my own satisfaction. It's time for me to be successful on my own."

He brings with him his philosophy of what a restaurant should be. It is an attitude acquired not only through his own experience, but from working with his cousin for so many years.

"The restaurant business is very personal. If you are a cold person you give to the customer your coolness. If you're a warm person, you have to transmit that to the customer. Otherwise it's an eatery, it's an eating place. It's not a restaurant.

"There's a big difference to me," Brugalossi says. "There is a place where you go sit down, have you're meal and leave. And there's a place where you go to see good looking waiters and waitresses, nice music, nice food, the place smells good, the table cloth is impeccable, the wine is served properly — that is what I call a restaurant."

Finati, head chef of the Sans Souci Restaurant in Rome, Italy, will be the head chef of Midland's new private club, The Masters Club. Brugalossi will be the general manager. The club is scheduled to open in 1984.

Buckwheat bread updated

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Although recipes for buckwheat pancakes abound in American cookbooks — from pioneer years to this day — interestingly enough recipes for yeast breads made with the flour are missing.

Apparently buckwheat flour hasn't been used to any extent in breads.

After thorough searching I found only three modern recipes. Two of them made with a sourdough starter, the third prepared a simpler way.

I opted for the simple recipe. But I found it needed reworking because the loaves had a tendency to crumble when sliced and, in our opinion, the color was unattractive.

Too much buckwheat flour was used. Not a good idea because it is low in gluten, and buckwheat can cast a dark gray hue.

In reworking the recipe, we were lucky the first time around. Our loaves sliced well and their color was agreeable.

BUCKWHEAT BREAD

1 cup buckwheat flour
3 to 3½ cups unbleached all-purpose white flour
2 packages dry yeast
1½ teaspoons salt
1½ cups very warm water (115 to 120 degrees)
¼ cup honey
3 tablespoons oil

In the large bowl of an electric mixer stir together the buckwheat flour, 1 cup of the white flour, the yeast and salt.

In a 1-quart glass measure stir together the water, honey and oil; add to flour mixture.

Beat at low speed, scraping bowl constantly, for 30 seconds; beat at high speed for 3 minutes. With a wooden spoon, work in enough of the remaining white flour to make a moderately stiff dough.

Turn out onto a smooth surface lightly covered with white flour. Knead, working in white flour as necessary, until smooth and elastic — 5 to 10 minutes. Shape into a ball.

Place in a greased bowl; turn to grease top. Cover bowl with saran; let rise in a warm place (about 80 degrees) until doubled — about 1 hour.

Punch down dough; turn out onto a floured surface. Divide in half. Cover with saran; let rest for 10 minutes.

Shape each half into a loaf and place in 2 greased pans (each about 8½ by 4½ by 2½ inches). Cover and let rise until almost doubled — about 25 minutes.

Bake on the rack below center in a preheated 375-degree oven for 15 minutes; cover with foil (to prevent overbrowning) and continue baking until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — 20 minutes longer.

Turn out on wire racks; turn right side up; cool completely.

Our version makes two loaves, one to eat right away, one — if you like — to store in the freezer.

Charlie Dunn Sizes Up John Philbeck

"After seventy-eight years of handcrafting custom boots for the likes of Peter Fonda to Racehorse Haynes - Jerry Jeff Walker to Gene Autry, I guess you might say I know a thing or two about fit. Some folks claim I've got an eye for quality that endures. And I know a good deal when I see one. That's why I chose Midland's John Philbeck to tailor my Sunday go-to-meeting suit. It had to be made just right. And it was. Thanks, John."

"Thank you, Charlie. For the kind words and for the business. I hope you found that I take as much pride in my clothes as you do in your boots. And you can be assured I won't make another one like it."

Every Philbeck's suit comes personally measured, meticulously tailored and from a wide selection of styles ranging from Traditional to Western. It also comes guaranteed to fit.

The fact is, if you're not totally satisfied with his garments, there's no charge. That's the way he does business. And that's another reason why John Philbeck suits Charlie Dunn just fine.

For an appointment at your convenience, call 682-0461. But hurry, he's already taking orders for Christmas.

Lasagne for supper

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

SUPPER FOR FOUR Lasagne & Salad
Fresh Pears & Coffee

LASAGNE FOR FOUR

It's chock-full of cheese.

10 whole packaged lasagne noodles
3½ cups thick tomato-meat sauce
1½ cups (or more) ricotta cheese
6 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
½ pound mozzarella cheese, cut into 16 slices

Cook lasagne according to package directions; drain and separate noodles.

In a 2-quart oblong baking dish (about 12 by 8 by 2 inches) spread ½ cup of the tomato-meat sauce. Layer with 4 noodles, folding over ends; ½ cup ricotta; 2 tablespoons Parmesan; 4 slices mozzarella; 1 cup tomato sauce.

Repeat layers twice more but for these use only 3 noodles for each layer.

Bake, uncovered, in a preheated 375-degree oven until done — about 5 minutes; arrange remaining 4 slices mozzarella over top and continue baking until melted — 5 minutes or so.

Makes 4 servings.

Have you heard...?

By MARILYN McKNIGHT HARRISON

Dr. Joyce Brothers came to town Monday, and Midland women packed the ballroom of Green Tree Country Club to hear what she had to say about coping with anxiety and stress. It wasn't the basic step-by-step program for reducing stress we were expecting to hear, but her talk was entertaining and informative. The two true and false quizzes she gave the audience were fun and yet served a serious purpose, giving us an insight into the relationships between the sexes.

The noted psychologist, radio and TV personality, columnist, author and business consultant also is a wife and the mother of a daughter. She resides with her husband of 34 years in New York City.

For her speaking engagement sponsored by Midland Christian School, the petite, bespectacled blonde was fashionably attired in a plum-colored suit. The women in the audience also were smartly turned out in their fall finery, but I was surprised to see only a few hats.

A delicious buffet luncheon was served prior to Dr. Brothers' talk, and the guests were seated at tables decorated with gloxina.

Two mother-daughter pairs seen enjoying the occasion were Jean (Mrs. George) Donnelly and Jan (Mrs. Joe) O'Neill and Helen (Mrs. Brutus) Hanks and Mary Jane (Mrs. Stanley) Saikin. A few of the others in the crowd of 350 plus were Patsy (Mrs. Arthur) Yeager, Janis (Mrs. Mort) Thompson, Betty (Mrs. George) Moberly, Marjorie Wiseman, Penny Barnum, Andree (Mrs. Bill) Hickey, Poddy (Mrs. Jim) Lucas, Betsy (Mrs. Edwin) Dwyer, Gail (Mrs. Gary) Gilliland, Sharla (Mrs. Bart) Hotchkiss, Carlene (Mrs. David) Cristiani and Alice (Mrs. Roger) Freidline.

SANTA FE and its Spanish atmosphere provided a charming setting for pre-nuptial festivities and the wedding of former Midlander Danette Kozak and Ron Wright, both of La Jolla, California. A graduate of Lee High School, the bride is the daughter of Marjorie and Dan Kozak of the Tall City.

After their Saturday evening exchange of vows in San Miguel Mission Church, the oldest church in the U.S., the couple left for a two-week honeymoon in Maui, Hawaii, and then they'll return to La Jolla, where the bride is in resort real estate, and the groom is a resort developer.

The bridal attire had great sentimental value. Danette was wearing her mother's wedding gown (a heavy cream-colored satin styled along early Victorian lines), and also her wedding pearls, while her rosary and wedding ring had belonged to her grandmother. For a special touch, the bride rode to the church with her father in her aunt's taxicab brought over from London, and after the ceremony, she and her new husband were transported in it to the reception at the LaFonda Hotel.

On Friday evening, the couple was honored with a Mexican cocktail buffet at the home of the bride's aunt and uncle, Jacki and John McCarty, at their spacious hilltop home in Santa Fe. Also hosting the party were the bride's parents and parents of the groom, Gertie and Bob McWhinney of La Doga, California. Guests were members of the wedding party and out-of-town wedding guests, including Midlanders Charlotte and Ralph Williamson, Judy and Jim Devenport, Sherry and Jerry Hewett, Barbara and Vic Frigon, Jean and Bill Beach, Jayne and John Houghton, Dorothy and Ellis Scobey, Betty and Dick Daley and Lynda and Pete Renick and daughter Laura.

JERRY AND JAKE FREELAND have returned from a memorable study and pleasure trip to England. The owners of a local dental laboratory, they attended a dental seminar on the campus of prestigious Oxford University, but also took time to enjoy the beautiful English countryside.

Their travel stops included Bath, where the famous Roman baths are located; Stratford-upon-Avon, where they visited Shakespeare's home and the Globe Theatre; Cheltenham, with its strong Roman influence, and Stonehenge, the impressive prehistoric monument. They enjoyed tours of a china factory and of Blenheim Place, where the Duke of Marlborough makes his home, and a banquet at Warwick Castle.

The Freelands also took pleasure in absorbing the history of England, sampling the regional cooking and exploring the many magnificent cathedrals.

BEVERLY AND GEORGE HORST celebrated their 35th wedding anniversary with a week-long cruise of the Hawaiian Islands. Their holiday began in Honolulu, where they enjoyed a couple of days sightseeing before boarding the SS Constitution. They visited Oahu, the Big Island Hawaii, including the ports of Hilo and Kona, Maui and Kauai.

ENJOYING A TWO-WEEK automobile trip to the Northeast and Canada this summer were Kathleen and John Bunch. Highlights of their trip included Ontario's capital city of Toronto, Niagara Falls and in Michigan, quaint Mackinac Island, where they enjoyed a tour via horse-drawn carriage as cars are prohibited. Their itinerary also included St. Louis, Mo.; Buffalo, N.Y.; Mackinaw City, Mich.; Des Moines, Iowa, and Wichita, Kan.

Designer here tomorrow

Texas fashion designer Chris Van Wyk will visit Midland Monday at Swartz, to present her Holiday/Cruise Collection.

The classically oriented silhouettes, including daywear and occasion clothes in imported fabrics, emphasize the ease of elegance.

The collection will be informally modeled at 2 p.m. in the store's courtyard.

"Family of the Year" nominations sought

Nominations for the "Family of the Year," sponsored by the Midland Wards of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, will be accepted Oct. 21-29.

The winner will be announced Nov. 18.

The sponsoring Church's members are not eligible for nomination.

The presentation of the "Family of the Year," is in conjunction with the observance of "National Family Week" activities, Nov. 20-26, established by former President Jimmy Carter in 1979. The joint congressional resolution calls attention to the important part the family plays as "the basic strength of any free and orderly society."

Nominated families should be active in the church and the community, have high moral standards and exhibit family solidarity.

Persons who wish to nominate a family may send the name, phone and address of the nominated family to "Family of the Year," P.O. NBox 80232, Midland, Texas 79709, no later than Oct. 29. Participants are asked to include comments about why the family qualifies for the award. The person nominating should also include their name, address and phone.

Midland Mayor G. Thane Akins will present the award publicly 7 p.m., Nov. 18, at the chapel, 2101 Tarleton St.

FABRIC SECRETS

BETTY MARTIN

Try on your garment to check the fit after completing each unit of construction. The first fitting should include only the garment areas that constitute the basic outer layer. Omit the collar, cuffs, facings and other details. This way, you will get a basic feel for how your fabric will mold to the chosen style. Baste the darts and press them lightly with the fingers. Pin the major seams at the shoulders, sides and waistline along the seamlines. Pin shut and zipper or button openings. For the best fit, always try on the garment as it will be worn, with the right side out.

We invite you to come into LEGGETTS FABRICS and to visit with out experienced staff. We are eager to help you choose just the right patterns and fabrics as well as the notions you will need to make a professional looking garment. In addition if you run into any problems along the way feel free to drop in and discuss them with us. You'll find us located at 1541 Parkway, Odessa, 362-8255 and No. 9 Plaza Shopping Center, Garfield at Wadley in Midland, 683-3101. "Quality, Your Only Real Bargain" Visa and Master Card. Open Mon-Sat. 10-6.

HINT:

Before fitting garments put on suitable undergarments and shoes.

Books for working women

A rack of books aimed at the specific needs of working women has been provided to the Midland County Public Library by the Uptown Chapter — Business and Professional Women's Club.

The paperback book rack was established less than a year ago through a gift from the club. Beginning with only 25 books, according to John Deat, Midland county librarian, "there is currently a circulation of over 400.

"To accommodate the project's rapid growth, the old rack, which held only 200 books, was recently replaced with a rack that can hold up to 500 books," Deats said.

The acquistion of the new rack was made possible by a $500 grant from the Atlantic Richfield Foundation, according to Carol Chilian, B&PW project chairman.

A constant supply of the latest paperbacks geared to the working woman have been provided by the cooperative efforts of the Midland County Public Library, the American Association of University Women, the Desk and Derrick Club and the Tall City Cahpter of B&PW, said Ms. Chilian.

B&PW encourages its members to broaden their scope of knowledge, improve their understanding of current events and gain greater insight into the issues affecting working women. For more information on the group contact Melissa Hursh at 684-5844.

Oilman to address AAUW

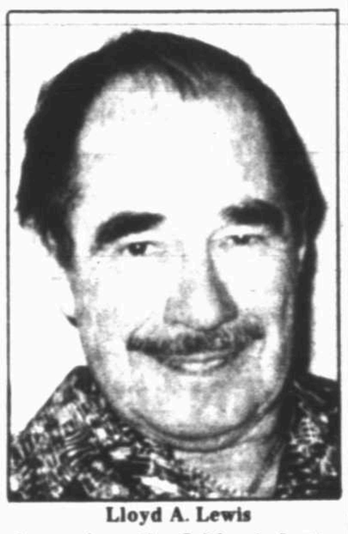

The American Association of University Women world affairs group will hold its first meeting of the season at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at First National Bank.

Lloyd A. Lewis, retired explorationist for Shell Oil Co., will discuss the Vale of Kashmir, in India, located at the foot of the Himalaya mountains. He will show slides from a trip he made to the area last spring.

During his 38-year career with Shell, Lewis worked in California, Washington, Oregon, Texas and Canada, where he was the exploration manager for Shell's Calgary division.

Lewis and his, wife, Mona, are long-time Midland residents. He has traveled throughout the United States, Canada, Europe, Asia and Africa.

A graduate of the University of Minnesota, Lewis has an engineer of mines degree. He was elected to the honorary professional scientific fraternity, Tau Beta Pi, Sigma XI society and given the Thomas F. Andrews award, which recognizes undergraduates' scientific research. Lewis received a master of science degree from the California Institute of Technology.

Lloyd A. Lewis

Mrs. Lewis is chairman of this year's world affairs council and Mrs. Autrey Stephens is co-chairman. Hostesses for the meeting will be Mrs. James H. Chapple and Mrs. Autrey Stephens.

Swallowing may help

Hearst Feature Service

The simple act of swallowing hundreds of times each day for 15 or 20 years may explain why adults get less cavities than kids, a dental scientist claims.

"It's probably a form of self-immunization with the bacteria that help cause decay," says Roland Arnold, Ph.D., chief of oral biology at Emory University in Atlanta.

Billions of Streptococcus mutans form part of the normal bacterial colonies in the human mouth. Most tooth decay occurs in childhood when colonies on tooth surfaces feed on dietary sugar.

But just as immunization with weakened polio virus produces antibodies in the blood to destroy the virus, constant swallowing of bacteria-filled saliva probably builds up protection against S. mutans.

Nevertheless, regular brushing, flossing, periodic checkups and flouridation remain the best methods to ward off cavities.

In an interview from his laboratory at Emory, Arnold said studies since 1975 have isolated and identified special antibodies that seek out S. mutans.

Dubbed "secretory IgA," these antibodies are formed when swallowed bacteria entering the digestive system alert the body's defense system to the presence of a "foreign" invader and and trigger the deployment of defender cells.

Arnold's team has shown that antibodies produced this way circulate in saliva, tears, breast milk and other fluids produced by the body's "secretory" glands.

"These defender cells leave the gastro-intestinal tract and home in on the nose, mouth, breast and other areas where mucus membranes secrete fluids," Arnold said. "This route of natural immunization probably protects people against a lot of things, including food allergies and infections.

Birth defects test new

By The Los Angeles Times—Washington Post News Service

A new test to identify genetic defects in unborn infants during the first trimester of pregnancy and yield results weeks faster than current tests may be available for routine use on high-risk women within two or three years, a government health official said.

Although experts agree that the new procedure, technically called chorionic villi sampling, may be the most dramatic advance in pre-natal screening for genetic defects since amniocentesis came into use in the 1970s, a branch of the National Institutes of Health has called a meeting in response to growing concern that the technique may be rushed into widespread use without adequate safety testing.

The meeting will be held Oct. 18 by the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development, an agency of the National Institutes of Health.

If the safety concerns are resolved, parents who suspect that their unborn child may develop any of a wide variety of birth defects will be able to confirm their fears — or lay them to rest — in the 9th or 10th week of a pregnancy instead of the 15th or 16th. And instead of having to wait as long as two to three weeks for an amniocentesis laboratory report, prospective parents would learn the results of chorionic villi sampling in as little as 24 hours.

The earlier warning could substantially ease the emotional strain of having to decide on abortion if defects are detected, since the test's results would come before the unborn fetus begins to develop recognizable extremities and vital organs, said Dr. Eugene Pergament of Michael Reese Medical Center in Chicago, one of the pioneers of chorionic villi sampling in the United States.

Pergament said in a telephone interview that the new procedure could would eliminate weeks of suspense for prospective parents. The cost of chorionic villi sampling would be about $600 to $800 per patient, Pergament said, approximately the same price as amniocentesis.

At the National Institute of Health in Bethesda, Md., Dr. George Rhoads, director of the epidemiology branch of the child health institute, said the Oct. 18 meeting had been called largely because experts across the United States recognize the potential popularity of a defect-testing procedure that can be done earlier and have its results known more quickly than amniocentesis.

Rhoads said he believes chorionic villi sampling will be in widespread use throughout the United States within two or three years, unless serious safety problems develop.

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Treatment of osteoporosis, the thinning and increased fragility of the bones often found in older people, has been hampered by the lack of a device to measure severity of the condition and assess response to medication.

University of Rochester Medical Center physicians have found a method using computed tomography — CAT scanning— to determine bone density.

DEAR ABBY

Boss object of employee's fantasy

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Please don't think I'm crazy or completely without morals, but I have this overwhelming desire to go to bed with a very special man I work with. He's my boss.

I am not a tramp, and I have never gone to bed with a man other than my husband, but I will never be satisfied until I experience this ultimate intimacy with my boss. It is not my intention to start a "love affair" with him because I know he's a happily married man. I want him to make love to me just once, Abby, then I will be totally fulfilled. I wouldn't care if he fired me afterward — that's how much I want this fantasy to come true.

How should I approach him? Should I write to him expressing my desire in a non-threatening way? If I write a letter, how should I word it? — UNFULFILLED FANTASY

DEAR UNFULFILLED: Please don't ask your boss to go to bed with you unless you are prepared to end up humiliated, rejected and jobless.

You need professional help in order to deal realistically with a fantasy that has become a futile, self-destructive obsession. If you don't know how to find a therapist, ask your physician to recommend one without delay.

DEAR ABBY: There ought to be a law against tall men marrying tall women. Or if they insist on marrying, they shouldn't have children. My father was 6 foot 5 and my mother was 5 foot 11. They produced three children — all girls, now fully grown, and all of us are over 6-2.

Please don't give me your stock answer, "Tall women make marvelous models." We are all big-boned women with a lot of meat on our bones, and not one of us is model material.

I realize that most tall women feel more comfortable with tall men, but when they mate, their female children are usually amazons.

There is an old saying, "Opposites attract." How I wish it were true, but it isn't. Please comment. — TOO TALL IN TEXAS

DEAR TOO TALL: People with big intellects pay little attention to how tall or short a person is. Moreover, the truly secure person is comfortable in the company of people regardless of their stature. One should measure a person from his or her eyebrows up, but alas, most do not.

DEAR ABBY: "Linda" and I are planning to marry. This will be my first and Linda's second. (I am 30 and she is 27.) When Linda was 21 she was married for 16 months, then her marriage ended by dissolution. I have accepted this and have never made an issue of it.

I think we should have a simple church ceremony, but Linda wants a repeat of her first wedding — bridesmaids, bridal gown, escorted down the aisle on her father's arm to "Here Comes the Bride" — virtually ignoring the fact that she was once married. She insists that the dissolution "erased" her former marriage and she's entitled to a traditional church wedding. All the etiquette books I have read support my position.

Your opinion, please. — UNEASY IN OHIO

DEAR UNEASY: A dissolution does not "erase" a marriage. But more important than what the etiquette books say is the fact that Linda refuses to consider your wishes in the matter.

Today, many brides who marry for a second time do have traditional church weddings, but only if their first was a simple one. Linda should consult with the clergyperson who will perform the ceremony.

AT WORK

Office politics common

By DR. ADELE SCHEELE

Clerk-typists complain of it. Accountants complain of it. So do supervisors and movie stars. The curse of "office politics" crosses every discipline, every level, from the bottom up.

"If only I could just do my job and not worry about..." You fill in the blank: back-stabbing, jealousy, apple polishing, groveling in front of your boss when you want to scream out.

Looking back, we grew up expecting "just a job." We never figured we'd have to contend with politicking. We were wrong. We always had to. Someone in our family was the favorite with our parents, and it hurt not to be the one. The favorite was our sister or brother who talked to them, sharing thoughts and compliments, while we sat silently, defying them to notice us. Later it was our teachers, favoring the ones who raised their hands and stayed after class to continue discussions and projects, while we sat pretending not to care, waiting to be noticed for our good work.

And now it's on the assembly line, in the secretarial pool, in the nurses' station. We repeat the same behavior — doing our jobs well, hoping for recognition but invariably making ourselves just the opposite — invisible to our co-workers as well as our bosses.

It's time we started taking things into our own hands. And I don't mean rioting or protesting. I mean learning at last how to get along and get appreciated. We spend all our energy withholding our smiles, good words, and support; we must reverse that and start spending positive energy in order to get a return, an investment for our efforts.

But nagging us is the question: Is it dirty? Is it cheating? Why should we have to do more when all that is asked of us is our job?

But is it? No one ever got promoted, let alone praised, for just doing what was asked. That's explicitly what we are paid to do.

But the implicit message is to do more — care, defend, ally, nourish — and then we'll flourish. Instead, we insist we are too good for such politics. And in being self-righteous, we watch ourselves slip away from every opportunity.

Here's a checklist. Give yourself 10 points for everything that you actually do on a regular basis (at least twice a week):

1. Talk to your boss about his or her job and compliment what has been done right. Tell something you've done well, too.

2. Praise the good work of one of your co-workers. And mean it.

3. Lunch with your boss or with a different co-worker than usual, or one from another department.

4. Join in on a discussion about work, sports, politics, or news, and ask others their opinions. Find where you're in agreement and say so.

5. Figure out who is the "in-group" and the "out-group." If you're "out" cross over to someone who's "in" and find a way to start a short, pleasant chat.

6. Read an article (newspaper, magazine, or book) about a new idea in your field and tell three others. Ask them how it can be applied (could be anything from work trends to technical processes).

7. Volunteer to do something extra that helps your boss. Look for what needs to be done or improved. And do it. Tell what you've done without asking for overtime.

8. Watch your co-workers do their jobs and find someone to help out of a jam. Do it quietly.

9. When you meet your boss's boss at the water cooler (in the hallway, parking lot, etc.) give one compliment about your boss and one about the company.

AT WIT'S END

New color charts cause confusion

By ERMA BOMBECK

In the beauty shop recently, a girl leaned over and said to me, "I'll bet you're an autumn, aren't you?"

"Actually, I do favor cooler weather."

"No, no," she said, "I'm referring to your color chart."

When I looked puzzled she said, "Do you mean to tell me you have never been draped?"

"For what purpose?"

"To find out what colors you should be buying for your clothes, your car, your home. A color consultant tries different fabrics next to your skin and you can tell what colors wash you out and make you invisible and what colors make a statement. Then you're given a personal color spectrum that you put in your purse and never leave home without.

I was obviously the last woman in North America to know this. Since then, I have been "draped" and my life will never be the same again. My color consultant discovered my colors are beige and gray.

As a definite "autumn" I realize there are only two things in my closet I can wear with confidence: a beige T-shirt with a message "SO MANY MEN . . . SO LITTLE TIME" on it and a nightgown that came out gray when I washed it with a pair of the boy's trousers.

The rest has to go.

My car, which I have just soaked $500 into to get it to run, is wrong, wrong, wrong for me. When people see me in that color of car, they will think I am too sick to drive it.

The house will have to go on the market as soon as possible. The exterior white can only complement a "winter," and I'm four months and two hair shades short of that.

The interior of the house can only sap my self-confidence and give me a bad self-image. It just doesn't "work" for me.

My husband found me in a state of deep depression, eating something beige and gray from the refrigerator.

"What's the matter?" he asked.

"My whole life has to change," I said. "The way I look, the way I live and the way I travel."

"We can manage that, can't we?"

"We?" I said. "I don't know how to tell you, but I think you're a spring!"

Gardener faces surprising disappointments

By HENRY MITCHELL
The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — It's odd in gardening, as in life, that things carefully thought out may be a great disappointment, and in support of this I mention the erigerons by the bronze dog.

In the isle of Jersey I was struck by the marvelous stone walls tufted in the joints with cushions of erigerons, or fleabanes, and thought what a glorious example they were of the effectiveness of virtual weeds when used with flair.

The fleabane in question is a wild one from Mexico, and it has the gall (for a weed) to be rather tender to winter cold. Never mind, its nickel-sized, many-petaled daises of white fading to carmine pink are beautiful against old stone.

Just the thing, I thought at the time, for the stuccoed masonry base of the bronze dog (a Siamese version of a Chinese winged lion, with the wings sprouting at odd places) in the garden.

I ORDERED THE seeds from England and, somewhat to my surprise, they sprouted, and were duly installed in a chink of the masonry. They flourished and bloomed.

And now I confess it does not look especially hot. One surprise was that this Mexican creature does not like heat and dryness. The walls of Jersey and Scilly (where I saw it so beautiful) are frequently drenched with rain and mist, but no such disgusting weather occurs in Washington in July.

Furthermore, this fleabane has grown more vigorously on Washington masonry than on English walls, although it was never fertilized and had only the most austere diet and habitation — one inch of sand to which a tablespoon of good clay loam had been added (per quart).

The fleabane was too happy here, and too ambitious. I shall no longer trot out to water it, and I shall not replace it if it fails to appear next year.

On the other hand, I may report on a morning glory that I do not like at all, but which has been undeniably beautiful and perfect for its place.

A few years ago a dear friend sent me a little plant that was supposed to be Ipomea learii, a gorgeous (and I do not use the word easily) morning glory from South America, either tropical or subtropical. It bears clusters of ultramarine flowers on stems perhaps six or eight inches long, and with a little mulch it proves perennial in felicitous climates. I grew it for years in my old garden but did not have it here, so you may imagine how pleased I was to be given a small start of it.

I GREW IT IN a plastic pot 14 inches in diameter. It grew like the pretty weed it is, up a six-foot branch of a peach tree I stuck in the pot. It flowered and was not, alas, the gorgeous blue I. learii but a soft milky dilute magenta with a crimson magenta throat. Furthermore it burned and collapsed by 9 o'clock on summer mornings.

For several years it has occupied its pot outdoors all summer and indoors in my bathroom in the winter. There it has been inconvenient, wedged in between the hand basin and a small window where one stumbles over it and, while shaving, has to move a few inches to the left. Never mind, you cannot throw out a plant given you by a dandy friend, especially since he thought it was one you longed to have.

Well. This summer I got tired of its rather ugly appearance on its pole, which began to lean with the first summer storm and was near horizontal by August, and I gave it a new position. I set the pot right against a waist-high iron railing by some steps that lead down to the basement. It obligingly began to twine along this railing and for a month now has been flowering. The east sun does not touch it, though it gets sun from about 11 to 4 p.m. The color is enhanced and far more delicate in half-shade than in sun. This week there were 30 flowers open on its eight-foot length.

WHAT I CALL German black bees, the honey bees that are black with a touch of yellow, have always loved this plant. The Italian or Cyprian bees (which is what sane people keep in their beehives) do not visit the flowers. I am much alarmed by bugs that sting, but I have not been stung, and we should slaughter bees, wasps and hornets only when they seriously threaten us. Indeed, the only thing I can think of that might someday get me into heaven is that I refrain from killing stinging bugs though I am scared silly of them.

This morning glory twists around the top of the iron railing. Along the bottom of the railing there are some boxes of dirt holding the sedum 'Autumn Joy,' mainly because few things will grow in those boxes. Once we had parsley in them (this railing is just out the kitchen door) and thyme, but the terrier developed an interest in parsley and that ended that. He does not like sedum or not yet.

FOR YEARS I fussed at the iron railing, which has bars like a small jail and generally looks as if it came from the store it in fact came from. And yet it is set in concrete and brick and I could not think of anything to do about it. The boxes of sedum along the brick walk and the morning glory (lovely enough when shaded from morning sun, as it often is in the beautiful courtyards of Mexico where you often see it flopping over a wall) have quite transformed the railing for the summer months. At the end of the railing you step up to a landing opening from the kitchen door. The landing has black wood posts and forms a sort of small arbor, with the grape, 'Alden' on it, and a rather large trailing plant of a red fuchsia hanging from it.

Nicotine chewing gum studied

Copley News Service

This may come as a surprise to non-smokers, but most people who smoke cigarettes want to quit but are hooked on smoking and it's beyond their control unless they can get help. Now help may be on the way — in the form of a special chewing gum.

First, data released by the non-profit American Council on Science and Health show nearly 90 percent of smokers surveyed state they would like to quit. Eighty to 85 percent say they have tried but have suffered relapses within three months.

The problem seems to be nicotine, to which smokers become addicted.

Reports ACSH, "When cigarette smoke is inhaled, about 25 percent of the nicotine contained therein reaches the brain within 6 seconds — more than twice as fast as mainlining heroin. A pack-a-day smoker consumes 7,300 cigarettes per year.

Enter nicotine-laced chewing gum. It is already commercially available in Sweden, Britain and Canada. In conjunction with counseling, the gum can be used to help smokers withdraw from nicotine dependency and, hence, smoking.

The gum satisfies the body's need for nicotine. Also, the chewing process helps eliminate part of the psychological (habitual) dependency.

Researchers study muscular dystrophy

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Researchers say they have come closer to isolating a gene that may be responsible for the most common form of muscular dystrophy, an incurable disease that often claims the lives of its male victims by age 30.

Patients with the ailment — Duchenne muscular dystrophy — have muscle cells that lack the ability to multiply at the same rate as those of healthy individuals, according to the research by Dr. Helen Blau of Stanford Medical Center's Department of Pharmacology.

The findings by her and her colleagues, Cecelia Webster and Grace Paviath, were reported in a recent issue of the Proceedings of the National Academy of Science.

The affected cells, "myoblasts" that normally fuse to form mature muscle fibers as children grow, were found to be remarkably inactive in dystrophy patients, she said.

"Within the first decade after birth, the muscle grows up to seven times its former size in healthy children," she said. "For that growth to occur, the muscle cells need to be able to multiply extensively.

"In individuals with the disease, it seems muscle growth can't keep up with overall body growth and the effects of the disease start to show."

The afflicted myoblasts in the study generated a million times fewer mature cells than healthy myoblasts and eventually stopped reproducing.

The research seems to disagree with earlier beliefs that the disease is caused by a defect in mature muscle cells.

The findings on myoblast reproduction may be a clue to activity by a gene responsible for the disease and may therefore serve as a "marker" to isolate the gene, the researchers said.

Donald Wood, associate research director of the Muscular Dystrophy Association in New York, called the findings "a major step forward in isolating the gene."

Eye exams advised for preventive care

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (AP) — School-age children should learn good reading habits, and for preventive care should have an annual eye examination to diagnose vision problems in their earliest stages, according to the American Optometric Association.

Parents should provide good lighting, teach children to take breaks from close work, encourage proper TV viewing habits and be alert for behavior signs that may indicate a vision problem, the AOA says.

Oregon Pharmacist

Develops New Wrinkle Cream

By RICHARD MORRELL
Feature Writer

(Special). It's an exciting story of an Oregon pharmacist who developed a wrinkle cream which all of the Northwest has clamored for...and which soon the rest of the country may receive in limited quantities.

Robert Heldfond, a Portland pharmacist, developer of many national products, used knowledge from pharmacy school and years of experience to compound Formula EB5 wrinkle cream, which has produced dramatic results in symptoms of aging skin.

Women started besieging Mr. Heldfond's pharmacy when the word got around about its wonderful results in helping women look younger. The phones never stopped ringing and letters poured in, praising the results with Formula EB5 wrinkle cream.

Users reported..."I wish I had some before and after pictures so I could really show the difference"... "Thank you for helping an older woman look younger"..."My husband says I look years younger, I, never want to be without EB5"..."My skin feels soft and velvety, almost shines"...and even, "It made a difference in my life."

Formula EB5 contains natural ingredients, including Li Progen*, collagen and Lipo-protein, plus Vitamins E and B5, and other fine aids to help slow the aging look and help impart a more youthful appearance to the skin. Heldfond's base for the cream penetrates and absorbs quickly, leaving the skin, as the woman says, soft and velvety.

ANSWER TO AGING SKIN?
Pharmacist Robert Heldfond displays jar of his wrinkle cream he spent 12 years developing

Because of the unique method of compounding it, Pharmacist Heldfond was able to produce Formula EB5 only in small quantities, but now production is allowing limited quantities in other areas. If your skin is aging too fast, try in your area to find Formula EB5.

NOTE: Formula EB5 is available in limited quantities in Midland at Dunlaps, phone (694-8888) while supply lasts.

Portugal produces more than port

By DAN BERGER
Copley News Service

When Luis Guedes is introduced as a Portugese wine maker, invariably people want to know about his port. It is port, after all, that has made Portugal world famous (along with its cork). Guedes, a good-natured man, tries to explain that he does not make port.

He makes dry table wine, which — for those who know of the arid conditions in most of Portugal — sounds like an anomaly. Most of Portugal is as hot as California's central San Joaquin Valley, and that sort of climate normally produces little quality table wine. Dessert wines made from partially raisined grapes are hot-climate products, by and large.

But there is a cool area in Portugal, as Guedes points out: "My quinta (estate) is in the north, where it is very cool. And we make dry table wines. It is not warm enough to make port."

The wine of which Guedes is most proud is a new entrant into the United States, called Aveleda Vinho Verde, and the wine is a delight of crispness that matches beautifully with food. Describing it is difficult, however, since it is so different from most American or French wines.

Its main characteristic is its low alcohol (9 percent) combined with a fresh tartness from natural acidity. A subtle spicy character, simulating juniper berries or pine, becomes evident when the wine is not well chilled, but the aroma from a chilled glass of Vinho Verde is clean as a fresh-cut lemon.

The color of the wine is anything but "verde," being a pale straw-yellow, and the aroma does not suggest a "green" or stemmy quality, so I asked Guedes why the wine was called Vinho Verde.

"Well, first of all, that is the name of the district in which my quinta is located," he said, "but the verde does not refer to the quality of the wine, but to the youth of it, the fact that it should be consumed in the first year, or the second year. It does not improve in the bottle."

Wine grapes grown in Vinho Verde do so in a curious manner — but it's a manner Guedes says is quite natural, if you think about it.

"We let the vines climb 2, 3 meters, up poles and then out onto arms," he said. "Grape vines like to climb, so we let them. But we prune them very carefully, to limit the amount of fruit." He said the idea is to get the vines away from the ground, where the cool and rainy climate deposits moisture that can generate mildew. Also, longer vine stalks mean the grapes get less moisture, thus concentrating the delicate flavors and producing higher acidity.

Four varieties produce the white Vinho Verde, but they are unknown outside of Portugal. And although Guedes makes some 600,000 cases of wine at his estate, 70 percent of it is red and is consumed locally or sent to Portugese communities in Brazil. ("You would not like it," he said. "It is very tart, very astringent.")

The current Aveleda Vinho Verde is from the 1983 vintage, and it is the first vintage-dated wine from Guedes. Previously the wine was blended from various vintages, and though the Portugese liked it, it was fuller bodied and heavier than Americans prefer.

Guedes admitted an affection for port, even though he makes none. He said his love of the great dessert wine comes from the fact that he lives so close to the Douro district, where great port is made, and the fact that he is related, through marriage, to the owners of the famed Quinta do Noval, where some of the finest port is produced.

Many years ago, Guedes said, his great-grandfather made some port at Vinho Verde. He had brought one along on this trip to the United States, and he opened a bottle for me.

It was a port from the 1871 vintage, bottled in 1873. The rare nectar was laden with sediment and chunks of "crust" produced naturally over the years in bottle.

The color of this once-black wine was now a pale, tawny orange, and the aroma was slightly oxidized (as I expected). But amazingly, the wine also retained some of the fruit of the grape, and there was a warm, rich, velvety "old cherry" aroma, combined with a hint of peach-pit spice.

At first I said the charm of the wine was in its "burnt vanilla bean" aroma, but then it faded and became closer to butterscotch.

Guedes doesn't mind opening these old wines for visitors to his Quinta da Aveleda, yet he's prouder of his own achievement — the Vinho Verde — for it represents a major step forward in Portugal's attempt to improve its image for making clean, crisp table wine.

Rice salad for all seasons

TUNA, ARTICHOKE SALAD

1 cup converted-type rice
6-oz. jar marinated artichoke hearts
1-3rd cup olive or other salad oil
3-4 tbisp. white wine vinegar
1 tbisp. Dijon-style mustard
6½-ounce can chunk-style light tuna in water or 7-oz. solid white tuna, drained, coarsely flaked
1 large (5 ounces) sweet red or green pepper, seeded, cut in thin strips
4 scallions, thinly sliced

Cook the rice according to package directions; turn into a large bowl.

With a fork, remove the artichoke hearts; cut them into halves or thirds; reserve.

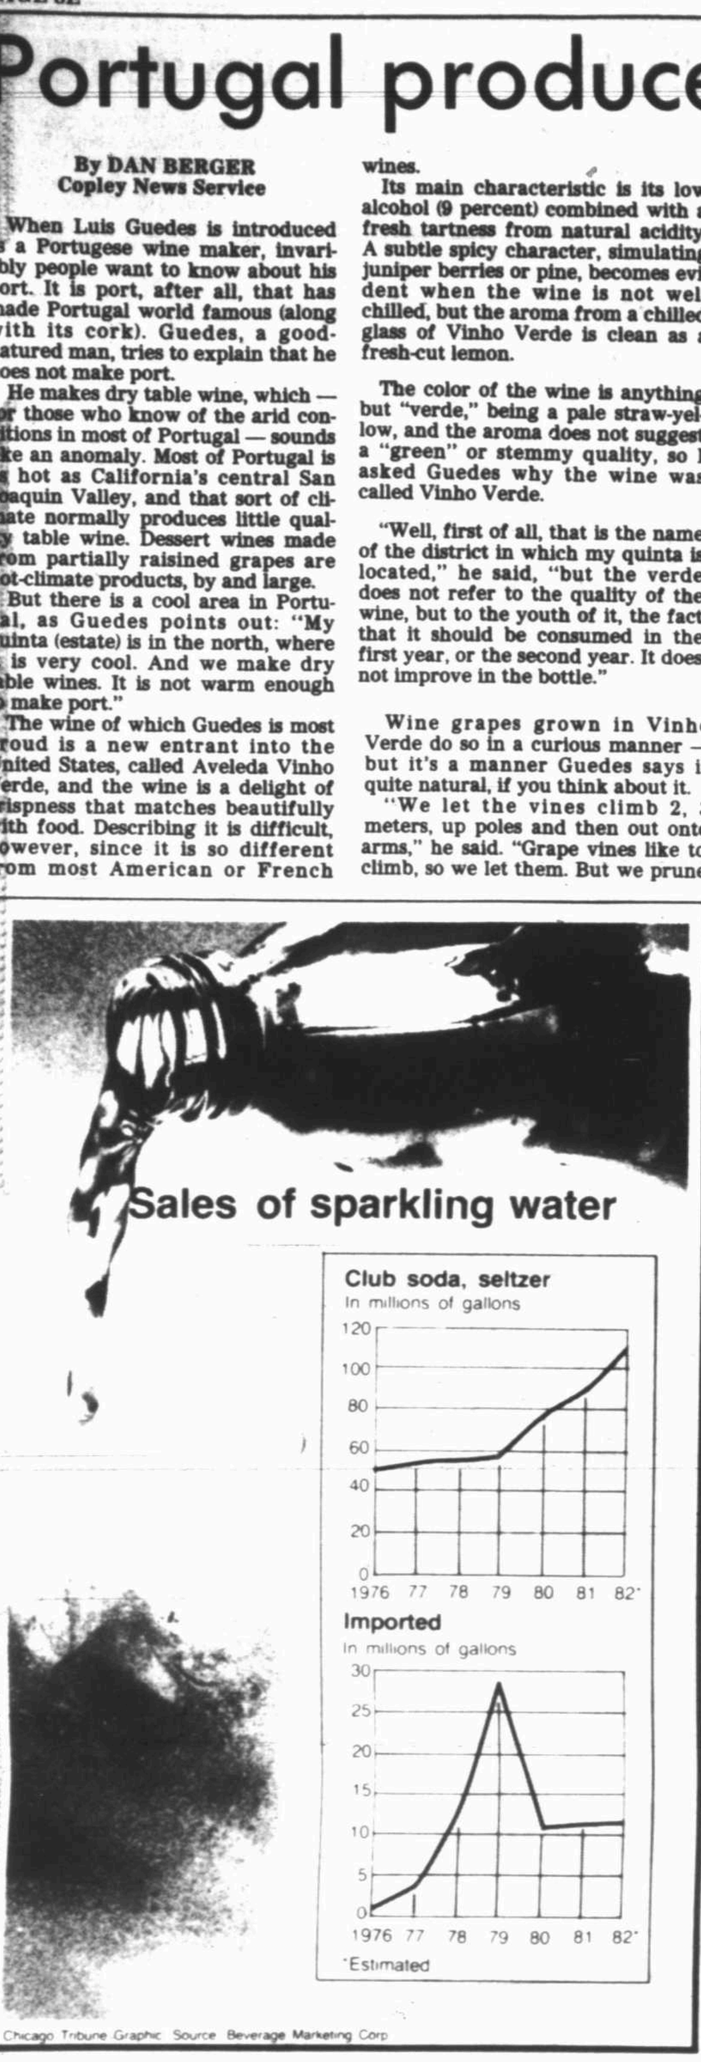

To the marinade in the artichoke jar add oil, vinegar, and mustard; cover jar and shake thoroughly; stir into the hot rice. Cool.

To the rice mixture add the reserved artichokes; tuna, red or green pepper and scallions; toss well. Makes 4 to 6 servings. —(AP)

It's possible: $3-per-person budget meal

Hearst Feature Service

SAN FRANCISCO — How do you serve a meal suitable for guests that feeds body and soul with a budget of $3 per person?

Paul Prudhomme knows. As a Cajun born in Opelousas, La., his choice of gumbo as a main course could not be more appropriate. K-Paul's Louisiana Kitchen, the tiny New Orleans restaurant he owns with his wife, K, has in its two years of existence established itself as a glorious bastion of Cajun cooking.

For those who don't feel up to standing in line for several hours for a taste of K-Paul's food, Prudhomme has graciously shared several of his recipes.

CHICKEN AND SAUSAGE GUMBO

1 chicken, 3 1/2-4 lbs., cut-up
Salt
Granulated garlic (preferred) or garlic powder
Ground red pepper (preferably cayenne)
1 cup diced onions (1/2 large onion)
1 cup diced green (bell) pepper (1 large)
3/4 cup diced celery (2 ribs)
1 1/4 cups all-purpose flour
Cooking oil for deep-frying
7 cups homemade chicken broth
1 teaspoon minced garlic (1 clove)
1/2 pound smoked sausage, preferably andouille, pricked with a fork and browned to render much of its fat

Remove any excess fat from the chicken pieces. Rub a generous amount of salt, granulated garlic and red pepper on both sides of each piece, making sure each is evenly covered. Let the chicken stand at room temperature 30 minutes.

Meanwhile, combine the onion, bell pepper and celery in a medium-size bowl. Set it aside.

Combine the flour, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1/2 teaspoon granulated garlic and 1/2 teaspoon red pepper in a paper or plastic bag. Add the chicken pieces and shake until the chicken is well-coated. Reserve 1/2 cup of the flour mixture.

In a large skillet (preferably not a non-stick surface), heat 1 1/2 inches of oil until very hot (375 degrees or higher). Fry the chicken until it browns on both sides. Drain it on paper towels.

Carefully pour the hot oil into a glass measuring cup, leaving as many of the browned particles in the pan as possible. Scrape the pan with a wire whisk to loosen the stuck particles. Return 1/2 cup of the oil to the pan.

Place the pan over high heat. When the oil is hot, gradually stir in the reserved 1/2 cup flour with a long-handled wire whisk. Cook the roux, whisking constantly, until it is a dark chocolate brown, about 3 minutes. Be careful not to let it scorch or splash on your skin. The roux darkens fast, so be ready to add the vegetables as soon as it is as dark as you want.

Add the vegetables and remove the pan from the heat. Cook the vegetables in the roux until they are soft, about 5 minutes. Keep stirring and scraping so the roux doesn't scorch.

Meanwhile, heat the stock in a 5 1/2-quart saucepan or large Dutch oven. Bring it to a boil. Add the roux mixture by spoonfuls to the boiling stock, stirring the mixture to dissolve it. Keep stirring and scraping the pan bottom often to keep it from scorching.

Lower the heat and stir in the minced garlic. Slice the sausage 1/4 inch thick and add it to the gumbo with the chicken pieces. Simmer the gumbo uncovered for 45 minutes.

When the chicken is done, remove it from the gumbo. When it is cool enough to handle, skin and bone it and cut it into bite-size pieces. Stir the chicken back into the gumbo and taste for salt and pepper.

To serve as a main course, mound 1/3 cup cooked white rice in the center of the soup bowl. Ladle about 1 1/4 cups gumbo around the rice.

Thousands of tiny stitches are formed in a pattern to connect three layers of fabric to form a quilt. The art, practiced for hundreds of years, has made a recent comeback.

Karen Collins, a "People's Choice" award-winner, hand-quilts another project, a 'Log Cabin" pattern. The strips of brown, beige and rust material were hand pieced.

The central block of the first place "People's Choice" award was designed and pieced by Elsie Dean and hand-quilted by Dolly Kauffman.

The Midland Quilters Guild will conduct quilting classes 7-9 p.m., Oct. 13, 20, and Nov. 10, at the Museum of the Southwest's Stables Gallery, 1705 W. Missouri.

Registration is required for the free classes. For information call 683-2882.

Twelve of the quilts featured at the Guild's recent exhibit will be displayed through Jan. 6, at the Museum of the Southwest.

Among the quilts to be displayed will be Elsie Dean's "Medallion" patterned quilt in burgundy, marroon, tan, beige and dark blue, which was awarded first place.

Other quilts named winners which will not be displayed at the museum are Karen Collins' dark blue, brown and ivory "Medallion," second place and Anna Lee Eakin's "Bridal Wreath," quilt with appliques of blues on a white background, third place.

Somewhere, packed away with wedding albums and baby booties, are great-grandma's 85 precious pieces of fabric.

The family doesn't know what to do with the more-than-scraps, but they remain good conversation pieces when the cedar-chest aroma is unleashed.

Finding someone who has the skill, time or patience to turn them into a finished quilt is difficult.

Spokesmen for the Midland Quilters Guild make it clear they are not the group to call to put great-grandma's pieces together. They are familiar with the tedious process and they resist parting with the fruit of their labor. A finished quilt is something to keep, cherish and treasure.

Finishing Grandma's quilt is a less-than-lucrative business.

One quilt, appraised for the guild's recent exhibit, was valued at $750. The quilt was the group's collective effort. It took two years to complete the quilt, but manhours were not calculated because members worked on the project sporadically.

By the time a price is put on the quilt, "You're lucky if you can get $1 or $2 dollars an hour," said Charlotte Louderbeck, co-chairman of the guild's exhibit.

"We do not do public quilting," she said. "No one wants to sell a quilt because of the time they spend making it."

The guild staged its exhibit so members could share the art of quilting with the public.

The show, co-sponored by the Midland Parks and Recreation Department, featured heirloom and contemporary quilts, quilted pillows, wall hangings and clothing, made or owned by guild members.

The guild began with 20 members and now has 60. It was founded in 1979 so quilters in the area could meet each other, trade scraps and help with quilting problems, Mrs. Louderbeck said. The guild meets in day and evening groups.

The group considers itself "an educational institution," but Mrs. Louderbeck added, "we like to have fun, too."

Quilting has changed from the era when the craft was a common practice, making use of scraps and old blankets to create warm bedding.

Karen Collins, co-chairman of the guild's exhibit, attributed the change in the art to the popularity of "country decor."

"In the last seven or eight years, it has become commercially feasible to create tools we've never had before," said Mrs. Collins.

Though quilting remains a detailed process, tools such as special rulers, templates, rotary blades, marking stencils, quilting hoops and modern materials have simplified the art.

A quilt consists of three layers — a cover, a filling and a backing — secured with tiny stitches, sewn by machine or hand.

Many quilters tire of looking at a piece before it is completed. "That's why I like to work on 'crazy quilts,' because they are different colors," Mrs. Collins said.

To avoid boredom, avid quilters look for a challenge in the job. "I keep saying 'Get off this blue one (block) — get onto that yellow one.'"

Though the craft may seem to require much patience, local masters of the art disagree.

It's "not patience. You just have to be stubborn," said Mrs. Collins. Mrs. Louderbeck nodded in agreement.

They both smiled.

Bertha Sikes demonstrates the "Shoo-fly" technique at the recent Midland Quilters Guild's exhibit. Barbara Long is the owner of the quilt.

Amish quilts show wide design range

NEW YORK (AP) — "The time came when I wanted to share my quilt collection with the public," said David Pottinger on the opening day at the City Gallery here of "Quilts of the Indiana Amish," a recent exhibition of 30 quilts, most of which he had given to the Museum of American Folk Art.

Pottinger presented more than 100 Midwestern Amish quilts dating from the late 1800s to 1930 to the museum in 1981 for its permanent collection.

According to Dr. Robert Bishop, director of the museum, "this significant addition to the collection makes the museum's holdings in this area of American textiles unequaled."

The show at the City Gallery was the first here to focus on the regional characteristics of Indiana Amish quilts. Two other exhibitions of Amish quilts were held by the museum concurrently in New York this summer: "Quilts from the Pennsylvania Amish" a loan collection, at the museum itself, and "A Pieced Paradox: Amish Crib Quilts," 18 small quilts from Pottinger's gift to the museum, at the Equitable gallery.

The three exhibitions together illustrated the characteristics shared by Amish quilts — and also showed the marked regional differences. The shared elements are the geometric, pieced designs, and the contrast of austerely limited materials and strict adherence to tradition with the startlingly rich colors and bold effects achieved.

The 23 Pennsylvania quilts, from Lancaster County, use deep jewel tones — purple, red, turquoise, blue — typically in wool fabric, with large, emphatic designs. The Midwestern quilts show the changes which quiltmakers adopted as the "Plain People," the Amish, moved out to Ohio and Indiana: more complex designs, more intricate piecing, the use of other, lighter colors set in black borders, and the use of cotton instead of wool.

Part of the story of how Pottinger's interest in Midwestern quilts grew, and of how he was able to build up his exceptionally varied collection in this previously overlooked area, is told in the book, "Quilts from the Indiana Amish," published to accompany the exhibition.

Pottinger was a Michigan plastics manufacturer, who also collected and dealt in antiques, including quilts. His business took him to Indiana, where he began to hunt quilts.

Finding them meant making countless visits and establishing friendly relationships with the Amish people. He learned at first hand of their family histories as they brought out old quilts and told their stories. The Indiana quilts are often dated and initialed, so that their history can be precisely traced.

"At first I bought to resell," said Pottinger. "But then I began to think of making a regional collection, as I realized how many were turning up. So I began to keep them.

"The Amish were willing to sell to me because they are still making new quilts," he said, noting that their tastes have changed. "The old quilts don't fit today's beds, they don't like the dark colors used in the older quilts, and don't find them warm enough."

Pottinger acquired quilts dating from 1875 to the late 1930s. From the 1940s, quilts had begun to change, as different materials became available — new fabrics, thicker synethetic batting needing different stitching — and also because of some concessions to modern bed sizes and standards of comfort.

Pottinger's quilts are all in the original condition in which he bought them — not repaired, restored or even washed. But the quality of those he's given to the museum is such that they glow with the beauty of their color and with their numerous variations on the classic design themes such as Log Cabin, Bow Tie, Broken Star, Ocean Waves and Tumbling Blocks.

Eventually, Pottinger's collection grew so large that he came to his decision to find museum space for it, for it to be displayed in public.

"The quilts were so many and they're so large, they were stored away hanging in closets," he said.

Pottinger has given up his plastics business and is living in the Amish community of Honeyville, Ind. His involvement with and interest in the Amish grew as his quilt hunting deepened his contacts with them, and he bought, restored and now operates the old general store in Honeyville.

Carpet represented major purpose

So you are finally buying or building that dream house, or perhaps you are ready to redecorate your present home. Either way carpet represents a major purchase.

Like all smart shoppers you want to get the best value for your investment. Before you begin talking to a carpet salesperson it is best to know something about carpet yourself so you can ask the right questions to help make your decision. You have so many options in terms of color, style and price.

There is nothing quite like new carpet. It is colorful, elegant, soft and quiet. Carpet and rugs set the tone of a room and enhance the aesthetic value of the home environment. American-made carpet has never been more beautiful. Technological advances in carpet manufacturing have increased the value you will receive. But what should you buy? There is so much to choose from that a showroom full of samples can be overwhelming.

Tips on buying carpets follw. For more information contact The Carpet and Rug Institute, Box 2048, Dalton, Ga. 30720.

Find and work with a reputable retailer

If you have never purchased carpet the first decision is to select a reputable retailer who can provide the knowledge and experience necessary to help you make the decision.

— Pick a carpet dealer that is wellknown and well established in your community.

— Ask your friends and neighbors where they received good service in the past.

— Search until you find a store with a knowledgeable staff who will give your questions the attention they deserve.

— If you have previously purchased carpet and were pleased with the services of that retailer, return and buy with confidence.

— Consult the Better Business Bureau.

You want to find a reliable retailer who will be in business if you have questions and who will have an interest in keeping you satisfied. He will stand behind the installation and can help you with any maintenance questions. Remember, price is just one of many considerations.

What's the best color?

Carpet color can be your most important ally in decorating — it can make a room look smaller, a sunless room cozier, cool a sunny exposure — ultimately determining the mood you wish to create. With the myriad of colors available today you can create any effect and one that is uniquely you.

Frozen foods freeze stress?

Hearst Feature Service

Such buzz words as "planning," "streamlining" and "organizing" are being applied at home to alleviate the stresses of busy schedules. Menus, food preparation, table-setting and cleanup need to be planned and organized to keep stress at a minimum so mealtime can be enjoyed by all.

Easier said than done? Meal-planners can start with breakfast and work their way through lunch, dinner and evening snack time, filling menus with frozen foods.

The food can be anything one's heart desires — foods that fit fit today's lifestyles, from diet to "healthy" or the myriad frozen fruits, vegetables and desserts for well-rounded mealtimes.

For an easy, quick meal, be it breakfast for hearty appetites or a light dinner with salad, a frittata may be the answer. All it may take is 15 minutes' cooking time.

Congressional spouses talk about their new roles

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Arlene Crane was sitting in a Capitol Hill restaurant. The waitress said she looked familiar and asked her name.

"Mrs. Crane," said Crane. "Mrs. Philip Crane."

Arlene Crane was still reeling from the news that her brother-in-law, Rep. Daniel Crane, R-Ill., was censured by the House for having sexual relations with a teen-age page. Daniel Crane apologized publicly with his shaken but dutiful wife at his side.

"I wouldn't have been there," said Arlene, whose husband also is an Illinois Republican. She said she was reluctant to talk about her brother-in-law's situation. But she did, because she is naturally candid and outspoken, a trait that has caused one publication to call her a liability to her husband's presidential ambitions — yet another problem a congressional spouse must deal with.

"I'm just as shocked and numb as the next guy," said Crane about the scandal. "As badly as I felt I'd only feel worse if it had been me."

LIKE EVERY OTHER of the dozens of spouses interviewed by the Los Angeles Times, Arlene Crane said she is confident that the well-documented pressures and temptations of Capitol Hill would never cause her spouse to be unfaithful to her. But still it is unpleasant to be reminded that such scandals do pop up where one least expects them.

"They're human, like every other guy," Crane said. "This happens to a lot of people, but not in full view of the public. It's just one more time where life is made harder because you're in a fishbowl."

Crane echoed the common opinion that a bad marriage will not survive the strains of Congress, a good one will and the ones in the middle will find out which they really are.

"If ever there was a proving ground," Crane said, "this is it."

Married to one of the more conservative members, Crane was content to stay at home and raise eight children until recently. Eschewing wives' clubs, Crane decided to make use of her intuition and photographic memory. She became a private investigator.

SHE DOES BACKGROUND checks, domestic surveillance and has been involved in a 23-hour stakeout.

"I used to actually wait for Phil to walk in the door for my sustenance," she said. "I think (congressional) wives that work have a better marriage. I'm sorry I didn't do it sooner."

Switching from full-time homemaker to part-time private investigator is not without its adjustments.

"I know somewhere in the house is a basket of ironing that needs to be done," Crane said. "Guess what. I can't find it. I don't get fulfilled by ironing. I used to. People change."

A protocol officer from the State Department walked up to speak to Patricia Schroeder, who was standing in line in front of her husband, waiting to meet a dignitary.

"The member of Congress goes first," said the officer, indicating that Schroeder and her husband should switch places.

"I am the member," said Schroeder, a Colorado Democrat.

"So sorry," said the officer.

Five minutes later, another officer came up.

"The member goes first ... "

READY OR NOT, Congress received Patricia Schroeder into its ranks in 1972. The day she was sworn in, she had Pampers in her purse. Her two children were later toilet-trained in the House restrooms and spent many a sick day on a sofa in her office.

Schroeder met her husband, Jim Schroeder, when both were attending Harvard Law School. They settled in Denver, where Jim ran for state office and lost. A short time later a group of active Denver Democrats, including Jim Schroeder, met to discuss who in the world they could get to run in the '72 election — considered a runaway for the Republicans.

"One of my friends said, 'How about your wife?'" Jim Schroeder recalled. "I said, 'How about your wife?' "

THE MORE THEY looked at it, the more they thought Patricia Schroeder, an attorney active in community affairs, would be an attention-catching, minority candidate. And it really didn't matter much anyway, because a Democrat could never win.

During the campaign Schroeder usually made appearances alone while her husband worked.

"My opponent," said Pat, "would make comments like, 'You'll notice my wife is here tonight. She's so supportive of what I do. And you know, I just haven't seen Mr. Schroeder.'"

Pat Schroeder won. And at a moment's notice, Jim Schroeder gave up his job with a Colorado law firm, dealing with environmental cases and other local interests, to follow her here.

In Washington, Jim Schroeder has joined an international law firm. But to make extra time to help care for the children when Pat is working late and making trips back to the district, he offered to accept less money for a lighter case load.

"MY ROLE (as a congressional spouse) has gotten to be holding the home front here," said Jim. "If I go out to Denver with Pat, who's going to take care of the kids?"

Jim said that Pat still carries the load in child care. And like so many of the two-career congressional couples interviewed, the Schroeders make domestic ends meet with a full-time housekeeper.

"I do some shopping and some laundry and some vacuuming," said Jim. "I'm not sure that most husbands today with two-career families aren't doing the same thing."

To some extent, Pat has been at a disadvantage not having a spouse stand in for her at functions and help with other traditional "Congress wife" chores. Jim helps primarily in the fund-raising portion of the campaign, making very few appearances.

"IF I WERE THE spouse," said Pat, "I wouldn't be the one who gives up the career in the summer and goes back home and sets up the little house and goes to all the teas and does little recipe books and the Christmas cards. It's tough for me in politics not having a wife who does that."

But the toughest part for Pat was the doubt.

"The part I worried about the most," she said, "is, what have I done to him?"

But Jim says if he had it to do all over, he wouldn't want to change anything.

"You double the activities, but you double the experiences," he said. "It makes for a lot more fun in life to have more going on."

THE FIRST YEAR Martin Frost came to Congress from Texas, "we had dinner on a week night with the kids no more than 12 times," said his wife, Valerie, a frank, no-holds-barred congressional spouse who stays at home, caring for their three children.

The incident that put Valerie "right over the edge" was when he failed to show up at a party being given in his honor by his own law school classmates. She was also not terribly pleased when he flew home to Texas to give a speech to a graduating class that was not even in his district.

"That just galled me," she said.

And then there was the time that quite a few Frost-for-Congress signs were swiftly removed after Valerie innocently seconded a motion at a town meeting to vote on a gay rights petition, figuring that anyone with a petition had a right to be heard.

"IT'S VERY HARD on your First Amendment freedoms," said Valerie.

"I told him, every now and then, I said, 'Someday, you'll come back and there will be a note on the table, and the note will say, "Gone to New Mexico." All the credit cards will be gone and I'll be back when I'm good and ready. Don't come looking for me.

"I said it several times. And I meant it."

But after the first hectic year, things settled down.

"I made some adjustments," she said. "I pulled back on what I could expect from him. At first I didn't want to do that. Expecting him to be there a limited amount of time was not what I wanted out of a marriage."

But like many spouses, Valerie Frost learned to cope. Martin Frost scaled back his outside commitments and the two met somewhere in the middle — more than 12 times a year.

GERALDINE FERRARO, D-N.Y., liked to have her husband, real estate businessman John Zaccaro, with her when she campaigned. It was as a rough, dirty ordeal.

"My husband came with me to protect me. Maybe feminists might get a little uptight about that," said Ferraro.

At one stop picketers carried signs that called her husband a slumlord. When Ferraro explained to her daughter what a slumlord was, she cried. Later, after Ferraro was elected, the youngest child resented the time Ferraro spend in Washington, even though she commuted home to her family every weekend. Ferraro said if she had lived in California, she would not have run. New York is just an hour away.

"Our biggest problem was our youngest one," said Zaccaro, who stayed in New York with their three children. "She was 13 and she missed her mother. There was a little resentment."

FERRARO WILL not forget when Zaccaro flew down to Washington to celebrate their wedding anniversary in the middle of the week.

"He got stuck on the plane with my son for three hours and the kid had to be at school early the next morning, so they could not spend the night," said Ferraro. "My son got off the plane with a dozen roses. I met them at the airport and there was no place to go because they had to take the 9 o'clock shuttle back. We went to a crummy restaurant at the airport with my roses, and I put them on the shuttle and they went back."

Meringue bars

MERINGUE BARS

¼-pound stick butter
½ cup confectioners' sugar
2 large egg yolks
1 cup flour
1 teaspoon lemon juice
Meringue, see recipe
½ cup finely chopped pecans

Cream butter and sugar; beat in egg yolks; stir in flour and lemon juice. Spread over bottom of ungreased 13x9x2 baking pan. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven 10 minutes. Leave oven control at 350 degrees. At once spread with Meringue; sprinkle with pecans. Continue baking in the 350-degree oven until meringue is browned — 25 minutes longer. Cool and cut into bars.

MERINGUE: Beat 2 large egg whites until they hold soft peaks; gradually beat in ½ cup granulated sugar and 1 tablespoon lemon juice until whites hold stiff glossy peaks. —(AP)

Rebuilt hotel may be Waikiki's best

By MICHAEL CARLTON
The Los Angeles Times—
Washington Post News Service

HONOLULU — The advertisement is smokily sensual: a couple — he in white slacks rolled up at the ankles and a rumpled white silk shirt, a bit of distinguished gray at the temples; she in a dress slit to the waist, both shoulders bare, holding a pair of delicate silver slippers — stand on Waikiki Beach at dawn. In the background is a four-masted sailing ship; in the foreground a silver tray with two glasses of champagne. He is gazing into her half-closed eyes while reaching for a bit of the bubbly.

Cue the porpoises, cut to Don Ho, Ho, Ho. Ah, Hawaii, Land of the Lotus.

Despite the romance of the advertisement, there hasn't been much to cheer about on Waikiki lately. Crime, overcrowded beaches and pollution have combined to tarnish the reputation of one of the most famous beaches in the world. What was a breathtakingly beautiful beach 50 years ago, a place of parading parasols and strutting spats, became home to a host of bums, street punks and hustlers.

But this year, exactly a quarter of a century after Hawaii became our 50th state, a new hotel opened on Waikiki, a hotel that may well lead the drive to change the image of this long, sparkling strand of sand.

"A forgotten elegance returns to Honolulu with the new Halekulani," reads the copy that runs with the advertisement featuring man, woman and champagne.

It may have misplaced, but the elegance was certainly not forgotten by those who remember the days when the old Halekulani — the name means "House Befitting Heaven" — was entertaining the well- and the very-well-to-do on its sun-kissed verandas. A mai tai, a quiet conversation, an appreciation for the softness of the surf, the quiet of a splendid Hawaiian evening, all seemed lost in the frantic pace that marred Waikiki in the '60s and '70s.

But if any organization can change the tawdry image of Waikiki it is Regent International Hotels, which has poured $125 million — a staggering $275,000 per room — to rebuild the Halekulani anew and restore its former grace. Regent International is already synonomous with superb taste and unequaled service. Two of its hotels, the Regents in Hong Kong and Sydney, are rated with the world's best by many knowledgeable travelers, and its Kapalua Bay Hotel on Maui is regarded by many as Hawaii's finest resort.

Gone are the 37 termite-ridden bungalows of the old Halekulani; only its handsome two-story reception building remains. Here, instead, are five buildings, up to 16 stories high, containing 456 rooms. There are three restaurants, four bars, 22 rooms especially designed for handicapped travelers, and 44 suites, all looked after by 520 employees, about 120 of whom worked at the old Halekulani before it closed two years ago for the reconstruction.

The rooms at the hotel are lavish and decorated in good taste — bone, pewter and ivory are the predominant colors, not the lime greens and orange that scream at you in so many Honolulu hotel rooms.

Tour package designed for seniors

By PHILIP SOUSA
Copley News Service

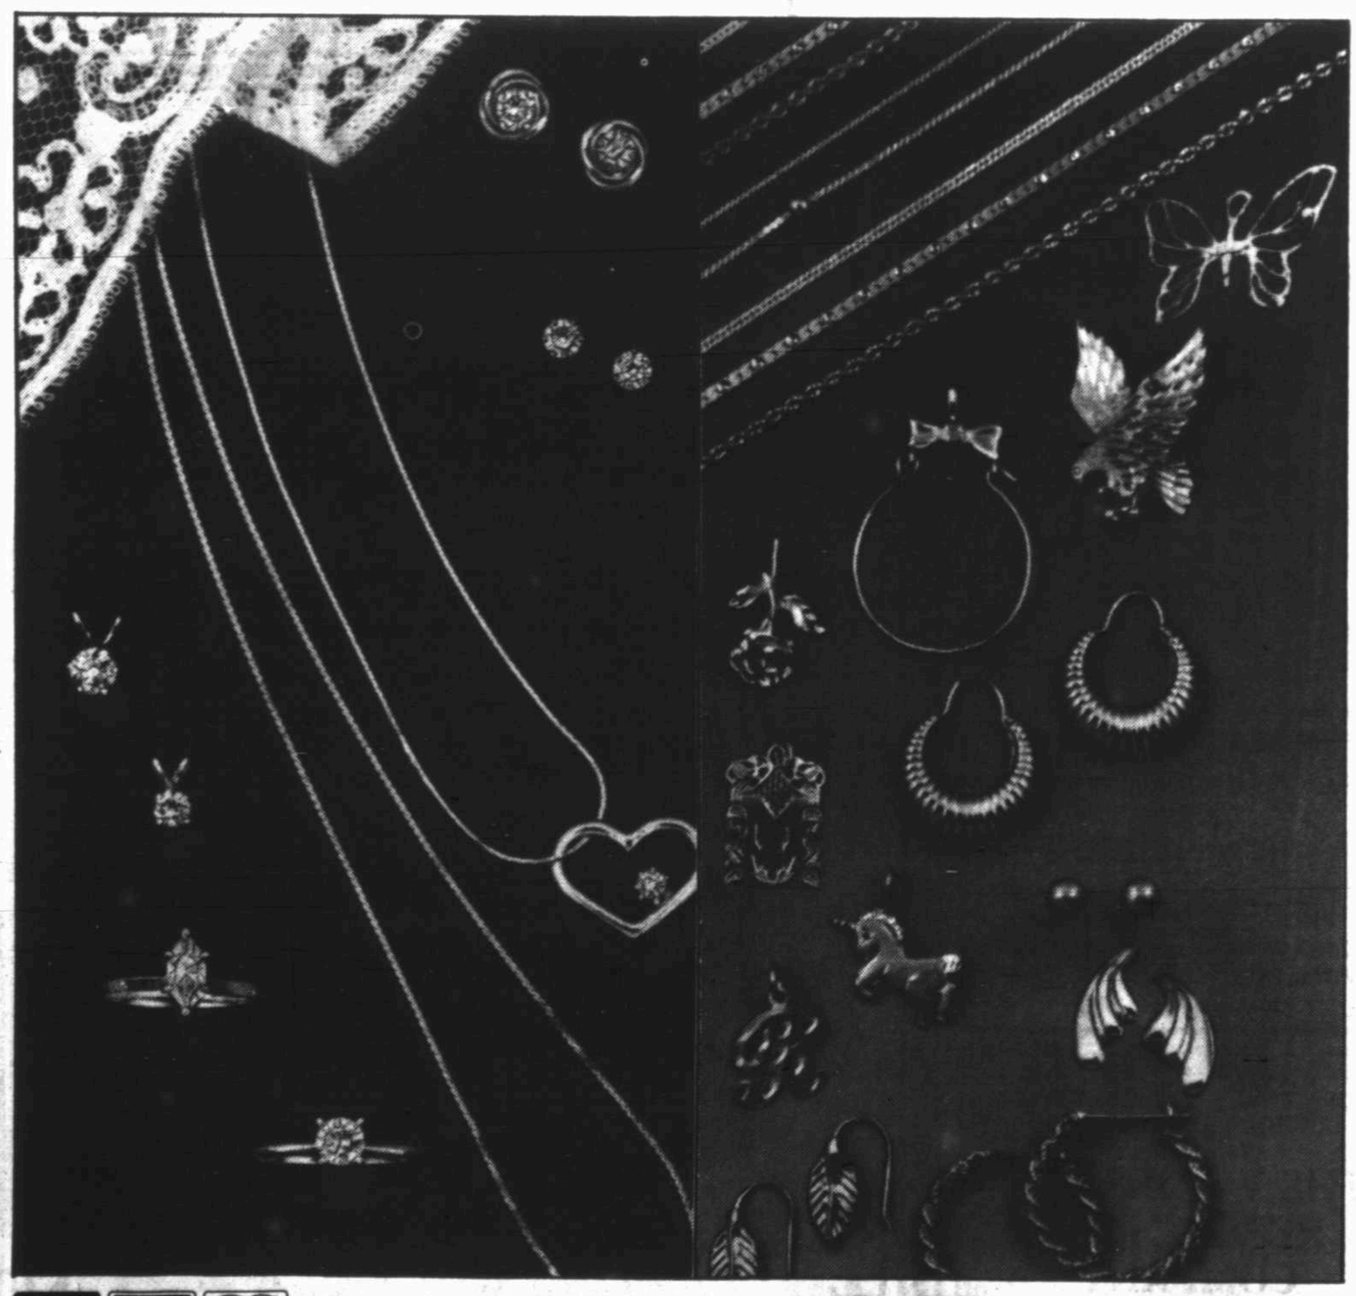

JAT-Yugoslav Airlines and Yugotours have improved the popular "Senior Citizens Program" sponsored by the Yugoslav National Tourist Office and valid from Oct. 1 through May 31, 1984. The "A La Carte" package has been specially designed for retired persons, regardless of age, or anyone over 60 and their spouses. The two-week program includes visits to Opatija, a classic seaside resort; Hvar, one of the most ruggedly beautiful of the Dalmatian islands; the walled city of Dubrovnik, and Herceg Novi, a garden resort at the entrance of the Bay of Kotor, the only fjord in Southern Europe.

Rates range from $729 to $929 per person, based on double occupancy, and include round-trip transportation on JAT from New York; hotel accommodations with two meals daily in twin-bedded rooms for 13 nights; half-day sightseeing, and all service charges and taxes. For additional information, contact the Yugoslav National Tourist Office, 630 Fifth Ave., New York, N.Y. 10011.

The cruise ship Fairwind holds special masquerade parties for children aboard.

Children welcome on cruises

Copley News Service

Once primarily the province of wealthy adults traveling by themselves, cruises these days are often within the reach of budget-conscious families.

A relatively new development makes that possible: air-sea packages at greatly reduced prices for parents whose kids share a stateroom with them.

In an effort to capture this segment of the market, a growing number of cruise operators have come up with a host of services and facilities — including newly outfitted video and jukebox rooms — especially designed for teens and other young passengers.

And practically every line catering to American travelers now offers supervised swimming, crafts and other activities, thus allowing parents to follow their own pursuits.

Among the families encountered on our 11-day voyage around the Caribbean was that of Dr. Joseph Garafalo, a Santa Barbara, Calif., physician, who brought along his wife and their five children, four of them under 17.

"I see them at dinner and that's about the only time we spend together," he remarked. "The rest of the day they're off involved and happy with the many things for kids aboard this ship."

A pioneer in family holidays at sea, Los Angles-based Sitmar Cruises created a special program for teenagers and children aboard this 25,000-ton liner and its sister, the Fairsea. A swimming pool reserved for the younger set, and a trained "youth activities coordinator" and staff are part of these year-round programs. June through August, the most popular months with families, a "teen coordinator," a "theatrical director," at least eight counselors and expanded facilities are featured.

The matter of space bears some note.

Both Sitmar vessels are unusually spacious and most of their double cabins with two lower berths — except suites and mini-suites — are equipped with hideaway Pullman berths to accommodate a third or fourth person; when not in use, those full-size "bunks" fit out of the way.

Charlotte Robertson, the youth coordinator on this sailing, says youngsters 2 to 11 may use the ships youth center every day from 9 a.m. to midnight. There they are offered activities such as arts and crafts, bingo, pingpong, pizza parties, supervised swimming in a special shallow pool, costume-making (for the ship's masquerade party), port information lectures and many others. The program also utilizes any special talents individual counselors might have; in the past those have included Italian language lessons, needlepoint instruction and even astrology.

Teens, too, have their own center as well as opportunities for making friends and having a good time. Their options include disco dancing and contests, movies, hair and beauty demonstrations, fashion shows and backgammon tournaments.

Fifteen-year-old Kristi Petrick o Escondido, Calif., enjoyed the evening entertainment aboard Fairwind.

"I like the disco a lot. There's nothing around at home after midnight for kids my age. And Mom and Dad don't worry because they know where you are."

Going home to Lancaster, Pa., was not on Peter Harris' mind as our cruise drew to an end.

"I'm going to see if they have any empty cabins for the next cruise," said this 13-year-old, who spent time with his parents only during meals and on shore excursions. "The youth program was fun. Whenever I got bored by myself there was something to do. I especially liked the tournaments."

With more than a couple hundred youngsters aboard, Robertson said, not all of them will be happy at all times and a few might even get into some minor mischief, "but on he whole, most of the kids seem very content."

Sitmar's newest ship, the $150 million Fairsky is scheduled to enter service next spring with a larger youth center as well as ceiling-recessed upper berths in about half its 606 staterooms to better accommodate families with youngsters. The 38,000-ton liner is to cruise the Mexican Riviera and Alaska from its home port, Los Angeles. As is the case with the other two vessels, adults will pay 60 percent of the minimum double cabin rate and children 2 through 17 sharing the stateroom wil pay only 30 percent of that rate.

Travel to USSR disrupted by ban

By 'GENE BURKE
Copley News Service

TRAVEL ADVISORY: U.S.S.R. — The State Department advises that the governing board of the World Pilots Association recommended to its national association a 60-day ban on civil airline flights to Moscow. IFALPA notes that the recommendation was made in response to the action of the Soviet Union in destroying a defenseless civilian airliner — Korean Airlines Flight 007. The IFALPA concludes that it expects its members to fully comply with the ban.

American travelers to the Soviet Union should be aware that the IFALPA ban could seriously disrupt air travel to the Soviet Union. Flights to and from the Soviet Union may be canceled without notice. Arranging alternate transportation to and from the Soviet Union could involve substantially higher cost to the traveler. Travelers also should anticipate lengthy delays in obtaining such transportation from Moscow should the ban be fully implemented.

Q: I am concerned about my son traveling abroad if he should become destitute. Where would he get help?

A: If a traveler becomes destitute abroad, the American consul will help the traveler get in touch with his or her family, friends, bank or employer and will tell the individual how to arrange for them to send funds to assist him or her.

Q: Under what conditions might you, an American citizen, be considered a citizen of another country?

A: A foreign country may claim you as a citizen of that country if:
— You were born there.
— Your parent is a citizen of that country.
— You are married to a citizen of that country.
— Or, you are a naturalized U.S. citizen but are still considered a citizen under that country's laws.

If a person is in any of the above categories, before they travel they should check their status (including military obligations) with the embassy or consulate of the country that might claim him or heras a citizen.

Q: I have a very old passport issued years ago. Will this do to submit for citizenship evidence when I apply or a new passport?

A: Yes. Your expired passport can be submitted; however, if it is difficult to identify you by the photograph and descriptive data in the old passport, you should be prepared to submit an identity document such as a valid driver's license. Normlly, a passport serves as evidence of citizenship as well as of identity.

If you wish personalized information about passport requirements, send your questions to 'Gene Burke, Passport Agency, 11000 Wilshire Blvd., Federal Building, Suite 13100, West Los Angeles, Calif. 90024.

'Gene Burke is the regional director of the Los Angeles Passport Agency.

New Camp Fire program

By The Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — A new educational activities program for kindergarten-aged boys and girls, called the "Camp Fire Sparks," has been launched by Camp Fire.

This program will include creative arts projects, cooking, dramatic play and, finally, a full eight weeks spent on outdoor activities.

At the end of each short meeting during the program, the young boys and girls in the Camp Fire Sparks will receive small stickers recognizing their accomplishments.

These awards help provide the frequent recognition children this age need, according to Dr. Karen Bartz, director of the department of program development services at Camp Fire.

Gunnison: Folks rugged as harsh landscape

By MICHAEL CARLTON
By The Los Angeles Times—
Washington Post News Service

GUNNISON, Colo. — She has lived here for 81 years, almost as long as this town has existed in the harsh and demanding landscape of central Colorado.

And still, she rides her horse, scampers like a squirrel up the wooden ladder of her ranch's century-old barn and cooks massive meals for her ranch hands. She tends a garden, drives a Jeep, keeps the books — and invites a stranger in for lunch.

Vevarelle Esty was a pioneer woman in this region, a resident when only 1,200 persons lived in the broad river valleys of the Gunnison and the Tomichi, the East and the Taylor. She lived here when Crested Butte was rich with silver and coal, long before it began to mine the pockets of wealthy Texas skiers.

SHE LIVED HERE when there was no electricity and no telephone, when you cut lumber from your hillsides and sent it to a mill to build your house. When horses were tied to hitching rails in the heart of town. When the only tourists were drifters looking for work on the ranches.

Today's Gunnison County is different, of course, but it has retained many of the values of Mrs. Esty's time — respect for a neighbor's property, love of home and family and a good education, admiration of outdoor proficiency and ruggedness. Like Mrs. Esty, the county has endured, even prospered.

It takes a special breed of person to live here, to put up with winter nights when the temperature can dip to 56 below zero, and survive raging storms which drop as much as 28 feet of snow in a winter.

From the first, when Captain John Gunnison surveyed this area in 1853 for a railroad, Gunnison County has exacted its price. Gunnison never completed his survey. Indians attacked his group, and Gunnison fell with 14 arrows in his body.

Some time later Alferd Packer was stranded near Gunnison during a ferocious winter season. Packer killed and ate his companions during the winter of 1874 and earned the nickname "The Colorado Cannibal."

SURVIVAL — BY WHATEVER means — is the name of the game in Gunnison County, but today much of that survival comes from tourism.

Rugged amd untamed as it is, Gunnison County remains a natural spot for tourism, an industry that brings in nearly $35 million each year, most of that spent by summertime Texans and Arizonans and others who come to bathe in the coutny's high-altitude beauty. Nearly a million tourists — carried in by as many as 10,000 automobiles each summer's day — flow through the valley to enjoy what many believe is Colorado's most stunning scenery.

Selecting the most beautiful area of Colorado is a little like choosing the finest diamond from a basket of perfect blue-whites or deciding upon the bravest of the Congressional Medal of Honor winners. The result is usually unsatisfactory and always controversial. One man's opinion — or even a panel's — reflects personal prejudice, judgments reflecting a lifetime of experiences.

So, I won't call the Gunnison area the most beautiful in Colorado. I'll just say that the beauty of this slice of Colorado will haunt you always.

IN THE FALL, the broad valleys spread between the mountains like melted butter, fields of light bronze flashing in the brilliance of an autumnal sun. South to Lake City and north to Crested Butte are massive mountains, peaks like 14,309-foot Uncompahgre and 12,000-foot Mount Crested Butte, which looks like a granite wave forever frozen on the verge of breaking. Colorado's largest lake, Blue Mesa, curls its way along 96 miles of shoreline here, and more than 2,000 miles of prime fishing rivers flow over pebbled steambeds.

Snipe and duck, elk and deer, sage grouse and black bear, make these mountains and hollows their home, sharing the land's bounty with the enormous herds of cattle that summer in the mountain meadows and winter on the ranches that dot the lonely landscape.

Right now in the highlands, the pine forests are studded with golden aspen. Fall is perhaps the best time in Gunnison, with warm days in the 70s and crisp evenings in the 30s, smashing scarlet sunsets and stars flashing like strobe lights. Fires burn brightly at night, and golfers hit crisp drives on sun-kissed fairways at noon. Soon — too soon for golfers but not soon enough for skiers — winter will begin to choke the mountains and cold winds will frost windows and numb noses.

BUT THIS BEAUTIFUL area is so forgotten that a major ski resort, Crested Butte, calls itself The Great Unknown. Although it is only 18 miles from Aspen as the eagle flies, Crested Butte has but a fraction of Aspen's skiers; a wait of more than five minutes in a lift line is most unusual, even at the height of the season. Crested Butte may be the closest ski resort to a commercial jet airport in Colorado, but few people seem to know about it, preferring to fly off to the more crowded slopes of Aspen and Vail.

The architecture of Crested Butte has little of the Bavarian cuteness one finds in most Colorado ski resorts. The tiny city has been declared a National Historic District, and the pretty little Victorian pastel houses are much as they were at the turn of the century — at least on the outside. The bars of the town host local ranchers, as well as Dallas bankers, and the hospitality is warm and real, a friendliness that permeates all of Gunnison County.

WHILE VISITORS GAWK at the scenery, wish for trout or slash through the knee-deep powdery snow, Gunnison County residents live their lives as they always have — with great gusto and both physical and mental toughness. For example:

—In winter, the intramural basketball program at Western State College begins at 4:30 in the afternoon. The students are still playing well after midnight.

—The NCAA skiing program was begun here at Western State College.

Mexican travel program

By Philip Sousa
Copley News Service

Aeromexico has launched a youth travel program that includes air transportation to several Mexican destinations, lodging in youth hostels and meals. These very reasonable packages are available to anyone 12 through 25.

Destinations include Mexico City, Cancun, La Paz, Ixtapa-Zihuatanejo, Durango, Obregon and Aguas Calientes with optional extensions to Tuxtla Gutierrez, Zacatecas, Morelia, San Luis Potosi and Queretaro.

For example, the La Paz package costs only $137 from Tijuana or $172 from Los Angeles, including round-trip air fare, accommodations for three nights and three meals daily.

Greenwich hidden tourist haven

By MICHAEL CARLTON
By The Los Angeles Times—
Washington Post News Service

GREENWICH, CONN — New York City and Connecticut continue their waltz of rich and poor, the haves and have-nots. At night the circuit is completed — the maids return to New York and food stamps, the businessmen to Connecticut and Boodles Gin martinis.

But a few people — a smart, lucky few — are above all this. They are the tourists who have come to New York for the theatre, for the museums, for the shopping. They are the tourists who have done all that and want more. They are the ones who, along with the maids and gardeners, ride the train north in the morning — north to a day's outing in one of the most beautiful sections of the East, a place of grace, beauty, wealth, and privilege.

Any tourist who has the sense to get on a New Haven Line train to Greenwich will be rewarded by one of the hidden tourist destinations in this country — a place that offers good restaurants, a superb country inn, a gem of a museum, country scenes that evoke Andrew Wyeth paintings, and a touch of a proud history.

Greenwich has for years been a home of privilege, a place where people like Bernard Gimbel relaxed on his 200-acre estate "The Chieftans," and a future vice-president, George Bush, was raised in the proper manner.

It is the kind of place in which you would expect to find Rolls Royce and Mercedes Benz garages — and you do, with an Aston Martin dealership thrown in for good measure.

Because Greenwich is a town which enjoys an extraodinarily high per capita income, it is laced with a number of quality restaurants — which is a great advantage for visitors, too. Places like Le Grange, Cinquante-Cinq, Tapestries, Guy Savoy and Angsavanee in adjoining Port Chester are of a much higher quality than you would expect in a town of Greenwich's size.

Cruise ship sails through history

By FRANK MACOMBER
Copley News Service

So you can't project yourself into the future to join a Star Wars team. But you can sail back into the Middle Ages.

We recently journeyed back in time aboard the 27,670-ton Sea Princess of the London-based P&O line into a world which heretofore had been only something we studied in high school or college history.

From Southampton, on Britain's south coast, the ship prowled through the waters of the North Atlantic, the Bay of Biscay and through the Strait of Gibraltar, gateway to the Mediterranean.

BUT THIS 14-DAY voyage was more than a sail in the sun. Sea Princess took its 770 passengers to ports in Portugal, Spain, Italy and France. During half-day or full-day shore excursions, we looked in on one world little changed through the centuries and another, along the French Riviera, where the international jet set frolics.

First port of call was Praia da Rocha, a Portuguese fishing town whose economy depends on tourism and the skill of its fishermen. The town lies in the maritime province of Algarve, which stretches 140 miles along the southern coast of Portugal. East of this port, the rich soil produces figs, almonds, oranges and tomatoes, all taken to market each Monday by farmers who still till the land as did their ancestors centuries ago.

The past three years have been poor ones for these farmers. A drought has hurt much of these farmlands whose fertility depends mostly on rain, rather than modern irrigation systems.

Nevertheless, on this Monday morning the narrow roads on which we traveled were crowded with trucks hauling produce to the markets in Praia da Rocha.

THE ALGARVE BACK-COUNTRY undulates down from the mountains to the sea looking out toward Africa. Memories of the Moorish-African past are evident in the brilliant white houses whose roof-terraces and filigree chimneys suggest the turrets of forts and castles.

From Praia da Rocha we sailed south and into the Strait of Gibraltar before entering the Mediterranean. The Sea Princess' skipper, Commodore John Wacher, brought the ship in as close as possible to the rock so passengers could see the rocky real estate Britain and Spain have been quarreling over for years.

Next was Alicante, Spain, perched on the edge of the Mediterranean since about 230 B.C. and still protected by a medieval fortress, the castle of Santa Barbara on Mount Benacantil.

Alicante's population of about 350,000 grows to more than 500,000 in the summer as vacationers invade the city's long stretch of squeaky white beaches. Until 20 years ago this was a sleepy community; today numerous apartment buildings and scores of hotels rise on slopes east of the old quarter.

THE BEACHFRONT PROMENADE, dotted with shops and outdoor cafes, is the city's chief pride. Comprised of more than 5 million individual mosaics, the walkway is lined on either side with towering palms. Its multicolor mosaics are designed to portray row after row of waves which give the walk the illusion of an undulating sea.

Inland about 15 miles by bus through orange, lemon, almond and olive groves is Cadizon de Oro, the Mountain of Gold and the entrance to the Ganalobre Caves. Deep inside, the eerie caves are divided into great vaults from which hang stalactites to meet the stalagmites growing upward from the floor. The 300-foot-high caverns, discovered only 53 years ago, began to develop their gnarled formations millions of years ago.

The ride to the caverns takes you through Mucha Miel (A Lot of Honey), Santa Faz and on to Busot along a winding highway bordered with centuries-old castles and stone watchtowers reminiscent of the days when the region was a battleground for the Romans, Greeks, Visigoths and others.

Buildings in some of the villages were centuries old during the American Revolution. Since that was long before Ben Franklin got around to discovering electricity, homes and business structures often are wired on the outside. Some resemble gift-wrapped boxes, for the architecture is whie stucco of the Moorish influence.

ANOTHER DAY OF cruising, great food and the warm company of Britishers before we reached the Italian port of Leghorn. Six miles inland, Pisa was a Roman colony in 180 B.C. and it's known to the world mostly for its Leaning Tower. Government engineers are working frantically to halt the tilt, probably the result of building the 1,500-ton tower with only 9 feet of foundation on marshy land more than 800 years ago.

Lesser known but on the same great grassy square are the Baptistry and the Cathedral. The former was begun in 1153 and the latter in 1063, probably as thanks to God for the great naval victory of the Pisana over the Saracens at Palermo.

Next we visited Florence, 65 bus miles from Pisa. Here is a city which has retained an extraordinary wealth of art treasures, a glorious witness to centuries of civilization, many of them under the domination of the Medici family.

From Leghorn, a day's journey aboard the Sea Princess took us to Cannes on the French Riviera, the home of the annual International Film Festival.

Today the ancient houses have all but disappeared, replaced by modern luxury hotels and villas peering out over the beautiful harbor filled with yachts.

PERHAPS THE MOST famous feature, however, is the Promenade de la Croisette, extending from the boat landing to the Palm Beach Summer Casino; it has two miles of fine sand beaches.

Two days later, Sea Princess sailed into the Spanish harbor of Cadiz, 70 miles west of Gibraltar and the nearest port to Seville. Founded 1,100 years before the birth of Christ by the Phoenicians, Cadiz is a bustling place. In the Spanish Civil War of 1936 it was captured early by Gen. Francisco Franco's forces and served as an entry for troops from Morocco.

Eighty miles to the east, Seville, capital of the rich region of Andalusia, ranks as one of the brightest gems in the Spanish tiara.

Indiana offers beauty products of craftsmen

By SHARON DIRLAM
The Los Angeles Times—
Washington Post News Service

From Gnaw Bone to Rising Sun, from French Lick to Metamora, southern Indiana offers up a harvest of country experiences on the fall foliage itinerary.

Brown County is Indiana's best-known autumn destination. The sleepy village of Nashville (named after Nashville, Tenn.) bursts at the seams when the leaves turn red, with bumper-to-bumper city folks in search of the perfect country experience. And with good reason. Just 40 miles south of Indianapolis and a short drive from the lovely limestone buildings of the Indiana University campus, the forested hills of Brown County smolder with yellows, reds and golds when the first frost signals the end of Indian summer.

Drawn to the area for its beauty and sense of homespun friendliness are certain self-made types of people who could settle anywhere because they have two qualities in common: artistic talent, and the willingness to make do in order to live where they want rather than go where the jobs are. Their predecessors in the area named the nearby towns with some imagination: Gnaw Bone, Needmore, Stone Head and Surprise.

Brown County is a haven for artists and craftsmen. Paintings line the walls of their galleries; quilts and candlesticks, hand-blown glass and wood sculptures, leather goods, baskets and homespun cloth line the shelves of retail stores.

One shop of particular interest to tourists from the cities, especially those who are accustomed to paying top prices for period pieces, is the Old Ferguson House. "Old Stuff" says the sign out front, and, indeed, stacked against every window inside and piled up on all sides of the yard are mountains of exactly that: buggy parts, turn-of-the-century farm implements, wooden Indians, calico toys, bustles and corsets, rocking chairs and bird cages. Somewhere in the back is the owner, who will sell you something if you want it enough to interrupt a conversation that has probably been going on for years.

A shop called the Calico Frog is chock-full of new handicrafts, even to such items as a doll that doubles as a cover for the straw part of a broom. "No sketching or photographs" warns a sign on the door, in a certainty that the clever crafts within are inspiring to copycats from elsewhere.

Most notable among the restaurants are the Brown County Inn and the Nashville House (which also has a recommended crafts shop). But for lunch try the Ordinary, not only for its name but for its plain good fare and its nickelodeon that still works, although it takes a quarter, not a nickel.

An 1838 covered bridge leads to Brown County State Park and its Abe Martin Lodge where you can stay in comfort for $30 a night (double) or in a cabin for even less. (Abe Martin was a fictional character created by Kin Hubbard, syndicated columnist at the Indianapolis News. He is widely quoted in Brown County.)

About 30 miles south is Spring Mill State Park (stay at the lovely old limestone Spring Mill Inn in the park, about $27 for two). Within the park is a reconstructed pioneer village (from the early 1800s) including a post office, residences, shops and grist mill. The mill is set to turning every hour, creaking and groaning as water pours over the large wooden wheel outside, setting in motion the cogs and wheels within to grind the dried kernels into meal between the round stones. The miller shovels the yellow meal into a tub and then divides it into two-pound portions that you can buy.

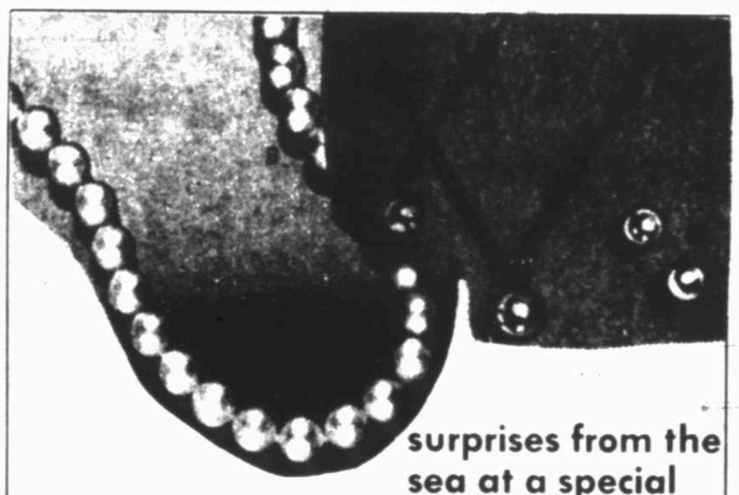

The old mill also houses a museum with a casual assortment of Hoosier memorabilia including an iron bullet mold; bayonets and rifles; glassware and pewter ware.

'Craftsman' says it all for Avery

By JULIE FAUBEL
Business-Energy Writer

James Avery's philosophy, like much of his jewelry, is simple; 'do it the best way you know how.' And Avery has been doing just that for almost 30 years.

James Avery, considered by many to be one of the jewelry industries leaders, owns James Avery Craftsman, a company which designs and produces jewelry and markets it through its own retail stores — like the one in Midland park Mall — direct mail cataloges and other speciality stores.

An obsession with quality was the driving force when Avery started his business back in 1954 in his two car garage in Kerrville.

"With a capital investment of about $250, I built myself a workbench and bought a few hand tools and with a few scraps of silver and copper, I set up shop," Avery said during a recent interview at the Midland store.

Avery did not want to be known as a jeweler at the time so he called himself a craftsman.

"I called myself a craftsman because I was working with wood. I was making some home accessories such as shelves and headboards, in addition to making jewelry, and living out in the country I didn't want people bring me their watches and things like that. And I wasn't sure wether I was going to end up designing jewerly or working with wood. I was just doing what I wanted to do," said Avery.

Avery finally chose jewelry and today his company employs over 400 craftsmen and has 20 retail stores in Texas and Oklahoma. The company plans to expand its operations inside and outside the state.

"We are looking at several cities in Texas such as Lubbock, Arlington and Beaumont. We're going to try to do a better job of marketing in Texas because that's where we're better known. We are also considering Denver and Atlanta. We're going to move very carefully though. This energy crunch hasn't helped any. Our Oklahoma and Houston stores are feeling the pinch. But Dallas is fine and our Austin stores are doing great," Avery said.

Another area where Avery is doing exceptionally well is direct mail.

"We felt that there was a market there and of course we are very aware of the fact that in most cases there are two people working in the family and there is less time for shopping. Everything we read says that this is the market of the future so this is where we want to be. Also no one in the jewelry business, has ever made it big in direct marketing, Avery said.

"We've been in direct marketing for three years and this year we're going to break even. We knew it would take this long. We didn't go into this program with our eyes closed. We did our homework and we knew that it would cost some money to produce and mail a quality catalog. Direct mail works but it takes time and money to do a quality job," Avery said.

Given his busy schedule, Avery no longer has time to personally oversee all phases of his business like he used to, but he still finds time to design new jewerly and still enjoys that part of the business.

"Well, it's fun!" Avery said. "Even after all these years it's still fun. It's fun to work on the catalog and see how it's coming out; to work with the designers and see the new pieces; to meet our sales people; to see how nice our stores are; It's all still fun!" Avery emphasized.

Avery is a deeply religious man who believes a successful business man needs to be sensitive to the needs of others.

"You have to be sensitive to others, that's all. If you're not sensative to the needs of others, whether it's your customers, or your employees, you may miss something important. If a businessman is not willing to listen and realize that these people either need something and need it badly or they don't need it - so then there's no need to create a new product or service," said Avery

In spite of his success, Avery has never let the pressures of making a living interfear with his love for his work.

Avery hesitates when people ask him about his business' success. "I don't know. I would like to think that it has something to do with the intergrity of our entire operation. And when you start out trying to do something that is good, is meaningful, is meaningful to other people, and they inturn find pleasure or meaning in your work, then you can be considered successful," Avery said.

Avery takes pride in describing his business practices.

"If we should fall short then we'll work hard to correct the problem. We are very direct and above board in our business practices. We try to price our things as fairly as we possibly can. We really don't pay that much attention to the competion and what they're doing. In other words, we're not trying to keep up with anyone," Avery emphasized

Doing the best he can at all times includes supervising quality control in the production facitilites as well as the retail stores.

"I vist each store once a year. When I go into a store I check everything. If I see something wrong I correct it as soon as possible. Sometimes we dont have enough quality control and things go bad and then other times we have too much," Avery said.

Avery's company has been hurt in the past by fluctuations in gold and silver prices.

"Oh! It hurt, it hurt," said Avery regarding price fluctuations. "We had to lay off about 100 production people because our sales fell off so drastically. Our sales have since stabilized and have been steadily increasing except for this last year. It (sales) has flattened out this last year."

Avery attributed his company's flat sales to the current recession. Avery also said the jewelry business as a whole is not doing very well because people are reluctant to spend money on luxury items right now.

Avery again emphasized that anyone in business must be sensative to the needs of their people. He also said a person who wants to be successful in his or her own business must be willing to sacrifice.

"A person also has to be careful about being greedy. You can't be the kind of person who has to satisfy his or her own needs first. You have to think about your employees because if you don't take care of your employees, you're not going to be around very long, " Avery said.

Avery advises anyone interested in starting their own business to first prepare themselves to do something specific.

"You have to be able to do something or have knowledge about something that people need. you have to have the tools. Then you offer yourself, pledging to do as well as you can to deliver a quality product," Avery said.

'I called myself a craftsman because ... I didn't want people bringing me their watches and things like that.'

Bankers play chicken with foreign debtors

By The Los Angeles Times - Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Sitting in their suite at the Four Seasons Hotel last Monday, Lewis Coleman and Michael Rossi were still engaged in a game of chicken that threatened to send new tremors through the world banking system.

Many of the bankers who had converged here for the annual meeting of the International Monetary Fund were wondering: Would these executives of San Francisco's Wells Fargo Bank move to foreclose on two Venezuelan power companies? Would they go ahead with a threatened lawsuit in New York, seeking to take over the companies' assets in the United States? Would this aggravate the international debt crisis during a particularly sensitive period?

The two power companies, C.A. La Electricidad de Caracas and C.A. Luz Electrica de Venezuela, were several months and $7.3 million behind in interest payments on two separate loans totaling about $270 million. The electric companies were able and willing to pay. But the Venezuelan central bank would not let them. As the leader of a 12-bank lending group, Wells Fargo was angry and impatient.

By Tuesday morning, however, the confrontation had cooled. Venezuelan government officials, bowing to mounting criticism from international bankers, pledged new and more comprehensible procedures for paying lenders to the country's private companies. Wells Fargo chose to hold off on any foreclosure action. "We're pleased that this seems to be going in the right direction," says Rossi, a Wells Fargo senior vice president.

AS WELLS FARGO'S tangle with Venezuela indicates, the special brand of brinkmanship that has characterized the international debt crisis is anything but over. And, while bankers gathering here say they are confident they can douse the fires of the international debt crisis one by one, many foresee another half-decade of worrisome difficulties and painful economic workouts in Latin America and other developing nations.

A year ago, when bankers gathered in Toronto at the IMF meeting, the atmosphere was more tense. Mexico had just announced that it could not make payments on its $82 billion debt. Bankers, who had never before faced the prospect of a massive country default, questioned whether the international financial system could weather the crisis.

With Mexico's government debt now restructured and its economy apparently on the mend, bankers predict that they can turn in repeat performances with other countries.

"We learned that problems conceptually may look tremendously difficult. But, when you get down and work on them case by case, the problems can be dealt with," says Anthony Terracciano, executive vice president and chief financial officer of New York's Chase Manhattan Bank. "... I'm not so wildly optimistic that I think that, from here on, it's absolutely clear sailing. But there's nothing wrong with looking at the evidence of the past year and being more optimistic."

While bankers sense that they have escaped the guillotine, however, many believe they are destined for a sort of Chinese water torture, survivable but long and exceedingly uncomfortable. As one top U.S. banker, warning of another five years of struggle, told his colleagues and clients last week at a dinner reception: "There's one thing we can be sure of next year: We'll be even more weary."

TROUBLES PERSIST and multiply. Riots in the Philippines, touched off by the August assassination of opposition leader Benigno S. Aquino Jr., have stirred new worries about its financial stability. Bankers say the Philippines' credit standing will be severely tested in the next several months. Throughout Latin America, labor unrest continues to challenge government commitments to IMF-sponsored austerity programs. And, in Argentina, a judge's order last week suspending renegotiation of the foreign debts of state-owned companies could derail an August agreement by banks to lend the country $1.5 billion.

But Brazil, with its $90 billion debt burden, stands as a monument to the depth of the bankers' problems. Only last February, a rescue effort was hurriedly crafted for Brazil that called for $4 billion in new loans from its 800 bank lenders and $4.5 billion over a three-year period from the International Monetary Fund. By May, credit was suspended when Brazil failed to meet targets for its inflation rate and government deficit.

Meantime, many small banks ran for cover and refused to go along with any new lending, foisting an even heavier burden on the large banks. Brazil is now more than $2 billion behind on its interest payments.

But last week, in a meeting with Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul Volcker and IMF Managing Director Jacques de Larosiere, 14 top banks agreed to head up a massive fund-raising effort. Banks around the world will be asked to lend another $6.5 billion to Brazil this year and next. The governments of the industrialized nations, by extending export-import credits and postponing collection on old debts to Brazil, agreed to put up another $3.5 billion.

Raising $6.5 billion for Brazil from nervous banks will not be easy. Will Wood, executive vice president of San Francisco's Crocker National Bank, predicts that smaller banks will face a "tremendous amount of arm-pulling, cajoling and pushing" by larger institutions.

REGIONAL AND SMALL banks want assurances that the IMF-sponsored austerity program for Brazil will actually work, that Brazil has not become a financial sinkhole. They want to know that Brazil will not live up to the old but recurring joke that "Brazil is the country of the future and always will be."

With Brazil needing every break it can get, the country's top bank lenders are now seriously considering a move they previously shunned: giving up at least part of the 1.5 percent front-end fee that normally would be charged on new loans, and agreeing to more lenient interest rate terms. That would represent time during the current crisis that banks caved in on such loan terms.

But bankers close to the negotiations with Brazil say the IMF must first forsake a 1.5 percent fee it wants to charge for resuming credit under the previous $4.5 billion, three-year package. And one impediment to a move for more leniency from bankers could be Mexico. Bankers fear Mexico will seek equal treatment and demand to have its old loans adjusted.

The IMF and bankers also are likely to be especially forgiving if Brazil misses targets for its inflation and government deficit by December this year — an eventuality expected by nearly everyone. To receive new credit from both the IMF and bankers, however, the Brazilian congress will have to ratify late this month a measure that sharply reduces the indexation of wages to inflation.

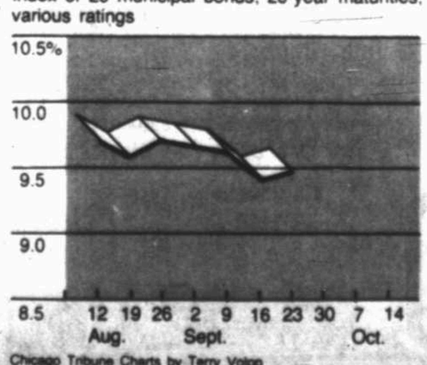

"That would show a monumental effort on the part of the Brazilian authorities to manage a significant reduction in their standard of living and would indicate a degree of good faith that would make me quite understanding of their missing the (economic) targets by the end of this year," says William McDonough, executive vice president and chief financial officer of First National Bank of Chicago.

BANKERS AND the Reagan administration are having a hard time convincing Congress to authorize an additional $8.4 billion contribution to the International Monetary Fund, which has played a key role in shaping rescue packages and austerity programs for troubled debtor nations. The House and Senate have passed sharply different versions of an IMF bill, and it is now stuck in a conference committee.

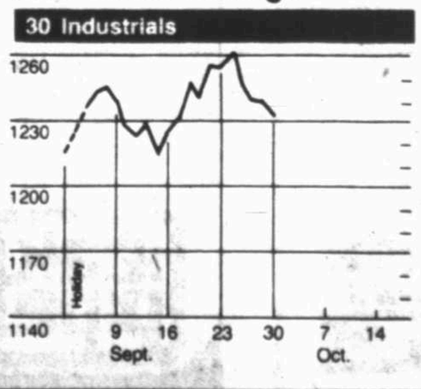

Critics, who contend the bill is a bailout for banks, are lobbying aggressively against it. At the same time, Democrats vow to block final passage until President Reagan apologizes for a Republican campaign committee's accusation that their endorsement of the IMF measure amounted to support for communist dictatorships. Communist nations like Yugoslavia, China and Hungary are members of the IMF.

The bill's critics — an improbable coalition of right-wing groups, conservative academicians and consumer advocates — contend that banks should suffer from their lending mistakes and take losses on their loans. But bankers argue that, while such steps might satisfy a public appetite for punishment, they would force banks to cut back even further on lending to cash-starved developing nations.

Small bank moving downtown, starting aggressive loan policy

By JIM PRESNELL
Business-Energy Writer

Relatively-small Midland American Bank says it's out to aggressively make loans.

Lawrence Hahn, a major stockholder in Midland American Bank, which is moving downtown and changing to director-controlled public stock ownership, said Friday the bank is positioning itself, its new president Sarah Carter, and its directors to assist persons that are qualified to borrow money.

The bank says it wants to put something into Midland. "We're going to be aggressive," Ms. Carter said, "re-investing our deposits in this community."

Ms. Carter said Midland American, with $7.4 million in assets and $6.4 million in deposits, has relatively few loan limitations and "can handle anything" from a few hundred dollars to a few million.

In this way, Ms. Carter thinks the bank can take pressure off of Midland lending banks — by making, and participating in, sizeable loans. The bank passes along large loans to correspondent banks.

Ms. Carter said the bank does have funds available for loans to qualified borrowers. Only 47 percent of its deposits are currently loaned out, while many banks have much higher percentages of loaned deposits.

The State Banking Commission has already approved Midland American's change in ownership structure and planned stock issue. Since other downtown banks have filed no objections, SBC should soon approve its application to move from its Loop 250 and Midland Drive location to a possible site in an office-hotel development being studied for 414 W. Texas, the former HBF building, or to another downtown site.

Positions are as yet unfilled for the banks's 12-person board of directors and a ten-person advisory board to be made up of people from all the towns surrounding Midland, Hahn said, "to show our interest in the entire petroplex." Hahn is a former principal in Petroplex Savings, which has been an outstanding high-growth instituton recently.

Hahn said area customers should ask their bank or savings institution: "How are you investing in Midland?" Midland American's view is, banks should help financially sound Midlanders and area businesses borrow funds. Funds should stay in Midland and work for our area — rather than working in one of the nation's "money centers," the bank's idea continues.

Sarah Carter

"Even the best-run business in town cannot operate without funding," he said. "I could be making pump jacks, the best you ever saw, and sending my bill the same day and my secretary to pick up the money that night, but I couldn't operate for long without financing," Hahn said.

Hahn noted that at least a fair amount of money based on careful accounting of a person's financial reliability, collateral and assets, should be made available by any bank worth its salt. "We want to make loans, work with people and establish a relationship with them."

Ms. Carter echoed this statement: "We want to be a people's bank." She began her tenure as president and acting chief executive of the bank on September 16 after extensive experience with First City and First National banks in Midland. She brought some customers with her, and has made several loans. She noted the bank had been without a president or loan officer since June of this year.

Midland American Bank had been losing money steadily since its opening in June, 1982.

Midland investors recently bought Midland American from another group in the area. Its profit and loss situation took a turn for the better, subsequently, in September. It has shown a profit since Sept. 17, and from that date up until the close of business Thursday, Oct. 6, the bank has seen a 37 percent rise in total assets and a 43 percent increase in deposits.

With a $21 book value and a $35 sale price, Hahn said an investor might hope to see stock in Midland American Bank grow in value while the bank grows. Inquiries about the stock have already been received at the bank's temporary office — although it can be reserved, but not purchased, before all final approvals are ready.

So with State Banking Commission approvals to move downtown and change to local ownership, hope for a Federal Reserve go-ahead, a turned-around profit picture and an aggressive attitude, Midland American is one small bank that is certainly looking toward a solid future as a source of financing and banking services for Midland.

Building is strong, but half 1982 levels

From Staff Reports

Building permits for September were not up to half of 1982's performance, but in an unexceptional year following an exceptional one, that is expected.

In September 1982, 230 permits were issued with a total value of roughly $18.7 million — while September 1983 saw Midland grow slower, with 145 permits granted and a total value of $7.5 million.

To date this year, permit values granted by the Midland Dept. of Buildings and Inspections totaled $127.3 million, and that is a bit more than half of the 1982 permits granted-to-date of $232.7 million.

Shopping centers were the largest item on the building permits list: There were two permits granted for shell construction at a total $1 million value.

Restaurant construction is continuing to be a prominent part of the economy. Red Lobster of Orlando, Fla. has gained a permit for a $275,000-cost restaurant at 2319 W. Loop 250 N. with Sigmacon as the builder. Sigmacon is also from Orlando.

The next largest permit granted during the month was for $200,000. It is a permit for Contemporary Contractors to build a dental office at 3300 Haynes for Dr. Terry Carpenter.

Several smaller commercial permits went to Kent Oil, Texas Electric, Fast Freddie's, Walling Investments, Permian Sign Co. and Kirkpatrick Kontractors, among others, during the month's final week.

Residential construction continued fairly strong in the last week of September, with multiple permits granted to two companies: S&W Homes is building five units on Country Club, while DGW Construction is building four relatively low-cost homes around Midland.

World's oldest banknotes sold at a London auction

LONDON (AP) — The world's three oldest known surviving banknotes, printed in China during the 14th century Ming dynasty, were sold for $1,005, a Phillips auction house spokesman said.

The foot-long one-kwan notes, printed between 1368 and 1399 on paper made of mulberry bark, were an "immense sum those outside the Mandarin classes could only dream of," he said.

They had been expected to bring $1,500 at the Friday sale.

Richard Woods, an editor with Financial Magazines Ltd., which publishes investment magazines, bought one of the three notes for $510. An anonymous Japanese buyer purchased the other two notes.

Also included in the sale was a 200 billion German mark bill, the highest denomination bill issued during the German hyper-inflation in the 1920s. Worth more than $12 then, it was sold for $255.

Economic 'democracy' of owning stock reduced

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of the charms of the American economic system is that everyone can be a capitalist and, so the theory runs, help run the company.

All it takes is the price of a single share of stock. You can pick up a piece of Pan Am for $8 and, if you're in the mood to splurge, you can buy into General Motors for $38 or IBM for $140.

For your money, you get a share of the profits and a voice in the company's affairs.

Until Jan. 1, 1984.

On that date, the government, egged on by the corporate world, will make economic democracy less democratic.

The Securities and Exchange Commission has changed the rules and made it harder for the small stockholder to challenge company policies.

After Jan. 1, you'll need a fairly substantial investment in the company — and hold it for a year — before you can get a vote on your ideas by your fellow shareholders.

Before, companies were required to lay any stockholder's proposals before all shareholders. Votes were cast either at the firm's annual meeting or by a proxy ballot through the mail. One vote per share.

The proponent got 500 words to lay out his idea and his arguments. If the company's directors didn't like the proposal, they had 500 words to explain why.

Stockholders who want companies to apply social values to their businesses began using that mechanism for advocating change. They got under the skin of management by raising all sorts of issues in proxy statements.

Some proposed that firms curtail operations in segregationist South Africa. Some questioned companies' environmental practices. Some asked firms to get out of the nuclear energy business. During the Vietnam War, some wanted companies to stop making napalm.

Not only liberals used this means of questioning corporate policies. Conservatives proposed that firms refuse to give money to colleges that employ Marxists or refuse to admit military recruiters.

A conservative group called Accuracy in Media proposed in 1982 that CBS establish an office to represent viewers in network decisions.

Last year, holders of stock in American corporations voted on many such proposals.

They almost never win. If the board of directors is opposed, it usually controls or influences enough votes to win out. Institutions and many shareholders automatically vote the management line.

Exxon put 91 stockholder proposals in proxy statements in the last 40 years. The three it supported carried; the 88 it opposed were defeated.

But the proponents believe the process causes management to rethink its policies and to justify them in public.

And often, to keep an issue off the ballot, managements negotiate a settlement with the stockholder proposing change. Compromises emerge.

Church groups or social activists sometimes buy a single share for the sole purpose of raising their issues in proxy statements.

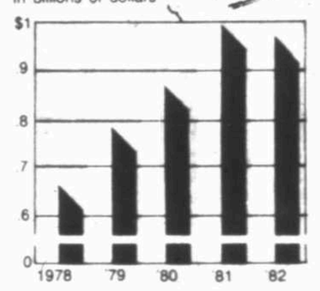

Management doesn't always welcome such second-guessing. The front office doesn't like its proxy statements to become soapboxes for other people's ideas and doesn't like having to circulate those ideas at company expense. AT&T said it had to spend $112,250 one year to print five stockholder proposals and get them to its nearly 3 million shareholders.

And most people in business feel that a corporation's purpose is to make money, not waves.

A look at the frozen pizza industry

Retail sales
In billions of dollars

The USDA proposals

- ☐ At least 12% cheese and/or cheese substitutes would be required; a pizza could not contain less than 6% natural cheese when a combination of natural cheese and cheese substitute is used. [Currently, meat pizzas require no natural cheese.]
- ☐ Meat-topped pizza containing any quantity of cheese substitute or imitation cheese would have to have a prominent qualifying phrase on the front panel of the package in a type size at least half that of the product name.
- ☐ All meat pizzas would have to use at least 12% cooked meat; raw meat no longer would be allowed.

Productivity success key

Copley News Service

"In the U.S. auto industry today, there are seven layers of management between the plant floor and the board chairman. In the Japanese auto industry, there are four layers."

Thus speaks David B. Uman, president of the consulting firm, Management Advisory Group, and author of two respected business books: "Measurement of Performance in Business," McGraw-Hill and "New Product Programs: Their Planning and Control," American Management Association. Later this year, Dow Jones-Irwin will publish his latest, "Productivity, Pricing and Profits."

Uman said in an interview that the U.S.'s increasing non-competitiveness with Japan and some other countries is largely a matter of productivity and pricing strategy.

And sadly, top management of U.S. corporations has not yet grasped the gravity of the problem: The American Institute of Industrial Engineers interviewed 500 chief executives in the Fortune 1,000, and "the majority felt that productivity is something that should be dealt with at lower levels, not at the top level," said Uman.

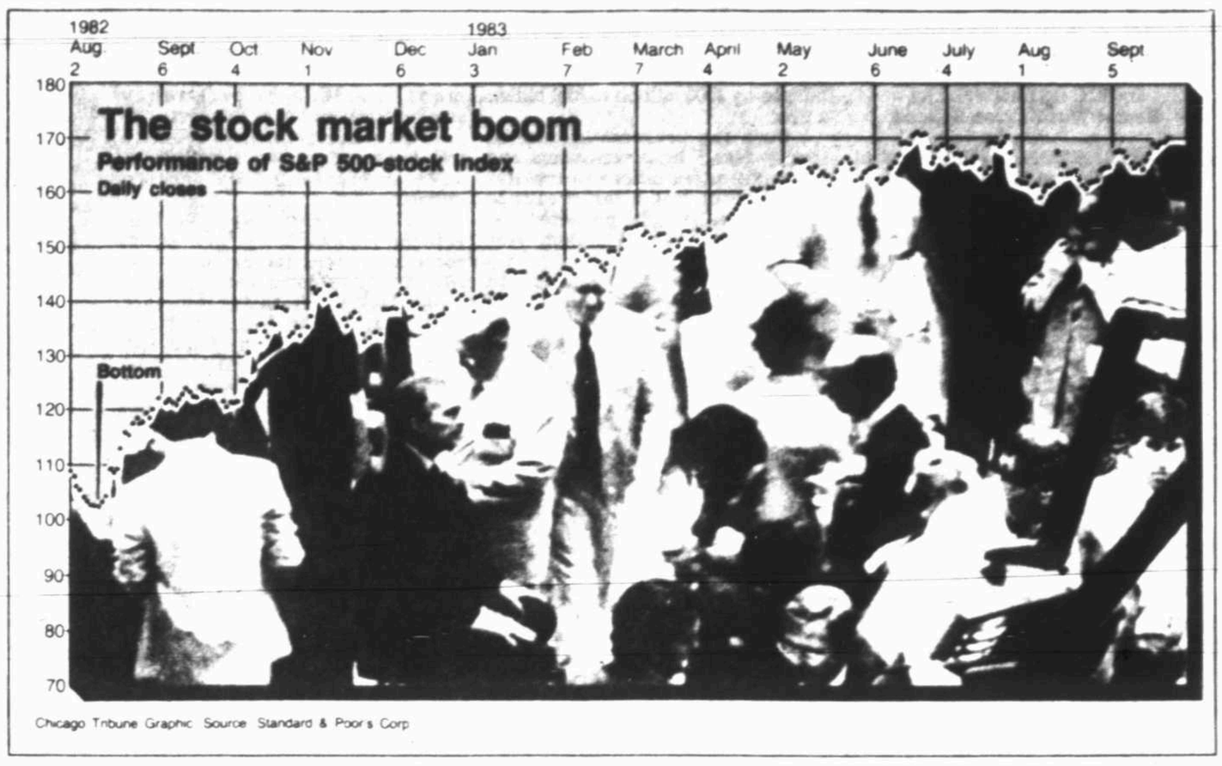

American companies' poor productivity growth comes from a variety of factors: Union inflexibility; management obesity; inconsistent governmental policies (an investment tax credit that is put on, then taken off, for example); the low rate of capital spending and top management's nonawareness of the problem.

Emerging nations have much lower wage rates, but the gap is narrowing for South Korea, Hong Kong and Singapore, he said. The U.S.-Japanese efficiency gap is not so much a function of foreign exchange differences (the yen vs. the dollar): "The cost per hour in the United States and Japan is roughly comparable. The major difference is productivity," Uman said.

U.S. pricing strategies are out of date, he said: Detroit still uses "markup pricing" — toting up direct costs, then adding charges for overhead and profit. Electronics companies use precarious "learning curve" pricing — setting the price by estimating what costs will be once the bugs are worked out of the production line. Texas Instruments priced its microcomputers on that basis — but then demand never developed, and the company suffered a disastrous loss.

Among pricing strategies, Uman likes "skimming" — charging high prices initially, then dropping them as the product matures. This works on a product with patent protection. He also likes "penetration pricing" — slashing prices below competitors' to gain market share.

But such a strategy won't work without productivity to bring costs down. Uman thinks the United States can turn around: "In the steel business, there is a second tier of companies developing — specialty steelmakers that have lean managements and offer employees stock participation, and utilize sound pricing strategies," he said.

CofC offers crime seminar

The Midland Chamber of Commerce's Small Business Council will sponsor a "Crime Prevention Seminar" Oct. 18 in Midland Center.

This free seminar is being offered to all business owners or managers. Alison Peeler, special programs director for the Chamber, said it will demonstrate how to "put preventative maintenance to work in time for holiday shopping."

The seminar will begin at 7:30 p.m. It will be taught by representatives of the Midland Police Department and District Attorney's office.

PBGC teaching toughness

Assertiveness Training will be offered by the Permian Basin Graduate Center, Wednesday, Oct 19, from 9a.m.-5p.m., in the PBGC building, 105 W. Illinois. Marion Kimberly will instruct the course. Fee is $85.

For registration or further information, call 683-2832.

Tax workshop at UTPB

A tax workshop designed to benefit the small businessman will be presented Oct. 22 on the campus of The University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

The Small Business Tax Workshop is sponsored by the faculty of accountancy and information systems at UTPB, and will be conducted by Jim Gilmore, tax auditor with the Midland office of the Internal Revenue Service.

Gilmore said many small busimessmen are very accomplished in the nuts and bolts of the services or products they offer to the public, but when it comes to figuring out the paperwork on taxes at the end of the year, they find themselves in unfamiliar territory.

"Anyone who is new in business, or is thinking about opening a business, will benefit from the workshop," Gilmore said. "And there are so many business people who have had their doors open for years but are faced with tax problems in some particular area, such as employment tax problems," he added.

Among topics to be covered in the tax workshop are recordkeeping, business income tax returns, employment taxes, and quarterly and annual tax retruns. The workshop will also delve into the details of schedule C of the business tax return; profit or loss from business or profession.

Registration for the Small Business Tax Workshop is $50 in advance (through Oct. 19) or $65 at the door.

The workshop will be in the Founders Building at UTPB, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Oct. 22. The registration fee will include lunch and all necessary materials for the course. Checks should be made payable to UTPB and may be mailed to: Dr. Patricia Williams, College of Business Administration, UTPB, Odessa, TX 79762. For more information on the workshop, call Williams at 367-2162.

BBB announces winners

The winners of the Better Business Bureau 1983 Exceptional Business Award were D & C Sales Inc. and Zenith Claners and Laundry.

Noel D. Marsalis, president, established D & C Sales in 1958. Located in Big Spring, the company is engaged in the business of selling and servicing mobile homes.

Zenith Cleaners & Laundry, Midland, is owned by Sadru Pirani.

These two companies were selected by an independent committee to receive the 1983 Exceptional Buisness Award in recognition of their dedication to providing their customers and the community with outstanding service. They were selected from 16 companies nominated by the public.

Petroplex plans change

Petroplex Savings Association has announced the upcoming relocation of the current home office from the Paragon Building to Dinero Plaza. The move was approved by the Texas Savings and Loan Department in September.

Jim Everett, president and chief executive officer, said Petroplex Savings' continued unprecedented growth necessitated a move to a location which could effectively accomodate the association's rapidly expanding operations.

"Dinero Plaza offers a facility which will enable us to better serve our rapidly expanding customer base", he said. "We will have ample off street parking as well as a 5 lane motor bank for our customers".

Midland's Ron Stephenson Construction has been selected to coordinate and complete the interior physical facility. Ed Harris owner of Office Interiors in Midland, has been selected for interior design.

Everett predicted that the move will occur shortly after the first of the year. Until then, normal busness operations will continue at the current Home Office located at 600 N. Marienfeld.

Pecos bank wants charter

AUSTIN — The Texas Department of Banking has received an interim charter application for Interim Pecos County State Bank, Fort Stockton, to facilitate acquisition of Pecos County State Bank by Pecos County Bancshares Inc., Fort Stockton.

Interim charters are a commonly used method of allowing acquisition of an existing bank by a bank holding company through exchange of stock.

No public hearing is planned on the request, which will be referred to the State Banking Board for a decision at a voting session.

InterFirst bank loses big

DALLAS (AP) — InterFirst Corp. announced Friday that it suffered a net operating loss of $194 million for the quarter that ended Sept. 30.

InterFirst made a provision for $430 million in loan losses and had net charge-offs of $334 million in the third quarter, company officials said.

The loan loss reserve increased to $261 million, or 1.84 percent of total loans outstanding.

Elvis L. Mason, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of InterFirst Corp., blamed the setback on energy-related loans made by InterFirst's largest banking subsidiary, InterFirst Bank of Dallas.

"The substantial and prolonged decrease in exploration and drilling activity and the influence of the economic recession on business conditions generally ... has been devastating to many individuals and companies," Mason said.

"The financial impact on many of our customers has been more severe than was earlier perceived," Mason added. However, he predicted a return to profitability in the fourth quarter.

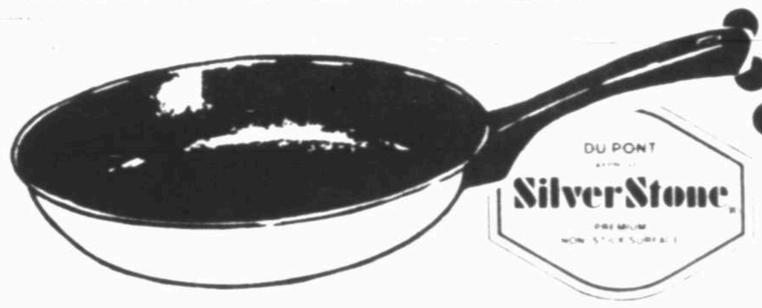

Management changes were announced Friday at InterFirst Bank of Dallas.

Robert H. Stewart III was elected chairman of the board and chief executive officer and Harvey R. Mitchell was elected president. William D. Breedlove, the former chairman of the board and chief executive officer of the bank, will continue to serve as vice chairman of the board of InterFirst Corp., officials said.

Business targeted in Congress

By VIC OSTROWIDZKI
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The United States would get its first clear picture of the costs of federal regulations on industry — estimated by some to be around $100 billion a year — under legislation introduced by Sen. Dave Durenberger, R-Minn.

The bill is one of hundreds of measures of interest to business and industry which are wending their way through various Congressional committees or are ready for action by the House or the Senate.

Under Durenberger's proposed Regulatory Policy Act of 1983, each federal agency would be required to spell out in detail what it costs a particular industry to comply with federal regulations.

It would then submit an annual report on the compliance costs and the benefits of the regulations. If such costs were found excessive, the government would be required to ease up on its regulations.

"The federal government turns out reems of rules and regulations to achieve a myriad of benefits and goals, but it has no real information on how much those regulations cost," Durenberger said. "It is as if a family saw the value of having a new refrigerator, washer-dryer, carpeting and furniture, and set out to acquire them without regard to the total cost or the balance of their checkbook."

The bill would create an annual "regulatory budget," setting acceptable levels of regulatory compliance costs to be borne by specified economic sectors or industries, and changing regulations to meet that goal. All federal regulations would be considered, from wage requirements on state-funded construction projects to auto emissions standards to price regulations.

The president would submit to Congress a regulatory budget containing an analysis of the total compliance costs incurred by each sector in a given year, and recommend whether the costs are so great that changes should be made in rules an statutes.

AMONG OTHER BILLS of interest on Capitol Hill are measures that would:

—Change the government's system of taxing the life insurance industry to inrease its annual tax burden by $900 million to $2.9 billion a year.

—Curb the proliferating use of leasing plants by governments and nonprofit organizations to transfer otherwise unusable tax breaks to private investors. The projected revenue increase is $3.4 million over three years.

—Encourage investment in research and development largely by reducing antitrust risks for R and D joint ventures, copyrights and patents.

—Set up a commission which would make recommendations on how to maintain an adequate U.S. merchant fleet.

—Require U.S. importers and exporters of bulk commodities, whose foreign trade business exceeds $1 million annually, to ship a specified percentage of their cargo on U.S. built and manned ships. The share increases from 5 percent in the year following enactment to 20 percent within 15 years; call for shipbuilders to reduce construction costs by 20 percent and permit shipyards to deposit income from shipbuilding into tax-deferred accounts called Capital Construction Funds.

This bill has come under fire from a variety of organizations. The National Coal Association claims approval would "strike a devastating blow to U.S. coal exports by forcing up prices and making the U.S. the supplier of "last resort". The U.S. Chamber charges cargo preference would cost the economy about $100 billion in additional expense between 1983 and 1999 and invite other nations to retaliate. Sen. Rudy Boschwitz, R.-Minn., insists the statute would deter any "aggressive or creative attempts at furthering agricultural exports." The Chemical Manufacturing Association says the bill would result in a loss of many jobs in U.S. export plants and that rates for transporting chemicals on U.S. flag tankers would be at least 83 percent higher than on a ytpical foreign-flag parcel tanker. The American Petroleum Industry believes passage of the legislation would increase significantly the cost of imported petroleum and have a serious impact on other American industries.

—Allow the states to continue setting their own energy efficiency standards for major household appliances, circumventing the Department of Energy's refusal to implement the federal efficiency standards called for by Congress.

—Reauthorize assistance and training benefits to workers in firms adversely affected by foreign imports.

—Offer protection to American exporters against losses from export controls imposed for national security or foreign policy reasons under a voluntary, self-financing insurance program. Other industrialized nations — West Germany, Japan and Freance — offer various forms of insurance to their exporters.

—Require additional safety equipment on vessels and mobile offshore drilling units.

—Provide copyright coverage for semiconductor designs and masks (glass plates that incorporate circuit patterns). The unathorized copying of chip designs has become common practice, particularly by foreign companies. Sponsors claim that development costs for a new design can range up to $50 million. By photographically copying the chip design, an unscrupulous firm can reproduce the masks for as little as $50,000.

—Increase competition in defense procurement through the Small Business Competition in Contracting Act which would forbid the Defense Department from prohibiting small businesses which have been certified as capable of performing the work from bidding on defense contracts.

—Attract private capital into the mortgage market. Known as the Secondary Mortgage Market Enactment Act of 1983, the bill would make large amounts of money available for savings and loans, banks and mortgage banks to lend to home buyers.

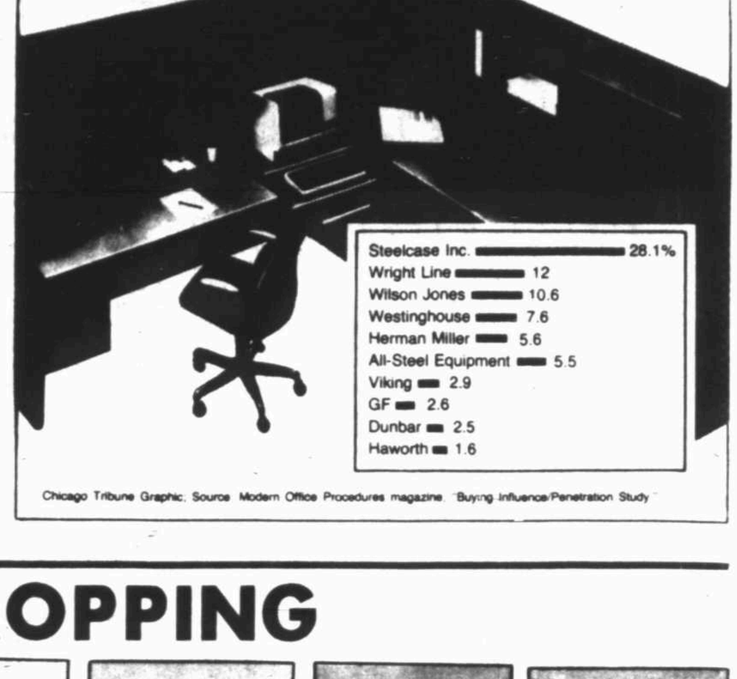

—Establish a U.S. Maritime Redevelopment Bank with authority to engage in the financing, co-financing or refinancing of maritime ventures "through either investment in the form of loans or equity participation, or through loan guarantees secured by either a preferred ship mortgage or pledge of stock."

—Require foreign auto makers to use specific percentages of U.S. parts and labor on autos sold in the U.S. This legislation—the so-called domestic content bill advocated by organized labor— was dealt a severe blow by the House and Ways Committee when it was reported "unfavorably", meaning the committee recommended that the full House kill it. The more receptive House Commerce Committee, which also has jurisdiction over the measure, reported it out in June by a 25 to 17 vote.

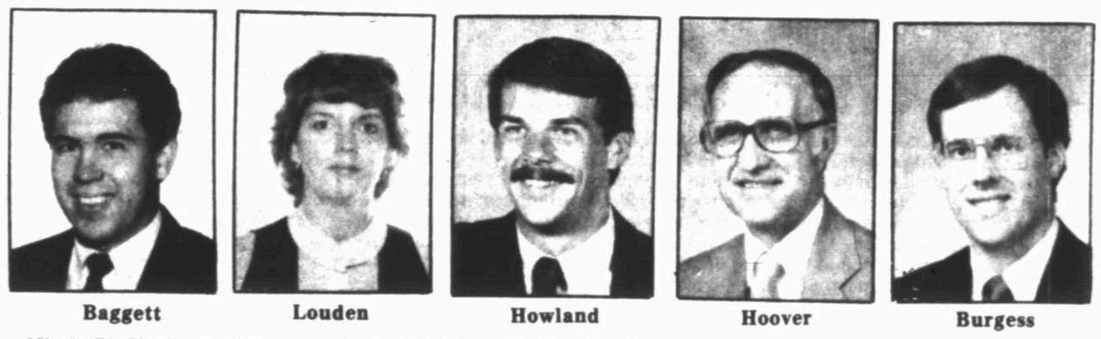

—Make crops grown on highly erodible land ineligible for specified agricultural assistance programs.

—Make it more difficult for electric utilities to charge ratepayers for power plants still in construction. The measure is in response to a Federal Energy Regulatory Commission ruling that would allow all utilities to include 50 percent of plant construction costs in the rate base.

—Allow employers with less than $5,000 in monthly withholding to make deposits to the Internal Revenue Service only once a month instead of the present four to eight times per month. Currently only businesses with less than $3,000 in monthly withholding are allowed the monthly deposit rate.

Atlantic City overtaking Las Vegas

By The Los Angeles Times - Washington Post News Service

ARCADIA, Calif. — Move over Las Vegas. Here comes Atlantic City.

Never mind that a couple of the New Jersey casinos are in the red. Forget that one or two proposed there never got built.

Atlantic City is doing so well that architect David Jacobson Jr. predicts it will "top the whole state of Nevada in gross business by the end of the year."

Jacobson should know.

Although his headquarters is in Arcadia, he also has offices in Reno and Atlantic City, where he has designed casinos, as well as in Las Vegas.

In fact, at 64, Jacobson has become such an expert in casino design and operation, he says, "only two or three other architects have done as much volume in that kind of work."

Since 1976, when gaming became legal in Atlantic City, his firm has designed seven casino hotels that have opened or been started there. Before that, he had "probably designed a dozen casinos — new and remodeled," he estimates.

He established his firm in 1955 but was involved in casino design even earlier. A native of New York who earned a degree in architecture from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Jacobson went to work in the late 1940s for Pasadena-Glendale architect Frank Green.

His first job on his own was the New Frontier in Las Vegas. Since then, his firm has designed casinos in Reno and the Bahamas.

His practice has also included motels, restaurants, bars, lounges, department stores, shopping centers, office and medical buildings, residences, bowling alleys and industrial facilities.

Among his current projects is a $2.3 million Huntington Park, Calif., poker club; a $2.9 million Reno helicopter facility and a 1,200-unit Atlantic City condominium complex that he believes is "the largest multi-unit residential project in a single building in the United States." Phase 1 is expected to cost $10.5 million to build.

Even with such diversity, however, his focus has always been on casino hotels, although he professes to have little interest in gambling and "probably only plays blackjack once a year."

"I didn't try to become a specialist," he says. "It just happened."

Yet, though he swims 50 to 60 laps a day, plays tennis and golf and water skis, he is an acknowledged workaholic who insists he'll never retire. "I enjoy the work too much," he remarks.

He and his wife, Katy, who is his business manager, maintain a home in Pasadena, but he commutes between his three offices, spending about one week a month in Arcadia.

"When you fly and use the telephone, telecopier and overnight mail, it doesn't make much difference where you are," he says, but because an estimated 90 percent of his work is in Atlantic City, he spends most of his time there.

"This bus business shocked everybody," he says. "This summer, they ran about 1,200 buses a day into Atlantic City."

He figures that means 48,000 people daily enter town. "And that's just by bus," he repeats.

"What are they going to do with that many buses in such a little village? The island is only 8 miles long by 2 miles wide. Most streets are only 50 feet to 60 feet wide. The main street, Atlantic Avenue, is about 90 feet wide. And all of a sudden come thousands of buses."

What's going to happen, he asks, when the local airport is improved? "There is a big airfield near Atlantic City," he elaborates. "It can handle any plane on the drawing board, but the terminal is about as big as my office — very small....

"Yet, the traffic there has increased about 200 percent every year for the past three years. Something like 900,000 people were projected to come through it this year. I'd guess that 3.5 million passengers will come through it five years from now."

The airport is only 15 minutes from town, he notes, "while in Vegas, it can take 35 minutes from the airport to the Hilton."

Of course, there are other differences between the gaming centers:

—"Keno is not legal in Atlantic City," he points out, "and neither are bingo or horse book (a form of off-track betting)."

—The permit approval process is more complicated, and fire codes are more stringent in Atlantic City than in Nevada, he asserts. "Chair and wall coverings have to have a rating in Atlantic City, and sheets and blankets will also soon come under code."

—There is a height limit in Atlantic City of 385 feet. "In that, you can get as many as 36 stories. In Vegas, there are a couple of hotels that go up 38 to 40 stories."

California oil leases cut; pollution control required

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

The Department of the Interior agreed Friday to cut in half the size of its upcoming oil lease sale off the Central California coast, and impose stringent emission controls on the new leases.

It was the first time that the department had acknowledged that offshore oil-and-gas activities could pollute air on shore.

The stipulations are contained in an 11-page memorandum of agreement between California Secretary of Environmental Affairs Gordon Duffy and David Russell, acting director of the Department of the Interior's Minerals Management Service. They were made public Friday in Sacramento, Calif., and Washington.

The substantial air-pollution control measures pleased officials in California's San Luis Obispo County, who had objected to the upcoming federal offshore oil lease sale 73. They had argued that businesses and industries on shore would be forced to install added emission controls to compensate for the pollution caused by offshore-oil activities.

The memorandum of agreement also covers a number of other environmental issues including oil spills, protection of sea otters, conflicts with commercial fishing and placement of oil-treatment facilities.

But environmentalists and spokesmen for the California Coastal Commission criticized the agreement for not going far enough and said that they probably would sue the department to stop the lease sale.

The sale area now contains about 900,000 acres offshore between Point Conception and Morro Bay, having been cut nearly in half from the 1.7 million acres originally proposed.

The Minerals Management Service agreed to delete 38 of the 46 tracts that Duffy had asked it not to lease. It also agreed to a Department of Defense request to delete a large block of 121 tracts on the outer portion of the proposed sale to prevent conflicts with missle tests conducted at Vandenberg Air Force Base.

Duffy, who negotiated the agreement with Department of the Interior officials on behalf of California Gov. George Deukmejian, wrote Secretary of the Interior James G. Watt praising the agreement for "strong lease stipulations and deletions of environmentally sensitive tracts which will accomplish the necessary balance between production of needed oil-and-gas resources and protection of our valuable environmental resources."

Summarizing the provisions in his letter, Duffy wrote: "Briefly, all air emissions on the OCS (outer continental shelf) will be controlled by the most effective emission-control technologies and the effects onshore of any remaining emissions will be mitigated.

"Companies wishing to explore for and develop oil reserves offshore will have to work closely with the commercial fishing industry in order to prevent conflicts.

"Major improvements in the ability of oil companies to contain and clean-up oil spills will be required .... Lastly, deletion of nearshore tracts from the sale, over 114,000 acres, will provide a much needed buffer between development activities and important coastal beaches, the habitat of the sea otter and other marine mammals, and from important commercial fishing grounds."

Russell of the Minerals Management Service, in a prepared statement, called the California agreement "the latest in a long line of successful negotiations with affected states as we move ahead with this crucial oil-and-gas leasing program."

He noted that nine of the first 10 lease sales that are part of Watt's controversial plan to lease a billion acres for offshore oil-and-gas development "have been held on time or with only minimal delays. This agreement is further indication of our willingness and ability to deal positively with the state concerns on offshore leasing."

The agreement is a marked contrast to the last federal lease sale off the shore of California in 1981. Then Watt refused to delete some of the same tracts between Morro Bay and Pismo Beach that he is now willing to give up, and as a result was sued by then Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. That lawsuit, on appeal before the U.S. Supreme Court, forced Watt to delete 29 tracts from the 1981 lease sale.

In the agreement announced Friday, Deukmejian pledged not to sue to try to stop the upcoming lease sale. But that will not prevent the Coastal Commission, an independent state agency, from filing suit on its own.

The commission already has determined that the pending sale is not consistent with state coastal-protection policies.

Mel Nutter, commission chairman, said the new agreement "doesn't go quite as far as I would like to see it."

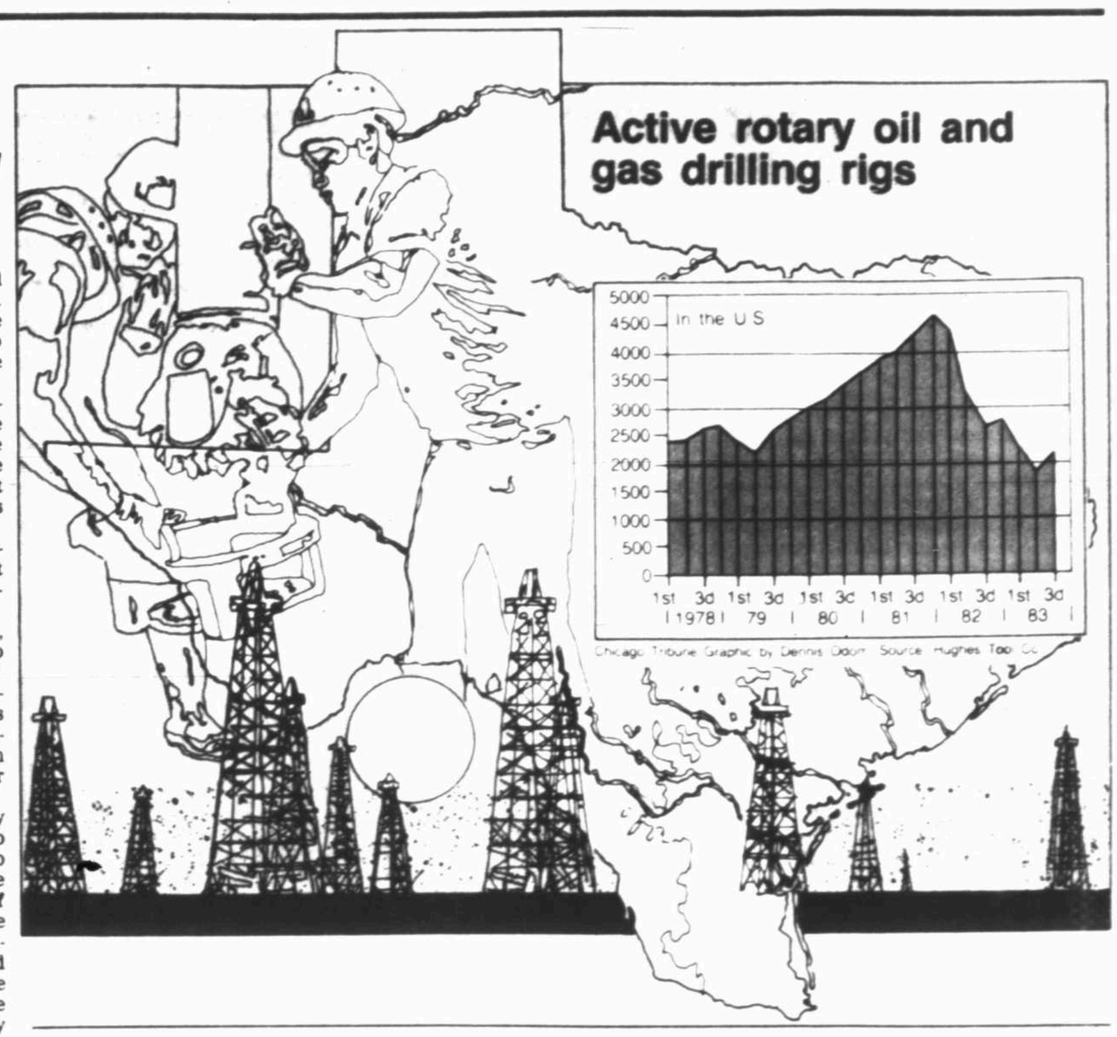

Michael Fischer, commission executive director, said the agreement is not good enough for his staff to recommend in favor of the sale when the commission gives the matter final consideration later this month.

Among the weaknesses cited by Nutter and Fischer is failure to require that pipelines be used to transport the oil from the rigs to the refineries. They also were critical of what they see as a loophole in the agreement that would allow oil companies to install offshore oil and treatment vessels — similar to the one Exxon now operates in the Santa Barbara channel — if they didn't get their permits to build onshore treatment facilities.

Fischer said that the commission already requires more stringent tests of oil spill containment equipment than the new agreement calls for.

Connie Parrish, state representative for Friends of the Earth, said, "We're pleased that the governor got at least something out of Interior, but for the sake of the sea otter we wish he had been tougher. Those nearshore tracts (south of Pismo Beach) pose a real threat to the already threatened animal. They just should not be leased for oil drilling." ground until we decide what we want to do about it."

Everyone agreed, however, that the air pollution measures contained in the agreement were a major benefit.

Methane coalbed well drilling

DALLAS — A six-year project aimed at developing the technology needed for producing methane gas from deep coalbeds gets underway this month with the drilling of a well at a Red Mountain site near Collbran, Colo.

A report on the project, appearing in the October issue of Petroleum Engineer International magazine, points out that commercial gas production from deep coal seams has been marginal up to now because of the inefficiency of stimulation techniques at depths greater than 3,000 feet. The coalbed at Red Mountain is between 5,000 and 6,000 feet below the surface.

Another problem encountered in producing the methane that occurs in coal seams is that conventional drilling techniques can damage coal formations. There also is a problem of how to remove water from coal seams so that the gas can be recovered.

Major research goals of the Red Mountain project, which is being sponsored by the Gas Research Institute of Chicago, Ill., are to develop effective deep-well drilling and completion techniques to enhance the permeability of coal seams. This will call for new well-testing techniques that will permit coal formations to be fully characterized by measuring chemical, physical, and mechanical properties of core samples and relating such properties to geophysical well logs. The well being drilled this month is expected to provide 500 feet of core for observation.

The Red Mountain site, which lies within the Piceance Basin, was chosen from among 13 prospective sites in five different Rocky Mountain basins because of its gas-containing deep coal seam and the availability of detailed information about its geological features. The targeted coal seam at Red Mountain is 15 to 25 feet thick, water saturated, and expected to have a gas content of 350 to 400 cubic feet per ton of coal.

Activity in oil and gas drilling still strong in '83

DENVER — Reported U.S. completions of wells drilled for oil and gas totaled 59,214 for the first three quarters of this year. The total is down 7.7 percent from the same time a year ago, Petroleum Information Corp. said.

Although behind the all-time record 1982 pace, activity this year continues to be relatively strong. Lower costs of drilling and shallow activity in several regions are reflected in the total.

New field wildcat, or purely exploratory drilling, showed the largest drop in relative activity. Petroleum Information reported 5,950 new field wildcat completions, down 20 percent from the comparable 1982 period. Of wildcats completed during the first nine months, 586 found new oil fields and 452 were new gas field discoveries. The comparable 1982 wildcat discovery totals were 845 new oil fields and 568 new gas fields.

The success rate for new field wildcats completed in the first nine months is 17.4 percent, compared with 19.0 percent for the same period in 1982.

Also showing a substantial drop was the number of gas well completions. PI reported 11,220 gas completions through the third quarter of this year, compared to 13,303 completions at the same time last year—a drop of 15.7 percent. The gas completions were down across the board: in development, exploratory and new field wildcats.

Texas continued to be the top drilling state in the country, with 18,284 completions recorded, compared to 20,282 in the first three quarters of 1982. Oklahoma again ranked second with 7,488 completions—down 1,402 from the state's 1982 nine-month total.

Other top drilling states and the total number of completions include: Kansas 5,343; Louisiana 3,810; Ohio 3,741; Kentucky 3,148; Pennsylvania 3,130; California 2,089; Illinois 1,623 and West Virginia 1,445. Of the ten leading drilling states, only Pennsylvania and Kentucky showed incrases in number of wells reported.

A continued upward trend in the count of active drilling rigs speaks for a strong finish to drilling in 1983, PI noted. The count of active rigs reached 2,312 as the first week of the fourth quarter began.

ENERGY LEGISLATION REPORT

By DAVE WIETHOP
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The following list gives the purpose and status of major energy-related bills in the House this year, as compiled by the House Office of Legislative Information. For clarity, much of the language included in this list comes directly from the respective bills.

H.R. 541 ..... Rep. Philip Crane, R-Ill.
PURPOSE: To repeal Title I of the Crude Oil Windfall Profit Tax Act of 1980.
STATUS: Referred to House Committee on Ways and Means Jan. 6.

H.R. 1027 ..... Delegate Baltasar Corrada, D-P.R.
PURPOSE: To provide financial assistance for transporting petrochemical products, agricultural commodities and petroleum between ports in Puerto Rico and the continental United States.
STATUS: Referred to Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries and Subcommittee on Merchant Marine Feb. 9.

H.Res. 36..... Rep. Joseph Addabbo, D-N.Y.
PURPOSE: Expressing that the President should not place import fees on refined petroleum products and crude oil.
STATUS: Referred to Subcommittee on Trade Feb. 2.

H.R.479 ..... Rep. George E. Brown Jr., D-Cal.
PURPOSE: To create the Arid Lads Renewable Resources Corporation to periodically solicit development proposals for domestic oil and rubber producing plants and encourage private investment in these projects.
STATUS: Referred to House Subcommittee on Rules of the House April 7.

H.R. 599 ..... Rep. Sam B. Hall Jr., D-Texas
PURPOSE: To amend the Internal Revenue Service Code of 1954 providing all oil from any royalty interest shall be exempt from the windfall profit tax.
STATUS: Referred to Committee on Was and Means Jan. 6.

H.R. 570 ..... Rep. Cooper Evans, R-Iowa
PURPOSE: To amend the IRS Code of 1954, to provide that the normalization rules of the investment tax credit shall apply to natural gas pipelines without regard to the additional restriction imposed where there is a federal determination that natural gas is in short supply.
STATUS: Referred to Committee on Ways and Means Jan. 6.

H.R. 307 ..... Rep. Robert A. Roe, D-N.J.
URPOSE: T establish a Council of Oil Importing Nations to negotiate reasonable oil prices with the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, and direct the President to submit a set of sanctons to encourage compliance with negotiated oil prices to the Council.
STATUS: Introduced to House on January 3; referred to Subcommittee on International Economic Policy and Trade.

H.R. 134 ..... Rep. Cecil Heftel, D-Hawaii
PURPOSE: To amend IRS Code of 1954 to provide exemption for qualified methanol and ethanol fuel from the special fuels tax. This exemption shall apply when the alcohol is produced from natural gas.
STATUS: Referred to Committee on Ways and Means.

H.R. 1568 ..... Rep. Richard Cheney, R-Wyo.
PURPOSE: To designate certain national forest system lands in Wyoming for inclusion in the natonal Wilderness Preservaton System. Title V will prohibit exploratory drilling to assess oil and gas potential within congressionally designated areas in th state.
STATUS: Referred to Subcommittee on Public Land and National Parks; Executive Comment requested May 4.

H.R. 1612 ..... Rep. Steven Gunderson, R-Wis.
PURPOSE: To amend IRS Code of 1954, to repeal the exemption of royalty oil and stripper well oil from the windfall profit tax on domestic crude oil. Provides that the windfall profit tax on newly-discovered oil shall be 30 percent, after June 30,1983; increases the maximum rate of income tax for individuals to 55 percent. Repeals provisions of the Economic Recovery Act of 1981 relating to the partial exclusion of interest income.
STATUS: Referred to Committee on Ways and Means, February 23.

H.R. 278 ..... Rep. James Quillen, R-Tenn.
PURPOSE: To establish the National Geothermal Energy Commission, and will require the commission to determine the areas in the United States which have a potential for extraction of geothermal resources and publish a list of such areas in the Federal Register.
STATUS: Referred to Subcommittee on Water and Power; Executive Comment requested from Interior Feb. I6.

H.R. 20 ..... Rep. Robert Kastenmeier, D-Wisc.
PURPOSE: To establish a Federal Oil and Gas Corporation to create and administer a national program of natural gas and oil exploration on Federal lands.
STATUS: Bill forwarded to full Committee on Energy and Commerce, July 29.

H.R. 131 ..... Rep. Phil Gramm, D-Texas
PURPOSE: To provide incentives for natural gas production and remove artificial impediments on the use of natural gas.
STATUS: Forwarded by Subcommittee on Fossil and Synthetic Fuels to Committee on Energy and Commerce July 29.

H.R. 232 ..... Rep. Henry J. Nowak, D-N.Y.
PURPOSE: To prohibit increases in the wellhead prices of natural gas, Jan. 1 through June 30, 1983. Directs Federal Energy Regulatory Commission to prescribe regulations assuring that the reductions in the costs which would be borne by natural gas purchasers would be passed thorugh to the purchasers.
STATUS: Forwarded by Subcommittee on Fossil and Synthetic Fuels to Committee on Energy and Commerce July 29.

H.R. 482 ..... Rep. Goodloe E. Byron, D-Md.
PURPOSE: To insure rates charged by natural gas companies are market-sensitive.
STATUS: Forwarded from Subcommittee on Fossil and Synthetic Fuels to Committee on Energy and Commerce July 29.

H.R. 583 ..... Rep. Dan Glickman, D-Kansas
PURPOSE: To impose a moratorium on price increases and amend the Natural Gas Policy of 1978.
STATUS: Forwarded from Subcommitteee on Fossil and Synthetic Fuels to Committee on Energy and Commerce July 29.

H.R. 619 ..... Rep. Robert Kastenmeier, D-Wisc.
PURPOSE: To amend the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978 to impose a freeze on natural gas price increases.
STATUS: Forwarded from Subcommittee on Fossil and Synthetic Fuels to Committee on Energy and Commerce July, 29.

H.R. 796 ..... Rep. Joseph M. Gaydos, D-Pa.
PURPOSE: To provided a temporary to correct imbalances in the natural gas market in order to restrain prices charged to natural gas users.
STATUS: Forwarded from Subcommittee on Fossil and Synthetic Fuels to Committee on Energy and Commerce July 29.

H.R. 827 ..... Rep. John J. LaFalce D-N.Y.
PURPOSE: To amend the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978 to prohibit enforcement of "take-or-pay" clauses for natural gas.
STATUS: Forwarded from Subcommittee on Fossi and Synthetic Fuels to Committee on Energy and Commerce July 29.

H.R. 873 ..... Rep. James L. Oberstar, D-Minn.
PURPOSE: To provide a temporary means to correct imbalances in the natural gas market in order to restrain prices charged to natural gas users.
STATUS: Clean bill forwarded from Subcommittee on Fossil and Synthetic Fuels to Committee on Energy and Commerce, July 29.

H.R. 909 ..... Rep. Harold Volkmer, D-Mo.
PURPOSE: To freeze natural gas prices from January 25, 1983 through January 1, 1983, to the contract price specified for deliveries of natural gas on September 25, 1983.
STATUS: Clean bill forwarded from Subcommittee on Fossil and Synthetic Fuels to Committee on Energy and Commerce, July 29..

H.R. 910 ..... Rep. Harold Volkmer, D-Mo.
PURPOSE: To amend the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978 to define abuse for purposes of determining whether passthroughs of amounts paid to interstate pipelines for natural gas should be denied, and to deny passthroughs to intersate pipelines for actions which are imprudent.
STATUS: Clean bill forwarded from Subcommittee on Fossil and Synthetic Fuels to Committee on Energy and Commerce, July 29..

H.R. 1422 ..... Rep. Robert Young, D-Mo.
PURPOSE: To amend the natural Gas Policy Act of 1978 to provide for continuation of price controls beyond 1985, to eliminate the monthly indexing ofwellhead natural gas prices, to allow increases in such prices prior to the expiration of natural gas price controls only to the extent justified on the basis of increases in the cost of producing natural gas, and for other purposes.
STATUS: Clean bill forwarded from Subcommittee on Fossil and Synthetic Fuels to Committee on Energy and Commerce, July 29.

H.R. 1686 ..... Rep. Dennis Hertel, D-Mich.
PURPOSE: To amend the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978 to freeze the price under ay natural gas contract at the price applicable as of January 1, 1983, to exempt from such freeze any contract having a market-out clause if the contract was entered into after the effective date of this Act and any contract entered into on or before such date whic is renegotiated as to price after such date and which has a market-out clause.
STATUS: Clean bill forwarded from Subcommittee on Fossil and Synthetic Fuels to Committee on Energy and Commerce, July 29.

H.R. 1760 ..... Rep. Tom Corcoran, R-Ill.
PURPOSE: To correct deficiencies in the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978, to protect natural gas consumers from price increases because of current distortions in the regulated market for natural gas, to provide for a free market for natural gas, to permit natural gas contracts to reflect the change from a regulated to a free market, to eliminate incremental pricing requirementss for natural gas, to eliminate certain fuel use restrictions and for other uses.
STATUS: Clean bill forwarded from Subcommittee on Fossil and Synthetic Fuels to Committee on Energy and Commerce. July 29.

H.Res. 38..... Rep. Joseph M. Gaydos, D-Pa.
PURPOSE: Expressing that no action to accelerate decontrol of wellhead natural gas prices need be taken.
STATUS: Clean bill forwarded from Subcommittee on Fossil and Synthetic Fuels to Committee on Energy and Commerce, July 29.

H.Res. 178..... Rep. Sidney R. Yates, D-Ill.
PURPOSE: Expressing disapproval of proposed deferral of fossil energy research and development.
STATUS: Resolution agreed to in House by Yea-Nay Vote of 265-121, May 26.

H.R. 1685 ..... Rep. Dennis Hertel, D-Mich.
PURPOSE: To amend the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978 to prohibit "take-or-pay" clausesor similar minimum purchase requiements under natural gas supply contract, prohibit indefinite price escalator clauses, and to alow the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission to prohibit passthrough of natural gas prices, or take other corrective action, if the prices paid by natural-gas companies are excessive due to waste or imprudence.
STATUS: Clean bill forwarded from Subcommittee on Fossil and Synthetic Fuels to Committee on Energy and Commerce, July 29.

H.R. 1752 ..... Rep. Joseph P. Addabbo, D-N.Y.
PURPOSE: Natural Gas Policy Act Amendments of 1983. To amend Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978 to add definitions of terms for use in first-sale of natural gas in contracts, to provide certain price controls, other purposes.
STATUS: Clean bill forwarded from Subcommittee on Fossil and Synthetic Fuels to Committee on Energy and Commerce, July 29.

H.R. 1759 ..... Rep. E. Thomas Coleman, R-Mo.
PURPOSE: To amend the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978 to frezze natural gas prices at their October 1, 1982, levels, override "take-or-pay" clauses, and create market incentives in the natural gas industry.
STATUS: Clean bill forwarded from Subcommittee on Fossil and Synthetic Fuels to Committee on Energy and Commerce, July 29.

H.Res. 24..... Rep. Silvio O. Conte, R-Mass.
PURPOSE: Expressing that the President nor the Congress should impose import fees on crude oil or refinded petroleum products.
STATUS: Referred to Subcommittee on Trade, January 13.

H.R. 705 ..... Rep. Thomas J. Tauke, R-Iowa
PURPOSE: To amend the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978 to clarify the definition of abuse for purposes of disqualifying certain cost passthoughs to distributors and consumers of natural gas.
STATUS: Clean bill forwarded from Subcommittee on Fossil and Synthetic Fuels to Committee on Energy and Commerce.

H.R. 1211 ..... Rep. Fernand St. Germaine, D-R.I.
PURPOSE: To establish a Federal non-profit corporation to act as an importing agent for the crude oil petroleum products imported into the United States.
STATUS: Referred to Subcommittee on Trade, February 9; referred to Subcommittee on Fossil and Synthetic Fuels, February 10.

H.R. 1359 ..... Rep. Ike Skelton, D-Mo.
PURPOSE: To amend the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978, to eliminate authority as given under the Act to increase the ceiling prices of natural gas higher than the maximum lawful price if "just and reasonable."
STATUS: Clean bill forwarded from Subcommittee on Fossil and Synthetic Fuels to Committee on Energy and Commerce, July 29.

H.R. 1441 ..... Rep. Tom Corcoran, R-Ill
PURPOSE: To provide new import prices for natural and liquefied natural gas authorized by the Department of Energy to be imported to the United States, in accordance with Section 3 of the Act; for other purposes.
STATUS: Clean bill forwarded from Subcommittee on Fossil and Synthetic Fuels to Committee on Energy and Commerce, July 29.

H.R. 4 ..... Rep. Robert Michel, R-Ill.
PURPOSE: Natural Gas Marketing Improvements Act of 1983. To amend Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978 to restrain natural gas price increases by facilitating price responsiveness during periods when supplies exceed demand and for other purposes.
STATUS: Clean bill forwarded from Subcommittee on Fossil and Synthetic Fuels to Committee on Energy and Commerce, July 29.

Gas man says report emphasizes importance of natural gas supply

WASHINGTON, D.C. — American Gas Association president George H. Lawrence said recently a report by the Congressional Office of Technology Assessment (OTA) emphasizes that supplemental gas supplies can be an important source of U.S. gas supplies by the year 2000.

The OTA report, conducted at the request of Congress, estimates conventional lower-48 states natural gas supply in the year 2000 will be between nine and 19 trillion cubic feet (Tcf). In addition, supplemental gas sources could satisfy a major portion of U.S. gas requirements by 2000, according to the report. Conventional gas production was 17.6 Tcf in 1982 with an additional 1.1 Tcf of supplemental gas supplies.

A new A.G.A. study estimates that in the year 2000 between 24 and 31 percent of the U.S. gas supply will come from such supplemental sources and gas from tight formation, coal seams, coal gasification, Alaska, Canadian and Mexican imports and liquefied natural gas (LNG) as well as methane from landfills and other renewable sources.

"The wide range of potential supply estimates in the OTA report clearly points out the growing potential for supplemental sources before the turn of the century," Lawrence said. It also clearly illustrates the key supply resource role supplementals are capable of playing over the longer-term.

The A.G.A. study "Gas Energy Supply Outlook: 1983-2000" estimates that supplemental gas could provide between 4.7 and 7.7 Tcf of gas per year by the year 2000.

"Supplementals and conventional resources are not an either or proposition - these gas supply sources complement each other. The economics of supplemental gas sources are projected to be quite favorable over the longer term, when they may be a limiting factor on the price of conventional supplies," Lawrence said. A.G.A. analyses have shown these supplemental supplies as being the most cost effective energy sources for many end-use energy markets.

"In addition, development of these supplemental sources will give the U.S. better insulation against the uncertainty of foreign oil supply," he said. But, Lawrence stated, supplemental projects are major undertakings. They are capital intensive with long-lead times and cannot be turned off and on "like a faucet," depending on short-term price and supply fluctuations.

The OTA analysis of gas supply identifies three key uncertainties:

— the size of the gas resource base,

— the proper interpretation and extrapolation of discovery trends, and — the future variations in the reserve life indices (reserve to production ratio). These technical uncertainties are judged to be so great the specific future production levels can not be derived.

"A.G.A. for a number of years has advocated development of a variety of supplemental gas supply sources. The OTA and latest A.F.A. studies reaffirm the belief that supplemental gas supplies should be an important addition to future U.S. gas supplies," Lawrence said.

Expert says surplus gas being 'worked off'

The current natural gas surplus is being "worked off" in the United States, but supplies for immediate delivery still exceed market requirements by a wide margin, the chief economist of Standard Oil Co. (Indiana) said recently.

Theodore R. Eck believes, however, that U.S. gas production won't be able to keep up with the demand over the longer term and the U.S. will have to import considerably more gas.

Eck said U.S natural gas imports should reach three trillion cubic feet a year by 1995, and double the amount projected for 1985.

Meanwhile, he predicted U.S. gas production will decline from 17 trillion cubic feet in 1990 to 14 trillion cubic feet in 2000.

Eck, speaking at a conference of the Canadian Energy Research Institute, also said he doesn't believe the United States can count on gas supplies through the proposed Alaska Natural Gas Transportation System until the 21st century.

Eck also predicted 65,000 U.S. wells will be completed in 1983; 70,000 in 1985 and 80,000 in 1990.

W.C. Harrington has opened his office as an independent geologist in Midland. Harrington, a Midland resident for 20 years, recently took early retirement after 33 years of exploration experience with Gulf Oil Corp.

O.J. Hubbard Jr., CPL has opened independent land offices. A native Midlander, Hubbard was previously associated with Depco Inc. as district land manager and district exploration manager.

Phillip D. Call recently received a service award from the Atlantic Richfield Co. in Hobbs. Call worked for Sinclair Oil & Gas when they merged with ARCO, and is presently assistant production foreman.

Lawrence Freeze, lease pumper with Atlantic Richfield Co. in Andrews, was recently presented a safety service award from ARCO. Freeze has been with ARCO since 1963.

Laurence H. Hawes was presented his 30 year service award for service with ARCO Oil and Gas Company. Hawes went to work for Sinclair Oil and Gas Company in the Ft. Worth office on October 1, 1953.

Daniel Garza has been named sales representative for OPI pump saver replacement parts in Odessa. Garza recently rejoined OPI Inc. where he was formerly a sales representative for subcontracting services.

Andy Stephan has been named sales representative for OPI pump saver replacement parts in Odessa. Stephan has been with OPI since 1979, and is a graduate of West Texas State University.

Reed's rig census reveals positive changes

The tremendous oil and gas drilling rig overcapacity which arose in the United States in early 1982 has begun to bottom out, according to a report in the October issue of Drilling, The Wellsite Publication. The 31st Annual Reed Rotary Rig Census shows that a net of 371 oil and gas drilling rigs have been taken out of the domestic fleet during the past year. But as the number of rigs available for drilling has been pared away, the number of rigs gaining employment has started to rise. The latest count of rigs actually working in the United States is up 26 percent from its low point in April of this year, indicating that drilling rig supply and demand is heading toward a point of balance.

Census takers from Reed Rock Bit Company found 5,273 oil and gas rigs to be available for 3000 feet and deeper in the United States in late summer of 1983. This one-of-a-kind report, a barometer of industey health since 1953, reveals that 6.6 percent of the rig fleet was permanetnly retired during the past year. All areas of the country and rigs of all drilling depth capacities shared in the decline.

According to the article in Drilling, an undetermined number of rigs are presently being held up by bankruptcy proceedings and may never drill again. There is also a strong possibility that an even greater numer of rigs will be retired from the fleet during the coming year as age and equipment cannibalization take their toll on the domestic rig fleet.

Many industry observers have felt that 70 percent of the United States rig fleet would need to be working before drilling equipment sales would rebound to profitable levels. At present, only 43 percent of the 5273 available rigs are working. However, a combination of further increases in rig activity and the rig attrition expected over the next 18 months could produce the needed 70 percent utilization rate by 1985.

A quick recap of Reed's census shows that over 91 percent of all rigs in the United States are designed for land use. Nearly one-third are capable of drilling below 16,000 feet. Over one-half of all the rigs counted were in Texas and Oklahoma.

Twenty-seven percent of all the rigs were stacked (idle) in the field and 24 percent were stacked in yards, indicating that drilling contractors were not expecting a quick trunaround in oil and gas drilling activity.

Drilling, The Wellsite Publication, is a leading trade publication serving the worldwide oil and gas industry.

HNG has good Morrow gasser

HNG Oil Company, a subsidiary of Houston Natural gas Corporation (HNG), has announced the successful completion of a gas well in the Morrow Formaton in Lea County, New Mexico.

The Madera "33" Federal Com No. 1 flowed 10.286 million cubic feet of gas per day on an automatic choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 8,087 psi. The completion was made through perforations from depths of 14,944 to 15,000 feet. The well's absolute open flow was 49.3 million cubic feet per day. It had a shut-in tubing pressure of 8,703 psi.

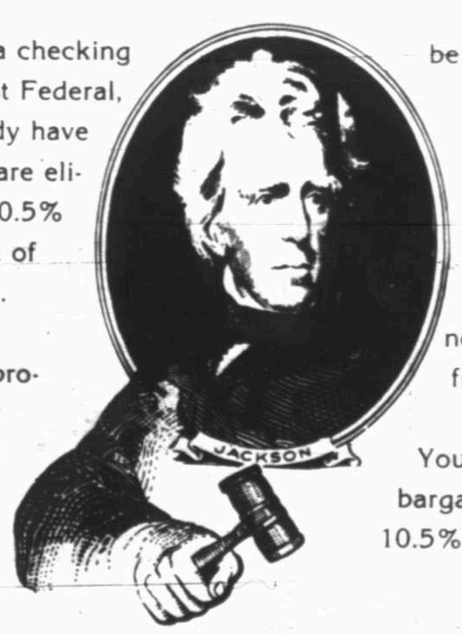

HNG Oil is the operator of the well and holds a 82.8 percent working interest. The remaining interest is held by several individuals.

The Madera "33" Federal Com P1 was the seventh completion for HNG Oil in the Pitchfork Ranch Field. Since its completion, two additional wells have been completed and are waiting for pipeline connections. HNG Oil currently is drilling one wildcat well in the field and has majority interest in aproximately 20 sections in the area.

Ortloff builds Wyoming gas processing plant

MIDLAND — The Ortloff Corporation has been awarded a contract by Champlin Petroleum Company, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Union Pacific Corporation, for the design and installation of a modular 60 MMSCFD grass-roots gas processing plant at Champlin's Uinta County, Wyoming site.

The facility uses one of Ortloff's proprietary cryogenic turboexpander processes that allows Champlin to recover ethane and heavier hydrocarbons from the inlet gas stream or, alternately, to reject ethane to the sale gas with minimum reduction in the recovery of propane and heavier products. Over 90 percent of the available ethane can be recovered using this process.

The Ortloff design provides for high ethane recovery or rejection in a single fractionating column.

Field costruction will be managed through Ortloff's Midland Division, with completion scheduled for the second quarter of 1984.

PBGC teaches leasing, exploration, geology

The Permian Basin Graduate Center will offer three courses in the PBGC building, 105 W. Illinois, Midland.

The second session "Oil and gas lease forms, mineral and royalty deeds, terminology, and delay rentals" in Principles of Land and Leasing will be held Tuesday, October 11, from 7-10 p.m. Mike McElwrath, Attorney, Turpin, Smith, Dyer & Saxe, will instruct the class. Fee is $20.

"Structural Principles in Petroleum Exploration," Thursday, October 13, from 1:30-4:30 and 7-10 p.m. David W. Stearns, Monette Professor of Geology & Geophysics, The University of Oklahoma, will instruct the course. Fee is $120.

"Part 1: Components of Geological Data," Wednesday and Thursday, October 19-20, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Brenda Machost Carpenter, President, Petroleum Technicians Inc., will instruct the course. Fee is $175.

For registration or further information, call 683-2832.

Valero offsets Fusselman

SAN ANTONIO — Valero Producing Co, a subsidiary of Valero Energy Corp. has completed an offset to its Fusselman discovery in Martin County.

The Valero No. 2 Blagrave, located in northest Martin County, tested at a daily rate of 198 barrels of 47 degree API gravity oil from perforations at 10,096 feet to 10,144 feet in the Chester Lime production in the Hill Ranch (Mississippian) field.

Valero Producing is the operator and, until payout, has a 38.7 percent interest. Other interest holders are Anglo Resources Inc. 38.7 percent and Exxon Co. 22.6 percent. After payout, well ownership will include Valero 33.9 percent, Anglo Resources 33.9 percent, Exxon 22.6 percent and Tucker Exploration 9.6 percent.

Texas production up; onshore, offshore oil

AUSTIN — Texas crude oil production totaled 71,991,989 barrels in July, accoring to Railroad Commission Chairman Mack Wallace.

This figure compares with June production totaling 70,324,492 barrels and July 1982 production of 73,487,527 barrels.

Texas oil production averaged 2,322,322 barrels daily in July, down from 2,344,150 barrels daily in June and down from 2,370,565 barrels daily in July 1982.

The July 1983 production allowable totaled 94,083,593 barrels. Texas oil production was 23.48 percent under the allowable for the month.

The state's top producing counties in July were Pecos, 4,262,142 barrels; Ector, 3,773,567 barrels; Gaines, 3,743,948 barrels; Yoakum 3,650,018 barrels; Andrews 3,229,514 barrels; Hockley 3,179,955 barrels; Gregg, 3,176,119 barrels; Scurry, 2,574,869 barrels; Crane 2,155,001 barrels; and Refugio, 1,916,546.

AUSTIN — State leases in bays, inlets and the Gulf of Mexico produced 171,619 barrels of crude oil during July, in contrast to 118,745 barrels in June and 84,202 barrels in July a year ago, according to Railroad Commission Chairman Mack Wallace. So far in 1983, reported offshore production from state leases has reached 1,008,595 barrels of crude.

Gas well gas production from state leases amounted to 14,453,426 Mcf in July against 14,965,488 Mcf in June and 17,866,554 in July of 1982. Total gas well gas production from offshore state leases so far this year totaled 106,252,606 Mcf through July.

Casinghead gas production totaled 260,336 Mcf in July 1982. Total casinghead gas production for the year has reached 2,041,368 Mcf through July.

Condensate production from state leases amounted to 54,876 barrels in July of 1982. Through the first seven months of the year, total condensate production in 1983 reached 431,014 barrels.

In July, offshore crude production was about 0.23 percent of total estimated crude production in Texas. Offshore gas well gas production was approximately four percent of the state total.

Offshore production was reported in July from 51 oil and 728 gas wells.

Texas American purchases oil properties in Illinois

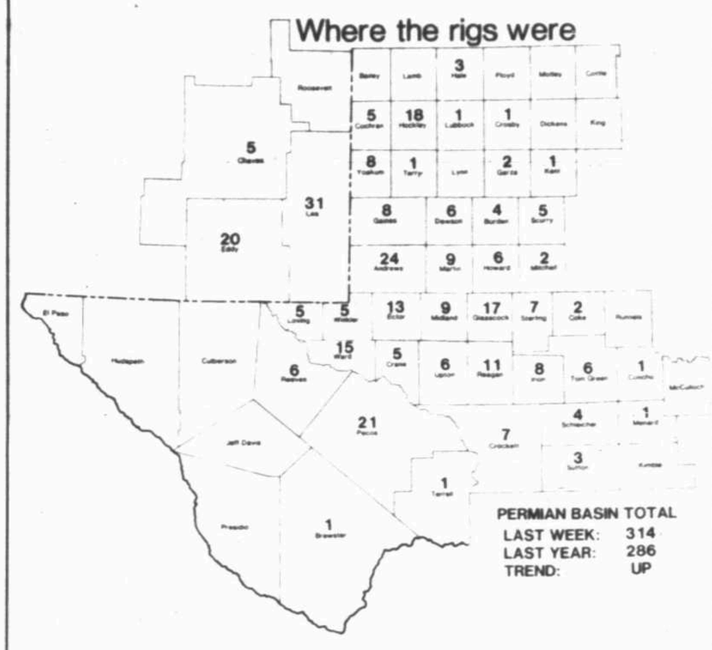

Texas American Energy Corporation has purchased a 240 acre oil lease in Brown County, Illinois, one of the more active oil drilling areas in the nation. The lease is currently producing and contains additional undrilled locations.

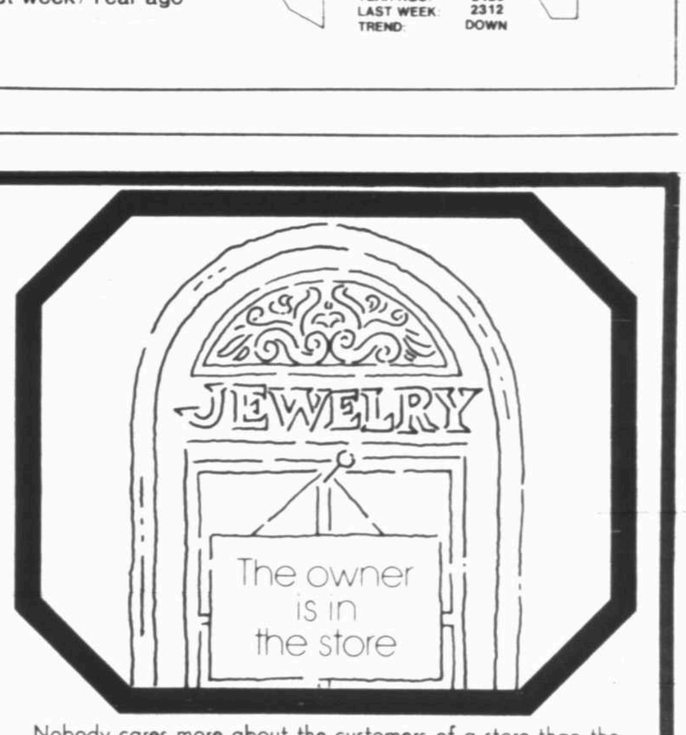

Through its wholly-owned subsidiary, Texas American Oil Corporation, the Company has increased its production and acreage holdings in Illinois through the purchase of the Guy Franks lease which presently contains 5 producing oil wells, and 12 undrilled locations. Texas American plans to begin drilling immediately on these 12 new locations.

The sellers, Homco Ltd., Springfield, Ill., and Clayton R. Smart and Associates, Jenks, Okla., received a total of $1.6 million for 100 percent of the working interest and an 83.5 percent net revenue interest. The lease is estimated to contain primary reserves of more than 200,000 barrels of oil.

The wells are producing from the Silurian Formation at a depth of approximately 600 feet. Texas Amrican intends to increase the production from the current daily rate of 80 barrels to an estimated potential production rate of 250 to 350 barrels of oil per day through drilling the new wells as well as remedial work on the 5 currently producing wells and several shut-in wells on the lease. The lsase also holds potential for additional production in the future through secondary recovery programs.

Now is the perfect time to shop for your Christmas gifts, as there are not yet crowds to fight, and the selection is probably better now than it ever will be. Other arrivals in the near future will be extra large fashions and a fine selection of Bali bras.

Intimate Fashions also has a full-time manicurist in the store. Some of the services available here include sculptures, pedicures, nail silks, nail tips, and nail wraps. There are specials on manicures throughout the summer, so now is the time for your manicure while there is still a little bit of summertime left. More information on manicures or appointments may be made by calling 699-4051.

One trip to Intimate Fashions will convince you that there is still places in this world that truly care for each and every customer. You will see what a difference beautiful merchandise combined with personal interest in your needs can make. Next time you need something a little more comfortable to wear around the house, think about beauty, quality, and service. Think about Intimate Fashions.

U M & M offers great value on new Harleys

Value is a word that, though often heard, is rarely seen. In these inflationary times, it seems that nobody really offers you a good value anymore. But Universal Metals & Machinery, E Hwy 80 in Odessa, offers a value you can't refuse: a new Harley pipe-threading machine at the same price as a used one.

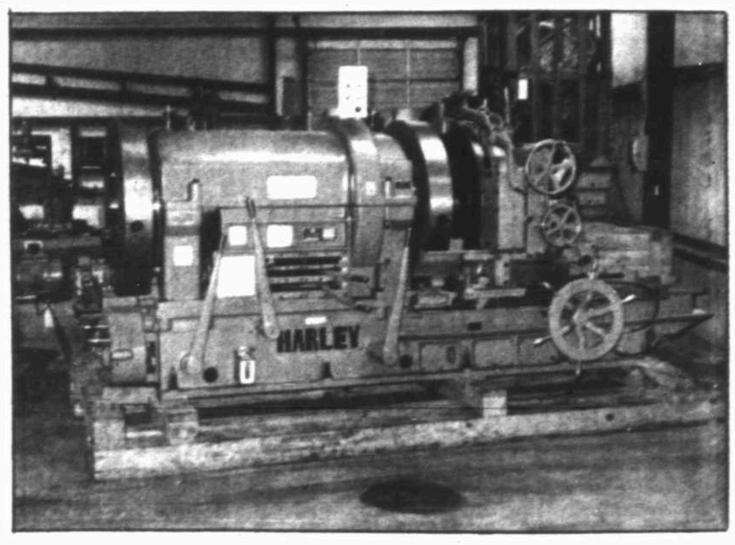

Why buy a used or rebuilt pipe-threader when you can buy a new Harley at the same price? Universal Metals & Machinery is the West Texas dealer for the Harley. The Harley machine comes in three sizes and features 3-jaw universal chucks, hardened gears in the headstock, internal coolant, hardened and ground bedways, sight glass oilers for bushings, swing pendant control, scissor-type vise, cut-off chamfering and reaming tools, full-length lead screw, bronze half-nuts, power rapid traverse to carriage, hardened and ground sine bar, and front or rear clutch equipment.

The Harley pipe-threading machine comes in three sizes; 13⅜, 8⅝, and 4¾. Motors on all sizes are 1200 rpm and the hp is 15, 10, and 5, respectively.Prices for a new Harley are as follows: 4¾" receding head- $64,500. 8⅝" receding head- $96,500. 13⅜" receding head- $147,250. 13⅜" C.N.C.-- $188,000. 20" C.N.C.-- $328,000. Talk about value! At these prices, you can't afford to pass up the chance to buy a Harley from Universal!

New machine tools from Universal have a complete warranty, backed not only by the factory, but by Universal themselves. They service what they sell. All warranty work on standard machine tools sold at Universal is performed by their own staff of thoroughly trained technicians, including electrical work.

All new machine tools are tested before they leave the warehouse. Universal is proud of the quality of both their machines and their service. They strongly believe in providing the best possible service, because the Permian Basin deserves nothing but the best. If there is a machine that you need and they don't have it, they can get it for you! Try Universal and see for yourself what a satisfied customer really is.

Universal Metals & Machinery will buy, sell, or trade. Visit the friendly staff at Universal for all of your machine tool needs. They rae located at 7400 E Hwy 80, Odessa. For more information, call them at 563-1984. Universal Metals & Machinery makes the difference.

Universal Metals & Machinery is the West Texas dealer for the Harley pipe threading machine, pictured above. Right now at U M & M, you can purchase a brand new Harley for the price of a used one. Call Universal at 563-1984.

BUSINESS/INDUSTRY NOTES
An introduction to the page

The Business/Industry Notes are published by the Midland Reporter-Telegram as a service to the businesses of the Permian Basin and beyond.

Three pages are devoted each week to the Business/Industry Notes (B&I pages): a double page spread on Sunday and one page on Tuesday.

The advertisements seen on these pages are directly related to the stories and photographs. Through a six month contract (26 weeks), businesses are given constant exposure to the literate public.

The stories and photos compliment the advertisements, giving the reader an in-depth view of the business. The reader is exposed to specific details and pertinent information not otherwise found on a small advertisement.

Midland houses between 3,500 and 4,000 businesses, reports the Midland Chamber of Commerce. With this amount of competition, constant exposure each week, for 26 consecutive weeks, can only promote interest to help a perspective business.

The businesses of the Permian Basin are as fascinating as they are numerous. Currently, teh B/I notes are graced with businesses such as an executive charter service, lingerie shops, numerous restaurants, auto and truck shops, camera shops and a behavioral hypnotist.

Any and all businesses are encouraged to join the Midland Reporter-Telegram's Business and Industry Notes, regardless of the nature of the business. All businesses, corporate or independent, are invited to consider this opportunity.

For further information contact the advertising department of the Reporter-Telegram at (915) 682-5311. The staff would be happy to quote prices and discuss potential story material. Call 682-5311 and let the Business/Industry Notes work for you.

Carmen's Mexican Imports, 410 N. Terrell in Midland, carries a wide selection of genuine Mexican products. Owners Roy and Carmen Hearon offer a seemingly endless supply of imported items from Mexico. Come by Carmen's to purchase a needed item, or just to browse. We have something for everyone!

Lovely imports found at Carmen's

If you have ever found a need for the perfect decoration in your house, consider the choices you have. In this area of the Southwest, an authentic Mexican decoration of some sort would be just perfect. If you have need for an authentic Mexican decoration, there are several things you can do. You can make a special trip to Juarez, in which case you probably spend a little more money than originally intended. You could also take your next vacation in Mexico, but that is certainly expensive and seems to be a bit time consuming just to find a decoration for your home. Or you could just take a few minutes and drop by Carmen's Mexican Imports, 410 N. Terrell, right here in Midland.

Carmen's Mexican Imports has a wide range of authentic Mexican items just waiting to fit your difficult decorating spot in your home. Whether you need that decoration, authentic Mexican clothing, or even simple household goods, Carmen's is the first place you should think of. You can find a wide variety of imported Mexican goods at Carmen's.

One of the fashion trends right now seems to be the colorful, hand-sewn Mexican dresses, available at Carmen's. Before you buy one of these dresses anywhere, check Carmen's first.There is also a wide selection of serapes, panchos, and blouses. In addition, if you are having trouble finding mens genuine leather or suede coats, genuine leather belts or purses, or even hand-tooled wallets, you need to look no further. One stop at Carmen's and you will find what you are looking for, and at a reasonable price, too.

Some of the other items at Carmen's imported directly from Mexico include beautiful velvet paintings, decorative glass vases, ceramic figures, decorative wall hangings, Mexican bone figurines, and handmade copper decorations. Also available are wrought iron and fiberglass patio furniture, wrought iron planter stands and light fixtures, jewelry and jewelry chests, sombreros, hand-made guitars, and even pinatas for the kids.

In addition to the fine Mexican imports, Carmen's handles a line of appliances, televisions, stereos, sewing machines, and sewing machine cabinets. You can even find car stereos and speakers there, and portable personal stereos. And at Carmen's Mexican Imports, we always have something on sale!

So next time you have a need for an imported Mexican item, look first to Carmen's Mexican Imports. Even if you don't have a particular need, drop by and browse. We are sure to have something you need or want. Carmen's is owned and operated by Roy and Carmen Hearon. A family-operated business always assures you of the personal attention to your particular needs that you deserve. At Carmen's, you are not 'just another shopper,' you're something special. Stop by Carmen's at 410 N. Terrell in Midland. There is something for everyone at Carmen's Mexican Imports. For more information on the many beautiful items available at Carmen's, call them at 684-4704.

Glass Shack believes in satisfaction

What are the two most important aspects of any business? Most people who are in need of a product or service look for two main things: quality and price. You can't always look at just the price, as lowest pricing often means poor quality. By the same token, the most expensive product or service is not necessarily the best quality. What you are looking for is the perfect blend of quality and price. The Glass Shack, 2400 W. Front St. in Midland, offers you exactly what you are looking for with that perfect blend of quality and price.

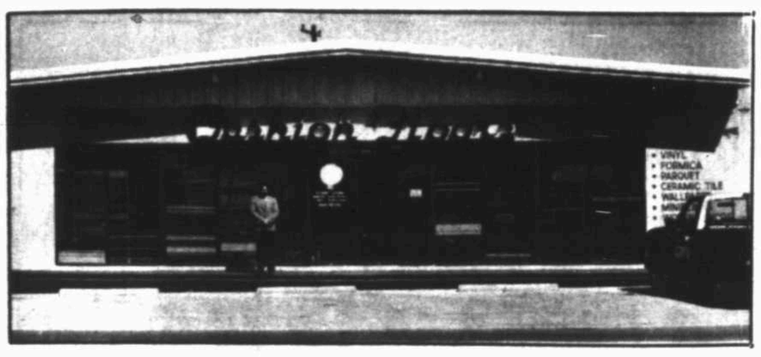

The Glass Shack believes in, and is dedicated to, customer satisfaction. They offer outstanding quality without the price tag that usually goes with top quality. All employees at Glass Shack are well-qualified and experienced. They understand your needs, and are very thorough in their job applications and solutions to difficult problems. Terry Loyd, manager of Glass Shack, feels that "...customers keep us on our toes. Even the most devoted customer will shop around to make sure he is getting the best deal. We have to stay one step ahead of the competition." Keeping the customer satisfied by staying one step ahead is what Glass Shack is all about.

Besides offering window glass for homes, Glass Shack also offers installation of mirrors, mirrored walls, store fronts, and specialty applications such as desk tops, shower doors, and sliding glass patio doors. Being a small company, Glass Shack takes more personal interest in each customer, working closer than a larger company would to keep the customer satisfied. Yet, Glass Shack is able to handle the needs of even larger contractors. With this personal interest and the quality of the work at a reasonable price, you should have no question in your mind where to go next time you have a need for any glass application.

People are definitely shopping around more today, because money is simply tighter than it used to be. Next time you have a need for glass, Glass Shack invites you to compare their quality and service with that of others before you buy. You will see what advantages dedication to customer satisfaction has for you. As a service to the weekend handyman, Glass Shack is open on Saturdays. Come by Glass Shack at 2400 W. Front St. in Midland, or call 683-0811. Customer satisfaction through quality and price is our goal.

The Glass Shack, 2400 W. Front St. in Midland, offers you the quality you expect at a reasonable price. The staff at Glass Shack is dedicated to customer satisfaction.If you have a need for any type glass application, check with the Glass Shack before you buy anywhere else.
