OPEC ends meeting with altered accord

New York Times News Service

GENEVA — Oil ministers from the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries ended a frustrating 17-day conference early this morning by agreeing to extend production controls aimed at strengthening prices.

The group agreed to raise its official production ceiling to a total of 14.961 million barrels a day on Nov. 1, and to 15.039 million barrels after Dec. 1. The current accord, reached in August, had limited production to 14.8 million barrels a day.

The global ceiling applies to only 12 of the group's 13 members, excluding Iraq. Officials said that Iraqi oil production is now estimated at somewhat less than 2 million barrels a day.

Central to the proposal was the decison to allow Kuwait to raise its production ceiling by 21,000 barrels a day in November, to 921,000 barrels, and by a further 78,000 barrels in December.

The accord also granted slight production increases to all countries except Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates. Some ministers said privately that the increase accorded Kuwait in the month of December came as a result of "loans" by the Saudis and the Emirates to Kuwait.

But Rilwanu Lukman, the Nigerian minister who is also the conference president, staunchly denied that any countries had lent others their portion to facilitate an agreement.

Kuwait had blocked final agreement by insisting for several days that it be accorded an increase of at least 90,000 barrels a day.

In a surpising move, the group said in its final communique that it "decided to return, as soon as possible, to the application of a fixed-price system" for crude oil, after discussing a similar proposal put forth by Saudi Arabia.

"I think the market will react more or less positively to it," said John Lichtblau, of the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation, who was in Geneva observing the meeting, "though it won't get carried away by it."

Oil traders observing the meeting said the action would probably prevent further price erosion, though they did not generally expect it to raise prices.

The meeting ended much the way it had gone on for more than two weeks, in considerable disarray, boding poorly for the group's ability to inspire confidence in its capacity to stabiize oil markets.

Lukman said the group would reconvene in Geneva Dec. 11 to continue discussing a permanent system of quotas for its members and to pursue the topic of fixed prices.

"We have a target price," Lukman said at an early morning news conference, "and it is between $17 and $19" for a barrel of oil.

Pressed by the desire of some ministers to leave Geneva today and concerned that failure to agree would send prices plummeting, the ministers worked through the night to iron out differences over how to adjust the quotas of some countries.

The group's communiqu'e said the extension was until the year's end and "should in no way be construed as a permanenet quota distribution among member countries."

Local oilmen react to OPEC decision

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

Local oil men agree prices will be impacted by the latest OPEC accord which extends production restraints another 60 days, but they are still concerned that the domestic oil industry is entirely dependent on OPEC for price stability.

"Certainly, it is good news," said Bill Kleine, president of Permian Corp., the largest crude oil buyer in the Permian Basin, "it should help oil prices, but not immediately."

Kleine said it will probably take two or three weeks before there is any reflection of the accord in the market, adding that the industry can be thankful for the accord because it means prices will not go down.

"You can read all the analysts you want," said Kleine, "but oil prices today are governed by a very simple equation: When OPEC holds the line, prices go up. When they don't hold the line on production, prices go down."

He said it was "awful" that the fate of the oil industry and the Permian Basin hinge on what happens in an OPEC meeting, but there in no way to avoid it.

Bob Dean, president of Midland-based Remuda Oil Co. and a regional vice president for Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association, agreed that there was not much chance to change the situation. "The U.S. is the highest cost producers in the world, while the Saudi's are the world's lowest cost production. I don't see much alternative in a situation like that."

Dean said the only thing the new OPEC accord meant was that the U.S. was still in the clutches of OPEC. He said while OPEC was now showing a degree of stability, its stability didn't account for much.

He also was skeptical that oil prices would increase as a result of the accord: "With only a temporary accord and an increase in production, I don't see how the price can go up $3, as some OPEC members have forecast."

MC trustees accept McCright's resignation

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

William "Hoyle" McCright Jr. Tuesday resigned as president of the Midland Junior College District Board of Trustees following his conviction last month on federal embezzlement and fraud charges.

U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton on Monday sentenced McCright to 12 years in prison and ordered him to pay a $20,000 fine after he was convicted Sept. 26 on four counts of embezzlement and misapplication of funds, fraudulently participating in a $1.925 million bank loan and making false bank reports and entries.

He had indicated he will appeal the case.

McCright, 61, was a former executive vice president and director of the defunct First National Bank of Midland.

He was elected to the nine-member board in 1973 when the Midland Junior College District was created. He had served as president since April, 1985.

Midland College President Dr. Jess Parrish told the Reporter-Telegram Tuesday that McCright had submitted a letter of resignation two or three weeks ago.

TAG to ask agencies for 10 percent cuts

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Midland's Tax Awareness Group took a look back and a step forward Tuesday as it met for the first time since July and announced plans to ask government agencies to prepare for a 10 percent reduction in the 1986 tax levy.

TAG spokesman Charles W. "Bro" Seltzer said the group can be credited for helping government entities save a total of $5,596,595 in taxes this year.

He added, however, that the budget process is a continuous one and that citizens should become involved now.

Seltzer said TAG is asking for a 10 percent across-the-board reduction from the 1986 tax levy by each government agency.

"Because our local government bodies were so receptive to us, we think we can get that," he said.

Seltzer said TAG's plans are to progressively monitor meetings of the local taxing bodies and evaluate elected officials regarding their preparedness, participation and interaction, and responsiveness to taxpayers.

"I know they (elected officials) don't like our sitting there with report cards, but that's exactly what we're doing," he said.

Seltzer said TAG will work with government officials in tracking big dollar expenses, to identify expenditures deemed excessive, wasteful or badly timed; and to look for areas of duplication whether they be within or among the various agencies.

"A big expense which is badly timed can almost turn into a big waste," he said.

Seltzer said some TAG members have suggested that officials look at combining the city and county jails.

"We're also looking at combining the functions of the Midland County Appraisal District and the Midland County Tax Assessors office, headed by Frances Shuffield, so that all of the tax assessing would be done by Roland Wilkinson and the MCAD," he said.

"We're not trying to throw Frances Shuffield out of a job, but this is one of the things we're looking at."

Seltzer said it is necessary to continue to impress upon elected officials and administrative staff the urgency for cost-savings in local government; and talk with state legislators about proposed changes in local and state laws.

"It appears that wasn't something that was done a great deal before the boom went to bust," he said.

Midland Mayor Carroll Thomas commended TAG members for their involvement in local government during the budgetary process.

"There's been need for an organization like this for a number of years," he said. "Sometimes it gets lonely up here."

With the help of TAG, Thomas said city officials were able to tune in to the voters and the issues.

"We voted not to have any bond issues and we cut the budget by $5 million," he said.

Thomas warned that TAG's goal of cutting agency budgets by 10 percent overall next year "is extremely ambitious."

"We're going to have a real problem after Jan. 1 in doing our budgets and doing our tax rolls."

MIDLAND UNITED WAY

Can you do your share? This year it's more important than ever!

Despite expulsions, U.S. seeks cooperation

WASHINGTON (AP) — After expelling 55 Soviet diplomats, the Reagan administration still plans to pursue cooperation with the Soviet Union, including an attempt to reduce nuclear weapons, high officials said today.

"We're prepared to live with the consequences, but we are not eager to have this spill over into other areas," said Undersecretary of State Michael Armacost in an interview on the "CBS Morning News."

Thomas Simons, deputy assistant secretary of state, said on ABC's "Good Morning America" that the action represents a policy of grappling with difficult issues rather than "sweeping them under the rug" as the two sides are in the midst of negotiations in Geneva on weapons cutbacks.

Secretary of State George Shultz is due to resume discussions started at the Iceland summit on arms and human rights when he meets with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze in Vienna on Nov. 6.

A new U.S. package of proposals to reduce offensive weapons is nearly ready for submission to the Soviets, but is being reviewed by Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger before it is presented to President Reagan for final clearance, a U.S. official, speaking only on condition of anonymity, said Tuesday.

Of the 55 Soviets ordered to leave their embassy in Washington and consulate in San Francisco, five were declared "persona non grata" by the State Department in retaliation for the ordered expulsion last weekend of five U.S. diplomats from Moscow.

The 50 other Soviets, also given until Nov. 1 to depart, were ordered home to bring the embassy and consulate staffs "to parity" with the American diplomatic complement in Moscow and Leningrad.

"The Soviets always insist upon parity in our relationship and this is one way of getting to parity in our representation," said Armacost.

He said he hopes the Soviets do not retaliate, "but if they do, at least they won't be doing so from the cushion of larger numbers of representatives in this country than we maintain in the Soviet Union."

Simons said the administration hopes the U.S. action will provide a better basis for constructive relations.

"Instead of a policy where you take only the positive and sweep under the rug the difficult, hard issues, ...instead of taking those out of the picture in order to pursue arms-control substance, you try to do all of those things together," Simons said.

Reagan, at a state dinner in honor of West German chancellor Helmut Kohl Tuesday evening, said the explusions were ordered because "we feel that they were connected with intelligence operations—the KGB."

"Besides," added Reagan, "they had more than we did and we just leveled it out."

He referred to the fact that the Soviets have more diplomats in the United States than there are American diplomats in the Soviet Union.

Soviet man executed on spy charge

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet accused of spying for the CIA has been executed for high treason, Tass said today. Western news reports have said the man was a prime CIA contact in Moscow and was turned in by agency defector Edward Lee Howard.

Adolf Tolkachev was sentenced to death by the military collegium of the Soviet Supreme Court, which "found him guilty of high treason in the form of spying," said Tass, the official news agency.

The brief report gave no details of Tolkachev's alleged espionage activities and did not say when the trial or execution occurred.

It said an investigation showed Tolkachev "in pursuit of selfish ends and on account of his hostile attitude to the Soviet state, had maintained espionage contacts with U.S. intelligence agents who had been in Moscow under the guise of U.S. Embassy personnel."

The Los Angeles Times, quoting unidentified sources, reported from Washington earlier this year that Tolkachev had been executed because of information disclosed by Howard.

Howard, 34, was fired by the CIA in 1983 after 2½ years with the agency. The FBI alleges he met with KGB agents in September 1984 in Austria and sold them U.S. secrets for $6,000.

He disappeared in September 1985 while under FBI surveillance, and surfaced in the Soviet Union in August. He was given political asylum after claiming he was being persecuted by U.S. security forces.

Howard was the first CIA agent known to have defected to the Soviet Union.

Two days before Howard disappeared from his home in Santa Fe, N.M., the KGB issued an announcement through Tass saying Tolkachev had been charged with espionage.

Lebanese professor released

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Kidnappers have released a Lebanese professor at the American University of Beirut after holding him hostage for more than five months, university officials said today.

The release came the day after an underground organization said it kidnapped Edward Austin Tracy, one of the few Americans still in Moslem west Beirut.

University spokesman Radwan Mawlawi said Nabil Matar, a 36-year-old Christian who is an associate professor of cultural studies, was freed Tuesday night in Moslem west Beirut. Mawlawi said Matar was in "fairly good shape" after 168 days of captivity.

The university issued a statement saying: "The AUB administration expresses gratitude to all government authorities and to political and religious leaderships and organizations whose incessant efforts led to the release of Professor Matar." It did not elaborate.

Hasenfus tells Nicaraguan court he's 'guilty as charged'

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Accused rebel arms supplier Eugene Hasenfus, on trial before a Nicaraguan People's Tribunal, said he is a mercenary and guilty as charged. But the American's lawyer planned to seek an extension of today's deadline for entering a plea.

Defense attorney Enrique Sotelo Borgen said Tuesday that his only contact with his client was a 10-minute discussion Monday night in the trubunal's offices, and that he needs more time to prepare a defense. The two spoke through an interpreter, Sotelo Borgen said.

"I cannot say categorically if I will declare him totally innocent," the attorney said. "Obviously there was a violation of Nicaraguan air space, which is a crime."

The 45-year-old Hasenfus, of Marinette, Wis., was charged Monday with terrorism and violating Nicaraguan security.

He was captured in southern Nicaragua Oct. 6 after Sandinista soldiers shot down a transport plane flying supplies to the U.S.-backed Contra rebels. His three fellow crewmen, including two Americans, died in the crash.

Hasenfus said in an interview with a U.S. network it "would have been better if I hadn't made it out of that plane. Dead people don't talk."

"I'm guilty of everything they've charged. It's there," he said in the interview broadcast Tuesday on NBC Nightly News. "How can I say I wasn't carrying small arms and munitions to their resistance?"

Hasenfus said he was working "for a paycheck. And it's an established fact already. If I'm considered a mercenary or a soldier of fortune, that's it then."

The charges against Hasenfus are contained in a 14-page document that is primarily an indictment of a half century of U.S. policy toward Nicaragua, including the Reagan administration's support for the Contras.

At the United Nations in New York, Nicaraguan Foreign Minister Miguel d'Escoto lashed out at the Reagan administration for practicing "the law of the jungle."

But he said Hasenfus, because he is being tried in Nicaragua, "can expect ... Sandinista justice, which is always merciful."

NBC interviewed Hasenfus at a maximum security prison in the village of Tipitapa, about 15 miles east of Managua, NBC producer Elena Caldera said.

Hasenfus told the NBC crew he had been transferred there Monday but would not say where he had been held earlier, Ms. Caldera said. U.S. officials had believed him to be in downtown Managua's El Chipote prison.

The crew was not allowed to see his cell but Hasenfus told them he shared it with an English-speaking "half-American" whom he refused to identify, Ms. Caldera said.

In the interview, Hasenfus said he had signed a full confession and was told even before the trial that he would be convicted. The Justice Ministry has recommended the maximum 30-year prison sentence.

Sotelo said he would ask that the confession be dismissed as evidence because it was made "under psychological coercion."

NBC said Hasenfus was sure he was working for the CIA, and that he felt abandoned by the U.S. government.

"All I hear is negative reports saying that they don't know me, that they don't know what's happening here. Somebody does," he said.

Asked in the interview if he had anything to tell his family, Hasenfus said, "I love them and hope to be back with them soon."

Hasenfus' wife, Sally, flew to Managua from Wisconsin and the two were allowed a five-minute meeting after Monday's court session, Sotelo Borgen said. He said both wept.

The Sandinistas overthrew the right-wing government of President Anastasio Somoza in July 1979 and set up the People's Tribunal in 1983 to prosecute people accused of counter-revolution. Each panel consists of a lawyer and two lay people, all usually active in Sandinista organizations.

Hasenfus is being tried by attorney Reinaldo Monterrey, 47; truck driver Luis Perez Duarte, 48; and laborer Domingo Matute, 37. The two laymen are both members of Sandinista Defense Committees, which are neighborhood watchdog groups.

Sotelo Borgen, a Nicaraguan hired by Hasenfus' family, said former U.S. Attorney General Griffin Bell was expected to arrive Thursday to help with the defense. Bell volunteered to defend Hasenfus but, because he is not Nicaraguan, may only serve as an adviser under Nicaraguan judicial procedures.

OPEC

Describing OPEC's move as "remedial action in a period of restraint," Lukman said it was intended "to stabilize prices and mop up excess supply in the market."

The ministers spent the first 11 days of the conference discussing criteria by which to allocate fresh production quotas under a permanent system, but Lukman said they could only narrow the choice to "eight or ten."

When the ministers convene again in early December, they are expected to tackle two particularly difficult issues: setting permanent production quotas for members and re-establishing a fixed-price system around an $18 marker price for crude oil.

In fact, much of the latest haggling was said to involve comments about the price.

One minister said that the Iranian delegate was insisting on including in the final communiqu'e the full text of a Saudi Arabian Government document issued at the weekend in which Riyadh called for a return to an $18-a-barrel fixed price for OPEC oil.

The minister said the Saudi representative at the talks refused to accept the insertion, but he said the difference did not appear to be a serious obstacle.

The Saudi Arabian minister, Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, was said to have missed the meeting, because of illness, and was represented by his second in command, Abdul Aziz al-Turki.

The Iranian insistence was not the only sticking point during the long day of talks. The primary negotiations centered on how to divide the average 200,000 barrels a day of additional oil production the ministers decided to allow themselves in the last two months of the year.

"There was chaos this morning," one minister said.

One minister, underscoring the general confusion, said squabbling had gone on for hours in one case over whether Venezuela should be allowed to produce 3,000 barrels a day more than it has been permitted under the present accord.

Kuwait had insisted it would accept no agreement that did not grant it a 10 percent increase in its 900,000-barrels-a-day quota for November and December.

Under the compromise, Qatar will receive a 20,000-barrel increase, Gabon 25,000 barrels and Ecuador 37,000 barrels.

The Kuwaiti retreat appeared to be a result of political pressures, including intervention by King Fahd of Saudi Arabia, who said Monday that he would get in touch with other Persian Gulf leaders to try to break the deadlock.

But some delegates accused the Saudis and Kuwaitis of staging the deadlock so that both countries would emerge as engineers of a major compromise. Iran, their political and economic rival, got credit for the current OPEC agreement, reached in August, which drove prices up from their summertime lows to their present levels of about $14 a barrel.

"It was a Gulf show of strength, very dramatic," a Geneva-based oil consultant said. "Just to show who's really ruling the roost."

Oil politics within the 13-member organization have been dominated in recent months by jockeying for power among the Persian Gulf states, reflecting the conflicts between the radical Shiite rulers of Iran and the moderate Sunni Moslem kingdoms surrounding the Gulf.

The focal point is the Iran-Iraq war. Iraq is backed politically and economically by Saudi Arabia and its moderate allies, including Kuwait.

The charges of Gulf manipulation demonstrated the bitterness among delegates at the OPEC meeting, the organization's fifth this year.

Often there was intervention by governments, including several public statements by the Kuwaiti and Saudi administrations. And Iran and Iraq, locked in their fierce war for more than six years, stepped up their ground and air attacks during the Geneva meeting.

REACT

Harry Spannaus, executive vice president Permian Basin Petroleum Association, said the thought prices could go up temporarily as a result of the new production agreement, but would probably fall back to current levels. Said Spannaus: "They will be pumping an extra 200,000 barrels per day into the system, going from 16.8 million barrels per day to 17 million barrels, I don't see how this can increase oil prices.

"I am pleased we have this temporary agreement, but it still doesn't address the problem of stable oil prices. If anything it might hurt."

State court orders man released from jail

AUSTIN (AP) — A La Feria man who was held in contempt and sent to jail for failing to pay his child's medical expenses was ordered released from jail Wednesday by the Texas Supreme Court.

The court, in an unsigned opinion, said Joel Davila could not properly be held in contempt for the entire sum of $28,000, so he should be released from Cameron County Jail.

Davila, according to the opinion, was divorced in November 1975, and an award of child support was modified 10 years later to include expenses for his daughter's continuing psychological and psychiatric care at Charter Palms Hospital.

On Nov. 26, 1985, the mother filed motion for contempt, alleging that Davila had failed to pay the hospital as ordered.

Matar was kidnapped May 7 as he walked from his home in west Beirut's Ras Beirut residential district to the nearby campus.

A group calling itself the Independent Movement for Freeing Civil War Kidnap Victims claimed responsibility for the abduction in a statement May 18.

The group said Matar's abduction was part of its campaign to force the government of President Amin Gemayel, a Christian, to determine the fate of about 2,200 missing Moslems allegedly held by Christian militias.

The group also claimed it killed several Armenian Christians in west Beirut last May as part of its campaign to pressure the government.

A handwritten statement in Arabic signed by the Revolutionary Justice Organization and delivered Tuesday to the office of a Western news agency said the group had abducted the 55-year-old Tracy, formerly of Vermont. The statement accused him of working for the CIA and the Israeli intelligence service Mossad.

About 60 foreigners have been kidnapped in west Beirut since January 1984. Christians control the eastern sector of the capital, where the U.S. Embassy is located.

Almost all the Americans living in west Beirut fled in recent years as the 11-year-old Lebanese civil war continued unabated.

Seven Americans are among the 20 kidnapped foreigners missing in Lebanon. The Revolutionary Justice Organization, which is believed made up of Shiite Moslems loyal to Iran, earlier claimed to have kidnapped another of the missing Americans. The group has also claimed it holds three Frenchmen.

The brief statement did not say where or when Tracy was kidnapped.

State-run Beirut radio quoted police sources it did not identify as saying he disappeared Friday.

Accompanying the Revolutionary Justice statement was a color photograph of Tracy showing him from the waist up with a rough beard and wearing a blue shirt. He stared dully at the camera.

A photocopy of the first page of his American passport, also sent with the statement, gave his birth date as Nov. 20, 1930.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman, who commented on condition of anonymity, said he could not confirm Tracy had been abducted.

Hippo to help children testify in court

CHICAGO (AP) — For children who have to testify in criminal cases, mostly sexual assaults, a courtroom can be a big, scary, cold place.

But on "Hamilton's Day in Court," the courtroom will be a friendly place where judges, clerks and bailiffs perform skits explaining their jobs and the children's guide is a big, cuddly purple hippopotamus named Hamilton.

The program is the first of its kind in the nation, part of the Victim-Witness Assistance Program in the Cook County state's attorney's office, said program director Eileen Murphy.

It's aimed at the hundreds of child victims called to testify in Cook County each year in criminal cases, mostly sexual assaults, Mrs. Murphy said Tuesday in a telephone interview.

The aim of the program, which begins next month, is to make children who have already been traumatized "feel less traumatized when walking into a courtroom that is very cold, hard, austere and church-like, before somebody in a black robe," Mrs. Murphy said.

"We thought it would help to have a cartoon character who was cute and cuddly help" show them around the courtroom before they're called to testify, she said.

Hamilton, actually a woman from the sexual-assault unit dressed in a furry hippopotamus costume and papier-mache head, will lead a group tour of the courtroom about two weeks before the children are called to testify.

SOVIET

Asked whether the believed the incident might damage chances for arms control agreements, Reagan said that "there is no way of knowing that now — but I have to believe that it is as important to them as it is to us."

State Department spokesman Charles Redman announced the massive expulsion with "regrets," but said it was forced on the administration by the Soviet Union.

"We remain committed to pursuing the dialogue stemming from the Reykjavik meeting in all areas of our relationship," Redman said. "This problem of espionage is an important one, but it is a separate problem, and our plan is to go ahead with the dialogue."

Redman said he could not predict how Moscow might respond. But, he said, with the U.S. and Soviet embassies and consulates equal in size, "no retaliation would be justified."

Twenty-five Soviets in New York were forced out earlier under a U.S. allegation the U.N. mission had been used for espionage. Another 70 Soviets will be required to depart in three stages over the next 18 months.

In Moscow, the Soviet response to the expulsions was unclear.

The foreign ministry spokesman, Gennady Gerasimov, said, "If the United States will insist on continuing this game of tit-for-tat, then this can continue indefinitely. We consider it is time to stop."

The official Soviet news agency Tass said that with the expulsion, "The Reagan administration has undertaken the next step aimed at worsening Soviet-American relations."

Congress set the ceiling for the Soviet Embassy and the San Francisco consulate last year and gave the executive branch three years to carry out the order. It restricts the embassy to 225 people and the consulate to 26.

This means a reduction of 54 in Washington and 15 in San Francisco. But with some of the posts currently unfilled, 38 people will be required to leave the capital and 12 must quit San Francisco.

The five Soviets declared "persona non grata" were identified as counselors Vasiliy Fedotov, Oleg Likhachev and Aleksandr Metelkin and attache Nikolay Kokovin, all of the Embassy in Washington, and Lev Zaytsev, consul in San Francisco.

This matches numerically the expulsion of the five Americans from Moscow for what the Soviets on Sunday called "impermissible activities."

Redman said the five Soviets were singled out because "they are persons we have reason to believe have engaged in activities inconsistent with their diplomatic status."

This appeared to be an allegation that they were involved in espionage activities, but Redman did not make the charge directly. However, he stressed their expulsion was caused by "the unjustified action by the Soviets in expelling five U.S. diplomats in Moscow."

RESIGN

The Board accepted the resignation Tuesday at its regular monthly meeting and asked Parrish to mail a letter thanking McCright for his years of service to the college.

Gloria Hinojosa, MC Board vice president, appointed a three-member committee to find a replacement for McCright's position as trustee.

The committee will make its recommendation during the Board's regular November meeting.

McCright's replacement will continue to serve until elections scheduled in April 1988.

"We're going to have to cut more this year just to hold the line on taxes," Thomas said.

Dr. Walter Parks, president of the Midland County Hospital District Board of Directors, told the TAG audience that Midland Memorial Hospital is fighting to maintain quality care and spend less money doing it.

Parks said directors will engage in a advertising campaign to promote the the hospital.

"If we don't promote Midland Memorial as a business, not only will the hospital and the patients suffer, your businesses will suffer," he said.

NATO defense ministers back U.S. stance

GLENEAGLES, Scotland (AP) — NATO's defense ministers today endorsed the U.S. stance at the Reykjavik summit and urged the Soviet Union not to hinge missile cutbacks in Europe on the abandonment of the "Star Wars" defense against nuclear attack.

The majority of the ministers also expressed their support for Star Wars, the U.S. Strategic Defense Initiative program for space-based missile defenses. Greece and Denmark disassociated themselves from the SDI endorsement.

The Reykjavik summit between President Reagan and Kremlin leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev collapsed in a dispute over SDI after both superpowers proposed huge cutbacks in nuclear arsenals, including removing their medium-range missiles from Europe and cutting long-range missiles by half.

"We extended our warm appreciation to the president (Reagan) on his conduct of the talks and fully endorsed his bold attempt to seek far-reaching arms control agreements with the Soviet Union," the 16 ministers said in a statement at the end of their two-day meeting in this golfing resort.

"Ministers called on the Soviet leadership not to hold any INF (intermediate range force nuclear missile) agreement hostage to any other agreement," the statement said.

Some North Atlantic Treaty Organization generals and politicians have criticized the arms reduction proposals made at Reykjavik, saying they would leave Western Europe vulnerable to an attack by superior Soviet conventional forces and short-range nuclear missiles.

U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, who said he was pleased with the allies' support, sought to allay such fears.

"We never could feel we had fulfilled our responsibilities if we allowed any particular area of deterrence to be neglected," said Weinberger, sitting next to NATO Secretary General Lord Carrington at a news conference.

"We would never feel we had fulfilled our responsibility if we took out one set of weapons which left an area without a counterbalance to deal with what is left," he said.

Weinberger's remarks reflected his emphasis at Gleneagles that the United States will insist on parity in conventional forces and short-range nuclear missiles as a price for an agreement.

The proposals called for the removal from Europe of U.S. cruise and Pershing 2 medium-range missiles and the Soviets' SS-22 medium-range missiles.

WORLD in brief

All-white South African church votes to integrate

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (LAT) — The all-white Dutch Reformed Church, which has backed apartheid for decades, voted Tuesday to accept members of all races in a move that church leaders hope will lead to much broader racial integration in South Africa.

The decision was hailed as a social and political as well as a theological breakthrough by liberals in the church, which has long provided much of the ideological underpinning for apartheid, South Africa's system of racial separation and minority white rule.

But delegates attending a church synod in Cape Town stopped short of merging their denomination with its non-white "daughter churches." As a result, racial segregation will probably continue in practice although abolished in both church law and its canon of official beliefs.

The delegates put off a vote on an even more difficult issue: proposals condemning apartheid as not only without foundation in Scripture but morally wrong.

Liberals in the 1.4 million-member church, which was one of the principal architects of the system of racial separation here, want a clear condemnation of apartheid as both a sin and a heresy when the delegates vote today or Thursday.

But the furthest that such reformers as Prof. Johan Heyns, the denomination's new moderator, are willing to go is to "confess" that making religious arguments to support apartheid was a mistake that, in practice and unintentionally, caused "much pain, sorrow and bitterness."

"The church is now called on to go further than it has ever gone before," said Heyns, the dean of the University of Pretoria's theology faculty. He called on the church members to "rid ourselves of the apartheid myth."

"Our challenge now," he said, "is to witness another aspect of the Bible — the dignity and equality of all people, regardless of race. Apartheid is at stake, and I personally hope this is the turning point."

Youths' release demanded

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — Riot police today chased away hundreds of students who marched peacefully on the police station to demand the release of youths arrested the day before.

Mobs of blacks rampaged through the capital Tuesday, rioting, setting fires and attacking passers-by in three hours of disturbances triggered by the belief that South Africa was to blame for the death in a plane crash of Samora Machel, the president of Mozambique.

Witnesses said no one appeared seriously hurt today when police armed with wooden batons and shields charged into about 700 students who had gathered outside the police station.

Student leaders held talks with senior police officers who agreed to release the detainees if the demonstrators dispersed immediately.

But they refused and police charged after about an hour.

The students carried placards praising Machel and denouncing the Malawian and South African heads of state.

Machel, a Marxist who was Zimbabwe's staunch ally, died Sunday when his plane slammed into a South African hillside near the Mozambican border on a flight from Zambia to Maputo.

In Bulawayo, Zimbabwe's second biggest city, some 100 students from the United Teachers' College today staged a peaceful demonstration outside the South African Airways offices. They carried placards blaming Malawi and South Africa for Machel's death.

El Nacional expanding

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The government newspaper El Nacional has become Latin America's first periodical to use satellite technology, in a project aimed at increasing national circulation through zoned editions.

But the project, begun Aug. 28 with a local edition in the northern industrial city of Monterrey, has prompted protests that the government is monopolizing the technology and wasting money at a time when Mexico is an economic crisis.

The complaints were made by Alejandro Junco, publisher of El Norte in Monterrey, who urged the Inter-American Press Association at its annual meeting to publicly express its concern to the Mexican government. IAPA is a hemispheric organization of privately owned newspapers.

The organization agreed and asked the Mexican government to make satellite transmission facilities freely available.

El Nacional prints about 82,000 copies daily in Mexico City, with an average of 46 pages and wide use of color photographs and graphics. It is considered among the best five of the capital's 13 morning newspapers.

Mario Ezcurdia, publisher of the 58-year-old newspaper, said $1 million was spent on setting up the new operation in Monterrey, including a small office for editing local news.

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi today appointed a new foreign minister, dropped five ministers and changed the portfolios of several others.

It was his sixth Cabinet reshuffle in almost two years.

N.D. Tiwari was appointed foreign minister to replace P. Shiv Shankar, an official announcement said. Shankar, who was also commerce minister, will continue in that post.

Gandhi, speaking to reporters, said he made the changes to give the government "added dynamism."

Contra cargo planes bought in Canada

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two cargo planes tied to Nicaraguan Contra supply operations were bought by a Panamanian corporation early this year in Canada, the former owner of the aircraft says.

Jean Pronovost, president of Propair Inc. of Rouyn, Quebec, said Tuesday he sold two DHC-4 "Caribou" cargo planes to a Panamanian company and one plane was subsequently registered in El Salvador, where the Contra supply network is reportedly based.

The purchase of the planes and other new evidence revealing a substantial Contra supply effort suggest that the operation had access to large amounts of money despite a two-year congressional ban on U.S. government assistance to the Contras.

Although the ban ended last weekend when President Reagan signed a bill giving $100 million in aid to the Contras, congressional investigators are examining the possibility that the administration may have illegally assisted the rebels over the past two years.

Pronovost, in a telephone interview, refused to divulge the selling price of the two planes or identify the buyer beyond calling it "a numbered company in Panama," a corporation known to him only by a set of numbers. He said the buyer paid the "market rate" for the planes, which he estimated at between $400,000 and $525,000 each.

Pronovost said the purchase was a "cash transaction" with the money transferred by wire into his bank account. Panama has banking and corporate laws that guarantee tight secrecy on customer transactions.

The Reagan administration and the Contras contend that money for supplies came from private sources. However, some administration officials and Contra leaders, insisting on anonymity, have said the fund-raising network was indirectly managed by the White House and relied heavily on countries receiving U.S. military assistance.

Published reports have repeatedly named Saudi Arabia as a financial backer of the Contras. In Tuesday's editions, the San Francisco Examiner reported that in early 1984, CIA Director William J. Casey urged Saudi Arabia's King Fahd to provide covert funds for rebels in Nicaragua and Angola.

The Examiner, basing its story on information from a U.S. businessman who asked not to be identified, said Casey made the request aboard a yacht off the French Riviera on a cruise that ended Feb. 19, 1984.

Asked for comment Tuesday, CIA spokeswoman Kathy Pherson said, "the story is false."

Documents captured by the Nicaraguan government from a C-123 cargo plane shot down in southern Nicaragua on Oct. 5 indicate that a small air force of supply planes was landing regularly at Contra bases or dropping supplies from the air. The Contras are fighting to overthrow Nicaragua's leftist government.

A log book kept by Wallace B. Sawyer, an American pilot who died in the Oct. 5 crash, shows a DHC-4 listed as "23" using El Salvador's Ilopango military airfield and another field designated as "AGU," apparently Aguacate, a U.S.-built airstrip used by the Contras in eastern Honduras.

Between March 24-28, the plane, flying out of Aguacate, took part in 10 missions marked "ops," common shorthand for military operations. During that period, Nicaraguan government troops had crossed into Honduras to attack Contra base camps.

President signs 'sweeping victory for fairness' into law

WASHINGTON (AP) — Calling it a "sweeping victory for fairness," President Reagan today signed into law a landmark tax overhaul that slashes rates, curtails deductions and cuts taxes for most Americans.

"This tax bill is less a reform than a revolution," the president said to applause of a crowd of aides, members of Congress and corporate officials who gathered for a ceremony on the White House South Lawn.

"This is the best anti-poverty bill, the bet pro-family measure, the best job-creation measure to ever come out of the U.S. Congress," Reagan said. And he repeated a warning to any who would try to raise the reduced rates to fight the record federal deficit.

"We cannot allow tax reform to be undone with tax-rate hikes," Reagan said. "We must restore certainty to our tax code and our economy. I will oppose with all my might any attempt to raise tax rates on the American people."

The new law, at least five years in the making, is one for which both political parties are eager to claim credit two weeks before the congressional elections. The president had put tax reform at the top of his second-term domestic agenda; the final version of the bill was supported by most Democrats and Republicans in the House and Senate.

The bill makes the most sweeping changes in federal tax law in at least 32 years. Its chief authors, Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., and Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., say it is the broadest overhaul since the income tax was enacted in 1913.

Most of the changes go into effect next Jan. 1, although it will take as long as five years for some of them to be felt. In 1988, when most changes will be effective, an estimated 76.3 million couples and individuals will get tax cuts averaging $801 (about $400 for a $30,000-a-year taxpayer) and 20.4 million will face tax increases averaging $1,742 (a bit less than $400 at the $30,000 level).

The new law will remove from the income-tax rolls about 6 million of the working poor. It will shift about $120 billion in taxes from individuals to corporations over the next five years, reversing a decade-old trend. It will require wealthy investors and profitable companies to pay a share of tax regardless of their deductions. And it will close off some tax-shelter arrangements designed more to avoid taxes than to turn a profit.

On Jan. 1, the present system of 15 individual tax rates (14 for couples) will be compressed into five; the top rate of 50 percent will drop to 38.5 percent. A year later the permanent rates will become effective — a bottom rate of 15 percent (which about three-quarters of Americans will pay), 28 percent and 33 percent.

The $1,080 personal exemption will be increased gradually to $2,000. Standard deductions.

German leader confident Reagan did 'right thing'

WASHINGTON (AP) — West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, concerned that any U.S.-Soviet arms pact take the NATO allies' security into account, says he is confident President Reagan will pursue an equitable accord.

"I have no reason to be afraid of anything," the West German leader told reporters during an Oval Office session Tuesday with Reagan.

Kohl was to keep up his round of Washington appointments today, including a meeting with Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III, lunch with Vice President George Bush, a news conference and a dinner for his American hosts.

Reagan and Kohl's hour-long private discussions centered on the Reykjavik summit session between the president and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, which failed to produce an arms control breakthrough.

The West German leader told Reagan he had done the right thing by meeting with Gorbachev and that "it will be a good thing to build on what was achieved there," said a U.S. official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

GAO study indicates bias in INS policies for asylum

WASHINGTON (LAT) — A new General Accounting Office study shows that Central Americans are far more likely to be refused asylum than immigrants from other countries, even when their claims are similar.

Supporters of asylum for Central Americans cited the report Tuesday as proof that the Reagan administration uses asylum policy as an unfair political tool, an assertion that the Immigration and Naturalization Service immediately disputed.

The report is "very damning to the administration," said James P. McGovern, legislative assistant to Rep. Joe Moakley, D-Mass., who is sponsoring a bill providing temporary asylum for all Central Americans now in the country, not only those covered under the massive immigration reform legislation passed by Congress last week.

Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., who requested the GAO study, said he was "very troubled" by the findings and vowed to work in the next congressional session "to determine the appropriate response to these disturbing revelations."

In and out of Congress, an intense battle was waged during the last session on behalf of Central Americans seeking asylum, about 500,000 of whom are Salvadorans, by far the largest subgroup. The battle will resume when Congress returns next year, and leaders in both chambers have promised Moakley that his legislation would be given high priority.

The Moakley bill passed the House but was attached and then deleted from the immigration reform measure in the waning days of the session because it jeopardized passage of the historic legislation.

The measure passed by Congress would provide asylum for immigrants who arrived in the United States before January 1982. Moakley's bill would also allow Central Americans who came to this country after 1982 to remain for about two years while the U.S. government studies the conditions.

NATION IN BRIEF

De Lorean confident at beginning of fraud trial

DETROIT (AP) — John Z. De Lorean sat, relaxed and confident, as federal prosecutors told a jury that investors' dreams turned to nightmares as he stole or misdirected more than $12 million meant for his sports-car company.

De Lorean nodded in vehement agreement as his attorney told jurors the money was paid to a company hired to design the stainless steel-skinned, gull-wing De Lorean sports car, and that a 1979 loan to De Lorean secured by the money was a legitimate business deal.

After opening statements Tuesday at his fraud and racketeering trial, De Lorean said he expected to be cleared, as he was in a 1984 Los Angeles trial on federal cocaine distribution charges.

"I think God didn't save me in the last one to stick me into this," De Lorean said. "I'm sure it will turn out OK."

De Lorean is charged with 15 counts that include racketeering, mail and wire fraud, interstate transportation of stolen money and income-tax evasion.

If convicted of racketeering, he faces a maximum penalty of 20 years in prison, $25,000 in fines and forfeiture of property acquired or maintained in the enterprises. The other charges carry lesser penalties.

Evangelist suing for libel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Television evangelist Pat Robertson, suing for libel, says liberals are trying to discredit him and his dead father even though he has not yet announced he will seek the Republican presidential nomination in 1988.

Robertson, in separate lawsuits filed Tuesday in U.S. District Court, says a former congressman and a current congressman wronged him when they circulated assertions that he tried to avoid combat duty during the Korean conflict in 1951.

He said former Rep. Paul "Pete" McCloskey, R-Calif., and Rep. Andy Jacobs Jr., D-Ind., "willfully, intentionally and maliciously" disseminated untrue statements suggesting Robertson was a coward and that he sought to use the political influence of his father, then-Sen. A. Willis Robertson of Virginia, to avoid combat duty.

Robertson said McCloskey sent a letter to Jacobs on Aug. 4 in which he said the evangelist, a 2nd lieutenant in the Marine Corps in February 1951, left a troop ship in Japan to telephone his father to request transfer from a group bound for combat in Korea.

Robertson asked the federal court to order a retraction and to award him $35 million from each defendant.

Dump site search continues

SEATTLE (AP) — A congressional staff report alleging that the search for a national nuclear waste dump was rigged won't keep the search from continuing at full speed, says the head of the search program.

Ben Rusche, director of the Department of Energy's Office of Civilian Radioactive Waste Management, said Monday that last week's congressional approval of $499 million in DOE funding means a "political consensus still is in existence...to develop a safe disposal system for spent fuel" from commercial nuclear reactors.

"We will proceed vigorously with our work," Rusche said.

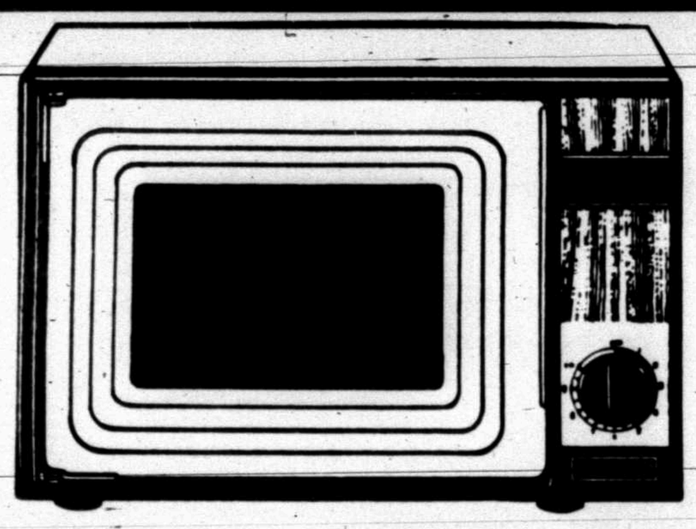

Addressing utility and nuclear energy officials in Charleston, S.C., Rusche called the funding a "miracle," given the outcry over the way his department selected three possible Western sites for a national repository for highly radioactive nuclear waste.

The sites are the Hanford nuclear reservation in Eastern Washington, Yucca Mountain, Nev., and Deaf Smith County, Texas.

Rusche said no funds are available for immediate drilling at any of the three sites, but predicted drilling would start soon after fiscal 1988 begins next October.

Clements: Taxes enacted during White's term hurt Texas economy

AUSTIN (AP) — Republican gubernatorial candidate Bill Clements says the new taxes enacted during Democratic Gov. Mark White's term have seriously damaged the Texas economy.

But Clements stopped short Tuesday of pledging to roll back any of the White-approved tax hikes.

"Whether we can in fact roll back taxes from where they are, or the fees that have been established under Mark White's governorship, I don't really know," Clements said.

Clements, seeking to regain the job White ousted him from in 1982, said repealing the tax increases is "a question we'll have to explore."

Clements said that as governor he would examine the entire state tax structure to see if it should be overhauled to keep up with a changing economy.

"If we can roll back some of these more significant taxes that have been increased under Mark White, I would certainly be willing to take a hard look at that. But the whole (tax) restructuring process has to be revenue-neutral. We are not going, overall, to increase taxes in the state of Texas while I'm governor during this next legislative session."

In 1984, White signed a $4.8 billion sales and fuel tax increase to fund school reforms and highway improvements. Last month, he OK'd temporary increases in the sales tax — raising it from 4⅛ cents to 5¼ — and gasoline tax to help overcome a $2.8 billion state budget deficit.

In a speech to officials of the Texas Soil and Water Conservation Districts, Clements said those tax increases had made Texas less appealing to businesses. That means fewer new jobs being created, he said.

"It has been impossible for business in Texas — or thinking about moving to Texas — to know what it would confront. Time and time again, Mark White insisted that he would not raise taxes. Then he increased state spending and taxes."

The Republican said state spending under White has raged out of control, calling the swelling budget a major factor in the state's economic bust.

"If taxes are falling — and believed to be falling — the economy will grow," he said.

Clements said Massachusetts learned that lesson several years ago and began to cut taxes.

"That state's economy has begun to grow again. Surely, what Massachusetts can do, Texas can also do and do better," he said. "All it takes is credible and capable leadership. And that requires the retirement of Mark White and the elimination of his ever-increasing spending and taxes."

White's loss may hurt bid for convention

HOUSTON (AP) — Re-election of Gov. Mark White is one of the criteria the Democratic National Committee will consider in deciding whether or not Houston will host the party's 1988 national convention, a party official said.

Paul Kirk, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, interviewed, said White's re-election would not necessarily win the convention for Houston, but his ouster probably would lose it.

"I don't want to say that if Mark White is elected it's automatically Houston, by any means," Kirk said. He added, however, White's loss would be tough for Texas' largest city to overcome.

According to most polls, White is facing an uphill battle to keep the governor's job from Republican Bill Clements, the man he defeated in 1982.

"It comes close, in my view," Kirk said Tuesday. "I think the re-election of Mark White is a critical factor."

Terry Michael, spokesman for the Democratic National Committee, told The Associated Press that Kirk did not mean Houston would not win the bid if White loses.

"Chairman Kirk did not say and did not mean that Houston will lose its bid to the 1988 Democratic National Convention if Mark White loses...The fact is that when or whether Gov. White loses, Houston will be a very strong contender for hosting the convention," he added. "Chairman Kirk's comments were obviously made to express his hope for Texas' voter support for Mark White's candidacy, but they were not meant to rule out Houston's bid if Gov. White loses."

The convention, scheduled for July 18-21, 1988, is seen by Houston political and business leaders as a way to attract money and bolster the city's sagging economy.

Kirk also said Houston is at a disadvantage in competing for the convention because the city's George R. Brown Convention Center is not expected to be completed until next year, well after the site is to be chosen.

UT paper reports handcuffs used in hazing incidents

AUSTIN (AP) — Handcuffs reportedly were used on a University of Texas fraternity pledge before he died after consuming about 18 ounces of rum, but a newspaper reports previous hazing incidents on the campus in which handcuffs allegedly were used.

Sworn testimony given to police indicates that Mark Seeberger, 18, a Phi Kappa Psi pledge from Dallas, and two other pledges were handcuffed the night of Sept. 17 during a fraternity "ride."

Seeberger died later that night after consuming some 18 ounces of rum. A Travis County grand jury has been investigating his death.

The UT student newspaper, The Daily Texan, reported Tuesday that it obtained an earlier police report giving details of a January 1984 hazing incident involving 11 Phi Kappa Psi fraternity members — five of whom were handcuffed and bound by the ankles with tape.

The report said Austin police were called to an apartment complex. It said the apartment manager called police because several fraternity members, whose legs were bound and whose hands were cuffed, were nearly thrown into the swimming pool, the newspaper reported.

"They stated they were members of Phi Kappa Psi fraternity...They all stated that they were not aware it was illegal to haze," wrote police officer Edmund Garza.

No charges were filed because those bound "did not wish to file any complaint against those who tied them up," the newspaper reported.

A crucial choice

Few state office-holders have more impact on the people of the Permian Basin than do the members of the Texas Railroad Commission — the agency responsible for regulating the oil and gas industry, the trucking industry and the rail industry.

This year the selection of a new member to the commission takes on particular import because of the state of the oil economy. The direction the commission moves in the next few years could well determine the future of the oil and gas industry, and to an extent, the future of the state overall. On Nov. 4, voters will be asked to choose between Democrat John Sharp of Victoria and Republican Milton Fox of Katy.

Both men offer qualities that undoubtedly would be beneficial to the commission and its vital work. Both have served extensively in state government and have dealt with matters affecting the oil industry — Sharp in the House of Representatives from 1979 through 1982 and in the Senate from 1982 until the present; Fox in the House since 1972. Fox additionally has experience as a petroleum engineer.

But in consulting with various members of the local oil and gas industry, it was obvious that Sharp has garnered more support based on his past legislative actions and what he professes to do once in the office.

Sharp argues convincingly that the unemployment rate in Texas is directly tied to oil activity and contends the oil and gas industry can be strengthened by (1) an oil import fee or quotas to establish a floor price for domestic oil, (2) repeal of the fuels use tax, and (3) exemption of some oil production, such as stripper wells, from severance taxes when the price of oil is low.

Those would seem logical steps to making the oil and gas industry viable again in Texas and that, of course, is a crucial element to getting the economy of the state going again.

In favoring an import fee on crude oil, Sharp argues that "the major objection to the oil import fee is that government shouldn't control the price of oil, but foreign governments, namely Saudi Arabia and others, are already doing just that. The imposition of an oil import fee will allow us to control our own destiny instead of being at the mercy of some Middle Eastern shiekdom."

Sharp says he does not favor "forced unitization" of the oil industry, and that opposition is favorable to the independent oil industry.

But the oil and gas industry's outlook isn't all the Railroad Commission is concerned with and neither is it Sharp's only concern. He says the trucking industry needs to be better regulated and that the transportation of hazardous wastes by truck or rail is only one of the dangers that can be addressed through the regulation process. He also is a staunch advocate of protection of the state's water supplies.

Sharp is young, energetic and knowledgeable of the industries he would regulate as a member of the Railroad Commission. We believe he is the logical choice for this position.

Dad wants Viet son to come 'home'

WASHINGTON — Paul Thompson is a reasonably happy man, living with his wife and their three sons in Southern California. But Thompson's fourth son — his oldest — can't be with his father. The boy, now 17, lives in Vietnam, where he was born to a Vietnamese mother.

Jack Anderson

Thompson, as a civilian working for the Army, was one of thousands of Americans who fathered illegitimate children in Vietnam during the long U.S. presence there. Unlike many, he was there when his son was born; he remembers the butterfly-shaped birthmark on the baby's back.

But a year later Thompson was sent back to the United States for six months. When he returned to Vietnam, the baby's mother refused to see him, fearing that he would take away her baby. "All I wanted to do was keep in touch," Thompson recalled the other day. "I wanted the child to know that I cared about him and did not abandon him."

For a brief period Thompson was in contact with the baby's aunt in Saigon, but eventually he lost track of the boy, named Thom Minh Lin. Now Thompson is one of dozens of Americans who want to bring their half-Vietnamese children to this country. They are frustrated by red tape, lack of concern and political differences between the U.S. and Vietnamese governments.

About 3,700 Amerasian children have been brought here since the Vietnam War. U.S. officials estimate that 8,000 still remain, but Hanoi claims there may be as many as 15,000. Known in Vietnam as "children of the dust," these offspring of mixed parentage are often discriminated against by the Vietnamese.

Officially, Hanoi and Washington agree that the children belong in the United States, and in 1982 Congress passed legislation to ease their immigration. But this particular law has yet to bring any children out of Vietnam.

A State Department official explained why: Since there are no formal diplomatic relations between the two countries, processing the children is difficult. Most contacts take place at the United Nations. Furthermore, the law encompasses Amerasians throughout the Far East; the special circumstances of the strained U.S.-Vietnamese relations require special legislation, the official said.

Another roadblock is that the 1982 law does not cover the children's Vietnamese mothers, and few of them are willing to give up their children.

An "Orderly Departure Program" agreed to by American and Vietnamese officials ended last January after effecting the immigration of 3,700 children. Talks were held last month in the hope of reinstating the program.

Despite their failure to cooperate fully in the past, Vietnamese officials insist they want to do so. "We are ready to let them out," a Vietnamese official at the United Nations told our reporter Courtney Brinkerhoff. "We would like the United States to accept as many as possible as soon as possible."

Meanwhile, Americans like Paul Thompson wait in growing frustration. Corinth, his wife of 13 years, said: "I knew about Thom before we were married. We just want to know if he is alive and let him know that we care."

There is caring on the other side as well. The Pearl S. Buck Foundation has a file of more then 3,000 letters from Vietnam, written by Amerasian children seeking help.

And Bruce Burns, a Vietnam veteran who is now a lawyer in San Jose, Calif., is working to set up a locater service to help Vietnamese children find their American fathers. His effort was inspired by an 18-year-old Vietnamese girl who sought him out two years ago and said in some of her few words of English: "I want to find my daddy."

FIGHT OVER FUMES: The automobile and oil industries have been battling for several years for the favor of the Environmental Protection Agency, which insists that poisonous gasoline fumes be eliminated at the nation's gas pumps. Detroit wants the oil companies to install "vapor recovery systems" on their gas pumps; the oil companies want the systems installed in cars at the factory.

The EPA has quietly let it be known that it sides with the oil industry and may order new cars equipped with vapor systems. But the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety — funded by insurance companies — argues that vapor recovery systems in cars could turn them into fiery deathtraps in the event of accidents. "Why choose an alternative that would have the horrible consequence of burning people in crashes?" the institute asked EPA administrator Lee Thomas in a recent letter.

RAMBO IN STRIPED PANTS: What's in a name? Plenty, Foggy Bottom officials are hoping. In an official notice in the Commerce Business Daily, the State Department announced that it had hired one Charles Rambo for its "Security Enhancement Program" at $54,000 a year ("Secret" clearance required). It was no joke. Rambo took our call himself, and admitted he gets teased about his name. "I want to ask the people who produced the movies why they used this name," he said. He's been a security specialist for years. Meanwhile, other contractors have been calling State to ask if the department is now using code names.

LETTERS

Before rezoning — think!

David Thurbon, assistant city planning director, was quoted in an Oct. 2 news story as saying, "A non-profit senior citizens' agency is planning to relocate within a northwest Midland neighborhood." This writer is a full-blown senior citizen and would find it convenient and enjoyable to have the center at the Fuhrman estate inasmuch as I have resided nearly 30 years only a block away.

Even though a non-profit agency will operate the center, it doesn't mean they will preserve the property itself or the dignity of the area. What plans does the agency have for a highly critical traffic area regarding parking? Do they intend to plow up part of the grounds and pave it over? This would be a really unhappy occurrence. There is a swimming pool on the property which it is hoped will be preserved for the pleasure and therapy needs of the elderly — will it be cared for?

Good neighbors want to continue to be good neighbors, so we in the area have many questions needing answers. Why does the city of Midland dig holes and fill them up again the way they have done in Grafa Park and the city's own land directly across and west of Grafa Park? Is the city making a lake on the western property, and how will this affect the development of the senior citizens' center and the rest of the flood-control facilities of the west end of Midland?

The privately owned property immediately west and south of the Fuhrman estate is largely undeveloped. There is no access on Sinclair from the west at Upland Avenue, this being land undedicated for a street and now presently under a "grandfather clause" for use as a flood drainage ditch crossing the Elda Prickett property which is due north of the Fuhrman estate. How does the city plan to meld access to the center into these usages?

With all due respect to the driving experience of most senior citizens, some of us putt along in our little buses and autos snarling up traffic in various directions. Proper parking facilities and easy access to the Fuhrman estate need to have a real in-depth study that will preserve and protect the spacious grounds and the general residential atmosphere thereof, besides guarding Midkiff traffic usage.

The use of the Fuhrman estate as a senior citizens' center would be a real monument to the memory of the late Fred Fuhrman if it is preserved and operated as I am sure he would wish it to be in a dignified and efficient way. But before a rezoning ordinance should be considered, the populace needs a few guarantees of proper management and development of the general facility.

The power to ruin

Since Gov. White was so anxious to test the teachers to see if they knew enough to teach the children of this state, he surely will not object to testing the legislators to see if they know enough to make and pass laws which will govern the way we do business in this state.

It will be interesting to see how many of the legislators have business degrees, or have been involved in the management of successful businesses. How many of them are petroleum engineers, or have been involved in management of oil companies when they have explored, drilled, produced and marketed the oil from this state? How many have been involved in medicine or hospitals at the managerial level? How many are lawyers — who are not businessmen — and how many are merely glib-tongued politicians who have no background in anything successful except being elected?

These are the men who tell the businessmen of this state how to manage their affairs. They are the ones who set the taxes which have killed so many businesses, yet they never cut their own salaries or "fringe benefits." They have caused housewives to "make do" because they have no money to buy new things.

With all this, they are the ones who are asking for more taxes to avoid inconvenience on their part. They are the ones who call a special session and have no planned program for that session.

I think it is time we called for testing and established standards for those who run for public office, especially if they make a career of being in office.

Remember, the power to tax is the power to ruin, and they are doing that to Texas.

Blame Iceland flub on treaty reinterpretation

NEW YORK — The Reagan administration may have precipitated the collapse of the Iceland summit a year ago, when in October 1985 it became known that Pentagon and State Department legal advisers had "reinterpreted" the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. This facilitated the amazing discovery that the treaty permitted testing and development of space-based missile defenses.

Tom Wicker

The treaty language said plainly (Article V, Paragraph 1): "Each party undertakes not to develop, test, or deploy ABM systems or components which are sea-based, air-based, space-based, or mobile land-based." Those who had negotiated the treaty for the Nixon administration protested strenuously that Article V meant exactly what it said.

Administration wizards nonetheless insisted that other treaty language, meant by its authors to apply only to new types of land-based missile defenses, would permit what was prohibited in Article V. This legal prestidigitation produced an uproar among treaty proponents, including most U.S. allies; Secretary of State Shultz had to pledge that the administration would continue to observe, for the time being, the original interpretation.

That left the allies and the Russians on notice, however, that the administration could shift to its new interpretation whenever it wanted to proceed with tests that might not be permitted under the original understanding of the treaty.

It also insured that Mikhail Gorbachev would want a U.S. commitment to stick by the original understanding, and would perhaps even pay a substantial negotiating price for such a commitment. So it proved.

Gorbachev arrived in Iceland prepared to agree, and did agree, to a 50 percent reduction in strategic offensive weapons — including the heavy land-based Soviet missiles that U.S. strategists most fear — and to the removal of all Soviet and U.S. medium-range missiles from Europe. But in return, he "insisted upon an absolute requirement of adhering to ABM" for 10 years; and that during this period both sides "adhere strictly to all its provisions" — which Gorbachev interpreted in a later speech to mean that tests of "anti-ballistic defense in space are prohibited except research and testing in laboratories."

Reagan accepted the 10-year requirement; he had proposed seven years himself and knew that, anyway, no space-based defensive system could be deployed for 10 years or more. But he rejected the demand that research and testing be confined to laboratories. He insists that this requirement — on which the summit collapsed, and with it the arms reductions already agreed to — would have put an effective end to the SDI.

Even if it would have, many Americans outside the administration think the deal would have been worth making. But numerous U.S. scientists believe that research on the SDI could have been continued "in laboratories" at a reasonably effective level — effective, that is, if Reagan really means his frequent assertions that SDI is only a research project to find out whether space-based defense is feasible and to make certain that the Russians do not secretly take a lead in developing such a defense.

Besides, the president might have countered Gorbachev's demands. In addition to the 10-year requirement, he could have agreed to strict adherence to treaty provisions — but with the understanding that a committee of experts from both sides would work out the complex details of what tests could be conducted, how and where. What, for example, are the limits of a "laboratory"? Of a "component"? Might some devices be tested in certain ways, even if an entire "system" could not be? What, for that matter, would be regarded as a "test"?

Even Article V leaves this something of a gray area on which neither Gorbachev nor Reagan is an expert; and this grayness reasonably could be made subject to detailed scrutiny within a broader agreement. In fact, Soviet officials now are saying they might accept some testing outside the laboratory. It would have been hard for Gorbachev to reject a proposal for an expert study, or for either leader to reject whatever conclusions their experts might reach.

But the president either didn't see or didn't want to seize that opportunity. Thus did "reinterpretation" of the ABM Treaty by one side lead the other to the fear, suspicion and demands that ultimately caused both to lose the historic arms reduction agreements that should have been their primary goal.

ART BUCHWALD

'Covert operations' has 'em standing in line!

For the past week I have been trying to find out who was responsible for the C-123 cargo plane that was shot down over Nicaragua. Everyone seems to be taking credit for it.

The White House folks say that the Reagan Administration was involved.

Art Buchwald

"We don't approve of airplanes that fly over Marxist countries we have diplomatic relations with, but we're always willing to make an exception. If we can't violate the laws of Congress to wage a secret war, then we have no right to call ourselves the White House."

"Who helped you do the job?"

"The Abraham Lincoln Brigade. They fought on the Loyalist side during the Spanish Civil War and they were aching for action again. What gets you mad is that Maj. Gen. Singlaub says he did it all with his mercenaries."

"Who is Gen. Singlaub?"

"He runs the Club Med for the contras in El Salvador."

I went to see Gen. Singlaub. "Are you involved with the plane that was downed in Nicaragua?"

"I didn't know a plane had been shot down, but if there was, we'll take credit for it."

"It was one of ours not one of theirs."

"You mean one of mine. No plane flies over Nicaragua without my permission."

"Then the CIA had nothing to do with it?"

"They always brag about being part of a covert operation whether they are or not."

"Maybe I should ask William Casey. His footprints are all over Central America."

When I called and asked for Casey, I was told he wasn't there. "Where is he?" I inquired.

"He's on The Hill telling everyone that the CIA was up to its ears in monkey business in Managua. He's afraid someone else will get the points."

"You would think he'd want to deny it, since it is against the law."

"Denying covert operations gets you nowhere. Besides, we subcontract most of our work in Central America, and if it leaked out that we didn't do our own illegal air drops, the press might think we're up to no good."

"In spite of what you're telling me, I assume you do have a cover story denying any involvement in this?"

"Our cover story is that the pilot of the C-123, whom we didn't know, took off from Miami, which we've never heard of, on a crop-spraying flight to Green Bay, Wisconsin. The plane ran into bad weather, and, to save fuel, dumped all the guns and ammunition it was carrying over what he thought was Nashville. Unfortunately, some Alabama duck-hunters fired on the plane forcing it down over Nicaragua."

"Is that the best the CIA can come up with?"

"It did sound better in the briefing room."

"Everyone claims responsibility for the C-123 plane, even Vice President George Bush."

"He's always loved covert operations."

I called. "Mr. Vice President, it's being bandied about all over town that your office is handling illegal arms smuggling to Nicaragua."

"I can't say no, and I can't say yes."

"Why not?"

"I don't know whether it's a plus or a minus for my campaign."

"Why would the White House give you the assignment when it could inflict embarrassment on the office, challenge your credibility, and cause you nothing but grief and suffering?"

"They owe me one."

STATE in brief

Man convicted of abuse sentenced to 50 years

HOUSTON (AP) — A man was sentenced to spend 50 years in prison after being convicted of forcing ground pepper down the throat of his girlfriend's 2-year-old son, who later died.

Raymond Edward Coffey, 26, also was fined $10,000 Tuesday by a jury who deliberated about four hours, court clerk John Washington said.

The same jury on Monday convicted Coffey in the May 7 death of Christopher Kalmbach.

Coffey's defense attorney, Wayne Hill, argued for probation, saying the facts of the case did not warrant a long prison term. He asked for 10 years probation or at the most 10 years in prison.

Hill said it was the boy's mother, Patty Kalmbach, and not his client who force-fed the pepper.

Ms. Kalmbach, 21, refused to testify in Coffey's two-day trial despite an offer of immunity. She is facing a charge of murder by omission.

Texas teens arrested

WAURIKA, Oklahoma (AP) — Authorities in this southern Oklahoma town say two Dallas teen-agers were arrested and jailed pending the filing of charges that could include attempting to run over a Texas state trooper.

Texas Department of Public Safety spokesman Joe Clements of Wichita Falls said the chase began Tuesday afternoon when a Denton County sheriff's deputy spotted a red 1986 Mercedes-Benz that later was reported stolen from Dallas.

The car was stopped in Decatur by trooper Joe Patterson, who said the driver sped off, trying to hit him.

Clement said authorities spotted the car in Wise and Montague counties, and the vehicle ran a roadblock near Bowie. The couple was later arrested by Jefferson County deputies.

White signs water bill

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill to allow Texas farmers and ranchers to participate in federal soil conservation programs without losing their surface water rights has been signed into law by Gov. Mark White.

The bill, sponsored by Rep. Jim Parker, D-Comanche, and Sen. John Sharp, D-Victoria, was passed during the Legislature's recently-concluded special session.

The bill amends a provision in the state water law that had required cancellation of all surface water rights which weren't used for a 10-year period.

Under the federal program, participants contract with the U.S. Agriculture Department to take land out of production for not less than 10 or more than 15 years.

Candidates find campaign worker is better known

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — It was bad enough when a candidate for district judge in the upcoming election found out that his opponent is better known than he is, but that wasn't the worst news.

The candidate, Jay Miller, also found that one of his hired campaign workers is better known than he and his opponent, Susan Reed, combined.

The paid worker, Arturo Sanchez, was equally surprised by the findings.

"I'm surprised. I didn't know I had a high name identification," Sanchez said.

Miller, a Democrat, paid $8,000 to learn the bad news.

The poll, conducted by Emory Young & Associates of Austin, showed that only 2 percent of the voters recognized Miller's name, while 3 percent recognized Republican Reed's name. The recognition factor for Sanchez was 6 percent.

A spokesman for the pollster said they chose Sanchez' name just to see what would happen by using the name of a non-candidate.

"It definitely indicated that both parties have a low name identification," said Miller, who has spent more than $150,000 in his bid to be promoted from county-court-at-law to district court.

Bridgeport City Council votes to fire police officer

BRIDGEPORT (AP) — Mayor Walter Hale said the city council had lost faith in Officer Albert Taylor when it voted 5-0 to fire one of the few remaining patrolmen on the force.

Hale asked the entire force, excluding one patrolman and the acting police chief, to resign by Tuesday or face termination at the council's meeting. Only one patrolman who was asked to resign was given his old job back.

Sgt. Mark Norwood, Patrolman Arthur Smith, and officer Keith Madison conceded to Hale's order, but Taylor held out.

Hale asked the men to leave the force after former Police Chief Jerry Wittie was indicted this month on charges that he took $1,500, captured in a drug bust, from the police evidence room.

He said the council's decision was not wholly based on the Wittie incident but it probably played a part in the final decision.

Taylor, who said he was in law enforcement when some of the council members were still in diapers, did not attend the meeting.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Cloudy days to follow clear skies

From Staff and Wire Reports

Permian Basin-area residents may expect a short period of clear skies to be followed by clouds and the possibility of showers once again. The clear skies predicted for this evening by the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport are to be followed late tonight by partly cloudy skies. Thursday, under mostly cloudy skies, there is a 20 percent chance of showers.

The NWS is calling for a low tonight in the lower 50s with winds out of the east at five to 10 mph. Winds will shift to the northeast on Thursday at five to 10 mph. The forecast calls for a high in the lower 70s.

Tuesday's high of 65 was 26 degrees below the record high set for that date in 1979. Today's low was 27 degrees above the record low of 33 set for this date in 1945.

STATE

Scattered thunderstorms and large areas of rain covered the eastern two-thirds of Texas today.

And the moisture, triggered by a large upper level disturbance over Colorado and Hurricane Roslyn on the western coast of Mexico, was expected to continue tonight and Wednesday although some clearing from the west was expected to begin late today.

Areas of fog caused visibility to diminish across a large of the Panhandle at dawn today and was expected to return early Wednesday.

Forecasts called for generally cloudy skies over most of the state with scattered showers and thunderstorms and areas of rain over most of North Texas and South Texas through tonight and possibly Wednesday. Widely scattered showers were forecast for southeastern portions of West Texas.

NATION

A storm system over the high Plains today brought rain and thundershowers to Oklahoma, Texas, Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska and South Dakota, while the central Rockies received rain and snow.

Dime-sized hail pelted areas east of Carlsbad, N.M.

The southern Plains have received thunderstorms and heavy rains. On Tuesday, 2 to 3 inches of rain drenched southwest Oklahoma.

A few rainshowers fell in upstate New York and parts of New England. Showers and thundershowers were scattered along the lower two-thirds of coastal Florida.

Mets finally get wake up call for Series

By MURRAY CHASS
N.Y. Times News Service

BOSTON — The Mets who won 108 games during the regular season showed up at Fenway Park Tuesday night and made their initial impact on the World Series.

Unleashing their largest hit production in nine postseason games, the Mets thrashed the Boston Red Sox, 7-1, behind the nifty pitching of Bob Ojeda.

The victory stopped the Red Sox postseason winning streak at five games and reduced their World Series lead to two games to one. The teams will play the fourth game tonight, with Ron Darling scheduled to make his second start of the Series against Al Nipper, the pitcher who is considered the weak link among Boston's four starters. Nipper has not pitched since Oct. 4, the next-to-last game in the regular season.

Ojeda, whom the Mets obtained from the Red Sox last November, ignored the wall that bothered him when he pitched at Fenway and stifled his former teammates on one run and five hits in seven innings. Roger McDowell pitched the final two innings, retiring all six batters he faced and wrapping up the Mets' first World Series victory since the fifth game of the 1973 Series against Oakland.

THE METS, who had been hitting .190 in postseason play, supported Ojeda with a 13-hit barrage. Lenny Dykstra led the onslaught by lashing four hits, including a home run that led off the game against Dennis (Oil Can) Boyd. Danny Heep, the designated hitter, and Gary Carter each contributed a two-run single, and Darryl Strawberry even got his first hit of the Series after failing to hit in his first nine times at bat.

When the Mets took the field they looked like the same players who lost the first two games in New York, but apparently those Mets were impostors. "I don't think we've seen the New York Mets on the field," Mel Stottlemyre, the pitching coach, had remarked.

These Mets instantly established their identity, erupting for four runs in the first inning against Dennis (Oil Can) Boyd and showing that maybe their manager, Dave Johnson, knew what he was doing when he canceled the team's scheduled workout Monday on the off-day.

"I just felt we were tired after the first two games," Johnson said before this one. "There also was the pressure of the media. If we could've come here, zipped through a 40-minute workout and gone back to the hotel and gone to sleep, it would've been O.K. But if they had been here, everybody would've asked can you come back."

JOHNSON said his players looked better when they arrived at Fenway Park tonight but added, "If that's a direct relation to how they play, we'll find out."

Johnson found out on only the third pitch of the game — or the fourth if the count includes the ceremonial first pitch from Thomas (Tip) O'Neill Jr., the retiring Speaker of the House, who is an ardent Red Sox fan.

Lenny Dykstra, the Mets' leadoff hitter, swung at Boyd's third pitch and lofted it into the right-field stands for a home run, the Mets' first lead of the Series and their first extra-base hit of the Series.

Dykstra's home run marked the third time a Mets' batter had led off a World Series game with a home run, the most times any team has done it. Each of the other leadoff home runs also came at the start of the third game — Tommie Agee in 1969 and Wayne Garrett in 1973.

IN EXPERIENCING a two-game extra-base drought, the Mets became only the third team in Series history to do that, joining the 1926 Yankees and the 1939 Cincinnati Reds. However, the Mets did not join the '26 Yankees as the only teams that went three games without an extra-base hit.

Proving that the explosive start was not a fluke, the Mets proceeded to reel off three more hits. Wally Backman lined a 3-2 pitch to right field for a single, Keith Hernandez lined a single to left-center, sending Backman scooting to third and Gary Carter drilled a double to left-center, driving in Backman and putting Hernandez at third.

Darryl Strawberry was the next batter, and he did not continue the hit streak. Instead he did what he has done most of the times he has batted in postseason games. Hitless in the Series, he struck out for the fifth time in seven Series times at bat and the 17th time in 29 postseason times at bat.

That brought Ray Knight to the plate, and he hit a grounder that produced the pivotal play of the inning. The grounder should have left the Mets with two out and runners at first and third, but they wound up with one out and the bases loaded because the Red Sox botched a routine rundown play.

Monahans back on AP honor roll

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
Associated Press

San Antonio Holmes Coach Gary Malesky calls Wilbur Odom the complete quarterback.

"He can throw deep, soft or hard, and he's a pretty good scrambler when he gets caught, so I'd say he's a complete quarterback," Malesky said.

San Antonio MacArthur thought they had solved the Odom riddle last week, taking a 14-6 lead in the first quarter.

But Odom finished the game by completing 22 of 25 passes for 351 yards and four touchdowns in a 61-21 victory to earn a spot on The Associated Press Schoolboy Honor Roll.

"Really, a couple of those that he missed were near the end of the first half when we were just throwing bombs trying to score before the half," Malesky said.

In six games this season, Odom has hit 84 of 126 passes for 1,516 yards and 21 touchdowns. He's hit 67 per cent of his passes and thrown four interceptions.

"The big difference this season is that his percentage is way up, from last year," Malesky said.

"He's reading defenses and getting the ball to the open man. He seems to be able to get the ball to the receiver in some real adverse conditions with people hanging all over him."

Another quarterback, Mission's Lupe Rodriguez, also had an outstanding passing performance in leading the Eagles to a 41-17 victory over McAllen Memorial.

Rodriguez completed 30 of 44 passes for 337 yards and six touchdowns, four to Nati Valdez, rallying his team from a 17-0 deficit. Rodriguez's touchdown passes went for 2, 13, 20, 18, 15 and 14 yards.

Monahans remained unbeaten with a six-touchdown performance by running back Charles Thompson, who gained 255 yards on 20 carries and scored on runs of 2, 69, 5, 3, 52 and 10 yards in a 49-21 victory over San Angelo Lake View.

In other outstanding performances:

— Valley's Kirk Saul completed five touchdown passes in a 60-6 victory over Motley County to give him 39 touchdown passes for the season and six away from the state record of 39. The Patriots have three games remaining this season.

— Ademar Galvan completed 10 of 13 passes for 345 yards and touchdowns of 76, 50, 30 and 46, all to Bobby Tolentino, in a 43-31 victory over previously unbeaten Premont.

— Orangefield's Ken Swenson continues to kick his team to victory. His field goals and extra points have been the difference in his team's four victories this season including last week's 40-yard field goal and extra point in a 6-10-8 victory over Hamshire-Fannett.

— Waelco's Matt Thornton scored five touchdowns on runs of 10, 4, 1 and 6 yards and returned a punt 90 yards for another score in a 55-7 victory over Brownsville Pace. He gained 127 yards on 32 carries.

— Crane's Gerald Mitchell rushed 290 yards on 12 carries and scored on runs of 87, 44, 70 and 3 yards in a 52-0 victory over Clint. Mitchell has 804 yards on 27 carries and eight touchdowns in the last two games.

— Bangs' quarterback Billy Baker hit 10 of 10 passes for 148 yards and three touchdowns, scored on runs of 1 and 26 yards and intercepted a pass in his team's 52-6 victory over Cross Plains.

— Cayuga's Marvin Jenkins gained a school record 334 yards on 31 carries and scored on runs of 80 and 75 yards in a 30-7 victory over Scurry-Rosser.

— Palestine's Ivory Lee Brown went over the 1,000-yard rushing plateau with 245 yards on 27 carries and touchdown runs of 2, 1 and 79 yards in a 43-12 victory over Carthage.

Green Monster silent observer of Series

By HAL BOCK

BOSTON (AP) — Wall? What wall?

The Green Monster in left field at Fenway Park stood quietly Tuesday night, waiting for a little World Series action. It got almost none.

Oh, there was a calling-card double by Boston's Don Baylor, a little second-inning love tap, just to remind Bobby Ojeda that the wall was still there, right where he left it when he was traded to the New York Mets last winter.

But other than that, the industrial green monument was a non-participant as Ojeda, the left-hander it once haunted, exorcised a few demons and put the Mets back in business.

He pitched seven masterful innings, spacing five hits in a 7-1 victory, and became the first left-hander to win a postseason game at Fenway since Hippo Vaughn of the Cubs beat the Red Sox in 1918, back when the wall was neither green nor much of a monster.

Acquired in an eight-player trade with Boston last winter, Ojeda also became the first pitcher to start a World Series game against the club he had played for the previous season.

The Red Sox had made much of his return to Fenway where, like a few other left-handers, he often was consumed by the wall during the five years he pitched for them. But the Monster might as well have been in Cape Cod for the damage it did to him this time.

Ojeda painted the corners and never gave in to the Boston hitters, even in the toughest spots. He threw strikes and he flourished. Twice, he retired Bill Buckner with two men on base to short-circuit budding Boston rallies.

"He was a little off, a little on," Buckner said. "He doesn't blow you away, but he gets you out."

That is the idea, of course.

"He was outstanding," said catcher Gary Carter. "A master out there. It was nice that he grew up in this ballpark. Maybe that gave him a little more incentive, pitching against his ex-teammates. Knowing the park probably helped him somewhat. Any nervousness he might have felt was put at ease pitching back in a park he was familiar with.

"He pitched his game, kept the ball down. Most of the time when he was behind in the count, he went to his offspeed stuff and that threw guys off."

That's because in that situation, the tendency is to throw fastballs. Ojeda refuses to do that and the formula has proven successful for him. It was how he won 18 games for the Mets this season and he wasn't about to alter it for the Red Sox.

"We tried to vary things," he said. "You live in one place, you get hurt. If it works, we don't change until it doesn't work. The situation dictates where you pitch. I don't think about why it works. Sometimes, it happens."

So Ojeda worked inside some, outside some, and was always around the plate. A fastball here, a change of pace there. Nothing to let the Red Sox play pingpong off his old friend in left field.

"Bobby pitched great," Mets Manager Davey Johnson said. "He didn't get rattled and never gave in to any hitter. I thought a couple of his pitches were borderline in tough situations and he didn't let it bother him. He's a battler and he was my most consistent pitcher this season."

If the Red Sox were making a big deal about Ojeda's reunion with the Green Monster, the Mets were low key about it. Did they ask him about Boston at all?

"Yeah," he said, "a few of them wanted to know some restaurants."

Ojeda had talked before the game about the return to Fenway Park being a special experience for him. Not bittersweet, just special.

"Bittersweet had nothing to do with it," he said. "I'm a New York Met now. The last thing I feel is bittersweet. This is competition. This is man against man. Everybody wants to knock each other's socks off."

This time, though, with the Monster watching and waiting, the Sox Ojeda knocked off happened to be red, just like the ones he used to wear.

World Series Quotes....

BOSTON (AP) — Here's what some of the participants had to say about Game 3 of the World Series:

Darryl Strawberry, Mets right fielder, who got his first hit in the eighth inning after striking out five times in seven at bats: "Sometimes, you try too hard and try to do too much, and I think that's what I've been doing. I'm not embarassed about the way I'm playing. I feel like I'm going to do some big things yet in this Series. I said I needed one hit to get going, and tonight, I got it."

Gary Carter, Mets catcher, on getting back to second base safely in a first-inning rundown: "When I saw he (Keith Hernandez) was in the rundown, my blazing speed got me back back to second."

Lee-Permian: Lack of identity

I never thought it would happen, but Friday's Midland Lee-Odessa Permian football game has a definite lack of identity.

I can't even figure out why around 20,000 West Texas football fans are angry over the fact that they can't get into the game. This one just doesn't seem to be that big.

This isn't heresy. It's just plain fact. I mean they can't even come up with a suitable moniker for this one.

REMEMBER ALL the beauties of the past — "The King Is Dead," "Shootout II," "Exodus II," "Shootout Revisited" and the "The TV Game?" These games came rolling at us like a Hollywood Rambo with machine gun strapped to a bare chest. Just the titles made the blood boil.

Heaven forbid, but we can't even attach a name to this one. We have a sellout crowd, both teams are undefeated and people are screaming for tickets — even for a bathroom seat if available.

This one isn't even on TV. They aren't even going to interrupt the World Series, Time magazine isn't going to be here, ESPN has already filmed the Panthers, there is no TV replay scheduled for Saturday and John Wilkins isn't the coach of Permian. It's a sad state of affairs for this storied rivalry.

I'VE TRIED to figure out what all the excitement is about. I've gone through the list: 1. The winner will almost be assured of a playoff berth. 2. State rankings are on the line. 3. These teams don't like each other very much. 4. The fans like each other even less. 5. The games always seem to be close. 6. Some fans feel like this will be the first of two games the teams will play against each other this year. 7. It's a chance to be among the social elite of the Permian Basin because you own a ticket. 8. A chance to gripe about how small Memorial Stadium is without doing anything about it. 9. Midland High is open. 10. It's a chance to forget that you don't have a job.

Of course, I fit into No. 8 on the list, and I'm sure you fit somewhere in there, unless of course, you have a kid playing on one of the teams or you just like to watch Gina Adams twirl. And those are probably the two best reasons to see this one.

The series isn't even close. Permian has won 22 of the 29 games played between the two teams. Lee has led in six of the last seven games and won only two of them. Lee hasn't beaten Permian at Memorial Stadium since 1976. And, anyway, it was much more fun traveling to Lubbock to see the game.

Big? This one doesn't even come close. You'd think sensible people would realize that. You'd think we would have some tickets to buy this week. You'd think that they would at least invite Gov. Mark White to attend to build this thing up a bit.

ALAS, GOV. White doesn't like high school football, but that doesn't really matter because Permian Basin football fans don't know a big game when they see one. They'll go to any Lee-Permian game — even if it doesn't have a great moniker.

Maybe we could call this one, "To Be Named Later Because We're Going Anyway."

And no, Virginia, I'm not going to give up my press box seat because "I'm Going Anyway!"

Man-Talk numbers confuse the ladies

The weekly football forecast column appearing in this space on Saturdays has drawn unexpected, but, considering the source, understandable criticism.

Members of the fairer sex, who do not have their PhDs in the chemistry of the locker room presperation, seemed mystified by the complexity of the numbers and all those pluses and minuses and the give and take procedures.

The confusion is not surprising since the contents deal with the vagueries and whims of the weekly betting line.

THE WOMEN, bless 'em, try but this is highly technical man's talk and, of course, is beyond a mere woman's comprehension.

One lady wanted to know what Dallas plus three means, "Are you picking Dallas to win by three points? And what is this minus business?"

I try to explain about how the gamblers handicap the games, just like horse racing, by giving points to the inferior team, which sometimes isn't inferior, especially after they see the spread.

At church an irate lady reader commanded, "I don't understand it, I don't like it and you'd better stop it or there won't an athlete in school who will pass my Greek class."

Her husband took me aside later and assured me his wife was a troublemaker, "The only reason she reads your column is to monitor it for disparaging remarks about your Mrs., which might be used for evidence or grounds."

WOMEN LIKE sports, but really don't understand them. I remember the Mrs. once wanted to leave a ball game at Ebbets Field in the midst of a two-out eighth inning rally with the score 2-2. If we'd left when she wanted to, we'd have missed some of the 13 runs the Dodgers scored.

Then, several years ago during a coffee break with Ann England, who worked in Lifestyle back in the days when it was Society, she gamely endeavored to carry on a sports conversation.

She mentioned that a beau had taken her to a Rose Bowl game back when she was a student at Berkeley around 1929 or 1930.

I WAS properly impressed, "You saw the Georgia Tech-California game, the day Roy Riegals ran the wrong way. Tell me about it...."

"No that wasn't the game. One of the teams was from Louisiana," she corrected.

I didn't want to make fun of Ann, not an admirer who had told someone I was the handsomest man in the sports department.

The fact that I was also the only man in the sports department did not detract the compliment in the slightest. She could have said I was the homliest man in the sports department.

Naturally, I wanted to be as diplomatic as possible.

"ANN, Louisiana State has never been to a Rose Bowl game. Just like a woman. Goes to a football game and she doesn't even know what teams are playing. You saw California-Georgia Tech and missed the biggest play of the game," I chuckled with patient gentlemanly tact.

"I'm sure...." she began.

"Come on, Ann, I can name all the teams and games from that era. In 1937 Pitt and its Dream Backfield beat Washington, 21-0. In 1936, Stanford beat SMU, 7-0, and in 1935 Alabama, Dixie Howell, Don Hutson and Bear Bryant, beat Stanford and 1934 Columbia pulled KF79 on Stanford for the greatest upset in Rose Bowl history and in view of what has transpired over the years probably the greatest upset in the history of sport."

I blustered on, "In 1933 Southern Cal beat the stuffing out of Pitt. And in 1932 Southern Cal beat Tooo, ah, er, but, Ann, I think I proved my point. There's no need to belabor it."

But I was too late, "That's right," she perked up before I could change the subject. "It was Tulane. Tulane is in Louisiana, isn't it?"

I can't stand a smart alec, can you?

Grid coaches question wisdom of UIL ruling

DALLAS (AP) — Football coaches say a University Interscholastic League ruling that allows girls to play junior high school football may not be in the best interests of the girls or the sport.

The UIL Legislative Council voted 12-6 Monday to allow girls to play football after lawsuits were filed in September challenging a 38-year-old rule banning girls from the sport.

The lawsuit was filed by the Texas Civil Liberties Union and the parents of Tina Trejo, an eighth-grader who made the football team at Bedichek Junior High School in Austin and was not allowed to play.

The ruling does not permit girls to play high school football.

Coaches and administrators said they are concerned that girls could get hurt playing football. They said the ruling creates problems with dressing rooms, equipment and medical attention.

"I've got a girl of my own," said Ray Overton, a football coach at Irving MacArthur High School. "It's such a physical sport. I would hate for her to be involved. I don't know what their ultimate goals are. If they couldn't do it in high school, you'd hate to see kids waste their time."

Dick Rittman, athletic director for the Abilene school district, said letting girls play football goes against his traditions. He said he was always taught to treat girls with respect, "and now we want to put them on the football field and beat the hell out of them?"

"I believe we are getting to the point where we are totally disregarding logic and common sense," said Carl Copeland, a coach at Haltom High School.

Tom Ritchey, athletic director for the Sweetwater school district, said he wouldn't let his daughter play football.

"It just doesn't seem the sport that girls ought to be playing," Ritchey said. "Does that mean boys can now play girls' basketball? That's one of the questions that's being asked."

Ex-AD says Lefty 'gone'

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Maryland assistant basketball coach Ron Bradley "almost certainly" will become interim coach until a permanent replacement for head coach Lefty Driesell is hired, according to a former university athletic director.

"I'm sure it's inevitable they'll force him out," said Jim Kehoe, former athletic director and consultant to the athletic department in 1978 and 1979. "It's all over but the shouting."

The basketball coach and his program have been criticized since the June 19 cocaine-induced death of basketball star Len Bias. Officials reportedly have been looking for a way to either buy out Driesell's contract or find another job for him in the school.

However, on Tuesday, university Chancellor John B. Slaughter dismissed speculation concerning Driesell's future.

"If you believe all the things you read, then you must also believe in the tooth fairy," Slaughter told reporters who questioned him about Driesell.

James J. Mingle, assistant attorney general for educational affairs, who has been involved in negotiations that would have Driesell leave his job for another assignment at the university, confirmed that discussions are continuing.

Mingle declined to discuss specifics of the talks, but added, "It's in the final stages. Both parties are hopeful it'll be concluded this week."

Driesell's contract calls for him to coach the Terrapin basketball program for four more years and then serve as an administrator for five years. His base salary is $85,000 a year, but he makes an estimated $300,000 from other sports-related jobs.

Kehoe said forces lining up against the coach are too strong for Driesell to fight. He said that if Driesell tried to remain as coach, university officials would find ways to encourage him to quit, such as making his players ineligible to compete.

MHS stomps Abilene

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

Coming off a disappointing loss to San Angelo on Saturday and with only two games remaining on the regular season schedule, Tuesday night seemed like a must-win situation for the Midland High Lady Bulldogs.

And against the Abilene Eagles, MHS came through with an easy 15-2, 15-7, win to keep the Lady 'Dogs one half game out of first in District 4-5A and a game and a half ahead of third place Midland Lee. The Rebs were idle Tuesday.

"We just overpowered them. We got rolling and everything seemed to work — it's too bad we didn't play this well against San Angelo on Saturday," Pittman said.

MHS, now 8-2, 16-11, had no mercy on the Eagles, stomping through the first game and most of the second before AHS could put two hits together. An intricate new offense helped Sonja Pittman's team confuse the Eagles and added confidence to the Lady Bulldogs' game.

"WE USED a new offensive strategy — a quick offense — that doesn't allow the other team to set up its blocks," Pittman said. "It incorporates a lot of things that aren't usually done on a high school level. It's something we've been practicing, but never had confidence to try in game.

"But it was very effective and I think it's something we can use now the rest of the season and into the playoffs — if we get there."

And with their eyes on a playoff berth, the Lady 'Dogs couldn't afford to stub their toes against the last-place Eagles, not with Lee, 6-3, breathing down their necks.

"We feel we lost control of our destiny when we lost to San Angelo. We still have a chance at a tie for first, but we're not expecting it. We feel that we have to win every game left to assure our berth in the playoffs."

In JV action, AHS nipped MHS in a marathon 8-15, 20-18, 15-13, game to fall to 5-5 in district.

Elsewhere in 4-5A volleyball, San Angelo, 8-1, maintained its slim lead over the Lady Bulldogs with a 15-7, 15-8 win over Odessa High, 2-8, in Odessa, and Abilene Cooper and Odessa Permian played.

On Saturday, MHS is idle while Lee returns to action with a game at Permian.

Oilers finally find point punch

Associated Press

The Edmonton Oilers have been searching for some offensive consistency for the first several games of the NHL season. They finally found some Tuesday night, with some help from the struggling Chicago Blackhawks.

Playing like the team that has rewritten most of the NHL's scoring records, the Oilers scored three goals in each period on the way to a 9-1 scalping of the Blackhawks.

Wayne Gretzky led the Edmonton attack, scoring twice and setting up three goals to jump ahead of Mario Lemieux of the Pittsburgh Penguins in the individual scoring race. Gretzky now has 21 points in seven games.

While the Oilers played their best game of the season, the Blackhawks are now winless in six games since an opening-night win over the Islanders.

Murray, Raiders' Mitchell honored

Associated Press

Texas A&M's Kevin Murray and Texas Tech's Roland Mitchell were named AP Southwest Conference Players of the week.

For Murray, it was a can't miss situation.

"He was like somebody throwing rocks through the board slats in a fence," said Baylor Coach Grant Teaff. Murray couldn't be sacked.

"He was like Houdini out there with his escapes," said Teaff.

Murray, playing his finest game since he was the Cotton Bowl MVP in January, threw three touchdown passes and ran for a fourth score. He hit 25 of 40 passes for 308 yards without an interception in the Aggies' 31-30 victory over Baylor.

The performance earned him Offensive Player of the Week award.

Tech defensive back Roland Mitchell, a 6-0, 180-pound senior from Bay City, made six tackles, returned a fumble off an intercepted pass 55 yards for a touchdown, and intercepted a pass in a 49-21 victory over Rice to earn the AP's Defensive Player of the Week award.

Murray, a redshirt junior from Dallas, brought A&M from a 17-0 deficit with his accurate passing and scrambling ability.

"On third down, Murray was just incredible," Teaff said.

Murray now has 40 career touchdown passes, tying him with Edd Hargett of A&M and Chuck Hixson of SMU for the SWC record. Murray needs 52 yards to tie Hargett's school record for career passing yardage at 5,379 yards.

Murray admitted, "It was one of my best games. But I hope my best game is still ahead of me."

It couldn't have been much better.

As A&M Coach Jackie Sherrill said, "Kevin played the best game I've seen a quarterback play and I've been around a lot of them. Every time we got down he brought us back."

Mitchell is a three-year starter in the Red Raider secondary which was ranked second in the nation last year.

Aggies' Kevin Murray ... big day against Baylor

With the score tied 14-14, the alert Mitchell made two game-breaking plays. Rover Leonard Jones intercepted a Rice pass at midfield and tried to lateral back to Mitchell as he was tackled. Mitchell scooped up a bouncing ball and raced 55 yards for the touchdown, the second longest return in the SWC this season.

With the score tied 21-all early in the fourth period, Mitchell intercepted a pass at the Red Raider 13 and Tech went on to score on its next four possessions.

"His two big plays were key factors in the game," said Tech Coach David McWilliams.

When Knight hit the grounder to Wade Boggs wide of third, Hernandez broke for the plate. When Boggs threw home, Hernandez stopped and broke back toward third. Carter, in the meantime, was approaching third. Rich Gedman, the catcher, threw the ball toward third to get Hernandez, but that's where the Red Sox made their first mistake.

Instead of the ball going to the base, where Spike Owen, the shortstop, was covering, Boggs grabbed it on the baseline and tried to tag Hernandez, who had already passed Boggs. Boggs quickly turned and flipped the ball to Owen, but Hernandez was back at the base.

Owen made the second mistake as he then chased after Carter, who had started retreating toward second. Had Owen thrown to Marty Barrett, the second baseman, the Red Sox could have had Carter, but Owen first turned and looked to see if Hernandez had started home again. When he did that, he gave Carter time to get back to second ahead of Owen's throw.

With the bases now loaded, Boyd faced Danny Heep, the first designated hitter the Mets have ever used in a game that counted. Under the new rules, the designated hitter, an American League device, is used only in games played in American League parks.

Heep, a left-handed hitter, was Johnson's choice for the role against Boyd, a right-handed pitcher, and he responded royally to his new assignment. He lined Boyd's second pitch to center field for a single that drove in Hernandez and Carter and doubled the Mets' lead to 4-0.

Boyd would settle down and strike out Mookie Wilson and induce Rafael Santana to ground into an inning-ending force play, but the Mets had shown the baseball world they were not the impostors who had batted .194 and scored a total of three runs in the first two games.

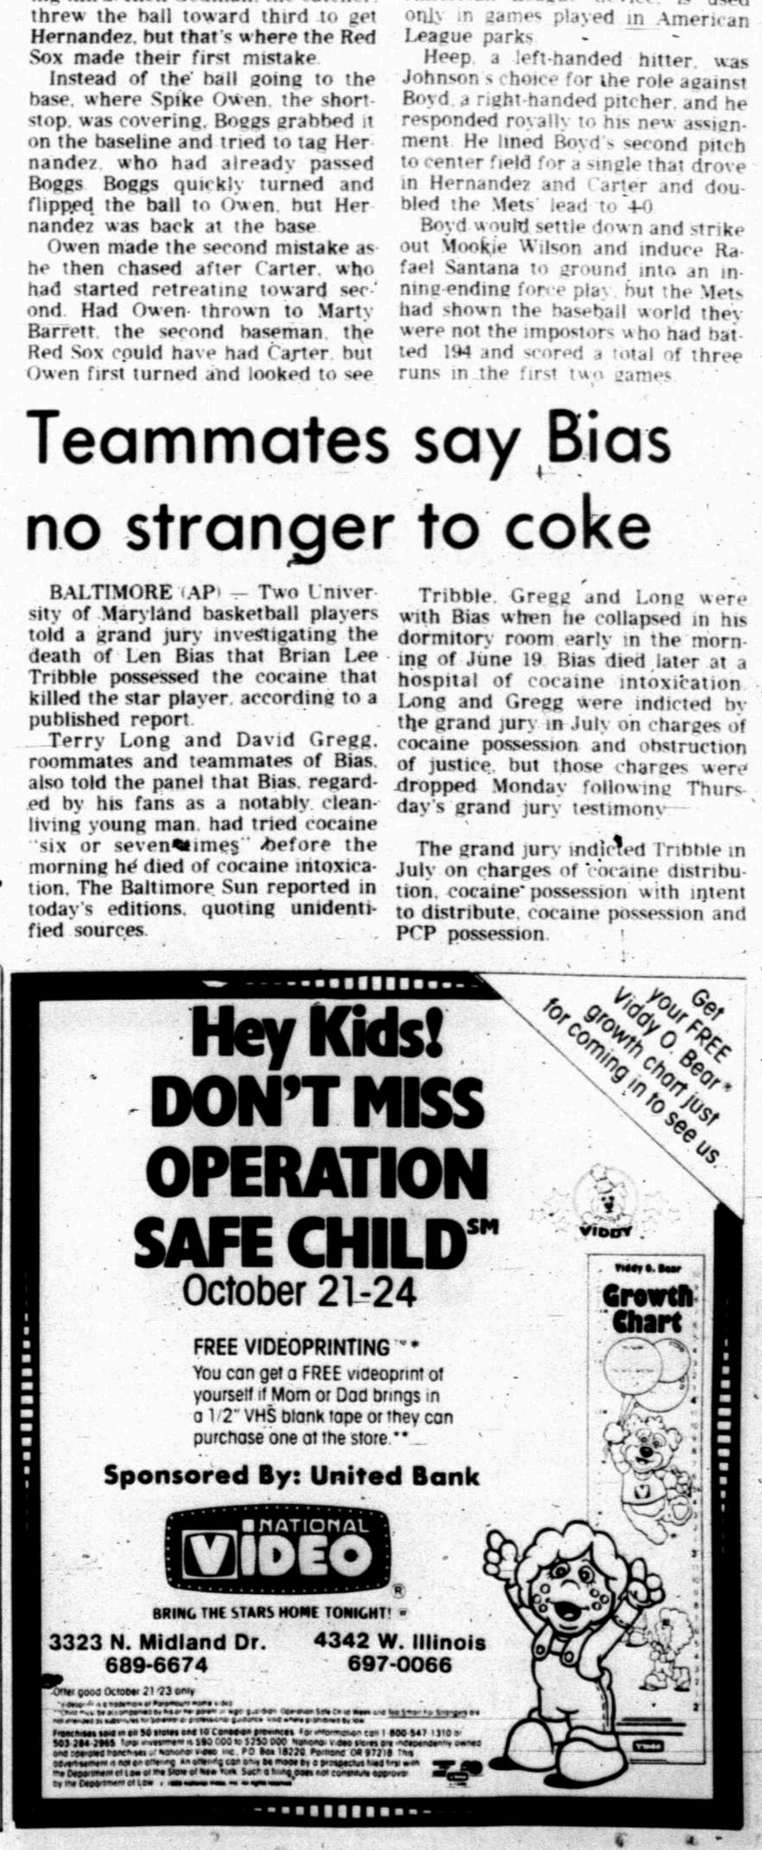

Teammates say Bias no stranger to coke

BALTIMORE (AP) — Two University of Maryland basketball players told a grand jury investigating the death of Len Bias that Brian Lee Tribble possessed the cocaine that killed the star player, according to a published report.

Terry Long and David Gregg, roommates and teammates of Bias, also told the panel that Bias, regarded by his fans as a notably clean-living young man, had tried cocaine "six or seven times" before the morning he died of cocaine intoxication, The Baltimore Sun reported in today's editions, quoting unidentified sources.

Tribble, Gregg and Long were with Bias when he collapsed in his dormitory room early in the morning of June 19. Bias died later at a hospital of cocaine intoxication. Long and Gregg were indicted by the grand jury in July on charges of cocaine possession and obstruction of justice, but those charges were dropped Monday following Thursday's grand jury testimony.

The grand jury indicted Tribble in July on charges of cocaine distribution, cocaine possession with intent to distribute, cocaine possession and PCP possession.

"Ladies and gentlemen of the Jury:

"You have been called here today to settle a libel suit. My client, Mr. South, claims he was grossly and unfairly insulted by his partner, Mr. North, for his play of this hand.

"Dummy's queen of spades won the first trick and the jack of clubs was led. When that held, declarer switched his attack to diamonds. In with the king, East found the best defense—a shift to the queen of hearts. Declarer won in dummy and forced out the ace of diamonds, but West simply continued with a heart. Declarer had eight tricks he could take, but he had no way to get a ninth before the defenders took the ace of clubs and two more heart tricks—down one.

"We claim that it would not have helped my client to overtake the jack of clubs at trick two and cash one high spade, for now the defenders could defeat the contract by forcing out his remaining spade stopper. Under the circumstances, we feel my client's reputation was irreparably hurt when he was called a silly oaf in front of his many friends at the club and we ask for suitable damages."

"Ladies and gentlemen, plaintiff's attorney has been most persuasive; unfortunately, his analysis is no better than his client's. Mr. South simply attacked the minor suits in the wrong order.

"Suppose that, at trick two, he had led the queen of diamonds from the table. East wins and returns a heart, taken in dummy. Now declarer leads the jack of clubs and wins in hand.

"The defenders cannot afford to win this trick, for then declarer has nine tricks—three spades, four clubs and two hearts. So declarer simply cashes one high spade and then continues with diamonds to force out the ace. Now that he has scored a second spade trick, he has nine tricks no matter what the defenders do."

For Eva Marton, show must go on

Marton

NEW YORK (AP) — Soprano Eva Marton acted in the best show-must-go-on tradition by singing the title role in "Tosca" to the final curtain after dislocating her jaw in a staged struggle at the Metropolitan Opera.

"Now I know how a boxer feels when he is knocked out," she said Tuesday.

The internationally famous singer was injured Monday night during Act 2 of the first "Tosca" of the Met season and her first performance of the Puccini opera there.

The script calls for Tosca to struggle with Scarpia, the chief of police trying to coerce her into being his mistress. The 6-foot-5 Juan Pons, who was playing Scarpia, threw the 5-foot-8 Miss Marton to the floor twice. She was hurt the second time.

"When I was hit, I knew something happened — I heard a crack," Miss Marton said. "Oh my goodness, I said to myself. I can't even open or close my mouth. I had no pain at the moment. But my lips and mouth did not respond."

Her big aria, "Vissi d'arte," was next, and she sang it according to tradition — prone. "I shaped the vowels with my tongue," she recalled. "I suddenly had to invent a new way of singing."

She sang so well the audience did not know she had been hurt.

During intermission, her surgeon husband examined her, and advised not to continue her performance. She decided to keep singing despite knowing her voice could suffer irreparable damage.

She pushed her dislocated jaw back into place and finished her performance, according to her publicist, Edgar Vincent.

After the performance, Pons, who was upset by the incident, expressed sorrow to Miss Marton, said the conductor, Garcia Navarro.

Miss Marton is to sing "Tosca" Saturday. She said she would not make a decision on whether she would perform until Friday.

Grey

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Joel Grey is going back to the cabaret.

Grey, who won a Tony award on Broadway and then an Oscar for his film portrayal of the master of ceremonies in the musical "Cabaret," plans to recreate the role next year in a new stage production of the musical, show spokesman Bert Fink said Tuesday.

The revival of the '60s musical will begin a seven-month national tour in March in Cleveland, and is scheduled to arrive on Broadway in October 1987.

The revival will be directed by Harold Prince and choreographed by Ron Field, who were associated with the original show, said Fink.

The role of Sally Bowles, played on Broadway by Jill Haworth and in the movie version by Liza Minnelli, has not yet been cast, Fink said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rhythm-and-blues star Ike Turner says he'll enter a drug-abuse treatment program to kick a cocaine habit he's had since the early '70s.

"When I faced the mirror, I knew I had to go back to reality," Turner, 53, told a news conference Tuesday at the Los Angeles Press Club. "If I can go two weeks, three weeks without it, I can stay clean."

Turner, rock star Tina Turner's ex-husband, refused to say which program he would enter, but he did say it would cost $4,000.

He said he plans to form a new band and start performing after his release next month. Turner said he still had "a lot of music to give" and that recently "like drugs, I kept it to myself."

Turner was arrested in June 1985 after police discovered a substance that appeared to be cocaine at his Los Angeles apartment. He faces a preliminary hearing Oct. 31 on whether he should be tried on drug trafficking charges.

Chase

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Comedian Chevy Chase left the Betty Ford Center looking "tan and fit" following 2½ weeks of treatment for addiction to prescription painkillers, his publicist says.

"The prescription drugs are out of his system, and he is going to continue therapy in Los Angeles," Pat Kingsley said of Chase, who checked out of the clinic over the weekend.

Chase entered the clinic earlier this month. He had become dependent on the painkillers, which he took for back pain caused by his stun falls on NBC-TV's "Saturday Night Live" show. He left the show in 1977.

Chase plans to make his first post-treatment appearance as guest host on the "Tonight Show," said Kingsley.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Pop singer El DeBarge was sentenced to perform 200 hours of community service and pay a $200 fine in an incident involving a college student who claimed he beat her.

District Judge Carol S. Irons sentenced DeBarge, 25, on Tuesday after he pleaded no contest to misdemeanor charges involving a disturbance. Under a plea bargain, a stiffer charge of assault and battery was dropped.

DeBarge, a Grand Rapids native who leads the group DeBarge, refused to comment on the sentence.

The woman, a Calvin College student, said DeBarge pulled her hair, dragged her to the floor and hit her when she refused his sexual advances at a hotel on Dec. 2, according to court records.

Stanwyck

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Barbara Stanwyck, whose career in movies and television spans six decades, has been named a recipient of the American Film Institute's Lifetime Achievement Award.

Miss Stanwyck will receive the award at a dinner on April 9, the third woman to receive it in the award's 14-year history. Bette Davis earned it in 1977 and Lillian Gish in 1984.

The institute's trustees award the honor to an individual "whose talent has in a fundamental way advanced the film-making art." The award was announced Friday.

Stanwyck, 79, has starred in such movie classics as "Stella Dallas" and "Double Indemnity." On television, she starred as the matriarch in "The Big Valley" from 1965 to 1968, "The Colbys" last year, and "The Thorn Birds" miniseries in 1983.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A comedian's references to drugs were not negative enough to meet network standards, so his routine was censored during the delayed West Coast broadcast of "Saturday Night Live," said the producer.

The routine by comedian Sam Kinison went out unedited in other markets, said SNL producer Lorne Michaels.

Michaels, who in the past has threatened to quit over battles with network censors, said he disagreed with the edits but understood the action.

Fenway aging gracefully

By FOX BUTTERFIELD
N.Y. Times News Service

BOSTON — It is a ball park, not a stadium.

In the age of the Astrodome in Houston, Three Rivers Stadium in Pittsburgh, even Shea Stadium in New York, Fenway Park is a monument to an era when baseball was king and ball fields were designed for it, not football.

It is also an intimate antique, an irregular edifice whose dimensions were determined by the exegencies of the inner city, not planned by computer. Proximity to the old Boston and Albany railroad yards behind Fenway Park forced its builders to shorten left field, throwing up the Green Monster, a 37-foot-high wall that is only 315 feet down the foul line and 379 feet in left center.

"EVERYTHING built today looks the same, they were all built for football and you can't tell whether you are in Atlanta, St. Louis or Cincinnati," said Joe Mooney, the head groundskeeper and building superintendent at Fenway Park.

"Here you are in the game, not eight miles away," added Mooney, a ruddy-faced Irishman with a square jaw and a shock of white hair. "Everybody sits so close, the fans are participants in the game, not just spectators."

Mooney, who began working as a groundskeeper in the Red Sox organization more than 25 years ago at what was then their Scranton affiliate in the Class A Eastern League, was carefully hosing down the infield today.

"THE FIELD is in the best condition it's been in all year," he said proudly, surveying the even green grass.

"The only damage was caused by all the media during the playoffs with the Angels," he said, more than a hint of scorn in his gravely voice.

For the people of Boston do not take lightly anyone who would tamper with this landmark, this citadel of cherished dreams and dashed hopes. In a town that has more than its share of architectural memories, Paul Revere's house, the Old North Church, Charles Bullfinch's gold-domed State House atop Beacon Hill, Fenway Park has become its own legend, a tradition passed on during summer afternoons from fathers to sons.

Fenway Park was built in 1912 soon after the team's name had been changed from the Boston Pilgrims to the Red Sox by its new owner, John L. Taylor, whose family also owned The Boston Globe. Taylor oversaw construction of the field, which was situated in a corner of what was then known as the Fens, a string of parks designed by Frederick Law Olmstead to run through Boston.

Asked what he would call the new ball field, Taylor responded with characteristic Yankee directness. "It's in the Fenway section, isn't it? Then name it Fenway Park."

IN THE first game at Fenway, the Red Sox defeated Harvard, 2-0, in an exhibition. It was a good omen, as the Red Sox went on to win the World Series in 1912, 1915, 1916 and 1918.

But then the team changed hands again, and the new owner, Harry Frazee, sold the Red Sox's star pitcher, Babe Ruth, to the Yankees in 1919. Frazee needed money to finance a new musical, "No, No, Nanette." But the Red Sox never recovered and haven't won a World Series since.

Today, even the oldest of the groundskeepers at Fenway, Freddie Leathers, hadn't been born at that last World Series triumph. Leathers, a stocky man of 65, has worked at Fenway since 1940. In all that time, the only two big changes he has noticed are that most of the old wood-en oak seats have been replaced with plastic, to stop them from weathering, and the addition of foam padding to the bottom of the left-field wall.

But the strange dimensions and singular cozy quality of Fenway have been left untouched. It is still only 315 feet down the line in left and 379 to left center, with the wall inviting hitters to swing.

The right-field line is only 302 feet, even shorter than the left-field line, with only a 3-foot-high fence, leading to an occasional cheap home run hooked around the foul pole. But right field then juts out quickly, opening to 380 feet in straightaway right field in front of the two bullpens.

PARADOXICALLY, though the Red Sox have often seemed to build their lineup around right-handed hitters to take advantage of The Wall, with players like Jackie Jensen, Tony Conigliaro, Carlton Fisk, Dwight Evans, Jim Rice and Don Baylor, all but one of the 17 American League batting crowns won by Red Sox hitters since 1941 have been won by left-handed hitters. Ted Williams won six, Carl Yastrzemski three, Wade Boggs three, Pete Runnels two, and Billy Goodman and Fred Lynn one each. Carney Lansford, since traded to the Oakland A's, is the lone righthanded champion.

Mattingly, Schmidt TSN's Most Valuable Players

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Yankees' Don Mattingly was selected as the Sporting News American League player of the year for the second straight season and Mike Schmidt of the Philadelphia Phils was named National Lea ue player of the year.

Mattingly hit .352 with 31 home runs and 113 RBI. He set all-time Yankee records for hits (238) and doubles (52). Schmidt, who also won player of the year in 1980, led the NL in home runs with 37 and RBI with 119.

Selected to the AL All-Star team were Mattingly at first, Tony Bernazard of Cleveland second, Wade Boggs, Boston, third and Tony Fernandez, Toronto, shortstop. Jim Rice, Boston, George Bell, Toronto and Kirby Puckett, Minnesota were the outfielders, with Rich Gedman, Boston, catcher and Don Baylor, Boston, DH.ter. Clemens was the right-handed pitcher and Milwaukee's Teddy Higuera the left-hander.

On the NL All-Star squad were the Mets Keith Hernandez first, LA's Steve Sax at second, Schmidt at third and Ozzie Smith, St. Louis, short. Tim Raines, Montreal, Tony Gwynn, San Diego, and Dave Parker, Cincinnati, in the outfield, with the Mets' Gary Carter catcher. Scott was the right-hander and LA's Fernando Valenzuela the left-hander.

Dollar slips in Europe

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar gained against the Japanese yen for the third straight day today but was slightly down against most other major hard currencies in quiet trading on foreign exchange markets. Gold was up.

Dealers said markets were awaiting an announcement of the preliminary estimate of third-quarter U.S. Gross National Product. The GNP estimate, which markets take as an indicator of U.S. economic performance, is expected to show a rise of 2 to 2.5 percent.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar closed 0.57 yen higher, at 155.28. Later, in London, it was quoted at 155.15 yen.

The dollar has gained 1.13 yen this week, and today topped 155 yen for the first time in five weeks.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Tuesday:

—1.9835 West German marks, down from 1.9905

—1.6270 Swiss francs, down from 1.6310

—6.4970 French francs, down from 6.5200

—2.2450 Dutch guilders, down from 2.2500

—1,375.00 Italian lire, down from 1,376.75

—1.39095 Canadian dollars, down from 1.39125

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.4350, unchanged from Tuesday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $426.00 a troy ounce, compared with late Tuesday's $424.60. At mid-morning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $426.60.

In Zurich, the bid price was $426.60, up from $424.70 late Tuesday.

The Hong Kong gold market was closed for a holiday.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $5.75 a troy ounce, down from Tuesday's $5.77.

U.S. economy expands at modest 2.4 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. economy expanded at a modest annual rate of 2.4 percent during the summer, up substantially from the spring but still well below the rate expected by the Reagan administration, the government said today.

The Commerce Department said the gross national product, the broadest measure of economic health, grew from July through September at four times the pace set in the previous quarter.

From April through June, the GNP grew at an annual rate of 0.6 percent, the poorest showing since the end of the recession in 1982.

While the 2.4 percent performance was a substantial improvement over that figure, the Reagan administration had been forecasting the economy would grow at better than a 4 percent annual rate in the last half of the year.

An inflation index tied to the GNP rose at an annual rate of 2.5 percent in the July-September quarter, up substantially from a 1.7 percent advance in the second quarter.

Virtually all of this increase in the fixed-weight index was tied to gains in food costs.

The rise in inflation was even more pronounced in the GNP deflator, an inflation index that measures a changing market basket of goods. It was rising at an annual rate of 3.6 percent in the third quarter, compared to 1.8 percent in the April-June quarter. The bigger jump in inflation was caused by sharply higher purchases of petroleum in the third quarter, government analysts said.

The improvement in GNP growth during the summer was led by a big jump in consumer spending, which was climbing at an annual rate of 7.2 percent in the July-September quarter.

This rapid pace reflected strong sales of new autos as consumers responded to cut-rate financing incentives.

But the economy continued to be held back by a deteriorating trade performance.

Exports did rise at an annual rate of 15.4 percent in the third quarter, a big turnaround from the spring quarter, when they had declined at an annual rate of 9.8 percent rate.

But imports grew at an even faster rate of 20 percent, topping a 15.8 percent rate of increase from April through June.

The various changes in trade subtracted $10.7 billion from GNP growth.

Another negative factor during the summer was a substantial drop in business inventories, which were falling at an annual rate of $19.6 billion, reflecting the successful efforts by auto makers to whittle down huge inventories through their sales incentives.

Analysts expect this situation to reverse itself in the current October-December quarter as the boom in car sales tapers off with the removal of the financing incentives. However, this will be offset by a climb in inventories of new cars as automakers step up production of the 1987 models.

Still, analysts are worried that even the rather lackluster growth rate of 2.4 percent will not be maintained in coming months because of a fear that consumer spending, which has been the main force keeping the economy out of a recession, is bound to taper off.

Local firm to hire over 20

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

An anticipated contract will allow Texas Plastic Industries to hire 20 to 30 new employees within the next 90 days, according to Jack Poeschl, general manager.

Poeschl said the contract would be to provide plastic automobile parts for a joint venture between Ford Motor Co. and Mazda in Hermosillo, Mexico. The Midland firm will provide interior panels, door trim and rear window trim for the vehicles. The parts will be shipped to the border and transferred to Mexican carriers for shipment to the interior of Mexico.

Said Poeschl: "All of the new jobs at our factory will be for factory labor. We do not anticipate the hiring of any professionals, but we will be looking for good conscientious people. Quality control will be very important in this contract."

The contract will provide a major boost for the plastics company which is primarily engaged in the manufacture of oilfield related products such as thread end protectors for pipe, according to Poeschl.

Texas Plastic Industries is owned by Automotive Industries Inc. of Strasberg, Virginia.

Trade show scheduled

By DEANNA J. NEAL
Business/Oil Writer

TradeShow Midland, sponsored by the Midland Chamber of Commerce, will give local businesses an opportunity to make their pitch to local consumers.

The Small Business Council of the chamber is putting on the show in conjunction with its 'Business After Hours' Mixer on Oct. 30 at Midland Center.

Steve Hardin, director of economic development at the chamber, says, "The tradeshow is an effort to familiarize chamber members and the general public with the products and services local businesses have to offer."

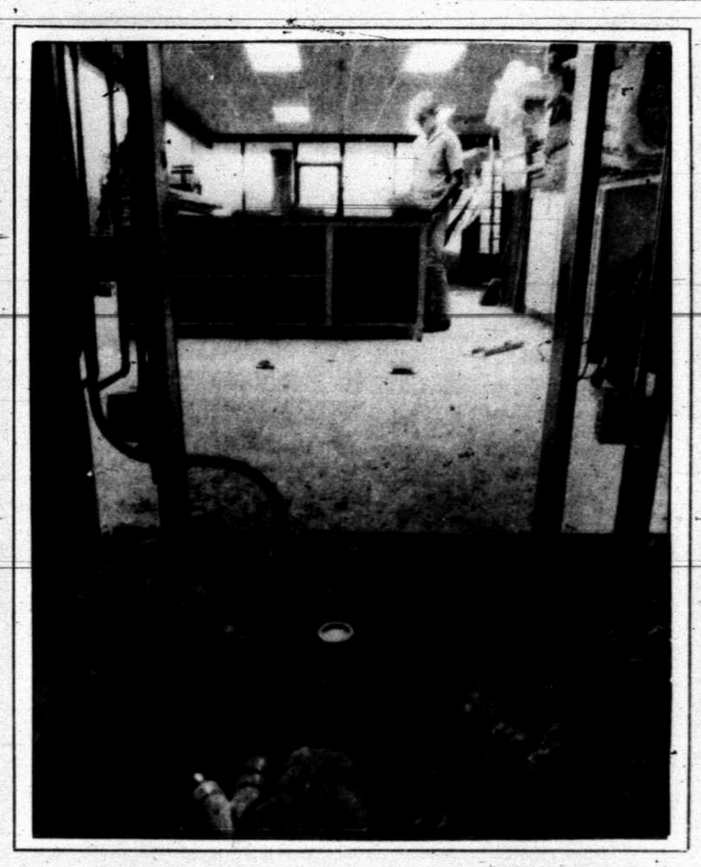

Hardin notes that approximately 50 Midland businesses will man display booths at the show, which will run from 5:00 to 8:00 p.m.

"In the past, the chamber has sponsored one large show that ran for several days. In a cost-cutting effort, we have this year decided to have several smaller shows," explains Hardin.

"This will allow us to reduce the cost of renting a booth and enable more participation from businesses," he adds.

Many participating businesses will be giving away products and services in a drawing.

Charge for the show is $5.00 for non-chamber members, and includes hors d'oeuvres and drinks.

Ron Fesler, an owner of Allen's Pharmacy, examins plans for the new full-service photo center.

Shopping center will soon be fully occupied

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

When the dust settles, Midland will be home to a 100 percent occupied shopping center.

"It seems like kind of a miracle in today's economy," states Alise Evans, leasing agent for Cliff Rowe & Associates, owners of the Midland Manor shopping center at 2101 Midland Drive.

Tenants Allen's Pharmacy and Remax of Midland expect to complete expansion projects by Nov. 1 and a new ice cream store should be open around that time as well.

Allen's Pharmacy is adding 1,000 square ft. to put in a full service photo center, according to Allen Farnel, who owns the pharmacy with Scott Bowden and Ron Fesler. "We will be able to do color processing and printing, color enlargements, slides, prints from slides, slides from slides, enlargements from slides, black and white processing and enlargments, all on the premises," Farnel says.

"We're anticipating quite an increase in our photo business," he adds. He said that since moving to the shopping center a year ago, "We've had tremendous growth, even in this slowdown."

Remax of Midland is adding 1,500 square feet, according to Realtor Carolyn Nickell. "We thought it was a good time to expand because we were getting cramped," she says. "Even though the real estate market is down, we're doing a high volume of business."

The expansion will add a conference room and five additional offices with a secretary per office. The expansion will also create space for six additional salespeople, Nickell notes.

Evans notes that the center was slow taking off, "but once people came here, they found it was a good deal. We have good quality control and the traffic flow on this corner is pretty good." She says the owners have had a full-time marketing representative working solely on the center for the past two years.

She adds that the owner would like to have an automated teller machine on the property, "but the banks will have to pick up along with the economy before that happens." Other than that, there are no plans for expanding the center. "We have some projects in Odessa we'd like to concentrate on," Evans says.

The Midland Manor shopping center began in July, 1983, and was designed by Cliff Rowe and Steve McGuire. It has about 21,000 square feet, of which 3,800 is owned by tenants. The rest is rented from the owners. There are 12 tenants, including the ice cream store, and two own their spaces, according to Evans.

Banks quarterly earnings reflect continued recession

The Associated Press

Two of the states leading bank holding companies reported disappointing third quarters as compared to 1985, and a third reported a quarterly loss, adding to the list of banking setbacks during the state's oil recession.

Texas Commerce Bancshares Inc., the fourth largest bank holding company in Texas, with 70 banks, reported on Tuesday its third quarter income fell from $21.4 million a year ago to $10.1 million, translating to earnings per share of 31 cents, down from 65 cents last year.

Cullen-Frost Bankers Inc. of San Antonio, announced a net loss of $8.5 million for the third quarter, compared with earnings of $3.5 million dollars for the same period one year ago. Earnings per share fell from 45 cents last year to a loss of $1.18.

First City Bancorporation of Texas reported a $47.9 million third-quarter loss and said officials would recommend dropping the 2½-cent quarterly dividend. The results amounted to a loss of $1.56 per share, compared with earnings of $10.8 million, or 20 cents per share.

First City, which operates 63 banks, had not anticipated the large jump of problem loans from the second to third quarter, company spokesman James E. Day said.

First City's non-performing assets at Sept. 30 stood at $857.4 million, or 8.2 percent of total loans and other real estate and collateral acquired. That was up $185.5 million from the second quarter's non-performing assets, which amounted to 6.3 percent of total loans, according to a company statement.

"We are dealing with an economic decline that has grown even more pervasive and more protracted," said First City's J.A. Elkins Jr., senior chairman of the board.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Tesoro Petroleum slashes 79 from payrolls

SAN ANTONIO (UPI) — Tesoro Petroleum Corp., trying to stay afloat in a struggling oil industry, has laid off 68 employees at its San Antonio headquarters and another 11 workers in its Alaska office.

"Conditions in the petroleum industry have continued to deteriorate. What we had to do is look at the cost side, and we did," Jim Hyslop, vice president and treasurer of Tesoro, said Tuesday.

Some qualified employees accepted early retirement, he said.

The company expects an annual savings of $4 million because of the staff reductions.

Valero losses may force sale of gas business

SAN ANTONIO (UPI) — Valero Energy Corp. lost $42.6 million in the third quarter, and the company said it would phase out and seek a buyer for its gas exploration business.

A $30.8 million non-cash after-tax writedown in the carrying value of its exploration and production properties largely contributed to the loss, the San Antonio-based company said Tuesday.

The loss compared with earnings of $5.6 million a year ago, and earnings of $11.8 million in the second quarter. Most of the second-quarter earnings were a result of an $11.6 million gain from settlement of its lawsuit against InterNorth Inc. over that company's merger with Houston Natural Gas Co.

Although the company eventually would like to sell its oil and gas exploration ventures, Valero spokesman Bill Cleary said the proposed change was "in the early stages of identifying options." The division, which employs between 80 and 90 workers, has a value of about $90 million.

Midland not in Continental's expansion plan

DENVER (UPI) — Continental Airlines announced it will begin non-stop service in the next two weeks from Denver to 12 cities formerly served by Frontier Airlines.

Introductory pre-service fares of $49 or less each way are available to all 12 new Continental destinations, the airline said.

Continental will begin flights Nov. 1 to Tulsa, St. Louis, Des Moines and Boise. On Nov. 8, flights will begin to Bismarck and Fargo, N.D.; Cedar Rapids, Iowa; Casper, Wyo.; Lincoln, Neb.; Rapid City and Sioux Falls, S.D.; and Spokane, Wash.

Continental said it plans to add 10 more former Frontier destinations by the end of the year.

Continental will be flying aircraft formerly owned by Frontier and serving routes flown by Frontier before it halted operations and filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy in August.

The bankruptcy court in Denver last week approved Continental's purchase of Frontier assets. The U.S. Department of Transportation gave tentative approval last week and final approval is required for Continental to begin the new service.

Pressure gets USX back to bargaining table

PITTSBURGH (AP) — USX Corp., under pressure from New York investor Carl Icahn to restructure its oil and steel businesses, has held the first contract bargaining with the United Steelworkers since 22,000 union members stopped work Aug. 1.

When the old contract expired July 31, the two sides deadlocked over the wage, benefit and work rule concessions sought by the nation's largest steelmaker to help it keep pace with competitors, who also sought lower labor costs.

A new seafood restaurant will be opening next week in Plaza Shopping Center.

Located at No. 10 Plaza Center, SHRIMP ETC. will be located where Cody Cattle Company once was. Owner Arthur Nicholson will be bringing fresh seafood from the Gulf Coast. "There will be one steak and one chicken dish on the menu, and the rest will be seafood," he says, noting there will be a couple of Cajun dishes offered also. The specialty of the house, though, will be boiled shrimp, he says.

The native Texan, who learned the business by working in Manhattan restaurants owned by his sister and brother-in-law for seven to eight years, will be head chef, but will be hiring another chef for the restaurant.

"I love the coast and fresh seafood. There wasn't any fresh seafood available here, so I thought I'd go get my own and bring here," he explains. He also intends to feature Texas seafood and Texas wines, he says.

The restaurant will have a beer and wine license and will be open for lunch and dinner from 11 a.m. to either 11 or 12 p.m.

For students of all ages, ACADEMIC COUNSELING AND ENRICHMENT CENTER offers tutoring, enrichment classes and SAT/ACT preparation for high school juniors and seniors.

The center, owned by B.K. Dean, is located at 206 Oakridge Square, above Pat Walker's. Also available will be individual and group counseling and personal growth workshops, career guidance for seventh grade through adults, and a study skills program. Dean points out that all the tutors are certified teachers. Dean adds that the center hopes to offer PSAT preparation for high school sophomores as well.

JERRY'S PERFECT PETS, located in Midland Park Mall, is in an expansion mode.

According to Gabby Hyatt, the store is expanding and remodeling. "We're going to have stackable cages for the hamsters, gerbils, rats and mice, so people can touch them and see what they're like." The store is also enlarging its aquarium area.

Hyatt notes that the store won't add much inventory — just getting some extra space. The remodeling should be completed in two to three weeks.

ENRON CORP., which has a Midland office in the Empire Plaza building, announced a new employee stock ownership plan that will allow employees to buy about 16.4 percent of issued and outstanding common stock.

Houston-based Enron will fund the stock plan by putting into effect a tax-free rollover of its $230 million retirement plan overfunding. The plan also will be supplemented with a tax-advantaged bank loan of about $105 million, the company said.

Cmpany officials said the stock buy-back plan will have a positive impact on Enron's future earnings and cash flow. The tax-free rollover of the retirement plan overfunding, the reduction in future contributions to existing employee benefit plans and the deductibility of dividends paid on common shares owned by the new plan will enhance future earnings and cash flow, officials said.

The present value of the savings for Enron is about $45 million, officials said in a written statement.

Omaha-based InterNorth Inc. and Houston Natural Gas Corp. merged in July 1985 to form Enron.

Irving-based NETWORK SECURITY CORP., which has an office at Midland Air Terminal, has applied to have its common stock listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

The company's shares are currently traded over the counter.

NEW IDEAS FOR AUTUMN'S COLORFUL PRODUCE

A trio of delicious dishes made from fall's bounty, with the added benefits of ready-to-eat cereals. From top: Stuffed Squash Rings, Apple-Ginger Scones and Cereal-Stuffed Pears.

It's not just the leaves that are changing color this season. Take a look at your supermarket produce section and see how the colors there are changing, too. Suddenly the bright and clear shades of summer's produce — the melons, peaches, berries, the summer squash — are being replaced by a different palette of colors — the rich, burnished hues of autumn's fruits and vegetables. You'll find the deep reds and brilliant golds and greens of the new crop of apples, the russet and yellow tones of the pears, shining scarlet cranberries, the burnt orange pumpkins, and the showy shades of the season's many squashes. Inspiration, certainly, for any artist, as well as for today's creative cooks.

Here we've taken these flavorful and nutritious fruits and vegetables and added even more flavor and wholesale goodness by preparing them with Post cereals. The results are a dazzling repertoire of recipes that will see you happily through the season, with flavorful fare for family and company.

There are Stuffed Squash Rings, an appetizing and attractive side dish that will accompany fall or winter roasts deliciously, or turn simple chops or hamburger patties into glamorous entrees. Acorn squash rings are used here, but the same crunchy apple-and-cereal filling could be used just as well with other baked squash — Hubbard or butternut, for example.

The fruited cereal scones, made in a circle of wedges, are a welcome addition to the weekend breakfast or brunch table, or a perfect mid-afternoon snack with spiced cider or tea. The ones photographed are made with apples and spices, plus cereal flakes. There's a cranberry version, too, with fresh cranberries (or your frozen ones) and zesty orange rind, for a change of pace.

The Cereal-Stuffed Pears is an easy but delicious dessert. The pears are filled with a cereal-and-spice mixture, gently poached, then served with the syrup from the pan or, if you wish, a simple fruit sauce made from pureed frozen raspberries or strawberries. Some may even want to try chocolate sauce.

If you're yearning for a bit of nostalgia, try the other two suggestions. The Apple Brown Betty is reminiscent of Mom's or Grandma's, but even better, with crunchy cereal added to it. Better for you, too. And this season's version of old-fashioned gingerbread is made with pumpkin and natural bran flakes. It's rich, moist, spicy...a real down-home treat!

CEREAL-STUFFED PEARS

Turn autumn pears into a scrumptious family dessert, this way.

4 to 6 large ripe pears
1 cup whole wheat and bran cereal, any variety
1/4 cup firmly packed brown sugar
1/4 cup butter or margarine
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
1/8 teaspoon nutmeg

- Wash and core pears; cut in half, if desired.
- Combine cereal, sugar, butter, cinnamon and nutmeg. Spoon into pear centers and place pears in shallow baking pan; add water to just cover bottom of pan. Bake uncovered at 400° for 20 minutes for halves or 30 minutes for whole pears, or until tender.
- Place in serving dish. Cool and serve with syrup from pan or with fruit sauce, if desired.
- Makes 4 to 6 servings.

PUMPKIN GINGERBREAD

(not shown)

Pumpkin and cereal add a flavorful plus to gingerbread.

1-3/4 cups all-purpose flour
1/4 cup sugar
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon double-acting baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon ginger
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1/4 teaspoon cloves
1/2 cup butter or margarine
1 egg
1 cup mashed cooked pumpkin*
1/2 cup molasses
1/3 cup hot water
2 cups natural bran flakes or natural raisin bran 1 bran
Confectioners sugar

Or use canned pumpkin.

- Mix flour, sugar, soda, baking powder, salt and spices.
- Cream butter; beat in egg. Add pumpkin, molasses and hot water; blend until smooth. Add flour mixture; beat until smooth. Stir in cereal. Pour into greased 9-inch square pan.
- Bake at 325° for 45 minutes or until cake tester inserted into center comes out clean. Cool in pan 5 minutes. Sprinkle with confectioners sugar. Cut into squares.
- Makes 16 squares.

APPLE-GINGER SCONES

Add cereal and apples (or cranberries) for scones-in-a-circle.

1-3/4 cups all-purpose flour
1/4 cup sugar
1 tablespoon double-acting baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon ginger
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
6 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 egg
1/3 cup milk
1 apple, peeled and coarsely grated (about 1 cup)
1-1/2 cups Grape-Nuts flakes*
Melted butter or margarine
2 teaspoons sugar (optional)

Or use whole wheat and bran cereal with dates, raisins and walnuts.

- Mix flour, sugar, baking powder, salt and spices in bowl. Using pastry blender or 2 knives, cut in 6 tablespoons butter until mixture resembles coarse crumbs.
- Beat egg and milk together; add apple and then stir into flour mixture, blending well. Add cereal.
- Turn dough out onto floured board and knead gently 15 times. Divide dough in half.
- On a large ungreased baking sheet, pat each half of the dough into a 6-1/2-inch circle. Brush tops with melted butter; sprinkle with sugar. Cut each circle into 8 wedges. Bake at 425° for 14 minutes or until scones are golden brown.
- Makes 16 scones.

Cranberry-Orange Scones:
Prepare scones as directed, substituting 1 teaspoon grated orange rind for the spices and 3/4 cup cranberries, coarsely chopped, for the apple.

STUFFED SQUASH RINGS

This spiced cereal-and-apple stuffing enhances any fall squash.

2 medium acorn squash
3 tablespoons butter or margarine, melted
1-1/2 cups natural raisin bran, lightly crushed
1 green apple, peeled, cored and diced (about 1 cup)
1 tablespoon brown sugar
1/2 teaspoon grated orange rind
1/4 teaspoon cinnamon

- Cut ends off squash and cut each squash into 2 rings; remove seeds and fiber. Pour water into shallow baking pan to just cover bottom. Place squash rings in pan and cover with foil. Bake at 400° for 30 minutes.
- Remove foil; drain water. Brush squash rings with 1 tablespoon of the melted butter.
- Combine remaining butter with cereal, apple, sugar, orange rind and cinnamon and fill squash centers. Bake 20 minutes longer.
- Makes 4 servings.

APPLE BROWN BETTY

(not shown)

An old-fashioned favorite now tastes better than ever with crunchy cereal nuggets added.

4 apples, peeled and cored
1/2 cup all-purpose flour
1/4 cup firmly packed brown sugar
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
1/8 teaspoon nutmeg
1/4 cup butter or margarine
3/4 cup raisin Grape-Nuts brand natural wheat and barley cereal

- Cut apples in wedges and place in a shallow 1-1/2-quart casserole.
- Mix flour, sugar and spices in a bowl. Cut in butter; stir in cereal. Sprinkle cereal mixture over apples.
- Bake at 375° for 35 to 40 minutes, or until apples are tender.
- Makes 8 to 10 servings.

Popovers require no leavening

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

Like hot air balloons, popovers rise high from the puff of steam that forms in the batter as they bake. They need no baking powder or other leavening to get them off the ground.

Popovers are a breeze to make. Beat the thin batter with a rotary beater or electric mixer or use a blender. But don't give in to the temptation to peek at them as they bake; a blast of cool air through the open oven door may cause them to collapse.

Serve popovers as a bread with butter and jam, or cut open the tops and fill them with creamy scrambled eggs, chicken a la king or seafood salad.

HIGH-RISING POPOVERS

2 beaten eggs
1 cup milk
1 tablespoon cooking oil
1 cup all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon salt

Grease bottom and sides of each cup of a 6-unit popover pan thoroughly with shortening. (Or use six 6-ounce custard cups. Place cups in a shallow baking pan.) Place pan in oven; preheat oven to 450 degrees.

Hand method: In a mixing bowl combine eggs, milk and oil. Add flour and salt. Beat with rotary beater or electric mixer until smooth.

Blender method: Place milk, eggs, oil and salt in blender container. Blend at high speed until well mixed. Add flour; blend just until batter is smooth.

Remove pan from oven. Fill hot cups half full. Return to oven. Bake in 450 degree oven 20 minutes. Reduce heat to 350 degrees; bake 15 to 20 minutes more or until very firm. Serve hot. Makes 6.

Pumpernickel Popovers: Prepare and bake popovers as directed above except use only ⅔-cup all-purpose flour and stir ⅓-cup rye flour and 1 teaspoon caraway seed into dry ingredients.

Spicy Pecan Popovers: Prepare and bake popovers as directed except stir ¼-cup chopped pecans into the batter. Combine 1 tablespoon sugar and 1 teaspoon ground cinnamon; sprinkle over batter in cups.

APPLESAUCE

4 pounds cooking apples
1 cup unsweetened apple juice
¼ teaspoon ground cloves
1½ teaspoons ground cinnamon
¼ teaspoon ground nutmeg

Peel, core and quarter apples. Combine with remaining ingredients in a Dutch oven. Cook over medium-low heat 25 to 30 minutes or until apples are tender, stirring frequently. Mash apple mixture to desired consistency with a potato masher. Provides about 11 calories per tablespoon. Serve with pork or poultry.

APPLE SALAD

1 tablespoon lemon juice
2 cups red apples, unpared and cubed
½ cup thinly sliced celery
½ cup red grapes, halved and seeded
½ cup 100-percent bran cereal (not flakes)
Lettuce

Beat cottage cheese and lemon juice until smooth. Combine cottage cheese mixture with apples, celery and grapes. Cover and chill. At serving time, stir in bran cereal. Serve on lettuce.

APPLE STREUSEL

2 pounds apples
2 tablespoons sugar
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
½ cup brown sugar
1 cup flour
½ cup margarine

Grease bottom and sides of 8x12-inch pan. Peel and core apples and cut into eighths. Place apples in a pan in overlapping rows as close together as possible.

Combine granulated sugar and cinnamon and sprinkle over apples. Add brown sugar to flour. Cut in margarine and mix with fingertips to form crumbs. Sprinkle over apples and pat to make smooth surface. Bake for 30 minutes at 425 degrees, until apples are tender.

LUCY JANE'S APPLE CAKE

1 cup sugar
½ cup margarine
1 egg
1 cup flour
1 teaspoon soda
½ teaspoon each: salt, cinnamon, nutmeg
3 large apples, diced
½ cup chopped nuts
½ teaspoon lemon extract
½ teaspoon maple extract

Topping:

½ cup brown sugar
½ cup granulated sugar
½ cup sweetened condensed milk
¼ cup margarine
1½ teaspoons vanilla

Cream sugar, margarine and egg. Combine flour, soda, salt and spices. Add apples and nuts. Add flour mixture to creamed mixture. Stir in extracts and pour into greased 9x9 square pan. Bake 30 to 40 minutes at 350 degrees.

Topping: Combine first four ingredients in a double boiler or heavy saucepan. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly to avoid separation, until thick. Add vanilla. Stir and pour over warm cake. Serve warm or cold.

New England beans' flavor from slow baking

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

We all know that long, slow baking gives New England-style beans their mellow flavor.

These new New England beans get the same flavor overnight or while you're at work or away by cooking slowly in an electric slow crockery cooker.

NEW NEW ENGLAND BEANS

1 pound dry navy or great northern beans (2⅓ cups)
8 cups cold water
½ teaspoon salt
¼ pound salt pork, cut up
1 large onion, chopped (1 cup)
½ cup molasses
⅓ cup packed brown sugar
1 teaspoon dry mustard
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper

Rinse beans. In a large saucepan bring beans, water and salt to boiling; reduce heat. Simmer, covered, 1½ hours.

Pour beans and liquid into a bowl; cover. Chill overnight.

Cover; cook on low-heat setting for 12 to 14 hours.

Stir before serving.

Makes 6 to 8 servings.

WHAT'S COOKING

Mealtime becomes event for Dunn family

EDITORS NOTE: Families who priviously have been named Family of the Year will be featured in "What's Cooking" prior to the announcement of this year's family, Nov. 18. This is the first of a six part series.

By MYRA LEE SALCEDO
Lifestyle Writer

With 13 children, 3 married and 10 at home, it is no wonder that Melvin and Mary B. Dunn and their children were selected Family of the Year in 1981. The Dunn's have been Midlanders for 20 years and have raised their children with an abundance of activites including soccer, ballet, band and music lessons.

Because Shanti Dunn, age 2, is deaf, the entire family has learned sign language. The parents are active members of the Counsel for the Deaf and Hard of Hearing, the Counsel on Adoptable Children (7 of the Dunn children are adopted) and numerous PTAs.

It is not surprising that mealtime is a "main event" at the Dunn residence.

"My grandmother had 13 children, but her lifestyle was certainly different. With all of the modern conveniences, such as a microwave, I don't have to spend as much time preparing food as she did," Mrs. Dunn said.

"Actually, our 17-year-old is the best cook," Mrs. Dunn said.

Despite a hectic schedule of activities and the fact that the children are in seven different schools, Mrs. Dunn still finds time to cook. Below are some of the family recipes.

Art from Israel museum on view

NEW YORK (AP) — "Treasures of the Holy Land: Ancient Art From the Israel Museum" is on view at the Metropolitan Museum of Art through Jan. 4.

The Metropolitan says this "is the largest and most important exhibition of ancient art from the Israel Museum ever to travel abroad. (It) comprises nearly 200 antiquities, among them superb objects covering all the major archaeological periods.

"In addition to their inherent beauty, the objects are of great cultural significance and nearly all of them come from excavations of famous Biblical sites conducted during this century."

Apples used for much more than pie

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Any apple will do for eating out of hand at this time of year. This is apple season, and they all taste like apples should — crisp and tangy. It is only later, when they are doused in wax to help preserve them, that they become tough-skinned and woolly inside.

When bringing apples home from an orchard, sort through them and remove any with bruises and skin breaks. Use these first. For up to two weeks, apples can be stored in a cool place, between 60 and 70 degrees. For longer storage, they should be packed into plastic bags and stored between 32 and 40 degrees.

A second refrigerator is best for this purpose, but lacking one, the apples will keep in an unheated garage, porch or cellar. If the temperature is expected to dip down during the night, the fruit can be protected by covering the apples with a blanket or several layers of newspaper. All apples will become less crisp and snappy the longer they are stored.

Some markets sell utility-grade apples with minor imperfections, and economy-minded consumers can make good use of these in cooking and baking. Russeting or patches of rough brownish skin caused by weather conditions do not effect the quality or flavor.

When cooking apples, pie and sauce are the obvious choices, but these recipes offer innovative, less traditional approaches to apple cuisine.

APPLE HARVEST SOUP
4 slices day-old bread
3 apples, peeled, cored, sliced
1 large butternut squash or half a small pumpkin, peeled and sliced
2 medium onions, sliced
4 cups chicken stock
¾ teaspooon tarragon
salt and pepper to taste
½ cup dry vermouth
½ cup heavy cream
sour cream
chopped scallions

Tear bread into pieces and rub between palms of hand to make bread crumbs. Place in a stockpot with apples, squash (or pumpkin) and onions. Add chicken stock, tarragon, salt and pepper to taste. Cook 30 minutes or until apples and vegetables are tender. Puree mixture in a food processor, blender or food mill. Just before serving, reheat soup and add vermouth and cream. Do not boil. Garnish with a dollop of sour cream and chopped scallions. If desired, serve in a hollowed-out pumpkin and garnish with apple skin twists. Makes 6 servings.

APPLE COOKIES
½ cup butter
1 cup brown sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon allspice
½ teaspoon cloves
1 egg
¼ cup apple cider
1 cup all-purpose flour
1 cup whole wheat flour
1 teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon salt
2 apples, peeled, cored, shredded
1 tablespoon butter, melted
1 cup sifted confectioner's sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 tablespoon apple cider

In a medium-size bowl cream butter and brown sugar. Stir in cinnamon, allspice, cloves and egg. Stir in cider. Combine flours, baking soda and salt and add to creamed mixture. Add apples and mix until well blended. Drop by teaspoonsful onto ungreased cookie sheet. Bake at 400 degrees for 10 to 12 minutes.

Combine melted butter with confectioners' sugar, vanilla extract and cider. When cool, frost cookies with glaze. Makes about 36 cookies.

APPLE TART
1 pound puff pastry, frozen or homemade
1 egg beaten with 1 teaspoon water
1 (3-ounce) package cream cheese, softened
¼ cup confectioner's sugar
1 teaspoon lemon rind
3 apples, peeled, cored, sliced
1 tablespoon lemon juice
⅓ cup apple or currant jelly

If using frozen puff pastry, thaw according to maufacturer's directions. On a lightly floured surface roll out pastry into a 14x11-inch rectangle with a lightly floured rolling pin. Cut two 1-inch strips from each edge of the rectangle.

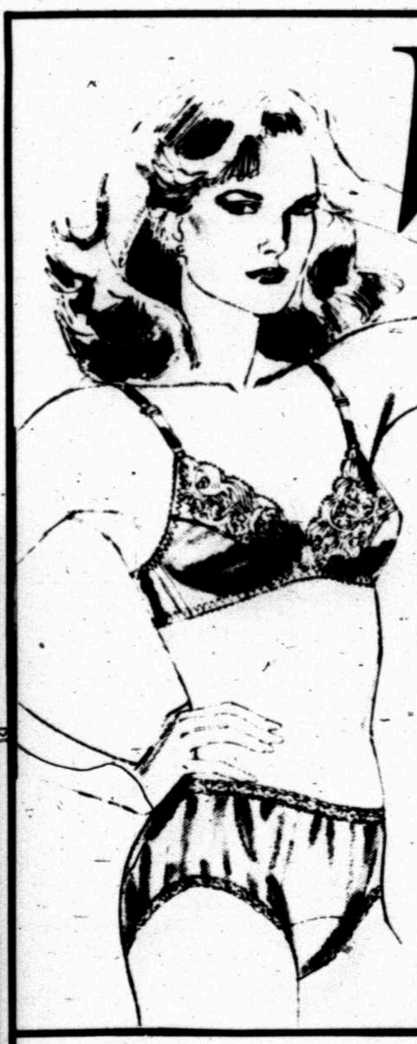

Transfer pastry rectangle to an ungreased baking sheet; brush with egg and water mixture. Arrange one pastry strip on top of each edge of rectangle so strips meet, trimming as necessary; brush strips with egg mixture. Place second set of pastry strips over first, making a double thick pastry border. Cut diagonal slashes on strips about ¼ inch deep and 1½ inches apart.

Combine cream cheese, sugar and lemon rind. Spread evenly in center of tart. Toss apple slices with lemon juice and arrange over cheese mixture. Bake in a 350 degree oven for 30 minutes or until golden brown.

Place jelly in a small saucepan and melt over low heat, stirring constantly. Brush apples with jelly and allow to set. Makes 6 servings.

DEAR ABBY

Summer romance cools off

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I met a really neat guy at the beginning of the summer. (We're both 20.) We were immediately attracted to each other and spent every moment we could together — laughing, talking and having fun. I hadn't had such a fulfilling relationship with a guy in years, and I knew his feelings were as strong as mine.

He went away to college, and we agreed to phone when we could afford it and to write often.

To date I have written five very long letters and called him six times, but he has made no effort to contact me. When I called him, he didn't seem the least bit excited and acted like he was in a hurry to get off the phone. He said he'd call me back that night, but he never did. I was in tears. I called him the next day to find out what was wrong, and he said, "Nothing," but didn't give me a reason why he didn't call back. (Again he was in a hurry.) Everything was wonderful before he left; I can't understand his lack of communication. This isn't the same guy who left in August. Or is it? — IN THE DARK IN IOWA

DEAR IN: Yes, it's the same guy, but his feelings have changed. Don't hassle him. If you put him on the spot, he'll be forced to tell you it was just a summer romance. (So far he hasn't had the guts.) Save your pride and forget him. What was, was. This happens to every young woman at least once. My heart aches for you.

DEAR ABBY: I never in a million years thought I'd be writing to you, let alone thanking you for possibly saving my life, but here goes:

You had a piece in your column (Vancouver Province) warning readers that old grenades, shells and other potentially explosive war souvenirs could possibly still be dangerous and to call their local police department and ask that they be picked up and disposed of properly.

Well, years ago we inherited a "brassy looking" object, heavy as a dumbbell, about a foot long — just the thing to use as a doorstop! After reading your column I recalled that my doorstop was an old cannon shell, so on the chance that it could be dangerous, I called the authorities and had it removed.

To make a long story short, the shell was taken to the Explosive Ordinance Disposal Unit at a Canadian Army base and was identified as a 57mm anti-tank cannon shell — the type used by the Allied Forces in World War II. The shell was wisely taken to a gravel pit and exploded by remote control. We later learned that the TNT charge in that shell had a killing radius of 23 meters or 76 feet! Another thing about TNT: the older it gets, the more skittish it becomes. The slightest jar may set it off! Thanks, Abby! — JEAN M. BUZAN, GRATEFUL CANADIAN

DEAR JEAN: Some folks say they get a charge out of my column, but this was really dynamite!

DEAR ABBY: You have had several letters about junk mail, so I thought you might get a chuckle out of the way my mother handled hers.

Mother, who has been a widow since 1953, had been receiving letters from a credit card corporation addressed to her late husband (who had never lived at her current address), congratulating him on how well he had managed his finances over the last few years and inviting him to apply for their "gold card."

After discarding several of these letters, Mother received another one. This time she decided to fill out the attached application and return it.

She gave Dad's full name and date of birth. For "Current address?" she wrote "Highland Memorial Cemetery." For "How long at that address?" ... "33 years." "Current employer?" ... "St. Peter." On the line designated for signature of applicant, she wrote, "Unobtainable." — WITTY WIDOW'S DAUGHTER

Steak rip-off real 'beef'

By MERLE ELLIS

P.T. Barnum said: "There's a sucker born every minute" — and I think he was conservative when it comes to meat buyers. It must be one every 10 seconds. Or maybe it's just that the meat industry thinks we're fools. Maybe that's it. Whichever! If the latest ploy in meat merchandising proves profitable, somebody somewhere has got to be snickering and calling some of us "suckers."

There's a new line of meat products in the case. They're making a case for convenience. Precooked, vacuum-packed, microwave-ready steaks! Yeah, steaks! Are you ready for that? What will they think of next? Now you don't have to stand over a hot barbecue grill suckin' in a beer for 5 or 6 minutes to cook up a steak. No. Now you can pop a precooked, preseasoned, prepackaged, prepared steak right smack in the microwave still in its plastic package and in only 2 or 3 minutes, did you hear that, 2 or 3 minutes, the thing is done, ready to peel out of its plastic wrap and plop on a plate. Think of the time you'll save. You could even peel back the plastic and eat it out of hand on the run like a popsicle. You wouldn't even need to sit and eat. It's perfect for today's busy lifestyle.

I saw such steaks in a supermarket last week in Ohio, "Micro-Ready Ribeye Steak $9.99 per lb." You heard me right! Nine dollars and ninety-nine cents per pound! With all due respect for the rib-eye, that's ridiculous! In the same meat case, rib-eyes were selling for more than $5 a pound less. How much time does it take to grill a steak? Three to four minutes per side, "max." So you save 5 minutes with "Micro-ready ribeye," big deal. It cost you $5.00 a pound to save that time. Are you making a dollar a minute where you work? That's $60 an hour — or $124,800 a year. If your gross income exceeds that figure, then your time is indeed valuable. It may be worth your time to pay a premium for the meat you eat. If you make a gross income of less than that, paying $9.99 per pound for "Micro-Ready Ribeye" is "gross!"

Even if you can afford those outrageous prices, doesn't it seem at least a little silly to spend your money on convenience food that's really not all that convenient, and prepared food the quality of which couldn't possibly compare to something you could easily prepare in your own kitchen? Save your money to make payments on your yacht or something. Hire a maid. Buy a BMW. Send your kids to a private school. But don't be a fool. We have enough of those in the world as it is!

Microwave-ready meats are not necessarily a bad idea. The microwave oven is a great tool for reheating meat — but a steak? There is no more convenient meat in the world than a simple steak on the grill or under the broiler.

If the meat industry wants to save us some time, sell us some convenience. They would, it seems to me, be far better off concentrating their "further processing" energies on cooking up some of those great old "like-Grandma-used-to-make" kinds of meat dishes. Even today's busiest yippity-skippity Yuppie Puppie lifestyle leaves time enough to cook a steak. But stews, pot roasts, goulashes and all that other good old-fashioned stick-to-the-ribs stuff, that's a different story. Those are the kinds that do, indeed, take a bit of time. Those are the dishes that today's busy consumer may, indeed, not have the time to prepare. Those are the dishes that sensible people may be willing to have preprepared. I doubt that anyone but a fool would pay $9.99 per pound for them, but at a reasonable price I think reasonable people would buy dishes like that — precooked, vacuum-packaged and micro-wavable. Maybe!

British artists tour India for visual record

LOS ANGELES (AP) — During the nearly two centuries of British rule in India, British artists traveled throughout the land to create a visual record of their compatriots' life.

"From Merchants to Emperors: British Artists and India, 1757-1930," on view at the Los Angeles County Museum of Art now through Jan. 4, documents the story of two disparate cultures with some 100 drawings, watercolors, prints and photographs.

The museum says, "The works represent the activities and the attitudes of the ruling class, revealing both the brightest and the darkest sides of colonialism."

Pies — in variety of flavors — favorite American food

By VERNE PALMER
Copley News Service

"Pies are what American food is all about," says Teresa Kennedy, author of "American Pies," a 94-page treatise on the subject.

They were the favorite dishes at quilting bees and church suppers long before Betsy Ross stitched up the first Grand Old Flag, and the situation hasn't changed any today.

Apple pie is the standard by which all things American are judged, and pumpkin is the national dessert each Thanksgiving Day.

American cooks are traditionally judged by the tenderness of their pie crusts, and recipes and pie-making techniques are handed down from mother to daughter through generations of families.

Some of America's favorite pies, such as Key Lime Pie from Florida, reflect its regional bounty; some, like Shoofly Pie (a Pennsylvania Dutch specialty), its ethnic heritage, and still others, like Depression Oatmeal Pie, its history.

But which of the nation's culinary treasures is most representative of the genre as a whole that should be considered The American Pie has never been resolved.

In the meantime, here's a sampler of some of the nation's favorite pies, taken from "American Pie" (Workman Publishing Co.) Consult your favorite cookbook for crust recipes.

MOM'S APPLE PIE

Basic pie crust or butter crust
1 cup sugar
2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
2 generous teaspoons ground cinnamon
¾ teaspoon ground nutmeg
3½ cups peeled, cored and sliced McIntosh apples (about 4 to 5 apples)
3 cups peeled, cored and sliced Granny Smith apples (about 4 apples)
2 tablespoons lightly salted butter
½ cup heavy or whipping cream

Prepare basic or butter pie crust dough and divide into two equal portions. On lightly floured surface, roll out half the dough to a thickness of ⅛-inch. Ease it gently into a 9-inch pie pan; trim overhang to ¾-inch. Set aside. Roll out remaining dough to thickness of one-sixteenth inch and set aside.

Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Combine sugar, flour and spices in large bowl. Add apple slices and toss until well coated. Fill crust with apple slices and dot with butter. Ease top crust over filled bottom crust; trim overhang to ¾-inch. Fold top crust over bottom. Crimp to seal edges. Cut slits in top crust to allow steam to escape.

Bake for one hour, or until crust is golden and apples test done. Turn off oven and remove pie. Gently pour cream through slits in crust. Return pie to oven and leave it there until the oven is nearly cool, about 20 minutes. Serve immediately.

MARK KENNEDY'S PECAN PIE

½ recipe basic pie crust or 1 unbaked make-ahead crust
3 eggs
1 cup dark corn syrup
1 cup dark brown sugar, firmly packed
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
3 tablespoons lightly salted butter, softened
1 cup coarsely chopped pecans

If using basic pie crust, prepare dough and roll out on lightly-floured surface to thickness of ⅛-inch. Ease gently into 9-inch pie pan; trim overhang to 1 inch. Flute edges as desired. Set aside. Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

Place eggs, corn syrup, brown sugar, salt, vanilla and butter in a medium-sized mixing bowl. Beat for three minutes on medium speed with electric mixer, or by hand until butter is completely incorporated.

Add pecans and stir to blend. Pour filling into the crust and bake for one hour.

THANKSGIVING PUMPKIN PIE

½ recipe butter or old-fashioned lard crust
1 (1-pound) can pumpkin (about 2 cups)
1 cup dark brown sugar, firmly packed
2 tablespoons honey
2 eggs, slightly beaten
1 cup heavy or whipping cream
⅔ cup milk
2 teaspoons ground cinnamon
1 teaspoon ground ginger
½ teaspoon ground nutmeg
¼ teaspoon ground cloves

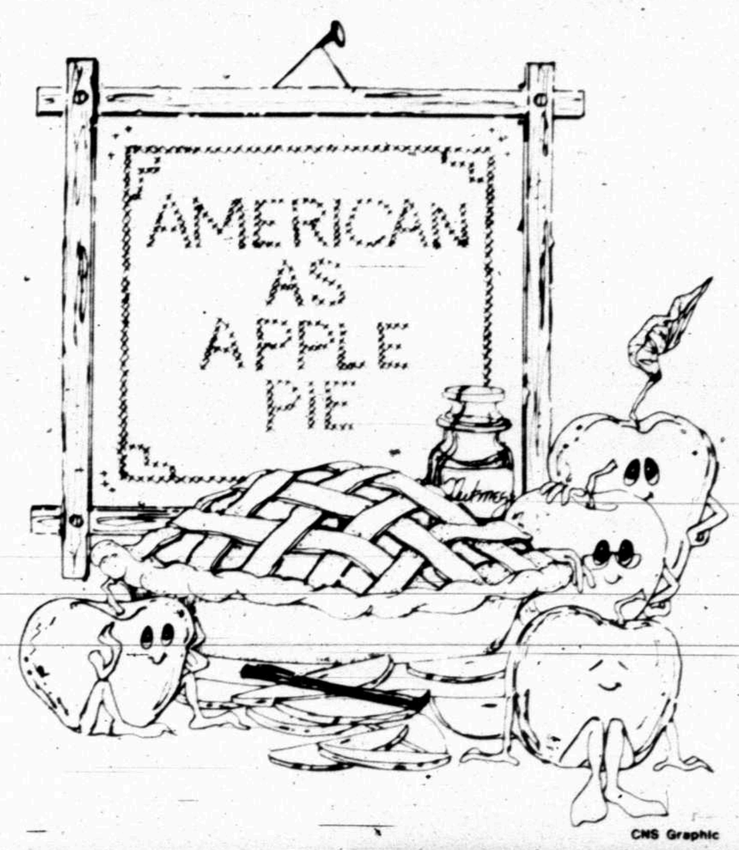

Prepare butter or old-fashioned lard crust dough and roll it out on a lightly floured surface to thickness of ⅛-inch. Ease gently into 9- or 10-inch pie pan. Flute edges, and set aside.

Note: This filling recipe is generous. When using 9-inch pie pan, be sure to flute the edges high, to incorporate filling and avoid spills and drips.

Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Combine pumpkin, brown sugar, and honey in large bowl. Add eggs and beat well. Stir in cream and milk until well blended.

Add spices and stir to blend. Pour filling into crust and bake for 50 to 60 minutes, or until filling is set.

Or substitute 1 scant tablespoon pumpkin pie spice for the four spices listed.

'Nursery' thought origin of comets

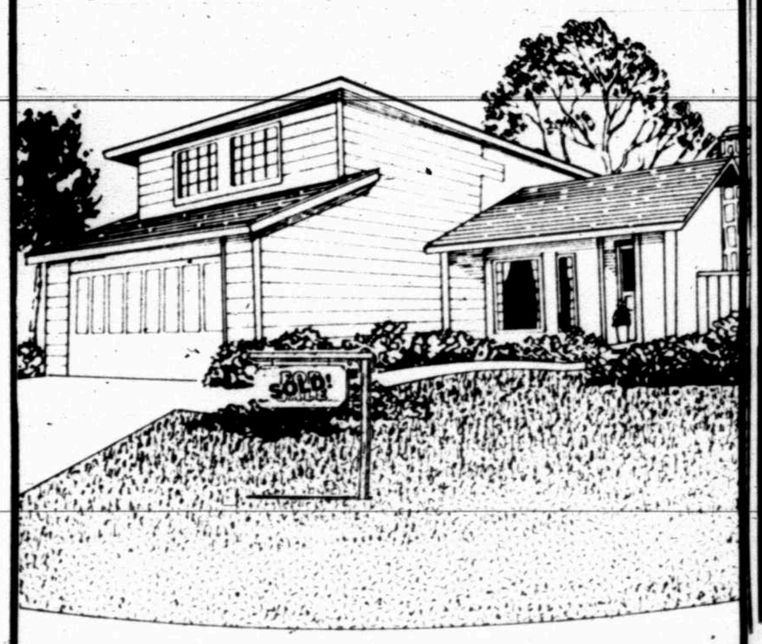

Copley News Service

Comets are thought to originate in the "Oort Cloud," an enormous spherical shell surrounding the sun at the solar system's outer reaches.

Astronomers estimate that this comet nursery contains more than 100 billion orbiting comets.

The cloud bears the name of the Dutch astronomer who, in 1950, first envisioned it.

Continental soon to have nonstop flights to Denver

From Staff and Wire Reports

DENVER (AP) — Continental Airlines says it will begin nonstop service between Denver and four cities formerly served by Frontier Airlines on Nov. 1 and to eight more former Frontier destinations on Nov. 8.

However, Aviation Director Vic White said Continental probably won't begin serving Midland until early December.

"I've been working with Continental shortly after Frontier shut down. All indications are Continental will come in sometime later this year," White said.

Ten more former Frontier destinations will be added by year's end, the company said in a news statement Tuesday.

Midland is without direct service to Denver, with passengers now having to fly on American to Dallas-Ft. Worth to connect with Denver flights, White said.

Continental says the addition of the flights will make Continental Denver's largest carrier by the end of this year, with more than 250 flights per day.

On Nov. 1, Continental will inaugurate nonstop flights between Denver and Tulsa, Okla.; St. Louis; Des Moines, Iowa and Boise, Idaho.

On Nov. 8, the airline will begin service between Denver and Bismarck and Fargo, N.D.; Cedar Rapids, Iowa; Casper, Wyo.; Lincoln, Neb.; Rapid City and Sioux Falls, S.D., and Spokane, Wash.

Continental officials said the airline plans to charge introductory fares of $49 or less each way for the 12 new flights. After the introductory period, Continental will offer 30-day advance purchase fares of $59 to $69 each way and unrestricted fares of $130 to $140 to the four cities where service starts Nov. 1.

Aircraft formerly owned by Frontier will fly the new Continental routes.

Frontier filed for Chapter 11 reorganization in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in August, and last week the bankruptcy court approved Continental's purchase of Frontier. The U.S. Department of Transportation has given tentative approval to the purchase.

Continental has said it plans to have seven former Frontier planes in the air again by Nov. 1 and 35 planes by late December. Continental also is rehiring 1,344 of Frontier's 4,000 former employees.

"Continental is extremely pleased that we can expand our low-fare, full-service flights to these new cities," said Clark Onstad, vice president of public affairs for Texas Air Corp., Continental's parent company. "Our new service also will end United Airlines' monopoly that has existed in many of these markets since Frontier ceased operations.

"The additional aircraft obtained from Frontier will allow more people than ever before to take advantage of our low fares and maintain Continental's own growth pattern in Denver," Onstad said.

MISD trustee files grievance to have attorney disbarred

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

A Midland Independent School Board of Trustee member has filed a grievance with the State Bar of Texas to disbar attorney Robert L. Evans Jr.

Fred Newman contends that Evans, who served as his attorney for four years, violated bar rules by renewing a land lease, held by Newman, in his own name.

"He took it and offered to sell it back to me for $200,000," Newman said.

In the suit, filed last week in the 238th District Court, the State Bar contends Evans committed professional misconduct under bar rules.

The suit contends Evans violated 15 rules, including, "using a confidence or secret of his client to the disadvantage of the client," and "using a confidence or secret of his client for the advantage of himself or of a third person..."

In 1981 Newman used Evans as his agent to lease property in Reeves County at the suggestion of William Humphries of Pecos. The two-acre property was used as a saltwater disposal well.

An agreement was made that Humphries would receive 50 percent of the profit from the disposal well, the suit contends.

The well began operating in 1982, and Humphries sued Newman for a share of money he said had not been properly distributed.

While Newman was involved in the lawsuit with Humphries, the first term of a three-year lease on the Reeves County property expired and was up for renewal, Newman said.

"During litigation, the lease that the lawsuit is about came up for renewal and Bob took it in his name, not mine," Newman said.

The suit says Evans took a new lease Aug. 16, 1985 for himself on the land from Robert Snodgrass, lessor of the property.

On Oct. 24, 1985, Evans and Snodgrass sued Newman saying they owned the lease covering the saltwater disposal well in Reeves County.

But a court ruled that the land should be in Newman's name in April 1986.

Newman said he had assumed Evans had renewed the lease in his name and didn't find out it was in Evan's name until Evans sued him.

"I found out it was in his name when he sued me to vacate the property," Newman said.

The property, on which Newman charged companies to dump saltwater, was generating between $15,000 to $20,000 a month, Newman said.

Evans was out of town and could not be reached for comment.

Expert can 'read' minds by reading writing

SILSBEE, Texas (AP) — Talking to Cheryl Dillard is a little like chatting with a college professor, a psychic and Santa Claus all at the same time. Just by looking at the way you dot an "i" or cross a "t," she can tell not only whether you've been bad or good, but who you've been bad or good to. And when. And why.

It's not a trick. There's no crystal ball involved. It's called graphology, or handwriting analysis. And it's a skill that requires months of study, a quick memory and a great big magnifying glass.

"Everything that happens in our lives is locked in our brains, all of which comes through in our handwriting," Ms. Dillard says of a craft that often makes her the center of attention at parties and helps her determine child abuse and drug addiction. "But it's still so new, and people are oftentimes very skeptical and not that willing to accept it."

Ms. Dillard began studying to become a master graphologist several years ago through a correspondence course with the University of Wyoming. The interest quickly turned into a fascination. "I swear I saw letters in my sleep," she says with a laugh. "But it's just the type of thing you can really get caught up in."

> "Everything that happens in our lives is locked in our brains, all of which comes through in our handwriting. But it's still so new, and people are oftentimes very skeptical and not that willing to accept it."
>
> — Graphologist Cheryl Dillard

The ink was barely dry on her final exam in basic graphology when she started studying to become a master at the craft through courses with the Institute of Graphological Sciences in Dallas. Four months passed before she earned the degree of master graphologist, a title she says draws strange looks from people until they realize what she can do. Then the looks turn to amazement.

Carefully studying several lines of handwriting hastily scribbled on a yellow tablet, Ms. Dillard can pick out everything from stubborness and persistence to evasiveness and dishonesty. A barrage of characteristics that send her back to a stack of well-used textbooks can even alert her to physical problems the writer may have.

"Now this person likes to party," she says, grinning over a handwriting sample of very large letters. Several businesses in the area have sought her skills, mostly banks who bring a handwriting sample from a prospective employee to see if the person is honest. But most of her clients are parents who want to know what's going on in their children's lives.

A laundry list-written by a 15-year-old girl happened across Ms. Dillard's path. The handwriting screamed drugs and suicide. Though shocked at how anyone found out, the girl admitted she was contemplating suicide and later sought help.

About the only thing Ms. Dillard can't tell from a handwriting sample is the age and sex of the writer. Anything else is fair game.

"And it's very reliable. You have to consciously think to change your handwriting. Just try changing it," she says, with a grin. "Eventually it will slip back to the way you usually write and show your true personality."

Though it's often a very popular skill, handwriting analysis sometimes makes her friends wary of writing in front of her.

Church group receives $5,000 grant for human sexuality classes

From Staff Reports

Christian Life Enrichment Resources (CLER) recently received a $5,000 grant from the Midland Association of Churches.

Monies from the grant will be used in a pilot program beginning January 1987 to provide church-based sexuality education for ninth grade youth in Midland.

Beginning the week of January 11 and continuing through the week of April 5, five classes, consisting of 20 students per class, will be held in local sponsoring churches.

This program will be expanded in September 1987, offering 10 classes per semester to ninth grade youth if the pilot program is deemed successful and beneficial to Midland youth.

Christian Life Enrichment Resources under the leadership of its president, Linda Goddard, has published the curriculum that is the basis for the course, "...And God Created Them Male and Female...And Now What."

The course has been taught to over 100 youth in the Permian Basin in the last four years and is an in-depth 15-session Christian-based study of human sexuality.

The leadership for the five classes will be Richard and Linda Goddard, Rev. Michael Dobbs, Pete and Sherry Mertens and John and Jeanette Sauer.

Each of the five classes will have other adults in-training for future leadership.

The Midland Association of Churches (MAC) is an organization with a membership of representatives from some 19 churches and 15 associate non-member local outreach agencies.

The purposes of MAC are "to express through cooperation: service and fellowship, the essential unity of the Christian church and to provide an inter-denominational agency for cooperation of the churches in areas of Christian education, social relations, united worship, evangelism, world Christian fellowship, and other such services as may achieve more effectively the objectives of the Christian religion."

The majority of the monies awarded to CLER by MAC are to be used for scholarships for participating youth.

VIEWPOINT

Majority polled feels record industry should be responsible

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

A member of a Washington D.C. parents' group — concerned about allusions in rock music today glorifying what they say runs the gamut from bisexuality, necrophelia, suicide, violence, incest, the occult, sadomasochism and bondage — was in Midland Monday to express her concerns.

Susan Baker, wife of Treasury Secretary James Baker, said her group, the Parents' Music Resource Center, will continue to monitor the recording industry and wants it to voluntarily label records and cassette tapes containing explicit lyrics or print the lyrics to the songs on the outside of the recording.

Tuesday afternoon in Midland Park Mall, 15 people were asked if they felt the recording industry should be responsible for placing warning labels on records, printing lyrics on the outside of the recording, doing neither or doing both.

The random sample revealed 40 percent (six) of those questioned said the recording industry should be responsible for doing both, while 20 percent (three) said the industry isn't responsible for anything.

Roughly 27 percent (four people) of the group said the industry should have to rate albums and place a warning label on them if it is warranted, while just two, or 13 percent, said records should have lyrics printed on the outside of the album or cassette.

Those who thought the recording industry should police its own products by having warning labels and printing lyrics on the outside were all over the age of 30.

Mrs. Donald E. Smith, 60, of Big Spring, said parents need all the help they can get when it comes to raising children.

"Many times today, both parents are working and I think anything that can assist them is good. I used to pay very little attention to what my kids listened to and when I did, I was astounded," Mrs. Smith said.

"Parents should have control over their kids. It's good for their health and their morality," Frank Waldorf, 43, of Midland said.

"I think some of those albums should be behind a counter as a matter of fact. Yes, I think it is a form of censorship, but I think censorship is needed on lyrics.

"If it was wrong 200 years ago, it is wrong now," Waldorf said.

A 30-year-old man, Ty Bateman, said he felt the recording industry should do both because someone has to protect kids from the allusions in rock music.

Bob Lester, 44, a Midland Police Department officer, said parents need to be made aware of the "trash the record industry is putting out."

"But we should get to the heart of it — the record producers," Lester said.

Bateman

Wolcott

Those who said the recording industry is not responsible for doing anything were all under the age of 24.

Katie Wolcott, 20, said she thought it was "absolutely ridiculous."

"To me, it is an obvious form of censorship. It hasn't been sufficiently proven to me there are adverse affects from kids listening to the lyrics," Ms. Wolcott said.

"Half the time kids don't even know what the words are anyway," Selina Gonzales, 22, said.

"I don't believe lyrics can lead to any of the stuff those people say. Do parents make their kids stop watching cartoons and prime time television because of the violence?"

"If a kid is that susceptible to an influence, he's going to do what he's going to do anyway. I just don't think anyone is that easily influenced," Ms. Gonzales said.

Andrea Thompson, 24, manager of a store in the mall, said she didn't feel it was her place to monitor what her children buy.

"If it were my daughter's allowance money she had earned, I would want her to choose how she spent it. By then, the kids should have been taught the difference between right and wrong," Ms. Thompson said.

One 16-year-old said he didn't see anything wrong with having record albums rated as long as it didn't prevent teens from buying the recordings.

Tim Gilbert said it should be the rock group's responsibility to monitor their own albums.

"I really think these people are making a bigger deal out of it than it really is. I own an album that alludes to suicide, but I don't even care about the lyrics. I listen for the melody.

"It doesn't matter to me what they're singing about. I'm not going to let it get to me," Gilbert said.

"It's going to take someone with a pretty sick mind to let the songs get to them."

Otwell backers ask Texans not to vote for White

AUSTIN (AP) — Supporters of the Rev. W.N. Otwell in his battle with the state over Otwell's church school have asked Texans not to re-elect Gov. Mark White unless he stops a forced sale of the property.

About 75 people, including a number of Baptist ministers from other states, demonstrated on the Capitol steps Tuesday.

The same group was due to picket the Travis County courthouse today and attend a court hearing in the afternoon.

The hearing will determine if the Fort Worth church school will be shut down permanently.

Otwell has refused to get a state license for the boys school and Attorney General Jim Mattox took him to court for operating without a license.

State District Judge Paul Davis of Austin ordered Otwell and eight others running the home to pay fines of $100 a day for operating without a license. On Aug. 5, the sale of the Community Baptist Church property was ordered to cover unpaid fines.

Tom Hartman, 27, and a friend drove to a ranch southwest of Eunice Monday and then went separate ways on foot to hunt for Indian arrowheads. Authorities said the two had planned to meet at 2 p.m. Monday, but Hartman didn't show up.

An oil field trucker spotted Hartman at 12:15 p.m. Tuesday, authorities said.

"Considering the night he went through, he was pretty OK," said sheriff's deputy Sam Courtney.

Courtney said Hartman took refuge from heavy rain by crawling under a bush and then walked to an oil field pump jack, where the oil worker found him.

Bugis Cargas of Austin chained himself by the neck to a tree-crushing machine Tuesday. Cargas is a member of the environmentalist group, Earth First, which is protesting the U.S. Forest Service's plan to clear and burn areas of Sam Houston National Forest damaged by pine beetles.

Group protests plan to clear damaged trees

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Environmentalists stood before a giant tree-crushing machine and chained themselves to trees to protest the U.S. Forest Service's decision to clear areas damaged by pine beetles.

"It makes me sick to my stomach," Pat Ellis Taylor said of the land cleared by the tree-crusher.

Mrs. Taylor and her husband, Chuck, were among five arrested Tuesday in Sam Houston National Forest where members of the environmental group Earth First converged to stop the 52-ton machine from mowing down more trees.

"We want to stop the devastation of forests. This is public land," she said.

Group spokeswoman Barbara Dugleby said the machine is destroying healthy trees and wildlife. She said that after the trees are torn down, the Forest Service will burn the area with a substance she likened to napalm.

"There's still an intact forest there," Ms. Dugleby said. "They should maintain a diverse forest that won't invite more pine beetles back."

Protesters gathered Tuesday in an area where acres of trees already had been mowed down. They shouted at the operator, and then forced the machine to stop by standing in front of it.

One man identified as Bugis Cargas immediately climbed on top of the machine and chained his neck to part of it. Three others chained themselves to trees and another man climbed a nearby tree.

"Where is the real crime being committed? Not here, but there," said James Jackson pointing to the acres of cleared land. Jackson of Cleveland, Texas, had climbed to the top of a tree near the machine.

Pat and Chuck Taylor of Austin were cut loose from their tree and kept hand-cuffed in a nearby van while authorities were trying to cut others loose.

Jackson, Christi Stevens and Robin Spraggins, both of Austin, also were taken into custody Tuesday and transported to the Walker County Jail in Huntsville, Ms. Dugleby said.

Ms. Spraggins was arrested because she tried to stop authorities from cutting down a tree Jackson had climbed, Ms. Dugleby said. Cargas was equipped with a sleeping bag and remained chained to the machine late Tuesday night.

During the past two months, about half of the 2,582 acres that need to be cleared have been mowed, said Doug Wilder, of Wilder and Wilder, the Corrigan-based company contracted to clear the land.

Wilder said Tuesday he was told to expect protesters and had advised the machine operator "to stop the machine once they got in front of it."

Once trees are knocked down and the areas are burned, about 2,500 acres will be replanted with pine trees, Forest Service spokesman Dave Oates said.

Couple kill themselves because didn't want to be without other

FORT WORTH (AP) — John and Mercedes Lunsford, just weeks shy of their 50th wedding anniversary, decided they couldn't live without the other.

So they died together.

The Lunsfords were discovered Tuesday morning in their garage with their car engine running. The Tarrant County Medical examiner's office ruled the deaths a double suicide.

Friends said Mrs. Lunsford, 71, was distraught over her husband's failing health.

Lunsford, 76, a retired Linotype operator, was a devout union man and devoted to his wife. He had a history of heart ailments, said Max Falkowitz, president of Fort Worth Typographical Union Local 198.

Mrs. Lunsford told a neighbor, Margaret Henslee, that her husband recently learned that he had gallstones. But she said that his doctor was reluctant to operate because of the heart condition.

"She had told me two or three weeks ago that he had gallstones and that he was giving up," Ms. Henslee said, and "that she couldn't see life without him. I had no idea that anything would happen."

A note was taped to the iron grate on the front porch of their home of 38 years in east Fort Worth.

"We want to ask one favor of you," the Lunsfords wrote to neighbor John Hotchkiss, who picked up their morning newspaper. "Would you call the police? We can't take it anymore. Thank you for being a good neighbor."

Daughter Donna Hart of Arlington confirmed her father's condition.

"Yes, he had been in ill health," she said. "Yes, he had gallstones and heart problems and had become depressed."

Dr. Hugh Lamensdorf, president of the Tarrant County Medical Society, said he finds it difficult to believe that a doctor told a patient that he could not have surgery for gallstones.

"Either the patient misunderstoood the physician or the neighbors misunderstood the patient," Lamensdorf said.

Dr. Basheer Ahmed, a Fort Worth psychiatrist, said the Lunsfords may have suffered from "giving up syndrome."

"In this case, there was a long marriage and dependency...This woman...apparently saw (her husband) almost dying and helpless, and her life lost meaning because she (perceived) she couldn't survive without him," Ahmed said.

IBM engineer recreates historic Vin Fiz flight

AUSTIN (AP) — Exactly 75 years and one day after the first airplane landed here, Jim Lloyd recreated the historic event in a light biplane that spectators said sounded like a lawnmower.

Pioneer aviator Calbraith Rodgers was mobbed by 3,000 people when his Vin Fiz landed in Austin during his first transcontinental flight in 1911.

But only nine spectators showed up as Lloyd, a 37-year-old IBM engineer from New York, brought the Vin Fiz II to a sputtering halt eight miles northeast of the orignial landing site, which is now a park.

Aviation has changed so much in the intervening years that few of those who met Lloyd's little poly-fiber-covered aluminum biplane would stifle a laugh. It looked like an ungainly toy beside the sleek aluminum-skinned craft on the runway.

"Sounds like my lawnmower," joked a spectator as the one-seat Pterodactyl Light Flyer — smaller and lighter than Rodgers' one-seat Wright Flyer — appeared out of the overcast sky about 1,000 feet high.

Lloyd bounced the biplane once before settling it onto the concrete runway. He taxied to a stop, shut down the two-cycle, 30-horsepower engine and extricated himself from the reclining seat on the lower wing.

"It's real bumpy up there," he said with a grin.

His wife and a mechanic are following him in a van, just as Rodgers was followed by his wife and mother in a railroad car provided by the Armour Food Co., which sponsored the 1911 stunt. Vin Fiz was then a new grape-flavored soft drink sold by Armour.

Lloyd, also bankrolled by Armour, left New Jersey Sept. 17.

The Lloyds plan to stay in Austin until the weather clears and then press on south and west enroute to Rodgers' destination of Long Beach, Calif.

Rodgers crashed in a cane field in Kyle after leaving Austin, a few hours after wowing residents by flying twice around the Capitol dome.

Lloyd hopes to avoid the crash and definitely will not fly around the dome.

"I wouldn't do that," he said. "It's dangerous."

Drug suspects released from jail

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Two men arrested late Saturday on drug possession charges that included seizure of a small amount of the first crack found in the area have been released from the Ector County jail.

Juan Felix Toca, 29, 3238 Walnut, was released from the county jail Tuesday after posting $15,000 bond on a charge of possession of cocaine.

Gabriel Ramirez Ramirez, 65, 2730 Hilltop, was released Monday after posting $15,000 bond on the same charge.

Police spokesman John McAhon said Ramirez and Toca were arrested about 11:30 p.m. Saturday by police and Ector County sheriff's narcotics officers acting on a search warrant.

Officers, following a search, found about a quarter ounce of cocaine and a small amount of the drug known as crack. McAhon said he believed this is the first time the drug crack has been found in the area by law enforcement officers.
