THE JUNCTION EAGLE

KIMBLE COUNTY POPULATION 3,581. "ONLY NEWSPAPER IN THE COUNTY." ELEVATION AT JUNCTION IS 2,180 FEET.

Volume XXXIX. Junction, Kimble County, Texas, Friday, February 2, 1923. Number 46.

PRIZE HEREFORD BULL BRINGS $9,0000.

"Woodford 130th," Junior champion Hereford bull at the 1922 International Live Stock Exposition in Chicago recently, was purchased in the auction for $9,000, by J. Watson Webb, of Shelburne, Vermont, the well known polo player of the "Big 4."

INSPECTOR MASON MAKES TRIP TO BARKSDALE.

Willis Mason, inspector for the Livestock Sanitary Commission for the counties of Menard, Kimble, Sutton and Edwards, was in Barksdale last week to meet the inspector from Real County, J. D. Wiley. They were discussing the proposition of the present quarantine of the townsite of Barksdale. There are about ten cows in the town under quarantine, and the two inspectors decided that at dipping time, they would meet there and allow the people of the town to dip in the vats that were most convenient, whether in Edwards or Real County.

Kimble County now has only six premises under quarantine, and no ticks have been found since last Spring. Mr. Mason believes this county to be absolutely free of ticks and predicts that we will not likely be troubled further with the fever tick.

The six premises comprise only about 3,500 acres, which is less than one-half of one per cent of the county.

TWO WERE BURIED IN JUNCTION SUNDAY.

W. B. Waggoner, familiarly known to most of the people in this county as "Dad," died at the home of his son netr Hext, last Saturday, and was buried here Sunday, Rev. Skaggs conducting the funeral services.

Deceased was born in Illinois 79 years ago, and came to Texas when near the age of thirty. He has lived in Kimble County for thirty-nine years, of which some fifteen years were spent in Junction, the last six or eight years of which he was janitor at the school or court house. He established the first store at Roosevelt and was the first postmaster there.

Surviving him are nine children. During his later years when he was serving as janitor, he took a great interest in his work and his pride in the appearance of the court house yard resulted in his keeping one of the prettiest and cleanest court yards that could be found anywhere. His work around the court yard allowed him to come in contact with many people, and he always took much interest in local politics.

Mrs. Isaac McDonald died at the family home in Junction Saturday night and was buried at the local cemetery Sunday, Rev. R. E. Parker conducting the services. The two funerals took place at about the same time and a large crowd was present.

JUNCTION EDITOR COMES HOME FOR WEDDING.

Not many people in the town of Junction knew that their popular editor and his sweetheart left that town for Stephenville last week. Neither did they know that the couple were coming back to the editor's old home with the avowed purpose of getting married. But it happened in good fashion, and Mr. H. G. Perry and Miss Dorris Wright were joined in matrimony at the court house in Stephenville, by County Judge A. P. Young, the Judge being a life-long friend of the Perry family.

For the past two years Mr. Perry has been editor and manager of the Junction Eagle, the only newspaper in Kimble County, and he has had a remarkable success, and at the present time owns a number of shares of the stock in the corporation. Previous to his removal to Junction he was representative from Erath County in the Texas Legislature, and made for himself an enviable record. He was also in the late world war as a captain in the U. S. cavalry. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Perry, who live west of Stephenville.

Miss Wright is one of the finest young ladies Junction ever had, so the Tribune has it, and surely her marriage to Mr. Perry will revolve into a happy companionship through life.

The happy couple left Stephenville for the return in their car and intended to make several stops along the route. The many good friends of Mr. Perry showered their congratulations upon him and Mrs. Perry on their short stay in the city and wish for them every success in life.—Stephenville Tribune.

TWO IRRIGATION PLANTS NEARING COMPLETION.

Dr. P. H. Rogers is in better spirits since the completion of his new irrigation plant on his farm south of town. He has a large well that goes below the level of the river for its supply of water. The water will be pumped out with centrifugal pump run by a six-horse power oil engine. The well is at the highest point on the land to be irrigated, thus eliminating any flumes or raised distributation ditches.

Sam Parker, in the east end of the county is completing a plant that will irrigate some five or six acres on which he expects to raise feed for use on his ranch. He is using a number three pump and running it with a Fordson Tractor.

LARGE COMMUNITY HALL TO BE BUILT AT LONDON.

The enterprising citizens of London are gathering funds for the building of a large hall, 60 by 60 feet, in which church, community meetings, school entertainments, etc., can be held.

The plan is to build it by public donation and the total cost is estimated at $1,500. R. L. McKinney, Mrs. Cummins and others were recently in Junction soliciting aid. Considerable assistance has also been secured at Menard.

To date, about $400 has been subscribed. The hall will be erected on the park in the northeast part of the town, and when completed will be a valuable asset to the community.

TODAY AND TOMORROW

Today the sky is blue—the wind blows fresh and cool;
Today the bird sings sweetly by the quiet pool.
Today the world is happy and all our lives are bright,
We work and play most joyously from morn 'til night.

The bird that sings tomorrows will say the year is old;
Tomorrow we are sad—life seems all wrong;
Tomorrow naught but sorrow's in our song.

But what care we for tomorrow when we have today?
Let us have beauty, song and happiness while we may,
And soon tomorrow with its mournful way
Will turn into another glorious today.

TECHNOLOGY BILL PASSES IN SENATE.

Austin, Jan 29.—By a vote of 24 to 5, one present and not voting, and one absent, the Bledsoe bill, creating the Texas Technology College, an institution of higher learning, to be located in the western part of Texas, was passed finally by the Senate Monday morning.

Two amendments were incorporated in the bill as passed finally. One was by Mr. Darwin specifying that the college shall be built within easy reach of the city selected for the location of the college, and the other was by Mr. Witt, providing that all the $150,000 appropriated for the building site not used for building purposes, be placed in a permanent improvement fund for the college. No other changes were made and it is practically the same bill as engrossed in the House.

As it stands, the bill calls for a total appropriation of $1,002,500, divided as follows: $150,000 for purchase of college site, $500,000 for buildings for the fiscal year 1923-24 and $350,000 for buildings for the fiscal year 1924-25. The only appropriation called for immediately is $2,500 to pay expenses of commission to locate site for the college.

Senator Darwin proposed an amendment to cut the total appropriation to $650,000 and to push forward the appropriation of $150,000 to buy land for the college and an appropriation of $500,000 to erect buildings. This amendment was tabled, however, by viva voce vote.

Senator Woods from Navarro was marked present but not voting.

Senator Woods from Williamson was absent.

Senator Bledsoe, author of the Senate bill, which originally called for creating a West Texas State College, to include agricultural and mechanical courses, but which was amended by incorporating provisions of the bill by Representative Carpenter of Dallas, to include technology, spoke at some length in favor of the bill as passed finally.

Senator Bledsoe informed the Senate that, rather than change the provisions of the bill to the limitations of a junior college, it was preferred that the bill be killed.

He declared that if the Legislature didn't grant West Texas' request at this session, the members from that section of the State would "come back again with a similiar request at each succeeding Legislature."

"West Texas pays her part of the taxes of the State," he said, "and she deserves recognition. I believe this college can be established without additional burden in taxation to the State. The present condition of the treasury has been brought about by the failure of some parts of the State to pay their portion of the taxes."

GOOD RAINS FALL OVER WEST TEXAS.

A steady rain, lasting several hours, began falling at Junction early Wednesday morning, and reports coming from all directions indicate a general rain over a large part of the Southwest. The rainfall at Junction was over an inch, while like amounts fell at Menard and as far south as the Live Oak ranch.

Rocksprings and Sonora got about one and one-half inches, while nearly two inches fell at San Angelo and along the railroad east of Brownwood. From the Live Oak ranch south the rain grew lighter, and is reported lighter towards Mason.

Wednesday's rain, following the precipitation of nearly one and one-half inches a week ago, breaks the drouth in this section, and followed by warm weather will insure a fine range, especially for sheep and goats. Farmers have been busy the past few weeks, preparing their ground for planting. These rains have placed a fair season in the ground and will be very beneficial to winter wheat and oats that have been needing rain badly.

While ranges have held up well this winter, many places have been heavily pastured, and the recent rains will put a new impetus in trading and the live stock industry in general, and will cause many more acres of land to be cultivated this year.

The rains will also greatly benefit the roads that were rapidly deteriorating on account of being so dry.

Judge Randolph, who has been away from the office for a few days on account of illness, is again able to be on the job.

HURDY GURDY FINANCE

Thereupon John Ames went out to see the proprietor of Wilks park. He found that gentleman nursing an eye the color of an egg plant.

"Hello, sport," greeted Wilks, placing Ames, after a fractional thought. "You see that Mud Creek gang got me."

"They that live by the fist shall die by the fist," grinned Ames. "How's business, Mr. Wilks?"

"Rotten, thank you," responded Wilks, in deep discouragement. "Saturday night's a riot and the rest of the week's a funeral."

"Let's make a big business out of it," suggested Ames cordially.

"The same dope you handed out before," laughed Wilks. "You know what I told you that time."

"I came out to talk definite business with you," said Ames, leading the way to the idle merry-go-round, and sitting in a scarlet chariot. "If I guarantee to increase your receipts, will you give me one-fourth of the net increase, for the next two years?"

"Would I take a twenty-dollar gold piece?" and Joe Wilks laughed, a process which made a tremendous difference in his face. "What kind of a guarantee are you talking about?"

"United States money," Ames quickly stated.

Joe Wilks, whose face was separated in two broad parts when he smiled, now performed that operation.

"Lead me to it," he directed.

"Of course there's a string to it," Ames continued. "You'll be given ten thousand dollars for improvements, on a loan of easy terms, and you will conduct the place as I say. If, at the end of next season, you haven't more than doubled your business, you may cancel your loan."

"Where do I get the money?" he wanted to know, with a lingering trace of suspicion.

"Peter G. Houston," said Ames.

"What's the first thing we do?" he inquired.

"Close down the plant," grinned Ames.

"Hey, You, Bill!" Roared Joe Wilks, "Turn Every Sucker Out and Lock the Gates!"

Chapter IV.

Looking up from the plans for a new roller coaster, Ames beheld two blue spots before his eyes.

"Good morning, Mr. Ames," sang the flute-like little voice of Maizie Houston.

"My daughter, Maizie, Mr. Ames," explained Peter G. Houston, with a laugh. "I hope she won't be in the road."

"If she is, we'll move the road," promised Joe, cutting his face in two. This was the first time he had seen Maizie since she had left the park forever.

"I won't be in the road at all, will I, Mr. Ames?" pleaded Maizie.

He laughed at her. Her childlike ingenuousness was refreshing.

"Not a particle," he gaily assured her. "How would you like to run the merry-go-round, all by yourself?"

"O-o-o-h!" and her voice died away in a delightful coo.

"We'll start the engine for you," promised Ames, and John Wilks ran to make himself useful.

"I'm afraid Maizie's spoiled, Mr. Ames," boasted her father, viewing her fondly, as she dashed over to the absurd little engine. "How's the lake coming on."

"Splendidly," answered Ames, leading the way over past the remains of the one-time switch-back. "The bridges for the canal are almost ready to set up, and I think that, by another week, we shall be able to turn the water in."

Houston, with a growing pride in the transformation they were effecting, walked all around the grounds, and smiled, with the return of childhood, as he inspected the gaudy "fronts" which rose on every hand.

"I saw the chief of police last night," he chuckled. "I won him over, at last."

They were passing the merry-go-round, when Houston reported this interesting fact. The little engine was hissing, and its shrill whistle was piping, while Maizie Houston stood proudly at the lever. The merry-go-round was whirling at top speed, and Joe Wilks sat astride the horse with the green tail.

"Oh, Mr. Ames! Oh, daddy!" cried Maizie, in her limpid voice, and stopped the engine with a jerk. "No, Joe; you mustn't climb down yet. Mr. Ames and daddy, pick out your horses. Take the outside ones, where I can see you, and don't sit close together."

"Mr. Ames is busy," protested her father.

"Oh, no he isn't; are you, Mr. Ames?" and her eyes had the softness of a summer evening sky.

"I've been wanting to ride that pink-striped horse ever since I've been here," solemnly declared Ames, rather shocked with himself and swung his long legs astride the wooden beast in question. "Come on, Houston. Take that intelligent racer with the freckles."

"Toot! Toot! Toot!" shrilled the screechy little whistle, and they were off, running slowly and smoothly, then at furious speed, then stopping abruptly, and seeking onward again, until John Ames, who had frequently crossed in stormy weather, recognized a certain familiar moistness in his mouth, and felt that he began to look green.

"Oh, I've had a lovely time!" announced Maizie, in parting. "I'm coming out often, may I?" and she took her round, blue eyes with her.

Chapter V.

There came another day. For the first time in a week, Maizie Houston, who had been general nuisance and obstruction, did not come. John Ames, superintending the construction of absurdly childish things for the amusement of grownups, missed the youngster seriously. She had been on every dangerous scaffolding in the park; she had dragged Joe Wilks and her father and himself through every uncomfortable experience which an active and ingenious mind could devise; she had brought back to John Ames the spirit of childhood itself, and, now, that the day wore on, and she did not come, he found himself more lonely than he could have imagined.

"Where's Maizie?" complained Joe Wilks, watching a carpenter nail on the eye of a gigantic dragon. "The place looks like a rainy day without her."

"Yes, don't it," agreed John. "She's a most fascinating child!"

"Child!" objected Joe. "She's eighteen. She was introduced into society last winter. She'll probably be married this year."

That was true! She was eighteen! She was, after all, a woman! John Ames went about his work mechanically. They were painting green griffins, and yellow unicorns, and red devils all around the park, but John Ames saw nothing but blue!

"Hello, John," cooed a soft little voice.

He jumped as if he had been struck, and turning, looked deep into the eyes which had haunted him all day. He clasped her hand, and knew the soft, warm tingle of it, and in that moment, he believed that his search was over.

Chapter VI.

It was Children's day at Playground park, formerly Joe Wilks'. That paradise of pleasure was to be formally opened on the following day, which was Saturday, but, on this occasion, there was to be no money taken at the gate.

As early in the day as 10 o'clock, Lemper's famous band came swinging down the re-named Pleasure avenue to the Playground park, followed by an elephant and two camels and a corps of police, and the contents of the orphans' home, and the city schools, by swarms, platoons, and streams, and the newsboys with their own band and then just children, miles of them!

GRAVE OF DEFENDER IN ADOBE WALLS FIGHT DISCOVERED AFTER LONG SEARCH.

Amarillo, Jan. 22.—After several years of search on the parts of pioneers and historical organizations, the grave of William Olds, one of the defenders of Adobe Walls in the historic battle of that name, has been found by Dodge City, Kansas, men, 48 years after his death.

The Texas Historical Society, one of the organizations which had tried for years to locate the grave, will bury Old's body in a park to be established on or near the location of the famous battlesite. It is in the Texas Panhandle territory, on a bank of the Canadian river.

Determined to locate the final resting place of their companion in battle, three Dodge men, Andy Johnson, one of the two survivors of the fight; Tom Stauth, who actually found the grave, and O. A. Bond, who probably saved his life by reaching Adobe Walls the day after the battle, went over the Canadian river foot by foot until they found the grave.

Strauth found a depression about 75 yards southeast of the Walls building. Twenty persons living in the neighborhood were present when the grave was opened. As the investigators dug down they came upon boards from a boot box which had been used by Andy Johnson in making a coffin for Olds. The Texas Historical Society has determined to establish a beautiful park at the spot and bury with the body of Olds the body of Billy Dixon, another man who fought in the battle. His body now is buried at Texline.

According to memoirs published by Mrs. Dixon, wife of Billy Dixon, Adobe Walls was built in 1874, when buffalo hunters at Dodge City, following the heavy slaughter of animals in 1872 and 1873, found that the game was growing scarce in the Dodge City territory. However, there was no market for the hides and what little meat was saved by the hunters, so several Dodge City men, who catered to the trade of the hunters, agreed to go on ahead into the then wild Southwest country and establish a camp, where the hunters could market the hides, the buyers freighting them to Dodge City for shipment over the Santa Fe.

The caravan which left Dodge City consisted of 30 wagons and 50 men, according to Mrs. Dixon's works. Camp was established and business became good. Instead of being grouped the buildings were built along a line, fronting on the east, with some degree of stockade protection, however.

Of the men who built Adobe Walls, "Bat" Masterson was the youngest and Billy Dixon, aged 26, was next, it is said. Masterson, one of the most heroic figures of the entire Southwest country, died only recently after a colorful career, known the Nation over.

The night of June 26, 1874, had been a merry one at Adobe Walls, according to Mrs. Dixon's writings, which she entitles, "The Life of Billy Dixon." When the 28 men and one woman, the wife of William Olds, retired, scarcely anything could have disturbed them. However, early in the morning hours, a long cottonwood pole which supported the roof of the Hanrahan saloon, broke with a sound which resembled the report of a rifle shot. Coming in the stillness of the early morning, it aroused about 15 men who hustled to repair the roof support before the roof collapsed and buried the inmates. By the time the repairs had been made, day was dawning.

Billy Dixon chanced to spy some dark objects near the camp which shortly afterward proved to be the advance guard of hundreds of Indians, war-painted and mounted on horses, preparing for a charge. Billy Ogg, the cook, had gone for some horses a quarter of a mile away and Andy Johnson was just preparing to go for his. Ogg, discovered the Indians just in time, tore back into camp and barely reached it in time.

Myers and Leonard store: Fred Leonard, James Campbell, Edward Trevor, Frank Brown, Harry Armitage, "Dutch Henry," Billy Taylor, Old man Keiler, Mike McCabe, Henry Lease and "Frenchy."

Two men, Ike and "Shorty" Shadler, freighters, were camped outside the Myers and Leonard stockade, and were killed by the charging Indians before they could get to safety. Ike would have reached safety but he missed his brother and ran back for him, both being picked off before they reached the building. The only other man killed was Billy Taylor. His grave also was located by the Dodge City men.

The men blocked the doors of the building with everything possible to keep the Indians from entering which would have meant death to all the defenders. Early in the battle the Indians were very daring and would back their horses against the doors in an effort to break them down.

The charges and other movements of the Indians were regulated precisely by bugle calls identical with those used in the United States army, according to "Bat" Masterson, as he is quoted in "The Life of Billy Dixon." However, the defenders were fortunate in having two former soldiers with them who were able to tell the next moves of the besiegers. The bugler was killed in the afternoon of the first day's fighting, but his identity was never established. The Indians were perfectly trained in following his signals.

The attacking band was composed of Cheyennes, Kiowas and Comanches. They persisted sporadically in attempting to batter down resistance, but their attempts finally died away, although the whites were afraid to believe for some time that the Indians had given up. The raid was said to have been undertaken after a Comanche medicine man told the warriors all they would have to do would be to knock the hunters in the head and that should any be awake his medicine would protect the Indians from his bullets. Except for the broken ridge pole at the saloon, his medicine might have worked perfectly.

After the fight Adobe Walls was abandoned as a trading post The next fall Indians made another raid, but finding the buildings deserted, distroyed them. earth mark the spot, and a wide ditch shows where the stockade ran. Another grave found at Adobe Walls is said to be that of a man named Huffman, killed by the Indians on the open prairie.

Brick Bond missed being killed only by a narrow margin, having halted some distance from the fort, while one of the Shadler boys went on to the fort to meet his brother—and his death. Finally, when Bond started on for the fort on June 28th, his wagon stuck in the bed of a creek and he was delayed until the battle was over.

When he finally reached the fort he was greeted by the shouts of the whites and the gruesome sight of a large number of Indian heads, each one stuck upright on a stake of the stockade.

Closed Season for Bass And Crappie This Spring

According to advices received from W. W. Boyd, State Game, Fish and Oyster Commissioner, there will be a closed season for bass and crappie at Medina Lake and other fresh water streams and lakes of Texas during the months of March and April of the present year.

Heretofore, fishing for bass and crappie with live bait has been permitted at Medina Lake during March and April, but fishing with artificial bait during these months has been barred. The purpose of the law is to allow the fish an opportunity to spawn, and its enforcement meets with the hearty approval of most sportsmen, as they believe that the result will be to greatly increase the supply of fish.

The question of a closed season of two months on fishing at Medina Lake was raised a few days ago by several of the wharf owners at that popular resort, who had heard a rumor to the effect that no form of fishing for bass or crappie would be allowed there during March and April, and they requested the deputy at the lake to ascertain the correctness of the rumor.

The deputy sent a letter of inquiry to Commissioner Boyd, and in Wednesday's mail John Sneed, deputy commissioner at Medina Lake, received the following reply:

"I refer you to page 48 of the fish and oyster laws, which makes it unlawful to take crappie or bass from the public waters of this State from the first day of March to the first day of May each year. Yours very truly, W. W. Boyd, "Commssioner"

Article 872a, to which the foregoing reference is made, provides: "It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation, or their agents, to take, catch, seine, entrap by any means, or have in their possession any crappie or bass taken from any public fresh waters of this State from the first day of March to the first day of May of any year." The usual penalty for violation is provided.—San Antonio Express.

World Wool Market Strong Sales Bringing Good Prices.

A stronger tone continues in the wool markets, both here and abroad. Better prices were obtained during the week at auction sales in Australia and New Zealand, where the American competition was a factor. Sales in this country are on a high basis and there is a marked tendency toward speculation in desired kinds of wool. Predictions are made by the Department of Agriculture of a large increase in the number of sheep and lambs. A short time ago before the enactment of the present tariff, the same department in an estimate cut off about 20 er cent of the sheep of the country with one stroke of the pen. Now the estimate is for a 20 per cent increase. But, side by side with this, comes a tabulated statement showing much higher prices for sheep and lambs for meat purposes instead of wool.

In woolens the main topic of interest is the guessing of what the prices of fabrics for Fall will be. The principal factor is expected to announce in figures within about a week. Estimates vary up to a 20 per cent increase and it seems to be taken for granted that the highest percentage of advance will be on the cheaper fabrics. Overcoats continue to sell. More will be heard of dress fabrics after the meeting of the jobbers to these goods this week. Cotton manufacturers report a good Spring business thus far, with expected reorders yet in view.—New York Times.

Blind Beggar Travels in Big Six Cylinder Buick.

It is said that "a sucker is born every minute," and the present horde of beggars that infest Texas goes a long way towards proving the statement.

On a recent Saturday morning a blind man stood on a certain corner in the business district, singing, while his two "daughters," apparently aged about 14 to 18 years, passed tin cups around for alms. As usual in such cases they received any number of contributions. They worked fast and did not overlook anyone.

H. H. Turner, Post Adjutant of the local Post, American Legion, recognized the blind man as one he'd seen at "beggars' headquarters" in San Antonio. When approached by the elder girl, Mr. Turner, instead of contributing, asked her several questions, one of which was why was it necessary for a girl of her apparent age and good health to beg. Instead of answering him she left the store where the incident occurred and hastened back to the corner where the blind man and the other girl were. Mr. Turner followed and observed the ensuing conference held by the trio, all three of whom immediately left the business section and proceeded west on Cameron street. Mr. Turner followed them as far as the city hall and noted that they joined a healthy young man who was seated in a big Buick Six parked on the side street near The Reporter office. All three entered the car, the young man stepped on the starter, and the quartette left town to try their luck in some other town where the picking might be better.

Beggars traveling in six-cylinder automobiles ought to be investigated. In fact, in this day it might be a good idea to investigate any beggar before contributing too liberally toward his support.—Rockdale Reporter —that you can hardly begin talking tires these days without someone telling you exactly why a tire with a wider and thicker tread will give more mileage.

GATES TIRES
The Tire with the Wider and Thicker Tread

YOU'VE NOTICED THIS TOO—

It's only really big ideas that have simplicity enough about them to get across like that.

A wired and thicker tread—more rubber to wear, better protection for the inside fabric—that's the big, simple idea that is giving 500,000 motorists extra mileage from Gates Super-Tread Tires.

BIBLE THOUGHT —FOR TODAY—

Bible Thoughts memorized, will prove a priceless heritage in after years.

Safeguarded:—He shall give His angels charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy ways.—Psalms 91:11.

Editor Rountree of the Bryan Eagle, who represents his District in the Legislature, has introduced a bill to provide for the making of surveys, maps, etc., of the rivers of the State. The bill was engrossed in the House and if finally passed will mean more to the counties of the State having running streams, than any legislation that could be enacted by this or any other legislature.

There are hundreds of places in the State lying along rivers that overflow, that could be protected and made to produce enormous crops, should levees be built, and likewise, there are many sections of the country such as our own, where a survey will give the people information as to the feasibility of damming the rivers for irrigation purposes. In this county alone a system of dams along the streams would double the production and probably the taxable valuation of the county. The passage of such a bill will be a long step forward in the progress of the State.

In last week's paper we meant to make a correction in the account of the O. B. Fleming Birthday Celebration. Inadvertantly, the names of Judge Randolph, W. P. Riley, C. T. Holekamp and C. W. Atchison were omitted from the list of guests. These gentlemen were there, strong, and enjoyed the hospitality of Uncle Bud, along with the others mentioned in the issue of the 19th. They accuse the editor of making the mistake because it happened just previous to his getting married, but for the benefit of the men whose wives might check up on them, the editor will vouch for the fact that they were there.

We are printing another article from the Rockdale Reporter, anent the work of professional beggars. It will be of interest to people here for we are having more and more of that class of irresponsibles as the highway and transportation facilities improve. It often happens here, as well as in other towns, that some beggar will spend a few hours here and collect more money than an honest working man can earn in a month, and at the same time, there are cases right here in the town that are in every way as deserving, that merit the help of local people.

Notice to Mason Co. Stockmen.

In view of the fact a bill is being prepared for presentation to our Legislature which, if passed, would do away with the present Livestock Sanitary Commission, and would stop the tick eradication work in this State, and if such condition should exist it would greatly injure the stock raising industry, I believe that a united effort should be made to prevent the bill's passage.

Therefore, I ask all the stockmen of Mason County to meet at the court house in Mason next Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock for the purpose of taking some action. J. W. White.

Perhaps the above refers to the bill introduced by Representative Stewart of this District. Daily paper reports are to the effect that Representative Stewart introduced a bill to abolish the Commission, but that the bill came out of the committee with an adverse report, there being three favoring the bill, while eight opposed it. It is doubtless the fact that the present Legislature is similar to the previous one, and if so, such a bill will meet with little favor in the house, even should it be brought out on a minority report from the committee. It must have been a source of original information to Representative Stewart when Chairman Boog-Scott informed him of the fact that there was not a county in his district that was not already above the quarantine line. Whether this bill was introduced for the purpose of extending aid to east Texas counties, like Cass who wade wholesale efforts to blow up vats, necessitating the sending of State Rangers into the county, or to protect the ten cows at Barksdale, that are now quarantined, is a question in our mind. At any rate, the cattlemen of the country are fully cognizant of the great value of the Livestock Sanitary Commission and as is the case with Mason County stockmen, they will rise in protest over the State, to any bill that would repeal the present tick law.

STATE CAPITAL NEWS

From The Austin Statesma:

Text Book Bill to Abrogate Awards is Engrossed.

At all times having a brutal majority, opponents of the recent $1,800,000 textbook award of Governor Pat M. Neff's commission, led by W. E. Pope of Nueces, Wednesday night engrossed the bill of which he is the author, which seeks to nullify the contract with the American Book Company for the new books.

Under the terms of Pope's bill, all books in use on December 1, 1922, under contracts in existence on said date or under any extension of such contracts, shall be continued in use as textbooks to the exclusion of all others in public free schools of this State for a period of three years from and after December 1, 1922.

The new contract was made on December 14, 1922. The bill simply keeps in effect the old contract.

The vote engrossing the bill was viva voce, but on a number of record votes the proponents of the bill had majorities of from 40 to 50 votes, the ballots running 80 and 90 to 30 and 40.

Pope viciously attacked the award. He claimed that the Texas State Textbook Commission, of which Governor Neff is chairman, had adopted a contract entailing an expenditure of $1,800,000 in behalf of a company owned by Truman H. Newberry, who was "all but expelled from the United States Senate.

Pope brought up the bill by unanimous consent. After he had spoken for an hour the first vote came for the motion for postponement and it was overwhelmingly against postponement, and from the engrossment of the bill became a matter of certainty.

Pope lacked but few votes of having the necessary four-fifths for a suspension of the constitutional rule, so the bill could be finally adopted Wednesday.

One of the new geographies adopted by the textbook commission, he said, did not have a map "from back to back" and not a country is mentioned for the first "90 pages." The geographies displaced are both copyrighted in 1922, he said, and contain even maps showing the present status of Ireland, while the new geographies as adopted were copyrighted 1920, and had not been brought down to date.

Flood Control is First Constructive Bill to be Fought.

The first of the major measures to receive consideration in the house of representatives and on which there was a lineup along the lines of liberals and retrenchers was the reclamation and conservation bill by Rountree, engrossed by a vote of 76 to 48 Friday afternoon. This vote presages a liberal policy in the house, contrary to the policy that dominated in the last session of the 37th Legislature. The bill by Rountree of Brazos, provides for an appropriation of $200,000 annually for two years to the State Board of water engineers, and $100,000 to the State reclamation engineer for the purpose of making surveys, preparing maps and gathering data on a plan to build reservoirs and dams at the heads of Texas streams and to build levees and other flood protection on the lower parts of the streams. For two years from September 1, 1923, the amount would be $600,000. Opposition to the bill was based on the lack of funds

In opening debate on the bill Mr. Rountree recited the damage done by flood waters of the Texas streams ,and called attention to the value that extensive irrigation pojects would be to the State. Representative Looney characterized the bill as visionary and said that it would be impossible to harness the flood waters. Hardin of Kaufman, said it was a "pork barrel" bill planned to provide money for civil engineers to spend. Shires of McLennan, said that in 1921 floods did a damage of $26,000,000 in Texas and that the taxes on this amount would be sufficient to rase the $600,000 needed to carry on the work.

After considerable debate in which a preponderance of new members did the talking against the bill, it was ordered engrossed and now on the calendar for final passage. The debate in the house lasted for three hours and was the first clash on a constructive legislative program for Texas.

Neff Gets Kerrville Independent School District Bill

The bill creating the Kerrville Independent School District which had passed both branches of the Legislature, reached the Governor's office Monday.

It probably will be approved within the next few days.

Proposed Repeal of Open Port Bill is Killed in Committee.

Senator Burkett's bill proposing the repeal of the open port law will be reported unfavorably by both the Senate and House committees as a result of votes taken late Wednesday. Minority reports favoring the bill will be made out of both committees, however, it is announced. The vote in the Senate committee was 3 to 2 and in the House committee 13 to 3 to report the bill unfavorably. The action followed a joint hearing conducted by the two committees.

Peddy to File Protest in Senate.

Dallas, Jan. 26.—George E. B. Peddy, defeated candidate of the fusionist forces of Texas for United States Senate last November, will personally file a protest against the seating of Earle B. Mayfield, Senator-elect, with the Senate before March 4, it was said here Friday. Peddy was in Dallas conferring with Luther Nichols. It was said Peddy had been selected to file the protest before Mayfield is seated because he was and is an interested party.

The protest has been prepared and a copy of it is in the office of Luther Nickels. It is said to be voluminous and recites charges at various hearings and injunctions and claims irregularities in the balloting.

It had been generally supposed that Mayfield would be allowed to take his seat on or immediately after March 4, and the protest, contesting the right to sit in the Senate, would be filed later. The action of Nickels in deciding to file the protest before March 4 was a surprise to many Peddy supporters.

"Taxes" Will Never be Popular.

"Taxes" had its origin during the cruel days of lords and vassals. It was exacted from the vassals that the lords might use it in paying his own personal expenses, and for the purpose of promoting his own personal ambitions; more, it was used to keep the vassals in vassalage.

Many hundreds of years of tax-paying came and went before the idea of "the general welfare" crept in as a governmental function.

"Taxes" denotes oppression, tyranny, degredation, serfdom, and really should have gone into limbo along with its progenitors.

It is a misnomer to call the money that we contribute of own accord towards promoting the general welfare "taxes."

It is an investment.

There is not a single tax we pay that we did not agree should be paid that the general welfare might be promoted.

Yet, as long as we call our investment in the promotion of the general welfare "taxes" men are going to resent it and hate it.

We propose that some statesman coin a new term. We suggest "investment."—Texas Commercial News.

Utterances of Two Governors.

"I thank God that there are no free schools nor printing presses, and hope we shall not have them these hundred years; for learning has brought disobedience and heresy and sects into the world."

Governor today says:

"Every child in Texas, from the poorest to the richest, is entitled to a fair education. Not only is every child entitled to it, but the State must see that the child has it."

Governor Neff is growing in favor with the people of Texas because of his come-back powers. And one of the wisest statements he has made was uttered at Floresville, when he said:

"In the administration of the law, I am for the court house, its judgments, and its decrees. It is the one tribunal whose sole function is to make life sacred and property secure."—Texas Commercial News.

West Texas Fair Dates to be Arranged by Abilene Meeting.

There will be a meeting of the association of West Texas Commercial Clubs at Abilene, January 26, which is Friday of this week, and the clubs will be guests of the Abilene Chamber of Commerce. An interesting program has been prepared and the indications are that the attendance will be very large. The object of the Abilene meeting is to arrange the dates for holding the various fairs in West Texas next autumn in such way that there may be no conflicts. Brownwood will be represented at the Abilene meeting as Brown County proposes to have an industrial exhibit of considerable magnitude sometime in November or December. The matter was discussed last year but owing to the fact that the program was started too late it was thought best to defer the fair until this year, when efforts will be directed toward making the institution permanent.—Brownwood Banner-Bulletin.

Time Nothing to Him.

A local colored man was ambling along on West Harris Avenue past the Tom Green County jail the other day. From a barred window high up in the structure came the voice of a member of his own race. "Say, nigger," called the unseen speaker. The pedestrian halted and faced about. "What you want?" he asked. "I wants to ax you a question," said the invisible prisoner. "Well, ax it; I'se listenin'." "Is you got a watch on you?" Suttinly I's got a watch on me." "Well, den, whut time is it?" "Whut is time to you?" answered the negro in the street, without making any move to bring forth his watch. "You ain't fixin' to go nowhere!"—Hornish's Monthly.

"Feeling Fine!"

"I was pale and thin, hardly able to go," says Mrs. Bessie Bearden, of Central, S. C. "I would suffer, when I stood on my feet, with bearing-down pains in my sides and the lower part of my body. I did not rest well and didn't want anything to eat. My color was bad and I felt miserable. A friend of mine told me of and I then remembered my mother used to take it. . . After the first bottle I was better. I began to fleshen up and I regained my strength and good, healthy color. I am feeling fine. I took twelve bottles (of Cardui) and haven't had a bit of trouble since."

Thousands of other women have had similar experiences in the use of Cardui, which has brought relief where other medicines had failed.

If you suffer from female ailments, take Cardui. It is a woman's medicine. It may be just what you need.

U. S. PLANS OPEN PROBE OF KLAN ACTIVITIES IN FIVE SOUTHERN STATES

New Orleans, Jan. 27.—The Federal Government at Washington is reported here Saturday night on good authority, to be about ready to commence openly a most searching investigation of its own into the activities of the Ku Klux Klan.

This probe is to be centered in the States of the South, Georgia, Arkansas, Texas, Louisiana, and Alabama.

The Federal agents have already been dispatched to Dallas, Little Rock, Atlanta and Birmingham. Some of the operatives who have been at work on the Morehouse Parish atrocity, will remain here to investigate the situation, from the Federal standpoint, existing in Louisiana

A. E. Farland, chief of the Federal staff, which did the work at Bastrop and Mer Rouge was in New Orleans a few hours Saturday, following a most important conference at Baton Rouge with Gov. John M. Parker. He was accompanied by his chief aide, James Rooney.

They are ready to present to officials of the Department of Justice at Washington, some very startling documentary evidence bearing on the activities of the "invisible empire" thruout the Southwest.

Portions of this evidence was presented to the Federal operatives by Gov. Parker. The remainder has been developed by the government men from leads secured while they were investigating the situation in Morehouse Parish.

The evidence already gathered, according to Gov. Parker, reveals violation of the Federal statutes, of the most startling character. It is alleged to establish the following facts:

That a special membership campaign is now being conducted by the Klan among railway mail clerks and postmasters throughout the entire Southwest Evidence in the hands of operatives, it is said, tends to show that mail already has been tampered with.

That a similar campaign is being conducted by Klan emissaries among the telegraph operators in five states for the purpose of tapping at first hand this source of information.

That the same character of activity is being conducted throughout the telephone offices of the Southwest.

That attempts have been made to enroll newspaper men on the Klan roster in an effort to control news sources, and the publication of news, as well as editorial matter.

Attorney General A. V. Coco is still at his home at Marksville, but one of his assistants, T. Semmes Walmsley, Saturday night confirmed the fact that evidence of the Klan activities, as outlined, had been placed in the hands of Federal authorities

Attorney General Coco is expected to reach his office here Monday. He will commence at once the formal conferences at which will be outlined the future plans of the State in the prosecution of the Morehouse Parish cases.

According to present plans he will confer with Gov. Parker at Baton Rouge, the middle of the week.

FOR YOUR SOLITUDE.

A successful man is one who has tried, not cried; who has worked, not dodged; who has shouldered responsibility, not evaded it; who has gotten under the burden, not merely stood off, looking on, giving advice and philosophizing on the situation. The result of a man's work is not the measure of success. To go down with the ship in storm and tempest is better than to paddle away to Paradise in an Orthodox canoe. To have worked is to have succeeded—we leave the results to time

DAM BEING BUILT ACROSS GENTRY.

Baker, Cowsert and Moore are constructing a dam across the Gentry creek, just below the house that was formerly the headquarters of the old L. C. ranch, some ten or twelve miles northeast of Junction. The dam is about 75 feet long and 4½ feet high, and will make a fine little lake several hundred yards long and insure a permanent and adequate water supply on this fine ranch property.

While J. A. Cowsert has been on the Baker, Cowsert & Moore ranch looking after the construction of the dam across Gentry, Uncle Ad. Murr has been having a hard time holding down his job, and keeping the domino players up to full strength.

DR. GAMBRELL IS DEAD AT EL PASO, TEXAS.

Dallas, Jan. 30.—Dr. J. H. Gambrell, who died at El Paso today, was one of the pioneer prohibitionists of Texas. He was born in Pippa County, Mississippi, 68 years ago, and after serving as a Baptist minister near his birth place became connected with the Baptist Record, published at Jackson, Mississippi. He served as pastor of churches at Brook Haven and Greenborough, Miss., before coming to Texas as a minister at Tyler.

Later, he came to Dallas and until four years ago was president of the Texas Anti-Saloon League. He was known in many parts of the South by reason of his fight against the liquor business.

Dr. Gambrell was a brother of the late Dr. J. B. Gambrell, at one time president of the Southern Baptist convention.

The funeral service will be held at the Ross Avenue Baptist Church in Dallas at 10 o'clock Thursday morning.

Preparing a Seed Bed

IT WOULD be foolish for a contractor to undertake to construct a building without first securing the material.

IT WOULD Be just as foolish for a farmer to undertake to plant a crop without first securing a good grade of seed and having a well prepared seed bed.

THOSE FARMERS Who are going ahead now and preparing for the planting season, will reap the reward of their timely work when harvest time comes.

MAKE YOUR Preparations now. See about getting your seed. Get your ground in order, and one thing more—plant just a little more feedstuff than you originally planned—You'll need it, or will find a sale for your surplus.

WE WANT TO HELP YOU!
