Restoring power

Texas Electric Service Company employees work from a distance to repair downed power lines Friday on Loop 250 West following an accident involving a semi tractor-trailer. About 744 Midlanders were without power for the 36-minute period while workers repaired the lines and the main feeder, company officials reported.

Bus careens off road, plunges into icy river

WALKER, Calif. (AP) — A tour bus carrying residents of a retirement home careened at high speed off a twisting mountain road and plunged into an icy, swift-running river Friday, killing 19 people and injuring 22, authorities said.

The death toll made it the worst U.S. bus crash in nearly six years.

The bus, bringing passengers back to Santa Monica, Calif., after four-day outing to Reno, Nev., was 90 miles southeast of Reno on U.S. 395 at 10:30 a.m. PDT when it bounced off a fence and plunged down a 15-foot embankment into the West Fork of the Walker River.

It flipped over and then lodged upright on rocks with its rear ripped apart in a few feet of racing water, the California Highway Patrol said. The river is near flood stage and seven feet deep in some spots.

Some of the bodies were found 15 miles downstream from the scene of the accident, said CHP Officer Mike Slappey. Divers searched for more than seven hours after the accident before all passengers were accounted for.

Woman wants heroic kin honored

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Joyce Avery Moore says she feels like champagne is running through her veins since the discovery a few weeks ago of another possible hero — a relative — in the 1836 battle of the Alamo.

Mrs. Moore, of Canyon Lake, and Helen Pettit of Odessa, announced earlier this week they had uncovered historical evidence of a 189th defender who died in the famous massacre.

The 189th man, they say, was Washington Curtis, a distant uncle of both of the women.

"I am very, very pleased that we found what we found," Mrs. Moore said Friday. "I absolutely believe it myself. But we want verification."

Mrs. Moore and Mrs. Pettit, both members of the Daughters of the Republic of Texas, have turned over their evidence to the Alamo Committee of the DRT. The committee is researching the documentation and will make a recommendation to the state DRT board, which meets next in September.

If the state board verifies the find, the DRT will add Curtis' name to the official list of men who died in the historic battle against the Mexican army.

"From what I have seen, it looks awfully good," said Edith Mae Johnson, chairman of the Alamo Committee.

Mrs. Moore said she began research on her family tree about four years ago. In her study, she said she and Mrs. Pettit discovered a common ancestry and that Washington Curtis was a distant uncle of both of them.

But they became curious about him when they could find no record of his existence after the battle of the Alamo.

Records showed Curtis had come to Texas from Alabama with his widowed father and six brothers and sisters in 1823. He obtained a 550-acre land grant in Bastrop County in 1831 and had 65 head of cattle, Mrs. Moore said.

In early 1836, when Curtis was 31, a band of about a dozen men from Bastrop County went to the Alamo, responding to a call for reinforcements from Alamo commander Col. William Travis.

Curtis was not among those who went, but Mrs. Moore said she believes he followed them a day or two later after he found someone to watch his property.

Mrs. Moore said she became convinced Curtis fought and died at the Alamo when she read a historical account of the battle at San Jacinto, where Texas defeated Mexico.

In the account she read, written by J. Frank Dobie, Curtis' father James Curtis is quoted as saying he fought at San Jacinto because the Mexicans "killed my son and son-in-law in the Alamo."

Curtis' son-in-law George Washington Cottle is among the official Alamo dead.

Mrs. Moore said there are records of the existence of James Curtis' other sons after 1836, but not of Washington Curtis.

"I was extremely surprised" at the discovery, which she made May 5 at the state archives in Austin, she said.

Mrs. Pettit, she said, had suspected for some time Washington Curtis had died at the Alamo.

County commissioner hopefuls line up for verbal duel

Wally Craig

Guy McCrary

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The two Midland County commissioner candidates lined up for a verbal duel.

It was a stalemate.

One told of what had been done during his tenure. The rival suggested what could be done under decisive leadership.

Midland County Commissioner C. Wallace "Wally" Craig, 62, cited achievements of the Midland County Commissioners' Court during his 3½ years on the Court and pledged no additional tax burden on the taxpayers.

"I have committed myself to no tax increase this year," Craig said.

Guy McCrary, the 32-year-old marketing consultant who is seeking the Republican Party nomination in next Saturday's runoff elections by defeating Craig, suggested that decisive leadership could lead to more efficient government.

The candidates spoke in the Friday noon meeting of the Midland Jaycees at the Midland Hilton.

McCrary noted the slogan, "Lead, follow, or get out of the way," and said that it is applicable to community projects and government — "particularly local government."

He and Craig, a real-estate broker, were pitted into a runoff after they finished first and second, respectively, in the three-way race for the Republican Party nomination in the May 3 primary elections. The defeated candidate, Milton Rister, 35, has endorsed Craig because of "his firm stand to hold down taxes in county government" and because of his stance on a one-jail concept as opposed to a three-jail concept proposed by McCrary.

WINNER OF THE election will challenge Democrat Don Boystun, a 39-year-old design technician, in the Nov. 4 general elections for commissioner of Precinct 2.

McCrary said Craig has exhibited "neither leadership nor followership" in the job. "What I have observed was complacency, indecision and inaction."

State's shortfall could reach $2 billion, Bullock says

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The state's revenue shortfall could reach $2 billion by Aug., 31, 1987, Comptroller Bob Bullock told an unprecedented out-of-session gathering of the Texas House of Representatives Friday.

Calling tax increases "the last resort," House Speaker Gib Lewis responded by ordering his budget writers to take another unusual step. Lewis directed the 29-member House Appropriations Committee to convene next month in a "mini-special session" and recommend enough budget cuts to overcome the shortfall.

Jim Oliver, director of the Legislative Budget Board, told the lawmakers that if they want to continue spending at current rates for the 1988-1989 biennium, they will have to find an extra $3.5 billion in revenues. Again rejecting a tax increase, Lewis told the Appropriations Committee to get an early start on preparing a 1988-1989 budget that will fit the available money.

"I expect the work to be completed in late November or early December for introduction on the first day of the 70th session," Lewis said in his marching orders.

Bullock told the House that although declining oil prices created the current fiscal crunch, a rebound to $30-a-barrel oil won't solve it. "Oil would have to go substantially higher than it was prior to the decline, and stay there for the next two years, just to put Texas back where we were before the decline started," he said.

In March, the comptroller first announced a possible $1.3 billion shortfall for the 1988-1989 biennium. He told the House Friday that oil prices remain too unstable for him to offer a firm revision of that estimate.

"Today I will stick with that $1.3 billion figure, but only as a minimum," Bullock said. "Don't be surprised, however, if that shortfall reaches the $2 billion range."

House leaders seemed to accept Bullock's figures but reject his suggestion that the state expand its tax base and lower tax rates, which could still raise additional revenues if necessary.

'Push has come to shove' over budget

By GARY RASP

AUSTIN — After listening to state leaders' warnings of gloom and doom Friday, Midland lawmakers agreed that Texas' ailing economy could make the coming session of the Legislature one of the toughest ever.

"Push has now come to shove," said Brownfield Rep. Jim Rudd, chairman of the powerful House Appropriations Committee. "It's going to be tough."

Rudd and other Midland-area legislators agree the budget will have to be cut even closer to the bone in order to balance the state's books. As expected, none of them would say whether a tax increase will be necessary to meet the state's growing demand for services.

"I think we need to cut everywhere and everything we can before we look at any new tax revenues," said Midland Rep. Tom Craddick, "and I'm not sure we've done that."

Craddick, a Republican, said Friday's special meeting of House members did not brighten an already dark budget picture. "From what I'm seeing, it looks like we're doing a little bit worse than I thought we were," he said.

Odessa Rep. Kelly Godwin, who is not running for re-election in November, said there is "a tremendous amount of fat" remaining in the state's budget. He too dismissed the need for higher taxes or fees.

Officials to hear twirler's appeal

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Huntsville school officials have voted to hear an appeal by a high school sophomore twirling champion who was barred from participating in twirler tryouts last week because of a disciplinary infraction.

The city's school board reversed an earlier decision Thursday and decided to hear Pollianne Decker's appeal, hours before officials were to defend their actions in state district court.

Miss Decker and her mother, Bonnie, have filed suit against the Huntsville Independent School District, contending the 15-year-old girl was unfairly banned from the tryouts.

Last fall, Miss Decker, who is this year's state baton twirling champion, was accused of sipping an alcoholic drink while on a band bus.

Dairy recalls products, closes for remodeling

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas dairy plant that recalled some of its products from Texas stores this week after health inspectors found potentially harmful bacteria at the dairy will spend $500,000 for remodeling, a company spokesman said Friday.

Schepps Dairy issued a voluntary recall Thursday and closed the company's central processing plant in Dallas, hours after state health officials recommended it.

"The remodeling will further enhance (the plant's) ability to prevent a recurrence of the problem experienced earlier this week," said David Marguiles, a Schepps Dairy Inc. spokesman.

Isolated samples of the bacteria were found at the plant and in two unpasteurized milk samples at two of the 204 dairy farms that supply Schepps, said Kirmon Smith, director of milk and dairy products for the Texas Department of Health.

The bacteria — Listeria monocytogenes — is the same growth that contaminated California-made cheese last year and killed 60 people.

Schepps spokesman Stu Gibson said Thursday the plant was being sanitized and probably would open around noon Friday. Instead, officials decided to remodel the plant, delaying the plant reopening.

The state health department began the intensive contamination investigation at the plant April 24 after a sample of chocolate milk tested in early April was found to be tainted with bacteria.

"No contamination was ever found in the milk. It was found around the machines, on the floor. Not in the milk itself."

— David Marguiles of Schepps Dairy

No illnesses have been reported, and health officials said there was no indication the bacteria — which can cause fever or diarrhea in mild cases or death in high concentrations — was present in any Schepps products on store shelves in Texas.

Milk sold in San Antonio and Austin under Schepp's name is bottled in San Antonio and was unaffected, Marguiles said.

"No contamination was ever found in the milk. It was found around the machines, on the floor. Not in the milk itself." Marguiles said.

Schepps voluntarily recalled all cartons of milk with an expiration date of June 8 or earlier, but the company is not advising consumers to return or dispose of milk already purchased, Gibson said.

The Schepps plant supplies some convenience stores, hotels, restaurants and schools in the Dallas-Fort Worth area and Houston, Gibson said. He said he did not know which business and schools specifically carried Schepps milk.

TUEC files suit against Comanche Peak partners

DALLAS (AP) — The principal partner in the Comanche Peak nuclear power plant filed suit against three minority partners, saying negotiations with them had reached an impasse.

Texas Utilities Electric Company asked in the suit filed in state district court that the three be forced to uphold the contract and continue making payments to the project.

The three are Texas Municipal Power Agency, which owns 6.2 percent; Brazos Electric Power Cooperative Inc., 3.8 percent; and Tex-La Electric Cooperative of Texas Inc., 2.2 percent.

All three are searching for ways to bail out of the troubled nuclear project near Glen Rose or limit their financial involvement, The Dallas Morning News reported Friday.

One minority partner owed more than $20 million after it stopped making payments a year ago, another said last week it will make no more payments and the third owner voted Thursday to hire a Houston law firm to determine if it is possible to withdraw from the project and have its money refunded.

Texas Utilities spokesman Dick Ramsey said the suit was filed Thursday because "it's obvious" that negotiations among the partners had reached an impasse.

"While the particular situation is different with each one of them, they have all raised questions over their obligations under the contract and our performance under the agreement, which we are asking the court to resolve," Ramsey said.

"It is our belief that we have a valid agreement and that we have performed properly under that agreement."

The board of directors of Texas Municipal, headquartered in Waco, voted unanimously Thursday to hire Fulbright & Jaworski to investigate construction and licensing delays at Comanche Peak.

The law firm will also try to determine the contractual obligations of the agency, whose members include the cities of Bryan, Denton, Garland and Greenville.

Nacogdoches-based Tex-La defaulted on $800,000 in payments last year, but repaid the amount in April 1985. In a May 20 letter received last week, however, Ramsey said Tex-La officials formally notified TUEC that it would make no more payments.

Waco-based Brazos stopped making payments in May 1985 and owes Texas Utilities more than $20 million, Ramsey said.

The TUEC suit states that one or more of the minority owners have charged that TUEC has failed to act with due diligence, to complete construction timely, to employ prudent utility practices and to perform in a workman-like manner.

He said TUEC has denied all charges.

Comanche Peak was originally estimated in 1974 to cost $779 million. The latest estimate of $5.46 billion, issued in January, was abandoned in April because of the number of safety problems being found by a re-inspection at the plant.

State law could help block nuclear dump site

By GARY RASP
Reporter-Telegram
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — State law requiring a Texas Water Commission permit before drilling through underground water supplies could help block efforts to store high-level nuclear waste in the Panhandle, officials said Friday.

Canyon Sen. Bill Sarpalius, author of the 1983 bill calling for the permit, said he does not expect the U.S. Department of Energy to honor the requirement.

"If they start drilling anywhere near the Ogallala (aquifer) without a permit, I'll start hollering for a suit," Sarpalius said. "If they drill without a permit, they'll be making a mockery of states' rights."

Thursday the DOE formally named a Deaf Smith County site as one of three potential locations for the nation's first high-level waste repository. Other possible locations are in Nevada and Washington.

Within a year or so, the department will begin comprehensive geologic and hydrologic studies at all of the sites, including Panhandle salt beds. Those "site characterizations" will take at least four years to complete, and is expected to cost the DOE about $3 billion.

Energy Department spokesman Jeff Neff said the agency fully intends to abide by laws in each of the states selected as potential sites for the waste dump.

"There will be a process of cooperating with the states," Neff said Friday, adding that the DOE "plans to obey the laws of the land."

Texas officials have repeatedly expressed their opposition to the repository in Deaf Smith County, one of the state's most productive agricultural regions.

"In 1983, we suspected DOE might name a Panhandle site as one of the three finalists," Sarpalius said in a prepared statement. "We passed (the law requiring a permit) to make sure Texas had a stay in the testing process."

Water Commissioner Ralph Roming said he is not certain storage of the waste will not contaminate the Ogallala, a vast underground lake that provides drinking water to thousands of people from Texas to the Dakotas.

"I can't speak for the other commissioners, but DOE will have to present an extremely strong case before they convince me they can guarantee the Ogallala's safety," Roming said. "It just doesn't make any sense to me to potentially contaminate the world's largest aquifer."

BUS

Mono County Sheriff's Department investigator John Daniels said the accident apparently was caused by excessive speed and no other vehicles were involved.

The CHP initially reported that 49 were aboard, but patrol dispatcher Bob Storar later said only 41 people were on the bus. Storar also put the death toll at 19.

"There were bodies all over the place," said Alex McEwan, owner of the nearby Mountain Gate Lodge, who helped remove the victims. "I believe quite a few got washed out through the back when the windows popped out. A couple of the people we carried out died at the side of the road."

One of the passengers, Valerie Webb, said she was hurled into the aisle when the bus crashed, and saw her husband, Buster, tossed out a window as people fell on top of her.

"He went out the window and I thought he was floating down the river," she said. "It was horrible not knowing where he was." Webb later turned up among the survivors.

Another passenger, Bob Roesger, said he had been unable to locate his wife.

"I tried to do the best I could," he said. "I don't know where she is."

Rescue workers and all available ambulances and helicopters within 50 miles rushed to the scene, eight miles south of Walker in the Sierra Nevada.

"You just don't know which way a body will go in that stuff," Daniels said. "If they were to hit a rock, there's no telling where they might wind up."

The 22 injured were taken to six hospitals in Reno and Carson City, Nev., and Bridgeport, Mammoth and Bishop, Calif.

Four of the seven patients taken to Washoe Medical Center in Reno were in critical condition, said Dr. Jerry Calvanese.

"From what I saw, I think some may not survive," he said. "They're not home free by any means...These people are elderly and they don't recover as easily as young people. They'll be in for a rough time."

The passengers were mostly residents of the Santa Monica Tower retirement home who had been on "a relaxation tour" due back Friday evening, said Penny Hanson, a spokeswoman for Starline Tours.

"There was a lot of blood and lot of internal head injuries," said Marine Gunnery Sgt. Daniel Tretteen, one of more than two dozen Marines who helped pull the injured and dead out of windows.

The Marines, stationed at the Pickel Meadow Marine Corps Mountain Warfare Training Center a few miles away, were called to the scene about a half-hour after the accident.

The bus left skid marks on the pavement and apparently rolled two or three times before it hit the water, Tretteen said, and was "pretty well beat up with the roof caved in and the back ripped up."

DEBATE

He said that, since 1983, Craig had voted for three tax increases for an effective hike in taxes of 16 percent. Now, McCrary noted, Craig is pledging "economy" in county government and a budget which requires "no additional tax dollars."

McCrary zeroed in on the Midland County Jail problems and on an impending study of county courthouse and jail needs into the 21st Century. He said a year ago "voters mandated" that the Commissioners' Court repair the existing jail.

"That work has not begun."

He referred to the study, which the voters approved in the 1985 $3-million bond package to renovate the jail, fund the study, and expand Culver Youth Home.

"That study has not begun."

Further, he was critical of the county's spending about $200,000 in a year to farm out prisoners to other county jails due to the over-crowded conditions of the existing Midland County Jail. He said county government needs leaders "who can identify problems, make decisions" and take action.

McCrary said that the plight of the jail — from impending renovation to a proposed new jail — illustrates "inaction and indecision" of the Commissioners' Court.

"Now is the time to talk about a jail for the future — not tomorrow," McCrary said. Craig had proposed putting any new jail on hold until the Midland economy improves.

County government needs "some new direction," McCrary said, "and I'm prepared to give it."

THOUGH CRAIG noted that "certainly the jail is an on-going problem," he said that the "big problem is taxes."

"I have committed myself to no tax increase this year" when the economy is experiencing a downturn due to a slump in the petroleum industry.

In countering McCrary's criticism of a delay in jail renovation, Craig said that "Renovating a jail is not at all like renovating a house." For example, in preparing for jail renovation, the architect goes through a "lengthy, detailed, and laborious" process and the design must be approved by the Texas Commission on Jail Standards. Bids on the renovation should be let in mid- to late summer, he said.

That aside, Craig said the "long-term solution" to the Midland County jail situation is "one jail." The best place to build a new jail is on county-owned land — a seven-acre tract east of Midland.

The commissioners proposed to build a new $8.4-million jail on that tract 2½ miles east of downtown Midland, but voters rejected that notion when they turned aside a $9.9-million bond election and instead voted for the $3 million package for renovating the jail, funding the study, and expanding Culver Youth Home.

McCRARY HAS proposed a three-jail concept: a maximum-security jail in the present courthouse jail, a minimum-security jail in another building, and a regional jail to serve much of West Texas.

"I think that one (jail) is better than three," Craig said. "The cost of the building is nothing compared to the cost of the payroll."

McCrary fired back. "Three (jails) is better (than) seven." He was referring to his proposal as opposed to the county's operating the one courthouse jail and farming out inmates to six jails in outlying counties. Cost of the farm-out has totaled more than $200,000 in a year's time, he said.

Craig implied that staffing three jails would be more costly than staffing one jail. "One jail will require one staff to manage it."

The "biggest expense" is in operating a jail — meeting the payroll — and not in the initial construction, he said.

Craig said he had "no problem" with a privately-operated jail, which Rister had proposed, if it is the least costly "way to go and if it is legal." McCrary, however, said he was against the "privatization" of jail. "I don't like the sound of it at all."

CRAIG CITED about a dozen "achievements" by the Commissioners' Court since he took office in 1983. They included:

— Attaining "much greater cooperation" among members of the Commissioners' Court and between the Court and the Midland City Council.

— Building a new agricultural extension building.

— Realizing a settlement with the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. on library land.

— Funding a second Midland County Court-at-Law.

— Assisting the Junior League of Midland in setting up a Teen Court.

— Upgrading the Midland County Exhibit Building.

— Securing an agreement by the Texas Water Commission on monitoring Odessa waste-water effluent in Monahans Draw, which runs eastward, cutting through Midland County.

— Using jail inmates to perform repairs and maintenance of county buildings.

— Getting the Texas Highway Commission to fund a drainage channel to prevent flooding in southeast Midland.

— Repairing the Midland County Courthouse Annex.

"I am not going to apologize for dollars spent for these worthwhile projects," Craig said.

The commissioner said he is "totally committed" to the people of Midland County.

"I do intend to keep an open-mind and doing things to the best of my ability. I am not inflexible," Craig said. "And I do stand up for what I believe."

TOUGH

"I don't think this is a time for revenue enhancement," Godwin said. "We could cut across the board by significant amounts and not jeopardize the service levels that are needed."

All three men have voted against legalizing pari-mutuel betting before and Friday hinted they would oppose similar measures again.

Craddick said he would poll his legislative district to see where his constituency stands on both pari-mutuel wagering and a statewide lottery. "I'm going to just do what they want me to do," he said, adding that he would conduct the survey sometime this fall.

Rudd said the coming session should provide the "strongest push" for a lottery, but would not say how he will vote on the measure if and when it reaches the House floor.

"Never say never," Rudd said with a grin. "I've always voted against pari-mutuel betting, but I'll keep an open mind. We'll have to see how desperate things are in January."

BUDGET

"I feel the citizens of this state want better management and less waste in their state government's operations," Lewis said. "Not until that is achieved should additional revenue enhancement measures be considered."

Appropriations Committee Chairman Jim Rudd of Brownfield said he will bring "a sharp knife" to his panel's budget cutting meetings. The six-month head start over the committee's tradition January beginning, he said, will allow the panel to "make the tough decisions...before we go into session."

Lewis said he would not tell Rudd's committee where to cut. "That's their decision to make," he said.

Budget Board director Oliver said lawmakers would need a 10-percent across-the-board cut to bring expenditures into line with income. House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Stan Schlueter of Salado said the Legislature will have to give the public an opportunity to understand just what those cuts mean.

"Let them see that if we cut public education, more than likely their property taxes are going to go up," Schlueter said. "When you have an economy like we have now,...you don't just walk out the door and say, 'We're going to raise taxes.' "

Even with an early start, Schlueter predicted the Legislature would have to return for two or three special sessions next summer before lawmakers reach agreement on a balanced budget.

Education Commissioner William Kirby had both good and bad news for the lawmakers. Lower-than-expected increases in school enrollments, Kirby said, will save the state about $150 million by the end of fiscal 1987.

But sticking to the education commitments made in the massive 1984 school reform package will cost an extra $556 million for fiscal 1988 and 1989.

"While the word 'taxation' may be profanity to people having to stand for re-election this November," Kirby said, "I believe the people of Texas will soundly support increased taxes if they are confident their children will get a better education as a result of those tax increases."

Midlander reports theft of auto

From Staff Reports

A $2,500 Thunderbird was reported stolen from a Midland man, according to the police department.

Lewis E. Stokes, 2301 W. Neely, told officers his red and black two door 1978 Ford was stolen between 3:30 p.m. Thursday and 1:21 a.m. Friday.

In other law enforcement reports, about $300 in cash and a $25 check was stolen from an auto on Friday. Johnnie Lloyd Fulks of rural Midland told sheriff's officers his car was broken into while it was parked about three miles west of Midland on the south service road of State Highway 80.

Fulks said the Ford pickup was broken into through a faulty lock.

Walsh attacks Mattox during local appearance

From Staff Reports

Ed Walsh, Republican candidate for Attorney General, said no matter who wins the June 7 runoff, the GOP candidate will do a better job than incumbent Jim Mattox.

Walsh was in Midland Friday campaigning for his upcoming runoff election against Roy Barrera for the Republican nomination for Attorney General.

Walsh said he felt Mattox was not doing a good job and did not have Texas' "best interests at heart."

He said that if he loses the primary he will support Barrera.

And, Walsh added that if he did win he would continue to attack Mattox and what he termed his lack of support for law enforcement.

Walsh, who served as District Attorney of Williamson County, said that although he has dealt mainly in the criminal justice system he can deal with civil justice, as well. The Attorney General's office primarily handles civil cases.

"I will hire good lawyers instead of political hacks," he stated.

Walsh said that he wants to take the politics out of the Attorney Generals office.

"I feel good about this campaign. We have been working hard for almost a year and I think we'll win," he stated.

Storms trigger floods, mudslides

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Heavy thunderstorms triggered flash floods and mudslides along two tributaries of the Allegheny River on Friday evening, and at least four people were killed as high waters inundated homes and businesses and cut off rescuers.

The rush-hour flooding from Pine Creek and Little Pine Creek struck Pittsburgh's northern suburbs and caused fires, power outages and traffic jams in northern Allegheny County.

Police called for boats and helicopters to rescue residents from flooded areas, but the number of evacuees and the severity of their injuries were not known.

Authorities feared there might be more dead or injured in the flooding, but they could not launch searchers until daybreak.

Hundreds were evacuated by boat in Etna, where the police and fire stations were under water. Much of the water came from the normally narrow Pine Creek, which was reportedly 100 yards wide in places.

"There were people swept off of their feet by the water," said Mike Bergen of the Natrona Volunteer Fire Department

Islamic school offers students 'international education'

DALLAS (AP) — Little about the exterior of the old frame house distinguishes it from other modest dwellings on the four-lane street in South Dallas. The neighborhood is a mixture of aging houses — some converted to small retail stores — overgrown vacant lots, industrial warehouses and commercial businesses.

But the activities inside the eight-room school on South Harwood Street are a continent away from the everyday goings-on of its neighbors.

At 3 p.m. at the Sister Clara Muhammed School, Principal Wanda Sharif and six staffers prepare the 30 young students for the end of another day of "international education." The Islamic school, one of 60 in the nation, is the only five-day-a-week Islamic school in the Dallas-Fort Worth area and is run by a community of members formerly known as "Black Muslims."

Imam Yahya Abdullah, 30, head of the Dallas Masjid of Al-Islam and regional director of the school, said the former religious and social reform movement called Black Muslims began a slow transition in the late 1970s that ultimately led to decentralization.

"There are no Black Muslims now," said the imam, Abdullah's title as religious leader.

But the membership of the Dallas masjid, one of eight masjids — the Arabic word for mosque — in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, remains predominantly African-American.

The school's classes in basic courses, including science, math and grammar, are augmented by courses in Arabic, social studies and geography that emphasize "the international community" — shores beyond the boundaries of South Dallas, Mrs. Sharif said.

BUT ITS curriculum is only one distinction of the 3-year-old school where students, dressed in green, military-style uniforms and berets, prostrate themselves on the floor and offer prayers to Allah three times a day.

AP Laserphoto

Shafeeqah Mahdi, 10, Akilah Lowery, 11, and Racheal Hatim, 11, say a Dua prayer, which is said before and after classes at the Sister Clara Muhammad School in Dallas. The Islamic school stresses personal attention and an international outlook.

"Our emphasis is on keeping the childrens' minds on a God-consciousness," Mrs. Sharif said. Al-Islam translates as "the religion of peace and submission to God."

Before morning classes begin, students remove their shoes and gather in the "Musallah," or prayer room, for morning devotions and greetings. More prayers, chanted in Arabic, are offered at midday and again in the evening before students leave for home:

"...Most merciful master of the day of judgment, Thee do we worship and thine aid we seek..."

But while the average teacher-student ratio of one teacher for every seven students at the school has allowed for individualized instruction and a pleasant, homey atmosphere, school officials hope to move to a larger facility at a different location over the next three years. Enrollment now is 30 students in preschool through sixth grade.

School officials say if they move to another location, they could provide space for 350 students through 12th grade. Fund-raisers recently helped finance a new nursery classroom at the existing site that was put into use on April 21.

"We believe strongly in independent education," Abdullah said.

The school opened with four students in January 1983, including Abdullah's son and Mrs. Sharif's daughter. Many of the children of masjid members attend public schools for various reasons, including limited space at the Islamic school, Abdullah said.

THE SCHOOL was named for Clara Muhammed, wife of Black Muslim founder Elijah Muhammed. They both died in the early 1970s. Mrs. Muhammed had resisted pressure from truant officers, insisting on teaching her children at home in Detroit before the family moved to Chicago.

Their son Warith Deen Muhammed succeeded his father as leader of the former Black Muslims. He decentralized the former Chicago headquarters and gave autonomy to individual masjids. He ranks now as an imam but many members still honor him as a national figurehead.

Change gradually began after the death of founder of Elijah Mohammad in 1975. The name changed from Black Muslims to the Nation of Islam to World Community of Al-Islam in the West, to American Muslim Mission. Today, the sect identifies itself simply as a part of the international community of Muslims, Abdullah said.

Abdullah started the school after he accepted the leadership of the 200-member masjid and moved here in September of 1982 from his hometown of Jacksonville, Fla., where he also had established a school.

"That was the first item on the agenda when I came," he said.

Abdullah and his wife, Stella Amidah, taught their children at home until the state approved a license for the Sister Clara school. Until then, the masjid held classes on weekends, adding Afro-American and international affairs to subjects taught in public schools, Abdullah said.

Mrs. Sharif said the school demands high academic standards and offers individualized instruction. She said students are encouraged to advance at their own pace and many exceed public school standards for their age.

FOR EXAMPLE, she said, she is teaching fifth-grade mathematics to fourth-grader Warith Abdullah, the imam's 8-year-old son: "He was able to do it so I began teaching him along with the fifth-graders."

And while many adults still struggle to interpret the Arabic of the Quran, the sacred book of the Islamic faith, she said Warith and her son, Curtis Sharif, 9, are able to read the book. They also excel, she said, in their Arabic class, taught by Sahira Mohammed, who moved to Dallas from her native Baghdad, Iraq, in 1982.

Students are tested under the school's own guidelines and are not given standardized tests, Mrs. Sharif said.

Howard Adams, an inspector for the Department of Human Resources that licenses the school, said it meets all state requirements for safety and administration but that those requirements, as with all religious-operated schools, do not govern curriculum and instruction.

Mrs. Sharif and her family moved here in February 1982 from Atlanta, where she taught at a Muslim school her children attended. She enrolled her children in a public grade school here but objected when the school placed them according to age and not performance.

The school refused her request to test and advance them, she said, and when she insisted, administrators suggested she find another school.

Meanwhile, the state approved the license for the Sister Clara school. She said she eagerly enrolled her son and took the job as principal and a classroom teacher.

Church, school gone, but cemetery remains

By STEVE KNICKMEYER

ST. PAUL, Texas (AP)— The church and the school are gone, but the cemetery remains — a two-acre testament to the past, just a half mile from the Collin Park Marina at Lake Lavon.

On weekends, St. Paul Road is busy with noisy lake traffic. On weekdays, traffic is minimal. One can stand in the hushed cemetery and sense the way things used to be.

"I remember when there were houses all around here," says 91-year-old Elsie Parr. She points to the west. "There, where those woods are, is where the St. Paul Catholic Church used to be. Across the road was the school."

"Was it a Catholic school?" asks the Rev. Anthony Pondant of St. Anthony Catholic Church in Wylie. She smiles, shakes her head. "It was a public school. But sometimes they'd have Catholic teachers. My Dad used to transfer me there when they did."

Pondant, whose church inherited St. Paul's parishioners when the church was torn down in 1916, says Mrs. Parr is the only parishioner to have attended both St. Paul and St. Anthony Catholic churches.

But she's not the only one familiar with the past.

"My grandfather, James Gallagher, donated the property in 1869," says Rita Smith. "Two acres for a Catholic cemetery. He's buried here."

"The area was originally inhabited mostly by Irish immigrants, who came here to escape the great potato famine," says Pondant. The names live on in stone: Neilon, Boylan, Corbitt, Dempsey, Howrey, Scanlan, Spurgin.

The first grave in the cemetery was for Ellen Corbitt, who died in 1872 at the age 8. "She was my aunt,"says Mrs. Parr.

At the tombstone of Viola McCullah (1896-1960), Mrs. Parr says, "This is the girl who was responsible for the fence around the cemetery. She took up donations for it. She was one of my cousins."

Mrs. Smith stoops over the graves of her parents, Claudius Marie and Sarah Anne Gallagher, and tries vainly to brush fire ants off the markers. She shakes her head sadly, moves to the alter, returns to the past.

"Hugh Dempsy made this altar in the 1960s," she says. "No wording was ever decided on for the inscription."

The altar replaced a bois d'arc cross that was built by the Rev. R.F. Neale, priest at St. Paul between 1895 and 1891, she says, adding: "He's buried here, too."

Pondant says the east side of the cemetery is no longer used because so many markers are missing and it's no longer clear where the burial sites are.

"We've put about eight babies along the west edge since I've been in Wylie (June 1982)," Pondant says. The most recent burial was in April. "It was Oneida Gallagher, my sister-in-law," says Mrs. Smith.

Maintenance has been and continues to be a problem. Burial is free and the cemetery is supported by donations, says Pondant. The trouble is that fewer and fewer people visit the cemetery; fewer and fewer donate.

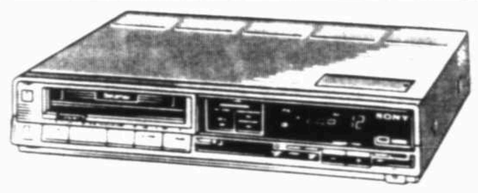

Weeds choke the fence. There are several patches of poison oak. A few plastic flowers are scattered about. On a baby's grave is a crumpled hamburger wrapper. The church recently paid the youth organization $200 to cut the grass, but the overwhelming impression is still one of abandonment and disuse.

And yet there is hope.

Pondant says the Dioscese of Dallas took control of the cemetery about a year ago, bought the land to the east and plans to expand it. He expects the diocese to spruce up the place.

There are many stories in the St. Paul Cemetery. And the story of the cemetery isn't over yet.

Federal court jury clears two men of conspiring to defraud bank

AMARILLO (AP) — A federal court jury cleared a Hereford real estate agent and Dallas-area financier on Friday of charges they conspired to defraud a Panhandle savings and loan.

After two days of deliberations, jurors acquitted James Gentry and Farmers Branch financier W.W. "Doc" Taylor.

Gentry and Taylor were accused of misapplying more than $3.8 million of funds from Hi-Plains Savings and Loan of Hereford between September 1982 and February 1983.

Before jurors received written instructions from U.S. District Judge Mary Lou Robinson, prosecutors and defense attorneys argued Thursday over the facts of the case.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Bill Alexander said the defendants were "vultures" who only wanted to "pick the flesh off the skeleton" of the financially troubled savings and loan.

But Clifford Brown, Taylor's chief defense attorney, countered by describing the defendants as "fine men" who had not violated any federal laws.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Clint Averitte, who aided Alexander, said in his final plea to the jury that if federal regulators had not intervened in the affairs of Hi-Plains, the institution would have transferred as much as $10.8 million out of its accounts.

Taylor signed a promissory note for a $10.8 million line of credit with the savings and loan, according to testimony.

Regulators in February 1983 issued an order forbidding Hi-Plains from transferring any more money to Taylor's business.

Lubbock attorney Travis Shelton, representing Gentry, said his client has an excellent reputation in Deaf Smith County, which was destroyed "in a few minutes" by the grand jury's indictment.

Gentry and Taylor contracted with Hi-Plains in the fall of 1982, promising to obtain high-rate loans for the financially troubled savings and loan, according to testimony.

Gentry was elected to Hi-Plains' board of directors on Dec. 13, 1982, and became its chief executive officer one month later, according to court documents.

In December 1982, Taylor opened a $6.6 million line of credit with the association, purportedly for purchasing loans that would be assigned to the association.

Part of famed Y.O. Ranch up for sale

MOUNTAIN HOME (AP) — A tight Texas economy and the urge to diversify have spurred Charles Schreiner III, owner of the Y.O. Ranch, to offer for sale 7,500 acres of his famed spread, a ranch spokeswoman said Friday.

Schreiner has invited 1,000 friends and associates to the ranch today to sell off the land in 100-acre parcels, said Suzanne Fletcher.

"The economy in Texas is so critical right now," said Ms. Fletcher, who works for a Memphis, Tenn., public relations firm representing the 50,000-acre Y.O. Ranch.

"It costs a lot of money to keep exotic animals healthy and fed," she said, referring to the thousands of head of wild game that roam the ranch.

The land will be available for vacation homes or permanent residences to be built with certain restrictions, Ms. Fletcher said.

The sale marks the first time the ranch has attempted any kind of planned development, she said.

"This will be the first time the land has changed hands in 106 years since my grandfather, Capt. Charles Schreiner, founded the Y.O. in 1880," Schreiner said.

Will utility pull the plug on El Paso?

EL PASO (AP) — This West Texas border city has refused to pay its electric bill recently, but El Paso Electric Co. has not turned off the lights — yet.

The city has been deducting from its monthly electric bill what it is owed by the utility.

"We're just not going to pay them any more until we hit $413,000 plus interest," said John Hartmann, deputy city comptroller. "Then I'll start writing them checks again."

The Texas Public Utilities Commission ordered El Paso Electric to pay the city $413,000 on Jan. 31, after the city had spent that much fighting a rate increase requested by the company. The rate increase was rejected.

Like many a customer with cash-flow problems, the company pleaded with the city for an extension, saying it didn't have the money to pay its debt.

"Send in the Texas Rangers and arrest them," council member Pat Haggerty said, half-jokingly, at a City Council meeting April 29 when the utility's lawyer pleaded for more time to pay.

The city refused an extension, demanded a lump-sum payment and filed suit the following day for triple the amount owed. El Paso Electric filed a response challenging the suit.

Meanwhile, Mayor Jonathan Rogers refused to sign a $203,000 check to the utility on May 12, said Kenneth Beasley, the city's chief administrative officer.

"It wasn't difficult. The mayor is a businessman," said Beasley. "He felt it was appropriate to deduct that amount from the amount owed to the city."

STATE IN BRIEF

Regional coroners needed, medical examiner claims

AUSTIN (AP) — Bexar County Medical Examiner Vincent DiMaio said Texas needs regional coroners to rule on causes of death in rural counties, where justices of the peace have sometimes botched death inquests, destroyed evidence and failed to order autopsies.

DiMaio, of San Antonio, told a House Criminal Jurisprudence subcommittee that justices of the peace generally lack the medical and legal skills to determine the cause of suspicious and violent deaths.

"I think most people realize there is a problem," said DiMaio. "Deaths are being incorrectly certified in the cause and manner of death and this has led in some instances to miscarriages of justice."

He said the state should establish a regional network of medical examiners to cover rural counties. He said smaller counties could work together to pay for the system which he estimated would cost about $1 per person.

Several justices of the peace who appeared before the panel defended their role in death investigations. Some suggested the state require minimum educational standards and improve training for the justices.

Mayor considers furloughs

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston city workers may be asked to voluntarily take a 20 percent cut in pay by working a four-day work week to avert the city's proposed July 1 layoffs, Mayor Kathy Whitmire says.

A voluntary furlough system is being considered by Mrs. Whitmire, who said it is the only workable alternative to the 638 layoffs scheduled to become effective at the start of this fiscal year.

Mrs. Whitmire says before a furlough system would be enforced, all employees would be asked to indicate whether working a reduced schedule for reduced pay is something they would want to volunteer to do.

The mayor said even if enough city employees volunteer, she still would have to consult department heads to determine whether the city could run efficiently while workers are taking unpaid time off.

Official pleads guilty

WASHINGTON (AP) — The vice chairman of the U.S. Postal Service's board of governors pleaded guilty Friday to taking illegal payoffs in exchange for trying to steer a $250 million postal contract to a Texas company.

Peter Voss, a businessman who was co-chairman in 1980 of Ronald Reagan's presidential campaign in Ohio, also pleaded guilty in a three-count felony information in U.S. District Court to embezzling money from the postal service. Prosecutors said he collected for a first-class airline ticket when he actually traveled in coach class.

Voss immediately resigned from the eight-member board of governors, which is expected to award the $250 million postal contract later this year.

He faces up to seven years in prison and $21,000 in fines.

Die-hard low riders skim pavement on Austin streets

By CARLOS VIDAL GRETH

AUSTIN (AP) — Skimming pavement at the approximate height of an armadillo belly, the pearl, metal flake and candy apple convoy cruised slower than a bridegroom approaching the altar.

The elemental rock strains of Chuck Berry, Billy Haley and Buddy Holly — mixed with an equally driving conjunto beat — haunted their course along East Sixth Street.

Junior and Rosita Medina drove the flagship carrucha of the Get Acquainted Low Riders Club, a cherry-colored 1955 Chevy Bel Air "juiced all around" with hydraulic pumps. When Junior flicked the switch, the car hopped like a barefoot boy on a summer sidewalk.

They were the lowest and slowest, the meanest and cleanest on the road.

Other drivers did whiplash double takes, gaping with astonishment, disgust or admiration. Neighborhood observers reviewed the convoy with aplomb, watching for changes in paint jobs and significant others.

It was a good thing they didn't honk. In the back of the Chevy, sweet baby James Medina slumbered peacefully in his infant seat.

Junior denied that he hopped the car to rock little James to sleep. "I start hopping next to an old lady at a stoplight," he said, a devilish gleam in his eye, "and she freaks out, man."

The Medinas are typical of the older die-hard breed of low riders rolling on the streets of East Austin today.

SURE THERE are still many young vatos locos hunting good times and senoritas who pretend not to notice the plaintive bleats of their car horns and the suggestive hopping.

Just as often, the drivers are middle-aged family types who were reared in a decades-old tradition. They still make the rounds on Saturday night — a version of Mexican American Graffiti — but their children and grandchildren are often seated on the velvet of quilted velour seats in the back.

For all their flash, the clubs are about as radical as the Kiwanis. Many low riders sponsor community benefits and scholarships, as well as family picnics and events.

"My father was a low rider a long time a long time ago in Austin," Junior Medina said. "He customized a '32 Chevy coupe. He gave me my first car to fix up when I was 10. I'll never forget that '51 Ford."

Rosita Medina is working on her own car, a 1950 Chevy. When it's ready to roll, however, she plans to keep low riding a family affair. "We always go to the dances and parties together," she said.

"A lot of people think we're all vandals or teen-agers," said Mary Rodriguez, secretary of the Get Acquainted Club. "We grew up with these cars. Like Elvis, they never died. Like the King, the low riders live."

She proudly indicated her son Albert's bicycle, customized low rider style.

"We always think in terms of the children," she said. "We try to get them involved in the club as much as possible."

JOHN ZAVALA, a post office clerk, is one of many reborn low riders in East Austin. His sons, Joe and Richard, convinced him that the clubs are not just for youngsters. Indeed, they proved such capable proselytizers that their father started the Azteca Low Rider Club. The membership is predominantly Zavala.

"My son is the president," John Zavala said. "I back him up when necessary. This makes me feel like I'm growing up with my boys, even though I'm still their dad."

"I grew up in the barrio," he said. "Sometimes it got rough over here. But even though I got all my cars low as a kid, I always stayed out of trouble."

His bajito mobile, The Crystal Rose, is a splendid example of the art. The burgundy 1979 Grand Prix can hop sideways and front to back. A mural on the trunk, a dream version of the Rose, shows how the Zavalas feel about the car.

"It symbolizes luxury for us," John said. "We haven't had much of that in our lives."

Susie Jimenez, member of Los Amigos Bajitos de Austin, probably has the most opulent 1977 Monte Carlo in town. A crystal chandelier sheds dappled light on the love seat in the back. A swivel captain's chair on the driver's side faces a chrome-plated chain steering wheel and a dangling pair of fuzzy dice.

"It wasn't easy finding dice that match the gold velour interior," said Ms. Jimenez, a school custodian and part-time waitress. "I call her La Unica, because I'm usually the only woman low rider at the car shows. My grandson usually rides with me."

SHE USED TO drive La Unica to work, but after sinking thousands of dollars into the dream machine, she decided to keep it only for show. "On Sundays, I treat myself and take it for a cruise," Ms. Jimenez, 45, said. "Other days, it's the Toyota Corolla. That's boring. My kids tell me I don't look too excited when I drive it."

She got involved in low riding after meeting her boyfriend, Joe Rodriguez. President of Los Amigos Bajitos and vice president of the citywide Austin Low Riders Association, he is about as involved in the subculture as it's possible to be.

His own low rider, a '48 Chevy pickup that would have trouble clearing a manhole cover, won Best Custom Truck at a recent show in Houston. "It was a piece of junk when I bought it seven years ago," Rodriguez said. "I've kept adding to it. You never finish a low rider."

When Juan Robles cruises in his '76 Monte Carlo, it's difficult to see more than his snap-brim hat and sunglasses.

Outside the gold-glitter land rocket that looks as if it were designed by the team of Liberace and Buck Rogers, however, the imperturbable Robles cuts quite a dashing character. The pants are modified zoot suit complete with yard-long watch fob. The shoes are immaculate patent leather. And a brilliant kerchief around the neck sets it all off.

"My son Frank as his Grand Prix fixed the same way," Robles said. "Juan Jr. will inherit the Monte Carlo one day.

"For my family," he said, "low riding is culture, art, clothing, manner. It is everything."

Citizens pack time capsule with mementos

NACOGDOCHES, Texas (AP) — Citizens of this historic East Texas town are packing away some Sesquicentennial mementos they hope will be enjoyed by Texans who celebrate the state's 200th birthday in 2036.

Everything from serious history to a Sesquicentennial beer can are contained in the "Texas Time Capsule" that is the focal point of Saturday night's "Nacogdoches Celebrates Texas" event at the county exposition center.

"We wanted to do something for the community to get them involved — one day I came up with the idea, the next day it was built," said Brinson Dabney, designer of the solid steel time capsule, conceived only two weeks ago.

"There is so much difference in a dream and the reality of following through," said Dabney. But he found plenty of enthusiasm for the project.

The local Continental Flange Corp. was approached about donating materials for the capsule. General plant manager Mike Vanderbosch and plant manager Richard King not only agreed to that request but "pulled a man off the job the next day and did the whole thing," Dabney said.

King said the project was a new venture for the company. "We do fabricate pipe, but as far as the artwork — we never have.

"When I saw the print, I knew it'd be better to just go ahead and do all of it instead of piecing it out," he said.

The finishing of the capsule was done in nearby Lufkin at the Chromium Corporation of Texas. Dabney said Chromium plant manager Craig Hanriot also received the project with open arms.

Hanriot and Vanderbrosch have even written detailed descriptions of the creation of the time capsule that will go inside along with the other Sesquicentennial mementos.

The completed capsule is four and a half feet tall and eight inches in diameter, topped by a silhouette of the state of Texas and polished in a brush-satin finish.

Former clerk charged with consumer product tampering

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A fired clerk at a stock brokerage was arrested on charges of putting rat poison in over-the-counter capsules in a failed scheme to make money on the stock market, the FBI said Friday.

Edward Arlen Marks, 24, of suburban Temple City, was ordered held without bail at his arraignment in federal court in Los Angeles on one count of tampering with consumer products. The charge carries a maximum penalty of 10 years in prison and a $50,000 fine.

U.S. Magistrate James McMahon ordered Marks transferred to Florida, where most of the tainted capsules were discovered.

It was the first drug-tampering arrest in a series of cases that resulted in at least nine deaths since 1982, although others have been arrested for making extortion demands or threatening to poison drugs.

No one was injured by the rat poison, found March 19-20 in Orlando, Fla., and Houston in nine capsules of cold and allergy medicines and diet aids made by SmithKline Beckman Corp.

The poisoning prompted an $8 million recall of Contac, Teldrin and Dietac capsules by the Phildelphia-based company.

A man identifying himself as "Gary" had called new organizations and stores to say he had poisoned capsules in Orlando, Chicago and St. Louis.

"He believed that hysteria would result," said Richard Bretzing, the special agent in charge of the FBI's Los Angeles office.

According to the FBI, Marks, who once trained at Merrill Lynch, had hoped to profit by depressing the price of SmithKline stock.

He apparently made no money because the stock price did not fall substantially despite the recall.

Marks worked as an office clerk in San Marino for 3½ weeks beginning in mid-October 1985, said Merrill Lynch spokeswoman Kay Ramsden.

He was fired, she said, declining to elaborate except to say discrepancies had turned up in a check of his job application.

Pelton's disclosures would have hurt U.S. operations, NSA official says

BALTIMORE (AP) — Disclosure of U.S. intelligence operations that Ronald W. Pelton is accused of betraying to the Soviet Union would enable the Soviets to take effective countermeasures, a National Security Agency official testified Friday.

William P. Crowell Jr. testified that Project A's interception and collection of Soviet electronic messages "gave us an insight into military forces, their relative size, their plans for maneuvers or training."

Testifying at Pelton's espionage trial in U.S. District Court, Crowell said analysis of the data intercepted by Project A provided "a considerable amount of information about their overall capabilities."

Pelton, an NSA communications specialist before he resigned in 1979, is accused of providing details of several communications interception projects to the Soviet Union, including Project A, between 1980 and 1985.

He is accused of receiving $35,000 plus expenses for the information, which he allegedly gave to Soviet agents during trips to Vienna, Austria, in October 1980 and March 1983.

Disclosure of Project A's intelligence would allow the Soviets "to change the nature of the communication or the value of the communications on that link," Crowell said. "There are a large number of different actions that could be taken to make our signal intelligence program less effective."

Information about another operation, called Project B during the trial, "would allow them to better assess our capability versus their communications and it would allow them to make better judgments as to the value of some communications information," Crowell said.

Crowell, head of the NSA effort to collect and interpret Soviet electronic signals, did not identify Pelton or offer evidence that Pelton had disclosed secrets to the Soviets. But his testimony was introduced to demonstrate the value of information Pelton is accused of selling.

Judge Herbert F. Murray held up the Bennett's questioning about the map until completion of a 50-minute bench conference involving the attorneys and Elizabeth Rindskopf, NSA's general counsel.

Bennett said later, outside the courtroom, that the discussions involved "national security considerations."

Government, Pollard working on plea bargain

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal prosecutors expect to reach a plea bargain soon with a civilian Navy employee accused of spying for Israel in order to avoid a trial that could prove embarrassing to a close U.S. ally, Reagan administration sources say.

The sources, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said Jonathan Jay Pollard, a counterterrorism specialist, was brought to Washington from a federal prison in Virginia last week to discuss the negotiations with his lawyers.

"We expect a resolution of the case, and we expect it sooner rather than later," one administration source said of the bargaining.

Meanwhile, the Los Angeles Times quoted unnamed government sources Friday as saying that Pollard was just one link in an organized and well-financed Israeli espionage ring operating within the United States, despite Israel's assurances that he was an isolated operative.

The sources told the Times that the new information, uncovered in the continuing federal investigation, cast serious doubt on Israel's claims that its leading officials knew nothing of Pollard's activities and that the Israeli government has cooperated fully with the U.S. probe.

The newspaper said the U.S. investigation is likely to produce at least one additional arrest and has brought both American and Israeli citizens under suspicion.

It said the suspects include an unnamed Israeli Air Force official who regularly visits the United States, ostensibly for educational purposes, but who is believed to have been the "master case officer" for Israeli spying on the United States.

Reagan seeks support for limiting claims

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, citing skyrocketing awards in personal injury suits, said Friday the civil justice system has begun "to go terribly wrong" and asked Congress and the states to rally behind his proposals for limiting damage claims and legal fees.

Reagan recounted several examples of "absurd" settlements in negligence and product liability cases, saying they were responsible for sending insurance rates soaring as well as driving up the cost of consumer goods.

Accompanied by Attorney General Edwin Meese and Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige, Reagan asked a coalition of business leaders to push for revisions in federal and state civil laws, including a $100,000 cap on awards for non-economic damages — whether punitive or for pain and suffering.

Reagan spoke to about 300 people, representing the American Tort Reform Association, at the headquarters of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, a block from the White House. Outside, a score of picketers from Public Citizen, the Ralph-Nader-founded consumer group, protested the president's position.

"We are here to expose the Reagan administration's real purpose," said Joseph Goffman, an attorney with Public Citizen. "They want Congress to declare amnesty for the makers of products that kill and maim thousands of Americans every year."

Reagan said the "outrageous" trend toward million-dollar-plus settlements in damage suits "penalizes every American — manufacturers, doctors, small businessmen, government at all levels, non-profit organizations, entrepreneurs, and perhaps most severely, the consumer."

He cited stories of big liability claims won by a man who suffered a heart attack when he tried to start his lawn mower, and by another who sued the telephone company because he was standing in a phone booth when it was hit by a car driven by a drunken driver.

"I supposed all this might be amusing if such absurd results only took place occasionally," the president said. "Yet today, they have become all but commonplace...between 1975 and 1985, the average award in a product liability case more than quadrupled, to some $1.8 million. During the same period, the average medical malpractice verdict...went up more than 350 percent, to over a million dollars."

Navy buries forgotten Civil War hero '105 years late'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy buried a forgotten hero Friday, ceremoniously carrying the remains of Civil War Medal of Honor winner James Smith to Arlington National Cemetery, "where he belongs" after lying for a century in an unmarked pauper's grave.

"This is now as it should be, only 105 years late," Rep. Norman Lent, R-N.Y., said at a wreath-laying ceremony on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial. Waiting across the Potomac River at Arlington were some of the Navy's most senior admirals, ready to bury the old sailor with solemn military honors.

Smith had died in New York City in 1881 and was buried in an unmarked common grave, his earlier exploits aboard the USS Richmond at the Battle of Mobile Bay almost forgotten.

But he left behind three children. And a 20th century great-grandson took up his cause.

For the past eight years, Thomas Clarkson Brenker struggled to correct what he felt was the wrong done his great-grandfather.

"I just wanted a marker on his grave," Brenker recalled of his struggle to honor the old sailor. "But I was told they couldn't mark the grave because others had been buried in the same location over the years. Then I asked to exhume him, but the cemetery wouldn't allow that, either."

Brenker was stalemated, unable to mark Smith's grave, unable to have him removed to another site. Then, after yet another letter-writing campaign a year ago, the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of New York and the Navy advised him the body could be exhumed if he would obtain a court order.

U.S., Vietnam to resume MIA talks June 11 in Hanoi

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ending a break imposed by Vietnam to protest the U.S. raid against Libya in April, representatives of the two countries will meet in Hanoi June 11-14 for talks on locating at least some of the 2,436 Americans missing from the Southeast Asian war, the State Department said Friday.

The dates were announced after Vietnam's deputy foreign minister, Hoang Bich Son, met a U.S. delegation in New York, where he is attending a United Nations meeting.

As at previous sessions of the so-called "technical talks," the United States will ask the Vietnamese to help locate the remains of specific missing servicemen or airplane crash sites. U.S. experts will provide information to help Vietnam make the searches.

Vietnam agreed several years ago to hold four technical sessions a year and last August pledged to try resolving the entire issue of missing servicemen and prisoners of war within two years. The schedule of talks was expanded to six a year.

"After Vietnam first proposed an accelerated effort to resolve this humanitarian problem last August, there was gratifying progress," said State Department spokesman Charles Redman.

Late last year, for example, Vietnam permitted the excavation of a B-52 crash site near Hanoi and subsequently has turned over remains of 28 American servicemen who died in the war.

In April, however, Vietnam said it was canceling a scheduled meeting because of the U.S. raid against Libya.

WJC: U.S. should ban Waldheim

NEW YORK (AP) — The secretary-general of the World Jewish Congress said Friday the U.S. government would be guilty of "silence in the face of evil" if it does not ban Kurt Waldheim for his actions during World War II.

Israel Singer said there was no excuse for the Justice Department's delay in announcing such a ban, which was proposed by the Office of Special Investigations, the agency that investigates war crimes.

"The attorney general should enforce the law," said Elan Steinberg, the WJC executive director.

The World Jewish Congress has pursued allegations that Waldheim, the former secretary-general of the United Nations and now a candidate for president of Austria, committed war crimes while stationed in the Balkans and Greece during World War II.

Among those alleged crimes were the deportations of Greeks and reprisals against Yugoslavian villages where partisans were active.

Presidential candidate Kurt Waldheim disputed Friday the latest claims against him by the World Jewish Congress that he was involved in war crimes and said the group was recycling old documents because it had run out of new accusations.

Greek premier: U.S. seeks to police world

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Premier Andreas Papandreou said Friday that the United States, which he accused of committing a terrorist act in bombing Libya, wants to police the world against what the United States defines as terrorism.

The Socialist prime minister, who has close relations with Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy, proposed that an international conference under U.N. auspices define terrorism and devise effective measures against it.

"The Reagan administration wants to make it legal for the United States to arrest people for crimes committed outside the U.S. and take them there for trial," he said in opening a special Parliament debate on terrorism.

"That masks a reshaping of the forces wielded by the United States into a kind of general, worldwide police system against terrorism."

Papandreou said the U.S. bombing raids April 15 on Tripoli and Benghazi amounted to "a terrorist action."

His government initially agreed with other members of the European Common Market last month on applying sanctions against Libya for its alleged sponsorship of international terrorism, but then decided against it.

The sanctions included reducing the number of Libyan diplomats in Common Market countries and restricting the movements of those remaining.

To a chorus of jeers from the conservative opposition, Papandreou said supporting the sanctions might make Greece subservient to the United States.

"We're against making of lists of states suspected of sponsoring terrorism," he said. "It's an indirect way of shaping a foreign policy that serves the interests of a great power."

He expressed similar views during a visit to Athens earlier this week by

Premier Andreas Papandreou

President Hafez Assad of Syria, whose government has been accused by some Israeli and U.S. officials of involvement with terrorism.

Papandreou said a U.N.-sponsored conference such as he proposed "would give a satisfactory definition of terrorism and agree on measures on a worldwide scale to face terrorism effectively and finally."

He said actions by Palestinian guerrillas should not be considered terrorist because "violence displayed in the framework of national liberation struggles doesn't constitute terrorism."

Conservative opposition leader Constantine Mitsotakis said later in the debate that Papandreou had given a "bad theoretical lecture, filled with confusion."

He criticized Assad's visit, asking: "What did Greece gain from giving the Syrian president a platform?"

Mugabe criticizes church's sexism

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — Prime Minister Robert Mugabe on Friday criticized churches which discriminate against women by barring them from becoming priests and from moving up in the hierarchy.

"The structure of (church) management has to change," Mugabe told top civil servants and heads of state-run corporations during a one-day conference on the advancement of women.

"If they are God's churches, why should there be discrimination? Must women remain forever nuns and nothing more?"

Twenty-six people die in Sri Lankan ethnic violence

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — Bomb explosions at a busy bottling plant and in a military convoy killed 26 people Friday in the bloody ethnic struggle that is turning this lush land of tea and spices into a battleground.

About 3,500 people have been killed in four years of conflict between Tamil rebels who seek an independent homeland in northern Sri Lanka and the government controlled by the majority Sinhalese.

A Tamil guerrilla group with exile headquarters in India claimed responsibility for the explosion in the convoy that killed 18 soldiers. Police said rebels also were suspected of rigging a bomb in a truck that blew up and killed eight people in the downtown Colombo soft-drink bottling plant.

Dozens of people were reported wounded.

Four other bombs have killed more than 35 people in the past two months on this tropical island, formerly Ceylon, off the tip of India. One Tamil group has threatened attacks on economic targets to push the demand for an independent state called Eelam in the northern Jaffna Peninsula, where Tamils are in the majority.

Tamils, most of whom are Hindu, originally came to Sri Lanka from India and now make up 18 percent of its 16 million people. Militants accuse the Buddhist Sinhalese of discrimination and claim the government is trying to settle Sinhalese in Tamil areas to weaken the separatist movement.

The truck bomb at the bottling plant collapsed a building, started a fire and sent shards of glass flying in all directions, police said. Troops sealed off the area and journalists were not allowed to visit hospitalized survivors.

Authorities reported 24 people wounded, including 15 soldiers.

Pope condemns Marxism, materialism in encyclical

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Marxism seeks to root religion out of society and the "very heart" of man, Pope John Paul II said Friday in an encyclical that calls atheistic ideologies the path to spiritual ruin for the world.

John Paul wrote of the evils of materialism and disobedience to God, which he said deceive man into believing he can decide for himself what is good and evil.

He also deplored what he described as increasing signs of death in the modern world, including "death-dealing poverty and famine," international terrorism, the danger of "nuclear self-destruction," abortion and euthanasia.

The 141-page encyclical, titled "Dominum et Vivificantem" — Latin for The Lord, the Giver of Life — is dedicated to the Holy Spirit, the third of the Holy Trinity, along with the Father and the Son. It is the fifth that John Paul has issued since his papacy began in 1978.

Encyclicals are the most authoritative form of papal letter, informing the church and its members on matters of importance.

They once were the main vehicles used by popes to communicate their teachings, but their importance diminished somewhat as pontiffs began using foreign tours and the mass media to convey their message.

The Vatican said John Paul wrote his latest encyclical in his native Polish, beginning in the second half of last year.

Cardinal Jerome Hamer presented the document at a news conference.

Scientist reads bones for clues to identities

EDITOR'S NOTE — For 25 years, Clyde Snow, a leading forensic anthropologist, has coaxed biographical details from the bones of plane crash and crime victims. Now he's embarking on a new mission: helping identify victims of the military junta that ruled Argentina from 1976 to 1983.

By MALCOLM RITTER
AP Science Writer

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Clyde Snow peered at the two X-rays before him, back and forth, his blue eyes boring in as if comparing a Rembrandt to a clever forgery.

Soon he saw what he needed. In the X-ray on the left he pointed out the shapes of the bony spines of vertebrae. To the casual eye they were just pale blobs. But Snow saw more: This one looked like a backwards "D," two others like skinny and fat raindrops, a fourth like a squat decanter with a cork.

And when he compared that X-ray, freshly taken of a charred body found in a burned-down house, to the other, removed from the homeowner's medical file, the shapes matched exactly.

"That's him," Snow said. The body now had a name.

There was no name yet for the gray, moss-tinged bones that lay on a stainless-steel table in an adjacent room. Nearby, in a black plastic bucket, sat a partial female skull, apparently that of a murder victim.

Considering some of Snow's past assignments — helping identify the remains of Nazi war criminal Josef Mengele and the victims of mass murderer John Wayne Gacy, coaxing biographical details from the bones of plane crash victims and the soldiers who died with Custer, this was a pretty slow day for Snow to drop in at the chief medical examiner's office in Oklahoma City.

But before it was over, Snow had taken a call from Argentina about a crime he finds even more frightening than the work of deranged murderers: the killings of thousands of Argentines by the military junta that ruled that country from 1976 to 1983.

Snow, 58, one of the nation's top authorities on identifying skeletal remains, plans to devote much of the coming year to working without pay in Argentina to aid the prosecution of the military killers.

"There's no victim more helpless than a citizen of his own government if his government decides to become a murderer," he says. "You have no defense. The very machinery that was set up to protect you is used against you."

Despite such musings, "I'm not a philosopher," Snow says. "I don't know much about philosophy and political things. I'm more comfortable with the bones."

It's been 25 years since an Oklahoma sheriff brought Snow a skull found in a roadside paper sack and asked for his first professional consultation.

As a forensic anthropologist, Snow works on bones rather than fresh bodies. He handles 60 to 80 cases a year as a free-lancer and consultant to medical examiners in Oklahoma City and Chicago.

He works out of his home in Norman, Okla. But workers at the medical examiner's office see a lot of this native Texan, who skips lunch for a daylong diet of coffee and Camels, and whose eyes and mustache make him look a bit like a younger brother of Albert Einstein.

It was as a graduate anthropology student at the University of Arizona in the 1950s that Snow realized he enjoyed working with modern human remains more than ancient ones.

"We were dealing with people who've got names...people that we could develop some biographical information on" through medical and dental records, he says. Besides, he adds, "I think there's a little bit of Sherlock Holmes in everybody. So we get to play detective to a limited extent."

Snow became a free-lancer in 1979, after retiring from the Federal Aviation Administration.

Unfenced pools tragedies waiting to happen

By BEVERLY POTTER

DALLAS (AP) — Exactly how it happened is not clear.

All Jim Francis knows is that, when he checked in on his 22-month-old son, Bo, the child wasn't in his crib. His wife, Debbie, was in the den. His 6-year-old son, Jimmy, was playing catch in the yard with a friend who had spent the night.

"My instincts told me something was wrong," says Francis, who recalls running through the house into the yard and finding Bo in the family swimming pool.

Francis started mouth-to-mouth rescusitation. His wife took over until the paramedics arrived. Throughout the last week of July 1980 and the first week of August, Bo struggled to survive in the intensive care unit at Children's Medical Center.

In one sense, Bo was lucky. He survived. In another sense, he represents a tragedy that has killed and crippled scores of Dallas area children — a tragedy that some people say might be prevented if private swimming pools were fenced in.

Today, Bo is a cute, slender, 7-year-old with wavy blonde hair and sharp blue eyes. He can't walk. He can't talk. And he's nearly blind.

"It's like having a 9-month-old baby," says his father.

Bo, who needs full-time care, was one of 128 young near-drowning victims admitted to Children's Medical Center pediatric intensive care unit between January 1976 and December 1985.

According to center records, nearly half of those children sustained severe brain damage or died. Nearly all of the children were between the ages of 1 and 4.

Dr. Daniel Levin is one of those who believes many of those accidents might have been prevented. Levin, who is medical director of the pediatric intensive care unit at Children's, says studies and medical literature support the contention that fencing around private swimming pools can adequately prevent most accidental drownings among children.

"There is a wealth of evidence that this is a totally preventable disease," Levin says.

Other proposals, such as teaching children to swim, do not solve the problem, Levin says. Teaching toddlers to swim can give them "a false sense of security," he says, because toddlers cannot pull themselves out of a pool even if they swim to the side.

In states such as Hawaii and cities in other countries where pool fencing is required by law, accidental drowning statistics have declined dramatically.

A 1980 report published in the Medical Journal of Australia, says that in Mulgrave Shire, a community in the northern part of the country, rigidly enforced pool safety laws have slashed pool accident statistics.

Despite the ratio of one pool to every six houses, the report concludes: "Only one child has drowned in Mulgrave Shire in a home pool over the last 10 years: this single instance occurred in an unfenced pool."

Levin says his review of the children's center records shows that 53 percent of all near-drowning victims brought into intensive care leave the unit alive and well. Another 10 percent survive but with severe neurological damage. The remainder die.

Levin says those statistics do not show the effect of these accidents on families. Levin says the divorce rate is "gargantuan" among couples whose children drown. For the families of children who live but are permanently damaged, the emotional and financial struggle can be even more traumatic than divorce, he says.

Medical center records show the average stay in the intensive care unit for a near-drowning victim costs $10,184. In one case, the bill was more than $45,600. That does not even begin to approach the on-going costs of caring for a child who has been damaged in a water accident, Levin says.

Francis would rather not talk about the effect of Bo's accident on his family.

"Obviously it's a very tough situation," he says. "We are handling it very well."

Francis, who is an oil company executive, is able to pay for live-in help to care for Bo.

Levin says that, while no one hospital or government agency has comprehensive drowning statistics, the problem is far more widespread than most people suspect and it is getting worse.

"It's increasing in numbers — more pools, more children — and it happens every month of the year. It's more in the summer, but it's also in the winter," says Levin, adding that medical center records account for only a small portion of the children involved in Texas water accidents.

To obtain more accurate records, Levin is requesting records from other hospitals in Texas. Based on current statistics and studies, he estimates that as many as 550 children have close calls in Texas pools each year.

Dr. Daniel Levin, medical director of the pediatric intensive care unit at Children's Medical Center in Dallas, poses behind the fence of a safe pool. Levin would support legislation requiring fences around private pools, a proven way to reduce accidental drownings.

A 1980 report published in the Medical Journal of Australia, says that in Mulgrave Shire, a community in the northern part of the country, rigidly enforced pool safety laws have slashed pool accident statistics. Chance of rain this weekend growing slim

From Staff and Wire Reports

Midland's chance of getting more rain this weekend grows slimmer as the National Weather Service predicts a less than 20 percent chance for thunderstorms.

Midland is still .08 behind its normal amount of precipitation for this time of the year, a weather spokesman said. Precipitation for the end of May 1985 was 4.40 inches, while Thursday's drenching rains brought the city's total this year to 4.32 inches. Precipitation for the month is 3.88 inches.

Today will be mostly cloudy with less than a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms. The high will be near 80 with winds blowing from the south at 10 to 15 miles per hour. Tonight will be cloudy with a low in the mid-60s.

Sunday will be warmer with a high in the mid-80s and a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms.

Friday's high of 72 degrees was 29 degrees cooler than the record high of 101 degrees set in 1985. The overnight low of 60 degrees was 15 degrees warmer than the record low of 45 degrees set in 1937.

STATE

Scattered showers and thunderstorms, some of them heavy, formed the dominant weather pattern in Texas Friday afternoon.

The storms and showers were caused by warm moist unstable air ahead of a stationary front that stretched from the Red River Valley to the South Plains, the National Weather Service said.

Almost the entire state was under overcast skies, and winds were generally less than 10 mph and variable.

At 3 p.m., temperatures ranged upward from the low 80s in the eastern and southeastern portions of the state, and were generally in the 70s in the rest of the state, the weather service said.

NATION

A summerlike swelter, with temperatures in the 80s and 90s, spread from the upper Mississippi Valley to the Middle Atlantic states Friday, breaking records from Atlantic City, N.J., to International Falls, Minn.

In southwestern Pennsylvania, heavy thunderstorms caused flooding, lightning fires, scattered power outages and traffic jams. Homes and businesses in the northern Pittsburgh suburbs were flooded when two creeks overflowed.

Record highs for the date included 94 degrees in New York City and Newark, N.J., eclipsing marks set in 1942.

Atlantic City's 93-degree reading broke the 1951 record by two degrees.

Indy 500 has high hopes for green flag

By MIKE HARRIS

ABC-TV 10 a.m.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A green flag is what everyone is waiting for. A green track is what the drivers are going to get Saturday in the twice-delayed Indianapolis 500. Even the drivers may be a little green after a six-day layoff.

Everyone from the 33 starters to ABC, which will again try to send to millions of homes the first live telecast of the world's richest race, to the expected crowd of up to 250,000 at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway will breath a collective sigh when the engines roar to life at 10 a.m.

A green flag will also put the rocket-like cars, which qualified at an average speed of 210.279 mph, on a 2½-mile oval that has not seen any serious action since May 22 — the final full-scale practice session.

The $3 million race was washed away last Sunday and again on Monday before track officials, faced with prospects of continuing bad weather, made the unprecedented choice of postponing the race until Saturday.

The forecast is for partly sunny skies with a 20 percent chance of wide scattered thundershowers, which would have no more than a temporary impact on the race. Temperatures are expected in the low 80s.

The week's inactivity has left the asphalt track without much rubber in the racing groove. The rubber, laid down by the wide, slick race tires, can help the cars adhere to the track. It can also slow them down.

"It's real clean, it's what we call a green racetrack," Al Unser Jr. said following Friday's 30-minute warmup practice, limited to 120 mph.

That condition could cause problems, particularly at the start when the cars are running close together, the turbulance from their ground effects aerodynamics giving the drivers more to think about than just staying out of each other's way.

Rick Mears, the record-setting pole-winner, said, "It would have been green on Sunday. If you remember right, it rained between (the practice on) Thursday and Sunday. It was green then. It doesn't make a darn bit of difference between then and (Saturday)."

"You just have to take it a little easy," said defending champion Danny Sullivan, who will start next to Mears in the middle of the front row. "The track will be green, everybody will be a little green. It will make everybody be a little more calm at the beginning. It will make them settle down and get into the groove."

Kevin Cogan, who precipitated a crash at the start in 1982 when his car suddenly veered sideways as the field approached the flagman, said, "You really don't know anything about the track or the handling, that's for sure. I think the smart thing to do is to be very safe and cautious and take it easy as much as possible. The first lap isn't that important, but it's important to be safe."

"It's green, it's definitely green and it's going to be very fast at the beginning," added Mario Andretti, the 1969 winner who is expected to make an early charge after starting 30th, inside the 10th row. "Everybody has to be especially alert because the car balance will be different than it was last Thursday and I think everybody is pretty much in the know and expecting that. Because of that I think the leaders are going to be in pretty good shape.

A.J. Foyt, the only four-time winner at Indy, and also starting in the back half of the lineup, said, "It's a long time to wait, but once we get out there and run a few laps, it won't be any different than any other race.

"The track will be green, but that's when the track is its best and fastest. I think it will stay better longer because it's nice and clean now."

The delay to Saturday allowed the massive pools of mud in the infield to dry and gave track maintenance personnel a chance to clean up the colossal mess left behind by the more than 350,000 people who turned out on Sunday and another 30,000 or so who came out Monday.

Jarryd upset victim

Bomb scare alarms Garros stadium

French Open

PARIS (AP) — Top seeds Ivan Lendl and Martina Navratilova continued to dodge the upset scythe that claimed more victims Friday at the French Open tennis championships, including Sweden's fifth-seeded Anders Jarryd.

The action-packed day was interrupted for about 4,000 spectators when they were evacuated from one area of the Roland Garros stadium during a match when a ticking sound was heard coming from a suitcase under the stands. It turned out to be an alarm clock.

Lendl and Navratilova breezed to straight set victories on the red clay courts, Lendl beating Chris Miniussi of Argentina, 6-1, 6-1, 6-2, while Navratilova ousted Claudia Porwick of West Germany, 6-3, 6-3.

Jarryd was the victim of fellow Swede Ulf Stenlund, who shocked himself with a 6-4, 6-2, 6-3 victory.

The 19-year old Stenlund joins Lendl of Czechoslovakia, No. 4 Yannick Noah of France, No. 9 Andres Gomez of Ecuador, No. 12 Guillermo Vilas of Argentina, No. 13 Johan Krieck of the United States, West Germany's Damir Keretic and Guy Forget of France in the fourth round.

STENLUND did not figure in Sweden's high hopes when the tournament began with four of the top seven seeds representing the Scandinavan country. After five days, those hopes now lie with defending champion and No. 2 seed Mats Wilander, Stenlund, and another upstart, Mikeal Pernfors.

"I just tried to win games, not matches," Stenlund said after his third consecutive straight-set victory. "The first match (against West Germany's Andreas Maurer) was the key match. After that, I got more confidence."

Wilander and Pernfors play their third-round matches Saturday.

Navratilova led the top half of the women's draw into the fourth round, while two seeded Americans — No. 10 Zina Garrison and No. 16 Terry Phelps — were upset. Italian teen-ager Laura Garrone ousted Garrison 6-2, 6-2, and Bulgaria's Katerina Maleeva eliminated Phelps 7-6, 6-0.

ALSO POSTING third-round victories were No. 4 Claudia Kohde-Kilsch of West Germany, No. 6 Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia, No. 7 Kathy Rinaldi of the United States, No. 12 Catarina Lindqvist of Sweden and 14-year-old Mary Joe Fernandez of the United States.

The Swedish men's contingent, all of whom were considered strong contenders for the French Open title, included No. 5 Stefan Edberg, No. 6 Joakim Nystrom and Jarryd.

Nystrom, who has won five tournaments this year, tumbled in the first round. Edberg fell in the second round to Pernfors, a Swede who honed his game at an American university.

After losing to Stenlund, who is ranked just 17th in Sweden and 101st in the world, Jarryd was upset and baffled.

"I don't know what happened," he said. "I can't push myself to win. I have no fighting spirit anymore. After the the first set, I had no guts."

Stenlund is playing in his first Nabisco Grand Prix event, having earned enough computer points in satellite tournaments in Morocco, Italy, Austria to gain entry into the 128-player draw. In his only other attempt to play in a Grand Prix tournament, the Stockholm Open, he lost in the first round of qualifying.

THE 33-year-old Vilas, the 1977 French Open champion who is making his 15th appearance at Roland Garros, downed Sweden's Jan Gunnarsson 7-6, 6-2, 3-6, 6-1 in a match that was interrupted by the bomb scare.

"I was very calm. I was not scared," Vilas said of the one-hour delay that came in the second set.

ABC sees another big loss in Sugar

DALLAS (AP) - Dennis Swanson, president of ABC Sports, said on Friday that his company lost $2 million televising the Sugar Bowl this year and would lose $3 million in January, 1987.

"We've lost $15 million in the last five years televising college football," he told the College Football Association convention. "There are just too many games on television. The ratings are about one-half of what they used to be."

Swanson said ABC Sports refused to pickup an option for the Gator Bowl "because it made no economic sense. It made no sense to guarantee $1 million when we were losing money on it."

He said it was his job to get ABC Sports back in the black. Capital Cities recently bought ABC Television.

Swanson said it will be a long climb to get out of the red. ABC Sports has lost money 8 of the last 10 years.

"ABC Sports will be in the red until at least 1990," he said. "For the first time since 1971 our advertisement revenues fell three per cent and that represents $250 million."

Swanson was on a panel to discuss "The Future of Postseason Football."

He discouraged an immediate switch by schools to a playoff system.

"It would be awkward to have bowls and a playoff system," he said. "And it's not something you can do with just two or four teams. A playoff system that doesn't have everyone involved is not something you want."

Swanson warned that college football's golden goose which paid out millions each year is a sick bird.

"We're at the point of limits. Reality is here," he said.

He warned that "everything will suffer" in televised sports in 1988 when ABC Sports televises the winter Olympics from Calgary, Canada and NBC televises the summer Olympics from Seoul, Korea.

"There aren't people on Madison Avenue printing money," he said. "We have to be careful. We don't want to throw out bowls but I can tell you we're not going to lose $3 million on the Sugar Bowl every year.

Kahn to join pro golf tour

Associated Press

Midland's Randolph Michael Kahn, 30, has become a member of the Professional Golfers' Association of America.

Kahn, an assistant pro at Green Tree Country Club, was elected to membership May 1, and becomes a member of the Northern Texas Section of the PGA.

To become a member of the PGA, Kahn had to receive approximately three years of on-the-job training while working at a recognized golf facility as a registered apprentice; complete two week-long business schools conducted by the PGA; pass a playing ability test; and complete a standaridized interview at his local section level.

Once attained, membership must be renewed every three years via recertification requirements by earning points in participation, service and self-improvement programs on local and national levels. There are now more than 9,000 members in the PGA.

Basketball is funny game

But don't tell that to Celtics

NBA Playoffs

HOUSTON (AP) — Coach Bill Fitch, bitterly disappointed by two third-quarter blowouts that gave Boston easy victories, is not giving up hope that his Rockets can still pull out the NBA championship.

"Basketball is a funny game," Fitch said. "If you give us just one win, anything can happen. With a young team like ours and a team that's learning and improving every game, one win could be a great thing."

In the third quarter of the first two games of the best-of-seven series on Monday and Thursday night, the Rockets were outscored 30-17 and 34-19.

"We were humiliated," Fitch said. "I know we can play better basketball. It's been so long since the bottom dropped out on this team the way it did (Thursday night). It's embarrassing to get to the finals and play like this."

By losing the first two games of the finals in Boston, the Rockets did what NBA teams have done 40 consecutive times on the Celtics' homecourt. The Celtics have not lost at Boston Garden since Dec. 6 against Portland.

"I thought Houston definitely had to come in here and get one of the first two," said Larry Bird, who was 12-of-19 from the field, most of them from far outside, and finished with 31 points in Boston's 117-95 victory Thursday. "We held the homecourt advantage and we feel we are not going to lose at home. We'll see if we can go down there and win a couple of games."

The third, fourth and fifth games are scheduled for the Houston Summit on Sunday, Tuesday and Thursday. If the Celtics can win two of those three, they will return home with their 16th NBA title in 18 appearances in the finals.

And if Boston manages a sweep, it will own the best overall record of any team in NBA history. The 1971-72 Los Angeles Lakers were 69-13, an all-time best in the regular season, and 12-3 in the playoffs for a combined record of 81-16.

The Celtics were 67-15 this season, and a sweep of the Rockets would give them a 14-1 playoff mark for an overall best of 82-16.

"We are going to try to smoke them in Game 3," said Celtics guard Dennis Johnson, who scored 18 points Thursday. "We are going to try to do down there what we did in the last two games. We know the Rockets will be ready. They will be tough in the Summit, where they haven't lost in the playoffs."

Although he improved his scoring total from two to 18 points in Game 2, Ralph Sampson managed only three in the second half.

"We're stopping ourselves," the 7-foot-4 Sampson said. "When we go home we need to be confident. I feel good about playing at home. We'll play in our own gym, sleep in our own beds and eat our own food. What we need to do is play defense, rebound and run."

Akeem Olajuwon again led the Rockets in scoring, but like Sampson he struggled in the second half. Olajuwon collected only four of his 21 points after halftime.

Loyola Marymount downs LSU in opener, 4-3

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Consecutive doubles by Billy Bean and Chris Donnels in the bottom of the eighth lifted Loyola Marymount to a 4-3 victory over second-ranked Louisiana State in the first-round of the College World Series Friday.

The sixth-ranked Lions, 50-13, advance to Monday's 7:10 p.m. CDT winners bracket contest against the winner of the Maine-Arizona contest late Friday.

LSU, 54-13, falls into the losers bracket for a 4:10 p.m. elimination game Sunday against the Maine-Arizona loser.

Loyola, making its first appearance in the college championship series, used a two-out error to jump to a 3-0 lead in the second inning. Donnels singled and Jim McAnany was hit by a pitch before Todd Elliott doubled Donnels home.

McAnany and Elliott scored when LSU's Joey Belle lost a Bobby DeJardin pop up in the sun.

LSU picked up its first run in the seventh when Eric Johnson reached first on a fielder's choice, moved up on Rob Hartwig's infield single and scored on a single by pinch-hitter Craig Faulkner.

Pogo the Pelican after being fitted with an artificial leg at Chessington Zoo in England hobbles around. Pogo was crippled during a snow storm last winter.

By ANGUS PHILLIPS
Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — When Farwell Smith, fund-raiser for the Wilderness Society in Washington and an outdoorsman most of his life, took a trip to visit island villages near Vancouver, British Columbia, two years ago, he didn't expect to end up on a life raft.

Smith, a former merchant seaman, considered the 90-foot converted shrimper he boarded safe for his group of 20 mostly elderly folks, but he was surprised at the apparent ineptitude of the crew, thrown together by the travel agency that chartered the boat.

"I knew the crew was woefully inadequate," said Smith, "but you don't connect that sort of thing with sinking."

That's exactly what happened, in a storm in the middle of the 130-mile Hecate Straits.

SMITH WAS helpful and lucky. He took the helm during the night-long gale while the captain prepared the life rafts, and Smith's daughter Loren, 25, a world-class rower, helped organize the evacuation. In the end, rescuers came swiftly, and no one was injured.

"But I had to laugh," said Smith. "I said, 'I'm here for a quiet vacation. What the hell am I doing on a life raft?' "

What Smith was doing was staying alive, a challenge more and more Americans find themselves addressing as they turn to the outdoors and so-called "risk-adventure" sports for entertainment.

OUTDOOR recreation is a booming, $200-billion-a-year industry in the United States, according to the President's Commission on Americans Outdoors. In a recent survey, the commission characterized 16 percent of U.S. adults as "excitement-seeking competitives" in outdoor sports.

Whether these folks go whitewater rafting, mountaineering, ocean voyaging, hiking, rock climbing, hunting, fishing, diving, kayaking, hang gliding, winter camping or cross-country skiing, they are, as Smith and others have found out, exposing themselves to risk.

And trouble can happen to anyone. Just last week, a member of the President's Commission on Americans Outdoors, Salley Ranney, fractured her spine in a snowmobile accident while touring the Snowy Range Mountains in Wyoming on official business.

Ed Darrell, the commission's public affairs director, remembers serving on a panel investigating the case of a star Arizona State University football player who died on a school recreation class trip when he fell out of his canoe on a flat-water stretch of the Colorado River.

"The man didn't know how to swim, no one bothered to ask and he wasn't wearing a life jacket," said Darrell. "It was just a disaster waiting to happen."

IN THIS area, more than 55 persons have drowned in the Potomac River between Great Falls and Little Falls in the last decade, most of them rock hoppers, fishermen or novice boaters who misjudged the tremendous power of the river.

In the last two weeks, disasters focused new attention on the perils of outdoor recreation as seven teenagers and two teachers froze to death in a snowstorm on Mount Hood in Oregon, and four hands from the clipper ship Pride of Baltimore apparently drowned in a sinking off Puerto Rico.

On the surface, these events could be blamed on cataclysmic acts of nature — a howling blizzard and a murderous squall. But for anyone who uses the outdoors, they raised familiar questions: Did people have to die? Did those in charge know what they were doing? Did warnings go unheeded? Were the groups reasonably prepared for the worst?

"When I set up a trip, I'm always playing, 'What if?' " said Benji Simpson, director of Passages, a West Virginia outfitter specializing in whitewater rafting, mountaineering, ice-climbing and winter camping. "What if the weather changes? What if this guy flips his boat?

"You play the game because in doing adventures, people are going to get hurt, and you have to know what to do when it happens."

SIMPSON was one of several outfitters, outdoorsmen, club safety officers and government officials interviewed last week in a look at the safety of the outdoor adventure industry in light of the recent accidents.

The picture that emerged is of an unpredictable patchwork of government controls on commercial guides and outfitters who lead adventures, an insurance problem that has gotten out of hand and, perhaps above all, a consensus that people who take up adventure sports have an obligation to acquaint themselves with the risks in advance and not leave all the decision-making to someone they hire.

"There's a hell of a lot of people exposing themselves to a lot of risk," said Smith, "and most of them don't get hurt. But I, myself, am almost hysterically careful. I've seen what can happen."

"People have the idea that when they hire an outfitter they are transferring the risk to him," said Simpson, "but people have to be responsible for their own actions. I can take you skiing or rafting, but if you don't pay attention, if you don't paddle when I say paddle, that responsibility is yours."

LAKE BROWNWOOD is the first test of the effect the 14-inch limit on largemouth bass will have and Texas Parks and Wildlife biologists are encouraged by the early returns.

"Our surveys in 1984 and 1985 indicated an apparent lack of quality-sized bass in the lake," said Roy Bamberg of the TPWD. "We felt that fishermen were removing too many bass before they could reach quality size."

Bamberg says catch rates improved dramatically this spring. "Also electroshocking surveys indicated a greater number of bass over 14 inches long were present in the lake over the previous year," Bamberg said.

It was also pointed out that the Lake Brownwood tournament in April showed anglers caught 181 bass, compared to 71 a year ago. Total weight was 404 pounds to 139 in 1985...

SAN ANTONIO'S Lake Braunig has been stocked with 92,000 custom-produced largemouth bass in a first ever experiment by the TPWD in which brood fish collected from Braunig to produce fingerlings in the lake.

Some 100 female brood fish were collected this spring by electroshocking, and the 15 healthiest were selected for spawning at Huntsville State Fish Hatchery. "We examined every female, using length/weight analysis to obtain the best-conditioned fish," said biologist Dick Luetbke. "They are fish that outcompeted the others, so their offspring should be well-suited to the lake."

The brooders, primarily Florida strain bass, were placed in rearing ponds with male native northern largemouth, so the offspring are hybrids of the type sometimes referred to as superbas. They often grow faster and can get larger than pure Florida or native bass.

Braunig is the only lake in Texas with a true "trophy" length limit. No bass under 21 inches in length may be retained...

A spotted seatrout tagged and released in 1982 was caught during January, says biologist Paul Hammerschmidt of the TPWD. Released in the Lower Laguna Madre near Rincon de San Jose and caught by Mark Patterson of Corpus Christi on Jan. 7 in Corpus Christi Bay near Cole Park. The fish had traveled 67 miles and had grown 7.1 inches during that time. It was 28 inches long when captured.

The fish's survival was made more remarkable by the fact that it survived the freeze which was fatal to thousands of trout in the Laguna Madre...

Play was halted and more than 4,000 spectators were cleared from the No. 1 court in four minutes after security detected the suspicious package.

"We were not anxious. We did not inform the public" as to why they were being temporarily evacuated, tournament director Patrice Clerc said.

Noah, who in 1983 became the first Frenchman in 37 years to win the title at Roland Garros, struggled to victory for the third straight time, downing Fernando Luna of Spain 4-6, 7-6, 6-4, 6-3.

"My ankle was hurting," Noah said. "It was difficult to concentrate. I used a lot of energy to get me through."

Noah said the ankle, which he injured two months ago, then re-injured "two weeks ago at home when I dropped a suitcase on it," was swollen and "is like a sprained ankle."

Smith, Reardon silence Astros

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Bryn Smith and Jeff Reardon combined on a three-hitter and Mike Fitzgerald homered and singled for Montreal's only hits as the Expos defeated the Houston Astros 1-0 Friday night.

Smith, 4-4, allowed only one Houston runner to reach as far as second base in 7 1-3 innings and snapped a two-game personal losing streak. Reardon came on in the eighth inning to record his National League-leading 12th save.

Mike Scott, 4-4, was the loser despite striking out a career-high 11 batters and pitching a two-hitter. Scott's previous career high was 10 strikeouts set May 25 against the Chicago Cubs. Scott, the major-league strikeout leader, increased his season total to 98 in 88 2-3 innings. Scott has struck out nine batters in a game five times this season.

Reds 6, Cardinals 4

CINCINNATI — Ron Oester drove in three runs with a pair of homers Friday night as the Cincinnati Reds came from behind hand St. Louis its fifth consecutive loss.

Joe Price, 1-1, pitched 3 2-3 hitless innings in relief of John Denny for his first win since last June, before he was disabled by a sore elbow. John Franco pitched the last three innings for his seventh save.

Loser Ray Burris, 2-1, allowed just three hits in the first five innings, but two of them were homers — Bo Diaz's third of the season with the bases empty in the second, and Oester's liner over the right-center field wall with Diaz on by a walk in the fifth to tie the game 3-3.

The loss was the 12th in the last 15 games for the defending National League champion Cardinals, who have the worst record in the league at 16-27.

Cubs 6, Braves 1

CHICAGO — Ryne Sandberg hit two home runs and drove in four runs Friday in support of pitcher Scott Sanderson.

Sandberg hit a three-run homer off loser Rick Mahler, 4-5, in the first inning after Davey Lopes had singled and Gary Matthews walked. He also homered in the third for his fifth of the season.

It marked the seventh time in his career Sandberg had homered in successive at-bats. The last time he did it was at Atlanta last August.

Phillies 2, Padres 0

PHILADELPHIA — Kevin Gross pitched his fourth complete game and first shutout of the season as the Philadelphia Phillies won their fourth straight.

Gross, 4-5, allowed eight hits, striking out four and walking two. Padres starter Eric Show, 3-3, worked six innings.

Jeff Stone opened the Philadelphia fifth inning with his second single and reached second on a ground out. Juan Samuel singled to center scoring Stone for a 1-0 lead.

Mike Schmidt followed with a single to center which glanced off the glove of center fielder Kevin McReynolds for an error, Samuel scoring and Schmidt reaching second.

Giants 7, Mets 6

NEW YORK — San Francisco shortstop Jose Uribe collided with rookie second baseman Robby Thompson and allowed Rafael Santana's infield pop fly to drop, scoring Kevin Mitchell with two outs in the 10th inning as New York won its sixth straight victory.

Thompson hit a bases-empty homer to left field with none out in the top of the 10th to give the Giants a 7-6 lead.

Keith Hernandez led off the Mets' 10th with a single off Greg Minton and pinch-hitter Kevin Mitchell singled one out later off reliever Mark Davis, 1-3.

Hernandez and Mitchell advanced to second and third on Juan Berenguer's wild pitch andpinch-hitter Howard Johnson walked to load the bases.

Ray Knight followed with a sacrifice fly to left for his third RBI of the game, scoring Hernandez and tying the game 7-7.

Santana then lifted a popup to the right side of the infield that Uribe and Thompson let drop for an error, as Mitchell, running all the way, crossed the plate.

Dan Gladden, pinch hitting for reliever Jeff Robinson, hit a one-out single in the eighth and Will Clark — with two outs — hit a run-scoring double to center field off reliever Roger McDowell to tie the game at 6-6.

George Foster's homer, enabled the Mets to take a 5-4 lead in the third inning, following a single to right by Darryl Strawberry off Giants starter Mike LaCoss.

Foster, whose seven homers have come in his last nine hits over 17 games, has driven in a total of 16 runs over that span.

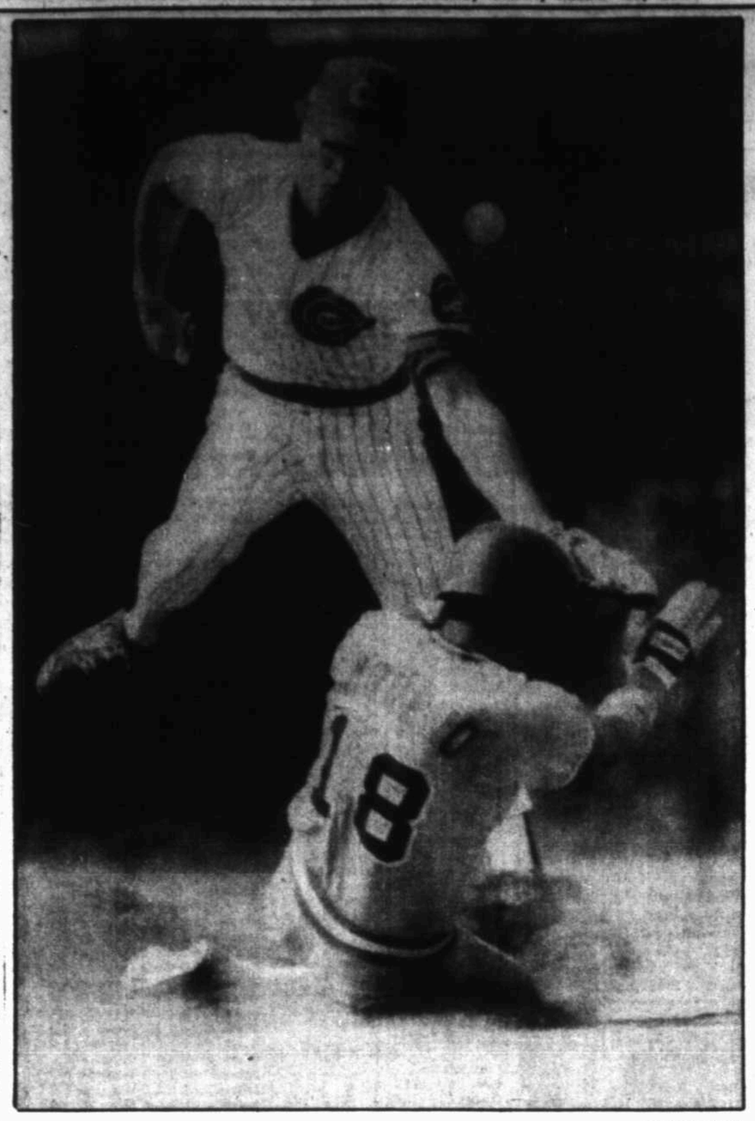

Dodgers 6, Pirates 4

PITTSBURGH — Steve Sax beat out a bases-loaded infield single with two out in the 11th inning to score Reggie Williams with the winning run.

Williams drew a one-out walk off Jose DeLeon, 1-2, the fourth of five Pirates' pitchers, before DeLeon hit Franklin Stubbs with a 2-2 pitch and walked Mariano Duncan to load the bases.

Sax then hit a grounder to Tony Pena, playing first base for only the third time this season. DeLeon was slow to cover first and Sax won the footrace with Pena to first. Pat Clements replaced DeLeon and walked Ken Landreaux to force in the second run of the inning before getting Bill Madlock to ground into a force out.

Tom Niedenfuer, 3-2, pitched two scoreless innings in relief for the victory. Alejandro Pena got two outs in the bottom of the 11th and Jerry Reuss recorded the final out for his first save.

Verplank retains first in NCAAs

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Scott Verplank of Oklahoma State carded a 1-over-par 73 Friday, holding onto a 1-stroke lead in the NCAA Division I men's golf championship.

Verplank, who went into the third round at the par-72, 7,079-yard Bermuda Country Club course with an 8-under-par 136, finished the day with a 7-under 209.

Brigham Young's Eduardo Herrara and John Daly of Arkasas each shot a 7-under-par 65 to break the competitive course record of 66 set by Wake Forest's Gary Hallberg during the 1979 NCAA tournament.

Oklahoma State stayed No. 1 in the team standings with 862 as Brigham Young moved up from 16th to second with 870. Oklahoma, which had been tied for first with Wake Forest, dropped to third at 871, followed by Miami at 873 and USC and Wake Forest at 878.

Ex-Rebel Junior Miller to join Cowboys

From Staff Reports

DALLAS — Tight end Junior Miller, who attended Midland Lee High School, agreed to sign with the Dallas Cowboys, it was learned today.

Miller, a 6-foot-4, 240-pound native of Midland, Texas, was the seventh selection in the 1980 NFL draft. He played college football at Nebraska, and has played for the Atlanta Falcons and New Orleans Saints.

Miller was selected by the Falcons and played for them until he was traded by the Falcons to the Saints in 1984. He played for the Saints in 1984, but was unable to reach an agreement with them before the 1985 season and did not play at all that season although he became a free agent.

In five years in the NFL, Miller has caught 122 passes for 1,409 yards and 14 touchdowns.

Larry Holmes threatens to sue IBF

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Former heavyweight champion Larry Holmes says he will sue the IBF if the organization fails to overturn his April 19 loss to Michael Spinks. "What they have to do is tell Michael they made a mistake, and then apologize to me for making a mistake and give me my title back," Holmes said. "I know they're not going to do it. But that will lead to litigation, and that's what it's all about."...

In Portland to attend the IBF convention, Holmes said he would sue for "hundreds of millions of dollars, if I have to," trying to make up for losing the income that goes with the title and lucrative championship defenses.

Spinks, who won the IBF title with a decision over the previously undefeated Holmes on Sept. 21, 1985, retained it with the controversial 15-round decision last month.

Before that fight, Holmes was quoted as making disparaging remarks about the quality of judging at Las Vegas, Nev. He said he was misinterpreted, but nonetheless apologized to Nevada officials before the fight.

Then, when the decision was announced, Holmes, 36, said his "big mouth" had gotten him into trouble, and he since has criticized the decision and the IBF.

"I think they feel I was on the circuit too long, that it was time to get rid of me because I was a troublemaker, a guy with a big mouth," Holmes told The Oregonian newspaper. "I figured they plotted to get rid of me. They think they have got rid of me now, but the fight has just begun."

Holmes said he received a letter about two weeks ago from an IBF attorney who said that if Holmes didn't apologize, the federation would sue him. Holmes said he could not remember the attorney's name.

Bo Jackson looks in on Royals

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Heisman Trophy winner Bo Jackson of Auburn, who is also a top-flight baseball prospect, visited Royals Stadium Friday night.

Dressed in a blue pinstripe suit and accompanied by his agent, Jackson was given the red-carpet treatment by the World Series champs prior to their game against the Texas Rangers.

"This is a beautiful stadium and a great city," said agent Tom Zieman, Jr. of Mobile, Ala. "Who wouldn't be interested in the Royals? They're the finest organization in the world."

Jackson declined to speak to the media.

The Tampa Bay Buccaneers made Jackson, a running back with a rare blend of power and speed, the first player taken in last month's National Football League draft.

SWC not the hub of brotherly love

An AP Sports Analysis
By DENNE H. FREEMAN

DALLAS — Sometimes you get the feeling the Southwest Conference should be headquartered in Lebanon where everybody is just naturally mad at everybody all the time.

Nobody likes anybody down here. Do unto your neighbor before he does unto you is the First Commandment in SWC country.

The SWC members keep turning each other into the NCAA for rules violations and two members are in the NCAA's jail. Others are being fitted for prison garb.

This league has turned into one long dark alley where back-stabbing is a fine art.

The recent spring meeting in San Antonio did little for SWC brotherly love, if there was any still around.

Some of the private schools came away thinking they had been stuck between the shoulder blades.

The topic this time wasn't cheating on recruiting that caused a rush of blood. All the sound and fury was over dividing the ticket take at football games.

THE SWC approved a change in the formula for paying gate receipts to visiting football teams. Beginning this fall, schools will negotiate individual contracts with the other schools in the league for home and visitor shares.

The only stipulation: The visitors must get at least $75,000. Anything beyond that must come in one-on-one negotiations.

Under the plan, the big daddies of the SWC and their big stadiums like Texas, Texas A&M, and Arkansas could stand to prosper even more. They won't have to share as much of their lucrative home gate receipts in their cavernous stadiums.

The day of the 50-50 split is dead. Schools that do not draw well like Rice have no bargaining power.

As expected, Rice, Baylor, Texas Christian and Houston voted against the change to a straight, guaranteed payoff.

Texas, Arkansas, Texas Tech, Texas A&M, and Southern Methodist voted for the proposal.

SMU'S VOTE settled the matter and Mustangs' Athletic Director Bob Hitch didn't make any buddies with his fellow private schoolls by voting with the SWC state big boys.

Hitch had a ready answer.

"We compete in a professional market against the Dallas Cowboys, Dallas Mavericks and the Texas Rangers," said Hitch. "We feel we must do more promotional things."

Under the old formula SMU had to pay $5.50 a ticket to the visiting school for EVERY ticket it gave away on a promotional night.

"It kept us from getting involved in promotional deals," said Hitch. "Now we can do public relations and promotional things. We have the freedom to work with charity groups and do other things."

Hitch said it's about time the SWC started waking up.

"We're in bad shape, financially," he said. "People think this is football country and everything is great. It isn't."

Hitch said the new SWC ticket money program forces schools to promote the product.

"I'm not popular with the other private schools right now but the way we had been going was not good," he said. "The problem right now is that six of the conference schools (Rice, Houston, TCU, Baylor, Texas Tech, and SMU) are in trouble and they had better get to work."

Hitch was right about not being popular.

RICE Executive Athletic Director Augie Erfurth told Mickey Humphrey of the Waco Tribune-Herald: "I feel the conference schools should support one another, but that's not the case here."

At Baylor, Athletic Director Bill Menefee said his school will lose money on it. He even resubmitted his budget to the board of regents based on lower ticket receipt predictions.

"This deal could hurt SMU if I don't do a good job of promoting," said Hitch. "Rice has the opportunity to make as much as it can. This new ticket structure will force all of us to work harder."

Hurt feelings are the least of Hitch's worries.

KC Royals show Rangers no respect

Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Rudy Law hit three doubles and scored four runs and Steve Balboni and Willie Wilson each homered Friday night to power the Kansas City Royals to a 12-2 rout of the Texas Rangers.

Dennis Leonard, 5-4, gave up six hits through seven innings, struck out four and walked one before giving way to Scott Bankhead. The loss went to Bobby Witt, 2-4.

Two Texas outfielders left the game with minor injuries. Pete Incaviglia twisted the knuckle on the middle finger of his left hand while striking out in the fifth and Gary Ward was hit by a pitch in the first. X-rays on Ward's left elbow were negative, a Rangers spokesman said.

Wilson led off the Royals' first with his fourth home run, then Lonnie Smith walked and scored on Law's first double. A groundout sent Law to third and he made it 3-1 on an infield out by Frank White.

Balboni doubled leading off the fourth and went to third on an infield out. After Smith walked, Law doubled to score Balboni and put Smith at third. Mickey Mahler then relieved Witt and surrendered a two-run single to George Brett.

Balboni hit his seventh home run leading off the fifth. The Royals loaded the bases in the sixth on Law's double, Brett's walk and White's single. Hal McRae then unloaded a two-run single and Balboni brought White in with an infield out.

Brewers 11, Indians 7

CLEVELAND — Cecil Cooper drove in five runs with a double and two singles Friday night and Paul Molitor homered, singled and scored three times in his first appearance in three weeks as Milwaukee handed Cleveland its sixth straight loss.

Milwaukee rookie left-hander Juan Nieves, 5-1, won his fifth decision without a loss this month, giving up five runs, four of them earned, on 10 hits, striking out three and walking three in six innings. Mark Clear worked out of a bases-loaded jam in the Indians' six-run seventh and went on to gain his third save.

The Brewers are 7-0 in games started by the 21-year-old Nieves in May, although he did not get decisions in two of those.

Molitor, who had not played since May 9 because of a slightly torn hamstring, led off the game with a homer, his third, against Cleveland starter Phil Niekro, 3-4. It was the first of 18 Milwaukee hits off five Cleveland pitchers.

The Indians had 15 hits and left 15 men on base.

American

Blue Jays 6, White Sox 0

TORONTO — Dave Stieb, backed by home runs from Rick Leach and Rance Mulliniks, won for the first time in 11 starts this year with a four-hitter.

Stieb, the American League earned-run average leader last year, had not won a regular-season game since last Sept. 27 and was 0-6 going into Friday night's game with a 6.83 ERA.

Steib has always had success against Chicago and is now 13-3 lifetime against the White Sox with a 1.74 ERA. Stieb, who walked three and struck out five, gained his first complete-game victory since last Aug. 4.

It was the sixth straight loss for Chicago.

Twins 13, Red Sox 5

MINNEAPOLIS — Roy Smalley knocked in four runs with two homers, including one in a five-run third inning.

Smalley's blasts, one right-handed and the other left-handed, came in support of Keith Atherton, 2-2, who won his first game since Minnesota acquired him May 20 with 5 1-3 innings of four-hit relief.

Minnesota won for the fourth time in five games while snapping Boston's four-game winning streak. The Red Sox lost for only the second time in 12 games.

The Twins entered their half of the third trailing 4-3 but Smalley tied the score with a right-field, upper-deck shot off Boston starter Rob Woodward, 0-1.

Kent Hrbek's single chased Woodward in favor of Tim Lollar, whose third pitch was hit over the left-center field fence by Tom Brunansky, his 11th homer of the year. Lollar then walked Randy Bush and Gasy Gaetti before yielding Steve Lombardozzi's two-run double that gave the Twins an 8-4 lead.

Baseball's Real Franchise not even on field

Baseball, which is periodically worried about the disappearance of the .400 hitter, the 30-game winner or the 50-60 home run slugger, might do well to worry about another disappearing species -- the silver-tongued, golden-throated, non-roster player in the broadcast booth. It's not the arms they have to worry about, it's the larynxes.

On most scorecards, it's customary to think of the fastball pitcher or the cleanup hitter as The Franchise. But the real Franchise may be a guy who can't hit or throw a curveball, steal a base or drive in a run but who can weave such a mystique about the game that he's worth more to the box office than any three people who can.

Baseball needs dramatizing. All sports need dramatizing. "If you have to depend solely on the people who know and love this game for its own sake," the late Bill Veeck, who knew the game as few men did, used to say, "you will be out of business by Mother's Day."

THIS IS not always readily apparent to those who do know and love the game for its own sake, nor is it always readily apparent to the athlete who knows and loves the money and thinks the game has always been around in its present form to provide it for him.

But the facts of the matter are, baseball became Camelot, a golden city shimmering in the distance for young imaginations, not alone on the skills of the players but the imaginations of their chroniclers.

Radio, like silent pictures, always left room for the free roam of imagination. We supplied our own dialogue for wordless pictures and our own glorified action for pictureless words.

The men who brought them to us became stars of the dimension of any they talked about - the Vin Scullys, Ted Husings, Red Barbers, Graham McNamees, Curt Gowdys, Harry Carays, Bob Princes. You wonder who is going to replace them when they're gone. Bob Prince is already gone. Gowdy has hung up his headset.

The new breed don't seem to see knights in shining armor in pursuit of a Holy Grail. The new breed seems to concentrate on the nuts and bolts of the competition, offering us "insights" on the arts and mysteries of the infield fly rule and the nuances of the run-and-hit as opposed to the hit-and-run.

THE ROMANCE of baseball has never been its technical data. It's not in how Sandy Koufax held his curveball, it's in how Pie Traynor got his nickname. No one wants to know where Babe Ruth gripped the bat but everyone wants to know what it was like the day he called his shot. The compelling drama of Lou Gehrig's life was not how he faced Bob Feller but how he faced death. Sports as a metaphor for life is what gives it its fascination. Technical aspects is just pipe fitting. And no one wants to broadcast that.

Ernie Harwell, who has done the Detroit Tiger baseball for the past 25 years, is one of the last of the old breed. Like Scully and Allen - and like Ty Cobb and Henry Aaron - he's in the Hall of Fame.

Gifted with the melodious tones of a wood thrush, Ernie, like most of the Hall of Fame throats, learned his business at a time when a man had to make do with a ticker tape for inspiration, had to describe games he never saw, recreate action that may or may not have taken place. Real games were easy after that. On the other hand, it's easy to make people larger than life when they exist only in your head. The lesson was driven home: to give the game dramatic impact, you need more than eyes.

ERNIE has described his career in a new book "Tuned To Baseball," published by Diamond Communications, Inc., and it's a fun trip through the most nostalgic sport of all, also the most American, baseball.

It was Roy Campanella who said that, in order to play in the big leagues, you had to be a man - but you had to have a lot of little boy in you, too. What was true of players was true of their broadcasters. You had to have a lot of the wonder of the little kid watching the game through a hole in the fence.

"Burnout" is a word to describe what happens to those who don't love what they do. Ernie Harwell was never one of those. His book is a description of a 45-year love affair with the grand old game and the characters who walked through it.

Here is the late Paul Richards, the burning-eyed mentor and stern leader, sitting scowling in a steamy dressing room after a loss for three hours, knowing his players are forbidden to dress and shower until he has. Here is Charlie Dressen, eyeing a utility player, dying to be put in the game to pinch-hit, barking "George! Grab a bat! And go in the clubhouse and stir that pot of chili I have cooking near the shower."

Here is Willie Mays coming up to batting practice the first time, a 19-year-old kid put together by someone who must have had baseball in mind when they did it, and spectators begin to feel their scalp prickle as he goes after a curveball.

Here is Bobby Thomson's historic home run curving toward the stands and the announcer who has already told the country on television "It's gone!" suddenly wondering if Andy Pafko is going to catch it after all.

Here is the man responsible for engaging Jose Feliciano to sing the Star Spangled Banner at the World Series, getting threatening calls after Jose elects to sing a soul version of our national anthem.

THE BASEBALL broadcaster is as much a part of Americana as the coonskin cap. But the bad news is he may soon be as long gone as the circuit rider.

"Baseball is the President of the United States throwing out the first ball," says Ernie Harwell, "and a scrubby schoolboy playing catch with his dad on a Mississippi farm.

"Baseball is a rookie - his experience no bigger than the lump in his throat as he begins fulfillment of his dream. And it's a veteran - a tired old man of 35 hoping those aching muscles will pull him through another sweltering August.

"Baseball is cigar smoke, hot roasted peanuts, The Sporting News, Ladies Day, Down In Front, 'Take Me Out To The Ball Game,' 'The Star Spangled Banner.'"

Baseball is also the 66-year-old man in the booth who can see the game through the little boy's eyes and give it a dimension it could never achieve by itself, who can spin dreams for yet another generation in the happy kingdom of baseball, our own golden pond they'll see to it we never lose our wonder over.

Bolling edges into golfing lead

KEMPER GOLF

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — Charlie Bolling shot a 70 Friday to move seven under par and take a one-stroke lead over four golfers after the second round of the $500,000 Kemper Open.

Fred Couples held a three-stroke lead after the first round but fell four strokes off the pace after struggling to a 77 and 141 total. Couples, who tied the Congressional Golf Course record with an 8-under-par 64 in the opening round, lost four strokes to par when he shot a seven on the par-3 16th hole.

Bobby Clampett, Mike Reid, Larry Mize and Leonard Thompson each finished the second round at 138, one stroke off the pace.

Dan Forsman and Donnie Hammond were two strokes back at 139 and Curtis Strange shot a 67 to remain in the battle for the $90,000 first prize.

Ex-Kemper titlists Couples, Craig Stadler and Greg Norman were among six players who reached the halfway point of the tournament four strokes back.

After shooting a 74 in the opening round, Clampett moved back into contention with a 64, tying the course record Couples equaled on Thursday.

Clampett also tied both Kemper Open and Congressional records by firing a sparkling 30 on the front-nine, matching the mark last set by Jack Nicklaus in 1982. Clampett's nine birdies also tied a Congressional best.

"I couldn't hit the side of a barn with my driver during practice today," Clampett said. "I only hit about two of 30 balls on the fairway during warmups, but when I stepped out on the course things started working out for me."

Clampett, who has registered only one triumph since joining the PGA Tour in 1980, said his effort Friday "was the best round I've had in years." He also claimed that his 30 on the final nine holes "ranks right up there with the best nines I've ever had."

Bolling, who has never finished higher than ninth in a PGA tournament, registered five birdies, including three on the final four holes. "I feel good about my position, but heck, we're only halfway through," he said.

Cirrus claims first in soccer

Seven teams represented Midland in the recent Permian Basin Soccer Association tournament at Dallas with Cirrus taking first place in the men's 30-and-over division.

The Berg Dustbusters were second in the Rec III women's league while Exodus was third in the Rec I Women's class. The Dustdevils were third in the Men's Rec 1.

Other teams from the PBSA were: The Images, Soc-Hers, women; and Pegasus.

"We didn't look like the team that brought us here," Olajuwon said. "We have to regroup. I don't know why we played so poorly."

The Celtics, meanwhile, had a complete turnaround in their weakest category in the first game — free throws. Embarrassed by missing 10 of 27 attempts in Game 1, Boston came back to set a championship series record for free throw percentage on Thursday.

The Celtics were 23-for-24 from the line, a .958 percentage, surpassing the .943 established by Los Angeles against Philadelphia in 1980. The Lakers went 33-for-35.

All-City soccer team picked

The 12-player All City Soccer team for Midland Junior High Schools was selected by a committee of coaches for the three schools.

Players were selected from nominations submitted by the coaches on the basis of athletic skills, sportsmanship, teamwork and overall contribution to the promotion of scholastic soccer.

City champion Goddard place five players on the team while San Jacinto had four and Alamo three. Ten eighth graders and two seventh graders make up the team. Each player demonstrated his versatility and leadership by achieving honors in other areas such as academics, football, basketball, band, track, tennis, Boy Scouts and church.

Certificates were presented to the players. The MJHS is independent of the MSA and players purchase their own uniforms, shoes and even the balls.

The coaches were volunteers. Players selected:

Midfielder Craig Brownson, 5-6, 120, Goddard; Wing David Clark, 5-7, 115, Alamo; Defender Michael Dougherty, 5-3 108, Alamo; Wing Mark Ferguson, 5-4, 105, Goddard; Center Alberto Flores, 5-9, 155, San Jacinto; Defender Sikes Johnson, 5-6, 140, San Jacinto; Striker Chris Jones, 5-5, 110, Goddard; Defender Russ Moore, 15-3, 110, Goddard; Midfielder Tony Moses, 5-10, 165, San Jacinto; Midfielder Shannon Pfleiderer, 5-9, 140, Alamo; Midfielder Erick Williams, 5-8, 125, Goddard; Wing James Woolsey, 5-7, 125, San Jacinto.

SWC hestitates to test

DALLAS (AP) — The steroid testing program that Southwest Conference officials are trying to implement has raised serious legal questions that are making officials hesitant to instate the program, the SWC commissioner said.

SWC athletic directors and faculty representatives decided last week in spring meetings in San Antonio to draft and vote on a conference steroid testing program this week at the College Football Association meetings in Dallas beginning Friday.

Because of the legal questions, however, Jacoby said he was unsure if SWC officials would make a decision on the testing by this weekend.

"It's purely a guess on my part, but I would think that we will not vote on it," Jacoby said. "We've still got a lot of work to do on it."

SWC officials want to know what the penalties would be for athletes that failed the tests, details of an appeals process, if athletes can be forced to take conference-imposed tests and how much prior notice can be given to athletes taking seroids so they can cleanse their systems in time for the first tests.

Steroids accelerate muscle growth and weight gain and can promote abnormal liver functioning and temporary sterility, said Dr. Tony Daly, medical director for the 1988 Olympics. They also lead to liver cancer, high blood pressure and hardening of the arteries.

Jackie Sherill, Texas A&M football coach and athletic director, said he favors testing but doesn't think there should be a conference program.

"Each school should have their own tests and then a member of the conference should go to each institution to make sure it is being properly administered," Sherril said.

The steroid testing proposal was made in April by Texas athletic director DeLoss Dodds.

He proposed that the SWC test 50 football players for steroids two weeks into fall practice. That proposal was amended to include 36 football payers and 14 from other sports.

Under Dodd's proposal, an athlete who failed would be disciplined by the school. A second test failure in 1987 would lead to suspension.

Most voting today do agree that if an athlete does test positive for steroids, that athletes name probably won't be released.

"I don't htink we ought to hang kids' laundry in public," said Dennis Robinson, SWC assistant commissioner.

Dodds said he doesn't know how many athletes would fail the test if it was instituted this fall.

Okamoto widens lead to three after 36 holes

LPGA

MASON, Ohio (AP) — Ayako Okamoto fired a 2-under-par 70 Friday to take a three-shot lead after two rounds of the LPGA Championship at the Jack Nicklaus Sports Center.

Okamoto, a native of Japan in her sixth year on the LPGA tour, followed a first-round 66 to move to 8-under-par 136 midway through the second of the four major championships of women's golf.

In a group three shots back at 139 came first-round leader Lori Garbacz; Pat Bradley, the tour's top money-winner; Mindy Moore, Muffin Spencer-Devlin and Ok-Hee Ku.

Okamoto, whose victory in the Elizabeth Arden earlier this season was the sixth of her career, played consistently on Friday, compiling 16 pars to go with her two birdies. She came into the tournament ranked 15th on the money-winning list.

Heading into the second round, Garbacz led the way at seven under with Okamoto six under and Bradley five under.

Moore, a non-winner in her sixth year on the tour, made the biggest move with a 6-under-par 66 following a first-round 73.

At 140, four under par, through 36 holes were Becky Pearson, who matched Moore's low score of the day with a 66, and Cindy Mackey.

Five shots back of the leader were three-time U.S. Open champion Hollis Stacy, Robin Walton and Alice Ritzman.

Two-time LPGA champion Patty Sheehan led a group at 2-under 142. The 1982 LPGA champion, Jan Stephenson, was at 143, while Amy Alcott and JoAnne Carner were in a group at 142, even par and eight shots back of Okamoto.

The field was cut to low 70 scores and ties at the completion of the day's round.

SWC gives ax to media chief

DALLAS (AP) — The Southwest Conference fired its media relations dirctor and two other league officials resigned. Bill Morgan, who has been with the SWC since 1969, said Thursday he was fired by Fred Jacoby.

Bob Prewitt, supervisor of men's basketball officials for the past five years, and Jacque George, assistant director of media relations, said they had resigned.

Prewitt is expected to be replaced by SWC official Paul Galvan, principal at Fort Worth Trimble Tech. George said she resigned because of differences with Jacoby.

The Dallas Times Herald reported Friday that Morgan had come under heavy criticism from SWC basketball coaches and that some of those coaches didn't like Prewitt's connections with an SWC school. Prewitt, a former SMU basketball coach, is director of SMU's Dedman Center for Life Sports.

Morgan has been replaced on an interim basis by Charlie Fiss, assistant director of media relations.

Bat thrower enters innocent plea

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — A minor league baseball player has pleaded innocent to assault after he threw his bat into the stands during a Thursday night game and injured two women.

Cory Snyder, 23, shortstop for the Maine Guides, was released on his own recognizance Friday morning by Rochester City Court Judge John R. Schwartz, who set a pre-trial conference for June 12.

Schwartz said Snyder did not have to return to court for the conference, a request made by Snyder's attorney, Douglas Jones of Rochester.

Snyder, a former member of the U.S. Olympic baseball team and the Cleveland Indians No. 1 selection in the 1984 baseball draft, is charged with throwing his bat into the stands after flying out to center field in an International League game with the Rochester Red Wings.

His bat hit two women, Dorothy Matteson, 61, and her granddaughter Deborah Schirtz, 26. Both were treated for minor injuries and released from a nearby hospital.

Burned soldier to get Purple Heart

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A soldier who has been undergoing treatment for burns he suffered during a terrorist bombing at a West Berlin discotheque will receive the Purple Heart, officials said.

Spec. 4 David Jackson will be awarded the medal as soon as orders are received, a Brooke Army Medical Center spokesman said Thursday. The orders were mailed Thursday from Washington.

Jackson is in satisfactory condition with second- and third-degree burns over 70 percent of his body, received during the April 5 bombing, hospital officials say.

Maj. Bruce Bell, an Army spokesman at the Pentagon, said Jackson will join 38 other Army soldiers and two members of the Air Force who earlier received Purple Hearts for wounds sustained in the La Belle disco bombing that injured 63 Americans and 167 others.

The attack led to the April 14 U.S. air strike on Libya.

Jackson was in critical condition until May 1, when his condition was upgraded to serious. It was changed to satisfactory this week.

Over The Dam

"Well, that's water over the dam," we often say, dismissing any issue with an old adage and shift of mind.

But that doesn't always solve the issue. Water does not disappear. It DOES GO somewhere! It is neither destroyed nor vanished. It turns up elsewhere.

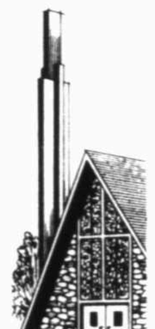

Problem issues are seldom solved by letting them go "over the dam." They have a tendency to turn up somewhere else, and often more severe than when first met.

I have a feeling that there are few REAL problems in life. What we call problems are only unmet opportunities begging for attention. But if left alone by "putting off facing them," or (what's worse) ignoring them, opportunities ultimately become problems.

Water does go "over the dam," but problems have a way of "damming up" inside of us, causing havoc with emotional health and wrecking meaningful relationships.

Look to God and your religious institutions for real solutions for your problems. Why not begin solving them this week?

MIDLAND SANITARY PLUMBING

Midland gospel singer to 'pedal' message

RELIGION

Beginning Sunday, native Midlander Betsy Brown will begin a two-month bicycle trip across the backroads of America. Beginning in Providence, R.I., this gospel singer will ride from town to town across the country until she ends her journey 60 days later in Newport, Oregon.

"The real purpose of my coast to coast bicycle/concert tour," Miss brown says, "is to share the good news of Jesus Christ on a one-to-one basis with grassroots America." she is calling her tour the "Backroads America Glory Ride."

"The backroads of America and the small towns where I will travel will allow me to share my faith through words and music in parks, at courthouse squares or even along the roadside," says this singer, songwriter and guitarist.

On the trip, Miss Brown will average 60-miles-per-day. The trip will take her to 12 states, 50 towns and over 3100 miles.

Heartsong Ministries, Inc., the coordinating baord of her worldwide ministries, encouraged her to use this approach to share the gospel. Jim Sale, formerly of Midland, who served as president, and Jim Ward, former Midland Country Club tennis pro, who served as vice president, gave her the greatest encouragement in pursuing this concert tour.

"Jim Ward really encouraged me to be physically fit these last few years and Jim Sale provided the balance by giving spiritual direction to my life. Both of these men, plus all the board members of Heartsong Ministries, Inc., have provided the energy and encouragement I have needed to be ready for this trip."

Current board memebers are Janice Henry, president; Kellie Merrick, vice president; Susan Roeber, treasurer; Janice Tankersley, secretary; Dorothy Brown; Bill and Kay Burchard; and James Nance, minister of music at First Baptist Church.

Miss Brown attended Midland High School and graduated from Hardin-Simmons University, Abilene, with a major in elementary education and a minor in music. She accepted a teaching position at Eagle Nest, N.M., following graduation. She enjoyed her work but felt she ought to be doing something else. At the end fo the school year in 1979, she submitted her resignation and began her music ministry.

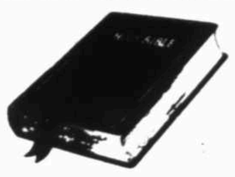

Soon after that, she received an invitation to accompany a mission trip to Yugoslavia. Upon her return to the States, requests began to pour in from the Fellowship of Christian Athletes asking her to perform at conferences held around the country and she was invited to sing at the 1980 Lake Placid Winter Olympics.

Miss Brown estimates that to date, she made more than a million personal contacts through concerts and retreats. She has performed in austria, Brazil, England, Israel, Switzerland, Taiwan and West germany as well as 25 states in the United States. She has performed on radio for the Armed forces network in Europe and for coast-to-coast religious programming in the United States.

She has recorded two gospel albums, "My Special Place" and "The Gift." A quote from her album "The Gift" perhaps best describes her philosophy about this trip: "If I could, I'd force you to accept the 'gift' that for so long has been kept — the secret for which men nave lived and died. A gift cannot be earned or bought. It's free! But it's only yours if you'll receive it. So I share with you through words and music...the gift...Jesus."

Miss Brown is being accompanied on her trip by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W.E. Brown of Midland. Cindy Anderson of Tucson, Ariz., is the driver for the support van.

The Newspaper BIBLE

"I'M THE GREATEST!"

And they began to argue among themselves as to who would have the highest rank (in the coming Kingdom).

Jesus told them, "In this world the kings and great men order their slaves around, and the slaves have no choice but to like it! But among you, the one who serves you best will be your leader. Out in the world the master sits at the table and is served by his servants. But not here! For I am your servant. Nevertheless, because you have stood true to me in these terrible days, and because my Father has granted me a Kingdom, I, here and now, grant you the right to eat and drink at my table in that Kingdom; and you will sit on thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel. (Luke 22:24-30)

About that time the disciples came to Jesus to ask which of them would be greatest in the Kingdom of Heaven!

Jesus called a small child over to him and set the little fellow down among them, and said, "Unless you turn to God from your sins and become as little children, you will never get into the Kingdom of Heaven. Therefore anyone who humbles himself as this little child, is the greatest in the Kingdom of Heaven. (Matthew 18:1-4)

Churches win key battle in IRS 'war'

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK — American churches have won a key round in a long battle with the Internal Revenue Service over their contention that it's their right — and not that of government — to determine what activities are religious.

Some church attorneys called the outcome a "watershed" victory. But others said further IRS changes were needed, and may be in the offing.

The struggle has gone on for nearly a decade, with some church agencies defying IRS insistence that they are not integral to religion and thus must file annual financial reports.

Several church units, such as Lutheran social services in Minnesota and a Tennessee Baptist children's home, have gone to court about the issue, winning basic points in their cases.

But for a long time, the combined church protest, pushed through a broad, ad hoc church Coalition on IRS Definitions of Religious bodies, "fell on deaf ears," says the Rev. Dean M. Kelley, coaltion secretary.

But a newly revised IRS approach, published May 19, will for all practical purposes, satisfy the church objections, says Kelley, also church-state affairs officer of the National Council of Churches.

Basically, the question has centered on who defines religion — the churches themselves or the government.

The IRS, under its long-time procedures, has defined church "integrated auxiliaries" — those exempt from filing financial returns — as those that were "exclusively religious."

But many church institutions — colleges, hospitals and other operations — were deemed not "exclusively religious" by the IRS, and were required to file reports (Form 990) on such matters as revenues, contributors and expenditures.

The churches see such institutions as inherent to religion. "The church has a right to define its own ministry," says the Rev. Charles V. Bergstrom, head of the Lutheran governmental affairs office in Washington, D.C.

It was on that basic point that the churches took their stand.

Their lawyers say the IRS has now agreed to a new procedure by which a "group ruling" will be applied to organizations listed by denominations as entitled to tax exemption.

However, those organizations listed will be treated as "integrated auxiliaries" — not required to file forms — only if they generally get at least half their support from churches and do not mainly serve the general public.

Attorney Gary Nash of Dallas, chairman of the church coalition, says the new IRS procedure "appears to signal a starting over by the IRS in its efforts to develop a satisfactory definition" of a church "integrated auxiliary."

While the term, "exclusively religious" remains in IRS regulations for the time being, coalition members say they think that sort of test will no longer be used by the IRS.

"The signficance for churches and their ministry organizations — teaching, healing, preaching and other missions of churches — is that the exclusively religious test apparently will no longer be used," Nash says.

Nash, counsel for the Southern Baptist annuity board, adds that "we expect the IRS to announce shortly a project to revise the existing regulations to be consistent with this new revenue procedure."

Hubert Forcier, a Minneapolis attorney who won a federal appeals court ruling that the IRS "exceeded its authority" in applying its "exclusively religious" test to Lutheran Social Services of Minnesota, says:

"I believe the IRS, or Congress will never again attempt to use a religious test in the code. But technically we still have a lot of church institutions that won't meet the internal support test."

He calls the new procedures a "96 percent victory," saying anticipated but slow processes for taking out the "exclusively religious" provision could take 15 years.

"I think this poses a difficult question for the churches whether they want to continue test cases," he adds.

Bergstrom praised both the IRS and the church coalition for the progress on the matter, saying it took a "a lot of patience" on both sides.

"Many of us have worked for years on this issue and there have been many disapppointments and delays," he says.

The logjam first began to ease in 1983 when the U.S. assistant Treasury secretary, John E. Chapoton, wrote Kelley, inviting the coalition to meet with the assistant IRS commissioner to discuss possible solutions. The revised approach eventually resulted.

KHBC to show new Dobson films

Over 50 million parents have been inspired by Dr. James Dobson's "Focus on the Family" film series.

"Now, building on that nationwide groundswell of interest, Kelview Heights Baptist Church presents 'Turn Your Heart Toward Home,'" said a spokesman for the church. "In this bold new film series, America's most trusted family life expert brings his vast experiences to bear on one of the society's most pressing challenges, protecting and strengthening family relationships."

The first film in the six-part series, "A Father Looks Back," will be shown at 10 a.m. Sunday. The remaining five films will be shown June 8 through July 6.

Citing example after familiar example, Dobson portrays the pressures to which today's parents are susceptible. "He reminds them of society's slide toward humanism and the undermining influences of radio, television, films and the press, which can only be counterbalanced by a loving home where Christian values are instilled from an early age," the spokesman said.

"A swelling majority of Americans sense the venerability of their own families and are willing to make all commitments necessary to preserve them. Dr. James and Shirley Dobson urge those individuals to get involved and return to the traditional values upon which families are best created and nutured. 'Turn Your Heart Toward Home' is a personally challenging film series that every parent should see."

The church's pastor, the Rev. Frank Johnson, invites the public to attend the showings. A nursery will be provided. Kelview Hieghts Baptist Church is located off north Big Spring Street at Scharbauer Drive.

'Marriage Enrichment' series to be shown

Brecheen and Faulkner's "Marriage Enrichment" film series will be shown at Crestview Baptist Church, 3300 Thomas Ave., beginning at 6 p.m. June 8. The series will run for eight consecutive weeks.

"Made for Each Other" opens the series. In this film, the creators take a look at God's design for marriage. The second film, "The Trouble With Us Is Me," offers solutions to selfish attitudes. It will be shown June 15.

Other films include:

— "What Husbands Need to Know," June 22, shows husbands ways to gain their wives' support and build their self-esteem;

— "What Wives Need to Know," June 29, focuses on what the film's creators call the 16 most important minutes of the day which can improve a marriage;

— "How to Kill Communication," July 6, deals with how marriage are destroyed using poor communication;

— "The Communication Lifeline," July 13, lists workable techniques for open communication;

— "Speaking Frankly About Sex," July 20, deals with sexual problems that plague couples and offers suggestions.

— "Renewing Romance in Marriage," July 27, explores the caring touches that build fun, rewarding relationships.

The church's pastor, the Rev. Kenneth Hall, invites the public to attend the showings. Childcare will be provided.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

'Youth Day' set at park

ODESSA — Street Level announces the 4th annual "Christian Youth Day" will be held June 13 at Water Wonderland, Highway 80 between Midland and Odessa.

Cruse, the younger generation of the Cruse Family, will be performing at 8 p.m. on the golf course. Local bands will have an opportunity to perform during the day.

A special rate is available for a full day at the water park and for the evening concert. Admission for both is $11.95. Tickets are available at Water Wonderland. For more information call 1-362-8195 or 563-3141.

Preservation encouraged

NEW YORK (AP) — Preserving grand, old churches expands the ministry, an Episcopal pastor says concerning a new "Sacred Sites and Properties Fund" to help religious institutions restore historic, aging properties.

Establishment of the new fund, initiated with a $100,000 gift from the J. M. Kaplan Fund and with a goal of $500,000 annually, was announced by the New York Landmarks Conservancy.

A director, the Rev. Thomas F. Pike, rector of Manhattan's Calvary-St. George's Episcopal Church and president of the New York Preservation League, says maintaining notable religious sites "can impart a new vitality" to their ministries reaching "far beyond our own congregational boundaries."

Joan K. Davidson, president of the Kaplan fund, says "sacred structures and sites in a sense belong to, and have profound meaning for the whole community."

Gamblers prey on church

DETROIT (AP) — A Michigan official says roving gamblers are cheating Roman Catholic parishes and other organizations at gaming tables at church fund-raising festivals, the Michigan Catholic reports.

The archdiocesan newspaper quotes Charles Dean, deputy commissioner for the charitable gaming division of the Michigan Bureau of State Lottery, as saying some church groups running "Las Vegas nights" and similar parties to raise money "are feeding themselves to the wolves."

He says well-organized gamblers often move from one church party to another, using loaded dice, duplicate playing cards or extra chips to stack odds in their favor. He says six Michigan churches or organizations have been bilked by gaming table con artists since mid-1985.

AJC elects Ellenoff

WASHINGTON (AP) — A New York attorney, Theodore Ellenoff, has been elected president of the American Jewish Committee, a national human relations organization, succeeding Howard I. Friedman of Los Angeles.

Peace trip canceled

NEW YORK (AP) — Lutheran World Ministries has canceled a May 26-June 18 peace study trip by 22 Lutherans to the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe because of the Chernobyl nuclear accident.

The Rev. Paul A. Wee, general secretary of the ministries, U.S. arm of the Lutheran World Federation, says the decision was "exceedingly difficult" but many unknowns remain about effects of the accident in the Soviet Ukraine.

'New day' seen in Cuba

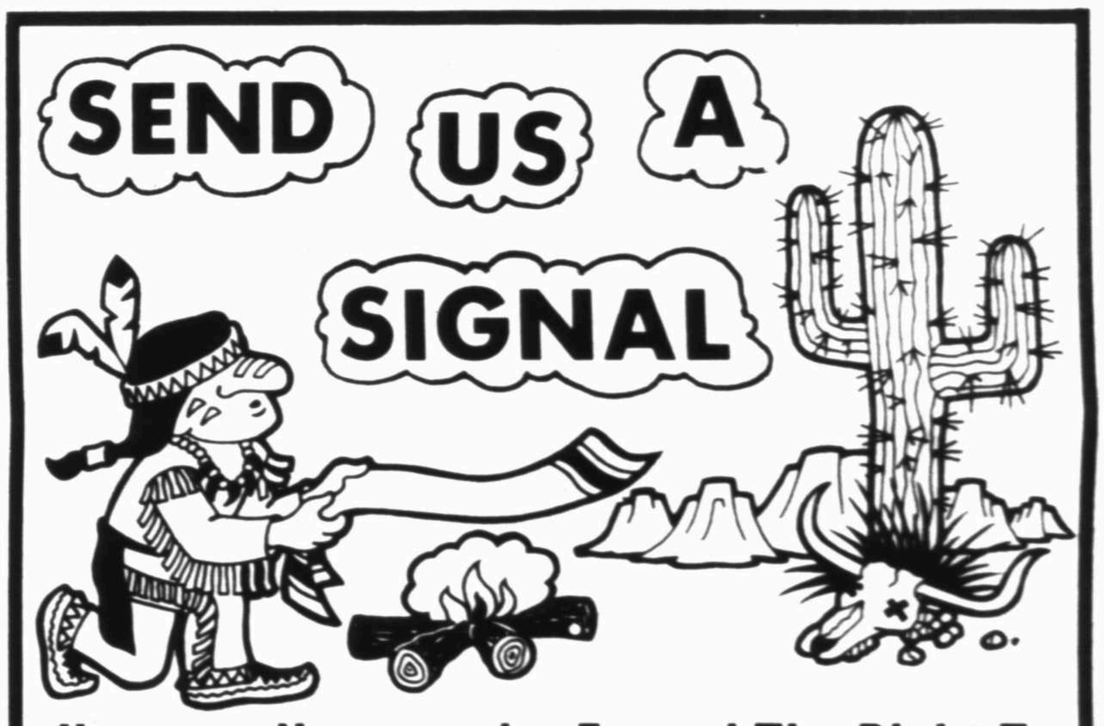

NEW YORK (AP) — A five-member delegation of the National Council of Churches, back from a week's visit to churches in Cuba, says church people there sense a "new day" for religion.

"The government in Cuba appears to be more tolerant and understanding of the role of religion in society," said African Methodist Episcopal Church Bishop Philip R. Cousin, NCC president and head of the delegation.

Soviet doctor says 130 discharged from hospital

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet doctor said Friday that 130 of the 299 people hospitalized after the Chernobyl nuclear accident have been discharged, and said that women can better combat the effects of severe radiation than men.

Dr. Angelina Guskova, chief radiologist at the Moscow hospital where many victims of the April 26 disaster are treated, did not say in her remarks to the official news agency Tass whether the patients returned to the Ukraine.

Nor did she say whether plans existed for monitoring their condition.

Dr. Robert P. Gale, a U.S. bone marrow specialist who has been treating victims, said Thursday that 55 to 60 patients remain in serious condition, with 14 of them critically ill. He said 23 people have died in the disaster, including two killed instantly when the No. 4 Chernobyl reactor was torn by an explosion. A woman was among those who have died since the accident.

Guskova said at least two women were among those still hospitalized with radiation sickness, and added that her experience treating the victims showed that female bodies could combat the effects of heavy radiation doses better than male bodies. She did not elaborate.

Gale said he planned to leave Sunday night for the Chernobyl area and Kiev, the Ukrainian capital of 2.4 million people about 80 miles south of the reactor. He said he hoped to visit radiation victims at Kiev hospitals.

Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev said earlier this month that 299 people were hospitalized after the accident.

Soviet stars aid victims of disaster

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet stars performed for an audience of 30,000 Friday night, in the nation's first rock benefit, to raise money for victims of the Chernobyl nuclear disaster and the vast cleanup under way in the Ukraine.

"Money is money, but we want to give our hearts," said Alla Pugacheva, queen of Soviet pop, in opening the 2½-hour concert at an indoor stadium built for the 1980 Summer Olympics.

The program mixed hard rock and some touches of the 1940s from the new wave band Bravo with more typically Soviet variety numbers and a poetry recital by actor Mikhail Ulyanov.

Spectators in stands that began only 80 yards from the multi-tiered stage were quiet in comparison with crowds at Western concerts. They remained in their places and applauded most performances warmly, but not wildly.

Ms. Pugacheva opened the evening with a song called "Twentieth Century." She told Western reporters before the show that she thought it eventually might raise 1-1.5 million rubles ($1.4-$2.1 million at the official rate of exchange). Tapes and records of the benefit are to be sold.

The red-haired singer then introduced a Soviet journalist, Vladimir Svetov, who presided over a satellite television link with Kiev.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Launch of Ariane 2 fails

KOUROU, French Guiana (AP) — Scientists at mission control blew up the Ariane 2 rocket minutes after liftoff Friday night when the third stage failed to ignite, throwing the unmanned missile off course, officials reported.

They said the payload, an Intelsat telecommunications satellite, also was destroyed.

It was the European Space Agency's fourth failure in 18 Ariane launches, and the third time the problem involved the third stage.

The scheduled 7:53 p.m. CDT launch from this base on the northeastern shoulder of South America had been postponed for 50 minutes after a computer indicated an abnormality with the Intelsat V F14 satellite, according to the officials.

Officials said four minutes and 36 seconds after the launch the third stage had not ignited and the rocket veered off its trajectory. They said the decision was made to destroy the rocket after it had climbed about 125 miles into the night sky.

Africa talks 'bloody'

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Negotiations for an official document to be issued by the General Assembly special session on the African economic crisis are "bloody, boisterous and very tough," Canada's ambassador said Friday.

Stephen Lewis, chairman of the committee trying to produce acceptable language by Saturday, said progress had been made on the question of aid and debt relief requests. The Organization of African Unity asked donor nations at the session for at least $80 billion in new aid and debt relief for the period ending in 1990.

Djibril Diallo, spokesman for the special session, said a compromise between African countries and major donors, who resisted specific commitments, suggested that aid needs could be described as African estimates and debt relief would be considered one of many factors affecting Africa's economy.

Lewis said, however, that problems had arisen over "new and unexpected submissions" to the committee.

An informed source who spoke on condition of anonymity said these concerned complicated issues of price stabilization for African commodities, and channeling aid through the U.N. International Fund for Agricultural Development and the World Bank.

Soweto commemorated

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Two major corporations announced Friday that they will curtail operations on June 16 to commemorate the 10th anniversary of rioting in the black township of Soweto which led to hundreds of black deaths.

Anglo American Corporation, one of the country's biggest mining companies, said it would close its corporate offices at midday on June 16 "to enable all our employees, white and black, to attend religious services and to pause and reflect on the events of the past 10 years."

Will retiring of controllers cause critical shortage?

DALLAS (AP) — Air traffic controllers at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport have more experience than their colleagues elsewhere — but that could change, according to a survey by the General Accounting Office.

About one-fourth of the D-FW controllers will be eligible to retire in two years, possibly causing a critical shortage of experienced tower personnel at the nation's third-busiest airport, the GAO said.

The conclusion is "pure speculation," said Don Watson, deputy admistrator of the Federal Aviation Administration's Southwest Regional Office. He declined further comment.

D-FW tower manager Norm Scroggins said 12 of the 60 controllers who handle incoming flights — including eight supervisors — will be eligible to retire in a year.

One or two of the 19 controllers who give planes clearance to take off and land also are slated to retire, he said.

The average D-FW controller has 14 years experience, compared with 11 years at other airports, the GAO said.

However, the number of controllers has dipped from 93 "full performance level" personnel in 1981 at the time of the strike by the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization to 48 today.

"As bad as the situation is nationwide, we are worse off in Dallas," said U.S. Rep. Jim Chapman, D-Texas.

On Sundays, customers can fill up on religion

JASPER, Texas (AP) — For six days a week, Broussard's Exxon dispenses regular, unleaded and super unleaded gasoline. But on the seventh day, the pumps take a rest.

People driving by might wonder about the people filing into the back of the gas station building with Bibles under their arms. They might wonder about the children in their Sunday best playing out by the gas pumps.

If they're driving slowly enough, they might hear voices singing hymns, punctuated by tamborines. Others don't read the sign out front carefully enough and mistake the place for a convenience store.

But proprietors Roy and Gail Broussard don't sell sandwich bread. They simply explain to the would-be bread buyers they run the Bread of Life Church.

"I tell folks I go to church at a filling station," Broussard said. "But really, a church is a filling station if you think about it. You go there to get filled up, and then you come back again when you're empty."

The little church began in January, after the two were ordained as Gospel ministers. Before that, the building served as a meeting place for Bible study.

The Broussards bought the building two years ago after they moved here from Moss Bluff, La., and Broussard started a sign shop next door.

His sign business and proceeds from gas brought in enough money to renovate the back of the station, however modestly, into a sanctuary. The other two rooms in back are what the family of five calls home.

The little church boasts a congregation of about 30, most of them children who sing from song books that are 20 sheets of paper stuffed inside report folders.

After the singing, the congregation goes through the Bible, with Broussard teaching and everyone discussing. The Bible, they say, is the bread of life. That's why they call it the Bread of Life Church.

But the church won't always be in the gas station. And the gas station won't always sell gas. Bit by bit, they're getting the money to build a sanctuary next door to the building.

As finances permit, the couple is revamping the station building, from basement to attic, to make it into a four-bedroom, two-bathroom house. The front still will be a book store.

Eventually, they hope to find someone else to take over Broussard's sign business so he can preach full time. But everything goes as finances permit.

"It gets kind of close in here sometimes," Mrs. Broussard said apologetically, gesturing to the part of the station where the family lives.

The men's sign is even still on their bathroom door.

There's a double bed with a dresser and chest of drawers in one room, and the other room is a kitchen.

Maverick sportswear designer Perry Ellis dies in New York of viral encephalitis

Ellis

NEW YORK (AP) — Sportswear designer Perry Ellis, a fashion maverick who believed that clothes should not be taken too seriously, died Friday of viral encephalitis. He was 46.

Ellis died peacefully around 1:30 a.m. at New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center. He had been in a coma for several days, said hospital spokesman Spencer Vibbert. The cause was viral encephalitis, an inflammation of the tissue near the brain.

Friends and other designers along Seventh Avenue remembered Ellis as warm and humorous, a man of impeccable style and a designer who added youth and zest to the sportswear market.

Ellis, once asked about his talent as a fashion designer, Ellis replied: "I don't make fashion. I make clothes."

"Perry Ellis was a great fashion designer and he made an enormous contribution to American fashion," said designer Calvin Klein. "He will be missed by our industry and I will miss him as a friend."

Bill Blass, who encouraged Ellis to become president of the Council of Fashion Designers of America, called it "a tragedy that he died so young."

He had been ill for several months. He appeared pale and gaunt at the fashion, fragrance and cosmetic industries AIDS benefit on April 30. He was hospitalized a week later, immediately after unveiling his fall collection.

Ellis was unable to make the traditional walk down the runway at the end of the show. He made a brief appearance in the doorway of his Seventh Avenue showroom supported by colleagues.

Amanda Manogue, Ellis' spokeswoman, said he designed most of his last collection from his Manhattan home.

Laurence C. Leeds Jr., chairman of Manhattan Industries, the company that financially backed Ellis, said his work "will be carried on by the talented design team that worked so closely with him during the past years."

Ellis' death followed closely the death of his friend, Laughlin M. Barker, 37, who was president of Perry Ellis International. Barker died Jan. 2. His obituary in The New York Times listed the cause of death as lung cancer.

Ellis began his career as a sportswear buyer for a Richmond, Va., department store, but decided to give designing a try when he realized he could make better clothes than those he was being paid to buy.

A native of Portsmouth, Va., Ellis moved to New York in 1968 to become design director for John Meyer of Norwich. In 1974, he joined the Norman as a sportswear designer and a year later was given his own line under the Portfolio label.

The line was so well received that Manhattan Industries put up money to back him. Perry Ellis International was launched in 1978. Since then, Ellis won eight Coty Awards given by fashion media and merchandisers, and three American Sportswear Awards given by his peers.

John B. Fairchild, publisher of Women's Wear Daily and W, said Ellis "brought new life to American fashion" and called him "the only designer in the world in the last five years to create a fashion empire."

That empire included four lines of clothes including Perry Ellis Menswear, and 16 licensees with the Ellis label on everything from furs to men's underwear and shoes to sheets.

Perry Ellis International was expected to reap $260 million in wholesale volume in 1986, said company President Robert McDonald.

Ellis is survived by his mother, Winifred Ellis Waldbauer, and a 1½-year-old daughter, Tyler Alexandra Gallagher Ellis. Ellis and the child's mother, screenwriter Barbara Gallagher, never married. The child lives with her mother in Brentwood, Calif.

Sinatra

NEW YORK (AP) — Frank Sinatra has bowed out of the Liberty Weekend grand finale July 6 because of an unexpected commitment, organizers of the Statue of Liberty's birthday bash said Friday.

Sinatra will appear as scheduled, however, at the opening night ceremonies July 3 on Governor's Island with President Reagan and other dignitaries, said Susan Williams, a Liberty Weekend spokesman.

"We're happy he wants to be in the opening ceremonies," Ms. Williams said, noting that Sinatra is not being paid for his appearance.

Producer David Wolper said the finale will feature Kenny Rogers, Elizabeth Taylor, Frankie Avalon, Fabian, Bobby Rydell, Shirley MacLaine, Gene Kelly, Liza Minenlli, Charlton Heston and two Elvis Presley look-alikes.

Tickets to the closing, which sell for $50, $100 and $200, go on sale Monday. "Good seats are still available," Ms. Williams said.

ATLANTA (AP) — The Rev. Joseph Lowery, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, may take early retirement rather than accept a transfer next month from the church where he has preached for 18 years.

He's weighing his options," the Rev. E. Randal Osburn, Lowery's assistant at the SCLC, said Thursday. "He is going in prayer and meditation on the matter and will be praying for an early decision."

Lowery, 64, has declined comment on the transfer.

Methodist Bishop Ernest A. Fitzgerald earlier this week decided to move Lowery from the 2,300-member Central United Methodist Church downtown to the west side Cascade United Mehodist Church, which has about 2,000 members.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Demond Wilson, who played Redd Foxx's son on the television series "Sanford and Son," says he is drawing from his entertainment background to be a more effective Pentecostal minister.

"I'm using what I learned in television and on the stage to glorify God," said Wilson, who conducts a religious program on the Trinity Broadcasting Network in California.

Wilson said he "really started to seek God" after the 1982 cancellation of his last television series, "Sons and Couple."

"I took a year off to study the word of God," said Wilson, who was in Nashville Friday as part of his preaching tour.

Wilson lives in Orange County, Calif., with his wife, Cheryl, and their five children.

BERLIN (AP) — Illness forced Princess Margaret of Britain to cancel a Friday appearance at a military parade honoring Queen Elizabeth's 58th birthday, the commander of British forces in West Berlin said.

"The princess is very sad about this decision and is aware of how disappointed you all are," Maj. Gen. Patrick Brooking told about 3,000 people gathered in the rain to watch the parade.

Waco Pathfinder builds on experience

AP Laserphoto

Rozanne Rogers, yard manager at B&L Construction Company in Waco, finds taking on new projects fun and challenging. She is responsible for ordering materials, dispatching drivers to job sites, maintaining trucks and arranging for cleanup of about 500 projects a year.

By LINDA McNABB

WACO (AP) — First she wanted to be an athlete, but arthritis dashed her hopes. Then she aspired to be a social worker, but ended up choosing a field that would land her recognition as a Waco Pathfinder — a woman who is first in her field.

Rozanne Rogers, yard manager of B&L Construction, should have known she would finally choose construction. She grew up looking over the shoulder of her grandfather who was a woodworker. At age 8, she learned how to use a saw and today makes bookcases, picture frames and wood and glass display boxes in her spare time.

At B&L Construction, she is responsible for ordering materials, dispatching drivers to job sites, maintaining trucks and arranging for cleanup of about 500 projects a year. The 52-year-old company does a lot of residential remodeling and occasionally takes on a commercial job. Three years ago, Miss Rogers supervised the $90,000 renovation of the YWCA.

"We're constantly taking on new projects and it's quite fun," Miss Rogers said. "The interesting thing about remodeling is that each situation is different. Consequently, a lot of experience is valuable."

Miss Rogers, 30, started gaining experience in the construction field in 1976 when she took a part-time job cleaning newly constructed homes. One year later — after washing windows, taking out trash, cleaning walls and vacuuming new carpet — Miss Rogers accepted a clerical job at B&L Construction. Eventually, she went out on jobs to deliver goods or inspect the finished work, and a year and a half ago she was promoted to her current position.

Last November, she was among 45 women in McLennan County honored by the Women's Issues Forum of the YWCA and 13 other organizations as a Pathfinder for distinguishing herself in her field and paving a path for other women to follow.

Because her job is one held by few women, she said she has encountered some difficulties.

"Old-timers would come in and I would offer to help fill their order," she said. "They said 'I want to speak to a man.' It was very difficult to overcome. One of the best feelings I had was when they would ask Mike a question and he'd turn around and ask me," Mike Remus was yard manager at the time, she said.

"Old-timers would come in and I would offer to help fill their order. They said 'I want to speak to a man.' It was very difficult to overcome. — Rozanne Rogers

She said customers have come to respect her knowledge more recently and she credits it to her having started in the business "at the bottom level — as a peon."

"It's important to start from the bottom up and understand the inner workings of a job," she said. "A lot of my decisions are based on my experience, such as how long a job should take and what materials to use."

She also manages 26 rental properties for Frank Levy, one of the owners of B&L Construction. In that role, and sometimes at the lumber yard, she has partial fulfillment of her early desire to become a social worker.

"I know the tenants' names, their dogs' names, their kids' names and some of their personal habits," she said. "And when contractors, painters and carpenters get together, someone has to mediate. I'm a people person and try to make things work smoothly."

She said she's not sure if she will remain in construction the rest of her life but recommends it to anyone who may be interested in the field.

"There's never a dull moment and it's always a challenge. My main priority is not to quit growing. If I ever find myself not growing, I'll have to do something else."

Central Texan recreates hometown in miniature

TEMPLE (AP) — When John Johnson creates, his memory is flooded with the sights and sounds of a small Central Texas town in the 1940s and the fond memories of his boyhood.

When Johnson recalls his happy childhood, he remembers Cameron — its train depot, the wooden water tower, his father's cabinet shop, the county courthouse, small downtown shops, his home, the theater, the school and the church.

It was Johnson's love for his hometown and a passion for recreating in miniature that prompted his hobby for the past 18 years of making scale models of Cameron buildings.

Johnson's creations capture the quiet, pleasant spirit of Cameron during the 1940s.

"It was a busy little town, during the war days," Johnson said. "It was a farming community and people came in from all over the county on Saturdays. I can remember Saturdays being very busy.

"It was a good town,' Johnson recalled. "The memories were good and it was a peaceful, quiet town with a lot of nice people."

His latest creation is a replica of the Milam County Courthouse, representing about 700 hours of painstaking work.

A statue of justice stands majestically from atop the clock tower of the model courthouse and a proud statue of Ben Milam decorates the shady courthouse lawn.

"The courthouse model is made from photographs," Johnson said. "One reason I wanted to build the courthouse was that my granddad was a jeweler in Cameron and was a watch repairman, and he took care of the old courthouse clock."

The courthouse model is made of wood, plastic and poster board, although some of the window casings are metal, he said.

Also in Johnson's collection of miniatures is his boyhood home, his grandmother's home, the old Cameron hospital, Tex Miller's hamburger stand, St. Monica's Catholic Church and 15 blocks of downtown Cameron.

Johnson's models are realistic. Tiny pedestrians tread the sidewalks, pigeons roost on the roof and ledges of the courthouse, lifelike flocks of chickens scratch the yards of Cameron homes, dogs and cats wander through streets, a popcorn machine is visible at the theater and a woman stands in the ticket booth.

At night, Johnson's miniature city glows with electric lights, his electric trains are controlled with tiny signals and, through his artistic talent, Johnson has re-created the classic scene of a burning house, complete with smoke, a red interior glow and and a team of tiny firefighters battling the blaze.
