C. E. SOCIETY HAS MONTHLY MEET HERE

Memphis Group Wins Honor In Four County Group

Representatives from Childress, Wellington and Memphis were present Tuesday night at 8 o'clock at the monthly meeting of the Four County Chirstian Endeavor society held at the First Christian church here.

The Memphis Christian Endeavor society was awarded the honor trophy of the four county organization. The trophy is based on work accomplished and attendance at all C. E. meetings over a month's period.

Fifth Straight Victory

The local society won the trophy for the fifth consecutive time Tuesday night.

Rev. O. K. Webb, pastor of the First Baptist church here, made the principal address of the evening at the meeting. He spoke on "The Charm of Jesus."

Present Play

Following the address and the business period, a one-act play in the form of a comedy was given by the local C. E. society. "Squaring It With the Boss" was the title of the play.

At a later date the Christian Endeavor society here will present the play to all the young people of Memphis and vicinity, Rev. N. D. Dyer, pastor, stated. The date will be announced soon.

LOCAL PIONEER 74 YEARS OLD

A. G. Powell Celebrates His 74th Birthday With Dinner At Home Of Son

A. G. Powell celebrated his 74th birthday yesterday with a birthday dinner at the country home of his son, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Powell.

Mr. Powell is a pioneer of Hall county, coming to Memphis in 1890. He has been an active mason since he was 21 years of age and is at the present time a 32nd mason, next to the highest degree in masonary. He is secretary of the local lodge and has held the office of Worshipful Master in the Blue Lodge, High Priest in the chapter and Emminent Commander of the Commandery.

Those of his children and grandchildren, who were present on this occasion were Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Powell and son C. A. Jr., Mr. and Mrs. J. J. McMickin and children, Jack, Varnell, A. G. and Betty Katherine, Mrs. J. W. Wrotten and son Gene of Lawton, Okla. and his wife, Mrs. A. G. Powell.

Two Men Robbed Of Truck Load Cigarets In Daylight Robbery

By Associated Press

DALLAS, June 7.—Julius Schepps and Cecil Keener reported to officers today that three men robbed them of a truck load of cigarettes, valued approximately at $2,000.

The robbery took place on a detour road between Plano and Richardson, they said.

The two men said that they were driven about over the country for two hours by the robbers before being released.

FUNERAL FOR HUMORIST

By Associated Press

MINERAL WELLS, June 7.—Funeral services were held here today for Thomas W. Jackson, 67, whose wit in 13 books published brought joy to thousands. The body was sent to Chicago for burial.

Two Theaters To Have Open House During Celebration

Plans moved forward for the 44th anniversary celebration of the founding of Hall County yesterday and today, although the program for the occasion is still a mere outline.

The first development was the obtaining of two motion pictures houses in the city to give free programs throughout the afternoon.

Ask For Tickets

With good programs, the theaters will open at 2 o'clock in the afternoon and run until 6 o'clock. All that the celebration visitors will be required to do is to go into any store in the city and ask for passes.

It will not be necessary to make a purchase of any kind to receive these passes.

The theaters that are cooperating in this program are the Palace and Ritz.

Old Settlers' Reunion

Another feature of the celebration will be the old settlers' reunion. E. M. Ewen has charge of this division of the fete and has not as yet announced any of the plans, but all efforts will be extended to make it one of the biggest affairs of its kind ever held in this territory.

A great number of other features are being planned by committees from the Junior and Senior Chambers of Commerce. They will be announced as soon as they are completed.

Held On June 26

The celebration will be held on June 26 here and will be an all-day affair. The first commissioners' court, seperating Hall from Donley, and including parts of Childress and Collingsworth counties, met on June 24, 1890.

Since this date comes on Sunday, the celebation has been moved back two days to make it fall on Tuesday. This will mark the first time in recent years that the occasion has been observed.

Everyone Invited

Every person within the Memphis trade teritory, taking in all of Hall county and large portions of all adjoining counties, are invited and urged to be present for "a day of celebration, fun and recreation at our expense."

The celebration will get underway with a mammoth parade.

Tomie M. Potts and Dr. L. M. Hicks, presidents of the Senior and Junior Chambers of Commerce, respectively, have charge of the arrangements and program. Numerous committees from both oganizations are working with them and with Mr. Ewen in planning the affair.

Threatened By Kidnapers

While the Bryn Mawr, Pa., home of Mrs. Frederick Phillips (above) was being guarded following threats from kidnapers, 10 gunmen in New York held up and escaped with four loaded trucks of merchandise belonging to her husband's transportation firm. week previously a barn on the Phillips estate was mysteriously burned in a $10,000 fire.

CATTLE BUYING PROGRAM IS ORGANIZED

Starts Immediately In Drouth Areas Of Panhandle

Special to The Democrat

AMARILLO, June 7.—Representatives of four agriculture and relief agencies met here yesterday to oganize the cattle buying program in the drouth stricken areas of Texas, Oklahoma, and New Mexico.

It was announced last night that actual purchases of the cattle will be made before the end of this week.

Far-reaching in relief for the drouth areas, the cattle pogam will put cash in the hands of the distressed cowmen, take diseased and half-starved cattle from the ranges, stimulate trucking and railway transportation in the drouth areas, and create jobs for 600 men and women in the Amarillo canning plant.

Most Distressed Counties

Among the counties designated as the most distressed were seven in the North Panhandle. They are Dallam, Sherman, Oldham, Hartley, Moore, Potter, and Deaf Smith counties. These were designated emergency counties and the earliest cattle buying will be from those areas.

TO HOLD RODEO AT NORTHVILLE

All-Day Program On July 4 To Have Free Gate; Ball Game Also Scheduled

A rodeo will be staged in Northfield, 30 miles south of Estelline in Motley county on July 4 by Courtney and Simpson of Northfield, they announced here today.

The entertainment will have a free gate. Concession rights will be let on June 12.

Starting in the morning, the rodeo will be an all-day show. A baseball game will also be a part of the program.

The following events will make up the show: Bulldoging, bronc riding, calf roping, cow milking, wild mule race, goat roping, steer riding and horse race.

Everyone is invited to attend.

Junior Pathfinder Club To Give Play

The Junior Pathfinder club of Mesmphis will present a play, entitled "Where East Meets West," Friday night at 8:30 o'clock in the Salisbury School building.

The presentation is sponsored by the Salisbury Parent-Teachers association. The proceeds will go to the association.

The public is cordially invited to attend the production.

Parnell Youths Plead Guilty In Affray Charges

Three Parnell youths were convicted in Justice court here yesterday of affray before Justice of the Peace W. L. Wheat.

All three youths pleaded guilty and were fined. One was also charged with assault.

The affray took place Tuesday night at Parnell, and a gun and cudgel figured in the fighting.

Two of the youths were considerably disfigured and required medical attention.

Deputies Lindsey H ill and J. Y. Snow made the arrests.

for Governor To Hold Rally

A Small-for-governor rally will be held here tomorrow night at the forming of the Hall County Small for Governor club.

A large number of backers of the West Texan for the state's highest office are expected to be on hand when the meeting is called in the district court room at 7:30 o'clock.

Invited to Attend

Every voter in the county is invited to attend.

Sam Hamilton, prominent Memphis lawyer who yesterday was selected by the committee in charge of the organization to head the club, will have charge of the rally.

Political leaders will be present from Amarillo, Childress and Wellington to assist in the organization of the club here will also be met with enthusiasm and that a large number of people will not only attend the rally but will also take an active part in the promotion of his campaign.

The purpose of the club will be to further interest in Small's campaign and to furnish any information desired about the campaign of the senator.

Plans Completed For Junior C Of C Good Will Tour To Plaska Tomorrow

With all arrangements completed with the exception of reaching the quota of 35 cars, the Junior Chamber of Commerce sponsors its largest get-acquainted and good-will tour tomorrow night to Plaska.

J. R. Jones, head of the organization's extension committee stated this morning that a few people had volunteered cars for the trip and that numerous others are expected to come in this afternoon or early tomorrow morning.

A number of candidates who will attend the rally at Plaska are to furnish transportation for as many of the high school band as possible.

Although the trip is conflicting with other affairs heer tomorrow night, Jones stated that he expected to reach the quota before the trip is started at 12:45 o'clock.

The band will furnish music for the candidate rally. An ice cream supper will also be held. A large crowd of people from the Plaska community will be on hand, and the event is expected to be one of the largest of its kind held thus far.

The caravan will leave the band house here, arriving at Plaska in time for a short concert before the rally begins.

DONNA of the BIG TOP

by BEULAH POYNTER

©1934 NEA SERVICE, INC

BEGIN HERE TODAY

DONNA GABRIEL and MADELINE SIDDAL who call themselves "The Gabriel Sisters" are circus performers. Years earlier Madeline ran away from her grandfather's farm.

When Donna is injured by a fall from the trapeze Madeline arranges for her to be taken to GRANDFATHER SIDDAL'S farm to recuperate. To please her partner Donna pretends to be Madeline. She falls in love with BILL SIDDAL, Madeline's cousin, and though she is ashamed of deceiving Bill and Grandfather she is afraid to tell the truth.

Meanwhile Madeline marries CON DAVID, animal trainer with the circus, and although terrified of the lions and tigers takes part in the animal act.

MRS. PLANTER, housekeeper on the farm, shows Donna a handbill announcing Madeline's marriage to Con in the circus arena and Donna realizes the woman is a dangerous enemy.

Grandfather Siddal has a stroke. Mrs. Planter, basing her conclusion on the handbill, accuses Donna of bigamy.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXIV

While Madeline was trying to summon the courage to pass Trafford and, if possible, to ignore him, Con appeared in the corridor. The former boss canvasman stepped toward the animal trainer. Madeline saw her husband's slender body stiffen and his dark eyes flash fire.

"What are you doing here?" he demanded.

"I'm waiting to see Madeline. What do you suppose?"

"Then beat it! She's my wife now and she hasn't any time for you."

"Is that so?" Trafford lurched forward until he towered over the smaller man. "Is that so? Well, she had time for me down town today. Didn't she tell you she was me? Didn't she tell you I was coming out here this afternoon? You bet she didn't! Well, I'm sticking around until I see her."

"Get out!" Con's voice had thickened with surpressed passion. "You're a good-for-nothing bum. Madeline—"

"Bum, am I? Hah! So I'm a bum! Well, the little Miss Purity who's your wife didn't think I was a bum when she palled around with me. She didn't think I was a bum when she used to kiss me and call me her 'big red-headed boy' or—"

Con's iron fist shot out and caught Trafford on the jaw before he could complete the sentence. Madeline screamed and ran forward just as the former canvasman staggered by the unexpected blow, stumbled against the frail walls of the passageway.

"He's lying, Con!" Madeline wailed. "He's lying. I didn't—"

"I wouldn't put it past you," Con rasped, pushing her aside.

Trafford rubbed the blood from his chin and snarled, "Lying, am I? I don't have to lie! Everyone in the circus knows about her and me. Everyone knows she was the crews' sweetheart. She played you for a sucker and only a—"

"You say that again and I'll wipe up the ground with you!" Con cried. He leaped forward and, with the agility that many times had made it possible for him to avoid death that seemed inescapable, he bore the half-drunken giant to the floor.

"What's the matter? What's going on?" Instantly the runway was thronged with performers in various stages of dress and undress.

"Where's Renfroe?" shrieked La Belle Matilde. "Someone separate them. Con will kill him!"

A husky workman jumped forward and tore the animal trainer from Trafford's writhing body. Madeline, shivering and sobbing, huddled against a pole. Trafford stumbled to his feet, muttering maledictions under his breath, and staggered through the crowd and out of the tent.

"What happened?" shrilled one of the women.

"None of your business," Con retorted. He brushed the sawdust from his costume of yellow satin and purple velvet, caught his wife by the arm and almost dragged her back to his dressing room.

There he flung her into a chair and faced her, his eyes blazing with disgust and loathing. "A pretty mess!" he cried, pacing the floor. "And the damnable part of it is, it's true."

"It isn't!" Madeline protested. "I swear to God it isn't true, Con! I did meet Trafford down town, but was that my fault? I hate him! You know what reason I have to hate him! He was the cause of Donna falling! He tried to kill me—"

"Yes—because you played fast and lose with him. A canvas man! My God, a star performer mixed up with a canvas man! And I had to soil my hands with his dirty hide! Why did he call you 'the crews' sweetheart!' If I thought there was any truth in that, so help me, I'd take your white throat between my two hands and choke the life out of you!"

"There isn't any truth in it! I swear there isn't! And I never was his sweetheart! Never! He wanted to marry me, but I couldn't help that!" Madeline threw herself on her knees, clinging with both arms to his body." You've got to believe me, Con! You've got to!"

"Oh, stop the melodrama! I wouldn't believe you on oath. Get up and fix your make-up and your hair You look a fright."

Hiccoughing with sobs, she rose and repaired the damage done to her lips and cheeks. Five minutes later when she entered the arena no one in the audience would have dreamed that the smiling girl in yellow satin trousers and gold embroidered velvet coat had just gone through an emotional crisis.

Only the fact that the show was far more important than his own feelings prevented Con from venting his temper on his animals as he had done once before. When the act finished with a tremendous burst of applause he seemed to be in his usual humor.

Madeline, however, and the sullen Trafford remembered vividly the scene in the runway. The others who had witnessed it erased it from their minds. Trafford, bitter and defiant, sprawled in a cheap speak-easy and vowed vengeance against both Con and Madeline. The girl, smarting under the injustice of her husband's accusations, decided the game of playing wife was not worth the heartaches and the danger. She made up her mind that she would quit the show, send home for money and go back to the farm.

Because the circus grounds were so far from the business district, Con and Madeline ate dinner in the mess tent. During the meal Con had nothing to say, but after he had finished his coffee he turned to her.

"How about taking Lucy through her paces tonight?" he asked.

"You mean—without you?"

"Yes. There always has to be a first time, and this is as good as any."

"But you know I'm not ready! You know I'm afraid of her." Madeline stammered.

"I don't see why. She obeys you as well as she does me, and the only difference will be in having an audience behind the ropes instead of the gang looking on."

"But I'm nervous and—oh, not tonight, Con!"

"Yes, tonight. Renfroe is sore about that fracas this afternoon and we've got to do something to make him forget it." Con's eyes, always hipnotic, held hers.

"I see," she said, white-lipped. "This is the way you are going to pay me back for what happened. You want me to jeopardize my life because a drunken scoundrel insulted me. What a husband you turned out to be!"

"If I wanted to pay you back," Con drawled, "I'd find some other way than to have you do an act that's going to put us on velvet on the big time. Come on—let's see what sort of mood Lucy's in and I'll tell Renfroe he can announce the new turn."

"No." Madeline protested. "No!"

But she followed him from the mess tent to the animal cages and, because her will melted like wax against his, she stepped into Lucy's cage, spoke to her and even stroked the coarse brilliant coat on her back.

"Like a kitten," Con chuckled. "When Lucy gave in she gave in with a vengeance. Take a long walk and make up your mind to knock 'em cold tonight."

"Juda!" Madeline muttered to herself as he kissed her in parting. "He could kiss me and send me to my death. But I won't do it! Renfroe can do all the announcing in the world but I won't enter Lucy's cage tonight. I won't! I won't.

There were suicidal thoughts in her mind as she walked along the country road past a row of shanties where groups of colored children played. Beyond the great piles of sandbags that formed the levee was the river. If she should fling her body into its muddy turbid water. Con wouldn't care. No one would care. Even her grandfather had given his affections to another. Probably if Donna swore she was Amos Siddal's grandchild he would close the door in Madeline's face.

No one would miss her. Least of all, the man to whom she had given her deepest devotion.

She reached the levee and mounted it. Suddenly, looking down at the water, darkening with nightfall, death became more repellant than life.

No, she would not die. No man should ruin her career! She would do as she had planned, jump the show, bid Con farewell, forget him and find peace on the farm. If her return hurt Donna—well, it was just too bad. Madeline couldn't help it now.

The night air was filled with the heady sweetness of semi-tropical blossoms, stronger because of the heavy dew. Madeline turned and walked quickly away. In the distance she could see the lights of the circus train on the siding and the blaze that rose from the grounds.

Drawing nearer, the raucous voices of the "barkers" and ballyhoo men and the blatant music of the steam caliope informed her that she must hurry or she would miss the opening of the performance.

And, because she was so accustomed to the routine that she could not resist it, Madeline hurried.

Childress County Resident, At 90, Still Rides Plow

By Associated Press

CHILDRESS, June 7.—"I'm not old, I've just been here a long time," says 90-year-old Mrs. S. E. Parkerson of Childress, who recently mounted a cotton planter and drove it around a field "just for fun."

Mrs. Parkerson, a sprightly, quick-witted little woman in a pale blue linen dress and a blue-checked apron, laughed as she told the story of her unusual "joy ride" around the field in which her grandson was planting cotton.

She likes to do "a lot of things yet," including keeping house and managing her home. A grandson and granddaughter live with her. She goes to church "every time the door is open," and every birthday has a prayer meeting at her home.

"I've seldom been sick," she explained in reply to a request for a formula for living so long and enthusiastic life. "You just want to. You don't give up."

Mrs. Parkerson came to Childress 14 years ago from Kauffman county. Her youth was spent in Virginia during the civil war. She remembers that she could hear the roll of guns from her home. She was in her 'teens then. She still draws Confederate pension as her first husband fought under Lee.

And so it goes on. Jealousy of horse owners toward those winning the Preakness and cursing a fate that will not permit them to own blooded steeds. Jealousy of boat fans for those owning stream yachts. Jealousy of the fishermen limited to gar and pike in the canal for those fortunates out after tarpon in privileged waters.

Keeping up with the Joneses. Unhappiness. Keeping up with the Joneses. Jealousy. Keeping up with the Joneses. Missing the sky, the wind, a drink of cool water, the very ecstasy of a breath.

Heart-failure because of heartache, and heartache because of blindness. A noted physician ascribes much real heart disease to it today.

What does it matter how other people live? Everyone can be miserable crying for the moon — or lose his reason staring at it. No one, as it happens, does so, but only because the moon in unattainable. If the Joneses had a moon there would soon be an epidemic of heart-failures among their friends because it must be the thing to have a moon or the Joneses woudn't have one.

Where is the simple life where people sweated and prayed, devoured plain food with thanks and sat of a peaceful evening accepting the friendship of the stars?

I have no urge to be poetical or even rhetorical. I have only a certain hopeless indignation over the plight of mankind. There are some real poor, some who are desperately suffering, some who are sad beyond repair, but the majority of people are wailing against a futile wall for no other reason on earth but a pair of yellow shoes and a few more bathrooms.

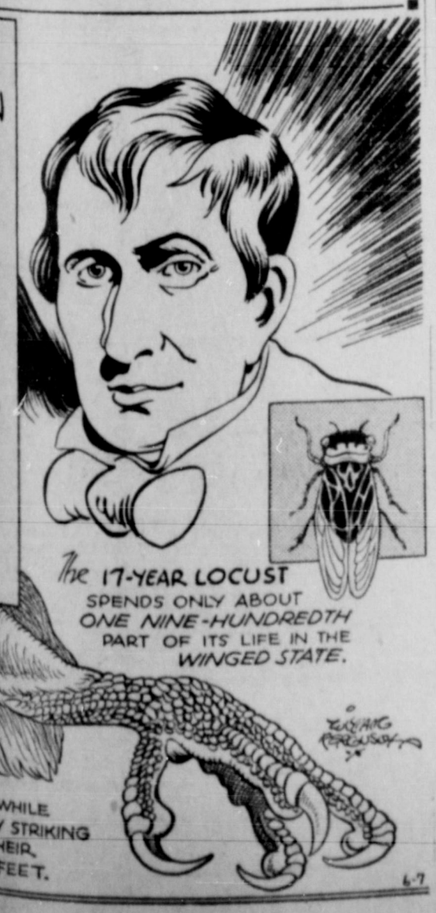

Imagined Worries

Retrenching has beaten us on the whole. We cannot accept living in a smaller house, living on pay cuts, or doing work beneath our college education. We fight the whole idea. We can't accept it. We won't accept it. Why —there are the Joneses now—

Of course there are the Joneses. There always will be, but we might look down instead of up, behind instead of across. At the widow Number 23 instead of the lady in the big house across the street. We would change government and change the social order, but it won't help much. There would still be the Joneses—if Mrs. Jones was the only woman who put in more rivets in a day than we could in the mill where we worked.

STEPHENVILLE, June 7.—William H. Wiley, editor, has sent a copy of the 1934 Grassburr, student yearbook of John Tarleton College, to President Franklin D. Roosevelt, to whom, with Lieut. George M. Davis, the book was dedicated. Lieutenant Davis is professor of military science and tactics at Tarleton.

The Recovery theme of the Roosevelt administration was carried out in the yearbook with color plates in red and blue emphasizing the patriotic motif. Dorothy Cheek, Stephenville, was art editor.

Keep Cool and Peppy All Summer Long While Losing Fat The Safe Way—The Right Way

Out of the thousands of letters received we give you this one from a grateful young man.

"I am 23 yrs. old. I weighed 210 lbs. about one year ago when I started to take Kruschen Salts off and on for nine months. I lost weight alright so I began to take it regular for the last 3 months. I now weigh 145. I feel better, look better and I am O. K. in every way. I also eat anything I want." Mr. J. C. Record, Miami, Fla.

While losing unsightly fat with Kruschen you gain in health for Kruschen acts on liver, kidneys and bowels and helps keep body free from poisons and acid.

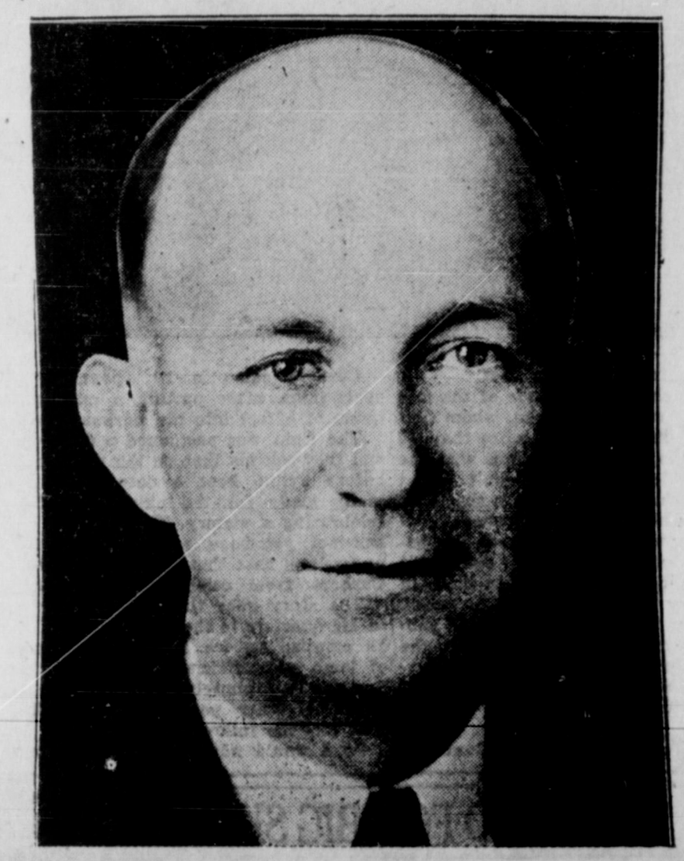

Keep cool and full of pep this summer by taking one half teaspoonful in a glass of hot water every morning. Get it at Tarver's Pharmacy or any druggist. 1

Baer Should Not Underrate Champ, Says Jack

BY JACK DEMPSEY
(As Told to Harry Grayson)

NEW YORK, June 7.—In comparing Primo Carnera and Max Baer in our discussion of the 15-round contest in the Garden Bowl on June 14, we must not lose sight of the fact that Carnera is champion, and that he must have something to have risen to the peak.

We must not underrate the Italian, for in reality, while he is a synthetic scrapper, he possesses considerable scientific skill and is game.

You will remember Carnera's first fight with Jack Sharkey, in which the sailor floored the Sequals Steer in the fourth round and, what with one thing and another, gave the big boy quite a going over.

In that contest, Carnera proved something of tremendous importance. He demonstrated that he could take it and come back for more. Let that sink in when you discuss his battle with Baer, who is likely to administer a lot of punishment—and get a lot of it, too.

By the time Carnera entered the ring for his second encounter with Sharkey, Bootsy had plenty with which to back his courage. He had actual skill, both in leading and countering.

He had learned vastly more about the technique of the left hand, and had mastered, to some extent, a right uppercut. It was with the latter that he scored the knockout that put him on top.

Sharkey Best Teacher

In the first Sharkey engagement, Carnera pawed with his left and pushed with his right. He was so inexperienced and overanxious that his left hand was half open most of the time. Carnera gave himself only meager opportunity to use his power. He didn't even get the size of his fist into most of his left leads.

Sharkey dropped into Carnera's dressing room after the duel. "Close your hands, Primo, and you'll hurt and cut fellows up," the gob advised Big Boy.

In predicting that he would beat Sharkey in their second joust, Carnera explained that the Lithuanian had been his best teacher.

Primo now gets a good part of his 260 pounds behind thrusts with his left. He also has developed a sort of corkscrew twist in connection with that weapon. It is annoying, to say the least.

Much has been made of the fact that Tommy Loughran, whom Carnera outweighed by more than 80 pounds, stayed 15 rounds with the sizeable signor. But don't forget that the mental angle in that bout was entirely against Primo.

He wasn't eager about the engagement from the start. It offered a chance to gain little, in money or prestige, and he risked losing much. Carnera realized public sympathy would be with the smaller Loughran. And the Philadelphian is not the easiest man in the world to hit.

Toss Out Loughran Bout

Carnera came in 10 pounds overweight, after putting a minimum of effort into his workouts.

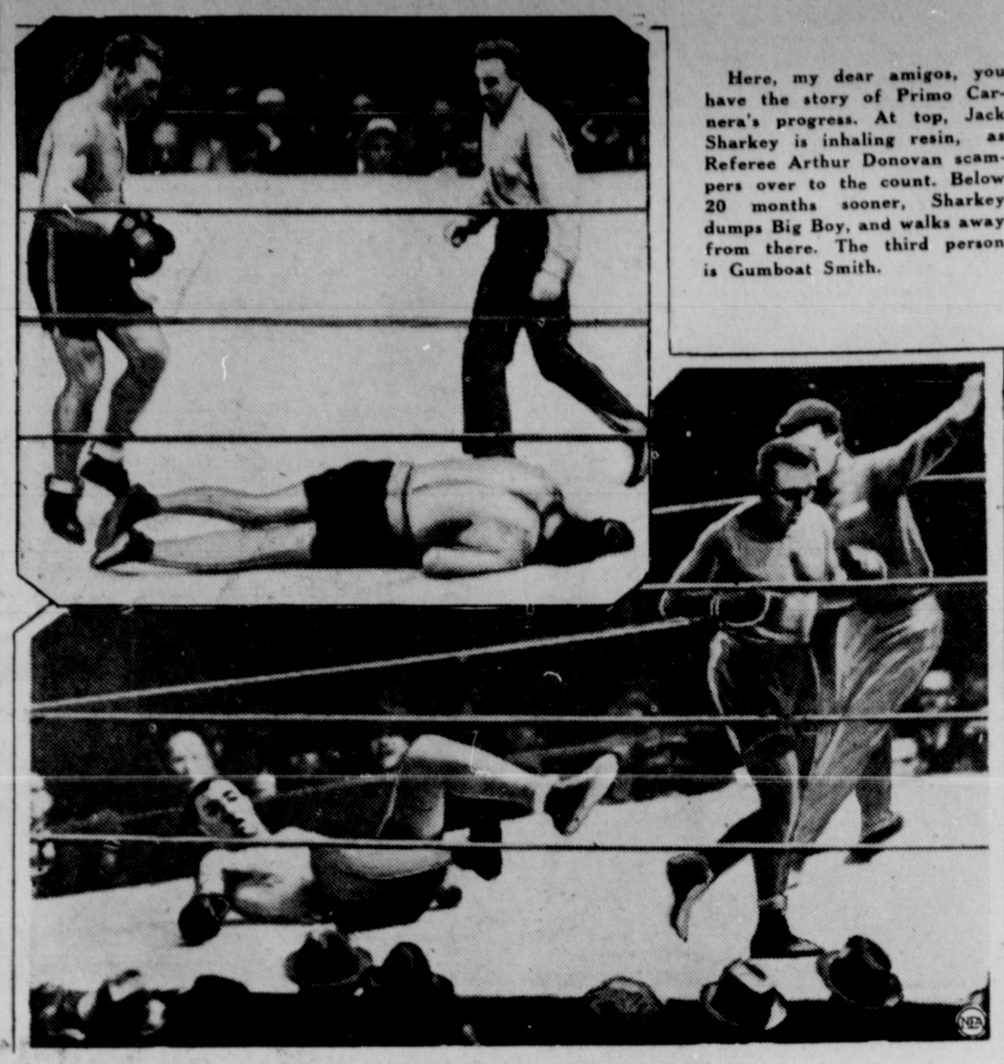

The fight was postponed a day, and they tell me that on the night before Primo kept a date originally made for the purpose of celebrating a victory. The victory had not yet been scored, but I understand that that did not keep Carnera from celebrating.

The story goes that, returning to his quarters in the small hours, he emptied an ice box of a leg of lamb and sufficient other victuals to feed himself and the two or three other persons residing with him the following day.

So I would not pay too much attention to the Loughran fight in summing up Carnera's chances of successfully defending the diadem against Baer. Primo has too much respect for Max's ability to stuff himself the night before they fight.

The punishment Carnera took in the first battle with Sharkey and the punishment he gave in the second showed how much he improved in 20 months. And Mussolini's muscle man figures to be more formidable on this occasion, for he has had 30 rounds of actual competition since he smothered Sharkey in resin.

(Copyright, 1934, NEA Service, Inc.)

Here, my dear amigos, you have the story of Primo Carnera's progress. At top, Jack Sharkey is inhaling resin, as Referee Arthur Donovan scampers over to the count. Below 20 months sooner, Sharkey dumps Big Boy, and walks away from there. The third person is Gumboat Smith.

By Harry Grayson

Barney Oldfield, daddy of drivers, did not attend the 500-mile automobile race in Indianapolis on Memorial Day, primarily because he was not invited by Eddie Rickenbacker, president of the Speedway Corporation and chairman of the contest board of the American Automobile Association.

Oldfield is a member of the latter body, but suspects tnat he is not a welcome one, due principally to interviews and broadcasts stressing the peril of the roaring road.

"I don't advocate prohibiting the sport, but I believe it should be made more safe, if possible," says Oldfield, who again is at the World's Fair in connection with an automobile exhibit.

Automobile racing has snuffed out 21 lives in the last 18 months. Five were killed on the Hoosier course a year ago. Two met death in a qualifying trial for the most recent test. Four had miraculous escapes when mounts hurtled the wall in their mad dash after prize and lap lucre.

On losing control and skidding off the track and out of the grind Phil Shafer, who competed in the event for the tenth time, said the bricks never were more hazardous owing to slipperiness caused by oil leaking from cars on the turns.

Safety Still Last

The one rule designed as a safety measure—limiting cars to 45 gallons of gasoline—worked with reverse English, what with three smashups and Baur. Rose forcing Wild Bill Cummings to a new average of 104.865 miles an hour and track record of 105.021. The Dayton driver finished only 27 seconds behind the winner.

The limited fuel turned out to be nothing more than a source of worry toward the flag end to the 13 who finished. Cummings had three gallons left when flagged, or enough to rifle his little four-cylinder machine about 36 miles farther.

Oldfield wouldn't raise his boy ti be an automobile racing driver. The first man to drive a car a mile a minute calls the speedway championship an empty one.

"Automobile racing holds no future as it did in the days when I was driving old 'crates,'" contends Barney. "How many autoists know who won last year's Indianapolis race, and, although 135,000 persons saw him do it, two weeks from now how many will be able to recall offhand the victor of the other day?

Time To Retire

"But ask any horse-going person who bagged the Kentucky Derby, any golfer to relate Bobby Jones' greatest achievement, any baseball fan what club Babe Ruth plays with, or any fight fan who lifted Jack Dempsey's title, and see how quickly you get a reply.

"And if automobile racing under current conditions isn't too dangerous, why did Rickenbacker, Tommy Milton, Billy Arnold, Harry Hartz, Harlan Fengler, Earl Cooper, myself and other ex-champions forsake their chosen profession?

"There are only two answers. Either it is too risky, or there isn't enough money in it. And I for one, didn't quit because I couldn't make or use the coin.

"Lindbergh flew across the ocean, but I dare say he is not advising Young America to follow his example."

Nine Local G... Enter Green...

The Memphis Country club will send nine golfers to the ninth annual championship tournament of the Green Belt Golf Association, starting Monday at Frederick, Okla.

The list will be headed by Regnal Greenhaw, the defending Green Belt champion, who will attempt to hold his title against the challengers of 11 cities.

It will also include Frank Foxhall, who will be seeking his third Green Belt Crown, a feat turned in only by L. S. (City) Walker of Quanah, who won the title in 1926-27-31.

L. M. Hicks, finalist in the Memphis Country club championship tourney last week, Ed Foxhall, Thomas Hampton, George Loveless, O. B. Smith, Wendel Lesley and R. S. Greene.

Six of these make up the local team that will bid for team honors. Members of the team are Greenhaw, Frank and Ed Foxhall, Hampton, Hicks and Greene.

The players will go to Frederick Sunday morning, in order to get in a practice round during the afternoon.

Qualifying starts Monday, and match play in the several flights follows for three days, with the championship bout coming next Thursday.

Other entertainments at night will be a feature of the four days.

Entries will be accepted until noon Monday. The fee is $2.

One hundred and 28 players will qualify for four flights of 32 players each. A senior division will make up a fifth flight.

BUSINESS GALS DEFEAT FAT BOY NINE

Coaching Umps Are Blamed But Runs Show Victory

In a rousing seven inning fracus yesterday afternoon, the business girls downed the "fat men" of Memphis in a farce playground ball game.

The count was 17-16. A late seventh inning rally proved the margin of victory for the girls' team.

The outstanding feature of the game was the ability that the umpires, Harry Delaney and T. E. Noel, showed in coaching the girls on and around the bases.

Meeting the offerings of Frankie Hamilton in the initial frame, the "fat men" opened with a barrage that slipped seven runs over the home plate in rapid succession, before H. B. Bennett, in playing to the grandstands, rolled an easy third out.

Helen Hilgenfeld, first sacker and pitcher, showed exceptional form (ability), both in catching and pelting the ball. Mamie Bokke, Antha Youree and Frankie Hamilton also showed up well for the business girls.

Ted Hanna, star for the men in avoirdupois, displayed big-league ability in pitching.

The line-up:

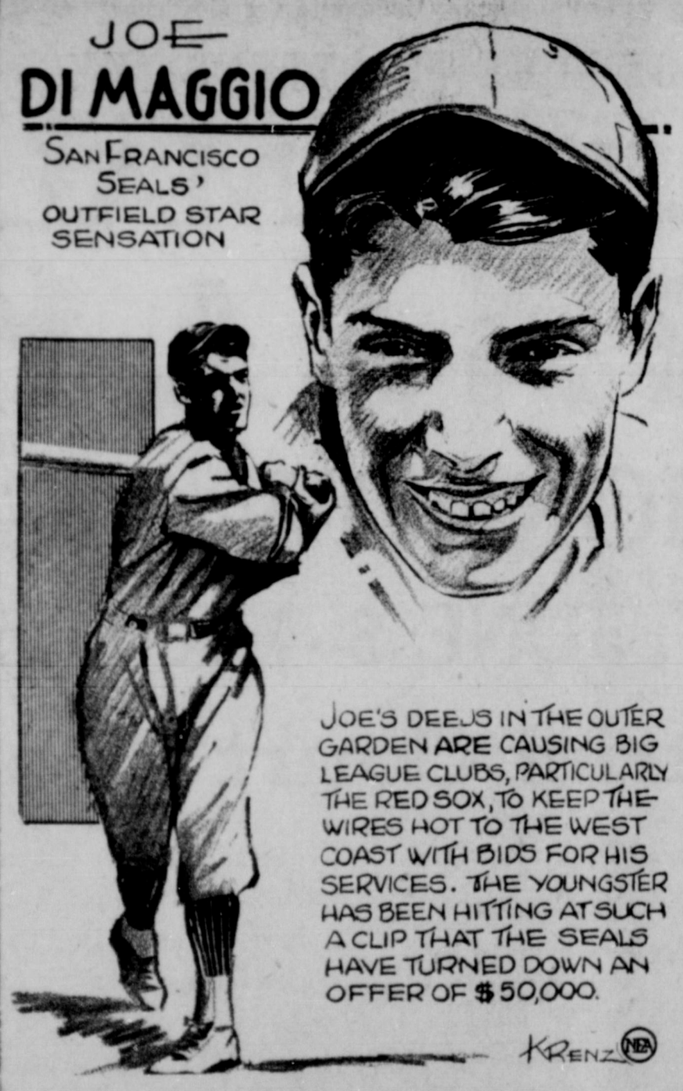

Fat Men—Angus Huckaby, c; Ted Hanna, p; H. B. Bennett, 1b; H. W. Kuhn, 2b; Ed McCreary, ss; H. B. Estes, 3b; Dr. J. A. Odom, lf; J. M. Tucker, cf; Joe Webster, rf.

Business girls—Mary Beckum, c; Frankie Hamilton, p; Helen Hilgenfeld, 1b; Mamie Bokke, 2b; Oneta Hollis, 3b; Antha Youree, ss; Maud Worsham, cf; Mary Hudgins, c, ss; Floretta Whitefield, rf; Ora Walsh, lf.

Mrs. Will Noel and Mrs. Leon Reeves of Hedley were guests in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Conly Ward yesterday and attended the shower at the home of Mrs. S. T. Harrison, given for their niece and cousin, Jo Ann Estes.

Mrs. J. W. Wrotten and son Gene of Lawton, Okla., are here for a visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Powell.

SOFTBALL RACE HAS CHANCES TO CHANGE

Three Games Likely To Alter Entire Outlook

The Sunday School softball league stands a chance to do some important changing about this afternoon and tomorrow as play is resumed in the hot race for the league title.

This afternoon at 6:15 o'clock on the West Ward diamond, the Baptists, dethroned Monday by the Presbyterians, attempt to climb back into the lead at the expense of the slipping Christians, when they play what is virtually a doubleheader.

The outcome of two games will be at stake, since the clubs are playing off a tie game of last week.

A Baptists victory in both games would throw the Christians into the cellar, letting the Methodists out of that position for the first time in several weeks.

By wining both games, the Christians can move into a tie with the Baptists for second place, while a split will leave the clubs in their present positions.

Tomorrow afternoon the Methodists attempt to halt the drive of the Presbyterians, in a game that will center upon today's outcome for its effect upon the standings of the teams.

Unless the Baptists win both games today, the Presbyterians can don no worse than for the lead.

The standings:

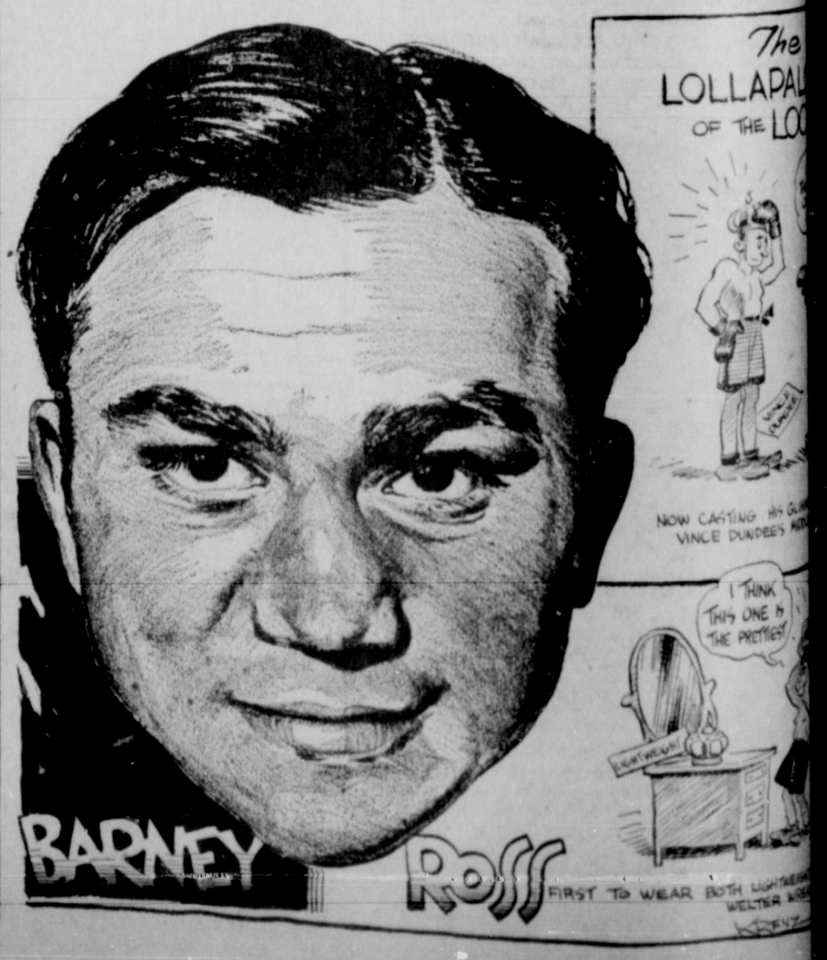

TEAM—	W	L	PCT.
Presbyterians	6	3	.667
Baptists	5	3	.625
Christians	3	5	.375
Methodists	3	6	.333

CLINT SMALL OFFERS PLAIN, PRACTICAL COMMON SENSE ADMINISTRATION

SENATOR Clint C. Small made the mos tseisible campaign speech we have heard in a long, long time, when he discussed his platform in his race for governor of Texas Tuesday night at a Fort Worth broadcasting station.

He did not make promises; nor did he discuss one or two issues upon which circumstances have permitted him to become especially well informed.

He made a sweeping survey of the whole situation, touching for a moment upon numerous issues and taking his stand firmly so that friend and foe alike might know exactly where he stands.

That is one of the leading characteristics of the man that we admire, and also one of the many reasons why we believe that he is better able to fill this important office than any other man or woman in the state.

He is not to be intimidated; he is not to be influenced by factional differences; he will not cater to certain sections or cliques.

In the first place, Small is the only candidate for governor who has not handed us a long line of chatter about cutting down the expenses of government. On the other hand, he upheld the expenditure of money for state schools, institutions and highways.

Rather than attempt to pull people to his support, Small stated plainly that no governor can reduce the cost of government an appreciable amount.

He offered something better. He advocated the cleaning out of the government; the stopping of waste in certain divisions; the placing of other departments upon the industries for which they were created and who alone receive benefits from their existance; the lowering of administrative costs of highway departments so that a greater amount of the sums spent by the department will go for actual road building.

With the cost of administration cut considerably in this manner, he advocated an increased expenditure of the surplus thus gained for state schools and institutions.

"The people of Texas do not want a cheap, inefficient government," he said. "They want to bear their share of the load, and they want a constructive, progressive governor of whom they will not be ashamed. But most of all, they want to know that their money is doing the most good when they pay their taxes."

Small advocated an oil and gas department to handle the production and distribution of these natural resources. He has long believed that this, one of Texas' leading products and revenue departments, should be taken out of the hands of the railroad commission that has no more right to handle it than does the insurance or banking departments.

He attacked the present pardoning power of the governor and the way that it is being abused.

He spoke of the Bob Silver case, in which the present governor has just ordered his release from the state penitentiary in July, 1936, as the greatest abuse of power any governor ever committed.

"If they want to get Silver out of prison," he said, "they had better do it before I become governor, or he'll never get out."

He recommended a pardon board composed of three members, one appointed by the supreme court, another by the governor and the third the attorney general, himself.

"No self-respecting governor would want the power to pardon criminals, and the other kind should not be permitted that power," he said.

In short, Clint Small offered the people of Texas a plain, practical, common-sense administration, with a clean, decent handling of affairs of state at the lowest possible cost without imparing the workings of the government.

That is the type of government we believe most Texans desire.

A KISS FOR THE WIFE

THOSE Oklahoma City husbands who formed a "Husbands' Gratitude Club" seem to have struck upon a pretty sound idea for promoting happy marriages.

Each member took this pledge:

"I solemnly pledge myself daily to embrace my wife, kiss her, and tell her I love her.

"I promis to compliment her at least once each day on some particular part of the menu she prepares.

"I promise to perform at least one kind of unexpected deed for her daily."

Reducing it all to a formal pledge may sound a bit odd, of course. But it does set forth a course of action which points most decidedly, in the direction of a successful marriage.

An educatiinal system in this country better keyed to the needs of the times would end much confusion in the minds of students. There seem to be two trends in this country—one toward reform by legislation, the other by force of strikes and other drastic gestures. Level heads need to be kept in both instances.—Pampa Daily News.

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

The people who really have to worry most about their vacations are those who take to the road.

It is astounding how much wreckage a family vacation in a motor car can bring about from a health point of view. Driving all day means that the calls of nature are ignored.

Cinders fly in the eye; elbows and knees are bumped and rubbed. The digestion is disturbed and the muscles are cramped by hours of sitting in contorted positions.

Children suffer from the glare of the sun, the dust of the road, the impossibility of getting the right kind of food, insect bites, bad meals and water. A baby should never be taken on such a vacation, and even children from 2 to 6 years of age are likely to suffer by such performances.

Fortunately, most of our states have taken over control of motor camps, so that you can be reasonably sure in such camps of suitable water and milk supplies.

Smart tourists nowadays carry along 20 or 30 yards of mosquito netting to fend off insects. There is little fear of infection from the average mosquito in the northern parts of the United States, but a mosquito bite that itches or bleeds can spoil any vacation.

A weak solution of camphor or a one per cent solution of menthol in a suitable lotion will stop the itching and give comfort.

Every camper ought to take along a spade and a first-aid kit. The spade is used to bury remnants of food, empty tin cans, and bottles. These always should be buried 2 feet from any running stream or body of water. The spade also is used to cover fires.

The first aid kit should contain at least a bottle of tincture of iodine, a cake of soap, two rolls of gauze, some cotton and adhesive plaster. It should also consist of some of the family's favorite laxative, vaseline or petroleum, and a simple ointment for abrasions, chaffing, and sunburn. Any ordinary zinc oxide ointment serves this purpose.

There should be cold cream for use on dry, chapped lips, and perhaps a small amount of some antiseptic solution that is really antiseptic and will not act as a caustic on a burn.

Such a first-aid kit may save a life and is of great help in securing comfort and relief from pain in emergencies. Manufacturers now make such kits for use of motorists.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHING

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
The Democrat's Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, June 7.—If munitions industry investigators look sharply enough, they'll find some interesting evidence in the government's own files.

Assuming, of course, that nothing has been removed.

Exports of arms and other war materials to South America and other warring countries haven't always been made without the knowledge—or even the encouragement—of certain persons in certain federal departments.

The boys who learned from Mr. Hoover how to high-pressure our foreign trade didn't see why we shouldn't sell our machine guns as vigorously as anything else.

Some of them are still here and even their recent activities, when and if revealed, may cause such a flurry as to result in the loss of a few minor jobs in two departments.

In the present Chaco war, Paraguayan soldiers actually used to find dead Bolivian soldiers clad in U. S. Army uniforms, with regimental and other insignia.

The War Department had sold the uniforms and other surplus stocks to private contractors here. But that's only a sidelight.

Stephen T. Rausenbush, chief investigator for Chairman Nye of the Senate munitions committee, is checking files of the Commerce, War, State and other departments. The White House sent word down that he was to have full access.

Some of the investigators who worked with Ferdinand Pecora on the stock market investigation, digging up the dirt of J. P. Morgan, Albert Wiggin, and other emperors of finance, will now work under Raushenbush and delve into affairs of huge corporations which make munitions.

Well, Anyway, It's A Horse

Whatever did become of the famous mechanical horse which Calvin Coolidge used to ride in the White House?

Ted Clark, Coolidge's former personal secretary, thinks it must be in storage up at Northampton.

But a lot of pretty, bare-legged girls are thrilled every day by rides on an iron steed which they understand is the very same animal. It's installed out at the Shoreham swimming pool and the check girl who passes out towels tells everybody to "be sure and take a ride on Mr. Coolidge's horse." Everybody does.

It seems that a man who had the horse and didn't like it came around and offered it if he could swim free when he wanted. The nag was a gift to him from a lady whose husband wasn't in love with it, either.

Maybe it's the Coolidge horse and maybe not, but everybody agrees it isn't much fun unless you think so.

Sister MARY'S KITCHEN

BY MARY E. DAGUE
NEA Service Staff Writer

Anyone who spends the day in an office, or the best part of it in the kitchen will find pleasure in meals served in the fresh air. Not only will appetites be whetted but tense nerves will relax and digestion will be aided.

The first consideration in planning meals for serving away from the family dining room is to reduce the number of dishes to a minimum. A one-dish combination of some sort with a salad and dessert simplifies serving as well as dish washing. Very often the salad can be put on the table in an attractive salad bowl for each member to help himself. If you use compartment plates, the salad plate is unnecessary.

Casserole dishes combining meat and vegetables, fish chowders and meat and vegetable pies are splendid main dishes for dinners al fresco.

And for bread make bread and butter sandwiches or butter rolls and put them in the oven to heat.

Veal and Vegetable Pie

This is a delicious and attractive dish that can be varied interestingly. The vegetables can be cooked early in the day before if convenient. When you want to prepare your dinner you will need to make the crust and bake it. The crust will bake while you are setting the table and putting the flinshing touches on the salad or dessert.

One pound lean veal, 1 cup tiny cooked onions, 1 cup diced cooked carrots, 1 cup cooked green peas, 2 cups cooked potato marbles, 2 tablespoons butter, salt and pepper 1 1-4 cups flower, 2 1-2 teaspoons baking powder, 2 tablespoons shortening, 1-2 teaspoon salt, milk.

Choose veal from the small part of leg since it is usually cheaper and the meat must be cut in small pieces anyway. Cover with boiling water and simmer until tender but not broken. Add salt and let cool in stock, over night if convenient. Remove fat and bone from meat, making neat pieces for serving. Arrange meat in a buttered casserole. Remove fat from stock and strain through cheesecloth. There should be about two cups of stock. The liquid in which the vegetables, with the exception of the onions, were cooked can also be used. Melt butter, stir in flour and when bubbling add stock, stirring constantly.

Bring to boiling point, season with salt and pepper. Add prepared vegetables to meat in casserole and pour over sauce. Mix and sift flour, salt and baking powder. Rub in shortening and cut in milk with a knife. Use enough milk to make a soft dough. Roll on a floured molding board and cut with a small biscuit cutter. Cover top of mixture in casserole with biscuits and bake in a hot oven until biscuits are thoroughly baked and brown on top. It will take about thirty-five minutes for baking the biscuits because the sauce, meat and vegetables retard the baking. Serve from baking dish.

Planked dishes are excellent for outdoor serving, too. The hot plank keeps the food hot and of course a variety of vegetables always surround whatever meat you are serving. The individual planks are just the thing for families who do not have the same ideas about meats and vegetables because each one can have what he particularly likes.
