Ceremony welcomes citizens

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

George W. Bush came up with a slogan which might help "newcomers" and "oldtimers" alike better appreciate their country: "Pitch in and make America work."

His suggestion came Tuesday afternoon in federal court in Midland during naturalization ceremonies for 38 U.S. citizenship petitioners from seven foreign lands.

And Bush, president of Arbusto Energy and son of U.S. Vice President George H.W. Bush, told the new citizens to exercise their newly bestowed rights and privileges and to "raise your voice" when conditions seem amiss. "You're not going to jail" for speaking out.

"In fact," Bush said, "you might be asked to serve on a committee."

At the invitation of U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton, Bush and Odessa bank executive Narita Holmes extended to the 38 ex-aliens a brief welcome to U.S. citizenship and offered hints on citizenship, responsibilities and opportunities in the free-enter-

City Council won't rescue water park

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Midland City Council rejected three propositions to save Wild River Canyon from possible closure and transformation into an apartment complex during its meeting Tuesday in City Hall Council Chambers, and one of the general partners afterward sought public help from local banks and corporations.

Also during the meeting, the council approved a major development at Loop 250 and Wadley Avenue and held a public hearing on an annexation request.

Wild River Canyon is a water amusement park located in west Midland next to Loop 250 between West Highway 80 and Andrews Highway. It opened during the summer of 1981 under a partnership headed by T. June Melton III.

Melton explained to the council that several persons had invested in the venture two years ago, but now several are wanting to pull out and put their money in other investments. This has put him in the position of finding someone to buy the park.

"Land values have escalated so much out there that the land is now worth more than the park," he said. Before this situation cropped up, Melton said, plans had called for increasing the commercial aspect of the park over an eight-year period to enhance the land value.

"BUT THE LAND VALUES in Midland have skyrocketed, so we have to sell it as a park or another use. In the past month I've talked to a number of investors. Four are interested and they want to turn it into an apartment complex."

Flipping through a stack of papers, Melton described the pile as 700 petitions signed by persons wanting to retain the Canyon as a water amusement park. Out of that 700, he said, only three persons were against keeping the park.

"I'm in the middle of this thing and it's pretty tight right now," he said. "Most people want to see it remain as a park and personally I do, too. I know how badly Midland is in need of recreation."

During its two summers of operating, Wild River Canyon attracted over 100,000 visitors and employed 400 persons, mostly teen-agers. Midland has plenty of what Melton termed "passive recreation, or art shows, theater and exhibits," but it's lacking in the "active recreation."

He offered three proposals: The city buy the park, obtain it through a trade of land which Melton would sell to pay off the investors or buy it through the banks, with each financial institution paying its share according to its amount of deposits.

On the possible trade-off of land, Melton suggested a tract that is part of Midland Air Park.

"The land trade wouldn't burden the taxpayers, but it would put land on the tax rolls," Melton said.

TO SWEETEN THE OFFER, he suggested his company continue to manage it for seven years on a lease-back agreement similar to one operated by Midland Sports, Inc., on Midland Cubs Stadium.

Total cost of the land and park facilities is estimated at $3.8 million. Melton offered to trade for land appraised at $1.67 million. Or, if the city wanted to buy, he suggested a selling price of $2.1 million, or 49 percent of the cost. "For this month only, we're having a half price sale," he quipped.

But the council didn't think it was a bargain.

Questioned by Councilman Tom Sloan as to the profit posted by the park in its two years of operating, Melton replied, "If you're looking at it as a purely business venture, there's no way

Residents oppose use of lake

By LANA CUNNINGHAM

Claiming they want Wadley-Barron Park Lake finished and the public told "to stay out of it," a group of residents near the park at Cuthbert and A Streets objected vehemently Tuesday to the Midland City Council over plans to allow boating and fishing in the lake.

After reading a story in the Feb. 28 issue of The Reporter-Telegram of the city's plans to allow fishing and boating at the lake with restrictions, residents of the area became alarmed at what they felt was a reduction of their rights. The council, after explaining that numerous stories had been printed and aired in the media at the time the ordinance was considered, sent the ruling to the Parks and Recreation Commission for discussion and possible revision.

Discussion on turning part of Wadley-Barron Park into a lake began in November 1980 with the decision on a method coming in January 1981. Afterward, in several public council sessions, the panel discussed what activities would be allowed in the park and finally settled on model boating, canoeing and fishing, but with some restrictions including a requirement to wear a life preserver. No swimming would be allowed at any time, according to Wayne Kohout, director of parks and recreation. And the park's curfew times would be retained.

KOHOUT RECALLED his department had sent out two newsletters to the area residents. The first asked the residents what they would like to see at the park to resolve the problem of ground water seeping up and keeping the lower part soggy much of the time.

Of 63 letters sent, 37 surveys were returned and 23 checked off the response to "deepen the basin and stock it with fish to control mosquito larvae and insects," related Kohout.

The second letter told the results of the first survey and implied that no fishing or swimming would be allowed.

"From the Parks and Recreation standpoint, we were looking at it (lake) as an asset — opening up as many

El Salvador's situation 'global in character,' Haig tells panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. said today the war against Salvadoran guerrillas cannot be won in that country alone because the rebellion is part of a Soviet and Cuban-led effort to subvert freedom around the globe.

"This situation is global in character," Haig told a Senate committee. "These are the local manifestations of a global problem, the solution to which is not going to be found by the level of assistance we give to El Salvador or don't give, or the number of American advisers."

Haig appeared before the foreign operations subcommittee of the Senate Appropriations Committee as the administration continued a new campaign to try to rally public support for its policies in Central America.

Adm. Bobby Inman, deputy director of the Central Intelligence Agency, told reporters the buildup endangers all of Central America and far exceeds what Nicaragua would need for its own defense.

He said Cuba, which the United States claims also is assisting the Nicaraguans, might use bases there as a jumping off point for intervention elsewhere in the region.

Haig, in response to a question at today's hearing, declined comment on a report in the Washington Post that the administration has approved a plan to try to destabilize the Nicaraguan government that would involve a CIA-directed 500-member paramilitary force drawn from other Latin American countries.

But, while Haig said it was "a matter of consistent and longstanding policy" not to comment on covert activities, he said that should not be interpreted as confirmation of the report.

Sen. Robert Kasten, R-Wis., the subcommittee chairman, told Haig that, "if there is evidence of outside intervention in El Salvador, it is imperative that it be brought forward."

Haig, in his initial testimony, offered no additional evidence to back up his earlier charges that Nicaragua and Cuba are directing the Salvadoran insurgency. But his message to the subcommittee was that the U.S.-backed Salvadoran government will be unable to win a clear-cut victory over the guerrillas without the overall problem of Cuban and Soviet global conspiring being addressed.

Having said that, however, he did not say what the United States planned to do about it.

But he urged support for President Reagan's policy in the region, saying, "I would hope members of this committee and the American people would give their president credit for understanding the seriousness of the situation."

Inman, discussing the American view of events in Central America, said Tuesday that Nicaragua may go the same way as Cuba and become a "bastion" for aggression.

But Nicaragua's ambassador to the United States, Francisco Fiallos Navarro, said today the aerial photos only "showed ... what we have always been saying."

Interviewed on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America," Navarro added:

"We don't deny that we have some tanks; there are some American tanks that belonged to Samoza's National Guard. We have received as a gift some few tanks from a country of the Third World, which is not Cuba."

As for aircraft, Navarro said, "We have never denied that ... we have two helicopters out in the open at the international airport at Managua that were a gift of the Soviet Union."

But he said "we don't have Soviet military advisers and we don't have more than a dozen Cuban military advisers ... advising us on not very sophisticated weapons."

Confession introduced in Midland murder trial

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A confession signed by Booker T. "Billy" Green on the night he allegedly shot R.J. Morris in the heat of a gambling dispute stated that Green got a semi-automatic .22-caliber rifle out of his car, walked up to the M&M Liquor Store where Morris and his son Bubba Morris had just entered and fired repeatedly.

Five bullets crashed through the eastside store's window on that night of Nov. 14; one struck R.J. Morris.

"When I heard the gunfire," Green's statement read, "I kind of woke up. I stood there just looking at him."

Morris, 50, died later that Saturday night in a hospital.

"I pointed the gun toward the inside of the store," Green's statement said. "I just started pulling the trigger. I saw R.J. duck behind the counter. I walked off and got in the car and left."

THE STATEMENT, which Green, 42, made to Midland Police Detective Frank Bartlett that night, was introduced into evidence by prosecutor Marian Bentley, who is assisting District Attorney Vern Martin in building the state's case against the accused.

"I knew R.J. had a gun," read the statement. However, that part of the statement, which was bracketed by the

Lee Brown leaving Atlanta for Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — Police officers are questioning why Lee Brown, the Atlanta public safety commissioner who headed the inquiry that led to Wayne Williams' murder conviction, was nominated as Houston's first black police chief.

The 44-year-old Brown was tapped Tuesday by Mayor Kathy Whitmire as her "No. 1 choice" to take command of the 3,000-member force in the nation's fifth-largest city.

However, many officers reacted angrily to the news that this city's first woman mayor had chosen an outsider to the $75,000-a-year post.

"If she can't find one qualified man in a force of 3,000, then she might as well fire all of us," said one patrolman who did not want to be identified.

Three of the department's four police unions — the Houston Police Patrolmen's Union, the Afro-American Officers Association and the Organization of Spanish Speaking Officers — endorsed Brown's nomination.

But Bill Elkin, president of the Houston Police Officers Asociation, said he was "shocked and surprised" by the mayor's choice, He said he was afraid Mrs. Whitmire appointed Brown because of his race and not his qualifications.

Brown, who has a Ph.D in criminology from the University of California at Berkeley, worked in Portland, Ore., as county justice services director before moving to Atlanta to take over a department troubled by a scandal over police cheating on promotion exams.

He came under fire in Atlanta during the two-year string of slayings of 28 young blacks, but criticism of his department eased after Williams' arrest and conviction.

IF HIS NOMINATION is approved by eight members of 14-seat City Council, Brown will become Houston's third police chief within four months.

The Houston Police Department was rocked in the late 1970s by use of "throw-down guns" — pistols planted by police on slain civilians intended to clear officers of wrongdoing — and just this week by a controversy involving the mayor.

Top police officials demanded an apology from Mrs. Whitmire for making "unsubstaniated allegations of criminal conduct and mismanagement" about the department in a Houston Chronicle interview Sunday.

Brown's nomination came less than 24 hours after Acting Police Chief John Bales announced he was no longer a candidate for the police chief's job.

Bales, who was named to the post by the mayor in December after Chief B.K. Johnson resigned, said he felt no animosity about Brown's nomination and believed he would work with the new police chief.

IN ATLANTA, Mayor Andrew Young announced Brown's resignation, saying Houston was "notorious for their big money offers." Young said Atlanta Police Chief George Napper will become acting public safety commissioiner.

Congress joins in call for air safety

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of Congress are joining federal safety experts in calling on the government and industry to do more to minimize the chance of airline disasters such as the Air Florida crash two months ago.

Congressional involvement in the air safety issue came as a board of inquiry neared the end of hearings into why Air Florida's Flight 90 plunged into the Potomac River shortly after takeoff Jan. 13. Seventy-eight people were killed.

"Despite the impressive overall positive trends in aviation in the past decade, this country is still plagued by periodic avoidable disasters in our airline system," Rep. Albert Gore, D-Tenn., declared Tuesday.

Gore, chairman of the House subcommittee on investigations and oversight, said the government should review its role in air safety.

He got support from James Burnett, the acting chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board, who criticized the Federal Aviation Administration for not following up on on a number of safety recommedations the board has made over the years.

BURNETT CITED, for example, recommendations calling for stronger seats in commercial aircraft, fire-resistant material in passenger cabins, and development of ways to better detect ice on an aircraft and ensure that de-icers work.

The FAA for a year has been studying the de-icing issue, but the chief of the program, Richard Adams, told a hearing on the Air Florida accident this week no tests on de-icers have yet been done and no airlines' de-icing procedures have been examined.

The NTSB panel, meanwhile, postponed its final session on the Air Florida crash until Friday. More than 40 witnesses have appeared before the panel so far.

The Air Florida hearings have focused extensively on the de-icing question. Investigators believe ice may have accumulated on the forward edge of the plane's wings and in the engine, causing problems with lift and giving the pilot a false indication of engine power during takeoff.

Although a cause for the Flight 90 crash is not expected to be determined for months, the investigation already has prompted airlines to re-examine their winter operating procedures.

Air Florida officials told investigators Tuesday the airline had tightened its procedures for flying in icy or snowy weather a month after the crash.

UNDER THE new directive, all Air Florida pilots are required to use the engine defrost system whenever there is rain or snow, or whenever an aircraft has to be de-iced.

The directive, issued Feb. 15, also calls for flight crews to make a visual inspection of wing surfaces and the engine whenever takeoff is more than 20 minutes after the plane was de-iced. Flight 90 took off nearly an hour after de-icing.

Air Florida pilots also have been told to increase their takeoff speed whenever there is poor weather, even though the additional speed may force them to reduce the weight of the aircraft by as much as 8,000 pounds at some airports.

"The FAA has been aware of serious problems, critical problems, life-threatening problems for as long as 20 years and has done nothing about them," Walker declared.

Two FAA research officials outlined some of the agency's programs, but said they could not respond to the criticism that some changes have not been made. They said those were regulatory questions, which were out of their purview.

World Airways petitions for end to air fare wars

WASHINGTON (AP) — World Airways, a pioneer in cut-rate fares, wants the government to end what its top executive calls the "completely irrational fare wars which threaten the long-haul domestic" airlines.

Edward J. Daly, World's president and chairman, said it was ironic that it should be his carrier — an early proponent of low fares — which initiated a petition Tuesday to the Civil Aeronautics Board to end the airline fare wars.

"The public is best served by fares at the lowest economically sensible level," Daly said. "For years they were too high in the transcontinental markets, and World did something about it. Now they are too low and I will not remain silent even though our proposal may offend the deregulation purists."

Prosecutors praise FBI for extortion conviction

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Federal prosecutors say the FBI deserves the credit for helping convict two Texas men charged with trying to extort millions of dollars from major corporations by mailing ticks and explosives.

A U.S. District Court jury deliberated about 2½ hours Tuesday night before returning guilty verdicts against Artis O'Dell Reed of Dallas and Leon Horton of Turnertown, Miss.

Reed and Horton showed no emotion when the verdict was read, and Reed's court-appointed attorney said appeals would be filed. The men face possible maximum sentences of 20 years in prison and $10,000 fines. They were returned to the Jackson city jail under bonds of $250,000.

Assistant U.S. Attorney James Tucker called the verdict "the culmination of many years of hard work. The FBI's to be given all the credit."

The federal government charged Reed and Horton with sending letters in 1975 demanding money from such companies as Johnson & Johnson pharmaceuticals and Merrill Lynch Pierce Fenner and Smith Inc., the brokerage firm.

The first 180 letters were mailed in October 1975 and postmarked Jackson. All were signed "B.A. Fox."

Several corporations that refused to respond to demands that money be deposited in a Mexican bank received letters containing ticks, allegedly carrying diseases.

One letter nicknamed one of the ticks "Exxon," according to testimony.

"We named him Exxon because he has a tiger in his tank," the letter said. The letter claimed the ticks had "run barefoot" over a variety of viruses and bacteria at the "well-stocked" B.A. Fox laboratory.

A copy of that letter was mailed to then-FBI Director Clarence Kelley, a move prosecutors say was designed to taunt investigators.

Sebastian Moore, Reed's attorney, blamed the scheme on Steven Grant Morton, a Colorado man originally indicted for the same acts in 1977. Those charges were dismissed by a federal judge.

Ad agency chalks up $24.5 million phantom revenue

By SCOTT KRAFT
Assocated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — The ad world is buzzing with a new TV story line that has everything: questionable deals, phony profits, corporate infighting, and a powerful female executive toppled from her position.

It all really happened — without a commercial break — at one Madison Avenue ad agency. The intrigue continues in what analysts say may be the biggest scandal ever in the advertising industry.

J. Walter Thompson Co., the world's second largest ad agency, says $24.5 million in "fictitious revenue" was chalked up by its TV program syndication department over the last four years.

The announcement spurred investigations by the Securities and Exchange Commission and by the U.S. Attorney's office.

There was no evidence that any of the money was misappropriated — or, indeed, ever existed. But the phantom revenue did make the unit appear to be performing much better than it actually was.

"IT CAUSED a great deal of stir because people in the industry were thinking, "There but for the grace of God go I,'" said Fred Anschel, an analyst who follows the publicly held company for the Wall Street investment firm of Dean Witter Reynolds.

JWT Group, parent of the agency, said two weeks ago that it was adjusting old earnings reports to allow for the overstated revenue, and writing off $9.5 million, or about two-thirds, of 1981 profits, according to analysts.

JWT Chairman Don Johnston blamed no one publicly, saying the company's investigation was continuing. But an internal investigation has been going on for several months, and the head of the unit, Marie Luisi, was suspended without pay on Jan. 31.

Mrs. Luisi, 46, a $100,000-plus-a-year executive, has declined to talk to reporters. But through her attorney, Ivan S. Fisher, she denies having anything to do with the inflated revenue figures. Fisher says she's not "a numbers person. She knows none of this."

Fisher says the problems "have very little to do with Marie Luisi and a lot to do with the management at JWT."

"She was with them 18 years. She was a hit," he said. "Now she earns herself the enmity of lots of people in the industry and yet she doesn't even get the benefit of a direct accusation."

Mrs. Luisi is, by most accounts, a vivacious and energetic woman who was able to pull off money-making deals in the intensely competitive world of advertising.

SHE GOT her start at J. Walter Thompson at age 17, later took a few years off for her own ventures and returned 18 years ago. She had risen to become one of the more powerful women on Madison Avenue — senior vice president at JWT, a member of the board of directors of the U.S. division and head of the syndication and tV spot sales departments.

JWT's syndication department buys television programs, like "World of Survival" and "Tales of the Unknown," and offers them to TV stations in exchange for commercial air time. Under that system, called barter syndication, the agency recoups its investment when it sells that air time to clients through the spot sales department, whose $301 million sales last year made it the industry leader.

At JWT, the bank of commercial air time acquired by these syndication deals but not sold to advertisers was growing. Phony revenue figures made it look like the air time had been sold, but no advertisers were billed for time they hadn't bought, the company says.

The error was discovered when the company sent its accountants to look for ways to avoid borrowing money in the face of cash-flow problems.

"What happened was that we spent millions of dollars on program properties in which we didn't recover our investment," says Stephen M. Saloio, JWT's general counsel. "But the bogus entries made it appear we weren't doing badly."

LAST Friday, the company announced it was withdrawing from the business of barter syndication. "Once we saw the figures behind the inflated figures, we saw how bad a business it was," said JWT spokesman Don Deaton.

Why were the figures fudged? Salorio wasn't willing to speculate on a motive or a perpetrator. Mrs. Luisi's attorney thinks her underlings were trying to cover up a poor selling job.

All the departments at JWT have profit and revenue projections. Promotions and bonuses are given to executives based on each unit's performance. Asked if there was too much pressure on department heads to deliver on projected profits, Johnston said that 99 out of 100 "run at a profit and do it right."

Meanwhile, JWT hasn't made a final decision on Mrs. Luisi. She has begun doing consulting work and Fisher says he expects her "to land on her feet." But not, he adds, at J. Walter Thompson.

El Savador concerns Senator

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most of the people in Congress trying to restrict U.S. aid to El Salvador also opposed U.S. involvement in Vietnam more than a decade ago. But they have an influential recruit from the ranks of those who supported the U.S. role in Vietnam.

Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd is sponsoring legislation to require congressional approval before U.S. combat troops could be sent to the revolution-torn Central American country.

Unlike most of those backing proposals to limit U.S. aid in El Salvador, Byrd supported U.S. involvement in the Vietnamese war almost to the last.

It is not clear how much support Byrd will get from like-minded senators. Of several who have signed on as co-sponsors of his bill, most were opponents of the Vietnam involvement, such as Sens. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., and Donald M. Riegle, D-Mich.

THE BILL will have to make its way through the Foreign Relations Committee, which is about evenly divided between critics and supporters of military aid to the Salvadoran junta.

A source close to Byrd said that like many in Congress, including both backers and foes of the administration policy, the minority leader has found during trips home to West Virginia that voters are fearful of deepening involvement in the Salvadoran conflict.

"He was one of the very last to change his mind on Vietnam, but when he goes home he hears a lot of concern about not getting involved in El Salvador," said the source, who asked not to be identified.

Byrd's proposal does not take a position on continued U.S. military aid to El Salvador, nor does it even say that troops should not be sent. It merely says they should not be sent without specific authorization from Congress. The administration has said the use of troops is highly unlikely, but has refused to rule it out.

In the House, one of the most outspoken critics of military aid to the Salvadoran regime is Rep. Clarence Long, D-Md., chairman of the appropriations sucommittee that screens foreign aid requests.

LONG, TOO, was a supporter of the Vietnam War at first, but switched in 1970 and became an opponent. He was one of the few members of Congress with a son who served in Vietnam.

In another congressional initiative against administration policy in El Salvador, 28 House members have written President Reagan urging him to consult with Congress before allowing U.S. military advisers to carry rifles. Another group of 29, all House Democrats, have sued in federal court to cut off U.S. aid.

Warm afternoons will prevail in the Midland area through Thursday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. Skies will continue to be fair tonight, turning partly cloudy on Thursday.

The low tonight will be in the upper 40s, with the high on Thursday once again climbing into the middle 80s.

Winds will be southerly and southwesterly at 5-10 mph tonight, turning southerly at 15-20 mph on Thursday.

Tuesday's high of 81 missed tying the record high of 85, set in 1955, by only four degrees. The overnight low of 43 was almost 30 degrees warmer than the record low of 14, set in 1948.

Man arrested in alleged kidnapping

Justice of the Peace Robert Pine set bond of $10,000 on 21-year-old Henry Dewayne Dolly following his arrest at the police station about 8 p.m. Sunday. Dolly is charged with attempting to kidnap 20-year-old Erma Atkinson of Midland, no street address available.

According to police, Dolly was acquainted with Atkinson's brother and asked her for a ride home from a southside Midland lounge Sunday night. As they were in her car, however, he told her he had a gun and demanded a ride to El Paso.

Instead, she jumped from the car near the police station and ran inside. Dolly chased her into the building and was quickly arrested.

In burglary complaints, Jose Ruiz of Route 5, Midland, told officers someone broke into his home Tuesday and stole numerous items — including jewelry, guns and tools — worth an estimated $6,720. Entry was gained by breaking a bedroom window.

Fonda Gayle Hellums of 401 W. Dengar Ave. reported the theft of stereo equipment valued at $2,000 during a burglary of her residence. There was no sign of forced entry.

And Ollestean Mc Coy of 1110 E. Dormard Ave. told officers she returned home about 9:30 p.m. Tuesday and saw a man run out the back door and disappear after jumping a fence. Missing were a woman's watch and assorted jewelry worth $220.

Montemayor brothers sentenced, fined

HOUSTON (AP) — Two South Texas brothers convicted here on federal drug charges each have been given a 15-year prison sentence and $30,000 fine.

Maynardo Montemayor, of Laredo, and Manuel Montemayor, of McAllen, were found guilty last month on four counts of conspiring to manufacture heroin and to smuggle heroin, cocaine and marijuana.

However, U.S. District Judge James DeAnda said he believed there was only one conspiracy to distribute drugs, and he consolidated the charges before Tuesday's sentencing.

Each could have received 50 years in prison and fines of $50,000.

A third defendant in the case, Alfonso Arredondo Jr., also of McAllen, was granted a new trial because one juror expressed uncertainty about his guilt after the verdict was pronounced.

The Montemayors' attorneys vowed to appeal, and DeAnda set appeal bond at $1.5 million each.

The men will remain in the Harris County jail until they are take to federal prison later this week.

Federal narcotics agents seized property worth about $1 million last April from the Montemayors' holdings near McAllen. The seizure was made under a 1978 law allowing government agents to seize property they believe can be directly traced to narcotics trafficking.

Judge orders sheriff charges dropped

TYLER, Texas (AP) — Smith County Sheriff J.B. Smith must be reinstated and state criminal charges against him must be dropped, a federal judge has ruled.

U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice took the unusual action Tuesday, ruling Smith's civil rights were violated when he was indicted on 18 counts of official misconduct and one count of arson. Some of the incidents for which he was charged occurred before he was re-elected sheriff in 1980.

The judge said the criminal charges pending against Smith were motivated by a desire for revenge.

The sheriff was suspended without pay from his job and an interim sheriff appointed in July 1981.

In his reinstatement suit Smith claimed that the indictments were retaliation for his and his deputies' testimony in the trial.

Council won't rescue amusement park

He explained that while it posted an $80,000 to $100,000 profit those two years, that money went to pay the land debt and over-supply of inventory on some items.

Ron Forest, who described himself as a native Midlander, asked the council to look "beyond business sense. Midland has grown extensively in the past few years. Wild River Canyon is a place for fishing, a place for swimming, a place to play miniature golf. It's a place for people of all ages," he said in referring to an earlier agenda item in which a neighborhood didn't want fishing or retirees in the local park.

A RETIRED MAN who had worked at WRC last summer as a security guard pointed out the youngsters hired there "learned a lot." And Melton noted that a job at WRC is one of the most sought after among the teen-age community.

Dude Martin, a high school student who has worked there the past two summers, pointed out that Midland's parks "don't have facilities for kids my age. This gives people 14 to 21 years old a place to go. This solves the problem for me and 200 other people of what to do and it taught us about the economic system."

Wayne Kohout, director of the city parks and recreation department, said Wild River Canyon is a "great asset to the community from the standpoint of recreational opportunities. With some regret, we view the possible loss of WRC. We are an isolated community, and it becomes a burden on us to provide recreation of any type."

He suggested the city follow Melton's suggestion of a lease-back agreement to keep the park operating if the council decided to take it over.

Noting that only about a month remained before a final decision had to be made, Mayor G. Thane Akins said the council didn't have much time to think about the proposal. And instead of the Air Park land trade, he laughingly sugggested the city might be willing to talk about trading irrigated farm land along Midland Draw for the park.

AFTER HAGGLING back and forth between Melton and the council as to the financial feasibility of the proposal, Sloan said, "I wish it had been financially successful. Dragging it out would be misleading. I prefer to lay my cards on the table and say 'I'm sorry,' but I can't vote to pay public funds to buy it and then operate it. We've got to look at it on some sort of business-like basis."

Challenged by Martin that the survey of petitions showed the public wanted to keep it, Sloan replied, "But taxing to pay for it is different. A lot of people in Midland don't want to pay for Wild River Canyon."

His motion to reject Melton's proposals passed.

Afterward, Melton said he is trying to anticipate his next move. "We're faced with the prospect that the city hasn't learned over the years the real needs of the kids in this community." He suggested banks and corporations willing to get involved in Wild River Canyon on a non-profit organizational basis "to get us out of this predicament. We're willing to work with everyone. I feel Midland has needed a facility like this for many years. I can hold the investors at bay another month."

If a "savings" plan comes through, Melton said the staff and management could gear up to open the park on short notice.

In other items considered, the council drove out to a 93.94-acre tract of land bounded by Taylor Avenue on the north to hold a public hearing on annexing the site.

AFTER RICHARD Hennessy, director of planning and community development, noted the State Highway Department is reviewing plans for access and should have a report ready soon, the council decided to recess the hearing until March 23. But once they discovered they would have to drive back out to the site, the mayor asked, "Anyone here want to reconsider?"

The council gave it a quick second thought and voted to close the public hearing. Next meeting on the subject will be held in the Council Chambers.

Approved Tuesday was a zone change request from HBF Corporation for 85.81 acres at the southeast corner of Wadley Avenue and Loop 250.

At the corner is the possibility of a four-story hotel, related Larry Bell, president of HBF. Branching inward from that are plans for medical offices, also with a maximum heighth of four stories. He pointed out Midland Memorial Hospital officials are looking at this area of town for locating a clinic.

In the outer office areas are plans for apartments while zoning inward on the tract calls for townhouse and 1F-3.

"We continue to see a need for surburban office areas, not necessarily petroleum offices," Bell said of the four proposed 60,000-square-foot offices.

LOOKING AT THE rapidly developing northwest section of Midland, Bell said, "We're proposing needs to supplement the other areas. If you don't provide services, the residential won't develop. Now, you wouldn't have to get in your car and drive a long way for medical services."

Sloan remarked the plan ties in with other developments to the south and east and moved to accept the plan. The action was passed by the council.

In other action, the council deleted a requirement that persons working in food establishments obtain a health card once a year, retained off-street paving requirements, approved the use of polybutylene plastic piping for hot and cold water, denied a specific use permit for a nightclub to R.L. Leonard and accepted an office zoning for an audiologist.

recreational opportunities as possible. But we were still keeping in mind the good neighbor policy with the adjacent neighbors.

"Many months were spent in review (of the ordinance) by yourself and by the Parks and Recreation staff. It was done with the best interest of the community in mind," Kohout said.

Gary Wisener, of 901 Harvard and an attorney, began the afternoon of heated exchanges between the council and residents, saying he was "distressed over the intent to change the residential neighborhood to a recreational facility. It's not a fenced lake and will be open at all times."

ASSERTING THAT the lake will drop property values in the area, Wisener said he was "appalled to learn it would have boating and sailing," and he was apprehensive about the safety of children around the lake.

Even though the ordinance prohibits wading and swimming, Wisener contended, "Kids are going to try anything they can get away with. It must be patrolled."

Mayor G. Thane Akins pointed out that even if the city hadn't turned the bog into a lake, "it would still be a body of water and kids are going to get into it."

"It's not our problem if kids get into it; it's yours," Wisener retorted. "We'd like to have the park finished and tell the public to stay out of it."

Part of the problem, he and others related, is the lack of parking in the area to accommodate the public.

"You've changed our residential area and taken our property away from us," continued Wisener. "I don't think municipal powers extend that far."

Akins asked the audience, which partially filled the council chambers, if they were aware of any of the stories the local media had done on the lake and proposed uses over a long period of time and the audience replied, "No."

"I wish you people had been here when we were writing the ordinance. I don't believe it's taking property values away," he said.

Ruth Bartha, 905 Bedford, reported it was the parking that had her worried. "They're going to be parking in front of your house because the streets are public. Trash will be all over the place."

ARGUING THAT THE council "has done an injustice to us," Charles Cook of 901 Country Club said that by stocking the lake with bass and catfish "a lot of people will think it's a good place to get food."

After numerous protesters insisted they had never heard of plans for the lake's use until recently, Councilman Tom Sloan commented, "I want you to realize we discussed it in public hearings. We've spent the money and now you want us to change it?" he asked rhetorically.

While some residents said they wouldn't mind allowing fishing once or twice a year for children under 10 in a program sponsored by the Parks and Recreation Department, Louis Bartha, 905 Bedford, said he didn't want anything allowed in the park.

"All the loafers will be there. All the retirees will be there. We're not against retired people; it's just that they would all be there. And they'll use our alley for toilets."

While the audience had listened quietly to its representatives speak and then applauded as each finished, the protesters resorted to booing when Pete Phillips of 500 N. Colorado said he favored the lake. Akins interrupted and instructed the audience to "show the same decorum as when you spoke."

But when Doug Benell, 905 Country Club, charged the residents had been "backstabbed" by the council, Akins countered by saying, "That's not a good term. I heard about this lake for several weeks on the radio and TV and in the newspaper."

IN ASKING THAT the ordinance be reconsidered by the council at its March 23 meeting, Benell requested the council "to come in here with an open mind, or without prejudice."

"We do come here with an open mind," injected Akins.

Before the council voted to send the ordinance to the Parks and Recreation Commission for study, Sloan reminded Louis Bartha that he had known about the fishing ordinance longer than he claimed.

"Louis," began Sloan, "don't you remember when we talked about it that day in the bank?"

The man began to object.

"This was a long time ago and before the ordinance was written," Sloan said.

After several more badgering exchanges from Sloan, Bartha sputtered, "Yes, but I never thought the council would go for such a crazy idea."

Citizens welcomed in naturalization ceremony

Judge Bunton, cloaked in his black robe, presided over the ceremony, while the petitioners sat quietly in the jury box and along the bar.

"I love my country, period," said the Connecticut-born, Texas-raised Bush. "It's a great place."

Bush, a Republican candidate for the U.S. Congress in 1978, told the former aliens "to take advantage of the greatest economic system in the world.

Though the nation does have some ills, there's "a lot more good than bad," Bush said.

Mrs. Holmes, vice president of and controller for The First National Bank of Odessa, exhorted the citizens to exercise their constitutional rights: freedom of speech, rights to vote, right to question public officials' actions and judgments, right to a sound education for their children, and the opportunity to "be the very best citizen you can."

Mrs. Holmes is wife of Ector County District Attorney Mike Holmes.

Judge Bunton noted that the petitioners earned their citizenship via the naturalization process: willful desires to become U.S. citizens, study of the U.S. Constitution, history and government, renouncement of allegiance to the countries of their birth and allegiance to the United States.

Native citizens, such as Bush and Mrs. Holmes, came into citizenship by birth.

"They are citizens by accident," the judge said. "Both their mothers and their fathers were citizens of the United States, and they were born in the United States."

The judge congratulated the new West Texas citizens who formerly lived in Mexico, China, Ireland, The Phillipines, Korea, Vietnam and India. The majority — 29 — were Mexicans.

"The magic wand has been waved today," Bunton told the new citizens, whose ages ranged from 18 to 71. "You have come to this country; you have become part of the United States."

Following the 45-minute ceremony, the new citizens were afforded a new-found right: to register to vote. Representatives of the League of Women Voters of Midland helped register the citizens.

And Midland chapters of the Daughters of the American Revolution passed out miniature U.S. flags to the citizens, handed then certificates of naturalization, and served them cookies, coffee and punch.

Bartholomew J. Rumaker, examinerfor the U.S. Department of Justice's Immigration and Naturalization Service, assured Judge Bunton that the 38 petitioners had fulfilled requirementsfor U.S. citizenship.

"We welcome you to this country," the judge said.

Confession introduced as murder trial continues

prosecution and not mentioned in Ms. Bentley's reading of the confession, was brought out by her courtroom adversary, defense attorney H. Thomas Hirsch of Odessa.

Also omitted in Ms. Bentley's rendering of the statement to the 11 jurors was part of Green's account of a scuffle he had with Morris over a dice game in the gaming room of King's Sandwich Parlor at Illinois Avenue and Lee Street in Midland's black business community.

The statement, as rendered by the prosecution, indicated that Morris, a Midland businessman; Green, an off-duty U.S. Postal Service supervisor; and other black men had been shooting craps on a pool table in the King's gaming room.

"They were all rolling dice," Green's statement said. "I stood there and played awhile."

Green's statement said that he placed $100 bets "with three different individuals."

"Well, I drug $400 and had $200 more coming," the statement said. "The bet I had made with R.J. was $200 short."

"I told R.J. Morris that he had my money," the statement said. "I told him that I did not have anything else to do with him. He denied getting my money."

At that juncture, Morris "started making another bet and said something about 'boy this' and 'boy that' to me," Green said in his statement to police. "He (R.J.) just kept on messing with me."

Thereupon, the statement said, Green struck Morris, a fist-fight ensued, was quickly broken up, and as Green was getting up from the floor, he saw Morris with a firearm.

"I looked, and R.J. had a gun and had it up in the air" in the King's gaming room. However, that portion of the statement was omitted by the prosecution, although the statement in its entirety is to be reviewed by the jurors in their deliberations. Nevertheless, Hirsch introduced the bracketed portions of the confession to the jurors.

THE ORIGINAL four-man, eight-woman all-white jury lost one of its members, Juanita Birge Esterak, when she reportedly broke her foot following the first day's testimony. And Presiding Judge Vann Culp of the 238th State District Court ordered the trial to continue with 11 jurors after the state and the defense agreed to do so.

Earlier testimony indicated that Yancy Abner Batie, 57, escorted Morris out of the gaming room. And Morris and his son walked the 90 feet or so to the liquor store, where Bubba Morris' wife, Helen, 31, and 6-year-old son were waiting; R.J. Morris owned the building, while his son owned and managed the business, testimony said.

MEANWHILE, according to the statement, Green, who "was real hot" in the wake of the Green-Morris gambling argument and fisticuffs, exited the gaming room through another door, spotted R.J. Morris and his son going into the liquor store and then got the rifle from the truck of his sedan.

After the shooting, Green's brother, Earl Green, entered the store, where several people had dropped to the floor, apparently to see if anyone had been hit.

"He (Earl Green) said, 'Let's go' — that I had hit him."

The statement said that Billy Green "didn't think I had hit him.' "

Through Tuesday, eight state witnesses had testified in the trial in which the prosecution is seeking a murder conviction and a prison sentence for Green; punishment for murder ranges from five years to 99 years or life in prison.

Hirsch indicated that the defense witnesses may take to the witness stand today. Green is expected to testify in his own defense.

Among those testifying Tuesday was John "Little John" Anders, 26, who said he witnessed the scuffle between Morris and Green. Anders said he heard Morris called Green "boy." But under cross-examination by Hirsch, Anders said he "really didn't know" if that reference was derogatory or complimentary. He also said that "somebody murmured that 'R.J. got the money'" off of Green.

Anders said that R.J. Morris was "hurrahing," as was his custom, after he had won some money at rolling dice.

Another witness, Marzella Weber, a clerk at the liquor store, testified that she handed Bubba Morris her .38-caliber pistol after the shots had been fired from the outside and into the liquor store. However, she said that R.J. Morris never had the weapon in hand.

Moments before the shooting, R.J. Morris and his son had walked into the liquor store. Ms. Weber, 50, said R.J. Morris and his son were "at it again," in an apparent reference to arguing.

"R.J. couldn't even get along with his own son," proposed Hirsch.

"He talked harsh to anybody," Ms. Weber said of Morris. "A lot of people talk soft; he talked rough."

Majority think Williams got fair trial, poll says

ATLANTA (AP) — A majority of Atlanta residents contacted in a telephone survey think Wayne B. Williams got a fair trial on charges that he killed two young blacks, a pollster reports. But he says blacks have a "lingering distrust of the judicial system."

Harry Ross, president of black-owned Management International Inc., said Tuesday a poll conducted the week after Williams was convicted found that 61 percent of the 155 telephone respondents believed Williams was guilty and got a fair trial.

But 58.8 percent of the same sample thought the trial was "politically influenced," Ross said.

A higher proportion of whites than blacks — 69 percent compared to 53.2 percent — believed Williams was guilty.

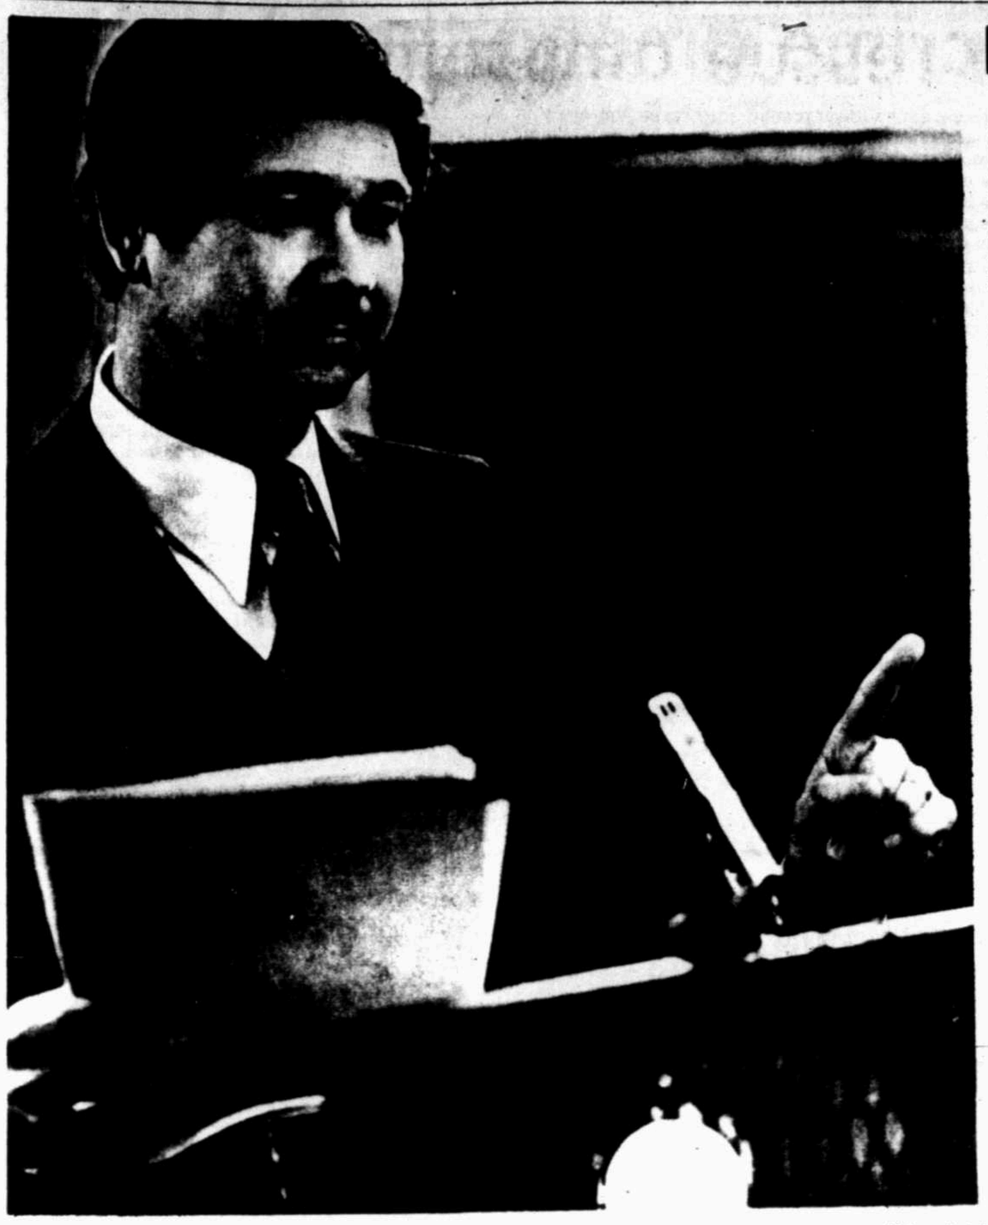
Richards looking forward to fighting lawsuits



AP Laserphoto

Sen. Mike Richards, R-Houston, said at a news conference Tuesday in Austin that State Controller Bob Bullock's troubles have caused the incumbent to file "bizarre" legal allegations against him.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Comptroller candidate Mike Richards, charging that incumbent Bob Bullock is a troubled man, says he is looking forward to defending against civil and criminal suits filed by Bullock.

"The purpose of this news conference today is to make one point crystal clear. Mike Richards has nothing to hide from anyone because Mike Richards has not violated any law," Richards, a Republican state senator from Houston, said Tuesday.

Bullock, a Democrat, has filed criminal and civil actions alleging Richards violated state campaign laws by taking contributions before naming a campaign treasurer. Richards said Tuesday that Bullock filed the suits as harassment and has not pursued them.

"I am looking forward to meeting Mr. Bullock on the steps of the Fort Bend County Courthouse in the very near future, when Mr. Bullock's reckless and total misuse of the legal processes of this state (both civil and criminal) will be exposed to the public," said Richards.

Bullock said he is pursuing the cases.

"These things take time and I'm not going off half-cocked. I'm familiar with Texas law, but the Chicago public relations firm that is putting words in Richards' mouth apparently isn't," he said in a release.

The complaints filed by Bullock were based on a letter Richards sent to supporters on Dec. 3, before Richards named a campaign treasurer. The memo said $335,000 had been "committed" to Richards' bid for Bullock's job.

Richards said the money was he mentioned in the letter was committed to him by supporters, but no cash changed hands before he designated a campaign treasurer in January.

In a letter to Secretary of State David Dean, Richards said:

"I feel certain that Bullock, surrounded by his troubles, which have become a matter of public records, and in the throes of an apparently dying re-election effort, will feel compelled to file equally bizarre future civil and criminal complaints against myself...."

Richards said many would-be candidates check with their supporters for campaign donation commitments. He said no money changed hands before he named himself as campaign treasurer in January.

"There's never been a candidate that reported a campaign pledge," said John O'Neill, Richards' lawyer. "That's where you all have been had."

Richards said Bullock is a "study in human tragedy ... in every aspect of his life," but would not elaborate.

Disease control expert testifies teen-ager contracted toxic shock

DENVER (AP) — A teen-ager who says she suffers mental problems because of toxic shock syndrome did contract the disease, an expert says, although the tampon manufacturer she is suing for $25 million claims she had the flu.

Dr. Bruce Dan testified Tuesday in the lawsuit against Procter & Gamble Co. that the company's Rely tampon fosters the development of the bacterium scientists believe causes toxic shock syndrome.

The bacterium, Staphylococcus aureus, "finds a more hospitable environment ... in the Rely tampon," said Dan, formerly deputy chief of the national Centers for Disease Control's toxic shock task force.

Dan supported the contention of 18-year-old Deletha Dawn Lampshire that she contracted the rare, sometimes deadly illness after using the Rely tampon.

"I HAVE NO doubt she had toxic shock syndrome," he said, adding that the symptoms she exhibited met the primary criteria of the CDC's definition of TSS, including a temperature of at least 102 degrees, low blood pressure, a sunburn-like rash, and subsequent peeling of the skin.

Testimony in the suit, the first involving the Rely tampon to reach trial, was to resume today.

Under cross-examination by P&G attorney Dr. Frank Woodside, Dan admitted Tuesday that no tampon "actually caused" toxic shock syndrome.

He said other factors had to be present, including the bacterium, an environment that allowed the bacterium to produce toxins, and the inability of the victim to manufacture antibodies to fight those toxins.

The presence of a tampon in a menstruating woman — in particular the presence of a Rely tampon — was a "co-factor" to the development of toxic shock, he said.

Dan, who resigned from the CDC eight months ago to enter private practice, said the federal agency began studying the illness and possible links to tampon use in June 1980. The Rely tampon was withdrawn from the market three months later.

Earlier Tuesday, Kyle Davis, a Denver statistician, said a teen-age white woman from a middle-income family who used Rely tampons was 8.5 times more likely than other women to contract toxic shock syndrome. Miss Lampshire is white and from a middle-income family.

von Bulow trial to go to jury

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — After taking a day off to review testimony, lawyers in Claus von Bulow's attempted murder trial are getting double the usual amount of time to sum up their cases before the jury judges him.

It was the last chance for each side to persuade jurors of von Bulow's guilt or innocence on charges he plunged his heiress wife into comas while trying to kill her with insulin injections.

Prosecutor Stephen R. Famiglietti was to lead off today with final arguments that the coma Martha "Sunny" von Bulow has lingered in for 14½ months was caused by her Danish-born socialite husband.

Prosecutors say the coma was the result of von Bulow's second try to free himself so he could marry a former soap opera actress and inherit $14 million of his wife's fortune.

Defense lawyer Herald P. Fahringer was scheduled to counter later that Mrs. von Bulow was an emotionally troubled woman who could have triggered her two comas through drug and alcohol abuse, a suicide attempt or insulin shots she thought would help her lose weight.

Judge Thomas H. Needham gave both sides a day off from court Tuesday to review the five weeks of testimony by 62 witnesses and 117 full exhibits in preparation for final arguments summing up the trial, which has drawn overflow crowds to this resort city's Superior Court.

Needham gave the prosecution and defense two hours each to sum up their cases — double the normal time alloted under Rhode Island court procedure.

The seven men and five women of the jury, who have not been sequestered, are scheduled to start deliberating the case Thursday without ever hearing from von Bulow, 55, who chose not to take the witness stand, or his wife, 50, who lies unconscious with little hope of recovery in a luxury room of Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center in New York City.

If convicted, the former aide to the late oil billionaire J. Paul Getty faces from two to 20 years in prison on each of the two counts of assault with intent to murder his wife.

The state's circumstantial case contends von Bulow secretly injected his wife with a mixture of insulin, barbiturates and Valium during Christmas visits in 1979 and 1980 to their Millionaires' Row mansion overlooking the crashing surf of Rhode Island Sound.

According to testimony, Mrs. von Bulow's family undertook a private investigation based on the suspicions of a trusted personal maid, Maria Schrallhammer.

"A MATTER OF FACT"

Despair, loneliness often lead to crime among the elderly

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — In many ways, Charles Horowitz is a model senior citizen. At age 66, he is a former merchant marine and New York City apartment building superintendent who retired here on a modest fixed income.

With thinning iron gray hair and a nut brown face often cracked in a smile, he is known in his neighborhood of retirement condominiums as a friendly sort, ever happy to stop and chat, play with visiting grandchildren or help with home repairs.

He also has been arrested for shoplifting.

"Sure, you can use my name," he says. "Why not? It's a good name."

Charles Horowitz, the man and the good name, had their first brush with the law last month. He was arrested for shoplifting when he walked out of a store without paying for the tomato and string bean seeds in his pocket.

"It was stupid," he says now.

Horowitz is an example of what criminologists see as a growing problem in American society: crime committed by the elderly.

"Every indication we have shows traditional crime going up among the elderly," says Donald Newman, dean of the School of Criminal Justice at the State University of New York in Albany.

NEWMAN AGREES with National Association of Retired Persons officials who say serious crimes are committed much more often against the elderly than by the elderly.

But elderly crime is becoming a more serious problem — 100,000 people 65 or older will be arrested this year for felonies, 400,000 who are 55 or older — and Newman is teaming with university gerontologists to sponsor the nation's first academic conference on "The Elderly Offender" this month in Albany.

"In the last decade, serious crime has gone up 95 percent overall," he says. "During the same period, serious crime has gone up 150 percent among the elderly."

Newman says the increase may be even larger for less serious crimes, particularly shoplifting, which do not show up in national crime statistics.

Crime statistics say people 55 and over commit 400 murders, 3,000 sex offenses and 20,000 assaults each year. After drunkenness and drunken driving, however, people over 55 are most likely to be arrested for theft.

AND ELDERLY ARRESTS are going to continue to increase, Newman warns, as the number of Americans 55 or older increases from the current 45 million to the expected 51 million by 1990.

In areas such as this, where one of every three residents is 60 or older, the problem has become acute. Florida merchants lose more than $1 billion a year to shoplifters, second only to the much larger states of California and New York.

Living on fixed pensions and Social Security benefits, many steal for economic reasons, to keep inflation from eating more deeply into their lifestyles.

Lonely and alienated, many feel useless in retirement after a life of productivity. They are prisoners of a forced life of leisure.

"All these elderly crimes, from food snatching to homicide, are the result of a subculture of despair," Newman says.

The items stolen are usually small, and rarely is the value more than $50 or $60; things like knitting needles, vitamins, cheese, fruit, costume jewelry and cassette tapes of 1930s Big Band music.

The crimes themselves are often senseless, even comical. An 80-year-old man, bald as the nob of a police nightstick, was arrested here for stealing hairbrushes. An 82-year-old woman was caught stealing birth control pills.

One old man, weary of sitting with his cronies all day in palm-lined shopping malls, began stealing a wallet a day. When finally caught, he bragged, "I've got 30 others at home."

GARY FEINBERG, a sociologist at Biscayne University in Miami, calls it "the elderly delinquent" syndrome. Like juveniles who help themselves to "five-finger discounts," elderly shoplifters feel they are mainstream society's outcasts, and society's rules don't apply to them.

"A guy who is kind and considerate may get $382 a month from Social Security," Feinberg says. "But a mean s.o.b also gets $382 a month. Nothing they do is important."

Alan Malinchak, a crime researcher at St. Thomas Aquinas College in New York, agrees: "I believe a large percentage of people over 65 are saying, 'Go for the gusto.' They know that if they get caught, they'll just get slapped on the wrist."

Indeed, there are few elderly people behind bars. Jails and prisons are set up to incarcerate young, healthy criminals.

For a 20-year-old shoplifter, five days in jail is five days out of life. For an 80-year-old shoplifter, five days in jail may be life.

"I might as well sign a death warrant," Judge Morton Abram says.

He is one of several Broward County judges participating in the Broward Senior Intervention and Education Program.

Under the program, whose $80,000 a year cost is shared by the federal government and the Jewish Community Centers of South Broward, first-offense shoplifters can plead "no contest" and agree to participate in three months of counseling.

THEY ALSO MUST do volunteer work for local hospitals or charities and participate in group classes to help the elderly deal with their problems and get them involved in social and civic activities.

If they choose not to participate in the program, or if they fail to show up, the judge can fine them up to $500 or, in rare cases, send them to jail for up to 60 days.

If they successfully complete the three-month program, the charges against them are dismissed; they do not carry police records to their graves.

Ehrlichman says scandal a blessing

By FRANK GREEN
Copley News Service

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — To hear John Ehrlichman tell it, the Watergate scandal has been a blessing in disguise.

"I'm much better off today because of Watergate," mused Richard Nixon's former domestic affairs adviser and convicted Watergate conspirator. "If Watergate hadn't occurred, I'd probably be involved today in something relatively boring — like practicing law in New York or working for some big company. Instead, I've been able to carve out a very satisfactory life as a writer. I really like my lifestyle today."

Ehrlichman, looking trim, tanned and businesslike, was ensconced on a couch in a spacious suite at the Beverly Hills Hotel on a recent Monday afternoon — years after he was released from prison — busily directing a small one-man command post formed to promote "Witness to Power," his new book of Nixon-era reminiscences.

"You can always tell how well a book is doing by the kind of room your publisher puts you up in," he joked. "Looking around, I'd guess that the book's doing OK."

Ehrlichman, 56, had spent the weekend in Los Angeles relaxing — walking barefoot along the beach and visiting with his mother, who lives in the area. It had been his first days off in three weeks of barnstorming the country to promote his book.

HE WAS NOW refreshed from his weekend off and obviously eager to jump back into the limelight.

A specially installed telephone for his five-day stay in the suite, equipped with three outside lines, was at arm's length to handle the multitude of phone calls from reporters, West Coast acquaintances and from sales representatives at Simon and Schuster, his publisher, who reported his book had jumped onto the top 10 in Southern California

Another in a long line of recollections by former Nixon aides, "Witness to Power" generated a flurry of headlines upon its release in January.

Within the hefty volume are Ehrlichman allegations that Chief Justice Warren Burger discussed the pros and cons of issues that were before the Supreme Court with President Nixon; that Nixon had trouble holding his liquor; and that the former president once suggested psychiatric help for his national security adviser, Henry Kissinger.

These bombshells have met with denials from most of the characters involved. "That, of course, is to be expected," Ehrlichman laughed.

A convicted felon who was found guilty of conspiracy, obstruction of justice and lying under oath, and who served 18 months in a federal prison camp for his part in the Watergate affair, Ehrlichman is today a hot commodity.

He obviously revels in the attention.

A FULL-TIME WRITER now, he resides with his second wife in a large home in Santa Fe, N.M. His days there are split between writing in the mornings and relaxing in the afternoons. He occasionally goes fishing and spends an inordinate amount of time working in his large vegetable garden.

"I get a lot of satisfaction growing table food," he said. "Overall, it's a very agreeable regimen."

Ehrlichman is currently at work on an article for Parade magazine dealing with people living below the poverty line and on a piece for Art Weekly about art during the Nixon years. In March, when the promotional tour is completed, he expects to gear up for writing his third novel.

"I'm going to be a professional writer for as long as I can make a living at it," he said. "When that fails, maybe I'll go back into real estate, which I was close to for 20 years."

Born and raised in nearby Santa Monica, Ehrlichman attended UCLA, where he earned a degree in political science. He later served as a B-24 bomber navigator during World War II and, following the war, obtained a law degree from Stanford University. Upon graduation, he moved with his wife to Seattle to open a law practice.

He had become the area's leading lawyer on zoning issues by 1960, earning upward of $60,000 a year, when he was approached by former UCLA classmate Bob Haldeman, who was Nixon's chief advance man in that year's presidential campaign.

Haldeman recruited Ehrlichman to spy on the Nelson Rockefeller presidential campaign and later on the John Kennedy campaign.

After the election, Ehrlichman returned to his successful Seattle law practice. It wasn't until 1968, after Nixon's victory in the presidential election, that Ehrlichman got back into politics.

INITIALLY, HE SERVED as counsel to the president and later as the president's chief assistant for domestic affairs, where he was pegged by some as the administration's "house liberal."

In retrospect, Ehrlichman sees himself as an almost blameless victim of Watergate. "I was certainly never a pepetrator of that mess," he said.

In fact, he contends that as the scandal continued to mushroom in late 1972 and early 1973, he was advising Nixon "to step out and make the fullest, deepest and most complete disclosure possible. The tapes show that that's exactly what I was advising. Obviously, he didn't think that was the prudent thing to do."

In April 1973, as the Watergate noose began to tighten around Nixon's inner circle, Ehrlichman was forced to resign. He took the fall hard.

Nearly two tons of Columbian cocaine worth an estimated $75 million was seized Tuesday night at a Miami International Airport warehouse by U.S. Customs agents.

Officials make big cocaine bust

By JEFF MEYER
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — A customs inspector poked a screwdriver into a cardboard carton that had been unloaded from a Colombian cargo jet and found what became the nation's biggest cocaine seizure — nearly $1 billion worth.

"As we began opening the boxes, everyone shied away," said U.S. Customs inspector Al Tagliaferro. No one was arrested.

The more than 3,700 pounds of Colombian cocaine, which Tagliaferro said was of "very high quality," was found Tuesday afternoon in a routine search of a cargo plane belonging to a "high-risk" foreign airline suspected of frequently being used by smugglers, officials said.

The Drug Enforcement Agency, which did not take part in the seizure, later estimated the street value of the cocaine at about $950 million. The DEA called it the largest cocaine seizure in U.S. history.

The Tampa International Airways Boeing 707 from Medellin, Colombia, was met at Miami International airport by customs inspectors, said Robert Battard, regional customs commissioner in Miami.

The illegal cargo, in 22 cardboard boxes, was seized on a loading platform in a warehouse used by the Colombian cargo line, he said.

Tagliaferro said he pushed the blade of a short screwdriver into a carton stacked on a wooden pallet and when he pulled it out, it was encrusted with white powder.

"We field-tested it and saw it was cocaine — a very high quality," Tagliaferro said.

The boxes containing the cocaine were about 18 inches tall, 48 inches long and 24 inches wide. Tagliaferro said five were solidly packed with cocaine — about 195 pounds each. Others were filled with kilogram bags wrapped in yellow plastic, Tagliaferro said.

"There was nothing special about this flight. We weren't tipped off," Battard said. "They (the inspectors) gave this particular flight attention because they busted three people last year with 800 pounds of cocaine. That's their job, to check incoming aircraft."

In February 1981, federal agents in Miami confiscated 826 pounds of cocaine, considered then to be the largest seizure.

The seizure was announced Tuesday evening by Vice President George Bush's office in Washington. Bush was appointed earlier this year by President Reagan to lead an inter-agency task force on crime in south Florida.

DEA officials interviewed the crew of the plane and many of the airline's employees. No arrests had been made as of late Tuesday night, Battard said, but the government moved quickly to seize the Boeing 707.

"An employee might sneak a carton onto a plane, but it just seems that 21 cartons of cocaine can't be loaded on and off without some operator knowing what's going on," Battard said.

The boxes containing the cocaine were part of a shipment of clothing from Medellin bound for Miami, Battard said.

New technique limits formaldehyde exposure

By G.G. LABELLE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government researchers have found a "significant portion" of U.S. students are exposed to formaldehyde in school laboratories, but say exposure to the suspected cancer-causing material is becoming less of a problem because of new ways of packing lab specimens.

The conclusions are in a report being presented today to the Consumer Product Safety Commission, along with a recommendation that steps be taken to make science teachers more aware of the new-type specimens and of the need for ventilation in laboratories.

Sandra Eberle of the commission's chemical hazards program said that because of the new specimens, the CPSC staff has concluded exposure of students to formaldehyde does not merit regulation by the commission.

"We don't feel this is a problem the commission needs to pursue any more," she said.

Exposure to formaldehyde has been found to cause skin irritation and breathing problems. Studies also have shown it causes cancer in rats, but there are no conclusive studies of its cancer-causing effect on humans.

The report says that "a significant proportion of school students are exposed to formaldehyde through dissection of preserved specimens in the school laboratory."

Exposure to specimens is "very limited" in elementary schools, the report said, but 24 percent of junior and senior high school students and 10 percent of college students were exposed to preserved specimens.

No average level of exposure for students could be determined because research was limited, the report said. But it added:

"Students, because of their age and stage of development, may be more sensitive than is the general population to irritant, allergic, and sensitization effects and may be at a higher risk of developing cancer from exposure to formaldehyde."

The report also said, however, that "industry appears to be aware of the toxicity problems presented by formaldehyde and major suppliers have developed new technology packing media which significantly reduces formaldehyde emissions."

Laboratory specimens have traditionally been "pickled" or "embalmed" in formaldehyde solutions and no alternative to this process has been found, the report said.

However, it noted that once this process has been completed, washing the specimens and packing them in non-formaldehyde solutions can reduce emissions of the agent.

The report said that the new-type specimens are more expensive, and Ms. Eberle said the studies did not indicate how many schools were using them.

But she said that based on spot checks with manufacturers, "It seems they're doing the majority of their business in the new technology."

The report said problems in reducing exposure to formaldehyde included classrooms without windows or with windows designed not to open.

It recommended "discussions be initiated with organizations such as the National Science Teachers Association" to help inform teachers of the new-technology specimens and other ways of reducing exposure, such as better ventilation or limiting the number of specimens used at one time.

Workers stocking Columbia

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Like boaters stocking up for a long sea voyage, workers have loaded the space shuttle with gear in preparation for Columbia's third venture into space later this month.

On Tuesday, crews loaded space suits, cameras, clothes and other non-perishables aboard the Columbia, according to Kennedy Space Center spokesman Rocky Raab.

The space suits, called "extra-vehicular mobility units," would only be used if astronauts Jack Lousma and Gordon Fullerton needed to leave the shuttle's interior to conduct repairs outside, Raab said. The suits are "mini-spacecrafts in themselves," Raab said, and contain complex breathing, cooling and heating units to protect the astronauts from the extremes of space.

At blastoff and re-entry and during flight, the astronauts will wear different suits, Raab said.

Countdown preparations will continue until March 18, when the five-day countdown for the March 22 liftoff begins.

The shuttle system's last major test was completed over the weekend, when launch pad crews finished up the loading of volatile propellants into Columbia's maneuvering and steering systems. The hazardous operation with the highly toxic fuels went without a hitch.

Unless a last-minute problem occurs in the pre-flight checklist, officials expect the beginning of the third mission to come off as scheduled.

The seven-day flight is primarily a "thermal mission" to test the reusable spacecraft and its cargo against extreme temperatures.

It is scheduled to end March 29 with a landing at Edwards Air Force Base in California.

Gold prices at lowest level

LONDON (AP) — Gold prices, currently at their lowest level in 2½ years, rallied today in what dealers said was a technical reaction to declines earlier this week. The dollar was slightly lower against most major European currencies.

Bullion dealers said gold trading was quiet, and one broker forecast, "It will be a low-level day after two fairly busy days." He said the improved price here reflected a rally in New York Tuesday.

Gold was fixed at $332.75 a Troy ounce in London, compared with $325.75 at the close Tuesday. In Zurich it was quoted at $333.50 against $327.50. In Hong Kong the price was $335.41 against $326.34.

Silver also was higher. It was quoted in London at $7.19 an ounce, compared with $7.00.

The dollar registered a small gain against the Japanese yen. It closed in Tokyo, where markets shut before those in Europe open, at 237.85 yen. Tuesday's close was 235.95. Dealers there said the dollar's strength came from increased buying by domestic banks following the dollar's overnight rise in New York.

Government moves to eliminate unfair farm trade barriers

By BOB FICK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Top Reagan administration officials, citing the financial dependence of American farmers on expanding exports, say the government is moving vigorously to eliminate unfair trade barriers to U.S. commodities.

"The United States will no longer tolerate the trade disruptions caused by unfair practices," said Agriculture Secretary John Block. He specifically cited subsidies provided European farmers from the European Economic Community and quotas and excessive inspection standards imposed by Japan.

But both Block and U.S. Trade Representative William Brock tried on Tuesday to discourage the House Agriculture Committee from pushing trade protectionist legislation in response to foreign trade barriers.

"If we start taking retaliatory action that violates internatinal trading agreements, we will invite retaliation," Brock said, warning that American farmers would bear the brunt of any trade war.

But Chairman Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, was not easily swayed. He warned of harsh congressional action if foreign trade policies continue to deny U.S. farmers fair access to all international markets.

"As trading partners we believe it works both ways," de la Garza said. "Unless nontariff barriers are negotiated to the extent they are equitable ... we will have legislation that will mess up trade for the rest of the century."

He predicted that protectionist bills covering scores of items could pass the Congress overwhelmingly.

Block agreed, accusing some foreign governments of "cheating on the international trading rules" by putting their national treasuries against American farmers in the drive for export sales.

AGRICULTURE

But he and Brock said the Unites States, which has traditionally called for free, multilateral international trade, should settle trade disputes through established forums like the General Agreement on Trade and Tariffs.

"My own instincts would argue for the Congress to be very cautious about legislation ... so long as international accords are tested and work," Brock said.

He said the government has formally taken a complaint about unfair European trade practices to an international panel for the first time. That complaint involves subsidies for wheat flour.

The committee was told similar petitions are being considered on poultry, sugar, pasta, canned fruit and raisins, and that some of Japan's trade policies may be challenged in the same manner.

Brock also said the U.S. is seeking support for its challenges from other countries, including the major exporting nations of Australia and Argentina.

Rain delays corn planting in South

WASHINGTON (AP) — Corn planting was under way "across the South from Texas to Georgia" the past week but operations bogged down because of rain in some areas, says the government's Joint Agricultural Weather Facility.

"Wet soils and rain slowed spring field work and continued to delay plantings in most areas of the Southeast and in parts of the Corn Belt," the facility's weekly report said.

The facility is operated by the departments of Agriculture and Commerce. Its latest report, issued Tuesday, covered the week of Feb. 28 through March 6.

"Winter wheat was in good to excellent condition in Kansas and in fair-to-good condition in other major producing states," the report said. "The crop was greening as far north as Kansas and in parts of the Corn Belt."

Warm weather and adequate moisture "promoted rapid top growth in some of the earlier Kansas wheat fields," it said. "Grazing continued to increase as field conditions permitted."

The Oklahoma wheat crop was described as in "good condition" and the Texas crop as in "fair to good" shape.

Looking at some weather and crop conditions globally — an important consideration for American farmers — the report said beneficial precipitation has improved prospects in much of the world's winter grain areas.

"In South Africa, however, corn crop prospects are well-below normal due to lack of rain, and subsoil moisture is deficient in some northern parts of China's winter grain areas," the report said.

One place always watched closely is the Soviet Union's grain area, which has produced short crops the past several years.

The report said:

"Generally dry weather returned to the major winter grain areas of the Ukraine and North Caucasus. Above-normal temperatures prevailed with daytime highs above freezing in many locations. Most of the Ukraine is vulnerable to potential winterkill due to lack of significant snow cover."

In Europe, dry weather continued generally across the Iberian Peninsula where Spanish winter grains are in the vegetative stage and would benefit from more moisture, the report said.

"In contrast, winter grain areas from northwest Europe south into France and Italy received generous rainfall. Soil moisture conditions in northern Italy were considerably improved."

The report said a few scattered showers fell on Brazil's corn and soybeans in Sao Paulo and Parana.

New egg board members named

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary John R. Block has appointed nine new members to the American Egg Board, which oversees egg research and promotion projects.

The nine new members, representing half of the 18-member board, were named Tuesday to 2-year terms. Seven alternates also were named, with two more to be announced later.

Commercial egg producers are assessed five cents per 30-dozen case to pay for the program, which was authorized by the Egg Research and Consumer Information Act of 1974.

Congress amended the law in 1980, authorizing the assessment to be raised to 7.5 cents and by 0.75 cents annually thereafter to a maximum of 10 cents per case of eggs.

The amendment also authorized the addition of two consumer representatives to the board.

Officials said information on raising the assessment and the addition of consumer representatives is still being gathered during a public hearing process and that a "recommended decision" might be forthcoming by early June.

North Atlantic — W. Robert Park, Valencia, Pa., and alternate Donald E. Horn, Ephrata, Pa.

South Atlantic — George P. McCranie Jr., Tifton, Ga., and Rivers Carl Scarborough, Lamar, S.C., and alternates Edward L. Houston, Lumber City, Ga., and Ray C. Jones, Gainesville, Ga.

East North Central — Ernest F. Brown, South Forest, Ill., and alternate Warren B. Pennington, Wisconsin Dells, Wis.

South Central — John Ashby, Clarksville, Tenn., and Richard K. Looper, Jackson, Miss.; and alternate Ernest Mahard, Prosper, Texas. Looper's alternate will be named later.

Chavez to join march in Rio Grande Valley

SAN JUAN, Texas (AP) — Farm labor leader Cesar Chavez will take part in a "March for Wages" through the citrus and vegetable-rich lower Rio Grande Valley next week, union backers have announced.

Rebecca Flores Harrington, the Texas director of the United Farm Workers union, and Sister Tess Brown announced the two-prong march at separate Tuesday news conferences in San Juan and San Antonio.

Marches will begin March 16 at the Brownsville courthouse and at La Joya, on opposite ends of Valley, and the two groups will meet in downtown San Juan on March 21, Mrs. Harrington said.

Serving the public

Recently, a Reporter-Telegram reader mailed to the newspaper a clipping concerning congressional pay and perks, and voiced the concern that members of Congress may be setting themselves up as a privileged class.

That reader asked, "What is the next step? Social government by class? Or both?"

Well, it would appear that if the power wielded by those in the federal government wouldn't be enough of an incentive for creation of "career politicians," the money and fringes certainly would be — even for those living in a city like Midland, where the per capita income far exceeds that for most areas in the state and nation.

What began as a political system designed to bring into public service persons from all walks of life has evolved into a system which is attracting too many "career politicians" — individuals who seek political office right after college with the intent of staying on the public payroll the rest of their working life. This system does not lend itself to good representative government of ALL the people.

But, the monetary benefits of being a member of Congress are pretty staggering and, so, the system has evolved. Annual base pay for a member of either the House or Senate is $60,663. That's a nice annual salary, but it's just the beginning in Congress. Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker and House Speaker Tip O'Neill draw more, Baker getting $68,575 a year while O'Neill is paid $79,125.

In addition to base salary, members of Congress are allowed to "moonlight" by writing, making speeches, television appearances and so forth. Senators have no limit on income from outside sources. The House recently raised its yearly limit to $18,198 from $9,099.

On top of their "moonlighting" freedom, the elected representatives and senators recently gave themselves another special perk: Virtually unlimited write-offs for the expense of living in Washington. That includes everything from rent to meals, insurance, even laundry bills.

Special treatment for members of Congress goes even further. Free parking and medical care, reserved space at airports, free trips and free use of the government's long-distance telephone line. Even when they leave the Congress, these elected representatives are treated like royalty, receiving pensions that usually far exceed retirement plans in the private sector.

Most Americans probably agree that members of Congress are entitled to adequate reimbursement for their work in Washington. Most probably won't even argue with some of the special privileges afforded congressmen. But government service was not intended to be the path to individual financial well-being. It would seem that the desire to perform a service for one's country and fellow man has fallen in short supply in recent years.

Maybe it's time to remind all elected officials that they are in office to serve — the public, not themselves. What the public bestows, the public can take away: Namely, public officials' jobs.

Hold on — tight!

All right, Venus, a little more to the left. Mars, quit grumbling and move in closer to Saturn. Pluto, we can't see you. You're not trying. Can't you manage to glow a bit?

Getting all nine planets lined up together for a once-in-50-years celestial show can be quite trying — something like organizing those beer commercials with the athletes milling about and Rodney Dangerfield getting no respect.

Five of the planets — Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn — have been visible to the naked eye in recent days. Telescopes are needed to see the other three — Uranus, Neptune and Pluto. The observer must only look down, of course, to see the ninth planet, Earth.

The glorious event, technically called the syzygy (SIZ-uh-jee), is to take place today. At least we hope it's glorious. Some are predicting all the sun's planets, lining up that way, will cause what is called the Jupiter effect.

The astronomical gravitational pull will be so strong it will create earthquakes, floods and volcano eruptions, they say.

We're not going to panic. We're keeping an optimistic view. After all, we want to be around in March, 1986, for another celestial wonder whizzing by on a 76-year cycle — Halley's Comet.

ART BUCHWALD

'Noodle' isn't any closer to completion

President Reagan has been very harsh on people who cheat on welfare, students who don't pay back their loans to the government, and those who are constantly looking for handouts from the government. He's ordered the Justice Department to go after them with a vengeance.

Art Buchwald

But to my knowledge not one person in the Pentagon, or a defense firm executive, has ever been censured for wasting the taxpayers' money on a military system that doesn't work.

There is a reason for this. Weapons have become so sophisticated now that no one ever stays around long enough to be blamed when the final product is unveiled.

This is what would happen if Congress held a hearing on the new MT Noodle, four-seater jeep that the Army claims it cannot do without.

"Will the witness identify himself and tell us his present position in the Pentagon?"

"Gen. Mark Dowdy, management director of the MT Noodle weapons program."

"General, according to our records, the Army told us that the Noodle would cost $15,000 per unit. The first one to come off the line this year is priced at $250,000. Could you explain the price differential?"

"As it was originally conceived the Noodle was going to be an armored jeep which would be used to transport mail and pay from headquarters to the front lines. But then Gen. Savage..."

"Who is Gen. Savage?"

"He was the officer originally in charge of designing and constructing the Noodle, with the aid of the Wellback Motor Company."

"When was that?"

"My records show that was in 1961. I never knew Savage, but I understand he was a very fine officer."

"Where is he now?"

"He was buried with full military honors at Arlington Cemetery, in 1979."

"Then it was his program?"

"The original Noodle was his idea, but after he left, the project was taken over by Lt. Gen. Witherspoon Rolf, an anti-aircraft expert.

"Rolf and his people came up with the notion of installing two heat-seeking ground-to-air missiles on the fenders of the jeep, which could be fired from a radar-controlled turret in the back seat."

"Would you say this added to the cost of the vehicle?"

"What happened next?"

"When Gen. Rolf retired and was made chairman of the board of Wellback Motors, Gen. Freeman Druthers took over the Noodle. I believe this was in 1971. Druthers, a former judge advocate, was going to go ahead on production, but tests showed the radar turret made the jeep top heavy, and every time it moved in mud it fell over on its side. So it was decided to put a torpedo underneath it to balance the weight.

"This necessitated an entire new chassis. Gen. Druthers was working on this when he decided to run for Congress, and the project was then given to Col. Mike Gilardi of the 101st Airborne Division. His team added a parachute to the front and back bumper, and replaced the motor with a 105 howitzer gun."

"What good is a jeep without a motor?"

"Gilardi asked himself the same question after seeing a prototype. So he took the problem to the consulting firm of Riggins & Druid, who designed an armored tow truck to pull the jeep along when it had to be moved. It added $100,000 to the cost of the vehicle. But without the tow truck we would have had to scrap the entire Noodle program, and right now we have nothing to replace it with."

"As the officer now in charge of the program, can you guarantee us that you can produce the Noodle for $250,000 each?"

"I could if I was going to stay with it, sir. But I've just been reassigned to head a feasibility study to see what it would cost to launch a cruise missile from an armored tow truck."

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Is White House following Lenin's advice?

WASHINGTON — Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., is not a man who should be taken lightly in a political scrap. The erudite Harvard professor has the wit and argumentative skill of an Irish pub patron, combined with the prestige of a senior senator from the nation's second most populous state.

Jack Anderson

Utilizing these attributes, Moynihan has managed to tie a tin can to the Reagan administration's tail on the issue of anti-communism. Quite simply, what the white-haired senatorial leprechaun has done is accuse the stridently anti-Soviet White House of following Vladimir Ilyich Lenin's line.

What led to this awesome display of ideological eye-stabbing was the Reagan administration's decision on Poland and its international debts. The Polish government fell badly behind in its payments on U.S. bank and government-guranteed loans, and President Reagan was urged to declare the Poles in default. Among those who recommended this was Sen. Moynihan.

But the president decided instead to offer the bankers the money due on their Polish loans, thus sparing the communist regime from defaulting on its debts. This was viewed by Moynihan as a bailout of the Polish Communist leaders and a tacit acceptance of their military repression. Others suspected that Reagan really wanted to bail out the bankers.

For their part, Reagan and his minions claimed their action on the Polish loans was actually tougher than letting the Poles default. With a certain poetic license, they explained that if the Polish government was allowed to default, the Red regime would be able to weasel out of its debts altogether — much like someone who files for bankruptcy and leaves his creditors holding the bag.

"We didn't bail Poland out in doing this," the president insisted at a recent press conference. "Default is literally like bankruptcy," thus absolving Poland of its debts, he declared.

The controversy is too complex for most Americans to understand. It's tough enough for us to figure out our mortgage situation, much less the arcane workings of international finance.

Enter Moynihan with his cherubic demeanor — and his academic research expertise. The senator dug up a pertinent quotation attributed to the architect of the Russian Revolution. "The capitalists of the whole world and their governments," Lenin wrote, "in their rush to conquer the Soviet market will close their eyes ... and will thereby be turned into deaf-mutes."

According to Moynihan's research, the Soviet prophet then went on to say of the greedy capitalists: "They will furnish credits which will serve us for the support of the communist party ... and, by supplying us materials and technical equipment, which we lack, will restore our military industry necessary for our future attacks against our suppliers."

In summation, the "little father" of Bolshevism is quoted as concluding that the capitalists "will work on the preparation of their own suicide."

Moynihan has more substantial support for his opposition to the White House stand than the picturesque polemics of Lenin. The experts at the Congressional Research Service were asked to check out the legal niceties of the president's action on the Polish loans. They bluntly contradicted Reagan's claim that the Poles would have been able to wriggle out of their debts if they had been allowed to default.

"We know of no legal theory which would absolve Poland of liability for debts incurred," the researchers concluded in a report seen by my associate Lucette Lagnado.

The White House must now struggle with the characterization of Ronald Reagan as the dupe of V.I. Lenin. Meanwhile, the puckish Moynihan has been seen in the Capitol corridors grinning like a Cheshire cat.

HOW ABOUT McDONALD'S?: It could happen almost anywhere, the General Accounting Office has warned its employees — "at local taverns, bowling alleys, public parks, and even at official functions." What could happen? Brazen overtures by Soviet agents, that's what. Rocked by recent disclosures that a Kremlin mole may be ensconced in the congressional watchdog agency, the GAO has now warned all its employees to be on guard against apparently casual contacts that may turn out to be devious, deliberate advances by communist operatives.

The Jan. 19 memo orders all GAO employees to report immediately any and all contacts with Soviet bloc citizens, including those from Outer Mongolia, Tibet and the Kurlie Islands. "No matter where these individuals may be, no matter the time of day or the circumstances, they are always working to find that particular individual who will either willingly or unknowingly provide them with information which they can use to gain access to U.S. classified or technological information." In other words, that sly dog at the next barstool may be after your mind, not your body.

WHAT DID JERRY SAY?: At the National Governors Conference, Gov. Jerry Brown of California labeled President Reagan's New Federalism "the new feudalism." Turns out that some of his home-state supporters thought he said "the new futile-ism." Whatever.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, March 10, the 69th day of 1982. There are 296 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On his date:

In 1922, strikes broke out in Johannesburg, South Africa, and martial law was declared.

Ten years ago: The United States and China designated their ambassadors in Paris to serve as the diplomatic channel agreed upon by President Nixon and Premier Chou En-lai.

Five years ago: The public reacted vehemently against the U.S. Food and Drug Administration's announcement that saccharin would be banned because it was a suspected cancer-causer.

One year ago: President Reagan unveiled his federal budget for fiscal 1982, totaling more than $695 billion with a projected deficit of $45 billion.

Thought for today: Revenge is always the weak pleasure of a little and narrow mind. — Juvenal, Roman lawyer-satirist (about 60-140 A.D.)

Marcos era in Philippines marked by complexity, paradoxes

MANILA — Perhaps there is a journalist somewhere who might visit the Philippine Islands and get a quick fix on what the dictatorship of President Ferdinand Marcos means to Filipinos and relations with the United States.

John Pinkerman

However, to most of us, the Philippines "situation" is far more complex than it is simple and straightforward. Marcos has ruled for 16 years, eight of those under the constraints of martial law that he officially ended a year ago.

The Filipino people are better off for Marcos, and they are worse off. Relations, from a Washington point of view, are acceptable but worrisome. U.S. military operations at two vital bases here, Clark Air Base and Subic Bay Navy Base, go on with no apparent problems regarding the Marcos administration. However, there is an element in the government and public that for both valid and invalid reasons would like to see these bases disappear.

Clear and constant, however, from one end of this group of 7,011 islands to the other, is an unabashed Filipino "common man" affection for all Americans. It covers all ages, and it is centered around the late Gen. of the Army Douglas MacArthur, and his troops' liberation of the Philippines from Japanese occupation back in the World War II years of 1944 and '45. Even youngsters, who weren't a gleam in any mother's or father's eye in those years, call out a friendly "Hey Joe, Hello Joe" to anybody who looks like an American, particularly in the provinces and islands some distances from Manila, a capital city bursting with 9 million people.

As for Marcos, and first lady Imelda must be included in any assessment of his policies, he no longer enforces martial law — but not much in the way of freedom has emerged from what he calls a "democratic" administration. Marital law's curfew has disappeared except for areas of the southern isles where Moslem-oriented opponents terrorize both the army and villagers, but other prerequisites of a free society are missing.

Anyone who calls Filipino newspapers representative of a free press is whistling in the dark. They seem to go even beyond Marcos' "independent" policies, apparently making sure they do not get closed down as the Manila Times did when it opposed government edicts. Reporters, editors and columnists make sure they do not offend Marcos — and they make sure they frequently use America as a whipping boy.

For instance, the Marcos government announced recently with tongue-in-cheek satisfaction that the United States had accelerated military aid with $34.1 million in much needed equipment. This prompted Jose Guevara, a prominent editorial page columnist, to remark, "I think the United States just wanted to get rid of some of her equipment before it rusts or becomes outmoded."

There is what may be called a "proper" relationship regarding the U.S. bases within the government, but newspapers, going far beyond Marcos' statements, cry out for their closing. This is clearly anti-U.S. propaganda. However, some Filipinos of all levels, in and out of the government, have a deathly fear that is tied to the bases. They reason that in a U.S.-Soviet conflict the bases would be nuclear war targets and some memories of World War II destruction are still valid. These people admire Americans but are fearful of their own survival.

Marcos' refusal to tolerate anything but a token opposition faction is denounced, particularly abroad. There is no question that he rules with an iron hand. The edicts that he proclaimed personally under marital law simply have been transferred into laws passed by a rubber-stamp congress.

On the other hand, his effective confiscation of weapons from practically all citizens has made most areas safe places in which to walk the streets at night. Manila is an example — and he is taking no chances. Even at the plush Manila Hotel every person entering, no matter how many times a day, is subjected to a body search in an outer lobby; even ladies' handbags are examined.

Marcos also reacts quickly to any threat to his rule. A newspaper headline illustrates his determination to stay in power dramatically: "Don't Taunt Me, Marcos Warns Foes." And, first lady Imelda gets into the act, too. Recently, she called in hundreds of foreign journalists in Manila for a film festival, urging them to "be more understanding of the Philippines and its leadership."

The first lady is national minister for human settlements and she must be given due credit for leading a nationwide campaign, using tax money, to build thousands of units of housing for the poor. The one black mark she gets for this is that political friends get the building contracts. On the other hand, Mayor Nilo Ituriaga of the tiny Panay island barrio of Malinao, told me that even as local leader of a party in opposition to Marcos, he was able to get ample housing and school aid from the president and Imelda.

What all this adds up to is that freedom is in short supply in these islands of marvelous people but that there are very few signs of hunger. Manila is a safe place to visit but there is the "democratic" duplicate of martial law. Relations with the United States are at a carefully correct level — but don't turn your back. Yes, the Marcos era here is dominated more by complexity and paradox than simplicity.

Duarte says junta winning 'political war'

By RICHARD BOUDREAUX
Associated Press Writer

SONSONATE, El Salvador (AP) — President Jose Napoleon Duarte says his U.S.-backed junta is winning the "political war" against the leftist guerrillas and he will be open to conciliation with them if his Christian Democratic Party wins the March 28 election.

However, he told a news conference in this western provincial capital Tuesday he would not consider post-election negotiations with the left to give it a share of power.

The guerrillas are boycotting the election on grounds they will be rigged. They have vowed to disrupt the voting for a 60-member constituent assembly that is to replace the junta with a provisional government, write a constitution and make arrangements for election of a president and congress.

In San Salvador, meanwhile, 70 more dead were reported in the civil war during the 24 hours ending Tuesday morning, and the army was reported carrying on a major offensive against rebel strongholds in Morazan Province Tuesday for the third day.

An army spokesman said 35 bodies were found after clean-up operations, and 30 were identified as guerrillas. Judicial authorities said nine bodies were found near the eastern city of San Miguel, six in San Vicente, 12 in San Salvador and eight near Santa Ana.

All had been shot, either by security forces, right-wing death squads or guerrillas.

Duarte said the election would not end the 29-month-old civil war but was "a first step on the ladder" to peace. He claimed the guerrillas had far less popular support than they had when he joined the junta in January 1980. He cited as proof a government-sponsored rally he attended in Sonsmnate earlier Tuesday that drew about 1,500 of the 10,000 people of the town.

"Two years ago, the guerrillas had 200,000 people in the streets that they could control," he told the news conference. "But now they have no capability to move the people as we moved them here today. The people are not backing them any more."

Citing the junta's land redistribution program and promise of fair elections after 50 years of dictatorship, he declared: "We are winning the battle of the people. We are taking away their frustration and moving in the direction of democracy."

Duarte refused to answer questions about the Reagan administration's request to the U.S. Congress for $100 million in military aid to El Salvador in the 1981-82 fiscal year.

"I'm not fighting a military war," he said. "I'm fighting a political war. The army is defending the people to allow them to move in the direction of a political solution."

He conceded there were human rights abuses by some government soldiers but claimed an elected government would have more authority to restrain them.

Reagan to announce Libyan oil boycott

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is on the verge of formally announcing its previously disclosed decision to cut off oil shipments from Libya and to bar exports of U.S. oil production equipment to that country, officials say.

The actions reflect the administration's determination to disassociate itself from the regime of Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy, which it accuses of engaging in international terrorist activities.

The decision to impose the sanctions was reached late last month and was widely reported at the time.

But the formal announcement, which is expected to be made today, was withheld while the administration consulted with oil companies and with European allies, said the officials who asked not to be identified.

The United States has long accused Khadafy of promoting terrorism, but the boycott option did not become a serious possibility until Libya's share of the U.S. oil market began to decline.

The recession in the United States and the current glut on the world oil market have combined to reduce oil imports from Libya to about 150,000 barrels a day. In recent years, the level has been several times that amount.

Because of Libya's scant share of the American market, the boycott is not expected to have a significant economic effect either on Libya or the United States.

The administration also had been concerned that a boycott of Libyan oil could lead to retaliation by Libya against Americans living in that country.

But that obstacle essentially was eliminated last December when President Reagan asked all 1,500 Americans living in Libya to return home as soon as possible. The administration cited "the increased threats of hostile acts against Americans."

As examples of Libya's "lawless behavior," officials mentioned its alleged attempts, after the death of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat "to feed instability in the region and to bring increased pressure to bear on the Sudan."

Post reports Reagan approves CIA plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has approved a CIA plan for covert operations against Nicaragua and is directing the U.S. intelligence agency to start forming a paramilitary force of Latin Americans, The Washington Post said in today's editions.

White House spokeswoman Kim Hoggard declined to comment on the article Tuesday night.

The newspaper said that according to informed administration officials, which it did not identify, Reagan has rejected the use of American military forces in direct operations against Nicaragua.

Administration officials have charged that the Central American nation is serving as the military command center and supply line for guerrillas in nearby El Salvador.

But as part of the administration's strategy in the region, said the Post, the authorized covert plan directs the CIA to start recruiting and financing a paramilitary force of up to 500 Latin Americans. They are to operate from camps along the Nicaragua-Honduras border, said the newspaper.

In Managua, meanwhile, the Nicaraguan government issued a sharply worded statement Tuesday night, protesting "violation of the country's air space by North American spy planes."

The foreign ministry's communique said, "These irresponsible acts serve to deepen still more the serious crisis and tension moving through the Central American area."

The CIA-recruited commandos, said the Post, would try to destroy such targets in Nicaragua as power plants and bridges, with the aim of disrupting the nation's economy and diverting the leftist Sandinista government's attention and resources.

According to the newspaper, CIA strategists think such operations inside Nicaragua would slow the flow of arms to El Salvador, whose junta is supported by the United States against leftist insurgents.

The newspaper's sources said it would take months for the commandos to be recruited, trained and put in position.

President Reagan and other officials have refused to comment on reports of the covert action plan. The Post had said on Feb. 14 that such a plan existed, but said then that it was not known whether Reagan had approved the plan. Today's article said that according to several informed sources Reagan has formally authorized it.

The planned 500-man force would operate under a $19 million CIA budget, and could be enlarged if neccesary, according to the Post.

The newspaper said that according to knowledgeable but unnamed officials, the plan was supported by Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. and Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger.

Hours before the Post article appeared, Adm. Bobby Inman, deputy director of the CIA, dismissed Nicaraguan claims that the nation's defenses are being upgraded to combat possible intervention against the Sandinista regime by the United States or U.S.-backed groups.

Regarding Nicaragua's assertion that the CIA has a $19 million fund to try to topple the regime, Inman said, "I would suggest to you that $19 million and $29 million isn't going to buy you much of any kind of and certainly not of that kind of military force."

Nicaragua: spy planes irresponsible

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The leftist Sandinista government said violations of Nicaraguan air space by U.S. spy planes seeking proof of a massive arms buildup were irresponsible and endangered peace in Central America.

"These irresponsible acts serve to deepen still more the serious crisis and tension moving through the Central American area," said a Foreign Ministry statement issued after the Washington news conference at which U.S. intelligence officials displayed aerial photographs they claimed were proof of an arms buildup in Nicaragua supplied by Cuba and the Soviet Union.

Adm. Bobby Inman, deputy director of the Central Intelligence Agency, told reporters the buildup far exceeds what Nicaragua needs for its defense. He said Cuba might use the Nicaraguan bases as a jumping off point for intervention in the region.

Following Inman's news conference, Foreign Minister Miguel d'Escoto left unexpectedly for Washington, government sources said. They said he might try to arrange a meeting with U.S. officials or hold a news conference to counter the U.S. allegations.

The Foreign Ministry statement did not deny Washington's charges that Soviet-made tanks have been secretly supplied to Nicaragua and that the construction of new air strips around the country appears to indicate Soviet-made jet fighters will also be supplied.

Official spokesmen have frequently said expansion and improvement of the armed forces is necessary because of the threat of invasion by right-wing exiles trained and equipped by the United States.

John Belushi laid to rest in Massachusetts cemetery

By JAMES SIMON
Associated Press Writer

CHILMARK, Mass. (AP) — A simple folk tune sung by James Taylor ended funeral services for John Belushi on Martha's Vineyard, while officials in Los Angeles refused comment on reports the 33-year-old comedian died of a cocaine overdose.

The Los Angeles Times, meanwhile, also reported today that there were needle marks on Belushi's arms.

Several of Belushi's family members and friends joined Taylor in singing "That Lonesome Road" Tuesday at the gravesite near his summer home on the island off Cape Cod. Snowflakes began falling immediately after the last refrain.

The 200 mourners who gathered at a Congregational church in the island town of Vineyard Haven included Belushi's wife, Judith, his parents, and Lorne Michaels, producer of "Saturday Night Live," the late-night comedy show that catapulted Belushi to stardom in 1975.

Two of Belushi's former television co-stars — Bill Murray and Dan Aykroyd — attended the services and paid their last respects in sharply contrasting manners.

An obviously distraught Murray avoided reporters at the church by sneaking in through a side street. He emerged bleary-eyed, with his head bowed, and later placed a single flower on Belushi's casket at the grave site.

Aykroyd, Belushi's island neighbor and co-star in the current movie "Neighbors," arrived at the church in a battered Dodge similar to the car the two stars drove in the movie "The Blues Brothers."

Wearing a bandana, black leather jacket and boots, the grinning Aykroyd later roared off on a motorcycle to Abel's Hill Cemetery, a burial ground dating to the early 1700s.

The funeral service was performed by two Albanian Orthodox priests in the small, traditional New England church. Belushi's parents emigrated from Albania.

The Los Angeles coroner's office said an autopsy and other tests have been inconclusive on the cause of the stocky comedian's death Friday.

"Nothing has been ruled out," senior Los Angeles coroner's investigator Don Messerle said Tuesday. "What we're doing is being extremely cautious because of recent past experiences and because John Belushi is so notable."

Coroner Thomas Noguchi said an autopsy Saturday did not show what killed him and refused speculation. Noguchi has been under fire from county supervisors for his comments about the deaths of actors William Holden and Natalie Wood as well as reports of theft and sloppy procedures in his office.

Messerle said it would be "days" before results were released.

Commission against memorial change

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's Fine Arts Commission appears lukewarm about a plan to mollify some Vietnam veterans who don't like the stark design that was selected for the nation's monument to Americans who fought in the war.

The commission, in a letter to Interior Secretary James Watt Tuesday, refused to give its advance approval of the addition of a flagpole and of a larger-than-life statue of a soldier in a heroic pose until it sees how those new elements would fit into the overall design.

Watt told the commission last month he wanted assurances that the statue and flagpole would be acceptable before he permitted excavation work to begin. The approval of both the commission and of the Interior Department is needed for the monument to be built.

The original design called for two long walls of polished black granite, bearing the names of Americans killed and missing in Vietnam, coming together in the shape of a V.

The monument is to be built in a park near the Lincoln Memorial and the Washington Monument.

After some veterans and some congressmen attacked the design as a political statement of shame and dishonor, the addition of the two patriotic elements was proposed as a compromise.

The Fine Arts Commission accepted the concept of adding a flag and statue, but said they could be placed off to the side, near a directory that is to be built to help visitors locate specific names in the engraved walls.

The commission told Watt it wanted the new elements "positioned so as not to abrogate the integrity and magnificence of the existing design concept."

The dispute postponed a groundbreaking ceremony that was to have taken place on March 1.

The Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund, which is collecting the required $7 million through contributions from the public, had planned to dedicate the completed project on Nov. 11, Veterans Day. Those plans now are jeopardized by the dispute.

TESCO holds 'tighten-up' workshop

Texas Electric Service Co. is working with the Midland Housing Association to make houses in the county's federally-funded rehabilitation program energy efficient by holding an Operation Tighten-Up Workshop at 7 p.m. Thursday in South Elementary School Cafetorium.

The workshop, to be conducted by Sarah St. Clair, will last an hour. It is free and the public is invited.

Betty Sheeler, a member of the Housing Association and director of the Department of Housing and Urban Development's rehabilitation program, said, "One important consideration in selection of work to be done on the houses in the program is to make the units energy efficient and to assist owners of houses to use their energy efficiently.

"TESCO is cooperating with the county by scheduling this workshop just as the work is about to begin on some of the units," she added.

Ms. Sheeler noted that TESCO has conducted energy audits of the selected houses. The county has incorporated TESCO recommendations in specifications for alterations and repairs.

In addition, Midland Independent School District has made the cafetorium available for the workshop at no cost to the county, Ms. Sheeler said.

Medical supplies airlifted to Poland

BOSTON (AP) — An airlift of $1 million in medical supplies has been shipped to Poland by American humanitarian groups and relief agencies, organizers say.

The 80,000-pound shipment left Logan International Airport Tuesday night and was to land in Frankfurt, West Germany before traveling on to Warsaw.

The relief effort was coordinated by Operation California, a humanitarian organization that has delivered emergency supplies to Southeast Asia and Central America.

This is the first private airlift to Poland, said Richard Walden, director of Operation California.

"When I was in Poland two weeks ago, I found a nation in crisis, unable to purchase materials and medicines for its health care system," he said.

The Polish government, which instituted martial law on Dec. 13, authorized the delivery to a non-government agency, said Elaine Brooks of the Unitarian Universalist Service Committee in Boston.

The Unitarian Church is one of several American groups supporting the airlift. Distribution of the medical supplies will be supervised in Poland by the Catholic Bishops Charity Commission and Project Hope.

TEXAN THINKIN' — 1882 to 1982

Texans have long been noted and associated with ways to beat the summer heat while laboring under the sometimes intensive sunny rays! The cowboy's wide-brimmed hat and kerchief about the neck served a prupose in keeping the body cooler as he went about his daily work. Likewise, the wind mill and hand fan brought cool water from deep in the ground and a cool breeze to a still, hot day. Later, with the coming of electricity, ceiling fans, window fans and modern versions of fans with cooling devices added, became a part of most Texas homes.Thus, a small bit of history of Texans and fans'n things to beat the summer heat.

This year, many Texans will buy more ceiling fans for homes and businesses. From all expectations, they'll make a big difference in energy savings for spring and summer in Texas '82.

Texas families will be setting thermostats from 76-80 and "turning on the fans" — to find they're still comfortable and have air-conditioning savings of from 18-25 per cent. Now that's a "big Texas savings"!

They say a one-ton air conditioner costs about 10 cents per hour to operate. A fan costs less than a penny per hour to operate.

You don't have t be a whiz in math to figure the difference—10 hours of one or the other can add up to either a dollar or a dime!

CHECK INSTALLATION COSTS

For greatest savings check on installation cost.

Cost of having a ceiling fan installed can sometimes run as much as the actual cost of the fan, so be sure to consider this before buying. Plan to obtain a minimum of three estimates before you select an installer.

INSTALL IT YOURSELF

Some fans have only a few instructions on installation, but others are complete with pictures, so it's possible to install the fan yourself.

Be sure to pick up instructions when you buy the fans, and read them carefully.

Manufacturers will tell you if fans can be installed on ceilings as low as eight feet. They usually say mount the fan to a standard three- or four-inch junction box securely anchored to support 45 pounds.

HOW TO HANG FAN

A ceiling fixture already in place is the easiest place to hang a ceiling fan. This gives you ready access to electricity and puts you near a ceiling joist, since the ceiling box (the metal box up in the ceiling that contains the electrical wiring) is attached to a joist.

Another way to hang the fan simply involves placing a new ceiling box to the underside of a joist and running power to it.

In Midland and most cities, however, residents should know that a permit is necessary (and these are issued only to licensed electricians) for all but very simple homewiring.

So have a professional do the electrical part and save yourself a possible injurious shock and/or a fine.

A third way to get power to the fan is to hang the fan as if it were a swag lamp, draping the power cord through a chain to the nearest wall, then down the wall to a plug. There are swag kits available for this purpose.

In deciding which way to go, remember that the first method mentioned really is the easiest way—using an existing ceiling fixture. With this method, the competent do-it-yourselfer can easily install a ceiling fan in an hour or two.

WHICH FAN TO BUY?

Selecting the appropriate fan to meet your individual needs together with additional installation, cost comparison, and use information, will be included in the Texas II short course beginning April 8.

Couple defines difficult types of people

By BEA PIXA
Hearst Feature Service

Everyone knows someone who can be described as "difficult." Other definitions are less polite.

Mary Buxton and Bruce Abt have refined the category even further, describing the types according to their characteristics: Sherman tanks, complainers, clams, super-agreeables, wet blankets, indecisives and know-it-alls.

Abt is a staff psychologist at San Jose (Calif.) Hospital and executive director of Human Resources Services, an organization that provides psychological counseling to industry. Buxton is a clinical social worker in private practice in San Jose and a staff member at the Women's Community Clinic. A difficult person, or "DP," is someone who has "one way of dealing with you or the environment, and gets stuck in that role. It's someone who behaves the same way with a lot of different people," according to Abt.

"Their behavior is chronic," adds Buxton. "They're not just going through a rough period. What happens is that something in their behavior hooks into something in you as well."

Invariably, says Abt, the DP is unaware of the effect he or she has on others. "They think other people are difficult, and cause the problems in the relationship. They're not flexible enough to see that they're the ones who are stuck."

For the supervisor or subordinate who must deal with a DP, the result may often be frustration, stress and chronic fatigue. The object of the workshop is to change the responses of people who deal with them. "It's pretty much a self-interest thing," says Buxton. "You don't have to love your boss to work with him."

In some cases, she acknowledges, the only healthy response may be a move to another company or department. "You have to stop taking their behavior personally, but sometimes when you've given the situation all your energy, you have to learn to give up and move on."

DPs fall into seven categories:

(1) The Sherman tanks, snipers, exploders: These are hostile-aggressive types who bombard others, bully, throw tantrums and make critical remarks. The best way to deal with them, says Abt and Buxton, is to stand up to them without fighting or getting argumentative.

(2) Complainers: Listen to them. Acknowledge their complaints and feelings; empathize, but don't sympathize. Ask factual, problem-solving questions. Ask how they would like things to end. Complainers, says Abt, seldom take steps to resolve their difficulties. The person who has to listen to complainers should "force them to take action."

(3) Silents and unresponsives: Abt calls these people "clams," because they steadfastly withdraw like "a resistant clam shell," giving no feedback at all. Ask open-ended questions that have to evoke more than a "yes" or "no" answer. Comment on the lack of response to a question. End the interaction yourself; don't let it dribble away.

(4) Agreeables: These people always agree because they are unable to say no. Consequently, they invariably miss deadlines and cannot meet obligations. In dealing with them, help them voice their objections. Deal with conflict by offering to collaborate or negotiate. Listen for their humor; it may be their way of voicing concern.

(5) Know-it-alls: Make factual but not dogmatic statements; be concrete. Says Abt: "the know-it-alls will value you if you go along with them, but if you take them on immediately, heads get battered."

(6) Indecisives: Help them voice their concerns or conflicts. Use their "indirectness" as clues to points of concern. Provide face-to-face support when possible.

(7) Negativists, wet blankets: Make optimistic but realistic statements. Stay away from solution steps as long as you can. As these people are ready to shoot down any idea, don't try to convince them that "things are not so bad," because the more you try to convince them, the worse it gets.

Supporting arts

FARMINGTON, Conn. (AP) — Responding to the Reagan Administration's request that big business help cover the gaps caused by budget cuts, a manufacturing firm here is increasing its 1982 allocation for the support of the arts, education and non-profit groups by 8 percent.

Some $761,000 will be donated by Emhart Corp. to 294 civic, cultural, educational, community and health organizations this year. Health and welfare will receive 46 percent of the allocations; education 29 percent; civic organizations 14 percent; and culture 7 percent. Groups that do not fit the formal category compose the final 4 percent.

Don't rely on flashy colors for attractive, decorative room

By BARBARA HARTUNG
Copley News Service

Q. We are moving from a large house into a condominium and I want to use my beige sofa in the living room. The new quarters aren't large so I have to pare dowm my belongings. However, I want to have a very attractive and decorative room.

What colors would look well with a tan sofa. What colors should I use for draperies and floor covering? — G.F.S.

A. You might be inspired by a room created by designer Bob-Jack Kallejo who selected a camel velvet upholstered L-shaped sofa with pillow accents and chrome-framed velvet benches in forest green.

For the window treatment, vertical blinds were selected in shades of vanilla, muschroom and green. Two contrasting wall coverings were used in the same colorations — one a small geometric and the other a larger stylized floral design.

To soften the deep rich floor tiles of the room, a straw rug was added. Although not a lot of flashy color was used, the room — because of its interesting contrasts and textural interest — was charming and lively.

Q. My guest room has off-white walls, off-white wood shutters and honey-toned hardwood floors. I have a number of pieces of refinished pine furniture — not really antiques but rather good primitive pieces.

The room is really rather dull and I'm not sure why. Perhaps with a very pretty spread I can add more life. With those kinds of things, should I choose a bright bold color scheme or something more restrained? — P.B.M.

A. How about a russet-colored, inviting comforter for the bed, rather than a spread. Stitch up a dust ruffle and perhaps a modified canopy in navy blue and rust calico.

Make some pillows of the calico for a chair or bench if you have one in the room.

Accent with copper, brass and greenery.

Consider dollar value when growing vegetables

By PATRICK DENTON
Copley News Service

I've never really thought of gardening in monetary terms nor totted up what my vegetable garden has produced nor compared my costs to the cost of buying what I grow.

But given the inflation rate of recent years and its impact on the average family's food budget, more of us will be looking to plant those vegetables which yield the highest dollar value in the home garden — often a garden which occupies a limited space, perhaps even just containers on an apartment balcony.

Last week, in discussing intensive gardening methods, I mentioned a National Garden Bureau survey which found that the most highly rated vegetable for the home garden in terms of dollar value of yield per square feet is the tomato, followed by green or bunching onions.

The third most valuable vegetable is leaf lettuce which, like green onions, can be sown very early. And though most leaf lettuce takes about 45 days to mature, you can begin pulling every other plant when the seedlings are only half grown. Thinning makes room for the remaining seedlings to fill out. Mixed leaf lettuce varieties make a most attractive row filled with nice contrasts in leaf color, shape and taste.

If you can put together some plastic-covered tunnels to place over your lettuce row, then you can plant even earlier and be munching tasty greenery while travel-worn equivalents are selling for high prices in the supermarkets.

The fourth most valuable vegetable is a surprise. Although in 15th spot in general popularity among home gardeners, the turnip was judged highly valuable because of its quick maturity and its many uses. Sown in a cool part of the vegetable garden very early in spring, turnips yield a quick crop of tangy greens to include in a mixed salad or to steam. Thickly sown turnips will yield their nutritious greens from the thinnings. The turnip roots improve in sugar content and flavor as fall weather grows cooler.

Fifth in value to the home gardener is summer squash. Zucchini, for example, once turned on by warm weather, becomes a veritable green machine that can produce two to three squash per week all summer. To obtain maximum monetary value from summer squash, don't pick them till they weigh over one pound.

However, I must confess I don't follow this last rule myself because I like my zucchini tiny. But then, I'll never be rich either. Zucchini is available now in both green and gold varieties and they're tasty cut in sticks for dipping or quickly stir-fried in butter with onions and tomato — an easy and versatile vegetable for the home gardener.

Garden peas have never been a high dollar-value item in the home garden but most of us have always planted them anyway, just for their incomparable taste when plucked fresh from the vine, shelled and eaten raw out of hand or cooked lightly.

But now the edible-podded peas have sharply increased the value of this vegetable, doubling the food production from each row. So snap peas rank sixth among vegetables for value per square foot of garden space. The real reason for this is the price you would have to pay for them (where they are to be had) in the stores.

Snap peas are used as are the flat-podded peas in Oriental cooking. They're good in salads and for finger food. They can be opened, the peas removed, the shells stuffed with something yummy for an appetizer. Plant peas for greatest yield per space unit by planting double rows — one on either side of the wire or net support system you use.

If you have a dark, cool storage area that hovers just above freezing in winter, you should be planting the seventh most valuable vegetable, storage onions. These onions can be seeded into the garden very early, while there are still light frosts.

Second only to tomatoes in popularity among home gardeners, beans are only eighth from the profit standpoint, while carrots are ninth. And cucumbers, third favorite vegetable, are just 10th in profitability, because of the space they require.

Hotline helps hookers hang up their past

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: In reference to a letter asking if there is a "Hookers Anonymous": There is an organization made up of former madams, call girls and streetwalkers who counsel people trying to get out of prostitution. That group, formerly known as CAT (California Authority of Trollops), counsels at the Mary Magdalene Project in Los Angeles, where up to six prostitutes can live temporarily while they make the difficult transition into legitimate employment.

"Children of the Night" is a Los Angeles organization that helps 10- to 17-year-olds who have been forced out on the street to hustle as prostitutes. (About half of all prostitutes are 18 years old or younger.) Father Ritter renders a similar service to young male prostitutes at Covenant House in New York City.

It was my research and work with prostitutes that led me to develop programs for both adult and child prostitutes, who are often disregarded by more traditional agencies that provide social services.

Our hotline for referrals to specific programs for the prostitute is 213-550-7188. – DR. LOIS LEE

DEAR DR. LEE: Thank you for bringing attention to a widely neglected and often overlooked population of people who are entitled to social services like everyone else. If organizations such as yours do not exist in other metropolitan areas, they should.

DEAR ABBY: This is a rather unusual problem, but we desperately need your help.

On Oct. 1, the "Former Prisoner-of-War Benefits Act of 1981" became law. This law was enacted to give some much deserved benefits to Americans who were prisoners of war.

No-smoking policy

NEW YORK (AP) — There are no "No Smoking" signs posted as you enter the Manhattan offices of Furniture Consultants Inc. But the ashtray outside the doorway provides the first clue, and the clean, smoke-free air inside confirms that a ban on smoking is in effect here.

The firm, a dealership that specializes in office furnishings, is among the growing number of companies to adopt some type of no-smoking policy. Though only a fraction of U.S. employers — 3 percent, according to Public Health Reports — have or sponsor smoking-control policies or programs, at a recent Conference on Smoking and Health, it was reported that employer involvement is increasing.

In the case of Furniture Consultants, the no-smoking rule evolved when the three principals of the firm, all ex-smokers, formed their partnership in 1978.

"At that time," explained David Itkin, one of the partners, "there were only the three of us plus the office manager, another non-smoker. The staff has since grown to 40. During hiring interviews we would mention in a 'by-the-way' fashion that employees do not smoke on the job and we'd hope this practice would be respected. So, what was the norm for us became an unconscious, unwritten but accepted personnel policy."

Ironically, the staff increase has meant that smokers now outnumber non-smokers. Concerned that employees might become dissatisfied with the informal prohibition, Itkin asked Consumer Response Corp., a research firm, to conduct an attitude survey and determine exactly how the majority felt.

"The results surprised everyone," Itkin says.

Sixty-five percent of all employees said they approved of the policy and, of those who smoke, 46 percent wholeheartedly endorsed it. Additionally, as a direct outcome of the no-smoking rule, smokers in the company have reduced their total cigarette consumption by 34 percent, Itkin notes.

Mark Schlossberg, a two-packs-a-day smoker, joined the firm as service manager two years ago.

"When I was told about the no-smoking policy, I didn't know if I could handle it. My first thoughts were 'Would I have to give it up totally? Where would I smoke?' Once I saw that other smokers were coping so easily, I knew I could do it too."

Schlossberg is now down to one pack a day and finds that he's more conscious of his smoking habits in public and at home.

"Now it's easier to give it up in other places. I find myself requesting no-smoking sections on planes and at the movies."

His wife, Deborah, a non-smoker, is delighted with the fact that he's not smoking on the job and recently implemented a policy of her own at home, mostly to support her husband's attempts to give up smoking altogether. Smoking at the Schlossberg home is now restricted to the bathroom and Schlossberg says he's found it easy to comply.

"I like the idea. The air is noticeably cleaner and easier to breathe," says comptroller Ron Santore. He described himself as a heavy smoker of the type that can stop smoking whenever he wants. He has cut his cigarette intake in half, from one-and-a-half packs to three-quarters of a pack a day.

"Some days are harder than others," he admitted, "but I haven't had to resort to gum chewing, snacking or any substitute habits."

In addition, Santore noticed that he's been "sensitized" to the smoking habits of others.

"The other day I was visiting a client and immediately realized how much dirtier the place was and how much heavier the air was to breathe, all because of the smoke."

Itkin and his partners say they are proud of the no-smoking policy, the fact that their employees have reacted so favorably and adapted to it so easily. Cigarette breaks are permitted and, though mid-morning and after-lunch are peak periods when smokers can be found congregating at the ashtray in the hall, Itkin reports that productivity remains high and unaffected.

"My only worry is that as we keep adding staff, somewhere along the line the self-enforced system may topple. But, the key is the employees themselves. And, as long as they continue to view the practice as acceptable, it's destined to succeed."

Meal plans

By ERMA BOMBECK

There is one thing I have never taught my body how to do and that is to figure out at 6 a.m. what it wants to eat at 6 p.m.

I suppose there are some people who roll out of bed and can hardly wait for the day to go by to get at those cabbage rolls, but I'm not one of them.

I am always surprised when it is time to eat and there is nothing on my plate.

When my children were younger, I figured out there were two kinds of mothers: those who dragged out of a warm bed and put nutritious chili in a wide-mouth thermos, and those who stuck a stick of gum and a holy picture in a sack with instructions to "Trade up!"

When 43 percent of the women in this country went out into the marketplace to work, planning ahead for meals became a real challenge and hamburger became our national bird.

There's something about hamburger that's so . . . ground. It's like an old friend. I am never defeated by frozen hamburger like I am a package of chops that are welded together or spare ribs that wrap around a piece of frozen fat which is held captive until the spring.

I never met a frozen turkey that was not capable of sinking the Titanic.

But hamburger is conquerable even at 6:30 when the big game starts at 7:30 and it's frozen like a rock. I know all of you have tried traditional ways to defrost hamburger, but have you considered some of the following newer ones?

1. Tuck frozen hamburger under your armpit while setting the table.

2. Balance meat under your shower cap as you run through the hot water.

3. Put it in your dishwasher and run it through the dry cycle.

4. Have the children put it on top of the TV set when they first arrive home and begin playing video games.

5. Put it under the rear tire of your car and back up.

There are some people who put hamburger out on the countertop or sink before they go to work in the mornings. I don't know any of them personally.

New concept in home purchasing

By JAMES M. WOODARD
Copley News Service

Normally, the purchase of a $100,000 home will require a down payment of $20,000 to $25,000. Not so with a newly unveiled home-buying plan.

The new concept would allow a family to acquire that $100,000 dream home with a $3,000 to $5,000 down payment.

The plan, now emerging in several Western sand Southern states, is a unique variation of the "shared ownership" plan. It pairs an investor, who provides most of the down payment, with a home buyer qualified to make the monthly mortgage payments.

In return for interest-free use of the investor's money, the buyer agrees to share ownership of the property and appreciation (profits) when the home is sold.

For example, a family wants to purchase a $100,000 home but has only $5,000 as a down payment. The family's real estate broker finds an investor who is willing to put up the additional $20,000

The investor and buyer sign a special partnership agreement. The investor owns 20 percent of the home and a specified proportion of the value appreciation. It is also agreed that the partnership arrangement will culminate at a selected time — usually at the end of a five- or seven-year term.

At that time, the buyer and investor have several options. They can extend the agreement. The occupying owner may buy the investor's share, or the investor may buy the occupying owner's share. Or they can agree to sell the home and share the profits equally.

It's a good opportunity for investors because it provides part-ownership in a premium type of real property with no management hassles or maintenance costs.

There's no mortgage payments required of the investor. He can share in the partnership's write-off for tax purposes. And he receives a substantial return on his investment if the property appreciates as expected.

The occupant-owner benefits from a no-interest source of most of the down payment. And he will receive a share of the value appreciation profit.

This type of "creative financing" was given a boost recently when the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. announced it would purchase mortgage loans tied to this type of special arrangement.

The Mortgage Corp. is a major secondary buyer of mortgages. It purchases loans after they are first granted to a home buyer by a primary lender (savings and loan association, bank, etc).

The corporation is a congressionally chartered multibillion-dollar firm, created to bring more funds into the home mortgage market.

Q. How many buildings and how much land is owned by the U.S. government?

A. According to the General Services Administration, the federal government owns about 405,000 buildings with over 2.65 billion square feet of floor space. And it owns 744 million acres of land.

Inquiries are invited and may be answered in this column. Write: James M. Woodard, 825 N. San Marcos Road, Santa Barbara, CA 93111.

Motion mindedness

By DENIECE SCHOFIELD
Copley News Service

Famous in most home-management textbooks is a man by the name of Frederick Winslow Taylor.

Taylor, an American engineer and efficiency expert who began working for the Midvale Steel Works in Philadelphia in 1878, has done more to improve my homemaking skills than any other single person.

Taylor conducted experiments to determine how men and machines could work more efficiently. He watched the workers' hands to see if they used both hands effectively. He noticed how a better arrangement of tools permitted the best sequence of motion. He was constantly on the lookout for shortcuts and ways to do things better and faster.

The best-known part of his system is called the time and motion study.

You may know homemakers who spend hours doing a particular job. Another homemaker might be able to do the same job just as well, but in a shorter period of time. How is this possible? The efficient homemaker is motion-minded. While she is working, she is conscious of how she is working.

The motion-minded person uses both hands effectively. During the next week, notice how many times one hand is busy while the other one is inactive. What is your left hand doing while your right hand is brushing your teeth? You can easily be sticking things away in a bathroom drawer or medicine chest. Become more aware of your hands.

Watch the way other people work. Some people can prepare a whole meal without having to take many steps at all. Still others may walk back and forth across the kitchen many times just fixing a bowl of cereal!

Remember, when you stand in one spot to prepare something, you're only messing up one spot! The more ground you cover, the more areas you are affecting.

When you unwrap something do you ever place the wrappings on the counter, only to pick them up and throw them away later? Be aware of your motions. Try to handle things only once.

Did you ever wonder why the kids don't put their clothes in the hamper? Usually, it takes two motions: open the lid, put the clothes in. The more motions something takes, the harder the process is to execute. Simplify your storage program by eliminating extra motions.

Motion-mindedness is not necessarily moving fast. It is moving smoothly, steadily and rhythmically. Of course, moving quickly is the ideal we all seek. If you are a right-handed person, your most economical patternreverse ment is from left to right. If you are left-handed, the reverse is true.

All of us will find those proverbial "extra hours" in the day by becoming motion-minded. Look at your working motions and equipment arrangements. Find shortcuts through better organization. They could very well turn out to be shortcuts to happiness.

Picking wine

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The shopper who is often reluctant to admit ignorance when it comes to choosing wines to go with various foods can now turn to a computer for help.

The managment-information publication MIS Week says a retailer here has developed a computer application that consists of the types of foods that can be matched against 650 different wines.

The Newspaper BIBLE

"DON'T FLAUNT YOUR FAITH"

Don't undo the work of God for a chunk of meat. Remember, there is nothing wrong with the meat, but it is wrong to eat it if it makes another stumble. The right thing to do is to quit eating meat or drinking wine or doing anything else that offends your brother or makes him sin.

You may know that there is nothing wrong with what you do, even from God's point of view, but keep it to yourself; don't flaunt your faith in front of others who might be hurt by it. In this situation, happy is the man who does not sin by doing what he knows is right. But anyone who believes that something he wants to do is wrong shouldn't do it. He sins if he does, for he thinks it is wrong, and so for him it is wrong. Anything that is done apart from what he feels is right is sin.

Even if we believe that it makes no difference to the Lord whether we do these things, still we cannot just go ahead and do them to please ourselves; for we must bear the "burden" of being considerate of the doubts and fears of others--of those who feel these things are wrong. Let's please the other fellow, not ourselves, and do what is for his good and thus build him up in the Lord.

Christ didn't please Himself. As the Psalmist said, "He came for the very purpose of suffering under the insults of those who were against the Lord."

These things that were written in the Scriptures to long ago are to teach us patience and to encourage us, so that we will look forward expectantly to the time when God will conquer sin and death.

Group helps consumers avoid mail order hassles

By IRENE GARDNER KEENEY
Hearst Feature Service

But ordering by mail can have its problems. Familiar complaints are items that don't live up to the promises made for them; orders that take months to arrive; merchandise that is damaged when it does arrive.

To help you shop by mail, the Direct Mail Marketing Association, a trade organization of mail order companies, and the Federal Trade Commission, have collaborated on a guide, "Make Knowledge Your Partner in Mail Order Shopping." The guide offers tips and advises you of your rights under the FTC's Mail Order Rule. Here are some of the tips:

—Before placing your order, check the company's return policy. If it doesn't honor returns, be careful what you buy.

—If you return merchandise to a company, it is wise to get a return receipt from the post office. It may cost a few cents more, but you'll have proof you returned the merchandise.

—Keep a record of your order, including the company's name, address and phone number; the item you purchased; the number of your check; and the date you mailed the order. No one can help you if you can't recall the name of the company or its address.

—Never send cash through the mail. It's always better to send a check or money order or charge the order to your credit card.

—If merchandise arrives damaged, contact the mail order company immediately. Request instructions for returning the damaged merchandise.

—If your order doesn't arrive when promised, you may cancel the order and get a full refund. If the company didn't give you a delivery date in its advertising, it must ship your order within 30 days, with certain exceptions. This is required by the FTC's Mail Order Merchandise Rule. When there is a delivery delay, the seller must notify you and send you the means for cancelling the order at no cost to you. You can agree to the delay or get a full refund.

—If you ever receive something through the mail that you did not order or didn't agree to buy through a club plan, you can keep it without paying for it. It's your legal right.

—If you cancel a mail order purchase charged on your credit card, the FTC rule requires the merchant to credit your account within one billing cycle following receipt of your request. You are also protected under the Fair Credit Billing Act which provides your account be corrected within 60 days as long as you have notified the credit card company.

Military exercises denounced

PANMUNJOM, Korea (AP) — North Korea Wednesday denounced the U.S.-South Korean military exercise under way in South Korea as a step toward "all-out war."

The United Nations Command said the exercise is defensive, does not violate the Korean armistice agreement and will continue as scheduled.

The charges and countercharges were traded at the 411th meeting of the Military Armistice Commission in this truce village in the demilitarized zone that divides Korea. Team Spirit '82, the military training exercise that began Feb. 13, is scheduled to continue until April 16, and 161,600 U.S. and South Korean troops are taking part.

Conference adjourns

MADRID, Spain (AP) — The 35-nation European Security Conference adjourned until the fall after Western delegates refused to do "business as usual" with the Soviet Union during martial law in Poland.

'Reaganville' hopes to show poverty

Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — Wrapped in layers of cast-off clothing and donated blankets, Sam and Sandy Moore shiver in the damp, piercing cold of their temporary home — a tent in "Reaganville."

It was not a burning desire to protest poverty and federal spending cuts that brought the Moores to the tent encampment in Lafayette Park, the well-tended block facing the White House.

"We had nowhere else to go," Moore said as his wife nodded agreement.

"They cannot find us a shelter where we can be together. It is either a women's shelter or a men's shelter. At least here we can be together."

The "here" is a cluster of 15 tents. Nine were provided by the Community for Creative Non-Violence, which organized Reaganville and has been caring for the poor in the nation's capital for a decade.

The others — some canvas and some makeshift from cellophane — were set up by "street people" after CCNV won a court fight Jan. 22 with the Interior Department to allow the poor to sleep in the tents as a protest against federal policies the CCNV says are driving more people into the streets.

NEARBY IS a mock cemetery with 539 small, white crosses representing a few of the homeless poor who have died of exposure.

Reaganville's population is highly transient as each week brings virtually an entirely different group of residents.

The residents, some of whom concede they are unemployed by choice, depend on charity for their existence, panhandling for pocket change and scrounging leftovers from nearby fast-food restaurants.

The CCNV provides showers and hot meals — usually stew — at its drop-in centers, along with clothing and blankets. It gets the food for its soup kitchens by begging for cases of imperfect or non-selling food from wholesale markets, and scrounging discarded produce from supermarket trash bins. The CCNV feeds 500 to 600 people a day for only about $200 a month, according to Mitch Snyder, a CCNV spokesman.

At the campsite, there are no heaters, campfires, electricity or personal possessions, because the National Park Service regulations are supposed to bar camping except in designated areas. The closest NPS-designated camping area is eight miles from the White House.

The NPS, part of the Interior Department, fought a losing battle all the way to a U.S. Court of Appeals to keep the homeless out of the tents after the CCNV erected them on Thanksgiving Day as a "symbolic campsite." The appeals court held that the Park Service regulations allow the poor to sleep in the tents as an "intrinsic part of their protest."

The NPS is now rewriting its regulations in an attempt to clearly prohibit anyone else from camping in the park, a move that Snyder says the CCNV will challenge in court with the aid of the American Civil Liberties Union, which helped in the previous cases.

"It is not because the occupants are street people," insisted George Berklacy, top spokesman for the NPS.

He said the park is heavily used, the encampment is "disruptive" and has prompted more than 100 complaints from citizens that it is an "eyesore," and the NPS does not want campsites to spring up throughout the capital.

For the homeless of Reaganville, being unwelcome and doing with few creature comforts is nothing new. The plight of the Moores, as with others at the campsite, began before Reagan and Reaganomics.

Sam Moore quit his office job with the Metro Subway System here in 1976 and returned home to Uniontown, Pa., in search of something better. He did not find it.

"It is worse back there than it is here," said Sam, 46, who says he has an accounting diploma. "I have not been able to find work since."

Sam did find Sandy, now 32, a former employee of Goodwill in Uniontown. Where they will go after the CCNV strikes its tents on March 20, the end of winter and the demonstration, they do not know.

UNLIKE MOST of the loners who occupy Reaganville, Sam and Sandy have each other. But they do have other problems. He was born with a rare bone disease that cost him the use of his legs and has resulted in 28 fractures. Sandy has cerebral palsy and is epileptic.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Spice up your coffee

DEAR HELOISE:

Would you please reprint the recipe for flavored coffee? Seems I'm always running out when I buy the little cans available in stores and would like to have something I could substitute.

Enjoy your column and the hints very much. — Darlene Zandvliet

Besides being convenient, these do-it-yourself blends are a great way to save a few pennies and to add real spice to your coffee drinking pleasure...

And, speaking of spice, if you like cinnamon, try Vienna-flavored coffee. Combine one-half cup instant coffee granules, two-thirds cup granulated sugar or the appropriate amount of artificial sweetener, two-thirds cup powdered milk or coffee creamer and one-half teaspoon cinnamon. Then blend, a little at a time, in a blender until powdered. You won't need more than 5 seconds or so. You can use a food processor for this too and in that case you can dump the whole mixture in at one time.

If orange flavor is your weakness, to one-half cup instant coffee granules, add three-fourths cup sugar, one cup powdered milk or coffee creamer and one-half teaspoon dried orange peel. Blend in a blender (or food processor) until powdered.

My favorite is mocha as chocolate is my weakness! Just blend one-half cup instant coffee granules, one-half cup sugar, one cup dry milk or coffee creamer and two tablespoons cocoa.

When you want to serve a special treat to your family or guests, or just treat yourself, put two rounded teaspoons of one of these blends into a cup and fill it with boiling water. (You may want to experiment with different amounts of sugar, creamer, etc.).

Stir, sit back and enjoy! — Heloise

LAUNDERING PANTYHOSE

Dear Heloise: I save the round plastic balls which come on large, roll-on deodorant bottles. When I wash pantyhose, I drop three or four in the toe of each leg before hanging the hose outside on the clothesline.

The hose will hang straight without twisting and tangling on the line. — Reader

HINTS FROM HIM

Dear Heloise: To save my time and make it easier when making meatballs, I don't brown them, instead merely drop them into the heating sauce and simmer until done. (Prepare the sauce before preparing the meatballs to allow sufficient time for it to heat).

Also, I do not use eggs. To me, eggs and the browning make the meatballs tough.

I keep a bowl of warm water available to dip my fingers in while forming the meatballs. Easier to shape and less messy. — Gus D'Amico

SUGAR STARCH

Dear Heloise: Would you or any of your friends have a recipe for a sugar starch used to stiffen crocheted articles? I surely would appreciate having a copy.

Thank you so much for many hours of pleasure through your column. — Anna Marasco

You're a luv for being so kind and I just happen to have a recipe for sugar starch stashed away in my files so I'm delighted to pass it on...

Just put one-fourth cup water and three-fourths cup sugar in a small pan. Over low heat, stir until the solution is clear and not sugary, but do not let it come to a boil.

To use, wet the piece to be starched in warm water first, then roll it in a bath towel to remove as much water as possible, then dip it in the sugar starch.

Squeeze out the excess moisture, then stretch the item to the desired shape. Place on a flat surface to dry. — Hugs, Heloise

Pear jam

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

At this time of year some of the cooks we know who made jams from fresh fruit last summer have used up their store of those good preserves. They've asked us for a recipe that calls for a seasonal fruit so they can make up a batch of jam to use now and during the spring.

For the fresh fruit, pears are a good choice. Varieties of them are always in season. Teamed with fresh gingerroot, widely available these days, they make a piquant preserve.

GINGER PEAR JAM

1½ cups cold water
3 pounds (about) fully ripe pears
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1¾-ounce box powdered fruit pectin
5 cups (2¼ pounds) sugar

Peel the gingerroot and chop fine. Turn into a saucepan and add the water; bring to a boil and boil gently for 15 minutes. Drain; cover with cold water and let stand 10 minutes. Drain again and measure ½ cup.

Peel, core and finely chop the pears — there should be 4 cups. Into a 6- or 8-quart saucepot stir together the ginger, pears, lemon juice and pectin. Over high heat, stirring constantly, bring the mixture to a full boil. Immediately add the sugar; stirring constantly, bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard 1 minute. Remove from heat and, with a large metal spoon, skim off foam. Quickly ladle into hot 8-ounce jars, filling to within ¼ inch of tops; cover and process in a boiling water bath for 5 minutes. Makes about eight 8-ounce jars.

Note: For milder flavor, reduce finely chopped ginger to ¼ cup.

Basic flan recipe is versatile

By BARBARA HANSEN
The Los Angeles Times - Washington Post News Service

You'll get a lot of mileage from a basic flan recipe that can be varied to produce three different results.

The students responded by creating their own variations — a silky, sprightly-flavored orange flan and a cocoa-flavored flan that tastes like a cross between old-fashioned chocolate pudding and chocolate mousse.

For the pineapple flan, Mehtlan places a layer of drained, crushed pineapple in the caramelized mold and then adds the custard mixture of eggs, evaporated milk, sugar and vanilla or rum. No pineapple goes into the mixture itself.

To accent the pineapple motif, you can ring the unmolded flan with halved pineapple slices and garnish the top with additional crushed pineapple.

To make the delicately flavored cocoa flan, eliminate the layer of crushed pineapple and stir 1-4 cup unsweetened cocoa into the custard mixture.

The orange flan is softer in consistency and requires longer baking than the other two flans. For this version, orange juice replaces the evaporated milk, grated orange peel accents the flavor, and two additional egg yolks help to firm the custard. Reconstituted frozen orange juice was used in the test and gave an attractive, deep yellow color.

Because oven temperatures can vary, use the suggested cooking times as a guide. Start testing the flan with a knife after it has baked one hour and continue to test at 10-minute intervals until the knife comes out clean. Avoid overbaking, which can curdle the flan and make it tough and watery.

CAROLE MEHTLAN'S PINEAPPLE FLAN

1 cup sugar
1 (8-ounce) can crushed pineapple
8 eggs
2 (13-ounce) cans evaporated milk
2 teaspoons vanilla or 1 tablespoon rum

Place 1-2 cup sugar in heavy pan and cook over moderate heat until melted and caramelized. Pour into 1 1-2-quart charlotte mold or other straight-sided deep mold, turning rapidly to coat bottom. Drain pineapple thoroughly. Place pineapple on top of caramel layer.

Beat together eggs, evaporated milk, 1-2 cup sugar and vanilla. Strain into prepared mold. Cover mold. Place in pan containing enough water to come 2-3 way up mold. Bake at 350 degrees 1 hour 10 to 20 minutes. After about 1 hour, start testing for doneness by inserting knife in flan. When knife is not coated with liquid, flan is done. Be careful not to pierce caramel layer when inserting knife.

Cool flan and refrigerate overnight. Remove from refrigerator about 3 hours before unmolding. Invert on serving plate, loosening flan around edges with small spatula or knife, if necessary. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

ORANGE FLAN

Substitute 3 1-3 cups orange juice for evaporated milk. Add 1 teaspoon grated orange peel and 2 extra egg yolks. Bake 1 hour 30 to 40 minutes, until flan tests done.

COCOA FLAN

Instead of topping caramel layer with pineapple, blend 1-4 cup unsweetened cocoa with milk mixture. Bake 1 hour 10 to 20 minutes, until flan tests done.

Watson wrote book on how to cover TV news

By GUS STEVENS
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Don't ever try to tell Coy Watson about television news. He wrote the book on how to get the news at the scene, on film, into the studio and into living rooms across the country.

In 1943, when there were literally about 75 television sets in Los Angeles — those monsters with the minuscule picture tubes — Madame Chiang Kai-shek visited the city to gather support for the Chinese Nationalists in their war against Japan.

Television station KTSL (a Don Lee station now gone) used Watson's film of her speech at the Hollywood Bowl, putting it on the air after a sharp station executive spotted him taking pictures of the speaker and her audience.

"That might have been the first news story ever put on TV," Watson said. "When the film came on the little television screen at the studio, the hairs stood up at the back of my neck. The whole future of television became clear to me. Millions of people would someday be watching scenes like these at home."

In 1946 when little Kathy Fiscus fell down a 12-inch pipe in San Marino, where she was trapped for days before she died, Watson was on the scene day and night. He rigged lights from a heavy belt he wore so that he looked like something from the planet Ork.

Watson covered the 1948 presidential campaigns of Dewey and Truman, the first national campaign to be reported for television.

Watson flew in a helicopter over Eisenhower's hospital after the president had suffered a heart attack while in Denver. "I thought we had permission to fly over," Watson said, "but we didn't. The Secret Service was ready to shoot us down."

BUT, AS HE ALMOST always did, Watson got his pictures and they were sent out to the television world.

Today Watson, 69, still is on the job. He works at a San Diego photography firm that specializes in sophisticated industrial camera projects.

Watson is no slouch, himself. He has participated in the development of photography equipment for decades and he holds patents on some of his inventions.

Before he retired (and eventually returned to work) to San Diego , Watson did his work in Los Angeles.

He was born in Hollywood, "next door to the Mack Sennett studios." Perhaps it was inevitable but Watson, a cute baby, was on the silver screen when he was 9 months old in a silent film called "The Price of Silence."

"A newcomer to the movies was in the cast," Watson said. "He was Lon Chaney — senior, not junior."

Watson played in movies until he was 17, making about 20 films. He performed with Louise Lovely, Charles Ray, Ronald Colman, Buck Jones, Matt Moore, George O'Brien, Fatty Arbuckle, Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks and scores of others.

"PHOTOGRAPHY ALWAYS was my first love," Watson said. "When sound came to the movies in 1929, it took the fun out of making pictures. Now we had to keep quiet. Before, the director would talk through every scene, coaching, telling the actors exactly what to do as they did it. That was more lively."

In 1929 when he was still a schoolboy, Watson went to work evenings for Pacific and Atlantic Photos (which eventually became part of UPI) in the Los Angeles Times building.

"They sent me to cover the arrival of the Graf Zeppelin when it flew to Los Angeles," Watson said.

Watson later was a photographer for Acme, the Post-Record, the Evening News, the Times, the Herald-Express and the Daily News (for which he covered the summer Olympic Games in 1932), all in Los Angeles.

When television news arrived, Watson was ready. He knew how to cover a news story and he knew how to take pictures.

"Television was in trouble from the first," Watson said, "because instead of evolving from the people in the movie business — where they know about pictures — it was taken over by radio people. There never were any pictures used in radio.

"Hollywood stayed away from television because they were afraid of it and because of the unions. Television was around 10 years before anybody in it knew how to cover a news story with words and pictures."

In 1949 he and a longtime newspaper columnist friend, Erskine Johnson, launched a syndicated television show called "Hollywood Reel."

"Film stars weren't allowed to appear on television in those days, although they were dying to see themselves on home screens," Watson said. "The movies were trying to halt television then the way network television is trying to halt cable television now.

"So we ran around town shooting the stars in 15-minute candid sitQzions, in their homes, at play, in Palm Springs. They could tell the studios they weren't working when we photographed them. We had Dinah Shore, Sonny Tufts and Gene Autry in our first show.

Union ratifies agreement

LONDON (AP) — Union officials representing clerical workers at The Times of London have ratified an agreement to cut 200 jobs, a spokesman for the 197-year-old flagship of the British press said today.

The approval, voted Tuesday night, appeared to be a significant breakthrough in efforts to save the paper and its sister publication, The Sunday Times. It followed publisher Rupert Murdoch's latest threat to close the papers if no agreement is reached on his demand for 600 job cuts.

The Australian publisher, whose empire also includes the mass-circulation Sun, News of the World and the New York Post, said Tuesday that a settlement "had to be found" by Monday if closure was to be averted.

Time-delay fuse needed

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — We just moved into an old house. Everything seems to be working fine except that, every once in a while, one of the fuses blows when the dishwasher is turned on. It would seem to be an overload on the circuit, but if that were the problem, why doesn't it happen all the time but only sometimes?

A. — It appears to be an overload all right, occasioned by the fact that the washer only overloads at certain times because of the surge of extra power to start the machine. It may be that it occurs only when something else on the same circuit is also drawing on the electricity. If you know which appliance, lights, etc., are on the same line, be sure they are not operating when the washer is turned on. The better way is to replace the regular 15-ampere fuse with what is called a time-delay fuse of the same amperage. This type of fuse allows for a temporary overload. If that still blows, then you will need a professional electrician to determine what is wrong.

Q. — I always have trouble distinguishing between ferrous and non-ferrous metals. It can be troublesome when the instructions for a project refer to one or the other of these types. I looked up ferrous in the dictionary and it explains that a ferrous metal is one with iron and small amounts of other metals or substances, but it doesn't tell which metals these are. Can you help us?

A. — Yes. Ferrous metals include carbon steel, wrought iron, cast iron and what is called mild steel. The nonferrous metals include brass, bronze, aluminum, copper, nickel, tin and zinc.

Q. — Our garden hose is in good condition except for one place where it has been split as though it had been run over by something. Is it possible to replace just a few inches of the hose or must it be thrown away?

A. — You do not have to throw away the hose, nor do you have to replace a few inches of it. Merely cut out the damaged part and then join the two cut ends. You can buy a hose repair coupling mender at your local hardware store, lumber yard or home center. There is one type for rubber hoses, another for plastic hoses. Be sure to get the right kind, then follow directions on how to put the two ends together. If, as sometimes happens, no directions come with the mender, ask your dealer to explain how it functions. It is very simple and is almost self-apparent when you take a close look at the coupler. Be certain you use a sharp knife or blade to make a clean cut of the damaged section. Also, if you dip the ends of the plastic hose into hot water to soften them, the repair will be easier.

Q. — I am going to insulate our attic with mineral-wool blankets. In stapling the blankets to the wall studs, how far apart should the staples be to assure a tight fit?

A. — About 8 inches. Fit the end of a blanket snugly against the top piece of framing. Working down, staple the flanges to the sides or the faces of the studs. Cut the blanket to fit tightly against the framing at the bottom. If more than one blanket is used in the same stud space, butt the ends tightly together. The vapor barrier must face the side of the wall that is heated in cold weather. While the flanges of the blankets can be stapled to the sides or faces of the studs, as just explained, there is one exception. The flanges must be stapled only to the sides of the studs if you are using aluminum foil-faced blankets. This is to create the air space necessary for the heat-reflective value of the foil to be achieved.

(Attic insulating is explained in detail in Andy Lang's booklet, "Saving Money by Insulating," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents AND a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P. O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column, but individual correspondence cannot be undertaken.)

Garden Club has flower show

Mrs. William L. Drake, master flower show judge, critiqued flower arrangements at a recent meeting and flower show of the Yucca Garden Club at the Girl Scout Center.

Hostesses for the meeting were Mrs. H. V. Beck, Mrs. R. L. Barker and Mrs. Fred McMann.

Mrs. William R. Cain Jr., president, greeted members and guests.

Winners of the flower show were Mrs Howard Munson, first; Mrs. C. R. Jones, first; Mrs. Cain, first; Mrs. Bill Crowe, first and second; and Mrs. Charles Neuhardt, second.

Mrs. Raymond Barnett, Yucca's director to the Midland Council of Garden Clubs, urged members to register before March 17 for the district one spring convention to be held April 7-8 at the Holiday Inn in Odessa.

Bob Thomas, artist from St. Petersburg, Fla., will present a program on design at 1:30 p.m. April 7 in the ballroom. Thomas, one of the foremost world floral artists, has lectured and taught in 38 states and the District of Columbia, as well as Mexico, Central America, South America, the Republic of Panama and the Bahamas. He is an authority in the field of abstract floral art, and founder and director of the American Guild of Flower Arrangers.

To view his program, a fee of $5 may be sent to Mrs. Omar Herring, registration chairman, 209 Santa Rita, Odessa, Tex., 79763, before March 17.

In other club business, plans were made for Mrs. Crowe and Mrs. C. E. McKenzie to make the flower arrangements and deliver them to the June birthday party at Trinity Towers.

The club voted to donate a shrub for the beautification of the Midland Girl Scout Center landscaping. Mrs. McMann, civic chairman, will administer this project as the club's Arbor Day civic project.

Mrs. Billie Gilbert, director to the Midland Woman's Club, announced the "Walk Into Spring With Swartz" style show and luncheon Friday from 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. The event is $8 a person, with benefits from the fund-raiser going to the Midland Woman's Club.

For Yucca's annual pilgrimage, the club will gather at the home of Mrs. Merle Shows, a member, to view the bluebonnets March 31 at Horse Shoe Bay. While the members are in the area, they also plan to visit the Wild Basin Wilderness in Austin. The club has made donations to the Wilderness area.

Club members will also visit in the Horseshoe Bay homes of Mr. and Mrs. John Seay and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Burkett.

HUMOR IN UNIFORM

From Reader's Digest

Visiting the base dispensary in Orlando, Fla., I overheard a conversation between a newly retired Naval chief petty officer and a medic. "Well, how do you like civilian life?" asked the medic.

"Terrible," the old chief said gruffly. "All those people around and nobody in charge!"

While I was in basic training at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., my drill sergeant, making his morning announcements, stated: "Today, gentlemen, I have some good news and some bad news. First, the good. Private Buford will be setting the pace on our morning run."

With this, our platoon was overjoyed, as Private Buford was overweight and terribly slow. But then our drill sergeant finished his statement: "Now for the bad news. Private Buford will be driving a truck."

While my husband was in the service and our daughter still quite young, we emphasized to her the importance of telephone etiquette. We told her not to just answer the phone but to say whose residence it was and who was speaking. And we explained that if the person being called was not there, she should take any messages.

On her first opportunity, she was determined to handle the situation properly. The man calling identified himself as Colonel Hendrick. She asked if he would please spell the name slowly. Amused by the serious tone in her voice, he said, "H as in horse, E as in egg, N as in nose, D as in doggie, R as in rabbit, I as in Indian, C as in cat, K as in kite."

When her father returned, the message on the desk read: "Daddy, call Colonel Horseeggnosedoggierabbitindiancatkite."

In 1946, when my husband-to-be turned 17, he immediately joined the Army. Although he had never even driven a car, he soon found himself, along with about 200 other men of his company, assigned to the Tank Corps at Fort Knox. Since there weren't enough tanks to go around, the Army hit on this solution: During the morning session, half the group would study the theory of driving tanks and then spend the afternoon in actual driving. The second hundred men, including my bemused husband, were to drive tanks in the morning and learn the theory afterward.

All went surprisingly well until my husband took his place at the controls. Shuffling his feet, he clumsily knocked a stray hammer into the gears, and the damaged tank came to a sharp halt. The instructing officer, seated above him, was furious.

Immediately confined to barracks, my husband spent several terrified days wondering if he would be court-martialed. Two weeks later, he received new orders. With unassailable logic, the Army had assigned him to the Anti-Tank Corps.

Members of a local veterans' organization, composed mainly of world War II men, were asked to bring "war souvenirs" to a meeting. Prizes would be awarded for the smallest and the largest items.

Winner in the "smallest" category was a miniature Nazi Party lapel button. Winner in the "largest" category was an object 5'8" tall and weighing 140 pounds — a member's British war bride.

When I entered the Air Force, one of my first ordeals was the issuing of clothes. We newcomers were each given a laundry bag and sent to a large room containing huge stacks of underwear at one end. We were told to strip to our socks, to put all our clothes in the laundry bag, and then to squat on the floor.

I couldn't imagine why we were squatting until the next order: "All those people who wear a small T-shirt, stand up." I watched in wonder at military efficiency as each standing "boot" received his underwear airmail.

'Motor vehicle' no longer applies

AUSTIN — State Comptroller Bob Bullock has good news for mobile home dwellers — their homes are no longer considered motor vehicles under Texas tax law.

"Mobile homes have been considered motor vehicles and subject to registration and the 4 percent motor vehicle sales tax since 1941," Bullock said. "The last legislature changed that law and beginning March 1, we will no longer collect motor vehicle taxes on these homes."

Bullock said people who buy mobile homes will obtain a "document of title" from the Texas Department of Labor and Standards instead of registering it as a motor vehicle and obtaining a "certificate of title" from the Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

The new law basically defines a mobile home as a structure providing at least 320 square feet of living area.

"This means travel trailers will still be taxed as motor vehicles and portable buildings will still be taxed under the sales tax law," Bullock said.

"There will still be a tax on mobile homes which will be collected by the manufacturer," Bullock explained. "During the first year the new law is in effect, the rate will be 4.225 percent of the manufacturer's selling price. After Sept. 1, 1983, the rate drops to 3.25 percent.

"And, there's a use tax provision in the new law," he continued. "This means that anyone who buys a mobile home from an out-of-state dealer is responsible for paying the tax — which will be administered by the Comptroller's Office."

Under the new law, mobile homes will no longer need to have current motor vehicle registration papers when they are sold, but they will need the "document of title" from the Department of Labor and Standards.

Study to question cancer, environment

By DON BRANNING
Hearst Feature Service

Ever since a massive 1959-65 American Cancer Society study disclosed that cigarette smoking causes lung cancer, many questions about the complex links between cancer and other factors in environment and lifestyle have gone unanswered.

For example:

—Smog has cancer-causing elements in it, but has smog ever actually given anyone cancer? If so, how many people have contracted cancer from it?

—Does what we eat and drink give us cancer?

—Although it is known that certain substances — asbestos, for example — can cause cancer, thousands of chemicals are involved in everyday life. What is their link to cancer?

Now, a broad-based effort is being readied to find answers to those and other questions.

In September, the ACS will begin the most extensive study ever of how environment and lifestyle are related to cancer. More than a million Americans, most of them over 50, will participate in the six-year, $12 million study.

More than 85,000 volunteers will elicit some 500 items of information concerning lifestyle and environment from friends and neighbors.

The ACS said it will ask its volunteers to have the lengthy questionnaires answered by persons who have a reasonable expectation of staying in the same area for six years. Participants will be questioned again in 1984, 1986 and 1988. When participants die, death records will be obtained, and data from the questionnaires will be screened.

Jury says no asbestosis

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — The trial of the first suit by a shipyard worker against asbestos manufacturers for failing to warn of health hazards ended when a jury ruled the man had not proved he suffered from asbestosis.

Joseph LaBrecque, 70, who lost his case in U.S. District Court, was one of 300 Electric Boat workers from Groton suing 12 manufacturers — Johns-Manville Corp.; Pittsburgh-Corning Corp.; Union Asbestos & Rubber Co.; Eagle Picker; Eastern Refractories Co. Inc.; The Southern Asbestos Co.; H.K. Porter Co. Inc.; Raybestos-Manhattan Inc.; Cummings Insulation Co. Inc.; Shook and Fletcher Insulation Co.; Sepco Corp.; and Nuclear & Environmental Protection Inc.

The jury deliberated two days before saying there wasn't enough evidence to prove LaBrecque had asbestosis, a lung disease caused by exposure to asbestos.

Don't cut carbohydrates completely

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am 16 years old and want to lose about 10 pounds by cutting out carbohydrates. My mother does not like the idea and told me to write to you. Can we have your opinion? — Peggy, Newark, N.J.

Dear Peggy: In this case, mother knows best. We all need some carbohydrates. You can cut down on them if your intake is excessive without cutting them out completely. In diet, as in most things in life, moderation is the key.

Dear Dr. Solomon: All we hear these days is that it's not good to be fat. Doesn't fat have any use? — Henry, Houston, Texas

Der Henry: There's a difference between being fat and including fat in the diet. It would be a mistake to try to eliminate it completely. Fatty tissue serves to insulate the body, helping to retain body heat and regulating body temperature. It also helps to support and protect vital organs, and is a carrier system for the fat soluble vitamins, A, D, E and K.

Dear Dr. Solomon: You have written that a person could lower his blood pressure by losing weight or by cutting down on salt. But isn't that the same thing? If you cut down on the amount you eat, you'll also cut down on the amount of salt. — Stacey, Tulsa, Okla.

Dear Stacey: There is evidence that weight loss alone can decrease blood pressure in obese patients. In one study, a group of obese patients who lost weight experienced a reduction in blood pressure despite an uncontrolled high intake of sodium. Why this occurs is not completely understood.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Although I am breast feeding my baby, the pediatrician has prescribed an iron supplement. I thought breast milk contained all the nutrients an infant needs. Am I wrong? — Mrs. S.P., Harrisburg, Pa.

Dear Mrs. P.: Breast feeding alone may not prevent iron deficiency, even though almost all of the iron in human milk is absorbed. According to Dr. Philip J. Garry, of the University of New Mexico School of Medicine in Albuquerque, a study of more than 200 infants showed an iron deficiency in breast-fed infants who were not given an iron supplement. He attributed the deficiency to a lack of sufficient iron in human milk to meet the baby's needs.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I was on the pill before I became pregnant. Now that I've given birth, I want to take it once more. Is there any reason I should not do so if I'm breast-feeding my baby? — Clara, Sacramento, Calif.

Dear Clara: The American Academy of Pediatrics has stated that oral contraceptives are safe for mothers who breast-feed their babies. There is some indication that long-term use may suppress the quantity of milk, but this is not considered a serious problem.

There have been no long-term adverse effects noted on the growth and development of children whose mothers took oral contraceptives while breast-feeding.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

MENTAL HEALTH UPDATE

Mental health troubles can affect everyone

By KENNETH H. WOLF
MSSW, SP

Mental problems are thought to afflict approximately 15 percent of all Americans each year. It is also estimated that 10-15 percent of the people who go to doctors with physical complaints have mental problems which are either partially or totally responsible for the physical complaints. Mental problems affect all of society in a negative way. The person himself, the family, friends, employer and society in general all bear part of the cost of mental problems. Approximately 25 percent of all hospital beds in this country are occupied by mental patients. This amounts to over 300,000 hospitalized mental patients. Of course, the vast majority of people with mental problems do not require hospitalization because their problems are mild enough to be treated on an outpatient basis.

Mental problems can be caused by situational stress, physical problems or hereditary problems. Situational stress occurs through contact and interaction with one's environment and includes marital, family, social and job-related stresses. Physical problems such as injuries to the brain or metabolic disorders may also produce mental problems. Heredity is thought to be a causative factor in some of the more severe mental illnesses, but the exact role of heredity is presently not clear.

Mental problems, usually of mild intensity and duration, can and do affect everyone at one time or another. The reason for this is that the stress of everyday living affects everyone and sometimes this stress reaches the point where problems, such as anxiety or depression, may develop. Many times the individual is able to work out or work through his problems by himself or with the help and support of family. There are other times when the person turns to a trained mental health professional, such as a psychotherapist, psychologist, family therapist, or clinical social worker, for help. There is still quite a bit of reluctance on the part of many people to seek help for mental problems. Such people think that they should be able to handle all such problems by themselves. A mental problem or symptom, such as anxiety or depression, which persists should not be ignored. The earlier professional treatment is started, the better the chances for an early, successful treatment outcome.

Persistent problems which are ignored will not usually go away and may result in more severe problems later on. In this respect, the treatment of both physical and mental problems are quite similar.

Burleson family guides Greenwood's state bid

By CHAD PUERLING
Sports Writer

His Nueces Canyon football team had just won their first game of the year 28-0 when he decided to hang up the head phones and begin a new life as a rancher in Barksville. But first he had to find a school to send his two sons to that would challenge them academically and athletically.

He called a friend of 20 years, Greenwood Athletic Director Joe Longley, to discuss the programs the small West Texas school had to offer. The next day Herschel Burleson was offered the head basketball coaching job at Class A Greenwood. The Sul Ross graduate hadn't coached a basketball team in nine years but he couln't refuse the offer.

The decision was a good one for Burleson and Greenwood.

Thursday Burleson and his Ranger basketball team will be in Austin fighting for the Class A State Basketball Championship in their first round game against Petty West Lamar at 8:30 a.m. "I'm very happy about the decision I made," he said. "It's worked out well."

The winner of the game will play the winner of the Graford-Snook contest 9:30 a.m. Saturday morning for the State Championship.

Burleson's eldest son, Stuart, will be with his dad during their quest for the state title. As a matter of fact he should be the main key in the cog of the Ranger game. The 6-1 junior led the team in scoring, averaging 25.6 points per game. From his wing position Burleson also grabbed a team high 11 rebounds per outing.

Greenwood runs a double low post offense which relies heavily on the wing position. Larry Dickerson plays oposite Burleson and is the second leading scorer on the team with a 12.5 points per game average.

Sharing duties at the post position are 6-5 sophomore Jim Lee, who transferred from Midland Lee at mid-season, and senior Todd Brooks. Despite his lack of heighth (5-10) Brooks is the second leading rebounder on the team with 209 caroms.

Coach Burleson never strayed far from the courts, because he couldn't. His wife Jane has been coaching girls basketball while he has spent his time on the gridiron. This year her Nueces Canyon team finished second in their district with a 25-2 record. And how much did the husband help his wife? "Well everyone coaches from the stands, but believe me she didn't need my help." Burleson said.

Due to Mrs. Burleson's commitment at the Nueces school the family was seperated until the basketball season was over. "It was hard at first with my family split-up." Burleson said. "I came here just before Thanksgiving but my wife didn't arrive until February 15."

While piling up gas and phone bills the 20-year coach managed to keep his mind on basketball long enough to lead his team to a 27-3 regular season record, bi-district and regional championships, and a state playoff birth. Two of the loses were to larger schools; 4A Pecos 60-55 and 3A Denver City 74-64. The only other blemish was a forfeit to district foe Iraan. Greenwood won the contest 76-42 but used an ineligible player.

Burleson said his Ranger team didn't play all that well in the regionals last week. "Our team defense won it for us in Levelland." he said. "Defense is very important, you can have an off night offensively but that's not true on defense."

This won't be the first trip to the state finals for the 42-year-old mentor but admittedly it has been a long time. "In 1965 I took the girls team from Rock Springs to state." he said.

The opening game against West Petty Lamar is a mystery to Burleson. "I don't even know where the school is." he said. "It's sudden death and luck from now on."

Luck may play a part in deciding who wins the state title but if statistics can fortell the outcome of an event Greenwood seems to have as good a chance as anyone. The Rangers average 68 points per game while holding the opposition to a 48 point average, and they haven't lost a class A game on the court this year.

"We're just happy to be at state, but we have every intention of winning it all." Burleson said. "You've got to remember that everyone there is a winner."

And what if the high expectations don't come about? "You always hear excuses for losing but most of the time it's the opponent." he said. "If we don't win, it will be because of our opponents."

Sooners open NIT with comeback win

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Sometimes, Oral Roberts University basketball coach Ken Hayes has discovered, a Little is enough — especially if it's the Oklahoma Sooners' scoring machine David Little.

The lanky, 6-foot-7 junior forward bombed ORU with 33 points to lead Oklahoma to a stirring, 81-73 comeback victory over the Titans in the first round of the National Invitation Tournament Tuesday night.

After Little scored 13 points in the Titan-controlled first half, Hayes asked his team to apply more pressure to Little in the second.

"He just backed up a little farther," Hayes said. "The guy shoots a set shot from out of range and it goes in."

Hayes said the Titans, who scored the first 11 points of the contest and led 17-3 after eight minutes, may have been "too high" for the game.

Meanwhile, Sooner Coach Billy Tubbs said he "was afraid we weren't ready for the game and that was sure evident in the early going."

Oklahoma, now 20-10, lost to Missouri in the finals of the Big Eight tournament Saturday night.

The Sooners learned of their NIT bid Sunday night and had to get ready in a hurry to meet Oral Roberts in the inaugural game of the 1982 NIT. The two schools had not met since 1977.

"It's a great tribute to our players the way they came back the way they did," Tubbs said.

Tubbs said Oklahoma's Chucky Barnett "wasn't in the flow of the game" until midway through the second half.

Barnett hit 18 of his 24 points in the last 10 minutes of the contest while Oklahoma was preserving leads of up to 10 points.

Oral Roberts, led by Cat Johnson's 20 points and Chris Cantrell's 18, appeared to be in charge with 14 minutes left and a 53-39 lead.

But five jumpers by Little — the Big Eight newcomer of the year with an 18 point average — and the Sooner press allowed Oklahoma to pull even at 55-55 with 9:17 left.

The Sooners will host the winner of the Friday night's game between California Irvine and San Diego State in the second round of the NIT.

Tonight, 10 other teams begin their quest for the NIT title.

Western Kentucky, 19-9, is at Purdue, 14-13; Connecticut, 17-10, travels to Dayton, 19-8; Long Island University, 20-9, is at Illinois, 17-10; Lamar, 22-6, plays at Texas A&M, 18-10, and Washington, 18-9, is at Brigham Young, 17-12.

The Western Kentucky-Purdue clash pits Boilermaker Coach Gene Keady against his former players and recruits. Keady resigned as the Hilltoppers' basketball coach in 1980 for the Purdue job.

"I'm not really happy to be playing against Western ... against the players I recruited and former assistant coaches," Keady said. "It's an unusual situation."

Purdue captured five of its last six games, while Western Kentucky lost the Ohio Valley championship game and an NCAA bid to Middle Tennessee — a team it had defeated twice in the regular season.

"It'll be a strange feeling out there coaching and playing against Gene," said Western Kentucky Coach Clem Haskins, a former assistant to Keady. "He's still very close to all of us."

It's Purdue's third NIT appearance in four years. The Boilermakers finished second in 1979 and third last year.

LIU and Illinois both like to run, and the Blackbirds lead the nation in scoring with 88 points a game.

"We're facing a Long Island team that has more speed and quickness than anyone we've met all season," said Illini Coach Lou Henson. "We think the score of the game will be high."

LIU is led by 6-foot-6 center Riley Clarida, who averages 18 points a game and is the nation's seventh-leading rebounder. Illinois will have the height advantage with two 6-foot-10 players, Bryan Leonard and James Griffin.

BYU goes with a tall front line: Fred Roberts, a 6-10 forward, 6-11 center Greg Kite and 6-8 forward Steve Trumbo. But Cougers Coach Frank Arnold is worried about the Huskies.

"That type of team has given us problems all year," Arnold said. "They are aggressive and very quick and strong."

Lamar, the runner-up in the Southland Conference, and Texas A&M, making its second NIT appearance, did not play each other this season although they are not strangers in postseason play.

Digger's Irish can look to next year

By Ed Palladino
Hearst Feature Service

RUTHERFORD, N.J. — While the rock and roll group Queen blared out some background music, Digger Phelps neatly tucked his suit jacket on the back of a chair and went to work.

Phelps' Irish team was just minutes away being humiliated, 71-58, by a mediocre Seton Hall basketball team — one of the weak clubs in the strong Big East Conference.

But this was before the game and Phelps, in his usual sartorial splendor, was making some X's and O's on the blackboard while trying to devise a way of stopping Seton Hall.

Despite the 7-13 record Notre Dame took to the Meadowlands on Feb. 18, that Irish mystique still brought 15,667 into the arena — its second largest crowd of the season.

After nine consecutive postseason appearances (National Invitation Tournament runner-up in 1973 and eight trips to the National Collegiate Athletic Association event, including a Final Four Berth in 1978), Phelps' will be on the outside this season.

This will be his first losing season since the 6-20 he had in 1971-72, his first year under the famed Golden Dome in South Bend.

During his stay at Notre Dame, Phelps has coached four All-Americans — John Shumate, Garry Brokaw, Adrian Dantley and Kelly Tripucka.

Six of his players — Shumate, Brokaw, Dantley, Bill Hanzlik, Orlando Woolridge and Tripucka — were first-round picks in the National Basketball Association draft. Shumate and Brokaw are now two of his assistants at Notre Dame.

There are some, including Notre Dame Athletic Director Gene Corrigan, who think today's Notre Dame team represents the best coaching job the witty, talkative and often controversial Phelps has done.

Preseason polls had the Irish ranked just outside the Top 20. They were way off base.

With graduation losses of Tripucka, Wooldridge and Tracy Jackson along with the transfer of center Joe Kleine to Arkansas, Notre Dame began the year with only nine scholarship players and with injuries and a short suspension for Cecil Rucker for cutting class, that number was, at one point, reduced to six.

"We have high standards at Notre Dame," Phelps said. "I believe they are the right standards. Here, you are a student first and an athlete second. Winning is great, but it can be blown out of proportion. Things have to be kept in perspective and what these boys do with their lives is more important than winning and losing. What is important is that every player I have coached at Notre Dame has earned a diploma? That's what college is supposed to be all about — that's what these boys are at Notre Dame for."

Because of Notre Dame's insistence that athletes also be students, the school is having a hard time recruiting.

"It is more and more difficult to find the big, talented player who can be accepted at Notre Dame," Phelps admitted.

"We lack size, experience and depth — and it's my fault," he said. "But none of the teams I've coached here have the guts and tenacity of this team.

Louisville's chance at Kentucky may be highlight

An AP Sports Analysis
By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

The last time Kentucky met Louisville in basketball, the legendary Adolph Rupp coached the Wildcats, and Joe B. Hall was still coaching freshmen at Regis College in Denver.

Now, with Hall firmly at the helm of the Kentucky basketball program, the Wildcats are headed for only their second showdown in 23 years with what would seem to be a natural cross-state rival.

While Louisville Coach Denny Crum would like to see the Wildcats and Cardinals play each year, the University of Kentucky side has balked. The Wildcats ARE basketball in Kentucky, they feel, so they have nothing to gain and everything to lose by playing Louisville. Over the years, several bills have been introduced in the Kentucky legislature to force a meeting of the teams — the most recent during this session — but invariably, they stall.

The teams have met 11 times since 1913, most recently in 1959 in Evanston, Ill., in the first game of the NCAA Mideast Regional. Louisville won 76-61.

Kentucky, ranked 15th nationally, can only avoid this second meeting by losing to Middle Tennessee in the first round of the NCAA tournament Thursday at Nashville. The Blue Raiders of Murfreesboro, champions of the Ohio Valley Conference, have a homecourt advantage, of sorts, but that won't stop Hall's gang. Let's say Kentucky by six.

The second-round game is the tough one to pick. Both teams finished on a low note — the Wildcats losing to Alabama, 48-46, in the Southeastern Conference final and the 20th-ranked Cardinals bowing to Memphis State, 73-62, in the Metro Conference title game. The question is: Who has more at stake? Probably Kentucky — three points' worth.

The other Mideast Regional game at Nashville has Indiana versus Robert Morris, the winner advancing against Alabama-Birmingham. We're picking Indiana by six over Robert Morris, but that's as far as the defending national champion Hoosiers get this year. Sun Belt champion Alabama-Birmingham by four.

Mideast at Indianapolis

Southwestern Louisiana vs. Tennessee; winner vs. No. 3 Virginia — It's Alford "Pop" Turner of Southwestern vs. Dale Ellis of Tennessee. No contest: Tennessee by four. Then, it's Ellis vs. Ralph Sampson of Virginia. Again, no contest: Virginia by six.

North Carolina State vs. Tennessee-Chattanooga; winner vs. No. 7 Minnesota — It's not often that 7-foot-3 Randy Breuer of Minnesota has to look up to anyone, but he will when State beats Chattanooga by two. That will match Breuer against 7-5 Wolfpack center Chuck Nevitt, but Breuer and his mates prevail by five.

West at Logan, Utah

Wyoming vs. Southern Cal; winner vs. No. 6 Georgetown — They're not the real Cowboys, but Wyoming can play basketball. The Cowboys by four. Georgetown's enforcer, 7-foot Patrick Ewing, will finally unmask the imposters, though, as the Hoyas prevail by eight.

No. 14 West Virginia vs. North Carolina A&T; winner vs. No. 11 Fresno State — an UPSET SPECIAL, A&T by one over West Virginia, and, look out Fresno. But the Battlin' Bulldogs weather the storm, by four over A&T.

West at Pullman, Wash.

No. 16 Iowa vs. Northeastern Louisiana; winner vs. No. 8 Idaho — Lute Olsen has his Hawkeyes aimed at the regional championships at Provo, Utah. Let's say Iowa by 10 over Northeastern and by two over Idaho.

Pepperdine vs. Pittsburgh; winner vs. No. 4 Oregon State — How the Beavers got seeded second behind Georgetown in their own region probably will remain forever a mystery. Ralph Miller's boys are undaunted, though. Pepperdine by seven over Pitt, but the Waves stumble by eight against Oregon State.

East at Charlotte, N.C.

Ohio State vs. James Madison; winner vs. No. 1 North Carolina — The Dukes labored in near obscurity this season to a 24-5 record, two of those losses coming against Virgnia. In another UPSET SPECIAL, James Madison by three over Ohio State. But, sorry Dukes, North Carolina by 10.

No. 18 Wake Forest vs. Old Dominion; winner vs. No. 9 Memphis State — Old Dominion just doesn't have the horses. Wake Forest by five, but freshman Keith Lee is waiting in ambush. General Lee and Memphis State by four.

East at Uniondale, N.Y.

Pennsylvania vs. St. John's; winner vs. No. 13 Alabama — St. John's has had it's troubles this year, but not with Penn. The Redmen by three, but that's all. Alabama, the cream of this crop, prevails by nine.

Northeastern vs. St. Joseph's; winner vs. Villanova — St. Joe's, upset winner over DePaul in the first round of last year's tournament, has less trouble with Northeastern. The Hawks by eight, but there will be no trip to the regional championships this year for St. Joe's. Villanova prevails by three.

Midwest at Dallas

Boston College vs. San Francisco; winner vs. No. 2 DePaul — B.C. is deceptive, but so is Quintin Dailey of the Dons. San Francisco by one, which brings us to DePaul. Now that the Blue Demons aren't ranked No. 1 going into the tournament, Ray Meyer believes they can win in the first round, and he's right. DePaul by six.

Kansas State vs. Northern Illinois; winner vs. No. 12 Arkansas — Northern who? With the worst record in the tournament, 16-13, the Huskies go home with another loss. K-State by 14. No such luck with Arkansas, and the Razorbacks prevail by seven.

Midwest at Tulsa

Houston vs. Alcorn State; winner vs. No. 10 Tulsa — Houston can probably beat Alcorn, let's say by four, but Tulsa at Tulsa? Never. The Hurricane by six, and that's being kind.

Marquette vs. Evansville; winner vs. No. 5 Missouri — The Purple Aces might be the best team in the state of Indiana this year. Evansville by two over Marquette. And without a healthy Steve Stipanovich (sprained ankle), forget Missouri. Good-bye Tigers; Evansville by four.

Fowlkes may show scouts' blind spots

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — In one month, Alan Fowlkes could be in a San Francisco Giants uniform, proving that many major baseball league scouts have blind spots.

As a high school and college pitcher, all Fowlkes did was throw strikes and win games.

"In high school, as a junior and senior, I was All-CIF (California Interscholastic Federation) with a 20-4 record and didn't get a nibble from big league teams," the right-hander recalled Tuesday at the Giants' spring training camp.

"My junior year in college, I was All-American and still didn't get drafted. As a senior, I won 21 games, set five NCAA records and didn't get drafted until the 10th round. They said I didn't have a major league fastball and would never get past Double-A in pro ball," he said.

The college records, at Cal Poly-Pomona, also included 206 innings pitched his final season.

He has conquered Class AA, earning Pitcher of the Year honors in the Texas League by posting a 14-10 record and 2.79 earned run average for Shreveport last season. It was his first full season in pro baseball.

"I know that 1½ years doesn't seem like much experience, but I think I can make the transition to the majors now," said the 23-year-old pitcher.

He'll get every chance with the Giants. The team's top winner of last season, Doyle Alexander, has refused to report to spring training because of a contract dispute. There appear to be several openings, behind No. 1 man Vida Blue, in the 1982 starting rotation.

Fowlkes played winter baseball in Mexico, going 17-7 with a 1.95 ERA in a three-month season which ended in late January.

"I may be way ahead of the hitters at this point in spring training. I'll probably find out more this weekend when I pitch against Cleveland. It looks like they've got a lot of hitters," Fowlkes said Tuesday.

In Monday's exhibition-season opener, Fowlkes was the Giants' starter against the Oakland A's and retired the only nine batters he faced.

"He throws strikes and is capable of getting his breaking ball over the plate," said Manager Frank Robinson. "He doesn't knock the bat out of anyone's hands with his fastball, but he throws strikes."

Midland's Abila takes Gloves win

FORT WORTH — Midland Boxing Club's Joel Abila, representing the Odessa Region at flyweight, posted a decision victory over Sam Jones of Beaumont Tuesday night as action got under way in the State Golden Gloves Boxing Tournament here at Will Rogers Coliseum.

Using a good left jab and working the body well, Abila chalked up the points against Jones and won all three rounds convincingly to take the decision.

Abila will meet Johnny Chapa of Wichita Falls Thursday night and the winner of that bout will meet the winner of Thursday's Jesse Benavides-Javier Romero fight.

Benavides is the National Golden Gloves, National AAU and World Games Champions at 106 pounds and is in his first year of fighting in thr 112-pound flyweight division.

Lubbock Coronado sinks Bulldogs by 4-1 count

LUBBOCK — The Midland High Bulldogs dropped a 4-1 decision to Lubbock Coronado here Monday afternoon.

Coronado opened the scoring in the first inning with a pair of runs and added one run in each of the third and fifth innings.

The Bulldogs avoided the shutout by picking up a run in the third inning. With one out, Faustino Garando, who had two hits in the game, connected for a double and was brought home on a Peter Galando single. In the game, Galando and Jose Carrasco also had two hits.

Gary Beard threw nine strike outs in going the distance for the Coronado victory while Joel De La Garza (0-2) suffered the loss. Billie Miles pitched three innings in relief.

"We can't seem to punch a run across," said MHS coach Tim Whalen. "We're progressing in the field and our pitching is ok. We are just anemic with the bats. We have a lot of strike outs and are swinging at a lot of bad pitches."

The next game for the Bulldogs will be on Friday in the Midland Tournament of Champions baseball tournament at Cubs Stadium. MHS will take a 2-3 record into the tournament and will face Amarillo Tascosa in their first game.

Randy Pepper gives Lee a split with Plainsmen

LUBBOCK — Midland Lee Rebel Randy Pepper was not only the winning pitcher of record Tuesday night in the second game of a doubleheader against Lubbock Monterey, he also scored the winning run.

With the game tied at six in the top of the seventh, Pepper led off with a single and went to second on a sacrafice by Scott Page. Scott Ullom grounded out sending Pepper to third and then David Matta went to first on a walk.

With runners on the corners and two outs, Matta was sent to second and took off during Monterey pitcher Brian Barbee's windup. Barbee was called for a balk on the attempted pick off which sent Pepper home and gave the Rebels a 7-6 victory.

The Rebels built up a 3-0 lead in the first three innings and led 6-3 going into the bottom of the sixth. Monterey scored three runs to close off the frame sending Lee starter John Denton and reliever Pat Robinson to the bench. Pepper finished the game for the win. Barbee, who relieved Wayne Supak in the sixth, suffered the loss.

In the first game, Monterey scored all its runs in the first three innings while giving up only two for a 4-2 victory.

Rick Dillman, 3-0, went the distance for Monterey while Craig Ray suffered the loss for Lee and Brian Willis pitched in relief.

Valenzuela takes fight to TV's ABC

NEW YORK (AP) — Fernando Valenzuela, the Los Angeles Dodgers' holdout pitcher, said today that his salary should not be dependent upon what other, more established stars are making.

When asked if he deserved more money than such veteran All-Stars as teammate Steve Garvey, Valenzuela said: "One thing has nothing to do with the other."

Things are looking up for Larry Hisle

By The Associated Press

Things are looking up for Larry Hisle.

"Everything right now is on schedule," says the Milwaukee outfielder. "I'm excited, but I know I have a long way to go."

The reason for Hisle's happiness was a home run in exhibition play that helped the Brewers beat the Seattle Mariners 5-2 Tuesday.

Long ball hitting is something Hisle hasn't done much of lately. In 1977 he led the American League in RBI with 119 and also hit 28 home runs that year. In 1978, he hit 34 homers and knocked in 115 runs. But he has missed most of the last three seasons with a shoulder injury and has collected just 13 home runs in that period.

Hisle hit a 400-foot shot to center field off Mariners starter Floyd Bannister for the Brewers' first run. The Brewers broke a 1-1 tie with two fifth-inning runs against losing pitcher Ken Clay. Don Money singled home one run and Charlie Moore got the eventual game-winner in for Milwaukee with a sacrifice fly.

Meanwhile, the Atlanta Braves continued to show some of the strongest pitching in spring training en route to a 1-0 victory over the Baltimore Orioles. Three Atlanta pitchers — Phil Niekro, Larry McWilliams and Rick Matula — extended the Braves' string of scoreless pitching to 34 innings. The Braves' pitching staff, incidentally, has not given up an earned run in 36 innings.

Niekro, McWilliams and Matula combined on a nine-hitter as the Braves edged Baltimore on an unearned run in the ninth inning. The Braves scored after center fielder John Selby dropped Larry Whisenton's routine fly ball. Whisenton reached third on Dale Murphy's single and, one out later, scored on Brook Jacoby's sacrifice fly off Paul Moskau. Scott McGregor and Allan Ramirez each pitched three shutout innings for the Orioles.

Elsewhere, the Pittsburgh Pirates and Kansas City Royals used 49 players and struggled into the 15th inning before Trench Davis' single gave the Pirates a 5-4 victory in the exhibition opener for each team. Len Barker pitched three perfect innings and combined with three other pitchers for a one-hitter as Cleveland beat San Francisco 5-0.

Bridgers' 'fairness' cuts basketball revenues

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — University of New Mexico Athletic Director John Bridgers calls it a matter of "fairness," but for the state's high schools, it translates to a cut in revenues from their athletic endeavors.

Bridgers, meeting with the executive board of the New Mexico Activities Association, Tuesday announced UNM would require a rental fee from the association for the use of University Arena, University Stadium and the Lobo baseball field.

Bridgers said the University Facilities Committee had approved the rental fee, which would amount to 4 percent of the gross receipts resulting from athletic events such as the State Basketball Tournament, the annual North-South All-Star basketball and football games and similar events where university facilities were used.

The rental fee proposal would go into effect next year and would not affect the boys State Tournament which gets under way today.

The boys basketball tournament grossed an estimated $205,000 in 1981, according to New Mexico Activities Association Executive Director Jim Odle. Based on that figure, the 4 percent rental fee would total close to $8,000.

Bridgers told the association's leadership Tuesday the university "is not against you making money, we just want to break even."

"We are trying to survive," said Bridgers, who added that only 17 percent of UNM's athletic budget is financed through state appropriations.

After listening to Bridgers, the executive board of the NMAA voted to discuss the matter with UNM President William Davis. But Odle conceded the association was caught between a rock and a hard place.

"It's like having a $500 car repair bill," Odle said. "It's unexpected, but there's not a lot you can do."

Bridgers told the executive board UNM now charges student groups the 4 percent rental fee for any rock concerts or other entertainment sponsored by the groups.

Sampson, Magee head AP star squad

NEW YORK (AP) — Ralph Sampson of Virginia and Kevin Magee of California-Irvine today were named for the second straight year to The Associated Press first-team All-America squad.

Sampson, college basketball's Player of the Year last season, led the Cavaliers to a 29-3 season and the No. 3 ranking in the final AP poll of the season.

In his three seasons at Virginia, the 7-foot-4 junior has led Virginia to 82 victories, the most in history by an Atlantic Coast Conference team over a three-year period.

LAST SEASON, Magee, a 6-8 senior, became the first player to finish in the top four in scoring, rebounding and field-goal percentage. This year, his statistics are equally impressive. He's scoring 26.3 points per game on a shooting percentage of 64.1 percent, and his rebounding average is 12.5 per game.

The rest of the first team includes Terry Cummings of DePaul, 6-9 junior forward; Eric "Sleepy" Floyd of Georgetown, 6-3 senior guard, and Quintin Dailey of San Francisco, 6-3 junior guard.

The second team is comprised of 6-10 forward Keith Lee of Memphis State, the only freshman on the first three teams; Dale Ellis of Tennessee, 6-7 junior forward; James Worthy of North Carolina, 6-9 junior forward; Lester Conner of Oregon State, 6-4 senior guard, and Terry Teagle of Baylor, 6-5 senior swingman.

Making up the third team are Dominique Wilkins of Georgia, 6-7 junior forward; Paul Pressey of Tulsa, 6-5 senior swingman; Ricky Frazier of Missouri, 6-6 senior forward; Ricky Pierce of Rice, 6-5 senior forward, and Dan Callandrillo of Seton Hall, 6-2 senior guard.

SAMPSON IS considered by all but a few to be potentially the most dominating player in the game — certainly at a college level, at least. He led Virginia to the No. 3 seeding in this year's NCAA tournament despite the loss of three key Cavalier players — Jeff Lamp, Lee Raker and Terry Gates, all of whom graduated.

With his 172 career dunks and 354 blocked shots, Sampson can be awesome and entertaining. On other occasions, he can go practically unnoticed on the court.

"This year, we not only needed his offense and defense, but his leadership," says Virginia Coach Terry Holland. "Like Bill Russell did for the Celtics, Ralph has made everybody around him better."

Magee, likewise, is a dominating player, not just a gunner. His field-goal percentage attests to that. He also has been an ironman for Cal-Irvine, which earned a National Invitation Tournament berth with its 22-6 record. He played 1,025 minutes this season for an average of 36½ per game.

DePaul's Cummings, an ordained minister, was needed to replace Mark Aguirre this season. He has surpassed all expectations. Aguirre, a first-team All-American last year, averaged 23.0 points before he bolted for the pros; Cummings has averaged 22.4. Aguirre averaged 8.6 rebounds; Cummings is averaging 11.7. And the second-ranked Blue Demons finished with a 26-1 season.

FLOYD, THE Most Valuable Player of the Big East tournament, is well known as a scorer, but the Boston Celtics' Red Auerbach says he will be drafted into the National Basketball Association for his defensive ability.

"It's his hand speed on defense," Auerbach says.

Floyd had 57 steals and averaged 16.8 points per game this season as sixth-ranked Georgetown compiled a 26-6 record. He also is a fine rebounding guard, averaging 3.5 a game.

Dailey's fine season was marred when he was charged with five felonies, including attempted rape, earlier this month. He pleaded innocent to all charges and remained with the Dons, who have thrived on his 25.1 points and 5.3 rebounds per game. San Francisco enters the NCAA tournament with a 25-5 record.

The freshman Lee was the surprise of the season. Recruited from across the river in West Memphis, Ark., the slender forward was named the Metro Conference player of the year after compiling averages of 18.5 in scoring and 11.4 in rebounding for Memphis State.

Ellis, Southeastern Conference player of the year, averaged 21.3 points and 6.2 rebounds for Tennessee. Worthy, MVP of the ACC tournament, led top-ranked North Carolina to a 27-2 season with his 15.3 points and 6.6 rebounds a game, along with 71 assists, 46 steals and 31 blocked shots.

Conner averages 14.6 points for No. 4 Oregon State, and he had an amazing 141 assists. Teagle became the all-time leading scorer in the Southwest Conference this season with 2,189, averaging 22.2 this season.

WILKINS, called the living instant replay for his flamboyant style, led Georgia with a 21.1 scoring average and 7.9 rebounds a game. Pressey holds the game, season and career records in steals and assists at Tulsa. The junior college transfer has 187 steals and 186 assists in two years, including single-game highs of eight steals and 12 assists.

NFL's credit would soften strike

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

The National Football League won't be hurting for cash if its players strike next fall.

For the players, it might be a different story.

Unlike major league baseball, the NFL doesn't have a multimillion-dollar strike fund. It does, however, have a $150 million line of credit extended by the California-based Crocker National Bank.

For every game wiped out by a players' strike, the teams involved would receive the amount equivalent to what they would have made had the game been played. And the league would have several years to pay back the loan, softening the effects of the strike.

The union, one official said, has enough money to maintain its own operations through a full-season strike — but the union doesn't pay the players.

"We've been telling them to save their money, to keep the jobs they have in the offseason or to look for a job for then if they don't have one," the union spokesman said. "If they're a member of our credit union, they can borrow from it. Also, we hear that more and more players' wives are getting jobs."

He added that the union might get into the job-placement business in the event of a strike, trying to match players and employment opportunities.

Baseball had $50 million in strike insurance last summer when major league players staged a 50-day strike. The NFL discussed with a broker taking out such insurance but rejected the idea, a management repsentative said.

"The feeling then (last year) was we'd be better off with this (the line of credit) because when we spoke about the possibility of an insurance policy, the expectancy of a baseball strike was increasing," said Chuck Sullivan, vice president of the New England Patriots and president of the NFL Management Council.

"And considering that there was one (baseball strike) and the insurer had to pay out, the rates would be prohibitive now. This way, it turns out to be cheaper for us."

Sullivan said that unlike one or two baseball teams, which may have made more money during the strike than they would have made by playing games, no NFL team will profit from a work stoppage.

"There's no possibility of that," Sullivan said. "That was one of the public-relations negatives that baseball experienced. Nobody'll make money if there's a strike because we have to pay it back. The only thing we're talking about is a cash flow and, basically, the way this is structured, if there were a strike, the impact would just be spread out over a longer period."

Next week, when the players meet in Albuquerque, N.M. (the owners will be meeting at the same time about 400 miles to the southwest in Phoenix, Ariz.), they'll be making the major decisions about labor actions. Among them could be the selection of a strike date.

Navratilova back to winning ways

DALLAS (AP) — Given a choice of running around a tennis court in a high-pressure tournament and running a quarter-mile, Martina Navratilova says she'll take tennis, every time.

Navratilova was a resounding winner in her first match of the Avon Championships of Dallas, a trouncing of Kathy Horvath late Tuesday. It was the first tennis the world's No. 2-ranked woman had played since the end of February.

"I didn't play for two weeks while I trained for the Superstars, the longest time off from tennis I've had in a long time," Navratilova said after beating Horvath. "I'm glad I did the Superstars because I stayed in shape. After training for the quarter mile, I can say tennis is easy."

The two-time Wimbledon champion, seeded first in this week's women's pro tour stop, said the Superstars competition — in which women athletes from all sports compete for cash prizes — did not keep her off the practice court for long.

"Once I got back to Dallas I practiced for four hours a day. I was a little nervous at the beginnning of the match tonight, but I calmed down and got it going after that," she said.

If she was nervous, she didn't show it.

Playing her vicious serve-and-volley game to perfection, Navratilova took the first set 6-0 and was leading 3-0 in the second when Horvath retired with a shoulder complaint.

Horvath "is better than she played today," Navratilova said.

Navratilova has won every match she has played in 1982, has won all four Avon events she has entered and is the tour's leading money-winner.

However, she has yet to meet Chris Evert Lloyd, ranked No. 1 in the world by the computer ratings, or Tracy Austin, ranked third.

Pete Rose is unable to practice because of back spasms, but it didn't keep him from reading a children's book by teammate Tug McGraw. Rose says he'll open the season as usual.

Rose is treated just like a horse

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP) — It seems fitting that Pete Rose's aching back is being treated with butazolidin, the pain-killing drug that got Dancer's Image disqualified as winner of the Kentucky Derby in 1968.

Pete is a baseball horse — the modern "Iron Horse," scrappy, unyielding, tough as-nails, at age 40 still a frisky colt with a built-in secret for survival.

So there's no way this 5-foot-11, 203-pound hunk of guts, grit and gristle is going to let a little back trouble deter his bid to overtake Ty Cobb's once-unthinkable record of 4,191 career hits.

"I'll be in there swinging when the regular season opens," the stubby first baseman of the Philadelphia Phillies insisted Tuesday after going through his recuperative routine at the club's training quarters.

"My eyesight could go tomorrow but, barring that or some other calamity, on my personal timetable I figure I should break Cobb's record just before the All-Star game of 1984."

HAVING SURPASSED Stan Musial's National League mark of 3,631 hits last season, Rose now has set his sights first on Hank Aaron's figure of 3,771 hits collected in both the National and American Leagues, and then the great Cobb to become the "hittingest" man in all baseball history.

"I don't like to sound egotistical," Rose said, "but I led the league in hits in the shortened season last year and batted .325 to get second behind Bill Madlock.

"I haven't missed a game since late in 1978 when I was with the Reds and there hasn't been a day since I joined the Phillies that I haven't been in the lineup."

That's a total of 464 consecutive games, not exactly a threat to the record 2,130-game streak by the original Iron Horse, Lou Gehrig, but in his 19 years this durable demon has been virtually indestructible.

Rose considers it part luck and part heritage that in all his career he has never had a serious injury, only minor nagging ailments which most times he refused to reveal.

"Sports are easy when you are 100 per cent," he said, "hard when you play in pain."

He refuses to give in to either pain or age.

In 1967 he suffered a separated shoulder diving for a ball in Dodger Stadium's leftfield and the next year broke a thumb, also diving for a ball. In 1976, he continued to play with six bone chips in his elbow which he refused to have removed by surgery.

ROSE'S NEWEST ailment was freakish. Playing tennis in Cincinnati 2½ weeks ago, he felt a twinge in his back when he hit a forehand.

The next morning he could hardly move. He had to be helped out of bed. He couldn't bend down to tie his shoes. He wasn't able to leave the house for almost a week.

Improvement has been steady since he reported to camp and has began receiving treatment and drug injections, including "bute."

Examination showed no ruptured disc or other serious ailment, just a muscle spasm. It could have happened, docs told him, if he had been 25.

"I was born with a strong body," Pete said. "I had a tough dad who told me how to take care of it. I don't smoke or drink. I get my sleep. I don't have any bad habits ... I play tennis five times a week. I train hard. I feel like I'm 21."

ROSE SAID, while he has refused to surrender to age, he has learned to live within his limitations.

"I use a shorter and lighter bat and choke up on it," he said. "I am not a power hitter so I don't try to hit home runs. I am not a reckless base stealer so I don't steal bases.

"But I am aggressive. When I get a single I think of second base. I go from first to third on a single.

"I appreciate records but when I'm through I'd like to be remembered not for my statistics but my aggressiveness and consistency."

Rose speaks about his teammates, past and present, with a small boy reverence but it approaches idolatry when he talks of Joe DiMaggio, the New York Yankees' Hall of Fame outfielder.

"I am in awe of DiMaggio," he concedes. "We made a trip to Japan together. I just sat across the table and stared at him. DiMaggio is a star. He is way up here, all the rest of us below."

Lowly Clippers rip San Antonio again

By The Associated Press

Don't tell the San Antonio Spurs that the San Diego Clippers have the worst team in the National Basketball Association.

San Diego, 16-46, trails the first-place Los Angeles Lakers by 26 games in the Pacific Division, and the Clippers have won only two of their last 17 contests. But both of those victories have come against the Midwest Division-leading Spurs, including a 138-127 decision Tuesday night.

"Thank God we only have one more game left with the Clippers," said San Antonio Coach Stan Albeck. "They should have sent limos to the airport for us. There are no surprises in the NBA. You have to play each game hard and if you don't, you can expect problems."

Tom Chambers had 34 points and 12 rebounds to lead the Clippers, while Michael Brooks added 33 points for San Diego and George Gervin had 40 for San Antonio.

While Albeck believes the Spurs suffered a letdown against San Diego, Chambers said his team "could have beaten anybody" in the two victories over San Antonio.

"We just played good, aggressive basketball and good defense," said the rookie forward. "We didn't play Gervin very well the first half, but we did much better in the second half. We've had some close games and we've been playing well recently. We just haven't won any."

"We played well together tonight, especially down the stretch," said Brooks, referring to the 46 points the Clippers scored in the fourth quarter. "We're starting to play well together. Next year, we'll be better when we all go to summer camp together and play a full season."

The Spurs, who have lost two in a row since beating Milwaukee 171-166 in triple overtime last Saturday, got a season-high 28 points from backup guard Mike Bratz, while Mike Mitchell added 20 points.

Charlie Criss and Michael Wiley supported Chambers and Brooks with 23 and 20 points, respectively, for San Diego.

Gervin had 26 points in the first half as the Spurs went ahead 67-64. The Clippers took a 92-88 lead into the final period and outscored San Antonio 46-39 in the fourth quarter.

Lakers 105, Kings 99

Rockets 103, Bucks 91

Allen Leavell scored 25 points and passed for eight assists for the Rockets, who cut San Antonio's Midwest lead to 3½ games. Elvin Hayes added 15 points and 16 rebounds and Robert Reid 19 points and 11 rebounds, eight in the fourth quarter, for Houston.

Bulls 109, Sonics 104

Dwight Jones scored 10 of his 16 points in the fourth quarter and Ronnie Lester added eight of his 10 in the same span as Chicago rallied from 15 points behind to beat Seattle.

The Sonics grabbed an 80-65 lead with 2:08 remaining in the third quarter, but the Bulls responded with a 10-0 spurt as Artis Gilmore contributed six of his team-high 22 points. Chicago then got its first lead since the opening seconds, 85-84, on a basket by Lester.

Gus Williams, who had 25 points for Seattle, later tied the score 87-87, but Chicago made the next eight points and never relinquished the lead again.

Warriors 92, Pacers 85

Johnny Davis, the Pacers' leading scorer with a 16.8 average, was held to seven points, the first time in 44 games he was held to fewer than 10.

Hawks 120, Nuggets 106

Tom McMillen added a season-high 26 points for the Hawks, while Denver got 29 points from Alex English.

Atlanta, which led by 15 points at halftime, 69-54, saw the Nuggets trim the deficit to three, 106-103, with 7:13 left. But Denver had only one field goal the rest of the way.

Suns 103, Bullets 95

The Bullets trailed by 16 early in the third quarter, but John Lucas and Kevin Grevey led the rally that cut the lead to 78-76 early in the fourth quarter. Then two straight three-point plays by Robinson restored an eight-point bulge.

Knicks 120, Jazz 106

Maurice Lucas scored 21 points and added 20 rebounds as New York had five players with 18 or more points against Utah.

Michael Ray Richardson led the Knicks with 22 points, Campy Russell had 21, Bill Cartwright 19 and Randy Smith 18. Adrian Dantley led the Jazz with a game-high 28 points and Darrell Griffith scored 23.

NFL explores LA expansion

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Exploratory talks have been held toward an arrangement that could take the Los Angeles Coliseum Commission out of the Oakland Raiders' suit against the National Football League and put an NFL expansion team in Los Angeles.

NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle told the Associated Press Tuesday night that attorneys representing the league and the Coliseum Commission met recently, but he said, "there is no deal and there is nothing close."

A LOS Angeles sportscaster had reported earlier in the day that the NFL and the Coliseum Commission were on the verge of an agreement that would put an NFL expansion team in the city under the possible ownership of Cleveland Browns owner Art Modell.

The anti-trust suit filed by the L.A. Coliseum Commission and the Raiders over the NFL's refusal to allow the team to move south from Oakland to Los Angeles is scheduled for a retrial next Monday. The first trial last summer ended in a hung jury. Jurors voted 8-2 in favor of allowing such a move. A unanimous verdict was needed.

The Coliseum has been vacant since the Los Angeles Rams moved to Anaheim prior to the 1980 season. An agreement between the Coliseum Commission and the league would leave the Raiders without an ally in their proposed move.

"There was a meeting within the last few days to explore settlement possibilities," a high-placed Coliseum Commission source told the AP. "At this time, we have not received the details of those discussions and no settlement has been made. We are currently continuing preparations to go to trial on March 15."

JIM HEALY of radio station KLAC quoted what he described as a very reliable source close to the Coliseum Commission as saying there was "a 70-30 chance of such a settlement (between the Commission and the NFL) within a few days."

Modell, at his home in suburban Cleveland, denied that such a deal was in the works.

"There is no foundation to it, no truth to it. The league has not decided to move into Los Angeles with expansion," Modell said in an interview with Associated Press Radio.

Healy reported that terms of the settlement would call for the Coliseum to get an expansion team in either 1983 or 1984. The exact time is yet to be worked out, the sportcaster said.

Healy reported that Modell has been in Los Angeles for nearly a month and tentative plans call for him to own the expansion team. Modell would then sell the Browns, Healy added.

HOWEVER, Modell said: "I'm not a prospect. I have my own ballclub here."

The Browns owner said he had been in Los Angeles principally to deal with matters relating to the retrial of the suit and some television matters for the league.

Cubs keep Bill Buckner

MESA, Ariz. (AP) — From the tenor of off-season trade talks, Bill Buckner thought the last place he'd be for spring training would be back with the Chicago Cubs.

But the veteran first baseman is here again — mainly due to a renegotiated contract that reportedly makes him the highest-paid player on the team at $600,000 per year.

"It really doesn't mean that much to me," he said after Monday's workout. "The money is nice because it's part of making a living, but you forget about it once the season starts."

During the off-season, though, Buckner made it no secret that he wanted out of the Cub organization. Five years on losing teams was all he could take, he said, and he wanted more money besides.

"There was a lot of talk. A deal with the Dodgers was even mentioned," said Buckner, who spent eight seasons in Los Angeles before being dealt to Chicago in 1976. "The way I look at it, as long as teams are interested in you, you must be doing something right. If no one was interested in you, then it's time to start worrying."

Ironically, Cubs' Vice President and General Manager Dallas Green said he tried to accommodate the 32-year-old Buckner and send him to another club "but there wasn't as much interest in him as I thought there would be.

"Everybody was talking about trying to fill two or three spots. They weren't looking for that one player," Green said. "After considering what they wanted and what they were offering, it wasn't what I felt was equitable for the Chicago Cubs."

Buckner shrugged and said, "I guess it was just talk. That happens in baseball. I'm a Cub and that's what I plan on staying. I'd just as soon stay in Chicago now. I like the area and I don't care to move."

When Green assumed his dual positions with Chicago last year, he said Buckner was already the highest-paid Cub at $310,000 per season "and there was no reason to renegotiate.

"After we started signing some free agents, Bill was no longer the highest paid," added Green. "It was then that we sat down and thought about modifying his contract."

"He told me: 'I don't know what you can do. I haven't seen you play,'" Buckner recalled. "I told him: 'Dallas, where have you been? Haven't you been managing the Philadelphia Phillies? Didn't you see me hit those two home runs off your best pitcher last year?'"

"Bill had his say and got a new contract," said Green, who at one time was charged with being "full of bull" by Buckner.

"Those things he said were out of frustration and emotion," said Green. "Bill and I have talked things over and he's looking forward to doing some things to inspire the Cubs."

Last season, Buckner said he had his "best year overall" at .311 with 10 home runs and 75 runs batted in.

NHL has busy trading day in rush to solidify for playoffs

By The Associated Press

National Hockey League general managers had a busy day swapping players in a final rush to solidify their rosters for the playoffs before the trading deadline expired.

The deadline was midnight Tuesday and before it passed, the St. Louis Blues made over a portion of their roster.

The Vancouver Canucks sent goalie Glen Hanlon to St. Louis for right wings Tony Currie and Jim Nill, goalie Rick Heinz and the Blues' 1983 fourth-round draft pick.

"Glen Hanlon is an established NHL goaltender," said Blues President-General Manager Emile Francis, who also fired Coach Red Berenson Tuesday and took the coaching reins himself. "His age and experience will be a definite asset to our hockey club.

"I believe that with Mike Liut and Glen Hanlon, we have the finest goalkeeping in the Natioal Hockey League."

"They're trading for a good group of hockey players," said Hanlon, 25. "I just hope that, when I leave here, this organization has gotten something out of me."

Francis then picked up 34-year-old defenseman Guy Lapointe from Montreal for a 1983 third-round draft pick and future considerations. Lapointe, who had asked to be traded, is a veteran of six Stanley Cup championship teams, a first-team all-star once and a second-team all-star three times.

"Lapointe brings to this team a great deal of experience," said Francis. "His addition to our team will not only aid us on the blueline but also on the power play, where he has considerable experience and expertise."

Kimball

PROVO, Utah (AP) — More than 19,000 people watched as Mormon Church President Spencer W. Kimball, living in relative seclusion since undergoing skull surgery last year, made his first public appearance in seven months.

Still weak from complications that followed his operation, Kimball was helped Tuesday onto a platform at Brigham Young University during ceremonies dedicating the 12-story Spencer W. Kimball Tower.

Kimball, who will be 87 this month, is the leader of the 4.9 million member Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Randolph

WASHINGTON (AP) — There are members of Congress who read about Franklin D. Roosevelt's 100 days in their grade school texts, and then there is Sen. Jennings Randolph — who helped shape the New Deal legislaton.

Two members are older, Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., who is 81, and Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss., who turned 80 last August. But Pepper arrived in 1936, and Randolph has 15 years seniority on Stennis.

"Jennings Randolph was a close witness to and participant in some of the most dramatic events in modern American history," said fellow West Virginian Sen. Robert C. Byrd, also a Democrat.

"The New Deal brought hope where there was despair," Randolph said. "These reforms have changed the face of America and have been woven into the fabric of American life and they will not be torn out."

Vidal

CITY OF COMMERCE, Calif. (AP) — Author Gore Vidal, saying he is "the only serious candidate," has become an official contender for the Democratic nomination to the U.S. Senate.

The novelist told reporters at the county office he has written and talked about politics for a long time and has decided "the time has come for me to stop talking about it."

He called himself the "grass roots candidate" and said he has been heartened by his speaking tour in cities and communities throughout the state for the last year and a half.

With biting words about his chief opponent for the Democratic nomination, Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., Vidal called Brown "no longer a viable candidate" because polls show him to be unpopular.

Other Democrats who have expressed interest in seeking the June 8 primary nomination for the seat held by retiring Republican Sen. S. I. Hayakawa include Fresno Mayor Daniel Whitehurst and state Sen. Paul Carpenter of Cypress.

Vidal plans to rely on friends — led by investor Max Palevsky and producer Norman Lear — to raise $1 million in campaign funds, he said, but clarified later Tuesday that Lear is currently working on a television special and is not involved in his campaign.

Asked his principal qualification for running for office, Vidal, who wrote "1876," "Burr," and "Myra Breckenridge," cited his 1960 congressional campaign in New York. He said although he lost, he outpolled presidential candidate John F. Kennedy in his district.

Matthau

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — About 300 people looked on as Walter Matthau was honored with a star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame.

On Tuesday, Matthau became the 1,745th celebrity to be honored by having his name engraved on one of the golden brown stars that fan out along the sidewalks on Hollywood Boulevard and Vine Street.

Matthau has appeared in such movies as "Charade," "The Odd Couple," "Hello, Dolly," "First Monday in October" and, most recently, "Buddy, Buddy."

Honorees who receive a star must pay a $3,000 fee that goes to defray expenses.

LONDON (AP) — Prince Edward, the third son and youngest of Queen Elizabeth II's four children, celebrates his 18th birthday today and the queen has sent him a birthday cake.

Edward was spending the day at Gordonstoun School in Scotland, where he is preparing to take exams in advanced English, history and politics.

Reports on his progress say he is academically bright and is expected to go on to a university.

Getting in a little practice before the big event are Victor Horn, left, and Roy Darden, both members of the Downtown Lions Club, which will sponsor this Saturday's 25th annual Pancake Jamboree at Dellwood Mall. Horn is chairman of service and Darden is chairman of cooking for the Jamboree, which will be staged from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Lions Club prepares long shopping list

What if you had to shop for as many as 9,000 to 10,000 persons for just one day?

This is the challenge facing the Downtown Lions Club as it prepares for its 26th annual Pancake Jamboree, scheduled Saturday in the Dellwood Mall Shopping Center.

Brad Blackburn, co-chairman of the acquisition committee, has placed orders for one ton of pancake mix, 2,200 pounds of link sausage, 65 cases of syrup, 300 pounds of butter chips, 5,000 individual half-pints of milk and a like number of orange drink, and two cases of coffee, among other things. Arrangements also have been made to get additional supplies should they be needed Saturday.

The Lions Club, however, has it over many eating places in that it will have plenty of help, with the more than 300 club members handling all mixing, cooking, serving and clean-up assignments. The workers also are experienced, many of them having participated in any number of previous Jamborees.

The Jamboree will open at 7 a.m. and will operate until 8 p.m., with special entertainment, ranging from bands to choral groups, to vocalists, to instrumentalists, to dancers, to judo performers, provided throughout the day.

Jack Darden, general chairman, said the pancake flippers have been warming up for the last several days in order to be in top shape for the all-day performance at the Mall. Darden also said that several changes have been made to speed up the serving lines.

Tickets, priced at $2.50 each, are being sold in advance by club members. Holders of VIP or patron tickets, priced at $5 each, will be accorded special VIP treatment upon their arrival. Bells will ring, trumpets will sound and the roll of drums will herald their arrival. They then will be escorted immediately to their places at cloth-covered dining tables in a specially-designated area where they will receive food service without have to go through the serving line.

George Loudamy, ticket chairman, said regular and VIP tickets also will be available at the mall entrance Saturday.

Jerry Speck, president of the club, said every effort is being made to establish a new attendance record this year, hopefully in the neighborhood of 10,000 persons. He said that all proceeds will be used to fund the club's multiple projects and activities for the year, including sight and hearing conservation, youth welfare, senior citizens assistance, eye bank and a number of charitable endeavors.

"The Jamboree is a community-wide event," Speck said. "The public is invited and urged to participate in the fun, eating pancakes to their hearts' delight and thereby helping Midland Lions to help others in a wide variety of ways, showing them that we care."

Elvis Presley's estate to become museum

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The City Council has approved a development plan submitted by the trustees of Elvis Presley's estate to convert Graceland into a museum for tourists.

Officials voted for the plan Tuesday and also moved to allow the estate to construct a parking lot across the street from the late rock 'n' roll singer's mansion.

The 20-room, Georgian-style home will be open to the public by early June, said Jack Soden of Jack Soden & Associates of Kansas City, Mo., the development firm that will manage the museum.

Except for the addition of some shops, concession stands and display areas, Soden said Graceland will not be changed. Initially, only the first floor of the mansion will be open to tourists.

The city had considered buying Graceland and turning it into a museum ever since Presley's death on Aug. 16, 1977. Those plans were abandoned earlier this year when the estate said it wanted to undertake the museum project.

The graves of Presley, his parents, Vernon and Gladys Presley, and his grandmother are in the Meditation Garden, on the south end of the grounds. Tourists have been allowed to visit the graves free of charge since early 1978.

For condemned women, legends haunt history

By KRISTIN GAZLAY
Associated Press Writer

Legend says Chipita Rodriguez puffed on corn shuck cigarettes as the oxcart carrying her to her death rumbled toward the mesquite tree lawmen used to hang her in 1863.

She was accused of waylaying a horse trader and murdering him for his gold. Her accomplice, Juan Silvera, got five years in jail. Ms. Rodriguez got the noose.

She was buried beneath the mesquite tree on the banks of the Nueces River near San Patricio, the only one of eight women sentenced to die in Texas actually put to death.

Legend says she walks the banks of the Nueces River every time a woman is condemned in Texas.

If true, her ghost gets little exercise. Texas juries and judges have been stingy in condemning women. At present, two women are under sentence of death in Texas, compared with 165 men on death row. They are Linda May Burnett, 34, convicted in the execution-style shooting death of a 2-year-old near Winnie, Texas, and Pamela Lynn Perillo, convicted of a thrill killing.

Miss Perillo, 26, of Lynwood, Calif., sentenced in August 1980 to die by lethal injection, told police that she and a fellow hitchhiker looped ropes around the necks of two men and pulled on the ends until the victims strangled.

She recounted how she watched the men writhe in agony for about 10 minutes each.

Assistant District Attorney Bob Moen pressed jurors to sentence Miss Perillo to death for the murder of Bob Skeens, of Houma, La., and the panel complied after six hours of deliberations.

"How could one stand over a human being and watch him writhe in front of you as his life slips away? Yet she is so engrossed by it that she does it again," he told the panel.

The first woman condemned to die in Texas was Pamela Mann, who operated Houston's Mansion House Hotel in the days of the Republic.

Ms. Mann was convicted of forgery and sentenced to be hanged, but the second president of the Republic of Texas, Mirabeau B. Lamar, granted her clemency and she died a wealthy woman.

"Straight 8" Emma Oliver of San Antonio got her nickname by killing eight men during the 1950s. Her death sentence was commuted to life in prison by Gov. Allan Shivers. Her favorite rocking chair was brought to her prison cell, where she eventually died of cancer.

Fortuneteller Maggie Morgan was convicted and sentenced to death for her part in the 1960 murder of a Houston woman. Her sentence too was commuted to life in prison.

Carolyn Ann Lima was saved from electrocution about four hours before officials were going to shave her head and lead her to the electric chair.

Ms. Lima and her boyfriend, Leslie Ashley, were convicted in 1963 of the murder of Fred Tomes, whose nude body was doused with gas and burned in a drainage ditch near Houston in February 1961. Ashley testified against her and was later sent to a state mental asylum.

Ms. Lima later won a new trial and her charges were reduced from capital murder to murder. She was sentenced to five years and eventually released. Her mother now operates a beauty parlor in Houston, and tells reporters who telephone to leave her daughter alone.

Mary Lou Anderson was sentenced to death August 1978, convicted in the death of her father in Sugar Land, near Houston. Prosecutors pressed for the death penalty against Ms. Anderson, contending she hired a man to murder her father and stepmother for his insurance money.

Woman recalls good times, bad times

By KRISTIN GAZLAY
Associated Press Writer

GATESVILLE, Texas (AP) — Linda May Burnett has plenty of solitude now to recollect what she used to be. It's a bittersweet bonus, says the former housewife, that comes with being on death row.

"Now I live in the past," said Mrs. Burnett, who spends about 23 hours a day alone in her yellow-walled cell at the women's prison here. "The last six months I have really come to grips with myself as a person — as Linda. It's nice to think these past three years could count for something."

The memories she likes to share are sketched in vivid detail — peaceful days when she was free, tending to kids in the neighborhood and attending PTA meetings. A life she says revolved around her family, her husband, Leo, and three daughters.

But she offers only sketchy remembrances of the chain of events that led to her death sentence — the revengeful boyfriend, Ovide, she committed adultery with, the accusations that she merrily led five people to their pre-dug common grave, and her conviction for the murder of a 2-year-old boy.

She refuses, she says firmly, to dwell on past hate and unhappiness.

MRS. BURNETT IS ONE of only two women under sentence of death in Texas. She was accused of murder in the execution-style slayings of the 2-year-old, his parents and grandparents, who were abducted and forced to march to a grave near Winnie, Texas. Each victim was killed with a single shot to the head.

A jury also condemned Ovide Joseph Dugas for the same crime. Mrs. Burnett, who was convicted only in the boy's death, insists she is innocent.

Her wait for exoneration — or death — could be a long one.

Mrs. Burnett's court-appointed attorney, whom she never has met, wrote her that he was confident the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals would rule on her case soon. That was September. Week after week passes without a word.

"No one had explained the appeals process to me," the 34-year-old Mrs. Burnett said in a recent interview, across a table in a prison conference room. "I thought they kept you for a month and then killed you. One night, they took me up upstairs for blood tests and I turned to the woman and said, 'Is this it?'"

THREE YEARS of her life have been spent in prison, and she has yet to hear the decision on her first appeal.

"You just don't have an end to it," she said. "You wait and wait and wait and wait. There's no end in sight."

The Mountain View unit in Gatesville, part of the Texas Department of Corrections, is nestled in rural Central Texas, 40 miles from Waco, framed by sprawling fields and towns that are just a blink on an endless highway.

Mrs. Burnett has made friends here, but she never forgets where she is — or why.

"You know I'm here for killing a kid," she whispered. "I can't stand that. Especially since I didn't do it."

Although prosecutors at her trial played tape recordings in which she was hypnotized and confessed involvement in the slayings, she claims the tapes were a sham.

Now Mrs. Burnett's days melt into weeks, months, eventually years. She says she survives on her fierce faith in God, by living in the past, virtually memorizing the photographs of her family, writing letters to the male inmates on Death Row in Huntsville, reading and watching television.

SHE LOVES SOAP OPERAS and looks forward to prime-time serials such as "Dallas," and "Knots Landing."

Since coming to death row — at present, she's the only woman here under death sentence — she has finisned her fragmented education by passing a high school equivalency test. She now takes Bible classes.

Every month, her husband drives 250 miles from their southeast Texas home in Nederland for a four-hour visit. They cannot touch — prison rules. She says she struggles against tears during those visits so her family will not fret about her.

While incarcerated at the Goree Unit in Huntsville, formerly the women's prison, Mrs. Burnett tried to commit suicide by downing a handful of pills. She said she sometimes regrets not killing herself before the state of Texas could take her life.

"Finally, I just wanted to die because I didn't think I could ever clear myself," she said. "I am not a strong person. I couldn't cope. But I wasn't putting my faith in Jesus and I wasn't being fair to my family."

ONLY EIGHT WOMEN have ever been sentenced to death in Texas. Only one was actually put to death, subjected to swift frontier justice. Chipita Rodriguez, accused of robbery, was hanged from a mesquite tree in 1863. According to legend, her ghost walks the Nueces River bank in San Patricio every time a woman is sentenced to death in Texas.

Pamela Lynn Perillo, 26, of Lynwood, Calif., is the only other woman in Texas now under death sentence. She was convicted in August 1980 for strangling a Louisiana man with a rope in what prosecutors said was a thrill killing. She has been in the Harris County Jail for the past several months.

Even if Mrs. Burnett's conviction is overturned, she would face another trial. And, she said, the people in her hometown will never forget where she spent a chunk of her life.

"I would love to go home, but they won't let me," she said, eyes filling with tears. "I had a lot of bad things happen to me. Someone burned a cross in my front yard. The supermarket where I had shopped for years asked me to not to shop there anymore. Someone threw eggs at me. I was kicked out of the PTA. This was all before the trial.

"Leo refuses to have our phone number changed. He refuses to buckle to people's cruelty. It's been a nightmare for me. I had never been arrested. I thought the courts didn't make mistakes. I thought that if you were arrested you were guilty."

Mrs. Burnett was arrested at her home July 10, 1978, shortly after the partly decomposed bodies of the five victims were discovered in a shallow grave.

IN PREPARING THEIR CASE, defense attorneys hired a hypnotist to interview Mrs. Burnett about the slayings, but to the dismay of her lawyers, prosecutors successfully subpoenaed the tapes and used them against her.

The recordings detailed the slayings of 2-year-old Jason Phillips, his parents, Elmer and Martha Phillips, and grandparents, Bishop and Ester Phillips. The little boy and his parents, from Woodward, Okla., were visiting Elmer's parents in Winnie during the Fourth of July holiday.

On the tapes, a woman's voice says Dugas shot the young boy, despite her tearful pleas that the child be spared.

Police said it was a grudge killing the Oklahoma family members were swept up in simply because they were visiting. Dugas once was married to Mary Phillips, the daughter of the Winnie couple, and prosecutors said he blamed her parents for the marriage's breakup.

During the taped interview, the woman's voice — prosecutors said it was Mrs. Burnett's — recounted the thrill she got directing the victims to the grave, saying, "I talked to them constantly, telling them just to play along with him (Dugas), that I would kill him."

When asked if the victims resisted their executions, she said, "No. The damn fools just got into the grave. I talked them into the grave."

Mrs. Burnett said the voice on the damaging tape recording is not hers. She said the transcript of the tapes was peppered with words she cannot even pronounce, much less define.

She blamed Dugas, the "handsome" childhood friend she became reacquainted with a month before the killings, for robbing her of her home, her family and her freedom. She said she spurns his infrequent letters from the men's death row at the Ellis Unit without reading them.

ODESSA — Each year foundations and corporations give millions of dollars in grants to support community activities and projects. With the elimination of many sources of federal funds for local programs, competition for these private grants is keen.

The Texas Historical Commission is sponsoring a spring workshop in Odessa designed to improve participants' chances for raising corporate and foundation funding. The Odessa workshop will be held March 19-20.

Opening lead: Six of ♠.

South opened one no trump despite his weak doubleton spade because he felt that he would have too many problems describing his hand if he elected to open one of a minor suit. North decided that he would not make a slam try with his 15 points because his hand was flat and lacked intermediate cards.

Declarer was so dazzled by the array of high cards that appeared in dummy that he hardly gave the play any thought. He won the club lead in hand and led toward the diamond jack. East won the queen and returned the suit. Declarer tested the diamonds and discovered that the suit was not breaking. Next he tried the heart finesse. East won the queen and exited with a heart. Declarer won the ace and tried the spade finesse, but that, too, failed.

Declarer was still not done. If clubs were 3-2, he would still have nine tricks. Since that was not the case, declarer ended up down one.

We would be more disposed to sympathize with South's cries of woe were it not for the fact that the contract should have been made nevertheless. West's lead strongly suggested that clubs were not going to break, so declarer should have given up on an extra trick in that suit in exchange for an extra chance for the contract. See what happens if declarer allows East to win the first club trick!

If East has a club to return, declarer can still fall back on all of his other chances. However, if East had indeed started with a singleton club, he would be end played and be forced to present South with his ninth trick.

Even the correct technical play in diamonds would have given South his contract. If he cashes one diamond honor before leading to the jack, East will have to return a major suit when he wins the queen of diamonds — right into the jaws of dummy's tenaces.

Senate expected to reject lesser penalty for Williams

WASHINGTON (AP) — After a week of debate, the Senate is making its decision on whether Harrison A. Williams was unfairly tempted into crime by FBI agents and thus should receive a lesser penalty than expulsion for his role in the Abscam case.

"Sen. Williams faced...a cruel, unreasonable, unwarranted, improper test," Senate Minority Leader Alan Cranston of California said Tuesday in arguing that Williams should be censured rather than expelled.

THE SENATE ETHICS Committee has unanimously recommended expulsion.

Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker of Tennessee said a vote on the censure resolution would come sometime today but that there was almost no support among the 53 Senate Republicans for the lesser penalty.

Similarly, Sen. Howell Heflin of Alabama, senior Democrat on the Senate Ethics Committee, said, "I think it will be an expulsion vote."

There was even pessimism from Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, Williams' chief defender. "The odds don't look good," he said.

Williams himself seemed to acknowlege as much.

"There can be a turnaround," he insisted at a brief news conference after Tuesday's Senate session. "The debate is not over. There are many matters yet to be presented."

Expulsion requires a two-thirds vote of those present; censure requires a simple majority.

With all signs pointing to expulsion, some senators were calling on Williams to resign and spare himself and the Senate the pain of forcing the matter to a showdown.

With absence of opposition, board approves texts

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

With an absence of public opposition, a typically drawn-out discussion of Midland school board business was accomplished in a surprisingly brief period of time Tuesday afternoon.

Due to a unanimous recommendation concerning state-approved textbooks for the school district by the textbook committee, trustees gave their approval of the selection by voicing their respect and appreciation for the committee and its efficient and thorough work.

"We don't want the people (the committee) to feel they are not appreciated because we did not question them," Parker Humes, board president, emphasized.

"It's just that when they come to us with a unanimous decision..." Ed Runyan, vice president, added.

IN THE PAST, textbook committees have presented a selection of texts approved only by a majority of the committee.

"These faculty members have done a very conscientious job," Dr. James H. Mailey, MISD superintendent, said.

About 15 members of the committee attended the meeting to explain their decisions if board members had questions.

Earlier in the year a request by school administrators urging persons who wished to hold a public hearing on the textbook selection to contact the administrators received no response.

The committee's selection of state-approved textbooks was unanimously approved by the board. Trustees will receive recommendations on texts for honors and other special classes at a later date.

RECOMMENDATIONS concerning the revision of teacher inservice education also received unanimous approval by trustees.

According to Mailey, the revisions were made "in order to try to find a more efficient way to meet the particular needs of this staff."

Needs of new teachers and those of experienced teachers in the district vary, Baressi explained. The flexibility of the new inservice program would allow the administrators to give specific training to the various levels of teachers.

Included in the revision are programs that will allow approved departments to conduct their own inserice meetings, orientation programs which will be offered to new personnel, programs that will allow certified personnel to meet some annual inservice time requirements other than the regularly scheduled inservice days, inservice evaluations and some choices will be allowed for certified personnel whose needs exceed the orientation level or minimum competency level.

An Inservice Advisory Committee, whose members will be selected by the faculties with final appointment from the superintendent, also will be formed. The committee will evaluate the inservice program and initiate planning, conduct needs assessment and set policies and standards.

A COMPUTER SYSTEM will be used to process items such as evaluations, attendance forms, notices of courses and registration.

Baressi said the ideas implemented in the revision came from the Austin and Abilene school districts and are new to Midland.

"We plan on implementing part of it next year," Baressi said, adding that he hoped to have it established full-time by the 1983-84 school year.

"The loss is being determined now by adjustors," he said. "It will appear, of course, that the loss to that wing will be total."

Once insurance adjustors arrive at a replacement cost, fire marshals complete their investigation and engineers finish their study, "we can go ahead and have that part torn down," Mailey said, adding that it could be anywhere from two weeks to one month.

A SEARCH FOR warehouse space will be conducted soon since the science storage area was destroyed, Mailey said. The only science equipment in the district is that which was in use at the schools. New science kits will be ordered and stored in a facility once one is found.

Some materials from the social studies and special education programs probably can be salvaged, he said, although a large portion of those have suffered water damage.

Costs of damaged equipment can be obtained from computer lists, inventories and purchasing slips. He said the overall loss will probably run between $900,000 and $1 million. Engineers will estimate the cost of replacing the building with essentially the same type of material. Subtracted from the replacement cost will be depreciation and the $25,000 deductible. The district will then pay 20 percent of that figure, with the insurance company paying the remaining 80 percent.

The 24 trainable mentally retarded students and the 25 students in the pregnancy unit have been temporarily relocated at Washington Elementary School and Midland High School, according to Mailey.

"I'm pleased with the staff's efforts to get the students relocated," Mailey said, adding that classroom space is valuable, especially at the elementary level. He said that permanent relocation sites were undecided but he would rather establish the students in a single move than to continually relocate them in other temporary sites.

IN OTHER ACTION, trustees received a report from Donald Furgeson, business manager, on the cafeteria financial statement as of Jan. 31. There were 24,184 less lunches served for the year to date than in 1981. The breakfast program showed an operating deficit of $31,989.08.

Furgeson pointed out that fewer students qualified for the breakfast program this year, due to federal cuts.

Trustees heard better news concerning tax collections. According to Furgeson, $18,368,161.98 was collected on the current tax role and $162,503.78 was collected on the delinquent role.

Board members authorized the sale of a used school bus to the Greenwood School District for $1,289 and approved three personnel resignations in other agenda business.

The resolution authorizing the Board of Directors of the Midland County Appraisal District to review and approve tax refunds on behalf of the MISD also was approved by school trustees.

Two construction change orders were approved to allow for the replacing of water lines at De Zavala Elementary School at a cost of $5,245, and to add two clean out lines to the Midland High School library construction at $51 each.

Mailey announced that a school board workshop will be held at Crockett Junior High School in Odessa at 6:30 p.m. March 24.

Prison tents to be replaced

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — About 2,800 Texas Department of Corrections inmates will be transferred from canvas tents to three metal buildings sometime in July, prison officials say.

TDC spokesman Rick Hartley said the three dormitory-style buildings had been erected on schedule. "We hope this (construction) will get us out of our tent situation," he said.

The three buildings will house a total of 2,880 inmates and are expected to eliminate the practice of placing three prisoners in a one-man cell, a routine ruled improper by U.S. District Judge William W. Justice.

DPS to allow college requirement substitute

The Department of Public Safety is modifying its requirement that trooper applicants possess two years of college work prior to applying for a job with the DPS.

In an announcement last week, DPS Director Col. Jim Adams said, "Effective with the June recruit class, DPS trooper candidates may substitute law enforcement-related experience for the current education requirement of 60 college hours.

"Thus, applicants with two years of commissioned law enforcement experience or two years of honorable active military service would be eligible for a waiver of the two-year college requirement.

The modification is billed as a temporary one, designed to "increase the reservoir of qualified applicants (and) yet ensure a continuance of the high standards which have been the hallmark of the Department's success."

Adams said the modified educational requirement will be evaluated to determine if it warrants continuation. The DPS would like to add 268 troppers to its roster this year, including the 92 now in training at the DPS academy in Austin.

The starting salary for recruits during the 18-week training program is $1,223 a month. Graduation brings the pay to $1,347 — plus uniform and equipment allowances.

Two receive PTA life memberships

Two PTA life memberships were presented during the general meeting of the City Council PTA at Fannin Elementary School Monday.

Dr. Joseph P. Baressi Jr., deputy superintendent of Midland Independent School District, received a life membership from the city council, and Manuel Carrasco, MISD director of elementary education, received a life membership from VIPS (Volunteers in Public Schools).

This marked the first life membership given by VIPS. According to Patti DeFrance, City Council PTA publicity chairman, Carrasco deserved the distinction as he has continually supported VIPS from its beginning stages through its present programs.

Pat Alexander, coordinator for GEM (the gifted and talented program), and Baressi gave a report on the progress of the program. They were followed by the Fannin GEM students who presented an original choral reading and a tour of their classrooms.

Dr. James H. Mailey, MISD superintendent, addressed the upcoming bond election and urged members to give their support.

Taste Verdict: Merit.

Former higher tar smokers applaud MERIT as "Best-tasting low tar I've tried."

Can a low tar cigarette provide the taste incentive to switch smokers from higher tar brands?

Taste Debate Ends.

Nationwide survey reveals over 90% of MERIT smokers who switched from higher tar are glad they did. In fact, 94% don't even miss their former brands.

Further Evidence: 9 out of 10 former higher tar smokers report MERIT an easy switch, that they didn't give up taste in switching, and that MERIT is the best-tasting low tar they've ever tried.

MERIT Landslide.

In addition, extensive unmarked-pack tests confirm that MERIT delivers a winning combination of taste and low tar when compared with higher tar leaders.

Confirmed: The overwhelming majority of smokers reported MERIT taste equal to—or better than—leading higher tar brands.

Confirmed: When tar levels were revealed, 2 out of 3 chose the MERIT combination of low tar and good taste.

Year after year, in study after study, MERIT remains unbeaten. The proven taste alternative to higher tar smoking—is MERIT.

Broken porthole may have caused drilling rig to sink

By JANE ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A broken porthole in the ballast control room of the world's largest oil drilling rig may have been what sent it and 84 men to the bottom of the ocean, says the head of the firm that owns it.

"God knows what happened that night. There must have been a panic situation," Hugh J. Kelly, president of the Ocean Drilling and Exploration Co. of New Orleans, said Tuesday.

None of the 84 men aboard the Ocean Ranger — 15 Americans, 68 Canadians and one citizen of Great Britain — survived. Only 22 bodies have been found.

The 398-by-262-foot drilling rig sank last month 175 miles off Newfoundland in a severe snowstorm amid waves of 53 feet, winds up to 80 miles per hour and a temperature of 5 degrees below zero.

"We're abandoning the rig and heading for the lifeboats," said the drilling platform's last message at about 1:30 a.m. The rig disappeared from radar about 3 a.m.

While no conclusions have been reached on what caused the accident, Kelly said "everything that we know points in that direction — a stabilization problem."

Only hours before the rig capsized early Feb. 15, a man in the control room apparently said, "We have water and glass down here," Kelly told the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee.

"It appears that a porthole in the ballast control room of the Ocean Ranger had been knocked out around 7:30 p.m. and that water entered the control room, causing malfunction of the electrical controls for the ballast system," Kelly said.

By 10 p.m., the porthole had been secured and at midnight, during a weather reportm, the rig indicated no problems. But Kelly said that during a mayday message around 1:15 a.m. there was a reference to taking on water in the control room.

Surveys taken of the rig just last week show that one porthole in the ballast room has no glass. The structure of the rig, now upside down on the floor of the North Atlantic, is intact.

Kelly was puzzled about the porthole, he said, because even with the 2-inch tempered glass broken "it's a simple act of seamanship" to close a metal hatch designed to protect the porthole.

He said the underwater surveys indicated all the metal hatches were closed except the one that should have covered the broken porthole in the ballast control room.

Naval Architect Allen C. McClure of Houston said he was surprised the porthole was smashed and speculated that perhaps a piece of timber or similar object struck the glass.

Kelly's reconstruction of events was based on interviews with people on other rigs and boats as well as in the shore office of Mobil Oil Canada Ltd., which leased the rig at $93,000 a day.

When the Ocean Ranger sank, a Coast Guard team was on its way to inspect it later that day. Its two-year certificate expired Dec. 27.

Coast Guard Rear Adm. Clyde T. Lusk said it is up to the owner to notify the Coast Guard when it needs another inspection to qualify for a certificate renewal.

Attorney says no appeal planned by stockholders

FINDLAY, Ohio (AP) — Marathon Oil Co. shareholders are preparing to vote on the second-largest corporate merger in history, one that would wed the nation's 17th-largest oil firm and U.S. Steel Inc. in a $6.2 billion transaction.

The way for Thursday's special stockholders' meeting was opened Tuesday when U.S. District Judge Carl B. Rubin of Cincinnati turned down a request by a group of dissident stockholders that the meeting be blocked.

A lawyer for the group said no appeal was planned.

The attorney, Jacob Stein of Cincinnati, said there is not enough time to take an appeal of Rubin's ruling to the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, also in Cincinnati.

But Stein said Rubin, during hearings on the request for a temporary injunction, "repeatedly said if it is a matter of relief that can be taken at a later date (after a merger vote) it should be explored then."

In U.S. Steel's two-phase takeover of Marathon, the steel giant paid $125 cash per share for 51 percent of Marathon's 58.7 million shares of common stock. That phase established U.S. Steel's control, but not a merger, because 66.6 percent is required under Ohio law.

In the second phase of the acquisition, U.S. Steel offered 12-year, 12½ percent notes with a principal value of $100 for the balance of common shares outstanding. The shares not tendered to U.S. Steel during the first phase fall under the second phase.

The dissident stockholders complained in court the notes were only worth about $75 to $85, far below the $200 value some analysts have placed on the stock.

Stein said the dissident stockholders can still exercise "appraisal rights" under Ohio law, which could set the value of their shares at a higher figure if U.S. Steel agrees to go along.

A meeting of dissident stockholders was scheduled today, he said.

An investment counselor in Chevy Chase, Md., said Tuesday he thinks the merger vote will be "close, very close."

The counselor, Jack Faucett, was one of the organizers of the dissident stockholders.

Most of the large holdings of Marathon stock are with family groups, employees of Marathon and investment companies, not with the individual stockholders the dissidents are trying to muster.

In New York, Morgan Guaranty Trust Co., which holds 1.3 million shares for clients, said it would vote in favor of the merger. The Dallas-based offshore drilling company Sedco Inc. said it also plans to vote its 2 million shares for the merger.

The only larger transaction on record was the $7.8 billion acquisition of Conoco Corp. last summer by Du Pont Corp.

Renee Sandstrom's mother, Mary,is determined to see her daughter make it in show business. The Sandstroms left their dream house in Worcester, Mass., and moved to Hollywood to give the talented 7-year-old a chance at the big time.

Renee sparkles when she sings

By AL MARTINEZ
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

HOLLYWOOD — The parents of Renee Sands sit in frozen concentration, not moving and not speaking, as the home-movie image of their little daughter flashes on a kitchen wall.

It shows a party for her second birthday. Renee is singing "I Only Have Eyes For You," mugging and smiling prettily as mommy holds a microphone before her, urging her on.

As far as they were concerned, they were rewitnessing the birth of a star.

"I knew from the first time she opened her mouth that she had it," Bob says in a tone reserved for awesome occasions.

It was specifically for Renee that six months ago Bob and Mary Sandstrom gathered their family together and headed for Hollywood.

They left behind in Worcester, Mass. — where they and their four children were born — a successful real estate business and a sprawling new home that Mary considered her dream house.

"It was just time for her to move on," Bob Says, "to come to the place where things happen."

"There isn'h a lot of show business in Worcester," Mary says halfwhimsically. She hesitates. "But it was such a lovely house...."

Sands is the stage name the Sandstroms have given their 7-year-old daughter. She is a bright and pretty girl with a singing voice that seems powerfully disproportionate to her size.

Yet, she has already begun her career, urged on by parents who see her future in lights. She has an agent. She is taking voice, acting and dancing lessons. She has credits.

"YES," Renee says answering a question, "I like it." She nuzzles her puppy. "I like it most of the time." She holds the puppy high. "But sometimes I wish I could get to bed earlier...."

And she's only in the second grade.

"I just don't know what's going to happen next," Renee says, dropping the puppy in favor of a cookie.

"Singing is about the most favorite thing in my life." She nibbles at the cookie. "No, ice cream is the most favorite thing in my life. Singing is second."

She wants to performas much as she can, but she misses seeing her friends when she's working hard. "I wish I could see them more," she says. "I've got to be a kid sometimes."

THE SANDSTROMS have been married 27 years. The eldest of their children is Bobby, 25. Maureen is 22, Michael 19.

All of them are interested in show biz, but it is Renee who carries, in her way, the family honor.

At one time, back in Massachusetts, they appeared together as "Family Affair," with dad on bass, Bobby on keyboards, Michael working drums, Maurreen singing...and Renee coming on strong.

They live in a rented home in Northridge in a quiet tract. There are drums in the living room and sheets cover the furniture.

"Life for Mary Sandstrom," a friend has said, "used to be taken up keeping house. Now it is taken up by Renee."

Renee was 4 when her mother, after hearing the girl sing along with a record album, decided to enter her in a Boston television talent show, "Community Auditions."

"I WROTE A letter and showed it to Renee," Mary says. "She said, 'No, no, no, I don't want to!' I said it was all right, I wouldn't send the letter until she said it was OK.

"Two weeks later she said I could."

Renee won not only the weekly contest but also the quarterly competition, and placed second for the year out of 2,000 contestants.

"It was then, I suppose, that we saw something in her voice that was rare," the father says.

Renee went on to sing at a New England kiddie beauty contest (she was too young to compete) then co-hosted Boston's Easter Seal Telethon.

An organization that produces variety shows asked her to join them, and soon the little girl was wowing 'em along the Eastern Seaboard.

That's when the Sandstroms decided to pursue Renee's future in Los Angeles. Mary wanted to move here for only two months. She could not bear to brush away her dream house so easily.

Bob felt differently. "I knew that once I was here I wouldn't go back," he says.

"YOU'VE GOT TO spend time in L.A. and pay your dues. You can't just come out and set the world on fire. We rented the house, loaded two 28-foot trucks and here we are!"

Within two weeks of their arrival in Los Angeles, the parents had booked Renee at a young people's nightclub. Agents had nothing to do with it.

"Mary spent six hours a day on the phone trying to showcase Renee," Bob says. "She called everywhere. Now they call us."

Other jobs followed. Renee was enrolled in acting, dancing and singing classes, is having her teeth straightened and publicity photographs taken.

Bob, working as a carpenter, took a second job bartending to help pay the expenses for Renee's future. For him, it's a labor of love.

"The great part of all this," he says, "is knowing that she's doing to audiences here what she did to them in Boston...and here is where it counts."

If there were doubts in his wife's mind about leaving her blue-carpeted home in Worcester, they melted in the heat of response that her daughter's voice was generating.

AFTER ONE of Renee's performances in Southern California, an elderly songwriter approached Mary and said that only once before had he heard a child with as much in her voice as Renee.

"That child," Mary quotes him as saying, "was Judy Garland."

Renee has yet to break into the big-time, though she has read for an ABC television project.

"What she really wants is to get into movies," her mother says. Renee runs into the kitchen, clutching the puppy again. "She loves movies," the mother adds.

DREXEL IS executive director of the Masquers of Hollywood, a show-biz club. Every Thursday night they hear and see "new faces" in entertainment. Renee has performed eight times.

"This is no movie-mother's puppet," Drexel says firmly. "Renee feels the music or she couldn't sing that way. She's got the heart and three-quarters of the voice that Garland had, and she's only 7!"

Renee's sister and two brothers feel the same. A close family, they support her goals and deny envy for either their little sister's talent or for the support their parents are pouring into her future.

"They put the same kind of energy out for all of us," Bobby says. "They have treated us all equally."

"THIS IS NO ego trip for me," the father says. "I've had my day. This is just the joy of taking an indiv8dual with talent and letting it happen."

"I don't think that will ever happen," her mother says, "but if it does, it will be her decision to make, and, well..." She pauses. "I think encouragement is important."

Bob nods firmly in agreement then gestures toward Renee. What does she want?

"I want...," she says, thinking, hesitating, then: "I want to build a house on a hill so I can look down and see the lights. That's what I want!"

An aerodynamically-efficient front air dam deflects high-pressure air from under the car. While aerodynamic trunk and hatch lid creases provide better control of airflow as it passes over and behind the car.
