

Fed's Debt 2nd Worst

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government, battling recession and inflation at the same time, ran up the second-worst deficit on record in the last fiscal year. There was twice as much red ink as the year before.

The Treasury Department closed the books Wednesday on fiscal 1980, which ended Sept. 30, and announced that the deficit was $59 billion. That was exceeded only by the $66.4 billion deficit of 1976.

The deepening deficits were due largely to the recession, which cut government receipts, and inflation, which forced up spending.

The government collected $520 billion during the year, compared with $466 billion in 1979, and spent $579 billion, up 17.3 percent from the previous year. The 1979 deficit was $27.7 billion, lowest since $4.7 billion in 1974.

The Carter administration has forecast a deficit of $29.8 billion for the current fiscal year, but that could go higher if there is a tax cut in 1981.

The 1980 deficit was almost $20 billion higher than President Carter had projected in January, before the economy was staggered by rampant inflation and a sharp decline in economic output.

Spending also increased to accommodate higher defense costs, the influx of refugees from Cuba and Haiti and several natural disasters, including the Mount St. Helens eruption.

Recession took its toll on corporate tax collections, which dropped 1.6 percent to $64.6 billion.

At the same time, inflation pushed Social Security payments — which are tied to inflation and represented the largest single federal expenditure — from $118 billion in 1979 to $134.4 billion in 1980. Social Security taxes rose 15.6 percent to $138.8 billion.

In other areas: —Individual income taxes totaled $44.1 billion, up 12 percent from 1979.

—Spending for commerce and housing increased 188 percent to $7.5 billion. Expenditures for transportation and farm programs were up 22 percent to $17 billion and $6.4 billion, respectively.

—The cost of international affairs, mainly peace-keeping efforts in the Middle East, jumped 78 percent to $10.5 billion.

—Military spending increased 15.5 percent to $132.8 billion.

—Interest on the national debt rose from $52.6 billion in fiscal 1979 to $64.6 billion in 1980.

Delaying Action...

Boycott Public Hostage Talks

By The Associated Press

Amid stormy scenes at the Parliament building, many Iranian deputies boycotted public debate on the American hostages today, leaving the 228-seat legislature short of its 179-member quorum and forcing postponement of the session until Sunday.

Sixty-six deputies defied appeals by Tehran radio and Iran's chief Judge Sadegh Khalkhali that they attend today — many of them protesting any action on release of the captives before the U.S. presidential elections Nov. 4.

regardless of the effect of the hostage issue on the presidential election, it was a problem the assembly was obliged to tackle, the reporter said.

Dozens of boycotting deputies milled outside. They sent a message into the hall saying a debate would only "help the cause of the United States, and especially Jimmy Carter," the reporter said.

A source close to the debate said the boycotters wanted to stay clear of the U.S. election to avoid any appearance of collusion with the Carter administration over release of the hostages, in their 362nd day of captivity today.

The protest by hardline deputies was joined by a second smaller faction which opposes releasing the Americans on general principle. Some deputies have called for spy trials for the hostages.

After a delay of an hour, only 162 deputies showed up and parliamentary Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani dismissed those gathered in the assembly hall.

The SDN Column

As you watched the great debate Tuesday night (assuming that you stayed awake for it), did you have a feeling that you knew how the participants were going to answer the questions before the questions were even completed? Or, in most cases, did you have the feeling that you knew what the questions were going to be before Howard K. Smith finished reciting the rules.

As television shows go these days, the debate probably earned a fair rating, but not necessarily for its political impact, judging from reaction we have heard.

This is especially true in Texas, with leaders in both major parties expressing doubt that the debate influenced enough voters to make a difference next Tuesday.

This campaign began more than a year ago, and those who have not made a decision by now are either too confused to make a rational choice, or else they haven't been listening these many boring months.

Political debates are good fodder for the pollsters. It provides them with excuses for more samples of voter opinion, with such questions as, "Did the debate change your stand?" or, "Who won the debate?" and then again for the umpteenth time, "How do you intend to vote?"

About the only thing that we are assured is that, barring any decision by the Almighty to the contrary, the sun will rise on America next Wednesday morning, regardless of who wins the office of president the next four years.

And, following a few days of catching up by the analysts, the television networks will get on with their regular fall programs. Incidentally, the actors' strike which delayed introductions of the usual fall schedule on the tube may have been timely for the networks. If they had opened the season on schedule, there would have been some conflicts with politics. Wonder if that could have been planned?

Anyone can make a mistake, including the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. According to a current report, some lucky Californians were on the receiving end of a batch of the bureau's handiwork that turned out to be defective. An automatic teller at a Palo Alto bank dispensed several hundred dollars worth of $20 bills minus the required federal reserve bank seal and several serial numbers.

The recipients were not complaining, however. As numismatic rarities, the defective bills are worth many times their face value—exactly the opposite of the situation of the rest of us with our perfectly printed money.

Thursday update

Allen Resigns Reagan Camp

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard V. Allen, Ronald Reagan's principal foreign policy adviser, who has come under fire for allegedly using his office to obtain lucrative consulting contracts while a member of the Nixon White House staff, withdrew today from the Republican presidential nominee's campaign organization.

A two-paragraph statement issued by campaign chief of staff Edwin Meese said that Allen "has withdrawn for the remaining days of the campaign to remove this matter as a possible issue in the campaign."

Meese was directed by Reagan to look into the allegations contained in a front-page story in the Tuesday edition of the Wall Street Journal.

Top Poles Face Grilling

MOSCOW (AP) — Poland's new Communist Party and government chiefs are expected to face tough grilling today on the growing strength of Poland's independent trade union movement in their first face-to-face confrontation with President Leonid I. Brezhnev and other Kremlin leaders.

Stanislaw Kania, the first secretary of the Polish Communist Party, and Premier Jozef Piskowski were met at Moscow airport by Brezhnev and were driven directly to a meeting in the Kremlin, official Soviet sources said.

A Foreign Ministry spokesman said the visit would be "brief," but gave no detailed schedule.

The Polish leaders' visit to Moscow comes as Poland's independent trade unions are threatening new strikes later this month to protest court-imposed changes in their charters that dictate union recognition of Communist Party supremacy.

Indicators Up 4th Month

WASHINGTON (AP) — A series of indicators designed to forecast movement in the economy rose in September for the fourth month in a row, the Commerce Department said today.

The Index of Leading Indicators increased 2.4 percent following a revised improvement of 1.7 percent in August. The biggest contributor to the upward movement in September was a decline in the rate of layoffs from manufacturing jobs — from 2 percent in August to 1.5 percent in September.

Tale Of Treachery Told In Spy Trial

BALTIMORE (AP) — The government says the Soviet KGB mobilized seven agents on three continents and paid out $92,000 trying to take full advantage of a debt-ridden former CIA agent who betrayed the United States.

A tale of treachery — with spies posing as diplomats; safe houses outside Vienna, Austria; and clandestine meetings arranged on shopping center pay phones — unfolded in the U.S. courthouse here Wednesday as former undercover CIA operative David H. Barnett pleaded guilty to one count of espionage.

The red-haired father of three, who now runs an export-import business and lives in an upper-middle-class home in Bethesda, Md., outside Washington, showed no emotion as Justice Department lawyer George Matava described what the government was prepared to prove if Barnett had not negotiated a plea bargain.

The government portrayed the bespectacled 47-year-old as a man who quit the CIA in 1970 in search of more money. According to Matava, Barnett then tailed as a businessman in Indonesia, where he had worked for the CIA, and, more than $100,000 in debt, turned to the KGB to barter his nation's secrets for cash in late 1976.

In the ensuing 3½ years, he proved an indifferent Soviet spy as well: he lied to the KGB, disobeyed orders, never fulfilled its ultimate goals and got caught by the FBI.

But he had managed to reveal the names of 30 CIA undercover agents, several foreign CIA collaborators and the details of a CIA undercover operation known as HA-BRINK, "one of its highest priority operations" in the 1960s, according to the government.

Young Voters Active...

Absentee Balloting To End Friday Afternoon

Could the 1980 presidential election be the first for the under-21 voters to become a significant factor in the outcome?

That appeared to be a pertinent question today in Scurry County as the deadline for absentee voting approached.

The absentee voting period for next Tuesday's general election ends officially at 5 p. m. Friday. All absentee voting here is being conducted at the county clerk's office in the courthouse.

As of 11 a. m. today, 357 absentee ballots had been cast and absentee voting was continuing at a steady pace.

Of the total so far, 87 are be's which reached the clerk's office by mail. Beverly Ainsworth, county clerk, said that most of the mail ballots are from Scurry County students attending out-of-county colleges.

Heretofore, there has been little interest shown by this group in local, state or national elections, but this year, more requests for absentee ballots have been received than ever before.

Candidates Rolling In

Five Cities

By The Associated Press

Out to gather votes, and obviously no moss in the process, Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan are each rolling through five cities today, trying to tie down key states before the election just five days away.

Carter began his day in Pennsylvania and was winding up in South Carolina. His Republican challenger started out in Texas and was ending up in Pennsylvania which, just incidentally, represents the largest bloc of undecided electoral votes.

The president was talking to Polish and Hebrew groups in Philadelphia, visiting New York's garment district, attending rallies in Saginaw, Mich., and St. Louis, and spending the night in Columbia, S.C. For Reagan, the itinerary is Texarkana, Texas; New Orleans; Lodi, N.J.; Philadelphia; and Pittsburgh.

Texas, where Reagan started his day, is considered too close to call for either Carter or Reagan and has 26 electoral votes.

Mrs. Ainsworth estimated that at least 150 mail requests for absentee ballots had come from young voters, most of whom are in colleges and universities this term.

The expected impact from young voters when the voting age was lowered from 21 to 18 never had developed, but this may be the year that young voters exercise their voting privilege. Mrs. Ainsworth observed.

And, although the deadline for casting absentee ballots in the clerk's office is tomorrow, mail applications for absentee ballots can be filled right up to the 5 p. m. deadline, which means those who receive them and get them returned by Tuesday will be counted. And a few more applications came in the mail this morning.

"We will get these in the mail today, and if they get them in time for the ballots to be returned by election day, they must be counted," said Mrs. Ainsworth.

Common Election Violations Cited

Pete Greene, 132nd District Attorney, has announced that he has received a list of common violations of the Elections Code from the Secretary of State in cooperation with the Texas Prosecutors Coordinating Council.

These violations are electioneering within 100 feet of a polling place, improper voter assistance, improperly influencing a voter, voting in more than one precinct, voting when not legally entitled to do so, vote buying, and closing the polls early.

More detailed information regarding these violations may be obtained from the 132nd District Attorney's office or the Office of the Secretary of State.

Greene emphasized that people should be aware of the election laws so that they do

The interest of students attending college away from home parallels that shown by students at Western Texas College and in Snyder High School.

Meanwhile, the county clerk's office was preparing to begin absentee voting in another election on Monday, Nov. 3, the day before the general election. Nov. 3 is the date for beginning absentee balloting in the special election to fill the position of State Representative for the 63rd District. Voters in the six counties of the district will name a representative to serve the remainder of the term of Mike Ezzell, who resigned two weeks ago to accept an appointive position with the State Health Department.

The only candidate listed on the ballot is Larry Shaw, who is the Democratic Party nominee for the post and who is unopposed in the general election.

not violate them inadvertently. Violation of these laws can result in the imposition of criminal penalties.

"I hope every American exercises his right to vote. This is one right that protects all the rest of our rights. My office is here to assist each citizen in exercising this right," said Greene.

He also said that the Secretary of State's office will closely scrutinize the process on Nov. 4 to ensure a procedurally fair election. Any problems that citizens witness in the election process should be called to the attention of the election judge, and, if necessary, to the District Attorney and the Office of the Secretary of State.

Finally, Greene said, "Be sure to vote on Nov. 4th."

Ask Us

Q.—Why wasn't the high school band at the football game at Odessa Ector last Saturday night and was it the band's decision, or the administration's, for it not to make the trip.

A.—Back before the football season started it was generally agreed that the band would not make some of the longer trips, now that Snyder's district is so far flung, school officials report. As for the Ector game, specifically, Sam Robertson, band director, said it was the band's decision not to go.

There were several factors involved in the decision. It was Saturday and some of the band members have Saturday jobs. Other families involved had weekend plans made earlier. And, of course, it would have been one of the longer trips. The decision did not set a precedent, since the band did not go to Monahan and Pecos last year. Also, it does not plan to go to Fort Stockton next week.

For Candace Montgomery...

Innocent Verdict Ends Four Month Nightmare

McKINNEY, Texas (AP) — A four-month legal nightmare ended for Candace Montgomery when a jury found her innocent of murder, but her attorney says the summer afternoon she killed a friend with 41 blows from a three-foot ax will haunt her forever.

The 30-year-old suburban housewife was acquitted of murder Wednesday after she confessed she hacked her former lover's wife to death in self defense.

The sandy-haired, bespectacled defendant began trembling when the verdict was read at 4:40 p. m., but stared straight ahead, her hands clenched in her lap. Ushered quickly from the courthouse, Mrs. Montgomery and her husband, Pat, avoided news reporters and photographers. They soon will move to Atlanta from this North Central Texas city, where residents have talked of little but the grisly killing since Mrs. Gore's mutilated body was discovered June 13.

The innocent verdict, returned by a nine-woman, three-man jury that deliberated just over three hours, climaxed a sensational trial marked by dramatic testimony and legal maneuvering.

Each day, residents of surrounding towns lined up outside the courtroom to get a ringside seat for the show that beat anything on daytime television. The spectators' reaction to the verdict was mixed.

But lead defense attorney Don Crowder, whose antics resulted in two contempt citations from State District Judge Tom Ryan, said he was "very pleased. Very pleased."

Asked what convinced the jury to find his client innocent, Crowder said, "If I knew that, I would be a millionaire."

The dapper young attorney shocked a packed courtroom during jury selection by announcing his client had killed Mrs. Gore, but was fighting

Alan: "We discussed complicated modern conventions last week and warned our readers against them. They can work for people who devote most of their lives to them. At golf you wouldn't try the shots made by Nicklaus, Trevino or Watson."

Oswald: "Getting away from complicated conventions, here are our rules for minimum suit opening bids:

1. With 11 H.C.P. open one of a six-card or very good five-card suit.
2. With 12 or 13 H.C.P. open unless your distribution is 4-3-3-3.
3. With 14 or more H.C.P. always open."

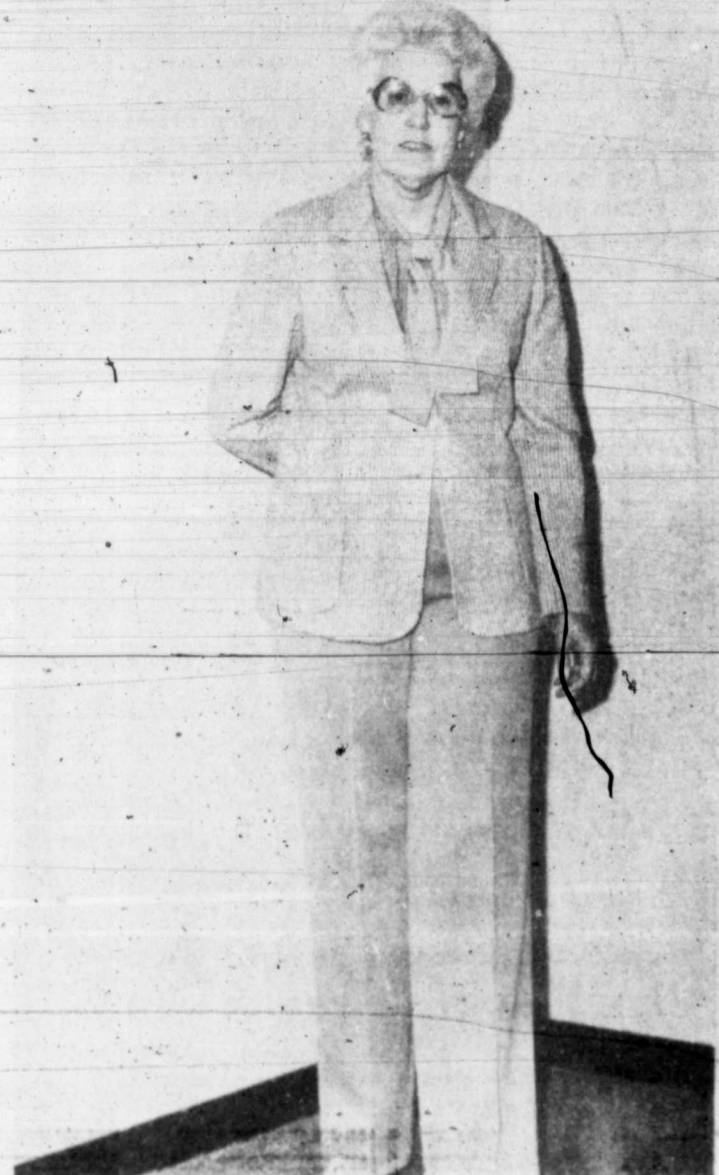

Alan: "We consider any three-card club suit biddable. We also open with three diamonds headed by one of the three top honors. When it comes to major suits we try to avoid opening with four cards, but will bid one as weak as A J 9 x or Q J 10 x if we have 14 H.C.P. and no lower biddable suit."

Oswald: "Today's hand has no biddable suit, but with 14 H.C.P. we can't afford to pass. We open one heart as the best choice."

Alan: "The bidding gets to spades and stops at two which we make. It would probably get there in any reasonable system as long as North opens, but it gets there nicely in ours."

MAWC STYLE SHOW—Donnie Chorn will be one of the models showing fall-winter clothing from local merchants at 11:30 a.m. Saturday at the Martha Ann Woman's Club. A luncheon is included in the parade of fashions, and Barbara Perkins will present piano music. The show, and narrated by Margaret Drum, has been coordinated by Carolyn Greeve. Tickets are being sold for "Holiday Fashions" for $6 by all club members. The public has been invited to attend.

Star Shelton Fabrics To Be Shown Nov. 8

The hand woven fabrics of Star Shelton will be featured in the Scurry County Museum at Western Texas College starting Nov. 8.

Designer fashions by Mrs. Shelton will be modeled in a style show in the museum on Nov. 8. A luncheon will accompany the style show, and tickets are $6 each. Tickets are to be purchased by Nov. 4 in the museum office.

Mrs. Shelton will be guest speaker for a brown bag luncheon in the museum Nov. 10, talking about the history of weaving. No reservations are necessary for the brown bag luncheons and the public is invited to attend.

Weavings by Mrs. Shelton will be exhibited in the museum from Nov. 9-25. Mrs. Shelton lives near Lamesa, with her family, and turns out her woven fabrics on looms inherited from her grandmother. She uses natural fibers almost exclusively and hand-dyes many of the yarns for her creations. Information about the weaving exhibit and programs may be obtained by calling the museum office at 573-6107.

Stretch Wardrobe By Mix Or Match

If your fall budget is small, your post clothing buys will be pieces that work together and blend with what you already own. Look over your present wardrobe and notice the prominent colors and styles. For example, if you have a lot of tailored or sweaters in pinks and purples, you can coordinate new with old by adding gray flannel pants, a black velvet or corduroy jacket, a fluffy white blouse and a rose, purple or burgundy sweater.

A message to users of Rely tampons from Procter & Gamble.

Women who use Rely tampons should stop using them and return the unused product to Procter & Gamble for a refund.

Government studies show that tampons are associated with an increased risk of Toxic Shock Syndrome (TSS). This is a newly-discovered disease that affects mainly women who use tampons during their periods.

Toxic Shock Syndrome can be very serious and is believed to be responsible for a number of deaths. Almost all women who have had the disease have recovered.

Some recent studies indicate that Rely was apparently involved with Toxic Shock Syndrome to a greater extent than other tampon brands.

Toxic Shock Syndrome was first reported in November 1978. It is believed to be caused by a toxin produced by a bacterial infection (Staphylococcus aureus). In June 1980, the U.S. Center for Disease Control (CDC) first linked it to tampon use. No one yet knows how or why tampons are associated with this disease.

In June, based on research conducted up to that point, CDC said that tampon use alone was not sufficient to cause the disease. CDC also said that no particular brand of tampon was more involved than others.

But on September 15, CDC announced a new study. It compared women who had Toxic Shock Syndrome with women who did not. The study confirmed that Toxic Shock Syndrome was associated with tampon use. It also indicated that Rely was apparently involved with more cases than any other brand. Here are the key data available to date:

DEFINITE TSS CASES REPORTED TO CDC	Brands Used*
	Other Identified Brands	Rely Brand	Tampon Brands	Unidentified
CDC Study #1 (completed June 20)	52	17	43	2
CDC Study #2 (completed September 12)	50	35	22	0
Other cases reported to CDC	140	24	19	100
Total CDC cases (through September 23)	242	76	84	102

Brands used totals more than the number of cases reported because some women used more than one brand

On September 21, P&G convened a scientific advisory group to review all known data relating to TSS. The group concluded that the available data were still fragmentary, but advised that the results of the latest CDC study should not be ignored.

Therefore, on September 22, Procter & Gamble announced it was suspending sales of Rely and that it would refund money to consumers who had Rely in their homes.

The Food and Drug Administration offers this advice to consumers:

"The current evidence indicates that women should stop using Rely. Women who want to reduce their risk of toxic shock even further may want to consider not using any tampons at all, or using napkins part of the time during their periods.

"Women using tampons who develop a high fever and vomiting or diarrhea during their periods should stop using tampons and see their doctors right away."

The FDA and CDC have said they will continue studying Toxic Shock Syndrome to find out what causes it and why it is associated with tampons. Procter & Gamble will participate with the government in this important effort.

In the meantime, Procter & Gamble advises women not to use Rely tampons and to return unused Rely for a refund.

You should know these symptoms of Toxic Shock Syndrome:

- High Fever (102°) and
- Vomiting or diarrhea

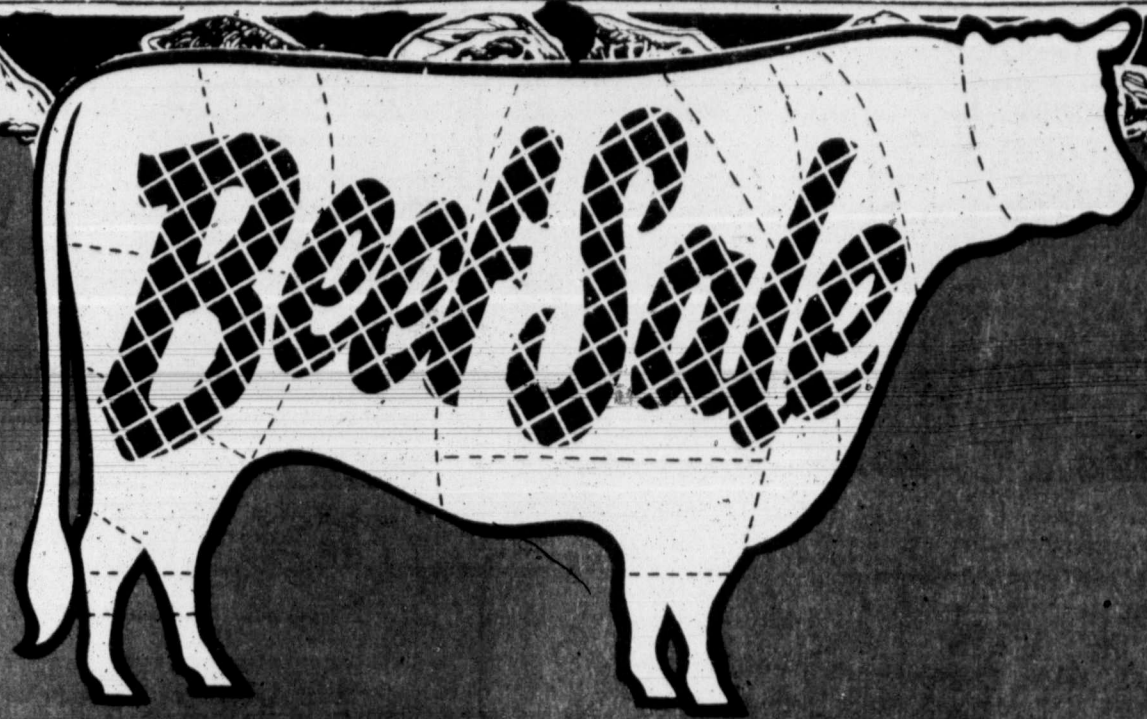

If you have these symptoms during your menstrual period, discontinue use of tampons and see your doctor at once.

How to return Rely and obtain refund:

Send your unused Rely tampons with your name and address to:
Rely,
P.O. Box PM006,
El Paso, Texas 79966.
And you will receive a refund including cost of mailing.

NOTE: You may see Rely advertisements in the November issues of various women's magazines. Unfortunately, these issues were already printed when the decision to suspend sales of Rely was made on September 22, 1980.

Crowd Turns Out For Reagan

UNIVERSITY PARK, Texas (AP) — Cowboys from Tinsel Town and America's Team stumped for Ronald Reagan as the GOP hopeful wrapped up his last scheduled Texas campaign swing before the Nov. 4 election.

Reagan made his third stop of the day Wednesday in this posh Dallas bedroom community and was greeted by about 8,000, cheering GOP faithful who packed Southern Methodist University's Moody Coliseum to hear Reagan renew his attack on Jimmy Carter's term in office. "Jimmy Carter has demonstrated his inability to lead our nation," Reagan told the partisan crowd of conservatives, who often interrupted his 55-minute speech with chants, whistles and cheers.

Before his appearance here, Reagan taped several television interviews and told WFAA-TV in Dallas that he supports federal aid for Texas schools ordered to provide a free education to the children of illegal aliens.

Reagan and his wife Nancy were about 20 minutes late to the rally, entering the ribbon-draped arena under a banner that said, "There's Never Been Any Debate — Reagan Is The Winner."

The coliseum, liberally sprinkled with Reagan-Bush campaign placards, was literally jammed to the rafters with a crowd ranging from businessmen in three-piece suits to college students in comfortable sweaters.

As Reagan waded through the audience after being introduced by Gov. Bill Clements, he paused to shake hands and flash a tired but happy smile. A collection of stars, athletes and state and

She Hopes To Forget...

Not Dangerous Says Acquitted Ax Killer

FAIRVIEW, Texas (AP) — Candace Montgomery was smiling and sipping champagne in her suburban North Texas home Wednesday, just hours after she was acquitted of hacking a Wylie schoolteacher to death with an ax.

"Don't worry. I'm not dangerous," Mrs. Montgomery told reporters from the Dallas Times Herald after she met them at the door holding a kitchen knife.

Jurors found Mrs. Montgomery innocent of murder charges in the brutal June 13 slaying of 30-year-old schoolteacher Betty Gore. Mrs. Montgomery said she killed her friend — the wife of a former lover — in self defense, striking her 41 times with a three-foot ax.

At a small victory celebration with her husband, Pat, her father, minister and two close friends, Mrs. Montgomery, a 30-year-old mother of two, talked about the trial.

"Over the last couple of months... it didn't matter to me what kind of verdict (jurors returned). I still had to live with this," she said. "I'm pleased that I don't have to go to prison and that I will be able to meet with my psychiatrist."

"My hypnotist helped me to remember, and now I hope, he can make me forget."

A psychiatrist testified at her trial that Mrs. Montgomery recalled under hypnosis being hushed at age four by her mother when she cried while being treated for a head wound. That incident, he said, was brought back to her when Mrs. Gore said "Ssshhh" during a struggle for the ax, touching off the frenzied attack.

"Candy is very strong," Mrs. Montgomery said of herself. "I can make it through anything. I told myself that I could go to jail, (although) it would hurt."

"I'd miss you guys," she said, turning to her husband.

The Montgomerys have a contract to sell their house, and Montgomery has an offer of a job at Georgia Tech. But Mrs. Montgomery said she is unsure if the family will move.

"We're not being run off," she said. But she added, "When I hear about the Wylie football team, I don't think about the Wylie football team. I think about the Wylie ax murder. There are too many memories."

VERDICT

for her own life at the time.

District Attorney Tom O'Connell said while prosecutors were not surprised by the self-defense angle, "what we didn't know was just what the specifics of the self-defense theory would be."

O'Connell declined to comment on the verdict itself, saying, "We do our job, and they do their job."

Jurors and family members also refused to comment on the trial's outcome.

Crowder based his self-defense case on Mrs. Montgomery's brutally detailed account of her visit to Mrs. Gore's Wylie home on Friday, June 13.

She said the former schoolteacher struck her twice with the ax after confronting her about a 10-month affair she had with Allan Gore.

The petite defendant said she tried to escape three times during a frantic struggle in the utility room of the Gore's Wylie home. Mrs. Montgomery said she finally wrestled the ax from Mrs. Gore and hit her on the head.

Mrs. Gore fell to the blood-slicked floor, but the sobbing defendant told jurors she could not stop herself from slamming the ax into the woman who sang with her in a church choir.

Pathologists described the slaying as a "classic case of overkill."

A medical examiner said the victim had been struck in the head 28 times — the blows collapsing her right eye into a sinus cavity and splitting her skull down to the brain tissue at least once.

Psychiatrists testified Mrs. Montgomery was reacting on an instinctive level and that her rage could have stemmed from a 26-year-old incident the defendant could remember only under hypnosis.

Mrs. Montgomery testified Mrs. Gore told her, "Shhhh," when she screamed for her life. Dr. Fred Fason of Houston said the defendant also was hushed by her mother as she was being treated for a head cut and that the word association and sight of blood could have triggered the same anger against Mrs. Gore.

In closing remarks, O'Connell termed the theory "incredible" and "insulting."

Dear Abby

Hospital Room Not A Hospitality Suite

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I just returned from 12 days in the hospital, and I am exhausted!

The ordeal of my surgery was bad enough, but what really wore me out were the visits I had from well-meaning friends and relatives. I looked like hell and felt like hell and didn't want to see anybody.

I had a "Do Not Disturb" sign on my door, which didn't mean a thing. People would knock on my closed door, and if there was no response, they'd slowly open it and peek in to see if I was up. If my eyes were closed, they'd tiptoe in, sit down and wait for me to get up. Once when I was dozing, a cousin came in and just stood by my bed. (I could feel her breathing on me.) Then she leaned down and whispered, "Honey, are you awake?"

I pretended to be asleep, but she kept asking if I was awake until she finally got me up. Then she stayed an hour and a half telling me who was getting divorced, who died and who had cancer.

Abby, if you have a letter in your files advising your readers not to visit sick friends in a hospital, please dig it out and run it again. It's too late to help me, but it could help others.

EXHAUSTED IN COLUMBIA, S.C.

DEAR EXHAUSTED: I dug out a dilly and here it is:

DEAR ABBY: Please remind your readers that even if a patient isn't seriously ill, he is in the hospital to get well, not to entertain visitors.

I just came home from the hospital, and I'm glad I had the foresight to tell friends and relatives I didn't want any company.

My roommate in the hospital appeared to welcome graciously a constant stream of friends and relatives, but I noticed how relieved she was after they left, because she really didn't feel up to seeing them.

Please ask your readers to check first to see if a patient REALLY wants company before popping in with a surprise visit. A card may be much more appreciated.

RECOVERING FROM SURGERY

DEAR RECOVERING: Well said. And while we're on the subject, I wonder why everyone thinks a "No Visitors" sign on the door means everyone but him?

DEAR ABBY: Regarding the column about children who are taught to call their parents by their first names:

We have some twins here in Olympia, Wash., who did the same thing.

When they started school, after the first day they came home and demanded to know, "How come we don't have a father and mother like everybody else?"

Blaze Destroys Crew Cab Pickup

Snyder firefighters were dispatched to Lake J.B. Thomas, southeast of the dam, yesterday where they doused a crew cab pickup fire.

The fire, reported about 4:50 p.m., destroyed the vehicle owned by Snyder Well Service.

Fountain Stolen

Police are investigating the reported theft of a $5,000 decorative water fountain.

The theft, reported shortly after 4 p.m. Wednesday, occurred at 3600 College Ave., said Sig Line, complainant. Taken was a solid brass water fountain, three and a half feet in diameter, two feet high, with seven lights around a revolving center. Receiving the complaint was Don Cheek.

In an unrelated incident, police arrested a 27-year-old suspect in connection with a burglary and two thefts.

The suspect, arrested in the 600 block of O'Neil about 10 p.m. by Lt. Steve Warren and Sgt. Ed Neely, is wanted in connection with the burglary of the Clara Land house in which three guns were stolen, the theft of a bicycle from the Billy Burcham residence, and the theft of an animal trap from the City of Snyder.

Joe Bob Martinez reported the theft of a tire and rim from his pickup truck at the Waterbed Shop. That loss was estimated at $237. Working that case was Don Cheek.

Bill Armstrong worked a criminal mischief complaint about midnight. The vandalism took the form of a broken windshield on a car owned by Diane Highfield. Damage was estimated at $250.

Wreck Hurts Snyder Woman

A Snyder woman received what were thought to be minor injuries in a two-vehicle wreck worked this morning by Snyder police.

The accident occurred about 8 a.m. in the 1300 block of Ave. T and involved a 1967 Chevrolet pickup driven by Jerry Kenner of Snyder and a 1975 Ford driven by Nadine Johnson. Mrs. Johnson was taken to Cogdell Memorial Hospital by Palmer EMS and admitted for observation.

The accident was worked by Kerry Fritz. Moderate damage was reported to the vehicles.

OBITUARIES

Dan Hamil

Dan Hamil, 80, who lived at 4400 Ave. U, died at 9:15 p.m. Wednesday in Cogdell Memorial Hospital.

The funeral service has been set for 2 p.m. Friday in the Bell-Seale chapel. The Rev. David Robertson, pastor of First United Methodist Church where Mr. Hamil was a member, will officiate. Masonic rites and burial will follow in the Snyder Cemetery. Bell-Seale Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements.

A retired barber, Mr. Hamil was a native of Mansfield, but had lived here most of his life. He was married on Dec. 24, 1932, in Merkel to Loré Christine Neal. She preceded him in death last Sept. 9.

Surviving are two sisters, Mrs. Neal E. Farr of Hermleigh and Mrs. Irene Brown of Arlington; a brother, Vurney Hamil of Fort Worth, and several nieces and nephews.

Zone Change Disapproved

A request for a zone change for property on the south side of 37th St. just west of the 37th St. Shopping Center has been disapproved by the planning and zoning commission.

The application, which first was presented two weeks ago, sought a change from an R-1 (single-family dwelling) zone to an R-3 (multi-family dwelling) for the purpose of developing apartments there.

Several owners of property in the immediate area opposed the application, and a petition in opposition to the proposal with 12 signatures was presented to the planning and zoning commission. The request will go to the city council for final action.

Starting Five Pegged For Westerner Opener

by the SDN Sports Staff
Starting lineups are susceptible to injury, opponent and of course how well the player performed the game before, but with that in mind, Coach Larry Dunaway has listed a tentative lineup for Saturday's opener against McMurry junior varsity.

Three sophomores and two freshmen make up the starting five as Western Texas College takes the SHS Gym floor at 8 p.m. this weekend.

Don Warren, 6-6 sophomore, will be at post, while 6-5 to the open man. He's been injured the past couple of weeks (strained ligaments in ankle) and he's not full speed, but he will play.

"Chuck and Keith, which will both play in the guard-forward positions, have both been playing well in practice. They've led almost every week in our charts.

"Donald has made a lot of improvement in his game the last two weeks. Everybody knows Donald is a good shooter, but we've been concentrating on his rebounding, too. As our biggest man, he's going to have to be a strong rebounder for us to have a good ballclub.

Cesar has probably been our best offensive player in practice. He's an outstanding shooter and also a strong player," Dunaway stated. Dunaway also commented on several of the other players:

Brian Baker, 6-5 sophomore, "will be in the game quickly at a forward position. He's a real hard worker, very aggressive. He's made a lot of improvement in his offensive game the past two weeks."

Brett Smith, 6-5 freshman, "will be backing up Donald at the post position. Brett is very aggressive. A hard-posed player."

Clarence Cephas, 6-0 freshman, "will play both the guard and forward positions and has been doing well in practice, and we're counting on him to do a good job for us. He hustles every second of the time, goes all out. Though he's small, he had four steals, four assists, six rebounds and six points in the first half of our scrimmage the other day.

"Our other three players will also see a lot of action. Right now, they are all injured, but we expect them to be in Saturday's game also. Darren Lee, a 6-4 freshman from San Diego, has an injured ankle; Charles Holson, a 6-1 freshman from Tulsa, is out with a sore knee; and Dwayne Dickey, a 5-9 freshman from Artesia, N.M., also has a sore knee."

TROY STEVENSON

sophomore Keith Denis and 6-3 freshman Cesar Scott man the forward positions. The guards will be 6-4 1/2 sophomore Chuck North and 5-10 1/2 freshman Troy Stevenson.

Fans familiar with WTC basketball will quickly notice Denis and Warren, who are the only two returnees from last year's NJCAA national championship squad. Neither were starters, but both saw some action.

"The group can play," assures Coach Dunaway. "We're not exactly sure what we can do, because this will be our first game, but we're ready to get after it."

Despite listing a starting lineup, Dunaway plans to utilize every player's talent if possible.

"Troy is the ball-handler and passer on our fast break," said the coach. "He does a real good job of getting the ball down court and getting it

Beck To Handle QB Slot As...

Tigers Host Monahans

Snyder's Tigers face perhaps their toughest test of the season here Friday night and they may have to do it with their starting quarterback watching from the sidelines.

Mike Roemisch, Snyder's QB for the past two years, has missed practice all week with an illness, and is not expected to play in the 8 p.m. contest. Instead, sophomore Brent Beck will get the call, and according to head coach Mike Jenkins, the youngster, who will almost assuredly be the starting quarterback next year, is up to the task.

"We don't have any qualms at all, about bringing Brent in," said the coach. "He hasn't had a whole lot of playing time, but we know he's ready to accept the challenge. The kids have been very supportive of him all week. The coaching staff and the kids believe in him."

Insertion of a new man-down-under will not change Snyder's game plan much, though the Tigers will likely not throw the ball as often as they have in the past. That may be more due to the opponent - Monahans - than the new face, however.

"Brent can throw the ball, we know that," pointed out Jenkins. "But our game plan will be to keep the ball away from Monahans as much as possible. We'll put the ball up some, but probably more to accent our running attack."

Monahans brings some of the league's best stats into Tiger Stadium to face the hosts. The Lobos lead District 2-AAAA in team offense and rank second in team defense. Their 6.7 points allowed per game is the lowest of the conference members, as is their pass yardage allowed (27.9).

"Monahans is one of the best teams we've seen on film. We watched them play Sweetwater too, and I believe they could play with or beat anybody if they played the way they did in the first half there," Jenkins said. "They are an excellent 4-3 (record) team. Their defense starts 10 seniors in a 4-3 (formation), just like us. They do an excellent job. They're the type team that will give a little ground, but won't give you the big play."

To be successful tomorrow night, Snyder will have to move the ball against the visitors. Though the Tiger offense has averaged only 135.7 yards on the ground for the season, it has accumulated over 200 in each of its last two games.

"Our offense is performing better. Two weeks ago we turned the ball over several times and all of a sudden it was out of reach. Last week penalties stopped us. We weren't able to score, but we did control the ball. We kept it for seven minutes in the fourth quarter against Ector. We'll have to play consistent ball and not make any mistakes (Friday). If we can do that, we feel like we can win the ballgame," the coach relayed. "Defensively, we've got to try to give them the bad plays and keep them from making the big play. Field position will be important again."

Snyder goes into the game with a 2-5 record, but Jenkins doesn't believe the team will roll over for the Lobos.

"We've still got a lot of pride. We had a real good week's work, a lot of enthusiasm, and we're still intent on playing better at home than we've played. If we didn't think we could win the ballgame, we wouldn't even bother to play. We're going out there to win."

Snyder's underclassmen take on Colorado City here tonight at Travis Field. Tickets for the games are $1 for adults and 50 cents for students.

Snyder eighth graders are off this week; the varsity team welcomes Monahans into Tiger Stadium, Friday at 8 p.m.

BRENT BECK

Sideline Glances Says...

Sooners Win; Aggies Falter

by Bill McClellan

'Hangin' in there' is the term for it. Another 14 right, 6 wrong, .700 week leaves me at 111 right, 49 wrong, or .694 for the season in our football predictions. I can't afford to complain after six or seven weeks of this 14-6 or 15-5 stuff. It's been more like 13-7 in years past.

This week's agenda combines some of the top collegiate games in the country with the best of the pro picks. Surely there will be the usual upsets, but you'll find this prognosticator in a conservative mood.

Here we go:

AREA GAMES

1. Monahans at Snyder. There comes a time when you have to forgo home team loyalty for honesty. 'Nough said, except that I'll host the Tigers in a column-eating party if they can prove me wrong - and I hope they do. MONAHANS 28, TIGERS 14.

2. Ector at Lake View. A question of who wants it the most. If I've got my history right, the chiefs put eagle feathers in their war bonnets. LAKE VIEW 21, ECTOR 7.

3. Fort Stockton at Sweetwater. Sweetwater, still eying a possible district crown, won't be upset by the Panthers. MUSTANGS 28, PANTHERS 10.

4. Pecos at Lamesa. The Eagles could let up, but don't count on it. PECOS 27, LAMESA 6.

5. Ira at Grady. Good one for an upset. The question is, can a disappointed Bulldog team rally to beat a solid Wildcat team on its home turf? They can if they want to. Hopefully they will. IRA 45, GRADY 32.

6. Trent at Borden County. Trent score points by the handfuls and lately Borden County has been giving up almost that many. Still in the race, though, the Coyotes are inspired. COYOTES 36, TRENT 32.

SWC MATCHUPS

7. Texas A&M at SMU. It would be just like the Aggies to lose to Rice and beat SMU, but this dumb prognosticator will go with the Ponies anyway. SMU 35, A&M 17.

8. San Jose St. at Baylor. Don't even consider this one for an upset. BAYLOR 28, SJSU 10.

9. Texas at Texas Tech. The Longhorns overplay this one and instead of pounding the Raiders, just ease by. TEXAS 27, TECH 21.

10. Rice at Arkansas. If Arkansas looks past the Owls, they deserve what they get. Pick it fairly close. HOGS 23, OWLS 17.

11. TCU at Houston. The Cougars continue to pick up steam. HOUSTON 34, TCU 14.

MORE COLLEGE

12. South Carolina at Georgia. One of the best collegiate games on tap this week. Georgia, surviving some early-season scares, is well prepared. BULLDOGS 24, GAMECOCKS 20.

13. Michigan State at Ohio State. Michigan State carries too big a reputation to be an upsetmaker in this one. OHIO ST. 17, MICHIGAN ST. 14.

14. Missouri at Nebraska. The Cornhuskers have too much offense. BRASKA 31, MISSOURI 20.

15. Miami, Fla. at Penn State. Having gained more respect for the Lions and less for the boys from Florida in recent weeks, my guess is. PENN ST. 35, MIAMI 12.

16. North Carolina at Oklahoma. The toughest of the collegiate games this week. Tails, and an overpowering offense make this one ripe for an upset. OKLAHOMA 28, NORTH CAROLINA 24.

THE PROS

17. Dallas at St. Louis. The Cardinals aren't likely to swoop down on the Cowboys. DALLAS 27, ST. LOUIS 14.

18. Houston at Denver. Too good teams, but you have to go with Houston on consistency alone. Denver just doesn't have any. OILERS 20, BRONCOS 14.

19. Miami at Oakland. The Raiders are playing super football of late. I'll stay with them. OAKLAND 23, MIAMI 7.

20. Baltimore at Kansas City. One of those "feeling" games again. I've got a hunch Baltimore will pull it out. Both are 4-4 on the season. COLTS 19, CHIEFS 17.

Family Feud Time For SWC Teams

DALLAS (AP) — Baylor's Southwest Conference football lead is safe, but that's about all that can be said for the standings going into Saturday's slate of five games.

The Bears, 7-0 for the first time in the school's 79-year football history, wind up the SWC's regular-season non-conference schedule as the others get down to family feuds.

In other games, TCU is at Houston, Texas at Texas Tech, Rice at Arkansas and Texas A&M at SMU. The A&M-SMU game will be regionally televised (ABC-TV) with the kickoff moved to 2:50 p.m.

Baylor attempts to bring the SWC's non-conference record to 17-10 in a game at Waco against San Jose State.

SATURDAY'S GAMES

TEXAS (5-1, 2-1 in SWC) at TEXAS TECH (3-3, 1-2 in SWC); 2 p.m. CST—Two of the top three defenses in SWC slug it out with offenses that had injury problems lately...Texas looks for return of SWC leading rusher A.J. Jones and top receiver Les Koenning, who missed most of last week as Longhorns failed to get a TD in first defeat of season (20-6 to SMU)...Tech had week off following 10-7 victory over Rice...should be near full strength.

SAN JOSE STATE (4-3) at BAYLOR (7-0); 2 p.m. CST — Bears looking to add to their best start ever as they host non-conference foe...Bears 7-0 for first time in 79 seasons of football and ranked 10th.

TEXAS A&M (2-5, 1-3 in SWC) at SMU (5-2, 2-2 in SWC); 2:50 p.m. CST (ABC-TV) — Mustangs ranked 19th after 20-6 upset win over previously No. 2 ranked and undefeated Texas in Austin last week...win was big rebound from back-to-back losses after 4-0 start...Aggies trying to stop three-game losing streak after dropping consecutive SWC matches to Houston, Baylor and Rice...both teams starting freshmen quarterbacks, SMU giving second start to Lance McIlhenney and A&M going with Gary Kubiak.

Fall Colors Entering Canyons

Fall colors are beginning to appear in the McKittrick Canyon and Dog Canyon areas of Guadalupe Mountains National Park, and if weather conditions remain favorable, the colors should be near their peak for about a two-week period from Nov. 1 through Nov. 15.

The most colorful trees in the two canyons are the big tooth maples which normally begin turning to various shades of yellow, orange and red the latter part of October or early November.

Hiking is required to see the colors in both canyons. The McKittrick Canyon area is generally the most spectacular but also requires the longest walk. This area of the park is open daily from 8 a. m. to 4:30 p. m. (Mountain Time) and is reached by taking U. S. Highway 62-180 to a signed turn-off located 48 miles south of Carlsbad, N. M., or seven miles north of the Guadalupe information station near Pine Springs, Tex. From the turn-off, it is a five-mile drive over a paved road to the parking area at the canyon mouth. Hikers going into McKittrick Canyon should plan to start their hike before 1 p. m. in order to have sufficient time, since this portion of the park is a day-use area and the gate at the main highway is closed and locked at 4:30 p. m.

The Dog Canyon area is reached by going the opposite direction out of Carlsbad toward Artesia for a distance of 10 miles, then over state Road 137 to Queen and El Paso Gap. From the end of Road 137 at El Paso Gap, a county road takes visitors to the Texas state line and park boundary.

Overnight campers will find designated campgrounds on each side of the park.

ONE OF A KIND—Much of the laboratory equipment in the new Halliburton Research Center is not found anywhere else in the world, such as this dynamic foamed fluid loss testing device. The device, which is used in calculating well stimulation methods, is operated by chemist Melody South and Dr. Bill Ford.

Halliburton Services To Open $40 Million Research Center

DUNCAN, Okla.—Part-Indian Will Rogers once told a meeting of descendants of the Pilgrims, "Shucks, my folks met the Mayflower." In a similar vein, Duncan's Halliburton Services—which is opening its $40-million research center to the public Sunday, Nov. 2—was showing concern for Mother Nature long before ecology became popular.

The concern is oil well cementing, an oil field conservation and safety practice that Erle P. Halliburton began offering in the Mid-Continent area of the U. S. in 1919. It is provided now to oil and gas operators around the world.

Part of the Sunday tour of the new 230,000 square foot Halliburton Research Center will show just how far founder Halliburton's cementing practices have come since 1919—thanks mainly to the firm's original research work carried on at Duncan.

Cementing consists of mixing cement with water and other chemicals to form a slurry; the slurry is then pumped to the bottom of the hole and back up into the space between the outside of the casing or pipe and the wall of the hole.

When the cement hardens, it forms a solid sheath that is designed to protect underground water flows, support the casing and to help prevent the migration of fluids up or down the hole.

Today, cementing of oil and gas wells is virtually universal; even many water wells are cemented in place.

As a result, Halliburton Services has become the single largest industrial user of cement in the world. In most years, it consumes more cement than most countries.

Halliburton researchers have developed cementing mixtures that will harden in a hurry or that will remain pumpable almost indefinitely; that will set up in ice, or that will set up in steam wells like those in Italy's Po Valley.

One of the recent fruits of research is a cement containing tiny glass balloons that is light enough to float on water. The lightweight cement, trademarked

Spherelite, is one of the Halliburton research products

Did you get a 14 percent raise this year? Your commissioner, Precinct 3 did. Private business can not afford this kind of increase. Only government taxing entities can afford spending without dipping into their own pockets. They dip into your pockets!

Government spending, at all levels, not only FUELS inflation, it CAUSES inflation.

Fringe benefits went up too! You pay both shares of the incumbent's social security. He does not contribute. Who pays your social security? You also pay additional retirement and hospitalization annually for the incumbent. Who provides for your retirement and hospitalization?

The incumbent receives out-of-county travel expense. He is furnished an unmarked car by you with oil, gas and repair costs furnished out of the precinct budget. Taxpayers would have to go to the courthouse to find out how much was spent on his car. How much does your car cost you per year?

It is time for Scurry County to elect a conservative commissioner who will be a watchdog over a more than nine million dollar budget which generated a 24 percent tax increase for 1981.

thatcher hangs tough

As the will of her Conservative party crumbles under the strain of an economy going through withdrawal from decades of government mismanagement, British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher gives no sign of wavering from the course she has followed since coming to power two years ago. The main stem of her program is an unbendingly tight monetary policy designed to starve inflation, and that, together with a desocialization agenda aimed at putting more resources in private hands, has brought temporary dislocations to the English society and has actually worsened some symptoms of sick economy.

The Labor left has been on Thatcher's back since the beginning, but that is to be expected. Now, however, much of the Tory business establishment is calling on her to abandon the printing-press restraint that, combined with heavy government borrowing, has driven interest rates up and has hurt exports by causing the pound to increase in value relative to other currencies. The commercial-industrial lobby would like return to the safe socialists that was leading Britain into the grave at the time the Iron Lady took over.

Fortunately for her nation and for the cause of free men everywhere, Thatcher is showing more steadfastness than Jimmy Carter in the White House or Ronald Reagan on the campaign trail. She resolutely insists that her policies will take time to work, and she has until 1983 until the next parliamentary elections can displace her.

Thatcher's experiment in quasi-libertarian governance is rife with dangers of failure owing to the vagaries of politics, and any such setback could do grave damage to the principles she seeks to uphold. Although we have no doubt that Thatcher's free-market philosophy is in the long-run the most propitious for all who would live of their own efforts, the painful process of adjusting to it may be more than a body politic can bear; the rejection of her course might be taken as a sign that the market - and not the misbegotten regulations from which it is trying to recover - is to blame.

The Wall Street Journal has been egging Thatcher on to make even more radical revisions, to cease compromising on the sale of nationalized industries, to cut more the public spending that forces the state into the capital market, and to dispense with the value-added tax increases she imposed, levies which counteracted her income tax cuts and contributed to the British nation's spiraling price hikes. With all of that we agree, and our interest is direct. Thatcher's bold overall attempt to return the free market to the land where theories of its great benefits first crystallized has captured the hearts of liberty's legions everywhere. If it is sold short by leftover statist policies or compromised into submission, we shall all bear the sorrow.

political prostitutes

Political campaigning is becoming. I'd recommend some more dignified system except that I can't think of one.

If there has been less mudslinging in the 1980 campaign there has been no less willingness to promise everybody everything.

It's demeaning, degrading and disgusting to see a president of the United States grovel at the feet of factions.

And to hear his challenger repeatedly contradict his own earlier utterances.

In the days when political campaigns were conducted from the back platform of a railroad train it was possible for candidates to promise higher farm prices in Kansas and lower food prices in Kansas City and not get caught.

Today's instant worldwide communication should shame these fellows into being consistent - but it hasn't.

President Carter in the coal country of Pennsylvania, Ohio and Illinois drew cheers with his promise to "replace Arab oil with Pennsylvania (or Ohio or Illinois) coal."

Miners might have asked, "Why hasn't he?" But they just cheered.

Reagan went before audiences of elderly in California asserting his enthusiasm for Social Security which historically he has deplored.

And Anderson campaigned in Philadelphia wearing a Phillies baseball cap.

Getting in bed with anybody for votes is political prostitution. Yet you'll hear the candidates - in a single city, in a single day - pledging their undying allegiance to blacks, Latins, Polish, Jews, Greeks - and marching in the Columbus Day parade.

President Carter, whose support for Palestinians is on the public record, promises Jewish voters in New York that if the U.N. supports the Palestinians he will pull us out of the U.N.

And Reagan - who opposed the government bailout of Chrysler - now tells Detroit's unemployed that he vigorously supports that bailout.

If all this has not made American voters cynical it has at least caused them to discount campaign oratory.

It used to be axiomatic in politics that the voter quickly forgets what you've done for him, wants instead to know what you are "going to do" for him.

In other words, he responded more to promises than to past performance.

I think not this time.

Reagan went before audiences of elderly in California asserting his enthusiasm for Social Security which historically he has deplored.

different ways to buy

NEW YORK (AP) — There's more than one way to finance a home, as young Americans have learned in recent years.

Sellers have helped. The simplest form of seller financing is the first mortgage, in which the seller performs the same role as a lending institution, accepting a down payment to begin with and regular monthly installments thereafter.

This form often involves a seller with a large equity buildup and a desire to avoid the maximum tax on his gains, or in some instances, a seller seeking a monthly income, perhaps to supplement a pension.

If less than 30 percent of the price is accepted as down payment, with the remaining payments spread over at least another year the seller may defer or lower his taxes.

Variations abound. Brokers say in some instances the seller gives a 5-year mortgage but with monthly payments based on a 30-year amortization, which results in a balloon payments after 5 years.

The assumption made is that the buyer will be in a better financial position five years later or that financing at that time will be more easily obtained, and maybe even at better interest rates.

During this time, of course, the buyer builds up considerable equity from having made regular payments and from appreciation, and thus becomes a more attractive risk to the conventional lender.

Such contracts involve dangers because not everyone will be better off five years from now. And the prospect of better financing terms is remote. The trend has been to steadily higher rates.

Properly written, the seller's end of the bargain might be saleable at a discount to another party, and thus permit him to get off the hook. The buyer generally has no choice but to pay up or default.

Renting, with the option to buy, has also proved useful to both seller and buyer. The seller receives rental income, and continues to benefit from appreciation and tax deductions. The buyer also might be allowed to apply rental payments, or a part of them, toward reducing the purchase price. The seller, however, might charge for giving an option.

For the buyer, an option has the benefit of making time stand still. Though he might not purchase the property for a year or so, he nails down the price, sometimes at current market value.

There is opportunity and risk. The option buyer might benefit from a sharp rise in market value. For $1,000 he conceivably could benefit by $5,000. He might also find himself unable to buy, and in that instance might be forced to forfeit his $1,000.

For the seller, the option gives some assurance that a sale will take place, or that if it doesn't he may keep the option payment.

my turn

by john long

I never suspected the seemingly harmless action of telling somebody "shhhh" could produce the murderous reaction described in the ax murder trial currently going on in McKinney.

If we are to believe the testimony of Candace Montgomery, she and Betty Gore were grappling about on a blood-slickened floor for control of an ax when Mrs. Gore made the fatal mistake of hissing out "shhhh." That comment somehow reminded the Montgomery woman of an unhappy childhood experience and prompted her to seize the ax and hack her one-time friend to death. She was struck 41 times.

That response, mind you, was from a woman who was opposed to violence.

When I read that, I became more aware of what I said to other people. If merely telling someone "shhhh" could produce that response, what would happen if I carelessly let drop something like "oh" or "my goodness" or even "damn it" in the wrong company? What would happen, heaven forbid, if I actually consigned someone of a violent nature to the infernal regions or gave insult to his mother in my speech?

I began eyeing the people I work with and the people I come in contact with every day wondering if they, too, had their little trigger words that I hadn't discovered yet. I began thinking about what words I hadn't yet used around them.

Think of it for a minute. If telling your friend, fellow choir member and fellow church member "shhhh" could prompt her to ax you to death, what might happen to someone less tactful?

The possibilities are endless.

Tumors Not Growing, Says Doctor

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A Mexican doctor who is treating Steve McQueen for cancer has refused to predict the actor's chances for recovery, but says the growth of tumors has been halted.

McQueen, 50, has been staying at the Plaza Santa Maria General Hospital in Baja California, Mexico, where he is being treated with the controversial drug Laetrile and a nutrition-based therapy.

"Right now I could say that his condition is stable and that hopefully we can progress toward his improvement, which is going to be from now on much slower than what we tried in the beginning," Dr. Rodrigo Rodriguez said recently at a news conference.

McQueen, the star of such films as "The Great Escape" and "The Cincinnati Kid," is suffering from mesothelioma, a rare and generally incurable form of cancer that attacks the lungs.

The use of Laetrile is generally illegal in the United States, and the American Cancer Society says the nutrition therapy McQueen is getting has not been found to be of any help in fighting cancer.

ASTRO-GRAPH
Bernice Bede Osol

October 31, 1980

Your successes come in the year ahead through completing that which you've already begun, so don't leave them to try what you think are greener pastures. The rewards you've been hoping for are with the former.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)
You're still in a period where your personal ambitions can be realized, but know when to stop pushing so you don't change momentum to an opposite direction. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the year following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21)
The way to avoid trouble today is to have alternatives ready. Someone who might be jealous could try to put rocks in your path, hoping you'll stumble.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
Collective efforts can still be beneficial to you today, but finish what you've started before either of you switch to new, unfamiliar interests.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)
There are many advantages to be gained today by working out partnership matters. However, make doubly sure you're looking out for the other guy's interests, too.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)
You may have the ear today of one who can offer you advancement in your job or career, so make certain you don't speak on anything you know little about.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
A social encounter could provide an air of intrigue which might have a large impact on you. Before getting involved, know what you're getting into.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
Because something isn't as well-defined as you'd like it to be you may be hesitant to make any changes, to the annoyance of someone in the family.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
A friend may have some good suggestions about handling a social problem. By all means follow it, but only after you fully understand the procedure.

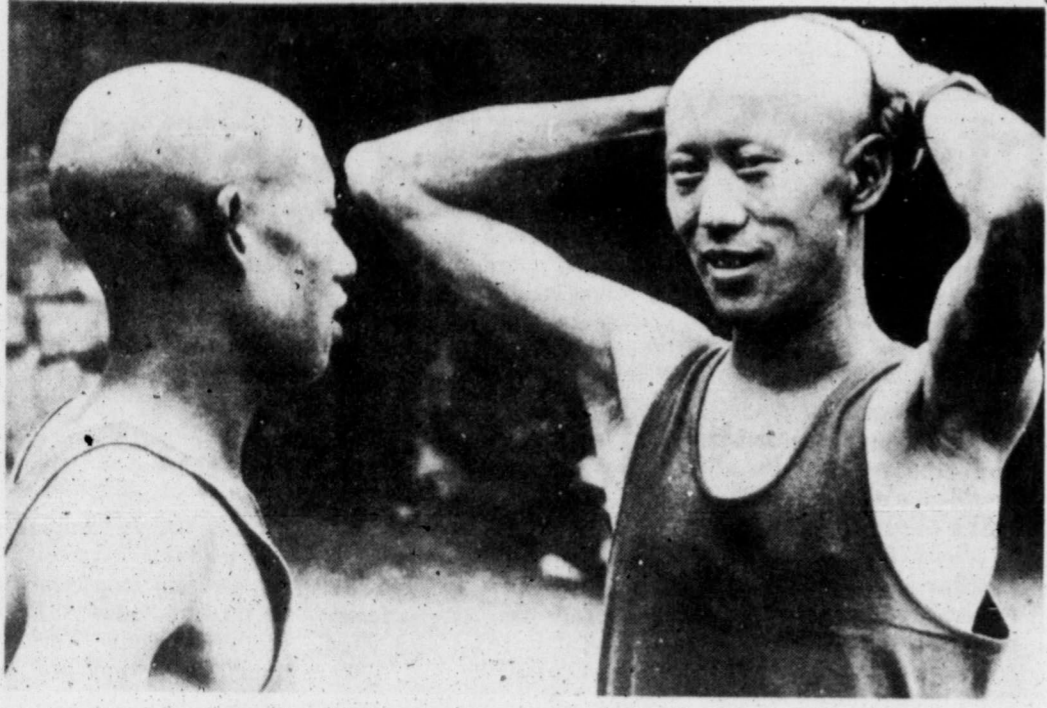

CANCER (June 21-July 21)
It could be very easy for a windfall to start burning a hole in your pocket today if you don't immediately put it where it'll do you some good.

LEO (July 22-Aug. 22)
Although this is basically a good-day you'll enjoy sharing with friends, you may be a bit more tired than you realize. Remember to quit while you're still ahead.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
Follow your instinct regarding the way you feel a financial situation should now be handled. Keep your ideas to yourself, because others may confuse you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
Friends are still important to your cause, but you may have to be a bit more careful than usual today that you don't get caught up in someone's irrational plans.

Fear Of Flying Class Treats Flight Fright

DALLAS (AP) — Marianne Vilbig boarded a charter flight to Oklahoma City, her hands ice-cold, her face a twisted portrait of sheer terror.

"Feel my hands," she said holding out her trembling fingers. "I'm not afraid of major surgery. But this, I'm afraid of."

"This" is flight. And until this weekend, flying was something Marianne absolutely could not do.

This weekend, Marianne and about 40 other terrified passengers — aviaphobics — completed a course designed to conquer their fears. Graduation was a trip to Oklahoma City and back.

For $250, they took a six-session course that included the flight and were awarded diplomas that proclaimed they had "reluctantly, but courageously, left the Planet Earth for a flight."

A couple of people didn't exactly pass with, er, flying colors. One man didn't get on the plane in the first place and one woman almost didn't get back on in Oklahoma City.

Capt. Truman W. "Slim" Cummings, a retired airline pilot who has taught the fear of flying seminars for five years, said that wasn't a bad average.

The flight was not what you would call ordinary. Just before takeoff, Gloria Sadafsaz announced she was going to throw up.

Cummings knelt beside her in the aisle, patting her hand in a fatherly way.

"Now, Gloria," he said, "There's a part of you that wants very much to stay on the flight."

Yes, Gloria said, but that didn't quell her nausea.

"No, you're not going to throw up," Cummings said, quietly handing her a bag. "If you throw up, I'll throw up with you."

The issue did not come up again.

Boarding the plane, several of the students wanted to sit near the bathroom. Others wanted to sit backwards to ignore the fact that they were moving forward.

"I want everyone to sit up front together," Cummings said. "I don't want anybody isolated. I want everybody to have a buddy. We want to share strength."

The Southwest Airlines jet took off.

A few people lit cigarettes. Others shook their hands, their toes, their hips — practicing the desensitization exercises they had learned in class.

"I'm scared, but it's OK!"

they yelled in unison.

Mrs. Sadafsaz clutched her sickness bag. Dierk McWilliams wept. Mrs. Vilbig clenched her teeth and squeezed her purse, admitting she was "apprehensive."

As they practiced breathing exercises, the cabin began to resemble a Lamaze childbirth class. Amid the pants, Cummings spoke in a soft voice:

"I want to paint a quick scene. It's opportunity day. It's the day to call on the courage that's just waiting to be tapped. It's a day to create a miracle."

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Preventing osteoporosis

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I read your recent column on osteoporosis or bone softening which is so common in women and I'd like to avoid this disease.

I'm 42, weigh 107 pounds and I'm 5 feet 2. A year ago I had a complete hysterectomy because of a fibroid tumor. I have no complaints other than minor back pain on arising. I'm not on any medicines but never drink milk. Otherwise, I have a varied diet including lots of fresh fruits and vegetables and salads plus whole grain breads.

Would buttermilk or yogurt, which I like, be an adequate substitute for the fortified skim milk you recommended? If so, in what amounts?

DEAR READER — As I mentioned in my previous column, osteoporosis is softening of the bones. It literally means porous bones and is the underlying cause for many of the buffalo humps or dowager humps and postural changes that start developing in women after the change of life. These changes also occur in men but usually it's about 10 or 20 years later than they commonly occur in women.

The softening or brittleness of the bones makes them susceptible to fractures and is the underlying reason why many older people have a fracture with what would be a minor fall for a younger person. A high percentage of hip fractures are because of osteoporosis.

You're very wise to think about doing something now to prevent such changes. You're a small woman which means you have a small skeleton and in that case you're particularly susceptible to the problem. And it's true that women who mended daily allowances for other age groups. A quart of whole milk normally contains about 1.2 grams of calcium. A quart of fortified low-fat or fortified skim milk contains are on a calcium-deficient diet are five times as likely to develop this problem as women who receive a normal or increased amount of calcium.

The major source of usable calcium in our diet is milk or milk products. Incidentally, there are some people who think that the calcium to phosphorus ratio is important. Many of the foods that we eat are higher in phosphorus than they are in calcium; milk is a notable exception.

The current concepts of treating and preventing osteoporosis are discussed in The Health Letter number 6-10, Osteoporosis: Bone Softening, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long-stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

I usually recommend that a woman past the change of life should have at least a gram of calcium a day and a gram-and-a-half is better. This is more than the usual recom-

Paving Bids

Due Sometime

In November

Bids for pavement markings along 49 miles of various highways in Scurry, Mitchell, Nolan and Taylor Counties are expected to be received in November by the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

Abilene District Engineer Roger Welsch said the project includes providing center stripes and edge lines by means of thermoplastic paving markers, a relatively new, experimental procedure. The new markers are long-lasting and of high intensity.

Ed Vernon of Snyder is the department's engineer supervising the project.

about 1.4 grams of calcium. A quart of buttermilk is equivalent to a quart of whole milk and contains about 1.2 grams of calcium. It also retains a favorable calcium to phosphorus ratio. Yogurt is about the same. So, yes, you can use buttermilk or yogurt if you wish.

It's important for you to know if you had your ovaries removed with your hysterectomy. If so, you may well derive some additional protection for your bones by taking estrogen replacements.

(NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

WASHINGTON (AP) — A woman in the audience asked President Carter a hostile question and then broke into laughter, confessing that the question actually had been written by her son and that she personally thought the president was doing a good job.

Then she began to scold her son, Robert, who also was present at the question-and-answer session at Hofstra University in New York earlier this month.

Carter asked, whether Robert had voted for him in 1976. Robert waved his arms dramatically and declared: "Yes, I did, and it was the biggest mistake of my life!"

By this time the audience was laughing hysterically. In mock indignation the president declared: "I'll talk to you later!"

While the question-and-answer sessions with local citizens that have become a staple of Carter's re-election campaign don't usually feature such light-hearted family squabbles, they often show that people do not lack boldness when it comes to a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to speak directly to the president of the United States.

Many people, of course, ask about serious issues such as the economy, foreign policy or regional interests.

But others ask funny, frivolous or personal questions. Some even seek advice, or invitations to the White House, and many offer Carter words of encouragement.

At a high school in Toledo, Ohio, last week, 18-year-old Pete Ganzel told the president he felt "very alienated from our government," and asked "if I would come to Washington, D.C., would you give up three hours of your time, sit down and talk to me?"

The audience laughed. Carter declared firmly, "No," pausing for effect while the audience applauded. Then he explained that "there are 230 million people in this nation and if I gave everybody three hours I wouldn't have any way to deal with the problems."

Then Carter turned to the young man's congressman, Lud Ashley, and said, "I'm sure Lud would be glad to," while the audience laughed appreciatively at the president's maneuverings.

At a so-called town meeting in Avoca, Pa., a high school teacher named Vincent Peperno said, "I think we need a little break in the routine so I'll ask a question and I hope it isn't too funny." His question: "After you're re-elected in November, would you invite me and my family to the White House?" The president: "Is there anybody here that knows Vincent Peperno? What kind of fellow is he?" Laughter.

Someone piped up: "Mr. President. He's my uncle."

Carter: "Is there anybody here that knows Vincent that's not kin to him? Would you invite him to your house?"

Someone said yes, and Carter relented. "Vincent, I'll invite you to my house," he said.

Help For Mushrooms

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is going to look for new ways to help the nation's mushroom industry compete with imported canned brands.

producers more competitive. President Carter has decided to increase tariffs on mushroom imports for three years to provide "breathing time" for the industry, noted Assistant Agriculture Secretary P.R. Smith. During that time, growers must study ways of developing new markets and promoting their product, he said.

'Something Special' Keeps Him Going

By David Tishendorf

ROSEBURG, Ore. (NEA) — For 13 of his 15 years, Doug Hinkle has battled for his life. Healthy at birth, Doug was stricken with a kidney disease when he was 2 years old. His kidneys, as they atrophied, became unable to "purge his body of poisonous wastes." Doctors said he wouldn't live. But they hadn't counted on that "something special" that Doug's mother says he has in him. He has clung to life through three kidney transplants. Today he has only 5 percent function of his kidneys.

Meanwhile, the cortisone he must take to combat kidney disease and rejection has stunted his growth. He stands 3-foot-10 and weighs 55 pounds. That he is alive at all is a tribute to his courage and tremendous will.

That he has an active life that has included swimming, soccer, fishing, music and, a host of other "normal" activities is something of a miracle.

Doug rises from the couch in his living room, pulls a plastic bag from his front pocket and matter-of-factly drops it on the carpeted floor.

A clear plastic tube leads from the bag to his waist. He releases a clamp on the tube and a faintly yellow fluid begins to flow into the bag.

Doug has just begun Continuous Ambulatory Peritoneal Dialysis, a relatively new technique that has had promising results for many kidney patients.

The kidneys are the healthy body's sanitation system, cleansing the blood of wastes and helping to eliminate excess water. When kidney function is lost, an alternative cleansing method must be used to prevent the build-up of toxins and water.

With CAPD, the wastes are filtered out not by the kidneys or a man-made substitute but by another part of the body, the thin membrane lining the abdominal, or peritoneal, cavity.

This cavity covers the stomach, liver, spleen and intestines as well as the kidneys. To make this area accessible, doctors cut a small permanent opening just below the navel, then implant a tube leading through the membrane and into the cavity.

Every four hours — except for an eight-hour stretch at night — Doug attaches a bag containing about a liter of special sugar solution to a hanger over his head.

The solution drains into his abdomen, bathing the peritoneal membrane, which contains many small blood vessels. The tube is then clamped off and the empty bag is folded up and stuck into his pocket.

Inside the abdominal cavity, a complex chemical movement begins. Toxic wastes and water from the bloodstream pass through the peritoneal membrane into the fluid.

Four hours later, Doug unfolds the bag, lays it on the floor and lets the waste-laden fluid drain out of the abdominal cavity. Another bag of fresh solution is then attached and the procedure is repeated.

In traditional dialysis, the blood is pumped outside the body to a machine for cleansing. This is a time-consuming process, requiring a patient to be connected to the machine for four to six hours three times a week. Moreover, most patients must travel to a dialysis center for treatment.

CAPD, on the other hand, can be done at home and requires only about half an hour per session. In addition, there is some evidence that it does a better job of cleansing than does the machine.

This last year was particularly rough for Doug until he began CAPD. A fungus infection in his leg followed by a couple of viruses proved more than his latest transplanted kidney could handle.

Enter Heidi, Doug's schnauzer.

"She got to go in the bed with him at the hospital," says Doug's mother, Jean. "I think that's all that kept him alive this year — waiting to get home to that dog."

The CAPD has helped Doug to feel better. "If I can remain stable," he says, "I may forget it and do without that fourth transplant."

Bright and articulate, Doug has kept up in his studies with the help of tutors. He is now a sophomore in high school.

He plays the French horn, keeps a garden, is a gourmet cook, swims and has played soccer. Last summer he went to church camp, dialyzed bags and all.

But it hasn't been easy. Medical expenses have run into the hundreds of thousands of dollars. Even his dialyze solution costs about $25 a day. Medicare has helped pay the bills. So has the Kidney Association of Oregon.

There are days of frustration and discouragement. "It happens," Doug admits. "Especially the older I get. All my friends have gotten taller, and here I am."

Doug's 17-year-old brother, Jack, is 6-foot-4; 13-year-old brother Greg and 10-year-old sister Peggy are also bigger than Doug.

"He has his days when he really gets down," says Mrs. Hinkle. "You have to have a sense of humor and you have to take it a day at a time. We also are a Christian family, and I often wonder what people do who have no faith."

Doug's medical problems extend beyond his kidneys. The cortisone and other medications have had other side effects beside stunting his growth.

Cortisone, for example, lowers his resistance to infection. Cataracts have developed on both eyes, and he has high blood pressure.

But Doug is looking ahead. His favorite subject in school is science, and he says he may someday become a veterinarian or a sheep rancher.

Mrs. Hinkle watches as Doug and his father examine a special fishing rod modified for Doug's size. Hinkle, a former music teacher who owns companies that rent toilets and pump out septic tanks, has similarly modified Doug's French horn and other items.

"We've tried to make things as normal for him as we can," says Mrs. Hinkle. "If he's naughty, he gets disciplined just like the other kids. And he's done everything and gone everywhere the rest of them have."

"There must be something special about him," she adds. "He's still with us."

The hand woven fabrics of Star Shelton will be featured in the Scurry County Museum at Western Texas College starting Nov. 8.

Designer fashions by Mrs. Shelton will be modeled in a style show in the museum on Nov. 8. A luncheon will accompany the style show, and tickets are $6 each. Tickets are to be purchased by Nov. 4 in the museum office.

Mrs. Shelton will be guest speaker for a brown bag luncheon in the museum Nov. 10, talking about the history of weaving. No reservations are necessary for the brown-bag luncheons and the public is invited to attend.

Weavings by Mrs. Shelton will be exhibited in the museum from Nov. 9-25.

Mrs. Shelton lives near Lamesa with her family, and turns out her woven fabrics on looms inherited from her grandmother. She uses natural fibers almost exclusively and hand-dyes many of the yarns for her creations.

Information about the weaving exhibit and programs may be obtained by calling the museum office at 573-6107.

Drives Car Into Wall At Hospital

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — A 76-year-old man was in satisfactory condition after setting his car ablaze and attempting to drive it through the wall of Broward General Hospital, police said.

The man, Juan Yates Diaz of Oakland Park, was pulled Thursday from the burning wreckage of the car by a police officer, according to Sgt. Frank Schueler.

Police said Diaz told them he had an urn containing the ashes of his late wife, Louise, with him. Mrs. Diaz died Sunday in the hospital and her husband was apparently despondent over her death, police said.

Datsun Recall

DETROIT (AP) — Datsun is recalling the 1980 versions of its 200-SX cars to fix a throttle problem, according to Nissan U.S.A., the importer of Datsuns.

The recall affects, 39,382 Datsun owners in states other than California, Nissan said Thursday.

HOW IT IS BELOW—Want to know what it's like 16,000 feet down in a wildcat well in Wyoming? Halliburton technician Jody Allen can recreate the pressures and temperatures encountered in such a well at Halliburton Services' Research Center.

Halliburton

that will be displayed at the Nov. 2 opening.

Halliburton Services is one of a large number of technical oil field service organizations that are relatively unknown but who nonetheless play a very significant role in helping the actual producers of oil and gas, both the majors and the independents, find and produce hydrocarbons.

"We're proud to say that many of the significant practical innovations and advancements in oil field service technology have been introduced to the industry as a result of Halliburton research and development," said Leonard Leon, president.

"Halliburton is entirely committed to remaining the world leader in the technical oil field service industry and for that reason this new research center was built to help us meet the constantly increasing needs of the petroleum industry and other energy industries."

Another major well service provided by Halliburton, stimulating wells by hydraulic fracturing, will be featured at the open house also. Fracturing has increased the recoverable reserves of oil and gas in North America alone by more than 25 percent since it was first performed commercially by Halliburton in 1949.

Recently, Halliburton has even begun fracturing wells in the North Sea off Great Britain, but the vast majority of this stimulation work is performed on both old and new U. S. wells in the Mid-Continent, Appalachia and the Rockies.

The open house Sunday will begin with brief ceremonies and continue into that evening. Many of the 500-plus persons working there will be on duty during the afternoon.

Halliburton Services has some 4,000 employees working in Duncan and another 16,000 around the world, including many in the Snyder area.

Halliburton Services is one of the major units of the Dallas-based Halliburton Co.
