

On The

BEAM

By J. W. King, Sr.

Now that part of the election is over we can concentrate on things that affect us more directly. We do not want to leave the impression that elections are not important. They are, and it is important that we choose the right officials to serve us during the next two years. The election last Saturday settled races for some offices but not all. Some very important offices are to be filled in the runoff election to be held August 24, and we should all take part in that election. Because your favorite candidate got eliminated is no reason you should take no more interest. The men who are nominated on August 24 will in all probability be the ones who will serve us so it is up to all of us to make a wise choice.

It continues hot and dry. It looks like it just can't rain, but it will, we hope. In spite of the dry weather crops are holding up reasonably well and there will be some cotton and feed made whether it rains or not, but of course the crops would be a lot better with rain.

Don't forget the Dairy Show coming up on August 22. Prepare your animals for exhibition and help to make the show a real success.

Bids Received On Farm-Market Road

Austin, July 23 (Special)—A low bid of $85,686.51 was submitted Tuesday by Thomas and Ratliff of Rogers, Texas, for construction of 7.9 miles of Farm-to-Market Road No. 644 from Lorraine to the Scurry County line and 2.1 miles of Ranch-to-Market Road No. 18 southeast of Colorado City.

The bid calls for grading, drainage structures, flexible base and single asphalt surface on a total of 10 miles of road. The Ranch Road 18 project will extend the pavement from 7 to 9 1/2 miles southeast of Colorado City on the projected crow-flight route between the Mitchell County Seat and San Angelo via Robert Lee.

Construction is expected to begin within 30 to 60 days, provided formal contracts are approved by the State Highway Commission and concurrence obtained from the Public Roads Administration. Specifications will require that the projects be completed within 120 working days, after construction begins.

Highway Commission Chairman John S. Redditt announced that thirteen Farm-to-Market projects involving 99 miles of road had been completed in Texas since the current program got under way earlier this year.

The Mitchell County project is among twenty-two Farm-to-Market projects in the State on which the Commission received bids Tuesday and Wednesday. If contracts are awarded on all these there will be a total of 1,234 miles of Farm-to-Market roads on 131 projects that have been placed under contract since last January.

All are a part of the State Highway Department's three year program which will bring a paved road to within one mile of 62% of all Texas rural dwellings and within two miles of 71% by the end of 1948.

"Sharp increases in construction costs have been encountered since the roads on our present three year 7,500 mile Farm-to-Market program were chosen last year from recommendations of the various County Judges and Commissioners' Courts."

Chairman Redditt said. "Earlier this year it had been feared these rising costs would reduce the mileage that could be built with available funds," he added, "but record gasoline sales the past several months lead us to believe increased gas tax revenue will offset the rising construction costs. This should permit the completion of all mileage as originally planned."

Echo of Bombs Induces Science Aid

Scientists for Unhampered Freedom in Research Work

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1616 Eye Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

The bomb which leveled Hiroshima and has since been echoing in the Pacific did something to congress that could not have been done before the explosion. It induced the senate to loosen the public purse strings to the extent of voting to subsidize a national scientific research foundation.

Scientists don't have many votes, so the persuasion couldn't have come by way of a lobby. The public imagination had been stirred. Suddenly the layman realized that science was a powerful factor in war. He realized too that perhaps men who could smash the atom and make it smash the enemy, might learn how to use the powers of the sleeping giant—atomic energy—for the good as well as the ill of mankind.

At this writing congress has not completed action of the bill but probably will have done so by the time these lines are read. The idea of a national research program seemed very good to me. Therefore, I was somewhat surprised to hear a pharmacological authority of my acquaintance say that passage of this legislation "would be destructive in the field of science," as the bomb was in the midst of Hiroshima and Nagasaki. He made the observation in a group of several who were scientists. His hearers appeared to echo his sentiments—sentiments which I later learned he had set forth in the recent Bulletin of the American Association of University Professors. He (Dr. Theodore Koppányi) said: "In an analysis of the bill, a basic wrong immediately leaps to the eye. This is the assumption that scientific research can be 'initiated' or 'prescribed for.' If this assumption could be grounded, the natural sequel to a national research foundation would be federal foundations to 'initiate' and 'prescribe for' the composition of music, the painting of pictures, the writing of poems, and the establishment of social controls and education, for science is probably the most personal and individualistic of all human endeavors. No agency, however authorized and directed, can develop a national policy for scientific research."

Difficult to Pass On Projects

The theories and ways of thinking of scientists, Dr. Koppányi explained (and his colleagues agreed), are as diverse as the world itself. "How can we set up a court with the power to pass on what is good and what is not good for science?" he asked, and then he turned to me with this question: "Would you approve of having a member of your profession—a commentator or news-writer—appointed by a President of the United States, as head of a similarly selected group of your colleagues who were made privy to private government information, which was barred from other speakers or writers?"

Naturally I said: "No." (That would be the end of the freedom of the press and radio.)

Then Dr. Koppányi concluded: "You can spend a lot of money and get no return. But if you trust in human ingenuity, motivated by desire of public service, the love of science, recognition, and maybe selfish aims alike, you will have done more for basic science than you could ever do with billions of dollars of federal money."

Social Science Study Lags

Spokesmen for the so-called social sciences (the study of people, of individuals and groups) were loud in criticizing the omission from the bill of provisions for research in this field.

An engineer spoke for the social scientists in these words: "We've gone miles ahead in our study of inanimate things, in physics, chemistry and the other sciences that deal with inorganic matter, compared to our advancement in the study of human beings—why they act the way they do under given conditions, their relations to other individuals and to groups, and the action of the groups in relation to each other."

He spoke of the recent pogrom in Kielce, Poland, where the Jews were attacked and killed. It all started from a false rumor, a planted rumor. The very same thing, the engineer pointed out, touched off the riots three years ago in Detroit. Those are known facts but there is very little public knowledge of what causes such action, how it can be prevented.

Possession Is Law to Russ

Russian expropriation of Austrian property and her delaying tactics in the setting of the peace conference seem to be predicated on the theory: Why start any discussions of who gets what if you can operate on the old theory that possession is nine points of the law?

Possession is an important factor. Take the recent experience of a Philadelphia horse. Around midnight one night a horse walked into a residential district and began devouring gardens of dahlias, morning-glories, snapdragons and other flowers. The infuriated householders tried to shoo the horse away, but he kicked at them and went right on expropriating the bourgeois blooms. However, in the good old American tradition, a policeman appeared with a rope and lassoed the beast. He was removed to the police stables where he couldn't exercise a veto on this purely procedural process.

This subversive tendency in the animal world was revealed in another part of Philadelphia at about the same time. Returning from a week-end, a householder and his family who had started a counter-revolutionary campaign against what they thought to be a harmless mouse, found a large-sized rat in the trap they had set. The rat with the trap attached as a minor incumbrance went right after the family which climbed tables and chairs. This time when the cop came he felt aggressive warfare justifiable and finished the rat with his reactionary night-stick.

Congress' Work Is Never Done

Congressmen invariably come to work January 14 brisk of step, bright of eye, confident they'll have all the bills passed, all the necessary business disposed of by July 1 at the latest, so they can go home to their families.

The old timers, of course, know they are just kidding themselves. Business is never completed by July 1, though they work from sun to sun for like woman's congress work is never done. Consequently, fishing trips, motor jaunts, and important electioneering have to be postponed while house and senate members labor in Washington heat to complete last-minute legislation. This year, it was the OPA agency that fevered congressional brows late into July. Debate was so furious, night sessions were so frequent that I wasn't surprised when I heard a man in the visitor's gallery of the capitol ask: "Why did they wait so long to get at the OPA bill? Seems to me they always have a lot of stuff left to do at the end of a session that they could have taken up earlier. Do they always let it go so long that these closing days sound like a rowdy jam session?"

I reported this remark to a man who knows Capitol Hill, as you and I know the short-cut home.

"There are no jams in congress," he answered as he inhaled another tablespoonful of the famous senate restaurant bean soup.

"Not even on OPA?" I modestly needed.

"No," he said, "but I'll admit they came to a near-jam when they had to work like the dickens to get the bill to the President before the OPA expired. But they did get it to him (he was talking about the first OPA bill)—and it was better than a lot of people had expected. That was no jam."

Chester Bowles has passed from the Washington scene, his head bloody but unbowed, and full of thoughts of further battle. We'll see what happens in the next senatorial elections in the Nutmeg state.

SET-ASIDE TERMINATED

Wheat Sale Requirement Ends

Producers wheat set-aside requirements, under which it was mandatory for wheat farmers to sell half the grain from the 1946 crop that they took to elevators or warehouses for storage, have been terminated by the government. The set-aside provision had been inoperative since June 30, final effective date of grain ceilings.

Action to eliminate the requirement preceded final vote on the senate version of the new price control bill, which as it now stands, makes it mandatory for the government to issue certificates protecting producers forced to sell their grain through a government order against

PROTEST STRIKES . . . In protest against soaring prices following end of OPA controls, buyers' strikes were planned throughout the nation under instigation of unions, veterans' groups, consumers councils and other organizations. Typical is this scene showing St. Louis housewives picketing a dairy in protest against the entire dairy industry in St. Louis, where milk prices have risen 15 per cent and butter 23 per cent.

NEWS REVIEW

Wheeler, Veteran Senator, Defeated; Talmadge Wins

POLITICS:

Beat Wheeler

Political observers studied the campaign in the Democratic senatorial primary in Montana for a clue to the cause of defeat of the veteran Burton K. Wheeler, with a variety of reasons appearing to contribute to his downfall.

Since the rugged veteran led the non-interventionist cause before Pearl Harbor, the Japanese attack on the U. S. and the swing of American sentiment toward effective world co-operation were seen to have acted strongly against him. But because of the closeness of his defeat, the CIO-PAC fight against him, the opposition of the powerful railroad brotherhoods and the diversion of the main strength of the Democratic organization to his opponent, Leif Erickson, could have weakened enough votes away from him to spell defeat.

Winding up 24 years of senatorial service, Wheeler said: ". . . The people of Montana have been very good to me. . . . Those who voted in the Democratic primary have relieved me of a great responsibility and a lot of work. . . . Probably I have lost many supporters because I did not go along blindly with a Democratic administration in the last few years, but I could not sacrifice my principles. . . ."

term on a platform of "white supremacy."

Despite the fact that his No. 1 opponent, James V. Carmichael, rolled up an impressive popular vote, Talmadge took an early lead in the decisive unit voting in which winners are determined by the number of counties they carry.

Against a background of a U. S. Supreme court decision opening Democratic primaries in the South to Negroes, and another court ruling forbidding segregation on interstate buses, Talmadge conducted a vigorous "white supremacy" campaign. With Georgia's state administration under retiring Gov. Ellis Arnall making no effort to curb the colored vote, more than 100,000 Negroes flocked to the polls, separate booths being set up in some election stations.

INVENTORIES:

Hit Hoarding

Hitting at the withholding of merchandise from the market in anticipation of higher prices, Civilian Production administration drew up stringent inventory controls on manufacturers of electrical appliances and other scarce goods.

At the same time, CPA disclosed that exports may be limited if ships move out a flood of goods at high prices to badly depleted foreign markets. Restoration of OPA price control would make such a step unnecessary, it was said.

Under CPA regulations, inventories of finished goods would be restricted to 30 days. Included are refrigerators, furniture, washing machines, electric ranges, sewing machines, vacuum cleaners, cameras, asphalt and tarred roofing, paint screen cloth and galvanized ware.

JUSTICE:

Free Spy Suspect

The jury had just returned a verdict of not guilty on five charges of spying against 30-year-old Nicolai Redin, Russian naval lieutenant. Elated by the finding, the stocky defendant rose to his feet, crossed to the jury box and shook hands with the seven men and five women.

"Ladies and gentlemen of the jury," he said in heavily accented tones, "I want to thank you for the fair trial I have received here in America." Then shaking hands with Judge Lloyd Black, he declared: "The friendship between our two countries has existed and will exist."

Redin's acquittal followed Judge Black's censure of the prosecution for building up the international aspects of the case, with their implications of U. S. and Russian differences. Arrested in Portland, Ore., last March as he was about to board a ship for Russia, he was charged with obtaining and attempting to transmit secret plans of the new 14,000-ton destroyer tender, USS Yellowstone.

CONTROL IS PROBLEM

Congress Battle Rages In Face of Atom Test

"TASK BAKER"—Radio impulses sent out to detonate the underwater "A" bomb for the "Task Baker," second of the Bikini experiments. The bomb was suspended from a special barge (2). As indicated by the arrows (3) a number of "drone" ships were directed into the lagoon to test the effects of radio-activated water.

By WALTER A. SHEAD

WNU Washington Correspondent.

HONOLULU, OPERATIONS

CROSSROAD. — While army and navy officials in charge of Joint Task Force 1 at the Bikini atomic bomb tests are interested in the squabble now going on in the congress as between civilian and military control of atomic energy, their single interest here is to complete successfully the important experiments on the possible damage which an atom bomb can do to a fleet at sea.

In the meantime, Adm. W. H. P. Blandy, commander of Operations Crossroads, has intimated that weather conditions may force a week's delay in the underwater test in Bikini lagoon scheduled for July 25, which would make "Baker-day" Aug. 1 or thereabouts. As has been pointed out, the weather for this second test need not be as perfect as for the first test when the bomb was dropped from a B-29, but it must be clear enough for aerial observation and photography.

The press ship USS Appalachian has completed her trip to Pearl Harbor for minor repairs and now is anchored with the rest of the maintenance fleet in Bikini lagoon, ready to pull out and cruise outside to the seaward side of the island when the time is ripe for the second test.

Few 's-main. Only approximately 23 correspondents are left aboard the ship, since most of them returned to the States immediately after the first test.

The pattern for the underwater test has been completed with the battleship Arkansas, which was barely blistered by the first test, and the carrier Saratoga, also undamaged as a result of the first bomb, almost equidistant and nearest to the proposed bomb burst.

A little to the east are the battleship New York and the cruiser Salt Lake City. Both suffered negligible damage in the first blast. Then to the west of the two center ships are the cruiser Pensacola and the carrier Independence. The old independence is merely a hulk in the water with her insides torn out and her topsides blasted away as result of the bomb and her own internal explosions. The Pensacola is undamaged below decks, but her superstructure is pretty well battered up as a result of the first tests, with both stacks blown away.

Farther out in the circle are the battleships Pennsylvania and Nevada, the Jap ship Nagato and the German pocket battleship Prinz Eugen. Just forward of the Arkansas and the Saratoga are several submarines which are submerged at various depths with the double-hulled Pilotfish almost as close to the center of the burst as the Arkansas. Lighter ships make up the balance of the target array.

Opinions Vary. The effect of the bomb on these submarines is awaited with interest and in the meantime the discussion goes on as between those who predict this underwater blast will sink several capital ships including the submarines, and those who declare the damage will be negligible.

Oceanographers, who have made such elaborate plans to measure effects of the bomb, will come into their own on this second test. There was little for them to measure as result of the first test since the bomb made no appreciable waves and did no damage to the ocean bed, beaches or the island.

However, this second test is expected to create high waves in the lagoon, anywhere from 10 feet up. There are 81 officers and men in this section of the task force, most of whom have been in the vicinity of Bikini since last March recording data on the physical oceanography, biology, geology and fisheries of the atoll and surrounding waters.

Measurements of wave motion in terms of time, height and distance, their effect on the sea bottom and on the beaches, fall into three classes—supersonic echo sounding devices, and aerial and surface photography, plus maximum water height recorders on Bikini island and water level meters on several other islands of the atoll.

There are supersonic echo sounders or fathometers on 16 ships in the target array which will record large waves through the rise and fall of the ships, while 11 supersonic echo sounders on buoys will record passage of shorter waves. Mechanical pressure recorders laid 600 yards apart on the bottom of the lagoon are capable of recording wave height in range from 4 to 200 feet.

Animals Still Dying. The after-effects of this radio activity is impressive as seen from the effects on the live animals placed aboard the ships, some of which still are dying despite treatment, three weeks after they were exposed to the first bomb.

As the first task force awaits on the eve of this second test one cannot help but conjecture upon the possible effects of this unpredictable and still unknown terrific nuclear force which can decimate entire cities and depopulate nations as has been amply demonstrated at Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

The first test proved beyond any doubt that the bomb was not as effective in the open space at sea as it is when detonated over heavily-populated areas on land. . . . that used against naval bases on land it could render a fleet at sea impotent, but that it would put out of commission a good many ships if they were in close formation and that loss of life aboard these ships would be terrific.

What effect this atomic energy will have on the future of the American navy as to ship construction and operations now, however, lies in the laps of the military evaluation board and the President's atomic energy commission, both of which are making a study for future guidance.

We can only hope that medical scientists and other scientists here for observation will glean from peace-time application which can bring benefits, and not destruction, from this new war-born source of energy.

'Eccentric' Bomb Explains Wide Miss

Over on Kwajalein where the army air force section of the task force is holding forth, Maj. Gen. William E. Kepner, deputy commander for air, still is seeking to find an answer to the questions of reporters as to why Major Swan-cut and his crew missed the Nevada or bulls-eye of the first test by something like 2,500 feet. This reporter does not believe the miss was that far, since my calculations indicate the bomb fell astern and a little to port of the Nevada about 600 yards away or approximately 1,800 feet.

At any rate, General Kepner now comes up with an answer, according to his latest conference, that the bomb was an "eccentric" and that the drop was in the category known as a "wobbler." In other words that the bomb veered and did not fall true.

THE STORY THUS FAR: "You are lying, Martha," Bob Reynolds told Martha. "You did not kill her; your sister did." Martha's story was beaten down, and she admitted that Letty, the mental patient, had done it. "I like a terrible dream," Meg told Larry. Tenderly Larry reminded her that Tom Fallon was a free man and loved her. She was too upset to know. But good came out of it, for Jim MacTavish, now humbled, decided to do something for himself. He announced that he was to become the editor of a nearby newspaper while its publisher was in the armed forces. "Larry asked for you," her father stated. "She had not seen him for several days, and there was a single sent through her."

CHAPTER XVII

Suddenly he broke off, and after a moment he said, "Oh, yes, I knew there was something I had forgotten. I saw Laurence while I was in town."

Megan was startled to discover that her needle had slipped and pricked her finger, startled at the sudden single that ran through her at the mention of Laurence's name. She looked up, feeling her father's eyes upon her, and knew, by the sudden warmth of her face, that she was blushing. Which, she told herself furiously, was pretty silly, anyway you looked at it.

"He asked about you," said Jim when she did not speak. "He sent you his love."

Once more the needle slipped and Megan winced, but her voice was quite steady as she asked, "Are you sure he said his love?"

Jim took his pipe out of his mouth and stared at her as though surprised. "Well, of course I'm sure," he said. "How's Megan? Give her my love and tell her I'll see her soon."

And Megan, a little warm something stirring in her heart, bent her head above her sewing, and a tiny, secret smile touched her mouth for a moment.

The busy, crowded days of early spring melted into the even busier days of late spring. Early summer came and the crops stood lush and green in the fields, but Laurence had not come.

Jim was finding the newspaper business exciting, though he quarreled with Mrs. Morgan and came home occasionally smarting with fury at some fancied slight or some contradiction she had given to one of his orders. But his editorials had been well received.

On a late June evening, when the whole world seemed locked in a golden haze of loveliness, Megan came up from the fields, intent on nothing more exciting than a brisk shower and fresh clothes, when she saw a car standing at the gate.

She came on into the kitchen and said, "Have we got company, Annie?"

Annie's lower lip was thrust out, an indication that Annie was angry about something; but her tone was, as usual with Annie under such moods, almost expressionless, when she answered:

"Yessum—he waitin' in de settin' room."

Megan stripped the gaily figured scarf from her head, shook out her tumbled curls, and walked into the living room. The man who stood at the window turned to face her—and Megan was still, rigid with shock. Because the man who faced her was—Tom Fallon.

He had aged, and his face was set and grim, his eyes those of the tragically lost. But as he looked at her, some of the haggard look vanished from his face and he said in a tone just above a whisper, "You're lovelier than ever."

"Please sit down," she said. "I've been offered the job of principal at the school again this year," he said.

Megan caught her breath. "But—but surely—you wouldn't want to come back—here?" she gasped.

He studied her for a moment, and then he said quietly, "You can't possibly imagine my being willing ever to return here, to Pleasant Grove, can you, Megan?"

"Well—no, I'm afraid I can't," Megan answered him quite honestly. "Because so much of tragedy happened to me here?" he asked, and before she could answer he added gently, "But I had a very small and very perfect glimpse of Heaven, too, Megan. Perhaps one could cancel the other—or could it?"

Megan said buskily, "I—don't quite know what you are talking about."

"Let's not beat about the bush and tell polite lies, Megan," he said with a forthrightness that was rather staggering. "I know that it will be a long time before I can—speak to you of love, Megan. It would be the worst possible taste for me to do so now. But there was an evening, Megan, when we spoke our hearts—for the briefest possible moment. I haven't forgotten. Have you?"

Megan felt the color rush to her face and she could not quite meet his eyes.

"So it's like that," he said very quietly, his tone tired and heavy and old. "I should have known that I was just seeing something that didn't really exist. You were emotionally upset and you were sorry for me—was that it, Megan?"

Megan sat very still. Because that was it. She knew it now. She had imagined herself in love with Tom because she had been caught by pity for his unhappy plight, and she had let herself be deceived into thinking that her pity for him was a stronger, more vital emotion. But now she saw clearly, in the light of the past few months' clarity of vision and peace of mind.

Tom stood up and said quietly, "Well, that's that. I didn't have a great deal of hope, of course. Maybe the reason why I even for a moment considered coming back to Pleasant Grove was because I did not want to face the facts. I wanted to go on believing that what we saw and felt that night was as real for you as for me. But, of course, I see now that I was a fool."

"I'm terribly sorry, truly—" she managed with tremulous lips, her eyes misted by tears.

He turned towards the door. Megan said swiftly, "Will you come back to Pleasant Grove?"

He shook his head. "There is nothing to come back for—ever—now," he told her in that same quiet, almost toneless voice.

On Sunday morning, a glorious June morning with a brilliant sun lying like a benediction on green fields and gardens burgeoning with roses and zinnias and marigolds, Megan went again to the Ridge.

She had dreaded this return to the Ridge. She had avoided it all these weeks, pretending to herself that she was too busy, that there were tasks to be performed that made it impossible for her to make her favorite walk. But now she knew that she had lied; she had been afraid.

The sudden barking of Dixie warned her of the approach of some stranger. She turned sharply and looked across the meadow, and her heart stood up on tiptoe. She felt as though it, too, yelped with excitement. For even at this distance, she knew that figure. It was Laurence.

She sat very still and watched him, while a new, sweet warmth spread throughout her body. Her heart shook a little and her hands closed themselves tightly in her lap. The sunlight glistened on Laurence's bare head as he walked with his hands in his pockets, his shoulders drooping a little.

And watching him as he plodded up the meadow slope and across the fence, she knew a contentment so deep, so warm, so sweet, that she was one with the June scene all about her.

And then he was close enough to see Megan, and he said with a little quick, meaningless smile, "Hello! Mind if I intrude?"

"You're not intruding," she told him, and smiled and patted the rock beside her, inviting him to sit down.

Looking down at Megan he said quietly, "Annie thought I'd find you up here. Why did you want to see me?"

Megan's eyes widened a little and she asked, "Why did I want to see you? That's a funny question—"

Laurence frowned. "Well, after all, when Annie telephoned me—"

Megan gasped, and the hot color flowed into her face as she stammered, "Annie telephoned you?"

Laurence nodded. "She said you wanted to see me and that it was important, so I hitched a ride over. Why? What's the matter?"

Megan was scarlet. She could not quite meet his eyes.

"Annie—Annie had no right to do anything of the sort. She's really getting beyond herself—" she stammered.

Laurence's tired face hardened a little and his eyes were cool. "I take it, then, that you had nothing to do with this."

Returned Veterans Aid Outlook For Elderly U.S. Farm Couples

Alabama Brothers Show Success in Postwar Venture

Return of veterans from the armed forces is aiding the financial outlook for many an elderly U. S. farm couple.

Take the Bowdens in Coffee county, Ala., for example. Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Bowden are 69 and 63 years old, respectively, and because of their age, were not able to make the most out of the farm they were operating when their sons were in service.

Upon their return from the armed forces, Lynn and Oren Bowden shouldered the job of making a living for the family and increasing dividends from the farm. Their first objective was to buy the farm, thus raising themselves and their "old folks" out of the tenant farmer class.

Since many elderly farmers and their wives also are looking to their sons to take over the home farm, the story of the Bowdens is related to show what can be accomplished.

Actually the story has its beginning in 1936 when, as the elder Bowden frankly admits, "we were down and out and had to struggle to make ends meet."

Unable to get credit from regular lenders for purchase of feed, seed, fertilizer, equipment and other farm needs, the Bowdens resorted to a government agency, now the Farm Security administration, to secure the necessary funds. Along with the funds came instruction in sound farming practices, which enabled the Bowden family to improve the efficiency of their operations.

A period of progress followed, but the advent of war disrupted all the family's plans. Both Lynn and Oren were called into service, resulting in an acute lack of help on the farm.

Lynn, 44, veteran of both world wars, entered the army in 1940 when the Alabama National Guard was called into service. Oren, 31, also was a member of the National Guard and entered service early the following year. A temporary respite was gained when Oren was placed on inactive duty to help run the farm, but he later was called back into service.

Upon their discharge early in 1943, both brothers returned to the family farm. Intent on purchasing the 360-acre farm, previously rented by the family, the brothers arranged the necessary financing with Farm Security administration, which permits 40 years at 3 per cent interest for repayment of farm purchase loans. A major factor in the family's success was the diversified farming plan which the agency helped the family to map out.

Faced with a $4,800 debt, contracted in purchasing the farm, the Bowdens embarked on an ambitious farm program designed to wipe out the debt in shortest possible time. Within a year they had paid off more than half the debt. Today, only three years later, the final payment has been made to the govern-

Loans to Veterans for Farm Purchases And Operating Costs Reach High Peak

Setting a new high in Farm Security administration loans to veterans, 5,400 ex-servicemen were financed in purchase of farm operating equipment or family farms within a two-month period, according to figures released by department of agriculture.

The loans, made during March and April, constitute nearly a third of the total number the agency has approved for veterans during the last two years, FSA Administrator Dillar B. Lasseter announces.

Declaring that the agency expects the record lending to continue, Lasseter reports that more than 20,000 veteran applications now are being processed in county offices.

More than 16,000 veterans already have received FSA assistance. Approximately 1,000 of them obtained farm purchase loans under terms of the Bankhead-Jones farm tenant act from an earmarked fund set up by congress. The rest have loans to buy machinery and livestock or for other operating needs.

Soaring real estate prices and lack of productive farms for sale have handicapped veterans in their quest for farms, Lasseter says.

New Jersey Farmer Termed Hardest Working Man in State

On the basis of the working day's length, the title of hardest working man in New Jersey can be conferred on the average farmer in the Garden state, declares the state department of agriculture.

Figures cited by the department show that as of June 1 New Jersey farm operators were working an average of 12 hours daily, which adds up to a 72-hour week, excluding time devoted to Sunday chores. During harvesting operations, particularly in July and August, longer working days are in store for farmers.

SEEK EXPERT GUIDANCE—The Bowden brothers and their parents have proved that they are good farmers, but they frankly admit they don't know it all. Here James S. Pridgen, Coffee county, Ala., FSA supervisor, shows Lynn and Oren Bowden how to treat seed peanuts to prevent damp rot, after they are in the ground.

A farmer's week adds up to a 72-hour period contrasted to a factory employee's regular work week of 40 hours. Then, too, according to the department, whenever a day's work is lost on a farm the output of 12 hours is involved whereas only eight-hour day is lost when a city plant shuts down. No report of the number of hours per day worked by farmers can estimate the time spent on Sunday and holidays when, as on any other day, chores such as feeding livestock, milking and other jobs must be done on a farm regardless of the day of the week.

A year ago, when the war still waged, New Jersey farmers spent 12.2 hours a day at work.

The "old folks" are helping the veterans progress in their farming venture. The elder Bowden raises garden produce, selling $112 worth of cabbage from a few rows in his garden last year. Intent on increasing the returns, he has planted six 80-foot rows of cabbage this year. Mrs. Bowden also is active in work around the house and garden.

Size of the family also has been increased. After the last farm payment was made, Oren was married and brought his wife to the family farm home.

Today the Bowdens are considered successful Alabama farmers. Each member of the family does his proper share of work and all reap the benefits of good living on a well-operated farm. Furthermore, the elder Mr. and Mrs. Bowden can take more time to enjoy the peace and security of farm life now that their boys, like so many others, are home again from the war.

Individual guidance in good farm and home management practices is provided by Farm Security administration with all loans, the department of agriculture emphasizes.

Each loan, the department reports, is based on a sound plan for farm and home management that is worked out by the borrower and the family. The plan shows items the farmer intends to raise, his estimated operating expenses and income he may expect to make.

A FSA supervisor, schooled in efficient farm methods, helps each family make and carry out the plan. He will supply information on how to select and care for livestock, plan crop rotations and put other good farm methods into practice. In most rural counties a home supervisor, trained in home economics, also is available to assist the family.

Main objects of the guidance plan, according to FSA, are to help the farmer "get the most income from his work, obtain a good living for his family and repay his loan."

CARES FOR CABBAGE . . . Most of the gardening on the Bowden farm is done by J. W. Bowden, 69, father of the Bowden brothers. Here he is working among his cabbages, which netted $140 in 1945.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Q. May a veteran pay off a guaranteed loan before it comes due?

A. Yes, the regulations give the veteran that right.

Q. Can a guaranty be obtained if the proceeds are to be used by a minor or a person under legal disability?

A. This can be done only if the loan and liens are valid under the state law governing the transaction. Many states have enacted statutes removing disability of veterans and for the wives of veterans who are minors to enable them to make such loans.

Q. May windows or children of deceased veterans obtain guaranty of loan?

A. No. The privilege is limited to veterans. A guaranty on a loan may continue, however, after the veteran's death.

Q. Are veterans of World War 1 eligible for benefits under the Act?

A. No. Its benefits are for World War 2 veterans only.

Q. If a loan is for farming purposes, must the veteran live on the farm?

A. No, but the Act requires that he actually conduct the farming operations.

Q. Is there any limit on the size of the loan?

A. No. The limit is on the amount which may be guaranteed or insured.

Q. May funds from a guaranteed loan be used to pay operating expenses on a farm?

A. Yes.

STATE HEALTH OFFICER URGES STRICT SANITATION

Austin, Texas, July 8—In addition to the general instructions for community sanitation which are important in preventing poliomyelitis, Dr. Geo. W. Cox, State Health Officer, today issued an urgent warning to every individual in Texas to practice strict personal hygiene to protect his own health and that of those about him.

"Of course, cleanliness and personal hygiene are ordinarily taken for granted," Dr. Cox said, "but at this time with the incidence of poliomyelitis having reached a total of 292 cases, I would like to re-emphasize some personal sanitary measures which may help in preventing the spread of this crippling and often fatal disease."

The State Health Officer stressed the importance of scrupulous cleanliness of the person. Frequent bathing and immaculately clean clothing are vitally necessary. Oral hygiene with thorough brushing of the teeth and the use of a mild antiseptic are recommended. The nasal passages should be kept clean and dental defects corrected immediately.

Sanitation and thorough cleanliness in the home are instinctive with the average housewife, but at this time their importance to health must be re-emphasized. Home sanitation includes those taken-for-granted measures such as washing the dishes in hot soapy water and rinsing them in hot clear water; keeping sinks, bathtubs and fixtures scoured clean and rinsed with a mild antiseptic solution; sunning and airing bed clothes, ridding the home of flies, rats and roaches which, since poliomyelitis is believed to be a filth-borne disease, are suspected as being responsible for transmission.

"If good personal hygiene is combined with good community sanitation and hygiene, it is hard for any disease to get a foothold," Dr. Cox said. "With such a dread disease as poliomyelitis prevalent in the state, no precaution should be overlooked and no bars should be left down for its entrance."

BARGAIN HUNTING IN COW FEED

College Station, July 17—Feed bargains for dairy cows still are available and most of them can and should be home grown. This statement comes from G. G. Gibson, dairyman for the A. and M. College Extension Service, who advises that now is the time to lay in ample roughage supplies to fall back on when pastures play out.

Digestible nutrients are the part of the feeds that the cow uses to maintain her body and to make milk. The common ones can be grouped as proteins, fats and nitrogen free extract (mainly sugar and starch). Minerals and vitamins are important but are not included under digestible nutrients.

Every feed contains digestible nutrients. The job of feeding dairy cows is to supply the right kind and amount as well as low cost nutrients.

Analysis of the pounds of digestible nutrients that can be furnished for one dollar at average prices from dairy feed, hay, silage and pasture shows that pasture is by far the cheapest with 150 pounds total digestible nutrients for one dollar. Silage is the second less expensive with 60 pounds digestible nutrients per dollar and hay follows closely with 50. Dairy feed brings only 21 pounds total digestible nutrients per dollar.

The feeds that the cow was built to handle furnish the nutrients at lowest cost. The successful dairyman does just as much as possible of the job of feeding with cheap nutrients keeping in mind that each of the above mentioned feeds has an important place in any feeding program.

Either the wrong men are operating too many lunchrooms and restaurants in this country or else they're just too scared to speak to the help about things.

"I do my share of eating in middle class eating places," said Elmer Twitchell today, "and it is my conviction that most of the operators are glorified dog-wagon men. I am no chef myself but I could get up better dinners with an old broom and a bucket of switch-grass."

Elmer was quite sore. "What's become of the old-fashioned restaurant proprietor who wanted things right? Whatever happened to the chef who had pride in his work? Where is the old-fashioned bartender who knew how to mix a drink right?" he demanded.

"It's years since I have run across a proprietor who has a conscience, thinks it important to hold his trade and won't water the soup, cut down the portions more than necessary or feel upset if he discovers the potatoes have not been served cold."

"And I am not referring merely to the Grade B restaurant. Some of our best clubs are now employing cement mixers as chefs."

"I had a business man's lunch at a private club last week and I still can't figure if the manager and chef were former pig feeders or just a couple of boys who confuse human beings with seagulls."

Elmer wanted to be fair. "I admit it's hard to get foodstuffs," he concluded, "but it seems to me the boys should know what to do with it when they get it."

Ex-Pfc. Purkey in A Quonset Hut

Dear Ed:
Well now I know how it feels to live inside of a egg, or even inside half a egg. The wife and me has just got one of them Quonset huts. We already got roundshoulders and we stoop over even when standing up.

After you have been in one a day you have no more doubts about the world being round. Already I am working on a book which I will call "The Half Egg and I" or maybe "Life With Low Ceilings." The first thing you got to learn is not to get off a chair too sudden. You can tell how long a couple has lived in one of them huts by the bumps or their noggin's.

A real love life is necessary on account of if a couple do any scrapping there is no neutral corners to go to after the knockdowns.

How to Outbluff a VICIOUS DOG at night!

...as recommended by Lt. Comdr. Willy Necker, Wheeling, Ill.—noted dog trainer and judge at dog shows—and wartime head of U. S. Coast Guard War Dog Training.

1 The fact that 999 dogs out of a thousand are friendly, safe and lovable doesn't alter the fact that occasionally through mistreatment, neglect or disease—a dog may turn vicious.

2 Such animals are dangerous. Especially at night! If cornered outdoors, at night, turn on your "Eveready" flashlight! Shine it directly at the dog's eyes, to blind and perhaps bewilder him. He may leap at the light, however; so don't hold it in front of you. Hold it at arm's length to the side. Most important...

3 Keep still. It's instinctive with most animals to attack anything that runs away or moves aggressively. If the dog refrains from attacking for a few seconds, you have probably won—but, if not, protect your throat. Use flashlight as club. Shout! If bitten, see a doctor as soon as possible.

Household Hints

Carpet sweepers will not give perfect service unless cleaned regularly.

Use dental floss for sewing on buttons. It is strong and unequalled for hard wear. Use an embroidery needle and thread it double.

Rice water is saved to starch collars, lace edgings and dainty things.

Soak heavily sized new dish towels in warm sudsy water overnight. Removes stiffness.

A piece of greased candle wick can be used temporarily as a gasket for a leaking radiator valve.

Elastic lasts longer when it is not laundered. So, when putting elastic into children's underthings, sew a hook on one end and an eye on the other. These are fastened when the garment is worn. When it's time for laundering, they're unfastened, and the elastic is quickly removed.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

DREW PEARSON

IRATE OVER PROSTITUTION
WASHINGTON—Admiral Nimitz is trying to hush it up, but a hot row has broken out in the navy's chaplain division over alleged discrimination against chaplains with combat records, some of whom have been denied admission into the regular navy and others transferred to minor posts.

Four well-known chaplains already have resigned as a result of the dispute. They are:

Capt. William A. McGuire, Catholic chaplain of the 11th naval district at San Diego—a 29-year naval veteran who served as fleet chaplain at Pearl Harbor at the outbreak of the war.

Capt. Maurice Witherspoon, Presbyterian, former All-America football star at Washington-Jefferson college and one of the most popular chaplains in the navy.

Capt. William W. Edel, Methodist, who also chalked up a fine record as a combat chaplain.

Capt. Raymond Drinan, Catholic, former chaplain of the battle-scarred airplane carrier Enterprise.

In addition to the claim of combat chaplains that they are being relegated to minor roles while their non-combat colleagues get the top commands, many also are sore over the navy's failure to crack down on prostitution in Japan.

A number of Protestant and Catholic chaplains who served in the Pacific contend that the navy is abetting the growth of prostitution in Tokyo by an indifferent policy in regard to the Yoshiwaras.

These chaplains further charge that those who have fought prostitution in Tokyo have been disciplined for their efforts—among them, Comdr. O. B. Cook, who was transferred from Tokyo to Guam.

PAUL PORTER A-BOMBED

Chester Bowles, who stepped out of government after tough years of battling inflation, is a close friend of Paul Porter. The two fought side by side—Bowles as economic stabilizer, Porter as administrator of OPA. When Bowles resigned, Porter, left to fight the inflation battle alone, wrote a note.

"I now feel," Porter told his former chief, "like a native whom the navy forgot to remove from Bikini just before the atom bomb exploded."

FILIBUSTER AGAINST A-BOMB

It's Southerners who have the reputation for filibustering, but three northern Republicans are conducting a filibuster more secret and just as skillful as that of any Dixie Democrat. It's against the atom control bill—vital to the nation.

They know the house will pass the senate-approved McMahon bill for control of atomic energy if it comes to a vote; so for two weeks three Republicans have kept the bill bottled up in the military affairs committee by stalling at every turn. The three filibusters are Parnell Thomas of New Jersey, Forrest Harness of Indiana and Charles Elston of Ohio.

Many committee members gave up an evening for a special session in order to complete the bill and give the U. S. a policy to back up Barney Baruch in the United Nations.

Half an hour after the time set for the meeting they lacked a quorum, and Ohio's recalcitrant Elston would not let them proceed. Only one more member was needed.

Finally Congresswoman Clare Booth Luce of Connecticut phoned that she was on her way to the committee room from her office five floors above. But while she was in the elevator, Elston grabbed his hat and left so there still would be no quorum.

Thus a dozen conscientious congressmen were forced to waste more than an hour, and Bernard Baruch was left high and dry before the United Nations with no law on the statute books to back him up.

IRKED OVER PALESTINE

It wasn't announced, but Prime Minister Attlee sent a confidential message to President Truman informing him that British troops had taken repressive measures against Jewish elements in Palestine. However, the message arrived only after British troops already had moved in.

Attlee asked Truman for a public statement of support, but the President was so irked at the way Attlee acted first and advised him afterward, that he phoned acting Secretary of State Dean Acheson and told him to issue a statement keeping American skirts clear of the British move.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

John Snyder kept bobbing into the cabinet room during drafting of Truman's OPA veto message. He wanted to lend a hand in writing the speech but nobody gave him any encouragement. The speech was written largely by OPA Boss Paul Porter, Reconversion czar John Steelman and Judge Sam Rosenman. . . . The FBI already is digging into large-scale hoarding. Some very big manufacturing concerns may be implicated.

Kathleen Norris Says: How Often Do Psycho-Analysts Help?

Bell Syndicate.—WNU Features.

"Many a young wife has been led to wonder if the baring of her soul to some sympathetic adviser might not brighten her life."

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

THE FASHION today is to be psycho-analyzed. This alarming word means that whoever is restless, unsatisfied, ill-adjusted to his or her life, goes to a specialist. The specialist digs deep into the unhappy person's consciousness, asking all sorts of intimate and embarrassing questions, trying to find out what influences in the past have created her timidity, jealousy, fear, hate, or whatever else is wrong with her.

Sometimes the psycho-analyst is a person qualified by nature, science and training to help, and does help. More often he or she knows nothing, and only vaguely repeats phrases that mean nothing. Not so much from any real intention of cheating, but rather in pleased surprise that they have stumbled upon anything so easy and so lucrative.

The anxious family of the sufferer takes this very seriously. They are cheered when the analyst says hopefully: "We are coming on. We are learning to live with ourselves honestly. I think we are bringing the real cause to the light. We want to help ourselves now, and that is the great thing."

Enjoys "Baring Her Soul."

The theater, beginning with "Lady in the Dark," has helped the spread of psycho-analysis immensely. Many movies have followed suit. Many a young wife who might, a generation ago, have accepted her lot as housekeeper and mother with philosophy and common sense, has been led to wonder if the baring of her soul to some sympathetic adviser might not brighten her life. She enjoys going back—we all do—to the disappointments of childhood, the embarrassments and humiliations of school days, the first awakening of young love. She enjoys talking about herself: who doesn't? Fortune tellers command attention because their fascinating topic is always oneself.

Some years ago the Coue doctrine took this country by storm, and persons whose lives were running smoothly went about beaming because "every day in every way" everything was "getting better and better." When the first blast of real trouble struck them they felt silent, and as the second and third blows fell—and light or heavy one escapes them long!—the Coue formula fell away into nothingness.

Undoubtedly Coue did some good. Undoubtedly psycho-analysis helps some cases. But nine times out of ten the patient could help herself faster and cheaper than the professional can.

So in case you live far away from the nearest psycho-analyst, here are a few hints that may help you out of your own predicament at no expense at all.

Money Troubles, Jealousy.

The first cause of marital discontent, with all its ramifying lines of quarrels, hurt feelings, failures, is money. So if your husband considers you extravagant, or you consider him stingy, settle this question yourselves. You don't need a third party to tell you that hunger for pretty things all during your girlhood had made you wasteful, now that you can have them, or to tell him that his father's debts, his mother's financial worries, his own fear of hard times, have made him somewhat penurious. Work out your money problem on a sensible basis, and then both of you stick to your bargain, and with the money saved on the psycho-analyst go to dinner and the theater together.

Braille Translator

A woman who decided at the age of 60 that she wanted to transcribe books into Braille for the blind recently has completed her 337th volume. She is working under the direction of the New York Guild for the Jewish Blind.

The translator is Mrs. Ida Klingenstein of New York City. Her most ambitious undertaking was "Gone With the Wind," which stretched out into 31 volumes of Braille. Mrs. Klingenstein, who is now 73, works on a volunteer basis.

ANALYZE YOURSELF

In some cases of mental ills, the psycho-analyst can be of great assistance. It has become the fashion, however, for discontented, unhappy people to turn to psycho-analysis as the great cure-all of the age. It is nothing of the sort, says Miss Norris. It has a limited use. Patients must be co-operative. The practitioner must be skilled and sympathetic. Improvement often takes a long time.

Most people do not need the services of a psycho-analyst so much as they need common sense and a little soul-searching, continues Miss Norris. Generally the cause of the difficulty is well known. It may be extravagance, or jealousy, or a desire for dominance. In any case, the psycho-analyst can do little more than point the trouble. He cannot make the necessary changes in the individual's character or circumstances.

Often a husband and wife can solve their imaginary mental problems by a frank talk. Whether the difficulty arises over money, or relatives, or some personal fault, the solution can be found by bringing it out into the open. There is seldom any use going to a high-priced psycho-analyst. Better solve your own problems, concludes Miss Norris.

Jealousy is a sin, and so are unkindness, domestic injustices, extravagance, waste, penuriousness, nagging, drink—all the other ills to which marriage stands heir. Sin is cured by grace, not by analysis.

Drinking and gambling husbands know what's wrong, without long luxurious talks about it. Scolding, wasteful wives are perfectly aware why there are always storms over the household bills. Mothers and fathers who quarrel before the children, know why Joan is nervous and shy, and Tom completely unmanageable. It would save some of them a lot of money if they looked into their own hearts before laying them bare to a complete stranger.

Jealousy was the basic trouble with a man I knew, according to the expensive psycho-analyst he consulted. The analyst told him that he had been jealous of his father and mother, his sisters and brothers, his teachers and associates. This did not, however, help him with his wife, who shortly afterward justified his jealousy by going off with another man.

JESUS AND THE SABBATH

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:8; Mark 2:23-28; Matthew 12:1-13.
MEMORY SELECTION—This is the day which the Lord hath made; we will rejoice and be glad in it.—Psalm 118:24.

"The Sabbath was made for man," and was ordained of God for the good of man's body and soul. It was intended to be a day of glad fellowship with the Lord.

Since the Sabbath—the seventh day—was essentially one of rest and worship, the principles which surrounded it and directed its life may be applied to our day of rest, which is the first day of the week—the Lord's day.

That word "rest" sounds a little strange in this busy world of ours, and yet it is an important one. It means quiet for the struggling one, calm for the troubled, repose for the weary, cessation of labor for the worn-out one.

God in his infinite wisdom saw that without rest man would soon destroy himself, and he provided for one day in seven when labor should cease and man should be free for that recreation of soul and body which should fit him for the labor of the week.

A Day of Holiness (Exod. 20:8). God gave his people a holy day to balance up their days of labor and to bring blessing to their souls. On that day he decreed that they should come apart from their labors, turn from secular interests and turn their hearts and minds to the unseen and the eternal. Man would become so engrossed in the things of this world that he would soon forget; therefore, God commands him to stop and worship. That should be sufficient to cause his people to "remember" the day "to keep it holy."

Notice that the day of rest was to be not only for the family, but also for servants and for visitors. The employer who unnecessarily operates his factory or office on Sunday violates this commandment. Note also that the man who is to rest on the seventh day is supposed to work on the six days. Some neglect to do both.

This matter of keeping the Lord's day holy is one which has tremendous implications in the lives of our children. Many men and women who have had built into their own characters the stalwart virtues nurtured by family attendance at divine worship have not only forgotten their own continuing need, but are destroying the interest of their children in church attendance.

It is serious enough to go astray in one's own life, but to lead one's children astray is an appalling responsibility. Let's keep the Lord's day as a holy day.

II. A Day of Helpfulness (Mark 2:23-28).

The formalists of Christ's day, the Pharisees, had overlooked the heart of God's law and the holy living which it was intended to produce, and had bound up even the observance of the sabbath (which was intended to be a day of rest and gladness) in such a mass of technical "thou shalt not's" that it was a day of fear.

The accusations against the disciples because they had taken and eaten grain was not on the ground that they had stolen, for the law (Deut. 23:25) guaranteed that right to the one who passed through his neighbor's field. The Pharisees contended, however, that the disciples had worked on the Sabbath in picking and hulling the grain.

God's laws are helpful laws, and it is only when men pervert them, or add to them their own traditions and interpretations, that they become burdensome to anyone who is God-fearing and obedient.

III. A Day of Healing (Matt. 12:9-13).

Jesus made it clear that healing of the body (yes, and of the soul) was most appropriate on the Sabbath day; in fact, that is the very day for it.

The healing of the man with the withered arm revealed that back of the Pharisees' professed concern for the Sabbath was a real hatred for Christ. It is an appalling thing that in the house of worship on the very Sabbath day, these men, outwardly so religious, were plotting against our Lord.

Jesus cuts across human hypocrisy and hatred to declare that the true keeping of the Sabbath is to do the work of God. No work of necessity (like plucking the grain) or of mercy (like healing the withered arm) is ever out of place on the day of rest.

A word of caution is needed, for some have sought to interpret this Scripture as providing biblical ground for doing all sorts of things on their day of rest. That day is for man's good, not for his destruction. His greatest good is served by rest, worship, spiritual development, Christian fellowship, and the doing of deeds of necessity and mercy.

The desecration of the Lord's day in our time is a serious matter. Let us not contribute to it.
