HISD sets seven-district trustee system

By GARRY WESNER
Managing Editor

Hereford voters going to the polls next May should face the prospect of electing four trustees from four districts, rather than two at-large trustees and a District 2 representative.

That is because HISD trustees on Tuesday approved a settlement offer in a voting rights lawsuit filed earlier this year by resident Trini Gamez.

With no discussion trustees voted 6-0 to approved a new plan in which the district is divided into seven voting districts, with no at-large positions remaining.

The lawsuit alleged the existing five district, two at-large system diluted minority voting strength.

The settlement offer must be approved by the U.S. Justice Department before it takes effect.

If implemented, it would give the district four trustee spots in predominately Hispanic districts, all of which would have voting age minority populations exceeding 60 percent.

Under the new plan, all seven current trustees will continue to serve.

Next May, Districts 2, 4, 5 and 7 will be up for election to three-year terms.

Currently trustees in those districts are: Raul Valdez (District 2), Ron Weishaar (District 4), Joe Flood (District 5) and Jim Marsh (District 7).

Marsh, Flood and Valdez were originally scheduled to run again next year, while Weishaar's term was not to expire until 1997.

In 1997 under the proposed plan, Trustees Cherry McWhorter (District 1), Randy Tooley (District 3) and Roy Dale Messer (District 6) will face re-election.

There will be no election in 1998, as all terms are three years.

Messer and McWhorter were elected this year and were originally not to face election again until 1998.

If the plan receives Justice Department approval, it will feature three trustee districts -- 2, 4 and 5 -- that are totally inside the city limits and the other four that stretch into the rural areas of the school district.

District 1 would have 63.5 percent voting age minority residents; District 2 would have a 66.7 percent minority voting age population; District 3 would have a minority vote age population of 65.9 percent; and District 4 would be 63.4 percent minorities of voting age.

The remaining three trustee districts would be predominately Anglo.

Under the proposed settlement, candidates for a trustee position must live in the district which they would represent.

However, the board included a provision that would allow anyone from the community to run for a seat if nobody from that district had filed for election within 10 days of the filing deadline.

Only residents of each trustee district would be able to vote in that district no matter where the candidate lived.

According to the board resolution covering the settlement, the seven-district plan was devised to settle Gamez's lawsuit.

Flood asked Superintendent Charles W. Greenawalt about the cost to the district of the suit.

Greenawalt said district insurance will cover the lion's share of the litigation, with the school having already submitted a check for $5,000 to cover the deductible.

So far, Greenawalt said, legal fees are $11,000, although he does not know how much more it will cost to pay attorney Judy Underwood, who represented the district in the suit.

The $5,000 deductible is the district's only expense in the matter.

Public hearing held on HHS improvement plan

Trustees pass report card changes during regular monthly board meet

By GARRY WESNER
Managing Editor

A new report card for kindergarten students topped action Tuesday when the Hereford ISD board of trustees met in regular session.

The regular session was preceded by a public hearing on the Hereford High School accountability rating in which school teachers and leaders presented a plan to address a variety of problems at the school.

The public hearing was required after Hereford High School was designated a low-performing campus by the Texas Education Agency because of high dropout and attendance rates and low passing rate of the TAAS math test among some students.

The hearing was held in the HHS library and was attended mainly by teachers and faculty of the school.

Members of the Building Leadership Team briefed trustees on changes to the Campus Improvement Plan to address attendance and test scores.

Cherie Zinck said a major step has already been taken in addressing the 18.8 percent passing rate among economically disadvantaged students taking the TAAS math test.

A new math teacher approved last month by trustees will be in place Oct. 2, she said. That class will be geared toward identifying students who need additional assistance in preparing for the TAAS math test.

The TAAS -- Texas Assessment of Academic Skills -- tests are given to sophomores each year in the areas of math, reading and writing.

Passage of all three tests is required to graduate.

Zinck said the school will reward students who pass the TAAS math test by allowing them to come to school at 1:15 p.m. on subsequent test days.

In addition, there will be a "TAAS Open House" early next year and the school will hold "Intensive Care Sessions" a few days before the TAAS math test is given to review the test before students take it.

In the area of dropouts and attendance, Joe Rogers said, the school has addressed bookkeeping procedures to eliminate "lost" students.

Attendance staff, counselors and administrators will meet weekly to identify students missing school, or those at-risk for dropping out.

To reward those with good attendance, hour-long lunch periods will be given to students with no absence or tardies for a set period.

Trustees gave formal approval to the modified Campus Action Plan during the regular meeting.

After completing the hearing at the high school, trustees crossed town for their regular meeting in the board room.

District kindergarten teachers presented trustees with their new report card form, noting that changes to the form were made to reflect the Texas Essential Elements for kindergarten and to better report student progress to parents.

Teacher Kaye Matthews of Northwest Primary said teachers divided grading into four areas -- Social/Emotional Development, Physical Development, Aesthetic Development and Intellectual Development.

Previously-used designations of "Satisfactory," "Excellent" and "Improvement Needed" have been replaced with "Exceeds Expectations," "Developing at Expected Levels" and "Experiencing Difficulty."

No marks will be given in areas not yet introduced.

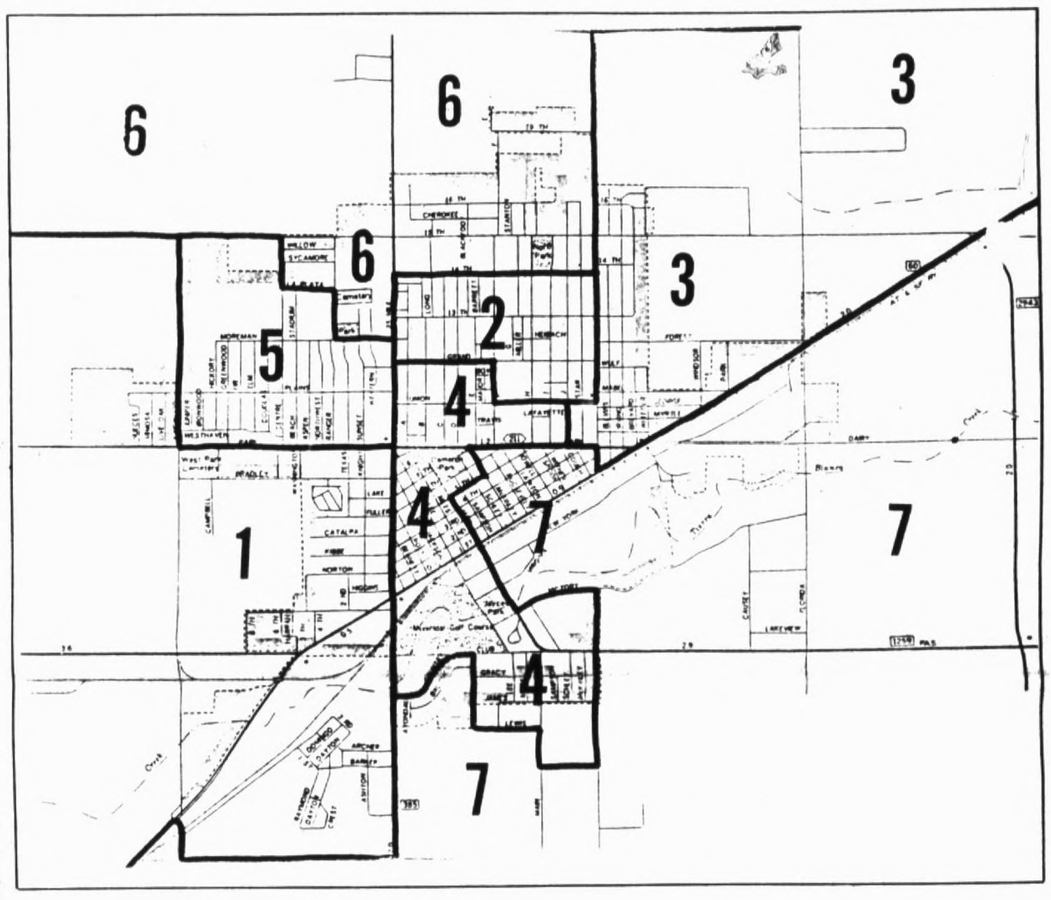

The new report cards will be given out after the second, fourth and sixth

SCHOOL BOARD HIGHLIGHTS

Here is a summary of activity at Tuesday's regular HISD school board meeting and special high school accountability rating public hearing:

- Members of the Building Leadership Team at Hereford High School spoke at a public hearing on the low-performing school rating given the school, explaining steps that will be taken to improve the school's status.
- Trustees voted to change the kindergarten report card and to allow report cards be given out three times a year, with other reporting methods used after the first, third and fifth six-week periods.
- A proposed settlement in a voting rights lawsuit filed by Hereford resident Trini Gamez was approved.
- Trustees approved bids for a new superintendent's car and vocational-agriculture pickup.
- A request by the Hereford Ministerial Alliance for use of Whiteface Gym was approved.

New HISD trustee districts

If approved by the U.S. Justice Department, the Hereford Independent School District will begin electing trustees from seven districts next May, rather than from five districts and two at-large positions as currently used. School trustees approved the new alignment, shown above, on Tuesday as a settlement of a voting rights lawsuit filed against the district by resident Trini Gamez, who alleged the at-large scheme diluted minority voting strength.

Hospital district approves $10-million balanced budget

BY SPEEDY NIEMAN
Editor-Publisher

Deaf Smith County Hospital District directors approved a $10 million budget for 1995-96 and formally set the tax rate at 22.4 cents per $100 assessed valuation during a regular monthly session Tuesday night.

Two minor additions left proposed total expenditures at $10,042,220 for the new budget year. With net revenues projected at $10,488,397, a net income of $446,177 is reflected for the new budget year. The tax rate remains the same as the past year.

In other business, the board tabled action on insurance bids. approved a bank resolution on the rural health clinic, approved monthly reports, and discussed the annual evaluation of the chief executive officer.

A budget hearing opened the meeting at 6 p.m., with only Dr. Nadir Khuri asking questions. He chided the board for not including the medical staff in the budget process, and then asked if projected revenues were realistic.

Hospital administrator Jim Robinson said the proposed revenues were realistic, while trustee Jo Beth Shackleford noted that neither Dr. Khuri or any other staff physicians were present at the Aug. 22 board meeting when the budget was discussed and a tax rate was established.

Shackleford said the board's only real input was "to question expense items and look for places to make cuts." She suggested that Dr.Khuri be invited to all committee meetings. Dr. Khuri commented that "you have to spend money to make money, and maybe the board should not always just be concerned with cuts."

The board discussed bids from three companies on insurance for property, general liability, professional liability, auto and employee theft. Looking a bid analysis prepared by Rodney Bailey, chief financial officer, the board noted that specifications varied from company to company.

Roger Eades, Plains Insurance, current policy holder, noted that he drew up specs "about two weeks ago" at the request of the hospital administrator--after learning that bids were to be submitted. Bailey said he told Eades of the bid process "about two months ago."

Shackleford complained that the board could not "compare apples to apples" in evaluating the bids. Trustee Steve Cortez suggested the insurance, which expires Sept. 27, be extended and the board draw up guidelines for the bidders. Trustees, as well as Eades and Ted Radozs, a Gallagher & Co. representative at the meeting, agreed with that plan.

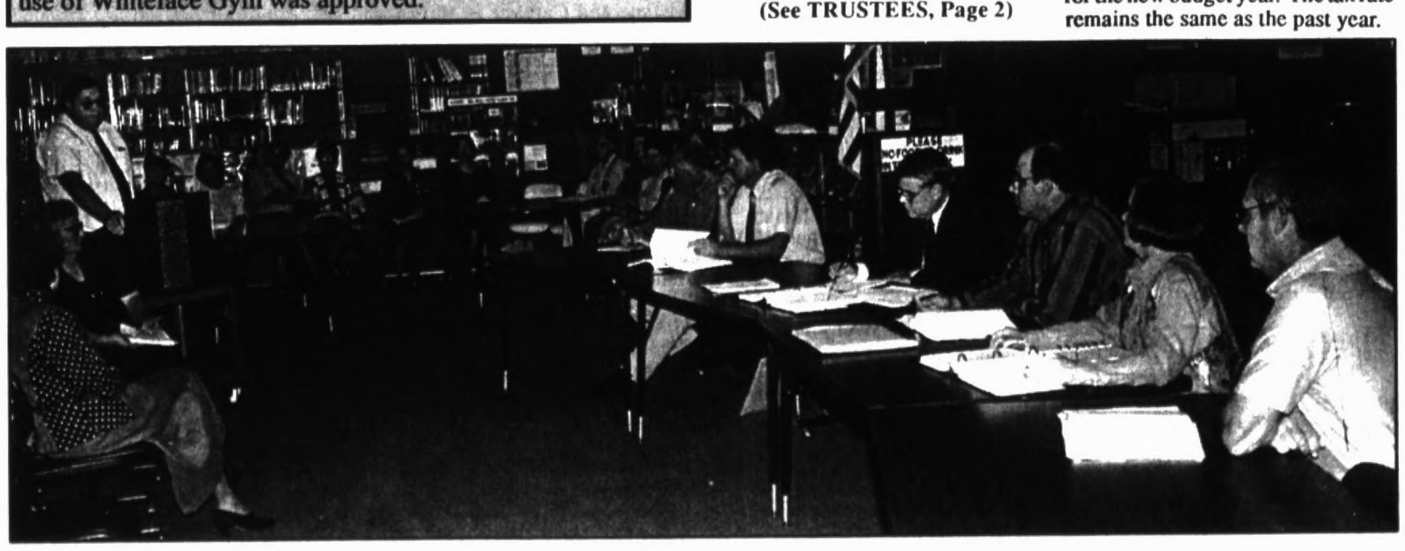

Mal Manchee, board president, appointed Scott Keeling, Shackleford and Cortez to a committee to come up with bid guidelines this week. He said the timing of the bid presentation--on the day before expiration--was bad. "We need to secure bids much earlier next year," he noted.

Cortez reported that the planning committee had been discussing longrange building plans but was exploring all possibilities and had no specific recommendations yet. Shackleford added that the committee is "just brainstorming until the finance committee gives us some figures to work with."

In the administrator's update, Robinson reported that plans are underway to repaint the OB/Nursery area, and construction is to start on a doctor's dictation/consutation room at Station 2. The work will largely be done by staff, he added. The hospital will also have a rebuilt anesthesia machine in place soon.

Robinson said the hospital's home health department set an all-time record August with a total of 1,903 visits. He noted that WorkSmart has given approximately 1,550 flu shots recently, and is now serving 88 clients. He reported volunteers donated a total of 281 hours in

Perot will bow out if reforms adopted

Balanced budget Constitutional amendment targeted

By JOHN KING
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Even as he dispatches top lieutenants to California to launch his new political party, Ross Perot says he will pull the plug on the effort if Congress quickly adopts several campaign, lobbying and budget reforms.

"They could do it in a day," Perot said Tuesday of his wish list, which includes a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution, a law banning gifts, free trips and meals for lawmakers, and tough new campaign finance rules that require candidates to raise their money in their home districts. "Nothing would please me more than to go back to the private sector."

But Perot, in an interview, said he saw little evidence Washington was moving ahead on that agenda, which he first outlined during the August meeting of his United We Stand America political group.

Given that, Perot said he would press ahead with plans to certify his new political party in California, Maine and Ohio, all of which have 1995 deadlines. And if Congress hasn't adopted his agenda by the end of the year, "then we will finish the job in the other states."

"If this comes into being, it will be the first party, not a third party," Perot said. "It will be the largest party in the country."

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, the early Republican presidential front-runner, sounded a bit exasperated at Perot's checklist threat.

"I just can't figure this guy out because we're doing all the things he wanted done," Dole, R-Kan., said.

Begging to differ, and to gain political advantage, Dole presidential rival Pat Buchanan said of Perot's plans: "To say you are going to start a third party suggests a vote of no confidence in Bob Dole, either in his belief in the United We Stand agenda or in his ability to carry it out."

The Dole-Buchanan tangling was just one of the countless subplots as the political establishment tried to come to grips with Perot's announcement that he would form the Independence Party, or the Reform Party in some states because of name conflicts, and nominate a presidential candidate in 1996.

Some disgruntled Perot backers seized on his leaving open the possibility of abandoning the effort as evidence Perot was more interested in grabbing some of the media spotlight than building a new party.

"He knew that United We Stand was falling apart and decided to create a new sham organization," said Ed Stanek, a former Perot loyalist involved in a power struggle for control of the Ohio chapter.

Others suggested Perot waited too long.

"What they are doing now is what they should have done three years ago, when there was still an enthusiastic organization, before it fragmented," said Bill Storm of Sacramento, a retired firefighter who was Northern California coordinator for Perot's 1992 campaign.

Just as Democrats and Republicans tried to assess whether Perot's announcement made it more or less likely he would seek the presidency again, they also found themselves grappling with the prospect of some sort of alliance between Perot and retired Gen. Colin Powell.

Powell disclosed he had spoken to Perot about the new party effort and left open the possibility he might seek its first presidential nomination.

"Obviously it is something I would consider and he knows I would consider it," Powell said.

And on NBC's "Tonight Show" Tuesday, Powell told host Jay Leno that he had "an interesting conversation" with Perot but that Perot did not ask him to be a third-party candidate. "We'll watch all this and see how it develops. It's an interesting development in American politics," he said.

Previously, Powell has said that if he ran, he would be inclined to do so as a Republican - even though he is an awkward fit on social issues - in part because of the giant hurdles to getting on the ballot as an independent. But if Perot kept his pledge to build a new party - and didn't emerge as its nominee - many of those hurdles would be removed.

"Powell is the perfect candidate for this," said GOP pollster Frank Luntz, who advised Perot during his 1992 independent run.

Democratic pollster Stanley Greenberg, a Clinton adviser, said Powell could overcome baggage from an association with Perot, who has high negative ratings with the overall electorate. But both questioned whether Perot would be willing to build a new party and then surrender it to another candidate.

Survey gives Powell edge over Bill Clinton

WASHINGTON (AP) - Retired Gen. Colin Powell running as the Republican nominee would defeat President Clinton by 15 percentage points if the presidential election were held now, according to a USA TODAY/CNN/Gallup poll.

The survey taken last weekend found Powell would best Clinton 54-to-39 and that Clinton would defeat GOP front-runner Bob Dole, 51 percent to 44 percent.

If Powell ran as an independent, he and Clinton would tie at 33 percent and Dole would get 30 percent - a statistical dead heat given the margin of error.

The poll found Dole and Powell deadlocked among Republicans at 31 percent each in a hypothetical race for the GOP nomination, with all other contenders in single digits.

Among Republicans, 42 percent said Powell's pro-choice position on abortion would make them more likely to vote for him, 31 percent less likely and 25 percent said it would have no effect.

On Powell's support for a waiting period to buy a gun, 62 percent of Republicans questioned said that would make them more likely to vote for him, 16 percent less likely and 20 percent said it would make no difference.

On affirmative action, 37 percent of Republicans said Powell's opposition to quotas while still supporting some type of affirmative action makes them more likely to vote for him, 27 percent less likely and 32 percent said that position makes them neither more nor less likely to vote for him.

The telephone survey of 1,011 adults was taken Friday through Sunday and had an overall margin of error of 3 percent. The subset survey of Republicans had a 5 percent margin of error. The number of Republicans questioned was not given.

Weatherford may be Lotto capital of Texas

By CHIP BROWN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) - Weatherford is fast becoming the Lotto Texas capital of the state.

The town of roughly 18,000 just west of Fort Worth has produced not only three jackpot winners, but three BIG jackpot winners.

On Tuesday, the latest to have lotto luck in Weatherford, Leah and Rodney Riedel, claimed the $32.3 million jackpot drawn on Saturday. The other two winning tickets sold in the city were worth $26.9 million in August and $20.2 million last December.

"There's got to be something going on in Weatherford," quipped Nora Linares, Texas Lottery Commission executive director.

In addition to the lotto winners, Mary Andress of Weatherford was one of the first to claim a $1 million prize in the Texas Lottery's Lone Star Millions game in September 1993.

Michael Dunnahoo of nearby Springtown, just 15 miles north of Weatherford, claimed a $7.8 million Lotto Texas jackpot in January 1994, giving Parker County a total of four lotto winners.

"I would like to invite everyone across Texas to buy their lotto tickets here. It's clear we have the luck," Weatherford Mayor Sherry Watson said. "We've had Quick Pick winners and winners who have selected their own numbers. We can offer it all."

Neoma Patterson would agree with that. Ms. Patterson is the owner of Handy Place in Weatherford, the eighth retailer to sell two winning lotto tickets.

Because retailers who sell a winning ticket receive a bonus totaling 1 percent of a jackpot, Ms. Patterson has received more than $500,000 for selling the Riedels' ticket and the ticket worth $20.2 million to former waitress Diane Leiding last December.

"A bunch of people were telling me they wouldn't buy their ticket at Handy Place anymore because they didn't think lightning could strike twice," Ms. Watson said. "It did, and it would be neat if we got three times in one spot."

Christopher M. Tull is Weatherford's other lotto winner. He claimed a $26.9 million jackpot in August.

"The great thing is that the people who have won here are really good, hard-working people who have bought their homes and new cars locally," Ms. Watson said.

"It's certainly helping the tax base here."

The Riedels picked up a check Tuesday for $1.6 million, the first installment of their winnings to be paid out over 20 years.

Mrs. Riedel said winning the jackpot was an instant solution to an argument the couple was having Saturday night.

"To make up for what we had been arguing about, he said, 'Well, I have the lottery numbers, honey, do you want to hear them?' I said, 'No, I will get them in the morning, leave me alone.'

"He said, 'Honey, we made a special effort to write them down for you.' I said, 'I don't care, I'll get them in the morning.' Then he called them out to me and I said, 'You're kidding. You are just trying to make me madder, and it's not helping anything.' Then I realized he wasn't kidding.

"It got him out of the doghouse pretty quick."

Mrs. Riedel, 32, said she was quitting two jobs she had as a waitress and fast-food clerk. Riedel, 31, said he would have to keep his job as a machinist, at least for a while, because he is the only one who knows how to operate a new piece of equipment his company just received.

"I feel like I would be leaving them high and dry if I left right now," he said.

The couple, who have two young children, said they bought a new pickup truck and will take their time in designing their dream house.

Their winning numbers - 13, 14, 19, 24, 28 and 48 - were selected by Mrs. Riedel and include dates for birthdays, anniversaries and even the day her divorce from her first husband came through.

"What can I say, that was a happy day for me," she said.

six-week grading periods only.

After the first and fifth six-weeks, teachers will meet individually with parents to review student progress and display examples of student work.

A letter will be sent home after the third grading period.

The report card change and grading period variance was approved on a 5-1 vote. Trustee Raul Valdez voted against the plan and Roy Dale Messer did not arrive at the board meeting until 10:30 p.m.

Valdez said his concern was with the complexity of the new report card.

"When I look at a report card, I try to put myself in the parents' shoes," he said.

"It looks complicated," he said, adding that, while there are some parents who will take the time to look over the entire document, "there's a large number that it's too complicated (for)."

In other business Tuesday:

-- Trustees approved two bids from Western Ford for replacement of district vehicles.

The district will purchase a 1996 Ford Crown Victoria at a cost of $18,671.85 for Superintendent Charles W. Greenawalt. His current car will be transferred to other uses in the district.

In addition, a 1996 Ford F-350 Crew Cab will be bought for $22,002.50 for the vocational agriculture department.

The current truck used there will be moved to the maintenance department.

Assistant superintendent Don Cumpton said a 15-passenger van due to be bought this year will be put on hold until Attorney General Dan Morales rules on districts using those vehicles to transport students.

-- Trustees agreed to give $7,285.19 to the Deaf Smith County Juvenile Probation Department, to help defray budget overruns for the 1994-95 fiscal year.

Juvenile Probation Officer Lou Serrano said the additional money is needed because his department transported more juveniles than expected to out-of-town holding facilities.

The county Juvenile Board agreed to split a $21,855.57 shortfall equally among the city, county and school district. Valdez and assistant superintendent Nena Veazey sit on that board to represent the school district.

-- Trustees formally adopted a policy change to add the second Monday of the month as a meeting day.

They voted earlier this month to change their meeting format to hold one session on the second Monday at a campus and discuss items and hear a report from the campus.

The fourth Tuesday meeting will be in the board room and will be when action is taken on business, reports are heard and financial matters acted on.

-- Trustees decided not to proceed with an audio taping system after Technology Director Dianna Drew presented an estimate that a PA/taping system would cost $8,643.

Instead, Cumpton said he would see if the PA system from the old board room could be moved to the new building and used instead.

Cumpton also said he would place a tape recorder on the board table to record comments for permanent record.

-- Trustees approved a request from the Rev. Ted Taylor on behalf of the Hereford Ministerial Alliance for use of Whiteface Gymnasium on Feb. 25-28, 1996, for a community event featuring "Strike Force," which ministers to young people.

Greenawalt said a fee will be charged for cleaning and if the HHS basketball team is in the playoffs and needs the gymnasium to play, the alliance event will be moved.

-- Six trustees -- president Jim Marsh, vice president Ron Weishaar, secretary Cherry McWhorter, and trustees Raul Valdez, Joe Flood and Randy Tooley were present for the 6 p.m. meeting. Trustee Roy Dale Messer arrived at 10:30 p.m., in time for an executive session on personnel which began shortly before 11 p.m.

August.

In the operations report, Robinson noted that patient admissions were up 128 over this time a year ago, but the average daily census was down in August, as compared with a year ago. The average percent of occupancy for year-todate was 40 percent, compared to 32.7 a year ago.

He also pointed out that outpatient visits, laboratory tests and emergency room visits had all shown increases over a year ago. Home health visits have increased by 2,202 from a year ago, and respiratory therapy treatments were up by 2,449.

Shackleford presented the financial statement report, which reflected a gain of $14,548 for August.

Jim Bone, a Lubbock Methodist Hospital representative, briefly discussed the process in evaluating Jim Robinson, chief executive officer of Hereford Regional Medical Center. He distributed evaluation forms to the trustees for them to fill out and return. The annual evaluation will apparently be completed at the next meeting.

The meeting adjourned at 9:32 p.m. All board members were present--Manchee, Shackleford, Cortez, Keeling, Larry Watts, Dean Crofford and Boyd Foster.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Do you have room for one more letter about why young people are not getting jobs? I know why.

Check the manufacturer's tag on the back of your blouse, dress, coat or suit. Chances are good that they were made in Sri Lanka, Bangladesh, Pakistan, Thailand or Indonesia.

There used to be factory jobs for Americans who were not well-educated, but no more. Our factories are now located overseas.

Between the greedy politicians and the unions, most of our products today are not made in the U.S.A. Just try to find a pair of shoes made in America.

Do us all a favor, Ann. Tell your readers to check the tags on their clothing and refuse to buy anything not made by our fellow citizens. -- Annemarie in Philadelphia

DEAR PHILADELPHIA: Local consumption should be greater than what we spend on imports, but the policy you recommend could have serious repercussions. If Americans refuse to buy products made in other countries, those countries will most certainly refuse to buy ours. Then where would we be? Mickey Kantor, call your office.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Two years ago, I was engaged to be married, and "Kevin" gave me a 1 carat diamond ring valued at $12,000. The engagement was canceled after six months by mutual agreement, before any wedding arrangements had been made.

We are both engaged to other people now. Kevin has asked several times that I give the ring back, but I like wearing it on my right hand because it is a nice piece of jewelry. My new fiance bought me a much smaller diamond, which I wear on my left hand.

Some of my friends have said I should give Kevin's ring back, but I feel that I have earned it, if you catch my drift. What do you think? -- Vancouver Reader

DEAR VAN: When the man breaks the engagement, the woman has the right to keep the ring. When the wedding is canceled by mutual agreement, the ring should be returned. To do otherwise makes her look like a gold digger -- if you catch MY drift.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: There's no question that my girlfriend of eight months has a serious drinking problem. Her idea of an evening out is to make the bars and get drunk.

She is angry with me because I don't care to join her when she is "socializing" and "having fun." It is not fun for me to stay out until 3 a.m., watching an intelligent woman drink herself into an argumentative, foul-mouthed, semi-conscious state. The next day is spent dealing with her hangover and mood swings.

I am aware that alcoholism is a disease and that this woman is in denial, but what time frame would you allow for her to get help before I call it quits? P.S. These idiots who propose legalizing drugs should be forced to live with an alcoholic for a year or so. -- No State Except Concerned

DEAR CONCERNED: Have you considered joining Al-Anon? If not, I recommend it. As for the "time frame," it depends on your threshold of tolerance. It could be that calling it quits might be the jolt she needs to dry up.

I suggest that you talk this over with a professional.

Herd spikers knock off 4-0 Lady Eagles

By JAY PEDEN
Sports Editor

"District 1-4A Volleyball Showdown, Part I" turned out to be not that big of a showdown.

In a battle of teams with perfect league records, Hereford defeated Canyon, 15-8, 15-5, Tuesday night at Canyon High School.

Hereford, which improved to 4-0 in district play and 17-3 overall, hosts Dumas Saturday for what should the real showdown.

Canyon fell to 4-1 in district and 10-8 overall. The Lady Eagles came into Tuesday's match with a perfect district league. Herd coach Brenda Reeh said that was no illusion.

"Canyon was really good," Reeh said. "They probably outplayed us from the service line and they outblocked us. In the second game, we had several players on their third entry, so we went several sideouts against them.

"I was pleased we got out of that gym with a victory last night," she said. "They are, I felt, a very good team."

The Lady Whitefaces used strong hitting to pummel Canyon.

"The area where we outplayed them was that we had more power at the net hitting the ball. We had more weapons," Reeh said.

Middle blocker Danielle Cornelius recorded a season high 14 kills. Cornelius got a kill on 70 percent of the balls she had set to her.

Hereford also played good defense, ending up with a .800 digging percentage.

Julie Rampley led the team with five digs and with three aces. Rampley, normally a middle blocker, also played on the back row in the absence of Krista Beville, who discocated a shoulder Saturday (Beville is week-to-week).

Joe Mendoza (22) running back for Hereford's seventh grade A team, heads for open field as Tim Dudley (4) looks for someone to block. Mendoza scored four touchdowns in the team's 44-6 win over Pampa Tuesday in Hereford.

HJH football teams open with four wins

The Hereford Junior High football teams swept four games from Pampa Tuesday.

The Hereford seventh grade A team rolled to a 44-6 win behind Joe Mendoza's four touchdowns. Mendoza scored three times on offense, including runs of 33 and 53 yards, and he also returned an interception 40 yards for a score.

Kyle Artho ran for two TDs for the A team, and Valentin Sustaito also scored a TD.

The second game was a perfect contrast as Hereford won the seventh grade B game 8-0. The Hereford defense came up with several turnovers - the key one coming in the fourth quarter, when Jeremy Henning recovered a fumble in the Pampa end zone for a touchdown. Toby Torres ran for a two-point conversion.

Eric Ramos made an interception for Hereford with two minutes left, icing the game for Hereford.

The eighth grade teams both won easily in Pampa. The A team won 27-16. Nick Whatley, Greg Ewing and L.J. Vallejo all ran for touchdowns, and Morris Penalber caught a TD pass from Eric McNutt. Seth Pietsek ran for a two-point conversion, and Ewing kicked an extra point.

Even more different Hereford players scored in the B team's 32-0 romp. Hereford got rushing touchdowns from five players: Perfecto Macha, Matt Lusk, Johnny Zamarippa, Chris Diller and Gus Guseman. Lusk and Daniel Carnahan each kicked an extra point.

George Castillo intercepted a pass for Hereford in the B game.

49ers' loss lightens mood in Dallas

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP) - There's nothing like a San Francisco loss to get everyone at Valley Ranch in a bubbly mood.

Owner Jerry Jones was leading the good cheer Tuesday after the Super Bowl champion 49ers had stumbled against Detroit.

"We're happy about that," said Jones, wearing his best Prime Time grin after a good September in which the Cowboys went unbeaten, signed Deion Sanders away from the 49ers, then watched their chief rival lose on Monday night.

"It's a good thing to have happen," Jones said. "I'd give everything an 'A' both on and off the field."

Jones said it was satisfying to have a game up on the team that whipped them 38-28 in the NFC championship game last year.

"We know we've got to go by them to get to the Super Bowl," Jones said. "We know we'll probably have to beat 'em twice. We want BOTH those games in Texas Stadium."

Jones has seen the other side - his team lost to the Lions in overtime on a Monday night last season.

"We were rooting hard because we know what a loss to Detroit can do. We lost to them last year and it cost us. We had to play at San Francisco in the championship game."

San Francisco meets Dallas on Nov. 12 in Texas Stadium in a much-anticipated regular season matchup. It has been billed as the NFC championship game preview.

Jones, who has been sued for $300 million by the NFL because of his signings with Pepsi Cola and Nike, said the Cowboys' 4-0 start and San Francisco's misfortune "give us a lot of confidence, but we're not going to get smug."

Dallas coach Barry Switzer tried to checkmate the San Francisco loss euphoria.

"It just proves anybody can beat anybody," Switzer said. "That's going to be our theme this week. Humility is just seven days away."

Said Switzer: "We're one-up on San Francisco now. We just want to have the lead when we play here in November. If we take care of business we will. I had heard all offseason about predictions San Francisco would be undefeated when it got here."

The Cowboys are off to their best start since 1983. They play in Washington against former Dallas assistant coach Norv Turner on Sunday. Dallas has been beating up on NFC East opponents since 1991, owning a 28-7 record, including three straight against the Redskins.

"Norv will be prepared for us," Switzer said. "He knows what we are doing. But it's one thing to know it and another to stop it. All we do is run Emmitt Smith up the middle."

Tennessee adds to Oiler bait

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - Tennessee will contribute a total of $67 million to the package that Nashville will offer the Houston Oilers to relocate, Gov. Don Sundquist said today.

The state's contribution moves the Music City closer to meeting the $250 million expected cost for a new stadium.

Nashville has about $100 million available to spend, and Sundquist announced today that Tennessee will contribute $55 million from general bonds for construction. They'll add an additional $12 million for road improvements around the complex.

"I believe we're a giant step closer to welcoming NFL football to Tennessee. We've made a commitment to be a partner in this venture and ... I'm pleased we've done just that," Sundquist said.

SPORTS TRIVIA

Question: Have two opposing pitchers ever pitched no-hitters against each other over nine innings.

Answer: Yes, on May 2, 1917. Jim "Hippo" Vaughn of the Chicago Cubs and Fred Tony of the Cincinnati Reds both pitched hitless ball for nine innings. In the tenth inning, Vaughn allowed a hit, followed by an error, and the runner scored on a slow ground ball back to the mound to score the only run of the game. Tony set down the Cubs in order in the bottom of the tenth - striking out the last two batters - for the victory and the no-hitter.

Astros win 4th straight, stay in wild-card hunt

By CHRIS SHERIDAN
AP Sports Writer

The wild-card race is simple, really, for the Houston Astros.

Win, win, win, win, win - that's the formula that will put them in the postseason.

Houston won its fourth in a row Tuesday night, beating the Pittsburgh Pirates 2-0. The Astros pulled within a half-game in the wild-card standings when Colorado defeated Los Angeles 7-3.

If Houston wins its remaining five games (one at home against Pittsburgh, four at Chicago), it will finish with 65 losses - the same number the Dodgers have right now.

And in order for the Dodgers to stay at 65 losses, they'd have to win their final four games. One of those would be against Colorado tonight in the finale of their three-game series, and that would give the Rockies 65 losses.

If all three teams finish 79-65, Los Angeles and Colorado would have to play a one-game playoff for the NL West title that would count in the regular season standings. The Astros would then finish with a half-game lead over the loser.

OK, maybe the details aren't so simple. But it's an equation that the Astros understand.

"Everything is on the table now. This is what it's all about. Every play, every pitch is a big play," Craig Biggio said.

"It may come down to game 144, and if it does ... we'll still have to put everything into it. That's all we can do at this point. We've just got to win," manager Terry Collins said.

In Tuesday's unimportant NL games, Atlanta beat Philadelphia 5-1, Montreal beat Florida 5-4, Chicago edged St. Louis 3-2 and San Diego defeated San Francisco 6-3. The Cincinnati at New York game was rained out.

Astros 2, Pirates 0

Before an announced crowd of just 14,307 at the Astrodome, Houston scored both its runs in the fifth inning on infield grounders.

With two outs, James Mouton walked and Greg Swindell singled off Denny Neagle (13-8) to load the bases. Brian Hunter followed with a grounder to second baseman Carlos Garcia, who dropped the ball for an error. Biggio then grounded the ball to third baseman Nelson Liriano, who could not make a throw as Mouton scored the second run.

Swindell (9-9) got his first victory as a starter since July 29, allowing six hits in the first three innings, but none in the next three.

Todd Jones pitched 1 1-3 innings, Dave Veres worked two-thirds of an inning and Mike Henneman pitched the ninth for his seventh save.

"They've got a great shot," Pirates manager Jim Leyland said of the Astros. "All they have to do is keep on winning. It's no secret, they can't worry about where anybody else is playing or what they are doing. They are in control of their own destiny."

"Those four day games in Chicago will be tough for Houston," Neagle said when asked about the Astros' just-win scenario.

Rockies 7, Dodgers 3

After a one-day absence, Colorado moved back into first place in the NL West by a half-game.

Larry Walker had two home runs, Bret Saberhagen (7-6) won for the first time since Aug. 3, Ellis Burks had a two-out, two-run single in the eighth and Joe Girardi had a two-out, run-scoring hit in the ninth.

"It's not the playoffs yet, but it's playoff atmosphere," Saberhagen said. "It was a big game. If we lost tonight, we're a game and a half out and tomorrow is a must-win for us."

Instead, Los Angeles is in the must-win mode.

"What we're faced with now is four games left in the season. We're half a game out and we have a chance to beat the Rockies tomorrow and take it to San Diego. So our destiny's in our hands and that's all you could ask for," said Los Angeles starter Tom Candiotti (7-14), who gave up Walker's second homer, breaking a 2-2 tie in the sixth inning,

In today's series finale, Kevin Ritz (11-10) is the scheduled Colorado starter against Kevin Tapani (3-2). The game at Dodger Stadium is a sellout.

Braves 5, Phillies 1

At Philadelphia, Ryan Klesko had a three-run homer and four RBIs, and John Smoltz (12-7) broke his six-game losing streak against the Phillies. Smoltz worked five innings, allowing two hits and one run while striking out five and walking three.

Expos 5, Marlins 4

At Miami, Montreal was one strike away from a loss, but Wil Cordero doubled home the tying run and scored on Tim Laker's single off Robb Nen (0-7).

Cubs 3, Cardinals 2

At Chicago, Steve Trachsel (7-13) won for just the second time in 14 starts this season at Wrigley Field. Mark Grace had his career-high 15th homer and Scott Bullett tripled in the winning run in the seventh.

Padres 6, Giants 3

At San Francisco, Andy Ashby (12-10) won his third straight start and Melvin Nieves homered for the second straight day.

Yanks move closer to wild-card berth

By The Associated Press

Bernie Williams absence for the start of the game didn't seem to hurt the New York Yankees.

John Wetteland was there when it ended, and that enabled the Yankees to edge closer to clinching the AL wild-card berth.

The Yankees beat the Milwaukee Brewers 5-4 Tuesday night, and coupled with the Seattle Mariners' 10-2 victory over California, New York has a 1-1/2-game lead over the Angels in the race for the fourth playoff spot.

Williams, the Yankees' center fielder and hottest hitter, missed a flight from Puerto Rico after seeing his daughter for the first time since she was born Sept. 14. He got to County Stadium after the game started, and when he took the field, the Yankees led 4-0 in the third inning.

"I got to the airport. I missed the plane. I got caught in traffic," Williams said. "Right away, I thought that someone is going to be mad at this. It's a tough situation. I don't want to let the team down."

Manager Buck Showalter, who had reluctantly allowed the trip around Monday's day off, wasn't too happy about what transpired.

"We'll talk about it a little later. Today the focus is on the game," he said. "It's something Bernie and I will sit down and talk about, probably shortly."

Wetteland came on with two on and two outs in the eighth and the Brewers having scored twice to make it 5-4. He struck out pinch-hitter David Hulce and retired the side in order in the ninth for his 30th save.

"It's a lot of fun with that kind of adrenaline rush," Wetteland said. "How can you not like getting a shot at getting in there? Any time you come into the game where they have momentum, you want to show them you're in control."

In other AL games Tuesday it was Boston 5, Detroit 1; Baltimore 5, Toronto 0; Minnesota 13, Cleveland 4; Chicago 7, Kansas City 0; and Texas 7, Oakland 6.

Paul O'Neill had three RBIs, including a two-run homer, for the Yankees, whose first run of the game was driven in by Derek Jeter, who was bumped from the lineup when Williams arrived.

"I knew I was coming out," Jeter said. "Bernie's the MVP of the team."

Mariners 10, Angels 2

Seattle reduced its magic number for clinching the AL West to three as Jay Buhner and Ken Griffey Jr. homered in the Mariners' 22nd victory in 30 games.

They have a three-game lead over the Angels, losers of 27 of 36, with five games left. They meet today in the Mariners' final home game.

"The way Seattle is playing, we'd be better off concentrating on winning the wild card," said Chuck Finley, today's scheduled starter. "They're very, very hot."

Seattle has a season-high, seven-game winning streak and has won 15 of 17 at home.

Buhner hit his 38th homer and club-record 12th of the month and Griffey had his 16th and ninth since returning to the lineup Aug. 15 after missing almost three months with a broken left wrist.

Winner Andy Benes (7-1) allowed eight hits in 7 1-3 innings.

Red Sox 5, Tigers 1

Zane Smith went eight solid innings at Fenway Park and John Valentin was 3-for-4 with a three-run homer, his 26th.

Smith (8-8), trying to secure a spot on the playoff roster, allowed six hits, struck out four and walked none. Dwayne Hosey homered and scored three times as the AL East champions ended a three-game losing streak.

Orioles 5, Blue Jays 0

Mike Mussina threw a five-hitter at Toronto for his league-leading 18th victory.

Mussina (18-9) struck out six and walked one in his third shutout and sixth complete game. He threw a three-hitter in his last start.

Jeff Huson had two doubles, scoring runs in the second and seventh for Baltimore.

Twins 13, Indians 4

At Minneapolis, Marty Cordova homered, doubled and drove in three runs for Minnesota, which got its third straight well-pitched game. Mike Trombley (4-8) allowed three runs and three hits in six innings.

Sandy Alomar homered twice and Albert Belle hit his 47th for the AL Central champion Indians, who allowed the most runs in a game this season.

Belle homered in the sixth to make it 7-3, but the Twins sent 10 batters to the plate and scored six runs in the seventh.

White Sox 7, Royals 0

Alex Fernandez pitched a six-hitter for his seventh straight victory. Fernandez (12-8) struck out six and walked two at Kansas City.

Chicago scored six runs in the first as it batted around.

The Royals, officially eliminated from postseason play, allowed 55 runs and 98 hits in losing seven of the first nine games of an 11-game homestand.

Rangers 7, Athletics 6

Texas prevailed in a sloppy game and kept alive its slim postseason hopes.

Mark McLemore's two-out single in the eighth broke a 5-5 tie and Will Clark added an insurance run that became important when Oakland got one in the top of the ninth.

Mark McGwire hit his 37th and 38th homers for the A's, who blew a 4-1 lead.

Texas rallied for a 5-4 lead with four runs in the sixth, three on one play that had two errors. The A's took advantage of two seventh-inning errors to tie the game.

Cowher agologizes for actions Sunday

PITTSBURGH (AP) - Pittsburgh Steelers coach Bill Cowher, likely facing a fine for his on-field confrontation with referee Gordon McCarter, regrets charging the official and jamming a photo into his shirt pocket.

McCarter probably shouldn't wait for an apology, however.

Cowher, upset with an incorrect penalty for too many men on the field, charged McCarter at halftime Sunday and shoved a picture showing the Steelers' alignment into the referee's pocket.

Cowher had tried to show the photo to McCarter during a timeout, but NFL officials cannot use photographic or video assistance in making a call.

Upon further review, Cowher said he shouldn't have been so demonstrative or gotten so angry.

"My action was not appropriate," Cowher said Tuesday. "The basic underline is that two wrongs do not make a right. That being the case, I have no further comment on the incident. I have not heard from the league."

Line judge Ben Montgomery's incorrect count was upheld by McCarter, although two other officials counted only 11. The error allowed Minnesota Vikings kicker Fuad Reveiz, who had missed a 48-yard field goal before the penalty, to make a 43-yarder.

"Ben stuck to his guns," McCarter said. "It doesn't go to a vote. In this case we had Ben stand firm on the initial call."

However, TV replays - both the Fox Network's and the Steelers' own videos - showed only 11 players. The press box-level photo that Cowher wanted McCarter to see also pictured only 11 Steelers.

76ers sign Maxwell

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - "Mad Max" is no more. Just call him Vernon Maxwell now.

"In Philly, I don't want to be Mad Max," Maxwell said after signing a free agent contract with the Philadelphia 76ers Tuesday. "That name got me in a lot of stuff on the court and off the court."

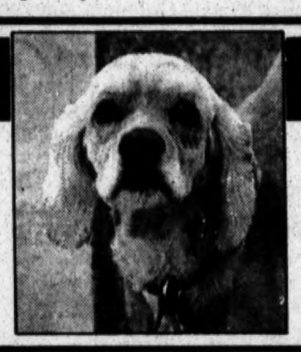

Stuff, in this case, means trouble, which never seemed to be far from Maxwell in the past year.

First was his well-publicized punchout of a fan in Portland who had been taunting him. That led to a 10-game suspension and a $20,000 fine.

Most recently, he was pulled over in late August by police in Houston for a traffic violation, who then allegedly found a bag of marijuana in his car. Later in the week, a woman filed a paternity suit against him.

"I've been through a lot of things. I'm sure everybody knows about that," Maxwell said. "But that's behind me now. I've got a fresh slate."

Prosecution calls safe deposit contents a road map

Evidence found in defendant's Bronco described as pieces in murder puzzle

By MICHAEL FLEEMAN
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Prosecutor Christopher Darden called it a road map from Nicole Brown Simpson, a special message to a jury she'd never know, in a trial dealing with a violent death she knew would come.

The message came from a safety deposit box drilled open last year by an investigator with a search warrant: letters from O.J. Simpson, a will and Polaroid photos of Ms. Simpson with scrapes and bruises inflicted by the man she loved.

"She left these for you," Darden told jurors, displaying two pictures of the battered Ms. Simpson on the courtroom big screen. "This is a sign. She wanted you to know who killed her when the time came."

On June 12, 1994, Darden said in prosecution summations Tuesday, the time did, in fact, come. And the man who killed her, Darden said, was her ex-husband, the famous football star and commercial pitchman sitting at the defense table across the courtroom.

Simpson also killed his ex-wife's friend Ronald Goldman, prosecutor Marcia Clark told jurors earlier. Goldman, she said, died because he unexpectedly walked up during the attack on Ms. Simpson and "the defendant could not leave a witness alive."

Closing arguments, which cap presentations that began eight months ago, resume today with more from Darden. He will be followed by summations from defense attorneys Johnnie Cochran Jr. and Barry Scheck.

Clark spent most of the emotional court day Tuesday going over the physical evidence in the case, sometimes having to talk over the sobs of family members of the victims and of Simpson.

Delivering a closing argument that grew more powerful throughout the long court day, Clark disavowed her own police witness as a racist and ridiculed a defense contamination-conspiracy theory as "far-fetched."

Each point she made to the jury - about shoe prints, strands of hair, bloodstains and fibers from the carpet in Simpson's Bronco - were pieces in a murder puzzle, she told jurors. As she assembled these "pieces" throughout the day, an actual picture puzzle was projected on the giant screen overhead. When all the pieces were in place, it showed Simpson's face.

"There it is," Clark declared.

She handed off to Darden, who reinforced the prosecution's motive theory. The prosecutor spoke of Simpson's short fuse, in a slow, quiet summation that spoke to Darden's own slow-burn intensity.

It was Darden's most powerful courtroom remarks since his bitter clash with rival Cochran over whether the jury should hear the word "nigger."

As Clark did, Darden quickly distanced himself from retired Detective Mark Fuhrman, who testified that he never used that word in the last decade, only to have his voice on tape spewing that very racial epithet. Fuhrman said he found a bloody glove on Simpson's estate; the defense has attacked him as a racist capable of framing Simpson.

"I'm not even going to call him Detective Fuhrman, if I can help it, because he doesn't deserve that title, doesn't warrant that respect, not from me," Darden said. "But this isn't the case of Mark Fuhrman, this is the case of O.J. Simpson."

Darden described Simpson as an intensely jealous man, the only man to ever "take a hand" to Ms. Simpson, as graphically shown in pictures of Ms. Simpson after a beating. Those photos contrasted with another Darden showed the jury, a studio picture of a lovely Ms. Simpson, hand on chin in a pose, smiling slightly.

After a beating on New Year's 1989, Darden said, Ms. Simpson had the imprint of a hand on the left side of her neck.

"We submit to you that the hand that left that imprint five years ago is the same hand that cut that same throat, that same neck," Darden said. "It was the defendant."

Simpson was so obsessed with Ms. Simpson that he couldn't contain his rage, Darden said, reminding jurors of testimony and evidence that Simpson spied on his ex-wife through a window in 1992 and broke through her door in October 1993 - an incident captured in Ms. Simpson's dramatic 911 call.

"He is out of control. He cannot handle it. And the fuse is burning," Darden told jurors as he methodically outlined the tumultuous relationship.

The summations came on a day in which the TV camera was briefly barred because the judge said the camera operator violated court rules, and the anguish of three families almost overwhelmed Clark's closing presentation.

Pictures of the bloody victims and description of death set off sobs that echoed through the small courtroom.

The families of Ms. Simpson and Goldman cried when the photographs were flashed on the big courtroom screen and Clark talked about specifics of the slayings. Simpson's grown daughter, Arnelle, wept into her hands as her aunts comforted her, and Simpson himself was overcome. His lawyers brought him water and tissues.

"When you look at these pictures, ladies and gentlemen, you see rage. You see fury. You see overkill," Clark told jurors. "This is not the mark of a professional killer. ... These are not efficient murders. These are murders that are really slaughters, that are personal."

Superior Court Judge Lance Ito noticed jurors glancing toward the audience as the sobs grew louder, but he did not interfere. Jurors focused mostly on Clark. They took few notes but appeared to become increasingly engrossed in her steady, low-key summation.

She ridiculed the defense theory that Colombian drug dealers did the deed, saying the true killer was obsessed with a woman and "found the one way to keep her under control where she could never slip out of it again - and that man is the defendant."

With Simpson listening intently and often reacting negatively to her statements, Clark accused his lawyers of raising distractions rather than facts and leading jurors down dead-end "false roads" to keep them from seeing the evidence.

"When you open up the windows," she said, "and let the cool air blow out the smokescreen that's been created by the defense, with the cool wind of reason, you will see that the defendant has been proven guilty, easily, beyond a reasonable doubt."

State Capital HIGHLIGHTS

By Lyndell Williams & Ed Sterling
TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN — James A. "Andy" Collins announced last week he would step down Feb. 1 as executive director of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice and go into private business.

The Houston Chronicle reported the governor's office had ordered an investigation into Collins' business dealings a week before he announced his resignation. A day later, the Austin American-Statesman reported no investigation had been ordered.

The situation left heads spinning on the prison agency's nine-member governing board. Ellen Halbert, vice chairman of the Texas Board of Criminal Justice, said she was "very upset that the board was not told why Andy was leaving."

Collins said that in July he formed Professional Care of America Inc., a jail management firm to operate in Louisiana. Former Houston Mayor Fred Hofheinz and Jim Brunson, a former officer with N-Group Securities Inc., are listed as directors in Collins' firm. Hofheinz and Brunson said they resigned after lending their names for the incorporation papers.

Collins also said he is under contract with Hofheinz' Viewpoint Development Corp. to operate a jail for juveniles in La Salle Parish, La., if and when Viewpoint raises the private money to build it.

In 1994, a federal jury awarded more than $79 million in damages to nine mutual funds that alleged N-Group and others fraudulently marketed bonds used to pay for the building of six private prisons, which the state of Texas purchased. Collins was subpoenaed as a witness in the trial. He acknowledged that some of his testimony could be viewed as favorable toward N-Group.

Though Collins' private business plans were laid while he was head of the TDCJ, he said he did not work on them on state time and had not been paid.

Collins' annual salary as head of the state agency is $120,000. He began as a prison guard 23 years ago and worked his way to the top.

Faith in Economy on Rise

Texas Comptroller John Sharp says consumers, investors and business owners appear to hold steady optimism that the Texas economy will continue to grow.

Texans' faith in the state economy is up 17.5 percent compared to a year ago.

"Consumer confidence, retail sales, new housing permits — up 26.6 percent in July — and the Texas Stock Index are the strongest components of this month's Leading Texas Economic Indicators," Sharp said.

The Index, which is produced by Sharp's office each month to help predict changes in the economy, registers 124.7, an increase of 2.1 percent compared to one year ago.

By comparison, Sharp said, the U.S Index of Leading Economic Indicators is at 101, down 0.7 percent compared to one year ago. "The U.S. Index has declined for six consecutive months, but the slowdown in the national economy has had only a slight effect in Texas," he added.

Clemons Latest to Switch

State Rep. Billy Clemons of Pollok last week shed his affiliation with the Democratic Party in announcing he had joined the Republican Party.

The six termer said he would seek re-election in 1996 for the seat representing the East Texas counties of Angelina, Houston, San Augustine and Trinity. His crossover cuts the Democratic majority in the state House to 86-64.

AIDS Toll Heavy in Prisons

During the last five years, AIDS has been the leading cause of death for incarcerated felons in the Texas Department of Criminal Justice, the Austin American-Statesman reported.

AIDS has been the most frequent cause of death among inmates every year since 1990, with the exception of 1991, when cancer was the leading cause. As of August, 72 inmates had died of AIDS in 1995.

"The people that end up in prison are basically poor, inner-city and nonwhite, and they're young," said James W. Marquart, a criminal justice professor at Sam Houston State University in Huntsville. "They've had crappy health care in the free world. That's what's going on in prison today."

Redistricting Plan Approved

A group of Republican plaintiffs has successfully challenged the state House and Senate districts as being unconstitutional on grounds of racial gerrymandering.

Last week, a panel of three federal judges approved a temporary redistricting plan that will change boundaries in Harris County's 18 state House districts and six Senate districts for the 1996 elections.

Plaintiffs argued that efforts to create safe districts for minority legislators resulted in zig-zagging district lines and political segregation, the Houston Chronicle reported.

The changes will affect voting patterns and representation for some 270,000 Harris County residents.

Dog Track to Close

Declining business is forcing the closure of Valley Greyhound Park in Harlingen, which was the first of three dog-racing tracks to open in the state.

The $16.2 million, 3,000-seat track, which has lost $5 million since it opened in September 1990, is to close Sept. 30.

Earlier this month, the Texas Racing Commission decided not to allow the dog track to simulcast horse races in partnership with the Cameron County Fair Association.

A bill that would have allowed Texas pari-mutuel tracks to operate off-track betting parlors failed to gain approval in the state Legislature this year.

Other Highlights

■ The House Banking Committee voted in favor of an amendment to a sweeping budget bill that would end the Texas ban on home equity loans. The amendment, by U.S. Rep. Steve Stockman, R-Friendswood, would undo earlier legislation by U.S. Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-San Antonio, who has fought to preserve Texas' homestead protections for more than 40 years.

Library named for Dr. Seuss

SAN DIEGO (AP) - Not in a car. Not in a tree. An upside-down library? That's different, you see.

The widow of Theodor Geisel, also known as Dr. Seuss, donated a reported $20 million to the main library at the University of California at San Diego.

The library will be renamed the Geisel Library in honor of Theodor and Audrey Geisel, it was announced Monday.

The whimsical eight-story building had caught Geisel's eye. Opened in 1970, it resembles a pyramid turned on its tip.

"The first time Ted saw the form of that building, he said to me, 'If I had turned my thoughts toward designing a building, it might have looked strangely similar to this,'" Mrs. Geisel recalled.

Geisel wrote such children's classics as "Green Eggs and Ham" and "The Cat in the Hat."

Computer software cost may be tax deductible for self-employed

By PAMELA YIP
Houston Chronicle

HOUSTON - If you've been having fits trying to get through the glitches in Microsoft's superhyped Windows 95 software, there's good news and more bad news.

The good news is that if you are self-employed and mainly use your computer for your business, the cost of Windows 95 is tax deductible.

The bad news is that excludes many people who don't have their own business, and it's not much of a deduction. And even this small deduction requires some long-winded explanations of the rules.

The fine print in the tax law requires you to depreciate computer software over 36 months. But the Internal Revenue Service isn't likely to challenge you if you expense the cost of Windows 95, which generally retails for about $89.

"IRS guidelines typically require taxpayers to amortize software over three years, but the record-keeping for that is probably more of a hassle than just expensing it," said Paul Mueller, a partner at Mann Frankfort Stein & Lipp in Houston, an accounting firm. "But in view of (Windows 95's) relatively minor costs, most tax practitioners (feel) that you can expense it."

Taking a $30-a-year deduction over three years even strikes IRS officials as too much trouble.

"Hell, no, it's just too small," said Steve Yost, spokesman for the IRS in Houston. "That would be akin to filling out a loan application at your neighborhood bank to buy a TV dinner."

This approach of expensing costs still may be the way to go even if you bought a suite of software programs costing $500.

"The IRS probably won't challenge you on that," Yost said. It's not just the dollar figure that the IRS would be interested in. The big question is, is your computer expense a lot higher than average for similar businesses?

The major reason you depreciate costs is to spread your tax bills out over several years, especially if your new business is still struggling to turn a profit.

"You will probably have less income in the early years and so to maximize your tax benefits, (you depreciate costs) as opposed to trying to take it all in one year," Yost said.

These deductions are among the benefits of being your own boss.

If you work for a company, you may deduct the cost of software you bought only if it's required to perform your job and if your employer didn't reimburse you for it. You enter those expenses under "Un-reimbursed employee expenses (line 20)" on Schedule A for itemized deductions that you attach to the 1040 tax form.

But make sure you have enough deductions to itemize; otherwise, you're better off taking the standard deduction.

You'd be better off taking the standard deduction if that amount is more than the total of your allowable itemized deductions.

A self-employed person, however, can add the cost of Windows 95 to his expenses on IRS Schedule C, "Profit or Loss From Business," for sole proprietorships.

"It allows you to list all the business expenses you've incurred that are deductible," Yost said.

That includes long-distance charges on calls you've made to Microsoft for help on getting Windows 95 to work properly and the cost of buying one of the many books that tells you how to work Windows 95. You also list those costs on Schedule C.

But employees of companies would put those costs on Schedule A.

As with all tax breaks you take, maintain good records in case the IRS challenges you. Deductions have got to reflect the percentage of time the computer is used for business and pleasure, Yost said. "You've got to pretty much say, 'I spent 75 percent of the time doing business stuff on this computer. The other 25 percent is personal."

While percentage of business use is an intangible thing to prove, there are ways to come close to it.

For instance, keep a log of when you sign on to use your software for business.

"Make sure any type of file and work you're doing is all related to your business," said Marty Bush, a tax attorney and head of the content development team at CCH Inc. in Riverwoods, Ill., which provides tax and legal information to businesses and professionals.

Or keep a business contract you have with a client that spells out what your client is paying you and for what services. Keep check stubs to show what customers are paying you.

Keep copies of your phone bills that have the calls you've made to Microsoft for help in working Windows 95.

"IRS is going to be very aware of what media are saying about Windows 95," Yost said. "It's not going to come as a real shock to one of our tax examiners or auditors that you needed to spend some time on the phone to Microsoft."

Don't panic, but make sure that you can back up what you claim.

"You've got a higher threshold of record-keeping," said William Schoenfield, a Houston accountant.

You've already got a convincing piece of evidence: Your business.

"Why do you really have the computer is the issue," said Scott McMillian, a tax accountant at the Houston office of Arthur Andersen & Co. "Your best records are that your business exists."

Don't worry if your Windows 95 has solitaire and some other games loaded with it.

"If you buy a package that has some games on it, the IRS is not going to quibble about the game because it's all part of the package," Yost said. "Most people aren't buying Windows 95 for the games. They're buying it to upgrade the software system. It's like going to the car dealer and having them throw in the mats for the floor."

What IRS officials would argue over is if you bought software that had a spreadsheet program and also included a subscription to an on-line service and threw in a tax preparation package as a bonus.

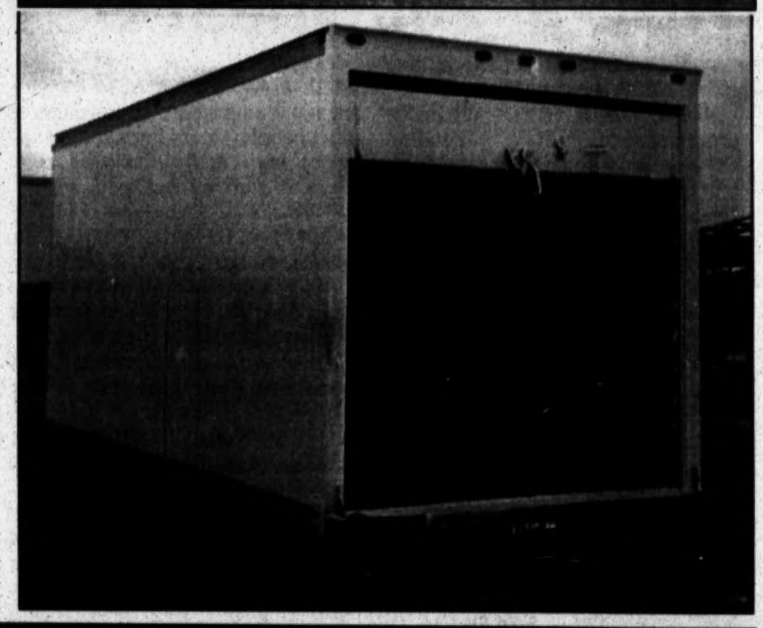

"The IRS might look at that and say, 'Was this a promotional thing? We cannot see there is really a business application for the personal tax package,' " Yost said. "The IRS might say, 'We may need to subtract that portion out because it's personal.' "

'Life after Loss' seminar is scheduled

The American Cancer Society will hold a "Life After Loss" seminar during the months of October and November in the First Baptist Church in Canyon, Room B-3. Sessions will be held on consecutive Monday afternoons, Oct. 16,23,30, Nov. 6 and 13 from 12-1 p.m.

The American Cancer Society offers this seminar and support group, without charge, to anyone who has experienced the death of a loved one within the past two years, regardless of the cause of the loved one's death.

Dealing with the death of a loved one is one of life's most difficult and stressful experiences. Often people feel lonely and confused because friends and family expect them to be over the death, yet their grieving continues. People may feel angry, guilty or depressed.

Many people find it helps to meet with others who understand. That includes others who are dealing with the death of a loved one, and a professional counselor, Rodney Boyer, M.ED, LPC, from Canyon who is experienced in helping people work through their grief.

In the safe and supportive atmosphere of a small group, Life After Loss offers the opportunity to talk about experiences and hear from others in similar circumstances. Participants can begin to understand the grief process, their emotions, and how to deal with them.

They can get ideas that may help them day-to-day, week-to-week, and long term.

The American Cancer Society offers Life After Loss as a community service, at no charge to participants. It is recommended that participants plan to attend all sessions to receive full benefit of the program.

For more information and to register for this program, contact the American Cancer Society at 353-4306. The American Cancer Society is the nationwide community-based voluntary health organization dedicated to controlling cancer through research, education and service.

Dear Heloise: I have misplaced a recipe you ran in your column. Please tell me how to keep the bottom crust of pecan pie from getting soggy. It was something like brushing the crust with egg or egg whites, beaten or unbeaten.

I will be forever grateful. — Carrie Chambliss, Village Mills, Texas

I'd be happy to reprint this for you. All you need to do is beat an egg and then brush it on the bottom pie crust before you add the filling. This forms a barrier that will keep the crust from getting soggy. Give it a try! — Heloise

VEGETABLE JUICES

Dear Heloise: When I steam vegetables, there is usually some liquid left in the bottom of the pot. Rather than throw it out, I pour it into a jar, label it "Vegetable Juices" and store it in the freezer.

When the jar is full, the juices make an excellent nutritious soup stock full of vitamins and minerals that would otherwise have gone down the drain. Unused liquid from canned vegetables can be added to the jar as well.

Just remember not to fill the jar to the brim, as water expands as it freezes, sometimes breaking the jar. I leave about one inch of space at the top. — Toni Reitman, San Antonio, Texas

Extra vegetable juice is perfect to add to veggie soup. I have compiled some of my favorite soup recipes in a pamphlet. You really should give it a try. To receive one, please send $2 and a long, self-addressed, stamped (55 cents) envelope to: Heloise/Soup, PO Box 795001, San Antonio TX 78279-5001. — Heloise

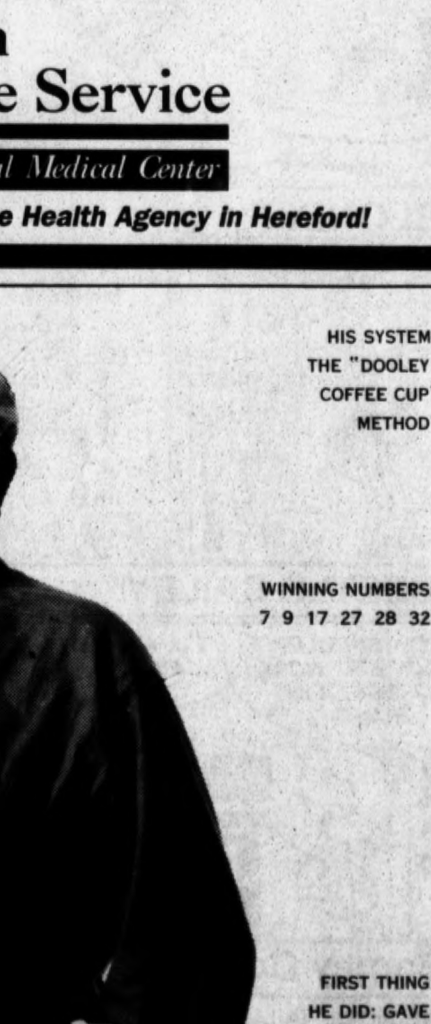

HANDY PEELER

Dear Heloise: I never had much luck using a grater to remove zest from lemons, so I use a vegetable peeler to remove that thin skin, then chop fine with a sharp knife.

Works great for me. Love your column and have learned a lot. — Mary Martin, Santa Ana, Calif.

Miss Manners reprimands TV for sex, violence

By LYNN ELBER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Television is taking heat for being violent, sexist, oversexed and more, with the medium's collective knuckles soundly rapped by all manner of critical Miss Manners.

Go to it, we say, as shameless as anyone in jumping in on the latest socio-psycho-political etiquette craze.

But what about the smaller annoyances television visits on viewers? Call us petty, call us superficial, but who's the watchdog for the fingernails-on-the-blackboard stuff?

While research funds are pending, our able staff has prepared a preliminary report on problems that may, in their own small way, contribute to national depravity. Or at least irritability.

Like these tiny trespasses:

-The shoulder-to-shoulder striding cast shot. You've seen it in the credits of "ER," "Chicago Hope" and, like a virus snaking its way through a defenseless throng, on newcomers like "The Monroes."

Filmed in portentous (OK, pretentious) slow motion, the actors march down a corridor, preferably one of power. They are determined, they are driven, they are in drill-team synch.

But where are these people going? And why? Did someone just yell "Fresh-brewed cappuccino in the lunchroom!" Or maybe "Bowling league sign-ups!"

At other workplaces, according to our research team, only food, fire drills or 5 o'clock get people moving like that.

-Exclusive reports that aren't. "Tonight, only on 'Entertainment Tonight!' "Tonight, only on Extra!" That's the siren song from these dueling inside-Hollywood shows.

But the "exclusives" are duplicates, such as interviews with Sharon Stone hyping her latest film. Maybe the exclusive part was getting to see Stone's glamorous movie wardrobe up close (hmmm, no lingerie shots). Maybe it was the lame banter between Stone and crew members.

Granted, entertainment scoops aren't on a par with, say, Washington revelations about politicians and the women they grope. But c'mon, even gossip addicts have standards: no real dirt, no unreal hype.

Send both shows to a 12-step program for rehab - and to dig up some honest trash.

-Nicknames for those who haven't earned them. Who can resist a gangster's colorful moniker, like those bestowed on Lucky Luciano, Bugsy Siegel and Dutch Schultz?

Not the news media, certainly, even when the honoree seems borderline. Take Craig "Tony The Animal" Fiato, a mob informant who got to kick up his heels in the O.J. Simpson trial chorus line.

What kind of track record does this tough guy have to have to get such recognition? Let's face it, hired guns like Robert "Hollywood Bob" Shapiro and Johnnie "Mighty Mouth" Cochran Jr. are way ahead of Fiato in the public consciousness. As is prosecutor Marcia "The Miniskirted Mauler" Clark.

Credit where credit is due, please.

-Politics and sitcoms as strange bedfellows. This season started out with John F. Kennedy Jr. pulling a cameo on "Murphy Brown." Undeniably decorative and with the patina of myth, he was a prize catch.

But things quickly went downhill as First Brother Roger Clinton - less wooden than young Kennedy but without the charm - made a guest appearance on "The Nanny."

It's a grim portent, especially with 1996 an election year. Swarms of Clinton, Dole and other political relatives could clutter the sitcom landscape.

Not to mention those coy presidential-wannabes angling for a chance to make nice with the American public ("Mr. Gingrich, Mr. Powell, we're ready for your close-ups").

Leave weighty concerns about the blurred line between reality and TV, or about inappropriate politicking, for another discussion. Our peeve: Political humor isn't for sitcoms and amateurs. That's why God gave us Mark Russell.

-The latest oddball visual style. A kind of 1970s strobe effect used both in TV series and interviews could provoke flashback fears among once-naughty viewers. But it's just technology run amok, a method called "step printing" or, for amateurs, "jerky visual effect."

Film, typically run at 24 frames a second, is shot and shown at a dawdling six frames per second to gain a blurred, uneven and unbearably trendy look.

It can be especially obnoxious when coupled with out-of-sync sound, another hot technique. Badly dubbed Italian films were doing that in the 1950s - and back then, audiences knew to giggle.

That concludes our initial report. And to think the season is still young.

NBC's 'seaQuest DSV' in trouble

By SCOTT WILLIAMS
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - When the producers of NBC's "seaQuest DSV" asked Michael Ironside to take command of their troubled submarine, the rugged, crag-faced Canadian actor turned them down flat.

"I saw so many problems that I couldn't see where I'd be able to do the work that I wanted to do," Ironside recalled.

When he wrapped up last season on "ER" as trauma chief Dr. William Swift, he'd provided an authority figure who was almost parental to the younger doctors.

("I ended up playing a version of my father," Ironside said. "My sister busted me on the second show. She called me up and said, 'You're playing Dad!' I said, 'Yeah! Does he know?' She said, 'No, he's watching hockey.' ")

"I wasn't interested in hanging around, being a service character to other people's story lines and getting something I could sink my teeth into every 10 shows," he said.

"ER," like "seaQuest DSV," is a big, expensive, ambitious program produced by Steven Spielberg's Amblin Entertainment. Unlike the hit "ER," the 21st century underwater adventure was in deep trouble.

Conceived as Sunday night family fare, "seaQuest" featured a talking dolphin (Ens. Darwin), a demographically correct cast and the neato-keenest submarine since "Voyage to the Bottom of the Sea."

Things got so bad last season for the typographically challenged "Deep-Submergence Vehicle" that the producers shied it across interstellar space to fight a civil war on an alien, watery world.

Ironside, beloved of science-fiction fans for performances in "V," "Scanners" and "Total Recall," told the producers he wanted no part of it. Then he got his first surprise:

"My attitude was, basically, crash the ship, kill half the crew and start over," he said. "They, basically, looked at me and said, 'What else?'"

Ironside had read classic science fiction since boyhood, everything from Bradbury's "Martian Chronicles" to Van Vogt's "Slan," and had acted in dozens of science fiction projects.

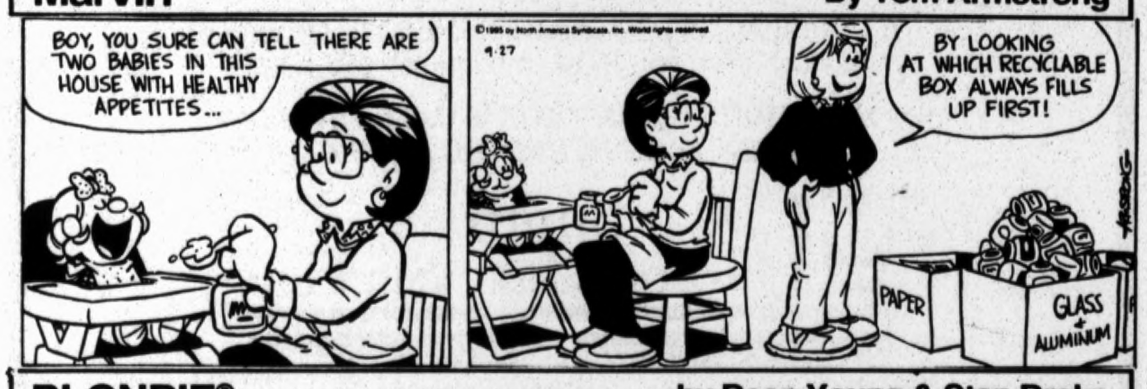

"Take 'Blade Runner,' for example," he said. "Science fiction in that sense is where you have all the technology, all the possibilities of communication, yet it showcases the isolation and the loneliness of the human animal."

Newspapers seeking ways to lower production costs

Increased prices on basic raw material, newsprint, has major impact on business

By FARRELL KRAMER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - In the fast-moving world of news, it's often said that today's newspaper is tomorrow's birdcage liner. If so, Tweety has never had it so good.

Newsprint, the gray stock on which reporters, editors and illustrators chronicle the day's events, has become more expensive than ever before. A price increase that took effect on Sept. 1 has put newsprint at an all-time high - even when adjusted for the effects of inflation.

Prices have nearly doubled in the past two years, forcing publishers to devise a range of money-saving responses.

The newspaper industry's struggle is similar to the travails of other industries beholden to the up-and-down prices of raw materials. When steel prices rise, it's more expensive to make cars. When semiconductor prices soar, computer makers get squeezed.

Fortunately for publishers and other commodity purchasers, there's always the flip side: Rising prices eventually fall.

"It's just a normal part of our business," says William Metzfield, president of Gannett Supply Corp., the purchasing subsidiary of Gannett Co., the nation's largest newspaper company.

"It's cyclical, it has its ups and downs," Metzfield says. "Last time, it probably went down more than most times, and now it's probably gone up higher than historic trends. Commodities level out, whether it's oil or gasoline."

The fact that prices fluctuate, though, doesn't mean publishers are having an easy time. Efforts to consume less newsprint, cut costs and increase revenue have become priorities.

Charles E. Richardson, publisher and president of the Daily Rocket-Miner of Rock Springs, Wyo., says his paper has focused on getting its printing presses to work more efficiently and on efforts to cut waste.

First, says Richardson, whose 8,200 circulation paper publishes Tuesday through Saturday, the Daily Rocket-Miner has worked to adjust the press ink more quickly at the beginning of each publication run, causing less paper to be wasted with smudged or too-light sheets.

Also, the newspaper is working to run newsprint rolls as far down to the core as possible before changing them. Newsprint comes rolled around a stiff core much like household paper towels.

"We haven't altered staff nor have we cut circulation to outlying areas," Richardson says. "I know a lot of bigger papers have done that. We've tried to put out the same paper we always have and keep the same customers."

As for profit erosion caused by higher newsprint costs, Richardson says his paper has simply taken the hit.

The extent of that hit varies from newspaper to newspaper. Some, like the Daily Rocket-Miner, are able to absorb the price increases without major difficulties. Others cannot.

This year, for example, The Houston Post folded, citing newsprint costs as one reason; the Los Angeles Times is cutting hundreds of jobs due partly to newsprint prices; some newspaper companies have reported higher newsprint costs are hurting profits.

The list goes on.

"Those newspapers that've laid off or eliminated editions, or have actually shut down, have done it for a host of reasons, not just newsprint," says Miles Groves, chief economist at the Newspaper Association of America, an industry trade group.

Groves cites issues of competition and local economic strength for such drastic moves. But newsprint price increases, he said, can aggravate other problems.

Newsprint costs generally come to about 20 percent of a newspaper's revenue and rank as its No. 2 expense behind labor.

From a recent low of about $410 a metric ton during the first quarter of 1994, newsprint prices have risen to $750 to $760 a ton today, according to Mark X. Diverio, a paper industry analyst at UBS Securities Inc.

That represents an increase of about 85 percent. The prior all-time high in newsprint prices was $610 a ton in mid-1988. Newsprint now costs more - taking inflation into account - than that prior peak, which comes to about $750 in 1995 dollars, Groves calculates.

While trouble for newspapers, the increase in prices has allowed newsprint manufacturers some breathing room after prices fell precipitously in the early 1990s, causing significant financial losses.

"There's not a lot you can do when the prices drop below your costs, so what you have to try to do is reduce costs, which we did," says Burton G. MacArthur, executive vice president at Champion International Corp., one of the largest U.S. newsprint producers.

Both sides are well aware that in this cyclical industry neither buyer nor seller enjoys the advantage for long.

Strategies to reduce costs

By The Associated Press

Rising newsprint prices have caused publishers to use less, boost revenue and cut overall costs. Some examples:

-Reduce size of pages: Newspapers are working to cut the size of the pages, shaving fractions of an inch off the margins. That can add up for large newsprint consumers.

-Run presses more efficiently: Publications are looking to waste less paper getting their presses inked up and running. The longer it takes to get ink and color right, the more useless pages are printed.

-Be more efficient with waste: Efforts include running rolls of newspaper closer to the core before changing them, and not printing as many extra copies of a day's paper.

-Cut excess circulation: Newspapers have begun to cut distribution of copies to expensive outlying areas and others places seen as unprofitable from a distribution and advertising standpoint.

-Raise prices: Publishers have been working to offset the higher cost of newsprint by raising newsstand and home delivery prices. They're also raising advertising rates.

-Cut overall costs: Some publishers are cutting operating costs, everything from layoffs and hiring freezes to elimination of unprofitable sections and even entire editions.

-Generate new revenue: Moving to on-line computer distribution, teaming with other newspapers to provide news gathering services for a fee and creating other businesses.

Manufacturers relieved after earlier drop

By FARRELL KRAMER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - While newspaper publishers struggle to deal with soaring prices, newsprint manufacturers are breathing a sigh of relief.

For them, it's been a long time coming.

Back in the late 1980s, North American newsprint makers started building new facilities to meet growing demand for paper with more recycled content. That expansion took place roughly through 1991.

Just as the new mills started producing, however, global economic growth declined, newspapers began buying less newsprint, and prices plummeted.

What followed for newsprint makers was a disaster that took prices as low as $410 a metric ton from a 1988 high of $610.

"It was probably the most major drop the paper industry has had since the Great Depression," says Virgil Horton, vice president of the paper group at the American Forest and Paper Association.

Today, prices are at an all-time high. At $750 to $760 a metric ton, newspapers are contending with newsprint costs that have almost doubled since their recent lows, set in early 1994. For newsprint manufacturers, the increase means they can finally make some money.

The years 1991 to 1994 were painful for newsprint sellers.

"We lost over $100 million in the newsprint business during that period," says Burton G. MacArthur, executive vice president at Champion International Corp. "We lost money for 36 straight months."

While Champion itself did not increase newsprint making capacity during the expansion period, the industry added about 12 paper-making machines each costing about $200 million to $400 million, says Mark X. Diverio, a paper industry analyst at UBS Securities Inc.

When the bottom fell out of pricing, some older machines were shut down. But newsprint capacity took some time to fall in line with demand.

That has only recently taken place, as strong demand from other nations and from non-daily publications has combined with a improvement among American newspapers to bolster paper makers' fortunes.

U.S. newsprint mills through July were running at 99 percent of their maximum capacity, Diverio says. Canadian mills were at 98 percent.

Energy industry no longer drives Houston's economy

By MICHELLE KOIDIN
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) - When Diana Kelley first heard that Compaq Computer Corp. wanted her to move to Houston from the San Francisco area, she had her doubts.

"I really imagined ranchers and cowboys," the 25-year-old product analyst said.

But the job at Compaq, which now employs about 9,400 in Houston, offered a better position, better hours and better pay than her old job in the Silicon Valley.

So last September she left Palo Alto for Texas.

Ms. Kelley is among scores who work outside the oil industry relocating to Houston. While energy companies continue to draw employees from other regions to this sprawling city, its economy no longer depends primarily on energy the way it did in the 1980s.

Houston so far this year has been the most popular city for corporate and government moves, according to a report by PHH Relocation, a Wilton, Conn.-based relocation specialty firm.

This influx, though, differs greatly from the arrival of migrants 15 years ago.

In the years leading up to the mid-1980s oil bust, Houston attracted a high percentage of upper-middle-class newcomers while most major U.S. cities became home to low- and moderate-income migrants.

"In the early '80s, there were a tremendous number of people coming to Houston, but most of them were tied in one way or another to the oil production industry," said M. Ray Perryman, a Waco-based economist. "That is no longer the case."

Houston's shift from primary energy to related businesses and industries that have nothing to do with oil and gas - like Compaq - is the biggest change over the last decade and a half.

"It's been a very healthy and very productive shift," Perryman said.

In the late 1980s, petrochemicals drove somewhat of a comeback and for about a year, Houston again was a major growth center.

Since then, Houston's economy has grown steadily, "but nothing spectacular until just very recently. It's now beginning to see a lot more relocations and a lot more expansion," he said.

An improving international economy, petrochemicals and the city's diversification have contributed to the expansion, economists say.

The Texas Medical Center - the world's largest medical complex, and Johnson Space Center - home of NASA's Mission Control, have become major growth poles.

"You could actually tell that things had slowed down because the freeways weren't as crowded," says Jared Hazleton, director of the Center for Business and Economic Analysis at Texas A&M University.

"They're crowded again," Hazleton notes.

While the domestic rig count - long a local yardstick for measuring the health of the oil industry - is a mere shadow of its late 1970s explosive growth, international work for the oil service and machinery companies is filling the gap, says Bill Gilmer, an economist with the Federal Reserve Bank.

The economy overall, with substantial gains in service sectors and small manufacturing, is performing about the same as the rest of Texas, which it trailed for three years. And it is doing significantly better than the rest of the nation.

Employment is growing at about 3 percent a year. Nationally, the growth rate is about 2 percent.

"There's been good, solid growth in the health care sector throughout the whole period - that's been one of the constants throughout the entire 15 years," Perryman said.

Both the medical center and NASA are undergoing restructuring as part of a national trend. Aerospace employment in Clear Lake, a suburban area where Johnson Space Center is based, has dropped from 20,000 to 15,900 over the last few years and is expected to continue to fall, according to the Greater Houston Partnership.

Health care employment continues to grow, however. In June 1994, there were 113,600 jobs in the industry in Houston. That figure increased modestly to 114,300 in June of this year.

Back when oil was booming, many of those outside of the energy business were getting pushed out of Houston because they couldn't afford it.

Today, the nation's fourth-largest city is a bargain.

"Houston is one of the lowest cost-of-living cities in the United States and one of the lowest cost-of-doing-business cities in the United States," said Barton Smith, an economist at the University of Houston.

And it's no longer as speculative as it once was.

"The boom mentality of where anything works - we got that shaken out of us," Smith said. "It's much more cautious. I think that's good for Houston in the long run. We don't want to see another overbuilding spree going off."

Houston has made great progress working its way out of the real estate bust of the mid-80s.

Then, motorists rounding the curve of Interstate 45 that hugs downtown's cluster of skyscrapers could peer through floor upon floor of empty office space. Although some vacancies remain, many of those offices are occupied now.

"There's been some absorption of those 'see-through' buildings, as we used to call them," says Hazleton.

"It just took a long time. We had overbuilt and we're perhaps at the end of that phase now."

"I've been very, very pleasantly surprised," says Ms. Kelley, the recent California transplant. "Department store prices are about half of what they were in Silicone Valley. People are much nicer here, (there is) less stress and more emphasis on personal life."

Names in the news

NEW YORK (AP) - Former President Reagan's struggle with Alzheimer's disease has drawn his family closer - including once-estranged daughter Patti Davis, Newsweek magazine reports.

Reagan, 84, disclosed last November that he has Alzheimer's, an incurable degenerative brain disorder.

"I think any illness ... brings things into focus and should reshuffle your priorities," former first lady Nancy Reagan said in the Oct. 2 issue.

Mrs. Reagan said in the past year she has reconciled with Davis, who has written books criticizing her parents and posed nude in Playboy.

For her part, Davis said the change actually began before her father's illness was disclosed.

"He would write me notes," she said. "He was trying to say to me, 'I'm 82, I'm 83. I'm not going to be here much longer. And I love you and we love you.'"

---

NEW YORK (AP) - Pop star Debbie Gibson has graduated to a new role in "Grease," going from the sweet and virginal Sandy Dumbrowski to the tough-talking, wisecracking Betty Rizzo.

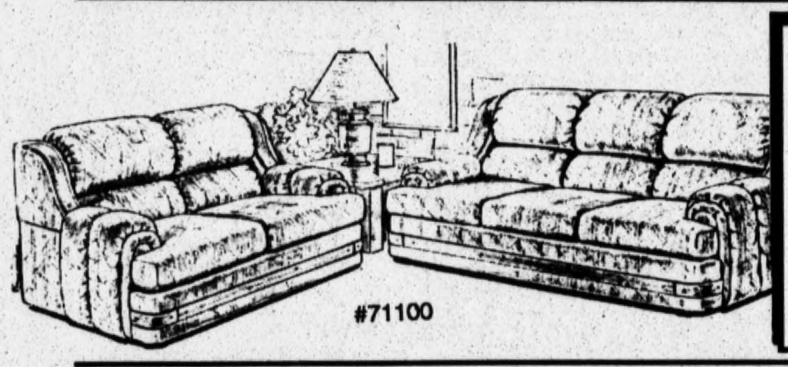

Gibson was Sandy in the London revival of the musical. She joins the touring company of the current Broadway version on Oct. 30 in Erie, Pa., and will stay with the show until March.
