Icy roads create problems

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

The more than 4 inches of snow which fell over the Permian Basin Saturday continued to create problems for Midlanders and Odessans this morning as drivers crept down the icy streets and slid into work.

Schools were closed in Odessa and other area towns because of the weather; Midland schools were not in session because of a teachers' in-service.

Hazardous road conditions were responsible for an estimated 38 minor weekend traffic accidents in Midland and 46 in Ector counties, according to local police and the Texas Department of Public Safety.

A travelers advisory is in effect for most of today in Midland and Ector counties due to ice and snow packed roads, a spokesman for the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport reported.

Commercial airliners stranded during the recent storm were beginning to resume scheduled flights to and from Midland Regional Airport this morning, said Tommy Jones, assistant director of aviation in charge of operations.

"The runways are in pretty good shape and we're still working on the taxi areas and ramps. Basically, we're waiting for the sun to come out and melt the rest away," he said.

Train plummets into ravine

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — An express train derailed in central Ethiopia, sending passenger coaches plummeting into a ravine, Ethiopian relief officials said today. Four hundred eighteen people died and 559 others were injured, railway officials said.

Nearly all those aboard were killed or injured in the accident, officials of the Franco-Ethiopian Railway Co. said in Djibouti. The wreck occurred about 125 miles east of Addis Abbaba, the Ethiopian capital.

Railroad officials said the accident occurred on a curving bridge. Relief officials said the train left the track while rounding a curve at high speed. One relief worker quoted rail officials as saying the engineer apparently failed to reduce speed around the curve. The diesel engine is intact, but the passenger coaches fell down the ravine, he said.

Officials of the Ethiopian Red Cross, which sent a medical team to Sunday's crash, said injured passengers were evacuated from the accident site about 125 miles east of Addis Abbaba, six miles east of Awash, to hospitals in Addis Abbaba and Nazareth, about halfway between the capital and Awash.

A high-ranking official of the Franco-Ethiopian Railway Co. in Djibouti, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said "Most of those injured are believed to be in serious condition."

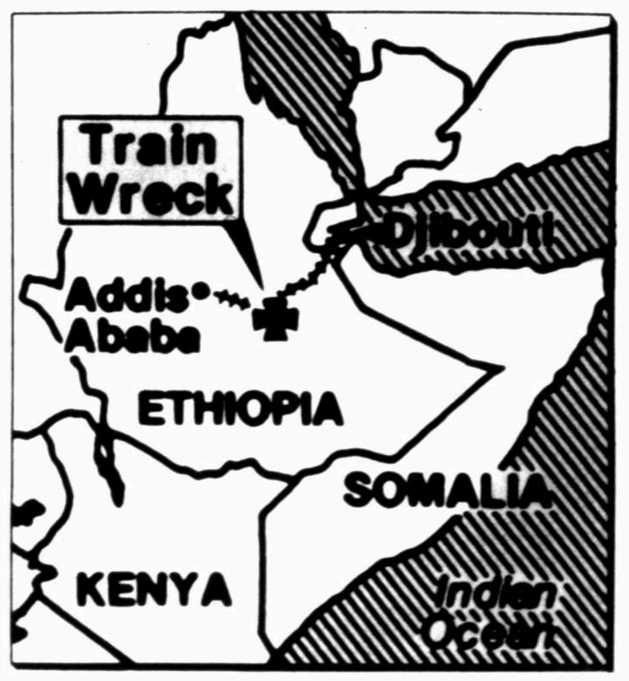

Ethiopian government officials said the death toll was preliminary. The government seldom gives official death tolls on such incidents.

The railroad official said: "'We don't know (yet) why it left the track. We've been calling (Ethiopian authorities) all morning and they have given us no cause."

He said the train was an express with seven passenger cars and was carrying about 1,000 people from Diredawa in eastern Ethiopia to Addis Ababa, about 220 miles to the west.

The Franco-Ethiopian railway is a single continuous line from Djibouti, a small country northeast of Ethiopia on the Gulf of Aden, through Diredawa to Addis Ababa.

An Ethiopian government official said shipment of famine relief supplies might be seriously affected by the derailment. Large amounts of emergency supplies arrive in Djibouti and are transported to Ethiopia.

Ethiopians secessionist groups claimed responsibility for attacking two trains on the Ethiopia-Djibouti line last year. However, one Ethiopian official who spoke on condition he not be identified, said: "There is no suspicion of sabotage."

Rangers rescue abducted girl

Rancher says his daughter remained 'spunky'

CLEBURNE, Texas (AP) — A seventh-grade girl who was rescued from kidnappers by a bullet-dodging Texas Ranger remained spunky throughout her 45-hour ordeal, her father says.

"She was scared to death the first half-day," Alvarado businessman and rancher Don McNiel said Sunday after his daughter, Amy, was back home. "Then she was scared — and mad at what they were doing to her."

The girl was abducted at gunpoint on her way to school Friday morning by gunmen who later demanded a $100,000 ransom.

On Sunday, her captors fled through three East Texas counties with Amy in tow, often exceeding 100 miles an hour during a running gun battle with Texas Rangers.

In a final shootout near Saltillo, a Texas Ranger dashed to the car through gunfire, scooped Amy up and tossed her a second Ranger, who drove her away to a reunion with her father, Johnson County Sheriff Eddy Boggs said.

Two of the five suspected kidnappers were wounded in the shootout, authorities said. All five were arrested.

Amy's father, a director of Alvarado State Bank and a pioneer in the development of the hand-held calculator, said he and his daughter later embraced and "danced around on some country road for about 10 minutes."

"Thank God, my baby's home," the 44-year-old McNiel told reporters at the Johnson County courthouse in Cleburne Sunday afternoon.

McNiel said he was allowed to talk to the blonde 13-year-old whose nickname is "Tiny" during "about every third phone call" from the kidnappers.

"She became stronger as it went on," he said.

On the final day, McNiel said, his daughter refused to leave the house where she was being held until the kidnappers fed a dog in the backyard that had gone hungry for two days.

"She said 'I told them I wasn't going to go until they fed that dog,'" McNiel said.

Her exhausted father, who had tried to rendezvous with the kidnappers in Dallas, Tyler and Mount Pleasant, said his daughter never had a chance to escape.

The drama began when a Jeep driven by Amy's 17-year-old brother Bart was run off a country road near the McNiel ranch in Alvarado, about 40 miles southwest of Dallas.

Two men, including one armed with a sawed-off shotgun, jumped from the car and ordered the girl to accompany them, McNiel said.

The kidnappers telephoned McNiel not long after the abduction and demanded a $100,000 ransom and said they would contact him later.

"They were insistent that law enforcement not be brought into it in any way," McNiel said.

Except for notifying the authorities, McNiel said followed the kidnappers' instructions as closely as possible.

"We were totally subservient to what they said," McNiel said. "We just begged 'Don't hurt my baby.'"

McNiel then got a series of calls that sent him to phone booths in Dallas and Tyler and finally to a closed service station in Mount Pleasant, said Texas Department of Public Safety spokesman Larry Todd.

Democrats: New budget 'dead' before its arrival

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House Democratic leader says President Reagan's new budget is "dead before arrival" on Capitol Hill and that Democrats will wait to take action on deficit reduction until Senate Republicans and the president can agree.

But Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., says the Democrats "can't take a walk on this."

Meanwhile, White House budget director David A. Stockman acknowledged Sunday that the budget Reagan submits to Congress on Feb. 4 will not meet his goal of slicing the deficit to less than $100 billion by 1988 — a level roughly equal to 2 percent of the gross national product.

Stockman, appearing on ABC's "This Week," said "I don't know that we're going to hit that target on the head."

Senate Republicans already have begun private meetings aimed at coming up with a plan that would meet the goal, but Stockman emphasized that the Senate action does not mean the president has given up on the issue.

Stockman said the budget Reagan submits to Congress will meet the short-term goal of holding overall spending for next year at this year's level. That will be accomplished through freezing some programs and cutting or eliminating others, many of which are politically popular.

The budget director also said that without action, budget deficits will be $225 billion to $240 billion in each of the next three years.

Rep. Richard A. Gephardt, D-Mo., chairman of the House Democratic Caucus, said Democrats have yet to see a consensus emerging between the president and the Senate Republicans on how they will proceed. And until a consensus is reached, Democrats will bide their time.

"We will not act until this president tells us what he wants and until the Senate has done something with that budget," Gephardt said on the ABC show. "They (the Republicans) have the burden of acting. They won the presidency."

"I think it's a stalemate, backup situation," Gephardt said. "We've got a bystander president who's not leading the country and until he does you're not going to resolve the problem."

Inauguration means it's also party time in Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — It will take President Reagan less than a minute to recite his oath of office, but his friends will require four hard days and nights of dancing, drinking, feasting and backslapping to celebrate.

It's inaugural time in Washington, and that means party time.

There will be no fewer than eight black-tie inaugural balls and a youth ball, two galas, the traditional parade, concerts, an art exhibition, fireworks, pageants, suppers, teas, buffet receptions and lavish dinners and intimate cocktail parties.

In keeping with the inaugural theme of unity, the Beach Boys, whom James G. Watt once banished from the Mall for "attracting the wrong element," will be performing before 12,000 Republican fat cats and Reagan loyalists Saturday night.

What's more, they'll be sharing the D.C. Convention Center stage with Las Vegas casino singer Wayne Newton, who fit the former interior secretary's Fourth of July specifications for a clean-cut, all-American image.

That was two years ago. Watt's gone; the Beach Boys are back and thousands of revelers are pouring into town for a $12 million wingding toasting Reagan's swearing-in at the Capitol next Monday for a second term. Washington is bracing for a long weekend of madness.

Already, telephone lines are busy, taxicabs are getting hard to find and hotels have been booked solid for months. Texas heiress Caroline Hunt Schoellkopf alone has reserved 30 rooms for the week at the swank new Regent Hotel.

Limousine services are demanding — and getting — $2,544 for four-day rentals of their stretch Cadillacs, payable in advance for unlimited use.

WEATHER SUMMARY

The National Weather Service forecasts snow for Tuesday for the Dakotas, showers from central Oklahoma to Nebraska anfd Florida and cold weather for the north.

SNOW

When asked if conditions at the airport indicated a more urgent need to purchase snow removal equipment, Jones said, "Our position has always been that we need snow removal equipment, but it's up to the city fathers to make that determination."

Midland Mayor G. Thane Akins, who historically has been opposed to the purchase, refused to change his position in light of the recent snowfall.

"I haven't seen any justification to spend a quarter of a million dollars on equipment that will sit out there 360 days of the year on the basis of this snowfall. There are other things we can do," he said, suggesting that the city lease construction plows from private contractors or purchase rubber plows to serve the needs of the airport.

The Aviation Department in December proposed the city apply for a federal grant to buy $250,000 worth of snow and ice removal equipment. The grant would pay 90 percent of the cost and the city would pick up the remaining 10 percent.

Forecasters predict tonight will be partly cloudy and not so cold. The low will be in the upper 20s with southeasterly winds at 5-10 mph. Tuesday will be partly cloudy with the high near 50. Winds will be from the southwest at 5 to 15 mph.

Sunday's high of 28 fell into the rigid zones when compared to the record of 80 set on that date in 1957. Today's low of 19 was a close rival to the record of 13 set in 1982.

STATE

San Antonio's mayor has called for businesses and schools to stay closed today while residents dig out from the area's worst snowfall in 100 years.

The storm, a foot-deep freak in this land where snow seldom falls, left highways across a vast section of Texas packed with ice and snow, making travel difficult and prompting officials to urge residents to stay off the roads if at all possible.

Freezing precipitation covered Texas as far west as El Paso, as far east as the Bryan-College Station area and as far south as Brownsville, along the Mexican border.

Ironically, most of North Texas, an area more accustomed to such nasty weather, escaped the snow and ice.

The National Weather Service said at 9 p.m. Sunday that the winter storm was over, but forecasters in San Antonio warned of overnight fog that could make driving conditions even more hazardous early today.

A travelers advisory for slick roads was in effect early today in South and Southeast Texas north of a line from Beaumont to Houston to Victoria to Corpus Christi and westward to Laredo.

The weather service said ice and snow would remain on most roads in the area until mid-day and urged people to postpone travel until this afternoon. Temperatures were forecast to rise above freezing over the entire area today, causing the snow and ice to melt rapidly.

But eight inches of snow remained on the ground in San Antonio late Sunday, prompting Mayor Henry Cisneros to ask all local businesses to close their doors today so employees will not have to drive on the streets.

All San Antonio schools, including local universities, and the Bexar County Courthouse were to be closed. The United Services Auto Association, the military's insurance firm that employs more than 5,000 people, was also to be closed.

Via, the city's bus system, offered "no fare" service beginning at 4:30 a.m. today for people who did not want to drive.

A dearth of snow-clearing equipment hindered city employes in clearing streets, so they resorted to road graders for the job. Sanding crews worked overtime Sunday, attempting to keep bridges and overpasses clear.

Texas Highway Department crews worked Sunday to sand roads and overpasses, but spokesman Don Clark said it was a losing battle as snow continued to fall during the day.

Austin got five inches of snow, the mountains of Southwest Texas recorded seven inches and most of Southwest Texas had a four-inch snow cover, forecasters said.

El Paso had about two inches of snow on the ground early today. Most roads were open, but were described as icy in spots. Roads in the nearby mountains were closed.

The weather service recorded 13.2 inches of snow in San Antonio for a 24-hour period that ended early Sunday. The total came close to doubling the previous record for an entire winter — 7.4 inches in 1925-26.

Major roads connecting San Antonio with other parts of Texas were open, but hazardous. One impassable area was reported on Interstate 10 near Columbus.

Motorists also were warned of extremely hazardous conditions on Interstate 35, the main route between San Antonio and Austin.

Police at Austin said the slick conditions kept many people home on Sunday. But authorities were concerned that the freezing rain could create hazardous driving conditions for the today morning rush hour.

Some Austin residents braved the blustery conditions to take in the unusual sight of the state capitol surrounded by a white blanket of snow.

Light rain and drizzle fell in Houston Sunday, where the National Weather Service said up to three inches of snow had fallen in some areas since early Saturday. But authorities reported few weather-related problems from the few icy spots on the roads.

Houston Independent School District officials planned to monitor the weather and withheld any decision on canceling classes until early today.

In the Texas Panhandle, where such winter storms are much more common, a travelers advisory was issued for slick roads and highways.

NATION

A storm threatened parts of Upper Michigan with up to 10 inches of snow and near-blizzard conditions today as snow and high winds also chilled the North and heavy rain drenched the South.

Residents of northern and western Upper Michigan were warned against heavy snow as northwest winds sweeping across Lake Superior brought the promise of 30-mh gusts and up to 10 inches of snow.

A travelers' warning was issued for drifting snow on top of frozen drizzle in extreme northeastern South Dakota and northern and west-central Minnesota. The wind chill was expected to drop to as much as 50 below zero.

Travelers were warned against heavy rain in most of southern Mississippi and Louisiana.

Fog and icy spots resulted in travelers' warnings for much of central California and parts of the northern coast.

Generally fair to clear skies prevailed across much of the rest of the nation.

Shultz, Weinberger differ on negotiations

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger are offering different interpretations of the Geneva arms talks accord with Moscow, suggesting continuing deep divisions in the administration over negotiating strategy.

Shultz said Sunday the administration agrees with Moscow that there should be a connection between the three areas of negotiations — strategic weapons, intermediate weapons and space arms, such as the administration's "Star Wars" program.

"There is no argument about the fact that there is a relationship," Shultz said in appearance on the NBC-TV program, 'Meet the Press." He said, "We advocate that."

Told the Soviets have said they won't conclude agreements for cuts in nuclear arms if the United States won't agree to a curb on space weapons, Shultz said, "We may seek to link things ourselves. It makes sense to look at the relationship among the different things you are talking about."

But Weinberger took a different view. "I don't understand that there is any degree of linkage," he said in an appearance on the CBS-TV program, "Face the Nation."

"I don't think the linkage was settled at Geneva," he added.

Pentagon officials privately say they think Shultz erred in acknowledging after his talks with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko in Geneva last week that the three subjects for negotiation are related.

But State Department officials say Shultz is only acknolwedging the obvious, which is that if the Soviets insist on a link it is pointless to insist there isn't one.

Officials in both departments talked to a reporter last week on the understanding they not be identified.

While Shultz voiced his hope Sunday that Moscow would conclude agreements in individual areas, he acknowledged that the talks could be derailed if Moscow pressed for concessions on Star Wars in exchange for agreements on deep cuts in nuclear arms.

"It remains to be seen what will happen if we agree on something in one area, but not in some other area," Shultz said. "It may or may not go forward."

Gromyko suggested at a news conference of his own in Moscow Sunday that the talks would fail if the Reagan administration failed to agree to a ban on deployment of weapons from its $26 billion Star Wars research program. Also known as the Strategic Defense Initiative, the research is aimed at developing weapons to destroy attacking Soviet missiles while still in space.

President Reagan's national security adviser, Robert McFarlane, asked in an interview this morning on the NBC-TV "Today" show if Gromyko had made clear in Geneva that the US-Soviet talks would be "blown up" if the United States proceeds with anti-satellite weapons tests, replied:

"The short answer is, no. But I think this is the kind of thing you can expect to see in the run-up to formal negotiations."

McFarlane said that the United States would proceed with anti-satellite tests scheduled this spring and added that the Soviets have had "their strategic defense program for many, many years. And they're saying, suddenly, that it's time to ban the United States program, which is only beginning."

Shultz said he didn't view Gromyko's statement as a new impediment to the negotiations, which are expected to take many months if not years.

Shultz said diplomatic contacts will begin next week to fix the date and location of the opening of the negotiations. Other officials have said Washington favors holding the talks in Geneva, beginning sometime in March.

While Shultz said he won't lead the U.S. delegation to the talks, he said he probably will go to Moscow for discussions with Gromyko on the overall American-Soviet relationship.

Shultz said individual negotiators hadn't yet been picked. But he said Paul H. Nitze said will probably remain in Washington as a key adviser on the talks to both him and President Reagan.

Weinberger appeared Sunday to be less flexible than Shultz on whether the Star Wars project would be a subject for negotiation with Moscow.

Gromyko said the deployment of American Star Wars weapons would be an issue in the negotiations and that Moscow would demand an agreement to ban them.

Weinberger said, however, "I hate to disagree with Mr. Gromyko before the talks start, but that was clearly not our position. ..."

"There was no agreement of any kind, as I understand it, that we would agree to ban or prohibit something that the president holds very dear and regards as one of his highest priorities," Weinberger said.

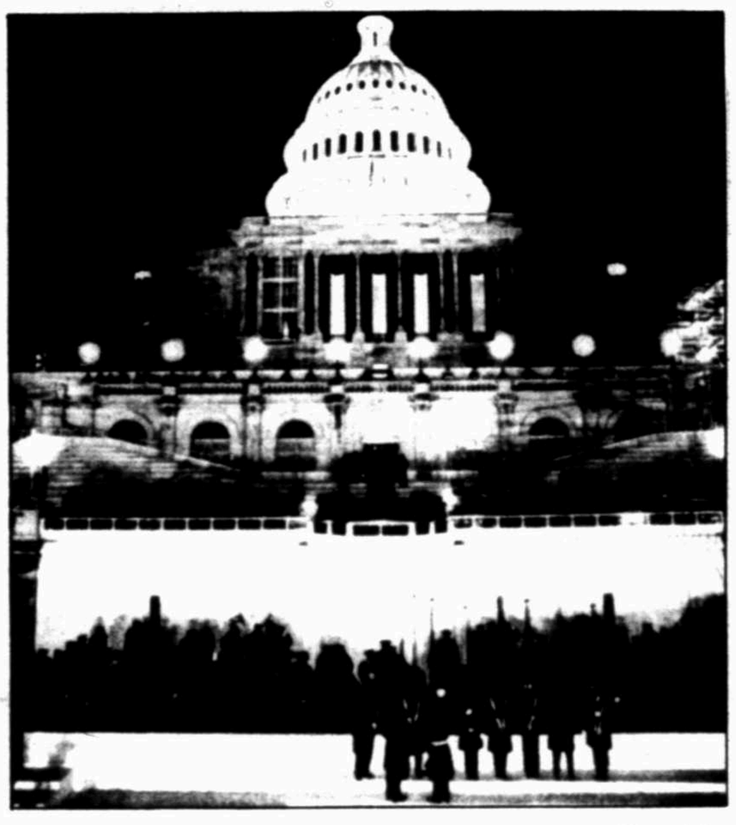

He said the United States would proceed with research and would "obviously want to talk about ways to deploy" in the future. But he said he was "ruling out the possibility of giving up a strategic defense" if the Star Wars program shows one is feasible.

But Shultz, by acknowledging the question of space arms is related to other issues, seemed to be suggesting that agreements in one area could be traded off for agreements in another.

"The relationship between these areas is very much something the president has been putting forward for some time, and I think he is right about it," Shultz said.

Disputes between the State Department and the Pentagon plagued the administration in forging a negotiating strategy for arms talks in the past four years. Shultz has emerged as the key strategist for Reagan's second term, but Weinberger may have signaled that Shultz will continue to encounter strong resistance from the Pentagon when it disagrees with his strategy.

Robin Weir, who is Nancy Reagan's Washington hair stylist, says he's been booked up since November, and is flying hairdressers and makeup people in from New York and Chicago to handle the crush. Scogna Formal Wear expects to rent its entire stock of 300 tuxedos by midweek.

"We're at the wall," said Jeff Ellis, president of Ridgewell's Caterers, whose trademark fuchsia-colored trucks will be dashing here and there supplying food and drink for an average of 15,000 people at 75 functions each day during the height of the inaugural frenzy.

When it's all over, some of those GOP cats will be a little fatter, and perhaps suffering elephant-sized hangovers.

In three days, Ridgewell's will be serving 750 tons of food on two miles of tables, including 7,000 tomatoes, 4,000 eggs and 1,250 pounds of lobster meat, and 3,372 gallons of wine, champagne and liquor with 81,000 cocktail napkins — which Ellis says would stretch 17 miles if laid end to soggy end.

One of the earliest parties will be given Thursday evening by wealthy Houston socialite Joanne King Herring at the Hay-Adams Hotel. New York lawyer Roy Cohn is giving a pre-ball buffet supper Monday night at the Madison Hotel.

Among the biggest bashes is a buffet luncheon given by a local bank for 2,200 guests, and a party for 1,500 at the Organization of American States given by the Eagles, the organization of wealthy Republican contributors. One of the most coveted private invitations is for Italian ambassador Rinaldo Petrignani's formal dinner-dance Thursday night, where Frank Sinatra, Betsy Bloomingdale and other Reagan intimates will dine on pigeon, pasta and fruit sherbet.

Besides these private functions, 50,000 people are expected to dance the night away at nine official, invitation-only inaugural balls around town Monday night, from the Kennedy Center to the D.C. Armory. The Reagans will try to make brief appearances at every dance.

Rock stars Kool and the Gang and Jerry Lee Lewis will perform at an inaugural ball for young people, who gave Reagan 60 percent of their vote in the November election.

In an acknowledged bid to keep the under-30 voter bloc in the GOP column, inaugural planners also have arranged a "youth leadership forum," where more than 3,000 young people will hear Vice President George Bush, astronauts and members of Congress speak, and a "national youth pageant" at the Jefferson Memorial where 3,500 students will entertain.

Michael K. Deaver, deputy White House chief of staff and general inaugural chairman, says the 1985 festivities "will be subdued by some standards in the past," with less emphasis on black-tie events and more on free public and youth-oriented activities.

Invitations were allocated to each state according to its population and the share of its popular vote for Reagan, said John Buckley, a spokesman for the inaugural committee.

The estimated $12 million expense of the public inaugural social events is expected to be fully paid by proceeds from ticket sales.

Ranger glad to have seen father's, daughter's reunion

DALLAS (AP) — One of two Texas Rangers who braved gunfire to rescue a 13-year-old kidnapping victim says seeing the girl's reunion with her father "was worth the gunfight, I can guarantee."

The officers rescued Amy McNiel, the daughter of Alvarado businessman and rancher Don McNiel, early Sunday after a chase across three counties in Northeast Texas.

According to Department of Public Safety spokesman Larry Todd, the chase ended at a rural residence near Saltillo when the abductors jumped from their car and opened fire.

Rangers John Dendy and Howard "Slick" Alfred braved gunfire and rushed the car to rescue Amy, Todd said.

After the rescue, Amy was taken to her father for a reunion.

"I just felt privileged that I got to see the reunion," Alfred said. "It was wonderful. The reunion was worth the gunfight, I can guarantee."

Alfred, a veteran Ranger who is based in Athens, said Amy apparently came out of the ordeal in good shape.

"She was frightened, of course, but she looked good," he said. "She looked like a composed young lady. By the time the reunion took place, she was in good shape."

Dendy, 54, who was a Texas Department of Public Safety trooper for 17 years before joining the elite force of Texas Rangers in 1973, is normally stationed at Stephenville, west of Fort Worth.

Dendy's wife, Vinita, said it was pure coincidence that her husband became involved in the investigation.

"We just so happened to be in Waco for a Rangers company meeting when they got word of it (the kidnapping). So he went to work on it with the other Rangers," Mrs. Dendy said.

Two French cease-fire observers gunned down in Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Two French cease-fire observers were ambushed and killed in a hail of machine gun fire today as they drove in a jeep through a Shiite Moslem area near Beirut's airport, Christian-controlled radio stations reported.

The Voice of Lebanon and Voice of Free Lebanon radio stations reported that the victims of the mid-morning ambush were a captain and a corporal.

A man who answered the telephone at the headquarters of the French observers refused to give any information.

However, an employee at the American University Hospital morgue said the bodies of two slain French observers were brought to the facility.He said both were shot in the head, but refused to give any further details or identify the victims until an autopsy was performed.

The two Frenchmen were driving through the Jal el-Balah neighborhood on Beirut's southern edge when they were raked with gunfire, according to the radio reports.

The deaths brought to four the number of French observers killed since the 68-man force was stationed in Beirut last April to monitor a civil war truce between Moslem and Christian militias in and around the capital.

The French observers maintain positions in strategic highrise buildings and on the "green line" which divides the city's Moslem and Christian sectors. They also man observation posts along the civil war front lines in the hills overlooking Beirut.

The latest previous fatalilty was Lt. Col. Claude Cuenot, deputy commander of the observer force. He was shot and killed on the Moslem edge of the green line.

RESCUE

As McNiel awaited further contact from the kidnappers about midnight Saturday, FBI agents and Texas Rangers spotted a suspicious vehicle.

The car sped away and Todd said a chase at speeds of up to 100 mph punctuated by gunfire ensued.

After racing from Titus, through Franklin and into Hopkins County, Todd said the car suddenly stopped in the driveway of a rural residence near Saltillo.

Two men jumped from the car and began shooting at the officers, who returned the fire as Rangers John Dendy and Howard "Slick" Alfred rescued Amy.

Todd identified the five arrested as Liza Ann Bouvier, 18, of Balch Springs; George Thomas Barnes, 21, of Dallas; Daniel Walter Neckar Jr., 21, of Mesquite; Michael Lynn Mills, 27, of Pleasant Grove; and James Wesley Foote, 34, of Alvarado.

Titus County Justice of the Peace William H. Bauman ordered Ms. Bouvier, Barnes and Neckar held without bond on charges of attempted capital murder and kidnapping.

BUDGET

Gephardt also said the action by Senate Republicans to write their own plan now shows there is no support for the budget plan Reagan has been preparing.

"Now we believe that the president's budget that he's working on is really going to be dead before arrival," Gephardt said.

Meanwhile, Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, guaranteed there would be significant deficit-reduction action in the Senate.

"We're hoping it will be something the president can support because we've taken his (budget) to begin with and built on it," Domenici said in a separate appearance on the ABC show.

Gephardt said, "If the Senate reaches an across-the-board (federal spending) freeze that includes defense, that really gets you $100 or $120 billion of deficit-reduction by 1988, then I think the burden is thrown to the House to see if we can match that figure."

In an interview with a group of reporters on Saturday, Dole conceded, "If anything's going to happen, it's going to happen first on our side, on the Senate side."

But Dole added, "I've got to believe the Democrats can't take a walk on this...I don't believe they can, sort of, be the dog in the manger."

It's too soon to tell if freeze has damaged Valley crops

HARLINGEN (AP) — An Arctic cold front that threatened vegetation in the Rio Grande Valley has begun to loosen its grip after forcing the closure of some roads and causing sporadic power outages.

But one farmer says that it's too early to predict if Saturday's overnight freeze severely damaged any of the major crops as one did in late 1983.

"It's still freezing or near freezing at least at the thawing stage," Glenn Fankhauser of Mission said Sunday. "It's hard to tell anything for several days."

Temperatures in the Valley dipped below freezing late Saturday and nasty weather forced the closure of U.S. Highway 83 from Brownsville to Weslaco and U.S. Highway 77 from Brownsville to Sebastien.

The frontage roads, however, were open, authorities said.

Sporadic power outages also were reported throughout the Valley late Saturday and all day Sunday. Water pressure in parts of Brownsville were low Sunday night and some residents were completely without water and electricity.

Area residents, especially farmers, kept a watchful eye on the weather situation because of last winter's freeze.

Mark Lowery of San Angelo found the skiing only passable after six inches of snow blanketed San Angelo Sunday morning. He said his biggest problem was a lack of a snow base and lifts for highway overpasses.

In December 1983, a week of record sub-freezing temperatures destroyed about 40,000 acres of the citrus and vegetable crop, caused an estimated $100 million damage and left some 9,000 people out of work.

Unemployed farm worker wonders how he'll feed, clothe his family

LAS MILPAS (AP) — Cresencio Rodriguez has not had a steady job since last winter's freeze destroyed much of the citrus and vegetable crops in the Rio Grande Valley.

Now, with no money and another brief winter storm, he wonders how he will feed and clothe his wife and five children who share a three-room shack with a 10-member family.

"What I need now is a job," said Rodriguez, whose last paycheck two weeks ago was $21.

Rodriguez said he and his sister's family had been getting along in recent weeks by going to dumps and finding aluminum cans and copper to sell. But not until the cold front that made its way to the Valley on Saturday did Rodriguez realize just how impoverished they were.

Temperatures in the Valley dipped to the freezing level late Saturday and more bad weather was expected late Sunday.

But, Rodriguez says, his cold, financially strapped family is not alone as perhaps thousands of other farm workers still are feeling the effects of the December 1983 freeze that virtually wiped out the citrus crop and tender vegetables.

"We see lots of families like us here," Rodriguez said, adding that this past weekend's freeze threatens to put many others out of work.

"What I need now is a job if they get me a Social Security number," said Rodriguez, who is here from Mexico on a work permit and not eligible for social aid.

The shack where the two families live is located in a "colonia," an unincorporated area whose huts generally lack amenities such as inside running water and, as in this case, electricity. This family has an extension cord running from its home to that of a neighbor.

Their only luxury is a small black-and-white television set and an electric clock.

The shack is made of 2-inch by 6-inch lumber. It is held up by 2-inch by 4-inch studs with sheet metal as the roof. There is no insulation and the wind whips through gaps in the rotting lumber.

Inside, a butane stove is idle because the families have no money for fuel. There is no refrigerator and what little food there is, if not readily consumed, is piled on a flimsy table next to the stove.

Water must be taken from a faucet outside of the shack. An outhouse is located about 20 yards away from the home.

The children, ranging in age from 14 years to 13 months — and two more on the way — keep warm by huddling around two mesquite-fueled fires in sheet-metal containers in two rooms.

Jury selection to begin in trial of teen-agers

DALLAS (AP) — Jury selection was to begin today for the trial of one of three south Dallas teen-agers accused of lying to a Dallas County grand jury during an investigation of a police shooting.

Victor Franklin, 18, Brenda Frost, and Lonnie Leyuas were indicted last year on felony charges accusing them of lying in their grand jury testimony concerning the Nov. 7, 1983 shooting death of Michael Todd Frost.

Franklin's trial was to begin today and the trial for the others has not been set.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Tuesday, January 15, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Early Greek philosophers Socrates and Aristotle, civil rights leader Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. and shipping billionaire Aristotle Onassis were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: actor Lloyd Bridges, Senate Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd (D-W. Va.) and California Angels Bobby Grich and Jerry Narron. Diversification is the key to larger business profits. Do not be the last to try something new. Career must take precedence over romance when the chips are down. Get expert help in untangling a financial or legal snarl. Your fortunes improve when you take an older person's advice. Showcase your talents.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Do not take chances with your financial resources. Consult experts about mapping out a better savings plan. An older person gives you new insights regarding a personal problem. Listen carefully.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Stress the practical side of your nature when discussing money management. This is a wonderful time for renewing old acquaintances. Contact someone highly influential. The evening seems made for romance.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): An excellent day for pursuing a new interest. Recognize that you will get more support if you put first things first. A domestic matter could cause a certain amount of confusion. Be candid.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A Leo makes a good lover but a poor business partner. Do not force the issue or domestic harmony could prove elusive. Intellectual pursuits are favored over physical endeavors.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your intuition is very active today. You are able to take command of almost any social situation. Others look to you for inspiration. A child makes impossible demands. Be kind but firm.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A good day to clear out clutter and donate "white elephants" to your favorite charity. Be sure to take any tax deductions you are entitled to. Attending night school could boost your earnings.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A financial surprise enables you to take a trip or educational course. Your best rapport is with a former roommate or college chum. Get in touch with someone you haven't seen recently.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A neighbor tends to ask difficult -- even embarrassing -- questions. You gain by listening to the voice of experience. Be especially kind to someone who is elderly.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Avoid being too assertive around critical people. Do not postpone anything of importance -- not even a brief trip. A Libra will surprise and delight you. Give a young person your honest opinion.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A special plan or program receives strong support today. New business contacts could lead to higher profits. A Cancer plays a prominent role in your professional or personal affairs.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A shopping expedition proceeds on schedule. Bargains abound! You find a way to put your talents or specialized knowledge to better use. Profits soar. Start a "rainy day" fund.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Get out and socialize more. Making new contacts helps you lay the groundwork for future projects. Replace bad habits with good ones. A Gemini proves to be an excellent companion.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A10 ♡KQ6 ◇QJ87 ♣J654

The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass

What do you bid now?

A. — Normally, with good three-card trump support and a ruffing value we would suggest that you raise partner's major suit. Here, however, your points are largely "soft," i.e., queens and jacks, so we suggest the less-encouraging rebid of one no trump.

Q.2 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AK83 ♡6 ◇KQJ7 ♣Q1072

The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 ◇	Pass	Pass	1 ♡

What action do you take?

A. — There is no question about who has the best hand at the table — you do. Partner should have a fair hand to reopen at this vulnerability, so we would not fault a leap to three no trump. However, we don't want to hang partner for refusing to sell out to the opponents at the one-level, so we prefer the more conservative jump to two no trump.

Q.3 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q65 ♡K952 ◇J9873 ♣6

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A. — It looks as if your side has a partial misfit. Since you have a minimum hand and partner's rebid was not forcing, there is no reason why you should take another bid. Pass, while you are still at a level and in a strain you can handle.

Q.4 — Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠5 ♡AK873 ◇AK83 ♣A72

The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Dble

What action do you take?

A. — You have a very good hand indeed, and you have to advise partner of this fact. Redouble. Partner's spade response has raised the possibility of a misfit, and your best score could come from doubling the opponents. Your action keeps that option open.

Q.5 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠95 ♡Q854 ◇KQ763 ♣72

The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	Dble
Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A. — Partner must have a pretty good hand to force you to bid at the three-level in the face of two opponents who are both in the auction. With his double, partner has guaranteed four hearts, so you should certainly bid your major suit rather than your minor. As a matter of fact, we would not run you out of town if you chose to jump to four hearts, although we prefer to give partner some leeway by bidding three hearts.

Q.6 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠65 ♡AQ82 ◇AK1073 ♣KQ

The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass

What do you bid now?

A. — With 18 points in high cards, distributional features and an excellent four-card fit for partner's suit, you certainly want to be in game. The way to tell partner of your desire is simple — jump to four hearts.

Mitchum's, Madsen's portrayals unconvincing as Hearst, Davies

By FRED ROTHENBERG

NEW YORK (AP) — If Orson Welles' classic "Citizen Kane" was one of the best movies ever, then ABC's "The Hearst and Davies Affair" is one of the worst. Not even publisher William Randolph Hearst's yellow newspapers could have found anything nice to say about tonight's dreadful clinker.

ABC seems to lust after True Confession tales about romance among the beautiful and powerful people ("Malibu" and the upcoming "Hollywood Wives"), and the third-rated network is at it again with the scandalous affair between Hearst (Robert Mitchum) and Marion Davies (Virginia Madsen), the chorus girl he made into a movie star.

In this film, which ABC says is based "on historical records," Hearst, the one-time presidential aspirant whose wife would never give him a divorce, gets to utter the memorable line: "I'm gonna make you a star." He does it by buying a movie studio and spoon-feeding Miss Davies the plum roles.

Hearst, more than 30 years her senior, lives by one morality but foists another on America. He cuts out a kissing scene from one of Miss Davies' films because he said it made her seem cheap. Her movies seem to get only rave reviews in his papers.

Mitchum continues to sleepwalk through the twilight of his career. He turns the power-hungry Hearst into a wounded wimp. What was supposed to be the romance of the century is emotionally unconvincing. For the amount of passion on the screen, Miss Davies, who calls him "W.R." or "Chief," could just as easily have been Hearst's dutiful, old-maid secretary.

The film opens with one of the most stilted scenes ever. It's 1937 and Hearst is $126 million in debt. The lovebirds, having been together for two decades, are in Hearst's mansion in San Simeon, and he wonders whether she wants to end their liaison. No, she says. "It's been one terrific ride."

The rest of the film is all flashback, or, more to the point, slow death. It doesn't even capture the period. The Roaring '20s seem as tired as Mitchum.

It's too bad the moviemakers weren't able to deliver on the philosophy Hearst offers to his reporters and editors: "Just keep the stories exciting. We're not selling the telephone book."

Tonight's competing movie, NBC's "The Execution," is a much better choice. It's about five California women who plot the death of a former Nazi doctor who tortured and abused them 30 years before. Although slightly far-fetched, it's an engrossing thriller that generates some of the same questions about vigilantism that the Bernhard Goetz subway shootings in New York City are now raising.

"The Execution" also ponders the morality of people overruling a justice system they feel is not working properly. When the film, based on a book by Oliver Crawford, was being made last year, NBC demanded it express a viewpoint that vigilantism is immoral. Given the current attention to this issue, NBC must be relieved that the prosecutor in the film is unbending in his characterization of the women as criminals. The public, of course, applauds their action.

The women, played with conviction and credibility by Loretta Swit, Valerie Harper, Jessica Walter, Barbara Barrie and Sandy Dennis, are concentration camp survivors who meet weekly for a game of mah jongg.

Memorial held for Peckinpah

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In a memorial service for director Sam Peckinpah, the master of cinematic violence, actress Ali MacGraw recalled how he "absolutely demanded the best" and actor James Coburn said working with him was an adventure.

Peckinpah, 59, who raised violence to new levels in movies like "The Wild Bunch" and "Straw Dogs," died Dec. 28 in Mexico of heart failure. In the new Hollywood tradition, his friends gathered Sunday, but not in mourning.

"Working with Sam was an adventure," said Coburn, who appeared in "Cross of Iron" and "Pat Garrett and Billy the Kid." He said, "Sam took me by the hand to the cliff, pushed me over the abyss and then jumped in after me."

"He was difficult sometimes, but never, I thought, without reason," said Miss MacGraw, who appeared in "The Getaway" and "Convoy." "He absolutely demanded the best, and you weren't going to get away with anything less."

About 350 people attended the ceremony at the Directors Guild Theater, where actor Lee Marvin quoted the Bible: "I have fought a good fight. I have followed the course. I have kept the faith."

Film clips were shown from "Ride the High Country," "The Wild Bunch" and "Junior Bonner," and Kris Kristofferson, who appeared in "Convoy," sang and played a rather ribald song he had written in Peckinpah's honor.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Artificial heart recipient William Schroeder lent his support to a fund-raiser for an 18-year-old woman from his home state who needs a bone-marrow transplant and watched a televised basketball game with his doctor.

"Congratulations to all of you for being a part of saving this girl's life," the 52-year-old Jasper, Ind., resident wrote in a message that was read at the Saturday night fund-raising dance for leukemia victim Ann Masterson of New Albany, Ind.

LONDON (AP) — Princess Margaret, the younger sister of Queen Elizabeth II, has returned to her residence at Kensington Palace after her release from a London hospital where she underwent surgery on her left lung.

Margaret

The 54-year-old princess, looking pale and drawn Sunday, walked the few steps to a car outside Brompton Hospital in Kensington accompanied by members of the hospital staff, and was driven to the residence at the western edge of Kensington Gardens park.

Hospital sources, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said the princess was advised to give up smoking. She reportedly smokes 40 to 60 cigarettes a day.

CHICAGO (AP) — Science-fiction writer Isaac Asimov says computers could become "an indispensable adjunct of the judge's bench" by improving the efficiency, speed and fairness of the criminal justice system.

Isaac Asimov

Computers will reduce "petty and useless casework that clogs the courts," Asimov wrote in this month's edition of the American Bar Association Journal. "They should welcome computerization with glad cries."

Lawyers armed with computers could predict "whether a client will be judged guilty or not, whether damages will have to be paid and how much," he said. As a result, there will be fewer appeals, faster trials and fewer cases. Asimov, a biochemist who also writes non-fiction, said he is not worried about computers "removing humanity from the courtroom...subjecting questions of justice, of punishment and mercy, to a coldblooded machine.

"A machine would have to be coldblooded indeed to match the coldbloodedness of human beings in courts."

Texas outlook

Long recognized for its low unemployment figures, Midland was one of four areas in Texas last year that reduced unemployment rates below the 3.5 percent level. What's more, says a Dallas-based economist, the jobs picture for the state looks good this year.

Many times when studying the economic picture, observers are blinded by their own personal prejudices to fully appreciate what they're seeing. Most Texans would probably tell you, for example, that business is slow in their local economies and unemployment is rampant. In some cases that's undoubtedly true.

But, according to Dr. Edward L. McClelland, regional economist for RepublicBank Corporation in Dallas, all areas of the state participated in a growth rate in total employment in 1984 — the second year in a row of strong advance for the state's economy — which saw an additional 404,000 people find jobs while the unemployment rate dropped to 5.7 percent.

In addition to Midland, other areas posting exceptionally low unemployment rates were Austin, Bryan-College Station and Dallas-Fort Worth. Meanwhile the number of metropolitan areas statewide with double-digit jobless rates dropped from seven to five.

Dr. McClelland cited the main strengths in the Texas economy as the high rate of drilling activity and building. In fact, he said, the total number of wells drilled through October was the third highest ever. In the building industry, he said data available through August suggests the value of total private nonresidential construction permits reached a record high.

Those strong figures led Dr. McClelland to assert, "The strength of the economy will continue to center around the fast rate of population growth which will again advance by about a half million people. Those looking for work will continue to find it, and the unemployment rate will continue to edge down."

What Dr. McClelland's figures tell us — in the broad view — is that the Texas economy is in good shape although many Texans may not be able to make that judgment based on their individual situations.

Texas' economic future still is bright and will get even better in coming years.

Another View:

Cabinet choices

All three of Mr. Reagan's latest Cabinet nominees are highly competent people of the sort described, in this administration's vocabulary, as realists. The term means to say that they are reasonable men who are not greatly preoccupied with ideological warfare. But as Cabinet officers, two of them will be limited to one degree or another by the revival of the president's inclination to abolish their departments.

The White House has been thinking of pushing the disassembled pieces of the Energy Department into the Interior Department. The present secretary of energy, Don Hodel, was undersecretary of the Interior before he moved to his present job, and knows both departments better and in greater detail than anyone else in the administration. If the two departments are to be amalgamated, Mr. Hodel is the obvious choice to carry it out.

John Herrington, assistant to the president for personnel, is to replace Mr. Hodel at Energy. Temporarily? Perhaps. Then again, it's possible that Congress will be no more receptive to the demolition of the department in Mr. Reagan's second term than it was in his first. There are good and urgent reasons to retain a full-fledged department to manage the many federal responsibilities in energy. In that case, Mr. Herrington's lack of experience in the infinitely complex subject of energy economics may become more important than Mr. Reagan hopes or expects. Mr. Herrington has the reputation of being a very fast learner, and that is a good thing: the kind of international events that disrupt the life of a secretary of energy require plenty of knowledge and skill.

To the Education Department, William J. Bennett brings a passion for culture in the genuine sense of the word. The job of a secretary of education, in this administration, is to fend off the numerous people who want to use federal intervention to advance their various social causes, and instead to keep attention fixed on the improvement of teaching and learning. Mr. Bennett's predecessor, T.H. Bell, accomplished that feat with great but unobtrusive skill. Mr. Bennett is likely to make more noise. But if he follows the track that he set for himself at the Endowment for the Humanities, it will be the right kind of noise in behalf of the classic idea of intellectual quality. Perhaps he will want to give some thought — publicly — to the condition of the colleges and universities, a subject on which he is well informed.

Whether the Education Department survives or vanishes is not a matter to lose sleep over. The case for establishing it was weak. But dismantling it is not worth a long fight distracting the attention of Mr. Bennett, and others who care about education, from more substantial concerns.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1639, the first constitution of Connecticut, known as the "Fundamental Orders," was adopted at a meeting in Hartford.

In 1898, the Rev. Charles L. Dodgson — better known as author Lewis Carroll — died.

In 1914, the Ford Motor Co. greatly improved its assembly-line operation by employing an endless chain to pull each chassis along.

In 1943, during World War II, President Franklin D. Roosevelt and British Prime Minister Winston Churchill began a conference in Casablanca.

In 1952, NBC's "Today" show premiered with Dave Garroway as host.

In 1953, Yugoslavia's parliament elected Premier Tito president by a vote of 568-1.

In 1957, actor Humphrey Bogart died.

In 1964, in her first public statement since the assassination of her husband, former First Lady Jacqueline Kennedy appeared on television to thank the 800,000 people who had sent her messages of sympathy.

In 1969, an explosion ripped through the U.S. aircraft carrier Enterprise during maneuvers off Hawaii. Twenty-five crewmen were killed.

One year ago: The founder and chairman of the McDonald's Corp., Ray Kroc, died in San Diego at the age of 81.

Today's Birthdays: Producer Hal Roach Sr. is 93. Humorist Andy Rooney is 65. Actor-author Tom Tryon is 59. Georgia State Sen. Julian Bond is 45. Actress Faye Dunaway is 44. Actor Marjoe Gortner is 41.

JACK ANDERSON

Lawmakers aiding ex-Nazi

WASHINGTON — A former Nazi concentration camp Commandant, who concealed his past to gain admittance to the United States, has been hunted down and stripped of his U.S. citizenship.

Jack Anderson

But just as he was about to be booted out of the country, several distinguished members of Congress intervened to stop his deportation.

They joined Dr. Edward Rubel, a director of the Captive Nations Committee, in protesting the deportation order. Rubel's letter to Secretary of State George Shultz has the acrid stench of anti-Semitism, accusing the Justice Department's investigators of collaborating with "Jewish Zionists" and the Soviet secret police.

The congressional dignitaries wrote more moderate letters to Shultz on the former Nazi's behalf, or otherwise showed sympathy for his supporters' cause. They include House Foreign Affairs Committee Chairman Dante Fascell, D-Fla.; Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y.; Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M.; Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz.; Rep. Don Ritter, R-Pa.; and, before he was defeated, Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chairman Charles Percy, R-Ill.

D'Amato, apparently fearing the wrath of New York's Jewish voters, later repudiated his original letter of support. An aide to D'Amato asked my associate Lucette Lagnado not to report either the senator's initial support or his later repudiation, pleading constituent sensitivity.

At the center of the deportation battle is 65-year-old, Estonian-born Karl Linnas, who immigrated to this country after World War II and now lives on Long Island.

Evidence gathered by the Justice Department's Nazi-hunting Office of Special Investigations revealed that Linnas had been a concentration camp commandant and had ordered the mass executions of Jews and other prisoners. He participated personally in some of the executions, according to the documents.

Because he failed to mention this when he entered the United States, a federal court has stripped him of his U.S. citizenship, and he faces deportation to the Soviet Union, of which Estonia is now a de facto constituent republic.

Linnas has appealed the deportation order on the grounds that the United States has never officially recognized the Soviet takeover of Estonia. He states that he would be willing to be sent back to his homeland but that he can't be deported to a country that doesn't officially exist in U.S. eyes.

Linnas's congressional supporters insist they have no sympathy for him but agree with his technical argument. But the State Department's legal office, whose lawyers seldom agree on points of law, unanimously rejected the argument, suggesting that it is a smokescreen.

Eastern European emigre groups have also unfurled the banner of anti-communism to win congressional support for Linnas. The most virulent letter was written by Rubel, himself an Estonian immigrant, who described Stalinist Russia as "exclusively ruled by Marxist Zionist Jews." The truth is that Jewish Soviet leaders were systematically exterminated during the Stalinist purges.

In his letter to Shultz, Rubel also describes Baltic Jews who managed to escape the Nazi death squads and join local guerrilla bans as "leaders of extermination battalions, killing innocent people and burning their abodes."

He also questioned why "the members of the Jewish JUDENRAT, who profited from the Holocaust (are) allowed to remain in the United States and are not sought out by the OSI."

Rubel accuses "the OSI with its U.S.A. Zionist System" of "direct collaboration with the Soviet government" and the KGB secret police. "It is clear," he declares, "that the Jewish Zionist pressure group in Washington speaks through the OSI for the U.S. government."

Without mentioning the Linnas case, DeConcini has written to the Justice Department, noting criticism of the OSI and suggesting he might hold hearings on the charges.

Linnas's congressional supporters, of course, are neither Nazi sympathizers nor anti-Semitic bigots. Fascell, for example, has been a champion of Jewish rights. Apparently, the members of Congress have been influenced by the intense lobbying of the emigre groups.

Officials of the Captivé Nations Committee and other emigre groups supporting Linnas also denied any anti-Semitism. But they would not take issue with any of the virulently anti-Semitic statements in Rubel's letter to Shultz. An official of the Joint Baltic Committee characterized Rubel as "a colorful individual." The official repudiated the anti-Semitic part of Rubel's letter, but not the "historical facts."

FALSE ECONOMY: While the Pentagon gets all the money it wants for planning to kill people, the National Institutes of Health are being shorted on funding that could save lives.

The administration's budget cutters are withholding funds for research on cancer, heart disease and the causes of criminal behavior. Though the NIH budget grew from $4.5 billion in fiscal 1984 to $5.15 billion for 1985, the grants that will keep the vital research going face cuts in the 1986 budget. Even when the budget remains constant, the effect of inflation is a net decrease in funding.

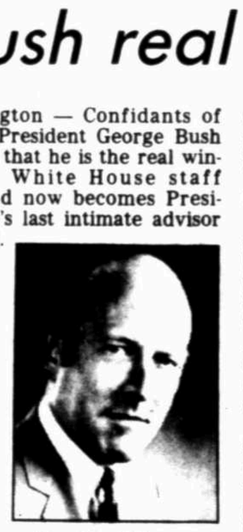

Congressional friends of NIH believe they can mount a successful counterattack to the threatened cuts once the administration's final budget proposal is made public. That's what happened last year when the White House tried to cut back on both sociological and purely medical research at NIH.

Bush real winner in 'upheaval'

Washington — Confidants of Vice President George Bush claim that he is the real winner of the White House staff upheaval and now becomes President Reagan's last intimate advisor close at hand.

Rowland Evans

The shift of James Baker and Edwin Meese to the Cabinet and the departuer of Michael K. Deavor from the administration means the vice president stands alone. Bush, who has grown close to the Reagans, is the last person in the White House with whom the president can talk freely and informally.

Robert Novak

A footnote: Jennifer Fitzgerald, Bush's longtime executive secretary whose prickly ways irritated many politicians, is leaving for a post in an overseas embassy. With chief of staff Dan Murphy and press secretary Pete Teeley also going, Bush is looking for a new team.

CHIEF NEGOTIATOR TOWER?

Senate Republicans are quietly pressing President Reagan to recruit former senator John Tower, a conservative Republican, for the top negotiating job on the new U.S.-Soviet arms control talks, and some White House aides like the idea a lot.

If Tower, now eyeing the job of ambassador to West Germany, ever brought an arms-control treaty to the Senate, Reagan would be certain to get ratification. That's how solid the former chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee is in his old stomping ground. Few if any conservatives would have doubts about a treaty negotiated by Tower.

Insiders think Tower could be had for what looks like one of the toughest assignments in all diplomacy, which, if crowned by success, would give the chief negotiator a place in history. Tower boosters see another big plus: his intimacy with Robert McFarlane, Reagan's national security adviser.

DOLE RILES FLANK

New Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole lost important friends in the conservative camp of his Republican Party when he failed to deliver on an implicit pledge to put Sen. Malcolm Wallop on the Intelligence Committee.

The pledge was given to Wallop, the committee's most serious and hard-working Republican, during the closed-door Republican Senate Conference as the 99th Congress convened. Because of it, Wallop decided against a frontal assault on the system that governs membership in the Intelligence Committee.

But nothing happened and Dole later apologized to Wallop for being unable to deliver. Blocking Dole was Sen. David Durenberger, the committee's new chairman, who rejected Dole's appeal to make room for Wallop. The incident poisoned the Republican well in the Senate, badly smudging Dole's reputation with his conservative colleagues.

RON PREEMPTS DUKE

California Gov. George Deukmejian's men were steaming after his State of the State speech was preempted by President Reagan's post-Gemeva press conference.

Deukmejian's speech was to be the first such statewide telecast in prime time. consequently, his aides were stunned when the presidential press conference was scheduled at the same time. Telephone appeals were made to Washington (including one to presidential counselor Edwin Meese), but they got nowhere.

So Deukmejian's speech was hurriedly pushed up one day. The irritation in Sacramento was all the greater when Reagan's press conference turned out to be a routine question and answer affair with no great revelations about Geneva.

NIXON'S REVENGE

When President Reagan telephoned former president Richard Nixon to say happy birthday, an ebollient 72-year-old Nixon congratulated Reagan for his Geneva coop and then got in a nifty dig at his old antagonists in the press corps.

The Geneva breakthrough was great, Nixon said, but the very best thing of all was the way "Dan Rather and those other TV hotshots had to stand around in sub-zero temperatures."

Nixon's kick from watching the TV anchors freeze in the record-breaking cold spell that struck Central Europe last week was not all that unique. Many politicians here seemed delighted at the climactical discomfiture of the media stars.

CHARLEY REESE

Failure to deter war deadly

For some reason there seems to be more critics of the U.S. Defense Department in the Congress and the press than there are critics of the Soviet Union.

Charley Reese

I don't know why that is, but I would like to clarify a point or two. If you die from a bomb or missile it will be from a Russian bomb or missile. In case you are confused by all the criticism, the Defense Department is on our side. It's the Soviet Union which is the enemy.

The attacks against the Defense Department come in a variety of forms. One of the silliest arguments now being heard is national defense must take its "fair share" of budget cuts to reduce the deficit. Some of the President's own men — primarily in the Office of Management and Budget — are making this stupid argument.

It is stupid because what we are about is not dividing candy among children. It is stupid because it implies that all federal expenditures are of equal value to the nation. They are not. There are great hunks of the federal budget you could chop without endangering the survival of the nation. Defense is not one of them.

A second form of smear job is to concentrate on instances of waste and mismanagement — the overpriced hammer, for example. there are instances of waste and even fraud, of course, and they should be prosecuted (the Reagan Administration has prosecuted 1,700 individuals and corporations by the way.)

But there is a very important point you must keep in mind. Whether you pay too much for an airplane has nothing to do with the question of needing the airplane. If you need certain weapons to fulfill your mission, you need the weapons whether they are over-priced or under-priced. No aggressor has ever refrained from going to war just because the victim felt he couldn't afford to defend himself.

The military men in the Kremlin don't give a hoot what we pay for military hardware. They only look at what we've got. Rebuilding our defenses and managing our defense dollars are two separate problems that have to be tackled simultaneously. Don't, however, let the anti-defense crowd dupe you into buying their false reasoning that because there is some waste, there can be big cuts in defense without harming our security.

Congress, by the way, contains some of the biggest hypocrites in the world. You should know that Congress frequently blocks Defense Department efforts to cut costs. There are military bases the Defense Department no longer needs but Congressional pork-barrel politics keep them open. Congress has at times forced the Defense Department to buy weapons it didn't want or more of an item than it wanted.

An insidious theme which runs through a lot of anti-defense propaganda is that defense dollars are just for the welfare of generals and defense contractors.

Well, I'm not concerned at all with the welfare of generals and defense contractors. I'm concerned for the lives and safety of my children. And that's what defense dollars are for: to protect the lives and safety of the American people.

Defense is one of the few federal expenditures that truly benefit the whole nation — black, white, male, female, young, old, and in-between. There is no greater benefit you can provide for the poor, for the elderly, and for children than to keep them safe from the ravages of war. The Soviets have thousands of warheads but they don't have any which explode only over the rich neighborhoods. War, death, and destruction are equal opportunity disasters.

A prudent person spends what he has to on essentials and if necessary practices austerity in non-essential items. We as a nation have for the past 20 years done exactly the opposite. We have been lavish in non-essential expenditures and we have sacrificed defense to help pay for our spending spree in other areas.

This year's planned MX missiles cost only $2.5 billion; we are spending $11 billion on food stamps, over $6 billion on federal aid to education. We have our priorities mixed up. Dead people don't need food stamps and student loans. Dead people don't need Medicaid or Medicare. Dead people don't need any of the non-defense things that are consuming 70 percent of the federal budget.

The day we fail to deter war every other question becomes irrelevant and meaningless. Remember that in the coming debate. Remember that the Defense Department is on your side. Remember that the first priority of any nation is preserve the lives and property of its citizens.

Most Americans think you're never too old for sex, poll reveals

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans are about evenly divided on whether they want to live to age 100, but a majority do not believe the nation's elderly are treated with respect, a Media General-Associated Press survey says.

A majority of those polled also said people are never too old to have sex.

Those were among the findings when 1,476 U.S. adults were questioned about their attitudes on issues concerning the elderly. The poll also said:

— Seven in 10 Americans disapprove of a mandatory retirement age.

— Seven in 10 want to avoid living in a home for the aged when they get older, and six in 10 believe they will succeed. Forty-four percent believe it is better for most infirm elderly Americans to live with their children, 33 percent believe a nursing home is better, and 23 percent weren't sure.

— Only 30 percent of the respondents not already retired believe there will be enough money in the Social Security system to pay them benefits when they retire. Sixty percent believe there will not be enough money, and 10 percent weren't sure.

— President Reagan's second term will be good for the elderly in the opinion of 42 percent of the respondents, while 30 percent said it will be bad and 28 percent weren't sure.

When asked, "would you like to live to be 100 years old, or not?" 49 percent said they would like to live that long, 45 percent said they would not, and 6 percent didn't know or didn't answer.

Older people were more likely to say they didn't want to live to be 100 than were young people, and women were more likely than men to say they didn't want to live that long.

Doctors and psychologists who study old age say fears of physical disabilities, financial problems, loss of independence and mental illness are among the reasons people are scared of growing old.

"There has been an excessive sensitization in people's minds that extended chronological age carries with it increased chances of serious illness," said Powell Lawton, director of research at the Philadelphia Geriatrics Center. At age 85, "you have an equal chance of being disabled or not being disabled. But despite the illnesses, the majority of people find that it is tolerable."

The respondents in the Media General-AP poll were also asked, "At what age, if any, do you think people should stop having sex?" Sixty-four percent said never, 10 percent said after 70, 2 percent said 60 to 69, 2 percent said under 60, and 22 percent didn't know or didn't answer.

Seventy percent disapproved of mandatory retirement ages. Among the 25 percent who approved, the majority said 65 to 70 should be the mandatory retirement age.

Fifty-two percent of the respondents said they did not believe America's elderly were generally treated with respect, 42 percent said they were treated with respect, and 6 percent didn't answer or didn't know. But 91 percent said their own families treated their older family members with respect.

The old and the young had differing opinions on several questions in the Media General-AP poll. When asked if America's elderly were generally treated with respect, 58 percent of those over 65 said yes, while 64 percent of those 18 to 34 said no.

"Older people always express a more optimistic point of view," said Lawton. "That's a major issue in research in social gerontology. One of the hypotheses is that as you age, you become more accepting of situations as they are."

The older respondents and younger respondents also diverged on the nursing home question. Only three in 10 respondents in the oldest age group said it was better for infirm elderly Americans to live with their children. Among the youngest respondents, six in 10 said it was better for the elderly to live with their children.

"The kids express much more responsibility for taking care of their parents than their parents say they want from them," said Helen Kivnick, a California pyschologist and author who does research on aging.

Respondents in the Media General-Associated Press poll included a random, scientific sampling of 1,476 adults across the country Nov. 12-19, 1984. As with all sample surveys, the results of Media General-AP telephone polls can vary from the opinions of all Americans because of chance variation in the sample.

Teen-age hacker helps police crack case

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Peter Leppik, a 15-year-old hacker who helped police crack a sex offender's electronic diary, says he's agreed to study 50 software discs belonging to a man police say sexually abused young boys and described the acts in a computer.

Police said it took Leppik less than an hour Saturday to bypass a 37-year-old computer programmer's secret computer code that had baffled authorities for a month, resulting in the suspect's arrest.

Police turned to Leppik for help because they had been asked to investigate his software entry into the computer files of a local bank. He said Sunday the breach of the bank's files was accidental.

On Saturday, Bob Huber, the police department's computer coordinator, arranged for Leppik to use a computer at an electronics store to try his hand at cracking the code.

"I took about half an hour getting used to the operating system," Leppik said. "After that it took me 15 minutes to figure out how to bypass the pass words. I figured out how to convert the files, which is a time-consuming process.

"I printed out a few that looked suspicious..."

Once inside the files, Leppik described what he saw as "kind of shocking" but would not elaborate.

He said he was able to bypass the password by using a program different from the one the alleged abuser used to record the information. The second program — designed to translate data from one edition of software to another — did not require use of a password, Leppik said.

"He (the suspect) is a programmer, but he didn't know much about security," he said.

Leppik said he was told that police acquired the more than 50 computer disks under a search warrant.

"We did not bother to read too many of them" Saturday, he said, adding he would study them over the next few weekends.

Leppik said he is not getting paid for his time or expertise. But he said police told him he might be called as an expert witness in the trial of the alleged child abuser. If that happens, he could receive a small fee, he said.

Leppik said his previous run-in with police wasn't his fault.

"My computer accidentally called up a bank's computer. They traced it to our family phone, and complained to the Minneapolis police," he recalled.

He said police investigated about a week, "and when they found I didn't do anything wrong they just dropped it."

New firms profit from parents' fears

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — A half-naked, bruised child, her ankles in chains, stares sadly from the pages of the brochure. "Imagine a system that would help increase the odds of finding a missing child," says the cover.

The brochure tells parents that by paying $29.95 this year to register their youngsters with Missing Children Information Services Inc., the company can "significantly enhance the probability of an early recovery" should they ever run away or be kidnapped.

Child advocates say the Lexington firm — which promises information and photographs for police, plus wanted posters, handbills and other search services — is one of a growing line of private companies specializing in missing children.

"It seems like everybody wants to make money off the problem," said Kathy Rosendahl, director of the Florida-based Children's Rights of America. "It's going on all over."

It's estimated that 4,000 to 20,000 children are abducted by strangers every year, and the problem has attracted growing attention.

Leaders of non-profit groups devoted to the problem of missing children don't know what to make of Missing Children Information Services, a new company operated by Richard Drew.

CAPT. JOHN McClure said Lexington police are reserving judgment.

The wide-eyed little girl in the brochure, wearing underpants and chains and posing on a dirty mattress, is Drew's daughter. The bruise around her eye, he says, is makeup.

Drew's main selling point is time. He tells parents police won't investigate a missing child for 24 hours — a delay that Kentucky and other states have eliminated — but that his company will notify law enforcement agencies within 500 miles of the youngster's home town and get the search started.

"We make time our ally with very rapid information dissemination," Drew said. "We think parents should provide their child with the best available...

"This is an ideal way for parents to inform police of all pertinent information about their child."

His company, which he said registered nine children in its first week and has 12 sales representatives in nine states, advertises that it will keep detailed microfilmed records of a child's schedule and activities, friends, teachers — even the leader of his Boy Scout troup. All of that — plus size, weight, eye and hair color and a recent photograph — would be printed on a card for parents to hand over to police, according to Drew.

FOR ANOTHER $16 a year, he says, the company will offer a $10,000 reward. He contends that only a for-profit concern can offer such services, but police and leaders of the advocate groups say most parents find the community eager to help when a child disappears.

"What are people buying? Services that most non-profit groups offer at no charge or a low charge," Ms. Rosendahl said by telephone from Largo, Fla. "It's just as though someone tries to profit from scare tactics...

"People who have birth certificates, shot records and savings bonds are able to store them themselves. Why people think they need a fingerprint bank or a registry to store this information is beyond me," she said. Parents who store their own records, she added, don't have to worry about who has access to them.

"I'd rather have a law enforcement official or an organization that has a track record...doing this for me," said Jeannette Demenkoff of Child Find in New Paltz, N.Y.

The advocate groups say Drew's company is one of many for-profit offshoots of the various systems — fingerprinting, photographing, making ID cards, keeping good records — they have offered parents. The non-profit agencies also do manuals.

"ONE DAY this guy came by with a book he was going to sell for $5 and wanted to know what I thought about it," Ms. Rosendahl said. "Why sell it? It's the same things we provide parents in our safety programs, and we just hand it out."

There are private fingerprint banks, registry services, firms selling coded plates for a youngster's shoes, homing devices to implant in a child's teeth and clothing labels printed in invisible ink, according to Ms. Rosendahl and Jay Howell of the Washington-based National Center for Missing and Exploited Children.

"We get a lot of phone calls here," Howell said. "Wackos call up and say they've got a device, they can't talk about it, but it'd be instrumental in recovering lost children...

"Some things are a worthwhile investment for a family that's concerned," he said, such as guide books or a private detective if a child is missing. "But some are so far-fetched. They're really exploiting fear."

The non-profit groups are most incensed by new organizations that set up telephone solicitation banks in a town, raise money and then move on. It isn't always certain where the money goes, but law enforcement officials are rarely able to stop such groups, according to Ms. Rosendahl and Anne Kahane of Find The Children in Los Angeles.

"We talk about kiddie pornographers, kidnappers, murderers, child abusers and pimps. Now we have a whole new breed of child exploiter, one who exploits the problem," Ms. Rosendahl complained. "To me, they're still exploiting children."

Race, class of families affect reporting of child abuse

WASHINGTON (AP) — Child abuse in middle-class, white families is less likely to be reported to police or child welfare officials than child abuse in low-income black or Hispanic families, according to a new study.

The study, published in the January issue of the American Journal of Public Health, says hospital data showed that the principal difference between child abuse cases that were reported to authorities and cases that were not turned out to be the race and class of the family involved.

For children from households with incomes above $25,000 a year, only 36.7 percent of the child abuse cases were reported, the study said. But nearly 80 percent of the cases involving families with incomes below $15,000 were reported to authorities.

By the same token, 60.5 percent of the child abuse cases involving white families were reported. But the figure was 74.3 percent for black families and 91.2 percent for Hispanics.

The study was conducted by Dr. Eli H. Newberger of the Harvard Medical School Department of Pediatrics and Robert L. Hampton of the Department of Sociology at Connecticut College.

In their discussion of the results, they said the apparent bias in class and race showed the need for review of the child abuse reporting system.

"To the extent that we selectively invoke agents of the state to police the lives of poor and non-white families, we may be inappropriately and unfairly condemning these families as evil," they said.

"In selectively ignoring the prevalence of child abuse in more affluent majority homes, we may be perpetuating a myth that child abusers are out there, and that homes like ours are free of violence."

Another consequence of the bias, they said, "may be a failure to address the needs of the many children in middle-class families who are at risk of abuse."

The study drew on data collected by the government in a 1981 national survey of the incidence and severity of child abuse. The survey collected information from 70 hospitals in 10 states, including a mix of urban, suburban and rural counties.

The analysis compared the hospitals' records of child abuse cases — including physical, sexual and emotional abuse and neglect — with cases reported to child protection agencies or other law enforcment agencies.

Of the 805 child abuse cases that came to the attention of hospital staff members, they said, only 66.6 percent were reported to authorities.

Besides the bias on class and race, the authors said, they also discovered that hospital officials were less likely to report abuse cases when the mother was the suspected abuser.

Jackson promises to help find kidnapped priest

JOLIET, Ill. (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson promised to do all he could to help find a Roman Catholic priest abducted in Lebanon, and said the kidnapping occurred because of "a lack of diplomacy in the Middle East."

The civil rights leader and more than 300 people attended Mass on Sunday with the family of the Rev. Lawrence Martin Jenco, 50, a Joliet native who was kidnapped Tuesday by eight gunmen in west Beirut.

Jenco, who went to Beirut in October to head Catholic Relief Services, was abducted by Shiite Moslems angered at the presence of Americans in Lebanon, a U.S. Embassy official told his sister.

Police delay Amtrak train

DENVER (AP) — Police delayed an Amtrak train for three hours and handcuffed at least two passengers in connection with the death of a 24-year-old Indiana woman who later was found to have died of natural causes, authorities said.

The body of Brenda Lindemann of Fort Wayne was found Saturday in a restroom aboard the San Francisco-bound train and police questioned passengers, calling off the investigation after an autopsy revealed a blood clot in her brain.

"Because of the nature of the death, we felt we should investigate it as a homicide — just in case, so we wouldn't lose any clues," said Detective Pete Lombard. The handcuffed men had contact with the woman before her death, but neither was charged.

'Wind' may affect climate

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — A remnant from the explosion of a nearby star 200,000 years ago could be the driving force behind an interstellar "wind" that might disrupt Earth's climate thousands of years from now, a researcher says.

Observations have shown that the Earth and the rest of the solar system are now in the edge of a very thin cloud of interstellar material blowing toward us at a speed of roughly 10 miles per second, said Priscilla Frisch, an astronomer from the University of Chicago.

CIA worked to counter death squad killings, House report says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The CIA worked to counter Salvadoran security force involvement in death squad killings and did nothing to "directly encourage or support" such actions, the House Intelligence Committee says.

But the panel adds that the spy agency was slow in collecting information about the participation of some Salvadoran government personnel in the political killings.

Responding to public allegations that the CIA had ties to Salvadoran security forces implicated in the slayings, a committee staff report said:

"U.S. intelligence agencies have not conducted any of their activities in such a way as to directly encourage or support death squad activities. To the contrary, U.S. intelligence activities have been directed, sometimes successfully, at countering death squad activity, reducing the power of individuals connected with death squads, and seeking their removal from positions of authority."

The report added, however, that "some U.S. intelligence relationships with individuals connected with death squads" may have given the impression to Salvadorans that the CIA "condoned, because it was aware of, some death squad activities."

The report said such contacts are "regrettable but perhaps unavoidable. If U.S. intelligence is to collect information about death squads, it must do so by obtaining information from individuals associated with or knowledgeable of such activities."

But the report criticized U.S. intelligence agencies for paying little attention to death squad killings until two years ago and then tightly restricting U.S. government circulation of the information it had collected.

"Death squad activity could have been and should have been the focus of U.S. intelligence collection earlier than it was and a topic of U.S. intelligence analysis available to a more widespread group of policy level consumers," the report said.

Asked about the report by the Democrat-controlled committee, former Rep. James Shannon, D-Mass., who requested the "death squad" investigation last March, questioned the panel's conclusion clearing the CIA.

The information is "certainly not as conclusive as the committee makes it sound," Shannon said, contending that committee investigators "haven't looked at it carefully enough."

Shannon's request followed published reports citing past U.S. government training of, and intelligence connections with, some Salvadoran security officials who have been linked to rightist "death squads."

Human rights groups estimate that more than 50,000 civilians have been killed during five years of civil war in El Salvador, many believed murdered by "death squads" that reportedly include members of the government's security forces.

The Reagan administration says that while such political slayings continue, the Salvadoran government has succeeded in sharply reducing their number and has removed some officials implicated in the violence. The United States backs the Salvadoran government in its war against leftist guerrillas.

CIA spokeswoman Kathy Pherson declined comment on the House report.

London judge allows baby to go with couple who paid for her

LONDON (AP) — A High Court judge announced today that a 10-day-old girl, Britain's first baby known to have been conceived as a commercial transaction, has been placed in the care of the couple who paid for her.

The judge, Sir John Latey, set a British legal precedent with his ruling in the Family Division of the High Court, turning the baby over to her natural father and his wife, who cannot have children.

The baby's mother, Kim Cotton, 28, of London, became the first British woman known to have given birth for pay. She was reportedly given $7,280 by the anonymous childless couple in return for being artificially inseminated with the husband's sperm and bearing the child.

The infant was removed Friday from the north London hospital where she was born, and, according to a report in today's Daily Mail newspaper, she already has been taken out of the country by the couple who arranged to pay for her birth through a British surrogacy agency based in Washington, D.C.

The Daily Mail quoted a lawyer for the father as saying that the couple secretly left Britain with the baby during the weekend after a court hearing on Friday before Latey.

All the neccessary documents to enable the baby to be taken out of the country had already been completed, the paper said."All that was done was done with the judge's consent," the lawyer, Derek Kirby-Johnson, was quoted as saying.

Latey declared that "care and control" of the baby girl had been given to the couple whom he identified as Mr. and Mrs. A. He said they could take the baby out of Britain, although she remains a ward of the court.

He said the couple had promised to "return the child to the jurisdiction of the court if the court should so order — an unlikely contingency in this case."

He said no one was better able "to look after this child's well-being, physical and emotional."

Reportedly at the request of the father, the Family Division of the London High Court intervened Jan. 8 and took temporary custody of the infant, nicknamed "Baby Cotton" by hospital nurses because she had no other name.

The arrival of the 7-pound, 13-ounce baby on Jan. 4 prompted widespread public hostility and debates on the morality and legality of the practice of parentage for pay.

The birth was arranged by the National Center for Surrogate Parenting, a private British agency with offices in Washington.

According to British newspaper accounts, the agency was paid $8,400 dollars by the childless couple.

Israel reportedly on verge of OK'ing troop pullback

JERUSALEM (AP) — The Cabinet today was reported on the verge of approving a troop pullback in south Lebanon. Israel Army Radio and newspapers said officers already were deciding what equipment to abandon and which fortifications to destroy when they leave.

The bipartisan Cabinet opened a discussion Sunday on Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin's plan for a phased withdrawal, and a spokesman said a decision was expected after the Cabinet reconvened this afternoon.

"The intention is to finish and to reach a decision," Cabinet Secretary Yossi Beilin said.

The Haaretz newspaper and Israel Army Radio said today it appeared that the Cabinet would approve the pullback plan by a vote of about 15-6, with two votes unsure and two ministers out of the country. All the known opponents are of the Likud bloc, led by Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir and Moshe Arens, a former defense minister.

Army Radio said the armed forces general staff was making plans to save as much equipment as possible during withdrawal from the northern sector of Israel's occupation zone. The daily Jerusalem Post said that what could not be taken out would be blown up, including nine fortifications built on the Awali River front line.

After the six-hour meeting Sunday, Prime Minister Shimon Peres, who heads the Labor Party, told a meeting of Israeli businessmen, "We began to discuss in the Cabinet meeting how to bring to an end our involvement in Lebanon, while ensuring the security of the Galilee...It seems to me — and I certainly pray for this — that the legitimate and serious differences of opinion will not fall along party lines."

Kennedy forced to cancel final speech

SOWETO, South Africa (AP) — Nobel Peace Prize winner Bishop Desmond Tutu says the black hecklers who forced Sen. Edward M. Kennedy to cancel his final appearance in South Africa don't represent the views of the "vast, vast" majority of the nation's blacks.

Kennedy ended his nine-day visit to white-ruled South Africa on Sunday after expressing regret that he was unable to deliver a speech at a church in Soweto, the sprawling black township outside Johannesburg.

"I'm disappointed because the message I had was a message about the future of South Africa, and a message that deplored apartheid," said Kennedy before flying to Zambia on the start of his trip home.

Kennedy, a Massachusetts Democrat, said his remarks would have reflected the thinking of the "overwhelming majority of American people that hold this system repugnant."

He was referring to apartheid, South Africa's systematic discrimination against the black majority. South Africa denies citizenship to its 22 million blacks. It has 5 million whites.

Tutu, who won the peace prize last year for his denunciations of apartheid, told the senator: "Don't go away from here thinking you have been rejected. You have been warmly welcomed. Our people warmly welcome you."

Kennedy canceled his speech at Regina Mundi Roman Catholic Church after an aide reported that members of a black-consciousness group, the Azanian People's Organization, were at the church chanting: "Kennedy, go home!"

WORLD in brief

Violence can't halt tourists

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Tourism has become one of Northern Ireland's few growing industries despite the continuing sectarian violence in the British-ruled province, the Tourist Board reports.

More than 1 million visitors are expected in 1985, compared with 940,000 last year, the board said. About 430,000 of the visitors in 1984 were from the Irish Republic, south of the border dividing the island, and 400,000 were from the British mainland.

A board spokesman, who declined to be identified, said Sunday that American tourists to Ireland who were previously wary of traveling north are now crossing the border "in coachloads."

He said 60,000 Americans and Canadians visited the province last year, up by nearly 20 percent from 1983.

Main fractures, leaks gas

LONDON (AP) — A 24-inch gas main fractured near Piccadilly Circus, forcing thousands of people to evacuate the central London area before the leak was sealed, fire and utility officials said.

All roads into the area were closed by police Sunday, and traffic jams developed. Nearby movie theaters were evacuated and thousands of people, including many foreign tourists, were told to leave the area.

London Transport, which operates the bus and subway systems, said gas was seeping into subway tunnels from the fractured main and drifted to Leicester Square station. Subway trains turned around, and passengers were let off at other stations, said London Transport.

Cruise ship rescues 26

KINGSTOWN, St. Vincent (AP) — A cruise ship rescued 26 South Koreans who had abandoned their burning freighter in the Caribbean coast of Venezuela, according to a passenger aboard the ship and the U.S. Coast Guard.

The Greek liner Stella Oceanis spotted the freighter Aliveri Hope burning Saturday afternoon, a passenger, Bert Wilson, told The Associated Press in a ship-to-shore report Sunday from the Stella Oceanis as it left this Caribbean port.

He said the Stella Oceanis changed course and picked up the freigher's crew, who were in two inflatable lifeboats bobbing in the rough waters.

49ers hold no terror for Miami

'Home' field edge doesn't bother Shula

Super Bowl

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — That the Dolphins are flying coast-to-coast to play a team driving just down the road holds no terror for Miami Coach Don Shula. He doesn't necessarily see the site of Super Bowl XIX as giving the San Francisco 49ers an edge.

It was pointed out to him late last week in Miami that the Dolphins, by virtue of owning the American Conference's best record at 14-2 during the season, earned the so-called home-field advantage for their two playoff games. Now, it was noted, the 49ers would ostensibly be at home for next Sunday's game.

"I imagine it'll be easier for them," Shula said, comparing the Dolphins' 3,000-mile flight to the 49ers' 10-mile drive down the peninsula from their Redwood City training camp. "They'll be just miles away from where they play, just minutes from where they practice. And Bill (Walsh, their coach) is from Stanford, so he knows the stadium.

"But I wasn't using the word 'advantage' around here, so I can't change now," Shula added with a shrug. "What I'd love to do is just go out there and beat them in their own backyard and cap off a great season."

Walsh acknowledged that "we've got our meeting rooms, lockers and training facilities here — plus there's a good deli right nearby. But I really won't know if it's an advantage until after the game."

It is a situation reminiscent of Super Bowl XIV. The Pittsburgh Steelers had to fly more than 2,600 miles to play the Los Angeles Rams in the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, Calif., the Rams' backyard. Nevertheless, the Steelers won 31-19, their unprecedented fourth Super Bowl victory.

There were, however, two big differences between then and now.

In 1979, the year the Rams reached the National Football League's ultimate game, they had spent the playoffs on the road against the Dallas Cowboys and the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, whereas the 49ers haven't been away from home since Dec. 2 — the two final regular-season games and playoff victories over the New York Giants and Chicago Bears.

What's more, in the season prior to Super Bowl XIV, the Rams had just completed their first year in their new home, Anaheim Stadium. They had moved 30 miles to the southeast, from the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum, and the acrimony which had left behind was still very much in evidence. They were as much the enemy as were the Steelers to many of the 103,985 fans in the Rose Bowl.

The 49ers, though, are at no such risk. They are THE team in San Francisco and environs, especially since the even more acrimonious departure in 1982 of the Oakland Raiders to the Rams' old home in LA.

The Bay Area also is home to:

— the Oakland Invaders, one of the poorer teams (and, with an average home crowd of 22,877, hardly a drawing card) in the United States Football League,

— the San Francisco Giants, baseball's worst team last season, and the Oakland A's, lately an epitome of mediocrity,

— the Golden State Warriors, one of pro basketball's worst teams this year, and — the Golden Bay Earthquakes, one of pro soccer's worst teams.

The area's pro hockey franchise, the Oakland (later California Golden) Seals, were moved to Cleveland nearly a decade ago and the renamed Barons soon vanished in a merger with Minnesota.

"We'll have the hometown advantage," said San Francisco running back Wendell Tyler, who also had it when he was with the Rams in their Super Bowl five years ago. "We'll have the fans behind us."

But guard Randy Cross doesn't see much difference between this one and the 49ers' other trip to the Super Bowl three years ago, to the only Snowbelt Super Bowl, 2,400 miles to the East, to frostbitten Pontiac, Mich. "The only advantage," Cross said, "is that this time I don't have to get out my parka."

SMU's Jon Koncak goes over North Carolina's Brad Daugherty for shot at Greensboro, N.C., Sunday.

SMU scores for SWC basketball

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — Southern Methodist' 84-82 intersectional basketball win over North Carolina Sunday with a prime-time national television audience watching was one of the biggest in the school's history since the late Doc Hayes days in the 1950s.

As CBS-TV's Brent Musberger said at the top of the telecast from Greensboro, N.C.: "SMU is attempting to prove it belongs with the elite."

"I'm tremendously impressed with SMU," he said later. "The Southwest Conference no longer will be recognized just for football from what I've seen of SMU."

The broadaster was overlooking the fact that SWC's Houston has been in the Final Four of the NCAA basketball playoffs for three consecutive years. And that SMU was defeated only by a point by national champion Georgetown last year in the NCAA playoffs and had defeated Kentucky and Oklahoma this season.

And that Arkansas of the SWC defeated North Carolina of the highly touted Atlantic Coast Conference last year. The Razorbacks were in the Final Four in 1978.

Billy Packer, an analyst on the broadcast, said at one point, "It's a shame SMU and players like Jon Koncak and Carl Wright have been on national television just once."

Koncak said before the game that "this is the first time we've been on television that there haven't been other games going on. We were in the spotlight. That's what makes it such an important one for us, our school and the SWC."

SMU won although Koncak, who scored 31 points, and Wright, who had 18 points, fouled out late in the game.

Packer said, "I guarantee you SMU is going to be a force to be reckoned with in the NCAA Playoffs."

SMU is 14-1 with its only loss coming in a controversial game in Hawaii when tiny Chaminade scored a game-winning bucket after time had appeared to run out.

"We've seen North Carolina on television so many times and come back," said SMU assistant Coach John Underwood. "But our guys just knew they were going to win. They refused to fold."

Packer heavily applauded Wright, SMU's jumping-jack guard.

"He's the kind of guy I'd pay to see play, he's that exciting," said Packer. "SMU is tremendousy."

SMU has just one other scheduled national television appearance at home against Louisville on Saturday, Feb. 16.

The last time SMU was in the Final Four they were beaten 86-68 by San Francisco when Hayes was the coach in 1957.

Ponies Koncak, Wright show gets week off

Associated Press

It's a good thing the Southern Methodist Mustangs don't have to play again until next Saturday.

It will take them that long to come down from their 84-82 victory over favored North Carolina in Greensboro, N.C., on Sunday with a national television audience (CBS) watching the Carl Wright and Jon Koncak show.

SWC

Wright scored 18 points and Koncak had 31 before they were whistled out of the game with five fouls.

"It was a tremendous victory for our basketball program," said John Underwood, the Mustangs' assistant under Dave Bliss.

Bliss agreed, saying, "We've finally learned the secret of winning games like that. We kept our poise."

The preseason favorite Mustangs are off to a 4-0 start in SWC play with road victories at Rice and Texas A&M and home triumphs over Baylor and Arkansas.

"I told the players after we lost to Chaminade in Hawaii that it was important we come back and concentrate hard on a quick start in conference games. I told them pretend it's a four game season until we got North Carolina and they did," said Bliss. "They did that and now we have a week to get ready for TCU."

Wadkins wins Hope

In dramatic sudden death playoff

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. — After a year and a half lapse, Lanny Wadkins is a winner again.

And the gambling, tenacious golfer, perhaps the most aggresssive player on the PGA Tour, is just getting into the most productive part of his schedule.

Following his victory over Craig Stadler on the fifth hole of a sudden-death playoff in the Bob Hope Classic Sunday, Wadkins ticked off the tournaments:

"Probably my best overall record is at Phoenix (this week's event). I've won at Riviera (the Los Angeles Open, two weeks away) and it's one of my favorite courses. And I won the PGA at Pebble Beach (the site of the Bing Crosby, in three weeks).

"I'm looking forward to that lineup," he said. "I'm looking for a big year.

"But right now, I just want to enjoy this one for a day or so."

Wadkins had to mount one of the finest comebacks in recent years to set up his 13th Tour triumph and break a non-winning string that extended back to the 1983 Tournament of Champions.

He was four shots down with five holes to play in the final round of the Hope, but caught Stadler with an eagle-par-birdie-birdie-birdie finish at the Indian Wells Country Club course.

That completed a round of 7-under-par 65 and set a tournament record of 333, a whopping 27 shots under par for this five-day event. But Stadler matched that total with a closing 66. Their closest rival, Hubert Green, finished seven strokes back, and the two went to a playoff.

The sudden death, however, wasn't so sudden. It lasted five holes with first one player, then the other appearing to have the upper hand.

"I've seen more exciting golf here than I have in three years," said Lee Trevino, serving as a television commentator. Some viewers were not so fortunate. To meet previous schedule commitments, NBC ended its live coverage everywhere but on the West Coast at the conclusion of regulation play.

Here's what the viewers missed.

On the par-5 18th, the fourth playoff hole, Stadler got his drive to the right, under a tumbleweed on the side of a hill. He lashed through the weed, bits and pieces flying, and got the ball back to the fairway. Wadkins hit his second within 6 feet of the flag and needed only that for an eagle. Stadler played his third to within 12-15 feet, then made the birdie putt. Wadkins missed the eagle. They were still tied and headed back to the 15th again.

This time Wadkins clinched the title that provided him with a $90,000 first prize.

Today and Tuesday will be an important time in the overall scheme of District 4-5A basketball.

Today at 8 p.m., Midland Lee's Rebel girls can finish the first half of the 4-5A campaign with a perfect 7-0 record if they can record a road victory at Abilene High, which is 2-4.

And Midland High's Lady Bulldogs can add to a four-game winning streak while staying in the playoff hunt by hosting 2-4 Abilene Cooper in an 8 p.m. game at the MHS gym.

Then on Tuesday, the boys will hit the court as the four-way logjam at the top will undergo another subtraction procedure when Lee faces high scoring Abilene High at 8 p.m. in Chaparral Center. That is the only district game involving teams tied for the lead, so it will be the key game of the night.

Midland High, 3-1 just like Lee, Odessa Permian and Abilene High, will hit the road for 1-3 Abilene Cooper.

Tuesday's contest with Abilene High is most crucial for Lee's Rebels since Lee still has a road trip to make to Abilene High this year. You must win the home games and hope for the best on the road in this league.

The Rebel girls, who were thought to be going through a rebuilding year in 1985, have dominated the loop this year while league favorite San Angelo is 3-3, losing to both Lee and Midland High.

"I can't think of any other record I'd rather have than 6-0 at this stage," said Lee coach Shirley Stephenson, "but I have to say we don't feel very safe with the cushion we have. Just look at the results and you can see that anyone can win on any given night."

The Lady Bulldogs have battled back from a horrible 0-2 start in league play to win four in a row. "I'm really proud of the way the girls have battled back after the start we had," said MHS coach Jane Young. "We're in the race now, but we have to keep it going."

A pair of Whites have been leading the Lee girls in what has become a team affair for the Rebels. No player is averaging in double figures, but Becky White's 8.7 points per game average is tops and Diane White is averaging 7.2.

Denise Lanz continues to lead the Lady Bulldogs with a 14.1 average and she is followed by Diedra Knapp with an 8.5 shooting eye.

The other key game among girls today is 4-1 Odessa Permian against San Angelo. This is where both Lee and MHS would like to see the Bobcats return to winning form.

Expect sparks to fly Tuesday at Chaparral Center when the Eagles come to face Lee. AHS is averaging over 87 points per outing in district play and Lee is coming off a big 86-point game against Big Spring.

Abilene High has two of the top three scorers in the league in guard Greg Lowry (21.8 in district play) and forward Mickey Russell (20.0.) Lee will counter with high scoring Brian Marczynski, who is shooting at an 18.5 clip in district action. Raymond Morney owns a 14-point loop average.

Of course, when you talk about scoring in District 4-5A, you have to almost begin and end with Midland High's Darrell Davis, who is averaging 32.3 points per district game. He has scored 129 points in four outings, which is 42 points ahead of his nearest challenger. It looks like he may be skating toward league MVP honors. Gil Brassard is averaging 11.5 and the Bulldogs too haven't been pressed in scoring points this year.

But the Bulldogs will have to keep a sharp eye on Cooper's Fred Starks Tuesday. Starks averages 18.8 points per game and ranks fifth in the league. Also Cooper's Terrance Bell (11.0) can be dangerous.

"This is a key stretch for us," said MHS coach Jack Stephenson. "We have two big road games in a row and three of the next four out of town. If we can make it through that, it would help."

NCAA uses Gators to deliver message to coaches

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The NCAA has delivered a message loud and clear to the nation's football coaches — the penalty for violating the rules is going to be a stiff one from now on with no leniency and no plea bargaining.

Like some hanging judge of the Old West, the policy-making NCAA Council sounded its warning Sunday by overwhelmingly upholding a three-year probation against the University of Florida, which included the stiffest penalty in the history of college football — a reduction in total scholarships from 95 to 85 this year and then to 75 in 1986. Florida also was limited to a maximum of 20 scholarships rather than the accustomed 30 in both years.

THE VOTE to reject Florida's appeal reportedly was 43-0, with one abstention — Wilford S. Bailey of Auburn University, secretary of the Southeastern Conference, who had written the Council on behalf of the SEC supporting Florida's appeal for a reduction of the penalty. Bailey's letter called the limitation in total scholarships "unduly severe."

The Council, Florida's court of last resort within the NCAA, wasn't listening.

"Florida just came up at the wrong time," a Council member, who asked not to be identified, told The Associated Press. The source said there was even some sentiment to chop Florida to 65 scholarships — five less than permitted in Division I-AA — and then revert to 85-75 to make the university's president, Marshall M. Criser, "look good" for cooperating with the NCAA.

"We got their attention," the source said, referring to the nation's coaches. Indeed, the Ethics Committee of the American Football Coaches Association, through its chairman, Coach Grant Teaff of Baylor, delivered a letter Saturday to NCAA President John Toner supporting cuts in total scholarships as a method of punishment.

"It's harsh, but that's the only way to hurt a program — at both ends," said Vince Dooley, head coach and athletic director at the University of Georgia and president of the AFCA. Ironically, Georgia also is on probation — without bowl and television sanctions, however — and is limited to 23 scholarships in each of the next two years, plus a total of 90 in 1985 and 87 in 1986.

WHILE TONER termed the Florida situation "among the most serious infractions cases ever processed by the NCAA," S. David Berst, the NCAA's director of enforcement, said it was "not the most severe case or the most severe violations."

There was no question, however, that the NCAA has decided to adopt a get-tough policy as a deterrent to future violations among its member schools.

Although there have been instances of longer probations and there was a case of a school being expelled from the NCAA for the severity of its violations in basketball, Florida became the first school to suffer a reduction in the permissible total of 95 football scholarships.

The probation also prohibits Florida from postseason play — Florida was banned by the SEC from going to a bowl game after winning the championship last season — or appearing on live television for at least two years. The third year will be suspended if the university's athletic program passes NCAA inspection.

Criser said he was "particularly disheartened" by the imposition of the 85-75 limitations, but added, "The University of Florida will pursue no judicial appeal in this case."

In Gainesville, Fla., Coach Galen Hall told The AP:

"With the things we did to cooperate with the NCAA, we're very disappointed there was no relief. But we're relieved everything's over and we're looking to the future. We've faced adversity before and we're looking to overcome it in the future."

CRISER INDICATED he thought the NCAA might be trying to destroy Florida's program and force the Gators to rebuild to their present level — a 9-1-1 record in 1984 and a third-place finish in The Associated Press poll, their highest ever.

"Past sanctions (the normal penalty has been two years) were not sufficient because of our won-lost record," he said. "Despite the fact that we stand to lose millions of dollars, have been publicly embarrassed and placed on probation, they determined that was not sufficient."

Criser and Athletic Director Bill Carr estimated the immediate reduction to 85 grants would limit Florida to between 7-12 scholarships for high school recruits this year depending on attrition. The Gators lose 18 scholarship seniors, but several players who were not on scholarship last year have been promised grants for 1985.

"I don't know what effect that will have," Criser said. "But we stand to lose 43 grants-in-aid over the next four years based on our recent attrition rate."

In its appeal, Florida cited a section of the NCAA Manual which states that among the disciplinary measures that may be imposed against an institution are "a reduction in the number of either initial or total financial aid awards that may be awarded during a specificed period."

Criser said he was "deeply concerned about the either-or ambiguity." And although he said Florida has rejected the idea of taking the NCAA to court, he added, "I trust this will be straightened out by the NCAA before it's straightened out by an outside authority."

In discussing the severity of Florida's penalty, Toner said, "In this regard, it would be inappropriate to permit the University of Florida to retain any competitive advantage."

McEnroe executes Lendl

NEW YORK (AP) — The end came swiftly, neatly packaged and tied with a check for $100,000.

The surprise was that the end came so early and so silently that no one, not even Ivan Lendl, knew it had arrived.

But it came nonetheless, and John McEnroe captured the $400,000 Volvo Masters tennis championships for the second consecutive year Sunday by crushing Lendl 7-5, 6-0, 6-4.

"I felt as though I could do anything I wanted with the ball," McEnroe said afterward. He wasn't bragging.

"I made a few careless mistakes, but for a 10-game period I played as well if not better than any other game I played before."

It started with a smash in the 10th game of the opening set. Three points later, McEnroe had pulled even at 5-5, the match still on serve.

But it was the start of an 11-game streak — a streak of nearly flawless tennis by the game's No. 1 player.

"He played very well," Lendl admitted. "I've seen him play well many times, too many times.

"I wish I would have made more shots. I was returning better, but I still wasn't able to break him. I was creating chances, but he always came up (with a winner). I hit a good low return, but he hit a volley on the line.

"It makes it difficult because every time he was in trouble he would come up with a really good shot."

McEnroe, who defeated Sweden's Mats Wilander in the semifinals and met Lendl in the final of this tournament at Madison Square Garden for the third straight year, capped the 10th game with his second ace of the game and fifth of the match.

Then he pulled off the first service break of the match, the final point coming when he ripped a service return cross-court for a clear winner.

Volvo Masters

John McEnroe...two in a row

"I started picking up his serve a little bit better," McEnroe said. "I attacked, and I think I caught him off guard. He was mixing it up pretty well in the beginning. He was hitting the ball hard from the ground, and it took me a little while to get adjusted to it. I felt once I got the break, things were really turning my way."

In the 12th game, during a temper tantrum, McEnroe hit himself in the eye with a tennis ball. He needed a three-minute injury timeout, but he later said the incident helped him.

"It helped me pick up my game, made me concentrate a little bit more."

The incident began just after Lendl had pulled to deuce with a forehand passing shot and McEnroe was preparing to serve the next point.

He glowered at the photographers lined alongside the court, then screamed at them. While still staring at the photographers, he bounced a ball off his racket and it hit him in his right eye.

Lendl took the next point with a backhand passing shot down the line. McEnroe pulled back to deuce.

Then the Czechoslovakian right-hander pulled ahead again with an excellent service return that McEnroe, with a half-volley, sent wide.

But the New York left-hander went to his serve again, delivering up his seventh ace of the match, gained the ad point with a smash and closed out the set when Lendl's cross-count backhand service return was just wide.

The next time Lendl, who captured this event in 1982 and 1983 and was making his fifth straight trip to the final, won a game, he was down a service break in the third set of this best-of-five championship match.

"I changed (my game today) a lot, compared to my previous matches," said Lendl who had defeated Jimmy Connors in the semis. "I was much more aggressive. I took some speed from my first serve.

"But he's very talented. He has great reflexes. Even if you find something that works, you have to change it after awhile because he is so talented."

Since this tournament is considered the end of the 1984 Volvo Grand Prix season, McEnroe finished the year with a 82-3 match record, capturing 12 of the 14 tournaments he entered.

McEnroe later teamed with Peter Fleming to defeat Mark Edmondson of Australia and American Sherwood Stewart 6-3, 6-1 for the doubles title. It was the seventh consecutive year the pair have won the doubles crown here.

With his $100,000 check for his singles victory and his half of the $34,000 awarded to the doubles winners, McEnroe finished 1984 with earnings of 2,026,109. That brings his career earning to $7.5 million, the only male player to earn more than $7 million.

Cowboys lucky to break even financially in 1984

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys, long considered to be one of the most successful franchises in the National Football League, will do no better financially than break even or show a small profit for the 1984 season, owner Bum Bright says.

Bright told The Dallas Morning News he doesn't think the Cowboys will ever be turned into a money-maker.

Bright's comments came as a list of salaries of NFL players was released, showing the salaries paid players from all 26 teams. The list showed the top 10 players according to 1984 salaries and positions on the teams. Only four Cowboys made the top 10 at their positions.

The list included Randy White, whose $570,000 salary was the highest of all defensive linemen; quarterback Danny White, whose $550,000 salary was the ninth best in the league; running back Tony Dorsett, who was eighth among NFL running backs at $400,000; and kicker Rafael Septien, who at $144,000 ranked seventh in the league.

Salary figures for the Cowboys ranged from White's $570,000 to the $46,000 annual salary paid to reserve Vince Albritton.

The Cowboys' payroll has not helped the team turn a large profit, Bright said.

"We have only the interim figures — we don't close out the year until February — but I'd suspect it's about break-even," Bright said.

"The Cowboys are not a big profit making organization. Usually, the Cowboys make about $1 million, $1.5 million" per season, he said.

The only season the Cowboys lost money in recent years, Bright said, was in strike-shortened 1982 season when the team wound up with a deficit of "half to a million dollars."

Bright headed an 11-member limited partnership that bought the Cowboys last year for $60 million from Clint Murchison. In addition to his role as primary owner, Bright also bought the lease and right to operate Texas Stadium for $25 million.

"Our objective is to have the premier franchise operation and we need to spend money to do it. That is primary. Turning a profit is secondary," Bright said.

The payroll "devastated" the Cowboys chances of making a large profit despite the $14 million the team received in television money and ticket prices that were increased from $15 to $19 last season, Bright said.

"If the next television contract is not as good as this one, we are going to have to make some changes in what we pay players," Bright said.

The current television contract expires after the 1986 season.

Ticket prices represent about 45 percent of the team's gross revenue, Bright said.

"It would be nice if people were willing to pay $100 a game to go. But I don't think they would be willing," he said.

Montana's fantastic arm incidental

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — People think Joe Montana's fantastic arm keeps those breathtaking passes aloft, but football physicists know it's really Bernoulli's principle of aerodynamics.

At least, that's what about 100 people learned Sunday at San Francisco's Exploratorium when they showed up for a "physics of football" lecture.

Caltech physicist Tom Humphrey used a hair dryer, a pinpong ball and a bicycle wheel to demonstrate what the San Francisco 49ers must do to beat the Miami Dolphins in Super Bowl XIX.

The pingpong ball's dance on the hair dryer's airstream demonstrates Bernoulli's principle of aerodynamics — which explains why Montana's passes escape interception, he said.

The stream of air under a moving football gives it lift, all the way to the receiver. Montana also ought to strive for spiral passes, Humphrey suggested, as he showed that a bicycle wheel is more stable when spinning than at rest.

"The bicycle wheel and the football are just two different kinds of gyroscopes," Humphrey said. "The football rotates in the direction of the force. A ball going end-over-end has four times the drag of a ball spinning around."

For those impressed by statistics, Humphrey offered these: football players tackle each other with a force of 2,000 pounds; they kick the ball with a force of 300 pounds; and they pass with a force of 35 pounds.

The football is "the most unusually shaped projectile used in any sport," Humphrey remarked. "There are a lot of forces acting on a football. Ellipsodial rotation. Lift. Drag.

"Basically," he concluded, "you really can't expect a football to do anything you expect it to do."

The Mustangs don't have another game until the Texas Christian Horned Frogs come calling at noon next Saturday. The game will be televised regionally over the Raycom Network.

The Horned Frogs served notice they will be troublesome by ripping Baylor 84-68 on Saturday in Daniel Meyer Coliseum at Fort Worth.

Also on Sunday, Texas Tech kept in good position in the SWC race with a 78-54 rout of the Rice Owls in Lubbock.

Arkansas took over undisputed possession of second place with a 64-58 victory over the Texas Longhorns. The Razorbacks are 3-1.

The Houston Cougars, who are 2-1 in league play, fell to DePaul 69-58 on Saturday in a nationally televised game that would have helped polish the SWC's national image.

Houston Coach Guy Lewis said the Cougars were killed on the boards by the Blue Demons who outrebounded them 45-30.

"Our inside people didn't play ver strong and tough and their's did," Lewis said.

Kosar undecided on grid future

From Wire Reports

FOOTBALL—Miami University Quarterback Bernie Kosar, disputing a television claim that he will graduate early so he can be eligible for the NFL draft, says he has not decided on his "immediate future in football." WTVJ reported Sunday that Kosar, a redshirt sophomore who threw for 3,642 yards and 25 touchdowns last season and broke a series of school records, planned to declare his eligibility two weeks before the draft, which will be held April 30. "We confirmed it through several sources," said WTVJ sports producer Don Mariutto. "He's not leaving school. He's going to stay in school. But he's going to declare himself eligible for the NFL draft."...

Dr. Jerome "Brud" Holland an All-American end with Cornell and a member of the National Football Foundation's Collegiate Hall of Fame, died Sunday after a long illness. He was 69. He was also national chairman of the American Red Cross, a former ambassador to Sweden and the first black member of the board of the New York Stock Exchange.

Holland, who died at New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center of an undisclosed illness, was ambassador to Sweden from 1970 to 1972, when he joined the exchange's board. He was president of Hampton Institute in Hampton, Va., from 1960 to 1970 and president of Delaware State College in Dover, Del., from 1953 to 1960...

TENNIS—Only 17-year-old Manuela Maleeva blocks Martina Navratilova's seventh Washington championship and 100th career singles victory tonight in the Washington Virginia Slims finals. Seeded fourth here, Maleeva reached the finals after beating Kim Schaefer, Camille Benjamin, Kathy Jordan and Kathy Rinaldi. Navratilova, despite a much harder route to the finals, has not dropped a set in beating Eleni Rossides, Carling Bassett and seeded players Helena Sukova and Zina Garrison. Sunday, Maleeva captured a first-set tiebreaker 9-7 to oust Rinaldi 7-6, 6-1. Navratilova needed just 48 minutes to dispatch Garrison 6-1, 6-2...

BASKETBALL—Kansas State Coach Jack Hartman remained in satisfactory condition after undergoing quadruple coronary artery bypass surgery. The 59-year-old coach experienced severe chest pains at his Manhattan home late Saturday, just hours after his team lost a 56-55 contest to 20th-ranked Oregon State. BASEBALL— Just as in the major leagues last fall, the Puerto Rican Winter League is faced with a strike by umpires. But officials says the league playoffs will begin as planned Friday. The dispute centers around Vic Power, a former first baseman for the New York Yankees and Kansas City A's, was suspended for the season's final week and fined $1,000 after punching umpire John Higgins. Umpires were outraged when Power, the manager of the Caguas franchise, was declared eligible for the playoffs this week. All 15 league umpires, including Higgins and three other Americans, went on strike last Friday. But on Sunday, the league directors declared the regular umpires suspended for the season for violation of their contracts. Three Puerto Rican umpires subsequently declared they would participate in the playoffs. League President Alcides Oquendo said the league was considering legal action against the striking umpires, including Pam Postema, the first female umpire in Puerto Rico history...

Knight rips cheaters

CHICAGO (AP) — Fiery Indiana basketball Coach Bobby Knight says college coaches who lure players with illegal financial deals should be fired and permanently banned by the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

Offending colleges should be stripped of revenue by having two games removed from their home schedule, Knight said in Sunday's editions of the Chicago Tribune.

He said college presidents would be alarmed to know "some basketball players are being offered more money to attend college than the professors who teach at the schools they attend." Knight threatened to name offending schools to NCAA officials.

"To me, these $50,000 to $100,000 financial packages are nauseating," Knight said.

The payoffs come in the form of summer jobs, jobs for family members and cash payments, according to Knight.

Players who accept such payoffs should be declared permanently ineligible unless they agree to talk about the offending school, Knight said. And college coaches should start reporting high school coaches who accept payments for peddling their star players, he said.

The executive director of the NCAA, Walter Byers, recently estimated that 30 percent of Division I schools violate recruiting rules.

Knight refused to single out schools or individuals, but said he is sure his sources provided him with correct information. Knight said his sources include players he has recruited, other coaches and former Indiana players who have played professional basketball.

The owner of this mailbox at 5120 Ric, Lloyd Christmas, may have had more stable mail delivery in mind when he disguised his mailbox as a barn.

Although he may not have a heart, this man of metal does have a mailbox with which he daily greets carriers at the Armando Trejo residence at 1703 S. Lorraine Street.

More commonly found in the outlying rural routes, this milkcan-turned-mailbox adorns the curb in front of a home at 4407 Tanner.

Creative correspondents

Individuality of expression is the beginning and end of all art — Proverbs in Prose.

Although some may hesitate to call them art, the ends that many Midlanders will go to in creating a mailbox "all their own" leaves no room for doubt that individuality of expression is alive and well along the area's postal routes.

"There are some real weird ones along the rural routes," said Stan Sartain, customer service director for the U.S. Postal Service. "One person took a commode, filled it with dirt and cemented it to a concrete slab. Then they stuck a pole in it with a mailbox mounted to it."

Other off-the-wall creations that caught Sartain's eye have been constructed from old hand plows, anchors, chains and "whatever they can find".

One mailbox, "somewhere near Robert Lee High School" had it's own approach to mail-pickup.

"It was mounted on a 10 to 12 foot pole and had 'air mail' on the side in big red, white and blue letters," said Sartain. "It was, of course, purely decorative. There was a regular mailbox underneath it."

Other budding artists have chosen to blend in with the environment.

"There is one mailbox in between Midland and Rankin that is made out of a heavy metal pipe, 8 inches to 10 inches in diameter. It has a back welded on to it and a lid attached in front," said Sartain. "We just deliver the mail into the pipe."

Still othere have placed the standard galvanized boxes on miniature oil wells and windmills.

For the city dweller, urban problems sometimes determine the style.

"There is a black mailbox at one business that has a locking compartment. When the mailman drops the mail into the slot, it falls into the compartment and can only be reached by opening with a key.

Although there are still many of the creative mailboxes around, their days are numbered.

"Theft is a major problem today," said Sartain. "That's the reason why you see neighborhood box units (NBU's) in the newer areas."

NBUs, the clustered, grey metal boxes that sit like miniature condominiums atop a single pole are rapidly replacing the individual mailbox.

The NBUs popularity with the Postal Service is understandable. They save money.

"It is estimated that door-to-door delivery costs about $90 per year, per door," said Sartain. "For rural curbside delivery it runs $60 per box annually and for the NBUs, only $40."

The figures are computed by examining man-hours and gasoline costs, said Sartain.

"We have around 10,000 customers that are served by NBUs in Midland," said Sartain. "We still have plenty of the curbside boxes and door delivery, but if they are requested in the older areas, they will be installed."

An entire block of residents must agree to the installation before it will happen, said Sartain.

But increasing problems with mail theft in Midland are changing a lot of people's minds."

But meanwhile, the creative correspondents continue to adorn the unassuming boxes in the trappings of their own design — to a point.

Even the mailbox Berninis must adhere to certain requirements of the U.S. Postal Service.

"Curbside mailboxes must be at least 36 inches in heighth and no more than 42 inches," said Sartain. "They must be no more than four inches behind the curb and must have a flag. If there is no flag, then the mailman will not know to stop for mail pickup."

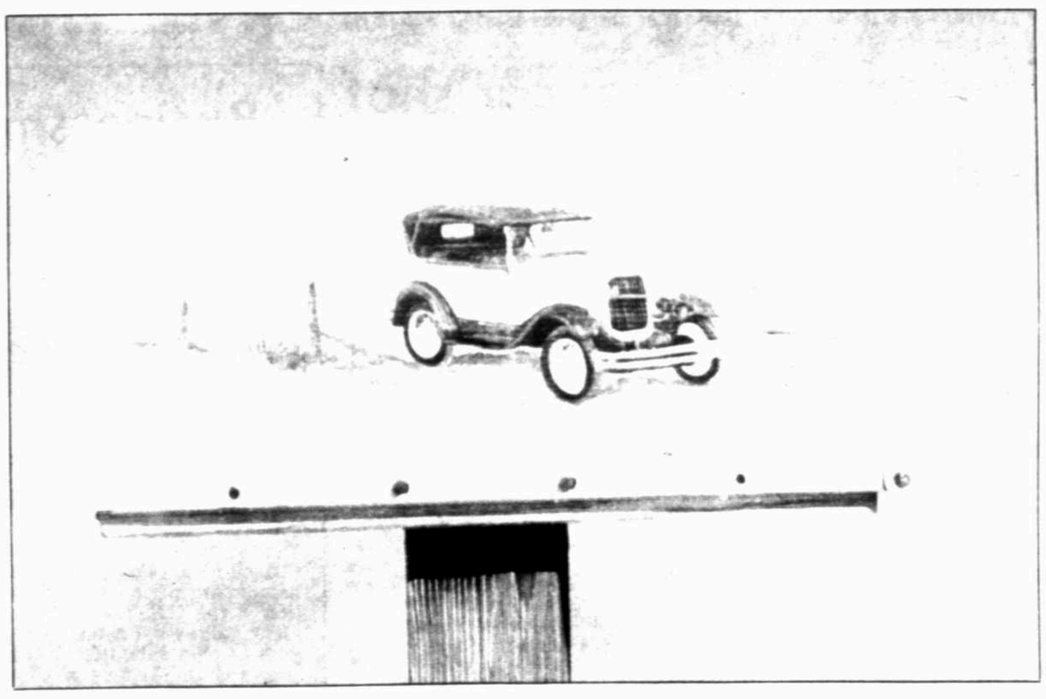

"It is highly-suggested but not required to have the name and address on the right side of the box," he added. "Also, it is understood that the box should be the standard approved rural-type mailbox. It must be weatherproof."

Sartain said that the requirements are necessary to facilitate mail delivery.

"If the mailbox is too high, then the deliverer can't look inside to see if there is any mail to be picked up," he said. "If they are too low, then he must get out of the truck to place mail in."

But no limitations are placed on creativity.

"We don't care what it looks like," said Sartain. "As long as it meets the requirements."

Bob Bolin, No. 7 Tattenham Corner, painted an antique auto on his mailbox to match the rusting box itself.

Two discerning eyes greet the mailman at 1001 W. Griffin, as though keeping watch for its occupants.

Fear runs bit deeper at Fort Worth church dead women attended

FORT WORTH (AP) — The fear that has gripped Fort Worth after the disappearances of at least nine women since September runs a bit deeper in the third-floor classroom that is home to Broadway Baptist Church's singles group each Sunday.

Kathryn Jackson, a 32-year-old schoolteacher, was a regular at the group — until her murder.

"When you sit there and there is an empty chair, it's very hard," Britton Wood, a church member who works with the singles group, said Sunday. "There is a general anxiety in the group right now. When someone who sat next to you isn't here, and there isn't any reason, you wonder why."

Of the nine unsolved murders or disappearances targeted in an intensive police probe, three were members of Broadway Baptist, one of the oldest and largest churches in Fort Worth, and a fourth had attended services with a friend.

While the faithful at Broadway Baptist steadfastly believe their church of 2,500 people has no connection to the deaths, police are checking the church's membership list, but say it's only a routine part of the investigation.

On Sunday, after local news reports of the case keyed to the church membership of three of the women, church officials and members stood ready to defend their congregation.

"The emotion has been more visible. There have been tears shed together," said Malcolm Edwards, the church's administrator. "But there's no way there's a link to the church. None of the three knew each other, two didn't attend. It's something we think the police should look at, but not the media."

No mention of the case was made during the service Sunday, although the congregation said one prayer regarding the "evil (that) lurks in the shawdows of our city."

"The only impact that this has had on our church is that the grief is much deeper because there are more unanswered questions," said associate pastor Gene Thompson. "There is a deeper shock element because of this case."

Thompson presided Saturday at the burial of the latest victim, Lisa Lyn Griffin, 20, a church member. The church's membership roster also included Regina Suzanne Grover, 21, whose body was found Dec. 23. Angela Ewert, 21, who had attended the church at times with a friend, disappeared the night of Dec. 10.

The victims — all single and ranging in age from 15 to 34 — had little in common. Five disappeared within a six-mile radius of each other on the city's southwest side and form the core of the investigation. None knew each other — including the three Broadway members.

"We don't put much stock in the possibility that the church is the link," said Karen Campbell, a member.

Still, many fear the unknown.

"People are afraid," said Tricia Hamilton, 15. "Our school is having a self-defense class, and when I go out, I have to go out with two or more people."

Soil needs testing before crops planted

EARNEST C. KIKER

Soil testing should be one of the first things considered before planting next year's crops.

The Extension Service soil testing program can guide producers in maintaining a soil fertility program and provides information to help make management decisions.

Proper sampling tools will make the job easier. Suitable tools include a soil sample probe, sharp-shooter shovel and a plastic bucket. The probe is best suited for sampling the sandy soils on the High Plains. If a probe isn't available or moisture conditions make clay loam soils stick in the probe, a sharp-shooter can be used.

The goal of field sampling is to provide a measure of average soil fertility in the field.

The first step in sound soil sampling is to subdivide the field, based on the overall appearance of the land and any known differences in past crop production. This gives the producer an opportunity to sample problem sites separately so that site-specific fertility problems can be identified and the "average" fertility of the field won't be biased.

Each sample submitted for chemical analysis should represent a composit of 10 to 15 individual samplings, randomly taken, within a given area. For each individual sample, the same amount of soil should be taken to eliminate bias.

If the past crop was bed planted, the best sample will come from half way down the bed. If last's year's fertilizer was banded, try to avoid sampling from the band.

Prior to taking a sample, scrape the litter from the surface. Then push the probe into the soil to the depth of plowing, which will be six to eight inches. To use a sharp-shooter, dig a V-shaped hole and take a half-inch slice of soil from the smooth side of the hole.

While taking samples, it is a good idea to note any soil compaction or the occurrence of plow pans.

Subsamples should be placed into a clean plastic bucket. After all subsamples have been taken for a given area mix them thoroughly. Take about a pint of this composite mixture for chemical analysis by the soil testing laboratory.

Soil sample bags, which hold the proper amount for testing, and soil sample information sheets, which itemize details about the field and sample needed for interpretation of the chemical analysis, are availabe at our office.

The information sheets should be filled in as completely as possible. Each soil sample should be marked with the producer's name and sample number, which should correspond to the number on the information sheet. The analysis desired should be marked on the sample, and the proper fee included.

No charges filed following shooting death of Odessan

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — No charges had been filed early today following the Saturday morning shooting death of an Odessa woman, according to police reports.

Shirley Ann Williamson, 23, was found shot to death at her home about 2:35 a.m. Saturday. Her husband, Adwin Eric Williamson, 26, was found at a neighbor's with a gunshot wound in the right shoulder, according to reports.

Officers responded to reports of a gunshot victim and found Ms. Williamson lying on the bed of the home located at 1510 N. Adams, Apt. E. She was pronounced dead at 5:10 a.m. Saturday by Justice of the Peace Virgil Lumpee, who ordered an autopsy.

Information gathered in the investigation indicated Ms. Williamson had fired through the bathroom door first, wounding her husband, before shooting herself with a Smith & Wesson .357-caliber Magnum once in the chest.

"Evidence found at the scene tends to support the information, however the offense is still under investigation," according to the release issued today.

Williamson was admitted to Medical Center Hospital. He was treated and released later Saturday.

Unmanned patrol car shot with .357-caliber pistol

From Staff Reports

An unoccupied Midland Police Department marked patrol car was shot seven times during the weekend with what police believe to have been a .357-caliber pistol, according to reports.

Patrol Officer Ricky Benton Saturday discovered the bullet holes in the car, which had been parked in front of his residence at 4500 Wilshire Blvd. Police said they think the incident occurred sometime Friday night while he was away from his residence. Six bullet holes were found in the body of the car and one tire was shot out.

Four door windows at the Paper Clip, 1201 Rankin Highway, were shot out early this morning with what is believed to be a small caliber pistol or rifle, according to police reports. Two flattened slugs were found on the carpet and a round one went through the glass and into an inside wall. Police believe the shots were fired from the street because there were no footprints in the snow around the store.

Damage was placed at $500.

A pickup was reported stolen from the parking lot of Mr. Gatti's, 3205 W. Cuthbert, Friday evening, according to complaints filed with police during the weekend.

Sergio Almeraz, 3100 Fairgrounds Road, Space 251, told police he had parked his 1979 black and burgundy Chevrolet Silverado at the pizza restaurant about 6 p.m. When he came back out two hours later, it was gone.

More than $400 in tools were reported stolen Sunday from the garage of the Charles Ratcliff residence, 3009 Goddard Place. Reports indicate entry was gained through an open door between 10 a.m. and noon. Taken were a tool box containing tools valued at $300, a $40 circular saw, $50 drill and $25 worth of electrical tools.

Businessman will seek at-large council seat

Thomas

A.A. Thomas, 56, of 4408 Meadowlark Lane, has announced he will be seeking a seat on the Midland City Council.

Filing will begin in February and the election will be April 6.

Thomas, who served on the City Council from 1969-73, said he will be running for an at-large position if the U.S. Justice Department approves a single-member district plan submitted by Midland and the League of United Latin American Citizens.

Thomas listed two reasons for seeking a council position: taxes and crime.

"Our taxes have gone completely out of reason," he said. The last year he was on the council, the budget was $11,588,923. This year, he said, that figure has jumped five times to $61,035,147.

The population hasn't increased proportionately, Thomas said. Midland County's population in 1973 was 65,000 compared to 103,000 today.

Drug usage and home burglaries concern Thomas, who has lived in Midland 29 years. "I don't know what can be done about it. We need to do something to cope with it. We need to find out what the police department does need — whether it's more officers or equipment or training."

Prior to his two terms on the council, Thomas served on the Planning and Zoning Commission 1967-68.

He owned a welding supply business and now is involved in investing and the oil business.

"A lot of people have asked me to run for council again. I enjoyed it and got a lot out of it," he said.

Frank Cahoon, a former councilman, is serving as Thomas's campaign manager; Leon Shrader is the treasurer.

Montford offers capital murder bill

From Staff Reports

AUSTIN — Legislation to expand the capital murder statutes to cover the killing of a child or elderly person has been introduced by Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock.

SB 99 would expand the death penalty law to make it applicable when the victim is "an individual younger than 15 years of age or older than 64 years of age."

The bill is proposed to take effect Sept. 1, 1985.

At present, the death penalty applies in instances of the murder of a peace officer or fireman; to murders committed in the course of other crimes, or for pay; and to murders committed during escape or attempted escape from a penal institution.

Midland man held in drug bust

From Staff Reports

A 57-year-old Midland man was in jail this morning on felony charges of possession of drugs, and a 35-year-old Big Spring woman was arrested Friday night at the same time for unlawfully carrying a weapon, according to police.

Narcotics officers, after serving a search warrant on a residence in the 100 block of North Tyler Street, arrested the man after confiscating 13 Prelude tablets.

The woman, who was arrested at the scene, was charged with unlawful carrying of a weapon after police found a gun in a car parked at the residence.

The names are being withheld until formal arraignment, which is expected to be today.

Kidnapped children found

RICHLAND HILLS (AP) — They were dirty, tired and hungry, but 6-year-old Sammy Franco and his 2-year-old sister Teresa had smiles a mile wide when they were reunited with their parents after being kidnapped for three days.

"I give God all the glory — he was the one who brought them home safe," Susanne Franco said Sunday as she bounced her son on her knee at the Richland Hills police station.

The children were found unharmed Sunday afternoon in a red compact car in north Fort Worth, said Richland Hills police Chief Barbara Childress. Police also found a sawed-off shotgun in the car.

PLANTS IN THE HOME

Perennial flowers readily grown from seed

By ELVIN McDONALD

The eternal appeal of sturdy perennial flowers is that they sprout up from the ground year after year. Both common and rare beauties can be puchased as established plants, for spring planting and first blooms in the same growing season.

There are also perennial flowers that can be readily started from seeds indoors in winter or earliest spring, then transplanted outdoors for first blooms in the garden by the end of the growing season. The next year they'll return with amazing vigor and put on an even better show.

The best example I know of such a perennial flower is the candy lily, a hardy member of the Iris Family known botanically as Pardancanda. It is a complex hybrid which includes the old reliable blackberry lily or Belamcanda.

I can think of lots of reasons to grow candy lilies from seeds. For one thing, you probably can't buy started plants locally. For another the round black seeds, about the size of BB shot, are easily handled. Poke one a quarter to half inch deep in each peat pot or Jiffy-7 pellet. At 70F. seedlings emerge as tiny iris leaf fans within two weeks and are easily managed in a sunny window until planting-out time.

Candy lillies

A THIRD REASON to grow candy lilies from seeds is that flowering begins in midsummer and continues until frost in great abundance. There is such profusion a clump or bed will be daily covered by fresh blossoms in an array of colors and combinations not seen in any other garden flower.

Some other hardy perennial flowers you can grow from seed to bloom in a season — and then look forward to many happy returns for almost no effort — include Anaphalis (an everlasting), Aster or Michaelmas daisy, Catananche or cupid's-dart, most kinds of Chrysanthemum, Coreopsis, Delphinium, Dianthus, Gaillardia, Geum, Gypsophila, Hibiscus, Physalis (Chinese lantern), Platycodon, Salvia, Silene and Stokesia.

There are also potentially glorious hardy lilies that are easy and quick from seeds: If started indoors in ideal conditions the winter before, seedlings of species or hybrids of Lilium formosanum, regale, tenuifolium, longiflora and centiflolium may give some bloom the first summer. They'll return from bulbs, bigger and better each succeeding year.

YOU'LL FIND some of these perennial flower seeds in local racks but mostly they must be ordered from catalogs. The candy lilies are an exclusive from the Geo. W. Park Seed Co., Greenwood, S.C. 29647 (free catalog).

Q. How can I get rid of mealybugs from a nephthytis?

A. Wipe out every trace using cotton swabs dipped in alcohol. Repeat every four to five days. Since nephthytis has many folds and crevices, total control of mealybugs can be difficult, the same as on related dieffenbachia or dumbcane. Persistence and thoroughness will eventually win out, however. Pyrethrin sprays are also effective against mealybugs on nephthytis.

Q. What causes the leaves on my recently purchased dieffenbachia to be unnaturally flecked or misted white or yellowish?

A. Red spider-mites, usually too small to be observed without help from a magnifying glass. Shake one or two discolored leaves over a sheet of white paper; if variously colored flecks fall to the surface and soon begin to move about, you'll know that spider-mites are indeed the problem. Immediately take the plant to kitchen sink or the bathtub and wash every leaf well, top and bottom, using lukewarm water and a little dishwashing detergent, preferably Ivory. Repeat this treatment every three or four days for about a month and you will have a radiantly healthy, bug-free dieffenbachia.

Neither nephthytis nor dieffenbachia is a new indoor plant but both are enjoying a surge of popularity, thanks to tissue culturing, a high-tech approach to propagation that brings to the marketplace vastly improved cultivars in record time.

Q. Last fall I brought in many pots of geraniums from the garden and cut them back uniformly to 5 inches. Now these stems have grown tall and spindly, with mostly dead leaves toward the bottom and green ones at top, no blooms. Are they worth keeping?

A. Yes, cut back again as before. You may turn the best top parts removed into tip cuttings (set each to root in a moistened Jiffy-7 peat pellet). Geraniums that bloom outdoors all through the summer seldom make quality plants for winter window gardens. Usually it's best to keep them cool and on the dry side, with no fertilizer. After this lean season they'll do well again when planted outdoors.

All the answers to "What Makes Geraniums Bloom?" are in my newest set of notebook sheets, along with diagrams for bonsai and penjing and the secrets for growing trailing African violets. For your set send $2 with a request for Bulletins 90-91 to Elvin McDonald Reader Service, Box R, Niagara Falls, N.Y. 14305.

Staying in love more work than Hollywood's portrayal

Hearst News Service

Falling in love may be as easy as falling off a log, but staying in love takes a lot more effort.

Psychologist George Parks prefers to call the instant attraction "falling in lust." And that, he says, "is a wonderful catalyst for beginning a relationship, but it's a little like eating M&Ms as a steady diet. You get this dramatic sugar rush, and then the sugar blues."

Parks, a love expert who earned his doctorate in clinical psychology by studying love, now concludes that what makes a relationship work is shedding the old myths about "love" — that love is something that just happens, a matter of fate and destiny; that only one person in the world is right for you, and that you love only one person at a time.

Those ideas have been around for centuries in literature, Parks observes, and were embodied in the 1950s Rock Hudson-Doris Day films in which "they fall in love instantly, and then an obstacle arises. The obstacle makes their passion greater, but at some point the obstacle magically disappears and they go live happily ever after."

But what happens after the film ends is the beginning of love's critical test, the psychologist believes. He thinks that true love — the eagerly sought satisfying relationship — doesn't really come until the couple gets through the "rough spots" that come from within.

MOST OF US have within us natural obstacles to good relationships, he explains.

"We're all programmed as children. The most loving people, as children, had the perfect mix of affection and encouragement to be independent. But most of us, I suspect, had parents who were fallible human beings who loved us but occasionally used love to manipulate."

The most unfortunate, though, "are those who were deprived of love — ignored, neglected, physically or verbally abused, raised in rigid environments where they were told exactly what they were supposed to be and loved chaotically, if at all."

Parks believes the old hurts begin to surface after the initial "lust at first sight" physical attraction wears off.

"Suppose I was hurt by a very critical father?" he asks, rhetorically. "I'd keep testing, seeking approval, and eventually I'd elicit some real criticism. Most people respond with the reciprocal response. Anger, withdrawal, jealousy are almost always cries for love, cries for help. But the response they're most likely to get is 'Why are you being such a jerk?'

"One of the most difficult things to do is to open our hearts to our partners' pain, disappointment and anger, to allow them to express themselves and love them unconditionally. If you can do that, it'll get better. But we're all basically selfish, and have problems letting go of our focus on personal satisfaction so we can empathize."

PARKS ADVISES lovers that "the Golden Rule still makes a lot of sense," in sharing, accepting and working through each others' imperfections. But these problems are seldom examined when the passion goes out of a relationship.

"I have this car battery theory about passion. One day the car doesn't start, and it's probably because the battery cables are corroded. What the people need to do is open the hood and clean the terminals, but they won't do it. They'll paint the car, they'll do everything except lift the hood, so the car just sits in the driveway. Eventually, they'll get another car. When there are problems, you need to dialogue deeply about them. But it's often so difficult people won't do it."

Parks also fears that passion itself may have been oversold.

"You're not going to have it all the time," he explains. "We're just not wired like that."

Along with expectations that are overhyped by the "happily-ever-after" myths, Parks believes that lack of self-sufficiency is a serious shoal that threatens the course of love.

"Love can't be a substitute for your own self-sufficiency, your own self-esteem. You can't rely on your partner to make you happy."

YET ANOTHER obstacle to love — the fear of commitment — seems to be on the wane, Parks believes. He views it as a natural progression in the social changes of the past several decades.

DEAR ABBY

Dad's empty promises leave children with broken hearts

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a divorced woman, raising three children under 15, which is not easy, but that's another letter.

This is about a problem I've had since my divorce four years ago. My ex-husband, who lives on the West Coast, has promised our children many wonderful gifts for Christmas — none of which he has ever delivered.

He has called them in October promising to send plane tickets so they could spend Christmas with him! None came, of course. Every year he asks them what they want for their birthdays. They've told him, and received nothing.

I have never talked against him because I think it's important for children to respect their father, but it's growing more difficult to make excuses for him when he keeps disappointing them year after year. His broken promises are breaking their hearts. And mine, too.

If you print this, he may realize how we feel. — IN PIECES IN NEW YORK

DEAR IN PIECES: Why protect him with excuses? Your children will soon conclude (if they haven't already) that their father's word doesn't mean anything.

Facing reality prepares children to live in the real world. Though it's heartbreaking now, the pain will diminish when they learn to expect nothing from their phony father.

DEAR ABBY: When you get an invitation that reads, "Join us for some Christmas cheer from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m.," what is that supposed to mean? Should you arrive at 6 p.m. and stay until 9? Or does it mean you can arrive anytime after 6 p.m. but you're not supposed to stay after 9 p.m.?

My husband says it means you can arrive anywhere between 6 and 9 but that doesn't make any sense because if you arrive at 8:55 p.m. you certainly wouldn't want to leave at 9.

Also, what is "Christmas cheer"? A cocktail party with hors d'oeuvres? Or should you expect enough in the way of refreshments to call it a meal? Don't say, "Call the hostess and/or the host and ask." That would be tacky. Yet it would help a lot to know in advance what to expect.

While I'm on the subject, when someone calls on the phone and invites you to a party, and you ask, "How should I dress?" I always get a vague answer like "Oh, just wear anything." What is that supposed to mean? — HOLIDAY SEASON MYSTERIES

DEAR MYSTERIES: A 6-to-9 p.m. invitation for "Christmas cheer" means drop in anytime between 6 and 9 for a "drink" and snacks — no dinner.

And when you're told to wear "just anything," it means gentlemen should wear jackets and ties and the ladies should dress up a little, but it's not necessary to go to the vault for the family jewels.

Problems? What's bugging you? Unload on Abby. P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Scholarship Ball planned

The Mexican-American Professional Association is sponsoring its First Scholarship Ball from 8 p.m.-2 a.m. on Feb. 9 at the atrium of ClayDesta Plaza.

The Ball, planned to be an annual event, will benefit graduating seniors from Midland's two high schools.

The formal event is $60 per couple and will include a midnight breakfast, four complimentary drinks and a cash bar. Entertainment for the ball will be the band "Banda Macho."

MAPA was formed after the idea originated from the Hispanic Women's State Conference in Midland in 1982. The original idea was to form a Mexican-American professional women's group because none existed in the city.

The idea was later renewed after a group of Mexican-American Professional participated in the Hispanic Occupations Night for high school students, sponsored by the Bilingual Education Department.

The first unofficial MAPA meeting was held in May 1984 with 60 people in attendance. The purpose of the group is to unite Mexican-American Professionals to promote its members' highest interests.

Corina Hernandez is president of the organization. Other officers are Isabel Rey, vice president; Lydia Evaro Torres, secretary; Jesse Reyes, treasurer; and Richard Alvarado, legal advisor. Board members are Ciro Sanchez, Oralia Corrales, Carmen Lopez, Alfred Rey, Polo Cervantes and Maria Mata.

Dr. John Martinez of Midland Independent School District is chairman of the dance committee.

Invitation information is available by contacting Corina Hernandez, 697-7545.

Midland Branch AAUW to meet Thursday

Liz O'Daniel

The Midland Branch of the American Association of University Women will meet from 7-10 p.m. Thursday at the Girl Scout Center, 901 W. Dengar, for a program on "Women — Self Protection."

Speakers will be Betty Dickerson from the Rape Crisis Center, and Liz O'Daniel, counselor, with Permian Basin Center for Battered Women. They will discuss ways women can lessen the chances of becoming victims of physical attack.

In 1984 the Rape Crisis Center handled 127 cases of reported rape in Midland, as well as more than 300 calls on its telephone hotline. The Center for Battered Women provided shelter for more than 500 women and children during the same period.

Both agencies offer extended services to victims of assault, and each has a 24-hour hotline and trained counselors.

The Rape Crisis Center has counselors who will escort persons to the hospital, law enforcement agency, court proceedings and follow-up medical care. Their programs "Speak Up, Say No" for children kindergarten through second grade, "For Pete's Sake, Tell" for grades three and four, and "No More Secrets" for grades five and six are available to schools, businesses, civic organizations and churches.

The Center for Battered Women provides in-house counseling for women and their children, offering ways to help recover from the trauma and new ways to deal with their lives.

AAUW members and interested women are invited to attend. For more information call 682-9648.

Any woman with a baccalaureate degree from an accredited college is eligible for membership in AAUW. For membership information call 697-3685.

Dollar climbs, gold mixed

LONDON (AP) — The dollar marched to record levels against the British pound and a seven-year high against the Swiss franc today, prompting action by the Bank of England to stem sterling's fall. Gold rose in Hong Kong but was down in Europe.

The American currency hit its highest point against the Japanese yen since November 1982.

The British pound, which also is being weakened by falling oil prices that cut Britain's North Sea revenue, hit $1.10 early today in Hong Kong trading before recovering to $1.11.

But at midmorning in London, the Bank of England stepped in to announce reimposition of its minimum lending rate, suspended in August 1981. It set the rate at 12 percent, a move that forced British banks to start raising their base lending rates by 1¼ points to the same level.

"This government ... will take whatever action is necessary to prevent the pound from falling to levels where inflationary forces are stronger again," declared Chancellor of the Exchequer Nigel Lawson.

Shortly after the central bank acted, the pound recovered to $1.1305, compared with $1.1305 at the end of trade in London Friday.

The pound's plunge toward parity with the dollar has assumed the proportions of a national crisis in Britain, with the opposition Labor Party clamoring for blocking action by the Treasury.

The dollar, meanwhile, rose in Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins. It closed at 254.55 yen, compared with Friday's 253.60. Later, in London, it was quoted at 254.70 yen.

Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Friday:

–3.1655 West German marks, up from 3.1530.

–2.6580 Swiss francs, up from 2.6410.

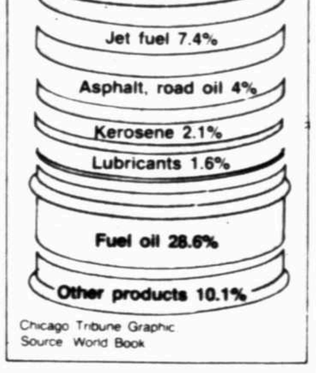

–9.6975 French francs, up from 9.6455.

–3.5735 Dutch guilders, up from 3.5570.

–1.3214 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3213.

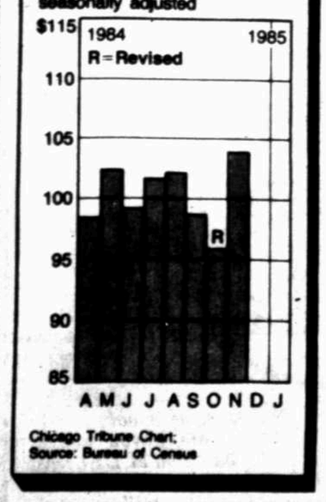

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $301.25 a troy ounce, compared with late Friday's $304.25.

Analyst says pump prices at five-year low

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gasoline has dipped to its lowest price in five years, and an industry analyst says the average price for all grades of the fuel could dip another 21 cents to 94 cents a gallon.

The cheapest grade of gasoline, leaded self-serve regular, hit $1.024 last week for the first time since December 1979, when it was $1.013, petroleum industry analyst Dan Lundberg said Sunday.

"Gasoline pump prices dipped for the eighth consecutive week since last October," Lundberg said.

Prices at the pump dropped 5 cents a gallon over the past four months, and at least a 2-cent drop in retail prices is a near certainty by the end of January because that decrease has already occurred in wholesale gas prices, he said.

The presence of major companies among the cost-cutters in all regions is so extraordinary, Lundberg said, it forced him to abandon his long-standing policy of not naming specific companies.

"I've always been very chary about appearing to say what the major oil companies are doing, but the fact there are so many shows the general nature of decline," he said.

"This is not some caprice, some move of a single company on a volume-building adventure," he said. "This is a general decline, where in all five principal regions of the country different oil companies have found themselves in the leading position as to cutting price."

On the East Coast, Phillips is the lowest marketer with an average price for self-serve, regular leaded of 99.5 cents per gallon, he said.

In the Midwest, Chevron is the lowest at $1.001, while in the Southwest Conoco has the lowest average price at 98.9 cents for regular, self-serve leaded gasoline, he said.

"Texaco in the Rocky Mountains is the most aggresssive cost cutter" with a 97.7 cents average price, he said.

In the West, Arco is selling unleaded regular for $1.029. Lundberg noted that taxes on gasoline are higher in California than in the rest of the country.

The national averages for self-serve prices are: regular leaded, $1.024; regular unleaded, 1.104; premium unleaded, $1.248; preminum leaded, $1.339. Lundberg estimates about 74 percent of all stations are now self-service.

The drop in pump prices mirros a downward slide in crude oil spot market prices, spawned by mavericks smashing the illusion of scarcity on which OPEC has inflated oil prices since 1973, he said.

Competition between member nations of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries and outsiders could push crude oil prices on that market from $27 per barrel for high-grade crude to $20 a barrel and lower, he says.

A further drop of $2 a barrel in the spot market price for oil would exert a further 3 cent drop at retail levels, and as much as a 21 cent decrease if the price does fall to $20 a barrel, he said.

PREPARING YOUR INCOME TAX

Taxpayers get new increases this year

EDITOR'S NOTE: This first article in a series of five on preparing 1984 income tax returns covers changes from last year.

By JIM LUTHER
AP Tax Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most Americans will find their federal tax bills a little smaller when they file returns this year but several selected tax increases will be felt for the first time.

Many Social Security recipients will have to pay tax on their pensions. Non-prescription drugs are no longer deductible. If your earnings rose sharply in 1984, it will be more difficult to reduce your taxes by "income averaging." And tighter rules restrict tax benefits for cars, computers and other equipment whose use is divided between business and personal use.

Before the year is over, the Internal Revenue Service expects to receive 101.4 million individual returns, up from 96.9 million last year. The great majority of those will be filed before the April 15 deadline and perhaps 80 percent of them will produce refunds.

The final stage of the individual tax-rate reductions enacted in 1981 took effect last year but you won't have to do anything to take advantage of them when you file your return. The changes, averaging about 5 percent below 1983 rates, already are built into the tax tables and tax-rate schedules from which you calculate how much you owe.

Here are some of the other major changes affecting individuals and couples:

SOCIAL SECURITY: As part of the plan to shore up the pension system, Congress voted to tax some of the Social Security checks received by upper- and middle-income Americans. In general, up to half of Social Security is taxable if total income exceeds $25,000 for a single person or $32,000 for a couple filing a joint return.

MEDICAL EXPENSES: Medical and dental expenses exceeding 5 percent of your adjusted gross income may be deducted if you itemize deductions. This filing season, there are two changes: Non-prescription drugs may no longer be deducted; only prescriptions and insulin qualify. Second, you may deduct up to $50 a night for lodging expenses incurred while being treated in an out-of-town hospital or clinic.

INCOME AVERAGING: A person whose income fluctuates sharply from one year to the next, such as a farmer or writer, may save on taxes by averaging the successful year against poorer years. Now, it is harder to do. To qualify, your 1984 earnings must have been at least 40 percent above the average of 1981-1983. See Schedule G for details.

CONTRIBUTIONS: If you don't itemize deductions, you still may take a write-off for part of the money you give to charity. For 1984, the maximum is $75.

RETIREMENT ACCOUNTS: Last year, you could delay making your 1983 deposit to an Individual Retirement Account until you actually filed your tax return; for some people, that meant as late as Aug. 15. The new law says you have only until April 15 to make your 1984 IRA contribution — regardless of when you file your return.

DIESEL: The federal tax on diesel went up to 15 cents a gallon last Aug. 1. But the 6-cent increase is aimed at big trucks, not at cars or small trucks. So if on Jan. 1, 1985, you owned a 1979 or later-model diesel car, van or light truck, you may claim a one-time credit by attaching Form 4136 to your return. Form 4136.

CARS AND COMPUTERS: It is tougher to write off a home computer, car or other equipment that is used only partially for business. If you are an employee, you may deduct a computer, for example, only if your boss requires you to buy it. A self-employed person will fare better, but still tax benefits are severely limited unless the equipment is used more than half the time for business.

CAPITAL GAINS: Preferential tax treatment on profits from the sale of stocks or other assets now applies to property owned more than six months — if it was bought after June 22, 1984. The previous minimum holding period was more than 12 months.

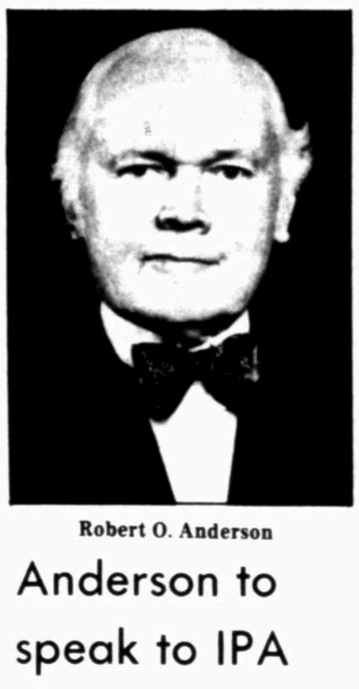

NEXT: Charity and IRAs.

Robert O. Anderson

Anderson to speak to IPA

Robert O. Anderson, chairman of Atlantic Richfield Co., will meet with the Independent Petroleum Association at 5 p.m. Wednesday at the Plaza Club in ClayDesta Plaza.

He will discuss "Oil in Transition."

Anderson, a Roswell, N.M. resident, is a popular speaker in the oil and gas industry because of his reputation for straight thinking about the industry's problems.

Midland directors for the IPA of New Mexico are O.H. Berry, Lewis B. Burleson and John J. Redfern, Jr.

The meeting is open to IPA members and invited guests.

PAS to meet Wednesday

The Petroleum Accountants Society of the Permian Basin will meet at 5:30 p.m. Wednesday at Ranchland Hills Country Club.

Maury Thornton, CPA, will speak about current oil and gas tax developments at the technical session.

Jack Flault, vice president for March and McLennan, will speak after dinner. His topics will include rick management in the oil and gas industry, acquisitions and blow-out coverage.

SPE luncheon to be Thursday in Odessa

The Trans-Pecos section of the Society of Petroleum Engineers (SPE) will meet at 11:30 a.m. Thursday at the Odessa Country Club.

Speaker for the meeting is Joe D. Clegg, senior staff production engineer in Shell Offshore's Inc. Frontier Production Group in Houston. His speech is entitled "Artificial Lift: Producing at Optimual Rates."

Lunch is $13 per person.

High Voltage, a 2,265-pound registered Black Angus worth $1.5 million, was on display in the lobby of Denver's Brown Palace Hotel for the National Western Stock Show, which runs through Sunday. High Voltage is owned by Gabriel, 4, and Maggie, 2, children of Robert Steele of Easton, N.Y.

Navy may be protecting gas, oil rigs at sea

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a role resembling the cavalry of the Old West, the U.S. Navy of the not-too-distant future may be called on to protect America's newest frontier outposts: mining rigs at sea.

And according to a Navy planner who has studied the problem, the growing scarcity of raw materials and the rising tide of terrorism will make the mission one of the most important jobs for the Navy in the 21st century.

"There are increasingly critical resources at stake in the oceans — minerals, metals, energy and protein — and technology is bringing them ever closer to man's grasp," according to Lt. Cdr. James Stavridis. "Protecting them will be a difficult mission. It is also a mission that might well fall to an already overtasked U.S. Navy in coming decades."

Stavridis' views, and a few details on how the Navy could carry out such a mission, were published in the January edition of the Proceedings of the U.S. Naval Institute.

Citing figures from the Bureau of Mines and other official authorities, he depicted the world's oceans of the future as vast tracts dotted with mining installations. They will supply 60 percent of the nation's oil and gas, and many of the vital minerals like manganese and cobalt now provided by potentially unstable sources in Africa and South America.

The mining will be done by private firms, but keeping order will probably be the job of the Navy.

"Just as a primary mission of the Army during the late 1800s was protection of continental resource-gathering on the American frontier, the late 1900s and the next century may hold a critical naval mission of resource protection in support of a national ocean policy," Stavridis said.

"If a new form of manifest destiny takes U.S. interests to the ocean frontier, the Navy will most likely provide much of the order..." he wrote.

"In a conventional global confrontation with the Soviet Union, the availability of the ocean's raw materials might one day be critical," he said. "The protection of such installations from strike and harassment is a tactical problem the Navy has not yet considered."

Of added concern, Stavridis said, are problems developing from U.S. rejection of a 1982 Law of The Sea Treaty, which codifies rules governing the oceans.

The Reagan administration rejected the treaty because of a provision establishing international control of deep sea bed mining. Developing nations demanded the provision, but the president declared such operations are "a lawful exercise of the freedom of the high seas open to all nations."

"America's traditional frontier mentality of mining has collided with the developing world's desire to protect the deep sea bed by collective action," Stavridis said.

While this attitude and hard feelings by developing countries are unlikely to lead to "overt attack on U.S. facilities" it is possible to envision violent confrontations, he added.

"As unstable anti-Western countries (Cuba, Libya, etc.) improve their military capabilities, the possibility for an attack against such vulnerable outposts increase," Stavridis said.

Terrorists complaining of "U.S. ocean imperialism" could also attack the installations with mines, swimmer-implanted bombs or handheld rockets fired from commercial craft, he said.

The job of protecting U.S. installations would require squadrons of four to six vessels. A destroyer or frigate would serve as a "mother ship" accompanied by fast patrol boats known as PHMs — hydrofoils armed with 65-mile range Harpoon missiles and a high speed gun.

Such vessels are small enough to operate out of many U.S. ports, notably Honolulu, San Diego and Long Beach, Calif., Key West and Guam, Stavridis said.

Stiltwalkers discuss high hopes, pants problem

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — When five members of a new international association convened, the conversation was more than a little stilted.

The men had gathered to discuss their high hopes and their common problem.

"The hardest part is finding a pair of pants," Steve DaPonte said."With a 68-inch inseam," said James Riddle Jr.

The founding convention of the International Stiltwalkers Association in Louisville is Joe Bowen's brainchild. The Jeffersontown man had wanted to form such a group since stiltwalking 3,008 miles across the United States in 1980 to help the U.S. Jaycees raise $100,000 to fight muscular dystrophy.

The art is not something that the 41-year-old construction company owner wants to keep to himself.

"I hope in three or four years we have 25,000 to 30,000 people on stilts," he said.

BEFORE YOU BUY A GERMAN IMPORT, TAKE A LOOK AT THE IMPORT GERMANS LIKE BEST.

Every year, West Germany's leading automotive journal, Auto Motor und Sport, invites its readers to vote for the world's best cars.

For each of the last three years, they've named the Saab 900 Turbo "the best imported car . . . under 2,500 cc." Each year, Saab's margin over the nearest competitor has been enormous.

We're deeply gratified at such high praise from drivers who constantly deal with high-speed autobahns, alpine switchbacks and $2.00-a-gallon gasoline. And we're pleased to be so highly regarded in a country that produces some of our nearest competitors.

So, if you're considering buying one of the cars that Germany exports, you should have a look first at one of the best cars Germany imports.
