Plants, wildlife die

HOUSTON — Native Texas plants and wildlife are in decline, increasingly threatened by man-made pollution and reduction of habitat. "People are impacting the hell out of this state and they just don't realize it," said Francis Rose, biology chairman at Southwest Texas State University. "They'll lament about not seeing these things anymore, but that's about as deep as it goes." The last two Mexican wolves in West Texas died in 1970. Victims seek payback for suffering

Advocates push mandatory restitution from criminals

By Glen Johnson
Associated Press

BOSTON — Eight years ago, Kathy Tennihan was beaten so severely her eyes swelled shut. For months afterward she crawled because she was too terrified to stand.

Today the attacker is free after serving 6½ years for assault and battery with intent to murder.

But Tennihan, 46, still pays with mental anguish she says prevents her from even working full time, and she believes her attacker ought to be paying still, too.

She is pushing for a state law to make financial restitution a mandatory part of punishment for violent crimes.

At least two other states have laws requiring attackers to make recovery payments to their victims. And the new federal crime bill requires sex offenders and child molesters to compensate their victims for all losses, including the cost of psychological therapy.

Last-minute deal defuses invasion

■ Haitian leaders to leave power, U.S. military to enforce agreement.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — An American invasion of Haiti was averted Sunday night in the most dramatic fashion as President Clinton's negotiators reached an 11th-hour compromise with Army commander Raoul Cedras. Clinton said Haiti's military rulers would leave power by Oct. 15.

■ HAITI UPDATE: Call Cityline, 560-2400, enter 6201.

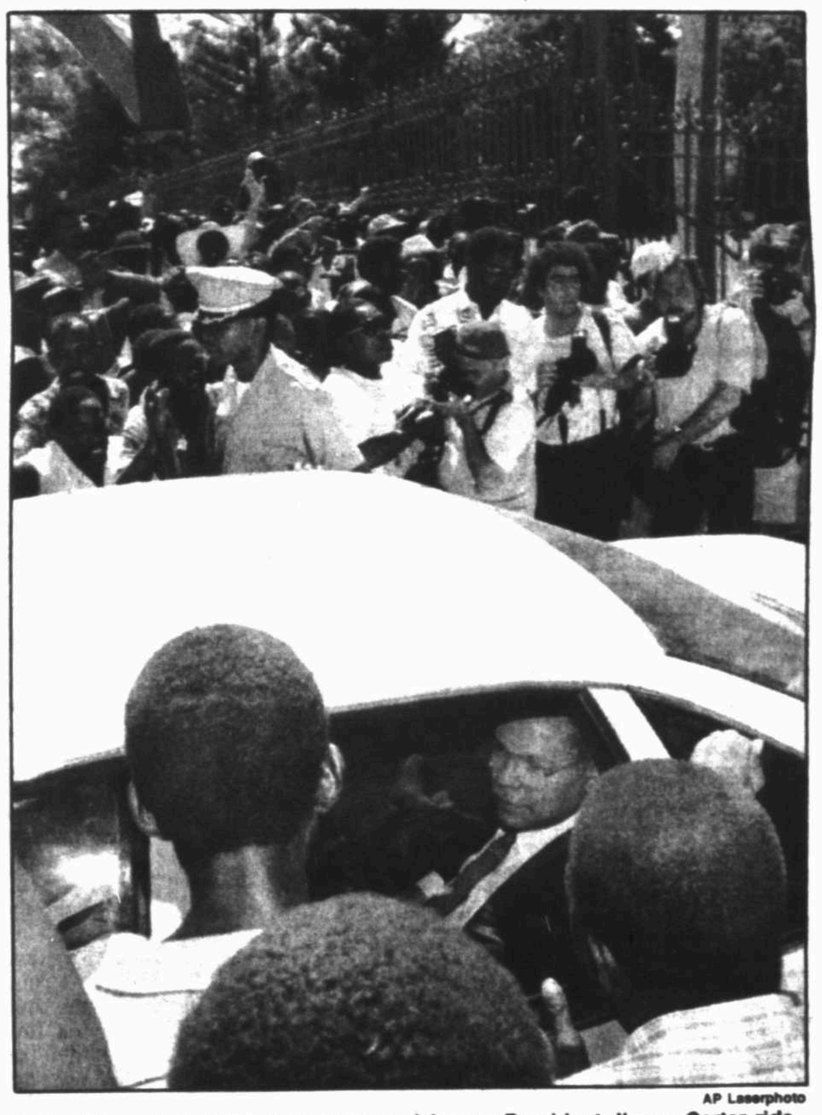

Clinton announced the accord in a televised address and said it came only after 61 planes with Army paratroopers had been airborne to begin an invasion to restore democracy to the Caribbean nation.

He was dispatching several thousand U.S. troops to Haiti today to guarantee that the terms of the agreement are carried out. "This mission still has its risks," Clinton said.

The diplomatic accord, negotiated in part by former President Jimmy Carter, paves the way for the eventual return to power of Haiti's democratically elected president, Jean-Bertrand Aristide. Carter was returning in the middle of the night from Haiti.

The Haiti invasion was to have begun Sunday evening, and planes took to the air at 5:47 p.m., recalled 73 minutes later. There was relief on Clinton's face — and

Water workouts a big splash in town

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Water-borne exercise gets your heart rate up in a hurry for the sake of fitness and health.

And for those who dare to dip in water, it can be fun and often is — even for those who carry an old fear of deep water.

"I'm just like Bugs Bunny," John Bizilo said. "I just jump in."

Bizilo, a 75-year-old retired Midland school principal, and his wife, Ethelyne, have found a new excitement in their lives — aquatics — despite Bizilo's lingering fear of water from his youth.

Their physician recommended they delve into an aquatic exercise program for the goodness of their hearts and overall health.

"It makes you feel good and invigorated," Bizilo said. "You don't perspire. Your body stays cool. It stimulates circulation."

And in aquatic workouts, there are "more benefits" for the time spent in water than in land-borne exercise, said Mrs. Bizilo.

"I think anyone could benefit from it," Bizilo said.

Report: El Paso school-board president's a border slumlord

EL PASO (AP) — A slumlord who rents vermin-infested apartments to hundreds of poor people in this West Texas city is the school-board president, who a published report says has violated municipal regulations.

The El Paso Times said the chief city building inspector included a dozen apartment buildings owned by Richard Telles on a list of the worst municipal housing violations.

No other El Paso landlord has more than four buildings on the list, drawn up at the newspaper's request. Records show Telles owns more dilapidated housing than any other landlord in the city.

"If you think they're slums, they're slums," said Telles, board president of the El Paso Independent School District since last year. "I don't care what they call them. To me they're nothing

Republican Michael Huffington is a former Texan seeking a Senate seat in California.

California senatorial candidate sweeps Texas past under rug

HOUSTON (AP) — A former Texas oil baron is seeking a Senate seat in California where voters are unfamiliar with a past described by some as secretive, threatening and greedy.

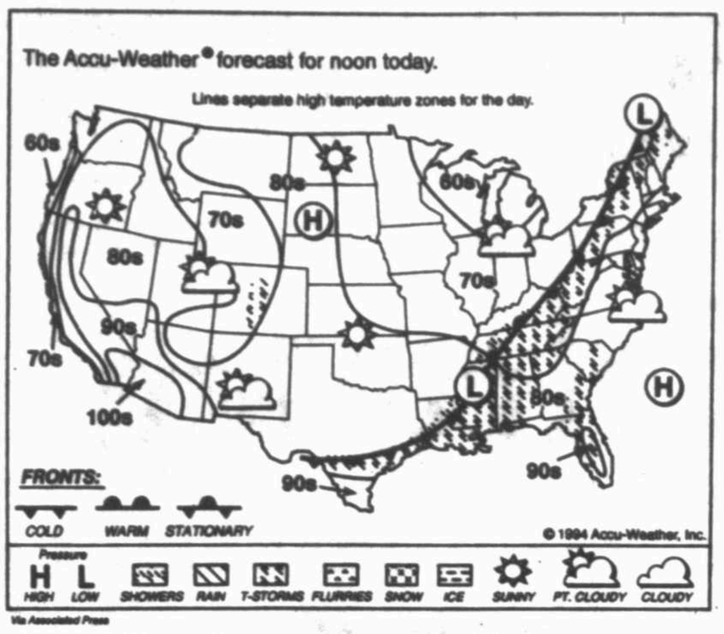

Public records obtained by The Associated Press also show that Republican Michael Huffington got his Texas fortune from an enterprise that courts said cheated an original partner.

Government records further show that for five years, while Huffington worked in the family business, the company knowingly violated export rules the U.S. government established to protect national security. The company falsified documents in one instance.

Huffington, who initially refused to comment on his Texas past, said Sunday that someone in the company made a mistake in violating export rules. He said allegations he was threatening and

WEATHER WATCH

Mr. Weather boldly predicts 90

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for mostly sunny skies with a high near 90 and south winds at 5-15 mph. Tonight should be fair with a low in the mid- to upper 50s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tuesday should be partly cloudy with a high near 90.

After an overnight low of 55, Sunday's high reached 88, compared to the record high for that date of 98 set in 1945. The record low was 42 set in 1991.

STATE

Mostly clear skies and mild temperatures were the rule Sunday across Texas under a dominant high-pressure system, but a trough of low pressure moving into the Panhandle could bring rainfall in some areas.

A couple of water spouts appeared over Galveston Bay near the city, the National Weather Service said. But no damage or injuries were reported.

Meanwhile, only high, thin clouds developed in the Panhandle because of a lack of low-level moisture.

Afternoon highs ranged from 76 degrees at Marfa to 90 at Waco and Reese Air Force Base near Lubbock, with 94 at Harlingen — about 30 degrees warmer than the morning lows.

Winds were mostly northerly at 5 to 15 mph with some higher gusts in West Texas mountain passes, and light and variable conditions in parts of the Panhandle, Permian Basin and Concho Valley.

NATION

A tornado hit South Carolina and heavy rains swept through the area Sunday as warm air combined with a cold front moving across the Southeast.

The tornado damaged a store and downed power lines in Cope, in central South Carolina, the National Weather Service said. Also in the area, a lightning strike near Orangeburg sparked a fire that burned a church to the ground. No injuries were reported.

A tornado watch was issued for parts of South Carolina, North Carolina and adjacent coastal waters.

Earlier Sunday, a storm dumped 2 inches of rain in just one hour at Shaw Air Force Base, S.C. Flash flood warnings were issued for parts of the state.

More than half an inch of rain fell at Asheville, N.C., in 30 minutes.

Rainfall for the six hours up to 1 p.m. CDT included 1.70 inches in Columbia, S.C.. and 1.10 inches in Athens, Ga.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

SPLASH: Water-fitness exercise attracts many

(From 1A)

The Bizilo couple are new advocates of water-fitness exercise, which is attracting swimmers and non-swimmers from youthful to senior years.

"I don't think there's an 'old' person in this bunch," said Rhonda McCarty, a registered nurse who works with people in therapeutic exercises in the City of Midland (COM) Aquatics' Mabee Memorial Aquatic Center.

"There's more to COM than swimming and diving," Bizilo said.

In a shallow pool, Ms. McCarty works with men and women who may be coping with heart problems, arthritic pain, post-surgery healing, and the toll of years on their bodies.

"This is a safe way for them to exercise," Ms. McCarty said. "Some of them are feeling the pains of ageing. There is something almost magic about water and its healing effects."

In water-fitness programs, "You're not at the risk of falling and hurting yourself," observed Ms. McCarty. And in water, there is "less pain . . . because of the buoyancy." The pool's warm water "helps the joints lubricate more quickly."

People in the aquatic program may use buoyancy devices, such as those that help them attain balance in the water.

"We have people who come in here on wheelchairs," Ms. McCarty said.

Monte Cole, who suffers from rheumatoid arthritis, said aquatics is "really wonderful" for her well-being and her "bad joints."

"I need surgery on both of my knees, but there are other things I'd rather be doing."

Linda Odell, who, at 50, suffers from cerebral palsy, said, "I love the water.

"For one thing, it gets your circulation going," Ms. Odell said. "It helps the aches and pains and the joints, especially if you have arthritis. It's better than being a couch potato."

And following exercise, "You feel better the rest of the day."

In the 4½-foot-deep pool, the exercising men and women may walk straight or sideways, jog, bicycle, crab or frog walk, do the heel-touch walk and even imitate comedian Charlie Chaplin's walk.

"As long as you exercise, you stay alive," Ms. Odell said. "If you don't use it, you lose it."

For Betty King, aquatics offers "a very good exercise program without any strain. I don't have the knees to walk the mall (in race-walking on land). It's fun (in water)."

On the diving side of the Mabee Memorial Aquatic Center is deep water — the 16½-foot Olympic-diving pool.

There, Julie Harvey is among the certified aquatic instructors who work with people in the more rigorous aerobic-exercise program.

"Water has a 'magic' to it . . . because of the buoyancy," Ms. Harvey said. "You weigh 10 to 20 percent of your weight in water. You feel like you can do anything."

For deep-water exercises, participants may be outfitted with buoyancy ankle cuffs and handheld barbells to increase the water's natural resistance, which is up to 22 times the resistance on land, Ms. Harvey said.

Exercising in water with the cuffs and barbells effectively works "every major muscle group in your body," Ms. Harvey said.

"Exercising in deep water also eliminates shock to your bones, joints and the spinal column."

And muscle balance is "vital" to maintain proper body alignment and posture.

"One of the most significant causes of chronic disabilities, such as back pain, is an imbalance in the strength, tone and development between opposing muscles of the body," Ms. Harvey said.

In water exercise, "You are naturally working opposing muscle groups in a single set," Ms. Harvey said. Aquatic workouts are designed to build cardiovascular endurance, develop muscular strength and tone, increase flexibility and range of motion, and to result in leaner body composition.

And unlike traditional land-based exercise, water-fitness programs eliminate "hot, sweaty and sore bodies.

"Fitness should be an enjoyable experience: not one that you dread," Ms. Harvey said. Water-borne exercise, she said, does away with the discomfort of overheating, impact and next-day soreness.

To be beneficial, exercise "must be a lifelong endeavor," Ms. Harvey said. "You must perform it on a regular basis. It usually takes approximately 12 weeks to increase your fitness level, but only two weeks to see your fitness level decline.

"Unfortunately, you can't store fitness," Ms. Harvey said. "It must be done on a consistent basis."

BROKE: Thomas sobbed, senator's book says

would say was fair," Danforth said in an interview. "But if you're there in an alley and people are throwing rocks, you pick up a rock."

Danforth, who as Missouri attorney general hired Thomas in 1974 out of Yale Law School and later made him a top Senate assistant, was the prime Senate sponsor of Thomas' nomination in 1991 to replace Thurgood Marshall on the high court.

Danforth and Thomas remain close friends. Thomas is now an associate justice on the nation's highest court. Danforth is retiring after three Senate terms to practice law and work with the Episcopal Church, in which he is an ordained minister.

In the book's most poignant scene, Thomas, Danforth and their wives trooped into the senator's Russell Office Building bathroom to pray before Thomas made his first statement denying Hill's allegations.

With the four of them standing in a circle, Danforth wrote that he turned on a tape recording of the Mormon Tabernacle Choir singing, "Onward Christian Soldiers."

"I pushed the stop button, put my hands on Clarence's shoulders, and spoke as a minister: 'Go forth in the name of Christ, trusting in the power of the Holy Spirit.'"

As they left, Thomas was quoted in the book as saying he felt "as though I was armed for battle then. I was still scared, but I felt that God was with us."

The book does not attempt to discover whether Hill or Thomas was telling the truth, but Danforth makes clear he believed Thomas. And Danforth now says Thomas wasn't permanently scarred by the ordeal.

The very title "Resurrection" — to be published by Viking in mid-October — underscores Danforth's theme that religious faith saw Thomas and his supporters through dark days.

"It was a case of having no place to turn but to God, and having those prayers answered," Danforth said in the interview.

But it wasn't at all certain whether Thomas would bear up under the intense pressure that followed Hill's explosive sexual harassment charges just before the Senate confirmation vote.

Thomas became distraught when it became clear the Senate would postpone the vote to hear Hill's charges.

He sobbed in the arms of his wife, Virginia, crying out: "Why are they doing this to me?"

Mrs. Thomas told Danforth that her husband was "a broken human being" sometimes lying sleepless in bed in the fetal position and one night "writhing on the floor" of their bedroom "like something was inside of him, physically, like there was this battle going on inside him."

PAY: Victims seek compensation from criminals

(From 1A)

Tennihan and others say victims often need money — not just apologies or stiff sentences for criminals — to recover.

Judges and victims' advocates say mandatory financial restitution can be unconstitutional and tricky to enforce. But they also say it could help eliminate the disparity between the criminals who serve their time and forget and the victims who bear scars for the rest of their lives.

"Lots of times victims feel left out of the criminal process," said Marshall Dayan, a Durham, N.C., lawyer who has been court-appointed defender in dozens of capital cases. "It seems to me that there's a place in the system for making the direct victims of crime a part of it. That place, to me, is having the offender make restitution directly to the victim."

Judges in Washington and Utah are required to order restitution, said John Stein, deputy director for the National Organization for Victim Assistance.

Thirty-five states have less comprehensive laws.

In all states, victims and their families can turn to victim compensation funds to be reimbursed for lost wages, medical bills and funeral costs.

Restitution advocates say such funds can be inadequate because of restrictions on payments and on what crimes are covered. Some states, for example, do not provide compensation for sexual assault, unless there was demonstrable bodily harm.

Richard Pompelio, a lawyer from Sparta, N.J., said he knows the flaws in the system personally and professionally. His son was murdered in 1989, and since then Pompelio has pushed for greater compensation for crime victims and their families.

New Jersey, like most states, caps compensation at $25,000. Pompelio says that cannot pay for the years of psychological therapy many of his clients have needed after being sexually assaulted.

Pompelio, who runs the New Jersey Crime Victim's Law Center, said criminals should be made to pay as long as their victims suffer — in some cases, forever.

"If you've ever lost a loved one through murder, it's not different today than the day it happened and it will never be different," he said. "The damage is a continuing damage and these people should have to pay. They should be held accountable for the rest of their lives."

Thomas Jacobson, a Milwaukee lawyer representing eight families who had relatives murdered by serial killer Jeffrey Dahmer, warns that a mandatory restitution law must be carefully drafted to ensure it isn't excessive.

DEFUSES: Haitian leaders to give up power that of his top aides — when they announced at 8:30 p.m. that it wouldn't be necessary.

"From the beginning, I have said the Haitian dictators must go," he said. "And tonight I can say that they will go."

"This is a good agreement for the United States and Haiti," Clinton said. Aides said Carter was told "he better hurry" as negotiations dragged on Sunday in Port au Prince.

Clinton said Aristide would return "when the dictators depart."

Defense Secretary William Perry said of Cedras: "I am absolutely convinced that being aware of the preparations of such an overwhelming force, made him blink."

"This is one instance where power has served diplomacy in an absolutely classic way," said Secretary of State Warren Christopher.

Under the agreement, the dictators agreed to leave power as soon as the Haitian parliament passes an amnesty law to protect the coup leaders and their supporters from retribution. In any event, that would have to happen no later than Oct. 15, under the pact.

The White House had said Friday that Carter was only negotiating the departure of the Haitian leaders, but the agreement held details far beyond the administration's insistence that the leaders leave immediately and unconditionally. Cedras, in fact, was not required to leave Haiti at all, and he did not sign the agreement — that fell to figurehead President Emile Jonassaint.

Clinton kept in continuous contact with the diplomatic team, which also included retired Gen. Colin Powell and Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga.

The agreement requires Haitian army chief of staff Philippe Biamby to give up his authority, officials said. Though he and Cedras were not required to leave Haiti, Christopher said, "For all practical purposes, they are certain to leave," and without any American (aid) money.

To avoid the political and military costs of an invasion, Clinton approved a vague, seven-paragraph agreement that never mentions Cedras or Biamby by name, saying only that "certain military officers" must step down by Oct. 15. An administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said "it is implicit that we are after those two guys." If they don't step down, U.S. forces would be in place to remove them, the official said.

"I can't imagine they'd want to stay" with thousands of American troops on the ground and Aristide's supporters taking power, Christopher said.

There was a report that Col. Michel Francois, chief of police and the third figure in the Haitian ruling group, had refused to sign the agreement. Perry said he didn't think it was significant because his position had "sufficiently eroded."

Clinton said that Aristide — ousted in September 1991 — had promised "no vengeance, no violence, no retribution."

"This is a time for peace," Clinton said.

Aristide spokesman Jean-Claude Martineau expressed qualified optimism: "It seems that we are coming out of a long, long dark night. Let's hope that what we expect will happen, will happen," he said in a telephone interview.

Cedras has reneged on earlier agreements to depart.

but apartments."

Bill Bennett, the building inspector, identified a total of 195 problem housing units from a list of about 4,000 active complaints.

In comparing the addresses to ownership records, The Times found that Telles owned the most substandard buildings — those that don't meet city codes for sanitation, repairs and safety.

City inspectors condemned three Telles buildings between 1987 and 1990.

A landlord since he was 18, Telles owns 45 buildings with 229 apartments, all in Central El Paso.

"You could say he's El Paso's dirty little secret," said Bowie High history teacher Oscar Lozano, a former housing activist who said he was appalled after a recent visit to a student's family in a Telles tenement.

"As an official with the school district, he should be a role model for students. Instead, he damages their self-esteem by having them live in these rat-infested, roach-infested places," he said.

Telles' rental company, the Telles Group, filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection in June, burdened by $5.2 million in debt. The newspaper said it was the 72-year-old Telles' second bankruptcy court filing in four years.

Perla Siqueiros, who was evicted in July from a Telles apartment after a conflict with the manager, had complained repeatedly about a sewer leak.

"It stunk and got all my clothes, everything, wet," said Ms. Siqueiros, 32. "There were so many roaches that you couldn't get up barefoot at night."

Telles said Ms. Siqueiros and her husband were evicted because they were unpleasant to the manager.

One male resident told the newspaper his trap captured 15 rats in one night at his apartment in a Telles building, while a woman complained that she found a cockroach chewing on her sleeping infant's cheek.

Richard Guerra, a building inspector, cited Telles on Aug. 30 for 33 housing violations and gave him 45 days to fix problems or risk criminal action.

Alleged violations include unsanitary plumbing, an unsafe roof and lack of pest control.

POST: Calif. voters don't know past greedy stem from being a tough but fair negotiator in business dealings.

Pursuing a dream in the 1980s of creating a "city within a city," Huffington ran a secretive land play for a decade in central Houston. The land deal was run like a spy operation to avoid driving up prices, said people involved.

Huffington said secretive practices are standard in real estate.

Parking lots and old buildings around a little-used park are the legacy of his abandoned dream.

Huffington, 47, a Texas native, went to college and worked at a Chicago bank before joining the family business. He moved to California in the early 1990s, and in 1992 spent a record $5 million to win the congressional seat representing the Santa Barbara area.

He is financing his own campaign against Democratic incumbent Sen. Dianne Feinstein. Huffington has already spent $10 million in what will probably become the most expensive Senate campaign in history.

The campaign funds came from about $70 million that Huffington made when he urged his family to sell its Texas enterprises for about $600 million in 1990. Huffington wanted to sell the oil businesses because he was uncomfortable with the risks of the industry.

The enterprises were bought by Opicoil, an affiliate of the national oil company of Taiwan. Later in that year, the Huffingtons sued to get more money.

The Taiwanese government firm responded in state court documents that the Huffington family lawsuit, engineered by Michael, was spurred by "avarice and greed." It said Huffington was trying to profit from Iraq's invasion of Kuwait. The conflict had boosted oil prices.

Opicoil called him threatening as he marshaled up to a dozen lawyers against their two. Huffington denied in state court papers that he made threats in the case.

"I'm a very tough negotiator, but I also think I am fair in terms of I don't ask for more than we should get," Huffington said.

Terms of the lawsuit's settlement were not disclosed.

Huffington got into the family business in 1976 by joining a venture started by his father, Roy M. Huffington, in the late 1960s.

The Texas Supreme Court ruled in 1976 that the senior Huffington cheated one of his original partners in an oil and gas venture in Indonesia. The state's top court awarded the partner a percentage of the partnership interest, according to court records.

Daughter's search reunites couple after 26 years

By James Coburn
San Antonio Express-News

■ More state news/4B

SAN ANTONIO — A romance torn apart in Vietnam by an exploding grenade has been rekindled an ocean away and a quarter of a century later.

Clifton Carmines — a local veteran who left Vietnam after a blast tore his face apart — has been reunited with the woman he left behind, thanks to a persistent search by the daughter he didn't know existed.

Carmines, a Marine Corps sergeant when the accident occurred in 1968, said he tried in vain to contact the Vietnamese shopkeeper he had hoped to marry.

His wounds, which necessitated the rebuilding of his nose and cheekbone and nearly cost him his left eye, left him hospitalized for three months.

Carmines wrote to his "very pretty" fiancee after he recovered, but his letters went unanswered.

That would have been the end of the love story, had it not been for the intervention of the couple's daughter, 26-year-old Mary Xinh Nguyen.

Nguyen, who is attending Whittier Law School in Los Angeles, embarked in 1989 on what she was told was a hopeless search for her father.

Now, five years after her search began and 26 years after her parents parted, Nguyen can claim credit for their impending marriage.

Carmines, 47, and Thuong Thi Nguyen Barasch, 49, have rekindled their romance and are planning to wed.

In a telephone interview, Nguyen said the search for her father at first seemed impossible.

She knew only his first name that he spoke fluent Vietnamese.

Gunfire kills three at restaurant

HOUSTON (AP) — A shoving match erupted into gunfire early Sunday inside a Mexican food restaurant, killing three people — two diners and the man who began the pushing.

The fight began at about 1:20 a.m. Sunday at the Taqueria Arandas 8 restaurant when one man began shoving another group of men, said Houston Police Detective Todd Miller.

Killed were restaurant patrons Waldo Garcia Villareal, 35, of Brownsville and residents Joseluis Ojeda Lazcano, 35, of Houston.

The third man killed, Antonio Garcia Herebia of Houston, was identified by witnesses as the man who began the shoving.

Herebia, 39, is thought to have either accidentally or intentionally pushed men at another table in the eatery. That shoving prompted the first of two suspects to pull a pistol and open fire. No one was hit by the first bullets.

But as other men tried to subdue the gunman, he began firing again, striking Herebia. The unidentified assailant left the southwest side restaurant and was still at large Sunday.

The World in brief

■ Singapore police arrest Western teens

SINGAPORE — Two American teen-agers have been arrested on suspicion of vandalizing cars, four months after the caning of another American teen for vandalism strained relations between Singapore and the United States.

The two Americans, along with a British teen-ager, were taken into custody Saturday after a police chase, the Straits Times reported Sunday. They are suspected of stealing car emblems, the newspaper said.

The names of the teens, ages 16 to 18, were not disclosed because police had not filed charges against them, the newspaper said. Two Mercedes-Benz emblems were confiscated from them, it said.

■ Officer dies during Gaza Strip clash

GAZA — In the first fatal clash between the Palestinian security forces and Muslim militants in the Gaza Strip, a police officer was shot and killed Saturday night in the town of Rafah.

Each side blamed the other for the shooting, which was the most violent confrontation to occur between the militant Islamic group, Hamas, and the forces of the new Palestinian Authority.

Hamas opposes the Palestinian-Israeli accord, and has attacked Israeli soldiers and settlers in a challenge to the Palestinian Authority, the governing body formed to administer Palestinian self-rule.

The Authority has arrested militants after recent attacks, but has later released many of them to avoid a total break with the Islamic opposition.

There were conflicting versions about Saturday's incident.

Maj. Gen. Nasser Youssef, the Palestinian police chief, said that the officer, Maj. Yusri al-Hams, was killed in a dispute with Hamas gunmen who opened fire after they were caught carrying unlicensed weapons.

But Hamas denied that its men had opened fire, and it demanded an autopsy to determine the origin of the fatal bullets.

■ Thousands evacuate as volcano erupts

PORT MORESBY, Papua New Guinea — Authorities ordered the evacuation of 30,000 people from the city of Rabaul just hours before a nearby volcano began erupting early Monday.

"She's smoking away there like a chimney at the moment, spreading ash everywhere," National Disaster and Emergency Services director Leith Anderson said of the volcano. "We believe we may have a major volcanic eruption within the next few hours or days."

Rabaul, on the island of New Britain, is a picturesque port city whose bay is part of an ancient collapsed crater. The last major eruption there, in 1937, killed 507 people.

The Australian Broadcasting Corp. said most residents had been evacuated by road to the safety of other villages and church missions about 18 miles away.

Rabaul airport was closed just before the Tavurvur volcano — situated at the end of the runway — erupted before dawn. The last airplane took off just before the eruption began, officials said.

Rwanda now faces task of rehabilitation

BY Pauline Jelinek
Associated Press

KIGALI, Rwanda — There is little hope of Rwanda rising from the ashes by itself, and pulling it out will be difficult because the pieces are still smoldering.

Some things can be fixed with money, which the world surely will provide. Money will rebuild the schools, banks and other businesses that were ransacked, looted or mined, and restore the electricity, running water and telephone service returning refugees will need.

Other damage is far more enduring: mothers who wander from orphanage to orphanage in search of surviving children, the one in four Rwandans who are in foreign refugee camps, the other one in four who are homeless within the country, the hundreds of thousands who grieve — many with vengeance in their hearts — for massacred loved ones.

Five months after ethnic Hutu extremists began the slaughter of an estimated 500,000 Tutsi civilians, burning hatred and fear remain. The embers may cool only with time and soul-rending effort.

It will take "years and years and years," said Arturo Hein, representative of the U.N. Development Program in Rwanda. "This country is on the floor."

AP Laserphoto

A boy stands outside the church at Ntarama, 20 miles south of Kigali, where about 400 people were massacred last April. He lives with his surviving family members a few yards from the church, and his future remains uncertain.

Rwanda's humanitarian emergencies are not over, but they have been largely brought under control by the work of 85 relief organizations and the expenditure of hundreds of millions of dollars.

Now the new government, the United Nations and the army of aid workers also are taking up the long-term job of rehabilitation.

The U.N. Rwanda Emergency Office, which coordinates relief work, says it has not recommended that refugees and the displaced return home because there are still reprisal killings, bandits and death squads. But the agency is setting up aid and rehabilitation programs in preparation.

The staggering breadth of the wreckage — physical, social and psychic — make the job enormous.

Things that are easy to fix, like damage to structures, are being fixed already. Some gasoline stations, restaurants and a few other small businesses have reopened, but most factories remain closed because of a lack of workers and electrical power.

Austrian and American engineers expect to get the water back on soon, Germans are restarting the power system and Britons are fixing roads and bridges.

Relatively little property damage accompanied the slaughter and the subsequent 14-week military campaign by predominantly Tutsi rebels, who control the new government.

Massacres that wiped out entire villages were accomplished with machetes, clubs, small arms, and occasionally grenades. The ensuing military campaign involved some mortar fire, but not enough to do wide-scale serious damage.

"The physical destruction in this country is not very important," Hein said. "More important than that is the destruction of the human capacity."

Heavy fighting erupts; Bosnian Serbs expel 1,300

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — The heaviest shelling and gunfire in more than six months erupted Sunday in Sarajevo, wounding eight people and raising the prospect of new NATO airstrikes.

The commander of U.N. forces in Bosnia, Lt. Gen. Sir Michael Rose, warned of unspecified measures against both the Muslim-led government and the Bosnian Serbs if the fighting did not stop. A U.N. spokesman said those measures could include NATO airstrikes.

Meanwhile, Serb nationalists pushed 1,300 exhausted, weeping Muslims from their homes and across front lines in northeastern Bosnia on Sunday in a defiant drive to finish their ethnic purges.

In the Bosnian capital, mortar shelling, machine-gun fire and anti-aircraft fire could all be heard Sunday. The fighting shattered months of relative calm in Sarajevo, which has been under Serb siege for almost 2½ years.

Rose said initial reports indicated that government forces started the fighting. That apparently touched off retaliatory fire from the Bosnian Serbs. Rose said the fighting was a clear violation of a NATO-enforced heavy weapons exclusion zone around Sarajevo.

"This fighting is seriously endangering the civilian population of Sarajevo," said spokesman Koos Sol, reading a statement from Rose. "If the fighting doesn't stop, he will take appropriate measures against both sides."

Sarajevo has enjoyed a semblance of normalcy since February, when NATO threatened airstrikes if the Serbs did not withdraw their heavy weapons from around the city. But conditions have deteriorated in recent weeks, with the closing of roads leading to the capital, sporadic shooting at aid flights, and the cutting off last week of utilities.

The eight wounded included at least six civilians, one of them a 12-year-old boy. Sarajevo's streets were virtually empty, as residents who have only recently been able to walk through the city without fear once again sought safety.

In northern Bosnia, the refugees flowing into Tuzla, a government-held city, coupled with those reportedly expelled from another Serb-controlled area Saturday, raised to as many as 9,000 the number of people forced out of their homes since mid-July.

Hong Kong residents go to polls, taste real democracy

HONG KONG (AP) — In the twilight of British rule, Hong Kong voters chose local governments Sunday in the colony's first fully democratic election, which China has sworn to annul.

The election was held under rules imposed unilaterally by Gov. Chris Patten after China, Hong Kong's ruler come 1997, refused to accept them.

The turnout, keenly watched as a barometer of Hong Kong's enthusiasm for democracy, suggested a mixed triumph for Patten.

At 33.1 percent, it was less than 1 percent higher than in 1991. But a government registration drive almost doubled the electoral roll, and the number of ballots cast increased 67 percent, official figures showed.

"I think China should take into consideration that people have very strong support for the political reforms. They should seriously consider any move against the election result," Dr. Stephen Tang, a political analyst, said on Hong Kong's TVB channel.

China has said it will disband all institutions filled through elections under Patten's rules. But its distaste for Western-style elections did not deter its supporters in the colony from campaigning vigorously.

Electing "patriotic figures" would restrain "the attempt to cause chaos and harm to Hong Kong's people's interests by the Patten reforms," the China-backed newspaper Wen Wei Po said.

Hong Kong's 18 District Boards deal with local affairs, such as garbage collection, and have few powers in what is still largely a colonial fiefdom.

But the vote may yield insights into the popularity of the Democrats, traditionally Hong Kong's most popular party, and the pro-China camp that has rallied behind Beijing's market reforms.

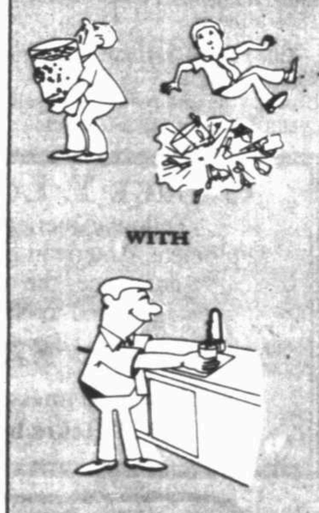

Patten's reforms meant that for the first time all seats on the District Boards were directly elected. The voting age was lowered from 21 to 18.

The vote is seen as a rehearsal for next year's higher-level Legislative Council elections, the last under British rule. One-sixth of the Council will be chosen by District Board winners.

Voters said the British-Chinese dispute over the elections had little bearing on their choices.

Midland Manufacturer Diversifies

Cliff Whittington, the owner of Clean Air Systems, has diversified his company by developing a new type of air cleaner.

Perfectly suited to those who suffer from allergies the "Envirotech Pure air" air cleaner follows after the success that Whittington's other developments, the "Allergy & Dustfighter" and ODOR-BAN filters enjoyed.

Used primarily in central air units, the "Allergy & Dustfighter" and it offshoot the "ODOR-BAN filter are over 99 percent effective at removing allergens from the air, drastically reducing the effects of allergies.

The 'Envirotech' performs a similar function as a portable, room-sized unit.

Constructed from solid oak, to match any decor, the 'Envirotech' features a 7-stage HEPA (High Efficiency particle arrestance) filter which traps 99.5 percent of all particles, 0.03 microns or larger. Since virtually all allergens are large than this, this filter is extremely effective at relieving allergy sufferers of their symptoms by removing the cause.

Designed to work as a single unit, or in conjunction with the 'Allergy & Dustfighter' filter for even better performance, the 'Envirotech' air cleaner will filter the air in an average room 11 times every hour. This powerful performance, coupled with the impressive filtration characteristics make the 'Envirotech' ideal for anyone who is worried about the impending allergy season.

The 'Envirotech is perfect for the rooms in the house which do not receive as much airflow as the bulk of the building; a bedroom or work-room for example.

These rooms can easily be kept allergy free, quickly and affordably because all of Clean Air Systems' products are made here in Midland by Clean Air Systems.

Buying directly from the factory cuts out the middle man and man and results in significant savings over even the most competitive store, while helping to keep the local economy strong.

Because Clean Air Systems manufacturers the 'Envirotech' here in Midland, there is no problem in obtaining replacement filters for the 'Envirotech' or any other filtration unit, (each filter lasts approximately one year in an average situation).

Their convenient location at 1308 South Midkiff also ensures that Clean Air Systems' 1-year warranty on parts, labor and materials is accessible to all.

Soon the dust will start blowing, grasses and weeds will be producing pollen and the allergy season will be in full swing. Call Cliff Whittington of Clean Air Systems at 520-9337 to find out more about way to prevent your allergies from spoiling your fun this summer.

Cheers, scattered gunshots greet U.S.-Haitian agreement

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — There were cheers outside the presidential palace and scattered gunshots downtown when the last meeting between U.S. peacemakers and Haiti's military rulers finally broke up Sunday night.

But the streets in the capital were mostly deserted as word spread that the coup leaders had agreed to step down and deposed President Jean-Bertrand Aristide would return.

Thousands of Aristide supporters already had left Port-au-Prince, fearing a last-minute sweep by pro-army gunmen as much as a U.S. invasion. Entire neighborhoods that were Aristide strongholds seemed empty.

The agreement brokered by former President Jimmy Carter was announced in Washington by President Clinton, who noted U.S. warplanes already were in the air and the invasion would have begun immediately. As it is, U.S. troops will step onto Haitian soil today anyway to enforce the agreement.

There was no immediate public statement by the army leader, Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras, nor were his whereabouts immediately known. After he and Carter left the presidential palace, he stopped at army headquarters a short way across a downtown plaza.

There were unconfirmed reports Cedras might address the Haitian nation on state radio shortly.

The agreement Cedras signed calls for him, the army chief-of-staff, Brig. Gen. Philippe Biamby, and capital police chief Lt. Col. Francois Michel to resign by Oct. 15 at the latest, Clinton said.

Between now and then, an amnesty law covering them is to be passed by the national legislature, Clinton said.

Since stepping down and possibly being forced into exile is exactly what the triumvirate repeatedly said it had no intention of accepting, it seems clear that decision was forced on them by events, and while they might go along, they — and their supporters — don't like it.

About 900 pro-army demonstrators who had been gathered outside the army headquarters all afternoon chanted "Aristide No!" even as Carter's motorcade left for the airport.

Black entrepreneurs see S. Africa as next market

By Fred Bayles
Associated Press

Apartheid is banished. Trade barriers are gone. Business opportunities suddenly seem unlimited in South Africa, and black Americans are flocking to Johannesburg in the shared hope of doing good and doing well in one of the world's potentially richest markets.

The Americans speak of the natural fit with South African blacks now moving up in politics and business. After years of opposing apartheid from U.S. shores, they see doing business in South Africa as the next logical step: bringing economic help and business skills to their South African brethren.

"We have the economic and social interest of each other at heart. We want to see each other succeed," says Sherry Williams, president of DJMA International Inc., an Atlanta-based consulting firm.

For entrepreneur Earl Graves, doing business with South Africa is the logical extension of his success.

"As long as I've been in business I've felt the first thing you try to do is make some money. The second thing is to give something back," says Graves, the publisher of Black Enterprise magazine and head of a joint venture with Pepsi Cola in South Africa. "Doing business in South Africa should be good business and it should be the right thing to do."

The Clinton administration echoes the sentiment. Today, the Commerce Department plans to announce a new United States-South Africa Business Development Committee formed of black and white business leaders from both countries.

Early next month, the department will sponsor a mission to South Africa for minority business people.

But some observers caution against the assumption American blacks can count on a special business relationship with South Africans. Analysts say pragmatic South Africans, black and white, are more interested in the color of investment capital than that of the person offering it.

And the notion of black-on-black bonding between the two nations may be less a fit than it seems.

"Black youths in this country go for American products they see in the media, like Levi's and Reebok's," says Denise Buckle, executive director of the Johannesburg-based American Chamber of Commerce in Southern Africa. "Whether they have a cultural affinity for American blacks is another question."

South Africa offers enormously inviting investment conditions: low foreign debt after years of trade sanctions; the globe's 11th-largest stock market; and a solid, first world economy rooted in capitalism.

Along with rich natural resources, such as gold, diamonds, platinum and manganese, it is also rich with potential consumers. Improvements in the living standard of the country's almost 30 million blacks would bring a huge new demand for everything from soft drinks to software.

One example: the plan to bring electricity to 1 million homes in rural townships.

"Once the electrification goes into place there will suddenly be a market for toaster ovens and dishwashers," says Timothy Lukens, the assistant director of the U.S.-South Africa Business Council.

Estimates put existing U.S. investment in South Africa at $2.5 billion. With 50 U.S. companies entering South African markets in the last 15 months, the figure is expected to double.

Government feud lets litigants wait

The situation might be comical were it not so serious to Midland residents.

In 1993, the Texas Legislature recognized the need for another state district court in Midland County. As a result, legislators created the 385th District Court. The main reason was to take a portion of the caseload off the county's other three district courts, and in the process to assure speedier justice for all those who ended up in district court here — for whatever reason.

Now, nearly two years later, the 385th District Court still is not up and running. The culprit? The U.S. Department of Justice.

The department has put a hold on the new district court until the at-large system of electing state district judges in Texas is changed to one incorporating single-member districts, which the department claims would not dilute minority voting strength.

Of course, the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans has ruled that the at-large system of electing judges used in Texas does not dilute minority voting strength. So have other appellate courts.

Nonetheless, the Department of Justice has not seen fit to clear the way for the new district court in Midland and ostensibly will not do so until its confrontation with the State of Texas is resolved — presumably to the department's satisfaction.

Meanwhile, the three existing district courts in Midland County are still bogged down with burdensome caseloads and the litigants all wait their turn in court.

Is there any wonder why lots of Americans today are questioning whether government is a friend or a foe?

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, Sept. 19, the 262nd day of 1994. There are 103 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Sept. 19, 1796, President Washington's farewell address was published. In it, America's first chief executive advised, "Observe good faith and justice toward all nations. Cultivate peace and harmony with all."

On this date:

In 1777, during the Revolutionary War, American soldiers won the first Battle of Saratoga over the British.

In 1881, the 20th president of the United States, James A. Garfield, died of wounds inflicted by an assassin 11 weeks earlier.

In 1934, Bruno Hauptmann was arrested in New York and charged with the kidnap-murder of the Lindbergh infant.

In 1945, Nazi propagandist William Joyce, known as "Lord Haw-Haw," was sentenced to death by a British court.

In 1955, President Juan Peron of Argentina was ousted after a revolt by the army and the navy.

In 1957, the United States conducted its first underground nuclear test, in the Nevada desert.

In 1959, Soviet leader Nikita Khrushchev became angry during a visit to Los Angeles after being told he wouldn't be able to visit Disneyland.

In 1970, "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" debuted on CBS.

In 1985, the Mexico City area was struck by an earthquake measured at a magnitude of 8.9, the first of two devastating quakes that claimed about 6,000 lives.

Ten years ago: Britain and China completed a draft agreement on transferring Hong Kong from British to Chinese rule by 1997.

Five years ago: Hurricane Hugo skirted the Bahamas as it headed toward the U.S. mainland. A Paris-bound DC-10 belonging to the French airline UTA disappeared after a stopover in Chad while carrying 171 people. (The plane's wreckage was found the next day in Niger; a bomb was believed responsible.)

One year ago: Polish voters turned left in parliamentary elections, giving the most number of seats to the Democratic Left Alliance. The NBC sitcom "Seinfeld" and the offbeat CBS drama "Picket Fences" each won three trophies at the 45th Annual Primetime Emmy Awards.

Informants sting innocent postal workers

WASHINGTON — For almost a decade, U.S. postal officials tried to stamp out drug use in the ranks by planting informants in post offices around the country. Today, some workers who were falsely accused in these stings believe they deserve more than a letter of apology: They want their jobs back.

Anderson

Frank McDonald, now a Southern California factory worker, was a stock clerk with the U.S. Postal Service when his life was thrown into turmoil on the morning of June 26, 1986. As he was clocking into his job, McDonald was arrested by two postal inspectors who charged him with selling drugs to a co-worker. Moments later, he was carted out the front door before a crew of television cameras.

McDonald insisted he was innocent. "I told (the postal inspectors) they were crazy and they had the wrong person," he explained to a congressional panel last spring. "They threatened me with everything they could think of, but nothing they could say would ever make me admit to something I didn't do or even know anything about."

McDonald says he was set up by an informant working for the Postal Inspection Service. And a Superior Court jury agreed with him after the prosecution failed to get its story straight. According to McDonald, the informant used money provided to him by postal inspectors to buy drugs on his own, telling his superiors they were bought within the postal service. In many cases, the buys were set up so that postal inspectors didn't see the transaction.

In the wake of his acquittal, McDonald assumed he would get his old job back. But the Postal Service had other ideas. He was forced to go before the U.S. Merit Systems Protection Board for reinstatement. This time, an administrative law judge believed the informant, and denied reinstatement. Adding insult to injury, the Postal Service docked his retirement account for the $5,000 that they say he was paid for the drugs.

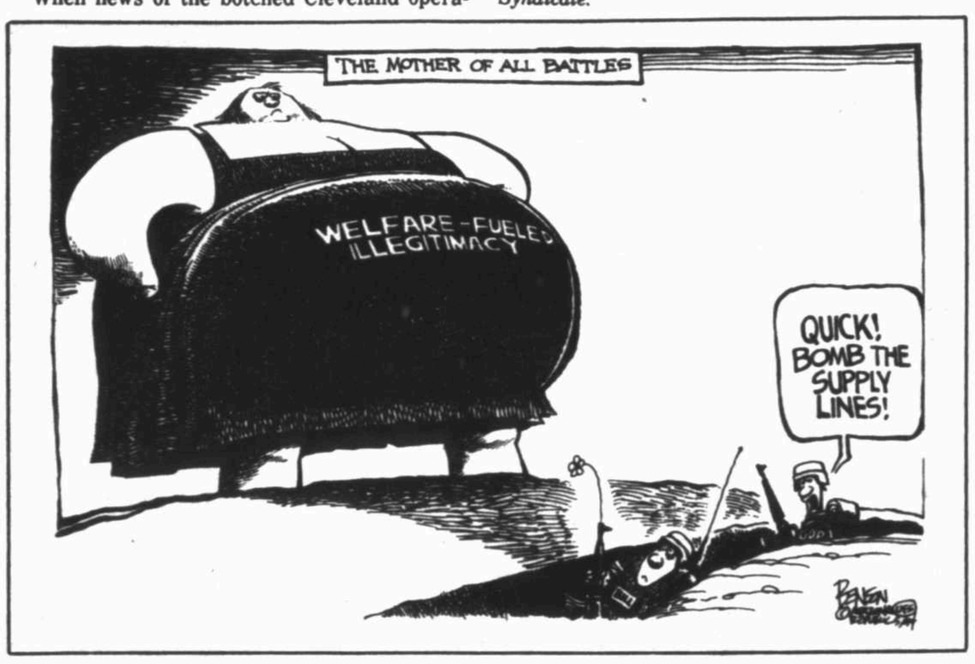

Across the country, undercover informants working for the Postal Inspection Service have left a trail of innocent victims like McDonald. The problem, one congressional investigator told us, was a policy known as "collars for dollars": The more arrests informants produced, the more they were paid.

In Cleveland, 19 postal employees and one private citizen were arrested on drug charges after the postal inspectors hired convicted felons as workplace informants. The informants had devised a scheme where they used post office money to buy drugs from hired impostors, who would later split the proceeds with the informants. Innocent employees were then fingered as the sellers.

When news of the botched Cleveland operation became public, postal inspectors insisted it was an isolated incident. But congressional investigators soon discovered many similar cases around the country. The Postal Inspection Service did not return our calls, but officials say they are no longer using undercover informants.

"There was never, from all the people we interviewed, any evidence that drugs were a problem, or had existed, prior to the informant coming in," John Mattes, a Florida lawyer who defended a group of postal employees in West Palm Beach against similar charges, told our associate Jan Moller. Though all 19 of Mattes' clients were acquitted, several have yet to be rehired.

CHARLEY REESE

Magical door will creak open on Nov. 8

If you've read many of those fantasy stories that involve elves, dragons and other such critters, you know that the authors often write about magical doors which open only at certain times or under special circumstances.

Reese

Well, such a magical door will open for the American people on Nov. 8.

On that day and on that day only, Americans can speak to their government louder than the richest and most well-organized lobby. For those on the far left who think bankers and corporations conspire to thwart democracy, here's your chance. The Fortune 500 crowd is absolutely helpless in terms of keeping you from voting and from voting for whom you please.

For those on the far right, who think the Trilateral Commission and the Council on Foreign Relations are running your lives, here's your chance, too. Neither of those high-tone Establishment organizations can prevent you from voting and from voting for whom you please.

The men who wrote the Constitution gave to the American people the power to stage a peaceful revolution every two years. All 435 members of the House and one-third of the Senate must stand before the voters on Nov. 8 like prisoners before a firing squad. And some are squirming and flinching already. If voters wish, they can mow 'em down. That would be the equivalent of the grandmother of all political earthquakes. That would be a true revolution.

It's not likely. Despite the griping, many Americans seem to have no interest in politics or government, and many others are perfectly satisfied with the man or woman who represents them.

That is an important point. I believe there are far more satisfied Americans than one would think from reading the papers and watching television. People in the media tend to focus on the gripers. I don't know how many Beltway oracles I've heard in recent months talk about how disillusioned and unhappy Americans are with government.

Oh? Well, let's see on Nov. 8. I'm betting that a majority of incumbents will be re-elected. I'm betting that our governments are — as embarrassing as it may be to admit it — a true reflection of a majority of us. I haven't noticed any reincarnated George Washingtons or Tom Jeffersons walking about the streets and byways of America. Most of the folks I see are not unlike the folks in public office or the folks running for public office.

Maybe it would be a good idea for all of us Americans to look ourselves smack-dab in the face and do some serious introspection. How much of what upsets us is our fault and how much is the government's fault? How much of our griping is just carrying on an American tradition? Are we happier than we want to admit? And if we are unhappy and if it isn't really our own fault, then what are we doing to correct the situation?

Some folks are chronic malcontents. You say, "It's a nice day," and they say, "It will probably rain tomorrow." Some are like Matthew Arnold, the English essayist and poet. When Robert Louis Stevenson heard that Arnold had died, he said, "Poor Matt. He's gone to Heaven of course. But he won't like God."

I know people like that. They really wouldn't like God or Buddha or Mother Teresa or anybody else. If they found themselves walking on streets of gold, they'd complain it hurt their feet. They are psychic Grand Canyons — they have a hole in their psyche nobody can fill.

Nevertheless, on Nov. 8, like magic the whole power of government passes into the hands of the people from a little after dawn to a little after sunset. By the time twilight fades into darkness, the power will pass back to the elected representatives. They can rest their tired lips. They needn't smile so much for awhile. They can soak their swollen shake-hand in a basin of Epsom salts. Then, by sunrise the next day, they must start to worry about the next election.

That is as our forefathers wished it to be.

Honest taxpayer can't get IRS to admit mistake

Schoolteacher Jim Bauser thought that his call to Internal Revenue would be greeted with gratitude and enthusiasm. But he didn't understand the strange workings of the bureaucratic mind.

Royko

"In April I sent my return to IRS as I've dutifully done for the past 35 years," he recalls.

"On this form I claimed a refund of $750. About six weeks later, I got a letter from the great IRS computer in the sky stating that I had made a mistake in my calculations and I was really due a refund of $1,500, which would arrive by check shortly.

"I'm no genius, but I do have a degree in accounting and have teaching certificates in business and social studies, and I do know how to add and subtract and complete IRS Form 1040."

That's when Bauser phoned to tell the tax people not to send him $1,500 because he wasn't entitled to that big a refund.

"I called the toll-free number and explained that the error was not mine, but the IRS', and would they please recheck their numbers and not send me the incorrect amount.

"They assured me their computer stated that I was wrong, so their computer must be correct."

And before long, a check for $1,500 arrived.

"This made me determined to correct their error and get them to admit their mistake and take my money back whether they wanted to or not.

"Believe me, this wasn't easy.

"On three different days, I called the IRS office in Houston, where I live.

"I was transferred from department to department, cut off accidentally five times, and was actually hung up on once.

"On day four, I finally succeeded in finding a pleasant woman.

"We went through the form line by line, with her looking at the screen and me looking at my copy of the form.

"Finally, I discovered the problem. When my form was keyed into the computer, the operator had typed a dollar amount on one line and inadvertently typed the same number on the next line, instead of leaving it blank.

"I pointed this out to the woman, but she told me that I had either placed the wrong number on the form, or I was reading it wrong. She was sure that it had to be my mistake because 'their computer is always right.'

"By then, I had wasted several hours of my time and was getting quite hacked. And I knew I had to get the money returned because eventually they would discover the error and charge me interest and penalties, plus repossessing my house and threatening to never allow me to see my grandchildren."

"So I fired off a certified letter to the IRS, explaining the situation.

"I told them I wanted to return the money, but I was deducting $20 for postage, phone calls, and all those hours of aggravation. If I have to pay penalties and interest if I make a mistake, they should do the same.

"I gave them two weeks to reply and said I was sending copies of my letter to my senators, congressman and if it was the last thing I ever did, I would expose their lunacy.

"The Texas office replied that they were referring the problem to the Philadelphia office.

"Finally the Philadelphia office sent me a note stating that the problem had been resolved and if I would send in the portion of the refund not due me, there would be no penalties or interest assessed. Not even a little, 'We're sorry for the trouble,' or 'Thank you for being honest.'

"So I sent the money in, minus the $20 to compensate me for my trouble, even though my time and trouble was worth at least $300.

"Then they sent another letter saying that I should send in that $20 and there would be no penalties.

"I was so steamed, I was ready to go to small claims court for the $20."

Now Bauser can explain to his history class students why so many Americans have a nervous twitch.

First deaf Miss America gets glimpse of what lies down long road ahead

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — The first deaf Miss America got a taste of the difficult task ahead of her Sunday.

Heather Whitestone, a plucky 21-year-old collegian from Birmingham, Ala., told photographers to stop shooting pictures as she tried to read a reporter's lips on her first full day wearing the crown.

"You keep flashing. You make it hard for me to see his lips. Can you hold on for a minute?" she asked.

Later, she turned the tables on a reporter: "Let me know what you don't understand," she said when he look puzzled at an answer she'd given.

The news conference was just the first of many for Whitestone. Miss America usually travels about 20,000 miles a month for speaking engagements, presentations and other appearances.

Whitestone, who became deaf at age 1½ after a reaction to a diphtheria-pertussis-tetanus shot, has 5 percent hearing in her left ear.

A junior at Jacksonville State University, she reads lips, uses a hearing aid and knows sign language. But she said exclusive use of sign language limits what the hearing impaired can achieve.

Whitestone needed six years of speech therapy to learn how to say her last name.

"The most handicapped (person) in the world is a negative thinker," said Whitestone, adding that her mother told her as a child that the last four letters of "American" spell "i can."

Her platform centers on telling young people — not only those with disabilities — that anything is possible. She said Sunday she would try to spread that message during her reign as the first disabled Miss America.

AP Laserphoto

Former Miss America, Kimberly Aiken, left, crowns Miss America 1995, Heather Whitestone of Alabama, at the 74th annual pageant in Atlantic City, Saturday.

The disability didn't trip her up in her 2½-minute ballet routine Saturday night: In a soaring performance that brought tears to the eyes of many people in the Atlantic City Convention Center, Whitestone danced to "Via Dolorosa" — even though she could only feel its vibrations.

She counted beats in her head, and synchronized her dance moves to reflect changes in pitch. She won the preliminary talent and swimsuit competitions.

In the audience was Samantha Braidi, 6, of Vineland, a deaf ballerina who carried a "Miss Alabama" sign that pictured a man using sign language to say "Deaf Like Me."

"There's no limitations now," said her mother, Debbie Braidi. "When the going gets tough, you just look at Miss America and say, 'Hey, SHE can do it.'"

IBM rolls out fall line of consumer PCs

NEW YORK (AP) — Advantage, Presario, Dimension — and now Aptiva.

IBM today joins other personal computer makers that give brand lines names like sports cars as the company rolls out consumer models for the important fall and holiday sales period.

The seven Aptiva models, which started arriving in stores last week, are a key to restoring International Business Machines Corp. to a leadership position in the industry. They are the first major change to IBM's consumer line since last fall.

Most PC makers freshen up brand lines in a shorter period of time.

"IBM is making a comeback in the consumer market because they lost momentum severely over the last three quarters," said Richard Zwetchkenbaum, an analyst at International Data Corp. in Framingham, Mass.

Like other manufacturers, IBM has made CD-ROM drives, stereo speakers and voice messaging software standard features in the new PCs. The Aptiva models are powered by Intel Corp. 486 and Pentium microprocessors and have hard drive storage ranging from 270 to 727 megabytes.

IBM has given them two exclusive communications features. The first, dubbed "Wake Up on Ring," allows the machine to take in a fax or answer the phone even when it is turned off. A feature called "Scheduler" lets a person program the machine for tasks like downloading a news summary from an on-line service before breakfast or sending a bunch of faxes.

A few of the models come with voice recognition capability, allowing spoken commands for some simple tasks.

Such features are not yet standard on PCs for businesses and are a sign that consumer demand is driving innovation.

"What we've seen in the last year or so is that more and more of the new features come up in the consumer marketplace first," said Angelica Horaitis, director of consumer brands in IBM's personal computer division.

Unlike its closest competitor, Compaq Computer Corp., IBM decided to put the advanced Intel Pentium chip in some Aptiva models.

"We thought it was very important to announce Pentium products because there is more and more play for them," Horaitis said.

Simpson murder case creates exciting legal discussions in nation's classrooms

LOS ANGELES (NYT) — Call it Criminal Justice 101.

From high schools to law schools to living rooms, the O.J. Simpson double-murder case has generated new interest in tired legal topics for a whole generation of lawyer wanna-bes.

At Reseda High School in the San Fernando Valley, biology students in Ben Vallejo's class plan to conduct DNA fingerprinting in the classroom lab.

Second- and third-year law students, meanwhile, will debate search and seizure laws, using the Simpson case as an example, in mock courtrooms during professor Peter Arenella's law classes at the University of California, Los Angeles.

And Southwestern University law professor Norman Garland asked summer law school students on a final exam to discuss whether the 911 calls made by Nicole Brown Simpson are admissible in court.

Credit the celebrity of the Simpson case and televised coverage of court proceedings for what legal experts agree has become a large-scale, interactive civics lesson.

"More people will learn about the legal system from this case than from any other event in American history," notes Erwin Chemerinsky, a University of Southern California law professor. "People are going to form opinions about this case and our legal system as they watch.

"This has become a social phenomenon unlike anything in the legal system before it."

Outside Los Angeles Superior Court, trial watchers who didn't even know what a preliminary hearing was until last month now debate the merits of the First and Fourth amendments in venues as diverse as grocery stores and parks.

Simpson, 47, has pleaded not guilty to murder charges in the June 12 knife slayings of his ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman outside Nicole Simpson's Brentwood condominium.

Jury selection is scheduled to begin Sept. 26.

But the legal lesson in the case will continue Monday during a hearing on several motions, including a defense motion to suppress key evidence.

"The (Simpson) case really has the attention of the kids," said Reseda High School principal Bob Kladifko, where the double-murder case is a hot topic in current affairs and social science classes.

But nowhere is the case getting as much scrutiny than in law classes throughout Los Angeles.

At USC, Chemerinsky said that the law school likely will keep a television set on in a student lounge area so students can follow the trial during their free time.

Christian Science Church seizes on upswing in sales of religious books to spread beliefs

By Jon Marcus
Associated Press

BOSTON — Mary Baker Eddy combined religion and science when she wrote the bible of the Christian Science Church.

A century later, her followers have added mass marketing and sales.

Church officials are seizing on a dramatic upswing in the sales of religious, New Age and self-help books to spread their belief that prayer can heal injuries and illness.

"People are going to bookstores for answers and for help, and so this book that has helped thousands, perhaps millions, ought to be there," said Virginia Harris, chairwoman of the church's five-member board of directors.

The church has repackaged the book, "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures," adding the mainstream message "Over 8 million copies sold" to the cover and an index ("Devil: see also Satan").

While a previous edition was available in 600 specialty bookstores and Christian Science reading rooms, the new one — subject of a 12-city promotional tour — will be in bookstores nationwide Oct. 1.

"Jesus went into the marketplace. We have to go to where people are," Harris said. "It's the malls of today and the bookstores in those malls where people are going for answers. ... We've seen the demand grow, the demand for answers, spirituality (and) healing. There's a real take-charge-of-my-own-well-being attitude in this country."

Sales of religious titles increased 249 percent from June 1993 to this June, according to the Ingram Book Co. of Lavergne, Tenn., the world's largest book distributor.

"We are just selling huge amounts of those particular books," said Ingram spokesman Larry Carpenter. "I'm no Gallup or Yankelovich, but I think it's finally a phenomenon that, as things seem to be getting worse and worse, people are getting back to the fundamentals."

Among this year's national best sellers are such spiritual or religious works as "The Celestine Prophecy" by James Redfield, "Embraced by the Light" by Betty J. Eadie and the revised catechism of the Catholic Church.

"There is a huge demand for spirituality materials right now," said Phyllis Tickle, religion writer for the trade journal Publishers Weekly.

■ Officials: Girl fends off convicted rapist

LITTLE FERRY, N.J. — An 11-year-old girl who was being attacked at knife point by a convicted rapist grabbed the knife and slashed and kicked him before escaping to get help, authorities said.

Leo J. Quigley, 44, of Little Ferry was being held on $1 million bail on charges of kidnapping and aggravated sexual assault in the attack, Bergen County Prosecutor John Fahy said Sunday.

The girl was selling chocolate door-to-door for a school fund-raiser Friday when Quigley lured her into his home on the pretense of getting money, Fahy said. Once inside, Quigley pulled out a pocket knife and threatened to kill the girl, he said.

Quigley threw her on the couch and grabbed her breasts, but the girl was able to wrest the knife away, slash him on the hand and kick him in the stomach, Fahy said.

The unharmed girl ran for help. Police arrested Quigley about 15 minutes later in his home.

■ Astronauts may have to wait for showers

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — With their mission accomplished, Discovery's six astronauts looked forward to coming home Monday and taking their first showers in a week and a half.

They may have to wait.

Stormy weather was forecast for Kennedy Space Center at the 2:23 p.m. scheduled landing. NASA could send the shuttle to Edwards Air Force Base in California later in the day.

"It's pretty fatiguing up here. I think a lot of us are looking forward to getting home, getting a good shower and some good old Earthbound things we enjoy," Discovery's pilot, L. Blaine Hammond Jr., said Sunday.

On the other hand, Hammond said he and his crewmates wouldn't mind spending another day in orbit "because it's an opportunity so rare." They've been aloft since Sept. 9.

The astronauts achieved everything they set out to do. They released and retrieved a sun-gazing satellite, measured the damaging effects of their own steering jet exhaust on space structures, and helped direct laser pulses at Earth for an atmospheric study.

And — most spectacularly — they tested a new jet pack during a rare untethered spacewalk.

■ Report: Many ignored signs in spy case

WASHINGTON — More than a dozen active or retired officials either ignored warnings or overlooked complaints, allowing former CIA agent Aldrich Ames to spy for the Soviet Union for nine years, according to a report by the CIA's inspector general.

Chiefs, deputies and operating personnel in the CIA's security office are singled out for criticism in a 400-page draft of the report described in Sunday's editions of The Washington Post.

The newspaper quoted sources who have seen the draft as saying it criticizes CIA officials for failing to follow up on information about Ames' lavish spending in 1990.

The report was particularly critical of the security office's polygraph operation, which passed Ames in 1986 and 1991 despite indications that he lied on key financial questions, The Post said.

CIA spokesman David French said Sunday that he had not seen the draft of the report, but that the final version is to be delivered to CIA Director R. James Woolsey soon. The inspector general is chosen independently and confirmed by the Senate.

Ames pleaded guilty to spy charges in April. Beginning in 1985, Ames gave Moscow an enormous volume of the agency's most sensitive documents, including the names of U.S. and allied-paid Soviet and eastern European agents. At least 10 of those were killed or jailed.

Records show official didn't stop Texaco oil to Haiti

■ Key question in investigation involves influence by Texaco on Bush administration.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The agency in charge of enforcing trade embargoes concluded in 1992 that Texaco's Caribbean subsidiary was illegally doing business with Haiti's military junta, but its director ignored recommendations to stop the flow of oil and money, government records show.

With American forces poised to invade Haiti, the U.S. attorney's office launched an investigation last week into Texaco's actions and the tepid response by the Office of Foreign Assets Control, The Associated Press has learned.

A key question involves influence by Texaco among Bush administration officials. One document reviewed by The AP quotes OFAC Director Richard R. Newcomb as telling subordinates during a senior staff meeting that he had been directed to drag his feet by then-Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady.

One official's notes from the mid-1992 meeting quotes Newcomb as saying, "Brady told me to go slow on Texaco." Haiti's president was overthrown in September 1991 and the Bush administration ordered an embargo to punish Haiti's new military rulers.

Newcomb was served Friday with a grand jury subpoena for all relevant documents, according to officials familiar with the U.S. attorney's probe.

Newcomb is a career government executive whose Treasury Department enforcement office by law is designed to be independent from political appointees. In an interview, Newcomb said he would like to speak about the case involving Texaco Caribbean Inc., but because it is still active, "I'm not at liberty to do so."

A spokesman for Brady, Hollis McGloughlin, said Brady — a longtime confidant of George Bush — recalls having a telephone conversation with a Texaco executive and referring the matter to Newcomb's office. But Brady "doesn't have a recollection" of instructing Newcomb to go slowly, he said.

Since the U.S. embargo took effect in October 1991, Texaco has distributed fuel inside Haiti from at least 26 tanker ships brought in by the Haitian regime, paying the Haitian junta millions of dollars, a 1993 OFAC document alleged. Its authors proposed a maximum $1.6 million fine — $10,000 for each of 160 embargo violations.

Texaco contends it did not violate any laws. The company said its Haitian subsidiary acted "under military duress and coercion."

"We believe we were legally and morally correct while complying with all the U.S. sanctions down there," spokesman Peter Dowd said.

Many of the Texaco transactions cited by the OFAC staff as violations occurred after the staff first began urging Newcomb in the spring of 1992 to take immediate action.

A lengthy trail of documents reviewed by The AP shows Texaco, the nation's third largest oil company and a generous donor to both political parties, got access to top Bush administration officials during the early days of the OFAC investigation.

Texaco executives met or talked by telephone with Brady, then-Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger and Newcomb on several occasions, according to the documents.

Paul Lovejoy, a company attorney, said Bush administration officials "made no promises."

Mining companies hope reform bill remains gridlocked on Hill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The mining industry remains dug in on Capitol Hill, despite months of lawmakers' trying to change a 122-year-old law that has allowed companies to reap billions of dollars from mining on federal land while paying almost nothing to the government.

With only a few weeks left before adjournment, the prospect of a compromise bill passing Congress appears dimmer each day.

"There are three or four or more factions each threatening to kill any package that does not meet with their views," said Rep. George Miller, D-Calif., who has led the House negotiating team. He has said privately that he expects any compromise — if one is ever reached — to be opposed in the Senate, probably by a filibuster from Western mining-state senators.

The Senate passed an industry-supported mining reform bill nearly 16 months ago and the House approved a much stronger bill last November. But efforts all summer to blend the two proposals have made little headway.

Last week, Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., who leads the Senate negotiators, offered a new proposal that moved somewhat closer to what the House had approved. It brought immediate rebuke from the mining industry and Western senators.

"We cannot afford further concessions," 17 mining companies said in a letter to Sen. Harry Reid, D-Nev., who also has been trying to work out a settlement.

Miller said what the industry will accept falls far short of the reforms that are needed in a law that Sierra Club President J. Robert Cox recently called "a gold-plated gravy train" for mining companies.

The 1872 mining law, enacted to help open the West, allows the purchase of federal mining claims, sometimes worth billions of dollars, for as little as $2.50 an acre. It requires no mineral royalties to be paid. Environmentalists charge it also gives mining companies too much leeway to abuse the land.

While mining industry lobbyists say they want a mining reform bill as much as anyone, they contend that Miller wants restrictions and royalty payments that would throw thousands out of work, cause some mining companies to shift exploration overseas, and others to go out of business.

"The real agenda is to shut down mining and keep mining off the federal lands," says Jack Gerard, a lobbyist for the Minerals Resources Alliance which represents the mining industry.

In the months of negotiations, the Clinton administration has been conspicuously aloof on this issue. Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt has hardly been involved, although he has called mining law reform a top priority and criticized the giveaway of mining rights as "the biggest gold heist since the days of Butch Cassidy."

Some who have kept close tabs on the months of discussions say the administration remembered its failure to get Senate approval for a grazing reform bill earlier this year and that it has purposely kept away from the mining talks.

Some call for independent probe of NAACP leader's death

DAWSON, Ga. (AP) — As president of the local NAACP chapter, James Lofton Barnes helped blacks overcome racism and paved the way for them to become elected officials and community leaders.

So when he was killed in what investigators said was a robbery, some residents were dissatisfied and called on the U.S. Justice Department to determine if his death was racially motivated.

Michael Simmons, 23, who works across the street from the Dawson NAACP office, is one of those who refuse to accept robbery as a motive.

"The majority of youth around here don't believe that," he said. "It needs to be looked at a lot deeper than just a robbery."

Barnes' body was found Sept. 10 in a pool of blood, lying by a desk in his NAACP office in this southwest Georgia farming town of 6,200. His wallet, empty of cash, was found in the trash a block away.

John Bankhead, a spokesman for the Georgia Bureau of Investigation, said the 69-year-old Barnes died from a blow to the head.

"Everything we've uncovered so far points to robbery," Bankhead said. "He had been selling raffle tickets ... and he was known to have a large amount of cash on him."

The $2 tickets were to help finance the state convention of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

"He was very friendly and he trusted everybody," said Fred Jones, 42, who works in a store next to the NAACP headquarters. "He didn't feel anybody would do any wrong."

A suspect, described as a black man with a history of drug violations, is being held on parole violations. He has not been charged and he has not been identified.

State investigator Jim Baker said evidence is being analyzed and results make take several weeks.

John Cole Vodicka, a civil rights activist in southwest Georgia, asked the Justice Department to investigate Barnes' death. He said Terrell County has a long history of violence and intimidation of blacks.

"While I certainly do not maintain that Mr. Barnes' murder was racially or revenge-motivated, I think that this possibility deserves to be investigated to the fullest possible extent," Vodicka said in a letter to the department's Civil Rights Division.

A few days before the murder, Vodicka said, he and others were threatened by a white businessman who blamed blacks and Barnes, in particular, for problems facing the country.

FCC likely to approve new phone service between U.S., Britain

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal regulators are considering a plan that would give consumers another, potentially cheaper, way to make calls between the United States and the United Kingdom.

The Federal Communications Commission today is expected to approve requests to establish the new phone services, telecommunications executives said. The added competition, they say, could drive prices down for all U.S. consumers making calls to the United Kingdom.

ACC Global, a subsidiary of U.S. telecommunications company ACC Corp., wants permission to lease private telecommunications lines and hook them into public telephone networks in the United States and Britain, something that has not been allowed on either side of the Atlantic.

Only one other plan of this kind has been approved by the FCC, but that was with Canada, a much smaller market.

ACC Corp., based in Rochester, N.Y., will offer the service to U.S. customers in the seven states where it operates — New York, Massachusetts, Illinois, Ohio, New Hampshire, Vermont and Connecticut, said Francis Coleman, ACC Corp.'s secretary and corporate counsel.

People who live outside those areas can access the service by getting a company calling card.

In 1992, the most recent year complete information was available, U.S. companies charged customers $666 million to send 124 million calls, accounting for 733 million minutes to Britain, according to the FCC.

The new service should be cheaper than existing service to the United Kingdom because the company won't have to pay fees, known in the business as accounting rates, to complete phone calls in either country, FCC officials said.

But rivals, including AT&T Corp., said the plan should not be approved until the British government makes it easier for other companies to set up similar ventures.

Business crowd grows chic with popularity in upscale coffees

Learning the language

Trying to navigate your way through the new coffee culture and don't want to look like a novice at your local espresso bar? Some of the terminology you need to know:

The People:
Barista — the person serving at an espresso bar.

The Drinks:
Espresso — a shot of hot, strong black coffee.
Macchiato — an espresso shot topped with a touch of foamed milk.
Espresso con panna — espresso topped with whipped cream.
Caffe Americano — Espresso with hot water.
Cappuccino — a blend of espresso and steamed and foamed milk.
Caffe latte — same ingredients as cappuccino, but with more steamed and less foamed milk.
Caffe mocha — mostly steamed milk with a shot of espresso and mocha syrup topped by whipped cream and cocoa powder.

The Lingo:
Cup sizes are short, tall and grande.
You can also have a single, double or triple espresso shot.
Coffee is no-longer caffeinated or decaffeinated. In java jive that's leaded or unleaded. A half leaded, half unleaded drink is known as a schizo.
Anything with skim milk is called a skinny.
A drink that is both decaffeinated and contains skim milk is often called a no-fun.
A thunder thigh is one name for a quadruple grande whole-milk latte with chocolate syrup and extra whipped cream.
If the drink is to go, that's usually on wheels or with wings.

NEW YORK — Coffee. Through the centuries, muse to poets and composers, artists and scholars, bankers and businessmen.

Johann Sebastian Bach praised coffee as "the most precious of blisses" in his 1734 "Coffee Cantata."

In London, financial brokers met regularly at a coffee house called Johnathan's until 1773, when the business and building were purchased and renamed the Stock Exchange. Another coffee shop, opened by Edward Lloyd in 1688, eventually became Lloyd's of London.

Coffee is providing inspiration again. Coffee houses, long a part of European life, are proliferating in the United States, and the specialty brews they sell are humbling the regular cup of joe.

The invasion has spawned a new coffee culture, which by most accounts began in Seattle, spread South and most recently headed eastward to the Big Apple.

People who used to ask for a cup of black coffee are now asking for caffe lattes, espressos and cappuccinos.

They're even reading about coffee, in journals and trade magazines with names like Literal Latte, The Bean, Java Journal, Cafe Au Lait and Fresh Cup that have cropped up, filling espresso bar magazine racks.

"It's a megatrend," said Ted Lingle, executive director of the Specialty Coffee Association of America. "People are going through lifestyle changes. They are taking more time to enjoy life and are looking for better quality."

Not even the soaring price of coffee over the past few months has deterred the search for the perfect cup.

Two frosts in Brazil, the world's largest coffee exporter, helped boost the price of beans from $1.26 a pound earlier this year to $2.74 in mid-July on New York's Coffee, Sugar & Cocoa Exchange. And price volatility is expected for some time, since the damage done was to the crop to be harvested in mid-1995.

Many coffee bars and roasters have absorbed the additional expense, but others have raised prices between 10 and 30 percent.

While a standard cup of coffee goes for 50 cents, one New York coffee bar was selling its largest caffe lattes

Time is a big edge in investing

By Chet Currier

NEW YORK — In the pursuit of just about any savings and investment goal, time can be a formidable ally.

With enough time on your side, you don't need to be a wizard at picking stocks or other securities to amass a large nest egg.

You don't need any skill in timing the markets. You don't even need a large amount of capital to start out with.

In fact, says the mutual fund firm of Neuberger & Berman Management, an "early bird" investor who has no market savvy at all can beat a much wiser "late bird" on the sheer strength of compounding over time.

To illustrate this point, Neuberger & Berman calculated the results that would have been achieved by two hypothetical investors in the stock market over the past few decades.

"Early Bird" invested $20,000 via 10 annual $2,000 purchases from 1963 to 1972, haplessly buying each time on the very day that the Dow Jones industrial average made its high for the year.

"Late Bird," by contrast, put up $40,000 in 20 annual increments of $2,000 each from 1973 to 1992, adroitly making the investments at the Dow Jones industrials' low for the year on each occasion.

So Late Bird had the dual advantages of twice the investment capital and perfect market timing, while Early Bird had to rely entirely on a time advantage.

Yet, using Standard & Poor's 500-stock composite index as a yardstick, Early Bird came out ahead as of June 30, 1994, with a portfolio value of $264,207 to Late Bird's $256,037.

That result was achieved even though Late Bird was able to rack up an annual rate of return of 14.5 percent, compared to just 10.1 percent for Early Bird.

If you rerun this race using a variety of other gauges — the Dow, for instance, or the record of any given mutual fund — the results vary somewhat. In the case of most managed funds, Early Bird wins by a wide margin. In

Applying the personal touch

NEW YORK — It's the returned phone call, no matter how late the hour. It's the special gift, the shoulder to lean on. Touches like these have helped make Terrie Williams' reputation as a public relations expert and trusted adviser in the entertainment industry and beyond.

People who have benefited from Williams' skills range from neophyte job seekers to big names like Eddie Murphy, Nelson Mandela and Sally Jessy Raphael. A social worker from suburban New York turned entrepreneur, Williams made her mark in just six years as head of the largest minority-owned public relations firm in the nation, one that bears her name.

"She's very good, she's a pro," said Howard Rubenstein, a prominent press agent who has known Williams for 15 years. "She's honest. She gives you a very straight answer. There's no dancing with her. Her name and her stage presence pop up all over the place."

Since opening her doors in 1988, her client list also has included former New York City Mayor David N. Dinkins, Washington Mayor Sharon Pratt Kelly, comics Sinbad and Martin Lawrence, actor Wesley Snipes, actor and filmmaker Robert Townsend, Time Warner Inc., astronaut Mae Jemison and singer Janet Jackson.

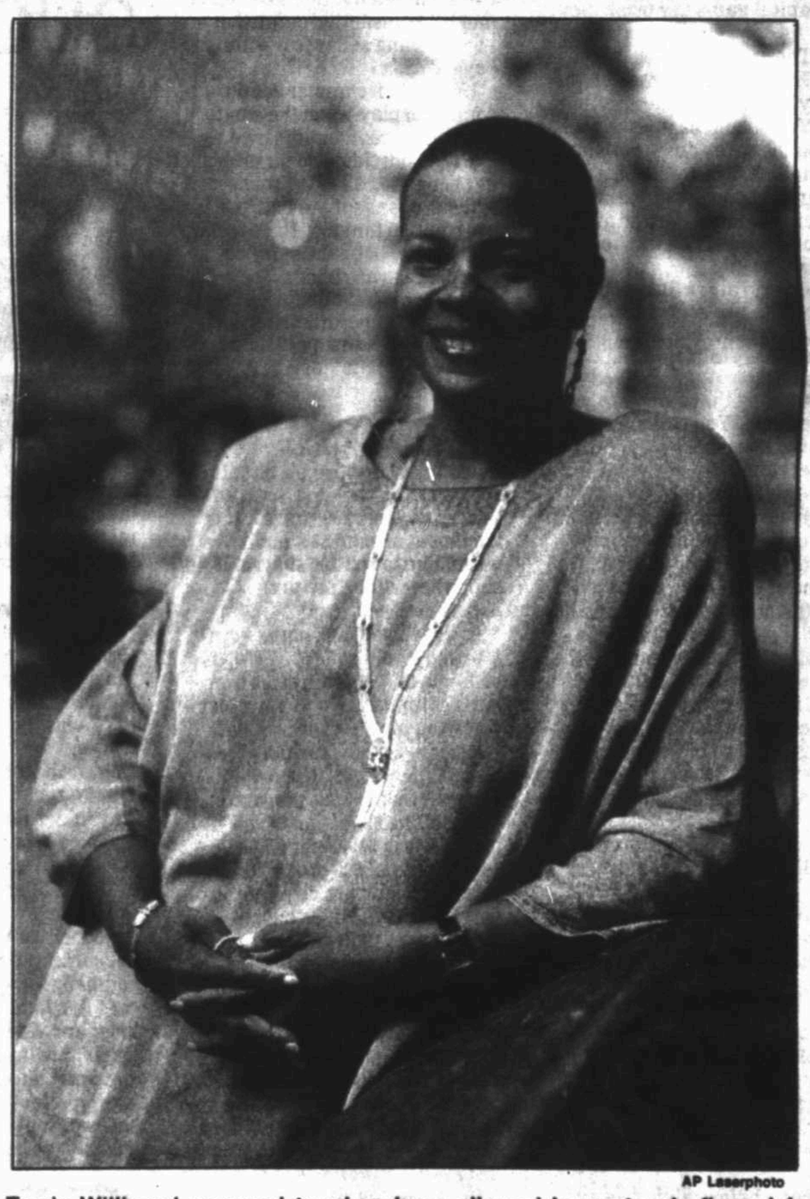

Williams, 40, author of a newly published book, "The Personal Touch: What You Really Need to Succeed in Today's Fast-Paced Business World," attributes her success to trying "very, very hard to think about the human beings" she deals with.

"I am a deeply spiritual, caring and thoughtful person and there isn't anything that I wouldn't do for someone that I care about," Williams said in a recent interview.

In the foreword to her book, Bill Cosby writes: "Terrie Williams has become a success because she knows how to deal with people and she knows how to treat everyone with respect."

Williams returns telephone calls with a husky, weary voice even as she prepares to board a red-eye flight in Los Angeles to come home to New York. She

Terrie Williams' personal touches have allowed her not only financial success in the public relations world, but also to become a widely respected figure and author of the new book, "The Personal Touch: What You Really Need to Succeed in Today's Fast-Paced Business World."

Bank on it

Neither a borrower nor a lender be. That seems to be the adage most Americans follow when it comes to friends and relatives. Sixty-four percent of all heads of households said they had not loaned $500 or more to a friend or relative in the past five years, and 78 percent had not received such a loan, according to a survey of 1,007 households by the financial services company Lutheran Brotherhood. The reason could be the high delinquency rate for these types of transactions. Among the respondents who made loans of $500 or more in recent years, only 38 percent said they had been paid back. Thirty-four percent said they hadn't been and didn't expect to be repaid.

Executive pay

Looking for a big pay raise? You'll have to go to Asia to see one of those. Executive salary raises in many Pacific Rim countries are expected to surpass those in the United States next year, according to a survey by William M. Mercer Inc. Managers in the Philippines can expect a 16 percent salary hike vs. a 9 pecent anticipated top inflation rate, while Indonesian managers can expect average 13 percent raises in the face of 8 percent inflation. U.S. executives, on the other hand, will barely stay ahead of inflation. Mercer says salaries are expected to increase an average 4 percent while the estimated top inflation rate is 3.6 percent. "Many of Asia's newer economies are expanding at a rapid rate, literally faster than qualified managers can be developed and trained," says Angela S. Nesbitt, Mercer's compensation authority.

Did you know?

Nearly 40 million Americans change addresses each year, making the United States the third most mobile country in the world, after New Zealand and Canada. Renters are more likely than homeowners to move — three out of four vs. one out of four, according to MovePower Inc., a Riverside, Conn., moving service.

Money to burn

When it comes to taxes, smokers pay a high price for their habit. Every state in the country imposes a tax on cigarette sales, although the rate varies greatly. Michigan is the leader, levying 75 cents per pack, followed by Washington, D.C., which levies 65 cents, according to CCH Inc., a Riverwoods, Ill., publisher of tax and business-law software. Not surprisingly, the lowest cigaratte taxes are in Virginia and North Carolina, which have the highest concentration of tobacco producers. The rates per cigarette pack in those states are 2.5 cents and 5 cents, respectively.

Municipal bond funds

Q. Each month I buy shares in a municipal bond fund at a price that fluctuates from month to month. I know interest is tax-free, but what about capital gains and losses? How can I determine them when I sell?

A. The capital gains are not tax-free. There are two methods that can be used to calculate them, according to Steven Norwitz, vice president at T. Rowe Price, the Baltimore-based mutual fund group. You can use either method, but you must stay with the one you choose for the entire time you hold that fund.

The simplest one is to use the average cost of all shares purchased. Some mutual fund companies, like T. Rowe Price, will calculate that method for you and send you the information with your statement at the end of the year.

The second method is to identify specific shares that you wish to sell. The advantage of using this method is that you can do more tax planning because you can sell the higher cost shares first, minimizing the amount of your capital gain and thus the amount of your taxes. If you wish to use this specific share method, you must keep careful records.

Deed changes

Q. My mother died recently. When my father dies, my sister and I will inherit our parents' house. Our parents paid only $18,000 for the house, which is worth much more than that now. Should he change the deed to make us joint owners?

A. Not unless your father has a very large estate. If your father leaves the house to you in his will, you will inherit it at its current market value, instead of $18,000. If you sell it at the market price, no capital gains tax will be due. If his entire estate is less than $600,000, no estate taxes will be due either.

Even if his estate is $1 million, you will probably be better off inheriting the house, said Joshua Rubenstein, an estates partner at Rosenman & Colin in New York. "What you need to do is compare the estate tax that would be due with the capital gains tax," Rubenstein said.

Mutual litigation

Q. I am an investor in a mutual fund that is being sued by other shareholders. Is there a way for small investors to join an existing class action suit? If an existing suit is successful, would investors who did not join the suit benefit?

A. Investors who file for a class action suit are not automatically granted one, explained Ronald Gilman, a lawyer in Memphis. "The judge first determines whether the common questions outweigh the individual questions," Gilman said.

If the judge allows a class suit, the plaintiffs must send a letter informing every member of the class. "So you would definitely have the opportunity to become a member," Gilman said.

In some cases, the judge says that only people who respond by a certain date will be included in the suit. In other cases, the judge says everyone will be included unless they opt out by a certain date. To protect your rights, you should respond when notified. The company does not have to offer the same settlement to members who do not participate.

What to do if you find yourself with an extra grand

By Vivian Marino
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — That big summer vacation came in well under budget. Utility bills were lower than usual. The boss finally agreed to a long-overdue raise.

Whatever the reason, you're starting a new season with a spare $1,000 on hand. Do you: (a) go shopping, (b) stash it in a shoe box, or (c) invest it?

While it may be tempting to pick up some extra fall duds, a few years from now they're likely to be hopelessly outdated.

But a $1,000 investment will likely have doubled in value, investment experts say.

Granted, a grand isn't much to play with by today's investment standards.

"What this is is a start," said Jonathan Pond, a Boston financial adviser and author of "The New Century Family Money Book." "A thousand dollars isn't going to buy you enough stock so you won't get eaten alive with commission ... You can't buy a municipal bond.

"(But) what happens often with people when they make the initial move, it starts to get a little addictive, and I refer to that as getting high on investing."

Not surprisingly, Pond and other investment advisers favor sticking with good-performing mutual funds since they provide even the smallest of investors with a diversified portfolio while offering reinvestment programs that automatically expand share holdings.

Investors with $1,000 get the same rate of return per share as those with $100,000.

Two-thirds of the nation's 5,379 outstanding mutual funds have initial minimum investments of $1,000 or less, according to Lipper Analytical, a New York firm that tracks mutual funds.

A few funds have no minimums. And many with minimums above $1,000 may relax their requirements for Individual Retirement Accounts or if investors make regular contributions, said Michael Lipper, the firm's president.

Lipper says novice investors may want to start off with domestic stock funds, preferably with low sales commission or none at all, known as no-loads. (The 100 Percent No-load Mutual Fund Council in New York publishes a listing of more than 200 no-load funds for $3 a copy.)

Pond agrees that's a good place to start, though he has a few specifics in mind, all of which allow a minimum initial investment of $1,000. Among his favorites is Neuberger & Berman Guardian, a no-load, growth-and-income fund up nearly 6 percent since the start of the year.

"It strikes me as a fund that does well in an up market and is always looking over its shoulder for disaster," he said.

Another of Pond's picks ventures overseas — SoGen International, a global stock fund. The fund, which carries a sales charge, is up around 10.5 percent from the first of the year.

"It's a perennial winner with a brilliant money manager. It's one fund where it's worth paying the load," Pond said.

Hank Madden, who runs Madden and Associates Financial Consultants in Jacksonville, Fla., suggests the Templeton family of global funds, which include Templeton World Fund, Templeton Global Opportunities Trust and Templeton Growth Fund. Investors can get into these with only $100; the minimum for subsequent investments is $25.

Merrill Lynch & Co.'s chief investment strategist Charles Clough is also bullish on global markets, particularly Latin America and Asia. He suggests exploring one of several available funds with investments in those regions.

"Indonesia is just beginning to come public. I think that the growth is still ahead," he said.

For the less daring, Clough suggests long-term zero-coupon Treasury bonds.

Conservative investors may also consider certificates of deposit, money market savings accounts, even U.S. savings bonds. But Robert K. Heady, publisher of the newsletter 100 Highest Yields, warns individuals to stick with short-term products for now, since interest rates are poised to rise further.

Estate planning needs attention

By Bill Doyle

Q: Which is the better way to give stocks to my children in order to reduce the size of my estate and, consequently, the tax due on what I leave? Should I sell the stock, pay capital gains tax on the profit I realize, then give them the rest of money? Or should I transfer ownership to them, so they will have to pay capital gains tax when they sell?

Doyle

A: There is no pat reply for that. Everything depends on the family's overall financial situation. You should base your decision on the taxes due -- both individually and in total. Be prepared to punch numbers into your calculator under the guidance of a good accountant or tax lawyer.

However, rather than going either of the two routes you are mulling over, here is a third -- and almost certainly better -- plan to consider:

Start giving that stock to your children now. You can make gifts of $10,000 in cash, stocks or other assets annually to each child or anyone else you please, with absolutely no tax consequences. For a married couple making joint gifts, that number is $20,000.

If one of the kids were to sell the gift stock, he or she would have to pay capital gains tax on his or her profit, which would be the difference between the "basis" -- cost for tax purposes -- and the proceeds from the sale. The basis of gift stock sold at a profit is the donor's basis, meaning your basis would become the children's basis.

However, if your children do not sell stock you gave them, no one in your family would owe any taxes on the stock.

Here are some strong words of caution: Because of the different regulations covering various types of taxes -- including federal and state income taxes, capital gains tax, gift tax and inheritance and estate taxes -- no one should make sizable gifts without individual and personal tax advice from a professional adviser.

In short, before giving away chunks of money, securities or other assets, sit down with someone who understands the tax consequences and have things explained to you.

Q: At the time a will is probated, common stocks in the estate are valued according to market price. In the case of municipal bonds, does their face value set the price for estate valuation purposes, or is the market quotation the determining factor?

A: Except in unusual circumstances, market price determines the value of all types of securities for estate valuation purposes. After all, that is what the securities will fetch if sold in an open-market transaction defined as "by a willing seller to a willing buyer."

Unusual circumstances do come into play when the estate holds an exceptionally large block of individual securities, such as enough to cause the market price to change if the entire block were put up for sale. But that is more likely to be the story with stocks than with bonds, especially municipal bonds.

"Munis" generally trade at prices determined by their current yield -- the annual interest they pay divided by current market price.

Q: I bought 100 shares of stock, at $48 a share, in 1983. It split, two-for-one, last year, so that I now have 200 shares. It is trading at around $50, and I would like to sell 100 shares. If I do sell, what will be my tax obligation?

A: If you sell 100 shares at $50, you would collect $5,000 and realize a $2,600 profit, less broker's commission and any other costs you incur. Your original "basis" -- cost for tax purposes -- was $48 per share. The two-for-one split made it $24 per share.

By selling shares on which your basis is $2,400 for $5,000, you would have $2,600 profit, less sales cost. You are required to report that net profit as a long-term capital gain on Schedule D of your federal income tax Form 1040.

COFFEE: Relative lack of danger appealing

(espresso and steamed milk) and cappuccinos for $2.90, while mochas (espresso, cocoa, steamed milk and whipped cream) were $3.15 — and that's before New York's 8.25 percent sales tax.

Part of the steep price is profit, but the hand-selected, usually fresher specialty coffee beans cost significantly more than the commercial-grade product usually sold on supermarket shelves.

Higher prices haven't kept Julien Rose from her daily iced latte.

"Addiction is addiction," Rose said as she sipped her coffee in one of New York's newer establishments. "The price increase only makes it more desirable. You always want what you can't afford."

That's the attitude coffee bar entrepreneurs are counting on.

In 1989, there were 200 coffee cafes in the United States, the Specialty Coffee Association said. By the century's end, there will be 10,000 cafes, espresso bars and carts nationwide, Lingle estimated conservatively.

With more than half the population 10 years of age or older drinking coffee, java is the second most popular beverage in the United States after soft drinks, according to the National Coffee Association.

Per-capita coffee consumption is about 1.8 cups per day. Still that's lower than in 1962, when about 75 percent of Americans were consuming 3.1 cups daily. And most of it is still the regular brew.

But it's the top-of-the-line drinks and their promise of hefty profits that have encouraged coffee-minded entrepreneurs.

The Speciality Coffee Association estimates cafes average $300,000 per year in sales, espresso bars $150,00 and espresso carts $75,000. Sales will reach $1.5 billion annually by 1999.

Costs, even with the higher price of beans, are relatively low. A pound of specialty coffee that averages $6 at the wholesale level yields between 50 and 60 cups.

In New York, the New School and The Learning Annex, centers for continuing education, offer courses on how to start a coffee bar. On the West Coast, the Specialty Coffee Association and others also offer seminars.

Starbucks Coffee Co., the Seattle-based chain considered to have initiated the java boom, has grown from four coffee bars in 1983 to 420 company-owned stores nationwide. Within four years, 100 more are planned in New York City alone, said chairman Howard Schultz.

Starbucks currently serves over 2 million mugs of joe a week, said Schultz, a six-cup-a-day man.

Borders Books & Music now has 57 espresso bars in stores in 32 states. Fifty opened in the last two years alone, said Dan Conetta, the Ann Arbor, Mich.-based company's vice president for marketing.

The increased competition is actually good for business, Schultz said. "It can help to educate the consumer."

In other words, once you've tasted the real thing, there's no going back to your old cup of java.

What is it about the good stuff that hooks people?

"There's a certain decadence to coffee but it's not dangerous," said Barnaby Hall as he downed a machiatto (espresso with a drop of steamed milk) in a New York coffee shop. "You can sit and soothe and intellectualize for hours. It makes you feel frightfully French and academic."

Some of the attraction is physical. Caffeine is a central nervous system stimulant that increases feelings of energy, alertness and general well-being, according to Roland Griffiths, a Johns Hopkins Medical School professor.

SUCCESS: Early relationships were rocky holds hands or gives a shoulder when necessary, even when she's resting in Mexico or in France with another client.

She also finds the unique gift. For Toni Fay, a friend and vice president at Time Warner who has hired Williams, it was a makeup compact that erupts into a wolf whistle when opened.

Williams grew up in Mount Vernon, N.Y., earned a bachelor's degree from Brandeis University and a master's in social work from Columbia University.

Stressed out in 1978 after being involved with terminally ill hospital patients for 2½ years, Williams took a public relations seminar.

She began freelancing and tackling jobs where she could do public relations work. Then, in the early 1980s, the publisher of Essence magazine wanted her to handle public relations for him.

"It was the dream job I had been waiting for," Williams said, but she was deeply involved in another job at the time. "There was no way it would have been right to leave that project."

Essence waited six months and in 1983 Williams moved over to the magazine for a five-year stint that ended with a vice presidency and a networking base to form her own company.

At her launch, she had two stars lined up: Eddie Murphy and Miles Davis. She and Davis clicked after she introduced herself when he was a patient at the hospital where she worked. She met Murphy at Davis' 60th birthday party.

Sometimes her relationships with clients are rocky. She has quit Murphy and he has fired her, but they have stuck it out. For her 40th birthday, Murphy sent "an incredible basket with a bottle of Geritol and Epsom salts," Williams said. "It really made me laugh."

Thoughts of the late Miles Davis, however, bring tears to her eyes.

"Miles was a wild, crazy, talented guy who could tell the funniest stories and was as real as real could be," Williams said. "He was just a very special person. I miss him more than words could ever say."

One of the things they had in common was a love of basketball. Davis regarded the play on parquet as poetry in motion, she said. "He used to hear music in the guys' sneakers streaking across the floor."

With the help of a friend who played in the National Basketball Association, Williams began to work for NBA players — and was like a sister to many a star and rookie.

She recognized that young players are but "6-foot-5 babies" who "are awesome on the court but they don't have someone in their lives to guide them."

That's why she became involved with an NBA program that teaches rookies how to socialize and how to deal with the stresses of fame and money at a young age.

John Salley, formerly of the Detroit Pistons and now with the Miami Heat, remembered his early, lonely NBA days in Motown and how Williams befriended him. She has given him advice on all manner of things, including how to handle his wedding a year ago.

"Ain't nobody better. The lady can do it all," Salley said. "She's a real giving woman."

That also involves the giving, or getting, of jobs. Hundreds of people, from attorneys interested in practicing entertainment law to public relations interns, have been through The Terrie Williams Agency.

"I have been able to send a lot of people to Terrie because of her unselfishness," said Anthony P. Carter, manager of public affairs at Bristol-Myers Squibb Co. "There's a joke about how 'I got my job through the New York Times.' There are a lot of African-Americans who can say: 'I got my job through Terrie Williams'. ... I'm a big fan."

Carol Lynn Patterson, now the owner of Correct Communications but a novice when she worked with Williams at Essence, said Williams is responsible for hundreds of people getting jobs.

MONEY: Save now for grandkid's retirement

the case of the Dow, Late Bird comes out with a slight edge.

But all the outcomes support a basic conclusion. In the words of Neuberger & Berman, "Although future results may vary, having sufficient time to compound returns appears to be more important than accurately timing the market."

Paul Merriman, an investment adviser in Seattle, has just devised a strategy aimed at carrying this same principle to a dramatic extreme.

After the birth of his grandson Aaron early this year, Merriman hatched a plan to make a one-time investment of $10,000 in a variable annuity held in trust until the year 2059, when the grandson will be 65.

If the investment can earn a compound rate of return of 11.2 percent between now and then, Merriman figures it will grow to $10 million — enough to finance a secure retirement for Aaron and leave a big bequest to charity afterward.

Friends and colleagues with whom Merriman has discussed this plan have been quick to point out many potential problems and pitfalls with it.

SWINGTIME!

"All right, guys," said Garry Lloyd to the group surrounding him. "You put your hand on the ladies' shoulder, not here, on her kidneys."

He twirled his partner, Barbara Elliott, around — hand on her side — to demonstrate his instructions.

"No lady likes to pushed in the kidneys," he continued, drawing laughter from the group of about 18 Midland residents standing against the wall.

"OK, everyone, away from the wall," said Ms. Elliott, as she turned from her partner and clapped her hands. "You don't learn by standing against the wall."

The men and women cast sideways glances at each other and took a few, embarassed steps forward.

"No, up here," the dark-haired instructor persisted. "You and you, up here, away from the corner. Everyone is in that corner. Come on, don't be shy. Get up here."

Several couples moved forward, followed by the rest of the class, and then the group, ranging from teen-agers to an older, white-haired couple, began to learn the finer points of swing dance.

Taught by Lloyd and Ms. Elliott, the class is part of Midland College's continuing education classes. In addition to swing, Ms. Elliott and Lloyd teach the three other continuing education dance classes: country and western, line dance and country and western swing.

The swing class takes place each Wednesday from 7:30 to 9 p.m. for six weeks. Participants meet at the at Bingham Dance Studio, 7 Imperial Center.

"We teach swing on Wednesday and country and western on Monday," Ms. Elliott said. "We teach the dances you see on TNN and the major networks. We also teach an accredited dance course at Odessa College."

The two, who have been teaching together in Midland for five years, limit their classes to 20 people.

"More than 20 and you can't give individualized attention," she said. "You have to be able to work one-on-one with the people."

Personalized attention was a big part of the lesson as Lloyd and Ms. Elliott walked from couple to couple, adjusting hand positions and checking steps.

"You are not doing pushups," Lloyd said, as he demonstrated a move called the Sugar Push. "It's a push. Ladies, you must have tension in your arms. Hypothetically, you would fall flat on your face if the man let go."

Lloyd took a student as his partner and demonstrated the step, letting go at the last moment.

"You didn't fall down flat on your face," he said, jokingly chiding the woman, who began to blush.

Ms. Elliott said the students would learn all the steps to swing, which could be done to country and western, rock or swing music.

"You can use these basic steps to anything," she said. "It's just a matter of picking them up and perfecting them."

Pollution, habitat reduction dooms native plants, wildlife

HOUSTON (AP) — Native Texas plants and wildlife are in decline, increasingly threatened by manmade pollution and reduction of habitat.

"People are impacting the hell out of this state and they just don't realize it," said Francis Rose, biology chairman at Southwest Texas State University. "They'll lament about not seeing these things anymore, but that's about as deep as it goes."

The last two Mexican wolves in West Texas died in 1970. Wildlife officials captured the last red wolf in East Texas in 1979.

The Texas Henslow's sparrow, which lived on the prairies around Houston, was declared extinct in 1983.

There were fewer than 160 Attwater's prairie chickens in Texas last spring, compared with a million at the dawn of the century.

"I think every biologist recognizes that animals are disappearing and plants are disappearing," said James Dixon of Texas A&M University, who has worked in Texas for more than 40 years. "It's not just extinctions, but declining populations."

The interlocking Texas flora and fauna create what is termed "biodiversity." In short, a variety of wildlife is needed for others to exist.

But 155 species in Texas are now classified as "endangered" or "threatened." Those lists have grown steadily.

"There's no debate at all," said Fred Gehlbach, a biology professor at Baylor University who has worked for 31 years in the state. "It's an open-and-shut case that biological diversity is declining in Texas and everywhere."

That concerns him and other scientists who believe that human society depends on biodiversity, nature's web of individual species and ecological systems.

The decline is more poignant now as the strongest attack on the federal Endangered Species Act in its 21-year history gathers force in Congress, Texas and elsewhere under a banner of "private property rights." The law is now up for reauthorization.

Dan Lay, one of Texas A&M's first wildlife science graduates, has witnessed these changes in his native East Texas for most of the century.

"When I was a kid, at night I'd take a fruit jar and get enough lightning bugs to make it light in a dark room," he recalled. "Now I rarely see a lightning bug."

In the 1950s, Lay counted more than 100 nests of red-winged blackbirds and dickcissels, another then-common bird, in one rice field in Hardin County. Both are now very rare.

Threat of jail helps county collect child support

■ Bexar County, South Texas has collected more than $59 million in support, through July, for the year.

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — The word is out in Bexar County that child support scofflaws often earn a trip to jail until the payments are forthcoming.

The strategy has captured the attention of state officials charged with collecting child support. It also has made the county more successful than others around Texas trying to round up similar money, according to those who work in the system.

"In San Antonio we had people handing over $100,000 to $150,000 in the courtroom rather than go to jail," said Assistant Attorney General Adrian Vasquez.

Through July 1994, Bexar County and South Texas have collected more than $59 million in support this year. Five years ago, the 26-county region had collected approximately $21 million for the same period.

"We are using San Antonio as a model for the state," said Ms. Vasquez, director of field operations for the state's child support collections program.

In Bexar County, Associate Judge Jim Rausch is credited with the program's success.

This summer, Rausch was named top child support judge in the country for his innovative collection methods, which include throwing delinquent parents in jail until child support is paid. Parents shirking their financial duties also may find themselves under house arrest on electronic monitoring or on probation.

The 2,500-member National Child Support Enforcement Association gave Rausch the award.

Even with such a successful program, state statistics show only one in four families ever sees any money.

The San Antonio and Austin regions led the state in the highest percentage of collections at 25 percent. In Houston and the Dallas-Fort Worth area, 18 percent and 17 percent of the cases filed with the attorney general's office were collected, respectively.

"Obviously you have to look at the enormity of the problem," said Ron Dusek, a spokesman for the Texas Attorney General's Office. "We get 20,000 new cases every month."

Ms. Vasquez hopes others around the state will learn from Rausch's example.

"If I could clone Jim Rausch and put him in each of the courthouses in the 254 counties we handle, I bet the collections would increase (twofold) or threefold," she said.

For his part, Rausch hesitates to accept credit for his court's success.

"We are very fortunate because the district judges, the district clerk, county commissioners and the sheriff have supported the program," he said in Sunday's editions of the San Antonio Express-News.

In many counties, child support judges aren't given jail space for delinquent parents, Rausch said.

"We need to keep the threat and reality of incarceration ever present," he said.

While some of the jailed deadbeat parents suddenly find money they swore they didn't have, Rausch said, others are placed in a work release program. That permits them to keep their jobs and then gain their freedom when a percentage of the child support is paid.

Lawyers advise renters to read fine print in their leases

FORT WORTH (AP) — Struggling with a leaky pipe in her bedroom and a sink that backs up in the kitchen, renter Donita Banks has another problem.

She hadn't read the fine print in her lease.

Ms. Banks, frustrated by her landlord's apparent inaction, found the answer when she went to the Texas Tenants Union in Dallas. It asked to see her lease.

The document required that repairs be requested in writing.

"If your lease requires you to give written notice, then you need to have given it in writing before he is obligated to fix," said Sandy Rollins, the tenants union's executive director.

It's just one example, lawyers say, of a big problem in mediating landlord-tenant disputes. Renters often don't read their leases — and don't know their rights.

In Ms. Banks' case, Ms. Rollins advised her to mail a certified letter requesting the specific repairs, followed by a letter seven days later if the landlord had failed to respond to the first request within a reasonable time.

Precinct No. 3 Judge Sandy Prindle of Fort Worth said that aside from maintenance and repairs, nearly all other landlord-tenant cases involve rent, evictions or security deposits.

"An eviction case in Texas is the fastest legal proceeding in the state," said Prindle, who is also legislative chairman for the Justices of the Peace and Constables Association of Texas.

"It is designed that way because the rental clock is running all the time," he told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

On a recent morning, all nine cases before Prindle were evictions, with each proceeding lasting just minutes and ending with an order for the renter to vacate and an award to the landlord for back rent.

The tenants union and the Apartment Association of Tarrant County, a landlord group, say outstanding bills usually are turned over to collection agencies, with the renter's name often forwarded to credit bureaus.

DEAR ABBY

Family's lost photo album finds its way back home after many years

DEAR READERS: A few weeks ago, I published a letter from Ellen S. of Lakeview Terrace, Calif., saying she had found an old photo album in a vast mountain of junk that a previous tenant had left behind in an old Victorian mansion near downtown Los Angeles. The album contained snapshots dating from the late '30s through the '50s. Some were of Japanese American men wearing U.S. infantry uniforms, vintage 1942-1945, as well as family members of several generations.

Van Buren

The album apparently had belonged to a Japanese American family named "Tsunekawa."

Knowing that I would be interested in returning the album to the Tsunekawa family, Ellen sent it to me, asking if I could locate the family, who were among the many Japanese Americans who had been sent to an internment camp in Poston, Ariz., for the duration of World War II.

Among the letters I received was the following:

"DEAR ABBY: Our parents were in Poston, Ariz. — they were the only Tsunekawa family in Los Angeles. Both are now deceased. Dad died 20 years ago. Mother died four years later.

"Thank you for wanting to locate us. — MR. AND MRS. JIMMY TSUNEKAWA, MONTEBELLO, CALIF."

This Tsunekawa family appeared to be the family to whom the album belongs. When I contacted them, I learned that they had received telephone calls from as far away as Hawaii and New Zealand. Our conversation convinced me that they were indeed the family Ellen and I were seeking.

Readers, here's the rest of the story: After the parents passed away, one of the Tsunekawa brothers cleaned out his parents' home. Not being a very sentimental person, he discarded many items other family members might have kept. (He left some of the better things on the porch, instructing the neighbors to help themselves to anything they wanted.)

After many years, this precious photo album is now back in the hands of the Tsunekawa family — thanks to the sensitivity of Ellen S. Another happy ending!

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married a little over a year. Seven times since our marriage, "Bob" has mentioned splitting up. The last three occasions were within the last month. Once, Bob went so far as to telephone his lawyer, but when the lawyer returned his call, he refused to take it.

His talk about splitting up usually occurs after we have had a little disagreement. The next day there is no continued discussion of the matter or the circumstances that led up to it. It just becomes a dead issue — until the next time Bob is unhappy with me.

I have told him that mentioning "splitting up" robs me of my sense of security in our marriage. He says he understands how I feel, offers a weak apology, but he continues to mention splitting up whenever he is not totally happy with me.

He refused to seek marriage counseling and will not permit me to go alone. — WORRIED

DEAR WORRIED: A husband who will not permit his wife to seek marriage counseling desperately needs it. And so does his wife. Go alone, or you may be the one to suggest "splitting up" some time in the future.

Gerulaitis dies

SOUTHAMPTON, N.Y. — Vitas Gerulaitis, once one of the best tennis players in the world, died Sunday, police said. He was 40 years old.

Gerulaitis was found dead at the home of an acquaintance shortly after 3 p.m. EDT Sunday, Southampton Village police said.

Police said a preliminary investigation did not appear to reveal any suspicious circumstances. The cause of death will be determined after an examination by the Suffolk County Medical Examiner.

Gerulaitis, a former Australian Open winner, played Wednesday in Seattle on the Champions Tour, a circuit for men's players 35 and over. He withdrew from the tournament the next day because of a bad back.

Gerulaitis, who left the main tour in 1986, worked last weekend for CBS on the U.S. Open as a studio analyst. He also played in the men's 35 and over doubles event during the Open.

"Everybody in tennis knew Vitas as an outgoing and gregarious type. It's a real shock," ATP Tour spokesman Kevin O'Keefe said.

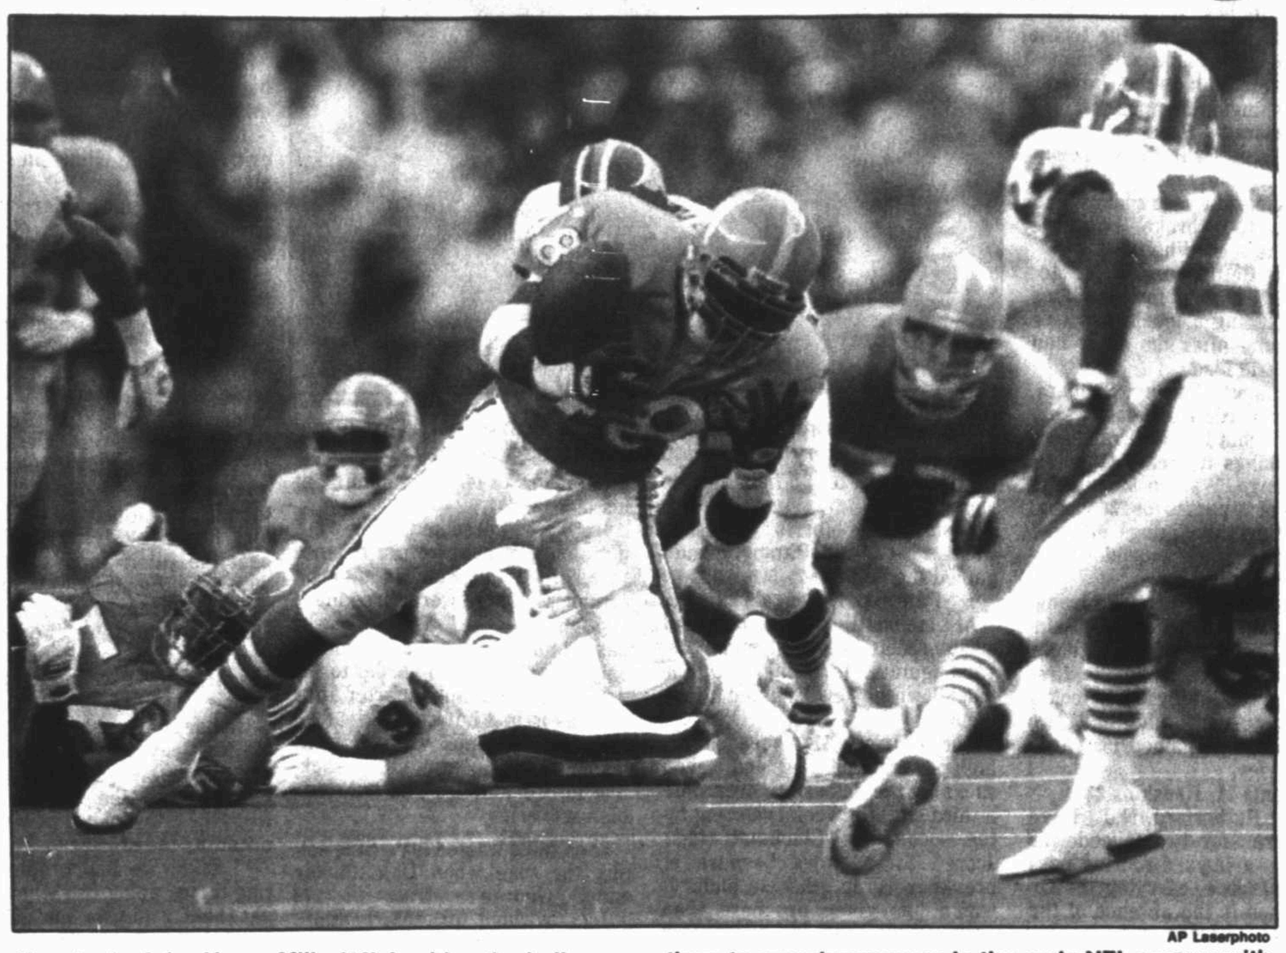

An excellent shot-maker who played with great flair, Gerulaitis had acknowledged using cocaine during the late 1970s and admitted his drug use and late-night partying undercut his ability as a player.

Gerulaitis beat John Lloyd in the final of the 1977 Australian Open for his lone Grand Slam title. He lost the finals of the 1979 U.S. Open and the 1980 French Open. He won the 1975 Wimbledon doubles title with Sandy Meyer.

Gerulaitis was No. 4 in the world in 1984. He won 27 singles titles and nine doubles championships.

Oilers fail to pay Bills

HOUSTON — Steve Christie and Bruce Smith were up to their old habits again on Sunday — beating the Houston Oilers.

Buffalo's Jim Kelly and Andre Reed played a personal game of catch to set up five field goals by Christie, and Smith squashed Houston's offense with four sacks, leading the Bills to a 15-7 victory.

The Bills (2-1) got their third straight victory over the Oilers, who started the season 0-3 for the first time since 1984.

"When you need big plays, you need big people and he's one of those big people," Kelly said of Smith.

Smith battered Oilers quarterback Bucky Richardson all afternoon and delivered a jolting blind-side sack late in the third quarter that killed an Oilers' drive at the Bills' 27.

Smith's sacks resulted in 28 yards in losses. It was his second four-sack performance; the other was against Indianapolis in 1990. Smith was going against veteran center Bruce Matthews, playing at tackle for the first time this season.

"They put a guy out there that hasn't played out there in eight years," Smith said. "It was real tough for him."

Dolphins remain unbeaten

■ On "Throwbacks Weekend," Miami takes the term literally to win the battle of unbeatens.

Associated Press

Ingenuity, interceptions and Terry Kirby helped the Miami Dolphins halt the hex cast by the New York Jets.

Kirby rushed for 100 yards, an injury-plagued defense intercepted four passes and Keith Jackson improvised a lateral for a touchdown Sunday on "Throwbacks Weekend" as unbeaten Miami handed New York its first loss, 28-14.

■ NFL Roundup

Miami (3-0) took sole possession of first place in the AFC East and beat division rival New York for only the second time in the past seven tries.

"I was tired of losing to the Jets," said J.B. Brown, who had an interception to set up a touchdown. "Tell all the New Yorkers that live down here that we kicked the Jets' butt."

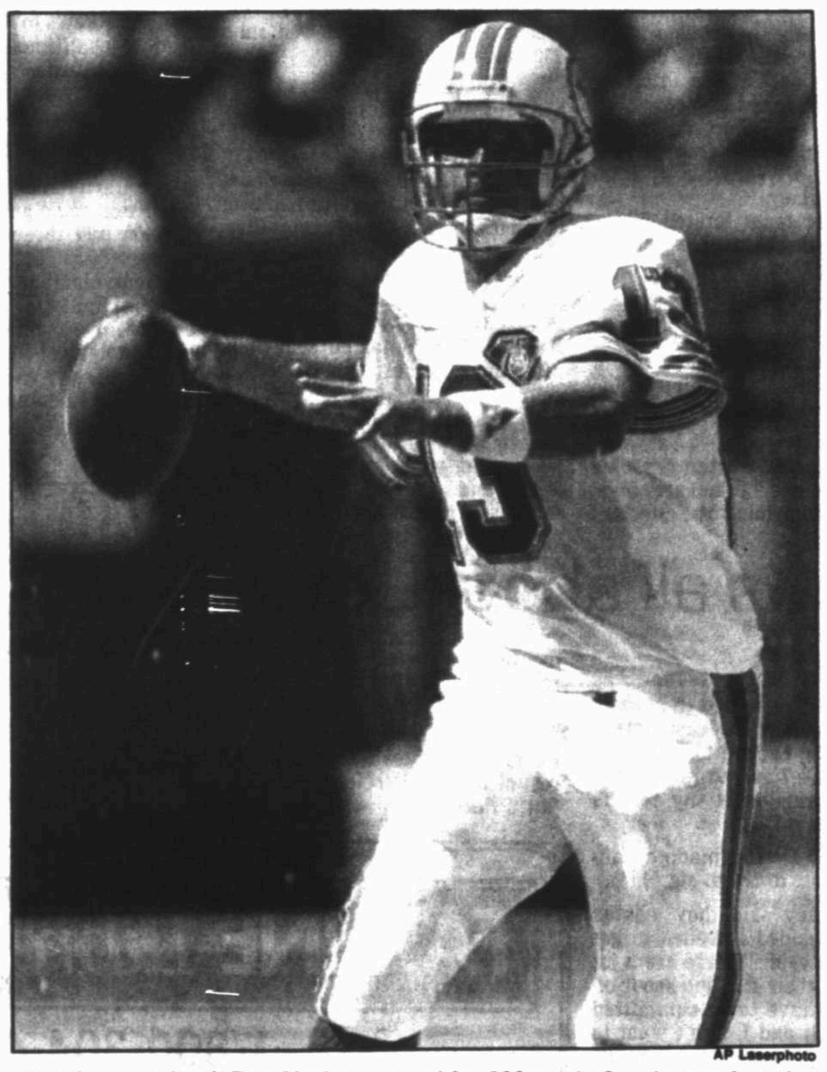

Dan Marino made Miami's domination complete by hitting 23 of 31 passes for 289 yards and two scores.

"I'm very proud of this team," coach Don Shula said. "That was one outstanding effort."

The quick start bodes well for the Dolphins, who made the playoffs six of the seven previous times they began 3-0.

Cowboys have spy in camp

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — There's a spy telling the Dallas Cowboys all about the Detroit Lions.

Remember Rodney Peete? Last year he was quarterbacking for the Lions. This year he has spilled Detroit's innermost secrets to Dallas.

Peete won't be on the field Monday night when the two teams meet unless Troy Aikman gets hurt or there is a rout. Peete is being paid $1 million this year as injury insurance, backing Aikman.

But the Cowboys also get a bonus this week because of Peete's knowledge of the Lions' run-and-shoot offense.

"I hope we blow the Lions out by 40 points so I can get in there," said Peete, still bitter about his treatment by the club. "I've given the Cowboys as much help as I can. I have no loyalties or ties to Detroit."

Peete started 47 games for the Lions and passed for over 1,000 yards in each of his five NFL seasons.

"I can help the Cowboys most with the Lions personnel," he said. "I know who can beat whom. Who you can throw on deep. Which linemen aren't good. The system has changed a little bit this year but I pretty much know what they are going to do."

Peete has been euphoric about his treatment with the defending Super Bowl champion Cowboys.

"It wasn't a lot of fun losing every week at Detroit," Peete said. "I still have some friends there but I was dis-

Gators hold off Nebraska in rankings

By Rick Warner
AP Football Writer

Top-ranked Florida increased its lead over No. 2 Nebraska in The Associated Press college football poll Sunday, while Penn State climbed to No. 5 following its third straight rout.

Florida widened its margin over Nebraska from nine points to 17 points after beating Tennessee 31-0 Saturday, the Volunteers' worst home defeat in 70 years.

The Gators received 33 first-place votes and 1,507 points from a nationwide media panel. Nebraska, which defeated visiting UCLA 49-21, got 20 first-place votes and 1,490 points.

Nebraska still is No. 1 in the USA Today-CNN coaches' poll, but its lead over Florida was narrowed to six points.

Florida State, which downed Wake Forest 56-14, remained third in the AP poll with three first-place votes and 1,376 points. Idle Michigan held fourth with one first and 1,336 points.

Penn State moved up one spot after beating Iowa 61-21. The Nittany Lions, who have won their first three games by an average of 39 points, got three first-place votes and 1,317 points.

Rounding out the Top 10 were Miami, Colorado, Arizona, Notre Dame and Auburn. Miami and Arizona each got one first-place vote.

The Hurricanes, who were off Saturday, dropped one place. Colorado stayed No. 7 after beating Wisconsin 55-17, idle Arizona moved up one place, Notre Dame fell one spot after rallying to beat Michigan State 21-20 and Auburn rose one place after defeating LSU 30-26.

Alabama was No. 11, followed by Texas A&M, North Carolina, Virginia Tech, Texas, Wisconsin, Washington, UCLA, Southern California, Ohio State, Oklahoma, Washington State, Tennessee, North Carolina State and Indiana.

Virginia Tech climbed four notches to No. 14 after beating Boston College 12-7.

Brigham Young, No. 22 last week, fell out of the rankings after losing.

forms teams wore Sunday. So are John Elway and the Denver Broncos.

For BuddyBall, it's been three losses, the last a 32-0 embarrassment by the Cleveland Browns. The defense engineered by a defensive specialist has given up 66 points. And the Cardinals' offense is the league's lowest rated.

"I think we're playing with our best people. We've just got to play better with them," said Ryan after Cleveland (2-1) handed him his first shutout in six seasons as a head coach.

And true to his stubborn nature, Ryan vows to stick to his formula, making only minor changes during Arizona's upcoming bye week.

Ryan's move to shake up his team by starting Jim McMahon in place of Steve Beuerlein did nothing to help the Cardinals offense. He was 19-for-38 for 169 yards with two interceptions before being yanked for Jay Schroeder.

And Arizona's ground game produced just 63 yards.

"I think our offense is fixable," Ryan said. "It's just a matter of people starting to pick up the blitz and taking a stand and playing tough.

"I don't think anybody quit on me today. I pulled a couple of guys because they just didn't have that look in their eye that I want to see."

The folks in Denver can't like what they've seen, either. Elway has thrown interceptions for touchdowns in all three games and the Broncos are 0-3 after a 48-16 home loss to the Los Angeles Raiders.

Sunday's action was part fashion show as teams wore reproduction uniforms for the NFL's "Throwbacks Weekend" celebrating the league's 75th anniversary. The duds ranged from the garish — the Steelers' black and gold stripes and the Packers' blue and yellow ensemble — to the quaint — the officials' slouchy caps.

The Cardinals had minus-1 yard on offense in the first quarter, didn't get a first down until 10 minutes remained in the second period, and got past midfield five times in the game. Two of those forays ended in long missed field goals by Greg Davis, one from 49 yards and the other from 58; two others were stopped by interceptions, including Eric Turner's 93-yard TD return.

Arizona's defense did little to rattle Vinny Testaverde, intercepted six times in his first two games. Testaverde ran for one touchdown and passed for two more with only one interception.

Raiders 48, Broncos 16

At Denver, Jeff Hostetler threw for 338 yards and four touchdowns as the Raiders offense generated 424 yards. Los Angeles (1-2) scored on its first four possessions en route to a 28-3 halftime lead.

Denver lost its sixth straight game, and Raiders coach Art Shell improved to 10-1 against the Broncos. Denver has lost five of its last eight at home.

Chargers 24, Seahawks 10

At Seattle, Stan Humphries connected with Tony Martin on a team-record 99-yard scoring play to hand the Seahawks (2-1) their first loss.

Humphries completed 19 of 29 passes for 262 yards and one touchdown. Martin caught six passes for 152 yards as San Diego (3-0) got off to its best start since 1981.

Because of roof damage to the Kingdome, the game was played at Husky Stadium on the University of Washington campus.

49ers 34, Rams 19

At Anaheim, Calif., Steve Young passed for two touchdowns and scored twice on 1-yard sneaks, and the 49ers (2-1) broke the game open in the second half.

Jerome Bettis rushed for 104 yards on 21 carries for the Rams (1-2), including a touchdown late in the game after the 49ers had taken a 34-13 lead.

Cornerback Deion Sanders, signed as a free agent last week, made his debut for San Francisco.

Vikings 42, Bears 14

At Chicago, Warren Moon completed 22 of 29 passes for 236 yards, resurrecting the Vikings offense, which had only one touchdown entering the game.

Chicago (1-2) had trouble bringing down Terry Allen and containing Cris Carter. Carter had eight catches for 79 yards in the first half, when the Vikings (2-1) took a 10-0 lead. Allen, who had two touchdown runs, gained 159 yards on 22 carries.

Giants 31, Redskins 23

At East Rutherford, N.J., Dave Meggett ran for two touchdowns and threw a 16-yard scoring pass to Aaron Pierce, carrying the Giants offense in the absence of the injured Rodney Hampton.

John Friesz was 32 of 50 for a career-high 381 yards, with two touchdowns and one interception for the Redskins (1-2).

Washington scored on its last four possessions of the first half to take a 20-17 lead before the Giants came back.

Eagles 13, Packers 7

Reggie White returned to Philadelphia, where he played eight seasons, to see the Eagles defense register six sacks, two interceptions and a forced fumble.

The Eagles (2-1) scored on two 26-yard field goals from Eddie Murray and a 1-yard run by Randall Cunningham.

His former team limited White to three tackles by double- and triple-teaming him. Green Bay (1-2) took a 7-0 lead on Brett Favre's 37-yard TD pass to Reggie Cobb.

Steelers 31, Colts 21

At Pittsburgh, Barry Foster ran for 179 yards, upstaging Colts rookie Marshall Faulk, who was held to just 61.

Bam Morris, Foster's rookie backup, had one TD and set up another score, helping the Steelers (2-1) overcome a 14-0 Indianapolis lead.

Foster and Morris outrushed Faulk 235-61, and Pittsburgh outgained the Colts (1-2) 500-179.

Patriots 31, Bengals 28

At Cincinnati, Drew Bledsoe had a club-record fourth straight 300-yard game, throwing for one touchdown in New England's first victory.

The Patriots (1-2) needed his high-powered passing and seven sacks by the defense to overcome a third straight woeful showing by the secondary. Cincinnati (0-3) scored three times because of breakdowns in the secondary, which has given up more than 1,000 yards and 11 touchdown passes in three games.

Saints 9, Buccaneers 7

At Tampa, Fla., Morten Andersen kicked three first-half field goals as the Saints (1-2) avoided their worst start in 14 years.

The Buccaneers (1-2) missed a 54-yard field goal as time expired.

The New Orleans defense, which yielded 68 points in the first two weeks of the season, allowed only 232 yards.

Chiefs 30, Falcons 10

ATLANTA — Joe Montana seems to always have his way with the Atlanta Falcons.

He did again, passing for a Georgia Dome record 361 yards and two touchdowns as the Kansas City Chiefs downed the Falcons 30-10.

Montana completed 28 of 39 passes, including scoring tosses of 13 and 34 yards to J.J. Birden, as Kansas City remained unbeaten after three games. Atlanta fell to 1-2.

It was Montana's seventh victory in a row in Atlanta, the other six coming when he was with the San Francisco 49ers. It also lifted his career record in starts against the Falcons to 14-5, including 12 of his last 13.

He was intercepted twice, but got plenty of help from a defense that forced the Falcons into six turnovers. There were three interceptions of Jeff George, who passed for 299 yards and Atlanta's only touchdown, a 25-yarder to Andre Rison in the final quarter after the Chiefs had built a 23-3 lead.

Derrick Thomas was the ringleader of the defense with a sack, two forced fumbles and two fumble recoveries.

The Chiefs wasted little time setting the tone when Dale Carter ended George's string of 279 passes without an interception, third-best in NFL history. Carter returned it 24 yards to the Atlanta 28, setting up the game's first touchdown.

Carter stepped alongside Rison, the league's leading receiver, to make the interception on the game's fifth play. George completed his first two attempts in the game.

Carter's defense on Rison was one of the key's to Kansas City taking a 10-0 halftime lead. He simply took the Atlanta star, who had 26 catches the first two weeks, out of the game. Rison's only catch in the first half came on the last play, a 20-yard gain to the Kansas City 43, where Carter made the tackle before Rison could get out of bounds.

Rison had three catches for 72 yards.

It took Montana only four plays to score following Carter's interception, overcoming a holding infraction against Keith Cash with a 20-yard pass to Willie Davis at the Atlanta 16. Montana hit Birden in the end zone after 4:57 had elapsed.

OILERS: Houston fails to mount point attack

(From 1C)

Darby kept Houston out of the end zone by intercepting Richardson's pass in the end zone with 6:15 to play. Richardson averted the shutout with a 22-yard touchdown pass to Patrick Coleman with 3:51 to play.

"Bruce played a great game, he got a lot of pressure on them," Buffalo coach Marv Levy said. "We didn't prepare for a quarterback, we just prepared for the run-and-shoot and the things they do."

The offensive problems brought criticism from Houston's defensive players.

"We got to get help from the offense," safety Bubba McDowell said. "We got to get help. The Patriots scored 35 points against them."

Cornerback Cris Dishman joined the chorus.

"It's impossible to play their offense and our offense," Dishman said.

Christie beat the Oilers in the 1992 wild card playoff game with an overtime field goal that capped the biggest comeback in NFL history for a 41-38 victory. He even beat the Oilers in this preseason with a field goal as time expired.

"Kicking indoors is a lot easier," Christie said. "I practice in the wind. But once I hit the first one, felt like I was getting into a groove."

Richardson, subbing for injured starter Cody Carlson, failed to ignite the Oilers offense in the first half, despite the roaring cheers from the crowd when he was introduced as the starter.

"I think we had problems getting things going and when we did get them going we shot ourselves in the foot," Richardson said. "We made some changes on the line and we just have to get better. Those guys played as hard as they could."

Richardson had several of the scrambles that have made him a crowd-pleaser near the end of the game, but they came too late to help the Oilers avert defeat.

"Bucky took off, and he's capable of doing that some, but he also threw a couple of balls on the run and some of those didn't work," Jack Pardee said.

Christie warmed up with second-quarter field goals of 37, 42 and 48 yards, giving the Bills a 9-0 halftime lead that could have easily been bigger.

Christie kicked two more field goals in the second half, a 29-yarder in the third quarter and a 48-yarder in the fourth period that tied his career high for one game. He kicked five field goals against Miami in a playoff game after the 1992 season.

OILER NOTES: The Oilers and Bills celebrated the NFL's "Throwbacks Weekend" promotion by wearing the uniforms of their championship seasons in the American Football League. The Oilers won the first AFL championship in 1960. They split two games with Buffalo that year and beat the Raiders in the title game. The Bills won the title in 1964 with a pair of victories over the Oilers and a victory over the San Diego Chargers in the title game. ... Bruce Smith entered the game with 106½ career sacks. ... Both teams' offensive lines were revamped for the game. Houston's All-Pro center Bruce Matthews moved to left tackle and Erik Norgard became the starting center. Glenn Parker started at left tackle for the Bills in place of injured John Fina. ... Buffalo's Andre Reed caught a 10-yard pass in the first quarter for the 600th of his career. Reed became one of 13 players to reach 600 catches in a career. Reed finished with six catches for 89 yards. ... Smith had a chance for a fifth sack in the fourth quarter. He was bearing down on Richardson but was knocked off balance by teammate Darryl Talley. ... By averting the shutout, the Oilers extended their string to 77 games without being shut out, dating to a 34-0 loss to Kansas City on Nov. 26, 1989.

appointed in the way I was treated. I'm with a better team and a better organization now. These people know what they're doing and have two Super Bowl rings to prove it."

Peete said Detroit is a strange organization.

"The way they handle things in Detroit is to keep all the players in the dark, they don't want anybody to know anything," Peete said. "Everything here is definitive. In Detroit, nobody even knew what the next drill was going to be. You never knew where you stood. It was tough to deal with. You kept putting a lot of pressure on yourself you shouldn't have been put-badly handled. Everything was so ting on yourself.

"The quarterback situation was disruptive. It was hard to get any continuity going. At least here I know I'm the backup to Troy Aikman. I don't have to go around here wondering what my role is with this team."

Peete said Detroit made a half-hearted effort to try to sign him.

"Yeah, they said they wanted me but I decided I needed to get out," Peete said. "There are a lot of flaws in their run-and-shoot offense. You have to be committed to running it and I didn't want to go back and struggle. They change the offense every year. I want to learn and grow in a good solid system."

Peete said the main thing he told the Cowboys was to concentrate most of their efforts on stopping running back Barry Sanders.

"They put so much emphasis on Barry that if a team stops him the rest of the team pretty much goes flat," Peete said.

Tracy nails oval victory

NAZARETH, Pa. (AP) — Paul Tracy finally got his first oval track victory Sunday, leading a 1-2-3 sweep by Marlboro Team Penske in the Bosch Spark Plug Grand Prix.

Taking the lead from pole-winning teammate Emerson Fittipaldi on the first lap around the one-mile oval on the Roger Penske-owned Nazareth Speedway, Tracy led 192 of the 200 laps.

Al Unser Jr., who clinched the Indy-car PPG Cup championship a week earlier with a second-place finish at Elkhart Lake, Wis., finished second again, outdueling Fittipaldi, who wrapped up the runner-up spot in the championship with Sunday's third-place finish.

It was the fifth Penske sweep of the season.

Teo Fabi, driving for the Midland-based Jim Hall Racing Team, placed sixth for a Top 10 finish.

Tracy, who earned the seventh victory of his career — all of them for Penske — said this latest win, which moved him past Michael Andretti into third place in the season standings, was something of an apology to his crew.

"It's all a credit to the team," the 25-year-old Canadian said. "Last week, I had a lot of anxiety because my wife was having a baby and I said some things about the engine when I got out of the car that I shouldn't have. But everything's OK now."

Tracy, whose only other victory this season came in June at Detroit, had dominated the race at Elkhart Lake before a daring pass by Jacques Villeneuve put him into second. Just a few laps later, Tracy's engine blew, knocking him out of the race.

The baby, the Tracys' second child, was born Tuesday.

Tracy, who originally was hired by Penske in 1991 as a test driver, has done thousands of laps at Nazareth, one of two tracks owned by his boss.

"You could say this was just another test, only with 26 cars on the track," he said, smiling.

Tracy beat Unser to the finish line by 8.459 secnds, about a third of a lap.

The race was slowed by two crashes, the first knocking Mario Andretti out of what was his last race on his hometown track.

Andretti, 54, who will retire after the season-finale Oct. 9 at Monterey, Calif., was having severe handling problems early in the race. He was slipping steadily deeper into the field before banging together with Eddie Cheever on lap 41. Both cars slammed into the wall.

"I got a bump in the back on the back straightaway and I went right into the wall," Andretti said. "There was a lot of traffic and, at that point there were a lot of cars around and ...someone miscued at that point.

Wallace limps to gasless win

DOVER, Del. (AP) — In one of the more bizarre endings to a NASCAR race, Rusty Wallace led a frustrated field of racers across the finish line at a virtual standstill pace Sunday to win the SplitFire 500.

With his Ford Thunderbird out of gas and a tire flattened, Wallace's car limped around the one-mile Dover Dover Downs International Speedway as the race finished under a caution flag.

Right behind him with gas and tires, but fresh out of laps, were Dale Earnhardt and Darrell Waltrip.

Wallace was lucky he was able to keep the car moving — Earnhardt would have won had it stopped at any time on the final lap. He was even luckier to have been in contention at the end.

First, Mark Martin, one of a record-tying 12 drivers to lead in the fiercely contested event, blew a big lead and eventually crashed out.

Then, with two laps left and

■ SplitFire 500

NASCAR ready to end the last of 13 caution periods with a one-mile shootout — which Wallace could not have completed — Rick Mast and Sterling Marlin ran out of fuel. That necessitated a finish under caution and negated a final showdown between Earnhardt and Waltrip.

The victory was the third straight for Wallace at the Monster Mile, making him the first driver to accomplish that since David Pearson in 1972-73. It was his series-leading seventh victory this year and 17th over the last two seasons.

The victory came in the car Wallace's team has christened Midnight. It has won 13 races in 27 outings, and has finished in the top 10 in all but two of those races. The win was the 38th of Wallace's career, moving him into 14th position in Winston Cup career victories.

Wallace averaged 112.556 mph in a race slowed by caution for 72 laps. He collected $55,055 from a purse of $935,461.

At the start, Geoff Bodine backed up a track-record qualifying speed of 152.840 mph. He dominated the race for the first 180 laps, but was outrun over the last 320.

After practically all the big names on the circuit took turns leading, Martin settled in at the point with 80 laps remaining. But on the 479th of 500 laps, Martin hit the lapped car of Ricky Rudd.

Fifteen laps later, after Wallace had closed a six-second deficit to about two, damage to the left front of Martin's car finally did him in. His tire flattened coming off the high-banked fourth turn and he went hard into the wall.

The Chevrolets of Earnhardt, Waltrip and Ken Schrader followed Wallace across the line. Bodine was fifth in a Ford, followed by the Pontiac of Kyle Petty. Terry Labonte finished seventh in a Chevrolet, the last car on the lead lap.

Sullivan finally cashes in title

Associated Press

ENDICOTT, N.Y. — Mike Sullivan, who missed the cut in eight of his last 11 tournaments, sank three birdies on the back nine Sunday to overtake Jeff Sluman and win the B.C. Open by four strokes.

Sullivan closed with a 5-under-par 66 for a four-round total of 18-under 266, one stroke shy of the En-Joie Golf Club record set in 1982 by Calvin Peete.

It was the third PGA Tour victory of Sullivan's 17-year career and first since 1989 when he won the Independent Insurance Agent Open, now the Shell Houston Open. Sullivan earned $162,000, the biggest paycheck of his career.

Sullivan of Ocala, Fla., had made the cut in 21 tour events all season. His best previous finish this year was second at the Deposit Guaranty Golf Classic in mid-July when he lost a playoff to Brian Henninger.

Safeco Classic

KENT, Wash. — Deb Richard took advantage of Chris Johnson's late collapse, closing with a 20-foot birdie putt for a 5-under-par 67 and a one-stroke victory in the LPGA Safeco Classic.

Richard, who earned $75,000 for her fourth career victory and first since 1991, had a 12-under 276 total on the Meridan Valley Country Club course.

Johnson, who missed a chance to go to 15-under on No. 15 when her 4-foot birdie putt lipped out, bogeyed Nos. 16 and 17 and to drop a stroke behind Richard and then missed a 25-foot birdie attempt on the final hole.

She finished with a 71 that left her tied for second with Rosie Jones, Michelle Estill and Tammie Green at 277.

Senior Bank One Classic

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Isao Aoki ended a two-year winless drought on the Senior PGA Tour, taking command early in the final round and capturing the $550,000 Bank One Classic by three strokes.

■ Golf Roundup

Aoki, who had an eagle-3 on the par-5 No. 3, finished with a 3-under-par 69 to complete the 54 holes at 14-under 202. He won $82,500, bringing his earnings this year to $441,740.

The 52-year-old from Toyko had played in 46 tournaments without a triumph since winning the Nationwide Championship in his first year on the tour in 1992.

He took a one-stroke lead into the final round after blistering the Kearney Hill Links with a 64 Saturday. Jim Albus and Jimmy Powell, the co-leaders after the first round, were tied for second.

But it was Chi Chi Rodriquez who made a late charge, shooting a 66 on the final day for an 11-under 205. He had an eagle-3 on the par-5, No. 18, his first eagle of the year, to take sole possession of second.

Albus did recover to shoot a 74, including a 34 on the back nine, to finish in a four-way tie for sixth at 208. His $18,700 paycheck gave him earnings of $1,008,953, the third player on the tour to go over $1 million.

Albus joined Lee Trevino and Dave Stockton in the millionaire club, the first time in the senior tour's 14-year history that three players reached $1 million in a single season.

Albus also became the first player to resign as a club professional, join the senior tour and earn $1 million. He joined five years ago after resigning as the head pro at the Piping Rock Club on New York's Long Island.

Presidents Cup

GAINESVILLE, Va. — The United States built a big, early lead and then survived some surprising late drama to win the first Presidents Cup with a 20-12 victory over the International team.

The U.S. team came into the day needing only five victories in singles play to take the cup and quickly won four of the first five matches decided, only to watch the next four matches go to sudden-death playoffs.

But those playoffs became meaningless when Fred Couples stuck a 170-yard iron shot close enough to the hole on No. 18 to be given the birdie putt by Nick Price. Price then lost the match — and the Presidents Cup — when his chip for a birdie to tie barely missed.

It was the end of a frustrating competition for Price, who was the only one of the 24 players not to win at least one match over the three days. The best he could do was two halves for a total of one point.

In all, the United States won six of the 12 singles matches, lost two and four were declared halved.

Not even the arrival of Greg Norman could help pull this one out for the International team. Sidelined by an intestinal problem that caused him to lose 13 pounds, Norman withdrew from the competition last week but showed up Sunday to offer moral support to his beseiged colleagues.

"I'm just here as a cheerleader," Norman said as he stood on the first tee, looking thin and drawn, his International team uniform hanging loosely on his tanned frame. "I just called them up and said I'd like to be here."

British Masters

WOBURN, England — Ian Woosnam tied the course record with a 9-under-par 63 and followed it with a 67 for a come-from-behind victory at the British Masters golf tournament.

Woosnam, seven strokes behind Seve Ballesteros at the start of the day and four behind Miguel Angel Martin with nine holes to play, went from 3-under-par to 17-under in 36 holes to finish at 271.

"It says to a lot of people, 'Don't ever write me off,' " said the 36-year-old Welshman, who has struggled with back pain for several years. "People think I am sitting in Jersey with enough money to stay there, but I want to win every tournament I play. I want to get back to world No. 1 and to winning major titles again."

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 1994

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Prompt decisions must be made concerning your financial security and home. A change of residence could bring many benefits. The family circle expands to include a newcomer. Keep up-to-date financial records. Your career could take a big leap forward early in 1995. Those engaged in real estate make a handsome profit! Postpone vacation travel until late summer of 1995.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: "Good morning, America" host Joan Lunden, newspaper columnist Mike Royko, model Twiggy, "Batman" Adam West.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Make the most of some good news. Morning is the best time to meet with influential contacts. Taking a more assertive stance in romance will let a prospective partner know the score.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): An impulsive choice may not be the right one. Take more time for reflection. A love relationship must be nurtured if you want it to last. Curb a tendency to find fault.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Do more listening than lecturing when dealing with teen-agers. Young people will talk back if they feel misjudged. Lay down guidelines but avoid sounding sanctimonious.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Stop pushing yourself so hard! Taking an occasional break will allow you to return to your work refreshed. Guard against throwing out important documents. A new romance could cause trouble at work; be discreet.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Finish an overdue project; it could be a financial winner! Postpone making partnership decisions until you have more facts and figures. Romance keeps you guessing. Heed your intuition if someone asks for a loan.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A well-thought-out investment strategy will give you and your family greater security. Emphasize your literary and educational interests when talking with academic types. Enrolling in a special class opens up new career possibilities.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Any doubts that have slowed progress should be removed as quickly as possible. Your talents are more valuable than you think. Establish your leadership credentials by acting more independent. Stand up for your beliefs!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your diligence sets a good example for your co-workers. Higher-ups begin to see you in a new light. Present a forceful argument to back up any claims you make. Romance will gradually intensify.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A last-minute development could create havoc with your plans for today. Be aware of changing trends. Move ahead full throttle on the social front.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Generosity can be carried to excess, not only depleting your resources but crippling those you want to help. Explore the career possibilities offered by publishing or creative writing.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Delays are likely this morning. Afternoon is the best time to push a favorite project. Be careful of rushed intimacy. Take in a stray pet if you want to know the joy of unselfish love.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): As long as your determination does not falter, you will achieve something important! Key allies provide valuable support. Let someone in authority speak for you today. Romance is a source of surprise. Be flexible.

TODAY'S CHILDREN: These Virgos' well-known perfectionism makes them harder on themselves than on other people.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q. 1 - Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠8 2 ♡7 ◇Q 10 8 7 6 3 ♣A J 9 2

Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?

A - If you count the singleton in partner's suit as two points and elect to bid two diamonds, don't be surprised if the bidding gets out of hand very quickly. You have neither the suit quality nor the strength for a two-over-one response, so bid one no trump.

Q. 2 - Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K 9 7 2 ♡A 10 4 ◇K Q 6 3 ♣J 8

The bidding has proceeded:

NORTH	EAST	SOUTH	WEST
1 ♣	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
2 ♣	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A - Since partner's club rebid denies a four-card major, there's no point in introducing your spade suit. However, don't make the mistake of bidding two no trump. That shows 11-12 points and invites partner to raise only with a better than minimum opening. Bid three no trump.

Q. 3 - Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K J 5 2 ♡8 3 ◇9 5 4 ♣8 6 5 4

The bidding has proceeded:

WEST	NORTH	EAST	SOUTH
1 ♠	Dbl	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A - Partner's double asks you to take out to your best suit. It is not even close — bid two clubs. You have nowhere near enough defense to sit for one spade doubled, and are about an ace short for a response of one no trump; that is a forward-going action.

Q. 4 - Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠7 4 ♡K Q J 10 9 6 2 ◇7 4 ♣A J

The bidding has proceeded:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	3 ◇	Pass

What do you bid now?

A - You want to play the hand in hearts and nowhere else, so it is about time you told partner your hearts are self-sustaining. Jump to four hearts. Since your initial rebid confirmed a minimum, partner cannot misconstrue this jump as showing more than you have.

Q. 5 - Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠7 3 ♡A Q J 9 ◇7 6 5 ♣K J 9 3

The bidding has proceeded:

NORTH	EAST	SOUTH	WEST
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	1 ♠
1 NT	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A - Had there been no enemy overcall, the best you could do would have been to issue a game invitation by raising to two no trump. West's intervention relieved North of the responsibility to rebid with a minimum balanced hand, so partner's voluntary action must show a holding that has improved on the auction. Raise to three no trump.

Q. 6 - As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠10 5 ♡8 3 ◇A Q J 9 6 3 ♣9 8 7

Partner opens the bidding one no trump. What do you respond?

A - If you have a mechanism for finding out whether partner has a high diamond honor, by all means use it. If you do not, simply jump to three no trump. Your diamond suit rates to produce five or six tricks, and that should give partner an excellent shot at game.

TV Guide: Rob Morrow to leave 'Northern Exposure' mid-season

RADNOR, Pa. — Rob Morrow will definitely leave "Northern Exposure" in the middle of the new prime-time season, TV Guide reports.

Actor Rob Morrow to leave, magazine says.

Producers of the Emmy-winning CBS show have denied reports of Morrow's departure, but the magazine said in the Sept. 27 issue that Universal will let him out of the rest of his contract without a fight.

The report is based on a source close to the series, TV Guide spokeswoman Rachel Breinin said Sunday. The magazine didn't identify the source.

Morrow plays Dr. Joel Fleischman and co-stars in the new movie "Quiz Show." He apparently wants to pursue more film work.

The show's producers will introduce two new characters. Dr. Phillip Cooper and his wife will move to Cicely, Alaska, to escape big-city life.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Country rocker Steve Earle is looking to get out of jail and into a drug treatment program.

He's been doing without methadone since he went to jail Sept. 12 on a heroin possession conviction. Federal rules don't allow jail officials to dispense the drug, which he was taking to kick his longtime heroin addiction.

"Steve is experiencing some pain, but they are monitoring his medical condition pretty closely," said his lawyer, Lionel Barrett.

Earle was sentenced to just under a year in jail. Barrett hopes Criminal Court Judge Tom Shriver will agree to Earle's transfer, sometime early next week, to a residential drug program.

The 39-year-old Earle "may get four weeks or so in a residential program and then come back to jail," Barrett said.

The judge ordered him to serve 75 percent of his sentence.

Earle's songs include "Guitar Town" and "The Devil's Right Hand." His songs have been recorded by Waylon Jennings, Johnny Cash and Carl Perkins.

NEW YORK — Movie violence offers viewers a socially acceptable outlet for their "darker side," Eric Stoltz said.

"You can enjoy it without feeling the need to go out and buy a gun," said the 32-year-old star of two particularly bloody new movies, "Killing Zoe" and the upcoming "Pulp Fiction."

"The world is a brutal, devastating, evil — and, at the same time, wonderful — place," Stoltz told The New York Times in a story published Sunday. "Movies are just a way of telling stories."

INDIANAPOLIS — Dan Quayle's signature appears on hundreds of copies of his autobiography "Standing Firm," but it's on just one Tom Clancy book.

On a recent flight to Boston, a flight attendant told Quayle the pilot was a supporter of his and would like the former vice president to autograph his book. The pilot later presented Quayle with the book.

"But it was Tom Clancy's new book, not mine," Quayle told Indiana Republicans at a fund-raiser Saturday. Clancy's latest release is "Debt of Honor."

Quayle said he signed the book, but "from now on, I'll only sign my book."

Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen made People magazine's best-dressed list this year. "This dapper former senator is on the money with his tailored clothing (off the rack from Nordstrom and Neiman Marcus)," says the citation.

Bentsen's wife, B.A., said the Bentsen look is different when the workday is done. "The minute he gets home," she said, "he changes into khakis and a big blue shirt. He always looks great."

Hillary Rodham Clinton made People magazine's worst-dressed list this year.

"It's 4 U" Game Rules:

Anyone 18 years or older can enter except employees (and family members of employees) of the Midland Reporter-Telegram, Brite systems Inc., Associated Publishing Co., and their advertising and promotion agencies.

The "It's 4 U" Game is designed for people who live in the Midland and Odessa calling areas and no purchase is required to play or win prizes, although long distance toll charges may apply if you call from outside the Midland-Odessa calling area.

Look for the "It's 4 U" Game ad here and in the advertisers' service directory in the Midland Reporter-Telegram every day until November 5, 1994. Call 560-2400 and enter any four-digit advertiser's code listed in the directory. You will hear a brief advertiser's message and, if you are one of five instant winners chosen at random each week, you will win one of that week's prizes. If you are an instant winner, listen for details about claiming your prize. In order to claim your prize, you will be required to give your name, age, address and telephone number. The more often you call, the better your chance of winning a prize.

You can also enter a second chance drawing for unclaimed prizes by hand printing your complete name and address and daytime phone number on a 3"x5" piece of paper and mailing it in an envelope to "It's 4 U" Second Chance Game, P.O. Box 1650, Midland, Texas 79702, so that it is received before the deadline, October 30, 1994. Enter as often as you wish, but submit only one entry in each envelope. Entries become the property of the sponsors. None will be returned.

Each game begins at 12:01 a.m. Monday and ends at 11:59 p.m. Sunday. Each week for eight weeks ending November 5, 1994, five entries will be selected at random and will win one of that week's prize. The total value of all prizes to be awarded in the "It's 4 U" game will equal $4,000 or more. The names and cities of winners will be published in the Midland Reporter-Telegram Classified Ads page. No substitution of prizes is permitted. Only one prize will be awarded to each winner.

By entering, winners authorize the use of their names, cities or photos for publicity purposes. Winners may be required to sign an affidavit of eligibility and release. Taxes are the responsibility of winners. Void where prohibited.
