MISD engages with conservation company

District hopes budget-neutral program will save about 26 percent of utility costs

By Meredith Moriak
mmoriak@mrt.com

By entering into a five-year contract with Cenergistic energy conservation company, Midland ISD trustees hope to redirect more than $11 million of would-be energy costs to other areas of the district's budget during the next 10 years.

Trustees unanimously voted Tuesday during the regular board meeting to enter into a five-year contract with the Dallas-based energy conservation company.

Working with Cenergistic is expected to save the district $825,560 in net savings during the program's first year and a 10-year net return of $11.58 million, according to projections by the company, which has saved a combined $3 billion for more than 1,250 clients during the past 26 years.

"The biggest expense I have right now for (maintenance and operations) is personnel, and the second one is utilities," said MISD Superintendent Ryder Warren. "Whatever we can find to save us money, we're going to go after. This is the company that showed us the most history of being successful."

Cenergistic energy management programs are budget-neutral — implemented without capital outlay from the school districts — and funded solely by the energy savings generated. This allows clients — school districts, higher education institutions, hospitals and large churches — to redirect saved energy dollars to other priorities, said the regional president, Gary Clark, who presented the program to trustees Tuesday.

"We're paid a percentage of the savings, and it's a win-win for you. We will only get paid if you save money," Clark said, noting that none of their clients ever has lost money implementing the program and all have seen savings exceed the investment.

Cenergistic will be paid 50 percent of monthly gross savings during the five-year contract period, according to meeting documents. If MISD's savings do not cover the cost of the

An MPD vehicle was rear-ended by a white pickup during a traffic stop in which an officer had another vehicle pulled over on Wadley Avenue on Friday evening. Two officers were sent to the hospital. Sgt. Greg Chatwell said the officers pulled over a white Chevrolet Silverado headed eastbound on Wadley near the A Street intersection at about 8 p.m. While both officers were inside their vehicle, a white Chevrolet Avalanche rear-ended the MPD vehicle, causing the car to be stuck between both trucks. Both officers were taken to the hospital for minor injuries, Chatwell said. The driver of the Avalanche was taken into custody. Chatwell said he will be cited for a violation, though it was not known what the violation was as of press time.

Pipeline giant Tenaris to build $1.3B plant

Associated Press

AUSTIN — International energy pipeline giant Tenaris SA said Friday it plans to build a $1.3 billion Gulf Coast manufacturing facility that will bring 600 new jobs and better supplying operations to Texas' oil- and natural gas-rich Eagle Ford shale region.

Gov. Rick Perry said Tenaris, the world's No. 1 producer of steel tubing for the oil industry, is receiving $6 million from the Texas Enterprise Fund, a pot of money meant to attract outside firms and businesses to the state. The company's North American headquarters is based in Houston.

The Republican governor said he helped convince the company to choose Texas as it expands its U.S. workforce, noting he met with Tenaris leadership during an economic development trip to Italy last year and during a Formula 1 race in Austin two months later.

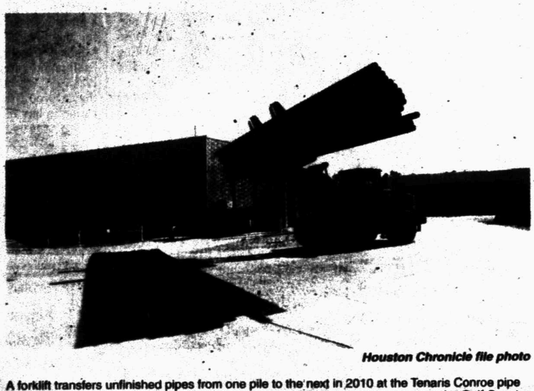

"The most profound statement about our favorable economic climate comes when companies like Tenaris make an investment of this size in our state," Perry said in statement. "That says that not only is Texas the best place to grow your business now, but they're confident that we'll remain that way moving forward."

Perry joined Tenaris executives and local elected officials south of Houston in Bay City, where the facility will be built, as part of the announcement.

The 1 million-square-foot plant is set to open in 2016. It will feature a seamless pipe mill, heat treatment and premium threading facilities, and is expected to eventually produce 600,000 tons of pipe annually.

"With this investment, we will strengthen our local production and service capabilities to address the growing demands of the energy industry," German Cura, Tenaris' president of North America, said in a statement.

Research center wants to build 'green' homes in Midland

By Joseph Basco
jbasco@mrt.com

A Midland research center is proposing a home that would be in the same price and size range as a traditionally built home but with the added benefit of an estimated energy savings of $75,000 over the span of a 30- year mortgage.

The special ingredient that saves the homeowner money is a structural insulation panel (SIP), a sandwich of foam material surrounded by plywood.

Mike Loya, founder of the Midland Sustainable Research Center, said the material can be used to build homes in 47 days or less and is 250 percent stronger than a conventional home, according to tests conducted at Oakridge National Laboratory.

"This is solid core foam insulation," Loya said as he showed the Reporter-Telegram a square sample of the SIP. "This is superior to blown-in foam because there is no transference of temperature in the building."

He said homes built with SIPs use 33 percent less energy to heat and cool. One model, a 1,237-square-foot home with four bedrooms, is in the works, Loya said, but he did not give an estimated date of completion because an existing home on the building site has yet to be demolished.

"We're in the process of securing contracts with developers," Loya said. "We're just starting to move forward now."

Allen Spires, a Sustainable Research Center board member, said the center anticipates about 100 "green" homes in Midland by the end of the year.

Homes are not the only buildings that can be made out of SIPs. Loya said there is a facility in the South Pole that is being built with the material. A school in Las Vegas saved $1 million in construction costs, and the framing schedule was reduced from 118 to 220 days to 45 days.

"We want to offer the client an alternative to conventionally constructed homes, buildings and other commercial applications," Loya said.

Another benefit to SIPs, Loya said, is that there is no sound transference. He said this could be beneficial for apartment developers.

Besides the SIP material, Spires said these homes also will feature separate receptacles for garbage and recyclable items, making the recycling process easier to begin at home.

"It will take a while," Spires said about getting more people to recycle. "But we can condition people to start recycling at home."

Ivadene Perkins

For in that sleep of death what dreams may come,
When we have shuffled off this mortal coil . . .
William Shakespeare

Ivadene Richardson Perkins (Dene) shuffled off her mortal coil before dawn on January 1, 2013. She died peacefully in her bed at her home in Los Angeles, California. Her chronological age was 86, but Dene would be the first to tell you she felt the weariness of "old age" most of her life. Born in Kaufman County, Texas on May 14, 1926 to Corne'ia Elizabeth Porter and Solon Elmer Richardson, Dene was the youngest of four children. Her family moved to Odessa, Texas in 1933, where Solon found work with Gulf Oil. The family built a home, literally with hammer and nails, and figuratively by creating the gathering place for extended family and friends over many decades. She attended secretarial school after her high school graduation and worked for several different oil companies before meeting the love of her life, Earl Louis Perkins (Perk).

She married Perk on November 23, 1953, in Chihuahua, Mexico, before returning to the Midland/Odessa area to raise their two children, Corby Perkins Baumgarten and Marcus Louis Perkins. Their multiple homes also gave shelter to numerous dogs and cats over the course of their marriage. Upon retirement in 1987, they built a home and relocated to Canyon Lake, Texas, where their four grandchildren spent many glorious summer vacations with them. In December of 2001, Dene and Perk moved to Los Angeles so that they could be near those same grandchildren. Perk died peacefully in his sleep on July 13, 2005, in the same bed in which Dene said her final goodnight.

Dene had many talents: she was an artist, a writer, and a remarkable hostess. She taught her nieces how to drive on the dusty country roads of the Odessa caliche pits. She had an eye for beautiful things and made her homes a reflection of her tastes and delights. She played a mean game of Scrabble and could get downright deadly when engaged in mortal combat over the Trivial Pursuit board. There was nothing trivial in her telling of her truths. She loved a good crossword puzzle and a shot of Jack Daniels with an iced-tea back. She was a liberal when it wasn't fashionable to be so, and she could smoke and drink and curse well enough to make a roughneck blush. Her persona was a woman who lived full-throttle, while her inner child hid from the demons that chased her.

To know Dene was to love her. And she knew bounteous love, most especially from her grandchildren, Max, Sam, Regan and Felle Baumgarten. Her talented grandchildren wrote and sang to her of Canyon Lake whenever she felt homesick:

"Waltz with me my dear Ivadene
All the way to Texas, we'll be there by spring.
Cardinals in the oak trees and spotted fawns,
I just spotted three…"

A celebration of Dene's life will take place this summer in her beloved Texas. For more information please email her daughter, Corby, at cbaumgarten@speakeasy.net or her son, Marc, at iperkins@speakeasy.net

R. C. "Bob" Bennett

R. C. "Bob" Bennett rode off into the sunset on Tuesday, February 12th from his home in Midland, Texas. Bob was born August 8th, 1929 in Mitchell County, Texas, to Robert Hal Bennett and Stella Edna Welch. He was reared in Nolan County, Texas on his parents' ranch with his best friend and sister Avyce. He attended Highland High School in Maryneal where he participated in track, football and basketball while also performing ranching and farming duties. After graduating in 1946 he attended Hardin-Simmons for one year where he roped calves and rode broncos in amateur rodeo. In 1947, Bob borrowed $50 from his dad and headed for Midland and the oil fields. There he met and married Billie Jo Watson in October 1949 and they were together until her death in 1984.

Bob was employed by the Halliburton Co. in Midland and Houston as a draftsman and electrical logging engineer. He also worked for Sinclair, El Paso Natural Gas, spent 3 years operating his own well service company and 2 years as a farm and ranch developer. He returned to Midland in 1965 as an independent petroleum landman and eventually started R. C. Bennett Company as an independent Oil & Gas Operator, which he continued to actively operate until the end of his life. He did business on a handshake and did not tolerate fools. One of his oilfield experiences was chronicled in the book, "Oilfield Stories and Other Lies".

He served in the U. S. Army for 2 years during the Korean conflict, from May 1952 to May 1954 attaining the rank of corporal. He was stationed in Stuttgart, Germany in the 11th Machine Records Unit and was a PT Instructor. Bob was able to return to Germany with his daughters in 1985 in his cowboy hat and boots where he made friends with everyone he met and became known as "Herr General" at the Hoffbrauhaus! Bob Bennett never met a stranger and his motto was "Have a little fun every day"! Luckily he carried everyone along with him.

Bob loved wide-open spaces and: spending time fishing on Lake Amistad or, driving around his working cattle ranch in New Mexico looking at cows and rocks. He rode horseback in the New Mexico Chuckwagon Riders Association Trail Ride in N. M. for over 40 years where his tradition was to "set out a light and a bottle of whiskey and they will come". Wherever Bennett had a campfire everyone flocked to hear stories (some of them true), drink a lot of whiskey and sing a lot of songs.

Everyone knew Bob's singing prowess around Midland and Del Rio, where he used that deep baritone to stop the chatter, serenade the ladies and pack the dance floors. Wearing his Silver Belly Stetson and buying "whiskey for everybody", he won hearts wherever he went. One of the highlights of Bob's singing career was winning the Karaoke Contest on a Caribbean Cruise where he performed in front of 1500 people at the age of 80!! Another great honor was becoming a Master Mason and a Jester in his later years and the friendships that he made and strengthened through that bond.

Bob Bennett was very generous with his time and money, hosting 2 LHS '76 class reunion parties in his home, donating to the American Legion, the VFW, and cancer research and providing and cooking all of the food (with a lot of help from his friends) for the last 20 years at the Midland Cerebral Palsy Rehabilitation Center Family PlayDay. We hope in lieu of flowers you will consider donating to any of these worthy causes or Hospice Midland.

Bob is survived by his daughters Jean Bennett currently of Midland, TX, Jane Bennett of Eagle, CO, and his two nieces Karen and Sue Ann Reeder of Ruidoso, NM. He is predeceased by his infant son Robert Neil, wife, Billie Jo, and his sister, Avyce Reeder.

A visitation will be held at the funeral home from 7:00 pm to 9:00 pm, Sunday, February 17, 2013. A church service will be held at Stonegate Fellowship at 1:00 pm, Monday, February 18, 2013 with graveside services to follow at Resthaven Memorial Park. We hope the usual suspects will join us at Mr. Bennett's home after the services for a safety meeting and stories around the campfire to celebrate a life well lived but cut way too short. His mischievous grin, kindness, generosity, sense of fun and loyal friendship will always be remembered.

Arrangements are under the direction of Nalley-Pickle & Welch Funeral Home & Crematory of Midland. Online condolences can be made at: www.npwelch.com

Federal jury convicts 2 of heroin distribution

A federal jury has convicted two men who were among more than a dozen people involved in a heroin-trafficking ring in Central Texas.

Authorities say 68-year-old Jose Pardo of Austin and 45-year-old Jorge Carrillo, of Lockhart, were found guilty Thursday of heroin distribution.

They each face 10 years to life in federal prison at their sentencing scheduled for May.

Prosecutors said Pardo and Carrillo were among 13 others who conspired from May 2011 to June 2012 to distribute more than 17 kilograms of heroin in the region.

The drug ring netted daily sales of $3,400 to $6,250.

Prosecutors said the heroin was processed at the Pardo family-owned restaurant Jovita's in Austin.

Twelve others arrested as part of the yearlong investigation previously pleaded guilty. Another defendant died before trial.

Two get prison time for Ponzi scheme that lost $10M

Two people have been given prison sentences for running a Ponzi scheme that involved more than 150 people and resulted in losses of more than $10 million.

Christopher Brown Cornett of Buda was sentenced to 40 years in prison Friday. Heidi Beryl Beyer of Scottsdale, Ariz., received 6 years.

The U.S. attorney's office said Cornett and Beyer collected money from across the country to trade in foreign currency exchange markets. They brought in a total of $14.6 million, about half of which they lost in bad trades. Authorities said the rest went to make payments to investors and a range of personal expenses, from gambling losses in Las Vegas to a new Chevrolet Corvette.

Corbett had previously served prison time for federal bank fraud.

Bartender, I'll have another ... for charity

By Juan A. Lozano
Associated Press

HOUSTON — Call it benevolence through beer, donating via daiquiri or generosity by gin and tonic.

A new Houston bar is offering its customers not just a relaxed atmosphere with good drinks and food, but a pledge that 100 percent of its profits will be donated to a different local charity or social cause each month.

And patrons can vote for which charity benefits from their Merlots and martinis.

"Where else can you do good with your drinking?" said Tom Burgett, 45, as he sat at the oval-shaped counter at the center of the bar with his wife, Kim, and enjoyed a beer.

The Original OKRA Charity Saloon is one of several bars around the country that are using the business as a way to give back to local communities and also providing people a creative method of being philanthropic. There are similar bars in Washington, D.C., and Austin and another being planned in Portland, Ore.

Houston bar and restaurant owner Bobby Heugel's group, an Organized Kollaboration on Restaurant Affairs or OKRA, runs the charity saloon. Heugel said the idea was born of a need to highlight the civic exchange that occurs between restaurants and bars and the communities they operate in.

"And so finding a way for your establishment to be part of the community from which you profit from I think is really important," Heugel said of the group, which is made up of some of the city's best-known establishments, including Anvil Bar & Refuge, Underbelly and Oxheart.

At the charity saloon — located in a downtown brick building that dates back to the 1880s — whenever customers order a drink or food, they will get one ticket for each item. On each menu is a short description of the four charities being featured that month, said Mike Criss, the bar's general manager. Customers vote by dropping their tickets into a row of boxes, one for each charity.

Once the bar, which is registered as a nonprofit, pays its operating costs, 100 percent of the remaining profits go to the winning charity. Heugel said the ultimate goal is to donate $10,000 per month.

Mike Criss, manager of the Original OKRA Charity Saloon, mixes a drink at the bar in Houston in January. The new downtown bar offers its customers a relaxed atmosphere with good drinks and food and a pledge that 100 percent of its profits after costs will be donated to a different local charity or social cause each month.

As they stood at the bar's counter underneath the striking, curved wooden-barrel vault ceiling, Meagan and James Silk reviewed the list of January's charities. They included ones that combat childhood obesity, provide services to HIV and AIDS patients, give furniture to needy residents and rescue neglected and abused dogs and cats.

With a laugh, Meagan Silk told her husband which charity they would both support.

"I vote for one kind of charity pretty much. We are animal people," she said. The Silks run a Houston restaurant.

Her choice, Corridor Rescue, ended up being the winning charity for January and will get the bar's profits for February.

Anna Barbosa, Corridor Rescue's fundraising director, said the donation will allow the nonprofit to support its spay-neuter program and offer medical care for more animals.

"It just means the world to us to get this kind of community support and through the charity bar we're so grateful because we get more visibility," she said.

Nick Vilelle, one of the co-founders of "philanthropub" Cause in Washington, D.C., said showing how and where the money is spent is key for bars like his to succeed.

"It's too easy for someone to use cause marketing as a gimmick and say some portion of your proceeds goes to help some certain cause," he said of the bar, which opened in late October. "If we're not transparent about that, people can obviously abuse that."

Like the Houston bar, Cause lets customers choose from four charities. At the end of a quarter, votes are tallied and each charity gets a percentage of the profits based on those votes.

Ogletree House is severely damaged on the campus of the University of Southern Mississippi in Hattiesburg, Miss., on Monday after a tornado struck the area Sunday afternoon. The building, built in 1912, housed the university alumni association offices.

NWS: New tool confirmed twister

Associated Press

FLOWOOD, Miss. — Officials say new technology allowed forecasters in Mississippi to quickly confirm the tornado that tore through Hattiesburg this week and alert the public.

The Dual-polarization Doppler technology allowed forecasters to see the shape and size of debris inside the tornado. In the past, forecasters have generally relied on visual reports of tornadoes, which are difficult to get at night.

Because of the new technology, they were able to issue warnings confirming the tornado and give people time to get to safety.

Dozens of injuries were reported from tornadoes that struck south Mississippi this week, but no fatalities.

Mississippi Emergency Management Agency Director Robert Latham says he believes the new technology helped prevent tornado-related deaths.

energy program, Cenergistic will refund the difference.

The Cenergistic program "trains client personnel to implement behavioral and organizational changes that substantially reduce energy consumption without buying new equipment," according to a news release.

The program was a smart choice for the district because it's a budget-neutral program and one that saves most participating school districts about 26 percent of their total utility costs, Warren said. MISD's utility budget for the current fiscal year is $4.82 million.

"We're looking to generate money not in our budget or uncover some that is in our budget and rededicate funds to staff wherever possible," Warren said, noting this is just one of many cost-saving measures he will present trustees with during the coming months.

"I am looking for any and every way to save or rededicate money right now," Warren said. "We've got to invest in people right now. Every bit of money we can take in will be rediverted to staffing, getting us to the levels we need for manageable classroom numbers and to handle the cost of living."

To implement and monitor the district's energy management, MISD and Cenergistic will hire two energy specialists that will administer the program locally.

They will be MISD employees, but paid by Cenergistic until the district realizes energy savings. At that point, they will be paid by MISD purely from the funds saved on energy costs, Clark said.

With Cenergistic rooted in the belief that it's important to change the culture of energy consumption, Clark said it's more important to hire a "people person" with a strong ethic who can learn to use the EnergyCAP equipment, than to hire someone with existing mechanical skills who doesn't like engaging with others.

"We can train someone to be an equipment expert, but making a mechanical person a people-person is not easy," Clark said, noting the district's 36 buildings will be split evenly between the two energy specialists.

After the specialists are hired, Cenergistic's team of engineers and energy management experts, who have more than 140 certifications and advanced degrees, will come to Midland to evaluate the systems and train the energy specialists, Clark said.

"We teach your staff best practices by bringing the expertise here and teaching two people how to do this full-time, every day, and really focus on the energy management," Clark said. "Y'all do a really good job with maintenance and energy already, but we can take a really good program and make it great."

While MISD actively manages energy consumption and has for years, James Riggen, executive director of construction and school plant services, said he looks forward to having two employees who are strictly dedicated as energy specialists.

"For the staff and personnel that we have, we are doing a good job, but we can always do better," Riggen said, noting Jill Hallmark, the district's energy manager, also works as the maintenance department's operations supervisor.

"We wear a lot of hats, and energy management is not her sole duty," Riggen said, noting only about 25 percent of her workload focuses directly on energy management, controlling and scheduling the district energy management systems, identifying proper products for purchase and applying for grants and rebates from energy companies.

"For the staff and personnel that we have, we are doing a good job, but we can always do better."

James Riggen, executive director of construction and school plant services

MISD's buildings are controlled by energy management systems, and Riggen said he is thankful energy specialists will be able to "fine tune and tweak those plans ... looking and identifying those areas that may not be controlled properly, ultimately maximizing the energy usage."

"If Cenergistic can find dollars somewhere that we do not have the time or the personnel to find, we'd like to find them," Riggen said. "It only makes good sense."

Contracting with Cenergistic for five years will allow MISD staff to gain the necessary training and understanding of the district energy systems, something that will be beneficial long after the five year-contract expires, Riggen said.

"There's a tremendous amount of training that comes with contracting for this program," Riggen said. "We will be training people on the necessary skills to change the culture of saving energy in the district."

Abilene ISD saved 30 percent on its utilities bill during the first seven months of the program and $863,000 total during the first performance year, said Cenergistic public relations director Jan Noel-Smith.

Ector County ISD contracted with Cenergistic in April and has spent the school year training energy specialists and setting district baselines, said district spokesman Mike Adkins.

"Our two energy specialists began training and evaluating buildings during the summer and did a ton of training and data work to set baselines for the district based on several years of energy bills," Adkins said. "They're also doing a good job engaging with campus staff members, sending out reminders to shut everything down during long weekends."

TENARIS

From 1A

Incorporated since 2002 in Luxembourg and with hubs in Italy, Argentina and elsewhere around the globe, Tenaris has around 27,000 employees worldwide.

Perry's office oversees the Texas Enterprise Fund, which was created in 2003 by the Legislature and has been used to convince firms including Apple Inc. to expand in Texas. Projects financed by the fund have to be approved by the governor, lieutenant governor and the Texas House speaker.

The governor said the fund has now invested more than $493 million and helped close the deals on projects generating more than 66,300 new jobs and $18.6-plus billion in capital investment statewide.

But it hasn't come without controversy. Some Republicans have branded the Texas Enterprise Fund as corporate welfare, while Democrats note it has yet to undergo an independent audit in the decade since it was created.

Childress ISD OKs guns in schools

Associated Press

CHILDRESS — Employees of a West Texas school district will have access to firearms as part of increased security measures approved by the school board.

The weapons will be placed in a secure location at schools in the Childress Independent School District, about 115 miles southeast of Amarillo.

The district board on Monday approved a plan to allow selected employees to have access to weapons. They won't be allowed to regularly carry them.

Superintendent Rick Teran said planning for the security measures is in the preliminary stages.

Teran said a security company will train employees during the summer and fall.

The board also approved hiring a school resource police officer for next school year.

Childress joins other Texas communities that have approved employee access to firearms on campuses.

MISD superintendent says more police needed

From staff reports

"I am not a proponent of arming educators in our schools," said Midland ISD Superintendent Ryder Warren. "However, I am a proponent of adding staff to our police department."

Warren said adding certified, armed police officers to the district for the 2013-14 school year is one of his top priorities.

"It's one of the departments I'm going to be looking at bulking up so we can cover more of our campuses," Warren said.

MISD's police department consists of 11 police officers and four security officers who cover every secondary campus.

Seven police officers are assigned to five campuses — two at Lee High, two at Midland High and one each at Midland Freshman, Lee Freshman and Goddard Junior High — and a security officer is permanently assigned at Coleman High School, Abell, Alamo and San Jacinto junior highs.

Two officers patrol the north and south parts of the city as members of roving units, often responding to elementary schools or backing up secondary schools, as needed.

Security officers act as "the eyes and ears" at their campuses and help with minor discipline issues, including breaking up fights. If there's a criminal act, the security officers will notify police officers and control the situation until they arrive, MISD Police Chief David Colburn previously told the Reporter-Telegram.

Childress ISD approved a measure that will allow teachers and faculty to have access to firearms on Campus. We asked on our Facebook page if you think MISD should follow suit. Here's what you said:

Absolutely not!! Our schools are not saloons in the Wild West, they are SCHOOLS, where our children LEARN! Absolutely absurd.
Brandy Lee Bee

I think they should be able to do this but it's kinda pointless to have them in a designated area! They should carry them and nobody should know who has one and who doesn't.
Melissa Moore Anderson

I totally think if it's for our children's safety, I agree100%!!
Rhonda Bourke

God I hope not! Having guns in schools is not going to fix the problem.
Julia Calderon

Our teachers are there to teach. Let them do what we hire them for. I think we should have armed security in the schools for safety.
Metta Seigman

Are guns any good if they are locked up? Lost time equals dead kids. False security is right.
Grace Dana

Dumbest idea I ever heard!! If MISD allows this, I'm pulling my kids out!

Olympian Pistorius faces premeditated murder charge

Associated Press

PRETORIA, South Africa — In a courtroom, not an Olympic stadium, there was no click-click-click of Oscar Pistorius' prosthetic limbs. His only sound Friday was loud, uncontrollable sobs as prosecutors charged him with premeditated murder in the shooting death of his model girlfriend.

"Take it easy," Chief Magistrate Desmond Nasir told the Olympic star-turned-murder-defendant as his father, Henke, and his brother, Carl, reached out to touch his shoulder to comfort him.

The 26-year-old Pistorius, the double-amputee sprinter who won world acclaim by competing in last summer's London Olympics, did not speak or enter a plea. He held his head and wept as he heard the charge, which carries a life sentence.

A statement released later by his family and agent said Pistorius disputed the murder charge "in the strongest terms."

The track star's arrest in the Valentine's Day killing of 29-year-old model Reeva Steenkamp shocked South Africa, where Pistorius was a national hero dubbed the Blade Runner for his high-tech prosthetics and revered for overcoming his disability to compete in the London Games.

Prosecutor Gerrie Nel said he would pursue a charge of premeditated murder against Pistorius in the slaying of Steenkamp, a model with a law degree who had spoken out on against rape and abuse of women.

White Stallion suspends coal plant project

Associated Press

BAY CITY — A Gulf Coast coal-fired power plant that ran into fierce local opposition over concerns that it would use immense amounts of public water in the drought-stricken area will not be developed, an energy company announced Friday.

The White Stallion Energy Center said it was suspending work on the 1,200-megawatt power project in Matagorda County, about 90 miles southwest of Houston.

Chief Operating Officer Randy Bird blamed proposed U.S. Environmental Protection Agency rules and the specter of more regulations. He also said low natural gas prices have made the price of electricity from coal uncompetitive.

White Stallion planned to build its plant on the banks of the Colorado River at Bay City, which feeds estuaries that serve as oyster and shrimp nurseries and irrigation for the pastures and fields of the massive ranches. But the project had faced challenges since it was proposed in 2008.

Ranchers, farmers and other residents opposed plans to build the plant in the pristine rural area, arguing there was not enough water to support the facility and the community's agricultural needs.

The company moved ahead, ignoring the bright yellow "Stop White Stallion" signs. Slowly, members of the Chamber of Commerce, the school district, the county and other officials abandoned support for the plant, despite the promised job creation.

Bird announced in October 2011 that the facility would use a more expensive dry cooling method, requiring about 978 billion gallons of water a year — 85 percent less than the initial plan. But a month later, the Lower Colorado River Authority voted not to grant water to White Stallion.

Several environmental groups, which also had concerns about air and water pollution, called Friday's decision a major victory.

"I think they thought that since we were a small rural community, they would not encounter opposition. They were wrong," Eva Malina, president of the No Coal Coalition, said Friday in a news release.

County asks VP, first lady to help stop gas drilling

Associated Press

ASPEN, Colo. — Pitkin County officials plan to ask Vice President Joe Biden and first lady Michelle Obama for help in preventing a Texas energy company from drilling natural gas wells in western Colorado's Thompson Divide area.

County commissioners are taking out a full-page ad in local newspapers today asking Biden and Obama to take action against drilling in the area, the Aspen Daily News reported. Biden will visit Snowmass with his family over President's Day weekend, and Obama also is expected to be in the area, though her trip has not yet been confirmed.

"There are right places to drill and wrong places to drill," the ad reads. "No one would, for example, seriously suggest erecting drill rigs in Central Park. We see no exaggeration in saying that Colorado's mountain country is America's Central Park."

Houston-based SG Interests Inc. wants more time to develop natural gas wells in the Thompson Divide, which includes 346 square miles of federal land running from the Sunlight Ski Area to McClure Pass, crossing Pitkin, Gunnison, Garfield, Mesa and Delta counties.

The company has asked the Bureau of Land Management to suspend the expiration date of 16 of its leases in the area. The leases were purchased from the U.S. Forest Service in a 2003 auction, and the company has until May 31 to develop them before they expire.

Robbie Guinn, vice president of SG Interests, wrote in a letter to the BLM that suspending the expiration date would serve conservation interests because it would give the federal government more time to decide whether to allow oil and gas development in the area. It also would give the company more time to work with county officials and conservation groups to address environmental concerns about potential drilling, he said.

But Bill Fales, a rancher and member of the Thompson Divide Coalition, argued that the BLM and taxpayers should not reward SG Interests' delays.

"BLM should afford us the opportunity to provide official comment on any decision that could impact our water, or businesses or our livelihoods," he said.

BLM spokesman David Boyd said the agency is reviewing the company's request and does not know when a decision will be made. The decision is a BLM administrative action that does not require a formal public comment period.

Well-pad blast kills worker

Associated Press

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. — State regulators say a worker was killed Friday morning in an explosion at an EQT natural gas well pad near Flemington in rural Taylor County.

Department of Environmental Protection spokeswoman Kathy Cosco said the unidentified victim was working alone at the time.

The man was attempting to transfer briny wastewater from a tank into a truck, she said. What sparked the explosion is unclear and will be the focus of the state's investigation.

Drillers inject massive volumes of water, sand and chemicals to hydraulically fracture the rock in which gas deposits are trapped. The gas then flows up for collection, as does the brine. The DEP said some of the chemicals in the brine could be flammable.

Linda Robertson, a spokeswoman for Pittsburgh-based EQT, said the victim was an employee of a gas company contractor, but she did not identify either that company or the worker. Robertson said those details were being withheld pending notification of his relatives.

Okla. governor supports wind power

Fallin attended Friday morning's ceremony with OSU President Burns Hargis and OGE Energy Corp. chairman, CEO and president Pete Delaney.

OG&E serves nearly 800,000 customers in Oklahoma and western Arkansas.

SEC alleges insider trading ahead of Heinz deal

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Federal regulators have alleged that a brokerage account in Switzerland was used for illegal insider trading ahead of the H.J. Heinz acquisition Thursday.

The Securities and Exchange Commission obtained a court order Friday to freeze the account and prevent the assets from being moved.

The account was used for trades placed Wednesday that netted $1.7 million after the deal was announced. The SEC said it doesn't know the identity of the traders but said they "took risky bets" that Heinz's stock price would increase.

On Thursday, Warren Buffett's Berkshire Hathaway and the Brazilian firm 3G announced they agreed to buy Heinz. Heinz's stock rose nearly 20 percent after the announcement.

The SEC alleges the traders must have known in advance about the pending transaction based on inside information. The traders bought call options to make a huge profit of roughly 1,700 percent after the acquisition was announced.

Call options let investors place a bet on a stock without committing to buy the shares. Investors instead have the option to buy the shares later for a set price.

The Swiss account hadn't traded securities related to Heinz for nearly six months before purchasing the options, the SEC said in a complaint filed in federal court in New York.

"Irregular and highly suspicious options trading immediately in front of a merger or acquisition announcement is a serious red flag that traders may be improperly acting on confidential nonpublic information," Daniel Hawke, an SEC official, said in a statement.

Representatives for Berkshire Hathaway and the public relations agency representing 3G and Berkshire in the deal did not immediately return messages for comment. A spokesman for Heinz said the company hadn't been contacted by the SEC and, therefore, did not have any comment.

The SEC's complaint does not allege any wrongdoing by Heinz or the company's new owners.

The account was held at a subsidiary of Goldman Sachs in Zurich. Tiffany Galvin, a spokeswoman at Goldman, said the company is "cooperating with the SEC's investigation."

Heinz has long been a subject of takeover speculation. 3G is best known for its acquisition of Burger King and its role in the deal that created Anheuser-Busch InBev, the world's biggest beer maker. 3G is owned by Jorge Lemann, one of Brazil's richest men.

The acquisition is intended to help Heinz accelerate its expansion from a dominant American name into a presence on grocery shelves worldwide. In addition to ketchup, the Pittsburgh-based company also makes baked beans, pickles, vinegar, Classico pasta sauces and Ore-Ida potatoes, as well as a growing stable of sauces suited to regional tastes around the world.

Facebook gets unwelcome look at hackers' dark side

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Facebook is getting an unwelcome look at the shady side of the hacking culture that CEO Mark Zuckerberg celebrates.

Intruders recently infiltrated the systems running the world's largest online social network but did not steal any sensitive information about Facebook's more than 1 billion users, according to a blog posting Friday by the company's security team.

The unsettling revelation is the latest breach to expose the digital cracks in a society and an economy that is storing an ever-growing volume of personal and business data online.

The news didn't seem to faze investors. Facebook Inc.'s stock dipped 10 cents to $28.22 in Friday's extended trading.

The main building at Facebook's Menlo Park, Calif., headquarters lists its address as 1 Hacker Way. From there, Facebook serves as the gatekeeper for billions of potentially embarrassing photos and messages that get posted each month.

This time, at least, that material didn't get swept up in the digital breakin that Facebook said it discovered last month. The company didn't say why it waited until the afternoon before a holiday weekend to inform its users about the hack.

"As part of our ongoing investigation, we are working continuously and closely with our own internal engineering teams, with security teams at other companies, and with law enforcement authorities to learn everything we can about the attack, and how to prevent similar incidents in the future," Facebook wrote on the blog.

Online short-messaging service Twitter acknowledged it was hacked earlier this month. In that security breakdown, Twitter warned that the attackers may have stolen user names, email addresses and encrypted passwords belonging to 250,000 of the more than 200 million accounts set up on its service.

Brennan open to special court for drone strikes

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — John Brennan, the White House nominee to run the CIA, said in documents released Friday that setting up a special court to oversee deadly drone strikes against Americans is worth considering but raises difficult questions over the scope of its authority.

Expanding on Senate testimony a week ago, Brennan said the White House and other agencies have discussed the idea as part of the process of deciding which al-Qaida suspects should be targeted on capture-or-kill lists for the CIA and the U.S. military.

"It would raise some novel, and potentially difficult, questions and furthermore would grant courts authority over decisions that have traditionally been exercised principally, if not exclusively, by the executive branch," Brennan said. "Nevertheless, given the stakes involved and the consequence of such determinations ... all options are worth considering."

Brennan's comments were included in written answers to the Senate Intelligence Committee, which is considering whether to approve his nomination for a full Senate vote.

Sen. Dianne Feinstein, D-Calif., the head of the Intelligence Committee, has said she is considering legislation to set up a special court system to regulate drone strikes. It would be similar to the court that signs off on government surveillance in espionage and terrorism cases.

Brennan also said he believes the number of civilians killed in U.S. strikes targeting al-Qaida should be made public and described how the Obama administration uses intelligence, media reports and surveillance footage to determine when the drones kill civilians. He said that happens rarely and that U.S. officials take steps to try to prevent civilian casualties and injuries.

Brennan repeated President Barack Obama's pledge that drones would not strike against Americans inside the U.S., and that they are not used if it's possible to capture a target.

"This administration has not carried out drone strikes inside the United States and has no intention of doing so," he said.

Feinstein has delayed the committee vote to confirm Brennan for two weeks at the request of lawmakers who want more information on the White House's legal policies about the targeted killings of terror suspects, including Americans.

Committee members have been given access to only four of the 11 classified Justice Department memos justifying the use of targeted killing of terror suspects overseas. The White House would not comment on their request this week.

Two space rocks hours apart point at the danger

By Marcia Dunn
Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — A space rock even bigger than the meteor that exploded like an atom bomb over Russia could drop out of the sky unannounced at any time and wreak havoc on a city. And Hollywood to the contrary, there isn't much the world's scientists and generals can do about it.

But some former astronauts want to give the world a fighting chance.

They're hopeful Friday's cosmic coincidence — Earth's close brush with a 150-foot asteroid, hours after the 49-foot meteor struck in Russia — will draw attention to the dangers lurking in outer space and lead to action, such as better detection and tracking of asteroids.

"After today, a lot of people will be paying attention," said Rusty Schweickart, who flew on Apollo 9 in 1969, helped establish the planet-protecting B612 Foundation and has been warning NASA for years to put more muscle and money into a heightened asteroid alert.

Earth is menaced all the time by meteors, which are chunks of asteroids or comets that enter Earth's atmosphere. But many if not most of them are simply too small to detect from afar with the tools now available to astronomers.

The meteor that shattered over the Ural Mountains was estimated to be 20 times more powerful than the atomic bomb dropped on Hiroshima during World War II. It blew out thousands of windows and left more than 1,000 people injured in Chelyabinsk, a city of 1 million. And yet no one saw it coming; it was about the size of a bus.

"This is a tiny asteroid," said astronomer Paul Chodas, who works in NASA's Near-Earth Object program in Pasadena, Calif. "It would be very faint and difficult to detect — not impossible, but difficult."

As for the three-times-longer asteroid that hurtled by Earth later in the day Friday, passing closer to the planet than some communications satellites, astronomers in Spain did not even discover it until a year ago. That would have been too late for preemptive action — such as the launch of a deflecting spacecraft — if it had been on a collision course with Earth.

Asteroid 2012 DA14, as it is known, passed harmlessly within 17,150 miles of Earth, zooming by at 17,400 mph, or 5 miles per second.

Scientists believe there are anywhere from 500,000 to 1 million "near-Earth" asteroids comparable in size to DA14 or bigger out there. But less than 1 percent have actually been spotted. Astronomers have catalogued only 9,600 of them, of which nearly 1,300 are bigger than 0.6 miles.

Earth's atmosphere gets hit with 100 tons of junk every day, most of it the size of sand, and most of it burning up before it reaches the ground, according to NASA.

"These fireballs happen about once a day or so, but we just don't see them because many of them fall over the ocean or in remote areas. This one was an exception," NASA's Jim Green, director of planetary science, said of the meteor in Russia.

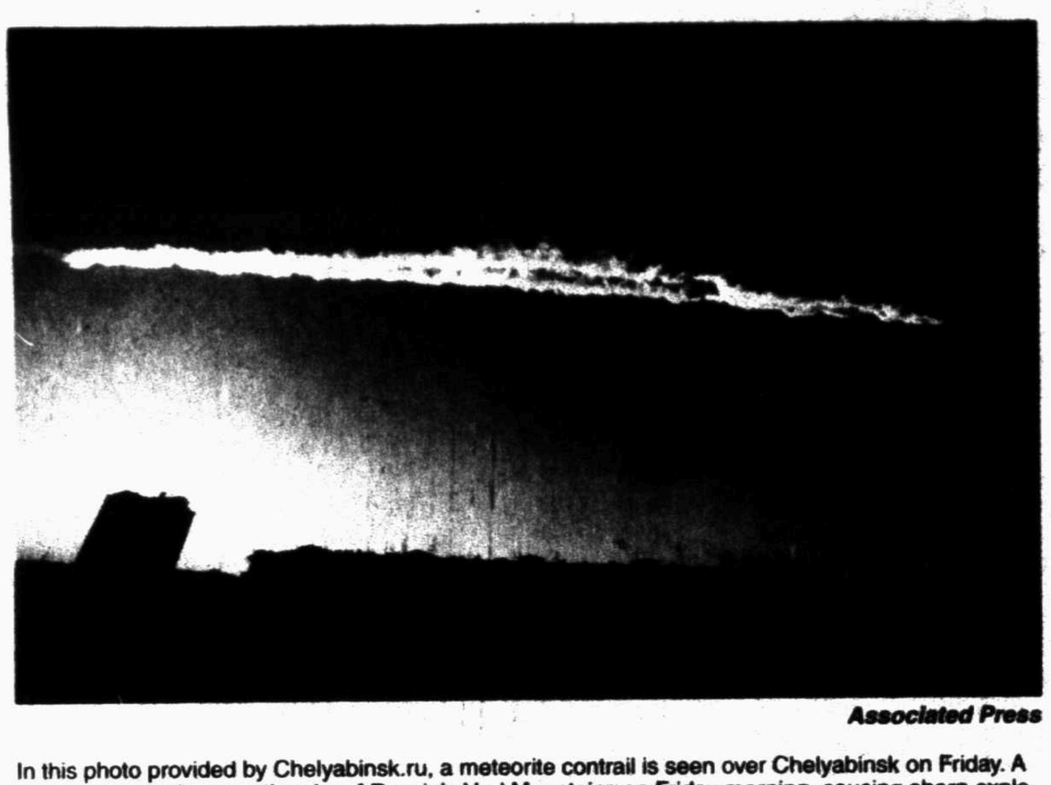

A 100- to 130-foot asteroid exploded over Siberia in 1908 and flattened 825 square miles of forest, while the rock that is believed to have wiped out the dinosaurs 65 million years ago was a monster 6 miles across.

The chances of Earth getting hit without warning by one of the big ones are "extremely low, so low that it's ridiculous. But the smaller ones are quite different," Schweickart said. He warned: "If we get hit by one of them, it's most likely we wouldn't have known anything about it before it hit."

Chodas said the meteor strike in Russia is "like Mother Nature is showing us what a small one — a tiny one, really — can do."

All this points to the need for more money for tracking of near-Earth objects, according to Schweickart and the former space shuttle and station astronaut who now heads up the B612 Foundation, Ed Lu.

A few years ago, Schweickart and others recommended NASA launch a $250 million-a-year program to survey asteroids and work up a deflection plan. After 10 years of cataloging, the annual price tag could drop to $75 million, they said.

In this photo provided by Chelyabinsk.ru, a meteorite contrail is seen over Chelyabinsk on Friday. A meteor streaked across the sky of Russia's Ural Mountains on Friday morning, causing sharp explosions and reportedly injuring more than 1,000 people, including many hurt by broken glass.

Greenwood's area round woes continue vs. Perryton

By Jonathan Hull
jhull@mrt.com

Perryton	70
Greenwood	49

PLAINVIEW — The Greenwood girls basketball team felt it somewhat executed its game plan against No. 21 Perryton on Friday.

Greenwood went into its Class 3A area playoff game hoping to keep the ball out of Perryton junior point guard Sydney Walton's hands as much as possible. And while Walton managed to score 16 points, Greenwood executed its game plan for a majority of the game.

Perryton simply had an answer as other players stepped up in a 70-49 victory against Greenwood at Wayland Baptist University's Hutcherson Center.

With Greenwood (17-16) so focused on keeping Walton from deciding the game, Perryton (25-4) got big offensive showings from senior guard Michaelea Samples (19 points), senior post Lacey Herbert (16 points, 12 rebounds) and sophomore guard Emma Mercado (13 points).

Perryton now advances to play Shallowater in the Class 3A regional round at 6 p.m. Tuesday in Canyon.

Anthony

Bell

"We looked at several films and (Walton) had just been their scoring leader and the rest of them were not scoring too much," Greenwood coach Quint Anthony said. "The others stepped up. That makes Perryton a tough team when the others can score like that."

Perryton hit eight 3-pointers in the game to go with Herbert's impressive presence inside. The strong shooting from beyond the arc has not been characteristic of Perryton this season, coach Mark Styles said.

"We don't typically even shoot that many 3-pointers," Styles admitted. "I wanted them to get it inside every now and then, but when you're 7 of 17 shooting 3-pointers in the first half you can't get on them too much."

Perryton never trailed in the game, but struggled to get separation from Greenwood until the final minute of the opening period. Perryton closed the first quarter on an 8-0 run. Mercado, who was taken of the court on a stretcher with a neck injury in the fourth period after a hard collision with the wall underneath the basket, got a put-back and then drained a 3-pointer to start the short spurt.

Walton capped the rally by banking in a one-handed runner 10 feet behind the 3-point line for a 24-14 advantage going into

Playing the back, or defending, in soccer is hard enough, but try doing it against one of District 2-5A's most potent offensive attacks.

As the Lee and Midland High soccer teams play the first of two games this year in their rivalry today, the Rebels and Bulldogs possess two of the district's most dangerous attacks and all season long have put pressure on opposing backlines.

In six games this season, Lee has tallied 12 goals, while Midland High has 18 and half of them have come from the strong-legged Nico Francino.

The two squads are both sitting in positions to make a run at the playoffs, but as the two rivals meet at noon today at Grande Communications Stadium, the Lady Bulldogs and Lady Rebels might still be thinking about a number of "What-ifs?"

Lady Chaps rebound from loss to win 2 at MC Spring Classic

By Oscar LeRoy
oleroy@mrt.com

After dropping a heartbreaker in the opening game of the Midland College Spring Classic, Leanna Meyer and the Midland College softball team wanted to bounce back in a big way. That's exactly what they did on a chilly Friday at the Freddie Ezell Softball Complex.

The Lady Chaparrals shrugged off a 9-6 loss to Otero Junior College in eight innings with blowout victories over Dodge City (Kan.) Community College (11-2) and Garden City (Kan.) Community College (8-0) during the first day of action of the classic.

"I didn't want to go today with any losses, but after that you just have to move on," said Meyer, the freshman shortstop from Waianae, Hawaii.

"I think my team is bonding more," added Meyer. "With some people hurt, some of us have to pick up the slack more. It was kind of hard with three games today, but the people that went in, executed, hit the ball and made plays. I think we'll only get better."

MC coach Tommy Ramos, who saw his young team improve to 10-5, said the Lady Chaparrals are making strides in their development, but still have a ways to go.

Online

See a photo gallery Friday's softball action at www.mywesttexas.com

"We're making a lot of mental mistakes, along with pitching mistakes, but that'll change with chemistry," Ramos said. "They'll also get a better understanding of who they are, who their teammates are, and what the expectations are. They lost a tough one earlier but they battled the entire time. The last two games we played, the score doesn't show that it was a good game until the opposing team made a couple of mistakes."

In fact the game against Garden City was a pitcher's duel early on between MC's Holly Herrington and the Broncbusters' Joslynn Lopez.

The Lady Chaps broke through the scoreless game in the fourth when Earnysha Scroggins walked and later scored on a sacrifice fly to center field by Pililani Smith-Keopuhiwa.

MC then broke it open in the sixth with four runs on four hits and two Broncbuster errors. Aukai Hauhio had the big hit in the frame with a two-run single to left.

The lady Chaps added three more runs in the top of the seventh as Maya Varela had the big hit with a two-run double to right field.

The rest was left up to Herrington, who bounced back from the opening game loss as she allowed just one hit

Lady Knights wallop Lady Patriots

Midland Classical's Karis Johnson, left, drives to the hoop while being covered by Amarillo San Jacinto's Allison Gremillion on Friday at MCA.

Karis Johnson said she and her Midland Classical teammates wanted to come out with a bang in their final home game Friday, and did they ever, dominating the first half before coasting to a 63-33 win against rival Amarillo San Jacinto at Classical Gym.

The No. 15 Lady Knights had an answer for every defense the Lady Patriots threw at them Friday and made life miserable for San Jacinto on the offensive end with their 2-3 zone defense, setting up a one-game playoff against No. 24 Lubbock Christian for the TAPPS 1-3A title at 2 p.m. today in Lamesa.

"Everybody contributed," MCA coach Jim Beattie said. "It was a team victory without a doubt, and that gives us a lot of momentum to go into this playoff game."

With both teams opening the game in a 2-3 zone, Midland Classical (23-3, 5-1 in TAPPS 1-3A) forced San Jacinto out of it with crisp ball movement early, working the ball into the teeth of the zone for layups or open 3-pointers.

With the Lady Knights up 9-0 with 3:11 to play in the first, San Jacinto switched to a 1-3-1 zone, which provided immediate results in the form of two turnovers but ultimately only slowed MCA down as a Kayla Beattie 3-pointer at the 2:04 mark put the Lady Knights up, 14-0.

MCA ended the quarter up 14-2, but Kayla Beattie was just getting started, shooting San Jacinto out of the zone in the second when she scored 14 of her 17 first-half points, including four 3-pointers.

The last of those 3-pointers, a pull-up jumper from well behind the arc, put Midland Classical up 35-9 heading into halftime.

"It picks up the whole team," Johnson said of Beattie's barrage of 3-pointers. "It fires us up when she's on like that."

Beattie led the Lady Knights with 19 points and seven assists, and Johnson impressed as well in her final home game, scoring 12 points and grabbing 17 rebounds.

"(Johnson) was phenomenal," Jim Beattie said. "She's irreplaceable."

Most importantly, Midland Classical ended its regular season on a positive note heading into a showdown with Lubbock Christian, a team the Lady Knights lost to, 45-42, in the first meeting in Lubbock but defeated, 40-27, on Feb. 5 in Midland.

And knowing what it will take to defeat the scrappy Lady Eagles, the Lady Knights, district runners-up last year, were happy to have a big win under their belt after Friday.

"I think it gives us a lot of confidence, going from a huge win and then going out ready to take the district title," senior Abbie Rael said.

the second period.

"We kind of collapsed on defense toward the end of the first quarter and then the girl makes a last second shot from nearly half-court," Anthony recalled. "We just didn't execute like we were supposed to. Then we couldn't make a shot. It was just one of those nights where they were on."

Greenwood stayed within eight to 12 points of Perryton for much of the second period, but couldn't cut into the lead and trailed 45-29 at halftime. Perryton then opened the third period with a 7-0 run, and never led by less than 20 points the remainder of the game.

It marks the fifth straight season Greenwood fell in the area round of the playoffs. Sophomore post Amanda Bell ended up leading Greenwood with 13 points, while senior Courtney Waters had nine points and seven rebounds. Waters is one of seven seniors who played their final basketball game as Rangerettes.

"I feel really bad for our seniors," Anthony said. "They really wanted to be the first group to get past this round, but we'll just have to try to do it again next season."

Chaps beat MCC in 11 innings

From staff reports

Midland College pulled out a hotly contested game against McLennan Community College on Friday, rallying to win 4-3 in 11 innings at Christensen Stadium.

After falling behind 3-2 in the fourth, the Chaparrals shut out McLennan over the next seven innings, later tying it in the seventh and winning it in the 11th on a sacrifice fly by Hunter Redman.

Redman was 0-for-4 on the day, but came up with the big play to score Tyler Barlow, who was 2-for-4 with a run scored on the day.

Jeremie Fagnan was one of two Chaps to record a double on the day, the only extra-base hits in the game, and was 2-for-5 with a run scored also.

On the mound, Chaparral starter Jake Bateman held McLennan to three runs on 12 hits in 6 2/3 innings while Jared Robinson allowed no hits in 4 1/3 shutout innings.

Midland College will now face McLennan again in a doubleheader today, which will start at noon at Christensen Stadium.

and struck out six.

"I thought she was moving it really well," said Ramos of Herrington. "She's been working on hitting her spots and understanding the purpose of each pitch. She got ahead in the count in this game, while she got behind in the count (against Otero)."

The Lady Chaps looked to be in good position to win their opening game of the classic, leading 4-3 heading into the seventh. But Otero Junior College rallied for three runs in the inning against Herrington and MC to take a 6-4 advantage.

MC responded and forced extra innings when Smith-Keopuhiwa launched a two-run homer run to right-center field to tie the game at 6.

But Otero rallied again in the eighth and took advantage of a pair of MC errors to score three runs in the frame and then held on for the victory.

Against Dodge City, the Lady Chaps and Conquistadors were tied at 1 when MC broke the game open with four runs in the fourth, highlighted by an RBI triple to right by Scroggins.

Starting MC pitcher Shelby Weissenbach had to leave the game after three innings because of an injury but Kristine Vargas came on in relief and was solid as the only run she allowed came on an infield single in the bottom of the sixth inning to cut MC's lead to 6-2.

Vargas scattered five hits and struck out four in four innings.

MC put the game out of reach in the top of the seventh by scoring five runs on five hits as Scroggins had an RBI single, Meyer had a two-run double to center and Hauhio added a two-run homer to left.

"Hitting is contagious," Meyer said. "When one person gets a hit, then the rest of us hit well. It all works out well for us, I guess."

After Friday's action, the Lady Chaps are now 6-1 on their busy weekend with two more games coming up for MC in today's classic action.

From 1B

Today, the two rivals meet looking to not only create opportunities but finish them and in the process earn a much-needed victory and stay in the race for the playoffs in District 2-5A.

"We've created a ton of opportunities, and we outshoot teams on a regular basis, but we've just had a hard time getting it in the back of the net," Dunlevy said. "It's very hard to explain that because they do everything right, they put it on frame, and they hit it right to the keeper instead of the corner. We've worked on every finishing thing I could think of, and I'm looking for anything that's going to help us get it in the back of the net right now."

Other than a 6-0 outburst to start, Midland High (4-5-4, 4-1-1, 13 points in District 2-5A) has scored more than three goals just once in the last five games. Included in those five games was the loss to Central and the tie to Odessa High.

Dunlevy said he's made some changes in the attack to account for injuries, including a season-ending knee injury to speedy sophomore forward Shelby Shelton, but also mainly to try to find a way to ignite the Bulldogs' offensive attack.

Midland High showed signs of coming out of its shell in a 3-0 victory against eighth-place Tascosa on Wednesday, but for the players it's about remaining patient.

"It's a matter of staying calm, working and not panicking," said junior forward Vanessa Salazar, who has a goal this season. "Sometimes we tend to panic and we need to calm down and pass the ball, and play the opportunities and the gaps that are there."

Lee (4-8-0, 3-3-0, 9 points) has had similar struggles with its offense through six games. The Lady Rebels scored five goals against Tascosa, but have been shutout twice (San Angelo Central and Abilene High), and only scored once in a loss to Odessa High.

Unlike Dunlevy, Lee coach Brian Pollard hasn't made many changes, but he said his squad giving up early goals in games has forced his team to attack more than it wants. Under Pollard, the Lady Rebels have played good defense and he said that will be a key today.

Yes, they need to be able to stick the opportunities they get but also they have to defend and not play from behind.

"If we defend well and limit their opportunities, and the longer we can keep the game 0-0, I think the better our confidence is, and more of a willingness to take those shots and not having to press," Pollard said. "That's what has gotten us in trouble is being down late and pressuring, and giving up a late goal."

Lee does have the speed up top to cause fits for opposing teams with Tori Rackow and Deo'nna Calhoun, but Calhoun said they have to do a better job taking advantage of space.

"We are going to have to work the ball around, and put the ball in spaces, go to those spaces and make quick passes," Calhoun said, "and we are going to have to finish our shots."

And finishing those shots could make a major difference for two teams hoping that today isn't filled with some more "What-ifs?"

Tests

From 1B

That type of firepower is what the Bulldogs' and Rebels' backlines face at 2 p.m. today at Grande Communications Stadium.

It's not a matter of whether opportunities will be created today, but how many and who can bury the ones they get.

"It's going to be fun, but it won't be much fun from a coach's standpoint," Midland High coach Warren Cottle said. "But from a fan's standpoint, it's going to be a heck of a game to watch. I expect a lot of fireworks because both teams are going to be aggressive and get after it."

Both teams have done plenty of scoring this season, and that's where the test comes in for the two teams' backlines.

Midland High's backline will have to stop a Lee attack that includes lanky speedster Darius Strambler (3 goals), senior Reilly Gwin (3 goals), along with Omar Alvidrez (2 goals) and freshman Leo Barba (2 goals).

Midland High senior defender Stephen Reid said the key will be shape on defense or staying in a proper defensive formation while the offense is attacking, and communicating with each other. The Bulldogs faced a speedy team in Central and fell, 3-2, on Feb. 5, but Reid said the Bulldogs are confident they can slow down Lee's attack.

"We know they have fast players up top, and we have four in the back and we feel like we can be pretty strong," Reid said. "I feel like it's shape and sticking together (that will make the difference)."

Lee's back four, meanwhile, will take on a Midland High attack that is led by Francino. The strong leg Francino displayed on the football field is augmented on the soccer field by quickness and a creativeness that leaves some teams wondering how he scored.

That's a major reason Francino has nine goals in league play, including a hat trick against Abilene High to start the 2-5A season.

"Sometimes he doesn't have to even look up to see the goal, he just knows where it's at," said Lee coach Chris Bryant. "It's amazing to see some of the stuff that he can do with that ball."

The Bulldogs' attack is more than Francino, though, as Will Downing has scored twice this season and his runs along the wing have opened up opportunities in the center. Throw in West Texas A&M signee Reese Barden along with center midfielder Ethan Baltier and the Bulldogs possess just as much firepower as Lee.

The Rebels, though, won't change what they do in the back, senior Logan Vitello said. Vitello added the Rebels are familiar with Francino and Downing, and that could be a factor in today's games.

"It's going to be continuing what we always do," Vitello said. "That's led us up to this point and we've had such a good season. If we keep doing the same things we've been doing, it's going to be fine."

Lifestyle, pop culture drive dog breed popularity

By Sue Manning

LOS ANGELES — Help wanted: One trained, easygoing, low-maintenance dog that will work for next to nothing. It was the classified ad that Matthew VanFossan wrote in his head after going blind.

His Labrador retriever, Achilles, "will guide me across busy streets for nothing more than a pat on the head or 'Good boy,'" said the 31-year-old writer-counselor from Los Angeles. "He loves every bit of attention, but he can also go without it. He'll let out a low groan if he's getting too bored."

The breed's friendliness, intelligence and love of physical activity helped make it the most popular dog in America for the last two decades, according to American Kennel Club data released last week. Labrador retrievers are widely used as search and rescue, guide, therapy and service dogs, and they're also perfect for active, outdoors-loving families with children, said club spokeswoman Lisa Peterson.

Labrador retrievers (22 years), cocker spaniels (23) and poodles (22) have been the most popular purebred dog breeds in the United States for a total of 67 of the 128 years the AKC has been counting. The data from the AKC, the country's only nonprofit dog registry, comes from paid registrations by breeders and owners of purebred dogs, and makes the dog eligible for AKC events such as dog shows. More than 40 million purebred dogs have been registered since 1884, Peterson said.

Life as therapy animal not for everyone

By John Marshall

PHOENIX — The children buzz in excitement, boisterous and barging in, their little hands covering seemingly every part of the Australian shepherd's body.

Callie doesn't flinch, calmly lying at the center of this circle of chaos, lightly panting with what appears to be a smile.

Dogs don't really smile, but this one sure was at ease.

"She loves the attention," Callie's handler Jeanette Wood said during the visit to the Child Crisis Center in Phoenix. "She eats this stuff up."

Callie makes calm amid the clutter look easy, but it's not.

Being a therapy dog — or cat or horse or whatever — like Callie, takes a special kind of animal, one with just the right temperament and personality. It also takes training, not just for the animal, but for the handler.

"You have to be a certain kind of person and have a certain kind of dog to do this," said Pam Gaber, founder of Gabriel's Angels, an Arizona-based nonprofit that delivers pet therapy to abused and at-risk children.

Therapy animals are used at hospitals, nursing homes, schools, rehabilitation centers, institutions and in one-on-one sessions with therapists. They also have been brought in to comfort victims of mass-casualty events, including the Newtown, Conn., school shooting and the Tucson shooting that targeted former U.S. Rep. Gabrielle Giffords.

They come from a wide range of species, from cats and rabbits to barnyard varieties like horses, goats and pigs. Exotic birds, hamsters and guinea pigs, even llamas and alpacas have also been used to comfort people mane Society of the United States, argue that owners mistake club registration as a sign of responsible breeding. "Registry with the AKC simply indicates that a dog had two parents of the same breed," said Cori Menkin, senior director of ASPCA's Puppy Mills Campaign. The AKC acknowledged that registration does not guarantee the quality or health of a dog.

However, Peterson condemned those who increase breeding to meet public demand, saying "responsible breeders do not produce more dogs just to meet popular demand."

Factors, including Hollywood, pop culture and the economy, help drive changes in breed popularity. For instance, the yellow Lab featured in the best-selling memoir and the subsequent movie "Marley & Me," helped the breed's popularity skyrocket, Peterson said.

Likewise, the popularity of other breeds has soared thanks to the beagle Snoopy in Charles Schulz's Peanuts comics, "Lassie" for collies, and cocker spaniels from "Lady and the Tramp." Snoopy has been one of the biggest influences, Peterson said, and is the only non-dog to be issued an AKC registration certificate.

But "the No. 1 thing that drives changes in dog popularity is people's lifestyles," Peterson said. In New York City last year, larger breeds such as the Labrador retriever and German shepherd jumped over the smaller Yorkshire terrier. Peterson attributed this to the economic recovery, saying "people are going back to larger dogs."

The short-haired dogs are easier to groom, easier to walk and to exercise than the smaller, more time-intensive dogs, she said. She believes smaller dogs became popular because of the recession, because that trend started in the 1990s.

Another popular breed, the cocker spaniel, has owners coming back for its friendliness. Carol Bryant, a blogger from Forty Fort, Pa., travels frequently and uses her cocker spaniel Dexter as a networking tool. Dexter is so good that he has his own business cards, she said.

One of the breeds that has made the most noticeable gains in popularity is the bulldog, said Peterson. It has inched up the last five years, most recently to No. 5 nationally in 2012, she said.

She attributed some of that to "great visibility. It's the mascot for the U.S. Marines. Think of all the colleges that have bulldog mascots. The Mack truck has a bulldog on the hood. And Tillman and Beefy are real bulldogs who skateboard."

Celebrities such as Brad Pitt, rapper Ice-T and athletes Michael Phelps and Sean White, have bulldogs, she added, which could partly explain why the breed is No. 1 in celebrity-driven Los Angeles and Las Vegas.

Bulldogs "have such great temperaments, they are adorable puppies, they are sturdy and compact, and they have the wrinkles and the eyes. They don't require a lot of grooming or exercise and they love to stay in the house and be with you or if you like the outdoors, they love that too," Peterson said.

When it comes to America's top dog for the past 20 years, practicality beat being fashionable. The Labrador retriever's intelligence earned high marks among owners who sought out the breed.

THERAPY

From 1C

of all ages.

The most popular and recognizable therapy animals, not surprisingly, are dogs. And it's not even close.

Pet Partners, a nonprofit organization that promotes positive animal interactions as a therapeutic resource, has 11,000 therapy teams in 14 countries and 95 percent of their animals are dogs.

"Dogs are social by nature, but they're also accustomed to going with us, going out and meeting people," said Bill Kueser, vice president of marketing for Pet Partners, based in Bellevue, Wash. "We take them on walks, we go with them to the pet store to get dog food. We integrate them in our lives in sort of a wider spectrum of activities than other pets and species are integrated."

A wide variety of breeds is used. Gabriel's Angels, which serves 13,000 children in Phoenix and Tucson, has everything from a 4-pound Chihuahua to a 190-pound English mastiff, though most of its animals are golden retrievers, labs or a mix with either breed.

But not every dog is suitable for therapy.

The key is temperament. Therapy dogs need to be relatively even-keeled and enjoy being around people.

If a dog cowers around new people, is too timid or overbearing, or gets jumpy when there's a lot of commotion, it probably won't be a good fit as a therapy dog.

"Sometimes the person wants it more than the dog," said Gaber, who started Gabriel's Angels after taking her Weimaraner, Gabriel, to the Crisis Nursery in Phoenix in 2000. "If they're in the corner cowering, let them stay home and sleep on your bed during the day if that's what they want."

The dogs also must have basic obedience skills so they're not jumping on people or pulling on the leash, and they must be able to follow commands without being distracted.

Most dogs in this line of work go through training, and are registered with organizations such as Pet Partners or Therapy Dogs Inc.

Pet Partners has its animals and trainers go through an eight-hour, in-person training program, or through an online course that typically takes six to eight hours to complete. Handlers learn how to read their animal's stress level and make the animal comfortable in a variety of environments.

Pet Partners teaches handlers about the types of people they might visit and the kinds of procedures they might encounter, such as infection control at a hospital. They learn to work in conditions that they are likely to run into, such as being near wheelchairs or hearing loud, startling noises.

"You need to expose the animal to situations he or she might face when visiting a hospital or some other place," Kueser said. "Distractions, noises, crowded petting, erratic behavior are things we model in the (trainer) evaluation to make sure these things aren't overstressing to the animal."

To get Callie ready for her foray into therapy for kids, Wood took her to playgrounds and had kids feed her treats; walked her through Home Depot and PetSmart; took her on buses and trains — any busy place she could find.

"The most important thing is to desensitize them so they'll be comfortable in these environments," she said.

Mom of four musters courage to leave abusive marriage

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: I have lived in an abusive marriage for 11 years. Now, when I have finally mustered the courage to leave, everybody says I must stay "for the children" because he is a "changed man."

I no longer love him and he refuses to give me a divorce. He also refuses to admit there is anything wrong in the marriage and says I'm exaggerating everything.

I have tried counseling and therapy alone because he refused to join me. I do not want my four children to be affected by my choice and wish for a mutual discussion, but he doesn't want to discuss divorce. I am afraid to stay and afraid to leave. I have no support system here. — WANTS OUT IN ILLINOIS

DEAR WANTS OUT: After 11 years of abuse and counseling and therapy alone because your husband would not accompany you, his wishes should no longer affect your decision. Pick up the phone and contact the National Domestic Violence Hotline, 800-799-7233. That's the place to find information about how to form an escape plan for yourself and your children.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 23-year-old woman with a university degree, a fulfilling job, downtown apartment and a busy social life. I am also heavily tattooed. My tattoos bring me a great deal of happiness. I work in a field where visible tattoos are acceptable, and I'm very good at covering them when necessary.

My problem is how to politely deal with strangers who criticize my tattoos when I'm out in public. I have been told I have "ruined" myself, that I have no future, that I'll never find a husband, that I am ugly, an insult to women and trashy. I do not dress scantily and, in my opinion, these comments are uncalled for.

I usually tell people that I am affecting only myself and that I'm happy, but this usually results in scoffs or more rude remarks. Part of me wants to be rude back because I am offended. What should I say the next time I am inevitably picked on? — INKED AND IRKED IN CALGARY, CANADA

DEAR INKED AND IRKED: I printed a letter last spring about a Canadian woman who insisted that people north of the border are nicer than people in the U.S.A. Your letter shows that's not necessarily the case. The next time someone makes an unkind remark about your body art, look the person in the eye and say, "That you would say something so hurtful to me shows you are uglier on the inside than you think I am on the outside."

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend and I have been dating for 11 months. He's 18 and I'm 17. Every date we go on is initiated and planned by me. For once, I'd like to be surprised and swept off my feet by his actually planning a date. I don't know how to go about this. I want to tell him without hurting his feelings. — GETTING A LITTLE BORED IN QUAKERTOWN, PA.

DEAR GETTING A LITTLE BORED: The basis for a successful relationship is communication. While I don't advise you to tell your boyfriend that you're "getting a little bored," I do think it would be helpful to express that you'd like HIM to plan your dates once or twice a month so you don't have to do all the work in maintaining the relationship. That's not hurtful; it's truthful.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Feb. 16, 2013:

This year you might say one thing yet do something else. If you get feedback regarding this issue, it would be wise to work on resolving it; otherwise, people might not know what to expect when interacting with you. Once you become clearer, the possibility of getting involved in a dynamic relationship will be enhanced. If you are single, the first couple of choices you make for a potential sweetie might not be the right match for you. Trust yourself. If you are attached, the two of you will become closer if you accept yourself and are willing to transform. PISCES can irritate you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★ Revise your plans if there is a last-minute change to take into consideration. You might disappoint someone, or perhaps you could invite this person to join you. Your strength and sense of direction encourage others to follow your lead. Tonight: A must appearance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★ An emotional collision encourages you to head in a different direction. Put on your rainy-day emotional gear and do something else. You'll discover that a friend delights in your company. Go to the movies and have a late lunch afterward. Tonight: As you like.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★ Look beyond what is happening, and understand why others are reacting the way they are. You might decide not to make the same judgment call. Help them to see the bigger picture, and they will be more comfortable as a result. Tonight: Vanish, but don't tell everyone.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★ A loved one causes uproar in a way that causes you to distance yourself. Of course, if you are single, this behavior could emanate from a potential love interest. Stop and rethink your choices. Avoid reacting, and choose to do nothing. Tonight: Keep it light.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★ Head out the door. Whether you go to put in overtime at work or take off to visit a friend makes no difference. By distancing yourself from your personal life, you will be able to get some perspective. You also just might need a change of scenery. Tonight: A force to be dealt with.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★ Reach out for feedback, even if you don't like what you hear. Sit on your opinions for now, and understand their role in the question at hand. Take a drive in the country with a loved one. You'll gain a new insight as soon as you detach. Tonight: Let someone else decide.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★ Your willingness to have a discussion and get to the bottom of the other person's issue will be appreciated. Are you ready to discuss what is on your mind, too? A tight budget or an emotional issue might be coloring your mood. Try not to think about it. Tonight: Avoid crowds.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★ You might be holding back a concern, and you could become very tight-lipped and rigid as a result. You might want to consider discussing this reservation, especially as it could be affecting others. Do not underestimate your importance. Tonight: Play it low-key.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 21-Dec. 21) ★★★ Pace yourself, but don't linger on what might be defined as a difficult moment. Your strong drive marks your decisions, especially with domestic matters. Ask a loved one for his or her impression. Be aware that this person could have strong opinions. Tonight: Go off with friends.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★ Use your imagination, and you'll make an ordinary day far more interesting. Know that you might not be able to cheer up a depressed friend, as he or she is set on being glum. Remain sensitive to a child or loved one who feels left out. Tonight: Paint the town red.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★ You could be overwhelmed by everything that you have to do. In fact, you might not want to answer your front door or any incoming calls. This is an excellent idea that will allow you to emerge later feeling much better. Indulge a loved one. Tonight: Stay in your fortress.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★ Make plans only with those you want to hang out with. News from a distance could be a problem. Know that you might have missed a detail. Discuss the situation with someone else who is involved. Tonight: Dinner at a local spot.

Ask the Guys

Dear Classified Guys,
Every week when I pick up the newspaper, I scan the employment section. Not because I need work, but I like to make sure I still have a good job with competitive pay. When I see one paying less, I feel better about going to work the next day. During my weekly scan, I've seen some pretty strange ads. One was a flag company that needed someone to climb flagpoles and install ornaments at the top. Not quite the job for me since I'm afraid of heights. Then last week I saw an ad for someone to consult as an "in-field mattress inspector". I thought it was a joke until I saw the salary. It's more than I make. I figure I'm qualified since I sleep on a mattress every night. How hard can inspecting one be? I'm considering answering this ad, but before I apply, can you tell me what a mattress inspector really does? I'm hoping there are naps involved.

Carry: It would be nice to have a job where napping is a requirement. I'm sure a lot of people would be lining up to apply.

Cash: It's probably the only interview where you could show up with a pillow and blanket.

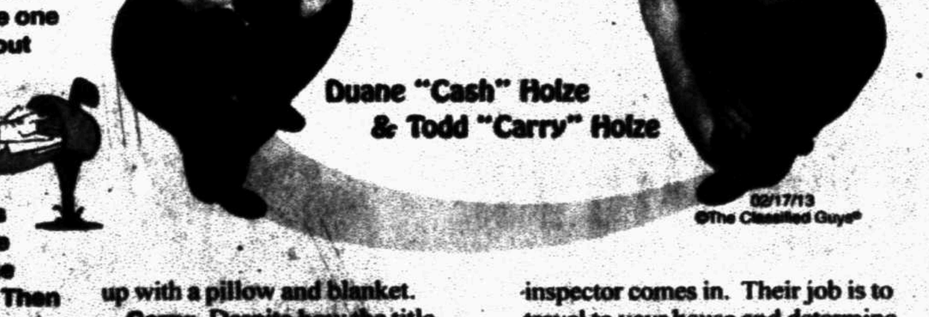

Carry: Despite how the title sounds, "mattress inspectors" don't get to lie around all day. In fact, the job requires quite a bit of travel.

Cash: In-field mattress inspectors are more like investigators. Here's how it works. Let's say you bought a mattress from a major manufacturer. A few years later, after several backaches, you think your mattress is defective or sagging too much. You contact the manufacturer and request a replacement under the warranty. The manufacturer hires an independent company who then inspects your mattress to determine if it is faulty.

Carry: That's where the mattress inspector comes in. Their job is to travel to your house and determine if the mattress is defective. However, instead of lying down and taking a nap, they make a visual inspection of the mattress, box spring and frame. They may also take some basic measurements and photographs as well.

Cash: The information is passed onto the company to determine if the mattress qualifies for replacement or repair under the warranty. Regardless of the outcome, the inspection company is paid for their services.

Carry: If you like to travel and meet with people, then it may be a good job for you. But if your goal is to lie down on the job, you probably need to look elsewhere.

Most of us never get enough sleep, which can make for a long tiring day at work. That growing number of weary workers is gaining the attention of companies as it impacts the bottom line. Reduced productivity due to sleep deprivation is estimated to cost businesses about 18 billion dollars per year. Considering the potential losses, more and more companies are encouraging break times or offering napping rooms for employees to refresh themselves. The only thing better would be to have someone else do your job while you're resting.

All Tucked In

"Sleep tight" is one of those phrases many parents use when they tuck their children into bed for the evening. Yet it's origin is believed to date back far beyond our grandparents generation. Back in the 16th and 17th centuries, a mattress was typically made from straw or down. It was then placed on a lattice of ropes suspended from a wood frame. The ropes often required regular tightening, which in turn created the phrase "sleep tight".

The Softer Side

The retail world of selling mattresses can be very competitive. The owner of the store where I work has a policy that any mattress can be returned within 20 days for a full refund. To be honest, most people never have a problem. Last week, however, I received one of those rare calls for a return.

A woman named Rhonda told me that she loved the bedroom set she bought, but Henry couldn't stand the soft mattress. "He's been restless every night," she complained. "We've tried switching sides and flipping the mattress, but he finally gave up and slept on the floor."

"That's horrible," I replied. "Does your husband have a bad back?"

"Oh, Henry's not my husband," she said. "He's my basset hound!"
