Bush will kick off Centennial events

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

Vice President George Bush will be in Midland Feb. 27 to speak at the kickoff rally for the Midland Centennial, it was announced today by Centennial Commissioner Martin Allday.

"I'm very pleased to announce that George Bush will be the speaker," Allday said. "We're looking forward to having him."

The announcement was made at the unveiling of the Centennial billboard on Highway 80 near Frank See Chevrolet between Midland Drive and Midkiff Road.

"We're most grateful to the Lamar Outdoor Advertising Co., which has donated this sign for the entire year," said Commission Co-Chairman Chris Scharbauer. "We want to let everybody know that this is Mddland's 100th year, and we're off to a running start in making this a year to remember."

Bush lived in Midland from 1948 to 1959. He was a founding director of the Midland YMCA and the Commercial Bank and Trust, and was active in local civic organizations. With Midlanders Hugh and Bill Liedtke, he founded Zapata Petroleum Corp.

After moving to Houston and founding the Zapata Off Shore Co., Bush went into politics and was elected to Congress. He served as United Nations Ambassador, Republican National Chairman, the first envoy to the People's Republic of China and director of the CIA before being elected vice president in 1980.

According to Allday, Bush attributes much of his success to the years he spent in Midland.

"He says if he is anything today, it's because of what he learned as a young man in Midland."

The Feb. 27 rally at the Midland Center will be the first official event of the centennial year. In addition to Bush's speech at 6:30 p.m., there will be entertainment, proclamations by city and state officials, and the premiere of the Midland Centennial film.

The rally is open to all Midlanders, but those who want to attend must obtain tickets from the Centennial office, 109 N. Main St., beginning Feb. 11, or send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with their name, address, phone number and number of tickets needed to the Midland Centennial, P.O. Box 1985, Midland, Texas, 79702. There is no charge for the tickets, but no one without a ticket will be admitted.

Leaders talk about talks

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

GENEVA, Switzerland — U.S. officials fanned out today to brief world leaders on the agreement to resume arms control talks with the Soviet Union, an agreement the Americans said was nearly derailed by a Soviet walkout.

No date or place has been set for the negotiations, which the two sides — in a joint statement issued late Tuesday — said would be aimed at "preventing an arms race in space" and "the complete elimination of nuclear arms everywhere."

The agreement came after two days of discussions between Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, along with top aides, at the U.S. and Soviet missions in Geneva.

Shultz, on his flight back to Washington today, acknowledged to reporters that he and Gromyko had "some ups and downs" but said a total breakdown was never in the cards. If no agreement had been reached in Geneva, Shultz said, he would have tried to arrange a new round of talks.

Gromyko, who left Geneva 45 minutes after Shultz, read a brief statement in English in which he spoke of the "immense tasks" that lie ahead for the two superpowers.

"There is no need to speak at length that the talks were not simple," said Gromyko, adding that the Soviet Union "will go its part of the road fully aware of the responsibility shared by the two great powers."

President Reagan, interviewed by the Dallas Morning News shortly before the agreement was announced, was quoted as saying, "It sounds very good."

The agreement to reopen nuclear arms negotiations, which the Soviets broke off a year ago, nearly didn't materialize, top U.S. officials said, because Gromyko threatened to walk out of the discussions and because of a dispute over Reagan's "Star Wars" research program.

Dam to be further considered

From Staff Reports

AUSTIN — Texas Supreme Court today agreed to return Colorado River Municipal Water District's application for construction of Stacy Reservoir to the Department of Water Resources for additional consideration. The news "delighted" officials of the Colorado River Municipal Water District, which had sought to construct Stacy Dam.

On Nov. 14, the court ruled the Texas Water Commission and lower courts had "misconstrued and misapplied" laws on unappropriated water in granting the district's application.

In a one-page opinion, the court today said, "Because an examination of authorities on the issue demonstrates that a remand is more appropriate than a reversal and rendition," it was reversing the lower court decisions and remanding the case to TWC.

In a prepared statement, CRMWD President John L. Taylor of Big Spring said, "Of course we're delighted that the Supreme Court decided to remand the Stacy case back to the Water Commission and we feel the TWC will be able to make adjustments that are necessary to validate the district's suit. With this serious consideration, we feel the district should be able to move forward in a timely manner to ultimately complete the project."

The court said it was over-ruling other motions involved in the rehearing request.

CRMWD had received a permit from the Texas Water Commission to construct a 500,000-acre-foot reservoir about 25 miles southeast of Ballinger. The city of Midland gets about 67 percent of its water supply from CRMWD, and Stacy Dam would have helped West Texas cities plan on a stable water supply for the future.

But the Supreme Court had held in its November opinion that unappropriated water "means the amount of water remaining after taking into account all existing uncanceled permits and filings valued at their recorded levels."

Justice William W. Kilgarlin, writing for the court, said the "undisputed evidence" was that such permits and filings at those levels left "an insufficient supply" of unappropriated water for Stacy Dam.

Justice C.L. Ray, in a concurring opinion, said he agreed with the majority regarding unappropriated water but argued the case should be returned to the Texas Water Commission for further consideration in accordance with the court's opinion.

Teachers like 'career ladder'

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

A group of Midland educators have gone on the record supporting, in concept, a merit pay system for Texas public educators, but say they strongly oppose any plan unable to accomodate all eligible personnel.

George J. Brown, chairman of the Joint Salary Committee, Tuesday told Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees, "We wish to go on the record as supporting the 'career ladder' concept but strongly oppose any plan that can not be fully funded." The Joint Salary Committee represents both the Midland Educators Association and Classroom Teachers Association of Midland.

The issue of the career ladder first arose during a special legislative session last summer, when the Texas House of Representatives established a form of merit pay aimed at keeping competent teachers in the classroom.

By law, the career ladder program provides additional money — $1,500 to $2,000 initially and ultimately more than $6,000 — for outstanding performance by teachers.

The first level — Level II — provides $1,500 to $2,000 to be implemented during the 1984-85 school year based on previous performance.

Due to the constraints imposed on MISD as the result of the passage of the bill, however, only about 50 percent of the personnel eligible will be awarded a Level II pay increase.

"We feel this contradicts the intent of a career ladder plan," said Brown. "All personnel who meet the criteria for Level II of the career ladder should be afforded that step. When only a portion of the total eligible can be accommodated because of inadequate funding, then the plan ceases being a career ladder."

Will those aide trades aid administration?

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — President Reagan is embarking on his second term without the coterie of close aides and advisers who helped propel him into the Oval Office and guided White House operations and policy during his first term.

In a spur-of-the-moment, nationally televised announcement, the president surprised even his own staff Tuesday when he disclosed that two of his most senior advisers — Chief of Staff James A. Baker III and Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan — are switching jobs.

The president praised the two men as having "compiled outstanding records of achievement" during his first four-year term, and explained the change by saying they sought new opportunities and challenges.

Reagan added that he hoped the swap would help them inject "renewed vigor" into their work and that he was confident it would "contribute substantially to our second term."

The moves were greeted with general praise on Capitol Hill, where Majority Leader Robert Dole said there were "no losers." Dole described both men as pragmatists who understand the need to reduce the deficit, but he also predicted the staff turnover would not have any affect on the president's opposition to tax increases.

Reagan himself addressed that point in an interview Tuesday with The Dallas Morning News. "The true believer in the White House is sitting in the Oval Office," Reagan said.

"No one has been whittling at me or trying to change my philosophy since I've been here," the president said. "Sometimes I wonder if some of those very vocal conservatives are really conservatives in conservatives' eyes. They're not in mine."

Reagan announced the switch barely 24 hours after it was put to him by his long-time aide and deputy chief of staff, Michael K. Deaver, who revealed his own intentions to leave the White House only last week.

According to presidential spokesman Larry Speakes, Deaver, Regan and Baker engineered the staff maneuver during the past several weeks, keeping the president in the dark until they had worked out the details of the arrangement.

Hodel to succeed Clark as Interior secretary

WASHINGTON (AP) — Energy Secretary Donald Hodel has been chosen to succeed William Clark as secretary of the Interior, an administration source said today.

The source, who demanded anonymity, said he expected the White House to announce Hodel's choice Thursday. Earlier, other administration officials said there would be no announcement today.

Hodel himself, in an interview with The Associated Press late Thursday night, branded as "speculation" reports of his selection to succeed Clark. "As far as I know, President Reagan has made no decision," Hodel said.

Hodel also says proposals under discussion to merge the Energy and Interior departments don't have "any momentum presently."

Clark last week made a surprise announcement that he intends to resign in two or three months.

Hodel was known not to be eager to switch jobs but would move to Interior if Reagan asked him to.

"Some folks, including Clark, view Interior as a greater post and a promotion," said one source familiar with Hodel's thinking. "But he doesn't really want to move. He likes energy better and considers it a more challenging, significant issue. And he doesn't believe that a merger (of the two departments) will ever go through."

Baby taken from surrogate mother

By MICHAEL WEST
Associated Press Writer

LONDON — The English High Court has taken temporary custody of a 5-day-old baby girl, the first child known to have been born in Britain to a woman paid to serve as a surrogate mother.

The baby's natural father and his childless wife are Americans, according to the Daily Star newspaper, which bought rights to the story.

The action placing the baby in the custody of the High Court's Family Division was announced Tuesday night by Leonie Cowen, chief attorney for the north London borough of Barnet.

The newspaper said the father's lawyers had made the application to have the baby made a ward of the high court in hopes that the father can prove to the court that he can provide a good home for the child.

The Barnet Council had obtained a lower court order Friday night, a few hours after the birth, preventing Kim Cotton, 28, from handing over her unnamed daughter to the childless couple. The borough council said it obtained the court order because of the uncertainty over the legality of surrogacy arrangements in Britain.

"The application to have the matter settled by a judge is seen as the father's natural step in his fight to prove he can give the baby a loving home," the paper said.

Miss Cowen said the ruling "means the jurisdiction and the decisions as regards the child's future will be made by the High Court, which has taken on the responsibility in this matter."

According to the Guardian newspaper, the court now will allow "interested parties, including the natural father," to apply for custody of the child.

"The anonymous American father has no rights over the child because she is illegitimate," the Guardian said. "But for the High Court the baby's interests must be paramount, and it might favor an application by him so long as it is not proposed to take the child out of the country."

The court action came as government officials considered ways to outlaw surrogate motherhood for pay, a practice that a Church of England leader compared to prostitution.

The Daily Star said the couple, reportedly wealthy Americans, paid Mrs. Cotton $7,475 to have a baby for them, and said Mrs. Cotton was artificially inseminated with the childless husband's sperm.

The tabloid says a British surrogacy agency arranged the birth.

The borough council Friday night obtained a lower court order a few hours after the birth, preventing the baby from being handed over.

While the legal storm swirls around her, the girl, dubbed "Baby Cotton" by nurses, has been kept at Victoria Maternity Hospital in Barnet.

Earlier Tuesday, Health Minister Kenneth Clarke said in a British Broadcasting Corp. radio interview that Cabinet ministers will discuss a timetable for legislation to outlaw commercial surrogacy.

But he added: "It may well be in this case that one has parents who want to give a perfectly sound loving home to this child and one of the parents is the natural father. My own personal reaction is that if this is the case, it is presumably best if, as quickly as possible, the child is united with the parents who want to offer her a loving home."

Commercial surrogacy has been widely condemned in Britain and, in the flood of news reports since Baby Cotton's birth, little has been heard from childless British couples seeking to employ it.

The Bishop of Birmingham, Hugh Montefiore, chairman of the Church of England's council for social responsibility, said Saturday that commercial surrogacy was "not wholly unlike prostitution."

Workmen delicately unearth bones and tusks from prehistoric mastodons at a building site in downtown Austin.

Austin mastodon find may be region's second largest

By RUTH RENDON
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — Bones of prehistoric mastodons uncovered at a construction site may be the second largest finding in North America, an expert said.

Ernest Lundelius, paleontologist with the University of Texas geology department, said Tuesday he was waiting for confirmation from the Smithsonian Institution that the site ranks second in quantity of remains to a mastodon site in Missouri.

The bones, teeth and tusks of mastodons, prehistoric elephant-like beasts, were found over the weekend in what may have been a watering hole more than 10,000 years ago.

The discovery was uncovered 17 feet below street level by a backhoe operator who noticed a flash of ivory in a mound of clay.

Lundelius said the bones were found in clay material which was probably the bottom of a pond on the old flood plain of the nearby Colorado River.

Therefore, "it is incumbent upon MISD to make every effort to obtain additional funding by 1985-86 to assure that everyone eligible will advance to Level II," he added.

Recognizing the problems incurred by the passage of House Bill 72, the committee submitted the following recommendations for consideration by school trustees in implementing Level II of the career ladder for 1984-85:

— Merit pay for personnel assigned to Level II of the career ladder be no less than $2,000.

— Three committees be formed to participate in the selection of personnel assigned to the various levels of the career ladder (one each for elementary, junior high and senior high schools; with one of the senior high committe members representing a freshman high school.

— A quota system be established with the Level II step awarded on a percentage basis. For example, if the total number of elementary personnel eligible for merit pay is 150 and the gross total of eligible candidates is 600, then those 150 persons or 25 percent of the total should be awarded a pay increase. The same formula for other groups also would be followed.

— The selection of recipients be completed as soon as possible.

— Level II pay increases be distributed as soon as possible.

— All non-administrative certified personnel that meet Level II criteria be considered for assignment to the career ladder including librarians, counselors and diagnosticians.

If approved, the recommendations may "become an incentive for competent teachers to improve their lot and stay in the classroom," said Brown.

The State Board of Education is expected to take final action regarding its interpretation of the system Saturday in Austin.

Ray said that would preserve the district's priority in obtaining water rights by allowing TWC to consider "the correct legal standard" for determining unappropriated water.

By putting the case's priority back to the time it was filed in February 1978 saves "a tremendous amount of time," said O.H. Ivie, executive director of CRMWD. "We retain our priority" over all cases filed after that date.

Today's opinion, which was signed by Kilgarlin, orders the remand while refusing to change the standard set in the November opinion.

In its November opinion, the court said that while DWR may not grant permits when its own records show no unappropriated water exists, the agency is empowered to cancel unused rights and could consider new permits after cancellations have made water available.

Ivie said the water commission will be giving serious consideration to the definition of "unappropriated water" and suggested the State Legislature may have to change the definition of "unappropriated surplus."

"If the water code continues to exist as it relates to appropriated and unappropriated water, the state can never develop its water resources to the maximum. There's 1.75 million acre feet of water flowing into the Gulf of Mexico from the Colorado River Basin so that says there is an ample supply of water in the Colorado River Basin."

David Reagan, first assistant city attorney for Midland, said he had not seen the new opinion and "we don't know exactly what is going on. But it seems like a favorable inroad for cities in West Texas."

Youngster only bruised in fall from truck under moving wheel

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 4-year-old child barely escaped serious injury Tuesday afternoon when he fell from and was run over by a truck driven by his mother.

Benjamin Wilson, 4, was treated and released from Medical Center Hospital after being run over by the rear wheel of the truck driven by his mother, 25-year-old Judith Wilson of Odessa.

According to police reports, the child was riding in the truck through the parking lot of the Winwood Mall about 4 p.m. Tuesday, when the passenger-side door opened and he fell to the pavement.

The rear wheel reportedly ran over his right leg. Ms. Wilson said this morning that her child had escaped the incident without any broken bones or tissue damage, but had suffered some severe bruises.

Ms. Wilson was driving her pick-up north through the parking lot of the shopping center at the intersection of 42nd Street and Grandview when the incident occurred, according to reports.

Father, son reunited after two years

SCITUATE, R.I. (AP) — A 13-year-old boy, allegedly abducted two years ago in California and sexually assaulted, hugged his father today in a tearful reunion after police traced him to Rhode Island.

"I always knew ...," said the father, Robert Smith Sr., his voice breaking off as he caressed the boy, who was delivered to state police headquarters here in a helicopter. The boy wept.

When asked what they planned to do now, the father, who had flown from California, said, "Get back to warm weather."

Meanwhile, authorities held without bail a man who had been a casual friend of the youngster in Long Beach, Calif., on charges of first-degree sexual assault and being a fugitive from justice.

David R. Collins, 56, was arrested Tuesday after a car registered under one of his many aliases and driven by another man crashed during a highway chase, police said. Authorities used a national crime computer to trace Collins to his present address in Providence, where they found him and the boy, said state police Capt. John T. Leyden.

In Long Beach, Doris Smith said she talked to her son Tuesday after police went to Collins' apartment and found him in good health.

Leyden identified the boy as Robert Smith, Jr.

"I think I was in shock when I heard it," she said. "When they said my son was there and did I want to talk to him, I said yes."

"He sounded scared. I started crying when I heard his voice," Mrs. Smith said. "And he started crying. He said he didn't want to be with him," a reference to his alleged abductor.

Mrs. Smith said her son, one of seven children, disappeared on April 10, 1983 after leaving the home of a friend with whom he had spent the night. The child, then 11, had occasionally done chores for a man who lived several blocks away, she said.

When she and her husband visited the man's home, they were told he had been seen leaving with a boy matching the description of her son, Mrs. Smith said.

"I'd had hopes," she said.

Cambodian guerrillas, Vietnamese troops clash near Ampil

ARANYAPRATHET, Thailand (AP) — Cambodian guerrillas and Vietnamese troops skirmished today outside Ampil, the resistance headquarters camp abandoned in the face of Vietnam's powerful assault, Red Cross and Thai military officials said.

Between the sporadic clashes along the Thai-Cambodia border, guerrillas of the Khmer People's National Liberation Front were regrouping in preparation for further combat, the Thai officers said.

Some 5,000 of the fighters were overpowered by an artillery and tank-powered Vietnamese attack launched Monday on Ampil, their headquarters in western Cambodia.

The resistance leaders decided to withdraw Tuesday in the hope of keeping their force intact to fight again. They abandoned the small portion of the camp they had held onto through two days of battle, and thousands of rebels scrambled aboard military trucks bearing Thai markings to be taken to undisclosed locations.

WORLD

At Ban Sangae, Thailand, across the border from Ampil, three Vietnamese officers and a Thai sergeant held a 30-minute parley today on a bridge.

Thai military sources said the conversation was in Cambodian. The Vietnamese said the eastern side of the tank ditch was Cambodia and the western side was Thailand.

"They said, in effect, 'You stay on your side and we'll stay on our side.' They also warned the Thais not to fire into Cambodia or risk retaliation," one reporter said.

Six of the eight Khmer People's National Liberation Front camps inside Cambodia have been overrun during the dry season offensive that Vietnamese forces began in mid-November.

The Sok Sann and Dong Ruk camps remain unscathed and some of the guerrillas from Ampil were believed headed for Dong Ruk. About 20,000 Cambodian civilians and 4,300 Vietnamese refugees are at Dong Ruk.

Pinochet avoids U.S. efforts to build democracy

An Analysis

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration's efforts to promote a democratic transition in Chile have failed partly because President Augusto Pinochet is convinced the CIA is plotting to oust his government, American officials say.

Pinochet's refusal to permit a democratic opening after 11 years of military rule has distressed the administration, and some officials believe the result will be a continuing increase in violence, possibly leading to "permanent destabilization."

However, the officials, who asked not to be identified, said they do not feel that a communist takeover is likely because Chile's Army remains a highly-disciplined, anti-Marxist force.

U.S. attempts at quietly encouraging an internal dialogue in Chile leading to a democratic transition have given way to a far more public posture since Pinochet imposed a state of siege on Nov. 6.

"Pinochet believes the CIA is out to overthrow him," one senior official said. "All actions by the United States are viewed by him with suspicion."

Asked about Pinochet's reported concerns, Deputy Assistant Secretary of State Lowell Kilday said Tuesday that American policy is to "encourage a transition to democracy in Chile in a way and at a pace that can be agreed to by Chileans themselves without in any way intervening in the political processes of the country."

But American influence is limited partly because Chile receives no U.S. economic or military assistance. The United States has, however, generally supported Chilean loan requests in international lending institutions.

Since the state of siege was declared, mass raids have been carried out on working class neighborhoods, hundreds of political activists have been sentenced to internal exile and press censorship has been strictly enforced.

'WHEN YOU'RE 17, YOU THINK YOU'RE GOING TO LIVE FOREVER!

"This term a very gifted student sat here. She knew Shakespeare, Shelley, Keats. And could she write. But the day before graduation she was in a car crash. They said if she'd been wearing a safety belt, she might have had a few bruises...not brain damage. Now she won't read or write or ever think again. When you're 17, you don't think about those things. You think you're going to live forever. She was 17."

'Loafers' gather at feed store to gossip, swap tall tales

AUBREY, Texas (AP) — Some of the regulars at Loafer's Hall chipped in last week to harvest the peanut crop for another old-timer who has been hospitalized.

But when they're not working, the men lounge on bags of feed and old metal chairs in the local landmark drinking coffee and telling tall tales. Unless, of course, someone mentions politics, farming or the weather.

That's the way it's been every morning at Seven Cedars Farm Supply, home of Loafers' Hall for as long as any of them can remember.

"I usually check by here every morning to see who's told the biggest lie," said J.W. "Skeet" Smotherman, who said he was born one mile north of town "under a persimmon tree" 77 years ago. "They're some of the damnedest liars you've ever seen. There's just about any of these boys will tell you a lie except me."

Regulars at what some of the men prefer to call the Liars' Corner include bricklayers, carpenters, farmers and ever a retired school superintendent.

"I imagine that two-thirds of the guys who come in here have known each other all their lives," said Kenneth Wilson, who was reared in Aubrey.

"The've got to come in here to have a place to talk and loaf," said H.D. Wilson, Kenneth's brother.

Talking, loafing and solving the world's problems are about all the men do during their hours at the hall.

"Everybody has to come up and catch up on everybody else every morning — find out what everybody did over the weekend," said Bobby Redfearn, a horseman who has been coming to Loafers' Hall "40 years — since I was 6."

It is the main gathering place in town when it's too cold or rainy. "There were 20-some in here the other morning when it rained," said Carrell Mohon. There's more people gathered right here than all the rest of the places put together. This is where we meet every morning."

"That's the craziest man I've ever seen right over there," Mohon said pointing to Vernon Kruger. "I want you to put that in the paper."

Kruger, the hall's comedian and politician, said he has frequented the store "ever since '22, when I was born. It was an old store then. Younger generations don't realize what this town used to look like in the '30s."

"This is the only place in town you're going to get any gossip," said Doyle Hood, a former Aubrey a school superintendent. "If you don't get it here, you're not going to get it. You can get a lot of information here, but you're crazy if you print it all."

Seven Cedars, the oldest feed store in the area, was built in 1912 and originally housed The Aubrey Argus newspaper, Smotherman said. "I used to help put her out," he said. "I turned the press."

The building, located at FM 428 and Main Street, also has been a service station, a grocery store and a cafe.

Some of the men said that in the 1950s the brick building held a gambling casino with two one-armed bandits.

Bob and Nita Foreman, Seven Cedars' owners since Sept. 1, open the store about 6 every morning except Sundays. The men begin drifting in about 7 and warm themsleves around the wood-burning stove until late morning.

"It's the atmosphere that attracts them," Foreman said. "We're going to keep it old-fashioned and setback."

John Wayne's horse pampered, adored at Texas ranch

MIDLOTHIAN, Texas (AP) — The retired horse of John Wayne lives a pampered life dining on imported alfalfa and basking in children's adoration.

Dollor, stabled in quarters about three times as large as thosd for eight other horses at the seven-acre ranch owned by Double D/D Western Wear, is a star.

"Dollor is a movie legend just as much as John Wayne was," said Debra Keffeler, who operates the ranch. "A cowboy is not a cowboy without his horse. They're both my heroes."

Women cry and children beg to touch Dollor during visits to cities, she said. The 1,600-pound horse is eweo amlowee to side on elevators.

And the animal was so beloved by "the Duke" that he named the horse and drew up exclusive movie rights barring anyone else from riding him. Dollor also could not be sold until after Wayne's death.

In the movie "The Shootist," the script was rewritten so Wayne could call the animal by name on screen, Mrs. Keffeler said. Wayne tells actor Ron Howard to take Dollor and "get him a double helpin' of oats" in the opening scenes of the popular film.

The chestnut quarter horse belonged to Dick Webb Movie Productions in his movie days. Webb kept the horse a year after Wayne's death.

Dollor was then sold to the International Rodeo Association, which sold him a few months later to Terry Busch of Iowa.

Mrs. Keffeler said that in the year Busch owned him, Dollor traveled 134,000 miles across the northern United States to appear in shows.

When Mrs. Keffeler said she first saw Dollor about a year ago during a western wear show at the Dallas Apparel Mart, "it was love at first sight."

Busch planned to either sell half his investment in the horse, or sell Dollor to a prospective buyer in Europe, she said.

"I thought Dollor should live in Texas in the open air like an animal and not be traipsed across the world like a freak in a side show," said Mrs. Keffeler.

Two North Dallas investors paid an undisclosed amount for Dollor, Mrs. Keffeler said. Purchasers David Pellham, president of Universal Investigations Inc. and owner of Double D/D Western Wear, and Phil Yarnell, a representative for Justin Boot Manufacturing Co., are avid Wayne fans, too, she said.

Many patients missing in French hospice fire

GRANDVILLIERS, France (AP) — A fire burned through a home for aged and bedridden patients today, causing the roof to collapse and killing at least eight people. A state prosecutor said another 25 elderly residents were missing.

By daybreak only eight bodies had been reported found, as firefighters from three towns gathered to search through the Hospice of Grandvilliers.

Nine hours after the fire broke out, prosecutor Antoine Quilichini, who was at the scene, said 26 people were unaccounted for. Local fire officials initially reported as many as 40 people missing. Firemen kept reporters from the premises and it was not immediately known if more bodies had been recovered.

A priest from a neighboring village said he had been told that some patients as old as 87 refused to leave their beds when the fire broke out."The second floor collapsed onto the first. It was terrible," said the priest, who asked that his name not be used.

'No clues' in kidnapping

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Police reported no new clues today in the kidnapping of an American priest or the shooting death of a French truce observer in Beirut.

South of the capital, the government tried to extend its authority to the countryside by deploying 200 policemen on a highway controlled by feuding militias.

The Rev. Lawrence Jenco, 50, a Roman Catholic priest from Joliet, Ill., was pulled from his chauffeur-driven car in the Moslem section of Beirut on Tuesday morning by at least six men with pistols and assault rifles. His Lebanese driver was beaten and left tied in the trunk of Jenco's Pontiac.

GIs hurt in copter crash

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Eight U.S. soldiers suffered minor injuries when two helicopters collided on the ground during a training exercise, military officials said today.

An announcement by the U.S. 2nd Infantry Division public affairs office said there were no serious injuries in the accident Tuesday night, but the two UH-60 "Blackhawk" helicopters sustained extensive damage.

The aircraft "collided while ground taxiing during a night training exercise" in the division headquarters area of Camp Casey north of Seoul, the statement said.

Other helicopters parked in the area were said to have been damaged slightly by flying debris, but their number and other details were not disclosed.

El Salvador gets gunship

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The Salvadoran air force has received the first of several heavily armed U.S. gunships that could have a significant impact in the war against leftist rebels, American officials say.

The first of the gunships, a C-47 mounted with three .50-caliber machine guns, went into action late Monday in a battle for control of hill country in the east-central province of San Vicente.

In other developments, police reported that unidentified gunmen on Tuesday killed the conservative mayor of Santa Elena, a small town surrounded by guerrilla camps in eastern El Salvador. Police said the motive for the killing of Domingo Aviles was unknown.

Bekaa base attacked

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli warplanes attacked a Palestinian guerrilla base in the Syrian-controlled Bekaa valley of eastern Lebanon today, the Israeli military command announced.

The announcement said that the planes scored accurate hits on a command post near the town of al-Marj, 25 miles east of Beirut near the front line between Israeli and Syrian forces.

According to the announcement, the base was used as a staging area for launching attacks against Israeli troops. An Israeli army spokesman said the command post belonged to the small, Syrian-backed Palestinian group known as the Popular Struggle Front.

Kinnock visits Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — British Labor Party leader Neil Kinnock said Tuesday the Reagan administration's "fundamental mistake" in Central America has been to view the region's problems in terms of East-West relations instead of in terms of economic development.

The United States could help bring about stability in the region by spending "a fraction" of its Central American military budget to promote prosperity and democracy, Kinnock said at a news conference.

Korean talks postponed

TOKYO (AP) — North Korea today postponed Red Cross talks between the two countries and threatened to put off economic discussions for the duration of a scheduled three-month military exercise involving U.S. and South Korean troops.

Soviets cut Afghanistan force, Jane's Weekly says

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer

LONDON — The Soviet Union has sent home about one-fourth of the 100,000 men it sent into Afghanistan five years ago and has changed its fighting tactics to avoid a Vietnam-style war, Jane's Defense Weekly reports.

But even so, the Soviet soldiers, including 52,000 combat troops, face "many more Afghan winters" fighting an estimated 90,000 Moslem guerrillas, and are turning to drugs and liquor to forget the rigors of battle, Mark L. Urban, a London-based specialist on Soviet affairs, wrote in an article published Tuesday.

He said Soviet operations have been hindered by the poorly trained conscripts, many of them Russians, who have replaced the mainly Asian troops sent into Afghanistan in 1979.

"Poor training and low morale among conscripts hinder the small-unit tactics that Soviet commanders know are essential for victory in guerrilla warfare," Urban wrote.

"Poor sanitation in their tented camps leads to a high incidence of hepatitis, typhoid and malaria." he added. "Many of the troops seek escape with marijuana and alcohol."

The Jane's tropp estimate was considerably lower than other totals published in the West in recent months.The U.S. Defense Department put Soviet strength in Afghanistan at more than 108,000 in its latest assessment of the Kremlin's military deployment.

The London-based International Institute for Strategic Studies estimated in in October that Soviet strength in Afghanistan was 115,000, including some 10,000 KGB and MVD security troops.

Urban said the Soviet force in Afghanistan now is smaller than the force of four army divisions, air units and missile battalions that swept across the border in December 1979. The Soviet force in Afghanistan was estimated at 100,000 in 1980.

According to Urban, there are now three Soviet infantry divisions in Afghanistan, fewer than half the seven divisions estimated by Western intelligence. An estimated 24,000 support troops or advisers back up combat troops who have been reorganized into integrated airborne-mechanized units, he said.

Urban's estimate of Soviet strength was published in the defense weekly produced by Jane's Publishing Co., which issues military yearbooks and reviews that are considered highly authoritative by the defense establishment.

Compared with the reported Soviet force reduction in Afghanistan, Urban noted that U.S. strength in Vietnam rose from 9,000 to 449,000 in the first five years of the American campaign there.

The reason for the Soviet troop reduction, Urban said, is that both forces and tactics have been adapted to fighting the guerrillas in the mountains, and a lot of hardware that proved unsuitable for that kind of combat was shipped home, along with the men needed to maintain and operate it.

Urban said this included surface-to-air missiles — brought in by the Soviets as a defense against possible Western retaliation for the Soviet action — and support units such as engineers and artillery that are of little use in mountain war.

"Unlike Western armies sucked into counterinsurgencies in the past, the Soviet politico-military leadership has resisted the temptation to escalate its presence," said Urban, who has interviewed Soviet defectors.

However, he said the Soviets call in reinforcements when needed from units based in the southern part of their country.

Hodel calls reports of switch speculation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Energy Secretary Donald Hodel, branding as "speculation" reports he is slated to be the next interior secretary, says President Reagan has not spoken to him about switching jobs.

Hodel also says proposals under discussion to merge the Energy and Interior departments don't have "any momentum presently."

"Speculation is a very popular game around here," Hodel said in an interview with The Associated Press late Tuesday night. "As far as I know, President Reagan has made no decision."

The Washington Post, quoting unnamed sources, reported in its Wednesday editions that Reagan has decided to nominate Hodel to replace Interior Secretary William P. Clark.

The Post said an announcement on Hodel's appointment is expected today. Administration sources, asking not to be identified, also indicated to the AP earlier Tuesday that reporters should expect an announcement today, saying that Hodel was the top choice for the Interior Department post but not the only one.

Hodel, however, dismissed the reports, which began a week ago when Clark made the surprise announcement that he will resign in two or three months.

"I've talked to people, and they say they know what's going on, but I find out that they don't," Hodel said. "The president has not talked to me, and I don't believe a decision is going to be made or announced until the president has talked with me."

He added that he expects it will be "a few days" before any decisions are made.

Certain officials in the White House used Clark's resignation to revive Reagan's 1980 campaign promise to abolish the Energy Department, a move that was overwhelmingly rejected by congressional leaders two years ago when the administration proposed merging it into the Commerce Department.

Administration sources, asking not to be identified, said Tuesday that White House Counselor Edwin Meese III is the primary advocate of utilizing Clark's departure to ask Congress to merge the Energy and Interior departments into a new Cabinet-level Department of Energy and Natural Resources.

Hodel confirmed that several reorganization ideas are being discussed but said none of the talks have taken place "in my presence."

"Many people are taking this opportunity to think about various proposals," he said. "But nobody has come up with a proposal that has gained any momentum presently. There has not been an organized assessment of the options."

GOP senators begin drafting budget plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly a month before President Reagan sends his budget to Congress, Senate Republicans are meeting to consider their own spending plan, including military reductions and Social Security savings the president has resisted.

Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., called a meeting today of Senate GOP leaders and committee chairmen to begin drafting a budget plan that would retain Reagan's goal of holding federal red ink to less than $100 billion by 1988.

Administration officials have acknowledged that the budget Reagan sends to Capitol Hill on Feb. 4 will not achieve that goal, although they emphasize it will meet his short-term goal of holding the deficit to about $170 billion next year. Administration projections show the deficit for the current fiscal year at about $218 billion.

Major Senate options under consideration are elimination of the Social Security cost-of-living increase for next year along with a virtual freeze on the Pentagon's spending authority at the current level.

In an interview Tuesday, Reagan made clear that he remains strongly opposed to any effort to clamp restraints on the Social Security increases. "You can't blame the deficit on Social Security," which currently is running a surplus, he said.

At the same time, Reagan declined to rule out flatly any moves involving Social Security, noting that "if Congress en masse came down on the side of, say, reducing or holding off on the COLA — cost-of-living increase — you know, what would I be able to do about that?"

In making the preliminary decisions on his new budget, Reagan has agreed to a broad plan to freeze, reduce or eliminate most other domestic spending programs. But the president also rejected proposals from his top advisers for deep reductions in the planned Pentagon buildup.

Under pressure from Democratic presidential nominee Walter F. Mondale, Reagan told campaign audiences last year that he would do nothing to reduce or change benefits for current Social Security recipients or future retirees.

But the White House sent out signals Tuesday that the president may be willing to back away from the campaign pledge and accept restraints on Social Security benefit increases as a way of reducing federal red ink.

White House officials still were insisting Tuesday that Reagan will not include any Social Security benefit changes in the budget he sends to Congress next month. But they were indicating that if Congress, particularly Democratic leaders, want to talk about them, the president might be willing to listen.

A statement distributed at the White House quoted a senior administration official as saying that "if the Democratic leadership and the leadership of both houses of Congress came forward with it, he'd (Reagan) at least have to look at it. But he's not going to propose it. And he's not going to push for it."

Conservatives' 'archenemy' out of White House

An Analysis

By TERENCE HUNT

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's approval of a surprise job swap by his staff chief and Treasury secretary removes an archenemy of hardline conservatives from the White House but probably does not signal a major change in development of administration policy.

Only 24 hours after the idea was first presented to him, Reagan announced Tuesday that Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan had worked out a deal with Chief of Staff James A. Baker III to change jobs.

The two officials, in conjunction with White House Deputy Chief of Staff Michael K. Deaver, had been engineering the switch secretly since before Christmas and took it to the president only after they had hatched all the details.

As much as anything, the behind-the-scenes planning and last-minute endorsement from the president underscored the image of Reagan as a chief executive who delegates extraordinary power to his subordinates and counts on them to develop a consensus requiring only his approval or disapproval.

In the eyes of conservatives, Baker was the leader of White House moderates, eager to negotiate compromises that diluted ideals espoused by the president.

His supporters prefer to view him as a pragmatist who would rather settle for what is possible than lose a battle standing on principle. Baker repeatedly joined forces with budget director David Stockman to try to sell Reagan on tax hikes and cuts in the defense budget.

Although Regan is not viewed as an insider by the far right, he has championed the president's conservative ideology in general and served as the chief defender of Reagan's tax and budget-cutting program, even under the heavy fire and doubts spawned by the deep recession in 1981-1982.

The question now is how Regan will run the White House and how much influence Baker will retain in his new job.

"Conservatives are encouraged by (Regan's) views on some economic issues, but he's not an ideologue," said former White House communications chief David Gergen. "On foreign policy issues, it's important to remember that his closest friend is George Shultz," who is regarded as a moderate.

Lyn Nofziger, former political director of the White House and a force in the conservative movement, said Regan may not be regarded as a sympathizer by the right wing but may serve as a closer ally than Baker did in the office so close to the president.

"While Don Regan is not looked upon as one of the right wingers, I think the conservatives will just be glad to see somebody that they didn't quite trust gone," Nofziger said. "I think they see here a new beginning."

Yet, some conservatives eyed the switch warily.

"It may be, on balance, a negative," said Richard Viguerie, publisher of the Conservative Digest.

Only a week earlier, though, Viguerie said the chief of staff's job was the most important post in the administration and that "conservatives have been holding their breath waiting for Jim Baker to leave." They had hoped he would be replaced by Interior Secretary William Clark, who has announced he is quitting.

Just a rerun?

Now comes word that the nuclear horror depicted in the ABC movie "The Day After" obviously not having been enough, Ted Turner's Atlanta-based "superstation" — WTBS — will broadcast a British version dubbed "Threads" this Sunday.

Okay. As we've said before, if there's a topic that's of concern to a lots people get it on the table, look at it, discuss it, relieve the fear that's associated with it and make it more understandable. Then it can be dealt with sanely from the vantage point of knowledge.

"Threads" was shown in Britain last fall and attracted a home viewing audience three times larger than usual. As was the case when "The Day After" was shown, the subject matter dictates parental discretion in permitting children to view the film. In fact some critics already have labeled "Threads" more horrific than "The Day Afer" which, in this day of blood-sloshing brutality in movies, should ensure lots of viewers.

The film traces the lives of two families over a 13-year period following a nuclear exchange between the United States and the Soviet Union. This time, though, the location is Sheffield in Central England, a target in a war that breaks out after the Soviets invade Iran. The aim of the film isn't to lay blame but supposedly to demonstrate the horror of war as it affects people.

After the blast that levels Sheffield, the film chronicles the hardships faced by survivors during the first year of painful struggle to carry on. It then looks at the next 12 years, the point being to show that the destruction wrought in an instant lingers for a generation.

On Monday the station will broadcast a one-hour documentary about nuclear winter entitled "On the 8th Day," with Carl Sagan as narrator. That documentary will be followed by a panel discussion featuring U.S. and Soviet nuclear experts. All three shows will be broadcast twice more before the end of January.

According to Mike Oglesby, WTBS public relations director, the package reflects the personal belief of Ted Turner that "we must start dealing with the problems of nuclear destruction now, before it is too late.

There's certainly no argument here with that logic. Better to watch movies about the anticipated horrors of nuclear warfare than to experience the horrors first-hand.

The only danger we can imagine in seeing too many movies about the horrors of nuclear warfare is the possibility that an overemphasis will make modern-day man oblivious to the real possibility for such a tragedy. That outcome must never be allowed because as easy as it is to watch a nuclear war on television, the outcome of a real nuclear exchange can't be ended by turning off the set.

The real thing won't be just a rerun.

Another View:
Mistaken identity

Given the alphabet soup of acronyms flooding the world today, confusion is bound to occur. Cases of mistaken identity can be costly, however, as UNICEF unfortunately is finding out. Many people seem to be confusing the United Nations Children's Fund with the U.N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization.

UNESCO has become an object of derision in conservative circles, prompting the Reagan administration to withdraw U.S. participation in it. Even those with more tolerance for international endeavors have found fault with the political posturing and ineptitude of UNESCO. UNICEF, on the other hand, is an entirely different story. President Reagan has praised its work and has increased the United States' financial contribution to it. The jobs it undertakes are worthwhile and effective.

In its efforts to reduce the death rate for the world's children, UNICEF has been able to save approximately 500,000 lives this past year through the promotion and distribution of an oral rehydration solution. It also has started a trend toward increasing the percentage of children who are immunized against common, potentially deadly diseases. And the organization is a strong supporter of the upsurge in breast feeding among mothers throughout the world. UNICEF is working the front lines in tending to the young victims of drought and famine in Africa.

Still, the agency received many notes this year from people explaining that they no longer could buy UNICEF Christmas cards because they "agreed with President Reagan's position" (an obvious reference to the wrong agency). And contributions to what may well be the most effective U.N. organization are down. The word needs to go forth in strong support of UNICEF and its work in helping the world's children.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Jan. 9, the ninth day of 1985. There are 356 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Jan. 9, 1793, what's generally considered the first successful balloon flight in the United States took place as Frenchman Jean Pierre Blanchard traveled between Philadelphia and Woodbury, N.J.

In 1942, the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff was created.

In 1945, American soldiers led by General Douglas MacArthur invaded Luzon in the Philippines during World War II.

In 1964, anti-U.S. rioting broke out in the Panama Canal Zone.

In 1968, "Surveyor Seven" made a soft landing on the moon, ending the American series of unmanned explorations of the lunar surface.

In 1972, reclusive billionaire Howard Hughes, speaking by telephone from the Bahamas to reporters in Hollywood, said a purported biography of him by Clifford Irving was a fake.

In 1981, U.S. Rep. Raymond F. Lederer, D-Pa., was convicted of bribery-conspiracy charges stemming from the FBI's "Abscam" investigation.

Ten years ago: The last legal links between the four former Beatles were dissolved at a private hearing in London before a high court judge.

Five years ago: Defense Secretary Harold Brown wrapped up a nine-day visit to China by reaffirming U.S. policy of not selling arms to Peking.

One year ago: Former EPA official Rita Lavelle was sentenced to six months in prison and a $10,000 fine for lying to Congress.

Today's birthdays: Feminist author Simone de Beauvoir is 77. Former President Richard M. Nixon is 72. Football hall-of-famer Bart Starr is 51. Actor Bob Denver is 50. Folk singer Joan Baez is 44. Actress Susannah York is 44. Singer Crystal Gayle is 34.

JACK ANDERSON
CIA stacking deck against man

WASHINGTON — Can someone who claims "the CIA made me do it" get a fair trial in a federal court? Or does the government's interest in protecting the CIA from embarrassment inevitably stack the deck against such a defendant?

Jack Anderson

Through years of overuse by busboys trying to impress their dates, the whispered words "I work undercover for the CIA" have become a hackneyed line. But to Ronald Ray Rewald, whose Honolulu investment firm was declared bankrupt in 1983 at an estimated cost of $11 million to hundreds of investors, the claim of a CIA connection is the very heart of his defense against 100 criminal counts of fraud and perjury.

Rewald insists that he set up and ran his investment company — Bishop, Baldwin, Rewald, Dillingham & Wong — as a front for CIA covert operations in the Far East, and that its operations were directed by agency headquarters in Langley, Va. His defense is that the CIA caused his company's financial troubles and is now letting him hang out to dry, disavowing any CIA responsibility.

My associates Indy Badhwar and Dale Van Atta have dug up evidence that Rewald's links to the spy agency were a lot more solid than the CIA is willing to admit.

Yet as I've reported, the judge in a civil suit against Rewald, Martin Pence, has kept defense attorneys from examining reams of the investment firm's documents, which they are confident would establish their client's CIA connections. And while expressing serious doubt about Rewald's claims of a close relationship with the CIA, Pence justified sealing the company documents on grounds of "national security."

Now the federal judge who will preside over Rewald's criminal trial, Harold Fong, is showing the same signs of cutting Rewald's defense off at the knees — and using the same innate contradiction to justify it.

The Alexandria defendant says he took orders from a CIA agent who was on the board of directors of BBRD&W, the Rewald firm.

This, according to Fong, creates a "conflict" for A. Brent Carruth, the lawyer Rewald wants to defend him. Carruth is widely recognized as one of the few attorneys with experience in trials conducted under the tricky requirements of the Classified Information Procedures Act.

In an affidavit, Carruth argued that both his clients depend on the "common defense" that "BBRD&W was a CIA company store ... established by the CIA, run by the CIA and now covered up by the CIA." Far from creating a conflict, Carruth wrote, his dual representation would benefit both clients.

Carruth says that the judge in the Alexandria case ordered the CIA to turn over to Carruth classified information that related to Rewald's investment firm. If Carruth is allowed to remain Rewald's lawyer, this information would obviously be available to Rewald. That's what bothers the prosecution, he wrote.

"The CIA desires to handpick the Rewald defense attorney," Carruth charged, by disqualifying the defendant's choices "until magically their chosen successor takes the assignment," The "conflict" argument, he wrote, "is raised as a smokescreen ... to catch an ill-informed judge."

If anyone has a conflict of interest, Carruth argued, it's the government, which has brought in as a prosecutor Maj. John Peyton, former chief of litigation for the CIA. He will not only help to prosecute Rewald, but will be a witness in the Alexandria case, testifying about Rewald's investment firm. The presence of a CIA attorney on the prosecution team, Carruth argued, is "a classic conflict of interest" for the government.

ART BUCHWALD
Vigilantes can make mistakes!

After noting the positive reaction of citizens to the shooting of four thugs by a vigilante in the New York City subway a bunch of us in Washington decided to form our own vigilante organization to see that justice was served in the nation's capital.

Art Buchwald

There are tough gun laws in the District of Columbia so we drove over to Virginia where you can buy anything you want, from a .22 Saturday night special snub-nosed revolver to a Uzi semiautomatic machine gun.

I chose a .38 Smith & Wesson because it fits snugly under my coat and reminds me of the old westerns when the good guys constantly drove the bad guys out of town.

Our vigilante group didn't have long to wait. Schneider had been mugged the night before and he said he could identify the guys who did it. We went with him to a Georgetown bar and he pointed them out to us.

"Are you sure they're the ones?" I asked him.

"Of course I'm sure," he said. "The big guy is wearing a raincoat just like the one I owned."

That was good enough for us. So we took the three men out of the bar and shot them.

The police were furious that we had done their jobs for them. But the public was delighted and we became folk heroes overnight.

The next time we went out was when a 7-Eleven in the neighborhood was held up.

The clerk in the store said the stickup man wore a Halloween mask, but he had a hunch it was a taxi driver who lived down the street.

We routed the cabbie out of bed and brought him down for identification. The clerk said, "It could be him."

"Wait a minute," Pester said. "We have to be certain because as vigilantes we don't want to hurt an innocent man. You said the guy was wearing a Halloween mask. What kind of mask was it?"

"It was a Darth Vader mask."

We sent Pittman to get a mask at the costume shop. Then we put it on the cab driver.

The clerk said excitedly, "That's the guy."

"You're sure?"

The clerk replied, "I never forget a face."

So we took the cabbie out in the alley and broke his legs.

After that we were dubbed "The Magnificent 7-Eleven" and more people were rooting for us than they were the Redskins.

The liberal press wrote bleeding heart editorials accusing us of being nothing more than hooligans, and the mayor went on television to condemn us. It didn't matter, because the criminals were now more afraid of us than they were of the police.

Christmas night Alvin told us, "I just got a tip that there are a bunch of drug dealers holed up in a house in Northwest Washington. Let's burn it down to teach all the drug dealers in town a lesson."

We hopped in our van with 10 gallons of gasoline and drove to the address the tipster gave Alvin. We threw the liquid all over the house and set it on fire. A father and mother and three children came pouring out of the front door. The father screamed, "What the hell are you doing?"

"Teaching you drug dealers a lesson."

"I'm not a drug dealer! I'm a postman."

"Is this your address?" Alvin asked, showing him the one the tipster had written down.

The postman looked at it and said, "No you dumb SOB's. That's in Southwest Washington, not Northwest. You guys burned down the wrong house!"

"Don't get all shook up, pal," I said. "Even vigilantes make a mistake once in a while."

Safety groups say motorists left with 'eggshell protection'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Safety groups and insurance companies say a court decision upholding the Reagan administration's relaxation of automobile bumper standards spells a major defeat for consumers and leaves motorists with "eggshell protection."

A federal appeals court on Tuesday upheld a decision by the Transportation Department nearly three years ago to scrap a federal requirement that all cars have bumpers that protect the vehicle from damage in crashes up to 5 mph. The requirement was cut to 2½ mph.

The department's National Highway Traffic Safety Administration concluded that the stronger bumpers are not cost effective because they increase the price of cars and make them slightly less fuel efficient because of added weight.

The insurance industry strongly criticized the rule change and since has argued repeatedly that the weaker bumpers result in sharply higher repair costs and higher frequencies of claims.

But in a 2-1 decision the U.S. Court of Appeals sided with the highway safety agency.

Judge Antonin Scalia in a majority opinion said the government had not acted "arbitrarily and capriciously" and reached its decision "through a methodology that was sensible" while listening to all sides in the dispute.

"No more is necessasry to survive our review," Scalia wrote.

But Judge J. Skelly Wright, in a dissent, called the court's decision "an unacceptable retreat from our judicial responsibility" and said NHTSA in its easing of the bumper standard "moved into the field of unreasoned ratification of preordained conclusions."

Clarence Ditlow of the Center for Auto Safety, a consumer group that challenged the new regulations, called the decision "a major defeat for consumers." He said the safety group may ask the full 11-member court to rehear the case.

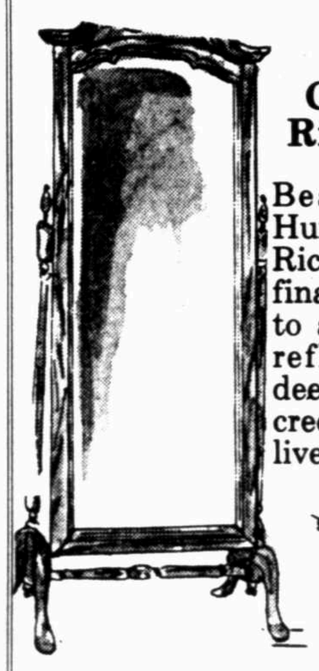

James F. Fitzpatrick, counsel for State Farm Insurance Co., which joined the Center in its suit opposing the the rule, called on Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole "to consider current evidence that the 2.5 mph bumpers are a consumer disaster" that "leaves the average motorist with eggshell protection in the front and rear of the car."

Ironically, virtually all of the automakers are continuing to use the stronger 5 mph bumpers in at least some of their 1985 models. Auto industry sources suggested more than half of the models have the stronger bumpers despite the lower federal requirements.

The agency calculated that the average motorist would pay only $65 more in added repair and insurance costs over the life of a car, but save $93 in gasoline because of less weight.

Actors Equity may sponsor protest if non-union performers aren't paid

NEW YORK (AP) — Actors Equity says it will finance an Inauguration Day demonstration in Washington if President Reagan does not intercede in a decision to use 200 non-union performers without pay at the celebration.

Advertisements published under the seal of the 50th American Presidential Inaugural said the inaugural committee was seeking 200 "clean-cut, all-American types" and that union members would not be considered.

A spokesman for the committee, John Buckley, said its $12 million budget was not sufficient to pay the performers.

In Washington Tuesday, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan, a former Screen Actors Guild president, "certainly supports the union" and had been unaware of the committee's call for singers and dancers to perform for free Jan. 19-21.

But Ronald Walker, a White House staff member who chairs the inaugural committee, called the leaders of three performing arts unions Tuesday afternoon to say the committee stood by its decision, the Equity and SAG chiefs said.

Alan Eisenberg, Equity's executive secretary, said the union's board gave the go-ahead Tuesday for demonstrations in Washington before and on Inauguration Day if Reagan does not intercede.

Equity and SAG said they wouldn't insist the White House replace any amateur performers already hired, but that it should at least pay them the U.S. minimum wage of $3.35 an hour.

"The president certainly has the power to overrule his subordinates," Eisenberg said. "We urge that he do so."

The committee is paying union scale to Frank Sinatra, James Stewart, Elizabeth Taylor and Diana Ross, as their contracts with entertainment unions require.

"I don't doubt that President Reagan wasn't aware of this," said actor Ed Asner, the current SAG president. "But I think it's scandalous that representatives of his would act with such stupidity and callousness.

"And since the buck stops at the White House, it's up to him to do something about it."

The American Federation of Television and Radio Performers announced Tuesday it had dropped plans to file an unfair labor practice suit against the White House because ABC-TV had agreed to keep all non-union singers and dancers off its exclusive broadcast of the inaugural gala.

AFTRA has issued a waiver to allow the televised appearance of the U.S. Naval Academy choir, said Sanford Wolff, the union's executive secretary.

Septuagenarians to pick coffee in Nicaragua

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — A labor shortage in the Nicaraguan coffee fields is attracting American volunteers, including a group of septuagenarians, to the annual harvest.

"It's a day's work, six hours in the fields. It's warm and takes a little bit of energy, but we're not there to set a record," said Sarah Crome, 73, one of 16 San Francisco Bay area senior citizens who left Tuesday for Nicaragua.

They make up one of seven brigades going to Nicaragua from the United States to help with the harvest, according to Sara Miles, a coordinator for the New York-based group Nicaragua Exchange. About 650 people, mostly Americans, helped out last year on the coffee harvest.

Isadore Salkind, a retired professor from the University of San Francisco, said he and his wife, both 70, see themselves as peace envoys taking the place of students who usually help pick coffee, one of Nicaragua's main crops.

"We're middle class types, used to work but not used to this type of physical work," he said. "What we're attempting to do is make up for the lack of people to pick the coffee."

Salkind called the trip "a chance to let the people of Nicaragua know that I believe our government's policy for their country is a lie and a hoax."

"We're older people who want to make a contribution, and express friendship and a desire for peace," said Ms. Crome, who worked last year's harvest and who organized this year's trip.

Ms. Miles said the labor shortage occurred because high school students who usually volunteer to work on the harvest were recruited by the Nicaraguan government for defense work in the wake of U.S. military exercises in Honduras.

Ms. Miles said a medical volunteer will work with the senior citizens' group. "We don't want them knocking themselves out keeping up with 17-year-olds," she said.

Soviet satellite helps locate wrecked plane

FURNACE CREEK, Calif. (AP) — An orbiting Soviet satellite is credited with helping to locate the wreckage of a single-engine plane in which four people were killed.

The Beechcraft Bonanza was discovered Tuesday in the mountains of Death Valley where it crashed Monday during a snowstorm. Killed were pilot Chuck Downs of Norco, Calif., and passengers Edith, Wes and Dorothy Menke.

The wreckage was found by a Civil Air Patrol plane which tracked an emergency locator transmitter signal initially received by the Soviet Cospas 3 satellite.

"The satellite's up there with a black box on it," said Air Force Lt. Col. Frank Gerken. "It receives a signal, it sends it right back," he said in a telephone interview from Scott Air Force Base, Ill. "...It immediately retransmits the same signal."

Illinois 'buckles up'

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Illinois has become the third state to require motorists to wear seat belts, but Gov. James R. Thompson says the new law won't be strictly enforced because it's designed to nudge people into buckling up.

"We expect this bill to be self-enforcing. Because if people think about it, they'll buckle up," Thompson said in signing the law Tuesday at Fairview Elementary School.

Newton has time to appeal

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Former Black Panther leader Huey Newton has been given 30 days to appeal a federal judge's rejection of his bid to avoid a two-year prison term for possessing a gun while an ex-felon in 1974.

U.S. District Judge Robert Aguilar on Tuesday rejected Newton's contention that he did not know he was a felon in 1974, when Oakland tailor Preston Collins was allegedly pistol-whipped at Newton's apartment.

Syracuse rallies to beat Boston College

College Basketball

Recognition hasn't been much of a blessing for Boston College's basketball Eagles.

Thanks to the attention lavished on Doug Flutie and rest of BC's football team, the basketball players labored in glorious anonymity while winning 10 straight games. Only when the Eagles lost for the first time — an 82-80 overtime decision to No. 1 Georgetown last Saturday — did Boston College gain a spot in the national rankings.

BC's first outing as a ranked club proved just as disappointing when No. 7 Syracuse rallied for a 64-58 victory Tuesday night.

"I feel frustrated, rather than down," said Boston College Coach Gary Williams. "It's not like I'm down from losing. We were just so close and didn't get it."

BC led 43-34 in the second half but Syracuse went on a 10-2 run featuring three baskets by Dwayne Washington to bring the Orangemen back.

In other games involving ranked clubs, Patrick Ewing hit 15 of 17 shots from the field in a 33-point performance to pace Georgetown to a 90-70 romp over Seton Hall and Clemson's Vincent Hamilton scored 27 points to pace the Tigers to a 90-81 victory over No. 9 Georgia Tech.

Wendell Alexis hit a pair of free throws to pull Syracuse into a 50-50 tie with Boston College, and the Orangemen took the lead for good at 58-56 on two free throws by Derek Brower in the last minute.

"It's tough going through the strength of the schedule — we've hit the No. 1 and No. 7 teams inside of four days — and not coming away with anything," said Williams.

Washington and Rafael Addison each scored 20 points to pace Syracuse, 9-1, while BC got 13 points apiece from Trevor Gordon and Roger McCready. Syracuse is 1-1 in the Big East Conference while BC slipped to 1-2 in the league that includes four members in the Top 20.

Georgetown, 14-0 overall and 3-0 in the Big East, rolled to a 40-26 halftime edge over Seton Hall and turned the game into a rout with a 14-6 spurt opening the second half.

Ewing enjoyed the third 30-point game of his career at the expense of 6-foot-5 Ricky Burton, a reserve pressed into action because of a shoulder injury suffered by starting center Mark Bryant.

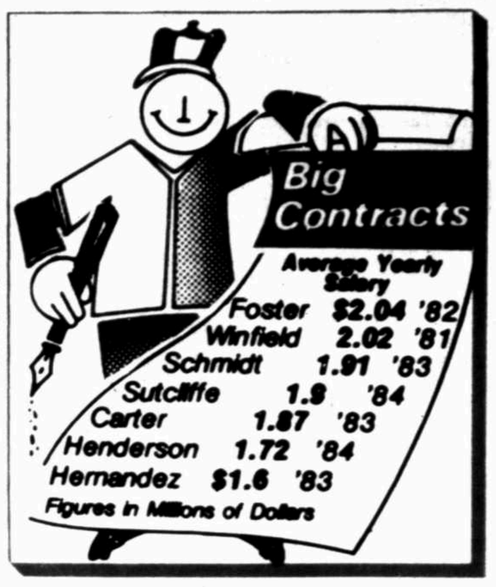

"The first couple of plays he had two dunks and a layup and I said, "Uh, oh, it's going to be a long night,' " said Bryant, whose club is 9-5 overall but winless in three Big East starts.

Georgia Tech, 10-3, was condemned to its second loss in three Atlantic Coast Conference starts when the Yellow Jackets couldn't find a way to stop the hot-shooting Hamilton. Clemson's bomber hit 12 of 16 shots from the floor, many from the 20-foot range.

"We hit some amazing shots, but I thought we shot really well," said Clemson Coach Cliff Ellis. "We played aggressive from the tipoff. We're not a good basketball team if we play cautious."

Clemson, 9-2 overall and 1-0 in the ACC, took a 31-28 lead on Raymond Jones' three-point basket with 4:12 left in the first half and didn't look back. The Tigers led 43-36 at the half and scored the first seven points after intermission.

Misses at line costly to Rebs

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

ODESSA — When a team goes for a ball control, time consuming offense in the fourth quarter, two things are almost mandatory: Take a shot and it better be high percentage and hit you're free throws when fouled.

Midland Lee was able to hit the high percentage field goal attempts against Odessa Permian Tuesday night, but couldn't hit the free throws, missing three one-and-one and one three-point attempt to allow the Panthers to stage a rally and take a 56-55 District 4-5A victory here at Permian Gym.

With 4:59 remaining in the fourth quarter, Lee hot shooter Brian Marczynski went cold at the line, missing the first of two one-and-one situations. Marczynski, who helped offset his foul shooting with three key buckets down the stretch in a 22-point performance, also failed to hit the free throw after being fouled on a two-pointer.

Teammate Tyrone Thurman also missed the lead shot on a one-and-one. Total cost: Seven potential points that could have won the game.

"We missed too many free throws down the stretch," said Rebel coach Paul Stueckler. "In most close games between two good teams, the guy who hits the free throws usually wins."

"They missed that many?," asked Permian coach Charles Pattillo. "That evened us up then because we dumbed it around at the start of the third quarter and that cost us seven points on bad shots and throwing the ball away."

During that same 4:59 stretch , Permian went to the foul line four times and came away with six points. Terry Williams, Permian's top scorer with 16, was 4-for-4 while Orlando Ontiveroz went 2-for-2.

DESPITE TROUBLE at the line, Lee was able to keep Permian out of the lead most of the final quarter, but the Panthers kept whittling at the deficit. With 1:25 left to play, Williams intercepted an errant Thurman pass and took it to the bucket uncontested to turn the game into a one-point affair, 53-52.

A minute later, nine seconds after Marczynski missed his second one-and-one, Panther Tony Lewis put up a 20-footer that hit nothing but net, giving Permian the lead for the first time since the fourth quarter tipoff, 54-53.

As Lee was bringing the ball down court to set up a hoped-for last shot of the game, Williams stole the ball from Anthony Dickens who immediately fouled to stop the clock. Williams hit both free throws to increase the margin to a comfortable three with 12 seconds remaining.

It took Lee eight seconds to score on a Marczynski eight-footer and the Rebels immediately called time out. Three seconds after Permian's inbounds play, Lewis stepped on the out-of-bounds line giving Lee one tick of the clock for a miracle finish.

Derek Westbrook found Raymond Morney on Lee's in-bounds attempt and Morney went up for the shot but couldn't beat the buzzer. No matter, his shot would have been blocked.

AFTER THE game, Stueckler said "we didn't shoot very well and they were a little quicker than I thought they'd be. We also had more trouble with their press than I expected. The last time I saw Permian play, number 20 (Lewis) wasn't a starter and he adds a little quickness to the team."

Lewis also added 10 points to Permian's total, one of four Panthers to break into double figures. Jimmy Davis was good for another 12 and Ontiveroz scored 10.

"It's been that way most of the year," said Pattillo about the balanced scoring attack. "We have four people averaging in double figures and several people coming off the bench playing well for us.

Both Stueckler and Pattillo thought Davis was a key player in the game for Permian as six of his 12 points came from offensive rebounds, two on a five-foot jumper inside and four from 12-feet or longer.

"He's been doing that a lot recently," said Pattillo of Davis' offensive board play. "He's only a junior and he's been playing a whole lot better inside."

REBEL NOTES: The loss, combined with San Angelo's 85-80 victory over Abilene High and Midland High's 75-63 win over Odessa High, puts Lee in a five-way tie for 4-5A first place at 2-1. Permian, MHS, AHS and San Angelo are also 2-1. Overall, Lee is 15-5 on the year...

In junior varsity action, Midland Lee pulled out a 44-40 victory over Permian. Marcus Miller led the Rebels with 12 points...

Dogs bounce back, 75-63

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Rags to riches stories come in almost daily in the world of District 4-5A basketball and that's good news for the Midland High Bulldogs, who defeated Odessa High's Bronchos 75-63 at Chaparral Center Tuesday night to climb from the outhouse to the penthouse in the course of one victory.

When the 4-5A smoke had cleared Tuesday, no less than five league teams owned 2-1 marks to create a logjam at the top of the standings. Both Midland Lee and Abilene High, undefeated heading into Tuesday's play, lost on the road.

So, success is measured only daily in this league. Over the weekend, it was the Purple Pack which was feeling the sting of criticism after a 21-point loss to Abilene High.

AND TUESDAY'S victory over the Bronchos was almost as misleading, according to Bulldog coach Jack Stephenson.

"It's never as easy as it looks in this league," noted Stephenson. "People were saying we were blown out against Abilene High and it's not true. We had a six-point lead just before the half, but Matt Sears and Roger Henderson fouled out and we made the trip without Anthony Deande and Tim Hickey, so we were without any guards. That was it, but we are as good as Abilene High and can play with them.

"Then you look at tonight and the score looks easy, but Odessa High played a fine game against us. That score is misleading too."

And it's true. MHS didn't take control of this one until late in the third period with a 10-point spurt that went unanswered by 1-2 OHS for a 56-47 lead with 2:38 left in the period.

OHS came out gunning, hitting nine of 16 shots in the first quarter to take a 21-18 lead, leading by as many as five points in the period.

"Coach (Keith) Thompson has his kids well prepared for us," said Stephenson. "They run the zone trap as well as any team we've faced this year. I didn't think they could shoot from the outside and we didn't put any pressure on them out there and they just double-clutched in a bunch of outside shots on us. We put more pressure on the outside in the second half and they didn't shoot a very good percentage after that."

MHS CENTER Darrell Davis, who scored 70 points in his first two district games, broke the 100-point barrier with 30 against the Bronchos, hitting 20 in the first half. But the 'Dogs didn't shake the Bronchos until the third period when Gil Brassard scored eight of his 13 and Matt Sears six of his 10 in the push toward a 2-1 loop record.

"I thought our kids played well for three quarters, but we got in foul trouble and had to back off of the press. Then Midland hits a couple of quick baskets and that's it," said Thompson. "I guess we'll get another shot at them down the road."

Elvin Mackey was the only other Bulldog in double figures with 14, six coming in the second period. Davis had 12 of his 30 points in the second period and led a 10-2 spurt that brought the Bulldogs from a five-point defecit to a five-point lead.

Hogey doesn't want to leave

DALLAS (AP) — After a talk with head coach Tom Landry, Dallas Cowboys quarterback Gary Hogeboom said he wants to remain with the club even if it means competing with Danny White for the starting job again as in 1984.

On several occasions last year, Hogeboom had said he wanted to be traded if the Cowboys weren't going to give him the first-team role.

Landry had also indicated that, rather than continue the quarterback controversy, he would attempt to deal either White or Hogeboom during the off season. But several days ago, Landry said he planned to sit down with both of his quarterbacks and hadn't decided whether to trade either or, if so, which one.

"We had a real good talk," Hogeboom told the Dallas Morning News Tuesday.

Hogeboom said the coach told him that everything depends on what happens in the off-season.

"He said Danny and I both could be here," Hogeboom said. "If that happens, we will just have to fight for the job."

Landry said he met with Hogeboom for 15 minutes Monday. He said he wants to meet with White, too, before he leaves next week for his Super Bowl assignment with ABC.

"At this point, I don't have any intention of trading either one," Landry said. "But I can't say I won't. If I can help the team enough, I would trade most anybody."

Court weighs stadium lease

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A three-judge appeals court is weighing the legality of a lease the San Antonio Gunslingers has on a local school district's stadium.

The San Antonio School District, along with the River Road Neighborhood Association and the city of San Antonio have gone to court to try to throw out the lease on Alamo Stadium.

The United States Football League team signed a lease to use the stadium May 31, 1983. Since then, the neighborhood association, the city and the school board has been fighting to nullify the lease.

A judge last year, after a two-week trial, ruled the lease valid. But its opponents have appealed that ruling. A hearing before the Fourth Court of Appeals Tuesday was on that hearing.

Gunslingers owner Clinton Manges, in comments after the hearing, said, "When you make a contract, you should try to live up to it."

The school district, Manges said, "hasn't been out one penny. They've got the finest turf, the finest lighting system. We've probably saved them a few hundred thousand on maintenance.

Ho, Ho, here come Cavaliers?

Associated Press

The Cleveland Cavaliers might not be quite the pushovers everyone thought they were.

The Cavs, after a 2-19 start in this season, have won seven of their last 11 games, including a 107-101 decision Tuesday over the New Jersey Nets.

"I think we're playing real hard," Coach George Karl said. "We can make changes in the game defensively better than we had been."

One of the changes Karl has made is to bring veteran guard World B. Free off the bench. In the latest victory, Cleveland's third straight, that strategy paid off as Free scored 27 points, including three three-point goals that helped defuse a Nets rally.

Free had 10 points in the last 3:20 of the third quarter after New Jersey had cut a 12-point halftime deficit to 60-58 by holding Cleveland without a field goal for nearly six minutes. Then he hit his third three-pointer early in the fourth period to put the Cavaliers ahead 84-66.

"I think I gave them some spectacular shots," Free said. "I didn't even think some of them were going in."

Free said he has started to adjust to his role off the bench now that the Cavaliers are winning.

The Nets, who got 29 points from Micheal Ray Richardson and 20 each from Otis Birdsong and Albert King, hit only 39 percent of their field goal attempts.

But Nets Coach Stan Albeck said, "Give Cleveland credit. They put us in a hole early and when we would get close they would push it down and get a couple of big buckets."

Nuggets 126, Lakers 124

Denver ended Los Angeles' nine-game winning streak behind Alex English's 41 points and 11 rebounds.

English scored 11 points in the fourth period to help the Nuggets offset the performance of Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who led the Lakers with 35 points, 12 rebounds and six blocked shots.

Denver outscored Los Angeles 41-25 in the second quarter to lead by 11 points at halftime. The Lakers rallied in the second half, but could get no closer than two points.

Spurs 139, Warriors 94

Johnny Moore had 26 points, 13 assists, 11 rebounds and nine steals against Golden State to pace San Antonio to its largest victory margin ever.

Artis Gilmore added 23 points, Alvin Robertson 21 and George Gervin 20 for the Spurs, who led 39-20 after the first quarter with the help of 10-0 and 9-0 streaks.

The Spurs' previous record margin was a 153-111 triumph over Milwaukee in 1978.

Bullets 99, Bucks 95

Washington needed final-minute baskets from Gus Williams and Greg Ballard to keep Milwaukee from erasing a 17-point deficit down the stretch.

The Bullets led 89-72 with 5:34 remaining, but the Bucks got eight points from Paul Pressey during a 19-4 spurt that trimmed Washington's edge to 93-91 with 1:08 left.

Ballard led the Bullets with 20 points, while Sidney Moncrief had 34 for Milwaukee.

Rockets 112, Kings 110

First-place Houston stayed a game ahead of Denver in the Midwest Division as Akeem Olajuwon scored 24 points, five of them in the final minutes.

Olajuwon hit two field goals and a free throw, then made a steal that led to a basket by Robert Reid as the Rockets pulled away from a 108-108 tie to a 112-107 Houston lead.

Larry Drew hit a three-point shot to cut Kansas City's deficit to two and he sank another as time ran out, but an official ruled he stepped out of bounds as he shot.

Mavericks 108, Blazers 102

Dale Ellis and Rolando Blackman led a 17-2 fourth-quarter spurt that lifted Dallas over Portland.

The Trail Blazers fought back from a 17-point deficit to tie the game at 76-76 before the Mavericks started their decisive run. Ellis scored 10 of his 20 points and Blackman 11 of his 16 in the final period.

Jim Paxson had 29 points and Clyde Drexler 25 for Portland, while Mark Aguirre led the Mavericks with 27.

Cager admits to 'tape' theft

From Wire Reports

BASKETBALL— North Carolina State center Chris Washburn admitted to police he transported stolen stereo equipment, according to a tape recording played in Wake County District Court. In a 20-minute tape played for a packed courtroom, Washburn told Raleigh police officer D.A. Weigarten he took the stereo equipment to Durham. Weigarten testified during today's probable cause hearing that the tape was made the day after the Dec. 21 breakin. Washburn was charged Dec. 21 with second-degree burglary after a warrant alleged that the Hickory native tried to steal a stereo from another athlete's room in the College Inn, the school's athletic dormitory...

Kern originally was signed by the Brewers last August after he had spent part of the year with the Chicago White Sox and Philadelphia Phillies. He was officially assigned to the Brewers' Triple-a farm club in Vancouver...

The bid by Gaylord Broadcasting to purchase a minority interest in the Texas Rangers failed to win three-quarters approval from American League owners Tuesday and was rejected. The owners, meanwhile, delayed a decision on the bid by Marge Schott to purchase controlling interest in the Cincinnati Reds. The Gaylord proposal would have given minority stock interest in the club and TV rights to the broadcasting company...

FOOTBALL—Miami owner Joe Robbie gave the go-ahead for construction of a 73,000 seat stadium for his Dolphins. "We will expect to break ground in May or June." The multipurpose stadium is to be built next to Calder Race Track near the Dade and Broward county lines and should be completed for the 1987 season. The team has leased 80 skyboxes and more than 2,700 club seats on the loge level at the new stadium even prior to construction, which guarantees approximately the $6.5 million in annual revenue needed to retire the construction debt...

Don Carthel, UTEP assistant, is new coach at Eastern New Mexico, succeeding Bill Kelly, who resigned to take the head coaching position at West Texas State. Carthel is a graduate of ENMU and played for the Greyhounds under former Coach Jack Scott. Carthel started as a center at ENMU for 33 games...

HORSE RACING— Chris McCarron nipped Angel Cordero Jr. for the 1984 money-winning title among the nation's jockeys, according to unofficial Daily Racing Form figures. McCarron's mounts finished with $12,045,813 in earnings. That is $84,000 more than Cordero's figures, although $38,000 of McCarron's total is pending the outcome of an appeal of a disqualification rule...

SKIING— Switzerland's Thomas Buergler posted his first World Cup victory Tuesday, edging favored Marc Girardelli of Luxenbourg by 0.11 seconds in a giant slalom race at Schladming, Austria. Girardelli clocked a total time of 2 minutes, 36.65 seconds, compared to Buergler's 2:36.76...

USFL may invade college TV time

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new broadcasting frontier is open for the fledging United States Football League: pro football Saturdays.

That was the essence of a decision Tuesday by the Justice Department not to challenge network telecasts of USFL games on Saturday afternoons, which are traditionally reserved for college contests.

"We felt we couldn't continue negotiations (with a network) unless it was clear they wouldn't challenge," a USFL spokesman said after the Justice Department decision.

The USFL plans to televise games on Saturdays when it switches to a fall schedule next year.

The USFL, in a letter from Commissioner Chet Simmons, had asked the Justice Department last November if a prospective network contract for Saturday games would be challenged under the antitrust laws. The current statutory antitrust exemptions for broadcast deals with professional football do not apply to Saturday contests during the college season.

USFL publicity director Jim Byrne said the league made the inquiry as part of its negotiations for a network television contract for the fall schedule.

J. Paul McGrath, assistant attorney general in charge of the antitrust division, said that under the terms outlined by Simmons, the government "has no present intention to institute enforcement proceedings challenging" the proposed broadcasts.

49ers, Dolphins TV natural brings sigh of relief

Whew!

That must be the standard reaction of a whole host of interested parties, now that the Super Bowl participants will include the 49ers and Dolphins.

That sound you heard in New York was Roone Arledge and the ABC executives popping champagne corks and lighting up the switchboards of Madison Avenue.

A lot of people stopped sweating – ticket scalpers, souvenir peddlers, hoteliers, advertisers and, yes, maybe, even fans.

THE ANTI-history folks may be gnashing their teeth, the ones who like sad endings in movies, or films where the ugly guy gets the girl and Robert Redford is sent packing, the ones who like to go to fancy dress balls in pickup trucks, or who didn't mind it when they got to the opera and the understudy was going to sing instead of Caruso.

There probably are people who would like to see the Indianapolis 500 won, or at least run, by a collection of stock Edsels, or who wouldn't mind if the Kentucky Derby had a field of burros.

Some people love it when an unknown wins the U.S. Open and they get ecstatic when it happens every year.

BUT, THE trouble with sports is not that you don't get enough palookas, it's that you don't get these classic matchups often enough. I mean, suppose Jack Sharkey had beaten Jack Dempsey in their fight in July, 1927, and we had never had the Dempsey-Tunney rematch in September? What if there never had been a Long Count? What are we supposed to write about then? Would anyone care if Tunney had gotten 14 seconds against Sharkey?

What if the Washington Senators had won the American League pennant in 1932 and played the Cubs in the World Series, instead of the Yankees? Who would we have had calling his shot – Heinie Manush? Ever stop to think of the damage to sports mythology if Babe Ruth never got into that World Series? What if the Four Horsemen hadn't beaten Army that day?

What if the Cardinals and Grover Cleveland Alexander had never made the 1926 World Series? Would there have been anyone to come out of the bullpen with a hangover to strike out Tony Lazzeri with the bases loaded?

SUPPOSING the Oakland Raiders had beaten Joe Namath and the New York Jets in the AFL title game in 1968. We never would have had the watershed Super Bowl game in which Namath guaranteed, then made good on the guarantee, that the AFL would beat the Baltimore Colts. The AFL might be without credibility to this day.

What if Dizzy Dean and the Gashouse Gang hadn't made the 1934 World Series? What if the Giants had beaten Brooklyn in the final weekend series that year? You think baseball lore would have been served?

LOOK AT THE things that didn't happen. Dean never got to pitch against Babe Ruth or Joe DiMaggio, or even Lazzeri. Walter Johnson never got to face Rogers Hornsby with the Series on the line. Bill Tilden never met Rene Lacoste in a Wimbledon final.

How many times have two great race horses not hooked up with each other for one reason or another? You can count on the fingers of one hand the number of storied match races in that sport.

Would you have liked to have seen Red Grange run against Notre Dame? In the Rose Bowl? It was not to be. What if Reggie Jackson had never made a World Series? Koufax? Clements?

Something, or someone, always seems to intrude on the side of anticlimax. I mean, think we will ever get to see Russia vs. the U.S. in an Olympics ever again?

Like to save up all year for a concert and find out Horowitz has a sore throat the night you bought tickets for? Get to the ballet to find Baryshnikov has broken his ankle?

Well, the '85 Super Bowl is going to be the night Caruso sings, Baryshnikov dances, Horowitz plays, and the Lunts are in the cast.

It's not a road company Super Bowl. It's not a dream game but it's a lot better than the one we dodged.

AFTER YOU'VE waxed tearyeyed about the fitness of wonderful Walter Payton finally playing in a Super Bowl, you're pretty much left with a Pittsburgh-Chicago Super Sunday that might have set football back to the flying wedge. The Chicago Bears play football about the way Eddie Stanky played baseball, a kind of invisible game that appeals only to people who understand the fine print of the sport. The Steelers try to beat you, 14-7.

FOR YEARS, sports aficionados used to root mightily for a Dallas Cowboys-Oakland Raiders Super Bowl. A barn-burner, a big betting interest coast to coast. But it never happened.

The Super Bowl, I don't know whether you know it or not, is frequently – too frequently – the biggest bore on the schedule. It pits two teams that go together like ketchup and ice cream, beer and doughnuts. They bring out the worst in each other.

This year, we got a chance finally for that dream 49-47 score with two overtimes and hardly any field goals. This is not an agony fight, these are two guys who can slug. No gavotte, no feeling each other out. These guys will swing from the floor.

On paper, it looks like Dempsey vs. Tunney, Ruth vs. Walter Johnson, Reggie vs. Nolan Ryan. There haven't been too many big moments in Super Bowl history. We sometimes get a Super Bowl where you can't see how either of them can win it. Now, we have one where you can't see where either of them could lose it.

Sabres happy with tie

Associated Press

It was one tie game the Buffalo Sabres could celebrate, while the Hartford Whalers were cursing the fates.

The Whalers seemed safe with a two-goal lead in the final minute of their game Tuesday in Buffalo. But the red-hot Sabres, who had won seven straight games, found some late lightning to pull out a 4-4 tie.

Oilers 4, Nordiques 0

The vastly improved Edmonton defense posted its third shutout of the year. Andy Moog stopped 10 shots in the first period before pinching a nerve in his knee and yielding to Grant Fuhr, who blocked 23. Wayne Gretzky had a goal and two assists for the visitors.

"We started playing well in the playoffs last year and it seems to be continuing this season," Fuhr said. "All I had to do was stop the puck and my teammates did the rest."

NHL

Islanders 3, Canadiens 1

Bryan Trottier scored twice, once with the Islanders shorthanded and the other into an empty net with three seconds left, and Tomas Jonsson got the game-winner on a power-play at Uniondale, N.Y. Kelly Hrudey made 30 saves, many with spectacular stops.

Flyers 5, Canucks 3

Todd Bergen scored two goals in his NHL debut and Dave Poulin had a goal and three assists for the hosts. Bergen connected with only eight seconds left in the second period, poking in a pass from Poulin. He also scored the game-winner at 11:22 of the final session with a short wrist shot.

Capitals 4, Red Wings 2

Scott Stevens scored twice for visiting Washington, which trailed 2-0, then Mike Gartner provided the winner, putting his own rebound past goalie Corrado Micalef with 83 seconds to go. Doug Jarvis added an empty net score with 45 seconds remaining, then had to be carried from the ice on a stretcher after being checked by Detroit defenseman Randy Ladouceur.

BYU's Edwards would oppose blocking rule change

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — LaVell Edwards, coach of national champion Brigham Young, said he would oppose an American Football Coaches Association recommendation that blockers be allowed to fully extend their arms when in contact with an opponent.

Edwards cited what he called "a false feeling" that past liberalization of blocking rules has benefited pass-oriented teams like BYU.

"The liberalized rule has helped the running game more than the passing game," he said Tuesday. "You can teach pass protection a lot easier (than run blocking) in a short period of time."

Delaware Coach Tubby Raymond, a spokesman for the AFCA, described the recommended change as "essentially the NFL rule." The current college rule says a blocker cannot extend his arms "more than one-half of a full extension" while keeping hands and arms parallel to the ground. Hands must also remain inside the frame of the blocker's body and below the shoulders of both the blocker and his opponent.

Edwards, who was the kickoff speaker of the AFCA convention, drew a standing-room-only crowd for his talk on "Utilizing Personnel in the Passing Game." He said there wasn't anything mysterious about BYU's vaunted passing attack. "The reason we've become good at passing is simply because of the amount of time we practice it."

San Angelo snarls 4-5A

From Staff Reports

Just when 4-5A basketball fans were beginning to believe that Abilene High might be making moves toward a romp to the title throne room, the high scoring Eagles slipped a tread in San Angelo Tuesday night to throw the 4-5A race into a five-team first place tie.

San Angelo bounced the Eagles 85-80, leaving AHS, San Angelo, Midland High, Midland Lee and Odessa Permian all with 2-1 league marks after three outings.

The Bobcats pulled the upset by outscoring the Eagles by a 27-17 margin in the fourth period to erase a five-point defecit. Ottoway Perryman led the way with 25 points, but Brian Ross chipped in with 24.

The Eagles got a game high 28 points from Greg Lowry and 25 from Mickey Russell.

AHS and Lee went into the Tuesday games with perfect 2-0 league records, but both fell on the road as Lee suffered a one-point loss to Odessa Permian. MHS, a loser to Abilene Saturday, defeated 1-2 Odessa High to join the elite teams at the top of the standings.

In the only other 4-5A game Tuesday, Abilene Cooper (1-2) won an 88-76 win over 0-3 Big Spring. Terrance Bell had 25 and Fred Starks 21 for Cooper while Big Spring was led by Benard Williams' 21 points.

Mystery rival for MC tonight

From Staff Reports

BIG SPRING—Midland College returned to the floor Tuesday night after almost a month's layoff and defeated Murray State of Tishomingo, Okla., 94-67, in the first game of the Howard College "Doubleheaders", only the doubleheader turned out to be a single game when Angelo State JV failed to show for the second game.

Angelo also failed to show up for a game with Odessa College this season.

As a result, Howard College will finally get to play Murray State at 8 p.m. tonight, but Midland's foe is still a mystery.

"We are going to play somebody tonight," vowed MC Coach Jerry Stone. "I don't know who, but we will play. It may be McMurry's JV or maybe Charles Johnson (former MC All-America) can round up a team, but we will play."

With the win over Murray, the Chaps boosted their record to 12-2 for the season as they got ready for Monday's return to action against Amarillo College, a team that inflicted one of those two losses on MC.

Murray stayed with MC for a half, trailing by five at intermission, but Midland, led by 6-9 Teviin Binns' 30 points, pulled away in the second half.

Chuckie Graves with 14 and Vernon Coleman with 10 also cracked double figures.

Before Tuesday's game, the Chaps lost Ricky Grace, freshman from Dallas Wilmer-Hutchins, who suffered a broken arm as a result of a motorcycle mishap.

Vandy's Kreis given 'leave' in drug probe

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Vanderbilt strength coach E.J. "Doc" Kreis has been granted a leave of absence amid an investigation into the source of a prescription drug found in the body of a dead Clemson University track athlete, officials say.

Athletic Director Roy Kramer told The Tennessean in a copyright story in today's editions that he has ordered an internal investigation in the wake of the Tennessee Bureau of Investigation probe.

"In my early conversations with staff members and some of our athletes, I have learned some of the student-athletes have illegally used prescription drugs," Kramer said.

"In addition to our own investigation, we are cooperating to the fullest with . . . the TBI," he said.

In a prepared statement Tuesday, Kramer said the 31-year-old Kreis, who played football at Clemson from 1973-75, had been granted a leave of absence that "will be effective immediately."

"I have received a letter from Jay Kreis requesting a leave of absence from his duties at Vanderbilt University," he said. "This letter was submitted as the result of the investigation now being conducted by the Tennessee Bureau of Investigation and other interested parties. I have accepted this letter."

Arzo Carson, director of the TBI, said that a South Carolina investigation into the death of Clemson long-distance runner Augustinius Jaspers has led to Nashville as the possible source of the drug phenylbutazone.

The anti-inflammatory drug is obtained by prescription and used primarily for swelling and stiffness of the joints.

BASKETBALL—

Bruce Dalrymple led Tech with 24 points.

At Raleigh, N.C., reserve guard Terry Gannon scored 10 points to spark North Carolina State to a 51-45 victory over Virginia, snapping a three-game losing streak that had cost the Wolfpack a spot in the Top 20.

In other games Tuesday night, it was Army 63, Fordham 59; Niagara 71, New Hampshire 69; James Madison 80, Old Dominion 68; Western Kentucky 75, Jacksonville 64;Wake Forest 79, Furman 64; Iowa State 106, Abilene Christian 86;Toledo 67, Kent State 58; New Mexico 64, Baptist of South Carolina 59; and Pepperdine 90, Colorado 64.

BULLDOGS—

Davis hit 12 of 28 shots from the field, but Mackey and Sears both hit on five of eight tries.

The thorn in Midland's side was OHS' Alan Bailey, who scored 22 points, but he went through one stretch in the second half when he missed seven straight shots and that was when the Bulldogs began to pull away. When Bailey quit hitting from outside, the Bronchos were done. Bailey still connected on 10 of 21 shots. Paul Chavez had 10 points and Keith Smith 14.

OHS hit 15 of 30 shots in the first half, but cooled to a 12 of 33 effort in the second half. MHS ended the night with a 31 of 63 shooting eye, near the 50 percent effort.

ONE THING that did have Stephenson concerned was his team's 13 of 24 effort at the charity stripe. "We are just not concentrating in that area and that's got to change...But a win is a win is a win."

And wins apparently aren't going to come easily in 1985 in 4-5A. And now the 'Dogs face the chore Friday of hosting San Angelo, the upset winner over Abilene High, at 8 p.m. in Chap Center.

In junior varsity action, the Bullpups won a 77-70 victory over OHS in what was a revenge outing for Rick Sample's crew.

Last year, OHS ran the score up on the MHS sophomores, most of whom are now on the JV. "I think they had that a little in the back of the mind," smiled Sample.

Jason Fuller led the Bullpups with 18 points and Ken Fleeger added 10. OHS' Lance Watkins had a game high 30.

Stoddard jumps Cubs for Padres

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Free-agent reliever Tim Stoddard, who pitched for the Chicago Cubs last season, has signed on with the San Diego Padres, the team that defeated the Cubs in the 1984 National League Championship series.

The acquistion of the 6-foot-7, 250-pound Stoddard, announced Tuesday, was the latest in a series of off-season moves by San Diego designed to bolster a pitching staff that failed miserably during last year's World Series.

Stoddard was 10-6 with seven saves and a 3.82 earned run average while with Chicago last season, his only year with the club. The 31-year-old right-hander agreed to a three-year contract with the Padres worth about $1.5 million, club officials said. A fourth year may be added at the team's option.

"It came down to the money and the length of the contract," Stoddard told the San Diego Tribune in a telephone interview from Chicago. "The Cubs wanted to go with a straight deal. The Padres offered me three years and an option.

"I hate to leave here. You always hate to leave a group of guys you've played with. But the Padres are a pretty good team — I think I'm going to enjoy myself out there."

San Diego faced Detroit in the World Series, losing in five games after no Padre starting pitcher was able to last more than five innings.

General Manager Jack McKeon's top priority in the off-season was to rectify that situation. He first fired pitching coach Norm Sherry, replacing him with Galen Cisco, then signed former Cy Young Award winner LaMarr Hoyt in a deal that sent one of the Padres' starters, Tim Lollar, to the Chicago White Sox.

San Diego recently lost another of its starters, Ed Whitson, when Whitson signed as a free agent with the New York Yankees.

With the addition of Stoddard in the bullpen, McKeon will be able either to use Dave Dravecky as a permanent starter or experiment with Andy Hawkins, a 24-year-old right-hander who showed promise during the World Series.

Stoddard will join a relief staff that includes hard-throwing Rich Gossage and Craig Lefferts, who had a 2.13 ERA last season.

Rangers sweep Stanton

From Staff Reports

Greenwood's Rangers elevation to Class 2A from 1A was smooth enough in football last fall and after Tuesday's sweep of Stanton in the District 8-2A openers at Stanton, the basketball transition apparently holds no terrors.

Greenwood's girls (Morgette 22, Dean 13) raised their record to 18-1 for the season with a 68-18 win over the Buffaloes.

Stanton slipped to 6-8 for the season with the defeat.

Greenwood's boys (Gilam 19, Wilmon 18, Wallace 16) moved to 14-5 for with a 76-41 over the Buffs (Glasby 12) triumph. Will Wilmon scored 18 to lead the Rangers.

Stanton now is 6-7 for the season.

Wall, 15-0, defeated Reagan County, 48-43, in the boys game as Ward Dierschke scored 13 for Wall and Eddie Evans had 12 for Reagan. In the girls game, Reagan won 47-44 as Leslie Gooch scored 13 and Sheila Sellman had 12 for the Owls. Five-11 Tracy Morton was high for the game in leading Wall with 20.

McCamey (Kennedy) defeated Eldorado (Turbeville 11), 42-34, in another 8-2A game. In the girls game, Eldorado (Field 12, Willoughby 11) defeated McCamey (Tesch 15), 42-28, as Eldorado improved its record to 11-4.

Rick Burleson suffers setback

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Former All-Star shortstop Rick Burleson suffered a setback in his three-year struggle to return from a torn right rotator cuff when he dislocated his right shoulder while lifting weights.

Burleson, who hopes to play second base for the California Angels this year, suffered the dislocation while working out with former teammate Fred Lynn on New Year's Eve in a Palm Desert gym, Burleson said Tuesday.

Burleson, 33, suffered a partial paralysis of his right hand from the injury, but he said it seems to be improving.

Burleson said he had been examined by Dr. Lewis Yocum, the Angels' orthopedic specialist and Boston orthopedist Dr. Arthur Pappas.He said both indicated the injury should not affect the torn rotator cuff or stop him from playing baseball in the future.

Burleson suffered the rotator cuff tear in August 1982. After surgery, he returned briefly in August 1983. He suffered a new tear last spring and was activated as a utility player in September.

We have often preached that, on defense, you should not play cards at random. It is essential that every card you play carry a message for partner to decipher. Consider this hand from the recent World Team Olympiad in Seattle.

Because of his minimum balanced hand, South decided to suppress his four-card spade suit in favor of rebidding one no trump. North made one more try for a suit contract, but accepted his partner's decision to play three no trump.

Sitting East-West were the two top-ranked American players in the world; Bob Wolff and Bob Hamman. Wolff led his fourth-best spade and Hamman could see that declarer had concealed his four-card spade holding. A lesser defender might have gone up with the king of spades and returned the jack. Declarer would cover and West would not know how to defend.

Hamman could see that, if his partner held the ace of spades, he could not have an outside entry as well. So, to maintain communications, he played the jack of spades at trick one.

Declarer won the queen, but he could not come to nine tricks without either trying the club finesse or tackling hearts. No matter which he tried, Hamman would win, cash the king of spades and continue with the suit to allow his partner to take three more spade tricks.

What if declarer held up the queen of spades on the first trick? As the cards lie, East would continue with the eight of spades at trick two. West should read that as a suit preference signal for clubs, since East is marked with a spade honor. So West can win the ace of spades and shift to a club, and the defenders must come to five tricks — three spades, a club and the ace of hearts.

Mississippi paper drops hot lead for cool offset

ROLLING FORK, Miss. (AP) — For more than a century, the Deer Creek Pilot used hot-lead type to get the printed word to its readers in the rural Mississippi Delta.

But now, owner, publisher, editor and "chief bottlewasher" Hal DeCell reluctantly has bowed to technology and installed an offset printing system, making his one of the last newspapers in the country to make the switch.

The Pilot's old Goss Coxotype letterpress collects dust in a corner of the weekly newspaper, a relic of a bygone era.

Ed Eybers, a spokesman for the American Newspaper Publishers Association in Washington, said only a few newspapers were still using letterpress, but his organization does not keep a record of the exact number.

The old press was costing DeCell some business and supplies were hard to find, but what finally forced his hand was more basic.

"My Linotype operator, Harry Simmons, decided to retire and they don't make people like him or like that equipment any more," he said. "I could have made the change years ago but I was too damn stubborn — I kept hoping one of my sons would come in and do the changeover."

In place of the Linotype, which set lines of type in lead, is a modern phototypesetting machine with a typewriter keyboard. Photographic strips of type produced by the new machine are placed onto pages and taken to a newspaper in Leland for printing.

Making the change was hard for DeCell.

"I don't have a computer mind and I don't comprehend them," he said after pecking out an obituary on his old manual typewriter. "To be honest, this new stuff scared me to death."

"We've had our headaches since the changeover," he said. "What really scared me was when we lost a story in that new machine and couldn't find it."

Since 1949, DeCell and his wife have run the tiny paper, whose slogan brags: "Next To the Bible, the Pilot Is the Most Throughly Read Publication in the South Delta."

Despite the invasion of daily newspapers from larger cities and the availability of radio and television, the newspaper, founded in 1876 and named after the creek which runs through this small agricultural community, continues to thrive.

Twice the paper has been selected as the best small weekly in the country by the National Newspaper Association and the DeCells also won the Golden Quill, an international award for overall writing.

DeCell likes to think the success is based on both respecting the fundamentals of his profession and experimenting with new ideas.

"We were the first weekly in the state to run an editorial page," he said. "The page was, and still is, a mixture of things, whatever I get mad about."

On one side of the editorial page is DeCell's "Out On A Limb" column, while the opposite side of the page is filled with his wife's "Trimmed In Lace: Dedicated to Feminine Thoughts, if any."

DeCell said he and his wife often disagreed in their columns, and at times his stands on issues upset subscribers.

Brynner still 'The King' after 4,400 appearances

NEW YORK (AP) — Yul Brynner has played the lead in "The King and I" more than 4,400 times since 1951, but he hasn't worn out his welcome on Broadway. The 64-year-old actor's farewell run as the king of Siam has become the theater season's first box office smash.

When the Rodgers and Hammerstein musical opened at the Broadway Theater on Monday, the box office took in $266,556 and the line of ticket-buyers stretched around the block, according to Keith Sherman, a spokesman for the show.

While it hasn't been decided how long Brynner's engagement would last, Sherman said tickets are on sale through the beginning of May.

Brynner overcame lung cancer last year.

SHEFFIELD, England (AP) — Def Leppard drummer Rick Allen, whose left arm was amputated after a car accident last week, plans to use an electronic drum to make a comeback with the heavy-metal rock band, his brother says.

"He is determined to get back and I believe he will," Robert Allen, the 21-year-old rock drummer's brother and road manager, said Tuesday. "He has the willpower to do it.

"I think there is a strong possibility Rick will be playing with Def Leppard later this year."

Rick Allen has arranged to talk to a U.S. drum company about custom-building an electronic drum that would allow him to play with one arm, his brother said.

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Rock star Peter Garrett had to wait five weeks to learn that he'd lost a close race for an Australian Senate seat on the Nuclear Disarmament Party ticket.

The tall, bald star of the band Midnight Oil came in a close second to incumbent Colin Mason in his bid to represent New South Wales state, the Australian Electoral Office said Monday night.

DEDHAM, Mass. (AP) — U.S. Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret M. Heckler and her husband have not been intimate since 1963, John Heckler's attorney said as proceedings in the couple's divorce opened.

In preliminary arguments in Norfolk County Probate Court on Tuesday, Mrs. Heckler's attorney, Samuel Adams, asked that the record be cleared of John Heckler's comments about his conduct in the marriage of more than 30 years. He said he only wanted to deal with financial matters.

But Edward Lev, representing John Heckler, 56, said he hoped his client would be able to elaborate on previous comments that Heckler had been involved in an extramarital affair in 1967 because his 52-year-old wife had alienated him.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Pele, the retired king of soccer, told a group of slum children that he plans to "play to win" when he runs for president of Brazil in five years.

"When I play, I play to win, and I've never let the Brazilian people down," Pele, 44, told the children in a television interview on Tuesday.

Pele, who announced his intention to run for president late last year, toured a government project for educating hundreds of children in three Rio slums. Dozens of children cheered as he autographed soccer balls and booted a few passes into the crowd.

Pele has said he dreams of becoming Brazil's first black president.

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Singer Connie Francis returned to her old high school for the first time in three decades to talk to students and old teachers, saying "nostalgia always feels good."

Ms. Francis, 46, said the bathrooms were the only things that had changed at Arts High School, which she attended in 1951 and 1952.

"There was all kinds of grafitti and obscene writing on the walls that made me sad," she said of her visit Tuesday with a public television crew.

Ms. Francis, who leaves for a European tour on Sunday, said Arts High was "invaluable to me in my career." She said she learned to sight read sheet music there.

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Afflicted with what he called a "very painful" case of shingles, former President Richard M. Nixon ignored a doctor's orders to remain confined in his Saddle River home and took a day trip to the nation's capital.

GORDON, Neb. (AP) — Eve Bowring, a rancher who was appointed Nebraska's first woman U.S. senator 30 years ago, died Tuesday. She was 92.

Mrs. Bowring was appointed to the Senate in April 1954 by Gov. Robert Crosby to succeed Sen. Dwight Griswold, who died after seven months in office. She served until Nov. 7, 1954. She was one of two women in the Senate, the other being Margaret Chase Smith of Maine.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Barbara Myerhoff, whose documentary on the aging Jews of Venice, Calif., won an Oscar, died Monday of cancer. She was 48.

She was a professor of anthropology at University of Southern California and was widely known for "Number Our Days," the 1976 public television documentary that won an Academy Award. The story of poor Jews trying to maintain their culture in Venice became a book in 1978 and later was adapted as a play.

Dollar moves up; gold firms

LONDON (AP) — The dollar advanced against most major currencies in quiet European trading early today, while the British pound sank to a record low. Gold prices firmed but were still below the $300-an-ounce mark.

The pound was under new pressure following reports that Britain was being forced by the spot oil market to sell its North Sea crude at less than the official price.

In London, the British pound hit $1.1380 at mid-morning, a shade lower than the $1.13925 reached in New York on Tuesday. Earlier Tuesday, the pound had finished the day in London at $1.1502.

Also sapping sterling's strength was a government report Tuesday that failed to show any big jump in Britain's money supply, which investors speculated would have led to higher interest rates.

The dollar's strength continued to stem from the better interest rates available in America than in many other countries, dealers said.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar rose to a closing 255.00 yen from Tuesday's 253.75. Later, in London, the dollar was quoted at 254.90 yen.

Other dollar rates in Europe at mid-morning, compared with late Tuesday:

–3.1705 West German marks, up from 3.1600.

–2.6520 Swiss francs, up from 2.6360.

–9.7035 French francs, up from 9.6595.

–3.5803 Dutch guilders, up from 3.5690.

–1,945.75 Italian lire, up from 1,933.50.

–1.32015 Canadian dollars, down from 1.32050.

Gold prices, which hit a 5½-year low of $296.70 bid per troy ounce at the close in New York Tuesday, firmed when trading opened in the Far East on Wednesday. In Hong Kong, the metal finished at $299.25 but was still $4.98 down on the previous day.

Later, gold opened in London at a bid price of $297.40 an ounce. At mid-morning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $298.35. The closing bid price Tuesday was $302.20.

Officials say unemployment may take year-end dip

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unemployment edged up to 7.2 percent of the civilian work force in December as a surge in Americans looking for work surpassed the creation of about 340,000 new jobs during the month, the government reported today.

The number of Americans actually holding jobs in December rose to a record 106.3 million, but the total of unemployed increased to 8.2 million as the labor force expanded by 390,000, the Labor Department report said.

Meanwhile, the number of "discouraged workers," those without jobs but not counted as unemployed because they've given up looking, increased to 1.3 million from the September level of 1.2 million. Those quarterly figures have been falling for the last two years, since reaching a recession high of 1.8 million at the end of 1982.

Since then, some 7.1 million jobs have been created. In 1984 alone, the economic expansion produced 3.2 million new jobs.

A yearend slowdown in U.S. economic growth had led many economists to expect that the jobless rate would either rise a bit or remain flat in December. But widespread predictions of at least somewhat faster growth early in this new year would seem to indicate the unemployment increase will be short-lived.

Many analysts had been surprised by November figures that showed the rate declining to 7.2 percent from October's 7.4 percent. Today's report revised those figures to 7.3 percent for October and 7.1 percent for November.

The rate, which reached 10.7 percent near the end of the 1981-82 recession, dropped to a revised 7.2 percent last June but bounced back to 7.5 percent before beginning to decline again.

An alternate overall unemployment rate, which combines the 114.5 million-member civilian labor force with the roughly 1.7 million members of the armed forces stationed in the United States, rose to 7.1 percent from 7.0 percent.

The biggest gains in employment were a hike of 95,000 in businesses providing services and an increase of 85,000 among manufacturers.

Among specific groups, there were these December figures:

—Adult men, 6.3 percent, up from 6.2 percent in November.

—Adult women, 6.4 percent, down from 6.5 percent.

—Teenagers, 18.8 percent, up from 17.8 percent.

—Whites, 6.2 percent, up from 6.1 percent.

—Blacks, 15 percent down from 15.1 percent.

—Hispanics, 10.2 percent, up from 10.1 percent.

Among black teenagers, the group with the highest unemployment, the jobless rate was 42.1 percent, up from 41.2 percent in November.

Before today's announcement, analysts said that slower-than-anticipated retail sales conceivably could contribute to pushing up the unemployment rate a tenth of a percentage point or so.

New claims for unemployment compensation benefits, one indicator of the overall health of the U.S. labor market, rose by 5,000 to 405,000 in the week ended Dec. 22, the Labor Department reported last week. The Employment and Training Administration also said last week that the total number of Americans receiving jobless benefits under state-run programs rose by 122,000 from 2,477,000 to 2,599,000 in the week ended Dec. 15.

National civilian joblessness hit a post-Depression peak of 10.7 percent in November 1982 with more than 12 million people listed as unemployed. The job gains since then have been principally service jobs in areas such as retail, hotel, restaurant, hospital, banking and insurance.

Commenting in advance of today's report, Allen Sinai, chief economist at Shearson Lehman-American Express, said that because of somewhat disappointing Christmas sales, additional hiring by retailers that normally occurs in December likely did not happen.

Indeed, Janet L. Norwood, the commissioner of labor statistics, said in testimony prepared for today's hearing of the congressional Joint Economic Committee that, after seasonal adjustment, the retail segment of the job market posted no gains last month. She noted, however, hefty increases in retail employment in October and November.

Ms. Norwood also said two-thirds of the increase in overall job creation in the last two years was in services, and that "in the goods-producing sector, very few industries had added more than the number of jobs lost during the recession."

She added that five industries had December employment levels actually lower than at the official end of the recession in November 1982 — mining, steel, tobacco, petroleum and coal, and leather.

The nation's largest retailers all reported increases in December Christmas sales from a year ago, but the levels overall were disappointing because they were less than many retailers had hoped, financial analysts said.

Bricker denies Shamrock vulnerable to takeover

DALLAS (AP) — Diamond Shamrock Chairman William Bricker rejected the idea that his company's merger flirtation with Occidental Petroleum Corp. has left Shamrock vulnerable to a hostile takeover.

"We didn't miss a lick in terms of further developing our prospects," he told the Dallas Times Herald Tuesday night.

Bricker said his board rejected a merger with Occidental because of unhappiness about the fate of Shamrock managers in the new company and the margin of profit for Shamrock shareholders.

The merger, which would have created the nation's seventh-largest oil company, suddenly fell apart Monday afternoon, just hours after the heads of both companies announced a tentative agreement.

Some analysts said risk arbitrageurs, who had bought about 9 million Shamrock shares, faced hundreds of millions of dollars in losses.

Analysts said Shamrock is now open to a hostile takeover attempt because arbitrageurs and others with big holdings would be eager to recoup their losses and might sell their stock to the first suitor that came along.

"Once exposed, vulnerable, and Diamond Shamrock better watch out," said Alan Edgar of the securities firm Schneider Bernet & Hickman in Dallas.

Bricker said the merger intially seemed to offer great benefits for Diamond Shamrock shareholders.

He said the proposed merger also had the blessing of top executives with both companies. But Bricker said he changed his mind about the deal during discussions with his board Monday.

Bricker said the $3 billion stock-swap plan was conceived last Wednesday, when he was talking to Occidental Chairman Armand Hammer about another matter.

The proposed merger had called for the shareholders of the two companies to exchange their stock for stock in a new company on a one-for-one basis.

That could have given Diamond Shamrock shareholders a substantial premium, since Occidental's stock was trading at about at about $25 per share when the tentative agreement was reached, while Diamond Shamrock's was at about $17.

But word of the negotiations quickly spread among Wall Street, Bricker said.

The rumors put the participants under "tremendous and unnecessary pressure" to go public while the merger discussions were still in the early stages, he said.

William Bricker

After both companies announced Friday that they were discussing a possible merger, Diamond Shamrock's stock rose sharply in trading on the New York Stock Exchange while Occidental's fell, narrowing the difference in value.

By the time the board met Monday, trading in the stock of the two marriage partners had nearly halved the premium he first thought Diamond Shamrock shareholders would get, Bricker said.

He said it appeared last week that shareholders of the Dallas company stood to receive a $6 or $7 premium for their stock and an increase in dividend from $1.76 to $2.50.

Bricker told the Dallas Times Herald that the Diamond Shamrock board got its first look at the plan when they met Monday, and by then the premium for Diamond Shamrock stock was reduced to a range of $2 to $3 as Occidental's stock price dropped.

"The board had nothing other than a small batch (of documents) to brief them prior to Monday," Bricker said.

In composite New York Stock Exchange trading Tuesday, Diamond Shamrock fell by $1.87½ a share to $18.12½. It was the Big Board's most active issue for the second straight day, with 3.7 million shares changing hands.

Occidental's stock rose by $1 per share to $25, offsetting the $1 loss it posted a day earlier.

GM plans new Saturn Corp. division

WARREN, Mich. (AP) — The success of Saturn Corp., General Motors Corp.'s challenge to Japanese dominance of the subcompact car market, will hinge on a highly computerized and robotized factory and an assist from Toyota, GM's chairman said.

The Saturn plant would employ 6,000 people and the unit, GM's first new nameplate since it added Chevrolet in 1918, would be nearly the size of GM's Pontiac unit or Chrysler Corp.'s Dodge division, GM Chairman Roger B. Smith said Tuesday.

Although Smith did not say where the Saturn planted would be located, he said it would turn out nearly a half million cars annually with a highway mileage of 60 mpg. The front-wheel-drive cars with special transmissions will be sold through a new dealer network by the end of the decade, he said.

"This car, we hope, will be less labor-intensive, less material-intensive, less capital-intensive, less everything-intensive than anything we've ever done before," Smith declared.

"It will be the most efficient plant and plant site and the most efficient way to produce a car anywhere in the world," Smith said at a news conference at GM's sprawling Technical Center in Warren, just north of Detroit.

But without help from the Japanese, who are said to enjoy a $1,500 per car price advantage on small, traditionally low-profit cars, Saturn could not get off the ground, Smith said.

He said GM's 12-year joint carmaking venture with Toyota Motor Corp. was crucial to Saturn Corp.'s existence.

The GM-Toyota linkup, which produced its first car just last month, is threatened by a federal antitrust lawsuit filed by Chrysler, which contends that the world's two biggest carmakers have no business trading secrets. The case is to be heard this March in Washington.

"I don't think we would be able to sit here announcing Saturn if we did not have that joint venture experience coming on," Smith said. "We've learned an awful lot already. We need even more."

Saturn Corp. has an initial capitalization of $150 million, with assets to reach $5 billion, GM said.

Unlike the other divisions, Saturn, as a separate corporation, will have its own labor contract, allowing GM to pursue labor-cost savings GM says it must have to compete against the Japanese in the small-car market. The United Auto Workers union has cooperated in plans for Saturn, GM said.

Donald Ephlin, the UAW vice president who negotiated the union's GM labor contract last fall, attended the news conference and said he didn't expect wages to be an issue.

"Traditionally, the UAW has not opposed the introduction of technology. Rather, we've taken advantage of it to get a greater standard of living for our members and to do better for them," Ephlin said. "We don't intend to reduce the standard of living of our members in any fashion."

A bigger labor-management issue, union members say, will be how much of the Saturn car will be made by UAW members in the United States.

PUC gives HL&P rate hike, rejects funding for STNP

AUSTIN (AP) — After a close look at the South Texas Nuclear Project, the Public Utility Commission decided Houston Lighting & Power Co. is due a rate hike of $168 million — but not a penny for STNP construction costs.

"The obvious cloud that hangs over this case is the South Texas Nuclear Project," Commissioner Dennis Thomas said at Tuesday's meeting.

The bottom line for HL&P's 1.3 million customers is a hike of about 2.6 percent. The company wanted a $554 million package that carried a 10 percent rate jump. PUC examiners had recommended a $271 million increase.

In addition to barring HL&P from passing STNP construction costs to consumers, the commission ordered a special staff inquiry into the "economic viability" of STNP's unit two.

The second unit is scheduled for completion in 1989, two years after the first unit is to be ready.

HL&P's overall request included $617.5 million in construction costs at the overdue and over-budget STNP near Bay City. Tighter rules approved by the 1983 Legislature require utility companies to prove construction projects are prudently managed.

Without that proof, the construction costs cannot be passed to consumers. PUC Chairman Phil Ricketts said HL&P failed to make a convincing case.

"I, like many parties in the case, am very concerned about the record as it reflects on the progress, or lack of progress, on construction planning of this project," he said. "HL&P has not met its burden of proof that the South Texas project has been efficiently and prudently managed."

Ricketts was quick to point out that the decision could be changed in future cases.

"We will continue to have review of this project, perhaps in a number of forums," he said.

Public Utility Counsel Jim Boyle, who pushed for a $110 million rate cut, said the STNP will wind up costing 550 percent of the originally estimated price.

After the meeting, Ricketts said hindsight makes it easy to call the STNP a mistake.

"Most anyone could say the company and everybody would be better off if they'd gone into something other than nuclear," he said.

Company spokesman Don Beeth said HL&P was "disappointed" with the $168 million hike and concerned about continued ability to provide power "down the line."

"It means something. We don't know how bad it means yet," he said of the ruling.

Beeth said he is "not in the least" concerned that a PUC study of STNP's unit two could result in a decision that it's not needed. That portion of the project is 40 percent complete.

State Savings' legal morass spreading

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — When State Savings and Loan of Clovis closed its doors in late 1983 in the wake of criminal indictments and regulatory investigations, it opened the door to a legal morass that now has spread into several states.

The latest developments include the filing of lawsuits in New Mexico federal court and Louisiana state court against the agents that conducted the original criminal and regulatory investigations into State Savings and Loan in 1982 and 1983.

The lawsuits, which now seek a total of $2.25 billion in damages, were filed by men charged Nov. 2, 1983, with fraud or embezzlement and racketeering in their dealings with State Savings and Loan. The criminal complaints later were dismissed because of a technicality.

The lawsuits allege that state and federal agents conspired to deprive the men of their civil rights by damaging their business relationships and reputations.

Bobby Pringle, vice president of Southwest Mortage Service Corp., which was charged with being the racketeering vehicle and now seeks $1.5 billion from state and federal regulators and others, said the civil rights violations began before criminal charges were brought.

Pringle said Tuesday his firm was involved in legitimate business dealings with State Savings and Loan, but, like any other business, might "sell a lemon" without knowing it.

At least eight lawsuits and counter-lawsuits are now pending in various courts around the country, covering a wide range of financial matters revolving around State Savings and Loan.

The complex, far-flung case has its roots in what one plaintiff in a civil rights lawsuit said was a typical problem faced by thrift institutions in 1982 — a high interest rate economy and low interest rate fixed loans.

The resulting cash problems for the savings and loan prompted an investigation, beginning in 1982, by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, which oversees the operations of federally chartered savings and loans.

By March 1983, according to a memorandum filed by a federal savings and loan examiner, the firm was on the brink of insolvency.

Gary Adams, an examiner for the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, said State Savings and Loan "has been operated as a private financial house" by the group of men who later were indicted. Adams wrote in the memorandum that the savings and loan "will truly be a basket case" when the group finished.

The institution's financial problems appeared to improve when W.W. "Doc" Taylor of Dallas and others borrowed from State Savings and Loan to purchase time-share contracts for part-time vacation sites in various states, including Louisiana, Arkansas and California. In exchange, Taylor received stock in the institution and eventually became a major owner.

Following a series of audits by federal investigators, the Curry County grand jury indicted the six men and four corporations on charges of fraud. Three of the men also were charged with racketeering.

The Nov. 3, 1983, indictment alleged that Taylor, Glen Houston of Hobbs, Lewis Nance of Brownfield, Texas, Joe Boyd of Odessa, Texas, Jack Brown of Las Vegas, Nev., and Randolph Shipley of Laguna Beach, Calif., defrauded the savings and loan by selling questionable time-share contracts.

Taylor, who owns Southwest Mortgage Service Corp., and Boyd, who owns Credit Plan Corp., and Brown were charged with racketeering.

The indictments, however, were dismissed on Oct. 16, 1984, by District Judge Frank Allen of Albuquerque because a prosecutor had been in the grand jury room when votes on the indictments were taken.

STATE

No further action has occurred in the criminal cases, but Assistant Attorney General Fred Smith, director of special prosecutions, said on Tuesday it is "still definitely being considered."

In the meantime, the men involved have filed a flurry of lawsuits.

In one civil rights case filed in federal court in Dallas, Taylor sought $1 billion, alleging violation of his civil rights. Taylor also claims his business dealings were legal and were damaged by the investigation.

However, in June and again in November, U.S. District Judge Joe Fish of Dallas dismissed the New Mexico defendants and others, including Smith, other attorney general's investigators and lawyers and officials of the state Financial Institutions Division.

Smith said in his Nov. 8 order that he dismissed the defendants because Taylor did not prove they had substantial contacts in Texas that would warrant enacting that state's so-called long-arm statute.

On Dec. 24, shortly after the New Mexico defendants were dismissed from the Texas lawsuit for the second time, Taylor filed a new complaint in a lawsuit that had been pending against Southwest Mortgage in St. James Parish, Louisiana.

Taylor's third-party complaint against the New Mexico prosecution and regulatory officials — in which he is seeking $500 million in damages — alleges the same type of civil rights violations as in the Texas lawsuit.

The lawsuit in which the third-party complaint was brought originally was filed by Longview-St. James Plantation Venture against Southwest for an alleged breach of contract.

That lawsuit alleged that Taylor had broken his agreement to buy certain time-share contracts from the Louisiana company. Taylor alleges in his third-party complaint that he could not carry out the contract because of the acts of the state and federal investigators.

According to lawyers involved in some of the cases, similar lawsuits are pending against Southwest Mortgage and Credit Plan Corp. in a number of jurisdictions around the Southwest.

In yet another lawsuit pending in U.S. District Court in Dallas, Taylor's firm alleges that State Savings and Loan breached its contract to purchase a number of the time-share contracts.

That lawsuit, Pringle said, also targets as defendants the firms that originally offered the time-share contracts to Taylor that he subsequently sold to the Clovis institution in exchange for stock and majority ownership in the savings and loan.

In addition to those lawsuits, the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation, which guarantees deposits in its member savings and loan institutions, has filed lawsuits against Taylor and Boyd and their firms, seeking to block further time-share or solar financing activity.

According to Boyd's $775 million lawsuit, filed Dec. 31 in Albuquerque, the FSLIC has filed lawsuits against Southwest and Credit Plan in U.S. District Court in Kansas City, Clark County District Court in Las Vegas, Nev., and Orange County Superior Court in Santa Ana, Calif.

Boyd's lawsuit alleges that those lawsuits were filed "with the intent of depleting (Boyd's) assets and interfering in (Boyd's) legitimate business activities."

Boyd also alleges that the FSLIC damaged State Savings and Loan's ability to remain solvent by blocking a proposed merger of the Clovis institution with an Arizona savings and loan, "but gave absolutely no reason for its refusal."

Besides the allegations that state and federal regulators have violated his civil rights and damaged his business, Taylor is pursuing yet another layer of lawsuits alleging that the FSLIC improperly became the receiver of State Savings and Loan.

In a federal court lawsuit now on appeal in the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Washington D.C., Taylor says the FSLIC never proved that State Savings and Loan was insolvent when the federal agency was appointed receiver the day after the indictments were handed down.

Project directors delay funding decision

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — The Salt River Project board of directors has delayed a decision on whether to participate in the funding of a construction audit of the Palo Verde Nuclear Generating Station.

The directors voted Monday to postpone a decision for at least a month.

SRP General Manager Jack Pfister said he could not make a recommendation to the board because there are too many questions concerning the cost, purpose and value of the proposed study.

The audit is intended to identify possible cost overruns in the construction of the $9.3 billion plant, which is being build 50 miles west of downtown Phoenix.

Phillips pleased at union vote to defer raises

BORGER, Texas (AP) — Phillips Petroleum Co. officials said they were pleased that employees here and in Utah agreed to defer pay increases so the company can regroup after an aborted takeover bid.

Although members of the Local 351 International Union of Operating Engineers in Borger approved the deferment, ballots from the company's 26,000 employees nationwide had not been totaled.

"A number of locations are going to be voting this week at varying times," Phillips spokesman Don Harrison said.

About 500 union employees in Pasadena, Texas, and 100 union employees in Woods Cross, Utah, also voted to delay their raises.

The 2.6 percent salary increases that workers in Borger agreed to postpone were to take effect Tuesday.

Union members stipulated in the balloting, which occurred Monday night and Tuesday, that Phillips must outline the new stock plan by March 31.

"If the stock ownership is not explained by that date, the membership wants the negotiated wage increase to go into effect retroactive from (today)," Union president B.J. Grove said.

Phillips spokesman Art Austin said he was pleased with the union's decision and pledged the company would present the new plan before the March 31 deadline.

If approved, the deferment will give Phillips time to draw up a stock ownership plan as required under an agreement to prevent a takeover by Mesa Partners Inc. and oilman T. Boone Pickens of Amarillo.

The Borger-area vote was turned into Phillips at 10 a.m. Tuesday — an hour before the deadline set by Phillips for a union response after the company made the request Thursday.

There are 1,100 union members in the Borger area. Non-union members' wages also would be frozen under the plan, Grove said.

Under the proposal, Phillips would sell 32 million shares to employees and give them ownership of 40 percent of the company, Austin said.

The plan must first be approved by the company's stockholders, who have tentatively scheduled a meeting in late February or early March.

In Borger, 2,600 workers operate a refinery and two carbon black plants for Phillips.

soups And sandwiches with south-of-the-border flair

On a winter day, there's nothing quite so welcome as a steaming bowl of homemade soup and a sandwich. Whether the day is spent traversing snow-packed slopes or armchair quarterbacking in front of the television, this hearty duo is always body and soul-satisfying. When both are rich with the spicy, spectacular flavors of Mexico, a more welcome repast would be hard to imagine.

If homemade Mexican soups and sandwiches bring to mind long hours in the kitchen and a variety of specialty ingredients, take a tip from San Antonio's Mexican food aficionados, to whom these foods have long been second nature. In the City of the Alamo, when Mexican soups and sandwiches are on the menu, they are simplified to eliminate exotic ingredients and time-consuming preparation. Authentic south-of-the-border flavor, however, is never compromised. To provide the essential seasoning that gives Mexican food its appealing personality, Pace Picante Sauce, a hometown product now available nationwide, is the convenient starting point. A standby for Mexican cooking throughout the Southwest, the unique combination of fresh ingredients in this lively table sauce, the original picante sauce, streamlines the way to zesty flavor.

As colorful as a serape and almost a meal in itself, Caldo is a year 'round Mexican favorite. Prepared with a profusion of fresh vegetables, the recipe may be varied to include any seasonal bounty at hand. As with most Mexican soups, it is mildly seasoned and easy on the palate. Top individual servings with hot cooked rice, then season at the table with a squeeze of lemon and additional picante sauce to taste.

Authentically robust in flavor, Picante Tortilla Soup takes just moments to prepare for its siesta-like simmer. Topped with tortilla wedges and shredded cheese, it's well worth the wait. When time is at a premium, try flavor-rich Crema de Salsa Soup. Creamy and bursting with lively flavor, it's ready to serve in about 15 minutes.

Round out the meal, ideal for casual entertaining, with a Mexican "sandwich" special. Quick Quesadillas (kay sah DEE yas), topped with Guacamole, are party-perfect yet easy enough for weeknight suppers. Buenos Burritos, assembled by the cook or presented as do-it-yourself sandwiches, boast flavorful pork or beef fillings that are easily made in minutes.

Reminiscent of a favorite Mexican restaurant specialty, Tostadas de Pollo y Queso (tose TAH das day POE yoe ee KAY soe) are topped with Rapido Refried Beans, a streamlined Mexican menu standby. Serve your sandwich choice with additional Pace Picante Sauce — mild, medium or hot — for those who prefer even spicier flavor. At only 6 calories per tablespoon, you can spoon on all you want.

Brighten a blustery day with colorful Caldo, a hearty Mexican soup with lively flavor appeal. Serve it with Quick Quesadillas topped with Guacamole, or Tostadas de Pollo y Queso—Chicken and Cheese Tostadas. Easy to prepare, these south-of-the-border specialties are streamlined with Pace Picante Sauce, the original picante sauce, which adds authentic Mexican flavor and eliminates the need for fresh chiles and specialty seasonings.

PICANTE TORTILLA SOUP

- 1 teaspoon chili powder

- 1/2 cup shredded Cheddar cheese

Cook onion and garlic in oil in Dutch oven until onion is tender; drain well. Drain and coarsely chop tomatoes, reserving liquid. Serve with lettuce, sour cream and additional Picante Sauce, as desired. Makes 6 servings.

NOTE: To heat tortillas, stack and wrap securely with foil; place in 350° F. oven about 15 minutes. Or, wrap loosely in plastic wrap; cook in microwave oven at High about 1/2 to 1 minute.

Molasses nutritious sweetener

By Diane Savage
Copley News Service

Cane sugar, beet sugar, white, raw and brown sugar — honey, too — they're all craved by those of us who suffer from "sweet tooth syndrome."

During processing, all of the nutrients are extracted from white sugar. And most of the brown sugar sold these days is simply refined white sugar made "brown" by the addition of a little molasses or caramelized sugar.

Real raw sugar is slightly more nutritious than its refined cousins, as is honey. But the best choice among sweeteners remains molasses.

This thick, dark syrup is a by-product of the sugar-refining process. Sugar cane is roughly chopped, run through rollers and boiled. A thick syrup is drained away, leaving raw sugar, and this syrup is molasses.

Light molasses is derived from the first boiling, dark from the second, and blackstrap from the third and final boiling. Blackstrap is strongly flavored and used only in small amounts, but it is favored by the health-wise because more sucrose is refined from it than from light molasses.

Its sweetening power is about one-half that of white sugar. Blackstrap is the most nutritious form of molasses, with the greatest amounts of thiamine, riboflavin, potassium, iron and calcium.

Another variety is sorghum molasses, which is made not from sugarcane, but from sorghum grains.

GINGER MOLASSES COOKIES

4 cups sifted unbleached white flour
2 cups whole wheat flour
1 tsp. baking powder
1 tbsp. baking soda
½ tsp. salt
1 tbsp. cinnamon
1½ tsps. ginger
¼ tsp. ground cloves
1 cup butter or margarine
1 cup brown or raw sugar
1 egg
2 cups unsulfured molasses
1 cup hot water

Sift flours before measuring. Combine in large bowl and add baking powder, soda, salt, cinnamon, ginger and cloves. Sift again, tipping back into bowl bran from whole wheat flour that remains in sifter. In separate bowl, cream butter with sugar until light and fluffy. Add egg and molasses, blending well. Stir in hot water, then add flour mixture, little at a time, to creamed mixture. Blend thoroughly.

Cover bowl and refrigerate until firm enough to roll. Place chilled dough on lightly floured board and roll out ¼-inch thick. Cut into desired shapes with floured cutter. Sprinkle top of each cookie with little brown or raw sugar, then with drop or two of water (this will result in "crackled" top). Bake on ungreased cookie sheets at 375 F for 12 to 15 minutes.

Makes 50 large cookies.

WHOLE WHEAT MOLASSES MUFFINS

1¾ cups whole wheat flour
¼ cup wheat germ
2 tsps. baking powder
1 egg, beaten
½ cup milk
¼ cup vegetable oil
½ cup molasses
½ cup raisins
¼ cup chopped walnuts

In medium-size bowl, combine flour, wheat germ and baking powder, then set side. In separate bowl beat together egg, milk, oil and molasses. Stir in raisins and walnuts. Add liquid to dry ingredients, stirring just until moistened. Fill buttered or paper-lined, 12-cup muffin tin evenly with batter. Bake 15 to 20 minutes at 400 F. Let cool on wire rack.

Makes 12 muffins.

Gourmet burgers biggest trend

By Merle Ellis

According to a recent feature article in "Restaurants & Institutions," a trade magazine of the food service industry, the big trend setter — the "1984 Changemaker," the current big buzz in the restaurant biz is — guess what? Hamburgers!

Yes, hamburgers. Not just any old hamburgers, however. McDonald's, Wendy's and Burger King don't qualify. The phenomenon of 1984 is the "gourmet hamburger" and that's a different breed of burger altogether.

Unlike those fast food chains that precook, package and pass out burgers as fast as you can fork over the funds, gourmet hamburgers must be cooked to order.

They often are topped with interesting and exotic concoctions ranging from pea pods, sprouts, enoki, broccoli and peppers on a sesame seed bun (called a Beijing Burger), to a fried caper and anchovy topping on a Kaiser roll (dubbed Berlin Burger a la Holstein.)

IT'S NOT the condiments, that make it gourmet, however. It can sport nothing more exotic than lettuce and tomato. It's the quality and size of the burger itself that counts.

It is made from freshly-ground beef, in some places ground before the customers very eyes. And a quarter-pounder won't make it in the gourmet game — we're talking at least a third of a pound, sometimes even a half.

R & I lists and describes the operation and philosophy of 20 different restaurants and restaurant chains involved in "Gourmet Burgers: The Evolution of American Fast Food."

From small but fancy operations like Hamburger Harry's, right in the heart of Manhattan, decorated by a Tony award-winning Broadway set designer, to the 132-unit chain called Ground Round, owned by Howard Johnson's.

Several of the restaurants in the article claim credit for originating the gourmet burger. H.A. Winston's of Collingswood, New York, claims the distinction, as does the Red Robin in Seattle, and the famous Hamburger Hamlet headquartered in Beverly Hills.

But any of us who were on the scene in San Francisco in the early 1950s know that Jack Falvey was making gourmet hamburgers at The Hippo long before anybody. He just had the good sense not to call them that! The Hippo's menu lists such exotic delights as the Gourmetburger, the Frenchburger and the Hamburger Sundae.

AND TALK about famous designers! The Hippo's interior and logo were designed by Wolo, the artist and puppeteer whose puppets shared the screen with Leslie Caron in the film "Lili."

I stopped in at the Hippo last week, ordered my favorite Stroganoffburger andtalked to Falvey about what it takes to make a great hamburger.

"You can dress up a hamburger in many ways," Jack said. "You can sauce it with all kinds of sauces, and you can give it eye appeal with all kinds of things from caviar to candy canes, but you must remember; the meat that makes up the hamburger makes it a success!" This man speaks my language.

"When I buy hamburger, I buy round or chuck and add suet to it to bring the total fat content to about 15 percent. Ground meat, when cooked without suet, is very dry. Have the meat and suet put through the grinder twice to ensure an even distribution of the fat," he said.

"One thing you must remember; use freshly-ground hamburger. The sooner you cook your meat after grinding, the better. And if you expect a great hamburger, for heaven's sake don't freeze the ground meat!

"A THICK patty is best — thin patties dry out in cooking. One-third of a pound, about 1¼- to 1½-inch thick, is the perfect size. How you form the patty is very important, too.

"The less you touch the meat, the better. One of my biggest problems here at the restaurant is with cooks who insist on over-patting the meat patties," he added.

I will add something to that. Avoid buying ground meat from markets that use those machines that stamp out square-flat-brick-like loaves of ground beef. The machine already has over-patted the meat before you even get your hands on it.

Finally, Flavey advises, "Never put anything in your hamburger, but be as wild as you want with the sauces that go on it."

STROGANOFFBURGER

1 teaspoon butter, melted
3 ounces chopped onions
1 ounce thinly-sliced fresh mushrooms
½ teaspoon beef base mixed with ½ teaspoon warm water
1 teaspoon Maggi seasoning
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
Salt and pepper to taste
1 pint sour cream, room temperature

Saute the onions in butter over low heat. Do NOT let them brown. Add mushrooms and simmer for about 5 minutes stirring continually. Stir in beef base, Maggi and Worcestershire. Season with salt and pepper. Let cool. When just warm, add the sour cream and stir in well.

Place over a very low heat, stirring continually, until warm and blended — do NOT allow even to simmer or the sour cream will curdle. Use to top freshly cooked hamburgers.

DEAR ABBY

Spouse's obesity repulsive

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: A marriage of 35 years is about to end because my spouse has become repulsively obese. It's not that this person cannot "perform" — it's that I get totally turned off before I ever get to the bedroom.

Have you any advice for the partner of the fat one? I think I could handle sickness. A person can't help getting sick, but growing fatter and fatter because of overeating is another story.

If I just didn't have to sleep with that spouse, I could survive. What is there besides divorce? — TURNED OFF IN SEATTLE

DEAR TURNED OFF: There's understanding. Overeating is an addiction. Food, like drink and drugs, is used by many to make them feel better. Don't be judgmental or unkind. Communicate with your spouse on a loving level. Try to get that spouse to the family physician for an examination, a sensible diet and an exercise program. Then suggest Overeaters Anonymous. (There are chapters all over.) I've seen the miracles they have performed. It's worth a try. Good luck.

DEAR ABBY: What would you do if you were a 5-foot-8, 60-year-old lady in love with a shrimp? — STATUESQUE

DEAR STATUESQUE: I'd get on my knees and thank God if he loved me back. Then I'd pray that no 5-foot lady was fishing off my dock.

DEAR ABBY: The 80-year-old woman who is heartsick about her 28-year-old grandson's decision to have a vasectomy should mind her own business. She says he already has two children and makes a meager living, so she pays his rent and utilities. I wonder if Grandma has given any thought to who will pay her grandson's rent and utilities when she's gone?

After we had a girl, then a boy, we decided our family was complete, so I had a vasectomy. We also heard a lot of "what ifs" from family and friends. "What if something happened to one of your children?"

We told them, "What if we had 10 children, our house burned down and we lost them all? One child could never be replaced with another."

I was asked, "What if your wife died, or you were divorced, and you married again and you wanted children with another wife, then what?"

I had my answer ready: "I'm covered at the sperm bank." — PESTERED NO MORE IN LONG BEACH

DEAR ABBY: I know you would want to give credit where credit is due, so please let your readers know that the originator of National Smokeout Day ("Quit smoking for 24 hours and you can quit forever") was Lynn Smith. He was at that time the editor and publisher of the Monticello Times in Monticello, Minn. (He's now retired.) Mr. Smith launched his quit-smoking campaign in 1974, and it was so successful that it went national in 1977. — MARY L. STUBBS, MONTICELLO

Canned foods sometimes spoil

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

Generally speaking, there should not be any danger with eating darkened canned fruits or fruits coming out of cans with darkened inside linings unless there are some other signs of spoilage.

According to Dr. George York, extension food technologist at the University of California Cooperative Extension, certain compounds in the fruits, primarily sulfur, react with the metal. When oxygen gets in the can it exposes the iron in the steel, causing discoloration. York said this is a common occurrence and the food is perfectly safe to eat. The longer the can is left opened with the fruit, the darker it becomes and the fruit may acquire a metallic taste, which is harmless.

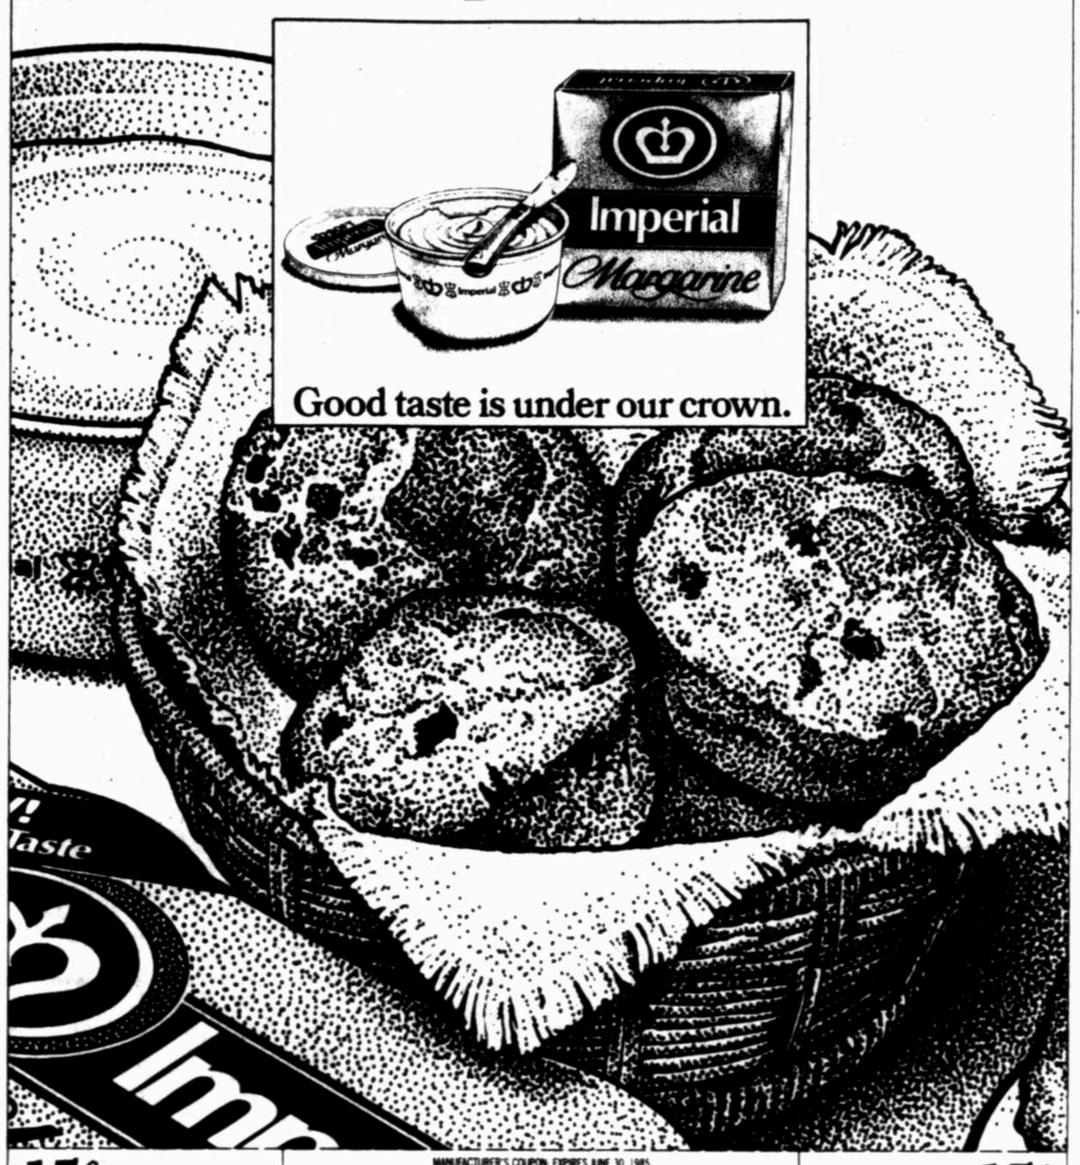

Watch for these positive signs of spoilage: off-odor, musty and unpleasant smell, bulging lids in cans, seepage around the seal, molds in contents or around the seal, bubbling contents indicating gas, slimy food, cloudy liquid or a spurting liquid caused by pressure from inside when the container is opened.

Old-fashioned chop suey updated

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

According to one culinary historian, chop suey had its greatest number of fans in three large cities — San Francisco, Chicago and New York — during the early years of this century.

Now we think it is time to revive it. In doing so we took an old-time popular recipe and updated it. We used fresh bean sprouts and fresh mushrooms instead of the canned varieties and fresh ginger root instead of ground ginger root. Great improvements.

CHOP SUEY

1 to 1¼ cups fresh mung bean sprouts (about 2 ounces)
1⅓ tablespoons corn oil
⅓ cup slivered (matchstick size) pared carrots
⅓ cup thinly sliced celery
⅓ cup thinly sliced mushrooms
¼ cup thinly sliced scallion
⅓ teaspoon finely chopped ginger root
1⅓ cups cooked pork strips
1¼ cups clear fat-free chicken broth
2 tablespoons cornstarch
1 tablespoon soy sauce
Hot cooked rice

Rinse bean sprouts and drain well; set aside.

In a large skillet, over medium heat, heat oil; add carrots, celery, mushrooms, scallion and ginger; stir-fry for about 2 minutes. Add pork, 1 cup of the broth and bean sprouts. Bring to a boil. Simmer, covered, until carrots are tender-crisp — a minute or so.

In a small bowl, stir together cornstarch, remaining ¼ cup broth and soy sauce until smooth. Stir into pork mixture. Over medium heat, stirring constantly, bring to a boil and boil until clear and thickened. Serve with rice. Pass extra soy sauce. Makes 4 servings.

Serve oysters for winter treat

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

Someone once said, "He was a bold man who first ate an oyster." I can believe it, since it took me 40 years to work up the nerve to consume my first one. But I have been enjoying them ever since.

Up through April, oysters will be available across the land. From the good Lynnhavens off the coast of Virginia, to the tiny Olympias of the Pacific Northwest, American waters abound with these bivalves. But few oysters capture the ocean flavor and buttery quality as do the mollusks from Delaware that are said to have delighted William Penn.

Oysters on the half shell are still the top attraction, but some like them hot, and this is the reason for oyster roasts. Many residents of the suburbs or countryside feature them at weekend cookouts.

A friend of mine hosts such a roast every January, and people come from miles away to partake of the feast. While guests quaff cold beer or steaming coffee, the host and a couple of volunteers poke at the oysters lined up on a steel plate over a log fire. As the oysters pop open, they are removed from the shells and dunked in a skillet of melted butter.

Within handy reach are pots of pickled cabbage and bowls of hot roasted chestnuts.

If you are going to dunk oysters in butter, you'd better equip yourself with a large, absorbent glove and a big napkin to wipe off your chin at intervals.

For those who find such a roast too rugged in winter, oyster stew makes a good substitute. The bivalves, floating in a rich mixture of hot cream and butter, are delicious with plenty of buttered toast.

Since an oyster roast is not available to most city dwellers, here is a recipe for a stew.

OYSTER STEW

1½ pints light cream
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon black pepper
1 pinch paprika
1 pinch cayenne
4 tablespoons soft butter
2 tablespoons chopped parsley

In double boiler over boiling water, place oysters, their liquor, cream, salt, pepper, paprika and cayenne. Cook until oysters float and cream is almost boiling. Warm four bowls in hot water. Add one tablespoon butter to each bowl. When oyster stew is ready, ladle it into bowls and sprinkle with chopped parsley. Good with hot French bread and chilled white wine. Serves 4.

MISD growth to continue, report indicates

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Midland schools will experience continued growth over the next decade, according to data presented Tuesday to Midland school trustees.

The projections, utilized annually for future planning, indicate growth in enrollment through 1993, leveling off in 1994 with most of the increase occuring prior to 1990.

The data, presented by Garland Chapman, assistant superintendent for administrative services, shows total Midland Independent School District enrollment will climb to 20,958 by 1994, an increase of 2,873 students over the 1984 figure.

Elementary school enrollment is expected to rise from 10,326 in 1984 to 11,398 in 1994. Projections for combined junior high and high school enrollment is 9,261 in 1994 compared to 7,464 in 1984; and figures for students enrolled in special education are anticipated to increase from 295 in 1984 to 299 in 1994.

According to MISD Superintendent Dr. Joseph Baressi, the estimates show a surprising slowdown in growth based on earlier projections which indicated the possible need for another junior high school by 1990.

CALLING THE EARLIER projections "invalid," Baressi urged trustees to evaluate all school facilities to determine whether each can accommodate curriculum loads established by the state.

Chapman said the projections were based on the following assumptions provided as the result of an economic survey and forecast for Midland by the Texas Research League and indicators of future school enrollments by Educational Research Services Inc.:

— The city of Midland probably will experience alternate cycles of little change or moderate growth during the next two or three decades.

— Nationwide figures suggest children ages 5-9 reached its lowest point in 1982 and will reach its highest level in 1994; children ages 9-13 will reach a low in 1986 and peak in 2000; the number of children ages 14-17 will decrease by 1990, then rise sharply through the 1990s to peak beyond 2000; total school enrollment reached its lowest point in 1984 and will rise continually until 2000 when it will peak at 51.1 million students.

— Between 1970 and 1978, Texas gained 1.8 million people and the trend is projected to continue beyond 2000.

— The birth rate will continue between 14 and 16 births per year per 1,000 population.

— MISD appears to approximate the nationwide population trends except that the total number of births reached a peak in 1983.

IN OTHER ACTION, trustees approved, on first reading, administration recommendations for boundaries and cluster assignments for the new elementary school scheduled to open in September.

The recommended attendance area for the school located in west Midland includes the Northgate neighborhood beginning at the intersection of Northgate Avenue and Holiday Hill Road and extends to the undeveloped area surrounding the school.

Additionally, several rural areas would be assigned to the new school including the Warfield area currently assigned to Henderson Elementary School; the Ridgewood and the West Highway 80 areas currently assigned to Parker Elementary School; and the Airline Mobile Home area now assigned to Santa Rita Elementary School.

The recommended cluster assignment for the school would expand the Houston Elementary School attendance area and incorporate the West Elementary School area to form Cluster 5 (Parker, Houston/West and De Zavala schools).

West elementary would continue to serve as a campus for primary students (grades K-3); while intermediate students (grades 4-6) in the West attendance area would enroll in the appropriate school in Cluster 5 (fourth grade-Parker, fifth grade-Houston and sixth grade-De Zavala). The new school would become a part of Cluster 6 along with Washington and Bonham Elementary schools.

A public forum concerning the boundary and cluster assignments will be at 7:30 p.m. Jan. 17 in the Houston Elementary School cafeteria. Trustees are expected to take final action Jan. 22.

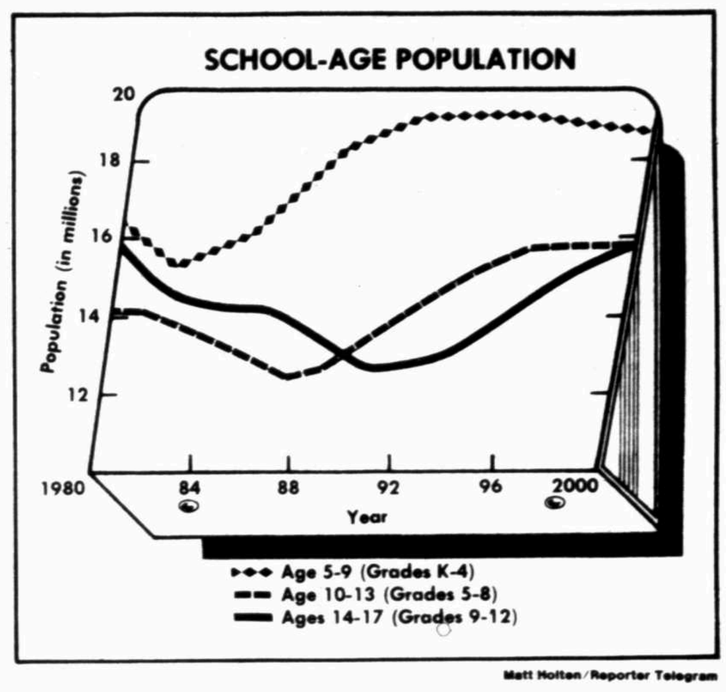

THE BOARD also approved, on first reading, proposed revisions in board policy concerning extracurricular activities and methods of reporting pupil progress to parents and extracurricular sponsors.

The rules, revised to comply with the University Interscholastic League and the State Board of Education, would limit students to 10 absences during the school year for participation in extracurricular activities.

More significantly, performance in such activities — including travel time — would be limited to eight hours per school calendar week.

The amendment also would require students to pass all course work with a grade average of 70 or more in order to participate in extracurricular activities. A student who fails any class during a six-week's reporting period would be suspended from practice or participation in the event.

School-age population projections indicate an estimated 51.1 million children will attend public schools nationwide by the year 2000. The sharpest increase will be for children ages 5-9 or students enrolled in grades K-4.

Bunton denies award, dismisses another case

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton has detected apparent indifference on the part of Midland County Jail personnel toward an inmate who suffered back pain while he was jailed here in 1983.

And in another instance, the judge threw out a federal case initiated by Jim Winter on the grounds that the claims were "without merit."

In the case of Michael James Gaglione III vs. former Midland County Sheriff Dallas Smith and former Jail Capt. Bennie Cureton, Bunton found that the 32-year-old Gaglione was "wrongfully denied" Motrin medication for his ailing back.

"Although jail personnel apparently acted indifferently to plaintiff (Gaglione), plaintiff failed to establish injury or harm to himself from the conduct of jail personnel," Bunton ruled in the case.

"Well, I agree with him," said Midland County Attorney Mark H. Dettman, who represented the county in the federal case.

Gaglione, who is serving concurrent 10-year and 7-year sentences in state prison for burglary and credit-card abuse, had sued the county for $50,000 in damages. Gaglione had alleged that jailers ignored his complaints of his ailing back, dismissed his pleas for a nitroglycerine tablet for his heart condition, and denied him Saturday mail delivery, coffee and tobacco.

Gaglione suffered from a heart condition identified as "mitral valve damage and a systolic murmur."

Gaglione, who had the heart condition when he was arrested July 29, 1983, by Midland city police, was transferred to Midland County Jail on Aug. 8 and subsequently was taken to a hospital for examination, an electrocardiogram and a cardiac enzyme test. A physician found his heart to be "within normal limits."

The county's physician, Dr. Patrick Y. Leung, had permitted Gaglione to take nitroglycerine for his heart condition and had prescribed Motrin to relieve Gaglione's back pain. At the time he was booked into county jail, Gaglione had nitroglycerine tablets in his possession.

On the night of Aug. 25, Gaglione suffered chest pains, demanded a nitroglycerine tablet, but the "jailers did not accede" to his request although the jail nurse said Gaglione could have ½ of a tablet, Bunton noted in his findings. However, another inmate who had several nitroglycerine tablets with him gave one to Gaglione, who did not then require hospitalization.

Though the jailers "wrongfully denied" Gaglione the medication, his claim of denial is "moot," Bunton wrote, since he suffered no injury from the jailers' conduct. "Deliberate indifference to a prisoner's serious illness or injury has been held to state a cause of action...," the judge had noted.

Then, on Sept. 1, Gaglione requested Motrine for his back pain, but jailers "ignored this request." But the indifference resulted in no harm to Gaglione.

Council hears widening options for Garfield

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

A plan that would provide for widening and rebuilding part of Garfield Street and putting a thin asphalt overlay on another section will be put before residents at a public hearing in February.

Midland City Council decided Tuesday the staff could begin drawing the specifications for that option, but reaction from residents along Garfield Street between Golf Course Road and Wadley Avenue will be heard before a final decision is made.

During its regular meeting at City Hall Chambers, the council also approved four street improvement projects for 1984-85, set up flashing school zone lights at five locations, extended a contract for improvements to a water well field and denied a request for damages to a shopping center.

The proposal to widen and rebuild Garfield Street was put before residents at a public hearing in late November. Residents opposed the idea, saying the wider street would cut into their driveways and come too close to their homes.

City staff had argued traffic is increasing on Garfield and the street must be widened to handle the load. The wider street would include a continuous left turn lane.

Public Works Director Fred Baker presented six options to the council and suggested the second be adopted. That proposal calls for applying an overlay of asphalt on Garfield from Neely to Boeing, widening Garfield at the intersection with Golf Course Road, rebuilding and widening the street from Neely to Wadley and widening it from Neely down to Cimarron. Additional right of way would have to be purchased for widening Garfield on the south side of Golf Course Road for about 250 feet, he said. The city owns enough right of way to accommodate the plan north of Golf Course, according to Baker.

Option 1 called for widening Garfield from Golf Course to Wadley. The third plan called for rebuilding and widening the street from Wadley to half a block south of Cimarron and putting an asphalt overlay on the rest of Garfield. The fourth option called for rebuilding Garfield without widening it. Number five proposed overlaying and sealcoating the street. And the final option, he said, is "do nothing."

Harrell Feldt, representing the Garfield Street residents, was concerned that some citizens who would be directly affected by the plan weren't at the meeting. He cited a house at the corner of Neely and Garfield in which a wider street might run into the backyard swimming pool.

"We're all familiar with the problems that exist," said Mayor G. Thane Akins. "If we make this street viable for the future, it will have an impact on the residents. Traffic on the street will continue to grow. Cuthbert, although it wasn't designed properly, became a collector street. Garfield was designed more for that. We want to do it with the least safety hazard, but we have to plan for the future."

Woman found not competent to stand trial

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — An Odessa woman facing murder charges was committed to a state mental hospital Tuesday after a jury found she was not competent to stand trial for the Sept. 20 slaying.

Elizabeth Geeslin, 35, was indicted for shooting a 22-year-old neighbor who reportedly had entered her northeast side apartment to help her about 3:30 p.m. Sept. 20.

Gary Bienfang, 22, died from shotgun wounds he suffered after entering Ms. Geeslin's apartment at the request of Ms. Geeslin's mother and the apartment manager, according to police reports.

Rather than going to trial for the murder, with punishment ranging from five years to life in prison and up to a $10,000 fine, Ms. Geeslin will be sent to Rusk State Hospital in east Texas. If doctors at the hospital can successfully treat her illness, she can be brought back for trial.

Police were called to the Parkway Park Apartments by reports of a possible suicide, but arrived to find Bienfang dead. The apartment resident died after attempting to force open the locked bathroom door behind which the suspect was barricaded, according to reports.

During the hearing called to determine her competency to stand trial, both her court-appointed attorney Jim Jordan and prosecutor Preston Stevens recommended the jurors return the verdict which would lead to her being sent to the state hospital.

They sided with reports of a pyschologist and psychiatrist which suggested Ms. Geeslin showed signs of mental illness. The psychiatrist's report said Ms. Geeslin had learned two days before the shooting that she would have to leave her apartment permanently.

Jordan cited her past history of physical and mental problems and treatment in his motion for the competency hearing. The motion also said he planned to use the insanity defense in the trial.

Based on the reports and attorneys' recommendations, the jury found Ms. Geeslin was currently not competent and that there was not a "substantial probability" she would regain competency in the future.

The psychiatrist's report also suggested the suspect was insane at the time of the shooting and recommended a stay in the state hospital. It also said she "did not fully comprehend the charges that were against her."

Police were called by the mother and apartment manager after they heard a shot fired from inside the apartment. Bienfang was found in the bathroom area of Ms. Geeslin's apartment by officers on the scene.

Cerebral palsy victim excited about school

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

To office workers in downtown Midland, Roy Harrison is a fixture. Delivering office supplies daily from The Paper Clip, Harrison makes the rounds dropping off pens, paper and other staples of the office crowd.

But the 30-year-old Harrison is different in two ways from the average delivery person.

He has cerebral palsey, a handicap that has left him with a slight speech impediment and some motor loss.

And he's going to college.

Harrison, who was born and raised in Jayton, a small town north of Lubbock, will be quitting his job at The Paper Clip Jan. 18 before moving to Waco. There, he will attend Texas State Technical Institute where he hopes to get a degree in computer programming.

"I first got interested in the idea when my sister and brother-in-law talked to me about going to school," said Harrison, in his halting, slightly slurred speech. Harrison's sister, Frankie, lives in Waco.

"I went over during Christmas and saw the campus. Harrison admits he was not sure what he wanted to study when he first visited the school, but his interest was peaked when he was shown the school's computer department.

"They showed me how the computers worked and I talked to a department supervisor about them," he said. From then on, he was hooked.

Harrison was given an aptitude test to help determine his area of interests.

"The test showed that computers would be hard for me," said Harrison. "But I told them I would show them,".

Showing others that he can overcome difficult circumstances is nothing new to Roy Harrison.

Growing up with cerebral palsey in Jayton, a town of about 800 people, would be difficult even in today's world of health awareness. In the early 1960s, it could be downright cruel.

"I went to a regular public school and there were no teachers for handicapped persons," said Harrison. "The kids would make fun of me and I would get mad and pick a lot of fights."

But the lanky student persisted, graduating with "a lot of A's and B's...and D's, and only one F. (His one and only after his parents got through with him, he insists.)

After high school, Harrison attended a special school in Lubbock for handicapped people, learning "how to drive a car, how to meet and talk to people, going into supermarkets and pricing foods" and other necessary daily activities.

In 1977, after graduating from the Goodwill school in Lubbock, Harrison returned home to Jayton to help take care of his mother, who had suffered an aneurysm and required neurosurgery.

"I cooked for her, got her drinks and anything she needed," he said. "I wasn't very good at cooking, but I learned."

Two weeks after his mother had the aneurysm, his father required surgery for a lung removal. For the next several years, Harrison remained at home helping his parents. His father, Odell, died of emphysema in early 1984.

In 1980 he moved to Midland and lived with his sister, Dot, getting a job doing custodial work at the Museum of the Southwest. Shortly after, he got his own apartment. A few months later Harrison was hired at The Paper Clip.

Harrison admits that he is not sure what he wants to do with the computer programming degree. "I'll worry about that when I get it," he said. Harrison feels confident that through the school's placement office, he will find work after graduation.

Roy Harrison, a delivery person at The Paper Clip, a downtown office supply store, makes the rounds in his last full week of work. Harrison, who was born with cerebral palsey, will be preparing for a move to Waco where he will study computer programming.

Indictment against former teacher to be dismissed

From Staff Reports

A former Midland elementary school teacher indicted last year on charges of delivery of heroin was spending her 28th birthday today in the Midland County Jail.

Maria Rosario Luna, former fourth-grade teacher at Jane Long Elementary School, was brought to Midland County on a bench warrant from the Texas Department of Corrections to acknowledge the dismissal of a similar indictment out of Ector County, according to Lt. Roy Harrison of the Midland County Sheriff's Office.

She is expected to return to the TDC today to complete her 10-year sentence, Harrison said.

Ms. Luna was sentenced by a jury April 19, 1984, to the TDC for delivery of heroin after an investigation conducted by the Department of Public Safety resulted in her arrest. The woman was arrested Jan. 6, 1984, at the elementary school after indictments were handed down by the Midland County Grand Jury.

During the trial, Ms. Luna admitted to selling two grams of heroin in November 1983 to a DPS narcotics agent at her South Cottonflat Road mobile home. According to her testimony, she "was desperate" and needed the money to buy groceries for her two children.

Although Ms. Luna told the court she was not a drug user, she said her husband, Heradio Luna Jr., who was indicted by the Midland County Grand Jury on charges of delivery of cocaine after the same DPS investigation, was an "addict" who stole money from her. She divorced him after their arrest.

An indictment for delivery of heroin was handed down by the Ector County Grand Jury two weeks prior to the Midland County Grand Jury's indictment, according to records.

That case was dismissed in October after she pleaded guilty to the Midland County case and received the 10-year sentence, according to a spokeswoman in the Ector County District Clerk's Office.

Alamo Heights to begin Bible Study

Alamo Heights Baptist Church will begin a Bible Study Emphasis today through Friday.

Guest Bible teacher will be Dr. W.E. "Bill" Thorn, a minister, lecturer and author. He will teach the book of Psalms through Friday evening and will bring the message during Sunday morning's worship service.

Thorn has served as president of Dallas Baptist College and pastor of Metopolitan Baptist Church of Wichita, Kansas. He now travels extensively and speaks more than 400 times a year to civic, religious and education groups.

The Bible study will begin at 7 p.m. each day. Special Bible studies will be provided for youth and preschoolers.

The public is invited to attend.

Trustees also revised the method of reporting pupil progress to parents and extracurricular sponsors.

Records of student progress would be reported to parents six times per year following the close of each six-week period. Secondary teachers also would send progress reports to all sponsors of extracurricular activities for any student whose grade average falls below 70.

MISD board members are scheduled to take final action on the revisions Jan. 22.

SCHOOL

The ambitious delivery person/student will be paying for his education entirely out of savings from his job. He plans to continue working through college by helping his brother-in-law, Jim, sell advertising.

While Harrison's eyes light up at the mere mention of going back to school, his co-workers and customers are not too enthusiastic about losing him.

"He will be missed," said Pat Brookmole, of Pride Pipeline Company.

She pointed to a message taped to her desk from Harrison. The note, photocopied and no doubt taped on numerous other desks in downtown Midland, told of Harrison's plans.

"I am leaving The Paper Clip Jan. 18," said the note in Harrison's shaky writing. "I just want to take this opportunity to thank you for being nice to me when I delivered to you. Roy."

"Yes, he will be missed," she said.

Stanton residents to air grievances

From Staff Reports

STANTON — A group of Stanton residents were on their way to Austin early today in hopes of getting a chance to voice grievances before the Texas Legislature concerning education reforms.

Wayne Mitchell, superintendent of the Stanton Independent School District, said the group departed Stanton about 1 or 2 a.m. and should arrive in Austin sometime this afternoon.

The purpose, said Mitchell, "is to show support for our area legislators and voice opposition for education reforms;" namely, laws limiting student "absenses" for extra-curricular activities in addition to the "continued erosion of local control in our public schools."

Oilfield worker released from MMH

From Staff Reports

A 26-year-old Odessa man critically injured in an oil field accident Dec. 18 was released Tuesday from Midland Memorial Hospital.

Leslie Welch of Odessa, an employee of Johnn Drilling Co., suffered mutiple fractures after falling 15-feet from a drilling rig in Reagan County. He spent almost seven hours in surgery immediately after arrival at MMH, according to hospital reports.

He initially was listed in critical condition and had been listed in satisfactory condition since Dec. 20.

The rig was on a Phillips Oil Co. lease in the Spraberry field, about 30 miles southeast of Midland, a company spokesman said.

Tip leads to recovering property

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Police parlayed a Crime Stopper's tip into recovery of $2,500 in property taken in an Oct. 25 burglary and the early morning arrest of two people for possession of stolen property.

Two residents of 312 E. 35th in Odessa were arrested at 1 a.m. today by police executing a search warrant at the residence. The names of the suspects, a 26-year-old man and 20-year-old woman, were withheld, pending their arraignment later today.

Detectives used a Jan. 7 tip providing them with the address and names of the suspects in making the arrests and recovering the stolen property and other merchandise believed by police to have been purchased with a stolen credit card, according to reports.

Recovered from a Oct. 25 burglary were two motorcycles valued at $2,500. Also confiscated was a microwave oven, video cassette recorder, home entertainment center, sewing machine and computer software with a total value of $3,000 they believe was purchased with a credit card reported missing by its owner.

House damaged by fire caused by heating unit

From Staff Reports

Eight firemen responded to the blaze, which was confined to the heater closet.

The house, owned by Tom Bryant of 3100 Caldera, also sustained minor smoke damage throughout.

Woman finds intoxicated, snoring man asleep in her bed

From Staff Reports

A man found asleep early this morning in the bedroom of an employee of the Midland Memorial Hospital lab remains in jail on criminal trespassing charges.

Pamela Gallick, 4405 N. Garfield, said she returned home at about 11 p.m., fixed dinner and watched television until about 3:30 a.m. today. Her roommate, Margaret Gallick, had fallen asleep in the living room at about 9:30 p.m., reports said.

According to Pamela Gallick, she went into her bedroom, got into bed and began to read a book when she heard someone snoring. She looked on the other side of the bed and saw a man lying there.

Reports indicate she went into the living room, called police and got her roommate and her roommate's two children out of the house to wait for police.

When officers investigated, they followed snoring sounds and found a 24-year-old man lying between the bed and the sliding glass window in Pamela Gallick's bedroom.

The man, when awakened and asked for identification, kept opening his wallet and showing money to police, reports said. Because "he appeared to be intoxicated" and did not show identification, he was arrested.

Original charges of burglary of a habitation later were reduced to criminal trespassing, police said.

According to reports, the man lives in the 3500 block of West Shandon.

A burglary at the Bob Mobley residence, 1210 E. Oak, resulted in the loss of $4,123 worth of items.

According to reports, entry was gained through a rear window between 5 p.m. Sunday and 11 a.m. Tuesday. Among the items taken were a handgun, stereo system, jewlery and clothing.

A woman's whose home was burglarized Dec. 18, reported her house again was burglarized between 10:30 a.m. and 2 p.m. Tuesday. Reports indicate Jewel Goosby, 1707 English, returned home to find a couch blocking entry through the front door. Taken in the burglary were a cable television box and a remote control switch, value not listed.

According to reports, the Dec. 18 burglary resulted in the loss of a $300 television set, two stereos and a cable television converter box. Total loss was placed at $700.

John Beesley, an employee of Radio Shack at Midland Park Mall, reported a video cassette recorder was stolen at about 4:30 p.m. According to reports, a couple entered the store and began inquiring about various items. Another woman approached Beesley and was asking about the video recorders when the man who first entered the store "impatiently called" Beesley to assist him while he was looking at police scanners. While Beesley was distracted with the man, someone took the video cassette recorder, reports indicate.

COUNCIL

"You have to balance out the traffic needs with what the people actually need," said Feldt.

The council voted to have the staff prepare plans according to Option 2, but Councilman Gordon Marcum II dissented, saying, "I'm opposed to it. What happens out north (of Wadley) shouldn't affect an established neighborhood." He was referring to developments along Loop 250 at Garfield.

Streets that will be rebuilt at a total cost of $324,000 that was put into this year's budget will be Ohio from Big Spring to Pecos and from Loraine to Main streets, Missouri from A Street to Colorado, and Texas from Marienfeld to half a block east of Big Spring Street.

If the council continues budgeting for street rebuilding, Baker said that within the next two years the downtown streets "will be in pretty good shape."

Flashing lights were approved for school zones at Crockett, DeZavala, Milam and Parker elementaries and Midland Freshman High School. Cost of the lights is $24,255 and the money will be taken from the city's unappropriated surplus.

Contracts with the engineering firm of Parkhill, Smith and Cooper and hydrology company of Ed L. Reed and Associates were expanded to include improvements to Paul Davis and McMillen Well Fields. Public Utilities Director John Lowe said 30 percent of the Paul Davis Well Field is developed. The expansion will take it up to 45 percent. However, he said, some of the original wells are giving out and the expansion is needed to meet the city's water usage demands.

A representative of Scottsdale Shopping Center on North Midland Drive asked the council to pay for damages caused when a sewer line backed up and flooded the center, but the council refused.

CASES

Of Gaglione's complaints of lack of Saturday mail delivery and of the denial of coffee and tobacco to prisoners in general jail population, Bunton determined that those denials "do not amount to cognizable constitutional claims...The Court will generally defer to prison administrators those officials' adoption and execution of policies and practices that in their judgment are needed to preserve the internal order and discipline in that facility.

"Broadly stated," Bunton ruled, "the court will not become enmeshed in the minutiae of prison operations."

Gaglione's claim therefore fails, Bunton said, and Gaglione was awarded nothing.

In the Winter case, which the judge ruled spurious, Bunton dismissed Winter's claim against the District Attorney's Office; Janet Copeland, former DA prosecutor and now first assistant to Dettman, and defense attorney Edward K. Downing.

Winter, 60, alleged he was damaged in the amount of $18,286.50 after 31-year-old Vincent Marley of Odessa stole his 1984 Buick automobile, damaged it and took $1,200 in $100 bills from his car's trunk, and drove the car to Las Vegas, Nev. Additionally, Winter claimed Marley reneged on repairing a lawn-mower engine and a Buick Regal.

Winter recovered his car, which accounted for the $12,000 which Winter recovered, but he claimed he still was due $6,286.50 plus cost of his travel expenses to Nevada to retrieve his car.

Marley later pleaded guilty in state court to unauthorized use of an automobile, was sentenced to two years and prison and was ordered to pay Winter $1,200 in restitution.

Downing had represented Marley in the stolen-car case.

In dismissing Winter's suit, Bunton noted that Winter "failed to hurdle" procedural barriers and that his claims were, "at best, without merit."

"I'm very pleased that Janet and the District Attorney's Office were vindicated," Dettman said. "I still feel it was an abuse of the federal judicial system for him (Winter) to even file a suit."

TRIAL

He was pronounced dead about two hours later by Justice of the Peace Manuel Valles. Ms. Geeslin remains in the county jail on $25,000 bond, pending her transfer to Rusk.

Should Ms. Geeslin be found to have regained competency by doctors at the state hospital, a key issue at trial would be whether she was sane at the time of the alleged offense on Sept. 20.

The psychiatrist's report also said that during the examination Ms. Geeslin referred to a shotgun she owned. The exams are required by the state law prior to trial.

Lewis urges lawmakers not to raise taxes this session

AUSTIN (AP) — Legislators gathered for a second day today after hearing gloomy predictions about the state government's money woes and a list of other key issues that will command their attention this year.

House Speaker Gib Lewis urged lawmakers to avoid raising taxes, while Sen. Ray Farabee, new president pro tem of the Senate, cautioned that the state faces tough choices.

"We will do with what we have, or we will do without," Lewis vowed as the 69th Legislature opened its 1985 session shortly after noon Tuesday.

"Texas is at a crossroads, and we must decide whether to continue or terminate programs created over the past 100 years," added Farabee, D-Wichita Falls.

Lewis, a Fort Worth Democrat first elected to the House in 1971, noted that state Comptroller Bob Bullock has estimated that the $36.6 billion in state revenue expected for the 1986-87 biennium will fall $1 billion short of what is needed to pay for state government services at 1985 levels.

"It is my intention, with your help, to (adjourn) this session with an appropriations bill on the governor's desk that is within the available revenues of this state," he told colleagues.

"We will have to demonstrate beyond a doubt the truth of the statement that biggest is not always best and this goes double for state government and state spending," Lewis said.

Declining oil prices, the national economic recession, disastrous weather and financial difficulties in Mexico have combined to create trouble for Texas, Lewis said.

While increasing taxes would make up the difference, Lewis cautioned lawmakers that their responsibility to the public should be their overriding concern.

"It is now our turn to keep faith with the people of this state," he said. "We will have to make difficult decisions across the board to trim state spending whenever and wherever possible."

In a challenge to federal judges who have imposed their wills on the Texas prison and mental health systems, Lewis also voiced the belief that the state should contest the court rulings in the U.S. Supreme Court.

"I am tired of trying to make reasonable deals with unreasonable people," he declared. "I am not ready to abdicate...to any judge until Texas has pursued its right to the highest courts in this land."

Both houses organized for business during brief sessions Tuesday.

The Senate chose Farabee, a 10-year veteran, to be assistant presiding officer. Senators got their committee assignments from Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby. The 31-member upper chamber also invited new Chief Justice John Hill of the Texas Supreme Court to address a joint legislative session later this month.

In the House, Lewis was the only lawmaker nominated for speaker. He said he probably would announce committee appointments next week.

In his acceptance speech, Lewis said the Legislature will be forced to address many issues besides the budget in a session he described as "one of its most difficult" in recent years.

The list included:

— A statewide water use plan. Following a year of significant drought across the state, Lewis said, legislation is needed to deal with both development and water conservation. "If Texas is to survive one of its greatest crises of all time, we must enact a statewide water plan that will meet the needs of generations to come," he said.

— Crime. The speaker said he will push for a package of bills designed to beef up crime-fighting efforts. This includes continuing authority for wiretaps in felony narcotics investigations; keeping a state law requiring that a copy of prescriptions for some dangerous drugs be given to the state Department of Public Safety; applying the death penalty to people committing more than one murder, and allowing juries to be told the effects of parole when deciding punishment for those convicted of crimes.

— Health care. "We will be asked to undertake new advances in the constant battle to deliver better health care to our citizens, especially those who lack adequate means to always provide for themselves."

Gonzales introduces housing bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reagan administration policies are preventing moderate-income Americans from buying homes while taking subsidized housing away from the poor, says Henry B. Gonzalez, chairman of the House Subcommittee on Housing and Community Development.

"This is an administration that only feels indifference, callousness and contempt for the poor," Gonzalez, D-San Antonio, said in a speech to the National Housing Conference on Tuesday.

"But the Reagan administration not only threatens all efforts to provide decent housing for the poor and near-poor of this country," Gonzalez said. "Its abdication of responsibility with regard to economic management and fiscal policy threatens the affordability of housing for all but the richest among us."

Gonzalez said that in response to what he sees as a gutting of federal housing programs, he introduced last week H.R. 1, a bill that would almost double the budget of the Department of Housing and Urban Development from $12 billion to $22 billion.

"This year, we either force the administration into a change of direction on housing policy, or there will be no meaningful federal housing program for the foreseeable future," Gonzalez said.

"The question we face in Congress this year is whether or not there is a future for federal housing efforts. It's that simple," he said.

HUD spokesman Bob Nipp said the administration has taken no position on Gonzalez's bill. He said the administration has done more than ever before for those who need housing.

"We recognize that there has been a housing problem in this country that goes back many, many years," he said. "At the same time, we have been providing housing assistance to more families than ever. In fiscal 1981, when this administration came into office, HUD was assisting 2.3 million families with housing. Now it has risen to approximately four million."

Gonzalez said under the Reagan administration, the number of new government housing units or vouchers for housing dropped from 675,000 to 84,000. There are 5,000 authorized for 1985, Gonzalez said.

Gonzalez blamed the administration for a federal deficit he said keeps interest rates high and threatens a housing industry slowdown.

Gonzalez said his proposed legislation would increase federally assisted production of housing from the present level of 175,000 units to about 280,000, establish a homeownership program for moderate-income people, increase the weatherization program, and double the emergency shelter program for the homeless.

Disturbance reported at women's prison

GATESVILLE (AP) — Texas prison Director Raymond Procunier broke up a protest at a women's prison shortly after Christmas by pushing his way through a barricade, a spokesman says.

Procunier shoved open a door blocked by furniture and ordered prisoners to clean up the barricade Dec. 28, Phil Guthrie, spokesman for the Texas Department of Corrections, said Tuesday.

Jeanette Boudreau, acting warden of the Mountain View unit near Gatesville, was "told to take a few days off" because Procunier "was not entirely satisfied" with her communication with inmates after between 10 and 15 inmates sealed themselves inside a dormitory, Guthrie said.

Guthrie said the women were upset about rumored changes in some privileges.

Spelunker Rob Parker inspects a 25-foot-tall crystalline white stalagmite in the upper level formation gallery of the Huautla De Jimenez cave. The cavers spent 23 days in the cave, advancing to a point almost three miles from the cave's entrance.

Deep divers

HUAUTLA DE JIMENEZ, Mexico — A multi-national team of speleologists using untried underground camping techniques and exotic diving equipment has found a labyrinth of tunnels the explorers believe will lead to the world's deepest known cave.

The discovery came during a recent three-month expedition to the jungles of the Mexican state of Oaxaca.

To probe the previously uncharted Cueva de la Pena Colorada (Cave of the Colored Wall), the explorers from the United States, Mexico and England carried scuba diving gear to swim through submerged tunnels that repeatedly interrupted dry, air-filled passages.

Using powerful dive lights which were specially designed, the speleologists — who prefer to be called "cavers" — navigated more than 5,000 feet of underwater tunnels as big as 50 feet in diameter.

In between the submerged passages, called "sumps," the explorers mapped nearly four miles of giant hallways while moving tons of diving gear, ropes, lights, food and camping equipment across lakes, along steep rockfalls and up and down shafts hundreds of feet deep.

The cavers spent 23 days in two underground camps, probing dead ends and large chambers hundreds of feet high and reaching a point nearly three miles from the cave's entrance. In the sumps the cavers often groped along thin nylon safety lines in zero-visibility conditions when the waters clouded up with silt.

"It was the most technically difficult cave exploration project yet undertaken," says expedition leader Bill Stone, 31, of Derwood, Md. "This was the borderline. Nobody is going to be using these advanced caving techniques for the next 10 years."

It was the first such exploration that required all team members to be proficient cave divers, Stone says. It also was the first time a caving team established long-duration underground camps beyond flooded passages.

Despite the complicated logistics and danger, there were no major mishaps.

"We did over 600 cave dives and there was not one failure that would be considered serious," Stone says.

The trip was not without bad moments, however. Stone's wife, Pat, says that during one trip through a 600-foot-long sump, her air supply suddenly stopped.

"My tank bumped the ceiling and it turned off my air," she says. She escaped by "buddy-breathing" with her diving partner.

Most of the diving apparatus was based on recommendations from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration Crew Systems Division in Houston.

Dr. John Zumrick, assistant medical officer for the U.S. Navy Experimental Diving Unit in Panama City, Fla., coordinated the design.

The Explorers Club of New York was the expedition's primary sponsor.

The cavers had hoped to connect their discovery to the previously known Huautla Cave System about six miles away. But survey data showed they fell 3½ miles short of their goal.

A link with the Huautla system would have made a cave dozens of miles long, with a world depth record of more than 5,100 feet when measuring from the cave's highest to lowest elevations, Stone says.

The National Speleological Society based in Huntsville, Ala., lists the world's deepest cave as the 5,035-foot-deep Reseau Jean-Bernard in France.

The Huautla Cave System had been explored to a depth of 4,100 feet — the world's fifth deepest — in 1980 following a 15-year effort in which explorers using thousands of feet of rope gradually followed the cave down shaft after inky shaft through a powerful underground river to a terminal sump.

In 1981, Stone dove 940 feet horizontally into the sump to the safe limit of his compact air supply. The sump continued deep and dark beyond the beams of his dive lights.

That same year, Stone and his wife discovered the Cueva de la Pena Colorada while searching for cave entrances on the jungle-choked surface. Stone vowed to demonstrate that the Huautla system waters flowed into the newly discovered cave.

The latest expedition was stopped by Sump 7 in Cueva de la Pena Colorada. To enter Sump 7, the cavers had to don full diving gear in Camp 2 and then rappel on rope 190 feet straight down a large shaft. Sump 7 then plunged down another 140 feet underwater before leveling off in a big flood passage.

Noel Sloan, a spelunker or caver, swims one of the many lakes beyond a "sump," or submerged passage, in a giant cave under exploration near Huautla De Jimenez, Mexico. Full scuba diving gear had to be used to swim through the tunnels, which often blocked the cavers' progress down dry, air-filled passages.

Spelunkers Bob Jeffreys, left, and John Zumrick gingerly move some of the cave exploration equipment through miles of difficult passages. Almost three tons of gear had to be moved as the explorers continued their three-month adventure.

Lawmakers' families attend opening session

AUSTIN (AP) — Missing school is frowned upon by parents but an exception was made when lawmakers' children attended the opening ceremonies of the 69th Texas Legislature.

Erin McClendan, 12, of Houston found Tuesday's ceremonies as interesting as a day's worth of school.

"It was very educational," Erin, a seventh grader from Ruby Sue Clifton Middle School in Houston, said after the House and Senate had adjourned for the day. "I plan to come again and just listen."

Erin, niece of Rep. Harold Dutton, D-Houston, said she hadn't told any of her school friends she was going to the Capitol, but she took plenty of pictures as proof of her attendance.

"I'm going to tell them they should come and listen and see how neat it is," she said.

For others among the 100 children in attendance the ceremonies were all but interesting.

Patricia Emmett, 7-week-old daughter of Rep. Ed Emmett, R-Kingwood, was one of the youngest guests. She napped during the ceremonies.

Emmett's son Robert, 2, amused himself by mimicking his father during the swearing-in process and applauded after the speeches as did many other children.

Adrienne Emmett, 8, said she didn't mind traveling to Austin to join her father rather than staying home with third-grade classmates.

"It's alright. It (school) doesn't matter to me anyway," she said.

For Alana Edwards, Tuesday had extra meaning beyond the swearing in of her father, Rep. Al Edwards, D-Houston, for his fourth term. She celebrated her third birthday, and her party was to consist of a reception for her father at an Austin hotel.

Rep. Ed Emmett, R-Kingswood, and his son Robert, 2, applaud a speaker during opening day of the 69th Legislature.

Amee Renee Thompson, 3, of Tyler, came armed with a teddy bear as she watched the swearing in of her grandfather, Rep. Gary Thompson, D-Abilene.

Five-year-old John Hackney fidgeted through his third opening session with his father Rep. Clint Hackney, D-Houston. His little sister, Jennifer, 20 months, also attended. Hackney said he opted not to bring his 5-week-old daughter.

"She would have been easier to handle than this one," he laughed as Jennifer waved to the crowd which filled the House chamber. "She wanted to applaud after every speaker."

Parker: Charges teach him meaning of friends

AUSTIN (AP) — Sen. Carl Parker, indicted four months ago on felony criminal charges that later were dismissed, says the charges dried up his law practice, put him $200,000 in debt and taught him the meaning of true friends.

Parker, D-Port Arthur, talked about an ordeal he compared to "incurable cancer" minutes before being sworn in Tuesday for another legislative term.

The 50-year-old lawmaker said he never doubted that he would return to the Legislature.

Parker was indicted on Sept. 11 by a Jefferson County grand jury on felony charges of aggravated promotion of prostitution, wholesale promotion of obscene material and aggravated perjury.

Visiting State District Judge Perry Pickett, Midland, dismissed the indictments Nov. 14, a week after Parker was re-elected without opposition. The judge said evidence presented at a pretrial hearing indicated some grand jurors may have been biased.

But Parker's problems are not over. A new grand jury in Beaumont on Tuesday began hearing evidence against him.

"Oh, God, it was awful. It's kind of like somebody telling you you've got incurable cancer," Parker said of the original indictments.

"My daughters cried, my son got mad, and (Parker's wife) Beverly...I'm sure she's just overwhelmed by it."

Asked how people responded to the indictments, he said, "Well, it was more than I had hoped for, better than I had hoped for. You never know when you're charged with a heinous thing how people will react."

On the first Sunday after his indictment, Parker attended church at Memorial Baptist in Port Arthur. He recalled that former state Rep. Otis Lee stood up at the close of the service "and said he had known me since I was a boy, and he was standing in support of me, and other members that felt the same way he did should stand, too.

"Everybody in that church stood up," Parker said.

He said within a week he got 500 to 600 favorable telephone calls from all over the state and about 250 to 300 letters of support.

Local lawyers started a fund to pay Parker's legal fees and raised "substantial money," he said.

Parker said he only received "one nasty letter — from Lubbock," and "one crank phone call from a county that wasn't even in my district."

In winning re-election, Parker got 64.3 percent of the Jefferson County vote, but acknowledged the indictments probably cost him support.

"I've gone almost $200,000 in debt to find out and take statements from almost everybody that appeared before that other grand jury, and unless they're swearing to two different statements, there is no evidence of criminal activity against me," Parker said.

He said he had been accustomed to getting new law business from a half dozen clients a day, but after the indictments, "Just overnight, it was kind of lonesome around the office. Nobody was coming in."

Reflecting on how the indictments had changed his life, Parker recalled that "somebody said it was a blessing in disguise. What a disguise.

"Oh, there are some blessings. The blessings are that you find out there are some people who truly care about you, and it makes you stop...and think what's really important and what's not....Like watching your son grow up and having the respect of your friends, your true friends."

Restaurants expect boom with lawmakers back in town

AUSTIN (AP) — The Legislature returned to town Tuesday, and restaurateur Nick Kralj was smiling.

"I don't wish the state any bad luck. But generally when the state of Texas is short of money it means I'll have lots of money," joked Kralj, who oversees the Quorum, a favored watering hole of lawmakers.

Even before the legislators started their business at noon, Kralj already was entertaining the prospect of a deadlocked Legislature, which has 140 days to balance a budget and complete its work.

He is considering the possibility that legislators may have to return to Austin for a special session during the summer.

"If they have to stay over, it will mean a good July and August as well," Kralj predicted.

The restaurateur promised to provide free taxi service for his patrons "so no one has an accident" or gets his name in the newspapers.

The 140-day legislative session — with its influx of lawmakers, staff, lobbyists and others — is a windfall for Austin restaurants, hotels and other businesses that cater to the crowd.

W.H. "Buckshot" Price, executive vice president of the Texas Restaurant Association, said the session "helps the whole economy and the whole industry."

He estimated that the restaurant business in Austin increases about 15 percent during the session; more for restaurants in the downtown area around the Capitol.

The Chamber of Commerce estimates that the session will pour $37 million into the Austin economy.

"Our business takes a significant jump beginning this week," said Chris Bush, general manager of the newly renovated Driskill Hotel, located a few blocks from the Capitol. "I'd estimate our business increases about 30 percent during the session."

Robots to be used as prison guards

BOSTON (AP) — Faceless robots manufactured in Woburn are headed for a firm in Texas and ultimate use as prison guards.

Denning Mobile Robotics announced Tuesday that it had secured a $23 million to $30 million contract to supply Southern Steel Corp. of San Antonio with 680 Sentry robots, The Boston Herald said today.

Benjamin Wellington, vice president of Denning, said Southern Steel builds and renovates prisons and Sentry robots are an intrinsic part of the firm's new prisons.

The Sentry will be used on routine patrols and possibly in dangerous encounters with prisoners, he said.

BEFORE YOU BUY A GERMAN IMPORT, TAKE A LOOK AT THE IMPORT GERMANS LIKE BEST.

Every year, West Germany's leading automotive journal, Auto Motor und Sport, invites its readers to vote for the world's best cars.

For each of the last three years, they've named the Saab 900 Turbo "the best imported car . . . under 2,500 cc." Each year, Saab's margin over the nearest competitor has been enormous.

We're deeply gratified at such high praise from drivers who constantly deal with high-speed autobahns, alpine switchbacks and $2.00-a-gallon gasoline. And we're pleased to be so highly regarded in a country that produces some of our nearest competitors.

So, if you're considering buying one of the cars that Germany exports, you should have a look first at one of the best cars Germany imports.

BEFORE YOU BUY A GERMAN IMPORT, TAKE A LOOK AT THE IMPORT GERMANS LIKE BEST.

Every year, West Germany's leading automotive journal, Auto Motor und Sport, invites its readers to vote for the world's best cars.

For each of the last three years, they've named the Saab 900 Turbo "the best imported car . . . under 2,500 cc." Each year, Saab's margin over the nearest competitor has been enormous.

We're deeply gratified at such high praise from drivers who constantly deal with high-speed autobahns, alpine switchbacks and $2.00-a-gallon gasoline. And we're pleased to be so highly regarded in a country that produces some of our nearest competitors.

So, if you're considering buying one of the cars that Germany exports, you should have a look first at one of the best cars Germany imports.
