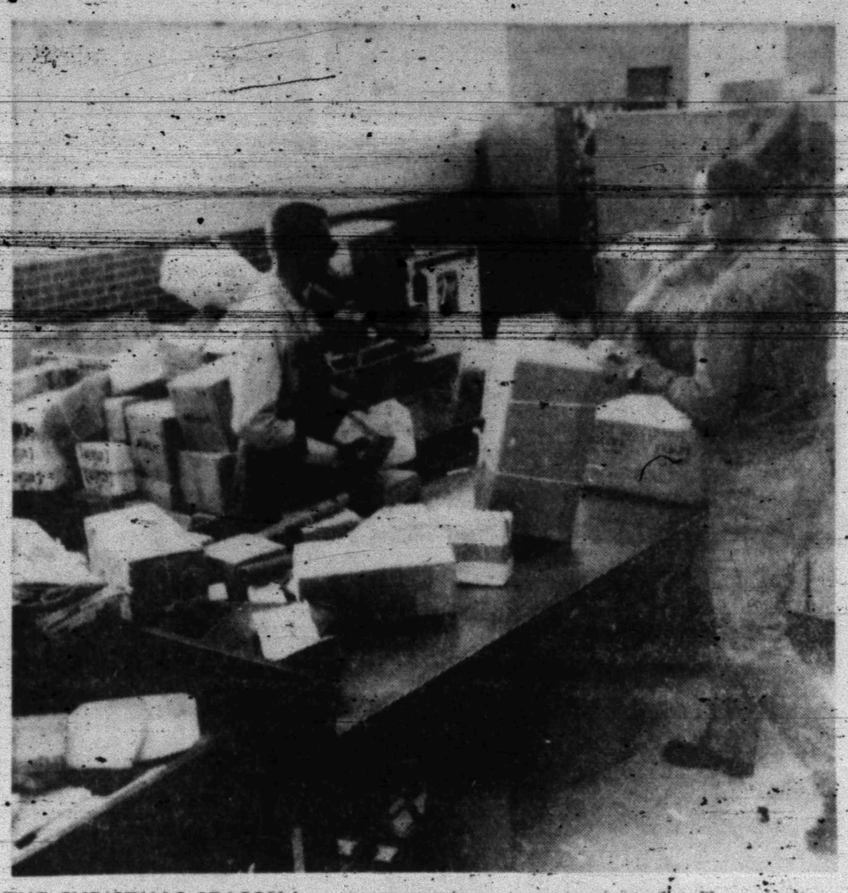
Rep. Ford Plunges Into Battle To Oust Halleck



THE CHRISTMAS SEASON has many meanings to many people. To postal employes one of the signs of Christmas is a mountain of mail. Fred Simpson, right, empties sacks of incoming packages as Horace Aylor sorts and stacks the packages getting ready for the day's deliveries.

Says He Has A Majority

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Gerald R. Ford of Michigan plunged into a contest with Rep. Charles A. Halleck of Indiana for the House minority leadership today with the prediction he will have "a good majority" of the 140 GOP members on his side.

Ford, now chairman of the House Republican Conference, sent a telegram to all other GOP members announcing his candidacy and promising to use all "House Republican talent, enegy and dedication" if elected at a Jan. 4 caucus.

Ford, 51 and a congressman for 16 years, subsequently told a news conference that canvasses of the membership indicate "a good majority will be on our side." He said he has had "an excellent response" to his announcement.

Ford and Halleck, 64, are regarded as equally conservative. But Ford had been pushed forward by a group of House members pressing for a more vigorous image in the House leadership.

In announcing his candidacy, Ford said the issue was not one of party philosophy or policy.

"It is a question of having new, dynamic, bold, innovating leadership," he said. "It is a question of using all of the talent that we have available among Republicans in the House."

Ford said that, if elected, he intends to make each of the 140 Republicans "a first-team player" in the party strategy and policy. He said he would want each member to be a "60-minute man" in playing the game of opposition to the Democrats.

SATURDAY FIRE—The building of the old Jones-Grocery on the Clairemont Road was destroyed by fire Saturday morning in a blaze which was spectacular in the amount of smoke it produced. Elwood Jones, owner of the building was keeping two bird dogs in the building, and the heat lamp which was for their benefit was tentatively blamed for the fire. The dogs surprised firemen by coming out of the burning building apparently unhurt. One was in the smoke, fire, and water-filled building almost an hour before making his escape.

Postal Peak Is Reached

The year's top day in mail dispatched from Snyder was logged last Thursday, and the top day in mail delivered to Snyder is expected to come next Tuesday.

So said Dawson Moreland, Snyder Postmaster. But, he added, he didn't expect the peaks to be quite as sharp, or in other words as much above the average day, as in years past.

It seems that people are finally heeding the Post Office's pleas over the years to "mail early."

As a matter of fact, Moreland said, he expected this year, even though the volume of mail is comparable to that of the last several years, to be the smoothest operation ever had here during the Christmas rush.

The postmaster credited this smooth operation to several things.

One thing he cited was the new Post Office building which aids the postal clerks in making it possible to better arrange their working space, and eliminates lost time.

Most of all Moreland had high praise for the mail handlers. The majority have several years experience, and are putting this experience to good use, he added.

Both Moreland and J. P. Pitner, Jr., chief dispatcher, agree that the use of ZIP codes also was helping this year.

The letters "ZIP" stand for Zone Improvement Program. Many people have the feeling that the old zone system is no longer in effect, but this is not true. ZIP coding is actually an extension of the old zone system for cities.

It used to be, under the old system (such as "Dallas, 0") that only 53 cities in the country benefited from the system. Now 268 cities benefit from zone coding.

For example, Dallas now has its own number — the first three numbers of its ZIP code. The last two numbers of a Dallas ZIP code are the zone numbers within Dallas.

Snyder's first three ZIP code digits are 795. This is the number of the sectional center in Abilene. The last two numbers — 49 — are Snyder's own.

There are 22 of the regional centers.

The use of ZIP codes, Pitner said, is speeding the handling of mail more than he thought possible when the system was announced. He said that when people realize how much help the ZIP codes are, not only to the Post Office personnel, but the mail users as well, they will be glad to conform to the new system.

As a matter of fact, the Post Office is prohibited from accepting any parcel post packages without the ZIP code on the address. A person can usually save time, if he does not know the ZIP code, to call the Post Office and have the ZIP code already on the package before coming to the Post Office. Postal employes are glad to give the information.

Concerning the ZIP codes, Postmaster Moreland said that going to the five - digit ZIP codes was as much of a forward step as when the telephone company went from the central operator to the five-digit dialing system.

Unless something drastic happens, Moreland said, he expects the office to deliver all mail they have received by Christmas Eve. No mail deliveries except Special Delivery will be made on Christmas Day.

Moreland reiterated his praise of both the postal employes here, and the citizens who use this office, and thanked all for their help during this rush Christmas season. Christmas is never an easy time for the Post Office, he said, but with the help of customers and employes, this Christmas should be the smoothest in Snyder in recent years.

Decoration Contest Is Underway

The Snyder Jaycees have reminded the citizens of Snyder that noon Tuesday is the deadline for entering the Christmas Decoration Contest.

Judging of the entries will be done between Tuesday evening and Christmas night.

The contest this year is limited to residences, and those entering may enter in either of two divisions.

One division is for doors and windows decorated with religious themes; the other is for general outdoor lighting.

Prizes for the religious theme decorations are a $25 savings bond for first place, $15 cash for second, and $10 for third.

In the outdoor lighting contest, first prize is an electric yard light, installed; second prize, a teflon lined Presto griddle; and third prize, an electric clock.

Entries can be mailed to Box 662, or may be called in to the Chamber of Commerce office.

Local Banks Up Interest On Savings

Both Snyder banks have announced an increase in interest rates they will pay on savings accounts.

Both the Snyder National Bank and the West Texas State Bank will pay interest at the rate of four per cent on pass book savings accounts, effective Jan. 1, 1965.

The announcements came from the respective presidents of the two banks, J. W. Cargile at West Texas State Bank and Roger Mize at Snyder National Bank.

The new rates represent an increase of ½ per cent over the old rate of 3½ per cent the banks have been paying on savings accounts.

Boards of directors of the respective banks had authorized the increase at meetings Friday.

Williamson Rites Pend

Funeral services are pending at Bolger Funeral Home for Kenneth Ray Williamson, 31.

Mr. Williamson's body was discovered at about 6 p.m. Friday on the family's farm nine miles west of Snyder.

Justice of the Peace Cone Merritt said that the body was found in a late model stationwagon, with a hose leading from the exhaust pipe into the rear window of the vehicle. Merritt ruled that the death was from asphyxiation and was self - inflicted. Time of death was set at about 5 p.m.

The body was found by Dawson Moreland, the victim's uncle, when he went to the farm to feed some stock.

Mr. Williamson, who had been released recently from a Dallas hospital, had been visiting in Snyder since Monday. He was employed by the Amarillo office of a finance company.

Mr. Williamson is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Williamson of Snyder; his wife, Kay Birdsall Williamson; two daughters, Kelly and Valerie; one son, Sky; two sisters, Barbara Williamson and Sherry Williamson, both of Snyder; and one brother, Tim D. Williamson of Snyder; and his maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Taylor of Snyder.

AF Tanker Plane Falls

STEPHENVILLE, Nfld. (AP) — A U.S. Air Force refueling plane crashed while landing at the Ernest Harmon Base here early today, killing all five crewmen aboard.

A base spokesman said the KC97 tanker, stationed at the Strategic Air Command base, was returning from a refueling flight when it crashed at 2:30 a.m. about 200 yards from the runway, and submerged in a pond.

Names of the crew members were not made public.

The spokesman said that at the time of the crash light snow was being blown over the area by high winds.

Ice Is Hazard On Texas Roads

By The Associated Press

A deadly sheathe of ice, deposited by a mixutre of freezing rain and intermittent sleet, made travel hazardous over most of the northern half of Texas this morning.

Bridges and overpasses glazed in particular as light rain fell and temperatures sagged throughout the night.

Perilous patches of ice were blamed for at least six deaths in automobile accidents over the state since Friday.

Temperatures failed to drop quite as low in the Panhandle where the mercury dived to around zero the past two days, but sub-freezing weather embraced all of Texas except the immediate coast and the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

Readings shortly before daylight ranged down to 16 degrees at Dalhart in the upper Panhandle.

There was freezing drizzle at various time from El Paso and Lubbock eastward to Tyler, Longview and Texarkana, and the icing extended northward into Oklahoma.

State police reported patches of roadway and bridges or overpasses were dangerous over a wide area but all routes were open.

One of the worst traffic accidents occurred near the North Dallas suburb of Garland, where three young people died as their small foreign car burst into flames after colliding with a station wagon on an icy bridge.

Victims of the Garland accident were James D. Radcliffe, 19, and David O. Foster, 16, both of Dallas, and Andrea Mae Peters, 7, of Garland.

Also killed in accidents laid to icing were William Beth, 47, Rt. 2, Lewisville, whose car skidded across the road in front of another at Carrollton, another Dallas suburb; Jessie L. Elmore of Dallas, in a head-on crash at the outskirts of Cleburne, and James R. Dillard, 21, of Mission, as his car overturned near Mission.

There were prospects for at least a temporary easing of the siege of bitter cold weather.

Forecasts promised somewhat higher temperatures tonight and Sunday in all sections, but sub-freezing marks were expected in northern areas of the state.

And now it's Christmas Week. In just a few days, all of the efforts of the Goodfellows will be over, and everyone who has had a part in the effort this year will feel a little better on Christmas Day.

It's not too late to help. Donations are still very welcome, and can be mailed to Box 661.

Something else that the Goodfellows will welcome is help in packing boxes and sorting the donations of food, clothing, and toys.

The more one helps, the better one will feel on Christmas Day.

AN ARROWHEAD HUNT yielded a rare find for Belinda and Barbara Langford, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Langford, Rt. 1. Found close to some arrowheads on the Fred Miller-Ranch, just across the Scurry line in Borden County, was this 45-70 Springfield single shot center-fire cartridge. It looks much like the rim-fire cartridge used in 1873 model Springfield and the 1876 Winchester rifle. Using 405 grains of black powder, the bullet was fired from both single-shot and repeating rifles, and is the same type as used by the cavalry at Custer's last stand.

Dear Abby...

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband died in 1951 and he left in excess of $700,000, and I was cheated out of every dime of it. None of the lawyers in this town will touch my case with a ten-foot pole. My husband had liver trouble. He was operated on for it, and his doctor told me himself that the operation was successful, but in nine days my husband was dead! I refused to pay the bill because that doctor had lied to me. When my husband's will was read I was cut out of it except for a few dollars I was supposed to live on. When I protested, they tried to prove that I was crazy. They are still trying to prove it. His sisters got everything. THEY are the crazy ones. Money crazy! Can you help me get out of here?

CHEATED

DEAR CHEATED: Where are you?

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I have been going with this boy for two years and we recently became engaged. He suddenly was notified that he has an opportunity to go to West Point. I knew he always wanted a military career, but I never thought he'd get an appointment to West Point. If he goes, it means we can't get married for four years. I plan to go to college, and the thought of my sitting in the dorm for four years does not appeal to me. I love him, Abby, but I don't know whether to let him accept this appointment or not. I am 19 and he is 20. This is quite a shock to me as it wasn't in our plans. I would like some advice about what to do.

UPSET

DEAR UPSET: If you really loved him, you'd not only "let" him accept the appointment, you'd encourage him, knowing that he always wanted an Army career. Your chief concern seems to be the unhappy prospect of "sitting in the dorm for four years." A career man's wife needs more understanding than you appear to have. Level with him. And ask him to level with you. I think you could both probably do better in the choice of lifetime partners.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I just found out that my girl friend kept a diary of our dates and she wrote a bunch of stuff in it that never happened. It was all out of her imagination. Her mother read it and now she refuses to let me date her. Abby, we never did anything wrong. What can I do?

NOT GUILTY

DEAR NOT GUILTY: Proclaim your innocence and hope her mother believes you. And next time you become interested in a girl who goes in for creative writing, suggest she use an outlet other than her diary for her talents.

CONFIDENTIAL TO BERNIE: The biggest problem in the world could have been solved when it was small.

COMPLETED LAST WEEK and described as a "dandy" was this water well just east of the old Plainview School in northeast Scurry County. Claude McCormick, owner of the land, and John Zalman, Jr., operator of the farm, look with pleasure on the 400-gallon-per-minute flow. Drilled by James Bissey of Lamesa, the well's depth is 436 feet. A 12-inch casing was set in the 15-inch hole. The water, incidentally, felt quite warm.

Duke Past Crucial Hour In Hospital

HOUSTON (AP) — The Duke of Windsor has passed his crucial 48-hour post-operative period in excellent condition.

The former British monarch took his first steps Friday after a 67-minute abdominal operation Wednesday.

He sat on the edge of his bed and then with the aid of nurses walked to a chair. A Methodist Hospital spokesman said he later got out of bed several more times.

The duke had asked permission to smoke a cigarette, but the doctors said no in view of the seriousness of his operation.

The duke did, however, sip tea, juices and soup. He also continued to be fed intravenously.

Post - operative laboratory tests, including detailed blood phemistries, were performed. The chemical makeup of the blood has to be watched closely after an arterial operation such as the duke underwent, a hospital spokesman said.

Dr. Michael DeBakey removed a blister from the duke's aorta and replaced the blistered vessel with a synthetic tube about four inches long.

The blister, known medically as an aneurysm, was the size of a large grapefruit, Dr. DeBakey said.

The duke had known of the aneurysm for four years, but Dr. DeBakey said it had increased in size considerably in recent months.

THIRTY YEARS of service with the Telephone Company in Snyder were recognized at an office party Thursday as Mrs. Jewel Newby, assistant chief operator, reached that mark. Jack Lanning, District Traffic Superintendent from Abilene is shown presenting an award bracelet. When Mrs. Newby started work here the office was over Stinson Drug, and the five-position board room for five operators handled about 300 calls, both local and toll calls per day. The office now handles about 1,400 toll calls alone each day.

Pvt. Hardin Ends Basic

Marine Private Jackie L. Hardin, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Hardin of 3111 Avenue X, has completed recruit training at the Marine Corps Recruit Depot, San Diego, Calif.

Marine recruits undergo more than 100 hours of physical conditioning, spend more than 80 hours learning how to drill, and devote 3 weeks to rifle and pistol marksmenship in their 11-week training program.

Several hours are devoted to spiritual and character-building courses. Production of good basic Marines and responsible patriotic citizens are the two primary objectives of the program.

In the physical training, the recruits run, lift logs, climb ropes, conquer 3 different obstacle courses, progress through a variety of body - building exercises, swim and participate in organized games. To measure their progress they take four strength measuring tests.

Esprit de corps, teamwork and discipline are products of drill instruction.

Following graduation, he will report to Camp Pendleton, Calif. for advanced infantry training.

Heart Unit Eyes Annual Campaign

A general discussion of plans for next February's annual Heart Fund campaign was the main order of business of the Scurry County Heart Association at its regular monthly meeting Wednesday. The drive will reach its high point with the house-to-house solicitation on Heart Sunday, Feb. 21. Other events under discussion were the annual bowling and golf tournaments and Heart Coffee Day.

The group also discussed plans for the annual Heart Research Day program. It was noted that a request for a speaker has been submitted to the Texas Heart Association. Because all of the past speakers for this event has been heart surgeons, it is planned to present a speaker who will be qualified to discuss subjects other than the surgical aspects of cardiovascular disease.

Opportunities for education and community service were also discussed by the local heart association. Persons wishing to make memorial gifts to the heart fund should address them to Scurry County Heart Association, Route 1 Box 207, Snyder, or call HI 3-3668, and an acknowledgement will be promptly sent to the designated party.

Doug Flynn, treasurer, noted that the public continues to respond generously to the memorial gifts program of the heart association. Persons wishing to thought to be needed and which will probably be presented here after the first of the year are a nurses' heart seminar and a program on the theme of "heart disease and the farmer and the rancher." In addition, because of the good response by area doctors to last summer's cardiovascular case conference, another such event is being considered for next year.

Because barnacles grow tough limy shells, zoologists long classified them as mollusks, along with clams and oysters. Actually barnacles are crustaceans and related to shrimps and crabs.

Snyder Wins Over Winters

BROWNWOOD — The Snyder Tigers continued their winning ways Friday evening by trouncing the Winters Blizzards, 60-42 in the first round of the Brownwood Tournament. Snyder was scheduled to meet Breckenridge at noon Saturday in the semi-finals. The winner of that contest was to vie for the championship Saturday night with the winner of the Brownwood-Comanche contest. The two losers were to meet in a battle for third place.

The victory over Winters was the tenth of the year for Coach Ned Underwood's cagers against only one defeat. The one loss was at the hands of the Seminole Yellowjackets, but the Tigers avenged that by winning over Seminole in a later meeting.

The Tigers jumped off to a 13-9 first quarter lead over Winters, and led the rest of the way. They were on top 35-18 at halftime, and 48-26 at the end of three quarters. The Tigers had a torrid first half in which they hit 16 of 25 shots from the field for 64 per cent. They cooled off during the second half, hitting on 8 of 25 for 32 per cent during the 2nd half.

The Tigers out-rebounded Winters 39-30. Leading the Snyder rebounders were Leslie Anderson with 7 and Leslie Brown who pulled in six. Phillip Floyd and Steve Crowell gathered in 5 each.

A total of 9 Tigers hit the scoring column. Anderson and Drew Bullard led in scoring with 15 points each. Third man was Crowell, who had 8 points. Puckett led the scoring for Winters with 13.

Baylor Loses First Cage Encounter

By The Associated Press

Baylor lost its first game of the season to powerful Vanderbilt in Tennessee Friday night while Texas evened its season record by defeating Nebraska in a home stand at Austin.

They were the only Southwest Conference teams in action.

The Baylor Bears, playing in the Vanderbilt Invitation Tournament at Nashville, proved no match for the ninth - ranked Commodores and bowed 97-78.

Baylor, which had averaged more than 100 points in winning five straight games, dropped behind after nine minutes and couldn't keep the pace. Vandy led 53-34 at halftime.

Spencer Carlson led the Bears with 24 points, the same as the Commodores' Clyde Lee.

Texas protected a narrow lead the last 10 minutes and won 77-73 despite a 33-point outburst by Nebraska sophomore Fred Hare. Texas was ahead 45-38 at halftime, lost the lead four times and was tied four times.

Paul Olivier scored 19 points for the Longhorns, who now have three victories and three defeats.

Texas entertains Nebraska again tonight and Baylor plays Florida State in a consolation game at Nashville.

Big Crowd Sees Bouts

A large crowd turned out for the Scurry County Boys' Club first regular Friday night Boxing program. Bad weather cancelled the Boys' Clubbers' main team from competing with boxers from Sweetwater and Abilene.

Results of the intramural Boxing for Fun program were as follows:

Ronnie Arguijo and Ray Arguijo a pair of 35 pounders fought to a draw. Most every bout was close with plenty of action as the judges Howard Jones, Buster Anderson, and Ed. Corracan called eight of the 17 non-exhibition bouts draw or split decisions. Boys winning by split decision were: David Lindsey over Mike Lindsey, Rudy Arguijo over Jackie Lambert, Joe Martinez over Johnnie Alacron, Robert Martinez over Felix Martinez, Pauncho Costello over Bruce Ehard, Rickey Rios over Allen Young, and Johnny Alvarez over Floyd Jackson.

Boys winning unanimous decisions were Johnny Quiros over LeRoy Childress, Junior Rios over Manuel Campos, Kerry Clay over Max Rainwater, Roy Arguijo over Fred Everton, Luiz Garcia over Art Puente, Bob Arguijo over Tommy Clayton Pedro Martinez over Tony Molina, Frank Rodriguez over Juan Molina, and Paul Torrez over Mike Freeman.

Refereeing was Boys' Club president Bill Butler, and time keeper was Forrest Young.

Football Coach Woody Hayes started the 1964 season with a record of 60 victories, 19 defeats and six ties at Ohio State.

Palacios Wins Schoolboy Title

AUSTIN (AP) — Palacios, a team so strong it could lose the ball six times on fumbles and still win the game, boasts the state Class AA schoolboy football championship.

A powerful ground attack spearheaded by Jerry Haynes and directed by versatile Robbie Shelton, plus brick wall defense in which Shelton also was the leader, toppled Marlin 12-0 Friday night for Palacios' first championship.

Marlin threatened to score only once and then lost the ball on a fumble to the irrepressible Shelton.

Playing in 29-degree weather that caused a dozen fumbles and numerous dropped passes, the two teams battled as if they were playing on the beaches of Palacios by the sea.

Palacios actually won the game on Marlin's third play from scrimmage. Ricky Conrad intercepted Dickey Severson's pass on the Marlin 28 and scatted to a touchdown.

In the second period Shelton ran and passed Palacios to its second score. It came on a 4-yard pass from Shelton to Conrad.

Marlin managed to reach the Palacios 4-yard line on the passing of Severson and running of Steve Palacios in the third period but Larry Lawless fumbled and Shelton dropped on the ball.

Marlin got the chance when Conrad fumbled a kickoff and the Bulldogs recovered on the Palacios 39.

Hayes, a 164-pound Negro who ran the 100 in 10 flat, led the ground gainers with 99 yards but none of his running figured in Palacios scores.

Houston Astros Ink Two Bonus Pitchers

HOUSTON A(P) — Two young right-handed pitchers have been signed to 1965 bonus contracts by the Houston Astros, General Manager Paul Richards announced Saturday.

The two players, both 18, are Roric Harrison, a 6-3, 190-pounder from Westchester, Calif., and Steve Sumner, a 6-3, 200-pounder from Dallas.

Palestine Wins State Playoff

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Thanks to mighty Bill Bradley and a steel - toothed pass defense, Palestine is Class AAA state schoolboy football champion.

The Wildcats intercepted six San Marcos passes and Bradley knew what to do with them as the East Texas school beat the stubborn Rattlers 24-15 Friday.

It was a great triumph for Palestine, which has been in the playoffs four times but for the first time won a playoff game.

Bradley intercepted three of the San Marcos tosses himself, one setting up a touchdown. Three other interceptions also led to scores with Bradley passing for two touchdowns, running for one and piloting the team expertly on the drive that got the fourth.

Fox Goodwine of San Marcos couldn't be stopped on the ground by the Palestine defense as he ran around the ends for 71 yards, but his passing left much to be desired.

Baugh Resigns As Oiler Coach

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Sammy Baugh has quit as head football coach of the Houston Oilers to spend more time on his West Texas ranch because "I'm happier there."

Baugh's successor will be the fifth head coach in six seasons for the American Football League entry — a turnover unmatched in pro football.

The Houston Post said his successor was expected to be Hugh (Bones) Taylor, Oiler backfield coach. The Post also said Lou Rymkus, former Oiler head coach, would be retained as an offensive line coach.

Taylor, 41, one of the National Football League's all-time great pass receivers, said "I have not discussed the coaching situation with Oiler officials. But, he indicated he would like to have the job.

Taylor played for nine years with the Washington Redskins, and during that time was the favorite target of Baugh's passes. He also was assistant coach under Baugh in 1960 with the New York Titans.

Baugh said he would like to stay on as an assistant, and K. C. (Bud) Adams Jr., Oiler president, indicated he might grant the wish.

Baugh, 50, had insisted that running his 6,355-acre ranch interfered with his duties as head coach.

The former Texas Christian University and Red Skin passing star quit after signing a new one - year contract only two months ago.

The Hall of Fame quarterback compiled a 3-10 record, worst showing since the club was founded, with the season finale against Denver to be played Sunday.

"The head coaching job," Baugh said, "takes up a lot of time in the off-season, time that I'm not willing to give. So I asked Bud to get another head coach.

"I'd like to have a backfield job someplace. But I feel like I'd be cheating the Oilers if I remained as head coach."

Water May Be 'Burned' To Give Abundant Electricity

A new technique that may help hasten the day when water can be "burned" is an atomic furnace to assure the world of abundant electricity for a billion years to come has been developed by scientists associated with the Texas Electric Service Company in a search for the key to controlled fusion.

The latest progress in the world's first and largest privately - financed program of controlled fusion (thermonuclear) research — carried out under joint sponsorship of the Texas Atomic Energy Research Foundation — was shown to Texas newspapermen during a visit to the laboratories of General Atomic Division, General Dynamics Corporation, in San Diego, Calif.

The Foundation is made up of the Texas Electric Service company and nine other investor - owned electric utilities serving the state of Texas.

The new technique, which was demonstrated to the Texas press representatives, is nicknamed the "shot-gun method" by the scientists. It involves a unique means of producing ultra-hot deuterium gas — the fuel for nuclear fusion — and injecting it into containers called "Magnetic bottles."

Attending the press tour were Herbert Feather, Publisher of The Snyder Daily News, and Bill Brown, District Manager for Texas Electric Service Company's Sweetwater District.

The scientists of the joint research program of General Atomic and the Texas Foundation are seeking to reproduce on earth, for the ultimate generation of electric power, the energy - making process that has been going on for billions of years in the sun and stars, and without which there could be no life on earth.

The sun derives its energy from a fusing of the nuceli of hydrogen atoms, at a temperature of about 36-million degrees F. The sun's fuel is in the form of a hot and turbulent gas, in an ionized (electrically charged) state known as plasma. Actually, 90 percent of the universe is in the plasma state, which is sometimes referred to as the fourth estate of matter. A familiar practical application of plasma at very low, non-fusion temperatures is the illuminated gas in neon signs and flourescent lights.

Thus far, man has succeeded only in bringing about an instantaneous, uncontrolled release of fusion energy — in the hydrogen bomb.

To bring about a controlled and self - sustaining fusion reaction on earth, with a steady release of energy, the scientists must create conditions which do not exist in nature. For example, they must somehow find a way to bring hydrogen plasma to temperatures several times hotter than the center of the sun in order to compensate for the sun's enormous mass and its pressures 400 - billion times greater than in our atmosphere.

If, however, the scientists can find the key to igniting and sustaining the fusion reaction — and if they can then design a power plant that will economically utilize this tremendous energy—man will have no further worries about fuel supplies for millenniums to come.

He will, in effect, be able to "burn water," using as an inexpensive fuel the deuterium (heavy dydrogen) which exists in virtually inexhaustible quantities in all the oceans, rivers and lakes in the ratio of one part to every 6,500 parts of ordinary hydrogen.

The deuterium in just one barrel of water, if used at the same efficiency as modern-day fuels, could supply all the electricity to serve the needs of the average family for 50 years. A glass of water contains a tiny, almost invisible speck of deuterium with enough energy to illuminate a home for several weeks.

Electricity would flow from nuclear power stations, in whose furnaces deuterons — the light nuclei of deuterium — would collide, fuse and give off energy. This is the opposite of the process employed in present day atomic power plants based on the fission process, in which energy is produced from the splitting of the nuceli of heavy elements, such as uranium.

Scientists around the world are engaged in this quest for the big "break-through" in controlled fusion research. It is basic research, at the very frontiers of science, therefore none of the scientists will venture a prediction as to when success will come. The rivalry is intense, though friendly, because the rewards of success would be almost beyond reckoning in terms of man's welfare and progress. In Soviet Russia, for example, controlled fusion research holds a priority second only to space exploration.

But the difficulties, like the potential benefits, also are tremendous.

Simply put, the scientists must find a way of heating plasma to temperatures in the range of 100-million to 400-million degrees, and then holding the plasma in a stable condition — without escaping or scattering and dissipating its energy — for a sufficient time for the self - sustaining fusion reaction to occur.

Holding the plasma at these temperatures for a second might do the job. But thus far, containment has been reckoned in millionths of a second, at temperatures far below the thermonuclear kindling point.

Participates In Training

Electronics Technician Second Class Robert P. Neblett, USN, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Neblett of Route 1, Hermleigh, participated Dec. 9-12 in a large scale fleet training operation in the Western Pacific called "Operation Tail Back" while serving aboard the destroyer USS Taylor.

The exercise, under the direction of the Commander of the Seventh Fleet in the Far East, was designed to increase the readiness of Seventh Fleet units in strike, anti - aircraft and anti - submarine warfare. Twenty - three surface ships, three submarines and several land - based Air Force and Naval air units participated in the exercise.

Two task forces, each with an attack aircraft carrier as its hub, opposed each other.

The operation was conducted to test and evaluate Seventh Fleet units under the most realistic operating conditions.

Many Britons Use Ads For Yule Cards

By EDDY GILMORE

LONDON (AP) — Some Britons have begun placing newspaper advertisements instead of sending Christmas cards, with the money saved going to charities.

A popular spot for the mass circulation yuletide wishes is the personal column of that staid newspaper, the Times.

Some companies even are expressing their yule wishes on the printed pages.

Here's a typical advertisement in the Times' front page personal column: "The British Road Federation is not sending Christmas cards this year. Instead it is making a donation to the Royal Society for the Prevention of Accidents."

Another reads: "Cable and Wireless wish their friends a Merry Christmas and announce that they do not intend to send out company Christmas cards instead they are making a donation to the Missions to Seamen."

Each day a few more persons join in what has come to be known as the Times Christmas card game. The majority appear to be peers and peeresses, retired generals, admirals and judges.

Why do they do it?

"I may be old fashioned and square," said retired Judge Noel Hindley, "but the spirit has gone out of Christmas. If it was a real Christmas we are having I would have gone on sending cards."

The surprise of this season, however, was the Christmas card of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Muir.

A script-writer and author, Muir's card said: "Mr. and Mrs. Frank Muir are not taking an advertisement in the Times this year. Instead they are sending Christmas cards to their friends."

Asked why, Muir replied: "My wife and I grew tired of seeing those stuffy announcements. The people who put in these advertisements need sending up a bit."

Sending up is a British expression for taking down a peg or two.

Monahans Building Damaged By Fire

MONAHANS, Tex. (AP) — Fire which apparently started near the heating system caused heavy damage to the Monahans office building of the Perry R. Bass Oil Co. early today.

An explosion rocked the one-story stucco structure after the flames were discovered, knocking out a 40-foot wall on the north side. The building covers a quarter block.

Several sections of roof collapsed before firemen controlled the blaze. They fought it in 20-degree weather.

STEVEN A. DENNIS
... Peace Corps volunteer

Gail Youth Now In Peace Corps

Steven A. Dennis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wyle Bert Dennis, Box 85, Gail, Texas, is one of 52 Peace Corps Volunteers who left for Panama on Dec. 12. They will participate in an urban and rural community action health project.

They will join approximately 75 Peace Corps Volunteers already at work there in agricultural extension, rural community development and health programs.

Volunteers in urban community development will work with rural farmers and laborers who have come to the cities in search of better job opportunities and living conditions. The Volunteers encourage the Panamanians to identify their community problems, decide how to solve them, and work together toward a solution. Specific projects will include improvement of housing and roads, handicraft instruction, recreation programs, organization of cooperatives, sanitation, school construction, and adult education.

Volunteers working in rural community development will concentrate on the basics of health education and environmental sanitation — construction of latrines and wells, development of uncontaminated water spplies, and better nutrition.

This group studied for 12 weeks at the University of Arizona, Tucson, and participated in three weeks of training at the Peace Corps camp in Puerto Rico. Special emphasis was placed on learning Spanish. Trainees studied the history and culture of Panama, United States history and world affairs. They also received technical and medical instruction and training in how to conduct community development work.

Some 9,000 Americans are now serving as Peace Corps Volunteers in 46 nations of Asia, Africa and Latin America. More Volunteers are needed; requests for them pour into the Washington headquarters daily. Applicants interested in winter or spring training are urged to complete Peace Corps Questionnaires (available at your local post office) and take the Corps' Placement Test, given the second Saturday of each month at approved federal service examinations are held.

LIGHTEST MEXICO

BY JOHN ABNEY

TAXCO, Mexico — the chronicles state that the first tourists to arrive here were a gentleman named Hernan Cortes and his Indian fiancee, Miss Marina. Mr. Cortes came to rest up a spell after whopping the Aztecs and taking over their town named Tenochtitlan, which is now Mexico City.

Like all tourists, they were impressed with the items of silver made by the Indians. Marina visited the sprawling market places, buying silver trinkets and collecting solid silver coins minted by the Indians. Mr. Cortes took to the hills and checked out the mining operations.

Taxco must have been as spectacular then as it is now. It pops into view unexpectedly as you round a curve on the twisting mountain road. Red tile roofs and jutting church spires blanket the steep mountainside.

The narrow cobblestone streets laid by the Spaniards still wind dizzily through town. And many houses are built on three or four levels because of the steep terrain. This is one place where a person can fall out of his back yard while he stands there admiring the sunset.

Historians do not mention how Mr. Cortes and Miss Marina traveled to Taxco. Nor how long it took to make the trip. Maybe there were no hotels in those days and they had to take a back room in the house of the local king.

Today, you make it by car or bus from Mexico City in a couple of hours. And you do not have to sleep with the king because there are plenty of hotels.

The Taxco silver mines, believed to be the oldest in North America, have been worked since the Fifteenth Century. With a time out called during the Mexican revolutionary period.

And after the Spaniards drifted in and took over the place, Operation Silver was stepped up to a bigger production. The King of Spain took his royal fifth and urged the mining gentlemen on to broader horizons. For the blue bloods had mighty heavy expenses in those days.

European and Oriental influences began to appear in the craftsmanship. Probably it was introduced by some imported designers or the locals picked up ideas from cups and spoons brought over by the Spaniards.

Today there are swarms of silversmiths each working for original designs. And they turn out an incredible array of beautifully finished wares ranging from elegant service sets to earrings and ash trays.

The man credited with putting Taxco on the map and training most of its leading designers is William Spratling, an American who wandered into town more than 30 years ago. Spratling still lives here and continues producing some of the world's finest silverware.

But even in Cortes' day, the Indians turned out some startling items that made the top European silversmiths sit up and take notice. And the King of Spain was pleased to find the Taxco products were highly commercial on the European market.

Taxco then was a village of thatched huts sagging on the slopes of the mountains. No restaurants, Cadillacs nor zany tourists in duffits they wouldn't dare wear back home.

Nobody around here has ever gotten excited about things. It is a quiet place equipped with technicolor scenery, big shade trees and a colony of artists. The artists paint when they feel like it. And the silversmiths hammer when they feel like it.

TRAVEL TALK

By Hulin Fowler

EDITOR'S NOTE: Write to Mr. Fowler in care of this newspaper for answers to your travel questions.

* * *

Miami was discovered by Ponce de Leon in 1513, by Eastern tourists in the 1920's and by the Cubans in 1960.

The upshot of these discoveries is that Florida, first in the hands of the Spanish, has gone full circle and is now more inter-American than ever with signs in Spanish and English and bilingual clerks in the hotels and stores.

Florida attracts more than five million tourists each year but don't expect the state to be overcrowded, winter or summer. Miami alone has more than 500 major hotels and new ones are going up every day. The longtime resort city is expensive but bargains can be had. A luxury room costing $40 a day can often be had for $10 during the "off" season.

The state has 8,426 miles of shoreline, which might be expected by tourists who have fled the crowded but beautiful Miami beaches to find picturesque, secluded little coastal towns where they could enjoy an entire shoreline by themselves. Not so well known is that the state is two-thirds forest, most of it in the famed Florida pine.

Miami is a beautiful, shining white and modern resort city with about a million inhabitants, most of these permanent residents. The city, a gateway to the U. S., is known for its luxurious hotels, modern shops and continental restaurants. Most disconcerting to tourist is to find a "quaint" little restaurant one year only to return the next and find it under another name and new ownership. But that is Miami, where high priced real estate changes hands daily.

Miami Beach is geared for tourists, with every imaginable luxury. It has no cemeteries, industry, railroads or airport. It is a long stretch of winter playground where television and stage stars from New York mingle with people from all over the United States and South America, which has long regarded Miami as its foreign resort area.

Side trips from Miami offer the tourist the last remaining vestiges of the oldest white man's civilization in the nation. The Everglades, about 38 miles southwest, are as wild and untamed as in the days when the earliest Indians penetrated the watery wilderness. Although the area has been turned into a national park, parts of it are virtually unexplored and people have gone in never to return.

Florida offers a myraid of sights for lovers of tropical flora and fauna. The Miami Seaquarian on Virginia Key has an extensive variety of all types of fish, as does the Marine Laboratory of the University of Miami. And, at the Monkey Jungle, the spectator is caged, while the monkeys roam free in a natural jungle setting.

One of the highlights of a side trip is a visit to Key West, second oldest city in the state, with its narrow streets and old wooden houses built by its first seafaring residents. Intermingled among the old structures are modern motels and shops, well known for their colorful souvenirs.

"Key West style" food is famous the world over and runs to the exotic, such as turtle steak, green turtle soup, conch chowder, crawfish and lime pie.

For avid fishermen, Florida offers some of the best catches in the world, such as marlin, tuna, sailfish, amberjack, skipjack and barracuda. For those who like the sea but not the fishing, a trip around the Florida Keys, a lovely chain of small islands that sweep in a great curve along the coast, is worth the entire visit.

Though no spot in Florida is further than 100 miles from the sea, it is not a place to be ignored by those who do not care for fishing or water sports. The state has three million acres of public lands where hunters can bag deer and wildcat, as well as turkey, quail, woodcock and snipe.

And now is the right time to visit, with temperatures ranging from a balmy 75 degrees in the day to a cool 64 degrees at night.

That's about as cold as it ever gets in Florida.

TEAMED AS HUSBAND AND WIFE in Universal's zany comedy in Technicolor, "Send Me No Flowers," are Doris Day and Rock Hudson. Their co-stars are Tony Randall and Clint Walker. The picture is coming to the Palace Theater here Wednesday, Dec. 23.

TV Show Brings Dramatic Change To Life Of Actor

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Radio-TV Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Art colors life, it has been alleged. And while some might be reluctant to classify NBC's "Dr. Kildare" series as art, it has colored dramatically the life of the young actor who plays the title role.

"Before Kildare, I was a shy person and had only a few good friends," Richard Chamberlain reflected recently. "I found it impossible to be a hail fellow well met, was uncomfortable at parties and stayed by myself a lot of the time."

Now, to Chamberlain's own surprise and delight, all that has changed.

"Life has suddenly become fascinating," he continued. "I've made some new friends — really interesting people. I've had fun at parties. I've taken some trips that were great fun and gone in for all sorts of activities I'd ignored before."

Chamberlain's entrance into a new, exciting world probably resulted from nothing more complicated than the self-assurance gained in his rapid rise from unknown actor to television star. Along with the mellowing effects of fame, high income and steady employment, there was the natural maturing process.

But for all this change, Chamberlain remains essentially the hard-working, unpretentious performer MGM was looking for when it decided to convert its old movie series to television.

Chamberlain still lives in the same modest bachelor quarters hidden among the Hollywood Hills, still startles the wild life by loping along the trails in running shorts, and still spends each vacation from television acting in motion pictures.

Two summers ago he played a young lawyer in "Twilight of Honor," and last summer, a law student in "Joy in the Morning."

"I think I do more to help myself by working," he explained. "It helps create a more varied personality for Chamberlain, the actor."

And it also helps to break him out of the bind the actor most dreads: type-casting.

"I'd never play a doctor in a movie," he amplified. "Not now."

The current, fourth season of the Kildare series has not been particularly auspicious, with the show suffering from unaccustomed low ratings. This is occasioned by the presence of ABC's comedy hit, "Bewitched," as competition, and by the shift of CBS' "Perry Mason" to a starting time a half hour in advance of the medical drama.

"I can't worry about things like that," Chamberlain said. "I have to worry about my own job. If the series must die, let it. My own problem is to refocus on the character of Kildare.

"When we started out, he was soft-spoken, rather self-righteous and altogether a character which tended to lose impact as we went along."

Chamberlain continued to follow his current line of thinking:

"An actor has only two ways to go. He can polish his technique until he is perfect. Or he can savor life, absorb experience and permit it to color his acting. Ideally, a combination of the two is the right one, but the vital thing to me now is to be a part of the world.

"My own personal change of focus has been so radical and my own sense of participating is now so great, I think I have, perhaps unconsciously, begun to apply this to Kildare."

Besides, he added, the show's writers are deliberately giving the character more maturity and strength; the plots, more flexibility. After all, in three years they had pretty well wrung dry Blair Hospital locations and Blair Hospital diseases.

Chamberlain, who has a pleasant singing voice, has made one album and five single records, but has been seen rarely in television guest shots except for walk-ons to plug his show. In November, he was Bob Hope's guest in a comedy special, appearing in a comedy satire on a TV Western and singing.

"They wouldn't let me do a Hope show or anything else like that until now," he said.

He took a final gulp of his glass of milk, graciously autographed a menu for the grandson of his waiter, and hurried off to rehearse a sketch for the Johnny Carson Show that night — part of a crowded three-day schedule in New York. It was too full even to permit one evening at the theatre.

Nat'l Guard Has Openings

In this program, the man enlists in the National Guard, serves on active duty for six months and then returns to his hometown unit for the remainder of his enlistment.

Men with prior military service who can qualify for current vacancies may be able to enlist in their active duty grade.

Red Charge Rejected By UN Command

PANMUNJOM, Korea (AP) — The United Nations Command rejected today a Communist charge that one of its aircraft violated North Korean air space.

U.S. Rear Adm. Paul P. Blackburn Jr. said the U.N. Command investigated the alleged incident and found the charges were groundless.

The Communists had claimed that an "RB50 type" aircraft of the U.N. Command had flown over the demilitarized zone escorted by two F86 jets last Dec. 4.

Laurence Hope wrote the romantic ballad beginning "Pale hands I loved beside the Shalimar," which enraptured 19th Century audiences.

Specialist Moffett, a message center clerk in Headquarters Company, 2d Battalion of the division's 81st Armor, entered the Army in March 1964 and received basic training at Fort Polk, La.

A 1961 graduate of Snyder High School, Moffett attended Sul Ross State College, Alpine.

SPIRIT OF CHRISTMAS RULES IN COMMUNITY CELEBRATIONS

It's Christmas time! Everywhere, glad sights and sounds reflect the spirit of the season, as Snyderites celebrate the joyous holidays.

The spirit of Christmas is seen, in gaily decorated streets and stores, in homes aglow with light and festive with evergreens, in churches where the manger scene tells anew the wonderful old story of a holy Babe who was born in Bethlehem nearly two thousands years ago.

The spirit of Christmas is heard, in bells ringing out from street corner to steeple, in happy voices singing all the songs of the season, from old familiar carols to the more solemn, but at the same time joyful, anthems, cantatas and oratorios.

The spirit of Christmas is felt, as last minute preparations for the big celebration are made. There are always, it seems, some packages still to be wrapped, some final trimmings to be put on the tree, some part of the Christmas pageant or choral program that needs just one more rehearsal, some extra touches to make the Christmas feast absolutely perfect.

In the midst of the hustle and bustle, the spirit of Christmas shines through in all its many meanings.

The spirit of Christmas means laughter and joy — best expressed, perhaps, by the faces of children, eager and smiling as they talk to, or wait for Santa, full of reverent wonder as they hear the Christmas story and see all the pretty scenes.

The spirit of Christmas means giving, with love wrapped into every package. And it means sharing — the riches of thoughtful consideration and genuine interest, as well as time and money — with the aged, the ill, the needy and unfortunate.

The spirit of Christmas means a warm renewal of family ties and close friendships, and an enjoyment of traditions treasured through the years — the special customs each family creates for itself, as well as the traditions garnered from the lore and legends of Christmas.

BARBARA ANN GUYNES, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Guynes had a big smile and seemed quite pleased as Santa Claus visited at the annual Christmas party recently for city employes.

LISA LEE, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Lee was trying to remember several little items she wanted to tell Santa to bring her Christmas. She made them known at the city employes party.

CHRISTMAS DINNER — Mr. and Mrs. Sterling Parker entertained their employes and guests with a delightful Christmas dinner Tuesday evening at Sallie's Cafeteria. A musical program, Christmas carols and games were enjoyed by forty-six persons. Above are some of the children that received gifts, from left, Marva Gay Lee, Cindy Pickering, Becky Austin, Kelly Folleson (in high chair), Earl McCann, Sheila McCann, and David McCann.

AGAIN THIS YEAR the Candy Stripers at Cogdell Hospital decorated the hospital for the Christmas season. Pictured with the tree in the lobby are Candy Stripers Shirley Mitchell and Barbara Banks, as Miss Barbara Hydock, right, admires their handiwork. A registered nurse, Miss Hydock recently joined the hospital staff, moving here from Pennsylvania. Her reason for accepting the job here was, in her words, "To see what Texas was like."

AT HOME VELVETS—The feminine charm of a long velvet robe is a fashion potion that never fails to enchant the at-home audience. These two slender and elegant long gowns in luscious velvet, eases the slim lines with knee-high slits. Left, satin cowl collar, cuffs and lining compound the velvet richness of this belted robe. Right, a touch of Oriental opulence in a mandarin robe, exotically banded with embroidered ribbon.

Novel Stirs Reader's Conscience

FIRST PAPERS By Laura Z. Hobson

Mrs. Hobson, author of "Gentleman's Agreement," has written a strong, long (502 pages) new novel.

Her main characters are two remarkable Long Island families in the six years before World War I. These people, the Stefan Ivarins, and of lesser importance, their friends, the Evander Paiges, are interested in far more than going to the job, running the house and marrying off the children.

They read world news, discuss it and worry about it. They have political beliefs which they deepen by arguing back and forth and they're willing to voice their deeply felt sometimes unpopular opinions outside the home, to the vast embarrassment of their children, who would rather be smilingly noncommital like everybody else.

The Ivarins, of Russian Jewish background, are socialists, hating both the extremes of anarchy and of those who would save the country from anarchists. The Paiges, of New England stock, are social conscious, though usually less excitable than the Ivarins. They are pacifists and when war comes their son declares himself a conscientious objector, on ethical not religious ground, and he is sent to prison.

Anyone who has forgotten, or never knew what happened to some of the people out of step with conformity in the early 1900s in the United States, won't forget again after reading Mrs. Hobson's book. She does not overly dwell on citizens committee vigilante activities, but she does include one vivid scene outside San Diego in which Ben Reitman, the business manager of an anarchist who had come to town to make a speech about a play by Ibsen, was tarred, stuck with cactus and made to swallow an American flag.

The people in Mrs. Hobson's book seem very real and, most of them admirable. (The least admirable is the weakest.) They make a reader wish he could say to them, "I may disapprove of what you say, but I will defend to the death your right to say it."

Library Notes

It has been said that the most influential books are works of fiction. Shelves at the Scurry County Library are loaded with fiction to please all reading tastes. This group includes mysteries, westerns and science fiction as well as old classics and latest novels by contemporary authors.

A good novel can disengage a reader from himself and from his everyday problems. To be pleasing and entertaining fiction should cling close enough to reality so as to carry its reader's imagination to the book's end.

Paul Horgan has written a masterpiece now in its third printing. In the book, "Things as They Are," a boy grows up in an American Eden experiencing glory, horror and sin, with the pleasures, suffering and sorrow these entail, and finds love and understanding from others. The book is written with astonishing perception of life.

In a new novel by Vera Randal, "The Inner Room," the author takes one into the innermost thoughts in the minds of five young women. Each of these women, for reasons rooted in both past and present, suffered emotional breakdown. With her fictional characters the reader will live through hours as reality slips beyond grasp, suffer the indignity of a bare cell and the terror of electric shock, share the empty world between madness and sanity, and at last experience return to reality of one of the characters with a strong will to live. This is an unusual and moving novel.

A rich and compelling story, "The Explorer," a new novel by Frances Perkinson Keyes has been received. Hero of the story is Nicolas Hale, a Vermonter, as persevering as he is personable. He is inspired by the great discovery of Machu Picchu in Peru by Hiram Bingham. The hero avoids marriage until his desire for a son to inherit his name and carry on his work impels him to propose and to marry a lovely and aristocratic young Virginian whom he visualizes as the type of woman he would choose for his son's mother. Nicolas continues his exploration in his search for a lost city submerged in a lake high among the Andes. Long separations necessitated by his work keep he and his wife apart. After their marriage, Nicolas finds that he has unexpectedly fallen deeply in love with his wife. The outcome of both the love and his drive for success will hold Mrs. Keyes readers pellbound to the last page.

In his book, "The Old Gods Laugh," Frank Yerby shows again why he is one of America's most popular novelists. This novel is charged with blood and fire, with white hot passions and with the clash of army against army and brother against brother. It is a rousing and breathtaking suspenseful novel. The master story teller moves from his traditional settings to the tumultuous world of a revolution raged Caribbean country to give this new story—contemporary and historical—full color and romance. It is as pertinent as today's headlines. Almost immediately upon his arrival in Costa Verde, an American foreign correspondent is plunged into the midst of a violent struggle against a self styled leader of the area. A padre, a wise and gentle man of God, holds the key to the revolution. The priest is held hostage by a band of rebel guerrillas in the mountains. Interwoven through the account of Costa Verde's bloody revolution is the story of a love affair that flourishes against all odds. The struggle reaches its climax when the gold gods, who reside within Costa Verde's great volcano, erupt and pour their fury upon rulers and rebels alike.

John Carr knows and loves the period of about 1670, the beginning of the second decade in the reign of King Charles II. He shares his knowledge of this period with his readers in an engaging fashion in his new book, "Most Secret." It was a free and easy time, a noisy time and a cruel, swaggering time. The author takes his readers from the palace yard to intimate bedchambers, from the Temple Bar into small dark alleys to Drury Lane, and on a sailing ship headed across the English channel. The story moves at a thunderous pace, sweeping the reader into a time when plots were brewing and kings relied heavily on the loyalty, agility and brains of their subjects. This is the forty-third book by this popular and prolific writer.

"First Papers," a new book by Laura Hobson takes place during the six years that led the United States into the First World War. The story centers in the triumphs and tragedies of an unforgetable family whose ancestry was Jewish and Russian, and with this family's associations with friends of other nationalities. These fictional people are allies on a dozen different "radical" fronts that affect even wound, their own children in intensely personal ways. The book's powerful themes of freedom of speech and the ambiguities of patriotism speak strongly to the present. Hobson's new book is said by some authorities to surpass the author's other books, among them "Gentleman's Agreement," which is possibly her best known.

"Double Dozen," is also among the new books added to the library. This volume of mystery and intrigue is the 19th annual collection of the best stories from Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine. The stories in this edition range from pure detection to suspense, horror and psychological grue. Regardless of the reader's taste, he will find a fulfilling and diverting repast offered by many well known authors of detective stories in this new collection.

Samuel Johnson once wrote, "Where there is leisure for fiction there is little grief." People with healthy literary appetites like to read novels. Although the reader knows he is feigning, he relishes the book that can make him laugh, make him weep or keep him in great suspense. True fiction has a scope wider than fact.

Gardener's Corner

BY EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

EACH YEAR the florist's window seems to have more gay Christmas plants. The poinsettia remains the favorite symbol of Yuletide but azaleas and chrysanthemums will add charm to many holiday homes as will such smaller potted plants as kalanchoe with brilliant orange-red blossoms and Africal violets.

There are poinsettias in popular red, in pink and white and in semidouble form.

These plants enjoy a warm room just as you do in winter. Keep them out of drafts and away from hot radiators. This will keep them attractive longer, delay yellowing and dropping of leaves.

Because the poinsettia likes moisture in the air as well as near its roots, keep the pot on a saucer of water and pebbles with the pot bottom above the water. If you keep the container immersed in water, the roots will become water - logged and the plant will suffocate for lack of air.

Overwatering and overheating are the main reasons why holiday plants perish early. Clay pots will help dissipate excess water, leach out harmful salts in the soil and keep moisture at a constant level.

The azalea you get may be the tender kind that must be brought indoors each winter, or the hardy one that may be plunged into your garden permanently next spring. The tender ones have the appearance of miniature trees. The more rugged type branches out closer to the ground.

Ask your florist for a small card with care instructions. Attach this to your gift plant.

We agree with one poinsettia expert who said of this gift plant:

You are smart if you discard it after it has shed its foliage."

But if you insist on trying to keep the poinsettia for the next year, store it in January in a temperature not below 50 degrees and keep it dry until May when it should be brought in to a temperature of 60 degrees and watered.

They may be rooted from the end of June until September. Take cuttings from below a node and remove unnecessary leaves. Submerge them quickly in water; set them tightly into sand to root, keeping them moist. Keep them shaded until they root (in two or three weeks, then put them in 2½-inch pots in a pitting mixture. Later repot in larger containers.

Wheat Germ Pancakes

½ cup flour
½ teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ cup wheat germ
1 egg
½ cup milk
1 tablespoon salad (not olive) oil

In a mixing bowl, stir together the flour, baking powder and salt; stir in the wheat germ. Add the egg, milk and oil. With a rotary beater, hand or electric, beat just until blended; batter will be thin. Bake on a hot (380 degrees) greased griddle until top surface is almost dry; turn and bake other side. Makes 2 large servings.

Master Builder Of Stories

THE HORSE KNOWS THE WAY. By John O'Hara.

This is the fourth year in a row that a book of short stories by O'Hara has been issued, and there was one novel in between.

The wonder lies not only in the great quantity of stories that he has poured out — there are 28 in this collection — but, the fact that he keeps surpassing himself in the matter of quality. Many of the stories in this book have a terrific impact.

As everyone knows by now, O'Hara has a supersensitive ear, and utilizes terse dialogue to achieve his effects with a minimum of effort. He also has a very sharp eye for the small visual details of his scenes, so that his descriptions take on a stark exactitude.

The result is that you feel you know his people, that you identify with them and feel their emotions. In many of the stories, you are enticed into a real concern with the outcome of the narrative.

In this collection O'Hara has several items in which people reach the flash point of their emotions and suddenly tear into each other.

In "The Clear Track" a husband and wife come to a bitter break over their respective infidelities. In "The Madeline Wherry Case" there is a more explosive climax to a similar situation. "The Staring Game" is about two old biddies who drop the polite amenities and claw jealously at each other. There is a nasty male bully deviling a woman friend about her guilty past in "The Jet Set." In "All Tied Up" there is a sadistic banker tormenting an employe.

Pathos is another strong factor, in "The Bonfire," a tale of a young widow learning to fear her own emotions, and in "I Can't Thank You Enough," a story of a lonely, frustrated spinster.

O'Hara says in a foreword that he is leaving the short story "for a while, at least." After recording proudly that he was given the Award of Merit of the American Academy of Arts and Letters for the novel, it is clear that he is eager to return to that form and demonstrate his skill once again. As he says, "I have work to do."

Meanwhile he has evidenced in this book his natural mastery of the short story. Few are his peers.

MISS FRANCA GEA, Snyder's foreign exchange student from Turin, Italy, gave a delightful program to some 40 members and guests of Snyder Chapter 450 Order of Eastern Stars Thursday evening at Masonic Hall. Miss Gea showed slides of her country, various aspects of her hometown and its customs. This was her first program presented in Snyder. Prior to the program a salad supper was held. Following the program a friendship meeting was held. Above Miss Gea receives a corsage from Mildred Sparks, Worthy Matron.

A Few Irish Words From Behan

BRENDAN BEHAN'S NEW York. With Drawings by Paul Hogarth.

Here is something that isn't really a book. It's a monologue. But since Behan was one of the most adept monologists of the Irish strain, the result often is better than a straight book.

Behan got to know the city in his frequent trips to America, usually with Broadway as the focal point. He wrote, "I am not afraid to admit that New York is the greatest city on the face of God's earth." Its greatest appeal to him was that life is vibrant in Manhattan 24 hours a day. Its night - brightness dazzled him.

Like many another compulsive story - teller, Behan was celebrity - conscious. When he had reached celebrity status himself, a good many doors were opened to him, and these pages are full of anecdotes about what famous people said to him — or more often, what he said to them.

The Irish saloons on Third Avenue fascinated him, but he also prowled through famous hotels restaurants, took some sniffy observations of the more kooky inhabitants of Greenwich Village, dipped into the Bowery and Chinatown, and found relatives on quiet Staten Island.

Comprehensive Account Of Cancer Research

THE SAVAGE CELL. By Pat McGrady.

There probably is no more feared word in the English language than "cancer." To many persons not aware of the great advances in treatment and knowledge, it means a death warrant.

In this volume a veteran science writer who has been with the American Cancer Society for years tells the fantastic story of cancer in dispassionate, but interesting terms.

The reader learns that more than a million living Americans have faced cancer and have been cured, that cancer is as varied and random in its attack as the research that is designed to meet its challenge. McGrady documents the legions of men in white who fight cancer every day, and some of them who die from it.

From his overview, a sort of kaleidoscopic picture emerges with possible cancer causes lurking in the drugs we take, the foods we eat, the environment of our modern world, even our jobs — and the things that can be done to remove some hazards from our lives.

We see too the brutality of the word "cancer" stripped of its fear, made into a reasonable question that has some answers.

This is one of the most comprehensive exposés of this feared disease, and one of the most reliable accounts of cancer research, detection, treatment and control, ever put together for the general reader.

McGrady provides the expedient explanation of cancer as the "savage cell which somehow evades the laws of the body, invades the well - ordered society of cells surrounding it, colonizes distant areas and, as a finale to its cannibalistic orgy . . . commits suicide by destroying its host."

In his final chapter the author says "This is the beginning — not the end — of the story of cancer and cancer research. Cancer control . . . can and will come to pass. How soon depends on the wisdom and vigor with which the problem is attacked."

SLIM STREAKS — These slender streaks of velvet have wonderful figure-flattering poise with their long, slim column lines. Deep back slits give easy motion to the narrow skirts. Left, satin midriff, tying in a huge diagonal bow, glows against the lustrous depth of the velvet in this gown with V-slashed neckline in back and front. Right, gold and silver embroidery sparkles above an Empire satin sash that ties in back bow.

Red And White Veal Cutlet

1 pound (about) veal cutlets, about ¼ inch thick
2 tablespoons flour mixed with ½ teaspoon salt
1 egg beaten with 1 tablespoon milk or buttermilk
¼ cups (about) fine dry bread crumbs
2 tablespoons oil
1 can (8 ounces) tomato sauce
Cheese Sauce
3 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese

Have cutlet in one piece; wipe with a damp cloth. Dip cutlet in seasoned flour, then in egg mixture, and last in bread crumbs. Heat oil in a skillet and fry cutlet until golden brown on both sides. Pour tomato sauce into a baking dish about 10 by 6 by 1¼ inches; place cutlet in sauce. Pour Cheese Sauce over center of cutlet; sprinkle Parmesan cheese over cheese sauce. Bake in a moderate (350 degrees) oven until top is brown and meat is tender — about 45 minutes. Makes 4 servings.

Cheese Sauce: In a small saucepan over low heat melt 1½ tablespoons butter; stir in 1½ tablespoons flour and ½ teaspoon salt; add ¾ cup milk; cook and stir constantly until thickened; remove from heat and stir in ½ cup grated cheddar cheese until melted.

Heating a loaf of French bread? Place it on a piece of foil in a moderate oven for about 20 minutes.

Although the fat in the skillet should be hot before adding eggs to be fried, the actual frying should be done very slowly.

Novel Is Theatrical

WORD OF MOUTH. By Jerome Weidman.

Weidman's new book combines a fanciful story of the past with an equally fanciful tale of the modern theatrical world. These diverse elements are blended into a really chilling study of a man discovering the horrors within his own blocked memory.

The man is John Sayer, at 35 a well-settled New York lawyer. He meets an eccentric theatrical agent who leads him to a producer and a woman director-writer, Gwen Quill. They want to make a play about John's father, Sennacherib Sayer, once a great trust - busting lawyer, who also was the leader of a little colony of writers, esthetes and individualists who lived a communal life in upstate New York.

After some hesitation John agrees to help recreate the life of his famous father. So we are taken back to the colony, Deucalion, in 1939, when Sennacherib is about to receive his greatest professional honor, and John is only 10.

But the colonists of Deucalion have their plotters and dissenters. There is a dramatic, emotionpacked showdown; John's lovely young mother commits suicide, and his father flees the country.

From this episode Gwen is able to fashion a stirring first act, but the remainder of the play bogs down. John keeps insisting that the last 10 years of his father's life were unhappy and uneventful. But when Gwen, making some shrewd deductions and intuitive guesses, patches together a plot striking close to actual fact, John is faced with old truths that his subconscious mind had blotted from his memory for many years.

It is a tension - taut story, more tightly narrated than the author's recent "The Sound of Bow Bells." It may not win any literary pirzes, but it will earn a lot of attention from readers who are eager for an engrossing yarn. Weidman, no stranger to the theater himself, has made this novel theatrical in more ways than one.

ON THE HOUSE

From various sources come these bits of information of interest to the home owner:

Your local lumber dealer sells a lot of lumber, but that's not all he sells. . . In fact, that's only about one - third of what he sells. . . A survey conducted by the National Lumber and Building Material Dealers Association brought out that sales of non - lumber products represent about 63 percent of total business. . . Masonry supplies, paint, glass, wallpaper, insulation, tools, metal roofing and siding, non-wood floor covering, and asphalt and asbestos products are among the items accounting for the large percentage of non - lumber sales.

If you build a closet in your home, or put a new door on an old one, be sure you use hardware that will enable the door to be opened from the inside. This is especially important if there are children in the home — and most persons know this — but some forget that visiting children also can get locked in. Another safety measure: see that there is at least half-an-inch between the bottom of the door and the floor so that air can enter the closet should a child be trapped inside when nd adult is around.

A leak through a ceiling from an upstairs bathroom occurs far less frequently from a damaged pipe than it does from water seeping down from behind a bathtub, shower or baseboard. (You can get Andy Lang's detailed booklet "Make Simple Plumbing Repairs," by sending 25 cents and a long, stamped, self - addressed envelope to Know - How, P.O. Box 954, Jamaica, N.Y., 11431.)

Color consultants say that consumer color preferences follow cycles that run from 10 to 25 years. Example: blue was a very popular color in the home from 1939 to the early '50s, was almost completely dormant for several years, picked up a little in the late '50s and now has again returned to prominence.

When you buy a new appliance cord for a toaster or an iron, the prongs of the appliance itself should be sanded to insure good contact with a new plug.

The ends of a chair rung can not be reglued properly into the leg holes until the old glue has been scraped off. Once the new glue has been applied and the rung set into place, it can be dried by using a rope tourniquet. Tie rope loosely around the two affected legs (using rubber or cardboard cushions to avoid marring the wood), place a stick between the two pieces of rope and twist until the rope is tight. The stick will stay in place by resting it against the rung.

QUESTION: The problem I have concerns my bathroom tile. The tile itself is in very good condition and is very secure, therefore I do not want to replace it. The trouble is the lines between the tile, which are becoming brown in color and, in some places, coming out. What can I do to correct this condition?

ANSWER: You did not specify, whether you mean floor or wall tile, nor what kind of tile. On the assumption that you are talking about ceramic floor tile, which sometimes develops the condition you mention after many years, try this: using a pointed instrument, such as an awl, remove any loose mortar in the tile joints, then sweep the floor and wash it. After it is dry, make a mixture of one part of waterproof portland cement and one part of fine sand, or buy a ready - mixed grout that requires only the addition of water. In either case, use a minimum amount of water, just enough to make the mix workable.

Spread the mixture on the floor, using a squeegee to work it thoroughly into the joints. Quickly remove all excess mortar before it begins to set using a piece of burlap first and then a damp cloth. Keep rubbing until this excess has disappeared, then polish with a dry cloth. Your big problem is to keep anyone from walking on the tile for two or three days, which means you'll have to do the job in sections.

During the drying period, keep the repaired area covered with a damp cloth, which should be sprinkled several times a day. Remove the cloth and go on to the next section. If the members of your family are careful, you probably can do half the floor each time.

Everybody Seen By Jealous Son

NAKED EYE. By Charles Neider.

A man's psychological battle to get out from under the shadow cast by his famous father is the central theme of Neider's novel, but it also is a story of emotional turmoil.

The narrator is Hal Tucker, a fashion photographer, son of a widely known and admired nature photographer, Ezra Jewett Tucker.

When it becomes known that Ezra is doomed by cancer, the son's longtime hatred of his father boils up. He wants his father to die. It is a hatred based on envy. But there also is jealousy, growing out of a suspicion that Ezra once had carried on an affair with Hal's wife Marian, a fashion model.

Yet the son goes along with the mother and sister's plan to withhold from Ezra the truth about his condition. And gradually as the old man grows weaker, Hal's hatred is lessened by pity until he finds himself in an ambivalent position.

All during his wait for death, the son's own life is reaching a critical point. His marriage to Marian has turned into a mockery, and he is conducting an affair with Sarah, a young art student while Marian begins to suffer from her unrequited love for another man.

WHO SAYS NOTHING'S LEFT UNEXPLORED?

Was Chinese Atom Blast That Proverbial First Step?

By JOHN RODERICK

TOKYO (AP) — The Chinese, who once said a long journey begins with a single step, undertook a new voyage on Oct. 16. No one can say when or how it will end.

The modern-day Chinese journey began in the Takla Makan Desert of remote Sinkiang Province on that crisp autumn day as a tree-like cloud, its angry center a swirling mass of changing colors, rose high into the air.

At this tangible evidence that the Communist regime of the People's Republic of China—only 15 years old—had successfully tested a nuclear bomb, thousands of Chinese technicians and workers broke into wild applause.

The joy in Sinkiang was echoed by misgivings in the 107 nations which in 1963 had signed a treaty banning nuclear tests in the air, under water and in outer space. Most of them believed that this at last marked a positive first step toward the control of man's most destructive weapon.

Red China was not a signer. Its nuclear explosion forced these nations—among them leading members of the Communist bloc—to take a new look at the Peking government.

Scientists and politicans in the West reacted in a variety of ways. The detractors, many in the United States, dismissed the Chinese bomb as an achievement of little consequence. Some said that without a delivery system the Chinese cannot be a nuclear menace for many years.

Others regard the test as a revelation that the mainland's industry and organizing ability are more advanced than suspected. They predict that China may, within a few years, be turning out more sophisticated weapons and the missiles to carry them to distant targets.

A West European businessman who recently visited the mainland reports that China, after years of economic hard times, is once more on the move. This man, who lived 35 years in China and still makes periodic visits, says the defeatism of four years ago has given way to a new spirit of confidence.

"Food is no longer scarce. The markets and the stores have full inventories and buying is brisk," he said. "A great deal of construction, particularly in Shanghai and Peking, is evident but nowhere on the scale of that in Hong Kong. Agriculture seems to be recovering from the bad weather of 1959-61 which made so many crop failures, and the cadres, who fell down so badly then, appear to have learned their lessons. The Chinese are cheerful, but then they have always been so under the worst conditions."

Red China, he said, has the beginnings of an industrial system but it has a long way to go. On a scale of 100—the position of the United States, West Germany, Russia and Japan—he said he would place China at 5.

Of more immediate interest is the impact that the bomb has had within China and on its neighbors.

The approval of North Korea, North Viet Nam and Cambodia were expected, but if he looked for congratulations to pour in from Indonesia, Ceylon, or Burma, Chinese Communist chairman Mao Tse-tung must have been disappointed.

The effect on India, toward whom China had made some tentative gestures of reapproachment following the death of Jawaharlal Nehru, was completely negative. The Chinese bomb served only to reforce Indian suspicions and distrust first stirred by the 1962 Red Chinese Himalayan invasion.

In short, the great event acted only to drive pro-western nations closer to the United States, and created uneasiness among the nations China had so ardently wooed in the past.

Since Oct. 16, a new note of irony has crept into the declarations and attitudes of the Peking leadership.

In the weeks following the explosion, Red China has gone out of its way to quarrel with its two big neighbors, India and Japan. Its reaction to concern over the test, expressed by Japanese Prime Minister Eisaku Sato, one shared by the Japanese in general, was cold and intemperate.

While welcoming the removal of Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev, another event which added to its power and prestige, Peking has lectured his successors like schoolboys, warning them not to repeat his errors.

Communism More Evident In Egypt

By GEORGE MCARTHUR

CAIRO (AP) — President Gamal Abdel Nasser once had almost 1,000 Communists in jail and frequently told Western diplomats this was proof his left-leaning regime was no Moscow satellite.

The Communists are now free. Many have been given responsible jobs, particularly in press, radio and television. Others are being welcomed, at least outwardly, into the Arab Socialist Union, the political arm of Nasser's one-party state.

The controlled press does not criticize Moscow, but it accuses the United States of black political crimes.

On such questions as the Congo, Laos, Cambodia and Viet Nam Nasser's position is about the same as Moscow's. His expressed views on Latin America are within the Moscow pattern, treating the whole area as a colonized ward of the United States. Although Nasser is privately disillusioned with Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro, you would never find that out reading a Cairo newspaper. Puerto Rico is considered an oppressed colony.

Nasser displays neutrality on issues involving Peking and Moscow but seems privately to lean toward Moscow in most of these cases.

In domestic politics, Nasser always has emphasized his ideological differences with Moscow Marxism. He has kept land ownership in private hands and expressed the belief some small business and light industry should be private.

Such differences might be bypassed, however, in any turn to the left brought on by Nasser's present economic difficulties. His hastily socialized regime is in financial troubles, and Nasser may feel the need for Communist-type domestic discipline to keep his restive 28 million people in line.

On bit of evidence along this line is Khaled Moheyiddine, an early Nasser lieutenant, long placed on the shelf because of his Red views. Now he has made the newspaper Akhbar into a Moscow mouthpiece as much as Nasser will let him, and daily propagandizes that Egypt must be more Socialist, with the Soviet Union the implied model.

A Junior Editors Quiz About HAIR

QUESTION: How does hair grow?

• • •

ANSWER: Hair is a useful covering for many animals, keeping them warm in cold weather. Animals are frequently equipped with small skin muscles which can be used to make the hair stand out, keeping them warmer still. While we humans have little hair, we do have the skin muscles, and when our skin is cold these may contract in little lumps—which are often called "goose pimples" or "goose bumps." At the upper left, we show the important part under the skin which causes a hair to grow. The follicle is a kind of sack inside of which a hair grows. An artery provides nourishment at the bottom, and the hair grows by new cells forming at this root. As these die, they form a rod or shaft which is pushed upward by new cells forming underneath; this is a hair. Fat glands supply an oil called "sebum," which keeps hair soft and in good shape. A human hair may grow about 6 inches a year and keep this up from 2 to 6 years, but after that nourishment will stop coming to the root and the hair will fall out. Then it will be replaced by a new one. As new cells form at the root of a hair, they are given color by tiny cells called "melanin." As a person becomes old, melanin is no longer added and the hair turns gray.

• • •

Artist Says Simplest Things Confound Us

CHICAGO (AP) — Artist Ivan Albright enjoys painting sympathetic commentary on the human race by depicting it in stark realism.

"I compose in motion," he said. "I want to see objects from all angles. I wish to create tension and conflict. I want to jar a viewer into thinking — to feeling uncomfortable, so that he'll meditate about life."

His famous work, "The Door," is a sermon in itself. It is enjoying a feature role in a retrospective Albright one-man show at the Art Institute of Chicago.

The exhibit of some 60 works, with his World War I medical notebooks, will be displayed until Dec. 27. The exhibit moves to New York's Whitney Museum of American Art Feb. 4.

"The Door" depicts an old, weathered door draped with a wreath. A hand holding a lace handkerchief is about to open it. Its full title tells the story: "That Which I Should Have Done I Did Not Do."

The original still - life model for the door painting, completed in 1941 after 10 years' work, is displayed with the 36 by 97-inch painting. The still - life model for his "The Window" also is shown.

If Albright's art reflects a Frankenstein - like morbidity, the shock to a viewer is a delight to Albright.

Art critics and salon judges often have been perplexed by Albright's frank picturing of life. Comments of 'morbid', 'gruesome,' 'lugubrious' and 'repulsive' serve only to stir him to greater effort. His pictures often were taken down and then rehung.

Yet, many art viewers see in Albright's portraits and symbolic scenes a deep compassion and love of mankind. Although he harshly depicts nature's tussle with life and death, his souls are encased in a tender frame of bones, flesh and blood in open maturity.

Albright's paintings do not come to sudden life. He spends months, even years creating the still - life setting for a work. He says he studies a model in relation to light and space.

He pioneered the junk-yard type of subject matter now popular with younger artists. He creates a dusty, worn, cobwebbed reflection of life.

Albright's attention to detail and meticulous use of brush and color in somber hues earned him the attention of Hollywood. He was commissioned to create the "Picture of Dorian Gray" in 1943 for the movie of the same name.

Ivan Albright, 68, is the son of a noted American painter, Adam Emory Albright. His kin for generations were gunsmiths, creating collector's pieces of the famed Kentucky rifle.

Ivan first studied architecture and engineering. He had no thought of becoming an artist when he posed for his father with his twin brother, Malvin Marr. Malvin now is a noted sculptor of Corea, Maine, and Fort Lauderdale, Fla. He uses the name Zsissly.

Ivan's acquaintance with bone, muscle and flesh increased during World War I. He drew water color pictures in vivid reds and purple of soldiers' wounds at Base Hospital No. 11 in Nantes, France.

"I drew as boys were carried in from trenches, as they lay on operating tables in tents and all through their months of recovery," he said. "It was gruesome but intensely interesting. I was only 20, and I really didn't know how to draw."

Albright entered The School of Art of the Art Institute of Chicago in 1920. He was graduated with an honorable mention.

For years Ivan painted wherever fancy dictated — Arizona, New Mexico and California. Then he settled in Warrenville, Ill., with his father and twin brother. His studio through the 1930s and 1940s was an abandoned church.

Albright's philosophy revolves around the idea that the simplest things confound us.

"We look for an explanation but never find it," he said. "There is no limit to the division of things; there is no limit to the size of things. The answer is not in the eye, nor in reason. They make of the real the abstract, and the mind gropes in the subconscious for an unanswerable answer."

PAINTER Ivan Albright poses with the original still-life model he used to create "The Door" between 1931 and 1941. Full title of the wreath-draped door is "That Which I Should Have Done I Did Not Do."

Ceramic Tile More Slipproof

Besides the sanitary and [illegible] qualities it provides, ceramic mosaic tile is used on bathroom floors because of its slip resistance. Although this has been proved by years of use, many American [illegible] manufacturers today are making their products even more slipproof by imbedding abrasive particles in the surface of the tiles or by scoring them with grooves and patterns.

Refrigerator

Refrigerator doors should open on the side adjacent to counter work space. New refrigerators come with either left or right-hand openings. Tell the salesman which opening will give you the most convenience for your kitchen when you buy a refrigerator. The correct opening will save you unnecessary effort and help prevent accidental spilling of liquids [illegible].

Your poultry meat may be thoroughly roasted and yet be pinkish in color. A number of factors account for this color, among them the age of the bird and the amount of fat in the skin, the degree of heat of the oven and whether the bird is roasted in an open or covered pan.

Delicious Fritters As Main Dish

Have you had some fritters lately? These delightful deep-fat fried morsels are favorites among many who enjoy good food.

Fritters are versatile, too. Vegetable or fruit fritters may be used as a meat accompaniment or garnish.

They're an unusual way to use leftover meats and fruits. As such, they can be the main interest in a light meal such as Sunday night supper or a luncheon.

Fritters taste delectable when they're fried in lard.

Ham and Pineapple Fritters

2 cups ground cooked ham
½ cup crushed pineapple
2-3 cup sifted enriched flour
1½ teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon sugar, if desired
1-3 cup milk
1 egg
Lard for deep-fat frying
