Hub City provides food for bombing victims

By Donald Gillilan
The University Daily

South Plains residents are providing a helping hand to fill the needs of those displaced after the devastating Oklahoma City blast April 19. Oklahoma City's Alfred P. Murrah Building suffered tragic disaster when a car bombing gutted the building and killed more than 100 people.

Lubbock's Breedlove Dehydration Plant sent two totes of dehydrated food to Oklahoma City Tuesday, said Kimberly Glaus-Läte, Breedlove Dehydration Plant technical manager.

"I don't know if we are planning to ship out food at the present time, but I wouldn't rule it out," Glaus-Läte said.

The plant shipped 400 pounds of potatoes, which would provide 8,000 servings, and 400 pounds of carrots, which would provide 16,000 servings.

This is the first time the plant has sent out food, Glaus-Läte said, adding that the plant is just at the point in their operation where they can ship out products.

"We were able to ship the products with just a few hours notice," she said. "It wasn't a big deal for us to do, we were prepared."

Adriana Bellah, Breedlove Dehy-dration Plant business manager, said plant officials also sent recipes to Oklahoma City about how to make carrot and potato soups.

"This is the first time dehydrated food has been used in a disaster, so a lot of people are going to be experimenting with this," Bellah said. "We are just really excited that we can help those who are in need."

Rev. Russ Byard, of First United Methodist Church of Abernathy, said he responded to the needs of St. Luke's United Methodist Church in Oklahoma City through the plant.

"St. Luke's has been serving people through a soup kitchen for years," Byard said. "When the devastation happened, they started serving hundreds of displaced people in the area."

Byard spoke with church officials and mentioned the food dehydration plant.

"It (dehydrated food) is easy to send, it needs no refrigeration and that will help St. Luke's a lot," he said.

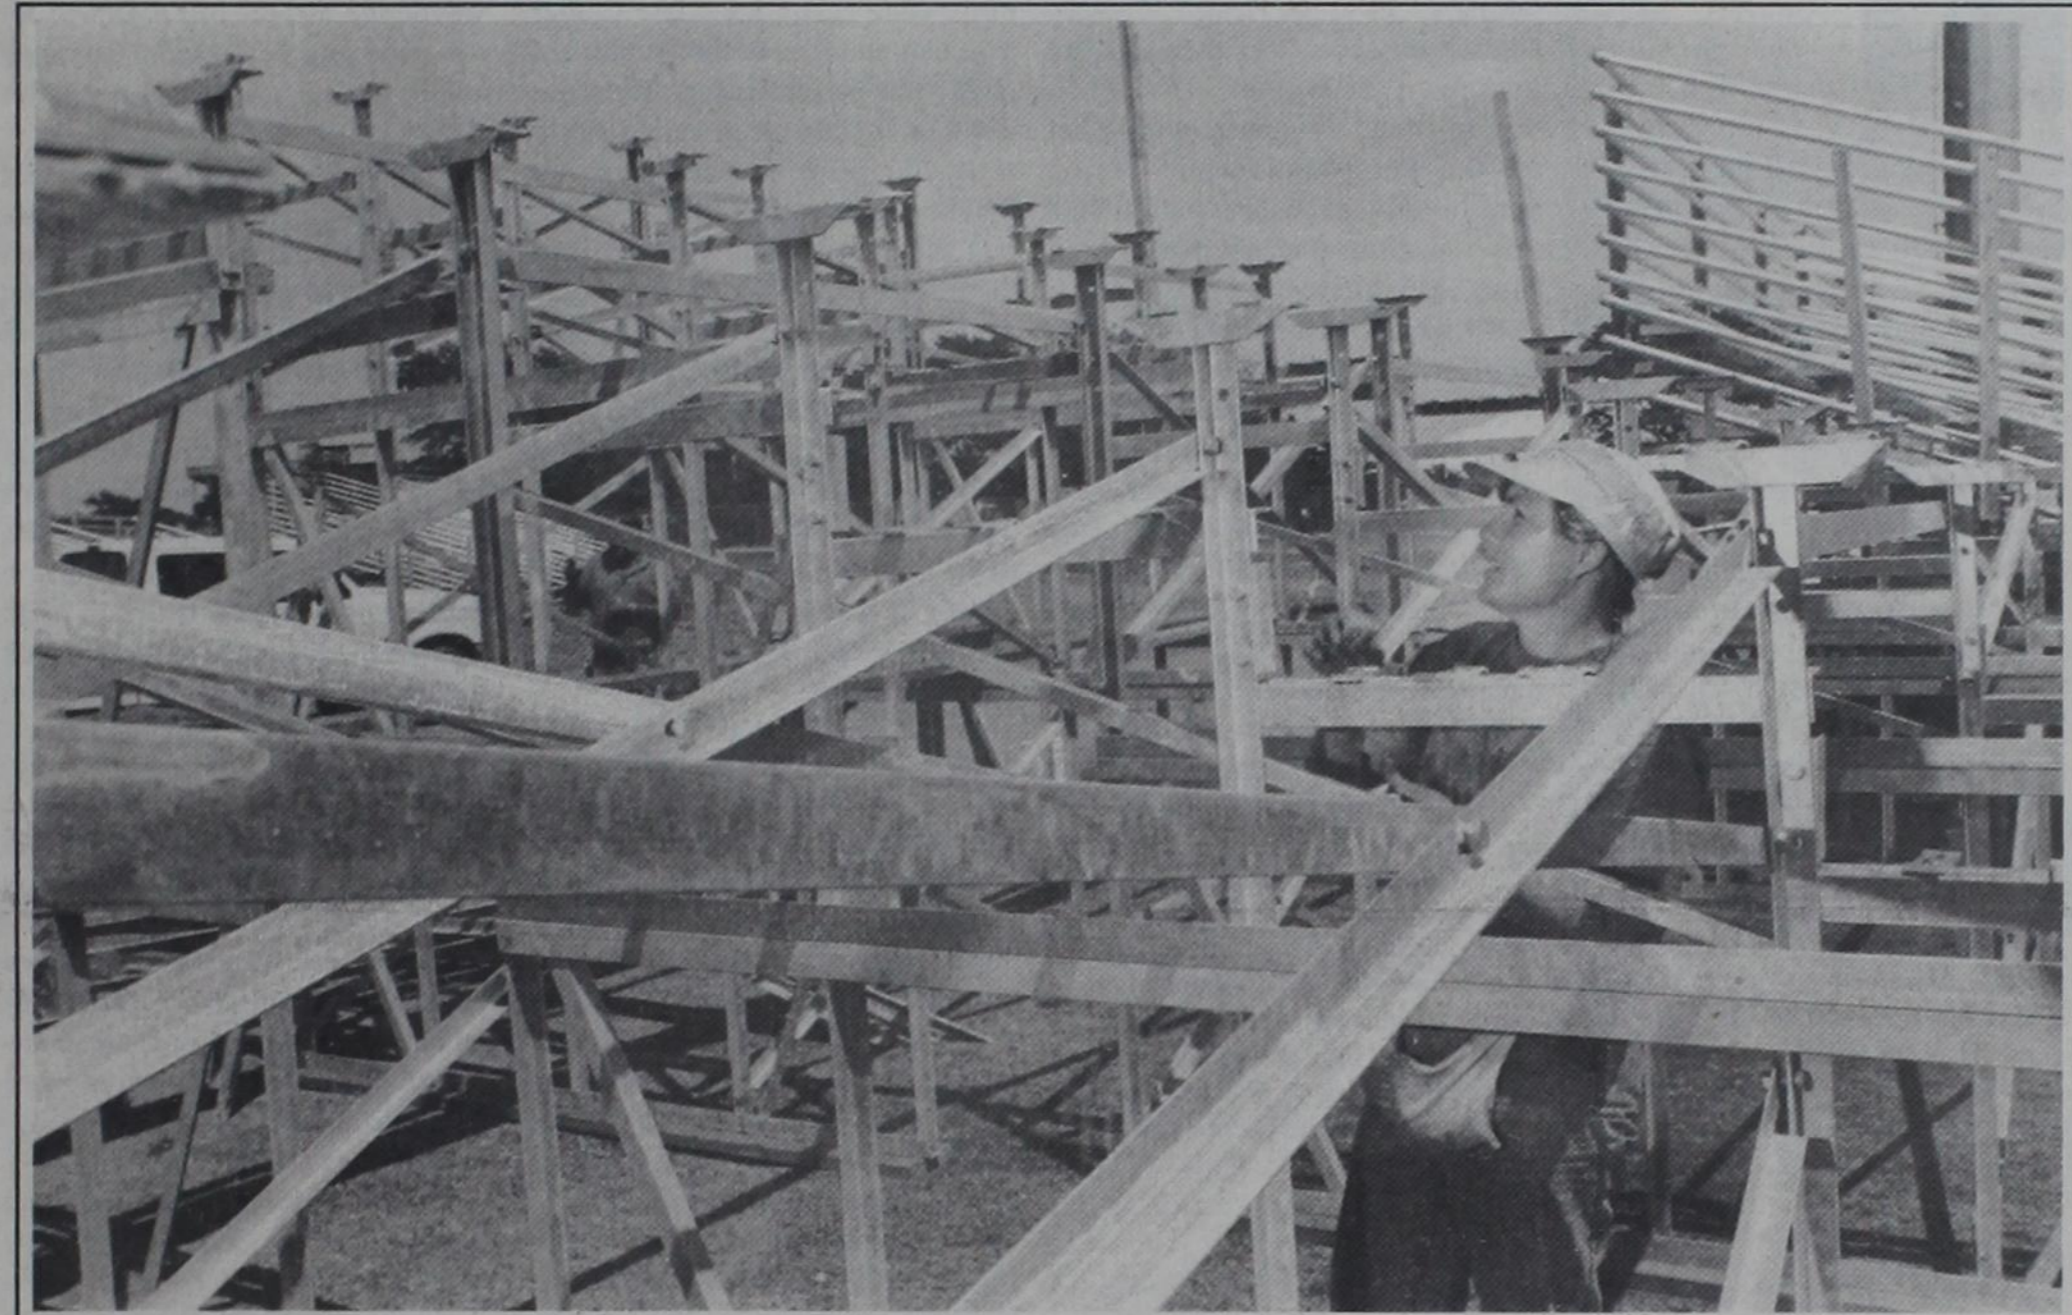

"It will serve a lot of displaced people."

Dehydrated food was sent to the church and should have arrived this morning, he said.

"I will feel a lot better if the food meets the needs of the people in Oklahoma City," Byard said.

Council merges two corporations

By Shannon Murphy
The University Daily

Lubbock Mayor David Langston discussed a need to move quickly regarding formation of a committee to facilitate a merger between the Convention and Tourism Bureau of Lubbock Inc. and Civic Lubbock Inc. during a City Council meeting Thursday.

The two corporations want to merge in order to centralize and coordinate marketing efforts, and a previous committee has recommended the creation of one marketing entity for Lubbock, said Craig Wells, Lubbock's Convention and Tourism Bureau representative.

"In April 1994, the City Council appointed a 15-member committee to analyze the use of the hotel/motel occupancy tax and recommended ways to consolidate both corporations' efforts," Wells said. "The committee made their recommendations to the City Council in October of 1994."

The Hotel/Motel Tax Review Committee's goal is to position Lubbock as a national convention and tourism destination and create a centralized marketing entity to promote Lubbock, Wells said.

A temporary committee will be comprised of the president and vice president of Civic Lubbock Inc. and president and vice president of the Convention and Tourism Bureau.

One member of the City Council will be appointed to the committee. "The committee will be charged with facilitating the merger of the two corporations into a single non-profit corporation," he said.

The bureau is seeking an executive director and is ready to fill the position, thus the merger needs to move along quickly, he said.

"We need to make sure that the most qualified person is selected for the position and he or she will need to know exactly what the position will entail," Wells said.

The executive director will be responsible for more duties because the two corporations are merging, he said.

The ultimate corporation will be responsible for marketing, entertainment, travel, tourism and sports on behalf of Lubbock, he said. "Funding for the corporation will be from the hotel/motel occupancy tax and net revenues generated from concession sales at the municipal auditorium and civic center, novelty sales and Select-A-Seat."

In other City Council matters, the mayor will designate $500,000 from a hotel/motel tax reserve, effective October 1995, for development of a facility to house the Lubbock Fine Arts Center, Buddy Holly Display and Visitor Information Center.

In October, the Hotel/Motel Tax Review Committee made a recommendation to the City Council in regard to product development, said Carolyn Aliamus, Lubbock's travel and leisure services director.

"The recommendation stems from the lack of a suitable Fine Arts Center, the recent acquisition of the Buddy Holly Collection and a need for a central distribution of visitor information," Aliamus said. "The proposed center is estimated to cost $2 million, and we are requesting $500,000 from the council to help us. It is the commitment of the staff to raise the additional $1.5 million to execute this project."

City Councilman Victor Hernandez said he voted against allocating funds to the project.

"I do see a need for a fine arts house, but not right now," Hernandez said. "Our community is at a standstill until we know the future of Reese, so I don't think this is the most prudent way to spend money."

Professors study glass at bombing site

By Jamie McDonald
The University Daily

In the midst of broken glass and debris from the Oklahoma City Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building, two Texas Tech professors studied in reality what they only had studied previously in a laboratory.

Scott Norville and Milton Smith, College of Engineering professors, tested glass and its resistance from a car bombing at the federal building April 19, said Norville, a civil engineering professor.

The bombing was an example of a big field experiment for the professors, Norville said.

"That sounds a little cold, but it is just an incident that goes with my research," he said.

Norville and Smith began to study how low-level blasts affect glass in the mid-1980s, he said.

"We set up bombing tests to observe glass behavior," Norville said. "We tested what happens to glass and the flying shards."

The Oklahoma City tragedy was on a larger scale than experiments Smith and Norville were familiar with, said Smith, an industrial engineering professor.

"This was an uncontrolled event of the same nature of the experiments we run," he said. "We were able to collect data in a much larger situation."

Reports indicate about 450 people were injured by flying glass, Norville said.

"There is nothing to keep the glass from shattering in the federal building," he said. "It is preventable in buildings two blocks away."

Norville and Smith said laminated glass, the glass used in car windshields, could have been used in the building and would have eliminated glass-related problems.

"The glass used in car windshields can be used as a protection from bomb blasts," Smith said. "It is an answer that has been around for 50 years for problems that are just starting."

The use of laminated glass is limited because it is expensive, he said.

"The bombing will tend to emphasize some things like the selection of the type of glass is critical," he said. "Serious injuries will result from the use of the wrong type."

Norville said he hopes the blast will help raise building construction standards.

"It might help me get the standards through the code-writing process faster," Norville said. "People will see it as a more urgent issue. It is not something that just happens in European countries anymore. Unfortunately, it happens here."

Missing license plate tags may lead to second suspect

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Investigators issued an alert Thursday for a missing clue in the federal building bombing.

The clue is Arizona license plate LZC646, tags that may have fallen off suspect Timothy McVeigh's getaway car.

One possibility, said a law enforcement source, was that the plate may have been shifted to another vehicle.

This vehicle may have been used by the suspect known as John Doe No. 2.

It is feared that John Doe No. 2 may strike again.

At a hearing for McVeigh, FBI Agent John Hersley said his "primary responsibility is to find the other subject to prevent another bomb from going off."

But in a possible snag for the governments case, Hersley also testified that three witnesses to the bombing couldn't identify McVeigh for certain in a lineup.

The death toll in the nation's largest terror attack, meanwhile, passed a grim milestone.

More than 100 bodies have now been found in the rubble of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building.

At the hearing at the federal prison 30 miles east of Oklahoma City where McVeigh is being held, his lawyers renewed their requests to drop out of the case.

They also requested a change of venue.

Gospel choir presents annual concert

By Tara McQueen
The University Daily

The Visions of Light gospel choir of Texas Tech will be sharing heavenly voices and the word of God at its annual concert, "Behold the Risen King."

The concert will be at 7 p.m. Sunday at Community Baptist Church, 220 Martin Luther King Blvd.

"We are a moving ministry because every where we go, through our music, we try to spread the word of God," choir member Chastity Thomas said. "Our goal is to reach out to the community."

Thomas, a freshman psychology major from Garland, said the choir performs wherever it is invited.

"We go to Boys Clubs, the Wesley Foundation and nursing homes," she said.

Cory Powell, a senior communication studies major from San Antonio, is the director of the choir.

Powell said the choir began as a local church choir.

"The choir has been together for a year and a half," Powell said. "The choir started out as a college outreach choir."

"We just saw an opportunity to expand, and we sought to become a campus organization."

Powell said the focus of the choir is for students to use their vocal talents to bring joy to others.

"We look for the message of the song first," he said.

The excitement and appropriateness of the songs are the second criteria, he said.

"We see it as an opportunity for students who have a strong belief in Christ to use their God-given talents to spread the word of God," he said.

People who hear the choir sing frequently want to join, Powell said.

"After concerts, people come up and ask us about becoming a member of Visions of Light," he said. "Hearing us sing is the best recruitment."

Powell said the choir gives members a place to belong.

"It provides a link," he said.

"We use it to promote positiveness in the community, city and state. A lot of times you hear so much of the negative."

The choir members try to give back to the community of Lubbock, he said.

"We spend a great portion of our time here each year," Powell said. "We try to be role models in our community."

Visions of Light began performing at Gospelfest twice a year, he said.

In the fall, the Gospelfest workshop is at Texas A&M and at University of Texas in the spring, Powell said.

Everyone is invited to attend the Sunday concert and to join the choir, he said.

Texas House should be televised statewide

The Texas House will be televised. Before you jump for joy and anticipate the excitement, know it will only be televised in Austin. Also, it will be only on cable. It should be televised across the state. "This month-long test will help us determine the feasibility of televising our sessions statewide in the future," Speaker Pete Laney told The Dallas Morning News. Hopefully, the televised sessions will be statewide soon. Though boring, C-SPAN shows Capitol Hill activity. The American people should have every opportunity to witness what goes on in the legislative process.

People need to see legislative sessions in their entirety to get the complete picture of government. The media try their best to get the message out to Texas residents but only have so much time or space.

This is where broadcasting the sessions across the state comes in.

Residents and voters will have the opportunity to witness an entire session, or at least have the choice to tune in if the "Days of Our Lives" Marlina-possession thing gets too old to watch.

We cannot all be in Austin, but watching TV is no problem.

With all the technology, bringing the Texas House into our living rooms is not difficult and would be of great benefit to all Texans.

The test is only in Austin because there are additional costs in transmitting the sessions across the state, but there are no additional costs in transmitting them to Austin's cable system, Laney said.

The House televises floor sessions in the Capitol through a closed-circuit system, the Dallas Morning News reported.

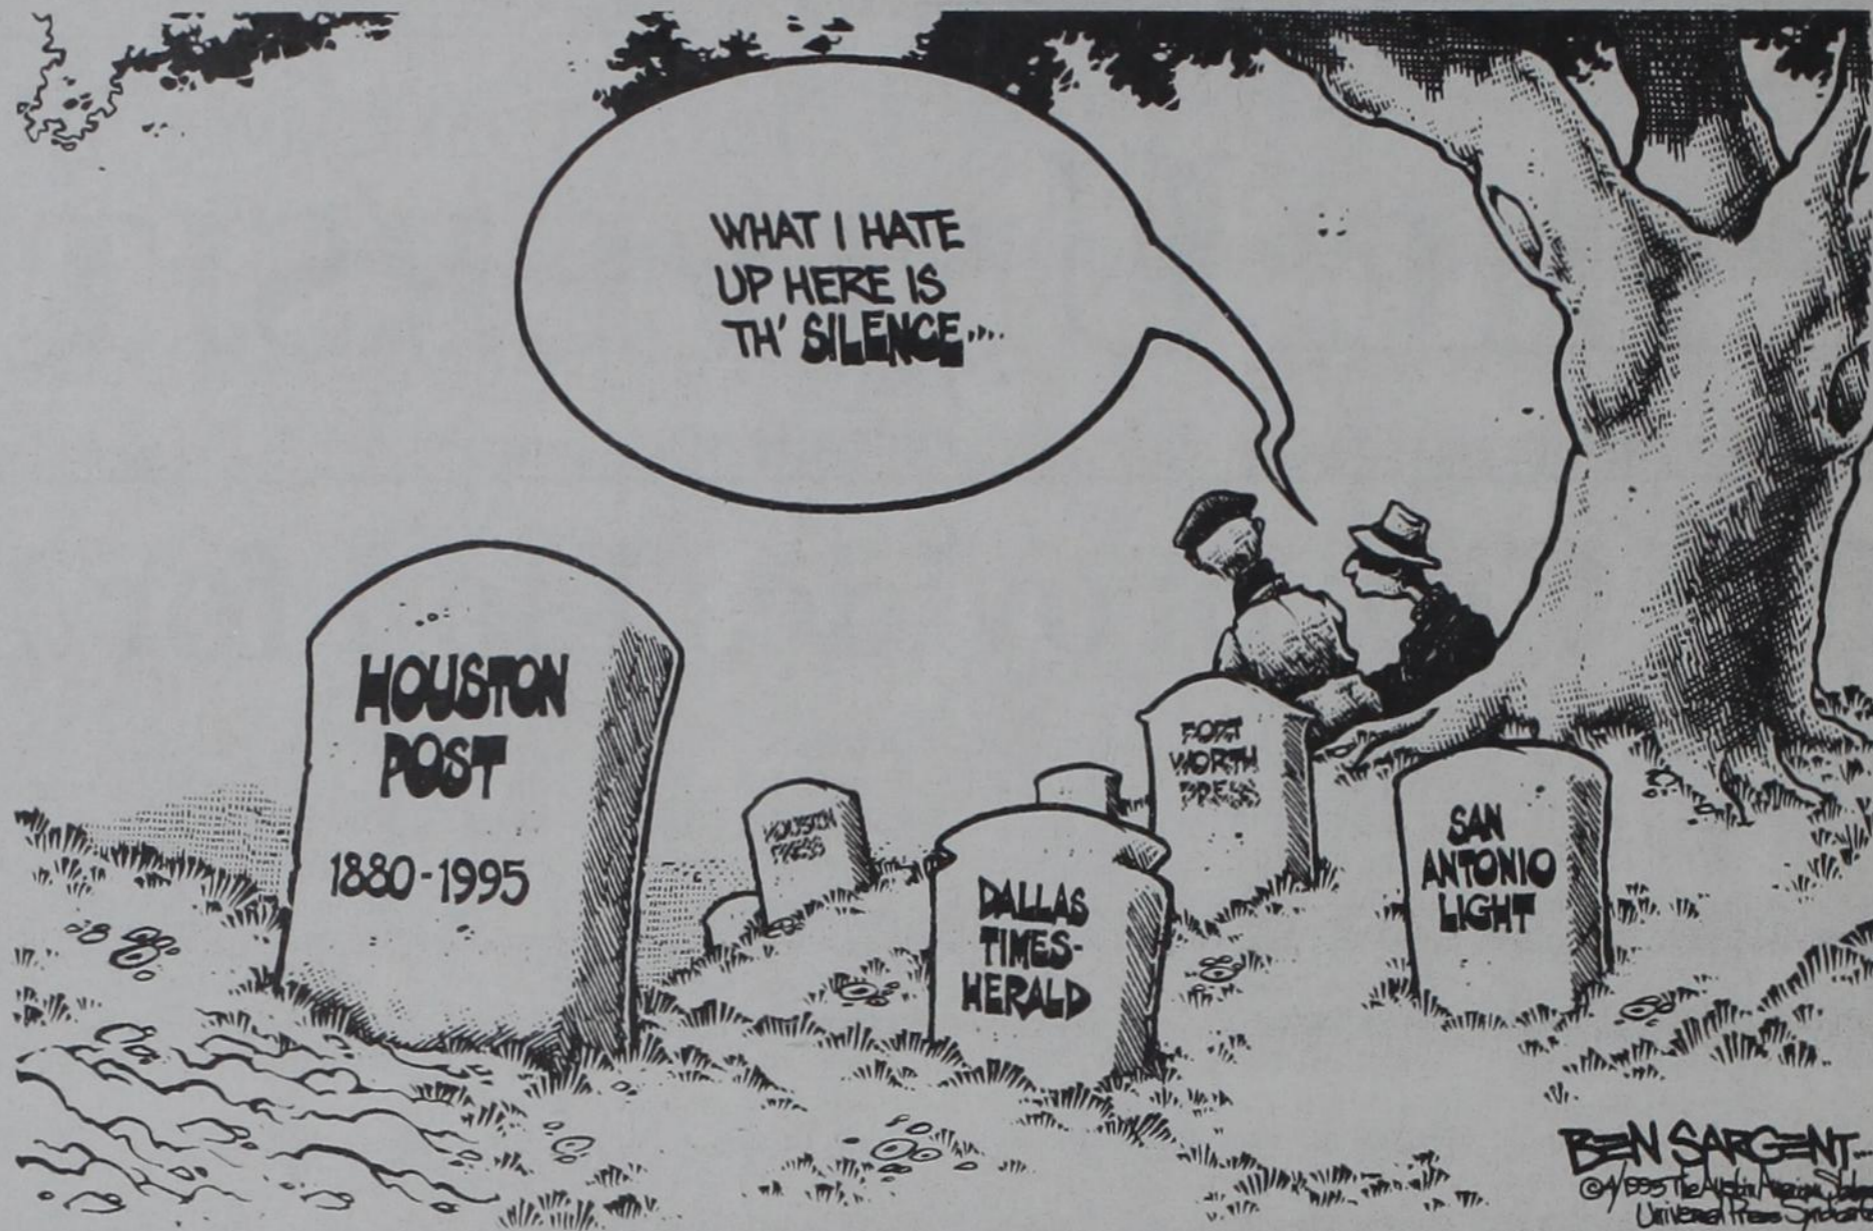

The tests will run with the afternoon sessions, starting at 1 p.m. until adjournment or 6 p.m., the paper reported.

The cut-off time is 6 p.m. because of "other programming commitments on the cable system."

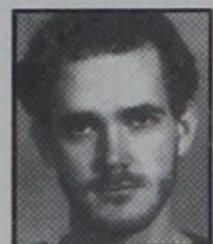

And hey, we all need a little entertainment.

What better place to get that than in the Texas House? Just ask Molly Ivins.

Lubbock offers much for those staying for summer

Chris Walters

This is the point in the semester where no matter where one goes, one overhears the summer plans of others. Some people are going back to their families in other parts of Texas, some are going on vacations to Europe or the coast, and some are moving away for good.

Ha ha ha, do I pity you poor people. A summer in Lubbock is not something you can experience just anywhere.

It's interesting to note that in the touristy sorts of publications about Lubbock, Tech is always named as one of the hot spots to check out. So what about those who go to Tech all the time? It certainly doesn't feel like a hot spot, and even if it is I don't want to be here any more than I have to. I can't really see myself taking a tour of the Health Sciences Center or browsing through the Southwest Collection.

I've tried to come up with a list of other things to do while staying here for the next four months. This was the most challenging column I've ever written.

To begin with, there's Prairie Dog Town. It's an acre or so of rocky wasteland (I mean grassland) enclosed by a short concrete wall. If squirrels don't faze you, then give this place a try. Some of the older dogs look like — well, like dogs. Or footstools. They're big, I tell ya, and the ground is so pitted with holes and burrows that the whole area looks like a radioactive minefield. There's the Ranching Heritage Center, where you get to walk around and look in old houses. There's also the Buddy Holly statue on Avenue Q, by the Civic Center. You can stand near this statue and have your picture taken. Then you can, um, look at the picture, I guess.

If you get a chance, go to the Science Spectrum. It gets old fast, but there are some fun exhibits there. The Omnimax theater is currently showing a movie about sharks, and later in the summer will show a movie about "taking your body to the limits." (That's what the woman on the phone told me.) I don't know what taking one's body to the limits entails, exactly, but I'm hoping it's something I'll want to see on a screen so large I feel as if I'm really there.

Another point of interest is Lubbock's International Airport.

Why is it a point of interest? I don't know, but it's always listed (just like Tech) on the tourist brochures. Maybe the airport officials will let you ride the luggage merry-go-round, or taxi some of the smaller planes.

Some may not know this, but Lubbock has an amusement park. Their rollercoaster rises at sixteen feet from the ground — I've been in auto accidents that were more exciting, but it's better than fighting for the swingsets at the parks.

A student's best bet is probably the Depot District, with its Cactus Theater and the Hub City Brewery, where one can sample homemade alcoholic beverages. One can then, after wetting one's lips here, truck out to the strip and purchase even more beverages to sample in the privacy of one's home.

Letters to the Editor

LETTERS POLICY: Letters to the editor are accepted for publication on the OPINIONS page. All letters MUST be no longer than two, typed, double-spaced pages. Unsigned letters will NOT be published. Letters must be submitted in person or by mail with picture identification and a telephone number. Letters are printed at the editor's discretion, and the editor reserves the right to edit letters for length, libelous material, spelling and vulgarity. The University Daily does not discriminate because of race, creed, national origin, age, sex, sexual preference or disability.

Karl Marx did not advocate gun control, gay rights, multiculturalism or U.S. sovereignty. Not only were these non-issues in Karl Marx's day, but any interpretation of his writings would find that he felt that the proletariat should have guns in order to sweep aside the bourgeoisie, he was opposed to homosexuality, believed in a singular culture for all citizens (sound familiar), and that he despised the United States which was involved in slavery at the time he wrote the Communist Manifesto. Furthermore, Marx was intolerant of socialist ideology believing that it did not go far enough to emancipate the proletariat. Therefore, it is quite obvious to any well read person that Karl Marx did not value "socialism, U.S. sovereignty..., gun control, multiculturalism and gay rights."

In fact, I stated that "Our freedom from the tyranny of British Rule was won through violence only after the British Imperial army used violence against the colonists." My point being that violence and force are methods of last resort only to be used after negotiation, plurality and democracy have failed.

There is no doubt in my mind that weapons have saved many oppressed people from the domination of their oppressors. But, I doubt whether you or the rest of your ilk are either oppressed enough to justify a use of force or responsible enough to speak for the rest of us peace-loving Americans. If you want to start a race war, cultural war or World War III, please leave us out of it.

The inane letter writers who do an injustice to the noble conservative philosophy have advocated discrimination, restricting the liberties of women and homosexuals, censorship, arming themselves against their fellow citizens and spreading of malicious propaganda against those who oppose them. These are not American ideals. They are Adolf Hitler's vision of the Third Reich. If you don't like either the fact that other Americans think differently than yourselves or everything else America truly stands for, then you too are free to leave.

The debate has grown increasingly tiresome and I have sought to respond to your blind fanaticism with fact and logic. So I leave you with the advice of Thomas Jefferson which I will endeavor to follow: "In the fevered state of our country, no good can ever result from any attempt to set one of these fiery zealots to rights, either in fact or principle. They are determined as to the facts they will believe, and the opinions on which they will act. Get by them, therefore, as you would by an angry bull; it is not for a man of sense to dispute the road with such an animal."

Mark A. Konty

Writer dismayed about mistakes on letters

To the editor:

As a fairly frequent contributor of letters to the editor (this is now the sixth thus far this term), I would like to register my dismay and disappointment at having yet another letter mangled at the hands of whoever is responsible for retyping my grammatically correct, properly spelled, thematically coherent, and (I think) reasonably well-argued prose. Not a single letter has yet escaped some form of corruption. Most common are the unmarked (that is, without editorial ellipses) omissions, a practice that often reduces what was once a compelling argument into word salad. Other editorial errors include frequent misspellings (of the sort that sometimes radically alter the meaning of the sentence: dies for does; nor for not; shoe for show; caught for bought), inappropriate replacement ("ideas" for "hearts") and repetitions of whole clauses.

I can appreciate the editor's "right to edit letters for length, libelous material, spelling and vulgarity." Given the volume of letters with which The UD must contend with on a daily basis — doubtless, letters of uneven technical quality and conceptual merit — perhaps some errors are inevitable. But so many? And so often?

Personally, the regularity of the editorial adulteration makes me wonder why I bother to so painstakingly craft my letters. Why submit my ideas to routine misrepresentation? It's the letter writer's name that appears at the bottom of each letter, not the editor's.

Yet reader's will probably attribute any and all blunders to the named author. Moreover, the letter writer's intention may be so distorted in "translation" as to be lost all together.

I implore the editor to exercise more care, and greater editorial restraint, in reproducing letters for The UD. It is only when this occurs that readers may have confidence that the contents of the Opinions page correspond to those held by the letter writers; and only then will letter writers feel that their opinions can be safely entrusted to The UD staff for publication.

Kurt A. Bruder

Attempts at labeling writer frivolous

To the editor:

This letter is a response to the weak-minded reactionary yahoos who continue to claim a monopoly on patriotism, liberty and freedom. Your insidious attempts to label me and other thinking Americans as treacherous, traitorous threats to the American way of life have now become insulting insinuations as opposed to the mindless, yet harmless drivel which you normally spout. These incriminations are challenged forthwith.

Not one of my positions which you cite are even remotely related to "Karl Marx's utopian values." As any second term freshman knows,

Speaker slated to discuss gangs, youth

By Gary Black
The University Daily

Drugs, gangs and community awareness are issues national speaker Milton Creagh will focus on in an upcoming address aimed at Lubbock's youth and community members.

Creagh will speak at 7 p.m. May 9 at the Estacado High School Auditorium and at 7 p.m. May 10 at the Lubbock Garden Arts Center, 4215 University Ave.

"Milton is a national speaker that challenges children, young adults, parents and community members to take responsibility for what is going on in our community," said George Comiskey, Lubbock Independent School District drug education specialist. "As summer approaches, kids have so much time. Some kids are unstructured all summer long, and that is when gang activity and drugs increase. Kids are socially active, and, because of that, kids get into long-term problems."

Creagh is outspoken about what goes on in communities throughout the nation, Comiskey said.

"Milton lived in Atlanta for a number of years, and if you know anything about Atlanta, it is very racially diverse," he said. "Milton is the kind of person who will get in someone's face, and he is not the kind of person to let someone he knows go out and hurt themselves."

Milton is the kind of person who will get in someone's face.

George Comiskey

Creagh was asked to visit Lubbock after he was seen speaking at the Texas War on Drugs last summer, Comiskey said.

"We met him there, and then a group from the Lubbock Housing Authority saw him in Amarillo, and they were impressed," he said. "He is just real involved in the community. It was just a natural progression of his efforts that he continued to take on the issues."

LISD and Lubbock's Human Relations Committee joined the LHA in bringing Creagh to Lubbock, said Charles Hobdy, LHA drug elimination program coordinator.

"My target is the youth here," Hobdy said. "We also hope to captivate Lubbock adults as well.

Creagh is coming from a prevention standpoint. He is good at filling the audience out and giving them what they want. It would be a disappointment not to see him."

The LHA uses a program modeled after Creagh's parent-to-parent program, Hobdy said.

"We use his program as a model to deliver within our housing authority residence," he said. "The parent-to-parent program is to help parents enhance their relationships with their kids. It teaches parents to identify problems with kids. For example, it teaches parents to be up when kids get home from a date to smell their breath, check them out or whatever."

Anything that happens within the community also happens within the schools, Comiskey said.

"Those kids bring the problems to school," he said. "There is a saying that goes, 'It takes a village to raise a child.' You have to be willing to take a stand. We have to hold our children accountable for what they do."

Both presentations will provide free child care and are open to the public free of charge. For more information, contact the LISD Drug Education Office at 766-1968.

College of Education students, faculty receive awards

By Gary Black
The University Daily

Faculty, students and friends of Texas Tech's College of Education were honored at the college's 1995 awards and recognition ceremony Thursday in the Merket Alumni Center Banquet Hall.

"I have been truly privileged to serve as the dean of the College of Education," said Elaine Jarchow, College of Education dean. "Our faculty are excellent. We think of ourselves as a dynamic unit of scholars and learners."

Len Ainsworth, Tech professor and vice provost, was honored as a retiring faculty member and as a distinguished alumnus.

"He has been a part of Texas Tech University," said Larry Hovey, College of Education associate dean. "I doubt that anyone else has the institutional history Len does. We will miss him greatly. He has been a real friend of education."

Jarchow said she appreciated Ainsworth's counsel and his eagerness to help the college.

Ainsworth, who will teach at Tech part time next school year, said the students make the difference in education.

"I feel good having been associated with the college for some time," he said. "The College of Education is an excellent place to work because you are involved with incredible people."

Other retiring faculty include John Nevius and Maryanne Reid.

Devri Conlin, a senior elementary education major from Skellytown, was named outstanding undergraduate student.

"I was shocked," Conlin said. "I was immersed in my student teaching and didn't think of myself as a student, but as a teacher. When I got the call, it reminded me that I am a part of Texas Tech and will always be a part of Texas Tech."

Other student recognitions included Paige Furgerson, outstanding master's student, and Ellen Sigler, outstanding doctoral student.

The Donald McDonald Excellence in Teaching Award was presented to Katie Button, assistant professor of curriculum and instruction.

"Katie is the model of a lifelong learner and teacher," Jarchow said.

Louise Arnold, president of the Helen DeVitt Jones Foundation, received the 1995 Friend of Education Award for her service to the education community.

Faculty awards were presented to William Lan, Terence Ahern and Ron Opp.

Other honors included recognition of scholarship recipients and donors and numerous student awards.

One in four children at risk for ozone-related problems

ATLANTA (AP) — One in four children is at risk for health problems because ozone in their communities exceeds government standards, health officials said Thursday.

The risk to minorities is greater because they are more likely to live in cities where ozone limits are exceeded, such as Los Angeles, New York City, Atlanta, Houston and Detroit, the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention reported.

Although ozone in the upper atmosphere forms a protective barrier against ultraviolet radiation, at lower levels it is a major component of smog and causes respiratory problems and irritation of the eyes and mucous membranes.

Levels of the pollutant dropped by 12 percent from 1984 to 1993, but 104 counties and cities still exceeded the limit during 1991-1993, according to the Environmental Protection Agency. About 12.1 million children ages 13 and younger, lived in those polluted communities.

Scholarship created to commemorate Tech student

By Angela Murray

The University Daily

A new scholarship has been established in the Texas Tech College of Business Administration in honor of Melinda Ann Lee, a Tech student who died Dec. 7.

Melinda was injured in an auto accident in Lubbock Oct. 14 and died after 54 days in the University Medical Center intensive care unit.

"Melinda received a broken arm, broken collar bone, broken ribs, ruptured diaphragm and severe internal injuries to the liver and kidneys," Melinda's father Don Lee said.

Melinda went through five surgeries and an extended time period in UMC's ICU unit but was never taken off the critical list, Don Lee said.

"Melinda never complained, never cried, never asked us any tough questions and always managed a smile for everyone that visited her," he said. "We feel that a scholarship in Melinda's name will be a tribute to her life. We hope this scholarship will help others."

Melinda was a junior marketing major and a member of Alpha Chi Omega sorority at the time of her death, he said.

Melinda was named to the Dean's List for three semesters and was accepted to the Golden Key National Honor Society.

"We were so proud of Melinda's accomplishments," Don Lee said. "She loved Tech and all the people associated with the university."

Her dedication was one of the reasons why the family felt the need to establish a scholarship in her name, he said. The scholarship seemed appropriate because Melinda made her parents proud to be her mother and father, he said.

The scholarship criteria has not been established but should be by the beginning of the fall semester, said Deborah Finlayson, College of Business Administration college development director.

"Melinda knew a lot of people at Tech, and we want her friends, sorority sisters and classmates to have a way to honor her," Finlayson said.

Interest from the endowment will be used to distribute the scholarship money, Finlayson said.

"There will always be the Melinda Ann Lee Scholarship," she said. "It will be a perpetual thing, which will last for a long time and be a lasting tribute to her."

The first scholarship recipient should be in the spring semester of 1996, she said.

"Melinda was a special person to us and was always a good student who never caused us a moment's trouble," Don Lee said.

"Patsy (Melinda's mother) and I made an initial payment used to establish the fund, but we plan to make future contributions," he said.

"We hope there are others who will join us in supporting this scholarship fund to honor her life," he said.

Alpha Chi Omega and Phi Sigma Beta, a business fraternity of which Melinda also was a member, will donate money to the endowment fund, said Dawn Dennis, a senior marketing major from Conroe and Melinda's sorority sister. Other students who wish to donate to the fund should direct their contributions to Finlayson at the College of Business Administration.

No new information concerning bombing diary

FORT WORTH (AP) — Officials have received reports that a suspect in the Oklahoma bombing had planned other attacks, but have no information about a diary outlining plans for three simultaneous explosions, a Justice Department spokesman said Thursday.

The Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported that federal authorities have found a diary in which Timothy McVeigh, the only person charged so far in the bombing, and associates outline plans for simultaneous bombings in Oklahoma City, Phoenix, and Omaha, Neb.

The diary says the group didn't have time to acquire enough explosives for all three cities and decided to concentrate on the Oklahoma City federal building, the newspaper reported Thursday, quoting two unidentified high-ranking federal officials.

Justice Department spokesman Carl Stern and Weldon Kennedy, the FBI agent in charge of the investigation in Oklahoma, said they had no information about a diary.

As for the reports of other planned bombings, Stern said, "Of course, we've received reports that McVeigh planned other attacks. We take them all seriously" and check each out. Stern specifically mentioned the published accounts of someone who looks like McVeigh casing a federal building in Omaha.

In Omaha, U.S. Attorney Tom Monaghan and FBI Special Agent in Charge Tom Lusby issued a written statement late Thursday saying that U.S. Department of Justice officials had assured them that the department "has no knowledge of the existence of any diaries" purportedly by McVeigh. They said heightened security measure have been put in place in Omaha area federal buildings and the Lincoln federal building.

One source told the Star-Telegram that the diary "also suggests that the individuals had cased the places and were aware of all the tenants in those buildings at all three locations."

That would indicate the culprits knew there was a day care center in the federal building. At least 14 of the dozens of victims were children.

The newspaper didn't specify who kept the diary, how many people were involved in the plot or what deadline the bombers were trying to make.

However, the bomb went off exactly two years after the deadly government raid that ended the standoff at the Branch Davidian compound in Waco. Authorities say McVeigh held extreme anti-government views.

He was arrested during a traffic stop 90 minutes after the explosion but was not linked to it until two days later. The sources said they didn't know when or where the diary was found or whether it mentions anyone other than McVeigh by name.

Gun control part of new agenda

TORONTO (AP) — Justice Minister Allan Rock says a tough, universal gun control law is necessary to stem crime in Canada — and could head off the formation of private American-style militias.

Gun control opponents complain that the clear reference to the Oklahoma City bombing — linked to a private militia — is fearmongering. A gun control bill in its final stages, with a parliamentary committee conducting a month of hearings before the House of Commons gives final approval, probably before summer.

The justice minister says he will accept only minor alterations, and passage is near certain.

The government's bill would stiffen jail terms for people convicted of using guns in the commission of a crime, crack down on firearms smuggling, restrict ammunition sales and require registration of guns in Canada by 2002.

Education dean looks at past year's goals, successes

Jarchow plans to boost grant fund, recruit minority faculty members, initiate faculty senate in college

By Linda Carriger
The University Daily

Money, minorities, membership and multiculturalism — new College of Education Dean Elaine Jarchow set goals for the year in these areas and met them.

Hired in June 1994, Jarchow achieved one of her main goals through the Development Council.

The council will raise money for the college, she said. As a part of that responsibility, the council has created a new semiannual magazine for alumni of the college.

"I would list that as an accomplishment," she said.

Jarchow also is planning to boost grant funds for the college.

"It's important for a college to get federal grants and state grants because they let you undertake exciting projects," she said.

The dean said she will put people specifically in charge of getting more grant money.

"We may change some job descriptions so that we can get the job done," she said.

Besides concentrating on money matters, Jarchow also is meeting her faculty.

"I was attracted here because there was an outstanding faculty."

But, she said, the faculty was missing a strong percentage of minority members.

Of the 65 faculty members in the college, only three were minorities, Jarchow said.

The dean's active pursuit of minority faculty resulted in the addition of two black and one Hispanic professor next fall.

"It helps minority students to have role models," she said. "Students also will be better prepared in the world they teach."

Her focus on faculty, however, did not stop at minority numbers. Jarchow is initiating a faculty senate for the college.

"They will review changes in policy and procedures and be able to initiate their own policy and procedures," she said.

The faculty senate is a good idea, Larry Hovey, associate dean of undergraduate education, said, but he is not sure if it will be a success.

"Those things are difficult to sus-tain sometimes because the faculty is very busy," he said. "So we'll have to wait and see what happens."

Hovey complimented the dean on her responsiveness to faculty.

"She's very fair-minded and concerned about having an open-door policy for the faculty and administrators," he said.

Jarchow is trying to keep an open-door policy with the community as well.

"Sometimes it's very easy for a university to become insular, ivory-towerish, where it doesn't appear that we reach out to the people who are close to us.

"We want to assure the people in West Texas, the school superintendents and all, that we do want to know what they are thinking," Jarchow said.

She is accomplishing this goal by introducing local teachers to the faculty.

Two local teachers will be released from their school districts, on a half-time basis, to work with Tech education students.

"I think the fact that they have been recently teaching will be very good for our students," she said.

Giving students a multicultural experience by traveling abroad or by bringing foreign professors to Tech is another goal Jarchow accomplished this year.

On Wednesday, several students attended a seminar, sponsored by the International Student Teaching Program, on studying in New Zealand, and several foreign professors have come here, she said.

"I think the college has become more international as a result of our visitors from overseas," Jarchow said. Visitors from India, Australia and New Zealand came for a week to work with faculty and students throughout the year.

But Jarchow said she is not looking back and basking in her accomplishments, she already has a new goal for next year.

She wants to start an assessment program for the college, Jarchow said.

"We're doing all this stuff, but how do you know that it makes a difference?" she said.

Jarchow said she plans to talk to an assessment expert to develop a program that tracks education students.

It also will answer questions for administrators, she said.

"Do you know what you want your students to be like when they finish," Jarchow said, "and how do you know that they're getting to that point?"

Another man convicted for Normangee bank heist role

HOUSTON (AP) — A 24-year-old man has been convicted for his role in last summer's botched heist of the Normangee State Bank.

A federal jury in Houston on Thursday convicted Gerald Harris of acting as an accessory and receiving stolen money in connection with the Aug. 23, 1994, heist, U.S. Attorney Gaynelle Griffin Jones said.

Prosecutors said Harris, a security guard at a Houston-area hospital at the time, accepted more than $20,000 of the stolen money.

U.S. District Judge Lee H. Rosenthal set sentencing for July 7. Harris faces up to 25 years in prison and a $500,000 fine.

April 12, a federal jury in Waco found 24-year-old Julius Sephus guilty of killing Ruby Parker, 82, after the robbery. Sephus also was found guilty of bank robbery, weapons and carjacking charges.

Two co-defendants, Hashim Esteban Thomas, 19, and his brother, Steven Lee Thomas II, 17, were convicted on federal bank robbery charges.

Prosecutors said Sephus planned the heist and shot Mrs. Parker to death at a cemetery where bandits met after the robbery with their take of $170,000.

Parker was visiting her husband's grave at Hopewell Cemetery near Normangee when Sephus demanded her car and she refused.

The Thomas brothers and Sephus are to be sentenced later this spring. Another nine people have pleaded guilty to charges connected with the heist.

Special nature license plates available

AUSTIN (AP) — Motorists could buy specially designed Texas nature license plates under a bill that has won Texas Senate approval.

The bill by Sen. Jeff Wentworth, R-San Antonio, passed on a vote

Thursday and goes to the House.

The nature license plates would cost $30, on top of the normal motor vehicle registration fee. Part of the money would go toward conservation the state highway fund.

Convicted killer donates kidney

DOVER, Del. (AP) — Convicted killer Steven Shelton got a chance Thursday to do something his brother could not: donate a kidney to save their mother's life.

The brothers were both sentenced to die for beating a man to death after an 18-hour drinking binge in 1992.

Nelson Shelton, who offered to give his kidney first but was not a compatible donor, was executed in March. Steven Shelton was scheduled to die April 5, but received a stay because he has not exhausted his appeals.

For their mother, Vesta Shelton, the relief of finally getting a new kidney that can renew her life has been muted by her sorrow over one son's death and the pending execution of another.

Steve Shelton, 29, was in fair condition Thursday at Wilmington Hospital after a three-hour operation to remove his kidney. The kidney was then taken to Thomas Jefferson University Medical Center in Philadelphia, where his mother underwent a five-hour transplant operation.

"Her surgery is finished and she's under surgical intensive care. Steven Shelton is recovered from anesthesia and doing fine," Dr. Michael Moritz, the director of transplant surgery at Jefferson, said Thursday afternoon.

Moritz operated on Steven Shelton in Wilmington.

He then helped Dr. John Radomski complete the operation on Vesta Shelton.

The inmate's medical costs are being covered by his mother's insurance.

"Steven was looking forward to the opportunity, was quite eager to go ahead," Moritz said.

"Not surprisingly, his mother was looking forward to being freed from the rigors of dialysis."

The transplant is not the first from an inmate to a relative. But it's believed to be the first time an inmate condemned to die has donated an organ.

Officials at the Death Penalty Information Center in Washington and the United Network for Organ Sharing in Richmond, Va., knew of no other death row transplant cases.

In the 1970s in Florida, death row inmate Shabaka Waglini, who was later found innocent and released, was not allowed to donate a kidney to a relative, according to the American Civil Liberties Union's Capital Punishment Project in Washington.

In 1992, a Florida court denied a request from inmate Daniel Farries, who was serving a 34-year sentence, to give him the death penalty so he could donate his organs for transplants.

The ACLU's Diann Rust-Tierney said Shelton's case points to a need to re-evaluate the death penalty because it shows that no matter how heinous the crime, the condemned inmates are still part of "the human community."

If he had been executed, Mrs. Shelton might not have found a compatible donor, she said.

"We're talking about human beings who are connected to other people, where again, the punishment the state metes out has an impact on them," Rust-Tierney said.

When Nelson Shelton first asked to donate his kidney, correction officials turned him down.

But after threatening to file appeals and tie his case up in court for years, officials relented.

Man who raped, murdered local woman receives stay of execution

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Former Lubbock District Attorney Alton Griffin believes some people forfeit their right to life and Clarence Lackey is one of them.

"There are depraved individuals and I think he is a depraved individual," said Griffin, who first sent Lackey to the Texas death row more than 17 years ago. "I don't see any socially redeeming feature in him that gives him a right to live."

Lackey, 40, was set for execution early today for the 1977 abduction, rape, beating and near-decapitation of 23-year-old Toni Diane Kumpf in Lubbock. A state appeals court described the apparently random fatal attack as "senseless, savage and cruel."

Lackey won a stay last Friday from U.S. District Judge Royal Furguson in Midland after attorneys argued that because of his 17-year stint on death row, executing him now would amount to cruel and unusual punishment.

State attorneys appealed and the reprieve was lifted late Wednesday by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans.

Defense attorneys asked for a re-hearing, but the request was denied late Thursday and the appeal went to the U.S. Supreme Court.

The argument about lengthy death row imprisonment has won some sympathy from Supreme Court Justice Paul Stevens, who last month wrote the subject was important and novel and deserved high court attention but only after it had been addressed by lower courts.

Lackey's attorneys said as a result of his lengthy death row imprisonment, the ninth-grade dropout suffered mental stress and was physically ill because he worried so much about dying.

"This is just ludicrous that these appeals go on and on and on," Jim Kumpf, whose daughter was killed, said.

In 1982, the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals threw out his conviction, ruling a juror improperly was dismissed at his trial, which had been moved to San Angelo because of publicity about the case in Lubbock.

He was tried a second time in Midland in 1983 and again received a death sentence. Lackey had previous convictions, including burglary and burglary with intent to commit rape. He had been out of prison less than six months when the Kumpf slaying occurred.

Teen-ager pleads guilty, faces death penalty in murder of Jordan's father

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — A teen-ager pleaded guilty Thursday in the murder of Michael Jordan's father.

He also agreed to testify against another man, almost two years after the killing helped push Jordan into retiring from basketball.

Larry Martin Demery, 19, faces a minimum of life in prison on the first-degree murder charge. He told Judge Gregory Weeks he understood he also could face the death penalty.

Sentencing will be delayed until after the trial of Daniel Green, 20, who is also charged in the July 23, 1993, killing of James Jordan. That trial has not been scheduled.

The 56-year-old Jordan was shot as he napped in his car on the shoulder of an highway south of town, while taking a break on a trip from Wilmington to Charlotte. His body was later found in a South Carolina swamp.

Demery originally pleaded innocent, but told police in August 1993 that he helped dispose of Jordan's body.

Michael Jordan, in Charlotte for the National Basketball Association playoffs against the Charlotte Hornets, said "Nope, none at all," when asked if he had any reaction.

Man fired after refusing to write Spanish on cake

SOUTHINGTON, Conn. (AP) — The manager of an ice cream store has been suspended after refusing a customer's request to write "Happy Birthday" in Spanish on a cake, telling her, "This is America."

Ana Dicklow had gone to the Carvel store Saturday to get an ice cream cake with a Spanish "Happy Birthday" greeting for her 80-year-old father.

Dicklow said she offered to spell it out for store manager Fred Craig or write it herself on the frosting, but Craig said: "Nope. This is America and I'll only write it in English."

"If someone had a match on me, I would've blown up!" she said.

"Why would anybody think this way any more? It's very backward." At first, Craig was unrepentant.

"I don't feel it's discriminatory. I was just stating my feelings," he told the Meriden Record-Journal on Wednesday.

But in a second interview, after his suspension without pay pending a company investigation, he said he realized his comment was "really stupid."

"I feel I brought dishonor to the company," he said.

At the privately owned Carvel Corp., officials said Thursday that customers at the company's more than 500 stores often ask for Spanish-language writing on cakes and that the requests are fulfilled.

"What Fred did was very distressing and surprising," said Randall Mathieson, Carvel vice president and general counsel. "Anybody who knows Carvel recognizes that we're a virtual United Nations."

Judge indicts alleged KFC killer on murder charges

HENDERSON, (AP) — The 42-year-old son of a former legislator was indicted Thursday in one of Texas' most notorious unsolved cases, the 1983 slayings of five people abducted from a Kentucky Fried Chicken restaurant.

A Rusk County grand jury issued five capital murder indictments against James Earl Mankins Jr. of Kilgore, said Texas Attorney General spokesman Ron Dusek.

The charges stem from the shootings of five people abducted from the Kilgore fast-food restaurant.

Mankins is the son of former state Rep. James "Jimmy" Mankins Sr. of Kilgore.

He appeared Thursday before state District Judge Donald R. Ross, who set bond at $500,000 on each of the five counts.

Handcuffed and wearing blue jeans, his eyes shaded by dark round sunglasses, Mankins told the court he was indigent and needed counsel appointed.

"Judge Ross, I have no attorney.

I am indigent and need an attorney immediately," he said. "I have turned myself in to Rusk County and seek your consideration. Thank you."

Mankins offered no comment to reporters as he was led into the Rusk County Jail.

The victims were kidnapped Sept. 23, 1983, during a $2,000 robbery near closing time.

The next day, their bodies were found on an oil lease in Rusk County, about 14 miles south of the now-defunct restaurant.

Each had been shot in the head. State prosecutors took over the case in November 1993.

Grand jurors reconvened Tuesday after recessing March 22 without taking an action.

It was the third round of hearings for the panel, which first met March 7-9.

Kilgore, an oil center of some 10,500, is also home of Kilgore College and an internationally known precision dance-drill team, the Rangerettes.

Two of the men abducted and slain that night, Joey Johnson and David Maxwell, were 20-year-old Kilgore College fraternity brothers.

The third victim, Monte Landers, 19, also attended Kilgore College.

Local artists create own festival

By Amy Osmulski
The University Daily

The Lubbock Arts Festival would not have them, so they went out and created their own show. Local artists who were left out of the city festival decided to create the Lubbock Artists Festival or Salon of the Ignored. "We usually work in association with the Lubbock Arts Festival, but this year they left us out," said Coby Cox, a local artist and Texas Tech student. "We wanted a way to get our stuff out in the public."

Cox said many local artists complained about being left out of the city festival, so a group of artists came up with an alternative. "Any artist is welcome," Cox said. "It is kind of like an anything-goes night." The festival will feature the work of 80 artists and a variety of works, including paintings, glass sculptures, bronze and performances in music, poetry, theatre and dance. The event will be from 6 p.m. to midnight Friday; 10 a.m. to midnight Saturday; and 1 p.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday in an abandoned office supply building at the corner of 15th Street and Texas Avenue. "We were looking for a spot close to the Lubbock Civic Center so people going to the Lubbock Arts Festival could just come by after they were done there," said Lahib Jaddo, co-coordinator of the Lubbock Artists Festival and a local artist. The building was donated to the artists by a stranger, who felt the cause was worthy. "We were trying to find a place to hold the event, when out of the blue, a guy we didn't know decided to help us," Jaddo said. "He found us a building, and it was donated for free to our cause." Jaddo said because the building was donated free of charge, artists do not have to pay a fee to exhibit, and the public has no admission fee. "There will be all sorts of artists' exhibits and their interpretations," she said. "The festival will show different aspects of Lubbock and the world." Local artists and Tech faculty and students from the undergraduate and graduate programs will be displaying their works in the festival.

Researchers celebrate rare event; baboon gives birth to set of triplets

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Researchers are hailing the recent birth of baboon triplets as the first by any of the so-called Old World primates, which include gorillas, chimpanzees and macaque monkeys.

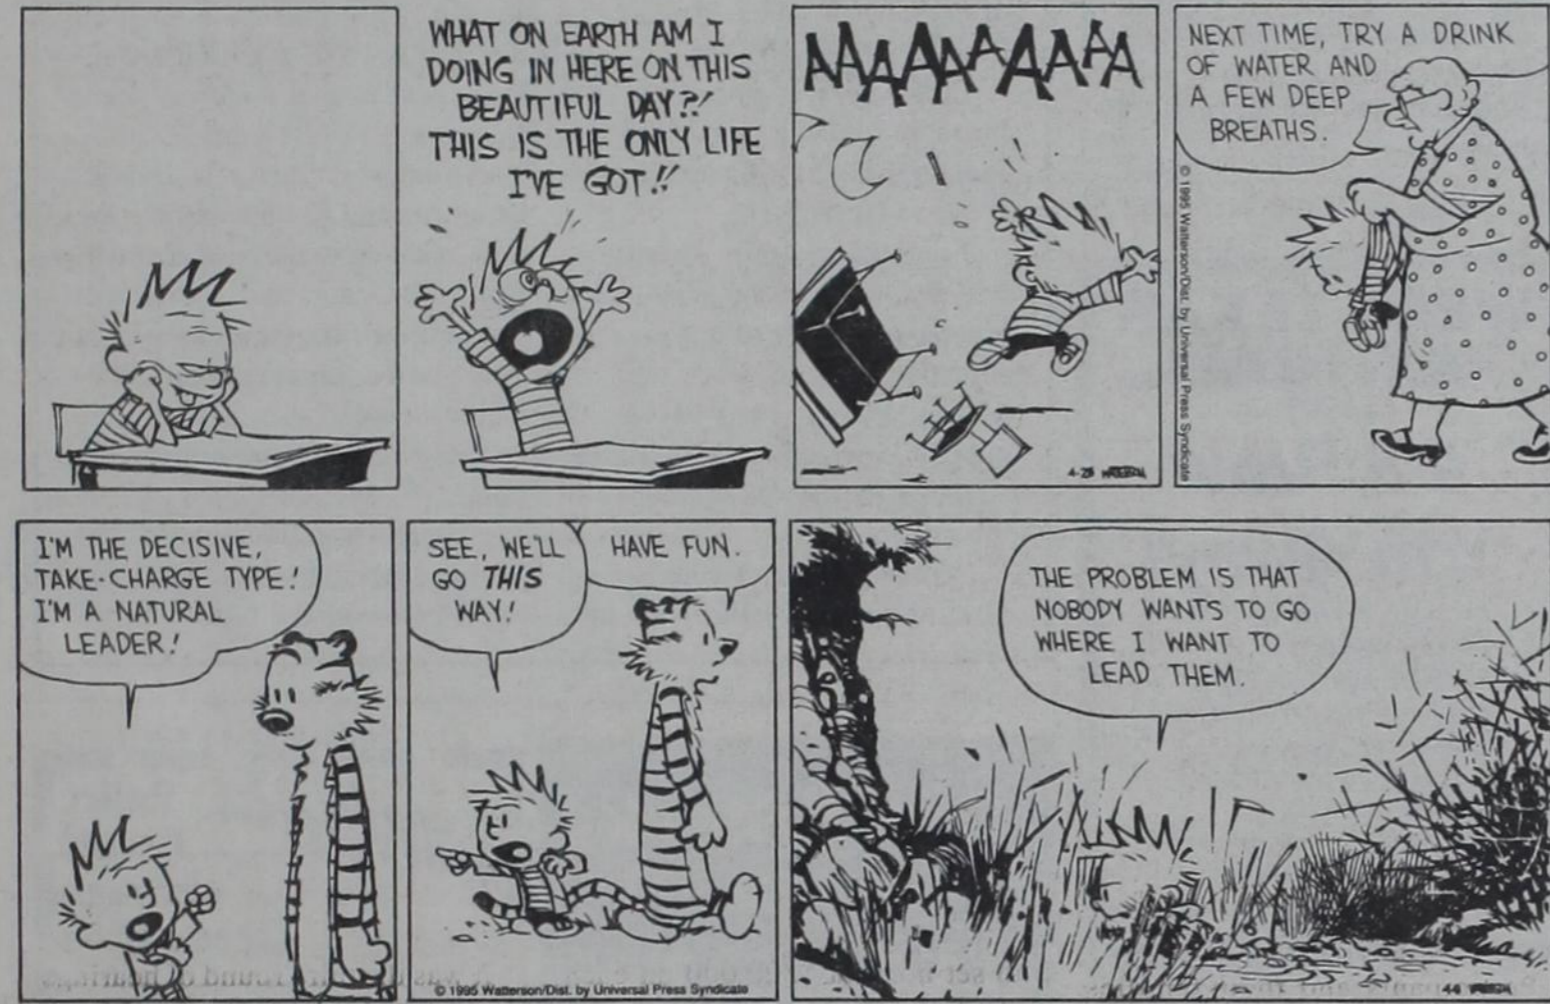

Foundation for Biomedical Research. Foundation researchers say they can't find a record of three or more live births among primates. "This is a unique event in primatology," said Dr. Michelle Leland, an assistant veterinarian who delivered the baboons by Caesarean section. The baboons weighed between 275 grams and 441 grams at birth, far less than the typical birth weight of 850 grams and 950 grams. The birth actually produced quadruplets, but a fourth died immediately from multiple defects. The remaining three survived because of high-tech care normally used on premature human infants. The treatment was possible because the foundation has a fully equipped neonatal intensive care unit.

Miss Texas fishes, speaks to high school students

HAWLEY— Even when Miss Texas goes fishing, she's working.

So, if you've been thinking that being Miss Texas is all fun and no work, well, think again. When she left Hawley after speaking to high school students Tuesday, Miss Texas Arian Archer headed back home to Dallas and then to Toledo Bend for a fishing expedition that will be filmed.

The taping is for a national program called, "Get Hooked on Fishing, Not Drugs."

Miss Texas says she loves fishing, even if she's working while doing it.

"I'm not good at it, but I'm learning," she said.

Fishing may be the only thing Miss Texas isn't good at.

She's very good at getting a message across to teen-agers, a message brought to them via a gifted singing voice and a youthfulness they can relate to.

Just 21 herself, Archer speaks the language of the younger generation and before they know it, students are as involved in her talk as she is.

Archer spoke to Hawley junior high students Monday and to the high school students Tuesday.

The two-day appearance in this Jones County town of 600 came because of her association with high school Principal Bob Keyes. Keyes was the athletic director and head football coach at Borger High School while Archer was a student there.

Archer's three-point talk — never give up, say no, and believe in yourself — no doubt was one the students were familiar with. But Archer wowed 'em with her renditions of "Jesus Loves Me" that reflected her stages of development.

It began with her precocious 4-year-old version, then progressed to Karen Carpenter, Barbra Streisand, an unnamed opera singer, and finally to Archer herself.

The students responded as Archer had hoped — although they laughed at the imitations, they loved the real Arian Archer "being herself."

Archer also related to the students her own version of "never giving up."

She placed last in the first three pageants she entered but didn't give up and eventually won the big prize.

"Nobody is going to hand you your dreams," she said.

On a somber note, Archer told the kids of her two-year bout with clinical depression before entering the Miss Texas pageant.

Archer urged the students to talk to someone if they are experiencing any symptoms of depression.

Pageant held today

The 12th Annual Miss Black Texas Tech Pageant will be held at 7 p.m. today in the University Center Coronado Room.

Seven contestants will compete in the pageant, which is sponsored by the Iota Upsilon Chapter of Kappa Alpha Psi. Admission costs $3.

Lubbock Fine Arts Festival continues

The 17th Lubbock Fine Arts Festival continues at 7 p.m. Friday at the Lubbock Civic Center with Preview Night, featuring "An Evening With the Artists." Admission costs $10. Singer and poet Andy Wilkinson and actor Barry Corbin will perform The Charlie Goodnight Concert at 7:30 p.m. Saturday in the Lubbock Civic Center Theater. Tickets cost $10. Exhibits will be open from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday and 12 p.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday. Admission is free.

discovery during a short break in a Scout meeting Tuesday. The wallet turned up at a playground near the site where Robbins is directing the movie "Dead Man Walking."

"I've found lots of things, $20 bills a couple of times and lots of fishing tackle," the boy said.

Robinson, Mutombo talk about playoff series

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Curiosity caught up with the San Antonio Spurs when word spread Thursday morning that the Denver Nuggets have a top-secret playoff scheme to use against them.

The Nuggets wouldn't divulge their tactics but noted the aim of their game plan is no secret at all.

They simply want to stop center David Robinson.

"We've got to try and contain him. Again, we've got to try and keep him off the free-throw line," said Denver coach Bernie Bickerstaff, whose Nuggets were 1-4 against San Antonio this season.

The teams meet Friday night in Game 1 of a best-of-5 Western Conference playoff series.

Nuggets center Dikembe Mutombo said there really is no "secret weapon" Denver can use against Robinson.

"There are things that we went over in practice that were going to help us really win this ball game," said Mutombo, the league's leading shot-blocker.

Whatever Denver has in store,

San Antonio will be ready, promised Robinson, who averaged 27.6 points and 10.8 rebounds this season.

"It'll be interesting to see what it is. After the first game, we'll make adjustments and see. There's not any big-time secrets. ... This is the NBA, and just about every defense you can see, you've seen," Robinson said.

San Antonio coach Bob Hill said it's understandable Denver would concentrate on shutting down Robinson, but he cautioned that other Spurs players — like Sean Elliott, Vinny Del Negro and Avery Johnson — also pose a scoring threat.

"It's well-documented that we have other weapons," Hill said.

The Spurs finished the regular season 62-20 — the best record in the NBA — while the Nuggets squeaked into the eighth playoff spot by defeating Sacramento in the final game.

Robinson said Denver's youth is an asset.

"They're just good, athletic kids, and they don't really have anything to lose. A team that doesn't have anything to lose really is a dangerous team," Robinson said.

Mutombo agreed. His team this past year defeated Seattle, which had the best regular-season record.

"The pressure always on the team that finishes with the best record," Mutombo said. "When you finish with the best record, you've got everybody tapping you on the shoulder, saying, 'Go, you can do it. You're going to win the championship.'"

"Sometimes you forget how heavy that pressure can be on your shoulder," he said.

Robinson wins IBM Award

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — David Robinson of the San Antonio Spurs won the IBM Award for the fourth time, a computerized rating measuring overall contributions to a team.

He led the Spurs to the NBA's best record (62-20). He averaged 27.6 points, 10.8 rebounds, 3.23 blocks and 2.9 assists per game.

He ranked third in the league in scoring, fourth in blocks and seventh in rebounding. Robinson was the Spurs' leading scorer in 64 games and leading rebounder in 35 games.

Runners-up for the award were Patrick Ewing of New York, Karl Malone of Utah, Dikembe Mutombo of Denver and Shaquille O'Neal of Orlando.

Robinson also won in 1990, 1991 and 1994.

Red Raiders to compete in Drake Relays in Iowa

By Bryan Adams

The University Daily

Texas Tech is sending a handful of tracksters to compete at the Drake Relays this weekend in Des Moines, Iowa.

Two Red Raiders will have another chance at qualifying for the NCAA Outdoor Championships, and two others will try to improve on their already qualified marks. Tech also will send three relay teams to compete in front of an expected crowd of more than 35,000 for one of the most prestigious track events in the United States.

"The Drake Relays used to be known as one of the triple crown meets of the year," Tech Assistant Coach Brad Pursley said. "It is very comparable to the Texas Relays or the Kansas Relays. Drake has a long history and a great tradition. It's definitely one of the premier relays."

Sophomore Tabitha Polk already has reached the provisional distance in the discus with a toss of 166-feet 5-inches April 15 at the San Angelo Relays.

Polk will try to improve on her throw in the shot put which was four inches shy of reaching the provisional mark.

Freshman Alicia Thompson will try to reach the provisional plateau by trying to improve her shot put mark of 47-5, and her discus throw of 144-11, to qualify. Senior Michelle Tobola also will be trying to qualify in the javelin.

"On the women's side, we are sending our three throwers up,"

Pursley said. "Jill Williams got an invitation to run in the 800 meters. We are also sending a couple of distance runners, Mandy Malouf and Luisa Tam. It's a great opportunity for them. This meet is kind of a reward for a good season. The players send entries in, and a committee decides who is invited."

The men will send junior Brent Schott who provisionally qualified in the intermediate hurdles with a time of 51.47 seconds April 1 at the UTEP Invitational. Jason Price needs to improve his pole vault of 17-0.75 by four inches to qualify.

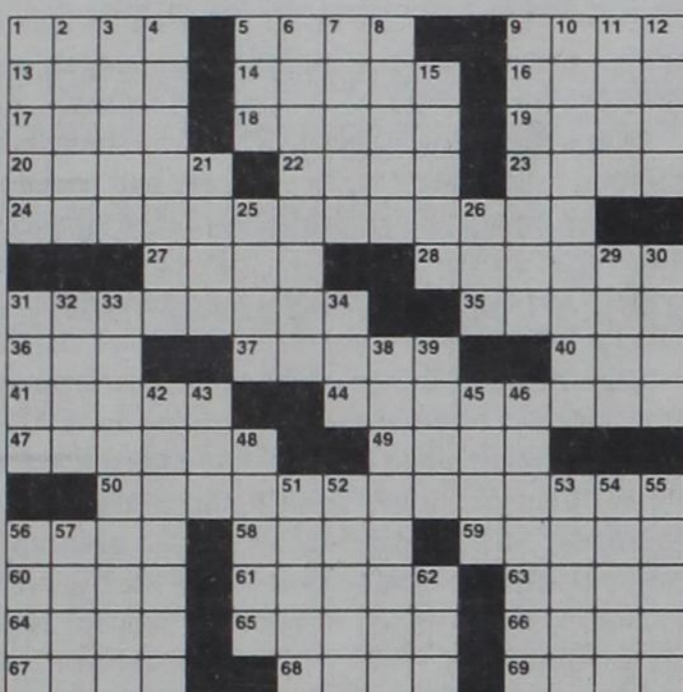

"Brent will do well in the hurdles, and Jason should do fairly well," Pursley said. "As for the relay teams, we'll just have to see. Our best chance is in the sprint medley. We'll run Lavarick Robinson, Gerrod Bergen, Keith Black and Don Koontz in that one. The sprint relay will be tough because we lost our best sprinter Dion Miller earlier in the season. The mile relay — you never know. We're adding somebody new to that team in Quent Beardon."

Andrew Callis, Black, Robinson and Koontz will run the 400-meter relay, and Schott, Black, Beardon and Callis will run in the 1,600-meter relay. Joe Perez will compete in the 3,000-meter steeplechase, and Brande Brown will compete in the triple jump.

"There's usually about 35,000 people there," Pursley said, "so (it) is great for the fans."

Local standout inks with Red Raiders

By Jonathan Harris
The University Daily

Texas Tech added another pitcher to its staff Thursday by signing local standout Chad Reynolds to a national letter of intent.

Reynolds, a right-handed pitcher from Frenship, has led the Tigers to a tie for first place in District 5-4A.

"Chad has excelled in high school in three sports, and we're looking forward to seeing how he does when he concentrates on baseball," Tech coach Larry Hays said. Reynolds is a four-year letterman in baseball and has been an all-district choice in both his sophomore and junior seasons. Reynolds compiled a 7-3 record this season with a 2.09 ERA.

As a sophomore, Reynolds helped the Tigers to a Class 4A state title game where Frenship lost to Mount Pleasant 3-2. Reynolds also set a school record in his junior year with a 1.70 ERA.

"I'm excited to have this opportunity to play at Tech," Reynolds said. "Coach Hays is one of the best coaches in the country, and they have one of the best programs anywhere. I'm looking forward to being a part of the team, and I'm especially happy to be able to play close to home."

Besides baseball, Reynolds also lettered in football and basketball at Frenship. In football, Reynolds was all-district, all-South Plains, all-city and all-state as a quarterback. He threw for 2,178 yards and 25 touchdowns while leading the state's Class 4A schools in passing as well as garnering all-district performer honors in basketball for the Tigers.

Crickets add another starting pitcher to staff

The Lubbock Crickets signed another pitcher to their staff Thursday by adding former Boston Red Sox farmhand Rick Licursi.

Licursi is a former standout at Sacred Heart College in Connecticut.

He has three years of professional baseball experience including one year with the Independent Salt Lake City Trappers of the Pioneer League.

"Rick brings more size and strength to our staff," said Greg Minton, manager of the Crickets. "Rick is also looking for another chance to prove himself and get closer to the majors."

Last season, he split time in Class A with High Desert in the California League with Lynchburg in the Carolina League, the 23-year-old was 4-16 with a 5.32 ERA in 25 starts.

Licursi joins pitchers Chris Law and Dennis Ferraro on the Crickets pitching staff.

Tech students should support Tech baseball

Jared Parcell

Well, it's that time of year when the school year winds down, and I have found out my weekly columns will come to a screeching halt. For those of you have kept reading faithfully, thank you. To those who hate them, ask me if I really care?

I've missed on a lot of predictions this year, so here goes one that can't miss — the Dallas Mavericks will not reach the playoffs, but you already knew that.

Enough with gazing into the crystal ball of emptiness, let's look at the sport being played at Dan Law Field — baseball.

The Red Raiders have the upper hand in the race for the regular-season crown, despite a 10-7 Southwest Conference record and a 1 1/2 game deficit on the Rice Owls (12-6) and the Texas A&M Aggies (12-6).

Tech controls its own destiny, because with four wins in their last seven games, they will reach the SWC postseason tournament, scheduled for May 18-21 at Olsen Field in College Station.

Today, Tech begins its search for the prize, at the expense of the Owls.

Give a hoot, and show your support to the eighth-ranked team in the nation. Three wins over Rice could put Tech in the driver's seat.

The (Reveille is a dog and part of the corp) Aggies take on the Texas (burnt orange looks bad on everyone) Longhorns, with one game in College Station and two in Austin.

I have not been much of a supporter of 'Horn athletics,' but two wins over A&M would make the Red Raider job a lot easier.

But Tech has four games against the Baylor (we allow no dancing around here) Bears after finals and after school gets out, so there is only one thing to do.

"Win the whole *$!@#% thing!" and convince your parents to let you stay here an extra week to watch the Red Raiders.

If things fall into place like I have envisioned above, then the clinching of the SWC regular season title would come against the Bears.

A&M finishes the season against the TCU Horned Frogs and Rice closes out against the Houston Cougars.

So come one, come all! Dan Law Field can handle the overflow of red and black because of the added seats construction crews are installing down the right and left field foul lines.

Jared Parcell is a sports writer for The University Daily.

Tech challenges Rice for SWC lead

By Jared Parcell

The University Daily

For the second consecutive week-end, the Texas Tech baseball team faces the first-place team in the Southwest Conference.

The Rice Owls, 36-12 overall and tied with Texas A&M at 12-6 in the SWC, bring their high-flying act to Dan Law Field for a three-game series with the Red Raiders (39-10, 10-7).

The opener of a seven-game homestand starts at 7 p.m. today. Tech, ranked as high as eighth nationally, concludes its 1995 campaign with a four-game series with the Baylor Bears, May 12-14.

"Last year we finished on the road and lost our momentum," center fielder Dax Holmstead said. "Hopefully, it will be the other way around this year. We always play well here, and we get good fans here. It's nice to be home and finish up at home."

The Red Raiders and the No. 11 Owls have met once on the baseball diamond this year, with Tech winning 9-2 at the First Pitch Tournament in Houston, March 18.

In the game, Rice collected six hits off Jeff Peck, but three were by Jose Cruz Jr.

Series record: Tech leads 52-38
Radio/TV: KKAM-AM 1340
Player to watch: Center fielder Jose Cruz Jr. (.388, 14 HR, 61 RBI) leads the Owls and is the SWC Player of the Week.

This week, Cruz was named conference player of the week for the second time this season. He is coming off a week in which he hit .500 in 22 plate appearances, including three doubles and four home runs. He drove in 17 and scored 10 runs. For the season, he is hitting .388 and has 14 home runs to lead the Owls. He is second on the team with 61 RBI, five behind Mark Quinn.

On the mound, freshman Matt Anderson is 9-1 with a 2.70 ERA. He has 51 strikeouts and 32 walks in 53 1/3 innings pitched.

"We've seen them play, and we know what they have," third baseman Clint Bryant said. "They have a good ball club with a bunch of good hitters. We can't just concentrate on Cruz. We have to approach everybody the same way. He's not their only weapon, by any means."

Tech is led by a high-powered offensive attack at the plate, hitting .342 as a team. Designated hitter Andy Gonzales (.433) and first baseman Randy DuRoss (.415) are leading a team that has 10 hitters batting .320 or better.

The Raiders have outscored opponents 469-245 this season. Bryant leads the team with 66 RBI while shortstop Dion Ruecker has 55 RBI along with 12 home runs.

Tech has homered in its last 12 games played, hitting a total of 53 this season.

"We need to execute offensively," said catcher David Lindstrom, who is hitting .359 with eight home runs. "We need to get our jobs done, moving runners over and getting guys in. If we do that, everything will take care of itself. Coach (Larry) Hays told me my role was predominately defense — block balls and control the pitching staff. I don't put any extra pressure on myself to perform with the bat."

Scheduled to start the three games for the Red Raiders this weekend are Travis Smith (6-3, 3.74 ERA), Jeff Peck (8-2, 2.96) and Matt Miller (8-3, 5.42).

Smith and Miller, both of whom have 61 strikeouts on the season, trail staff leader Brandon Kolb, who has 63.

Jimmy Frush is one of the likely candidates to appear from the bullpen. He is 4-1 this year with one save and a 3.38 ERA.

"If we get pitching, we stand a chance to do well," Tech coach Larry Hays said. "We need Frush in the game at the end. We've been able to go to him at any point in the game and let him equalize things. He is one of the biggest factors for us."

Astros blown out by Padres

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Bip Roberts tied a career high with four hits, Tony Gwynn homered and the San Diego Padres beat the Houston Astros 13-1 Thursday before a crowd of only 7,468.

Last year, the Padres' second home game of the season drew 15,201.

The Padres came back after losing 10-2 to Houston in the opener. The Astros hurt themselves with three errors that led to five unearned runs.

Andy Ashby (1-0) gave up one run on four hits in five innings.

Dave Magadan homered for the Astros' run.

Ashby did not win his first game last season until May 30. He was 0-5 after his first 10 starts.

Shane Reynolds (0-1) allowed four runs, all of them unearned, in three innings. He gave up six hits and three walks.

Roberts singled four times and reached base on an error in his other at-bat before being lifted in the seventh inning.

He has 12 other four-hit games, last accomplishing the feat June 27, 1994, at Colorado.

Alomar has surgery on knee

ARLINGTON (AP) — Sandy Alomar has undergone successful knee surgery and Cleveland Indians manager Mike Hargrove said his star catcher is expected back in six to eight weeks.

"I have a lot of confidence in Tony Pena and we'll be OK until Sandy gets better," Hargrove said prior to the Indians' game against the Texas Rangers. "We feel he'll be 100 percent when he comes back."

The procedure was performed in Vail, Colo., by Dr. Richard Stedman, who repaired the lateral meniscus of Alomar's left knee.

Alomar originally injured his left knee in November while playing winter ball in Puerto Rico.

The knee did not respond well to spring training workouts and Alomar went on the disabled list April 25.

Alomar will begin rehabilitation immediately under the supervision of Fernando Montes, the Indians strength and conditioning coach.
