Cogdell mulls management firm option

Cogdell Memorial Hospital board members expressed concern about turning over management of the hospital to a management company, but failed to close the door on that option during a noon meeting Friday.

The board of managers met to pay bills and discuss qualifications for the hiring of a new administrator to replace Cy Miller, who is to resign effective Dec. 31.

Board President Leon Autry said that he had named a search committee headed by long-time board member Rex Robinson. Other members of the committee are board secretary Dan Cotton; Dr. Bid Cooper, chief of the medical staff; and Wilma Dillard, president of the hospital auxiliary.

In the meeting board members expressed concerns about a management company. Board member Jackie Smith agreed more information is needed, but that the board should not rule out any option at this stage. Smith suggested that other presentations be heard.

The board did agree to place an advertisement in the Texas Hospital Association's publication to announce the Snyder administrative opening.

Robinson said he was against a management company, and Autry said, "Anything I've heard about management companies has been unsatisfactory."

Robinson added that he is opposed to the concept because a management company, buying in volume to save expenses, "wouldn't buy anything in Snyder."

McQueen said such a switch to a management company would need the support of the medical staff to be successful. He said he had discussed the concept with former hospital board members in three other towns and was told that physicians generally dislike

Ask Us

Q. — Who do you contact to file a tax exempt number for a church?

A. — Two kinds of taxes apply to your question. For income tax, a church is automatically exempt, but if you have questions, contact the Internal Revenue Service regional office in Dallas, 214-742-2440. Churches are exempt also from state sales tax, but this requires that the church be given its own number from the state comptroller's office. To contact this office, the number is (800) 252-5555.

Acting Company due here Oct. 27 with 'Much Ado'

The Acting Company, the "touring arm" of the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, will be in Snyder Oct. 27 to present Shakespeare's "Much Ado About Nothing."

Those expecting a "classical" production set in Elizabethan England, however, will be surprised. The play has been updated to 1930s Cuba, causing New York Post theatre critic Clive Barnes to write, "The idea at first sounds outlandish, but in practice it works remarkably well on every level."

The troupe of professional actors is described as America's only permanent, professional repertory theater company.

The Snyder performance has been secured through grant monies obtained by the fine arts committee of the Snyder Chamber of Commerce headed by Marci Dennis.

One show only is set Oct. 27--a Tuesday--in Worsham Auditorium, and tickets are now on sale. These are priced at $10 for reserved seats and $5 general admission. Patron tickets are available also for $25, which includes a reserved parking spot and valet parking.

The Acting Company was founded in 1972 and now is in its 16th national tour. In addition to communities the size of Snyder, it has annual dates scheduled in such cities as Houston, Los Angeles and New York. Its home base is New York, where it offers also an extended season of plays in its own theatre named for the company's founder, John Houseman.

To date, the company has traveled more than 387,000 miles, performing 60 plays in 303 cities, in 43 states, playing to more than 1.7 million people.

The 14 actors who will be performing here will complete a 47-week rehearsal and performance schedule. The stated purpose of the group is "to develop young, professional actors through performing a repertory of classical and contemporary plays and to bring these high quality productions to small towns and large cities throughout the country."

The current production of "Much Ado" is called a "sparkling comedy" which uses such

Post office burglary investigated

Scurry County sheriff's deputies are investigating a late Thursday or early Friday break-in at the Dunn post office in which a large number of blank money orders and a money order imprinter were stolen.

A sheriff's office spokesman said Saturday that a postal inspector from Lubbock and the Texas Rangers are also involved in investigating the burglary, which was discovered Friday morning.

Entry into the building was gained by breaking out a back window.

In addition to "less than 40" money orders and imprinter, a small, as yet undetermined amount of cash was taken, the deputy said.

Leather shop new exhibit for museum

Anyone who ever visited a leather shop comes away with one memory--how it smells. The mingled odor of new leather and old and the leather dressings are as distinctive as that of a bakery.

The Scurry County Museum's new permanent exhibit--opening here Sunday afternoon in conjunction with the museum's fall art show and sale--can't guarantee to reproduce the smell, but it will reproduce much of the aspects of this early business depended on heavily by farmers and ranchers of the area.

The exhibit is based on Rudder's Leather Shop, purchased in Ballinger in 1927 by Brooks and

Attendance effort here paying off

Efforts to stress good attendance during the month of October in Snyder schools paid off during the first week with a 97 percent level.

School officials have a goal of 98 percent and are seeking the higher level to boost state funding for the district next year since October is the month designated by the Texas Education Agency for average daily attendance (ADA) reports.

The state pays based on the number of students in school, and by increasing Snyder ISD's average percentage, a likewise increase in state funding can equal thousands of dollars, school officials say.

The normal average daily attendance for Snyder is some 93 percent, a figure which officials

Wednesday was a busy day for a host of Snyder residents. Plans had been made for weeks for a large delegation to attend State Sen. Ray Farabee's appreciation reception in Wichita Falls.

Monday, members of the economic development committee learned that a three-man team from the Department of Corrections would be in Snyder to look at sites and the community.

Some folks had to cancel their trip to Wichita Falls and others had to make arrangements to leave later in the day by private plane. Still, Scurry County was well represented with 26 persons in attendance.

The Farabee reception was attended by three state senators and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby. There has been speculation that Farabee would seek higher office. Said one Wichita Falls supporter, "We've stopped asking if Farbee will seek higher office, we just speculate which one."

In addition to Farabee, the reception was held to honor his wife, Helen, who had made her mark on the state scene--especially in the field of mental health. Mused one supporter in honor of Mrs. Farabee, "One day Farabee will occupy the governor's office and Ray will still be our state senator."

Scurry County appreciates Ray Farabee, and the appreciation is mutual.

The TDC team was favorably impressed with Snyder, Cogdell hospital and WTC. One visitor expressed suprise about the quality health-care facility for a town the size of Snyder.

The site decision was originally scheduled for Oct. 15, but it appears that the meeting has been postponed until Oct. 20. But it is also a strong possibility that a decision will be delayed until early November because of the massive amount of data submitted.

At the Farabee reception, TUElectric Manager Jack Smartt introduced TDC Chairman Al Hughes to his boss, Tim Fambrough. Jack added the only thing bad is Fambrough lives in Sweetwater and is a competitor for the prison.

"The way to solve that," Fambrough told Hughes, "is to put one in both communities."

Collider issue on bond vote

Proposition 19 is one of the more prominent measures on the Nov. 3 ballot, proposing authorization for the issuance of $500 million in general obligation bonds to aid the multi-billion-dollar super collider project if it is awarded to Texas.

Motorboat flotilla searches for 'monster' of Loch Ness

DRUMNADROCHIT, Scotland (AP) — A motorboat flotilla moved down the inky waters of Loch Ness like an out-of-step chorus line Friday in the biggest scientific hunt yet for Nessie, the lake's elusive monster.

Several sonar contacts with unidentified objects were reported and Tony Harmsworth, director of the Loch Ness Center, said of one at a depth of 244 feet: "If we have a monster, it would register exactly like this."

He said the contact "must have been strong to register as it did."

The others reported were at the bottom of the lake, including one "very large lump."

Adrian Shine, an avowed Nessie skeptic who organized the three-day hunt, said it would be the most thorough ever of the murky lake but would not resolve the 1,400-year-old debate about whether the monster is fact or fantasy.

"Keep faith with all the maligned eyewitnesses who look to you for vindication," the 38-year-old London salesman told his 100 volunteers before the boats set out. "You all know where I stand on this issue. I want you to suspend my skepticism."

It was Shine's 1982 expedition to Loch Ness, during which 40 strong sonar contacts with large and sometimes moving objects were reported, that led to this week's Operation Deepscan.

Twenty-four motorboats equipped with the latest American-made sonar echo sounders straggled into place across the center of the mile-wide lake.

Wind made the surface choppy and the 32-foot vessels could not hold to a straight line.

"In this weather right now it's pretty horrible, but it will start to shape up," said 14-year-old Sebastian Callaway of Los Angeles, who was steering boat number 14.

As the flotilla made its way down the middle of the lake, the area where Shine's sonar contacts were reported in 1982, voices on the marine radio reported the new ones.

Each was marked with a buoy for a followup to determine whether the object remained there or had moved off.

Shine said he was looking for "a very large fish" and "would be delighted with a 20-foot eel or sturgeon or something like that."

Harmsworth said the middle of the lake was like a desert in terms of underwater life and vegetation.

"It's like looking for elephants in Africa and choosing the Sahara first," he said. "It's the easiest. They're only covering a small area and they're looking at the easy bit first."

Reese makes surprise showing

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Jazz singer Della Reese made a surprise appearance with the Fisk University Jubilee Singers, a group famous for its fund-raising efforts.

Miss Reese sang songs such as "The Lady is a Tramp" and "You Can't Take That Away from Me" before relinquishing the show Wednesday night to the Jubilee Singers.

But she slipped back on stage as the group sang the spiritual "Everytime I Feel the Spirit."

Their program will begin at 11:15 a.m. Al Ballard's band will present a program of western music starting at 11:15 Tuesday morning. The center's Kitchen Band will rehearse at 10 a.m. Wednesday and perform at Snyder Oaks Care Center Wednesday afternoon.

Tickets are now available for the Golden K Kiwanis Club's turkey dinner to be held on Oct. 25 in the Senior Center. The tickets are $5 each and can be purchased from any club member. Serving is to begin at 11 a.m. and continue to 1:30 p.m. Proceeds will go for club projects related to the center.

A Halloween party is being planned in the center on Oct. 30 and senior citizens who would like to compete for prizes are reminded to begin planning their costumes.

About 25 Snyder merchants offer discounts to senior citizens and a list of of these businesses is always available in the Senior Center. All county residents 60 years of age and older can receive an identification card from the center and present the card to receive the discounts available.

Iranians may have Stingers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Iran appears to have obtained some U.S.-made Stinger anti-aircraft missiles, a development that could pose a serious new threat to U.S. forces in the Persian Gulf, the Pentagon said Friday.

Elaborating on earlier remarks by Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger, the Pentagon said that two small Iranian boats captured after a battle Thursday night contained "equipment ... believed associated with the U.S. Stinger system."

The equipment consisted of "batteries and packing material" and no missiles were found, the statement added.

"We do not know how the Iranians came into possession of this material," the statement said. "We are investigating."

The Stinger is the U.S. Army's most potent portable anti-aircraft missile. It has never been sold to Iran.

Weinberger, during an appearance Friday morning at a U.S. Information Agency conference, described Iran's small gunboats for the first time as capable of carrying machine guns "and sometimes Stinger equipment."

Until late Friday, however, it was unclear whether Weinberger was actually referring to the U.S.-made Stinger or to a similar weapon made by another country.

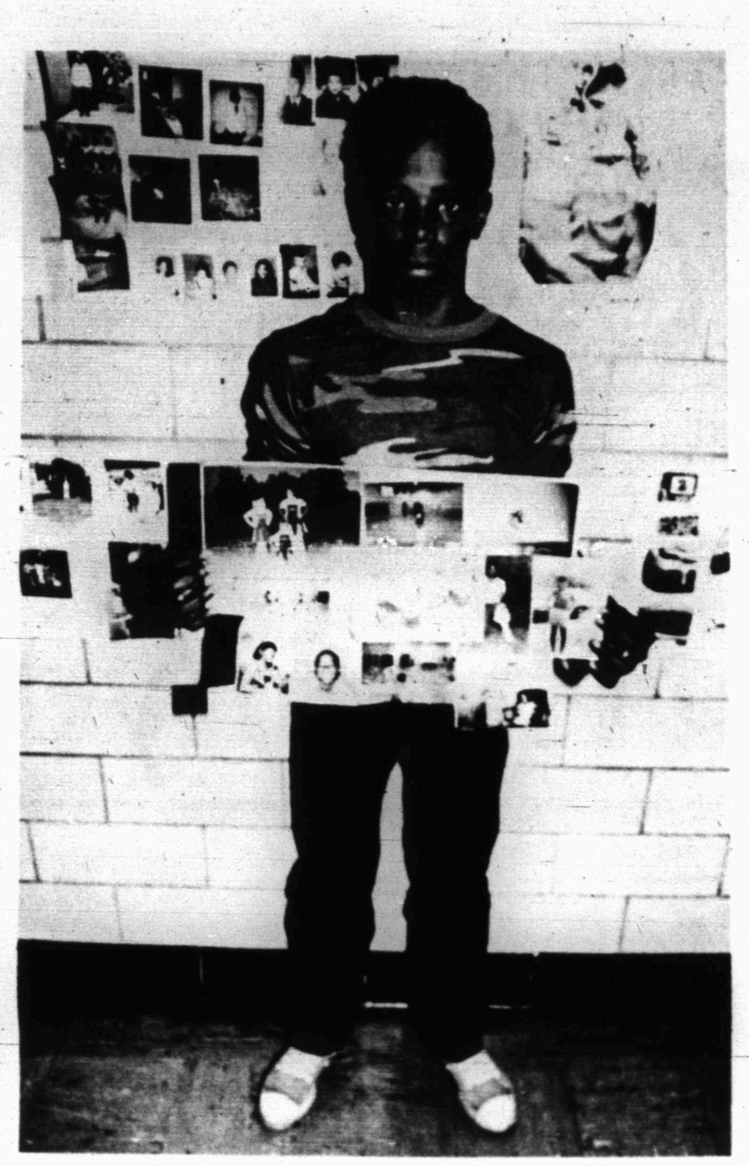

Pentagon sources who demanded anonymity said the presence of Stingers in the Iranian arsenal, if verified, "could cause us real problems."

"If they have them and they know how to use them, our helicopters would face a serious threat," said one official.

Snow falls in Black Hills

By The Associated Press

Autumn snow whitened the Black Hills of South Dakota, as well as parts of Montana and Wyoming, and a cold front pushing across the upper Great Lakes spread chill weather into the central United States on Friday.

Eighteen cities from Pennsylvania to Florida either set or tied low temperature records for the date.

Up to 5 inches of snow fell in the Black Hills, where an additional 1 to 4 inches was expected, and Sunlight, Wyo., northwest of Cody, got 3 inches.

Gusty winds rushed ahead of the cold front from Canada as it pushed into the upper Great Lakes, the middle Mississippi Valley and the southern Plains, bringing cloudy skies behind it. Lakes Superior and Ontario and the northern parts of Lakes Michigan and Huron were under gale warnings.

Rain was widely scattered from Oklahoma to the upper Ohio Valley, and thunderstorms were centered over the Florida Keys. Elsewhere, sunny skies prevailed.

Temperatures dipped into the 30s and 40s across the northern Plains and the upper Mississippi Valley Friday afternoon.

Cities recording record lows included Apalachicola, Fla., 50; Baltimore, 33; Chattanooga, Tenn., 34; Columbia, S.C., 33; Fort Myers, Fla., 63.

Clare Booth Luce has died of cancer at the age of 84

NEW YORK (AP) — Clare Boothe Luce, a writer, editor, congresswoman and diplomat who used her husband's wealth and power and her own brains and beauty to become one of the century's most influential women, died of cancer Friday. She was 84.

Mrs. Luce, the widow of Time Inc. founder Henry R. Luce, died at home in Washington, according to Robert Armstrong, executive director of the Henry Luce Foundation.

"She'll be remembered for a career of a kind that no woman had had before," Wilfred Sheed, author of a profile of Mrs. Luce, said Friday. "I think that's very much what she had in mind when she started out. She wanted to have attempted everything, for better or worse."

Mrs. Luce was on speaking terms with every president from Franklin D. Roosevelt, whom she criticized, to Ronald Reagan, whom she admired. FDR, she once said, "lied us into war." Reagan, she said last year, "returned the United States to a sense of strength and solidarity, and forward progress."

She was elected to the best-dressed list as well as Congress, and was known as much for her good brain as her good looks. Nice legs, she said, were not enough: "I want to be known for my other end."

Active into her 80s, Mrs. Luce was a member of Reagan's Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board, a panel designed to assess American foreign intelligence abroad.

Mrs. Luce was born in New York City on April 10, 1903. Her parents separated when she was young, and her mother took her to Paris for a year. She later attended private schools in New York.

In 1923 she married George T. Brokaw and divorced him six years later. Their only child, Ann Clare Brokaw, was killed in an automobile accident in 1944.

Mrs. Luce joined Vogue magazine in 1930 and served as managing editor of Vanity Fair in 1933 and 1934. In 1935, she married Luce, who started Time and Fortune magazines and a weekly magazine with pictures that his bride had envisioned — Life.

Three of her plays appeared on Broadway, most notably "The Women" (1936), which had an all-female cast, ran for 657 performances and was adapted for film.

In 1940, Mrs. Luce traveled to Europe as a journalist under contract to Life and from her experiences wrote the book, "Europe in the Spring," an account of the 1940 German offensive.

She next turned to politics, working in the presidential campaign of Republican nominee Wendell Willkie in 1940, and then ran for Congress herself in 1942, winning despite a Democratic landslide.

She described Roosevelt and his followers as "do-gooding New Deal bureaucrats" and coined the term "globaloney" to characterize Vice President Henry Wallace's international aviation policy.

The only woman member of the House Military Affairs Committee, she was a frequent visitor to the World War II front. At home, she supported civil liberties for blacks.

She was re-elected in 1944 from her Fairfield County, Conn., district, but chose not to run in 1946. One reason, she said, was her conversion to Roman Catholicism. "I would not care to have it said I joined the church to get votes," she explained.

In 1953 Mrs. Luce became the nation's second woman ambassador and its first to a major European capital when President Dwight D. Eisenhower named her ambassador to Italy.

"Because I am a woman, I must make unusual efforts to succeed," she said. "If I fail, no one will say, 'She doesn't have what it takes.' They will say, 'Women don't have what it takes.'"

She resigned in 1957 after reportedly suffering arsenic poisoning from paint dust in her bedroom. Two years later, Eisenhower nominated her to be ambassador to Brazil. But Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., criticized the nomination and called her a slanderer of Roosevelt.

Helicopters were operating from offshore barge in Gulf

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Helicopters that attacked three Iranian speedboats were a secret, silent-flying U.S. Army type operating from an offshore barge in the northern Persian Gulf, U.S. military sources said Friday.

In Washington, Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger said the United States was ready to "teach lessons" to the Iranians whenever they jeopardize international shipping in the gulf, where Iran and Iraq have been at war since September 1980.

Iran said the attack, which sank one boat and disabled the other two, was unprovoked. At the United Nations in New York, Ambassador Said Rajaie-Khorassani called it a declaration of war to which Iran would respond "at the proper time."

The United States said the choppers struck only after being fired on from the boats near Farsi Island in the northern gulf. Iran uses Farsi as a speedboat base from which to attack shipping.

Weinberger said an Iranian navy corvette was with the speedboats but escaped "very rapidly" when the attack began.

Reports from Iran claimed a helicopter was shot down and an American warship damaged during what it described as a 20-minute battle Thursday night. Lt. Cmdr. Chris Bauman of the Pentagon said, however: "We have no warships damaged and we have no helicopters missing."

U.S. military sources in the gulf and in Washingon, speaking on condition of anonymity, indicated the Army MH-6 helicopters involved in Thursday's action operated from a specially built barge near the northern gulf coast.

Helicopters are known to operate from a Navy barge off Bahrain, in the central region, and a second has been reported in preparation off Kuwait, at the gulf's northern end about 140 miles from Farsi.

U.S. officials in the gulf have refused to discuss the barges, which are used in lieu of land bases that gulf Arab states, fearful of Iran's reaction, are reluctant to provide.

The small, silent Army helicopters equipped with infrared night-vision devices also were used in the attack on the Iran Ajr, a 1,665-ton landing craft caught laying mines Sept. 21 in the central gulf about 120 miles south of the Thursday encounter.

Some Iranian survivors of the Iran Ajr were quoted as saying they were unaware of the choppers until they struck.

Pentagon spokesmen in Washington initially said all three boats attacked Thursday night were sunk, but Weinberger said two were sighted dead in the water at daylight.

He described the Iranian boats as capable of carrying machine guns "and sometimes Stinger equipment."

The Stinger is the U.S. Army's most advanced portable anti-aircraft missile and has never been sold to Iran. It could not be determined immediately whether Weinberger meant the U.S.-made Stinger or to a similar weapon made by another country.

Iran claimed a helicopter was downed during the attack with an "Iranian Stinger missile."

Weinberger said another U.S. military helicopter flying in the southern gulf Thursday reported gunfire from an Iranian oil rig. He said it was unclear whether the Iranians were firing at the Americans and the helicopter left without returning fire.

U.S. officials said six Iranians were rescued, two of them had died and the others were receiving medical treatment, "including surgery" in some cases.

Police arrest murder suspect

KINGSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Police on Friday arrested a man charged in the strangulation death of a Texas A&I student whose body was found in the trunk of a car.

The body of Mary Beth Kunkel, a 19-year-old business major and former cheerleader and high school homecoming queen, was found late Wednesday in a car at the home of Richard Lewis Brimage Jr. about a block from the A&I campus.

Justice of the Peace Charles G. Bigger issued an arrest warrant for Brimage, 31, Thursday on charges of capital murder. Police in Corpus Christi arrested Brimage in a motel Friday morning, and he remained in the Nueces County Jail in lieu of $100,000 bond.

Thursday night, authorities had issued a statewide bulletin seeking his arrest, police Capt. George Gomez said.

Brimage was on parole for a forgery conviction and had been released by the Texas Department of Corrections on Jan. 9, Adan Munoz Jr., a district attorney's investigator, said.

Kingsville lawyer Roy Turcotte summoned police to the home, which he was checking for the owners, Brimage's parents, who were out of town, police said.

"When I walked inside, I felt something was wrong, and so I went to the police department," Turcotte said. He didn't elaborate on what he felt wrong.

Concern over Ms. Kunkel's disappearance Monday spurred businessmen to offer a $10,000 reward, and friends had distributed thousands of fliers about her in Kingsville and surrounding towns.

Ms. Kunkel, who had been a cheerleader and 1985 homecoming queen at H.M. King High School, was last seen about Monday morning near the Texas A&I campus.

"It has devastated the entire campus," said A&I President Steven Altman. "I've never seen an incident cause so much sorrow on campus and so much shock."

Ms. Kunkel's boyfriend, Michael Beeghly, told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times she was "a beautiful person with high morals, and I loved her very much."

Group celebrates end to no-dancing

ANSON, Texas (AP) — Folks got to cut a rug without worrying about being told to cut it out as they celebrated the end of the town's decades-old ban on public dancing.

About 600 to 700 people attended the dance Thursday night in this town of 2,800. Police Chief Eddie Graham said it went without a hitch.

"It was the smoothest thing that's ever been done here," Graham said Friday. "There wasn't 1 ounce of trouble."

The dance was sponsored by the Footloose Club, which lobbied for the defeat of the city ordinance that drew international attention. Residents say the law, on the books until April, was enacted 54 years ago, but some old-timers say the ban might date back 76 years.

Dieters Look Heavenward For Some Divine Inspiration

DEAR ABBY: Many years ago you printed a prayer for dieters, written in the style of the 23rd Psalm. I kept it for the longest time, but can't find it. Can you locate it and run it again? I want to give it to a friend who is going to Overeaters Anonymous.

FOREVER DIETING

DEAR FOREVER DIETING: Who isn't? This prayer has been around ever since they invented three-way mirrors. And here it is:

CALORIE COUNTER'S PRAYER

The Lord is my shepherd I shall not want.
He maketh me lie down and do push-ups,
He giveth me sodium-free bread,
He restoreth my waistline.
He leadeth me past the refrigerator for mine own sake.
He maketh me to partake of green beans instead of potatoes,
He leadeth me past the pizzeria.
Yea, though I walk through the bakery,
I shall not falter, for thou art with me;
Thy diet colas they comfort me.
Thou preparest a diet for me in the presence of mine enemies,
Thou anointest my lettuce with low-cal oil.
My cup will not overflow.
Surely Ry Krisp and D-Zerta shall follow me all the days of my life,
And I will live with pains of hunger forever. Amen.

DEAR ABBY: My father is a wonderful man in almost every way, but he is a chronic fault-finder when it comes to my mother. He tells her she is too fat, doesn't dress right, doesn't wear her hair right, etc. Mom is quite used to his criticism and takes it all with a grain of salt, but his latest gripe takes the cake: He told her that she embarrasses him in public restaurants because when she eats her dinner roll before dinner, she butters the outside of the whole roll and eats it just like that. He said she should break (or cut) it in half, and butter only the inside of the roll like "normal" people. I say, "Who cares?"

Mom just thinks it's amusing. What do you think?

MOM'S CHAMPION, WOODLAND, MAINE

DEAR CHAMPION: Your father is correct concerning the proper way to eat a dinner roll, but that does not excuse his manner of criticism. But in my opinion, kindness should take precedence over table manners.

DEAR ABBY: The other day I delivered a speech, which was well-received by the audience. First, let me say that I worked very hard for several weeks to prepare this speech.

I was introduced in the following way: "We had hoped to have Mr. Jones as our speaker today, but he had a previous engagement in another city. He recommended Mr. Smith, but, unfortunately, Mr. Smith was not available at this time so he graciously agreed to send his assistant, Mr. Johnson. Please join me in welcoming Mr. Johnson."

Although I had heard others introduced in this way, the impact of such an introduction never struck home until I was on the receiving end! As I have said, my speech was well-prepared and I worked hard on its presentation. Furthermore, I happen to be even better acquainted with the subject matter than either Mr. Smith or Mr. Jones — a fact they both would readily have acknowledged.

It seems to me that such an introduction was not only insulting to the speaker, it prepared the audience for a rather disappointing presentation. Am I being overly sensitive?

HURT IN WISCONSIN

DEAR HURT: Overly sensitive? Not at all. The insensitivity of the person who introduced you was appalling. Perhaps others will learn from reading this letter. I sincerely hope so.

DEAR ABBY: What is your opinion of a man who wants me to live with him, yet will give me no definite confirmation of a wedding date? I have known him for three years and love him very much. He tells me that he loves me, but he hasn't asked me to marry him. I love him enough to live with him forever, yet I don't want to throw away years of my life waiting for him. He knows how I feel.

K.G.M. IN TEMPE, ARIZ.

DEAR K.G.: This man knows you love him enough to live with him forever. He says he loves you, but he hasn't as yet found a good reason to marry you. Time is precious and irreplaceable. Don't invest any more time in him than you are prepared to waste.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: I am a 27-year-old man in love with a sweet, unspoiled 22-year-old girl who lives at home with her parents. We've been going together for nearly a year and she's the first girl I have ever wanted to marry, but here's the problem.

When we started dating, she told her parents that I sold beauty supplies. Abby, I don't sell anything — I'm a hairdresser! I am disgusted with myself for not having the nerve to insist that my girlfriend tell her parents the truth about what I do for a living. It's an honest way to earn a living and I'm not ashamed of it. She said her parents would never understand. What is there to understand? And what should I do?

TIRED OF LYING

DEAR TIRED: Ask this "sweet, unspoiled" girl why she thinks her parents would object to her dating a hairdresser. Then insist that she tell them the truth. Next, take a long, hard look at your girlfriend before you commit to anything as permanent as marriage. She appears to be both immature and deceitful.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: Why should a man send flowers to his wife on their anniversary and her birthday in care of the office where she works? She's not a spring chicken, and they've been married for a long time.

Could he be trying to show up the husbands of the other women who work there? (No other husbands send flowers to their wives at work.)

NOSY IN BALTIMORE

DEAR NOSY: Perhaps he sends the flowers to the office for her to enjoy where her day needs the most brightening. She clearly has a generous, thoughtful husband at home.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: This is for women who believe that every bachelor is eligible for marriage. After the death of my husband, who had been a loving, caring, generous man, I married the "prize" bachelor in town. What a disappointment! I soon learned why he had never married. He cared for no one but himself. He never learned how to give. He was a selfish, self-centered tightwad.

Abby, some confirmed bachelors should remain single. They know themselves better than others know them, and are probably most eligible for bachelorhood.

BEEN THERE IN IOWA

DEAR BEEN THERE: The same can be said for some "independent" women.

Volunteers: caring for dying provides a very 'different kind of pleasure'

WASHINGTON (AP) — "When I go to the cemetery, my job is over," said Margaret Gallimore. "I've gone my last mile." Then the Dallas nurse takes another person dying with AIDS into her home and starts over.

Ms. Gallimore, who has reared three children, was among seven people singled out for commendation Friday by the National AIDS Network to dramatize a private and government drive for more volunteers.

Ms. Gallimore and her daughter Pamela have cared for eight AIDS patients since April, as many at five at one time. Two have died.

They get no money for their efforts. They got involved after learning that a Dallas AIDS hospital was closing and some of the patients had nowhere to go.

"It's been a pleasure, a different kind of pleasure," Ms. Gallimore said in an interview. "I've had death, I have some who are dying. But we're going to get over it someway, somehow. I have enough love to share."

She wouldn't say how much it costs her, just that "I spend all my money and that's that."

Lively and upbeat during a news conference to introduce some of the volunteers being honored, Ms. Gallimore talked about the sad part of her work only when asked.

"Yes, it's hard to lose one," she said, the smile slowly leaving her eyes at the obvious question.

Does that make it harder to take in the next one?

"No."

Easier?

"No."

Her spontaneous commentary ran toward the positive, including an amused willingness to accept typically lively human traits among her charges dying from AIDS — acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

"They get jealous," she said. "I get chocolate ice cream and the others say I got that because it's Joe's favorite. So I get them all: chocolate, vanilla, strawberry. Then everybody has their own."

Ms. Gallimore said she tries to remember to wear gloves "if there's liquids" and she has to clean stool or blood from one of the people she cares for. "Half the time, I forget about it," she said. "I'm not afraid of catching it. I love them. I hold their hands. I kiss them."

Another of the volunteers honored was Katheryn Mitchell of Norfolk, Va., who started working actively through her church on behalf of people with AIDS after losing two sons to the disease.

She said she and her husband have yet to be turned down when they ask to go before school, church and social groups to plead for compassion.

Her message: "Our children are given to us by the good Lord to love and we better love them as much as we can because when he gets ready, he takes them away."

Dr. Robert E. Windom, assistant secretary for health at the Department of Health and Human Services, held out the volunteers as "shining models of the great strength that has preserved our country in its great struggles in the past — and will preserve us in the struggle against AIDS."

"We honor their perservance in a painful mission; we celebrate their joy in carrying out their mission with so much generosity and dedication. I urge all Americans to support your work by finding practical ways to help and comfort those who have been stricken."

The seven volunteers singled out for special mention were selected from among 90 volunteers nominated from 30 states, Puerto Rico and Washington.

Only six were invited to the awards ceremony Friday night. The seventh, David Paul Summers, a cabaret entertainer from New York City, has died of AIDS since being selected.

Medication may be necessary

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My husband had a heart attack three years ago. His doctor told him to take two Timolol daily. His heart rate is normally 50 to 55, sometimes in the 40s. Does he need the drug?

DEAR READER — I can't say whether, in you husband's specific case, the medicine is necessary. Timolol is classed as a non-selective beta-blocker. This means that the drug reduces the work of the heart by slowing the pulse and preventing spasm of the arteries feeding the heart muscle. However, it can cause heart failure, worsen emphysema and bring on asthma. Many experts recommend the use of beta-blockers after heart attack because the medicine seems to protect patients against further heart damage.

The risk/benefit ratio for your husband may be such that Timolol is appropriate for long-term use. His doctor is the logical person to discuss this with, inasmuch as the physician is the one who is most familiar with your husband's heart problem.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My son, 16, and I had positive TB tests. Chest X-rays are normal. The county health department thinks my son should take medicine for the TB, but it has very bad side-effects. We are very confused and hope you can tell us what to do.

DEAR READER — You raise a nettlesome question.

In the past, experts recommended anti-tuberculosis drugs for children and adolescents with positive TB skin tests. The rationale for this was as follows: A young person who converted from a negative TB reaction to a positive one clearly had been exposed to tuberculosis and, even with a normal chest X-ray, was assumed to have a small focus of tuberculosis that should be treated.

Today, the emphasis is more on individualization of each case. For example, does another member of the family have active TB? How did the young person come into contact with an active TB infection? Is this an isolated reaction or is the reactor a member of a high-risk group, such as a ghetto family? Is the TB test absolutely accurate? Could a false positive, so-called cross-reaction (to a germ similar to TB) be present? Do the risks of treatment (liver inflammation, nerve damage and visual difficulties) exceed the benefits?

In my experience, these questions often lead to the conclusion: Let's wait, not treat and see what happens; if infection later shows up, therapy can be instituted.

Nonetheless, health-department doctors will often choose to treat a positive reaction. This is a judgment call.

I think that your best approach is to work through your family doctor, who — with the help of reliable experts — can advise you about what to do. Whether your son does or does not receive treatment is a personal decision that should be made by a health professional who knows your son's situation, his general state of health and the potential complications of therapy.

Break free, don't burn out

DEAR DR. GOTT — I'm a professional copywriter/artist, and have been for 15 years. There is a tremendous amount of stress in my job and that of my colleagues, which we thrive on. However, suddenly, without warning, I feel totally empty, drained, physically and emotionally exhausted, shaking, etc. Fellow professionals who also experience it call it burnout. What is burnout?

DEAR READER — You've given a pretty accurate description of burnout, a psychological condition that many people experience. I think that burnout could just as satisfactorily be termed as being "fed up." After a period during which we meet our responsibilities, get our jobs done, meet deadlines, smile our smiles, act pleasant, put up with people no more interesting than milkweed pods, say yes, be nice, cope with stress and come back for more, all of us tend to become sick, tired or both. We've had it. We're fed up, turned off and burned out. The novelty and romance have disappeared.

To the young doctor, enthralled by his new knowledge and power, coping with people's problems — often well into the night — can be invigorating. However, after years of this activity, the work may become intolerable. The factory worker, who may have welcomed the initial challenge of a new job, can become bored with repetitiveness, adopt a negative attitude to a career that seemed brimming with interesting problems, and come to feel burdened by trivia, inconsequential issues and lack of appreciation. He or she is burned out.

Burnout does not just affect people in the workplace. Housewives enthusiastically have children and raise them; by the time the kids are in their teens, burnout may have set in. The laundry, cooking, organizing and picking up after everyone become burdensome chores with little thanks.

Burnout can affect anyone in our society; even children experience it. The syndrome includes lassitude, anger, hopelessness, emotional exhaustion, physical fatigue, tension, grouchiness, a loss of caring and dwindling interest in job and home responsibilities.

We all need variety in our lives. This is why career changes can be so invigorating and vacations so necessary. The risk of burnout is significantly lessened when people can switch gears — either to stop doing something which has become ritualized or to do something else. For most of us, time away from our duties is the most satisfactory way to avoid being fed up. A week — or weekend — without working at what we're used to doing, without cooking, without having to cope with mundane and everyday problems, can be a real way to recharge our creative batteries and refresh us. To paraphrase Supreme Court Justice Harry Blackmun: "I can do a year's work in 10 months; don't expect me to do it in a year."

To avoid the drained, exhausted feeling of burnout, go on vacation, take up a hobby, become involved in service activities, learn a new skill or share your responsibilities so that you can have more free time. Of course, this isn't easy for everyone. We tend to get into ruts. The harried housewife has basic duties she must perform. The boss at work may remain difficult to please even when the worker tries to adopt a more positive attitude. The person who has never been interested in reading or painting for relaxation is unlikely to read the complete works of Shakespeare or buy a set of watercolors.

We become bored with unalterable routine. In such cases, counseling may be helpful. Also, because burnout may be associated with depression, alcohol and drug abuse, and altered lifestyle (such as divorce or loss of job), professional medical help is sometimes necessary.

However, for most people who face burnout, starting something new or taking time off is usually a splendid cure, allowing us to gain perspective and become grateful for what we have. The important consideration is to do something interesting, something you want to do, that is different from your day-to-day work. With more variety in your life, you'll be less likely to burn out; your job and your obligations may cease appearing to be such a drag.

Send your questions to Dr. Gott in care of this newspaper at P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Due to volume of mail, individual questions cannot be answered. Questions of general interest will be answered in future columns.

Study by Air Force says no unusual problems revealed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new round of medical examinations for volunteers taking part in a 20-year study has failed to uncover any unusual health problems among pilots or ground personnel who handled the defoliant Agent Orange in Vietnam, the Air Force says.

"This follow-up report concludes that there is not sufficient plausible or consistent scientific evidence at this time to implicate a causal relationship between herbicide exposure and adverse health in the Ranch Hand group," the study team said in a 45-page report released this week.

"The 1985 examination results provide reassuring evidence that the current state of health of the Ranch Hand participants is unrelated to herbicide exposure in Vietnam."

Operation Ranch Hand was the Air Force's code name for the aerial spraying of Agent Orange during the Vietnam war. The spraying was performed to defoliate large sections of the countryside to deny ground cover to North Vietnamese soldiers.

Agent Orange and some of its chemical components, such as dioxin, have since been identified as possible cancer-causing agents. Veterans groups have contended that former servicemen and their children have suffered health problems from exposure to the substances and called for compensation payments from the government.

In 1979, the Air Force decided to launch a special 20-year-long "epidemiological investigation" to compare the health and mortality rates of 1,257 officers and enlisted men who worked on Ranch Hand with a group of more than 6,100 men of similar age, occupation and background.

The study began in 1982 with a so-called "baseline" medical examination of the Ranch Hand group and more than 1,100 people from the comparison group.

In 1985, the service conducted another round of extensive, in-person medical examinations and it is those results that were summarized in the latest report. The Air Force monitoring of the two groups is scheduled to last until the year 2002.

In releasing the new report, the service disclosed that it had joined the federal Centers for Disease Control in broadening the work "to determine whether blood dioxin levels vary significantly in the Ranch Hand population."

"Initial serum analysis indicates clear and meaningful dioxin exposure did occur in the Ranch Hand group," the Air Force said.

Nonetheless, the 1985 medical examinations turned up few differences in the health status of the two groups and those differences that did appear were judged at this point to be statistically insignificant, it said.

Indeed, it said, the latest results actually demonstrate "a subtle but consistent narrowing of medical differences between the Ranch Hands and comparisons since the baseline study in 1982."

The medical researchers went on to caution that while there are few differences at the moment in cancer rates, it may still be too early to make any judgments.

The Air Force work comes at a time when scientists at the Centers for Disease Control have concluded they cannot proceed with a congressionally ordered study on the effects of Agent Orange on ground troops who served in Vietnam.

The center reported a month ago that it had been unable to find enough soldiers who were exposed to significant levels of the herbicide to conduct the study.

The Air Force study does not include any ground troops who fought in areas that were defoliated — only men who handled the chemical on the ground or dispensed it from the air.

Bork still intends to win confirmation to high court

WASHINGTON (AP) — Robert H. Bork, saying "I harbor no illusions" about the outcome, defiantly refused Friday to abandon his seemingly hopeless effort to win Senate confirmation to the Supreme Court.

In a dramatic appearance in the White House press room, Bork said, "A crucial principle is at stake. That principle is the way in which we select the men and women who guard the liberties of all the American people.

"That should not be done through public campaigns of distortion," a grim-faced Bork said in the nationally broadcast statement. "If I withdrew now, that campaign would be seen as a success and it would be mounted against future nominess."

Bork announced his decision after meeting at the White House with President Reagan and his senior advisers. Reagan issued a statement later saying, "I am pleased by Judge Bork's decision to go forward."

Reagan accused Bork's opponents of waging "an attack based on innuendos, mistruths and distortions to shield Bob Bork's real record of integrity, decency, fairness and above all, judicial restraint."

He added, "It is time to stop those who are determined to politicize the judiciary and try to accomplish through the courts what they cannot accomplish through the legislature."

The Senate will not take up the nomination until the week of Oct. 19, at the earliest. But the outcome seems relatively certain. An Associated Press tally showed 53 senators on the record against confirmation, more than enough to kill Bork's chance of sitting on the nation's highest court.

Senate Republican leader Bob Dole said Bork's decision was a courageous one but that it was "not going to change the vote."

"Judge Bork decided to stand and fight even though it's probably a lost cause," said Dole, R-Kan., who supports the nomination. "That's what America's all about — fighting against the odds, although the odds are probably unbeatable."

Bork's announcement ended days of speculation that he was about to withdraw. While professing support for Bork, the White House had left ample room for him to pull out, with Reagan saying it was up to Bork to decide.

After deliberating his decision overnight, Bork went to the White House with his wife and three children and waited in the residence for Reagan as the president gave a speech downstairs in the East Room.

Appearing alone later in the press room, Bork complained about the multi-million dollar campaign waged against his nomination, saying, "The process of confirming justices for our nation's highest court has been transformed in a way that should not, indeed must not, be permitted to occur ever again."

He said federal judges are appointed to assess cases impartially and not according to the results of public opinion surveys.

"But when judicial nominess are assessed and treated like political candidates, the effect will be to chill the climate in which judicial deliberations take place, to erode public confidence in the impartiality of our judges and to endanger the independence of the judiciary."

After his statement, he left the podium without answering questions.

Futures prices soared the limit

By The Associated Press

Futures prices for frozen orange juice concentrate soared to the limit allowed for daily trading Friday after the season's first government production report fell short of market expectations.

In other action on the New York Cotton Exchange, cotton futures tumbled in reaction to the U.S. Agriculture Department's October crop production report.

The spot price for frozen orange juice concentrate settled 6.70 cents above Thursday's close at $1.4560 a pound; the price of the nearby futures contract, for delivery in November, settled up the 5-cents-a-pound limit at $1.435 cents a pound.

Cotton for December delivery settled .94 cent lower at 69.91 cents a pound.

Live cattle futures bounded higher on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Live cattle settled .43 cent to 1.10 cents higher with the contract for delivery in October at 67.67 cents a pound; feeder cattle were .80 cent to 1.20 cents higher with October at 77.82 cents a pound; live hogs were .15 cent lower to .30 cent higher with October at 49.97 cents a pound; frozen pork bellies were .02 cent to .77 cent higher with February at 59.97 cents a pound.

Energy futures edged higher on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

West Texas Intermediate crude oil settled 5 cents lower to 11 cents higher with November at $19.70 a barrel; heating oil was .35 cents lower to .10 cent higher with November at 55.84 cents a gallon; unleaded gasoline was .25 cent lower to .25 cent higher with November at 51.52 cents a gallon.

Grain and soybean futures settled modestly lower on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Judge recommends that Brandley receive his third trial

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — A judge recommended Friday that death row inmate Clarence Brandley get a third trial after attorneys argued that the capital murder conviction was tainted by loss of evidence and a courthouse conspiracy.

Brandley, 37, was convicted in 1981, a year after 16-year-old Cheryl Dee Fergeson was raped and strangled at Conroe High School where Brandley worked as a janitor.

Retired State District Judge Perry Pickett, who said "I can only sadly state justice has been on trial here," issued his recommendation after a nine-day evidentiary hearing ordered by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals to determine if any new evidence warranted another trial for Brandley.

Brandley's attorneys insisted he was convicted by an all-white jury because he was black and that other white janitors present at the time of the slaying were immediately ruled out as suspects.

Attorneys also complained that officials in Montgomery County, north of Houston, conspired to hide the fact they lost crucial evidence and failed to pursue leads that could have been favorable to Brandley.

Pickett had ordered the hearing moved to Galveston, 90 miles south of Conroe, after ruling an avid fear existed in Montgomery County amid allegations of racial tensions.

A courtroom packed with Brandley supporters roared when Pickett made his recommendation, but were quieted by a few in the crowd. The recommendation now goes to the Court of Criminal Appeals in Austin, which must formally act on it.

"I'm very thankful for what happened. I appreciate the judge. I'm very thankful. I'm very thankful of that.," Brandley said. "I'm thankful for what everyone did for me."

Brandley initially was reluctant to speak to reporters and asked to be alone. He made his comments in a small hallway behind the courtroom after being surrounded by reporters.

"I think he was surprised," said his attorney, Mike DeGeurin. "Even though I gave him encouragement, I tried to give him a little bit of hope. He's seen the door closed so many times on him.

"I believe he's innocent. I hate to see the system deny his innocence. I'm glad to see him get the chance."

Montgomery County District Attorney Peter Speers, who had argued that little if any new evidence was uncovered during the evidentiary hearing, quickly left the courtroom and refused to speak to reporters.

"I have no comment," he said.

DeGeurin said he would seek bond for Brandley and hoped the death row inmate could be free before Christmas.

"The litany of events graphically described by the witnesses, some of it chilling and shocking, leads me to the conclusion the pervasive shadow of darkness has obscured the light of fundamental decency and human rights," Pickett said in a handwritten order.

Brew battle flares up again in Texas

NEW HOPE, Texas (AP) — What has become an old and bitter battle over brew in this small community will be refought by a man who believes that if first he doesn't succeed, he must try again.

But this time, pro-liquor forces have been accused of destroying the opposition's placards. The leaders of the petition drive for beer and wine sales say anti-alcohol forces set fire to two trailer homes and a pickup truck belonging to their supporters.

Some newcomers to this North Texas community of 600 residents shake their heads in amazement at the battle.

"It's crazy," said one former Chicago resident.

The town's 300 or so registered voters are expected to line up Saturday at the New Hope Grocery Store, the official polling place, to settle the issue. But the chief proponent of beer and wine sales says he'll keep fighting if he loses.

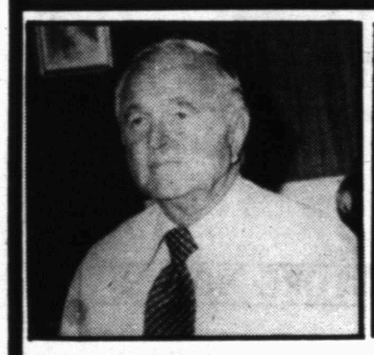

"If this don't pass, I'm going to go for liquor, and liquor only," said Oliver Caraway, who spearheaded the petition drive. "If this don't pass, I'm going to do it again. I'll keep trying 'til I'm 65, if I have to."

Caraway, 45, is leader of the group that believes alcohol sales would help ease the burden of a new property tax. He owns one of the two stores in town and says his grocery sales would increase if he could sell liquor.

In August last year, New Hope voters overwhelmingly defeated a measure to sell package liquor. In this year's proposal, voters will decide only whether to permit sale of beer and wine in the community.

"I figured that if the beer and wine raised enough sales tax, we would not need liquor" sales, said Caraway.

2 judge prospects have ties to Texas

By The Associated Press

Two judges reportedly under consideration by the White House as possible Supreme Court nominees if Robert Bork isn't confirmed by the Senate have Texas ties.

They are former Austin lawyer Thomas Gee, 61, who now sits on the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, and Patrick Higginbotham, 48, a former federal judge in Dallas who also sits on the 5th Circuit bench.

Those who know Gee call him a brilliant and courteous lawyer. As a judge he is known as a conservative and one who, in his words, believes an appeals court judge should make new law only when "the occasion demands."

Gee grew up in Huntsville, was graduated from West Point and attended law school at the University of Texas, where he graduated at the top of his class in 1953. He also served as editor-in-chief of the Texas Law Review for 1952-53.

Gee spent nearly 20 years as an Austin trial lawyer before being named to the 5th Circuit Court in 1973 by President Nixon.

In Austin, Gee was a partner in the law firm of Graves, Dougherty, Gee, Hearon, Moody and Garwood, and headed the firm's trial section.

One partner, Robert J. Hearon Jr., remembers that Gee was involved in Republican Party politics "long before it was fashionable."

"He would hold Republican precinct meetings in his house when only two or three people would show up," Hearon said.

Hearon, who calls himself a liberal, told the Austin American-Statesman he believes Gee would make a good Supreme Court justice.

"I think Tom's strongest point probably would be his absolute devotion to doing what he thought was the right thing. I don't think he would look at an issue and say, 'What's the conservative answer to this?' I think he would try to look at an issue and say, 'What is the right answer?'," Hearon said.

There is some irony in reports that Higginbotham also is getting White House consideration.

First, the Texas judge wrote a 1985 opinion for the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals that defended a Houston woman's right to cheer the 1981 assassination attempt on President Reagan.

Second, Higginbotham is being promoted as a possible Supreme Court nominee by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, who angered the White House by opposing Bork.

Third, the 1984 "Almanac of the Federal Judiciary" quotes an unidentified lawyer as saying, "If I were Reagan, I'd put him on the Supreme Court."

A judge known for a keen intellect and prolific law review writings, Higginbotham was rated by the almanac as moderately conservative, diligent and courteous.

David Anderson, a University of Texas law professor, said, "He is kind of an intellectual type. He's smart, and he doesn't tolerate dullards very well. He's a pretty aggressive questioner at oral arguments, and if a lawyer doesn't pick up on what it is he's driving at from the bench, he gets pretty disgusted."

The National Right to Life Committee this week wrote a letter to Attorney General Edwin Meese warning it would fight a Higginbotham nomination because of a 1986 opinion the judge wrote striking down provisions of a Louisiana abortion statute.

Low-cost housing being considered

AUSTIN (AP) — A project to give poor Rio Grande Valley residents an alternative to substandard housing is part of a $178.9 million bond proposal by the Texas Housing Agency.

The agency on Friday asked the state Bond Review Board to approve the $1.4 million Valley bond issue at its Oct. 20 meeting.

Bond proceeds would finance 70 single-family homes in and near Mission, Pharr and Harlingen.

Quilt recalls Depression Era

TYLER, Texas (AP) — Fifty years ago, the radio was a welcome diversion for families struggling through the Depression. And in Lorene Venable's home, the magic box was always tuned to WFAA-WBAB's noon show featuring Texas' own W. Lee O'Daniel and the Light Crust Dough Boys.

Mrs. Venable and her late husband, Gilbert — newlyweds at the time — were such fans that when show sponsor, Light Crust Flour, honored the hillbilly band on its five-pound four sacks, Mrs. Venable saved 10 of them.

Now, after finding the forgotten sacks in the bottom of a cedar chest, she has made them into a quilt which will be displayed at the State Fair of Texas.

By chance, Mrs. Venable's rediscovery of the bags and the resulting quilt coincide with the 50th anniversary of Light Crust Flour which is produced by Burrus Mills of Saginaw.

"I don't know why I didn't throw those sacks sway," Mrs. Venable said. "I guess I saved them because they were so pretty and they had everything about the band I liked — the names of their songs, a picture of the Alamo, of bluebonnets, of W. Lee O'Daniel and the band.

"Now, I'm so glad I saved them. I feel like I've brought back history. It was an era of my life that meant much. We didn't have much money, but it was the happiest times of our lives."

Because the sacks were produced for a limited time and bore a copyright signature of O'Daniel — who went on to become a two-term governor and U.S. senator — the quilt is considered especially valuable. Appraised at $2,000, it features 10 flour sack squares — with ruby, royal blue and gold drawings — bordered by matched unbleached muslin. The king-size quilt is trimmed with champagne-colored lace.

Mrs. Venable recalls the Light Crust Dough Boys as the hottest country-religious band in Texas.

During the Depression — when the Light Crust Dough Boys were at their peak — the Venables were among the few who could afford a radio. "I remember we were among the fortunate. Ours cost $12.50 and we were making monthly payments on it.

"Every day at high noon Monday through Friday it was tuned to W. Lee O'Daniel and the Light Crust Dough Boys. The neighbors would come over and we'd play 42 and listen to them — there was nothing else to do.

"I remember W. Lee O'Daniel. He had a beautiful voice. And honey, was he handsome," she said.

When O'Daniel began his campaign for governor, he and the Light Crust Dough Boys covered the state, politicking, singing and strumming. Their campaign was depicted on one of Mrs. Vnable's flour sacks. "I remember when they came through Tyler. We saw them at the courthouse square. They were in that van-looking thing with the railing just like on the sack," she said.

In 1972, India became the first major non-communist nation to recognize East Germany.

Lead playoffs 2-1...

Cards rally to nip SF Giants

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)--The St. Louis Cardinals are hurt. And they're hurting the San Francisco Giants.

The crippled Cardinals, playing a patchwork lineup becase of injuries to Terry Pendleton and Jack Clark, rallied for four runs in the seventh inning Friday night and beat the Giants 6-5 for a 2-1 lead in the National League playoffs.

"I don't like to harp on these injuries too much," Cardinals Manager Whitey Herzog said. "We really didn't play that alert, but I wasn't discouraged because we got a lot of guys playing positions that they don't play all the time."

Vince Coleman's tie-breaking, two-run single came during a string of five straight hits in the seventh. An inning earlier, Jim Lindeman ended St. Louis' string of 16 straight scoreless innings with a two-run homer.

Lindeman, who hit .208 this season, capped the seventh-inning rally with a sacrifice fly. He batted cleanup for the second time this year in place of Pendleton.

"The last time I probably went 0-for-4 and broke three bats," Lindeman said.

The Cardinals got three consecutive hits off Don Robinson as the Giants' bullpen failed to hold an early 4-0 lead.

"Robinson has been my stopper the last six weeks. He's the guy I was going to bring in," San Francisco Manager Roger Craig said.

Bob Forsch and Todd Worrell, meanwhile, shut down San Francisco on three hits in the final five innings. Forsch got the victory in relief of Joe Magrane, who started because Danny Cox is still bothered by a stiff neck, and Robinson took the loss.

Worrell gave up a pinch homer to Harry Soilman with two outs in the ninth, but Kevin Mitchell flied to center to end the game.

The Giants, whose starters outhomered St. Louis' 153-31 during the regular season, again took an early lead with power as Jeffrey Leonard homered for the third straight game. Leonard, 6-for-11 in the series, gave San Francisco a 4-0 lead in the third and was hit by a pitch by Forsch in his next at-bat.

But the listless Cardinals, who had not advanced a runner past second base in 15 innings, began their resurgence in the sixth when Ozzie Smith singled with one out and Lindeman homered. Lindeman, a .208 hitter during the season, was batting cleanup in place of Pendleton, who sprained his left ankle in workout Thursday.

Then in the seventh, St. Louis broke loose on a tame night at Candlestick Park. Jose Oquendo's leadoff single finished Magrane and Robinson allowed a single to Tom Lawless, just 2-for-25 this year and a starter at third base for Pendleton.

Pinch-hitter Dan Driessen grounded an RBI single that Robinson kicked at and missed for a 4-4 tie. With the infield in, Coleman slapped a single up the middle that put St. Louis ahead and chased Robinson.

A bunt single by Ozzie Smith and a sacrifice by Tom Herr set up Lindeman's sacrifice fly.

Leonard became the fourth player in playoff history to hit home runs in three straight games.

Hank Aaron did it in 1969, Gary Matthews in 1983 and Bill Madlock in 1985. He also matched Aaron's feat of doing it in the first three games.

Pittsburg's Bob Robertson set the playoff record of four homers in 1971 against the Giants in four games.

The victory gave the Cardinals renewed momentum going into Game 4 Saturday. Cox was expected to oppose Mike Krukow.

Twins hope to keep advantage

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson says it's no time for tears despite what the Minnesota Twins bullpen has done to the Tigers in the American League playoffs.

In two games, the Twins relievers have recorded seven of their 11 outs by strikeout. They have not allowed a run, and only one hit in 3 2-3 innings.

Jeff Reardon struck out the side in the ninth inning of Game 1; Juan Berenguer did the same thing in Game 2. The bullpen has one victory and a save. And it has embarrassed the Detroit Tigers.

It is a major reason the Twins are up two-games-to-none going into Game 3 Saturday in Detroit.

"I hope they're not crying," Anderson said Friday when asked the mood of his team. "I have an old saying that when you're getting your brains beat in, don't cry; when you're beating someone else's brains out, don't brag."

For Saturday's third game the Twins will send right-handed rookie Les Straker, 8-10, against Tigers right-hander Walt Terrell, 17-10 and 13-2 at Tiger Stadium. Terrell was second on the Tigers to Jack Morris this season with 10 complete games. Straker, who will turn 28 on Saturday, finished only one of his 26 starts, and that's where the Twins' bullpend will come into play.

Before Friday's off-day workout, Twins Manager Tom Kelly said Straker "gives you all he's got — six, seven real good innings — and that is what we are looking for tomorrow."

In Game 1, an 8-5 Twins victory, Reardon came on in relief of Frank Viola with runners at first and second and none out in the eighth inning. Minnesota led 4-3 at the time. Reardon gave up sacrifice flies to Dave Bergman and Chet Lemon, then got Darrell Evans on another fly ball to end the inning.

The Twins scored four runs in the bottom of the inning to take an 8-5 lead, and Reardon struck out the side in the ninth, also allowing a hit and a walk.

Berenguer, the portly Panamanian with the big fastball, was even more impressive as the Twins won Game 2, 6-3. Twins starter Bert Blyleven had given up a solo homer to Lou Whitaker and a single to Darrell Evans with one out in the eighth inning when Berenguer came in. He struck out Kirk Gibson for the second out of the inning and got Alan Trammell to ground into an inning-ending forceout.

In the ninth, Berenguer struck out Matt Nokes, Lemon and Pat Sheridan in succession.

"Berenguer last night was outstanding," Anderson said. "Reardon has pitched well of late, and we haven't even seen Keith Atherton yet. Their whole bullpen is pitching well for them.

"What can you say? We're 0-2. It isn't nice, but neither is being out of work and broke. I can't say there's any pressure on me when I'm going to put on a suit and go out to dinner tonight," Anderson said.

Bareback rider remains in first

VERNON--Western Texas College bareback rider Denny McLanahan continued his hold on first place in that event following the second night of the Vernon Regional Junior College rodeo.

McLanahan, who led after the first night, has 70 points in the bareback event.

In bull riding, WTC's Michael Gaffney and Adam Brewster are tied for fourth with 71 points. Troy Budvarson, with a score of 68, is second in the saddle bronc event.

Scott Sharp is fifth in steer wrestling with a time of 6.8.

Jo Bitt Danley had a time of 18.3 in the barrel race and is fifth place in the standings. She is 7th in breakaway roping with a time of 4.6.

The long-go ends Saturday night with the short-round finals Sunday afternoon.

NFL strike talks face new obstacles

TYSONS CORNER, Va. (AP) — The latest round of NFL strike talks have been slowed in part by an issue that was once the only item management and the union could agree upon.

Contract length and pension payments are the newest stumbling blocks in the walkout that today moved into its 19th day. Union head Gene Upshaw and Jack Donlan, executive director of the NFL Management Council, who have been locked in negotiations since Tuesday, continued their talks today.

There were no signs that an immediate settlement was in sight, as agreement had been reached on only eight minor issues.

Management spokesman John Jones said Friday he did not think an agreement would be reached by Sunday, and announced that this weekend's NFL games would once again feature replacement players and some of the 130 regulars who have crossed the picket lines.

Meanwhile, Doug Allen, assistant executive director of the NFL Players Association, said that an impasse over pension and the length of the contract, which had been agreed upon in principle before the strike, were "serious impediments" to reaching a final agreement.

The owners want the agreement to run six years; the NFLPA wants it to expire in 1990, which would coincide with the league's television contract. The two sides had long ago agreed on three years — but that was before the union staged its second strike in the last six seasons.

"If anything holds up an agreement it will be this new demand for a six-year agreement," Allen said. "We accepted it in good faith, and now they put this new, ridiculous demand on the table."

Jones, however, said, "It was stated clearly from the beginning that the owners said three years if there was no strike. This is a union that goes on strike every time there is an agreement to be reached, and the owners don't want to go through this again anytime soon."

Jones did say that the management proposal contains a clause to reopen economic items at the end of three years, to coincide with the television contract. He said that under that proposal, differences would be submitted to arbitration while the contract remained in effect.

Allen said the union found that suggestion inadequate.

He also blasted the owners for their plan to make their contribution to the pension fund dependent upon the profits the fund gets from investments made by the six-man board overseeing it.

Allen said the owners have been contributing a set amount to the fund since 1968, and saw no reason to change that practice.

NFL games again feature unknowns

By The Associated Press

The New York Giants' Super Bowl victory must seem a long time ago for Coach Bill Parcells.

With Mike Busch at quarterback instead of Phil Simms and Dan DeRose at linebacker instead of Lawrence Taylor, the strike-plagued defending champions are 0-3 going into Sunday's game with the Washington Redskins, who were supposed to be the Giants' No. 1 rival for division honors this season.

"Our situation is tough," Parcells said. "We already have three conference losses and one division loss at home. If we can't beat Washington, it puts our division control of Washington out of our hands."

Earlier this week, Parcells said the Giants were teetering on the brink and that their chances of making the playoffs this year were getting worse each week. If they lose on Sunday, the Giants will be three games behind the Redskins.

The Redskins defeated St. Louis 28-21 last Sunday, with quarterback Ed Rubbert hitting 14 of 24 passes for 334 yards, including touchdown passes of 88, 48 and 34 yards to Anthony Allen. The replacement Giants lost to San Francisco, 41-21, on Monday night.

In other Sunday games, Philadelphia is at Dallas, San Francisco at Atlanta, Pittsburgh at the Los Angeles Rams, New Orleans at St. Louis, Minnesota at Chicago, San Diego at Tampa Bay, Buffalo at New England, Houston at Cleveland, New York Jets at Indianapolis, Detroit at Green Bay, Kansas City at Miami and Cincinnati at Seattle.

On Monday night, the Denver Broncos host the Los Angeles Raiders.

Busch, who was 3-for-6 for 93 yards and two touchdowns against the 49ers, was the backup to starter Jim Crocicchia, who suffered a bruised shoulder.

"Busch will probably start," Parcells said. "He's a good kid. He has a good arm but his judgment isn't always the best."

The 49ers, whose replacements looked sharp against the Giants, have added regular quarterback Joe Montana, running backs Roger Craig and Joe Cribbs and wide receiver Dwight Clark for the game at Atlanta.

"We have room to maneuver," 49ers Coach Bill Walsh said. "This is a strong 'B' team that our veterans could come in with and play with these people and not just be a total mismatch of personnel."

Forty-four regulars crossed the picket line this week, joining 85 previous strike-breakers. Not all will play, some because they are injured.

Atlanta has all but one of its regular players sitting out the strike.

Dallas didn't use quarterback Danny White, running back Tony Dorsett and receiver Mike Renfro in beating the New York Jets last Sunday. Coach Tom Landry said he won't start them against the Eagles.

Replacement Bears quarterback Mike Hohensee, who played at the University of Minnesota but was overlooked by the Vikings, threw three touchdown passes in leading the Bears to a 35-3 victory over Philadelphia last Sunday.

Orange and black dominates city of Wink

By Holden Lewis
AP Staff Writer

WINK (AP) — When Danny Carroll, Tony Roach and Jeffrey Jones were kids, they would go back behind the stands during Wink High School football games and toss a ball around.

The three pretended to be their football heroes. But instead of imagining they were Tony Dorsett or Roger Staubach or Earl Campbell, they made believe they were stars for the Wink Wildcats.

Now the three seniors start for the Wildcats, one of the winningest squads in West Texas and a perennial Top 10 team. In their football-mad part of the state, attendance at Friday night games is often higher than attendance at Sunday morning church.

"It's something you look forward to from the first time you walk in through the door," Jones said of playing for the varsity.

Wink is an oil-dependent town of 1,182 about 10 miles south of New Mexico's southeast corner.

"There's not much to do in Wink," said James Northcutt, whose son Brandon plays for the junior varsity. "There's no drive-in. No picture shows."

The high school, which shares its building with the junior high school, has 126 students in grades nine through 12. For seven years, students tread halls carpeted in orange, sit at orange-and-black desks, store their books in orange lockers and wear orange shirts on game days.

An orange-and-black water tower dominates the town, and the only restaurant is called The Wildcat (Ben).

"The kids are winners," Superintendent John W. Sollis Jr. said. "They work hard. They know what it's like to win. They're brought up in it."

Wink won the state championship in 1952. From 1981-84, Wink compiled a 56-4 record. The only losses were in the playoffs.

Probably the most crushing defeat was in the 1981 Class A state championship game against Bremond in which Wink lost 12-9 on the final play.

"It was something that haunts us all still," Coach David Burnett said with a slight smile of regret.

Now after two seasons of rebuilding, Burnett said he hopes he has assembled a team that can play "December football." The state quarterfinals are in the first week of that month.

Texas schools are classified in six sizes, 5A the largest and B the smallest. Class B schools play six-man football. Wink belongs to Class A, the smallest schools that field 11-man teams.

Going into its fifth game, against Class 2A Marfa, Wink had earned a 4-0 record, all against 2A schools. The week before, against Iraan, Wink had won its 400th game since it began playing football in 1928. The Wildcats were ranked fifth in The Associated Press poll going into Marfa's homecoming game.

"People want to beat you when you're ranked," Burnett said. "There's been times when we felt like if a team could beat us, that would be a successful season for them."

Wink's success probably can be attributed to the coaches and the facilities. The town thrived when the price of oil was high and the school district could collect more taxes than it really needed.

It hired several assistant football coaches, furnished the weight room with fine equipment and built a sprinkler system so the football field is green even in the desert summer.

But money can't buy a victory.

In Marfa, the Wildcats came up against a bigger team with a stout defense and a good running game. Wink was forced to punt on most fourth downs; in its first two games of the season, Wink never punted.

Despite two safeties and a 25-yard scoring run by Bryan Kenyon, Wink lost 17-10. Four days later, Wink dropped in the AP poll from fifth to ninth.

Following the loss, the Wildcats walked out on the field and gathered in a circle around Burnett. Some of the players were crying; none spoke.

"Don't get down on yourself anymore than you already are," Burnett said softly. "It ought to hurt this bad, folks. We've got to go out and get better."

Trent rolls past Hermleigh

TRENT--The Trent Gorillas cashed in on four Hermleigh fumbles early in the game as Trent rolled to a 40-10 District 4-1A East Zone victory Friday night.

Trent's Lewis Knapp racked up all but 10 of Trent's 241 yards rushing and scored four touchdowns as the Gorillas remained undefeated in loop play.

The loss brings the Hermleigh Cardinals' district record to 1-2 and the Cards have a season ledger of 1-4-1.

Despite the loss, Coach Doug Cook was pleased with his team's efforts. "I was real proud of our defensive effort. They fought real hard."

Five times in the second half, Trent worked inside the Hermleigh five-yard line, but the Cardinal defensive squad held and allowed only one TD.

Hermleigh has an open date next Friday, but in two weeks hosts Loraine. Coach Cook hopes to use the two-week period to get his team well and back to full-strength.

Hermleigh lost two key players in the game, and its playing roster dropped to seven. Andrew Sanchez suffered a separated left shoulder and how long he will be out of action is unknown.

Manuel Castillo suffered a concussion early in the Trent game and was taken to the hospital. Coach Cook reported he is okay and will be ready for action. Cook also hopes that Joe Morales, who has been out with a knee injury, will be back in time for the Loraine tilt.

Trent struck paydirt first on a 10-yard run by Knapp. Scott O'Kelly booted the extra point for an 8-0 advantage. Trent then picked up two more points on a safety.

In the second quarter, Knapp scored on a 20-yard scamper and O'Kelly kicked the extra points.

Hermleigh countered on an Eddie Whitehead pass to Rodney Foster for 15 yards and a TD. Whitehead passed to Felix Martinez for the extra point.

Knapp then got his longest TD of the night, going 60 yards. The point after try failed. Still in the second period, Knapp rambled 30 yards for a touchdown and O'Kelly kicked as the hosts enjoyed a 32-7 pad.

Hermleigh's second TD came on a 6-yard pass from Rodney Foster to Daniel Ramey. The PAT was no good.

Following a scoreless third period, Trent got one more TD by Keith Oden from the one-yard line, then Hermleigh completed the scoring on a one-yard run by Mac Castillo.

UT fraternities are working to restore positive image

AUSTIN (AP) — Scott Wilder, director of the Interfraternity Council at the University of Texas, says he's trying to restore a positive image to the university's Greek community a year after a fraternity pledge died in a hazing-related incident.

In September 1986, Mark Seeberger of Dallas, a Phi Kappa Psi pledge, was found dead after a fraternity "ride" during which authorities said he consumed some 18 ounces of rum.

Since the freshman's death, the fraternity has been disciplined by the university and the Interfraternity Council.

The Texas Legislature has enacted a stricter anti-hazing law. The council has started an aggressive campaign to warn about the dangers of hazing and alcohol abuse. And officials say physically abusive hazing has been eliminated.

Still, Wilder said he is concerned that exhaustive and "unbalanced" media coverage of Greek life has harmed the system's reputation. "The bad press overshadows everything good, when the good things actually outweigh the bad 10-to-1," he said.

Nevertheless, the number of fraternity pledges was up slightly this year, although the number of women going through sorority rush was down. In all, there are at least 31 fraternities with 2,680 members and 19 sororities with 2,600 members on the UT campus.

Grace Gunsberg, a Delta Phi Epsilon member and past president of the sororities' Panhellenic Council, said it is difficult for fraternities and sororities "to maintain a good image when you get blasted every day" in the news media.

But many in the university community agree that Seeberger's death served as a catalyst for change.

University President William Cunningham set up the Fraternal Commission to study the university's relationship with the Greek community, and last spring the Texas Legislature enacted the new anti-hazing law.

This school year, fraternity and sorority members say they are seriously trying to comply with the new legal drinking age of 21 and the new anti-hazing law, which establishes penalties of up to a $10,000 fine and two years in jail for engaging in or failing to report hazing activities.

"They're beginning to see the connection with new laws as far as where their responsibilities lie," said Glenn Maloney, University of Texas assistant dean of students. "I think we've seen them take a little more precaution and thought into what they do about their parties."

Charge reflects rising problems

AUSTIN (AP) — Authorities say the recent filing of charges against a University of Texas student suspected of obtaining long-distance phone access codes with a home computer is an example of a rising tide of telephone fraud.

Phone fraud or abuse through many methods caused the industry to lose nearly $500 million in 1986, said Paula Fassi, spokeswoman for MCI Telecommunications Corp.

Some students don't realize that spreading illegally obtained access codes is a serious crime, while others might distribute the codes to show off their computer skills, authorities said.

"They know basically that it is against the law. I don't think they realize the gravity of it. It is a felony offense. What they're doing is not going be viewed as a childish prank," a University of Texas police officer, who requested anonymity, told the Austin American-Statesman.

This week, Austin police arrested Rand Duprez Cottle, 21, a UT junior, who was charged with unlawful use of a criminal instrument. The instrument involved was the software police believe was used to obtain access codes from MCI.

Police said they traced about 1,600 calls to his South Austin apartment, where a home computer would dial MCI, call a long-distance number to test the code, and record it if it worked. Police said they found 16 MCI codes and about 100 from other long-distance companies.

The UT police officer said telephone fraud and computer hacking has been a recurring problem with students for about five years, not only at the University of Texas but at other institutions.

A computer hacker will spread stolen access code numbers and often use them himself.

Prices close lower again

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market closed out a week of record-breaking declines with a broad drop Friday as interest rates kept climbing.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slumped 34.43 to 2,482.21, finishing the week with a record point loss of 158.78, or 6 percent.

The previous largest point decline came Sept. 8-12 of last year, when the average fell 141.03, or 7.4 percent.

Friday's volume on the New York Stock Exchange was a sluggish 158.31 million shares, down from 198.70 million in the previous session.

The Dow Jones industrial average's close was its lowest since it stood at 2,471.94 on July 23.

Analysts said a few buyers moved early in the session into stocks that had fallen sharply of late.

But enthusiasm was muted by continuing interest-rate worries. Recent increases in interest rates, particularly in the short-term money markets, have prompted talk that the Federal Reserve might soon raise its discount rate again.

The Fed increased the rate it charges on loans to private financial institutions from 5½ to 6 percent on Sept. 4, citing spreading inflationary expectations.

Rates on long-term Treasury bonds kept climbing Friday, pushing close to — or in a couple of instances, reaching — 10 percent.

Some Wall Streeters were disturbed to see the Dow drop below 2,500 on a closing basis, figuring that a level of important psychological support had been breached. Others, however, pointed out the average has not yet closed below the intraday low of about 2,469 it touched on Sept. 22.

Amid the general gloom, activity in takeover situations and rumored targets was brisk.

Telex jumped 9⅜ to 70⅜. Interests headed by investor Asher Edelman began a $65-a-share tender offer for Telex's stock, and speculation ran high on Wall Street that another, higher bid might be forthcoming.

Advanced Systems, which agreed to be acquired by National Education Corp. through an exchange of stock, climbed 8⅞ to 34⅞.

J.P. Stevens rose 5⅛ to 43⅝.

Lodge began as insurance business nearly 100 yearsago

TEMPLE, Texas (AP) — It started out nearly 100 years ago as an insurance company and evolved into a lodge with strange-sounding initials that is the hub of social activity in dozens of Czech communities across Texas.

The SPJST still offers insurance, but it's pleasure, not business, that draws hundreds of people to each of its fraternal halls in 128 communities scattered across Texas.

"We think we've got a pretty good thing going, especially for a country place," said Dorothy Pechal of Seaton, east of Temple, whose husband, Jerry Pechal, is president of the local SPJST.

The dances, held every Saturday in Seaton, draw 250 to 350 people — in a tiny rural community with one store and one church and no population figure on the road signs, Mrs. Pechal said. Between dances are other socials where members get together for supper and dominoes or the traditional Czech card game Taroky.

Slovanska Podporujici Jednota Statu Texas — the Slavonic Benevolent Order of the State of Texas — was created to offer subscription insurance to Czech immigrants as they settled in towns from Galveston to the Rio Grande.

As an insurance company, it now claims $175 million worth of policies in force and assets of more than $40 million.

Which is all well and good, but for many of its 57,000 members, the SPJST is — first, last and always — a swell place to take the family on Saturday night.

"It's a family-oriented place, so a lot of people bring their kids," says Waco lodge president George Pauling, who calls himself "Czech by choice."

"People who like to go partying — and I used to be a big partyer — don't like to have kids around. But we have them come in anywhere from still in their mothers' arms to old enough to start dancing."

Membership in the SPJST is not restricted to Czech Texans, and Pauling says an increasing number of Czechs-by-choice are joining. But the organization does take on the task of preserving Czech culture, sponsoring language classes, publishing the weekly newspaper Vestnik and maintaining a museum and library at the SPJST Supreme Lodge in Temple.

This last project was started as a labor of love by Otto Hanus, who collected and ctaloged from the late 1960s until his death in February at 86. His work won him a citation by the Central Texas Museum Association.

Former classmates still get together once every month

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Alice Faye Galloway went into labor with her second child right smack in the middle of a game of canasta.

The seven women with whom she played cards had had a few children of their own, so they counted the minutes between contractions and determined that the baby wouldn't be there for a while.

Not one to disrupt a good game of cards, Alice Faye finished the hand of canasta before she went to the hospital. Her daughter is grown now, but the same group of women still meets faithfully once a month.

Some of the eight women who went to French High School together still call their group "the card club," although they quit playing cards years ago because they talked so much during the games they seldom got through until 1 a.m.

Once each month for the past 30 years, they've gathered at one of their homes, and the gossip and giggles that erupt when they do are reminiscent of the slumber parties they used to have when they were schoolmates years ago.

"We went to school together and some of us have known each other since we were 5 years old, so we don't have to put on any pretenses," Dolores Golson says as she passes around a 1973 picture of the group, many of the members sporting bouffant hairdos, amid howls of laughter from the others.

"Some people have reunions every 10 or 15 years, but we don't like to wait that long — we have one every month,' Claudia Gentile says.

Individual members can boast almost perfect attendance since they started getting together, and the group has missed only one monthly meeting in the past 30 years.

The tradition started when Mary Ann Daleo had been cooped up in the house with a newborn baby and was about to go stir-crazy, she says. So she called up her girlfriends and they came over for hot dogs. They decided they'd started drifting apart and realized they had been lonesome for each other. So the monthly meals became a tradition.

Each year, the women draw names for secret pals and send them gifts at different holidays, and always a birthday present.

In fact, each gathering ends with people having birthdays that month opening their gifts. If they recognize the handwriting of their "secret pal" on the accompanying birthday card, they don't let on.

Each Christmas, members reveal secret pals identities — "If we can remember," Ms. Golson laughs, poking fun as they always do at the prospect of getting older.

While the tradition has its juvenile side, it has a serious one, too. When they get past the card games, door prizes, secret pals, giggles and gossip, the women are really a support group for each other.

They have gotten married, gotten divorced, lost children, lost parents and lost jobs — but they've never lost each other.

With each crisis that confronted them, the women knew they had seven shoulders to cry on.

"All of us have been through something, and usually one of the others has been through something similar," Ms. Gentile says. "I didn't want to tell anyone I was getting a divorce (10 years ago) so when they picked me up to go to a meeting, I told them I was crying because Elvis died that day. I should have known they'd understand."

Ms. Gentile now laughs about the Elvis excuse, as do other women in the group about their personal crises that seemed insurmountable at the time.

Meanwhile, there's chocolate pie to eat, grandbabies' pictures to pass around and admire and jokes to tell.

And, of course, there's always next month's meeting to plan.

Many timber-rattlesnake dens may have been in continuous use for hundreds, maybe thousands, of years.

If all of the water from the five Great Lakes were dumped on the country's 48 contiguous states, we'd all be in water 10 feet deep.

Yes, there are some people who do not watch television

DALLAS (AP) — There's winter, spring, summer and fall. And then there's the year's most-awaited season — the new TV season, when more than 88 million Americans come inside early and reacquaint themselves with the Huxtables, ALF and Maddie Hayes.

Not everybody looks forward to the new fall schedule. Two percent of Americans — those who have no television set — don't know Maddie Hayes from Gabby Hayes. To them, Bill Cosby is an author, Santa Barbara a city. Living without television, says one non-viewer, is "like living in a foreign country in which you don't speak the language."

Leif Oines is one of those people. The 26-year-old Dallas computer programmer kicked the TV habit eight years ago and today, he says he's a little out of touch. "I always see something about 'Moonlighting' in the National Enquirer at the checkout, so I know it's out there," says Oines, "but I don't know what it is."

Oines grew up watching reruns of "Gilligan's Island" after school, but when he left home for college, he didn't pack a TV set. "I didn't miss it," he says, "and after I earned enough to buy one, there always seemed to be something more worthwhile to buy. TV is always trying to sell you an idea that's not fully developed or a thing you don't want or need.

"There's always something better to do."

For Elva Trevino, reading and exercise take the place of the TV viewing she gave up 15 years ago. "I find the TV sits me down," says the 37-year-old IBM saleswoman. "I didn't have TV until I was 14 or 15 — I grew up in South Texas and our family didn't own one — but sometimes I watched 'Pop-eye' at a friend's house.

"When I met my ex-husband in 1972, he subscribed to three newspapers, read lots of magazines and didn't watch TV. That's when I discovered it was more fun to read."

Mary Beth Burns says cable television peddlers think she's lying when she tells them she doesn't own a TV. Mrs. Burns, 30, and her doctor husband, Steve, decided nearly five years ago not to waste their time on the tube: Instead, they renovated a house and became active in church work. Since the birth of her daughter two years ago, Mrs. Burns has become more determined that a TV set will not take root in a corner of her living room.

"It's not public enemy No. 1, but there's a lot on TV I wouldn't want my children to see," she says. "TV has changed a lot since I was a kid. I'm appalled at the language and what is shown. It presents things as the norm that aren't the norm."

And, she says, it sometimes takes the place of parents. "I'm sure I wouldn't play with my child as much if I were plugged into the TV instead of to the child," Mrs. Burns says. "And I can see how it would be tempting to let it baby-sit with your kids. But when you're watching TV, you're not interacting with each other."

Russell Hobbs, a Deep Ellum nightclub owner whose unmarried and childless lifestyle is very different from the Burnses', nevertheless agrees that television discourages interaction between people. "They stay in their gerbil boxes watching the same things on TV, hiding from each other," he says.

Businesses offered communication class

Communicating--both at work and at home--will be the topic of a free morning short course scheduled in Snyder Tuesday through the chamber of commerce, the local Texas Employment Commission office and the Abilene-based council of governments.

The session will be from 8 a.m. until noon in the Reddy Room at TU Electric, 2301 Ave. R. It will be presented by the management training division of the Texas A&M extension service.

The session is recommended for business owners who would like to improve the communication skills of their employees; and for any individual who has ever had a problem successfully "communicating" to someone else.

The local program will focus on such areas as effective conversation, jargon and semantics, the power of listening, verbal and written messages and "fabulous" feedback.

It will pinpoint the hidden meanings of what we say to other people and why misunderstandings often arise.

Dwight R. Allen Jr. of the A&M extension service will present the program. He is a training specialist for programs related to supervision, management and personal development in business.

Persons interested in attending should contact Rae Adams at the local TEC office or the chamber of commerce. The number for TEC is 573-5745 and, for the chamber, 573-3558.

Conference registration will be "on site." The cost is $25 with a $5 fee for students in turf management. Registration will be at 8:30 a.m. in the Fine Arts Building.

Speakers will include Dr. Harlan Thorvilson, Dept. of Entomology at Texas Tech; Dr. Gerald Horst, Texas A&M at El Paso; Dr. Milton Engelke, Texas A&M; and Dr. Richard Duble, Texas A&M.

Proceeds from the bonds would go into a special fund to be used, without any further appropriations, to pay for "any appropriate activities" of the project, and state political leaders are calling for approval of the proposition as a show of support for getting the project in Texas.

"The state could reap considerable benefits from an investment of $500 million in general obligation bonds to help convince the federal government to locate the project here," a proponents' spokesman said.

"The super collider would be a major economic boon, costing an estimated $4.4 billion or more to build and having an annual operating budget of $200 million to $300 million."

Opponents say, however, that the super collider "is a high-cost scientific boondoggle of unknown purpose and little practical application.

"Bonds are the state's form of credit card debt, with interest costs that would inflate enormously the final cost of this kind of project," a spokesman said.

devices as tango dances and Latin rhythms to portray Shakespeare's basic premise of morality in romance. Its background of conspiracy and court intrigue has been updated to Cuba in the 1930s, with its "possibility of violence and machismo code of honor," wrote critic Barnes in his New York review.

Other critical comments about the current touring version of the play include:

—"Certainly a major star of the show was the set designer, Douglas Stein. Two huge touring trucks carried more scenery than most theatre groups use in a season." — Karen Kumler, New Era, Lancaster, Pa.

—"This difficult tragi-comedy bursts across the stage...as a fascinating love story, full of passion, wildly gyrating emotion and some of Shakespeare's finest wit." — Peter Vaughan, Minneapolis Star Tribune.

—"It didn't seen to take long for the audience to catch on to the words of Shakespeare joined to the set in Cuba and the humor enhancement that this allowed. It helped to have a fine cast to deliver those words in crisp clear voices with conviction and meaning." — June Hatcher, Chattanooga News-Free Press.

Leather shop exhibit slated

Ethel Rudder.

Mrs. Rudder has been a Snyder resident since 1975. Two of her daughters live here also, Allene LaRoux and Willa Mae Booth.

The exhibit's opening will be part of the museum's third annual western art show and sale Sunday entitled "High in the Saddle." Proceeds from the sale will benefit the museum.

The reception is planned from 12:30-4 p.m., with refreshments served from a chuckwagon by members of the Tejas chapter of the Texas Cattlewomen.

Artists whose works will be displayed for sale are Jodie Boren of Abilene, Dick Powell of Post, Wayne Baize of Fort Davis, Ben Miller of Fluvanna, Dr. Robert Taylor of Snyder and Rosie Alford of Lubbock. Rodeo photographs made by Dudley Barker of Stephenville, James Fain of Logan, Utah, and Paul Gilbert of Snyder will also be included in the exhibit.

Opening in the permanent exhibit gallery Sunday will be the L.B. Rudder Leather Goods display. Mrs. Rudder will be a special guest at the reception.

Seeing the shop take shape in the museum's permanent gallery brought back many memories for her and she has shared some of them with the museum staff as background information for the display.

The leather shop had been in business in Ballinger almost 25 years when the Rudders purchased it from E.J. Cathey. Rudder was a professonal saddlemaker by trade, having learned his skills from a European leather craftsman.

The Rudders purchased the shop on July 26, which was also Mrs. Rudder's birthday. The first money earned in the shop that day was a silver dollar which Mrs. Rudder kept and sometimes wore as a pendant. "I'm always worth a dollar," she jokes.

The shop was a frequent stopping place for farmers and ranchers, who depended on it to make and repair equipment they used everyday, from saddles and harness to new soles and heels for their boots and shoes.

The shop equipment was donated to the Houston Museum of Natural Science in 1970 after Rudder's death and in 1986 the Scurry County Museum became the repository of the collection.

Mrs. Rudder was a dressmaker by profession and still does hand work. During World War II her skills enabled her to alter the leather jackets and other clothing issued to Air Force personnel stationed in Ballinger.

Mrs. Rudder's other children include Ethel Dene Jay of Palmetto, Fla., Leroy B. Rudder Jr. of in Austin and Jack Rudder of Lake Jackson.

Closings due here Monday

In Snyder, mail will be delivered to post office boxes but not to either city or rural routes. The service window will be closed also.

All Snyder financial institutions will close Monday also.

Scurry County Folks...

By Shirley A. Gorman

Creativity means different things to different people. Some people like to write while others like to sew or make handicrafts. Linda Miller of Snyder likes to paint walls.

Her latest projects include painting--as in art work--the walls of the dormitory at Western Texas College, the Cajun Lady and Kids Kampus.

Miller was contacted earlier this summer by Dr. Duane Hood, dean of student services at WTC, about the possibility of decorating the walls of the dormitory with painted designs. It was all part of the summer renovation project at the college.

Miller agreed and while at the college to plan out her designs she was "drafted" into helping to paint the dormitory walls as well.

One abstract design, a western border print in dark tones, is readily visible as soon as one enters the main dormitory lobby.

She also painted an original abstract design on the walls around the WTC game room. The words "Western Texas College" were written over and over again.

In June, Mrs. Miller painted the murals on the walls of the Cajun Lady, one of Snyder's newest restaurants.

The main wall as one enters the restaurant features a seascape complete with a boat on one side and birds on the opposite wall.

She said she is particularly proud of the way the restroom walls turned out. The men's room features a dark swamp scene with alligators coming up out of the bayou and the girl's room depicts a pelican swimming in water.

She has also painted the walls of the drop-in center at Kids Kampus and Toys Galore which was her first wall mural.

Mrs. Miller uses latex wall enamel and foam burshes when she paints her wall murals. "I like to paint murals because it does not take fancy equipment," she said.

When painting a mural, she first confers with her client to learn what they want. Sometimes she said they have a clear picture in mind and even provide her with a sample picture to follow; other times they just say "do something creative."

Once she knows what the project will be, Mrs. Miller then chalks in the design on the wall. Later she paints over the chalk and if any chalk remains she easily wipes it away.

"When I'm doing my chalk designs they don't look like much to someone else but I know what I am doing," she said.

She does not sketch out a design on paper before beginning a project because a piece of paper and wall do not correspond with each other. Instead, she carries her thoughts and ideas in her head and works from her imagination or a picture provided by the client.

"My favorite designs are Teddy bears. I love doing murals with designs for children," she explained.

She also paints smaller pictures to give as gifts.

Mrs. Miller is married to Gary Miller who works at the BHP Gas Plant. They have three children: Alesha, 5, Jeremy, 3, and Michelle, 1.

Whenever Mrs. Miller has a job to do she takes her three children with her as they are her "helpers." Mainly the older children help watch the youngest.

"I don't want to work at a job where I have to put my children with a baby sitter," she said. "So this works out fine. Eventually I would like to see my window and wall painting business expand when my children are a little older."

Mrs. Miller is a native of Santa Anna but admits to being "raised all over." Her parents still live in Santa Anna.

She came to Snyder eight years ago to attend Western Texas College. She chose WTC because her bother had gone there also. She originally got into art almost by accident. She had wanted to take a creative writing course but since it was not offered she took art instead and liked it so well that she pursued that instead of creative writing. She has an associates degree from WTC.

According to Mrs. Miller, Dr. Hood remembered her from her days as a student at WTC and that is why he asked her to paint the wall murals.

"It's a lot of fun to do walls. I love to take a bland room and make it into something special."

Polio shot for travelers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans planning to travel to developing nations should be vaccinated against poliomyelitis, according to Family Practice News.

The medical journal reports that although there is a worldwide downtrend in the incidence of the disease, the trend toward more frequent international travel by U.S. citizens may lead to an overall increase in exposure to wild polio virus.

The only countries considered free of wild endemic polio virus circulation are the United States, Japan, Canada, Australia, New Zealand and most of Europe, the publication says.

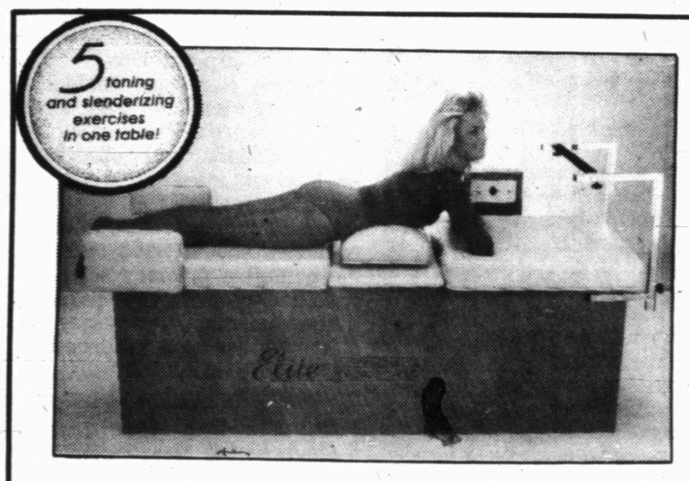

It adds that travelers to other countries should have received the complete primary series of vaccinations prior to departure, if time permits. The series requires 12 weeks in children and eight months in adults.

Christopher Columbus discovered the New World Oct. 12, 1492. He landed on Watling Island in the Bahamas and claimed it for Spain. The Italian explorer had sailed in August from Spain.

GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY — Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Dyess celebrated their Oct. 2, 1937 anniversary with a trip to Ruidoso, N.M. hosted by their children, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Bullard and Thomas of Snyder, and Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Dyess of Kenai, Alaska. The couple met in Fluvanna and were married in Hermleigh. They have lived in Scurry County most of their married life. Others in attendance for the trip were Mr. and Mrs. James Banks of Sand Springs and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Liner with Amanda and Mandy of El Paso. (Private Photo)

MEAT, POULTRY, SEAFOOD, NUTS, EGGS, DRIED BEANS & PEAS

These foods are high in protein, B vitamins, iron and other minerals.

Chicken and turkey should be eaten without the skin. This is where much of the fat is found.

Trim all visible fat from lean beef, veal, pork and lamb.

Fish and shellfish of all kinds are healthy to eat, but limit the use of shrimp, lobster or sardines to no more than one serving of these per week.

Try recipes without meat or with only a small amount of meat added to the recipe a few times a week. These include those using dried beans, peas, lentils, soybean curd (tofu), peanut butter or low-fat cheese. Also try combining small amounts of meat, fish or poultry with rice or pasta in mixed dishes or casseroles.

Use egg whites in recipes substituting two whites for one egg. Limit whole eggs or egg yolks to no more than two per week.

Wild game such as rabbit, pheasant, venison, wild duck and other game animals generally have less fat than animals raised for the market.

Adults need no more than five to seven ounces of meat, poultry or seafood per day, about two small servings. Examples of a three ounce portion are ½ of a chicken breast or a chicken leg and a thigh together; ¼ cup of flaked fish; 2 thin slices lean roast beef, 3"x3"x¼".

Preschool children should have about one ounce of meat, poultry or seafood per day for each year of age.

Use poultry (without the skin) and fish more often than red meat.

Instead of high-fat luncheon meats, choose low-fat processed sandwich meats with labels showing no more than two grams of fat per ounce such as turkey or chicken roll, turkey ham, turkey pastrami or lean boiled ham.

Buy only the leanest ground beef, labeled as containing no more than 15% fat. Pour off the fat after browning. Ask your butcher for the fat content if it is not noted on the label.

Skim the fat off meat juices before adding to stews, soups and gravy. Chilling the meat juices first allows you to easily remove the hardened fat.

Foods in this category to avoid include "prime" grades of meat and other heavily marbled and fatty meats such as corned beef, regular pastrami, short ribs, spare ribs, rib eye roast or steak, regular ground meat, frankfurters, sausage, bacon and high-fat luncheon meats.

Also to avoid are goose and domestic duck and organ meats such as brains, chitterlings, gizzard, heart, kidney, sweetbreads, pork maws and liver which are high in cholesterol. However, liver is so rich in iron and vitamins, a small serving of three ounces is recommended about once a month.

FCL RETREAT

The final Family Community Leadership Retreat will be held Oct. 12 and 13 at Ceta Canyon Methodist Camp. County Extension Agent Kathryn Roberts and FCL volunteer, Gingah Williamson, will attend the retreat.

The Family Community Leadership program is an educational activity designed to increase the leadership capabilities and involvement of women and others in public policy decision-making process. Gingah and Kathryn work as a team in making presentations for individuals and organizations.

Workshops to be conducted at the retreat include "Taking Action," "Motivating Yourself and Others," "Listening and Lobbying," and "Teamwork." The Scurry County FCL team will present a mini-lesson on "Train Yourself to Change."

A recognition luncheon will be held on the closing day. FCL pins and certificates will be awarded to individuals who have attended all three workshops. Each participating individual was required to have 96 hours of payback time.

Couple joined in marriage

Lisa Ann Dollins became the bride of Louis O. Midwell of Colorado City at 3 p.m. Aug. 29 in the First Baptist Church. Rick Cunningham with 37th Street Church of Christ officiated the double-ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Don and Marie Dollins and Lucille Midwell of Coolidge, Ariz.

White wicker baskets filled with dusty rose and light pink silk flowers and greenery flanked a 15-branch candelabrum holding white tapers. Pews were marked with dusty rose ribbons.

Pianist Barbara Tune and vocalists Arlie and Barbara Eicke provided musical selections, "Wedding March," "The Rose," "To Me," "The Lord's Prayer" and the traditional recessional.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in a white taffeta gown overlaid in English dotted lace. The fitted bodice featured a round neckline and empire waist accented with Venise lace. Long fitted sleeves of English dotted lace were enhanced with matching Venise lace appliques on the elbows and trimmed with lace at the wrists.

The full skirt fell into a chapel length train and was accented by Venise lace appliques at the middle of the front and back. Matching lace circled the hemline.

The two-tiered fingertip veil of illusion was attached to a Juliet headpiece covered in Chantilly lace accented by pearls and tiny white silk flowers.

The bride carried a silk cascade arrangement of dusty rose roses and pink and white carnations accented with greenery. Streamers of pink and white pico and lace completed the bouquet.

In keeping with tradition, the bride wore birthdate pennies in her shoe. Her gown was new, a garter was blue and a pearl ring was old. A pearl necklace was borrowed from her mother.

Matron of honor was Sharon Meador, sister of the bride. She wore a gown of dusty rose satin in a long princess style and satin shoulder bows. She carried a nosegay of dusty rose roses and pink carnations with primrose streamers.

Stephanie Meador, niece of the bride, was flower girl and was attired to match the attendant.

The groom wore a white tuxedo with a boutonniere of white and dusty rose roses.

Freddy Lentz of Colorado City, brother of the groom, served as best man. Ushers were Kevin Dollins, nephew of the bride, and Bert Otto. They were attired in maroon tuxedos with boutonnieres of pink and dusty rose silk flowers.

Belinda Dollins, sister-in-law of the bride, registered guests.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the Garden Room of the church. The bride's table was covered in white with a lace overlay. The centerpiece of silk spider mums and bougainvillea was arranged on a silver disk.

The three-tiered traditional cake was decorated in dusty rose. Mints, nuts and fruit punch completed the table. Servers were Roxanne Stoker and Tori Lyons.

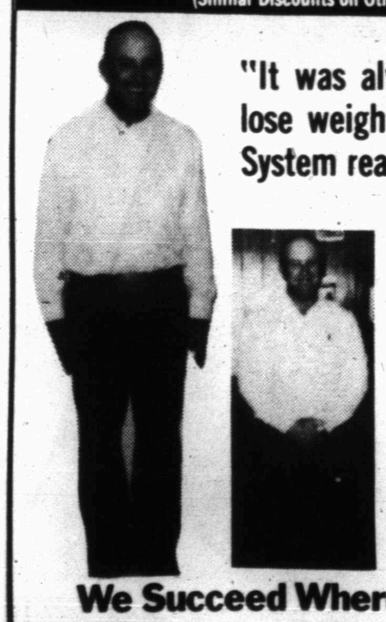

The groom's table was covered in brown linen over ecru. German chocolate cake and a silver coffee service accented the table. Tommi Lentz of Colorado City, sister-in-law of the groom, served.

Following a honeymoon trip to Ruidoso, N.M., the couple is at home in Snyder.

The bride is a graduate of Snyder High School and Western Texas College.

The groom is employed by Western in Snyder.

NISBET CASTLE
...Scotland...

Locals visit Scotland

A visit to Nisbet Castle was the highlight of an 11-day tour for a group with Nisbet ancestry. The tour covered England, Wales and Scotland.

On Sept. 20 the group temporarily left the tour and chartered a bus to Wheatsheaf Hotel in Swinton Berwickshire where they enjoyed a noon meal with David and Susan Nisbet of Berwick-upon-Tweed. After lunch they were escorted to the Nisbet Castle near Duns, Scotland by the native Nisbets who wore the Nisbet Tartan.

Local descendant Imo D. England pointed out that the name Nisbet comes from the old Barony of Nesbit in the Parish of Edrom, Berwickshire. In the second half of the 12th century, William de Nesbite was witness to a confirmation of a charter of the Priory of Coldingham granted by Patrick, 1st Earl of Dunbar.

The name was eventually carried to Sweden where it is quite common today. One of the best known of the family was James Nesbit, translator of the New Testament into the Scots tongue. Other spellings are Nesbet, Nysbet, Nisbet, Nesbit, Nisbett and Nesbitt.

Family members making the tour were descendants of John Newman Nisbett. They included Norma, Fred and Jill Bates of Pittsburg, La Vonna Rogers of Commanche, Imo D. and Bud England of Snyder, Nancy and Ray Stowe of Ft. Worth, La Nelle Perkins and Earline Witcher of Abilene and their Abilene friends, Elizabeth Jones and Ada Fry.

CWC to see style show

Pendleton wools will be featured at the Christian Women's Club style show Wednesday. Betty Doan, owner of Sunnyside Dress Shop, will coordinate local models for the show.

Doan remarked that Pendleton garments are unique in that they are entirely made in the U.S.A. From the wool production all the way to the final design, every step is completed in the states.

Doan and her husband Joe are long-time Snyder residents and have six children.

Also featured at the luncheon to be held at the Snyder Country Club will be vocalist Terrisu Sims accompanied by Lynn Bethel.

Mrs. Don (Skeet) Workman of Lubbock will be the guest speaker.

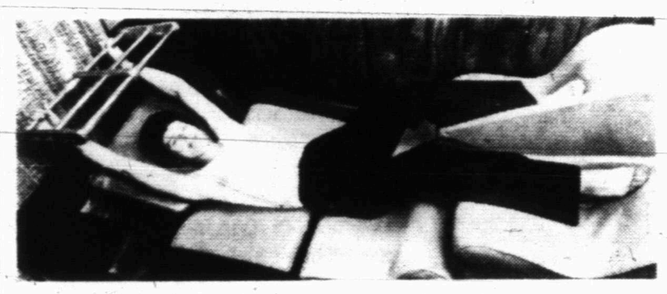

Reservations for the 11:15 to 1:15 luncheon must be made by noon Tuesday by calling Doris at 573-6602 or Melissa at 573-0745. A free nursery is available. The meal is $6 or a beverage may be purchased for $1.

Vaughn, Dorn united in evening rites

Gina Gay Vaughn and Christopher Patrick Dorn were united in marriage at 6 p.m. Sept. 5 in Union Methodist Church. Rev. John M. Dorn of Follette, father of the groom, performed the double-ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Ruben L. Vaughn and Rev. and Mrs. John M. Dorn.

Heart-shaped candelabra embellished with greenery held candles in cut crystal votive cups and flanked altars which were topped with greenery and baby's breath. Peach tapers were held in crystal candle holders.

Candlelighters were Halea Huestis, cousin of the bride, and John Mark Dorn of Follette, brother of the groom.

The mothers of the couple lit tapers flanking the unity candle which was lit by the bride and groom.

Musical selections chosen for the occasion were "Walk Hand in Hand," "Can't Help But Falling in Love," "Someone," "To Me," "The Lord's Prayer," and "Whither Thou Goest." Phillip Hagar, pianist, accompanied vocalists Jeana Fox and Jackie Hackfeld.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a white satin traditional gown. The Queen Anne neckline topped a fitted bodice with Basque waistline. Modified Elizabethan sleeves completed the bodice styling.

A full skirt with tiers of Chantilly lace ruffles swept to a chapel length train. The bride's hat was lavishly trimmed in lace and silk flowers. A blusher of illusion fell over a streamer of silk illusion down the back.

The bride carried a Bible covered in white lace belonging to her grandmother. Her bouquet was of peach and yellow flowers surrounded by white lace and satin ribbon. Shawna Eliot, sister of the groom, made the arrangement.

Following tradition, the bride wore birthdate pennies of the couple in her shoe. Something old was her Bible and a lavalier belonging to her grandmother. The bridal gown was new, a garter was blue and pearl earrings were borrowed.

MR. AND MRS. CHRISTOPHER PATRICK DORN

Glenda Boyd, sister of the bride, served as matron of honor. Bridesmaid was Shawna Eliot of Abilene, the groom's sister. Each attendant wore long dresses of pale yellow with a lace ovelay. Yellow satin ribbon formed a sash at the waist. Ties at the shoulders completed the bodice design.

Carrying long-stemmed peach roses with yellow streamers, the attendants were escorted down the aisle by their sons, Justin and Jared Boyd and Michael Eliot.

The groom was attired in a white tuxedo with tails. Satin lapels, cummerbund and bow tie were accented by a boutonniere of yellow and peach flowers.

Best man was Larry Kuykendall of Dumas. Jay Hodge of New Mexico, cousin of the groom, served as groomsman. They wore grey suits with white shirts and pale yellow ties.

Ruth Ann Cozart of Dublin, cousin of the bride, registered guests.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the fellowship hall of the church. The bride's table was covered in lace and was accented by pictures of the couple as children. The unity candle served as the centerpiece.

A three-tiered cake was topped by a miniature bride and groom backed by a gold cross and surrounded by peach and yellow flowers. A crystal punch bowl and appointments completed the table. The cake was designed and created by the bride's cousin, Jeannie McKinney of Denver City.

Servers at the bride's table were Lorelei Jones of Lubbock and Chariti Dorn of Follette, the groom's sister.

The groom's table was covered in linen and accented by silver candle holders and a silver coffee service. The chocolate cake was created by Joyce Dow. Sue Smylie of Arlington served.

Following a brief honeymoon, the couple is at home in Snyder.

A Snyder High School graduate, the bride is currently enrolled at Western Texas College and is working with a safe house for women.

The groom is an SHS graduate and is attending WTC. He is employed with Snyder Heating and Air Conditioning.

Stack tortillas and cut the whole stack into 8 wedges to make 40 wedges total. Spread evenly in a single layer on 2 baking sheets. Bake in a 375-degree oven for 10 to 15 minutes or until wedges are dry and crisp.

Meanwhile, in a small mixing bowl stir together tomatoes, chili peppers, chili powder and hot pepper sauce. Spoon tomato mixture over wedges; top with cheese. Broil 4 to 5 inches from heat about 1½ minutes or until cheese is melted. Slide onto a serving platter. Serve at once. Makes 8 servings.

FLUVANNA — Dawn Etta Patrick and Ricky Don Summers, both of Snyder, became husband and wife at 4 p.m. July 11 in Fluvanna Baptist Church. Jim Mosley, pastor of Union Baptist Church, officiated the double-ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Virdie O. and Sandra Patrick and Royce and LaRue Summers, all of Snyder.

The altar was flanked by 15-light arched brass candelabra entwined with ivy. A brass stand entwined with ivy and decorated with white bows and wedding bells held the unity candle etched in rose. White baskets on the piano and organ held violet and white roses and spring flowers. Pews were marked with white bows and streamers holding bells taken from the bride's shower cake.

Mary Jo Patrick, sister of the bride, and Jason Summers, brother of the groom, served as candlelighters.

Larry Adams, pianist, provided accompaniment for vocalists Jeana Fox and the father of the bride. Selections chosen were "You Needed Me" and "Let It Be."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a formal gown of white taffeta with lace and illusion overlays. The fitted bodice was adorned with pearls and sequins and had fitted lace sleeves.

The full skirt was covered in tiers of lace-trimmed illusion. A taffeta train completed the gown design. The chapel length veil of sheer net was attached to a head piece covered in lace and pearls. Etched roses embellished the veil.

The cascading bouquet was of silk rose buds and open white roses, French violet carnations, African violets and baby's breath and English ivy. White satin streamers complimented the bouquet.

Following tradition, the gown was new, a hand-designed garter was blue and diamond earrings were borrowed from her mother. Something old were two strands of pearls belonging to the bride's grandmother.

Maid of honor was Carol Tankersley. Bridesmaids were Robbi Merrit, Joan Godair and Gobby Scott. The attendants were attired in violet taffeta gowns with lace flounces. V-necklines were complimented by capelet sleeves. Satin ribbon formed sashes at the raised waistlines. Bustles accented the backs of the gowns. Each attendant carried a white long-stemmed rose.

Brandi Fink of Albany was flower girl and Michael Fink of Albany was ring bearer.

Doug Wilkinson served as best man with groomsmen Shane Nutt of San Angelo, Ronnie Rosas of San Angelo and Mike Hood. Ushers were Duane Summers, brother of the groom, and Jeff Stewart.

Jimmie Sue Mosley of Union registered the guests.

A reception followed the ceremony. The bride's table was covered in white linen overlaid in violet lace. The bridal bouquet centered the table which also held a silver coffee service, the punch bowl and a silver tray holding handmade mints in heart, bell and shell shapes.

The three-tier bridal cake was separated by columns and was decorated with violet roses. A miniature kissing bride and groom graced the top layer and had a lace circle as their background.

Servers were Mary Ann Caldwell, Sharon Lemons and Rhonda Johnson.

The groom's table was covered in grey linen and held a chocolate boot-shaped cake. A boot filled with violets and white spring flowers centered the table. Marlene and Barbara Beck served.

Following a honeymoon trip to Oklahoma City, the couple is at home in Snyder.

The bride is a Snyder High School graduate and is employed at McDonald's.

The groom is an SHS graduate and is employed with Morris Head.

Retail jargon is confusing

NEW YORK (AP) — Crow's feet, neck extenders and sore thumbs may be terms generally associated with medical clinics but a New York-based marketing communications firm notes that Americans encounter them nearly every time they enter a retail store.

The words are part of the jargon connected with the $9 billion point-of-sale industry that develops display materials for America's retail stores, according to executives at the Howard Marlboro Group.

Crow's feet, for example, are simply a pair of metal brackets that fit into pole slots at right angles to form a pole display unit. The neck extender is an extension adapter that adds length to a display pole.

The sore thumb is a display designed to attract immediate attention by virtue of its large size or distinctive style. An example of a "sore thumb" would be a "sniffer," a display that uses odor to attract attention or enhance the product it is displaying.

HARVEST-AID CHEMICALS FOR TIMELY HARVEST

Timely harvest to preserve lint yield and quality is an important aspect of profitable cotton production. This year, much of the April-May planted cotton and possibly some June planted fields on the Texas High Plains may warrant termination with harvest-aid chemicals.

Because of the indeterminate growth habit of cotton, timing crop termination is one of the most difficult decisions confronting producers. It usually involves a compromise between halting further top boll maturation and minimizing botton (open) boll deterioration.

Premature crop termination by weather or harvest-aid chemicals can lower yields and quality. On the other hand, delays in harvest once cotton is ready may result in economic losses on the order of four to five dollars per bale per week.

The key to making sound decisions about chemically terminating a cotton crop is a sound estimate of crop maturity. The most visible indicator of maturity is boll opening.

The Texas Agricultural Extension Service recommends that the use of defoliants be delayed until 60 percent or more of the bolls are open, and the remaining, harvestable bolls are mature. The use of desiccants should be delayed until 80 percent or more of the bolls are open and the remaining harvestable bolls are too hard to be dented by pressing with the thumb and forefinger or to be easily sliced with a sharp knife.

These are sound recommendations, but often tend to be conservative for the Texas High Plains where cool night temperatures and other factors may delay natural opening of mature bolls.

A better way to assess maturity is by careful field inspection. At random spots in the field, pull up at least five normally fruited plants. Slice through the unopen bolls with a sharp knife and examine the seed coats and seed embryos. The boll is essentially mature if the embryo has solidified and has a normal bright yellow color and if the seed coat is already dark brown or black in color.

If harvestable bolls do not meet these criteria, it is too early to apply harvest-aid chemicals.

On the other hand, be realistic about what is considered to be a harvestable boll. Remember that the early set bolls will be the most mature and of the best quality. Once open, the fiber in these bolls begins to gradually lose weight, discolor and trap various contaminants (plant debris, soil particles, etc.). Consequently, weathering losses may more than offset any yield gains provided by the later set bolls.

Once mature, harvest-aid chemicals may be used to prepare the crop for timely harvest. These chemicals fall into three groups: growth regulators, defoliants and desiccants.

Prep is a growth regulator and is used to hasten boll opening. In addition to forcing bolls to open, Prep will induce shedding of immature fruit and some defoliation. Once Prep is applied, further fiber development is halted; consequently, this chemical should not be used until all harvestable bolls are mature.

Prep activity in the plant is highly temperature dependent. For best results, warm, open conditions are needed for five or more days following treatment. About a pound of Prep per acre is required for boll opening; higher rates may be needed to compensate for cooler temperatures. Prep treatments must be followed up with desiccants or a hard freeze to condition the crop for stripper harvest.

Defoliants are chemicals that cause abscission and shedding of leaves. Typically, defoliants do not kill the plant but effectively stop further plant, fiber and seed development. The use of defoliants may be economically warranted in fields where rank growth and dense foliage are likely to contribute to significant grade reductions if the leaves are not removed pior to desiccation and harvest.

Where cotton is stripper harvested, desiccants are needed to kill plant tissues and cause rapid drying of leaves and stems. Normally, it takes seven to 10 days after desiccation (or a killing freeze) to dry plant components and condition the crop for harvest. Arsenic acid and paraquat (sold under the tradenames of Cyclone and Gramoxone Plus) are both effective desiccants. Arsenic acid may be more effective in fields where regrowth is a problem.

The use of desiccants a week or so before an expected killing freeze may be justified in that the treatment will hasten the boll opening-plant drying processes and allow harvest to begin early.

Cotton producers applying harvest-aid chemicals often encounter situations in which results range from good to very poor. Usually these differences can be traced to weather and plant conditions during the following treatment.

Good results are most likely when fields are treated under the following conditions: weather is warm, calm and sunny; soil moisture is low but adequate to maintain plants in a non-stressed condition; soil nitrogen is nearly depleted as cotton matures; leaves are active and uniformly expanded on the plant; little or no vegetation or secondary growth is evident; some mature leaves are shedding and high percentage of bolls are open.

Conversely, poor results with harvest-aid chemicals are attributed to just the opposite conditions.

Good harvest-aid management should include treating only sufficient acreage to stay ahead of harvesting operations. Before treating, it is wise to check weather forecasts to avoid as much unfavorable weather as possible. After applying a desiccant, a seven to 14 day "curing out" period is required to condition the crop for stripper harvest.

Barky cotton can result from either stripping too early after treatment or delaying the stripping operation too long after desiccation. Seed cotton and all plant parts should be dry before stripping. Plants ready for harvest will have cotton that fluffs well and plant parts that are crisp and brittle.

Producers should remember that the maturity of cotton cannot be hastened through the use of harvest-aid chemicals. Only time and favorable weather will mature cotton. However, harvest-aid chemicals will promote more rapid opening of mature bolls and prepare the crop for timely harvesting.

Ancestors fought lice in ages past

JERUSALEM (AP) — Wooden combs left in the Israelite fortress of Masada after a siege by the Romans nearly 2,000 years ago show the ancients suffered from one of today's more pesky afflictions — they had lice.

"All indications point to head lice being a big problem," said Kostas Mumcuoglu, an Israeli parasitologist who studied hundreds of lice and lice eggs found clinging to the ancient combs and hair.

"These people were forced to live in overcrowded, unhygienic conditions. They obviously had lots of lice," he said.

The 960 Jewish Zealots who took refuge at Masada, an imposing rock fortress on a mountain ridge overlooking the Dead Sea, faced starvation during a seven-year siege by the Romans. They committed mass suicide in A.D. 73 rather than surrender.

Many of the 24 combs and clumps of hair Mumcuoglu studied were discovered buried with bits of clothes at Masada and date to A.D. 68. Others were found in the caves at Qumran where the ancient Dead Sea scrolls were uncovered, as well as in other caves in the Judean and Negev deserts.

According to the Old Testament of the Bible, even Moses and his followers were afflicted with lice. A teeming swarm of the creatures was among the nine plagues God sent to free the Israelites from Egyptian slavery, according to Exodus 8:16.

Mumcuoglu said the combs, which look much like contemporary ones, were used by the ancient Jews primarily to pick lice out of their scalps rather than for reasons of vanity.

"They were made of a hard wood and were much more effective than the plastic and metal combs people use to remove lice today," he said.

Mumcuoglu, a researcher at Hebrew University, said the fact that many of the lice eggs stuck to the combs were still unhatched showed how well they worked.

"Before they hatch, lice eggs may as well be glued to the head. They're almost impossible to remove," he said.

Mumcuoglu said he also studied the ancient lice under a microscope and discovered the creatures were no different from the lice of today.

"I measured all kinds of head lengths and widths of these lice. Everything was the same," he said.

Jump overcall boomerangs

By James Jacoby

Pre-emptive jump overcalls are useful weapons in your bridge war. But they also have their shortcomings. The late Lew Mathe, a frequent North American champion, loved to make weak jump overcalls, but he always liked to have doubleton queens in side suits. He knew that an opposing declarer would play him for shortness in those suits so that quite often those doubleton queens would win tricks.

S.C. Mohan was a member of the winning Flight A Morning Knockout Team in the North American Championships in Baltimore last July. Today's deal was crucial to his victory. After the weak jump overcall by East, Mohan bid his diamonds. When partner showed diamond support, that was all South needed to launch into Blackwood. When North showed two aces, South bid a small slam.

East won the ace of spades and returned a low club. Mohan won the ace of clubs and went for the logical play in the diamond suit. If East had six spades, there wasn't too much room left for him to hold many diamonds. It would be silly to lay down the king of diamonds first to protect against a singleton queen in the East hand, since East could hold any one of four small cards for a singleton, but there was only one queen. So, backing his judgment, South led the jack of diamonds and let it ride. Another finesse in trumps, followed by the play of the ace and king, enabled him to pick up the suit and make the slam. Would his play have worked against Lew Mathe?

A new book by James Jacoby and his father, the late Oswald Jacoby, is now available at bookstores. It is "Jacoby on Card Games," published by Pharos Books.

Buying wholesale makes profit

NEW YORK (AP) — An important way to make a profit in a home business is to buy supplies and products at wholesale prices without paying sales taxes.

Georganne Fiumara, a Family Circle magazine contributing editor, offers some tips on buying wholesale.

"Manufacturers or wholesalers have the right to decide to whom they will sell their merchandise," says Fiumara. Each company has its own terms and conditions for sale, can set minimum dollar amounts on each sale and can require that you buy in case lots.

—If you live in a state that collects sales tax, apply for a "resale" tax number, which allows you to collect sales tax from your customers and entitles you to buy wholesale goods without paying sales tax.

—Be professional: have business cards, stationery and order forms professionally printed.

—If you don't have a credit rating, be willing to pay cash.

Editorials-Columns-Cartoons-Kid Stuff-Look Back-Letters

We recently read the following criticism in connection with this decade's most popular whipping boy, the fabled "Yuppie."

The comment was that they are too dadgum self-absorbed for their own good.

Regarding Yuppies, we suspect the term is fast growing away from its original intent to become a description associated with every crummy characteristic modern man discovers in himself.

Never the less, the description "self-absorbed" probably applies as well as any. And, it occurs to us that of a long list of potential pitfalls associated with the breed, this has to be one of the worst.

Witness first that our so-called Yuppie is exposed to the double whammy of an elevated comfort level and an accelerated barrage of information.

Because he is a Yuppie, he wants to be trendy. And the trendy thing now is to be health conscious.

Because his lifestyle allows him to pursue such worthwhile quests as jogging in color-coordinating warm-ups and reading "People" magazine's section on "Health," he has time to digest a lot of these so-called beneficial facts about his body.

To not only digest them, but to have ample time to study his stomach, as it were, both inside and out.

In ignorance there is bliss, particularly of things medical.

We really don't want to know that one out of every four individuals stands a good chance of being diagnosed with some form of cancer.

Likewise, that autopsies on patient's as young as in their early 20s have shown accumulations of cholesterol in major arteries.

Or that first-time victims of heart attack in their 40s have the least likely chance of survival.

And because they do have "spendable income," our Yuppie also receives a barrage of insurance types with major medical policies related to cancer and heart ailments. Questions like, "What would your wife do if you were suddenly incapacitated for life?" don't help the situation.

Remember, our Yuppie faces the double dilemma of too much leisure time and a bank of information once reserved for a medical library.

The two facts work on the basic self-absorption we've already accused him of. The "me generation" suddenly confronted with the fact that "me" isn't getting any younger.

This self-absorption puts our poor Yuppie in the imminent risk of turning into a closet hypochondriac.

Put another way, the poor stiff has too much free time to think about too many things that might go wrong with him.

It has been said that first-year medical students at one time or another believe they have the symptoms of every disease known to man.

The same can be said true of our Yuppie. Relieved of the burdens of primary needs--his dinner table filled, his home comfortable and his monthly check somewhat assured--he turns to bold, new areas of personal concern.

Those achy joints early in the morning are only the first signs of crippling arthritis; the fluttery heart before the big presentation is probably a weak valve backflushing its way to a major coronary; and that sudden skin blotch where the tan line used to be is no doubt a tentative brush with malignant carcinoma.

Too much time worrying about yourself can be neither productive or healthy. Yuppies, you rascals you, heal thyself.

Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

Have you ever stopped to think about what it is that attracted you most to the people you call your friends? I'm not talking about acquaintances here, Christmas-card or graduation-invitation folks. I'm talking about those rare and shining individuals with whom you can sit down, take off your town mask and be yourself.

Friends are like radiating, concentric circles. On the outer edge are the people we know from work or community activities or church — we nod and smile on the street, maybe stop to visit about the weather. Closer in are the people we've known a long time, people who know that our mother has been in the hospital or that we've had a tough year financially. They ask about us and care about the answer. We do the same with them. Closer still resides a smaller group, half a dozen or so, if we are really blessed, who have seen us when we are angry or hurt, who've seen us when we've had too much to drink (and still love us), who've called to check on us in hard times even when we didn't ask, who don't gossip about us behind our backs. Even closer are those two or three individuals who have listened to us pour out heart and soul at least once, who understood, who offered comfort, commiseration and even laughter.

If we are rich among members of the human race, we have at least one (our spouse, if we're lucky), and maybe one of the same sex, friend who has peeled away every layer of our souls, seen us naked and exposed, and covered that part of us with their love.

"Nothing better than this," said Cicero, "has been given to man by the immortal gods."

One of the finest joys I've found, living in a small town, is the ability to grow old with your friends. In the high-tech, fast-paced world of the big city, status-seeking and career-ladder-climbing move people in and out with the rapidity of a Las Vegas one-armed bandit. You're lucky if you can come up beside a friend very often, and when you do, you might find him or her different. The mask hardens with time, grows sleeker, smoother. You can find yourself in a room crowded with people you know and feel immensely lonely.

Through our years together, Kent and I have managed to accumulate an eclectic bunch of friends that don't fit into any social or economic slots: cowboys, artists, feminists, preachers, doctors, farmers, writers, oil field workers, cops, business people, social workers, homemakers, bankers, teachers, college students, pilots, various and sundry Aggies, and one paraplegic sailor. They come in all ages, shapes, sizes and colors. There are men I consider my friends and women Kent considers his friends. (Which is one of the richest blessings of a relationship founded on trust.)

If there is a common thread linking our friends, I would say that each of these people is an original. They are individualists with strength of character who are not afraid to speak their minds or live out their lives as they see fit without regard for convention. And, though each of these people's lives have touched tragedy, they like to laugh a lot, at themselves as much as anything.

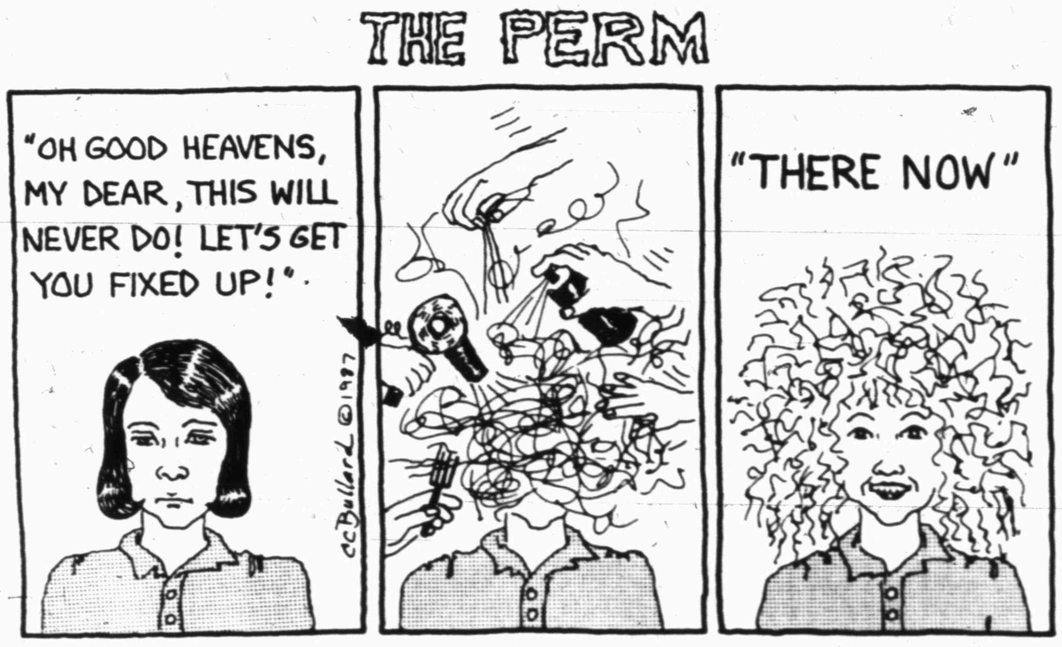

Journalist Tom Shroder once wrote about his friends: "At once I felt embraced by all the special people who had filled my life, the things I'd seen, the stories I'd heard. Through it all ran a fine, rare kind of courage...It was the courage to lie, not in the face of loss, but heedless of it. It flowed from their hearts as naturally and irresistably as the furious energy of children at play on a new swing set."

That's what it is, in the long run, that we value in our friends. Courage.

It's the courage of a friend of mine, barely into her thirties, who had to commit her healthy, vital mother to a nursing home for treatment of Alzheimer's; the courage of a couple whose young son's body is sometimes and unexpectedly gripped by seizures which threaten to rob him of his life; the courage of a too-young widow to raise her three children without complaint; the courage of a paralyzed man to sail the Caribbean alone — and each of these people has eyes lit with the spark and vitality of life and the joy of living it, the CHALLENGE of living it to the fullest extent that they know how, quietly or energetically, but always, always, with faith and determination and humor.

Cicero also said that, "the real friend...is, as it were, another self."

If that is true, then I can think of no finer compliment.

SACROC officials now foresee stability in the once volatile oil market and, thanks to other recent developments, say the unitized field's immediate future appears brighter than it did six months ago, it was reported Sunday.

The current operating budget for SACROC--which runs through Dec. 31--was based on $15 per barrel oil. This coming year, the estimate will rise to $18.

Scurry County commissioners Monday agreed to a one-year contract extension with Lubbock County Youth Detention Center with an expansion from 20 to 50 beds to accommodate a stricter local enforcement of juvenile statutes.

County adult and juvenile probation officer Larry Thompson said the additional space was needed because District Attorney Ernie Armstrong and District Judge Gene Dulaney have joined him in a crack-down on juvenile delinquents.

For the second year in a row, Snyder has experienced a 50 percent decrease in new construction totals, back-to-back declines which have seen the year's building fall from some $7.4 million in 1985 to the just counted $1.7 million.

The decline is even more stark when compared to three years ago, when an all-time high of $9.4 million was recorded.

During the decade's peak period of building in 1983 and 1984, many monthly totals were in excess of $1 million.

Letters to the Editor

To the editor,

I would like to take this opportunity to thank all of the people of Scurry County who helped to make our recent Scurry County Fair successful. Those who participated in the fair by entering in the various events or judged divisions are by far the most important individuals responsible for a successful fair.

Without them there would not be the attraction of coming to the fair to see the wonderful handiwork they have performed. We hope these talented people will continue to outdo themselves in their friendly competition for the blue ribbons.

I also cannot say enough thanks for the staff at the Scurry County Coliseum — Wes Partain, manager; Jay Wesson, Laura Jones, James Herrera, James Swigert and Lester Anderson, for the many hours of effort they gave the directors and superintendents of the fair. Unless someone gets a chance to work with these people, one does not realize how much they really do for Scurry County.

Thanks need to go to the Snyder Daily News staff and KSNY Radio for their help in letting the public know what was taking place at the fair, and letting everyone know the results of the judgings and competitions that took place during the fair. Without their help, our Scurry County Fair attendance and participation would not be nearly what we have.

And last, but not least, I want to say a big thanks to the directors and superintendents of the Scurry County Fair. This group of people put in more hours than I can count to put together one of the finest "county fairs" in West Texas. The only thing they receive for their work is thanks, so I hope those of you who enjoyed the fair will take time to

Media's scrutiny condemned

LANCASTER, Pa. (AP) — Republican presidential hopeful Pat Robertson, stung by disclosures on his background and inaccuracies in his resume, condemned the news media's intense scrutiny of his personal life.

Robertson, a former minister and television evangelist, dealt with reporters' questions Thursday about his marriage, education and war record at stops in Philadelphia and Lancaster and on ABC-TV's "Nightline" news program.

Robertson told reporters at the Lancaster Airport that the public can pass judgment on his past, but that news reports were moving "beyond the bounds of ethical behavior."

On Tuesday, The Wall Street Journal reported Robertson and his wife, Dede, were legally married just 10 weeks before their first child was born. He has since acknowleged the report was accurate.

The Washington Post on Thursday quoted Robertson as saying he and his wife considered themselves married the day their first child was conceived — his birthday, March 22, 1954. They were legally married Aug. 27 that year.

"I'm a human being. When I was a young man, I sowed a number of wild oats. But I know the American people are fair and that's what I'm counting on in the rest of this campaign," he said at a campaign luncheon in Philadelphia.

"I think the people will understand that a father who loves his children might want to protect them from things that would hurt them. That's all I've done," Robertson said.

Robertson added that his life was transformed 31 years ago when "I met Jesus Christ as my lord and savior."

During the "Nightline" appearance, interviewer Ted Koppel questioned Robertson about his record of service ~~during~~ the Korean War.

"I don't want to play with words, and I want to ask you straight out," Koppel said. "You know and I know what combat is, and I'm asking you, not were you within the range of artillery shells, were you in combat? Were you out in the trenches?"

"That is your definition," said Robertson, who said he was stationed at division headquarters for a combat unit 2.7 miles from the front lines.

Twin plants linked to drug fight

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements says he was only talking about tit-for-tat and not threatening economic retaliation if Mexico doesn't do more to combat drug traffickers.

Clements on Thursday linked the fight against drug traffic with the twin-plant program at a news conference following a tour of a Drug Enforcement Administration facility.

Under the twin-plant concept, a company makes components in the United States, ships them to a sister factory in Mexico for assembly, then ships them back to the United States for distribution.

Clements said twin plants on the Mexico-Texas border employ 103,000 Mexicans and about 20,000 Texans. He said Wednesday he plans to encourage companies to set up twin plants in Texas to raise employment on both sides of the border.

Clements was asked what he plans to say regarding drug traffic when he attends an upcoming conference between U.S. and Mexican border governors.

Your Birthday

Sunday, Oct. 11, 1987

There will be many important things on your agenda in the year ahead. However, the achievment of one goal will take precedence over all the others. It will be a very ambitious undertaking.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Early in the day your attitude will be a bit negative, and everything you attempt could prove difficult. By evening, you'll be back on track. Major changes are ahead for Libras in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-34238. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Problems could result if you make a commitment today that involves your mate without first getting his or her approval. Speak only for yourself.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Don't be afraid to change your mind today if, on review, you feel you've made a decision that is counter to your interests. Protect yourself.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) It's best not to attempt complicated do-it-yourself tasks today that you have never tried before. This is not the right time to experiment.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Someone you'll encounter today has access to a contact you need. Even though you're not overly fond of this person, try to acquire his or her support.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) A family problem can be resolved today within the confines of your home. If in-laws or relatives are brought into the picture, it could turn into a soap opera.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Try to associate today with people who share complementary interests. You're not apt to feel comfortable at gatherings where you have to defend your views and opinions.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Be both alert and cautious if you have to conduct business today with a person or firm with whom you are unfamiliar. Don't take any chances.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Today you may have to associate with someone who is negative and rather difficult to please. Don't let his or her mood darken your outlook.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) A responsibility may be neglected today because you'll feel inconvenienced. It will be just as hard later when you won't be able to dodge it.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Give an acquaintance you know only casually a chance to redeem his or herself in your eyes. Don't condemn this person on one unpleasant happening.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Don't demean yourself today by thinking others are better than you, but, by the same token, don't behave as though you are superior to them.

Your Birthday

Oct. 12, 1987

The course you're presently steering is the right one for you; rewards are in the offing in the year ahead. However, if you start making changes, it could set your schedule back.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Guard against tendencies to blurt things out today, or else you might tell something that is supposed to be kept confidential to the wrong party. Major changes are ahead for Libras in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Disappointment is possible today if you bank your hopes on unsound premises. Be optimistic regarding your endeavors, but don't be unrealistic.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Staying power will be required today in order to achieve an important objective. Don't kid yourself into believing it will be an easy win.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) It's best not to let your hunches take precedence over your logic today. What appears to be a flash of inspiration may, in reality, be only a hasty, bad judgment.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) A new project should be developed a step at a time today. You might fall on your face if you try to accomplish everything in one quantum leap.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) In important career matters, don't let your associates do your thinking for you today. What is imperative to you might be of little significance to them.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be patient today when working with people who don't grasp ideas as quickly as you do. So what if you have to repeat information for their benefit?

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Usually you're a rather methodical person, but today, you might toss caution to the wind and take chances that your better judgment warns you against.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Take time to study matters carefully today before making decisions. If you rush to judgment, you are likely to regret it later.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your work habits may not be up to your usual high standards today. Don't try to get by with just a lick and a promise. Be thorough and precise.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Situations that promise big gains from small investments could be very appealing today. This attitude may entice you to take a foolish financial risk.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A propitious development could slip past you today if you are a poor closer. Know when to stop selling so that you can get your prospect's signature on the order.

Fund raising enough to pay bills

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Catholic officials say they have raised enough money to pay the bills incurred from the Sept. 13-14 visit of Pope John Paul II.

Bishop Charles V. Grahmann said Thursday from his Victoria office that the $2.43 million collected so far can cover all of the bills for the papal visit.

"Most of the bills have been paid," Grahmann said. "There's probably still $400,000 to $500,000 in outstanding bills. We will have sufficient funds to pay for them."

Grahmann said he spoke Thursday to Father Lawrence J. Stuebben, the Texas papal visit coordinator, who told the bishop some medical-related and City Public Service bills had not been received.

Whistleblowers to fight NRC in court over nuclear project

WASHINGTON (AP) — An attorney who was subpoenaed to reveal the names of 56 anonymous whistleblowers charging misdeeds at the South Texas Nuclear Project says she would rather go to jail because she doesn't trust the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to conduct an impartial investigation.

The 650 individual allegations include safety and criminal misconduct ranging from poor workmanship to organized fraud on the part of the government and contractors.

The NRC has subpoenaed Billie P. Garde, an attorney for the Government Accountability Project, to turn over all names and allegations brought to her by whistleblowers regarding the unfinished nuclear plant near Bay City.

"The NRC individuals who look at these allegations must not be the same people who originally ignored the problems and went down and rubber-stamped South Texas in the first place," said Ms. Garde, pointing to NRC Executive Director Victor Stello and the officials overseeing the southwestern United States for NRC.

Ms. Garde faces a federal court hearing Oct. 22 in which the Justice Department will seek a decision compelling her to disclose the information.

"We asked at the beginning of our South Texas work for the appointment of a special task force from the NRC. That process has been filed regularly in this country since 1980," she said.

"In this case, Mr. Stello has changed the rules, and Mr. Stello, as the executive director of the agency, has decided to play tough," Ms. Garde said.

She said Stello rejected an offer by GAP to present a general assessment of the allegations and was told: "Stello says no deals. Turn everything over."

NRC officials, however, say they are simply trying to carry out an investigation.

"Until we see the allegations, which she has refused to give us, we can't determine how they should be handled," said NRC spokesman Bob Newlin. Stello "has said it's not clear to him whether anything should be done. But he's also said that if necessary he'll create a task force.

"We have not gotten the allegations and we can't deal with it until we know what they are," Newlin said.

Appearing with Ms. Garde at a news conference on Capitol Hill were Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., and Joan Claybrook of Public Citizen, a public interest group representing GAP and Ms. Garde in the NRC lawsuit over the supoena.

"Instead of having watchdogs, they want junkyard dogs," said Ms. Schroeder, who until pulling out recently was a potential candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination.

"I think the average American taxpayer wants the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to be as stringent about safety as they want their surgeon to be about cleanliness," said Ms. Schroeder, chairwoman of the House Civil Service Subcommittee. She promised to push for greater protection for whistleblowers in Congress.

Ms. Claybrook said her organization is prepared to take the case to the U.S. Supreme Court if necessary because of its precedent-setting potential.

Amoco recognizes Armstrong's services

At the third quarter safety meeting Amoco Pipeline recognized W. B. (Bill) Armstrong for 20 years of service.

Armstrong went to work for Amoco in Levelland and worked as a technician before being promoted to fireman technical maintenance. He was reassigned as measurement foreman in Snyder on July 1, 1985.

The employees and their wives also had a program on fire safety in the home, presented through the courtesy of the Snyder Fire Department.

Child finds dead parents

HURST, Texas (AP) — A four-year-old girl ran to a nearby apartment to tell neighbors that her parents were dead after finding their bodies on the floor of their apartment, authorities say.

Cynthia Rene Saleri, 21, and Ishtiy Saleri, 22, were found Thursday in their apartment at the Rivertree Apartments, according to Hurst Police spokesman Dan Oringderff.

Police were called after the woman's daughter ran to the home of Evelyn Watson, who lives nearby and had worked as a babysitter for the couple.

"She came running over here crying and scared and said her mother and daddy were dead," the babysitter said.

Oringderff said there was no sign of forced entry into the apartment and no weapon was found.

Key witness gets sentenced

DALLAS (AP) — A judge sentenced a key prosecution witness to 13 years in prison for his involvement in a massive fraud scheme that led to the collapse of several thrifts and saw some land values quintuple in a matter of hours.

U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders on Thursday also ordered Clifford Sinclair, who pleaded guilty in March 1986 to four counts of conspiracy in the federal probe of Texas savings and loans, to pay $600,000 in restitution and fined him $40,000.

Sinclair was ordered to pay the fine within 30 days and to make restitution within six months. It was the maximum sentence Sinclair could have received under a plea agreement to testify for the prosecution in the Interstate 30 condominium probe.

"Scores have gone to prison for it, and for him not to go would deprecate the seriousness of the offense and would send the wrong message," said Sanders, who ordered Sinclair to report Oct. 29 to a federal prison not yet disclosed.

The sentencing came a day after a federal grand jury indicted seven men on charges of conspiracy and fraud in the land-fraud investigation.

Indicted on charges of conspiracy, racketeering and fraud were Garland developers D.L. "Danny" Faulkner and James L. Toler; Spencer H. Blain Jr. of Dallas, who was head of the now defunct Empire Savings and Loan of Mesquite; Paul Arlin Jensen, a former mortgage banker now living in Utah; and Kenneth Earl Cansler of Rockwall, Texas, who was described in the indictment as a sales manager in the transactions involving condos along I-30 in Dallas County.

Also indicted Wednesday on conspiracy and fraud charges were real estate appraisers Arthur George Formann, 58, of Hondo, Texas, and Paul Douglas Tannehill, 39, of Canton, Texas.

Attorneys representing the defendants said they will plead innocent.

The indictments capped a four-year investigation into an alleged $100 million scheme to defraud five savings associations in Texas and Arkansas through what authorities say was a network of fraudulent land and construction loans.

Prosecutors say they uncovered a series "land flips" that put millions of dollars in the pockets of defendants.

A $100 million development of lakeside condominiums, many of them now demolished, is described by a real estate expert as the most notorious example of the "land flip" schemes that artificially inflated property values.

Deregulation of the savings and loan coupled with a real estate boom fueled the schemes, in which the same pieces of property were bought and sold many times.

"There was a demand and a need for construction. And this was combined with the deregulation of the S&Ls, allowing them to participate more fully in real estate loans," said George Roddy, president and chairman of Dresco Inc.

The use of land flips first appeared nearly 20 years ago in a development boom, though at that time ready cash from lending institutions was not as available as in the early 1980s, Roddy said.

"Everyone gets caught up in this inflationary spiral — inflation of land — and when you combine availability of money with appraisals inflated maliciously or knowingly, or through market conditions, you have this problem," he said.

Roddy and the president of another real estate research group said the prosecutions will prompt real estate appraisers and lenders to be more cautious. But Roddy said greed will eventually prevail, and a cycle of land inflation will begin again.

"Flips will come in and come out of vogue. With time, people will forget about this investigation, and not be as conscious of the repercussions," said Roddy, "and it will happen again, as long as there are humans in this world and there is a profit to be made."

Exuberant lifestyle marked Faulkner

DALLAS (AP) — D.L. "Danny" Faulkner, a sharecropper's son who rose to dizzying heights as a developer, was known for his exuberant lifestyle, studded with expensive jewelry, personal helicopters, Rolls-Royce limousines and billboards along an interstate welcoming motorists to Garland.

But, following a four-year federal investigation, a tearful Faulkner faced the bitter reality that those days were over. He and six others were named Wednesday in an 85-page, 88-count indictment alleging a conspiracy to pocket profits from an estimated $500 million in loans, primarily for a string of condominium developments in the East Dallas suburb near Lake Ray Hubbard.

Like Faulkner's high-rolling ways, those developments have crumbled. Many of the condos, located along Interstate 30, were reduced to ashes earlier this year. Demolition experts burned about 10 percent of the more than 2,000 dwellings.

The 54-year-old Garland developer is estimated by a federal grand jury to have netted at least $40 million in the scheme. He faces up to 346 years in prison and $297,000 in fines if convicted.

Emerged from a hearing before U.S. Magistrate John Tolle with tear-filled eyes, Faulkner said Wednesday in a broken voice that he was "embarrassed for my friends and my family."

Faulkner was scheduled for an Oct. 9 arraignment and released on a personal recognizance bond. His attorney said his client would plead not guilty.

But during his glory days, Faulkner basked in success. He owned the Bell JetRanger helicopter included in television's "Dallas" series and used it to inspect some of the condos he had built at Faulkner Point. He had planned to eventually build 4,000 condos.

On the ground, he traveled in alligator shoes, a Rolls-Royce or a chauffeured limousine used mostly for friends and clients. He had a Faulkner Point exit ramp off I-30. His Rolex watch was a sunburst of diamonds.

Faulkner had a box at Texas Stadium. His swimming pool was Olympian.

But he was a sixth-grade dropout who mentioned his lack of reading ability only in hopes that his business success might inspire children from troubled homes, slow learners and school dropouts.

"The school people like for me (to) talk to the most rebellious ones and the slow learners and the smart alecks," he said then.

"I tell them they have to try to be good human beings if they're going to get ahead. And I tell every one of them who has a father to be grateful for his care and every one who has a mother to be grateful and go home and kiss her and tell her how much she's loved."

A member of the Jupiter Road Baptist Church, Faulkner did not smoke or drink. And he was a generous giver.

There were many examples of his generosity. One of the 500 people on his payroll smiled and said Faulkner bought him $7,500 worth of dental work. Another employee recalled that his boss had about a dozen pairs of Italian shoes made of baby crocodile. He gave them all away.

"God has blessed me and I like helping people," he said then. "Money isn't important. People are important."
