Dallas and Houston Accidents Claim Lives of Young People

McKINNEY, Texas, June 30. (AP)—Three young men were killed near here today when their automobile left the highway while rounding a curve.

They were: Lilborn Nicholson, McKinney; Boyd Apple and James Thomas, Dallas.

The Dallas boys were spending the week end here with relatives and invited Nicholson to go riding with them. Passing motorists who brought the three to the hospital here said the car apparently became unmanageable as it started around the curve.

Apple was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Boss Apple of Dallas. The family lived here for many years, and the youth's grandmother, Mrs. F. M. Griffin still lives here. His body was removed to her home awaiting burial here. His survivors include his parents and three brothers, Marion Apple of the New York City Associated Press, and Vaughn and J. F. Apple of Dallas.

Thomas is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Thomas, Dallas, and one brother, George Thomas. He will be buried in Dallas.

Marjorie Finds Quiet Rest In Old Springfield After Short Air Trip

By MARJORIE MATHIS
Record News Staff Reporter

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., June 30.—It was the happiest of conspiracies between chance and flying schedules that brought me to Springfield to loiter through a Sunday afternoon in June. I landed in the heart of its Sabbatical tranquility just as the city was completing the celebration of its centennial anniversary, launching itself gently into another hundred years. The fiesta, I am told, was marked by the organization of the "Fifty Year club," not for comfort of the more than middle aged, but for the people who have lived here half a century. Imagine the committee's embarrassment when more than half the town enrolled with several hundred forty-niners on the waiting list.

But the town will not be mocked. Grace and beauty and the mellowed dignity of old traditions forbid. It lies in the heart of the Ozarks, the gateway to the widespread "playground of the Southwest" which surround it. Its charm is of another age, but it lies secure in its own deep roots, welcoming the new times without altering its own quiet pace.

This one of my five days took on a mood of its own from the early morning, when a car representing the Southwestern Air Fast Express, called for me a little after 7 o'clock in St. Louis. Forewarned by the qualms of last Friday's voyaging, I had been discreet at breakfast only to find that someone had taken a shovelful of ether and filled up all the holes in the air over all the 190 miles.

During the moments in the air when I was not engaged in marvelling at the spectacle of white clouds glistening in the sun beneath us, I took occasion to sigh for the waffles I had carefully not eaten. I had only one fellow passenger, an unsatisfactory individual who looked as though he thought woman's place was on the earth. I wished him a rough voyage just to be able to show my own airworthiness, but the ship and the air were in perfect accord. Not so much as a dip or a sway for more than two hours, although we had to climb high above the swiftly moving light clouds and had to fight a heavy wind.

I hoped for a while that we were going to have some "weather." With that and a taste of night fly-

Aged Millionaire Sued for Balm Finally Tells Ideas on Marriage

Hardinge Advises Against 'May and December' Matches but Calls Men Mere Children

CHICAGO, June 30. (US)—Assuming the role of a battler of men's martial rights today Franklin S. Hardinge, millionaire oil burner manufacturer broke his silence of five days with the first statement of his attitude toward May and December romances, and the need of discretion of men who engage in them.

For the last five days he has kept silent, on the advice of his counsel in the $250,000 breach of promise suit which is being contested here, with pretty Ann Livingston, 22-year-old divorcee of Tulsa, Okla., acting as plaintiff.

"Men in general are but great children," the 62-year-old manufacturer philosophized, using the familiar quotation of Napoleon. "Trouble teaches men how much there is in manhood. At least, that's what Henry Ward Beecher said."

Discussing the pre-nuptial contract which Hardinge offered Ann, but which somehow failed to fit in with love's plans the elderly business man said:

"No man who is 20 or 30 years older than his intended wife should ever marry without just such an agreement—when money is involved. Just why should a young woman step into the place in a home left by a wife of many years and a mother of grown children and expect for a brief period of marriage sole rights of a widow?

"A man of my age hasn't a great many more years to live, and with a wife so much younger than he, it is not even certain that she would live with him through four months. Young love is something which is a good gamble, but December and May romances must be guided with good common business sense. As in a business deal, love should not be consummated by marriage until level headed judgment has been executed."

STORM'S TOLL MAY INCREASE

Crews of Two Vessels Believed Lost in Hurricane

VICTORIA, Texas, June 30. (UP)—With cotton and corn crops leveled to the ground, three persons dead, and an estimated $1,000,000 property and crop damage, residents of coastal counties tonight were trying to check up on a rumored additional loss of life from a severe tropical storm which struck this section early Saturday morning.

Chief anxiety was felt for the crews of an oil barge and a dredging tug which, anchored in the open gulf, were forced to ride out the storm when abandoned by the towing tug on an 80-mile-an-hour wind struck the region. Four men were believed on the craft.

Three negro women were killed when a tenant house, blown from its moorings and lashed by the three-inch rain, caved in on them. A negro man and baby were injured but were expected to live.

Workers were busy tonight repairing broken communication lines, blown down by the winds which in some places reached almost cyclonic proportions. Five or six counties were swept by the gale, trees were uprooted and hundreds of small buildings unroofed or blown down.

The hurricane swept Victoria and Calhoun counties and portions of Refugio, Goliad, Dewitt, Jackson and other counties. Several persons were reported injured.

For the first time in several years waves swept over the sea wall at Galveston, with camps and refreshment stands along both the east and west beaches under waters of the unusually high tide.

National Origins Plan Goes Into Effect Today

WASHINGTON, June 30. (US)—The national origins plan of allotting immigration quotas to European countries becomes effective tomorrow, with the beginning of the new fiscal year of the United States government.

National origins will reduce the total number of quota immigrants from approximately 165,000 to 150,000 annually. It will have its most marked effect in almost doubling the inflow from Great Britain and northern Ireland and cutting in half that from Germany and more than one-third that from the Irish Free State.

Tinkham Asks Federal Prosecution Of Methodist Board of Temperance

WASHINGTON, June 30. (US)—In a formal letter to Attorney General Mitchel, Representative Tinkham, Republican of Massachusetts today demanded the immediate prosecution of the Methodist board of temperance, prohibition and public morals by the department of corrupt practices act of 1925 in corrupt practices act of 1925 in connection with the activities of the church board in the last presidential election, is charged by Tinkham.

The letter, after reiterating the charges made by the Massachusetts legislator, called the attention of the attorney general to the recent utterances of President Hoover to the effect that "our whole system of self government will crumble either if officials elect what laws they will enforce or citizens elect what laws they will support."

The letter added:

"[illegible] corrupt practices act a violation of which I have brought to your attention, rests entirely upon you as the public official charged with the enforcement of this law."

In his letter, Tinkham pointed out that the corrupt practices act provides that every person or organization which spends more than $50 for the purpose of influencing two or more states in any federal election shall file with the government a detailed statement of such expenditures, and that the penalty for failure to do this is from $1,000 to $10,000 fine and from one to two years imprisonment.

The letter stated that Tinkham has evidence, which he will turn over to agents of the department of justice, that more than $50 were expended by the Methodist board during the last election, and that these activities were spread throughout virtually the entire country.

FLIERS STILL UP FOR RECORD

Los Angeles Plane Gets First Fuel Supply

LOS ANGELES, June 30. (UP)—Two Los Angeles flyers, Leo Nemis and Maurice Morrison, were in the air tonight in an effort to lower the world's refueling airplane endurance record of 172 hours 32 minutes and 18 seconds.

At 6:15 p. m. the small Cessna monoplane used by the pair received the first refueling since it left the ground at 7:00 a. m. (Pacific Coast time).

The contact was perfect and the plane left Metropolitan airport on its course which includes the port and the cities of Long Beach and Saugus.

The Cessna is said to be the smallest plane ever used in the endurance attempt. It has a 26-foot wing spread and carries but 35 gallons of gasoline—enough for about 12 hours.

The ships had a good supply of fuel and was running perfectly.

SPAIN PREPARES TO GREET FLIERS

MADRID, June 30. (US)—As all Spain is preparing itself to welcome back to life its four "lost" sky heroes, Maj. Ramon Franco and his Numancia crew of three are now recuperating their lost physical strength aboard the British aircraft carrier and rescue ship Eagle, which is due in Gibraltar Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock (4 o'clock New York time).

Great demonstrations were the order of the day here, and huge crowds thronged to the French, English, Italian and Portuguese embassies where the mayor of Madrid and the president of the Aero club both made speeches of gratitude to the representatives of the nations who had taken part in the search for the intrepid aviators who had drifted in their plane on the open Atlantic for seven days. The wives of the ambassadors were presented with bouquets as tokens of appreciation from the wild Spanish throngs.

Meanwhile, preparations are being made within the British confines of Gibraltar to welcome the four fliers when they land Tuesday morning with their wave-battered and storm-tossed seaplane aboard the Eagle. With Major Franco are Maj. Eduardo Gallarza, pilot; Capt. Julio Ruiz de Alda, navigator, and Sergeant-Mechanic Pedro Madariaga.

GASOLINE TAX BILL MAY LOSE ON FINAL DAY

Last Minute Mix-Up Only Hope of Foes of Heavy Fuel Levy

STORMY SESSION

Senate in Constant Turmoil As It Passes Dual Measure

AUSTIN, June 30. (AP)—Opponents of the four-cent gasoline tax and 50 per cent reduction in automobile registration fees bill, which passed the senate early today after a continuous 11-hour session, still were hopeful it would get lost in the last minute shuffle incident to sine die adjournment Tuesday.

The bill will go to the house tomorrow as an amendment to the house measure levying a four-cent gasoline tax. If the house refuses to concur, it will be sent to free conference. The house had favored a 3½ per cent reduction in registration fees.

Ruling Favors Bill

Opponents of the dual bill are contending that it is unconstitutional, but proponents have an opinion from the attorney general's department holding it valid.

Last night's session was one of the wildest in the history of the senate, veteran attaches claimed. Opponents filibustering at every opportunity, the senate remained in continuous session from 9 p. m. Saturday until 1 a. m. Sunday.

To keep it going it finally was necessary to enlist the aid of the sheriff's department. Several members even threatened to get the Texas rangers out of bed in an effort to bring in truant senators who had absented themselves to break a quorum and forestall final passage of the bill.

Sheriff Gets Senators

Senator Walter Woodul of Houston was taken from his berth on a sleeping car by Sheriff Osley White and brought back to the senate. Had the sheriff been a little tardy, the Harris county sheriff today would have performed the duty Sheriff White executed. For a warrant had been issued and transmitted to the Harris county officer. The train was moving out of the yards when White had it stopped.

After hours of filibustering, the bill, written by Senator W. A. Williamson of San Antonio, was passed to third reading late yesterday. Advocates failed to muster sufficient voters to suspend the rules and put it on final passage.

Adjournment was taken and a new legislative day begun. The regular order of business provides for a "morning call," during which period resolutions and bills are sent up. The filibusterers took advantage of the "morning call" to delay action. They sent up fictitious bills and many resolutions.

While Sen. A. J. Wirtz of Seguin, leader of the opposition, occupied the floor, a sufficient number of senators left the hall to break a quorum. A roll call showed the quorum two short. The senate was placed under call and the sergeant-at-arms instructed to bring in the absentees.

Wirtz Hunts Door

The quorum mustered again and business renewed, Wirtz was seen easing toward the door. The quorum had been broken again.

Becoming desperate, the resolute band voted to issue warrants for arrest of the absentees and placed them in the hands of the sheriff and officers of the home counties of the absentees.

It was voted to keep the senate in session all night and through Sunday if necessary to obtain the attendance of the absentees and final passage of the bill.

While Wirtz never was brought back, enough came in later to restore the quorum.

The bill finally was passed 21 to 3, carrying the necessary two-thirds affirmative votes to put it into immediate effect provided the house concurs with 100 affirmative votes.

Under rules of the senate a call can be ordered only to retain a quorum and members cannot be detained longer than a quorum is announced. In order to keep the recalcitrants from slipping through the senate's fingers after having been brought in, the rules were amended to permit the detention of the members after the quorum had been obtained. Rules of the house always have provided that the house may force the attendance of its members after obtaining a quorum.

Iowa Park Boy Dies Here of Burns Received While Playing With Paint

Dellwyn Finch Succumbs to Injuries Received Friday When Flames Ignited Clothing at Home

Dellwyn Finch, 5-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Finch of Iowa Park, died in a Wichita Falls hospital Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock as a result of burns received Friday while he was playing with oil paints in the garage of a house across the street from his home.

The boy was painting on the walls of the garage and accidently spilled some of the oil from the paints on the floor. He struck a match to see if the oil would burn and the resulting flames ignited some of the paint which was on his clothing and hands. He ran out of the garage toward his home, the flames being fanned by the wind. His sister, Elma, who was in the house, ran out and threw the boy to the ground in an attempt to extinguish the blaze. A man passing nearby succeeded in putting out the fire in the child's clothing.

The injured boy was given first aid treatment in Iowa Park and was brought to Wichita Falls Saturday. His sister, Elma, was at the bedside until his death, Mrs. Finch being ill at her home. Mr. Finch, his father, has been in Long Beach, Calif., for the last few months and plans had been made for the family to join him there. He is expected in Iowa Park Wednesday, word of his son's death having been sent immediately.

The body was taken in charge by the Tanner company in Iowa Park. Funeral services will be held upon the arrival of Mr. Finch. The boy is survived by his parents and one sister.

Boy Steals Woman's Purse After Asking Car Ride

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 30. (UP)—What Mrs. Paul Chinn had looked upon as an act of kindness and generosity today had resulted in the undermining of her faith in human nature. An appealing-looking 10-year-old boy signaled Mrs. Chinn for a motor ride into Kansas City from a suburb. She is mother of five children and immediately picked up the youngster who was trudding the hot pavements. He asked to be let out after riding into the city. Mrs. Chinn discovered her purse and $55 had departed with the boy.

U. S. DEBTS HIT LOWEST MARK

Fiscal Year Ends With $185,000,000 Surplus

WASHINGTON, June 30. (AP)—The government finished its 1929 fiscal year tonight with a surplus of $185,000,000 and the public debt cut to $16,931,000,000, the lowest point since the world war.

This was attributable, Secretary Mellon said in a statement, to widespread prosperity.

Total receipts for the year aggregated $4,033,000,000, while expenditures amounted to $3,848,000,000. The former were approximately $9,000,000 less than collected last year while the expenditures showed an increase of $204,000,000 over the previous 12 months.

A $220,000,000 gain in individual income tax receipts, due, the treasury head said, to general prosperity and more specifically to the constant rising securities market, saved the government from a deficit, swelling the total income tax collections to $2,130,000,000.

Fire in Junior College Laboratory Does Heavy Damage in Supply Room

A fire in the chemical laboratory in the Junior college building Sunday afternoon caused damage to furnishings and chemical equipment estimated at $1,500 by officials of the fire department.

No one was in the small chemical store room, adjoining the laboratory, at the time of the fire, it was said, the chemicals probably having become ignited due to atmospheric conditions or by certain chemicals falling from the shelves of the room. When firemen arrived, the whole room was filled with dense, acrid smoke. No fire flames were apparent, it was said, but the floor of the supply room was covered with glowing embers and chemicals which caused great damage to the other materials on the shelves and charred the walls and furniture.

It was a case of chemical against chemical, firemen said, while the glowing material was being put out by the extinguishers from the chemical truck. The heat of the fire probably made the greater part of the chemicals stored in the room unfit for further experiments and replacement of the entire stock may be necessary.

WIDELY KNOWN SCHOOL LEADER SLAIN IN AUTO

Prof. Alexander Hamilton Johnson Found Lifeless At Atlanta

PHONE CALL CHECKED

Officers Fail to Find Any Trace of Assailants; Pockets Empty

ATLANTA, Ga., June 30. (AP)—Professor Alexander Hamilton Johnson of Hartwell, Ga., widely known Georgia educator and a delegate to the convention of the National Education association, was found dead in his automobile today, his head and face battered and bruised. Police said he apparently had been beaten to death.

The office of the Fulton solicitor said no trace of his assailants had been found.

The educator, 41, was principal of two schools at Hartwell, and served as federal vocational director for the Hartwell area. He was married and was father of two small children.

Police learned that Mr. Johnson last night telephoned his sister, Mrs. J. R. Wakefield, announcing his arrival in Atlanta. He planned to spend the night at the Wakefield home, telling his sister he would arrive soon after several business conferences.

Nothing further was heard of the educator until this morning, when he was found slumped over the wheel of his car, parked at a curb on an outlying residential street.

His head had been beaten, his chin was crushed and his ear mangled. Police said his pockets had been turned inside out and on the floor of the automobile were found two rifled bill folds. Police were unable to learn the amount of money he had when he came here.

A bottle containing chloroform and a handkerchief saturated with the anaesthetic was found beside the body.

FLOYD COUNTY'S WHEAT CROP TO CURE MONEY WORRIES

JUST THE Baer Facts

By Bugs Baer

RECEPTION GOOD—ENTERTAINMENT BAD

NEW YORK, June 30.—Less than some time ago we turned on the two-family radio and were astonished by hearing the roar of Niagara.

But were disappointed when the station announcer did not go over the falls in a barrel.

Seems they are improving radio by giving us wet static.

Not a bad idea. The next time they include the roar of Niagara falls as entertainment why not make a soprano go over them in a potato barrel with three hoops missing?

The roar of Niagara is some magnificent open air plumbing. And proves that radio is still in its infancy.

If they are going in for disorganized orchestrations on the air why not give us the amalgamated mumble of both branches of congress?

Tune in on the Atlantic ocean and get a storm at sea during the adult's asthma hour.

One of the most important subdivisions of nature is Old Faithful, which is now within reach of DX hounds with those 16-jigger sets.

Old Faithful erupts a mob of water 100 feet high and very moist in diameter. It gallops at a temperature of about 200 degrees hot. Which is a trifle too warm for a borrowed umbrella.

But any time you can snare Old Faithful on your radio it is willing to give you an educational scalding.

Then switch back to Niagara and get a cold shower.

It is a trifle embarrassing when you get all seven wonders of the world in your lap at once.

It is wonderful to hear the barking of the field mice in Manitoba or the rattle of the war drums as Canadian tourists settle down for a quiet evening in the emergency hospitals.

In a short time we will be in touch with the infinite and the cosmos. We will be able to hear anything that goes on in any place in the world.

Which is all very nutritious and appetizing to the radio gossips. But the next time there is another Democratic convention in Madison Square garden we are going to smack that radio box in the face with an axe.

Now, the roar of Niagara aint John McCormack. We must admit that it is deafening and inspiring. But, like blisters on the feet, it is something that you never get used to.

We heard it distinctly. The critics were a trifle harsh. The concensus of opinion seemed to be that Niagara was not in good voice and that some understudy must have been playing the part.

It's going to have a bad effect on stingy bridegrooms. Instead of the bride getting that honeymoon trip to Buffalo she will have to listen to Niagara on the radio.

If it is all the same to the big broadcasting syndicates we would have appreciated it during that last torrid wave if they had tapped the frozen North and permitted us to hear what an iceberg listens like.

Finals Tonight in Theater Yo-Yo Tourney

Preliminaries in the city yo-yo tournament conducted at the Olympic theater were completed Sunday night when D. W. McReynolds and Jerry Hare were selected as winners from a field of about 10 entries.

The contest has been productive of a considerable variety of the whirling toys, many of them home made. Mr. McReynolds won first place Sunday night with a disk equipped with a string about 20 feet long. The ambitious yo-yo chose various routes for its flights above the stage, detouring up or down the performer's back like a pet squirrel, but was always under control.

Finals are to be held Monday night at 9:30 o'clock, with the following contestants: Laforest Rollins, J. R. Roberson, O'Neill Taylor, George Darnell, Laoida Ragsdale, Gertrude Burton, Pauline and Bernadine Stallings, J. H. Donaldson, Bill Savage, Mr. McReynolds and Jerry Hare.

Prizes of $10 in gold to first place, $5 in gold to the second, $2.50 to the third, and theater tickets to the remaining finalists will be given.

LOCKNEY, Texas, June 30.—The value of Floyd county's large wheat crop cannot be estimated with the harvest only one-half completed, but according to local bankers, the proceeds from the 1929 crop will cure the financial ills of many farmers.

The greater number of Floyd county wheat raisers report statisfactory yields and even though the grain has been cheaper than for the past three years, the growers will realize a profit, due to a reduction in the average Floyd county farm haul of 15 to 6 miles.

Besides the shortening of farm hauls, the doubling of the elevator capacity of the county during the past year has saved the farmers a large amount of time and money. A large number of combines are now working, enabling the farmer to harvest his crop with greater dispatch.

One of the greatest revenues yielded has been the available green pasture during the winter and early spring months. Pasturage for dairy cattle has paid a large portion of the planting expense, according to produce men.

Farmers are now working night and day plowing the land where the crop has been harvested so as to be in readiness for planting in September.

Kay Bible Class Speaker Expresses Confidence for World-Wide Peace

Daniel Praises Character of Captain J. H. Scott in Address to Men's Organization Sunday Morning

Confidence in the capacity of mankind ultimately to fulfill the biblical prophecies of a time when "nations shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks" was expressed by Roy J. Daniel in his address before the Kay Bible class at the First Methodist church Sunday morning.

Mr. Daniel declared his belief that the world is making constant progress toward the extermination of war, and that the visions of the ancient prophets will be realized through the theory that "what the mind conceived the will can accomplish."

Text of Address

The text of his address follows:

"Last Friday morning saw the passing away of one of the most loved men Wichita Falls ever knew —Traffic Captain J. H. Scott. He was a veteran Texas peace officer and had served us here in Wichita Falls during the past 10 years. For the last five years he was traffic captain, and prior to that time served as desk sergeant and night captain. All of us will ever remember his cheerful greetings on the streets, and his pleasant way of performing his duties. I know a little boy about seven years of age who worshipped Captain Scott because Captain Scott would wave at him a half block away. We shall miss our friend. To know Captain Scott was to love him. No more fitting epitaph could be engraved for him than to say: 'Captain Scott was a real officer and was always pleasant and kind in the discharge of his duties.'

Daniel

"Since today's lesson is a review I feel like considering myself a yearling with Texas as my pasture and Wichita county as my shipping pen. Now that sentence came to me yesterday afternoon as I sped by those loading pens you still see in Clay county as you drive to and from Fort Worth. Are you ever bothered with memories? Do you ever have memories that bless and burn? Are you ever made happy by memories? You remember that Paul said that the memory of his mistakes stung into his body like the points of pricks. Does the memory of your mistakes pierce you like a thousand ice picks? Out near Fort Worth I passed a stretch of telegraph poles whose holes I helped dig just exactly 10 years ago—my first job after my return from the war. Memories came to me. I recalled how I used to pause on the job and watch the automobiles go sailing by and waving my gloved hand at them, wondering if I'd ever be riding by some day in a car. The names of the members of the old life gang came to me—pictures of the bunk car and chuck car and everything. Now this is the truth. I recalled how I tried to dig the best post holes in the whole gang and more of them than anybody on the gang. The boss thought I did anyway, and promoted me to timekeeper just about the time I got to where I could climb a pole without burning it. Well, you probably wonder why this example of memory work. I tell it to illustrate a true saying: 'What the mind conceives the will can accomplish.' There came a time when the mind of a timekeeper conceived he could do better and the result is that he put his will to work and he is present here with us this morning.

Prophets Had Vision

"In our studies about the prophets of early Israel we have found that they were men of vision. It seems that many of their great prophecies have come true and others are coming to pass. These prophets were brave and fearless men and willing to die for their beliefs. Are you willing to die for your honest convictions? If you are not then you are no prophet, nor the son of a prophet. Micah made the prophecy that the Lord will teach us his ways and that we will walk in his paths. Yes, if we walk in his paths then He will teach us his ways. Micah made the further prophecy that the time would come when nations shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks, and that nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more. We have not reached that happy time yet, but the world is much nearer that condition than it was centuries ago. It is impossible now for two nations or any number of nations to wage a Hundred Years' war or even a Thirty Years' war even over religion, let alone big business. I am not a pacifist. I never did believe we are a nation that could have a million men spring to arms over night. They might spring to arms all right but after that brave act they would become the finest bunch of cannon fodder you can imagine without years of stiff training. It takes years of good training to make a real soldier or sailor. But what we should have is such a perfect world situation that no nation will need any army or navy or armed force or even an armed cop. Will we ever come to that? Micah said we would, and he was a prophet of God. Are we coming to that condition now? I am no prophet but I do know that the situation is more ideal than it was a hundred years ago. Some day the lion and the lamb will lie down together.

"Micah said the time would come when every man shall sit under his vine and under his fig tree. Here is what the prophet meant by that: when a man owns his own place and camps there, he has not the fear that someone will come along and say, "Move on"—"get out"—"allez-vous"—"rouse mit you." Is that prophecy coming true? Listen, no one can put you out of your spiritual home after you have found God and God has found you. Take all your worldly goods and go—let me live in the spiritual house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.

"Let the Lord be your strength and fortress—then in the day of pain and sorrow that will come He will be your refuge. May He pour out His spirit upon us—unworthy as we know ourselves to be."

MARJORIE IN SPRINGFIELD

Girl Takes Rest in Ozark Metropolis

ing I'm going to apply for admission as an initiate. But it was only that nature wanted me to see what she could do with a few cream puffs in a reversed position. If I wasn't afraid of running out of adjectives I'd try to suggest the magic of the result. But my mind kept searching for descriptive words that weren't in stock, and my fingers twitched to reach for a touch of those miracles of grace and fragility that were scurrying past us on their way to St. Louis. Though why they should go there where the town was still asleep and rather grubby after its Saturday night festivities, I couldn't see. It was like being inside a Maxfield Parrish picture or riding the famous silver lining we've all been inclined to doubt. Flying, I rediscovered, has its own moods which shift with the whimsicalities of the sky, and I wondered just what wise cracks C. E. McCutcheon would make about this transformation. Call the clouds down comforts, no doubt, poor earth bound soul.

The S. A. F. E. company had its car ready for me at the landing field (the unpleasant young man having had the grace to fly on to Tulsa) and I drove beneath towering oaks that enterlaced beneath quiet streets of old, old homes, to the Colonial hotel. There is a new hotel in town, all furnished up with modern fixings, but I'm glad I found this one. Its porter, very black, wears a sick seersucker suit and possesses a fortune which will be used for his funeral. He has been here 30 years and stays because he knows the hotel couldn't be run without him. The room is more than life size, with enormous windows which bring in a gale from the Ozarks. A big brass bed is covered with a blue embroidered spread and the light shades flare at the bottom like ballet skirts. The wash bowl and pitcher which were here only yesterday have been banished in favor of a lavatory, but the phone still hangs on the wall, and a brass hat rack takes the place of a closet.

Pamphlets and the atlas will tell you many things about Springfield, all very interesting, but not really important, as any one here will tell you. There are statistics to be had about the poultry and dairy business, about strawberry shipment and vineyards, and most particularly, about the Frisco shops. The city sits at the top of the Ozarks, on the highest spot in the Mississippi valley between the Appalachians and the Rockies, and to it come the sportmen and pleasure seekers who visit the natural playground all around.

But the important things have to do with the fact that the drug stores are closed from 1 until 5 on Sunday afternoons, that the lucky individuals on the morning newspaper, "The News," don't go to work until six on the Sabbath; that men and boys sit with an air of contented performance in the lobbies and all along the abutments in front of the hotel. There are half dozen natural parks, although only 65,000 people are listed in the census. Bare-headed boys and girls stroll through the streets downtown and meander through the public square which turns out, characteristically, to be a circle.

Just on the outskirts of town is the national cemetery where a gateway had just been made between the stone wall which formerly separated the Union from the Confederate graves. Any mention of "the war" here means the Civil war unless some one insists on remembering that there was an insignificant disagreement among the nations a few years ago. Just off one of the main residence streets lies "Maple park" where the giant trees stand guard over another thousand quiet graves, where the founders of the town and the generations who have carried on their traditions are resting. These are "hard" maples, they tell me, which turn molten gold in the autumn.

I stopped for a swim at Fassnight park, where the buildings are of natural stone and where dozens of families were picnicking beneath the trees. F. Scott Fitzgerald wrote of places like this in some of his earlier stories. Joseph Hergesheimer would be at home here.

Springfield today is the union of North Springfield, where the shopworkers live and the older district where generations descended from the men who settled with Campbell and Fullbright a 100 years ago still cling to their birthrights. A union, yes, but not so close a union but that when the new public buildings were erected they had to be meticulously spaced midway between the old and the new so that neither half might claim them for their own.

But still, it's a city for spending a vacation Sunday and savoring its full joys. A neighborly, kindly city, for all its self sufficiency. And from it run excursions through the foothills, where mysterious caves hide marvelous formations, where trout are hungry in clear streams, and summer resorts, still simple in their natural beauty, abound.

At 10:40 in the morning, I'll be taking off again, this time for Tulsa, where I land 55 minutes later, to visit the headquarters of the S. A. F. E. and try to find somebody who will let me fly over the city at night. This third day, a breathing space between the activities of the five-day schedule, has not been expensive. The hotel bill will add $3.50 to my account, the meals another two and a half. My flying fare would have been $19, but for the grace of J. W. Cantwell, chief pilot. A total of $25. That brings the whole amount to $98.50, still under the one hundred mark and the costliest days all over.

LAKESIDE PARK PLANS READY

Record Crowds Expected Here July 3-4

Lakeside Park will stage a two-day celebration on July 3 and 4 that is expected to draw thousands of out-of-town visitors to Wichita Falls, according to Walter W. Peltier, park manager, who has booked a super-attraction in "Battle of the Clouds" to open the double program Wednesday night, July 3.

The huge fireworks spectacle, which arrived at park grounds Monday from the Pan-American Producing company in Iowa, and will be shot Wednesday night at 10 o'clock is a reproduction of a Coney Island show, and will depict with the shooting of 100 other shells, the bombing of airplanes in true battle style. Special docks have been built in Lake Wichita, from which the set will be fired, and the wooden frames will crumble into the waters as the illuminated airplanes plunge into the lake as a thrilling climax. A 10-cent gate fee will be charged on the night of July 3, according to the park manager, but the park will be thrown open without charge throughout the day and night of July 4.

The July 4 proper program will begin at 5 o'clock Thursday morning at the Lakeside pavilion with a sunrise dance sponsored by the R. J. R. club of Wichita Falls, for which Charlie de Sautelle's Royal Terrace orchestra, the present dance attraction at the park, will play. The early morning dance will continue until 8 o'clock and the Royal Terrace orchestra will play for dancing throughout the day and night of July 4. The R. J. R. club is mailing 400 invitations to the younger social set of the city, and the sunrise dance is expected to draw many Wichitans and their out-of-town friends to the Lakeside pavilion.

The remainder of the day will be devoted to the staging of an old-time Fourth of July celebration at the park. Desirable sites will be available on the lake front for family picnics, and it is planned to have such features during the afternoon as fat man's races, greased pole climbing, and other appropriate events.

Row boats and motor boats will be available for fishing, the park manager states, and all recreational features of the park will be in first-class running order for the entertainment of the Fourth of July crowds.

Kansas City Motor Death Toll Up to 26

KANSAS CITY, June 30. (UP)—The death of Jerry Pate, 19, here late last night when his motorcycle crashed into an automobile brought the total Kansas City motor deaths for the year to 26. Thirty-three persons were killed in a similar period in 1928. The reduction in fatalities is accredited to a vigorous safety campaign inaugurated last January.

Brookhart and McKellar Move to North Texas for Patronage Quiz

SAN ANTONIO, June 30. (US)—Senators Smith W. Brookhart, Republican of Iowa, and Kenneth McKellar, Democrat, of Tennessee, left for Dallas today where they will open a hearing into Republican patronage in North Texas.

The two senators closed a three-day patronage investigation here Saturday night which was enlivened at the last moment by bitter clashes between Rene B. Creager, Republican national committeeman from Texas and Brookhart.

Before their departure the two senators said that upon their return to Washington they would recommend the discharge from the federal service of Roy B. Campbell, collector of customs at Laredo and John D. Hartman, United States district attorney at San Antonio.

Both officials figured prominently in testimony of witnesses who said they were lax in enforcing the laws.

Trend of Human Thought Toward Era of Peace, Martin Tells Class

Teacher Sees Time When "Other Fellow" Can "Sit Under His Own Vine and Fig Tree"

The trend of human thought is inevitably leading to the fulfillment of Old Testament and Christian prophecies which predicted an age in which all the nations of the world will be peacefully united in fellowship, according to Judge P. A. Martin's address before the men's Bible class of the Floral Heights Methodist church Sunday morning.

"Notwithstanding the sporadic outbreaks of race prejudice and an exaggerated spirit of nationalism among our people, we still are progressing toward the time when we shall let the 'other fellow' sit under his own vine and fig tree with no one to interfere and make him afraid," the speaker said.

The address in part follows:

"God has always had some men of wide enough vision to see beyond the narrow confines of their own particular tribe or race and catch a vision of the great world of humanity on the outside. No race of people has ever inhabited the earth who entertained a greater degree of race prejudice, race pride and race consciousness than the Jews. 'God's chosen people' yet this great race, bound together as they were by ties of blood and religion seems to have never been entirely without men who saw beyond the confines of Judaism and caught visions of universal knowledge of God. It is true that these men were not popular men by any means; they were always in the minority; the masses did not believe them; the powers persecuted them and misjudged them and yet, in the face of all opposition they went on teaching the universal reign of Jehovah and universal peace and happiness to come from the influence of his reign in the hearts of men.

Men of Vision

"The three great prophets quoted in the lesson today, using words of distinctive Hebrew imagery sought to bring home to their people the great truth that Jehovah would ultimately bring home to himself, not only the scattered remnants of the children of Israel, but also the great Gentile world. It is a strong argument for the truth of divine revelation that in such dark ages men should have such high visions, so contrary to their teachings and to the current thought of their day. There is every reason to believe that nothing but the touch of divine inspiration produced such thoughts in such men and in such an age of the world. And the fact that we are today witnessing the daybreak of the days they prophesied and seeing and hearing the fruition of their expressed hopes for the race adds another startling witness to the truth of divine inspiration.

"I note that the editors give a local meaning to the stately language of Micah in his prediction that 'in the last days' the nations afar off shall come and say 'let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, and to the house of the God of Jacob.' The Jews believe in this as a prediction of the final re-establishment of the Kingdom in Jerusalem; a final centralization of religious authority emanating from the walls of the ancient city of God. I confess that I do not fully subscribe to this belief. While Jerusalem will always be dear to the hearts of all believers in Jehovah as the birthplace of monotheism and the place from which there has sprung the words of revelation, yet I am inclined to think that when the Master announced to the woman of Samaria that the true worship of Jehovah was not in Samarias mount Gerazim nor in the temple at Jerusalem but in the hearts of men, he meant to get entirely away from the old idea of a centralized religion and open to every aching human heart, whatever it may be the divine consolations of spiritual communion with his God.

"To be sure, we are far from the final consummation of these prophesies; and yet the trend of human thought is inevitably leading in their direction. Instead of beating our swords into plowshares and our spears into pruning hooks, we are still merrily building more and more warships and turning out more and more of the equipment of war; but great and good men of all nations are solemnly protesting against the increase of armaments and treaties are being arranged by the more advanced nations of the earth to settle their controversies in some other way than by the arbitrament of force and arms. We too have men of world vision who see and know that the race must 'flow to the mountain of the Lord' as the ancient prophet said before the time can come when 'they shall sit every man under his vine and under his fig tree and none shall make them afraid.' They know too that the time will come 'for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it.'

Era of Peace

"Not if Holy writ is true; if the words of Jesus himself are true, this glad time is coming. The era of universal peace and the prevalence of universal happiness when all the ends of the earth shall see the salvation of our God. Its coming can only be delayed by the conduct of man himself. We can ignore the opportunities and the duties of the age; we can forget God in our hates and dislikes and our pride and so-called patriotism; we can wield the 'big stick' of our nationalism; we can accumulate the wealth of the world and make of our money an instrument of oppression; we can worship at the feet of Ashtoreth, the goddess of pleasure; we can waste our time and talents upon the things of the world and utterly ignore religion until all our better impulses are choked out by noxious growth and then, yes, then we can and will lapse into the darkness of another dark age in this old world and delay the final fruition of the Christian's hope for centuries to come. We are and always have been 'free moral agents' with the right and the power to choose between Jehovah and Bael.

"As the prophet Joel says God is even now pouring out his spirit upon all flesh; few indeed are the people now who have not heard at some time the word of life; few indeed there are in this land who do not know the right. Old men are dreaming dreams and young men are seeing visions today; our trouble is that we do not heed the dreams or follow the visions that we have of what we ought to do. A spiritual lethargy has us by the throat and none of us are doing what our better judgment tells us we ought to do for the cause of righteousness. We say in our prayers 'Thy kingdom come; thy will be done' and then spend from six to seven days in the week thinking about and striving for something else, possibly something contrary to the good of the kingdom, something inimical to its welfare.

"Notwithstanding sporadic outbreaks of race prejudice and an exaggerated spirit of nationalism among our people we are still progressing, however, toward the time when we will let the 'other fellow' sit under his own vine and fig tree and worship his God in his own way, with no one to interfere and make him afraid.

"And notwithstanding the fact that we are all more or less handicapped by inherited likes and dislikes, I believe, as a people, we love, honor and respect the rights and opinions of the 'other fellow' more and more as the years go by and the spirit of the teachings of the Christ sink deeper and deeper into the consciousness of the human race."

ATTICUS WEBB SPEAKS HERE

School Children Taught Evils of Rum

Defeat of the so-called liquor traffic must be accomplished through the young people of the country, according to Dr. Atticus Webb of Dallas, superintendent of the state anti-saloon league, who addressed the congregations of the Highland Heights Baptist and Grant Street Methodist churches, respectively, Sunday morning and evening.

During the last few years, the speaker said, champions of prohibition in the United States have shown a tendency to rest upon their oars with a feeling that with the passing of a few years, all classes would become reconciled to the prohibition laws and promiscuous use of liquor would disappear. During that period opponents of the Volstead act have become active in the distribution of propaganda, the speaker said, in which it has been claimed that individual rights of citizens have been violated by the prohibition amendment, and which pointedly implies that the use of liquor is a desirable thing for youth.

The state anti-saloon league, according to Doctor Webb, is now engaged in a campaign to educate the school children of the state in the methods being employed by opponents of prohibition, and in the various results of liquor consumption. Moving pictures, with explanatory lectures, are being taken to the public schools for exhibition before the student bodies.

Large audiences heard both the morning and evening addresses.

The Tesco quartet including Al Beattie, Frank Shepherd and Dale and Dick Dancer, will give several songs for the minstrel. George Kerner is musical director of the show. Other features of the bill will be announced Tuesday, Mr. Bunnenberg said.

Affable Stranger Takes Savings of Aged Couple in 'Friend-in-Need' Act

CHICAGO, June 30. (US)—Savings of a lifetime, totaling $2,000, disappeared today under the very eyes of Marta Pallas, old, laborworn German charwoman and her husband, thanks to the deft fingers and the nimble tongue of a well-dressed American.

The Pallas couple's dream of sending for their children from Halle, Germany, has vanished, and they sit tearfully in their humble home here, nerve-racked and stunned into speechlessness.

Pallas had spent his day off at the Oak street bathing beach along the gold coast. The strange man with the most affable manners flattered the laborer, whose English is very broken. He won the confidence of Pallas and the latter proceeded to tell him of his plans for bringing the children here. The stranger then told Pallas how he could double his savings by investing them. He went with the laborer to the latter's bank, helped him to draw his money out, in nice new bills tucked into an old satchel, and then escorted Pallas to his home and his wife.

The old couple took out the money and looked at it. The sight thrilled them. They felt well-to-do. They put the money back in the satchel. The stranger, looking on benevolently, left smiling, accompanied by the thanks of the Pallas couple. Then the two opened the satchel again. It was filled with paper.

The Social Side—Wichita Falls' Woman's Interests—Clubs and Churches

Miss Katherine Michaelias and Archer City Man Wed Sunday

A beautifully impressive evening ceremony solemnized the marriage of Miss Katherine Michaelias, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Michaelias and W. S. Hale Jr., of Archer City Sunday at 5 o'clock at the home of the bride, 1819 Ninth street. Rev. L. S. White, pastor of the First Church of Christ, read the marriage vows.

The entire reception suite of the Michaelias home was transformed into an old fashioned garden setting, with a profusion of greenery, gladioli, daisies and blue bells creating the bride's color scheme of orchid, pink and green. A white lattice gate opened to the altar banked with ferns and garden flowers, before which the bridal party stood in a semi-circle as the ceremony was read.

At 5 o'clock chimes were struck, Miss Eunice Jenkins played a piano number, "Song of Evening Star," by Wagner. R. E. Shepherd sang "I Love You Truly," with Mrs. Shepherd at the piano. As the bride and her attendants entered, Miss Jenkins played "Bridal Chorus" from Lohengrin, and "Love's Old Sweet Song" during the ceremony.

Miss Michaelias was given in marriage by her father. She wore a handsome sleeveless ivory satin gown in fitted basque style, with maline yoke, and full, sweeping skirt. Ivory satin shoes, and a strand of rope pearls completed her costume. Her bridal bouquet was of butterfly roses and lilies of the valley in shower effect.

Reception Follows

Miss Orena McCormick of Fort Worth attended the bride as matron of honor. She wore a pink chiffon afternoon frock of the same style as the bride's gown, with hose and shoes to match. Her flowers were pink sweet peas. Miss Katherine Ashford as bridesmaid wore an orchid chiffon dress of similar style, with harmonizing accessories, carrying orchid sweet peas.

O. T. Gooding of Wichita Falls attended the bridegroom as best man, and Edward Crump was usher.

An informal reception followed the ceremony. The dining table was laid with a lace cloth over green satin, centered with a two-tiered white wedding cake, decorated with orchid and pink sweet peas, pink roses and pale green leaves. It was topped by a miniature bridal couple. Pink candles in silver holders were placed at intervals on the table. Mrs. Guy Raley and Mrs. J. C. McCormick of Fort Worth presided in the dining room, serving a pink, green and orchid ice course with the wedding cake.

Leave on Honeymoon

Following the reception, Mr. and Mrs. Hale left by automobile for Colorado Springs and Denver to spend their honeymoon of two weeks there. Mrs. Hale's going-away suit was a black and white two-piece sports dress, with white fur, black hat and all other effects matching. Upon their return to Wichita Falls, Mr. and Mrs. Hale will reside at 1819 Ninth street.

The bride was extensively feted following the announcement of her engagement. She is a popular high school and Junior college graduate. Mr. Hale is also a graduate of Wichita Falls Junior college, and is manager of the city sales force of the Real Silk Hosiery Mills in Wichita Falls. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Hale of Archer City.

Out of town guests at the wedding were Messrs. and Mesdames J. C. McCormick and J. C. McCormick Jr., and H. S. Harmon of Fort Worth, M. A. Buchanan of Grapevine, W. S. Hale, Charles Abercrombie, Vergil Seay, Coss Conner, Ed Trigg, Will Hutchinson, John Presley, W. C. Young, Newt Jones, O'Keefe, and Miss Mary Hale, all of Archer City.

We Women

By BETTY BRAINERD

Be Your Age!

The slang term, "Be your age," is a fairly modern piece of advice, originating, one suspects, in the modern tendency of ladies of a certain age to dress and act in imitation of their granddaughters; and also in the modern urge to rebuke any pretense of coy unsophistication on the part of the granddaughters themselves.

Be your age! It's often apt counsel.

The art of growing old gracefully has been forgotten by a generation that clings to the last semblance of youth as if it were the one hope of salvation, that hates grey hairs as our ancestors hated sin, and fears a wrinkle as in another age the good folk feared the cloven hoof.

Be young!—go out dancing though your old bones creak and ache! Be peppy and your "line" mustn't antedate the week before last. Keep up with the patter, with the shows and the scandals! What if you do prefer to relax, read, putter about in a garden or make friends with your children's children? You can't have everything—and in this day and age the great cry is youth, real or imitation.

But there is a fine side to "be your age." We have forgotten to think of ourselves as doddering wrecks at the early age at which our honorable ancestors retired from the fray of living and sat waiting for death to overtake them.

It was not uncommon for our grandmothers to marry at 16. When married, they were supposed to put aside all frivolous matters, devote themselves to bringing up a family and spend the remainder of their days in lace cap, only rarely "visiting around."

In those days at the age of 60 a woman was an old lady. She might live for another 20 years, but the idea that she could do anything, work, was unheard of. She was made to feel that the days of her usefulness were over.

Nowadays a woman whose family-raising job is done frequently starts on a career. She doesn't think herself as one on the shelf at 40 or 50, but turns energetically to "expressing" herself. At 60 she is often going strong.

Why waste the years which might be harnessed in service of both group and individual? Why put out of the running a woman who has arrived at a wise and sane maturity?

In the old days these women spent their surplus energy in meddling with their children's lives. Now we give them a job and every one is happier.

It isn't, you see, altogether good to "be your age" if your age is 50, for instance, and you still have the ambition of 25!

Betty Brainerd will be glad to help her readers with their problems. Send a self-addressed stamped envelope to her in care of this paper.

Oh, These Women

By LEOLA ALLARD

NEW YORK, June 30.—An Italian in New York beat his wife and nine children with a stick. The judge thought it might work a hardship on the family if he were jailed so he made him get on his knees and apologize.

Like the dumb Dora who came into the domestic court one day and wanted support from a worthless husband. She told of a frightful beating he gave her some time before he left that put her into a hospital for weeks.

"But why didn't you tell the police, you might have die?" said the judge.

"Well, I couldn't do anything," said dumb Dora, "because he apologized!"

The Caribs, in British Honduras, have three languages. The men use one, the women another, and when the two sexes talk together they use a very different third language, says an archaeologist just home from Central America.

And it wouldn't take an archaeologist to see that there is very marked difference in the language used by sweethearts, wives, suitors and husbands, right here at home. "Lines" we call them, rather than "languages."

In the library:

"Mabel Willebrandt has a husband hasn't she?"

"Yah."

"I wonder if he and Mr. Gann know each other?"

"I dunno. They ought."

"Yah. They ought."

Have you noticed in all these June wedding pictures that the brides who are no higher than their husbands wear pretty slippers that enhance the beauty of their tootsies? And the big brides who marry little fellers always have heels so flat they look like baby shoes. Cuts a couple or more inches off their height.

A colored woman in Washington called the police station and inquired the price for getting drunk if you got "caught." "Ten dollars," they told her. "Come and git him," she said.

"Get who?" said the captain.

"My husband," said the lady, "at that price you kin have 'im."

But some people can't afford peace at any price.

A pretty wife, commenting on a new in-law, her brother-in-law's wife, remarked: "She's a fine girl, but, do you know, she brings him his slippers! Fancy that, in this day and age!"

"I should think he would," I said naively (?)

"He literally eats it up," she continued. "He thinks she's the greatest wife in the world. He just glows when she hands him slippers or an ash tray. I'd soon train her out of that if I had her around me."

Fair enough, mebbe, but if he works hard all day to be able to hand her things the rest of her life, it won't break her back to hand him his slippers, and, anyway, she probably gets as much joy out of it as he does.

Personally, myself, I think the Smithsonian institution should be notified. She's the last of her kind.

MAN SHACKLED MOST TRAGIC

Husband Chained to Loveless Woman Pathetic

One of the Most Tragic Figures in Matrimony Is That of the Man Who Is Chained for Life to a Woman He Doesn't Love Because She Has Too Little Self-Respect to Set Him Free.

What should a woman do when her husband ceases to care for her and falls in love with another woman and begs his wife to set him free?

Here are two interesting and bitter letters setting forth the man's side of the problem. A group of men ask these questions:

"Have women any real morality? Do they consider morality a thing of the spirit or just a legal affair? Is morality to them simply self-preservation and selfishness? Is that why they feel justified in clinging to men who hate them?

"Are wives moral who insist upon living with husbands who want to divorce them but are willing to provide for them and who flaunt the women they love and want to marry in the wife's face, who do anything and everything in order to force the wife to give them their freedom?

"If a man is cruel who leaves his wife, how about the cruelty of the wife who uses every weapon of the law to hold him bound to her? Can a wife suffer any more by abandonment than a husband suffers by bondage? Is a husband to be regarded as nothing but a slave or a cash register?

"Should an honorable man who wants to live right be forced to live with a wife who has grown repulsive to him?"

Another man writes:

As a matter of moral decency and self-respect I have told my wife that I love another woman and do not love her and that I want my freedom from her. I have offered to share evenly everything I have with her, which is aplenty, if she should give me a divorce, and she refuses.

"My wife, like thousands upon thousands of other selfish wives, has thought of nothing but her clubs, her arties, her family. She completely forfeited my love and respect. I grew disgusted with her petty character and inane chatter. It is all right to chatter when you are very young, but when a woman reaches the age of 40 it is time for her to develop some sort of mind.

"You say the poor wife isn't to blame when her husband gets so bored with her stupidity that he could almost strangle her. Well, who is to blame? Of course, he picked her out. But as a young girl she was as good as the average and he had a right to expect her to evolve as much as an animal. She could at least have learned some new tricks as the years went by.

"We expect chivalry from a man to a woman. Why should not women show some chivalry to men? What about a woman's forcing her husband to live with her when she knows he loathes her?

"You pity a discarded wife, but have you any idea how a decent man's soul recoils from a wife who is holding him by the law? His skin creeps. He gets sick with revulsion when she touches him. He tries to smile to keep her from being "hurt" until the thought behind the smile becomes murder, yet the woman hangs on until his last drop blood has turned to tears of bitterness."

I get many letters like these from men who are not philanderers. Not petticoat chasers, but fine, upright, conscientious men, anxious to do right, but who have made the terrible mistake of marrying the wrong woman and who are desperately and piteously striving to salvage for themselves a few years of happiness instead of dragging along in drab misery to the grave. And they are fighting a losing battle against women who are entrenched behind their marriage certificates, who are backed up by public opinion and public sympathy and who cannot or will not face the truth that their very victory is more disastrous than any defeat could be and that the tighter they hold on to men who have ceased to care for them the more they lose them.

Sometimes it is the woman's fault that her husband has ceased to care for her. Sometimes she has killed his love by her selfishness, her neglect, her temper, her nagging. Very often she is not to blame. She is all that it was in her to be. She has given her husband all that she had to give him, but it was not enough. She had not the wherewithal to feed his soul. She couldn't understand him. She couldn't be a companion to him no matter how hard she tried because God had given him a fine intellect and her the brains of a hen.

No tragedies are more terrible than thesemismatings, which, oftener than not, are the result of early marriages in which the husband simply outgrew the wife. Nothing is more fabulous than the hope with which such women befool themselves, the belief that if they will just hold on to the husbands who have tired of them, they can get them back again.

Certainly no figure is more pathetic than that of the discarded wife whose vanity and whose pride and whose heart are alike humbled into the dust by her husband's wearying of her and preferring another woman to her. But if we have tears to shed we may spare a few also for the man whose disappointment is as great as his wife's in the failure of their marriage, who has hungered and thirsted for sympathy she has not given him, who has endured a martyrdom of boredom and petty tyrannies and nagging.

But, as Mr. Cleveland used to say, "It is a condition and not a theory that confronts us," and it seems to me that in such a situation there is only one decent thing for the wife to do whose husband has come to loathe her and that is to set him free. She has lost him and it is of small avail to hold the body after the spirit is gone.

I cannot see how a woman who has a single shred of pride or self-respect left in her can ever desire to bind a man to her when she knows that he hates her, that he shudders at the touch of her hand and that his every thought is for some other woman. Certainly such a union is mockery of marriage. Certainly in such a relationship she can find nothing but misery and torturing jealousy and she would not only save her face but be a thousand times happier if she would give her husband the divorce he wants and adjust her life along new lines.

Wives whose husband are begging them for divorces might well say, as did another woman to a man who wearied of her:

"I won you like a lover. I will lose you like a lady."

DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—I am a young mother, 28 years old, with three children. My husband is a good man and I am fond of him, but he has a very small money-making ability and only earns barely enough for us to exist on. We are always in debt, always driven for money. The children lack for the necessities of life and things will be no better because my husband lacks education and will never be able to make more than he does at present.

Now here is my problem. I am better educated than he is and can earn more than he does, as I worked before I was married. I want to go back to my job because we need the money and because I am determined to educate my children, but my husband is not willing for me to do so because he is afraid the children will be neglected. Two of the children are in school and the baby is nearly three years old. What shall I do?

—DISCOURAGED MOTHER.

Answer: If a man can support his family in decent comfort I think it is best for the wife to stay at home and take care of the children, because no one can do that as well as she can.

But in a case where the man is unable to earn enough money to provide the necessities of life for his family, obviously it becomes the best thing for the wife also to become a money-earner. She can do more for her children by giving them a better standard of living than she could do by personal attention. It is more important for them to have plenty of bread than it is for mother to make it. She will do more for them morally by putting them in a good neighborhood to live than she would by watching over them in a bad neighborhood.

Grinding poverty is not only hard on people physically. It is equally disastrous to them mentally and a woman whose nerves are fretted to fiddle strings by anxiety over where the next meal is coming from, and who is soured by disappointment and embittered by envy because she cannot have anything pretty herself or give her children good clothes, cannot make a happy and contented home, or be a cheery companion to her children.

She is sure to be peevish and fretful and nagging. Nothing will sweeten up her disposition and make her more agreeable to live with than going out and earning the money that will lessen the domestic strain and enable her to buy the little comforts she longs for and needs. Therefore, even in that sense, she will be a better mother than if she stayed at home and starved with the children.

So I think your husband is making a mistake in opposing your going to work. What your children miss in not having you with them all the time will be more than made up by what you will be able to give them through your earnings. And you will be a lot more cheerful and a pleasanter person to live with.

—DOROTHY DIX.

"Chic Styles for Glorious Coatless Days"

The smartest daytime frocks, while diversified in detail, sponsor certain fabrics and colorings. Vivid prints enliven the mode in modernistic, geometric or floral designs. There is greater favor accorded cotton fabrics, and really from a distance, one can hardly tell the difference between the cottons and silks. Perhaps this is because of the tendency toward the soft textured surface of silk without luster, thus making it resemble the finer cottons. The printed designs are identical and the styling of the garments is similar.

The outstanding silks are crepes, shantungs and dull radiums. Among the cottons, pique has taken precedence. Uncrushable linen has found favor and rightly so because of its crisp, fresh appeal on warm, sultry days. Ginghams have come to the fore this season in ravishing checks and adorable prints, and one sees the smartest of frocks and ensembles fashioned of plain and checked gingham. This use of cotton fabrics is decidedly economical as well as chic, and the cleaning establishments must give way to the family wash tubs, for grown-up clothes as well as kiddies.

The mode is being tinged with exotic colorings, perhaps the outstanding is orange, and really I do not exaggerate when I say there is scarcely a print that does not contain a bit of this delicious color. On shop counters one sees such color combinations as brown, beige and orange; black, green, grey and orange; aster, green, tan and orange; yellow, green and orange. One could go on indefinitely with the gorgeous display of gayly colored designs just waiting to be made into dainty, smart, warm weather frocks.

White is quite popular, but always with a touch of orange, red or other vivid shades—perhaps in the scarf worn jauntily about the neck or in the accessories. Hats, bags, belts and shoes have been designed this season with frocks uppermost in mind, as every outfit must be complete as to color scheme. Kiddies, too, have adapted this vogue and never before have their little dresses been so ravishing in fabric, color and detail.

Pattern 1534

The scalloped center closing and the rounded pockets to match, create an adorable frock for the tiny tot. Simple, yet very cunning is design 1534 when fashioned of a vividly printed percale or gingham. Pearl buttons add a smart touch and may be white or colored to match the print.

May be obtained only in sizes 2, 4 and 6. Size 4 requires 2 yards of 36 inch print and ¾ yard trimming material.

Pattern 1489

The square neckline and the dainty sash are decided style features of this smart little rig for the little youngsters. Challis, dimity or percale printed with miniature flower pots and flowers in green, pink and yellow on a white ground would be cunning. The trimming is white dimity.

May be obtained only in sizes 2, 4 and 6. Size 4 requires 2¼ yards of 40 inch material and ¾ yards trimming.

Pattern 1550

Equally attractive for morning in the home or for sports wear, design 1550 boasts an unusually smart rounded yoke that continues to the end of the kimona sleeve. Buttons and button-holes add a delightful touch. There is a skirt section inserted in the front that gives fullness and grace to the frock. A patent leather belt, or white kid, gives an effective finish. Printed crepe or pique create an extremely smart frock. A scarf might be added with vivid coloring to complete a very smart rig.

May be obtained only in sizes 16, 18, 20, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44. Size 36 requires 3¾ yards of 36 to 40 inch material.

Pattern 1627

The sleeveless frock is most important this season, and will be worn for every occasion from sports to evening. Design 1627 features smart details in the yoke, the pointed vestee and the double belt. Gathers under the yoke give fullness to the bodice and side panels afford swing and freedom to the skirt. Silk or cotton pique, linen, shantung or broadcloth will cashion delightfully in this style. All white, or a pastel shade would be lovely.

May be obtained only in sizes 16, 18, 20, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 20 requires 3⅛ yards of 40 inch material.

Pattern 1716

Youth, vivacity, chic are in every line of this exquisite little frock for the young woman or girl. It may be worn with or without the collar, as it is detachable, thus giving one two frocks in one. The flat skirt is gathered or shirred to the bodice. Checked or barred dimity or gingham is delicious for this model, with organdie used for trimming. A pert bow of satin or grosgrain ribbon finishes the shawl collar. Green, blue, brown or red and white may be chosen for a dream of a frock.

May be obtained only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36 and 38. Size 16 requires 3¾ yards of 36 inch material and 1⅛ yards trimming.

Pattern 1689

Infinite charm is displayed in this afternoon frock of printed silk crepe. The pointed neck closing, the graceful jabots on bodice and girdle, the flared skirt with snug girdle, are features of decided interest. Attractive buttons, or rhinestone pins may finish the tab and belt trim. Other suitable fabrics are printed georgette, voile, radium and chiffon.

May be obtained only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 36 requires 3¾ yards of 40 inch material.

Memphis School Values Increase

Special to The Record News.

MEMPHIS, Texas, June 30.—The valuations of the Memphis independent school district was assessed by the school board of equalization this week for the year 1929 at $5,826,476. This compares with $4,942,440 for the year 1928 and $4,865,723 for the year 1927. The board increased the valuations nearly a million dollars over 1928.

The operating expense of the Memphis school system has been materially increased the past several years, due to the fact of the opening of the new junior high school, which necessitated the employment of more teachers, and keeping the physical equipment up to standard.

Only three changes in the personnel of teachers has been made for the coming term. The changes were made in the employment of a new coach in the athletic department, a new Spanish teacher and a new teacher of domestic science.

O'DONNELL C-C HITTING STRIDE

Community Body Busy in First Two Weeks

Special to The Record News.

O'DONNELL, Texas, June 30.—The Community Chamber of Commerce of O'Donnell has begun to operate with G. S. Dowell, formerly of Quitaque, as a full time secretary-manager, and a number of things have already been done.

O'Donnell citizens were asked to buy stock in the Lamesa powdered milk plant which will cost $200,000 and will cover the O'Donnell trade territory. The plant will consume between 30,000 and 100,000 pounds of milk each day brought in by trucks on regular routes which pick up the milk and take it to the plant so that all the dairymen and farmers need to do is to set their milk out on the route and get their checks each two weeks through the mail or in their empty cans. In this way the plant will not tend to bring more people to one town than to another and will furnish a market for all milk that can possibly be produced.

The Santa Fe has promised them a team another team track and some industrial tracks which will help in handling the large tonnage that goes out of the town.

The public relations committee has held two community meetings in the Draw and Joe Bailey communities at which good programs were given. More than 300 people attended each of the meetings which were record crowds for small communities.

The civic committee has started a clean-up campaign with the help of the city council, the Boy Scouts and other organizations. The town has been divided into sections with one member of the committee responsible for each section.

Mr. Martin, the vocational agricultural adviser and manager of the community fair, has announced the premium list which provides more than $600 in premiums. O'Donnell has had one of the best community fairs on the South Plains and preparations are being made for a still bigger fair this fall.

HE NEVER HAD A TOOTHACHE

Daily Editorial

THE Field Museum exhibits a group of European ancestors, even too far removed for David Starr Jordan's identification—and that's some distance.

One regrets that his genealogical labors scarcely reach beyond Charlemagne, from whom, he assures us, Calvin Coolidge is a zig-zag descendant.

Dr. Jordan also bears proud tidings to John D. Rockefeller that he shares the blood of French kings with George Washington, Aaron Burr and the various Winston Churchills.

Likewise, that David, of Scotland, may claim Chief Justice Taft, Secretary Wilbur, and—of course—J. P. Morgan as chips off the old block.

Persons who go in for such things are advised to secure their copy of "Your Family Tree," which obligingly joins the veins of "Alfred the Great, William the Conqueror and Robert Bruce" to "practically every Anglo-American.

And all these years we were erroneously conferring the blue ribbon on Solomon as the grand champion sire of all time!

Which goes to show how outrageously post-Biblical history has been Bowdlerized of "low-downs" that might have made the earlier chronicles perpetual best sellers.

The Tale of the Hunky

CARLYLE used to insist that the history of any nation or age was nothing but a collection of the biographies of its great men.

Our modern age, less fertile with greatness and more critical of it, seems to be reversing that axiom. We seem to suspect that a nation's history can be told better by biographies, not of its great men, but of its submerged, unsung nobodies—the toilers whom no one notices but whose uneventful lives tell the story of the building of an empire.

Oddly enough, it is not the historian or the biographer who is using this method of approach to give us a new slant on our history; it is the novelist. The story of a negro laborer in the new South can tell as much about the recent development of that section as a two-volume sociological treatise; we can learn more of the winning of the Middle West from a book like "Shadow of the Long Knives" than from half a dozen histories.

Thus it is to a new novel. "Hunky," that one can turn for a new glimpse of that great army of foreign-born laborers that makes the wheels go round in our big cities.

This book, by Thames Williamson, has as its hero one Jencic—an ignorant, powerful, unimaginative "hunky" who toils in poverty in the slums of a great city. Jencic is like uncounted thousands of others. He lives by and for his job. It is all he knows. When a strike comes he blindly follows his leader, never knowing why; when the strike ends he goes back to work again without the faintest idea why he struck.

A friend tells him he must become an American citizen in order to be safe from police persecution. So he goes to a grafting city councilman, pays two dollars and gets his "papers," which he fondly treasures. The significance of the thing never reaches him. He is, in reality, a man without a country.

Even his own city is strange to him. He blithely violates the prohibition law without even suspecting that he is commiting a crime. All he knows is his job; the job that is his one excuse for existence, the job that is the one anchor which holds him steady in a confusing and astounding world.

It is because there are so many Jencics—so many, many ignorant "hunkies"—in this country that the book is, in its way, a kind of history. It opens up for us a new vista in American life. For the whole nation is built on a foundation of men like this uncouth toiler. The mills of Detroit, Pittsburgh and Gary, the textile plants of New England, the construction gangs of the southwest, the lumber camps of the west coast—all of these come down, in the last analysis, to Jencic and his kind.

You could not hope to understand America if you knew only Park avenue, Southampton, Newport and Barr Harbor. No more can you understand it if you do not get some comprehension of the immigrants. The American story has many chapters. One of the least understood but most important of these is the chapter of the unwashed, unsung, all-enduring Hunky.

Moving Fast on Bicycles

GROVER WHALEN, New York's highly advertised police commissioner, not long ago got a good deal of fun out of the fact that the London police still use bicycles in making their daily rounds. He seemed to feel that this compared rather poorly with the snappy, fast-moving motorcycles of the American cop.

However, the London officers seem to travel faster on bicycles than our American police can go on their motorcycles. At any rate—

During 1928 there were just 18 murders in London. The police solved every one. Eleven of the murderers were arrested, tried, convicted and sentenced, and the other seven committed suicide.

Compare these figures—not with New York's, for the contrast would be too staggering; with some lesser city, like Kansas City, for instance. Kansas City, in 1928, had 105 murders. Twenty-three murderers were tried, convicted and sentenced; five were acquitted, and the rest seem to have escaped molestation altogether.

Any Amrican police official who laughs at the London force is showing extremely poor judgment.

Enmity That Won't Hurt

PRESIDENT HOOVER seems to have the odd notion that a man must have some genuine legal and mental qualifications in order to be appointed to the federal judiciary.

The president has aroused the ill will of a number of party leaders recently because of this notion of his. They have a way of recommending party hacks for appointment—men, often, who have no more business on the bench than so many mechanics. Because President Hoover ignores their wishes, they are filling the air with protests.

A man can generally be judged by the enemies he makes. Using that measuring stick, the American people will presently be giving President Hoover even more of their esteem and admiration than he already has. For the presidents we remember the longest and most fondly are generally the ones who made enemies of the political old guard.

TOONERVILLE FOLKS By Fontaine Fox

The GREEN SHADOW - By Herman Landon

(Copyright by Public Ledger)

A woman has been murdered and Captain Summers of the police believes "The Picaroon," responsible for the crime. "The Picaroon," who preys upon the rich and then offers to return his loot on the payment of 10 per cent of its value to charity, is Martin Dale and a firm friend of Summers when they are both "off duty." Summers has found a cigar band of the same rare brand that Dale smokes near the woman's body.

The murdered woman has been identified by Alexander Ferryman as his wife, but Dale and Adele Castle knew her to be the mysterious Miss Conway, who took Adele to the house where the murder was later committed for a weird interview with a man calling himself Dr. Moffett. The interview took place in a room flooded with a strange green light which rendered Dr. Moffett almost entirely invisible. Moffett tells Adele he knows her father was associated with Daniel Forrester, who obtained a fortune by fraudulent means and demands blackmail of $100,000.

Dale offers to help Adele and tells her he was present when she talked to Dr. Moffett. Later he visits the house and accuses Axelson, the caretaker, of knowing Dr. Moffett. Axelson, an employe of Ferryman who lives next door, denies knowing Moffett.

An intruder enters Dale's apartment. Dale tries to capture him, but grabs only an empty sleeve. Then the room is flooded in green light and the invisible burglar strikes Dale on the jaw and escapes.

Dale calls on Adele and meets her friend, Paul Ainsworth. The two are immediately suspicious of one another and Dale especially notes that Paul has only one arm.

Dale enters the house where the murder occurred and investigates a flaw in the wainscoting he had noticed on his previous visit. He finds a sliding panel and behind it a rope of pearls. When he seeks to leave the room, a locked door bars his way.

Through the door enters Ferryman, Axelson, Summers and the police. Summers accuses Dale of murdering Mrs. Ferryman to obtain the pearls and then hiding them behind the panel. Dale darkens the room, grabs Axelson, throws him against Summers and then out the window, and in the resultant confusion escapes.

Then, quick as an arrow, he glided backward across the floor. Summers, reeling back from the sudden impact, emitted a howl of rage and frustration. He wiped a reddish trickle from his nose and steadied himself. Axelson was picking himself up from the floor. It took Carrigan a moment or two to recover from his daze. Now, with automatic leveled, his huge shoulders squared for action, he hurled himself at the Picaroon.

But with a soft laugh and a light leap the Picaroon eluded the charging giant. A quick dodge, and he was at the wall. A little click, and darkness swooped down upon a scene of tumult.

"The door!" Summers bellowed. "Don't let him—"

A crash of breaking glass drowned his shout.

"The window! Quick! Ferryman, the lights!"

A hubbub sounded outside the window. The lights blazed up again.

"We've got him!" cried a voice outside.

With a hoarse cry of relief Summers sprang to the window. A street lamp half a block distant revealed two uniformed men struggling with their prisoner. It was a brief struggle. Their captive was quickly subdued.

"Caught him just as he jumped out the window," one of them triumphantly announced.

Summers crawled over the sill and dropped to the street level. In the dim light he glanced at the prisoner.

"Oh, hell!" he exclaimed with heartfelt disgust. "That isn't the Picaroon! How in blazes did you get out here, Axelson?"

The servant, limp and shaken and disheveled, struggled for breath.

"Some—somebody threw me out," he stammered.

Dr. Moffett's Ultimatum

At 1 o'clock the following day, Captain Summers walked into a restaurant in the Washington square section and grumpily sat down at the table in the rear.

"Soup, veal cutlet, coffee—make it snappy," he growled at the waiter.

The soup came and he consumed it with a grim and petulant air, as if it irritated his esophagus. He attacked the veal cutlet savagely, as if to vent his ill humor on it. Suddenly he looked up.

"Hello, Summers," drawled a familiar voice.

Summers stared. His eyes protruded, his lips hung slack.

"Say, where in the name of Sam Hill did you come from?" His voice was dull, hollow, full of flabbergastation.

"Home," said Dale. He dusted the seat with the napkin and sat down with one of his little flourishes. He looked fresh and keen and without a care. "Don't look at me like that, old socks. I am full of serenity and cosmic harmonies, and you are trying to inject gloom into my soul. Waiter!"

He studied the card carefully and gave his order.

"I've had men out looking for you all morning," said Summers weakly.

"Too bad. Had I known it, I should have communicated with you. Anything special?"

Summers swallowed hard. His emotions seemed too deep for words. In the end he resorted to heavy sarcasm.

"Oh, no—nothing special. Just wanted to listen to your bright patter and ask a question or two."

"For instance?"

"Well, I was just curious to know where you spent the hours between 2 o'clock and sunrise."

"Your curiosity is insatiable, old top." Dale studied the omelet that had just arrived and nodded approval. "Let me see. I spent the evening at a roof garden. Dreadful bore! Take my advice and don't spend your hard-earned money to see 'The Nude Veracities.' Then—oh, yes, I ordered my car and took a spin out to City Island. Wonderful moonlight effects over the water! You should have been along, you frostbitten old sour face. The sight would have mellowed your crusty temper."

"Yeah?" Summers jeered feebly. "Tell me about the moon. Maybe your description of it will do me as much good as if I had seen the whole blame show."

"I fear I can't do it justice. A sight of that sort requires a poet's wonderful touch. A measureless expanse of water rippling gently beneath a silver shimmer. A luminous track extending seaward. A ship in the distance, a ghostly blur on the horizon. The magic and sorcery of the lunar radiance. No, Summers, words fail me. I can't do it."

"Oh, try again," Summers encouraged. "You might be a little more explicit. Was it a full moon, a three-quarters moon, or what?"

"Three quarters. Of course, I didn't measure it—"

"I guess you didn't," said Summers dryly. He took a swallow of coffee. "And the reason you didn't was that there was no moon to measure. It was cloudy last night."

Dale's fork paused in the act of conveying a segment of omelet to his mouth. His eyes narrowed slightly. "That's curious. I'm sure there were no clouds where I was."

"No? Well, go on. What did you do after that?"

"I was wide awake, so I drove around a bit, seeking unfrequented highways. Ever feel a craving for solitude, Summers? That was how I felt last night. So I drove and drove, and the first thing I knew the engine began to sputter and my tank was dry. At that hour there was no service station open within miles, so I parked the car along the roadside, snuggled up in the back seat and slept."

"And then?"

"When I woke up it was too late to go to bed, so I took the car to the garage and roamed the park for a while. Ever study protective coloring, Summers? Most fascinating study. I watched the brown little bodies of the squirrels scuttling back and forth amid the brown foliage of autumn."

"You don't say? Well, what next?"

"Then—then I went home. That was only an hour and a half ago. I found my rooms in great disorder. My man Bilkins was beside himself. Summers, old dear, next time you wish to amuse yourself by searching my humble diggings, I wish you wouldn't be quite so disorderly. I detest confusion."

"Sorry," said Summers sarcastically. "Well, you've worked out a great little alibi, Dale. Barring the moon, of course. That was a mistake."

"Alibi?" asked Dale innocently.

Summers chortled. "I can't check up on you, and so I can't call you a liar."

"Summers, you wouldn't be so rude?"

"Well, I'm not saying much, but I am doing a lot of hard thinking." He lowered his head and gazed craftily across the table. "The Picaroon cut loose last night again."

"You don't say!"

"He was in one of his queer getups—one I'd seen him in before."

"One of his famous disguises, eh?"

"Well, it isn't disguise so much as acting—character stuff, you know. The Picaroon is great at that."

"So I have heard. What time did it happen?"

"Oh, about the time you were seeing the moon through a sky full of black clouds."

"There you go, Summers!" Dale puckered his lips in mock disapproval. "Always suspicious! But tell me about the Picaroon."

Summers did, and he studied Dale as he spoke. But Dale's face showed only frank and honest interest, with a little sympathy added at the end.

"Too bad, Summers! So the pesky wag got away from you again? And you say he took the rope of pearls with him. Well, well! But cheer up, old dear. You will get him one of these days."

"You bet I will!" The captain's menacing gaze hung darkly on Dale's face. "And you'll be there to congratulate me. I almost had him last night, but my mind slipped for a moment when he pulled that stuff about Miss Conway on the caretaker. Axelson looked as if a ghost had tickled him in the ribs, and I—well, a moment was all the Picaroon needed."

"He seems to have made good use of it. You say he pitched Axelson out of the window to distract your attention from himself." Dale gave a clear, hearty laugh of sheer amusement. "And then, I suppose, he escaped up the stairs and over the roof." Dale laughed again.

"That's why I'm laughing now—making the most of life's jocund moments while they last. But tell me, Summers, you don't believe the Picaroon murdered Mrs. Ferryman?"

Summers' face knitted with hard thinking. "The Picaroon isn't the kind that goes in for murder. He has never pulled any violent stuff in the past. But every murderer has to begin some time. You can't tell what a man will do if he gets panicky and goes out of his mind. What I'd like to know is this—if the Picaroon didn't kill Mrs. Ferryman, how did he know where the rope of pearls was hidden?"

"You might ask him the next time you see him," Dale lightly suggested.

"I'm asking him now," said Summers pointedly.

Dale merely smiled serenely. A little pause came. "Well, what about Axelson?"

"I—don't know. If a man ever looked guilty, Axelson certainly looked that way for a moment last night. I tried to question him afterward, but he—"

Summers shrugged. "Here's another little thing that puzzles me. Why did the Picaroon change his card?"

"It's a poser, Summers. But wait—I have an idea. It's just possible that when the Picaroon took the pearls he didn't know they were Ferryman's property."

"Eh?" The captain gasped. "What kind of rot are you talking? Why wouldn't he know? He took them off Mrs. Ferryman's neck, didn't he? Anyway, why should it make any difference to the Picaroon who the pearls belonged to? I don't see—but you ought to know, Dale."

"No, frankly, I don't. It was just a fugitive thought."

Summers gazed at him, his brow puckering. "You're a deep one, Dale. Can't make you out."

"Oh, it's simple. The quickest way to establish a reputation for profundity is to talk drivel with a mysterious air."

"If people can't understand you they are sure you are a genius. Well, too bad you missed your chance last night, old top. You had the Picaroon in a corner, with the pearls in his pocket. If you had only mussed him up a bit, stripped him of his false guise, then the mystery of his identity would now be solved. But it's too late now, of course."

"The mystery is solved, as far as I am concerned," said Summers positively.

"So you think, but where is your proof?"

Summers merely squared his jaw and gave his companion a blank look. A waiter appeared and placed a package in front of him.

"For you, sir. It came by messenger."

Summers gazed narrowly at the package. That it should have been addressed to him here was not particularly strange, since he often took his luncheon at this establishment. Slowly he loosened the string and unwrapped the parcel. A small sheet of paper fluttered out. He read the typewritten lines:

My Dear Captain Summers—You are at liberty to claim full credit for the recovery of the inclosed article. I trust Mr. Ferryman, your superiors in the police department and the newspapers will duly appreciate your brilliant detective work, and that this appreciation may partly console you for the disappointment you suffered last night.

THE PICAROON.

The captain stared at the note a moment longer, then at Dale. Hastily he unwrapped something inclosed in tissue paper.

"The Ferryman pearls!" he exclaimed.

"Of all things!" said Dale.

Quickly Summers put the pearls back in the wrapping and slipped them into his pocket. He picked up the note again and glared at it.

"Full credit! Duly appreciate your brilliant detective work!" he ejaculated. "Why, the impudent—"

The Day Book of a New Yorker

Broadway Chatter by Grant Dixon

NEW YORK, July 1.—We have been entertaining an out-of-town visitor, but we no longer try to impress him with the wonders of New York. Instead we listen to what he knows about the city. On a drive through town:

"This," says we, "is the Woolworth building." "Yes," says he, with a careless glance upward, "it has 60 stories, and is the only perfect example of Gothic architecture in the world."

"This," say we, pointing to another great building, "is our newest skyscraper, the Blank building." "Yes," says he, it was completed in May, and the steel work was put up in the record time of 100 working days."

"This," say we, "is Columbia university. It is one of the largest in the country." "Yes," says he. "Last year it had the enrollment of 16,492"—or whatever the actual figures were.

It is our friend's first visit. He stays home and reads New York columns.

Save Our Homes

Dr. Sigmund Spaeth views the radio as antidote for the automobile. In his introduction to the new "Who Is Who in Music," he states: "The general appreciation of good music is at a low ebb, and the so-called concert field of recent years has almost disappeared. The automobile, the motion picture and the radio are responsible. To offset the automobile and the motion picture, the radio has come to the rescue of the home—but just what its influence of music will be is an open question."

Passing of an Art

Speaking of influential inventions, the electric pick-up is doing its share to change American life. This little metal contraption, which looks like a hammer-headed mosquito, with a phonograph needle for its proboscis, is, of course, the foundation of most talking pictures. It makes possible the electrical amplification of phonograph records.

One of the things it has accomplished is to do away with the profession of making off-stage noises. It was once a part of the theatrical art, and casting offices were often called upon for extras who never appeared before the footlights, but who lingered in the wings, simulating angry mobs, cheering throngs applauding audiences, etc. But now that is all done by phonograph.

When a play calls for incidental sound effects, the director takes his cast to a recording laboratory, and before the microphones they yell, hiss, applaud and do whatever else is necessary. It's done once, and that part of the work is all over for the run of the show. A recording costs $75 and for that price a dozen discs are supplied, in case the play should run a year or two, or in case the property man breaks a few. Ordinary electric phonographs are placed under the stage—two for each play, in case the tubes of one blow out.

Fortune's Fool

Fate can be kind. Not long ago a friend of mine was given a tip on the stock market by a man upon whose judgment he placed blind reliance. "Buy Television," said this man. So my friend sold everything he could turn into cash, gathered up his bank account, and went to the broker. He looked over the list. He couldn't find Television anywhere, but saw Telautograph. "That must be it," he decided and he plunged on margin.

Well, Telautograph is the automatic writing machine you find in hotels, and has nothing whatever to do with television apparatus. But the stock took a comfortable rise, and my fate tempting friend profited handsomely.

Stage Will Live

Lee and J. J. Shubert, who control upwards of 100 theaters and have booking arrangements in 350 or so more, have finally announced that they don't consider talking pictures a menace to the stage. In all the discussion pro and con, their opinion must carry great weight, for they are backing it with the announcement of an elaborate stage program for the next season. "The talkies," says J. J. Shubert, "have created a new class of theatergoers, whose interest has been revived in the play interpreted by flesh-and-blood actors."

The one, two and three night stand houses, says he, are showing a marked preference for legitimate attractions. One of those whom the Shuberts will bring to the stage next fall is William Farnum, who, so far as I know has long been absent from both stage and screen.

The Open Spaces

One thing I enjoy when I wander into the suburbs is being able to run for a train. Far be it from me to poke fun at suburbanites for their traditional morning dashes. I envy them. One cannot walk at a brisk pace anywhere in the city. A building is going up, and the sidewalk is cut off by a pile of brick or sand. A street is being repaired, and the debris is neatly placed on the sidewalk. An electric sign is being put up, and there are ladders to detour, or a crowd is clogging the Broadway footpaths, reveling in the cold air emanating from a refrigerated movie theater. Or traffic lights are set in the wrong direction. Or a group is watching a chauffeur change a tire.

The Once Over

By H. I. PHILLIPS

"Heat Prostrations"

"How's that heat-wave story coming?" barked the city editor.

"I'm getting it together," said the weather reporter.

PHILLIPS

"How many heat victims?" demanded the city ed.

"None so far," returned the reporter, timidly.

"What?" roared the editor. "Weather like this and no first page heat prostrations?"

"Not even a second page prostration," mumbled the reporter.

"What kind of a newspaper do you think we're getting out?" roared the city editor. "On a warm day when there is lots of news there should be plenty of heat prostrations. On a warm day when there is little news there must be heat prostrations. Call the hospitals and police stations."

"I've called them all, sir, and they have no heat victims so far."

"Is that so? Well you dig up some heat victims or get through. It serves me right for letting Willetts go. Willetts was a real newspaper man. I never had to ask him for heat prostrations. He always got more than I could use."

"I'm sorry, sir."

"Haven't the hospitals or police stations had any cases today?"

"General hospital reports Dennis J. Hafey, 43, white, married, picked up in main street with a broken leg."

"Well, that's probably a heat case. A man doesn't break his leg in weather like this from falling on a slippery sidewalk, does he?"

"No, but—"

"Make Hafey a heat victim. Say he was hurrying to catch a train to join the exodus to the country when he suffered a sunstroke and fell. Any other hospital stuff?"

"At St. Luke's there is a Bernard F. Schlossheimer, 36, white, single, a paper hanger, hit by a falling girder."

"Heat victim, obviously. Feeling a slight sunstroke, he sat down on the curb directly under a derrick and, though he heard the warning shouts of workers and pedestrians, was unable to move from the path of the falling girder. That's two victims. Any other reports?"

"Prentice G. Hassenpfeffer, 48, white, widower, retired, was received at Central hospital during the night."

"What happened to him?"

"He was run over by a taxicab. The driver says he was lying in the street after having been thrown out of a speak-easy. The case is complicated by the fact he had a bullet wound in his neck."

"Well, indirectly the heat was to blame," insisted the city editor. "Unable to get relief from the humidity, he probably went to the speak-easy for a glass of beer. By the time he had climbed the three flights of stairs he had become crazy from the heat and began making eyes at the hostess. The hostess, always extremely irritable in hot weather, resented it. She lost her head and shot him. He staggered downstairs into the street, clutching a green scarf he had torn from the hostess. The taxicab driver, his senses dulled by a strenuous day of driving citizens to public baths, mistook him for a go signal and smacked him bowlegged. Where's your imagination?"

"I dunno," confessed the reporter. "I must have left it in my other suit."

Popular Articles Free for Asking

It has been estimated that about 12,000,000 read my syndicated health articles each day. Many letters come from these readers asking for advice or for copies of the newspaper articles or radio lectures. It is my policy to have the most popular of these mimeographed for free distribution. Naturally, more inquiries come for some subjects than for others, and I have selected a short list of the most popular articles.

As the cost of this service mounts into several thousand dollars each month, I would suggest that you send me a large, self-addressed stamped envelope if you desire one article, and if you desire more, you simply enclose a two-cent stamp for each additional article desired. If you desire any of these articles, simply clip the list out and check the articles desired and mail it to me in care of The Daily Times and the articles will be sent you just as soon as possible.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Hives

Question—S. H. K. writes: "I seem to be in good health but every once in a while I have a siege of hives. Will you please tell me the cause?"

Answer—Hives are cause from chronic hyperacidity of the stomach which is brought to an acute stage by the use of some especially irritating food, or bad mixtures of even good food.

Milk of Magnesia

Question—Q. W. writes: "Milk of magnesia is sold in enormous quantities and effectively advertised. It seems to be a good thing in a general way, and since the purpose is to neutralize acidity, and it seems to succeed in doing so, I have been wondering what would be the objection to using it regularly."

Answer—There is no doubt but what milk of magnesia makes an excellent anti-acid to use in the relief of hyperacidity of the stomach. I have known of many elderly people who claim to have used magnesia, soda or some other alkaline all of their lives and seem not to have suffered any bad effects. The main thing to remember if you have hyperacidity is to change your eating habits so as to correct this condition by removing the cause which is mostly in harmonious food combinations.

Throwing Away Glasses

Question—Mrs. J. S. writes: "I have been wearing glasses for 20 years. I am now 36 years old. My eyes are getting weaker all the time. Do you think it due to wearing glasses so long? And do you think that by discarding them for a period and trying a special diet I could make my eyes strong and clear again?"

Answer—Properly fitted glasses are simply scientifically made magnifying glasses with which you can see more clearly. There is no way by which their use can make the eyes weaker. What you need to do is to have some new glasses to fit your eyes at the present time. A correct diet will always assist in clearing up the vision and increasing the general strength of your body, will also increase the strength of your eye muscles. I will be glad to send you an article I have written on eye exercises, but you should also go to an optometrist and have your eyes carefully examined and fitted for new glasses.

SPUDDERS DIVIDE FREE-HITTING DOUBLE BILL WITH EXPORTERS

MANY HOMERS MARK GAMES

Seven Circuit Drives Clouted in Day's Pastiming

By LARRY DAILEY
Record News Sports Editor

Those who say the Texas league ball isn't lively enough should have seen yesterday's double-header here which the Spudders and Exporters divided. Wichita Falls won the opener, 8 to 5 and Beaumont took the nightcap, 12 to 10.

Turgeon, Sullivan, Stapleton, Fitzgerald, Crouch, Akers and Kelly hit home runs in the day's pastiming.

The split threw the Spudders into third place, a game behind the leading Dallas Steers and one point back of Shreveport, though nominally Wichita Falls is even with the Sports.

Bud's Homer Scores Two

Milt Steengrafe chucked good ball in the first game except for two innings, when the hostiles made seven of their total of 10 hits count for all their runs. They scored three in the sixth and two in the eighth.

Burns gave up 11 blows, the home runs accounting for five tallies, Stapleton smashing his circuit drive with two comrades on the base lines.

The Spudders pounded their old sidekick, Fred Stiely, off the hill in the fourth round of the nightcap and batted Tink Riviere, the newlywed, so lustily that he was relieved by Tom Estell, another old pal of our gang. Wichita Falls made 13 hits in the contest curtailed to seven rounds by agreement.

The Jinx With Cy

Cy Smith, who seems to have acquired the unenviable mantle as Spudder hard luck pitcher, succeeding George Payne to that doubtful honor, never had a chance. Three errors in one frame, one his own and another boot by a teammate had devastating effect. Cy was relieved by Hal Wiltse in the sixth round who was greeted by a home run by Big Bill Kelly with two runners aboard. That was the decisive punch as the Exporters tallied seven runs in that sixth off Cy and Hal, which proved sufficient to win.

Benton, Turgeon, Fitzgerald, Sullivan, Philbin, Kelly and Akers were the heavy clouters for the day and Lapan and Boggess hit hard in the games they worked.

Turgeon, Benton, Swanson, Stapleton and Fitzgerald showed some glittering fielding.

Spuds Score in First

The Exporters went out in order in the first inning of the opener and the Spudders tallied one, fast fielding probably preventing further scoring. Benton led off by slashing the left field wall for two bases. Turgeon was safe on Akers' fumble, Benton holding second. Fitzgerald's hit to Akers filled the bases. Bennett struck out. Lamb made a long running snatch of Stapleton's drive, Benton scoring. Kelly grabbed Hermann's foul near the Beaumont dugout.

Kelly and Lapan singled in the second but the former was thrown out stealing and Pete was left on base.

Steengrafe turned back the hostiles one-two-three in the third, aided by Fitzgerald's running catch of Burns' short lift.

Turgeon smote his homer in the third, a terrific drive that cleared the left-center wall with yards to spare.

Swanson started the fourth with a hit to left but was out stealing. Philbin hit past Turgeon with two out and stole second but Bennett went back for Kelly's lift.

Sully Hits His Homer

Sullivan whaled his circuit blow, another mighty smash that cleared the centerfield wall near the flagpole. Lapan crashed his second hit, this a two-base blow to left-center, Benton singled to center, his second hit, scoring Lapan.

Akers walked in the fifth but one was out and he was left.

Red Bennett, who may look bad at times on any pitching, as he did the first two times up when he struck out, is apt to hit the same sort of chucking at any time, as witness his batting average. And which he did for a single in the fifth, but he was out stealing on a close decision, so questionable indeed that Skipper Galloway protested so vociferously that he was banished from the park by Umpire Ziggy Sears.

The Exporters got into the ball game in the sixth by tallying three runs to trail 4-3. Burns was safe on a hit to second and advanced to third on Swanson's single to right. Lyman Lamb singled sharply to left, scoring Burns; Swanson stopping at second. Philbin forced Lamb, Hermann and Turgeon making a fast play, Swanson going to third. Kelly doubled to left, scoring Swanson and Philbin. Steenie tightened up then and fanned Easterling, the dangerous fencebuster, and caused Akers to ground to Benton, thanks to a sensational stop by Stapleton of Rabbit's wide and low throw.

The Spudders were retired in order in their sixth on four pitched balls.

Beaumont batters failed to get on in the seventh.

Galloways Score Four

Wichita Falls tallied four after two were out. Turgeon doubled to left and scored on Fitzgerald's two-base smack to right. Bennett strolled. Stapleton's home run, another terrific smash over the center field palisade, scored Fitzgerald and Bennett ahead of him.

The Exporters also counted two in the eighth after two were gone. Philbin singled to right and scored when Kelly battered the center field fence for two bases. It was Kelly's third hit. Easterling walked. Akers singled to left, scoring Kelly and advancing Easterling to second. Hermann knocked down Petrie's grounder back of third to force Easterling at the hot corner, which if you don't know, is third base.

Petrie's catch of Steengrafe's liner helped Burns turn back the Spudders in order.

Benton threw over Stapleton on Robertson's grounder and the Beaumont boss ambled to second to start the ninth. Hanson batted for Burns and rolled to Steengrafe, Robbie holding second. Turgeon made a sparkling stop of Swanson's grounder to his left, Robertson moving to third. Lamb popped to Benton.

Fans Give Jim Ovation

Galloway was accorded a rousing ovation as he returned to the dugout shortly before the second game.

Philbin singled to center in the first round of the nightcap but two were out and Stapleton was under Kelly's foul.

Benton beat out a bunt to Philbin and continued to second on a wild throw. He went to third on a wild pitch and tallied when Turgeon bashed the center field boards for two bases. Fitzgerald got into the home run parade by hammering over the left field barrier, scoring Turgeon ahead. Stapleton singled to left after Bennett flied to Lamb, and stole second. Hermann fouled nine before striking out. Sullivan singled to left, scoring Stapleton.

Easterling singled to center and rode home on Akers' home run clout over the left field wall in the second. Hermann took Petrie's lift. Boggess walked. Fast fielding helped Cy then, Turgeon going far into right for Stiely's hoist and Stapleton making a one-hand snatch and putout on Swanson's bounder.

Spudders failed to get on base in their half.

Duke and Jack Crash

Hermann took Lamb's foul and Philbin's pop, although Crouch crashed into Duke, which is the moniker of our new third baseman, and Sullivan pulled down Kelly's drive in the third.

Bennett walked after two were out and stole second but got no farther.

Three errors let the Exporters score two in the fourth to tie the count at 4-all. Easterling led off by slashing a hit off Hermann's glove. Hermann fumbled Akers' grounder. Smith booted Petrie's bunt, filling the bases. Petrie got a sacrifice and Smith an error. Bennett backed up for Boggess' lift and then dropped the ball, Easterling tallying. Stiely forced Boggess, Turgeon to Benton, Akers scoring. Turgeon captured Swanson's scorching liner and doubled Stiely at first.

The Spudders scored two in their fourth and drove Stiely off the hill. Hermann doubled to center, advanced to third on Sullivan's sacrifice to Philbin and scored on Crouch's homer over the left-center fence. Riviere replaced Stiely and Smith and Benton singled but they were left.

The Exporters scored in the fifth. Lamb strolled and went to third on Philbin's single to right. Smith tossed out Kelly, Philbin going to second. Easterling hoisted to Sullivan, scoring Lamb. Turgeon threw out Akers.

Hermann walked with two out, stole second and romped home on Sullivan's two-base smack to the far left field foul line.

Exporters Score Seven

Loose defensive work by Hermann and some base hits let the Exporters tally seven in the sixth and caused Smith to be relieved by Wiltse. Petrie and Boggess scratched hits to Hermann. Riviere bunted to Smith, and Hermann let Cy's throw get away, Petrie and Boggess scoring. Turgeon threw out Swanson. Lamb singled to right, scoring Riviere. Philbin hit to left. Wiltse replaced Smith. Kelly's homer over left field fence scored Lamb and Philbin ahead. Easterling popped to Hermann. Akers singled to left and stole second and third. Petrie walked. Petrie and Akers worked the double steal, Akers scoring.

Benton started the Spud half with a base on balls and went to third on Turgeon's single to center. Fitzgerald walked, filling the bases. Estell went to the mound. Bennett walked, Benton ambling home. Stapleton struck out. Hermann's sharp drive to Easterling scored Turgeon. Sullivan delivered again, his third hit of the game scoring Fitzgerald and advancing Bennett to third. Crouch hoisted to Petrie.

Lapan batted for Wiltse and rolled to Estell. Benton doubled to center, his third hit of the game. Benton was out at third on Turgeon's grounder to Akers. Akers went into left for Fitzgerald's fly.

The third and final of the series and last game here for three days will be played today by the Spudders with Beaumont.

Our men open a two-day stand tomorrow at Shreveport, play a July 4 double bill Thursday at Fort Worth and are back home Friday.

Just to be Mean

Myers had a bad day at the office which made him cross and irritable, so he decided to go home early. A friend on the street accosted him.

"Where are you going Myers?"

And Myers savagely replied:

"I'm going home, and if my dinner's not ready I'll raise old Nick, and if it is, I won't eat it."—Answers.

BOBBY SHOOTS 3 UNDER PAR

Atlantan Wins Most Decisive Playoff Golf History

By ALAN J. GOULD

MAMARONECK, N. Y., June 30. (AP)—Bobby Jones, once again the most relentless golfing machine the game ever has known, ground out his third open championship of the United States today with Al Espinosa as his victim in the most lop-sided title playoff of all time.

The Atlanta amateur marvel crushed the veteran Chicago professional by the record-smashing margin of 23 strokes, in the 36-hole playoff of tie resulting from their twin scores of 294 yesterday at the end of the regulation 72 holes.

Jones delivered a knockout wallop to par figures as well as to the Spaniard by shooting successive rounds of 72, even par, and then 69, three under par, for a total of 141. Espinosa straggled behind with 84-80—164. The Chicagoan's game blew up on the last nine holes of the morning round with a detonation that stunned a gallery of close to 5,000, and made the final round nothing more than a workout for the South's favorite. It was all an anti-climax after yesterday's sensational finish.

Al Plays Weird Game

Espinosa beat himself with one of the weirdest exhibitions in the history of big league golf but it is doubtful whether any player in the world could have matched strokes today with the par-cracking Georgian. As if to redeem himself in the eyes of the thousands who saw him allow the championship to slip almost from his grasp yesterday with his worst round of the tournament, Bobby, with the exception of only four or five holes, played as close to perfect golf as can be produced.

It started out brightly this morning like a battle as Espinosa, taking advantage of Jones' shaky gateway, jumped into a lead of two strokes on the first hole and again on the third. But Bobby did not take long to settle down. He drew level at the sixth, went into the lead on the seventh and never was in danger of losing the lead after that.

At the first turn Jones was two strokes in front and he boosted this to a 12-stroke margin at the end of the first 18 holes as Espinosa cracked wide open.

Jones Doubles Margin

Al, as courageous as they come but badly off, tried desperately to stem the overwhelming tide without avail. If Espinosa made a great shot, as he often did, Jones made a greater one and so, through the remaining 18 holes, Jones nearly doubled his margin of victory, with a round that duplicated the best he has ever registered in American open championship play.

Jones now has won this national championship classic for the third time and, oddly enough, at three-year intervals. Only one man, the late Willie Anderson, has won it oftener. Willie turned in four victories in 1901-3-4-5 but even that achievement is dwarfed by the marvelous record the Georgian now has compiled.

Bobby's first victory, in 1923, was gained by beating Bobby Cruickshank in a playoff at Inwood and his second in 1926 without the trouble of any extra competition. This was his fourth play off the conquest of Espinosa gives him an even break with the professional talent, which stopped Jones in 1925 with Willie MacFarlane and last year with Johnny Farrell.

DIMOCKS WIN, 40-2

Dimock Plumbers defeated Cleaners and Dyers, 40 to 2 yesterday on the Jalonic street diamond. Dick Belcher hit a lone home run. Stovall hurled for the winners.

Rube Stuart, president of the Beaumont Exporters, accompanying his club here on their present stand, is a member extraordinary of the Order-of-Good-Optimists. Owner of a team that for years has occupied a submerged place in the Texas league, Stuart built a handsome, modern and costly stadium that is a great credit to baseball and his city. No one but a real sportsman, with firm belief in baseball and his town, could invest so heavily in a playing edifice and players as has Stuart.

Claude Robertson has a dangerous ball club, still within hailing distance of the top, and a winning streak by the Exporters, which may materialize at any time, would put them up there.

Magnates of the Texas league will meet tomorrow at Dallas in a conference that may be of great importance. The matter of the split season is to be settled, for one thing. Owner Stuart is somewhat in favor of a division of the schedule, but it is doubtful if a majority vote, which would be necessary to bring about a split, can be mustered by the proponents of the division.

Personally, I don't think it means much difference to the league or Wichita Falls. The Spudders will be up there fighting for the flag, either way. A split might be a good thing for the league, inasmuch as it would give the four clubs in the second division a fresh start. If it would help baseball and the Texas league, by all means split the schedule.

◇ ◇ ◇

The moguls also will consider the matter of the baseball used in the league, which some managers have charged is of inferior quality to the pellet of similar manufacture employed by a major league. It also is likely that the matter of a leave of absence for J. Doak Roberts, ailing president of the circuit, will be taken up, and William B. Ruggles, league statistician or J. Alvin Gardner, Wichita Falls president, may be made temporary head of the loop.

Bill and Molla Win

Senorita Lili de Alvarez, in her quintessence of Castillian perfection, defeated Miss Elizabeth Ryan of the United States, after a hard struggle, the second set of which was sent to extra games. The scores were 6-4, 8-6. It was a third round match.

The Spanish Miss returned Miss Ryan's chop strokes with dazzling half-volleys, and the second-set battle was stubborn and hard fought all the way. Lili's rally after games had gone to six-all sounded the knell of the American girl's last stand.

Barber Shop Littered in Old Days With Celebrities' Hair Still Open

DAVENPORT, Iowa, June 30. (AP)—Sebastian Herd's barber shop, which he opened here early in the cast-iron deer and varnished mustache era, has passed its fifty-fifth milestone.

Its fame has gone far and in its years—all in the same location—nearly every one of importance except Mother India has been shaved there. And who knows about that, now that its doors are opened to women?

Actors, prize fighters, a president, an admiral or so, and Gen. Tom Thumb, famous midget, all have been tonsored there.

Whims of many of its celebrated customers are recalled by Fred Herd, son of the founder, and present proprietor.

"Now there was Buffalo Bill," recalls Herd. "He was a great sport, was Colonel Cody, with his long hair. He always came here in the fall with his Indians and cowboys to start their theater tour."

Actors, touring the midwest, demanded careful grooming. To the shop came Joseph Jefferson, John Drew, James K. Hackett, Maurice Barrymore, Frank Mayo, William Faversham and the Salvinis, Italian tragedians.

Booth and Barrett were there—Booth was very reticent while Barrett was "loquacious and demanded a close shave before every performance." Herman, the magician, wore a mustache and an imperial and was "fastidious and fascinating."

"Bob Fitzsimmons always drew a crowd at the shop windows, as did 'Gentleman Jim' Corbett," said Herd.

"Corbett has the longest face and neck of any man I've ever shaved."

John L. Sullivan was there many times, as was Paddy Ryan. Woodrow Wilson, during his first campaign, and William Jennings Bryan, were patrons. Bourke Cochrane of Tammany hall and Admiral 'Fightin' Bob Evans were others.

"We're just getting used to women," says Herd. "In the old days father had to go outside and bring the youngsters in because their mothers wouldn't come in the shop."

CLASS PLEDGES HOOVER AID

Highland Heights Endorses Law Enforcement Work

Commemorating Independence week with an address on law enforcement, Judge B. D. Sartin, teacher of the men's Bible class of the Highland Heights Christian church, declared that the church people of the nation should be the first to pledge their support to Herbert Hoover "in the great program to make America law-abiding and law-respecting."

At the conclusion of the class hour, the following resolution was adopted for dispatch to the president:

"Resolved that the men's Bible class of the Highland Heights Christian church, Wichita Falls, Texas, in class assembled, this Sunday morning, June 30, 1929, pledge to the president of these United States, and to all officers of the law in general, our loyal and wholehearted support and cooperation in the enforcement of the laws of our country and nation.

"W. A. Franklin, president."

Judge Sartin's address in part follows:

"The lesson of today is one of review. It is a review of the prophets and kings of Judah's decline. The subject is, 'God's True Prophets.' For the past three months we have studied the conditions and process that brought about the decline and humiliation of the once proud and glorious empire of Solomon, known and famous throughout the world, leading up to the tragic and bitter experiences of King Zedekiah. We found that sin and selfishness, dissipation and disobedience, or in short, forgetting God, caused the decline and downfall of Judah.

"The time through which Judah passed to her ruin was a comparative short time. In all about 169 years, a trifle longer than the life of our own republic, and many of the same destructive factors that brought about ruin for Judah are now apparent in the life of the United States. As a nation we may see in the bitter experiences of Judah a blazing object lesson and from her mistakes direct our own course in the right direction. Righteousness that exalted a nation in the time of Judah will exalt the life of this republic today.

"This reminds me that today has been set apart by the churches of America to observe and to urge respect for law, and to pledge the president of this nation, and those in authority, their support and backing to a program of law enforcement. I think it is fitting and proper that the church people of the nation should be the first people of the nation to pledge their support in the great program of our president to make America law abiding and respecting.

"America, the most highly trained and educated of nations, has been indicted as the most lawless nation in the civilized world. In spite of her great universities and colleges, her crimes and disrespect for law are shocking to the entire world. This same charge might have been made against Judah before her downfall but it offers no consolation to our own national safety. In studying the rocks that meant disaster for Judah, we may find the rocks that would destroy our nation and thus escape a similar fate.

"Idolatry was the chief sin of Judah, and it is the chief sin today. The first commandment was an injunction against this evil. 'Ye shall have no other gods before me' is a commandment as apropo today as three thousand years ago. Sin and dissipation and all kinds of lasciviousness were rampant in those days and we can find this taint in the fabric and wool of our own national life. Disobedience to the law of God meant ruin for Judah and will mean ruin today.

"Isaiah and Jeremiah, the two leading and major prophets of the Old Testament, cried out against the evils of their day and urged obedience to the law of Jehovah. Their great sermons have come down to us with as much meaning and directness as if uttered to the people of this day and generation. We need today as never before men in the pulpits of the churches of America with their lips touched with live coals from the altar. We need flaming evangels to declare the word of God and to warn the nation of the dangers of this hour that threaten the very life of our country.

"God speaks to us today through the Bible as he spoke to the people then through the prophets, but our nation and other nations are in a measure neglecting and ignoring His counsel and warnings as Judah did in the days of Isaiah and Jeremiah. We need to rediscover our Bibles as Hilkiah did in those days, and our nation needs to return to a conscientious study and consideration of its teachings to the end that it might avoid the fate of Judah and that law and order and the glorious principles of justice and liberty, proclaimed by our forefathers, might not perish from the earth.

"But we are not pessimistic and through all the dangers and conditions that now confront us, I still believe that we as a nation are fundamentally sound and will meet the problems that confront us. I believe this as I believe that the people of this country will meet the challenge of those forces that would destroy the law of the republic, as they met the challenge of those forces that would destroy democracy at the battle of Verdun, and will rally to public officials of the country in their great battle to put to rout the forces of lawlessness. But to do this we must have respect for law, at home, in the schools, in the pulpit, and in the courts of justice. In short, as Mr. Lincoln said, 'let it be the political religion of the nation'."

"Beats Anything I've Ever Seen"

Wichita Carpenter Gains on Orgatone and His Stomach Trouble Has Disappeared

"Two bottles of Orgatone got me over one of the worst cases of stomach trouble a man ever had, and I gained in weight besides," said W. E. Carrington, a well-known carpenter, living at 2165 Avenue G, Wichita Falls, Texas.

"I've had stomach trouble off and on for several years which finally got me in a general run-down condition. After eating gas would form and I would sometimes be in misery for hours. My suffering was so great that I could hardly bear it at times, and it seemed like the more I suffered the worse I got and although I tried doctor after doctor and everything I could hear of, nothing helped me until I got hold of this Orgatone.

"It just beats anything I ever saw how Orgatone begun to relieve my troubles, right from the start. Almost every symptom of stomach trouble has gone, my appetite is fine, I sleep like a log and have gained in weight and strength. My own experience proves to me that Orgatone is one of the greatest medicines ever made and I recommend it to others."

Genuine Orgatone is not a so-called secret or patent remedy but a new scientific preparation and is sold in Wichita Falls, exclusively by the Allison's Drug Store, under the personal direction of a special Orgatone representative.—Adv.

Poetic Inventor Learns for Himself What Parachute Jumpers Think About

Japanese, Who Cooks When He's Not Devising Things or Writing Songs, Takes 'Fatal Leap' from Bridge

By SAM LOVE

NEW YORK, June 30. (UP)—Stinich Misumi, the Hon. Steve Brody of Japan, has made his jump but the next time he will use a parachute with longer ropes.

Misumi's quite natural impulse to test a parachute of his own invention before marketing it was responsible for electrifying waterfront loungers near Manhattan bridge and for revealing to Misumi its sole defect, i. e., that he had miscalculated the length of the shrouds.

Alive and dry outside, although still gurgling at intervals from the inside, Misumi told in Bellevue hospital tonight how he, a man passionately in love with life, came to step into space from a bridge two feet higher than the Brooklyn span, from which the Hon. Brody walked into immortality several years ago.

Realizes Miscalculation

Misumi was inclined to pass lightly over the strange sight which sent tugs and police hurrying to beneath Manhattan bridge at 8 a. m. This sight was a man, balancing a gigantic bundle on his back, who climbed the railing of the footway on Manhattan bridge, swayed a moment under the load and then stepped confidently out into thin air.

According to Misumi, who is a cook when he is not inventing or writing poetry and who speaks understandable English after only two years in this country, he realized that he had made a miscalculation as soon as he left the bridge.

"Yes," he said, "ropes should have been longer. But however I saw with flash they had achieved haywire. I was continuing rapidly downward. I must act quickly. Everything was up to me. I am undisturbed.

"No longer could I go back to bridge and parachute could under no circumstances then be repaired. An inspiration cross my mind. I loosened the ropes and held the parachute with one hand until my feet touch the water. I have select a good, deep place of water. Then I let go and go straight downward into river.

"Then my head go up above water and I look for place to land. The waterfront is full of docks with steep sides. There is no place for me to land and I am prepare to swim quite far. I am not worried. In Japan I have swim in five-mile swimming races."

Denies Drowning

But just as Misumi was heading out to sea with the remnants of his invention under his arm, he encountered long words and American efficiency. A tug filled with shouting, gesticulating policemen and seamen drew alongside and he was excitedly pulled aboard.

His rescuers told him he was nearly drowned. He denied it. They rolled him over a cask and East river spurted out. Under police escort he was taken to Bellevue hospital.

There he was put to bed, although doctors could find nothing wrong with him. He was entered, after some debate, as an "immersion" patient. Misumi did not dispute this.

Misumi explained that he had chosen the 135-foot Manhattan bridge to test his parachute after three times ascending the Woolworth tower and always finding people below.

"I did not wish to hurt them with a mistake," he said.

In his hotel room in Houston street, a note was found as follows:

"To hotel master: I am going to jump East river from Manhattan bridge, with my own thing. 1929-6-29. Room 116. S. Misumi."

Along with several poems found in his pockets by the rescuers was a cartoon, by Clare Briggs, and entitled "Wonder what a parachute jumper thinks about."

MIDWEST DAIRY TOUR PLANNED

Waco Promotes Interest in Educational Trip

Special to The Record News.

STAMFORD, Texas, June 30.—A number of West Texans will no doubt be numbered among those who will take a dairy study trip through Missouri, Iowa, Wisconsin and Illinois soon which is to be sponsored by the Waco Chamber of Commerce.

W. V. Crawford, secretary of the Waco organization, is soliciting farmers, merchants and bankers interested in furthering the development of dairying in their localities to take the trip, and has invited members of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce staff to join the party and lend their influence towards getting the attendance of other West Texans. The trip has the endorsement of the Borden company and the agricultural agencies of the state, which will have representatives on the tour. Points will be visited where dairying is successfully conducted on both a large and a small scale. While there will be visits to nationally known and perfectly equipped dairy farms, there are also going to be visits to farms on which there are small herds and where dairying on a small scale is conducted profitably and successfully. The man with a few cows or no cows at all who wishes to engage in milk production on a small scale will receive benefit from this tour just the same as the man who is planning a more extensive and elaborate dairy development, according to Mr. Crawford.

While the Waco Chamber of Commerce is taking the initiative in promoting the tour, it is to be in fact a Texas educational tour, and all Texas points interested in the intensive development of dairying are invited to join in the enterprise. Special rates for the trip have been made with the railroads, so the trip may be made by anyone interested at a very moderate cost.

The round trip railroad fare, including Pullman lower berth, will be $75.95 and the schedule provides for departure from Waco at 3:10 p. m. Sunday, Aug. 11, and arrival on the return 11:50 a. m. Sunday, Aug. 18.

JUNE WEATHER ABOUT NORMAL

Nothing Extraordinary Is Shown in Statistics

The month of June just closed had little to offer in climatic features in comparison with the same period of 1928. In fact, the only unusual item on the weather report for June, 1929, merely indicated its staid normalcy. That was the equal division of the month into 10-day periods of sunshine, partly cloudy, and cloudy.

June of last year not only sent the thermometer to the dizzy height of 108 degrees on the 28th day of the month, three points higher than last month's greatest temperature, but turned in a grand total of 12 different thunderstorms. That the thunderstorms were not false alarms is seen in the reading of 6.28 inches of rainfall during that month. During the last 30 days only 1.54 inches of rain fell here. On the 27th of June last year, the day before the record heat was registered, a heavy hail storm visited this community.

The comparison as compiled by the Texas Electric Service company's weather bureau follows:

Mean maximum temperature, June, 1929, 95.47; last year 93.73.
Mean minimum, June, 1929, 70.43; last year 69.27.
Mean temperature, June, 1929, 82.95; last year 81.50.
Maximum, (22), June, 1929, 105.; last year 108 (28).
Greatest daily range (14), June, 1929, 33.; last year 33 (6).
Precipitation for month, June, 1929, 1.54; last year 6.28.
Greatest precipitation 24 hours (3), June, 1929, 1.15; last year 2.65 (10).
Number days more than .01 inches of rainfall, June, 1929, 3; last year 11.
Clear days, June, 1929, 10; last year 8.
Partly cloudy days, June, 1929, 10; last year 7.
Cloudy days, June, 1929, 10; last year 15.
Thunderstorms, June, 1929, (5-6-7-12), 4; last year 12 (4-9-10-11-13-15-18-21-26-27-28-30).
Hail, June, 1929, 0; last year 1 (27).

One of Two Women in Auto Crash Uses Some Sharp Words
