Israeli army toughens west Beirut conditions

By The Associated Press

Israeli artillery and warships blasted beleaguered Palestinian guerrillas in Moslem west Beirut from three sides today, and Lebanon's state radio said shells slammed into residential neighborhoods, causing heavy casualties.

Israeli tanks and artillery pounded the city from the hills south and east of the city while naval guns fired into the Palestinian enclaves from the west.

Guerrillas fired guns in the air to cordon off large sections of the Lebanese capital's Corniche Mazraa Boulevard, where several buildings were reported hit. Fire engines and ambulances raced into stricken neighborhoods abutting the mid-city highway and clouds of thick smoke spread over the area.

The Palestine Liberation Organization said there were "many Palestinian casualties." Lebanese police said an initial count showed an additional 10 Lebanese civilians were killed and 77 wounded in downtown residential districts.

It was not clear whether the latest blitz signaled an all-out assault on Palestine Liberation Organization bunkers in a 10-square-mile area of mostly Moslem west Beirut, all that remains under the guerrilla group's control since Israel's June 6 invasion.

The PLO said its teeming camps on the southern flank of the Lebanese capital were the target of "indiscriminate bombardment" and claimed PLO-run hospitals sustained direct hits as the nightlong duels flared without letup past midday.

The state radio said Beirut's paralyzed airport and nearby PLO and Syrian positions were blasted by Israeli military and naval shelling and advised west Beirut's 600,000 inhabitants to seek shelter in basements.

In Tel Aviv, the military command reported Israeli gunners exchanged artillery fire with PLO guerrillas in Beirut's southern slums shortly after midnight, but gave no details. Israel radio reported guerrillas earlier rocketed Israeli positions near Beirut airport, south of the Lebanese capital.

Earlier, Lebanese sources said Christian and PLO gunners appeared to be shelling each other without Israeli involvement along battle lines around southern Beirut's sprawling Burj el Barajneh refugee slums.

An artillery shell slammed into a building near the foreign press center in west Beirut, wounding at least 11 people and igniting several fires in a bombardment blamed on Israeli gunners.

War correspondents said one shell exploded half a block from the Soviet Embassy, and another tore into an apartment building next to The Associated Press bureau and half a block from the international press center in west Beirut's Commodore Hotel. None of the more than 200 foreign journalists, photographers and television crews covering the Lebanese crisis was injured.

Lebanon's state and privately owned radio stations said the shell that exploded near the Commodore was one of several that hit buildings around the nerve center of the PLO. They said the blitz was one of the heaviest since invading Israeli forces and their Lebanese Christian allies laid siege to the PLO enclaves in the capital eight days ago.

PLO chief Yasser Arafat and his 6,000 guerrilla fighters trapped in the west Beirut enclaves have promised a bloody last stand if Israeli or Christian forces attack. Hundreds of panicky west Beirut residents have fled the area, seeking shelter in Christian east Beirut and Israeli-held southern Lebanon.

The Israelis have pledged to honor a cease-fire with the PLO unless directly fired upon. On Sunday, sporadic shelling criss-crossed Beirut's airport. But Israel said it was keeping the truce, although it reported four soldiers were wounded in a skirmish 13 miles east of Beirut.

Israel announced the cease-fire on Friday to allow U.S. special envoy Philip C. Habib and leaders of Lebanon's political factions to discuss how to restore central government authority in the war-shattered nation, dominated since the 1975-76 Moslem-Christian civil war by the PLO and Syrian forces.

Syria has 30,000 troops in Lebanon under an Arab League mandate to police the civil war armistice.

Israel has said it will not withdraw until a strong central government emerges, the PLO disarms, the Syrians leave and the Jewish state is assured that Lebanon will no longer serve as a base for Palestinian attacks on Israel.

The old and the new Modern-day Israeli soldiers survey the destruction meted out on the ancient Roman ruins of Tyre, southern Lebanon, by their country's army.

Although no Lebanese cities suffered proportionally as much damage as the ruins, the columns withstood attack by the Israelis fairly well.

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin is met at Andrews Air Force Base by U.S. Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. upon his arrival in this country Sunday.

Begin plans meet wary U.S. stand

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is reacting warily to Israeli proposals for the United States to join an international peacekeeping force in Lebanon to protect Israel from terrorist attacks.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger also has voiced the administration's first specific criticism of Israel's June 6 invasion of Lebanon, saying thousands of innocent people have been killed and injured, and hundreds of thousands made homeless, by Israel's "unilateral resort to military force."

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin met at the White House today with President Reagan and was expected to push the idea of U.S. participation in an international force in Lebanon.

Begin, recovering from hip surgery, drove up to the White House in a black limousine and had to be helped from the car by aides.

Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. greeted him. An honor guard lined the driveway.

Then, in the Oval Office, an unsmiling Reagan posed for photographs with Begin. The president wore a brown suit. Begin wore a dark suit and carried a cane.

The two men chatted briefly. Begin asked the president about his recent summit talks in Europe. "It came out pretty good," Reagan was overheard to reply. "Five days of living in castles..."

Because Begin is here on what protocol officials call "a working visit," the arrival was low-keyed. There was no ceremony on the South Lawn and no exchange of speeches between himself and Reagan.

"If the United States is willing to participate (in a peacekeeping force), we shall accept it willingly," Begin said in an appearance Sunday on the CBS "Face the Nation" program. Israel's defense minister, Ariel Sharon, has said Israel wants a major U.S. presence in the force.

But Begin said if Washington won't participate, the force could be made up of units from other nations. His wants it to patrol a 25-mile strip of land in southern Lebanon north of the Israeli border to bar terrorist attacks across the border.

In his meeting with Reagan, Begin is expected to provide a personal explanation for Israel's invasion into Lebanon. Reagan is expected to seek from Begin a timetable for an Israeli withdrawal from Lebanon.

Weinberger said Sunday that Reagan was reviewing U.S. Mideast policy, including possible participation in a peacekeeping force in Lebanon.

Britain: Falklands takeover complete

By The Associated Press

Britain says its troops retook the frigid South Sandwich Islands, snaring 11 Argentine soldiers and completing Britain's recapture of its Falkland Islands colony.

The weekend assault on the Falklands' dependency came as Argentina's generals haggled over who will be the next president following their country's defeat in the undeclared South Atlantic war.

A British Defense Ministry statement today said troops captured 10 Argentine naval personnel and one airman on remote Thule Island, 1,200 miles southeast of the Falklands, near Antarctica. It said there were no Argentine civilians on the island. Argentina had said earlier there were 10 unarmed scientists at an Argentine naval weather station on the island.

Argentina's ruling military junta earlier accused Britain of "colonialist aggression" for an alleged helicopter attack on the station Saturday.

"Initial reports suggest that no fighting took place" when British forces reclaimed the island, London said today.

A communique said a British reconnaissance party landed Saturday and the Argentines surrendered the next day. Argentina had claimed British helicopters poured machine-gun fire on the weather station before landing troops.

London contends Argentines have been living without British permission on Thule since 1976. Argentina says Britain agreed in 1977 to let the weather station operate on the barren South Sandwich Island.

In Buenos Aires, meanwhile, a sharply divided junta, representing the three military services, resumed its closed-door debate today to choose a new president.

The army, navy and air force commanders met for about four hours Sunday but failed to reach agreement on a successor to former President Leopoldo Galteri, the army chief who was forced by his fellow generals to resign Thursday because of Argentina's humiliating loss in the Falklands.

The interior minister, Gen. Alfredo Saint Jean, has been acting chief of state — the junta never has referred to him as "president" — since Friday.

Argentine military sources and news media say the army, the largest and traditionally dominant military service, insists the next president be an army general. The navy and air force, dissatisfied with Galtieri's army-oriented handling of the war, prefer a neutral civilian, the sources said.

Foreign Minister Nicanor Costa Mendez, who gained recognition when he defended Argentine claims to the Falklands in the United Nations and the Organization of American States, is rumored to be the likely choice if a civilian gets the nod.

The first 4,200 of the 11,000 Argentine soldiers taken prisoner after the Argentine surrender at Stanley, the Falklands capital, arrived back on the mainland Saturday, and some complained they were cold, homesick, hungry and out-gunned during the 74-day war.

Others spoke of the heroism and sacrifice of their companions and of the ferocity of the enemy, especially Britain's Nepalese Gurkhas, who were said to have "killed their own wounded rather than leave them on the battlefield."

The British Defense Ministry said no Gurkhas were among Britain's 255 casualties. About 750 Argentines are believed to have died in the fighting.

Britain has said it will hold some 1,000 Argentine officers until the Argentine junta formally declares an end to hostilities in the South Atlantic.

In Luxembourg, meanwhile, the 10 European Common Market nations announced the lifting of the ban on imports from Argentina. Britain reluctantly went along after its partners pledged to reimpose the sanctions if fighting breaks out again. The action does not affect bans on arms sales imposed by individual countries.

PUC considering proposed Bell increase

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Midland Southwestern Bell customers may be paying $4.60 more per month in one-party phone service charges, free directory assistance calls may be reduced from 10 to three per month and a $6 service charge for returned checks may be initiated if a proposed rate increase, which would generate approximately $47.5 million in statewide revenues, an increase of 13.4 percent, is granted to Southwestern Bell by the Public Utilities Commission.

The proposed rate hike, stemming from underpriced local service charges which have been effective for years, was filed with the PUC in Austin this morning.

According to V. Jay Allen, spokesman for Southwestern Bell in Midland, the rate hike would increase prices of local services, which for years have been underpriced and, therefore, subsidized by revenues from other services.

"The local service is bearing the brunt as far as the rate increase goes," Allen said. "Because local service is underpriced, the long-distance revenues have been used to support local rates. That's why long distance is over-rated and we expect no increase in long distance (rates)."

According to a report issued by Southwestern Bell, the local rates have been underpriced since a national communications policy was set in the 1930s in an effort to provide phone service for as many citizens as possible.

More than 96 percent of the American population has residential phone service today.

By increasing local rates, Allen said, the company is trying to recover expenses from customers who directly benefit from services such as directory assistance.

"Very few people actually get billed for directory assistance," Allen said, "but all of the customers are paying for it."

If the proposal is approved, Midlanders would pay 25 cents per directory assistance call after the first three a month. Presently, customers are charged only after the first ten calls. In 1977, the PUC approved the ten-call limit, which originally was set at 20 cents per call.

The three-call proposal would increase Southwestern Bell revenues in Texas by about $18 million per year.

Also included in the rate increase proposal is a dishonorable check charge of $6. According to Allen, all Southwestern Bell customers have been paying for the time and money spent tracking down the bad checks of a few — and those few have increased.

About $1.3 million in revenue would result in the approval of the dishonorable check charge, Allen said.

Another change, aimed at increasing costs for customers who use specific services, rather than all customers, is the increase in one-time charges for services such as installation or rearrangement.

According to a report by Bell, "the company's position is that the cost of customer-requested work should be paid by the customer causing the expense rather than in rates charged the entire customer body."

"If you move a lot, you pay for it," Allen said. "If you don't, you won't."

Under the proposal, a residential customer who has modular jacks in place and uses a company PhoneCenter would pay $63.85 for connecting a new phone. A customer who has to have wiring and a jack installed and does not go through a PhoneCenter would be charged up to $95.50.

That increase, which is designed to

Senate committee facing unpopular money-raising

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Finance Committee, nine of its 20 members campaigning to keep their seats, is about to face a politician's nightmare: raising taxes during an election year.

The committee may begin work this week, with a goal of raising taxes by $20 billion for the 1983 budget and $95 billion over the next three years. A new analysis by staff experts shows just how difficult that job will be, especially reaching the 1983 target.

The staff of the Joint Committee on Taxation has compiled a report on dozens of suggestions for raising taxes and found that only two would produce more than $5 billion in 1983. And neither of those — repeal of the 1983 individual tax cut and imposition of a new $5-per-barrel tax on crude oil — is popular.

The demand that the Finance Committee raise taxes is part of the 1983 budget on which Senate and House negotiators reached agreement last week. That compromise, which allows spending $769.8 billion during the year and envisions a record deficit of $103.9 billion, will come before both houses for final action this week.

Also up for final action this week is an emergency spending bill with money for several agencies for the remainder of this budget year, which ends Sept. 30.

Britain's European allies lift Argentine economic sanctions

LUXEMBOURG (AP) — Britain's European allies, after lifting their economic sanctions against Argentina, agreed today to maintain their embargo on arms shipments to the Argentine government.

Foreign ministers representing Britain's nine partners in the European Economic Community issued a statement saying the arms ban would continue "for the time being."

Effective Wednesday, Argentina will be permitted to resume selling goods in EEC countries. The Common Market nations had blocked imports since April 17 to pressure Argentina to withdraw from the Falkland Islands, which its troops invaded April 2.

West Germany and France were in the forefront of efforts to lift the import ban as soon as British troops forced the Argentine garrison on the Falklands to surrender. The Argentines gave up last Monday.

The import ban, affecting trade worth about $1.7 billion a year, was lifted Sunday.

The ministers warned Argentina they would consider reimposing trade sanctions if hostilities broke out again in the South Atlantic.

They did not outline conditions under which weapons sales would be resumed, but a West German official said he doubted Common Market countries would sell arms to Argentina "for a very long time."

He said a pre-embargo contract under which Argentina was to buy two submarines from West Germany, "is now totally out of the question."

The import ban was adopted by all 10 EEC countries for a month and was later renewed for an indefinite period by all the countries except Ireland and Italy.

These two countries resumed imports of Argentine goods in May. British Foreign Secretary Francis Pym had asked the remaining seven countries to maintain the import ban until Argentina formally declared an end to hostilities in the South Atlantic. But he agreed to the end of the ban when the others said they would be willing to reimpose sanctions if fighting broke out again.

Southwestern Bell asks approval to 'reach out,' take $471,500,000

By KATHY BAKER

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Southwestern Bell today asked the state Public Utilities Commission to grant it a $471.5 million increase in residential and business rates.

The telephone company's last two rate requests, both of which were greatly reduced by the PUC, are still in court.

Bell Vice President Paul Roth told a news conference the increase would mean a $4.60 per month rise in residential rates "across the board."

Business rates would go up more in smaller towns, up to a $6.55 increase, he said. The smallest business rate increase is in Houston, Roth said, at $1.55.

Roth also said the company wants to reduce from 10 to three the number of free directory assistance calls a customer can make. Information calls over the limit cost 25 cents each.

Bell is making only a 9.25 percent return on its investment of the 11.79 percent return the PUC allows, Roth said in explaining the rate increase request. The company wants the rate of return allowance raised to 13.09 percent.

Bell "still can't close the gap" because residential rates are lower than Bell's cost of providing service, he said.

Long distance rates, which Ross said cost less than the revenues they produce, would remain unchanged.

Roth insisted the rate increase was not affected by AT&T's divestiture agreement with the U.S. Justice Department, reached last January.

The increase also would hike installation charges. The current minimum cost is $43.70. That would go up to $63.85, if a customer goes to a Bell service center, picks up a phone and goes home and plugs it in.

If the phone company comes out to install jacks, the cost jumps from $68.00 to $95.50 under the Bell proposal.

Roth said he expected the PUC to take up the proposal in a "six-to-seven week hearing" by the end of August or early September.

In mid-October, Roth said, he will decide whether to institute the higher rates under a bond pending the PUC's action.

Earlier this year, Bell had to refund $23 million to customers because the PUC did not grant the increase Bell had begun charging before the PUC decision.

Bell's 1981 rate request was for $469.8 million. The PUC granted it a $243.7 million increase. That case is before an Austin appeals court.

The company's 1980 rate case is still in district court in Austin, with oral arguments scheduled for Friday. Bell requested $326 million, but got only a $114 million increase from the PUC.

Best advice for diabetics: Follow doctor's advice

Dear Dr. Solomon: My mother is in her 40s and has developed diabetes. I've read about all the complications that can happen, and I would like to know how they can be avoided. My mother is still a young woman and I'd like to see that she enjoys her life. —Ms. V.R., N.Y.

Dear Ms. R.: In one sense, the answer to your question is simple: The complications of diabetes can best be reduced when the patient cooperates fully with his or her physician in regard to diet, exercise and medication, if any.

son, of the Washington University School of Medicine in St. Louis, points out that the severity of vascular disease (disease involving the blood vessels) appears to be related to blood glucose levels and glucose intolerance. Normalizing blood glucose levels can therefore help avoid many future complications.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My mother has been down in the dumps for several months, and our family doctor referred her to a psychiatrist. The psychiatrist has recommended electric shock treatments, and that frightens me. It seems more like torture than treatment. I would appreciate some advice about what I should do. — Pam, Augusta, Ga.

Dear Pam: I cannot of course recommend either for or against electroconvulsive therapy (ECT) for your mother, since I know nothing about her. If you are not certain about the proper course to follow, why not get a second opinion?

As for ECT in general, you may be interested to know that Dr. Dan Blazer, a Duke University psychiatrist, refers to it as the safest form of treatment for depression available today, with lower mortality and with fewer side effects than treatment with drugs. Furthermore, he estimates that ECT is effective with about 80 percent of patients treated in this fashion.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I really find myself in a bind. My father has been complaining of chest pain and he is certain there is something wrong with his heart. But three doctors have told him there is nothing wrong with him. I know that if I go to another doctor the story will be the same. Where do I go from here? — Bernie, Youngstown, Ohio

Dear Bernie: I can only speculate about your father's condition, but I have seen patients with what is called pseudo-angina pectoris. These patients complain of chest pain even though a complete physical examination and laboratory tests show no evidence of heart disease. Many of these patients incur a great deal of expense as they go from doctor to doctor, seeking medical care for a condition that does not exist.

If the three doctors who have examined your father have come to the same conclusion, it would seem safe to accept their evaluation. The best approach with your father might include recognition that the discomfort he feels is not all in his mind, plus reassurance by yourself, other family members, and his personal physician.

ROME (AP) — Warren Beatty has been voted best foreign producer by Italy's film industry and co-star Diane Keaton was named best foreign actress for her work in Beatty's movie "Reds."

Beatty said he flew to Rome to thank Vittorio Storaro, the photography director of "Reds," who won an Academy Award earlier this year.

Italian President Sandro Pertini awarded the David di Donatello prizes, the Italian equivalent of Hollywood's Oscars, at a star-studded ceremony Saturday.

DENVER (AP) — Princess Anne, the first member of the British royal family to visit Colorado, should have felt quite at home during her six-day visit.

It rained until Saturday, the fourth day of a tour by the only daughter of Queen Elizabeth II and Prince Philip. Despite the London-like weather, her linen suits refused to wrinkle.

"I have long wanted to extend my limited knowledge of America and I have finally now made it out West," said the princess, who last traveled to the United States in 1977.

Princess Anne was invited by the Institute of International Education and the English-Speaking Union.

Brenda Ortiz, a 45-year-old Englishwoman who married an American and now lives in Denver, said, "Seeing the princess, and watching the dear old Union Jack waving in the breeze, it gives me a proper lump in my throat."

On Saturday, Princess Anne took a two-hour tour of the British Faire, a charity event featuring English, Scottish and Welsh sports and cultural and commercial exhibits.

The princess, guarded by a tight security cordon, made her last stop at a crowded table under a red-and-white striped tent, where she sipped an afternoon cup of tea with milk, but no sugar.

Royal heir's birth may be soon

LONDON (AP) — With Prince Charles at her side, Princess Diana entered London's St. Mary's Hospital today "in the early stages of labor," Buckingham Palace announced.

A brief announcement said the pregnant princess was admitted to the hospital between 5 a.m. and 6 a.m. — midnight and 1 a.m. EDT.

A palace spokesman later said it could be "many hours" before there was further news of her progress in labor but he said there was no cause for concern, adding: "The Princess of Wales is in the best of health."

It was not known whether Prince Charles would be in the delivery room, but the 33-year-old heir to the British throne was said to have wanted to attend the birth.

The 20-year-old princess, expecting the couple's first baby, was admitted to the same hospital in London's Paddington district, where Princess Anne, her sister-in-law, had her two children.

Press reports had said Diana wanted to have her baby in a hospital while Queen Elizabeth II had preferred Buckingham Palace for the birth. All three of the queen's children were born at the palace.

Charles returned to Kensington Palace, the couple's

London home, on Sunday afternoon from France, where he had attended a memorial ceremony for a British parachute regiment of which he is colonel-in-chief.

The prince canceled a planned polo match Sunday afternoon and went straight to Kensington Palace.

London's Daily Express newspaper said Charles made a helicopter dash across the English Channel from France in 90 minutes to be certain of being at his wife's bedside.

It reportedly was the first time a helicopter had brought a member of the Royal Family home from abroad right to his own doorstep, on the lawns of Kensington Palace.

The princess had been driven to London Sunday from Highgrove, the couple's mansion, 113 miles southwest of the capital, to be nearer her gynecologist, Dr. George Pinker, the Express said.

The princess, whose marriage to Charles in St. Paul's Cathedral, July 29, 1981, was watched by millions on worldwide television, had remained in the public eye up to last week.

Her last public appearance was in the Royal Box at the fashionable Ascot race meeting last Tuesday, and a polo match at nearby Windsor Castle later in the day.

Association wants to ensure carousels keep going around

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Those intricate hard-carved figures on old-time merry-go-rounds are works of art to members of the National Carousel Association, a group dedicated to preserving the popular rides.

"Carousels are national treasures. They were done by professional sculptors with hammers and chisels," said John Hayek, immediate past president of the association and editor of its two publications.

"They are so lifelike, so real. With a wave of a magic wand, the figures look like they're ready to come to life," he said. "A roller coaster is the heart of an amusement park. The carousel is its soul."

About 75 of the 580 members of the association, founded in 1973 with branches in England and Australia, attended a weekend convention with members of Amusement Park Club International at Kennywood Park.

They watched audio-visual presentations, swapped stories and rode Kennywood's grand merry-go-round, built in Philadelphia 75 years ago and among some 280 carousels still operating nationally.

A stumbling decision

While not necessarily conceding that the Supreme Court was correct in its decision last week that children of illegal aliens must be provided a free public school education, the decision was a humane one, the effects of which likely will be felt for years to come.

Unfortunately, the ruling will only continue to encourage Mexican nationals to enter the United States illegally in search of work and a better way of life.

What the Supreme Court's 5-4 decision says, in effect, is that public schools must provide an education for children who actually have no legal right to be here. Now we agree that minor children should not be punished for the actions of their parents. We share the compassion in the ruling.

Sadly, though, the real issue at play here was not addressed and the flood of illegal aliens into the United States will not be stemmed until it can be addressed. That issue, of course, is the strangling poverty in the interior of Mexico that forces Mexican nationals to abandon their homeland for an illegal way of life to the north.

The stalemate in the illegal alien question has been inaction on the part of the Congress in dealing with the situation. Until action is forthcoming, beefing up the Immigration and Naturalization Service and taking other steps to make illegal immigration tougher, the inflow will continue, probably at ever-higher rates.

The illegal alien population in Texas and other states overburdens schools and other institutions and has a direct impact on the American economy. In Midland, school officials say the ruling really won't have an effect since the school district here has been educating the illegal alien children free anyway. But other school districts will feel the economic effects of the ruling.

The ultimate answer, of course, lies with Mexico's socio-economic situation. Currently there is no reason for the Mexican government to cease illegal immigration. When that incentive does exist, probably via a joint economic development program with the United States, illegal entry into the U.S. will be halted.

The Supreme Court ruling, while being compassionate, will be widely viewed in Mexico as lack of resolve to deal with the problem. It will only signal Mexican nationals that a better way of life truly does await them across the Rio Grande.

Meanwhile the American taxpayer is getting taken to the cleaners — on both sides of the border. It's time to take some serious action on the illegal immigration problem.

Right to name names

President Reagan soon will sign the Intelligence Identities Protection Act. The legislation decrees, among other things, that information in the public domain may not be publicly repeated. It is unprecedented, undesirable and almost certainly unconstitutional.

The act makes it a crime for newspapers, authors or anyone else to publish the name of an intelligence agent — even one who is breaking the law. It sets penalties for such disclosure even when the information comes from public records. And it makes little distinction between the malicious exposure of agent identity and legitimate public scrutiny of government operations. Anyone could be jailed for identifying an agent, so long as there is "reason to believe" that doing so would impede U.S. intelligence activities. That means that citizens who discover intelligence corruption or ineptitude could write about it only at great risk.

The president insists that criminal penalties for disclosing the names of U.S. spies are "the cornerstone for the improvement of our intelligence capabilities." He has a point: The campaign to protect spies is spurred by anger over the behavior of Philip Agee, a former CIA agent who has written books attacking the agency — and by the 1975 murder of CIA officer Richard Welch in Athens after his name was published in an American magazine hostile to the CIA.

The consternation is understandable, but this legislation is a bad solution. However despicable the deliberate exposure of intelligence agents, it is unconstitutional to punish citizens for reprinting information from public documents. But that's what the Agent Identities Act will do. Such a law violates constitutional guarantees of freedom of the press. The American Civil Liberties Union promises to take the government to court. That is the right thing to do because the Agent Identities Act should be overturned.

Another View:

Texas' alien doctrine

As a purely constitutional issue, the Supreme Court's 5-4 decision that states may not deprive illegal alien children of the free public education available to all others is going to be a subject of debate — and, likely, of further litigation — for years to come. But as a matter of public policy it's impossible to quarrel with the court's conclusions that not educating such children is likely to be far more costly in the long run than providing the schooling this decision requires.

The case arose from a nasty little Texas law, passed in 1975, denying state reimbursement to local districts for the cost of educating illegal alien children. As a consequence, some districts charged prohibitive tuition to illegal alien children, most of them from Mexico, while others excluded them altogether.

Nearly two years ago, a federal district judge said the law denied such children equal protection, and the other day, in an opinion written by Justice Brennan, the Supreme Court upheld him. The Constitution, said Brennan, "provides that no state shall deprive... any person within its jurisdiction of the equal protection of the laws." Whatever his status under the immigration laws, an alien is surely a "person" in the ordinary sense of that term.

Many questions are left unanswered by the decision. The court, for example, did not deal with whether illegal aliens now also become eligible for federally supported benefit programs, such as food stamps and Medicaid, programs from which they are now largely excluded.

There is, however, no indication that the court intends such a result. Its decision appears to be sharply limited to the question of education for minor children, and on that matter it's hard to muster an effective contrary argument. The issue here, after all, concerns only children born elsewhere who were brought here by their parents and who themselves committed no illegal act. As Justice Brennan said, "It is difficult to understand precisely what the state hopes to achieve by promoting the creation and perpetuation of a subclass of illiterates within our boundaries, surely adding to the problems and costs of unemployment, welfare and crime."

The federal government, which had originally supported the legal challenge of the Texas law, dropped out of the case when the Reagan administration took office, arguing that this was purely a state — not a federal — matter. The state of California, on the other hand, which has never excluded illegal aliens from its public schools, supported the challenge with an eloquent friend-of-the-court brief. In this instance, it's more than clear on which side good sense, compassion and sound public policy lie. To deprive a child in America of public schooling simply because his parents brought him here illegally is both cruel and stupid.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Justice covered up for federal prosecutor

WASHINGTON — A special assistant to Attorney General William French Smith intervened to block a criminal investigation of one of the nation's most controversial federal prosecutors. Smith's aide, Caroline Kuhl, was dispatched to Iowa to prevent a key witness from resuming hostile testimony before a grand jury.

A secret report, held under tight wraps by the Justice Department, is severely critical of the department's manipulation of the grand jury probe. It charges that the grand jury was given neither adequate time nor a proper presentation to facilitate a proper investigation.

Jack Anderson

This heavy-handed pressure was simply the culmination of a months-long backdoor campaign to ram through the appointment of Evan Hultman as U.S. attorney in Cedar Rapids, Iowa — despite serious charges of misbehavior lodged against him.

Hultman is an old home-town buddy of Sen. Roger Jepsen, R-Iowa, who has admitted he pleaded his friend's case personally with Smith. Significantly, Hultman's appointment as prosecutor was announced by the White House one week after Jepsen, in a surprising about-face, voted to support the Reagan administration's controversial sale of AWACS radar planes to Saudi Arabia.

There was another not-so-funny coincidence. The prosecutor whom Hultman replaced, Jim Reynolds, had been actively pursuing an investigation of Jepsen on charges of accepting illegal funds from the government of South Africa. It was this same Jepsen who pushed for Hultman's nomination.

The chronology of the "Hultman coverup" has been pieced together by my associates Indy Badwar and John Dillon. It smells like the sort of tampering with the judicial process that began at Watergate 10 years ago and is now supposed to be out of favor.

The coverup began when the Justice Department learned that a grand jury in Iowa was gathering evidence against Hultman. He was accused of making misleading and possibly perjurious statements to the Senate Judiciary Committee, also of lying about his medical record to win appointment as a general in the Army reserve. He vigorously denies the allegations.

The first thing the Justice Department did was to send an assistant U.S. attorney from Indiana out to Iowa to replace Reynolds, who had taken himself off the case to avoid the appearance of a political vendetta against Hultman. The new prosecutor, Thomas Turner, persuaded the grand jury to drop the investigation.

Turner had his mind made up even before he came to Iowa, "reported a source close to the investigation. The source said Turner's failure to interview the star witness in the case was "deliberate and calculated." The replacement prosecutor also confiscated documents provided to the jury by the star witness, as well as the only copy of the jury's proceedings, and had them shipped out of Iowa.

When the witness complained to Judge Edward J. McManus, the judge properly summoned Turner for an explanation. That's when the attorney general's office sent his senior special assistant, Caroline Kuhl, hotfooting out from Washington. She and Turner managed to persuade Judge McManus that he should butt out of what was purely Justice Department business.

Turner and Kuhl reportedly argued that on constitutional grounds the Justice Department didn't have to call any witness it didn't want to, and that the judge had no discretion in the matter. Without further testimony from the key witness, there was no point in reopening the grand jury investigation.

Meanwhile, in Washington, Hultman had been the target of a two-year investigation by the Senate Judiciary Committee. The case grew out of charges that Hultman had deliberately bungled a grand jury investigation when he was the federal prosecutor in Cedar Rapids some years earlier.

Hultman testified twice before the committee. Subsequently, Sens. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, and Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., recommended to the attorney general that a special prosecutor investigate Hultman for possible false and misleading statements to the committee. The Justice Department declined to take action, the committee probe is in limbo, and Evan Hultman is a federal prosecutor once again.

KGB PIPELINE: Students from Soviet bloc countries are viewed with deep suspicion by U.S. counterintelligence agencies — and with good reason. A top secret report sent to the White House recently disclosed that out of 47 students from communist countries studying in the United States in 1979, nine had confirmed intelligence ties. One Soviet "researcher" was discovered to be the head of an East Coast KGB sub-residency.

— Reports of spies and counterespies often give the impression that it's all a game. But a Defense Intelligence Agency manual warns its agents that it can be a deadly business. The KGB's First Chief Directorate has an "executive action special department (which) has a bloody history of kidnapping, murder and sabotage," the publication states, adding: "Numerous incidents of assassinations have been disclosed by Soviet defectors over the years." As one intelligence source put it grimly: "Don't ever forget that the KGB kills."

INSIDE REPORT:

New York GOP primary has 'em worried

NEW YORK — Inability of the men who have long controlled the New York Republican Party to prevent its conversion from endorsing millionaire businessman-scholar Lewis Lehrman was no mere loss of a skirmish but a threat to the very existence of their political system.

The wholly unexpected third-ballot endorsement late Wednesday night of Lehrman for governor ended nine months of increasingly desperate efforts to keep him short of the 25 percent of the convention vote needed to get on the September primary ballot. Lehrman now enters that primary as the overwhelming favorite for the nomination.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Consequently, no other political race in 1982 will carry the significance of the New York election for governor (particularly if New York City Mayor Ed Koch is the Democratic nominee). Lehrman will be carrying the torch of supply-side economics that he feels the Reagan administration has dropped and, what is no less important, of radical reform. It is the reformer's role that really worries the New York state Republican establishment.

That sets Lehrman apart from Nelson Rockefeller, who in 1958 had no more political experience than Lehrman today but was welcomed with open arms by the party leaders. As a four-times elected governor, Rockefeller never interfered in the "arrangements" that make politics so commercially profitable in this state.

Lehrman is determined to smash those "arrangements" as part of his intent to radically reduce the scope and limit the nature of the state government. That explains the tenacious efforts to stop him by Joseph Margiotta, who, as Nassau County chairman, is the state's most powerful Republican leader.

Margiotta backed a series of moves to outflank Lehrman's self-financed candidacy by finding a consensus party choice to oppose him. That man turned out to be ex-U.S. Attorney Paul Curran, who had written the judge asking for clemency after Margiotta was convicted of bribery and conspiracy (his appeal is pending). Margiotta can expect no such gestures of friendship from Lehrman.

When the Republicans convened at the Sheraton Centre Hotel, Margiotta had the Nassau County delegation marching in lockstep for Curran. But 22 other county chairmen backed State Assembly leader James Emery; in a state where politics is a business, some 20 of those chairmen are on Emery's legislative payroll.

That prevented a common stop-Lehrman front, limiting Curran's strength to Manhattan, Erie County (Buffalo) and Nassau. When Lehrman expressed willingness to accept Emery as lieutenant governor, Emery's forces backed Lehrman on the third ballot. At 11 p.m. on Wednesday, Margiotta on the convention floor was a picture of seething rage. "You'll regret this day," he shouted to an Emery floor lieutenant.

Lehrman might not have even gotten that 25 percent had not a party regular, Brooklyn leader Fred Pantaleone, endorsed him the day before the convention. There was no deal. Pantaleone appreciated Lehrman's superb statewide organization and name recognition (both built from scratch with Lehrman's own $3 million), far surpassing his rivals, and wanted to get on board.

But what about Lehrman the reformer? Would he not govern without the Republican Party? "This is a big state," Pantaleone told us, "and you need a lot of people to govern it. I am sure he cannot do it without the Republican Party."

In truth, Lehrman's rise from anonymity to front-runner shows the irrelevance of the post-Rockefeller party here. Nor is there any doubt of his radical plans for change. He regards Joe Margiotta's high-tax Nassau County government as a social-democratic regime masquerading under Republican labels. Playing on Stalin's words, he intends to replace Rockefeller's "socialism in one state" with "Reaganism in one state." The probable winner of the first ever New York Republican primary for governor is indeed somebody for the professional politicians to worry about.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, June 21, the 172nd day of 1982. There are 193 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On June 21, 1945, Japanese forces on Okinawa surrendered to the United States in World War II.

On this date: In 1970, the Indochina War erupted on a dozen fronts in the heaviest fighting since the Vietnam conflict spread to Cambodia two months earlier.

In 1971, the International Court of Justice in the Hague ruled that South Africa's administration of the territory of South-West Africa (Namibia) was illegal.

In 1978, rioting broke out in the black townships around Pretoria, South Africa.

CHARLEY REESE

State holds false beliefs about Mideast

If you sit down and plan your life's goals but base your planning on a series of beliefs which aren't true, you are not very likely to be successful. Foreign policy of a nation is no exception to this rule. When a foreign policy is based on a series of beliefs that aren't true, then it is highly unlikely to be successful.

Nowhere is this more true than in the Middle East, which is a very dangerous area of the world in which to blunder about. Let's look at some of the false beliefs the State Department has about the Middle East.

Charley Reese

One is that it is possible to construct an alliance with Moslem countries to counter the Soviet Union. This is false for a number of reasons. The Arab governments, not being fools, have no desire to get caught between the Soviet Union and the United States if shooting breaks out. That's why no Arab government has agreed to allow an American military base on its soil.

Another is that the Arab and Iranian governments are a great deal more suspicious and hostile toward the West than toward the Soviet Union. This is quite logical and is based on their historical experience.

In the Middle Ages when the great Moslem empire arose, it fought Europeans, not Russians. The Crusades, which were a series of invasions of the Moslem lands, came from the West, not Russia. Colonial domination which lasted until well after World War II came from the West, not from Russia. A young Arab student quickly learns that all the troubles his ancestors had came from the Christian West, not from the Russians.

The conflict between Islam and atheistic communism is not as great as one might imagine. The Soviets are not idiots; they govern within their own borders one of the largest concentrations of Moslems in the world. They certainly don't go into the Middle East trying to convert Moslems to atheism.

Another false belief of the State Department is that the "Palestinian question" is the key to solving all the conflict in the region. Actually, the Palestinian question is only one of many conflicts in the region and really only involves Palestinians and Israelis, though the other Arab governments pay lip service to the idea because it is a convenient label to put on a basically religious conflict.

Hostility between Syria and Iraq, between Iraq and Iran, between the two Yemens, between Syria and Lebanon, between Libya and Egypt and Morocco have nothing to do with either the Palestinian question or with Israel. If Israel vanished tomorrow and was replaced by a Palestinian state, all of those other conflicts would still exist and there would be a new one because there is plenty of bad blood between Palestinians and some of the other Arab factions.

Among Arab intellectuals there is a dream of reviving the old Arab empire. They dream of a united Arab world as a solid military-economic bloc. The conflict with Israel serves the purpose of these dreamers because it is one point on which they have been able to achieve some unity in an otherwise factious Arab world.

The hostility toward Israel, Palestinians perhaps excepted, is based on religion and history. The Moslem religion teaches hostility toward Jews, teaches that they are a second class people. Secondly, they view the entire Middle East as Arab land and therefore they see Israel as invasion of Arab land by Western civilization.

The other Arabs could care less if Palestinians have a country. Jordan is Palestine with a majority population of Palestinians but they refuse to call it that. When the United Nations first partitioned Palestine to create a Jewish state and a Palestinian state, it was the other Arab governments which killed the plan.

The point is that nothing short of the elimination of Israel is going to settle that one conflict in the near future so the United States is foolish to involve itself in trying to reconcile Israel and the Arabs. Only when a generation of Arab leaders come along who are willing to put aside the dream of Pan Arabism for more immediate gains, as Anwar Sadat did, will that conflict resolve itself.

Our goal should be to put some distance between us and the area's conflict. Only Israel has any value as an American ally for it is the only nation with a stable government, a compatible philosophy, and a mobile army capable of and willing to engage the Soviets. For that reason we should continue to support Israel militarily but otherwise tell the Arabs they will have to settle their disputes with Israel without American help.

'Incredible strangers' helped justice's career

HOUSTON (AP) — State District Judge Ruby Kless Sondock, who this week becomes the first full-time female justice of the Texas Supreme Court, says some "incredible strangers" helped her rise to the state's high court.

On Mrs. Sondock's list are former Gov. Preston Smith, who appointed her a domestic relations judge in 1971; former Gov. Dolph Briscoe, who made her Harris County's first female state judge in 1977; and Gov. Bill Clements, who tapped her to fill the vacancy left by the June 10 death of Justice James Denton.

"I was just around at the right time," said Mrs. Sondock. "And I was fortunate enough to have those people I have referred to through the years as incredible strangers."

"They are the reason I was appointed the first time, the second time and this time," she said.

Mrs. Sondock, 56 and a Democrat, said she once thought she'd be too busy running her household and raising two daughters to practice law.

"In law school, I took the courses that were available at the times I could go. At the time I had two children who were quite young. I never thought I'd practice," Mrs. Sondock said.

But she found enough courses and enough time to study that she graduated in 1961 from the University of Houston Law School at the head of her class.

Mrs. Sondock, now a grandmother of four, will serve on the nine-member panel until Dec. 31. She said she has does not plan to run for the seat Denton held, but instead will return to the civil district court bench.

The State Democratic Executive Committee on Saturday nominated state District Judge Bill Kilgarlin for the Texas Supreme Court seat vacated by Denton. The Republicans have no candidate on the November ballot for that office.

When Mrs. Sondock is sworn in this week, she will be the first full-time female justice to serve on the high court.

Fireman's been putting them out longer than most

KAUFMAN, Texas (AP) — At age 91, Oscar Garner figures he's outlived at least 100 of his former fire-fighting partners.

Nearly 70 years ago, Garner fought fires with the help of a two-wheel hose reel instead of a modern fire truck. He's been going to blazes for most of his life.

Garner started fighting fires with the Kaufman Volunteer Fire Department in 1913 at age 22, and at age 91 he's still pitching in.

"Way back there," he said, "there was Clifton and Turner and McLeroy... Sure wish we'd kept all those old rosters. They'd help my memory, maybe. My mind don't function like it used to — but I guess a lot of them don't function at all, so I guess I'm lucky, huh?"

Garner was among the first volunteer firefighters at the scene when some hay caught fire at the new city ballpark last Tuesday.

"I just stayed in it (firefighting) 'cause I liked it. How 'bout that? I just like to go. Just about all the action you get in a town this size is a fire every once in a while," Garner said.

Garner was chief during the mid-1920s and early 1930s and has outlived four other chiefs.

"Way I figure it, I'm gonna just keep right on living till I die. Not much else to do about it," he said.

Garner said he and his 88-year-old wife, Zula May, "are both healthy as pigs. And as far as firefightin', well, I might quit one of these days. I don't know. Might not. As long as they'll let me, I'll probably just keep on."

He suffered his first injury on the job early this year. A rookie having a little trouble with the clutch sent the fire truck lurching as he headed toward a fire. That sent Garner tumbling onto the hood of another fire engine, but he got up, returned to the truck and helped put out the fire.

Afterward, friends discovered he was bleeding from a head wound that required several stitches.

Garner said he stands aside and waits until he is needed if more than enough younger firefighters are at the scene of a fire.

"But I can still do about as much good as any of them," he said.

Oscar Garner, a Kaufman, Texas, volunteer firefighter, has been at the job almost 70 of his 91 years and figures he's outlived about 100 of his former blaze-fighting chums. Garner said the main reason he's been with the Kaufman Volunteer Fire Department all these years is simple: "I just stayed in it 'cause I liked it."

Southside Lions install officers; 'Lion of the Year' announced

Dr. David L. Norton was named "Lion of the Year" by the Southside Lions Club at its annual officer installation dinner held Friday night in the club's building at 111 E. New York St.

The award to Norton was presented by Mervil Cross, retiring president, who also received a plaque for meritorious service during the past year.

The officer and directors were installed by Curtis Nichols, a 50-year member of the Lions Club at Vernon. Charles Gronow was installed as the 1982-83 president.

Others installed included Kenneth Overstreet, Clifford Wright and Tommy Woodruff, vice presidents; Norton, secretary; Weldon Horton, treasurer; Earl Phillips Jr., Lion Tamer; W.A. "Buddy" Ray, tailtwister; Jimmy Stovall, chaplain; Bettie Schuler, sweetheart; and Susan Cross, queen.

Directors are George F. Ethridge, W.E. Shipp, Dwight Wallum, Richard D. Collier, Coy J. Giles and Howard A. Palmer Jr.

Officers of the Dandy Lions Club, the Southside Club's woman's auxiliary, were installed by Mrs. C.E. (Margie) McCain. They include Brenda Woodruff, president; Jane Overstreet, vice president; Dorothy Koons, secretary/reporter; and Frances Garrett, treasurer.

Special recognition was accorded the late T.L. "Happy" Bond, a past president and long-time member of the club who died earlier this year, in a tribute delivered by Lion Ken Overstreet. Mrs. Bond was the recipient of a plaque awarded by Lions International Foundation in memory of her late husband.

A number of special awards were presented by the retiring president to officers and members of the club for outstanding service during the past year. Gifts went to Queen Susan Cross and Sweetheart Bettie Schuler.

Gronow, the incoming president, outlined club goals for the coming year, and discussed a number of special projects which now are under consideration.

"Lionism through Teamwork" was stressed throughout the evening.

Man killed in plane crash

ROANOKE, Texas (AP) — A 35-year-old Denton man was killed and a Dallas woman injured when an experimental airplane crashed.

The single-engine plane crashed about 2:45 p.m. when a portion of the right rear wing fell off while the plane was on a landing approach to Aero Valley Airport at Roanoke, a Federal Aviation Administration spokesman said.

The plane, which crashed 75 short of the runway, was a "Varizee," which has a small front wing, a larger rear wing and a rear propeller, the spokesman said. The craft is made from parts sold as a kit, he said.

The dead man was identified as Charles A. Hammond, pilot of the plane.

The passenger in the two-seat plane, Barbara Kay Norton, 29, suffered head and internal injuries and multiple fractures and was listed in critical condition at Harris Hospital in Fort Worth, officials said.

Board OKs land sale bids

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Veterans Land Board has approved $3,277,749.64 in winning bids on sale of 93 tracts of land forfeited under the state-sponsored veterans land program.

Board spokesman Richard Keahey said the number of forfeitures isn't unusual, and represents lands forfeited since the last sale five years ago.

"We're not experiencing more defaults than usual," Keahey says.

The board received $163,887.48 in down payments on the land.

The program is providing loans at 7 to 8 1/2 percent on 40-year loans and has $324 million in bonds authorized for sale.

Keahey says the board hopes to have a bond sale later this year.

Houston couple slain

HOUSTON (AP) — Fingerprint tests will be conducted today on five empty casings found near the bodies of a prominent lawyer and his wife, detectives say.

James H. Campbell, 55, and his 50-year-old wife, Virginia, were fatally shot early Saturday with a .45-caliber automatic pistol as they slept at their fashionable west Houston home.

Detectives said Sunday they have no suspects but believe the couple may have been murdered by someone who wanted revenge.

"You have two people killed and nothing taken. It's probably some kind of revenge-type thing," said homicide Lt. B.J. Beck.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Happy flying for small fry

DEAR READERS:

Do you ever have to fly with a small child or baby who gets cranky or cries at take-off and landing?

Here is a little tip from your friend Heloise who has done more flying in the last few years than most airline pilots. It seems that way anyway because I've been on two book tours in six months and have seen more airports than I care to think about, so I speak from experience.

Little ones don't know that you should yawn or chew gum to keep your ears open, so you have to help them. One way is to feed them crackers or cookies before takeoff and landing and then, when it's time to yawn, give them a bottle and they will be so thirsty they will drink a lot and keep their ears open.

I learned this from a woman sitting next to me on a plane. She said she had done this for all four of her children while they were small and had never had one cry and fuss because his ears bothered him.

If they, or you, are too big for a bottle, you can chew gum, suck on candy or just plain yawn. No one will think you are bored — just smart!
Happy flying! — Heloise

GLUE RESIDUE

Dear Heloise: I purchased plastic drinking glasses which had the price sticker on the mouth of the glass. First I tried to soak them in hot water, only to have the paper come off leaving the sticky glue still on.

I now have a dozen pretty new glasses that I can't use until I get the glue off the rim of the glasses. Help! — Linda Thomas

Sprinkle cornmeal or baking soda on the sticky residue and rub, rub, rub, with a dry cloth, adding more soda, etc., as necessary.

This will not remove the finish on the plastic as so many things you might use will do, yet is very effective. — Heloise

STOCKING SAVER

Dear Heloise: To those who wear heavy duty elastic stockings, wear household rubber gloves when putting the stockings on and taking them off.

You'll be surprised at how much you save since it keeps fingernails from going through your stockings. Too, it makes them much easier to get on and off. — Joni Werholz

CAKE DECORATING

Dear Heloise: Substitute the heavy liner paper from cereal boxes, etc., for cake decorating bags.

Just cut and fold, then put the decorator tip on and fill with frosting. A few more pennies saved. — Gene Kennedy

Wonderful! No clean up either — just toss away! — Heloise

HINTS FROM HIM

Dear Heloise: Do you have trouble with your shoelaces always coming loose?

Just take them out of the shoes, and rub them with beeswax or paraffin, then re-lace as usual.

They stay tight and bows stay tied. — Stephen Sokolski

HANGER HINT

Dear Heloise: To make further use of old pantyhose, cut them off at the top of each leg. Then, start at the hook of a hanger and wrap the hose around the wire. Tack or tie in place.

Easier on clothes than the wire. No rust and no frays to snag clothes. — Mrs. Charles Urugitz

SPACE FILLER

Dear Heloise: To close a gap between a cook stove and a counter top, roll opened sections of newspaper tightly around a yardstick. Cut a piece of aluminum foil a smidgen longer than the rolled newspaper, and roll this over the entire length of the paper.

Slide this between the stove and cupboard, then simply pull the yardstick out and fold the foil on the end. The paper roll will then fit tightly and lasts and lasts. Looks almost like the trim on the stove so is not readily noticed. — Eileen Scott

DEAR ABBY

Life rich in experience still pays great interest

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I've been reading your column ever since you wrote your first line in 1956. It's given me a good cross section of what's going on in the world.

I got a kick out of those two old roosters, ages 77 and 96, both crowing about their capabilities. Well, Abby, I hate to brag, but I've got them both beat.

I became a Christian at age 12 — that was 89 years ago. Yes, Abby, I'm 101 years old and I'm typing this myself. I started teaching school at 17, and I taught for 19 years. During World War I, I was an agriculture agent. I even published a small country newspaper for a while. In 1920 I entered the Methodist ministry. It became my life's work. After organizing four churches I retired at 72.

Having nothing to do, I cultivated a large garden, but that didn't keep me busy enough, so I bought the necessary equipment and set up a woodwork shop. So far I've made 14 grandfather clocks, 56 cradles, 247 lamps, and so many tables and cabinets I've lost count.

That's not all. I have several ladyfriends scattered all over town, and I still take them out to dinner — one at a time! I've got only 99 years to go before reaching 200, and the way I feel now, I'm going to make it.

If there are any old roosters out there who can out-crow me, send them to Tennessee and I'll take them to dinner. — HENRY C. COLEMAN, CHATTANOOGA, TENN.

DEAR HENRY: Wonderful! And if they bring their mothers, the dinner's on me!

DEAR ABBY: I was one of those unlucky air-traffic control men who lost their jobs, so after being unable to find work in Los Angeles, I finally landed a job in San Jose. Obviously I'm able to get home only on weekends and holidays, so I rented a small apartment in San Jose.

I've been on this job for 10 months, and while it's far from what I want to do, it's better than nothing. I'm still trying to get work in L.A.

My accountant told me I could deduct my travel and living expenses away from home, which helped to make my life bearable because this job is only temporary.

Yesterday a co-worker told me that if the IRS audits me, I'm in trouble because if a person stays in a job for over six months it's considered a permanent job — not temporary.

What does your accountant say? — SWEATING IT OUT IN SAN JOSE

DEAR SWEATING: My accountant says a job is considered "temporary" under one year, so you're safe for another two months.

Forgive me if I do not begin this letter with the usual salutation because after agonizing over salutations and complimentary closings, I came to a decision: I no longer use either.

I do not address persons I do not know as "Dear" anybody, since they are not "dear" to me. And I do not sign myself as being "Truly" theirs, which I certainly am not. I head this letter, state my business, say thank you if it's appropriate, and sign my name.

So far I don't think I have ruined anyone's day by being strictly businesslike. Thanks for listening. — CLARICE K. IN AURORA, ILL.

DEAR CLARICE: You didn't ruin my day. Au contraire, you made it. Thanks for writing.

DEAR ABBY: I want to commend you on your forthright stand against nudity. If the good Lord had intended for us to go around naked, he would have created us that way. — S.B., MOUNTAIN VIEW, CALIF.

Swap meets, flea markets are bargain hunter's paradise

By ROBERT J. GORE

The eye-catching blue ink on Dee Vivian's dirty white T-shirt proclaimed him the "Burl King," and the self-appointed monarch was presiding happily over his kingdom — a booth full of handmade redwood clocks at the Flea Market in San Jose, Calif.

Vivian peered anxiously through his cracked, horn-rimmed glasses he has only one eye as an endless stream of shoppers walked past. He talked about how he opened a store to sell his wares and almost went broke. But on a good day at the flea market, he said, he will sell 80 clocks and make a reasonable profit.

"I pay $125 a month rent for a stall," Vivian, 50, said. "Try and find a store for that, and then get 50,000 or so people to walk by your front window each weekend."

SWAP MEETS ARE A rapidly-growing industry nationwide. The San Jose meet, one of the largest in the country, draws four million visitors annually and has an estimated yearly sales figure of more than $100 million, nearly the volume of a large shopping mall.

Swap meets began roughly 30 years ago in Southern California, those familiar with the industry say, as large garage sales where people swapped things they no longer wanted for things they did. Within the last two years, however, the larger meets have rapidly turned into outdoor department stores displaying new merchandise, and cash and credit cards are the medium of exchange — not swapping.

Research shows fear of fat may be worse than fat itself

By ROBERT P. STUDER
Copley News Service

BERKELEY — Plumpness in the American culture is equated with a loss of self-control — the ultimate moral failure. It's also equated in the insurance tables with endangering longevity by boosting blood pressure and being the root cause of hypertension.

In the Samoan islands of the South Pacific, on the other hand, the same plumpness would be a social asset. A fat pastor, or pastor's wife, for example, would mean that the village in which they serve was supporting their church well. And in Samoa, it's taken for granted that women tend to gain weight as they age and bear children. The added weight gives them a kind of social status.

Significantly, though, when a medical anthropologist from the University of California at Berkeley compared health data from Western Samoan and mainland American women, she discovered that although Samoan women were three times fatter on the average than their U.S. counterparts, they suffered only one percent more hypertension.

"Could it be," asked Margaret Mackenzie, "that it is the stress associated with shame and discrimination in the American culture that is the real culprit in hypertension? It may," she said, "have more to do with the pathology attributed to fatness in our society than with the mechanical fact of the fat itself."

Mackenzie's attention to the tensions of the fat were first aroused, she said, through studies of dieters of all shapes and sizes in the San Francisco Bay area. In restricting their eating, she said, all of them seemed to share the idea that fatness means a loss of self-control.

Similar studies in Samoa, on the other hand, had revealed that being fat rarely provoked a moral evaluation there. If it did, she found, the evaluation was favorable.

Her studies, she said, led her to question whether the health effects of being overweight are universal or present only in societies where weight prejudice exists.

Her findings will be published soon as a socio-political issue in a report to be entitled, "Fear of Fat."

Now a research fellow in the Alcohol

Research Project at UC Berkeley's School of Public Health, she pointed out that her investigation into fatness is the first attempt to define the condition in anthropological terms. To do that, she analyzed the values and beliefs underlying attitudes toward weight among the San Francisco-area dieters.

It disclosed, she said, that among dieters, average and even anorectic women (those who are underweight from severely restrained eating) shared the values of overweight dieters.

"For both the fat and the anorectic — as well as for many people of various sizes in between — the amount of fat on their bodies was an index to them of the amount of control they felt they had secured, not only over eating and their weight but over other aspects of their lives."

Such notions of self-control, she said, find their roots in New England Protestant traditions, which form a keystone to the Euro-American culture.

Such a link, Mackenzie added, "began in the late 18th century with fur trade, continued with the migration of 'Yankee peddlers' during the Gold Rush, and is sustained today by intellectual and culture ties between universities on the East and West coasts."

In addition, she said, the San Francisco area also is a center for some so-called "alternative cultures," such as Buddhism and yoga, which also advocate spiritual and bodily health through self-control.

"To be fat-in such a context," she said, "is to be exposed to the risks of social ostracism in some social circles and to suffer prejudice in many aspects of life."

Mackenzie's studies of Western Samoans in 1976, on the other hand, suggested that such a view of self-control in relation to body fat is not universal. There, she said, "social relationships take priority over individual behavior. In the village of Lalomalava, for instance, the villagers did not give body weight a great deal of meaning — it did not have, in their estimation, anything to do with self-discipline or self-control."

In fact, in Samoa they didn't seem to worry much about it. And that lack of concern, she concluded, had a lot to do with their lower incidence of hypertension.

INDUSTRY OFFICIALS say there are 3,000 swap meets in the United States, but they also say the independent nature of the small business owners makes it impossible to estimate total earnings. They do agree on one point: Business is picking up because of the recession.

Shoppers include more and more apparently affluent people prodded out by the recession to hunt bargains, said Jack Beckwith, a swap meet executive in Orange County, Calif. "We're way beyond garage sale stuff," he said.

The sellers include shop owners who are looking for a way to expand their market, professionals supplementing their incomes with part-time jobs and, increasingly, full-time, free-lance entrepreneurs.

Organizers of the largest meets say their selling space is booked months in advance. "We try to keep 150 spaces available out of 1,500 for one-time sellers," Beckwith said. "Pacific Telephone found out that the calls into our office on Monday morning were blowing circuits all over. Once, they said there were more than 30,000 attempted calls in four hours to our office," he said.

TIM BUMB, San Jose Flea Market general manager, said the concept of open-air markets dates back to Biblical times. "Swap meets — flea markets — are necessary for society. Through the centuries, there have been bazaars in Asia and in Europe. We are carrying on a natural sociological function. We cater to the people. That's why we exist," Bumb said.

There are dark sides to swap meets. There is an underground economy of uncertain proportions. Many sellers, who refused to give their names, report widespread evasion of income and sales taxes and will not discuss how much they make or where they get their merchandise.

SPOKESMEN FROM THE California Department of Justice and the Board of Equalization said their organizations do not have the necessary staff to take a close look at swap meets. A federal Department of Justice official said that informants have told his agency that much of the 91.8 percent of stolen property that is never recovered is sold at swap meets.

Swap meets have become the village squares of the 1980s, attracting as many as 3,000 sellers and 80,000 buyers on a Saturday or Sunday.

Typical offerings include clothes, pottery, brass hardware, cassette tapes in English and Spanish, bread boxes, kitchen cabinets with sinks, produce, personalized Frisbees, furniture, pop art, shoes, bagels, belt buckles, T-shirts, sporting goods, lamps, "authentic Navajo rugs," Pac-Man earrings, jewelry, toys, strollers, clocks and stereo equipment in every shape and size.

THE QUALITY AND QUANTITY of the goods usually depend on the size of the swap meet. The one in San Jose has both new and used merchandise — and more. Regular sellers set up shop either in a shanty town of corrugated metal booths or in collapsible booths made of plastic tubing and awning. Those who have cleaned out their garages simply spread the booty on the ground or on card tables.

On a recent weekend in San Jose, there was also an auction, a pet shop, a tire store and a block-long produce mart. The produce mart proved that the buyer does not always get bargains, even at a swap meet. Compared to a nearby major grocery store, the corn and cantaloupes were more expensive at the Flea Market, the carrots, grapes, bananas, mushrooms, lettuce and red onions were cheaper.

Most of the sellers interviewed refused to give their complete names or to provide financial details.

SWAP MEETS ARE FAST becoming open-air department stores, according to John Arnoldussen, editor of the Santa Barbara, Calif.-based Swap Meet Magazine since 1967.

GOREN BRIDGE

Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?

Q.1—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠AQ54 ♥AJ82 ♦J105 ♣Q6
 The bidding has proceeded: North East South West 1 ♠ Pass 1 ♥ 2 ♦ Pass Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—If partner has either four spades or a stopper in the enemy suit, your side should have a game. If not, a partial might be the limit of your combined holdings. However, by entering the auction West has offered you another option. Double! This might seem strange without a trump trick, but West is going to find a most disappointing dummy. When this hand was held during a rubber bridge game, the double would have netted 800 points.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠KQ109765 ♥4 ♦5 ♣KQ107
 The bidding has proceeded: South West North East 1 ♠ 2 ♦ 2 ♥ Pass 2 ♠ Pass 3 ♠ Pass 4 ♠ Pass 5 ♠ Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—The key to this hand is your singleton diamond. Partner must have the aces of spades, hearts and clubs to justify his bidding, but he is worried about two possible diamond losers. You can set his mind to rest about that situation. Bid six spades.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠AJ7 ♥KQ9763 ♦AK ♣K6
 The bidding has proceeded: West North East South 1 ♠ Pass 1 ♥ Dble Pass 2 ♦ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—Despite your powerful hand, don't bid more than two hearts. If the bidding is honest, your partner has nothing, and nine tricks might be beyond you. Since you are vulnerable and competing against two opponents who are in the auction, your takeout double followed by a new suit shows a very strong hand. If partner has anything, he can bid again.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠82 ♥QJ6 ♦863 ♣AQ1093

Saudi Arabia takes on new OPEC role

By ROBERT BURNS
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Just when OPEC was being counted out as the dominant force in oil, Saudi Arabia stepped in to forge a new sense of solidarity among members and ensure the cartel's survival.

The result is a greater likelihood that world oil prices and supplies will be relatively stable over the next few years — something the Saudis support since their economy is intimately linked with the economic health of the West.

It also means Saudi Arabia, a chief U.S. ally in the Middle East, is less likely to lose its leadership position within the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to more radical, anti-Western members such as Iran.

"The Saudis have shown considerable leadership in the last three or four months," says George Keller, chairman of Standard Oil Co. of California, one of four U.S. oil companies that produce most of Saudi Arabia's oil. "They have laid all the cards out on the table ... in the kind of cooperative role that has put them in a very key position in OPEC."

Saudi Arabia, a desert nation of 7 million people, is the world's biggest oil exporter and the holder of more than one-quarter of known reserves.

The Saudis' reassertion of power in OPEC was rooted in the crisis facing the cartel earlier this year, when oil prices were plunging as a result of shrinking demand due to conservation and recession in the West.

OPEC production tumbled to the lowest level in more than a decade, and some cartel members were beginning to undercut the prices of others to retain their share of the shrinking market. Some of the members with highest prices lost sales and revenues to lower priced, non-OPEC competitors.

Some industry observers believed OPEC was incapable of solving its problems. But those doubts are fading, even among OPEC detractors.

Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, the Saudi oil minister and the charismatic heart of OPEC, gave the first hint of the Saudis' new OPEC role in a comment after an emergency cartel meeting last March 20.

"In the past," Yamani said, "we were very unpopular among our OPEC colleagues. Now we think our sense of responsibility will turn us in another direction."

The new-found popularity that Yamani expected was based on a Saudi strategy imposed in March but only now becoming clear for its success.

Behind the scenes, Saudi Arabia helped forge an unprecedented OPEC agreement: Each of the 12 members except Saudi Arabia would restrict their oil production to a specific quota in an effort to dry up the glut.

That agreement was remarkable not only because it marked the first formal production-sharing agreement in the cartel's nearly 22 years of existence. It also achieved two critical Saudi objectives: unifying the cartel in a purpose that could restore stability to the oil market, and allowing Saudi Arabia to produce oil without a quota and thereby retain the flexibility that is vital to its role as linchpin of the organization.

The Saudis have succeeded. The price of oil on the spot market, where individual cargoes are sold to the highest bidder, has jumped from a low of about $28 a barrel in mid-March to about $34 a barrel now. That has relieved pressure on OPEC because its customers are less willing to turn to non-OPEC sources for oil when prices on the open market are essentially the same as OPEC's prices.

That not only has shored up OPEC's defense of its pricing structure. It also has improved the financial outlook for some of OPEC's weaker and restive members. That, too, has bolstered Saudi Arabia's popularity.

MORE
Further evidence of the cartel's acceptance of the Saudi leadership role came in May when the OPEC ministers reaffirmed their commitment to the production-sharing strategy and to a continuation of their price freeze.

The opportunity for the House of Saud to keep its expanded power is enhanced by its little-noticed but rapidly tightening grip on OPEC oil supplies.

Saudi Arabia's share of oil production in the non-Communist world climbed from 18.1 percent in 1978 to 23.3 percent last year. In that same span, the combined share of all other OPEC members plunged from 46.3 percent to 30.2 percent, according to government and industry figures.

Because of the sharp curtailment of Saudi production this year as part of OPEC's effort to eliminate the oil glut, Saudi Arabia's share of output in the non-Communist world has dipped to 19.3 percent while the share for the rest of OPEC has fallen to 29.3 percent, according to industry estimates.

Thus, Saudi Arabia's share of OPEC production has jumped from 28 percent in 1978 to 44 percent last year. It currently is about 37 percent.

Yet while the Saudis will continue to pull OPEC out of its dilemma, the cartel's long-range health is jeopardized by the possibility that oil demand in the industrialized countries will continue to drop and that major new oil fields will be developed in countries outside the OPEC band.

Also, Saudi Arabia must cope with stiff opposition to its leadership from Iran.

Robert McDaniel, a professor of Middie East history at Purdue University, said he considers Iran and its militant Shiite mullahs the biggest threat to the political and economic power of conservative Saudi Arabia.

"There's going to be tension between Saudi Arabia and Iran so long as Ayatollah Khomeini is there," McDaniel said in reference to the Iranian ruler.

That tension spilled over at OPEC's May meeting as Iran accused Saudi Arabia of being a pawn of the United States for having engineered the oil glut. Saudi Arabia attacked Iran for violating its production quota.

For now that conflict is of little consequence since Iran has a limited ability to increase its oil exports so long as its war with Iraq continues. But once that battle ends — and more signs point to a winding down soon — the Iranians are expected to sharply increase their output.

If that happens it could undermine the Saudi strategy of keeping prices stable by manipulating production.

Despite the possible challenge from Iran, many analysts expect Saudi Arabia to continue pursuing an oil policy that would avoid any sudden or large price increases.

Yamani vowed in Quito, Ecuador, last month to adjust his country's production in order to keep OPEC's basic price at $34 a barrel through 1982.

And although the death last Sunday of King Khaled created new uncertainties, most analysts expect few changes under new King Fahd, who for all practical purposes ran the country even while Khaled held the throne.

"The Saudis are concerned about the economic health of the West," said Herbert Krupp, an energy economist at Bankers Trust Co. in New York. "They are concerned because their security is tied to the economic strength of the West — plus they have tremendous financial investments in the West."

Tank trucks carry hazardous products through densely populated areas

By SUSAN STOLER

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Dozens of Mexican tank trucks roll through neighborhoods of this border city daily, hauling potentially hazardous petroleum products and chemicals from the local port to the international bridges leading into Matamoros, Mexico.

They travel truck routes through densely populated, low income neighborhoods near downtown. The heavy vehicles frequently lack license plates and rarely have signs describing their contents.

"We don't know who owns them. We don't know what's crossing," said Ben Torres, city health director. "They make a dash into the city and make a dash back in a matter of hours."

A faulty truck valve caused 20 gallons of liquid sulphur to spill onto a downtown street June 7. Lunch hour traffic was blocked for more than an hour. The incident prompted Torres to call for greater control over the hazardous transports.

The sulphur spill was termed minor by police and fire officials. The chemical solidified instantly after spilling. It was chipped off the pavement, loaded into barrels and disposed of by the fire department, Torres said.

"We could have had a high hazard there if it had stayed in liquid form and soaked down the storm sewer and gotten into the water system," Torres said. "It was rather good fortune that it was what it was."

OFFICIALS SAY there have been no serious incidents or explosions involving a Mexican tank truck, but they add the danger exists.

In addition, railroad cars filled with hydrofluoric acid, anhydrous ammonia and other toxic substances pass less than 50 feet away from residences and businesses.

Many cities face similar dangers from hazardous chemicals traveling through town but local officials say their problem is compounded by trying to deal with foreign vehicles.

Torres said he and other city officials want to know what substances are being transported, when the shipments come through and any other information that might better prepare emergency crews for a disaster.

The Mexican transport trucks cross the border empty and travel 10 miles to the port of Brownsville, where there are chemical plants and petroleum refineries.

Under an agreement between the government of Mexico and the state highway department, the trucks may operate with Mexican plates provided they carry proper insurance, observe weight requirements and other regulations, said Lt. Lytle Archie of the Department of Public Safety's license and weight division.

HOWEVER, THE DPS has only two troopers from the weight division in the Brownsville area and they cannot check every truck operating from the port daily.

The troopers do not work inside the city limits.

Once inside the city, the trucks are subject to city weight and inspection requirements. Motorcycle patrolmen frequently stop trucks with unlicensed drivers, expired license plates or no plates and other violations, said police

Sgt. Andy Torres.

"We impound the vehicles until they get the problem cleared up. Usually it takes a couple of days," Torres said.

Abel Zapata, city fire marshal, said he is concerned about the trucks since neither the police department nor fire inspectors can check every vehicle.

"It worries me that they're coming through congested areas with leaking tanks," he said. "A person could be crossing the street, drop a cigarette butt on the site and that's it."

He said his inspectors occasionally will see trucks leaking oil or other substances and will call the police department to escort the tanks outside the city limits.

ASIDE FROM THE SULPHUR spill, city officials said they could remember only one other incident several years ago in which anhydrous ammonia leaked from a train car. The leaked was discovered quickly and no one was injured, he said.

A new international bridge would be needed to route the railcars and trucks away from residences.

Al Cisneros, port director, says he has been lobbying for that proposition since 1970.

Both truck and rail traffic leaves the port with hazardous materials. Sometimes the materials come from southern Mexico by boat to be transferred by rail or truck to points in northern Mexico.

The sulphur that leaked downtown had been shipped from southern Mexico for transfer to Matamoros, Cisneros said. Dupont operates a chemical factory near there where the sulphur is converted into sulphuric acid, and combined with another chemical to make hydrofluoric acid.

THE ACID is then shipped by rail through Brownsville to the Dupont plant in Corpus Christi, he said.

Cisneros said he understood local concerns over the materials.

It's a little more difficult to control here since you're dealing with Mexican trucks and the ownership seems to be constantly changing," he said.

"We've also tried to get the railyards relocated. We've agreed on where to build it but with the austerity in Washington, we don't know what's going to happen," he said. Ninety-five percent of the multi-million-dollar railroad relocation project was to have been federally funded, he added.

Cisneros said port officials monitor trucks and that railroad inspection is stringent.

"The more serious problem is overweight trucks and that is another reason we need to build another bridge. These heavy vehicles have no business moving through our streets, or through Matamoros for that matter," he said.

MALCOLM BROWN lives across the street from the railroad tracks in a downtown neighborhood.

"They leave those cars parked 50 feet from my house. They're marked that they have deadly substances, like hydrochloric acid in them," he said. "There's an '800' number to call if there's a problem, but if two of them ever run together, there won't be time to get to a phone."

neighborhood when the trains stopped on the track to take cars on or off. The neighborhood sits between the tracks and the Rio Grande.

Federal, state agencies investigating Comark

By DAVID WHARTON

Wood paneling, plush carpeting and soft lighting lend Comark's Newport Beach, Calif., offices a warm, peaceful feeling. A receptionist's friendly smile gives the impression that things are looking good for the young government securities firm.

But all is not well. None of the firm's executives will consent to be interviewed.

Since last week, the mention of Comark's name has sent shivers through the nation's investment community — all the way to Wall Street.

Last week, Comark's bank, Marine Midland of New York, halted its clearing-agent duties for the firm and called Comark in to discuss the nature of their banking relationship. Although the two parties settled the matter the next morning, news of the incident spread quickly and, analysts say, drove down trading activity in all of Wall Street's markets. Now federal and California authorities are investigating Comark's business dealings.

How could a five-year-old company with relatively little capital have such a big influence on the nation's financial nervous system?

Part of the answer is timing. Two weeks ago, Drysdale Government Securities Corp., another small, somewhat obscure securities firm, failed to pay $160 million in interest it owed on government securities borrowed from Chase Manhattan Bank. When Chase temporarily refused to indemnify the owners of those securities, panic swept Wall Street until the Federal Reserve Bank stepped in to settle things down.

Besides Comark's problems coming at the wrong time, the nature of the securities business — with its gigantic leveraging of billion-dollar trading on million-dollar capital — breeds anxiety.

Paul Anderson, a money-market economist from the First National Bank of Minneapolis, explained that the securities market attracts high-risk investors.

"There can be the opportunity for big gains in short terms by individuals — from risky or even dishonest behavior. That's something you always have to worry about," Anderson said.

Anderson said rumors that such a company may go down owing large amounts of money spreads a "general mechanism of fear" to investors in other markets, causing them to trade more cautiously and driving general market activity down at the whisper of trouble in securities.

Government documents show that Comark is highly leveraged. The firm dealt in approximately $2.5 billion in government securities last year with a capital base of only $15 million, according to a financial statement on file at the California Corporations Department.

Although Comark's executives declined to be interviewed, a review of their filings with the Securities and Exchange Commission and comments from former co-workers indicate Comark's top management has a solid financial background.

E. Keith Owens, a managing general partner, came to Comark from a precious metals investment house. Before working in precious metals, Owens founded the Alexander Hamilton Life Insurance Co. in Michigan when he was only 28.

Vernon Lunn, vice president of corporate services at what is now Hamilton International Corp., expressed surprise that Owens' firm was under investigation, saying that Owens was a conservative businessman while he was at Hamilton.

Missouri-Pacific officials agreed to relocate the tracks in part because of pressure from city officials following the residents' complaints.

Employers in Midland area predict drop in hiring activity

Employers in the Midland area predict a drop in hiring activity for the next three months, according to a quarterly survey conducted by Manpower, Inc., the world's largest temporary service firm.

Wally Richman, owner of Manpower's Midland office, said, "Overall, 30% of the area employers polled plan to hire additional workers during the third quarter of 1982 (July, August, September), down from the 37 percent with similar intentions one year ago. Another 10 percent expect staff reductions, and 60 percent plan no change in staff levels."

In a similar survey conducted one year ago at this time, none of the employers polled expected staff reductions, and 63 percent predicted no change in staff levels.

Local job opportunities are predicted in the services, transportation/public utilities, durable and non-durable goods manufacturing, wholesale/retail trade and public administration sectors.

Staff reductions are expected in the mining sector.

Midland area results are better than those reported nationally and regionally.

THE PROSPECTS for jobseekers nationally are likely to remain poor, at least through September, according to the 10,700 employers in over 325 U.S. cities filed in Manpower's Employment Outlook Survey.

Overall, conditions are worse than last quarter and much worse than last year at this time. However, survey results of one year ago indicated a slight recovery from the third quarter of 1980 at the onset of the recession. The Western and Southern regions which had formerly offered good job opportunities, now reflect the downturn in employment already affecting the Northeast and Midwest.

For the third quarter 1982, 18 percent plan to hire additional workers during July, August and September while 13 percent expect to reduce staff. Another 65 percent plan no change in staff levels and 4 percent are unsure of their hiring plans.

Currently, Western employers report an employment outlook which has deteriorated and is now similar to the poor job climate of Northeast and Midwest. Manufacturers of durable goods also report a shrinking job market. The only sectors predicting any glimmer of hope during the next three months are construction employers who predict a seasonal spurt in hiring activity, and the service industry which has had a more resilient employment outlook than other groups.

One year ago, 24 percent planned to increase staff; 10 percent planned reductions; 62 percent planned no changes and 4 percent were unsure of their hiring plans.

A DISMAL EMPLOYMENT outlook is predicted in all geographic regions although the outlook is slightly better in Southern states. As stated earlier, the most notable change from last quarter's survey results is in the Western states where new hiring plans have deteriorated, and work force reductions are expected to increase. The most severe weakening in this region was reported by the finance, insurance and real estate sector.

Among all employment sectors, the sharpest drop in hiring activity for the third quarter of 1982 (July, August, September) is reported by manufacturers of both durable and non-durable goods with the former group more severely affected than the latter. Slightly more manufacturers of durable goods expect to reduce staff as plan to hire additional staff during the coming months. One year ago, many more employers in this sector planned to increase staff, but current figures are better than those of third quarter 1980.

Regionally, the best job opportunities in the durable goods sector are reported by Western employers, with hiring intentions way ahead of all other regions.

Overall, 16 percent of manufacturers of durable goods plan to increase staff and 19 percent expect to reduce staff. Another 60 percent plan no changes and 5 percent are unsure of their plans.

Manufacturers of non-durable goods posted slightly more favorable results than manufacturers of durable goods. Overall, 16 percent plan to increase staff size; 11 percent expect reductions, 69 percent plan no changes and 4 percent are unsure of their hiring plans.

One year ago, many more employers planned to hire staff, but here too, current figures are slightly better than two years ago. Regionally, Southern manufacturers of non-durable goods report the most favorable hiring intentions.

WHILE MORE employers in the construction sector plan to hire additional staff during the next three months than expect to reduce their work force, hiring activity continues to be slow. Seasonal increases are expected by this sector and while hiring activity is weak, current survey figures are slightly ahead of those posted for this same quarter in 1980.

Overall, 24 percent of construction employers polled plan to hire additional staff during the third quarter while 14 percent expect to reduce it.

Current survey figures are not as strong as those reported last year at this time.

Regionally, Western construction employers report the most job opportunities and Northeastern figures are similar to those reported by Western employers.

Service sector employers predict hiring levels to be lower than those reported last year at this time and slightly behind figures of two years ago. While more employers in this sector plan to hire additional staff during the next three months than plan to reduce it, hiring levels are expected to be at their lowest level for any third quarter in the seven-year history of the survey.

OVERALL, 23 PERCENT of employers polled in this sector plan to increase staff size while 9 percent expect to reduce it.

Regionally, Midwest service sector employers report the most job opportunities; the Northeast and South follow closely behind.

Employers in the finance, insurance and real estate sector predict hiring activity to be at a virtual standstill for the third quarter of 1982. Only slightly more firms, 16 percent, plan to hire additional workers during the next three months compared to 11 percent who expect to reduce staff. Another 70 percent plan no changes and 3 percent are unsure of their hiring plans.

One year ago, more employers planned to increase staff size and current figures are similar to those posted last quarter and are at the lowest level of any third quarter in the seven-year history of the survey.

The best job opportunities in this sector are reported by Southern employers. Midwestern employers expect hiring activity to continue to be slow-paced, and in the West, for the first time since the survey began, many more employers in this sector expect to reduce staff than hire staff.

THIRD QUARTER 1982 survey figures are slightly more favorable than those reported for this same quarter in 1980 at the onset of the recession. Fourth quarter hiring intentions by this sector, however, are traditionally the strongest with merchants increasing staff to handle holiday shopping.

Regionally, Southern employers in the wholesale and retail sector post the greatest number of job opportunities. Nearly an equal number of employers in the transportation and public utility sector plan to add workers (15 percent) as expect to reduce staff (14 percent) during the third quarter of 1982. These figures are similar to those posted last quarter but lag behind those of one year ago. Hiring levels for the next three months are predicted to be at their lowest level for any third quarter in the history of the survey.

Regionally, Southern employers report the best job opportunities, but figures fall far behind those of any other quarter since the survey began.

Public administrators and educators predict hiring activity to be at its lowest point for any third quarter in the seven-year history of the survey.

Of all regions, the South predicts the highest number of job opportunities, but hiring is expected to be at its lowest level for any third quarter since the survey began. Nearly twice as many employers there (19 percent) plan to hire additional workers as expect reductions (11 percent).

The Midwest, Northeast and West post similar hiring intentions. In the Midwest, 17 percent of the employers plan to increase staff size; 15 percent expect reductions. In the Northeast, 16 percent plan to add staff; 13 percent expect reductions. Finally, in the West, 18 percent plan to hire staff and 15 percent expect reductions.

THE MANPOWER Employment Outlook Survey is a quarterly measurement of employment intentions for changes to the permanent work force. During the past several years, it has been a significant indicator of employment changes.

It is based upon telephone interviews with more than 10,700 public and private employers in more than 325 cities throughout the United States. It is conducted immediately prior to June 1st.

Manpower, Inc. is the world's largest temporary service firm, annually providing employment to over 600,000 people through its more than 950 offices in 31 countries. Office services account for more than half of the jobs at which its temporary work force is engaged.

Major reduction proposed in OSHA record requirements

DALLAS — The Department of Labor's Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) has proposed a major reduction in its record-keeping requirements beginning in 1983 to relieve approximately one-half million employers of paperwork without lessening worker protection.

"Five years ago, OSHA amended its regulations to exempt employers with 10 or fewer employees from many recordkeeping requirements," Assistant Secretary of Labor Thorne G. Aucher, who heads OSHA, said.

"However, hundreds of thousands of employers in various industries have still been forced to keep records no longer needed by OSHA to conduct its inspection activities," he said.

"Therefore, OSHA has proposed to exempt 474,000 employers with about 18.4 million employees in certain retail trade, finance, insurance, real estate, and service industries from keeping paperwork data," he said. The assistant secretary added that this action "is in keeping with President Reagan's promise to lift unnecessary federal burdens off the backs of the American people."

Aucher said "OSHA statistics show that approximately 94 percent of employers in these industries could be expected to have fewer than two injuries per establishment on an annual basis. Since so few injuries occur in these establishments most employers and employees would reasonably be expected to know of and recall any recordable event without the need to refer to an OSHA injury/illness log.

"Let me emphasize to both employers and employees that inspection of these establishments will continue to be made in response to employee complaints and as part of OSHA's investigation of fatalities, multiple hospitalization incidents, and imminent danger situations," he said.

"OSHA does not intend, with this proposal, to exempt these employers from participating in the Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS) statistical survey of occupational injuries and illnesses.

The BLS will continue to ask a small percentage of these employers to participate in the survey and maintain an OSHA injury/illness log for the survey year."

The proposed exemption would go into effect on January 1, 1983. Until that date, all firms will still be required to comply with current federal paperwork requirements.

The industries under the proposed exemptions are identified and categorized in the Office of Management and Budget's Standard Industrial Classification (SIC) manual. They include:

— Retail trades (SIC's 52-59) which include establishments engaged in selling merchandise to the general public for personal or household consumption. Some of these retail trades are: automotive dealers, apparel and accessory stores, furniture and home furnishings stores, and eating and drinking places.

— Finance, insurance, and real estate (SIC's 60-67) including establishments engaged in banking, credit other than banking, security dealings, insurance and real estate.

— Services (SIC's 70-89) including establishments with a variety of services for individuals, businesses, government agencies, and other organizations. Some of these service industries are: personal and business services in addition to legal, educational, social, and cultural services; and membership organizations.

In order to be included in the exemption the major industry group has to meet two criteria. The first is that the establishments fall within SIC's not now targeted for general schedule inspections. The second is that the establishments fall within the SIC's not now targeted for general schedule inspections. The second is that the establishments now fall within Major Industry Groups in SIC's whose average lost workday case injury rate, as published by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, for 1978-80 is at or below 75 percent of the private sector average.

Bank stocks can be a good deal for investors

By N. VON HOFFMAN
King Feature Service

Every time you pick up a newspaper's business section it seems the headline is "Bad News for Banks." How would you ever guess that seldom has there been a better time to look into bank shares? But before we get into that, let's deal with some of the things that have scared investors so badly that stock in our nation's largest financial institution, the Bank of America, is selling for what this fool would consider a bargain basement price of about $16 a share with a dividend of about 9.5 percent.

The single biggest item which has bothered people about banks is that tattered old high interest rates. High interest rates are a problem for some institutions like savings and loans and anybody else who, by fate or stupidity, has gotten himself in a situation where he must borrow money at a higher interest rate than he can turn around and lend it.

But all banks are not in that unhappy situation. America's big international banks like the B of A or City Bank are doing anything but bleeding to death because of high interest rates. These banks make a profit whether the rates are high or low. Do keep in mind that the last year commercial banks had a decline in their earnings was 1961. Does that sound like a troubled industry to you?

People also get spooked when they read that some down-at-the-heels Third World country has borrowed so many billions from the West's great international banks and has not readily apparent means of repaying the loans. Contrary to what the politicians may say to scare you, national debts, our own and-or everybody's, never get repaid. When they expire they get rolled over, which is banker talk for getting renewed, and meanwhile the interest payments roll on in perpetuity.

In the last severe recession, the one in 1974, a number of the big banks got clobbered by bad loans, especially in the area of real estate. That is not so this time around. Not only have the loan officers been more prudent the last few years, but these institutions have set aside fairly large chunks of money to offset anticipated losses of slow-pay or no-pay industrial borrowers.

One of the reasons that some investors get a bit iffy about bank stocks is they look at all those branch offices, an expensive way of schlurping up the money a bank intends to turn around and lend at a profit. But not all banks get their money by wooing smaller retail depositors.

Take, for instance, the mighty J.P. Morgan & Co. which owns Morgan Guaranty Trust, the nation's fifth largest bank. It derives its money from big, big depositors and it lends to big, prime quality lenders. Currently selling around $49 a share, this is its lowest price in almost two years when it was down around $40. Even if it does drop like that, for patient investors who don't panic, it is harder to imagine a safer buy with a possibility for price growth. Plus you'll be getting upwards of 7 percent in dividends.

Costing less at around $17 a share and paying a slightly higher dividend is Bankers Trust, our eighth largest bank. It has adopted the Morgan outlook on how to grow very rich and is in the process of dumping its retail operations.

At the other extreme is the Bank of America which made it into the number one slot by being the small person's bank par excellence.

Gays rally in Little Rock

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Some of the 60 people attending a rally for homosexual rights wore paper bags over their heads after the American Civil Liberties Union advised the demonstrators to conceal their identities.

State ACLU leader Sandra Kurjiaka warned before the Gay Pride Week demonstration at the Capitol on Sunday that several people photographed at the rally last year lost their jobs. She asked photographers not to take close-ups of the demonstrators, who wore lavender armbands and waved signs and balloons.

"It's time for gay people in Arkansas to stop going to the back of the bus," she said.

A 1977 state law makes homosexual acts a criminal offense, and Mrs. Kurjiaka chided the demonstrators for not protesting sooner. "Your silence speaks loudly," she said. "Through your silence you let them say that you are deviant and perverted."

Paul Gordon, president of the Arkansas Gay Rights organization that co-sponsored the rally with the ACLU, said he was pleased with the turnout, more than double the number that attended last year.

Los Angeles lawyer Susan McGreivy, director of the National ACLU Gay Rights Project, told demonstrators that conservative groups have labeled homosexuals and lesbians as criminals, sick or sinners.

She told reporters Saturday that homosexuals can't live a normal life in Arkansas because of the state's anti-sodomy law. Homosexuals can be fired from jobs and lose custody of their children if they acknowledge their homosexuality, she said.

"People do not choose to be homosexuals and do not deserve to be prosecuted or persecuted because of it," she said.

The Legislature passed the 1977 law outlawing homosexual acts after enacting a state criminal code legalizing sex between consenting adults. Ms. McGreivy said 27 states have decriminalized homosexuality.

An unidentified woman shows her support of the gay rights movement at a rally on the steps of the state capitol in Little Rock, Ark., Sunday. Several people wore paper bags over their heads to conceal their identities.

ERA prospects dim in Florida

By MATT BOKOR

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — The Equal Rights Amendment, which needs approval by three more states in the next nine days to become part of the U.S. Constitution, is going back before the Florida Legislature, but its prospects are dim.

A headcount of legislators published by The Florida Times-Union of Jacksonville on the eve of today's special legislative session showed the embattled amendment losing 22-17 in the Senate — where it has already been defeated four times — with one lawmaker undecided.

In the House, 60 members said they opposed the amendment, 57 members supported it and three said they were undecided.

ERA supporters planned to converge on the Capitol for today's opening session, and extra security was ordered. About 10,000 people were expected to descend on the usually sleepy college town.

"The opening day of a regular session is always hectic," said House Sergeant-at-Arms Wayne Westmark. "I'm multiplying that 10 to 20 times. We've never had to contend with anything like this before."

Legislative officials added squads of state security officers, and plainclothes officers from the Leon County Sheriff's Department and the Tallahassee Police Department were called into duty. Extra doorkeepers were hired outside the House and Senate galleries.

Senate President W.D. Childers said lawmakers wanted to avoid "at all cost" a disruption of the legislative session, such as occurred last week in Illinois, where the House chamber was invaded by pro-ERA demonstrators.

The amendment, which would ban discrimination on the basis of sex, needs ratification from 38 states by June 30 to become part of the Constitution. Thirty-five states have ratified it so far, but five have rescinded their approval, although their actions are under review by the U.S. Supreme Court.

The amendment was approved in the Florida House in 1975 and 1979, after being defeated in 1973. The Senate has rejected it four times, most recently in 1979.

A poll by Louis Harris of New York showed Florida residents support the amendment by a margin of 57 percent to 37 percent.

"There are no more reasonable grounds for opposing it," said Judy Goldsmith, vice president of the National Organization for Women.

Legislative leaders expressed hope the measure would be dealt with quickly, so they can work on several other measures for which Gov. Bob Graham summoned them into session, including bills to broaden police search-and-seizure powers and ease the cost of malpractice insurance for the state's doctors.

Meanwhile, about 300 people, mostly men, gathered Sunday at a Father's Day rally in Boston to support the amendment.

Inmate's visit helps critically ill son

By STEVE BAKER

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The hospital reunion of a critically ill boy and his father, released from prison for the occasion, had a "positive" effect on the patient, says his doctor.

But surgery might still be necessary for 15-year-old Richard Denton, to remove his bleeding intestinal ulcers caused by his severe bout with Rocky Mountain spotted fever, said Dr. John W. Greene.

Johnson & Johnson to have shuttle cargo

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The Air Force won't have the only top-secret cargo on Sunday's fourth test mission of the space shuttle Columbia.

Johnson & Johnson, the makers of bandages and pharmaceuticals, is almost as tight-lipped as the Pentagon about the experiment it will send into orbit aboard the reusable spacecraft.

"This industry is competitive," Johnson & Johnson spokesman Jim Merry said in an interview published today by the Cocoa TODAY newspaper.

Johnson & Johnson will send along a suitcase-sized container of organic compounds that will most likely be used for making ultra-pure medicines in the gravity-free environment of the shuttle, he said.

It is one of seven commercial, government and student experiments that will be aboard when astronauts Thomas Mattingly and Henry Hartsfield pilot the spacecraft on its final test mission. The shuttle is scheduled for liftoff at 11 a.m. EDT Sunday, with the 87-hour countdown beginning Tuesday night.

The Columbia is scheduled to land at Edwards Air Force Base in California after its seven-day mission.

The Johnson & Johnson experiment is designed to separate biological materials with an electrical current in the absence of gravity, Merry said. Gravity is responsible for the natural stirring that occurs when a substance is heated, and limits the concentration of pure substance produced when different types of cells are separated from long-chain organic molecules.

Greene, chief of adolescent care at Vanderbilt Children's Hospital, said Sunday that Richard's fever has subsided but the boy was suffering from internal bleeding and kidney failure.

"We may have to operate again," Greene said. Richard had been in and out of a coma since arriving at Vanderbilt on May 31 after contracting the fever, apparently from a tick bite, his doctors said.

But he woke up last week and asked to see his father, Charles Denton, 39, who is serving a 15-year term at Lake Butler Medical and Reception Center in north Florida, officials said.

Family members said the boy who had not seen his father in 1 1/2 years, did not know Denton was behind bars for drug trafficking and firearms convictions.

"He knew his father well and obviously responded to his presence," Greene said. "I don't know how it will affect his health, but it was a positive experience."

After the 30-minute visit Sunday with his son behind a drawn curtain in the intensive care unit, Denton said the boy was unable to talk, but communicated "through hand motions and with his eyes."

"He agreed to try and get stronger in mind and body to get through the operation," Denton said. "He shares my belief he can overcome it."

The doctor said he had no plans to ask law enforcement agents to allow the father to stay nearby. Bill Tomlinson, night supervisor at the Metro Workhouse, said the father was scheduled to return to Florida today.

Rocky Mountain spotted fever, an acute and infectious disease, is usually transmitted by tick bites and characterized by fever, muscular pains and skin eruptions.

Greene said the teenager is on dialysis, a machine that purifies the blood when the kidneys fail, and may lose sight in his right eye.

The father was escorted to the Nashville hospital by two Davidson County sheriff's deputies who volunteered to make the trip to and from Florida. Officials in Florida and Tennessee agreed to allow Denton to make the trip, but would not finance it.

Davidson County Sheriff Fate Thomas, who dispatched the volunteers, said donations have been pouring in to offset the expenses.

Three people killed by lightning

DEL NORTE, Colo. (AP) — A Texas man and two of his children were killed by lightning while hiking Saturday, the Rio Grande County coroner reports.

A third child also was struck by the lightning bolt but survived, coroner Dave Scheel said, and was treated at St. Joseph Hospital in Del Norte.

Scheel identified the victims as Gary Wayne Allen, 34, his son, also named Gary Wayne Allen, 14, and his daughter, Krystal Dawn Allen, 10, all from Plano, Texas.

The survivor, 12-year-old Kenneth Allen, was released from the hospital on Sunday. He told authorities the group had been hiking in a mountainous area near Beaver Creek Lake when a violent thunderstorm approached.

"He had no recollection of the strike at all," Scheel said of the survivor.

Orientation to be held at Central YMCA

An orientation will be held June 28 at the Central YMCA, 800 N. Big Spring St., for members and non-members.

Orientation will be offered from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. each Monday. Subjects covered will include fitness, aerobic facts, heart

Never in his wildest fantasy did Tom dream...

Watson's miracle chip wins spine-tingling Open

AP Laserphoto

Guess who has just done what?

By THOMAS BOSWELL
The Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. — Fifteen years ago, when he was just a teen-ager and Jack Nicklaus was already established as the king of golf, Tom Watson would find a way, on Sunday mornings, to be the first sweep- ing player on the Pebble Beach Golf Links. "I'd drive down here from Stanford (University) and tee it up at 7 a.m., when I'd have the whole course to myself," said Watson Sunday evening. "Honestly, I did fantasize about coming down the stretch, head to head with Jack Nicklaus in the U.S. Open. "Then, I'd get to the last couple of holes and say, 'You've gotta play these one under par to win the Open.' Of course, I'd always play 'em two over. And I'd say, 'You have a long way to go, kid.'"

TOM WATSON has had to come a long, slow, arduous way. But Sunday, all his fantasies, plus one piece of magic so outlandish that even a boy playing at sunrise would never dream it, became reality. And history.

With one shot that will live in the retelling as long as golf is played, Watson wiped away — like a Pacific fog along the cliffs evaporating with the morning sun — the last blemish on his great and growing record.

Years from now, it will probably be forgotten that Watson won this 82nd U.S. Open by two shots over Nicklaus in a breath-stopping back-nine duel. In time, the details of this misty, Monterey evening may fade — even the trenchant fact that, with Nicklaus and his 69-284 total already in the clubhouse, Watson finished birdie-birdie on the 71st and 72nd holes to slash his way out of a tie with the fabled Golden Bear.

In 19th-hole lore, only a few will recall that Watson's pilgrimage to his first Open title was carved out with a week of creditable work (72-72-68-70) for a six-under-par total of 282. To be sure, no one will recall that Bill Rogers (74), Bobby Clampett (70) and Dan Pohl (70) tied for third at 286.

In the end, only one moment — one shot that epitomizes both Watson and his game — will last. Already, Watson calls it, "The shot ... the greatest shot of my life, the most meaningful."

AP Laserphoto

Jack Nicklaus...a birdie that didn't fall.

IT'S THAT one swing, and no other, that prompted Nicklaus to grab Watson in a fraternal bear hug as he stepped off the final green and tell him, "You son of a ... you're something else. I'm really proud of you."

Naturally, Watson remembers the embrace a bit differently: "Jack said, 'I'm gonna beat you, you little SOB, if it takes me the rest of my life.'"

So, for the moment, we will forget how Watson began the day tied for the lead with Rogers. We will pass over the jubilation that swept this seaside links as the dormant Nicklaus birdied five straight holes on the front nine — the third through seventh — to forge, momentarily, into a one-shot lead.

We will negligently dash past the details of how two bogeys by Nicklaus — one perhaps abetted by a former U.S. president — plus a cross-country birdie by Watson, pushed the 32-year-old redhead back into the lead by two shots. And, finally, we will gloss over Nicklaus' classy birdie at the 15th and Watson's wild drive and bogey at the 16th that deadlocked the pair for the lead one final time.

The scene thus set, we must return to the one moment from this Open that will outlast and, unfortunately, diminish all others. Outlined against the blue-gray sky of Carmel Bay, Watson stands locked in ankle-deep rough beside the 17th green. In trying for a daring birdie — hitting a two-iron into the breeze at the 209-yard par 3 — Watson has, instead, put himself in just the predicament for which Jack Neville built this course in 1919.

No shot in golf is a better test of nerves, experience and touch than the "grass explosion" from high, unforgiving U.S. Open rough to a pin on a glass-slick green that is only 18 feet away.

WATCHING ON TV, Nicklaus says he thought, "There's no way in the world he can get up-and-down from there (for par). Even if he has a good lie, you couldn't drop the ball straight down out of your hand on that green and keep it from going less than 10 feet past the pin. I figured, 'Now, he's going to have to birdie the last hole just to tie me and get into a playoff (on Monday).'"

Watson's opinion was different. "I'm not trying to get this close," he recalled telling his caddie. "I'm going to make it."

Why shouldn't he have thought so? Perhaps no man since Arnold Palmer in his prime has so consistently willed the ball into the hole from ludicrously improper places. On the 10th, Watson was on a cliff side amidst wildflowers; he backed to the fringe 24 feet away and sank his Texas-wedge shot to save par. On the 11th, he sank a 22-footer from the fringe for a birdie. And at the 14th, he was in the frog hair again, and holed out from 35 feet. As Nicklaus put it, "Yes, yes, I heard about all those shots. Just another tap-in for Tom."

With this preternatural confidence, which is his trademark, Watson stepped into the weeds by the 17th quickly and, opening the face of his sand wedge, "sliced across the ball and slide the edge of the club under it. It was a good lie, with the ball hanging in the middle of the grass. If it had been down, I'd have had no shot ..."

"As soon as it landed on the green, I knew it was in," said Watson, whose whole face was alive with hunger as the ball trickled and broke — a full foot and a half from left to right.

"When it went in the hole, I about jumped in the Pacific Ocean," said Watson with a laugh. He ran at least 20 yards around the edge of the green, his putter over his head in victory and his feet carrying him he knew not where. Then, commanding himself, Watson spun and pointed at his caddie and yelled, "Told ya!"

"He was chokin', chokin' bad," Watson said with a grin. "He couldn't utter anything."

NEITHER COULD Nicklaus. "When he makes that, the golf tournament's history. ... I've had it happen before, but I didn't think it was going to happen again. But it did. ... How would I evaluate that shot? One of the worst that ever happened to me. Right up there with (Lee) Trevino's (chip-in) at Muirfield (on the 71st hole of the '72 British Open)."

An almost certain bogey that probably would have lost his Open and branded Watson a gagger had been turned, in a twinkling, into one of the most gloriously improbable Open-winning birdies in history.

Had Watson merely parred the 17th, he would have had to birdie the 18th to win. And nobody has ever birdied the 72nd hole of the Open to win. As it was, Watson's downhill 18-foot birdie on the last hole was a wonderful crescendo for a day full of tremulously rolling drums. But, had Watson needed to make it to win, it might have been a tougher proposition.

Watson's playing partner, Rogers, said of that soft shot into history, "He couldn't have hit a better shot if he'd dropped down a hundred balls."

"Try about a thousand," said Nicklaus drooly. Told of Nicklaus' odds-making, Watson — as superb a greenside magician as Nicklaus has always been bear-pawed — said, "Let's go out and do it. I might make some money."

Watson faced up to every sort of Open pressure Sunday. "I was on pins and needles all day. I was nervous. ... It reminded me of the last round of the '78 Crosby here (which Watson won) when I told my playing partner on the first tee, 'Man, I'm nervous. ... I don't know how you feel, but I don't feel worth a damn inside.'"

Watson woke up nervous, then calmed himself by reading two newspapers "front to back. Ask me anything about the earthquake in El Salvador or the budget problems." His swing was loosey-goosey all day — he missed only one fairway, but his putting was nervous and cold on the front nine, especially when he missed a two-foot birdie putt at the seventh.

Perhaps Watson was unhinged by all those bear tracks he had to walk through. As he trudged through the third through seventh, all he heard was buzzing talk about how Nicklaus, after a shoddy bogey-par start, had been knocking down flags for five consecutive holes. By the time Nicklaus had made two-foot tap-ins for birdie at the fifth and sixth, he was tied for the lead. And when he sank a 12-foot curler at the gorgeous seventh to take the lead, his caddie — son Jack Jr. — jumped nearly two feet in the air and began applauding.

NICKLAUS misclubbed himself at the over-a-gorge eighth and was lucky to make bogey from a hanging lie on the edge of a precipice. That, however, won't be the bogey that haunts him. At the 11th, tied for the lead, he had a flat, slightly downhill 18-foot birdie putt that he slid four feet past and missed coming back. What could have accounted for his only mental lapse of the day?

No one will ever know for sure, but lovers of anecdote might enjoy the fact that former President Gerald Ford, a notorious three-putter, walked down from a course-side house and stood conspicuously by the 11th green as Nicklaus three-putted. Ford then came forward to shake Nicklaus' hand and exchange pleasantries at the 12th tee — an intrusion into serious work that no normal citizen would, presumably, have dared to attempt. Call it the Presidential Bogey or Jerry's Whammy.

But Watson needed no assistance. "I reached a period of calm about the 13th hole," Watson said. "By the 15th, I knew it was just the two of us left. I drew upon old memories of playing head-to-head with Jack and, in a small way, maybe in a large way, really, that helped me win. We've had some pretty good battles." Which, Watson didn't need to mention, he's usually won.

In the gathering dusk around America's most lustroously atmospheric links, Watson was aglow with pride and vindication. Asked, teasingly, "Why can't you win the PGA?" he said, "Up 'til now, it's been, why couldn't Sam Snead and I win the Open. Now, it'll be, why can't Arnold Palmer and I win the PGA? Well, I'll stay here all night and talk about it."

Time and again, Watson had to return, as he will have the pleasure of returning for the rest of his life, to the Impossible Shot.

Jan wins second straight

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — Surprising even herself, Jan Stephenson rallied from 5 strokes behind to capture the $200,000 Lady Keystone Open and give her father, who is also her caddy, the Father Day's gift he had asked for.

The single-stroke victory Sunday at the Hershey Country Club was Stephenson's second consecutive Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament victory.

Stephenson, who won the LPGA championship last week at Kings Island, Ohio, carded a 3-under-par 68 there to edge out Barbara Moxness and Alexandra Reinhardt, who tied for second.

Stephenson finished with a 5-under total of 211 on the 6,347-yard, par-72 course.

"I can't believe that I won coming from this far behind," Stephenson. "I'm usually a front-runner." She said her father, Frank, wanted the victory as a Father's Day present.

"He mentioned it to me on the third hole. I looked at the leader board and I didn't think I had much of a chance."

Stephenson had put her herself in a difficult position by bogeying the first two holes, before blazing into contention with five birdies in a row beginning at the seventh hole.

"It was total shock to my system to bogey the first two holes," she said. "For 2½ days nothing was going in for me. I finally dropped in a 30-footer on seven and that gave me the confidence I needed."

Stephenson went on to record another birdie at the 15th to take the lead from Moxness for the first time.

Cubs open homestand tonight

Midland's Cubs return to Cubs Stadium tonight with a new outlook on the Texas League baseball race, but unfortunately against the same old opponent.

The Cubs, after finishing third in the first half West Division race, start with a clean slate tonight, but against El Paso's Diablos, the first half winners.

The Diablos clinched the pennant last week while winning six straight against Midland as the Cubs finished the first half almost the way they started it, with a losing streak. Midland lost five in a row at San Antonio to open the season.

However, when the Cubs face El Paso this time, it will be with two factors in their favor...home field edge and law of averages.

Midland opens the second-half race with a 12-day homestand, starting with El Paso and finishing with Amarillo. Midland has some rainouts to make up against the Diablos, who will be starting Jim Koonitz (3-6) and Dan Burns (2-0) in tonight's games against Tom Smith (3-4) and Carlos Gil (2-3).

El Paso brings a seven-game winning streak into Midland and also has won seven straight against Midland.

Centerfielder Henry Cotto leads the Cubs in hitting with a .341 average and leads the Texas League in steals with 31. The Cubs, despite a below .500 record in the first half, have eight batters with better-than-.300 averages. Carmelo Martinez leads the Cubs in power with 14 homers, 19 doubles and 50 rbi. Doug Welenc with seven wins and Jon Perlman with six lead the pitching staff.

Another win for Jan and this time a kiss from Dad.

COM beats out Amarillo AC for swim title

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

The City of Midland Swim Team made it two in a row Sunday when they clinched the 35th annual West Texas Invitational Swim Meet at the newly dedicated Doug Russell Pool. COM scored 1,105 points in the three days of swimming to beat out Amarillo Aquatic Club with 1016.5 in second and Odessa Aquatic Club in third.

"I was very happy with the way our kids swam," said COM coach Hank O'Neill. "We had some good early season times. I think Sam Perry was one of those pleasant surprises you sometimes have. All of his times were his best times along with Greg Levin who had his best times in all his events."

"There's just a ton of them," continued O'Neill. "I think 85 percent of the kids had their best times. Even with the rain delay the kids kept coming back to swim well. Tracey Delany was another surprise in the 50 free. She dropped over a second off her time. She should be close to breaking the 30 second mark which for a girl her age (13) is an excellent time."

COM team members swam to 15 first place finishes in the final day of the competition to pave the way to the team title. Enroute, Laura Morse (11-12) and Becky Simpson (13-14) took home high point honors with 86 and 73, respectively.

Michelle Hastings was the high point winner in the 10 & under age group with 81 points and she was also the only swimmer to collect a new record Sunday. She added her second record of the meet her first was set Friday in the 50 breaststroke) by swimming the 100-meter breaststroke in a time of 1:26.77. Hastings outswam her closest competitor, Marcie Forward of OAC, by nearly 10 seconds.

The final girl's high points award went to Sheri Paradee of AAC with 97 points in the senior division.

Tony Capwell dominated his division, 11-12, by coming within one point of the century mark with a 99 score. Jeffrey McPherson of OAC won the 10 and under honor with 81, Robert Fulton of AAC the 13-14 with 76 and Bobby Breaux the senior award with 78 points.

On the final day of racing, Caroline Reed, Michaela Hasek, Mike Seay, Laura Morse and James Shupp each collected a pair of victories while Becky Simpson, and Suzi Kim Simpson added one each. Three relay teams also came in first.

Morse's two victories on Sunday gave her a total of eight for the meet in the 11-12 age division. The Simpson sisters, Becky and Suzi, also had a good weekend with six and four titles respectively. Seay won a total five races and Reed was a winner in four.

Olson, Ripley set sights on world vault mark

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Billy Olson and Dan Ripley, co-holders of the American pole vault record, have set their sights on the world mark and would like to get it against the Soviets, who have reached the two best heights in the event's history.

Olson and Ripley both cleared 18 feet, 9¼ inches Sunday night in the USA-Mobil Outdoor Track and Field Championships, bettering the American record of 18-8¾ set by Olson last March 20.

"I'm getting close to where I need to be," Olson said of his physical condition. "Hopefully, in about two weeks, I will be in top shape to jump against the Russians. That's the meet I really want to win."

The United States national team — the first two American finishers in each event in the national championships qualified for the squad — will face the Soviet Union July 23 at Indianapolis.

The Americans also will meet the Pan-African and West German teams at Durham, N.C. June 26-27 and the East Germans at Karl-Marx Stadt July 9-10.

"I am going to point to the meet with Russia as a chance to do it (break the record)," said the 23-year-old Olson, of Abilene Christian University. "The Russians will be ready, but so will we."

Ripley indicated he would skip the triangular meet at Durham, but would be ready for the Russians.

Konstantin Volkov of the Soviet Union has the best jump in pole vault history, 19-2. But that was not submitted for world recognition, because it was in an exhibition.

Vladimir Polyakov is next with 19-0¾, but that mark has been pending for nearly a year. The accepted pole vault record is 19-0¼, by France's Thierry Vigneron.

After Olson and Ripley each surpassed the American record on their second attempts, they had the bar raised to 19-1. However, neither was close on three attempts apiece.

Since they still were tied for first place, each could have taken another shot at 19-1 in a jump-off. But they both agreed to pass — and wound up tied for the national title.

"Billy said he was tired, and I was a lot more tired," said Ripley, 28. "I'm a lot older than he is. We were both happy and we were tired. If you know you are tired, all you are going to do is hurt yourself."

Olson concurred. "Dan and I were both tired and we figured that all we were going to do was get hurt if we kept going," he said.

Olson said that his best jump was at 18-9¼. "It was a total all-out effort," he said. "It drained me."

"I'm not worried about 19 feet," added Olson. "But that's a big barrier, and it makes you think a lot."

Aside from Olson and Ripley, perhaps the most gratified winner was Craig Virgin.

Virgin rallied in the homestretch to overtake Steve Ortiz of UCLA and win the 10,000 meters in 28:33.02.

"With eight laps to go, I almost gave up and walked off the track," said the fatigued Virgin, who earlier this year suffered a serious kidney ailment.

"That's how much I was hurting. My mind is more out of shape than my body. Going through what I've gone through the last few months put a severe dent in my confidence."
