Excerpts from Clinton, Willey depositions spill out into public view

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Clinton says he may have kissed Kathleen Willey on the forehead and embraced her, but nothing more. She says he forced a sexual encounter on her.

What really happened in a study adjacent to the Oval Office between the president and the woman who was upset because her husband faced financial ruin?

It is the second most important question in two legal proceedings - Paula Jones' sexual harassment lawsuit against Clinton and prosecutor Kenneth Starr's criminal investigation of an alleged presidential affair and cover-up involving former intern Monica Lewinsky.

The differing accounts spilled out into public view Friday with release of excerpts from Clinton's and Mrs. Willey's depositions.

Clinton embraced her and "put my hands on his genitals," prompting her to push him away, Mrs. Willey testified in the Jones case. The incident allegedly occurred on Nov. 29, 1993, when she went to see the president about trying to change her volunteer work into a paying White House job because of a "family crisis" involving impending financial disaster for her husband. He killed himself the same day, but she was unaware of that when she met with Clinton.

Mrs. Willey said she met with Clinton alone on her first day back at the White House after her husband's suicide and "I think I may have made a reference" to the genital groping incident.

"I said I just wanted that to be over with," and the president "was very kind and solicitous," she said.

In his account of their first meeting, Clinton said "I embraced her, I put my arms around her, I may have even kissed her on the forehead. There was nothing sexual about it."

"I was trying to help her calm down and trying to reassure her."

Mrs. Willey is an important witness in both the criminal investigation involving Ms. Lewinsky and Mrs. Jones' lawsuit.

In the Jones case, Mrs. Willey's story, if believed by a jury, would connote a pattern of predatory sexual behavior on Clinton's part. Mrs. Jones alleges exposed himself to her in a hotel suite while governor of Arkansas in 1991.

In the criminal investigation, Starr is looking into an alleged attempt to

New radio station plans announced

Longtime residents bring second station, KNNK, to local market

A new radio station, KNNK(FM), will be introduced in Hereford and the area in the late spring, it was announced this week by Buddy and Alva Lee Peeler, owners of Liveoak Broadcasting Corporation.

Peeler said the Class C2 facility will provide one of the strongest FM broadcast signals in the Hereford-Dimmitt-Friona triangle, with the primary coverage area serving these communities plus a fringe listening audience reaching into 10 other counties of West Texas and Eastern New Mexico.

KNNK's main studios will be located in Hereford. The assigned frequency is 100.5 mhz. and the effective radiated power is 43,000 watts, according to Peeler.

The Peelers have not announced what type of programming is being planned, saying only the "it will be something new and different and we think it will be well received.

Equipment orders were placed in February and construction will begin soon on a 496-foot tower which will be located between Hereford and Summerfield at the Deaf Smith-Castro county line.

After six months, Daniels is antsy

By DONALD M. COOPER
Brand Editor

Six months after the electrical explosion that burned him over nearly 30 percent of his body, Joe Don Daniels is antsy.

He doesn't like daytime television, and for much of the last six months he hasn't been able to use his hands well enough to keep himself busy with his woodworking, jewelry making and metal or stone work.

So, he took up painting and is thankful he's alive -- although he really doesn't remember what hit him.

It was Sept. 30, 1997, and Daniels, an electrician for the Hereford firm Brandon & Clark Inc., was working in the control room at a feed yard. He was working on a 400-amp clip and "that's the last thing I remember," Daniels said.

"It got real bright, real hot and I was thrown out the door. I saw white and he (his helper) saw orange-green," Daniels said. "I was on fire, and my helper tried to roll me to put out the fire, but I was on concrete (which wouldn't smother the flames), so he used a fire extinguisher."

Since then, he said, he's developed more compassion for burn victims, noting at first he didn't appreciate the pain they were enduring. However, since the accident, he's come to realize what a burn victim goes through.

"I'm still having a hard time, but it's getting better," Daniels said. Protective bandages still cover his arms and hands, but his hair, which was burned off, has grown back, although it's short. He also can turn his head, reaching about 65 percent range of motion.

"They (physical therapists) want me to get to 70 percent," he said, which means he probably will not have to undergo surgery to loosen the tissue in his neck.

Daniels joked about having plastic surgery, noting although his face isn't scarred, the fire "burned off my wrinkles and made me look younger."

"I didn't look in a mirror, didn't want to," he said. "One thing, you really can tell who your friends are when you get hurt."

He said several people drove to Lubbock to see him, although most of them were not allowed into the hospital's burn unit while he was recuperating.

Some did get past the obstacles and visited, he said, adding they all said, "Boy, do you look rough."

After the accident, he spent three weeks in intensive care at University Medical Center in Lubbock, but he notes proudly he was released two-three weeks earlier than doctors had anticipated.

One of the unexpected benefits, if there is such a thing, from the accident has been its effect on his diabetes.

Daniels said that apparently "all the sugar in my system is going to heal the burned areas," so he hasn't had an insulin shot in about three weeks.

He has been going to physical therapy at TRS (Therapy & Rehab Services), located in the 500 block of North 25 Mile Avenue. Having his physical therapists in Hereford has been a godsend to Daniels, who otherwise would have to have someone drive him to Amarillo several times a week for therapy because his hands are not in any condition to handle driving yet.

Daniels had praise for the clinic, which is managed by Laurie Cantu, and his therapists.

Shannon Timberlake has been the occupational therapist during his recuperation, while Estella Hy has been his physical therapist.

"Estella is the one who hurts me," he joked, noting the physical therapist has been very dedicated in helping him regain movement in his neck and hands.

"They've been really, really good to me," Daniels said.

He also hasn't been able to do his jewelry making or woodworking since the accident, so he has taken up painting to keep busy. But, he's looking forward to getting back to making jewelry, which he said he usually gives away for Christmas or birthday presents.

"But then, people turn around and give me stuff," he said.

He showed a ring, which he made from a 1940 quarter. He uses a mallet to pound the quarter into shape on a piece of railroad tie, then does the finishing work with a spoon -- a technique popularized by prisoners of war during World War II.

Daniels, whose house is filled with objects he's made from wood, stone or metal, said he wishes he could spend his time doing art rather than working as an electrician, but there's not a strong art market in this area and "I have to make a living."

Daniels will go back to the medical center in Lubbock this week for another examination. He's hoping the doctors will release him to return to work, at least on a part-time basis.

Before the accident, he worked for Brandon & Clark's outside service department, but if he's cleared to return to work he doesn't know what he will be doing.

But almost anything is better than daytime television.

'RETIRED': McBride's road has detours

By VIRGINIA ARTHO
Special to The Brand

Many of Hereford's senior citizens are representative of the courageous approach to life revealed in "A Parable of Life" by the 17th century Bishop Jacques Benigne Bossuet.

In the parable, Man is ordered by a mysterious Voice to ascend a mountain. The first advance finds him in delightful meadows radiant with flowers and purring streams.

He stoops to pluck some flowers, but hears the insistent Voice said, "Move forward."

Man climbs higher into sparse vegetation shadowed by towering cliffs, finally reaching the summit. The air is cool and rarified, but affords a sublime view of the world below. He thinks this is the final stop because he cannot move forward.

But with finality, the Voice sounds again "Move forward!" Man must step over a cliff into a bottomless chasm where everything has fallen away.

Bossuet's parable is pregnant with symbolism about human progress through youth to maturity. But what is perhaps most impressive is the willingness of an individual to keep moving forward, embracing life's changes and finding gifts in each stage.

Hereford's Juston McBride is an excellent example of someone who continues to make necessary, often unexpected, adjustments and comes out celebrating life. His lessons appropriately began in school, where the path he mapped out for his life started taking unexpected turns.

"I was in the Class of '44 at Texas A&M. But due to (World War II), we had to join in the enlisted reserve in order to stay in school. I started at Tarleton State University in Stephenville in September of '40 and was working my way through school," McBride said.

"At the end of the '41 year, I was a couple of courses behind. I couldn't take a full load because I was working. I went that summer, caught up with those two courses and got two courses ahead. Before the next year was out, we had to join this reserve corps. We didn't have the choice of taking off for the summer then. So, I went to school the year around.

"A&M came out with a policy if you had a 3.3 grade point average, they'd allow you to graduate six hours short. So I figured up if I'd taken 26 hours that last semester instead of about normal 18, I could meet that. Me and one other man in the animal science department went on and graduated in '43 instead of having to go back for the Class of '44."

"In fact, they called the reserve corps in March of '43 and sent us back to A&M to finish out that semester. Most of my class had to come back to school for one semester after they got out of the Army,"

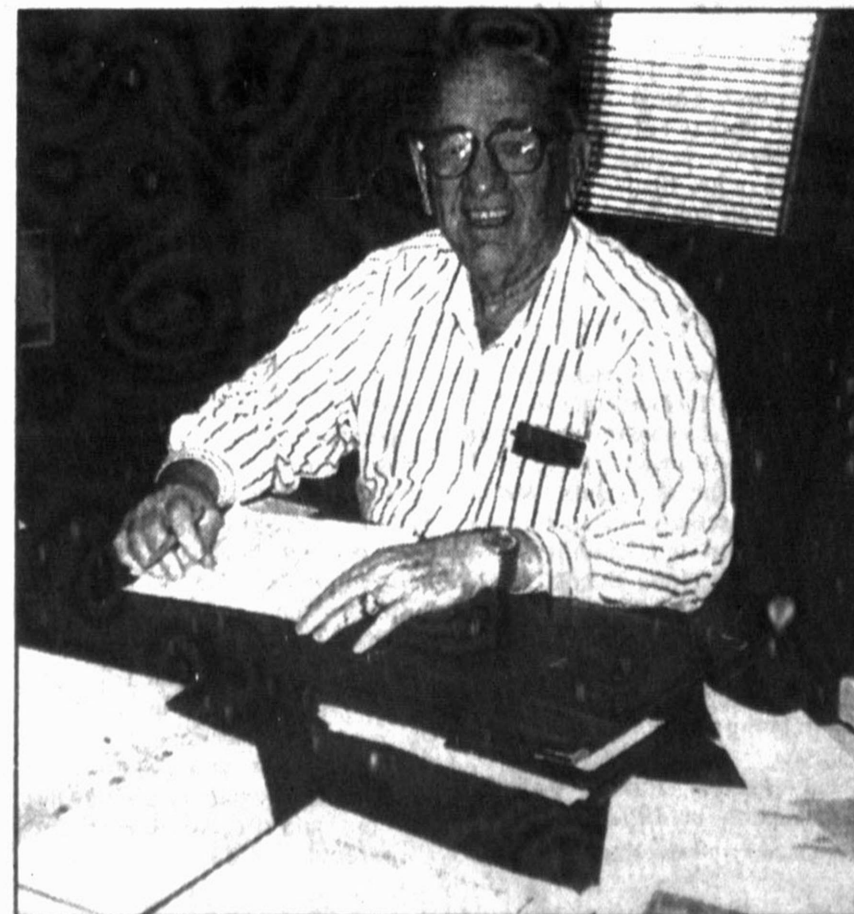

McBride said.

"I graduated and they sent us directly to OCS (Office Candidate School). Normally, we would have been given a second lieutenant reserve commission soon as we graduated, but they couldn't do that because we didn't have that final six weeks of military science field training required to finish the reserve program. In 90 days, we graduated OCS and had our commission as second lieutenants in the Army."

McBride said many of the new second lieutenants didn't have assignments, so he was among 39 Aggies who volunteered for the three different military branches.

High school classmate of Clinton's tells of long sexual relationship

WASHINGTON (AP) - A high school classmate of President Clinton's says that she and "Billy" had a long-running sexual relationship that included a regular exchange of notes and, once, a tearful discussion about sexual addiction.

In a deposition in Paula Jones' sexual harassment suit against the president, Dolly Kyle Browning of Dallas said Clinton was in tears at one point during a meeting at a Dallas-Fort Worth Airport hotel in May 1988 when she rattled off 20 questions she had learned in her own therapy for sexual addiction.

The "big question," Browning said in her deposition, was "have your sexual activities jeopardized your life goals?"

Browning testified that Clinton, then Arkansas' governor, grew "visibly upset" upon hearing that.

In his own deposition in the Jones case, Clinton acknowledged a long friendship with Browning, which dates to when they were children in Hot Springs, Ark. But he denied they had a sexual relationship and said she was "mad at me because I'd never been her lover."

Excerpts from both depositions became public Friday as part of the court filings in Mrs. Jones' lawsuit.

Browning said Clinton has perjured himself and that their affair ran from the mid-1970s until allegations surfaced in early 1992 that Clinton and Jennifer Flowers had had a sexual relationship.

Portions of Browning's deposition, taken Oct. 28 in the Dallas law offices of Mrs. Jones' attorneys, became public on Friday. Mrs. Jones' attorneys filed a motion in Little Rock, Ark., to quash Clinton's request to throw out their client's sexual harassment lawsuit against the president.

The deposition, taken Oct. 28 in the Dallas law offices of Mrs. Jones' attorneys, was accompanied by photocopies of letters Browning and Clinton exchanged while he was governor and attorney general of Arkansas. Some were in response to gifts Browning had sent to Clinton, including a 1964 Arkansas Razorback glass and an August 1965 issue of "National Geographic" featuring a story about Winston Churchill.

Clinton signed several, "Love, Bill," and in one included a phone number for her to call so they could meet in Texas.

Both Browning's deposition and a March 6 "declaration" accompanying the filing said her relationship with Clinton ended abruptly when Browning called Clinton's secretary in January 1992. She said she told the woman that Star magazine was about to print a story about the Clinton and Ms. Flowers, a former Arkansas state employee who claimed to have had her own 12-year affair with Clinton.

Browning said she then called a New Hampshire office or apartment where Clinton was staying during the 1992 presidential campaign. The phone call was answered by her brother, who was then working on Clinton's campaign, and he urged her to deny that she and Clinton had an affair, she said in the deposition. "If you cooperate with the media, we will destroy you," she quoted her brother as saying.

The next time she saw Clinton was at their 30th high school reunion in 1994, Browning testified. She said he greeted her, "How are you?" and she replied with an expletive, prompting a nearby Secret Service agent to reach toward her. "It's all right," she quoted Clinton as telling the agent.

Browning said she and Clinton then spoke for about 45 minutes, during which he apologized for any threat made to her. At the end of their conversation, Clinton asked her to move to Washington, Browning testified.

McKinney acquitted on 18 charges in misconduct trial

Six-week ordeal ends, Sgt. Major found guilty of obstruction of justice

FORT BELVOIR, Va. (AP) - Sgt. Maj. Gene McKinney, once the Army's top enlisted man, was convicted of trying to persuade his chief accuser in his sexual misconduct trial to lie. But he was acquitted of 18 other charges.

McKinney was found guilty Friday of obstruction of justice after a six-week trial in which six military women testified he groped or crudely pressured them for sex.

He stood bolt upright and showed no emotion as the verdicts were read. His wife, Wilhemina, rocked in her seat and sobbed with relief at each "not guilty," and mouthed the words "Yes, yes, yes."

Upon hearing the lone guilty verdict, she cried, "Oh God."

Behind Mrs. McKinney sat five of his accusers. Several blinked back tears. The first woman to publicly accuse McKinney, Sgt. Maj. Brenda Hoster, shook her head in disbelief.

McKinney faces a maximum of five years in prison, dishonorable discharge or reduction in rank, but the jury also has the option of imposing no punishment when it returns Monday for the sentencing phase of the court-martial. Had he been convicted on all 19 charges, he could have faced 55 years in prison.

McKinney, 47, was the first black person to become sergeant major of the Army, a powerful post as the chief representative in Washington for the ranks of enlisted soldiers. He was removed from the post last year after the charges were made.

The conviction arose from the only physical evidence presented by the prosecution: a telephone conversation with McKinney taped by Sgt. Christine Fetrow. She testified that McKinney pursued her for sex for two years, often calling her at home. Her accusations accounted for 10 of the charges.

In a three-minute tape played for the jury, McKinney tried to persuade her to tell Army investigators that their conversations were only about professional development "and that kind of stuff."

"Well, all you have to do is tell them that we talked a lot," McKinney said on the tape, which was made more than a year ago. "That's it. ... That's all they need to know."

Ms. Fetrow testified that she felt "like he was asking me to lie," but McKinney testified that he was merely instructing her to tell the truth.

She testified that after she came forward, someone carved "Die Bitch" into her apartment door. No one was ever caught. The Army put her into a witness protection program.

McKinney's attorney, Charles Gittins, said Ms. Fetrow's taped conversation was a successful effort by the government to "trap" his client.

"We accept the verdict," he said. "Obviously, we would like to have had a not guilty verdict across the board."

The rest of the case boiled down to the testimony of the six women against McKinney's unwavering denials on the witness stand and assertions that his accusers were vengeful women angry over job or personal slights.

Ms. Hoster's attorney, Susan Barnes, said she was not surprised that the jury sided with McKinney under that circumstance.

"These cases are hard to prove in a military culture where women are still treated as second-class citizens," Ms. Barnes said. "They don't have as much credibility as men."

Karen Johnson, a retired Air Force lieutenant colonel and a vice president of the National Organization for Women, said, "Certainly, I am surprised when you have six women coming forth with allegations of sexual misconduct and none were believed."

The military jury consisted of two male officers, two female officers and four enlisted men. They were forbidden to speak to reporters, at least until after sentencing.

The Army refused to comment Friday.

The scandal broke when Ms. Hoster, McKinney's former speech writer, went public with her claim that McKinney came to her hotel room late one night during a business trip to Hawaii, picked her up and kissed her.

Ms. Hoster said she decided to make her charges public after the Army appointed McKinney to a panel studying the problem of sexual harassment following a scandal at the Aberdeen Proving Ground.

Five other women subsequently came forward to accuse McKinney of pressuring them for sex. Only one, Sgt. Christine Roy, alleged McKinney actually forced her to have sex; she was nearly eight months pregnant at the time.

The five accusers who were in court for the verdict declined to comment, saying they will issue a joint statement after McKinney's sentencing.

President urges approval of bills

Wants emergency spending for disaster victims, UN debts

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Clinton urged Congress today to approve emergency spending bills, including money to aid victims of natural disasters and to settle U.S. debts to the United Nations, "right now, in the next several days."

In his weekly radio address, Clinton criticized Republican efforts to attach an anti-abortion measure to a spending bill that would pay off $1 billion in past-due U.N. dues.

He also rapped GOP efforts to attach language to the emergency spending bill that would block the Federal Communications Commission from ordering free broadcast time for political candidates. At Clinton's request, the FCC is drafting proposals that would require broadcasters either to provide free time or give deeper discounts on ads than they do now.

The president accused Republican lawmakers of trying to slip unrelated, controversial provisions into the emergency spending legislation, moves he said were "guaranteed to produce gridlock and delay."

Clinton did not directly threaten a veto, but he recalled that when Congress attached controversial measures to similar emergency legislation last year, "I said, no."

"Congress would be unwise to head down that road again," he said. "Instead, let's work together to enact a straightforward emergency measure. No unacceptable provisions, no gimmicks."

Noting that Congress has 68 work days remaining in this session, Clinton said: "We must act now - not over the next 68 days, but right now, in the next several days."

One of two emergency funding bills before Congress includes more than $1.8 billion to pay for keeping U.S. troops in Bosnia longer than originally planned as well as for the recent buildup of American forces in the Persian Gulf. It also provides $642 million for recovery from storms and other natural disasters in Florida, California, New England and Guam.

Republicans do not oppose spending the money, but they want the added costs to be offset by cuts in domestic programs.

CLINTON

twist the testimony of a corroborating witness, Linda Tripp, who ran into Mrs. Willey right after she emerged from the Oval Office. Mrs. Willey confided her alleged sexual encounter to Tripp, who eventually told Newsweek magazine. Separately, it was Tripp's tape recordings of Ms. Lewinsky that triggered Starr's criminal investigation.

In January, Ms. Lewinsky gave Tripp three pages of "talking points" urging her to file an affidavit in the Jones case expressing doubt that Mrs. Willey's story is true. The talking points - whose authorship no one is publicly admitting - would have Tripp saying she does not think Mrs. Willey was telling the truth. The talking points contain wording indicative of a lawyer's sophisticated hand behind them. Starr is trying to find out who wrote the document.

Excerpts from Clinton's Jan. 17 deposition released Friday in the Jones case are the first public airing of the president's own words about his relationship with Ms. Lewinsky. Clinton says he joked with Ms. Lewinsky around last Christmas that "you would qualify" to be a witness in the Jones case.

The conversation came as longtime friend Vernon Jordan was telling Clinton about efforts to arrange a job for her - a task the president testified he had little interest in and recalls almost nothing about.

Of his conversation with Ms. Lewinsky, Clinton told Mrs. Jones' lawyers that "before Christmas we were joking about how you-all ... were going to call every woman I'd ever talked to ... and so I said you would qualify."

"Whatever she said" in response, "I don't remember," Clinton added. "Probably just some predictable thing."

Clinton was also asked about talking to Jordan about helping Ms. Lewinsky find a job.

"She'd come to him for advice about leaving to New York," Clinton said of Ms. Lewinsky and Jordan.

The other measure is to settle up on U.N. dues and to increase financing for the International Monetary Fund. That bill is unpopular among Republicans.

In his radio address, taped before he and his wife, Hillary, left Friday for a weekend stay at Camp David, Md., Clinton called the emergency funding measures "vital to the national interest." He said Republicans are to blame if the money is delayed by extraneous debate.

$43 million bid may not save bankrupt Pan Am

MIAMI (AP) - A $43 million bid may not be enough to save bankrupt Pan Am.

The offer from former TWA owner Carl Icahn got a discouraging assessment from the judge overseeing the case, who said Friday that only $8 million would go to the Miami-based airline's creditors.

"I don't see it as the solution to the Pan Am problem," U.S. Bankruptcy Judge A. Jay Cristol said, noting that it would mean selling off the company's best assets.

To close the deal in 30 days, Icahn would require labor contracts, a reservation system, leases on seven jets and federal transfer of Pan Am's certificate to fly.

Cristol said he owed "a great debt of thanks" to Icahn for appraising the airline's assets but noted his bailout gives no guarantee of resumed flights.

"We talk about Mr. Icahn riding up with $43 million," Cristol said. "He may have $43 million in his pocket, but he's only going to put $8 million on the table."

Much of the money would go instead to get the airline flying quickly again. Under the plan, $10 million would go to cover unused Pan Am tickets.

If the plan went through, Pan Am could be flying again in as little as three months.

After maneuvers at Camp A.P. Hill, McBride was among a group selected for the Corps of Engineers. The group had to go through the engineer OCS for another 90 days.

"That's when they formed all the combat engineer battalions designed ... to assist in, primarily, the European theater.

"We go over there before the Battle of the Bulge. The 3rd Army was short on troops ... (because it) had expanded so fast on the territory," he said. "Gen. (George) Patton took about nine battalions of engineers, put them with a cavalry unit and made a new division ... to fill the holes in his lines. We stayed the whole campaign there until the end of WWII. Then he just shifted us from one place to the other. Two primary battalions we worked with were 4th and 7th Armored.

"We did whatever they needed us to do. We fought as infantry or built bridges or repaired roads (ahead of the troops) to keep the division moving through muddy, rocky roads," he said.

McBride stayed in the Army Reserves after leaving active duty in 1946, noting he was eligible for recall for 10 years anyway.

As a member of the Army's active reserve, McBride was required to attend meetings "about once a week, then go to summer camp two weeks every summer. We went to summer camp everywhere in the world: Ft. Hood, Texas, when we were here, and then when I got in North Carolina, we went to Ft. Benning, Ga. Back in Texas and up in this area, I was in a unit at Amarillo."

He was promoted to colonel and named director of the Commanding General Staff School, which included all of West Texas.

"That was my last assignment. We had classes in Amarillo, Lubbock, Midland and Odessa, and I supervised the instructors in those schools," he said.

"I got married a couple of years after I was back out of the Army (1948). We went to Ft. Leavenworth, Kan., and that's where I attended Commanding General staff College as a student. My wife and daughter went with me everywhere. They had lots of good times ... we lived in Gen. (Dwight) Eisenhower's former apartment at Ft. Leavenworth. They hadn't done anything to it since he and Mamie lived there. Eisenhower was a lieutenant or captain at the time," McBride recalled.

After his tour of duty, McBride resumed his agricultural plans.

"I was manager of a registered Hereford farm in North Carolina, and my brother and I were partners in a registered Hereford farm in Blanket, Texas. When I came back from North Carolina to the home ranch, my brother was there operating it. I didn't need to necessarily help him, but I wanted to be close by -- the reason why I came back to Texas," he said.

McBride went to work for the Texas Animal Health Commission for more than a year while waiting to see if he could get a spot with the extension service.

He met with other detours in his hoped-for career with the extension service.

"The extension service wouldn't hire me in most places because the agents were like 25 years old, and I was almost 40. Oldham County at Vega came open, and that's ranch country, so they just hired me and put me there," just two months before he had reached the agency's age limit.

He got the extension service position because he had served in a reserve unit commanded by the president of Texas A&M.

McBride stayed at Vega for three years, then transferred and spent the rest of his time until retirement (December 1964-September 1983) in Deaf Smith County.

"We had many successes here. Well, we just had a good agriculture program, both adult and youth, but we were particularly proud of the 4-H livestock program. Past 4-H members of mine are young men now -- they're not even young! We placed real well in all the shows of the nation almost. We won a lot of grand champions," McBride said.

He said he reached the point where his age limited him, recalling clipping steers in Oldham County for all day and into the night, then coming back for another session.

"The next day, I couldn't get up. I decided it was time to retire from that. I was just working as a volunteer leader then, anyway," he said.

The most enjoyable part of being an extension agent was working with the people, he said.

"I worked with farmers on the same basis and established good relations with some of the best farmers in the area ... I loved to work with the livestock projects with youth because that was designed for a family program. It included the 4-Her, yes, but the whole family worked together on it. That's the reason why it was so successful," he said.

McBride said the extension service provided many educational programs, utilizing the resources at Texas A&M and all the specialists at Amarillo and Lubbock, as well as College Station.

"In the early days, we worked very closely with the West Texas Vegetable Growers Association, which was here in Hereford for many years before they ever met anywhere else," he said, adding he worked with the sugarbeet growers association and the corn growers.

McBride said he experienced some of the greatest agricultural advances for Deaf Smith County during his tenure.

"I was fortunate in coming here about when I did, because Holly Sugar had just put in here and had their first sugar beet crop in the ground.

"Agriculture was kind of at its peak here into the '80s. As the crop production was going down, the feedlot industry came and grew. I also watched irrigation finalize on into the peak time. We've had to adjust downward due to declining water tables. The extension's still working on those things, still improving methods and still using the result demonstrations," McBride said.

"We worked with farmers on a volunteer basis, where they would agree to work with us on a problem that they knew existed and put out demonstrations," he said.

McBride came to a number of twists in the road when he reached retirement age.

"I retired from the extension but still had registered Hereford cattle on two farms at Blanket and kept looking after that.

"All during this time, I had also continued my Army career in the reserve program. Then I retired out of the Army Reserve as a colonel.

"About that time, I sold my cattle. I got tired of running back and forth to Blanket," McBride said. He had operated the two farms alone, then with the help of his father and brother.

"It finally became expedient just to sell the cattle, and when I did that, I put all the available land ... into CRP (Conservation Reserve Program). Basically, the only thing I had left then was grassland, and I leased that out to others. I just kind of reduced my obligations.

"I'd been out of the extension service on a retired basis for two months and decided I didn't especially like a complete retired life. I went to work for Southwest Feed Yards as public relations man in September of '83," he said.

"I hadn't been working with them very long until a friend talked me into running for the state legislature. I was a conservative Democrat. I won the primaries by a big landslide. In fact, I got more votes in the primary than all the other candidates put together. But after John Smith won the Republican primary, John and the Republicans started hollering, 'Vote big ticket,' you know, straight Republican. They got that over in Randall County (Amarillo) especially. So I lost the ... general election to John Smith and he's still in office," McBride said.

After the election, he joined HCR Real Estate, using the real estate license he'd had for about a decade.

"Flexibility is the reason why I went with HCR to begin with. Henry Reid was the only one willing to just let me set my own schedule. ... I moved with Top Properties in September of '97 and been here since. I'm working with Carol Sue LeGate on the same basis.

"I don't have any hobbies. That's probably the main reason why I chose to go back to work. It's just something to keep me busy instead of lying around the house. I never really felt like I retired from anywhere. I just finished one job and moved to another one," McBride said.

Psychiatrist Federic Flach says there can be "a design for our lives that we may not fully grasp and can't foretell, but that we can live up to and fulfill if we sometimes move with events as they evolve."

McBride moved ahead as life led and found that, even if his paths didn't map out the way he planned, he still got to where he wanted to go. Even now, Justin McBride's found a way to have his retirement and beat it, too.

No secret ballot in King County

WICHITA FALLS (AP) - Want to know how Junior Daniel voted in this week's primary? Just look at the King County election results.

The secret ballot might be a revered U.S. tradition, but there's no such animal in King County if you're a Republican. As they only voter in the GOP primary, Daniel's choices were open for scrutiny.

"It don't bother me none," said Daniel, a cowboy on the Burnett 6666 Ranch outside of Guthrie. "I stand behind all my votes."

Normally, Republican primaries in this perennial Democratic stronghold also involve Daniel's wife, Stephanie. After all, she's the party's county chairwoman.

But Stephanie Daniel was stuck taking classes at Midwestern University in Wichita Falls, 120 miles to the northeast. That left Daniel as the only Republican among the 116 voters who participated Tuesday.

"I really thought we would get a few more out to vote," Mrs. Daniel said. "But we had some hotly contested Democratic races on the local level and I guess that drew everybody's interest away. We didn't have any (local Republican) candidates because the people around here have always run on the Democratic ticket and they've never learned any different."

Mrs. Daniel insists that King County's residents support conservative Republican candidates on the state and national levels. But locally, the GOP is MIA.

In the previous primary, Mrs. Daniel said a Republican county commissioner candidate drew three votes: hers, the candidate's and his wife's. Even Junior went Democratic in that one.

Mrs. Daniel said she knew the sparse vote totals would make it obvious she didn't make it back home to vote.

"I planned to early vote, but I never could get away from Wichita Falls in time," she said. "I thought, 'Just this one time, surely I can get by without doing it.' Obviously, that's not going to happen."

Election judges Janie Garza and Judy Ayres wondered all day whether even one GOP ballot would be cast. Junior Daniel didn't show up until 6 p.m.

"And by that time, we didn't want anybody to vote, because then we wouldn't have to do all that paperwork," Ms. Ayres said.

Daniel only voted in six of the 12 races. Among those he supported were incumbents Gov. George W. Bush and U.S. Rep. Mac Thornberry; he didn't vote in the primaries for Railroad Commissioner, state Supreme Court or two of the three Court of Criminal Appeals places.

"I just kind of vote for who I think is best," Daniel said. "I don't really go by whether they're Democrats or Republicans."

GOP bid to tie UN funds, abortion

WASHINGTON (AP) - U.N. chief Kofi Annan cautioned that the United States could lose its voting rights in the U.N. General Assembly if an abortion dispute continues to hold up long-delinquent U.S. payments. He pledged that "not a cent" of the money would be used to promote abortions.

Republican congressional leaders said they would press ahead to try to link abortion restrictions to money to pay the arrears, even as Democratic leaders predicted they could round up enough votes to sustain a veto threatened by President Clinton.

The long-simmering dispute also separately jeopardizes new funds for the International Monetary Fund to help ease the Asian financial crisis.

Annan, wrapping up a two-day visit, warned that the United States may have its General Assembly voting rights suspended if it doesn't soon pay a $600 million installment of back dues. The U.S. position in the Security Council, where it holds veto power, would be unaffected.

U.S. arrears are as high as $1.3 billion.

"I'm sure the U.S. government ... nor the people of America would want to be in a situation where the United States loses its vote in the U.N. because of lack of payment," Annan said in remarks at the National Press Club.

In his visit, the secretary-general talked to President Clinton and a group of lawmakers about separating dues from the congressional fight over abortion.

Clinton has said he will veto legislation sent to him that includes abortion restrictions - even if it delays the IMF money or the back payments to the United Nations.

Democratic leaders in both chambers predicted Thursday they could assemble enough votes to sustain the veto.

Legislation authorizing the back U.N. dues as well as keeping in place a variety of State Department programs and providing for a reorganization of the foreign-policy bureaucracy had been scheduled for a Thursday House vote.

Leaders postponed it until next week after a survey of Republican members showed divisions on how large the U.N. payments should be. Leaders insisted, however, that solid support remained for the anti-abortion language.

Okay, so I'm a newspaper man and could be a little biased about the best place to advertise. However, advertising is an important part of the free enterprise system and most business people understand and accept the necessity of advertising. It is often said the American free enterprise system is the eighth wonder of the world, and the average American's lack of understanding of what it is and why it works is the ninth wonder of the world.

In today's times of mass communication, we are inundated with many advertising messages - from newspapers to radio, television, and now the "information highway" on computers. The ways to advertise are limitless, so the businessman has to find the niche that gets his message to the most consumers, and at a price that can easily be recovered. There is an irony in the way many business people go about making their advertising decisions. When business is good, they spend all of their advertising budget. But when business is bad, the first thing most of them do is cut back on their advertising. The truth is, it should be the other way around. A business should spend most of its ad budget when sales are slow and cut back when sales are good.

Some readers may have seen a story on "Negative Thinking" which made the rounds a few years ago. It tells about a man who developed a good hamburger business from a small storefront. First, and foremost, he made a good hamburger, then he advertised his hamburgers in the local newspaper. Soon he increased his meat and bun orders and bought a bigger building.

His son came home from college and something happened. His son said, "Father, haven't you been listening to what people are saying? If money stays tight, we are bound to have a big recession and you'd better prepare for poor trade." The man thought: "Well, my son has been to college and he keeps up with the news, so he ought to know." The man cut out his advertising and his sales fell almost overnight. "You're right son, we're certainly headed for a recession."

The demise of newspapers was predicted with the advent of radio, then with television, and now the Internet. Even with change, however, people continue to read. Newspapers continue to thrive even in this computer age. One reason is that newspapers provide that valuable local community connection more than any other vehicle. A person's social circle may take them to certain schools, a church and to their favorite restaurants. These relationships, together with friends, provide necessary human interaction, but that one thing that helps people relate to their immediate community is still the local newspaper. It provides people with a wider circle, gives them a greater sense of belonging.

And if you think about it, you can't take the computer with you to the bathroom. While there are laptop computers, it's difficult to get comfortable with one while watching TV from your recliner or on the couch. But, it's sure is nice to scan the newspaper while you watch television and relax!

We've passed along some church bulletin bloopers in the past, but here are some new ones:

- The outreach committee has enlisted 25 members to visit people who are not afflicted with any church.
- The minister spoke briefly, much to the delight of the audience.
- Attention Ladies Bible Study Class: All ladies are invited to lunch in the Fellowship Hall after the B.S. is done.
- The pastor would appreciate it if the ladies would lend their electric girdles for the pancake breakfast.
- Low esteem support group will meet at 7 p.m. Thursday. Please use the back door.
- Next Sunday, Mrs. Vinson will be soloist. The pastor will then speak on "It's a Terrible Experience."
- The pastor will preach his farewell message, after which the choir will sing, "Break Forth Into Joy."
- The 8th graders will be presenting Shakespeare's Hamlet in the church basement. The congregation is invited to attend this tragedy.
- Today's sermon is "How Much Can a Man Drink?" It will be followed by hymns from a full choir.
- The minister is on vacation. Messages can be given to the church secretary.
- Any member of the congregation who enjoys sinning is invited to join the choir.

View of Clinton seems unaffected by scandal

WASHINGTON (AP) - After finding that most Americans distrust government, although not as much as they used to, the pollsters who conducted a massive study of those attitudes collided with the paradox that puzzles politicians and frustrates Republicans.

President Clinton's approval ratings have soared since the Monica Lewinsky case hit him seven weeks ago, among the same Americans whose cynicism about Washington stems in part from doubts about the honesty and ethics of elected leaders.

The Pew Research Center for the People & the Press was completing its six-month appraisal of opinions about government when special prosecutor Kenneth Starr got his investigations expanded to include claims that Clinton had an affair with the White House intern, lied about it under oath and tried influence her to do the same.

So they sent their interviewers out again for a follow-up poll three weeks ago, and found that people were a bit less trusting of government, but not by much.

The basic survey found that 39 percent of the public trusted the federal government; the post-Lewinsky poll showed that was down to 34 percent, a modest decline in pollsters' calculations since it is within the margin of error. Either way, the level of trust is up 18 points from the low point of 1994.

Meshing those findings, plus Clinton's record-high approval ratings, is the puzzle, since the survey found disillusionment with political leaders is as important as government performance in creating distrust.

But the Pew researchers suggested an answer:

"The basic views of Americans accustomed to scandal in Washington generally, and to allegations about Clinton specifically, are not easily moved. Further, poll after poll show that Americans are much more concerned with elected officials' public conduct than with their private lives."

Or, as Andrew Kohut, director of the Pew center, said "the public is not shocked easily."

Clinton's job approval ratings in other recent polls have been running in the two-thirds range, despite the finding in some of those same surveys that majorities didn't believe his denials of an affair with Ms. Lewinsky.

WALTER R. MEARS

Washington Today

In contrast, Ronald Reagan's standing plunged 20 points, to 45 percent approval, in the Iran-Contra scandal of 1986 and 1987. In those surveys too, majorities said they didn't think Reagan had been truthful in saying he had not known of the illicit arms dealings with Iran and use of the proceeds to illegally aid rebel forces in Nicaragua.

Kohut said the difference is that one involves personal conduct, the other official business and foreign policy.

That distinction might not be enough were Starr to prove that Clinton lied under oath and tried to get Ms. Lewinsky to do the same.

Republicans are trying to bridge the gap between the personal and the official, saying the controversy is having an impact on the work of Congress and Clinton.

Sen. Trent Lott, the Senate majority leader, took that line Monday in trying to explain away his weekend television remark that Starr should "show his cards" and act against Clinton or close his case.

He said Clinton should stop stonewalling and trying to smear Starr, and should tell the whole truth about his relationship with the former intern, in order to "get this behind us so that we can go on with the people's business."

Clinton has said all along that's what he is doing, his job.

But Lott said it is taking a toll. "Is it getting to be a distraction in Washington and affecting the president and perhaps even the Congress in doing the people's business?" Lott said. "I think we have reached that point."

And it hasn't dented his approval ratings.

The Pew survey found that while distrust of political leaders is pervasive, people are bothered most about the way they govern, 44 percent, and the way they campaign, 31 percent. Only 22 percent said they were most troubled by the personal ethics of politicians.

To that, add the good economic times that are boosting Clinton. The poll found 48 percent of Americans were highly content with their lives, a jump of 11 points in the past year.

The Pew report was based on interviews with nearly 4,000 Americans, in three installments, the last surveys conducted Feb. 19-22 to check the impact of the Lewinsky case. For that follow-up round, the margin of error was 3.5 percentage points, meaning that the findings about trust in government could be that much higher or lower than actual national attitudes.

DON COOPER

Reflections

The gist of those conversations: Cartoons about Carter were OK, but Reagan was off-limits.

oOo

As a cartoonist, I hated to see Reagan leave office. I had gotten very comfortable with drawing him, and I pretty much ignored George Bush while he was vice president. So, when Bush took office, it took me several tries to get him down.

But after a while, I got where I could do President Bush with my eyes closed, so I found myself hoping the polls would be wrong and I wouldn't have to learn how to draw a new presidential face.

As for Bill Clinton, I'd had opportunities to draw cartoons about him while I was editor of the Hope Star in his old hometown, but I was out of practice by the time he was running for president.

Oddly enough, I had drawn one cartoon that had both George Bush and Bill Clinton in the same panel. It was 1990, and Clinton was running for his fourth or fifth term (I forget which) as governor of Arkansas.

Political pundits were quick to point out that President Bush was campaigning for Republican candidates in every state -- except Arkansas. The columnists said it was a payback to the governor for all the help he'd given the president on developing education goals.

So, I drew a cartoon of President Bush sitting in a chair in the Oval Office. In his lap was a poodle -- with Bill Clinton's face. The cartoon's caption was "Bush's lapdog."

Two years later, the lapdog was biting the presidential hand.

What about a song for all those 'real' dads out there?

DIANNA F. DANDRIDGE

The Real World

In recent years there have been a number of hit songs written and sung as a tribute to the artists' fathers.

Sometimes I don't know if they are good or bad. Maybe a little of both. I heard Reba McEntire sing about the man she never knew, even though he lived just down the hall.

George Strait croons a secret about a father's love; while a female vocalist sings about the love in her daddy's hands.

Of course, the legendary Conway sang about the trials a father goes through for his son and Loretta will always be the "Coal Miner's Daughter". I can't help but wonder if these songs don't give the wrong, if somewhat wishful, message to today's kids.

I know most kids don't listen to country music, but there are a lot who hear nothing but country, including the old stuff.

Today's kids all too often don't know the secrets of a father's love simply because their father is not or is no longer in the home.

This thought was brought home to me after reading a colleague's column. But more important was the thought of how much good stepfathers can do and how seldom they receive the appropriate appreciation.

I remember my father, and through the years I've come to realize he was just a man with ordinary flaws. His flaws, though they seemed incomprehensible while I was growing up, were just that - the flaws of an ordinary man.

I've learned to accept those flaws. I'm still glad he left when he finally did, and I never care to see him again, but I at least had my father to make some impressions on my life.

His flaws at least gave me some idea what to accept, what to expect, and what to tolerate in a spouse or father to my children.

Even though my marriage ended disastrously, my former husband had none of my father's characteristic flaws. In many ways, his were worse. And for this, my children have suffered and done without. Probably not so much in the material sense, though that has definitely played a part, but by missing out on the things that "dads" are supposed to do.

I remember one afternoon after work, I was doing a trivial check on the car. While I was under the hood, my son, Joshua, asked what I was doing. I told him, then he asked me, "Why are you doing that? Everyone else's dad does it!"

I don't think my explanation that his dad was never much of a mechanic, even when he was around, did anything to satisfy his desire to have a man around to do certain things.

At some point, all my children have done one thing that guarantees they are MY children. At some point everyone of them has mouthed off in public, and probably succeeded in embarrassing me no end.

A few years ago, one of the kids was asked by a teacher to bring a

Senate poised for vote redrawing map of Europe

WASHINGTON (AP) - With little fanfare or partisan wrangling, the Senate is about to vote U.S. assent to changing the political landscape of Europe, bringing into the nearly half-century-old North Atlantic Treaty Organization three former Soviet satellites.

A wide bipartisan vote to add Poland, Hungary and the Czech Republic to NATO seems assured - possibly as early as next week. After those states, other former Warsaw bloc nations are on line waiting to join.

What is remarkable is not only the historic import of expanding NATO's military alliance to Russia's doorstep, but the fact it is being done with so little political heat.

TOM BAUM

Supporters and opponents alike expect the measure - the first change in NATO since Spain was added in 1982 - to win the necessary two-thirds support of the Republican-led Senate.

"What's going to happen between now and next week to build the firestorm that would be required (to stop the measure), I don't know," said Sen. John Warner, R-Va., one of a handful of Senate opponents.

Unable to stop the enlargement, Warner is proposing an amendment calling for a three-year cooling-off period before any other nations are admitted. And he and Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., urged Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott on Tuesday to put off a vote until after an upcoming April recess.

"The need for more focus on this issue, critical to America's long-term security interests, is imperative," they wrote Lott.

But Lott, R-Miss., like President Clinton, is a strong supporter of the measure and has indicated he'll bring it up sooner rather than later.

While all 16 current NATO nations must pass on the changes, no opposition is expected once the United States approves.

The relative ease with which the measure is expected to pass suggests it isn't controversial.

But it is.

Critics of the resolution contend an expanded NATO could entangle the United States in a series of Bosnia-style peacekeeping missions, poison relations with Russia and promote instability in Europe.

"Advocates of enlargement sometimes act as though a bigger NATO is merely an institutional mechanism whereby everyone can gather in the center of Europe for a group hug," said Ted Galen Carpenter of the Cato Institute, a libertarian think tank that opposes the expansion. "It is not. It is an unnecessary and provocative initiative with perilous implications."

The expansion has been criticized by former Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., who chaired the Senate Armed Services Committee; former Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn.; and Brent Scowcroft, the national security adviser in the Ford and Bush administrations.

Given such opposition, one would think the proposal would be in trouble.

It isn't. That's because all the political advantage is on the side of passage.

Inside Washington

William Jefferson or just plain Bill?

WASHINGTON (AP) - It was a Democratic pep rally at the Capitol and Vice President Al Gore was ready to introduce the guest of honor. Showing uncharacteristic animation, his fist pumping the air, his voice rising, Gore leaned forward and fairly shouted: "The President of the United States: William (pause) Jefferson (pause) Clinton."

Whatever happened to just plain Bill?

It was Bill on all those ballots when he ran again and again for governor of Arkansas and then for president. Bill Clinton. That is how Americans got to know him.

So, what is with this formal William Jefferson stuff?

It is true the president signs legislation with his full name. But rarely is he introduced by it. Only Gore does so consistently.

As used by Gore, the full-name introduction is a rolling, crowd-arousing rhetorical device.

"He knows full well the difference between Bill, one syllable, and the multi-syllabic William Jefferson Clinton," said Ann Lewis, White House communications director.

"He's learned what works and once you've got something that works, you repeat it," she said.

Not long ago, people worried about the huge federal budget deficit. The headline on a press release from Sen. John Ashcroft, R-Mo., suggests some people now are worried about a budget surplus.

picture of each parent for some project.

The kid, instead of talking to the teacher quietly, stood up and said, "My dad's in jail and my mom threw away all his pictures. Am I going to get a bad grade if I just bring my mom's picture?"

After the teacher picked her chin up off the floor, she said that would be fine. But, even that wasn't good enough for the kid.

He had to continue with, "My Mom does everything most kids' dads do, so can I bring two of her?"

Like I said, my kids have missed out.

Since then he has asked me different questions about his father. "Does he still love us?" "Does he still remember us, even though he doesn't know where we are?" "Why can't we have a step dad like some of my friends?"

I know most of the men he is referring to, and most are more "Dad's" than are the biological fathers.

To all these men, the ones I know and all the ones I don't, all those who strive to be a good dad to their children and step children I take off my hat and applaud your efforts.

No one ever said being a parent was easy, but for all those who take in another's child and offer love, discipline, and caring concern as if the child was their own, words mean next to nothing.

There will never be a plaque or certificate that is worthy of all the accomplishments that a "true" dad offers to the children of the world.

Someday for these men, a songwriter will pen the words and tune, that though seldom heard will say so much to all the "Dad's" who have kept the kids from missing out.

CHIROPRACTIC For Better Health

Dr. Jeff Williams, D.C.

Joint Pain and Muscle Balance

If you've developed symptoms that make you think you have arthritis, it would be wise to have an examination to see if the muscles in the affected area are out of balance.

Muscles help keep a joint stable and assist it through its normal range of motion. But if the muscles on one side of the joint are weak, this puts a strain on the joint. It may also cause arthritic-like symptoms.

The doctor of chiropractic will test the muscles to determine their balance and strength. He will also evaluate nerve patterns and may take an x-ray to study the joint structure involved.

If the problem is in the muscles around the joint, treatment can be given to strengthen and return them to proper balance. Once this is achieved, the arthritic-like pain and discomfort may be greatly relieved or eliminated.

We accept assignments on Medicare & Medicaid & most insurance carriers.

In retirement planning, you now have more freedom to choose ... thanks to the Roth IRA.

With the new Roth IRA initiated through the 1997 Taxpayer Relief Act, Congress has introduced some exciting news and a choice of IRAs for investors planning for their retirement.

- ◆ If you are working, you may contribute up to $2,000 to either the Roth or the traditional IRA for a given year.
- ◆ Unlike contributions made to a traditional IRA, contributions made to a Roth IRA are not deductible. However, distributions taken from a Roth IRA may be tax-free at retirement.
- ◆ While there are age restrictions for making contributions to a traditional IRA, individuals with earned income can continue making contributions after age 70-1/2 to a Roth IRA.
- ◆ The Roth IRA provides greater withdrawal flexibility, including penalty-free withdrawals for qualified first time home buyers.

When it comes to retirement investing, every investor should be aware of his or her alternatives - as well as the drawbacks, including tax consequences when rolling over into a Roth IRA from a traditional IRA.

Before exercising your freedom of choice, get the information you need by contacting me today!

MY LAI

Little known 30 years later

By SLOBODAN LEKIC
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON - The notorious and the heroic have drifted into obscurity three decades after American soldiers slaughtered 500 villagers at My Lai, Vietnam.

Lt. William L. Calley, the only man convicted in the massacre on March 16, 1968, does not want to talk about it. Three soldiers who tried to stop it received public honors for the first time just three days ago.

Calley, a platoon leader, was sentenced to a life imprisonment, but served just three years under house arrest. He now works as a jeweler in a family business in Columbus, Ga., only a few miles from Fort Benning where he served his time.

Reached at the jewelry store, Calley declined to discuss the massacre or his life since then.

"I'm not giving any interviews or anything. I don't care to participate in this," he said.

William Hammond, a historian with the U.S. Army Center of Military History, said, "My Lai was in many ways the focal point of the breakdown of the U.S. Army in Vietnam, the breakdown of morale within that army and the breakdown of leadership."

Although local commanders initially tried to cover up the massacre, it came to light through the efforts of Ron Ridenhour, an infantryman-turned-journalist who heard about it from fellow soldiers and began writing letters to Congress. By 1969, an official probe was in full swing, resulting in war crimes charges against 13 officers and enlisted men.

"I think My Lai confirmed the worst fears of many people and punctuated the fact that we were being lied to by the government about the nature of the war," Ridenhour said in a recent interview.

Author Seymour Hersh, whose latest book is "The Dark Side of Camelot" about President Kennedy, won the Pulitzer Prize as a freelance journalist in 1969 for his expose of the massacre.

Officers charged or punished over the incident included Charlie Company's commander Capt. Ernest L. Medina; the brigade leader Lt. Col. Oran K. Henderson; and Maj. Gen. Samuel W. Koster, commanding officer of the Americal Division.

The slaughter came to symbolize the American dilemma in the Vietnam war, forcing the United States to confront the reality that it was losing the battle for the hearts and minds of a people it supposedly was trying to save.

"What the GIs were told was that they were in South Vietnam to protect the population from the communists," said Ronald Spector, chairman of the history department at George Washington University.

"Then it turned out that many

"I think My Lai confirmed the worst fears of many people and punctuated the fact that we were being lied to by the government about the nature of the war."

- Ron Ridenhour

people did not want to be protected and a lot of them were actually working for the Viet Cong. The soldiers would quickly become very disillusioned and concluded they could not trust any Vietnamese because they couldn't distinguish between them and the enemy," Spector said.

Like Calley, Medina also has sought anonymity. Charges of mass murder against him were dropped, but his military career was over. Today, Medina lives with his wife in Marinette, Wis.

"All of this happened a long time ago... there is nothing to talk about, nothing to explain," he said in a brief telephone exchange.

Among the enlisted men, the most infamous was Paul D. Meadlo, an infantryman who admitted to helping Calley execute a group of 80 assembled men, women, and children.

Meadlo, a factory worker in Clinton, Ind., testified at length at Calley's trial in exchange for immunity but today refuses to talk about the incident.

Henderson, the brigade commander, retired in 1974. Charges against him were dropped at the same time as those against Medina.

"It's something that happened. Nobody's proud that it happened. We who were on the other side of it got accused of a whole lot of things we didn't know anything about," he said when reached in his home in Carlisle, Pa.

Koster had to resign from his post as commander of the military academy at West Point when the scandal broke.

"There was something drastically wrong that went undetected by the commanders in the field," Koster said, adding that he regretted what had happened.

Lt. Col. Frank A. Barker, the task force commander, died in June 1968 when his helicopter was shot down by Viet Cong guerrillas.

But Charlie Company - which had suffered 40 percent casualties in the previous three months - encountered farmers, fishermen and their families, but no hostile fire. Nonetheless, the soldiers proceeded to round up and execute the villagers.

Still, several men tried to stop the killing, but had not been recognized nationally until last week.

Warrant Officer Hugh C. Thompson, awarded the Soldiers Award last Friday in nationally televised ceremonies at the Vietnam Memorial, was a helicopter pilot who realized what was happening on the ground when he saw piles of corpses lying in the ditches. He landed to investigate, then ordered his door gunners to fire on American soldiers if they tried to prevent his evacuation of a group of villagers.

Thompson works for the Louisiana Department of Veterans Affairs in Lafayette. Two of his comrades also received the belated honor: Lawrence Colburn and Glenn Andreotta, who was killed in battle three weeks after My Lai.

Sosa shares message with Hispanics

By SANFORD NOWLIN
San Antonio Express-News

SAN ANTONIO - As a pioneer in the field of Hispanic advertising, Lionel Sosa has sold Latinos soft drinks, burgers and long-distance service.

Now, Sosa wants to sell them on themselves.

The 58-year-old Sosa has written a book called "The American Dream: How Latinos Can Achieve Success in Business and in Life," published by E.P. Dutton.

Hispanics, while one of the United States' largest minority groups, have the nation's highest per capita poverty rate, highest dropout rate and occupy relatively few top management positions in the nation's largest companies.

They work hard, but Hispanics have been unable to achieve the same heights as Anglos largely because they have been taught to accept defeat, said Sosa, who founded San Antonio-based Sosa Bromley Aguilar Noble & Associates - now Bromley Aguilar & Associates - the nation's largest Hispanic advertising firm.

"We have been conditioned to be underachievers by our conquistadores (Spanish conquerors)," the soft-spoken Sosa explained. "We were lulled into slavery, but we were slaves nonetheless. As long as you have that slave mentality, then you don't think you are good enough to deserve success."

In the book, Sosa offers advice to Hispanics on how they can thrive personally and professionally in an Anglo-dominated world. Much of that success relies on throwing away the notion of being second-class citizens, he said.

Sosa has been working on the book for several years but said the seeds for it were sewn while growing up on San Antonio's West Side. His parents, both from Mexico, pushed their four children to excel.

But, Sosa noticed that his mother's encouragement always carried a mixed message. She frequently said he would find success "even though you are Mexican."

He also noticed that many of the phrases used in Spanish spoken by Mexicans emphasize servility. For example, rather than saying "you're welcome" after being thanked, the equivalent phrase used in Mexico and by many U.S. Hispanics is "de nada," meaning "it's nothing."

That mind-set was handed down to the populace of Mexico and other Latin American countries from their Spanish and Portuguese conquerors, Sosa said. Sosa said he discovered on business trips to Latin America that servility still is being passed on in more subtle forms.

"When I would go to Mass there,

I was appalled when the priest would say 'You are destined to be poor because that's the way God wills it and you'll be better off for it in the next world,'" Sosa said. "When I went to Mass at St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York, I didn't hear that message."

Part of what made the book possible was Sosa's retirement from his position as a partner in Sosa Bromley in 1995. Sosa left the company, which has annual billings of around $150 million, to work as chief executive officer of KJS

Marketing, a smaller ad firm started by his wife, Kathy.

"I'm not really retired," Sosa said. "I'm working in a way that gives me the ability to spend more time with my family and public service."

Now Sosa works about eight hours a day, five days a week and spends more time with his eight children, 11 grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Sosa also vigorously pursues his passion for oil painting.

Study: Credit reports have many errors

NEW YORK (AP) - Nearly one-third of consumer credit bureau reports contain serious errors that could cause unfair denial of a car loan, a mortgage or even a job, according to a study released last week.

The "Mistakes Do Happen" study from the U.S. Public Interest Research Group was written after 88 people, all of them PIRG staff or associates, obtained 133 credit reports from the three major credit bureaus. Another 22 participants never received their credit reports, even after repeated calls to request them.

"I still get complaints," said Ed Mierzwinski, PIRG's consumer program director, "and I still know that credit bureau errors cause some of the worst problems that consumers face in their financial lives."

Norm Magnuson, a spokesman for the Associated Credit Bureaus trade association, said he could not comment on the study without seeing it.

But he said the percentage of erroneous credit reports is much smaller, citing a 1992 study of 111,000 credit reports done by Arthur Andersen & Co. that found that only 0.2 percent of people had been denied credit based on inaccurate information.

The PIRG study was the organization's sixth report on credit report accuracy and privacy issues since 1991. It is the first since changes to the Fair Credit Reporting Act, designed to improve the accuracy and ease of access to reports, took effect last September.

Among other things, the changes require creditors to give accurate information to the credit bureaus and gives them 30 days to fix any mistakes. It also requires the three major credit bureaus, Equifax Credit Information Services, Experian, Inc. and Trans Union Corp., to provide toll-free telephone lines with employees, not just recordings, during business hours.

Their reports also must be easy to read.

Even after those changes, PIRG said, "an alarming number of credit reports contain serious errors."

We Can Explain Why You Need An IRA In Two Words:

Social Security.

If you're going up the hump, not over the hill, then you've probably realized by now that Social Security isn't going to be quite as secure as you once believed.

An Individual Retirement Account at Hereford State Bank is a very smart investment toward your future because it's a personal savings plan that provides a substantial retirement fund, and also allows you to defer taxes on the principal as well as the accrued interest each year.

Because your earnings on an IRA investment are tax-deferred, they build much faster than many comparable investments.

Of course, the sooner you start the better off you'll be. After all, you're getting close enough to see the top of the hill. Which leads us to our final two words.

Don't delay.

It Was the Best Kept Secret in the Panhandle...

Now We're Telling Everyone!

We're Working Together...Hereford Proud

Lots of good things are happening in Hereford!
Have you heard about. . .

The airport renovations

More than $3.8 million brought our airport into top shape. Now we can welcome business jets and private pilots bringing business people, friends, and family to visit Hereford.

The expanding number of building permits issued since January 1

Since the beginning of this year, building permits for new construction worth more than one million dollars (through April 30) have been issued. That's a great measurement of our town's growth.

The downtown beautification project

Hereford Beautification Alliance, the City of Hereford, the Hereford Chamber of Commerce, the Downtown Business Association, and a group of volunteers are completing various projects to make the downtown more attractive for all of us.

The new businesses that have opened in Hereford since June 1, 1997

New businesses mean more jobs, added payroll...a positive sign that Hereford is growing and thriving.

All these changes don't just happen in a community. It takes all of us, working together, to have a successful community. The new buzz word is synergy, but you know that it's just plain common sense.

When Hereford folks support their local businesses with their patronage and their money...When local business owners provide the best service and the best prices they can...That creates the kind of synergy that makes Hereford a great place to live, and makes out-of-town business owners look at our community for business expansion.

It's a bull of a market

NEW YORK (AP) - Just what does it take to knock the arrogance out of this market in stocks that, like some all-time great football teams, seems to run right over opposing tacklers as if they were nuisances seeking to spoil the fun?

It has defied Saddam Hussein and Alan Greenspan, ignored the president's troubles and barely acknowledged a Far East economic disaster that threatens to spread. It pays no attention to past norms, such as price-earnings ratios and return on investor equity.

It is fearless. Reaching for all-time highs, it ignores warnings, even from the market itself. Profit disappointments are treated as if they didn't happen. Price weakness of a few days is followed by surges of buying.

"Buying the dips," says one market analyst, "has become the modus operandi of American investors in the 1990s." Have no fear, the believing investor declares, any price decline is a buying opportunity. And so they buy.

"On occasion, this market looks to us more like a Prozac-market, particularly in its ability to keep adverse developments in perspective and remain focused on the longer-term fundamentals, which are largest positive for stocks," says Wright Investors' Service.

Less noticed, and probably ignored, is Wright's caveat that markets have a tendency to get ahead of themselves, and that "if history is a guide ... there will come a time when the next dip develops into a correction and possibly an outright bear market."

JOHN CUNNIFF

Gerald Perritt, mathematician, professor, analyst and now editor of the Mutual Fund Letter, tends to agree. Remember, he says, "whenever something seems too good to be true, it usually is." Be careful, he says. "Save yourself plenty of grief and a lot of money."

Even if stocks sidestep a significant bear market, he maintains it is difficult to rationalize a continuation of 22 percent returns on owner equity and 20-plus price-earnings multiples, both well beyond the long-term norms. Norms, he reminds us, reassert themselves.

"Enjoy the ride for now, but be aware that an unchecked advance means trouble down the road," cautions Standard & Poor's in the current issue of its well-read "The Outlook," a weekly advisory.

But, it observes, "investors have been conditioned by the many demonstrations of resiliency and the ease with which the market has climbed walls of worry." That, it cautions "could build into a buying panic, followed by exhaustion of demand and a period of free-fall."

Beyond such things as greed, resiliency, complacency and possibly ignorance (many small investors are in the market for the first time and have never experienced what it is to lose money or get a margin call), what in the world keeps the big dream machine moving?

And, of course, the recommendations of brokerage houses, such as Dean Witter's "six reasons we have increased our recommended allocation to equities," as described in its March issues of "Perspectives," a monthly report to clients.

It begins with the observation that "several factors seem to be falling into place for a resumption of the equity bull market." It lists them:

"The Southeast Asian crisis is stabilizing. Southeast Asia will have only limited impact on the U.S. economy. U.S. corporate profits in 1998 should again beat expectations. U.S. market valuations are quite reasonable. President Clinton will likely remain in office. Cash flows into equity mutual funds have improved."

Unfortunately, at this point nobody knows.

Larger, older, urban companies more likely to offer insurance

WASHINGTON (AP) - An employee's chance of getting health insurance at work depends on where he lives, how large the company is and whether workers are part of a union, according to a government report.

Insurance rates vary widely by state, company size, industry and a host of other factors, according to the first report from an employer survey by the National Center for Health Statistics.

Nationwide, 52 percent of private sector employers offered group health insurance in 1993, according to the survey, which was conducted in 1994.

Researchers noted that even when employers offered health insurance, often it was only available to full-time workers.

Many of the other factors influencing the likelihood of health insurance were interrelated, officials noted. Older companies and larger companies were both more likely to provide insurance than small and new companies. Older companies tend to be larger in the first place.

Other findings include:

- Hawaii, which requires employers to offer insurance to anyone who works at least 20 hours per week, led the nation with 86 percent of employers sponsoring health plans for their workers. No. 2 was the District of Columbia, followed by Rhode Island and Delaware. The bottom state was Montana at 40 percent.

- Of companies with 100 or more workers, 96 percent offered insurance. Just one-third of firms with fewer than 10 workers did.

- Workers at unionized companies got insurance 84 percent of the time, compared with 52 percent of non-union firms.

- Some industries were much more likely to offer insurance. Mining was most likely, with 67 percent of firms offering coverage. Agriculture was least likely.

- Non-profit firms offered insurance 66 percent of the time, with just 52 percent of for-profits doing so.

- Of firms that were at least 25 years old, 72 percent offered insurance. Just 35 percent of firms around for less than five years did.

- Firms in metropolitan areas offered insurance 54 percent of the time, while only 44 percent of others did.

Farmers seek affordable plans

FARGO, N.D. (AP) - Greg Brokaw might seem like an unlikely crusader for farmers' health insurance. He's not a farmer and he's not in need of insurance.

But Brokaw, a 44-year-old horse trainer from rural Kulm, N.D., says he has taken up the cause on behalf of his neighbors and friends - farm families struggling to find health insurance they can afford.

"Maybe I'm the perfect person to complain about this," said Brokaw, who got out of farming years ago to concentrate on training horses. "No one can accuse me that I'm complaining about my own condition."

At a recent meeting of the new Commission on the Future of Agriculture, Brokaw said he went on a tirade about the ills of a system that makes it almost impossible for farm families to get affordable health insurance.

His comments won applause from the farmers, and the issue has become a top priority of the special commission.

"None of us are health insurance experts," said North Dakota Agriculture Commissioner Roger Johnson. "But we heard loud and clear that farmers are concerned about health care costs, particularly the amount of insurance premiums they pay. ... It's something we feel is a priority to address."

Farmers who want health insurance coverage must buy individual policies through companies such as Blue Cross-Blue Shield of North Dakota. Blue Cross-Blue Shield has about 15,000 such contracts with farmers and other self-employed residents, said spokeswoman Claudia Danovic.

But the policies can be expensive when the insured must pay the entire premium. Danovic said premiums for a farm family typically range from $350 to $450 a month.

Johnson said he knows of farmers who pay $6,000 a year in premiums for health insurance.

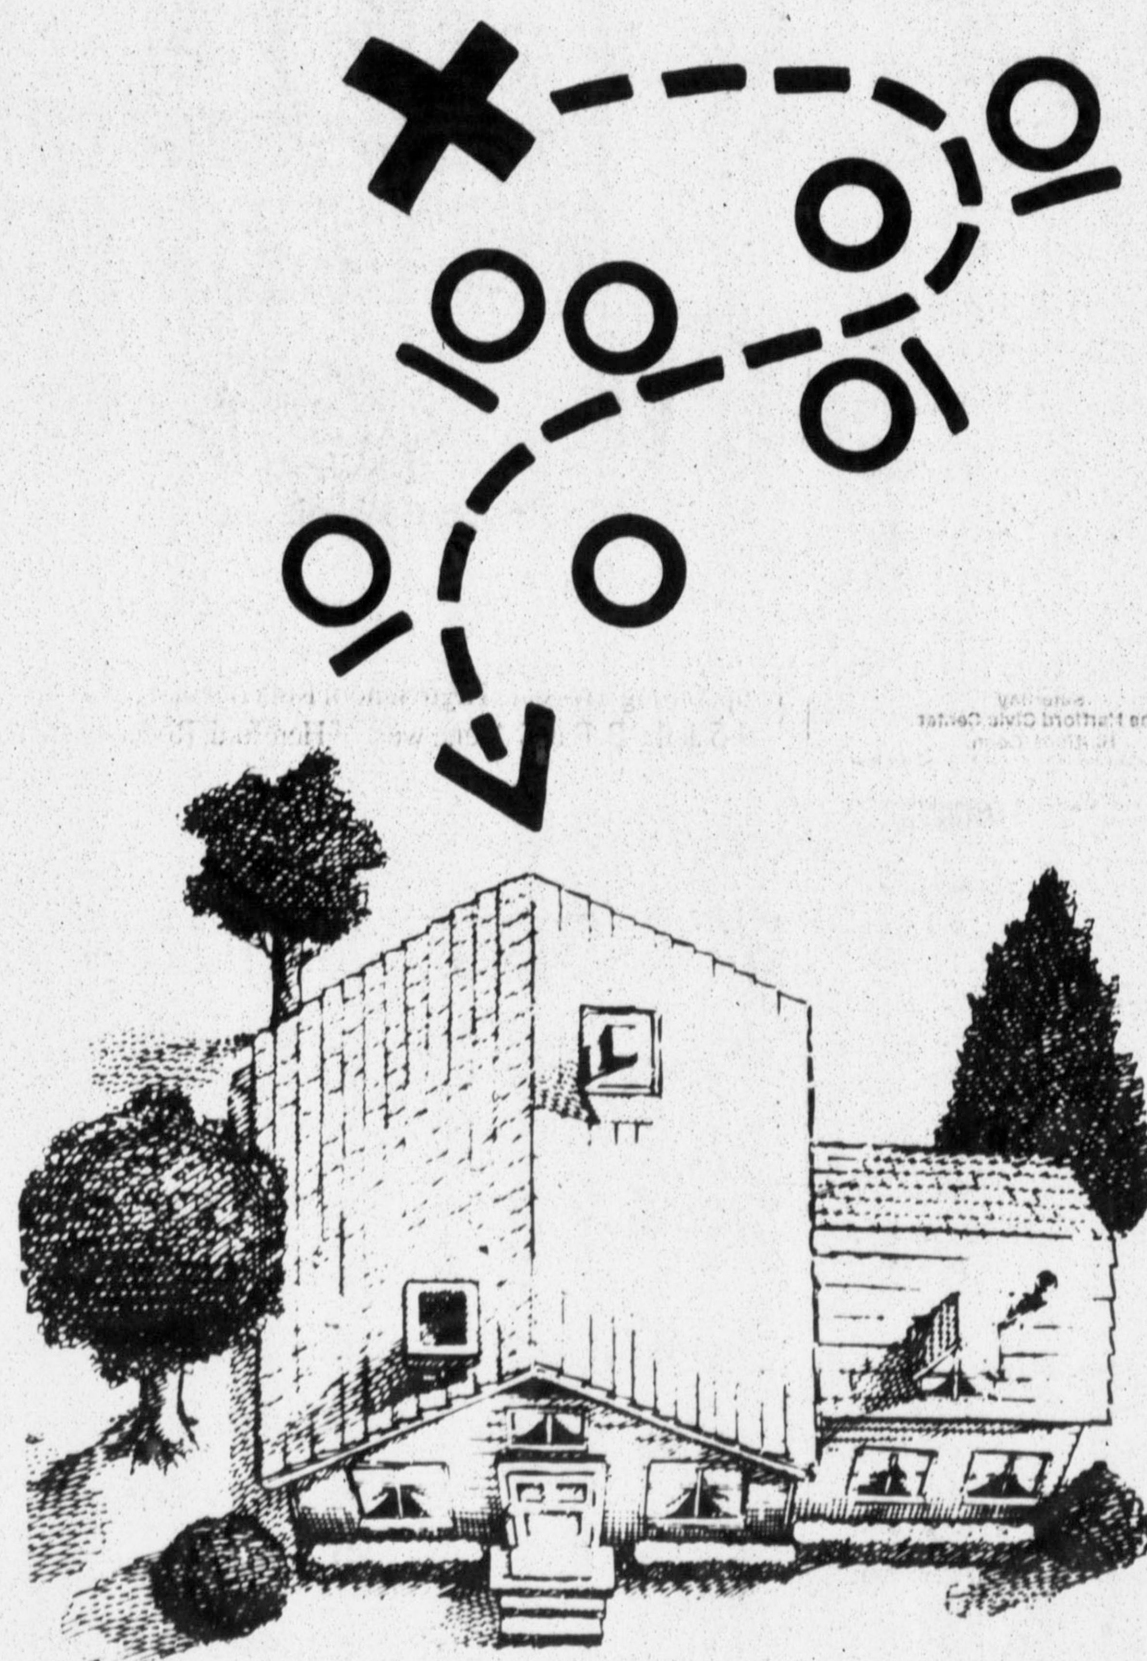

"For people like us who have insurance through our employers, it's easy to forget how expensive it is," he said. "But you've got a lot of people out there who are spending more on health insurance each month than they spend on food."

Brokaw said he paid about $425 a month for coverage for himself, his wife and his daughter when he farmed. Today, the family's insurance is provided through the U.S. Postal Service, where his wife works.

Some suggest allowing individual farmers to join the Public Employees Retirement System, the program that provides health insurance and pension plans to 15,000 employees, most of them state workers.

They are required to get health care coverage through the pension system, ensuring a broad pool of participants to help keep premiums down.

Rangers win, Astros lose

PORT CHARLOTTE, Fla. (AP) -- Roger Pavlik and Rick Helling pitched four scoreless innings as the Texas Rangers defeated the New York Yankees 9-1 Friday.

Pavlik allowed two hits, struck out two players and batted Yankees starter Ramiro Mendoza.

The game was scoreless for four innings until the Yankees struck. Catcher Joe Girardi singled off former battery mate John Wetteland. After Homer Bush sacrificed Girardi to second, Chad Curtis drove him in with a double for a 1-0 lead.

Mendoza allowed one hit in four innings. In the fifth, Texas reached him for two runs on consecutive singles by Kevin Elster, Warren Newson, Luis Alicea and Tom

The Rangers went on to add two more in the sixth on doubles by Lee Stevens and Ivan Rodriguez and Elster's single.

Texas then went on to score five times off of Dave Fleming in the seventh, including a three-run triple by Mark Little.

"Kissimmee, Fla., Rich Berker's two-run homer fueled a five-run eighth inning as the New York Mets beat the Houston Astros 14-1.

Ralph Millard and Luis Lopez each had three hits, with Lopez driving in three runs as New York batters pounded Astros pitchers for 17 hits as the Mets won their eighth game in nine outings.

Twelve different New York batters had hits.

Mets starter Bill Pulsipher and Armando Reynosa combined on a 4-hitter. Pulsipher allowed three hits in three scoreless innings.

Jack Howell went 2-for-3 for the Astros, but the Astros didn't score until the eighth inning, when J.R. Phillips' sacrifice fly sent Sean Berry home.

Astros starter John Halama surrendered three runs and six hits, and struck out four in four innings.

Herd routs Tornillo, 17-1

From staff reports
LUBBOCK -- The Hereford Whitefaces erupted for 11 runs in the bottom of the third inning to stomp the Tornillo Coyotes 17-1 Friday afternoon in a second round game at the Lubbock Roosevelt baseball tournament.

The game was called on the 15-run rule after four innings. Hereford starter George Castillo (2-2) pitched three scoreless innings for the win. Senior Jeremy Urbanczyk and sophomore L.J. Vallejo pitched the fourth inning in relief of Castillo.

The Whitefaces picked up three runs in both the bottom of the first and second innings before tallying their 11-run third. Tornillo got its only run in the top of the fourth inning.

Hereford got their 17 runs on 10 hits and two Tornillo errors.

Hereford (3-5) was scheduled to face Lubbock Roosevelt in the consolation championship game at 11:30 a.m. Saturday.

Stars fight past Ducks

DALLAS (AP) -- With scoring leader Mike Modano out for six weeks with a separated shoulder, the Dallas Stars needed second-line center Joe Nieuwendyk to step up his game Friday night.

Nieuwendyk delivered four goals as the injury-depleted Stars stopped a five-game winless streak with a fight-filled 6-3 victory over the Anaheim Mighty Ducks.

"The puck was bouncing right and things were happening for me," said Nieuwendyk, who fell one goal short of his career single-game high. "The bottom line is that we needed a win real bad considering all we've gone through the last few weeks."

Valparaiso shocks Ole Miss

By The Associated Press

Like many kids growing up in Indiana, Bryce Drew spent hours playing basketball in his yard with his dad. On Friday, father and son used a play they had been working on for years.

"We have a court in the backyard, and we've practiced that shot over and over again," Valparaiso coach Homer Drew said after Bryce hit a buzzer-beating 3-pointer to give the 13th-seeded Crusaders a 70-69 over No. 4 seed Mississippi in the Midwest Regional.

"It's a play we've run over and over and over in practice."

The play, called "Pacer," worked perfectly in the final 2.5 seconds. Jamie Sykes, a major league baseball prospect, threw a long pass to Bill Jenkins, who tipped the ball to Drew on the right wing. Drew sank the 23-footer and was mobbed by his teammates.

"We run those plays every day and we're like, 'Coach, why are we running this stuff?'" said Bryce Drew, who scored 22 points.

The answer came Friday.

The 13th-seeded Crusaders' first

'Noles prove worth, outrun TCU, 96-87

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) -- Florida State proved the critics wrong. The 12th-seeded Seminoles do belong in the NCAA tournament after all.

Florida State, the lowest-seeded at-large team in the tournament, beat Texas Christian at its own game Friday in defeating the fifth-seeded Horned Frogs, 96-87, in the first round of the Midwest Regional.

The Seminoles (18-13) closed the regular season by losing six of seven games. But they showed the form that got them off to a 13-1 start, including victories over Connecticut and Arizona.

Corey Louis and Randall Jackson scored 20 each and Louis had 13 rebounds as Florida State advanced to play No. 13 seed Valparaiso, a 70-69 winner over Mississippi.

Lee Nailon had 32 points and eight rebounds for TCU (27-6), but fouled out with 4:15 remaining and the Horned Frogs trailing 84-80. The Horned Frogs were outrebounded for the fourth time in the past five games, this time 45-34.

Florida State widened its lead to 89-80 on a tip-in by Louis with 2:47 remaining, then held on by making free throws after TCU got within 91-87 with just over a minute to play.

Upsets are fine, just to make NCAA mad

It never ceases to amaze me.

What I find amazing is the first round of the NCAA men's basketball tournament.

Why I find it amazing is this -- some team few have ever heard of manages to beat a team they have no right to beat, or at least gives that highly-seeded team the scare of its season.

Thursday night, Cincinnati got all it wanted from No. 15 seed Northern Arizona. The Bearcats survived, 65-62.

I guess that proves the NCAA right. Having a 64-team tournament doesn't necessarily water down the annual extravaganza.

But at first glance, you have to wonder. Northern Arizona, in the

The Toy Department

NCAA tournament? Or Richmond, in the same field as the big boys like Duke and Arizona and Kansas?

Do they really have a chance? When the NCAA first expanded the tournament to 64 teams from 32 teams almost two decades ago, I thought it was a stupid idea. My main reasoning was that there would be too many first-round blowouts.

And there have been plenty. You're bound to have them when you have a No. 1 seed like, say, North Carolina or Kansas playing a team like Prairie View A&M, or when a No. 2 is matched up with a No. 15.

Since the men's tournament was expanded to 64 teams, only three No. 15 seeds have won first round games. But the fact most No. 1 or 2-seeds easily cruise by their first-round victims makes an upset more enjoyable.

I don't know if "enjoyable" is the most appropriate term. Maybe "satisfying," or "redemptive."

People want to root for the underdog, unless, of course, that underdog is playing your team, or it really screws up your bracket in the office pool.

I'm sure the NCAA didn't think about the possibility of those upsets when they expanded the field, at least not in the way many fans do. To them it was simple economics.

More teams in the field means more games. That translates into bigger TV contracts.

And in truth, I'm sure the NCAA frowns upon having a high-seeded team get bounced in the first round by a Coppin State or a Richmond. They'd rather not have CBS, their partner in broadcasting March Madness, jump all over them.

I'm mean. What would happen to ratings if none of the No. 1 seeds were to make it past, say, the second round? CBS would be very displeased. That would not please the NCAA.

Still, the fact 64 teams out of the 306 programs in Division I basketball make the tournament troubles me. That's about one out of five teams getting invited to the dance.

That's not as bad as some. In professional sports it's something like one out of three, or less.

And the reasoning behind it is the same as the reasoning of the

Bolts set sights on quarterback

PHOENIX (AP) -- The Arizona Cardinals might wind up with four starters in a trade for a draft choice that could have given them a top quarterback they believe they don't really need.

And the San Diego Chargers, unwilling to gamble on leftovers, made that seemingly one-sided deal to have a chance to pick up the quarterback they desperately need.

"The bottom line is this was a deal we couldn't afford to pass up," Cardinals coach Vince Tobin said. "The big thing is that we strengthened our football team right now."

"We're not done yet," added Bob Ferguson, the team's vice president for player personnel.

By giving Arizona star punt returner Eric Metcalf and linebacker Patrick Sapp in a deal thrown together late Thursday, the Chargers moved up one spot in the April draft -- to the second pick from third.

That puts them in position to snap up Tennessee's Peyton Manning or -- if Indianapolis doesn't take him -- Washington State's Ryan Leaf.

"Whichever one is there," Chargers general manager Bobby Beathard said.

Indianapolis, which traded quarterback Jim Harbaugh to Baltimore last month, has the first pick by virtue of finishing 3-13 last year.

The Cardinals, meanwhile, got a potential replacement for punt returner Kevin Williams, lost to free agency, plus San Diego's first- and second-round picks this year and a No. 1 pick in 1999, giving them two in the first round that year.

Besides shoring up the linebacker corps depleted by the free-agency loss of Eric Hill, the Cardinals also put themselves in position to grab Florida State All-America defensive end Andre Wadsworth, who has indicated he'd like to play for the Cardinals.

Tobin and scout Jerry Haddaway plan to fly to Tallahassee, Fla., next week to watch the 6-foot-3, 278-pound Wadsworth work out.

Why would the Chargers give up so much?

"There are two quarterbacks in this draft, and I think the consensus of opinion is that two guys like that don't come along very often," Beathard said.

Stan Humphries, San Diego's starting quarterback since 1992, retired Feb. 27 because of the effects of two concussions suffered within 18 days last season. Jim Everett won't be back, leaving only Craig Whelihan, who saw his first NFL action and was 0-7 in relief of Humphries.

San Diego recently was rebuffed by Erik Kramer, who re-signed with Chicago. The Chargers were 4-12 last year, losing their last eight games.

Ferguson noted that with other teams besides San Diego needing quarterbacks, perhaps the Chargers were a little nervous that the Cardinals, pleased with rookie quarterback Jake Plummer, would trade the No. 2 pick to another team.

Possibly reflecting that view, Beathard said he spent virtually 24 hours on the phone working out this deal.

"I really personally didn't expect it to happen this quickly," he said. "It's a load off my mind."

Manning and Leaf, he added, are similar in that they're big, have been winners and "are tough guys."

"Each one has the ingredients to be a top-level quarterback in this league," he said. "They're both the kinds of guys that you look for. They aren't clones; they are different. I don't think that the upside of one is different."

San Diego already has begun to rebuild, welcoming back running back Natrone Means and signing free-agent linemen Aaron Taylor from Green Bay and John Jackson from Pittsburgh.

The Cardinals also were 4-12 last season, but the development of Plummer put them in position to give up the No. 2 pick.

"It all started last year when we drafted a young, skinny kid from Idaho," Ferguson said. "He put us in a position to say maybe we have our franchise quarterback."

They also could wind up with a formidable defensive line with Wadsworth, Eric Swann and Simeon Rice.

And with three picks in the first 35, the Cardinals now are in position "to have an immediate impact on this year's draft and next year's," Ferguson added.

Metcalf, a first-round pick by Cleveland in 1989, spent six seasons with the Browns before being traded to Atlanta in 1995. He signed with the Chargers as a free agent last year, ultimately becoming a wide receiver while setting an NFL record with his ninth career punt return for a touchdown.

It was the 11th kick return touchdown of his career, extending the NFL record he set on Nov. 2 by returning punts 85 and 67 yards for touchdowns in a 38-31 loss at Cincinnati. He has two kickoff returns and nine punt returns for touchdowns in the regular season and one kickoff runback in the playoffs.

Metcalf, a three-time Pro Bowler, said he felt underused with the Chargers, though he was assured that he would have more opportunities this year.

Street breaks leg in Switzerland ski fall

CRANS MONTANA, Switzerland (AP) -- Picabo Street sacrificed a second Olympic gold medal last month rather than reinjure her left leg. On Friday she realized her worst fears in her last race of the season: She broke it.

Street lost control on a jump and her left ski released from the binding upon impact with the icy racing surface. She flew into the safety netting and then grabbed her left leg, screaming in pain.

"She came off the jump and she was fine. Then she sat back coming out of a turn and crashed about 50 meters below me," said Herwig Domschitz, coach of the U.S. women's team who was standing alongside the downhill course.

"The first skier went down fine. Picabo looked good after the jump but then she sat back and crashed."

Street underwent nearly three hours of surgery so doctors could set her femur bone and secure it with a metal plate screwed into the bone, said Patrick Ravussin, chief anesthesiologist at the Hospital de Champsec in Sion, about 20 miles from the race site.

"We put one plate and 8-10 screws in her femur," said Dr. Robert Scheinberg of Dallas, who was with the U.S. team for this season-ending weekend of races and assisted in the operation.

"She also sprained her right knee and sustained bruising to her right arm," Scheinberg said.

Ravussin said Street had spoken to her mother by phone prior to her operation.

Street might return to the United States as early as next week but there was no immediate word on how long she would be off skis. Ravussin suggested only that it would be "many months."

Both Domschitz and Gian Franco Kasper, executive director of the International Ski Federation, said course conditions did not cause the accident.

"It looked pretty nasty with the helicopter and all," Canadian skier Melanie Turgeon said. "All the coaches were around her and she was kind of in a fetal position."

Parker enjoys coaching job

JUPITER, Fla. (AP) -- Dave Parker became a major-league coach so Hall of Fame voters wouldn't forget him.

Along the way, he grew into the job.

"I'm having a great time," said the former Pittsburgh Pirates great, in his first year as hitting coach with the St. Louis Cardinals. "I really came back out just to be visible, and I actually fell in love with coaching."

Parker, 46, was first base coach with the California Angels last year. He jumped at the chance to get back to the National League, where he made his name during the late 1970s and early 1980s.

He's also reunited with manager Tony La Russa, who managed him at Oakland in 1988-89.

In 1977, Parker won the first of consecutive batting titles with a .338 average, and also led the league with 215 hits and 44 doubles. In 1978 he batted .334 with 30 homers and 117 RBIs. He and Willie Stargell were the big boppers on the Pirates' "We are Family" 1979 World Championship team.

Parker batted .310 with 25 home runs, 45 doubles and 94 RBIs that year. He retired in 1991, concluding a 19-year career with a .290 average, 2,712 hits and 339 home runs.

So far, Hall of Fame voters haven't been overly impressed. He was 10th this year with 116 votes, 239 shy of the 75 percent needed.

Thus, his strategic return to baseball.

"I did everything you can do in baseball, so yeah," Parker said.

"There's people in there at the present time who don't have my numbers. I think I definitely have good enough numbers to be there."

Parker said if it doesn't happen in his first five years of eligibility, he doesn't want to be in the Hall.

"The Hall of Fame is a title and it's political, and if I don't make it, it doesn't make any difference," Parker said. "It makes more of a difference how players I played with and against, how they regard me."

One former contemporary, Cardinals special instructor Lou Brock, isn't in Parker's corner.

"He can drive there," Brock said of Parker's shot at getting to Cooperstown.

La Russa, on the other hand, is an advocate.

"He played a long time, plus he had defensive excellence and played on a couple of world championship teams," La Russa said. "He has a lot of credentials."

Two reasons why Parker might not make it: he finished 288 hits shy of 3,000 and was perhaps the most visible figure in major league baseball's drug trials of the early 1980s.

Parker downplays the fact he finished short of 3,000 hits, which is considered an automatic entree.

"I always spoke out, I was always an individual that voiced his opinion and took stands on issues that most people ran from," Parker said. "Some of the things players did with 3,000 hits, I did with 2,700 hits, and more."

His voice rises at the mention of his cocaine problems.

"I don't see how that affects anything," Parker said.

Parker said he's having no trouble relating to Cardinals players.

"One thing about these guys, they identify with watching me play, so I come in with instant credibility," Parker said.

Chelios pays for vandalism

CHICAGO (AP) -- Chris Chelios, the captain of the U.S. Olympic hockey team, sent an apology and a $3,000 check to Japanese Olympic officials on Friday for the damage teammates caused to their rooms after losing to the Czech Republic last month.

"Certain conduct by a few members of our team ... was inexcusable," the Chicago Blackhawks defenseman wrote to the Japanese Olympic Committee.

Chelios, who has denied causing any of the damage and said he was cleared of wrongdoing, said the $3,000 was meant to cover damages on Feb. 18 to three rooms at Nagano's Olympic Village. Ten chairs were broken and the walls were damaged by a fire extinguisher.

Midland will face S.A. Taft for 5A crown

AUSTIN (AP) -- Midland brought a blinding running and pressing attack to the boys' state tournament Friday, drawing fans out of their seats in awe of its athletic talent and sending Pearland home an 80-48 loser in the Class 5A semifinals.

Jay Christian played above the rim. Kirby Lemons was unstoppable inside. Blake Johnston dished out no-look assists. Charles Tatum bombed from long range. And they all did it at maximum speed.

With a bench 10 deep, Midland coach Jack Stephenson rotated players the way a NASCAR driver rotates tires and kept the pace frenetic for four quarters.

What sets Midland (35-2) apart from other running and pressing teams is its unselfishness. There were 19 assists, compared to seven for Pearland.

Johnston, who had six assists, many of them breathtaking dishes in traffic, caught some of his own teammates off guard with a couple of his passes as he gave up open shots.

Midland will play in Saturday's 5A title game against San Antonio Taft.

One of Midland's two losses came against Taft (69-60) early in the year. The other loss was a forfeit -- due to an ineligible player -- of a game the Bulldogs had won against Odessa Permian.

Maggert leads at Honda Classic

CORAL SPRINGS, Fla. (AP) -- Jeff Maggert felt the wind die and figured the scores would go down, too. He got his game in gear just in time to keep a one-stroke lead Friday after two rounds of the Honda Classic.

If only John Daly could have taken the same cue.

Daly, one off the lead when the second round began, instead bogeyed four of the first five holes in harmless conditions and had to make a 4-footer for par on the 18th just to make the cut.

"I think I play this golf course better when the wind is blowing," Daly said after a 4-over-par 76 left him nine strokes back.

Maggert and the rest of the field might disagree.

In surprising calm for south Florida in the spring, Maggert made three straight birdies on his back nine for a 68 and is at 9-under 135 after two very different rounds on the TPC at Heron Bay.

One stroke back is Lee Janzen, who made an eagle for the second straight day out of the same bunker on the 16th in a round of 66.

A good, stiff wind is the one element that can separate the field at any tournament. Hardly a breeze, especially at such a wide-open course, can bunch things up.

That's what Maggert and Janzen, both trying to end victory droughts, face going into the weekend.

Defending champion Stuart Appleby finally got his putter going and was two strokes back after a 67 left him tied with Mark Calcavecchia at 137. Colin Montgomerie, Vijay Singh and Stewart Cink were among those at 138.

"I feel comfortable, and I got myself into position to win," said Montgomerie, who birdied the last two holes. "That's what I wanted to do."

Craig Stadler had a 66 and was at 139, while Fuzzy Zoeller was at 140.

"If you shoot 72, it's not a good score compared to yesterday," Calcavecchia said. "I was hunting birdies."

Maggert was settling for pars. Unlike Thursday, when he played the par 5s in 3-under, he failed to birdie the two easiest holes at Heron Bay was even for the day through 11 holes.

"I don't feel like I hit the ball as solidly as I did yesterday," Maggert said. "The conditions were pretty nice. I knew guys would start shooting good scores when the wind died down. It felt good to make four birdies coming in."

He started with a 9-iron that settled six feet from the cup on No. 3, then hit a 6-iron into 15 feet for a birdie at the dangerous 187-yard fifth hole. He followed that with a 45-foot birdie on No. 6, the same hole where he holed out for eagle on Thursday, and made it three birdies in a row with a lob wedge to two feet on the seventh.

"I have as good a chance as anyone to win this tournament," said Maggert, whose only PGA Tour win came at the 1993 Disney Classic. Janzen feels the same way.

The 1993 U.S. Open champion and one of the steadiest players on tour, Janzen has gone through two years of consistent play without a victory to show for it.

"I probably had my most consistent year last year, but I would trade all my top 10s for a win," Janzen said. "They not any good, except they'll get you on the Ryder Cup team."

Janzen played bogey-free, but didn't get into the hunt until his 2-iron landed in the bunker on the 534-yard 16th hole, not a bad place to try to make birdie consider the water guarding to the green to the right.

Janzen did better than that, holing the bunker shot for eagle and topping that off with a 3-iron into eight feet for a birdie at the 17th.

Appleby proved again that just playing the TPC at Heron Bay suits him fine. He won the Honda a year ago and had a bogey-free 67 on Friday to get into contention again.

Appleby missed three straight putts of about 12 feet starting on the 602-yard fourth hole, but stuck a wedge within four feet on No. 7 and holed a 15-footer for birdie on the eighth.

"This course has nothing that should suit me," he said. "It's not a tricky course. It's not like you have to think your way around."

Upsets

NCAA. They're not hoping to give some team that doesn't "belong" their chance at an upset; they know more teams means more money.

Even those of us against expanded fields tolerate, for the most part, the first-round blowouts in the name of money for that occasional upset. We figure, so they're making some more money, but who's really hurt? We know it's all about money, anyway.

When it gets down to the high school level, I have more of a problem with it. It shouldn't be about money on that level.

Just as an aside, did you know the University Interscholastic League actually proposed early this decade to take the last-place team in each district for the playoffs? It didn't make it, but the present system of taking three teams from each district isn't much better.

No, as long as there is TV, there will be blowouts like North Carolina's 88-52 pasting of Navy Thursday in the first round. But there

Fight

Injuries kept nine of the Stars' top 18 skaters off the ice Friday, including Modano and top defenseman Derian Hatcher and Sergei Zubov. The Stars placed Modano on injured reserve prior to Friday's game after Modano suffered the shoulder injury in Thursday night's 5-4 loss at Phoenix.

Nieuwendyk boosted his goal total to 31 this season, surpassing last season's total of 30. Stars backup goalie Roman Turek stopped 22 shots to stretch his unbeaten string to five games (4-0-1) and push the Mighty Ducks' losing streak to seven games. "We've got a MASII unit here," Nieuwendyk said. "We've got a lot of new faces and tonight we started playing more as a team."

Dallas was 0-3-2 over its previous five games.

A five-minute elbowing penalty by Dallas defenseman Craig Ludwig against Anaheim star Teemu Selanne with 4:08 left touched off a series of fights that led to five game misconducts and 10 fighting majors between the teams.

With another Anaheim star, Paul Kariya, sidelined with post-concussion syndrome, the Ducks were in no mood to see Selanne nailed by a flying elbow.

"I didn't see us do anything during the game that resembled what they did to Selanne," Mighty Ducks coach Pierre Page said. "Two wrongs don't make a right. They're having a great season, they get some guys injured and they take their frustrations out on our best player."

Neither Ludwig nor Selanne would comment after the game.

With both benches depleted by game misconducts, Matt Cullen and Sean Pronger scored for the Ducks over the final 2:47 and Nieuwendyk added his fourth goal with 1:08 left.

"We went from a quiet 5-1 win to a 6-3 all-hell-breaks-loose donnybrook," Stars coach Ken Hitchcock said.

Nieuwendyk scored the game's first goal at 12:32 of the first period, converting Pat Verbeek's goalmouth feed.

Alfredsson has 5-shot lead

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) -- This is how well Helen Alfredsson played in the Welch's-Circle K Championship on Friday: Kristi Albers tied an LPGA record and still trailed by five shots.

Alfredsson, a winner once this year, carded an 8-under-par 64 in the second round, good for a 12-under 132 and a four-shot lead over Charlotta Sorenstam, Chris Johnson, Tina Barrett and Michelle Estill.

Albers led the next tier at 137, recovering from her first-round 75 with a 62. Her round included birdies on the second, third, fourth, fifth, ninth, 12th, 13th, 15th, 16th and 18th holes, including two-putting from 50 feet on No. 3 and a 30-foot putt on No. 13.

Only Laura Davies (1991), Hollis Stacy (1992) and Kathryn Marshall (1997) have played a par-72 LPGA course in 10-under. Vicki Fergon was 11-under on a par-73 layout in San Jose, Calif., in 1984.

Lady Raiders fend off Grambling, 87-75

LUBBOCK (AP) -- When it became obvious that Grambling State wasn't going to let top-seeded Texas Tech use them for a tune-up, Alicia Thompson took matters into her own hands.

"I knew I was going to have to take a lot of shots," she said.

The first-team All-America forward shot 15-for-25 for 39 points as Tech survived an 87-75 scare in the first round of the NCAA tournament's Midwest Regional.

Tech (26-4) led by 21 points early in the second half before Grambling (23-7) whittled the gap to 76-70 at the 3:36 mark. Thompson scored seven of the Lady Raiders' next 10 points to finally pull away.

"We let things get out of hand in the first half," Lady Tigers coach Rusty Ponton said of Tech's easy early run. "We wanted to keep things close and my hat is off to our young ladies for staying with it."

Seemingly unshaken by Tech's raucous sellout home crowd, Grambling drew within 56-47 at the 12:37 mark and stayed in striking distance until Thompson fueled the late spurt.

Grambling's Demetrice Smith hit four 3-pointers and scored 16 points. Shikiea Carter added 14.

Even when they were rolling, the Lady Tigers never could stop the pass-and-shoot combination of Melinda Schmucker and Thompson. Schmucker tied an NCAA tournament record with 17 assists.

The personal accomplishments didn't save Tech coach Marsha Sharp's disappointment at the close call, though.

"There are things we will have to correct by Sunday (against Notre Dame), or we won't be around much longer," Sharp said. "I don't think we took them lightly, but I do think we let them hang around."

Rene Hanebutt had 17 points for Tech while Angie Brazier added 11 and a career-high five blocked shots. Thompson, Hanebutt and Brazier scored the Lady Raiders' first 25 points as they coasted to a quick double-digit lead.

Valparaiso

NCAA tournament victory was set up when Mississippi's Ansu Sesay missed two free throws with 4.3 seconds left.

With 2.5 seconds remaining, Valparaiso's Jamie Sykes threw a long pass from the baseline past midcourt to Bill Jenkins, who sent a touch pass to Drew.

Drew scored 22 points, including four 3-pointers, as Valparaiso (22-9) won its 12th consecutive game.

The Crusaders will play Florida State in Sunday's second round.

Keith Carter led fourth-seeded Ole Miss (22-7) with 22 points and Joezen Darby had 13. Sesay was held to 11 points, tying his season low.

The Midwest was the Upset Regional, as three double-digit seeds advanced to the second round. Florida State, the 12th seed, beat No. 5 Texas Christian 96-87 and No. 11 Western Michigan beat sixth-seeded Clemson 75-72.

Elsewhere in the Midwest, Stanford beat College of Charleston 67-57, Rhode Island routed Murray State 97-74, and Purdue pounded Delaware 95-56.

In the South, it was St. Louis 51, Massachusetts 46; Syracuse 63, Iowa 61; Kentucky 82, South Carolina State 67; New Mexico 79, Butler 62; Oklahoma State 74, George Washington 59; and Michigan 80, Davidson 61.

Saturday's second-round games in the East will be North Carolina-N.C. Charlotte, Michigan State-Princeton, Richmond-Washington and Indiana-Connecticut.

In the West, it will be Maryland-Illinois, Arizona-Illinois State, Cincinnati-West Virginia and Utah-Arkansas.

Outrun

Averaging 70 points per game, the Seminoles shot 55 percent in scoring their most points of the year.

The Horned Frogs' press only works well when their shots are falling, and that didn't happen early in the second half when Florida State took control. TCU had just three field goals in the first eight minutes while Florida State opened as much as a seven-point lead.

The Seminoles consistently got the ball inside for easy shots. Jackson was especially tough, scoring 14 of his points in the second half, almost all of them in the paint.

Texas Christian had the tempo to its liking throughout the first half, which ended 46-46. But Florida State, after starting out 3-of-11 from the field, finished the half 19-of-37 and had little trouble keeping up with the Horned Frogs after the slow beginning.

TCU was making its first NCAA tournament appearance since 1987. The loss spoiled a homecoming for coach Billy Tubbs, who spent 14 years as coach at Oklahoma before leaving for TCU. Tubbs picked up a technical foul in the second half for yelling at an official after no foul was called on a shot by Nailon.

Florida State's last appearance in the tournament was in 1993 when the Seminoles reached the Southeast Regional title game.

ARSENIO HALL MELANIE GRIFFITH

NEW YORK (AP) - A sneak peek at fall projects in development for CBS yields some familiar faces, including Arsenio Hall and Melanie Griffith.

Hall, the former talk show host whose comedy "Arsenio" failed at ABC last year, is paired with George Eads in "Skip Chasers," an action series about two bounty hunters.

Griffith revives her "Working Girl" persona with "Me and George." She plays a single mom working in a New York public relations firm. George is her baby.

Jim Belushi has signed onto "Better Days," a comedy being developed by "Roger & Me" director Michael Moore. It features two leading dock workers who lose their jobs when the factory moves to Mexico.

CBS will announce its fall schedule in May.

PAUL NEWMAN KEVIN COSTNER

CHILMARK, Mass. (AP) - Nature has taken top billing over Paul Newman and Kevin Costner.

Chilmark's Conservation Commission turned down a Warner Bros. request to film scenes for "Message in the Bottle" on Martha's Vineyard. The studio had asked to build a temporary 3,000-square-foot house on stilts in the dunes near Chilmark Pond.

The request was approved by state environmental officials, but the conservation commission was concerned about the grass on the beach. Filming was to begin by April 1, and commissioners were afraid the trampled grass would not have time to grow before hurricane season.

"The actual letter of the law is very strict. There is to be no alteration of a sand dune that would weaken it to storm erosion," Conservation Commission Chairman Richard Steves said.

JIANG ZEMIN

BEIJING (AP) - "Titanic" has found a powerful fan in China: President Jiang Zemin.

It doesn't bother Jiang that the movie, soon to be shown on 200 screens in China, was made in a capitalist country. In fact, the Communist Party leader suggests that studying capitalist things could help his country.

"We shouldn't think that capitalism has no ideas to exchange," the official newspaper Yangcheng Evening News quoted him as telling the Legislature.

"This movie shows fully how people deal with the relationship between money and love, poverty and wealth, in the middle of a difficult situation."

Noting that the movie has reaped nearly $1 billion globally, he said: "That's venture capital, eh?"

SUSAN LUCCI

NEW YORK (AP) - Perennial Emmy loser Susan Lucci has yet another chance to break her string of bad luck.

Lucci on Wednesday received her 18th Daytime Emmy Award nomination as best actress for the role of Erica Kane on ABC's "All My Children."

To get the win, she will have to beat out soap opera nominees Eileen Davidson of "Days of Our Lives," Jacklyn Zeman of "General Hospital," Cynthia Watros of "Guiding Light" and Kim Zimmer of "Guiding Light."

"The Rosie O'Donnell Show," with 13 nominations, had more than any non-soap opera. O'Donnell is up against "The Oprah Winfrey Show," which will compete for its fifth consecutive Emmy as best talk show. Other nominees are "Leeza," "Live with Regis and Kathie Lee" and "The View."

The soap opera best actor nominees were: David Canary of "All My Children," Anthony Geary of "General Hospital," Kin Shriner of "Port Charles," Eric Braeden of "The Young and the Restless"; and Peter Bergman of "The Young and the Restless."

Police ask for grand jury in JonBenet's death

DENVER (AP) - They've been blocked by JonBenet Ramsey's uncooperative parents and unable to get prosecutors to file charges.

Almost 15 months into the mystery of who killed the 6-year-old beauty contestant, Boulder police recommended Thursday that the case be turned over to a grand jury for "a complete investigation."

"The appropriate step at this time is to ask for a grand jury to assist us in gathering additional admissible evidence," Police Cmdr. Mark Beckner said.

Boulder County District Attorney Alex Hunter said the police department "concluded that its investigation has not resulted in sufficient admissible evidence to convict anyone of the murder."

Easy on the top, a little off the sides

Straight razors continue to play a strong role in the traditional barbershop services.

Text and photos by
Dianna F. Dandridge

Vacuum attached clippers have forever changed the way a barbershop looks.

Barbershops hold their own and make the final cut

Survive in today's world of fashion salons

For centuries the classic red and white striped pole has signified the location of a barber, a dentist, and a surgeon, all in one.

Business patrons were able to get a shave, a haircut, a tooth pulled and blood letting by way of leeches, all in one convenient location.

Over time, like so many things, the meaning of the pole changed. First, the surgeons were given the directive they could no longer shave anyone.

Of course the use of leeches went by the wayside with modern medicine and before they knew it dentists were expected to receive formal training, pass state exams and were not expected to cut a customer's hair or beard.

On the other hand, barbers were also expected to receive formal training, of a different kind from surgeons and dentists, pass state exams and continue in the age old practice of cutting hair, trimming beards, and delivering close shaves.

As all things change so have the old-fashioned barber shops frequented by men of days past.

The first noticeable change, when a person enters a modern barber shop, is the missing white lab-style jacket, no tobacco speckled spittoons and no hair clippings on the floor.

The next sure sign of modernization is the lack of tonic bottles, dusting powders, or the age old leather razor strap, which was once used for sharpening the blades.

Modern barber shops, like Park Avenue Barber Shop, uses strong vacuums attached to the clippers to avoid scattered hair clippings; and the barbers, Ronnie Pagett, Perry Ray, and Billy Tice have long since donned jeans and polo shirts in place of the standard smocks.

Pagett said there are a number of differences between today's barber and today's stylist.

"Stylists probably have more education," he said. "But, then they deal with more blow dry effects, and mousse and stuff. We still basically cut hair."

This is not to belittle the barber's efforts, for as Pagett said, "A hair cut is style in itself."

Pagett said many new stylists don't know how to cut some of the older cuts, like a flattop, and rely on sculpting gels and such to maintain the look.

Along with haircuts, the barbers still use a straight razor for the close trims, but this too, is one of the many courtesies that are facing changes and government regulations.

Due to the chance of spreading disease, each customer, needing that close trim, gets a fresh razor blade rather than the old straight razor which were sharpened repeatedly on the leather strap.

Customers no longer get dusted off with dusting powder and a soft bristled brush, instead, the vacuum removes all the hair clippings before they can fall down the client's neckline.

Perry Ray, said "About the only time I use the brush is when I go to the nursing homes. Then I'll brush the stray hairs off."

One thing that has remained the same though, is the shoe shine stand in the corner. Many a gentleman can remember taking a few minutes from their busy schedule and allowing themselves the luxury of having their shoes or boots polished, while waiting for the barber to finish with a current customer.

Unfortunately, though, the shoe shine stand still remains, the shop no longer has a shoe shiner. With the age of less expensive or no-shine shoes, the shiners themselves have become just another memory of days gone by.

Of all the things that have been a victim of rapid change, one of the few things that are changing more slowly is the male dominated atmosphere.

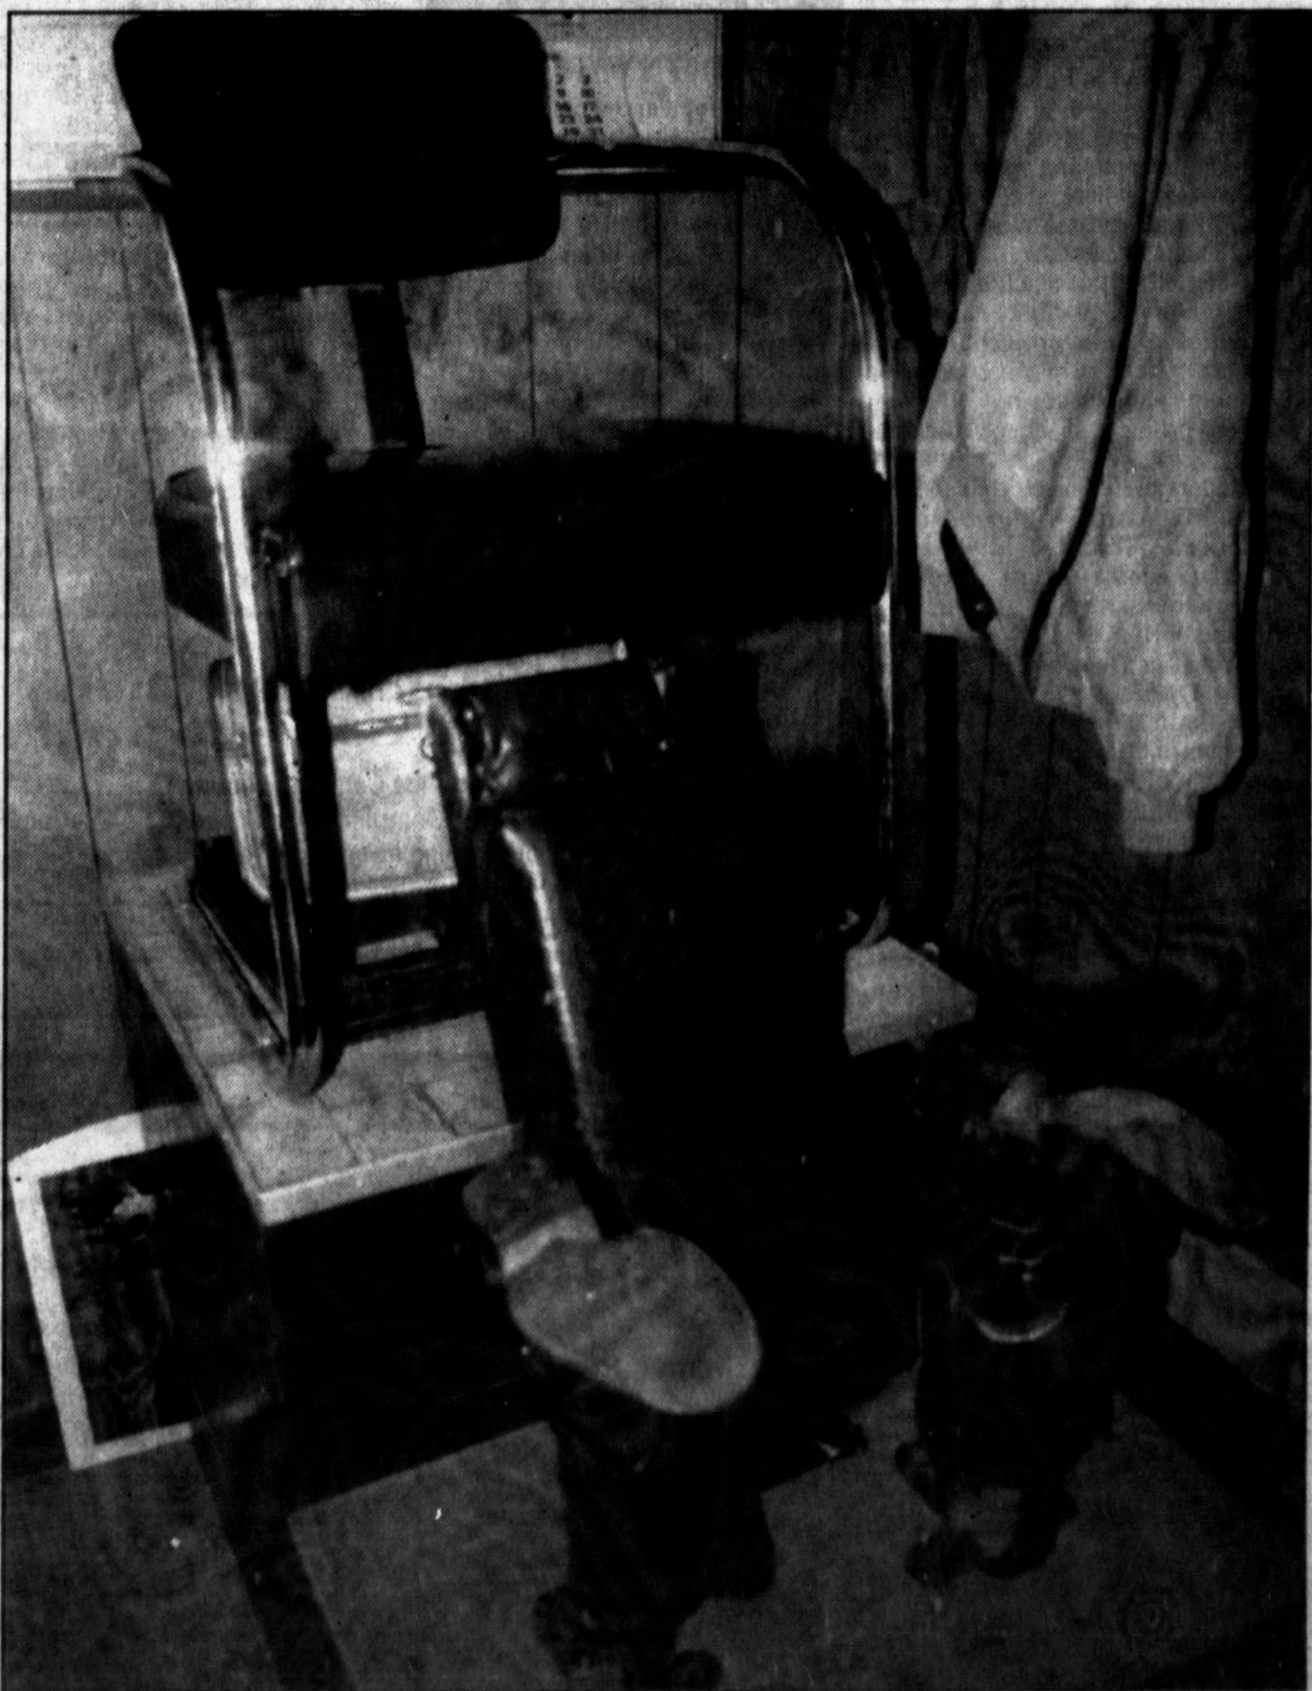

Perry said they occasionally get ladies in - ladies who want a really close trim for some of the newer, shorter styles - but, for the most part their customers remain predominately male.

So, just what does a customer get when they enter a modern barber shop?

They get a sparkling facility, a nice hair cut at a reasonable price and lots to talk about as the barbershop threesome keep the conversation rolling along.

"This is a long way from the old-fashioned barber shop. The day's of 'Floyd's Barber Shop' are long since gone. We keep everything as modern as possible," said Pagett.

"After all everyone should still be able to get a good haircut."

Shine and a haircut have come a long way and the old shoe shine stand is mostly vacant in a modern barbershop.

Reinart, Brorman wed in Umbarger ceremony

Mandi Lea Reinart of Canyon and Roger Joseph Brorman of Vega were united in marriage in an evening ceremony Saturday in St. Mary's Catholic Church in Umbarger.

The bride is the daughter of Galen and Mary Reinart of Canyon. Parents of the bridegroom are A.H. and Dorothy Brorman of Vega.

Father Pat Caruthers officiated at the ceremony.

Maids of honor were Corrie Schenk of Canyon and Dina Donathan of Wildorado, cousins of the bride. Jeff Haggard of Canyon was best man.

Bridesmaids were Sybil Brewer and Sally Nester of Canyon.

Serving as groomsmen were David Brorman, brother of the groom of Vega, Jeff Joyce of Amarillo and Robby Kirkland of Vega.

Guests were seated by Gary Reinart of Umbarger, brother of the bride; Keith Brorman of Lubbock, brother of the groom; Cody Walker of Vega and Michael Hall of Round Rock.

Flower girl was Tori Skarke, niece of the groom and daughter of Troy and Joyce Skarke of Claude.

Kyle Reinart, brother of the bride, was ring bearer.

Mass servers were Mark Reinart of Umbarger, brother of the bride, and Bo Brorman of Dalhart, nephew of the groom.

Music was provided by Martha Brorman, organist; Angeline Reinart, violinist; and Troy Skarke, vocalist.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal gown of white Italian satin featuring a Venice lace sleeveless bodice with a Sabrina neckline trimmed with narrow satin banding. The empire waist also featured a double banding of satin.

The princess A-line skirt was trimmed with the narrow satin banding, highlighted with Venice lace. The cut-out back accented the lace overlay.

The full detachable split chapel train was concealed under the back bow and accented by lace medallions and satin banding.

The bride's cascading bouquet was of white roses, stephanotis and white enchantment lilies, accented with fresh dark green English ivy, dainty lace and satin streamers.

Bridal attendants' gowns were of black crepe-back satin featuring a sleeveless empire bodice with front princess seams trimmed with narrow satin banding. A simple floor length princess A-line skirt was accented with a back bow and satin streamers trimmed in sequins. Each carried a single white long stemmed rose accented with baby's breath and ribbon.

The couple was honored with a reception in St. Mary's Parish Hall.

Assisting with the reception were Karen Friemel, Karen Artho, Gladys Meyer, Gina Pender and Yvonne Wiecek.

Following a wedding trip to Ruidoso, N.M., the couple will be at home near Vega.

MRS. ROGER JOSEPH BRORMAN
...nee Mandi Lea Reinart

The bride is currently attending West Texas A&M University as an elementary education major with a concentration in mathematics. She is employed by the Canyon After-School Program where she is lead teacher at Sundown Lane Elementary School.

The groom received a bachelor of science degree in agronomy in 1994 from Texas Tech University. He is currently self-employed and farms near Vega.

DRT recognizes Waters as outstanding history teacher

Carolyn Waters, history teacher at Hereford Junior High, was recently named as the District X winner of The Daughters of the Republic of Texas Outstanding Seventh Grade Texas History Teacher Contest.

Chapters which compose District X are Amarillo, Lubbock, Abilene, Archer City and Odessa.

Waters will compete with winning entrants from the other nine districts of Texas for the state winner place. The state winner will be honored at the annual Daughters of the Republic of Texas Convention to be held in Nacogdoches May 21-23.

"Palo Duro Chapter is honored to have such an outstanding teacher as Carolyn for its winner," LaNell Gunter, third vice president of Palo Duro Chapter and chairman of the contest, said.

Water has taught for 37 years, with 24 years of teaching experience in junior high where she has taught Texas, American and World History, English and Yearbook.

Her methods of teaching beyond the textbook include hands-on activities such as projects, performances, field trips, cooperative learning and discovery (through various projects, speakers, research, etc.).

Honors she has received in the past include Who's Who Among America's Teachers, 1994-1996; Daughters of the American Revolution Outstanding Teacher of American History, 1994; Teacher of the Year for Hereford Independent School District, 1995; Teacher of the Year-Ladies Auxiliary to the Veterans of Foreign Wars, 1996; and the "School Bell Award" presented by Texas State Teachers Association for outstanding journalism, 1995, 1996 and 1997.

"We feel that Mrs. Waters' philosophy of teaching is a root cause of her recognition," said Gunter. "She believes to be a successful educator strong emphasis must be placed on producing men and women who are capable of participating in and contributing to the economic life of their community and the nation, bearing responsibility for freedom and self-government and helping to create a better society in which to live."

As a result of her years in the classroom, Waters states, "It is interesting to observe how students suddenly realize how the past, present and future blend together and the study of history does not have to be only about 'old folks and dead folks' but about what is going on right now."

Red Cross Update

A membership drive is underway at the Red Cross office. Cards are available by coming by the office or mailing a donation to P.O. Box 1371, Hereford, Texas 79045 and a card will be mailed to you.

A garage sale will be held April 2, 3 and 4 to raise funds for disaster relief. All of the storms across the United States have caused extensive damage to homes as well as destroying many homes. As a result, emergency food, shelter and clothing costs have cost millions of dollars. Donations for the garage sale are being accepted at the office.

The Scout Food Drive scheduled for this weekend has been postponed until March 28, weather permitting. The food will benefit the Hereford Food Pantry.

A disaster drill will be held March 24 for volunteers on the disaster team to practice their skills in Damage Assessment, Mass Care and Shelter and Family Service. All volunteers are asked to call the office for job assignments and details.

Disaster Services classes will be held Thursday and Friday, March 19-20. Call the office to register for these classes.

The Tri County Chapter of the American Red Cross is a United Way agency.

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

Encourage your children to learn how to express themselves in words, both written and spoken. It really does help them to think better.

Josefina Zapata placed second and Heather Brown placed third at the County Spelling Bee. Both of the girls worked hard and spend many hours at practice. Congratulations to you both!! Thanks to Catherine Cortez who sponsored the girls and who also put in many hours of work with them!

The Computer Technology Class at HJH is building two new computers with parts from CICS. The computers will be used for automotive class at the high school and also at junior high. Students will have them available for class projects.

Power and Energy Class is in the process of making a peddle-power ice cream freezer. In order to be able to eat homemade ice cream, one must peddle a bicycle that turns the crank on the freezer to make the ice cream.

The students in Mrs. Sims' G/T English classes are presenting American Nostalgia/The Living Time Line on Tuesday, March 24. This will take place in the front hallway of the school. Students have spent the last five weeks researching a decade of American history as well as writing their own autobiographies. The research, reports, costumes and collections will be on display from 4-5:30 p.m. on the 24th. All students, family members and interested persons are cordially invited to attend the come-and-go festivities. Do plan to celebrate history with us!

Students and teachers will enjoy a week of vacation during this week of Spring Break.

History Day participants will have a work and research day tomorrow. They will go to the Deaf Smith County Library, the Panhandle-Plains Museum and the WTAMU Library to work on their projects, performances and papers.

Congratulations to Justin Kerr who has placed in the Geography Bee to attend the state meet in Fort Worth on April 3. We have been anxiously waiting for the news from the National Geographic Society. We are always so positive about this that we make the plans ahead of time. In fact, our transportation has been reserved since last August!

Junior Historians have mailed the copy for their cookbook, which will have over 400 recipes. This will be their 100th Birthday Celebration for Hereford contribution. The chapter will also be sending information to all county schools for the "Design-A-T-Shirt" contest which will also feature the 100th Birthday Celebration.

When making rules for teens, be sure that they understand the consequences.

Couple will be united in wedding in Dumas

Dorothy Fetsch Gilbreath and Curtis Wayne Schwertner, both of Dumas, have announced their engagement.

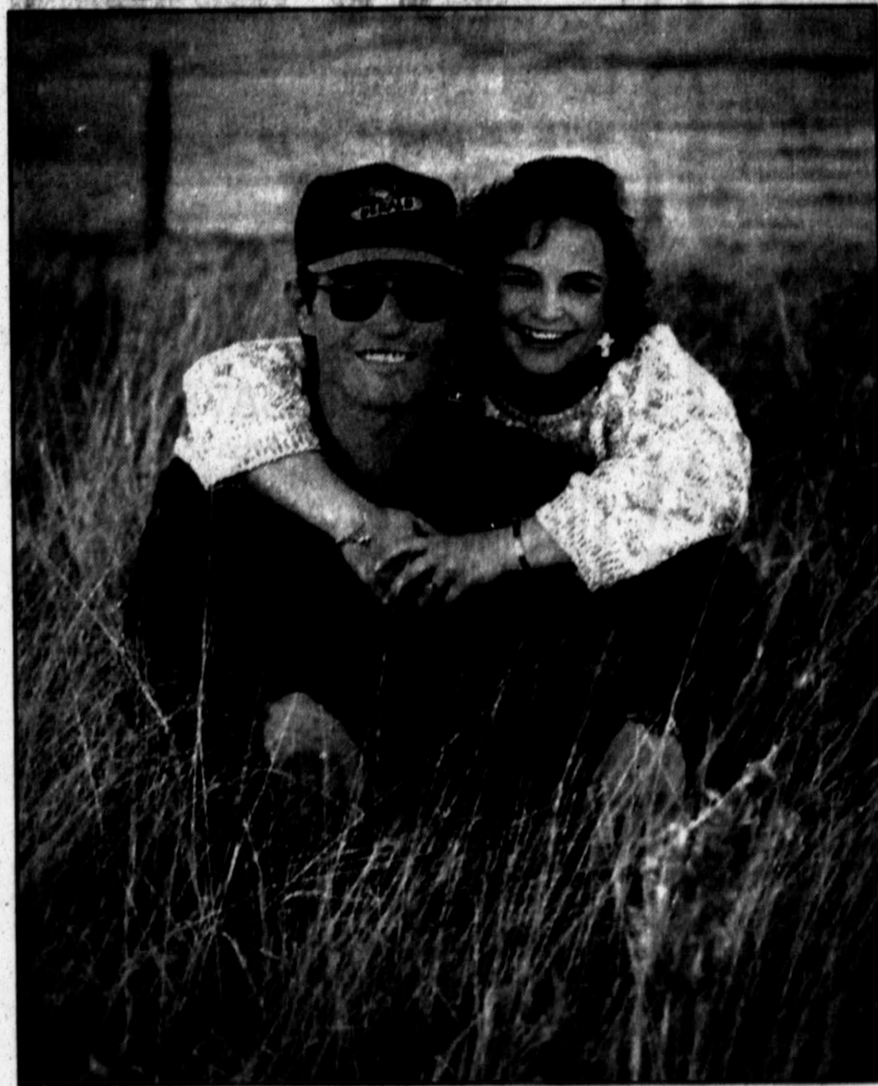

The couple is planning a May 2 wedding in Sts. Peter and Paul Catholic Church in Dumas.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Felix and Wilhemine Fetsch of Hereford.

Parents of the prospective bridegroom are Bruno and Norma Schwertner of Clarendon.

The bride-elect is a 1979 graduate of Hereford High School. She graduated in 1995 from Texas Tech University Health Science Center and is employed as an occupational therapist at Memorial Hospital in Dumas.

Schwertner graduated from Stratford High School in 1977 and from Panhandle State University in 1981. He is an agriculture research technician with Texas Agricultural Experiment Station in Ector.

The Successful Family

WHOLESOME FAMILY ACTIVITIES HELP THE NURTURING FAMILY SUCCEED

Take children to the library to get a library card. Visit the library at least once a week and allow children time to select their own books. Share a good book with a teenager.

Begin to read to your child early. Not only can you help establish the reading habit, but research shows early reading helps reduce the negative effects of learning disabilities. This time can create family bonding much more than TV watching. It also can enhance and encourage communication between you and your children.

Be as involved as you can in your child's life and education each and every day. Make sure your children enroll in challenging courses. Encourage high school students to take advanced placement courses or advanced technology and tech-prep courses. Set high standards for your children's course work and take an interest in their projects. Encourage them to study hard and participate in enrichment activities beyond the regular school day. DO THOSE ENRICHMENT ACTIVITIES WITH THEM!!

Explore options for the use of technology in the home and at school. Coordinate with the school computer activities what the family can do at home to enhance nurturing and learning. Encourage your school to provide access to the computer lab after school and on weekends.

Develop a technology plan for your family that explores how technology can support your children, school, and community. Talk with local cable, telecommunications and wireless companies about ways to improve technical facilities in your home and community including e-mail linkages, and free or low cost modem access between home, school, and work.

Provide for your family wholesome activities with technology to help prepare young people for careers. This will give them a strong transition from school and home to the world of work and independence. Encourage your children to explore potential career fields, and learn about the skills and education needed to enter those fields.

Expose your children to a wide variety of career possibilities through contacts with teachers, friends, employers, and career counselors. Take your children to the work place. Participate in their learning and urge them to do well at school.

For more information on how to D.R.E.S.S. YOUR FAMILY FOR SUCCESS contact Tili Boozer, director of Texas Panhandle Mental Health Authority at 364-6111. The program meets every Thursday evening from 6-9. The sessions will help your family develop understanding and rehabilitation. It provides family education for all ages. Skills for life are presented and support is given to every one.

Bordayo, Guerrero to wed in June ceremony

Rick and Virginia Bordayo of Hereford announce the engagement of their daughter Samantha to John Gabriel Guerrero.

The prospective bridegroom is the son of Deacon Jessie and Maggie Guerrero of Hereford.

The couple will wed June 20 in St. Anthony's Catholic Church.

The bride-elect graduated from Hereford High School in 1994 and attended West Texas A&M University. She is employed in the business office of Hereford Independent School District in the Administration Building.

Guerrero is a 1995 graduate of Hereford High and also attended WTAMU. He is employed as a corrections officer by the Deaf Smith County Sheriff's Department.

Food and Family

By LAWRENCE HEADLEY

R.D., L.D. TAKING A SPOON

Do you know when a baby is ready for solid food? New mothers often ask, "How can I tell when my baby is ready to eat solid food?"

Well, when your baby can sit with some support -- and hold her head up by herself -- and when she doesn't push food out of her mouth with her tongue -- then she's probably ready for solid food.

This usually happens between 4- and 6-months-of-age. Baby's first food should be infant cereal fortified with iron.

Try feeding a small amount once or twice a day with a small spoon specially made for babies.

New Arrivals

Clint and Lachella Coley of Hereford announce the birth of their son, Sage Clinton, on March 2 in Baptist/St. Anthony's Hospital in Amarillo.

He weighed 7 pounds, 12 ounces and measured 20 inches in length.

Grandparents are Dale and Lileesa Inman, Linda Patron of Childress and Phil and Velda Coley of Levelland.

Great-grandparents are Fae Wyatt of Tell, Johnnie Inman of Childress, Clayton and Mildred Ryan of Paducah and Stanley and Martha Coley of Shirley, Ark.

Genealogy tips to be presented

Corky Lockmiller will present the program for the Monday membership meeting of the Deaf Smith County Genealogical Society at 7:30 p.m. in the Hereford Community Center game room.

Lockmiller has been able to obtain family information through the internet and will share his success with the group.

In memory of Homer Guerra

We sincerely thank all the family and friends who our son and brother, Homer Guerra, had in Hereford. He was very much loved and will be sorely missed by all of us. "Family" was of the utmost importance to our Homer...always doing what was needed to bring family together. We will forever miss the two-and-a-half weeks he spent with us in Donna summer.

You, his family and friends in Hereford, were more fortunate to have him the rest of the year. We will forever miss his raspy voice, his singing, his jokes and just being there. We spent those summers laughing, singing and having our daily barbecues while he and his family were down. Our summer will now be so lonely.

He had his family, the Griegos, and friends in Hereford and family in Donna. He led a full and happy life and he touched many lives.

Again, we thank his family and friends in Hereford. At his service, it was apparent that in Hereford, too, he was loved by all the people he touched. We love you for loving him and for giving him an extended family in Hereford.

God bless you all, with love and heartfelt thanks,
Mrs. Rita D. Guerra and his family in Donna

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: Recently, I read in The Washington Post about a situation where maybe you can help. Please, Ann, consider it: Here's the news story:

Police are searching for a bigger home for a Largo, Fla., man, his 22 children and two of their mothers after finding all 25 living in a two-bedroom, one-bath house.

The two mothers are sisters who have taken the man's last name, even though neither is married to him. One is the mother of nine of his children, the other the mother of five. A third sister who no longer lives with the family is the mother of the other eight children, police said.

Police said they discovered the family while investigating an unrelated complaint in the neighborhood. They said the family was not breaking any laws and appealed to the public to help them find a house with five or more bedrooms they could afford.

Ann, according to the dictionary, "bigamy" means to marry a second time while knowing the first marriage is legally still in effect. No marriages means no crime. Am I right about this? Please respond in the paper, Ann. That man in Largo needs your help. -- Dismayed in Va.

Dear Dismayed: The man in Largo did not ask for my help, and it's just as well. I would have been tempted to give him more "help" than he bargained for. He seems to think his problem would be solved if he had a bigger house. In my opinion, what he really needs is a vasectomy.

Dear Ann Landers: I own a small but profitable business and have made it a practice to give annual bonuses based on time served and category of salaries. I've been doing this for 16 years. Only two employees ever said "thank you." Those two are no longer with me. One passed away, and the other one took early retirement.

I have decided to give no bonuses this year. Of course, there will be questions because my employees have come to expect that midyear gift. I am prepared to give this brief response: "There will be no bonuses this year because not one employee has taken the time and trouble to say 'thank you.'"

Please print my letter and your reaction to my decision. -- Philadelphia

Dear Phil: Congratulations for having the courage to put an end to the handouts. For years, I have been receiving letters from aunts, uncles, grandparents and friends who want to know what to do about gifts that are not acknowledged. I suggest they ask if the gift was received since there is always the possibility that it was lost in transit.

In your case, however, that possibility does not exist. I applaud your bravery and hope others who own small businesses will follow your example. People who can't crank up the energy to say "thank you" should not continue to be gifted and let off the hook.

Dear Ann Landers: Robert M. Hutchins, a truly brilliant man (he became president of the University of Chicago at age 29), made this pronouncement: "We have triumphantly invented, perfected and distributed to the humblest cottage throughout the land one of the greatest technical marvels in history, television. And for what? To bring Coney Island into every home." Do you agree, Ann? -- J.H.E.

Dear J.H.E.: Hutchins was indeed brilliant, but TV has improved enormously since he made that statement. He would be astonished if he could see what splendid fare TV offers today, especially on public broadcasting.

To my dear daughter, Margo: Happy birthday. May they all be as joyous as this one.

Altering Recipes for Good Health

Small steps can make a big difference in many areas, including the path to making a diet healthier. Detecting different fats in food will help know where to start making changes. All fats and oils are high in calories, but you can make a healthier choice by selecting those with less saturated fat. Likewise, when you use lower fat milk products, you reduce fat, calories and cholesterol.

When baking cookies, can oil be substituted for margarine or shortening? All three ingredients are fats but that doesn't make them interchangeable, as the following examples show:

Example 1: Oil is 100 percent fat; margarine in an emulsion containing 80 percent fat and 20 percent water ("lite" margarine-type spreads contain a higher proportion of water). Substituting 1 cup of oil for 1 cup of margarine adds more fat than the recipe intended. Consequently, the cookies would feel and taste greasy.

Example 2: A well-textured cookie depends on thorough creaming of fat and sugar. Oil cannot be creamed so substituting it for a solid shortening is likely to change both the texture and the volume.

Can lite-type margarine spreads be substituted for solid shortening when baking? This is possible but it cannot be a direct substitution. Since lite or diet margarines have more water, the amount of liquid in the recipe also must be reduced. Rather than substituting reduced-fat margarines, try using less regular margarine. You won't have to alter the amount of liquid and you will save calories.

Comparing dairy products: Knowing fat, calorie and cholesterol statistics can make a big difference in your choice of dairy products. One cup of heavy, fluid whipping cream contains a whopping 832 calories, 90 grams of fat and 336 mg cholesterol. Whereas one cup of evaporated skim milk has only 200 calories, 1 gram fat, and 9 mg of cholesterol. Here are the values for more dairy goods (each 1 cup).

Medium cream with 25 percent fat, 590 calories, 61 grams of fat, 208 mg cholesterol; Light cream 470 calories, 46 grams fat, 159 mg cholesterol; half and half (half milk, half cream) 315 calories, 28 grams fat, 89 mg cholesterol; Whole milk, 150 calories, 8 grams fat, 33 mg cholesterol; 2 percent milk, 120 calories, 5 grams of fat, 18 mg cholesterol; 1 percent milk, 100 calories, 3 grams fat, 10 mg cholesterol; Skim milk, 85 calories, trace fat, 4 mg cholesterol; Evaporated whole milk, 340 calories, 19 grams fat, 74 mg cholesterol; Evaporated skim milk, 200 calories 1 gram fat, 9 mg cholesterol.

You can use reduced-fat sour cream, low-fat or non-fat yogurt or cottage cheese instead of regular sour cream in sauces and dips. Skim milk can be used instead of whole milk in most recipes. Evaporated milk can be substituted for whipping cream, and evaporated skim milk can be substituted for regular evaporated milk in some recipes.

Detect Fat

...and when you do, you'll know where to start making changes. All fats and oils are high in calories, but you can make a healthier choice by selecting those with less saturated fat. Likewise, when you use lower fat milk products, you reduce fat, calories and cholesterol.

—YOUR EYES—

Your Baby's Vision

Walk into the infant section of any toy store and you'll see plenty of black-and-white mobiles, cards, blocks, -- you name it. That's because black-and-white patterns are the most effective eye-catchers for infants. Young babies respond best to sharp contrasts and bold designs. While their eyes are maturing, these patterns can be important educational tools as well as wonderful pastimes.

You don't have to spend a lot of money purchasing black-and-white items, however. All you need is a stack of 5x7 cards and a thick black marker. On each card, draw a pattern -- a smiley face, a bulls-eye, a tic-tac-toe. When playing with your child, hold one at a time in front of her eyes, between 8-14 inches away.

Vision screening is normally part of your pediatric well-baby visits. But if you notice that your baby doesn't seem to be focusing on objects or faces, let your doctor know.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

There are only two kinds of people

There are two kinds of people on earth today. Just two kinds of people, that's all I say.

Not the good and the bad, for 'tis well understood. That the good are half bad, and the bad are half good.

Not the happy and sad, for the quickly flying years. Bring each one his laughter, and each one his tears.

Not the rich and the poor, for to know a man's wealth, you must first know the state of his conscience and health.

No -- the two kinds of people on earth I mean, are the people that lift, and the people that lean.

In which class are you? Are you easing the load, or overworked lifters who toil down the road?

Or are you a leaner who lets others bear, your portion of service and labor and care? -- Unknown

A colleague gave me this little poem, a few weeks ago. I felt the main thought was worth sharing and I think you'll agree there are differences between lifters and leaners.

The difference between

- Leaners wrestle a gorilla until they get tired. Lifters wrestle the gorilla until the gorilla gets tired.
- Leaners always have an excuse. "I would have done better, but ...," "I could have finished if ...," "I'd like to do more, but ..." My cousin says, "if if and but were candy and nuts, we'd all have a Merry Christmas." Lifters don't make excuses. They don't fix blame, they fix problems.

A Long Way Home: The Adventures of Yellow Dog is the Family Film for March. It is the story of a 14-year-old boy, Angus, and his recently adopted stray Golden Labrador. After their boat capsizes and they are washed ashore, the boy and Yellow struggle to survive in the rugged Canadian wilderness. The film is rated PG and runs for approximately 81 minutes.

Thursday night, March 19, is during spring break, so you won't have to hurry the kids home for a school-night bedtime. Bring the kids, the neighbors, Grandma, and whoever, and be here at 7 p.m. in the Heritage Room of the library. Admission is free and popcorn will be available for 25 cents.

"Sewing with Rebecca" continues Monday nights at 6 p.m. Bring any project you would like to have help with, no matter how simple or how complicated. The emphasis this month is on patterns -- how to select, alter, and place them. Also, it's a lot of fun!

At the risk of overkill, I have to tell you how terrific the talking books are to take on trips. Last weekend, as I drove to eastern Oklahoma, I listened to Plum Island by Nelson DeMille. "Cowboys", a restaurant just over the Oklahoma line near Erick, is a convenient and favorite place for us to stop for lunch. As I pulled into the parking lot, I "came to" and realized that I was no longer in Texas, but I had no memory at all of passing through Shamrock. The book was so engrossing, I was oblivious to the all-to-familiar scenery, and the time and the miles flew by.

We have been told that we have one of the best collections of talking books in the Panhandle, and we get new titles regularly. Come see our wide variety of titles and subjects. They check out for two weeks just like print books.

On the new fiction shelf, we have murder and death in the past, present and future. Sounds delightful, doesn't it?

In the past, we have Angel of Darkness by Caleb Carr. It is New York, 1897, as seen through the eyes of the former street urchin Stevie Taggart, whose rough life has given him wisdom beyond his years.

When the distraught wife of a Spanish diplomat begs for aid, a team of veteran crime investigators led by indomitable, gun-toting Sara Howard, finds a case loaded with danger, since Spain and the United States are on the verge of war. Their investigation leads them to a shocking suspect: a woman who appears to the world to be a heroic nurse and a loving mother, but who may in reality be a ruthless murderer of children.

Several books take place in the present. The Burglar Who Studied Spinoza by Lawrence Sanders is another in the Bernie Rhodenbarr Mysteries. When Bernie Rhodenbarr, gentleman, bookseller, and thief, and his dog grooming partner, Carolyn, break into the Colcannons' West Side brownstone, then find that they have been beaten to the punch. A third burglar has preceded them, and left only a few items of any value.

When one person is found dead in the Colcannon home the next morning, and another murder strikes uncomfortably close to home, Bernie begins to investigate. In the process he discovers that two is company, and three is definitely a crowd.

In Given the Crime by Margaret Barrett and Charles Dennis, Susan Given is a single mom and a by-the-book lawyer inside the New York D.A.'s office. She is also being fingered by the Mob, slam-dunked by a back-stabbing co-worker, and stalked by her estranged (and truly strange) husband. Oh, well, no one's life is perfect.

T. Jefferson Parker's Where Serpents Lie is about a criminal so heinous that he is called Horridus. He abducts children from their beds, dresses them like angels, and releases them the next day. The only clue he leaves is a piece of snakeskin tucked into the fold of their gowns. So far he hasn't physically harmed any of them.

Terry Houghton, head of Orange County's Crimes Against Youth unit, and champion of children, knows that it is only a matter of time until the crimes escalate. In the midst of the investigation, shocking (and seemingly irrefutable) accusations put his career on the line and he is forced to confront his own dark and violent past.

William Bernhardt has written a legal thriller, Extreme Justice, about Ben Kincaid, a disillusioned criminal attorney. Ben decides to abandon his law practice for a less stressful pastime: playing with a combo at Earl Bonner's

Uncle Earl's Jazz Emporium.

When the murder of "Cajun Lily" Campbell, Bonner's onetime girlfriend, forces him to re-enter the world of crime, he finds that he very well may be the next murder victim.

Circuit of Heaven by Dennis Danvers is a story of tomorrow. "The Bin" is a vast network of silicon crystals into which 12 billion people have uploaded their personalities to live in crime-free, disease-free, and deathless virtual societies. Outsiders may visit the Bin for a short time, but once they decide to stay, it's forever. Is this a technological heaven, purgatory, or hell?

In James Halperin's The First

Immortal, Benjamin Smith, accomplished physician and original thinker, refuses to totally succumb to the heart attack that tries to take his life in 1988. He does not believe in death, but is a pioneering advocate of cryonics. He has arranged to have his body frozen until the day when humanity will have the technology, knowledge, and courage to revive him.

When he resumes life after 83 frozen years, he not only meets his brilliant great-grandson, but is also reunited with his wife, mother, children and grandchildren. It is a complex reunion that reaches across and through generations and raises ethical and emotional dilemmas.

Today in History

Today is Sunday, March 15, the 74th day of 1998. There are 291 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On March 15, 44 B.C., Roman dictator Julius Caesar was assassinated by a group of nobles that included Brutus and Cassius.

On this date:
In 1919, the American Legion was founded, in Paris.

In 1956, the Lerner and Loewe musical "My Fair Lady" opened on Broadway.

In 1964, actress Elizabeth Taylor married actor Richard Burton in Montreal; it was her fifth marriage.

In 1965, addressing a joint session of Congress, President Johnson called for new legislation to guarantee every American's right to vote.

In 1975, Greek shipping magnate Aristotle Onassis died near Paris at age 69.

In 1977, the U.S. House of Representatives began a 90-day test to determine the feasibility of showing its sessions on television.

Ten years ago: Paul Simon defeated Jesse Jackson in the Illinois Democratic primary, while George Bush won a ringing victory over Bob Dole in the Republican contest.

Five years ago: Searchers found the body of the sixth and last missing victim of the World Trade Center bombing in New York. Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin met at the White House with President Clinton, after which Rabin offered to negotiate the return of part of the Golan Heights to Syria.

One year ago: President Clinton spent a second day at Bethesda Naval Medical Center, recuperating from surgery for a partially torn knee tendon. Greek frogmen and U.S. Marines evacuated hundreds of foreigners trapped in Albania after that country's descent into anarchy.

WASHINGTON (AP) - To avoid annual fights over crop insurance money, key members of Congress are searching for $200 million a year to provide permanent subsidies for agents who sell the policies to farmers.

Proponents of the idea say it's needed to keep a stable agriculture safety net, particularly since new farm laws make it highly unlikely Congress will approve future disaster payments.

"Everyone would like a long-term solution to this problem," said Sen. Dick Lugar, R-Ind., who chairs the Senate Agriculture Committee. "We should not have to legislate on crop insurance every year."

There are about 1.3 million crop insurance policies covering more than 181 million acres with total protection of $25.3 billion, according to the Agriculture Department. About 63 percent of eligible acres are covered.

At a committee hearing Tuesday, Lugar outlined proposals to come up with $200 million a year over five years to help pay agents' sales commissions for the 17 private companies that write crop insurance.

Among the proposals would be a reduction in the subsidy from 27 percent to 25 percent of the premium and an increase in the fees paid by farmers. In addition, companies would begin to pay premiums for the government's guarantee of their risk.

The Clinton administration has also proposed a permanent spending solution, but its plan would take some of the money from two export subsidy programs for grains and cotton while still reducing the agents' premiums to 25 percent.

Lawmakers from grain and cotton states say that won't happen.

"That's not a viable solution," said Sen. Pat Roberts, R-Kan. "These are nonstarters."

But Agriculture Department officials told senators they have no alternatives as yet. "Finding $200 million is not easy," said Ken Ackerman, who runs the agency's crop insurance programs.

The insurance industry also wants permanent spending for the agents' commissions, contending that without it there is less incentive to write policies for farmers and fewer companies interested in the business.

"The uncertainty has and will work to undermine the program," said Ernest Ross, chairman of the American Association of Crop Insurers, which has proposed its own plan.

Meanwhile, lawmakers from the Upper Midwest told the Agriculture Committee that a series of floods, crop diseases and other disasters could force hundreds of farmers out of business because they can't get adequate crop insurance.

The losses have severely cut crop yields for many farmers in North Dakota and Minnesota, which in turn lowers the base used to figure their crop insurance. That means they can't get policies worth enough to cover a good crop.

"It doesn't cover as much. This program is not working," said Sen. Kent Conrad, D-N.D.

Ackerman said the Agriculture Department is looking at ways of adjusting how coverage is figured to allow for repeated disasters so that farmers can increase coverage. Conrad said Congress should also consider increasing the total amount available for crop insurance.

TB threatens Michigan's certified beef and dairy herds

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) - Concerned about the spread of disease to cattle, two Michigan state commissions approved measures meant to eradicate an outbreak of bovine tuberculosis among whitetail deer in parts of the Lower Peninsula.

The state Agriculture Commission approved a ban Thursday on feeding deer in the area. The Natural Resources Commission prohibited baiting deer in the five affected counties and parts of six others.

Under the bait ban, hunters could use bait only from Sept. 1 until the last day of the open deer-hunting season in the affected area.

Farmers say the steps are needed - and might not be enough to stop the deer from spreading the disease to cattle. Some hunters consider the limits too severe.

"There's plenty of bitter medicine to go around," Bob Bender, the state's TB coordinator, told a joint meeting of the Natural Resources and Agriculture commissions Wednesday. "We're not going to solve this problem overnight."

Wildlife officials began testing deer for TB after one infected animal was found in northeastern Lower Michigan in 1994. Testing of deer killed by hunters in 1997 within a 600-square-mile area of Alpena, Montmorency, Alcona and Oscoda counties found 4.4 percent of the kill infected, up from 2.3 percent in 1996.

The infection threatens the state's cattle industry, which has been certified as tuberculosis-free. Preliminary tests show that four cattle herds in the area might have been infected. If those tests are confirmed, the whole state would lose its certification for at least five years, and all cattle shipped out of Michigan would have to be tested.

To stop the disease from spreading, and to thin the deer herd, the state Agriculture Department has proposed banning deer feeding stations on May 1 in all of five counties and parts of six others.

About 350 stations in the four counties and neighboring Presque Isle County now provide deer with some food.

"We feel the deer numbers are higher than what the habitat can support," said Elaine Carlson, a district officer of the Natural Resources Department.

The bait ban would come with some stiff penalties for violations, up to a felony charge carrying a $50,000 fine.

"A voluntary feeding ban would not work," Natural Resources Director K.L. Cool told commissioners. "In order to be successful, we're going to have to have a total ban."

Rebecca Humphries, who runs the Wildlife Division, said the department also is considering changes to the hunting season in the area, including an extra week for firearms in mid-October and unlimited permits for antlerless deer.

Some hunters argued against the bans, saying looser restrictions on feeding or voluntary efforts would do more good. But several spoke in support.

"We believe the deer population must be reduced, and the sooner we start, the easier it will be to deal with," said Ron Nelson, a spokesman for the Michigan Farm Bureau. "We need to start now."

Galen Schalk, a dairy farmer in Montmorency County, said the issue has left many farmers unsettled. Four

TB-infected deer have been found on or near his farm in Hillman.

"It is extremely hard to make short-term investment plans for my business," he said. "We've even considered doing business in another state."

Master Gardeners offer seasonal tips

Last week, Master Gardeners shared information about Deaf Smith county soil structure and ways to enhance it for a healthier garden.

This week the gardeners hope to offer timely hints for area gardening.

The recent snow has added valuable nitrogen and other nutrients to the soil. These late winter snows have been dubbed as "poor man's fertilizer."

For trees with a tendency to attract borers, such as fruit and ash, it is wise to treat the soil around the tree, as well as the trunk, with a borer chemical treatment, at this time. Borers move into the soil during winter and migrate back to the trees as the weather warms.

Now is also the time to spray dormant oil on trees such as oak, and shrubs, like euonymus, in order to control scale. Dormant oil sprayed now will suffocate the scale and keep eggs from hatching. Additional sprays may be needed later, but remember to read labels and apply all chemicals according to instructions.

Trees and shrubs need to be fertilized before the end of dormancy and prior to new growth. This is also the time to prune deciduous trees and shrubs, excluding spring-blooming shrubs, such as forsythia, lilac, spirea, and climbing roses, which all bloom on last year's growth.

Pre-emergents do an excellent job controlling some early germinating weeds, when applied at this time, to lawn and flowerbeds. Pre-emergents should not be used in areas where flower, vegetable, or grass seeding is planned.

For weeds and wild grasses that are already growing in the still-dormant Bermuda and Buffalo grass Roundup* may be applied when the temperature is between 40 and 80 degrees. Roundup will kill anything green, so caution must be used.

The intermittent warm spring days are a prime time for planting trees and shrubs. Planting in low temperatures allows the trees to develop feeder roots before hot weather sets in.

Dormant roses may also be planted as they become available.

Annual flower seeds such as alyssum, cornflower, poppy, and larkspur may be planted where they will be growing.

When soil temperature rises above 45 degrees, cool weather vegetables (lettuce, parsley, radishes, turnips, broccoli, cabbage, cauliflower, green peas, beets, brussel sprouts, and spinach) should be planted.

Pansies, stock, primrose and snapdragon may be planted as soon as available.

Hardy perennial, daisies, mums, salvia, and asters, may be dug and divided and replanted. Daylilies, oriental poppies and Clematis vine do well when planted early.

The jackman in very reliable and does well in the local alkaline soils and full sun, but the roots need to be cool. Placing a large rock or brick at the base of the plant is an easy way to accomplish this.

A list of plants which may be grown successfully is available at the county extension office. The master Gardeners have compiled this list, including planting times, division times, and care. This also includes information on soil preparation.

"The mention of trade names is not an endorsement of any product, but simply provided for educational purposes. Local nursery or chemical dealers can provide full details on chemical uses. For safety read and follow all instructions as labeled."

Matter of Fact

Rick Perry
 Texas Agriculture Commissioner

Back when I was a member of what was then called the "Future Farmers of America," we pretty much stuck to the basics of farming. But times - and our industry - have changed dramatically and so has what's now called simply FFA.

With about 60,000 members in Texas, the nearly one thousand chapters across our state now prepare young men and women for many diverse ag-based careers including agribusiness, marketing and environmental and resource management. But just as in my FFA days at Paint Creek High School, the basic lessons of leadership, responsibility and hard work remain an essential cornerstone to the lessons being shared.

While the organization is no longer officially known as Future Farmers of America, the group's roots are still planted in agriculture. It's estimated that almost 75 percent of our state's FFA members will end up pursuing careers in agriculture. That's close to 45,000 young people who are not only following in our footsteps, but also creating their own strides in our fast-paced industry.

Monsanto explains cotton seed problems

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) - Farmers on the Mississippi Delta were not to blame for last season's problems with genetically altered cotton, the producer of the seed says.

Officials with Monsanto Co. said farmers unknowingly applied too much of the herbicide Roundup during last spring's unusually cool, wet conditions. The application caused bolls to fall off the plant.

About 50 Delta farmers reported problems with Roundup Ready cotton last year. Some are still seeking compensation of up to nearly $500,000 each.

Richard Voth, marketing development manager for the St. Louis-based Monsanto, said the company plans to change instructions and recommendations for herbicide spraying of the cotton.

The cotton has been genetically altered in an effort to make weed and insect control cheaper by reducing costly and environmentally damaging pesticide applications.

Northwestern Mississippi farmers experienced the most serious problems last year, Voth said, but similar problems were seen in regions of Arkansas, Missouri and Tennessee. Problems at some farms remain unexplained.

Mississippi officials are deferring a plan to hold arbitration hearings on the cotton problems, saying they hope Monsanto and farmers can resolve the issue themselves.

Writing Want Ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.

For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:

--Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.

--Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.

--Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.

--Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

Stucco and Stone Make for Bold Look

SHUTTERS, pronounced keystones over the windows and door, and a combination of stucco and stone help make this one-story design an appealing place to call home.

By BRUCE A. NATHAN
AP Newsfeatures

Stone and stucco combine to create the bold facade of plan G-97, by HomeStyles Designers Network. Its well-defined floor plan provides 1,702 square feet of living space.

Many windows and high ceilings command attention and add a vertical dimension to the sprawling layout.

A 20-foot-6-inch vaulted ceiling crowns the foyer and the family room ahead. Nestled between two windows, the family room's handsome fireplace is a focal point. A French door provides access to the backyard.

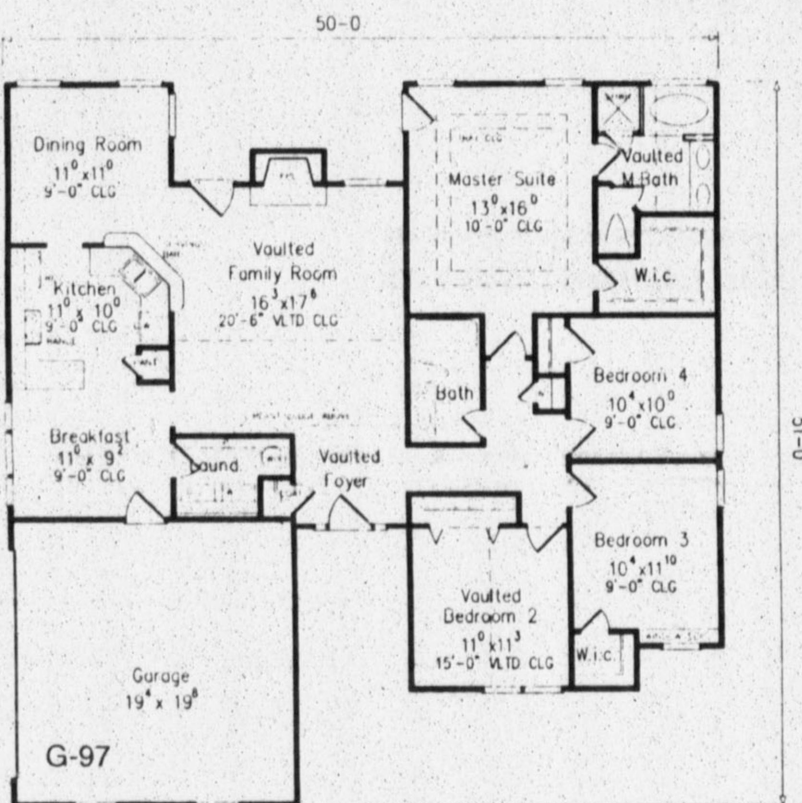

At the center of the living spaces, the kitchen features a stylish wraparound serving bar and a five-shelf pantry. Its location, between the formal dining room and the sunny breakfast room, allows for easy meal service. A laundry room is nearby.

Four bedrooms comprise the secluded sleeping wing. Three secondary bedrooms, one with a walk-in closet and a cozy window seat, share a full bath. The foremost bedroom is topped by a 15-foot vaulted ceiling.

The master suite is well-appointed for a home of this size. The sleeping chamber features a 10-foot tray ceiling, a spacious walk-in closet and access to the backyard. The master bath's 13-foot vaulted ceiling tops a garden tub, a dual-sink vanity and a dramatic arched window.

Unless otherwise mentioned, each room has a 9-foot ceiling.

BEYOND THE FOYER, the living areas open to one another. The family room provides access to both the dining room and the breakfast room. The kitchen is located between the two eating areas. The laundry room is just off the kitchen, and a nearby door allows access to the two-car garage. Across the home, a short hallway connects four bedrooms and a full bath.

G-97 STATISTICS

Design G-97 has a family room, dining room, breakfast room, kitchen, four bedrooms, two baths and a laundry room, totaling 1,702 square feet of living space. This plan includes a daylight basement or crawlspace foundation, and 2x4 exterior wall framing. The two-car garage adds 400 square feet to the plan.

(For a more detailed, scaled plan of this house, including guides to estimating costs and financing, send $5 to House of the Week, P.O. Box 1562, New York, N.Y. 10116-1562. Be sure to include the plan number).

McCarthy adopts role in A Father for Brittany

A widower (Andrew McCarthy) enlists legal and media support in his fight to keep his adoptive daughter (C. Lee, left) from being taken away in A Father for Brittany, premiering Sunday on CBS. Michael Learned also stars in the fact-based film.

©TVData Features Syndicate

Andrew McCarthy has had no trouble staying away from the slyly heroic and flashier roles in TV and movies.

Unlike some of his contemporaries who are setting their phasers to stun or running frantically around an ER, McCarthy has chosen to take a quieter path, as evidenced by his role in A Father for Brittany, which airs Sunday, March 15, on CBS.

"I liked that (my character) was kind of without any guile," McCarthy says. "He was just a guy, not jaded or cynical in any way. That's hard to (portray), I think, to be that uncluttered and remain interesting."

The TV movie, which co-stars Teri Polo, Michael Learned and Shirley Knight, dramatizes the true story of Kim and Keith Lussier, a Wisconsin couple who were in the process of adopting a Korean orphan when Kim was diagnosed with cancer. Though they had custody of the child, she was taken away after Kim's death on grounds that the agency did not permit single-parent adoptions. But because of Keith's promise to his wife, he took the agency to court to get back Brittany.

For McCarthy, it was a new opportunity to portray a real person who was still alive to criticize his performance.

"I've played some dead ones," he says, "but they don't know."

"Keith came (to the set) during filming. We talked a lot. It was kind of nerve-racking, actually, at first. He was standing there watching me be him. And he'd say, 'I wouldn't do that, Andrew.' His concerns were, like, 'I wouldn't wear pants that color.' And I'd say, 'You do now, Keith.'"

Since McCarthy knew little about the adoption process before he started work on the movie, he read as much as ed that one of Keith's real-life remarks be included in the film.

"At one point, a reporter asks, 'If you lose this case, will you appeal?' And he says, 'No, I won't, because that could go on for a year, and I don't think that would be a good thing for Brittany.'"

"It wasn't in the script; I read that in some of the interviews and literature I had about him. We put it in (the movie) because it was such a touching kind of thing, and it seemed to sum up who the guy was."

There are few surprises in the film, yet it is a compelling story made richer by a strong supporting cast.

Knight and Chuck Shamata are endearingly normal as Kim's parents, and Learned has strength to spare in the role of the adoption agency representative caught between the rule book and a loving parent.

"It was a big thrill for me to work with Michael, because I grew up on The Waltons," McCarthy says. "I told her that, and she said, 'Do you know how many times I've heard that?'"

Part of a generation of young actors once dubbed the Brat Pack, McCarthy has turned his back on St. Elmo's Fire and Weekend at Bernie's to make more subdued films, frequently about family life.

His recent work includes The Joy Luck Club and the TV movie The Christmas Tree, with Julie Harris.

"When I first started, things just sort of happened to me," McCarthy says. "I was very young, and I took what was in front of me. And that was good and bad."

"My relationship toward acting has changed as I've grown up a bit; what I like about it and what interests me has changed. I'm just kind of interested in working with good people."

HOROSCOPES

★ ★ March 15-21 ★ ★

ARIES - March 21/April 20

While you know it's not the best time, you say how you really feel at an important meeting. Even though it adds to the tension, those involved respect your opinion. An evening out with friends gets a little rowdy. Try to stay calm, and keep others under control. Virgo plays an important role.

TAURUS - April 21/May 21

You end up being the bully when it comes to a family problem early in the week. No one wants to listen to reason, so you just take control of the situation. While everyone will be mad at you for a while, they soon realize that you did the right thing. A close friend opens up to you. Be there for him or her.

GEMINI - May 22/June 21

You're going to have to think fast on your feet when a sure thing goes awry. Don't let the mishap throw you. Try to make a sound decision. The person you've been seeing wants to step up the relationship. Think about what you really want before you say yes. Libra plays a key role on Friday.

CANCER - June 22/July 22

Your sense of humor gets you through a tough week, Cancer. You have a lot going on at work and at home. Don't let things get to you; try to laugh them off. It's the only way to keep a good attitude. A close friend has a surprise for you. Show your appreciation — even though you don't really like it. It's the thought that counts.

LEO - July 23/August 23

You end up being the center of attention at a work function. While you enjoy it, remember that your superiors are watching you. Don't let things get out of hand. The person you've been seeing stops calling. Before you start blaming yourself, talk to him or her to find out why it's over. It will give you the closure that you need.

VIRGO - Aug 24/Sept 22

You're in the right place at the right time at the end of the week, Virgo. Your good nature impresses an influential person, who offers you a business proposition. Look into the facts before saying yes — but don't rule it out immediately. A loved one needs a shoulder to cry on. Show that you care.

LIBRA - Sept 23/Oct 23

While you hate to be rude to others, it's the only way you're going to get people to stop bothering you this week. You have a lot to do, and people are counting on you to get things done. You need to do what it takes to be productive. That special someone calls you unexpectedly. Don't be nervous; it's nothing serious. Leo plays a key role late in the week.

SCORPIO - Oct 24/Nov 22

While you normally don't wear your heart on your sleeve, you just can't help it this week, Scorpio. You meet an intriguing stranger with a captivating personality. Be yourself, and you're sure to win his or her heart. A friend needs your help. Even though it comes at a bad time, you have to be supportive. Your efforts will be appreciated.

SAGITTARIUS - Nov 23/Dec 21

Keep your mind on the task at hand early in the week. It's very important, so don't let your thoughts wander. Stay focused, because others are relying on you to get the job done. A family evening that has been planned for weeks doesn't work out. Don't get upset.

CAPRICORN - Dec 22/Jan 20

Don't be shy when meeting an interesting person late in the week, Capricorn. He or she can help you with a financial situation if you play your cards right. However, he or she has to get to know you first. A close friend needs you to be his or her date for a business dinner. Say yes; it's not going to be as bad as it seems.

AQUARIUS - Jan 21/Feb 18

Don't overanalyze an argument with a close friend. You two always have had your differences. Don't worry; your relationship is as strong as ever. That special someone invites you to dinner. Say yes — even though you have to rearrange your schedule for it. It means a lot to him or her.

PISCES - Feb 19/March 20

A co-worker needs your help. Don't shy away from him or her. It really is an important matter. Help him or her get what he or she rightfully deserves. Friends invite you out for a night on the town. Enjoy yourself!

TV PIPELINE

By Taylor Michaels
©TVData Features Syndicate

Q: While watching an early episode of Wings on USA Network, I noticed the show's producer was named Roz Doyle. This also happens to be the name of Peri Gilpin's character on Frasier. Since both shows were created by the makers of Cheers, I was wondering if there is a connection.

Also, what was the name of Curtis Armstrong's character on Moonlighting? —Steve Fazio, Tampa, Fla.

A: Yes, there is. Gilpin's Roz Doyle was affectionately named for the creative team's old friend and colleague, who had recently died of cancer.

Armstrong played Herbert Viola, the hapless clerk-turned-junior detective — and the unrequited love object of Alyce Beasley's Agnes Dipesto.

Q: Please tell me the name of the song heard at the end of the Hallmark Hall of Fame movie What the Deaf Man Heard. Is a recording available? —Martha Charbonneau, St. Albans, Vt.

A: That's "My Ship," a haunting ballad by Kurt Weill and Ira Gershwin from their Broadway musical Lady in the Dark. It's been recorded frequently over the years by artists such as Tony Bennett, Julie Andrews, Rosemary Clooney, Ella Fitzgerald and Lena Horne, among many others. You should be able to find a good version in any well-stocked music store, or visit the Music Boulevard Website.

Q: Is the actor who played James on James at 15 the same actor who plays Niles on Frasier? —Hanna Cruz, Phoenix, Ariz.

A: No. James was played by Lance Kerwin, and David Hyde Pierce plays Niles.

Q: I am a great fan of Kate Mulgrew on Star Trek: Voyager, but I would love to know more about the Columbo spinoff she did several years ago. Apparently that program will never be shown on TV again, will it? —Erik Ecker via e-mail.

A: The 1979 NBC series Mrs. Columbo, a.k.a. Kate Loves a Mystery, does occasionally show up in syndication here and there, but has relatively few episodes to market.

There's also the fact that the series never developed a stable identity: The show premiered with the Columbo tie-in and promptly bombed. When it returned after several months off the air, the Columbo angle had been dropped. Kate was now a single woman with the last name Callahan. None of this exactly helps the show's marketability.

Q: I've seen The Nanny the last few weeks. Is C.C. Babcock pregnant?
-R.D. Young via e-mail.

A: C.C. is not pregnant, but Lauren Lane, the actress who plays her, is, and the sitcom has been using Lane's condition to spoof how clumsily most TV shows try to "hide" actresses' pregnancies.

Gunfight at Comanche Creek ★★ (1963) Audie Murphy, Colleen Miller. A detective infiltrates a gang of outlaws for the purpose of exposing their notorious leader. 2:00, 25 March 17 1pm.

Gung Ho ★★★ (1943) Randolph Scott, Grace McDonald. A fictionalized account of the Marine unit that spearheaded the invasion of Japanese-held islands during World War II. 2:00. D
March 21 9pm.

H

Hammer ★★ (1972) Fred Williamson, Vernetta McGee.
A rugged dockworker-turned-boxer rebels against his mob connections when they order him to throw his next fight. 2:15. TV March 21 11:30pm.

The Happening ★★★ (1967) Anthony Quinn, Faye Dunaway. Four young people are taught the finer points of extortion after kidnapping a syndicate kingpin. 2:00. 20 March 15 3am.

Harvey ★★★½ (1950) James Stewart, Josephine Hull
A woman tries to have her tippling brother put away when his claims of a 6-foot invisible rabbit cause embarrassment. 1:55. March 19 9:35pm; 21 5:15pm.

Her Hidden Truth (1995) Kellie Martin, Antonio Sabato Jr. A young woman escapes from a juvenile detention center to prove her innocence in the arson deaths of her family. 2:00.
📺 March 20 1pm.

High Noon ★★★★★ (1952) Gary Cooper, Grace Kelly. Cooper won an Oscar for his portrayal of a lawman whose townspeople desert him when four vengeful gunslingers arrive. 2:00. March 21 7pm.

Monday, the dynamic leading star of such films as The Philadelphia Story is profiled in Cary Grant, an episode of A&E Network's Biography series.

SOAP WORLD

Two actresses better than one on AW

By Candace Havens
©TVData Features Syndicate

The roles of twins Vicky and Marley on Another World have always been played by the same actress, but that won't be the case much longer.

Ellen Wheeler, who originated the dual roles in 1984, is returning to play Marley, while Jensen Buchanan is set to continue on as Vicky.

"Having Marley back in Bay City full time will allow our writers to fully delve into the incredible rich history that Marley shares with her sister, Vicky; ex-husband, Jake; and her mother, Donna," says executive producer Charlotte Savitz. "We can hardly wait to see Jensen and Ellen sharing the screen."

Buchanan says it was too stressful playing the twins full time and opted to play only one of the characters.

Wheeler, who won an Emmy Award in 1995 for her portrayal of the twins, returns this spring.

In other news: One Life to Live has yet another new head writer. Pam Long has replaced the mother-and-son team of Claire and Matthew Labine.

"As we approach the show's 30th anniversary, Pam will take OLTL in the direction our audience has come to expect: one filled with romance, adventure and the core family drama that has been the hallmark for almost three decades," says ABC Daytime President Pat Fili-Krushel.

Long began her career in front of the camera on Texas. She went on to work as the head writer of Santa Barbara and Guiding Light. For the past few years, she has been working in prime time on shows such as Christy and Second Noah.

Dear Candace: I'm amazed that All My Children has written Gloria (Teresa Blake) off the show.

If the writers are unable to create a story line for an actress who is as beautiful and vivacious as Blake, then perhaps they should be the ones leaving the show. —E.M. Peterson, Pocatello, Idaho.

Dear Reader: AMC fans were outraged by the sudden firing of Blake. The actress says she was surprised but is looking forward to moving on.
