WEST TEXAS UTILITIES CO. GIVES US SERVICE

The West Texas Utilities Company's district line crew has this week completed a piece of work which will give this company's customers in Hedley even better service than they have enjoyed in the past. The lines leading from the sub station into town have been replaced with wire of larger size, which will carry the current more readily and more efficiently.
This will prove of benefit to the entire town by keeping all the lines more evenly supplied with electricity, thereby operating at the highest standard of efficiency.

In the business section of town still further improvements have been made. Here the lines which carry the "juice," in the strength at which it is delivered to the customers, have been replaced with wire of considerably larger size. The transformers serving these lines have also been replaced with others of greater capacity and of more efficient design. This was planned to render, and will result in, a more satisfactory service to this section where the demand is greatest.

This work was done in line with the Company's well established policy of anticipating, whenever possible, the growth and demands of the territory which it serves. Chas. M. Lowry, local manager for the company,
is authority for the statement that the local distribution system is now as up to date as that to be found anywhere, and is adequately equipped to take care of our normal growth for a number of years.

Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Butler, who have been conducting the Special Cafe here for some time, left the past week for Clarendon. Geo.
M. Reed, the owner, is now in charge. Mr. and Mrs. Butler made lots of good friends in Hedley who hope they will return to our town.

Several Clarendon citizens had business in Hedley Tuesday—
among them J. H. Rutherford, A.
N. Wood, County Attorney King, and Deputy Sheriff Peabody.

CLARENDON C. OF C. BANQUET EXCELLENT

The Clarendon Chamber of Commerce put on their Annual Banquet Tuesday night of this week, and it was a truly great affair according to J. A. Pirtle, C.
L. Kinsey, C. L. Johnson, J. W.
Noel, Chas. M. Lowry, Hebert
Moffitt, Frank Kendall and R. E.
Mann, who attended from Hedley.
Bob Mann, asked for a statement replied:

"It was one of the nicest feeds ever put over. Toastmaster Aus-ley, red headed and full of pep, was the life of the party. Mr.
Leopold, from the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, made one of the striking speeches of the hour.
He touched on things that have never been in print—and never will be—in regard to market conditions. He made plain to the audience why the country stayed together through the crises.

"Clarendon should be complimented for bringing such a man to our county."

HOME ECONOMICS GIRLS WILL PRESENT COMEDY

The Home Economics Class of Hedley High School will present "Kicked Out of College" in the school auditorium Friday night, January 31st.

This is a howling comedy, in three acts, with a specially selected cast. It will be an event of more than usual enjoyment, and you can't afford to miss it.

The admission charge will be 15 and 25 cents, the proceeds to be used for the benefit of our school.

Don't fail to come!

Rev. Y. F. Walker of Lockney,

Ten Cent Cotton and Thirty Dollar Feed

FOR THE PAST SEVERAL YEARS
there has been a tendency to produce less feed each year, and now we are faced with the hard proposition of paying out cold hard dollars this year for feed to raise cheap cotton.

Ten Million bales of cotton in 1923 brought $1,600,000,000. Eighteen Million bales in 1926 brought $1,000,000,000.

That means the farmers picked and ginned Eight Million bales of cotton in 1926 for NOTHING and paid $600,000,000 for the privilege.

The Federal Farm Board has already issued a warning to cut the acreage in 1930.
Are we going to heed this warning?

This Bank is trying to help the farmer who is trying to help himself.

Leroy Young, 1118 Georgia St., Los Angeles, is a "regular fellow," active in sports, and at the top in his classes at school. To look at him now, you'd think he never had a day's sickness but his mother says: "When Leroy was just a little fellow, we found his stomach and bowels were weak. He kept suffering from constipation. Nothing he ate agreed with him. He was fretful, feverish and puny."

"When we started giving him California Fig Syrup his condition improved quickly. His constipation and biliousness stopped and he has had no more trouble of that kind. I have since used California Fig Syrup with him for colds and upset spells. He likes it because it tastes so good and I like it because it helps him so wonderfully!"

California Fig Syrup has been the trusted standby of mothers for over 50 years. Leading physicians recommend it. It is purely vegetable and works with Nature to regulate, tone and strengthen the stomach and bowels of children so they get full nourishment from their food and waste is eliminated in a normal way.

Four million bottles used a year shows how mothers depend on it. Always look for the word "California" on the carton to be sure of getting the genuine.

Curious Stone Formed by Discharge of Lava

Reports from Armenia tell of the discovery of a strange stone which, it is said, can be nailed like a piece of board, sawed with an ordinary saw and painted any color. This curious stone, which it is hoped will insure the economic independence of Armenia, has been found in great quantities in the vicinity of the little town of Artig and has in consequence come to be called in Armenia artig dufa.

The dufa is a light building material, but it is reported to be tough and able to withstand great strains. Heat and sound penetrate it very little, and the material is being made to serve equally well as the walls of a building or as the furniture inside it.

Discharges of lava from Mount Ararat originated the deposits of dufa, which are estimated to amount to some 60,000,000 cubic meters. The discovery has aroused great interest in European scientific circles. The Armenian government, as a member of the Soviet union, has sought the opinion of Moscow mineralogists as to the uses of the dufa.

According to plans announced, the Soviet governments will erect buildings constructed of dufa in many of the principal cities of the union to advertise the stone.

Needless Pain!

Nowadays, people take Bayer Aspirin for many little aches and pains, and as often as they encounter any pain.

Why not? It is a proven antidote for pain. It works!

And Bayer Aspirin tablets are utterly harmless. You have the medical profession's word for that; they do not depress the heart.

So, don't let a cold "run its course." Don't wait for a headache to "wear off." Or regard neuralgia, neuritis, or even rheumatism as something you must endure. Only a physician can cope with the cause of such pain, but you can always turn to Bayer Aspirin for relief.

Bayer Aspirin is always available, and it always helps. Familiarize yourself with its many uses, and avoid a lot of needless suffering.

Home Has More Danger Than Savages of Brazil

JOHN J. WHITEHEAD, explorer and lecturer, has just returned from eight months in the jungles of South America, where he was searching for traces of the lost Colonel Fawcett and his son.

Dangerous as he found the jungle, he encountered a worse danger at home. But let him tell it.

"One of the great problems of a trip of this kind is keeping in healthy condition. When we started, some of the members of the party had laxatives with them, but made wise by experience I carried Nujol. All too quickly my stock ran out. Soon I was in bad shape—what with a diet of rice and beans, lacking vitamins and green vegetables.

"When we finally got back to civilization, entertained first in Brazil and later in the United States, I became positively ill. Severe stomach pains and poor elimination made me realize that Nujol would again prove the reliable, trustworthy keeper of health. Sure enough, with the first bottle the trouble disappeared.

Don't think Nujol is a medicine. It is as tasteless and colorless as clear water. It brings you, however, what your body needs like any other machine—lubrication. Just as a good bath washes our bodies clean, Nujol sweeps away, easily and normally, those internal bodily poisons (we all have them) that make us feel dull and headachy and sick. Nujol cannot hurt even a little baby; it forms no habit; it contains not one single drug. Doctors and nurses use it themselves and tell you to use it, if you want to be well.

Take Nujol every night for two weeks and prove to yourself how happy and bright and full of pep you can be, if your body is internally clean. Get a bottle today at any drug store. It costs but a few cents, and makes you feel like a million dollars. Start traveling the health-road to success and happiness—this very day!

When Babies FRET

There are times when a baby is so fretful or feverish to be sung to sleep. There are some pains a mother cannot pat away. But there's no time when any baby can't have the quick comfort of Castoria! A few drops, and your little one is soon at ease—back to sleep almost before you can slip away.

Remember this harmless, pure vegetable preparation when children are ailing. Don't stop its use when Baby has been brought safely through the age of colic, diarrhea, and other infantile ills. Give good old Castoria until your children are in their teens! Whenever coated tongues tell of constipation; whenever there's any sign of sluggishness that needs no stronger medicines to relieve. Castoria is pleasant-tasting; children love to take it. HEDLEY RURAL DEM. CLUB

The Hedley Rural Demonstration Club met the first meeting of the new year January 14 with Mrs. Roy Blanks. Owing to bad weather only half of the members were present. Miss Harvey Thompson, Home Demonstration Agent, gave the club an interesting talk on interior decoration, such as placing of furniture and hanging of pictures. Each member interested asked lots of questions, which Miss Thompson readily answered. She then gave formulas for egg laying mash and baby chick feed which can be mixed at home. She also gave leaflets on gardens, flowers and poultry, and some good recipes. Delicious refreshments were served. The meeting adjourned to meet with Mrs. W. C. Bridges Jan. 28th.

The Hedley Rural Demonstration Club met Tuesday, 28th, with Mrs. W. C. Bridges, with fourteen members present. After business an interesting program was rendered. Then followed the social hour, with a two course refreshment. The Club adjourned to meet with Mrs. Covey, on Tuesday, Feb. 11, at 2:30 p. m. Press Reporter.

rk in connection with the development of tanks, armored cars and other apparatus and equipment for use with mechanized force. This had been largely omitted from the budget as submitted by the President. So change in the size of the army contemplated in the new bill. As present, army enlisted strength will gain at 118,750. Officer strength will be 12,000. The National Guard will be given an increase, raising the strength to 190,000. Funds for training camps are slightly reduced. The air corps appropriation approved by the house committee amounts to $35,823,473, a million dollars increase over the present year. Its sum will not bring the five year expansion program up to date.

DEVELOPMENTS of the week in the German reparations conference at The Hague indicated that a settlement of all disputes would soon be reached. The major question was to a guaranty for France in case the German government should willfully default in execution or should nounce the Young plan. The French legates submitted a draft of a document covering this point which it was expected the Germans would accept. Vladimir Moloff, Bulgarian minister of finance, pleaded for a reduction in the Bulgarian indemnity. "We are not seeking to haggle or bargain," he said, "but a spirit of loyalty to you necessitates stating that Bulgaria is incapable of paying annuities as high as $2,000,000 over a period of 36 years. We are anxious to discharge the debt honorably, but we simply cannot pay that much."

When asked to name a figure M. Moloff suggested $2,000,000 per annum.

HUMBERT, prince of Piedmont and heir apparent to the throne of Italy, and Marie Jose, the "snow princess" of Belgium, were made man and wife Wednesday in the Pauline chapel of the Quirinal palace at Rome after three days of elaborate fetes and entertainments. The ceremony was performed by Cardinal Maffi, archbishop of Pisa, and was witnessed by a brilliant assemblage numbering 1,500. The princess, who entered the chapel in the arm of her father, King Albert, wore on her head a high filigree crown in the form of orange blossoms, bordered with diamonds and pearls. Her wedding gown was of white satin, and over it was a mantle of white velvet made especially in the Omo district, with a train seven yards long lined with white ermine and held by four male attendants dressed in black, gold braided uniforms. King Victor Emmanuel escorted Queen Elizabeth of Belgium, and Prince Humbert accompanied his mother, Queen Elena. Many other royal and noble personages were there, including King Boris of Bulgaria in a gorgeous Hussar uniform; the duke of York in admiral's dress uniform; Prince Leopold of Belgium; former King Manuel of Portugal; former King Amanullah of

Industry Stimulator

Lord Churston, British financier, on his recent trip to West Texas said:

"There's no chance of comparing America and England. You have the cheapest power possible. Everybody can use it, whereas in England it can't be done. I pay 25 cents a kilowatt hour for electric service. It is impossible for all classes to have this convenience. For instance in the agricultural areas, where laborers are paid 31 shillings a week, they could not afford to buy electric service.

"West Texas should be very thankful for cheap power and for its availability to all. Big power companies certainly are of great stimulation to Texas Industry."

Preserving Your Fame in Imperishable Bronze

THE HOOVER PRESIDENTIAL MEDAL

GOLD MEDAL AWARDED TO GENERAL CROGHAN

FOLLOWING an established custom, the United States mint recently issued the thirtieth in the series of Presidential medals this one commemorating the inauguration of Herbert Hoover as President of the United States. The medal is made of bronze and will be sold to the public for $1.00, which is its value in United States currency. Any one in this series is available to the public at the same cost.

The first of these medals to be struck is that undraped bust of Washington facing the right, with the inscription, "George Washington, President of the United States," and the date, 1789. The artist who designed this medal was Pierre Simon du Vivier, grandson of Jean du Vivier, known as Du Vivier "le pere," the first of a distinguished family of medal engravers who, at the beginning of the Seventeenth century, lived in Lige.

The reverse of the medal has the legend "Peace and Friendship," and two hands clasped in token of amity. On the cuff of the left wrist there are three stripes and buttons with the American eagle; the other wrist is bare; above, the pipe of peace and tomahawk are crossed, Indian emblems of peace and war.

The reverse of this medal is repeated on the medals of the Presidents from Washington to William Henry Harrison, who died after one month in office. The reverse of the Harrison medal bears this inscription, with a laurel wreath: "Inaugurated President of the United States March 4, 1841. Died April 4, 1841."

The medals of John Tyler, 1841, James K. Polk, 1845, and Zachary Taylor, 1849, have the same reverse as the Washington medal—clasped hands with the calumet and tomahawk.

The artist who designed the medal for Millard Fillmore, 1850, placed on the reverse a different design, but still typifying the friendship between the United States and the Indians—a white man and an Indian stand before a flag in an agricultural scene; above, "Labor, Virtue, Honor." This design is repeated on the reverse of the Pierce and Buchanan medals.

The medal struck for Abraham Lincoln carries on the obverse his head, bearded, facing the right with the simple lettering, "Abraham Lincoln." On the reverse, "Inaugurated President of the United States, March 4, 1861. Second term, March 4, 1865. Assassinated April 14, 1865," surrounded by an oak wreath. The simplicity of this medal and the fine balance of lettering make it one of the most artistic of the series.

The next medal, the Andrew Johnson, is the last to bear a representation of the peace between the United States and the Indians. On the reverse is the figure of Columbia, in a flowing robe, grasping the hand of an Indian chief before a tomb surmounted by the bust of Washington.

Except for the portraits there are but slight differences in the later medals, most of which bear on the reverse the simple lettering stating the dates of inauguration. For William McKinley two medals were struck, the second commemorating his assassination on September 6, 1901. The reverse of this represents the mourning figure of Columbia, designed by Mr. Morgan, the artist who later engraved the Harding medal.

The Presidential medals, however, are only a small part of those authorized by congress and struck by the mint in order to perpetuate the fame of Americans of outstanding achievement. Among the most interesting of the others are the medals given officers of the army and navy as a part of their reward for distinguished services. This custom began during the Revolution, the first one being a medal in commemoration of the retaking of Boston in 1776. The medal bears the bust of Washington with the inscription, "George Washington Supreme duce exercituum adsertori libertatis." (The American Congress to George Washington, Commander-in-Chief of the armies, asserter of liberty.) On the reverse, "Hostibus primo fugatis." (The enemy put to flight for the first time.) Washington on his horse, surrounded by his staff, points to the British fleet which is leaving Boston. The American army in battle array makes ready to occupy the city. This fine medal was designed by Du Vivier, who also designed the Presidential medal of Washington.

Thereafter the Continental congress voted such an award to nearly every general who won a battle, as for example the gold medal given to Gen. Daniel Morgan and the silver medals to his subordinates for their victory at Cowpens, or who won a campaign, such as Gen. Nathaniel Greene, for his brilliant maneuvers in the South which wore out his opponent, Lord Cornwallis, and led finally to Yorktown and the British surrender.

The small Washington medal (shown above) is typical of the many which were struck after the death of the first President. This one, which was made of silver and is described as "a little larger and thicker than the Spanish quarter of a dollar," was designed by Dudley A. Tyng, collector of customs at Newburyport, Mass., at that time and was made by Jacob Perkins, a well-known engraver and die-cutter. This is only one of the many bearing the head of Washington; there being about fifty others, not to mention an even greater number in which his features appear in some combination.

After John Paul Jones in the Bon Homme Richard won his great naval victory over the Serapis during the Revolution, congress passed resolutions in his honor three times and also presented him with a gold medal. And that started a veritable flood of medals for our naval heroes which reached its high tide during the War of 1812. One was struck in 1800 in honor of Thomas Truston's victory over a French ship and another in 1804 in honor of Commodore Preble's services in subduing the Barbary pirates. Then came the second war with England with its series of American victories on the sea to dispel some of the gloom caused by the repeated defeats on the land. It brought medals to Capt. Isaac Hull, Commander Jacob Jones, Capt. Stephen Decatur, Capt. William Bainbridge, Capt. Oliver Hazard Perry, Capt. Jesse D. Elliott, Capt. James Lawrence, Lieut. William Burrows, Lieut. Edward MacCall, Capt. Robert Henley, Lieut. Stephen Cassin, Commodore Thomas MacDonough, Capt. Johnston Blakely, Capt. Lewis Warrington, Capt. Charles Stewart and Capt. James Biddle.

But that the war on land was not all defeats is shown by the fact that valorous military services won medals for the following: Gen. William Henry Harrison and Gov. Isaac Shelby of Kentucky at the Battle of the Thames; Gen. James Miller, Gen. Winfield Scott, Gen. Edmund Gaines, Gen. Jacob Brown, Gen. Peter Porter and Gen. Eleazer Ripley at the Battles of Chippewa, Niagara and Erie; Gen. Alexander Macomb at the Battle of Plattsburgh; Gen. Andrew Jackson at the Battle of New Orleans, and Gen. George Croghan at the defense of Fort Stephenson, Sandusky.

The latter was one of the most brilliant feats in all American history. Croghan, a nephew of George Rogers Clark and a youngster of twenty-four, who had already won the rank of major, was placed in command of Fort Stephenson, a ramshackle old stockade which was the outpost protecting the supplies and munitions of all the American armies in the Northwest. His garrison consisted of 100 officers and men, but this tiny force successfully withstood the assaults of 3,000 Indians under Tecumseh and 600 British regulars

Large numbers of medals similar to this one were presented to the chiefs who signed the Treaty of Greenville in 1795 and came to be regarded as insignia of leadership, being handed down from one generation to another in tribes where the chieftainship was hereditary. About the time of the administration of Jefferson the regular Presidential medal was used for presentation to the Indians and one of these which had an especially interesting history is the Black Partridge medal (shown above), once the property of the famous Pottawatomie chief, who played such a noble role at the Fort Dearborn massacre in 1812.

When Black Partridge learned that Captain Head, commander at Fort Dearborn, had been ordered to evacuate that post he went to him and said: "Father, I come to deliver to you the medal I wear. It was given me by the Americans, and I have long worn it in token of our mutual friendship. But our young men are resolved to imbrue their hands in the blood of the white people. I cannot restrain them, and I will not wear a token of peace while I am compelled to act as an enemy." How true was his warning was shown by the scenes of horror which followed when the little garrison scurried out of the fort and started on its march to Fort Wayne. In the midst of the slaughter it was Black Partridge who saved Mrs. Helm, the wife of one of the officers, from the attack of an infuriated young brave, a deed which is commemorated in the Fort Dearborn massacre monument which stands at the foot of Eighteenth street in Chicago today.

FELT HATS WITH "PINKED" EDG NEW SILHOUETTE IN PRINT SILK

NOW comes the midseason time of the year when most women feel the urge for a new hat just to "bridge over" until the arrival of the first obol of spring. What's new? A question to which the group of perforated and eyelet-embroidered felts in the picture should prove a most convincing answer.

In some instances the cutout design that elaborate, Paris designers refer

It is really not to be thought of, wearing a last season's dress and expecting to "get by with it." Not but what it has been possible in preceding years, for there were seasons and seasons when the silhouette varied but slightly. But this season! Well, there is no doubt about it we are due for a decided change. The new silhouette seems to have won the battle that has been raging ever since "lines" which the decorative openwork bands and sets as "felt lace." The model photographed in the oval is one of the simpler types. This petite coque has been slashed across the crown in a fern-leaf design, the openings revealing a lining of faulle silk in contrasting color.

Sometimes the fanciful cutouts are worked directly in the hat itself as shown in the pen-and-ink sketch at the top to the right in this group. Then again motifs of the openwork felt are set as shown in the hat sketched at below.

While the simple cutout work which decorates the felt designfully is more generally adopted, in some instances are different were thrust upon us by the regime which controls the destinies of fashion.

So here we are contemplating, for one thing, print silk frocks like the one pictured below which is new, decidedly new, in the patterning of the silk of which it is made, in the length of the hemline, and in its silhouette in general. It carries out effectively the idea of combining silk which prints dark on a light background with silk in twin patterning which prints light on dark. Its princess cut and the draped neckline are two outstanding style features.

Ever so many of the new silks have dark backgrounds, black, navy, brown, eyelet embroidery takes its place. The embroidery is done exactly as one works on linen or any other material, with a view to achieving a lacy openwork appearance. The third sketch below to the right is eyelet embroidered.

In the lower left corner is a sketch of a very interesting hat, in that the brim is "pinked" around the edge—regular old-fashioned pinking, such as flourished in our ancestors' day. The "pinking" makes a charming finish in connection with the new cutout work.

It adds greatly to these openwork designs when they are lined with a contrasting color. A black "felt lace" lined with white is effective. Sometimes the satin or faille lining, in fact very often, is the exact shade of the felt. The contrast occurs in the dull surface of the felt versus the luster of the silk.

For immediate wear, felts in a wide range of pastel colorings, are the new note. This play on color satisfies the desire for a touch of spring, yet being felt and conservative types these simple little hats are timely and in excellent taste deep reds and greens. Tiny motifs in vivid color contrast are spaced very regularly, whether the weave be crepe de chine, taffeta or foulard.

Leaf and small fruit motifs are numerous such as cherries and leaves or strawberries with tiny blossoms on dark backgrounds. A crepe printed with groups of leaves in green and white over a darker green background bespeaks a spirit of newness. Pastel designs on dark grounds are featured among advance silks such as Vionnet pink and sky blue on black.

An interesting variation in prints is that of flat flowers, that is the little blossoms are not sharply defined with an outline, color making the distinction.

As to printed chiffons, some of them accent an intensified coloring, achieving a vivid beauty. Some of the print chiffons adopt a technique which simulates handpainting. Large tulips on a light background carried out with brush-and-paint effect, achieve brilliant splashes of color most effectively. Huge floral designs are a characteristic trend of many of the imported chiffons.

Fashions at the winter resorts always foretell coming summer modes. Already southern palms are making a fitting setting for picturesque chiffon frocks gaily flowered. Naturally these gowns call for hats with large brims—all of which is the story in advance for summer.

The cunningest silk prints ever, have been devised for children, certain types of which show quaint little figures frolicking in flower gardens or other scenes equally as typical of childhood.

FAMILY DOCTOR LEARNED THIS ABOUT CONSTIPATION

Dr. Caldwell loved people. His years of practice convinced him many were ruining their health by careless selection of laxatives. He determined to write a harmless prescription which would get at the cause of constipation, and correct it.

Today, the prescription he wrote in 1895 is the world's most popular laxative! He prescribed a mixture of herbs and other pure ingredients now known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, in thousands of cases where bad breath, coated tongue, gas, headaches, biliousness and lack of appetite or energy showed the bowels of men, women and children were sluggish. It proved successful in even the most obstinate cases; old folks liked it for it never gripes; children liked its pleasant taste. All drugstores today have Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in bottles.

Taking It Merrily

Manville McC. Rossiter, the New England mill magnate, said on his return from England: "English business is in a bad way, and it keeps getting worse instead of better; but the English business man is full of grit. He takes his hard luck philosophically. He can even take it merrily. An English manufacturer the other day got a wire from a customer: 'Cancel our order at once.' 'The manufacturer wired back: 'Your order can't be canceled at once. You must take your turn.'"

Texas Mother Has Healthiest Child

Mrs. Lena Rolling is perhaps the happiest mother in Houston, and it is all because her little son Royce Lee finally got over a spell of sickness which pulled him down terribly.

"His blood must have gotten very thin because he broke out so badly all over his little legs," said Mrs. Rolling in her home at 3011 Harrisburg Blvd. "From the time I started giving him Nature's Remedy Juniors it so thoroughly cleaned out his system that all the broken out places healed and others did not come back as they did before. Now he is in so much better health that I wish every mother could see him and see what those little chocolate-candy NR Jrs can do for ailing children." All drug stores which sell Nature's Remedy, the safe dependable laxative and corrective, also have NR Jrs. They are just 25c.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

American Delegates to the Naval Parley Prepared for Big Reductions.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

ONE hundred American delegates, experts and advisers sailed Thursday for the naval limitation conference in London without any definite instructions from President Hoover, but with the assurance that he will support any agreement at which they may arrive with the representatives of the other four naval powers. The Chief Executive, told them he considers they have become naval technologists through their study of the questions involved and therefore are now better prepared on the naval problem than he is.

While no figures have been made public, it is understood in Washington that the American delegation is ready to cut about 200,000 tons from the American navy, to eliminate two of the proposed 10,000 ton cruisers and to agree to a further battleship building holiday, postponing replacements that would begin in 1931 under the Washington treaty. This program would include reducing our submarine strength by 20,000 to 30,000 tons and our destroyer strength by 100,000 to 150,000 tons; provided the other powers made proportionate reductions.

In a statement to the press President Hoover said that to complete the conference in three or four months would be in itself a great accomplishment, and added:

"It is the most important of international conferences of a great many years and probably the most important for many years to come. The progress of peace for the world rests in a great measure upon the shoulders of the five delegations. There is good will toward the conference on the part of every nation. The importance and the gravity of the occasion have been recognized in the dispatch to London of the leading men of every country. They have the will to succeed."

FROM Europe the word was that Premier Tardieu of France expects the conference to end successfully in three or four weeks and that France will play a dominant role in the proceedings. The French delegates, it was said, would propose a scheme covering six years, to 1936, creating a naval construction holiday for that period. While France still insists on retaining submarines, it is willing to restrict their size, gun power and cruising radius to a degree that would make them strictly defensive.

France intends to renounce its rights to construct capital ships up to 17,000 tons, as allocated to it at Washington, and concentrate its sea power in the auxiliary classes—cruisers, destroyers, and submarines. The French plan will seek to overcome the existing deadlock between the United States and Great Britain over 10,000 ton cruisers carrying eight-inch guns, by allocating the global tonnage of the various powers with categories merely indicated approximately, permitting each power to allot whatever amount of the total it decides necessary for self-defense to that class.

As was stated several weeks ago, however, the French persist in their demand that whatever agreement is reached in London shall be transmitted to the League of Nations' preparatory disarmament commission so that it can be made a part of the league's general plan for the reduction of both land and sea armaments. The French believe that within six years the league's disarmament conference will be held and that all nations will accept its findings.

WHILE on the subject of armaments it may be noted that the house appropriations committee is beginning to realize that the American army needs better fighting machines and more up to date motorized equipment. It reported to the house the War department supply bill carrying appropriations of $455,000,000, and called attention to the fact that it had provided $239,855 for experimental work in connection with the development of tanks, armored cars and other weapons and equipment for use with a mechanized force. This had been entirely omitted from the budget as submitted by the President.

No change in the size of the army is contemplated in the new bill. As at present, army enlisted strength will remain at 118,750. Officer strength will be 12,000. The National Guard will be given an increase, raising the strength to 190,000. Funds for training citizens at the citizens' military training camps are slightly reduced.

The air corps appropriation approved by the house committee amounts to $35,523,473, a million dollars increase over the present year. This sum will not bring the five year air expansion program up to date.

DEVELOPMENTS of the week in the German reparations conference at The Hague indicated that a settlement of all disputes would soon be reached. The major question was as to a guaranty for France in case the German government should willfully default in execution or should denounce the Young plan. The French delegates submitted a draft of a document covering this point which it was hoped the Germans would accept.

Vladimir Moloff, Bulgarian minister of finance, pleaded for a reduction in the Bulgarian indemnity. "We are not seeking to haggle or bargain," he said, "but a spirit of loyalty to you necessitates stating that Bulgaria is incapable of paying annuities as high as $3,000,000 over a period of 36 years. We are anxious to discharge the debt honorably, but we simply cannot pay that much."

When asked to name a figure M. Moloff suggested $2,000,000 per annum.

HUMBERT, prince of Piedmont and heir apparent to the throne of Italy, and Marie Jose, the "snow princess" of Belgium, were made man and wife Wednesday in the Pauline chapel of the Quirinal palace at Rome after three days of elaborate fetes and entertainments. The ceremony was performed by Cardinal Maffei, archbishop of Pisa, and was witnessed by a brilliant assemblage numbering 1,500. The princess, who entered the chapel on the arm of her father, King Albert, wore on her head a high filigree crown in the form of orange blossoms, adorned with diamonds and pearls. Her wedding gown was of white satin, and over it was a mantle of white velvet made especially in the Orme district, with a train seven yards long trimmed with white ermine and held by four male attendants dressed in black, gold braided uniforms. King Victor Emmanuel escorted Queen Elizabeth of Belgium, and Prince Humbert accompanied his mother, Queen Elena.

Many other royal and noble personages were there, including King Boris of Bulgaria in a gorgeous Hussar uniform; the duke of York in admiral's dress uniform; Prince Leopold of Belgium; former King Amanullah of Afghanistan, who now lives in Italy; the prince of Monaco; the grand duchess of Luxembourg; Prince Daniel of Montenegro; Prince Paul and Princess Olga of Yugoslavia; Don Fernando of Bavaria, and former princes, princesses, kings and queens from all over Europe. Premier Mussolini of course was a conspicuous figure.

The royal couple, after appearing on a balcony of the palace to receive the plaudits of the vast throngs gathered there, were accorded a private audience by the pope, who blessed them and gave them a special piece of Arras tapestry. For two more days there were public festivals and celebrations in Rome, and then Humbert and Marie went to Turin, where another week of the same sort of thing had been prepared.

MUCH talk and little action characterized the action in congress over prohibition enforcement. The one concrete thing was the request of President Hoover that congress appropriate immediately $302,000 for 30 new speed boats for the coast guard to use in combating rum-running on the Great Lakes. This request was in a supplementary budget report which pointed out the necessity of getting the boats into action within three months, before the navigation season opens. Each of the boats desired would be 34 to 36 feet in length, would carry a crew of four and presumably would be armed with machine guns.

Senator Wainwright of Massachusetts was the first to bring up the prohibition matter in the upper house when sessions were resumed after the holidays. He submitted resolutions of a Boston mass meeting protesting against the "wanton and reckless killing of citizens of Massachusetts by the coast guard." Next day orators, both wet and dry, exploded in both senate and house and the recriminations and retorts were loud and bitter. On Wednesday Representative Black of New York, a wet, told the house that he had heard there was dissension in the President's crime commission, Judge W. S. Kenyon and Roscoe Pound being dissatisfied with that body's procedure concerning prohibition.

PROHIBITION caused what may prove to be the first serious rift between the house of representatives and the White House. Administration leaders in the house sent word to President Hoover that the resolution proposing a joint congressional prohibition committee is not likely to pass. It was passed by the senate three weeks ago and sent to the house rules committee, from which it has never emerged.

Speaker Nicholas Longworth admitted that "the leaders of the house" do not believe such a joint committee should be allowed to usurp the functions of the independent house committee already constituted.

Fifty wet members of the house of both political parties pledged themselves at a caucus to battle to a finish against the forthcoming program of the dries to put bigger and sharper teeth in the prohibition laws.

THOSE radical senators who call themselves Republicans won a decided victory by forcing the appointment of Senator Robert M. La Follette of Wisconsin as a member of the powerful finance committee. Senator Thomas of Idaho, generally "regular," also was named a member, the vacancies filled being those left by the resignations of Edge and Sackett, now ambassadors. The old line Republicans on the committee on committees fought hard to keep La Follette from the place, but Senator Smoot, fearing to have the contest carried to the floor of the senate, voted with the Democrats and radicals for the appointment. The finance committee now includes 11 Republicans and 8 Democrats. If La Follette and Couzens of Michigan join forces with the Democrats, the latter will control the committee. In any event it is no longer bossed by the Eastern Republicans.

IN THE course of regular business the senate continued its work on the tariff measure, dealing especially with woolens and rayon silks. The committee investigating lobbying heard some more witnesses concerning efforts to raise or lower the sugar schedule, and the name of the President was dragged in several times in a way that brought a sharp rebuke for the committee from one witness, H. H. Pike, Jr., a New York sugar broker.

EDWARD BOK, for many years editor of the Ladies' Home Journal and otherwise noted for his philanthropies, died suddenly at his winter home near Lake Wales, Fla. He was sixty-six years old and had retired from work some time ago. Coming from Holland as a child, Mr. Bok by his own efforts won fame and fortune, and then set about returning to the public much of his money in the way of philanthropic gifts.

Another well known American who was claimed by death was Prof. Henry J. Cox, chief of the weather service in Chicago and the oldest weather forecaster in the country in point of service.

GEN. JOHN J. PERSHING does not want to be a senator. Certain of his friends and admirers in Nebraska started a movement to induce him to run against Senator George W. Norris, and bronched the subject to him. The general's response was: "I do not desire, nor have I desired at any time to seek public office. While it would be a distinct honor for any man to represent the great state of Nebraska in the United States senate, my decision must be regarded as final."

Kitten Made Trouble

A hungry kitten caused a turnout of a detail of Philadelphia police when Charles Rosenblum was alarmed by mysterious sounds in his better and egg store after closing time. With drawn pistols the detachment of police searched the store and found the only intruder a strange cat out for a meal. The police withdrew while the store owner provided his uninvited guest with a saucer of cream.

Natural Gas Consumption

In 1922 725,000,000 cubic feet of natural gas were produced in the United States. The value of this natural gas was $196,000,000. In 1925 the production had increased to 1,164,000,000 cubic feet, having a value of $255,000,000. In 1927 the production had increased to 1,445,428,000,000, which was an increase of 132,400,000,000 cubic feet over 1925.

"EACH DAY A DREAD"

"Orgatone Made a New Person of My Dad and He Is Looking Better," Says this Lubbock Boy.

"At the time my dad started on Orgatone he could hardly get around the house, and each day was just a dread for him," said
Herman Clay, of 207 Avenue H, Lubbock, Texas, while talking with the Orgatone representative the other day.

"My father has suffered for about six years with a very bad chronic case of stomach trouble," he continued, "and got so nervous
the least thing would upset him.
Gas would form on his stomach and he would bloat up so he'd almost die, he suffered so. He wasn't able to eat anything, for it disagreed with him. He also had rheumatism and got to where he could hardly get around the past six years, and was almost forced to quit his work. He got so bad, You see, he has to feel fine in order to do his work, for he is a bricklayer and it is hard strenuous work. He could hardly sleep when he went to bed at night, and would roll and toss all night long. He just felt badly all the time, and didn't seem to have any ambition for anything."

"Orgatone has helped so many people, and a friend of ours recommended it to dad and he began to try it. We are all thankful, it has relieved him of all his troubles. He eats anything he want and is not bothered the slightest with stomach trouble, and the gas, dizziness and bilious spells are all gone. He feels much better, and his rheumatism is much better, and he honestly looks like a new man. I am glad to give you this statement for him, for I know Orgatone is the only medicine that has helped dad, and we are all thankful."

The Desert 100

"Well," I said, "that means that I've got about half an hour to disguise a family meal as a company dinner."

"Don't bother," she interrupted. "They won't be here for luncheon—dinner. I need to see them only about ten minutes."

I didn't bother—answering. If she didn't know any more about the ways of people in this country than that, I didn't see why I should take it on myself to teach her.

But she was right. She talked to them a few minutes; and, though I insisted that they stay for dinner, off they went. It was an insult to the Desert Moon ranch. Every one on the place, but Miss MacDonald, knew it. Two weeks before, if a couple of friends had left the ranch at eleven-thirty in the morning, with no reasonable excuse for so doing, Sam would have blown up and burst with rage. That noon he was not even decently indignant.

He had plenty of interest, though, concerning the finding of the attic key. He had had it all settled, and was satisfied that, since it had been proven that Gaby had been killed on the stairway, it had also been proven that no member of the household could have been implicated. Now this second key coming to light, the key that must have been put over back of the wood before the fire was lighted that night, and that must have been blackened in that one fire, because there had been no fire in that fireplace since, dragged, to quote Sam, not wishing to use such words on my own hook, "Every d—n one of us back into the d—n mess again."

"Sam," I said, and I guess my only excuse is that I was still angry at having my honest word doubted, "do you know what I think? I think that Miss MacDonald—though I know she is a nice girl, and a living wonder as help in the kitchen and around the house—is going to be a flat flake from start to finish when it comes to discovering the murderer."

"That's kind of the way I got it sized up, too," Sam said. "But if she's good help to you, she's worth a lot more than her expenses."

"It isn't the cost of her," I said. "I'm afraid she is going to do a lot of harm around here."

"Goodnight, Mary," he said. "If anyone can do any more harm around here than has been done already—why, leave 'em do it."

"Not much with your leave 'em do it," I said. "My idea is that we've had about enough trouble. What I'm getting at is this, Sam: I think that fool girl, at present, is suspecting you more than any other one of us."

"That's the way I had that sized up, too," he said. "But let her go ahead. If she can prove I'm guilty, I'm willing to hang for it."

"Don't be a fool, Sam," I snapped. "Did you ever happen to hear of circumstantial evidence?"

"You bet. But they can't hang more than one innocent person on circumstantial evidence, and there's enough of that stuff around here now to hang about five or six of us. I'll take my chances with the rest of you, Mary."

"Lands, Sam," I was taken aback. "do you think she suspects me?"

Something pretty close to the old twinkle came into Sam's eyes. "Well, Mary, Gaby was one extra to do for and she came late to meals and pestered you quite a lot. Furthermore, suddenly serious. "I'm going to wait a few more days, and then if this lady isn't progressing a deal faster than she is at present, I'm going to pay her off, full amount, of course, and wire to Frisco for a plain, ordinary, he-man detective to come up here and take hold of things. By the way," he went on, "does it seem to you that Danny and Canneziano are getting along all right?"

"I judge it isn't a case of their getting along much," I said. "So far as I know, she hasn't spoken a word to him since she greeted him the evening she came home."

"Well," he hesitated, "well—I know a mile further than that. I'll tell you, some time that isn't dinner time—maybe."

He went into the dining room, and I followed him.

All during that dinner, and the same had been true of every meal since the first breakfast I've mentioned, John hardly took his eyes off of Miss MacDonald. I made a way to speak to him about it, alone, right after dinner.

"John," I said, "for mercy's sakes, what do you want to sit and stare at Miss MacDonald for, during meals, like she was the place where you had lost something?"

He blushed. "Gosh, Mary! I haven't been doing that, have I?"

"You certainly have. It doesn't look nice, John. Why do you do it?"

"I didn't know that I did. But, on the square, did you ever see anything as pretty—I mean as clean and—well, kind of comforting looking? She changes so, too; like a diamond, or a desert, or a sunrise, or—something. Did you ever see anyone as interesting to look at, Mary?"

"Never mind asking me," I said. "Just you go and ask Danny some of those questions."

"Danny," he answered, "is—well, Danny is Danny, of course. She's different."

"Better take to watching how different she is," I advised, and left him to think it over, and went into the living room.

Canneziano was loitering around in there. "Mary," he said, "I'll make a dicker with you."

"Not with me," I said, and started up the stairs.

Curiosity like mine is a curse. I'd gone about four steps up when it caught me. "What's your old dicker?" I said.

"If you'll persuade Sam to give me the ten thousand for producing the murderer, I'll split it with you."

I am tired of apologizing for myself. I will state, merely, that I managed to say the one thing, under those circumstances, that I should not have said. "Do you know who the murderer is?" Thereby proving that I was possessed of about as much diplomacy as an alarm clock.

"Certainly not," he answered. He had not hesitated; he had looked straight into my eyes. But I knew that he believed that I thought he had lied.

"See here," I said. "I take it that one five thousand dollars is as good to you as another. If you know who committed the murder, and will produce him, I'll give you the five thousand dollars myself."

"Don't say that, Mary," Danny stepped out from behind the long curtains at the end of the south windows.

Canneziano jumped like a spurred bronco. "Sproing, eh, my lady?"

She spoke directly to me. "Listen, Mary; don't ever, for any reason, enter into any sort of an agreement with this man. If he knows, or thinks that he knows, who the murderer is, he can be forced to tell without a bribe. If he had known for one day, one hour, and had withheld the information, he's in effect, an accomplice—there is a legal term for it, but I have forgotten it. I am going out, now, to find Uncle Sam, and to bring him here and tell him that this man says that he knows who committed the murder. Mary, you telephone to the sheriff in Telko—"

"Just a moment, please," Canneziano spoke smoothly and smilingly. "I have said, definitely, that I do not know who killed Gaby. And—I do not know. I am bored, unaccountably bored. I should like to try my hand at detecting this—er, villain. But," he shrugged his narrow shoulders, "with no impetus—"

"The fact that she was your own daughter—" I began, hotly.

"Do, L. Mary," Danny interrupted, with a sigh. "There is no use. You and he do not speak the same language."

"How is this?" Canneziano said, and went on speaking, very rapidly, in some foreign language.

Danny stood and stared at him with a mile of expression on her face. He paused for breath. She said, "I have forgotten my Italian. I do not understand you, and I am glad I do not. Come, Mary, shall we go upstairs?"

In the upper hall she said that she wanted me to go with her to Miss MacDonald, because she wanted to tell Miss MacDonald what had just happened.

We knocked on her door. She greeted us pleasantly enough, but there was a pucker between her eyebrows.

"You have asked us," Danny began at once, "to tell you nothing about the case. Does that mean that you do not wish to have us tell you of day by day developments, which seem to have a direct bearing on the case.

"As, for instance?" Miss MacDonald questioned.

Danny told her about what had happened, from the time she had stepped behind the curtains, until she and had come upstairs together.

Miss MacDonald's first question was, "Why were you watching him?"

"Because," Danny answered straight, "I think he came here with some evil purpose. I should like to find out what that purpose is."

"Why were you so eager to prevent Mrs. Magin's making a pact with him?"

"I have dealt with this man. I know that he is bad and crafty. For thousands of dollars he would perjure himself over and over again. He would produce witnesses who would perjure themselves."

"Has this man approached you with offers similar to this one, Miss Canneziano?"

"He has had no opportunity."

"You are sure of that?"

Danny's chin went up a trifle. "I don't understand."

"I think that you do."

Danny turned to me. "Mary," she said, "yesterday afternoon that man came to my room when I was alone. He slipped in, closed my door, and locked it. I ran into Gaby's room, but I could not get out of it because the doors were all locked. I went into Gaby's bathroom and looked myself in. I stayed there for half an hour or longer, until he left. Miss MacDonald evidently thinks that he and I were in conversation during that time. I have no proof that he wasn't. Do you believe me, Mary?"

"I do, with all my heart," I said.

"Miss MacDonald persisted. 'You told me one about this?'"

"I did not dare to tell. If John thought that that man—"

"Yes?" questioned Miss MacDonald.

"I mean that John would fight with him; would whip him within an inch of his life."

"Why should you care?"

Danny looked at me.

"She'd care," I said, answering the appeal in her big, hurt eyes, "because she is a woman, Miss MacDonald. It may be hard for you to understand; but women, who aren't crime analysts, don't want their men fighting."

"Thank you, Mary," Danny said, and walked hurriedly out of the room.

"Mrs. Magin," Miss MacDonald began, right off the minute the door had closed behind Danny. "I want to ask you to help me with this case."

"I couldn't be any help to you," I said. "I guess I was rather tart about it."

"Why not?"

"One reason is," I said, "that anybody who doesn't know any better than to suspect Danny, in this affair, would need a lot more help, to get anywhere, than I could give them."

"My only suspicion concerning Miss Canneziano," she answered, "is that she knows more than she is willing to tell. I may be wrong about that. Have you any other reason for refusing to help me?"

"Only that you don't believe a word I say. If you would consider that I am, anyway, trying to be honest, and if you'd do the same with the others, until you are sure that you have reason to do otherwise. I'd consider it an honor to help you, and I'd thank you kindly. I'd be no use to you, as long as you doubted every word I said. If I know that you are believing that I'll help, and tell the truth, I'll try to. If I think I am to be doubted,

Swastika Always Held Emblem of Good Luck

The swastika, which is the cross made by crossing two letter "Z"s has been the symbol of good luck for so long back that no reliable evidence has been preserved to indicate just why this particular ideograph should have its present significance. We do know that from time out of mind it has had this significance, and among peoples in all parts of the world excepting Africa, Polynesia, Australia and the polar regions.

The swastika as the good-luck symbol is found in China, Korea, Japan and India. As far back as in ancient Troy the swastika was used in this sense by the Mycenaeans. It is found in relics of such widely separated peoples as those who inhabited Europe during the Bronze age, the Etruscans, the Indians of our own Colorado and Mexico, and among others of North America.

Better Take a Taxi

"I never was so mortified!" exclaimed Mrs. Averdupis.

"Yeah! What happened?" asked her husband.

"I got on a street car today," said the lady of many pounds, "and a rather thin man got up to give me a seat, but as the man next to him wouldn't get up, too, I had to stand and listen to the rest of the passengers in the car snicker."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

who looked as much alike as these girls did, should be entirely different as to character?"

"Strange or not, it is true. In character those two girls were as different as night and day. I never even thought that they looked alike. Who told you that they did?"

"I have seen their photographs," she reminded me.

"Their photographs may look alike. They didn't."

"But they did," she insisted.

"I tell you," I said, "that they acted so differently, and dressed so differently, that there was not one bit of likeness."

"A most unusual state of affairs for duplicate twins. Miss Danielle Canneziano came here on a most doubtful errand; an errand that amounted to robbery, nothing else."

"If you are accusing Danny—" I interrupted.

"Oh, I am not! There was a flash of temper in that. 'Making all allowances for mistakes in time, Miss Canneziano could not have committed the murder herself. But, suppose that her past was not as innocent and blameless as she would like to have you all think. Suppose that a revelation of all she knows, or suspects, concerning her sister's death, would also bring to light things that she cannot afford to have brought to light concerning herself. It is at least reasonable to think that she knows more than she is willing to tell."

"I wonder whether you noticed," she went on, "that coming up from the station I set a trap for Miss Canneziano. Just for an instant, I fancied that there was more fear than grief in her attitude toward meeting her father. I suggested, you remember, that she see him alone; I wanted to see whether she desired a private interview with him. Her prompt refusal made it evident that she had no secret to give to him, and expected to get none from him. That is in her favor. Still—"

"Before you go now, since you have agreed to help me, do you mind if I direct a bit? I want you to keep one eye on Miss Canneziano. I want you to keep the other eye on Mr. Canneziano. Mr. Hand, and Mrs. Ricker. Will you do that?"

"I will do that," I said.

"Dear me, no. Not concisely. Now, let me see." She took a folded paper from the front of her dress. "Here is my copy of the letter. It does look a mess, doesn't it?"

I looked at the paper and read, as before.

"Paexazizt! f-y nyx ogrgrago, m fmo att Jan Jasn, ahzro zkg c-ahhalo, vkgt nyx clpigt rg zkg kypulza, zkaz nyx."

It surely looked a mess.

"The fact that it was written on the typewriter," she said, "makes me suspect that the typewriter may write it for us."

I told her "nena what I had not thought to tell her before; about my having heard the typewriter going, slowly, in Gaby's room right after she had received the letter."

"Fine!" she said. "May I use the same typewriter that she used?"

We went together into Gaby's room. "I should have thought you'd want to clean this room, first of all," I said.

"Mr. Stanley unlocked it for me that first night. I spent five or six very busy hours in here, and I slept here that night, too."

"Upon my soul! Doesn't that go to show? I'd have taken oath in any court that you spent the night in your own room."

"That is exactly it," she said. "Honest people are so sure that they know things, which they don't know at all, and that they have seen things, which they haven't seen."

I have wished, since that I had said something else instead of saying, "Well, I might think I knew something which I didn't know; but I'd never mistake about what I had seen or had not seen."

"Perhaps not—" she said.

"Did you find anything in here that night?" I questioned.

"One whole eye for Danny," I questioned, "and only a third of an eye for each of the others?"

"For the present," she smiled, "Will you do that?"

I said that I would. It was not until after dinner the next day, when I was resting in my own room, feeling as virtuous as the three monkeys, who see no evil, hear no evil, speak no evil, pleased as Punch over my failures of the past twenty-four hours, that I realized that I just naturally could not carry through a job that went as much against the grain as that job went.

We are, I thought, allowed to know some things—just simple, honest knowing. And I knew that keeping a suspicious eye on the girl who had said

"If You Are Accusing Danny—" I interrupted.

"bless your heart" to me, on the evening of the second of July, was as sensible as sitting up for Santa Claus.

Some one knocked on my door, I answered the knock. Miss MacDonald, all smiles, was standing there.

"Let me come in," she said; and, as soon as my door was closed behind her, "A most fortunate thing has happened. Some one has been to my desk and has stolen the code letter."

I could manage nothing but an echo. "Fortunate!" I said.

"I had a careful copy of it, locked up, of course. I have been leaving the letter in plain sight on my desk for bait. Don't you see, Mary," she forgot her formality in her excitement, "this is the mistake I have been hoping for. I have found a beginning—at last. The letter could not have concerned anyone in this house except Miss Canneziano, her father, and, possibly, not probably, young Mr. Stanley."

"I guess," I said, "that was likely what you were wanted to think."

"Har gray eyes questioned me. 'Supposing,' I answered, 'that Mrs. Ricker, or Hubert Hand, or anyone of us, wanted to get you clear off the track, suspecting especially Danny, could one of us do better than to steal the code letter?'"

"My word!" she said. "And you, with a mind that works like that, spending your life doing cooking. All the same, it does prove one thing. That the murderer, or his close accomplice, is right here on the place, now."

"Chad's confession proved that. The key in the fireplace proved it, too."

"Dear me, no. Not concisely. Now, let me see." She took a folded paper from the front of her dress. "Here is my copy of the letter. It does look a mess, doesn't it?"

I looked at the paper and read, as before.

"Please make Father change his smoking tobacco"

MEN go to their graves ignorant of the suffering an over-stroke of the pipe has caused others. But now, we trust, Father will lose no time in discovering Sir Walter Raleigh, whose mild, fragrant blend is as popular with the smoked-at, as it is delightful to the smoker. This blend of choice Burley has plenty of body and a very spicy fragrance. Yet it's so mild you can smoke it all day long, with only the sensation of increasing enjoyment.

How to Take Care of Your Pipe

(Hint No. 1) Don't switch tobaccos when you break in a new pipe. Stick to the same brand for 30 or more pipefuls. Mixing tobaccos makes a pipe either strong or flat. Send for our free booklet, "How to Take Care of Your Pipe." Dept. 3, The Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corporation, Louisville, Ky.

Something Lacking

In parts of Mexico hot springs and cold springs are found side by side. One can see native women boiling clothes in a hot spring, rubbing them on a flat rock and rinsing them in a clear cold spring.

A visitor watched this process for some time, and then said:

"I suppose the natives think old Mother Nature is pretty generous, eh?"

"No, señor," replied his host. "There is much grumbling because she supplies no soap."

Ancient Baby Carriage

Augusta, Maine, claims one of the most interesting baby carriages in the state. It is sixty-five years old and only recently was removed from attic treasures. The wooden-ribbed wheels are large, and the seat will accommodate a seven-year-old child. The top, which tilts, has fringed edges.

A Sour Stomach

In the same way it takes a dose of soda to bring a little temporary relief of gas and sour stomach, Phillips Milk of Magnesia has a acidity completely checked. It aids the digestive organs all tranquility. Once you have tried this form of relief you will cease to worry about your diet and experience a new freedom in eating.

This pleasant preparation is just as good for children, too. Use it whenever coated tongue or fetid breath signals need of a sweetener. Physicians will tell you that every spoonful of Phillips Milk of Magnesia neutralizes many times its volume in acid. Get the genuine, the name Phillips is important. Imitations do not act the same!

JUNIOR 1915 CLUB

The 1915 Junior Club met last Wednesday at the home of Miss Otey Watkins the regular meeting day having been postponed on account of bad weather, with Mrs. Opal Adamson as leader. The following program was given:

Roll Call Book by O. Henry.
A Life Sketch of Sidney Porter (O. Henry) — Melba Johnson.
A Story from O. Henry — Mrs. Lola Dishman.

The Last Leaf — Mrs. Mildred Audill.

The program was very much enjoyed by members and guests, and much planning was given to the all day affair to be held at the Mace home Wednesday, the 29th. This will be a great occasion for the Juniors, as it is their first all day program.

The hostess served a dainty salad course to Mesdames Lola Dishman, Jewel McCaskill, Elsie Loman, Mildred Audill, Opal Adamson, Dannie Battle, Gladys Ewen, Olson Blankenship, Misses Glotzel Moreman, Melba Johnson, Gladys Simpson, members; and Mrs. J. C. Latimer and Mrs. H. Hall, guests.

MEN'S BANQUET

The Men's Banquet which was staged at the First Baptist church last Friday night was a decided success. Forty men were present, and a splendid program was enjoyed. Those on the program were J. G. McDougal, Rev. B. N. Shepherd of Clarendon, Rev. E. T. Miller of Memphis, and Rev. Y. F. Walker of Luckney.

The women of the church served delicious food in three courses. Besides the talks and good eats, there were some splendid musical numbers by local talent.

Hedley friends have received announcement of the marriage of Miss Annette Trent, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Trent, former Hedleyans, to Mr. Bolton D. Bruyere, at Waco, January 19th. Our very best wishes to them.

Rev. and Mrs. Jewell Sibley were appreciated callers at the Informer office a few days ago. They are assisting in the B. Y. P. U. training school at the First Baptist Church this week.

Mrs. W. J. Oneal has been very sick the past week, but we are glad to hear that she is improving nicely now.
