Sheriff Gary Painter

Commissioners, Painter square off

■ Lawsuit against Sheriff Painter aggravates dissension between him and commissioners who must balance the budget.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

A showdown is brewing in Midland County between duty and budget.

The conflict lies in the perceived law-enforcement duties of Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter versus the budgetary responsibilities of the Midland County Commissioners' Court.

Dissension is hardly new in Midland County or elsewhere in Texas.

Locally, the conflict has been accentuated by a lawsuit filed in January by the Dallas Morning News against the sheriff. Staff writers Dan Malone and Lorraine Adams, in working on investigative stories on Texas law enforcement, had sought information on the sheriff's arrests and reverse-sting operations in the last five years. They had sought detailed information, including inter-office memos, through the Texas Open Records Acts. The sheriff apparently did not give them all that they wanted, and the newspaper filed a lawsuit against the sheriff.

Talk of the lawsuit and the discussion of "possible corrective personnel action and/or litigation concerning (the) Midland County Sheriff's Office" on Friday morning apparently caused the Commissioners' Court distress.

In a two-hour closed-door meeting, the commissioners and County Judge Charles "Bro" Seltzer summoned a slate of lawyers in meeting with the 44-year-old Painter, sheriff since 1985, and his operations captain, former Texas Ranger Clayton McKinney.

In and out of the meeting were Rick

Arco cuts 80, gains 80

Nationwide restructuring 'a wash' locally

■ Restructuring includes transferring 80 employees to consolidated Midland office.

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

The long-awaited announcement of Arco Oil & Gas Co. restructuring came Friday.

The company's Midland office will see its staff cut by 80 positions — 17 percent of the work force, Ken Thompson, senior vice president of the western district, told local employees at a meeting Friday at the Lee High School auditorium. At the same time, he announced that the company would transfer 80 employees from its Dallas and Bakersfield, Calif., offices to Midland.

The incoming staff members will be predominantly administrative personnel, although some engineering and exploration personnel will be transferred as well, Thompson said.

As part of the company's restructuring, Arco has consolidated its four districts in the lower 48 states into two. The Southeastern District in Lafayette, La., and Southern district in Houston have been combined into the East District, headquartered in Houston.

The Midland-based Central District and Bakersfield-based Western District have merged into the West District, headquartered in Midland.

Baker fails to enlist Palestinians in talks

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — Secretary of State James A. Baker III failed Friday to line up Palestinian Arabs for peace talks with Israel. But he said the Palestinians had "the most to lose" if the peace effort breaks down and held out hope they still would attend.

Baker did nail down Jordan's participation in the peace conference the United States and the Soviet Union intend to cosponsor in October.

King Hussein, smiling broadly, said "indeed" when he was asked at a news conference if he was ready for face-to-face negotiations with neighboring Israel.

He said it was up to the Palestinians to select their representatives to negotiate their way out of "all the hardships in the territories."

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir told Baker a day earlier that Israel would join the talks on the condition that its concerns about Palestinian representation were resolved to its satisfaction. That leaves only the Palestinians as holdouts for the conference.

House passes bill on jobless benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress sent President Bush legislation Friday to extend jobless benefits for people unemployed for six months. The White House has threatened a veto of the legislation.

Racing to begin the month-long congressional recess, the Senate voted 58-40 against allowing servicewomen to have abortions in military hospitals overseas and a Senate committee voted to set up a temporary panel to investigate whether U.S. troops are being held in Southeast Asia.

Working late to wrap up its work, the Senate created its own committee to investigate the fate of servicemen missing in action from the Vietnam war. The panel, established by voice vote, would have six Republican members and six Democrats and would go out of existence next year unless renewed.

Senators also gave their final blessing to a $23,200 pay raise for themselves. And the Senate Ethics Committee concluded that Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., had acted improperly in letting his brother use his office on behalf of a New York defense contractor.

Bush: Only ill health would prevent re-election bid

WASHINGTON (NYT) — President Bush all but announced his intention to seek re-election at a Rose Garden news conference Friday, saying only a change in his health would deter him from seeking a second term.

Bush then tested a potential campaign theme by accusing a "frustratingly negative" Congress of blocking his domestic legislative agenda.

As if determined to allay any lingering concerns about his health, Bush declared, "I feel like a million dollars," and said he was extraordinarily "blessed" for a man of 67.

The remarks, his first since his return from the Soviet Union, were aimed at Democrats who this week accused him of abandoning social and financial problems at home for the glitter of global summitry.

When asked about his re-election plans, Bush was initially coy, saying he had not decided whether to try for a second term and might not do so until next year.

"I'll be honest, the only thing would be a health problem, and I don't have one right now," Bush said. "But, I mean it wouldn't be fair to the American people to ask to be re-elected knowing that you, in your heart of hearts, might feel you couldn't finish the job. But I don't feel that way."

With that comment, Bush edged close to making the formal announcement that he said he would make early next year. Although incumbent presidents are usually reticent about announcing for a second term, Bush's strong hint may have been intended to scotch rumors among some Bush family friends that his wife, Barbara, might oppose a second term for health reasons.

Senate approves committee to investigate MIAs' fate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted Friday to create its own committee to investigate the fate of servicemen missing in action from the Vietnam and other wars. President Bush said anew there was "no hard evidence of prisoners being alive."

The committee would have 12 members equally divided between the two parties and would go out of existence late next year unless renewed.

"We hope to be able to have the answers by then (next year) although we can't predict that," said Sen. Robert Smith, R-N.H., the chief sponsor.

Smith said "thousands of people ... have written cards and letters and made phone calls" urging creation of the committee. Recent photographs alleged to be American prisoners from the Vietnam conflict, have led to "doubt and mistrust of our government," Smith added.

When the measure passed the Rules Committee earlier in the day, it called for a panel of six Democrats and five Republicans. Smith said the composition of the panel held up final approval for several hours, but senators agreed to the equal numbers because MIAs are not a partisan issue.

Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said if President Bush appoints a similar panel, "there's no reason the two can't live in harmony."

In the Rules Committee Sen. John Warner, R-Va., said his "main concern was that we not elevate unduly the hopes and aspirations of the families who've waited so many years. To do that would be a disservice."

And speaking to reporters at the White House, Bush said "there is no hard evidence of prisoners being alive." He added: "For those who are unscrupulously raising the hopes of families by fraud, that should be really condemned. You talk about something brutal to a family, that's about as cruel as you can do."

Still, Bush said, "If there's any hard evidence it will be pursued and run to the ground. And our policy has always been based on the assumption that until we can account for every person missing that we have to run down these leads to prove that nobody is held."

Immediately following the Senate committee action, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., told reporters, "I am relatively certain that within the next 60 to 90 days we may have one more living POWs or MIAs." Helms declined to elaborate.

Smith noted that the select committee would have subpoena power and the power to put witnesses under oath.

The executive branch, which he said has resisted giving Congress intelligence on POWs and MIAs, is "either going to provide it willingly or we are going to subpoena it. It's that simple... We want to see the intelligence as soon as possible."

On Thursday, the Senate inserted provisions into the defense authorization bill that would require federal agencies "holding or receiving" information on POWs or MIAs to make the material public.

Highway reopens after toxic spill

SEACLIFF, Calif. (NYT) — Without official fanfare, a 10-mile stretch of Highway 101 has been reopened, five days after a Southern Pacific train derailed beneath it spilling a toxic cargo and forcing the evacuation of 300 people.

The first motorists honked their horns and pumped their fists as the highway was opened at 2 p.m. Friday.

California Highway Patrol officers peeled orange cones from the six-lane highway after Ventura County environmental health workers declared the area safe from contamination. California Department of Transportation inspectors earlier found concrete columns supporting two overpasses to be structurally sound.

Residents of the 49-home Seacliff colony, had been unable to return home for five days except to retrieve pets and grab clothing.

The highway's reopening accommodated the thousands of Los Angeles County residents and vacationers headed north toward Santa Barbara for the weekend, but CHP spokesman Mike Serrano said the timing was coincidental.

"There's always pressure to open up highways when they're closed," he said. "We did not allow any outside pressure to compromise the safety of the area or the environment."

For five days, motorists faced one- to four-hour delays on a 35-mile detour around Highway 101 from Ventura to Carpinteria.

Elderly woman screams at Keating as trial starts

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A 90-year-old woman who said she lost $100,000 in the collapse of Lincoln Savings screamed at owner Charles Keating Jr. in court Friday as his securities fraud trial began.

"Mr. Keating, you got all my money. You took all my money away," said Sarah Mandell, who identified herself as a retired photographer from Hollywood.

"I can't work anymore," she screamed at Keating.

Before getting to Keating in the courtroom, the woman also attacked the attorney for Keating's co-defendant, Judith J. Wischer, a former top aide.

The lawyer, Abbe Lowell, said the short, gray-haired and bespectacled woman "threw a right jab into my stomach and then confronted Mr. Keating."

The confrontation came at the end of a day eventful only because it marked the beginning of trial for Keating on charges of defrauding Lincoln investors who bought now-worthless junk bonds issued by Lincoln's parent company, Keating's American Continental Corp.

The confrontation plunged the Superior Court hearing into chaos. Judge Lance A. Ito said he was concerned about the safety of the defendants and their lawyers. He said he would order heightened security for the rest of the trial, probably including searches of anyone entering the courtroom.

The elderly woman seemed confused as well as angry, and was identified by friends who brought her by a different name. Instead of Sarah Mandell, they said, her name is Sarah Solomon. They also said she lost only $5,000 buying American Continental bonds, not the $100,000 she stated.

The emotions aroused by the case were underlined as well by fellow bondholders in the hallway outside court who screamed at Keating as he and his attorney, Stephen C. Neal, hurried to leave.

Also at the hearing, Ito formally separated Keating's trial from that of Ms. Wischer, who was president of American Continental.

He tentatively set Ms. Wischer's trial for Jan. 13.

Named as victims in the case are 20 bondholders who lost $1.8 million.

However, all told, thousands of investors lost $250 million when Lincoln was seized by regulators and American Continental filed for bankruptcy protection in April 1989. It was the biggest ever failure of a thrift, costing taxpayers $2.6 billion to bail out.

AUSTIN — Midland County Public Library will get $200,000 from a construction grant approved by the Texas State Library and Archives Commission, the library commission announced Friday.

The grant, part of $1 million that will go to eight libraries, will be distributed during the 1992 fiscal year that begins Sept. 1. The money is from federal Library Services and Construction Act Title II funds.

The Midland library will have to match the amount of the grant with local funds, the state library said.

Scientists may have found cause of Parkinson's

■ Researchers discover 'energy-system' defect in people with the disease.

Associated Press

BAR HARBOR, Maine — Scientists may have tracked down the long-sought cause of Parkinson's disease with the discovery of a defect in the "energy factories" in muscles of people with the ailment, a researcher said Thursday.

Parkinson's disease, marked by shaking of the hands and a shuffling gait, afflicts some 500,000 older Americans.

The patients suffer from death of brain cells in the portion of brain that causes movement, but the reason for the brain-cell loss has not been known.

If the researchers have indeed found the cause, the discovery could lead to simple methods of preventing the disease, said the leader of the research, Douglas C. Wallace of Emory University in Atlanta.

"It's going to be very hard to push people back from very severe disease to normal, but I think it's going to be easy to prevent," Wallace said Thursday at a geneticists' meeting at the Jackson Laboratory in Bar Harbor.

Wallace and his colleagues found a marked reduction of enzymes associated with the production of energy in the body's cells.

The brain consumes more energy than any other organ in the body, and a deterioration of the body's energy supply could lead to the death of the brain cells, Wallace explained.

"It's going to be very hard to push people back from very severe disease to normal, but I think it's going to be easy to prevent.'

— Researcher Douglas C. Wallace

Dr. Sally Boyson, a neurologist at the University of Colorado, reported in 1989 that she had found a similar defect in the energy factories — mitchondria — of blood cells called platelets.

The defects occur in all cells of the body, not just in blood cells and muscle cells, Wallace said. Platelets and muscles were examined because they are easiest to study.

Wallace has shown that the defect in the mitochondria is not due to a genetic mutation in mitochondria. Researchers are now searching for genetic mutations that could explain the energy-system problem.

"I think this is very meaningful," said Boyson. "There is very good reason to believe that this is leading to the cause of Parkinson's disease."

She and Wallace said that more research would be needed to pin down what is going wrong and to confirm that this is the cause of Parkinson's disease.

"It's sort of like the blind men and the elephant," Boyson said in a telephone interview. "Everybody's got a hold of a different piece of this, and the results aren't entirely consistent."

She said researchers in Japan and London also have done studies suggesting that the mitochondria are the source of the brain deterioration in Parkinson's disease.

Further confirmation comes from the accidental discovery several years ago of a substance called MPTP, which produces symptoms of Parkinson's disease. MPTP is known to interfere with one of the chemical steps in the energy-production system of the mitochondria, Wallace said.

Wallace and Boyson said that some genetic predisposition to the disease may be passed from parents to children. But they have not yet located that genetic defect.

Some researchers believe the defect is in the special genes associated with the mitochondria, which are separate from the rest of the body's genes.

Other researchers think the defect will be found in genes outside the mitochondria that are known to help control the operation of the mitochondria.

Wallace has shown previously that some rare inherited diseases are due to mutations in the genes of the mitochondria.

Crews set up equipment to trap oil

NEAH BAY, Wash. (AP) — Crews set up equipment Friday to trap oil at the site of a sunken ship that spilled fuel and fouled the pristine Pacific Northwest coastline, officials said.

Two boats, each towing 600 feet of boom, will travel through the slick, forcing the oil into a smaller area so skimmer boats can lap it up, said Coast Guard spokesman Gene Maestas. The skimmers will dump the oil onto a barge near the slick instead of returning to shore, he said.

The Canadian Coast Guard was studying whether to send a mini-submarine to inspect the wreckage of the Tenyo Maru, said spokesman Rod Nelson. The crew's observations could help in plugging the leak or pumping out the remaining oil, he said.

But "if it doesn't look safe, they won't send the sub down at all," Maestas said.

The Japanese fish-processor sank July 22 in about 500 feet of water after it was hit by a Chinese grain ship. It had 240,000 gallons of fuel aboard, officials said.

Tens of thousands of gallons of oil have oozed from the sunken vessel, killing sea birds and depositing tarballs on the coastline.

An 80-mile slick along Washington's coast was breaking up Friday, but westerly wind and new leaks Thursday pushed oil onto Olympic National Park beaches, officials said.

"It's weathering and breaking into tar balls," U.S. Coast Guard spokesman Brad Smith said Friday. "It's in more concentrated splotches now. We're not looking at so much of a sheen."

The spill has spread north into Canadian waters. Ribbons of oil stretched up to seven miles north of the shipwreck, about 25 miles from Canada's shoreline, Nelson said.

Tar balls, some 4 inches in diameter, have washed up on nine beaches along a 33-mile stretch of Olympic National Park shoreline, National Park Service ranger Bob Appling said. .

McCAMEY — Services for longtime Upton County Commissioner Joe Erie Conger, 94, are set for 3 p.m. today in First Baptist Church of McCamey with the Revs. Leonard Lee and Greg Johnson officiating. Burial will follow in East Hill Cemetery in Fort Stockton under the direction of Richard W. Box Funeral Home.

Conger died Thursday at his McCamey home.

He was born Feb. 2, 1897, in Sterling County. He was a World War I veteran, a rancher, and a county commissioner for 24 years. He operated a wholesale business in Rankin for Gulf Oil Co. in 1927 and was a member of the Rankin school board for seven years.

He married Mary Lee Blaydes of Fort Stockton in 1941. The couple moved to McCamey. He retired as county commissioner of Rankin in 1971. He was a member of the First Baptist Church of McCamey for 50 years. He was a member of the McCamey Chamber of Commerce, the city lodge and was selected as McCamey Man of the Year in 1984. He also served as district deputy grand master.

Survivors include: his wife, Mary Lee Conger of McCamey; two sons, Joe E. Conger Jr. of Galveston and William R. Conger of Stephenville; one daughter, Joanna Conger Wood of Los Gatos, Calif.; one sister, Jewel Cole of Fort Worth, 11 grandchildren and seven great grandchildren.

CUTS: Arco to transfer 80 workers to Midland

(From 1A)

Satellite offices will be maintained in Lafayette and Bakersfield, although with fewer personnel.

Regarding the moves, Thompson, who was named senior vice president as part of the restructuring, stated, "It now increases the scope of exploration and production operations to be handled out of the Midland office. Before, we handled exploration and production in the Midcontinent, Oklahoma, Kansas, Rocky Mountains and Permian Basin.

"Now we're covering reserves in our California operations as well. That's a sizeable increase in reserves being reviewed, the number of fields and everything," he said.

The positions being eliminated would be in all departments of the Midland office, and the company will assist employees find jobs outside the company, Thompson said.

"This assistance and the company's Enhanced Retirement Package and Special Termination Plan are designed to help Arco people make a transition to their next job opportunity with as little hardship as possible," he added. Those to be terminated will be notified as soon as possible and no later than the end of the year, Thompson said.

"The people who handled our accounting procedures and administrative duties handled in Dallas will now be local, which will be more efficient. There will also some exploration and engineering personnel moved in. We will leave our development geologists in Bakersfield, but some exploration personnel will be moved here. That allows us to take a bigger view of exploration priorities in the Western U.S."

Companywide, the Dallas-based company will cut at least 912 jobs, 17 percent of its personnel, from its current level of 5,350. Coupled with cuts at parent company Atlantic Richfield Co. and Arco Products Co., the corporation's work force will fall by 1,500. Thompson told his employees that the executive ranks will suffer a 24 percent cutback.

In addition, Arco will spin off its technical and research activities into a separate unit to be based in Plano.

The company blamed the need for cutbacks primarily on the collapse in natural gas prices, which recently have been rebounding from levels not seen since the 1970s.

"As you know, gas prices collapsed in February. We at Arco had to ask ourselves if the situation was short-term, or if it was a long-term problem," Thompson told those gathered at the meeting.

The company realized, he said, "Low gas prices are not going to be a short-term problem. We are facing a serious oversupply of natural gas, conservation efforts and more efficient technology. With those factors combined, we're going to see low gas prices for quite some time."

In other restructuring moves, Arco has put aside $200 million for what Thompson termed an aggressive acquisitions program and is looking to place about 1,200 properties on the sale block, including 600 in the Central and West districts. The company has even put its Dallas office building up for sale.

While Thompson, along with other Arco executives, acknowledged that the moves would not be easy, he told the gathering that "Arco wants a long-term future. And we think the lower 48 states are still good for the oil and gas business."

Last week, Arco reported a 37 percent drop in second-quarter profit to $246 million on revenue of $4.24 billion. Like other oil companies, its performance this year has paled in comparison to 1990 levels, when Arco had record profits as the price of oil surged.

Arco's employs 27,000 worldwide, including foreign nationals and employees of some subsidiaries.

Cuts were also expected at the Arco Products Co. operations that runs refining and marketing operations on the West Coast.

PAINTER: 'Personalities, politics' are involved

(From 1A)

Strange, a Midland lawyer hired by the Commissioners' Court to represent Painter in the lawsuit because the visiting judge, Bill Thomas of Abilene, disqualified Midland County Attorney Mark H. Dettman; Teresa Clingman, an assistant county attorney; Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre; County Auditor Floyd Jarnagin, and County Clerk Rosenelle Cherry.

Those privy to the meeting are prohibited, by law, from talking about what went on in the session.

But discussion on the on-going conflict between the duty and budget is not.

The county is low on funds, and the sheriff is high on curtailing crime, particularly drug-related offenses, not only in Midland County but elsewhere in Texas.

And that doesn't set well with the Commissioners' Court, particularly with Seltzer.

Both the sheriff and the court want to curtail crime; but it's costly.

For Midland County, the costs of law-enforcement and jail-keeping absorb about one-fourth ($4.5 million) of the county's $18.7-million annual budget. For the 1991-92 fiscal year beginning Oct. 1, the sheriff has proposed a $5.25-million budget.

Other departments asked for more money, too. And the county's proposed budget, up to $21 million, represents about a $2.5-million shortfall of projected revenues.

The judge and the four commissioners, Durward Wright, Guy McCrary, Louisa Valencia and Win Brown, must balance the budget. They all want effective and efficient law enforcement. They want to keep taxes from rising uncontrollably. And they want to keep the county's risks of liability lawsuits low.

Out-of-county operations by the sheriff's department heighten the risks of liability suits should something go awry, the judge said.

"The Commissioners' Court is concerned about crime also," Seltzer said. "However, we have a different approach to it. We are just as concerned about having to raise the tax rate or float a bond issue to pay off a liability judgment should some 'unfortunate act' occur. And that's a great concern to us."

The judge wants Midland County crime-fighting forces to stay in Midland County. He wants the sheriff's deputies to, at least, try to curtail crime, particularly drug-related offenses.

The sheriff, too, is determined to do his best to stop crime and to make the community safe.

"This office belongs to the people," Painter said Friday, "and all I'm doing is managing this rascal."

From the sheriff's view, "cooperation" among law-enforcement agencies and prosecutors "is something that we should all strive for" in the judicial system.

"And cooperation is the only way that we are going to be able to get a dent or even start making progress in the fight against narcotics."

And any "reasonable and responsible job in the fight against narcotics" ultimately can help "reduce the other crimes considerably," said Painter, noting that 85 to 90 percent of crime in Midland County — including burglaries — are narcotics related.

And when it comes to allowing his investigators to cross county lines to fight crime, "it is on invitation," Painter said.

"If we have the expertise to assist someone, and we can do a respectable job at apprehending a narcotics violator," he said, "that's just that much more dope and another violator that's off the street."

To carry out his job, the sheriff employs 157 people, included investigators, jailers, patrol officers and clerks. A total of nearly 400 are on the county payroll.

The conflict between the sheriff and the Commissioners' Court, surmised Painter, takes in "politics and personalities" and is "nothing that doesn't happen in any business — in the private sector."

"It's my turn, I guess," he lamented.

Painter, who in 1984 defeated then-Sheriff Dallas Smith to take over the sheriff's office, said that he "works for the taxpayers."

"And if the taxpayers want to know something about me, I'll tell them.

"If the taxpayers have a question, I'll respond."

He is planning to run for re-election in 1992.

"I have never ever done anything illegal knowingly," Painter said, "nor have I done anything that would intentionally put Midland County in jeopardy."

"I'm a professional law-enforcement officer. I try to carry myself that way. . . . I live by the Bible. I do my best at it. I'm not the best Christian. I can always improve. So can everybody else."

Painter said that the runs his office "in a professional and responsible manner." Key people who assist him in carrying out his duties include:

- Chief Deputy Jim Chancellor: "He's the one I depend on. He's it when I'm not here."
- Richard Sexton, captain of Detention Division: Sexton has a "very good reputation" as a jailkeeper and nationwide jail consultant.
- Clayton McKinney, captain of Operations and a retired Texas Ranger: McKinney is "a very well-rounded law-enforcement officer, extremely competent."
- Tim Rogers, captain of Special Services: Rogers is an "exceptional individual — very capable. He has a very fine legal mind."

"I have done what I can with what I have," Painter said. "And it's been a rough road."

While the sheriff is carrying out his duties as he sees fit, the Commissioners' Court has cautioned Painter to "cease and desist any and all criminal investigation operations, reverse stings and narcotics operations" outside Midland County.

Exceptions to the rule, covered by state law, include hot pursuit; serving a valid warrant; transporting prisoners; and the valid intergovernmental agreements.

The sheriff is an elected official, who within the confines of the Texas Constitution and law, runs his office as he thinks best.

However, as Seltzer pointed out Friday, the Commissioners' Court funds the sheriff's budget. Depending on how his budget is funded, the sheriff is weakened or strengthened in carrying out his duties.

"The Commissioners' Court believes that the sheriff is an honest individual," said Seltzer, "and we have, at this time, no reason to believe that the sheriff has committed any violation of laws of the state of Texas" or has committed any other wrong-doing.

As a constitutionally-elected official, the "sheriff has his own operation," said Seltzer, and "under the scheme of county government, the sheriff is an independent officer-holder. His operation is funded by the county taxpayers. And the Midland County Commissioners' Court sits as the budgetary officers' overseeing that budget."

The Commissioners' Court is "concerned about the possibility that Midland County assets, Midland County personnel, are operating outside their jurisdiction," Seltzer said. "And the taxpayers of Midland County are subsidizing law-enforcement in other locations. We don't think that's appropriate."

What is appropriate and warranted, the judge said, is Midland County law-enforcement officers' curtailing crime in Midland and in Midland County.

State and federal agencies fight crimes throughout the state. And county and city law-enforcement agencies throughout the state fight their own battles against crime.

The "big money" to be made through the drug-forfeiture fund in and outside Midland County shouldn't be the issue," Seltzer said. The sheriff uses those funds to buy equipment for his officers and uses seized vehicles for patrol and other official work.

"Money shouldn't be the issue, and it's not the issue," Seltzer said.

More important, he said, is curtailing crime in Midland County.

"We believe that there is a whole lot of bad guys here in Midland County that need to be busted," the judge said. "And our people could be utilized just as easily here in Midland County as they can be some place else. There's plenty of bad guys to be rounded up here in town."

BAKER: Palestinians remain holdouts for talks

(From 1A)

flew to Amman, said they had given him a Palestine Liberation Organization statement seeking assurances on five points.

Included was an assertion that the PLO had the right to choose the Palestinians who would be at the peace talks and that the sovereignty of Jerusalem must be on the agenda.

Husseini and Ashrawi sidestepped whether Palestinians from east Jerusalem could be kept out — as Israel has demanded.

"The Palestinian delegation will be decided by our leadership," Ashrawi said.

In Washington, President Bush said, "I welcome Prime Minister Shamir's statement that he supports our proposal." He added, "I call upon Israel and the Palestinians to clear away the remaining obstacles and seize this truly historic opportunity."

Bush said the United States continues to support U.N. resolutions that call upon Israel to cede lands captured from the Arabs. But he declined to discuss any possible outcome of the proposed peace conference, citing the delicate diplomatic negotiations Baker is undertaking.

"This is not the time to go into contentious issues, representational issues," Bush said.

Baker called his session with the Palestinians intensive and said he hoped to get a positive response within the next few weeks.

"Palestinians have more to gain from a viable and active peace process than do almost anyone else," he said. "And further to that, in our view, Palestinians have the most to lose if there is not that process."

"So for the U.S. at least, we are very hopeful the Palestinians will determine they want to be part of this process."

A senior U.S. official, commenting on condition of anonymity, told reporters aboard Baker's plane on the flight here from Jerusalem that the situation is growing more "desperate" under Israel's administration

Baker's statements at the joint news conference with the king appeared to be an attempt to put the Palestinians on the spot. Hussein went along, saying that "it is time for them to decide who represents them."

BENEFITS: Bush will not commit to signing measure

(From 1A)

a winning political issue, the House's Democratic leaders pushed the $5.8 billion legislation through their chamber on a 375-45 tally. The Senate had approved the bill late Thursday.

White House officials sent congressional leaders a letter saying they would urge the president to kill the legislation because "the recession is ending and the recovery is under way."

Bush told reporters he believes the bill is too costly, but added, "I want to wait until I see what the House does and the legislation arrives."

The bill would add up to 20 additional weeks of benefits for people who have exhausted the standard 26 weeks of coverage.

Just hours before the House sent the bill to Bush, the government announced that the July unemployment rate had dropped slightly to 6.8 percent. Republicans seized on that to argue that the extended coverage was unnecessary.

"Six-point-eight percent is a big number, particularly if you are part of that 6.8 percent," said Rep. E. Clay Shaw Jr., R-Fla. "But it is not the double-digit unemployment we had back in early '80s."

With 8.5 million Americans out of work — and 1.6 million of them having exhausted their jobless benefits since January — Democrats argued that many families still need help.

"It is hardworking middle Americans who have been put out of work," said Rep. David Bonior of Michigan, the House Democratic whip. "These people need our help."

Democrats voted for the bill by a 256-1 margin, while Republicans backed it 118-44. Congress' one independent member supported it.

The bill would provide at least four extra weeks of benefits for all jobless people who qualify for coverage, and up to 20 additional weeks. The amount would depend on how bad unemployment is in each state.

Senators introduce WIPP land-withdrawal legislation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation introduced Friday in the U.S. Senate would withdraw the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant site from public use — a step toward opening the nuclear waste dump in New Mexico.

The legislation, introduced by Sens. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., and Jeff Bingaman, D-N.M., would transfer the 10,240-acre site from the Interior Department to the Department of Energy.

Three bills that would provide for the transfer already are pending in the U.S. House.

The Senate bill was introduced just before Congress began its summer recess Friday. Senators will return Sept. 10, and Domenici said the Senate could pass the bill this year.

WIPP is a DOE project designed to bury plutonium-contaminated waste from the nation's defense industry 2,150 feet below the surface in salt beds 26 miles southeast of Carlsbad.

The repository has yet to open, pending resolution of safety and environmental concerns and the withdrawal of the WIPP land from public domain.

A withdrawal would clear the way for a test phase to begin.

Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan Jr. would prefer Congress transfer the land, but his office has said the secretary would move to withdraw it administratively if Congress does not act.

New Mexico officials oppose administrative withdrawal because they say it would not give the state the environmental, safety and monetary assurances it wants.

Bingaman said Friday that "legislative withdrawal is the only way to ensure that the health and safety of New Mexicans is protected when WIPP opens."

"An administrative land withdrawal ... is premature, inadequate and contrary to the interests of New Mexicans and their neighbors," he said.

Domenici and Bingaman said in a news release that their 52-page bill was drafted in consultation with Gov. Bruce King, the Environmental Evaluation Group and state Attorney General Tom Udall's office.

The EEG, established in 1978 with money from the DOE and the state, conducts an independent technical evaluation of WIPP to ensure protection of the environment and public health.

"It's a good bill in general. It's a compromise," said Lokesh Chaturvedi, deputy director of the EEG in Albuquerque.

"We like many of the provisions that require the DOE to complete things which are necessary before they put any waste underground," he said.

Bingaman and Domenici said the measure would give a more powerful role to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, granting it authority to certify DOE compliance with EPA standards.

The bill also would mandate the DOE comply with all applicable EPA standards, they said.

The legislation would provide New Mexico with necessary health and safety protections and economic assistance, such as road improvements, before WIPP would be allowed to open, the senators said.

It would provide New Mexico with an estimated $600 million in impact aid, including $20 million for fiscal 1991, $20 million for each year of operation and $13 million for each year of decommissioning.

The bill says no waste could be brought to WIPP until completion of several reviews, which might take several months to wrap up.

The DOE would have to prepare a plan within 90 days of the bill's enactment for a test phase to include all aspects of temporarily moving transuranic waste to WIPP, the measure said.

The legislation also would add two years to the current five-year test phase.

No more than 0.5 percent of WIPP's capacity could be used during the seven-year test phase, the legislation said.

Of the roughly 900,000-drum capacity of WIPP, only 4,500 drums could be put on site during the test phase, according to the bill.

The DOE plan must include experiments to determine the rate of salt brine seepage and gas generation at the WIPP site, the measure said.

All waste moved to WIPP during the test phase must comply with EPA storage standards, the measure said.

Compliance with EPA standards would be certified by the EPA, not the DOE, the legislation said.

The National Academy of Sciences, the state, the EEG and the EPA administrator would review and comment on the proposed DOE plan 60 days after the proposal is made, the bill said.

The energy secretary must respond to their comments within an additional 60 days.

And within 60 days of the secretary's response, the state, the EEG, the EPA and the NAS would have to publish a final evaluation of the DOE plan, the legislation said.

'If the test phase demonstrates that WIPP should not open as a permanent facility, then the limited amount of waste shipped to the site will be removed...and WIPP will be shut down.'

— From written statement accompanying measure

The final report would evaluate whether the experiments would produce relevant data in a timely manner to demonstrate compliance with the disposal standards, the bill said.

Only at that point could experiments begin, the measure said.

The bill also would permanently ban high-level nuclear waste from WIPP.

"High-level waste is distinct from transuranic waste," Chaturvedi said. "High-level waste produces a high amount of radiation and heat. The majority of transuranic waste will not produce significant amounts of heat."

The measure also would ban remote-handled transuranic waste during the test phase, and no waste could be brought to WIPP until the DOE has issued a plan on how the waste would be retrieved.

Also, no waste could be brought to WIPP until training has been provided to public safety officials for emergency preparedness along the WIPP route, the measure said.

Waste also could not be shipped from Los Alamos National Laboratory until the Santa Fe bypass is built, the bill said. WIPP-bound trucks are expected to use the bypass, which would run west of the city, linking Interstate 25 to the south with U.S. 84-285 to the north.

If the DOE could not demonstrate compliance with the EPA's permanent disposal standards by the end of the test phase, the DOE would have to remove the waste and restore the WIPP site, the bill said.

"As a result of this provision, the DOE will be forced to comply with EPA standards," the senators said in the news release.

"If the test phase demonstrates that WIPP should not open as a permanent facility, then the limited amount of waste shipped to the site will be removed from New Mexico and WIPP will be shut down," they said.

House commitee adopts tax, tuition, fee increases

The State

AUSTIN (AP) — A House committee Friday voted to increase taxes, tuition, and numerous fees, and approved a sweeping change that would include for the first time a state tax on business income.

Without discussion on the bill, the Ways and Means Committee voted 10-2 for the plan that would raise at least $2.1 billion for the 1992-93 budget period.

Committee Chairman James Hury, D-Galveston, said the proposal will be considered by the full House after the House adopts a budget bill, which is scheduled for debate Sunday.

Lawmakers are meeting in special session to write a state budget facing a projected $4.8 billion revenue shortfall to pay the cost of continuing current services.

The tax and fee bill would raise the state's gasoline tax by 8 cents; increase fees, such as the cost of a driver's license, and raise tuition at public colleges and universities from $20 per semester hour to $32 per hour over the next five years.

An 8-cent gasoline tax increase would produce $350 million over the next two years, and put the state levy at 23 cents per gallon, the highest of any of the 10 largest states in the nation. Of the increase, counties would get 2 cents and cities one cent, with the remaining nickel going to the state.

One of the most controversial aspects of the bill is the $1 billion reform of the state's primary business tax, called the corporation franchise tax.

Hury said his bill would expand the base of the franchise tax to include thousands of businesses that currently do not pay, such as partnerships and sole proprietorships. Small "Mom and Pop" businesses, however, would be exempt, he said.

Businesses would then pay the higher tax bill of either $4 per $1,000 of capital assets, or 4.5 percent of income, he said. The current franchise tax rate is $5.25 per $1,000 of capital.

The franchise tax has been under fire for years as an out-of-date levy because it hits capital-intensive industries the hardest, while much of the growing service sector escapes state taxes. Successful court challenges of the franchise tax have depleted billions of dollars from the state's treasury.

Hury said businesses are ready to accept an income tax. "Business understands ... you don't pay tax unless you make money, unlike the franchise tax that you pay regardless of whether you make money. I believe that business embraces the income identifier in the franchise tax."

Texas is one of the few states that does not levy either a business or personal income tax.

Hury's proposal has run into opposition from Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, who says corporations should pay higher taxes than unincorporated businesses because they have special privileges that protect their officers from debt and other corporate liabilities.

Hury said he expects his tax bill to be adjusted to reflect the cost of a budget that is adopted by the House, but he believes the basic tax concepts will hold.

On Sunday, the House will consider a $55 billion budget plan that would require about $1.3 billion in additional revenue.

Senate seeks major overhaul

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate voted Friday for a major overhaul of state agencies, approving a bill to create what the sponsor said would be a cabinet form of government.

This would give the governor authority that has been denied throughout much of Texas history: to hire and fire the chief administrators of a new, powerful regulatory agency and of the state's criminal justice system.

The bill would authorize a new Texas Department of Licensing and Regulation, and would consolidate, merge or abolish nearly 50 licensing and regulatory agencies.

But the fate of the bill, which was approved 31-0 by the Senate, is uncertain in the House, which is expected to reject Senate amendments and call for a conference committee to negotiate differences.

"We are miles apart, no question about it. We've basically gone with the cabinet form of government and the House has not," said Sen. Bob Glasgow, bill sponsor.

Glasgow, D-Stephenville, said, "It is going to be a difficult bill to work out, because there are so many issues in it and all the issues are fundamental changes.

"It is a major overhaul of state government."

Glasgow estimated the savings to the state at $8 million to $10 million over two fiscal years.

The governor would name the new department's executive director, who would make key appointments within the agency. An amendment to remove the governor's authority failed 21-10.

This would give the governor authority that has been denied throughout much of Texas history: to hire and fire the chief administrators of a new, powerful regulatory agency and of the state's criminal justice system.

"The governor pretty well would have control of that agency," Glasgow said.

An amendment to retain authority such as budgets and fees within separate licensing agencies was rejected 22-7, after Glasgow said the change "takes all the guts out of the bill."

Displeasure with the Public Utility Commission surfaced when the Senate sided with Sen. John Montford's amendment to merge the commission with the Railroad Commission, which regulates oil, gas and transportation.

A vote to kill the amendment failed 10-20, but Montford then withdrew the amendment, saying it would jeopardize chances of passing the bill.

"I think that there has got to be a better way to effect regulation of utilities, both from the standpoint of consumer interest as well as business interest" than the PUC, said Montford, D-Lubbock.

"There has got to be a better way than the type of acrimony that goes on over there all the time, and I think it will happen eventually," he said.

Under the bill, the Texas Board of Criminal Justice would be abolished in favor of an advisory board, with the governor appointing the executive director.

It provides for abolishing the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission, effective Sept. 1, 1993, after the Legislature has a chance in the 1993 regular session to review that agency.

Other functions, such as bingo regulation, would be transferred from TABC to the new department, effective Dec. 1, 1991.

The Senate removed a provision to transfer functions of the Animal Health Commission to the agriculture department.

The measure partially deregulates telephone cooperatives. An amendment to expand that to electric cooperatives failed 15-16.

Also rejected, 23-6, was amendment to place the State Bar of Texas, which regulates lawyers, under the new department.

Garland board bans flag

GARLAND, Texas (AP) — They'll still be whistling "Dixie" at South Garland High School, but they won't have a Confederate-like flag to wave around anymore.

The school board voted 6-1 Thursday to discontinue use of the controversial banner as a spirit symbol and to change the color of the colonel mascot's uniform from gray to the school's colors of blue and red.

The board, saying tradition prevented removal of all the symbols, voted to keep "Dixie" as the school's fight song.

South Garland is among a handful of Texas schools — including Midland's Lee High and Southwest High in Fort Worth — which have had controversy over the display of Southern symbols. Some parents and students have called the symbols racist.

The school board plan was a compromise developed by a multiracial committee of South Garland High School parents.

The group proposed forming a student committee to study the remaining symbols on campus, such as a Southern plantation mural in the school's cafeteria and a marble sign in front of the school designating South Garland as home of the Confederate Colonels.

About 20 people expressed opinions at Thursday's meeting. Some argued that the symbols represent school spirit, not racism. Others, like Leala Green, president of the Garland chapter of the NAACP, told the board that unless all Confederate symbols at the school are removed, "this issue will not be over."

But South Garland senior Gene Bailey made a last-minute pitch for saving the symbols.

"That has been our pride for many years," he told the board. "It's our responsibility, and we should have a say-so in what happens at that school."

G. Randall Clark cast the dissenting vote, saying an overwhelming number of his constituents opposed removing any of the symbols.

Unemployment rates rocket

Jay Jorden
Associated Press writer

DALLAS — A sharp rise in Texas' unemployment rate to 6.7 percent last month from 5.6 percent in June reflects younger workers hitting a job market that's slowly recovering from recession, the federal government said Friday.

The U.S. Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics said it may have understated the Texas' June job market, which was especially weak in manufacturing and financial sectors.

Nationwide, the jobless rate fell 0.2 percentage points from June's five-year high of 7 percent to 6.8 percent last month in seasonally adjusted figures, the bureau said.

Nic Santangelo, chief of economic analysis for the BLS' southwest office in Dallas, said almost 100,000 more job-seekers hit the Texas market last month, including many students and college graduates.

"We are still getting job losses in the manufacturing sector of the state's economy, and we continue to get job losses in the financial sector," he said. "In these two weak sectors, we will see more layoffs trickling into the data base. This will be an ongoing thing for several months."

They include 304 civilian job cuts announced Friday at Fort Bliss near El Paso and the U.S. Army Air Defense Artillery Center. Army officials said 173 of the workers will be offered other positions, with the rest facing layoff Oct. 6.

■ Conservatives urge mail-in campaign

AUSTIN — A group of conservative lawmakers is urging Texans who support budget cuts and oppose new taxes to mail images of people to the Capitol.

"This is a great way for the hard-working men and women of Texas to be seen and heard at the Capitol," said Rep. Talmadge Heflin, a Houston Republican who heads the Texas Conservative Coalition.

The images may be photographs, stick-figure drawings, paper dolls or cutouts, the group said Friday.

The coalition said it has a "People's Plan" that is aimed at limiting the budget to what Texans can pay, requiring a state audit of government to continue, and passing a stopgap, no-new-revenue budget until all possible cuts are made.

Lawmakers, in special session to write a state budget, are facing a $4.8 billion shortfall in the money needed to continue current services over the next two years.

■ Girl tells of having sex with border officer

SAN ANTONIO — A suspended U.S. Border Patrol agent accused of having sex with a 17-year-old Mexican girl he arrested at a checkpoint will face trial Monday in Del Rio.

U.S. District Judge Ed Prado rejected a defense motion that Jose Samuel Diaz was arrested illegally.

The judge ruled Thursday that other Border Patrol officers had reasonable suspicion of wrongdoing and acted properly on May 16 when they stopped Diaz' car near Batesville, about 100 miles southwest of San Antonio.

They found the girl in the car with Diaz, prosecutors say.

Diaz, 35, is charged with harboring an illegal alien, transporting an illegal alien, conspiracy to possess an illegally obtained alien registration card and receiving a bribe as a public official.

If convicted, Diaz faces up to 30 years in prison and up to $1 million in fines.

The girl testified at a pretrial hearing that she came to Eagle Pass from Mexico in a taxi and boarded a bus bound for Dallas with a woman who was a friend of her parents. She said she was going to Dallas where her parents and an invalid brother were living illegally.

She was arrested at a checkpoint outside Eagle Pass by Diaz, who drove her from the scene in a detention van. But instead of taking her to a holding area, the girl said, he took her to a trailer in a rural area.

"He told me if I decided to go back to Mexico alone and without money, there were a lot of evil young men in Piedras Negras and things might go bad for me," the girl said through an interpreter. "He was going to help me get money."

The girl testified that she had never had sex, but that she had sex that night with Diaz because "I was alone. I was scared."

She testified that he did not use force.

■ Coral reefs close to sanctuary designation

HOUSTON — The Flower Garden Banks — colorful and endangered coral reefs southeast of Galveston — are on their way to becoming a National Marine Sanctuary after nearly 20 years of struggle by conservationists.

Federal officials took a major step toward that goal this week with the release of the management plan and final environmental impact statement for the sanctuary.

Sanctuary designation for the Flower Gardens should become final around November, barring any new congressional concerns or other issues coming up in a final public comment period, said Annie Hillary, project manager for the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

NOAA officials do not expect any delays in the designation process, she said.

The Flower Gardens, about 115 miles from Galveston, are the northernmost coral reefs living in the Gulf of Mexico. Sanctuary status will provide federal protection for the fragile reefs from anchors, oil and gas activities, and other potential threats.

■ Teen says police beat him without cause

GALVESTON — Civil rights activist J. Don Boney says a Galveston teen-ager's claims that he was beaten by police reflect a trend of increasing violence among law enforcement officials.

Boney on Thursday threatened to file a complaint against the Galveston Police Department.

Frank Mathis-Young, 15, said he was parking a friend's car about 11 p.m. Monday when he was stopped by police.

"When I got out, they hit me and knocked me down," said Mathis-Young. "I was knocked out and when I came to, I was in the police station."

City Manager Douglas Matthews said he would investigate the youth's claims and that the district attorney would file charges if officers are suspected of undue violence.

Compiled from Reporter-Telegram wire services.

Witness recalls last words

ANDERSON, Texas (AP) — The ex-wife of a man accused of killing a Walker County deputy sheriff says the victim named the defendant as the murderer as the deputy lay dying.

Rebecca Wells Broussard gave the testimony Thursday in the murder trial of Donald Wayne Sullivan.

Sullivan is accused in the Jan. 26, 1990, death of deputy David Stallings, who was shot to death as he stood Ms. Broussard's kitchen.

Ms. Broussard said that as he lay dying from a bullet wound, Stallings told her, "Donnie did it."

Stallings died from a single bullet wound in the chest. The fatal shot came through a kitchen window and hit Stallings as he stood over a sink.

State places boy in custody

DALLAS (AP) — A 14-year-old Grand Prairie boy has been placed in state's custody for trying to kill his assistant principal.

The youngster was turned over Thursday to the Texas Youth Commission. A jury deliberated about four hours before rejecting an attorney's contention that the seventh-grader was insane on the morning of May 13 when he fired a pistol at Linda Lang, assistant principal of Andrew Jackson Middle School.

Mrs. Lang had told the youth, who had been in trouble before, that he would be sent to alternative school as a disciplinary measure.

Mrs. Lang wasn't injured. The boy, whose name is being withheld because he is a juvenile, surrendered after a three-hour standoff with police.

After three days of testimony in state District Judge Hal Gaither's court, jurors found the boy delinquent. Gaither sentenced the boy to the custody of the youth commission on the recommendation of the Dallas County Juvenile Probation Department.

Youth commission officials will decide how long the boy will be held. They could decide to hold him until he is 21.

Battle leaves 80 Croats dead, news agency says

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia (AP) — Fighting between government soldiers and Croatian militiamen guarding a Danube River town left more than 80 Croatian troops dead, the state news agency said Friday. The loss marked a major setback for the breakaway republic.

Dalj, a town of 7,500 on Croatia's frontier with the rival republic of Serbia, was under the control of the Yugoslav army and Serbian militias Friday. There was no immediate confirmation of the death toll figure given by the Tanjug agency, but Croatia said it feared heavy casualties from Thursday's fighting. Belgrade TV said eight or nine Serbs died in the battle.

Meanwhile, foreign ministers from three European Community nations arrived Friday in the Croatian capital, Zagreb, in a new effort to find a negotiated solution to the crisis.

Croatian President Franjo Tudjman, who has been pressed by hard-liners for a tougher miltiary response to recoup Croatian losses, welcomed the EC team.

"I think that the presence of the troika here may bring the war to a halt ... and thus create the preconditions for the resolution of the crisis," Tudjman told a news conference.

Croatia has been pressing for an EC peacekeeping force in Croatia, but Dutch Foreign Minister Hans van den Broek said a cease-fire was needed before the EC could expand its mandate to Croatia from neighboring Slovenia.

Portugal's foreign minister, Joao de Deus Pinheiro, told Portugal's TSF radio that Serbia was unwilling to go along with the EC's peace plans.

The Yugoslav federal presidency also met in Belgrade to try to find a way to calm weeks of fighting between Croats and ethnic Serbian militants that has killed scores of people since Croatia and Slovenia declared independence on June 25.

Ethnic Serbs, who make make up 12 percent of Croatia's population of 5 million, claim they are discriminated against and want their own rule or to join Serbia.

Croatia accuses the Yugoslav army, with its Serb-dominated officer corps, of helping the militias of Croatia's ethnic Serb minority. The army says it acts only to separate the two sides, but it seems mostly to be aiding the Serbs.

In a brief report from Dalj, Tanjug said dozens of corpses were still lying on the streets and in a downtown police station that was shelled Thursday by the federal army.

TV footage shown in Belgrade today included film of the partially burned-out police station. The building's windows and walls were riddled with bullet holes.

A toll of 80 dead would make the fighting in Dalj one of the bloodiest battles yet in the violence that has cost scores of lives in Croatia.

Tudjman said that 20 police officers were known dead, and that the fate of 45 others was unknown.

A military statement said federal troops were called into Dalj to set up a buffer zone between Serbs and Croats, and were fired upon by Croat forces. The army "responded adequately," the statment said. There were no casualties among the federal soldiers.

Croatia and Slovenia declared independence claiming that Serbia was intent on dominating the federation and keeping it socialist. Serbia and Croatia, Yugoslavia's two largest republics, are traditional rivals.

Many ethnic Serbs in Croatia are haunted by the mass killings of Serbs by a Nazi puppet regime in Croatia in World War II.

At midday Friday, sniper fire broke out in the village of Sarvas, six miles west of Dalj, with Croatian militiamen answering the fire. At least one elderly woman was killed.

The sniper attack, witnessed by an Associated Press photographer, indicated the Serbs were pushing west toward Osijek, a Croatian stronghold in the Slavonia region.

Croatian officials said Friday their troops had reclaimed control of the strategic town of Kostajnica, which guards a key road junction in the ethnically mixed Banija region.

'I think that the presence of the troika here may bring the war to a halt ...'

— Croatian President Franjo Tudjman

Three Soviet leaders to sign treaty

MOSCOW (AP) — President Mikhail S. Gorbachev announced Friday that leaders of three Soviet republics, including his rival Boris Yeltsin of Russia, will sign a long-sought Union Treaty this month.

In a speech broadcast unexpectedly at the beginning of the nightly national newscast "Vremya," Gorbachev announced that his proposed treaty will be "opened for signing on Aug. 20."

He said Russia, Kazakhstan and Uzbekistan had agreed to sign on that date.

The treaty, which replaces the 1922 document that founded the Soviet Union, will transform the country into a loose federation and give more power to the republics, including control over most industrial and natural resources.

Gorbachev said he sent letters Friday to leaders of six other republics asking them also to sign the treaty. The nine republics already had agreed in April to work toward concluding the treaty.

Five other republics — the three Baltic nations, Moldavia and Georgia — have refused to sign the treaty. A sixth, Armenia, was wavering.

"Now we are entering the decisive stage of turning our multi-national state into a democratic federation of equal sovereign republics," Gorbachev said.

"It is the fulfilment of the peoples' will, which they expressed on March 17 in the all-union referendum," he said.

That referendum asked voters if they wanted to join a renewed federation.

Gorbachev called the treaty a "voluntary unification of sovereign states ... that can freely develop their culture, language and traditions."

He said violence such as the shooting this week of eight Lithuanian border officers resulted from differences over the union issue.

"I am convinced that by signing the Union Treaty, the main reasons will be eliminated that have led to such abnormal situations," Gorbachev said.

The president said the treaty will delegate defense and security matters to the Kremlin while giving republics greater economic self-rule.

It "provides for the preservation and development of the all-union market with one currency, financing and credit, customs regulations and also the principles of social protection."

Gorbachev this week resolved a tax dispute that was holding up the treaty. Each republic would be allowed to levy their own taxes and then allocate money to the central government for programs such as defense.

Some Kuwaitis rejoice, others mourn

N.Y. Times News Service

KUWAIT CITY — Kuwaitis marked the anniversary of the Iraqi invasion of their country with ambivalence Friday. Some waved flags and honked horns, while others held special prayers in mosques and visited the graves of those killed by Iraqi soldiers and police.

Moments after midnight Thursday, gunfire rippled throughout the city and cries of "God is great!" resounded from the rooftops. The demonstration echoed the protests held on the second day of each month by those who remained behind in Kuwait during the Iraqi occupation.

Young men waved flags from cars as they sped up and down the highway that runs along the seafront. But many Kuwaitis, especially those touched directly by the war, have a hard time feeling jubilant.

Outside a graceful white marble Shiite Muslim center in the Salwa neighborhood, men and women gathered for prayers in the afternoon and passed by murals with the photographs of some of the 350 Kuwaitis who lost their lives during the occupation.

Halema Ali, 50, a woman who lost three sons, wept quietly in front of the picture of her son Ibrahim, who was 26 when he was seized. All of her children were active in the opposition to Baghdad, and all were picked up by Iraqi secret police on Sept. 10.

The bodies of two of her sons turned up in a hospital morgue in October. The third son is still missing.

"I remember when the Iraqi soldiers came to the house to take him," she said, gently running her fingertips across the photo of her son. "I feel like all my children want to return to me."

Many Kuwaitis who spent the war in the discos of Cairo or the hotels of Saudi Arabia led groups of revelers Thursday night. But they were treated with quiet disdain by many of those who had stayed behind during the occupation.

"The people who left the country have a reason to celebrate," said Suja Khamseen, 19, a student who remained after the invasion. "They became richer and saw many places while they were away. We who stayed are more somber. For us, Aug. 2 marks the time we lost our children, our families and our country. Some people in Kuwait do not know what patriotic duty means."

Volunteers placed yellow ribbons on lampposts around the city in memory of the estimated 2,000 Kuwaitis and Kuwaiti residents who are still missing. In the Sulaibikhat Cemetery, red flags were placed over the graves of people killed by Iraqis. All of the dead have been declared martyrs.

"This is the day we remember Ahmed," said Amiro Nazrallah, 19, who was wearing a small pin with the face of her friend Ahmed Mahmoud on it. "We know nothing of happiness today. We cannot be happy until Saddam Hussein is dead."

The demonstrations were sometimes tinged with hatred. Crowds wiped their feet on Iraqi flags and then set the banners aflame in the Arabic Club, which holds one of the city's largest soccer stadiums.

Others, wearing black, lighted candles in the evening darkness for the missing and the dead.

"We do this to commemorate Black August," said Najat Sultan, who runs an art gallery.

An exhibit was set up in a school to display items made by Kuwaitis while in captivity. Among the objects were crude hats made out of blankets and identification bracelets bearing names and blood types. Some of the 11,000 prisoners fashioned the bracelets from the handles of metal drinking cups when the allied bombing campaign against Iraq began.

A few Kuwaitis managed to free themselves from the tense emotions of the day and gingerly picked their way through the mine-infested beach front to the emerald green water of the Persian Gulf.

Most Iraqis would rather forget invasion

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — There were no parades Friday to mark Iraq's short-lived conquest of Kuwait.

There was nothing to celebrate. The "19th province" is only a memory on the invasion anniversary — a day most Iraqis would prefer to forget.

Official recognition of the date appeared only in government-run newspapers, which carried columns saying the attack was justified and repeating the official line that Iraq was the victim of an American-Zionist conspiracy to retard Arab development.

For the average Iraqi, it was a time only to reflect on what might have been — if there had been no invasion or if a peaceful solution had extracted their country from the crisis with its pride intact.

"We just want to forget," said Taled Abbas, who lost his import-export business and is now driving a taxi. "If we are left alone, if the embargo is lifted, we can live a normal life again."

The most pressing daily concern is the year-old economic embargo strangling Iraq's economy.

"There's no food. No jobs," said Jamal Hamid, who is married and has three small children.

A year ago, loudspeakers blared news of the invasion, saying that Iraq had reclaimed a land long considered to have historically belonged to it.

Many people were shocked, and worried about the consequences. But plenty were in a celebratory mood, said Abdel-Kareem Jassim, a storekeeper.

"Iraq was led to this, to go into Kuwait, because of the economic situation," he said.

He said Iraq had only its oil to repay a tremendous debt from the 1980-1988 Iran-Iraq war, yet the Kuwaitis and other gulf nations "flooded the market with oil."

The storekeeper said most Iraqis anticipated the reaction from the West, although they did not believe it would lead to war.

Even then, he said, a united Arab response would have helped.

"To be honest, if people were on our side in a correct way, maybe we would have won," he said.

Stores have plenty of merchandise but there is little money to buy. Inflation is estimated at 300 percent since the Gulf War.

"Of course, things were better before Iraq went into Kuwait," said Madeleine Mikhail.

"We are suffering. The Iraqis are suffering because of the sanctions. The war was worse," she said.

The government of Saddam Hussein has acknowledged that some "mistakes" were made in the handling of the Kuwait issue. But officials won't get more specific than that.

Government-run newspapers featured articles Friday outlining events leading up to the invasion and saying Iraq was forced to act because peaceful attempts to solve its problems with Kuwait were spurned.

"The aggressive (international sanctions) on Iraq after Aug. 2 and the military aggression has proved to be directed against Iraq not because of the Kuwait affair, because it continues after retreat from Kuwait," the Baath party newspaper Al-Thawra said.

Many Iraqis, including the most educated, believe that the way the Kuwaitis ignored Saddam's military threat indicated they had been promised by the United States that nothing would happen.

The Iraqis seem now to simply want the embargo to end and to let the Kuwait chapter pass.

Agnes Bashir, a concert pianist and composer, was in Cyprus a year ago preparing for a performance tour in Italy when she heard the news of the invasion.

"At first I couldn't believe it. I was shocked," she said.

"I've lived in this country for 20 years and I just want things to get back to the way they were," said Mrs. Bashir, a Soviet Union native.

"Iraq has so much potential, and it's not just the oil," she said. "The people are better than the oil."

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — A senior Cambodian official has told U.S. investigators that a photograph American families of missing servicemen say shows their loved ones in capitivity is a fake, Cambodia said Friday.

Deputy Foreign Minister Long Visalo also said no American prisoners are being held in Cambodia and pledged his country would continue to try to resolve the issue, said Cambodia's official SPK agency, monitored in Bangkok.

The U.S. investigators arrived Wednesday in the Cambodian capital of Phnom Penh. It was the first time since the Indochina War ended in 1975 that Americans were allowed back into Cambodia to seach for missing servicemen.

The experts asked Cambodian officials about the highly publicized photograph, which at least five families of American servicemen missing in action from the Indochina War claim shows their loved ones.

The SPK report said Long Visalo told the investigators that "there is no possibility of any American prisoner of war still living in the state of Cambodia."

He was also quoted as saying the photograph "was made up by someone to serve their own interest."

The Pentagon and Vietnamese officials have also said they believe the photo was fabricated.

The photograph was released by a private U.S. lobbying group and shows three men in a wooded setting holding a cryptic sign.

Sources in Thailand have said the photograph was smuggled out of Cambodia last year and passed through a Cambodian fabricator of MIA information.

The Vietnamese government said the photograph was a fabrication. Senior U.S. officials also cast doubt on its authencity.

A total of 2,273 Americans are listed as missing in action, or MIA, most of them in Vietnam.

The United States and Vietnam are conducting their 14th joint field investigation on MIAs, including excavation of a warplane crash site.

OPEC continues high output

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — A year after Iraq invaded Kuwait, the OPEC cartel continues to maintain a high level of crude output offsetting the loss of the two producers' oil from the market, according to estimates released Friday.

The strong production by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries has raised concern about too much oil on the market later in the year, when Iraq and Kuwait resume sales.

Indonesian Oil Minister Ginandjar Kartasasmita said in Jakarta that the producing nations should consider cutbacks to lift prices to the group's target of $21 a barrel.

The average price of crudes monitored by the 13-nation cartel was $18.51 a barrel at the end of July, about the same as a year ago when Iraq overran Kuwait, causing turmoil in the market.

In its Monthly Oil Market Report, the International Energy Agency estimated the cartel pumped 23.1 million barrels of oil a day in July, well over OPEC's ceiling of 22.3 million barrels a day.

Iraq, once one of OPEC's leaders, pumped a mere 300,000 barrels of oil a day last month, according to the energy agency. Before the invasion, its output was about 3 million barrels daily.

Kuwait produced about 100,000 barrels a day last month, well off the 2 million barrels it supplied before the invasion.

Soviet oil exports fall by 50 percent

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet oil exports fell by 50 percent and export of all Soviet goods dropped 23 percent in the first half of 1991 compared with the same period last year, the government has reported.

Exports of oil-based products likewise dropped by 52 percent, according to figures of Goskomstat, the Soviet bureau of statistics. The figures appeared in the weekly newspaper Economy and Life.

"This mostly reflects the sorry state of our oil industry," said Lilya Priyanishnikova, acting research director for Soyuzneftexport, the Soviet oil export ministry, in an interivew Friday. "The industry urgently needs to modernize its equipment to extract more oil."

The magazine did not release production figures. The Soviet Union in the mid-1980s was described as the world's largest oil producer.

Cuba and former Soviet allies in Eastern Europe, heavily reliant on Soviet oil exports, have been hurt by the Kremlin's decision this year to begin demanding payment at world prices, instead of the subsidized rate granted for decades.

Town fears economic problems with U.S. pullout

■ German town tries to calculate what a loss of American troops would mean to its economy.

Associated Press

GIESSEN, Germany — Mayor Manfred Mutz is trying to calculate the costs to his city of an American troop pullout. Edith Esser fears her Texas-Grill won't make it without U.S. servicemen's great-as-all-outdoors appetites.

Since the end of World War II, American troops have been stationed at Giessen and in many other German communities. Now many are going home.

"Naturally, it's good if the world will be peaceful and the military will be reduced more and more. On the other hand, we have problems," said Folkert Sauer, an assistant to the mayor responsible for dealing with the implications to the city of a post-Cold War era.

Anxious city officials complain they can't deal with the economic affects of a U.S. military pullout until they know how many troops are leaving.

"We must get a plan — how many people will be withdrawn, how many people will remain — with which we can work," Mutz said. "We urgently need an overview to help the affected civilians and to overcome the negative economic effects."

Giessen, a city of 80,000 about 30 miles north of Frankfurt, is home to about 4,000 U.S. soldiers. About 3,000 German civilians are employed by the Army and the Army and Air Force Exchange System, the military's consumer goods supply system.

Some U.S. troop reductions at Giessen already have been announced. But on Tuesday, the Pentagon said the Army's Pendleton Barracks here also would be reduced. Pendleton has 785 soldiers, mostly in support units, backed by more than 400 civilian employees, about 90 of them Germans, according to Army figures.

Col. James W. Becker, deputy commander of the Giessen military community, said he doesn't know yet how many soldiers and civilians will be pulled out.

Mutz has asked to meet with the U.S. Army command in Germany to try to get a better idea of future reductions so he can try to plan for them.

Meanwhile, city planners grumble that they are being given only piecemeal information.

Other military cutbacks announced in Washington on Tuesday targeted Tempelhof airport and units in Nuremberg, Frankfurt, Goeppingen and Heilbronn. By the mid 1990s, the Pentagon hopes to reduce by half the more than 300,000 U.S. troops in Europe, most of whom are in Germany.

The economic effect of a troop reduction "is naturally problematic," Mutz said. New companies must be attracted to the area and new jobs found for those left unemployed by U.S. cutbacks. "There will be a destabilizing effect," he added.

Among the economic sectors directly affected by the U.S. military presence are the construction and service industries.

In addition, 10 percent of property in Giessen is used by either U.S. or German forces, according to Sauer, the mayor's assistant.

City officials say they are also having problems getting the German military to disclose how many German troops will be pulled out in connection with unification. Mutz said the city would lose 600 to 700 civilian jobs when that pullout is completed by 1994.

Meanwhile, the Texas-Grill across from Pendleton Barracks is still enjoying a brisk business. But Mrs. Esser wonders how long that will last.

American soldiers account for about 75 percent of the nighttime trade at the snack stands she and her husband own. The Americans have hearty appetites, she notes, smiling.

If they go, "that means we'll have a lot less turnover, a lot less," Mrs. Esser said. "We hope not too many Americans will go."

Mutz said he takes little comfort in the fact that the U.S. troop cutbacks announced so far have been limited.

"We believe that in the long term there will be no more army here," he said.

WORLD in brief

■ Plutonium plan OK'd

TOKYO — Japan's Atomic Energy Commission approved a plan Friday to boost the use of plutonium and rely less on uranium for nuclear power generation.

The move goes against a worldwide trend. France is delaying development of its second fast breeder reactor, which uses plutonium instead of uranium, and Germany is dropping its plan to build one.

The use of plutonium has been discouraged in some nations because it is more highly toxic and radioactive than uranium, and there are fears that small amounts of it could be stolen by terrorists while the material is in storage and or being shipped.

In Japan, 80-90 tons of plutonium will be used by the year 2010 by some 12 light-water type reactors now operating on uranium and by a fast breeder reactor being tested in western Japan, the Atomic Energy Commission said.

The commission estimated that Japan will have a supply of about 85 tons of plutonium by 2010.

■ Name change sought

ANKARA, Turkey — Tired of seeing their country roasted in the English-language press, some Turks are pushing to change its English-language name to Turkiye.

Every time the long-discarded fez, the black tasseled red headgear of Ottoman times, is put on the head of the bird depicting Turkey in political cartoons, the country is outraged.

Association with the West was important for Kemal Ataturk and his group of reformers when they founded the republic, so he opted for the name of Turkiye in the Turkish language instead of the Eastern-sounding Turkistan. In English, the country became Turkey.

Drawn to a campaign started by the leading Turkish newspaper Hurriyet some news agencies and ministries have started using Turkiye in their English-language publications.

The Foreign Ministry, however, says it has no plans to change the country's name.

■ Defamers to be hung

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan — The conservative Islamic government has decided to make death by hanging mandatory for anyone who defames the Prophet Mohammed, the state-run news agency reported Friday.

A person convicted of blasphemy previously had a choice of death or life imprisonment.

According to the official Associated Press of Pakistan, the government voted to amend the country's penal code.

The decision brings the penal code in line with Islamic law.

That legislation fulfilled Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif's election promise to small but powerful Islamic religious parties that are crucial to his 6-month-old coalition government.

■ Gypsies assemble

OSWIECIM, Poland — Gypsies from several countries gathered Friday at Auschwitz to remember 20,000 of their number killed at the Nazi German death camp during World War II, PAP news agency said.

It said the 100 Gypsies included representatives of the United States, Belgium, France, Germany, Israel and Poland, who assembled for a vigil and prayer meeting lasting through Sunday.

The meeting coincides with the 47th anniversary of Nazi leader Heinrich Himmler's Aug. 1, 1944, order to murder Gypsies held at Birkenau, just outside Auschwitz.

Nazi ideology considered Gypsies a defective race and attempted to eradicate them from Europe. An estimated 500,000 were killed in labor camps and gas chambers.

Lee football

The first signs of high school football season will come out next week.

All Midland Lee players will be fitted for shoes and helmets on Wednesday, while players who do not get a physical examination from a family doctor may get a physical for $10 at the Lee fieldhouse next Saturday, when exams will be conducted from 8 a.m. to noon.

The Rebels are beginning a week earlier than usual after foregoing spring training because of a multitude of injuries. Beginning Aug. 12, Lee will have two weeks of August two-a-days as opposed to the one week it has had in the past.

Texas Dome?

IRVING (AP) — It won't be worth the expense to dome Texas Stadium unless the facility can attract events, and alcohol sales will make that task easier, some officials say.

Dallas Cowboys owner Jerry Jones and Irving Mayor Roy Brown said they intend to begin talks this month about building a dome on Texas Stadium. Brown said Irving's participation depends on whether city residents vote Aug. 10 to rescind the ban on beer and wine sales at the stadium.

Chargers offer practice time

Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — The Houston Oilers and San Diego Chargers will bang heads in an exhibition game tonight, then take notes on each other.

Going by the theory that opposites attract, the run-and-shoot Oilers will remain in San Diego and practice with the run-oriented Chargers twice a day on Monday and Tuesday before returning to their camp in San Antonio.

"Once we realized they were on the schedule, we arranged to have them stay over for a couple of reasons," Chargers coach Dan Henning said. "No. 1, they don't get enough work against the run for their defense in their practices. And we don't get enough work against a wide-open, first-down passing attack like they have for our defense."

Aikman to play most of first half in new Cowboy passing offense

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The Dallas Cowboys were eliminated from the playoffs last year on the last day of the regular season. The Kansas City Chiefs were eliminated on the first day of the playoffs.

The Cowboys' 7-9 mark under Jimmy Johnson and the 11-5 log of Marty Schottenheimer's Chiefs represented rapid progress by both teams. But will they be able this year to take that next difficult step up the NFL hierarchy?

At least a partial answer to that question may be learned tonight when the Chiefs and Cowboys open their exhibition season with a 7 p.m. kickoff.

For Dallas fans, it will be their first glimpse of their new-look passing game under first-year offensive coordinator Norv Turner.

But Dallas quarterback Troy Aikman was expected to play most of the first half. Hired from the Los Angeles Rams, Turner is putting in a short passing game that will feature the receivers much more than last year's Dallas offense.

Chiefs' holdouts also include running backs Barry Word and Harvey Williams, the first-round draft choice who is waiting to join an already crowded stable that includes Christian Okoye and veteran Stump Mitchell. Steve Pelluer, who was throwing on target in a scrimmage

Three share lead

■ Arthur Brown, Steve Whiteside and Benton Spradlin are tied after the first round of the Men's City Golf Championship.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

Year in and year out, Arthur Brown plays two or three rounds of golf a week at Hogan Park Golf Course. Finally, all that time on the course appears to be paying dividends.

Brown, Steve Whiteside and Benton Spradlin share the lead in the championship flight of the Midland Men's City Golf Championship after first round action.

The three each carded 3-under par, 68s on Hogan's 10th-27th holes Friday.

Mark Gonzalez, with a 69, is one shot off the pace; eight others are within four shots of the three at the top.

"I've always had two good rounds (in the city championship), and one that shoots me right out of the saddle," Brown said of the not-so-good luck that has followed him in the four previous years he has played in the tournament. "I'm the only one (of the co-leaders) who plays out of Hogan Park on a year-round basis. So hopefully, local knowledge will say something."

Brown had six birdies — four on the front nine — and three bogeys. A chip in from 15 feet for par on No. 11, though, got Brown "off and running."

The three bogeys he experienced on the back nine were a result of "just losing momentum and making bad choices."

Brown's previous best in the city championship was a fourth place finish. In the net division, Brown has finished as high as second on two occasions.

"I'll have to have another round like today," he said. "The course is in good shape and there's no reason to

Angels down Shreveport

Staff Report

SHREVEPORT, La. — John Pawlowski won in his first start of the season for Midland, leading the Angels to a 3-1 win over the East Division-leading Shreveport Captains.

The Angels and El Paso, both with 19-19 records, are tied for second place in the West, one game behind San Antonio. Wichita, in fourth place, is two games out. Tulsa defeated El Paso 9-5, San Antonio knocked off Jackson 9-8, and Wichita defeated Arkansas 7-6 in other Friday games.

The Angels won the Shreveport series 3-2, and completed their final east swing of the season with a 4-6 record. Midland finished the season series with Jackson, Shreveport, Tulsa and Arkansas having won 25 of 40. The remaining 30 games of the '91 season are against Western Division teams.

Mark Howie homered for the Angels, his 15th of the season, and Tim Salmon escaped a run-down to score on what was ruled a steal of home plate. The Angels' other run of the game came when Damion Easley singled, stole second and eventually came in on a Don Barbara single.

Pawlowski improved his record to 1-2 with the win; Doug Robertson picked up his sixth save of the year. Johnny Ard fell to 5-2 on the year, both of his losses coming against the Angels.

The Angels return home tonight for a brief five game homestand against Wichita.

Crane's Walker makes Denver roster bid

■ West Texan Kenny Walker battles deafness to become a possible starter for the NFL Broncos.

Associated Press

GREELEY, Colo. — Like any other NFL rookie, Kenny Walker is overwhelmed in these early days of training camp — by the voluminous playbook, the foreign techniques and terminologies, the energy-sapping two-a-days.

But Walker is not like any other rookie, or any other NFL player.

Set apart by his deafness, he faces dual hurdles. He must not only prove he has the talent to make it as an NFL defensive lineman, but he also has to prove he can overcome the obvious communications gap.

Three weeks into camp, he appears to be clearing both.

Denver Broncos defensive line coach Ernie Stautner speaks of the former Crane High School star as a potential starter, not just a player who is likely to make the final cut.

"He's doing very well," Stautner said. "He has the capability of eventually becoming a starter for us."

And Walker is now being considered as an every-down lineman, not just the pass-rushing specialist the Broncos labeled him when they drafted him in the eighth round out of Nebraska.

"We originally projected him as a specialist, thinking the difficulty of giving him signals might limit him," Stautner said. "But we're looking at him playing full-time now. With his improved communication, it's possible he'll be a regular player for us."

But Walker is having none of that.

"I need work on mental concentration," he said through his interpreter, Guy Smith. "That's the biggest thing I need. I have to memorize more.

"The communication is improving, but it still takes some getting used to.

"The football part is a lot better. I need to get in a little better shape, though."

His quickness has always made Walker a threat as a pass-rusher. To be a more complete pro player, he knew he needed more bulk to handle the running game, and he put on 30 solid pounds since last winter. Now a 6-foot-3, 260-pounder, he is no longer undersized.

The Walker Experiment is not without glitches.

During practice, Stautner says he has to remember he can't simply yell instructions at Walker. He has to get Walker's attention and be sure Walker can read his lips. "I have to speak a little slower," the assistant coach said, "and be sure I use my lips when I enunciate my words."

Smith is Walker's constant companion during practices and team meetings and on the sidelines during games, but even Smith's presence can't solve every difficulty.

"Sometimes they make two or three different defensive calls at the same time," Walker said through Smith. "With all the audibles, it gets pretty confusing, and sometimes I miss a call. I still haven't figured out whether it's more helpful to look to the coaches on the sideline or to my teammates in the huddle.

"In practice, it goes OK most of the time. But during a game, they're in a hurry and it's a lot harder."

Walker says communicating with his teammates in a social setting also can be difficult.

"Sometimes when I speak it's not clear enough," he said, "and I may have to find another word because they can't understand me."

But his teammates say Walker's talent is worth the accommodation.

"His deafness will always be an obstacle," linebacker Karl Mecklenburg said, "but it can be overcome."

Mecklenburg noted that in the case of audibles, a linebacker will sometimes have to tap Walker to move him a few steps, "but we sometimes have to do that with the rookies who can hear, too."

And, as Stautner notes, "Most of the time he knows when to move anyway. He's a real smart kid."

Detroit quarterback Andre Ware is brought down from behind by Cincinnati's Jason Buck in Friday's preseason game.

Ware shakey, but Lions win 24-20

Associated Press

NFL Preseason

PONTIAC, Mich. — Andre Ware and rookie Cedric Jackson ran for second-quarter touchdowns to lead the Detroit Lions to their sixth straight exhibition win, 24-20, over the Cincinnati Bengals on Friday night.

Ware's 11-yard keeper tied it at 10, and Jackson's 15-yard run put Detroit ahead for good 2:52 before halftime.

Ware, the 1989 Heisman Trophy winner, completed just 7 of 21 passes for 82 yards and fumbled once in place of Rodney Peete, who injured his groin in last week's Hall of Fame game victory against Denver.

Jackson, an eighth-round pick out of Texas Christian, carried 16 times for 73 yards.

Detroit's last exhibition loss came in the final game of 1989, 24-14 to the Los Angeles Rams.

Boomer Esiason started at quarterback in the Bengals exhibition opener and played one quarter.

He gave way to Donald Hollas after hitting six of 11 passes for 58 yards and a touchdown as Cincinnati led 10-3 after one quarter.

Cincinnati strong safety David Fulcher left the game in a wheelchair after sustaining a hip pointer on the last play of the first quarter. He did not return.

Detroit's first-round draft pick, reciever Herman Moore, left with a shoulder injury in the foruth quarter, but x-rays were negative.

James Wilder, starting for All-Pro holdout Barry Sanders, carried four straight times for 30 yards on Detroit's first touchdown drive before Ware's run tied it.

Seven minutes later Detroit's All-Pro nose tackle Jerry Ball forced a fumble by Harold Green, which was recovered for the Lions by Dennis Gibson.

Jenkins had all 26 yards on the scoring drive, covering the final 15 on a draw.

The Lions led 3-0 after Mel Gray returned the opening kickoff 54 yards to the Cincinnati 40.

Eight plays later, Eddie Murray hit a 40-yard field goal.

Led by Esiason, the Bengals opened in their no-huddle offense.

Esiason then hit Eddie Brown with a 7-yard touchdown pass.

The teams traded fourth-quarter touchdowns. Rookie Don Overton made it 24-13 for Detroit with a 1-yard run and then Erik Wilhelm threw a 6-yard touchdown pass to Kendal Smith.

Broncos 10, Colts 3

DENVER — Gaston Green ran for 84 yards, including a 43-yard TD, in barely more than one quarter of action to spark the Denver Broncos to a soggy preseason victory over the Indianapolis Colts.

The Broncos squared their preseason record at 1-1; it was the Colts' opener.

Seventeen seconds later, Eric Dickerson fumbled the ball away at the Colt 28-yard line, and Green carried four straight times for 23 yards to set up David Treadwell's 19-yard field goal.

Green had 81 of his yards in the first quarter alone.

A downpour throughout the first half contributed to three fumbles, including one by Denver punt returner Ricky Nattiel which was recovered by Indianapolis at the Colts' 39. Jeff George drove the Colts to the Denver 23, where Dean Biasucci's 41-yard field-goal attempt was blocked by Charles Dimry as the half ended.

Despite drier conditions in the second half, the only score was Biasucci's 35-yard field goal with 42 seconds left. Jack Trudeau completed an 18-yard pass to running back Anthony Johnson and a 15-yarder to Ken Clark to highlight the 61-yard drive.

After Biasucci's field goal, the Colts recovered an onside kick, setting up a desperation drive which ended when Trudeau's pass into the end zone was batted away.

Indianapolis blew another scoring chance early in the fourth quarter when, after reaching the Denver 1, Brian Lattimore fumbled and Denver's Alton Montgomery recovered.

COWBOYS: Pelluer could play plenty for Kansas City against Minnesota this week, will start and Mark Vlasic will play the second half.

(From 1B)

Mike Elkins will get his turn next week against the Jets in St. Louis. Pelluer hit four of five passes for 60 yards and an 8-yard touchdown run in a scrimmage against Minnesota on Wednesday.

"The Vikings had a good pass rush," said Pelluer, a former Cowboy. "So it was difficult. I only felt pressure once, though."

Veteran linemen might see more than the usual amount of action for a preseason game, Schottenheimer said.

"Some .. .might see a quarter-and-a-half, maybe even the entire half," he said. " Among running backs, we've got a lot of people to look at, so I don't know that any of them will play a great deal. Certainly not a guy like Christian (Okoye), though he'll probably get more preseason carries than he did a year ago."

Chiefs who won't play include wide receiver Robb Thomas, sprained knee; free safety Charles Washington, bruised thigh; guard David Szott, sore ankle; running back Troy Stradford, hairline arm fracture; linebacker Marc Munford, broken ankle; and wide receivers Lew Barnes, knee and Dwight Pickens, arm.

Crooked Stick not blamed for high water use

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Tests to determine why water well levels have dropped sharply near the Crooked Stick Golf Club point to general water use in the area, a state geologist said Friday.

Mark Basch, an Indiana Department of Natural Resources engineering geologist, also said he hopes an investigation into the well problem will be completed before the PGA Championship gets underway at Crooked Stick on Thursday.

Some homeowners near the course in the Indianapolis suburb of Carmel have asked the state to determine why some well levels in the area have declined.

"We've seen a pretty substantial lowering of levels, not just around the golf course, but a couple-square-mile area. We certainly don't believe Crooked Stick has the capability in terms of water withdrawal to impact that large an area," Basch said.

So far, tests indicate the drop in levels appears to be due to general water use in an increasingly developed area, rather than one particular culprit, he said.

"There's a significant amount of development and domestic use. We're seeing some impact due to that," he said.

Officials are awaiting results from a test in which one of the wells on the golf course was pumped for five hours while water levels throughout the area were monitored.

"We currently don't believe the golf course has caused the effects up there like we see," he said. "People a mile and a half away are calling with well failures," Basch said.

It appears the falling well levels result from a combination of factors, including the development in the area, part of the Indianapolis area's booming north side.

"There is a significant amount of water use up there by the residents. A lot of them heat and cool with water, with geothermal systems. There's lawn irrigation and normal water use and significant development," he said.

The problem is not unique to the area.

OILERS: Chargers use three-tight end offense season games on the road, the Chargers will play host to the run-and-shoot Atlanta Falcons on Sept. 15. Henning said he also hopes to gain an edge on AFC West rival Seattle, which runs some four-wide receiver patterns.

"This game and those two days of practice will give us three good days of run-and-shoot we couldn't manufacture in practice if we tried," Henning said. "And as far as Houston is concerned, it will give them three days against a tight end-oriented running game that they couldn't manufacture. I don't think they even have a tight end in camp."

"Their three-tight end offense is something we will face 11 times out of the 16 games we play," Pardee said. "Having the run-and-shoot here, we don't have a natural offense you have to practice against. Often times it is a lineman or even a wide receiver as a tight end for the scout offense.

"The work that we can get in against these guys is invaluable."

San Diego's Marion Butts, who gained a team-record 1,225 yards last year, continues to hold out. Rod Bernstine, who was second with 589 yards, has moved into Butts' place. This will be the debut of running back Eric Bieniemy, whom the Chargers drafted in the second round.

The Chargers have a number of defensive liabilities.

End Burt Grossman has a strained left knee and won't play. Without Grossman, the Chargers will be missing both of their projected starting defensive ends. Lee Williams, a two-time Pro Bowl starter, is holding out and has asked to be traded.

Free safety Stanley Richard, the Chargers' No. 1 draft pick, still hasn't signed. He's expected to hold contract talks with general manager Bobby Beathard on Saturday.

Anthony Shelton, who has replaced Richard as the projected starting free safety, has a bruised thigh and won't play. Cornerback Sam Seale will be withheld because of off-season shoulder surgery. Seale has yet to practice at full speed.

Additionally, wide receiver Anthony Miller, who led the Chargers with 63 catches for 933 yards last season, and projected starting left guard Mike Zandofsky, will sit out with injuries.

Rangers belittle Brewers

Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — Brian Bohanon got his first major-league victory and reliever Mike Jeffcoat became the first American League pitcher to drive in a run since the designated hitter rule went into effect in 1973 as the Texas Rangers trounced the Milwaukee Brewers 15-1 Friday night.

AL

Rafael Palmeiro drove in four runs with a solo homer and two doubles. Kevin Reimer and Steve Buechele also homered for Texas, which ended a three-game losing streak.

Jeffcoat hit an RBI double during a three-run ninth inning. He came to bat for the first time in his career after DH Geno Petralli went into the game at third base.

Ferguson Jenkins, also of the Rangers, was the last AL pitcher to get a hit, on Oct. 2, 1974. Boston pitcher Tim Lollar got a pinch hit in 1986.

Not since the DH rule had a pitcher hit a double. Rick Rhoden, batting as a pinch hitter, had a sacrifice fly for New York in 1988; the last pitcher to drive in a run was Bert Blyleven on Oct. 4, 1972, the final game of that season, with a double.

Bohanon (1-0), activated before the game, gave up three hits in seven innings. He started in place of Nolan Ryan, who went on the disabled list this week, and struck out five and walked three. Bohanon retired 20 of his final 23 batters.

Royals 6, Indians 4

CLEVELAND — Kevin Appier won his fifth straight decision, leaving in the eighth inning after hitting Carlos Martinez and starting a bench-clearing brawl, as Kansas City beat Cleveland.

The Royals won their third in a row and 10th in 12 games. Cleveland lost its sixth straight.

Appier (8-7) gave up three runs and nine hits, walking none and striking out five. He has not lost in 10 starts since June 7, when his record fell to 3-7 with a 2-0 loss to the White Sox.

Tigers 7, Yankees 3

DETROIT — Lou Whitaker and Travis Fryman each hit two-run homers, leading the Detroit Tigers over the New York Yankees.

Frank Tanana (8-7) allowed three runs in seven innings as the Tigers won for the seventh time in his last eight starts.

Michigan native Scott Kamieniecki (4-4) gave up five runs on seven hits and four walks. His 3 1-3 innings pitched was his shortest outing of the season.

Cleveland's Carlos Martinez is restrained by Kansas City catcher Brent Mayne after being by a pitch from the Royals' Kevin Appier on Friday.

Red Sox 5, Blue Jays 3

BOSTON — Mike Greenwell and Tom Brunansky hit consecutive homers during a five-run fifth inning, rallying Roger Clemens and the Boston Red Sox over the Toronto Blue Jays.

Clemens (12-7) settled down after a solo homer by Kelly Gruber in the second and a two-run shot by Joe Carter in the third. He beat Toronto for the eighth straight time since June 4, 1988.

Orioles 3, White Sox 0

CHICAGO — Ben McDonald and four relievers combined on an eight-hitter as the Baltimore Orioles beat Chicago, snapping the White Sox' eight-game winning streak.

The White Sox scored 72 runs during their winning streak, but were shut down by McDonald (5-5), Mike Flanagan, Mark Williamson, Jim Poole and Gregg Olson. Olson got the last three outs for his 23rd save.

Astros make it four in a row

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Rafael Ramirez hit a two-run double in the ninth inning Friday night as the Houston Astros wasted a seven-run lead and then beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 9-8 for their first five-game winning streak this year.

NL

Houston led 7-0 in the third behind four RBIs from rookie Andujar Cedeno. But the Dodgers went ahead by scoring once in the fourth, three times in the fifth, once in the seventh, once in the eighth and twice in the ninth.

With the Dodgers leading 8-7, Jay Howell (4-3) walked Luis Gonzalez and Craig Biggio to lead off the ninth. John Candelaria relieved and Ramirez lined a double up the gap in left-center field.

Dean Wilkins (1-0) pitched 1 1-3 innings and won despite allowing two runs and three hits.

Darryl Strawberry had his second three-hit game this week, hitting his 14th home run.

Cubs 4, Mets 2

NEW YORK — Ryne Sandberg hit a two-run homer in the 10th inning as the Chicago Cubs beat New York and sent the Mets to their eighth loss in 10 games.

Mark Grace opened the 10th with a single off Alejandro Pena (6-1), pinch-runner Ced Landrum stole second and Sandberg hit his 17th home run of the season.

Paul Assenmacher (4-4) pitched two innings of one-hit relief as the Cubs won for the third time in four games.

Dwight Gooden allowed two runs and six hits in seven innings, struck out two and walked one.

Cardinals 4, Pirates 3

ST. LOUIS — Zane Smith was perfect for six innings, but reliever Stan Belinda forced home the winning run with a bases-loaded walk in the ninth as the St. Louis Cardinals beat Pittsburgh, the Pirates' seventh straight loss.

Smith retired 18 consecutive batters before Ray Lankford beat out an infield single in the seventh. The Cardinals got two runs in the inning and trailed 3-2 entering the ninth.

Ozzie Smith walked with one out, took third on Gerald Perry's single and pinch-runner Geronimo Pena stole second. Todd Zeile's RBI groundouttied the game and Felix Jose was intentionally walked, loading the bases. Belinda (3-3) then walked Gilkey as the Cardinals rallied to win for the 25th time this season.

Padres 13, Braves 3

ATLANTA — Tim Teufel hit a grand slam and Darrin Jackson had four hits, including a two-run homer, as the San Diego Padres routed Atlanta and ended the Braves' four-game winning streak.

Bruce Hurst (13-5) won his fourth consecutive decision and for the sixth time in his last seven decisions. He allowed nine hits in seven innings, struck out four and walked three.

Hurst, 6-2 lifetime against the Braves and 5-0 at Atlanta, ended Otis Nixon's 20-game hitting streak. Nixon was 0-for-4.

Reds 5, Giants 4

CINCINNATI — San Francisco's longest winning streak in a quarter-century ended at 11 games as Barry Larkin and Joe Oliver hit two-run homers and the Cincinnati Reds rallied to beat the Giants.

Cincinnati overcame 3-0 and 4-3 deficits against Bud Black (8-9) and won for just the sixth time in 22 games. Larkin's 16th homer tied it 3-3 in the second and Oliver's fifth home run put the Reds ahead 5-4 in the fourth.

The winning streak was the longest in the National League this season and the Giants' longest since a 12-gamer in 1966. San Francisco has had only one longer winning streak: 14 in 1965.

Phillies 6, Expos 5

MONTREAL — Dickie Thon homered twice, including a go-ahead drive in the 11th inning as the Philadelphia Phillies beat the Montreal Expos for their fourth consecutive victory.

Dennis Martinez, who pitched a perfect game at Los Angeles last Sunday, allowed a first-inning double to John Kruk and didn't get a decision. Martinez gave up four runs and six hits in seven innings.

Bret Barberie, recalled from the minor leagues earlier in the day, hit the first two home runs of his major league for Montreal.

Walton shows interest in buying Astros

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Billionaire merchandiser Sam Walton is interested in buying the Houston Astros, former baseball executive Bing Devine said Friday.

Devine, in confirming a copyright story by The Houston Post on Friday, said he would join Walton in a group of investors hopeful of acquiring the team.

"I do know that (Walton) is very interested, but it's difficult for me to evaluate what might happen," said Devine, a former general manager of the St. Louis Cardinals baseball and football franchises.

The Post said the investors group included Walton, Devine, David Glass, Walton's top assistant; and Oklahoma oilman A. Ray Smith.

Astros owner John McMullen wants $100 million for the team and the Houston Sports Association, which includes the lease for the Astrodome and three nearby hotels.

Ammaccapane jumps out front in Phar-Mor

Associated Press

VIENNA, Ohio — Danielle Ammaccapane shot a 6-under 66 to take a one-stroke lead Friday over college teammate Pam Wright and Peggy Kirsch in the Phar-Mor in Youngstown tournament.

Ammaccapane, who won the Standard Register Ping tournament in March, had seven birdies and a bogey to match her lowest competitive round of the year. She knew the reason why.

"Probably because there are so many Italians out here," she said with a laugh. "That's all I hear on the course: 'Go, paisan!'"

Wright, her teammate at Arizona State, birdied five of her last seven holes for a 67 at the Squaw Creek Country Club.

Kirsch, a non-winner in her second full year on the tour, shot a seven-under 28 to break the course record for the front nine, but foundered on the back nine to finish at 67.

Defending champion Beth Daniel, bidding for a $1 million bonus, took double-bogey on the 17th hole and finished with a 73. She won the Phar-Mor in Inverrary (Fla.) last February and would enjoy the richest payday in women's golf if she won its sister tournament.

Ammaccapane also gave credit for her quick start to a trip to Babylon, N.Y., her hometown.

"I went home last week and got a lesson," she said. "Since I won at Phoenix, I had been struggling with my golf swing. My pro noticed some things. I have had such a hectic schedule — I've been playing and then on vacation — that it just got worse and worse. It got so bad I had to go home."

The lesson did wonders.

"I thought I could have shot a 64 today," she said. "I had two putts within 10 feet. One was five feet and the other eight and I missed both of them."

Ammaccapane stands 12th on the money list for 1991 with $219,790 in earnings. Wright and Kirsch combined haven't earned one-quarter of that amount.

Wright, 75th in earnings with $43,777, said she couldn't remember the last time she had been among the leaders.

Greg Norman watches his tee shot on No. 10.

Norman leads Buick Open

Associated Press

GRAND BLANC, Mich. — Greg Norman shot a 65 on Friday to take a one stroke lead over Scott Hoch at the Buick Open.

Norman's round of 7-under left him at 132, one better than Hoch, the first-round leader who followed his tournament record-tying 63 with a 70.

Defending champion Chip Beck, PGA champ Wanye Grady and Brad Faxon were third at 134, a shot ahead of Gil Morgan and Gene Sauers at Warwick Hills Golf and Country Club.

David Edwards, Barry Jaeckel and rookie Marco Dawson were at 136. Nick Faldo, Howard Twitty and 1989 Buick Open winner Leonard Thompson were in a group at 137

Payne Stewart, the U.S. Open champion, shot 74-79 and missed the cut. Other notables missing the cut at 3-under 141 included Davis Love III, Wayne Levi and Mark Calcavecchia.

Norman started the round four shots behind the leader and promptly holed a wedge shot at the first hole for an eagle 3 to go 7-under overall. Birdies at the fourth, fifth, and sixth holes got him to 10-under but that streak ended with a bogey at No. 8, a 181-yard par-3.

On the back side, Norman, winner of the 1989 and 1990 Vardon Trophy for low scoring, birdied 12, 13 and 14 to go 12-under.

Norman, one of golf's most charismatic players, was the Tour's leading money-winner in 1990 with $1.2 million. But he's 45th on the list this year with $243,081. He'll pocket $180,000 if he wins this tournament.

In 11 tournaments, Norman has been in the money nine times. His best finish was runner-up in the Centel Western Open on July 7.

But when he arrived at Warwick Hills, where he had never played before, Norman said he was trying to prepare for the PGA Championship next week at Crooked Stick in Carmel, Ind.

The PGA is the fourth and final major tournament of the year.

Norman missed the cut at the Masters, withdrew from the U.S. Open because of a bad back, and finished tied for ninth in the British Open.

Hoch, who tied the tournament record with a 9-under round on Thursday, found the pins tucked into more difficult locations.

Hoch, playing the back nine first, got to 11-under with birdies at the 14th and 15th but went bunker to bunker for a double-bogey at the par-3 17th. He had four more birdies and two more bogeys the rest of the way.

son to shoot over par."

Spradlin, last year's third place finisher at the city championship, was in trouble for awhile Friday, but recovered to take a share of the lead.

After making the turn at 1-under, Spradlin hit his tee shot into the weeds on No. 19 and ended up with a double bogey six to briefly go to 1-over.

Spradlin didn't get discouraged, coming back with an eagle three on 20 and a birdie on the normally tough 21st hole. Spradlin finished the round with birdies at 24 and 26 to finish at 3 under.

Gonzalez, a graduate of Stanton High School and Western Texas College, worked his way out of a pair of seemingly impossible jams to save par and stay close to the leaders.

On No. 25, a 425 yard, par 4 with a hard dogleg left, Gonzalez landed his tee shot in the fairway bunker. Gonzalez found the fairway on his second shot, but was still well off the green. A well-placed chip shot and a one-putt later, and par had been saved.

On the 425 yard, 27th and final hole of the day, Gonzalez found trouble in a hurry again, landing his tee shot in the brush to the right of the fairway. Hitting through a bush, Gonzalez hit his second shot in the right-side bunker. His approach landed him on the green but far from the hole. "A snake of a putt," as Gonzalez described it, led to another miraculous par.

"Those shots were from Russia," lez described his feats on 25 and 27. "Here lately, I haven't been hitting anything, but the last couple of days I've finally started coming around."

Colbert, Laoretti share Senior lead

Associated Press

JERICHO, N.Y. (AP) — Jim Colbert, fighting back spasms in his rookie year on the Senior Tour, shot a 5-under 67 Friday to share the first-round lead of the Northville Long Island Classic with Larry Laoretti and Homero Blancas.

The 50-year-old Colbert had five birdies, two from 15 feet, during his bogey-free round at the Meadow Brook Club. He saved par on the par-5, 506-yard 10th hole by three-putting from 100 feet.

"Last week, I was up to 14 painkillers a day, but now I'm down to five or six," Colbert said. "The pills give me movement, but I have to be careful because too many make me lose the fine, delicate touch in my hands."

Colbert has not played on the PGA Tour since 1987, but still ranks among the top 30 on the combined career money list. He last won at the 1983 Colonial.

Castro officiates opening of Pan Am Games

Associated Press

HAVANA — Fidel Castro, as big a sports nut as George Bush, Friday opened a Pan American Games that has strained his impoverished, isolated nation but impressed visitors from throughout the hemisphere.

New arenas and stadiums pierced the decaying skyline of broiling, sun-bleached Havana as athletes from 39 countries joined in a festive opening ceremony that emphasized peace, not politics.

Castro, a former baseball player like Bush, stood among them in the new track stadium relishing the achievement of his people at a time when food, fuel and hard cash are in particularly short supply.

He poured at least $100 million into the new facilities — opening himself to criticism from some Cubans that the money was needed for essentials rather than extravagances like these games.

The 35,000-seat Pan American Stadium had an unfinished look to it, with wires sticking out where sockets should be, water dripping in the bowels of the stadium and signs of shoddy workmanship everywhere.

That did not dampen the enthusiasm of the crowd, which waved flags, chanted "Cuba, Cuba," and, yes, did the inevitable wave, a custom culled not from U.S. sports but from the 1986 World Cup in Mexico.

The colorful, well-choreographed ceremonies featured acrobats, gymnasts, reenactments of periods in Cuban history, color-coordinated card displays of slogans and images connected with the games, and lots of music. The public address system, with its announcements and music, was broadcast over loudspeakers downtown — although few people were paying attention.

It was a show as colorful as those at many Olympics and, just perhaps, a sign that things will go well for the hosts.

And, despite efforts by Bush to keep the pressure on Castro, one of the world's last stalwart communists, American athletes and officials admired the Cubans for their efforts in playing host to this two-week Olympic-style sports festival.

Joe Vigil, the U.S. men's track coach, walked out to the stadium at midnight a few hours after he arrived Thursday night.

"It was a tremendous feeling," he said. "I think the Cubans are to be commended. We can't find a facility for track like that in the United States for its totality."

Vigil was among many Americans who sought to lavish praise on their hosts here. Karen Dennis, women's head track coach, came to Cuba in April after hearing "a lot of war stories" about the poor living conditions the athletes would have to endure.

"I left here impressed. The hospitality was very good then and is now," she said. "I have never seen such a hard-working group make the conditions first class as they are now."

Castro's personal interest in sports and the commitment he made five years ago to host the games — long before the fall of the Berlin Wall and the collapse of communism — played a significant role in putting them together.

ABC pursued games despite state pressure

Associated Press

HAVANA — Pressure from the U.S. State Department could have prompted ABC to abandon the Pan American Games in Cuba, "but it ultimately became a freedom of the press issue," ABC Sports president Dennis Swanson said Friday.

"The easiest thing to do would have been for ABC Sports to walk away from this one year ago," Swanson said at a news conference. "But this is an event that we wanted to be associated with."

Swanson said he had no doubt the State Department's preference "would have been that we not cover the games."

ABC originally negotiated a deal with the Cuban government to pay $9.7 million for exclusive U.S. rights to the games, which get under way Saturday after Friday night's opening ceremonies.

The deal, however, was held up by the State Department because of the United States' economic embargo against Cuba. Last year, a compromise was struck among ABC, the Cubans and the U.S. State Department that allowed the network to go ahead with its plans.

Details of the compromise never were revealed because of a nondislosure clause insisted upon by the U.S. government.

"Our legal costs were very high over the last two years," Swanson said. "We're not doing this as a profit-and-loss venture, but because we feel these games should be televised to the American people."

ABC Sports will televise 20½ hours of games, primarily on the weekends, while Turner Sports' TNT cable station is committed to about 27 hours of coverage on weekdays, beginning with the opening ceremonies.

Swanson said the opening ceremonies culminated "two years of very, very difficult negotiations." And, he added with a sense of relief, that the "burden of the work now shifts to the on-air presentation."

Although many of the United States' finest athletes passed up the trip because of other commitments, ABC is counting on the exotic setting to boost viewership.

"There's absolutely no question that the games being in Cuba provides an added attraction," Swanson said.

Brent Musburger, ABC's studio host, also was at the news conference and, once again, was asked if he had been quoted correctly earlier in the week as saying that Cuba was ill-prepared to host the games and that Castro's Cuba was a "monument to the failure of communism."

Davis a Mav for one more season

DALLAS (AP) — Brad Davis said his one-year contract with the Dallas Mavericks marks the last season he will play for the team.

The 35-year-old Davis will be entering his 12th season with the Mavericks. No details of the pact were announced Friday, but Davis said earlier that it was a good deal.

"We were surprised when Brad told us he would like to play another season," said Norm Sonju, Mavericks general manager and chief operating officer.

"There was no doubt in any of our minds that he was capable of playing another year, but we had thought he was not going to play beyond the '90-91 season," he said.

Mavericks officials did not immediately return a telephone call Friday.

As a 14-year veteran, Davis is the only player remaining from the Mavericks' 1980-81 expansion season. He made $600,000 last season.

Davis said he received a call from Sonju on Thursday asking him to come to his office and finalize the deal.

"I'm real happy with the way this is working out," Davis said of the newest pact.

PRIORITIES

This has been a productive day, one full of purpose. It is mid-afternoon. The lawn rivals any in the neighborhood. The car shines, as do the floors. Groceries are in the cupboard and most of the errands have been done. Next on the list is . . .

Wait, let's slow down a bit . . .

Come sit in this sunny corner and catch your breath. While you are resting here at the desk, why not look at God's list—the Bible. Though our goals for today are important, the knowledge of God's standards for your life is essential. The Bible will help you to establish priorities for your life on earth while preparing you for eternal life with our Heavenly Father.

Worship God in His house each week, and pray to Him each day concerning His plan for you. God will help you to keep your list in order. Trust Him.

Pastor preaches to flock above auto body shop

By Robert M. Andrews
Associated Press Writer

TYSONS CORNER, Va. — Every Sunday morning, in his makeshift church above an automobile body shop, pastor Cameron Simmons knocks out the dents and heals the scrapes from the spiritual fender-benders of life.

Members of the Rhema Faith Center Church, a small congregation of charismatic Christians, have been worshiping upstairs at a Oldsmobile dealer's cinderblock body shop in this Washington, D.C., suburb for 10 years. They have no intention of moving.

"The Lord led us to this place," Simmons says.

It doesn't matter to the pastor and his flock that their church lacks a steeple and stained-glass windows, or that the parking lot outside is filled with smashed fenders and crumpled hoods.

"It doesn't bother me, and it doesn't bother the Lord," Simmons says. "We are very happy here. The anointing of the Lord is here, and that's all that matters."

Worshipers sit on metal folding chairs in a large, windowless room decorated with a "Jesus is Lord" banner, a pulpit and a bandstand for musicians and choir. A company boardroom next door is reserved for nursing mothers who listen to the service on loudspeakers.

Downstairs, along a hallway adjacent to the body shop, are church offices, Sunday school classrooms and playrooms for toddlers and infants.

"Whenever God tells you to be in a place, it doesn't matter whether it seems right or not, it's just right," says Jackie Catterton, who drives 120 miles from Richmond, Va., with her two children to worship every Sunday.

The Sunday morning service attracts a biracial mix of 180 to 200 professionals — a university professor, doctors, government bureaucrats, military officers — and blue-collar workers.

Several are employees of the auto dealership in this sprawling commercial complex west of the nation's capital.

"One of the painters in the body shop is my drummer," Simmons says.

Simmons, 61, is a former composing room machinist at The Washington Post who became a born-again Christian in 1976 while he attended a worship service led by now-defrocked TV evangelist Jim Bakker in Charlotte, N.C.

He says the Lord called him to start a church.

He began with Bible study groups in his living room, then moved into a Tysons Corner hotel. Simmons says a miracle happened when he met auto dealer Wilfred Templeton at a meeting of Christian businessmen.

— Cameron Simmons

Templeton offered the church some vacant space above his body shop. The rent was cheap. Simmons took the offer as a divine sign.

"The Lord told me to be in the Tysons Corner area," he said, and his congregation moved in.

Church member Rita Thompson, an assistant to a Fairfax County supervisor, says she knows of seven or eight religious congregations that worship in low-rent quarters in office buildings or industrial sites throughout the county.

"It's the affordable way for them to find suitable meeting space, at a time when property values are astronomical," she says. "Traffic is easier on Sundays, and parking's no problem. I think it's the wave of the future."

The money saved on a church building enables Simmons' congregation to support a far-flung roster of missionaries and school-teachers overseas, from India and Zimbabwe to France and Guatemala. In June, nearly three dozen Rhema members spent a week in a Mexican village building a wing on the local church.

"There's a lot of fancy churches where the Lord can't get in because of the hardness of their hearts," Simmons says. "The building means nothing. The people are the temple of the Holy Ghost."

Music debate rouses singing parishioners

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Twenty-six years after the Roman Catholic Church scrapped the Latin Mass and encouraged more singing, many parishioners still haven't picked up the beat.

It hasn't been for lack of trying. Church leaders have tried modern music and brought in old Protestant hymns. A weeklong convention was held in July to discuss how to encourage Catholics to sing.

Many churchgoers remain mum, or mumbling.

"There is lots of lousy music out there. Lousy. It's hard to sing," said Thomas Day, chairman of the music department at Salve Regina College in Newport, R.I., and author of "Why Catholics Can't Sing."

Day was a speaker at the convention of the National Association of Pastoral Musicians, attended by 4,300 ministers and musicians at the David L. Lawrence Convention Center.

He said some religious musicians are thrusting their dubious taste on worshippers.

"There are a lot of nazis out there, and they are calling themselves musicians," Day said. He cited students at one seminary whose interest in Gregorian chants was squelched by higher-ups who he said pushed the music they preferred.

"And you will tune your guitars accordingly," Day said.

Musicians at the convention bristled, pointing out they have had only 26 years to reinvent a centuries-old musical liturgy that fell by the wayside, along with Latin, by order of the Vatican in the 1960s.

She also said churches are doing a good job writing and choosing new music.

"You assign blame in the wrong places," she told Day. "We know all the problems in the book already. That's why we pastoral musicians are here."

Please don't call Ms. Rendler and her fellows "church" musicians. The preferred term is "pastoral," said Gordon Truitt, editor of Pastoral Music magazine. The term expresses their self-image as "ministers who empower the congregation musically," he said.

While acknowledging that the church hasn't met the Vatican Council's expectations on singing, Ms. Rendler said it was not up to the musicians to coax worshippers into song.

"If you want to be transformed, you submit yourself to what the liturgy asks of you. I don't have to tease you into singing," she said.

Part of the trouble is that Catholics are accustomed to being spectators in church, she said.

"They have watched it go by all these years, being inactive," Ms. Rendler said. "Our society does not sing. We listen to music. We watch music."

Day also derided musicians for believing modern music would attract parishioners. He said the premise is based on a myth that, "Catholics are modern people and they respond to modern music. Here. Now. Today."

One musician who attended the debate said so much new, modern music is being written she can't keep up with the flow of material from religious music publishers.

"A lot of the new stuff is excellent, but you don't have a chance to learn it," said Ruth Gianni, music director at St. Jude Roman Catholic Church in Hopatcong, N.J.

"People don't sing if they can't learn it, and they're afraid to try. I mean, you can't go up there and make a fool of yourself," she said.

The most popular songs are borrowed from another Christian faith, according to Ms. Gianni, a former Methodist who converted to Catholicism.

"What we sing the best is the Protestant music," she said.

MC offers new religion class

Staff Report

A course on Philosphy of Religion is on Midland College's fall schedule for the first time in several years.

The class, Philosophy 1301, is being offered on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7-8:20 p.m. John Setzer is instructor of the three-credit-hour course which starts Sept. 3.

"The concept of God is perhaps [illegible] of the Western [illegible] Morris, chair of the [illegible] Cultural Studies Division. "No informed person can study literature, history, economics, psychology, or even watch the daily news without taking into consideration the part played by God.

"The division of church and state is not violated by this course, nor is it constructed to make converts of anyone. It will take a straightforward and honest look at the major themes in the philosophy of western religion."

Setzer is a graduate of The Citadel and Duke University Divinity School. He also has studied theology, philosophy, and literature at Wake Forest University in Winston-Salem, N.C.; Trinity College at the University of Glasgow, Scotland; and at Gordon-Conwell Theological Seminary in Boston. He has taught biblical, philosophical, and practical studies in state and federal prisons, parish churches of different denominations, and several colleges during the past 25 years.

Registration for the course is being handled in the Student Services area of the Student Center. Hours are 9 a.m.-7 p.m. Monday and 7 a.m.-5 p.m. Tuesday through Thursday. The last day for early registration is Thursday. Time permits for enrollment on Aug. 28 will be issued Aug. 12-15 and Aug. 19-22 from 7 a.m.-5 p.m.

More information is from Morris at 685-4605 or the Student Services office at 685-4501.

■ Frazier to minister to youth

Ranchland Heights Baptist Church has called Rusty Frazier to be part-time minister of youth.

In the newly created staff position, Frazier will head planning and implementing a youth program for the church. He has been serving the past two months as summer youth director of the church.

A graduate of Midland High School, Frazier attended Howard Payne University the past two years. He will be married to Misty Rains this week and the two will attend Midland College and the University of Texas of the Permian Basin during his ministry with the church.

For more information about the church's programs call 697-4471 or 683-1947.

■ Church plans prayer vigil

Christians of all denominations are invited to attend a monthly prayer vigil at Crossroads Christian Fellowship Aug. 9 and 10.

The prayer vigil was started in July of 1989 and has involved 30 to 35 churches and more than 300 Christians each month.

Bob Hilton of Com Unidad Alibare served as organizer for the last two years. He has been assisted by laypersons from many different churches and fellowships. The vigil was set aside as a time to pray for the community of Midland, its local concerns, and national problems such as cribe, drugs, AIDS and abortion.

The vigil, held on the second weekend of each moth at a different location, begins at noon Friday and continues until midnight Saturday. The designated building is open round the clock between those hours for people to attend at their convenience.

No offerings are taken and no lessons are given. This is a time dedicated to prayer only.

Those interested in participating are invited to attend. For more information call 699-5149 or 689-7033.

■ Church honors Fergusons

Greater St. Luke A.M.E. Church, 401 S. Adams St., has planned appreciation services to honor the Rev. and Mrs. S.V. Ferguson and their daughter, Teri Lynn Ferguson.

A "Praise Concert" was held Friday. The second tribute for the Fergusons will be at 3 p.m. Sunday with the Rev. William Ashley, Bethel Baptist Church, bringing the anniversary message. Music will be presented by St. Luke choirs joined by five choirs from visiting churches.

"The Fergusons have been at Greater St. Luke for five years, contributing much to the parishioners and the community," said Annie Dale Jones, program chair for Greater St. Luke.

Ferguson is a volunteer chaplain at Midland Memorial Hospital, serves as first vice president of the Ministerial Alliance, and as an officer of the Northwest Texas A.M.E. Conference. In addition, he is a member of the Kiwanis Club and serves on the board of directors of Midland Memorial Hospital and Christmas in April.

Mrs. Ferguson is involved in the Missionary Society, Church Women United and is president of the Ministers' Wives Alliance on the conference level.

Miss Ferguson, who is 16, is a member of the Young People's Department, junior choir and the Usher Board. She is a pianist for the local Sunday School and for the Youth of Northwest Texas Conference. In addition, she is a member of the band at Lee High School.

■ Judge refuses to stop seal killings

WASHINGTON — A federal judge Friday refused to order a halt to the summer killing of Alaska northern fur seals, rejecting the Humane Society's argument that native Alaskans are wasting meat from animals already killed.

U.S. District Judge John Garrett Penn, without comment, upheld the Commerce Department's decision to allow native residents of the Pribilof Islands off western Alaska to kill more of the seals, which were declared a "depleted" species in 1988.

The seal kill had been suspended pending a ruling from the judge and it was unclear precisely how soon it would resume.

"We're very disappointed," said Humane Society attorney Mark D. Colley. "We don't think there's any further action we could take that would be productive." He did say the group would continue to work with the Commerce Department to monitor the annual killing of the seals.

At one time, it was customary for native Alaskans to club tens of thousands of young male seals to death each summer for the sale of their pelts. But the last international agreement allowing those massive kills expired in 1984.

The killing is now restricted under the Marine Mammal Protection Act. The native Alaskanš receive exemptions to kill a specified number of seals each year to provide meat to live on.

■ Obstruction probe 'still active, police say

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — Police say they are still considering obstruction of justice charges in the rape case against William Kennedy Smith, whose attorneys on Friday argued for actions to reduce pretrial publicity.

Circuit Judge Mary Lupo set aside all day for hearings on some of the more than two dozen pending motions. She earlier postponed Smith's Aug. 5 trial and didn't immediately set a new date.

Prosecutors said they want a trial within 60 days, partly to reduce stress upon the 29-year-old Florida woman who says Smith raped her at his family's Palm Beach estate. Prosecutor Moira Lasch also has asked the judge to move the trial to avoid new delays.

In hearings Friday, Ken Selvig, an assistant state attorney, and attorneys for news organizations, including The Associated Press, questioned a Duke University polling expert.

The expert, John McConahay, says his polls for the defense showed dramatic jumps in the percentages of those who said they believed Smith guilty or probably guilty after prosecution disclosures that three other women want to testify that Smith sexually attacked or attempted to assault them.

■ New rules would open protected lands

WASHINGTON — After months of argument among four federal agencies and the White House, the Bush administration has proposed new rules intended to open millions of acres of low-lying forests, prairie, bottom lands and other environmentally sensitive areas to development, a White House official said Friday.

The proposed rules are to be published within two weeks for public comment, and to be effective would have to survive congressional review and a likely challenge from environmental groups.

Perhaps 100 million acres of such sensitive ground have been protected from industrial intrusions since 1989 under a set of broad regulations that seemed to support President Bush's 1988 campaign pledge to preserve these wetlands, as they are collectively known.

Among the areas the proposed rules could open for development are acres of temporary ponds formed by depressions on the northern Great Plains and in the Middle West, known as "prairie potholes," that serve as rest points for migrating ducks and geese, environmental groups said Friday.

Compiled from Reporter-Telegram wire services.

Bush reiterates warning to Iraq

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration Friday repeated its threat to use military force to destroy Iraq's nuclear program as the Senate voted overwhelmingly to back use of "all necessary means" to eliminate President Saddam Hussein's ability to produce atomic, biological or chemical weapons.

Appearing in a series of television interviews on the first anniversary of Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said that if President Bush gave the order, the military could bomb Saddam's nuclear plants "almost immediately."

"There shouldn't be any doubt in his mind about the fact that we are prepared to do that and that we can do it," he said in an interview on CNN.

Bush, speaking at a news conference, said there "has been some compliance" by Iraq with United Nations resolutions demanding that Baghdad fully disclose the extent of its nuclear weapons potential. But he said Saddam must be "far more cooperative" than he has been.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said that if President Bush gave the order, the military could bomb Saddam's nuclear plants 'almost immediately.'

In a gesture of support for Bush, the Senate voted 97-2 Friday for a non-binding resolution favoring the use of force if Baghdad does not comply with the U.N. resolutions. It also endorsed a resolution expressing support for the use of military force to protect northern Iraq's Kurdish population against any future atttacks by the Iraqi military.

Administration officials said Bush had no specific deadline in mind for using military force against Iraq and that Friday's comments by the president and Cheney were primarily part of an effort to keep up the pressure on Baghdad.

The officials said the administration also wanted to stiffen the resolve of the anti-Iraqi coalition, where support for new military action has not been strong, by using the anniversary of the invasion of Kuwait as an opportunity to remind the allies that the military confrontation with Iraq has not completely ended.

Appearing in the Rose Garden for his news conference before starting a weekend at Camp David, Bush seemed eager to bask in his recent diplomatic successes as he fended off criticism that he was not paying enough attention to domestic issues.

He welcomed Israel's conditional acceptance of the Soviet-U.S. proposal to hold a Middle East peace conference in October and urged the Israeli government and the Palestinians to work out their differences over who would represent the Palestinians at the meeting.

But the president carefully avoided taking sides on the Israeli-Palestinian dispute over representation or on the other contentious issues. "One way to avoid progress is to start spelling out what should happen or how it should work before the parties sit down," Bush said.

Bush said he also was pleased that the governments of Greece and Turkey had agreed to meet under the auspices of the United Nations to discuss a settlement in Cyprus, which has been divided between its ethnic Turkish and Greek populations since 1974.

Administration officials said representatives of those groups were also expected to attend the conference, which would be held in September.

Bush visited both Greece and Turkey last month, in response to repeated requests from the Governments of both countries to lend the diplomatic weight of the United States to efforts to solve the Cyprus problem.

Astronauts release satellite into orbit

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — After three launch delays, Atlantis vaulted through a hazy sky into orbit Friday with five astronauts who released an immense communications satellite that was propelled thousands of miles above Earth.

The satellite was spring-ejected from the cargo bay six hours into the flight.

"Well done. Congratulations," Mission Control told the crew.

A satellite rocket fired an hour later, after the shuttle backed away to a safe distance, and sent the craft spinning to a 22,300-mile-high orbit.

The astronauts began preparing for the complicated task of freeing the satellite shortly after reaching orbit. Shuttle commander John Blaha took a few moments out to thank everyone for the safe, smooth trip.

"It was the best ride in the world," Blaha told Mission Control.

Atlantis rose from its seaside launch pad right on time at 11:02 a.m. It was a welcome sight for space center workers, who had struggled through three flight delays in the past two weeks, including one the day before.

"They all worked hard because a 24-hour turnaround is a tough job," said launch director Bob Sieck. "They got their reward ... seeing Atlantis go into orbit with a 100 percent operating system that they made possible."

Atlantis' nine-day voyage 184 miles above Earth is the 42nd shuttle mission for NASA. It is the fifth time astronauts have been sent up to deploy a Tracking and Data Relay Satellite; the second one was destroyed in the 1986 Challenger disaster.

The newest $120 million satellite will expand NASA's switchboard system in space, providing extra coverage between future space explorers and Mission Control. The system also links ground controllers with about seven NASA satellites, including the Hubble Space Telescope, and an undisclosed number of military spy satellites.

Astronaut Shannon Lucid hit the switches to discharge the satellite from a raised tilt-table following successful system checks. She reported that the operation went well.

Groups question impact of free trade pact

WASHINGTON — Two major environmental organizations and a Ralph Nader organization asked a federal court yesterday to order the Bush administration to explain the environmental impact of the proposed U.S.-Mexico free trade pact.

Fearing that a free trade pact with Mexico will increase pollution along America's 1,933 mile southern border, the Sierra Club, Friends of the Earth, and Public Citizen — the Nader consumer group — asked the government to detail the environmental ramifications of the trade agreement now being negotiated.

Mexico has environmental laws comparable to those of the United States, but enforcement of such statutes below the Rio Grande generally has been lax.

Contending that U.S. companies will relocate in Mexico to avoid America's more stringent environmental regime, the plaintiffs argue that economic growth stirred by free trade will make the fragile, arid lands along the border unlivable

In filing the suit, Joan Claybrook, the president of Public Citizen, said "the public and Congress need to know what is at stake for the environment ... what we seek is ... official consideration of (environmental concerns) in the formation of U.S. trade policy."

A court decision on the suit could come as early as September, according to Lori Wallach, a lobbyist for Public Citizen. Wallach also said the environmental impact statement (EIS) sought by the suit could take anywhere from three to 18 months to complete.

U.S Trade Representative Carla Hills has said it will take at least a year to forge a pact with Mexico that could then be presented to Congress.

Congress in May allowed the administration to begin the negotiating process without conditions.

However, the administration has promised to formulate an "environmental review" of the proposed trade pact, which is to include Canada. The administration also has pledged to study environmental problems along the U.S.-Mexico border region, where significant pollution has resulted from growth associated with the so-called "maquiladora" trading system.

That system allows plants on the Mexican side of the border to assemble goods for export to the United States that arrive here duty free to the extent they are produced from American raw materials.

In seeking a full environmental impact statement — a more exacting process than the review promised by the administration — the plaintiffs said such statements are required by federal law.

A spokesman for Hills noted that the matter is now in litigation, and declined to comment on the issue. Her office, which is charged with negotiating trade treaties, was named as defendant in the suit along with President Bush.

Separately, EPA Administrator William Reilly said the administration's environmental review coupled with its border plan "goes well beyond" the requirements of an EIS.

Asked why the administration's won't simply transform its environmental review and border plan into an EIS, Reilly said the requirement for an EIS "does not apply" to international trade treaties.

Reilly made his comments while briefing the press on a draft of the plan to address pollution problems along the U.S.-Mexican border.

The draft said attention will be focused during the next two years on six twin cities where most of the border's 6 million people live.

The twin cities are: Laredo-Nuevo Laredo; San Diego-Tijuana; El Paso-Ciudad Juarez; Calexico-Mexicali; Brownsville-Matamoros; and Nogales-Nogales.

The draft said top priority would be given to wastewater treatment, hazardous waste transportation and disposal, air pollution, and enforcement.

Suspension given to Pee-wee's bailor

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — A sheriff's deputy said Friday she just wanted to help her old friend when she posted bail for the Pee-wee Herman actor following his arrest on indecent exposure charges.

For bailing out Paul Reubens, Cpl. Joan Verizzo was suspended one day without pay.

"I made a very small loan to Paul out of loyalty to someone I consider family," she said. "He was approximately $22 short on the amount he needed."

Verizzo, a seven-year veteran of the Sarasota County sheriff's department, said Reubens called her after he was arrested July 26 at an adult theater.

Reubens, 38, told her he didn't have enough money to post the $219 bail, she wrote in a statement to her superiors.

Sheriff's department policy prohibits an employee from providing bail for anyone other than members of their immediate family, said Lt. William Stookey.

Verizzo, 38, will serve her suspension after she returns from maternity leave, probably in mid-August, Stookey said.

"I'm a dedicated, conscientious officer and if the department feels there was a mistake on my part, it was unintentional," she said.

Reubens didn't contact a bail bondsman because he wanted to get out "as quickly as possible and involve as few persons as possible," Verizzo said.

She enclosed a letter from Reubens' mother, Judy Rubenfeld, expressing gratitude for bailing out her son. Reubens, a graduate of Sarasota High School, was in town visiting his parents when he was arrested.

"Joan Verizzo has been a friend of our family for over 20 years," Mrs. Rubenfeld wrote. "My daughter went through school with her, and my sons call on her often. If she had not responded to Paul, it would have been a family crisis."

Mayor urges racial sensitivity

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Mayor John O. Norquist said Friday that racial insensitivity was partly to blame when police left a naked Laotian boy in Jeffrey L. Dahmer's apartment even though black neighbors pleaded the boy needed help.

The 14-year-old's body was found later in the apartment among 11 dismembered corpses.

Police recordings from May 27 show three officers decided the boy, who appeared intoxicated, was Dahmer's homosexual lover and returned him to the apartment. They joked about needing to be "deloused" afterward.

"There's no way you can't conclude racial sensitivity is an issue," Norquist said. "There is no question in my mind the relationship has to be improved."

The mayor created a panel to study police-community relations.

"I understand the rage that exists ... especially in the area most devastated by this killer," he said. "The desire to lash out and fix blame is strong. But we must rememnber one man killed his victims."

Earlier, in an interview with NBC's "A Closer Look," Norquist was asked if Dahmer would have been treated differently if he was black. Norquist answered yes. He did not elaborate.

Outraged residents marched on City Hall and police headquarters throughout the week. Many said police could have saved the boy and others who died there.

Dahmer, 31, has confessed to killing 17 people since 1978, including the boy and at least four others since the May 27 police encounter, authorities said.

Police Chief Philip Arreola suspended the officers. They face unspecified administrative charges.

State Attorney General James Doyle Jr. said Friday he will conduct an investigation to determine if the officers should face criminal charges.

In another development Friday, a judge granted Milwaukee police a search warrant to review 14 videotapes and computer disks confiscated from Dahmer's apartment.

Court records don't reveal the content of the seized materials, but a source told The Milwaukee Journal that most of the videotapes are commercial movies. Police want to check if anything was taped over the films.

The mayoral panel will recommend within 60 days improvements in officers' sensitivity training, recruitment of minority officers and community relations, particularly in poor, high-crime neighborhoods, the mayor said.

"I expect the panel to include some critics of the department and I do not expect it to pull any punches," the mayor said.

A woman who insisted to police the boy was endangered is a hero, said C. Nicol Padway, chairman of the commission that oversees the police department. Glenda Cleveland pressed an officer who left the boy at Dahmer's apartment, asking six times whether police had mistaken a molested boy for a homosexual lover.

"She is an example to be followed," Padway said. "She was not content to sit by idly and merely watch but rather she persisted in her efforts to assist another human being."

Mrs. Cleveland's daughter and niece saw the boy on a street corner and called police. She later called one of the officers to ask why the boy had been left with Dahmer.

"Somebody goofed along the line. That is for sure," Mrs. Cleveland said.

Meanwhile, in Bath Township, Ohio, investigators found more bone fragments Friday at Dahmer's boyhood home, where they have found more than 100 pieces of bone and teeth.

Dahmer has confessed to killing hitchhiker Steven Mark Hicks, 18, there in 1978, police said.

U.N. plans to monitor Iraqi arms

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar presented a plan to the Security Council on Friday calling for long-term monitoring to prevent Iraq from developing weapons of mass destruction.

The plan, unveiled on the anniversary of Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, envisions unprecedented international monitoring, for an indefinite period, of all Iraqi facilities that could be used for development of chemical, biological or nuclear weapons, as well as long-range ballistic missiles.

Iraq must destroy any such terror weapons in its arsenal under U.N. supervision, according to the April 3 Security Council resolution ending the Gulf War. The cease-fire resolution also compels Iraq to abstain from acquiring such weapons, but did not establish a long-term control mechanism.

The new plan seeks to ensure that Iraq doesn't revive programs to develop a non-conventional arsenal.

If the plan is adopted, it would involve the closest scrutiny ever by U.N. experts of an individual country's arms and military research programs.

The 121-page plan was drawn up by the International Atomic Energy Agency, a U.N. agency based in Vienna, and the U.N. Special Commission set up to supervise elimination of Iraq's non-conventional arsenal.

The plan would allow U.N. inspectors unrestricted and immediate access to any facility in Iraq suspected of being used to research or produce the restricted weapons. Inspectors could remove or destroy any banned weapons or materials. Iraq would have to disclose the designs of all potential weapons facilities.

The plan does not discuss how to secure Iraqi cooperation in its measures. Baghdad's cooperation with Security Council-ordered inspections to date has been spotty.

The plan gives the Special Commission the right to "inspect at any time and without hindrance any activity, material or other item at any site or facility, including any material or other item in movement."

It calls for strict monitoring of Iraqi imports of chemicals and other "dual use" materials with potential military applications.

The Security Council must approve the plan. There was no indication when it would act.

The council is expected to approve next week a French proposal demanding that Iraq cooperate with U.N. inspection teams supervising destruction of Baghdad's existing non-conventional arsenal in accordance with the cease-fire terms.

U.N. inspectors are in Iraq now to find and destroy any nuclear, chemical or biological weapons facilities. They have supervised destruction of more than 60 of Iraq's Scud missiles.

Iraq denies having programs to ern experts dispute this.

Camper slayings bring safety rules

HONESDALE, Pa. (AP) — The rape and murder of a camp counselor has shattered the peaceful atmosphere at summer camps in the scenic foothills of the Appalachian Mountains.

Many camps are giving counselors lessons on safety. One has canceled overnight outings, even on the camp's grounds.

The partially clothed body of Laura Ronning, 24, was found Sunday by a waterfall near Camp Cayuga, in southeast Pennsylvania. An autopsy showed she had been sexually assaulted before she was shot in the head.

No arrests have been made.

Camp Cayuga has sent letters to parents explaining what happened and telling them that no children were with Ronning when she was murdered, said Brian Buynak, the camp's junior director.

Ronning, a Florida State University senior from St. Petersburg, Fla., signed out of Camp Cayuga alone on her day off. She left the camp Saturday morning. A police search party found her body Sunday morning.

Parents have been supportive, Buynak said.

"Their main concern is if their child is safe," he said.

Officials at several area camps have held safety lectures.

"We've had meetings with our counselors," said Hi Schmierer, whose Camp Starlight has about 400 children and 120 staff members.

Camp Starlight tells its counselors never to travel or jog alone, even on camp grounds, Schmierer said.

As an added precaution, Schmierer said he canceled Camp Starlight's overnight camping, "even though it's right on our own property."

At Camp Bryn Mawr, counselors aren't allowed to have a day off alone, said owner-director Herb Kutzen.

"This has resolved our belief in the importance of not letting counselors go off alone," he said. Groups of staffers are given days off together and aren't allowed to leave camp except as a group.

The camp provides a van for anyone who wants to go into town, Kutzen said.

Camp Bryn Mawr, among others, has security guards.

Children at Kutzen's camp aren't being told about the murder unless they ask or are old enough to understand.

"I wouldn't want to panic the children," he said.

The region, a home to camps since the turn of the century, is safe, said Assistant District Attorney Mark Zimmer. Reports of crime have been very rare at the camps, he said.

CIA chief says agency used BCCI

WASHINGTON (AP) — The deputy director of the CIA said Friday the agency used the Bank of Credit and Commerce International to monitor activities of drug traffickers and terrorists.

The Central Intelligence Agency initially used the bank, now embroiled in the biggest banking scandal in history, to support its overseas operations, the deputy director, Richard Kerr, told a closed-door meeting of the Congressional Youth Leadership Council.

At the same time, Kerr said, "We were very aggressively collecting information against BCCI as a target of intelligence" because from the early 1980s "it was quite obvious that it was involved in illegal activities such as money laundering, narcotics and terrorism."

This account was the most specific so far of the agency's role in the bank, which Kerr's predecessor Robert Gates used to call "the Bank of Crooks and Criminals." Gates, President Bush's beleaguered nominee to head the CIA, was deputy director of the agency from 1987 to 1989.

At that time, the agency had become so suspicious of BCCI that it closed down all its accounts there, said an administration official who spoke Friday afternoon on condition that his identity not be used.

Bush, in his first public comments on the unfolding scandal, on Friday defended Gates in connection with BCCI although he conceded not knowing much about the affair.

"I do know this, that some are trying to use this matter to be against my nominee to head the CIA, Bob Gates, and I will resist that every way possible," Bush said.

The CIA used BCCI both to support its activities abroad, such as paying agents, and to funnel money to guerrilla groups supported by the United States in Nicaragua and Afghanistan, officials say.

The Luxembourg-based BCCI had branches in nearly 70 countries.

He did not specify how the agency tracked BCCI accounts of narcotics dealers and terrorists. Britain's MI-5 intelligence agency also reportedly used BCCI to monitor terrorist and narcotics activities.

The Justice Department could have used intelligence information to obtain convictions against the BCCI branch in Tampa, Fla. and five individuals in 1988 on charges of money laundering.

The CIA passed on the information it gathered to various agencies within the intelligence community, said the administration official.

He declined to say which agencies. Another official has previously said these include the National Security Agency, whose job is to monitor phone calls from the United States to other countries, and the Pentagon's Defense Intelligence Agency.

The CIA also gave the State Department information regarding BCCI accounts controlled by the radical Palestinian terrorist organization of Abu Nidal, according to a State Department official. As a result, governments in Poland and East Germany closed down Abu Nidal's front operations in the 1980s, said the official, Alan J. Kreczko, deputy legal adviser to the department.

But Federal Reserve officials testified to Congress this week that the CIA didn't give their agency information it had regarding BCCI's secret control of Washington-based First American Bank after 1982.

CIA's outgoing director, William Webster, has ordered his inspector general to conduct a review of the agency's dealings with BCCI so it can make a complete report to Congress.

Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations terrorism subcommittee investigating BCCI, told reporters Friday the White House is trying to dig up political dirt on him in retaliation for his aggressiveness in the investigation.

White House spokesman Gary Foster denied it, saying: "There's nothing like that here going on. We don't do things like that."

The subcommittee investigation was criticized in remarks on the floor by Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., who said: "Let's face it. Congressional hearings on BCCI may make for a few headlines, but they won't put a single criminal behind bars."

Hedy Lamarr fans offer to help after her arrest for shoplifting

CASSELBERRY, Fla. — Fans of Hedy Lamarr, the screen siren of the 1930s and 1940s, offered to help her financially Friday after she was arrested at a drugstore for investigation of shoplifting.

Lamarr

The actress denied wrongdoing, claiming she paid the pharmacy in cash. Her daughter said Lamarr took several items after paying for others and simply forgot to pay for the later selections.

"People have been calling, asking if she has representation, is she destitute," police spokesman Dennis Stewart said. "To our knowledge she is not destitute. She has some money."

Several callers offered to pay Lamarr's bill, and a woman from California "couldn't understand if the bill's paid, why is there still a crime," said another spokesman, Patrick Simpson.

Lamarr, who is in her late 70s, was arrested Thursday at an Eckerd Drugs in this town north of Orlando with $21.48 worth of laxative tablets and eye drops concealed in her possession, police said.

CHICAGO — Kathleen Turner used an old trick to develop her deep, sexy drawl: She put erasers in her mouth to make it bigger.

Turner

"There's an old exercise, it sounds silly, but it works, to take pencil erasers, put them in your back teeth and you can feel how that stretches the whole back of your mouth," she said in a taped segment for Friday's Oprah Winfrey Show.

The 37-year-old actress said she started the practice while in college.

"I was very fervent then," she said. "I wanted more resonance."

BOSTON — Ireland's first woman president, Mary Robinson, will spend a day in Boston and meet informally with Irish immigrants in October during her first official U.S. tour.

The human rights lawyer also is to receive an honorary degree from Brown University in Providence, R.I., and visit Los Angeles, San Francisco and Chicago during her 10-day visit.

On Oct. 20, Ms. Robinson is tentatively scheduled to attend Mass, a luncheon at the John F. Kennedy Library, and visit with Mayor Raymond L. Flynn at the Boston Ireland Ventures annual trade festival, said Geoffrey Keating, Irish vice consul.

Keating said she also will attend a reception to meet informally with members of the Irish community.

Ms. Robinson, who was elected president in November, studied at Harvard Law School in the late 1960s.

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — Forget crystal pendants and New Age philosophies. The latest in pop ideology, touted by Jane Fonda's ex-husband, Tom Hayden, is environmentalism with a dose of old-time religion.

That's the topic of a college course to be taught this fall by Hayden, a Democratic assemblyman and environmental activist, at Santa Monica College.

Hayden decided to teach the course after returning from a winter trip to an Amazon rain forest. His view is that since government and environmentalists haven't succeeded in protecting the Earth, people may need to call on a higher power.

"We need to see nature as having a sacred quality, so we revere it and are in awe of it," Hayden said. "That forms a barrier to greed and exploitation and overuse, and that comes from a religious perspective.

"We need that argument, that it's God's will," Hayden said.

People may change their wasteful ways more quickly if they realize that God considers pollution a sin, he added.

The 16-week course, which ranges from Genesis to the spiritualism of American Indians and romantics like Walt Whitman, begins next month at the school's psychology department.

WATERFORD, N.J. — Robbie Knievel, son of legendary daredevil Evel Knievel, suffered a separated collarbone when his motorcycle crashed after jumping over 22 cars at a raceway show.

Knievel cleared the cars as the highlight of Thursday night's car show at Atco Raceway, 20 miles southeast of Philadelphia, but overshot the landing ramp and crashed, said Patrolman Joseph Kent.

Knievel later stood and addressed the audience to show he was not seriously hurt, police said.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Country music singer K.T. Oslin says lies have been bandied about, unfairly portraying her as a "dragon lady."

"There were really some mean things said about me in the beginning that came out of left field," she says in the August issue of "Close Up" magazine, published by the Country Music Association.

Endangered Rangers

As National Park Service celebrates 75th birthday, corps of rangers struggles

By Tad Bartimus
AP Special Correspondent

MESA VERDE NATIONAL PARK, Colo. — The National Park Service has replaced the Anasazi as guardian of the land here, but 10,000 years later, today's rangers have much in common with those vanished cliff dwellers.

Magnificent scenery — but inadequate shelter. Clean air — but harsh weather. Star-swept nights — but family hardships.

In many of the nation's 357 national parks, bad housing, low wages, a graying work force combined with declining enlistment, and increasingly hazardous duty have given rangers few reasons to celebrate the 75th anniversary of the National Park Service this summer.

Beginning rangers at parks such as the Grand Canyon, who once took pride in the old motto "I take my pay in sunsets," now supplement their groceries with government-subsidy cheese and milk because they can't feed their families on $15,000 a year, park spokeswoman Maureen Oltrogge said.

Throughout the system, administrators say they hear stories of employees on food stamps but can't document them because of privacy laws.

"One cannot feed a family on sunsets," commented Rep. Constance A. Morella, R-Md., at a hearing on rangers' problems last year.

Rangers who are required to live in parks often inhabit 25-year-old dilapidated trailers, drafty, antiquated dwellings barely up to safety codes, adequate but cramped quarters in cheek-by-jowl housing developments, or, in drastic cases, tent-frame quarters without plumbing, said Pat Smith, who runs the park service's housing department.

The ranger responsible for safeguarding Alaska's historic Anaktuvuk Pass at Gates of the Arctic National Park lives in a 250-square-foot ranger station with no running water. The ranger based on San Miguel Island off Ventura, Calif., lives in a 20-by-8 shipping crate with no indoor toilet. A ranger at Mount Ranier National Park in Washington finally wangled a transfer because he and his wife refused to live in dilapidated park-provided housing, choosing instead to camp in their truck.

First-year rangers at the Statue of Liberty and the Liberty Bell must spend up to 60 percent of their salaries on rent because of high-priced urban housing. In San Francisco, permanent rangers at the Golden Gate National Recreation Area have established an informal food bank at the office to help seasonal and beginning rangers feed themselves.

Congress has appropriated $18 million in the past three years to upgrade park housing, but parks administrators say $547 million is needed to completely upgrade substandard houses and add necessary new ones. The last major effort to modernize and add housing to the park service was in 1966.

"We're chipping away at the problem," said Ms. Smith, who oversees 5,183 National Park Service housing units.

Other federal agencies, like the FBI, provide housing assistance to employees assigned to expensive areas. Not so for the park service.

"Entry-level rangers are living hand-to-mouth in urban areas such as Philadelphia, New York and Los Angeles because they cannot compete for housing on the open market," said Rick Gale, president of the Association of National Park Rangers.

"Congress is real good about authorizing new parks, but not so good about giving money to operate them," said Gale, who is based in Boise, Idaho.

In the past two decades, the low pay and poor housing and a log-jam of career veterans blocking upward mobility has driven more and more of the rangers corps — 3,200 year-round employees and 3,000 seasonal hires — into the private sector or into better-paying branches of state or federal agencies.

Annual system-wide turnover today is 8 percent, compared to 3 percent in the early 1970s. In urban areas, turnover is as high as 20 percent a year.

Children frequently endure long commutes to school, or must get their education at home in isolated areas. Spouses often drive hours to and from jobs that are vital to make ends meet, or forego careers altogether because of a lack of opportunities and isolation. It is not uncommon for dual career park service rangers to work at different parks and meet on weekends.

"I can recommend it (being a ranger), but it's not the life for some people," said Linda Martin, 45, a 19-year NPS veteran who is at Mesa Verde.

The ranks of those familiar folks in the hat are being stretched thinner just at a time when they are needed more than ever. Between 1973 and 1990, Congress added 97 new parks to the system, and last year, nearly 257 million people visited America's official back yard.

At the congressional hearing last year, NPS Director James M. Ridenour said the service is losing its ability to compete for qualified college graduates lured by better pay and benefits elsewhere.

"More than a third of new hirees lack a four-year college degree, and among those with degrees, only 50 percent held them in subjects related to parks and recreation management, history and the natural and biological sciences," Ridenour said.

Law enforcement — the original reason for patrolling parks — once again has become one of the most critical parts of a job that now includes guiding, resource management and interpretation, or helping visitors understand what they're seeing.

Law enforcement rangers throughout the system now carry .357-caliber Magnums, and all are encouraged to wear bulletproof vests on duty as Congress debates whether to authorize them to carry semiautomatic rifles.

Last year, Ranger Robert McGhee, 50, was shot to death while on patrol in Gulf Islands National Seashore in Mississippi when he confronted two prison escapees. His assailants were captured in a police shootout and sentenced to life terms without parole.

"I'm not saying crime is rampant in national parks, but people who commit crimes anywhere else also commit them in national parks," NPS Chief Ranger Walt Dabney said.

For families such as the Hutchinsons here at Mesa Verde, the hardships of low pay and a tiny, old house in the remote place where Colorado, Utah, New Mexico and Arizona come together are outweighed by the benefits of living in beauty and serenity in one of the nation's most prized places.

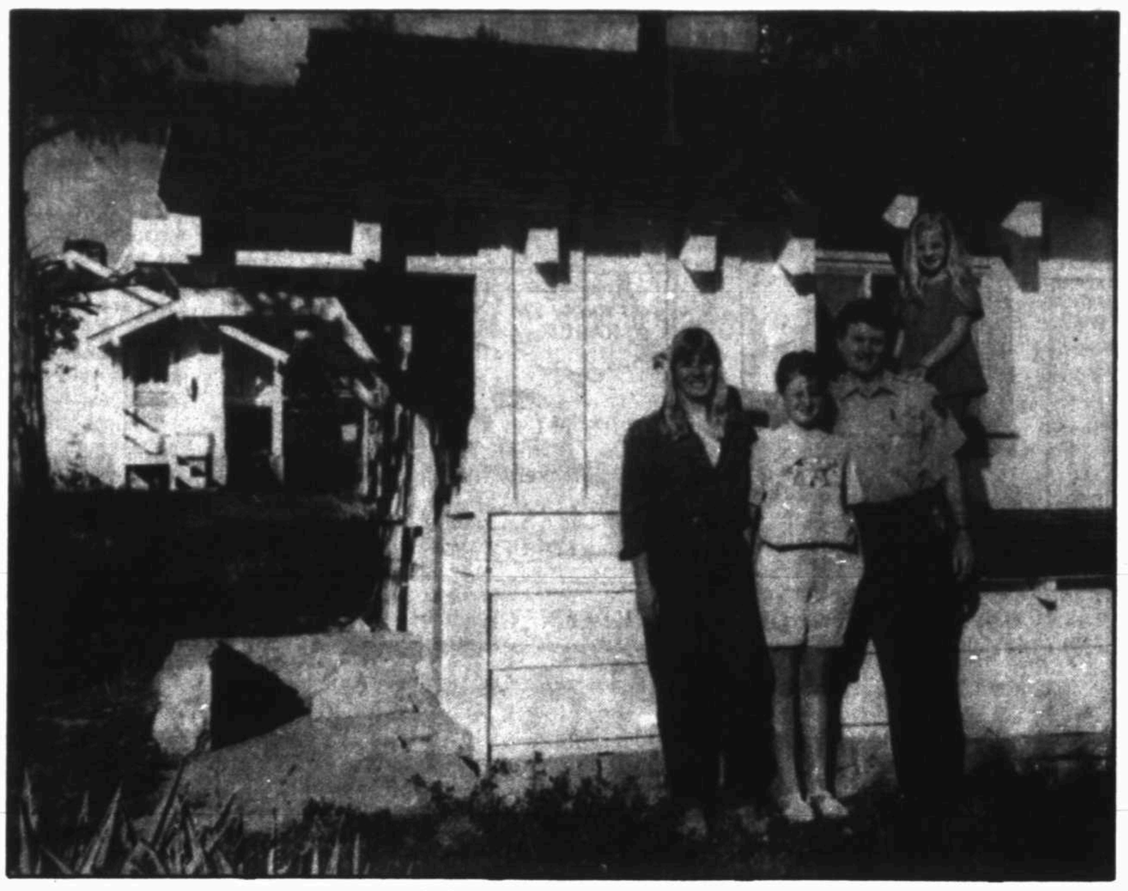
"There are three women, me, and one bathroom," says Art Hutchinson, a ranger who lives in a half-century-old 846-square-foot house with his wife and two daughters and earns an above-average ranger's salary — $21,000 a year.

Hutchinson's daughters, ages 10 and 9, ride the school bus 62 miles daily. His wife, Mona, commutes 110 miles daily to a job with the Bureau of Land Management.

"We think the benefits of park life far outweigh the detriments. Our girls love it, it's beautiful, and it's safe, even though a mountain lion dragged a deer through the yard last winter. I'd prefer a mountain lion to a drive-by shooter in Denver any day," said Hutchinson, 39.

"There's no garage, no storage, no place to plug in appliances we probably don't need anyway, and 99 percent of our books are in storage," he said of his NPS house on the mesa.

"But we don't need curtains on our windows, and when I walk outside at night I only see stars."



Mesa Verde National Park ranger Art Hutchinson, with his wife, Mona, and daughters Abbi, 9, in shorts, and Erin, 10, must balance low pay and inadequate housing to live in a relatively unspoiled environment.

'Ranger-in-a-box' lives in metal shipping container

By Tad Bartimus

They call him the "ranger-in-a-box," because when Mike Maki goes to work 50 miles off the California coast, he lives in a metal shipping container the National Park Service calls home.

Maki, 31, has been a ranger for five years, two of them as chief protector of San Miguel Island, a 14-square-mile chunk of rock 50 miles west of Ventura, Calif., and part of Channel Islands National Park.

During his 10-day shifts, the newly married Maki leaves his wife on the mainland to live in a cargo box 20 feet long and 8 feet wide. Classified as excess federal property, the park service got the box from the Navy as "temporary housing" five years ago.

Sometimes, when work crews come to the island, Maki must share his cramped, uninsulated quarters with up to five other park service employees.

"It's a real unique place," said Maki, laughing. "It looks like you took a big domino, put two cupboards in it, and made it home. I look at it as a place to get out of the wind, which is usually blowing at least 15 knots. Basically, it's 160 square feet of cubicle. We cut three windows in it, put in two beds, and I've jury-rigged a dresser out of milk cartons.

A water tank supplies a small kitchen sink and a patio shower. There is a pit toilet with a great view.

When he isn't on patrol or doing research, Maki entertains himself with a laptop computer and a tiny television, which run off a generator.

"I love my job, and we're getting by with what we've got, but it doesn't have to be this way," said Maki, who spends his four off days between shifts getting reacquainted with his wife, Mary Valentine. She is a ranger at Santa Monica Mountains National Recreation Area, a two-hour drive from Channel Islands headquarters at Ventura.

Maki, who earns $28,000 a year, was required to pay $1.60 per day, 365 days a year, to live in the "conex box" until June 1, when the government waived the requirement because the facility was deemed "substandard housing."

"The experience on the island has been more positive than negative, but next fall I'll start looking for another job within the park service," Maki said. "Hopefully, Mary and I will be able to live together in a nice house."

Every other tenth day, Ranger Mike Maki leaves the central California mainland to live in a 20-foot by 8-foot metal shipping container he calls home on San Miguel Island, which makes up part of the Channel Islands National Park.

Canyon caretaker lives deep inside one of the world's greatest wonders

By Tad Bartimus

Bruce Aiken is one of the lucky ones: The National Park Service built him a new house halfway down the side of the Grand Canyon in 1979.

Since then, Aiken has lived a secluded, pastoral lifestyle with his wife Mary and three children 5½ miles inside one of the world's greatest wonders. The only way out is to hike up the Kiabab Trail to the north rim or, in an emergency, to get a helicopter flight.

Aiken, 40, is a Manhattan native who was searching for adventure and inspiration for his painting when he signed on as a seasonal maintenance worker in 1972. He became permanent caretaker of the park's water plant at Roaring Springs in 1979.

Although his children Mercy, 19, Shirley, 16, and Silas, 13, all were born "on top," the Aikens have home-schooled the kids up until last year, when Mercy went to Grand Canyon High School to finish her senior year.

Aiken, who earns about $28,000 annually, takes four months off work in the winter, when water demand is reduced in the park, and travels the globe with his family.

His paintings of the canyon have enabled him to double his park service income, and have brought him renown among collectors of oil landscapes.

"I really have to keep my nose to the grindstone to make our lifestyle happen, but it's all worth it," he said.

Aiken said his artistic success has not dramatically altered the simple, almost idyllic lifestyle he's found inside the park.

"We got electricity in 1979, when the park built our new house, so we have lights and freezers. But we also have silence and the sound of water from the spring, which bursts out of the canyon wall at 7,000 gallons a minute. There's a veranda, a shake roof, a nice airy yard and a big garden. We can't have pets because of all the wildlife.

"We have no intentions of leaving this place," said the keeper of the Kiabab Trail.

Despite recession, nation spruces up for Columbus day

By Susana Hayward

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — The oldest city in the Americas has spent a fortune sprucing itself up 500 years after Columbus landed on its shores, and not everyone thinks it was a good idea.

President Joaquin Balaguer's $2 billion building spree, begun in 1988, has produced a gleaming new airport, pastel public housing projects, schools, paved roads, dams and assorted monuments.

"It looks like a new country, doesn't it?" said Juan Jose Arteaga, the government economics adviser.

Private economists and some politicians say the unprecedented renovation cannot conceal reality in this impoverished, indebted country of 7 million people. They say most of the projects were financed by printing money.

The government predicts throngs of tourists will come in 1992, more than paying the bill. The visitors, Pope John Paul II among them, will see new apartment houses in place of many of the shantytowns that once ringed this bustling capital of 2.2 million people.

Remains the Dominicans believe to be those of Columbus will be moved from the Santo Domingo Cathedral to the Columbus Memorial Lighthouse, which is 150 feet high and cost $50 million. The lighthouse will light the sky above the oldest city in the Americas with a laser in the shape of a cross.

According to his critics, Balaguer's building program caused the current recession, which resulted in a 5 percent decline in the economy last year. The Dominican Republic has a foreign debt of $4.5 billion and 28 percent of workers are unemployed.

"It will take many years and many millions of dollars to fix this country," said Miguel Ceara Hatton, director of the Center of Economic Investigation.

The critics also say the government has neglected agriculture, public education and health.

Labor unions have held nationwide general strikes to press for wage increases and protest austerity measures designed to satisfy International Monetary Fund conditions for credit. In July, at least three people were killed, dozens wounded and several hundred arrested in clashes between strikers and police.

About 15,000 doctors, nurses and lab technicians in public hospitals began the longest strike in Dominican history in April. Their monthly pay ranges between $100 and $200.

At Our Lady of High Grace maternity hospital, women who have just given birth occupy beds that have strips of cardboard instead of mattresses. One newborn baby, unsupervised in an incubator, was covered by a blood-soaked blanket.

In May, 36,000 teachers walked out of public elementary and high schools, claiming their salaries of $80 a month barely cover transportation. The Dominican Teachers' Association says 90 percent of the nearly 3 million schools lack water and many don't have toilets.

The strikes capped a year of unrest marked by protests, price increases and shortages of food and gasoline. Inflation was a record 100 percent.

Things may be getting better. Balaguer's government stopped printing unbacked currency last year in an attempt to halt the decline, and there has been virtually no inflation since January.

"The economy is better than it was in December, but we have a recession," said economist Ceara Hatton.

Sheik comes to aid of BCCI

■ United Arab Emirates leader begins diplomatic efforts to recover $2 billion loans owed bank.

Associated Press

ABU DHABI, United Arab Emirates — Abu Dhabi has begun diplomatic efforts to recover about $2 billion in loans owed the Bank of Credit and Commerce International by Arab tycoons and other debtors, bankers said Friday.

Sheik Zayed al-Nahyan, his government and members of his royal family hold 77.4 percent of shares in the scandal-plagued bank, whose global transactions have been tainted by accusations of terrorist links and massive fraud.

In one such effort to recover funds, King Hassan II of Morocco dispatched his crown prince on Abu Dhabi's behalf to ask Saudi King Fahd to pressure Saudi businessmen to pay back a reported $1.2 billion, said the Arab and Western bankers, speaking on condition of anonymity.

BCCI's debtors include gulf merchants, sheiks and Pakistani businessmen, said the bankers, who had access to information from bank regulators involved in the case and from a partial list of BCCI's debtors included in a lengthy audit by the U.S. firm Price Waterhouse.

Zayed, who invested more than $1 billion to rescue the bank in 1989 and took majority control in 1990, needs BCCI loans repaid to keep the troubled bank afloat.

He has already promised to pay $85 million to BCCI employees and depositors in England and Wales, and has pledged reimbursements in Pakistan.

On Friday, the French Banking Association demanded that Abu Dhabi also compensate about 2,000 French depositors who have about $66 million in BCCI accounts.

Richard Llaque, deputy director of operations for the Federal Reserve Bank of Peru, left, talks with Fernando Olivera, a member of the Peruvian House of Deputies on Captiol Hill Friday where a Senate panel is holding hearings into BCCI.

Bankers in Abu Dhabi also said Friday that Zayed approved a limited bail-out program favorable to 35,000 depositors, whose deposits have been estimated at $1.2 billion, in his own country.

"Sheik Zayed is a benevolent leader in a true sense, and citizens here look up to him as their father and protector," said Sheik Nahyan bin Mubarak, chairman of the Bank of Credit and Commerce Emirates and a cousin of the ruler.

BCCI has a 40 percent holding in BCCE.

Highly placed banking sources here said Abu Dhabi's position is to restructure BCCI without outright liquidation. They said Zayed would be willing to bail out the largest possible number of depositors although his government is not legally obligated to do so.

According to the Western and Arab bankers — who are close to the Abu Dhabi royal family — Moroccan Crown Prince Mohammed reportedly asked King Fahd last weekend to pressure Saudi businessmen to pay back BCCI loans.

According to the bankers, other debtors to BCCI include:

■ The Gulf Group, a gulf shipping company owned by a Pakistan family called Gokal, which received $405 million in loans.

■ Kamal Adham, the brother-in-law of the late Saudi King Feisal and former intelligence chief of Saudi intelligence, who owes $313 million.

■ Ghaith Pharaon, a Saudi businessman who is the son of King Fahd's physician and has been described by the Federal Reserve Board as BCCI's front man in the United States. He owes $288 million.

■ The Mahfouz family, owners of Saudi Arabia's largest bank, The National Commercial Bank. The family owes $153 million.

The Bank of England spearheaded the freeze of $20 billion of BCCI assets in a stunning crackdown on July 5 that paralyzed BCCI's 69 branches around the world.

The allegations against the bank include fraud, drug-money laundering, holding accounts for terrorists as Abu Nidal, brokering illegal arms for Iran and Iraq, and bribing politicians.

Cypriots heartened by news of peace talks

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Residents cautiously welcomed President Bush's announcement Friday of talks to end the 17-year division that has left Cyprus sliced in two by barbed wire and a demilitarized zone patrolled by U.N. troops.

Greece, which bitterly fought Turkey over the eastern Mediterranean island, also greeted the news with hope. Turkey's foreign ministry was less enthusiastic, stressing that Ankara would insist on influence in Cyprus in any resolution.

In a suprise announcement in Washington, Bush said Greek and Turkish officials had agreed to discuss the future of the island and would confer in September in the United States, assuming they can narrow their differences before then.

The announcement spread quickly through outdoor cafes and tavernas on the Greek side of this medieval city.

"This is all my customers have been talking about since the TV announcement. Everyone is agreed that it is a most hopeful development," said Andreas Georghiou.

"This is great news. If President Bush is calling such a conference on Cyprus then a settlement must be pretty close," surmised George Michaelides, a businessman.

Divisions on Cyprus are visible to the eye but also rest in the attitudes of its 700,000 residents, of whom 18 percent are ethnic Turks.

Greek Cypriots complain to visitors about St. Nicholas cathedral in Famagusta, which the Turks converted to the Lala Mustafa mosque. They neglect to mention that this occurred in the 16th century.

The government on the Greek Cypriot side welcomed Bush's statement "as indicative of the interest of the United States and of President Bush personally in the solution of the Cyprus problem."

Rauf Denktash, the leader of the breakaway state formed in the Turkish-occupied northern third of the island, could not be reached for comment. Only Turkey recognizes his state.

In Ankara, Foreign Minister Safa Giray on Friday said Turkey's guarantee of power in the island was an essential condition in peace talks. He also said Turkey would insist on the political equality of the two communities in Cyprus in any federal system.

In Athens, government spokesman Vyron Polydoras told a news conference, "Greece expresses its satisfaction over the Bush statement."

MOONLIGHTING!

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with qualified, responsible individuals.

OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current carrier force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a carrier, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a carrier?

Depending on the size of the distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!

How long does it take?

The actually delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carriers choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
