Dead's leader dies

SAN FRANCISCO — Jerry Garcia, the master guitarist whose band the Grateful Dead symbolized the 1960s counterculture and remained a top concert draw three decades later, died today at a drug treatment center. He was 53. Story page 8A

Addictive?

WASHINGTON — President Clinton has decided to let the Food and Drug Administration begin the process of declaring the nicotine in tobacco an addictive drug, thus clearing the way for the most significant regulations in the history of the tobacco industry. Administration officials said the president's decision stemmed from his judgment that the FDA had successfully made a scientific and legal case for the addictive nature of nicotine. They said the White House was still reviewing precisely what new restrictions the agency should impose, but Clinton is to announce at least some of them today. Story on 6B

Lotto: $28 million

AUSTIN — No tickets correctly matched all six numbers drawn Wednesday night for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, state lottery officials said. The jackpot was worth $17 million. The numbers drawn from a field of 50 were: 5, 8, 9, 10, 38 and 44. Lottery officials estimate the jackpot for Saturday night's game will be $28 million.

Women with no priors hit road on felonious flight

By Terri Langford
Associated Press

HOUSTON — When the two met in 1992, Joyce Carolyn Stevens was the mousey, timid daughter of a minister working at a Houston psychiatric hospital as an aide.

Rose Marie Turford was a registered nurse and Canadian transplant starting work at the same hospital, already living the American suburban dream, complete with a computer executive husband, a nice home and Little League practice for her boys.

What turned the two to lure and rob men through a telephone dating service, then skip bond and opt for felonious flight has authorities stumped in Canada and the United States.

Their antics have earned them the nicknames of "Thelma and Louise," the characters in a 1991 movie about two women on the lam.

This real-life version, though, includes a mysterious sinister force called "Avery" and a bail bondsman with a heart of gold.

The initial story broke March 14 when police arrested the two at a Houston-area motel. They were charged with three counts of aggravated robbery for robbing at gunpoint three different men.

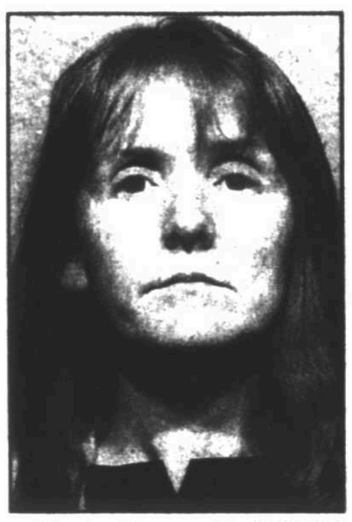

They later were charged with one aggravated robbery and one kidnapping involving another man in Galveston County.

The arrests shocked their friends and family and left law enforcement officers puzzled, since women with such backgrounds rarely get in so deep.

"It just doesn't make any sense," says Mrs.

Refugees' plight

Airlines arrange tight security at nation's airports

■ Transportation secretary orders new security requirements prompted by information from federal law enforcement and intelligence agencies.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Citing the potential for criminal or terrorist acts, the government is ordering tougher security precautions for the nation's airports.

Other means of travel may also face increased scrutiny, officials said. They refused to say what prompted the move.

The airlines encouraged passengers to come to airports early, though federal officials contended that the new precautions should not disrupt travel.

The new security requirements were announced Wednesday by Transportation Secretary Federico Pena, a day after the Federal Aviation Administration notified airlines and airports of the steps. Pena said the measures "will be maintained as long as necessary and will be adjusted as necessary."

"I want to emphasize that we do not have any specific information indicating that airlines or airports or any other part of our national transportation system is specifically threatened," Pena said at a news conference in Des Moines, Iowa. "I believe, however, that it is prudent and reasonable to take these additional measures in order to prevent and deter any possible criminal or terrorist acts."

Pena said the move was prompted by "information provided by federal law enforcement and intelligence agencies, which I am not at liberty to discuss."

Going along with the government order, security at Midland International Airport has been "heightened," Midland Mayor Bobby Burns said late Wednesday night.

"We have made our security adjustments for the airport," Burns said. "We have heightened our security just as the FAA (Federal Aviation Administration) asked us to do.

"We are trying to protect our traveling public as best we can according to what the FAA is telling us."

Airport security is in effect "24 hours a day," Burns noted. "This (bolstered security) is nationwide - not just Midland."

Burns said that he is prohibited from elaborating on the new security measures. To do so would enable terrorists or any miscreant possibly to "circumvent" those security steps.

I don't think the traveling public will

'Letter of intent' for terminal funds remains up in air, FAA officials say

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

In response to a dispute on the availability of federal dollars to help finance a new airport terminal, Federal Aviation Administration officials said a "letter of intent" to designate future entitlement grant funds remains up in the air.

Plans for a new $30 million terminal call for about one-third of the project to be financed using entitlement grants, which are funded through a 10 percent charge on ticket prices.

Tom Dollahite, a critic of the planned new terminal, confronted the City Council Tuesday about availability of that money. Dollahite produced a letter from U.S. Rep. Larry Combest that essentially stated FAA letters of intent had been suspended for 1995 and 1996 due to the federal government overextending promises for federal dollars.

City officials responded that letters of intent had been suspended but only for discretionary funds and, furthermore, Midland had received a prior commitment from FAA officials.

FAA officials in Fort Worth said Wednesday that the administration has taken the position that no new letters of intent be issued in fiscal years 1995 and

MISD holds conference to emphasize provisions of agreement

Justice Department to monitor district's progress

From Staff Reports

On Tuesday night the MISD Board of Trustees voted to enter into an agreement with the Department of Justice and the plaintiff intervenors in the Unitary Status lawsuit. The lawsuit, which was filed by the school district board last year, seeks the dismissal of the 1976 Consent Decree, or court-ordered desegregation plan.

The district accepted the settlement offer from the United States, Dr. Viola Coleman intervenors and League of United Latin American Citizens intervenors.

The school district will be under probationary status for three years as the Justice Department monitors the district's annual progress of meeting the provisions of the "agreed judgment." The provisions are intended to "eliminate remaining vestiges of a dual segregated school system."

Provisions include:

■ Better publicity and encouragement of majority-to-minority transfer for elementary school students, whereby a student can transfer from any school in which the student's race or ethnicity is in the majority to a school where it is in the minority, and transportation will be provided.

■ Developing equitable procedures in

MISD called a news conference Wednesday morning to reiterate the provisions of the agreed judgment school board trustees approved Tuesday night.

The judgment, with neither parties (the U.S. Justice Department and intervenors/MISD) relinquishing their respective positions, will save the school district "time and money" since the issue won't be going to trial, according to MISD Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr.

He said the three-year agreement begins as soon as it is signed by a federal court judge, which may coincide with the first day of school on Monday.

The Justice Department said MISD "has made definite progress in desegregating the Midland school system since the court entered the Consent Decree of 1976." As to how well all vestiges of segregation have been eliminated is where MISD and the Justice Department (and intervenors) part-

Croat hatred targets Serb refugee exodus

SISAK, Croatia (AP) — Thousands of defeated and exhausted Serbs began their slow exodus through Croatia on Wednesday. Croat civilians pelted the refugees with bricks and manure, venting the ethnic hatred that has fueled four years of war in the former Yugoslavia.

Croatian police stood by, some laughing, as several hundred people crowded in on a convoy of some 400 cars near Sisak, 35 miles southeast of Zagreb on the road toward the Serbian border. Children, some as young as 10, threw bricks through car windows.

More than 100,000 Serbs are on the move across rough, rural terrain after a lightning Croat offensive retook land seized by rebel Serbs in a 1991 war. The convoys began moving Wednesday after the United Nations brokered a truce between the Croatian army and the Serbs.

Nica Melikovic, 34, reached into a car whose door already had been ripped off and spat in the face of the Serb driver. "That's what I think of you!" he said.

The refugees cowered in their cars. One woman, blood streaming down her face, tried to shield a baby from flying glass and bricks. It was unclear how many people were hurt as they crept through the gauntlet, but dozens had bloodied faces.

"These people are angry," a policeman said of his fellow Croats as he watched from the side of the road. He refused to give his name. "We have to let them do this. You should be thankful they don't do more."

Croatia seceded from Serb-led Yugoslavia in 1991, and rebel Serbs in Croatia fought a six-month war that claimed a third of Croatia's territory. The Croats' anger reflected bitterness over the war, and over the four years of an uneasy truce that followed.

"It's all very sad," said Rada Toncevic, a Croat woman from Sisak. But, she said, "Croatia will be better with them gone."

The refugees had been trapped south of Zagreb for days by fighting, but Wednesday's cease-fire granted them safe passage to Serbia, the main part of what's left of Yugoslavia.

The agreement also called for an end to the fighting in the last remaining Serb-held areas of Croatia. The Serbs agreed to turn over their heavy weapons to the United Nations.

U.N. escorts were to accompany the refugees, but Croatia later reneged on that part of the deal, refusing to let peacekeepers protect the Serbs, U.N. officials said.

Concern for the refugees' safety was heightened by reports of atrocities over the last several days.

The United Nations said it was investigating at least three cases in which the Croatian army or its allies from the Muslim-led Bosnian army attacked Serb civilians.

U.N. spokesman Phil Arnold described the incidents as "monstrous, inhumane and against all international standards," but would not elaborate.

Leah Melnick, a U.N. spokeswoman, said a Danish peacekeeper had seen soldiers haul five elderly and handicapped Serbs out of a school in the border town of Dvor on Tuesday, then kill them. She did not know which army the soldiers were with.

Yasushi Akashi, the top U.N. official for the former Yugoslavia, had earlier charged that Bosnian army soldiers had executed Serbs, including one in a wheelchair and others who were mentally retarded.

Asked to respond to the allegations, Bosnian Foreign Minister Muhamed Sacirbey told Associated Press Television, "Let them confirm it first."

Another U.N. spokeswoman, Maj. Rita LePage, said an investigation was under way into a bombing Tuesday that may have targeted civilians near Dvor, where fighting quieted after the cease-fire Wednesday.

She said two MiG-21s dropped four bombs. She could not confirm that they were Croatian jets, but two MiG-21s, laden with weapons, were seen leaving Zagreb eight minutes before the attack. Dvor is about an eight-minute flight away.

Gen. Zvonimir Cervenko, the Croatian army commander, denied his jets had attacked civilians. However, he said, "it was possible that some civilians were killed" in attacks on other targets. He claimed Serb forces had used civilians near Dvor as a cover while they withdrew heavy weapons.

Leaders of the Serb rebellions in both Croatia and Bosnia announced a counteroffensive Wednesday to retake the land captured by the Croatian army, saying they might also continue into Zagreb.

The Croats "will pay the highest possible price for what they did to us," Croatian Serb leader Milan Martic said after a meeting with Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic in the Bosnian Serb stronghold of Banja Luka.

But the Croatian army made quick work of the rebels in their three-day offensive, and the Bosnian army has been gaining recently against Serbs there.

It appeared unlikely that the Serbs would be able to mount a strong attack in Croatia without the help of the powerful Yugoslav army. Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic, eager to end U.N. sanctions on what remains of Yugoslavia, seems unlikely to enter the fray.

Mini-state with attitude, Singapore turns 30

SINGAPORE (AP) — Singapore, the mini-state with attitude, turned 30 on Wednesday — rich, secure and proud of its role as defender of an Asian authoritarianism that turned this tiny island into an economic powerhouse in a single generation.

Anniversary celebrations included a military march and air show, a laser and fireworks show, skydivers and dances by school children with giant models of molecules to show off Singapore's scientific aspirations.

Tens of thousands of red and white Singapore flags fluttered from apartment windows.

A crumbling relic of the British Empire at independence in 1965, this nation of 3 million people has prospered as a financial center, electronics maker and the world's second-busiest port.

In exchange for the highest standard of living in East Asia outside of Japan, Singapore's mix of Chinese, Malays and Indians accept a regimented society that flogs vandals and even bans the sale of chewing gum.

Lee Kuan Yew, the Cambridge-educated lawyer who led Singapore for 31 years and remains a dominant figure in government, says such sacrifices were unavoidable.

"We wouldn't be here, we would have not made economic progress, if we had not intervened on very personal matters — who your neighbor is, how you live, the noise you make, how you spit, or what language you use," he said in a 1990 speech.

His son, Deputy Prime Minister Lee Hsien Loong, affirmed last week that Singapore has no intention of following East Asian nations that have allowed strong labor unions and rough-and-tumble politics.

If anything, Singapore is getting tougher — it might add hard-core drug abuse to the list of offenses punishable by flogging.

"If we follow the example of South Korea, Taiwan or the Philippines, in the name of democracy and universal values, we will come to grief," the younger Lee said, insisting that strong government will bring "more good years."

It was almost unimaginable that Singapore could hope for such good years, or even stability, when the 240-square-mile island off the tip of the Malay peninsula was thrust unwillingly into independence on Aug. 9, 1965.

The city-state was expelled from the Malaysian Federation by Malay leaders who were afraid that Lee Kuan Yew and other Chinese politicians would command the political scene of the united country.

Few new countries faced the future in circumstances as dismal as Singapore's. It had no industry, high unemployment, racial strife and the looming threat of invasion by neighboring Indonesia.

Lee wept with despair, and lamented publicly that his resourceless country — which imports even its drinking water from Malaysia — was "the smallest of shrimps in a sea of hungry fish."

Since then, Singapore has averaged economic growth of 8.9 percent a year, and turned its unfriendly neighbors into allies. It has $56 billion in foreign assets, and countries from Peru to India are asking for economic advice.

That success has come at the price of individual rights, creating a society that is productive but often criticized as sterile.

WEATHER WATCH

Today to be usual sunny, hot

Staff Report

Sunny weather.

That's about it. Not too hot.

The weatherman at the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport is calling for mostly sunny skies today, temperatures in the mid-90s, and winds southeasterly to southerly at 10 to 20 mph.

For tonight, the weatherman is predicting fair weather and a low temperature near 70 degrees.

Friday is to be another sunny day and is to shoot the thermometer's mercury to the mid-90s.

Wednesday's peak temperature was 94 degrees, and the overnight low temperature was 69 degrees.

The record high temperature for Aug. 9 is 104 degrees in 1947. The record low temperature for the date is 56 degrees in 1989.

STATE

A strengthening tropical depression in the western Gulf of Mexico brought clouds and northeasterly winds to South Texas on Wednesday. The rest of the state had partly cloudy to fair skies.

At 4 p.m., the center of the depression was located about 200 miles southeast of Brownsville. The depression, with maximum sustained winds of 35 mph, was moving toward the west northwest near 7 mph.

A tropical storm warning was posted for the Texas coast from Baffin Bay southward. The government of Mexico issued a warning for the coast from La Pesca northward to the Rio Grande.

Temperatures peaked in the 80s and 90s. The hot spot at 3 p.m. was Laughlin Air Force Base near Del Rio, reporting 99 degrees.

The North Texas forecast is for partly cloudy skies with sunshine by afternoon. Highs in the mid to upper 90s. Lows in the mid to upper 70s.

South Texas is expected to be partly cloudy with highs in the mid 90s. Lows in the mid 70s.

NATION

Rain spread through the upper Midwest and pushed south into the mid-Atlantic states Wednesday, while the West had record highs and lows.

Storm warnings were posted along the Mexico-Texas border when a tropical depression developed in the Gulf of Mexico.

A band of heavy thunderstorms pushed across Wisconsin, through Chicago and into Indiana in the morning, bringing 2 to 3 inches of rain to some areas. There was flooding in Oshkosh and Fond du Lac, Wis., reports of funnel clouds, and the wind snapped trees and power poles.

A cluster of heavy morning thunderstorms rolled off Lake Erie into eastern Ohio, pouring about 4 inches of rain onto the Lorain and Vermillion areas and flooding streets and a few basements.

Four to 6 inches fell in Ohio's Washington County in three hours Wednesday, the National Weather Service said. High water or debris damaged and closed a bridge, but no injuries were reported.

The West saw record lows for a second day, hard on the heels of Monday's record highs. Morning low records included 35 in Pocatello, Idaho; 31 in Butte, Mont.; 41 in Casper, Wyo.; and 47 in Pendleton, Ore.

Jackson, Wyo., cooled to 29 degrees, as did West Yellowstone, Mont. Other cold spots included Big Piney, Wyo., at 30 degrees, and Meacham, Ore., and Randolph, Utah, both at 32 degrees.

In contrast, Corpus Christi, Texas, was 81 degrees, a high minimum record. Phoenix cooled to only 90 degrees, breaking its record for the highest minimum temperature.

Showers and thunderstorms were likely to roll across the Great Lakes and into the Ohio Valley, bringing heavy rain and strong winds. Flash flooding was possible from the Ohio Valley into the Appalachians.

Other storms were expected to develop in the Plains, from eastern Colorado into Kansas and Iowa, with tornadoes possible.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms were possible across southern Arizona and New Mexico and into Texas, with more widely scattered storms spreading north into Utah and Colorado.

More showers were expected to spread into Washington and Oregon.

FELONS: Middle-class women hit road on crime spree

(From 1A)

Turford's attorney, Mike Lamson. "Upper middle class. It just doesn't jive."

Friends remember Ms. Stevens, 30, as a timid woman who spoke in a low voice. She was arrested last December at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport for carrying a gun in her bag but she failed to show up for a hearing. Other than that run-in with the law, there is no other indication she had a taste for crime.

Family members are keeping mum.

"I really have no comment. And that's all I have to say for the time being," said mother-in-law Shirley Turford, of Canada.

What's happened is either a case of collusion or coercion. Just who coerced whom is another riddle altogether.

The friendship between the two began soon after Mrs. Turford, 35, joined Spring Shadows Glen rehabilitation hospital three years ago. According to earlier police reports, Ms. Stevens convinced her new friend that she was in trouble with the mysteri . "Avery."

'The only way we can keep the heat on these girls to keep them in front of the public eye is to do things unusual to cause the media to pay attention.'

— Clement Romeo, bail bondsman

Lamson contends client was kidnapped or unde ome sort of duress when the two jumped their combined $500,000 bond, one day after it was posted by relatives on May 12.

But bail bondsman Clement Romeo discounts that theory. He's started a T-shirt publicity campaign with the women's pictures on it to drum up possible sightings and capture.

He points the finger at Carolyn Stevens, speculating she lured Mrs. Turford into an exciting dark world with phony tales of espionage and danger.

"Carolyn is Avery," Romeo said. "But I don't know Rose knew this. I think Carolyn was able to weave a web."

Police say the duo may be connected to five other incidents in Las Vegas and Houston beginning in January.

Soon after Ms. Stevens moved in with the Turford family, she began showing up with injuries she says were inflicted by "Avery" and that he was threatening the Turford family.

Mrs. Turford's husband Brian, now working for a firm in the Detroit area, did not return a phone call to The Associated Press on Wednesday.

The last real clue in the case came in July when a stolen rental car obtained by a Joyce Stevens in Edmonton, Alberta was discovered in Toronto. A note left in the car apologized to the rental agency and asked them to inform police that the car no longer was stolen. Stevens' name was on the note.

Since that time, dozens of sightings, most turning out to be false, have been made in Canada.

Romeo says he's trying to help find the women so their parents' property will not be foreclosed on and he, in turn, doesn't appear as some sort of villain. So he's turned to T-shirts.

"The only way we can keep the heat on these girls to keep them in front of the public eye is to do things unusual to cause the media to pay attention," said Romeo.

Ms. Stevens' attorney Bill Burge says he has little to offer. He last heard from his client shortly after she disappeared.

"I already told her she needs to come in," Burge said. "She said she was going to."

TIGHT: Government orders security measures at airports

notice it," Burns said of the added security.

While officials declined to discuss any specific threat, several factors reportedly played a part in the decision to tighten security, including the planned visit of Pope John Paul II to the United States and a meeting of the United Nations General Assembly next month, the recent arrest of alleged Islamic terrorist leader Mousa Abu Marzuk and the New York trial of 11 people charged with conspiring to plot terrorist acts.

Officials were reluctant to detail what would be done but one airport official outside Washington said the move was to "Level 2" security. By comparison, "Level 4" security was in place during the Persian Gulf War.

Chris Chiames of the Air Transport Association, the trade group representing the major airlines, said federal officials had not reported any specific threat to his organization.

"Obviously, if there is a threat to aviation, we are prepared to deal with that," Chiames said. He said the airlines were already moving to tighten security, but refused to provide details of what was being done.

Chiames said the measures would probably not delay most travelers, and would concentrate on surveillance and behind-the-scenes activities.

"A lot of it may have to do with what's underneath the airplane (in the hold) that the passengers won't notice," said Marty Salfen of the Air Line Passengers Association in Dallas.

Two steps that were introduced during the Persian Gulf War, banning curbside baggage check-in and requiring photo identification for passengers, are not expected to be taken this time.

"What the public will see is more uniformed police inside the terminals. They'll see more canine units and handlers inside the secured area of airport," said spokeswoman Angel Biasatti at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

Mark Pesci, a spokesman for Philadelphia International Airport, said that "passengers will see more signs advising them to have their luggage with them at all times and that their luggage will be subject to search. Generally, it's a heightened sense of security and everyone will be more aware of what's going on."

In addition to the tightened airport security, Pena said other forms of travel, including railroads, mass transit and cruise ships, are also being asked to review their security precautions.

The Air Transport Association's Chiames expressed concern that the reports of increased security would frighten travelers, but promised cooperation with any federal directive.

Security at California airports was tightened during a period of concern about the so-called Unabomber, but this is the first national alert since the Persian Gulf War.

The airlines and the Transportation Department advised passengers to expect tighter security and asked for cooperation.

"All passengers — traveling on any form of transportation — are encouraged to be on the alert for any suspicious, unattended bags, parcels or other items. Passengers may be required to answer questions about their luggage," Pena said.

Such precautions are common in most foreign airports.

FUNDS: FAA says letter of intent is up in air

(From 1A)

1996. But whether this policy was without exception did not receive a definitive answer from officials.

Despite the hold on letters of intent, Midland representatives met with FAA Administrator David R. Hinson — who heads the agency — in July to discuss issuance of a letter of intent, FAA officials said.

"At this time no decision has been made although it is still under consideration," said Genny Barber, an FAA spokeswoman for the southwest region.

Ms. Barber and Charles Carroll, FAA project manager for the airports division for the southwest region, said they were not aware of any time frame on when a decision might be made. FAA public affairs officials in Washington D.C. referred all questions back to FAA officials in the southwest region.

City Manager Mike McGregor has said the city can still go forward with the new terminal even without a letter of intent. The letter — which would secure funds from entitlement grants through 2001 — only facilitates the flow of revenue in relation to issuance of bonds, he said.

Without the letter, McGregor said, entitlement grants from the past two years could be coupled with this year's grant funds and that of the next three years. Dollahite expressed skepticism about such a plan based on a letter from an FAA official that stated past funds were already designated.

Carroll, with the FAA, said entitlement grants for the past two years have been tentatively allocated but there "is a possibility to use the money that's available to them (Midland) for a new terminal building."

Without a letter of intent, entitlement grants could be designated on a yearly basis for the new terminal building.

As for the possibility of discontinuing programs that give entitlement grant funds back to cities where the money originated, Carroll said: "I guess that possibility exists but I don't think there's been a year we didn't have a program in 30 years."

The Airport Improvement Program (AIP), which currently allocates entitlement grants, has been in place since the early 1980s, he said. In 1994, Congress renewed that program through the end of the fiscal year 1996, he said.

If all goes as planned, construction of a new terminal will begin after the new year with completion about two years later, officials said.

Funding, in addition to the expected entitlement grants, will come from Passenger Facility Charges ($3 per enplanement tagged on ticket costs) and airport revenues (concessions, parking and landing fees), officials said.

The go-ahead to build a new terminal was ratified with a unanimous City Council vote in October 1993. City officials maintained the current terminal was in poor shape and would cost more to renovate than replace. In addition, officials have expressed concern about expansion to allow for future growth.

Dollahite has long opposed a new terminal plan because he feels Midlanders should be able to vote on whether it is needed.

AGREE: MISD outlines out-of-court agreement

ed ways.

Trustees, however, voted 6-1 (with Jackie Hamilton opposed) to approve the agreement that will dismiss the federal court-ordered judgment if the school district meets all the provisions in the agreement. The federal court will monitor district progress annually.

Ms. Hamilton wanted clearer language in the agreement and specification of which schools qualify for stand-alone status, meaning they could be removed from the cluster system of desegregation. The six schools that qualify are Bowie, Long, Burnet, Houston, Bonham and Emerson elementary schools.

Trustee James Fuller said he voted in favor of the agreement in order to represent the wishes of his district. "I voted the way my constituents wanted me to vote, but with strong reservations," he said.

Fuller said he is concerned with the scarcity of African Americans represented in district staff. "It is a tremendous stumbling block going into the agreed judgment without cleaning up our act, so to speak. This is going to be a major sticking point."

The agreement said the district "shall develop equitable procedures to ensure that principals, faculty and staff are assigned in a way that does not contribute to the racial identifiability of elementary campuses." It calls for encouraging African Americans and Hispanics to apply for positions to the upper level administrative staff, but asks that qualifications, training and experience be taken into account for all individuals and that "no appointment to any administrative staff position shall be made solely upon the race or ethnicity of the individual."

The Justice Department alleged that minority principals hire more minority teachers and minority principals shouldn't be hired solely for minority-heavy campuses.

MISD Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. said some African American and Hispanic principals have been assigned to campuses that were not heavily minority in the past, such as retired educator Mamie Williams, former principal of Scharbauer Elementary School (a majority Anglo school); and Adelita Carrasco at (racially mixed) Jane Long Elementary School.

In the past, minority members of the community also have requested that minority principals be assigned to schools in their neighborhoods to serve as role models, such as having a bilingual principal at DeZavala Elementary School, a school with a heavy bilingual population.

"The Justice Department is giving us latitude in the specifity of that section (concerning staff assignments to elementary school campuses)," Baressi said. "For example, we have to assign the bilingual staff where the bilingual students are. However, we need to ensure we do a good job of placing principals, and hiring minority administrators. We are going to be accountable in that we are fair in all our assignments of staff. The procedures are all in place, and I believe we can do a fair job to the satisfaction of everybody."

PROVISIONS: Officials to monitor MISD

staffing.

- Developing a plan by Oct. 15 for MISD's bilingual and English as a Second Language programs.
- Developing a plan to maximize participation of all students, but particularly minority students in co- and extra-curricular activities. The plan for this should be completed by Oct. 15 and should be in place by January 1996.
- Developing a curriculum that puts greater emphasis on the three dominant ethnic and racial groups for Midland Carver Cultural Center. By Oct. 15, appoint a fully representative tri-ethnic committee to actively involve the Midland community in the development of school activities at Carver.
- Developing, by Jan. 1, 1996, a plan effectively dealing with the racial identifiability of courses in grades seven through 12. The plan should be implemented no later than the 1996-97 school year, plus monitoring the racial proportion of students enrolled in general and advanced courses.
- Developing a plan, by Jan. 1, 1996, that ensures the gifted and talented program accurately identifies all children suited for the program.
- Developing a five-year facilities use plan by March 1, 1996. The plan should assess present facilities, expected needs, and how those needs will be met given desegregation obligations. The plan should also deal with whether new school construction is anticipated in the next five years, include locations for any new anticipated campuses, and provide analysis of the impact of any new school locations on desegregation.
- Consider changes in the current elementary student assignment through an appointed committee with 10 persons appointed by MISD, 10 by the intervenors and an additional person added as chairperson, appointed by the committee. MISD shall also have the option (during the next three years) to remove any elementary school that is not racially identifiable from the cluster system.

Croatia's victory leads to new dangers, diplomatic efforts

By George Jahn
Associated Press

ZAGREB, Croatia — Srebrenica, Zepa, Bihac. Buzzwords of the Bosnian war just a few weeks ago, they have been eclipsed by the whirlwind rout of rebel Serbs in neighboring Croatia.

Now, more than 100,000 Serb refugees are fleeing to Bosnia, and Croatia has suddenly become a regional power. Bosnia's rebel Serbs are squabbling, and Serbia sits on the fence, weighing its options.

Such shifts in the political and ethnic landscape of former Yugoslavia have foreign powers jockeying for position. Some are trying to keep the lid on what could turn into wider and more tragic war, others are exploring new possibilities to end it.

Things were simpler, if no less grim, just two weeks ago, with the world finally seeming to get its act together on Yugoslavia.

After Serb conquests of Srebrenica and Zepa in Bosnia, NATO and the United Nations drew up plans to protect the Muslim enclave of Bihac with vigorous air strikes. A 12,500-strong rapid reaction force with real fighting punch was to respond to further Serb attacks on peacekeepers.

Croatia was pulsating with tension bequeathed by the 1991 Serb insurrection that left rebels with a third of the republic. But with the world focused on Bosnia, Croatia was ignored — until last Friday, when its forces struck.

It was all but over three days later, with the Serbs fleeing. But as fighting ebbs in Croatia, uncertainties grow for the larger region.

The victim just four years ago, Croatia looms as a key player in the future shape of Bosnia.

Croat-Muslim military cooperation led to rebel Serb defeats in Croatia and some Serb losses in Bosnia. But loyalties here change as quickly as the Balkan weather — Croats have fought Muslims, and Serbs and Muslims have had local alliances at times during the past three years of Bosnia's war.

One key worry is whether Croatia now will seek agreement with Serbia to carve up Bosnia.

Even as Croatian President Franjo Tudjman decorated Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic with a high medal this week, the Times of London reported that Tudjman had sketched a divided Bosnia on the back of a menu during a banquet in London three months ago. It was too much for Bosnian Foreign Minister Muhamed Sacirbey.

'Croatia should know that from now on and for the next 100 years, they will not have peace till Serbs get their territories back.'

— Radovan Karadzic
Serb self-styled president

"We have to be cynical about a Croatia that has gone from being a victim to ... a menace," he warned.

Foreign powers already are testing the new waters.

Russia, traditionally a friend of Serbia, called Tudjman and Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic to Moscow for peace talks. Calming Bosnian worries somewhat, Tudjman said he wanted Izetbegovic to come along.

The United States, which supports the Bosnian-Croatian cooperation, is working on new proposals.

Secretary of State Warren Christopher said the "new strategic situation" — a euphemism for rebel Serb defeats in Croatia and Bosnia — might lead to progress.

Two senior U.N. officials are said to be carrying to Europe a new map on partitioning Bosnia along with possible plans on replacing peacekeepers with another force that would actively help the Bosnian government.

Washington clearly wants to act while the Serbs are in disarray, with their top leaders blaming each other for their defeats.

Their self-styled president, Radovan Karadzic, wants to oust Gen. Ratko Mladic, his military commander, but Mladic says he's staying. If that dispute is resolved, the Bosnian rebels could use tens of thousands of defeated Serb fighters from Croatia to mold a more formidable force.

The Croatian victory also may strengthen those who want the United Nations out. Long ineffective in Bosnia, they became irrelevant in Croatia, where the government blitz on the rebels went over, around and through them. But their withdrawal would take months and pull NATO — and U.S. ground forces — into Bosnia.

Eastern Slavonia, the last Croatian region still in rebel hands, looms unresolvable.

That area borders Serbia proper, and Serbia, which runs what remains of Yugoslavia, is unlikely to permit a Croatian attack without striking back. It already sent tanks and other hardware rumbling toward the region during the Croatia's blitz.

Croatia is weighing its options. Foreign Minister Mate Granic says he wants negotiations. But Defense Minister Gojko Susak said his country was ready to go to war over eastern Slavonia.

That might be a bluff. Even so, peace is far away, as is political and territorial stability. Milosevic might tire of waiting for the world to lift sanctions on Yugoslavia and resume backing the Serb rebels. But the fight will go on even without him.

Safe in Serb-held areas of Bosnia, Croatian Serb leaders on Wednesday likened their struggle to the more than 40-year Palestinian fight for self-determination. Karadzic backed them.

"Croatia should know that from now on and for the next 100 years, they will not have peace till Serbs get their territories back," Karadzic said. "Croatia will not be stable and secure till Serbs get their rights."

Settlement good for MISD, Midland

The agreed judgment entered into Tuesday night by Midland Independent School District (MISD) trustees and the U.S. Justice Department along with intervenors appears to hold the promise of resolving once and for all the Justice Department's desegregation order against the district while eventually achieving unitary status for the school district.

Of course, that end is contingent on MISD eliminating "remaining vestiges of a dual segregated school system" within three years, at which point the district can seek and be granted unitary status.

While both sides — MISD and the Justice Department and intervenors — no doubt will claim a victory via the agreed judgment, in reality both were preparing for next week's federal court appearance in an air of uncertainty. MISD contends it has met requirements of its desegregation order, while the Justice Department asserts that it needs to do more to remove all vestiges of segregation. To an extent, both arguments may have had some validity.

In a sense, however, the agreed judgment looks particularly favorable for the school district in three regards: 1) It avoids what could have been an expensive legal proceeding, 2) it moves MISD a step closer to achieving unitary status and 3) it promises to give the Midland community a way to put the specter of segregation behind it.

This compromise looks like a good overall settlement for Midland Independent School District and the community.

GEORGE WILL

Calif. governor could be one to beat Dole

WASHINGTON — Last weekend at the Willard Hotel, near the White House he proposes to move into in 17 months, Pete Wilson occupied the Calvin Coolidge Suite. That was not incongruous.

Will

Like Coolidge, whose flinty demeanor concealed a considerable wit, Wilson only seems as bland as oatmeal. He can be funny and scathing (on foreign policy President Clinton "doesn't appreciate the gravity of his own inadequacies") but rarely lets those aspects of his personality interfere with the sedative effect of his public persona. Like Coolidge, Wilson has been a mayor and a governor. (Wilson could become the first president to have been a mayor of a major city, a senator and a governor.) And like Coolidge, Wilson knows how executive action can get the nation's attention.

Gov. Coolidge came to national prominence, and to the vice presidency, because he used the militia to break the Boston police strike of 1918. Wilson has been around politics since serving as an advance man for Nixon's ill-fated gubernatorial campaign in 1962. He has been in public office since he was elected to the state assembly in 1966. He has been a significant figure since he served 12 years as San Diego's mayor. He has been a player in national politics since he went to the Senate in 1983. He became a political heavyweight when he became governor in 1991. But he did not capture the attention of a national audience until he got the regents of the University of California to repeal affirmative action.

So aides to this 61-year-old, who is on the threshold of his fourth decade in public office, think he may be the closest thing to a fresh face in the Republican race. His issues, like his manner of advancing them, are what you might expect from a former Marine platoon leader. They are four facets of the nation's fraying, as conservatives understand that: affirmative action, illegal immigration (in 1994 he led the charge for Proposition 187, which limits social services for illegals), welfare (there has been a decline in welfare spending, or welfare reform, or both, in each of his five years as governor) and crime (he was an early advocate of a "three strikes and you're out" sentencing law).

He is more interested in defense and foreign policy than any candidate other than Sen. Richard Lugar. He is more hawkish than Lugar, as in, for example, his support of ballistic missile defense. Hence his opposition to making a fetish of the ABM treaty that was signed 23 years ago with a nation that no longer exists.

His affirmative action dust-up caused his support for the nomination to double between June and July. Double a small number (5 percent) and you get a not very large number, but it puts him third, close behind Sen. Phil Gramm (13 percent) whose rivals say he is (in the political verb of the week) "cratering." That means crashing to earth hard.

Wilson still is 42 points behind Bob Dole, but first things first, and the first thing is to become the sole surviving plausible (that is, other than Pat Buchanan) alternative to Dole. Then he must hope Dole stumbles and Republicans become more worried than they currently are about the difficulty of defeating Bill Clinton.

Wilson will not stumble: No one is more doggedly disciplined about staying on message. And having won four statewide elections in 12 years, he can plausibly say to Republicans: Clinton is so weak in the South and much of the West, he cannot win without California's 54 electoral votes, so nominate me and be assured of Republican control of both political branches of the federal government for the first time since 1954.

He thinks the nominee will be known before California's March 26 winner-take-all primary picks 16 percent of the delegates needed to nominate. He says he must finish "at least third" in Iowa, and at least second in New Hampshire. But then what? He says he will do well, with the help of Massachusetts' Gov. Weld, in New England, but too few people live there. He thinks he will do well in New York on March 7, but New York's Republican leaders, who favor open political competition about as much as Castro does, support Dole, so even getting on the ballot will be difficult.

The former Marine infantryman probably has the best chance of any Republican to defeat Dole, the former Army infantryman, but it is still a long uphill march from the Willard to the White House.

ANOTHER VIEW

Help from neighbors could have cut death toll

More than 450 people died in Chicago alone during the recent heat wave that saw the temperature soar to 106. ...

When the magnitude of the Chicago tragedy became apparent, many started pointing fingers. They said Mayor Richard Daley and others in city government should have done much more to monitor and help the elderly and others who suffered and died in the heat.

Perhaps the city could have done better; Daley admitted that. Cities like Chicago are much more prepared to deal with a foot of snow than with triple-digit heat and stifling humidity. ...

We can't help but wonder if the body count in Chicago wouldn't have been much lower if friends, neighbors and relatives would have taken the extra step to look out for each other when the going got tough.

Simply knocking on the apartment door of the aging widow who lived across the hall might have been a life-saving step. Offering to fetch some ice or to find some air-conditioned respite would have been important gestures that required little effort. ...

Government may have been able to do more to help those dying in Chicago's heat, but friends and neighbors could have done so very much more.

— The Janesville Gazette

MIKE ROYKO

Good writing is a plus, especially on death row

Here is some career advice for anyone who plans on becoming a murderer: Develop your writing skills.

Royko

This could prove to be far more significant than your choice of weapons or lawyers, especially if you land on Death Row.

That's because big names in literary, intellectual and show business circles tend to be far more sympathetic to an articulate killer than some lowbrow fiend who drools and grunts.

We're seeing a classic example of that in the case of a convict named Mumia Abu-Jamal, 41, who awaits execution in Pennsylvania for the murder of a Philadelphia cop.

Abu-Jamal has won the loyalty and affection of prominent authors, actors, academics and other deep thinkers not only in this country but across Europe.

Obviously, he did not win their affection by being some slack-jawed street thug who caves in a skull for a watch and a wallet.

No, Abu-Jamal wears dreadlocks and is a former Black Panther who became a radio reporter and writer. He is also described as an "activist," whatever that means these days.

The crime occurred back in 1981.

According to the evidence presented at Abu-Jamal's trial, at about 4 o'clock one morning, Abu-Jamal's brother was being questioned about a traffic violation by Police Officer Daniel Faulkner.

Abu-Jamal appeared, and there was an argument, a fight, then gunfire.

The cop was shot dead. Abu-Jamal was wounded, and a .38 was at his side.

Witnesses said they saw Abu-Jamal shoot the cop. The defense said somebody else did it and ran away.

But Abu-Jamal and his brother didn't testify, so the jury never got a firsthand account of how he happened to get shot by the cop, or how the cop was shot with the gun found at his side.

And the defense didn't identify the somebody else who did it and ran away.

So the jury was kind of stuck with Abu-Jamal.

In the years that have passed, Abu-Jamal has written essays from his cell about his life and the injustice he has suffered. His fame has spread across borders and oceans.

And lately his fame as a victim of injustice, a political prisoner and a heroic underdog in an oppressive society has just exploded.

To give you an idea how popular Abu-Jamal is, in Rome more than 100,000 people signed free-Mumia petitions that were given to the U.S. Embassy.

It's hard to imagine that there are 100,000 people in Rome who took that keen an interest in the details of a 1981 cop-shooting in Philly. Maybe they confused Abu-Jamal with Rocky Balboa.

More than 1,000 protesters marched in Berlin and chanted "Free Mumia." Ah, those sentimental Germans — they have such a soft spot for minorities.

At a big literary gathering in Paris, a famous Chinese poet read a poem about the case. The news reports didn't say if he read it in Chinese, French, English, rap or if it rhymed.

And the prominent writer who organized the Paris literary gathering flatly declared that Abu-Jamal was a political prisoner and had been framed.

Unfortunately, he didn't offer evidence as to how the frameup occurred. Maybe he is suffering from writer's block and will tell us when the malady clears up.

In New York, big-name authors got together with members of the Committee to Save Mumia and held a press conference. William Styron, who wrote "Sophie's Choice," said Abu-Jamal's death sentence is considered "an evil and barbaric act not only in the United States but by vast numbers of people throughout the world."

Styron didn't say how these vast numbers of people throughout the world feel about the children and widows of dead cops. But, then, everybody has problems.

All of this just shows how important it is to pay attention to your English teachers and learn how to write a good essay.

Throughout America's prison systems, there are hundreds or thousands of convicted killers, many of whom could tell true-life stories as interesting as Abu-Jamal's.

Why don't we hear about them? Because most of them can't even write a postcard. And if they could, they'd probably scribble something like: "The reeson I shooted that old short-order cook and the fat watress was that I was drunked up and got mad and I needed cash moneys and I don't remember much else so tell my old mom goodbye to sell my pickup truck."

Well, you can't expect people like Whoopi Goldberg, E.L. Doctorow, Ed Asner, Jesse Jackson and all those other famous authors and deep thinkers to be inspired by the third-grade scratchings of some ordinary cutthroat. They expect literary style.

Which might explain why almost nothing has been said or written about Daniel Faulkner, the cop whom Abu-Jamal was convicted of murdering.

Whether the cop could write anything more than traffic tickets isn't known. And it's too late to ask.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, Aug. 10, the 222nd day of 1995. There are 143 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Aug. 10, 1846, Congress chartered the Smithsonian Institution, named after English scientist James Smithson, whose bequest of half a million dollars had made it possible.

On this date:

In 1792, during the French Revolution, mobs in Paris attacked the palace of Louis XVI. (The king was taken into custody, put on trial for treason later that year, and executed the following January.)

In 1809, Ecuador struck its first blow for independence from Spain.

In 1821, Missouri became the 24th state.

In 1874, Herbert Clark Hoover, the 31st president of the United States, was born in West Branch, Iowa.

In 1921, Franklin D. Roosevelt was stricken with polio at his summer home on the Canadian island of Campobello.

Martha's Vineyard concert sets off World War III

MARTHA'S VINEYARD — Americans are lethargic about most things. The only one that seems to make them willing to lay down their lives is a big-name concert.

Buchwald

And that is why historians are still pondering how World War III started on Martha's Vineyard. Their conclusion is that it originated in August 1995.

What happened was that the Agricultural Hall trustees decided to have a concert to raise money for its roof. They persuaded singers Carly Simon and James Taylor to reunite after nearly 17 years of not appearing together. At the time it sounded like a good idea.

But when word got out about the concert, all hell broke loose. It was carried on radio and television and the Internet from Nantucket to New Zealand.

When tickets were put on sale they were gobbled up in a matter of minutes, and suddenly this tight little island was divided between those who held seats and those who didn't.

Once again, a conflict was created between the Haves and Have-Nots, which could lead only to terrible things.

It might not have gotten out of hand if the Haves hadn't flaunted their tickets in front of the Have-Nots. The Haves would flip them out on Main Street in Vineyard Haven and Edgartown — they made up Polish jokes about those who did not have seats, they demanded respect from the Have-Nots and treated the unticketed like the homeless.

The Have-Nots got sick and tired of catering to the privileged class. They said just because the Agricultural Hall had run out of seats didn't make them second-class citizens. They started to form militias and train in Chilmark for the showdown that was inevitable.

At this moment the United Nations became alarmed and sent in troops from Britain, France and Luxembourg to keep the peace.

The first hostilities broke out when a man in Menemsha accused a fisherman of stealing his tickets from his pocket at the Home Port Restaurant. The lobsterman said it was a lie. He said he found his tickets in a lobster pot off Gay Head.

The Indians said if this was true, then the tickets belonged to them.

There didn't seem to be any end to hard feelings. The Haves decided they had better protect themselves and brought in a boatload of arms from China. One person who held a $100 seat said, "The only thing the ticketless rabble understands is force."

At this point the Have-Nots set up a long-range howitzer on Naushon Island, aimed at the Vineyard.

The officer ordered the first shot fired. The projectile rose in an arc and exploded. Right through the roof of the Agricultural Hall. The trustees then decided because of the war not to hold a concert after all.

Protesters: I.G. Farben makes mockery of its victims

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — The SS was abolished, the Nazi brown shirts too. But I.G. Farben, a company whose name evokes the thousands it worked to death at Auschwitz, still exists, much to the rage of its victims.

An annual meeting Wednesday featured shouting matches between the company's managers and several protesters, who demanded I.G. Farben be liquidated immediately and the proceeds paid to surviving slave laborers.

Another dozen people demonstrated outside the meeting at a Frankfurt airport hotel. Peter Gingold, a 79-year-old Jew whose family died at Auschwitz, wore a sandwich board that read, "My brother and sister were murdered with poison gas from I.G. Farben."

"The existence of this company makes a mockery of its victims," said Gingold, who has protested at the company's annual meetings for the past 10 years. "Their shares are stained with blood."

Many big German corporations have shown a willingness recently to more frankly face their Nazi past. Deutsche Bank, Germany's largest private bank, recently helped publish a history that described the bank's role in stripping Jews of their property in the 1930s. Hoechst chemicals pledged a large sum to help maintain German Holocaust memorials.

I.G. Farben's war-related factories included a notorious synthetic rubber plant at Auschwitz where 30,000 people worked until they died or were deemed unfit for work and sent to the gas chambers. A subsidiary produced the Zyklon-B cyanide tablets used to gas hundreds of thousands of concentration camp inmates.

In 1953, I.G. Farben's assets were divided among Hoechst, BASF, Bayer and other firms, and the company remains basically as a trust to settle claims and lawsuits from the Nazi era.

I.G. Farben managers say it has paid its debt to the victims and that its first duty now is to creditors and stockholders. But survivor groups see the continued existence of I.G. Farben — 42 years after it was stripped of its assets — as an insult.

Many of the 350 shareholders at Wednesday's meeting shouted at fellow shareholder Eduard Bernhard when he demanded the company's dissolution.

"I won't allow it, you blockhead," said Ernst C. Krienke, head of the supervisory board.

Six young leftists stood up and shouted "Down With Fascism!" and were wrestled out of the hall by private security guards as some shareholders yelled, "Throw them out!"

Krienke pointed out that the company paid $8 million in 1957 to the U.S.-based Jewish Claims Conference, which compensated an estimated 10,000 western European, Israeli and U.S. Jews.

It didn't pay eastern European Jews and non-Jewish victims, including thousands of Poles. Krienke said that was because there was no bilateral German treaty with the eastern states authorizing such payments.

About 8,000 claims have been filed, said Henry Mathews, a shareholder who, like Bernhard and several others, bought a small amount of Farben stock to be able to voice their objections at stockholders' meetings.

Krienke said the company is only worth $21 million and has no cash for such payments.

"The Holocaust isn't our problem, it's all of Germany's problem," he said. "We're just the company that everyone hangs it on."

The board decided instead to ask the German government to compensate the survivors and count the payments against some 58 square miles of land in eastern Germany that the company claims belongs to it.

Gingold and Mathews were skeptical, saying the plan was vague, put the burden on taxpayers and would take too long.

"It's nothing more than a stalling tactic until the last survivor dies," Gingold said.

Regaining all the company's former holdings in eastern Germany would make I.G. Farben the largest property owner in Germany. That is not going to happen, but recovery of even a few old claims in Berlin could put money in the pockets of its 8,000 shareholders.

At rebuilt cathedral, parishioners remember the Nagasaki bombing

NAGASAKI, Japan (AP) — The bomb detonated at about the height of the soaring bell tower — and only about 500 yards away. In a fraction of a second, what had been Asia's largest cathedral was destroyed.

The brunt of the plutonium bomb that fell on Nagasaki half a century ago Wednesday was taken by the city's northern district of Urakami — and the cathedral that lay at the heart of it.

All told, the blast left about 70,000 people dead. Among them were about two-thirds of the church's 14,000 parishioners.

Two Japanese priests and 24 parishioners were inside the church when the bomb struck. They were killed instantly.

"I remember as a child thinking that surely their souls must have gone right to heaven," said Makoto Nagai, 61, a Nagasaki survivor.

Wednesday morning, marking the moment of the blast, parishioners bowed their heads in prayer at a solemn Mass. Elsewhere in the city, bells tolled and thousands gathered for solemn ceremonies in a park near the blast's epicenter.

At dusk Wednesday, thousands of believers from around the Urakami valley walked to the cathedral in small candle-lit processions and gathered in front of the church to sing hymns.

The yellowish-orange candlelight flickered across the faces of children as well as elderly atomic bomb survivors.

When the bomb fell, the hills overlooking Nagasaki Bay were home to Japan's densest concentration of Christians. At the foot of those hills were munitions factories that churned out bullets and torpedoes for Japan's war machine.

The cathedral's bricks and stone were scattered like leaves by the force of the explosion. Chalices and other sacred objects were melted and destroyed, and the crucifix adorning the front entrance was broken into dozens of pieces.

"The only thing that remained intact," said Father Diego Yuuki, a Spanish priest who has lived most of his life in Nagasaki, "was the faith of the people."

Rebuilding began almost immediately. Carpenters came from neighboring towns and built a temporary wooden church on the site.

Miraculously, one of the cathedral's bells was undamaged. It was raised from the rubble on to an improvised platform. It rang again on Christmas Eve 1945.

"Even now, it's incredible to think of how people worked together and helped each other," said Manri Nakashima, 87, a parish priest during the years the cathedral was being rebuilt. "Everyone was so poor back then, but still managed to be generous with each other."

Reconstruction of the surrounding district was slow, but the rebuilding of the church inspired many to return. By 1950, there were 90 applications for every public housing unit available.

The atomic bomb was not the first calamity the people of Urakami had faced. Most were descendants of Japan's early Christians, who had maintained their faith through more than two centuries of harsh persecution.

After the war, the city approached church leaders about leaving the ruined cathedral as a memorial to the bomb's force. Parishioners said no — they wanted their church and their lives back.

"It would be like leaving the ruins of a home where you had raised children as a memorial to death," said Shigemitsu Murata, now 76. "It was not something we ever wanted to look at and be reminded of every day."

Nakashima, the priest who oversaw much of the reconstruction and watched the area revive itself, is now retired and lives across the street from today's modern cathedral.

Every day, he says, he prays for peace.

"It's something I think about a lot," he says. "Everyone agrees it's good, but nations talk about it as if it's something to get. I don't know if it can truly work unless they think of it as something to give."

Grateful Dead's legendary leader Garcia dies at 53

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Jerry Garcia, the mellow spirit who led the Grateful Dead since the psychedelic 1960s and helped make the rock band a way of life for its hordes of nomadic fans, died at a drug rehab center Wednesday. He was 53.

Garcia died in bed of a heart attack, said Dennis McNally, the band's publicist and historian for 15 years. Garcia had a history of drug abuse but had been trying to clean up and lose weight in recent years.

■ More national news/6B

The guitarist, composer and singer was mourned by the devoted, anonymous hordes known as Deadheads who made the Grateful Dead a top concert draw into the 1990s as well as by politicians and business leaders who came of age with the band.

"Jerry was the persona of what Deadheads were all about. He was this cute, fat old guy with a beard, you know, he looked like somebody's grandfather, but when he got on stage to sing to 20,000 kids, everyone would understand it," said guitar teacher and Grateful Dead fan Jon Dindas.

Massachusetts Gov. William Weld, a 50-year-old Republican and an unabashed fan, called Garcia's death "a loss to both my generation and my children's."

"More than any one song it was just the consistently mellow approach they took to everything, life as well as music," Weld said.

In San Francisco's Haight-Ashbury district, the mecca of '60s counterculture, a single red rose was tied to a tree at 710 Ashbury, where the Dead began their long, strange rock 'n' roll trip three decades ago. A crowd gathered, some crying and hugging. One man knelt in prayer.

"It's a big loss for the world and anyone who loves music," said a red-eyed Bob Weir in New Hampshire, where he dedicated a concert Wednesday night to the friend he launched the Dead with three decades earlier. "His life was far more a blessing for all of us ... Perhaps if we're going to dwell on anything, we should dwell on that."

Garcia is survived by his third wife, filmmaker Deborah Koons Garcia, and four daughters: Heather, 32, Annabelle, 25, Teresa, 21 and Keelin, 6.

City seeks border airport status

Designation would allow handling of custom entries, refueling

■ Pitch was led by Charles Perry, owner of Avion Flight Centre, Inc., chairman of MOTRAN.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

The city plans to request designation of Midland International Airport as a border airport to handle custom entries — and more lucratively, refueling — for aircraft out of Mexico and South America.

The City Council was recently approached about seeking such designation to boost fuel sales and increase international trade-related activity in the Permian Basin. "It looks like something we want to pursue," Mayor Bobby Burns said.

The pitch to pursue border airport status was led by Charles Perry, owner of Avion Flight Centre Inc. and chairman of the Midland-Odessa Transportation Alliance (MOTRAN).

"We tried to do this in 1992 on our own and it didn't work," he said. Perry said a city-initiated request would be more successful.

Fuel sales at the airport to private aircraft — which excludes military and airlines — has been decreasing in recent years and is currently about 700,000 gallons per year, Perry said.

"We estimate 600,000 gallons a month in the El Paso and Laredo airports attributed to aircraft coming out of Mexico. If we could get 10 percent we could double our fuel sales in Midland/Odessa," he said.

Proponents said aside from international stops at airports further east in Texas, there isn't much stop-over choice within the 500 miles between Laredo and El Paso. "There's enough gap in there and enough opportunity to do it," Perry said.

Costs associated with being a customs airport is not significant, airport officials said. Midland International Airport already has a customs agent assigned.

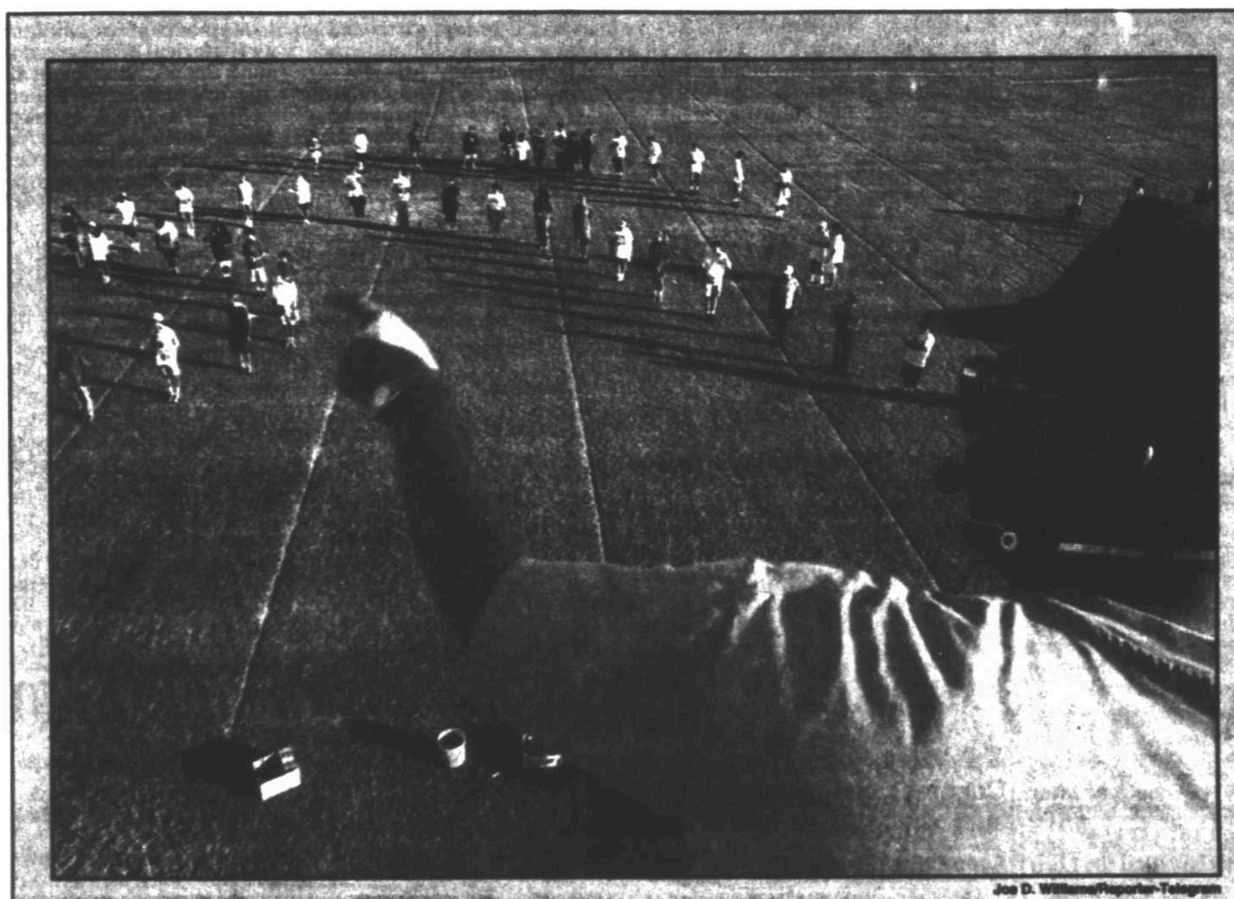

"The only thing would be the setup cost to get designated, then it would be minimal," City Manager Mike McGregor said.

In addition to the benefit to fuel vendors and the city, status as a border airport strengthens Midland and Odessa's place in the international trade marketplace, Perry said.

"This ties in very much with MOTRAN and what we're trying to do," he said. MOTRAN has lobbied for several years to have the proposed extension of Interstate 27 run between Midland and Odessa and developed a longer route to the west coast of Mexico to better trade.

Jury finds Nunez guilty of forgery; judge issues 7 years probation

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Well-known Midland attorney Angel Diaz Nunez Jr. is now a convicted felon but will not spend any time in jail for forging a signature on a former client's settlement check.

A jury of Midlanders deliberated about two hours before returning a guilty verdict on the third-degree felony charge. Since the defendant had previously elected to have the judge assess any punishment, the jury was released about 2 p.m. Wednesday.

Because of Nunez's familiarity in Midland legal circles, prosecutor Albert Valdez was brought in from Fort Stockton, and Senior District Judge Royal Hart, of San Angelo, presided in the felony case.

Hart determined that Nunez will serve seven years on probation and will pay $11,000 in restitution, fines and court costs. Hart assessed an additional 120 hours of community service for Nunez.

In the sentencing phase, Valdez pointed out that this is the second time Nunez "has been caught," referring to a 1993 offense that led to the State Bar of Texas placing Nunez on a probated license suspension early in 1994.

When word of his second offense reached the state bar, Nunez's license to practice law in Texas was suspended in earnest.

"The court needs to send a stinging message to this defendant," Valdez said.

Representing Nunez, attorney Tom Hirsch said the sentence was acceptable. "We're very pleased with the way his honor handled the case," he said.

What remains to be seen is whether the state bar will suspend Nunez's license just for the term of his probation, or permanently disbar the attorney for this mildest of felony crimes, Hirsch explained.

Nunez was found guilty of cashing a $6,000 check intended for Joe Hinojosa, who had hired the attorney to represent him in a worker's compensation claim. The check bore both Nunez's and Hinojosa's names, and the attorney cashed the check with a forged signature for Hinojosa.

In the trial, Hinojosa told jurors that

Detective leads association for second year

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

As president of the Texas Narcotics Officers Association from 1994-95, Midland Police Detective Mark Wohleking worked on and got a revised constitution passed, set up a full-time association office in Austin with a full-time, paid executive director and computerized the association's membership list.

It's not hard to see why he became the only officer in the association's 25-year history to be elected president for the second year in a row.

"We really stepped into a new dimension this year," Wohleking said. "There are other things that need to be done, but the biggest steps are out of the way. However, I made it clear to the executive board that I wasn't running the show. These changes were made by the board."

Wohleking was elected president for a second year at the association's annual conference held last month in Houston. He looks forward to the second year with enthusiasm.

"If I really believe in something, I can't just sit still," he said. "I'm not a passive person. We got so much accomplished this past year and we have a lot more to do."

Wohleking, currently a detective in the property crime division, worked as a narcotics detective for six years. However, he said not all of the 3,000-3,200 members of the association work strictly in narcotics.

"Ninety-five percent of all crimes total are narcotic-related in some way," he said. "Burglaries, thefts, robberies — most of these can be traced to narcotics. This association is for any law enforce-

New U.S. attorney makes West Texas home

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

Glenn Roque-Jackson took an oath Wednesday morning to become the newest assistant U.S. attorney for the Midland-Odessa division of the Western District of Texas.

The 1992 Harvard Law School graduate is making West Texas his home as he settles into his position prosecuting federal criminals.

Jackson spent a year following his graduation from law school serving as a clerk for Chief U.S. District Court Judge Harry Hudspeth in El Paso before joining a prominent law firm in Houston.

He served at the firm in Houston for two years working on several different things, but concentrating mainly on insurance defense.

"From there I came here to the U.S. attorney's office," Jackson said.

He was sworn in Wednesday by U.S. District Judge Royal Furgeson.

"This is what I've always wanted to do," Jackson said of his new job.

He was even anxious to move to a smaller town from Houston, he said. He said he hoped to find a place to settle down. He and his wife, Nyria, hope to start a family.

"This is a good place for me to start off," Jackson said. "Midland is wonderful, and the people are friendly."

"The people are truly very friendly here. In the larger cities there is a tension in the air, and from the minute I stepped off the plane I have felt comfortable in the area ... it is a good fit," Jackson said.

His wife, who is also an attorney, will be working with Max Wright.

The 29-year-old said he will be prosecuting a variety of cases including weapons offenses, drug crimes and some white-collar

Church's annual 'Spiritual Explosion' to include musical service, seminars

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Kenan

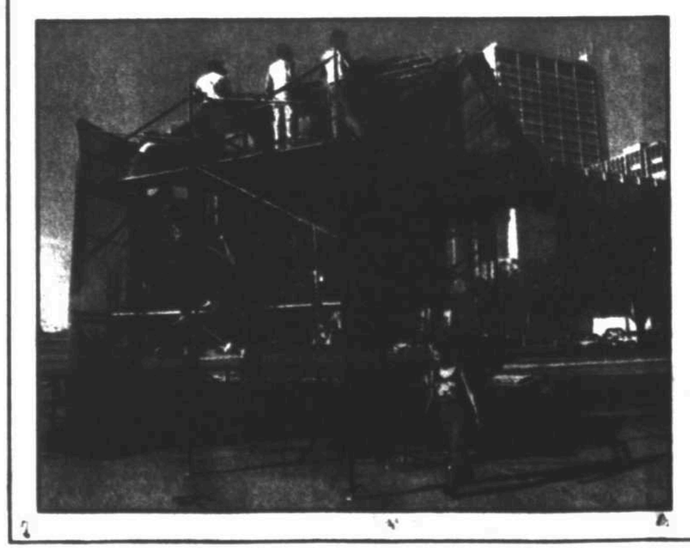

Through a ministry of singing, preaching and teaching, this year's "Spiritual Explosion" will focus on "Changing Our World Through Holy Living" at Faith Temple Church of God in Christ at 1605 N. Terrell St. at Jax Avenue.

"Sin vanishes when God comes in (to people's hearts) and takes control of lives," said the Rev. W.C. Kenan, founder of "Spiritual Explosion" and pastor of the host church, Faith Temple. "God is a God of love, righteousness, holiness and peace."

The seven-day annual event will begin at 7: 30 p.m. Monday in a musical service of spirituals both traditional and contemporary, noted Bertha Kenan, the pastor's wife and co-chairwoman of "Spiritual Explosion."

Featured singers on opening night will be the Spiritual Explosion Mass Choir directed by Sharnette Kenan and Jimane Nelson, soloist Carolyn Nelson of Midland, the King Sisters of Lubbock and the Faith Temple Rosebuds.

ODESSA - Funeral services for Mildred Mae Quain, 73, of Odessa and formerly of Midland are to be held at 10 a.m. Friday in the Frank W. Wilson Funeral Home Chapel in Odessa.

Burial is to be in the Ector County Cemetery.

Mrs. Quain died Tuesday at her home.

She was born on April 30, 1922, in West Virginia.

Mrs. Quain moved to Odessa from Midland in 1965. She was a homemaker and had worked for Texas Instruments for 12 years. She was a Baptist.

Survivors include her husband, Joe Quain of Odessa; two sons, Michael Hart of Crane and Lloyd Patton Hart of Midland; a sister, Peggy Thomas of Cisco; two grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Judy Kerth

KLEIN - Funeral services for Judy Delay Kerth, 48, of Houston, and formerly of Midland, are to be held at 2 p.m. Friday in the Klein Funeral Home Chapel at Champion Forest in Klein. The Rev. Jack Shelton is to officiate.

Visitation hours are to be from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. today in the Klein Funeral Home Chapel. The family will greet friends there from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m.

Mrs. Kerth died Tuesday in Houston.

Mrs. Kerth was a graduate of Texas Christian University and was a member of the Junior League of Midland and the Junior League of Houston. She was a volunteer for Texas Children's Hospital.

Survivors include her husband, Randall Kerth; a daughter, Courtney Kerth; a son, Randall Kerth Jr.; her parents, Earl and Billie Delay of Waco; two sisters, Shellie Johnson of Lubbock and Debbie Gates of Waco.

Contributions may be made to the Houston Hospice.

Longtime member of Hearst family dies at 85

NEW YORK — Frank Massi, former president and chief executive officer, and a current director of The Hearst Corporation, one of the nation's largest diversified communications companies, died Monday night at his home in Garden City, N.Y. He was 85.

A Mass of Christian burial will be held Friday in New York City.

At the time of his death, Massi also served as a trustee of the trust established under the will of William Randolph Hearst and as a director of the Hearst Foundations.

"Frank Massi had a long and very distinguished 61-year association with The Hearst Corporation," said Frank A. Bennack, Jr., Hearst's president and chief executive officer. "All of us working here today are beneficiaries of his many contributions over the years. He was the company's second chief executive officer after the death of the founder and, during his tenure, significant changes that positively influenced the future of Hearst were implemented. He was, in addition, a special friend to generations of Hearst employees."

"Frank was a valued and trusted employee and executive for many, many years," said Randolph A. Hearst, chairman of the board. "But most of all, he was a close personal friend. Those of us in the Hearst family who had the privilege to work with Frank will miss him greatly."

Massi first became affiliated with The Hearst Corporation in 1934, when Hearst purchased Pictorial Review, a magazine at which he served as chief accountant. In 1939, he moved to the corporation's general financial and auditing department.

In 1953 he was elected assistant treasurer of the corporation and, eight years later, named treasurer and a director. In 1964, Massi was designated a testamentary trustee of the trust established by the will of William Randolph Hearst.

He was elected executive vice president of The Hearst Corporation in 1968 and named its president and chief executive officer in 1973. He served in that office until 1975, after which he continued as director until his death.

Survivors include his wife of nearly 60 years, Madeline Massi; two daughters, Lucille Cazzetto of Hempstead, N.Y., and Martha Polemeni of Montclair, N.J.; and 10 grandchildren.

Annual Ice Cream Crank-Off to benefit city's oldest home

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

'If a lot of people don't show up, there is going to be a lot of ice cream in somebody's freezer.'

— Nancy McKinley, president, Midland County Historical Society

Homemade ice cream, prepared the old-fashioned way, will be served up on Sunday to Midlanders and other West Texans who visit the historic Brown-Dorsey Medallion Home just east of downtown Midland at the community's annual Ice Cream Crank-Off.

The ice cream, which is priced at $2 per serving, is "all hand-cranked for the benefit of Midland's oldest home," noted Nancy McKinley, who is president of the sponsoring Midland County Historical Society and chairman of the Midland County Historical Commission.

The annual Ice Cream Crank-Off will be held from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m. Sunday on the grounds of the restored two-story 1899-built house at 213 N. Weatherford St. and its older — 1896 — mulberry tree, which has a 10-foot girth and an expansive canopy.

While ice-cream fanciers are savoring America's popular frozen dessert, Alpine cowboy-guitar-maker Michael Stevens will be singing Old West cowboy songs as a "special favor" to Mrs. McKinley.

Stevens performed in Midland's Centennial Plaza last June in leading up to the community's annual Ranch Rodeo.

Members of the Midland County Historical Society and the Midland County Historical Commission are making the ice cream.

"Our members crank it off," Mrs. McKinley said. "This is a crank-off. It is what it is. If anybody with a strong arm wants to help us crank it off, they're welcomed."

It takes about an hour to hand crank a gallon or a five-quart batch of ice cream.

But it will take only 10 minutes for youngsters, who want to, to make ice cream in the two-cup White Mountain Crank Machine, which Mrs. McKinley picked up years ago at the old Ala Carte Gifts Shop.

"We are going to prepare for about 200 people," said Mrs. McKinley, who makes her ice cream from an old-fashioned recipe, which calls for Carnation powered milk, whole eggs, sugar, vanilla and whipped cream. "Freeze it and enjoy it. If a lot people don't show up, there is going to be a lot of ice cream in somebody's freezer."

CHURCH: Event to begin Monday

(From 1B)

Approximately 500 people from "coast to coast" are to attend and participate in the event, which is open to the public.

On weekdays, from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Tuesday through Friday, there will be seminars "related to and dealing with youth, the family and everyday problems that we face as a people in the (troubled) times in which we are living," Mrs. Kenan said. Elder Darwin Randolph will instruct the seminars.

Principal speakers scheduled in the 7:30 p.m. services Tuesday through Aug. 19, include Elder Ray T. Iglehart of New Orleans, La., Evangelist Joyce Rodgers of Denton, Elder B.L. Ginyard Sr. of Detroit, Mich., Elder D.W. Hutchins of Columbia, S.C., and Elder C.M. Jenkins of Youngstown, Ohio.

Sheryl Kenan Randolph will direct the nightly "praise services."

The ministry's concluding service will be at 2:30 p.m. on Aug. 20.

Guest choirs and choral groups include Alexander Temple of Midland, Voices of Power of Fort Worth and The Bill Shumate Workshop Choir of Lubbock.

"It's kind of a crusade," Mrs. Kenan said of the event.

Spiritual Explosion was launched in 1974 — one year after Kenan became pastor of Faith Temple Church.

"This is something that the Lord laid on our hearts years ago to bring unity and oneness in the body of Christ throughout the world," Kenan said. "It starts here."

DETECTIVE: Wohleking wins association's presidency again

ment official with an interest in narcotic crimes."

The association was formed on May 5, 1970, and is one of 28 state associations that comprises the National Narcotic Officers Association Coalition.

Under the association, the state is divided into four regions — north, south, east and west. Each region has its own vice president, two directors and other executive members.

Each region's officers sit on the state's executive board, along with the state association's president and executive director.

Under the revised constitution, the association will now elect a sergeant-at-arms each year, who will become president the following year. Also, the executive director, which is now a paid position, no longer has a vote on the executive board.

In addition, a new section was added to the association's purpose, which reads "Continually provide training for members, in all aspects of narcotic enforcement."

"When the association was first organized, it was mainly a get-together for narcotics cops," Wohleking said. "Back in the '70s, there was no organization to the narcotics officers. It was more a fellowship thing. However, the focus has really changed for the association, and the constitution needed to reflect that. We have become an organization that educates officers."

The Texas association is the second largest narcotics organization in the country, behind California, which has 6,000 members in its association. In addition to educating officers in the field of narcotics, the association also lobbies in the state Legislature and in Washington.

"We fight for favorable legislation," Wohleking said. "However, we don't back political candidates nor are we a union. We are a non-profit association in which the main goal is to educate our officers."

U.S. district judge dismisses state's immigration lawsuit

■ In ruling, judge says Congress, not courts, has authority to order payments

Associated Press

AUSTIN — A U.S. district judge has thrown out the state's lawsuit seeking reimbursement of $1.3 billion from the federal government for the costs of illegal immigration.

In a ruling released Wednesday, U.S. District Judge Filemon Vela said Congress, not the courts, has the authority to order payment to the state.

"Only in a political forum can the myriad causes of illegal immigration and its costs and benefits be laid fully on the table," the judge wrote in his 16-page order.

The ruling echoed others reached in California and Florida, where similar lawsuits have been dismissed. Arizona, New Jersey and New York also are suing.

Texas Attorney General Dan Morales, who filed the lawsuit last year, said he would appeal.

"We have always anticipated that this issue would be ultimately resolved by the U.S. Supreme Court," Morales said.

"The federal government has a constitutional obligation to reimburse the states for costs resulting from federal immigration policies," he said. "Federal immigration policy imposes a direct financial burden upon the taxpayers of Texas."

Messages left at the Washington offices of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service and the Justice Department were not immediately returned.

State Rep. Roberto Alonzo, who heads the Mexican-American Democratic Caucus, praised the ruling and said he hopes it helps alleviate any anti-immigration sentiment.

"It just goes to show what we have been saying all along, that this lawsuit did not have merit, that this lawsuit was something that would cause hysteria that did not need to be there," said Alonzo, D-Dallas.

Alonzo said the state should go directly to Congress for reimbursement.

Morales filed the lawsuit in August 1994, accusing the federal government of violating its constitutional responsibility to control immigration. He contended the government's inability to control its borders had burdened state and local taxpayers.

The state sought reimbursement of $1.34 billion for costs incurred in 1993 to educate, incarcerate and cover medical expenses for illegal immigrants.

Texas cities, counties, school districts and hospital districts were named as plaintiffs along with the state. Named as defendants were U.S. Attorney General Janet Reno, INS Commissioner Doris Meissner and other federal government officials.

Last year, Congress approved $350 million for Texas and several other states with large numbers of illegal aliens.

Coast Guard again calls off search for three missing men

PORT ARTHUR (AP) — The Coast Guard again suspended its search for three missing men after a 7,500-square-mile search of the Gulf of Mexico on Wednesday failed to turn up any clues to the men's fates.

The Coast Guard said it has combed more than 100,250 square miles in 93 missions over 10 days.

The suspension was the second since Port Arthur News publisher Wes Plummer, 52; Beaumont lawyer Robert Meroney, 41; and refinery worker Michael Rhodriguez, 50, were last seen aboard Meroney's boat, the "Hook 'em II," on July 28, about 15 miles east of Freeport.

The search will be resumed "only upon the receipt of significant new information," said a Coast Guard statement issued late Wednesday.

Friends and family of the three had remained adamant that the men could still be afloat — even after the Coast Guard said Sunday that the boat almost certainly was not.

That had changed by Wednesday, as searchers north of Freeport found a camera, believed to be Plummer's, along a beach. Other beached debris, including a cooler and a fishing rod, were believed to be from the boat.

"You have to be realistic," said Brent Wester, who is directing a volunteer search effort from Meroney's law office. "We know the boat's down. The boat is down.

"Survivability, considering the number of days in the water, diminishes. But there's power in prayer and there's always a miracle. We're praying for a miracle."

Two jets and a helicopter flew over the Gulf Wednesday without success and were to quit at dusk, said Coast Guard Lt. Larry Glick. He said officials would evaluate the situation Wednesday night before deciding whether to search again today.

The Coast Guard had suspended its search Sunday night, saying it had exhausted hope of finding the 31-foot vessel afloat. But officials agreed to another air search amid pleas from lawmakers and the families.

Through Sunday, the Coast Guard said it covered more than 93,000 square miles of water — roughly the size of Wyoming.

Plummer, Rhodriguez and Meroney were at sea to participate in a fishing tournament in Freeport. They vanished two days before Tropical Storm Dean hit the upper Texas coast.

POLICE REPORTS

Drug seizure

ECTOR COUNTY — A 22-year-old Odessa man, Andy Bryan Wagner, was arrested and taken to the Ector County jail on Tuesday after the Permian Basin Drug Task Force and the Ector County Sheriff's Office seized about one-half ounce of cocaine in the vehicle Wagner was driving, according to reports. The contraband was valued at $500.

Tom Beery, an assistant U.S. attorney in the Midland office, said he looks forward to working with Jackson on a variety of matters including magistrate and district courts locally and in Pecos.

"I think he has an outstanding future ahead of him," Beery said.

"He has all the right tools ... to become an outstanding prosecutor. He is a can't-miss pick."

Beery said he talked to many people who have known and worked with Jackson and said he couldn't find anything but praise for the young attorney.

"He is like Earl Campbell. He is a franchise player — one that has the ability and will perform well," Beery said.

Slaying suspect Saldivar claimed father came between her, Selena, police say

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Pressing a cocked pistol to her own temple, Yolanda Saldivar cried hysterically that Selena's father came between her and the Tejano music superstar, police officers said Wednesday.

"I loved her. I didn't mean to hurt her," Sgt. Joe Claire quoted Ms. Saldivar as saying during a tense standoff after 23-year-old Selena was gunned down at a budget motel on March 31.

Claire and Sgt. John Houston spoke with Ms. Saldivar as she sat sobbing and threatening suicide in a pickup parked in the motel parking lot.

"She would say that, 'Her father hates me. Her father is responsible for this. He made me shoot her,'" Houston testified.

Claire also quoted the 34-year-old founder of Selena's fan club as saying: "Her father came between us," "Forgive me, God, for what I did," and "I did something very bad and I disgraced my family."

Ms. Saldivar didn't mention Selena or her father, Abraham Quintanilla Jr., by name during the standoff, but it became clear that she was referring to them, the officers testified.

State District Judge Mike Westergren ruled the officers' testimony admissible as evidence at Ms. Saldivar's murder trial, scheduled to begin Oct. 9. The judge also said Wednesday that the case will be tried in Harris County.

Court-appointed defense lawyer Doug Tinker, who has been tight-lipped about his strategy, hinted during cross-examination that he will contend that the shooting was accidental.

When Houston quoted Ms. Saldivar as saying she "had a problem with her (Selena) and I just got to end it," Tinker asked whether Ms. Saldivar could have been talking about her own life, not Selena's.

Both officers testified that Ms. Saldivar never referred to the shooting as an accident. They said they tried to steer the conversation away from the shooting because Ms. Saldivar forcefully pressed the gun against her temple when she talked about it.

Quintanilla, who did not attend the hearing Wednesday, has described Ms. Saldivar as an obsessed fan.

Quintanilla has said Ms. Saldivar killed his daughter soon after he had confronted her with allegations that she was stealing money from Selena's businesses.

Tinker signaled in court Wednesday that he will contend Selena was trying to cut off ties with her father, who managed the singer's rapid rise to fame.

Inmates in state, federal prisons tops 1 million

WASHINGTON (AP) — Already bulging state and federal prisons squeezed in another 83,000 inmates last year, which pushed that locked-up population over 1 million for the first time.

The annual increase was the second largest recorded to date, according to a Justice Department report released Wednesday.

Prison populations rose by at least 10 percent in 16 states, with Texas (28.5 percent) and Georgia (20.3 percent) showing the largest increases last year.

Texas accounted for 118,195 of the nation's 1,053,738 inmates held in state and federal prisons at the end of last year — second only to California's 125,605.

Texas led the nation in incarceration rates — with 636 inmates behind bars per every 100,000 residents. Nationally, the average is 359 prisoners per 100,000 residents. North Dakota had the lowest rate, with 78 per 100,000.

A spokeswoman for the American Civil Liberties Union's National Prison Project questioned how tougher state and federal sentencing as well as imprisoning more drug offenders has made anybody safer.

"We keep putting more and more people in prison and it's not doing any good at all," said project spokeswoman Jenni Gainsborough. "We're the only country in the world that does this kind of thing. What we're doing is creating a breeding ground. It's madness."

The Bureau of Justice Statistics study also reported that eight state prison systems were so crowded that local jails had to house at least 10 percent of their inmates. Louisiana topped the state list with 33.5 percent of its inmates in local jails. In Texas, 17.5 percent of inmates were held in local jails last year, down from 32 percent the year before.

States are operating between 17 percent and 29 percent over capacity. Federal prisons are 25 percent over capacity.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

THURSDAY, AUGUST 10, 1995

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Follow the down-to-earth advice offered by your mate or partner. An expert's financial guidance helps you save money at year's end. New career doors open early in 1996. By spring, a relationship that was going nowhere grinds to a halt. Traveling for business or pleasure will put you in touch with someone who shares your long-term goals. A legacy or a windfall you receive next summer helps secure your future.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Rosanna Arquette, boxer Riddick Bowe, fashion designer Betsy Johnson, soap actor James Reynold.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Consider the financial side of things when deciding whether or not to break up a team. You could be partly to blame for a communications gap. Discuss your feelings of frustration with loved ones.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Shrewdness on your part will let you turn a negative into a plus. Do not be hasty. Diplomacy will help you avoid partnership controversies. Seek a peaceful compromise.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Joint finances are in the spotlight. A partnership will affect how large a return you make on an investment. Avoid getting entangled with unstable people. Guard your reputation for fairness.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Postpone making a romantic commitment until you are ready. Your ability to sense what is needed puts you in a lucky position. Correspondence or research will verify how sound your financial thinking really is.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be familiar with what is new. Your up-to-date information will impress higher-ups. Expect to land a plum assignment! A secret admirer makes their identity known. Romance is more fulfilling than ever.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Others will pool their talents if everyone can share the rewards. A gift or loan helps ease a temporary cash-flow problem. A special favor will be granted. Tact is essential for happy romance.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Someone who is relentlessly cheerful may get under your skin today. Learn to allow for all types! Authority figures are difficult to please this afternoon. Stick to projects you can handle on your own.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You stand to benefit materially and spiritually from what transpires now. Curb a tendency to express everything that you think and feel. It is sometimes wiser to keep silent.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A highly productive day lies ahead. Stick to routine tasks and postpone making any big changes until tomorrow. A heart-to-heart chat is featured this evening.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Those who have banded together to right a wrong receive welcome news. Take your responsibilities seriously, but save some time for recreation. Children may not understand the long hours their parents work. Participate in family activities.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do not ignore a warning signal. A health matter requires prompt attention. Emotional tranquility is the answer to feelings of stress. Romance could resemble a roller-coaster ride. A change of heart surprises you.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A combination of heart and will motivates you to reach for the stars. Give career and business concerns extra attention but avoid neglecting loved ones. A hunt for an antique or a painting is successful.

Among the many truisms of bridge, "Eight ever, nine never" is one that holds true more often than most. It refers to the situation where the queen of a suit is missing, and states that, when holding a combined eight cards in the suit, it is correct to finesse; with nine cards, play for the drop. How would you tackle this deal?

North-South were playing that a two-over-one response was game-forcing, except in the sequence chosen by South. That announced a long, reasonable club suit and insufficient values for a game force. Nevertheless, North took a shot at the club slam.

West led the king of hearts, ruffed in dummy. Declarer cashed the king of clubs and led the knave, but East showed out. The contract became unmakable. Declarer had no way to get rid of the heart losers since West would ruff the second diamond and cash two hearts.

Declarer can afford to lose a trump trick and still guarantee the slam as long as there is a trump on the table when the defenders gain the lead. The simple way to ensure that is to lead the jack of trumps at trick two and run it! That concedes a trump unnecessarily if the suit breaks 2-2, but guarantees 12 tricks even if trumps are 3-1.

If East holds the queen of clubs, the finesse will win and declarer will score an overtrick, making six trumps, five diamonds, the ace of spades and a heart ruff. If the finesse loses, declarer captures any return, ruffing a heart on the table, if necessary, comes to hand with the ace of diamonds to draw the outstanding trumps, then runs the diamonds for 12 tricks.

New complex to give Wayne Gretzky ice that's all his own

CORAL SPRINGS, Fla. — Wayne Gretzky will soon have some ice to call his own.

Wayne Gretzky and a group of investors to build a $6.6 million rink complex : Wayne Gretzky's Iceland.

The hockey star and a group of investors will build a $6.6 million rink complex to be called Wayne Gretzky's Iceland.

It will include two rinks, fitness facilities, training clinics, a lounge for youngsters and a sports bar, said Michael Levinson, an assistant city manager in Coral Springs.

Groundbreaking will be around Oct. 1. The complex should be completed next April or May, Levinson said Tuesday.

A second complex is planned for Los Angeles, where Gretzky plays for the Los Angeles Kings.

NEW YORK — David Geffen broke his own record with a $4 million donation to two AIDS organizations.

Gay Men's Health Crisis will get $2.5 million to build a testing and counseling center. God's Love We Deliver, which prepares and delivers meals to homebound AIDS sufferers, will receive $1.5 million for a larger kitchen.

"AIDS must be everyone's fight," the record mogul, who is gay, said Wednesday.

"I hope my contribution will encourage more people to come forward and give generously. In the face of so much death, it's essential we do all we can to support life," said the co-founder of the DreamWorks SKG studio.

The nonprofit groups will get the money next month. It was the largest single gift for AIDS services, breaking a record Geffen set in 1992 with a $1 million donation, the New York organizations said.

CHARLESTON, S.C. — David Dinkins could be back in his tennis whites within days.

The former New York City mayor fell ill Sunday after playing two hours of tennis in the Hilton Head heat, and doctors found a heart blockage.

Dinkins, who had a heart attack in 1985, may need angioplasty, during which a catheter would be inserted into the artery to clear it.

The 68-year-old Dinkins was finishing a six-day vacation at the Van der Meer Tennis Center when he became ill. He was moved Wednesday from Hilton Head Hospital to the Medical University of South Carolina in Charleston.

"Mayor Dinkins should be back on the tennis courts next week," said Dr. James D. Johnston, Hilton Head Hospital's cardiology director.

NICE, France — The Riviera's not all sun and seashells for Saudi arms dealer Adnan Khashoggi.

Thieves made off with $4 million in jewelry from a villa he and his wife, Shahpari, rent near Nice, police said. The theft probably occurred Saturday, and a staff of five didn't hear a thing, the authorities said.

The Khashoggis were in Spain at the time. It was the couple's second burglary on the Riviera. In 1993, $800,000 in jewelry was taken from their apartment in Cannes by a thief who scaled six stories.

NEW YORK — Michele Pfeiffer, who plays a teacher in a classroom of rough kids in the new movie "Dangerous Minds," wishes her own children could go to public school.

"I resent that I can't send them to public schools, because I prefer them not to have an elitist education," the actress said in Tuesday's Daily News. "Yet, I want them to have the best education they can, and I want them to stay alive."

Pfeiffer doesn't have to worry about it for a while. Her daughter is 2 and her son is 1.

Pfeiffer plays real-life teacher LouAnne Johnson, an ex-Marine turned English teacher in Northern California.

Clinton to give FDA major role in tobacco control, fight against smoking

WASHINGTON (NYT)— President Clinton has decided to let the Food and Drug Administration begin the process of declaring the nicotine in tobacco an addictive drug, thus clearing the way for the most significant regulations in the history of the tobacco industry.

Administration officials said the president's decision stemmed from his judgment that the FDA had successfully made a scientific and legal case for the addictive nature of nicotine.

They said the White House was still reviewing precisely what new restrictions the agency should impose, but Clinton is to announce at least some of them today.

These early steps will be intended to curb teen-age smoking, and they will include restrictions on vending machine sales and on advertising that reaches children. They specifically avoid any new restrictions on adult smoking, administration officials said.

Still, the FDA's action would be a landmark change in the government's approach to cigarettes, marking the first time it has asserted jurisdiction over the product as opposed to the advertising for it, which is barred on television. The move could open the door to future regulation that, in theory, could result in a ban on cigarettes and will most likely lead to years of legal and legislative wrangling.

In a glimpse of the battle that will surely ensue, Brennan Dawson, a spokesman for the industry's Tobacco Institute, said the tobacco companies might well go to court and would certainly appeal to Congress to try to halt the action.

"The FDA does not have jurisdiction and should not be regulating tobacco products," Ms. Dawson said. "That would lead down the road to prohibition."

Ms. Dawson also said that to avoid regulation, the industry, which has long professed opposition to teen-age smoking, was willing to take steps to help curb it, perhaps by keeping vending machines out of grocery stores and other places where children have access.

The FDA has the power to assert jurisdiction over the nicotine in tobacco under the Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act. But that authority can be challenged in court, and in addition Congress may write laws to steer the agency's action if enough votes can be garnered in both houses to overcome a presidential veto.

Tobacco-state lawmakers have already promised a bitter fight over any regulation of the tobacco industry. Last week, for instance, Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C., said that if a voluntary agreement with the industry could not be reached, "some Republicans here are licking their chops for that one — they want to go head to head with the White House."

As administration officials discussed the new plans Wednesday, Clinton was in Charlotte, N.C., where he warned of the dangers of teen-age smoking in a speech to a gathering of Baptists.

But he did not disclose his support for the FDA's new role. That was due in part to the urging of North Carolina politicians, whose constituency includes many tobacco workers and executives and who had implored the president not to make the proposals the focus of his remarks.

In his speech, to the Progressive National Baptist Convention, Clinton called smoking one of the greatest threats to young people, listing it with violence, teen pregnancy and illegal drugs. He said curbing tobacco use among young people was "the cheapest, easiest, quickest thing you could ever do to change the whole dynamic of health care in America."

Defense suffers setback when Ito rules news leak is irrelevant

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The O.J. Simpson trial judge removed a rung from the ladder of evidence supporting the defense's conspiracy theory Wednesday, ruling that a news leak wasn't material to the murder case and two reporters don't have to testify about it.

While acknowledging the defense has presented extensive material to show blood could have been planted on a sock at Simpson's house, Superior Court Judge Lance Ito said the defense failed to show that whoever prematurely revealed test results to journalists also likely tampered with evidence.

"This record does not support a finding that access to the results means access to the evidence itself," Ito said.

He suggested the leak of Los Angeles Police Department information could have been the result of "elevator gossip" rather than a purposeful plot to frame Simpson for the June 12, 1994, murders of his ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman.

Defense attorney Gerald Uelmen disagreed.

"The response of the LAPD in leaking this information was designed to create an atmosphere prejudicing Mr. Simpson," Uelmen said. "We're talking about passing results out the back door, and we want to know who's responsible for that."

The defense wanted to see reports on the police department's internal investigation of the leak, which came when prospective jurors still had access to news reports on the case.

Defense attorney Carl Douglas said outside court the team was disappointed in the ruling but added, "We remain undaunted. We're not going to cry about it. The central aspect of our claim that blood on the sock was planted has not been affected by this ruling."

Prosecutor Hank Goldberg told reporters, "The so-called evidence they want to put on wasn't evidence. It was some sort of innuendo."

At issue was a newscast on Los Angeles TV station KNBC last September reporting that DNA tests on one of the socks found in Simpson's bedroom had disclosed the blood of his slain ex-wife.

At the time, the socks had not been sent out for DNA testing, and the judge himself denounced the broadcast as irresponsible and said the results were wrong.

Subsequent DNA tests, however, produced the same results as those reported. Defense lawyers said it was a self-fulfilling prophecy: that whoever leaked the information was also involved in planting the blood and therefore would have known whose blood was on the evidence.

Ito said the defense reasoning took too great a leap to be logical.

Woman's tryst claim evokes no comment from House Speaker

PHOENIX (AP) — House Speaker Newt Gingrich had nothing to say Wednesday about a woman's claim they had an affair when he was married 20 years ago, but he did have something to say about his wife.

Vanity Fair magazine says Gingrich had a series of affairs during his first marriage and at least one may have cost him election to Congress in 1974. It also quotes his current wife, Marianne, as saying she will publicly "undermine everything" if he runs for president.

Gingrich said Wednesday his wife was "just making the point hypothetically" that he would not run unless they agreed that he should.

The article in the magazine's September issue quotes Anne Manning as saying she was a Gingrich campaign volunteer when they became romantically involved in 1976.

At the time, Gingrich was married to his first wife, and Manning also was married.

In the spring of 1977, Manning said, he took her to dinner and then met her back at her hotel room where they had oral sex.

"He prefers that modus operandi because then he can say, 'I never slept with her,'" Manning told writer Gail Sheehy.

Dot Crews, who occasionally chauffeured Gingrich, said most of the candidate's campaign workers were aware of one encounter Gingrich had with a young volunteer that year, when he made his first of two unsuccessful runs for the House.

"We'd have won in 1974 if we could have kept him out of the office, (having sex with) her on the desk," said Kip Carter, Gingrich's campaign treasurer from 1974 to 1978.

Gingrich wouldn't comment on the article when approached at a Phoenix book signing. "I don't have any reaction to that," he said.

Earlier Wednesday, Gingrich aide Tony Blankley issued a broad denial.

"It's trash and I don't see any reason to get into hateful allegations from hateful people from 20 years ago," he said. "It's just a bunch of tabloid psychobabble."

Last December, Gingrich offered a vague response to reports that he had extramarital affairs while running a family-values campaign in 1978. "In the 1970s, things happened — period. That's the most I'll ever say," he told The Washington Post.

Nussbaum defends his actions after Foster's death; senators press on testimony conflicts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Spirited and unrepentant, former White House counsel Bernard Nussbaum defended his conduct in the aftermath of Vincent Foster's suicide. But senators pressed him Wednesday about conflicts between his versions and those of other witnesses on key events.

Directly confronting the biggest criticism lodged against him, Nussbaum testified he had an "ethical duty" as the president's chief lawyer to retrict police access to Foster's documents after his July 1993 death.

"It may sound arrogant ... but I'll tell you, on the big calls, and I had to make a lot of big calls, I was right. I made the right judgments," Nussbaum told the Senate Whitewater Committee.

He also disputed Republican suggestions that President Clinton or Hillary Rodham Clinton influenced him on the search of Foster's office or that his decisions had anything to do with documents in the office concerning their Whitewater real estate venture.

The night after police were allowed into the office of Foster, then Nussbaum's top deputy, documents about the Clintons' personal finances, including Whitewater, were removed and taken to their White House residence. The documents were later to be turned over to their private lawyer.

Some senators sought to pick at parts of Nussbaum's account that differed from the earlier testimony of Margaret Williams, the first lady's chief of staff, and Susan Thomases, one of Mrs. Clinton's closest friends.

Committee chairman Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., said he planned to subpeona Thomases' phone records in an effort to reconcile the conflicting accounts about a phone conversation she had with Nussbaum prior to the July 22, 1993 search of Foster's office.

Nussbaum testified that in that call it was Thomases who raised the issue of the search, saying she understood there had been "concern about the process" of going through Foster's documents.

On Tuesday, Thomases insisted it was Nussbaum who had raised the subject, not her.

Later, Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., lamented that Nussbaum's testimony was "totally different" from that of Williams about why the Clintons' papers were taken from Foster's office.

Williams testified that Nussbaum asked her to take the documents to the Clintons' personal lawyer but that she was tired and decided to have them stored in the White House residence temporarily.

Nussbaum said he told Williams to check with the Clintons about what to do with the papers, suggesting that "the Clintons would probably want to send the files" to their personal attorney.

Nussbaum said didn't think the differences were important. "I don't feel that we're that far apart," he said.

Nussbaum's defense amounted to a lawyerly lecture at times as he insisted that the code of ethics required that he — and not Park Police detectives or Justice Department lawyers — review the documents. There were documents that were protected by both executive privilege and lawyer-client confidentiality, he said.

"It was my ethical duty as a lawyer and as White House counsel to protect a client's information and confidences, and not to disclose them without a prior review by me," he testified.

Slaughter signs

RIVER FALLS, Wis. — The Kansas City Chiefs bolstered their receiving corps Wednesday by signing Webster Slaughter, who turned down a richer offer to play for former coach Marty Schottenheimer.

Slaughter, 30, signed a three-year contract, the financial terms of which were not announced.

Slaughter played for Schottenheimer in Cleveland from his first season in 1986 until Schottenheimer left for Kansas City in 1989.

"The main attraction is a good team — a team I think can win the AFC — and coach Schottenheimer," said Slaughter, adding that he rejected an offer for more money from Green Bay.

State gets will

GREENVILLE, S.C. — The state gets to keep Shoeless Joe Jackson's will in its archives, and two charities won't be able to sell it for the baseball great's valuable signature, a judge ruled Wednesday.

Jackson, who was banned from the game for his part in the 1919 World Series "Black Sox" scandal, rarely signed things, and estimates were that the signature on his will could be worth more than $100,000.

The American Cancer Society and American Heart Association claimed the will belonged to them because Jackson's wife, Katie, named them as beneficiaries.

The charities sued the county and Probate Judge C. Diane Smock in 1993 to obtain the original will. They wanted to substitute a certified copy. Smock said if the will were removed from state archives, it would set a dangerous precedent.

Fiesta makes deal

PHOENIX — The Fiesta Bowl announced an agreement with Frito-Lay on Wednesday that will produce the richest postseason game in college history.

The two teams that meet in the Jan. 2, 1996, game will split about $17 million, with another $9 million going to the college bowl alliance.

"The payment from the Tostitos Fiesta Bowl next year will be the single largest payment in bowl history," Fiesta president John Junker said.

Junker estimated that each Fiesta Bowl team would receive about $8.5 million.

Mantle in 'serious' condition

■ Doctors determine Mickey Mantle's cancer has spread and his condition has deteriorated.

By Kevin O'Hanlon
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — Mickey Mantle's cancer has spread and his condition deteriorated Wednesday, but he resolved to keep fighting his aggressive disease.

CAT scans showed that Mantle's cancer has advanced beyond his liver and right lung, although doctors would not say where else it has been discovered.

The condition of the 63-year-old Hall of Famer worsened from stable to serious at Baylor University Medical Center, where he was being treated for anemia brought on by chemotherapy. Mantle is suffering from hepatoma, an agressive form of cancer.

AP Laserphoto
Mantle

"This particular cancer can go anywhere ... usually the lungs, the abdomen and sometimes the bones," said Dr. Isaac Djerassi, a cancer specialist who has examined Mantle and would comment only generally on his illness.

"It just makes it clear that he's in big trouble," he said.

The hospital said the former New York Yankees slugger "is spending time with his family and wants his friends to know he continues to fight."

Family members contacted by The Associated Press declined comment. But A close friend, who asked not to be identified, visited Mantle Wednesday and told the AP that Mantle greeted him "with a firm handshake" as he sat in a chair with his legs propped up.

"I found him to be his typical fighting, Mickey Mantle-self," the friend said. "At one point his granddaughter came in the room and he said, 'There's my Miss America.' I found him to be chipper and showing a good sense of humor."

Mantle also offered his thoughts on his former team. "I think they are going to be right in there this year," the friend quoted Mantle as saying.

"The Yankees sent him a baseball signed by the team with 'Get Well, Mick' on it," the friend added.

At Yankee Stadium, the scene of many of Mantle's greatest triumphs, the mood was somber.

"It sounds serious. It's very depressing news," said manager Buck Showalter. "Certainly we're praying for him, but it puts a damper on things and gives a sense of reality of what life's all about."

Mantle underwent a transplant on June 8 to replace his liver, which had been ravaged by cancer, hepatitis and years of hard drinking. On Aug. 1, doctors announced the cancer had spread to his right lung.

Lee: the next generation

Rebels start two-a-day workouts as Parchman puts stamp on program

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

The John Parchman football era at Midland Lee officially began at 7 a.m. Wednesday at the Lee practice field as Parchman finally got the opportunity to put his first Rebel team on the field of play.

The team worked out in shorts as mandated by University Interscholastic League rules, and will do so until Monday when the team can go to full pads. Still, football was back at Lee — and it was Parchman calling the shots and not Earl Miller for the first time in nine years.

Miller resigned his position at Lee following the 1994 season to head to San Antonio to join his wife. He is now a linebacker coach at San Antonio MacArthur. Parchman, a former Lee assistant under Miller, got the call from Llano where he had gone after leaving Lee.

Parchman brings with him the I-formation, a departure from the Rebel wishbone that had been in place since 1983. Since then Lee has missed the playoffs only once (1992).

Wednesday's first workout was just a getting the feet wet kind of experience, but Parchman liked what he saw and is ready for the practice grind that leads to the Sept. 8 opener at Memorial Stadium against El Paso Irvin.

"We were looking for a barometer reading on where we need to go from here," Parchman said of the first workout. "We were concerned that with a two-month break that we might not be right where we want to be at this stage.

"Offensively, we ran a script that we ran right before school was out and the kids ran it quite well. Of course, the timing was poor, but everyone seemed to know where they were supposed to be. I'm tickled to death with what I saw. We may be able to go at even a faster clip from here on out than I thought we could."

Around 130 Rebel players reported Wednesday for workouts.

"I think we will have another half dozen or so players out," Parchman said. "And we will have some quit, but we would be extremely happy if we settle out around 120. That, hopefully, will allow us to play three (varsity, junior varsity and sophomore) schedules this year. That would be up a little from last year."

Still, Parchman was the center of attention Wednesday as he was placing his troops through the paces for the first time.

"It did feel a little strange out there, but I've been a head coach 12 years, so it's not like this is my first rodeo. It was much like it has been in the past," Parchman said. "I was fortunate to have been here before. Coach Miller is a great coach and I learned a lot from him and have respect for what he had done here. We trying to not get away from the basic things that have worked for Lee in the past."

But this is Parchman's team and he realizes that things will be different — but not too different.

"Of course, I will do some things differently, but the philosophy and overall approach is much the same. We're still going to be a hard hitting, aggressive team on the field," Parchman said.

John Thurman, who is scheduled to be the Lee quarterback this year, missed nearly all of last season with a knee injury, so he couldn't wait to hit the field Wednesday.

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram
Midland Lee quarterback John Thurman goes through some drills during the Rebels' first day of fall training camp under new head coach John Parchman.

"I couldn't sleep last night because I was so hyped up," Thurman said. "I'm 110 percent and very confident. I missed last year, but I'm not going to let that phase me. I don't think we're getting the respect we deserve, so I was ready to get out here and start proving that we are a good team. We could be unstoppable."

The beginning of the new Parchman era didn't seem to have much effect on most of the Lee players.

"It's different than when coach Miller was here, but not much," said starting center Toby McCarthy. "They are teaching us new things and I like the offense better. We are more diverse in what we do and teams won't be able to put seven or eight guys on the line against us."

Returning running back Alex Strambler, who also had knee surgery in the off season, said, "Coach Parchman listens to what we have to say. I'm going to enjoy this season. I think we looked all right for the first practice. It was a lot of fun."

Midland pair suffer losses at nationals

By Stewart Doreen
Sports Writer

The two Midland host teams suffered setbacks Wednesday in the first round of the Amateur Softball Association's 16 and Under Fast-Pitch Nationals at the Bill Williams Softball Complex.

The West Texas Heat dropped its first game to the Jersey Outlaws 9-3.

The Outlaws came out strong, scoring three first-inning runs on what appeared to be a nervous and tense Heat team.

The Outlaws took advantage of the two Heat errors by shortstop Jessica Garcia, capitalizing with RBI hits from Jackie Mallon and Jaclyn Plant. Plant's RBI double off Heat starter Katrina Kelley made the score 3-0.

"In the first inning, there were a lot of jitters," said Jennifer Aman, second baseman for the Heat. "Everybody was nervous. It was nationals, everybody in Midland was watching and we've never seen this team before. It was a lot of unexpected things."

The Heat, down 4-0 in the top of the fifth, put its mark on Jersey pitcher Mallon. The Heat scored three runs on three hits in the inning with Adrian Nobles, Kim Paschal and Kelley scoring. Kelley scored the last run of the inning on Holly Fields' RBI single.

The Heat, however, would get no closer than the 4-3 score as the Outlaws put five on the board in the bottom of the sixth. It was the end for the Heat who will play the loser of today's game between

Carver ready to bust out for Cowboys

By Chip Brown
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — Things got so bad last year for Shante Carver, the Dallas Cowboys' 1994 first-round pick, that even teammate Charles Haley was calling him a bust.

■ Cowboys Camp

But the defensive end added 20 pounds of muscle in the offseason, worked on his rushing techniques and now says he is ready to take over the spot left by departed free agent Jim Jeffcoat.

"I don't think I was strong enough or knew the techniques needed to play this defense last year," said Carver, who was taken from Arizona State with the 23rd pick. "This year, I know what they expect of me, and the year of experience has helped me a lot. I feel very confident."

Lobbying starts for NBA union on proposal

By Wendy E. Lane
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — Now that the NBA players' association has another labor deal to present to its divided members, the studying and the lobbying are under way.

"The next two weeks are critical for analyzing" the proposed six-year deal, said agent Bill Duffy, whose clients include Dallas' Jason Kidd and Seattle's Gary Payton.

Passage of the tentative agreement, announced minutes before the union's midnight deadline Tuesday, would bring an end to the NBA's 40-day lockout.

"It looks like it's good in that it's an affirmation on the owners' part to make concessions," Duffy said Wednesday. "But until it's analyzed, nobody can make a full determination as to how great of a deal it is. It may not be fully negotiated yet."

What was to have been an Aug. 30 vote on disbanding the union will now serve as a ratification vote. The union has said players can either vote for decertification or for accepting the new contract, which replaces one players rejected in June.

The National Labor Relations Board called the election last month after approximately 200 players, led by Michael Jordan and Patrick Ewing, signed petitions saying they no longer wished to be represented by the union.

The other voting day is Sept. 7. More than 400 eligible players can cast ballots

CARVER: Coaches notice difference

(From 1C)

Coaches have noticed a difference. In a recent scrimmage against the Houston Oilers, Carver recorded a sack, forced a fumble and recovered another while making four tackles. The performance surpassed his production from all of last year (two solo tackles and three assists).

"Shante's played well," said Dallas coach Barry Switzer. "His effort has always been there. He's got some great rushing talents, and that's where he's got to help us."

The 6-foot-5, 240-pound Carver says he doesn't understand his label as a bust after last season. He points out that he was behind veterans Haley, Tony Tolbert and Jeffcoat on a top-ranked defense.

"Where was I supposed to start? Was I supposed to start over Haley or Tolbert?" Carver asked.

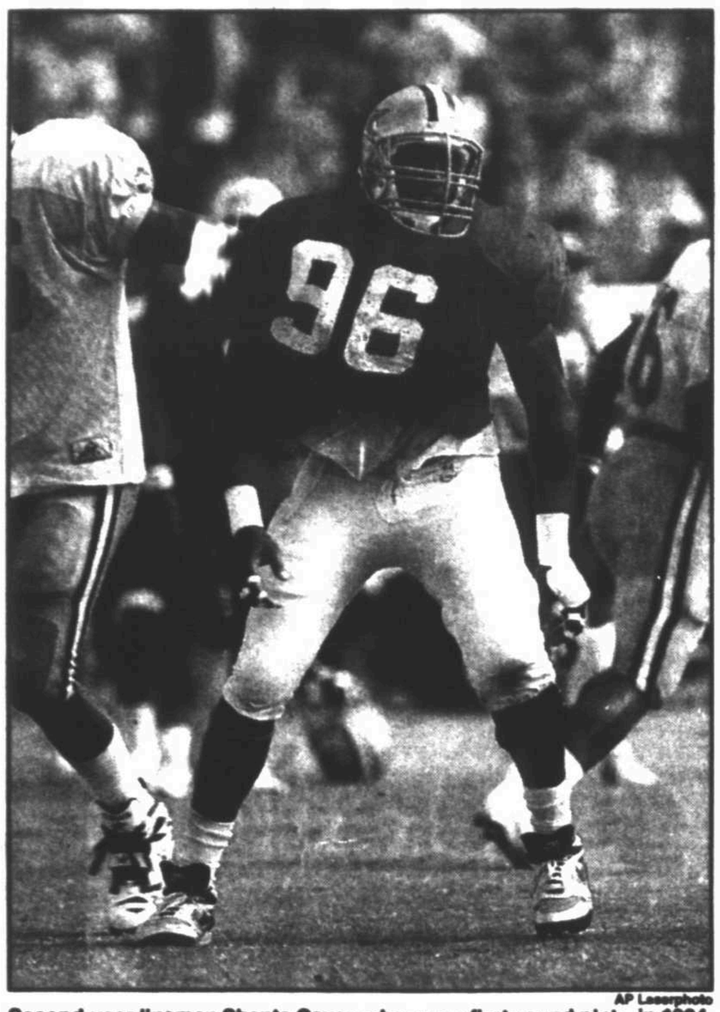

"I guess it means that I am a bust because I was a first-rounder and didn't play. Most first-rounders play, but most don't have a Pro Bowl player (Haley) and another guy who should be in the Pro Bowl (Tolbert) in front of them."

Carver says he has no ill feelings toward Haley, who repeatedly called him a "bust" and a "mulligan."

"That's just Haley," Carver said. "He does that to motivate you."

Haley and Tolbert declined to be interviewed about Carver, who hopes to get all the plays that went to Jeffcoat.

"Give me a chance to play and prove what I can do," he said. "If I can't do it, then call me whatever you want.'

NBA: Plan to be discussed by union

(From 1C)

at regional NLRB offices on either day. A simple majority will decide both the fate of the union and the revised labor pact, and results will be announced on Sept. 12.

"We believe we will win if we're aggressive and effectively communicate to the players and satisfy them it's a good agreement," said Simon Gourdine, the union's executive director. "If we're complacent, we won't win."

If the players vote down the deal, the union would be dissolved. A federal antitrust suit filed by Jordan, Ewing and 14 other players would seek to end the lockout by court order and force a new set of work rules.

To avoid the courts, the NBA and the union will lobby players to accept the pact worth approximately $5 billion in salaries and benefits.

The union plans to hold several regional meetings to brief players and sell the proposals' merits while the league will communicate to the players through its teams.

To soften the salary cap, the players agreed to partially fund $90 million to $100 million in salary cap exceptions, Gourdine said Wednesday.

In one giveback, their benefits package, originally supposed to increase by $5 million annually to $59 million in the final year of the deal, will instead increase by $3 million a year.

The revised deal doesn't contain a luxury tax, a sticking point with players in the previous pact, and includes a $1 million exception for teams over the salary cap to sign free agents.

Teams also can use 50 percent of an injured player's salary to sign a replacement, and a player who has completed two seasons with the same team can resign at double his salary.

In exchange, the union agreed to let the NBA reopen the contract after three years if salaries exceed an agreed-upon revenue percentage. And the NBA still gets a rookie salary scale and abolishes multimillion "balloon" payments tacked on the end of some veterans' contracts.

"There are still significant benefits" for the owners, Stern said.

"It gives more people freedom to move from team to team," Cleveland's Danny Ferry said. "The players should feel this is fair and reasonable. At least now they have two sides they can look at."

Like Ewing and Jordan, Ferry is a client of agent David Falk, who advocates decertification and sharply criticized the previous deal. Falk was traveling Wednesday and unavailable for comment, his office said.

Before the new deal was agreed to, Ewing sent a letter to players urging them to reject any pact negotiated by the union leadership.

Even so, Duffy said, the deal stands a fair chance of being ratified because "the union now won't make the mistake of jamming it down the players' throats." That was the complaint of many players about the way the earlier agreement was handled.

After the NBA and the union announced an agreement in principle on June 21, players had less than 48 hours to evaluate the deal before a scheduled vote. Even though the owners approved it, the players never took a vote and the union was sent back to the bargaining table to get rid of the luxury tax.

This time, Stern indicated he would delay an owners' vote until the players make their decision.

"We tried it the other way last time," he said, "and it didn't work."

REBELS: Training camp underway

(From 1C)

Midland High because the Rebels didn't have spring training.

"We opted to take the extra week now instead of having spring training because we had so many injuries last spring," Parchman said. "If we had spring training, Thurman probably could have gone through it, but I don't know how wise that would have been. But Strambler was also out as was B.J. Honeyman and Stephen Westphal with shoulder injuries. Those are all starters for us, so we felt we would have more benefit by taking the extra week of preseason."

Lee will work out twice today and three times on Friday and Saturday before hitting the pads on the first day of school Monday.

However, the Lee footballers weren't the first to hit the practice field. The Lee band has been on the field since July 31. They finally had company on Wednesday.

It certainly looked like school was in session.

Oilers heading to Tennessee

The Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — The Oilers have finished practicing at Trinity University for the week and are heading to Tennessee for a tangle with the Washington Redskins.

"It'll be a good test for us," said Houston coach Jeff Fisher, whose Oilers will practice with the Redskins on Thursday and Friday in Knoxville then face Washington in a preseason game Saturday.

Fisher welcomes the change in routine.

"It's a great opportunity for the players to work against somebody they're not used to working against. After a couple of days, a couple of weeks, they get used to (practicing with teammates)," he said.

As usual, the Oilers practiced in pads Wednesday morning then spent their afternoon session doing lighter drills and conditioning. It's all part of Fisher's effort to ensure his players are fresh for the regular-season opener Sept. 3 at Jacksonville.

General manager Floyd Reese said Fisher's approach to training camp seems to be working well with the players.

"The attitude we have and the start we have and how we feel about where we're going is going to be as important as anything else," Reese said.

In another development, Reese said he was negotiating Wednesday with agents for holdout safety Blaine Bishop, who faces a Friday deadline to report or miss the first regular-season game.

ASA: Blue Diamonds, Heat defeated

(From 1C)

the Athletics and Costigan's at 3:10 p.m. on Field B.

The Midland Blue Diamonds lost one game later to Atlanta's Tucker Elite 10-0 in five innings.

The Blue Diamonds was also a victim of the error bug early on. Tucker Elite took advantage of the errors in the, scoring two runs when Christina Caldwell hit what appeared to be a simple fly ball with the bases loaded to center in the bottom of the second. Blue Diamond Shelley Ray, however, couldn't get a grasp on the ball and that allowed two runs to score and make the score 3-0.

In the fourth inning, the Tucker Elite bats then came to life with seven hits and seven runs off Blue Diamond starter Kate Lebow. Big hits included Liz Love's two-run double and a run-scoring double from Amanda Johnson.

Offensively, the Blue Diamonds just couldn't figure out Elite pitchers Caldwell and Ashley Fawcett, who kept the Blue Diamonds hitless for the five-inning game. The only blemish was a first-inning walk to Shelley Ray.

The Blue Diamonds do know that they can play with these teams as shown by glimpses of slid play during the game.

"We just have to play throughout the game until the game is finished," said Blue Diamonds' third baseman Julie Soto. "We have to play for our best till the very end. We played goods at first and then let down. We can stay with teams like this if we keep up the good work."

The Blue Diamonds will play today at 4:50 p.m. on field B.

Other Notes from the 1995 ASA 16 and Under Nationals:

*The first home run of the 16 and Under Nationals was a grand slam in the top of the second inning by the Southern California Firecrackers' Jenni Toffing. The Firecrackers won 12-0 over the K.C. Blaze.

*Ashley Lewis, from the Southern Streaks of Louisiana, threw four innings of perfect ball and five innings of no-hit ball. She ended up winning the game over the Long Island Chargers 4-2. The hard thrower had 12 strike outs, and offensively, she hit a two-run bomb over the left-field fence. The homer proved to be the game-winning hit.

*The Gordon Panthers, from California, saw its pitcher Kristi Martin throw four perfect innings before being taken out in the Panthers' 10-0 win over OKC Power. Martin struck out 10 in four innings.

*The Midland Elite team will begin their play today at 10:30 a.m. against the same Firecrackers team that won 12-0 last night.

*Jimmy Mowles, Francis Johns, Bob Garrett and Virginia Ezell were inducted into the Midland Softball Hall of Fame.

*The first of pitch of the tournament was thrown out by Special Olympics Area 18 Player of the Year, Linda Wilson.

Results from the first round of the ASA 16 and Under Softball tournament:

Jacobs ties for NTPGA title

GARLAND — Former Midland High golfer Josh Jacobs and Midland Lee senior Charlie Prince led Midland's entries Tuesday in the Haverty's NTPGA Junior Tour Tournament of Champions at the Firewheel Golf Club.

Jacobs, who will golf this year at Midland College, finished in a three-way tie for first place in the Boys Open division with a two-round score of 77-72—149. Lance Dunaway of Longview won the playoff while Les Phillips of Borger was second.

Prince finished third in the Boys 16-17 division with a score of 79-79—158. Clay Butler of Red Oak won with a 147 while Brian King of Kilgore was second with 156. Midland High golfer Chris Owen was ninth with 81-85—176.

Midlander Jason Lindgren was 15th in the Boys 12-13 division with a score of 99-86—185. Shelley Winchell of Midland was eighth in the Girls 12-14 division with a 101-96—197. In the Co-Ed 7-9 division, 8-year-old Brent Bennett was sixth with a score of 49-46—95.

White aces

Jim White made a hole-in-one on the No. 8 Par 3 holes at Midland Country Club Tuesday. White used a 4-wood on the 170-yard ace that was witnessed by Jack Byrd.

Pavin right at home for PGA

By Joe Concannon
The Boston Globe

PACIFIC PALISADES, Calif. — This is Corey Pavin country, a golfing turf that has served him well. He grew up on the lush Los Posas CC in Camarillo, an hour's drive north on the Pacific Coast Highway, went to UCLA and enters the 77th PGA Championship, which begins Thursday at Riviera CC, as a favorite.

Riviera CC has been termed Hogan's Alley, a nod to the golf legend who won the 1948 US Open here. "When you think of Ben Hogan," wrote Pulitzer Prize-winning Los Angeles Times sports columnist Jim Murray, "you think of Riviera."

But Pavin has seen some success at Riviera, too. The last two years he has won the Nissan Open here. Hogan won the old Los Angeles Open at Riviera in 1947 and 1948 to set up the triple that Pavin could equal: three wins in two years on the course where Hollywood's greatest stars have played and where some still are members.

This is the backdrop for a championship that sees Pavin perhaps walking toward history instead of chasing it. This summer he finally shedded the label of being the best golfer never to win one of golf's four major championships when he beat Greg Norman by two shots to capture the US Open.

Should Pavin win Sunday, he would become the first since Jack Nicklaus took the US Open and PGA Championship in 1980 to win the two titles in the same year. The only others to do it were Gene Sarazen in 1922 and Hogan in 1948. So Pavin is in Hogan's large footprints in more ways than one.

On the eve of this PGA Championship, they are already beginning to put a dust cover on Hogan's Alley and refer to Riviera as Pavin's Place.

"It's not quite my home course, but it's a course I like a lot," said Pavin, second to Norman on the PGA Tour money list (with earnings of more than $1 million for the first time in his career) and the leading point-getter for the US Ryder Cup team, which will meet the Europeans at Oak Hill Sept. 22-24. "I've had success here. It's on grasses I grew up on. It's in an area where I spent about seven years of my life. I feel comfortable about the golf course. I feel good about my golf game. I'm just looking forward to starting. It's funny, I went from the guy who hasn't won a major to the favorite in majors."

The US Open victory lifted the monkey off Pavin's back. "I don't really approach (the game) any differently, but I might be a little more confident," he said. "I feel better about situations I may get myself into on Sunday, and feel more comfortable coming down the stretch. I felt a lot better the last day of the British Open. I wouldn't say any better than the final round of the US Open, but I was very comfortable." He finished tied for eighth at St. Andrews.

US Open champion or not, Pavin still must be ready to play every week. "I still know the bottom line for me is I have to go out and perform," he said. "I have to be prepared and ready to play the best I can. It doesn't matter what's written or what's said. It's what I do on golf courses that determines how I play. I think it helps to have played well here in the past, and any time you come back to a golf course where you've had success you have good feelings. I've also had good PGAs, but nobody was going to beat Nick Price last year."

So the major championship hasn't made a major difference? "I don't see why it should be any different," said Pavin. "Having won a major championship really helps you handle the pressure you feel out there on the golf course. I just feel more confident and feel I have a better chance now to win major championships with the first one under my belt. I think those are all things I can feed off of and uset to my advantage."

Pavin's focus this week is on the present, not the past. "I want to make sure that I stay focused and play good golf," he said. "If I'm not going to stay focused, I'm not going to play. That's what drives me because I want to make sure I keep playing on a high level. I don't want to relax. I'm a very competitive person, and if I can't compete I'm not going to enjoy myself. I want to enjoy myself playing golf. Just because I've won a major doesn't mean I'm not hungry. I'm just as hungry as I was before I won the US Open."

Still, the US Open title will translate into more than the $1 million he has already earned this year. The word is that he can command $350,000 in appearance money to play overseas and will play in the Suntory Open in Japan.

Netscape stock soars in initial offering

Netscape Communications Corp. co-founders Jim Clark, left, and Marc Andreessen.

By Evan Ramstad
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — Netscape Communications Corp. has yet to make any money. But when the 16-month-old company went public Wednesday, investor demand was so hot its stock price doubled and the company's market value approached $3 billion.

Stock in Netscape, which produces software that makes it easier to navigate the Internet, was offered at $28, opened at $71, rose as high as $75 and then tumbled as low as $53.75. It closed regular trading at $58.25 on the Nasdaq Stock Market.

At that price, Netscape's market value was $2.9 billion, close to that of Dell Computer Corp. and greater than firms like AST Research Inc., Broderbund Software Inc. and Gateway 2000 Inc.

The debut was the most stunning Wall Street has seen since Boston Chicken Inc. went public in November 1993 for $20 and traded as high as $51 on its first day.

To many investors, Netscape represented the chance to get in at the start of another technology dynasty like Apple Computer Inc. or Microsoft.

"There are a lot of people who want to own the stock regardless of the valuation," said Kathleen Smith, analyst at Renaissance Capital Corp. in Greenwich, Conn. "They see this as the Microsoft of the Internet."

Nearly 14 million shares were traded, almost three times the 5 million shares that were issued.

The company makes a program called Netscape Navigator, which allows people who use personal computers to very simply access and manipulate information on the World Wide Web portion of the Internet, the global computer network.

From a financial standpoint, the company is the fastest-growing software start-up company ever. It had $700,000 in sales from its inception in April 1994 through December. During the first six months of this year, sales were $16.6 million and its losses narrowed. Netscape may turn profitable by the end of the year.

Nonetheless, it may take some time for the company's sales and profits to reach levels normally associated with a firm valued at nearly $3 billion.

The company was formed by James H. Clark, founder and former chairman of Silicon Graphics Inc., and Marc Andreessen, then a 22-year-old graduate student at the University of Illinois.

Clark's 26.5 percent stake in Netscape, worth $272 million at $28 per share, was worth just over $565.8 million at the close of Wednesday's trading. Andreessen's 2.7 percent stake was worth about $58 million.

Gas prices jump

Natural gas futures prices rose sharply in thin trading Wednesday as hot weather and an approaching tropical storm sparked buying.

Natural gas for September delivery leaped 6.8 cents to $1.539 per 1,000 cubic feet on the New York Mercantile Exchange .

Futures trailed the cash market, where prices soared as much as 15 cents in anticipation of heavy air conditioner use as temperatures in the Midwest and Northeast climb into the 90s. Some utilities generate electricity by burning natural gas.

Traders also were watching Tropical Storm Felix, which was strengthening and moving toward the Bahamas, and a tropical depression forming in the Gulf of Mexico. Tropical storms pose a threat to natural gas production platforms and pipelines in the Gulf.

After the close of trading, the American Gas Association reported that U.S. natural gas in storage rose by 38 billion cubic feet last week, a smaller increase than 40 billion to 75 billion traders expected.

The low refill rate reflected the temporary shutdown of some natural gas production last week due to Hurricane Erin.

In other energy trading, West Texas Intermediate for September delivery slipped 1 cent to $17.78 a barrel.

Dollar rises

NEW YORK — The dollar rose slightly against the yen Wednesday on signs of stronger demand for new U.S. Treasury debt, but it weakened vs. the mark and other European currencies despite lower interest rates in Germany.

In late New York trading, the dollar was quoted at 91.61 yen, up from 91.47 late Tuesday. The dollar also was trading at 1.4058 German marks, down from 1.4078.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Tuesday: 1.1637 Swiss francs, down from 1.1670; 4.8590 French francs, down from 4.8620; 1,586 Italian lire, down from 1,588; and 1.3590 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3575.

The British pound was quoted at $1.5990, down from $1.6028.

Markets mixed

NEW YORK— A strong showing in Microsoft, plus a hot new computer-stock offering — Netscape Communications, pushed technology stocks higher on Wednesday.

But blue-chip issues languished along with bonds. The Dow Jones industrial average fell 21.83 to 4,671.49. Declining issues edged out advancers on the New York Stock Exchange. Volume was a moderate 303.4 million shares, down from 305.16 million Tuesday.

The Nasdaq composite index rose 7.98 at 1,005.10, within a hair of its all-time closing high of 1,005.89 made on July 17.

Other market indexes did not fare as well, however. The NYSE's composite index fell 0.53 to 300.06. The Standard & Poor's 500-stock index declined 0.58 to 559.71, while the American Stock Exchange's the market value index lost 1.11 to 523.72.

The Nasdaq index got a huge lift from a recent stalwart, Microsoft, which gained 3 to 96 1/2.

The Justice Department said Tuesday that it would not pursue an antitrust action against the software company before the Aug. 24 debut of its hotly anticipated Windows 95 operating system.

Topless bar first to be publicly traded

By N.Y. Times News Service

HOUSTON — After six months of review, the Nasdaq stock market has approved the trading of a Houston topless club, paving the way for Rick's Cabaret International to become the first publicly traded topless-bar stock.

Early this year, Rick's registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission to sell $4.9 million in shares to the public but couldn't go forward until it obtained the approval of stock market officials.

While saying they did not have a moral clause, Nasdaq officials reserved the right to reject offerings that don't elicit "public confidence in the market."

'There was no legal or regulatory basis to exclude the company.'
— Jim Spellman, Nasdaq spokesman

But after two Nasdaq committees reviewed Rick's application, officials concluded "there was no legal or regulatory basis to exclude the company," Nasdaq spokesman Jim Spellman said Tuesday.

"What we look at is the law and if it's a legitimate licensed business and meets the capital requirements," he said. "And, in this case, it did."

Robert Watters, sole shareholder of Rick's and its president and chief executive officer, declined to comment. His attorney, Robert Axelrod, cited a "quiet period" as the company registers the stock for sale to investors.

"We don't want to do anything inadvertently to create any issues," Axelrod said.

He said the company also has registered with the Boston Stock Exchange.

Rick's hopes to go public with shares as early as September using the stock symbol RICK, Axelrod said. The stock's underwriter is a small firm in Boca Raton, Fla. — Barron Chase Securities.

Nasdaq approved Rick's for listing on its second-tier SmallCap Market, which requires companies to have a minimum of $4 million in total assets and $2 million in equity, Spellman said.

In its prospectus, Rick's, known for its well-endowed female dancers, said its revenues of $4.57 million last year remained flat because of increased competition and increased taxes on high-revenue customers, among other things.

According to the document, Rick's plans to use the proceeds from the offering to open a number of locations nationwide using the Rick's Cabaret name. It said it has entered a letter of intent for a possible location on Bourbon Street in New Orleans.

Accessories decorate home business

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff writer

More and more mothers are opting to work out of their homes, so they can not only help earn a living, but also spend extra time with their children.

That is exactly what Cyndee DeBlassie is doing with Loxy's Soxies and Accessories.

The mother of two, 4-year-old daughter, Marysa, and 18-month-old Joseph, is now expecting her third child with her husband, Joe.

Having been a teacher for 10 years, Ms. DeBlassie was familiar with working and had a creative outlet through designing bulletin boards and coming up with lesson plans.

So, when she decided to stay at home with her children she drew inspiration from a friend who had an at-home business making christening gowns for infants.

Ms. DeBlassie started her business decorating socks for little girls and from there friends and customers suggested making matching socks and bow sets. Recently she started making baby headbands.

She has been in business for about 18 months and moved to Midland in February when her husband was transferred here.

Being a full-time mother makes it a little hard to set aside time to work. So when does she find time to create?

"Mostly when my son naps," she said with a smile.

Her daughter helps and enjoys playing with mommy's materials.

"Marysa enjoys playing with the ribbons and decorative novelties and she helps come up with some combinations," Ms. DeBlassie said.

She said she tries to work on a few creations each day, but doesn't usually complete a certain number of designs at each session, instead working on a number of things at once.

Each design is the result of experimenting with the materials, different colors, ideas and novelties.

"Basically each one is a one-of-a-kind and is something not everyone will have," she added.

Her creations are designed for girls from birth to 12 and are made of durable ribbon with lace or grosgrain. The bows are placed on three-inch french clips and all have a pinwheel bow and novelty over the bigger bow.

The headbands are made on one-inch stretch lace which is "the most comfortable and the most popular."

And she also creates socks with matching bows.

Each item has a novelty which could range from a cameo on a Victorian looking bow to a denim bow with little boots on it.

She also has special bows including the happy birthday bow with a little gift on it. Other bows feature crayons, cats, bears and ballet slippers, to name just a few.

Cyndee DeBlassie has created a custom-line of baby headbands, socks and bows for her at-home business, Loxy's Soxies. She distributes her goods through local stores who encourage people to "buy the Basin."

Currently, she is working on getting holiday bows ready.

Ms. DeBlassie recently completed some special orders placed for bows custom-made to match specific outfits.

But, she isn't necessarily a one-woman business. Her daughter helps her pick things out and match designs together.

She not only helped mom with some new ideas, but she has learned from it as well.

"This has helped Marysa increase her vocabulary while learning colors," her mother said.

Since school starts back next week, Ms. DeBlassie has donated several dozen headbands, socks and bows to Centers for Families and their Children. The goods will go to new mothers as well as to children to wear when they go back to school.

"They need to feel good about going back to school," Ms. DeBlassie said. "Everyone wants to fit in and this may help a handful of children."

Loxy's Soxies and Accessories are only available at local retailers, which Ms. DeBlassie is proud to say offers consumers an option to going out of town to shop.

She said there are six locations which carry Loxy's Soxies products, A Dream Come True at Expressions, Baby Biz, Just 4 Kids, Baskets and More, Lighthouse and Swartz for Kids.

She said each store has a different selection some carry all three or just headbands, bows and socks.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

SIPC transfers accounts from bankrupt brokerages

By Bill Doyle

Doyle

Q: As of today, I have two things in my brokerage account — "XYZ Co." stock with a market value of $7,000 and a money market with $5,000 in it. I purchased the stock two years ago for $10,000 and have had the $5,000 in the money market for about the same time.

Suppose the brokerage firm goes belly up next month, when the stock's value is still $7,000 and the money market is zero. What does the Securities Investor Protection Corp. pay me?

A: Chances are, the SIPC won't "pay" you anything.

Instead, the SIPC will arrange to have the busted brokerage's accounts transferred to a different securities brokerage firm, with which you would then do business.

If the SIPC is unable to arrange the accounts' transfer, the failed firm would be liquidated. In that case, the SIPC would send you either certificates for your stock or a check for the market value of those shares.

Here, we are going along with your statement about having nothing in the "money market" when the brokerage fails. If you do have a balance there, it would come to you via the same route as your stock.

Since being founded by act of Congress in 1970, the SIPC has protected investors who leave stocks, bonds, other securities and cash with brokerage firms by seeing to it that every customer gets back what he or she left with the firm — up to $500,000 per customer, including no more than $100,000 in cash. That's more than sufficient for most customers. Nonetheless, many brokerages carry additional private insurance covering each customer for many millions of dollars.

Any mention of the SIPC must stress that its sole function is to return to investors securities and cash left with busted brokerages. It does not protect investors against losses in the securities markets.

If you harbor any notion the SIPC would help you recover $3,000 because you paid $10,000 for that stock now worth $7,000, forget it.

Q: In February 1993, I purchased 90 shares of stock at $30.75 a share through a major brokerage house. I signed up for the company's dividend reinvestment plan and now have 10.476 shares in my DRP.

As this stock now is trading at $26.50, I decided to sell. But I cannot find any stock certificate in my records. Is there any way to ascertain if it was sent to me?

I am told it would take months and cost up to $150 to get a replacement certificate in order to sell. Is there a simpler and less costly way to handle this?

A: Ask the brokerage through which you bought the 90 shares if the certificate was sent to you. If it wasn't, you can sell those 90 shares with no problem through that brokerage. And you can sell the 10 and a fraction shares through the DRP agent.

However, if the 90 shares were registered in your name and a certificate delivered to you, you will have to obtain a replacement certificate before you can sell.

That involves providing a lost security affidavit and posting a surety bond. The latter can cost 4 or 5 percent of the market value of the stock involved. However, many companies have blanket surety bonds to assist stockholders such as you. Check that out with the company's shareholder relations department.

When you do sell the 90 shares, you can reduce your cost by doing so through a discount brokerage firm, where the commission charges are much lower than those at "full service" brokerages.

Q: When buying or selling stocks, is it better to do so with a limit order, in which a price is specified, or with a market order?

A: That's really a matter of personal preference. Mine is for market orders, which always are executed — at the best possible price at the particular time. A limit order might not be filled, because the stock has moved away from the price named.

Red Sox pull out win, sweep series from Indians

The Associated Press

BOSTON — Pinch-hitter Matt Stairs singled home the go-ahead run in the eighth inning Wednesday night and the Boston Red Sox beat the Cleveland Indians 9-5 for their seventh straight win.

The Red Sox swept the two-game series between AL division leaders, and sent Cleveland to its third consecutive loss.

Erik Hanson (10-4) pitched eight innings and allowed five runs on six hits. He walked four and struck out two.

Albert Belle's 25th homer, a three-run shot, highlighted a five-run third that put the Indians ahead 5-3.

■ AL Roundup

The Red Sox closed within a run in the sixth when Mo Vaughn doubled, extending his hitting streak to 12 games, and Ken Hill threw a wild pitch.

Boston tied it in the seventh as Alicea singled and continued to second on right fielder Manny Ramirez's error, and scored on Lee Tinsley's single.

Orioles 7, Yankees 2

NEW YORK — Cal Ripken had two doubles, a homer and four RBIs and Jamie Moyer allowed only three hits in the first eight innings as Baltimore avoided a three-game sweep by beating New York.

It was just the third victory in the last 10 games for the Orioles, who have dropped from 4 1/2 games out of first place on July 30 to 9 1/2 games out. New York lost for just the fifth time in the last 21 games.

Rangers 13, Tigers 5

ARLINGTON — Ivan Rodriguez made Detroit pay for intentionally walking Will Clark, hitting a go-ahead single in the sixth inning as Texas came away wit the win.

Lou Frazier drove in four runs and scored on Rodriguez's single for a 6-5 lead. Otis Nixon had three of the Rangers' season-high 17 hits.

Kenny Rogers (11-5) lasted six innings, giving up five runs and seven hits.

C.J. Nitkowski, making his second start for the Tigers after being acquired from Cincinnati July 31, went just four-plus innings, giving up five runs and seven hits.

Athletics 6, Twins 3

MINNEAPOLIS — Geronimo Berroa doubled home the tiebreaking run in the 10th inning and Oakland defeated Minnesota.

The A's tied it in the ninth on Craig Paquette's sacrifice fly off Dave Stevens (3-1). The Twins were held hitless in the last six innings.

In the 10th, Brent Gates led off with a double against Stevens, Jason Giambi walked and Berroa doubled to left. After Stevens retired the next two batters, he walked Scott Brosius and Stan Javier lined a two-run single.

Mike Mohler (1-0) pitched a scoreless ninth and Dennis Eckersley worked the 10th for his 22nd save.

Angels 9, Royals 1

KANSAS CITY - Tim Salmon hit two home runs and J.T. Snow and Jim Edmonds also connected Wednesday night, leading California over Kansas City for their eighth straight road win.

Chuck Finley (11-8) gave up four hits in 6 2-3 innings as the Angels won for the 14th time in 18 games overall.

Brewers 12, Blue Jays 7

MILWAUKEE — The Milwaukee Brewers took advantage of 13 walks and pitcher Juan Guzman's shortest start of his career to hand Toronto its sixth straight loss.

Six of the 13 Brewers who walked wound up scoring. The 13 walks were one shy of the Blue Jays club record, set on Sept. 9, 1979, at Cleveland. All nine Milwaukee starters walked at least once.

Expos outlast Astros

The Associated Press

HOUSTON — Mike Lansing's two-run double highlighted a three-run fifth inning and Pedro Martinez scattered 11 hits over eight-plus innings as the Montreal Expos defeated Houston 6-5 Wednesday night.

■ NL Roundup

Lansing, hitting .371 in his last 23 games, led a 16-hit attack that included three hits each from Tim Laker and F.P. Santangelo.

Martinez gave up four runs to send Houston to its fourth straight loss. He struck out five and walked two.

Martinez left after giving up two singles to start the ninth. Mel Rojas then came on and hit Orlando Miller with a pitch to load the bases. He struck out Brian Hunter, but gave up an infield RBI single to John Cangelosi and threw a wild pitch to score another run.

Willie Fraser then came on and hit Craig Biggio with a pitch to score the third run of the inning. Derek Bell flied out to shallow right, and the tying run was unable to score.

Fraser got his first save by getting Dave Magadan to fly out to center.

Reds 9, Braves 3

ATLANTA — Greg Maddux's 10-game winning streak ended as Benito Santiago hit a three-run homer to lead Cincinnati to a 9-3 win over Atlanta.

Maddux (12-2) had not lost since May 17, a span of 14 starts, and his streak was a career-high and a season-high in the NL this season.

Maddux allowed five runs on eight hits in 6 2-3 innings. He walked a season-high five and struck out eight to drop to 8-10 lifetime against the Reds. He also threw his first wild pitch since April 14, 1994.

Cincinnati, which has the NL's best record at 60-33, won for the seventh time in eight games.

Mets 4, Phillies 0

PHILADELPHIA — Rookie Jason Isringhausen pitched eight shutout innings as New York beat Philadelphia.

The victory was the fourth in a row for New York, while the Phillies lost their season-high seventh straight and dropped to .500 (48-48) for the first time since May 3, when they were 3-3.

The Phillies, who were 19 games over .500 (37-18) on June 25, have lost 30 of their last 41.

Isringhausen, making just his fourth major league start, allowed just six hits, struck out two and walked none.

Doug Henry pitched the ninth.

Isringhausen (2-1) benefitted from three double plays. In losing for the fifth time in his last six decisions, Paul Quantrill (9-7) gave up 10 hits in seven innings.

Another Mets rookie, Edgardo Alfonzo, went 3-for-4, including two triples and two RBIs.

The Mets opened the scoring with single runs in the third and fourth.

Marlins 2, Rockies 1

MIAMI — Kurt Abbott had three hits, including an inside-the-park home run, and drove in both runs as Florida Marlins beat Colorado.

The Marlins have won 10 of 12, and are 19-13 career against their expansion brethren.

John Burkett allowed six hits in 7 1-3 innings to win his third straight. Burkett (10-10) is 6-1 in his career against Colorado.

Robb Nen pitched the ninth for his 12th save.

Giants 4, Pirates 3

SAN FRANCISCO — Glenallen Hill's two-run homer in the seventh inning kept William VanLandingham's record perfect at Candlestick Park and gave San Francisco a 4-3 win over Pittsburgh.

VanLandingham (3-2) allowed three runs and eight hits in eight innings, and is 7-0 at home.

Rod Beck pitched the ninth for his 19th save.

Cubs, Padres rained out

CHICAGO — Chicago's game with San Diego was rained out and rescheduled as part of a doubleheader for Thursday.

Thursday's games will begin at 12:05 p.m., CDT.

GARDEN

Dear Abby/2D

This landscape is greatly enhanced by the generous, sweeping landscaped beds. These beds are not only beautiful, but once established and mulched, they become very water efficient. Another big bonus is they require very little maintenance.

It's Colorado cousins don't fair too well in the Permian Basin, but native to Texas is Texas Gold Columbine. A gorgeous spring blooming perennial that's long lived and doesn't mind the heat and dry soils of the area. Give it some hot afternoon shade and it would be happy in any landscape.

Searing heat; dry, dusty conditions; hot winds that singe your eyebrows ... this could be a scene from an old Western movie where the hero has been left to die in the desert without water. But this also could be a scene from anyone's backyard during July. And when the summer heat keeps plants wilted and stressed, it can take the fun out of gardening real quick.

We live in a desert with less than 15 inches of annual rainfall and summers that bring 100-plus temperatures for days on end. These conditions make gardening difficult.

But don't get ready to trade your greenscape for astroturf or concrete.

The benefits of landscapes are too numerous to list. We need the retreat; the comfort and solace that trees, shrubs and flowers give.

By working with nature and using gardening techniques that will complement nature, a pleasant landscape can be created that will survive the conditions of this area. Collectively, the techniques are called Xeriscape.

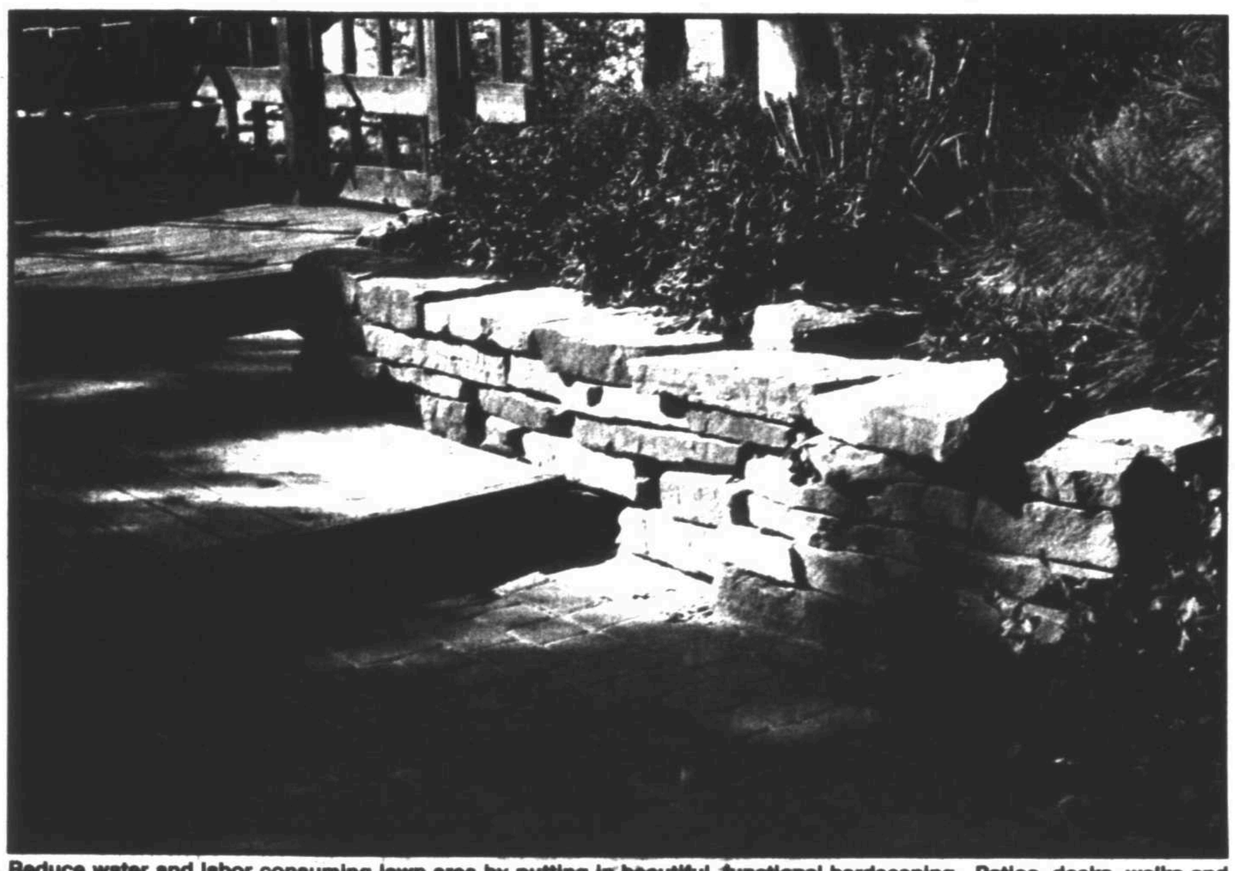

What is Xeriscape?

Xeriscape is a catchy word used to package a concept of gardening that will conserve water, but still yield a beautiful landscape.

The concept of Xeriscaping has helped many cities teach their citizens the seven principles that save water, but not at the expense of healthy, vigorous landscapes.

Xeriscape comes from the Greek words xeros, meaning "dry" and landscape. For the enlightened gardener it has come to mean "quality, water efficient landscaping." For the uninformed, it conjures up mental images of harsh expanses of gravel and cacti.

Don't confuse Xeriscape with Zero...scape. Xeriscape can be a beautiful, green, welcoming landscape, and at the same time, water efficient.

Reduce water and labor consuming lawn area by putting in beautiful, functional hardscaping. Patios, decks, walks and other hardscaping create beauty, outdoor living areasand provide numerous functions.

From March through September, household water usage goes up more than 50 percent, and in some cases 75 to 80 percent. This increase, of course, is due to people watering their landscapes and gardens.

What makes this increase bad is that about 50 percent of the increase is considered to be wasted or unnecessary water. Water that is lost due to runoff, leaching, and evaporation is wasteful. Unnecessarily frequent or heavy irrigations — which can actually hurt your landscape — is another common waste of water. Those who irrigate daily, or even every other day, are wasting water.

With less than 15 inches of annual rainfall, water is a scarce, precious resource for the Permian Basin. Searing summer heat for days on end and extended periods of drought, give us a challenge when it comes to growing.

To confront and deal with low rainfall, desert growing conditions, Xeriscape is a most practical approach.

Xeriscape is composed of seven basic principles that result in water savings, beautiful landscapes, healthy plants and healthier environment. As you read about these seven principles, they may sound familiar. Xeriscape principles are merely good, sound horticulture practices that have always implemented.

The seven principles of Xeriscape include:

1) Planning and design
2) Soil analysis and improvements
3) Practical turf areas
4) Appropriate plant selection
5) Efficient irrigation
6) Mulching
7) Appropriate maintenance

Simple enough, wouldn't you say? Or would you?

If you have an existing, well established landscape, can you use these seven principles without starting over?

Certainly.

Many changes may be necessary, but starting from scratch is not one of them. Turf slopes, watering systems, some plant replacement, soil improvement and maintenance practices may be some of the changes required for a landscape to become a Xeriscape. Converting from a traditional landscape to a water saving one, may take 2 or 3 years, but it can be done.

Let's take a look at each principle in detail.

PLANNING AND DESIGN

Planning is general in nature and should encompass the long range goals of your landscape. Goals like color, shade, entertainment, recreation, low maintenance and water thrift should all be considered in planning. The planning stage should be geared to you and your family's needs and wants.

The design aspect is specific and includes all the arrangement and definition of your property. It should include the elements of your landscape that were established in the planning process. As with any landscape, the site must be analyzed for usage. There are three essential areas that need to be identified in all landscapes before the design is drawn.

These areas are "use" areas; the public, private and service areas of your landscape all very important for a functional as well as attractive design.

Planning and design should take into account weather forces, sun patterns, slopes, views, traffic patterns, soil conditions and budgets to name a few. Planning and design is the foundational step to a flourishing Xeriscape.

SOIL ANALYSIS AND IMPROVEMENT

Regardless of soil type, any soil can be improved by adding organic matter. The water and nutrient holding capacity, nutrients levels, beneficial soil microbes, aeration, structure, internal drainage ... all and more can be improved by adding organic mat-

Bedding plants as well as other plants grow very well under two very important aspects of Xeriscape, drip irrigation and a generous layer of mulch. Both techniques save water, reduce weed growth, stop soil erosion, reduce labor and result in healthy, good looking plants.

Homeowners can measure the efficiency of their lawn watering method by using the catch pan method. By putting catch pans or cups out and watering as usual, the water levels can be checked. This catch cup routine can also reveal problems in irrigation design and efficiency.

Beautiful and tough, the Pink Evening Primrose, a Texas native plant that is very much at home in any Permian Basin garden, is a spreading perennial that blooms in late spring and early summer providing a ground cover of pink color, and it does this with very little — if any — water.

Cannas brighten landscape, life

The colorful beauty of the canna plant (right) brightens any garden or landscape. Cannas, both towering and dwarf, thrive in sunlight.

Resplendent glory becomes faded beauty only to live again.

That's the canna. The lovely perennial each spring shoots directly from its wintry rooting place in the warm soil and promptly seeks sunlight and splendor.

The canna's radiance is comfortable in yesteryear's settings and in contemporary gardens.

The streamlined, spear-like buds soon unfold, exude joy and radiate passion. But in a fortnight or so, the bliss has faded. The bloom dies but the flower does not.

Ah, but the joyous plant springs forth another babe, a bud, that unfolds and grows into seemingly eternal youth but all too soon is spent and old and withering.

The cycle, indicative of life in renewal, is heartening.

"I think they are pretty — all the different colors," said Georgia Crues, a Midland flower aficionado and canna fancier. "They are beautiful. I have always loved flowers" — marigolds to cannas.

From mid-summer until the season's first frost, cannas nurture their blooms in succeeding generations "forever."

The canna is the flower of resurrection. Once planted in fertile soil, refreshed and enlivened by water, and inspired by sunlight, the canna rises from its grave to glory and to glorify its Creator. Then, after a season of bliss, the canna yields to the killing frosts of October, maybe November, dies to the world yet lives in the grave to return next spring.

A column of cannas, like sentinels ever loyal, stands tall and stately as a glorified hedgerow at D.

Autumn is best for planting

Trees, shrubs establish root systems for fuller, healthier spring growth

The summer season sometimes lulls gardeners into the doldrums of boredom. It is too hot to plant or even work in the garden during most of the long summer days. In addition to the heat, people get frustrated with all the insects and lack of rainfall that summer usually brings.

But hang on just a little longer. Autumn is just around the corner and you will be able to plant and have a grand time toiling in your gardens and working with trees, shrubs, flowers and vegetables.

Because the mercury begins to drop, the cooler temperatures make fall an excellent time to ter. With so many benefits, this step should never be overlooked. Add organic matter to shrub, flower and garden beds to increase the amount of water it can retain and as a by-product get all of these other pluses.

Your soil can be considered a water bank account, able to hold water when deposited and store it until withdrawn by plants. By adding organic matter, the surface area of soil is increased which increases the water holding capacity. Sandy soils low in organic matter have limited surface area for water to be attracted and held to. Much of the water we pour on sandy soils is lost, it simply moves down through the soil profile far beyond plant roots.

By adding organic matter, the amount of water held in the root zone of sandy soils is greatly increased.

A general rule of thumb is to till or spade in 4 inches of organic matter, such as compost, peat moss, pine bark mulch, cotton seed hulls, cotton burrs or grass clippings. For trees, incorporating organic matter is not recommended nor is it practical. The same is true for lawn areas.

PLANT SELECTION

Each step in the Xeriscape method is important, but proper plant selection is key.

Select trees, shrubs, ground covers, flowering annuals and perennials based on their adaptability to our area. Many native plants have excellent hardiness, beauty and drought tolerance, making them an excellent choice for area landscapes. The availability of native plants is increasing in retail nurseries and garden centers. Combining adapted native plants with well adapted introduced plants can result in gorgeous landscapes and water savings.

Selecting adapted plants will not only reduce landscape water consumption, but there will be fewer pest problems, work, marginal hardiness, in other words, plants and landscapes with fewer problems.

To find out which plants are well adapted for our area, visit area gardens, examine older landscapes that have withstood the forces of time, visit with knowledgeable nurserymen and gardeners and consulting with the Extension office. The Texas Agricultural Extension Service has a list of the top ten landscape plants in four basic groups: ground covers, vines, shrubs and trees. In the shrub division, you'll get the top ten plants in the dwarf, small, medium and large category and trees in the small, medium and large categories. This list is available through the Midland and Ector County Extension offices and is called the Recommended Landscape Plants for the Permian Basin. This list is made up of well adapted, time proven, native and exotic plants.

PRACTICAL TURF AREAS

Lawns require more water and maintenance than any other plant in our landscapes.

We find ourselves stuck in a water and mow cycle in an attempt to create a luscious green lawn. While the benefits and beauty of a cooling, green expanse, all neatly mowed and trimmed, can't be denied, we put way too much emphasis on "the lawn."

Frequent watering, fertilizing, use of pesticides, mowing and trimming are common practices that are costly, time consuming and water consuming. These practices may be OK for the lawn, and that's even questionable sometimes, but they can be harmful to other plants and may even endanger our environment. The quest for a green, flawless lawn often sacrifices the health of trees and shrubs in the landscape.

Landscapes often consist of too much lawn area. A good guideline for home landscaping is to divide the area into lawn or ground cover, landscaped beds and in hardscaping. Unfortunately, many of our landscapes have well over 70 or 80 percent lawn. Because of the water and maintenance lawns require, we need to reevaluate our landscapes.

By reducing the lawn area, you can reduce water usage, use less pesticides and eliminate some labor. Lessening the lawn area can be accomplished by adding landscaped bed areas or increasing the size of existing beds.

Beds can be filled with trees, shrubs, ground covers and flowering color. This is an attractive and practical way to cut down on water usage and maintenance. Initially, newly landscaped areas may require more work and maintenance, but once they are established this will reverse.

Increasing the amount of hardscaping is a tremendous way to cut water and work. Hardscaping includes decks, patios, drives, walkways and such. These areas can be very handsome and functional. They can create out door living space, areas to entertain and relax, spaces for container gardens and work areas.

Reduce lawn watering by choosing grass species that are well adapted to our climate.

Bermudas and buffalo grass are two of the best adapted grass species for our areas. Common Bermuda and some hybrid Bermudas are as well adapted as any turf species.

Shade is often a problem in maturing landscapes, so a shade tolerant turf grass must be selected. Zoysia has some shade tolerance plus drought efficiency. Other shade tolerant species that are much less water efficient include St. Augustine and tall fescue.

EFFICIENT IRRIGATION

Changing watering schedules can be extremely helpful in the effort to save water.

Instead of watering lawns on an automatic basis, try watering on an as needed basis. This can help avoid the negligent waste of water. Wait to water until grass shows visible signs of needing water. Subtle signs of water stress include slight color and texture changes, foot prints that remain in the grass rather than springing back up and leaf blades that roll. Water deeper to encourage a deep rooted grass that's better able to forage the soil for water. Try to apply an inch of water when you do water. Deeper rooted plants, like trees, shrubs and perennials, should be watered in a similar manner, but still deeper.

Since sprinkler systems are designed to water grass, a large shade tree will benefit from periodic deep watering.

Take a slow running hose or sprinkler, place it in the drip line and move it around until an inch or two of water has been applied all around the tree.

Fine tuning your irrigation system can help reduce wasted water. Zone your irrigation system so grass can be watered separate of the landscaped areas. Established trees, shrubs and ground covers don't require as frequent watering as does the lawn. In fact, shrub beds will be much healthier if they are watered separately, deeper and less often.

Change your irrigation frequency with the seasons and weather conditions. If rainfall occurs, postpone watering based on how much precipitation has occurred and weather conditions. Lawns and landscapes require less water in the spring and fall than they do in summer, so make this adjustment. Make an adjustment during the winter months and of course the hot summer months.

Water early morning when wind speeds and evaporation rates are at their lowest for additional water conservation.

For a very efficient method of watering try drip, micro or soaker irrigation. These systems apply water a low volumes, right where it is needed. They save water, reduce weed growth, plant disease, leaf damage and reduce labor. They are easy to design and install.

Poorly designed or calibrated irrigation systems can result in a gross misuse and waste of water.

To check your water distribution pattern and determine how much water you are putting out, place catch cups out in the lawn. Several catch cups will reveal problems with water distribution that could be due to damaged sprinkler heads, improperly adjusted heads or bad design. Since an inch of water is a guideline for how much water should go out, the catch cups can tell you if the lawn is being over or under watered.

Mowing higher, more frequently will reduce lawn water use. Never remove more than ⅓ of the total leaf blade. Mowing higher also will allow a deeper rooted grass to develop which will be more water efficient. The taller leaf blades will shade the soil acting like a living mulch.

Using slow release fertilizers will also reduce water use and reduce the chances of burning the lawn. Slow release or organic fertilizers will help protect ground water from leaching nitrates.

USE OF MULCHES

Mulch is a layer of nonliving material that covers the soil surface around plants. A generous layer of mulch will greatly reduce water evaporation from the soil. Mulches also reduce weeds, moderates soil temperatures, reduce soil erosion and compaction, reduce salts and increase the beneficial microbe populations. A 3- to 5-inch layer of mulch is what everybody needs on gardens, beds and even in plant containers.

Organic mulches are hard to beat because they are natural looking, they break down over time adding humus and nutrients to the soil and they are not as harsh and heat and light reflective as some inorganic mulches. These include wood chips, shredded bark mulch, grass clippings, cotton burrs, cottonseed hulls, cypress mulch and so on. Inorganic mulches include lava rock, gravel and permeable weed barrier fabrics.

APPROPRIATE MAINTENANCE

There are certain practices that can lower water use. For instances, lawns that are mowed higher and more frequently will use less water. Mowing higher will allow grass to develop a deeper root system, that's more water efficient. The taller leaf blades will shade the soil acting like a living mulch. Using slow release or organic fertilizers also can reduce water use. As a bonus, they reduce the chance of burn and reduce leaching of nitrates into ground water or other water sources.

So, whether you are motivated by the cost of water, a sensitive environment or the desire for a better landscape, Xeriscape can give you all of these. It just makes good sense to take care of our water and not waste it. For more detailed information on Xeriscape, come by the Extension office for a copy of LANDSCAPE WATER CONSERVATION...XERISCAPE, publication number B-1584.

FALL: For hearty trees, shrubs in spring, autumn is best time for planting start planting tomatoes. Some of the more popular varieties are the Carnival and Celebrity, which are tennis-ball size, and the Sweet 100s, which are grape size.

Fall — which officially begins Sept. 23— also is the perfect time for planting trees and shrubs. These plants thrive better in the fall because the weather is cooler and there is more moisture in the air.

By planting trees and shrubs in the autumn, do not get the top growth that they would normally acquire in the spring and summer. But fall planted trees and shrubs can take advantage of the warm soil temperatures in this part of the country which allows the root system to continue growing throughout the fall and into winter.

When the tree begins to grow in the spring, it will have a well established root system, giving it a good foundation to withstand the soaring temperatures of July and August. A well established root system also uses less water than a spring planted tree would require.

Spring plantings require more care due to the stress the summer heat causes them. It is common for people to come home from summer vacations only to find their newly planted tree or shrub has died or is very stressed because it didn't get enough water. Planting in the fall helps avoid this from occurring.

Trees add beauty, as well as value and protection from the elements to your home. However, trees should be carefully selected.

If you want more shade in your yard, hardy shade trees include Shumard red oak, live oak, pecan and Drake elm, which is resistant to the elm-leaf beetle.

The golden rain tree will add color with its very dark green foliage and yellow blossoms in mid-June. The Chinese pistachio produces beautiful fall colors.

While mulberry trees make for a generous shade, they are over-used and have destructive root systems that can break sidewalks and harm foundations of houses. If you decide to use a mulberry, it should be carefully planted away from these areas.

Many home landscapes use the white-blooming ornamental Bradford pear tree and the mulberry because it is a fast-growing shade tree, and shade is a premium out here in West Texas.

One of the best trees for this area is the desert pine, also known as Eldarica, Mondale or Afghan pine tree. It is a drought tolerant, beautiful tree and makes an excellent windbreak. It also is fast-growing.

Soft-wood trees, such as fruit trees, mulberries and mimosas, are more susceptible to borers than are hardwoods.

Generally, borers are in their adult stage in late June or early July. This is when they lay eggs. When the eggs hatch, the larvae tunnel into the wood.

Before borers attack trees, the trees can be treated with chemical borer killers, such as Lindane and Dursban, which are applied to the trunks. Special attention should be paid to the crotch of the tree. Once borers get into the tree, it is more difficult to remedy the problem.

Softwood trees should be treated to prevent borers from attacking them.

Borers cause stress and drain strength from the tree, and if left untreated, will eventually kill the tree.

It is better to transplant trees and shrubs during the winter while the plant is dormant. Because there is some root loss in transplanting, it does cause stress on the tree. The dormant stage will allow the plant time to reestablish itself in its new place.

While a tree is dormant and doesn't have leaves on it, it doesn't need as much water. However, it is still necessary to water your landscape in the winter. It is especially important to water just before a cold snap to protect the tree's root system.

To enhance your landscape, foundation shrubs include the holly varieties, wintergreen box wood, elaeagnus and Indian hawthorn. Honeysuckle vines or shrubs can be used as ground cover for sunny areas. Vinca major, vinca minor and Asian jasmine are good for shady areas.

The woody wisteria vine does well in this area, however, you need to be sure it has adequate iron.

Trumpet vines are bountiful and aggressive if given time to become established. Their beautiful orange flowers bloom all summer.

Winterizing your landscape before Oct. 1 will reduce the threat of injury to tender growth before the first hard freeze.

For fall feeding, use a fast-release nitrogen and a fertilizer that is high in potash for cold hardiness - such as a 12-4-10.

Fall is the best time to plant wildflower seed. The changing temperatures help to break the seed coat so the flowers can bloom. It is sometimes helpful to "scratch" your soil to help the seedlings break through, but this does increase the risk that birds will eat your seeds. A layer of mulch will help keep the birds away.

Fall is a wonderful time to add to your compost pile — or to start one. Compost needs nitrogen to break down. Therefore, you will need to add nitrogen in the form of 21-0-0 (nitrogen-phosphorus-potash) to your compost bin or into leaf piles to help it break down.

If you opt for organic gardening, in place of a chemical nitrogen, a compost pile can be treated with natural forms of nitrogen such as urine and bloodmeal, which is a nitrogen-rich fertilizer.

If untreated compost is tilled into a garden, the compost will pull nitrogen from the soil in order to break down, therefore causing a nitrogen-deficiency for the plants in the garden.

DEAR ABBY

Woman's cosmetic surgery gives happy lift to life

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband of 18 years left me for a silicone princess. My son, who was in college, told me to fight fire with fire. So I had upper torso enhancement surgery, which increased my 32Bs to 34DDs. You would not believe how it changed my life.

Van Buren

I was interviewed for a job afterward and was hired on the spot! My first day on the job, I was asked to dinner by three single men. Zowie! A year later, I married a man 20 years my junior. That was more than 10 years ago.

"Frank" is kind, gentle and sensitive. He doesn't drink, smoke, swear, nag or cheat. He adores me. I am in heaven.

He admitted that what first attracted him to me was my cleavage. I don't want to disillusion him, and since I haven't had any problems, why should I tell him?

The recent publicity about breast implants has made me wonder if I should tell him. What do you think, Abby? —I'VE GOT A SECRET

DEAR SECRET: If he asks, tell him the truth.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 17-year-old girl and would like to remind parents of the need to watch their children around water. I am not the mother of a child, but I was a "mother" to a 5-week-old kitten.

You are probably wondering why a teen who is not a parent is writing this letter. Well, my tiny kitten drowned in our toilet. It broke my heart because I was the one who found her. All I can do is imagine what a mother would do if she found her infant or toddler in a pool, toilet, bucket of water — any of the things a child can drown in.

On the same day my kitten drowned, an infant drowned in a fish pond. Where were the infant's parents? No one knows. They said he slipped out of the house. If parents would take an extra minute to see where their kids are, then a drowning would never happen.

Pools are the main cause for infant drowning cases. These pools usually have gates without automatic locks or high fences. There is a law here in Arizona requiring a 6-foot fence around pools where there are children who cannot swim living in the home. These laws are being broken every day; consequently, children drown.

Abby, please print this to remind your readers of how dangerous pools can be for children and pets. — PHOENIX TEEN-AGER

DEAR TEEN-AGER: My sympathy on the loss of your kitten. And thank you for your timely warning that parents should be especially careful to keep an eye on their children around water. A child can drown in as little as three inches of water. As a further precaution, always keep the bathroom door closed.

DEAR ABBY: Regarding the woman who has the "copycat" friend: Beware!

I, too, had a "friend" like that. After several years, not only did her whole house look like mine, she also had my husband sleeping in her bed.

Sign me ... WARY OF MIMICS

DEAR ABBY: Here's a day-brightener for you:

About the first of August every year, an Arizona church puts this message on its bulletin board: "You think it's hot HERE!" – E.B. IN SCOTTSDALE

For an excellent guide to becoming a better conversationalist and a more attractive person, order "How to Be Popular." Send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby Popularity Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447. TODD: Canna blooms reign

(From 1D)

Hanks' home place in a lovely section of Old Midland town. The canna are as youthful as they are ancient and loved.

Dwarf or towering, the broadleaf canna peaks out with resplendence, blooms in shades of red, yellow and white: crimson, salmon, pink, sunshine, pearly white and more. The versatile flower is "at home" in downtown gardens, yards fancy or simple, cemeteries, country places, patios, old home places, uptown home, wherever the land is friendly.

The canna reigns.

Rate & Credit Policies

Rate charges are determined at the time of placement. All ads accepted are subject to credit approval. Some classified categories require payment in advance. Credit applications are also required for business accounts. Yearly contract agreements are available. The Midland Reporter-Telegram reserves the right to correctly classify and edit all copy or to reject or cancel any advertisement at any time.

Cancellations

The price of your ad will be based on the number of days published according to our rate structure. Call (915) 682-6222 - ask for your cancellation number. This is your record of cancellation and it is important that you have it in the event of any misunderstanding or adjustment. "Super Seller" and "Real Wheel Deal" ads may be cancelled, but are non-adjustable and non-refundable.

Errors and Adjustments

Please check your ad the first day that it appears to be sure that all of the information is correct. This will ensure that your ad is exactly what you want readers to see. Call us the first day if you find an error at 915-682-6222. To report an error in Saturday's edition call Saturday morning between 8a.m. and 10a.m. Errors in Sunday's edition should be reported on Monday morning after 8:00 a.m. We must limit our financial responsiblity, if any, to the charge for the word or space, and cannot be held responsible for incorrect ads after the first day of publication.

Omissions of Ads

The Midland Reporter-Telegram assumes no financial responsiblity in an ad beyond the cost of the ad itself, and no responsiblity for the omission of an ad.
