Clinton takes aim at teen smoking, imposes limits on tobacco industry

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton imposed historic limits Friday on peddling cigarettes to children, gambling that battle with the tobacco industry will win middle-class votes. "This epidemic is no accident," he said.

The Food and Drug Administration regulations, which declare nicotine an addictive drug, advance a White House political strategy to highlight the president's tough-love campaign against teen smoking and the reluctance of Republican rival Bob Dole to deal with the issue.

Surrounded by teens wearing fire-engine red T-shirts that said, "Tobacco-free kids," Clinton told a Rose Garden audience, "Joe Camel and the Marlboro Man will be out of our children's reach forever."

Dole, stung by his recent questioning of whether nicotine is addictive, didn't address the issue while campaigning Friday. His wife, Elizabeth, called the rules "an election-year gimmick" to distract voters from skyrocketing illegal drug use among teens.

The regulations, which could be tied up in courts for years, would:

■ Require all tobacco advertising in magazines read by a significant number of teens to be black-and-white, text-only. That means no more Joe Camel in Rolling Stone or Sports Illustrated.

Say 'hello Dolly' to showers

Tropical storm sends more than half inch of rain to Midland

■ If slow rain continues today, it may help cotton farmers and small grain crops, according to a federal agricultural agent.

From Staff Reports

Midland is nowhere green enough to be considered tropic, but it did enjoy a "tropical-style" rain Friday, courtesy of tropical storm Dolly.

Friday's rain might have been a good excuse for some Midlanders to either skip work or wake up late Friday morning, as overcast skies and a steady rain lasted well into the afternoon.

Friday's rain brought about 0.30 to 0.50 inches of rain across the Midland area. The official amount at Midland International Airport was 0.55 inches, with possibly more rain expected, according to the National Weather Service.

The steady, gentle rain is the first farmers have had in the area all year, said Ray Schimcek, with the Natural Resource Conservation Service in Midland County.

"It'll help the milo and some of the sudan to come on and they (farmers) may be able to get an extra hay cutting from it," Schimcek said.

Friday's rain, far from breaking the drought, may not have as big of an effect as it would had it happened earlier, he said. There are only 40 days left in the growing season, he said.

The average amount of rain for the year is 8.77 inches; Midland is once again below normal with only 5.37 inches of rain reported, the NWS forecaster said.

The rain brought Midland ahead of its August average of 1.11 inches, to 2.07 inches of rain, the forecaster said.

Rain remains in the forecast through the weekend, with chances diminishing to slight by Monday, forecasters said.

If the same slow rain continues, it may help cotton farmers and small grain crops, Schimcek said.

The rain will continue as an upper-level disturbance coming from extreme northern Mexico mixed with moisture from tropical storm Dolly.

Educators ask legislators to expand what constitutes expellable offense

By Myra Lee Salcedo

Texas legislators, in the area Friday to tour public schools and host a hearing, got quite an earful from administrators who want to crack down on violence.

Representatives of the Texas House of Representatives Committee on Public Education hosted an afternoon meeting to hear public testimony at the Center for Energy and Economic Diversification.

Ricardo Torres, MISD executive director of secondary education, asked the committee to consider giving school districts "more latitude to expand what constitutes an expellable offense."

Felonies are expellable and would result in students being removed from the school system.

Torres said the Midland Independent School District board has taken a zero tolerance stance against violence, and students "raising a hand against a teacher" should not be tolerated. Torres said the dis-

Commissioner ends 30-city tour by kicking off Dole's campaign in basin

By Joe Gaines

Republicans gathered at Midland International Airport Friday evening to kick off Bob Dole's presidential campaign in Midland and Odessa.

Midland was the last of a 30-city, six-day tour of Texas by Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry, who is also the state co-chairman for the Dole campaign.

"Fourteen days ago people were concerned about what was going to happen during the presidential election," Perry said. "People were ready to go, but didn't know where the party was going to go."

Speakers at the Republican National Convention in San Diego and the addition of Jack Kemp as the vice presidential nominee cleared those doubts, Perry said.

"The Republican Party has shared its economic vision for the country with Bob Dole's promise of a 15 percent tax cut, a cut in the capital gains tax by almost half and doing away with the IRS as we know it," Perry said.

Perry could not say how Dole would cut taxes, balance the bud-

Chechnya cease-fire holds; Lebed gets praise but no Kremlin meeting

GROZNY, Russia (AP) — A day after Boris Yeltsin took a verbal swipe at his security chief, Alexander Lebed was back in Moscow on Friday with a cease-fire agreement in hand that brought rare quiet to the Chechen capital.

But Lebed didn't get the Kremlin meeting he clearly expected, leaving lingering questions about whether Yeltsin's criticism had undercut his authority and peace prospects for Chechnya.

A truce across the breakaway republic appeared to be holding as Lebed prepared for another peace mission over the weekend. Only the occasional shot rang out after the cease-fire began at midday.

A trickle of refugees returned to the embattled Chechen capital. Rebel and Russian commanders met to hash out details like opening roads and setting up joint patrols.

But the most widely awaited meeting — the one between Lebed and Yeltsin that Lebed said he expected after obtaining the truce deal Thursday night — failed to take place.

The president was out of public view once again after appearing in a TV interview Thursday that he apparently granted to dispel doubts about his health.

A spokesman for his press service, Nikolai Stepanchenko, declined Friday night to discuss Yeltsin's whereabouts or schedule. While there have been rumors the Kremlin anticipates a Yeltsin-Lebed meeting next week, the spokesman said only that Yeltsin was expecting a written report from Lebed.

Yeltsin's public silence after chiding Lebed the previous day left doubts about the president's support for the peace deal — and his backing for the ambitious Lebed himself.

On Thursday, Yeltsin said he wasn't happy with Lebed's handling of the Chechen crisis, which flared after the rebels overran Grozny on Aug. 6. Hundreds of Russian soldiers have died in the fighting, and the president complained there were "no visible results" of Lebed's work.

Lebed, who openly covets the president's job, was apparently giving Yeltsin the benefit of the doubt pending a face-to-face chat.

He said on his return to Moscow early Friday that he was not sure the critical remarks about him "really come from Boris Yeltsin himself," the official ITAR-Tass news agency reported.

But it remained to be seen whether Lebed's status and clout within the Kremlin would suffer if the cease-fire meets the same fate as that of every other failed agreement in the 20-month-old war.

The new pact calls for fighters to start pulling out of Grozny over the weekend, joint control of the city and a halt to hostilities across Chechnya.

Russian soldiers at several posts said they had received no orders to leave their positions, and separatists expressed doubt that Russia would stick to the agreement.

"We hope Lebed will succeed, but we suspect the other Russian leaders will use the truce to prepare for new fighting," said a rebel commander who gave only his first name, Abdullah.

Russian soldiers at a base confiscated and destroyed film taken by an Associated Press photographer of one meeting between Russian officers and a Chechen commander.

In addition to the meetings between field commanders, the top commanders for the two sides met Friday to discuss implementing the accord.

His deal calls for Russian troops to pull back to their bases at two airports on the outskirts of Grozny. Next week, they are to pull back from several southern regions and, eventually, from Chechnya altogether.

Monsoon, snowstorm kill 65 on pilgrimage

JAMMU, India (AP) — Tens of thousands of Hindu pilgrims were trapped in the Himalayas on Friday after monsoon rains and a freak snowstorm swept through their annual march to a mountain temple. At least 65 people have been killed.

Some 80,000 people were in the mountains when the storm sent rain cascading down slippery lower slopes and piled up 6 inches of snow at higher elevations.

Heavy snow was still falling Friday, grounding rescue helicopters that the government of Jammu-Kashmir state had hoped to send, the Press Trust of India news agency said. Troops guarding the route through the rebellion-racked state were being asked to help the stranded and sick.

Authorities called off the annual pilgrimage to pray at the temple of Lord Shiva in the Amarnath caves, asking more than 10,000 worshipers not to leave Jammu, the summer capital of the northern state.

But more than 115,000 people had already left. The pilgrimage that began Aug. 16 includes a 185-mile bus ride and a three-day, 30-mile trek to the temple 13,500 feet up in the mountains.

Much of the route was buried under snow, making it difficult for pilgrims to return to safer areas.

U.N. food relief shipment arrives in North Korea

ROME (AP) — The first U.S. civilian ship to dock in North Korea since 1951 was being unloaded Friday as part of an expanded emergency food aid program for flood-stricken North Korea.

The MV Tampa Bay, carrying 14,300 tons of rice, corn meal and corn-soy blend, arrived Tuesday at Nampo harbor, 30 miles southwest of the capital Pyongyang, the World Food Program said Friday.

The Rome-based U.N. aid agency said two North Korean ships carrying more foreign food aid arrived at the port Friday.

The reclusive communist nation decided to accept foreign assistance after floods in 1995 devastated vast stretches of farmland. About 500,000 North Koreans now depend on foreign aid.

Immigrant standoff ends in France

PARIS (AP) — Spraying tear gas and swinging truncheons, riot police splintered a church door Friday and hauled away 300 illegal African immigrants whose push to stay in France captivated — and divided — the nation.

From their cots in a military hospital, 10 of the immigrants, who were wasting away in the eighth week of a hunger strike, vowed to continue their fight to the death.

Astonishment at the raid gave way to rage in the heavily immigrant suburbs ringing Paris and in the French capital itself, where about 5,000 people marched down Boulevard Voltaire on Friday evening behind a banner reading, "Papers for All." Some wore blackface to demonstrate solidarity with the Africans.

"It's too brutal, what the government has done," said Jean Gastine, a 63-year-old retired man born in North Africa. "We're all immigrants."

Overhead, an elderly couple leaned over their balcony for a glimpse of the marchers, clucked their tongues and closed the shutters.

The conservative government, beset by 12.5 percent unemployment and polls showing simmering anti-immigrant sentiment across France, prepared to expel most of the Africans, possibly as early as Saturday.

"The time has come to apply the law," Interior Minister Jean-Louis Debre declared on national television Friday. Letting all 300 stay, the government reasoned, would encourage thousands of others.

But when the raid came, supporters who had kept a round-the-clock vigil at the church chanted, "We are all children of immigrants — first, second and third generations."

The standoff began June 28, when the Africans resisting deportation orders occupied St. Bernard Church in northern Paris after they were ousted from another church, a gymnasium and a railroad warehouse.

Their stubborn demand for papers — and the government's refusal to relent — came to symbolize France's dilemma over its 250,000 to 600,000 illegal immigrants, some of whom have lived in France for years. President Jacques Chirac came to power in May 1995 partly by promising to do something about it.

"Sorry, but they have to go. It's too bad. I feel bad, but in France we have enough trouble of our own," said bus driver Guy Parmentier, summing up the feelings of many French pinched by recession.

On Friday, police used axes to break down the door of the church in the shadow of Sacre Coeur Cathedral in the Montmartre artists' district.

Church bells rang out a warning that drew activists and residents of the neighborhood known as the "Goutte d'Or," or Golden Droplet. Inside, the parish priest began saying Mass, hoping to keep the police at bay. Immigrants and supporters screamed as oak pews piled against the door gave way to the crush of helmeted officers.

Under the glare of TV lights, several people fell to the ground, bleeding, as French sympathizers grappled with police. More than 1,000 officers dispersed the crowd with tear gas and clubs. About 60 protesters were arrested.

"They were evacuated like dogs, like animals," said actress Emmanuelle Beart, who was among those arrested.

Medics used stretchers to carry the hunger strikers, semiconscious on the 50th day of their fast, to waiting ambulances. Feeble as they were, a spokesman said, they would continue refusing food. Two brushed away doctors trying to examine them.

The rest of the immigrants were bused to a detention center on the outskirts of Paris. While most of the 300 will be expelled, 70 to 90 will be granted temporary residency papers, Debre said.

WEATHER WATCH

WET: Chance for more rain today

Staff Report

expected to be in Terrell County, where NWS radars shows 3 to 4 inches may have fallen.

Today's forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies, 40 percent chance of rain and a high between 80 and 85 with east winds at 5-15 mph, according to the NWS.

Tonight's forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies, 30 percent chance of rain and a low near 65.

Sunday's forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies, 30 percent chance of rain and a high near 85.

The high for Friday was 76, compared to the record high for that date of 106, set in 1977.

Friday's low was 66, compared to the record low of 61, set in 1961.

STATE

Welcome rainfall spread northward through Texas on Friday as some spiral bands from Hurricane Dolly died out over the state.

Moisture from the hurricane, which made landfall Friday morning near Tampico, even spread to North Texas.

Heavier showers and thunderstorms were mainly along the coast.

Rainfall amounts for the 24-hour period ending Friday night included 2.06 inches at Austin and 1.84 inches at Corpus Christi. Del Rio had 1.26 with 1.17 inches at Naval Air Station Kingsville; Brownsville, 0.65; Houston, 0.50; Victoria, 0.27; Galveston, 0.48; Cotulla, 0.65; and Alice, 0.12.

Clouds kept afternoon temperatures unseasonably cool with highs generally in the middle 80s to 90s. Readings ranged from 60 degrees at Dalhart and 68 at Lubbock to 90 at Cotulla and 96 at Lajitas.

But very high humidities made temperatures feel much warmer.

A chance of showers and thunderstorms was forecast through the weekend, more numerous in western sections of the state.

A coastal flood warning was in effect from Port O'Connor to Brownsville.

NATION

Storms stretched from New England to the Plains, while cooler weather spread across the Pacific Northwest into northern California and Nevada.

Rain-cooled air across the Florida peninsula created some record-low morning temperatures. Hollywood, Fla., dropped to 68 degrees, surpassing its old record of 70 set in 1983. It got down to 72 in Miami, tying the record set in 1990.

A frontal system across the central and northern portions of the country set off showers and storms in the Northeast west to the Plains.

It was calm in the West, as lower temperatures helped ease the threat of wildfires. Storms developed in the mountains of northwestern New Mexico and eastern and central Arizona.

MEETING: Some question educating lawbreakers

trict would like to cease providing educational services to violent students.

The MISD administrator said state law is throwing students from the juvenile justice system back into the classroom. "We are expected to rehabilitate and the state is not providing us with the resources to do it," he said.

Education Committee Chairman Paul Sadler disagreed with Torres, and essentially said that public schools are responsible for trying to educate every child, violent or not.

"Expelling students means we are losing those children in the educational system," Sadler said, noting that the philosophy of state laws governing expulsion is to do it only for extreme offenses, which does not include simple assault on a teacher.

Sadler said that keeping students in the school system through Alternative Education Programs (where they are taught in buildings separate from the regular campus), does come at a cost to school districts.

"It can cost a school district $3,000 a year to educate a child and $30,000 a year to imprison that child," Sadler said.

Torres questioned schools having to take on the burden of trying to educate serious lawbreakers, and having to provide teachers and buildings for juvenile facilities in order to have a place to put those children.

"The public schools are becoming the social agency that has to castigate, chastise and rehabilitate," Torres said.

State Rep. Scott Hochberg of Houston said that the committee has heard testimony from around the state where people complain of judges sending students who engage in criminal behavior back to class as part of their probation.

"We hear that the schools are not in the business of punishing and rehabilitating," Hochberg said. "Then we hear from the justice board that it is not in the business of educating these kids. There is no question that there are pieces of this that don't work and we are short of resources. But, I don't think it's unfair to require school districts to educate all students unless they are beyond educating."

Hochberg said it did pose a problem that the schools "can't put a student in the penal system, but the penal system can put a kid back in school."

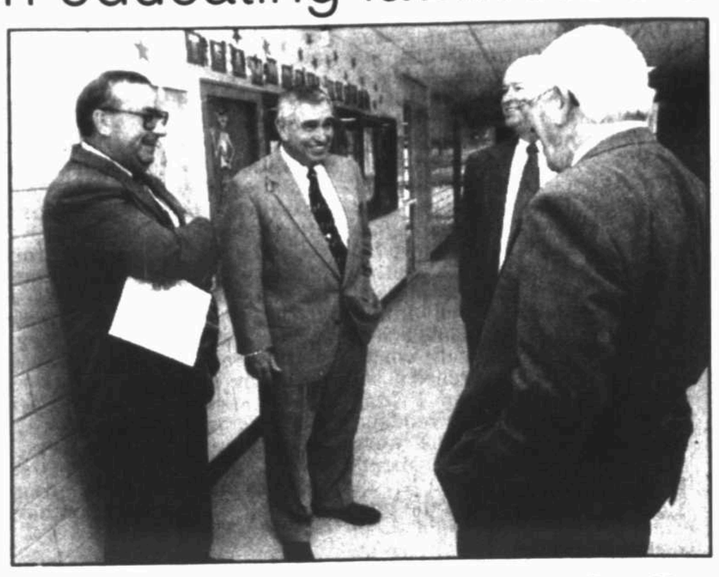

In another issue, Sadler said he was "puzzled at the uproar" of teachers offended by a state program that gives cash bonuses to school principals for performance.

"Teachers are uncomfortable with this money going to principals when it should be going to the schools," said Elizabeth Smith, representative of Odessa's chapter of Texas State Teachers Association.

"Principals are important and we ought to reward the good ones," Sadler said. "We are seeing principals reluctant to accept these awards because they fear teacher reaction when they are being rewarded for being outstanding leaders ... If this doesn't work, at least we will have erred on the side of being innovative."

The Public Education Committee toured Alamo Junior High School and some schools in Ector County ISD Friday morning.

Sadler said testimony will be used to make specific changes to Senate Bill 1, but — for the most part — legislators feel like much of the bill works. The committee is on a statewide tour to receive testimony on SB1.

(From 1A)

■ Require black-and-white, text-only tobacco billboards, and even those could not be posted within 1,000 feet of schools or playgrounds.

■ Ban cigarette brand-name sponsorship of sporting events, teams and race cars, although corporate sponsorship could continue; bar brand-names on products like hats and T-shirts; and prohibit single-cigarette sales, "kiddie packs" and other gimmicks.

■ Require photo identification with proof of age for every cigarette sale.

The rules closely resemble Clinton's 1995 proposal. He originally sought a ban on all cigarette vending machines and self-service displays, but the FDA modified the rule to allow them in adults-only locations, like casinos or bars.

The FDA also dropped a proposal to forbid tobacco sales by mail, and softened a demand for an industry fund that would finance anti-smoking programs aimed at children.

The regulations do not apply to pipe tobacco or cigars — and Clinton said adult smoking is not targeted. Tobacco industry lawsuits are already pending, and Congress could move to reverse the regulations.

Clinton's announcement did not appear to affect tobacco stocks, which were mixed in late afternoon trading.

The action pits Clinton against the powerful tobacco industry, advertisers, farmers and Southern lawmakers — most notably Democrats who fear the issue will cost them their seats.

R.J. Reynolds tobacco company said Washington already spends millions of dollars to oversee or control the tobacco industry. "It is questionable whether adding the federal Food and Drug Administration will make the federal government more effective or more efficient," a company statement said.

Daniel Jaffee of the Association of National Advertisers, which filed suit after Clinton announced his plans last year, said the regulations will not survive a constitutional challenge — and would not be effective anyhow.

"Parents have to take responsibility to do what they can to see that their kids don't smoke," Jaffee said.

Democratic North Carolina Gov. Jim Hunt said he may file a lawsuit on behalf of the state to block FDA regulation of tobacco, which he called "inappropriate or illegal."

In Fuquay-Varina, N.C., residents expressed concern about Clinton's announcement.

"He's talking about helping the middle-class, and just about all the tobacco farmers and people who work in tobacco are in the middle-class," said Richard Currin, the owner of Fuquay Tobacco Contractors.

And Democratic lawmakers from tobacco states said the regulations are political poison. Rep. Scotty Baesler of Kentucky recently said of Clinton's rules: "He wants to ram (them) down Kentucky's throat."

Clinton aides feared some Democrats would skip next week's Democratic National Convention in Chicago out of protest.

"It's probably a net plus for Clinton, but it will cost him some (Southern) electoral votes if the race is close," predicted Larry Sabato, a University of Virginia political science professor.

Armed with polls showing widespread popular support for the crackdown, Clinton is gambling that he will win more votes on the East and West coasts — where pollsters say the stand is popular — than he will lose in tobacco states.

Calling teen-age smoking a national health disgrace, Clinton said, "The epidemic is no accident."

"Children are bombarded daily by massive marketing campaigns that play on their vulnerabilities, their insecurities, their longing to be something in the world," he said.

Clinton, who occasionally chews on cigars, began the anti-smoking campaign last year to bolster his "family values" portfolio. But his senior advisers were still surprised by how popular the campaign has become — particularly among women.

The president cast his decision as a response to one of the nation's largest public health hazards: Smoking by teens.

"Today we are taking direct action to protect our children from tobacco — and especially the advertising that hooks children on a product," Clinton said.

Vice President Al Gore, whose sister, Nancy Hunger, died of lung cancer, said, "To those who market these products in ways that encourage our children to light up, today we say lights out."

In a voice choked with emotion, Linda Crawford, wife of a former tobacco lobbyist who died of lung cancer, remembered her husband breaking down in tears after Clinton announced his proposal last year.

"He cried because he knew this was going to be a long battle and he would not be alive to see it to the end," Crawford said.

Dole drew criticism earlier this year when he said of smoking: "We know it's not good for kids. But a lot of other things aren't good. Drinking is not good. Some would say milk's not good."

Report shows no signs of accelerants but fire investigators still suspect arson

By Joe Gaines
Staff Writer

Results from a preliminary report of an early-morning fire at Summer Place apartments on Aug. 7 doesn't show any sign of accelerants, but Midland Fire Department investigators still suspect arson as the cause.

The cause of the fire, which destroyed one unit and damaged two others, was suspected to be arson because of how quickly the flames spread, but preliminary results have not erased suspicions.

"We put a lot of water on that fire and that may have diluted any accelerants, making them below readable," Kyle Young, fire investigator, said.

Evidence from the scene was sent to Austin to be analyzed. A full report is expected in two to three weeks, Young said.

Since the fire, any information has been given to investigators. Searching for those responsible has been made difficult because of a number of vagrants who had been seen in and around the complex, Jeff Meiner, arson investigator, said.

Most of the apartment doors were open and some units contained strewn clothing and abandoned furniture.

The complex was insured, but not by the owners of the property — Colonial Investment of Maryland — Meiner said.

"It was insured by someone who had a lien against the property," Meiner said.

Colonial Investment was fighting foreclosure of the property, but no future plans of the vacant complex had been given, Meiner said.

Neither the owners nor the lienholder have been named as suspects, Meiner said.

The money-troubled apartment complex had been empty for only a few days before the fire. After unpaid bills mounted into the thousands of dollars, owners of the 52-unit complex announced they were closing the complex and gave tenants to the end of July to move out.

The Salvation Army, Midland County Housing Authority and local churches helped many of the low-income families find other homes.

The Fire Department is asking for those with information about the fire to call the Arson Hotline at 684-6333. A reward of up to $1000 will be given for information that leads to an arrest.

DOLE: Perry campaigns for GOP candidate get and reduce the national debt.

"There are plenty of places in the budget to cut," Perry said. But Perry would not say where Dole may choose to cut.

The enthusiasm from the Republican convention gave Dole a bounce in the polls that moved him to within between 3 and 7 points (depending on the poll) behind President Clinton, Perry said.

Dole is campaigning on two issues, Perry said, "your money and character."

But the enthusiasm and energy from the convention isn't enough to win the vote in November, Perry said.

"We need a lot of hard work, too," Perry said.

Both enthusiasm and hard work will be used in handing out bumper stickers, putting up signs and calling voters, he said.

Permian Basin residents shouldn't expect to see Dole during the campaign, and he may not visit Texas at all, Perry said.

"Dole will carry Texas. He will need to spend time in states where it is a closer race," Perry said.

But the Permian Basin can expect to see a parade of other Republican state representatives campaigning, Perry said.

Bill Shaner and Johnnye Davis will chair the Dole for President campaign in Midland and Ector counties, respectively.

"The readiness of Bill Shaner and Johnnye Davis to serve as Bob Dole and Jack Kemp's campaign chairmen will give our campaign a big boost in Midland and Ector Counties," Perry said.

Clinton hopes to 'take tobacco out of the mouths of babes'

By Lauran Neergaard
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — No more Joe Camel in Rolling Stone magazine. No more Marlboro Man on roadside billboards. No more cigarette vending machines in grocery stores.

President Clinton hopes to cut teen-age smoking by ending the advertising images that portray tobacco use as fun, sexy and glamorous — and by making it harder for teens to illegally buy tobacco.

Clinton on Friday approved sweeping Food and Drug Administration regulations that declared nicotine an addictive drug and identified cigarettes and smokeless tobacco as the devices that deliver it.

The move gives the FDA authority to curb the sale and promotion of tobacco just like it regulates the sale and marketing of heart valves or insulin pumps.

The goal is to reduce by half the number of teen-agers nationwide who smoke or chew tobacco. Currently, there are 4.5 million teen smokers and 1 million who use smokeless tobacco.

The FDA will "take tobacco out of the mouths of babes," said Dr. Lonnie Bristow, the American Medical Association's past president.

But the tobacco industry denies that nicotine is addictive or that it entices teens to smoke.

"It's clear that FDA's intent ... is aimed ultimately at banning cigarettes," said a statement from Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp.

The FDA says teens' favorite cigarette brands are also the most heavily advertised, including Camels and Marlboros. That's why advertising restrictions are at the heart of the crackdown — but they're restrictions adults will feel too.

Drivers will see no more flashy cigarette ads on roadside billboards: all tobacco billboards must be only black-and-white, with no pictures.

No cigarette billboards at all are allowed within 1,000 feet of a school or playground. Ad executives predict there will be no outdoor tobacco ads in all of Manhattan, and fewer than 30 in metropolitan Boston.

There will be no more Joe Camel ads in magazines like Rolling Stone or Sports Illustrated. The same black-and-white rule applies for any magazine read by 2 million teens or whose readership is 15 percent youth.

It may be a while before Americans notice any difference: The tobacco and advertising industries previously challenged the regulations in court when they were in the planning stage.

Lawyers for R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. will meet with a federal judge in North Carolina on Monday to see how quickly the case can be heard.

Tobacco companies are afraid the FDA's move will hurt their defense in more than 200 lawsuits by smokers who say they were hooked and by 14 states that are trying recover billions of dollars in health-care dollars spent treating sick smokers.

And advertising executives are preparing to seek a court order Monday to block the FDA rules. They say they could lose hundreds of millions of dollars in cigarette advertising business.

The tobacco industry did get a temporary $150 million break in the rules announced by Clinton. The FDA dropped its proposal that the industry immediately set up a fund to educate teens about smoking's risks. Instead, the six tobacco firms whose brands teens use most will be ordered to help FDA create televised health warnings and other educational materials that may cost them millions.

Entomologist: Bees were partly Africanized

By Joe Gaines
Staff Writer

A swarm of bees at a home on Aug. 10 that led the resident to ask police to detour traffic away from nearby Fasken Park, were partly Africanized, according to a local entomologist.

"The bees were Africanized with evidence of ... European genes," said Doug Paxton, Midland County Agriculture Extension Service entomologist.

He said the bees were a hybrid mix of European and Africanized bees — also known as killer bees.

The bees were being removed from the home by a beekeeper when they began swarming and attacking the beekeeper, her daughter and the resident who was watching nearby.

All were wearing protective gear, but the beekeeper and her daughter were stung several times. They were not taken to the hospital, said resident Karen Thompson.

The nest was under an eave that faced an alley behind the home and had been there for a few months, Ms. Thompson said.

'The bees were Africanized with evidence of...European genes.'
— Doug Paxton
entomologist

The beekeeper was called to remove the bees after a neighbor was stung and other neighbors became nervous about the bees, she said.

After the swarming, Ms. Thompson sprayed the remainder of the nest with insecticide.

This may be the first report of a hybrid mix of bees for Midland, but probably not in Texas, with Africanized bees being more prevalent in South Texas, Paxton said.

After the swarming, a sample of the bees were sent to Texas A&M University for verification.

Africanized bees are 27 percent smaller than European bees by volume, making it difficult to tell the difference between the two with the human eye, Paxton said.

"What probably happened was an Africanized swarm moved in and dominated the European bees and took over the nest," Paxton said.

The swarm showed signs of hybridization because of its behavior, Paxton said. Normally, Africanized bees aggressively defend their nests. Ms. Thompson's nest was in a high-traffic alley and had people coming close to it often, with only one report of someone being stung.

But because the nest was a hybrid of bees, they may not have swarmed and attacked because of the docile nature of the European genes. They would have only attacked when their nest was directly provoked, as by the beekeeper, Paxton said.

"You've just got a bunch of bees that combined and made one heck of a hive," Paxton said.

Helms-Burton puts long-ignored property at center of U.S.-Cuba debate

HAVANA (AP) — The Cuban Telephone Company office towers over downtown, a monument to the past when American corporations reigned over this island nation's economy.

"Homeland or death!" reads a message painted on the towering beige complex topped with smokestacks.

These and thousands of other American-owned properties nationalized 36 years ago — including more than 100 being used by foreign firms in partnerships with Cuba — long were ignored in the political battle between Cuba and the United States.

After Cuba shot down two civilian U.S. planes off the island's coast in February, President Clinton signed into law the Helms-Burton Act.

The law would let Americans whose property was confiscated in Cuba sue foreign businesses who now use those properties. It also would deny those foreign firms' executives — and those executives' families — entry into the United States.

But many of the U.S. companies that claim property in Cuba say the law is political, designed more to mollify Cuban-Americans in an election year than to help American corporations get paid.

They object to a provision of the law that — as of next year — will let Cuban-born, naturalized U.S. citizens sue foreign companies that benefit from properties that were theirs when they were in Cuba.

The Castro government seized the businesses of thousands of Cubans who fled their homeland for the United States and other countries after the revolution forced dictator Fulgencio Batista out. The U.S. companies don't want the exiles' cases lumped in with their own.

Cuba doesn't want the cases put together either. While it doesn't want to pay off U.S. companies, it harbors even less sympathy for the Cuban exiles, who have lobbied in Washington for sanctions on the Castro regime.

Cuban Vice President Carlos Lage said the measure would benefit "those associated with the Batista regime, assassins, torturers (and) all kinds of mafia members."

Important U.S. trading partners, including Japan, Canada and several European countries, have threatened to retaliate if their companies are sued under Helms-Burton. Trying to ward off the backlash until after November's presidential election, Clinton delayed the lawsuits until Feb. 1.

U.S. corporations have had little success in their three-decade fight to get compensation in the largest taking of American property in history.

"The claimants fell into the chasm of the Cold War," said Robert Muse, an attorney for some of the largest companies. "There were a number of points of friction between the two countries over the years and the claims were never a priority."

Cuba nationalized all American-held properties in 1960, one year after Fidel Castro seized power and Batista, the dictator, fled the country.

Other foreign companies were nationalized later. Cuba has since signed compensation agreements with Switzerland, France, Great Britain, Italy and Mexico and is completing similar accords with Spain.

But despite 5,911 claims filed by U.S. companies, there is no agreement with the United States.

Cuba proposed in 1960 to compensate the corporations with part of its sugar exports to the United States. But Washington cut back on Cuban sugar imports, halting negotiations, said Olga Miranda, an adviser to the Cuban Foreign Ministry.

Dolly crashes into Mexican coast; kills one, forces hundreds to flee

TAMPICO, Mexico (AP) — Tropical Storm Dolly slammed into Mexico again with heavy rain and 80-mph winds Friday, killing at least one person and forcing hundreds on the Gulf Coast to flee their flooded homes.

The storm rapidly lost force as it moved inland, but still carried torrential rain that threatened to cause more damaging floods. It was Mexico's second run-in with Dolly, which rolled across sparsely populated areas of the Yucatan peninsula on Tuesday.

Streets in the port city of Tampico were littered with snapped trees, downed utility poles and flapping billboards after Dolly passed through Friday. Flooding made roads some impassable.

In one fishing neighborhood on the banks of the Tamesi River, people trudged through muddy streets carrying mattresses, bedding and plastic-wrapped televisions.

"Look what has happened to our houses. It's very ugly," said Francisca Jerez Garcia, who sought shelter with her children at a grade school.

A 40-year-old woman was killed when a tree fell on her roof in Pueblo Viejo on the outskirts of Tampico, the Red Cross said. Forty-two other people in the area were injured, two of them seriously.

About 1,500 people were evacuated from their shanties in Tampico and neighboring Ciudad Madero, but most had returned to their homes by mid-afternoon. More than 450,000 people live in the communities, about 240 miles south of Brownsville, Texas.

The storm made landfall just south of Tampico on Friday morning. Its winds were down to 55 mph — below hurricane strength of 74 mph — and weakening Friday afternoon as it moved inland toward the eastern Sierra Madre, the U.S. National Hurricane Center said.

At 1 p.m., it was about 75 miles west-southwest of Tampico, moving west-northwest at 13 mph and losing strength.

Up to a foot of rain was expected along coastal areas in the Mexican states of Veracruz and Tamaulipas, and forecasters warned of flash flooding and mudslides.

Tampico's port, an important outlet for Mexico's fishing and oil industries, was closed by heavy seas. The city's Gen. Francisco Javier Mina International Airport was also closed for most of the day, and production was interrupted at a major Petroleos Mexicanos oil refinery.

Dolly's second lunge at Mexico was more damaging than the first.

The storm briefly reached hurricane strength as it crossed the Yucatan Peninsula from east to west Tuesday. There were no confirmed deaths, and Dolly weakened in the overland journey, as hurricanes usually do.

Arafat frees Hamas activist; cabinet recommends releasing others

JERUSALEM (AP) — Yasser Arafat freed one Hamas activist from prison today, responding to pressure to release the hundreds of Islamic militants held for months without charge after suicide bombings in Israel earlier this year.

Hamas was involved in four bombings in February and March that killed 63 people, including the bombers. At Israel's urging, Palestinian police rounded up about 900 militants. About 300 remain in prison, but only about 50 have been charged.

"The release of prisoners has become an urgent need," Hanan Ashrawi, the Palestinian minister of higher education, said today. "We have to keep our internal front united."

Arafat's Cabinet has urged him to free the prisoners, prompting the release of Sheikh Hassan Youssef, a Hamas political leader from the West Bank town of Ramallah, who was held since Feb. 28 in the Ramallah jail.

"There was no trial or charges against me and I find no reason for my arrest," said Youssef, who said he was treated well during his imprisonment.

Youssef also said his release should not be seen as a sign of reconciliation between Arafat's government and Hamas.

Last week, the Palestinian Cabinet approved the recommendations of a ministerial committee which urged the Palestinian Authority to study the status of the detainees "as soon as possible" and release those detained without justification.

Attorney General Khaled Kidreh confirmed today that several hundred Hamas activists are still in prison, saying, "we are studying each case."

Arafat released 120 Hamas prisoners last month but stopped under criticism from Israel. His spokesman has insisted that there was no connection between Arafat's actions and Israeli politics.

Last week, the Palestinian Supreme Court ordered the immediate release of 10 university students who are among the detainees, but the students so far remain jailed.

Legislator Ziad Amer, arguing that the prisoners were arrested to appease Israel in the wake of the bombings, said they should be released because "the government of Israel is not respecting its political commitments."

Palestinians are angry that Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, who took office in June, has refused to meet with Arafat, hold substantive talks with the Palestinians or move ahead with Israel's five-month-overdue pullout from Hebron, the last Israeli occupied town in the West Bank.

Netanyahu reiterated that talks with the Palestinians would resume "soon," but gave no specifics.

Australian drug suspect jumps bail, flees Thailand

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — She was the first foreign drug suspect ever granted bail in Thailand, and she may well be the last.

Authorities searched Friday for Lisa Marie Smith, an Australian who failed to show up for a court hearing on charges she tried to smuggle speed and hashish through Bangkok International Airport.

The Thai court issued a warrant for her arrest as prosecutors worried that she would leave the country — if she hasn't already.

Smith, the daughter of Hong Kong-based financial executive Terry Smith, was released unconditionally June 14 after her father posted $60,000 bail. She was allowed to keep her British and Australian passports.

Smith's court-appointed Thai lawyer said he hadn't expected her to show up Friday, based on conversations with some of her relatives. He said he hadn't spoken to her and didn't know where she was.

The Australian Embassy hadn't heard from her either, according to embassy official Mark Webster. Australian officials were waiting to receive the arrest warrant before launching their own search.

Through her lawyer, Smith has claimed that a Pakistani man who befriended her during her travels duped her into bringing the drugs on the plane in a travel bag that she was to pass to a friend of his in Japan.

She said the man had paid for her air ticket to Tokyo, plus provided $900 for expenses.

If found guilty, Smith could face a 15-year jail sentence.

Cambodian government offers amnesty to Khmer Rouge dissidents

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — The government offered amnesty and aid Friday to dissidents from the Khmer Rouge, a move that could prompt more rebels to defect from the notorious rebel group.

Officials specifically mentioned Ieng Sary, a top rebel dissident long wanted for mass murder during the 1970s Khmer Rouge regime, as eligible for amnesty.

Second Prime Minister Hun Sen said the government would provide Khmer Rouge dissidents with food and munitions to stem attacks by rebels loyal to Khmer Rouge leader Pol Pot.

"The Cambodian government ... will assure your safety and security, including that of Ieng Sary," said Hun Sen. "In the spirit of guaranteeing safety and security, the Cambodian government will suggest to the king to reduce punishment and grant amnesty." Hun Sen himself is a former Khmer Rouge cadre who defected to Vietnam in 1977.

The split by Sary and several hundred rebel troops in northwestern Cambodia from Pol Pot's main faction became public on Aug. 8.

A high-ranking government military officer said he was told by Sok Pheap, a prominent commander of the dissidents, that peace talks with the government were going well.

Commanders of the breakaway faction met with rebel colleagues Friday to discuss the government's offer, the officer said on condition of anonymity.

The dissidents — longtime communists who now claim to support liberal democracy — had asked for guarantees for their safety. They also reportedly want to retain control over the gem-rich area of Pailin that has funded the Khmer Rouge war effort in recent years.

Clandestine Khmer Rouge radio, loyal to Pol Pot, said Friday that Sary was "paralyzed, unable to walk and bound to a wheelchair."

The radio has previously said Sary was dying from heart trouble, apparently seeking to stem defections. Sary has acknowledged in statements that he is ill. He has not been seen in public since the split.

Hun Sen read the statement offering the guarantees Friday at a school opening in the northwestern province of Pursat. The wording was agreed upon Thursday by himself and First Prime Minister Prince Norodom Ranariddh.

The agreement between the often-feuding prime ministers would be an important step toward dealing with the potential defection of Sary, seen with Pol Pot as one of the architects of the murderous 1975-79 Khmer Rouge regime.

As many as 2 million Cambodians died of starvation, overwork, disease and executions during a reign of terror aimed at building an agrarian, communist utopia.

Sary, Pol Pot's brother-in-law, served as deputy prime minister and foreign minister in the Khmer Rouge regime. He personally invited Cambodian intellectuals home to join the revolution. Most were immediately executed.

Also on Friday, Hun Sen offered a $2 million reward to anyone who can provide evidence of an alleged plot to assassinate him.

He said he received a letter from Cambodians in Long Beach, Calif., this week alleging that a group of Cambodians in Canada took out a $1 million contract on his life the day the news of the Khmer Rouge split emerged.

The alleged plot is at least the third Hun Sen has announced this year. Critics have accused him of paranoia.

Mother Teresa's condition worsens

CALCUTTA, India (AP) — Mother Teresa, beloved for spending most of her 85 years ministering to the poorest of the poor, suffered a reduced flow of blood to her heart Friday. Doctors kept her on a respirator for a second day.

"Her condition has deteriorated since Friday morning," said Dr. S.K. Sen, director of Woodlands Nursing Home. Doctors had hoped to remove her respirator the day after she had a heart attack, but decided against it.

Doctors were giving Mother Teresa an anti-coagulant to ease the flow of blood through her left ventricle, one of the four chambers of the heart, which failed on Friday. Her temperature was still 100 degrees, and she was receiving anti-malaria drugs.

The tiny, frail Catholic nun was admitted to the hospital Tuesday with a malarial fever. Doctors put her on the respirator Thursday when her heart stopped beating for nearly a minute. She was revived with electric shocks. Doctors said complications from her malaria brought on the heart attack.

The Nobel Peace Prize winner, who turns 86 on Tuesday, has maintained a grueling pace a. er missions and orphanages in India and abroad despite her failing health. She suffered a heart attack in 1983 during a meeting with Pope John Paul II in Rome. In 1989, she suffered a second, stronger, heart attack, and received a pacemaker.

Teresa's name has become synonymous with charity. She created a global network of homes for poor people, from the hovels of Calcutta to the ghettos of New York and the slums of Albania, her ancestral land. She was one of the first to establish a home for AIDS victims.

For more than 45 years she has comforted destitute old people dying in the gutter, sheltered infants abandoned in trash heaps, soothed the putrid ulcers of lepers, succored the insane.

She has also been a powerful voice for conservative dogma, defending her values of life and family and arguing passionately against abortion, contraception and divorce.

On Friday, she was alert enough to receive visitors, including the chief minister of the state of West Bengal, Jyoti Basu, but could not talk with him because of the respirator equipment on her face, doctors said.

At the Vatican, the pope issued a statement hoping for her recovery. "His holiness wished Mother well and hoped for her speedy recovery," said Sister Priscilla Lewis of Mother Teresa's Missionaries of Charity.

Investigator: Explosive traces don't conclusively confirm criminal act

SMITHTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — Microscopic explosive traces were found on a piece of wreckage from TWA Flight 800, but it isn't conclusive evidence that a bomb or missile brought down the jetliner, investigators said Friday.

FBI Assistant Director James Kallstrom, responding to media reports about the trace evidence, cautioned it was still too early to classify the July 17 blast that killed all 230 people aboard a criminal act.

"Based upon all of the scientific and forensic evidence analyzed to date, we cannot conclude that TWA Flight 800 crashed as a result of an explosive device," Kallstrom said. "The detection of the microscopic explosive traces alone does not allow the conclusion."

The FBI official reiterated that investigators were still considering three scenarios: A bomb, a missile attack, or a mechanical malfunction.

'Based upon all of the ... evidence ... we cannot conclude that TWA Flight 800 crashed as the result of an explosive device.'
— FBI Assistant Director James Kallstrom

While Kallstrom refused to provide any details about the explosive residue, he said the test results were confirmed by an independent laboratory, and rated the chances of a false positive at "slim to none."

A source close to the probe, who spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity, said investigators were still looking for something "more decisive and more specific. ... They need more parts of the puzzle."

The source told the AP, "The sample is just not sufficient enough to rule out possible contamination."

The trace amount also might have come from a passenger who worked with such chemicals, or from the deck of a salvage ship, or from the overalls of a field worker, other sources said.

Investigators would like to find pieces of metal pitted by the blast or other physical evidence to bolster the chemical finding, Kallstrom said.

Authorities believe the blast took place above the 747's center fuel tank. Investigators want to find more of the chemical from the epicenter of the blast.

Meanwhile, a federal source who has analyzed the costs of the cleanup and investigation estimated Friday that a total of $20 million had been spent so far.

Citing news report, union amends ValuJet safety complaint

WASHINGTON (AP) — A union representing airline flight attendants amended its safety complaint against ValuJet Airlines Friday, citing reports the beleaguered carrier misled authorities about whether it has conducted critical re-inspections of its fleet.

The Association of Flight Attendants, which represents 40,000 attendants at 26 airlines, is seeking the ouster of Lewis Jordan, ValuJet's chief operating officer, and CEO Robert Priddy because of concerns about the airline's safety.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer reported Friday that ValuJet misled the Federal Aviation Administration last month about whether essential re-inspections had been performed on 25 airplanes and an engine.

A 21-page internal FAA report the newspaper obtained said ValuJet told the agency on July 17 that the inspections were completed. But the next day, the document said, "this office received documentary information indicating total re-inspection of all affected aircraft was not factual."

By July 31, the FAA received confirmation of total compliance with its directives and considered the issue closed.

The FAA refused to comment on the report Friday, but the flight attendants' union amended its complaint with the Transportation Department to include the newspaper's account.

ValuJet was grounded on June 17, about a month after a May 11 crash of one of its planes in the Florida Everglades killed all 110 people aboard. The FAA has been inspecting the airline's maintenance procedures while the U.S. Department of Transportation reviews ValuJet's finances and management.

The airline hopes to resume operations by October with seven planes. It operated 53 at the time of the grounding.

The Plain Dealer, citing government sources that it did not identify, said one of ValuJet's DC-9s was found to be so corroded that McDonnell Douglas, which manufactured the plane, will not allow it to fly again.

McDonnell Douglas confirmed to The Plain Dealer that it was evaluating ValuJet planes but FAA declined to answer the newspaper's written questions about the internal report.

Simpson judge bans television, photographers

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Television cameras, still photographers and even sketch artists will be banned from the courtroom for the wrongful death trial of O.J. Simpson, a judge ruled Friday.

Superior Court Judge Hiroshi Fujisaki also said he would seal all records of bench conference proceedings and any hearings held outside of the jury's presence during the duration of the trial.

Fujisaki, who heard extensive arguments from media lawyers before making his decision, said electronic coverage of Simpson's criminal trial "significantly diverted and distracted the parties."

The judge noted that some witnesses "played to the camera," and "there were displays in the courtroom that contributed to a circus atmosphere. This detracted from the dignity of the courtroom."

He added: "The intensity of media activity in the civil trial so far supports the court's belief that history will repeat itself."

Fujisaki also barred still photographers and even sketch artists from the courtroom, saying jurors would be concerned about how they would be depicted by the artists.

The judge also refused to modify or lift a gag order which prevents attorneys and other participants from discussing anything having to do with the case in public or with the news media.

He even rejected a bid by Fred Goldman, father of slaying victim Ronald Goldman, for an exception to allow him to speak publicly. The judge said jurors would most likely hear Goldman's comments and would be influenced by them.

Chicago convention history filled with conflict, colorful characters

CHICAGO (AP) — It may have taken the Democratic Party 28 years to work up the nerve to return to Chicago after the 1968 debacle of rioters clashing with police and tear gas poisoning the air. But in the context of Chicago's 136-year history of national political conventions, 1968 wasn't all that bizarre.

Chicago has played host to 24 major-party conventions — 14 Republican and 10 Democratic — featuring everything from convicted traitors to delegate walkouts and a conventional hall roof collapse.

At the first Chicago convention in 1860 the Republicans planned to nominate William H. Seward of New York, but wound up with a local favorite named Abraham Lincoln.

Seward was the favorite and led Lincoln on the first ballot, but the Illinoisan pulled ahead on the third ballot to win. His nomination was announced with cannon fire, foreshadowing what awaited the nation the following year.

The Civil War was still raging when the northern remnant of the Democratic Party gathered here in August 1864 to mount a challenge to Lincoln and his war policies. City officials regarded them as subversive and refused them the use of a hall, so they built their own tentlike structure on a condemned downtown lot.

One of the main speakers in 1864 was Clement Vallandigham, an Ohio Confederate sympathizer who'd been exiled for treason the previous year. The eventual nominee was Gen. George B. McClellan, who'd been sacked as commander of the Union army for his ineffectual leadership.

In 1868, the general who accomplished what McClellan couldn't, Ulysses S. Grant, won the Republican nomination on the first ballot at Uranus B. Crosby's Opera House.

But in 1880, Grant's bid for a third term led to a deadlock between the former president and challenger James G. Blaine. Another Civil War general, James A. Garfield, finally won as a compromise candidate on the 36th ballot at the Crystal Palace.

Blaine was back at the Crystal Palace in June 1884, and got the GOP nomination. The Democrats met in the same building a month later to nominate Grover Cleveland, who won in November.

In 1888, the Republicans held their convention in architect Louis Sullivan's unfinished Auditorium Theater, and nominated another former general, Benjamin Harrison. He scored an Electoral College victory over Cleveland.

The Democrats returned to Chicago in 1892, but balked at paying a $6,000 rental for the Auditorium, so they slapped up a temporary hall. A thunderstorm struck during an anti-Cleveland harangue by a Tammany Hall orator, tearing the canvas roof open and drenching the crowd. Once the roof was repaired, Cleveland won on the first ballot. He beat Harrison in the fall, and the Democrats gained control of Congress for the first time in 32 years.

All that changed in 1896, when rebel Democrats angered by Cleveland's fiscal conservatism denounced the still-sitting president in their platform. One of those speaking against Cleveland at the new Coliseum on the South Side was young Nebraska Congressman William Jennings Bryan. He zinged the crowd with his well-rehearsed "Cross of Gold" speech, won the nomination and led the party to defeat.

The Coliseum burned down in 1897, but Bryan was still around to lose the elections of 1900 and 1908.

There was a new Coliseum by 1904, when Theodore Roosevelt won the Republican nomination there. Four years later, Roosevelt's handpicked successor, William Howard Taft, got the nod in the same hall, but by 1912, Roosevelt and Taft had fallen out, so their supporters squared off — once again at the Coliseum. Taft won and Roosevelt bolted the party. He reassembled his delegates at the Coliseum two months later to form the "Bull Moose" Party — and ensure the victory of Democrat Woodrow Wilson.

The Rough Rider rejoined the Republicans at the Coliseum in 1916, but his support of nominee Charles Evans Hughes wasn't quite enough to oust Wilson.

Political lore has it that the winning candidate, Warren G. Harding, wasn't chosen on the Coliseum floor, but in Suite 408-10 of the nearby Blackstone Hotel.

The Republicans used the new Chicago Stadium for their gloomy 1932 convention, where they renominated Herbert Hoover. The Democrats gathered at the Stadium later the same month to nominate Franklin D. Roosevelt, who was the first nominee ever to appear at a convention in person. In his acceptance speech he announced something called the "New Deal."

Roosevelt broke an even longer-standing taboo in 1940 when he allowed the convention at the Stadium to nominate him for a third term. He was back at the Stadium in 1944 for a fourth term nomination. His unsuccessful GOP challenger that year was New York's Thomas E. Dewey — also nominated at the Stadium.

In 1952, Dwight D. Eisenhower won the Republican nomination in Chicago and Illinois Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson got the Democratic nod here. The same two won their parties' nomination again at the Amphitheatre in 1956, with the same November result — an Eisenhower victory.

Eisenhower's vice president, Richard M. Nixon, got the GOP nod at the Amphitheatre in 1960, but lost in the fall. But Nixon could thank Chicago in 1968. He got his nomination in Miami Beach, but the street violence here helped him beat Humphrey.

Marine plane crash kills 4

YUMA, Ariz. (AP) — A Marine electronic-warfare plane crashed in the desert Friday, killing all four people aboard in the third military aircraft accident in two days.

The EA-6B Prowler, designed to jam enemy communications, went down at midmorning during a training mission on a gunnery range near the Gila Mountains, about 60 miles east of the Marine Corps Air Station at Yuma.

The cause of the crash was under investigation.

The victims' names were not immediately released. The crew was from the Marine base at Cherry Point, N.C., and was training at Yuma.

On Thursday, a National Guard A-10 warplane crashed in a marsh on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, and a Marine FA-18 fighter went down in the Atlantic off Ocean City, Md. Both accidents occcured in clear weather.

The body of the A-10 pilot, Maj. Michael J. Griffin, 39, of Sellersville, Pa., was found Friday.

After the crash Saturday of a C-130 cargo plane in Wyoming that killed all nine people on board, and three other military crashes in the past month, the Air Force earlier this week halted one-quarter of its routine training fights to review safety procedures.

Dole addresses black journalists' association

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Bob Dole said Friday his failure to address the NAACP last month was a missed opportunity and he pledged an all-out fight for "the hearts and votes" of black Americans. "We're going to earn it," he told the National Association of Black Journalists.

The Republican presidential nominee also repudiated a plank in the GOP platform — adopted just last week at the party's convention in San Diego — advocating a constitutional amendment to deny U.S. citizenship to children born in the United States to illegal immigrants.

"I would not support that part of the platform," Dole said during a lively question and answer session with the journalists. He said he had not approved that part of the platform personally.

Dole, who has no blacks in top campaign jobs, also was asked what black Americans he had consulted in coming up with his programs and views. He cited only a handful, mentioning discussions with civil rights leader Jesse Jackson and Coretta Scott King, widow of the slain civil rights leader.

Dole's running mate, Jack Kemp, came in for tough questioning himself.

He was asked by Derrick Jackson, a columnist for the Boston Globe, about his credibility with black Americans after he abruptly abandoned his longtime support for affirmative action programs last week.

"I do not accept the premise on which the question is based," Kemp said.

"I believe with all my heart that affirmative action is very much needed," he said, then echoed the Dole line that it should be "the right kind of affirmative action" — opening the door for minorities to obtain credit, capital, housing and better educational opportunities.

Despite the hard-edged questioning, both Dole and Kemp received considerable applause from the audience of several thousand black journalists.

The organization's president, Arthur Fennell, thanked them for coming and worked in a gentle dig at President Clinton, who was sending Vice President Al Gore to address the organization in his stead on Saturday.

If Gore shows up alone, Fennell said, "we'll ask him where his running mate is."

Both Dole and Kemp sought to portray the Republican Party as opening its arms to minorities and offering an economic program that could lift all Americans.

Dole also sought to make amends for declining an invitation to speak to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in July.

At the time, he said Kweisi Mfume, the NAACP president, was "trying to set me up" and that he would look for friendlier audiences that "I can relate to."

"We miss opportunities as a party from time to time. I missed one by not going to the NAACP convention," Dole said Friday to applause.

"These days we are told that the votes of African Americans are held by Democrats," Dole said. "I don't believe for a moment that this is the case."

And, while conceding that "Republicans sometimes were on the sidelines when they should have been in the center," Dole asserted:

"Now my party and I have a unique opportunity to renew a two-party contest for the hearts and votes of African American voters, all across America."

Kemp, as he has done in the past, quoted slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King: "I have an abiding faith in America and an audacious faith in the future of mankind."

"Bob Dole and I share that faith and we approach that future with that same audacity," Kemp said.

Former Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander, one of those who greeted Dole at the airport, said Dole's appearance "shows that Republican doors are open."

Thaddeus Garrett, chairman of the Howard University board and the only black adviser who came here on Dole's campaign plane, said Dole hoped his speech was "establishing a bottom line for Bob Dole on civil rights."

Dole and Kemp are espousing an agenda for "boldly walking into every community in America," he said.

According to the Joint Centers for Political and Economic Studies, a black think tank, Clinton received 82 percent of the black vote in 1992, with significant numbers voting in Illinois, Michigan, Ohio and New Jersey — all battleground states.

Dole and Kemp later traveled to Atlanta to attend the Paralympic Games. There, Dole addressed his own disability in remarks to the athletes.

"I feel strongly about opportunities for Americans with disabilities ... I have a disability, I know you can overcome," Dole said before watching the men's freestyle swimming competition.

Dems' centrist platform contrasts with liberal convention speakers

CHICAGO (AP) — Even as Democrats embrace a platform that eschews many New Deal traditions, their convention program is heavy with liberals, a reflection of internal fissures four years after Bill Clinton ran as a New Democrat determined to put the party on a moderate course.

Among those with prominent roles at next week's convention are two icons of the left: Jesse Jackson and Massachusetts Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, both of whom anchored unsuccessful presidential campaigns in the 1980s on a defense of the party's liberal traditions.

A host of lesser-known liberals from Democratic congressional ranks also have major convention roles, and the closing speech Tuesday falls to first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton, long identified with the party s liberal wing.

Not that more moderate and conservative Democrats are being shut out.

Several leaders of the centrist Democratic Leadership Council are expected to be given convention roles, including Connecticut Sen. Joseph Lieberman, Colorado Gov. Roy Romer and Louisiana Sen. John Breaux. And on Tuesday, the convention keynote address will be delivered by Indiana Gov. Evan Bayh, who plans to speak about making government smaller and more responsive.

"By the time the program is finished, all sides will certainly be well covered," said White House political director Doug Sosnik.

Still, that the liberal and centrist wings of the party continue to be referred to as different "sides" is a reminder that Clinton in his first term has not bridged many of the party's ideological divides.

Indeed, the president himself has been repeatedly caught in this tug of war.

He angered centrists early in his administration by focusing on abortion and homosexual rights and more recently angered liberals by signing a tough welfare reform bill. Jackson and Kennedy, for example, opposed the welfare measure, as did House Democratic Leader Richard Gephardt, Senate Democratic Leader Tom Daschle and Connecticut Sen. Christopher Dodd, the liberal Democratic National Committee general chairman.

Given the liberal leanings of most Democratic activists, "I'd have a harder time explaining why they weren't speaking," Dodd said Friday when asked about the Jackson and Kennedy speeches.

In many ways, Clinton's efforts to balance his convention program mirror the delicate balance Bob Dole's campaign tried to strike during the Republican convention, when platform proceedings were controlled by conservative forces and the convention program dominated by more moderate leaders.

"The Republicans had to go through contortions to make themselves look moderate and diverse and inclusive," said deputy Clinton campaign manager Ann Lewis. "The Democratic Party looks like that all the time, so we don't have to treat our convention as a makeover."

Jackson, scheduled to be the first major speaker Tuesday, said earlier this week it was important for the party to celebrate its diversity and encourage internal debate and protest. Jackson, a fierce critic of the centrist positions of the Democratic Leadership Council, said "the right to fight" was among the most cherished Democratic traditions.

Centrist Democrats had hoped this convention would settle once and for all the struggle that has been under way since the DLC was founded in 1985 by Clinton and others who said Walter Mondale's 49-state 1984 defeat demonstrated liberalism's failure. Instead, leaders of the centrist wing now suggest a second Clinton term is necessary to complete the transition.

Board thought interest-rate change unnecessary

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve policy-makers kept interest rates unchanged last month in belief the economy would slow in the second half of 1996 and pose little threat of inflation, according to minutes released Friday.

The Federal Open Market Committee voted 11-1 to hold monetary policy steady at its July 3 meeting, the minutes said. But it showed the members tilted toward higher rates if economic developments warranted.

However, the committee said it "would consult in some way before any policy tightening was undertaken," implying that Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan had not been given a green light to raise rates unilaterally before the next meeting.

At the conclusion of the closed meeting, the Fed issued a brief statement indicating that rates had been left unchanged without any explanation.

The minutes released Friday showed that members anticipated the robust second-quarter economic growth "would slow appreciably over the second half of the year."

At the same time, while members viewed the outlook for inflation "as a source of substantial uncertainty," many forecast little change in basic inflation trends.

The FOMC met again on Tuesday and again indicated it had not changed policy.

Many analysts believe its latest decision to hold steady again was based on inconclusive data, persuading it to await further economic reports that could provide a clearer picture.

But Greenspan told Congress last month that if evidence of a slowing economy does appear soon, the central bank will be forced to boost rates to avoid a surge in prices. Fed policy makers next meet on Sept. 24.

Gary Stern, president of the Federal Reserve Bank of Minneapolis, cast the only dissenting vote at the July 3 meeting, the first dissent since November 1995. Stern had argued for higher rates.

New members Alice Rivlin and Laurence H. Meyer, attending their first FOMC meeting, voted with the majority.

Airline: Wrong command sent airplane into mountainside

DALLAS (AP) — The captain of an American Airlines jet that crashed in Colombia last December entered an incorrect one-letter computer command that sent the plane into a mountain, the airline said Friday.

The crash killed all but four of the 163 people aboard.

American's investigators concluded that the captain of the Boeing 757 apparently thought he had entered the coordinates for the intended destination, Cali.

But, on most South American aeronautical charts, the one-letter code for Cali is the same as the one for Bogota, 132 miles in the opposite direction.

The coordinates for Bogota directed the plane toward the mountain, according to a letter by Cecil Ewell, American's chief pilot and vice president for flight.

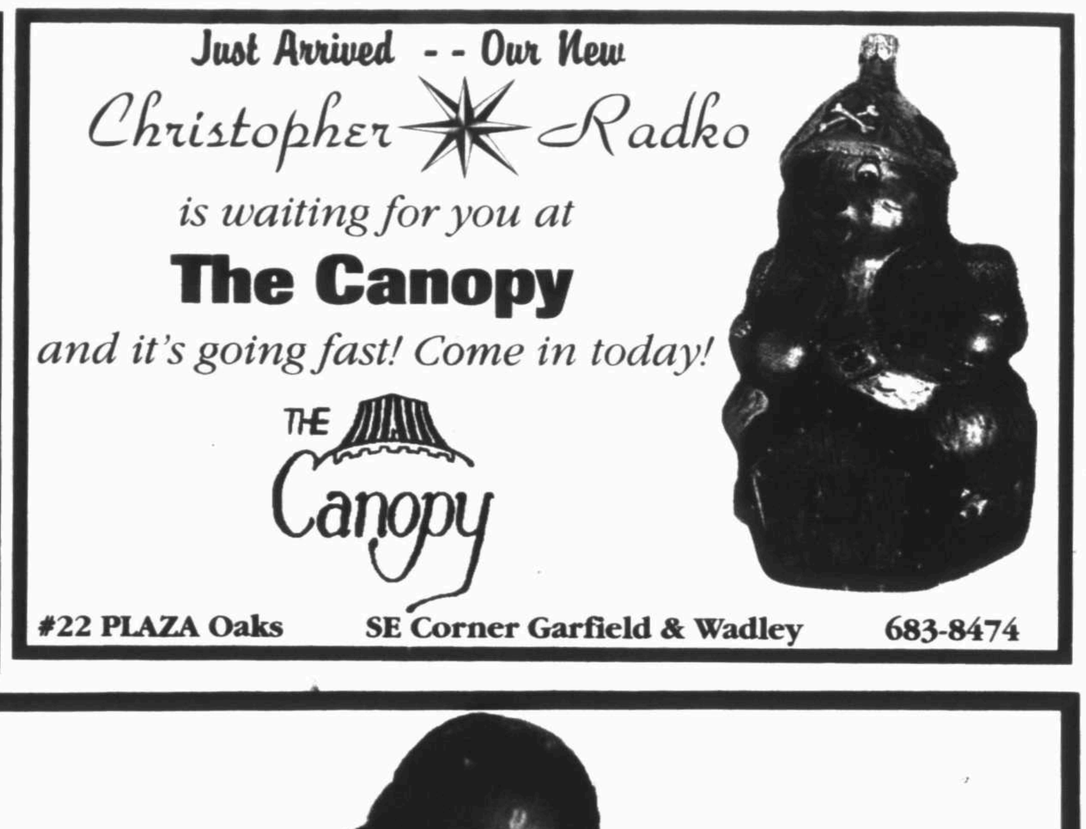

The codes for Bogota and Cali are different in most computer databases, Ewell said.

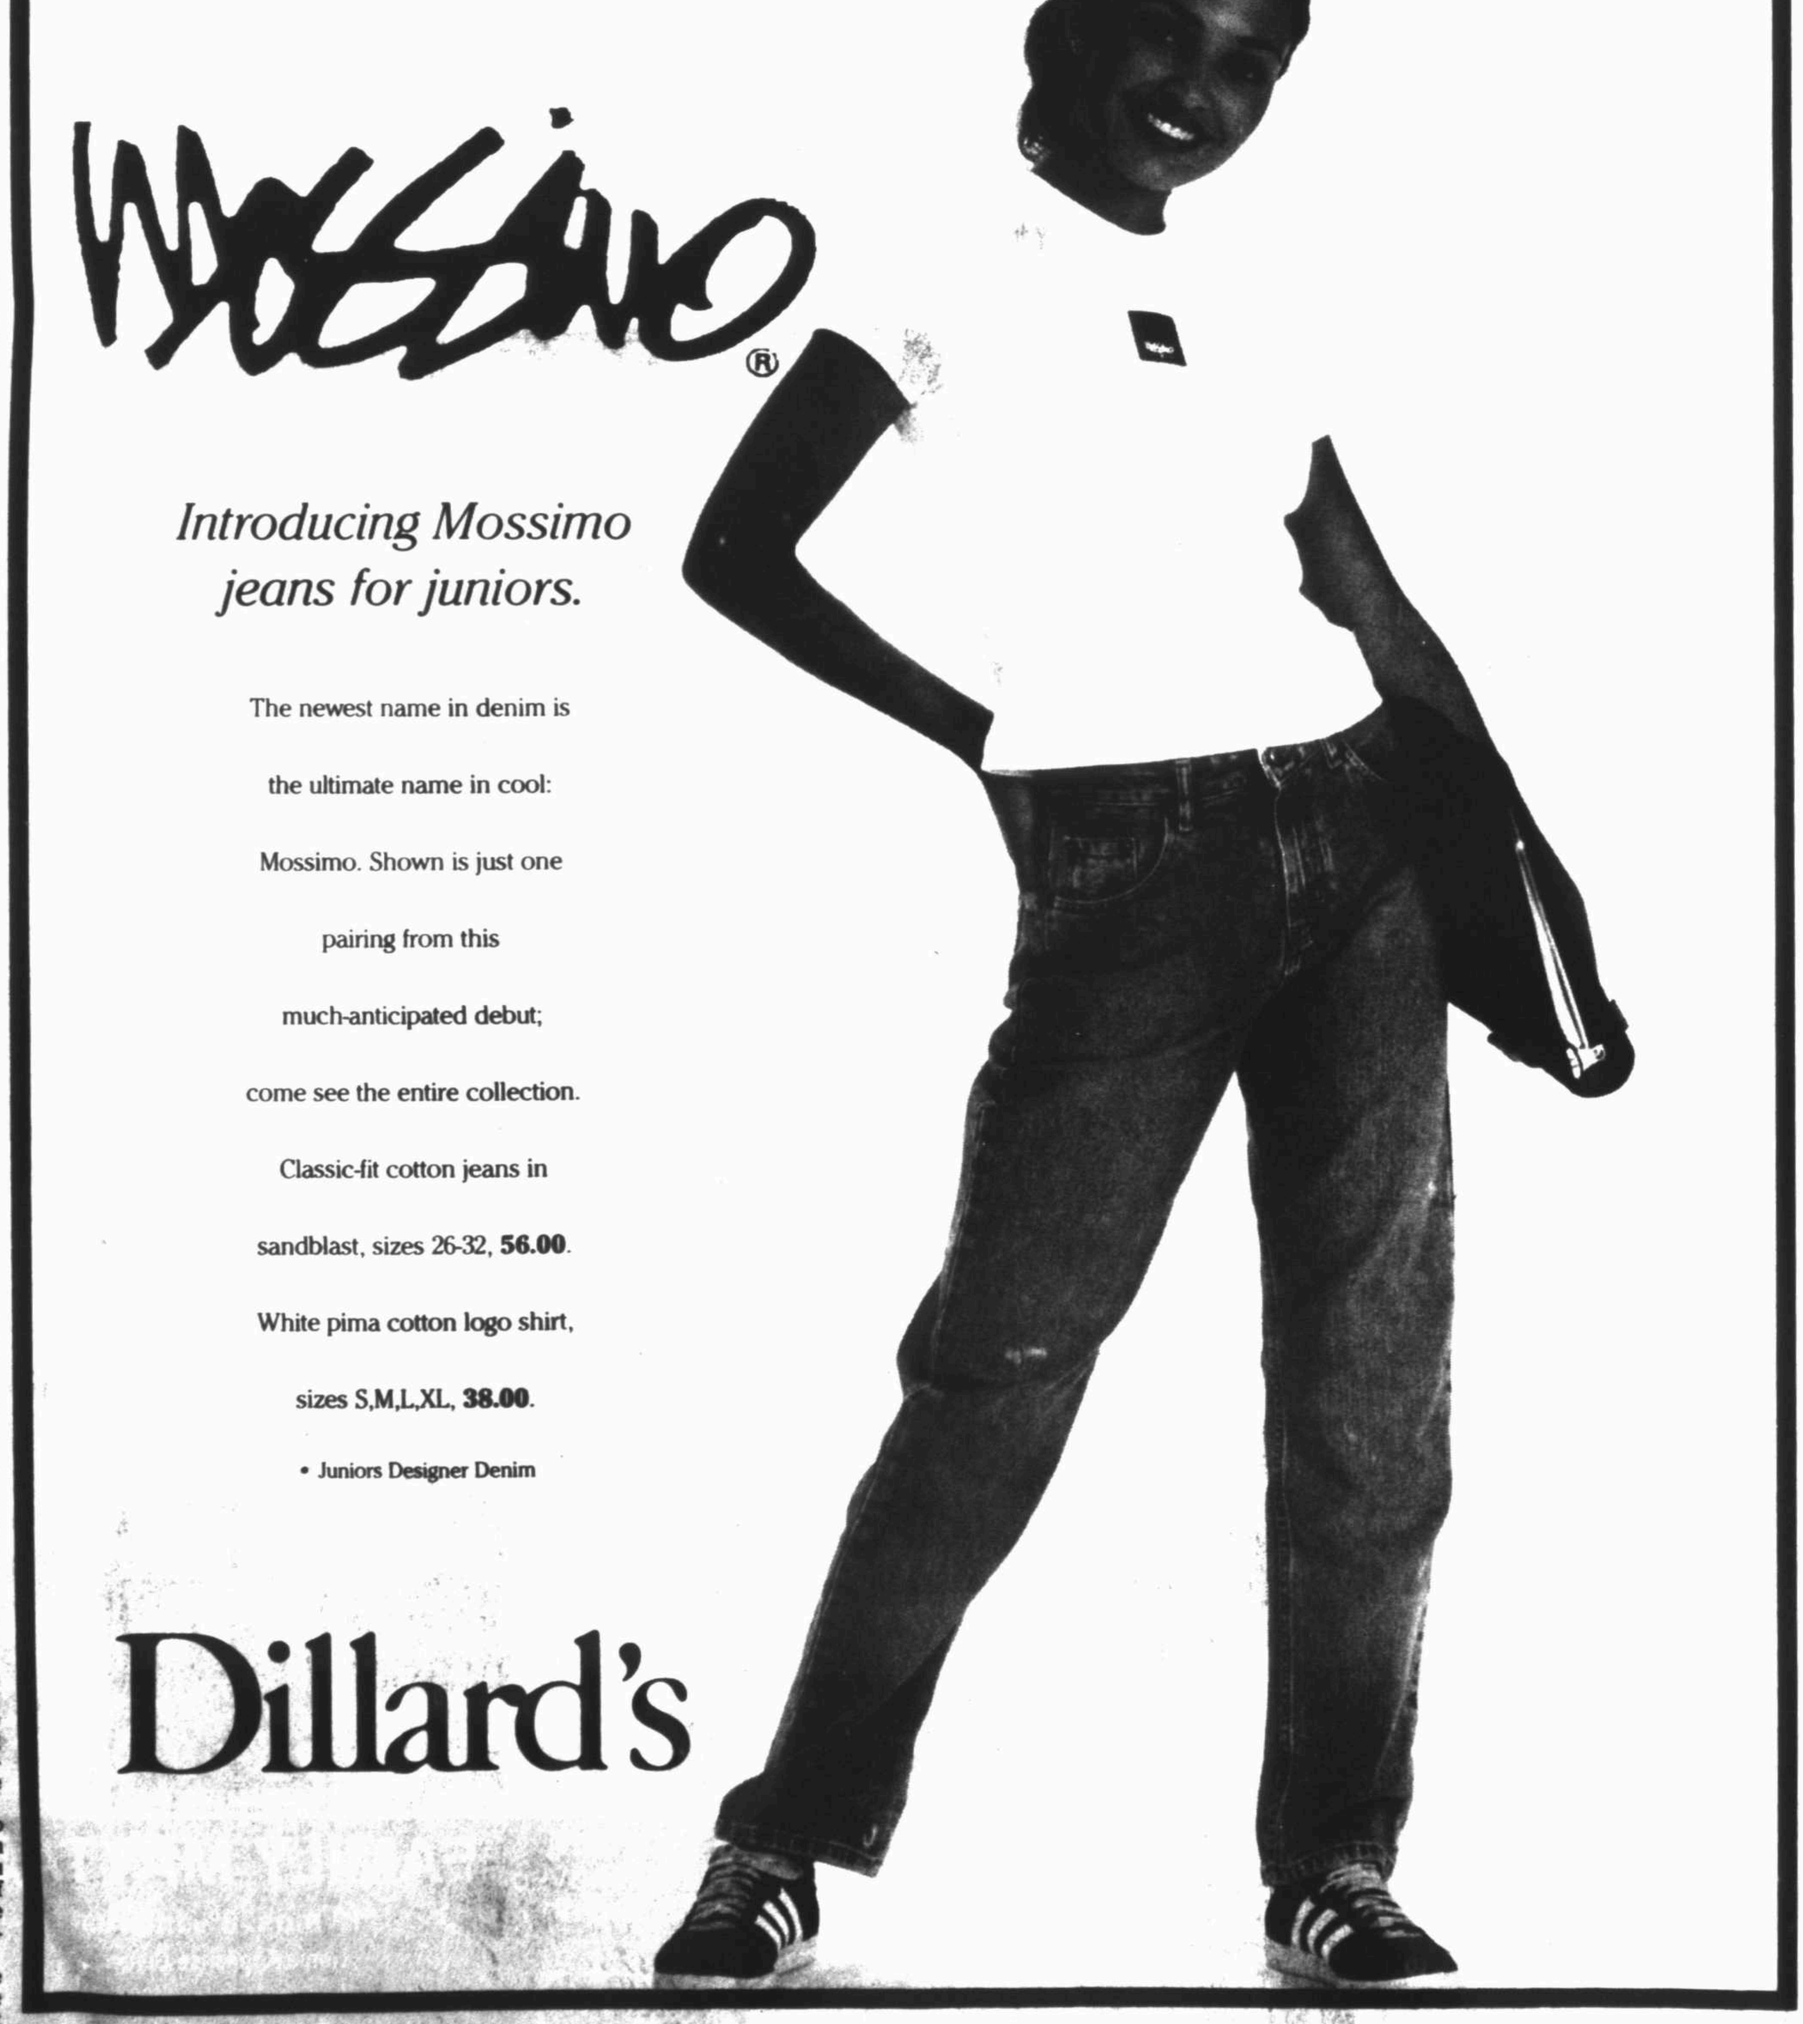

American spokesman John Hotard confirmed Friday that Ewell's letter, first reported in The Dallas Morning News, is being delivered this week to all of the airline's pilots to warn them of the coding problem.

American's discovery also prompted the Federal Aviation Administration to issue a bulletin to all airlines, warning them of inconsistencies between some computer databases and aeronautical charts, the newspaper said.

The computer error is not the final word on what caused the crash. The Colombian government is investigating and is expected to release its findings by October.

Nailing down home improvement sites on the 'Net

By Gerry Mullany
N.Y. Times News Service

In recent years the do-it-yourself craze has not only fostered the success of hardware-store chains like Home Depot but has also created a vibrant side industry in the media.

Television shows like "This Old House," "Hometime" and "New Yankee Workshop" have extremely loyal followings, drawing weekend contractors and armchair home-improvement enthusiasts who relax by watching others do the work.

It is only logical, then, that sites on the World Wide Web would crop up to tap this market. Home-improvement suppliers are just beginning to make their mark on the Internet, while the popular television shows are already fully established on the Web, with useful sites offering detailed instructions on projects ranging from fixing a clogged drain to building a new kitchen.

The two most sophisticated sites are ones tied to the popular home-improvement shows. "This Old House" bases its Web site on the show's multi-episode home-remodeling projects, which often involve the complete renovation of a teetering but nonetheless charming house.

Unlike the show, however, the site lets you stop and breathe; it offers useful graphics that explain the inner workings of a house, and describes the problems that can crop up in any renovation, like the nasty dilemma of wood-boring insects.

But the advice is not exhaustive: A page on renovating a bathroom, for instance, offers an overview of the project but then concentrates mainly on tiling, giving short shrift to essentials like plumbing.

The site also estimates the prices of certain projects and supplies, and offers short bibliographies explaining where people can get more information on a specific project — two features that are lacking on the television show. For someone not in the contracting business, such

Browser battle update

Launching a counter-offensive in its war against Microsoft, Netscape Communications today introduces a new version of its World Wide Web browser that lets users receive free customized news.

Mountain View-based Netscape hopes the new Navigator 3.0 browser will stave off a charge by Microsoft, which has begun to eat into Netscape's overwhelming control of the market.

Microsoft last week released its own third-generation browser, Internet Explorer 3.0.

The Redmond, Wash.-based software giant also offered free Internet features to anyone who uses it.

The new Netscape browser is available on the company's Web site at http://home.netscape.com.

Computer users can download the program and use it free of charge for 90 days. After that, they'll be expected to pay $49.95.

Microsoft's browser, which is entirely free, can be downloaded at http:// www.microsoft.com.

Netscape's custom news feature, called Inbox Direct, will provide news and information from more than two dozen Internet providers. They include the New York Times, American Express Travel & Leisure magazine, Sony Music, Quote.com and Times Mirror Magazines (Sporting News, Skiing, Golf and yachting).

News will be delivered in the form of Web pages to users' e-mail inboxes. "With Netscape Inbox Direct, users don't need to spend time finding interesting sites and fetching their daily news from many different services," said Mike Homer, senior vice president of marketing at Netscape.

Hacker busts feds

A hacker who apparently opposes gun control and Internet censorship broke in the US Justice Department's World Wide Web page Friday night and posted obscene and racist material.

The web site is used to post public information, including government news releases and speeches, spokesman Joe Krovisky said.

The web page was replaced with swastikas, photos of Adolf Hitler, sexually explicit material, and a satirical description of the Justice Department's mission.

"As the largest law firm in the Nation, the Department of Justice serves to punish all who don't agree with the moral standards set forth by Clinton," the page read. The page asserts the Justice Department wants to dismantle the Bill of Rights, particularly the rights of free speech and gun ownership. "We are a little behind our 1984 deadline, but working slowly one amendment at a time," the page read.

The hacker's wrath was mainly aimed at the Communications Decency Act, a federal law intended to ban "indecent" communications on the Internet.

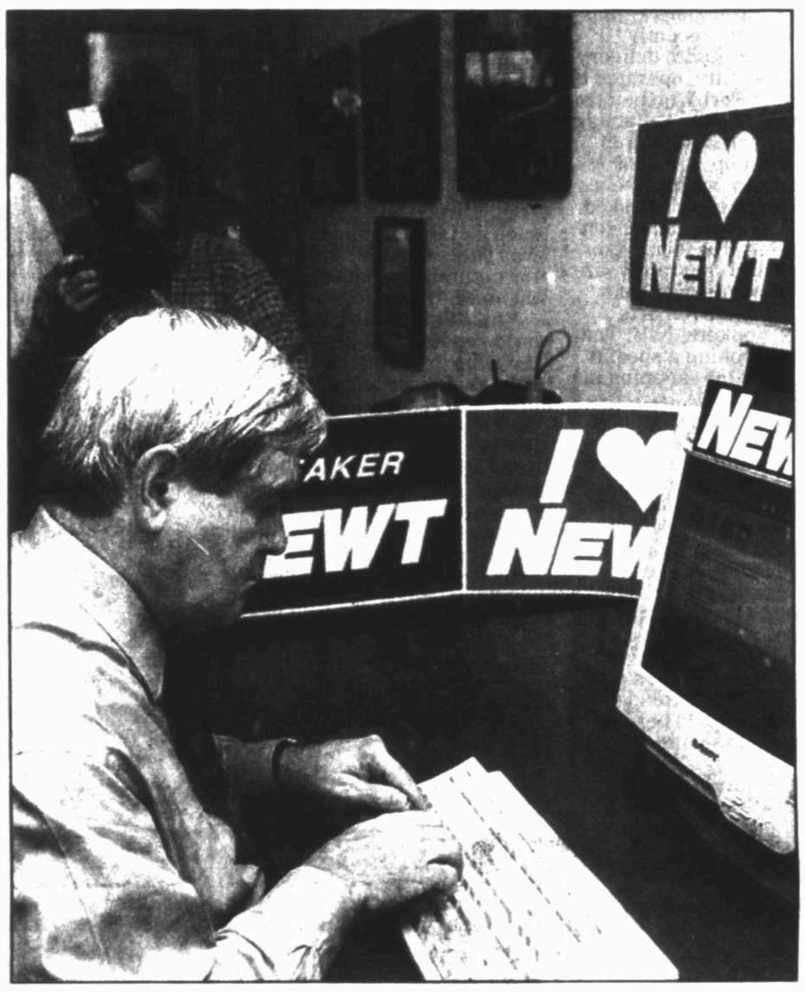

The law has been widely denounced by civil libertarians and Internet users, and enforcement of the measure has been blocked pending a ruling by the US Supreme Court.

The Justice Department shut the site down early Saturday morning. By afternoon it was still down as technicians tried to repair the damage and to ensure that the incident would not be repeated.

According to Krovisky, sensitive Justice Department files are stored on machines that are not connected to the Internet.

The doctored page also had links to other web sites, all unflattering, about Clinton, Republican presidential nominee Bob Dole and conservative commentator Patrick Buchanan.

ALT.PARANOIA

(Don't look over your shoulder now, but they're out to get us)

By Charles Stough
N.Y. Times News Service

Imagine a special checkout line at the grocery store, or a post office window always open just for you, but above it is a sign that says ' Reserved for people who think they're being followed."

Some wouldn't go there. Some would.

There's a place in Usenet for those who would. It's a newsgroup called alt.conspiracy, and if they keep it up it will become very popular and everyone WILL be watching them. Not that its regular contributors don't already think so anyway.

"Use your phone," declared one who posts in alt.conspiracy, "and they have a record of who you speak to .... Use your credit card and they know what you buy, when and where you buy, where you are at a particular time ... Register your weapons and they know you have one, what type, how many weapons you have."

"You are right," a sympathizer said. "There are certain Keywords that Government computers are programed to pick up on and start recording. Just try using the word Bomb or Militia once during a phone conversation. If you listen very carefully you will hear a click.'

"What do you care?" responded another guest last week. "Throw a great party. Don't invite them! THEY'LL KNOW! "

"I know I will be laughed at by writing this but then I am used to it, the sympathizer came back. "There is a satellite orbiting right now that can tell exactly what you are doing in your back yard, who visits you, and at any given time it can tell how many people are in your house by using infrared."

There it is, paranoia fans. Any Internet service provider who offers Usenet access can put you in touch with people who capitalize too many words. Every newspaper editor already knows a fat list of such folks, but they used to rely on the mails.

It does no good to ask them why They would use a spy satellite to check out a backyard picnic, when They could just walk up to the fence and peek in, maybe bring badminton and get a free beer and a burger out of it. And who's to say They didn't sign up your neighbor to do just that?

The ones with the special connections are the most fun to read. They know about the international banking conspiracy or the fluoridated water conspiracy or the United Nations' black helicopters about to invade from their secret base in Peebles, Ohio.

Why, a helpless earth had no idea about how deeply the extraterrestrials had hold of our society until the news broke in alt.conspiracy that they're collaborating with "Corporate America,

'Where the Wizards Stay Up Late': A history of the Internet

By Richard Bernstein
N.Y. Times News Service

If you always wanted to know who put the "at" sign in your e-mail address, then "Where Wizards Stay Up Late" is the book for you.

Katie Hafner and Matthew Lyon have produced a clear, readable history of the Internet, the sprawling electronic mall where you can look for a spouse or read an article from a newspaper across the country or dial up the World Wide Web site of the CIA to see what declassified world maps are available for sale.

The history of the Internet ought to be a great story, and indeed, in Ms. Hafner and Lyon's hands it often is.

■ Book review

The authors, a husband-and-wife team, make good use of their material, showing how the Internet's inventors overcame the considerable obstacles that had made it impossible for computers in different places to talk to one another.

The first half of their book is a fascinating narrative, evoking especially the world of early computer scientists — "an adhocracy of intensely creative, sleep-deprived, idiosyncratic, well-meaning computer geniuses" — whose energy and vision were utterly amaz-

GAME BOY

How to relax (and win) at the same time

By Stephan Lazaroff

When the day's work is done and the frustration of business has gotten your nerves frayed to the point of breaking, a little diversion is in order. Now this doesn't mean a trip to the pub, (not in this column at least), but rather a trip to the software store, or, if you're like me, a short trip to the computer console at home! For nearby lies the vast storehouse of entertainment ... the mother of all diversions; a 24 jewel-case holding tower of solid hit games! That's right, I said "games", and I didn't even lower my head in shame when I said it. Today's Army utilizes a special edition of "Doom", the highly praised, award winning shooter from ID software. So, why should we who fight the daily battle for home, hearth and family not enjoy the same diversions?

Perhaps "Doom" isn't your type of game, or maybe the first person view gets you a bit motion sick. There are literally hundreds of other titles to chose from and one that many will find interesting, entertaining and challenging is "The Pandora Directive," the somewhat over hyped sequel to "Under A Killing Moon" from Access Software.

Once again Tex Murphy is back as the 'slip of the lip' detective while the rest of the cast has changed faces, but their main intent is the same: to

Ask Amy@

Dear Amy: I am just learning how to use a computer. Is there somewhere I can go to help me learn how to use a computer? — Megan, Harrisburg, PA

Dear Megan: Classes are offered in lots of places, like schools, libraries and user groups. The stores that sell computers often have general-interest classes about the kind of computers they sell, but it is more common to see training about a single computer program. Generally, you have to learn about a specific program and in the process you will learn more about your computer. A good place to start is to call a local user group that uses the same computer or software in which you are interested. The neat thing about taking a training course is you get to meet other people who also have an interest in computers. Sharing experiences about computers is part of the fun.

Meet the wizards behind the curtain

By Elizabeth Weise
AP Cyberspace Writer

They're the men behind the curtain, the wizards who built the Internet. Invisible to most of the network's 30 million of so users, they are the engineers who make sure e-mail and everything else finds its way unerringly around the globe.

Working under the collective umbrella of the Internet Society, these men — and the overwhelming majority indeed are male — spend hours upon hours hammering out the standards that allow the millions of computers on the Internet to talk to each other, as well as the direction the Net will take in the future.

When they gathered recently in Montreal, at a joint meeting of the Internet Society and the Internet Engineering Task Force, the convention center corridors were filled with hundreds of T-shirted folks sporting ponytails, Birkenstocks and laptop computers, all arguing furiously at a polite roar.

What system should be used to allow computer networks to share files? How can the Internet expand to cope with its current exponential growth? Which system should be used for transmitting video images?

These are the kinds of questions participants are busy answering — and not with theories. If they needed to get over a river, these guys would sketch a bridge and then go build it.

"Rough consensus and running code" are the watchwords of the IETF, the down-and-dirty arm of the Internet Society, responsible for creating timely and practical standards that can be deployed quickly — which, in this case, means a couple of years. Find a problem, get a group of really smart people to work on it until they all agree (pretty much) on the best solution, then get some software written. That's the goal.

It's also what makes the Internet as we know it run.

What's so remarkable about the process is that it's entirely a volunteer effort, by some of the most brilliant minds in computer science.

"The IETF does all this basically for the benefit of the Internet. It sounds hokey, Pollyanna-ish, but it's true," said Stephen Coya, the group's executive director.

This is how it has always been done, under various names. The Internet didn't come about just because two or three random hackers decided to hook their computers together. A sizable band of engineers, many of whom helped create the IETF, have been working on these issues for the last quarter-century.

Back in the '70s, they would have been called the Internet Working Group. Later on, GADS — Gateway Algorithms and Data Structures. Now, they're the IETF. But whatever you call them, their focus is clear — finding the best technical solutions to technical problems.

There's no such thing as membership in the IETF, just participants. Anyone can jump in and wrestle with any topic or problem they think is of interest. If enough people think it's worthwhile, a working group is formed.

Each working group puts together a charter, a series of goals and a timeline. An e-mail list is started and everyone begins talking — sometimes to the tune of a hundred of messages a day. Eventually, usually after nine months to a year and a half, consensus is reached.

There is no vote, no 51 percent majority. Consensus means coming up with a solution that nearly everyone can live with.

"When you go to a standard, there's no formal vote. It's debated in the working groups," said Christian Huitema, formerly of the National Institute for Research in France, now a chief scientist at Bellcore, one of AT&T's spinoffs.

"It's more a problem of convincing your peers. The smarter you are and the more background you have, the more likely you are to convince them," he said.

Advice for newcomers on tech support, repair

By Leslie Gornstein
N.Y. Times News Service

With technology rapidly growing more powerful and the Internet beckoning, computer makers and retailers are expecting sales to pick up the rest of this year. And for parents of students about to return to school, that sales surge may be right around the corner.

For those parents and others hoping for a deal, there's good news: Computer prices have gone from decent to downright low. Since fall, some PC makers have cut their prices 40 percent or more, significantly greater than the drops of 20 percent to 25 percent a year that have become customary with computers.

For those who need it, there's plenty of advice available about what types of hardware or software to check out.

But many buyers remain mystified by another side of the complicated purchases: technical services. As more consumers jump on the computing bandwagon, the demand for support, repairs and training is growing.

Computer companies have caught on, retooling advertising campaigns and looking for new ventures in tech support. Dallas retailer CompUSA recently equipped its stores with delivery vans. Computer City, operated by Tandy Corp. of Fort Worth, introduced a service option in January that gives computer buyers 90 days of phone support for $39.95.

To help consumers surf the ins and outs of service, we've asked computing experts for advice on what to look for. The four, who were interviewed separately, are:

■ Jeffrey Fox, an assistant editor at Consumer Reports Magazine in Yonkers, N.Y. The magazine is planning a special report on computer shopping in its September issue.

■ Matthew Snider, a computing consultant and executive director of the Mid-Cities MacIntosh and Newton Users Group of Hurst, Texas.

■ Matt Howard, president of Computer City, a retail chain operated by Tandy Corp. of Fort Worth.

■ Larry Mondry, executive vice president of merchandising at CompUSA, a Dallas-based computer retailer.

Q: Some computer sales representatives will offer extended warranties for, say, 10 percent of the price of the machine. Is it worth it?

Fox: The situation with notebooks is very different from desktops. Their standards are changing faster. I have heard from people who bought laptops, and when they went to get them fixed six months later, the company had already moved on to the next design.

But the desktop is assembled from standard parts. I have never had a memory go bad or a motherboard go belly-up on me. There is no reason for those things to break.

Extended warranties are extremely profitable to the people who sell them. I have seen people at trade shows who were handing out information on making a fortune on extended warranties. If you know you can get a fortune selling them, then you know that they are probably not something you will use.

So extended warranties make the most sense for very expensive things that are very easily broken, like a notebook.

Snider: Don't let anybody scare you into buying an extended warranty or service contract. I would not do business with a company that does a hard sell on extended warranties; that makes me suspicious about the quality of the product.

Howard: An extended warranty is peace of mind. It is insurance that customers will not be hit with a major expense should something malfunction. They are very popular. For most people, it gives them a level of comfort.

Mondry: It is not a major focus of our business. But many, many customers want the comfort of peace of mind.

Q.: Direct-sale companies, such as Dell Computer or Gateway 2000, can offer great prices for reputable products through the mail. Is that for me?

Fox: With mail order, if you need repairs, you are going to have the great inconvenience of not having your computer. I live in New Jersey, and sometimes they may have good sales prices in New York. But you have to think about it. Is it really worth saving a few dollars if you have to go back to that place?

Some of these places offer on-site services, where they contract with someone locally.

Snider: If you buy mail order, you are going to wish you bought locally. With the experience of mail order — even with the Dells and Gateways of the world, as good as they are — the results are going to be mixed at best. You are here, they are there, and there is always someone ahead of you in line. And you need your computer right now.

Q.: What about those independent catalogs, or the offers in the backs of computer magazines? They seem to have decent prices. What about customer service?

Snider: There is one thing you have to realize. The catalog companies are not in the business of selling computers or software. They are in the business of publishing mail-order catalogs. These companies collect advertising revenue for every square inch of space in the catalog. They could care less about whether the product works or not.

The company that makes the product is responsible for the product. If you buy a Mac, and something happens, you need to call Apple. If you buy some no-name brand PC from some company out of the back of PC World, you are stuck. You are married to that company.

Q: I have heard that some companies make it more difficult to get repairs by limiting access to their parts, calling them proprietary. What's going on here?

Fox: I know of people who have been burned by buying a computer, and, when they needed to get a new hard drive, the proprietary design would not allow that. From an upgrade point of view, the more you use an industry-standard computer, the easier it is to repair.

Snider: Two companies, Packard Bell and AST Research, have used very interesting configurations in their products. They didn't have motherboards; they had motherboards made to fit their machines. But you are not going to have that issue with a new machine. That issue went away with the '95 models.

Q: Can't I just save myself some cash and time by buying a book, getting a part from the manufacturer and doing repairs myself?

Snider: Computers have not evolved to the level that there are computer parts stores like there are auto parts stores. Most companies, regardless of who it is, will not sell you a replacement part. They want to do a repair.

I don't advise any consumers to try to do their own repairs unless they really know what they are doing. And if they really know what they were doing, they know where to go to get the parts.

Just static electricity can be a problem. One static discharge can be over 100,000 volts. Put 100,000 volts on a motherboard designed for 5 volts and you have destroyed your part.

Q: What is the biggest mistake that consumers make when it comes to service for their new computers? What should consumers keep in mind?

Howard: A lot of times, when computers are returned, we find it works just fine. But the problem is that, with first-time customers, they are just not familiar with how the computers function.

For the first-time purchase, the most important element is understanding how the computer works and ensuring that, when they leave the store, buyers understand how to operate the computer or where to go if something happens.

REVIEW: Book slows pace after explanation of origins

ing.

The problem with "Where Wizards Stay Up Late" is that the tale itself turns out, somewhat surprisingly, not to have the legs it needs for so comprehensive and lengthy a treatment.

Certain stories promise more than they deliver, often because the real action takes place inside the heads of people, so the narrative lacks the drama and external conflict that would make it exciting to read.

After describing the background and the early breakthroughs that led to the Internet, Ms. Hafner and Lyon's tale slows down. By the end it may be only full-blooded devotees of computer history who are still willing to read late into the night.

Ms. Hafner, a contributing editor at Newsweek, and Lyon, an assistant to the president of the University of Texas at Austin, do not put it this way, but the origins of the Internet seem to follow the law of unintended consequences.

The Net was originally an effort by the Advanced Research Projects Agency (ARPA) at the Pentagon to find a way for users of computers in one place to communicate with computers in other places.

The initiative, under President Dwight Eisenhower, was one of many by the United States after the Russians put Sputnik into orbit in 1957 and gave rise to the feeling, half truth and half panic, that suddenly the Soviet Union was ahead in science.

In other words, the Internet was not developed to let ordinary citizens exchange messages, buy products, pursue hobbies, look at pictures of nudes or promote scholarly interests.

But once the technology was developed under defense department contracts, the ruse of history took over. Indeed, as Ms. Hafner and Lyon put it, the original ARPA network "was a growing web of links and nodes, and that was it — like a highway system without cars."

This book makes it clear that the creators of the Net were mostly uninterested in defense department concerns. The heart of the account lies in the driven personalities of a couple of dozen computer pioneers who are the wizards of the title.

An engineer named Ray Tomlinson hit upon the "at" sign for e-mail addresses.

Will Crowther, a true giant of modern technology, was seeking to amuse his daughter after his divorce when he created a game called "Adventure," a simplified version of Dungeons and Dragons that "demonstrated the appeal of an open networking culture."

Paul Baran, "a good-humored immigrant from Eastern Europe," devised a revolutionary concept now called packet switching.

In the late 1960s Baran was trying to make U.S. military communications invulnerable in the event of a Soviet nuclear attack. His revolutionary idea was to break messages into fragments, to send them via a network of redundant lines, and to use a code to reassemble them at their destination.

Later, when Bolt Beranek & Newman, a consulting firm in Cambridge, Mass., got a contract from ARPA to build the first computer links (quickly called the Arpanet), Baran's idea, never used by the military, became the basic idea behind computer-to-computer communication.

It is not easy to make the technological challenges comprehensible to nonwizards, and Ms. Hafner and Lyon skillfully use metaphors to make concepts clear. For example, they describe a special control signal called RFNM, devised to keep the links from clogging up, as "the equivalent of the maitre d' announcing 'Your table is ready.'"

At other times, they slip into computer jargon. While theirs is light compared with the heavier forms, it is nonetheless stilted and unhelpful.

There are moments when the narrative enters a mist of RFCs, TIPs, IPTOs, FTPs, and TCP/IPs along with ARPAs and Darpas and Elizas, added to unexplained terms like "logging capabilities" and "natural-language programs," though, fortunately, those moments are rare.

And certainly, even when the story slows down, Ms. Hafner and Lyon have done us a service by rescuing from oblivion the collection of geeks and nerds, bureaucrats and geniuses, who changed everyday life for millions of people all across the planet.

PARANOIA: Conspiracy sites take load off post office

(From 1B)

Wall Street, and Academia; but also the Government/Pentagon sponsored National Science Foundation (NSF). All but admitting that not only are extraterrestrials visiting this planet, but that major Corporations have been and will be incorporating alien technology into their products."

For example, alien computers collected from the alien flying saucer that crashed in Roswell, N.M. in 1947 will allow, it says in alt.conspiracy, earthling airplanes to land safely, no matter how damaged by war or mishap.

Now THAT would be worth a plane ticket, and I hope the little green men know how to make a digestible snack too. But then there's the problem, another alt.conspirator points out, of how poorly the gizmo worked that one time the LGMs needed it in 1947.

There are thousands of newsgroup forums in Usenet. Internet purists are appalled by press mentions of flaky ones such as alt.conspiracy. It encourages a waste of "bandwidth," which is the geek's term for "capacity of the system." Purists who complain always fill their e-mails with lots of acronyms and in-group stuff such as 8-line secret messages only for the worthy. Dang, wish I hadn't traded off my Ovaltine decoder ring.

I can't complain about alt.conspiracy. It attracts wierdos, which takes a load off the postman. It tickles a sense of irony, all those paranoids whizzing alarm through the Internet to warn of listeners in the Internet. It keeps the express lines short at the market. If aliens made all this possible, welcome.

GAMES: Weapons, nerves and time needed for 'Strife'

block our humble hero from succeeding in his mission. First-person movement perspective coupled with third-person conversation tree options gives the player a mostly involved sense of being on the job and in the gumshoe's, uh, shoes!

If this sort of game isn't for you, try Close Combat from Microsoft. This WW II strategy battlefield fest requires careful planning and execution in order to defeat the enemy who is enscounced within a town as the game opens. Just like the dogfaces of that past war, you will have to fight hard for every inch of ground you need to capture. Excellent artifical intelligence, (AI), adds to the fun as your troops consider your orders and, if finding them too suicidal, go about their own agenda! I've had groups of soldiers retreat after I'd ordered them into the face of death. What nerve! Not only don't the children listen to me, but the little guys in the computer defy my commands!

I enjoy first person shooters as well as strategy and adventure games and have come to near addiction with "Strife" from Velocity. This game is set in medieval times but the weapons are straight from "Doom", "Triad" and others of the genre, meaning you start with a knife and end up with a flame thrower or "mauler". You'll need all the weapons, nerve and time you can find since this one's far more intriguing than any of its predecessors, due to superior AI, role playing aspects and superior storyline. With so much to play it's a wonder I ever get any work done!

Speaking of work...is that sunlight I see through the window?

HOME: Some sites simple, others fall on industry jargon information can be indispensable. The site also has links to major suppliers of home-building products.

A more logically arranged home-improvement site is run by "Hometime." The site is divided into two dozen categories based on the individual project, including areas such as drywall, bathrooms and plumbing. These categories are then subdivided further, with budding electricians, for instance, able to click on instructions to install a light fixture or run electrical cable.

While the "Hometime" page appears to have a wider breadth of projects and is more navigable than the "This Old House" site, it does not have many of the detailed pictures and diagrams that are necessary for any novice attempting the often intricate work of remodeling a house.

The "Hometime" site does have an interactive feature, a users' forum that do-it-yourselfers can visit to exchange tips on projects. To guard against people trying to push products or otherwise abuse the system, the forum requires users to register with their full names and e-mail addresses before taking part.

One site, Hardwareworld, offers an exhaustive listing of hardware and home-improvement links. The range is already staggering, offering everything from Black & Decker's home page to such obscure, curious titles as "The Story of Velcro."

Some sites just help home remodelers familiarize themselves with the arcana of the industry. Nothing is more frustrating than listening to contractors using industry lingo about the work you need done. Then comes their astronomical estimate ...

Other sites just help home remodelers familiarize themselves with the arcana of the industry. Nothing is more frustrating than listening to contractors using industry lingo about the work you need done. Then comes their astronomical estimate.

For window buyers, for instance, Pella Windows has an attractively designed site that defines "cladding," "jamb liner" and "Low-E glass," among other industry terms. In addition, the page gives rudimentary instructions on installing a window, potentially saving homeowners hundreds of dollars on one of the more expensive remodeling tasks.

Other suppliers, though, have made surprisingly halfhearted attempts to reach out on the Internet. Home Depot, more than perhaps any other company, has prospered from the growing home-improvement industry, even going so far as to offer classes for its customers. But it has a surprisingly anemic site, focusing on such things as where to find the nearest store.

The growth of these sites is no surprise. In recent years even smaller contractors have been finding that computers are an invaluable tool in helping them redesign rooms before starting work. For the novice remodeler, some of the better sites help demystify an often consumer-unfriendly business.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

SATURDAY, AUGUST 24, 1996

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Lessons learned in the past come in handy. A busy September prepares you for an even more hectic October. Build a solid financial base step-by-step. Public recognition is featured as Christmas approaches. Seize an opportunity to prove your independence. Your love life accelerates as 1997 gets underway. Next spring will produce superior career or financial gains. Plan a special trip for midsummer. A wedding should bring widespread joy.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY: actress Marlee Matlin, baseball great Cal Ripken Jr., actor Steve Guttenberg, boxer Gerry Cooney.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Keep business correspondence up to date. You can catch costly errors by checking the work done by a subordinate or partner. A combatant attitude will only hasten the end of a relationship.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Rushing into an unknown area will not work to your advantage. Your interest in poetry and literature grows, enriching your life. Carry out a plan that has been approved by higher-ups.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Taking a radical approach will boomerang. Stick to tried-and-true methods to get ahead. Financial problems cannot be solved by gambling or taking risky shortcuts.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Recognition for past efforts brings fame and fortune. You are in an enviable position. Wield your new power subtly. Avoid taking others for granted.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Discard grandiose plans in favor of something more practical. A change in plans could mean more money for you. Good health is tied to your willingness to exercise and eat right.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Better coordination of your social and business activities will give you more time for yourself. Purchase household appliances that will help you save time. Regular exercise proves rejuvenating.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A good morning to exchange ideas and opinions. You may have to exert pressure in order to get a project approved. Although working overtime is necessary, the rewards will be significant.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Do not underestimate your worth; others will find it out in due time. Your ability to take action on short notice helps you cash in on a golden business opportunity.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Cut yourself loose from people who do not share your goals. Mingle with VIPs; they will like your style. Contacting someone faraway or socializing with newcomers ensures a pleasurable evening.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Avoid taking out a loan if you can find another way to reduce monthly payments. A tough business decision will benefit you in the long run. Be skeptical of promises made by new acquaintances.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Still waters run deep. Move forward with caution. Your plans for repairing or enlarging your home show others how innovative you can be. Get out of a rut by socializing this evening. Dress to impress.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): If a relationship has soured, focus on problems you can fix instead of blaming others. Friends with good business sense offer advice. Follow it and you will prosper. Find someone to finish what you started.

Cher has ony one problem with her ex-husband's career: He's Republican

NEW YORK — Cher has only one qualm about former husband Sonny Bono's new career as a congressman: He's a Republican.

"Would've felt better if he'd been a Democrat," Cher told the New York Post. "He was always in love with the idea of doing things through the system. ... I just don't get him becoming a Republican."

Congressman Sonny Bono is best known for his partnership with Cher.

Bono wanted to be a senator after his stint as mayor of Palm Springs, Calif., but settled for the House.

The restaurateur still is best known as the less-tuneful half of the 1960s partnership with Cher. They were divorced in 1974.

BUFFALO, N.Y. — Can Martha Stewart be as good a peacemaker as she is a homemaker?

Martha Stewart to be barbecue expert at charity luncheon.

The guru of good housekeeping will be the barbecue expert at a shindig put together by cable television VH1 for Sept. 2. While she's flipping burgers, John Mellencamp and his band will provide the music.

Never mind the grill: The real heat may come from the neighbors.

There were complaints last December after Stewart left a charity luncheon before signing all the books that were bought.

"I've been coming to Buffalo a long time, and I promise I'll think long and hard before I accept another invitation to your chilly and downright unfriendly city again," Stewart retorted in a letter to The Buffalo News.

VH1 spokeswoman Lana Berman said the channel is aware of the spat.

"We're just hoping that Martha will enjoy her time at the barbecue and have fun," she said. "Who better to make sure everything is right at a Labor Day barbecue than Martha Stewart?"

MAYS LANDING, N.J. — Real life is getting as tangled as any soap opera storyline for James Fitzpatrick.

The actor has been sued for $5 million by a woman who claims he assaulted her in a back room of the Atlantic City Planet Hollywood.

Fitzpatrick was dumped from "All My Children" after his bosses looked at a security camera video of the April 21 incident, which occurred while he was in Atlantic City for a Special Olympics benefit.

The suit filed last week by Debra Huron, the restaurant's merchandising manager, accuses the 24-year-old Fitzpatrick of assault and battery, discrimination and harassment.

Fitzpatrick was not available to comment Friday.

NEW YORK — Keith Hamilton Cobb says he's done all he can with "All My Children."

Cobb, who plays the hunky dreadlock-wearing Noah, will leave the soap opera or e his contract expires in December.

"For all the joys and gifts the show has brought me, there just comes a point when it's time to go," Cobb told the New York Post. "I didn't think the character was going to grow any more."

Cobb, named one of People magazine's 50 Most Beautiful People this year, has been on the show since 1994.

VENTURA, Calif. — A judge has cleared a vandalism conviction from the record of Justin Huish, America's only two-time gold medalist archer.

Municipal Judge Art Gutierrez on Thursday agreed to Huish's request to clear the charge. He was convicted three years ago after "KKK" was written on a black neighbor's property in Simi Valley.

Huish, 21, said someone else was responsible for that graffiti and he only spray-painted his name on a mailbox, then blotted it out. He was sentenced to three years' probation and 120 hours of community service.

"Justin's done all the terms of his probation, he's committed no similar crimes and it looks like he's done a good job of turning his life around," prosecutor Christopher Harman said.

Huish won the gold in the men's individual competition in Atlanta as well as a team gold.

Water Leak Causes Over $5,000 Worth Of Damages In Permian Basin Home

Bad Wiring Connection In Attic Almost Leaves Family Homeless

Warmer Times

Summer AIR CONDITIONING SAFETY UPDATE 1996

Local Businessman Is Giving Away $89 Air Conditioning Operating Inspections for $49!

Permian Basin Claire's Services is the most respected service company in the area. Claires has announced a new market plan just in time for the hot summer.

This important safety inspection and operating check is recommended by manufacturers power company and industry professionals.

For Only $49.00

To get your $49.00 Inspection, simply call our office and tell us the best time to come to your home. There is absolutely no obligation or purchase required for you to take advantage of this great offer. We must tell you, however, that this is a first-come, first-serve offer and once all allotted Safety and Operating Inspections are scheduled, that's it!

How to prevent a major water disaster in your home!

Sooner or later, the pipes carrying water, a byproduct of air conditioning will clog up due to mold and algae build up. These condensate pipes clogging up will cause severe water damage to ceilings, carpets, and furniture near your equipment.

Your cooling system contains more (100) crucial parts. A failure in just one of them could mean increased operating costs, severe water damage or unnecessary downtime at the absolute hottest time of the year.

Why is the owner of Clairs giving away an $89 Inspection for $49

Since Tim Claire has put the number of Cooling Inspections at 1,000, we asked him why he is willing to invest 40,000 in his community.

There are several answers:

"First, I want to give something back to the residents of Permian Basin who have helped me to succeed as I have.

Second, I would rather have my technicians doing something for the community, versus washing trucks.

Third, some manufacturers are allocating funds specially for this program to Clairs.

Fourth, I know that it will ultimately be good for my business because many of the people who take advantage of my offer have never used my company before. And I'm confident that once they see what we do and how thorough we are they'll come back to us again...hopefully as regular customers."

Claires has limited the number of Inspections to 1,000.

So, we urge you to call now for you 49's (per system) 15 point Safety and Operating Inspection on your central air conditioning system.

For the safety and comfort of your family this summer, you owe it to yourself to call us today! You have a 30-day money back guarantee.

Here Are 7 of the 15 Point Procedures Your Safety and Operating Inspection Includes

1. Condensate drains: Clean out drains.
2. Refrigerant charge check: Measure level of refrigerant in system to provide optimum efficiency.
3. Wiring check: Improper size or oxidate of connections undetected cause serious problems.
4. Blower assembly check: Helps prevent headaches, nausea, or serious injury.
5. Inside cooling coil inspection: Visually inspect cooling coil to determine loss of efficiency and mold blockage.
6. Hi-low pressure control check: Faulty or overloaded safety controls can cause equipment or structure damage.
7. Ductwork Inspection: Check accessible ductwork for air leakage, a major cause of high electric bills.

Hurricane causes tornado in South Texas town of Olmito

OLMITO (AP) — Hurricane Dolly's destruction reached as far north as the Texas border Friday, spawning a small tornado that ripped off roofs and uprooted trees in two communities.

No one was injured as the twister made its way through Olmito into the affluent neighborhood of Rancho Viejo, about 10 miles north of Brownsville.

But the tornado, which touched down around 8 a.m., caused significant damage to homes and vehicles.

Johnny Cavazos spent the morning retrieving pieces of a plywood roof blown off a rental house he owns in Olmito. Chunks were tossed across the front yard into a canal several feet away.

"It's a total loss," Cavazos said. "I'll have to tear it down and start again."

Branches of an uprooted mesquite tree littered the yard, while across the street, a 100-foot chain-link fence laid twisted amid sodden grass.

Ramiro Atkinson Sr., who lives next door to Cavazos' home, said he saw the tornado touch down as he headed out to read a water meter.

"I stepped out of my garage and all of a sudden I saw this big, big dark cloud overhead and it started coming down," said Atkinson, whose property escaped damage. "I ran into my house and shut the doors."

A few miles north in Rancho Viejo, the twister caused damage to about 10 homes, hurled trees onto the golf course and knocked over street signs, police Chief Ignacio Mendoza said. Some patio walls, made of double-layered brick, were flung into swimming pools.

Mendoza estimated damage would be in the thousands of dollars.

Paula West was reading in bed when she heard her patio table shatter.

"First it went one way, then it went another way," she said. "I heard that noise, and it was here and gone."

Ms. West considers herself lucky. The tornado blew out her neighbor's garage windows and peeled back the Spanish-tiled roof. In another yard, a plastic chair hung precariously from a tree branch.

Don Keen, the golf pro at the Rancho Viejo Resort and Country Club, was headed out to work when the winds picked up and the sky darkened.

"All of a sudden, the whole house just started shaking. You could not hear," he said.

One tree fell onto his car, smashing the windows, while another skidded across the street, uprooted from a neighbor's yard. His children's swingset was upended and roof tiles dotted the yard.

Don Ocker, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service in Brownsville, said tornadoes often are formed in the northeastern corridor of a hurricane.

"The spiral bands are like a pinwheel. When they get out away from the center, they hit terrain and surface friction tends to cause some commotion," he said.

Dolly made landfall Friday morning just south of the Mexican port of Tampico, 250 miles south of the Texas border. It struck as a minimal hurricane, with winds of 80 mph, but started to weaken as it traveled northwest into the mountains.

Newspaper: Texas Democrats donate more than $6 million of 'soft money' to campaign

DALLAS (AP) — The national Democratic Party has reeled in more than $6 million in so-called "soft money" donations from Texans during the current election cycle, The Dallas Morning News reported in a copyright story Friday.

In a computer-assisted analysis of Federal Election Commission records, the newspaper also found that at least a dozen Texans have committed to raise $350,000 each for the party and President Clinton's re-election bid.

The so-called Democratic Dream Team members both contribute their own money and collect it from friends. The cash is donated as "soft money," which is exempt from federal contribution limits.

"I call them raisers and writers, and some do both," Truman Arnold, a Texarkana businessman and member of the elite group, told the newspaper.

"Some of these people just write checks and don't raise," he said. "Some don't have the ability to write, but are tremendous fund-raisers. And some are in between."

In a similar report published two weeks ago, the newspaper found that the Republican Party has received some $7.5 million in "soft money" from Texas.

Durable goods orders rise 1.6 percent in July

WASHINGTON (AP) — Orders to U.S. factories for durable goods climbed 1.6 percent in July, the government said in a report Friday that some analysts said showed little sign of an anticipated economic deceleration.

"It shows the economy is still very healthy," said economist Gary Thayer of A.G. Edwards & Sons, a St. Louis stock brokerage. "If it's slowing down, it's not slowing down significantly."

Amid other signs recently the economy may be braking on its own with few indications of inflation, Federal Reserve policy makers declined to raise short-term interest rates earlier this week.

But Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan told Congress last month that if economic growth does not slow soon, the central bank will be forced to boost rates to avoid a surge in prices. Fed policy makers next meet on Sept. 24.

The Commerce Department report aggravated those inflation concerns on Wall Street, where stock and bond prices fell and interest rates rose.

The report contained little suggestion of slowing in the industrial sector, which exhibited weakness earlier in the year when orders fell during three of the first four months.

"It shows the economy is still very healthy. If it's slowing down, it's not slowing down significantly."
— Gary Thayer
economist

It said most major categories shared in the orders growth to a seasonally adjusted $172.7 billion, up from $170 billion in June. Durable goods are products such as cars and computers expected to last more than three years.

The advance was the second in three months, including a big 4.2 percent jump in May. Orders had slipped a revised 0.2 percent in June, which was less than the original 0.8 percent estimate.

Also suggesting strength was a 1 percent increase in unfilled orders, the 10th advance in 11 months. A growing backlog suggests businesses may have to increase production facilities and manpower to meet demand.

Shipments, a measure of current activity, also advanced, a 0.7 percent gain that erased a 0.4 percent drop in June. It was the third increase in the last four months.

Still, some analysts questioned the data.

"The durables report seems out of line with other measures of industrial activity, notably reports from purchasing managers," said economist Cheryl Katz of Merrill Lynch & Co. in New York. "We suspect that the next month's data will be considerably more subdued."

The National Association of Purchasing Management reported earlier this month that a membership survey suggested manufacturing growth unexpectedly slowed in July, including a drop in orders.

Orders are considered a key gauge of the manufacturing sector, since continued gains could mean increased production and more jobs.

Transportation orders, one-fourth of the total, were unchanged in July, the only major category that failed to grow.

An increase in orders for motor vehicles was offset by a large decline in shipbuilding and tanks. Transportation orders have fallen in three of the last four months.

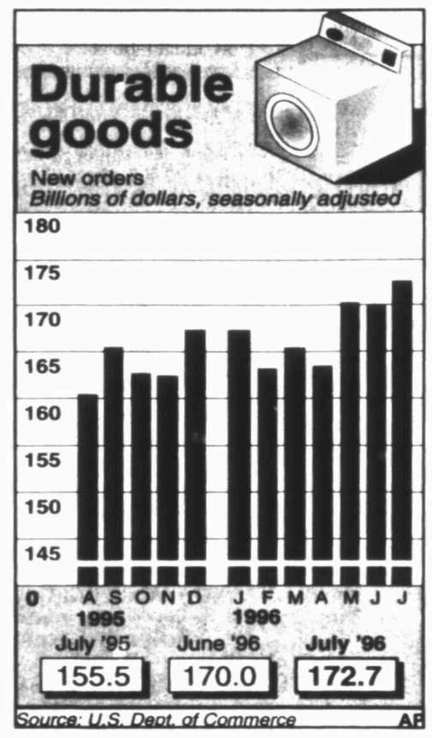

But excluding that category, orders were up 2.1 percent, the fourth straight advance.

Orders for electronic and other electrical equipment posted the largest gain, up 4.7 percent after a strong 3.9 percent advance in June. The increase was led by communications equipment.

But orders for industrial machinery and equipment and for primary metals both rose 2.1 percent. And orders for nonmilitary capital goods excluding aircraft jumped 3.6 percent, the second straight gain.

These orders often are a barometer of business plans to expand and modernize and have been a major source of economic strength during the current expansion.

Reflecting the weakness in shipbuilding and tanks, orders for military equipment plunged 36.5 percent. This volatile category posted a 26.4 percent increase in June.

Loretta Lynn's husband 'Mooney' dies at age 69

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — O.V. "Mooney" Lynn, who coaxed his wife, Loretta, onto the stage for the first time and watched as the coal miner's daughter rose to country music stardom, has died at 69.

The hard-drinking Lynn, who died at home Thursday, had been hospitalized repeatedly since 1993 because of heart failure and diabetes. His feet were amputated in recent years.

Lynn was portrayed by Tommy Lee Jones in the 1980 movie "Coal Miner's Daughter," based on his wife's autobiography.

Lynn had been a coal miner and moonshine runner (hence the nickname "Mooney") in Kentucky before he married Loretta in 1948 when she was just 13.

He bought his wife her first guitar for $17 for her 18th birthday in 1953, and in 1960 urged her to sing in public for the first time. She reluctantly did so. Months later, she had her first hit record, "I'm a Honky-Tonk Girl," and was on the road to stardom.

"If it wasn't for Doolittle (her nickname for him), there would be no career," Loretta Lynn wrote in her autobiography.

She wrote that Mooney went up to a bandleader at a meeting hall near where they lived in Washington state and said, "Hey, I got a girl here tonight who's the best country singer there is, next to Kitty Wells, and I ain't kidding."

The bandleader didn't let her sing that night, but did a week later.

More recently, Lynn ran the 1,140-acre Loretta Lynn Dude Ranch 70 miles west of Nashville, which the couple purchased in 1967. He periodically accompanied his wife on her concert tours.

He often wore a black cowboy hat with a warning inside: "Like hell it's yours." At the world premiere of "Coal Miner's Daughter" in Nashville, he chattered throughout and regaled the audience with comments like "Here comes a good part."

Lynn, a native of Johnson County, Ky., served in the Army during World War II. Loretta Lynn wrote in "Coal Miner's Daughter" that her husband got the name "Doolittle" as an infant and no one knows why.

Moss makes most of muck

■ Perry Moss fired a 65 amid rainy, sloppy conditions to grab a share of the lead after two rounds of the Permian Basin Open.

By Stewart Doreen
Sports Writer

ODESSA — The rain that slowly crept over the Permian Basin Friday turned The Club at Mission Dorado into a Water Wonderland.

But amid the rain slickers and umbrellas, Perry Moss turned the sloppy conditions into a firing range with a second-day 65 and took a share of the lead with a 10-under-par total after 36 holes of the Nike Permian Basin Open at the Club at Mission Dorado.

"That is a hell of a score today," said Deane Pappas, who is tied with Moss at 10-under-par. "He must have played a different course. It played tough and wasn't quite as easy as yesterday for us."

Pappas shot a 3-under-par 69 in the afternoon to earn a share of the lead. Pat Bates is alone in third place, just two shots back after a 69. Joe Durant and Brent Geiberger headline the list of players three shots back at 7-under.

Moss came into the round after a 67 on Thursday and proceeded to light up his first nine holes. He took advantage of the moist, smooth greens to make birdies on 11, 12, 13, 16 and 18 and put himself at 5-under at the turn. He followed with two birdies down the stretch.

"I got off to a good start and did the right things from there on in," said Moss, who has only one bogey in the tournament. "You can fire at the holes because the rain softens the greens up a lot. I hit a 3-iron on No. 9 that didn't roll six inches and knew then the greens were softening up."

Moss said the rain was bothersome but the absence of wind in the early morning played in his favor.

"The rain was getting to us but once I built my momentum, I kept it going all day," said Moss, who won the Nike Texarkana Open in 1992. "You can't worry about that. You have to go out there and play your best. You have to be ready for it. It was windy but not too bad. For you guys it was probably a calm day."

The conditions for the whole morning round were calm but the on-again, off-again rainfall proved to be disturbing for a field that tried hard but couldn't catch up to the early number put up by Moss.

"Although yesterday's 69 in the wind felt like survival, this felt like the ultimate survival,"

Lee faces scrimmage test with Riverside

By Terry Williamson

LEE FOOTBALL

PECOS — With a team that is virtually set on defense, Midland Lee's football Rebels are getting close to decision time on the offensive side of the ball.

Some of those decisions may be easier to make after today's 7 p.m. scrimmage with El Paso Riverside in Pecos as coach John Parchman puts his Rebels on the field against an outside opponent for the first time this year.

"We've had such competitive workouts since we started (Aug. 7) that it has made the whole team better," Parchman said. "Nearly every spot in the offensive line is up for grabs, and those are going to be good decisions to make because we've really had some kids come to the front in that area. We're going to have a little bit of depth in the offensive line, if not experience."

At least three heated battles are taking place for starting roles in the offensive line. Paul Villareal (6-3, 315) is one of the early surprises and he has moved into position to challenge Raymond Taylor (6-1, 248) at a tackle slot.

The other tackle slot is also a heated war early on with Matt Jewett (6-2, 225) and Jose Primera (6-1, 190). Jewett started a couple of games last year and Primera is a move-in from Sherman. Primera once played football at Abell Junior High before moving to Sherman.

Brad Gibson and Randy Quiroz are also fighting for one of the guard slots. These battles will be looked at closely in the scrimmage.

Also, it will be interesting to watch the tailback position. Junior Josh Norman, who rushed for over 700 yards last year as a sophomore backup, has been pushed this fall by senior Leroy Robinson. Robinson started as a fullback last year on the junior varsity and was moved to the tailback spot where he started to shine. He continues to improve. Most likely, both Norman and Robinson will see plenty of playing time. That means a fresh tailback can always be in the game.

"We are to the point where you earn battlefield promotions," Parchman said. "Nothing is concrete, but

Perisho Ks nine as Angels beat up Wichita 6-1

There will be no playoffs for the Midland Angels. No repeat Western Division title. And no Texas League championship appearance.

The Angels beat Wichita 6-1 Friday at Christensen Stadium. But with eight games left in the season, the top priority is to make the best impression possible on the major league organization. And maybe turn some heads with numbers or performances that could create an opening at the beginning of next season.

Angel pitcher Matt Perisho did that Friday, picking up a win with his Double-A high nine strikeouts. The 21-year-old who started the season in Class A Lake Elsinore gave up one run on a third-inning home run to Ryan Long but retired 16 of the next 19 batters he faced for a 3-1 record.

"At this point the organization tells you it's not how you start, it's how you finish," Perisho said. "That leaves a good taste

HIGH SCHOOL FOOTBALL '96: STANTON BUFFALOES

AP Laserphoto
Returning receiver Leo McCallister (left) and Matt Moore are helping to build a winning spirit in the Stanton Buffaloes' program, and recent success on the field has the players and fans anticipating another playoff season.

Breeding a winner

■ After back-to-back 1-9 seasons four years ago, Stanton coach Mark Cotton has the Buffaloes back on the road to becoming a Class 2A football power.

By Mike Butts
Sports Writer

STANTON — Success breeds success. For proof, check out the Stanton Buffaloes.

Only four seasons ago the Buffs were coming off back-to-back 1-9 campaigns. Today despite only five starters coming back and the graduation of seven first-team all-district players, Stanton anticipates a return to the playoffs.

"I was in junior high back in those 1-9 seasons," senior lineman Matt Moore said. "And there was not spirit. People didn't go to the games because they felt, 'Why go? They're just going to get beat.' But now we have tradition. When people see Stanton on their schedule they know they better be ready to play us."

With a little rebuilding the 9-3 Buffaloes of last season could again play beyond the regular season and continue their recent winning ways.

"We're kind of looking at it like reloading," Stanton second-year coach Mark Cotton said. "We feel like we have very capable kids. It might just take a while."

One reason Cotton feels good about the talent level of his team is its size and speed.

"We don't have a great burner but our overall team speed is very good," Cotton said. "Fourteen kids on our varsity ran under a five (seconds) flat 40.

"We probably have more size then we have had since I've been here. We're not huge but we're adequate."

The Buffaloes four-year turnaround culminated last year with the school's first football playoff appearance in six years. Head coach Bill Grissom took the team from a 1-9 1991 to the brink of the playoffs in '94. With the foundation set, Cotton guided the team home last year with a second-place finish in district and a 28-6 bi-district win over Iraan.

Cotton and his team can testify to the momentum created by the gradual improvement over the last four years. In that time the Buffs have gone from 1-9 to 3-6, 5-4, 7-3 and 9-3.

Interest in football at Stanton has increased with the increase in wins.

"Our numbers are up tremendously in football participation," Cotton said. "And I think that's because of our success. We're at a level now where the playoff goal is something we have a chance at every year."

Wrenching a newly-aligned District 6-2A title away from state-ranked Iraan will not be easy for the Buffaloes. But a second place finish in a district that appears to have only one other playoff contender — McCamey — is

Rain suspends Series twice

Pro Golf Roundup

AKRON, Ohio — Heavy rain and lightning suspended Friday's second round of the World Series of Golf with most of the field still on the course.

Defending champion Greg Norman, starting the day four shots off the pace, birdied four of the first six holes to jump into contention before the elements ended his round on No. 9.

Paul Goydos and Billy Mayfair, the first-round co-leaders along with Hidemichi Tanaka, each had a birdie and a par on their two holes to move to five under and share the lead.

Norman, one shot back along with Tanaka, said the suspension — after an earlier stoppage of more than 3 1/2 hours — wouldn't affect his momentum.

"I'll come out tomorrow, hit it in the middle of the ninth green, make a birdie and keep going," he said.

It was the third straight week that a PGA Tour event has had a round suspended by inclement weather, following the PGA Championship and last week's International.

All but five players in the 43-man field were still on the course when play was suspended. Play will resume Saturday morning for those 38 players, with the third round beginning immediately after completion of the second round.

Lightning, high winds and heavy rain had caused a 3 hour, 39 minute suspension earlier Friday. Norman spent the time talking in the locker room, watching TV and reading. Mayfair took a nap. Goydos played computer golf.

The leaders didn't tee off until 6 p.m.

Star Bank LPGA Classic

DAYTON, Ohio — Pat Hurst shot a 5-under-par 67 Friday and held a one-stroke lead over six players after the rain-delayed first round of the Star Bank LPGA Classic.

Hurst was unaware of how she stacked up with the leaders as she was coming in because the people working the scoreboards at the Country Club of the North in suburban Beavercreek were sent home during a two-hour rain delay.

"I didn't know I had the lead," Hurst said. "But at the break the leader was four under. I was happy with my round."

The group at 68 included Nancy Lopez, Elaine Crosby, Laura Davies, Kelly Robbins, Robin Walton and Marianne Morris.

The rain seemed to have helped Hurst, the tour's rookie of the year in 1995.

After the delay she birdied four of five holes.

Hurst has four top 10 finishes and is 26th on the current money list with $155,538, although she hasn't won a tournament. Chris Johnson, the defending champion, finished with a 1-over 73.

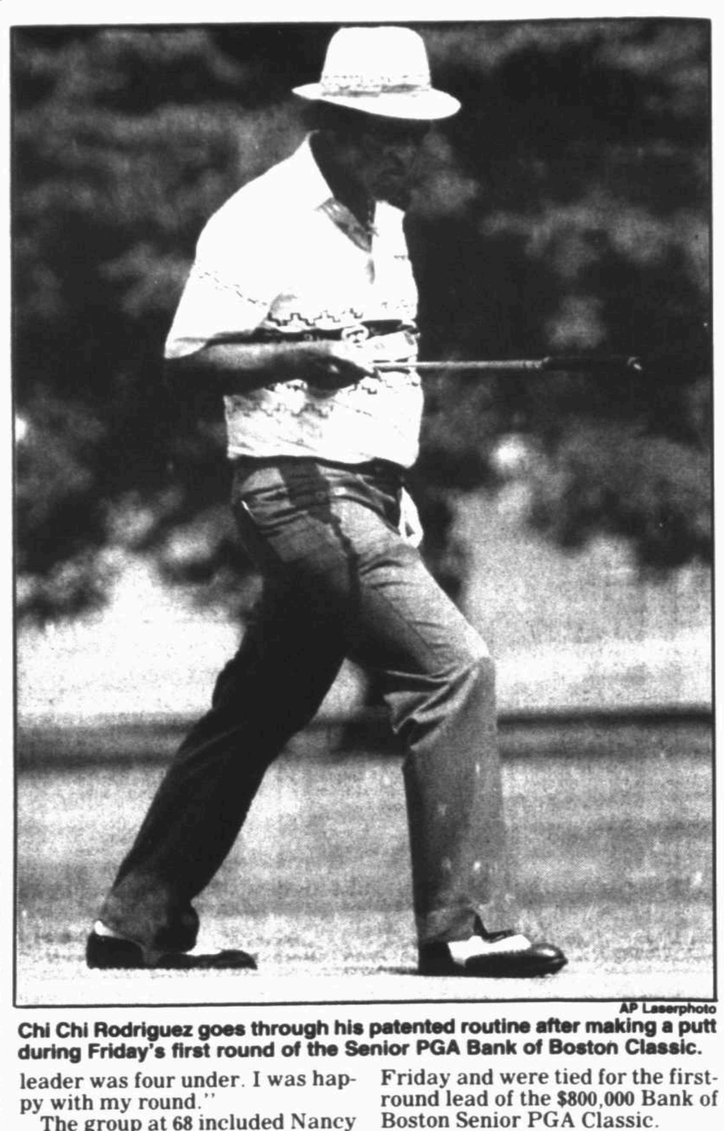

Bank Of Boston Classic

CONCORD, Mass. — Defending champion Isao Aoki, who offset an opening bogey with five front-nine birdies, and Larry Ziegler, who birdied his last two holes, shot 67s Friday and were tied for the first-round lead of the $800,000 Bank of Boston Senior PGA Classic.

Raymond Floyd, Frank Conner, Ben Smith and Tom Wargo each had 4-under 68s on the 6,775-yard Nashawtuc Country Club course and there was a 10-way jam at 69.

Aoki, who has won two of six career Senior PGA Tour this year, bogeyed the opening par-3 before making birdies on five of the next eight holes and requiring just 12 putts on the front nine. He had another two birdies around a bogey on the first four holes after the turn before parring in.

Lee Trevino, the tour's leading money winner with earnings of nearly $6.5 million, finished with a 72. Chi Chi Rodriguez, winner of three consecutive events here from 1986-88, faltered with a 75.

NIKE: High winds and rain plague round said Rick Cramer, who also went off in the morning and stood at minus-7 after two rounds. "It started to rain on the first tee."

"When things get wet, you have to grip the club tighter and are not as freed up as you normally are. You think about things that you usually don't think about. My short game was keeping me in."

In the afternoon high winds added to the pleasure of playing with wet socks and slick grips, but Pappas kept everything together pretty well under the conditions.

"The course played a lot longer," said Pappas, who made four birdies and one bogey on Friday. "We were hitting longer clubs, and with the wind, we were playing them on the safe side. You want to take it as it comes and keep your head on your shoulders."

Pappas, a South African who finished in the top 10 on the Hooters tour in 1995, will be paired with Moss in today's final pairing. The 28-year-old said his mind-set on the round would be the same no matter where he would have been placed.

"There will be no change in what I do," Pappas said. "I just want to get a good night's sleep and stay patient. I also get to the course on time."

NIKE NOTES: The cut for this weekend's play will be at 2-under-par which is three strokes head of the 1995 mark (1-over-par). It will be the third time in the tournament's five-year history that the 2-under mark was the cut. In 1992, the cut was also 1-over-par... Moss' 7-under-par 65 was the best score of the day... Only four of the top 10 players on the Nike money list are playing this week in the Nike Permian Basin Open. All four players made the cut... One player in the tournament's top 12 hails from the Lone Star State. San Antonio's Anthony Rodriguez is among the nine players tied for fourth at 7-under par. Andrews' Chad Campbell and former Midland Lee star Bobby Gee are among the top 27. Both players are tied at 5-under... For the tournament, the hardest hole in terms of scoring was No. 9. The par-4 is playing at a 4.32 stroke average. The easiest hole is the 11th. The par-5 is getting abused by the field. The scoring average is 4.581. There have been 13 eagles, 118 birdies and only 22 bogeys or worse...

Gee taking steps to join golf tour

By Stewart Doreen

'Whenever you win its a great feeling. It is a treat for guys in my position to get out here and play. Everything revolves around us.'
— Bobby Gee, on playing on the Nike Tour

ODESSA — When trying to get into the race with the big boys on the Nike Tour, the hardest steps may be the first ones.

Former Midlander Bobby Gee is one of those players still trying to get those steps down, but with his best-ever start at the Nike Permian Basin Open under his belt, he is hoping his time to run may be now.

"I feel super," said Gee, who graduated from Midland Lee in 1987. "This time I am doing what I can do. I am trying to hit fairways and greens and not making any stupid mistakes. I just want to stick to my game plan."

This is Gee's fourth trip to the Nike PBO and thanks to Friday's performance, he earned his second trip into weekend play. After a 69 on Thursday, Gee came out with a hit-and-miss round that turned out be a strong one in the end. From the get-go when he bogeyed No. 10 (his first hole) he found answers, plenty of them. Gee ended up making three birdies on the front side and one on the back to go with two bogeys.

"Golf is an up-and-down game," said Gee, who made birdies on holes 14-16. "I've been trying to level that. Consistency is the key even if you are not playing well."

Gee was the Southwest Conference champion in 1990 at Texas A&M. Since graduating in 1992, he has been playing the mini-tours primarily in Texas and Florida. He counts five tournament wins to-date and says that success is still the best feeling, one that has magnified this week.

"Whenever you win that is a great feeling," said Gee, who earned a communications degree at A&M. "It is a treat for guys in my position to get out here and play. Everything revolves around us. On the mini-tour, if we play they don't care. They would rather us not be playing on their course. It is nice to have people that care."

After his round Gee saw many players that were not as fortunate as he. In the 144-man field, only 63 made it to weekend play and being on the top side brings out different feelings.

"There are mixed emotions," Gee said. "I have been on that other side a lot and seen both sides of the coin.

Gee has tried to qualify for the Nike and PGA Tour but has learned the painful lessons that the PGA Tour School can offer. It has sent him searching for his game. He has gone to sports psychologists and taken trips to nationally-renown instructor Dave Pelz to work on his short game. All in all, he has had to search himself and make progression in his game and in his mind.

"It might be good thing that I didn't make it right away. I probably couldn't have stayed out there too long," Gee said. "I have played a lot of tournaments with money pushing me and that shouldn't be it. It (the reason for playing out here) should be to make the step to get to the tour.

"I have tried to put that aside and been focusing on my game," he said.

Today, Gee will go off at 10:54 a.m. He is not only trying to make his run at making some money but making sure the step he is taking is a sure one.

"I have done a few things to help me grow," said Gee, who says his Dad will come in from Fort Worth to watch him play. "I feel I am ready to go."

AREA NOTABLES: Andrews' Chad Campbell joins Gee as the only two area golfers to make it to the weekend. Campbell, playing in his first professional tournament shot an even-par 72 to stay at five-under for the tournament. He had mixed feelings about the round.

"Nothing was going right and I didn't play well at all," said Campbell, whose 67 on Thursday included a 29 on the back nine. "I actually scored a lot better than I hit it. I should have been at least 2-under. I would have been happy with 70."

Woods moves into Amateur semis

By Ron Sirak
AP Golf Writer

CORNELIUS, Ore. — A growing sense of inevitability simmered in the sizzling sun at Pumpkin Ridge Golf Club on Friday as Tiger Woods moved relentlessly toward his third consecutive U.S. Amateur title.

The question of whether Woods will win is becoming more and more like asking if he will turn professional. Everyone knows the answer. It's all just a matter of time.

For the fourth straight match, Woods toyed with an opponent early then put the hammer down on the holes that bridge the two nines.

The victim in the quarterfinals was D.A. Points, a 19-year-old LSU student. Points was only 1-down after Woods lost his ball in the woods on No. 7. But Woods birdied Nos. 9 and 12, hitting to six feet both times, to go 3-up and closed the match out on No. 16, winning 3-and-2.

Woods is two victories away from becoming the first player to win three consecutive amateur titles — Saturday's semifinals and Sunday's 36-hole final.

Woods plays Stanford teammate Joel Kribel in the semifinals. Kribel was 1-down after Duke Delcher holed out from the fairway for an eagle on No. 17. But Kribel eagled No. 18 to even the match and won on the first sudden-death hole with a birdie.

Robert Floyd, son of Raymond, also advanced to the semifinals with a 2-up victory over Brian Novoa.

Steve Scott defeated Buddy Marucci, the man Woods beat in last year's finals, 1-up by winning the last hole in the other quarterfinal match.

It was the 16th consecutive victory for Woods in U.S. Amateur play, one off the record by Harvie Ward in the late 1950s.

Asked if he was playing better than ever, Woods said: "There's a simple answer to that — yes.

"Every amateur so far I've gotten better."

Woods is clearly on a plateau no other amateur can touch.

It was already almost 90 degrees on its way to near 100 when Woods and Points walked to the first tee shortly after 10:30. Even Points applauded when Woods was introduced, as if realizing it was all a matter of time.

Woods drove with his 2-iron as he has all week on the hole but this time played it down the right side of the fairway with a high fade instead the low draw left he hit in his previous matches.

BYU QB Sarkisian not afraid of Aggies

By Bob Mims

Pigskin Classic

PROVO, Utah — Don't take Brigham Young's Steve Sarkisian wrong. He thinks Texas A&M is a fine team that deserves its No.13 national ranking going into Saturday's Pigskin Classic.

But the senior quarterback is not awed by the Aggies. Indeed, Sarkisian believes the team from College Station, Texas will be lucky to escape Cougar Stadium with its ranking intact.

"Granted, they are a very good team," said Sarkisian, who ranked third in NCAA total offense (297.97 yards per game) last year. "But they won't just come up here and step on the field and expect to beat us. It's going to be a battle.

"We're not overmatched by any stretch of the imagination," he added, noting the Aggies (9-3 in 1995) are favored by a touchdown.

BYU, which missed its first bowl game appearance in 18 years after finishing 7-4 last season, looks for a resurgence. Sarkisian predicts that with a veteran receiver corps and seasoned defense, the Cougars are due.

"This is our year. We have a very good team, we're playing very well and I think it's going to show on Saturday," he declared.

But Sarkisian could be in for a quarterback dual. Hungry for success is A&M's Branndon Stewart, who transferred to the Aggies after tiring of Peyton Manning shadow at Tennessee.

As a highly recruited high school championship star at Stephenville, Texas, Stewart passed for 2,558 yards and 36 touchdowns, running for 21 more with 1,516 yards afoot. It has been 21 months since he played in a game.

"I'm definitely ready for the season to start," the 6-foot-3, 215-pound junior, hailed by the Aggies for his mobility, size and strength, said recently. "I just see it that everyone is excited that I'm going to have a chance to play and they want to see how I'm going to do."

Stewart will call signals behind a seasoned line averaging 300 pounds, but the Aggies' running backs and receivers are predominantly sophomores. Still, the Cougars must contend with the last year's A&M reception leader, senior flanker Albert Connell (41 catches, seven touchdowns).

Sarkisian also hopes to make more of a reputation for sturdiness in the backfield, where the Aggies vaunted "Wrecking Crew" defense — a key to coach R.C. Slocum's 7-0 mark in A&M openers, and ranked third last year in the NCAA — hopes to catch him.

"I've put on about seven pounds, but my body fat has decreased and I've put on a lot more muscle. I worked hard in the off-season, trying to strengthen my arm; that's helped a lot," the 6-2, 210-pounder said.

Sarkisian, who threw for 3,437 yards and 20 touchdowns last year, looks for another good season in the air with wide receivers K.O. Kealaluhi and Kaipo McGuire and tight end Itula Mili back.

Kealaluhi pulled down 28 passes for 483 yards and three touchdowns last year, while McGuire was 24-359 for two TDs. Mili finished with three scores on a 36-440 performance.

Saturday's nationally televised game also puts Slocum, the nation's second-winningest Division I-A coach after five or more seasons (68-15-2, or 81.2 percent), against Edwards, who is eighth at 214-80-3, or 72.6 percent.

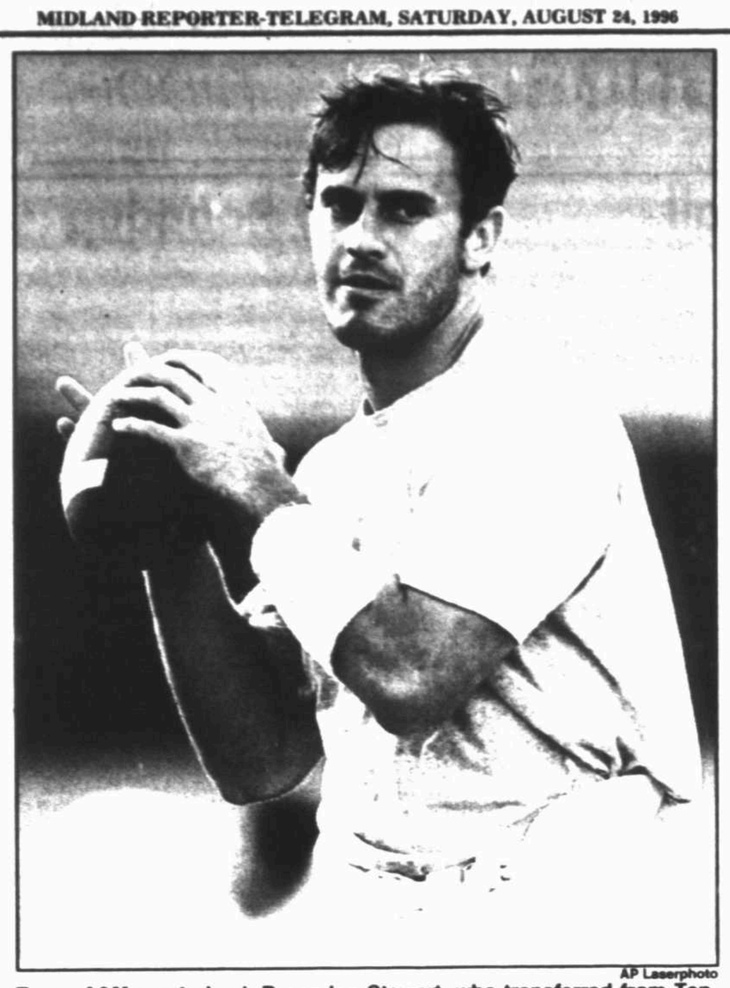

Edwards, marking his 25th season as BYU's head coach, also expects much from Sarkisian and Co.

"He's much more ready and experienced this year," Edwards said. "He has good knowledge of the game, he moves around well, he's smart and has good anticipation."

Slocum agrees: "Sarkisian is a good player and an excellent scrambler. We'll have our work cut out for us to get pressure on him."

But the A&M coach looks forward to what he expects will be Stewart's own blossoming in his Aggies' debut.

'I've been pleased. He's just about where I thought he would be. I've seen some good things, and I've seen some inexperienced mistakes," Slocum said. "I think he will continue to improve as the season progresses."

Southern Cal without top back for Classic

Kickoff Classic

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — There's no point in worrying because there's no time. As the Southern California Trojans began to complete their preparations for the earliest opening game in their history, the Kickoff Classic against Penn State on Sunday afternoon at Giants Stadium, the loss of the suspended tailback Delon Washington sounded like just another minor complication.

"He injured his hamstring early in training camp and hadn't practiced a lot anyway," the senior quarterback Brad Otton said.

"We'll be fine at tailback," said John Robinson, the coach of the Trojans. "If we don't play well, it will not be because of that position."

Washington, a junior at the position that has defined many of USC's finest moments, was ruled out of the game for reasons the university said did not relate to football.

With four new starters on the offensive line, including the 18-year-old, 300-pound right guard Travis Claridge, and a sellout crowd of the Penn State persuasion, the loss of Washington was just one additional factor to overcome.

Rodney Sermons, who was listed as a possible starter at tailback before Washington's suspension, ran for 244 yards last season, the team's second-highest total. He gained 63 yards on 13 carries, with two touchdowns, in a 1-point victory over Stanford. LaVale Woods, the fourth-leading rusher a year ago, gained 146 yards on 28 carries last season and scored two touchdowns against both Arizona State and California.

Shawn Walters, a senior tailback who has gained 1,855 yards in his career, will not be available until the team's fourth game, at Houston on Sept. 21. Walters, who was suspended for a year for receiving payments from an agent, will miss three more games.

The Trojans, who were considered a national championship contender before losing at Notre Dame last season, will begin this season with an offense that will take time to develop. The possibility of losing a game before Labor Day, a factor that has led a number of coaches to avoid the Kickoff Classic, was not enough to discourage Robinson.

Taiwan tough foe in LL World Series

By Jeffrey Bair
Associated Press Writer

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. — Taiwan's players swing harder, pitch faster and make fewer errors than the Rhode Island team they will face Saturday in the championship of the 50th Little League World Series.

This year, Taiwan has beaten four opponents by a combined score of 49-6.

The matchups suggest the rough-and-tumble U.S. team from Cranston, a suburb of Providence, has little chance against a country whose teams have won the series 11 of the last 22 years by scores such as 17-3, 21-1 and 12-0.

But manager Mike Varrato and his players have been willing to improvise in the series so far, especially on the basepaths with double steals and steals of home, and may do so again Saturday.

A change in strategy helped Kirkland, Wash., beat Taiwan 6-0 in the 1982 championship game.

"We put down a lot of bunts that day, and they weren't able to field them cleanly. They made a lot of errors," said Cody Webster, Kirkland's pitcher in 1982 and now a Little League coach and Little League Hall of Famer. "And they could not hit my curveball."

Kirkland struck out 12 and hit a home run in the win. He got letters of congratulations from around the world and ended up on the cover of Sports Illustrated.

"We were really juiced up to win that day, and we had 35,000 people in the stands all cheering for us, and all speaking our language," Webster said.

He said the Rhode Island team needs to stay loose and remember that "if you end up losing 20-0, it's not a problem."

The only other team to beat Taiwan in a final was Trumbull, Conn., a 5-2 winner in 1989.

Taiwan will pitch left-hander Cheng Chi-hung, a 12-3 winner over the mostly American team from Saudi Arabia on Tuesday. Cranston is expected to start Tom Michael, who had both its losses in the preliminary round.

To beat Taiwan, "you have to have a lot of confidence in yourself," Dominican Republic manager Cesar Nicolas Felipe said through an interpreter. "You have to fight hard in every inning."

LEE: Offensive positions still up in the air

these kids this year have been so competitive that they are getting better by the day. It's a good situation."

Lee's highly-regarded defense, with seven returning starters, is rock solid. About the only change here is a tweak in the armor, so to speak. Lee has put Corry Pertile at the middle linebacker slot and Tomball move-in Kyle Anderson to the strong side linebacker post, just a switch of positions from last spring. Returning starter Michael Hall, who played middle linebacker the last two seasons, has been moved to the weakside linebacker post while Stephan Westphal, who was at the weakside linebacker position last year, has been placed at defensive end.

"We think the moves we have made on defense are the right decisions. It works in practice, but we need to see them under fire," Parchman said. "Those are areas we will be looking at."

The Rebels defeated Riverside, 35-13, in the 1994 area playoffs.

"They are wide open and will throw the ball," Parchman said. "We'll get a good look at our defensive backs."

Parchman says the scrimmage will consist of two rounds of 20 plays each, giving a look at both first and second team units. Then two full quarters (without punting or kickoffs) will be held. The scrimmage will end by working on the new tie-breaker rule that goes into effect this year in district and playoff games only.

"I didn't really think there was anything wrong with the way we had been deciding ties (penetrations)," Parchman said, "but if you are going to use it in district and playoff games, you better have a plan and work on it. At least, by doing this in the scrimmage, if we are ever in a tie position, we won't be going into it blind.

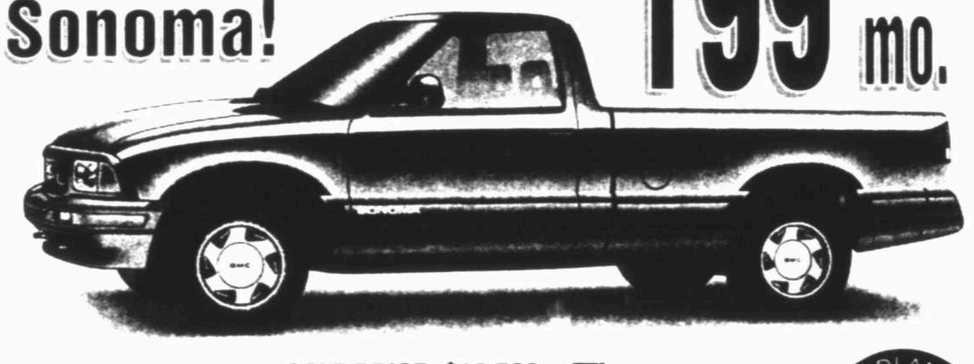

Lee tied Abilene Cooper, 14-14, last year in regular season play. They also had two playoff ties in the 1994 state playoffs.

Lee will have two scrimmages this year since the Rebels didn't hold spring training workouts. The Rebels will travel to Fort Stockton on Aug. 30 to face El Paso Socorro, a team that Lee survived 28-26 in last season's area playoff game.

Aguilera stops Rangers

By Ron Lesko
AP Sports Writer

Rangers . . .2
Twins 9

MINNEAPOLIS — Rick Aguilera pitched nine innings for the first time in seven years and struck out a career high 10 Friday night to lead the Minnesota Twins to a 9-2 victory over the Texas Rangers.

The win came with Minnesota expected to announce a new longterm contract for All-Star second baseman Chuck Knoblauch. In the middle of the seventh inning, the Twins told the crowd of 16,166 they would carry Knoblauch's postgame news conference live in the Metrodome.

Dave Hollins and Marty Cordova each had two-run doubles and Roberto Kelly went 4-for-5 for Minnesota, which won for just the second time in six games and closed within four games of Chicago in the wild-card race.

It was only the second loss in six games for the AL West-leading Rangers, who came in with a .293 batting average, best in the majors, and had scored at least 10 runs in four of their previous five games.

But they couldn't do much against Aguilera (7-5), who pitched an eight-hitter. The right-hander pitched a complete game in a 2-0 loss at Detroit on June 21, but hadn't gone all nine innings since Sept. 29, 1989, his last start for the Twins before they made him closer.

He surpassed his personal strikeout record of nine he set May 6, 1987, while pitching for the New York Mets against Cincinnati. He struck out the side in the seventh, then pitched out of a two-on, no-out jam in the eighth by striking out Rusty Greer and getting Juan Gonzalez to ground into a double play.

Aguilera's only mistake was a two-run homer by Kevin Elster in the fifth.

The Twins took a 2-0 lead in the second on a sacrifice fly by Pat Meares and Knoblauch's RBI single. They added four more in the fourth, the last two coming on Hollins' bases-loaded double. That made it 6-0 and chased Texas starter Darren Oliver (10-6).

The Rangers got two back in the fifth on Elster's two-run homer, his 21st of the season. That tied the team record for homers by a shortstop, set by Toby Harrah in 1974.

Cordova's two-run double in the sixth made it 8-2, and Kelly followed with his fourth hit one out later to make it 9-2.

Notes: The Twins have called up left-handed pitcher Travis Miller from Class AAA Salt Lake and demoted righty Scott Klingenbeck. Miller, the Twins' first-round supplementary pick in 1994, was 8-10 with a 4.83 ERA for the Buzz. ... Juan Gonzalez extended his hitting streak to 15 games with a fourth-inning single. ... Paul Molitor extended his hitting streak to 10 games with a sixth-inning single. He needs 34 hits for 3,000. ... Kelly is hitting .406 in 36 right-field starts. ... Mickey Tettleton is hitting .167 in his last nine games.

Chipper chops down Cubs 4-0

Associated Press

NL Roundup

ATLANTA — Chipper Jones hit two home runs and Greg Maddux improved to 4-0 lifetime against his former Chicago teammates as the Atlanta Braves defeated the Cubs 4-3 Friday.

Jones connected in the first and fifth innings off Steve Trachsel, hiking his home run total to 28 and his hitting streak to a career-high 17 games. Jones, who has 98 RBIs, has hit two home runs in a game three times this season.

Maddux (12-10), working at least seven innings for the ninth straight game, allowed three runs — two earned — on four hits in seven innings. He struck out seven and did not walk a batter in improving to 10-2 at home.

Reds 6-3, Marlins 5-6

MIAMI — Al Leiter struck out 11 and Gary Sheffield hit his 36th home run to help the Florida Marlins beat the weary Cincinnati Reds 8-3 Friday night and gain a split of their doubleheader.

Jeff Brantley escaped a bases-loaded jam in the ninth inning of the opener and the Reds shook off a short night's sleep to win 6-5.

Cincinnati's 13-inning, rain-delayed 3-2 victory in Atlanta ended at 1:47 Friday morning. The Reds reached their Fort Lauderdale hotel at 5:30 a.m. and took the field against the Marlins 11 hours later.

Leiter (13-11) allowed five hits and three runs in 6 2-3 innings. The left-hander increased his season strikeout total to 161, a career high, and his 11 strikeouts matched a career best.

Sheffield's three-run homer with one out in the sixth knocked out Kevin Jarvis (6-6), who allowed eight runs. Sheffield, who doubled home a run in the fourth, has 99 RBI.

The defeat was Reds' first in five doubleheaders this season.

In the opener, Cincinnati's Giovanni Carrara (1-0) pitched seven strong innings for his first National League victory.

Marc Valdes (0-2) allowed four earned runs in 4 2-3 innings.

Pirates 7, Rockies 3

DENVER — Jermaine Allensworth emerged from an 0-for-12 slump with his first career four-hit game as Pittsburgh won for just the second time in nine games at Coors Field and put together its first three-game winning streak in two months.

Jon Lieber (6-4) matched his career best with eight strikeouts in 6 2-3 innings. He gave up six hits without a walk, and Francisco Cordova pitched the ninth for his 12th save.

The Pirates, who hadn't won three straight since June 26, jumped on Kevin Ritz (13-10) for three first-inning runs as Jeff King singled in two and later scored on a double steal with Mark Johnson.

Phillies 7, Padres 4

SAN DIEGO — Todd Zeile hit his career-high 20th home run and Philadelphia starter Rich Hunter won his first game since April as San Diego's winning streak was snapped at four.

Zeile, who narrowly missed homering in the second inning, gave the Phillies their first lead at 4-3 with a 415-foot home run off Padres starter Tim Worrell (7-7) in the sixth.

Hunter (2-4) gave up three runs on six hits in five innings. He beat St. Louis 4-2 April 13, and was 0-3 in six starts since.

Ricky Bottalico pitched the ninth for his 27th save for the Phillies, who have won three of four.

Dodgers 7, Mets 5

LOS ANGELES — Eric Karros and Raul Mondesi hit consecutive two-run doubles in the fifth inning, and Todd Worrell broke his own Los Angeles record with his 33rd save.

Ramon Martinez (10-6) allowed four runs and six hits over seven-plus innings. The right-hander was helped by two double-play grounders, both by slumping Carlos Baerga.

Newfield steals show, Brewers win

AL Roundup

CLEVELAND — Marc Newfield singled home the go-ahead run in the 11th inning Friday night, lifting Milwaukee over Cleveland 6-5.

Newfield, who threw out Manny Ramirez at the plate in the eighth to keep the game tied 5-5, hit a line drive to center off Jose Mesa (2-4) that landed just out of the reach of a diving Kenny Lofton.

Doug Jones (2-0) retired all four batters he faced, and Mike Fetters pitched the 11th for his 24th save.

Jaha hit a three-run homer in the third, and doubled and scored in the sixth as Milwaukee took a 5-4 lead in the opener of the first series between the teams since Albert Belle decked Fernando Vina in the basepath in Milwaukee.

Yankees 5, Athletics 3

NEW YORK — Dwight Gooden pitched New York past its first-inning problems before leaving after the fifth with a migraine headache, and Mariano Rivera provided late relief.

The Yankees had been outscored 21-1 in the opening inning of their previous six games, but Gooden escaped unscathed when he retired Geronimo Berroa on a fly ball with runners on second and third to end the inning.

New York found itself in trouble again in the ninth when Mark McGwire came up with runners at the corners and two outs. But Rivera struck out McGwire for his fifth save.

Angels 2, Orioles 0

BALTIMORE — Chili Davis and Jim Edmonds hit solo homers, and Shawn Boskie pitched 6 1-3 solid innings as California extended its winning streak to three games.

Boskie (12-6) allowed four hits and permitted only one runner past second base. The right-hander struck out seven, walked three and hit a batter.

Boskie outpitched David Wells (9-12), who allowed five hits in eight-plus innings. Wells' only lapses came when Davis hit the first pitch of the second inning over the right-field wall and Edmonds homered to almost the same spot in the ninth.

Blue Jays 4, White Sox 2

CHICAGO — Pat Hentgen pitched his fourth straight complete game and won for the ninth time in 10 starts as Toronto won its sixth straight.

Hentgen (16-7) settled down after a allowing five hits and two runs in the first two innings. He allowing only one more hit, walked none and struck out six.

Tigers 3, Royals 2

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Travis Fryman, Bobby Higginson and Tony Clark homered off Kevin Appier in the seventh inning to send Kansas City to its sixth straight loss.

Appier (11-9) had allowed only a pair of singles entering the seventh when Fryman led off with a towering homer, his 18th, to give Detroit a 1-0 lead. One out later, Higginson hit his 20th home run and Clark followed with his 15th as Detroit won its fourth straight.

HOUSTON — Ray Lankford homered in the third inning and Donovan Osborne pitched seven solid innings Friday ight as the St. Louis Cardinals moved into first place in the NL Central with a 1-0 victory over the Houston Astros.

The Cardinals played sparkling defense in beating Houston for the seventh straight time this season and took a half-game lead over the Astros in the opener of their four-game series.

Osborne (11-8) allowed five hits, struck out six and walked six. He was supported by three highlight catches, two off fly balls by Brian Hunter.

Brian Jordan made a running catch on the warning track in the right-field corner in the third and Lankford made a diving catch in center field off Hunter to end the fifth.

Lankford ran hard to the warning track in right-center field on Derek Bell's fly ball and caught it to end the seventh.

Dennis Eckersley pitched the ninth for his 22nd save.

The Astros stranded 12 runners in spoiling an outstanding performance by Darryl Kile (10-8).

He fought to keep the lead down to 1-0 after Lankford hit his 20th homer over the right-field fence with two outs in the third.

Jordan and John Mabry singled to start the second but Kile struck out Gary Gaetti and Tom Pagnozzi before Alicea grounded out.

Osborne loaded the bases with two outs in the third, but James Mouton grounded out to end the threat. Mouton grounded out again in the fifth, stranding runners at second and third.

Jordan and Mabry opened the fourth with singles but Jordan was thrown out by center fielder Hunter trying to take third on Mabry's hit.

In eight innings, Kile allowed seven hits, struck out nine and walked one.

Notes: St. Louis is 25-9 against NL Central teams and the Astros are 18-22. ... Brian Jordan had two singles and has hit safely in 17 of his last 19 games. ... Colorado completed a 3-game sweep of the Cardinals Thursday. The last time St. Louis came to the Astrodome was May 22 after being swept by the Rockies but the Cardinals then swept the Astros. ... The Astros had a paid crowd of 35,554, boosting their season home attendance to 1,526,212 for an average of 24,226 per game.

in their mouths. Everybody on the team is trying to finish strong."

The Angels have fallen to the depths of the Western Division in the Texas League's second half. They have played themselves out of the division race by losing seven of their last nine. But Perisho dropped his earned run average from a solid 3.26 to 2.98, a stellar mark for any pitcher in hitter-friendly Christensen Stadium.

Perisho got into trouble early in the game. He gave up a double to Kevin Long to lead off the game and then walked Steve Sisco with one out. In the second inning he walked a batter and hit another with a pitch.

But the Angel starter got out of both frames without giving up a hit.

"That kind of allowed me to know that I had decent stuff," Perisho said. "I just bared down and got more focused for the rest of the game."

Long smashed one of the hardest hit home runs of the year on a line drive over the left field wall with two outs in the third. It was the first offering from Perisho and took about 2.5 seconds to leave the park. But after that Perisho retired seven batters in a row.

"It was a real hard-hit ball. I made a mistake and didn't get the pitch where I wanted to and he did his job," Perisho said.

The Angels scored all their runs in the third, fourth and fifth innings and used a 10-hit attack to beat Wichita for the 12th time this season. Basilio Ortiz led Midland's offense going 3-for-4 and scoring two runs.

Perisho gave up just two walks and didn't give up more than one hit in any inning.

"I didn't have a good fastball and I had to use my off-speed stuff," Perisho said. "That gives me confidence to know I can win with my off-speed pitches. It was a quality outing."

The Angels quickly came back from Wichita's 1-run lead with three runs in the third. Ortiz and Greg Shockey had RBI hits and a run scored on an error. Jovino Carvajal drove in Randy Betten, who had doubled, in the fourth.

Ty Boykin then hit a two-run homer in the fifth.

ANGEL NOTES: Midland came into the game with the worst team ERA in the league — 5.25 ... Ortiz broke out of an 0-11 slump with his three-hit night ... With one start remaining for each pitcher, Shreveport's Keith Foulke has taken over the league strikeout lead from the Angels' Matt Beaumont, 127 to 126.

STANTON: Buffs primed to build on 1995 likely.

For returning receiver Leo McCalister, the playoffs are not an "if" but a "when" proposition.

"It's going to take us a while to get used to each other, but I think we'll have it down by playoff time," said McCalister.

The senior split end and safety joins two other returners on offense. And several other offensive starters had playing experience last year.

At 6-foot-2 and 225 pounds, Moore will hold down both lines at the tackle position. Tailback Chris Carrol rushed for over 500 yards and Mark Carrillo, who will start at fullback, was a part-time player.

The quarterback will be first-year starter Kyle Herm, a talented sophomore who moved up from the junior varsity last season after the fifth game. He takes over for the graduated Taylor Looney, who led the team in 1995.

"Kyle is a very talented athlete," Cotton said. "He's been brought up in the atmosphere of pressure situations in athletics. He'll have a lot to learn but he'll be OK.

"He's got excellent speed and a great arm."

Tight end John Bryan (6-1, 205) filled in for several games at the position last year. Opposite Moore at right tackle will be junior Kason Anderson or James Taylor. Senior Mike Dahl and junior Josh Carson will play center.

The guards will come from the group of sophomore Jeremy Smith, senior Adrian Noyola and junior Jason Flores (225).

Cotton said offensive line and defensive tackles are the team's big question marks. But overall he expects a lot from his defense. So does Moore.

"We have a great defense," Moore said. "I believe it will be our strength. I think we'll be able to get a lot of people to the ball."

Carrillo returns to linebacker after an all-district season and 118 tackles. Bryan and Jody Louder, who Cotton said "has been real impressive so far," fill out the linebacking crew.

Carson will play tackle with Moore and senior Josh Madison, sophomore Chad Smith and Brett Hull will play the end positions.

McCalister will play in the defensive backfield along with Herm, who started at cornerback after getting called up from the JV. Other secondary starting prospects are junior Nicky Sanders, junior Kory Williams, senior James Villa and junior Tyron Davis.

The Buffs have beaten the Midland Lee JV in their last two openers. This season's first game will present a bigger test —— District 4-3A favorite Colorado City.

"I'm was shocked they weren't in the top ten in the state," Cotton said of the team now coached by Grissom.

Others may be shocked at how good Stanton is after losing so many starters.

"We lost a great class of seniors last year and that's probably going to hurt us at first," Bryan said. "But I think our young guys are going to mature real fast and we'll be just as good as last year."

BUFFALO TRACKS: Running back Todd Davis (1,195), quarterback Taylor Looney (16 touchdown passes), lineman Jeremy Louder, Nathan Cook, and Lance Payne and safeties Jason Hopper and Nick Hull all made first-team all district for Stanton as seniors last year ... The Buffs are 10-3 in pre-district games the last three seasons ... Cotton said he "hasn't thought a lot about" Stanton's Nov. 1 district game with state-ranked Iraan. But his players have. "That's definitely on my mind," McCalister said. "That's one of the games I'm looking forward to playing." ... More Cotton on Iraan: "That's a long way down the road and either one of us could incur a lot of injuries and McCamey may be good enough to beat both of us." ... Cotton calls the Buffs pre-disrtrict schedule the toughest since he's been in Stanton. But other than the opener with District 4-3A favorite Colorado City Sept. 6, only Class 1A Roscoe is considered a serious playoff contender... The Buffs have moved all their games to 8 p.m. this year...

Buffaloes to take long and winding road in '96

■ A newly-realigned District 6-2A has Stanton traveling over 300 miles for a league contest.

By Mike Butts
Sports Writer

STANTON — Just call Stanton head coach Mark Cotton the Road Worrier.

Stanton's new district spreads so far over West Texas the school had to change its calender to allow for travel to out of town games. And Cotton thinks the 320 mile bus ride to Tornillo this year and long-distance treks to Anthony and Van Horn next year could hurt his football team's play.

But Cotton's players have some different views about their new far-ranging league. And they seem to think they're up to the task of leading the state in travel miles.

"District 6-2A's McCamey, Iraan and us, we're not used to 600-mile road trips," Cotton said. "I think it will hurt your team's performance. With us having only one long road trip I hope we can cope with it."

Stanton has declared a school holiday on Oct. 18 when the football team plays at Tornillo. Cotton figures the team will have to leave at 10 a.m.

And with the band, cheerleaders, and other coaches having to leave early also, all classes were canceled for the day.

"I figure if we fast-food it back we'll pull in somewhere in the neighborhood of 5 a.m.," Cotton said. "I'm willing to bet we have more travel in the district than any team in Texas. We average 430 miles round trip per game."

The Stanton basketball teams will travel to Van Horn and far West Texas' Anthony this year. The dates of those games have been designated school holidays.

"Van Horn is our third closest district game and there are 36 Class 2A schools closer to us than Van Horn," Cotton said. "I hope that the UIL has heard enough of our griping and complaining that it will change (the districts at the next realignment)."

Buff players don't seem as concerned about it as Cotton.

"It's a long ways to travel," senior lineman Matt Moore said. "But it doesn't matter how far we go, we'll be ready to play."

"I don't think that will hurt us at all," said running back Carrillo said. "It will be fun ... Playing somebody we haven't played before will make it interesting."

Tight end-linebacker John Bryan has a different take.

"I hate it, it's horrible," Bryan said. "It doesn't really matter though. If we can overcome this district it will show how good a team we are."

Falcons nip Cardinals on failed two-point attempt

Associated Press

NFL Preseason Roundup

ATLANTA — It was exciting at the end, but also bolstered the case for those who say the NFL preseason is too long.

Atlanta held off a furious Arizona rally in the fourth quarter to beat the Cardinals 31-30 Friday night, stopping a 2-point try with 18 seconds remaining in the final exhibition game.

The Falcons, however, hobbled off the field with a string of injuries, including one that may cripple their depth in the backfield. Already carrying only three runners, the Falcons lost rookie Richard Huntley to a potentially serious injury to his right knee on the second-half kickoff.

"The problem with the salary cap is teams already expend all the money they have going into training camp, and they're in dire straights if someone goes down," said Browning Nagle, who played most of the game at quarterback for the Falcons in relief of Jeff George. "Maybe the preseason is a little long."

Atlanta coach June Jones said his team doesn't have the money to add another player if Huntley is lost for a lengthy period. Already, the Falcons have only two runners — Craig Heyward and Jamal Anderson — for their one-back offense.

With Anderson sitting out the game as a precaution, Heyward was forced to shoulder the running load after Huntley was hurt. Heyward scored three touchdowns, including two in the second half when he usually would have been watching from the bench.

"He sucked it up and went back in to finish the game," Jones said. "He's a tough guy."

The Falcons reported six players hurt in the game, the most serious being Huntley and cornerback Tim Denton (right shoulder sprain). Atlanta finished the game with only three healthy defensive backs.

The Cardinals took advantage after falling behind 31-10 early in the final period. Backup quarterback Kent Graham threw three touchdown passes, the last a 2-yarder to Duane Young with 18 seconds left.

Arizona (1-3) went for the victory, but third-string running back Ryan Terry was stopped short of the goal line by Lorenzo Styles on a 2-point try. The Cardinals recovered the onsides kick, but two incompletions by Graham ended the game.

Graham finished 13-of-24 for 200 yards, also throwing TD passes of 18 yards to Anthony Edwards and 19 yards to Kevin Jordan when it looked the Falcons had sealed the victory. Though he had five touchdown passes in the preseason to just one for 35-year-old veteran Boomer Esiason, Graham knows he won't be the starter next weekend.

Ravens 37, Bills 14

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — The Baltimore Ravens could have scored any way they wanted, and they did. The Buffalo Bills barely accomplished anything.

The Ravens scored 30 straight points in the first three quarters en route to a 37-14 victory over the Bills in an exhibition finale Friday night at Rich Stadium.

Baltimore played like it was ready to start the regular season while Buffalo, which had 2 yards offense in the first half, looked like it needed more practice.

Ravens return specialist Jermaine Lewis needed less than 10 seconds to provide the evening's standout play, going 83 yards on a punt return to give Baltimore a 17-0 lead in the second quarter.

Vinny Testaverde completed six of 11 passes for 96 yards and a 14-yard touchdown to Michael Jackson before heading to the sidelines with 4:34 remaining in the second quarter.

Earnest Hunter scored on an 8-yard run, and Matt Stover had field goals of 39, 26, and 47 yards. Derrick Cullors added a 3-yard TD run in the fourth quarter. Baltimore also had seven sacks.

Buffalo quarterback Jim Kelly played only two series — both ugly — before leaving the game in the first quarter.

The Bills' starting quarterback, who engineered three scoring drives in five series going into the game, had just six plays and no completions in three attempts during his final tuneup.

Kelly had one pass nearly picked off, and he was sacked by Dan Footman for 10 yards before giving way to Todd Collins, who completed 10 of 16 for 97 yards. Alex Van Pelt directed an 80-yard drive that ended with his 4-yard touchdown pass pass to fullback Jason Bratton.

Van Pelt added a 9-yard TD pass to Chris Brantley with 3:29 left in the game.

Bills running back Thurman Thomas sat out the game to make sure he would be healthy for the season opener against the New York Giants. Defensive end Bruce Smith was sidelined with fluid on his knee.

Buffalo had 18 yards offense before Collins hit Brantley with a 50-yard pass along the sideline with just over seven minutes left in the third quarter.

Baltimore moved the ball well against Buffalo's first-team defense but neither team was able to score until Stover kicked a 37-yard field goal with 1:07 left in the first quarter. The Ravens nearly had a touchdown on the drive but Testaverde's pass into the end zone to Jackson went through the receiver's hands.

Lewis broke loose with 7:10 left in the second quarter and gave the Ravens a 17-0 lead when he caught Chris Mohr's punt, shook a tackle and ran 83 yards into the end zone.

Eagles 20, Steelers 19

PHILADELPHIA — The Philadelphia Eagles may not be in bad shape if they are forced to begin the season with second-string quarterback Ty Detmer.

Detmer, starting for the injured Rodney Peete, completed 13 of 20 passes for 230 yards, including two touchdowns to Irving Fryar, as the Eagles held off the Pittsburgh Steelers 20-19 Friday night.

Kordell Stewart, who lost the starting quarterback battle to Jim Miller earlier in the week, nearly led the Steelers to a victory, throwing a 7-yard touchdown pass to Andre Hastings with four seconds left in the game.

The Steelers tried for the 2-point conversion that would have won the game, but Fred McAfee was stopped short of the goal line by Brian Dawkins.

The touchdown pass to Hastings was set up by a 57-yard reception by Johnny Barnes, a catch that gave Pittsburgh the ball on the Eagles 7 with eight seconds left in the game.

Dolphins 19, Bucs 7

TAMPA, Fla. — Even with Dan Marino spending most of the night roaming the sideline in a baseball cap, Jimmy Johnson's Miami Dolphins were too much for the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

Joe Nedney, whose job was secured when Johnson traded Pete Stoyanovich this week, kicked four field goals and Miami forced four turnovers to beat the Bucs 12-7 Friday night in an exhibition game that was not nearly as close as the score.

Marino played one series, using the Dolphins' hurry-up offense to move 64 yards to set up Nedney's first field goal. Miami finished the night with a 372-134 advantage in total yardage yet still needed to force a fumble and score on Calvin Jackson's 38-yard interception return in the closing minutes to assure the outcome.

The victory was Miami's second over Tampa Bay (1-3) in a month and the gives the Dolphins (3-1) added momentum going into their first season under Johnson.

The Bucs scored on Nilo Silvan's 91-yard punt return, but squandered an opportunity to possibly win the game when third-string quarterback Scott Milanovich was sacked and fumbled after Tampa Bay's Tony Bouie returned a fumble 63 yards to the Dolphins 7.

Marino was 2-of-5 for 23 yards in his brief appearance. Tampa Bay's Trent Dilfer was 5-of-15 for 44 yards was booed throughout the nearly three quarters he played.

The Dolphins marched inside the Bucs 10 on four of five possessions in the first half, compiling a whopping 264-49 advantage in total yardage as Karim Abdul-Jabbar, Bernie Parmalee and Irving Spikes took turns sprinting through gaping holes in the middle of the Tampa Bay defense.

Nedney's first-half field goals of 26, 23 and 23 yards capped drives of 64, 81 and 75 yards. The fourth trip deep into Tampa Bay territory produced another 49 yards of offense before Spikes was stopped for no gain on fourth-and-1 at the 7.

The only time the Dolphins were stopped in the middle of the field, Silvan settled under John Kidd's punt at his own 9 and broke three tackles before slipping through a hole and heading up the right sideline for the Bucs' only touchdown.

The long scoring play, putting Tampa Bay up 7-6, woke up the crowd of 40,137, but not the Bucs defense. Spikes had runs of 28, 13 and 12 yards on Miami's next series, setting up Nedney's 23-yard field goal for a 9-7 halftime lead.

Tampa Bay's sloppy play and Miami's frustration near the Bucs goal line continued in the second half.

Patriots 27, Redskins 19

FOXBORO, Mass. — Curtis Martin scored two touchdowns and gained 56 of his 61 yards in the first quarter Friday night as the New England Patriots beat Washington 27-19 despite a strong performance by newly anointed Redskins starting quarterback Gus Frerotte.

Frerotte, the 197th player selected in the 1994 draft, was given the starting job this week over Heath Shuler, who was taken third overall that year. Playing the first half, Frerotte completed 8 of 15 passes for 185 yards, including a 62-yard touchdown pass to Leslie Shepherd.

A driving thunderstorm soaked the field and kept 12,050 fans away but it passed over early, long before Shuler came on to start the second half. He was 9-of-24 for 100 yards but threw a twice-tipped interception by Alcides Catanho with 1:48 left after the Redskins converted an onsides kick to get one last chance to win.

In the competition for Patriots backup quarterback, Jay Barker started the second half and was 5-of-11 for 81 yards. Scott Zolak, thought to have the edge over Barker, was 5-of-9 for 28 yards, including a scrambling 5-yard touchdown pass to give New England a 27-16 lead.

Drew Bledsoe, competing for nothing at all, was 11-of-18 in the first half for 126 yards, one touchdown and one interception. Although he was holding his left, non-throwing, elbow late in the first half and had it packed in ice in the second, there was no announcement on an injury.

Rams 37, Chargers 34

ST. LOUIS — Jermaine Ross, fighting for a spot on the St. Louis Rams' roster, tied the score with a 28-yard touchdown catch and had two more big plays in the late going in a 37-34 exhibition victory over the San Diego Chargers Friday night.

After catching a pass from Jamie Martin with 4:53 left, Ross, a third-string wide receiver, set up the potential game-winning score with a 14-yard catch at the San Diego 14 on the Rams' next possession. But Chip Lohmiller, who kicked a 50-yard field goal earlier in the quarter, hooked his attempt wide left from 25 yards with 1:43 to play.

Ross, who spent last season on injured reserve with a knee injury, gave the Rams another chance when San Diego's Darrien Gordon was called for pass interference against him at the Chargers 4 with 18 seconds to go. This time, Lohmiller didn't miss, kicking a 28-yarder with 10 seconds remaining.

The Rams (3-1) trailed 31-14 after a first half in which they committed four turnovers, and ended with a three-game exhibition winning streak. St. Louis opens the regular season next Sunday at home against Cincinnati.

Raylee Johnson forced two fumbles, scoring once and setting up a touchdown, for San Diego (2-3). The Chargers also open at home, against Seattle.

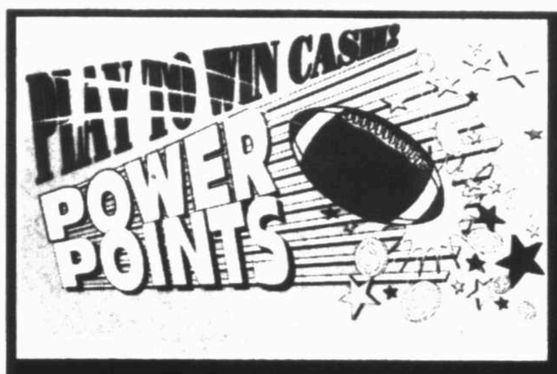

Johnson, a backup defensive end, knocked the ball loose from Rams rookie quarterback Tony Banks and then ended up with it in the end zone to give San Diego a 21-14 lead with 4:58 left in the half. On the Rams' next series, he forced and recovered another fumble by Banks at the San Diego 48. On the next play, Sean Salisbury and Charlie Jones hooked up on a 52-yard touchdown pass with 2:41 left.

Kevin Ross also picked off Steve Walsh's pass and returned it 49 yards for the game's first touchdown for San Diego.

The Chargers, who got only a 22-yard field goal from John Carney in the second half, also had a sloppy effort. Anthony Parker intercepted Salisbury's pass and returned it 59 yards for a touchdown in the second quarter, and the Chargers also fumbled on a botched handoff by Salisbury.

Neither starting quarterback played much. Stan Humphries completed only 1-of-3 passes in the first quarter as the Rams dominated possession and Walsh played a little over a quarter for St. Louis, going 7-for-11 for 81 yards and a touchdown.

Banks showed good scrambling ability on a 1-yard touchdown run in the third quarter, but in general saw the end of a string of impressive exhibition outings for the Rams, going 4-for-10 for 60 yards in a little more than a half. In the first three games, he completed 24 of 35 passes for 280 yards and a touchdown.

McAfee recovers in 110 hurdles

SYDNEY, Aust. — Former Midland Lee hurdler John McAfee Jr. recovered from a poor performance in the 400-meter hurdles on Thursday with a third-place finish in the semifinals of the 110 hurdles on Friday, qualifying the future Baylor Bear for the finals in that race at the World Junior Championships.

McAfee, who finished eighth in the 400 hurdles semifinals, finished third in his heat in the 110s with a time of 14.51 seconds. First place in that heat went to Poland's Tomasz Scigacsewski (14.04) while second went to Cuba's Carlos Patterson.

Cuba's Yoel Hernandez recorded a time of 13.95 in another semifinal to bring in the best time to the finals, which took place later Friday night.

Dr. John McAfee Sr. said his son seemed to have recovered somewhat from and accident in which McAfee Jr. was hit by a car, bruising his back and his knee.

"He said his back and knee were not bothering him but he did not run that way (Thursday in the 400 hurdles)," McAfee Sr. said. "He was leading the race until about the 300 mark and then he fell back. He said he ran out of gas.

"But I think it hurts worse than he says," McAfee Sr. added. "I think he's trying to convince himself it doesn't hurt and trying to block it out of his mind."

McAfee Sr. said he did not think his son was going to participate for the USA team in the 4x400 relay because of his knee and back.

Martin wins Bristol pole Goody's 500

By Mike Harris
AP Motorsports Writer

BRISTOL, Tenn. — Mark Martin's fourth straight pole at Bristol Motor Speedway wasn't as easy as it looked.

Martin got around the .533-mile, high-banked oval at 124.587 mph Friday night, putting his Valvoline Ford in the top qualifying spot for Saturday night's Goody's Headache Powders 500.

"We didn't have the fastest car in practice today like we did those last three times," Martin said. "We had to reach a little deeper in the bag tonight.

"I drove the car right on the verge of out of control," he added. "In fact, I was a little shaky when I got out of the car."

His discomfort wasn't apparent, though, as he earned his sixth Bristol pole, his third pole of the season and 31st of his Winston Cup career. Despite his daring lap, Martin came up short of the track qualifying record of 125.093 that he set last August.

Jeff Gordon, the defending series champion, was next at 124.589, just .043 seconds slower than Martin in a Chevrolet Monte Carlo.

Third was current series points leader Terry Labonte at 124.154, followed by Ricky Craven at 124.082 and short-track master Rusty Wallace at 124.050.

Dale Earnhardt, still recuperating from a fractured collarbone and sternum and tied with Gordon for second in the standings, 134 points behind Labonte, was 23rd at 122.411 as 25 drivers locked up starting positions in the 38-car lineup.

Dale Jarrett, coming off a victory Sunday at Michigan and fourth in the standings, just three points behind the runner-up duo, qualified ninth at 123.411.
