Europe put on terrorism alert

PARIS (AP) — Western Europe has been put on a terror alert for the holidays because of discoveries of explosives caches and weapons shipments, as well as reports that pro-Iranian terrorists may try to bomb airliners and other U.S. targets.

In France, major department stores that were targets of previous bombings were under tight surveillance Friday as crowds of Christmas shoppers coursed through the aisles.

Security patrols were increased in subways and at railroad stations, public buildings, border crossings and airports. Travelers have been warned of delays.

"These holidays, which bring with them large movements and groupings of people, along with the present situation, justify this reinforcement of police surveillance," said Interior Minister Pierre Joxe.

A State Department warning to embassies said the U.S. government, "noting recent reports of movement of Middle Eastern terrorists in Western Europe, combined with the discovery of weapons shipments destined for Hezbollah cells in Spain and Africa, is concerned that terrorists might be planning near-term attacks against a variety of targets, possible including U.S. interests."

The reference was to Shiite Moslem extremists from Lebanon.

At U.S. Military European Command headquarters in Stuttgart, West Germany, a spokesman who would not let his name be used said: "We are aware of the State Department advisory. ... Beyond that, we do not discuss specific security measures."

Cornelius Walsh, spokesman for the U.S. Embassy in Bonn, said: "Everyone has been urged to be more cautious and more alert."

A security employee on duty at the Frankfurt airport, also speaking anonymously, said: "Security measures are only effective if they aren't revealed."

In London, the U.S. Embassy said it was trying to get the information out to Americans living in Britain.

The advisory was issued six days before the first anniversary of Pan Am Flight 103, which originated in Frankfurt, changed planes in London and was blown up over Lockerbie, Scotland, killing 270 people.

A TWA spokesman said: "Warnings are immediately distributed to each person on the staff."

Chief justice asks Bunton to postpone judicial elections

By RICK BROWN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — How nine Texas counties, including Midland and Ector, conduct 1990 judicial elections may lie in the hands of attorneys meeting Monday in hopes of drafting an interim settlement to a federal lawsuit.

Meanwhile, the chief justice of the state Supreme Court Friday sent a letter to U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton asking that judicial elections be postponed until November to allow time for an appeal.

Chief Justice Tom Phillips told Bunton that at least 115 district judges representing more than 800 years of experience would be affected if he issues an order on interim elections.

"The interest of the people in Texas is not served by needless instability in these offices," Phillips wrote.

Bunton in October found elections in the nine urban counties illegal because they dilute minority voting strength and therefore violate the U.S. Voting Rights Act.

He gave the Legislature until Jan. 3 to develop the interim plan, but Gov. Bill Clements opted against allowing lawmakers to consider the matter during the special legislative session that ended this past Tuesday.

Lawmakers are expected to overhaul the entire state judicial selection system in 1991, when they take care of regular redistricting chores. Their work then must pass muster with Bunton and the U.S. Justice Department.

After a meeting with Clements Monday, the federal judge asked all parties in the case to submit their ideas for 1990 elections.

As a federal judge, Bunton has the power to stay the elections all together, mandate his own system or allow one negotiated between the state and plaintiffs to go into effect.

Assistant Attorney General Renea Hicks, who argued the state's case, said he still plans to appeal Bunton's decision to the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans.

But after the judge's meeting with Clements, Hicks said he is anxious to negotiate a short-term solution with plaintiffs because "the handwriting is on the wall; the judge is going to do something."

"We're fearful that we may not have any say at all given the fact that the Legislature didn't act," he said.

An attorney for the plaintiffs, William Garrett of Dallas, said a positive outcome from the meeting is not a sure thing. "We're both going to come to the table and just see what needs to be done," he said.

Phillips said he was prompted by news of the negotiations to get his ideas on paper and to the judge as quickly as possible.

The chief justice's plan would cancel partisan March and April primary elections in the affected counties and substitute non-partisan balloting in November, with run-off elections scheduled for December.

Choirs give travelers cheery send-off

With choirs singing Christmas carols in the terminal, the airport promises to be a cheerier place for travelers this holiday season.

For the second year in a row, Midland International Airport has invited musical groups from both Midland and Odessa to perform in the lobby. Groups will be appearing at noon and 5:30 p.m. between now and Dec. 22, airport spokesperson Marcy Blauvelt said Thursday.

"We're looking to send travelers off on their trips with a lot of Christmas cheer," she said.

Travelers in the lobby Thursday afternoon were treated to a serenade by the Trinity School high school choir, about 27 voices strong and accompanied by an electric piano.

Bruce Davis, an Abilene doctor on his way to San Diego, said he thought the singing was a good idea.

"I think it's really nice," he said. "It's a lot better than sitting over there at the gate waiting for the plane to come."

Trinity choir members, meanwhile, said they hoped they could brighten the day of some travel-weary flier.

"It gives incoming people the spirit of Christmas," said ninth-grade singer Lindsay McMillan.

Future performances are scheduled for Dec. 18 at 5:30 p.m. by the Barbershoppers; Dec. 19 at 5:30 p.m. by the Bellview Baptist Youth Choir; and Dec. 21 at noon by the Odessa High School choir.

City, firefighters agree on tentative pay pact

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

City of Midland officials and firefighters both claimed victory Friday after reaching a tentative agreement on a solution regarding retroactive pay.

Both sides have been discussing how much back pay was owed after the City Council, responding to federal law and recent court decisions, reinstated wages cut four years ago.

However, neither city officials nor firefighters would specify how many years of retroactive pay were agreed upon Friday.

"We're still in the negotiation process," said Brian Loose, a Midland Firefighters Association representative.

Councilman Bill Williams, however, said paying two years in back wages is being considered.

"Both sides are very positive," Williams said. "I would hope that we can bring it to the councilmen Tuesday at the council meeting."

Mike Higgins, Texas State Association of Firefighters research and service director, was also involved in the negotiations.

Top local Realtors honored at ceremony

From Staff Reports

Kay Sutton was named Realtor of the Year, and Roy Proctor was ushered in as 1990 president of the Midland Board of Realtors Friday during the organization's annual awards ceremony.

Ms. Sutton is associated with Don Harvey Realtors and was 1989 president of the Midland Board of Realtors.

Proctor is associated with First Realty Better Homes & Gardens.

Ms. Sutton was recognized for several other awards, which include: 1989 Top Volume Associate with $6.59 million in sales volume; 1989 Top Unit Sales with 35 units sold; and Multi-Million Dollar Sales.

Lori Lanier took the 1989 Top Multi-Million Dollar Sales recognition with $2.78 million in sales volume. She also was recognized as 1989 Co-Op Champion, which means she had the most listings, 21, listed with offices other than hers.

Don Harvey also earned several awards. They include: 1989 Top Volume Principal Broker; 1989 Unit Listings with 107; and 1989 Top Multi-Million Dollar Listings.

Sutton Proctor

In commercial real estate sales and listings, Bill Jackson, with Adobe Inc., took the top two awards. He was top Multi-Million Dollar Commercial Salesman for 1989 with $2.12 million. In 1989, Jackson also listed the most commercial property, valued at $2.41 million.

Jerry Don Daniels with Stephenson Realty was awarded with the 1989 Top Million Dollar Commercial Listings, with $1.02 million.

Appeals court stalls release of Brandley

HOUSTON (AP) — Death row inmate Clarence Brandley will remain behind bars until well past Christmas after the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals Friday stalled defense attorneys' efforts to get Brandley released on bail.

The court, which overturned Brandley's capital murder conviction earlier this week, ruled Friday that a Galveston judge would have to prove he had jurisdiction in the case before a bond hearing scheduled for Monday could occur.

Defense attorney Mike DeGeurin said the ruling essentially puts an end to efforts to free Brandley before Christmas — or even before a third trial could take place.

"The announcement of the (prosecutor's) filing of a new trial effectively denies any hope of Clarence Brandley being freed or even coming off death row," DeGeurin said.

"The good news is still there," DeGeurin said of the appellate decision Wednesday to overturn Brandley's conviction. "But this hope of mine is dashed. The hope was that he could be released before Christmas."

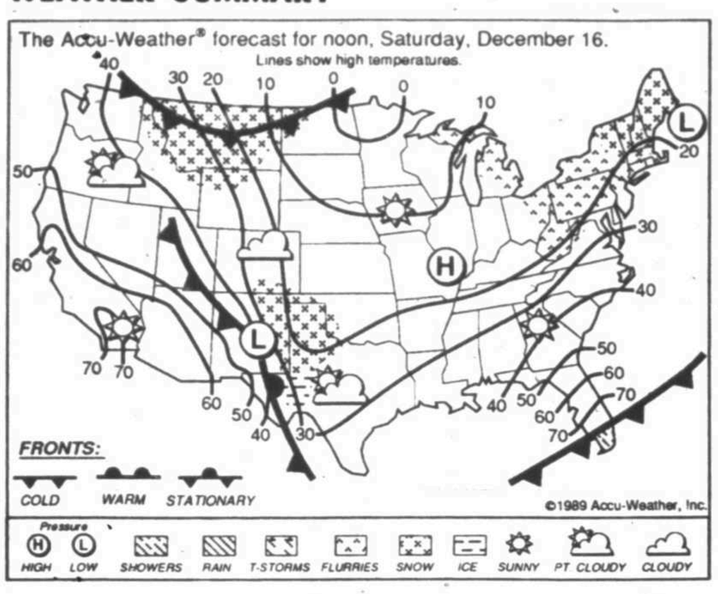

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals said Galveston state District Judge Roy Engelke would have until Jan. 2 to prove why he had jurisdiction to decide bail for Brandley. But DeGeurin said that won't be necessary because he plans to withdraw the motion.

DeGeurin said he filed the motion in 212th State District Court because it was there, during an evidentiary hearing two years ago, that a visiting judge recommended that Brandley's conviction be set aside. That recommendation eventually led to Wednesday's ruling by the appeals court overturning his conviction.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Arctic weather grips Basin

From Staff and Wire Reports

By daybreak today, the cold will have been quite cold — as in Arctic-like — for the normally not-so-cold West Texas.

The temperature was to drop to a record-busting 10 degrees this morning, according to weatherman Eddie Brite of the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

If so, today's low mark will have broken the record low of 15 degrees for Dec. 16 in 1972.

"We're going to break that," Brite said Friday night. "It's going to get about 15 (degrees) at 3 or 4 (o'clock) and will go to 10 by sunrise."

After that, the temperature today is to rise to a high into the lower 30s under cloudy skies. Winds are to be southeasterly at 10 to 15 mph.

By tonight, the temperature is to ease on down to near 20 degrees.

Sunday isn't to be quite so cold. Friday's peak temperature was 45 degrees, and the low was 20 degrees.

STATE

An "Arctic Express" moved through North Texas Friday afternoon, setting the stage for plunging temperatures and possible sleet and snow by the end of the weekend.

Temperatures began falling as a cold front moved into North Texas early Friday — led by strong northerly winds with gusts above 30 mph.

The National Weather Service warned people in North Texas to be careful of frostbite and other cold-related injuries. Ranchers were advised to move sick or pregnant cattle to warm quarters.

In Brady, officials at G. Rollie White Downs ended the state's only operating pari-mutuel track season Friday by canceling racing this weekend because of the weather.

Temperatures were expected in the single digits in the north to the mid-40s south.

A new record low was established in Wichita Falls Friday morning, with a reading of 11.4 degrees. That surpassed the old record of 12 degrees set in 1943.

Homeless shelters prepared for an influx of people seeking refuge from the cold.

While North Texas dealt with cold weather, citrus growers were breathing a sigh of relief that temperatures would not drop as severely as originally thought.

BRANDLEY

Brandley, 38, was convicted in the rape-strangulation of 16-year-old Cheryl Dee Fergeson of Bellville, who was killed in 1980 while attending a volleyball tournament at Conroe High School.

The appeals court Wednesday set aside the verdict, saying Brandley did not receive a fair trial.

Brandley, who is black, was a janitor at the school when Miss Fergeson was attacked. Miss Fergeson was white. Brandley supporters contend the former janitor's conviction was racially motivated.

Brandley's first trial ended with a hung jury. In the second trial, an all-white jury convicted him of capital murder and sentenced him to death. He has come within six days of execution.

Montgomery County District Attorney Peter Speers said Thursday he would ask the appellate court to reverse its decision and, failing that, would retry Brandley for the capital murder.

Speers filed a motion with the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals asking the court to prevent the Galveston judge from conducting the bond hearing in the meantime.

DeGeurin said Speers' intentions to reverse the case would stall Brandley's release until after the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals issues a decision on the matter.

Even if the appeals court upholds its initial ruling, DeGeurin said Speers could take the matter to the Supreme Court.

"I filed a motion for bail before the prosecutor announced he would seek a rehearing," DeGeurin said. "Once a motion for rehearing has been filed, the court of appeals stalls any other activity until after the rehearing has been denied. Once that request was filed, that effectively stopped the order (setting aside Brandley's conviction) from being final."

Without a final order, DeGeurin said it was unlikely Brandley would be released.

"I'm disappointed that the prosecution hasn't gone ahead and dismissed the indictment and instead is seeking to keep Clarence on death row while they're asking for a reversal," DeGeurin said.

Speers said he still believes Brandley killed Miss Fergeson and he will pursue every legal avenue to keep Brandley locked up.

DeGeurin said he had not yet informed Brandley or his family of the decision to postpone the bond hearing.

"We're very enthusiastic and we feel we have a solution close at hand," Higgins said. "We're not at liberty to discuss that further at this time.

"The council members have worked hard and they're just as eager to get it over with as we are."

City officials offered one year of back pay at a meeting last Saturday. Loose, however, said at the time that the issue could end up in a legal battle.

City officials cut firefighter salaries by 2.61 percent in 1985. Earlier that year the U.S. Supreme Court applied the Fair Labor Standards Act to city and state governments.

The decision meant that firefighters must be paid overtime after 53 hours of work per week. Midland firefighters were working 56 hours a week.

Rather than cut hours, city officials decided to cut wages and pay three hours of overtime.

Following a 1987 U.S. Congress amendment to the labor act, city officials reinstated the pay. The pay hike also was a response to federal court decisions in favor of firefighters who challenged city governments that axed pay to comply with the 1985 act.

However, a majority of the courts allowed only a year of back pay.

City Manager Fred Poe said the retroactive pay will cost the city about $100,000 for each year. The money will come from the city's $9 million surplus account, he said.

The cost will not mean tax hikes, layoffs or putting projects on hold, Poe added.

Killing catches up with drug lord, son

G. Gacha R. Gacha

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Police who had stalked him for months killed Gonzalo Rodriguez Gacha, one of the most powerful cocaine barons, in a shootout Friday near Covenas, a port on the Caribbean.

Rodriguez Gacha, his 17-year-old son Fredy and five bodyguards were killed in the shootout 360 miles north of Bogota at a ranch owned by Pablo Escobar, another kingpin in Colombia's multibillion-dollar drug empire, national police chief Miguel Gomez Padilla said. No mention was made of police casualties.

President Bush called President Virgilio Barco Friday night and congratulated him and the Colombian police on the death of the 42-year-old trafficker, Gen. Miguel Maza Marquez said in a television interview.

The gunfight was at a ranch only 70 miles south of Cartagena, the city where Bush is to meet in February with the presidents of Latin America's three major drug-producing countries — Barco, Alan Garcia of Peru and Jaime Paz Zamora of Bolivia.

Maza, commander of the federal investigative police, said police had been pursuing Rodriguez Gacha, the No. 2 man in the Medellin cartel, for 70 hours in the Covenas coastal zone before catching up with him.

Rodriguez Gacha was on the list of a dozen Colombian drug traffickers most wanted by the U.S. Justice Department.

Maza said telephone switchboards at police stations and the presidential palace were flooded with congratulatory calls.

"The country and the world have received this news with satisfaction," he said. "We know this because of the quantity of calls from citizens, from women crying with joy because the head of the most dangerous and forceful terrorist organization on earth has just died."

But he said Rodriguez Gacha's death would not end terrorist violence in Colombia.

"We cannot say that we have broken the back of organized crime, but since its head has lost its brain, what follows will be a little easier," he said.

Police will now concentrate efforts to capture Escobar, Maza said. "We just need a little luck like we had today with Rodriguez Gacha."

Escobar, a former pickpocket who leads the Medellin operation and remains at large, was believed to be in the area of the ranch at the time of the shootout, Interior Minister Carlos Lemos said in a televised interview.

Lemos did not elaborate except to say sternly to the camera, "Individuals who are involved in crime will end up like Rodriguez Gacha ended up."

Escobar and Rodriguez Gacha, nicknamed "El Mexicano" because of his fondness for anything Mexican, have been the objects of manhunts by U.S. and Colombian authorities since Barco ordered a crackdown on drug traffickers after a opposition presidential candidate was slain Aug. 18.

Police earlier reported 11 bodyguards among the dead before downgrading that at a news conference to five.

"The operation to locate Rodriguez Gacha was an intelligence operation of great care," Gen. Carlos Arturo Casadiego, assistant director of the national police, said in an interview with the Caracol radio network.

In Washington, William Bennett, national drug control policy director, said Barco told him the news by telephone call.

Bennett said the fugitives "resisted police efforts to arrest them, opening fire on Colombian authorities. Colombian police returned fire, killing Rodriguez Gacha, his son, and 10 or more cartel bodyguards."

Avowed gay man to be ordained Episcopal priest

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — An Episcopal deacon said his ordination into the priesthood today marks the first time an avowed gay person will enter the clergy since a 1979 church resolution bafring practicing homosexuals.

Robert Williams, 34, will be ordained as a priest in a 3:30 p.m. ceremony at All Saints Church in Hoboken by the Rt. Rev. John Shelby Spong, bishop of the Newark diocese.

Traditionalists within the church opposed to Williams' ordination have called on Spong to cancel the ordination, saying it violates a resolution of the church's General Convention.

Plans have been made by the Episcopal Synod of America, a traditionalist church faction based in Fort Worth, Texas, to have a letter read during the two-hour ordination ceremony expressing the synod's disapproval.

Synod spokesman Lawrence Thompson declined to identify the name or the church affiliation of a New Jersey woman who he said will read a letter during a portion of the ceremony.

Thompson said the synod is opposed to the ordination because it violates a 1979 resolution of the the church's General Convention, a governing body that meets every three years.

In 1979, the convention resolved that it is "not appropriate" for the Episcopal church to ordain a "practicing homosexual" or "any person who is engaged in heterosexual relations outside of marriage."

Williams, a graduate of the Episcopal Divinity School in Cambridge, Mass., said adherence to that resolution "would have ruled out everyone I knew in seminary."

Spong has said he intends to proceed with the ceremony despite synod objections in the interest of building "a more open, inclusive and Christ-like church."

The convention resolution came two years after a lesbian deacon, Ellen Barrett, was ordained priest in the New York diocese.

"In the Episcopal Church, I was the first," the Rev. Barrett said in an interview yesterday.

Other openly gay people have been ordained since then, she added, but no one has been quite as outspoken as Williams.

A native of Abilene, Texas, and a Southern Baptist by birth, Williams said he knew at age 17 that he wanted to go into the ministry.

He held a number of different jobs in advertising and journalism, including a stint as amusements editor of the Abilene Reporter-News, before he decided five years ago to apply to seminary.

'Gone With the Wind' rises again for gala

ATLANTA (AP) — "Gone With the Wind" turned 50 years old Friday, but it will never age in the eyes of the fans who gathered for a gala "re-premiere" of the blockbuster Civil War movie.

"It's part of our blood," said Kim Mills of New York, who traveled South with his mother and sister to attend the week-long celebration marking the anniversary of the movie's Dec. 15, 1939, premiere.

Butterfly McQueen, the child-voiced actress who played the slave Prissy in the movie, didn't attend the premiere in 1939, when the Loews was a whites-only theater. But she stole the show Friday night at the Fox Theatre, entertaining the crowd with lines from her role and a song to the tune of the "Tara" theme.

Hers was the biggest applause when the surviving cast members were introduced by talk show host Larry King, but the real star of the show was the movie itself.

The crowd applauded everything — from the title as it swept across the screen to the stars' names as the credits were rolled.

Many of the fans came to the reception and screening dressed in antebellum costumes.

Mary Burleston of Amboy, Ill., wore her wedding dress, altered with a hoop and green trim to resemble an 1860s ball gown. Her friend, Michele Viola of Aurora, Ill., rented her hoop skirt from a costume shop.

"They said it (antebellum attire) was optional, but we thought, 'Why not?'" said Ms. Viola, whose trip to Atlanta was a Christmas gift from her aunt.

Fans from as far away as Australia came for the event, but the crowd was far smaller than the million or so who waited in the cold to see Clark Cable and Vivien Leigh on that Friday night in 1939.

Then, the crowd was so thick that one man perched on a street sign for hours in hopes of catching a glimpse of the stars as they passed in a 30-car motorcade on Peachtree Street to the Loews Grand Theatre.

Margaret Mitchell, the homegrown author whose Pulitzer Prize-winning book became one of the world's most popular movies, also rode in the parade down the street where she was raised.

This time, only a few hundred people gathered in cold, cloudy weather to watch a re-creation of the motorcade.

And this time, only 10 minor cast members were in town for the festivities. The two top stars both died in the 1960s, and Miss Mitchell died in 1949.

JUDGES

Phillips told Bunton that the postponement still would allow elected judges to take office in January 1991, but it also would give the Legislature and the Fifth Circuit "a meaningful opportunity" to take action.

Phillips said ordering elections that are without partisanship while allowing ample time for legislative and appeals court action is "a courageous first step toward a better, fairer system."

But Hicks said that the non-partisan system Phillips outlined would not get the endorsement of Attorney General Jim Mattox.

Hicks said he will proceed with negotiations despite the possibility the appeals court could strike down Bunton's ruling.

The 1990 elections "are going to be affected one way or another, anyway," he said.

A spokesman for Mattox, Ron Dusek, said the negotiations are a necessary part of the process.

"You can't sit back on your thumbs hoping that certain things will happen," he said.

Whatever is negotiated, "it will be a legitimate plan; it will be a fair plan," he said. "There will be nothing wrong with it."

UT officials reject claims that nuclear reactor is unsafe

AUSTIN (AP) — University of Texas officials are seeking to blunt concerns about a small nuclear reactor being built at its Balcones Research Center, after the former contractor charged the facility is unsafe.

Spokesmen for the university denied the contractor's charges that contaminated water from the reactor could enter the city's water and sewer lines or the ground water supply as well as his contention that the reactor containment vessel is unsound.

"Categorically, it will be a safe facility when it becomes licensed and operational," said Charles Franklin, UT's vice president for business affairs. "We would not do anything otherwise."

A spokesman for the Nuclear Regulatory Commission said an operating license will not be issued until every aspect of the reactor's construction and operating plans has been thoroughly reviewed for safety. The reactor is not expected to become operational until next spring or summer.

Greg Hilz, president of Construction Incorporated of Texas, the original general contractor, said the project "is just inundated with problems — design problems, management problems."

The $6 million facility, called the Nuclear Engineering Teaching Laboratory, is nearing completion at the research center in North Austin.

The heart of the teaching lab is the 1.1 megawatt nuclear reactor that will be used for education and research. The reactor does not produce electricity, but, if it did, could produce enough for about 350 homes.

"It's a fairly standard reactor similar to those in place at many universities around the country," said Dr. Bernard Wehring, director of the teaching lab.

The reactor is four times as big as one UT has operated on its main campus since 1963. The older reactor is now shut down and will soon be decommissioned.

In the reactor, at the bottom of the containment vessel filled with water, the nuclei of the atoms of the uranium fuel are split. The process produces neutrons, which split more atoms. The chain reaction produces heat and radiation.

The uranium fuel is in tubes called fuel rods. Separate rods that absorb neutrons can be adjusted to regulate the fission process.

Settlement brings family a 'little better' Christmas

HOUSTON (AP) — Ricardo and Omaira Giraldo will have a "little better" Christmas — the result of what could be a $40 million settlement with a medical firm over injuries to their brain-damaged toddler, their attorney said.

The Giraldos reached an agreement Thursday with MacGregor Medical Association that will bring them $2 million by Dec. 23 to help pay for therapy and nursing care for their 3-year-old daughter, Diane, who has been brain-injured since birth.

The couple said they plan to use the funds to hire a private nurse to care for Diane, who will never be able to walk, talk, feed or care for herself, the result of oxygen deprivation during her birth.

"It helped make Christmas a little better for them," said their attorney Richard Mithoff.

Under the terms of the settlement, MacGregor also agreed to pay $5,000 a month for the rest of the girl's life, with a 5 percent annual increase.

Previously, Mrs. Giraldo has cared for Diane alone and the couple could afford to see a specialist only once a week. The settlement makes it possible for the family to afford more sessions.

Diane Giraldo was born at Hermann Hospital on Nov. 12, 1986, by doctors affiliated with MacGregor, a physicians group that provides medical services for a health maintenance organization.

In a lawsuit filed in July 1987, the Giraldos alleged MacGregor was responsible for Diane's condition for failing to perform a timely Caesarean section and omitting tests that would have shown the baby was in danger.

Testimony during the trial revealed that one test was done the day the baby was born.

The Giraldos came to the United States from Colombia in 1982. Ricardo Giraldo works for the Marriott Corp. at Houston Intercontinental Airport, while his wife is a janitor for Klein Independent School District. Diane is their only child.

Fight SAD symptoms with healthy starches

Copley News Service

Certain foods may help stave off the blues in people with seasonal affective disorder, otherwise known as SAD. The condition, which mostly occurs during winter months, is marked by fatigue, weight gain and other depressive symptoms.

When 16 people with SAD were given an 800-calorie, high-carbohydrate meal of six cookies, they reported feeling vigorous and energized during the three-hour test period.

Dr. Norman Rosenthal of the National Institute of Mental Health says a control group of non-depressed people felt tired after eating the cookies.

Previous studies have found that people with SAD tend to binge on sweets and starches during winter, probably to counteract their doldrums. These foods regulate a mood-altering brain chemical called serotonin, which may be abnormal in people with the disorder, Rosenthal says.

More than half of crooks use cocaine, study says

ATLANTA (AP) — More than half of the criminal suspects in many of the nation's big cities had used cocaine within a few days of their arrests, a federal study shows.

The study indicated that three-quarters of the criminals in New York and Philadelphia, and 65 percent of those in Washington, D.C., use cocaine.

One official said it showed that "the real drug problem" is in the nation's criminal sector.

"We could find the large bulk of drug users by looking at the 13 million arrests made each year," said Eric Wish of the National Institute of Justice, an arm of the Justice Department that conducted the survey.

The Centers for Disease Control released the study.

Since 1986, the institute has monitored drugs in selected cities with tests that detect cocaine use within the previous two to three days, Wish said. Those surveyed included people arrested for most crimes except traffic violations and vagrancy.

In testing in 14 cities last January, February and March, four other cities reported cocaine use by half or more of the arrested men: New Orleans, 59 percent; Cleveland, 56 percent; Detroit, 54 percent; and Dallas, 50 percent.

"The prevalence of recent cocaine use among arrestees ... is striking," the CDC said, noting that the percentage of arrested men who used cocaine in New Orleans had doubled from 1987 to 1989.

"The overwhelming conclusion from all these data is that most dysfunctional drug use — the primary demand — is coming from the criminal population," Wish said.

The amount of drug use among criminals varied, however, with only 24 percent of those detained in San Antonio testing positive for cocaine.

Other cities where tests were done included St. Louis, 47 percent; Kansas City, 44 percent; San Diego, 42 percent; Portland, 36 percent; Phoenix, about 30 percent, and Indianapolis, 26 percent.

Fewer than 25 percent of those tested in the survey were arrested for drug crimes, officials said.

The survey indicated that fewer criminals use marijuana than cocaine. Marijuana use ranged from 44 percent of those tested in San Diego to 13 percent in New York and Washington.

The survey also tested for opiates and amphetamines; all cities reported less than 20 percent for each except San Diego, which reported 35 percent using amphetamines.

Researchers also asked arrested men about their drug habits. Between 38 percent (in San Diego) and 15 percent (in Dallas) reported that they had used injectible drugs at some time.

In 11 cities, more than 20 percent of those using injectible drugs said they were sharing needles with other users.

That, according to the CDC, "indicates that a substantial proportion of the arrestees engage in behaviors that put them at increased risk for transmission of HIV," the virus which causes AIDS.

Accidental discovery of most distant known star distends galaxy

BALTIMORE (AP) — Astronomers have spotted the most distant known star in the Milky Way, and say the accidental discovery could help determine the total mass of the galaxy.

That includes mysterious invisible matter that astronomers know exists but are unable to identify, an astronomer with the Space Telescope Science Institute said this week.

"Astronomers suspect that there is a lot of additional material surrounding our galaxy that doesn't give off light," said Howard Bond, who along with two others discovered the distant star last spring.

"We don't know the mass of the Milky Way, but if we can find objects that are far out and measure their speed, it will help us determine the galaxy's total mass — the visible areas and the dark areas."

Astronomers use the speed of stars to determine gravitational pull upon them, and from its gravity, the mass of the galaxy.

Astronomers theorize the galaxy's dark matter could be dim stars that are too faint to be seen, black hole remnants of massive stars that exploded early in the galaxy's history or some unknown type of subatomic particle, Bond said.

"We used to think that the majority of the mass of the Milky Way was stars, but now we suspect stars may only be 10 percent of all the mass," he said. Once the mystery of the dark matter is solved, he said, "we may find something completely unexpected that could revolutionize our thinking about physics."

The scientists stumbled upon the star while studying a distant galaxy. The star is located 160,000 light years from Earth in the direction of the constellation Virgo.

The Milky Way was once thought to be only about 100,000 lights year across. Since the Earth is about 30,000 light years from the center of the Milky Way, the discovery means the galaxy is larger than even more recent estimates indicated.

"It was just dumb luck that this star was in the way of what they were looking at. It was totally serendipitous," said Ray Villard, a spokesman for the institute. "It just shows that there are a lot of wonderful surprises out there that we may stumble upon when we're looking for something else."

The star is an isolated member of an immense but thinly populated halo of old, faint stars surrounding the Milky Way. It was spotted while astronomers Robin Ciardullo and George Jacoby of the National Optical Astronomy Observatories in Tucson, Ariz., were surveying the giant elliptical galaxy M49, which is 50 million light-years from Earth.

Ciardullo, Jacoby and Bond have observed the star using telescopes in Hawaii and Arizona, and measurements of its brightness have been made at the Cerro Tololo Interamerican Observatory in Chile.

Watkins to decide on SSC alternatives

Associated Press

Energy Secretary James Watkins is expected to decide in mid-January whether to accept alternatives that could escalate the cost of the superconducting super collider, or scale the project back.

Scientists are working on a design option for the super collider that could add $1 billion to the project's $5.9 billion anticipated cost, sources told Dallas-Fort Worth newspapers this week.

In a meeting with Department of Energy officials in Washington, SSC lab director Roy Schwitters argued that the $1 billion addition would be the one most likely to guarantee that the collider would do what it was intended to do, sources said.

Texas was chosen as the super collider site in late 1988. The collider, to be built about 25 miles south of Dallas in Ellis County, will be a 53-mile ring that will be used to smash atoms in an effort to study the nature of matter.

The two other options under consideration would keep the price tag at or slightly above $5.9 billion, but would involve scaling back the size and the scope of the project.

Grinch steals party gifts

LUFKIN (AP) — A Christmas party planned Friday for senior citizens and children here was ruined when a burglar struck, taking a page straight out of the book "How The Grinch Stole Christmas."

Not only did the Grinch-like burglar steal from the children and the elderly, he stole from HUD. Royal Oaks apartment employees had planned a party Friday for residents. But when apartment manager Gladys Guthrie looked in the apartment where the gifts were stored, she found the Grinch had struck.

"They are taking my senior citizens' Christmas and my children's Christmas," Mrs. Guthrie said. "There's nothing there. Just totally gone. I'm just down right furious."

With HUD money, Mrs. Guthrie bought blankets, socks and towels for the senior citizens and toys for the children.

Family hopes for miracle

AUSTIN (AP) — Battling long odds and hoping for a miracle, Anne Campbell is thanking dozens of people who gave blood in a search to find a genetically exact bone marrow match for her dying sister, Colleen.

"I really can't tell you guys how much I thank you," she said over and over at the Texas School for the Deaf in South Austin, where the search she organized attracted about 80 volunteers Thursday.

Colleen Campbell, 29, was diagnosed in September as having leukemia, a disease that destroys the body's vital bone marrow. Colleen taught at the school for the deaf for six years.

Could Rangers hammer out solution to gavel's theft?

AUSTIN (AP) — There were no new leads Friday in the Mystery of the Missing Gavel, and an aide to Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby jokingly suggested that the services of the Texas Rangers might be required.

"Maybe we'll have to call in the Rangers," laughed Saralee Tiede, Hobby's executive assistant.

"It's been three days and no gavel. We don't even really have what I would call a substantive lead."

The item that's missing is the oak gavel Hobby used to keep order in the Senate during the recent special session of the Legislature dealing with workers' compensation reform.

"Who would have ever thought someone would take the gavel?" Ms. Tiede asked. She said the gavel had been missing since legislators left Austin Tuesday night at the end of the special session.

"I don't have any idea who took it," she said. "I mean, we operate on the honors system here.

"It's kind of understood that you don't make off with the paintings on the wall, you don't take the bronze busts and you don't steal the gavel."

The gavel, handmade by Texas prison inmates, is nearly 2 feet in length and weighs about 4 pounds.

"It doesn't have much monetary value," Ms. Tiede said. "However, it has a lot of sentimental value at this point.

"We thought (Hobby) might want to present it to someone — you know, in connection with workers' comp."

Carleton Turner, sergeant-of-arms of the Senate, issued a memo to all Senate offices this week, notifying staff members that the gavel was missing and asking them to be on the lookout for it.

"I'm not assuming any of the senators did it," Turner said. "The Senate chamber is open at times when there is nobody in there. It would have been easy for someone to slip in and take it."

"It's kind of understood that you don't make off with the paintings on the wall, you don't take the bronze busts and you don't steal the gavel."

Scientists raise apples to be shiny, chemical-free

URBANA, Ill. (AP) — Crisp, red apples and test tubes of tiny trees in a lab cooler represent hope for the future of chemical-free fruit production.

Already, researchers have developed new varieties with natural resistance to major diseases, reducing the need for fungicides, said Schuyler Safi Korban, head of the University of Illinois breeding program, who hopes genetic engineering can improve the process even further.

"Now, with all the concern over the use of chemicals these varieties will become more important. Growers are coming to us asking where they can get these varieties," said Korban. Illinois' program has produced nine varieties since the Prima was introduced two decades ago to resist apple scab disease.

Growers might have sprayed fungicide 12 times a season to prevent scab disease, but resistant varieties have cut Illinois' $1 million-a-year chemical bill for apples by 60 percent, he said.

Newer varieties include Jonafree, Redfree, Williams' Pride and Dayton. The apples are resistant to scab and, in varying degrees, fire blight, apple cedar rust and powdery mildew, — among the most prevalent diseases in the industry, and some are even resistant to bugs.

Consumers were slow to switch from their favorite Red Delicious and Jonathan apples, Korban said, but recent controversy surrounding the chemical Alar and its link with cancer changed that. Alar was used by some growers to keep apples colorful and fresh on trees longer, extending the harvest.

"We're making progress in reducing chemical use, though it may not be as fast as some would like," said Paul Curtis, who operates a 5,000-tree orchard and grows varieties developed at the Illinois, including Jonafree.

Conventional breeding has led to the new varieties of apples with disease and insect resistance. Korban hopes genetic engineering will speed and improve the process and give already-popular varieties resistance.

"It is a great idea but these things take years to develop and test," said Ron Meyer of the Illinois Apple and Peach Marketing Board. "It took 25 years to develop good varieties that were resistant to scab."

Group claims millions of child safety seats are unsafe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Millions of automobile child restraint seats that have failed government standards are still being used or sold, a safety group said Friday. A top federal safety official denied the claim and urged parents to continue to use the seats.

The Center for Auto Safety and parents of children killed or injured in allegedly defective child restraint seats blamed, in part, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration for allegedly failing to issue recalls or enforce those it does issue.

"Children ride at risk because recalled seats are not replaced or repaired, warning labels are approved that never reach owners, investigations are dropped without recalls and compliance test failures are ignored," center director Clarence Ditlow told a news conference.

He said that more than half of the 27 million child car seats sold over the last eight years are "in use despite being recalled or failing compliance tests."

Jeffrey Miller, assistant NHTSA administrator, said, "It is categorically false to suggest, as Mr. Ditlow does, that half the seats on the road are dangerous."

He acknowledged that only 7 percent of seats subject to recalls are actually brought into compliance, but he said recall responses for all products are low and most of the 26 recalls issued over the last decade involve minor problems.

He said laws requiring child safety seats in all 50 states and the District of Columbia have pushed usage to 82 percent.

"Hundreds of children are saved each year and countless injuries are reduced or prevented altogether," Miller told a news conference called to respond to the center's report. Department analysts estimate that wide use of safety seats has reduced infant deaths in car accidents by about 70 percent.

NATION

Miller, and Ditlow, urged consumers concerned about the safety of child restraints to call the Transportation Department's auto safety hotline (800-424-9393) for information about any seat or a list of recalls.

The center's report said 622 children were killed while strapped into child safety seats in the last decade. The study did not break down how many children died as the result of unsafe seats, how many died from the improper use of the seats and how many died in accidents in which no amount of protection would have saved the child.

Among problems cited in recalls were belt fasteners that don't hold, belts that are too loose, buckles that pop open, seat shells that crack, seats that incline too far to hold the child and belt choking hazards.

A major child seat manufacturer, Evenflo, said through spokesman Bob Potter that some seats the center cited have been on the market for years, with millions sold, and have proved their safety benefit.

Potter said the company had complied with all government safety orders and all federal regulations, even going beyond government requirements in ensuring the safety of its seats.

The center study asked the Transportation Department to examine all deaths involving child restraint seats, to reopen several compliance cases against manufacturers and to increase enforcement of recalls.

Ditlow alleged that at least 8 million seats have failed safety compliance tests but were not investigated or recalled by the government, while an additional 3.4 million were investigated but not recalled. Of 5.6 million subject to recall, he said, only 300,000 were actually replaced or repaired.

The report maintained that many defective seats are still being sold by retail stores throughout the country.

The center director appeared with the parents of children who were injured or killed in seats the parents had thought were protecting their children.

Ditlow said all manufacturers have had safety problems. "We cannot point out any single manufacturer that has a sterling record," he said.

Cory McKinley of Buffalo, Minn., whose 2½-year-old daughter, Nancy Ann, was killed in a September crash, said he found out after the accident that the seat the child was using had been the subject of a recall.

Terrorism alert shows agencies have changed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government, criticized a year ago for holding back public warning of possible terrorist activity, issued a rare advisory Friday saying there could be holiday-season attacks on Americans overseas.

The Federal Aviation Administration issued a similar bulletin to airlines, and a spokesman for Pan American World Airways said, "We have enhanced our security systemwide."

"We want to be as forthcoming as possible with information of this kind," said State Department press officer Anita Stockman. "The information we have received constitutes sufficient reason to be concerned and to pass our concern to the American people."

She said there was "no information about a specific threat against Americans" but that the warning was based on "an increased level of weapons seizures and arrests of persons affiliated with Middle Eastern terrorist groups" in recent weeks.

She emphasized that for traveling Americans, "We are not advising anybody anything. We are not asking or advising people to cancel travel plans. ... We are simply passing on information we feel should be brought to the attention of travelers, who must make their own decisions."

The government advisory came just six days before the first anniversary of the terrorist attack that blew up Pan Am Flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland, killing all 259 aboard as well as 11 people on the ground.

In the ensuing investigation, it was revealed that U.S. authorities had received warnings about the possibility of a terrorist attack but had not made them public, believing they were not necessarily reliable and might unduly spread alarm.

This time, the U.S. government decided to issue a public advisory at the same time it began briefing foreign governments about such a threat, said a department official who spoke only on condition of anonymity.

A brief statement issued by the department cited "recent reports of movement of Middle Eastern terrorists in Western Europe" and suggested "terrorists may be planning near-term attacks against a variety of targets, possibly including U.S. interests."

It did not say more specifically where attacks might occur, but added: "If credible, specific information or a threat to the public is received, the Department of State will provide additional information for travelers and other concerned parties."

In addition, the Federal Aviation Administration advised airlines to step up security on potentially affected flights.

"Certainly it enhances our vigilance," said Jeff Kriendler, a spokesman for Pan American World Airways. But he said he did not believe the alert would impede holiday travel. "We do have a system in place which we think we can handle the flow," he said.

In New York, Pan Am spokesman Alan Loflin said, "Largely because of the anniversary we have coming up, and also because of the incredible amount of passenger traffic, we have enhanced out security systemwide. Mostly, this involves using more (security) people."

He declined to give specifics on additional security.

Friday's announcement "is significant because it's the first time I'm aware of that there is a public announcement," said Robert Kupperman, a terrorism expert at the Center for Strategic and International Studies, a Washington think tank.

In the case of Pan Am 103, "we warned some government officials and left the public naked. This time it appears we're not going to get caught in that way."

NATION IN BRIEF

Recent events focus of Bush, Mitterrand talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush and French President Francois Mitterrand will discuss changes sweeping Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union when they meet this weekend in the Caribbean, U.S. officials said Friday.

There is no formal agenda for today's session on St. Martin, but the two are expected to focus on recent events in Europe and on their respective meetings with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev, said White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

Bush and Mitterrand will meet for about three hours and have lunch at the L'Habitation de Lonvilliers resort on the French side of the tiny island France shares with the Netherlands. They also plan a joint news conference.

Bush is scheduled to leave Washington before dawn Saturday and return to the capital late that night.

WWII vet denied medal

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Army board ruled Friday against honoring a World War II soldier with the Medal of Honor, rejecting after a two-year investigation his claim of single-handedly killing more than 500 Japanese soldiers.

In fact, Lt. Col. Terry Adkins said the Army could not corroborate the statements by David S. Rubitsky, now 72, that fierce fighting occurred Dec. 1-2, 1942.

The Milton, Wis., man contends he was denied the medal because he is Jewish.

"I could not find any basis of this," Adkins, chief of the Army's Military Awards Branch, said of the anti-Semitism charge by Rubitsky.

Adkins said the decision not to award the medal came after an exhaustive investigation in which the Army examined scores of documents, battle logs and interviews.

The officer told Congress of the Army's findings earlier Friday, and four lawmakers quickly issued a statement saying they had pressed for a full investigation and accepted it as "fair, thorough and conclusive."

'Vultures' rip off donors

WASHINGTON (AP) — Millions of dollars in charity donations go to sophisticated hucksters who prey on the generous to line their own pockets rather than helping the needy, a Senate panel was told Friday.

"In some cases, these vultures simply create their own charity for the sole purpose of putting out a heart-tugging mailing and cashing in on the forthcoming checks," Sen. Howard M. Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, told the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Officials of leading charities and state officials said lax accounting rules have enabled self-described charities to make it appear that they provide much more money to education and services than they actually do.

Metzenbaum, who is sponsoring legislation to tighten regulation, said Americans contribute more than $100 billion to thousands of charities and that millions of dollars "end up not in the hands of the deserving but in the pockets of the deceiving."

FDA seeks to restrict claims

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration said Friday that it wants to restrict health claims that food manufacturers can put on their labels.

The plan would limit health claims to defined areas where scientific evidence shows an interaction between diet and health, said FDA spokesman Bill Grigg.

Companies would be allowed to make claims based on evidence that calcium may help prevent osteoporosis, dietary fiber and low fat may reduce risk of cancer and heart disease and low sodium may help reduce risk from high blood pressure, he said.

The FDA used to prohibit health claims on food, but in 1987 put into effect a rule that it now says has proved to be too permissive and has allowed companies to make overly broad health claims.

Plane's engines shut down in brush with volcanic ash

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Ash coated a tiny community near Mount McKinley and disrupted airline traffic in Alaska's largest city after Redoubt Volcano blew its top again Friday, then returned to seismic muttering.

Gritty ash from the volcano 115 miles southwest of Anchorage was suspected in the failure of all four engines on a Boeing 747 passenger jet that made a safe emergency landing here at 12:25 p.m., the Federal Aviation Administration said.

Engines on the KLM Royal Dutch Airlines plane traveling from Amsterdam were reported out after the aircraft passed through volcanic ash undetected by radar, FAA spokeswoman Mary Lou Wojtalik said. All engines were restarted and Flight 867 landed without injury to the 245 people aboard, she said.

Redoubt erupted twice Friday, first in the early hours of the morning and again at 10:17 a.m. The volcano's 23-year sleep ended with a midday eruption Thursday.

In the town of Talkeetna, a staging point for Mount McKinley climbers in the spring and summer, "we had a massive cloud of dust move over us at noon," said Brad Ault, a dispatcher at the Alaska State Troopers post.

"It blotted out the sun. It was like night for about an hour."

Talkeetna bartender Shannon Tobiason said most people remained indoors.

"This place is covered," Tobiason said. "There's about 3 inches (of ash) on the car windshields. Everything here is brown and there is a sulfur smell."

Activity appeared to decline at about 1:30 p.m., said Steve Brantley, a U.S. Geological Survey spokesman from the Cascade Volcano Observatory in Vancouver, Wash.

"We're no longer observing any tremor-like signals," Brantley said. "This suggests the volcano is not now erupting."

Mexican consulate 'wunderkind' to San Antonio residents

By FRANK LEVINE

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The call was desperate. A young Mexican man was found bleeding and unconscious along the railroad tracks, his legs amputated by a passing train. There was no family or friends in San Antonio to care for him as he hovered between life and death at a local military hospital.

Mexican Consul General Humberto Hernandez Haddad, after receiving the call from local authorities, launched an intensive search for relatives in Mexico.

"We finally found them in San Luis Potosi and made arrangements for his transfer and medical care in his hometown," Hernandez said.

"The Mexican government paid for his hospital care and transportation to his hometown, but his case was just one of hundreds of similar cases we get each year through our San Antonio consulate," he said.

Hernandez begins his day at 8 a.m. and spends about 15 hours a day handling literally hundreds of calls and requests for visas, direction, aid and assistance. His caseload includes finding missing persons, investigating murders, visiting jails and burying the dead.

One day recently, a Mexican senator was summoned to Mexico City for an important meeting the next afternoon with Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari.

"Do you know which hotel he's in?" Hernandez asked the president's secretary. "Well, I guess we'll have to check them all ...." Confident he would find the senator, he made reservations on his behalf for the last flight out that night.

Hernandez, 38, who arrived at his post April 17, has been described as a "wunderkind" — representative of a new generation of young, highly educated technocrats in Mexico's political system.

Politics has been Hernandez's life, having been elected congressman from his home state of Tabasco at the age of 21. He later taught constitutional law at the National Autonomous University of Mexico, was elected federal senator and was co-chairman of the U.S.-Mexico Interparliamentary Meetings between 1983 and 1988.

"I am in the key post in the key state in the key nation," he said. "My role here is to protect the interests of the Mexican people, while at the same time finding the political and economic balance between both nations."

Hernandez has no press officer, no tourist officer and no economic development officer.

"I must be a man of many hats at this post," he said. "I feel that one of my greatest tasks is to stimulate commerce between the two countries. It is important Texans understand that what is good for Mexico is good for Texas."

But his workload, at times, is almost too much.

"We are performing here with about one-third the staff required to meet our local needs, and we face severe budgetary restrictions," he said. "But we will continue to do the best we can to serve the San Antonio community."

Hernandez is a highly trained Institutional Revolutionary Party loyalist, and, apparently, a member of Salinas' inner circle.

The PRI, which has ruled Mexico for 60 years, is attempting under Salinas to reshape its image and structure — battered by years of abuse, corruption and political setbacks.

"The Salinas administration continues to demonstrate its ability to deal with the problems affecting the country, including drug trafficking, corruption and economic development," Hernandez said.

Lee, MHS girls fall short in league openers

Lady Rebels outscored 9-0 in overtime

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Editor

The Midland Lee girls built themselves a mountain to climb, climbed it and then forgot to plant the flag in a 68-59 overtime loss to Odessa Permian's Lady Panthers Friday night at the Lee gym in the District 4-5A opener for both teams.

With 51 seconds left in the third quarter, the Rebels trailed by 16 points, 50-34. Then Lee exploded with a 23-point fourth quarter while using a man-on-man press to knot the score at 59 at the end of regulation play.

Lee even moved into a fourth period lead twice at 57-56 and 59-58 before letting it end in a dead heat.

That's when Lee was supposed to plant it's flag on the top of that huge mountain. Someone forgot the flag as Permian rolled off nine unanswered points, hitting all four shots from the field.

"We could have won that game if Mary Ann Isom's last shot in regulation play had gone in instead of rolling off the rim," said Lee head coach Shirley Stephenson. "But it didn't. We just got too far behind early.

"I hope the girls proved to themselves that they aren't a bad team with the way they came back in the fourth quarter. We're young, inexperienced and still trying to get it all together."

Isom led all scorers in the game with 29 points, hitting 18 in the second half to spur on Lee's comeback bid. But Permian countered with Anita Wright with 21 points, including five in the overtime period.

Permian controlled the tempo of the game until the fourth quarter when Mojo scored a meager nine points while Lee was on a 23-point run.

"We relaxed too much, but Shirley did a good job of coaching with that man-to-man press," said Permian coach Terri King.

But Permian answered the overtime bell as Stephanie James and LaShon Powell hit quick baskets and Lee's turnaround bid began to teeter quickly. Wright put it away down the overtime stretch with five more while Lee couldn't crack the scoreboard again.

Nightmarish third quarter befuddles Lady Bulldogs

By BILL PRICE
Sports Writer

ODESSA — Just when the Midland High girls figured they were going to give Odessa High the battle of its life in Friday's District 4-5A basketball opener at the OHS gymnasium, the Lady Bronchos raised their game to a higher level and took a 52-40 decision on their home court.

The loss sent MHS to 5-8 overall and 0-1 in 4-5A, while the Lady Broncs moved to 7-6 and 1-0.

After leading by one point at the end of the first quarter and holding steady for a 29-29 tie at half time, the Lady Bulldogs were making OHS pay with an inside game that scored 11 first-half points and forced Lady Bronc post Gina Messman to the bench with three fouls early in the second quarter.

Then came the third period, a nightmare the Lady 'Dogs will not soon forget, even though they probably wish they could. MHS found itself in the jaws of an inspired OHS half court defense that did not allow the Lady 'Dogs to get a shot off before three and a half minutes had elapsed.

When MHS was able to get close enough to the basket to shoot, the Lady Broncs forced rushed shots and poor shot selection by the Lady 'Dogs, who were 1-of-13 from the field in the quarter.

Scoring in the fourth quarter was relatively close (OHS outscored MHS 10-9 in the period), but the preceding quarter had done its harm.

"Four quarters does a game make," said Jane Young, MHS coach. "We just didn't have a good third quarter. It's not our kids intentionally missed all those shots.

"We played well for three quarters, but you have to give Odessa High credit. They came out and scored 10 points in no time at the start of the third quarter."

"We're just a second half ball club. We just came out tight at the start of the game," said OHS coach June Owen. "We didn't know too much about Midland coming into the game except that they were young.

"I just told our girls to they needed to play good, solid defense and that if we played our game we wouldn't have a lot to worry about."

Rebs rub out Rangers, 48-28

Lee shoots lowly 38 percent in win

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

The Midland Lee boys proved a basketball team could shoot 38 percent from the floor and win in a 48-28 struggle over Greenwood in non-district action Friday at the Chaparral Center.

The Rebels outscored the Rangers 20-2 in the fourth quarter with a big assist from their full-court press that stifled the visitors for the first five minutes of the final period. Teddy Smith's layup was the only blood that Greenwood could draw from the hosts. In fact, the Rangers shot only six times in the final period.

"We just cut off all their passing lanes," Lee senior David Meade said.

Greenwood shot 11-of-37, or 30 percent, Friday.

Lee led the whole way, but Greenwood outscored the Rebs 10-4 in the third quarter to cut the LHS lead to two going into the final minutes.

That's when it all went sour for the Rangers.

"We just couldn't make the big play," Chaney said. "I really thought we were going to be in the hunt the whole way, but basketball's a funny game."

Lee got off to a 10-2 start against the ice-cold Rangers, who shot just three-of-13 from the floor in the first quarter.

"We were just standing around on offense in the first half," Chaney said.

But the Rangers stayed in the game when the Rebels shot a combined four-for-22 in the second and third periods — before making seven-of-eight in the final eight.

The Rangers played a zone defense after Lee's initial spurt to accentuate the Rebels' coldness from outside. LHS mentor Paul Stueckler would have preferred they stay in their man-to-man.

Bulldogs squeak by Steers, 61-59

From Staff Reports

BIG SPRING — Michael Wright and Scott Melzer scored six points each to lead the Midland High Bulldogs to a 61-59 win over the Big Spring Steers in non-district boys basketball action Friday.

The Bulldogs, 9-5 going into Monday's game with Bronwfield at the Chaparral Center, led 46-45 going into the fourth quarter, but the Steers took the lead briefly before MHS put the game away at the free throw line.

Big Spring junior Mike Williams cut the final margin to two with a three-point field goal at the final buzzer. Williams came off the bench to tie Wright for game scoring honors with 21 points.

Melzer added 15 for MHS, while Frank Bowers chipped in with 10 for the winners.

Big Spring mentor Tommy Washington was pleased with the Steer effort despite the loss.

"I think now the kids can realize that they can play with people," the former Crane coach said.

Louis Soldan and Roy Lang scored 12 and 10 points, respectively, for the Steers.

Landry to write autobiography

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

■ Related Story, Page 8B

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Tom Landry, sometimes criticized by writers for the way he handled the Dallas Cowboys, said on Friday he is joining the writing brotherhood with an autobiography he promises will pull no punches.

"It's going to be a little scary for me, opening up my inner thoughts for public scrutiny," Landry said. "Sometimes it can be very difficult to say what's on your heart. I've never written a book. I want it to be special."

Reminded that he was joining the very profession that at times had given him a hard time, Landry quipped "It's never too late to tear up the contract."

The book with working title of "The Tom Landry Story," will be co-published by Zondervan Publishing House of Grand Rapids, Mich., and Harper & Row Publishers, New York. Release is expected in August, 1990.

Landry, 65, was fired in February after 29 years as head coach of the Cowboys.

He will see the Cowboys play in person for the first time since he was fired on Saturday in New York. Landry and wife, Alicia, will be guests of Giants owner Wellington Mara at the Meadowlands.

"I'd like to see the Giants win because it means more to them," Landry said. "Dallas is out of the playoffs."

Landry said "you have to remember the Giants were my second home in football. I spent 10 years there playing and as an assistant."

He added "I will feel something watching the Cowboys play. You can't do something for 29 years and not feel something. But in a way the team I'll be watching will be so different. It's just not the same people."

Landry called the Cowboys 1989 season "sad."

"It's been a disappointment," Landry said. "They are fighting a long uphill battle. That would have been the fight we would have had this year, trying to reverse a losing trend. I had a lot of confidence I could have brought us back."

Landry's last team went 3-13. If Dallas loses Saturday it will mark the losingest season in franchise history.

Landry said he wasn't sure if he would ever return to Texas Stadium.

"Oh, I may do it eventually," he said. "It wouldn't be fair for me to be around. I'd be a distraction."

Landry said he was hurt when new owner Jerry Jones didn't call to invite him to attend Lee Roy Jordan's Ring of Honor ceremony.

"They didn't call," he said. "It bothered me a little but I probably would have been a distraction."

Landry criticized Jones' recent decision to move training camp from California Lutheran College in Thousand Oaks to Austin, Texas next July.

"California Lutheran was a perfect training camp site," Landry said. "It's difficult to train in Texas because it's so hot you get mentally tired. I'm sure they did it to save money. They're trying to find a way to service the debt."

Asked again if he would ever consider coaching or politics, Landry said. "I've learned you never say no to anything. Who knows? Right now I'm trying to groom Roger (Staubach) for governor. I'm not interested in coaching."

Landry said he didn't think he wanted to be a television analyst because "I couldn't be critical enough."

Landry admitted that occasionally the old warhorse comes out in him.

"I missed all the excitement of Philadelphia," Landry said. "I would have liked to see what I could do against (Philadelphia coach) Buddy (Ryan)."

Landry said he thought new coach Jimmy Johnson had a long haul ahead to the NFL playoffs.

"It's hard to build a team fast enough," Landry said. "You've got to build to the point where you can win eight games then you have to learn how to win to get to a higher echelon. That's a big hurdle to jump to get into contention (for the playoffs)."

Permian vaulted to a 16-6 lead in the first period as Wright hit for six points. Powell has seven of her 15 points in the big 20-point third period. James ended the night with 11 points.

Isom had 10 points in the third and eight in the fourth to key the Rebel charge and Sheena Parker had all seven of her points in the key fourth quarter rally. However, Parker had a lot of bench time in the game after a shouting confrontation with coaches in the first period. Parker was averaging in double figures for Lee at 10.7 per game and was missed on the floor.

Both teams came into the game with 4-8 season marks, but Permian comes out on top as the new season begins. Permian is now 5-8 and 1-0 while Lee is 4-9 and 0-1. Lee, a playoff team last year, now travels to Abilene Cooper Tuesday for a rough road test in an effort to climb quickly back into the thick of the race.

Lee hit almost 50 percent from the field with a 23 of 48 shooting eye while Permian hit 28 of 57. Lee turnovers gave Permian many more shots at the basket. Lee got only five shots in the first period while Permian was taking 18.

In junior varsity action, Permian took a 41-28 verdict over Lee as Tania Castillejos led the way with 14 points. No Rebels were in double figures.

MHS

Effie Freeman and Robin Landreth scored 10 points each to lead the way for the Lady 'Dogs, and Sally Gibson finished with nine.

Outside shooter Rosalba Carrasco burned the MHS zone defense with seven field goals for 14 points in leading OHS. Messman, who scored six points in the first quarter before getting into foul trouble, closed the game with 10.

"That's the way she's (Messman) been all year. She gets into foul trouble early and we have to sit her down. But one good thing about it is it gives her a chance to look what's going on on the court and adjust her game," Owen said.

"We also we able to spread the zone out with our outside shooting. We our long shooters the 'Zone Busters' because that's the way to beat a zone."

REBELS

"We wanted to run our man offense on them in the fourth quarter, but we couldn't get them to come out of their zone."

The Rebels did a good job on Greenwood scoring stalwarts Tim Flowers and Randy Marquez, who were a combined two-for-13 from the field after scoring in double figures much of the season. Damon Dublin led Greenwood with seven points.

The two teams meet again Tuesday at Greenwood. Lee will be 7-6 on the season going into the rematch, while Greenwood dropped to 4-8.

Rangerettes advance to tourney finals

From Staff Reports

GREENWOOD — Greenwood and Wall both won here Friday night in the semifinals of the Greenwood Rangerette Invitational basketball tournament to advance to today's 6 p.m. finals.

The Rangerettes scored a 46-34 victory over Reagan County and Kendra Underwood hit for 14 points and Shelley Mackey for 13. Tanya Lennox led the Big Lake team with eight points.

Meanwhile, Wall got past a tough Coahoma team, 35-31, as Ullrich hit for 17 and Multer 10. Kelly Williams had 12 for Coachoma and Anderson 10.

Stanton and McCamey will meet at 3 p.m. today for the consolation title.

Stanton nipped Alpine 46-45 to gain the consolation finals against McCamey. Jana Heidelberg hit 22 points for Stanton while Karen Graves had 10. Janell Reed had 22 for Alpine while Dee Ann Molina had 11.

McCamey had a much easier time of it in a 48-28 win over Crane. Berryhill and Cantrell each had 10 points in the win while Crane's Young led all scorers with 13 points.

Coahoma and Reagan County will play for third place at 4:30 p.m. today.

Lady Mustangs host final at Mid. Christian tourney

From Staff Reports

The Midland Christian girls will face Jesus Chapel in the 3 p.m. finals of the Midland Christian basketball tournament today while the Greenwood junior varsity will face Jesus Chapel in the boys' championship match at 4:30 p.m.

The MC girls got to the finals with a 59-18 win over the younger MC junior varsity as Janette Morales had 16 for the Mustang varsity. Rhonda Stegall led the JV with eight points.

Jesus Chapel defeated the Lee sophomores, 45-34, with Lorena Vaughn hitting for 26. Latonya Anders led Lee with 10 points.

The Greenwood JV won 86-19 over the Midland Christian JV in a first round game as Mark Burfund hit for 20 points. Kevin McNew had 13 for MC's JV.

Greenwood came back with a 73-42 win over El Paso Agape as Roger Guess led the Rangers with 15. Brock Brothers had 18 for Agape.

Jesus Chapel won a 95-67 decision over Northeast Christian Academy with L. Dunn hitting for 34 points. NECA got 30 from T. Zienner.

Midland Christian lost to NECA by a 57-52 margin as Zeinner hit for 25 points and MC got 18 from David Minihan.

Malone's 27, Stockton's 26 move Utah Jazz over Detroit Pistons

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Karl Malone scored 27 points and John Stockton added 26 as Utah held the opposition under 100 points for the sixth consecutive regulation game and beat Detroit 94-91 Friday night

Malone, Stockton and teammate Darrell Griffith combined for 20 of Utah's 23 fourth-quarter points to help the Jazz overcome a 75-71 third-quarter deficit. The Jazz, leading the NBA in fewest points allowed and lowest field-goal percentage, held the Pistons to 16 points in the fourth period.

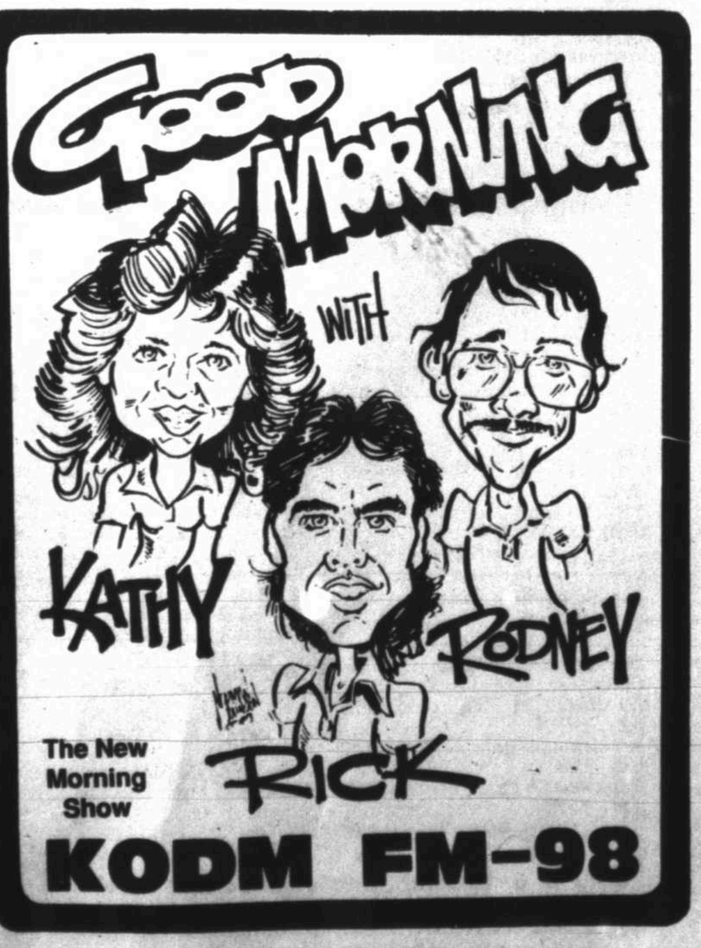

Stockton, leading the NBA in assists with an average of 14.4, had only four, his low since Nov. 12, 1988.

SEASONS
Dec. 16
1950—Two future Hall of Famers, Jean Beliveau and Bernie Geoffrion, made their NHL debuts with the Montreal Canadiens. Geoffrion scored the first of his 393 career goals in a 1-1 tie with the New York Rangers. Beliveau, whose No. 4 has been retired by the Canadiens, wore No. 17 in his debut.

NBA Today

SCOREBOARD
Seattle at New York (7:30 p.m. EST). The Knicks are the league's only remaining unbeaten home team, at 8-0.
STARS
Thursday
Michael Jordan, Bulls, scored 38 points in only 25 minutes, making all three of his 3-point attempts and 14 of 20 shots, as Chicago won its seventh straight at home, 124-113 over Orlando. Jordan also had seven rebounds and five assists.
Rik Smits, Pacers, scored 30 points, grabbed 15 rebounds and blocked four shots in Indiana's 102-78 victory over New Jersey. Smits was perfect in 10 tries from the foul line and outscored the Nets 13-9 in the first quarter.
Terry Cummings, Spurs, had 26 points, seven rebounds, six assists, four blocks and three steals in 37 minutes as San Antonio beat Houston 104-100.
SOLID SUPPORT
Michael Jordan stole the show, but teammate Scottie Pippen was dazzling as well Thursday when Chicago beat Orlando 124-113. Pippen, playing a team-high 33 minutes, hit on 10 of 18 field goal attempts and had eight steals, seven assists, three blocks, three rebounds and no turnovers.
SHOWDOWN IN TEXAS
The first NBA meeting between the Western Conference's two best centers — Houston's Akeem Olajuwon and San Antonio's David Robinson — went to Robinson and the Spurs, 104-100, and was as close as the score indicates.
Olajuwon, 5-for-17 from the field, scored 15 points, grabbed 16 rebounds, blocked three shots, made two steals and commited five fouls. Robinson, 4-for-10 from the field, had 19 points — he was 11-for-13 from the line — and added nine rebounds, three blocks, three steals and one foul.
SCORING
Miami, 0-5 versus the Los Angeles Lakers in its history, has lost by 47, 32, 40, 13 and 27 points in those games, an average of 31.8.
SWISH
The Pacers were 21-for-21 from the foul line against New Jersey on Thursday. Center Rik Smits led Indiana, going 10-for-10. ... Houston was 22-for-24 from the line in its 104-100 loss at San Antonio.
SWINGS
Robert Reid of Charlotte, who scored 31 points in 12 appearances for Portland before being waived this week, had 20 points Thursday night in his first outing since he resigned with the Hornets. Reid, traded for Richard Anderson in the off-season, averaged 14.7 points for Charlotte last season.
STREAKS
Charlotte equalled New Jersey's NBA season-high, and its own club record, by losing its ninth straight Thursday, 105-101 to Washington at Landover, Md. The setback dropped Charlotte to 0-10 on the road this season and marked the 14th straight game the Midwest Division cellar-dwellers have failed to make at least half of their field goal attempts.
STILL SHOOTING BLANKS
Dennis Hopson of New Jersey, who entered action Thursday with a .414 shooting percentage, made only 4 of 16 shots against Indiana, dropping his percentage to .406. Teammate Mookie Blaylock, at .371 going in, was 4-for-13 and dropped to .368.
SIGNED
Micheal Williams, waived Tuesday by Phoenix, signed a one-year contract with Dallas

NBA

Ro's season-high leads Mavs by Sixers

Associated- Press

Rolando Blackman scored a season-high 28 points and the Dallas Mavericks scored the last 10 points of the game to defeat the Philadelphia 76ers.

Dallas trailed 88-85 with 2:38 remaining, but Blackman and Derek Harper closed out the scoring with five points each.

Philadelphia played the final 18:23 without Charles Barkley, who scored 14 points before being ejected by referee Stan Javie.

Philadelphia never trailed in the first half and led 48-39 with 2:44 left in the second quarter before Dallas scored 10 of the next 15 points to trail only 53-49 at halftime.

The Mavericks took their first lead of the game, 59-58, on Adrian Dantley's jumper with 7:30 remaining in the third quarter.

They continued to lead until the 76ers scored the final four points of the third period and the first four of the fourth quarter to go ahead 80-73 with 10:12 to go.

Dallas then scored eight straight points and took an 81-80 advantage on a layup by Blackman with 6:42 remaining.

Dantley and Harper each had 17 points for the Mavericks while Mike Gminski had 26 points and 15 rebounds and Hersey Hawkins 15 points for the 76ers.

Cavaliers 120, SuperSonics 101

John Williams scored five of his career-high 32 points during an 11-0 fourth-quarter run that broke open a close game as the Cleveland Cavaliers beat the Seattle SuperSonics for their fourth straight win.

Williams scored 21 points in the first half, helping the Cavaliers to a 55-54 lead. The Sonics, however, regained a 68-61 advantage with an 11-2 spurt midway through the third period, getting baskets from five different players during the run.

Cleveland answered with a 13-2 flurry of its own, capped by Mark Price's 15-foot jumper and free throw, taking the lead for good at 74-70.

The Cavaliers led by three after three quarters, and a three-point play by Steve Kerr began the 11-point rally that put the Cavaliers in control early in the fourth period. Five points during the spurt came on foul shots, one of them for a technical on Sonics coach Bernie Bickerstaff.

Cleveland held a double-figure advantage the rest of the way and built leads as big as 24 points.

Price scored 20 points and Chris Dudley matched his career-high with 15. Dudley was playing for the first time without a cast on his left wrist, broken during the preseason.

Derrick McKey had 20 to lead Seattle, which lost for the eighth time in its last 10 road games. Xavier McDaniel had 17.

Cleveland was without Coach Lenny Wilkens, who has a sinus infection. Assistant coach Dick Helm handled the team.

Knicks 113, Hawks 109

Gerald Wilkins scored 29 points, including the go-ahead basket late in the game, leading the New York Knicks over the Atlanta Hawks.

Wilkins put the Knicks ahead to stay at 103-101 with 4:24 left, added a field goal for a four-point lead and hit a free throw at 2:06 for a five-point advantage.

Patrick Ewing's jumper closed out the 9-2 run, giving the Knicks a 110-103 lead with 1:54 left.

The loss was Atlanta's second straight after a seven-game winning streak and broke an eight-game home winning string.

New York led 86-85 going into the final period, but Atlanta's 11-2 run, sparked by Dominique Wilkins' seven points, gave the Hawks a 97-93 lead with 7:24 left.

Charles Oakley had 23 points and 15 rebounds and Ewing also scored 23 points, 10 of them in the third quarter. Kevin Willis had a season-high 25 for Atlanta, and Wilkins also scored 25.

Beginning late in the first period, the Knicks went on a 25-8 run to lead 44-39 with 6:38 left in the second quarter.

Atlanta battled back to tie the game at 58 with 18 seconds left in the half, but Kenny Walker scored four points in the last two seconds to put the Knicks ahead by four at halftime.

After his field goal with two seconds left, Walker missed a free throw but got the rebound and scored as the half ended.

Lakers 119, Celtics 110

James Worthy led a long-range shooting attack with 28 points as the Los Angeles Lakers broke open a close game with a 12-0 run at the start of the fourth period in a victory over the Boston Celtics.

A.C. Green had 25 points, Byron Scott 21 and Magic Johnson 16 as the Lakers improved the NBA's best record to 17-5 with their third consecutive road victory.

The Lakers won the game with free throws, outscoring Boston 28-8 at the line.

The Lakers led 60-55 at halftime, fell behind briefly in the third period and then went ahead to stay on three free throws and an 18-foot shot by Green.

Then, leading 85-82 at the three-quarter mark, Los Angeles nailed down the victory at the outset of the fourth period, scoring a dozen points in the first two minutes.

Orlando Woolridge scored on an alley-oop basket and free throw and Scott followed with a 3-pointer. Worthy, Johnson and Vlade Divac added quick baskets and Los Angeles held a 97-82 lead.

Boston was led by Dennis Johnson with 24 points. Robert Parish had 23 and Larry Bird and Kevin McHale 21 each.

Bucks 103, Pacers 98

Jack Sikma scored six of his 20 points in the last minute as the Milwaukee Bucks overcame a 16-point halftime deficit to defeat the Indiana Pacers.

The Central Division-leading Pacers, who won seven of their previous eight outings, couldn't handle the second-half comeback by the Bucks.

Fred Roberts' free throw with about a minute to play tied the game at 95-95. A six-point run by the Bucks, with Sikma scoring the go-ahead layup, gave Milwaukee a 101-95 lead with eight seconds to go.

Reggie Miller scored 24 points and Chuck Person had 23 points, 16 rebounds and eight assists for the Pacers.

Indiana led 53-37 at the half, but Milwaukee surged ahead early in the next period with six consecutive points.

Milwaukee tied the Pacers at 3:30 of the third period on back-to-back free throws by Alvin Robertson. The go-ahead basket came on a layup by guard Jay Humphries, putting the Bucks ahead 71-69 at 2:49.

The lead changed hands seven times during the first three minutes of the final period, until the Pacers staged a 7-0 run, taking a 93-90 advantage.

Heat 95, Timberwolves 84

Rony Seikaly scored 14 of his 20 points in the first half as Miami built a double-digit lead and went on to defeat the Minnesota Timberwolves.

The victory was only the second in 12 games for the Heat, with both of the wins coming against expansion teams.

Sherman Douglas added 19 points and Grant Long 18 for the Heat, who lost to the Timberwolves 105-100 in Miami on Nov. 29. Tony Campbell had 23 points for Minnesota.

Seikaly's 14 points and Douglas' 11 points and seven assists helped Miami build a 50-39 halftime lead. The Heat used their fast break and Seikaly's inside scoring, including four slam dunks, to put together two 8-1 runs in the second quarter, during which Minnesota shot just 30 percent.

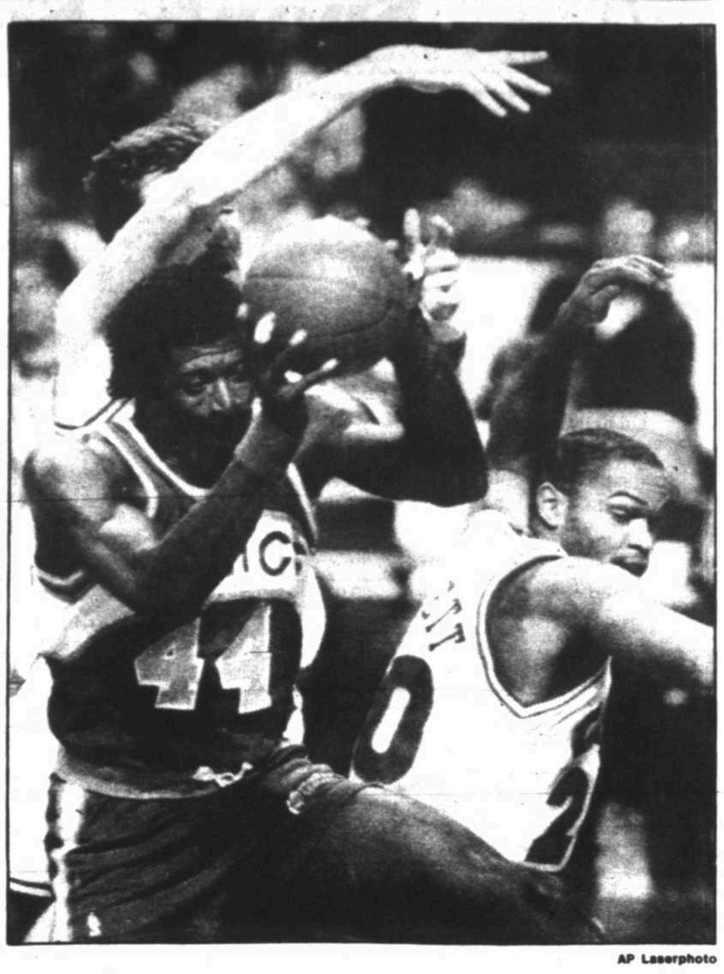

Nuggets 121, Kings 112

Walter Davis, the Denver Nuggets' instant offense off the bench, scored a season-high 35 points to lead Denver over the Sacramento Kings.

It was Denver's 10th victory in 11 home games. Davis connected on a jumper with 2:28 left in the first period, putting the Nuggets ahead to stay at 26-24.

By halftime, Denver increased the lead over the Kings to 66-53. Alex English had 14 of his 20 in the first half for the Nuggets.

The Kings made several mild threats in the second half, led by the shooting of Rodney McCray and Danny Ainge, who both scored 24 points. Wayman Tisdale and Kenny Smith had 20 each for Sacramento, who got no closer than eight in the last two periods.

Paterno seeks enrollment in Big Ten for Lions

Associated Press

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Coach Joe Paterno said Friday he would like to cap his coaching career by taking his Penn State football team into the Big Ten.

"I would be very pleased about it if it happens," Paterno said during a news conference scheduled a week ago to discuss Penn State's Dec. 29 Holiday Bowl game against Brigham Young at San Diego.

The bowl talk was buried in the discussion of a disclosure Thursday night by Stanley Ikenberry, Big Ten chairman, that bringing the Nittany Lions into one of the nation's most prestigious conferences was under discussion.

Ikenbery said the Big Ten would make an announcement within the next week. Paterno said he understood Penn State president Dr. Bryce Jordan also would make an announcement next week about the situation.

"The schools in the Big Ten are similar institutions to ours academically," said Paterno, who plans to retire in three years when he becomes 65. "It would be a great thing for the prestige of this institution to be identifed with those people.

"Athletically, it would be a plus in just about every area. It would be good for our football (program). I can't speak for our other coaches or Athletic Director Jim Tarman. But as far as I am concerned as a football coach, I'll be excited about it."

"Athletically, it would be a plus in every way."
— Joe Paterno

PENN STATE belongs to the Atlantic 10 Conference in basketball and other sports but always has been a major Eastern independent in football. Paterno tried to organize an Eastern all-sports conference but lost out when major schools such as Pittsburgh and Syracuse joined the Big East, a basketball-dominated conference.

Ikenberry, president of the University of Illinois, said talks that began about 10 years ago were renewed within recent months.

Joining the Big Ten would help ease the financial pressure on Penn State's football program, which supports the 28 other sports programs at the school. Paterno has said Penn State must play seven games at home to make ends meet.

This year, Penn State declined to sign a new 10-year contract with Syracuse, a traditional Eastern rival, because the Orangemen refused to play six of the games in State College. Most of Penn State's contracts provide for two games at home and one away or even a 3-1 ratio.

Most of Penn State's current opponents also play in stadiums that hold no more than 50,000. Most Big 10 stadiums are larger, holding up to 101,000. In addition, the Big Ten winner each year stands to make as much as $3 million in the Rose Bowl against the Pac 10 winner.

If State is admitted to the conference, the changeover would take years. Schedules already are complete through 1992, and some opponents have been scheduled as late as 1996.

"I DON'T know what has to happen in terms of schedules," Paterno said.

"I have a general idea, but I'm really not going to give it a thought until I hear it's about to happen."

Tarman said he and Paterno discussed the matter with Big Ten Commissioner Jim Delaney this week at San Diego, where Tarman and Paterno attended Holiday Bowl meetings. But Tarman stressed that the meeting was unplanned.

Ikenberry said Penn State was discussed at a meeting last weekend of the university presidents who would decide whether to admit a new member.

The decision will be up to the presidents of the Big Ten members — Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan, Michigan State, Minnesota, Northwestern, Ohio State, Purdue and Wisconsin.

Ohio State president Edward Jennings said Penn State "would fit in with the academic profile of the Big Ten."

"There's no question in my mind Penn State would be comparable academically with Big Ten schools," Jennings said.

Minnesota athletic director Rick Bay said, "If we're determined to expand, Penn State represents the kind of institution we want."

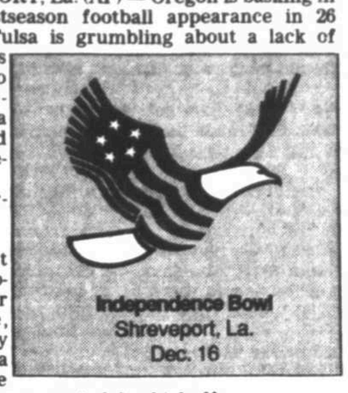

The Big Ten, formally known as the Intercollegiate Conference of Faculty Representatives and formerly called the Western Conference, was founded in Chicago on Jan. 1, 1895.

It originally had seven members — Chicago, Illinois, Michigan, Minnesota, Northwestern, Purdue and Wisconsin. Indiana and Iowa were added in 1899, Ohio State in 1912 and Michigan State in 1949. Chicago withdrew in 1946, while Michigan left in 1908 and came back in 1917.

Cold temps expected at Independence Bowl

By BOB BAUM

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Oregon is basking in its first postseason football appearance in 26 years and Tulsa is grumbling about a lack of respect as the two teams prepare for a cold and windy Independence Bowl Saturday night.

"Chilly Bowl" might be more appropriate for this game, with gusty winds and a temperature of 20 degrees expected by kickoff.

"The wind will affect the game," Tulsa coach Dave Rader said. "The cold probably won't be that big a deal."

Bowl officials remain confident the crowd will exceed the 20,242 who showed up last year for Southern Mississippi's victory over Texas-El Paso. The Ducks (7-4) promised to buy 14,000 tickets to secure the bowl bid, but only about 4,000 of their fans planning to attend.

Oregon is favored by 14 1-2 points but Tulsa tight end Gary Treat is used to such numbers. "The point spread doesn't mean anything to us," Treat said. "They can say anything they want. We haven't gotten any respect all year. We know we're a good football team. We just had some bad outings. If we go out and play to our potential we can play with anybody."

Tulsa (6-5) only needed a winning record to earn its invitation to Shreveport. Last year, an agreement between four independent schools and the Independence Bowl called for the team with the best record to get the bid. Two of the teams are on probation this year and a third finished with a losing record.

The Hurricane will be without receiver Dan Bitson, who suffered two broken legs and a broken wrist in a car accident near the Tulsa campus two weeks ago. The junior caught 73 passes for 1,425 yards and 15 touchdowns this season.

Oregon cornerback Chris Oldham said Tulsa will be a different team without Bitson.

"Personally, I don't think we're going to have any trouble defending them," Oldham said. "I know that Bitson was the major factor in their offense. Whoever they put in there and whatever they throw at us, I think we'll be pretty much all right."

The Hurricane has other weapons.

Junior T.J. Rubley is the all-time passing leader at a school known for producing high-quality quarterbacks. This season, he completed 155-of-308 for 2,292 yards and 22 touchdowns. But the player the Ducks fear most is fullback Brett Adams, who rushed for 1,071 yards this year.

"I think we're going to have to go in to this game the way we go in to every game, shutting down the running game," Oregon linebacker Mark Kearns said. "If we can get them into a second and long yards passing situation, I think we'll be in pretty good shape."

Tulsa will have its hands full stopping Oregon's explosive offense.

Led by the passing of Bill Musgrave and the running of Derek Loville and Latin Berry, Oregon was the highest scoring team in the Pacific-10 Conference, averaging 32 points per game.

At a school that produced Dan Fouts and Chris Miller, Musgrave, a junior, set team records in touchdowns and passing yardage this season. He was 208-of-362 for 2,761 yards and 20 touchdowns.

Tulsa makes its first bowl appearance since a 20-16 loss to McNeese State in the first Independence Bowl 13 years ago. The Ducks last bowl appearance resulted in a 21-14 victory over Southern Methodist in the 1963 Sun Bowl.

Despite nine fumbles, Thorndale wins, 40-6

Associated Press

WACO — The Thorndale Bulldogs committed nine fumbles in frigid conditions, but held on to the ball long enough and often enough to beat the Coolidge Yellowjackets 40-6 Friday night.

John Ware gained 97 yard on 14 carries and scored touchdowns of five, seven and five yards, and brother Jackie Ware added 118 yards on 13 carries and a 7-yard touchdown to lead Thorndale (14-0) to its first title game in school history.

The Bulldogs recovered six of their fumbles in temperatures in the teens and a wind chill of minus 10 degrees.

Thorndale will face Sudan (15-0) in the Class 1A championship game next Friday at Shotwell Stadium in Abilene.

Coolidge finished the season at 13-2.

Class 1A Semifinal
Sudan 35, Munday 26

SNYDER — Joe Gonzales gained 182 yards on 19 carries to lead a Sudan rushing attack that buried top-ranked Munday 35-26 Friday night.

Sudan (15-0) will battle Thorndale (14-0) next Friday night in the Class 1A title game at Shotwell Stadium in Abilene. Thorndale whipped Coolidge 40-6 Friday night in Waco.

Sudan put the game away on Jarod Bellar's 15-yard touchdown run with 2:40 left in the fourth quarter, capping a 62-yard, 13-play drive that ate up nearly eight minutes at provided the final score.

Class 2A Semifinal
Groveton 27, Schulenburg 6

COLLEGE STATION — Rodney Thomas scored three touchdowns, including a 98-yard return on the opening kickoff to lead top-ranked Groveton to a 27-6 victory over Schulemburg Friday night.

Groveton (15-0) will face the winner of Saturday's West Texas-Lorena game at Iowa Park for the Class 2A championship next weekend. Both West Texas and Lorena are unbeaten and untied in 14 games.

Bies-Green lead Mazda Champs

Associated Press

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — It's a team event, and it was teamwork that pushed Don Bies and Tammy Green into a two-shot lead in the opening round of the Mazda Champions Tournament.

Green and Bies took turns sinking birdie putts down the stretch on Friday, moving on top when Nancy Lopez and Al Geiberger, despite the best-ball format of this event, couldn't manage a par on the 18th hole.

"We both played really well," Bies, the PGA Senior Tour half of the pairing, said after the opening-round 61. "We had a great mix out there. I was really impressed with Tammy's game."

Green, the No. 8 money-winner on the LPGA tour with $204,143, and Bies combined for a 4-under-par 32 on the front nine of the par-72 Hyatt Dorado Beach course. They began their move on first place on the par-4 15th hole, when Green sank a 25-foot for birdie. Green's 7-iron approach to the 16th green checked up four feet from the cup, and her birdie putt got the team to 9-under.

Then Bies took over, dropping an 8-foot putt on the 17th and a 5-footer on No. 18. His birdies on the last two holes proved to be the difference, after Lopez and Geiberger each three-putted on the 18th to fall back to 10-under.

"We played consistently," Geiberger said. "Pretty balanced overall, except for the last hole.

"I was really surprised that Nancy three-putted. It just goes to show that anything can happen out here."

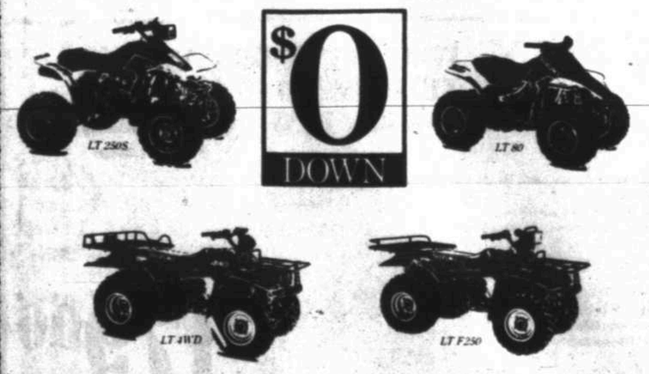

Lopez and Geiberger combined to shoot 30 on the front side, and were at 10-under heading to No. 18. But the unbelievable happened after each had safely reached the putting surface with their second shots. Geiberger three-putted from 25 feet and Lopez failed to get down in two from 12 feet.

THE '80s

One of the strangest sites of the '80s came when Pete Rose appeared on the Cable Value Network hawking baseball memorabilia only hours before he was dismissed from the game for life.

Recalling a miracle, an earthquake, and other '80s moments

By RON RAPOPORT
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — You ransack your files and your memory trying to sum up the 1980s and you conclude that nothing was more compelling than their beginning and their end.

A miracle and an earthquake, each one unexpected, each one larger than the sporting event that served as backdrop. The decade started with one and ended with the other. There was quite a ride in between, as well.

Lake Placid in the winter of 1980: a small village soon to go global, soon to set people weeping with the wonder of it all.

How unexpected was that American hockey victory over the Russians? So unexpected that the television people didn't even bother to get it switched to the evening hours, or to show it while it was taking place.

How quickly did it sneak up on us? So quickly that by the time we comprehended it, it had disappeared. As soon as we discovered what was truly America's team, it was gone in a puff of smoke.

Candlestick Park in the fall of 1989. America's most beautiful city soon to become the setting for a disaster movie. Brought into our homes live and in color. In 30 seconds, baseball became a game again. A trivial, inconsequential game.

But if these were the biggest astonishments of the '80s, they were not the only ones. Most often, sport brings us familiarity, repetitions, seasons, rhythms. But when it truly grabs our attention, often it is because of something we have not seen before, something we wish we could see again or something we hope we never have to.

There was Kirk Gibson freezing time with a home run that did not seem possible. There was Ben Johnson cheating history with a crime that seemed all too possible indeed.

There was Willie Shoemaker booting in Ferdinand at Churchill Downs while defying both the odds of 18-1 and his age of 54. There was Jack Nicklaus striding up the hill to the 18th green where he would win one more Masters at the age of 46.

There was Pete Rose breaking both baseball's records and its heart.

There was Jim McMahon mooning a helicopter, and Eddy the Eagle laughing while the world laughed with him.

There was Tom Watson, the man who had never won a U.S. Open, chipping in from 17 feet at Pebble Beach.

There was Calvin Peete, the man you would most dearly love to see win a Masters, shooting an 87 at Augusta instead.

There was Cus D'Amato raging at amateur boxing officials for denying Mike Tyson a spot on the 1984 Olympic team.

Two years later, Tyson got his revenge by becoming the youngest heavyweight champion in history. He was going to be the oldest, too, Tyson declared. If he can beat his own destructive impulses, he may well be right.

There were Al Campanis and Jimmy the Greek and Doug Williams and Bill White.

There was Mary Decker Slaney crying, Zola Budd saying she was sorry and Florence Griffith Joyner creating a stir when they looked at her track suits and her 100-meter dash times.

Dan Jansen fell and Jim Abbott pitched. Red Smith and A. Bartlett Giamatti died.

Carl Lewis wouldn't take one more long jump for the record, and the brilliant boxing career of Larry Holmes came to an end in a blizzard of nastiness. A fat man who took his nickname from a kitchen appliance scored touchdowns and everybody laughed again.

Michael Jordan joined the NBA and soon people were asking if he was the greatest ever. Magic Johnson merely shrugged and led the Lakers to another couple of titles. Peter Ueberroth showed baseball how to extract every nickel that wasn't nailed down, and the America's Cup proved once again it is more competitive in the courtroom than it ever dreamed of being on the high seas.

There were lights in Wrigley Field, two or three comebacks for Sugar Ray Leonard and a diet for Tom Lasorda.

Reggie Jackson retired, Larry Mize chipped in from 140 feet and Bo Jackson drew gasps by hitting a baseball and carrying a football in ways nobody had seen done in combination before.

Walter Mitty became an NFL strikebreaker, Wayne Gretzky became an Angelino, and some sportswriters ate a stew made of Korean-raised dog and heard about it in no uncertain terms from their readers.

It was the best of times and it was the worst of times, and it leaves you facing the '90s with one simple thought: more miracles, please; fewer earthquakes.

Indiana back Thompson receives Maxwell Award

By RALPH BERNSTEIN

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Indiana running back Anthony Thompson won the Maxwell Award on Friday as the outstanding college player of the year, beating Heisman Trophy winner Andre Ware.

Thompson received 1,398 points, including 273 first-place votes. Ware, the Houston quarterback, had more first-place votes — 286 — but only 1,245 points. Points are awarded on a 3-2-1 basis.

Ware beat Thompson by 70 points for the Heisman.

West Virginia's Major Harris was third, with 712 points and 112 first-place votes. He was followed by Penn State running back Blair Thomas with 390-76, Notre Dame quarterback Tony Rice with 389-60 and the Air Force Academy's Dee Dowis with 56-0. Points were awarded on a 3-2-1 basis.

The Maxwell Club, which presents the award each year, said in addition to its own 1,000 members, voters included more than 700 NCAA athletic department officials and more than 500 members of the American Football Writers Association.

Thompson said he patterned his style after Walter Payton, the retired Chicago Bears running back.

"I liked the way he presented himself on the field and the way he presented himself off the field," Thompson said via telephone hookup.

The All-American set NCAA career records with 65 touchdowns, 394 points and 377 yards rushing in a single game. He carried 1,161 times for 5,299 yards, a 4.6 average, during four years at Indiana.

His coach, Bill Mallory, said Thompson was the comsummate team player.

SFA has a knack for winning on the road

NCAA Division I-AA

STATESBORO, Ga. (AP) — Stephen F. Austin quarterback Todd Hammel doesn't think the home field will be an advantage to Georgia Southern in Saturday's NCAA Division I-AA championship game, although the top-ranked Eagles have won a record 26 games in a row at Allen E. Paulson Stadium.

"I think it's a plus for us," said Hammel, a senior who has thrown for 5,061 yards and 45 touchdowns this season for the pass-happy Lumberjacks.

"We broke long home winning streaks three times this season — against Southwest (Missouri State), Sam Houston State and Furman.

"We're sort of streak killers. If we play to our abilities, we have a good shot at it," he said.

There are some who question the fairness of the Eagles' playing at home, where they have throughout the playoffs.

"We played three playoff games at home last year and again this year because of our bid and our seeding, which is based on our ranking," said Georgia Southern coach Erk Russell. "As for the fourth game, we bought it and there were 89 teams which had a chance to do the same thing."

Southern defeated the Lumberjacks 27-6 in last year's quarterfinals.

"Last year we were kind of wide-eyed," said Hammel, a senior. "I don't think we were quite prepared. This year, that experience has helped us. I don't think we are so wide-eyed."

Southern (14-0) advanced to the title game with a 45-15 victory over Montana last week. The Eagles won the national title in 1985 and 1986 and will be making its fourth appearance in five years in the championship game and are seeking to become the first school this century to win 15 games in a season. Yale won 16 games in 1894 and Pennsylvania won 15 games in 1897.

"It would really be special to us," said senior slotback Ernest Thompson. "Knowing it would be a record for the NCAA, that no one had ever done that before — gone 15-0, would really make it great."

The No. 3 Lumberjacks (12-1-1) advanced to the championship game by edging defending champion Furman, ranked second this year, 21-19 on a snow-covered field last week.

Southern carries an overall 40-1 Paulson Stadium record into the 12:07 p.m. EST game, one that will be televised nationally on cable (ESPN). A sellout crowd of 25,000 is expected, the largest ever for a Division 1-AA title game.

"We are coming to throw the ball, I can tell you that," said Austin coach Lynn Graves. "That is what we do, and we are coming to protect first and throw."

"We didn't play well against Georgia Southern last season, but I think we've learned from our mistakes, and we won't be the same team that we were a year ago," he said. "They run the option as well as any team in the nation, and I think we throw the ball better than any team they've faced, so it will be a good game."

Graves said Southern's home field "doesn't have anything to do with it. This is one game that will take place on the field in a period of four hours. We respect the wins they have there, but we understand that this is a neutral site."

Russell says his Eagles have more to worry about than the Stephen F. Austin's passing game.

"They call themselves a passing team, but in Larry Centers, their fullback, he's such a good runner you can't back your ears and rush every time. They have a very balanced attack."

Centers has rushed for a school record 1,377 yards this season.

Akeem leads all-SWC

DALLAS (AP) — Four former University of Houston basketball players, led by Houston Rockets star Akeem Olajuwon, are part of the Southwest Conference All-Decade men's basketball team, the league office said Friday.

NBA All-Star Olajuwon was the top vote-getter of the 10 players selected by media and SWC basketball coaches' votes. He was named on each of the 41 ballots and was also the unanimous choice as SWC Player of the Decade.

His Houston teammates, Michael Young, Clyde Drexler and Rob Williams also earned spots on the All-Decade team.

Baylor's Terry Teagle, SMU's Jon Koncak, Arkansas' Joe Kleine and Alvin Robertson, Texas' LaSalle Thompson and Rice's Ricky Pierce also made the team.

Basketball success running dry in North Carolina

By TOM FOREMAN Jr

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Bad times for basketball in North Carolina are sort of like a drought — rare and passing. And what stands for a drought in this state would be considered the rainy season in many places.

But it was a tough week, nevertheless.

North Carolina State got spanked by the NCAA and won't get a shot at the national championship this season.

North Carolina is at 4-4 for the first time ever under Dean Smith and out of the polls for the first time in six years.

And Duke has lost two in a row, though both losses were to teams ranked higher than the Blue Devils.

It's probably the furthest down in the dumps Carolina basketball has been since Black Sunday 1979, when both Duke and North Carolina lost in the second round of the NCAA tournament on N.C. State's floor — and the Wolfpack didn't even make the field that year.

Usually, only one team is struggling, but never all three. But is anybody shedding tears? Are people perched on their window ledges, ready to end it all? Will basketball ever be the same around here?

"I wouldn't jump off the bridge," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski says.

The Blue Devils are 3-2, having scored 100 points or more in four of their five games. Their two losses were to top-ranked Syracuse by two points and 10th ranked Michigan in overtime. If there's depression about basketball at Duke, it's probably because the Blue Devils won't play again until Dec. 21 against Davidson.

"I think we've shown we're a lot better than I thought we could at this time of the year considering the newness of our team," Krzyzewski said. "We were within one play of winning our last two games against two teams that should be ahead of us at this time of the year.

"I'm disappointed we lost. I'm excited about my team," he said.

Krzyzewski also defends his nearby rivals.

"I think in Carolina's case, they've had a murderous travel schedule and their team has to be very tired," he said. "When you lose a key player like Scott Williams and he returns in a key game, you've never had a chance to develop continuity. They'll be a great team."

As for the Wolfpack, Krzyzewski says, "They'll be a great team whether they go to the NCAA or not."

N.C. State has been great before and not gone to the NCAA tournament, like in 1973, when the team won the ACC title, went 27-0 and then went back to Raleigh. It was a one-year probation that kept them out of the postseason then, and a two-year probation that will keep them out this postseason.

The problems will extend into next season, when the Wolfpack will restrict athletic scholarships to 12 for the next two seasons and reduce the coaching staff down to four.

Five seniors will leave Raleigh without getting into the title chase, and while some of them are down, they won't go without a fight. Mickey Hinnant, also a senior, is a Raleigh native who's getting used to the taunts of his Duke and North Carolina friends.

"I say 'Hey, we're winning.' Even though we can't go to the NCAA, we're still No. 1 in our conference because we've only lost one game," Hinnant says. "We want to continue to have a good record, go out on a good note, because this is North Carolina State basketball at its best."

Hinnant also is issuing a warning — every Wolfpack game from here to the end of the season is its version of an NCAA tournament contest.

"When we come out on the floor, the teams that we play, they'd better not take us so lightly because of what's happened to us," Hinnant says. "This decision has motivated us. It didn't put us down. The next game that we play, somebody's going to get blown out."

That puts East Tennessee State in the Wolfpack sights on Dec. 19.

North Carolina fans are probably the most downtrodden of the trio, although the Wolfpack fans would tell you they're the most picked on. A .500 record and being unranked for Smith is as rare in Chapel Hill as snow in December.

So far, it's snowed twice this month.

"We're concerned about a number of things. Some things, we have to hide some weaknesses and do the best we can on those and utilize our strengths the best we can," Smith says. "We have some improvement to do in all areas."

With their schedule, Smith says, some teams would be glad to be like the Tar Heels at 4-4. What he's hoping now is that North Carolina won't slip further. After DePaul comes what Smith considers tough games in a tournament in Denver and battles with Kentucky and Kansas State. Even Old Dominion and Pepperdine are raising worries, and those two are home games.

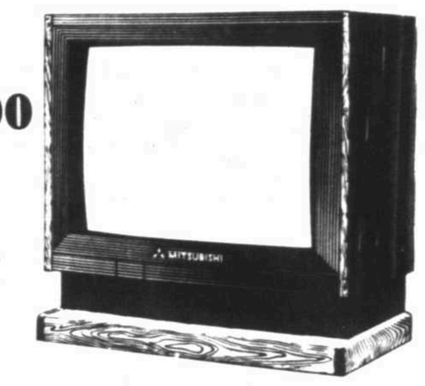

"We wanted a good schedule. Each year, we've played a very good schedule and usually we win some close ones and it makes you feel good," he says. "This year, we haven't won."

Rick Fox knows the prestige that goes with North Carolina basketball — and he now knows the pain of not living up to it.

"Being a part of Carolina, you're used to winning so much. You don't want to think about being 4-4. It's embarassing to be a part of such a great tradition and not be continuing it," Fox said in an interview. "It's a real test. We're having to swallow our pride right now."

Giants can lock up playoff berth with win against Cowboys

By TOM CANAVAN

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — When the New York Giants won the Super Bowl in 1986, a common sight on offense was fullback Maurice Carthon leading Joe Morris into the end zone.

Carthon rarely got the glory and he didn't seem to mind his role as a lead blocker. But in recent years his playing time has decreased, and this season he seemed to be an invisible man in the eyes of Giants coach Bill Parcells ... until last Sunday.

With snow falling in Denver and the Giants in need of establishing a running game, Carthon was given the call and responded with 11 carries for 43 yards and five receptions for 34 yards in a 14-7 victory over the Broncos.

The 43 yards matched his career high and more than likely earned Carthon added playing time with the playoffs two weeks away.

The Giants (10-4) can clinch their first playoff berth since 1986 by beating the Dallas Cowboys (1-13) Saturday at Giants Stadium.

"All of my teammates kept saying: 'Why aren't they using you more?' " Carthon said. "That means a lot to me, having the respect of my teammates."

One of the big reasons for Carthon's return against Denver had to do with the play of Dave Meggett. The rookie has either been spectacular by turning short passes into touchdown scoring plays or generous by fumbling, including three fumbles in the previous four games.

"We had him doing too much," Parcells said. "He was running, catching and doing all the returns. That was a lot to ask."

With some of the pressure relieved, Meggett responded with a weaving 57-yard touchdown reception against the Broncos.

So now on, Meggett probably will not be used as often as in the past and Carthon will get more playing time, a situation Parcells thinks will be more beneficial to both players and the team.

"The coaches sometimes forget about players in certain situations," Carthon said. "I guess I'm a player they tend to forget about."

New York probably will start the same offensive line as last week, meaning Jumbo Elliott again will rest his sprained ankle. That will put Eric Moore at left tackle and rookie Brian Williams at right guard.

The Giants had few problems with the Cowboys early this year at Dallas, winning 30-13 despite turning the ball over five times.

However, since then, Parcells has noticed an improvement in the Cowboys. He says they have played well and had chances to beat both Miami and Los Angeles, two teams still in the playoff hunt.

College players by the droves expected to skip final year

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

Keith McCants has retracted, for the time being, the announcement that he will leave college after this season to turn pro.

Why?

Had he officially declared, he would have been ineligible to play for Alabama in the Sugar Bowl. But after the Bowls are over, look for a record number of juniors to declare their intention to turn pro — they are being told by agents that the NFL may impose a rookie wage scale that will end seven-figure salaries for draft choices.

All are likely to get permission.

While the NFL has ordered its scouting combines not to look at juniors, it has always reluctantly granted permission because, quite simply, it's afraid it would lose a court battle that could change the structure of the draft. The man who has been providing that legal advice, Paul Tagliabue, is now the commissioner.

"Normally, unless a player is at the top of the draft, I would argue he should return to school," says Alabama-based agent Richard Woods, who usually corrals Auburn and Alabama players like McCants.

"But with the money so big and the likelihood of a wage scale, I see a lot of guys coming out early."

McCants, 6-foot-5, 256 pounds is likely to be the No. 1 pick, although one scout says: "I'm not sure it will be McCants, but he's an awfully good player. It probably depends on what you need, but you can't lose if you take him."

Atlanta, which now leads the race for the top choice (with Dallas having given it away to take Steve Walsh in the supplemental) is liable to take McCants although their track record with No. 1 linebackers from the state of Alabama is questionable — i.e. Aundray Bruce.

Also likely to come out is Florida running back Emmitt Smith, West Virginia quarterback Major Harris and (perhaps) Andre Ware, the Heisman Trophy winner from Houston, when they hear from agents that it's the last year for the big bucks.

That annoys a lot of NFL people, who would prefer seniors only.

"The agents tell them every year that it's the last one for the big money," says George Young, general manager of the Giants and an adamant opponent of allowing underclassmen in the NFL. "They'll do same again next year."

RECORDS

■ John Taylor's 92- and 95-yard touchdown catches Monday night marked the first time in NFL history that a player had two catches over 90 yards in a game. Actually, they were more like 92- and 95-yard runs. Neither pass was more than 10 yards before Taylor took off.

■ Minnesota Chris Doleman and Keith Millard have broken a non-record — sacks by two players on the same team in one season. They've combined for 33, breaking the mark of 32½ by Lawrence Taylor and Leonard Marshall of the Giants in 1986. But sacks have been an official stat only since 1982 and in 1981 Mark Gastineau and Joe Klecko (the New York Sack Exchange) had 40.

DEATH OF A GRIZZLY

From 1985 through 1988, the Bears were 24-0 against the Bucs, Lions and Packers. This year, they're 1-4 against those three going into Sunday's game with Green Bay.

TV or NOT TV

The first quarter of last Sunday's Giants-Broncos game took 20 minutes.

The second quarter took an hour.

But it's not entirely the fault of television, which regularly eschews commercial breaks early in doubleheader games (as this was) until the early games are over. That's so the fans can see all the commercials even if they don't see all the football.

In this game, the Broncos took the kickoff and held the ball for 6:53, although they moved only 36 yards — from their own 25 to the New York 44. Then they punted to the New York 15 and the Giants took over without a commercial break.

They held the ball for 8:53 — into the second quarter — and drove 85 yards for a touchdown. Then came the commercial flood — commercial after the touchdown, kickoff, commercial after the kickoff.

DRAFT POSITION

How accurate are draft projections? That is, how much better is a first-round pick than someone taken in a lower round?

Try these stats on two rookies:

ERIC METCALF, Browns, 5-foot-9, 180 pounds. (1st round, 13th overall)

■ 181 rushes for 615 yards (average 3.4). Six rushing touchdowns.

■ 1 completion in two attempts for a 32-yard touchdown.

■ 50 catches for 307 yards, a 6.1 average.

■ 28 kickoff returns for 633 yards, a 22.6 average, longest 49.

■ Total 1,555 all-purpose yards, 10 touchdowns, an average of 6 yards every time he gets the ball.

DAVID MEGGETT, Giants, 5-foot-7½, 180 pounds. (5th round, 132nd overall)

■ 26 rushes, 120 yards, 4.6 average. No rushing touchdowns.

■ 31 catches, 506 yards, 16.3 average. Four touchdowns (62, 57, 53 and 30 yards, the first three after catching short passes — see Taylor, John, above.)

■ 13 punt returns for 446 yards, 11.7 average.

■ 26 kickoff returns for 534 yards, 20.5 average.

■ Total 1,606 all-purpose yards, 4 touchdowns, an average of 16.7 yards every time he touches the ball.

Metcalf went in the first round because he played at Texas and had a pedigree — he's the same kind of player as his father Terry, a Pro Bowler with the Cardinals 15 years ago. He's also a full-time back.

Meggett went in the fifth because he played at Towson State, is an inch-and-a-half shorter than Metcalf and is basically a return man and third-down receiver.

But he has already made teams prepare differently for the Giants. They have to cover him with a defensive back because he can turn a short pass into a touchdown, as he did Sunday when he tiptoed 57 yards through the snow in Denver for a touchdown with a screen pass on a third-and-31 play.

AFC-NFC

The general perception is that the NFC is the stronger conference. It's won five straight Super Bowls by an averge margin of 22.6 points. This year, it has five teams (49ers, Rams, Eagles, Giants and Vikings) that are 11-3 against the AFC.

The season's series?

The AFC has won 21 games, the NFC has won 21.

RUN, RUN, RUN

Teams that ran more than 35 times were 6-0 last week. On the theory that a conservative offense is the best defense, the record for 35-plus rushing teams this season is now 102-10-1.

DIRTY DOZEN

The Bears have just set an unofficial record, going from first in the unofficial rankings after Week 4 to the bottom six. The unofficial ranking (based on current level of play) in the races for the NFL championship and the first pick in next year's draft:

1. 49ers, 12-2; 2. Eagles, 10-4; 3. Giants, 10-4; 4. Broncos, 10-4; 5, Rams, 9-5; 6. Vikings 9-5.

Hancock Bowl official confirms firing at Pitt

By ALAN ROBINSON

PITTSBURGH (AP) — It took an official of the John Hancock Bowl to confirm the firing of Pittsburgh coach Mike Gottfried.

"This is the first time we've had a team coming but no coach," John Folmer, chairman of the team selection committee for the John Hancock Bowl, which matches No. 23 Pitt against Texas A&M on Dec. 30, said Friday in a telephone interview. "I think a great deal of him (Gottfried), and I'm disappointed the people of El Paso won't get to meet him. But they've told us they'll be there, and life goes on."

Although Pitt officials again refused Friday to confirm Gottfried's firing, the coach was told Thursday by Athletic Director Ed Bozik he could either resign and accept a buyout on his five-year rollover contract or be fired. After that meeting — confirmed by Pitt officials Thursday night — Folmer was told Gottfried wouldn't coach the Panthers in the bowl game.

Gottfried, who did not have a losing record in four seasons with the Panthers, refused to quit and abruptly ended the meeting. Pitt officials reportedly are awaiting word from Gottfried before commenting.

Assistant athletic director Larry Eldridge said a news conference clarifying Gottfried's status could be held Saturday or Sunday.

Pitt has not said whether any of Gottfried's assistants, including offensive coordinator Paul Hackett, would be considered as a replacement.

Gottfried was not in his office Friday, although The Pittsburgh Press reported there was evidence someone had packed boxes there for him. Neither Gottfried nor Bozik, attending a previously scheduled off-campus planning session, returned phone calls.

After the meeting with Bozik, Gottfried canceled a recruiting visit Thursday night with kicker Ted D'Alessandro, a senior at Bethel Park High School in suburban Pittsburgh.

Acoording to the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, D'Alessandro was told by Pitt assistant Scott O'Brien that "I haven't got all the facts, but Coach Gottfried may be going to resign."

"I was being told by other people (at other schools) that there was a problem between Gottfried and the administration," D'Alessandro said. "I didn't know whether the other schools were making that up or what."

Another recruit, Ringgold High linebacker Anthony Peterson, was supposed to visit Pitt this weekend, but assistant coach Sal Sunseri didn't call as promised Thursday night to make arrangements.

Gottfried's ouster, after a 26-17-2 record, apparently wasn't just the result of his failure to return Pitt to the national stature it enjoyed from 1975-1981 under Johnny Majors and Jackie Sherrill.

Gottfried's recruiting classes were annually ranked among the best in the nation, but Penn State coach Joe Paterno wrote in his recently published book that Gottfried concentrated on recruiting glamor names, which resulted in him stockpiling players at some positions but running dangerously thin at others.

Gottfried and Pitt officials also feuded over academic guidelines, even after Gottfried was given what was referred to as a lifetime contract in April 1988.

Gottfried became upset when starting quarterback Darnell Dickerson was declared academically ineligible in the spring, and when the university wouldn't enroll two potential recruits in the summer because of academic questions.

Gottfried's departure came on the same day Pitt announced it would adopt academic guidelines stronger than those called for under Proposition 48.

Pitt will require prospective student-athletes to have a 2.3 grade point average and a minimum 750 Scholastic Aptitude Test score.

Gottfried's predecessor, Foge Fazio, also was fired after compiling a winning record (25-18-3) in four seasons.

Witt defends payments to amateur athletes

NEW YORK (AP) — Katarina Witt, East Germany's best-known athlete, Friday defended her country's sports program policy of paying athletes for top perfomances.

"We get money, the East German money," Witt, two-time Olympic figure skating champion, said on NBC's "Today" show. "But it wasn't that much as people are telling. I think that's OK because we did something special and we deserve it.

"Because if a worker is good in a factory they get money for this, too. We get paid for this, but not like the professional athletes. It's a big difference between this."

Midland High swimmers competitive in San Antonio

From Staff Reports

SAN ANTONIO — Midland High swimmers finished first-day action with competitive times at one of the toughest high school meets in the state Friday.

The MHS boys' 400-medley relay finished fourth with a time of 3:50.13; the relay team is comprised of Matt Houston, Matt Seay, Moss Fennell and Rob Neatherlin.

Houston had two individual second place finished while Seay followed with a second and third in individual competition.

Houston was runner-up in the 50-meter butterfly (24.47) and in the 100 Intermediate Medley (56.47).

Seay's time of 28.69 was good for a second place finish in the 50-meter breaststrok, and at 2:16.67 Seay finished third in the 200 breaststroke.

Fennell also had a third place finish, in the 1,000-meter freestyle (10:22.81).

In the girls division, Carrie Henry finished second in the 50-yard butterfly at 28.18, and third in the 100-IM at 1:06.17.

Lori Stephens finished ninth in the 50 breaststroke (36.97) and 11th in the 100 IM (1:12.11).

Competition concludes Saturday with a mixed short distance-college distance schedule.

Miners told beer would help flush out radiation

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Miners yanked from tunnels used during nuclear weapons testing were told to drink as much beer as possible to flush the radiation from their bodies, say two lawyers who have unearthed old documents on the tests.

Once-secret documents collected by attorneys Alan and Larry Johns, who are brothers, show Nevada Test Site workers were repeatedly exposed to dangerous levels of radiation but were seldom told of the threat it presented.

The documents were found through various discovery actions and the Freedom of Information Act.

In one 1961 case, miners were contaminated with high levels of radiation when they were sent to clean up radioactive tunnels, according to an affidavit from one of the miners and tunnel logs prepared by Reynolds Electrical and Engineering Co., the prime contractor at the site.

The miners were pulled from the tunnel and told by site managers to drink as much beer as possible in the next week to flush the radiation through their systems.

"It was their way to flush out the tritium," said Alan Johns Thursday. "It was a funny episode if it weren't for the serious consequences. They'd give them a beer allotment and let them have all the beer they could drink. They reimbursed one miner who turned in $25 in receipts for beer over a weekend. And that was when beer was a dollar a six-pack."

For half the 38 years the government has exploded nuclear weapons at the Nevada Test Site, the brothers have fought for compensation for radiation victims.

From the time a 10-kiloton nuclear bomb leaked a cloud of radiation that enveloped several hundred workers only three miles from the blast site in 1970, the two attorneys have waged a protracted legal struggle on behalf of those who believe they got cancer from radiation released by nuclear bombs.

Today, they represent two cases involving 200 workers who allegedly died from cancer caused by the radiation and another 18 who contracted the disease. The suits continue to bounce between various courts with no settlement in sight.

"It's just like a treadmill; it just keeps going from one step to another," Alan Johns said. "The radiation program is the government's sacred cow. They've fought it every step of the way."

Alan Johns won a major ruling in the two separate cases in October when a federal judge in Las Vegas said the government's nuclear testing program can be held liable for not providing for the health and safety of employees at the testing facility.

No bull

Financial, emotional stress may spur infants' desertion

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Three infants abandoned in the area in 10 days, including one found with a poignant note, may have been left by their parents because of financial and emotional pressures of the season, specialists said Friday.

"It would seem that somebody who abandons a newborn is somebody who's totally overwhelmed and feels they have no resources," said Irene Goldenberg, a family psychologist at UCLA's Neuropsychiatric Institute. "Abandoning a baby is a case of pure panic. It's like a suicidal impulse."

The three infants, now in foster homes, seem to support findings that child abandonment has grown as much as 300 percent since 1980.

Wednesday, a 5-month-old boy was found behind a state Disability Insurance Claims Office building along with a note that said, "Dear friends, please look after my son. ... I simply can't give him the kind of care he deserves. I know you can." It was written by the father, who signed his name but has not been located.

The same day, a man who stepped into the morning cold to get his newspaper found a newborn girl wrapped in blue cloth and placed inside a cardboard box in a gutter. Hospital workers named the infant Noel.

A girl believed to be 2 to 3 days old was found Dec. 7 at a motel in suburban Van Nuys, apparently left on a bed by a young couple who told the hotel desk they needed to rent a room briefly, police said. The only clue to her identity was the paper hospital gown decorated with pink-and-blue teddy bears she wore.

While experts don't see a rise in child abandonment during the holiday season, they say that a time of merriment and celebration of family unity can prompt feelings of severe depression and hopelessness from those without support.

People who give up their children in hopes that a stranger will give them a better life may be relying on the Christmas spirit of giving, said Sylvia Pizzini of the Child Welfare Services program of the California State Department of Social Services.

"People may feel others are more generous at Christmas," she said. "They count on the spirit of goodwill."

As police officers searched for the parents of the three foundlings, Los Angeles social workers Friday held the annual Adoption Day, on which 25 families received adoption decrees for 28 children.

Many public and private agencies offer adoption services where parents can surrender children they are unable to care for, but people continue to abandon children anonymously because they are ashamed of their inability to raise the child, said Alex Morales, spokesman for the Children's Bureau of Los Angeles. The bureau places abandoned children in foster homes.

"It is so much more socially negative to make that move," he said. "It's somehow more permissible to leave a child with a note. Maybe what goes on in the mother's mind is that she takes this step because of the social stigma that she's not a good mother."

Morales said although babies being left on doorsteps get far more publicity, many parents leave their children with strangers or relatives and disappear, only to return later to claim the child.

Three-day-old Laura Jean Stargardt, North Texas' first baby born from a frozen embryo, sleeps through a news conference as her parents, Jeanetha Wemken and Wayne Stargardt, answer questions in Carrollton, Texas, Friday.

Parents, doctors proudly display 'technology's child'

CARROLLTON, Texas (AP) — The tiny guest of honor slept all the way through a press conference Friday to showcase North Texas' first baby born from a frozen embryo.

Three-day-old Laura Jean Stargardt looked every bit the part of the perfect angel as her parents and doctors from Trinity Medical Center in Carrollton proudly answered questions about her birth.

A teary-eyed Jeanetha Wemken called her daughter's birth amazing.

"The miracle of it all is to think that at one point she was frozen in suspended animation," Ms. Wemken, 33, said.

Laura was born Dec. 12, weighing 7 pounds, 10½ ounces. She was 20½ inches long.

"She was a gift from doctors and the technology they have now," said Ms. Wemken, who first entered the in vitro fertilization program in August of 1988.

Ms. Wemken was unable to conceive normally because she had a tubal ligation in 1984.

She and her husband tried twice to conceive with in vitro fertilization, which involved removing eggs from her ovaries and fertilizing them in a laboratory dish with sperm from her husband, Wayne Stargardt.

During the second try, her doctor, Jane Chihal, froze embryos that were not implanted. The parties agreed to try the frozen embryos after the second in vitro attempt failed.

"After the second failure, I was in the frame of mind to try a transfer with the frozen embryos just so they wouldn't be wasted," said Ms. Wemken. "I was pretty pessimistic about the outcome."

A few weeks later, Ms. Wemken and Stargardt got the good news. "I was sky high," she said.

Statistics compiled by the American Fertility Society in Birmingham, Ala., show only 45 pregnancies from frozen embryos were reported in the United State through 1987. The society estimates that 90 were achieved in 1988.

"We approach each case with approximately a one in five chance of success," said Jane Chihal, associate director of Trinity's Institute for Fertility and Reproductive Medicine.

Each attempt costs from $5,000 to $10,000, Ms. Chihal said. But she said some insurance policies will cover the cost.

The AFS considers in vitro fertilization to be a routine practice, Ms. Chihal said. And since the procedure is no longer experimental, she said she had no ethical problems with it.

"We would not select embryos for any reasons other than having healthy babies," she said.

Hospital officials say nine other couples, who have experienced various fertility problems, are awaiting delivery of their babies. For many couples, the procedure is the only way they can have their own babies, officials say.

The facility has about 50 frozen embryos left in storage, Ms. Chihal says. Hospital officials say they are expecting another birth from a frozen embryo in May.

Hance mailout called misleading

AUSTIN (AP) — The state treasurer's office Friday said a campaign mailout by Republican gubernatorial hopeful Kent Hance was leading some citizens into believing they owe state taxes.

The Hance mailout looks similar to an income tax return and instructs the recipient to "Attach Payment, You Owe $1,200."

The yellow envelope says "Important: Contains Information For Your 1991 Texas State Income Tax."

Hance campaign officials say the mailout warns Texans of what's in store for them if the state adopts an income tax. Hance has proposed a constitutional amendment banning a state income tax.

The mailout indicates it is from the treasurer's office and the post office box given is that of the Texas House, said Bill Cryer, a spokesman for the treasurer's office.

The Window

There is a store that is displaying this scene of Christ's birth in all its beautiful simplicity.

People walk by the window and stop and look—and when they go on again, the tired lines seem to be erased from their faces. For the moment, they have forgotten the "hustle and bustle" of holiday preparation. Instead, the peace of Christmas drifts over them like the softly falling snow.

Look at those beautifully carved figures and at that tiny babe. Makes you realize, doesn't it, that Christmas, after all, is the birthday of our Lord, and should be celebrated—at home. In this case, that means the Church.

Gospel choir helps inmates find God

SMYRNA, Del. (AP) — "Echoes of Joy" offers Aaron R. Moore some challenges that directors of ordinary gospel choirs never know.

When there are discipline problems, rehearsal stops and members pray. It got so bad a year ago they had to report to Sunday morning services and sit in the choir box without singing for a month.

"Initially, they were angry behind the disciplining, but later they appreciated it," Moore said. Furthermore, they have to accept the rules: they're prison inmates.

The choir's first tape, "We Are Not Ashamed," was a sellout. But the blessing was mixed; Moore had to refuse the invitations to perform that ensued, because only a few of the "Echoes" are allowed to travel.

And the choir is now an a capella group because the pianist "got moved to maximum security a few years ago," said Chaplain Frank Pennell of the Delaware Correctional Center near Smyrna. The choir has "done a good job without music.

"A majority of them are just learning how to sing and they pick it up by ear. Some have sung on the street before."

Now they sing behind bars. Echoes of Joy, averaging 18 to 24 members, sings during Sunday and other Christian services at the prison.

Ira Shy grew up with Moore in Wilmington. "I remember him from when I was a little kid and I remember him always being a singer," Moore said. "At one time we did sing together on a young adult choir."

But Shy, 43, was in and out of jail as well as church. Shy, serving 12½ years for drug trafficking, said his problems came from not having a personal relationship with God. Now he has that relationship, he said, and "it's been easy since I decided to do it right."

Being a "born-again" Christian is a prerequisite for membership. "We discern that when we interview," said Pennell. Prospective members also take a 15-week class on basic Christian principles, then serve a 60-day probation, and "if everything's fine, they stay on," he said.

"The Lord is working through the choir," said Arthur E. Cleckly, 26, who has served two years of a three-year sentence for intent to deliver marijuana. "It's a blessing to see Christ working in their lives. We may be cast down by society, but the Lord has forgiven us."

Raymond C. Davis, 39, who wrote the title song of the choir's second tape, "Jesus Saves," was "born again" in 1986.

"I realized my life wasn't going anywhere. I was a drug addict, an alcoholic ... and I had no relationship with my six kids. I hadn't really been a father," said Davis, who became eligible for parole in August after three years of a seven-year term for robbery and conspiracy.

"I didn't have a friend in the world. That's how I know Jesus saves. He stepped right in and showed me what I needed in my life. ... He has truly cured me of my drug addiction and took the taste of alcohol from me."

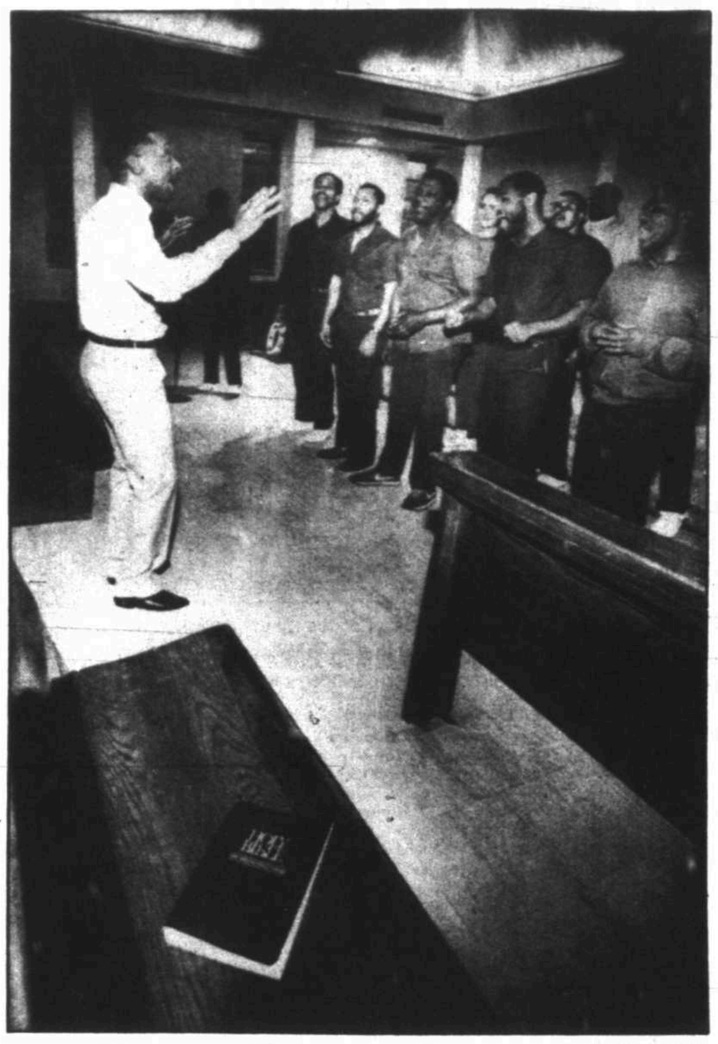

About 200 of the 500 copies of "Jesus Saves" have been sold at $5 each since it was recorded last December, Pennell said. All 500 copies of "We Are Not Ashamed" were sold within two years of its 1986 recording. The proceeds go to buy materials for Bible classes, and members get $50 on release from prison.

Choir rehearsals open with prayer, a Scripture and personal testimonies.

Then Moore takes over.

If it's a new song, he sings it, then the choir sings it back.

The members' enthusiasm, and their ability to learn quickly, lets him know they enjoy it. "They remember what they hear without music and that's hard to do. Usually a person can remember a tune before they remember the words. These brothers can remember a tune and the words without music. That's a gift and an art to be able to do that."

Town fights to keep students' Bible classes

GRAVETTE, Ark. (AP) — A 75-yard stretch of lawn and a surveyor's calculations are all that separates church and state in Gravette these days.

Every Monday and Tuesday, kindergarten through fifth-grade students are taught Bible stories in a 47-foot custom-made trailer parked on a private lane just east of Gravette Elementary.

"We think we have found a way to make these Bible classes work everywhere," says Mark Hendren, 29, owner of a local car dealership and plastics company. "We think we found a way to do this and get away with it."

Hendren and his father, Kim, are a financial force behind the tenacious effort to provide religious instruction to elementary public school students in this northwest Arkansas town of about 1,100 people.

The parents and grandparents of many of the students attended the Bible classes conducted at the school for 51 years. But the tradition ended Nov. 4, when a federal judge ruled the classes violated the constitutional requirement of the separation of church and state.

The trailer, which officials say was bought and renovated with private donations, is equipped with 10 rows of pews, a public address system and room for a portable toilet. It's the community's answer to the court order.

"I hope there's a trailer parked outside of every elementary school in the country," Hendren says. "Gravette then can say, 'We had a part of that.'"

The Bible class tradition was turned upside down last December when Rogers attorney James G. Lingle informed the school system an unidentified client wanted the classes to stop.

Letters went back and forth between Lingle and Superintendent Dee Human for several months until a lawsuit was filed July 12 on behalf of the "Does." Both sides agreed to keep the family anonymous.

U.S. District Judge Morris Arnold issued a temporary restraining order in late July and finalized the order three months later.

But in the meantime, a grassroots campaign supporting the classes gained momentum. About $20,000 was raised through private donations and deposited with the Bank of Gravette to finance an appeal. And the Hendrens put up about $7,000 and secured about $7,000 of in-kind services to buy and renovate the trailer, which was used for the first time this month.

Another trailer had been hauled to the private lane near the campus every Sunday and pulled away every We2nesday until the custom model was completed. The lane stretching along the east end of the school property was surveyed to make sure it was owned privately, Hendren says.

Elsie Smith has volunteered to teach the Bible courses at the school since 1981, only the third person to lead the classes in 51 years.

"I don't think a person is really educated until they are taught the Bible," she says.

In a routine day, she says, a class would gather in the school lunchroom and sing a religious song, such as "Jesus Loves Me." Students then would be taught literal stories out of the Bible.

She insists her religious views are not forced on students, but Lingle notes as an example that some parents might want the story of Adam and Eve to be taught as a parable, not a historic account of two people.

Ms. Smith acknowledges she would correct a student who suggested Bible stories are parables.

"I simply would say, 'There is an Adam and Eve. It has stood the passage of time. God said there was an Adam and Eve,'" Ms. Smith says.

If the student tried to debate the subject? "There is no chance for discussion," she says. "They ask the questions and I respond, and then nothing else can be said."

Church leader says Christians don't have to be 'sweet'

WACO (AP) — She's not pretentious about her beliefs or being the leader of a church with 2.9 million members.

"One does not need to be 'sickly sweet' ... to be a Christian; Christians should claim their piety, affirm it and experience God's joy in doing so," says the Rev. Joan Salmon-Campbell.

SalmonCampbell, 51, is the moderator of the 201st General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church U.S.A.

She recently was in Waco to preside over workshops on evangelism during the Presbyterian Churches of Central Texas Festival for Christ.

While there, she toured the new Habitat for Humanity house being built in Bosqueville and Caritas' thrift store on Fifth Street.

The service and workshops are ecumenical in nature. It is that spirit of cooperation among Waco ministers that SalmonCampbell said impresses her.

"I must tell you, I have been all over this country and never before have I seen such a spirit of love and respect as I have seen in you all," she told a group of Waco ministers at a luncheon.

She praised the pastors of various denominations for their ability to respect one another, to recognize differences but cooperate with each other.

Churches staging living nativities

A number of Permian Basin churches are staging living nativity scenes this holiday season.

In Midland, First Baptist Church is presenting its 1989 Outdoor Living Nativity Tuesday through Thursday from 7 to 8 p.m. at the corner of Louisiana Avenue and Garfield Street, on the west lawn.

In Greenwood, Greenwood United Methodist Church, 7909 Highway 307, is presenting its scene from 7 to 9 p.m. Thursday and Friday. At the same times, the church is hosting an open house with refreshments served. The sanctuary will be candlelit for prayers.

In Big Spring, the First Church of the Nazarene, 1400 Lancaster, is presenting eight scenes which can be viewed driving through a trail of luminarias from 6:45 to 10 p.m. Tuesday through Friday.

More than 130 people will participate in the scenes:

- "The Annunciation," Mary, the mother of Jesus, receiving the announcement from the Holy Angel of the birth of Christ;
- "The Magnificat," Mary proclaims the exciting news to her cousin, Elizabeth;
- "The Travelers," mary and Joseph travel to Bethelhem on a donkey;
- "The Inn," Mary and Joseph seek shelter in Bethlehem;
- "The Shepherds," the shepherds are frightened by a host of angels as they watch their flocks;
- "The Manager," Mary and Joseph and Jesus;
- "The Wisemen," three wisemen search for the Christ child; and
- "The Return," Christ returns in clouds of glory.

'Candle' program begins Christmas Day

Midland residents are invited to join the local Religious Science Church members in the "Candle in the Window Project" which begins Christmas Day at sundown and continues until the world is at peace.

The idea originated with Jeff Chernin of Dallas, a member of the religious Science Church there. He calls his endeavor the "Peace Initiative" and its theme is "Live Your Life with Love." The mayor of Dallas signed a proclamation for the city to join the observance.

All that is involved is to light a candle at sundown and place it in a window so that it may be seen by neighbors and passers-by. It may be kept burning for several minutes or several hours.

"Be careful that no curtains are near or an electric candle may be used and if on a time it will come on automatically," says a release from the church.

"The purpose is to create the feeling of Christmas year-round; to extend the generosity of spirit and loving kindness that crescendos through the last two months of the year but dissipates all-too quickly at the start of the next," the release says. "It also recognizes that universal peace begins in each person's heart and that it is a process from the inside moving outward."

Chernin has said of his project, "As you light your candle, allow the light to symbolize the unity of God and humanity. Recognize that we are more than one another's keeper; we are one. Know that if you hurt someone else then you hurt yourself, and as you are healed so are we all."

Youth sponsor banquet

The Youth Department of Greater Ideal Baptist Church is sponsoring a Christmas Banquet at Northeast YMCA at 7 p.m. today.

Guest speaker will be Reginald Franklin, Midland College basketball coach.

Dinner includes turkey, dressing and the trimmings. A donation of $5 will be requested. For more information call 699-6406.

Chancel Choir having program

The Chancel Choir of First United Methodist Church will present "A Christmas Celebration" as part of the 10:35 a.m. worship service.

The choir, directed by Brad Kisner, director of music ministries, will be accompanied by Carol Hall, organist, and members of the Midland-Odessa Symphony Orchestra.

Included in the program are two collections of favorite seasonal carols. The first is "Christmas Day" by Gustav Holst and concluding the program will be "The Christmas Story According to St. Luke" by Roger Wagner. A special advent message entitled "The Right Gift for the Journey" will be delivered by the senior pastor, the Rev. Russell Parchman.

Sunday at 5:30 p.m. the children of the church will present an old-fashioned pageant called "Outside the Inn." This program featuring children of all ages will be directed by Mary Beck and will be presented in the fellowship hall, at Main and Illinois. Families and small children are invited to attend.

For more information, call 682-3701.

Candlelight service set

Ranchland Heights Baptist Church continues its Christmas season programming with special activities in both services Sunday.

The Sunday evening Candlelight Service will feature the annual children's music presentation, along with more special music by the Chimes Choir. The children's music will be directed by Barbara Selman, Debbie Summarsell and Jo Marie Beck. Readings of original compositions on the meaning of Christmas will be given by Cole Hanson and Cody Summarsell.

The Chimes Choir directed by Ms. Beck will present Christmas music selections.

During the morning worship service, the church's pastor, Lucian Rudd, will continue the series of Christmas messages under the theme "Christmas: What's It All About?"

For information, call 684-7233 or 683-1947.

Local KC council honored

The local Knights of Columbus Council has been recognized by its international organization.

Knights of Columbus Council 9215 of OLG has been named a Father McGivney, the award is in recognition of outstanding membership recruitment and retention efforts during the 1988-89 fraternal year.

The announcement was made from the Knights of Columbus headquarters in New Haven, Conn. Lon Dominguez, district deputy, presented the engraved plaque award to the council at a special ceremony held in November.

In accepting the award, Grand Knight Elroy Perez, head of the local group said, "Receiving this award is quite an honor. We're very pleased with the accomplishment."

The Knights of Columbus is a Catholic family, fraternal, service organization with 1.45 million dues-paying members worldwide. In 1988 they gave more than 27 million hours of volunteer service and donated over $85 million to charitable and benevolent causes.

Lunch series to close

This season's "Lunch Hour for Advent and Christmas Series" closes Wednesday at 12:05 p.m. in the sanctuary of First United Methodist Church, Main Street at Ohio Avenue.

Brad and Jane Kisner, directors of Music Ministries at the church, will present the program. These performances are presented by the Ministry of Music at First UMC as a gift to the community and are especially designed for downtown business workers. A soup and salad lunch is available in the church's fellowship hall a half-hour before and after each performance.

Reservations are not required and childcare is provided for small children. For more information call 682-3701.

The free mini-concert is open to the public.

Special program planned

"The Advent of the Messiah" is a worship service of readings and songs telling the story of the coming of Jesus.

This service will be presented by the combined adult and children's choirs of Midland Lutheran Church and Hope Lutheran Church at 10:30 a.m. Sunday at Hope Lutheran Church, 2003 North A St.

The choirs, directed by Charlene Moore, will sing selections from a variety of composers, concluding with the Halellujah Chorus by Handel.

The public is invited to attend.

Christmas musical slated

The adult choir of Word of Life will present a musical "The Spirit of Christmas" by David Ritter and Phil Barefoot on Sunday at 6 p.m. at the church, 9700 West Highway 191 (3/4 mi. east of FM 1788). The setting is in a small New England town in the mid-1850s.

The musical director is Dee Brannon and the drama director is Angela Garlington.

The public is invited to attend.

Crestview has program

The Sanctuary Choir of Crestview Baptist Church, 3300 Thomas, will present the contemporary Christmas musical "Come Celebrate Jesus" at 7 p.m. Sunday.

Selected portions of the Christmas narrative will be dramatized, and a 90-voice children's choir will assist in the presentation, which is directed by Ty Morris Jr., minister of music at the church.

Choirs set to perform

Pastor Gayle Reeves of Calvary Assembly of God, 908 S. Johnston, invites the public to attend the church's Christmas program Sunday at 7 p.m.

The adult choir will be perform "An Old Fashioned Christmas" and the children's choir will perform "What In The World Is Christmas?"

The Season of Advent
First Presbyterian Church Midland, Texas

The Season of Advent is the beginning of the Christian calendar and is observed on the four Sundays before Christmas. The word Advent means "coming". The season is one of preparation and expectant waiting as we look forward to the celebration of the Lord's coming on Christmas Day. Advent is the season of extending our confidence in "the things that are seen and unseen" and marveling at the mystery of God becoming one of us.

Advent Sermon Series "The Songs of Christmas"

In the Gospel of Luke, the Christmas story is filled with singing. Four of the main characters sing wonderful songs about what God is doing in their midst. The titles of these songs come from the first few words of each song as they are written in Latin. During Advent our Sunday messages will focus on the four songs. May God use each song to put a song in our hearts, as well.

Researchers unsure why Isle Royale park wolves are dying

ISLE ROYALE NATIONAL PARK, Mich. (AP) — For 40 years, the wolves and moose of Isle Royale have engaged in a macabre dance of predator and prey before a fascinated audience of scientists and summer campers.

This island has been the site of one of the world's most intense wildlife studies, neatly confined to an 8- by 45-mile laboratory isolated in Lake Superior.

Now the wolves are dying. No one knows why.

Dr. Rolf Peterson, who for the past 19 years has been chief researcher for the 31-year-old Isle Royale Project, fears there will soon be a winter when he cannot find a single wolf on the island, where more than 50 roamed a few years ago.

Until 1988, the National Park Service dictated a policy of non-interference with the wolves. While researchers elsewhere captured the animals for blood tests and to attach radio collars, on Isle Royale scientists learned what they could from aerial surveys and by examining moose carcasses. Nobody under any circumstances touched a wolf.

"This was one of the last really unmanipulated wolf populations in the world," former park superintendent Jack Morehead said from his office in Washington, where he is now is chief of operations for the Park Service. "These wolves were really a museum test specimen of wolves in the wild."

Despite Morehead's objections, the Park Service last year gave Peterson permission to collar the island's dwindling wolves.

"The line was crossed. Now we can never say these wolves have never been touched by man," said Assistant Park Superintendent Tom Ferranti on the island. "Isle Royale is different for me now. I feel a loss just knowing that."

Isle Royale is a rugged collection of high ridges plunging into tangled swamps, a serrated edge of the earth rising out of Lake Superior, 18 miles from Canada, the nearest mainland.

The Indians called it Minong and traveled across open lake in canoes to pry copper from the island's crevices. Today backpackers alight from ferry boats.

Isle Royale is teeming with moose, more than 1,600 at last count. They were a waiting food supply when wolves from Canada loped across the Lake Superior ice in what must have been 1949, the winter the lake froze. They arrived unseen, nine years after the island became a national park.

Former park ranger Bob Hakala first confirmed there were wolves on Isle Royale. It was November 1951. He and his wife were taking one last hike up Feldtmann Ridge before snow closed the island and sent them retreating to the Michigan mainland. In that first frost of winter, he saw wolf tracks.

Hakala also remembers the mournful sounds that came later.

"You figure you're hearing the call of the wild when you hear that howl," he says. "It has that sad quality."

That didn't stop a public relations campaign the next year to stock Isle Royale with four wolves from a Detroit zoo. The pack tore a housewife's laundry into strips, ate a fisherman's nets and then stalked a tourist. Rangers shot two of them and deported a third. The fourth, a black creature called Big Jim, escaped and disappeared into island folklore.

In 1958, Dr. Durward Allen of Purdue University arrived with his doctoral candidates to begin one of the world's precursor studies of wolf predation. There was precious little known about the wolf and its prey.

Thirty-one years of research since then have told science much about the way wolves live, Allen says.

"These life communities are the most complex things we know about in the whole universe," he said. "We are only beginning to unravel it."

When Peterson stepped in, he inherited a stable pack of about two dozen wolves and a celebrated study that mapped the harmony of nature.

Something snapped the balance. The population exploded. By 1980, Isle Royale had three wolf packs and 50 wolves. It was the highest density of wolves recorded in the world.

AP

Just as suddenly, the wolves began dying. In 1981, 30 wolves survived the winter. In 1982, the population was 14.

In those two years, counting new generations born and lost, Peterson figured 52 wolves died. He found six carcasses and no conclusions.

The survivors roamed at a nervous pace. Evidence suggested the wolves were killing each other.

Peterson didn't think it was anything more than an ordinary population swing for several more years. But the wolves failed to make the comeback he hypothesized.

By 1988 there were just 12 animals left and the pups born each year were too few to replace the dying elders. He persuaded the Park Service to let him capture Isle Royale's wolves and take action.

Blood samples taken from four of the animals last year showed three were exposed to Lyme disease, transmitted by infected ticks and suspected of causing reproductive failure in wolves.

The blood also showed two wolves were exposed to canine parvovirus, a fatal disease of domestic dogs. No dogs are allowed on Isle Royale but the Park Service suspects boaters sneak their pets ashore.

A third test showed the four wolves had look-alike genes, in keeping with the theory the whole population comes from a single female who colonized the island 40 years ago. Island inbreeding could mean reduced fertility and the doom of the population. It would not cause a population crash, Peterson thinks.

"The big unknown is, did disease cause the crash? Very likely it did and we will never know," he said.

The only theory Peterson can write off is starvation. There is plenty of food.

A faint odor wafted on the lake breeze when he returned to the island last spring after a winter of teaching at Michigan Technological University in Houghton. Carcasses of winter-starved moose rotted in the warm air.

Over the next few weeks, Peterson's field assistants found dozens of dead moose, their legs tucked beneath them where they died in the snow. There were more weak moose than wolves could kill, more carcasses than wolves could scavenge.

Meanwhile, the island's wolf population dropped to 11.

The Park Service has not decided what to do. One proposal is to simply let the wolves die without human intervention. But Isle Royale without wolves could mean more moose, more starved moose.

"My own advice is just reintroduce wolves," Peterson says. "Get with the program."

This summer, Peterson watched in frustration as the remaining wolves abandoned their traditional rendezvous sites. There was no cohesive pack, no evidence of denning, no promise of pups.

Where were the animals? "I haven't the foggiest," he said from the fisherman's cabin where he keeps a graveyard of moose skeletons out back and writes a eulogy for wolves within.

Then unexpectedly in September, field assistant Joanne Thurber saw something hopeful.

She saw wolf pup tracks in the earth.

'Purge' began in 1934

On June 30, 1934, Adolf Hitler began his "blood purge" of hundreds of political and military leaders in Germany. Among those killed was Ernst Roehm, leader of the Nazi stormtroopers and Hitler's one-time ally.

Denver mission updates its image with computer course for homeless

AP Laserphoto

Del Maxfield, director of the Denver Rescue Mission, is updating the definition of a homeless shelter with computer courses.

DENVER (AP) — The Denver Rescue Mission, the oldest relief agency in the city, isn't interested in just feeding, clothing and saving the souls of the down-and-out. It wants them to read, write and understand computers, too.

Inside the red-brick building with the blue "Jesus Saves" sign over the door, director Del Maxfield is trying to redefine the goals of a shelter for the homeless as well as the needs of the men who seek help there.

The latest innovation is a computer-based program for functionally illiterate adults. It is part of "a new sophistication of the old urban missions" in response to changes in the makeup of the growing homeless population in America, Maxfield says.

In the past, he says, shelters were thought to be doing their job by providing a roof, a prayer and a meal for hobos and alcoholics.

The new homeless are "people who are economically distressed, abused, people from broken families" who need more, he says. "It's a very complex world of homelessness out there."

In appearance, the Denver Rescue Mission, founded in 1893, reveals little of its new-wave approach. It sits on a run-down corner a few blocks east of Denver's skyscrapers. Weeds poke out of the sidewalk and curbs. At mealtimes, lines of ragged men wait at the front door, as always.

Inside, though, a clinic provides free medical, dental and eye care. It gave away more than 1,000 pairs of glasses last year. And not only does it teach literacy, but computer literacy as well.

Its computer room, in the basement, contains three terminals and file cabinets and bookshelves crammed with computer-course materials, including science, math, Bible studies, geography, and basic reading, writing and spelling.

On a recent day at the mission two men sat in the computer room, one studying computers and the other Spanish, specialized skills for, they hope, specialized jobs.

One of the men, Mike, 27, had come to the shelter a month earlier from Dallas after losing his job as a truck driver because of "personal problems." He has a high school equivalency diploma and is studying computer programming in hopes of applying to college soon. Some others who study at the shelter have only an elementary school education.

Mike says he came to Denver to find "a new beginning, a fresh start," and showed up at the mission for a meal. He now spends about five hours a week with the computers and works in various jobs at the mission about 42 hours a week.

He wants to become a counselor, or perhaps a pastor, he says. "It's been a dream for a few years," he says. "I guess I didn't have enough confidence to make an effort at it."

The mission provides 140 beds for homeless people for up to 10 nights, and feeds about 450 people a day, but Mike is one of 28 "program men."

Jubilant Chileans celebrate the victory of Patricio Aylwin as the newly elected president of Chile in downtown Santiago Friday.

Chile's president-elect vows to exert control over military

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — President-elect Patricio Aylwin said Friday he will exert his authority over the military, including Gen. Augusto Pinochet, who intends to retain command of the army when he leaves the presidency March 11.

Aylwin said he would meet with the military service commanders, who have ruled Chile since a coup in September 1973, to establish a working relationship.

Pinochet, who became president after the coup, offered "all our collaboration" to Aylwin's administration.

The address, over national television, was Pinochet's first public response to Aylwin's victory.

And while offering to collaborate, the general also said the armed forces would rule "until the last day of their mandate" on March 11 and then would serve as guarantors of the country's institutional order.

"We offer all our collaboration, not only out of respect for those who triumphed in yesterday's elections, but also out of loyalty to the country's higher interests, which always have guided my actions," Pinochet said.

Scattered disturbances broke out Friday in downtown Santiago.

Groups of young leftists threw rocks at police, who responded with water cannon and tear gas. Skirmishes scattered shoppers and halted traffic several times on the principal boulevard, Alameda Avenue.

The protesters demanded immediate release of leftists imprisoned on charges of political violence, including many accused of guerrilla activity. Police reported at least 20 arrests.

Aylwin soundly defeated two opponents in Thursday's election. At a news conference, he pledged to "exercise the full powers of the president, and the armed forces must be subordinate and obedient to the president."

Later Friday, Aylwin told hundreds of thousands of supporters at a Santiago rally that the armed forces' political role "must end in March" when he takes over. "We want to see the armed dedicated to their professional duties, disciplined, obedient, thus recovering the respect of all their compatriots."

His comment went to the heart of one of the new civilian government's most difficult and sensitive problems: the considerable power that still will be held by the armed service commanders, particularly Pinochet as head of the 60,000-man army.

A special provision of the constitution — written in by Pinochet's government in 1980 — says the commanders cannot be dismissed until 1998.

Aylwin, 71, won 55.2 of the 7 million votes cast Thursday, as the candidate of a 17-party alliance of the center and left. Hernan Buchi, the pro-government candidate, got 29.4 percent and Francisco Javier Errazuriz, a wealthy entrepreneur, 15.4 percent.

Clues to Pan Am crash lie in 'terrorist jigsaw'

EDINBURGH, Scotland (AP) — Nearly one year after the bombing of Pan Am Flight 103, investigators said Friday they have assembled some clues to the international terrorist plot but are not close to prosecuting anyone.

"What we are doing in effect is trying to piece together an international terrorist jigsaw," said George Esson, a police official. "We have some of the pieces, some we are trying to place, and some we have yet to find."

Esson spoke as Scottish officials announced the first public inquiry to be held into the explosion of Flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland, on Dec. 21, 1988, that killed all 259 people on board and 11 people on the ground.

The inquiry, to be held next year before an independent judge, will be the first in which members of the public will have the chance to attend the proceedings. A criminal police investigation and a Transport Department investigation already are under way in Britain.

Speaking at a news conference, officials said one focus of the investigation is the Popular Front For the Liberation of Palestine-General Command, a radical Palestinian faction headed by Ahmed Jibril.

But they said other groups also were under investigation.

"It would be right to say that we have focused our attention on one group but it would be unwise for us to exclude others," Esson said.

Asked whether that one group was the PFLP-GC, he said, "certainly."

Jibril, a former Syrian army officer, has denied involvement though he has said his faction has used devices like the one that brought down Flight 103.

Lord Fraser, Scotland's senior law officer, and Esson, chief constable of the Dumfries and Galloway Constabulary, told reporters they also are interested in Mohammad Abu Talb, a member of another radical Palestinian group who is charged in Sweden with four bombings in northern Europe.

Also Friday in Washington, attorneys for families of 13 members of the flight crew filed a lawsuit alleging that two companies failed to provide adequate security. The lawsuit says Alert Management Systems Inc. and Pan Am World Services Inc., which provided security at Frankfurt and Heathrow airports, failed to comply with minimum security procedures.

In New York, Pan Am spokesman Alan Loflin said the airline hadn't heard of the lawsuit.

Esson said the police investigation has encompassed 52 countries and Fraser said West Germany, Malta and Sweden have been "the focus of important areas of investigation."

Investigators have said the bomb was made of a plastic explosive packed in a radio-cassette player in a suitcase loaded into a forward cargo hold of the Boeing 747.

They released photos Friday showing the reconstruction of the forward hold, with a gaping hole, and the reconstructed metal container which held the suitcase bomb.

Fraser said significant progress had been made in identifying other contents of the suitcase, including clothing.

He said he ordered the Scottish public inquiry now because the police investigation had reached a stage where he thought it would be "appropriate." He did not elaborate, but said the inquiry could be postponed or canceled if criminal proceedings appeared likely.

The public inquiry, formally known as a fatal accident inquiry, will be held next year although a date and a presiding judge have not yet been selected, Fraser said.

He confirmed he had requested Swedish permission for Scottish police to remove clothing from Abu Talb's Swedish home, reportedly to compare it with the recovered shreds.

"I have at present no intention to seek the extradition of Abu Talb," Fraser said.

Esson would not say how many individuals were under investigation nor whether all were Arabs. Some are in a position where they could be extradited, he said.

Scottish police still believe the bomb "either started or passed through Frankfurt airport" where the flight originated, he said. West German police maintain that has not been proven.

Soviets reveal troop strength abroad

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Soviet Union announced Friday that it has 627,500 troops abroad, its first such disclosure of its foreign forces, and said it would like to bring them home by the year 2000.

However, Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Vladimir Petrovsky, who made the announcement, said the pullouts would not be unilateral and would depend on negotiations with other nations.

White House Press Secretary Marlin Fitzwater said the statement was "encouraging." He said the U.S. position is that all such matters are to be worked out at the conventional forces talks under way in Vienna.

Petrovsky did not give a breakdown of troop deployment and said it was well known that the troops were stationed in Warsaw Pact countries and in Mongolia. He did not elaborate.

Next week, Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze is to meet leaders of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Court ruling frees 5 black activists

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The high court Friday threw out convictions imposed in the country's longest treason trial and freed five black activists, including three prominent anti-apartheid leaders jailed since 1985.

Scores of jubilant supporters, including Anglican Archbishop Desmond Tutu, welcomed the men as they passed through Cape Town's airport en route from Robben Island prison to their homes near Johannesburg.

"It's a sign we are winning the struggle," said Tutu. "We knew that justice would prevail one day."

The three leaders of the United Democratic Front and one of their co-defendants, a church worker, were convicted of treason in November 1988 after a three-year trial. They received sentences ranging from six to 12 years from a judge who contended the front sought to incite anti-government violence.

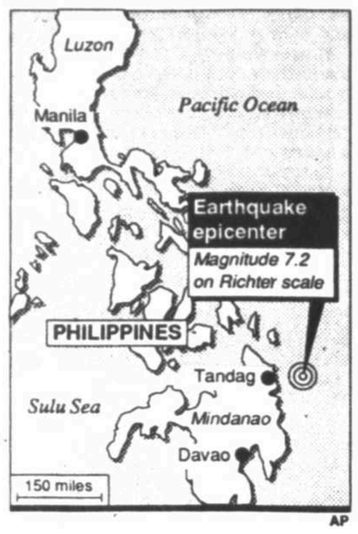

The Appeal Court in Bloemfontein overturned the verdicts against those four and seven co-defendants convicted of terrorism. Six of the seven received suspended sentences, but one, Muzi Malindi, was given a five-year term and sent to the Robben Island penitentiary.

At least one dead in quake

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — An earthquake measuring 7.2 on the Richter scale shook the Mindanao and central Visayas island chain early Saturday, officials said. Radio stations reported scattered damage and at least one death.

The Philippine Institute of Vulcanology and Seismology said the quake, which lasted about 40 seconds, was felt throughout eastern Mindanao, the second largest Philippine island, and as far north as Cebu, 220 miles away.

Red Cross and government officials had no reports of damage or casualties from the remote area, which has poor communication links with the capital Manila.

AP

Manila radio station DZXL said one boy was killed when his house collapsed in Bislig, 570 miles southeast. DZXL, quoting affiliate stations in Mindanao, said eight houses collapsed in Bislig.

NATO opens skies to East

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The 16 NATO allies eased East-West tension another notch Friday, approving a U.S. proposal to let unarmed Warsaw Pact aircraft fly over their territory in search of suspicious military activity.

The "Open Skies" idea originated with President Dwight D. Eisenhower more than 30 years ago, at the height of the Cold War, and was revised by President Bush last spring to include surveillance of laboratories.

It will be discussed at a NATO-Warsaw Pact meeting in February in Ottawa, Canada, that also could produce new proposals for further troop reductions in Europe.

At the end of a two-day meeting, NATO foreign ministers also agreed to consider proposals by Secretary of State James A. Baker III that the alliance's role be expanded as the threat of military confrontation with the Soviet Union recedes.

Only death could silence Sakharov

By JOHN-THOR DAHLBURG

MOSCOW (AP) — His last words were about continuing the fight.

Over a quarter-century Andrei D. Sakharov, 68, pursued his vision of a just, less-brutal society, undaunted by Kremlin vilification, the scorn of his scientific peers and the KGB.

Before anybody but Sovietologists had heard of Mikhail S. Gorbachev, Sakharov demanded "glasnost" — Gorbachev's policy of openness. Before Gorbachev's Kremlin declared a 19-month unilateral freeze on nuclear testing, Sakharov publicly sought a halt to all tests.

Long before the Soviet leadership admitted Stalin's crimes to the world, Sakharov was among those few who denounced them, and he noisily sought redress for the victims.

The Kremlin this year acknowledged its 1979 invasion of Afghanistan was a mistake and even a crime, but Sakharov in 1980 had denounced it, and he paid with nearly seven years of exile.

The stooped, rumpled physicist died Thursday, but the future he and other dissidents fought so hard for in the 1960s and '70s has in part come true. For many Soviets, the man who spoke his independent mind in a stammering voice will be irreplacable.

"We have lost our moral compass," mourned Roald Z. Sagdeyev, Sakharov's colleague at the Academy of Sciences and a fellow member of the Congress of People's Deputies.

At the height of the dissident era in the 1970s, no cause seemed too small for Sakharov: Crimean Tatars, Soviet Jews and Germans seeking to emigrate, dissidents and religious activists all found succor and sympathy in his two-room Moscow apartment.

While others kept silent in the oppression of the pre-Gorbachev era, this honored son of the Soviet regime spoke out against injustice and in favor of individual freedom. He risked his personal fortune, his liberty, his health.

The worldwide opprobrium his criticisms brought the Kremlin, plus outrage at his 1980 exile to Gorky and brutal treatment there by the KGB, showed Soviet leaders they could not hope to be fully accepted members of the international community while still repressing their citizenry.

Sakharov's voice was only one of many raised in protest, but it carried the farthest.

In December 1986, when Gorbachev telephoned him in Gorky to say he could return to Moscow, it proved the Kremlin, proclaiming greater openness, was now ready to tolerate criticism it once branded anti-Soviet and even treasonous.

Many of the causes pursued by Sakharov and the dissidents of the 1970s were won under Gorbachev, named Soviet leader in March 1985. There are now greater liberties of self-expression, freer emigration, successes in superpower disarmament, mass amnesties of political prisoners.

Soviet dissent, however, continues on other themes, from pro-independence political groups in the Baltics to the Democratic Union, a self-styled alternative party seeking a British-style parliament. But none of their members has the domestic audience and international reach of Sakharov, and other anti-establishment leaders, like maverick Communist Boris N. Yeltsin, are considered by many to be demagogues or driven by ambition.

A developer of the Soviet hydrogen bomb who later recoiled in horror at what he had wrought, Sakharov could have settled into a comfortable life back in Moscow with his wife, Yelena Bonner, continuing research on the physical properties of the universe. He did so for a while. But his conscience would not let him rest.

"I personally respect Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev very much, but it is dangerous to give so much power even to the initiator of perestroika," he declared this summer, after overcoming opposition from the leadership of the Academy of Sciences to become one of its representatives in the new Congress.

With growing determination, Sakharov fought against the Communist Party's constitutional monopoly on power. His status as a deputy meant that for the first time, tens of millions of Soviets heard his views on state-run TV. He had spoken out previously about the abuses of power; now he wanted to alter the very foundations of power.

It was to be his last, as yet unsuccessful fight. A nationwide strike Sakharov called for Monday to force the Congress to enact a multiparty system flopped. Led by Gorbachev, the parliamentarians rejected debate on the issue 1,138 to 839.

Obscure quake fault may be worse risk than thought

Hearst News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — A little-known earthquake fault 20 miles north of San Francisco may be a worse quake risk than previously suspected, U.S. Geological Survey scientists say.

Everyone in the Bay Area has heard of the San Andreas Fault; even the Hayward and Calaveras faults are well-known quake risks. But who loses sleep over the Rodgers Creek Fault?

Maybe some insomnia is in order, the scientists say.

By digging trenches on that fault, which runs from the northern side of San Pablo Bay to Santa Rosa, Calif., USGS scientists have found clues — tentative clues, one scientist cautions — that the fault is seismically more active than generally assumed.

First, some science: Geoscientists try to anticipate quakes on a particular fault by determining how often it has shaken before — for example, an average of once every 100 years.

One way to do this is by checking historical records of past quakes. Unfortunately, California was sparsely settled before the 19th century, so there are few written records before then.

In that case, an alternative method is to dig trenches along a fault. Digging a trench is like cutting a knife into a layer cake: It exposes the (generally) neat stacks of geological layers, piled atop one another, that represent hundreds of thousands of years of accumulated dirt and rock.

The layers contain clues to past quakes, such as evidence of a sudden change in the course of a river.

The date of an ancient quake can be estimated by dating organic remains in a nearby layer. That way, if one finds evidence of three big quakes on a fault during the last, say, 900 years, then a similar-sized quake may recur every 300 years.

Which brings us to the Rodgers Creek Fault.

Recently, geologists dug several trenches along the fault line. They dated trench layers as far back as 2,400 years (which was about the time Greek philosophers were speculating on the origins of life, the universe and even earthquakes).

"We think we see (signs in the trenches) of three or four (quakes) in the last 1,300 years," said David Schwartz of the USGS.

Hence it's possible the quakes recur an average of once every three to four centuries.

So when will the Rodgers Creek Fault strike again? No one is sure because no one knows exactly when the "last" quake struck.

Emu farm owners find 'golden egg'

LOVELADY, Texas (AP) — Dusty Driskell and Mark Solomon are standing in the middle of Emu Plantation, admiring the modern-day, 6-foot "geese" that are laying the golden eggs.

Some of the 10 pairs of breeding emus on their ranch, they explain, are Adam and Eve, Bonnie and Clyde, Mickey and Minnie, and Dorothy and Toto.

"We also have a Pete and a Rose," Driskell deadpans. "We took a gamble on those birds."

Actually, these emu entrepreneurs say the once risky emu market has proved to be a sure thing. Driskell, a tax consultant, and Solomon, a draftsman for the Texas Department of Criminal Justice, are expecting their fledgling business to gross $200,000 to $300,000 this year. Of course, that's before a breeding pair's $150 annual bill for ostrich breeder feed is subtracted.

"Usually they return the investment after the first year and every year after that is gravy time," Driskell said.

Emus are flightless birds that are Australian cousins of the ostrich. The average emu weighs 125 to 150 pounds and lives to be 25 to 30 years old.

Although construction of an emu processing plant in the United States remains about two years away, a thriving market hasdeveloped.

The price for an emu chick begins at $1,000 and increases as it matures. A full-grown bird can sell for up to $12,000.

"We're in awe half the time," Solomon said. "A guy hands you $12,000 and you say, 'This can't be happening.'"

In countries overseas, emus are the sources for many products. Their hides produce leather for boots and clothing; the feathers are used for dusters, clothing and fishing lures; the toenails for jewelry; and the oil from a pad of fat on their backs for cosmetics and drugs.

Emu meat is lower in cholesterol and fat than turkey despite its red color. It is considered a delicacy and tastes "exactly like beef," Driskell said.

"They still haven't found anything for the bones or the manure."

Solomon, who had no previous experience raising livestock, talked Driskell, whose experience with fowl was limited to a parakeet, into investing in a pair of birds last year after his original partner backed out at the last moment. They bought their first pair of emus, Bonnie and Clyde, in Virginia in October 1988.

"I was going to wait a year and kind of watch things," Driskell said. "I'm conservative — you know accounting people. I was still skeptical. The prices were high at the time because it was high-risk. Now they're high, but there's not much risk."

Since purchasing their first pair, Driskell and Solomon have spent about $250 on long distance telephone calls each month and have traveled approximately 18,000 miles on weekends in search of emus.

They are a show-stopper everywhere they go, especially on the freeways. Driskell said motorists often pass them at outrageous speeds only to slow down to catch a glimpse of the birds.

"You can read their lips saying, 'Look at those ostriches,'" he said. "That's what I would say. I didn't know what an emu was until last summer."

The emus even have caught the attention of the long arm of the law. The two were pulled over one night while hauling some newly purchased emus by a Texas state trooper.

"We thought, 'Hey, we weren't doing anything wrong,' while we were scrambling for our seatbelts," Solomon said. "The guy takes us around behind the trailer and says, 'Y'all weren't doing anything wrong. I just wanted to see these birds. But since I got you stopped I have to write you a warning.' So he wrote us a warning for dim taillights."

Bike patrol hopes to quell friction on bike, hike path

AUSTIN (AP) — Austin police are getting out of their squad cars and onto mountain bikes in hopes of easing increasing friction between pedestrians and bicyclists on one of the city's major bike and hike paths, officials said.

Austin parks officials say they receive numerous complaints from walkers and runners that bicyclists speeding on the Town Lake Hike and Bike Trail almost run them over.

"One problem is that there is no law (regulating bicyclists), so we have to appeal to their common sense. We do stop them and try to talk some sense to them," said Col. Leroy Swift, administrator of the 22-officer Austin park police force.

To quell the tension, Austin police are instigating a bike patrol, which currently includes three officers riding on mountain bikes, Swift said. The bike frames are constructed for off-road use with waffle-treaded wheels and about 20 different speeds.

In addition to complaints about rude and speeding bicyclists, police say they hope the bike patrol will help stem occasional incidents of men who expose themselves to women runners.

Swift said emotions between cyclists and walkers have been heated lately.

"I saw one man so mad that he would have killed the guy on the bike if he could catch him, and we don't want any of that," Swift said.

"One problem is that there is no law (regulating bicyclists), so we have to appeal to their common sense. We do stop them and try to talk some sense to them."

— Col. Leroy Swift, administrator

Stuart Strong, planning manager for the Parks and Recreation Department, said the friction has been caused by excessive traffic on the trail during busy periods.

Bicyclists on Austin's hike and bike trail complain about runners with headphones being oblivious to other traffic, walkers three and four abreast blocking the trail and loose dogs.

Swift said his officers readily volunteer for the bike patrol. When money is available, he hopes to dress the bike police in clothing appropriate for biking, including shorts and casual shirts rather than a full patrol uniform.

Strong said the city's Public Works and Transportation Department working on preliminary plans for a new bicycle trail, which could be eight feet wide and separate from the running trail.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Romance could be expensive. Only you can decide if it is worth it! Don't mistake infatuation for the real thing. Fortunate trends will affect your business and financial transactions in April. Let events take their course; pushing too hard will slow progress. You and your mate draw closer together in the fall when you handle a family crisis successfully. Show more appreciation for loved one's special strengths.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: New England poet John Greenleaf Whittier, pro basketball player Albert King, music arranger Sy Oliver.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A verbal free-for-all could have a positive effect, opening new avenues of communication within the family circle. Handle romance with delicacy. Write down your bright ideas. Originality is a big plus.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): This may be a day when emotions run too high for comfort. A gentle sense of humor will help. Romance is volatile. Maybe you secretly like it that way! Your social life accelerates.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You experience a startling mental rapport with partner. Romantic imagination seeks expression. Others may challenge your commitment to a project. Your psychic suggestions go right to the mark. Heed your intuition.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Take your time when making decisions. Carefully consider all the alternatives. Good luck comes through a loved one. Thoughts of unpaid bills increase tension. Try to get out and socialize this afternoon.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Cancel some social plans if you need to catch up on your rest. A phone call or surprise visit boosts your spirits. An odd situation could arise at home. Seek creative solutions.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Loved one gives you generous praise for a job well done. Privacy should be prized and protected. Romance looks promising. Stick to safe subjects when talking to higher-ups at a social event.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Make the most of a social opportunity. New romantic happiness is indicated. An athletic endeavor leaves you breathless but feeling great. Be realistic when it comes to making your Christmas gift list.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Confusion within the family circle can be cleared up with a single phone call. You may want to purchase something special today. Understanding and patience are essential in renewing a romance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Couples find peace of mind by just being together today. You enter a lovely period of calm. A telephone call sends your spirits soaring. Avoid getting involved in a neighbor's personal affairs.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Continue to woo a relative who is reluctant about joining the family at Christmas. Friends have valuable advice. Listen. A strong marriage is a special blessing. Do not rock the boat.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You have more time to enjoy life's little pleasures today. Recreation leaves you refreshed. Play down your differences with a close relative. Now is a particularly lucky period for large families.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A relationship moves out from under a cloud. You and your loved ones feel great relief. Be good to yourself physically and mentally. Stop trying to be all things to all people. Relax at home.

Country singer says appearance at Opry was way of dealing with grief

DALLAS (AP) — Rising country singer Lorrie Morgan said she was criticized for performing at the Grand Ole Opry just after her husband, country singer Keith Whitley, died from an alcohol overdose.

She explained in an interview with the Dallas Times Herald that the May 9 Opry appearance, the day after her husband's funeral, was a way to be with friends who could help her through her grief.

"People have to deal with crises the way they deal with them," said Ms. Morgan, whose career exploded with her hit last spring, "Dear Me." She is the daughter of the late Opry member George Morgan and made her Opry debut at age 13.

She is on tour to promote her latest album, "Leave the Light On," which has produced a Top Five hit, "Out of Your Shoes."

HOUSTON (AP) — Television newsman Bob Boudreaux says he is leaving KTRK-TV after 11 years with the ABC affiliate station because "it's time to move on."

No firm date has been set, but his departure from Channel 13 probably will occur early next year. Boudreaux is co-anchor of the station's popular "Live at Five" news show that airs five days a week.

"It's time for me to do something else," he said Thursday.

Boudreaux, 42, said he had hopes of one day becoming the main news anchor for the station, replacing Dave Ward, who is 50.

"But it's pretty obvious that Dave's not going anywhere, so my options are pretty non-existent. Both the station and I agree it's time to move on. There's nothing hostile," Boudreaux said.

While Boudreaux now has audition tapes making the rounds in other TV markets, his first priority is starting up a "private sector project here in Houston."

He would only say the company will be "media-related."

"I had this idea some years ago, but Houston's economy wasn't doing so well then. Now that it's coming back, this is a definite opportunity," he said.

Boudreaux began in television news at Fort Worth in 1972, and he joined Channel 13 in 1978.

"I'm proud of the work I've done here, but this is a young man's game and it's time to move on," he said.

• • •

SEATTLE (AP) — CBS newsman Charles Osgood, whose trademarks include his bow tie and rhyming radio reports, says poetry does not come easy under deadline pressure.

Osgood

One device for making a news story written in New York remain fresh when it is aired three hours later on the West Coast is "anticipatory verse," Osgood told a luncheon for affiliate KIRO Thursday.

He gave this example:

"There once was a pretty young lass
Who hailed from the Bay State of Mass.
And on a fine and sunny day
She stepped into the bay
In water right up to her knees."

Osgood explained: "It doesn't rhyme now, but it will when the tide comes in."

• • •

NEW YORK (AP) — Angela Lansbury says she'd like to thank Harry Reasoner, Andy Rooney, Ed Bradley and the rest of the gang at "60 Minutes" for helping "Murder, She Wrote" become such a hit.

Getting the highly rated news show as a Sunday night lead-in for her program "was the best thing that could ever have happened," Lansbury told Parade magazine for Sunday's edition.

While she's grateful now, Lansbury said she didn't realize the importance of her time slot when "Murder, She Wrote" debuted.

"I was such a newcomer to television, I didn't understand its importance. CBS originally thought of putting me on Saturday night, then suddenly said, 'No, it's Sunday,'" she recalled.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Mayor Art Agnos got rave reviews for his performance after the Oct. 17 earthquake, but it will be months before critics can review his big screen debut.

Agnos

Agnos played himself Thursday in a scene that required that he arrive outside Mission Dolores to join a crowd mourning the death of a character in the film "Class Action."

Agnos certainly sounded like an actor when he said, "I'm a little dissatisfied. My part's not big enough. I'm not talking, just walking."

The movie features Gene Hackman as a long-time civil rights attorney and Mary Elizabeth Mastrantonio as his daughter, a lawyer with a conservative corporate law firm.

Agnos hailed the project as an example of the city's "rejuvenated post-quake economy." An aide said the three months of filming should bring at least $3 million into the city.

The mayor's scene required eight takes. After the first take, director Michael Apted scolded local reporters and photographers, who were also playing themselves: "I've never seen you so polite."

• • •

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Darryl Hannah has looks, luck and success — but she remembers things being quite different when she was growing up.

"I had no figure until I was 18," Hannah told Vanity Fair for its January issue.

As far as meeting men, she says, "I didn't know how to make friends. ... I met people in grocery stores. Usually I'd go out with a girlfriend so we could dance with each other, we didn't want to dance with people we didn't know."

Hannah, who starred in "Roxanne," "Wall Street" and "Steel Magnolias," said she decides which roles to accept based on the script.

"My basic concern is the writing. Now I'll choose movies by my affinity for the characters," she said. "As long as I have an empathy for the character and can do a good job, I don't care if the character is 'good' or 'antagonistic.'"

• • •

Lowery

"Dr. Lowery's life and work provide a shining affirmation of our 1990 King Week theme, 'Nonviolence: A Time to Act, A Way to Live,'" Coretta Scott King, widow of the slain civil-rights leader, said in a statement Thursday.

Lowery is a United Methodist minister who heads the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

Former UTC executives plead guilty in defense fraud case

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — Two former executives of a United Technologies Corp. division pleaded guilty Friday to obtaining inside information from a Navy official about a defense contract competition.

James E. Rapinac, 54, a former senior vice president of the Norden Systems division, and C. J. "Jack" Richardson, 48, a former Norden marketing executive, pleaded guilty to conspiracy to defraud the government.

They agreed to cooperate with the long-running investigation of procurement fraud and influence peddling, nicknamed "Operation Ill Wind," that has netted convictions of 29 individuals and four corporations.

"While I offer no excuses for my actions, I do believe the defense acquisition process is conducive to abuses," Rapinac said.

Rapinac and Richardson each could face up to five years in prison and fines up to $250,000 when U.S. District Judge Claude M. Hilton sentences them March 9.

They admitted paying $27,500 to Washington defense consultant Thomas E. Muldoon for inside information on the award of a Marine Corps contract to build a radar command and control system worth up to $150 million.

With the help of another defense consultant, Mark Saunders, Muldoon obtained information about the confidential selection process being conducted by the Space and Naval Warfare Systems Command, according to court papers filed by the prosecution Friday.

Saunders got the information from George Stone, then a senior procurement official at the naval command, and gave it to Muldoon to be relayed to Rapinac and Richardson, according to the statement of facts filed by prosecutors in the case.

Muldoon provided information about how various Navy procurement boards ranked the proposals of competing defense companies and told Rapinac and Richardson what other companies were bidding, advising Norden to lower its bid to $95 million, prosecutors said.

Neither Stone nor Saunders has been charged.

Muldoon, 59, was convicted Thursday for participating in a scheme by a Whittaker Corp. subsidiary to funnel bribes to a Marine Corps contracting official. He faces a possible 70-year prison sentence on that conviction.

Prosecutors describe Muldoon as a major figure in the Pentagon procurement scandal.

Norden abruptly withdrew from the competition in June, 1988, when the "Ill Wind" investigation became public, prosecutors said.

In a letter to employees, United Technologies Chairman Robert F. Daniell said the actions of the former Norden executives "were wrong and violated clear company policies."

"This unfortunate occurrence compels me to remind all employees we are committed to upholding the law and maintaining the highest standards of ethical conduct," Daniell said.

Company spokesman Dan Harrison said United Technologies is cooperating with the investigation.

Court papers said that Norden's president, Edward Decker approved the consulting agreement with Muldoon. But Harrison said that approval of all consulting agreements by the president was standard procedure and Decker did not authorize "illegally obtaining government information."

Stone's attorney, Brian Gettings, called the allegations against his client "a lot of hearsay."

Also Friday, Hilton sentenced two former executives of a Whittaker Corp. subsidiary for participating in a scheme to bribe a Marine Corps procurement officer. Both pleaded guilty to bribery charges.

Scott M. Lamberth, 59, a former vice president of Whittaker Command and Control Systems, received a 10-month sentence $10,000 fine for his involvement in a scheme to funnel more than $80,000 to the procurement official.

John Franklin Van Tassel, 53, who headed the company's Fayetteville, Ark., operation, was ordered to serve three months in a halfway house and fined $3,000.

The bribes were funneled to Jack A. Sherman through Muldoon and two other defense consultants. Sherman is serving an 18-month prison term for participating in another bribery scheme.

Smithsonian goes for the gold with push for corporate dollars

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the first time in its 143-year history, the Smithsonian Institution is trying to attract corporate support for its vast educational and research activities as a permanent supplement to federal financing.

The Smithsonian recently announced the creation of a Corporation Associate Program, starting next year and intended to raise more than $1 million annually through corporate contributions or membership dues.

The founding chairman of the new fund-raising venture will be Roberto C. Goizueta, chairman and chief executive officer of the Coca-Cola Co.

Coca-Cola pledged the maximum $25,000 in membership dues under the new corporate program, which allows companies to co-sponsor a major special event at the Smithsonian. Corporations choosing to pay annual dues of $10,000 will be entitled to VIP treatment at Smithsonian events.

In the past, corporate support of the Smithsonian has been confined mostly to underwriting specific museum exhibits or projects. The new program is intended to generate unrestricted funds for the whole range of Smithsonian activities, including its 14 museums and art galleries, the National Zoo and various other educational and research facilities.

Smithsonian officials said the institution's current congressional appropriation of $266.7 million is insufficient to finance several ambitious new initiatives.

These include attracting more Hispanics, blacks and other minorities, developing exhibits focusing on cultural diversity, environmental and conservation projects; and celebrating the 500th anniversary of Columbus' discovery.

BUICK LESABRE. THE MOST TROUBLE-FREE CAR BUILT IN AMERICA.

Until now, this kind of quality was known to only an elite group, Le Sabre owners

Great Selection of New 1990 fully Loaded Le Sabres in stock now.

The latest J.D. Power and Associates Initial Quality Survey* states something Buick LeSabre owners can be proud to know and something all new-car buyers should know. The fact that Buick LeSabre is the most trouble free full-size car sold in America. Import or domestic.

The Initial Quality Survey, which measures things gone wrong with new vehicles during the first 90 days of ownership, marks an improvement in Buick quality for the third year in a row. And today, the Buick nameplate ranks as the most trouble free American brand. Higher than Lincoln. Higher than other prestige cars costing thousands more.

To our way of thinking, it all means that if you're looking for quality, you should just look down the Great American Road for the Buick tri-shield. The new symbol for quality. The sign of your Buick dealer.

*J.D. Power & Associates 1989 Initial Quality Survey covering November and December, 1988. Based upon owner-related problems during the first 90 days of ownership.

MAKE THIS A VERY SPECIAL CHRISTMAS

GIVE "TOYS FOR LIFE" FOR SPECIAL CHILDREN

Wildflower Apartments and Midland Memorial Hospital join together to share the true joy of Christmas. We are asking for your participation by helping us help the less fortunate to have a brighter Holiday Season...we need new unwrapped toys suitable for children ages 2 to 8 years...Toys collected at Wildflower's office will be donated to Midland Memorial's Cancer Treatment Center for children...Let's give these children a Christmas they will always remember.

3 MONTHS RENT FREE
FOR SOME LUCKY INDIVIDUAL!

Wildflower Apartments is a very special place to live...we urge you to come by our office and register to win 3 months rent free. Certain restrictions apply. Come see us for all the details. Drawing to be held Friday December 29, 1989. You do not have to be present to win.
