Beatings followed escape try

■ Freed hostage Frank Reed says his Hezbollah guards tried to break his feet and that he spent almost the entire 44 months in captivity flat on his back.

Associated Press

ARLINGTON, Va. — Freed hostage Frank Reed said Sunday his Islamic kidnappers beat him so savagely that they broke his nose, jaw and ribs and tried to break his feet with iron rods after he tried unsuccessfully to escape twice. He was put in solitary confinement for more than two years.

"Thank God they didn't kill me," he said. "I was one of their pet whackers."

He said his Hezbollah guards hit him more than 200 times in the head, body and feet after his first attempt to gain freedom and that he suffered minor fractures in his feet.

"They tried to break my feet," he said. "They hit my feet many times with iron rods and my feet had been slightly broken."

Two days later, he tried to escape again and was hit in the back with such force that his kidneys bled, he said.

"This kind of treatment went on and on and on for a long time," he said. "Then sometime about a year later, one pig of a man who constantly haggled me broke my ribs, kicked my ribs in on the right side. I'd managed somehow to push them back lying on my back."

Despite the pain and "hell" he went through, he said, "I did everything in my power not to cry out and not let them think they were ever going to get a single advantage on me. And I didn't."

Reed said he was chained either to a wall or radiator and that the first time he sat up on his own was when he was released after 44 months in captivity. He said he and other hostages slept on thin foam rubber mattresses.

Reed said he lay on his back for the more than 3½ years except when he was exercising, eating or making trips to the toilet.

"We were blindfolded 24 hours a day. We slept with our blindfolds on because if we had any collateral with our keepers, we didn't want to lose it by letting them see our eyes.

"We were kept in very familiar places to you, apartment houses for the most part, in bedrooms. Our bedroom doors were locked, and when they (the guards) were out, we raised our blindfolds. We were always on guard when they did come in."

Sen. Bob Dole, the Republican minority leader from Kansas who spoke at the news conference, asked for the help of every foreign leader, "everyone who can make a difference" in bringing about the release of the remaining six American hostages and 10 Westerners. "They know who they are," he said.

Surging south

DALLAS (AP) — With parts of flood-ravaged North Texas still under water, the swollen Trinity River surged southward Sunday toward the Gulf of Mexico, threatening to swamp rural areas along the way.

And water still stood several feet deep Sunday in the Rochester Park area southeast of downtown Dallas, as residents spent a fourth day waiting for floodwaters to recede.

"The latest stage was 43.8 feet, and the river is expected to fall slowly, but it's going to remain above 39 feet through at least midweek," said Don Sullivan, a National Weather Service meteorologist.

Scores of U.S. veterans took part in the celebration, and Czechoslovak revelers drove restored World War II jeeps and wore American Army uniforms.

"All Americans thank Czechoslovakia for putting American soldiers back in their true place in history," said U.S. Ambassador Shirley Temple Black.

Miss Irving, 36, and the baby, Gabriel Davis Barreto, rested comfortably Saturday, said her publicist Peggy Mulloy.

A healthy Gabriel was born Friday night at an undisclosed location in Santa Monica, Mulloy said. No other details were released.

Miss Irving and Barreto are not married but they plan to tie the knot soon, Mulloy said.

3 grants expected to aid in drug war

■ Funds will allow testing of probationers for drug use, expansion of the Permian Basin Drug Task Force and the formation of a drug prosecution team in Ector County.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Three recent federal grants to area drug enforcement programs are expected to step up the war on drugs, officials from those agencies said.

The grants include $80,468 to the Substance Abuse Identification Program, $661,601 to the Permian Basin Drug Task Force, and $135,879 to the Ector County District Attorney's Office for a specialized drug prosecution team.

Funds for the Substance Abuse Identification Program will be used to test people on probation for drug use, said Bruce Thomas, an adult probation officer for the Community Supervision and Corrections Department in Midland.

Thomas, who wrote the grant request, said the money will be used to expand the existing program.

"We're going to provide a drug screening program that can identify everyone coming in the probation office for drug use," Thomas said.

Presently about 1,200 people on probation go through the office each month, Thomas said.

Before this grant, all felony probationers were tested for drugs as required by the law. Follow-up tests were periodic and aimed at those suspected of using drugs and those with a history of drug use.

With the grant, the program will expand testing to include all probationers

Gender campaign issue in races for governor

By MICHAEL FLEEMAN

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In gubernatorial races across the country, gender has become an issue as female candidates clash with their male opponents on abortion, sexism and the importance of putting a woman in the statehouse.

Women like Dianne Feinstein in California, Ann Richards in Texas and Barbara Hafer in Pennsylvania are on the forefront of what some observers expect to be a breakthrough decade for women in politics.

There are three women now serving as governors, two of whom are retiring, and at least 10 women are considered to be serious gubernatorial hopefuls this year.

"It's a testament to the women's movement," said Shana Weiss of the Hollywood Women's Political Committee. "It's no longer a symbolic movement but a real kind of recognition that women are equal players in the political game."

Sensing a political change, Feinstein has made the very fact that she's a woman an issue in her campaign, urging voters to make history by electing her the state's first female governor.

"This is a big moment for me, and a historic one for women," she said in announcing her candidacy. "Much thought and deliberation preceded this decision. I am a non-incumbent in a race against two entrenched statewide figures — a woman in a field of men."

Ray Franz sits in his recently reopened grocery store in Onekama, Mich. Franz was able to reopen his burned-out store after residents of the tiny town came to his rescue.

■ Residents pitch in $85,000 to stock grocery store's shelves for owner who couldn't get a bank loan after the store burned down.

Associated Press

ONEKAMA, Mich. — In a scene reminiscent of the movie "It's a Wonderful Life," residents of a small town pitched in loans totaling $85,000 in five days to enable the community's only grocery store to reopen.

Ray Franz's store burned in 1988. He rebuilt it with money from his insurance company but ran out of money to restock it and was turned down by several banks.

But thanks to his friends and customers in the Upper Michigan town, Franz will reopen his store Tuesday.

"We got to keep this town going," said retired postmaster Bill Green. "Cripes, when your grocery store is gone, you're dead."

The village, population 600, has no movie theater or shopping mall.

Franz said the community "loan" is overwhelming.

Donors were given promissory notes entitling them to a charge account at the store and a 7 percent discount on groceries that are charged. When they have charged an amount of groceries equal to their loan, plus 7 percent, the loan is paid off.

After the December 1988 fire, Franz battled over insurance coverage and finally settled out of court. But after paying attorney fees, he had just enough money to rebuild the 10,000-square-foot Franz Market, which he's owned since 1976.

Franz, 42, needed an additional $85,000 for inventory but three banks turned him down.

"I was depressed," he said. "But I was too far along to walk away."

WEATHER SUMMARY

Temperatures heat up

Staff Report

Spring is heating up as temperatures are expected to return to the 90s by Tuesday and overnight lows should become more seasonal.

National Weather Service forecasters at Midland International Airport are calling for fair and warm weather today with highs in the mid-80s. Winds will be from the south at 10 to 20 mph during the morning and from the southwest at 15 to 25 mph by noon.

Tuesday should be fair with a high in the lower 90s.

Sunday's high was 77, compared with the record of 103 in 1947. Sunday's overnight low was 42. The record low for this date — also 42 — was set in 1933.

STATE

Skies were mostly clear, and temperatures were generally in the 70s and 80s across Texas Sunday.

Afternoon temperature readings in the 70s were common across the state, although some cities in South Central Texas and along the Coastal Bend reported temperatures in the 80s.

A southeast to southwest wind blew across the west while a northerly breeze prevailed across the north and south. Speeds were generally in the 5 to 15 mph range, occasionally gusting to near 20 mph in parts of North Texas and the Panhandle.

NATION

Rain was scattered over the East Sunday, and windy, cooler weather covered much of the West.

At midday, showers were scattered from central Tennessee across north-central Kentucky, Ohio, southwestern and north-central Pennsylvania and northern New England.

Showers and thunderstorms were scattered over central and northern New York State, as well as the Florida Peninsula.

Wind brought cooler temperatures to much of the West, a day after high wind caused damage and contributed to six deaths along the coast of Washington and British Columbia.

Cooler temperatures and gusty wind extended from much of the Pacific states inland across Idaho, northern Nevada, Utah and Arizona, moving later in the day into Montana, Wyoming and Colorado.

But temperatures remained unseasonably warm over coastal southern California, sending hundreds of thousands of people to the beaches and making firefighters edgy as humidity dropped in brushy areas.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

HOSTAGE: Israel urged to free prisoners

ence, urged Israel to release the Moslem prisoners it holds.

"It is in their interest to do and if they're part of the world nations seeking legality and decency they should now act to bring it about in Lebanon," Moynihan said.

Syrian and Iranian officials said Sunday the release of any more American hostages likely hinges on Israel's willingness to free hundreds of Moslem prisoners, including Sheik Abdul Karim Obeid, a Shiite cleric kidnapped from his home in 1989.

President Bush last Thursday again appealed for the release of "all hostages," but sidestepped commenting on whether that should include 400 Shiites held by Israel.

Joining Reed at the news conference was Robert Polhill, a fellow American educator who was freed April 22. Polhill said he was shocked when he heard of the brutal treatment of Reed. "I can't say I was maltreated," Polhill said.

For the first time, Reed gave graphic details of his days in captivity. The 57-year-old educator said, "Our routine was breakfast, a cigarette, up on your feet. ... After we came back from the toilet, we were allowed to exercise."

When he was first kidnapped, Reed said, he would just lie around not doing anything but worrying.

"I was a layabout trying to wonder about this and wonder about my school and wonder about my family and worry about my friends. I said if I don't worry about (myself), I'm in trouble. There ain't going to be any Frank Reed. I got up and started doing my pushups."

He began with just six and worked his way up to a record 103. "It was part of my will."

With some matches he had, he drew a picture of his 9-year-old son, Tarek, on the back of the door of his cell so that when his guards opened the door they couldn't see it. On the ceiling, he drew a picture of his Syrian-born wife, Fahima, known as Fifi.

"This is one of the ways I had to kind of remind me to keep myself going. But I knew in the final analysis if I didn't keep my life going there certainly wasn't going to be any Fifi or any Tarek."

Jill Morrell, a friend of British hostage John McCarty, greets freed U.S. hostage Frank Reed after a press conference in Arlington, Va., outside of Washington, D.C., Sunday.

He said American hostage Terry Anderson looked wonderful, physically. He last saw Anderson more than a year ago. Anderson, 42, chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press, was abducted March 16, 1985.

Reed said fellow captives John McCarthy and Brian Keenan were kept together and were in good physical condition.

"They've been fortunate. I spent probably two years, 2½ years in solitary confinement while they were fortunate to have the two of them together at all times," Reed said. He said McCarthy and Keenan developed "one of the unique relationships in the history of human relationships."

Reed talked with reporters after he joined other former hostages and their families for a brunch and reunion at a hotel in this Washington suburb. His two daughters by a previous marriage, Marilyn Langston and Jacqueline Reed, both of Malden, Mass., were among those present.

Reed had said he hoped the gathering would focus international attention on the plight of the remaining hostages held by Islamic militants in Lebanon.

Reed revealed details about McCarthy and Keenan for the first time.

"Both of them physically, in terms of muscle development, are probably in the best shape they've ever been in in their lives, unlike myself, who kind of in one silent protest, I ended up just exercising by walking," Reed said.

Hunting friend takes on grave responsibility

FARMINGTON, Ill. (AP) — Dean Goddin died in the mid-1980s, but that hasn't made him miss a single day of duck hunting with his buddy, Everett Staffeldt.

In keeping with his last request, Goddin's ashes were placed inside a pair of 2-foot mallard duck decoys that Staffeldt, a retired scientist, had originally carved for his own remains.

Staffeldt said Goddin became ill with cancer five or six years go. Shortly before his death, at age 64, he told Staffeldt:

"I want you to put me in the decoys, and I want you to take me hunting every season." Staffeldt agreed.

He and his wife, Arlene, brought the decoys along when they retired here.

"He has a good place here," Mrs. Staffeldt said of Goddin. "He goes hunting with Everett. I put bows on him for Christmas."

Staffeldt has his own burial decoys half carved, but says he must be selective about who else gets put inside a duck. The decoys are heavy, and he doesn't want to overburden his sons.

"If I get a dozen friends in there, they're not going to be able to take us down to the lake," he says.

POLITICS: Women's approaches differ

(From 1A)

Van de Kamp has responded by pointing to what he calls his strong record on feminist issues and accusing Feinstein of using gender to obscure her own record.

"If a man were to stand in front of a crowd of men and say, 'Vote for men because as a fellow man I can help men's interests,' I can be labeled a sexist," said Duane Peterson, Van de Kamp's spokesman. "I'm sort of surprised she's doing that."

The prospect of making history also is a theme in Joan Finney's bid to win the Democratic nomination for governor of Kansas.

But in Finney's case, the significance of her becoming the state's first female governor has been woven into speeches subtly, rather than offered as a major campaign issue.

In Texas, meanwhile, there has been nothing subtle about Richards' Democratic campaign against Republican candidate Clayton Williams.

Gender politics had stood in the wings because of Williams' anti-abortion stand and opposition to the Equal Rights Amendment. But it took center stage when he revealed he went to prostitutes when he was a teen-ager and a college student.

Earlier, Williams said he'd be uncomfortable running against a woman because he grew up in a "man's world." He also made a comparison between bad weather and rape and passed it off as a joke. "If it's inevitable, just relax and enjoy it," he said.

Williams has denied being a sexist, but acknowledged the remarks were insensitive.

"Clayton's heart is in the right place, even if he doesn't pick the right words," Williams' spokesman, Bill Kenyon, said.

Richards' campaign has condemned the remarks as insulting to women.

"Clayton Williams has gone to great lengths to be a stereotypical cowboy, one off those rough-hewn Texans who conquered the West, let's get up in the saddle and ride off into the sunset sort of thing," said Richards campaign manager Glenn Smith.

In a number of campaigns, male and female stereotypes have spilled over into candidates' defenses of issues, most notably abortion.

The U.S. Supreme Court's 1989 decision to give states more power in regulating abortions has helped make abortion rights a key campaign issue in many races.

In Pennsylvania, Hafer is running as a pro-choice Republican against staunchly anti-abortion Gov. Robert P. Casey, a Democrat seeking a second term.

In an interview last August, Hafer said she expected male candidates to shy away from running for governor because of the abortion issue.

"That's a tough issue to talk about," she said. "It's a gut issue, it's not a nice issue. ... A lot of men wouldn't be comfortable speaking about it and they know it's going to be an issue."

Though all three California gubernatorial hopefuls are pro-choice on abortion, Feinstein's campaign has contended that a female governor would be more likely to strongly defend abortion rights.

"A man can be a staunch defender of abortion rights. Many have been," said Feinstein spokeswoman Dee Dee Myers. "But there's a visceral reaction that women have to the issue because they are women. It's a point of common experience."

GRANTS: Money will fund more drug testing

regularly every two weeks, Thomas said.

He said drug testing is necessary so that substance abusers on probation can be referred to a treatment center. In turn, treating the problem instead of the symptom (by sending someone to jail) will reduce crime associated with drug use, Thomas said. Local law enforcement officials estimate 85 to 95 percent of all area burglaries are related to drug use.

This is the first federal grant awarded to the Substance Abuse Identification Program since it began about 3½ years ago, Thomas said. Previously all funding came from a state grant; the federal grant will about double what the agency got from the state, he said.

The federal dollars will be used beginning Sept. 1 and will last one year, Thomas said.

The grant to the Permian Basin Drug Task Force will be used to continue and expand the task force, said Commander Tom Finley of the Permian Basin Drug Task Force. Funding will be used for increased manpower, "buy money," equipment, rent and vehicle maintenance.

The task force historically has relied on federal grants for 75 percent of its funding and 25 percent from state grants, Finley said. The agency's budget for the last nine months was about $440,000, Finley said.

But the state will not be contributing funds beginning June 1, Finley said, although the total budget will be $885,000. In addition to the $661,601 federal grant, the remainder will come from law enforcement agencies in the 19 county area that the task force covers.

"We should increase our productivity through more arrests and drug seizures," Finley said of additional funding.

In addition to a $135,879 federal grant, a newly formed specialized drug prosecution team within the Ector County District Attorney's Office will be matched with 25 percent of this amount from the county, said District Attorney Gary Garrison.

"It will help get drug cases to trial quicker and allow us to work with the Permian Basin Drug Task Force," Garrison said.

Funds will be used to hire two attorneys, two investigators and an administrative employee, Garrison said.

"I anticipate it will be a great benefit to this county and surrounding counties," Garrison said of the program, the first of its kind in the state that he is aware of. Money from the grant will be available June 1, Garrison said.

TOWN: Residents decided to pay back storeowner salesman, said they figured it was time to pay back Franz. He has been president of the village council, chief of the volunteer fire department, junior varsity football coach, Little League coach and a member of the rescue squad.

On April 23, they called residents asking for donations and within five days collected the money. Many checks were for $1,000.

In the movie "It's A Wonderful Life," townspeople pitch in to help save the failing savings and loan run by the character played by Jimmy Stewart.

John Kline, a retired engineer who lives just outside town, jumped down from his tractor to write a check for $1,000. One woman wrote a check on the hood of her car.

"It just snowballed," Franz said. "It's embarrassing that the community has that much confidence in us."

"I love it here. It's the little things, like when you drive down the street and wave because you know everyone," he said.

"I didn't ask the details," Green said. "I didn't care about groceries. I figure if there is some day down the road where he can cut (the $1,000) loose, great. Otherwise, forget it."

Baker asks Poland to join German talks

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Secretary of State James A. Baker III Sunday invited Poland to participate in a six-nation meeting in Paris to seek a guarantee of its western border from a united Germany.

"I thought it was important to try to come by," Baker said of his six-hour stopover in Poland on his way back to Washington.

In Bonn Saturday, the four victorious World War II allies and two Germanys decided to include Poland in a July session of unification talks. Baker took it upon himself to convey the invitation.

Baker said during his stopover that he gave Polish leaders a complete report on the meeting in Bonn, Germany, which also included leading diplomats from the Soviet Union, France and Britain.

Officials from the six nations agreed German unification should move forward without delay and indicated their countries should not try to impose restraints on what will be Europe's most powerful nation.

"We had a very good discussion with the prime minister and I believe he is satisfied with the message," Baker said of Poland's Tadeusz Mazowiecki, the East bloc's first non-Communist prime minister.

Poland has sought a role in the talks to press its security concerns, especialy the permanence of its postwar western border, drawn along the Oder and Neisse rivers to include territory from defeated Germany.

The rush toward German unification has raised concern in Poland, where the prospect of a resurgent economic and political power next door stirs memories of Germany's World War II aggression.

A senior U.S. official traveling with Baker said later, "It's not just a pure border question, it's a fear that history might repeat itself, and they want to do everything they can as the process unfolds to prevent that."

He said on condition of anonymity that Polish leaders showed they were determined to secure Poland's border with Germany in a binding treaty.

The Poles and Americans were in "full understanding," said Wladyslaw Klaczynski, the Polish Foreign Ministry spokesman.

"Poland would like to get a guarantee from the superpowers confirming the fact of the inviolability of the Polish border. ... The formula is not set yet but that demand was not questioned," he said. "The point is the four superpowers should become an extra insurance of Polish borders."

Pope beatifies Mexico's most revered Indian

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II, beginning a mission to strengthen his church and improve relations with Mexico, beatified the country's most revered Indian Sunday and urged Mexicans to emulate him in their fight to improve society.

"You cannot ... remain indifferent before the suffering of your brothers, before poverty, corruption, the outrages against truth and human rights," said the gold-robed pontiff at a Mass.

The eight-day visit to Mexico is John Paul's 47th trip outside Italy as pope, his 10th to Latin America and his second to Mexico.

At the modern, tent-shaped Sanctuary of the Virgin of Guadalupe, the pope beatified Juan Diego, a humble Indian honored as the man to whom the Virgin appeared in 1531.

John Paul also beatified a 19th-century priest and three Indians known as the Child Martyrs of Tlaxcala, who died almost 450 years ago.

In a last-minute change of plans, Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari welcomed the pope at the airport, instead of the foreign minister. The move emphasized recent warming of relations between the Vatican and Mexico, which has some of the harshest anti-clerical laws outside the Communist bloc despite being overwhelmingly Roman Catholic.

In his homily, the pope said Catholics "cannot in fact refrain from participation in politics, that is, the multiple and various economic, social, legislative, administrative and cultural actions destined to promote ... the common good."

Czechoslovakia honors U.S. liberators

PILSEN, Czechoslovakia (AP) — President Vaclav Havel led Czechoslovaks Sunday in paying a belated tribute to U.S. GIs who helped liberate their nation from the Nazis only to find their exploits erased later from Stalinist history books.

Havel spoke at the end of a weekend festival marking the 45th anniversary of this western Bohemian city's liberation by Gen. George Patton's U.S. 3rd Army.

Only a year ago, such festivities would have been unimaginable.

Under the country's hard-line Communist rulers in power at the time, the official position was that only the Soviet Red Army liberated Czechoslovakia in 1945.

"Finally the day has come when we can express our gratitude and thanks publicly to all those persecuted, forgotten or erased from world history," Havel, a playwright and former political prisoner, told up to 40,000 people who packed Pilsen's city square for Liberation Day celebrations.

"Many of them ... did not live to see this well-deserved recognition by our country."

It was the first time that the main Czechoslovak observance of the end of World War II was held in Pilsen. In past years, the celebrations took place in Prague, the capital, and highlighted only the Soviet role in the country's liberation.

A field with hundreds of American flags and one Czech flag symbolize the reconstructed friendship between the two countries during celebrations Sunday honoring the liberation of Pilsen, Czechoslovakia, by Gen. George Patton's U.S. 3rd Army in 1945.

It was a moving experience for the many elderly American veterans who took part. Many were making their first trip back.

"They stole our hearts then and they are doing it again today," said Bobby Capps, of Birmingham, Ala., now retired to Lake Alfred, Fla., who was a member of the 396th Field Artillery.

The holiday brought tens of thousands of people to Pilsen from across western Czechoslovakia to drink the famous Pilsener beer, eat sausages, hear speeches and indulge in a festival of Americana, including country and western bands, swing music and a U.S. film festival featuring "Patton," starring George C. Scott.

"This is a dream, something genuinely unbelievable," said Czech singer Pavel Bobek, who recalled visiting Pilsen as a 7-year-old and seeing the U.S. troops.

During a ceremony at city hall, a plaque commemorating the U.S. liberation was remounted. It had been taken down by Stalinist authorities at the height of the Cold War in 1951.

"All Americans thank Czechoslovakia for putting American soldiers back in their true place in history," said U.S. Ambassador Shirley Temple Black, the former child film star.

"Today America once again stands shoulder to shoulder with you," she told the crowd.

Earlier, Havel spoke at a Sunday morning ceremony in the small town of Rokycany, where a plaque was unveiled honoring the troops of the U.S. 9th Infantry Regiment, 2nd Division, who rolled into town in their jeeps on May 5, 1945.

"Without the truth about the past we cannot live in truth today, and we cannot truthfully enter a better future," he told a cheering crowd of about 5,000 people.

Jarka Heinzova, who as a teenage student knew a little English and acted as an interpreter for the U.S. troops, recalled how they affectionately called her "Jerry."

"They brought us liberty and saved our lives," she said, searching for words in her rusty English. "We never don't forget their arrival and what they did for us."

Rokycany is near the demarcation line where U.S. troops halted their eastward advance in the war's closing days as part of the controversial Yalta Conference agreement, which allowed the Red Army to occupy much of Eastern Europe.

Under the agreement, U.S. troops were prevented from pushing on to liberate Prague, just 50 miles away.

In 1949, the Communists established full control and set up a Soviet-style state.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Filipinos seek leads in U.S. soldier's death

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Philippine investigators said Sunday they had no firm evidence linking Communist rebels to the slaying of U.S. Marine and were considering other motives for the killing near the Subic Bay naval base.

Gunnery Sgt. John Fredette, 34, of La Buena, Calif., was fatally wounded late Friday on a darkened street in Olongapo, the garrison town near the U.S.-run Subic Bay base, 50 miles west of Manila.

The killing led U.S. officials to cancel all off-post leaves and ban non-essential travel for the 40,000 troops, Defense Department civilian employees and dependents at the six U.S. bases in the Philippines.

In Manila, a spokesman for President Corazon Aquino expressed the government's regret over the slaying and pledged that the Filipino military would take all necessary steps to protect Americans.

Fredette's slaying follows a warning issued earlier this month by Philippine officials that the Marxist New People's Army was planning to kill an American before the May 14 start of talks on extending the lease for the six U.S. bases.

Beauty parlors restricted

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — The government, bowing to pressure from Islamic fundamentalists, announced Sunday that men will no longer be allowed to purchase beauty parlors or hire male beauticians to work in them.

The Interior Ministry order, which took effect Sunday, does not apply to men who already own such shops or work in them, a ministry official said.

The decision came in response to demands by Islamic fundamentalists in Jordan's 80-member Parliament. The Moslem Brotherhood, the main Islamic faction, and Islamic independents hold about three dozen seats.

"We've tried to avoid a dispute with Parliament members and at the same time respond to the demands of the Islamic tide," the Interior Ministry official said in a telephone interview, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The order said the ministry will no longer issue licences for men to own beauty parlors. It also forbids the hiring of new male beauticians.

22 die in truck accident

Seven bodies were fished from the raging Sutlej River in the northeastern state of Himachal Pradesh, near India's border with China. The other 15 were washed away, Press Trust of India and United News of India said.

Six killed in train crash

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — A modern, double-decker passenger train slammed into the back of an old-fashioned steam train that apparently stalled going up a steep hill Sunday. At least six people were reported killed and 90 injured.

The crash occurred at night in a remote area 25 miles north of Sydney. TV pictures showed that an undetermined number of people were trapped.

MONDAY, MAY 7, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Try to be more available to your romantic partner in the months ahead. The events of September will bring you new financial independence. Count your blessings! A change of environment may be essential to your health and happiness. You discover exciting career alternatives through talking with friends. Ask for a loan only if you really need it. A romantic interlude in the spring of 1991 could lead to a permanent alliance. Family opposition will be strictly temporary.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You may face several interesting complications today. Now is an opportune time to deal with VIPs. The good deeds you do will boost your status at work. Attention to detail begins to pay off.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Learn from your mistakes but refuse to dwell on them. Emotional upsets are easier to handle now. New work challenges excite you. Cut down on those small luxuries that can wreck your budget.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Be careful when taking risks in business; confirm details and seek advice if you are in doubt. Agreements reached today may boost profits. Communications can fool you; double-check everything.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Keep travel and physical tasks to a minimum today. This is not the time to make momentous decisions. It really does pay to be moderate. Romance could be rocky. Curb your temper.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Others will pledge their loyalty and help to you today; a phone call or meeting is all it will take. Keep up the pace at work — influential people are watching you. Long-term arrangements are favored.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): People who wield power or have great wealth may be especially helpful now. Your recent career efforts begin to pay off. Settle bills promptly to protect your credit rating. Put romance on hold.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Long-distance affairs could be highly rewarding today. Be sure to plan ahead. Afternoon hours may put you in touch with a long-lost love. Romance looks sweeter the second time around.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Various complications could arise today; be doubly careful what you do and say. You shine in affairs of the heart. Performing a good deed will do wonders for your status in the community.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A dear friend's trauma can strengthen your friendship. Be a good listener. Resolve to change your spending habits. Shun someone who seems to have ulterior motives.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Member of opposite sex's unconventional behavior may embarrass you. Speak your mind after a cooling-off period. A stranger could play a meaningful role in a business decision you make today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Someone you meet in a public place could give you a job lead; follow up immediately. A makeover will lift your spirits and improve your image. Try to get some exercise every day.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Read the fine print or you could end up owing money. Do not be taken in by a newcomer's flattery; he could have designs on your job or contracts. A letter from home brings welcome news.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are reliable, cautious and persistent. These Taureans are slow starters, but once motivated, they will move forward with surprising speed. Question their integrity and these children will explode like raging bulls! Their word is their bond.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKQ7 ♡AJ6 ◇Void ♣AJ6543
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	1 ◇	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—Despite the misfit, you cannot pass, so be careful in selecting your next bid; you want to make the nature of your hand crystal clear to partner. We know some scientists who would now bid three hearts, but we believe that is more likely to sow confusion than anything else. We opt for three no trump.
Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AK875 ♡852 ◇1084 ♣KQ
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♣	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—If you play fourth-suit forcing, this is easy—bid two hearts and see what partner does next. If you do not, you have a nearly insurmountable problem. Our choice would be three diamonds, even though we don't have quite enough for a forcing jump raise.
Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K83 ♡K6 ◇AJ10 ♣QJ965
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
1 NT	Pass	2 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—You have key cards in both of partner's suits, but no guaranteed eight-card fit. With your double stopper in the unbid suit and soft values in clubs, two no trump is the obvious choice.
Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 ◇	Pass	3 ♠	Pass

What action do you take?
A.—Be careful; partner could easily have no more than two spades on this auction, and is simply taking a preference. You have done all you can, especially since your heart void represents duplication of values. Partner would have bid four spades with a good fit. Pass.
Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠8752 ♡74 ◇AQ6 ♣KJ104
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♡	Dbl	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—You have enough to invite game, and you should do so in spades. Partner's double of one major promises either four cards in the other or a hand good enough to follow up with a bid in a new suit, so don't be concerned with the quality of your suit. Jump to two spades.
Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠QJ1074 ♡A5 ◇KJ109 ♣98
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
2 ◇*	Dbl	Pass	?

* — Weak
What action do you take?
A.—It is tempting to convert partner's double to penalties by passing, but with a huge fit in spades, that would be the height of folly—you could lose a slam! We would jump to four spades to tell partner about our good hand, and see whether North shows any interest.

Lake soon may honor Lady Bird

AUSTIN (AP) — Town Lake may get a new name: Lake Lady Bird, after the widow of former President Lyndon B. Johnson.

"We want to put you on the map — forever," Austin Mayor Lee Cooke told Mrs. Johnson at a dinner Friday to mark the 25th anniversary of Johnson's inauguration.

Johnson

"Lady Bird Johnson has cultivated beauty, and she has shared it with us. ... This is our way of saying 'thank you' for the many gifts of beauty, courage and care that she has so generously brought to our world," Cooke said.

The dinner was at the LBJ Library at the University of Texas.

Town Lake was created on the Colorado River in 1959. But plans to beautify its shores and create hiking and biking trails foundered until Mrs. Johnson lent her name, time and money to the project in 1970.

NEW YORK (AP) — Newsday columnist Jimmy Breslin has apologized for his racist, expletive-filled newsroom tirade against a reporter of Korean descent who criticized his column, the newspaper said Sunday.

But Breslin's apology, sent to Newsday staffers Friday as an internal computer message, failed to quell the brouhaha over his remarks.

Sunday, Asian-American groups called for his resignation for the outburst against staff reporter Ji-Yeon Mary Yuh, 25, who had sent him an internal computer message calling his Thursday column sexist.

"She's a yellow cur. Let's make it racial," Breslin said.

His remarks, made outside the presence of Yuh, were reported by the Daily News and in a letter of complaint to Newsday managers from members of the paper's staff.

The 61-year-old Pulitzer prize winner's apology said in part:

"To the people I work with. I am no good and once again I can prove it. ... I am sorry. I said things I shouldn't have said. The racial and sexual insults I spewed are never appropriate."

But Helen Zia, president of the New York chapter of the Asian-American Journalists Association, said the apology was "very flip."

Zia's group joined the Coalition Against Anti-Asian Violence and the Organization of Asian Women in demanding that Breslin resign or be fired, and that he make a formal public apology to Yuh.

The columnist's apology to the staff came after an internal system-wide computer reprimand from editor Don Forst — who called Breslin's racist and sexist comments "offensive and inexcusable" — and protests by the paper's staff, some of whom heard his outburst.

"This is the worst case of racism I have encountered," Yuh, a native of Chicago who lives in Jersey City, N.J., said Sunday.

Yuh, who reports for Newsday from Queens, says she has never met Breslin and has never communicated with him before her message Thursday — also sent to Forst and another editor — which criticized Breslin's portrayal of the role of women in Thursday's column.

Breslin said he hated what he called "official women," including his wife, City Councilwoman Ronnie Eldrdige, who he said devoted too much of her time to official duties and not enough to the home.

According to a letter to Newsday editor Anthony Marro, written by reporter Jessie Mangaliman and signed by 46 staff members, Breslin stormed into the newsroom Friday after reading Yuh's message. In addition to the racial epithets, Breslin used coarse sexual terms to describe Yuh, according to the letter, which denounced Breslin's "racist vituperation," and called his behavior "unprofessional."

"There's a part of me that says, 'Let him be suspended,' but there's another part of me that says, 'Let him be fired,'" said Yuh.

"It proves that racism comes in all kinds of packaging, you can encounter it anywhere, from your colleagues, in the boardroom, from your neighbors — not necessarily people in a white sheet," she said.

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — 'Murder, She Wrote' is entering its final chapters. Shooting for the seventh and final season of the CBS series begins in July, and Angela Lansbury is ready to move on.

Lansbury

"Too much of a good thing is not good for the health," she said in the May 12-18 issue of TV Guide magazine.

Lansbury will star in only 13 episodes next season and introduce the other nine. Then she'll move on to comedy.

"We are already working on a half-hour comedy in which I'll star in the fall of '91," she said.

Criminals should pay for crimes

Three notable officers of a Texas anti-crime group were in Midland a few days ago and confirmed what many have feared was taking place in criminal justice during the past few years: the integrity in the system has been destroyed.

Richard H. Collins, chairman of Associated Texans Against Crime; Tex Lezar, the organization's president and a former assistant U.S. attorney general; and Jeff Taylor, ATAC's executive director, were in Midland to present awards to four outstanding Midland police officers who saved the lives of a woman and her children after the vehicle they were in was in a collision with a vehicle fleeing the police.

That, of course, is a praiseworthy aspect of ATAC — recognizing outstanding law enforcement work in the state. But their comments in another regard also piqued our interest. That is the "revolving door" that has been set into motion in the criminal justice system and ways to address it.

They noted that a police officer is killed every 57 hours and that 25 percent of those who die are killed by individuals out of prison on parole. The killers go to court and are sentenced to terms in the Texas prison system. Yet because of overcrowding in the Texas Department of Corrections — and federal mandates regulating rights for prisoners ordered over the past decade or so — most of the prisoners are released back out onto the streets of Texas within a few months or, at most, a few years.

The concern of the ATAC officials is that the quest to abolish inhumane treatment of county and state inmates has been carried too far and that one of the results has been the destruction of the deterrence aspect of punishment.

Prison today, noted Lezar, "just is not a great cost." As a result, criminals are not deterred from committing crimes. They recognize that they will not have to go to prison for long, if at all, and while there they won't be deprived of many of the comforts of life over a long period of time.

Consequently, the situation has developed that "a tremendous amount of the crime is caused by the same people," noted Lezar.

While the present state of affairs is not conducive to public safety, all is not hopeless, the ATAC officials say. The impact of numerous drug cases has been introduction of a bill to house prisoners in tents in "work camps." That could help relieve the overcrowding in prisons.

One good way to help bring sanity back to the criminal justice system is a proposal to end parole in Texas, says Lezar. Under such a plan, a prisoner sentenced to 10 years would have to serve 10 years behind bars. That would put punishment back in the criminal justice system and help to bring back deterrence to crime.

It has also become evident in recent years that criminals are rarely rehabilitated, so after they leave prison, the criminal justice system will have to maintain closer surveillance of those released.

But more than anything politicians must be brought into the process and made to understand that the public is at risk and wants a change to make the system effective again. The public should start sending that message now.

Washington story drawing scrutiny

For Heaven's sake why did you ever report in the Midland Reporter-Telegram of Wednesday, April 25, the Washington story "No Meat? For Earth's sake give up steak"? The contentions in the article were not factual and were irresponsible.

"If you're a meat eater, you are contributing to the destruction of the environment, whether you know it or not," says Neal D. Bernard, 36, a 1980 graduate of George Washington University Medical School and president of the 30,000 member committee. "Clearly the best you can do for the Earth is to not support animal agriculture."

Where do these quacks get their information? It certainly cannot be moral. Psalms 104 verse 14 states "He causeth the grass to grow for the cattle and the herbs for the service of man. That he may bring forth food out of the earth."

I am sure thinking Christian people in Midland, Texas, and elsewhere will want to expose these crazies for what they are and what they stand for, which is destruction of our way of life at every opportunity. I urge others to write letters and make their voices of protest heard. Every day is an Earth Day for people in agriculture.

Water cost comment criticized by reader

I just wanted to tell you how much I enjoyed your hilarious recent article in the Sunday, April 29, newspaper headlined "Preserving precious water." I would especially like to recommend Midge Erskine for Midland's "Comedienne of the Year" for her observation that "water is extremely cheap in Midland — much too cheap."

We moved here four years ago and were a family of four with three cars. The place we moved from was in the Deep South. We had a garden and approximately three-quarters acre yard. Our water bill never even exceeded $12 per month and the water was fit to drink out of the tap.

We are now a family of two, two cars, no garden and a postage-stamp yard. Last month my bill was $39.28. Last July, in the heat of the summer, my bill was $66.73. Also, each month I pay $22.50 for a reverse osmosis system to make this water fit to drink.

To tell you the truth, I think the people of Midland are getting ripped off. Sometimes I wonder if the water department isn't being run by the same people who set gasoline prices around here.

Ambassador raises Haitians' hopes

WASHINGTON — The U.S. government is about to hang a fledgling democracy out to dry in the hot Caribbean sun.

Haiti has lost track of the coups that have driven its chaotic government in recent years. With each coup, new hopes for democracy are raised and then dashed again.

Anderson

The most recent coup came in March when President Prosper Avril was overthrown. Now, if the State Department and Congress continue to balk on sending aid to Haiti at this critical juncture, the nation will be pushed further back from the brink of democracy.

Alvin Adams, the U.S. ambassador to Haiti, can take much of the credit for getting Haiti to that brink. Five months ago, Adams arrived in Haiti and gave a speech in Creole at the airport. He told the assembled throng that "the loaded donkey cannot stop or it will collapse," meaning that Haiti must go forward with democracy. The Haitians cheered.

Now they have taken to calling Adams "Bourik Chaje," the loaded donkey.

Adams' appeal was lost on Avril, who tried to have him sent back to the United States. As it turned out, Adams has outlasted Avril.

The new president, Ertha Pascal-Trouillot, vowed to hold free elections as soon as possible. But Haiti has found it impossible to organize an election when its economy is in a shambles.

In the meantime, Congress and the State Department are quibbling over how much to give Haiti in its hour of need. Supporters of Haiti say the country needs $30 million. Opponents say $10 million will do.

No one is following the debate more closely than Adams. He knows Haiti is walking a tightrope with no help from the outside. Haitian hardliners who supported Avril and "Baby Doc" Duvalier before him, have rattled the government. They are reportedly responsible for a recent hijacking and airplane fire at Port Au Prince Airport. The terrorist strikes effectively cut Haiti off from the outside world, as airlines cut scheduled service to Haiti.

At a recent meeting with Pascal-Troulliet, Adams tried to urge the timid novice to get a grip on her government. But she wanted to know who would protect her and her family from her enemies. She is a widow who lives with her 14-year-old daughter.

Adams' reputation is still golden in Haiti, but the longer it takes for help to arrive from the United States, the more hollow his calls for democracy will sound.

Adams uses the pulpit better than any of his predecessors in Haiti. One of his first speeches was in City Soleil, a slum. In unbroken Creole, Adams told the poor Haitians how important democracy is for them.

A key Haitian source told our associate Jim Lynch that it was the first time many Haitians were convinced that the United States was on their side. America's unwise backing of the despotic Duvalier regimes had left Haitians in doubt, and had helped to turn Haiti into the poorest nation in the Western Hemisphere.

Adams is a seasoned trouble-shooter who has the respect of the State Department. He can be tossed into the worst of circumstances and turn the situation around. But this time he can't do it alone.

WHITHER GERMANY — The Soviets have rejected the idea that a united Germany should be part of NATO. But the West Germans believe, in the end, that Mikhail Gorbachev will give in. For the sake of European stability, it would be better for the Germanys to join NATO only temporarily. In return, the Soviets would seek a commitment that NATO be gradually dissolved and replaced by a conference on security and cooperation in Europe with the Soviet Union as a member. The interim problem is that a unified Germany as a member of NATO, even temporarily, would have 380,000 Soviet troops in it — the troops already in East Germany. It would be embarrassing for NATO to have the Soviet army camped in its midst.

MINI-EDITORIAL — The Food and Drug Administration has backed off of its too-conservative stand on home test kits for AIDS. The FDA had banned the kits on the notion that they were too unreliable, that all AIDS testing should be done by doctors and that the news that someone had the disease should be broken to the patient by a professional. Now, the first kits are being allowed on the market. Of course, there will be some mistakes, but people will be free to test themselves in the privacy of their homes. This is a disease with disastrous public impact. The government should do everything it can to encourage diagnoses, even home diagnoses.

CHARLEY REESE

Television news often distorts reality

Thomas Jefferson wrote a young man that he felt sorry for anyone whose view of the world depended on newspapers. They would clearly have no idea of what was going on, he said.

Reese

That problem has grown more acute with television. The brevity and over-simplification and outright distortion that constitutes television news is both appalling and dangerous.

You could easily get the idea, for example, that the poor old Soviet Union is just collapsing into a rusty, harmless heap as television news focuses on this or that dismal aspect of the Soviet economy.

What's lacking, however, is perspective. The "civilian" sector of the Soviet economy has suffered for the same reason the civilian sector of the American economy once suffered.

In that time, food and gasoline were rationed. It was a five-year wait for a new car or refrigerator. The housing shortage was appalling. Many familiar items were just not available, ration coupons or not.

I do not refer to the Great Depression. I refer to World War II. The stresses on the civilian economy were caused by the diversion of resources into war production.

And that, folks, not any defect in socialist theory, is what has "stressed out" the civilian side of the Soviet economy. The Soviet Union has been producing weapons at a wartime rate for most of this decade and they have not, despite Gorbachev's claims to the contrary, slacked off significantly so far. You have to be careful that you aren't lulled into the belief that the Russians are sort of heavy-jawed, slow-thinking peasants with mud on their boots — dim-witted barbarians that our superior Ivy League intellectuals have tamed.

The Russians are a brilliant people. What they wanted to do, they've done well and in many areas, they have outperformed us. Out of 14 major weapons systems, the Soviet Union outproduced us significantly in all but one from 1978 to 1982 and in all but two from 1983 to 1987 — at the height of the so-called Reagan buildup.

For example, from 1978 to 1987, total U.S. tank production was 7,600 tanks; Soviet tank production was 25,300. During that period of time we produced 10,800 other armored vehicles, the Soviets built 46,000; we turned out 3,200 artillery, mortars and other gun tubes, the Soviets built 27,000.

Our gigantic economy produced 3,600 fighter/attack aircraft; the Soviets, 7,700. We built 2,100 military helicopters; they built 4,400. We produced 700 intercontinental ballistic missiles and submarine launched ballistic missiles (most of that 700 are SLBMs), but the Soviets produced 3,000. We made 18,000 surface-to-air-missiles; the Soviets produced 120,000.

If the Soviet Union's economy is hopelessly crippled, how did they do that? Do you think perhaps little elves come out at night after the Politbureau members go to sleep and make all this stuff?

You want to talk space? We hit our peak in 1965 with around 80 launches per year and have plunged precipitately since then so that we now average about 15 a year. The Soviet space program hit 80 launches per year in 1970 and has continued at rates of 80 to 110 launches per year since.

While television news tells you how bad things are in the USSR, the Soviets are routinely lofting satellites into space every three or four days.

They are far in advance of us in research of particle beam weapons, lasers, anti-satellite weapons, military uses of space, and strategic defense. Their recently modernized SS-18s — just one of only five generations of ICBMs they have deployed — can destroy 65 to 80 percent of all U.S. ICBM silos using two warheads per silo and still have 1,000 warheads for other targets.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Women deserve new 'Equalizer' pants

A reader mailed me a clip of a story about a woman inventing a new type pants for women that makes it easier for them, well, to relieve themselves.

You see if a woman happens to be wearing a pair of pants — and there are a lot of women wearing them these days — it is sort of inconvenient and time-consuming for them when nature calls.

Grizzard

Take a woman police officer, for instance. While her male counterpart simply can unzip, the woman must remove her pants and her gunbelt and her radio and whatever else she is packing around her waist, and that's a big hassle.

Was it because of my ill-deserved reputation as a sexist? Did the reader think this fashion development was funny? Did this person want my thoughts on this development?

Whatever the reason was, allow me to say that this is a bit of a sticky subject and I will attempt to handle it with all the dignity and care I can muster.

And as far as being sexist is concerned, let me also say that I think it only fair for women to be able to relieve themselves with the same ease as a man, while wearing pants, and I even think women can look quite attractive in pants as long as they aren't baggy.

Putting a pair of baggy pants on a woman would be like pulling a shade down over a lovely sunset. (Is that sexist? I was just trying to pay a compliment here.)

There is nothing funny about this. It's an important issue.

According to the article, "The ... design has a zippered seam which extends from just below the waistband at the back of the pants downward through the seat portion and crotch area and up to the waistband at the front.

"The pants also include integrated fleece-lined underpants which use the same releasable seam design."

Ms. Stradley was quoted as saying, "These pants are designed in such a manner that you do not have to bare your buttocks or your bottom torso, and you have complete access to relieve yourself."

The article also pointed out that more and more women are getting into pants-wearing work, and included an incredible statistic that by the year 2000 women will comprise 47.5 percent of all construction workers, and that's a lot of hard-hatted Hannahs.

As I mentioned earlier, I think it only fair women get a break like this, and I would also like to mention that anything that might contribute to cutting down on the time it takes a woman to use the restroom is long overdue.

"I want it to go," said Ms. Stradley. "I want it to be the next Coca-Cola."

As author of the acclaimed tome, "When My Love Returns from the Ladies Room, Will I Be Too Old to Care," so, by golly, do I.

And if that's a sexist statement, then so be it. When you gotta go, you gotta go, and sometimes a man has just gotta say what he's gotta say.

Attractive faces really just average, UT study suggests

NEW YORK (AP) — Alluring eyes and a sunny smile are not enough. If you want to find an attractive face, a new high-tech study suggests, look for one that is basically average.

"Averageness is probably a necessary condition for attractiveness," said researcher Judith Langlois of the University of Texas at Austin.

The bad news for ordinary Joes and Janes is that, as Langlois put it, there are "probably not that many faces that are exactly average" in the way she studied.

Langlois and a colleague used a computer to construct faces that blended facial features of up to 32 people, averaging out such features as nose length and chin prominence. In this way, the more faces that went into a composite, the more it represented an average face for the population of college-age students from which it was drawn.

When other students judged the attractiveness of the composites and of individual faces, without being told which was which, they found the composites made from 16 or 32 faces to be more attractive than the real faces that went into them. And the more faces went into a composite, the more attractive it became.

Although other factors probably make movie stars unusually handsome or beautiful, "I'll bet their faces have the fundamental attribute of averageness," Langlois said Wednesday. "And without that they would not be very attractive."

"We don't know yet about all the other components of attractiveness, but I would say this is a major one, and it's a required one."

"I think the research is absolutely fascinating," commented University of Minnesota psychologist Ellen Berscheid.

"I would say this is about the first time anyone has even begun to unravel what the standards of beauty are," she said.

But she cautioned that the experiment involved faces of white college-age students, and said similar work must be tried with faces from other racial and age groups to see if the results still apply.

Northwest battered by high winds, 6 dead

SEATTLE (AP) — High wind battered the Pacific Northwest during the weekend, capsizing boats, pulling down power lines and fanning fires. Six people were killed and four were missing.

Winds blowing up to 60 mph hit Saturday and early Sunday as thousands of people took to the water for the Northwest's traditional opening weekend of boating season.

Coast Guard crews answered about 60 distress calls in Washington's inland waterways Saturday. Boats were overturned or washed ashore, and Coast Guard Lt. Jim Beckham said two sailboats sank. Their occupants were rescued.

Authorities at the Rescue Coordination Center in Victoria, British Columbia, were just as busy with reports of dozens of swamped or overdue boats.

At Prince George, British Columbia, wind of up to 54 mph fanned a brushfire and forced Royal Canadian Mounted Police to evacuate some 125 houses for about two hours when a subdivision was threatened. The fire was brought under control with the help of two water bombers.

"At one point the fire was about 100 yards from the houses and the wind was blowing the fire directly at the houses," said RCMP Constable Paul Bruggerman. "Then the wind changed and it blew toward the (Fraser) river."

In Washington, subsiding wind and cooler temperatures helped firefighters battle slash fires on about 220 acres 20 miles west of Port Angeles near Joyce.

British Columbia Hydro spokesman Peter McMullen said about 10,000 customers in southwestern British Columbia were without power at times after wind or falling branches downed power lines.

The inaugural sailing of a new ferry serving Seattle and Victoria, the Crown Princess Victoria, was extended by six hours because fierce wind made docking impossible at Victoria. The B.C. Stena Line's new ship finally docked at a terminal more than 18 miles from its terminal in Victoria's Inner Harbor. The 750-plus passengers were bused downtown.

The wind also delayed other ferries, and about 50 or 60 people who took a tour of historic homes in the Olympic Peninsula city of Port Townsend were stranded overnight, said police Deputy Wes Benson.

Two of the deaths occurred after a 21-foot boat with four people aboard capsized on the Columbia River below Kennewick, Wash., said Coast Guard Petty Officer Sandy Calhoun in Seattle.

A man and woman swam to shore but the man was struck and killed by a train as he ran for help, Ms. Calhoun said. The body of a second man was found hours later washed up on the river bank, she said. The woman was in stable condition but a 6-year-old boy was missing.

One man was killed in British Columbia while learning para-gliding, the sport of riding the wind on a tethered parachute.

"He was taking lessons on the beach, and the parachute was tied to a log on the beach," said West Vancouver Police Sgt. John Looye. "The wind came up and forced the parachute to the ground."

Coast Guard Lt. Jim Beckham said the bodies of two fishermen were found washed ashore near their 15-foot boat Sunday morning about five miles east of Port Angeles on the Strait of Juan de Fuca, where a sudden weather front brought gale-force winds.

A man also was found dead on the Nisqually Flats between Tacoma and Olympia by a Coast Guard helicopter after searchers spotted his small aluminum boat tied to a tree near the mudflats, Beckham said.

Coast Guard boats and helicopters searched Sunday for two fishermen overdue in a 15-foot boat from Sequim, east of Port Angeles.

One man was missing and presumed drowned after a 20-foot pleasure boat capsized Saturday on the mouth of the Fraser River south of Vancouver. Three other men were rescued after the fiberglass boat broke apart in rough waters, said Richard Hendrickson, a Canadian Coast Guard officer.

Car kills 3 children, injures 8 on ball field

RIVERSIDE, Ill. (AP) — The driver of a car that plowed through a baseball diamond, killing three children, blacked out before the tragedy and remembers little, his wife said Sunday.

The driver, James J. Harasek, 59, refused to answer questions from investigators, said Don Doneske, police chief in this Chicago suburb.

Harasek and eight other people were injured in the accident Saturday, when his car scattered players at a "T-ball" baseball game for young players.

Two boys and a girl were killed, and six of those injured were children. All the children were 7 or 8 years old.

A woman who identified herself as Harasek's wife, Loretta, speaking through sobs in a telephone interview, said her husband remembered little of the accident.

"He blacked out, he doesn't remember hitting nothing till he hit the building, that's when he knew he hit something," she said. "I'm very deeply hurt and so upset I can't even begin to say how bad I feel."

Asked about a report in the Chicago Sun-Times that her husband had a heart condition, Mrs. Harasek said he had medical problems, but refused to comment further.

Harasek's lawyer, Charles G. Levy, refused to comment on his client's health. The attorney said he had advised Harasek against talking to the police for the time being.

Harasek was in fair condition at MacNeal Hospital in suburban Berwyn and was to undergo surgery on a fractured elbow, said Mary Pappas, a hospital spokeswoman.

Two children remained in critical condition Sunday at Loyola University Medical Center, said Michael Maggio, a spokesman for the hospital. Three other children were in fair condition and another was in serious condition.

One adult remained in fair condition at Loyola; the other had been treated and released.

"Parents are, well, suffering along with their kids," said the Rev. Leon Wagner of St. Mary's Church in Riverside, who knew several of the children from the church or parish school.

"I'm trying to recall which father said, 'I wish it was me instead of him,'" Wagner said.

St. Mary's was packed during a prayer service for the children Sunday afternoon.

Doneske, the police chief, said at a news conference Sunday that he would ask a Cook County grand jury to order testimony from the driver and subpoena medical records from the hospital where he was being treated.

Mike Lawrence, a spokesman for the Illinois Secretary of State's office, said Harasek had a June 1989 conviction for speeding.

Police said Harasek appeared dazed immediately after the accident.

"I asked him what happened and he didn't remember," said Officer Robert Gordon.

Gordon said he didn't smell alcohol on Harasek, who has a valid driver's license.

The accident occurred just as the children were beginning a game of T-ball, a kind of Little League baseball for young children in which the ball is set up on a tee in front of the batter rather than pitched.

The 1989 Cadillac smashed into a bench full of players and continued across the field, finally crossing a four-lane road and smashing into a building.

Onrushing lava crosses Beach Road Saturday cutting off access to Kalapana, Hawaii, and it's remaining buildings. Kalapana is now encircled with lava from the Kilauea Volcano. All emergency workers, residents and reporters have been cleared leaving it a ghost town.

Lava encircles, cuts off Kalapana

KALAPANA, Hawaii (AP) — One arm of the unpredictable lava flow that encircles this coastal town stalled Sunday as molten rock pooled in a low spot just short of its expected plunge into the sea.

Another branch of the flow remained active, moving at up to 30 feet per hour, near a church and store, said Bruce Butts, deputy administrator for Hawaii County Civil Defense.

Kalapana, a tiny country town that boasts just one store, was sealed off, its residents gone because scientists are certain that lava from Kilauea Volcano will overrun what's left of the community sometime soon.

One arm of the flow pooled at the base of sand dunes near Harry K. Brown State Park, Butts said. It was just a matter of time, he said, until enough lava amassed to spill over the sand and ooze into the ocean.

The Kalapana Mauna Kea Congregational Church and Kalapana Store and Drive-In were standing Sunday, although Butts said the flow was active to the west and north of the structures and threatening both. The town's other church has been moved out of harm's way.

The seven-year eruption had destroyed 136 homes in Kalapana and elswhere on the volcano's flank, 60 of them since April 4. In requesting a federal disaster declaration for Hawaii Island on Saturday, Gov. John Waihee said damage totals $61 million.

Residents and reporters were ordered out of the park area Saturday night, and Civil Defense had to move its command post from there to a papaya grove on higher ground, Butts said.

The area was sealed off because unstable winds were blowing noxious gases from burning asphalt. Lava also was burning trees in the area and setting off explosions of methane gas in the ground, Butts said.

Officials were concerned about a possible health threat when the hot lava reaches the ocean's salt water and produces steam clouds, known as laze, that contain hydrochloric acid and other potentially hazardous chemicals.

"Our main concern is the trade winds," Butts said. "As long as there are trade winds, the laze will be blown away.

Springsteen items to be auctioned

ASBURY PARK, N.J. (AP) — A defunct museum claiming to have the world's largest collection of Bruce Springsteen memorabilia is putting it up for sale, offering the singer's surfboard, draft card and 1970 driver's license.

The items are remnants of the Asbury Park Rock 'n' Roll Museum, which closed its doors last year. The museum wants to sell its inventory in a package it hopes will go for at least $50,000.

"We had a great time doing it, but we can't seem to work it out where we can keep it open," said Billy Smith, an Asbury Park native who with Stephen Bumball owns most of the museum's artifacts. "Hopefully, somebody will buy this stuff and display it."

Followup budget parley planned in Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush agreed with leaders of Congress on Sunday night to press for full-scale budget negotiations with no preconditions to bring the widening federal deficit under control, lawmakers said.

The congressional leaders emerged from 90 minutes of talks at the White House saying they would be back later in the week for further talks with Bush.

First they need to consult with other members of the House and Senate, they said.

But House Speaker Tom Foley, asked if things were now on track for full-scale budget negotiations with the White House, said, "I think that's going to be the outcome."

Foley and Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell said they did not discuss any specifics with Bush, including whether the president is now willing to budge from his no-new-taxes pledge.

But Foley said, "The assumption is that all matters would be on the table, that we would not enter any talks with preconditions."

Mitchell said, "There was a general agreement that any discussions will be without preconditions, if and when they occur."

Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole said the lawmakers expected to meet again with Bush "late Tuesday" after conferring with other lawmakers, including leaders of the key budget and tax-writing committees.

Congress and the White House have made repeated efforts in recent years, both with former President Reagan and with Bush, to forge grand compromises on the deficit.

Sluggish economic growth and rising interest rates of late have driven up the deficit, making it harder to meet the Gramm-Rudman mandate of a deficit no larger than $64 billion for fiscal 1991, which starts Oct. 1.

Foley said he expects more lasting results this time.

"All of us who took part in this meeting feel that we need a major and meaningful effort that has been somewhat lacking for various reasons in past years" to narrow the deficit for both next year and over several years, the speaker said.

"I think there's goodwill on all sides in attempting to deal with the fiscal problems the country faces. ... " said Foley. "We're going to, I think, find a way to deal effectively with them."

Foley said the congressional leaders, including House Minority Leader Bob Michel, wanted "an opportunity to consult with our membership and to consult again with the president."

Stephen Hart, the president's deputy press secretary, said the White House had no immediate comment on the meeting.

Bush slipped upstairs to his private quarters with the leaders after hosting a lecture at which author David McCullough held forth on the 26th president, Theodore Roosevelt.

White House Chief of Staff John Sununu and budget director Richard Darman, portfolios and legal pads in hand, preceded Bush up the stairs. Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady came staight from talks on Capitol Hill with finance ministers from the Group of Seven nations — the other major Western democracies.

"If we're going to do it, first we have to have an agenda. We have to know who the players are and what our goals are," Dole said before the meeting.

THEY'RE FALLIN' FOR THEIR SPORT

"I was just terrified," the 30-year-old Odessan said.

Wallender conquered his fears that day, and now he's got nearly 1,000 death-defying airborne plunges to his credit since he first took up the sport nine years ago.

Wallender is part of a group of Permian Basin men and women who gather at a small airstrip near Stanton each weekend so they can hurl themselves from a single-engine plane at 10,000 feet.

Together, they experience the rush of free-falling at 120 mph before deploying their parachutes and floating safely to the ground.

Brent Berry, the group's ranking skydiver with 2,500 jumps under his belt, is the co-owner of Westex SkySports, a school, club and "tight family" that offers instruction for aspiring divers.

The school offers several types of jumping. There's a one-day course in static-line jumping, in which a student jumps from 3,500 feet and his ripcord is pulled instantly as he leaves the plane. A student wishing to experience free-falling on the first try can jump from a greater height with two instructors holding onto him until the ripcord is pulled.

Beginners can also try tandem jumping, in which one skydiver is hooked firmly to a partner who has a special parachute attached to his back.

The jumpers who gather at the Westex airfield come from all walks of life and were spurred to try the sport for a variety of reasons.

Berry, who works for a construction company, was inspired by a father who made combat jumps as an Army paratrooper. Wallender, a salesman, remembered the old "Ripcord" TV series from the early 1960s.

Jim Dunn, who has a cottonseed business near Seminole, was prompted by a relative who was jumping. "I've always been kind of adventurous," Dunn said.

The divers also have to contend with friends or relatives who don't understand the thrill of the sport and fear for the safety of their loved ones.

Tony Anderson, an Odessa mechanic, says his mother won't watch him jump. On the other hand, Jim Gray, an oil field welder in Andrews, said his mother and stepfather tried skydiving after watching him jump.

Most of the divers at Westex say the public has a distorted perception of the skydiver as a hell-bent, careless thrill seeker who takes unnecessary risks. "People think we jump out of an airplane with a piece of equipment that may or may not work," Wallender said. "It's so refined now. It's more skill and finesse now."

DEATHS

Sam Logan

Funeral services for Sam Logan are set for 11 a.m. Tuesday at the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with Colquitt Nash of the North A & Tennessee Church of Christ officiating. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

He died Satuday at a local hospital.

Logan was born Dec. 15, 1906, in Lynchburg, Tenn., where he grew up and graduated from Moore County High School. He attended the University of Tennessee.

He married Margaret Morehead in Lynchburg on Dec. 18, 1930. The couple moved to Midland in 1943. He worked for Richard Hinkle delivering gas until 1947 when he began operating his own service station. He retired in 1973.

He married Bessie Mosley in 1962 in Midland. She died in 1987.

A member of the North A & Tennessee Church of Christ, he had been in failing health since a stroke in 1981.

Survivors include: one son, Harold L. Logan of Midland; one daughter, Bobbye Logan Trent of Redondo Beach, Calif.; six brothers, James Logan, Frank Logan, Robert Logan, Max Logan, Dale Logan and Reagor Logan, all of Lynchburg; one sister, Mrs. Dottie Ashby of Lynchburg; six grandchildren, two great-grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

Memorials should be directed to the Midland Heart Association, 3525 Andrews Highway, Midland.

Esther Lindsey

BROWNWOOD — Esther Lindsey, 91, mother of Midlander Bud Lindsey, died Friday at a local nursing home.

Funeral services are set for 10 a.m. today at Davis-Morris Funeral Home in Brownwood. Burial will follow in the China Creek Cemetery in San Saba County.

Mrs. Lindsey was born Sept. 17, 1898, in Emlenton, Pa. She was a homemaker and Methodist. She lived 44 years in Brownwood and married Adam Lynn Lindsey, who preceded her in death.

Survivors include: one son, Al "Bud" Lindsey of Midland; three daughters, Jean Sparks of Brownwood, Betty Gilmore of Fort Worth, and Ellen Fullen of Lompoc, Calif.; 11 grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Hughie Joe Farley

Funeral services for Hughie Joe Farley, 18, of Midland are scheduled for 4 p.m. today at the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with Jerry E. Parks officiating. He will be assisted by Bobby Dunn, assistant principal at Lee High School.

He died Friday.

Pallbearers will be Robert Gonzales, Chris Jones, Daniel Baugh III, Ramon Layba, Scott Todd, Billy Baker, Shane Baker and Tracy Williams.

Kenneth W. Lunsford

A memorial service for Kenneth Wade Lunsford, 47, is set for Wednesday at the Thomas Funeral Home Chapel.

He died Saturday as a result of injuries sustained in an accident.

Ben Smith

He died Sunday at a local nursing home. Local arrangements are by Ellis Funeral Home.

Pamela Hadsall

Services are pending with Thomas Funeral Home.

JUMP: Risks have been reduced

(From 1B)

According to Wallender, advances in design and manufacture of parachutes over the years have made the sport safer and have helped reduce the risks inherent in the sport.

In addition, FAA rules dictate that each skydiver be equipped with a secondary chute that can be deployed if the first chute fails.

Still, despite the risks, the divers at Westex look upon the weekend jumps as a quick thrill that constantly renews itself. "The exhilaration of it all just kept me coming back," Gray says.

Indeed, for Wallender, a jump can be almost a transcendental experience. "I know there was nothing more beautiful and free in my life," he said.

One dead in motorcycle crash

Staff Report

Kenneth Wade Lunsford, 47, of Midland died following a motorcycle accident Saturday night.

Lunsford was traveling east on Interstate 20 a little more than a mile west of Midland about 11:45 p.m. when the Harley-Davidson motorcycle he was driving went off the road striking a mile marker post. Lunsford was thrown from the motorcycle.

Lunsford was wearing a helmet.

Odessa man dies in accident

Staff Report

ODESSA — An 88-year-old man who died in a two-car accident Saturday has been identified as Ted Darrow following notification of relatives, a Department of Public Safety spokesperson said.

Darrow was involved in an accident at Moss Road and 16th Street.

Two victims of a separate Saturday accident remained hospitalized late Sunday.

Judy Keel Mosley, 42, was listed in stable condition at Odessa Medical Center Hospital.

Dale Thomson, 29, was transferred to University Medical Center in Lubbock from Odessa Medical Center Hospital Sunday morning, and was listed in serious condition.

A third accident victim, Monte Lee Boultinghouse, 27, was treated and released from Odessa Medical Center Hospital.

The three were involved in a two-car accident at 61st Street and Highway 385.

Two hospitalized after wreck

Staff Report

Two people remained in Midland Memorial Hospital in serious condition Sunday night following an early morning accident, according to hospital and police officials.

George Garcia Jr., 29, and Salvador Castillo, 21, were transported to the hospital after a two-car accident in the 2300 block of North Loop 250 that occurred shortly after midnight, fire and police officials said.

Also brought to the hospital was Lupe Villafranco, who was treated and released, officials said.

Details of accident were not available Sunday night.

Attempted murder charged

Staff Report

ODESSA — An Odessa man has been charged with attempted murder in a Sunday morning stabbing, a police spokesman said.

Gayneal Ray Baker, 30, is expected to be arraigned on the charges today, jail officials said.

Police were notified by Odessa Medical Center about 4 a.m. concerning Keith Allison Joiner, 23, who suffered multiple stab wounds, police said. Joiner remained in the hospital Sunday night in critical condition following surgery, officials said.

Detectives are investigating the incident and have recovered a knife believed to have been used in the stabbing. Location and details of the incident had not been revealed Sunday.

Pipeline blows out near Pampa

PAMPA, Texas (AP) — About half a dozen people were evacuated from their homes Saturday night as a natural gas pipeline blew out, authorities said.

"We just evacuated everyone about a mile from it," said Gray County Sheriff Jim Free.

The blast took place about 10 miles east of here, Free said.

Free said the pipeline company had shut off the valve and the families were expected to return home after the pressure dropped.

Recycle to give throwaways a new life

By LYN MILLER

Recycling — a word that no longer means something to be done in the future. The time for recycling and attention to the environment is now.

Did you know?

■ That each U.S. citizen produces 4 to 6 pounds of solid waste per day, with 80 percent going to landfills, 10 percent being incinerated and 10 percent being recycled?

■ That enough glass bottles and jars are discarded to fill the 1,350 foot twin towers of New York's World Trade Center every two weeks?

■ That American consumers and industry throw away enough aluminum to rebuild our entire commercial air fleet every three months?

At present, solid waste in our nation is estimated to be comprise: 30 percent paper and paperboard; 18 percent yard waste; 10 percent metal; 10 percent glass; 8 percent food wastes; 7 percent plastics; 5 percent rubber, leather and textiles; and 5 percent wood and other types of solid waste.

In 1988, the southern states generated an estimated 40 million tons of municipal solid waste. If this was spread evenly over every lane of interstate highway in the south, just one year's waste would rise to a height of five feet.

The city of Midland, being keenly aware of the problem rapidly arising regarding the use of the environment, has initiated steps to assist in its conservation.

Some time ago, energy saving light bulbs were installed in city offices and the use of the mercury in street lights was abandoned for high pressure sodium, resulting in a substantial reduction in electrical demand. The city sells its scrap metal for recycling, auctions off abandoned vehicles and holds an annual auction of road equipment, vehicles and office equipment no longer in use by the city.

The Traffic Division has initiated the use of traffic paint from drums containing a plastic liner — no residue is left in the drum, and the plastic liner disintegrates when the drum is empty.

Additional ways that city employees are becoming more environmentally conscious are by carpooling, which helps to reduce exhaust fumes released in the atmosphere; corresponding by telephone to reduce paper use; monitoring the city's water system; placing plants in offices to detoxify the air (15 to 20 houseplants per 1,800 square feet will rid the air of carbon monoxide, benzene, formaldehyde and other toxic chemicals found in walls, cigarette smoke and cleaning fluids); trimming trees in the parks, inspecting the toxic chemicals in the air, turning off the light switch when leaving the office for more than a short time, and becoming more knowledgeable of what each person can do to conserve the environment.

As stated in the "Garbage Gossip" newsletter, it takes one week to six months for a banana peel to be recycled by nature, 10-20 years for a foam cup, 50-80 years for a plastic bottle, 100 years for a tin can, 500 years for an aluminum can and one million years for a glass bottle.

Garbage can be reduced in many ways. At the office, scrap paper may become scratch pads, toxic cleaning fluids may be replaced with non-toxic substitutes, recyclable packaging may be purchased and incentive programs may be initiated for carpooling, walking or biking to work.

At the present, more than 80 percent of all consumer solid waste is disposed of in landfills. The number of landfills is decreasing due to the availability of land, so alternatives, as recycling, are being encouraged. Old landfills are being recycled as parks, athletic fields and golf courses.

Becoming environmentally conscious takes some effort, but will yield benefits by providing cleaner air and surroundings, as well as giving throwaways a new life.

AP Laserphoto

Texas Tech University supporter Ralph Blodgett has taken a dislike to a statue to be placed in the lobby of Jones Stadium. Blodgett has returned his replica, like the one shown, and received a $3,000 refund.

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Ralph Blodgett refuses to look this gift horse in the mouth ... or anywhere else for that matter.

The 1941 graduate of Texas Tech and one of the university's most generous and consistent contributors is kicking hard against plans the Red Raider athletic department has for placing a 10½-foot-high bronze statue of the original Masked Rider aboard a rearing quarter horse — Tech's nationally known mascot — in the lobby of the remodeled south wing of Jones Stadium.

However, Blodgett is currently the lone voice of dissent among the handful of persons who have seen recent replicas of the statue.

Blodgett has no problem whatsoever with the idea of immortalizing in bronze one of Tech's best-known traditions, and he finds the craftsmanship of renowned western sculptor Grant Speed superb down to the finest detail.

His major complaint — one that he has aired loud and clear to university president Dr. Robert Lawless, as many of the board of regents members as he's been able to contact and Red Raider athletic director T. Jones — is that the statue depicts the Masked Rider as he first appeared in 1954 — as a masked cowboy on a rogue horse — not as the Zorro-type character he is today.

'We're not cowboys," said Blodgett, a Spearman businessman. "I've looked at pictures of Masked Riders through the years, and none of them looks like that. I think the work is fine; the workmanship is wonderful. My main objection is it doesn't depict the Masked Rider as he is today. That's why I'm so upset.

"There's no use having one bigger than Dallas if it's not going to depict the Masked Rider most people know. You'd have to be 70 years old to recognize that one. I'm going to do everything I can do to stop it."

Blodgett, who estimates he has contributed "$300,000, maybe more," to Tech (athletic department, band and business school) during the last 30 years, is more than slightly perturbed about the statue. He said he will go as far as to transfer funds from his endowed athletic scholarship to other areas of the university if Jones proceeds with plans to place the statue as it appears now inside the Jones Stadium lobby.

"That's not intended as a threat," Blodgett said. "That will be an after effect if they go through with it. I will withdraw my membership with the Red Raider Club, never attend another Tech football game and make every attempt to get the lump sum money back from them (athletic department) and give it some other school."

Associated Press

Black leaders cheered the recent convictions and prison sentences assessed law enforcement officers in the deaths of blacks, but colleagues of the convicted men disagreed with the verdicts.

The conviction and 7-year prison sentence that former Houston policeman Alex Gonzales received in connection with last year's fatal shooting of a black woman will make police officers hesitant to answer emergency calls, the president of the Houston Police Patrolman's Union says.

The union's attorneys have advised off-duty officers not to get involved in emergencies, union president Mike Howard said.

Gonzales was convicted April 27 on charges of voluntary manslaughter, and the jury decided three days later on the prison sentence. Gonzales shot Ida Lee Delaney eight times Oct. 31 after a freeway chase while he was off duty and intoxicated.

Howard said that because of the Gonzales conviction, there's a danger that officers would choose not to get immediately involved while off-duty rather than stop the commission of a crime.

The Houston Police Patrolman's Union, the Houston Police Officers Association and the Organization of Spanish Speaking Officers have criticized the Gonzales' conviction.

But black leaders cheered the verdict.

May Walker, president of the 370-member Afro-American Police Officers League, said Gonzales' case went through the proper judicial channels and criticized Howard for his comments.

Flanked by representatives of other black organizations, Ms. Walker said Friday the members of her organization would continue to serve the city while putting the controversy over Gonzales' conviction behind them.

"We want to move on and leave this Gonzales thing alone," she said.

Black activist Ada Edwards said Howard's comments were "irresponsible" and "inflammatory."

In another case, a former Hemphill, Texas, police chief and two former Sabine County sheriff's deputies were convicted in Tyler on charges of murder and given prison terms ranging from 10 to 28 years in the December 1987 death of a black inmate who died from wounds that were inflicted in the Sabine County jail.

The officers insisted they didn't use excessive force, and Hemphill's mayor and the Sabine County sheriff testified as character witnesses for the three officers during the punishment stage.

Black leaders said they were surprised but pleased with the convictions of the former officers in the jail beating case.

Drug testing, casinos gain voter approval

Associated Press

As a result of weekend municipal elections, Denton has a million dollar mayor, public officials in Live Oak must submit to drug testing, and the residents of Port Arthur could have legalized gambling.

The new mayor of Denton is Bob Castleberry, 60, who said he had eyed the mayor's race for several years, but couldn't afford to run for the non-paying job until last year.

But in March of last year, Castleberry won $10 million in the Publishers Clearing House Sweepstakes. He retired in January from his sales job at a business form company in Denton after announcing his candidacy for mayor.

Castleberry's father served on the Denton City Council from 1929-30 and again in the early 1950s.

"I grew up watching my father giving everything to the community," Castleberry said. "Now I just want to do what I can."

Castleberry beat two-term incumbent Ray Stephens, winning 50 percent of the vote to Stephens' 45 percent.

Appearing in advertisements about the sweepstakes helped in the campaign by boosting his visibility in the community 35 miles northwest of Dallas, the new mayor said.

Castleberry gets his $10 million in annual installments: He got $500,000 last year and gets $250,000 a year for the next 27 years, when a lump sum of $2 million is due.

Voters in the San Antonio suburb of Live Oak approved by a 6-to-1 margin a revision of the city charter that will result in automatic forfeiture of office for any member of the city council who tests positive for illegal substances.

Mayor Norm Tremblay, who won re-election on Saturday to a third term, said council members and other city employees are already required to submit to random drug testing, but until the charter revision was passed Saturday no action could be taken against a council member who tested positive.

Tremblay, whose town has a population of about 10,000, says he believes efforts to battle drug use start at the top and that elected officials should be subject to testing just like other public employees.

"I hope it sets an example for larger cities that the little folks at the grassroots level are willing to take a major step to curb the abuse of drugs across the country," Tremblay said.

A non-binding referendum on creation of Texas' first legal gambling casino drew the support of 56 percent of voters in Port Arthur.

With the favorable vote, the Texas Legislature now will be asked to ratify a 400-acre gambling district on Pleasure Island, a spoils island belonging to the petrochemical city.

Pleasure Island, which is 21 miles long and encompasses 16,000 acres, was created in 1898 when a channel was dug connecting Port Arthur to Sabine Pass. The proposal would allow lease of the land to casinos.

The proposal included an 8 percent casino tax that backers said would provide $16 million per casino every year. Port Arthur's proposal was similar to one rejected three times by voters in Galveston.

Church leaders opposed the casino question. The Rev. Rick Erwin, pastor of the Procter Baptist Church and head of an anti-gambling group, said the gambling district would be wrong economically, socially and morally.

In other elections:

— the city of Plainview had one of its largest vote turnouts ever and approved civil service by a 58-vote margin out of 1,546 votes cast. City officials and firefighters will now turn their attention toward implementing the system. The city has 60 days to appoint a civil service commission, with actual implementation of the system to begin Nov. 1.

— voters in Seymour gave lopsided approval Saturday to a 1-cent increase in the city sales tax to help finance a hospital district that was created last fall. The vote to boost the sales tax to 8 cents, with 1 cent going to the hospital district, was 461 for, 98 against. A portion of residents' property taxes also will go to the hospital district.

— voters in Tarrant County overwhelmingly rejected a half-cent sales tax to fight crime. The crime district proposal, which would have been the first of its kind in the nation, was approved by only 29 percent of the voters.

The new plan, which consisted of almost 100 suggested programs, would have paid for four new criminal district courts, a state-of-the art computerized fingerprinting system to be shared by all police agencies in the county, a "boot camp" for youthful first-time offenders, and several community jails.

Measles epidemic reveals loopholes

DALLAS (AP) — The measles epidemic which has claimed the lives of five Dallas County residents has forced public health officials to re-examine their immunization programs, a published report said.

Officials say they are seeking ways to vaccinate more children. But first, they say they must understand why so many kids failed to get immunized before the outbreak.

The Dallas Morning News reported Sunday that tens of thousands of preschool children had not received measles shots in recent years, leaving them highly susceptible to the contagious disease.

"Anytime you've got that many children not vaccinated, the situation is right for measles, and the fuel is there to start a rather substantial outbreak," said Dr. William Atkinson, a medical epidemiologist with the federal Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

Dallas has reported more cases of measles than any other place in the country, Dr. Atkinson said.

More than 2,040 cases have been reported in Dallas since the local outbreak began in December. Five Dallas County residents, including four children, have died of measles. Two out-of-county residents also have died of measles in Dallas hospitals.

Los Angeles has reported 3,000 cases and 25 deaths since 1987, but Dallas has a higher per capita rate, Dr. Atkinson said.

Dallas' measles cases, like those nationwide, have been concentrated among preschool children who live in poverty, said Dr. Charles Haley, chief epidemiologist for Dallas County.

In Dallas last year, the city and county health departments vaccinated 23,188 people for measles, according to the departments' figures. But in the first three months of this year, more than 50,000 people were immunized.

Health experts say public apathy has contributed to the low vaccination levels. Parents have failed to get shots for their children for a variety of reasons including poor education and lack of resources, officials say.

Poorly organized immunization programs and fragmented health departments in the city of Dallas, Dallas County and suburbs have confused people about where and when to get vaccinations, experts say.

"What all these measles epidemics represent to me is the failure of public health, the failure of vaccination programs to get at everybody," said Dr. Jeffrey Starke, a specialist in pediatric infectious diseases at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston.

Before the outbreak, the county's staff of 12 nurses operated 11 clinics in Dallas County, outside the city limits. The city operated five clinics.

Man charged with murder in wife's fall

Gilbert Barrantos was charged Sunday in the death of his wife, Sherri Barrantos, 25, who died early Saturday of multiple injuries to the side of her head after she landed on a concrete parking lot.

Police say the couple's daughter said her parents had been arguing and her father had been pushing her mother around when the fall occurred about 10:30 p.m. Friday.

She also told police: "My daddy pushed my mama out the window."

STATE IN BRIEF

AIDS spreading in rural areas

DALLAS (AP) — AIDS is spreading in rural Texas communities and health officials say residents need to acquaint themselves with the facts about the deadly disease.

The Texas Department of Health has recorded cases of acquired immune deficiency syndrome in more than 150 of the state's 254 counties. Nationwide last year, AIDS cases in rural areas increased 37 percent, compared with a 5 percent rise in cities.

AIDS is an affliction in which a virus attacks the body's immune system, leaving victims susceptible to disease. The virus is most often transmitted through sexual contact, mostly between homosexual males, and through the sharing of contaminated hypodermic needles or blood products.

Experts say the "ruralization" of AIDS in Texas has given new life to the misconceptions, fear and discrimination associated with the disease.

And the need for medical care for rural AIDS patients has revealed what some call serious problems in the health care system.

Officers die in wreck

DALLAS (AP) — Two Dallas police officers were killed before dawn Sunday when a pickup truck going the wrong way down the freeway collided with their squad car. The truck driver also was killed.

Police said a prisoner in the squad car was critically injured, as was a passenger in the pickup truck. Both were taken to Parkland Memorial Hospital.

Detective Joe Henderson said one officer was identified as Michael R. Okelberry, 28. The identity of the other officer was being withheld until his family could be notified.

Henderson said the truck driver was identified as Damaso Ruiz and the passenger as Juan Diaz, both Dallas residents. He said no other information was immediately available.

Detectives questioned Diaz after the accident Sunday, Henderson said, and intended to talk to him again on Sunday. Diaz was in serious condition at Parkland Sunday with multiple head injuries.

Henderson said it was not known if Ruiz had been drinking before the collision. Toxicology tests on Ruiz' body might not show results for several days.

The passenger in the police squad car, Mack Eldridge, was in fair condition Sunday at Baylor Medical Center with head and internal injuries, Henderson said. The officers were taking Eldridge to Lew Sterrett Justice Center on a family violence complaint, Henderson said.

Teens in custody

HOUSTON (AP) — Two teenagers have been arrested in connection with the bombings of mailboxes in four northwest Harris County subdivisions.

William Byran Phillips, 17, and Donald James Zack, 18, were charged with possession of prohibited explosive weapons following their arrest early Saturday. They were jailed in lieu of $10,000 bond each.

The charge is a second-degree felony which carries up to 20 years in prison and a fine up to $10,000.

The teens are suspected of bombing mailboxes in four Houston-area subdivisions, said Lt. John McClure of Constable Precinct No.4. One mailbox in Charterwood was bombed four times, he said.

The two were seen near a mailbox that exploded at a house used as a substation by area constables, McClure said.

Rain-swollen Trinity floods rural areas

DALLAS (AP) — With parts of flood-ravaged North Texas still under water, the swollen Trinity River surged southward Sunday toward the Gulf of Mexico, threatening to swamp rural areas along the way.

And water still stood several feet deep on Sunday in the Rochester Park area southeast of downtown Dallas, as residents spent a fourth day waiting for floodwaters to recede.

"The latest stage was 43.8 feet, and the river is expected to fall slowly, but it's going to remain above 39 feet through at least midweek," Don Sullivan, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service in Fort Worth, said Sunday.

Flood stage on the Trinity in Dallas is 30 feet.

Releases from Lewisville and Grapevine lakes into the Elm Fork of the Trinity River contributed to flooding in Carrollton, a northwest Dallas suburb, where the river was seven feet over flood stage on Sunday, with little change expected through Monday.

WAKE UP, MIDLAND

It's time we got serious about fighting DRUGS!

We all want the young people of Midland to grow up to be productive and independent citizens. Yet they continue to be handicapped by the pervasive influence of illegal drugs and alcohol which is spoiling countless young lives. It is a problem that is not going to go away without the full support of every responsible citizen.

N.A.B.'D. is an organization of citizens and parents who want to help our schools combat drugs and alcohol. We have set some goals we'd like you to support;

1. A comprehensive drug policy
2. Closed high school campuses
3. Subscribe to President Bush's Drug Free Model School Program

Let your school board member know that you support these important goals.

Scuba, sky divers combine work, play at benefit

By Linda Anderson
Staff Writer

Scuba divers and sky divers have a lot in common. Both have a spirit of adventure. Both spend a lot of time with their feet off the ground — scuba divers like to strap on air tanks and other equipment, jump out of boats and remain underwater for hours; sky divers like to strap on parachutes and other equipment, jump out of airplanes and drift through the air. Both have to master skills and equipment in order to safely pursue their respective sports. Both say their sports are "like flying."

This weekend, participants in both sports, and their families, came together at Balmorhea State Recreation Area for the first Jump and Dunk Extravaganza, a fun, family-type weekend that was also a fund-raiser for a worthy cause.

About 300 jumpers, dunkers and their families and friends, participated in the weekend, which was sponsored by Scuba Shack and Westex Skysports — and no, divers did not parachute out of the airplanes and into the water. Activities included sky diving, scuba diving, swimming in the recreation area's pool, children's activities, sky diving and scuba diving competitions, fish fry on Friday night, barbecue and street dance on Saturday night, video presentations, music and other entertainment.

Proceeds, including funds from scuba equipment rentals, tandem skydiving, barbecue and street dance, will benefit Balmorhea's emergency medical technician program and ambulance fund, and help pay for a new sprinkler system for the recreation area.

BECAUSE BALMORHEA State Recreation Area has some of the clearest — and closest — water in West Texas, most scuba divers in the area have spent some time diving there. Many have "adopted" the park as their home-away-from-home and feel some responsibility for helping maintain the park, according to Jerri Steddum, who with her husband, Tom, are owners of Scuba Shacks in Midland and Odessa.

Sky divers "want to go someplace where the whole family can have fun," said Mary Berry of Westex Skysports, and Balmorhea park is just such an area.

"We got together with Scuba Shack" and decided to combine a weekend of both sports and at the same time "try to raise money for the EMT (program), and they need a new ambulance. And the park is trying to put in a new sprinkler system," Ms. Berry said.

The divers — both scuba and sky — wanted to help raise money for these programs because the volunteer ambulance service that provides emergency medical care for the small communities in and around Balmorhea is in need of a new ambulance, and the memory of the tornado that devastated the nearby community of Saragosa in 1987 is still fresh, they said.

According to Sharon Lippe, mayor and volunteer ambulance attendant for the city of Balmorhea, the weekend event helped raise about $1,300 for the new ambulance. "This is our first fund-raiser," she said. "And we still got a long way to go. An ambulance costs a lot of money. These people have been so wonderful — the scuba divers and sky divers."

AS FAR as the community was concerned, the weekend was a big success, Ms. Lippe said. "We hope the scuba divers and sky divers will come back real soon. They are nice, friendly and cooperative, and talked to all the kids — especially the skydivers. We're country folks and haven't been around skydivers before," she laughed.

Because scuba divers frequently dive at Balmorhea, the people who live there are more familiar with them, Ms. Lippe added. "We're used to the scuba divers, but (now) we hope to get (scuba) class started here for the local people."

But even though the causes benefiting from the weekend were serious, the event itself was not. Skydivers in their colorful parachutes floated down through a blue sky West Texas is famous for, while scuba divers in vividly colored wetsuits and gear explored the equally famous crystal clear spring waters of Balmorhea.

Families took advantage of the picnic tables to enjoy lunch in the early spring weather, and young frisbee-throwers tossed the colored discs back and forth.

Non-scuba divers who were interested in learning about the sport could take introductory dives. Three instructors were on hand to each take down two beginners for 20-minute sessions. "A lot of people are curious about diving," said scuba diver Leslie Cole, who was one of the coordinators of the event. "This is a terrific opportunity to try."

THE SKY divers provided a similar opportunity for non-sky divers who wanted to take the plunge. Tandem jumps — one non-diver and one tandem pilot diver were hooked up to one harness to make a jump together in a "parachute built for two."

"Both jump at the same time," Ms. Cole said. "The canopy (parachute) is 400 square feet. It's a Texas flag. The tandem pilot pilots the two of them on the ride down."

Divers and non-divers of all ages sampled an outdoor barbecue Saturday night, followed by a street dance. Aside from her civic duties for the city of Balmorhea, Ms. Lippe is also a local favorite country singer who provided entertainment for the dance.

The scuba divers and the sky divers hope to make Jump and Dunk an annual event, they said. "It will be a fun thing to do every year, if we can help them raise money for whatever," said Ms. Berry.

Balmorhea is convenient to much of the West Texas area. "It's more centrally located for El Paso people" as well as those from the Midland-Odessa area, said scuba diving instructor David Diffie of Midland.

"It's kind of exciting," he said as he watched some skydivers glide gracefully through the air and land nearby. "Normally, it's just scuba divers" at Balmorhea. "The skydivers look neat."

That's the word from career expert David Bowman, who says you can buck tradition by creating a job based on your skills.

In his new book, he also says that as baby boomers get older, more jobs will be created in the service industry.

He says senior boomers will be needing insurance, travel, health care and convenience foods, and that the housing industry will change for boomers who will want custom houses for their golden years.

Other ripe areas include jobs in ocean and space exploration, and radio and television. Bowman says there will be an increase in what he calls narrowcasting — programs like the all-fashion network.

DEAR ABBY

Costume causes trouble in paradise

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband, "Bert," and I are both "thirtysomething," and for the first time in our six-year marriage we are quarreling. Please settle it if you can.

Van Buren

Last Halloween our country club had a costume party and all the members were asked to come in costume. Bert and I went to a costume rental place, and after trying on several costumes, we decided to go as Adam and Eve. Our costumes were almost identical — flesh-colored elasticized tights decorated with some strategically placed leaves and vines. (I carried a snake and an apple.)

At first I was very hesitant about my costume because I usually dress very modestly, and this costume made me look naked. Bert kept telling me he thought I looked great, so even though I was a little self-conscious, I wore it.

Well, I attracted a lot of attention from the men — and some unfriendly stares from their wives. I was the belle of the ball — dancing every dance and loving it. Bert was furious.

Abby, that was seven months ago, and he still brings it up, telling me I flirted with all the men at the club and made a poor choice of costumes, etc. Abby, I chose that costume only to please him. Now he won't let me forget it. Whose fault was it? — "EVE"

DEAR "EVE": It was your husband's fault, that's whose! He may not admit it — even to himself. He wanted to show you off, but he got more than he bargained for. It takes two to make a quarrel, so if Bert brings it up again, let him talk to himself.

DEAR ABBY: Benjamin Franklin wrote in Poor Richard's Almanac: "A learned blockhead is a greater blockhead than an ignorant one." What is your interpretation of that assessment? — CURIOUS

DEAR CURIOUS: An educated fool is a greater fool than the fool who has no education, because an uneducated (ignorant) person cannot be blamed for being foolish, but an educated person should know better.

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago, you advised "Kid Sister" to contact her Department of Motor Vehicles and suggest that her older sister be retested because age-related changes made her driving hazardous to herself and others.

Please tell "Kid Sister" and all others with a similar problem to take big sister by the hand and run, do not walk, to the American Association of Retired Persons (AARP) and sign up both of them in a "55-Alive Mature Driving Course."

This classroom-refresher course was designed specifically for those 55 and older. It makes those who participate aware of age-related changes (hearing and vision) that affect our driving, teaches us methods to compensate for these changes, and also to recognize that eventually we must give up driving in some situations, or altogether.

A large-scale study in California showed that those who have completed the course are approximately 16 percent less likely to be in an accident involving injury or death. It is well worth the $7 fee.

An added incentive: Many insurance companies give a reduction in automobile insurance premiums to those who have taken the "55-Alive" course. If you cannot find such a course listed with local information, write to: 55-Alive, American Association of Retired Persons, 1909 K Street N.W., Washington, D.C. 20049. — DOROTHY W. GUEST, CHARLESTON, W.VA.

Everything you'll need to know about planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Vitamin B useful in metabolic defect

DALLAS (AP) — Vitamin B may be used to treat a metabolic defect that can lead to blood vessel disease and increase the risk of a stroke, Oregon researchers say.

The defect increases homocysteine, an amino acid circulating in the blood. At normal levels the amino acid is harmless. But scientists say new evidence suggests that mildly increased levels can damage blood vessels and increase the risk of suffering a stroke.

Bruce Coull, associate neurology professor at the Oregon Health Sciences University in Portland, coauthored the study published in the April issue of "Stroke," an American Heart Association journal based in Dallas.

He said 99 of the 130 people examined for the study either had acute stroke, temporary interruption of blood flow to the brain, or had high blood pressure or diabetes.

A third of the subjects from each group had raised levels of the amino acid, Coull said. The levels were about 1⅛ times higher than those of a control group of 31 healthy volunteers who had no history of cardiovascular disease or stroke.

Coull's research suggests that the chain of events that lead to stroke may be broken with supplements of various B vitamins (biotin, B6, B12) or folic acid, which acts like Vitamin B.

Preliminary results indicate that folic acid therapy does reduce the homocysteine in some patients, Coull said.

Many self-help books make undeliverable claims

By Judith A. Russo

SEATTLE (AP) — Enter any bookstore and you'll find walls of self-help manuals. They'll save your marriage, cure your phobia, release the "inner you," or enable you to stick to the only diet you'll ever need.

Many of them make claims on the covers or jackets that the contents don't deliver, and some use theories that have not been proved, said psychologist Gerald Rosen, who wants his fellow professionals to do something about that.

He suggests a kind of Good Housekeeping Seal of Approval from the American Psychological Association. Books would be required to state how methods had been tested, on whom, and how effective they were. And now the market includes cassette tapes, too.

"We have to have these products marketed with accurate claims and not take advantage of the public," said Rosen, who is in private practice in Seattle and has written a self-help book of his own, about phobias.

Rosen had hoped to present a "Golden Fleece Award" for self-help psychotherapies at the APA's convention last August in New Orleans to embarrass therapists who made exaggerated claims about untested programs. He had planned to pass out noisemakers, and make awards based on the level of honks and boos each book received.

But the APA nixed the idea.

"Very bad taste," said Charles Spielberger, APA president. "It's not scientific evaluation, people booing."

If an APA member writes a book that violates the organization's ethical principles and if someone files a claim, the APA would investigate, said Spielberger, a psychology professor at the University of South Florida, Tampa.

"We don't shrink for a minute from expelling or censuring a member who doesn't follow APA code," said Raymond Fowler, a psychologist and APA chief executive officer, but "you can't just let one member speak for the association and say, 'Here's a bad guy doing a bad job.' "

But APA may consider regulating member authors.

"We will start a serious consideration of APA's role in looking at self-help books and ... (whether) we need to develop a task force to draw up guidelines or inform our members of general standards," Fowler said recently.

"The truth is, I wouldn't want to underestimate some of these books. They are very sound and very sensitively thought out," said Fowler, "and for some individuals it may be the only psychological help they'll obtain."

And evaluating every self-help book would be an enormous undertaking.

Rosen's book, "Don't Be Afraid," had its share of exaggerated claims, he said, and the experience taught him it would be possible for the APA to set up a standard contract for psychologists to negotiate control of book promotion.

One way to deal with book jacket hyperbole, Rosen said, is for authors to take a tough stand with publishers. But Herbert Holtje, a literary agent, said it is nearly impossible for writers to maintain that kind of control.

It is unrealistic that self-help books "should be marketed without consideration of the competitive climate created by publishers," Holtje wrote in the journal American Psychologist.

Albert Ellis, president of the Institute for Rational-Emotive Therapy and a psychologist in New York City, has written more than 50 self-help books.

"I'm critical of some self-help books but definitely in favor of others," said Ellis.

"I must say there's something frustrating about the hard work of research day in and day out just to get a little way and someone reels out a pot-boiler and makes thousands," said Patricia Keith-Spiegel, a professor of psychology at California State University at Northridge who teaches a course in ethics.

Chi Chi steady

Rodriguez

Rodriguez, who lost to Coody in a playoff at the Senior Classic last year, strung together three rounds in the 60s to finish 12-under and win his first tournament of the year on the Senior PGA Tour.

"This is the first time a 12 beats an 11 in Las Vegas," said Rodriguez. "I'm real excited. It's been a long time."

Okamoto wins

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Ayako Okamoto overtook Pat Bradley and Dawn Coe on Sunday with a final-round, 4-under-par 68 for a one-stroke victory in the $425,000 Sara Lee Classic.

The LPGA tournament came down to a showdown between Bradley, who entered the final round as the leader with a 6-under 138 total; Coe, who was one shot behind; and Okamoto, who began the day four shots off the lead.

The victory was the 16th in nine years on tour for Okamoto and brought the native of Japan a first-place check of $63,750.

Four bogeys on the back nine doomed Bradley, while Coe went to the tournament's final hole with an opportunity to force a playoff.

But she took a bogey-5 after hitting her second shot into the deep fringe and then missing an 18-foot par putt for a tie.

Okamoto had taken the lead with a birdie-2 on the 13th hole, but gave both Bradley and Coe an opportunity to tie when she 3-putted from 30 feet on the par-3 17th.

Bradley appeared to take control of the tournament after posting a 3-under 33 on the front nine for a three-shot lead over both Coe and Okamoto. But she saw her game fall apart on the back nine.

Mims benefit showcases 'Dogs

■ The Midland High football team concludes spring practice with the annual Bill Mims scrimmage, named in honor of a former MHS gridder.

By Joe Wyatt
Staff Writer

Midland High's spring training culminates tonight in the annual Bill Mims Scrimmage with the kickoff, or lack thereof, slated for 7 p.m. at Memorial Stadium.

"We won't be using the kicking game," said Midland High head football coach Davis Corley, who has had three weeks to observe his 1990 squad in pre-game action. "We'll start the ball at the 35-yard line. We'll have punts, but no punt returns. Other than that, it will have the look of a regular football game."

Well, there will be one more bit of irregularity in the game which raises medical donations for former Midland High gridder Bill Mims, who was paralyzed during his stint with the Bulldogs. The Purple squad will be comprised wholly of upperclassmen and returning starters. The White team, with a sprinkling of older players to fill out certain positional needs, will be given six points a quarter.

"Twenty-four points may be too many to give them when you look at it," Corley said. "The White team has some good players, and a lot of them are going to be

Prep Football

"This game will give us a chance to look at all the players on film in a game-type situation and see if we've got them in the right positions. We'll play basic defense, and we definitely plan to throw the ball quite a bit," Corley said.

That means Jesse Arenivas, last year's starter on the junior varsity, will get a chance to show MHS fans why he won the No. 1 quarterback slot.

"Jesse had a real good spring. He really came on," said Corley. "He has shown that he can throw the ball real well and run the offense. We've been real pleased with him."

Arenivas will likely be backed up by Joseph Martinez come the regular season, but Martinez will represent the White team tonight. Arenivas, meanwhile, will have Brandon Oden at his disposal, an honorable mention All-District wideout who led the Bulldogs with 26 receptions a year ago. Martinez' main target will be Marcilino Marroqin.

A lack of depth on the offensive line has concerned Corley since the first day of spring training. Protecting the passer and blocking for promising tailback James Lee and fullbacks Brent Noisette and Major Williams — a threesome Corley labels "the strength of the team" — will fall into the hands of a thin but experienced group which includes guards Mark Monroe and Joe Phillips and tackle Mike Farris.

Three centers will compete for the starting job, but Marcus Heredia, who is still nursing a knee injury sustained last year, has experience at the spot. Heredia, along with tailback David Worley (back) will not play in tonight's game. Daniel Taylor will get some snaps for the Purple squad, while Skipper Hollar and Phillip Warlick are listed as the White centers.

The Bulldogs are pretty well set on the defensive front as far as the Purple team is concerned, as ends Matt Wyatt and Mike Morse return as starters. And Morrow should get some time on the defensive line when not in the offensive backfield.

The Purple's linebacking corps will be led by returning starters Larry Tompkins and Leyba. Corley said Israel Fernandez, who will see action for the White team, also had a solid spring.

Defensive backs Oden, Williams, Lee and Noisette all have had playing time for the Bulldog backfield, but Corley will be looking for younger players, perhaps dressed in White, to take some of the pressure off his two-way players.

"I think it will be a real good game," he said. "We've got a lot of young kids to look at, and this gives them a good chance to perform for us.

"We've grouped the seniors and upperclassmen together so that they can establish a good unity between them.

Cox, Waddell pass leaders for MCC title

■ Local golfer Kelly Cox teams with Fort Worth's Allen Waddell to run away with the Midland Country Club Invitational championship.

By Joe Wyatt
Staff Writer

Kelly Cox and Allen Waddell came from well down in the pack, assembled a superlative 64 and won the Midland Country Club Invitational championship with 208 strokes Sunday.

"I figured we'd really need to shoot 10 under to get back in it," said Cox, of MCC, who teamed with Fort Worth native Waddell in turning a five-stroke deficit into a one-stroke victory.

Cox and Waddell stood at 144 in championship flight play after the first two rounds of the tournament. They not only trailed the leaders, they were tied for last in the 10-team flight. But a birdie on No. 2 and an eagle on No. 4 put them on the road to six-under par at the turn.

"We made a lot of putts that kept us in it," said Waddell. "We didn't do anything spectacular, we just played steady."

The winners edged Kelly Sewell and Dennis Sledge, both of MCC, who teamed for a 69 Sunday and a 209 total.

Lubbock's Steve Earsley and Charlie Snuggs, the first-round leaders and co-leaders after Saturday, carded a 73 on the final round and finished at 212. Saturday co-leaders Mickey Jones and Larry Hensley of Odessa ballooned to 74 Sunday and a 213 finish.

Sunday's final round was played under beautiful skies and without any of the West Texas breezes that are famous for disrupting golf games. Yet Cox said that worried him as much as anything going into the round.

"I thought the weather, being as nice as it was, might hurt us," he said. "I thought we'd need bad weather to get back into this thing.

"When we knew it was going to be nice, we just figured we'd better make more birdies, and we did."

■ Hector Galindo's penalty shot with 12 seconds left pulls Team Galindo to a stirring victory.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

Hector Galindo tapped in a 10-foot penalty shot with 12 seconds left in the final chukker, leading Team Galindo to a dramatic 10-9 come-from-behind win over BTA in the second annual Gaspar Galindo Memorial Sunday at the Midland Polo Club.

Galindo's last ditch goal was actually a penalty shot within a penalty shot. The 26-year-old professional first attempted his foul shot from the 60 yard line after BTA had been whistled for crossing. As Galindo attempted a shot from six feet out, BTA was called again for another crossing penalty as the clock wound to 26 seconds.

Galindo, a playing partner of Britain's Prince Charles, missed numerous penalty shots throughout the game, but had made more than enough by the final horn. Galindo scored eight of the 10 Team Galindo points, including four in the sixth and final chukker, and five on penalty shots.

Due to the difference in playing abilities, the BTA team received four handicap points to start the contest. Harley Stimmel and Ryan Reddell led BTA with two goals apiece.

Team Galindo fell behind by a 6-1 score at the end of the first, but continued to thunder its way back until taking its first lead of the game after Galindo's final foul shot.

The Galindos had three-goals in the second chukker and four in the sixth.

"I'm really happy with the way it turned out," said Stimmel, who plays the No. 2 position for BTA. "We entered just to get us some playing time."

Stimmel added that the penalty shots were a crucial factor for both teams, noting that the game "got a little tough. We got caught (crossing) the line a lot."

Crossing is one of the more prevalent penalties in polo. A player is called for the foul after it is determined by one of two mounted officials that a player did not allow a safe enough margin while crossing in front of an oncoming opponent and his or her pony.

The Galindo Memorial is held in honor of Gaspar Galindo, a former prominent Midland polo player and father of the four Galindo players, Hector, Mario, Carlos and Alonzo. The senior Galindo died two years ago.

In last year's inaugural memorial game, Team Galindo, after giving two handicap points to the opposition, lost 11-10 to Evans Ranch.

"If I would've started making (foul shots), we would've been in good shape," Hector Galindo said before finally settling for the one foul shot that

Holzemer, Amaro fight off discomfort

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

For a couple of baseball players who did not exactly feel comfortable Sunday night, Mark Holzemer and Ruben Amaro did a decent job.

Holzemer picked up his first win of the season by striking out seven and not allowing an earned run in five innings, while Amaro went 4-for-4, scored four runs, batted in three and hit a home run as Midland dismantled San Antonio 12-2 in Texas League play at Angels Stadium.

Not bad. Especially considering Holzemer was unable to throw the curveball after the first inning, when he discovered a blister on his throwing hand.

"I was using the changeup and fastball. I wish I could've stayed in there after the fifth, but there wasn't much I could do," the 20-year-old lefthander said.

Amaro was as surprised as anybody about his production Sunday because, as he put it, he "didn't feel that good at the plate" in the Angels' fourth win in a row.

"I've never had a four-hit night when I felt this uncomfortable at the plate, but I got some pitches to hit and got them on the barrel of the bat," Amaro said.

What had Midland manager Eddie Rodriguez grinning was the offensive production of batters besides Steve DeAngelis. DeAngelis, the league batting leader, entered the game with a .394 average but went an almost-human 2-for-6 Sunday.

However, Amaro, Wiley Lee and Mark Howie picked the slack up. Lee, batting as the designated hitter, claimed a towering homer as one of his three hits that netted him two RBI. Howie had his second straight outstanding night at the plate, going 4-for-4 with a sacrifice fly Sunday after getting three hits and three RBI in an 8-1 win Saturday.

Catcher Mike Knapp also produced, getting on base in each of his five at-bats with two hits and three walks. Shortstop Kevin Flora also drew a trio of walks.

"Confidence. It's contagious. DeAngelis didn't do anything spectacular tonight, though he did get a pair of singles. But what we needed was for somebody else to come through and they did," Rodriguez said. "If we have the same guys producing for us every game, the other teams get to where they can concentrate on one or two people.

"What we need is for somebody different to do the job for us every day."

On the mound, Mike Butcher came in for three innings of long relief and allowed one run, while Tim Meeks performed the closer's role with three strikeouts in the ninth.

"I left Holzemer in there too long really. But I wanted him to get the win. But the other guys did a good job too. They threw strikes and that's what it's all about. We're still pitching inside and establishing the inside half of the plate. That's been a big key," Rodriguez said.

The game started with Holzemer striking out two of the first three batters before the blister popped up on his finger. Then he loaded the bases by allowing a single and a walk, but came back and retired the side with a strikeout of centerfielder Braulio Castillo.

The Angels went on top in the bottom of the first when Howie hit his sac fly to drive in Amaro for a 1-0 lead. The Missions tied the score in the second when Steve Finken scored on an errant throw to first by Angel third baseman Jim Aylward. But Midland got a run in the second on Lee's circuit clout to left field, and another in the third on Amaro's homer.

By the time San Antonio scored its second run in the seventh, the Angels had built up five-run bulge with two in the fifth and a pair in the sixth. The Midland

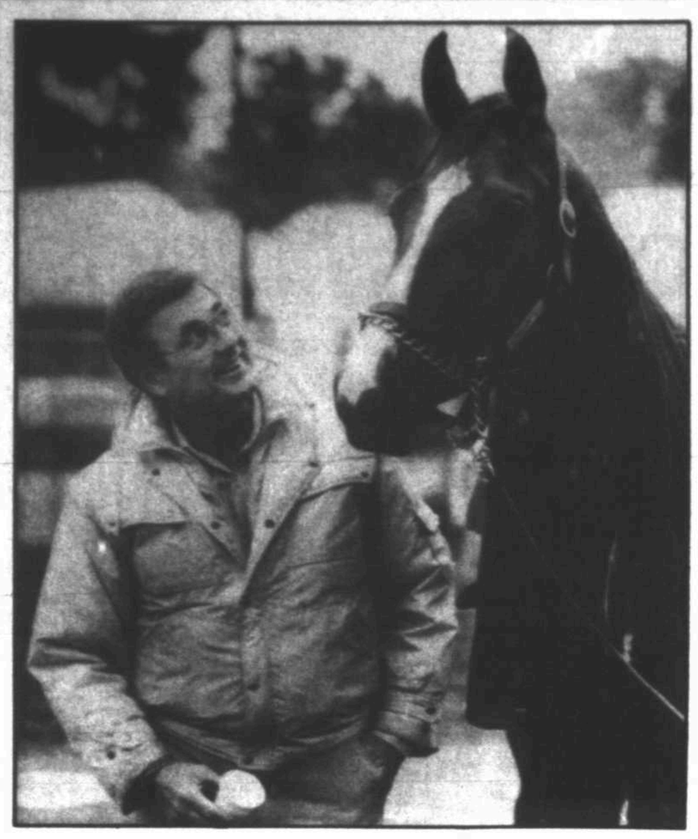
Unbridled eyes Preakness



AP Laserphoto

Trainer Carl Nafzger sneaks a peek at Kentucky Derby champion Unbridled in the stable area of Churchill Downs.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Unbridled was getting a bath when he turned his head and looked at trainer Carl Nafzger.

"He's looking at me and thinking, 'What are they talking to you about, I'm the one that did it,' " Nafzger said Sunday.

What the colt did was win the Kentucky Derby in impressive fashion. Now, he'll try to win the Preakness.

"If the horse is OK, and I think it's OK, we'll go to the Preakness," Nafzger said, after the Derby winner jogged once around the Churchill Downs track.

Summer Squall, who was second, 3½ lengths back in the 1¼-mile Derby Saturday at Churchill Downs, and Mister Frisky, the beaten favorite, who was eighth, also appear headed to Baltimore and the Preakness May 19 at Pimlico.

"We'll give ourselves a day or two to sort things out, but we're leaning in that direction," Cot Campbell, the owner of Dogwood Stable, which races Summer Squall, said of the 1 3-16-mile Preakness.

"He ran well. We're proud of him."

Summer Squall, the second betting choice, had the lead at the quarter pole, then Unbridled blew by him.

"Pat (jockey Pat Day) said at the quarter pole the roar of the crowd startled him a little and he lost his concentration for a couple of seconds," said Neil Howard, trainer of Summer Squall.

Kentucky Derby

"But he wasn't going to beat Unbridled if they went around five more times."

"He ran a bad race yesterday and I don't know why," trainer Laz Barrera said of Mister Frisky's first loss in 17 starts.

"Gary (jockey Gary Stevens) said the horse was running, but he wasn't grabbing the track. When a horse don't like the track, there's nothing you can do about it. I'm not making excuses, but it's the only thing I can think about it."

Trainer Chris Speckert said he would talk to owner Thomas Mellon Evans about sending third-place Pleasant Tap to the Preakness.

Speckert seemed inclined to skip the Preakness and run Pleasant Tap in the 1½-mile Belmont Stakes June 9.

"I think you have to bear in mind the horse only ran 11 days ago (in the Lexington April 24) and had this race," Speckert said.

Video Ranger, who finished fourth, will go to New York and await the Belmont. Thirty Six Red, who was ninth, also is being pointed to the Belmont.

Trainer D. Wayne Lukas said seventh-place Land Rush will run in the Preakness, and Real Cash, who finished 11th, also might go in the Preakness.

Lukas also is considering starting Kentucky Jazz in the Preakness. Kentucky Jazz was an impressive winner of a 1 1-16-mile race on the Derby program.

None of the other starters in the 15-horse Derby is expected to start in the Preakness.

Some 3-year-olds who could make their debuts in Triple Crown competition include Champagneforashley, Housebuster, Music Prospector, Baron de Vaux and Fighting Notion.

Champagneforashley won his first five starts before finishing third in the Wood Memorial, which was won by Thirty Six Red April 21.

Housebuster beat Summer Squall and Thirty Six Red in the seven-furlong Swale March 17, the same day Unbridled won the Florida Derby on the same Gulfstream Park program.

Music Prospector finished sixth in the Santa Anita Derby won by Mister Frisky April 7 and was second in the California Derby April 21.

Knicks beat Celts, Boston Garden jinx

BOSTON (AP) — The New York Knicks rose from the dead in a building where they had been buried so many times.

In Boston Garden, where they hadn't won a game in six years or a playoff game in 16 years, the Knicks capped an amazing revival and moved into the second round of the NBA playoffs with a 121-114 victory over the Boston Celtics Sunday.

"It had to happen some time," New York coach Stu Jackson said. "I'm going to take 24 hours and enjoy this."

"We're in shock," Boston's Larry Bird said. "All I know is, I'll wake up tomorrow morning and still be in shock."

The Knicks were only the third team to win a best-of-5 series after losing the first two games. The other teams were the 1956 Fort Wayne Pistons and the 1987 Golden State Warriors.

Those weren't the only incredible odds the Knicks had to overcome in advancing to the best-of-7 Eastern Conference semifinals against Detroit, starting Tuesday night at Auburn Hills, Mich.

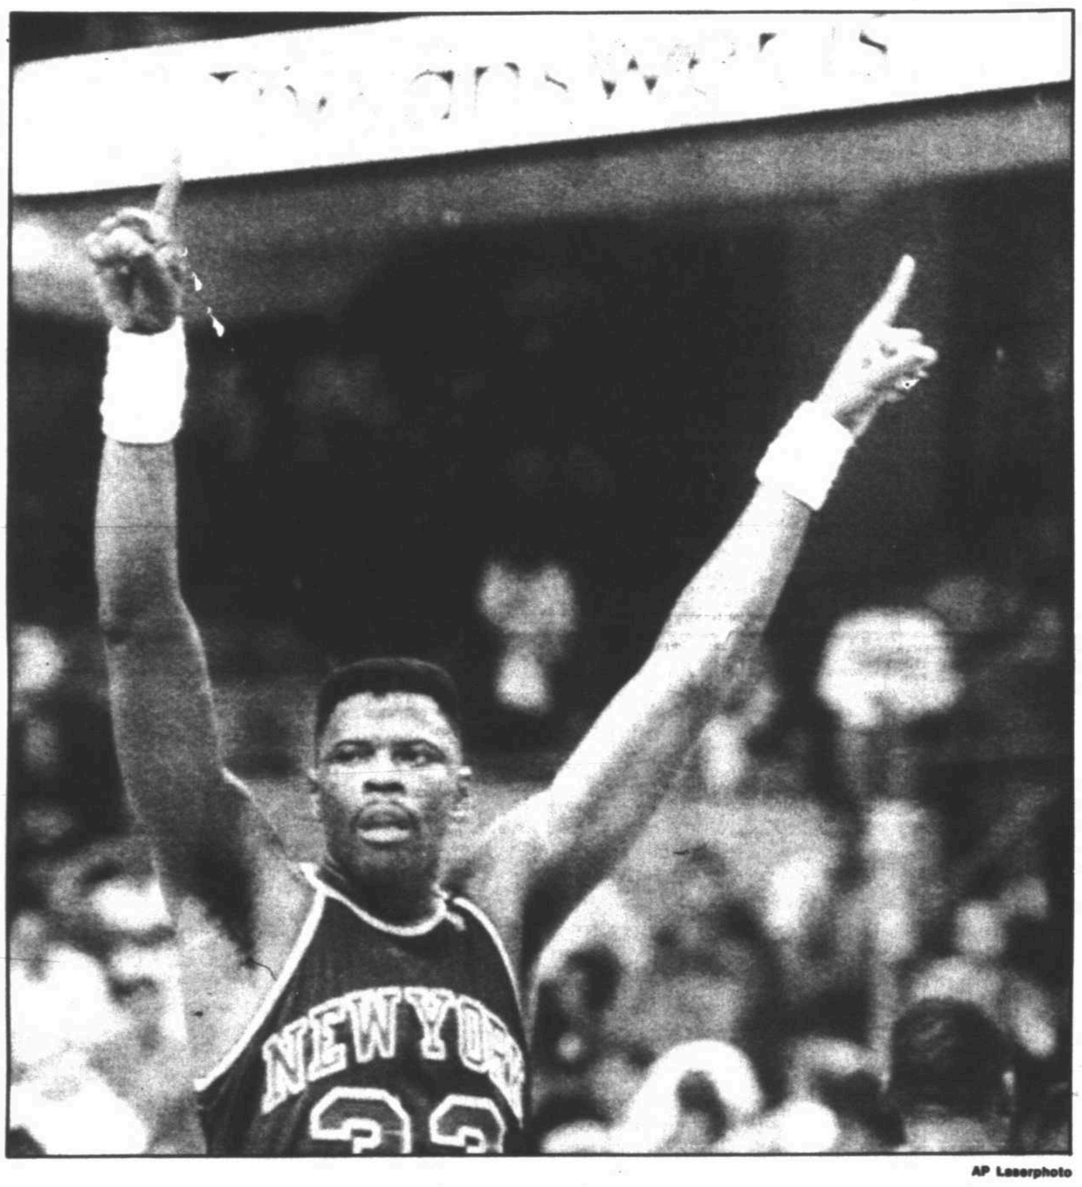
New York had lost 26 straight regular-season and playoff games at Boston Garden since winning Feb. 29, 1984 and nine playoff games since the last victory there April 19, 1974. The Knicks, losers of 10 of their previous 11 road games, ended Boston's 13-game home winning streak.

And they capped an improbable climb from a 157-128 loss eight days earlier when Boston set NBA single-game playoff records for points and shooting accuracy.

"It gave us a lot more fight," Patrick Ewing, who had 31 points and a career playoff high 10 assists, said of the rout. "We wanted to come out and prove something to everybody in America."

The Knicks went home and evened the series by winning 102-99 Wednesday night and 135-108 Friday night.

On Sunday, Ewing, who played 47 minutes, and Maurice Cheeks, who played 48, led them on a decisive 12-2 run. The spurt turned a 101-99 lead into a 113-101 advantage with 2:02 left. Ewing ended it when he beat the 24-second buzzer with his second career 3-pointer, giving New York its biggest lead.



AP Laserphoto

"We had our chances," Boston's Kevin McHale said. "They beat us flat out. We can't sit here and make excuses."

Cheeks had 21 points and Charles Oakley, who missed the last 17 regular-season games with a broken left hand and returned for the playoff opener, scored a career playoff high 26 points and had 17 rebounds in 44 minutes.

"We just made all the big plays," Ewing said. "Charles Oakley was tremendous cleaning the backboard."

Bird led the Celtics with 31 points, but missed several key shots down the stretch, including a dunk attempt with 4:16 to go. Robert Parish had 22 points for Boston and Dennis Johnson 21.

For the first time since 1952, Boston was eliminated in the opening round for two straight seasons.

New York never trailed in the fourth quarter, fighting off numerous Boston comeback attempts with excellent shooting. The Knicks made 69 percent of their shots in the final quarter and 59 percent in the game.

With the score 101-99, Ewing began the 12-2 surge with a short hook with 4:34 remaining. Cheeks sank an 18-foot jumper, making it 105-99 with 4:08 to go. Reggie Lewis and Cheeks then traded baskets before New York pulled away.

Bird missed a 12-foot jumper with 3:09 left.

A 3-pointer by Johnny Newman put New York ahead 110-101 with 2:53 to go. Johnson then missed a jumper, and Ewing put an exclamation point on the victory by burying a 3-pointer.

That gave the Knicks their 113-101 lead. They led by seven to 12 points the rest of the way and got their final eight points on free throws.

"They had a great game, a great series, and rose to the occasion," Boston coach Jimmy Rodgers said. "It's a tough way to go down."

The Celtics never trailed in the first quarter when Bird had 13 points, leading them to a 32-24 advantage.

With the score 36-28 with 9:14 left in the first half, New York took its first lead during an 11-point run that made the score 39-36 with 6:50 remaining.

A tip by Ewing, who had only 10 first-half points, broke a 44-44 tie. But Boston responded with an 8-0 surge and took a 52-46 lead 57 seconds before intermission.

The lead changed hands five times in the third quarter, the last on a dunk by Gerald Wilkins with 2:39 left that put the Knicks ahead 80-79. Oakley followed with two free throws and Ewing dunked, capping an 18-6 run.

Suns 104, Jazz 102

Kevin Johnson didn't expect to take the final shot. He did — and made it.

Johnson's 16-foot jumper with less than one second remaining gave the Suns a victory over Utah in the deciding game of the best-of-5, opening-round NBA playoff series.

"I was supposed to penetrate as close as I could," Johnson said of the final 14 seconds. "I did that, then spotted Mike McGee on the side and hit him with a pass."

Johnson thought McGee would shoot, but he whipped the ball back to the Suns' point guard, who was being guarded by Utah's John Stockton.

"He let me back to the left for the pass from Mike and I then had the shot. It was a great win," said Johnson, who finished with 26 points.

The Suns will face the Los Angeles Lakers in the best-of-7 semifinals which start Tuesday night at Inglewood, Calif.

NBA Playoffs

A perfect example was Game 1 of the Western Conference semifinal series between Portland and San Antonio.

Wrong.

Robinson, the overwhelming favorite for Rookie of the Year, missed his first eight shots, was 3 of 11 for the game, and finished with nine points as the Blazers won Saturday's game 107-94. He took only one shot, a tip-in, in the second half.

It was the second-lowest scoring game of his short but outstanding pro career.

"I just didn't play my game," he said. "Usually I rebound a lot better. I'm more into it. Position-wise, I wasn't playing well. It just wasn't a good game for me."

Wayne Cooper, Mark Bryant and Buck Williams all took turns guarding the Spurs' big man.

"They were definitely pumped up," David Robinson said of the Blazers. "They did a good job helping out. When I got the ball, they were collapsing and helping from all sides. They were inspired. I'm going to have to be more inspired Tuesday night."

Adelman said rough play is essential against Robinson.

"We were physical," he said. "I think you have to be on him. You have to make him work. You can't just let him use his quickness. He's just too good. Next game you know he's going to play better. He's going to make more shots."

In all aspects, it was a tough game for the man the Spurs' fans call "The Admiral."

In the first half, he drew a technical foul from referee Earl Strom after clapping when he got a call underneath.

"He thought I was clapping because he finally made the call," Robinson said. "I wasn't thinking about him. I was thinking about me. I was trying to get my game going."

"That happens to everybody when you have an off game," Adelman said, "especially in the playoffs and it's national TV, you're going to get a little frustrated. But he's a great player. I don't expect two games like that in a row from him."

In a scene that seemed to epitomize the entire game, Robinson was flattened and left with a bloody nose when he tried to challenge Williams' fast-break dunk in the second half.

Robinson knows it is up to him to get the Spurs even when the best-of-7 series resumes Tuesday night.

"I've got to be more active," he said. "I've got to get to the boards more and do more things. I think I was a little too pumped up. I tend to get too excited in big games like that."

Cliff Robinson, who has had problems recently with his arrest for allegedly striking a policewoman during an early-morning brawl outside a Portland bar, said Adelman didn't tell him he would start until just before game time.

Mets credit ump, despite many heroes

Associated Press

More than Kevin McReynolds, Tim Teufel or John Franco, the New York Mets gave credit for Sunday's doubleheader sweep of the Houston Astros to umpire Doug Harvey.

What did Harvey do?

Something Manager Davey Johnson has been unable to do since the start of the season. Harvey got the Mets fired up by calling a bases-loaded balk on Franco in the 11th inning of the first game to give Houston the lead.

"Once in a a while certain things happen to get the blood pumping," Johnson said. "That got everybody arguing and hot."

McReynolds hit a three-run homer to cap a four-run rally in the bottom of the 11th as the Mets beat the Astros 7-4 in the opener and he came back with a leadoff homer in the eighth inning of the nightcap to give New York a 7-6 victory.

Franklin Stubbs led off the Houston 11th with a bunt single off Franco (1-0) and Eric Anthony followed with a walk. One out later, Gerald Young walked to load the bases but Alex Trevino hit into a force play at home.

With a 1-1 count on Eric Yelding, Harvey called a balk, ruling Franco did not come to a full stop. Franco charged toward Harvey behind home plate to argue the call before being pushed away by Johnson.

"I just about jumped out of my shoes," Franco said. "Doug's a good umpire but I thought he made a bad call. My brother was sitting behind the plate and almost jumped over the screen."

The Mets charged to the top of the dugout steps and screamed at Harvey while the other umpires kept Franco from getting at him.

"We may be able to look back and say Doug Harvey's call got us going," Mets third baseman Howard Johnson said.

"If someone did't dot an i, Harvey would see it," Davey Johnson said. We've had nothing. It was just what we needed."

McReynolds, who has three homers in the last two days, hit a 3-1 pitch from Dan Schatzeder (1-1) over the left-field fence to give the Mets the sweep.

"Hopefully this will get us over the hump and put a little life into this team," McReynolds said. "It might get our blood flowing."

Alejandro Pena (1-0) pitched two innings in relief for the second-game victory.

Ken Oberkfell gave the Astros a 6-2 lead against Ron Darling with a three-run homer in the fourth inning. It was only Oberkfell's 29th career homer in 1,449 games.

"These were two games we could have won," Astros manager Art Howe said. "They hit the home runs, but if we made a couple of bunts it might have been different."

With one out in the sixth inning of the second game, Darryl Strawberry hit his fourth home run to make it 6-3. McReynolds followed with a single and moved to third when Daryl Boston doubled for his first hit as a Met in nine at-bats. Mackey Sasser then homered on Mark Portugal's 3-2 pitch to tie the score.

Gregg Jefferies moved the Mets within 3-2 with a solo homer in the third inning. New York hit six home runs in the doubleheader — four in the nightcap — and lead the National League with 33.

In the opener, Dave Smith (0-2) came on to start the 11th with Houston leading 4-3 and walked Mark Carreon with one out. Teufel, who had three hits and four RBIs, doubled to tie the score. The Astros intentionally walked Johnson and McReynolds followed with a home run, a high fly ball over the left-field wall.

Smith allowed one home run in 58 innings in 1989, and it was only the third homer he has given up in the last 204 innings. It was also Smith's first blown save opportunity in nine chances this season.

"He doesn't throw as many forkballs anymore," McReynolds said. "Mostly curves and changeups."

Deshaies, who is 4-0 lifetime in New York, pitched six innings and allowed three hits.

The Astros got to David Cone in the first inning when Yelding led off with a single and Oberkfell followed with an RBI double. Two outs later, Stubbs hit his fourth homer.

Cone settled down and allowed six hits in six innings, striking out seven. He has not won in five starts this season.

Pirates 6-4, Braves 4-2

Things sure have changed a lot in Pittsburgh this spring. The Pirates are in first place and even swept a doubleheader for the first time in five years.

Neal Heaton won his 10th consecutive decision and Doug Drbaek improved to 5-1 as Pittsburgh beat Atlanta.

Sid Bream's three-run homer keyed a five-run fifth inning in the opener as Pittsburgh ended the Braves' five-game winning streak. Drabek allowed four hits over seven innings in the second game and started Pittsburgh's two-run third inning with a single.

Pittsburgh has won eight of its last 10 and 12 of 15, but hadn't won in a week due to two off days, two rainouts and consecutive losses in Los Angeles.

"I was happy that we came out to play, that we regained a little bit of our momentum," Pirates manager Jim Leyland said. "The players were into both games on the bench and we got a contribution from a lot of people."

Heaton (5-0), unbeaten since last July 21, allowed four hits, walked two and struck out four in seven innings. Scott Ruskin got the final out for his first career save, striking out Jeff Blauser with two men on.

"We wanted to get out there after being off for a day and being rained out two days in a row," Drabek said after allowing four hits over seven innings in the second game. "I know I was anxious to pitch. The good thing is we're not going out there expecting things to happen, we're going out there making things happen."

Expos 7, Giants 0

Rookie Mark Gardner pitched a six-hitter for his first major league victory and Montreal scored six runs in the sixth inning. Gardner (1-2), who struck out seven and walked three, had lost his five previous decisions.

Nelson Santovenia and Otis Nixon each had three of the Expos's 13 hits. Montreal sent 11 batters to the plate in the sixth, the first time in 107 innings the Expos scored more than two runs in an inning.

Atlee Hammaker (2-2) allowed six hits and three runs in 5 1-3 innings for the Giants, who are off to a 9-16 start following their National League pennant last season.

Padres 8, Cubs 3

Tony Gwynn doubled twice and had three hits for the Padres. Gwynn and Joe Carter scored three runs apiece and Garry Templeton also had three hits.

Mike Bielecki (1-3), who has pitched against Whitson in his last four games against Chicago, gave up 11 hits and six runs in 4 2-3 innings.

Reds 5, Cardinals 1

Scott Scudder, brought up from the minors earlier in the day, allowed five hits in 7 1-3 innings as Cincinnati won its fourth straight. Ron Oester doubled twice and hit a run-scoring single for the Reds, who are 15-0 when they score first.

Scudder, a 22-year-old right-hander who was 3-1 at Class AAA Nashville of the American Association, walked four and struck out none. Norm Charlton finished for his first save.

Bryn Smith (3-3) allowed nine hits and three runs in seven innings for the Cardinals, who have lost four straight.

Phillies 9, Dodgers 5

With the Phillies trailing 5-3, pinch-hitter Randy Ready hit an RBI single off Mike Munoz (0-1), Lenny Dykstra singled in the tying run and Jordan homered off Tim Crews for his first career grand slam.

Don Carman (2-0) pitched 1 2-3 innings and Roger McDowell got the final six outs.

Associated Press

"Just because you had one bad year doesn't mean your career is over," Maldonado said after he hit two home runs as the Indians swept a doubleheader from the Texas Rangers 9-5 and 3-0 Sunday.

Maldonado's homers were two of four hit by the Indians in the first game. He has seven in 23 games this year, two shy of the nine he hit in 129 games for the San Francisco Giants last year.

The Indians signed him as a free agent following an off year in which he hit .217 with 41 RBIs. He has 20 RBIs and is hitting .337 for Cleveland.

"He came off not too good a year last year, but we thought he could still play," Manager John McNamara said.

"If he keeps hitting like this, we'll have to give him the title 'Candy Man,'" Candiotti said. "If he wants it, he can have it. They should have passed out candy bars today."

"This is more fun than playing golf, a lot more fun," said Shaw, who had 15 to 20 friends and relatives visiting from his hometown of Washington Court House, Ohio.

The game became an unlikely pitchers' duel between Shaw and Bobby Witt (0-4), who allowed four hits in 7 2-3 innings. Witt had been sent to the bullpen temporarily after losing his first three decisions.

"He threw the ball well the last time, out of the bullpen," Manager Bobby Valentine said. "He'd had two starts where he didn't throw with his velocity. He went to the bullpen to find it, and it looked like he found it today."

The Rangers chased Shaw in the seventh when Harold Baines doubled and Jeff Huson drew a two-out walk. Reliever Jesse Orosco got Mike Stanley on a forceout to end the threat, and Doug Jones pitched two scoreless innings for his ninth save in nine tries.

Jones has not allowed a run in 11 appearances covering 13 1-3 innings.

Witt lost despite striking out 10. He allowed a two-run, two-out double by Felix Fermin in the second inning, after Brook Jacoby walked and Joel Skinner singled.

Cory Snyder then greeted reliever Jeff Russell with an RBI single with two outs in the eighth, ending Snyder's 0-for-23 slump.

The first game featured seven home runs, four by Cleveland. Maldonado hit a three-run homer during a four-run first inning against rookie Brian Bohanon, and a two-run shot in the fifth off Gary Mielke.

Candiotti got the win, surviving solo home runs by Ruben Sierra and Rafael Palmeiro. He allowed five hits, walked two and struck out six in seven innings.

Bohanon (0-1) lost his first major-league decision, in his second start. He lasted 4 1-3 innings, yielding five runs on seven hits.

Blue Jays 11, Tigers 7

Fielder hit three home runs and teammate Chet Lemon hit two, but the Toronto Blue Jays also hit five homers to power past the Tigers.

The combined 10 home runs, including two by Kelly Gruber, were one short of the major league record. There have been 11 homers in a game seven times, the most recent on Sept. 14, 1987, when Toronto hit 10 and Baltimore had one.

"I'm the kind of hitter who gets homers in bunches and today was definitely one of those bunches," Fielder said.

Fred McGriff, Pat Borders, Manny Lee also homered for Toronto. The Blue Jays also had four doubles, but were outhit 15-12 by Detroit. The Tigers lost for the eighth time in nine games.

Fielder, who hit three homers in a spring training game, went 4-for-5 and drove in five runs. He became the first Detroit player to hit three home runs since Bill Madlock on June 28, 1987, and the first major leaguer to do it since Von Hayes last Aug. 29.

"The ball was really carrying for me. I kind of like this park," Fielder said. "But I guess anytime you have to face your former team, you want to do well."

Fielder, a former Blue Jay who played last year in Japan, leads the majors with 10 home runs and 25 RBIs. He hit a two-run shot that put Detroit ahead 3-2 in the third, had a solo home run in the fifth and another two-run homer in the seventh. Fielder struck out in the ninth against Tom Henke with a runner on base.

Borders, Lee and Gruber each homered during a seven-run fourth inning that put Toronto ahead 9-3. Jimmy Key (3-1) got the victory and Brian Dubois (0-1) was the loser.

Mariners 5, Orioles 4

Harold Reynolds singled home the tiebreaking run in the eighth inning and Seattle overcame a record-tying four errors by third baseman Edgar Martinez to beat Baltimore.

Ken Griffey Jr. went 4-for-4 for the Mariners. They got the go-ahead run when Scott Bradley led off the eighth with a single and pinch-runner Brian Giles scored on singles by Mike Brumley and Reynolds with one out.

Bill Swift (1-0) pitched 1 2-3 innings and Mike Schooler got three outs for his eighth save. Mark Williamson (1-1) allowed one run on four hits in 1 1-3 innings.

Royals 7, White Sox 6

Mike Macfarlane singled home the winning run with two outs in the 10th inning and Kansas City seesawed past the Chicago White Sox for their second victory in 12 games.

The Royals wasted an early 5-0 edge, watched Chicago score twice against Mark Davis in the top of the ninth for a 6-5 lead and tied it in the bottom half. The White Sox missed a chance at their first three-game sweep against Kansas City in 15 years and lost for only the third time in 11 games.

Jim Eisenreich doubled with one out in the 10th off Bobby Thigpen (1-2) and scored on Macfarlane's single. Steve Farr (2-1), who walked home Chicago's go-ahead run in the ninth, got the victory.

Athletics 4, Red Sox 2

Rickey Henderson led off with a home run for the second straight game and Curt Young held Boston to two hits in eight innings as Oakland beat the Red Sox.

Henderson extended his major league record for leadoff home runs to 43. He connected against Eric Hetzel (1-2) for his fourth homer of the week and fifth of the season. He left the game with a bruised left knee in the fourth inning and his status is day-to-day.

Twins 4, Brewers 0

The Brewers had scored first in all 21 games this season. But they didn't score at all against Tapani (3-2), who had not lasted more than four innings in his previous two starts this year.

Tapani scattered five singles, struck out a career-high nine and walked none. He outpitched Teddy Higuera (3-1), who became the first Milwaukee starter to lose this season after 11 victories.

Yankees 4, Angels 2

Hawkins (1-3) walked one and struck out three. He allowed only two hits, both doubles by Devon White, over the first five innings, but left in the sixth after ex-Yankee Luis Polonia led off with a homer and White doubled with one out.

Lee Guetterman relieved Hawkins and White stole third, then scored on Chili Davis' infield out. Guetterman pitched 2 2-3 innings, allowing two hits, and Dave Righetti got the last three outs for his sixth save.

They made it 3-0 in the second on a walk to Dave Winfield, Bob Geren's double, Mike Blowers' run-scoring grounder and Alvaro Espinoza's RBI single.

NASCAR

Sacks, whose only Winston Cup victory — considered one of the biggest upsets in NASCAR history — came in the July 1985 race at Daytona International Speedway in a research and development car, got close this time in the debut of a new team co-owned by Charlotte, N.C., businessman Rick Hendrick and actor Paul Newman.

"We just came up a lap short," Sacks said after losing to the powerful Earnhardt by about two carlengths. "If it wasn't for some slow cars that we had to get past on that last lap, we might have had a better shot. Maybe I should have tried a lap earlier."

It did not appear, however, that Earnhardt was beatable Sunday as he led eight times for 113 of the 188 laps on the 2.66-mile oval, including the final 22.

It was really a two-car race over the final 40 laps.

Earnhardt and Sacks were at the head of the pack when the green flag waved on lap 172 following the final caution flag.

Sacks stayed right on Earnhardt's rear bumper until the last trip around the high-banked oval. At that point, Earnhardt was able to pull away a bit in the first turn then hold on for the win.

It was Earnhardt's third victory at Talladega, but his first Winston 500 triumph. The three-time Winston Cup champion previously won the summer race here in 1983 and 1984.

This was the Doolie, N.C., driver's third victory of the season and the 42nd of his career.

He won in the same car in which he dominated the Daytona 500 in February only to lose when he shredded a tire one-half lap from the end.

Mark Martin finished third in a Ford Thunderbird, followed by Ernie Irvan's Oldsmobile Cutlass, the Pontiac Grand Prix of Michael Waltrip and the Olds of Terry Labonte, the only other drivers on the lead lap at the end.

Earnhardt, who came into this race leading the season points, is the only driver who has won more than once in the first nine races this season.

He also won the opening round of the International Race of Champions series here Saturday, his first victory in 18 IROC starts.

Earnhardt, who won $98,975, averaged 159.571 mph on Sunday.

Despite the carburetor restrictor plates mandated both here and at Daytona International Speedway — NASCAR's fastest ovals — to slow the cars, the lead pack was running consistently in the mid to high 190s. Several laps late in the race were caught unofficially at 200.

That is a gain of about 7-8 mph in the draft since the race last May.

Stewart puts away his Metroplex jinx

Golf

IRVING (AP) — Payne Stewart turned back Lanny Wadkins' late bid and beat his own, longtime north Texas jinx on Sunday in a front-running triumph in the Byron Nelson Classic.

"I feel I had something coming to me in the Dallas-Fort Worth metroplex," Stewart said after bringing home the two-stroke victory with a final-round 67.

It was a reference to his mid-'80s misfortunes in the Dallas-Fort Worth area when, in consecutive years, he lost the Colonial in nearby Fort Worth, lost again in this event, then lost again at Fort Worth — all in playoffs.

"In some of them, I beat myself," Stewart said. "You don't mind when somebody beats you. You mind a lot when you beat yourself.

He was under fire by some of golf's great players — Greg Norman, Mark Calcavecchia and Wadkins among them — and held on under pressure to win the tournament he had established as one of his career goals.

"Except for Bay Hill (where he resides), this is my most emotional victory," he said. "This is as sweet as the PGA."

And Wadkins, who made the last, and best, run at Stewart, predicted it could be the start of greatness.

"I think Payne is just now learning to win. I think he is going to be a great player for a long time," Wadkins said.

Stewart finished with an 8-under-par 202 total in the tournament that was shortened to a three-day, 54-hole format by early-week floods.

The victory was the seventh of his career and enabled him to join rookie Robert Gamez as the only other multiple winner on the PGA Tour this year.

The triumph was worth $180,000 from the total purse of $1 million and lifted Stewart's earnings for the young season to $496,491.

It also lifted his career earnings to $4,103,198, making him only the seventh player to pass the $4 million mark.

SWC Baseball

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — A fourth-inning, six-run barrage keyed by Greg D'Alexander's grand slam . iped Arkansas nail down a 13-4 victory over Texas A&M on Sunday and also earned the Razorbacks their first outright Southwest Conference baseball championship.

No. 4 Arkansas (45-10, 16-5) finished its conference play a half-game ahead of Texas. Texas A&M (43-17, 11-10) is ranked 20th.

Arkansas and Texas A&M had split a doubleheader on Saturday, bringing the title down to Sunday's game. If Arkansas had lost Sunday, Texas would have won the championship.

Arkansas, Texas and Houston have all qualified for the SWC postseason tournament set for May 17-19 in Austin, Texas.

The Aggies jumped to an early lead with a two-run homer off the bat of David Rollen. It was his eighth homer of the year.

Arkansas scored one run in the second and three more in the third on a three-run homer by Kirk Piskor. It was Piskor's 12th home run of the year.

Texas A&M tied it at 4 in the fourth when Arkansas starter Gary Harris walked Rollen and gave up a double to Chad Broussard. A double by Trey Witte scored two.

Futures mixed

NEW YORK (AP) — Energy futures prices closed mixed on seasonal and technical factors Friday, a day after OPEC members agreed to cut their production by about 6 percent.

The June contract for WTI fell 1 cent to close at $17.98 a 42-gallon barrel. Subsequent contract months posted small gains.

On Thursday, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries announced it was cutting its production by 1.45 million barrels a day from 23.5 million barrels in April.

Steady gains

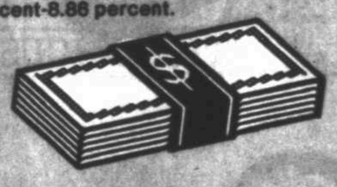
NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices capped off a week of slow but steady gains with a broad advance Friday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 14.19 to 2,710.36, stretching its gain for the week to 65.31 points.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by better than 2 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 1,020 up, 465 down and 480 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 140.55 million shares, against 145.57 million in the previous session.

Prices of long-term government bonds rose about $15 for each $1,000 in face value, reducing their yields to the 8.82 percent-8.86 percent.



Dollar slides

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar fell against all major currencies except the Japanese yen. Gold prices softened. Gold fell 50 cents a troy ounce to $370.90 on the Commodity Exchange in New York. Working against the dollar was a rise in bond prices, which sent bond yields lower, Simon said.

Dollar rates in New York: 1.6660 West German marks; 1.4430 Swiss francs; 5.6930 French francs; 1,221 Italian lire; and 1.1629 Canadian dollars.

Gold rose in London to a late bid of $371.45 a troy ounce. In Zurich, gold closed at $371.00 an ounce, up from $370.25 bid late Thursday.

Silver for current delivery rose to $5.00 a troy ounce.

■ Interest rates should be heading lower, if some experts are correct in their assertion that the bond market's performance this year is similar to 1989.

By Kenneth N. Gilpin
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — The evidence is far from conclusive, but some portfolio managers and analysts are beginning to say the bond market's performance so far this year is strikingly similar to the first four months of 1989.

If their view is correct and the pattern continues, interest rates may be on the verge of heading sharply lower.

In early 1989, like now, inflation fears pushed bond yields through 9 percent. At the time of the Treasury's spring refunding last May, the market's mood was grim.

Despite the outlook, the demand for the new issues was good, inflation abated, and bond yields, which reached 9.11 percent on May 11 last year, fell by more than half a percentage point over the next two and a half weeks.

Many economists say better inflation numbers are coming, but so far the market has not yet seen evidence that price increases are slowing from their rapid first-quarter pace.

Still, like the spring refunding that started last year's May rally, the stunningly weak April employment figures released Friday may come to be viewed as this year's beginning of an upturn in bond price.

"This is last year revisited," said Barbara Kenworthy, a senior portfolio manager of $2 billion worth of taxable fixed-income funds at Dreyfus Corp.

"It's the same type of situation: investors had thrown in the towel, the Street was very negative, and then something unexpected happens," she continued. "I don't know if we have seen the absolute bottom, but when the market moves like this it's hard to ignore."

The employment figures, which showed a small increase of 64,000 in non-farm payroll employment, a slight 0.3 percent increase in average hourly earnings and a 0.2 percent rise in the unemployment rate, to 5.4 percent, exceeded the credit market's most optimistic expectations.

The report, coupled with a huge rally on foreign bond markets, helped to push bond yields down by 15 basis points Friday, to 8.82 percent.

"The employment report is one that can entirely change the market's perspective," analysts at MMS International, an economic information and consulting firm, noted in their weekend commentary.

Report accuses Keating of fraud

■ A copyright story says a report by a court-appointed examiner charges Charles Keating and others of defrauding investors to get rich.

Associated Press

Keating

PHOENIX — The court-appointed examiner of American Continental Corp. has reported to a judge that chairman Charles H. Keating Jr. and others committed fraud to make money off investors, according to a report published Sunday.

The Arizona Republic reported in a copyright story that it had obtained part of independent examiner .Ronald Warnicke's 94-page report on the parent company of failed Lincoln Savings and Loan. The report was submitted to U.S. District Judge Richard Bilby in Phoenix.

Warnicke recommends that officers of the corporation be sued to collect damages on behalf of the corporation, as allowed under bankruptcy law, the newspaper said.

Warnicke said "instances of fraud occurred" in the purchase and financing of the landmark Hotel Pontchartrain in Detroit by Keating and fellow investors, according to the newspaper.

Bilby hired Warnicke in October to analyze American Continental, and received the report March 23 but sealed it, along with responses from American Continental and other parties in the case.

In April 1989, Phoenix-based American Continental filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection from creditors while it and 11 Lincoln subsidiaries reorganized. One day later, federal regulators took over Lincoln.

Keating has been linked to five senators, whose campaigns received contributions from him and who met with federal savings and loan regulators on his behalf in 1987.

On Friday, the Resolution Trust Corp. and lawyers for American Continental's creditors announced an agreement that would allow creditors to recoup some of their losses. The RTC, the federal entity charged with cleaning up the nation's savings and loan mess, is running Lincoln Savings.

Keating's lawyer, James J. Feder, also said Keating would resign as chairman of American Continental, perhaps as early as this week.

Warnicke's report referred to the Hotel Pontchartrain Limited Partnership.

"At nearly every junction in the HPLP transaction, there were false representations or material omissions in information provided to regulators, public stockholders and creditors," he wrote,

Greyhound seeks wage freeze, job cuts

By Karen Ball

WASHINGTON (AP) — Greyhound is calling for a four-year wage freeze and the elimination of about 4,500 union jobs in its latest contract offer in the 2-month-old drivers' strike, an executive for the bus line said Sunday.

The offer was made Saturday as negotiators met for the first time since mid-March and a day after the company announced a $56 million loss.

The company's offer, which outlines a major reduction in services for the only nationwide bus system, would give drivers $12.79 an hour rather than their previous 30-cents-a-mile rate, said Greyhound Vice President Anthony P. Lannie.

The company's poor financial situation is forcing it to eliminate about 2,000 of its 6,000 driver jobs, Lannie said.

The bus line told union negotiators it had immediate openings for only 620 striking drivers and probably could take another 700 back within a few months.

Another 2,500 union jobs would go to the 2,500 non-union replacement drivers the company has hired since the strike began March 2, Lannie said, adding that the 500 union members who crossed picket lines also would be kept.

Union president Edward M. Strait said he would not relay the proposal to local union presidents and rank-and-file members who have been on strike since March 2.

"They'd throw me out the upstairs window if I went back with this. It's an insult. There would be no dignity for the drivers," Strait said.

Union officials calculated that a driver who normally makes runs from Washington, D.C., to New York would lose more than $30 a day — or as much as $7,000 a year — from the company's proposed switch to an hourly rate, Strait said.

Before the strike, union drivers had made an average annual salary of about $24,000. They were trying to recoup some of the wage concessions they have made over the past decade.

New study cool on natural gas future

■ A new study disagrees with predictions of a rosy future for natural gas, saying residual fuel prices will put a damper on long-term natural gas prices.

By John A. Bolt

DALLAS (AP) — Natural gas may be environmentally popular, but that won't make it a more economically feasible fuel or increase supplies, says a new study which attempts to turn down the heat on expectations that prices will rise significantly any time soon.

"Our basic premise is that long-term natural gas prices will be capped by the price of residual fuel oil," a low-grade fuel used in industry and power generation, said Tom Manning, principal author of the study by Purvin & Gertz Inc.

"Natural gas will be supply-constrained, because the economic incentive will not exist to drive discovery and development of major new reserves or facilities," he said.

But natural gas advocates were quick to debunk the conclusions, questioning basic assumptions and motivations for the study.

It is at odds with many other private and government forecasts that predict steadily rising prices and supplies as industries and consumers turn to natural gas because of its abundance and clean-burning properties.

"A lot of people who know natural gas don't know much about residual fuel oil," countered Purvin & Gertz director E.E. "Duke" Ellington. "Others have done pricing forecasts based on demand, but as far as we know no one has ever closed this loop by studying supply economics, demand and pricing of competing fuels."

Ellington believes residual crude oil prices are going to hold down gas prices until the turn of the century.

The study's dependence on residual fuel oil prices is its Achilles heel, said Bob Kalisch, director of gas supply and statistics for the American Gas Association.

Kalisch said the assumptions are outdated. "What we're talking about is not competing with residual oil. We're not talking about boilers, we're talking about high efficiency technology."

An AGA study released last week says gas demand will increase to meet the Computer navigation for autos looms on horizon

By Paul C. Judge
N.Y. Times News Service

DETROIT — This summer General Motors will begin a yearlong experiment on a 12-mile stretch of Los Angeles freeway to examine how 12 cars equipped with electronic navigation systems can elude congested highways by turning on to local streets shown on a computerized map.

In Japan, Honda announced last month that it planned to offer the first electronic navigation system as an option on some larger models, although it is tight-lipped about when the feature will be introduced.

These and a half-dozen other car makers and electronics companies are coming closer to realizing a long-held goal: capitalizing on the increasing sophistication of computers to develop systems that help drivers find their way and, more important, may someday suggest alternatives to congested highways.

The systems would allow a driver to punch in a starting point and destination, and then view a map of the route recommended by a tiny computer.

Eventually, it is hoped, the computer will be alerted by radio signal with up-to-the-minute traffic conditions, enabling the system to suggest local streets that might serve the driver better than the jammed highway.

And in the United States, besides GM, Chrysler has a system less far along.

Motorola is working on a system that it says will be available to luxury car buyers by 1993. And Rockwell International hopes to market a receiver that could be incorporated into vehicle navigation systems.

But industry analysts say auto navigation systems are still six to eight years away from being available at prices most car buyers will be willing to pay.

And some note that the real potential of car navigation systems will not be tapped until they can alert commuters to

- Rubber cleaning balls, air intake mechanical filters, mechanical seals — Qatar trading company seeks contacts with U.S. suppliers of rubber cleaning balls, air intake mechanical filters and mechanical seals. These products are required for power generation/water desalination plants. Refer to P40.

NAVIGATION: System could help traffic

That would require public-private partnerships on a grand scale, to install the necessary systems, including road sensors that would measure the speed of traffic, a central computer to monitor conditions in the entire metropolitan area, and radio equipment that would broadcast the information to cars.

Two weeks ago, Transportation Secretary Samuel K. Skinner announced an $8 million project to test the traffic avoidance capabilities of various computerized navigation systems in Orlando, Fla.

"It's great to have a map in your car, but the point of having a system like that is as much traffic avoidance as navigation," said Andrew J. Kessler, a research analyst with Morgan Stanley.

Two types of electronic-navigation systems are emerging.

The first combines measurements of distance and direction made by devices within the car — a technique known as dead reckoning — while the second relies on radio signals from navigation satellites to fix the car's location.

Both navigation systems also require sophisticated computer software that constantly compares movements of the vehicle with the road data in the digital map, and makes adjustments to show the location of the car on the map (in addition to a dotted line that shows the recommended route).

The dead-reckoning system may be thrown off, for instance, when the car pulls into a parking lot, then turns back on to the main street.

And the satellite-based systems come within 100 feet or so of pinpointing a car's location — which might not be accurate enough for an electronic map of, say, Manhattan.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Taxpayer has burden of proof on stock prices

By Bill Doyle

Q. My wife purchased various stocks in the late 1950s and early 1960s. She knows what she bought, but not the prices she paid, exactly when she made the purchases or the brokerages through which she bought. She has none of those records. We have been receiving dividends, stocks splits, etc., all these years.

I'm 69 years old and on the back nine of the golf course. My wife isn't much younger. We ain't going to take it with us, so we are seriously thinking about selling some or all the stocks. That, of course, would create the problem of figuring capital gains on which tax will be due.

Can you give us any ideas or suggestions?

Doyle

A. You are faced with a monumental, but not insurmountable, task. Get ready to do a great deal of research. A helpful source will be the thick manuals published by Standard & Poor's Corp. and Moody's Investors Service, which you will find in the reference sections of many public libraries.

Assuming your wife has the stock certificates, she should be able to get a reasonable fix on the dates of her purchases. A certificate usually is issued two to three weeks after the "trade date" on which stock is bought. With that information in hand, you and she can find in a S&P or Moody's manual each stock's price around the purchase date.

Let's say she bought 100 shares of XYZ Corp. stock for which a certificate was issued in late March 1958. And let's say XYZ traded around $10 a share that month. You can estimate her "basis" — cost for tax purposes — at $1,000. If XYZ has not split or paid a stock dividend and she still owns 100 shares, by selling her capital gain or capital loss will be the difference between $1,000 and the proceeds of the sale.

Things get hairy, however, when there have been stock splits and/or stock dividends. Splits and stock dividends increase the number of shares each stockholder owns. That does not change the total basis, but it does reduce the per share basis.

Let's say, as the result of splits and/or stock dividends, your wife now has 500 XYZ shares. In this example, her total basis remains $1,000, but her per share basis is $2. If she sells all 500 shares, her capital gain or loss is the difference between $1,000 and the sale proceeds. But if she sells, say, 100 shares, her capital gain is the difference between $200 and the sale proceeds.

You'll have to use the reference manuals to track all the splits and stock dividends on your wife's holdings. If that chore is too much for you, get help from a good accountant.

Finally, because you will have only estimated costs basis, you will have problems, if the Internal Revenue Service questions the income tax return you file for the year of the sales. Under our tax system, the burden of proof remains on the taxpayer. That's why this column has always advised keeping all "confirmation statements" received when stocks are bought and sold, as well as all records of splits and stock dividends.

Q. Isn't it true that the IRS knows the price I receive when I sell a stock but has to rely on my word for the price I paid?

A. Sort of. When you sell stock or any other capital asset, you get a Form 1099-B. The IRS gets a copy of that form to feed into its computers, but has no handy record of your purchase price. However, you'll have to come up with proof of your purchase price if your return is audited or if you wave a red flag at the revenooers by listing some out-of-line purchase price.

Q. I wrote you, explaining that the tax preparation firm that did my income tax return used a wrong filing status for me for 11 years after my husband passed away and that the IRS allowed me to amend returns for only three years.

You advised me to go back to the tax preparation firm and complain. I did. They were very cooperative and pleasant. They made up my loss and I am very satisfied. Shouldn't you publish this, so that other readers will know mistakes can be corrected?

A. Gladly. Most tax preparation firms — large and small — will make customers whole when errors are brought to their attention.

REPEAT: Fund managers say 1989 being revisited

(From 6C)

Some analysts cautioned that the report had probably overstated what appeared to be a sudden weakening in the economy. But the figures erased market fears that the Federal Reserve's Open Market Committee would vote to tighten monetary policy at its meeting on May 15.

"The economy isn't as weak as the employment numbers indicate, just as it wasn't as strong as the first-quarter figures suggested," said Donald J. Fine, chief market analyst at the Chase Manhattan Bank. "The one thing the numbers did was take all the speculation of a near-term change in Fed policy out of the market."

The employment numbers and the strong rally they provoked also served to brighten the market's mood just days before the Treasury is scheduled to sell a record $30.5 billion worth of new securities at this year's spring refunding auctions.

As usual, doubts persist about foreign interest in the Treasury issues, particularly the new 30-year bonds to be sold Thursday.

Late Friday, the new bond was offered on a when-issued basis at a price to yield 8.80 percent, down sharply from a yield of 8.94 percent at the close of trading a day earlier.

"It will be difficult, but not impossible, to auction bonds at these levels," one bond trader said. "The Japanese wanted to buy bonds at 9 percent; I'm not sure they will want them at 8.80 percent."

Ms. Kenworthy at Dreyfus said the rally on Friday "may make the auctions more attractive to foreign investors."

"Most of those guys would rather buy into strength," she said.

Developments on European bond markets, which rallied strongly last week, as well as the dollar's performance on foreign exchange markets, will also be crucial factors in foreign demand at this week's auctions, analysts said.

Aside from the refunding, the week's most important economic figures are expected Friday, when producer price and retail sales data for April will be reported.

Given the market's nagging worries about inflation, the producer price report is likely to be given the most scrutiny of the two.

Movements in producer prices often indicate price trends at the consumer level, but that has not been the case so far this year: compared with consumer prices, which surged by more than 8 percent in the first quarter, producer price gains have been moderate.

KEATING: Fraud charged

(From 6C)

according to the newspaper.

"All of these were part of an overall scheme to utilize the corporation's property for the benefit of HPLP partners in contravention of federal regulations and fiduciary duties."

Warnicke also said American Continental and a subsidiary failed to disclose $1.25 million risked in the Hotel Pontchartrain deal, the newspaper reported.

Warnicke wrote that a suit should allege abuses and violations of federal regulations, negligence, failure to fulfill responsibilities to disclose dealings with insiders, and the perpetration of one or more fraudulent schemes, the newspaper said.

His report expands upon fraud allegations contained in several racketeering and fraud lawsuits filed against Keating and his associates.

A $1.1 billion civil racketeering and fraud suit filed last year by federal regulators against Keating and other American Continental executives lists the Detroit hotel transaction among a number of allegedly fraudulent transactions by the defendants.

The suit accuses the defendants of violating federal regulations against insider loans in order to generate "sizable tax benefits" from membership in the partnership.

NATION IN BRIEF

Bus seat dispute leaves one dead

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A passenger on a crowded transit bus shot another passenger Saturday before fleeing down a street after an argument over a seat, police said.

The identity of the slain man, who was shot once in the chest, was not immediately released, police Sgt. Steven Brock said.

"A couple of people had a disagreement on the bus," Brock said. "One of the men pulls a gun and shoots the other man's son, who was trying to break up the argument," he said.

"We have a lot of people that saw him," Brock said. "But we have about five different descriptions."

The gunman fled the bus and ran down a street, where he fired on two unarmed security guards standing outside a nearby building, Brock said. The shots missed the guards and the gunman escaped.

Rainbow group meets

ATLANTA (AP) — Washington Mayor Marion Barry, in political trouble because of his alleged drug use, walked into the National Rainbow Coalition's mayoral conference on reshaping urban America with a straight back and a smile.

He was among friends at the conference, Democrat Jesse Jackson's four-day political strategy session that ended Sunday. The drug problem of big cities — including Barry's own — was never discussed in his presence.

Jackson used the conference to strengthen political ties with prominent black Democrats, including Democratic National Committee Chairman Ronald Brown, Virginia Gov. L. Douglas Wilder and former Atlanta Mayor Andrew Young.

Barry, who is facing a June 4 trial on cocaine possession charges, got at least two standing ovations from those loyal to Jackson, who turned down a chance to run for Barry's job.

Barry thanked the crowd for "your heartfelt and deep-running prayers during my situation."

"I'm glad to be here on the cutting edge of this progressive agenda," he said.

Barry is charged with five federal misdemeanor counts of cocaine possession and three felony counts of lying to a grand jury. He was arrested Jan. 18 after being videotaped smoking crack in a Washington hotel room with a friend who turned police informant.

Hundred dance for rain

MANDAN, N.D. (AP) — Indians, ministers and civic leaders joined in traditional dances, songs and spoken prayers on Sunday in a bid for rain to end a drought now in its third year.

"Dear God, hear the prayer of your people, no matter what language we use and no matter what name we call you by," said the Rev. Ben Dove of the Presbyterian Church of Mandan.

"We do ask for rain because we do not know how to farm or to prosper for much longer without the showers we long for."

Marine wins landmark AIDS lawsuit

BOSTON (AP) — When a judge ruled in favor of Martin Gaffney in his AIDS lawsuit against the U.S. government, the Marine warrant officer didn't do much celebrating.

Instead, he left the South Weymouth Naval Air Station where he is a computer specialist and drove to Nantasket Beach. There he found a deserted strip of sand to walk along and think.

"I just kind of turned to the ocean and breathed a sigh of relief," said Gaffney, 40, whose legal battle ended April 26 when a judge ruled that negligence by Navy doctors in 1981 led to Gaffney's wife contracting the AIDS virus through a blood transfusion. She died in 1987.

Gaffney also lost a 13-month-old son to the disease and has tested positive for the human immunodeficiency virus that causes AIDS, although he shows no symptoms.

Along with relief he feels rage, he said.

The veteran officer's loyalty toward the military soured after he sued the government. Gaffney, a chief warrant officer, is still bitter about FBI investigations into his background and what he says has been rudeness and betrayal on the part of Navy officials.

"At first I was pretty angry," he said. "I felt disgust that it had taken four years to get to this point. Then I just wished Mutsuko would have been here to share it."

The family's ordeal began in 1981 when Gaffney's Japanese-born wife, Mutsuko, entered the Long Beach Naval Hospital to have a baby.

Gaffney's suit claimed Navy doctors botched his wife's pregnancy by failing to perform a Caesarean section when Mrs. Gaffney was two weeks late in delivering the baby. The baby, a boy, was eventually stillborn and Mrs. Gaffney required a blood transfusion. The blood she was given was contaminated with the AIDS virus.

If a Caesarean had been performed in time, the judge said, a blood transfusion would not have been necessary.

Mrs. Gaffney, 38, died a year before Gaffney filed the $55 million suit in U.S. District Court in Boston. The couple's son, John, died of AIDS in 1986.

A second trial has been ordered to determine the amount of damages. The case is expected to encourage others who believe they contracted the AIDS virus through medical malpractice to sue. A date for the trial has not been set.

Only 6-year-old Maureene Gaffney has escaped infection. It was the uncertainty over her future that led Gaffney to sue.

"I feel confident that Maureene will be taken care of," said Gaffney, who has made plans for his daughter to live with his brother's family in Lowell if necessary.

For now, Gaffney lives with his daughter in base housing. When they moved there, base officials barred her from the day care center until Sen. Edward M. Kennedy intervened on Maureene's behalf.

Maureene was admitted recently to a prestigious private school over 11 other applicants. Gaffney said she sees a therapist regularly to cope with the loss of her mother and brother. He said she is aware that her father is infected with the virus, although they don't discuss it.

Gaffney said that he has been too busy "with mundane things" and the lawsuit since he was diagnosed HIV positive to think much about his own future.

"I'm ready for what's going to happen as far as my own health going downhill and I'm ready to prepare for it," he said. "I wanted justice before I left the world and before I started to deteriorate."

Four years of agony came to a halt last week when Gaffney won his landmark suit against the U.S. governement as a judge ruled negligence by Navy doctors in 1981 led to the AIDS infection that ravaged his family.

Shrimpers' shootout disrupts fishing in Gulf

PORT FOURCHON, La. (AP) — Federal agents questioned the crews of five shrimp boats Sunday after tensions between local fishermen and Vietnamese newcomers erupted into a gun battle on the Gulf of Mexico.

"All the boats that were brought in ... had ramming damage. There were bullet holes found," said Coast Guard Petty Officer Matt McGovern in New Orleans. No injuries were reported.

None of the Vietnamese crew members would talk to reporters in port. But two Louisiana captains blamed the violence on the newcomers.

"I just put my boat in gear and put it wide open and I aimed it," Petronas said. "When I leave this dock next time, I will have arms on my boat."

Another captain, Allen Gisclair, said the newcomers ignore the area's fishing etiquette.

"They think they can take what you're dragging and move you out and take over," Gisclair said, referring to dragging nets. "They don't want to work with you. They try to work against you."

Agents from the FBI, Customs Service and Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms questioned the shrimpers, said Coast Guard spokesman McGovern.

No one on the fishing crews was taken into custody, FBI spokesman Volney Hayes said Sunday. The case was to be turned over to the U.S. Attorney's office to consider charges, he said.

Fishing crews told the Coast Guard the confrontation flared after one shrimp boat got its anchor caught in another's trawling nets.

"As to who shot first, that's all just conjecture right now," Coast Guard Lt. Michael Tekesky said Sunday.

McGovern said the shooting stopped when Coast Guard helicopters and boats arrived.

Coast Guard boats escorted the boats Our Mama, Capt. Eleven Success, Stephen Lynn, Walter James and Freedom One into port Sunday. The Coast Guard kept watch on the boats Saturday night after the exchange of gunfire in an area known as Whiskey Pass five miles off the Louisiana Coast, McGovern said.

The spokesman corrected earlier Coast Guard reports that automatic weapons had been involved.

- Residents of Riga, the capital of Latvia, took to the streets by the thousands this weekend in support of the Latvian Supreme Soviet's declaration of independence.

RIGA, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Latvian politicians said Sunday they were steeling themselves for strikes, protests and an economic blockade now that the Kremlin has reportedly rejected their declaration of independence.

The televised address came a day after Latvia's Communist Party chief, Alfreds Rubiks, quoted Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev as telling him he could not accept Latvia's secession and may impose sanctions.

"We understand the situation in Latvia will be very tough, even critical, this summer," said Peteris Lakis, one of the leaders of the Latvian People's Front, which engineered Friday's declaration.

Also Sunday, Pope John Paul II urged the three Baltic republics — Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia — to negotiate with Moscow in their efforts to gain independence.

The Polish-born pope said the rights of the republics must be balanced against the damage that Gorbachev's policies of economic and political liberalization could suffer.

"Things must be resolved by a dialogue, but by an effective dialogue," the pope told reporters on a flight from Rome to Mexico. "One cannot go beyond this at this time."

Alexeyev, a prominent opponent of secession, said a labor group representing about 140,000 workers has called a general strike for May 15 to protest the declaration of independence.

Neighboring Lithuania declared independence March 11, and Gorbachev responded by sending Soviet troops to seize some buildings and by imposing economic sanctions, including an oil and natural gas embargo.

Last month Estonia announced its intention to secede but stopped short of declaring independence and set no date for leaving the Soviet Union. The Kremlin has imposed no sanctions on Estonia.

Jews open meeting on German soil

WEST BERLIN (AP) — World Jewish Congress President Edgar M. Bronfman Sunday said a united Germany should teach about its Nazi past to avoid repeating the "lowest point ever reached in man's inhumanity to man."

It was the congress's first meeting on German soil since it was founded in Switzerland in 1936.

Early Sunday, right-wing militants fought with foreigners in street clashes in East Berlin. The official East German news agency ADN said five people were injured and eight people were arrested.

There has been a rise in racist violence in East Germany, including rampages through restaurants and public squares by neo-Nazi skinheads, usually jobless youths with close-shaved heads shouting epithets against Jews and foreigners.

In opening the three-day Jewish conference, Bronfmann noted that Tuesday will be the 45th anniversary "of the defeat of Nazism, a victory for all mankind."

He also reminded the 500 delegates that Berlin was "the capital of the Third Reich, the womb of Hitler, a Satan whose name is associated forever with unspeakable horror."

It was at Berlin's Wannsee Villa in January 1942 that leading Nazi officials plotted the Third Reich's so-called Final Solution to exterminate Jews worldwide.

Six million Jews were killed by the Nazis etween January 1933 and May 1945, along with hundreds of thousands of others.

Pointing out that Berlin may now become the capital of a united Germany, Bronfman said: "Inevitably, the questions of forgiveness and of reconciliation arise."

"Reconciliation is possible if we speak the truth. And, the truth is that only the 6 million Jews who were murdered can forgive," he said.

Speaking to West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and other officials present for the opening ceremony, Bronfman said the memory of Nazi atrocities was "painful" for both sides.

"Yours because it is part of your history, ours because it is the worst thing that ever happened to us — it is the only real bridge between us, the only road to reconciliation," Bronfman said.

He said the new generation of Germans should not be blamed.

"We do demand, nonetheless, an admission of collective responsibility. The new Germany must forever teach what happened, so the lowest point ever reached in man's inhumanity to man, can never occur again," he said.

Kohl, invited to speak at the opening ceremony, said the location and date of the conference gave it a "special meaning."

"Never may it be forgotten that the genocide of the European Jews was prepared and directed by the national socialists under the violent leadership from Berlin," Kohl said referring to the Nazis.

He said it remains the duty of "all democratic powers, also those in a united Germany, to fight without compromise against those who secretly or openly spread prejudice," against the Jews or their religion.

Evidence in Jesuit killings missing

By LINDSEY GRUSON
N.Y. Times News Service

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — Several vital pieces of evidence that could help convict a colonel charged with the slaying of six Jesuit priests and two women in November have disappeared, the Salvadoran Supreme Court and judicial officials say.

Court authorities said at least four soldiers with potentially incriminating evidence were sent abroad to study and were unavailable to testify.

Two other major witnesses have failed to appear as required, the officials said.

Senior judicial officials said the disappearance of the evidence and the four soldiers' transfer abroad were a severe and possibly fatal blow to an extremely weak case against Col. Guillermo Alfredo Benavides Moreno.

The loss of evidence will also make it more difficult to investigate allegations other senior commanders were involved in or tried to cover up the killing of the Jesuits, their cook and her daughter, said the officials, who asked not to be identified.

But the diary has disappeared, the officials said.

They said they requested the log of a military school from the tribunal that investigated the slayings.

But the Supreme Court said in a statement the tribunal replied the log, in which the name of anyone entering or leaving the campus should have been recorded, had also been lost.

Benavides was the head of the military school and in charge of the zone where the killings took place.

The four soldiers on guard duty at the school on the night of the slayings have been sent abroad to study.

That has made it all but impossible to find out who was at the campus that night, a setback to efforts to investigate whether other commanders besides Benavides were involved in the killings.

The judicial officials said the disappearance of the evidence is the latest in a series of obstacles placed in the way of their investigation.

They said the authorities had provided almost no cooperation and at times appeared to be deliberately obstructive.

It is likely to spur efforts to cut U.S. military aid to El Salvador, which amounts to $85 million this year, almost a third of the country's defense budget.

The judicial authorities, who until now have been extremely reluctant to discuss the case in any detail, disclosed the loss of the evidence and the soldiers' transfer in an effort to counteract criticism they have been insufficiently aggressive in their inquiry.

U.S. envoy annoys Kenyan president

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — The U.S. ambassador to Kenya has run afoul of President Daniel arap Moi as the Kenyan leader continues to resist calls for a multiparty political system.

The ambassador, Smith Hempstone, has publicly suggested that abolishing one-party rule would bring greater democracy and also result in a better investment climate.

Moi, who has served unchallenged for 10 years, characterizes those advocating political change in this East African nation as "tribalists and traitors."

In a fundraising speech, the president noted embassy personnel are allowed to travel freely throughout Kenya and said pointedly he "would not like to" restrict those movements.

Moi did not specifically mention Hempstone, but his party issued a statement naming the U.S. envoy and declaring: "We assert, as we have always done, that national interest must never be dictated by external forces."

Grim work

Rescue workers remove a victim from the wreckage of a DC-6 cargo plane that crashed in a residential neighborhood in Guatemala City Saturday, killing its three U.S. crew members and 16 people on the ground. Twenty people were injured and 16 houses damaged when the Miami-bound Aerial Transit plane crashed shortly after takeoff.
