Do you as a citizen of Lorraine and surrounding territory observe the rules of traffic safety while driving in the city limits? Do you come to a complete stop at the traffic light when it is red and you are traveling east on the highway and want to turn onto Main Street? Or if you are leaving Main Street and going onto the highway?

My observation is that a lot of people do not observe this rule. Pedestrians who want to cross the highway or Main Street at this intersection are in a dangerous position, they never know whether an approaching car will stop or not.

For your own protection as well as others everyone should observe this rule and all others that will make driving and walking safer in our town.

City police officers are not doing their full duty when they fail to enforce rules of safe driving.

The street markers are up and a lot of the house numbers are in place. There are still some who have not purchased their numbers. When everyone has his number in place it will be an easy matter to direct anyone to any place in town.

For instance The Mitchell County News office is located at 105 Main Street; the home of the editor is at 610 Looby St.

Bulldogs Hold Colorado Wolves To Small Score

Coach Sam Stovall's Lorraine Bulldogs surprised everybody Friday night by holding the Colorado City Wolves to a 13 to 0 victory.

The Wolves' reserve strength spelled the difference between the teams. The Wolves scored once in the first period, their No. 51 traveling 40 yards for the marker. The try for extra point was blocked by Gordon Mahon. The Wolves made four first downs while the Bulldogs made one in the first period. During the next two quarters the Bulldogs made three first downs while they held the Wolves to none but lacked the scoring punch against the heavier team.

In the fourth period the Wolves came back and made five first downs and scored again, this time kicking the extra point. The Bulldogs failed to make a first down in this period, using passes that failed to hit the mark during most of the period.

Lorraine fans were pleased with the showing the Bulldogs made against the stronger school and have hopes that they may be able to win some games in their conference this year. Fans were also with the pep squad and the new high school band.

The Bulldogs go to Merkel Friday night of this week where they will again be against a team of superior reserve power.

Following the Merkel game the Bulldogs have an open date on September 30 unless they succeed in finding an opponent for that night, before going into conference play. The first conference game will be played here with Stanton furnishing the opposition October 7.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Truman Plumps for Brannan Plan; Union of European Nations Urged; Publicity Asked in Dollar Parley

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

FARM AID: No "Setups"

Whatever else his critics might say of President Truman, they couldn't charge him with picking any "setups" when he sets out to do battle. The President has a faculty, it seems, for jumping quickest to the defense of measures and proposals that have the least public support.

THIS was the case in the President's latest taking-up-of-arms for controversial causes. He espoused the Brannan plan of farm price supports in a speech at Des Moines. He warned that the nation faces unmanageable and costly crop surpluses, and urged a "modernization" of the farm price support system on the basis of the Brannan production-subsidy program.

This is an issue which promises to be one of the liveliest in the 1950 congressional elections, and if the President was aiming to beat his opponents to the punch on the issue, he had succeeded.

The President's recommendation was made in the face of disagreement among his own congressional leaders as to the best farm price subsidy program to adopt and organized opposition by many farmer groups against the Brannan plan.

MR. TRUMAN called the Brannan plan the most "promising method yet suggested," but left open the possibility that some other system could be substituted.

The Brannan plan is one, briefly, wherein prices on practically every farm commodity would be left to find their own level on the market with the government paying a subsidy to farmers in the form of the difference in price between what farm products brought on the open market and the established parity price.

Opponents of the plan point out that while the consumer might appear to be saving money on cheaper market prices for farm products, he would, in reality, be saving nothing, inasmuch as it would be his money that would be paying for the subsidy to the farmer.

COMMANDER: Some Dispute

Amid charges that he was the candidate of the "kingmakers," and was under the domination of the old line leadership, George N. Craig, 40-year old Indiana attorney was elected commander of the American Legion. He was the first World War II veteran to be chosen for the post.

THE 3,344 delegates to the Legion's Philadelphia national convention gave Craig an overwhelming majority on the first vote. Craig's opponents took the rostrum at nominating time to label him the choice of those they claim always select the organization's national commander.

ELECTION of officers climaxed convention sessions in which the Legion urged continuation of aid to China, adopted a resolution asking the U.S. to curtail "as far as possible" any further immigration at the present time.

HIGHWAYS: Rough Going

Thirty-four of these United States need 20 billion dollars worth of work done on their roads.

This huge highway repair bill, forecast by Senator O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) was disclosed after a nationwide survey of road needs. THE PICTURE was not as dark as it seemed. O'Mahoney pointed out the condition will serve as a backlog which "will afford an unmeasured market for business and industry."

He declared that everyone is aware of the depreciation of the American road system during and following the war, but added that "few, I am sure, appreciate the tremendous backlog of essential work which has piled up."

As chairman of the congressional joint economic committee, the senator recently sent inquiries to governors and highway authorities in every state to determine their highway construction and repair needs. HE REPORTED 40 states had responded and that of those, 34 indicate an accumulation of highway deficiencies which would require the expenditure of 20 billion dollars or more.

The information obtained has been turned over to the U.S. bureau of public roads.

'DIVORCEES ANONYMOUS'

Women Organize to Slow US Divorce Rate

Unhappy because they felt that in too many cases they rushed to the divorce courts too soon, a group of Chicago women have formed a group which they hope will have some effect in slowing down the accelerating U.S. divorce rate.

They call their group "Divorcees Anonymous" and their major aim is to salvage other marriages which are headed for divorce.

Tito's Envoy

With Russians reported to be massing troops at his borders, Yugoslavia's Marshal Tito sent Dr. Josip Vilfan (above) as his envoy to lay the Yugoslav-Moscow dispute before the United Nations.

EUROPE: Stronger Ties

At Strasbourg, France, the council of Europe's consultative assembly called for creation of a union of European countries with real power in a limited range over the governments of member nations.

There are many students of world problems who are convinced this procedure is the only one which may eventually do away with war; but being realistic, they concede that man has not progressed in selfless thinking to a degree where governments will agree to overall control of any kind or degree.

THUS it appeared the idea broached at Strasbourg was doomed at its inception, but men of goodwill must keep trying, no matter how difficult the task, if world peace is ever to become more than an illusory goal.

It has not been too difficult to get the best minds committed to a problem to see the way to its solution; the obstacle always has been that the individuals to whom the procedure must be entrusted fail in the scope and breadth of the wisdom necessary for solution.

So, when the 12-nation assembly meeting in France voted by an overwhelming show of hands for federal authority for the council of Europe, it was a manifestation of hope and desire, rather than any real accomplishment.

THAT the delegates were on good, solid ground is indicated by this portion of the resolution for federal authority: "The government should undertake systematic instruction of the great mass of the people, pointing out to them the undeniable advantages of union for Europe and at the same time the dangers inherent in national isolation."

DOLLAR PARLEY: Information, Please

Great Britain took the lead in stripping any secrecy from the progress of the critical conference on England's dollar crisis.

OFFICIAL SOURCES credited Sir Oliver Franks, the British ambassador, with a proposal that detailed daily reports be made in order to keep the American, British and Canadian people advised of developments.

This system of daily briefings has been followed at meeting of the Big Four council of foreign ministers in the past, although top-level international postwar financial conferences have been a bit more secretive.

The publicity problem was among the first which had to be ironed out by the principals in the monetary discussions, as decisions will have a vital bearing on reducing British dollar drain and bolstering her position.

THE PROPOSAL for daily briefings was said to have support from Dean Acheson, U.S. secretary of state, but the attitude of John Snyder, treasury boss, was unknown when the proposal was first broached.

The federal administration already had indicated congressional leaders would be kept informed on the progress of the conference. The British proposed that officials of the three powers take turns about in giving the briefings to the press.

CLOAK & DAGGER:

Russian Wise Guy

It was beginning to appear—as pieces of the picture fell together—that Uncle Sam had been played more or less for a sucker by a Russian wise guy who pretended to be won over to the American ideology by the Voice of America broadcasts, and who wanted to come to America and be a United States citizen.

LAST October 9, two Russian air force lieutenants, Anatol Borzov and Peter Pirigov, landed in the U. S. zone of Austria in a stolen Russian bomber. They had had enough of Russia, they said, in effect, and would like to become U.S. citizens.

According to the Soviet Embassy, Borzov suffered a change of heart late in July and begged for "prodigal son" treatment. Meanwhile, U.S. agents had discovered the "change" and Borzov was arrested by U.S. agents and held secretly at Ellis Island. Then he was flown to the U.S. zone of Austria and returned to Russian jurisdiction.

DURING the interim, Pirigov, who says he wants to stay in America, told newsmen that Borzov tried to bribe him with Soviet embassy funds to return to Russia. It was reported that Pirigov had been beaten by Soviet agents.

The one essential element to the chain of events as to whether it proved Borzov a spy was missing. That was confirmation. The U. S. state department would neither confirm nor deny any of the stories being circulated.

IT merely revealed that a U. S. note on the Borzov affair had been delivered to the Soviet embassy. There is an old, old adage that it is "very easy to believe what one wants to believe." It may have been that sort of wishful thinking that led state department officials to smile benignly on Comrade Borzov's desire to "change" allegiance and become as one with Americans.

There is an old, old adage that it is "very easy to believe what one wants to believe." It may have been that sort of wishful thinking that led state department officials to smile benignly on Comrade Borzov's desire to "change" allegiance and become as one with Americans.

'FAIR DEAL': Author liked

President Truman continued in a fighting mood. He told newsmen he was going to keep Maj. Gen. Harry Vaughan as his military aide—apparently despite anything the current "5 per center" probe might develop.

Then, setting the theme of the 1950 congressional campaign, he lashed out with a slashing attack at his recent pet aversion—"organized selfish interests" which, he asserts, are trying to block his fair deal program with a "scare-word campaign."

HE DECLINED to name the "selfish interests," still campaigning against the 80th ("do nothing") he called it congress. Evidently, Mr. Truman felt he knew a good thing when he saw it. If he could be elected to the presidency—when few felt he had a chance—by campaigning against the 80th congress, campaigning against it again ought to do good for his side in 1950 balloting.

Getting away from the 80th for the moment, he talked about the 81st congress, declaring that the Democrat-controlled legislators had made progress with his Fair Deal program in the teeth of "trumped-up slogans" like "statism," "welfare state," "collectivism," and "socialism."

THE PRESIDENT said the people will not be disturbed by such "scare words" dreamed up by a "lot of paid agitators, promoters and publicity experts who make a fat living by frightening the people in the high-income groups about forward-looking legislation and by organizing campaigns against it."

NEW LOOK:

Next, the Male

The American male would be smart to move cautiously, for fashion designers have launched a movement to give men's clothes a "new look" every five years. "The men's apparel industry is in bad shape," was the dim view of the situation expressed by Myron Kahn, executive director of national fashion previews of men's apparel, incorporated. He complained of no changes.

MR. TWITCHELL ANALYZES

"I LOOK FOR the most exciting race in years in both baseball big leagues," declared Elmer Twitchell, eminent sports fan, pinocchio player and antique nutpick collector, today. "If you wish my analysis, based largely on getting the games by radio and television, here it is. Beer, cigarettes, the Yanks, motor oils, Dem Bums and various breakfast foods will fight it out to the finish in both leagues, and any one of them can win.

"It has been a very good race so far, with the American league a little faster with the clear-cut commercials, but with the National league clearly outclassing it with the more informal testimonials to popular products. I don't recall a baseball race when the appeals to radio fans to hurry to the icebox for a cold drink were done with such spirit and form.

"In both major leagues the boys who bat out the commercials were in there ying at all times and they rarely failed to come through in the pinches. The game, it seems to me, is much faster than it used to be. When I was a boy, a game would go on all afternoon with no reference to a cigar, a lubricant or a drink. The emphasis seemed to be on garters and cathartics all via the old-fashioned billboards. Advertising as a handmaiden of the national game was minimized. You could take it or leave it.

"Today from the opening cry of 'Play Ball' the contest tingles with sales talks. They are not only using the livelier ball but livelier jingles and selling arguments.

"For years I took my baseball without having my sales resistance knocked over the fence, but today it happens to me in every inning.

"Hitting, pitching and base running have improved tremendously in baseball. So have enunciation and merchandising. The twirling is much better. The announcer throws the ball with a speed that is needed but also has a change of pace.

"They say that whoever is ahead July 4 will finish as the pennant winners. The Dodgers and a couple of breweries were out front on that date this year in one league and the Yanks and tobacco away out ahead in the American. I look for no great change.

"The final result may be influenced somewhat by mishaps. One of the top announcers in the American league has developed calcification of the vocal delivery and may be out a few weeks. And two announcers in the National are out with lame tonsils."

"What do you think of the Athletics?" we asked.

"I would have to know more about the product they sponsor," replied Mr. Twitchell.

FATHER AND SON

Q.—Popper, what is a British dollar crisis?

A.—The British dollar crisis? Ahem. Well, er, it is a crisis over dollars. The British have trouble buying things with the American dollar.

Q.—Like mommer does?

A.—Yes, in a way. Haven't you any home work to do?

Q.—But, popper, isn't a dollar a dollar in England just as much as in this country?

A.—No, my son. I think the Willis boy is outside calling for you.

Q.—Answer my question first, popper.

A.—Well, er, the dollar is an American unit. The British use pounds.

Q.—Pounds of what?

A.—A pound is their unit of money. An Englishman never asks "Lend me 10 dollars." He asks "Lend me 10 pounds."

Q.—If we say we haven't any pounds and offer him dollars will he refuse to take the money?

A.—Don't be fantastic. Of course he takes the money, but he won't spend it in dollars.

Q.—Then what good are dollars to him?

A.—The kids are playing ball across the street. Don't you need fresh air?

Q.—Popper, what is a sterling area?

A.—It is an area where sterling is the monetary base. Various countries use different kinds of money but it is converted into sterling, and where's your catcher's mitt?

Q.—Is the dollar worth more than the other kinds of money, popper?

A.—It is worth so much more that the British can't afford to use it to buy things until next September. Now beat it.

The Fiction ★ 'HELPLESS' ANNE ★

By Richard H. Wilkinson

3-Minute Fiction

THROUGH the opening in the trees above the woods road Langford could see the dull glow against the sky. It was growing brighter by the minute, and now the smell of smoke was strong. In the smell of smoke was strong. In the smell of smoke was strong.

forward, his breath a sobbing gasp in his throat, his face white and drawn from the strain of running. It seemed that he had run a thousand miles, though he knew it was not more than eight. Eight at the most. That meant there were still three to go before he reached the river. Then he'd have to swim across and make another mile up the slope to his cabin. By then it might be too late. By then the fire might have swept down on the little log structure and destroyed it, and what it contained. Anne and little Bobby. He closed his eyes to shut out the picture.

After a while he stood up and went on. The glow against the sky was brighter, brighter red and orange and yellow. Against it he could see billowing smoke clouds and occasional showers of sparks. That meant the flames had reached the ridge behind the cabin. In another moment they would be sweeping down the slope toward his clearing.

His spirits sank. He choked as the smoke grew thicker and the air suffocating. Above him he heard the wail of a rising wind, and above the wind there was the increasing roar of the fire. Anne wouldn't understand until it was too late.

It couldn't be much more than a mile, he told himself. He called on his last ounce of energy and fought ahead.

Suddenly a wild hope beat in his heart. He looked up and there at his very feet was water. The river! He had come faster than he thought. But abruptly the hope died. Looking across he stared into a solid sheet of flame and smoke belching sparks. The entire slope of the hill, which was between the river and his cabin, was afire.

Groaning, he sank to his knees. Before him the river blazed and steamed as flying fragments fell into it. His black depths mirrored the flicking tongues of flame with terrible beauty.

Watching with horrible fascination, Langford's heart suddenly gave a bound. He leaped to his feet and plunged into the water, shouting. Fifty feet from shore a dark silhouette had come into the path of orange reflection, wabbling crazily but moving steadily toward the shore. Atop it, was a huddled bundle of something, that moved and propelled the silhouette forward with awkward, clumsy strokes.

LANGFORD WADED in to his armpits and then started to swim. He called again and a voice answered him, "ling him to go back. But he didn't. And presently the silhouette ranged alongside and Anne's frightened eyes were looking into his own.

"Bobby?" he gasped. "He's here, under the blankets. And I saved the hens too, and a lot of our personal things."

Langford helped push the improved raft ashore. But it wasn't until Anne had alighted and he had carried Bobby to safety that he discovered the raft was the hen-coop he'd made for Anne's chickens. Four or five boards were laid across its top and lashed together with part of the wire.

"It was the only thing I could carry," Anne was saying. "I took the boards from the fence. The chickens are all in the bur-lap bag, and our things are sunk in a box on the other side of the river."

Langford stared at her and for no accountable reason he began to laugh. It was a curious sound, not wholly rational. But the incongruity of it was justified, for it had occurred to him what a stupid fool he'd been to think Anne helpless.

PUZZLE NO. 17

WOMAN'S WORLD

When Cleaning Curtains Use Tested Means

By Ertta Haley

EVER HAD CURTAINS fall apart while laundering them? Ever had them look limp, faded, and not quite clean enough? These are things that happen when we give curtains and drapes strictly amateur treatment when it comes to cleaning.

On the other hand, there's pure joy in a woman's eyes when the surveys curtains that have been properly cleaned. Curtains like this have a spanking-clean look, they hang straight, and they have retained their color.

Dirt which creeps into the house via windows, as well as the sun which dries out the thread of curtain material work havoc with the best of window coverings. For these reasons, extra care is necessary to keep curtains looking nice and avoiding the expensive replacement cost which they would otherwise necessitate.

Too much cannot be said in favor of constant cleaning. This does not mean laundering every few weeks, but it does mean applying a vacuum attachment to them when you do your weekly cleaning to get rid of the surface dust which will otherwise clog the fibers, and make them more difficult to launder.

Curtains can be kept cleaner, too, when windows are cleaned weekly or bi-monthly, depending upon the dirt in different communities.

Launder curtains in pillowcase . . .

Needless to say, the curtains should be removed as the windows are being cleaned, so no soil comes off on them.

It isn't always necessary to remove the curtains from the rods when washing the windows, since most of them can easily be lifted off with their rods, thus making the return trip simple.

Curtains and drapes should not be allowed to get too dirty before cleaning, since this only makes more effort necessary to wash them. Naturally, when curtains are washed long and hard, they will weaken.

Make Curtain Measurements Before Doing Laundering

One of the disheartening aspects of curtain laundering, frequently, is the shrinkage. An allowance should be made for this, of course, when curtains are made. You, yourself can do it, if you sew your own. Check to see that the allowance has been made if you purchase curtains. If you alter them, leave a hidden tuck in the curtain which may be let out after laundering.

Campus Cloche

Vivid watermelon pink velvet is used by Betmar for this smart new campus cloche that hugs the head snugly to avoid going whichever way the wind blows. The hat has a deep crown and a helmet-shaped brim that are distinctly new and fashion-wise.

It's important that you measure the curtains accurately before laundering. Then, keep the measurements so you won't have to go through all the measuring again when you launder.

If you use a curtain stretcher, wash all curtains which are the same size at the same time so you will not have to reset it for each pair.

For those of you who will iron curtains, it's a wise idea to mark the ironing board as to length and width so that you can avoid having the problems of too-short or too-narrow curtains. This is an especially good idea for those curtains which need frequent laundering.

Use vacuum attachment on drapes. ing: kitchen, bathroom and playroom curtains. Before washing the curtains, dust them either with a vacuum attachment or shake them out before washing so that you will get none of the surface dirt into the water. In this way you can have your water for washing as clean as possible.

Curtains Need Special Care When Washed

Rinse curtains but do not soak them in water as a pre-washing procedure. You can get a lot of dirt out of curtains by giving them a brief cold water rinse. Soaking them, however, would tend to weaken the delicate fibers, which have frequently been sun-baked.

Filmy laces and delicate sheers should not be washed without some protection. In fact, if the curtains are very fragile, they had best be washed in lukewarm water with mild soap, by hand. Simply squeeze the suds in and out of them as you would a sweater or some woolen garment.

For the somewhat more durable types, but still fragile curtains, place each panel in a pillowcase and sew the top with basting stitches. In this way the rough action of the washing machine will be buffered by the case.

If you intend using a curtain stretcher for drying the fragile curtains, place a strip of muslin at top and bottom of the curtain with pins or basting stitches so that the pins of the stretcher will not tear the curtain.

Character Precedes Logarithms

IT HAS BEEN A PUZZLE to me, as it must be to many mothers and grandmothers, why they teach our children what they do teach them — or try to teach them — in public high schools and in all colleges.

In the past, the only men who had this higher education — no women had it — were preparing for the law, medicine, the church, or service to the state. They were destined to be the rulers, attorneys, doctors, clergymen, judges, colonels in the empire's far-flung posts, teachers and professors. Their studies, of course, included history, higher mathematics, international law, Latin and living languages.

Today we trail along on the same course, dragging with us thousands of American boys and girls who will never need Latin or logarithms.

Awakened Interest

Correct speech is achieved because it is heard, read and thought about. Such mathematics as any man or woman needs beyond grammar school must be learned in the express and particular business to which he or she devotes himself. Any language can be mastered by a person of good intellect in the six months before he takes a post in Brazil or Russia. And similarly, enough history of any particular epoch will stay in your mind when you want it to stay there — and that desire is not apt to awaken until you have some reason to be interested in it.

Turn to any college man you know, unless he be yesterday's graduate, with the simplest Latin phrase, and he will look as blank as he did at 15 in the schoolroom. Present any problem in machinery or electronics to the average college graduate, and unless he majored in that subject and intends to follow it up, he'll know less than the unlettered lad in the garage, who can put his shock of hair into the engine hood of your car, mumble mysterious words, and have things righted in five minutes.

We don't teach them what they need. We don't help them find the glory of work they like to do, because we give them work they hate to do. We bore them to death all through their young years, and then are amazed they don't want to read Shakespeare or Homer. "Gosh, they gave us that stuff in school!"

Modern Conception

I've just finished reading an article on this subject by one Jack Harrison Pollack in a newspaper weekly. It describes what many modern public schools are doing along the line of "Life Adjustment." Many schools — not more than five per cent, it is true, but that means about ten million children — are allowing older pupils credits on part-time outside work, encouraging the development of character in human relations, personal contacts, individual ventures.

We all know that what our children need is strong, fine characters. If a boy or girl has that, little else matters. He is equipped by grammar school to go as far as he cares to go. So the question is: what college work can help to form strong characters, what type of training will guide young minds and souls to true self-development and self-control? These modern schools are working actual miracles in saving

Be Smart!

A clever designer, who has the gift of making a blouse stunning in beautiful detail so that it virtually becomes a costume in itself, turns to nylon, thus adding a new permanence to the beauty she achieves. At the left is a new sueded nylon, very soft, heavy and rich looking. At the right is a soft weave, lighter in weight but not sheer, hitherto associated only with the finest silk. It is trimmed with dainty lace insertion and tiny hand-sewn tucks.

MIRROR Of Your MIND

By Lawrence Gould

Do all careers call for special training?

Answer: You cannot do any job well unless you know how to do it, and the simplest way of finding this out is to have someone who knows how teach you. But this does not mean that the only way to train yourself for any kind of work is in a school or college classroom. Many leading newspapermen never attended schools of journalism and one of the great bacteriologists of our time began as a porter in the laboratory. If you can read and are not afraid to study, there are relatively few careers to which you cannot aspire.

Is acne a serious problem?

Answer: Very serious indeed to the adolescent who is suffering from it — all the more because his parents are so apt to feel that he is "making a fuss over nothing." For the biggest conscious problem of the average teen-ager is "social acceptance," and to feel he's seriously handicapped in winning this by a "disfigurement" may retard or block his whole adjustment to the adult world. Recommended reading for all sufferers from this difficulty is a new book, "The Skin Problems of Young Men and Women," by Dr. Herbert Lawrence.

Is psychotherapy "for doctors only"? Answer: Most of the best psychotherapists are doctors, and some forms of mental illness ought not to be treated except by a physician. But since there are something like ten times as many people in need of help for emotional difficulties as there are psychiatrists to treat them, the plain fact is that much of this help must come from non-physicians, and that some of these are fully competent to give it. "Psychiatric psychologists," says Dr. George H. Preston, "are not assistants to an all-wise medical psychiatrist, but therapists in their own right."

KEEPING HEALTHY Helping the Aged Undergo Operation

By Dr. James W. Barton

IT IS NOT LONG since a physician in consultation with a surgeon often decided not to allow an elderly patient to undergo operation unless it was a matter of life or death. Because there are now so many elderly men and women in the world and they are beginning to feel the effects of the aging process, physicians and surgeons are studying closely the problem of surgical operation in the elderly.

In "Geriatrics," (disease of the elderly) Dr. J. Dewey Bigard, University of Nebraska College of Medicine, states that there is greater need for team work between the surgeon, the internist (specialist in internal diseases), anesthetist, and other specialists, and that every detail in surgical management must be cautiously and carefully observed.

These patients should be studied not by their age in years but by their age physically, as some are old at 50 and others are young at 70.

One important consideration is the nourishment of the body; if the patient is undernourished, his weight should be increased. While it is admitted that lean men live longer than fat men, it is known that many elderly men and women do not eat as much as they really need to keep body strong, and to provide enough fat and other coverings to protect the nerves and serve as a food supply in an emergency.

Dr. Bigard points out that with the loss of fat there is a loss of sugar from the sugar or glycogen deposits — skin, liver — and also loss of protein (muscle tissue).

He suggests, therefore, that in preparing a patient for surgical operation an all round diet should be given and the proteins — meat, eggs, fish — should be increased. If not enough proteins can be eaten by the patient, then proteins in the form of amino acids can be injected into a vein.

Another suggestion is that the elderly patient being prepared for operation should be given enough liquids to maintain the proper water balance but not enough to have too much water in the tissues. And during operation, no unnecessary bleeding should occur, as too much loss of blood might cause collapse.

One reason the dental profession is standing high is the amount of research work being done by dentists in nutrition.

Grouchy Iceman Not at Fault

By Will Bernard, LL.B.

May an Iceman Frighten Children Away from His Truck?

An iceman was in a very grouchy mood one morning while making his rounds. As he walked out of a customer's back yard, he noticed several children gathered around his truck — grabbing little pieces of ice. "Hey, you!" the iceman roared threateningly. One little boy was so frightened that he ran into the street — right in front of a passing car. The child was injured, and later a lawsuit was brought on his behalf against the iceman. However, the court decided that the man wasn't to blame for the mishap. The judge said the iceman had a right to warn the children away from the truck — and it wasn't his fault that one boy ran the wrong way.

A man went to a barber shop to have his shoes shined. As he was getting down from the stand, he lost his balance and tumbled to the floor. When he got home and counted his bruises, the man decided he had a damage claim against the barber. He filed suit, but the judge threw the case out of court. The judge decided that a barber can't guarantee his customers against any and all dangers — and, anyhow, a person ought to be able to climb down from a shoe shine stand by himself.

May a Trolley Conductor Punch A Quarrelsome Passenger?

A fat man got into an argument with a street car conductor over a lost nickel. The dispute waxed hotter and hotter, and finally the man called the conductor a liar. Promptly the latter doubled his fist and punched the hefty passenger in the stomach! Later, the man filed a damage suit for assault and battery. The conductor's defense was that the passenger had started the argument, but the court held him liable anyhow. The judge said that the conductor of a public conveyance must always "treat his passengers with respect" — and that didn't mean punching them in the stomach!

BOY SCOUTS MAKING FINE PROGRESS

The Lorraine Boy Scouts of America, Troop 21, are making fine progress on their trail to citizenship training, according to Scoutmaster Claud Woods.

In the five months since their organization this troop has carried out the recommendation of the Council by spending twelve nights on camping trips. On these trips the Scouts have worked very successfully in first aid instruction, cooking, hiking, camp inspection and improvement, some leather craft, and craftstrip braiding.

At the present time Troop 21 has set up a program for the winter months of signal training in Morse code, semaphore code, archery, music, and various merit badge advancements.

On Monday night, September 26, the following boys and their parents are to attend a District Court of Honor at which time they will be awarded their second class rank and the merit badges earned up to now.

Jimmy Hall, merit badge in horsemanship; Jimmy Hall, Kenneth Harris, Doug Chitsey, Roy Johnson, Alfred Moore, Richard Blair, Johnnie Miles, Richey Cary, Wesley Woods, and Arnold Lee Faulkenberry.

This Troop of Boy Scouts deserve the full backing and encouragement of our community.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Williams and son of Tahoka visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Elliott, the first of the week and took Mr. Elliott to Abilene Wednesday for medical treatment.

Seniors Begin Big Year

The seniors have started off with a bang! They got their class rings last Thursday. That is why they are all going around holding their right hand out.

In their class meeting today they decided on their class dues and appointed a committee for the first assembly program on Friday. The committee is Patsy Beaty, Joy Graham, and Vonclle Faulkenberry. We are looking forward to a good assembly.

The special reporter is Vonclle Faulkenberry. Her duty is give biographies of seniors.

The seniors have started planning their annual. They are planning on making it the best we have had. Donald Black took Max Hallman's place as business manager.

Introducing Patsy Beaty
On September 12, 1932, Mr. and Mrs. Plez Beaty became the proud parents of a daughter, Patsy Louise. Patsy has been a cheer leader for three years. She has been a member of the Home Ec. club for four years, and a member of the Speech club this year. Her freshman year she was secretary-treasurer her junior year she was the class reporter and society editor of the Mastiff. This year she is the editor of the Mastiff and secretary of the Speech Club.

Some of Patsy's favorites are: day, Saturday; dish, fried chicken; actor, Peter Lawford; actress, June Allyson; movie, Little Women; color, blue; and last but not least is her favorite boy friend. He is about 5 ft. 9 in., tall has blond hair, green eyes, and attends Hardin-Simmons University. Patsy doesn't know definitely what she wants to be, but the seniors all wish her luck in the future.

WHY THE MISSOURI PACIFIC RAILROAD STRIKE?

Over twenty years ago, the Congress of the United States passed the Railway Labor Act. It was hailed by union leaders as a model for the settlement of labor disputes.

THE LEADERS of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, Order of Railway Conductors, and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen on the Missouri Pacific Railroad have refused to avail themselves of the peaceful means provided by this Act for settling their disputes. They insist that they be the sole umpire of their own disputes over the meaning of contracts.

There is no Need for Strikes

With all of the available methods for the interpretation of contracts, there is no need for a strike or even a threat of a strike, but the leaders of these railroad unions have ignored the ordinary procedures established by law and insist upon imposing their own interpretations of their contracts by means of a strike.

The wheels have stopped rolling on the Missouri Pacific. They may stop rolling on other railroads at any time. Recently the Wabash Railroad was forced to discontinue operation for several days under similar circumstances.

What are These Strikes About?

These strikes and strike threats are not about wages rates or hours. They result from disputes over the meaning of existing contracts. They cover claims for a full day's pay for less than a day's work, or for payments for services performed by others who were fully paid for the work done.

President Truman's Board Condemns Strike

There is an established legal method for handling disputes involving existing written contracts—just as there is such a method of settling any contract dispute which you may have in your daily life.

The President of the United States appointed a Fact Finding Board to investigate and adjust the Missouri Pacific dispute. This Board reported, in part, as follows:

"... It is with a deep sense of regret that we are obliged to report the failure of our mission. It seems inconceivable to us that a coercive strike should occur on one of the nation's major transportation systems, with all of the losses and hardships that would follow. In view of the fact that the Railway Labor Act provides an orderly, efficient and complete remedy for the fair and just settlement of the matters in dispute. Grievances of the character here under discussion are so numerous and of such frequent occurrence on all railroads that the general adoption of the policy pursued by the organizations in this case would soon result in the complete nullification of the Railway Labor Act...."

Obviously the railroads cannot be run efficiently or economically if the leaders of the unions ignore agreements or laws.

Provisions of the Law which are Disregarded

There are five ways under the Railway Labor Act to settle disputes over the meaning of contracts:

- 1—Decision by National Railroad Adjustment Board.
- 2—Decision by System Adjustment Board for the specific railroad.
- 3—Decision by arbitration.
- 4—Decision by neutral referee.
- 5—Decision by courts.

The Missouri Pacific Railroad has been and is entirely willing to have these disputes settled in accordance with the requirements of the Railway Labor Act. Regardless of this fact, the union leaders have shut down that railroad.

Innocent Bystanders Suffer Losses and Hardships

There are about 5,000 engineers, firemen, conductors and trainmen on the Missouri Pacific. They are known as "operating" employees, and are the most highly paid of all employees on the nation's railroads, but their strike action has resulted in the loss of work to 22,500 other employees of the Missouri Pacific. In addition, they have imposed great inconvenience and hardship upon the public and the communities served by that railroad.

The Railway Labor Act was designed to protect the public against just such interruptions of commerce.

If these men will not comply with the provisions of the law for the settlement of such disputes, then all thinking Americans must face the question, "What is the next step?"

Preventing Rust
To prevent the tub of your washing machine from rusting, pour a cupful of soda chips or soap powder over the bottom of it when the day's washing is done. This helps to discourage rust, but the soap isn't wasted. When the next wash day comes, just pour hot water over the soap for a new batch of suds.

Candles
If a candle is a little too small for the holder, you can make it firm by dipping the holder—provided it's metal—into piping hot water for a few minutes to melt it hot before inserting the candle.

Trimming Wicks
In trimming the wick of an oil lamp or oil heater, the handiest thing to use is a single-edge razor blade. With oil heater wicks, saw straight across, and use the metal clips in the wick as a guide.

Turpentine in Cleaning
When an article is cleaned with turpentine, the odor often lingers on, but you can hasten its departure by steaming the garment in the bathroom while the hot shower is running and then airing it outdoors for one full day.

LOOPHOLES in the Law

By WILL WILSON

Past President, Texas District and County Attorneys Association

(Editors Note: This is one of a series of short case histories, all taken from court records, showing how legal loopholes of ten enable criminals to escape punishment in Texas. Will Wilson is chairman of a special steering committee of the State Bar, which is working for revision of the antiquated Criminal Code and Code of Criminal Procedure in order to eliminate these loopholes.)

Joe was a smalltown tough. He had the reputation of being mean and when he got drunk, which was often, he was meaner than ever.

He was both drunk and mean one day at high noon. He staggered down Main Street in his hometown, shouting and shooting a pistol into the air. He was arrested and charged with unlawfully carrying a pistol.

The charge read, in part, as follows: "that Joe did on or about the 4th day of October, 1939, in the County of Harrison, the State of Texas, did then and there unlawfully on or about his person carry a pistol

Joe was brought to trial, but then the charge was dismissed and he was released.

The reason for this action was that the word "and" should have been used instead of the word "or" in the sentence about "did then and there on or about his person carry a pistol." Joe couldn't be convicted of the charge because the court ruled this should have read "did then and there on AND about his person carry a pistol."

Technicalities like that one often defeat justice. The State Bar is working for the elimination of such technicalities by seeking to bring about revision of Texas' Criminal statutes.

Weekly Swing of SOUTHWEST FARM MARKETS

Price trends at southwest farm markets formed a patchwork of ups and downs the past week, the U. S. Department of Agriculture's Production and Marketing Administration reports.

Wheat lost a cent or two for the week, but white corn advanced 3 to 4 cents a bushel, yellow corn 5 to 7, and oats and barley a fraction. Milo gained 4 cents a hundred pounds.

Cotton closed Monday unchanged to 10 cents lower than a week earlier.

49 PONTIAC

A Product of General Motors

Distinguished by a Beauty All Its Own!

There's an unmistakable stamp of distinction about the new Pontiac. It's a beauty from the front and from the rear! Wherever you see its "Silver Streak" styling—in city traffic, on the highway, or silhouetted at the curb—you know immediately that it's a Pontiac and something very special among automobiles.

Pontiac's performance is equally unmistakable—thanks to Pontiac's great power plants, the straight eight or six, and to the amazing convenience of GM Hydra-Matic Drive.* And remember, Pontiac is still the lowest priced straight eight in America!

Why not come in soon and get the whole Pontiac story?

SAFE-NEW DRIVER VIEW! Pontiac's wide, optically curved windshield, plus wider windows and slimmer pillars all around, gives you a new driving horizon.

*Hydra-Matic Drive optional at extra cost.
