Reagan: Carter using inflation

By STEVE HERSHBERGER
MIDLAND — Republican presidential frontrunner Ronald Reagan laid the blame for the nation's budgetary problems squarely on the doorstep of President Jimmy Carter in a speech delivered here Wednesday night.

"He speaks of balancing the budget," Reagan told a crowd of over 1,000 at the Holiday Inn Villa West in Midland. "The president is using inflation to balance the budget instead of balancing the budget to fight inflation."

Reagan said Carter is increasing taxes by $100 billion to keep the next budget in the black.

"It will be the largest single increase in taxes in the history of our nation," Reagan said.

Reagan then broke parts of this tax increase. A total of $36 billion will come from "bracket creep." This is a situation where cost of living increases put a person in a higher tax bracket.

The windfall profits tax will bring in some $13 billion and an oil imports tax about $10 billion.

About Carter's inflation fight, Reagan said, "The president is going to increase unemployment." Reagan said that a one percent increase in unemployment adds $29 billion to the Federal deficit.

Reagan issued a three-prong attack against inflation. The Republican frontrunner called for a freeze in federal hiring.

He also said a break down in each department of possible extravagance is warranted.

"Nobody, and Congress admits to this, knows how many programs there are," Reagan said.

He added that waste could certainly be curbed. Reagan mentioned that a Justice Department study found that the federal government loses $50 billion in fraud annually.

Because of waste and fraud, Reagan said, "We can begin a plan to transfer programs back to local governments and the sources of revenue with them."

One area in particular, Reagan said, is welfare.
"It never belonged in Washington," he remarked.

He added, "It is time to recognize that government is not the answer, it is the problem."

About the Carter's energy policy, Reagan said, "He has told us it is our own fault." The Republican reiterated a statement that the United States is energy rich with abundant supplies of natural gas and oil and coal. He added that another potential source of energy is nuclear power.

The harnessing of three sources would be aided, Reagan claimed, if the federal government removed much of its regulation.

Reagan also contended that the Department of Energy should be dissolved. He then turned to matters dealing with foreign policy and defense.

"What once has been the arsenal of democracy," Reagan said, "has been depleted under this administration." The Republican said United States military power is second to that of the Soviet Union, and Russian power is increasing. The reasons for this come largely from the Carter Administration scrapping the neutron bomb,

M-X missile and B-1 bomber, he said.
Reagan said he was not in favor of a draft army.

"A draft army is not the answer right now," he said. "We don't have the equipment and manpower to train them."

But, Reagan said he favors registration, pointing out that a recent congressional study showed such a rostering of eligible men would cut down lead time to sending troops into combat substantially.

He also said he does not favor drafting women or sending them into combat.

Reagan ended by telling the crowd, "Whoever is the next president must deliver this message: no more Taiwans, no more Vietnams and no more betrayal of enemies."

Presidential hopeful amid anticlimatic atmosphere

By ANDREA COHEN

DON WOODS

The press room became quickly silent when Presidential candidate Ronald Reagan finally came in. The flicking of automatic lenses clamored for the perfect shot.

Outside, the high school band was getting ready. Behind the press room, cooks were preparing a $600 per plate dinner.

Inside, the atmosphere was anticlimatic. Reagan, tired and low key, answered the questions mechanically. The press conference, however, seemed to revive him before speaking at the dinner and the rally to follow.

Reporters from major publications who travel with the candidate appeared weary from trying to give their editors something different about Reagan every day.

The cameras clicked, the tedious questions continued. Outside, the room was a steady murmur of noise, but there was an undercurrent of realization that they may be in the presence of the next president of the United States.

The candidate took one more question, then joined wealthy supporters for a brief dinner. The high school band struck up a tune. People with Styrofoam hats began to show. A banner hung behind the podium reading, "Midland Texans for Reagan." Pink, white and blue balloons were attached.

Excitement built as the emcee took the podium. He introduced local hopefuls for the Saturday primary. The local Republican machine was milking the event for all it was worth.

The Reagan introduction finally came. Ernie Angelo, former Midland mayor and state Reagan for President Committee Chairman, reviewed Reagan's achievements, each one followed by applause.

The band struck up again with a percussive rendition of "Dixie." A smiling Reagan appeared again, waving amidst cheers and applause.

His presence excited the Midland audience. Although they had heard the issues, seen the smiles and listened to the accusations before, there was again the intoxicating feeling that they may be in the presence of the future president.

Fund drive starts with hopes of rescuing Halfway House

The Halfway House, a rehabilitation program for people on the way back after having suffered mental problems or emotional distress, has reached a level of such financial anxiety that only a bailout by its friends in the community can save it.

Three members of the seven-person board have resigned in recent days. They are John Bennett, Matt Caperton and Larry Sheppard.

The four remaining members — Doyle Lamb, Marj Thompson, Gloria Esail and Polly Mays — are willing to try and cope with the problems if friends of the program will rally behind them.

It was strongly suggested to the four that the board petition for bankruptcy but each wants the rehabilitation program to be sustained if at all possible.

A total of $15,607 is known to be owed by the agency. There are bank notes outstanding ($2,000.55), insurance, rent, plumbing bills, water bills, food bills and etc.

There are 30 people with whom the Halfway House people are now working. Each has reached a pivotal stage in his or her life. Society stands a chance of losing some of them if the Halfway House is closed.

The Herald is poised to help coordinate the drive for funds, for those who would like to lend assistance. Checks can be made out to the Halfway House Fund and forwarded to the Herald, care Box 1431, Big Spring 79720. Donations in any amount will be accepted.

Time is critical in the drive. According to members of the board, $15,607 will have to be raised in the next ten days or the facility will be shuttered.

The Herald will run a daily list of those who have contributed, in seeking to start a pyramid. The ancient Egyptians built such engineering wonders with forced labor. This one will be constructed through free will offerings.

At least 22 residents of the Big Spring Halfway House are now gainfully employed here for wages ranging from $25 to $225 a week.

Valdeses need invite from Cuba

(Special to The Herald)

KEY WEST, Fla. — A shrimp boat chartered for use by Norma and Lillian Valdes is waiting on an invitation from the Cuban government to sail into Cuban waters where it would offer transportation back to the United States to people trying to flee the island country.

Hopefully, the craft will take aboard at least eight members of the Valdes family, among others. The boat, even after it arrives in Cuba, could be forced to remain there as long as four weeks before it is allowed to take aboard its human cargo.

The boats which do get through are being filled at the whim of the Cuban government and the rules by which the refugees are taken aboard are not always constant.

The money to charter the boat came largely through a $23,000 gift supplied by the board of trustees of the First Methodist Church of Big Spring. According to Jim Baum, manager of radio station KBYG in Big Spring, the Big Spring delegation in Key West has enough money to finance the venture, barring new problems.

Lillian Valdes is the wife of Al Valdes of Big Spring. Both are members of the First United Methodist Church. Norma Valdes, is the wife of Danny Valdes, former Herald photographer. Danny and Norma now reside in Port Everglades, Fla., not far from the heart of downtown Miami.

The demand for boats to transport the refugees has now eased, mainly because of the delays for clearance initiated by the Fidel Castro government.

Those returning to Key West say the Cubans are charging exorbitant prices for food and supplies. For instance, the Cubans are getting $5 for sandwiches and $46 for a small keg of beer.

The average price being charged for passengers returning to America is $1,250. One family reportedly is sending a 17-year-old girl to Cuba, hopeful she can talk her father into leaving Cuba, even though he has since remarried and has expressed a desire not to come.

Richard Pierce, described as the most ethical of the ship managers with which the people are dealing, superintends five shrimp boats, all of which are standing idle at the present time. Attorney John Burgess of Big Spring helped arrange the lease on the boat for the Valdeses through an ex-Webb AFB man, Mike Hagan.

Once the boats arrive in Cuba, they are boarded by members of the Cuban militia for "inspection." Cuban gunboats patrol the harbors where the refugee boats are moored.

The most recent seacraft to return from Cuba had no more than 25 refugees on them, so the situation has eased somewhat — for what reason no one seems to know.

Harry Spannaus, former wing commander at Webb AFB, flew Mrs. Valdes and Baum to Key West and is helping in the negotiations.

The distance between the Key West port and Havana is 110 miles.

Action/reaction: Against the law?

Q. Is it against the law for candidates to stick campaign posters on utility poles?

A. Yes, it is, according to Warrant Officer Melvin Daratt of the local police department. "We don't usually do anything about it because it doesn't happen too often," he said.

Tops on TV: 'Country Music Awards'

It seems like they could have given an award to everyone in the nation with a twangy voice by now, but there's another "Country Music Awards" special on NBC tonight at 8 o'clock. Claude Atkins, Loretta Lynn and Charlie Pride host this one. Of course, the surefire best bet is "Barney Miller," airing at the same time on ABC. Wojo is hypnotized to remember details about a crime, and blurts out some other unsolicited information.

Inside: Grocery bills up

THE FEDERAL TRADE Commission is fresh out of money because Congress, at least temporarily, failed to enact legislation to pay its bills. Similar things have happened in the past, but this time there's a new wrinkle: The attorney general says the agency has no choice but to shut down. See page 12-A.

GROCERY BILLS went up by a full percentage point during April. See page 6-B.

Outside: Rain odds

Slight chance of rain through Friday. No change in temperature. High today and Friday in the mid 70s. Low tonight near 50. Winds will be from the west at 10 to 15 mph today then northerly 5 to 10 mph tonight. Chance of rain is 20 percent today through Friday.

Windfall profits an excise tax, candidate tells media

By STEVE HERSHBERGER
A tired Ronald Reagan used a 10-minute press conference Wednesday in Midland to reacquaint himself with West Texans.

Reagan told reporters the windfall profits tax will hurt oil production in the United States, and he said the independents are hit hardest by the levy on oil profits.

"I think the windfall profits tax is a windfall for the government," Reagan said. "It isn't a profit's tax. It is an excise tax."

Reagan added, "I will be doing my best to eliminate that tax."

Reagan commented the United States is an energy rich nation, but the harnessing of energy has been hampered by government involvement.

The former California governor said that President Carter has not had a consistent foreign policy. Reagan said only in the area of human rights has Carter succeeded, but he added this policy has affected only our allies and not our enemies.

"I think his foreign policy has been in disarray for three years," Reagan added. "Our friends don't know whether to trust us, and our enemies don't respect us."

Reagan took no exception to a recent statement by President Carter, where he said he felt free to leave the Rose Garden.

"That is his decision," Reagan said. "I wonder if he thinks the hostages are free. I just think this is a national disgrace."

Even after these statements, Reagan commented he did support the rescue mission.

TALKING — Ronald Reagan and his wife Nancy shook hands with the crowd that showed up for a rally Wednesday night in Midland. The rally had been preceded by a news conference and a fund-raising dinner.

Big Springers attend Washington for Jesus

Several Big Spring residents were among the 200,000 Christians who gathered in Washington, D.C., Tuesday to pray and ask God to heal our land.

The sense of crisis was echoed repeatedly by speakers who addressed the crowd from a red, white and blue stage in front of Smithsonian Institute.

Among Big Spring residents attending the rally were Mr. and Mrs. Lanny Hamby, the Rev. and Mrs. Phil Thurmond, Miss Zina Wood, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Romaine and Mr. and Mrs. Winston Winkler.

One of the speakers was the Rev. Pat Robertson, founder of the Christian Broadcasting Network, who told his listeners:

"There is trouble on every side, but God is in control. Only God has the answer to our problems."

Dr. Bill Bright, president and founder of Campus Crusade for Christ International, said that the day (of the rally) was the most important in the nation's history apart from its founding.

"We're one, we're one, whether Catholic, Methodist, Lutheran, Presbyterian, Baptist or Pentecostal. We're one," the Rev. John Gimenez, pastor of a church in Virginia Beach, Va., said, after he was introduced to the crowd.

According to Winkler, literally thousands of buses filled the parking lot of RFK Stadium. Those attending the day of prayer then rode the Metro (subway) to the Mall. The crowd eclipsed in numbers the one who gathered in Washington last October for the mass conducted by Pope John Paul II.

Among other speakers was the Rev. Ralph Rogers, president of the Southern Baptist Convention.

The Biblical scripture most often referred to by the organizers of the rally is in Second Chronicles 7:14: "they humble themselves and pray and seek God's face, and turn from their wicked ways, then He will hear from Heaven, and will forgive their sin, and heal their land."

All 50 states and Puerto Rico were represented in the crowd.

One hostage released

LONDON (AP) — Three "Arab power" militants seized the Iranian Embassy on a quiet London back street Wednesday and threatened to kill their 20 hostages unless Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's regime frees 91 political prisoners held in Iran's Arab-populated oil belt.

One hostage was released today. If the Tehran government does not meet their demand by noon Thursday, the gunmen said, they will blow up the building.

Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh replied that the 91 Arab prisoners would be executed if the embassy staff came to any harm, the official Iranian news agency Pars reported.

U.S. kills resolution

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United States cast its 22nd Security Council veto to kill an Arab resolution calling for Palestinian statehood, contending that it offered "no prospect for making practical progress" toward peace in the Middle East.

'Peace group' pays for trip

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The attorney for Barbara Timm paid for her trip to Iran last week to visit her hostage son with money contributed by a "peace group."

Mrs. Timm, mother of Marine Sgt. Kevin Hermining, had previously declined to explain how the trip was financed. But she said in a radio interview that the money came from her lawyer, Carl McAfee of Norton, Va., and a peace group with which he is associated.

McAfee was involved in securing the freedom of other hostages, including U.S. spy plane pilot Francis Gary Powers and the sailors of the USS Pueblo.

$510 million suit filed

NEW YORK (AP) — A $510 million lawsuit has been filed by a Staten Island family against the owners of a condemned New Jersey chemical dump where explosions and fires sent a cloud of acid smoke over the metropolitan New York area last week.

The suit, filed Wednesday, accuses the Chemical Control Corp. of Elizabeth, N.J., and six of its current or former officials with recklessness, carelessness and negligence.

The complaint filed by Patrick McCloskey and his wife and two children seeks $10 million in compensatory and $500 million in punitive damages.

13 prisoners escape

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The 13 prisoners who escaped from the San Francisco jail over the weekend apparently used two pistols smuggled into the facility along with hand-made knives, investigators say.

Meanwhile, police Wednesday surrounded a Mission District residence and captured three more of the prisoners who escaped Sunday in the largest jailbreak in the city's history.

Authorities said five escapes were recaptured earlier, including two apprehended in a raid Monday. The five were ordered held on $1 million bond each pending a May 12 preliminary hearing on charges assault, robbery and escape.

Two rare lions born

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Two rare Asiatic lion cubs have been born by Caesarean section at the New Orleans Zoo, raising to 28 the total number of the cats alive in this country, officials say.

The cubs were born last Wednesday in a litter that included two stillborn cubs. Veterinarians revived them by mouth-to-mouth resuscitation. The mother is reported recovering well.

Police beat Trio suspected in arson case

Officers think that three men set fire to packing crates at the Western Mattress Company, 1909 Gregg, Tuesday night, said Ricky Womack, local arson investigator.

No arrests have been made, but Womack has received information through the city's arson hotline regarding the torching of the company. The fire, which started among a pile of packing crates, caused $2,500 worth of damages to the building and the air conditioning system there.

In addition to setting the blaze, the men are also suspected of hindering firefighters in their efforts to douse the fire, said Womack.

Police responded to a call of "burglary in progress" at the Lakeview YMCA, 1006 N.W. 4th, and arrested two of several juveniles thought to have broken into the building, 6:33 p.m. Wednesday. A male juvenile was nabbed at the scene, and a female juvenile was picked up at her home.

The young intruders are suspected of breaking into the YMCA office and gymnasium, breaking a glass ashtray on the office desk, and stealing a basketball and softball glove. Cost of the incident has not been estimated.

Bonnie Chambers, 2501 Albrook, knows the person who stole her portable band saw, stapler, hammer and a variety of other tools. Cost of the tools was estimated at $140.

Vandals used a slingshot to pelt cars on the United Auto Sales lot, 700 E. 4th, with marbles, sometime Tuesday night. Broken were the headlight and parking light on one car, the headlight on another and the windshield on a third car. Damage was estimated at $275.

Cynthia Castaneda, 311 Edwards, knows who stole her gold and silver belt buckle, while she was at 600 Aylford, over the weekend. The buckle was valued at $100.

A patrolling officer spotted a broken window at the First Presbyterian Church, 701 Runnels, and two subjects running away from the church, Wednesday night. The burglars got away, but not before stealing a watch and chain and an eight-track tape deck from the place of worship. Cost of the items has not been estimated. A burglar stole a five-inch hunting knife and 20 silver dollars, and broke a screen at the home of Tommy Young, 1404 Aylford, Tuesday night. Loss was estimated at $75.

James Hayes, 1002 N. Main, told police that a man walked up to him near his residence, stabbed him with a piece of glass, and then fled with two other men, 7 p.m. Wednesday. Officers will investigate further today.

Vandals broke the glass in a window and a door at the home of Ygnacio Escanuelas, 705 S. Douglas, Tuesday night. Damage was estimated at $50.

Vandals also broke out the screens in a rear door and window at the home of Rendie Mae Jackson, 902 N. Gregg, early Wednesday morning. Cost of the damage is estimated at $5.

Vehicles driven by Darrell W. Davis, Snyder, and Velma H. Helm, 906 W. 4th, collided at 400 S. Gregg, 3:26 p.m. Wednesday.

Vehicles driven by Francis Calhoun, 2100 Johnson, and Venice Calhoun, Box 1703, collided at 400 Runnels, 11 a.m. Tuesday.

Diaz arrested beneath bed

He was charged in the office of Justice of the Peace Lewis Heflin with assault of Mary Helen Lopez. Also charged is Rafael Lopez, 508 N.W. 8th. They allegedly threatened her with a knife. The charge was filed April 23.

Quernheim hit with assault rap

Klaus Hugo Quernheim, Gail Route, was arrested on a charge of aggravated assault of Brenda Quernheim Saturday. He was transferred to county jail Wednesday.

He is charged with hitting her with a wooden stick Friday. He was charged in the office of Justice of the Peace Bobby West.

Attend convention Saturday Here's your big chance to become 'political boss'

By WALT FINLEY
You say you would like to be a powerful politician.

You say you would like to have a personal say in how your political party operates this presidential election year.

You say you would like to beat the heck out of that hated person laughingly called a "statesman."

Step right up. I'm gonna tell you what I'm gonna do. I'm going to tell you how to get started.

You should attend precinct conventions Saturday night after the polls close. The neighborhood gatherings are the last chance for a person to have a direct vote in party affairs, unless he or she is one of the few delegates to county, state, or national conventions.

The precinct convention not only involves the selection of a presidential nominee, particularly in the Democratic Party, but also the stand the party will take on public platform issues.

Resolutions passed in precinct conventions indicate public opinion on issues in which the politicians should be interested.

Much of the clout of the Republican precinct meetings has been removed this year because selection of delegates to choose a presidential nominee will be

Jesse Curry is injured in Tyler

Jesse Packard Curry, probationer convicted of slaying his mother, Lillian, sustained injuries in motorcycle-car accident in Tyler Sunday.

Curry is in Tyler's Medical Center Hospital intensive care unit in critical condition with head and spinal injuries, according to a hospital spokesman.

Curry was struck by a car driven by another 18-year-old while riding a motorcycle. Cornelia Hood, admitting supervisor at the hospital, said Curry was admitted with "multiple trauma." "Trauma patients receive priority," she said.

The accident occurred at 4:39 p.m. when a 1970 Plymouth station wagon driven by Ricky Shelton, Tyler, pulled out of a service station and struck Curry. Sgt. John Hitt, Tyler Police Department, said charges against Shelton will be determined by whether or not Curry survives.

Curry shot his mother with a shotgun June 17, 1979 at their home at 2715 Central in Big Spring.

Lamesa banker is retiring

LAMESA — B.P. Middleton, vice president of the Lamesa National Bank, is retiring after 36 years of service to the bank.

A reception will be held in his honor from 1 to 3 p.m., Friday at the bank.

Middleton moved here from Merkel with his wife in 1936. He helped his father in farming before he entered the banking business.

Working oil rigs at 946

The number of working oil rigs in the state rose by 11 this week.

As of Monday, 946 rigs were making hole, compared to 935 the previous week. This tops both the 938 total of a month ago, and the 893 total for this time last year.

The national total also rose. As of Monday, 2,748 rigs were making hole across the country, compared to 2,682 last week.

This also tops the 2,659 total of a month ago, and the 1,934 total for this time last year.

For the record

The names of four sponsors of Special Olympics athletes were inadvertently left out of Mike Cowley's letter to the editor in the Herald's Mailbag Tuesday. Kentwood P.T.A., Tate Plumbing Company, Big Spring Citizens and Bogart's are also recipients of a big "Thank You" from the Howard County Association for Retarded Citizens.

based on the May 3 preference poll, not decisions made in conventions.

However, GOP precincts will consider resolutions and other party matters.

The Democratic precinct meetings are all-important as the first step in choosing the Democratic presidential nominee. The presidential preference poll held by Democrats May 3 is merely a "beauty contest," with the final decision left to state convention delegates.

When Democratic precincts convene at 7:15 p.m. Saturday, or later if there is still a voters' line, the first action will be for each person attending to sign in, according to his or her presidential preference.

Any presidential candidate getting 15 percent or more support at the precinct gets his share of delegates to the county conventions.

At the county level, there is another sign-in to determine division of the 3,000 delegates to the state Democratic convention in San Antonio, June 20-21.

A final sign-in at San Antonio decides how Texas' delegates will vote on a presidential nominee at the New York national convention.

Under Democratic rules, one third of the delegates from a precinct to the county or senatorial district convention must be of the opposite sex from the rest of the delegation.

After selection of delegates, there may be a quick vote for adjournment in some precincts with no more action. In other precincts, the arguments over resolutions is likely to go on and on.

State headquarters for the Democratic and Republican parties say they have recommended no statewide resolutions to the precincts, but this does not mean that local issues will not spark plenty of controversy.

Sixteen candidates spoke to a standing-room-only crowd at the public forum sponsored by voice of the electorate in the County Courtroom Monday night.

State Representative candidates Larry Shaw and incumbent Mike Ezell participated, as did county commissioner Bill Crocker, the lone Republican candidate, along with candidates for all other offices open in the May 3 primaries.

Moderator Pat Githens ferried questions to the candidates and written questions from the audience kept the forum going strong until 10 p.m. according to Tina Arguello, VOTE reporter.

The voters apparently are going to have to choose between a peanut farmer and an actor for president, and I wonder what our forefathers would have thought about that. Probably not much.

The majority of our former presidents were lawyers but the voters had to get used to some occupations, or lack thereof, of candidates that didn't seem too presidential.

John Quincy Adams more or less fell into the presidency on the strength of his father having been the second president. Filmore was a fuller (it's a good thing for him his opposition didn't have an ad agency) and dyer, teacher and postmaster (even back then, you had to moonlight); and Harry Truman was a haberdasher (if he hadn't been president, his biography would have said he worked in a men's clothing store. Of course if he hadn't been president he wouldn't have a biography).

Three of our ex-presidents were newspapermen. Before he sold shirts, Truman worked for the Kansas City Star and John F. Kennedy was employed by International News Services (I worked for the Associated Press at the state capitol at Jefferson City, Mo., and it was funny but they got better assignments than I did).

Warren Harding also was a reporter for an Ohio newspaper which he later bought for $300.

Thomas Jefferson's biography said he "read Greek and Latin classics and played the violin."

I don't know what this proves except maybe to demonstrate we've made a little progress.

Today, Amy plays the violin and her dad fiddles around.

Weather

More of the same for Texans today

By the Associated Press
Another rainy, stormy day was forecast for most of Texas today with scattered showers and thunderstorms forecast statewide.

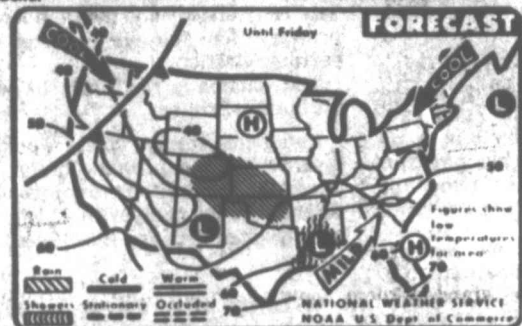

Highs were to be mostly in the 70s and 80s with extremes ranging from the 60s in the Panhandle to near 90 along the Rio Grande.

Scattered showers and a few thunderstorms were reported during the night over the Panhandle and portions of Central Texas and Southwest Texas.

Rainfall amounts were light during the night. Waco had .18 of an inch and Dalhart at .14. Several areas reported slightly more than a trace of rain.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 50s and 60s. Extremes ranged from 47 at both Dalhart and Amarillo to 75 at Brownsville.

WEATHER FORECAST — Rain is expected in the forecast period, today until Friday morning, for the central and southern Plains. Showers are expected for the central Gulf. Cool weather is forecast for the Northwest and Northeast. Most of the nation will have mild weather.

Agricultural commodities price at farms continues to slide

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prices of agricultural commodities at the farm have continued to slide, including substantial declines for livestock and grain.

The Agriculture Department said Wednesday that preliminary figures for April show the index of farm prices dropped 4.5 percent from March, the third month in a row prices averaged below year-earlier levels.

Officials said the decline helped depress the "parity ratio" to a 47-year low.

Lower prices for cattle, calves, hogs, soybeans, wheat and corn contributed most to the decline from the March average.

Higher prices were reported for lettuce, soy, cucumbers, apples, tomatoes and onions, which helped offset declines for the other commodities.

Compared to a year earlier, the April farm price index was down 9 percent. In February, prices began to slide below year-earlier levels for the first time in more than two years.

Meanwhile, prices farmers pay to meet expenses were unchanged in April, but still averaged 11 percent higher than a year ago.

According to the preliminary April figures, prices of meat animals dropped 8 percent during the month. That left the index of prices for livestock, mainly cattle and hogs, 21 percent below a year ago.

Department economists are predicting retail food prices will rise by 8 percent to 9 percent in 1980, but add that the actual increase could range between 7 percent and 11 percent, depending on inflation, weather and what happens to food supplies in foreign countries.

On average, retail food prices rose 10.9 percent in 1979, the largest annual increase in five years.

Economists do not consider changes in the farm price index for a single month to be reliable indicators of future trends at grocery stores. For example, in 1979 farm prices increased in six months, dropped in four and remained unchanged in two.

So far in 1980, they declined slightly in January, edged up in February, dropped in March and, according to the preliminary figures, continued declining in April.

More than 80 cents of each food dollar spent by consumers goes toward paying middleman expenses for transporting, processing and merchandizing food after it leaves the farm.

Farm prices in March averaged 234 percent of a 1967 base price average used for comparison. The index was 238 percent in February.

The April parity ratio for farm commodities was 60 percent, compared to 63 percent in March. In April 1979, it was 73 percent.

According to department records, the April parity ratio was the lowest since the 54 percent of April 1933.

At 100 percent, the indicator would mean, theoretically, that farmers have the same buying power they had in 1910-14.

For example, the average actual price of wheat in April — according to the mid-month reading — was $3.40 a bushel. That was 53 percent of the April parity price for wheat of $6.43 a bushel.

Why is it always open season on presidents?

It's always open season on the President. Members of the news media get a chief executive in their gun sights and open up, knowing full well that their charges, even if made recklessly, are rarely answered. The most visible job in the world is also the most vulnerable.

A Texas newspaper, celebrated for its conservative stance, recently labeled Jimmy Carter "the least competent, least successful president in 60 years, if not longer."

That's a rare distinction and we hope Mr. Carter does not wear the dunce cap lightly. Sixty years would take Carter back a long time — back to Woodrow Wilson's time. By the time Wilson finished his first term, he was being put right up there with the Lincolns and the Washingtons. The trouble with Wilson was, he hung around too long. The press began to hound him during his second term and he all but came unhinged. Surrogates wound up running the country.

Calvin Coolidge, who came along after Wilson, was never regarded as a Plato. Because he didn't like idle prattle, Coolidge was often painted as a Simple Simon who couldn't find his way to his office.

The scandals that accompanied the Warren G. Harding administration intrigued the news people a lot more than the capabilities of the chief executive himself. Actually, Harding's weaknesses of the flesh betrayed him and he surrounded himself with a platoon of rascals who did him in. John Kennedy was a charismatic individual, especially to the ladies, but even the historians who champion his cause admit he was able to accomplish little in the way of upgrading mankind. Had he finished out his term, he likely would have gone down as a heavy loser, albeit a charming loser.

Of Gerald Ford, Lyndon Johnson was once prone to say that the president-to-be had played too many football games without his helmet. Mr. Ford is a very appealing man but he moved along in political circles more because he was a messenger for statesmen with weightier thoughts than because he set an example by doing.

After all, what has Carter done? He has taken on Big Oil and has the bruises to show it. He has tried to be civil to an Iranian religious man who thinks all Christians are infidels and who prefers to live in the Fourth Century. And he tried to cut the bureaucracies down to size, when nothing but a blood-letting insurrection would neutralize that awesome ogre.

Carter's administration is in a shambles, admittedly, but the judgment of his contemporaries will not shape his final image in history. A hundred years sometimes passes before the scholars can get a true reading on his contributions. Maybe that is as it should be.

System at fault

Around the rim

Steve Hershberger

Something has to be done. As many as 1,000 Howard County voters could be disenfranchised in Saturday's primary. These voters in effect will lose their ballot power if they participate in the Republican primary, for it is in the Democratic contest that political partakers will select outright the next sheriff, one county commissioner and the 63rd state representative. The Republicans are not fielding any opposition in November to these races.

The Republican primary, although attractive with the battle between George Bush and Ronald Reagan, gives the voter nothing concrete. Saturday's GOP victory is not guaranteed to garner his party's nomination.

THE PROBLEM LIES in the Texas primary system. According to the Texas Election Code, the state conducts a "closed primary" with no party-party rule requiring partisan identification at the time of registration.

Texas primary laws are lenient, though. A voter may participate in a primary of his choice without party identification. The voter may not vote in more than one primary.

The drawback to this system is that it is contrary to recent developments in Texas politics. Much of Texas is still dominated on the county and state house levels by the "Democrat" label — even though substantial strides toward a two-party state have been made in recent years.

In presidential politics, Texans are as likely to favor a Republican as they are a Democrat, much depending on the candidates' ideologies and backgrounds.

Voters have in the state, likewise, opened the doors to the governor's mansion. Bill Clements proved in 1978 that a Republican can win the supposed top spot in the Texas political system.

Nevertheless, a duality exists in the state. To prove this point take Howard County. In 1972, 264 voters went to the GOP polls. In 1974, 271 voted in the Republican primary.

In 1978, then President Gerald Ford was battling former California governor Ronald Reagan for the Republican nomination. A total of 1,501 voted in the Republican primary that had locally only an incumbent county commission, Bill Crocker, running unopposed.

This jump of over 1200 voters came in the face of contested races on the local and state levels. The difference of 1,000 of those 1,200 voting one way could have meant that James W. Gregg, not Rick Hamby would be the 118th District Attorney; Helen Eggleston would be the Howard County Tax Assessor-Collector instead of Zarah Bednar; and Lee Young, not Bob Smith, the Constable in Precinct No. 1.

What this means is that over 1200 people did not have a say in who would be prosecuting criminal cases in the 118th Judicial District or who would be implementing county and state policy in collecting taxes within the county.

Where this crossover could be most significant this year is in the race for state representative between Howard County native Larry Don Shaw and Mike Ezzell of Snyder. A 2,000 vote turnout in the 63rd District in the Republican primary could be the margin that denies Ezzell a fourth term and sends Shaw to Austin representing the six-county district.

The principle of this political phenomenon is disturbing, the voice of 2,000 voters denied by the primary system. The causations of this possible abnegation is the lackluster Democratic presidential primary between President Jimmy Carter and Sen. Ted Kennedy and the Democratic primary for too long being the deciding election.

The solution is for Texas to adopt the blanket primary.

Under this set up, voters would be given the same primary ballot. On this ballot are printed the names of all candidates, the party with which they are affiliated with and the offices they seek.

VOTERS ARE FREE to range across party lines, marking their ballots for the candidates of their choice, though they may not vote for more than one candidate for the same office.

In other words, a voter could — if this system would in effect now — cast his ballot for either Reagan or Bush for president, and then vote in the Democratic primary contests.

In county, state and congressional elections with candidates from both parties, the top vote gatherers of each party would be the nominees in November.

Two states, Alaska and Washington, employ this method of selecting party nominees.

The blanket primary has the potential to transform the Texas presidential primary from even its present national importance. With the state becoming reflective of the national sociopolitical environment, the Texas primary would surely become a staging ground for the November presidential election.

It would be in a sense a small, national direct primary for the presidential race.

Opponents to this type of primary would argue such a system would hinder the development of two parties in the state, reinforcing the traditional Democratic courthouse.

Contrary to this notion, the exposure candidates would be given before the voters would tend to encourage Republicans to run for state and county offices.

The bonds of party loyalty in Texas have always been quite loose. The 64th Legislature found in 1975 that Texans are not particularly fond of a party purity law.

The blanket primary is suited to an electorate — like Texas' — recently of any legal test to identify party identification.

Successful woman

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON — As someone who finds TV commercials far more interesting than the programs wedged between them, I have noticed more and more advertisements are aimed at the "successful woman." If you believe the ads, which I do, the successful woman has many more things to do before she can achieve the upward mobility we are all striving for.

In bygone years a woman's success depended on what kind of wax she put on her kitchen floor or brand of detergent she used to wash her husband's shirts. She was judged on the soup she served her kids for lunch, and how many cavities her child had when he came home from school.

BUT AS MORE and more women entered the business world, the people charged with selling products had to switch gears and aim their commercials at the female population, which was trying to reach the top of the ladder in the executive suite.

The new message was that in order to be a successful woman you had to be fresh and neat at all times. You had to use the right facial cleanser before you retired to bed at night, and the seams of your stockings always had to be straight.

The successful woman is not only judged on her performance as a businesswoman, but whether she is using the correct pain reliever when the pressure gets too much.

She'll never make it in a man's world unless she buys a certain bath oil or rubs her hands with a reliable hand lotion. And, of course, she must watch her figure at all times. This means taking plenty of vitamins and minerals and wearing the right girdle to keep the bulges from showing up in the wrong places.

According to the TV commercials, the ultimate in success for a businesswoman is her ability to choose the correct wine to serve for a romantic evening after a grueling day.

How do I know this?

My favorite commercial, which is getting a big play on television these days, shows a man and a woman in a luxurious suite at the Waldorf Astoria. He's in a tuxedo, and she's in a very chic black evening gown with long pearls, talking to her London office telling them she will fly over in the morning and straighten out the problem, whatever it is. As she's talking on the phone, the man takes a bottle of wine out of a bucket, and pours her a glass, which she acknowledges with a nod, and continues her business on the phone. The message is that this is the wine all successful women prefer, even if they have to speak to London late at night.

Unfortunately, since TV commercials are so expensive, we never see what occurs after the woman gets off the phone.

SINCE YOU GET the feeling from the setting that the couple isn't married, you wonder what will happen next.

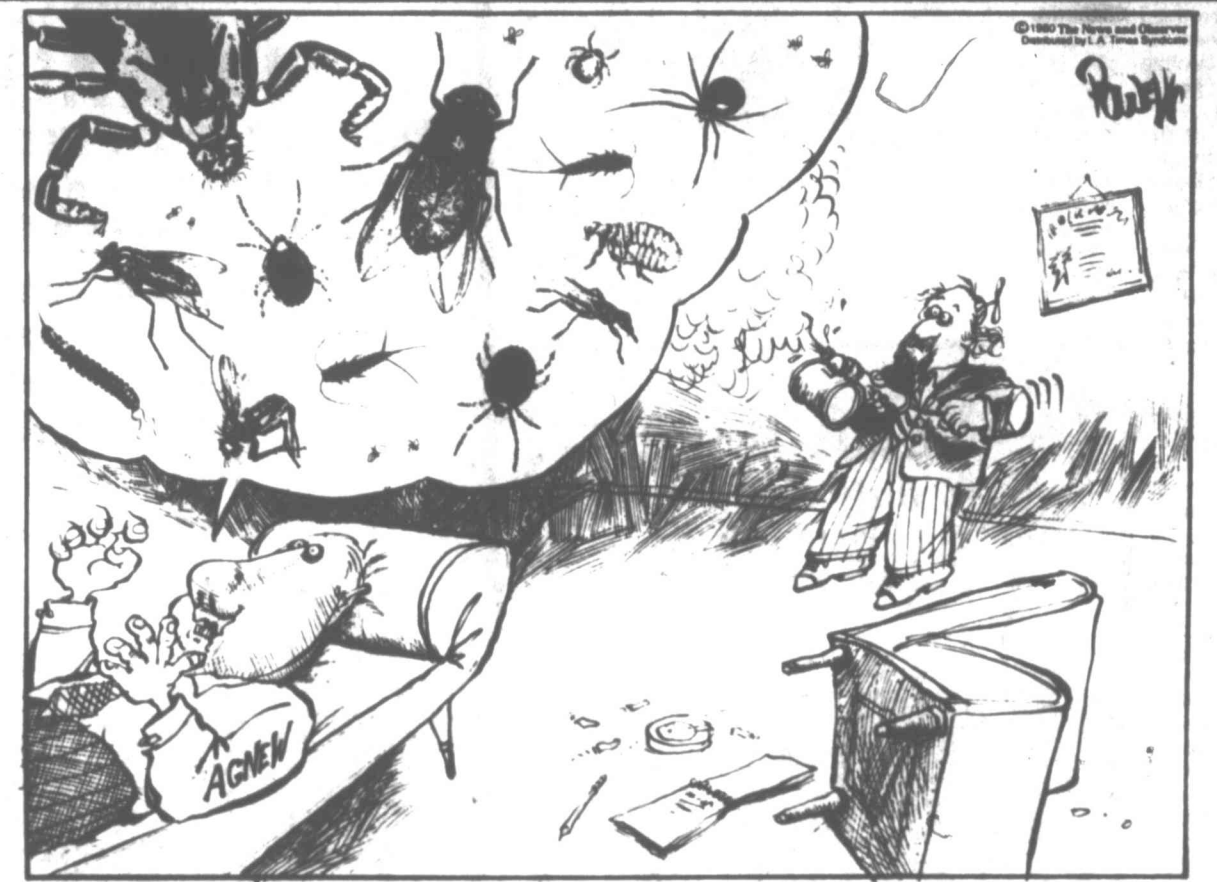

I can only believe it ends like this: "You look beautiful in that evening dress," the man says as he kisses her earlobe.

"Darling, pour me another glass of wine while I call Tokyo."

"Forget about Tokyo. The night is young and we're in this beautiful $300 suite, which only successful women like you can afford." He kisses her on the neck.

"Stop that. I have to call Carstairs in Tokyo before the market closes to tell him that Winthrop is going to pull a fast one in Geneva, unless we get to Goldfarb in Hong Kong first."

"But what about us, and the wonderful things we planned to do after dinner? What about the delicious wine you ordered?" "Put it in my briefcase. I'll drink it on the way to the airport tonight."

Vitamins won't build body

Paul G. Donohue, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: My 19-year-old son is doing body building that requires weightlifting and taking of vitamins. Presently, he is taking six different types of vitamins daily. I am worried about his intake of vitamins and told him this might injure his health. He claims all body-building persons take them. Please give us your opinion. Attached is a list of his vitamins. — M.W.

The six different vitamins your son is taking in the amounts he is taking them will not harm him. It is my opinion that they will not help him toward his body-beautiful goals. I am fairly sure that neither you nor I will convince him of that, though.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Exactly what is menopause and why, for heaven's sake, do they call it the "change of life"? — Mrs. J.R.F.

It means the end of ovulation and hence the end of childbearing for the woman. I haven't any idea why somebody decided to call it the "change of life."

It certainly marks a dramatic landmark in a woman's life, but unfortunately the "change of life" phase has caused a lot of misapprehension and anxiety in women facing this perfectly natural event.

For sure, some women do experience some quite unpleasant episodes — flushing, nervousness, irregular periods, etc. In general, menopause comes between the ages of 45 and 50. Some women reach it earlier, some later.

Nature seems to choose for each woman a time at which she will stop bearing children. I get many, many questions dealing with menopause. A leading booklet request, in fact, is for the one dealing with the subject. If you have specific questions about your menopause, write me. You may find the booklet, "Make Menopause Easier," informative. For a copy, send 50 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to me care of the Big Spring Herald.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I have a problem. I am too embarrassed to ask a doctor about it in person unless I can be sure it is serious. I am 39 and the father of three. I have had a normal sex life. For the three years (since having a vasectomy) I have had pain during the ejaculation part of intercourse. The pain seems to run just behind the testicles and toward the rectum and it usually lasts a few minutes. Can you tell me if this is serious and if I should be examined? — J.M.

Vasectomies (tying off or severing the sperm tube) can at times lead to small, benign growths called sperm granulomas. They can be painful. Yes, you should talk to your doctor and explain your symptoms. It is nothing to be embarrassed about. If it is a granuloma it can be removed.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am a diabetic. Recently I was given a urine test and it showed my urine contained alcohol. I have not been drinking, but no one believes me. Can high sugar content be mistaken for alcohol in the urine? You can restore my credibility. — C.T.

I am having a hard time believing that your urine was tested specifically for alcohol. That is not a routine test.

Less than 10 percent of the alcohol is voided in urine as such. Most alcohol testing, therefore, is done through blood specimens. Usually urine tests for diabetes are for sugar and ketones (certain acids), for as you know an uncontrolled diabetic state produces both in urine.

A very low blood sugar along with alcohol can produce ketones in urine. Also, a very low carbohydrate-high protein diet produces ketones that can be detected in the urine.

It is possible that because there were ketones in your urine the implication was made that you had been drinking. If it gives you any discomfort, C.T., I believe you when you say you weren't.

Dear Dr. Donohue: We are acquainted with a couple who are the "kissing kind." Now I am worried because one of the couple has cancer of the lymph glands. I am afraid this may be passed on to me and to others. Can you give me assurance that is not so. — M.B.F.

The odds of "catching" cancer from a kiss, juicy or otherwise, are zilch.

What can vitamins really do for you — and what can't they do? In his new booklet, Dr. Paul Donohue separates the common sense from the nonsense about this controversial health aid. For your copy of "Vitamins: Facts You Need to Know," send 50 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Donohue in care of the Big Spring Herald.

Hemorrhoids can be cured! If troubled with this or other rectal problems, write to Dr. Donohue, in care of the Big Spring Herald, for a copy of his booklet, "The Real Cure for Hemorrhoids." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 35 cents.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

My answer

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I try to ask God to forgive me for the sins I commit every day, but how do I know whether or not I really remember all of them? I'm afraid I might forget some, and I would then not be saved and go to heaven. — Mrs. P.J.G.

DEAR MRS. P.J.G.: It is good for us to be aware of sins in our lives and bring them to God for cleansing and forgiveness at once. Sin is serious in the eyes of God and we must not tolerate it or take a light view of it.

I am concerned, however, that you may have not understood what the foundation or basis of your salvation really is. We are not saved because we are sinless, or because we have confessed every sin we have ever committed to God. There may, in fact, be sins in our lives of which we are totally unaware until the Holy Spirit points them out to us and convinces us of their seriousness. (I think this is particularly true with sins which are not outwardly obvious, such as wrong motives or attitudes.)

The only basis for our salvation is what Jesus Christ did for us on the cross. God is holy and just, and because He is completely just, sin must be punished. This is the wonderful truth about the cross. On the cross, Jesus Christ (God's Son) took the punishment upon Himself that you and I deserved. Sin was punished, but God Himself took the punishment! Think of a judge who pronounced you guilty for some violation of the law and ordered you to pay a fine — and then stepped down from the judge's bench and paid the fine himself. This is what God did for us in Christ. "God presented him (Christ) as a sacrifice of atonement, through faith in his blood... to demonstrate his justice at the present time, so as to be just and the one who justifies the man who has faith in Jesus" (Romans 3:25, 26).

Trust Christ for your salvation — and Christ alone. He alone is able to save you, and He will if you commit your life to Him in faith.

Big Spring Herald

Mailbag

Dear Editor: Thanks to the Eagle Forum I am looking for a Larry Shaw bumper sticker.

Larry was probably my choice anyway since I was not impressed with Mike Ezzell's legislation exempting people over age 65 from jury duty. I know people over age 65 who are more capable of rendering a fair and honest verdict in any case than the judges are to hear it or the lawyers to argue it.

The deciding issue was the governor's wire tapping bill or the "State Snooper Act." I realize this bill is being sold with a view of fighting crime, but what is to keep it from being used on private citizens under the guise of "reasonable suspicion"? Do we really trust the state government that much? Criminals are knowledgeable in the area of electronic surveillance but the average citizen isn't. He has no defense in the event a state agency wants to pry and snoop, as a matter of fact that state can even manufacture a charge with this kind of raw power.

Amendment IV of the U.S. Constitution states, "The enumeration of the Constitution of certain rights shall not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people." One of the rights not enumerated is our right to privacy; a right so fundamental it did not have to be written down. It is retained by the people. It does not belong to Ezzell to legislate.

Justice Brandeis said, "The greatest dangers to liberty lurk in insidious encroachments by men of zeal, well meaning, but without understanding." Morris Smith 207 East 2nd

Dear Editor: City Manager Don Davis may have laughingly referred to the officers of our police department as a "GOON SQUAD," but, I for one, do not see any humor in his description.

According to my Webster's Encyclopedic Dictionary: GOON — "Stupid, silly, or unattractive person; a hoodlum, esp. one employed to intimidate opponents in a labor dispute. A person who is awkward and grotesque." I have had the pleasure of meeting and associating with many of the City, County and State law enforcement officers and I have yet to meet one that fits the definition of a Goon as referred to by the city manager.

If this is all the city manager can think to call the persons hired to enforce the laws of the city, county, and state, then he is in the wrong position as far as the affairs of the city is involved. His position should be one of complete support for their efforts rather than ridicule through unbecoming names. No wonder the officers have a time gaining respect when the city administration gives them the publicity that they received on the front page of the Herald today, April 28.

I feel that an apology is due from the city manager to the force for his poor choice of words. By his own admission, they were directed to do what they did under his decision, not theirs. I am certain that a great many property owners and tenants, who have been cleaning up their property each day, feel that it was about time to enforce the trespass laws. So as a result of doing their job and what they were directed to do, they were given the title of Goons. A bit unfair in my way of thinking.

The one thing our police officers do not need is publicity sanctioned by Davis, laughingly or not, that is derogatory. They have enough to put up with without it being started from the people that are responsible for most of the decisions that bring them a lot of flak.

Dallas 'lipstick murder' case in grand jury

DALLAS (AP) — The murder case against a television repairman charged in the so-called "lipstick murder" is to be sent to a Dallas County grand jury.

Justice of the Peace Pat McDowell made the ruling Wednesday following an examining trial for Donald Wayne Hemphill, who is accused in the strangulation death of Debra Martinson.

McDowell also refused to lower Hemphill's $500,000 bond.

Mrs. Martinson's nude body was found in her fashionable north Dallas home March 31. Authorities said she had been strangled with a macrame plant hanger.

Someone had written "Now we are even Don" in lipstick on a mirror in the bedroom where the body was found. The victim's husband, Don Martinson, was a Dallas

Larry Fisher, a headmaster writing expert from the Dallas County Forensic Science Laboratory, testified that there were similarities between Hemphill's writing and the writing on the mirror.

Prosecutors also introduced evidence that Hemphill's blood type matches the semen found in Mrs. Martinson's mouth.

McDowell said that although the evidence concerning the handwriting and semen was not conclusive it "at least does not exclude the defendant as a suspect."

In addition to the technical testimony, prosecutors also presented testimony from a young girl who lived near the Martinson family who said she saw Hemphill in the area the day of the slaying.

Jody Fried, 12, a neighbor of the Martinsons, testified Wednesday that she and some friends saw Hemphill several times on the morning of the slaying.

Jody told assistant District Attorney Kelly Loving she saw Hemphill four times between 9 a.m. and 10:30 a.m. and that he was wearing a white patch over one eye.

He started running away, she said, when she came within six feet of him on her way to a nearby soccer field.

After Loving asked Jody to identify Hemphill, he brought her down off the witness stand and asked her to stand directly in front of Hemphill.

"He won't bite you," Loving said. "Look at him good. Do you have any questions?"

"No," she replied, pointing at Hemphill.

Hemphill's wife gasped and began shaking as her husband was identified.

Under cross-examination, Jody said Loving had told her where Hemphill would be sitting during the trial. She admitted that when she was shown photographs of six men she could not say which was the one she had seen outside the Martinson home.

Chagra given five years for offense

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Jamiel A. "Jimmy" Chagra, already sentenced to 30 years in prison on a continuing criminal enterprise conviction, has been assessed a five-year prison term for jumping bail.

U.S. District Judge Harry Lee Hudspeth, who denied defense motions Wednesday to acquit Chagra on a technicality, said the five-year term could run concurrently with the earlier sentence.

Chagra was convicted two weeks ago of jumping bail. However, defense lawyer Oscar Goodman contended the bail Chagra was accused of jumping did not exist because it had been revoked on Aug. 21, two days before Chagra failed to show for a scheduled court appearance.

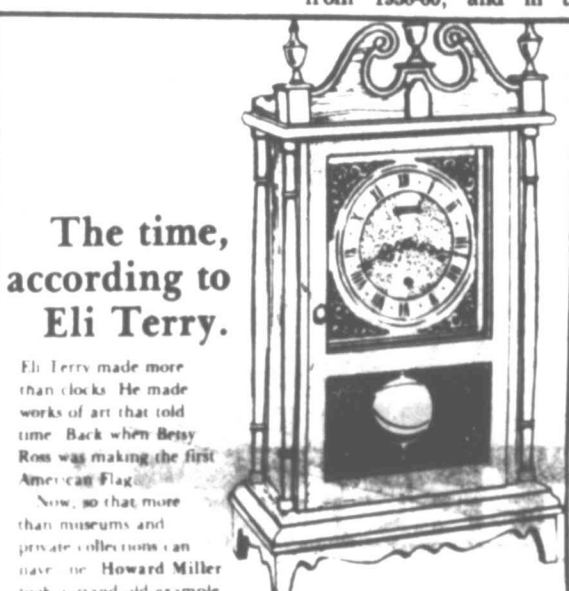

Goodman said when Chagra failed to meet with federal probation officers, his original bail was revoked and a new bond was set at $3 million.

Goodman argued that Chagra could not be in violation of a non-existent bond.

Chagra disappeared last August after he was convicted in Austin, Texas, on federal drug charges. Federal agents arrested him Feb. 21 at Las Vegas, Nev.

The criminal enterprise conviction arose from a scheme involving large amounts of marijuana and cocaine smuggled from South America into the United States.

Chagra will remain at La Tuna Federal Correctional Institution until federal prison officials decide where he will spend his term.

The time, according to Eli Terry.

Eli Terry made more than clocks. He made works of art that told time. Back when Betsy Ross was making the first American flag, Eli Terry was making the first American clock.

Now, so that more than museums and private collectors can have one Howard Miller took a grand old example of his exquisite craftsmanship and recreated it. Then they added Europe's three most beautiful cathedral chimes. Westminster. St. Michael. Whittington.

Haven't done much to merit publicity

Republicans for RRC 'quiet'

By JACKIE CALMES
Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — Of the eight candidates for the Texas Railroad Commission in Saturday's primary elections, only half — the Democratic half — have received much publicity.

But the four Republicans haven't done much to merit any.

For H.J. "Doc" Blanchard, the notisibility campaign is understandable. The former state senator from Lubbock has no opponent in the primary.

Of the three Republicans in a second commission race — former state Sen. Henry C. "Hank" Grover of Houston, Weatherford car dealer E.W. "Eddie" Kidd and Austin retiree John Thomas Henderson — only Henderson is campaigning.

Blanchard will face either Jim Hightower or incumbent Jim Nugent in the November election for a two-year term. The other Republican winner will oppose the Democratic victor, either state Rep. Buddy Temple of Daboll or commission chairman John Poerner, for a six-year term.

Doc Blanchard, an Austin attorney, says whether his November opponent is populist Hightower or conservative Nugent, "I'm going to win this race."

If he does, he'll be the first Republican in the commission's 80-year history.

As a Democrat, Blanchard represented a Lubbock district in the Texas House from 1956-60, and in the Texas Senate from 1962-74. He converted to Republicanism soon after losing a 1974 campaign for Congress, he says.

Blanchard says his comeback attempt is motivated by desire to fill a leadership void at the commission. Commissioners should be more skeptical of industry figures for prices and reserve stocks, and of gas utilities' requests for rate increases; push for development of alternate energy sources, and lobby in Washington, D.C., particularly to limit railroads' requests for higher freight-hauling charges, he says.

Blanchard vehemently denies speculation that he is industry's fall-guy candidate; that he will campaign seriously only if Hightower, who is anathema to industry, defeats Nugent and otherwise will quietly allow Nugent to win by default.

"I'd rather die and go to hell than consent to anything like that," he says.

Blanchard says he doesn't expect help from persons in regulated industries unless Hightower is his opponent.

He also says the Republican Party has not offered assistance, even though state party chairman Chester Upham of Mineral Wells recruited Blanchard after hearing grapevine reports that Blanchard wanted to run. Upham says he was acting more as president of Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association than as GOP head.

The oilman says of Blanchard, "He has an objective way of looking at the industry."

Hank Grover was not recruited, and Upham admits he shared most Capitol observers' surprise last February at Grover's last-minute filing.

Since then, Upham has embraced the maverick Republican. "Personally, I was delighted," he says, adding that with Blanchard and Grover, Republicans have their strongest commission candidates ever.

Grover is relying on name recognition leftover from past political exploits to be victorious Saturday.

In the 1972 governor's race, he nearly defeated Dolph Briscoe despite what he complained was Republicans' non-support. He declared immediately for the 1974 election but soon aborted the campaign, indebted and embittered with "bluestocking, country club Republicans."

Subsequent business dealings, particularly in coal brokering, restored Grover's financial health.

Let Alpha Tau Rho do the cooking

By ROBBIE CROW

Spring is here! And with the arrival of this season comes the added activities of jogging, racquetball and swimming.

With these added activities come increased appetites, but who wants to spend these sunny days in the house slaving over a hot stove or an even hotter oven?

Maybe you won't have to. In fact, the members of Coahoma's only Beta Sigma Phi sorority, Alpha Tau Rho have done the baking for you.

Delicious assortments of cakes, pies and other snacks will be sold by this chapter Saturday beginning at 9 a.m.

But that's not all. Alpha Tau Rho has even gone one step farther. They have spent the last two months making unique and creative handicrafts to be sold at this fund-raising project.

All types of decorative items, from macramé to dough art, will be sold to the early birds who visit this sale which will be held in front of the Coahoma Post Office and old bank building. Items are expected to go fast.

This is one of many Ways and Means projects taken on by the fairly new sorority. Chairman is Glyn Drewery.

In the fall, the group held a Halloween Carnival, raising $300 for the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation. Alpha Tau Rho also contributes to the Coahoma Livestock Show and the St. Jude's Children's Hospital.

Another Halloween Carnival is being planned for next fall.

Present officers of this Beta Sigma Phi chapter are Jayne Titworth, president; Kathy Nichols, vice president; Sheri Lepard, recording secretary; Pat Winters, corresponding secretary; and Jo Anne Ezell, treasurer.

Mrs. Ezell is also responsible for organizing the chapter.

As all Beta Sigma Phi sororities, Alpha Tau Rho is a social, cultural and service organization.

Anyone interested in becoming a member of Alpha Tau Rho or anyone wishing more information concerning the bake and craft sale should contact Mrs. Ezell, 394-4821 or Mrs. Titworth, 394-4301.

Below are a number of recipes shared by members of the sorority. Many are those that will be sold at the sale.

Quench the added hunger in the spring brought on by the increased activity with no mess or fuss in the kitchen. Alpha Tau Rho has already done it for you.

In case of bad weather, the sale will be held in the parking shed behind the old Coahoma bank.

Square, Round Dance Festival

Fiddles tuning up for hoe down

The Big Spring Squares Clubhouse on Chaparral Road and the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum will be the site of the Big Spring Squares 11th Annual Square and Round Dance Festival Friday and Saturday. The Friday events will be in the Squares' clubhouse, the Saturday events in the Coliseum.

Square dancers will be coming to Big Spring from cities in a 150-mile area around Big Spring. Dancers from such area towns as Abilene, Lubbock, Midland, Odessa, San Angelo, Snyder, Jayton, Hamlin, Wichita Falls, Colorado City, and Brownwood are registered. Many of the dancers will be staying in local motels.

The Friday night square dance will be called by Randy Phillips of Abilene. The Saturday 1 p.m. workshops will be in the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum. Sleepy Browning of Jayton and a Norman and Helen Teague of Wichita Falls will be calling the square and round dances Saturday night in the Coliseum.

RANDY PHILLIPS

Spectators will be admitted free to the Saturday events in the Coliseum. Highlight of the festival will be the patriotic opening ceremonies at the 7:45 grand march Saturday night. The honor guard of the Big Spring Law Enforcement Explorer Post No. 1 will present the colors to lead off the grand march. Dancers will follow with a theme of "It's A Special Good Old USA Wing-ding Hoe Down."

Entrance to the Coliseum will be from the walk in ramp on the east side of the coliseum. Both dancers and spectators will enter from the ramp. Spectators are welcome to the events in the coliseum.

Local dancers have been working and planning for a year for this weekend of fun and fellowship. Heading the festival committee are J.L. and Jean Stevens. Others serving on committees are: Ted and Lou Hatfield, assistant chairman; Frenchie and Erma Stewart, publicity; Roger and Sandy Sparks, registration; Lowell and Vonna Lee Davis, facilities; Ted and Lou Hatfield, vendor, booth chairman; Walter and Bobbie Alexander, hospitality; Robert and Oleta Allen, after party; George and Veda Colvin, decorations; and Dave and Alice Henry, finance chairman. Others helping with the festival events are Travis and Frances Brackeen, club president. All of the club members are serving on committees to help stage the festival.

After the coliseum square and round dance Saturday night an after-party under the direction of Robert and Oleta Allen, and Randy Phillips will take place in the Squares Corral. There will be food, fellowship and more square dancing for the paid attendees.

Plans are already under way for future festivals with Ted and Lou Hatfield, future festival chairman directing the events. Wayne Baldwin of Plano has been booked to call the 1981 festival and Chuck Bryant of San Antonio is scheduled to call the 1982 festival. In 1983 the Big Spring Festival will feature national known recording star and square dancer caller Wade Driver of Houston. Dave and Nita Smith of Lubbock will direct the round dance program.

Low income people would suffer

Proposed housing law blasted

WASHINGTON — A proposed federal housing law would steal rental units from the poor and make community housing plans "no more than just another piece of paper," Corpus Christi Mayor Luther Jones told a senate subcommittee Tuesday.

Jones, representing the U.S. Conference of Mayors, said the bill would divert funds from proposed low-income subsidized housing into middle-income housing. "In a tight budget year, when expenditures aimed at our very lowest income citizens are being pared to the bone, we find it insupportable to divert funds in this manner," he said.

Jones said the bill would shift nearly $2 billion in budget authority "away from the most needy citizens" and defer construction of some 40,000 units of housing.

"While it may be out of vogue in these troubled times, let me also urge this committee to consider the question of equity," he said. "Those are units we all know will be needed sooner or later."

The Conference of Mayors, a membership organization representing the mayors of the larger American cities, does not support reducing the proposed level of 300,000 units of assisted housing, Jones said.

The bill before the subcommittee on housing and community development would change the mix of subsidized housing nationwide from 60 percent new and 40 percent existing to 30 percent new and 70 percent existing.

Jones said the new guidelines do not satisfy the proportions of lower income housing assistance requested by local government through their approved Housing Assistance Plans.

"The chairman's proposal to arbitrarily shift the mix of assistance on a cost basis will gut this important linkage and render the Housing Assistance Plans no more than just another piece of paper to be filled out by the local government," Jones said.

Jones said Corpus Christi, like most cities, has few vacancies in the rental stock.

"The amount of existing, standard housing available for rent in the city of Corpus Christi is negligible, whether for lower income people or those with higher incomes," he said.

FTC out of money, out of business

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Trade Commission is fresh out of money because Congress, at least temporarily, has failed to enact new legislation to pay the bills.

Similar things have happened in the past, but this time there's a new wrinkle: The attorney general says the agency has no choice but to shut down.

The FTC's 1,700 employees were told to report for work today, but only "for the purpose of closing down the agency." Asked what this meant, one official said: "We can secure our files. Things like that. But we can't do our regular work."

The money stopped flowing despite a House-Senate conference committee's approval Wednesday of a compromise bill funding the agency for three more years.

Before that action can be converted into dollars and cents, however, the conference committee report must be written and submitted to both the House and Senate for final approval before being sent to President Carter for signature into law.

As a stop-gap solution, the House Appropriations Committee was expected to take action today on an emergency bill that would supply $55 million to the FTC until the permanent measure is enacted.

Federal agencies, including the FTC, have been left without funds for short periods on similar occasions in the past. In most cases they continued some activities on the assumption the legislation would be approved quickly.

However, a recent opinion by Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti said that business-as-usual approach in the absence of official funding violates a 110-year-old law. He indicated the law allows no spending beyond what is required to shut down agency operations.

"No statute permits federal agencies to incur obligations to pay employees without an appropriation for that purpose," Civiletti said in an April 25 letter to President Carter.

The measure approved by the conference committee Wednesday contains permanent reductions in authority for the commission, whose pro-consumer regulations have angered many business groups. Business lobbyists flocked to Capitol Hill to urge the FTC be restrained.

The conferees approved a provision that would allow Congress to nullify future FTC regulations by votes in both the House and Senate. The president would be unable to veto such nullification decisions.

Army not wild about 'Marilyn'

FORT CARSON, Colo. (AP) — The soldiers at Fort Carson appeared indifferent, despite the presence of a "Oui" magazine cover girl, a squad of Denver models sent to recruit soldiers and the chance to see Marilyn Monroe on stage.

ABC-TV crews had hoped to get thousands of soldiers out on a chilly weekend for the filming of a scene for "Marilyn," a three-hour television movie adapted from Norman Mailer's book of the same name. Only 500 Army men showed up.

But never mind, said ABC-TV's "MM" look-a-like, Catherine Hicks — the film editors will make it look like a much bigger crowd.

The scene shot at the Army base near Colorado Springs was part of a sequence revolving around the blonde screen siren's honeymoon with Joe DiMaggio. She decided to do USO shows while he was in Tokyo scouting baseball teams in the early 1950s.

Miss Hicks — dressed in a tight brown sequined dress with hair dyed Marilyn Monroe's platinum blonde — undulated, blew kisses and sang "Diamonds Are A Girl's Best Friend."

The soldiers who did show up didn't seem to have to act very much.

Dressed in uniforms like those worn during the Korean war, they cheered, waved, whistled and stomped their feet with satisfying vigor, said production coordinator Randee Smith.

To lure out the extras in droves — producer Lawrence Schiller wanted 10,000 — producers sent Kim Patton, cover girl for "Oui" magazine, to autograph 50 copies of an issue bearing her picture. Door prizes also were offered — motorcycles, television sets, cassette recorders and the magazines.

Vance calls
for equality,
safe return

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cyrus R. Vance left his post as secretary of state with a call for job equality and a prayer for the safe return of the American hostages from Iran.

He said his "one great sadness" after 3½ stimulating years in charge of U.S. foreign policy was that 53 Americans were still captive in Tehran.

"My thoughts and my prayers will remain with them and with you in our efforts to bring them back safely just as much after I have left as they have been before," Vance told department workers Wednesday at a ceremonial farewell.

Then, his arm around his wife, Grace, he walked to a waiting limousine outside the diplomatic entrance, where he had greeted foreign ministers from around the world. They drove off together, trailed, as is the recent custom, by a security force in a station wagon.

Vance, 63, resigned in opposition to the military rescue operation launched last week by President Carter in a futile effort to free the hostages. Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, was named Tuesday to succeed him.

In a farewell statement, written out on half-sheets of paper, Vance made no reference to the dispute. He said he knew State Department personnel would continue their "tremendous dedication and service" for the president and the new secretary of state.

He appeared to go out of his way, meanwhile, to call for greater opportunities for minorities at the department.

Tuition increase result of inflation

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — State college tuition should pay a fixed percentage of higher education costs, a blue-ribbon committee on higher education financing has agreed.

The recommendation, if adopted by the Legislature, probably would mean an increase in tuition every year or two as inflation forces college budgets ever higher.

The Special Committee on Higher Education Financing in Texas, headed by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, put off until June 18 its decision on what share of college costs should be paid by students through tuition.

State College Coordinating Board staffers were told Wednesday to prepare figures showing how high tuition would go if it had to cover 6 to 15 percent of the cost of an education.

The committee said students should get more financial aid from the state if tuition rises.

Speaker Bill Clayton suggested the fixed percentage approach, at first mentioning 10 percent as the share of higher education costs that tuition might cover.

"Would that not be a way to get at it and not have to keep coming back and changing tuition all the time?" he said.

The Coordinating Board has recommended that the 1981 Legislature raise tuition but offered no suggestion how big the increase should be. Gov. Bill Clements also favors a tuition increase.

Tuition is $4 per semester credit hour for Texas residents, with a minimum of $50 a semester. A student taking a typical 15-hour course load would pay $60 a semester or $120 a year.

Texas' tuition and required fees for Texas residents rank 46th in the nation.

Coordinating Board statistics show resident tuition covers only 4.38 percent of senior college and university appropriations, which average $2,738 annually per student.

Twenty years ago, resident tuition — then set at $50 a semester — covered 15.15 percent of the cost.

Non-residents pay $40 per semester hour, and their average $1,200 yearly tuition covers 43.82 percent of the cost, compared with 60.6 percent in 1960.

Only Fred McClure of Waco, a Baylor University law student, voted against making resident tuition cover a fixed percentage of costs.

"If we make moves that are going to economically disadvantage Texas residents, I think we are defeating our purpose...I don't think we should put our students in the position of being deeper in debt," McClure said.

Navy ordered to divert and escort ships

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — The U.S. Navy has been ordered to divert ships from war games in the Caribbean and Atlantic to escort the "Freedom Flotilla," a ragtag boatlift of Cuban refugees that one emigre says is peppered with "bums, drunks, nuts, prostitutes and human garbage."

Nearly 40 boats sailed across a calm Gulf Stream on Wednesday and early today, delivering some 2,000 more refugees and bringing to 5,500 the number who have arrived here since the boatlift was organized by Cuban-Americans 11 days ago.

Meanwhile, U.S. officials and refugees alike worried that Cuban President Fidel Castro was using boats chartered by exiles seeking freedom for their families to empty government prisons as well as the Peruvian Embassy in Havana.

Twenty-five suspected criminals were being detained at an undisclosed site here, said an Immigration and Naturalization Service inspector. Earlier this week, INS officers in Miami took about 15 suspected criminals into custody.

Vincent Palmieri, U.S. Ambassador-at-Large for refugee affairs, said the number of prisoners believed leaving the communist-ruled island 90 miles away is "cause for apprehension."

The boatlift began after thousands of Cubans seeking asylum jammed the Peruvian Embassy in Havana and Castro opened the port of Mariel. The flow has not been stanchied by threats of fines, bad weather or boat fees of as much as $1,000 a head. Two persons have drowned.

President Carter called the exodus "an unprecedented emergency" as he ordered the Navy to divert an unspecified number of ships from war games in the region to bolster Coast Guard patrol and rescue efforts.

Defense officials said refugees would be picked up only when necessary to save lives and "no refugees will be returned to Cuba." The diversion forced the cancellation of an amphibious landing in Cuba, but the rest of the maneuvers were to proceed.

Communists making money off refugees

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — Karl Marx probably wouldn't approve, but "Freedom Flotilla," boat captains returning from the crowded Cuban port of Mariel describe communist authorities overseeing the boatlift as profiteering masters of capitalism.

"They have all those boats over there that have been there for a week, and they're making as much money as they can off of it," said Glenn Abend, who returned here Wednesday night with a dozen refugees aboard his small yacht.

"They know the American way over there," said George Block, a crewman on the Viking Starship, a giant commercial boat that brought 500 Cuban refugees ashore early today.

There are more than 1,000 boats crowding Mariel, and Cuban government boats patrol the port offering food and other supplies, the seamen reported. Boat captains also were permitted ashore to purchase supplies from a government store.

A storm trapped the boats in port Sunday and Monday. Abend said a 5-pound ham was selling for $45 while a bottle of soda pop commanded $1.50 on the Cuban post market.

First Lady ventures into San Antonio barrio

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Even with his recent setbacks, President Carter will be a big winner over Sen. Edward Kennedy in Saturday's non-binding Texas primary and the subsequent precinct caucuses, predicts First Lady Rosalynn Carter.

Mrs. Carter campaigned Wednesday afternoon deep inside San Antonio's impoverished Mexican-American barrio, appealing in Spanish and English for support for her husband in what is Kennedy's Texas stronghold.

Earlier in the day, she campaigned in a plush downtown Houston hotel and appealed for support from black voters at a Baptist church in Houston's predominantly black Fifth Ward.

President Carter has refused to personally campaign for his re-election since the Iranian crisis began six months ago, but Mrs. Carter has been making numerous appearances across the country.

The president is favored to defeat Kennedy in Texas, despite last week's unsuccessful hostage rescue mission in Iran, the resignation of Secretary of State

Cyrus Vance and Kennedy's popularity with the state's large population of Mexican-Americans.

Texas has 152 national convention delegates at stake. "I feel very confident about Texas," Mrs. Carter told reporters upon her arrival here.

Asked if those recent setbacks might cause her husband to lose the primary, she replied, "We're not going to lose Texas."

She said the aborted rescue mission has prompted a nationwide outpouring of support for her husband. "I think people thought it was the right thing to do," she added.

Mrs. Carter was in San Antonio only two days after her husband made a rare foray away from the White House and flew here to visit the five hospitalized American commandos. Kennedy campaigned here Monday night and Tuesday.

Kennedy and farmworker leader Cesar Chavez received a rousing welcome from thousands of Mexican-American supporters in their Monday night rally in San Antonio's traditional Mexican marketplace. Kennedy also drew a heavy turnout of Hispanics in Houston on Tuesday.

The Massachusetts senator is extremely popular among Mexican-Americans, who comprise much of the population of South Texas and more than half of Bexar County's million residents.

Mrs. Carter was greeted Wednesday by a crowd of more than 300 at a Christian community center in the middle of a deteriorating, crime-racked Mexican-American housing project just southwest of downtown San Antonio.

She told the predominantly Hispanic crowd, "The president has appointed more Hispanics to positions in government than all other presidents combined. That is so important. It can make a difference in the way a government works."

Mrs. Carter opened her speech in Spanish, telling the crowd that the president "is thinking of you and wishes he could be here with you."

She ended her speech with an appeal in Spanish for votes and caucus support Saturday.

The community center hosts many programs for the elderly, and Mrs. Carter vowed that social programs, especially those for the elderly, would not be cut in the face of inflation.

"I feel confident we will have the support of the Mexican-American community," Mrs. Carter told reporters. "I think the president has a very good record in working with the Mexican-American community."

She courted black support in Houston, appearing before a crowd of 1,500 blacks at the Pleasant Grove Baptist Church.

"He has appointed more blacks to high offices than all other presidents combined," she said of her husband. "He has appointed 30 black federal judges, all needed to give us justice."

Mrs. Carter was faced with numerous questions about Iran while in Houston and San Antonio.

Hi ho, Silver! Hunts apparently dodge 'bullet's'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul Volcker denied today that either he or any other federal official "instigated or guided" current negotiations for about a $1 billion in bank loans to the billionaire Hunt brothers.

But Volcker said he is aware of the negotiations and would approve the massive loan provided it does not contribute to fresh speculation in the silver market, or other commodities.

The bank loan, which Volcker stressed has yet to be completed, is aimed at helping Texans Nelson Bunker Hunt and William Herbert Hunt pay debts stemming from the collapse of their silver fortune.

Volcker testified to a House Government Operations subcommittee that is trying to clear up confusion surrounding published reports of the huge loan, as well as facts leading March's silver market turmoil.

Those reports had indicated potential bank credits of about $600 million. But Volcker told the subcommittee that loans could exceed that figure by about $200 million to $300 million.

The Hunts had been speculating heavily in silver, dominating the market in the view of many analysts. But their financial position deteriorated when silver's price slid from more than $50 an ounce in January to below $11 in late March.

When they could not pay their broker more than $100 million due on their silver futures account, the market collapsed in panic, threatening the financial viability of some Hunt creditors, including at least one of their brokers, the Bache Group.

Volcker defended his support of a loan to the Hunts because "the immediate purpose would be to protect more securely the interests of existing Hunt silver creditors, bank and non-bank," he told the subcommittee.

He verified reports that the credit would go not to the Hunts directly but to the Placid Oil Co., which is owned by the Hunt family. The firm would put up assets to support the loan.

Volcker said the loan would probably be arranged at current market rates.

He also acknowledged that it could stabilize the financial position of the Hunts.

"For that reason, my particular concern was that the funds not be used, directly or indirectly, to support new speculation by the Hunt interests in the silver or in any other commodity market," he testified.

He indicated to the subcommittee that the Federal Reserve Board would insist on a written covenant to that effect, when the loan is finally negotiated.

Volcker, in his testimony, also:

— Said there "is evidence indicating that there was an attempt to control the supply" of silver, feeding inflation and endangering many creditors.

— "As the market values of silver collapsed, some of those institutions were placed in jeopardy and their failure could have triggered financial losses for others and severe financial disturbances."

— Cautioned against federal agencies "striking out with hastily conceived restrictive legislation" over the commodities markets.

However, he rejected the status quo, saying the problem should be studied by federal agencies "within the shortest feasible" time.

Volcker testified that the Federal Reserve had no knowledge of the Hunts' positions in the silver market or of potential problems in the market until March 26, when the agency was made aware of the brothers' failure to meet the margin call by Bache.

"During this period, careful consideration was given by me and others to possible action by the federal government with respect to the silver market," but no special action was deemed appropriate, he added.

The Hunts refused to appear before the subcommittee Tuesday, despite a subpoena commanding their testimony about the silver collapse, and the panel voted unanimously to seek a contempt of Congress citation against them.

The brothers are scheduled to testify voluntarily before a Senate Agriculture subcommittee May 2 and their lawyers said that scheduled appearance was one reason they chose not to appear before the House panel.

When they could not pay their broker more than $100 million due on their silver futures account, the market collapsed in panic. One report described the size of the Hunts' debt at about $1.7 billion.

Board involvement takes on special importance because of its new rigid credit rules aimed, in part, at deterring bank loans for speculation.

PAMPERING THE LADY — Exercise rider Luis Ortiz holds the reins as Genuine Risk prepares for a wash-down outside her stall at Churchill Downs. Genuine Risk will attempt on Saturday to become the first filly in 65 years to win the Kentucky Derby.

Filly to test mysterious Kentucky Derby field

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A lot of horsemen are wondering what a nice filly like Genuine Risk is doing running against colts and geldings in Saturday's Kentucky Derby.

Mrs. Bert Firestone's filly is bucking the odds for the 1¼-mile event at Churchill Downs which had only one filly winner in 105 runnings.

And that was back in 1915 when Regret led all the way to turn back 15 rivals. The last filly to start in the Derby was Silver Spoon who finished fifth in 1959.

"Yes, I do think we can win it," said Mrs. Firestone Wednesday. "I wouldn't be here if I didn't think so. My husband and I didn't come here for the Derby parties. She's bred for the distance."

Trainer Leroy Jolley, who saddled 1975 Derby winner Foolish Pleasure said immediately after a third-place finish in the April 19 Wood Memorial at Aqueduct the daughter of Exclusive Native-Virtuous wouldn't go in the Derby. She previously had won all six starts against fillies.

Genuine Risk also was nominated for the rich Kentucky Oaks for fillies here Friday and for New York's Triple Crown for fillies.

Jolley denied that he was overruled on the Derby by the Firestones, but said the change of mind came about when the expected Derby field dropped from more than 20 to about a dozen.

"We just didn't come here to be in the parade," Jolley said. "I think she is a legitimate third choice (behind Plugged Nickel and Rockhill Native) and she could win it."

When the entries were taken today for the $200,000-added first leg of thoroughbred racing's Triple Crown, those three were expected to be opposed by ten others.

Jolley denied that he was overruled on the Derby by the Firestones, but said the change of mind came about when the expected Derby field dropped from more than 20 to about a dozen.

"We just didn't come here to be in the parade," Jolley said. "I think she is a legitimate third choice (behind Plugged Nickel and Rockhill Native) and she could win it."

When the entries were taken today for the $200,000-added first leg of thoroughbred racing's Triple Crown, those three were expected to be opposed by ten others.

Peace of mind helping Connors game

DALLAS (AP) — Peace of mind has given Jimmy Connors hope that he can overtake Sweden's Bjorn Borg as the No. 1 tennis player in the world.

"Since November of last year, my game has picked up," said Connors after he outlasted fellow American Bill Scanlon 7-6, 7-6, 6-4 Wednesday night in the quarterfinals of the World Championship of Tennis.

"I have a clearer mind and I'm working harder on my tennis," said Connors, who has wife Pattie and their 9-month-old son, Brett, traveling with him. "If I play like I am right now the rest of the year, then I'll be back."

Abdul-Jabbar hits 38 as Lakers advance to NBA finals

Sonics "Kareemed" for good

LOS ANGELES (AP) — There will be no more miracles by the defending National Basketball Association champion Seattle SuperSonics this year. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, with a little help from his friends, made sure of that.

Seattle fought from the brink of elimination in its

The 28-year-old Connors used his court savvy to overcome Scanlon, 24, a hometown favorite, in two tiebreakers. Connors won the first tiebreaker 7-5 and took the second one 7-3.

"It's tough to separate your personal life and your tennis, but I can do it now," said Connors. "I go out and play tennis for two hours then come home to my family. I don't think about tennis anymore then. My tennis has improved almost overnight."

Connors admitted that each match takes its toll as he gets older.

"I'm stiff in the mornings now," he said. "I can't jump on the court the next day and say 'serve em up.' Tennis is a youthful game, and I've got a few more 100,000 miles on my legs."

Connors meets one of the rising stars Friday night in the semifinals, 20-year-old Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia.

"It will be a good match," said Connors. "The last time we met we ran each other into the ground."

In tonight's final quarterfinal match, defending champion John McEnroe of the United States meets Heinz Gunthardt of Switzerland.

The winner plays South Africa's Johan Kriek Friday night. The survivors collide Sunday in the finals for the $100,000 first prize.

Scanlon, who used to be a WCT ballboy, said Connors' experience paid off in the tiebreakers.

"You've got to get ahead quick, and I think I was pressing a little too much," said Scanlon, a former NCAA singles champion from Trinity. "It felt good to have the crowd behind me, but Jimmy just has to much experience."

Connors said he didn't mind the crowd of some 14,000 in the $25 million Reunion Arena rooting for Scanlon.

"Everybody has to be from somewhere," said Connors. "I enjoyed it. It brings out more people. It was a great crowd."

the Lakers finished strong, as has been their pattern recently, to end Seattle's season 111-105 Wednesday night and earn a berth in the NBA championship series against Eastern Conference titlist Philadelphia.

So the Sonics were eliminated, meaning that for the 11th straight year there won't be an NBA champion successfully defending its title. That hasn't happened since the Boston Celtics won in 1967-68 and again the following season.

There will be a couple of red-hot teams competing in the NBA finals, the Lakers, who are 8-2 in postseason play, and the 76ers, who are 10-2 in playoff action.

Los Angeles lost the opener of its best-of-seven series to Seattle 108-107 at the Forum, where the Lakers were 37-4 during the regular season, and will open the finals against the 76ers Sunday afternoon.

But after that setback, the Lakers blew the Sonics away in four straight. Seattle was bidding to become only the fourth team in NBA history to come back from a 3-1 deficit in a playoff series, but it wasn't to be.

Abdul-Jabbar had game-high totals of 38 points, 11 rebounds and seven blocked shots Wednesday night. He scored 12 points in the fourth quarter, including a skyhook with 3:13 to go that gave the Lakers a lead they would hold the rest of the way.

It looked for a while that there might be a Game Six. Seattle led 59-46 late in the second quarter, 62-54 at halftime and through most of the second half. But the Lakers scored 14 of the game's final 21 points to win going away.

Twenty-year-old rookie Earvin "Magic" Johnson, playing with the coolness of a 10-year veteran, had 20 points, 10 rebounds and 10 assists for the Lakers. Norm Nixon and Jamaal Wilkes added 19 and 15 points, respectively, for Los Angeles.

Dennis Johnson led the Sonics with 29 points, including a 40-foot three-point field goal as the third quarter ended which gave his team an 84-82 advantage heading into the final 12 minutes.

John Johnson and Gus Williams added 19 and 18 points, respectively, for Seattle. Fred Brown, who scored 34 points in Game One, had only 10 this time, just two of them in the second half.

The Lakers earned the homecourt advantage over the 76ers by a whisker. Los Angeles was 60-22 during the regular season, Philadelphia 59-23.

BLOCKING SHOT — Los Angeles Lakers center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar reaches out and blocks a shot by Seattle SuperSonics guard Gus Williams during third period action Wednesday night in the fifth game of the Western conference NBA finals in Los Angeles. The Lakers went on to defeat the SuperSonics 111-105 to win the conference and meet the Philadelphia 76ers in the NBA finals.

Bum: I've never seen him do anything I wouldn't want one of my players to do

Tatum's image didn't stop Oilers

NEW YORK (AP) — Tatum and Bradshaw. The names, linked together before, are entwined again. But one of the faces is different.

It doesn't belong to Terry Bradshaw, the quarterback of the Pittsburgh Steelers, whose 1972 playoff pass became Franco Harris' "Immaculate reception" when Oakland's Jack Tatum deflected the ball.

Instead, it is Craig Bradshaw, Terry's kid brother, a reserve quarterback at Utah State in 1979 and, on Wednesday, a seventh-round pick by the Houston Oilers in the National Football League draft.

Tatum, once an All-Pro defensive back, once one of the most feared safeties in the business, was part of the three-for-one deal which enabled the Oilers to pick the younger Bradshaw — which shows just how much Tatum's market value has plummeted.

In exchange for Tatum and Oakland's seventh-round pick this year (Bradshaw) and next, all the Raiders got in return was running back Kenny King. As a rookie last year, King, a third-round pick out of Oklahoma, carried the ball three times for nine yards.

Tatum and Bradshaw were the only real "name" players mentioned during Wednesday's conclusion of the two-day, 12-round, 17-hour, 333-player draft. Among the other veterans changing teams — each in exchange for a low-round pick this year or next — were running back Don Hardeman, from Baltimore to Denver, tight end Paul Seal, from San Francisco to Tampa Bay, and defensive end Willie Fry, from Pittsburgh to San Francisco.

This year as last, the last of the draftees was picked by Pittsburgh. This time it was Tyrone McGriff, a guard from Florida A&M.

In all, the 28 teams drafted 165 offensive players (48 running backs, 39 wide receivers, 19 tackles, 18 guards, 18 quarterbacks, 16 centers and 10 tight ends), 150 defensive players (58 defensive backs, 50 linebackers, 30 ends and 21 tackles) and nine specialists (four kickers, four punters and a kick returner).

Nebraska and Southern California contributed 10 players apiece to share the lead among colleges (Baylor and Oklahoma were next with nine apiece), while the Pacific 10 was the top conference with 41 draftees to the Southwest Conference's 38.

Tatum's fall from grace shows what can happen when a player is enveloped by controversy.

A few years ago he was an integral part of an unsuccessful lawsuit filed by then-teammate George Atkinson, who took umbrage at Pittsburgh Coach Chuck Noll's pointed suggestions that a "criminal element" existed in pro football.

In a 1978 exhibition game, Tatum and New England's Darryl Stingley collided in midair on a pass play. The Patriots' young wide receiver was paralyzed from the neck down. Although Tatum was absolved of any guilt, it clearly affected him. His intensity and effectiveness seemed to dissolve.

And because he never contacted Stingley during his lengthy hospitalization (Tatum said he was told not to), the Patriots characterized him as callous, a label which further blackened his reputation.

Then, in 1979, he helped to smudge it some more. He wrote "They Call Me Assassin," a provocative book in which he admitted he and Atkinson had conducted their own little game of "knockout" wherein each tried to outdo the other in injuring or kaying opposing players.

"I haven't read the book, but I think it was written to sell," said Oilers Coach Bum Phillips, insisting it had no bearing on the trade. "I've never seen him do anything I wouldn't want one of my players to do."

Tatum, too, said he thought the book was only incidental. "Al Davis just wants to rebuild the team and give the younger guys a chance to play. I really don't think the book had anything to do with it."

And Oakland Coach Tom Flores noted: "We had no problem with Jack ... But we felt we had to make a move to let our younger players play."

What cleared the way for the trade was the Raiders' acquisition on Tuesday of Burgess Owens, a starting safety for the New York Jets. "When they traded for Owens, I knew some kind of deal was up," Tatum said. "It didn't surprise me at all. It's not a bad move for me at this time in my career. I'll be playing for a contender with a shot to get to another Super Bowl."

That presumes he'll stick with Houston. When the Raiders shipped quarterback Ken Stabler to the Oilers he filled the void created by Dan Pastorini's departure to Oakland. But Tatum is joining a defensive unit which already has an All-Pro (Mike Reinhardt) and a playoff sensation (Vernon Perry, with his five interceptions) in the starting safety positions.

"He is a proven player who can help us attain our goal," Ed Biles, Houston's defensive coordinator, said of Tatum. "All he does is strengthen our roster."

If Bradshaw finds a home in Houston, he'll likely become the No. 3 quarterback behind Stabler and Gifford Nielsen. Guido Merkens, a reserve wide receiver and safety, was listed as the third-string quarterback in '79.

Dear Abby

No Trial Run For This Lover

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I have been married for 60 years. I am 93 and she is 90. Before we were married, Myrtle and I "went together" for almost a year. In all that time she never found out whether I was a "poor lover" or a great one. My work took me out of town from Monday through Friday, so we spent our Saturday evenings together in her parents' home (in the "parlor") often with either one or both parents present. Sometimes the two of us would enjoy a meal in a deluxe restaurant. (It cost me 75 cents plus a 10-cent tip.) I was doing well as a traveling salesman. I made $100 a month plus expenses.

Sunday mornings we always went to church together. Myrtle sang in the choir. So did I until they found out what was the matter with the choir — then I didn't sing there anymore.

We fell in love, but not the way they do today. No so much as a good-night kiss before we became engaged. When I asked her to marry me, after much pleading on my part she finally said yes. Then I took her in my arms and planted a big kiss right on her lips. And that was it. No more than a hug and a kiss until we were married some two months later.

Well, I guess I turned out to be a pretty fair lover. We had five children, 17 grandchildren and 28 great-grandchildren. You may want to put this in your "My, how times have changed" file. Anyway, Myrtle joins me in sending you our love and appreciation for all those wonderful columns through the years.

ELIAS P. TYLER, SHERMAN OAKS, CALIF.

DEAR ELIAS: Thanks for a wonderful column piece. Your letter was a real "upper."

DEAR ABBY: I can't believe that you aren't aware that most married women consider every single attractive female a threat to their marriages.

For your amusement, when I became a widow, a married woman whom I had known only slightly called to tell me that she was beside herself with grief because her husband's doctor had told her that her husband might go "any minute." But, of course, she was not allowed to tell him.

Well, today, seven years later, the husband is still hale, hearty and thriving.

Very clever, wouldn't you say?

BERT

DEAR BERT: Yes, and also devious.

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple, "do-your-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's new booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Coahoma sorority observes special day

Alpha Tau Rho Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi met Monday night in the Signal Mountain Room of the Coahoma State Bank to celebrate the chapter's first Founder's Day with a salad supper and Awards Ceremony. Guests of the chapter were Mrs. Shirley Barron, chapter grandmother and Mrs. Nita Tarbet.

Mrs. Tarbet presented a program dealing with deafness. In appreciation for her appearance the chapter presented her with a gift certificate.

Sherry Wood presented a short summary of the year. Arlene White read the Founder's Day Pledge and Glyn Drewery read a letter from Bill Rosa, president of Beta Sigma Phi. Kathy Nichols was named Pledge of the Year by her sisters and Jayne Titsworth was selected as Girl of the Year. They were presented with engraved charms by the chapter.

Beta Sigma Phi charms were presented to the outgoing officers, committee chairmen and the Valentine

Sweetheart. Jayne Titsworth, president, was presented with the chapter yearbook in appreciation for her service during the first year of Alpha Tau Rho. Bridget Milliken was welcomed as a new member of the chapter.

The next meeting will be held May 5 in the home of Sherry Wood. Patty Johnke will present the program on the subject of "The Artist" as it applies to the art of living. Officers for the coming year will be installed at this meeting and the Pledge Ritual will be conducted.

About organized crime

What can you do?

Mrs. T.G. Adams presented a program on Organized Crime, What Can You Do? to the Modern Woman's Forum April 25.

Mrs. Bert Affleck, president, presided over the nine members present at the 3 p.m. meeting in her home. A thank you note was read from the Big Spring State Hospital for the 12 dozen cookies supplied them.

Mrs. Adams said that the Texas Organized Crime Prevention Council was created in 1970 and was strengthened by an executive order of Gov. Dolph Briscoe on April 28, 1975.

Narcotics, gambling, fencing, prostitution and pornography are the organized crime activities most likely to affect the daily lives of Big Spring area residents.

It's difficult to estimate the extent organized crime has infiltrated legitimate business. Some local businesses and or properties are owned by organized crime figures, or the figure have an interest in them. These businesses provide the needed cover for syndicate heads to maintain anonymity and serve to "launder" illegitimate funds.

"What can Forum members do?" Mrs. Adams asked.

"First, don't be a customer of organized crime. When one places even a small bet with a bookie or purchases merchandise at an unbelievably low price, or buys a magazine, film or novelty item which cannot be openly displayed in an "adult" bookstore, he may be contributing directly to the treasury of organized crime," continued Mrs. Adams.

Community apathy toward drug abuse and tolerance of open or discreet prostitution contributes to the income of organized crime. This income is used to perpetuate illegal business and to finance organized crimes acquisition of legitimate business interests.

"Second," Mrs. Adams said, "don't gamble and don't make a purchase that seem like a steal, it may be one. In short, don't patronize the businesses of organized crime."

"Third, to beat organized crime, participate in governmental processes which insure the integrity of public officials and responsive legislation. Be alert to indications of participation in organized crime such as sudden, unexplained wealth and affluence and the deterioration of business area into distribution points for pornography, prostitution, narcotics, etc.

Report your observation to the Texas department of Public Safety, the organized crime unit of the Attorney General's office, the local district attorney, the county sheriff, the local police department or the Texas

Organized Crime Prevention Council, any of whom will pass along the information to an appropriate agency.

The group will meet next with Mrs. Elra Phillips at Canterbury for a luncheon on May 9.

Tell drug dealer to disappear

By Robert Wallace, Ed. D.

Dr. Wallace: I'm 14 and about two months ago I met a guy 17, whom I like very much. About two weeks ago he stopped seeing me and I saw him with another girl, so naturally, I thought it was over between us.

Yesterday he came over to my house and told me that he loved me and kissed me passionately. He told me the reason he split was because he didn't dig my parents.

I want to go with him but I don't know if I can trust him. He lives by himself and is very independent. Besides that, he is the biggest drug dealer in the neighborhood. What should I do? — Dee, Everett, Wash.

Dee: It appears that your parents think that this guy is a loose and it turns out that he is. There are several reasons why you should tell him to disappear permanently, the prime one being that he is a drug pusher.

Dee, this guy will only cause and give you trouble.

Dr. Wallace: Why is it that judges always tell the accused that "I'm sending you away so you will learn something?"

I am writing this letter while I'm in jail and I've really learned a lot — how to steal a car, how to mug someone so they cannot make an outcry, how to open a house door with a knife, how to use a burglar's kit and many more "exciting" activities.

This is the second time that I've been in jail and both times I was convicted, I was told that I was being sent away to learn something.

What do they think you will learn when they put you with 50 guys who sit around and think of new and different ways to commit crimes? — J.J., Fredrickton, New Brunswick, Canada.

J.J.: I think if you were at least semi-intelligent you would learn that being in jail was not too enjoyable and that one trip there was enough.

Hopefully, when you are released this time, you will have learned that there is no substitute for freedom.

CARTER'S FURNITURE 202 Scurry

MODISH MONASTIC — Models wear tiered unicorn capes Monday during showing of fall-winter collections in New York City. Both designs are by Perry Ellis.

Unwanted growth is the cause of hairy problems

When it comes to hair, we usually want what we haven't got.

If it's straight, we want it curly. If it's brunette, we want it to be blond. Some of us want to be less hairy; others just want some hair.

"Hair grows in patterns and cycles related to both heredity and body chemistry," said Joe R. Cannon, M.D., assistant professor of dermatology at Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center.

"Women particularly are concerned with unwanted growths of hair," Cannon said. "Problems range from darkening of the fine hair on the upper lip to development of male patterns of hair growth on the face and body."

Causes for unwanted hair growth are diagnosed and treated by Cannon and gynecologic endocrinologist M. Edward Yannon, M.D., at Texas Tech.

"Some problems, such as darkening of lip hair, are hereditary and can be dealt with cosmetically," Cannon said. "Others are caused by hormone imbalances, oversensitivity to normal amounts of androgenic (male) hormones or by diseases which influence hormone activity."

Cosmetic treatments include bleaching fine facial hairs, temporary removal by shaving or use of depilatory creams or lotions, or permanent removal by electrolysis (destruction of the hair follicle by electrical current). Hormone therapy can be used to correct some hormone-related hair growths.

While women are concerned with excess hair growth, men are more worried about excess hair loss.

Everyone loses some hair all the time. We hardly notice the loss as long as new hair growth takes place, according to Cannon. However, as we age, some hair follicles stop functioning and no new hair grows. Baldness occurs when hair loss exceeds regrowth.

The pattern and extent of baldness is linked to heredity. We cannot, at this time, stimulate non-functioning follicles into growing hair again, Cannon said. However, in some cases hormone therapy can be used to stop or retard hair loss.

Hair loss also can be caused by emotional or physical stress or by some medications. Such losses usually are temporary and tend to correct themselves.

Use of hair pieces or implantation techniques are temporary cosmetic methods of dealing with baldness. Implantation involves imbedding synthetic fibers into the scalp to simulate hair. According to Cannon, the effects of implantation are not permanent. The fibers eventually will fall out and the implant process can lead to permanent scarring of the scalp and problems of chronic infection.

Transplantation of healthy follicles from hair growing regions of the scalp to the bald area is a more satisfactory method of restoring hair growth. The active follicles continue to grow hair in their new location.

The treatment we give our hair affects its texture and appearance, according to Cannon. Chemicals used to straighten or curl hair, dyes used to change its color, cremes, tonics, rinses and sprays all cause physical changes in the hair structure.

Unemployment could hit 8 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unemployment could hit 7.5 percent later this year and 8 percent in early 1981, says Alfred Kahn, President Carter's chief inflation adviser.

The Carter administration has not previously used such high figures. But a spokeswoman for Kahn said he had intended his projections to be consistent with those of the administration. "He certainly did not mean to deviate from official forecasts," said the spokeswoman, Betty Ross. However, several high-ranking government officials say privately that they think unemployment will reach 8 percent in the recession now widely thought to be underway. Unemployment was 6.2 percent in March. Jobless figures for April will be released by the Labor Department Friday, and most economists expect them to show another rise in unemployment. An 8 percent jobless rate translates into about 8 million Americans out of work. The last time unemployment was at the 8 percent level was in December 1975, when it was 8.2 percent as the nation was coming out of the deep 1974-75 recession. The official administration forecast is for unemployment rates to average 7.2 percent in the fourth quarter of 1980 and 7.3 percent in the final three months of 1981. A spokeswoman for the Council of Economic Advisers, which prepares the administration's forecasts, said a 7.5 percent jobless rate sometime in 1981 would be consistent with the forecast, but not 8 percent. The spokeswoman, who did not want to be identified, said an 8 percent unemployment rate is about the worst that could be envisioned if the recession is much more serious than the administration is forecasting. There has been ample evidence in recent weeks that the recession could be worse than the "mild and short" one President Carter has predicted. The Commerce Department reported Wednesday that its index of economic indicators, which is designed to forecast future economic trends, fell 2.6 percent in March, the third worst monthly drop on record.

April brings surge in grocery prices

By the Associated Press

Grocery bills went up by a full percentage point during April, according to an Associated Press survey, which shows the increases spread across almost all the shelves in the supermarket.

More than half of the items checked rose last month in at least four of the 13 cities surveyed by the AP. Less than a third of the items declined in four cities or more.

The AP drew up a random list of commonly purchased food and non-food products and checked the price at one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 1, 1973. Prices have been rechecked on or about the start of each succeeding month.

The latest survey showed that the marketbasket total went up during April at the checklist store in eight cities and decreased in five cities. Overall, the marketbasket totals were an average of 1 percent higher at the start of May than they were a month earlier.

In March, in contrast, the marketbasket declined at the checklist store in eight cities and rose in five, leaving the average bill unchanged, according to the AP survey.

Although the April increases were widespread, they hit hardest at non-foods. The non-foods represented 23 percent of the items checked, but accounted for 30 percent of the increases. Fabric softener went up at the checklist store in nine cities — more than any other item. Pork chops, paper towels, butter, eggs, detergent, milk and sugar also increased at the checklist store in at least four cities.

The good news last month came at the meat counter. The price of a pound of chopped chuck went down at the AP checklist store in eight cities. Beef production is still lower than it was a year ago, but output during the rest of 1980 is expected to be close to 1979 levels.

Prices for pork chops and eggs — two alternatives to beef as a source of protein — have gone down over the past year because of abundant supplies, but the April picture was mixed. The AP survey showed, pork chops went up in six cities and down in four; eggs went up in six cities and down in six. The only item besides chopped chuck, pork chops and eggs to decline in at least four cities was frankfurters, down last month at the checklist store in five cities.

The AP did not try to weight the survey results according to population density or in terms of what percent of a family's actual grocery outlay each item represents. The AP did not try to compare actual prices from city to city. The only comparisons were made in terms of percentages of increase or decrease.

The items on the AP checklist were: chopped chuck, center cut pork chops, frozen orange juice concentrate, coffee, paper towels, butter, Grade-A medium white eggs, creamy peanut butter, laundry detergent, fabric softener, tomato sauce, milk, frankfurters and granulated sugar. A 15th item, chocolate chip cookies, was dropped from the list after the manufacturer discontinued the package size used in the survey.

A-Bomb Kid running for seat in Congress

WESTPORT, Conn. (AP) — Does the name John Aristotle Phillips ring a bell? Conjur up a mild explosion perhaps?

The news that a John Aristotle Phillips has announced to run for a seat in Congress comes as, well, a bombshell — if it turns out he is THE John Aristotle Phillips. Sure enough, he is.

Remember the Princeton undergraduate who designed an atomic bomb? That's him, John Aristotle Phillips. The A-Bomb Kid.

"My campaign slogan is 'new energy for the '80s,'" said Phillips, who will be 25 years old just before the election and thus eligible to serve.

"I've reached the conclusion that the nuclear power industry just has to be shut down, and I believe I can do more about it as a congressman than I can otherwise. I have a point to make."

presumably any terrorist who could get his hands on some plutonium could build one.

It took him five and one half months to write. When word got out what he had done, the government, appalled, took the thesis away from Phillips and stamped it secret.

Phillips immediately became somewhat of a cult hero.

So what has the A-Bomb Kid — a nickname he figures will be with him always — been up to lately?

"I finished school, of course," he said. "I had a thriving pizza business going on the campus. Aristotle's Pizza Delivery Service, so I stayed an extra year at Princeton."

"My pizza partner, David Michaelis, and I wrote a book together titled, 'Mushroom: The True Story of the A-Bomb Kid,' and the book has been doing very well. David has gone on to become a freelance writer."

"After I left Princeton, I started the Fund for Secure Energy, FUSE, a non-profit organization promoting mainly, energy policies from a six-year study by the Harvard Business School."

"I've been doing a lot of lecturing for FUSE, and we have raised $150,000 for advertising."

"I have also started a business with my brother Dean. He's a senior at Massachusetts Institute of Technology. We're interested in such things as calculators and, perhaps later on, solar energy systems. Our first product ought to be ready by Christmas. It ought to make nothing but money."

"I also spent a lot of time in Hollywood negotiating for a two-hour TV movie about the A-Bomb Kid." He canceled the project because of the poor script.

Phillips said he has no misgivings about capitalizing on his A-bomb celebrity if it will help in his crusade against nuclear energy, or in his business, or his congressional campaign.

He said he draws the line, though, when it comes to profiteering on what he considers an unworthy movie without motive. "I designed the bomb; I didn't make a buck."

The A-Bomb Kid, it appears, has a fine sense of where the buck stops.

Crime growing faster

WASHINGTON (AP) — Serious crime, which soared nationwide last year after a three-year lull, is growing faster in smaller communities and in the South, the FBI says.

As measured by preliminary data released Wednesday, serious crimes reported to police increased 8 percent in 1979 — the biggest jump since 1974, the crime index decreased 1 percent between 1976 and 1978.

The FBI said the figures showed that the number of serious crimes rose 11 percent in cities of less than 50,000 population and 9 percent in larger cities.

Overall crime rose 10 percent in the South, compared with 9 percent in the Northeast, 8 percent in the West and 7 percent in the North Central states.

Nationwide, violent crime was up 11 percent from the year before, with forcible rape and robbery each up 12 percent, and murder and aggravated assault each up 9 percent.

Property crime increased 8 percent, with a 10 percent increase in motor vehicle theft, a 9 percent rise in larceny-theft and a 6 percent rise in burglary.

The preliminary figures cover only crimes known to police agencies. The Justice Department's Law Enforcement Assistance Administration has found in recent years that large numbers of certain crimes, like burglary, do not get reported to the police.

Muskie voting record follows foreign policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — From the Panama Canal to Iran, Edmund S. Muskie's Senate voting record shows few deviations from White House foreign policy positions.

Indeed, the man President Carter has picked to be secretary of state says it is important for the administration to project an image of stability around the world.

And in Muskie, a 22-year senator from Maine who first came to national prominence as the Democratic vice presidential candidate in 1968, Carter also chose a man more of political than diplomatic breeding.

Although Muskie, 66, has concentrated on domestic affairs in the Senate and acknowledged that "I am not a foreign policy technician," Carter praised him during Tuesday night's nationally televised news conference as "extremely well qualified" because of his broad experience, bipartisan esteem and "international reputation."

He said Muskie's political experience, including an unsuccessful run for the 1972 Democratic presidential nomination, made him familiar with the entire nation and its aspirations.

The president said Muskie and Warren Christopher, who will remain as deputy secretary of state after being bypassed for the top job, "will provide continuity for our foreign policy."

Muskie supported Carter's decision to try to rescue the American hostages in Iran, the bold but unsuccessful move that prompted Cyrus R. Vance to resign in protest Monday.

"We do not regret the attempt to free the hostages. After all, it was a response to kidnapping and blackmail," Muskie said. "We do not rule out the use of any appropriate means which might end the confrontation and bring sanity back to Iran."

Muskie told reporters he has no doubt of Carter's confidence in him. "The president has left no doubt in my mind... that I will be the foreign policy spokesman," Muskie said when asked about his standing in view of the frequent clashes between Vance and the president's national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski.

Muskie's Senate record, including service on the Foreign Relations Committee, is typical of a Democrat who offers strong support to a president from the same party.

He sided with Carter on most of the president's most controversial foreign policy positions, including the Panama Canal treaties, the decision to scrap the B-1 bomber, the sale of advanced fighters to Israel, Egypt and Saudi Arabia and maintaining economic sanctions against Rhodesia.

Although he took no formal position on the SALT II treaty with the Soviet Union, Muskie was counted as a strong proponent of arms control and a virtually certain vote in favor of the strategic arms limitation agreement.

As chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, Muskie argued against proposals, also opposed by Carter, to raise the defense budget by 3 percent to 5 percent, saying security "is not that simple."

Like Carter, Muskie changed his view of the Soviet Union after its military incursion into Afghanistan. "Betrayed, yes, that's the word," he said. On detente, he said, "We thought it was in this country's best interests. She (the Soviet Union) just ran out on us."

After heading a U.S. mission to the People's Republic of China in November 1978, Muskie advocated a formula recognizing Peking while maintaining unofficial ties with Taiwan — almost identical to what the administration worked out a month later.

Muskie's only significant break with Carter came over the Turkish arms embargo, first imposed in 1974 to punish Turkey for the invasion of Cyprus. Muskie voted to retain the embargo in 1978 when the administration wanted it repealed.

Further back, Muskie was among Democratic senators who supported the war in Vietnam in its initial stages but turned against it. By the time he sought the Democratic presidential nomination in 1972, he said he regretted not having opposed the war in 1966 and advocated a deadline for withdrawal by U.S. forces.

Carter, for his part, has indicated several times his high opinion of Muskie. In 1976, Muskie was nearly tapped to run for vice president again; he and Walter F. Mondale were the finalists for that nomination. Last year, Muskie was Carter's envoy on a European trip.

Officially, Muskie remained neutral in this year's presidential campaign, but he was friendly to Carter.

Send money, not flowers

TORONTO (AP) — George Leyman is alive and living in Toronto — even though a bill for ambulance service addressed to his estate arrived in the mail last week.

Leyman, who suffered his 13th heart attack recently, didn't take long to recover from the shock of the bill. The 51-year-old apartment superintendent said he was going to post a sign in the building's elevator advising residents to send money, not flowers.

Social Security tug-of-war

WASHINGTON, D.C. — One of the most demoralizing battles being fought today in homes of the elderly in every corner of our nation is the tug-of-war between the Social Security check and rising costs of daily necessities caused by inflation.

There is no doubt that our elderly citizen and others living on fixed incomes are taking the cruellest blows as they see their small incomes stretched closer and closer to the breaking point.

It is far easier to raise questions concerning the direction of our Social Security program than to hit upon perfect solutions.

Was Social Security originally designed as a complete retirement plan or as supplemental income for retirees?

How do benefit totals compare to the actual amount of money paid in by the individual during his or her years of work? Is this type of comparison, in light of today's inflation, fair?

Everyone agrees that all senior citizens ideally should spend their latter years in dignity and financial comfort. But can we ignore the young worker, struggling to raise a family and facing the same inflationary woes, who is seeing more and more of his earnings funneled away to the Social Security program?

With a built-in cost-of-living increase, tied to the Consumer Price Index, can Social Security payments realistically keep up with inflation without the entire system breaking down at some point?

I could easily add to the list of questions regarding this issue, but sifting through the facts — historical, present and predicted — of the Social Security dilemma I find the answers are illusive.

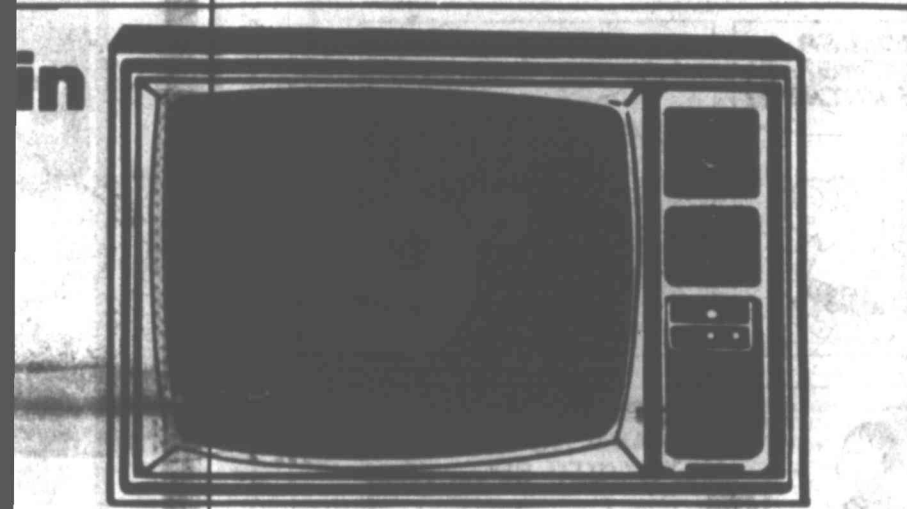

Federal Insurance Contributions Act (FICA) Program deductions total 6.13 percent of the workers' paycheck and a like amount from his employer. At the same time, payments to those eligible are to increase by 14.3 percent in July. It doesn't take a calculator to deduce the imbalance between the two. The message is simple: to pay out more, you must take in more.

How did we get to this point and, more importantly, where, when and how will the upward spiral end?

In the weeks ahead, Congressional Comment will be investigating the Social Security Program, delving into the history of the program in an attempt to illuminate its purpose, as well as presenting a current assessment and reviewing some of the changes that have been proposed.

I make no claims to having all of the answers, but rather am asking the questions in an attempt to clarify misunderstandings about Social Security and to formulate my own course on this sensitive issue.

WAITING — Chrysler Corp. Chairman Lee A. Iacocca waits for the signing of an agreement with the Michigan State Treasurer to begin Wednesday afternoon in Detroit. The agreement was for the state to loan the troubled automaker $150 million for 15 years at an interest rate of 15 percent.

Campaign trail joined Carter changes plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — After being taunted for months to join his rivals on the campaign trail, President Carter plans to leave the White House for "limited" politicking. But Democratic challenger Edward M. Kennedy and Republican front-runner Ronald Reagan still claim.

In a startling reversal, the president told a group of community leaders in the White House Wednesday that the crises which have kept him near his office since the seizure of the U.S. Embassy in Iran last November have become "manageable enough" to allow him to travel.

But press secretary Jody Powell said the president still would not engage Kennedy in a long-challenged debate, since the chief executive "sees no purpose to be gained" by such a confrontation.

Kennedy told a news conference in Indianapolis that the president's decision was "a victory for the American people," but renewed his demand that the president meet him face to face "anyplace...anytime in this country."

The Massachusetts senator huffed that "I can understand why he might not want to debate, because I think he will find it difficult to defend 18 percent inflation and 18 percent interest rates."

Reagan, in Dallas, scorned the announcement, saying that Carter now appears to be claiming that "the burdens have been lifted off his back, presumably about the hostages which had been his reason for staying in there. He had said he would stay and not do any politicking until they were safely home."

"If he feels freed," Reagan declared, "I wonder if he feels the hostages now somehow are freed."

Carter told his White House audience that he would keep the plight of the hostages "vividly in our minds and hearts." But he went on to say that "a lot of the responsibilities that have been on my shoulders in the past few months have now been alleviated to some degree."

A presidential aide who requested anonymity said Carter's schedule probably wouldn't involve any travel until the end of next week. Until now, his only forays since the hostage-taking have been to nearby Camp David and a trip Monday to a military hospital in San Antonio to visit the commandos who were injured in the aborted rescue attempt in Iran.

Carter had dropped no hint that he would hit the campaign trail soon during his nationally televised news conference Tuesday night, but aides said that was the reason he had signaled to them his change of heart. And they admitted that the question which brought about the revelation on Wednesday was "planted" with Charles Manatt, head of the finance council of the Democratic National Committee.

The president expanded at some length on his answer, saying the attempt to free the Americans still held captive was "completed," as were decisions to impose economic sanctions against Iran as well as key domestic moves such as his anti-inflation program.

Carter's decision to campaign came, as Kennedy himself noted, after several defeats by the senator, including the Michigan caucuses last Saturday, the Pennsylvania primary on April 22 and the New York and Connecticut primaries a month ago. Nonetheless, the president still holds a commanding lead in convention delegates, 1,109.3 to 639.1, with 1,666 needed to nominate.

Presidential aides seemed resigned to a storm of criticism. One declared, "We are prepared to be accused of just about everything." But another said the new policy was "something a lot of people wanted to see for a long time. He can't be held hostage here forever." Neither official wished to be identified.

As recently as April 23, Carter declared that he would not campaign until the hostage crisis was resolved.

Former Carter adviser acquitted

'We just plain licked 'em'

ATLANTA (AP) — Former U.S. budget director Bert Lance, acquitted on nine bank fraud charges, savored his victory with a call from friend Jimmy Carter and said of the prosecutor who dogged him for years: "We just plain licked 'em."

Despite a hung jury's inability to reach a decision on three other counts, forcing a mistrial on those counts, the president's former adviser said: "I have been totally and completely exonerated."

Lance spoke with Carter after the verdict was handed down Wednesday following a 16-week trial — the longest in Georgia history — and a 2-year federal investigation.

He said Carter reminded him of an occasion nearly three years ago when Carter was taken to task for saying "Bert, I'm proud of you," while Lance was under investigation. Carter told him on Wednesday, "I'm still proud of you," Lance said.

A blue-collar jury of six men and six women deliberated for nine days before handing down its decision. Lance tried to call them individually to thank them for the verdict.

The jurors were unable to reach verdicts on six of the 19 counts against Lance and three associates, all north Georgia businessmen who were friends for years.

U.S. District Judge Charles A. Moyer Jr. declared a mistrial on the remaining counts and said he would consider entering directed verdicts of acquittal after reading briefs from both sides.

In a taped interview today on ABC-TV's Good Morning America, Lance said he was "not making any apologies about my banking style. The bottom line of the Lance case is that my communities have been well served by my activities in the bank."

"I fail the 'perfect test' like everybody. But I don't think I made any mistakes."

Asked if government officials were subject to too much scrutiny, Lance said, "That's a real risk, you've seen that happen. I think we should quit trying to make past actions subject to today's conduct. I think this is a real problem. I think people who have been successful in the private sector are not going to take the risks to come into the public sector."

Lance also said that in press coverage of him "overall there was an effort to embarrass the president through me."

Prosecutor Edwin Tomko said he did not know whether the Justice Department would seek a new trial.

"The mistrial on the remaining counts, that doesn't concern me at all," the tall, portly former banker said. "If the government wants to try them again — ring the bell."

All nine counts on which Lance was found innocent charged him with misapplication of funds from the Calhoun First National Bank and the National Bank of Georgia in loans to his family and friends. The jury deadlocked on a 10th misapplication charge and two counts alleging that Lance falsified his financial statements.

House liberals beaten in try for rewrite

WASHINGTON (AP) — House liberals have failed in their bid to rewrite the 1981 balanced budget to make it less painful to the cities, the poor and the elderly.

They now will try to stop the Republicans from cutting even more deeply into social programs.

The liberals were beaten four times Wednesday in efforts to restore social spending cut by the House Budget Committee in its proposed $611.8 billion balanced budget for fiscal 1981.

The four defeats — three times by embarrassingly large margins — signaled the end of liberal amendments that can be offered to the budget under special ground rules approved for the debate.

Starting today, the House was to begin considering Republican proposals that would cut more deeply into domestic programs, boost defense and provide a business tax cut.

The GOP alternative given the best chance of passage would shift $5.1 billion from domestic programs to the military, pushing defense spending $2.5 billion higher than the $150.5 billion President Carter wants.

Another major Republican plan would slash overall spending to $597.8 billion — $14 billion below the House committee's target — and provide a $30 billion business tax cut.

The liberals' strongest showing Wednesday came on an amendment by Rep. David R. Obey, D-Wis., which benefitted from the backing of Carter and House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., but still lost 213-201.

The Obey amendment would have added $1.2 billion for domestic programs and raised taxes on the oil industry by $800 million.

The president apparently supported the amendment because it contained a Carter proposal for $500 million in "transitional" relief for cities hurt by the expected loss of state revenue sharing.

The House routed three other liberal proposals. One, by Rep. Richard L. Ottinger, D-N.Y., would have raised spending to the level of Carter's original budget proposal, which the president repudiated in March as inflationary. It was defeated 336-70.

On a 313-74 vote, the House rejected an amendment, backed by the Congressional Black Caucus, to add $5.4 billion in social spending while cutting $3.1 billion from defense.

Rep. Parren Mitchell, D-Md., sponsor of the caucus amendment, said the Budget Committee's spending package, "plunges an economic dagger into the bodies of the poor, the near poor and the elderly."

By a 332-65 margin, the House defeated an amendment by Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y., that sought $5.4 billion for a different batch of domestic programs.

In 56 comparisons over the last three years, certified Lockett 77 from Pioneer produced an average gross income of $309* per acre... giving it a $42 per acre advantage over competitive varieties.

Why such an advantage? Outstanding seedling vigor with excellent cold tolerance and seedling disease escape help Lockett 77 make a good stand. Added to that are multiple disease tolerance, hardy plant characteristics, and early maturity... a combination that helps Lockett 77 deliver outstanding performance.

Farmers who've grown certified Lockett 77 are well pleased with results. Jack and Paul Hopper at Knott recorded a lint yield of 1,553 lbs./planted acre in 1979. Ben Roming at Lariat got 830 lbs./A. And over the last four years at Tell, Texas, Clinton Halford averaged 975 lbs. of lint per acre with certified Lockett 77.

Cake headed for Boston

LYNN, Mass. (AP) — What's red, white and blue on the outside, yellow on the inside, weighs 7,000 pounds and has to be carried by a compliment of National Guardsmen and sailors?

A birthday cake for Boston, of course. The behemoth pastry, completed Wednesday by Lynn baker Arthur Strausnick, celebrates the city's 350th birthday.

Strausnick's creation will be the centerpiece today when Boston kicks off its summer-long celebration with festivities at the city's Government Center.

But before Mayor Kevin White and other notables can cut the cake, a convoy of National Guardsmen and personnel from the Charlestown Navy Yard will have to transport it via a 2½-ton Army truck and a commercial van from Lynn.

Strausnick, who has baked giant cakes for other occasions, started work on his latest creation April 20th. He estimates it took 250 hours to make.

How do you make a 3½-ton cake? The recipe includes 2,000 pounds of flour, 1,000 pounds of sugar, 500 pounds of shortening, 3,000 eggs, 2,000 quarts of milk.

Strausnick said he made the $3,500 cake for free, as a birthday present to the city. He will also be contributing a 16-foot cake later next month to commemorate the second visit of the Tall Ships.

Unpaid tickets run up

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — City Traffic Commissioner Jerrold Levitin got caught with his meter expired, so to speak, when it was discovered that he owed $600 in unpaid parking tickets.

Police records showed that two cars owned by Levitin had accumulated 25 unpaid tickets in the last five months. The citations were issued for a wide range of violations, including parking in front of a fire hydrant, in a yellow zone, in a cross walk, in a truck zone and in a bus zone.

"I'm human like everybody else, and I'm so glad the story has come out," said Levitin, who rules on parking tickets given in the city. "Everybody assumes that me being the traffic commissioner, I can either fix my tickets or I don't have to pay them. It's not true."

Levitin, who is running for a judgeship, told a reporter from KRON-TV that his car had been borrowed by campaign workers and that "I didn't know this was happening."

"When you brought it to my attention, I paid the full amount, like most of the citizens of San Francisco do," he said.

"I'm human, and I also park illegally in a city that's very difficult to park (in)," said Levitin.
