Bali, Tokyo talks next on Reagan agenda

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
AP White House Correspondent

HONOLULU (AP) — President Reagan sets out Monday for the working portion of his 13-day journey to the Far East, going first to Bali for meetings with officials from Southeast Asian nations, then on to Tokyo for a seven-nation economic summit likely to be overshadowed by talk of terrorism.

Reagan and his wife, Nancy, are to be met in Bali by their host, President Suharto of Indonesia, who will escort them to one of the resort island's modern tourist hotels, which has been taken over and sealed off by the White House for the occasion.

Security surrounding the presidential entourage is always pervasive, but it has been tightened another notch for this trip, which follows in the wake of the April 14 reprisal raid against Libya. Reporters accompanying the president but on a separate aircraft have been told they must personally present each piece of luggage to special baggage handlers, and bags must be unlocked for physical searches before they will be loaded on the plane.

Guards are posted not only around Reagan and top government officials, as usual, but outside the press rooms for White House reporters at each stop as well.

During the four-day stopover in Bali, Reagan is scheduled to meet Salvador Laurel, the new vice president and foreign minister of the Philippines. Laurel will be the first official of the new Philippine regime to meet with Reagan.

The White House on Wednesday proposed to send $150 million in new economic and military aid to the Philippines following the transfer of power from Ferdinand Marcos to President Corazon Aquino.

The president also will hold formal talks with Suharto, a meeting U.S. officials expect will be characterized by a friendly discussion of trade matters and proposals for increasing U.S. investment in Indonesia, a major oil-producing nation hit hard by the collapse of world petroleum prices.

Despite an appeal by the U.S.-based Asia Watch Committee, which contends that Suharto's authoritarian regime routinely ignores human rights concerns, Reagan is not expected to dwell on human rights in his talks with the Indonesian leader.

"Our policy is one of quiet diplomacy," one senior administration official said when asked if Reagan would raise the issue. "We don't have any major problems" with the Suharto government.

Reagan also plans to confer with the foreign ministers of member governments from the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN), an organization of six non-Communist nations in the region bound by favorable trade agreements.

'Christmas' gifts arrive at homes

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

Wanda Burton's family tells her she asks for the strangest things for her birthdays.

"One year I asked for a storm door and that's what they gave me," she laughed. "At Christmas my family came over and re-did the living room as our Christmas present."

This month Wanda and her husband Johnny received yet another strange gift. They were among owners of 150 homes that qualified for Christmas in April — a 13-year old program that annually repairs homes for primarily elderly residents.

Both the Burtons stood outside their small wooden house at 1404 S. Baird, while a large group of volunteers from St. Nicholas Episcopal Church scrambled like ants over the structure, sawing, digging, nailing, scraping to get the 36-year-old house back into shape.

Burton said the house "was rotting away" and that the couple could not afford to fix it up.

"It would have cost thousands of dollars I'm sure," he said.

"I don't know what it would have cost," added Mrs. Burton, "but there's no way we could have done all this on $600 a month."

Renovation "engineer" for the residence, Murphy Horton, estimated more than 50 people had volunteered to help fix up the Burton residence.

"We'll be through by the day's end, Lord willing," he said, as he swung a large piece of lumber around.

The group's efforts began with a morning Eucharist at St. Nicholas followed by commencement at the work site at 8 a.m.

The Burtons, however, were not the only beneficiaries of the Christmas in April program. The organization has grown from $4,000 in donations used to restore 17 homes in 1973 to this year's budget of $100,000 needed to mend between 150 to 170 homes.

About $65,000 has been raised since Dec. 1 to provide materials for renovations. Last year almost 3,000 volunteers and 80 organizations participated in the one-day program, which repairs or replaces many things including roofs, insulation, plumbing and electricity in homes of the elderly or handicapped. About $80,000 was raised last year for the one-day restoration of 152 homes. However, the program also works on homes throughout the year with 30 homes being repaired since last April.

Christmas in April, which was formed in Oct. 1973 has repaired more than 1,000 homes since its inception. About 95 percent of the people helped by the program are 60 years or older. The income level of those helped ranges from $350 to $600 per month.

The idea of having volunteers fix up homes has spread to other communities including Cicso, Pecos, Wichita Falls, Beaumont, Port Arthur and Washington D.C.

Christmas in April is headed by Bobby J. Trimble, a long-time Midland oil scout who was instrumental in starting the organization. In 1981 he received the Governor's Award for Outstanding Volunteer Work and in 1982, in ceremonies at the White House, was presented the Presidential Award for Outstanding Volunteer Work. In January, Trimble was named recipient of the first volunteer service award to be presented monthly by the Leadership Midland Alumnus Association. The award bears his name.

Six persons killed in Haitian protest

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Police fired into a crowd marching on the main prison Saturday, killing three demonstrators, and three other people were electrocuted when power lines were knocked down, witnesses reported.

The march, involving an estimated 10,000 people, had been called to mark the 23rd anniversary of a crackdown by the Duvalier family government then in power.

Hospital officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said at least 21 people were injured, including one critally wounded by gunfire.

Groups of youths later took to the streets of the capital and formed barricades with burning tires. They shouted "We don't want the army anymore."

Opposition leaders demanded the ruling military-civilian council resign, and called for a general strike Monday if it did not.

Local journalists, who were in the front of the procession, said about 3,000 people began the march from the downtown Sacred Heart Roman Catholic church following a memorial service.

By the time they reached Fort Dimanche prison three miles away, the crowd had swelled to 10,000, the journalists said. The prison, on the edge of the Port-au-Prince harbor, is believed to have held political prisoners during the authoritarian rule of the Duvalier family.

Marchers carried a coffin to the prison, and some carried pictures of relatives slain in the Duvalier attacks against opposition leaders.

The demonstrators chanted "Burn Fort Dimanche! Destroy Fort Dimanche!" As the crowd pressed against a rope cordon about 50 yards from the prison gate, some shouted, "Grenadiers forward, no matter who dies" — words from an song about Haiti's independence struggle against France almost 200 years ago.

Police guarding the prison first lobbed tear gas in an attempt to disperse the crowd and then opened fire when the marchers reached the gate in the barbed-wire fence surrounding it, killing three people, witnesses said.

Police Capt. Isidor Pongnon, the officer in charge at Fort Dimanche, said he had orders to establish a cordon across the front of the prison to keep the crowd under control.

"We received word from headquarters that they were holding a symbolic march," Pongnon said. "But they tried to storm the prison."

He said his men first fired into the air, but that demonstrators began to stone the soldiers.

Pongnon added that the chief organizer of the march, opposition leader Francois Benoit, tried unsuccessfully to calm the crowd.

Benoit blamed the confrontation on agitators. "I think that some people came with a specific idea ... to create trouble," he said. "There were two distinct crowds."

Officials at University State Hospital said the bodies of three people taken there had received fatal gunshot wounds.

Red Cross officials said three people were electrocuted when power lines fell onto the rain-drenched street.

Pongnon said demonstrators pulled down the power lines. A local journalist said electrical wires were dangling from poles, but quoted people in the crowd as saying they might have fallen after being hit by gunfire.

Fourteen people were treated for wounds at University State Hospital and seven others at the private Canape Vert hospital, officials at the institutions said.

Odessans pick Don Carter by 682 votes in mayoral runoff

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Midland Mayor-elect Carroll Thomas was in Odessa Saturday night to congratulate Odessa's Mayor-elect Don Carter, who had just defeated Lorraine Bonner by a margin of 682 votes in the runoff race.

Thomas said he hoped to work very closely with Carter in an effort to resolve economic problems in both cities. Thomas said this was not to say the two cities would not continue to compete in some areas, but where there was a commonality of interest, he expected to be able to work closely with Carter and the Odessa City Council to work out solutions to problems. Thomas said he hoped to reestablish the joint council meetings the Midland and Odessa councils used to have when he was a city council member.

Carter said he and Thomas planned to hold a breakfast meeting Wednesday to discuss areas where the the two cities could work together. He described Thomas presence at the Ector County school administration building where voted were tallied a "tremendous gesture." Of Thomas' desire to expand cooperative efforts, Carter expressed the belief that "what benefits one city benefits the other." The two cities have joined together in the past on various projects, he said, and he hopes to carry on those efforts.

Ms. Bonner, obviously disappointed by her failure to gain a majority and become Odessa's first female mayor, said the "turnout was about as expected." Asked if she could think of any she might have done differently, Ms. Bonner said, "We did exactly the same things we did in the primary. We did everything I think we should have done," she said. She said she was at a loss to figure out why her efforts weren't successful. But, she said, you can bet we'll be spending a lot of time trying to figure out what happened. She led the voting in the first election held April 5.

Republican hopefuls see same issues, different solutions

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first in a six-part series examining the contested and uncontested races in the May 3 Democratic and Republican primaries. This first segment deals with the Republican candidates for 21st Congressional District race.

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

ELECTION '86

If there is one agreement among the Republican candidates for the 21st Congressional District seat, it is they fear watching the oil and gas industry flow down the hole while agriculture stops plowing new ground.

But on ways to handle those problems they differ, as they do in their stated qualifications for the job being vacated by Tom Loeffler, R-Hunt. Seeking to replace Loeffler are G. Thane Akins of Midland, Henry Gandy of Kerrville, and Van Archer, Jeff Wentworth, Lamar Smith and Lowell "Duke" Embs of San Antonio. Embs could not be contacted for comment.

The May 3 primary will determine who the Republican nominee will be for the November general election.

An oil import fee has been the most battered topic of the race — some candidates saying they support one and others opposing it.

From Staff Reports

The Sesquicentennial Wagon Train will be in Midland Friday and a number of activities are being planned for that day, including a dance, live entertainment and a Fajita Dinner.

The wagon train will arrive at ClayDesta, site of the Midland activities, Friday after leaving Odessa at 8 a.m. that morning. The route is east on Highway 191 to Loop 250, heading north and east on the loop to Big Spring St. It will then head south on Big Spring to Smith Dr. at ClayDesta.

Along the route to Midland, a color guard of eight Midlanders will meet the wagon train at the county line and escort it into Midland. The color guard will carry the six flags of Texas, a Centennial and Sesquicentennial flag and will be led by Chris Scharbauer and Linda Cowden Isbell, Sesquicentennial Commission co-chairmen.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most Americans get an extra hour of light for sports, cookouts and other evening activities starting today, with the return of Daylight-Saving Time.

The change occurred officially at 2 a.m., with time springing forward an hour in most parts of the nation — except Hawaii, Arizona and parts of Indiana.

Daylight time lasts until Oct. 26 this year, when it will be time for our clocks to "fall back".

All have friendly relations with the United States, which has dramatically increased its own trade with the ASEAN nations in the past two decades.

While in Bali, Mrs. Reagan will embark on a separate schedule to be introduced to the volcanic island's unique culture and to visit a drug treatment project before heading off on her own for Malaysia and Thailand to press her campaign against drug abuse. She is scheduled to rejoin her husband at the close of the summit in Tokyo.

Cordoned off in a turn-of-the-century palace modeled along European architectural lines, the leaders of the major industrial democracies are expected to produce some sort of communique on terrorism. But Reagan said he cares little about that.

"I'm not going there with the idea we should get some grandiose statement" deploring terrorism, Reagan said this week. "I think we all know how we feel about terrorism. I'm hopeful we can sit down and work out what it is that we can do together to deal with this problem."

A senior administration official, speaking on condition he not be identified, said the United States doesn't expect its European allies to agree in Tokyo to impose long-sought economic sanctions to punish Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy for espousing a policy of terrorist attacks.

"Most of the important actions are probably not in view, and desirably so," the official said, noting that one area where there has been sharp improvement recently has been in the gathering of intelligence about impending attacks.

The United States also is expected to seek closer cooperation and tighter regulation of international airline and maritime agreements that could range from improvements in airport security to denying port privileges and landing rights to the flag carriers of nations accused of sponsoring terrorism.

The nations represented at the summit are Britain, Canada, France, Italy, Japan, the United States and West Germany. The European Common Market also sends a representative. This will be their 12th annual gathering to discuss mutual economic concerns, which this year are likely to include changing trade relationships, particularly with export-oriented Japan, the falling price of oil, fluctuations on world currency markets and arrangements for a new round of talks aimed at further reducing trade barriers between nations.

Although the formal plenary sessions are supposed to be restricted to economic issues, the leaders dine together during the three-day session, and it is at such meals that less formal political discussions usually take place.

In addition to terrorism, prospects for a U.S.-Soviet summit later this year and the limited progress in arms control talks in Geneva are certain topics for discussion.

In addition to agriculture, other issues cited by the candidates included the economy and a balanced budget, immigration and national security, which leads back into the oil and gas industry.

All candidates interviewed said they support eliminating the Windfall Profit Tax, retaining the intangible drilling costs and allowances as tax exemptions, striking out the Fuel Use Act and deregulating natural gas.

AKINS SUPPORTS a straight-across-the-board import fee with no exemptions and with a time limit, or sunset. "Sure, we'd love to see $28 a barrel oil come back, but the odds on that are slim to none," said Akins, a petroleum engineer by trade.

Smith also supports a temporary oil import fee that could be sunseted out of existence. He suggested earmarking "revenues out of that fee to help reduce the deficit. We don't have a free market. Foreign producers are nationalized and they don't pay a Windfall Profit Tax. They participate in price fixing."

Wentworth and Archer are opposed to an oil import fee. Wentworth said the only way he could support such a fee is if it is tied to prices — as the price on the market rises the fee would eliminated. "Sunset doesn't work in federal government," he said.

Archer said he's against such a fee because "I'm basically against increases in taxation. I've worked my whole political career to lower taxes. Historically, protectionist measures have never worked."

And Gandy, who said he opposes the fee because of the exemptions that Congress would tie on to it, has proposed another method to get similar help for the industry without sending it through the House and Senate. He has written Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldridge to investigate the Trade Expansion Act and Section 232 to see if the President could act if he determines imports are a threat to national security. "I believe the President should act immediately to impose quotas or duties on imported oil," he said.

CONCERNING AGRICULTURE, Gandy noted the federal government has spent $80 billion on agriculture programs in the last five years. "They aren't helping agriculture as much as they should. We can not sell what we're producing. We have to open up markets. There is a trade deficit and we've got to get tough with our trading partners and take action."

Archer said it's not realistic for the federal government to get completely out of agriculture. He suggested the government quit giving billions of dollars to reward farmers for inefficient management, refocus the federal farm research and extension services away from how to increase production to how to decrease farm costs and target commodity prices and income supports to maintain moderate production levels. "We need to adopt tough land use and conservation requirements to assure fertile farm land for the future," he said.

With the problems in the petroleum and agriculture industries, the economy isn't being helped, according to the candidates. None of the candidates expressed opposition to the Gramm-Rudman Bill which limits the amount of increase in spending each year until the budget is balanced.

Akins said the primary issue in his campaign is to control taxes and balance the federal budget. "It's not a revenue problem, it's a spending problem," he said, calling for passage of a constitutional amendment that would require the budget to be balanced and giving the President line-item veto "to eliminate boondoggles inserted into critical legislation."

Wentworth agreed with the constitutional amendment and line-item veto capability. "The major problem in Congress is over-spending tens of billions of dollars year after year. They came very close to getting a balanced budget amendment passed this year. It's attainable."

But the problems of an increasing number of illegal aliens and drug traffic from Mexico is complicating the economy in the 21st District, according to candidates.

Archer is opposed to employer sanctions as a way to halt the flow of illegal aliens and proposes to use military personnel to assist the Border Patrol. These military people could conduct bivouac operations at the border. There is no fence that could be built high enough to "stop someone from getting in the country. Everyone yearns to come to this country," he said.

SMITH TIES immigration and drug trafficking together and calls for enforcing the laws "so illegal aliens don't exercise benefits to which they're not entitled." He said a pilot program in Houston showed money could be saved by keeping the illegal aliens away from such benefits as welfare.

On the long-term basis, Smith said the United States must cooperate with Mexico to build up that country's economy. He suggested increasing the twin-plant form of business with Mexico dropping its restrictions on allowing foreigners to own businesses. With the twin plants, "the United States could go in and create jobs on both sides of the border," said Smith.

Turning to drugs, he said there is an increased amount of drug traffic coming across the border and he called for more radar sites. Military surveillance planes could be used in helping to track these planes loaded with drugs, according to Smith.

Akins agreed in principle with Smith about the need to help Mexico improve its economy and also sees the problems and turmoil in Central America as contributing to the increase in illegal aliens. He also supports the twin industry concept as one solution.

Also in agreement is Wentworth, who added that Mexico has enough "natural resources and labor supply to have a dynamic economy." He also called for erecting a fence along the border and instituting a guest worker program. "The illegal aliens provide a great, valuable service to this country. We need workers, but in an approved way."

The drug trade, said Wentworth, "poses a more serious threat to the fabric of our society than terrorism." He proposed to involve the military along the border to follow the planeloads of drugs.

But the national security is being threatened, said the candidates, and not by terrorists. They all pointed to the problem of national security for as the oil industry declines, so does the amount of oil produced domestically which is used for military ships and planes.

"We're losing a majority of Texas production, which is a good amount of U.S. production," said Gandy. "It is a critical issue to our nation and a matter of national security. The Saudis are hoping that by keeping prices low we'll stop our production."

Akins pointed out it takes five to seven years from the "first glimmer of a prospect of oil until that gasoline is put into someone's tank. You can't have this domestic oil industry destroyed."

WHEN IT COMES to differences among the candidates, Akins cited his 20-plus years in the petroleum industry as his strong point. "There's a vacuum about oil and gas knowledge in Congress. They need someone who cannot only vote the right way but convince others."

Smith described himself as a person who can take the initiative, show leadership and be effective in Washington. "I was the first candidate to talk of a temporary oil import fee and to talk of putting a lid on the drug problem." He also included his job with the Small Business Administration as background for already knowing his way around Washington, D.C.

Wentworth pointed out he has served more military time than the other candidates, including three years as a counter-intelligence officer, is the only GOP candidate who has campaigned in all the district's 26 counties, has had Capitol Hill experience as an aide to a congressman and has spent six years as a local elected official representing a quarter of a million people.

Archer said he has been a conservative spokesman in the Republican Party for a number of years, is not a one-issue person, and has been endorsed by "virtually every conservative organization in America" including Right to Work, Right to Life and Gunowners of America. "People can identify with that," he said.

Gandy cited his experience in Washington, first as an aide to Loeffler and then as a special assistant in the White House. "No question oil and gas is one of the most important issues...but there is just more than one issue in this district. The person elected needs to be able to communicate effectively and I've been working on all those issues. This is one of the largest and most diverse districts in the nation. We can't leave the gate open."

Tornadoes hit Iowa

ROCK RAPIDS, Iowa (AP) — Two tornadoes touched down in northwest Iowa Saturday night, killing a child, injuring two people and heavily damaging several farms, witnesses said.

A spokeswoman at Merril Pioneer Community hospital in Rock Rapids said a child identified as Joni DeBoer of rural Lyon County was killed, but Lyon County sheriff's department said officers could not confirm the death.

The hospital spokeswoman, who refused to give her name, said one of the two injured was in critical condition.

All activities except the Fajita Dinner are free.

The wagon train will leave at 8 a.m. the following day for Patricia.

No damage, injuries noted as earthquake felt in Hawaii

HONOLULU (AP) — An earthquake measuring 4.6 on the Richter scale was felt around Hawaii on Saturday morning, but no damage or injuries were reported, authorities said.

The earthquake's epicenter was located about 150 miles east of Honolulu at 7:19 a.m. HST (1:19 p.m. EDT), said Bruce Turner, a geophysicist with the Pacific Tsunami Warning Center in Ewa Beach. He said the tremor was not large enough to cause an ocean wave capable of property damage.

Police on the islands of Oahu, Maui, Hawaii and Kauai said they received numerous calls from residents who reported rattled windows and things falling from shelves, but no structural damage or injuries.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude. Thus a reading of 7.5 reflects an earthquake 10 times stronger than one of 6.5.

An earthquake of 3.5 on the Richter scale can cause slight damage in the local area, 4 moderate damage, 5 considerable damage, 6 severe damage. A 7 reading is major earthquake, capable of widespread heavy damage; 8 is a great quake, capable of tremendous damage.

The San Francisco earthquake of 1906, which occurred before the Richter scale was devised, has been estimated at 8.3 on the Richter scale.

Midland man out on bond in indecency case

When she failed to get at least 50 percent of the vote a runoff was required with Carter, who had finished second in the original voting.

And, when the final tally in the mayor's runoff race Saturday was in, Carter had 5,066 votes to Ms. Bonner's 4,489.

In the District 1 City Council race, Jaime Rodriguez defeated former council member Margaret Burton by a margin of 222 votes.

In the Ector County School District board race, where two positions were at stake, former ECISD principal Jim Spencer defeated runoff opponent Olen Arnold by 139 votes to gain the Position 1 slot. Judy Bridges lost her bid for the Position 2 ECISD seat to George "Buddy" West by 309 votes.

DALLAS (AP) — The former director of the Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport has been charged with accepting more than $5,000 worth of free survey work from a company he supervised as the airport's chief executive.

Ernest E. Dean, who resigned as executive director last July, was named in an arrest warrant Friday, bringing to 31 the number of charges against people accused of various crimes involving work at the airport.

Those charged include nine former airport employees, the H.B. Zachry construction company and a former company employee.

Dean is accused in a police warrant of illegally accepting $5,642 worth of free survey work from the Fort Worth engineerng firm of Carter & Burgess Inc.

Carter & Burgess allegedly did the surveys between 1980 and 1984, a time when the firm was awarded more than $6 million worth of airport contracts.

Police investigators questioned Dean at his apartment Friday but did not take him into custody. He still was not in custody Saturday, nor had he posted a $500 bond specified in the warrant, according to officials at the Lew Sterrett Justice Center.

Police filed the Class A misdemeanor charge against Dean without notifying Dallas County prosecutors, who said they had decided not to pursue the case.

"This came as a complete surprise to the district attorney's office," Dallas County Assistant District Attorney Ted Steinke said Friday. "The district attorney's office has not seen it (the charge) nor participated in its preparation."

Police said they took action because a statute of limitations was to expire on Saturday.

Dallas Deputy Police Chief Greg Holliday, head of the criminal investigation at D-FW, said he didn't know why the district attorney's office opposed filing the charge because prosecutors had never told him the case was too weak to try.

"When you conduct a public integrity investigation and when the elements of an offense are present, you file the case," he said. "We wouldn't have (filed the charge) if we didn't think a case existed."

Dean, 62, reached by phone at his Dallas home Friday by the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, said he knew nothing about the warrant for his arrest and called the allegations against him "ridiculous."

John Burgess, chairman of Carter & Burgess, said the company's president, W.N. Hammond, managed its work at D-FW. Hammond was out of town and could not be reached for comment Saturday.

But Burgess said, "I do understand we did do some surveys for the property of Mr. Dean, but I don't know if we ever collected any money from him or not."

But under an agreement with the board, Dean continued to draw his full annual salary of $113,608 plus benefits until Dec. 31.

Dean was one of the first engineers to work on the sprawling airport. He came to the area in 1965 as an employee of Tippetts-Abbett-McCarthy-Stratton, the New York City-based engineering firm that did much of the initial planning.

Second graders float through Texas history

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Second-graders at an Episcopal school took a three-mile ride into Texas history as their colorful float rolled slowly through downtown to celebrate the arrival of the first 300 settlers to the state.

"I think it's very fun; it's very exciting," young Davey Crockett look-alike Billy Chenault said Friday before stepping aboard the flower-bedecked, sand-colored float with its sturdy log cabin and smoke-belching chimney.

Chenault, a student at St. George Episcopal School, said those settlers — enticed out of Tennessee by Stephen F. Austin — ended up at San Felipe on the Brazos.

"Well, it's neat and I'm probably going to have a lot of fun," Nicole Felty said.

The students' principal said the float provided hands-on experience following book study on Texas settlers in classes.

"It's not just a float; everything ties together," principal Margie Boggus told the San Antonio Light. "It's a thrilling thing. Very few people get to ride on a float and they'll remember every time they see a parade.

"That's more important than winning first place," she said.

Ms. Boggus said one month of Thursday nights and Saturday mornings went into the making of the float.

Western Co. stops payments on bank debt

FORT WORTH (AP) — Western Co. of North America, beleaguered by the oil industry slump, suspended all payments of interest and principal on more than $400 million in bank debt for "an indefinite period."

Company officials attributed the move Friday to "continued deterioration of market conditions" affecting both Western's lines of business — onshore oil and gas well services and offshore contract drilling.

"The suspension of interest and principal payments was undertaken to conserve the company's cash position, which is currently in excess of $45 million," said Western Chairman H.E. "Eddie" Chiles.

Western is "as ill as you can get," said Sam Allbright, a Dallas-based analyst with Kidder, Peabody & Co.

But Chiles said the decision to suspend debt payments is "a long way from being fatal."

He said there is a "pretty good chance" the company can reach agreements with its bankers before July 1 that would allow it to repay its debts under new terms.

He has said previously he might be forced to sell in order to keep his oil services company afloat.

"I am not smart enough to run two businesses and if I have to devote full time to one, it will be oil services," he said earlier.

In a written statement Friday, Chiles said Western is "continuing discussions with its institutional creditors in an effort to reach a mutually satisfactory restructuring of the company's indebtedness."

The company said its total debt was $582 million.

Company officials said the suspension applies to $368 million owed to 17 banks led by Manufacturers Hanover under a revolving credit facility, $30 million owed to Chemical Bank and $9.5 million owed another institutional lender.

Western also suspended the repayment of about $125 million in secured debt, officials said.

Western officials said suspension of payments will result in events of default under these and other loan agreements, including the company's 13¼ percent senior subordinated debentures due in 1992.

The company lost $33 million in the first quarter of this year, the 13th straight quarter the oilfield services firm recorded a loss.

Western's independent auditing firm, in a statement last week accompanying the annual report to shareholders, said that the company "may be unable to continue operating in its present form" if it fails to restructure its debt.

San Antonio council restricts public smoking

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — San Antonio has become the latest Texas city to take action restricting smoking.

The City Council voted 7-3 on Thursday to forbid smoking, as of Sept. 1, in buildings owned or leased by the city.

The new law also restricts smoking to designated areas in bus stations, airports and train stations. Restaurants with more than 50 seats will have to designate a smoking area with adequate ventilation and some sort of barrier.

Such places as banks, beauty salons and supermarkets also will be required to restrict smokers to certain areas, as will concert halls, auditoriums, exhibition halls, waiting rooms and lobbies larger than 750 square feet.

Businesses with 70 percent of their annual gross sales made through alcohol are exempt. After lengthy discussion, the council decided not to include the workplace in the ban, leaving that decision up to employers.

Councilwoman Yolanda Vera, who led the anti-smoking effort, said she was pleased with the final result.

Trail drive provides taste of the Old West

MOUNTAIN HOME (AP) — Cowboys, longhorns and trail drives haven't gone the way of the Old West, and they won't as long as Charles Schreiner III runs the Y.O. Ranch.

Schreiner gathered about 150 of his cowpoke friends to the rolling 55,000-acre ranch Saturday for an old-fashioned longhorn trail drive.

"We have fun," Schreiner said when asked why he puts on the trail drive, now in its 11th year.

"We like to keep out here as much of the Old West as we possibly can under the circumstances," he said.

Except for the pickup trucks and four-wheel drives, the trail drive looked much like those that have been depicted on television and in western art.

Cowboys and cowgirls were dressed in jeans, chaps, bandanas, spurs, cowboy hats and boots.

They rode on spirited horses and the less hardy jostled along in covered wagons and a stage coach.

"Whoo, cattle," cooed Kenny House, U.S. marshal from Dodge City, Kan.

House said he helped Schreiner with the first trail drive in 1976, which extended to the newly opened Ranching Heritage Center at Texas Tech University. Subsequent drives have been held at the ranch.

"In the movies they said 'head 'em up and move 'em out.' Here in the brush country of the Y.O., they say 'head 'em out and split 'em up,' " he said, referring to the thick underbrush and trees on the ranch near Mountain Home.

Schreiner's grandfather Capt. Charles Schreiner founded the ranch about 100 years ago and herded 300,000 head of longhorn to Dodge City in his lifetime.

Schreiner, who has been active in keeping the longhorn a thriving breed, sponsored a trail drive from San Antonio to Dodge City in 1966. Most of the trek was made by truck, with stops along the way for short trail drives.

"We decided that was so much fun we'd never do it again," joked Schreiner, a pinched cowboy hat resting on his lap.

Man released after being charged with parents' murders

BEAUMONT (AP) — A 37-year-old Beaumont man was released on $100,000 bond after being charged with the double shotgun slayings of his mother and father at breakfast.

Andrew Sawyer Weller was released from the Jefferson County Jail Friday afternoon after his brother George Weller Jr., a Beaumont lawyer, posted the $100,000 bond, said his attorney, Joseph C. "Lum" Hawthorn.

Andrew Weller is accused in the slayings of his parents, George A. Weller Sr., 74, a retired Beaumont attorney, and Eleanor Weller, 69. The double slayings are the fifth and sixth homicides in the area within the past eight days.

Police arrested the younger Weller Friday morning, several hours after he called police to say he had found his parents fatally wounded in the dining room of their home.

Justice of the Peace Harold Engstrom, who went with investigating officers to the scene, said it appeared the victims had been eating breakfast when they were shot in the head. Police found a 12-gauge automatic shotgun on a chair near the bodies.

Detective Charles Tyler said evidence "indicated that someone had cleansed himself in a bathroom at the home. There was no sign of forced entry at the residence."

Police said the Wellers were critical of Andrew's inability to hold a steady job.

Authorities said Dale Dowell of Beaumont went to the Weller home, where the three family members lived, and was met by Andrew Weller at the door.

Dowell is the father-in-law of Chris Owens, a Beaumont photographer found shot to death April 18. Owens lived next door to the Wellers prior to his death. But police said there is no connection in the three deaths.

"He (Dowell) apparently went to the Wellers' house with the intention of asking them about getting someone to mow the (Owens') lawn," said one investigator. "When he knocked on the door, Andrew answered...The first thing out of Andrew's mouth was, 'My parents are in here dead.' "

Abilene stages disaster drill just week after twister

ABILENE (AP) — Emergency workers in a city near Sweetwater, a West Texas community where tornadoes plowed through a trailer home park and subdivision, held a drill to evaluate their ability to handle a similar storm.

More than 150 Abilene city, hospital, community and private workers proved Friday they could handle a major tornado that might strike the city.

A pair of twisters one week ago struck the southern edge of Sweetwater, 47 miles west of here, causing an estimated $20 million in damages, killing one person and injuring more than 90.

In Abilene, emergency personnel participated in a two-hour emergency exercise. The statistics after the mock storm were 12 "fatalities" and 25 to 30 other "injuries," officials said.

"We got good marks, but we also learned a few things we could do to improve our ability to respond, and that's the whole idea," said Ron Pollard, risk manager for the city, told the Abilene Reporter-News.

Robert Stout, an exercise-training officer with the Division of Emergency Management, Texas Department of Public Safety, said the city's drill was "excellent."

But he said municipal officials missed the first tornado "warning" in the drill.

"We lost 15 minutes of warning time when the first (tornado) spotter message came in early, and it never got relayed," said Stout. "That's the real world. That happens."

The drill site was a swath including Madison Middle School, Jackson Elementary and the High Meadows area.

Emergency workers established treatment centers. Hospital, ambulance, Dyess Air Force, police and fire department personnel identified "victims."

Lt. Carl Collum, fire department public information officer, said the first teams at the site began putting cards on victims that give, at a glance, the degree of injury, vital statistics, time of injury and any identification.

"In a true situation, the fire department probably would be in charge," said Collum, because of their emergency, fire and disaster control training. "Also, in Abilene, the fire department spotters are going to be the first to identify tornadoes and sound the warnings."

He said information from the Sweetwater twisters and other storms were incorporated into the disaster plan.

"This kind of exercise points out to us a lot of the problems that could happen in a real situation," Collum said.

For example, Friday's simulation included a call from a fire truck needing to repair three flat tires before it could go to the scene.

Stout, who works with 300 agencies around Texas organizing and evaluating disaster drills annually, said he will give the city a full, written evaluation.

Hail smashes windows; Funnel clouds sighted

ABILENE (AP) — Thunderstorms that produced grapefruit-size hail and high winds smashed windows and damaged some buildings and homes in West Texas after funnel clouds were sighted, authorities said.

Two twisters were sighted Friday about 10 miles west and four miles north of Roby, said a Fisher County Sheriff's Department dispatcher.

The National Weather Service posted two tornado warnings Saturday night for Haskell and Stonewall counties in West Texas, but sheriff's dispatchers in both counties said no damage or injuries had been reported.

In the Friday incidents, the sheriff's pickup truck was battered and his windows were broken out by "baseball-sized" hail near Rotan, the Fisher County dispatcher said.

He said another sheriff's department employee told him that the windows of her mobile home had been broken by grapefruit-sized hail.

The dispatcher said the storm dented and bent sheet metal in the mobile home.

Rally breaks UT rules, but police make no arrests

AUSTIN (AP) — A rally in which about 800 anti-apartheid demonstrators chanted and listened to speeches at the University of Texas violated UT rules on the time and place of public meetings, campus officials said.

But UT police made no arrests in the 1½-hour rally Friday outside the Main Building. Officials said 228 people were arrested in three other unauthorized rallies this month at West Mall.

Ronald Brown, vice president for student affairs, said disciplinary proceedings will begin early next week for students who have been identified as leaders of the rally. They include some who were arrested in the earlier demonstrations and are already facing disciplinary penalties, he said.

Brown said the decision not to make arrests was not a concession that the previous arrests were ill-advised and did not mean that the university no longer intended to enforce its meeting rules.

He said it would be "reasonable to assume" that the penalties will be more severe for students who have repeatedly broken the rules. Disciplinary penalties outlined in the UT catalog range from a warning letter to expulsion.

Brown said the university's change in tactics resulted from meetings this week involving administrators, police, UT attorneys and others.

"There was a consensus that although the arrests were appropriate the first three times — and if things got out of hand, they would have been appropriate here — if the purpose was to test our rules, there is now ample evidence to do that," he said.

"We also are keeping in reserve the possibility of further arrests, both today and in the future," said Brown.

He said the rally was videotaped by UT officials to help in identifying leaders.

Glenn Maloney, assistant dean of students, told the Austin American-Statesman that previous arrests "have enabled us to identify the leaders, so we don't need to arrest anyone again to identify them" in order to initiate disciplinary proceedings.

Maloney said he had several complaints Friday from students who said the rally was interfering with their right to sit at tables along the mall and distribute literature. The tables are used daily by many groups interested in political issues and other causes.

UT Police Chief Donald Cannon, who watched part of the rally from the porch of the Main Building, said police were instructed by administrators not to make any arrests unless there was violence.

Protesters held a "teach-in" on South Africa at noon on the patio of the Texas Union, one of two campus "free speech areas" where meetings are unrestricted.

The protesters moved at 1 p.m. to the west steps of the Main Building, a West Mall area where rallies are allowed only between noon and 1 p.m.

They moved to the plaza on the building's south side after about 45 minutes of chants and speeches and spread out to hear more speeches in front of the broad steps that lead to the building's main entrance.

STATE IN BRIEF

Widow wins Tenneco suit

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — An 87-year-old Glencoe widow has been awarded more than $4 million in a lawsuit against Tenneco Inc. over alleged salt water pond contamination that the woman's attorney contends could take "10 to 50 years to clean up."

Tulsa attorney Randy Miller, who represented Allena R Gould, said he was told the judgment returned by a Payne County jury Thursday was the largest in the north-central county's history.

Dave Simpson of Oklahoma City, attorney for the Houston-based Tenneco, said no decision has been made about appealing the lawsuit. But Miller said he expects Tenneco attorneys to appeal the case.

The jury, which heard eight days of arguments in the civil trial before specially assigned District Judge Donald E. Powers of Chandler, deliberated more than two hours before returning the verdict.

The judgment provided $2,002,000 in actual damages, $2 million in punitive damages and $50,000 for Mrs. Gould's inconvenience, annoyance and discomfort, court officials said.

Victim's mate wins suit

BEAUMONT (AP) — A jury has ruled that John Walden is due $3 million from the estate of the Florida man who is believed to have kidnapped and killed his wife two years ago, but any money Walden is able to get probably will have to come from insurance companies.

Walden's wife, Terry, a 24-year-old Lamar University nursing student, disappeared from a local mall on March 22, 1984. Four days later, workers found her body floating in a canal on the edge of town. Her body bore stab wounds, bruises and rope burns.

A four-woman, two-man federal jury Friday awarded $3 million to the victim's family after concluding that Christoper Wilder abducted and killed her and knew what he was doing.

Wilder's estate has been estimated at $500,000. However, claims by the Internal Revenue Service totaling about $300,000 and lawsuits filed by victims' families have exceeded the worth of the estate.

Although chances of collecting money from Wilder's estate are slim, Friday's verdict clears the way for Walden to sue Wilder's insurance companies in an attempt to get the jury's award.

Some inmates can vote

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — More than 700 Texas prison inmates are eligible to vote in the May 3 primaries, state and local officials say.

A legal technicality allows them to register and cast votes by mail because their cases are on appeal and their conviction, therefore, is not final.

Statewide, the 38,000-inmate corrections system has 757 prisoners who are eligible to vote, spokesman Phil Guthrie said.

He said system officials cooperate when the inmates request registration forms, but no list of those who actually vote is kept. They register and vote by absentee ballot, either in their home county or in the county where they intend to relocate after prison, he said.

Convicts must be mentally competent, have a case on appeal and not have been arrested while on parole or probation, he added.

Reagan: Cowardly acts won't go unanswered

HONOLULU (AP) — President Reagan, wending his way across the Pacific on the longest trip of his presidency, Saturday declared that "cowardly acts against Americans" by terrorists and dictators would not go unanswered.

"The noble profession of arms has never been more demanding," Reagan told a welcoming crowd at Hickam Air Force Base here after a 5½-hour flight from Los Angeles.

"And, yes, we're showing the world dictators and terrorists that when perpetrate their cowardly acts upon citizens of the United States, they had best be prepared for the consequences," he said in clear reference to the April 14 U.S. bombing attack on Libya.

In the second stop of his 13-day trip to the Far East that culminates with an economic summit in Tokyo, Reagan depicted the world as a dangerous "and in some regions savage" place to live.

Wearing a bright orange lei that was presented to him as he stepped from Air Force One, Reagan addressed the air field audience under a blazing sun.

Afterward, the president's motorcade made an unscheduled stop at a hospital on the outskirts of Honolulu so he and First Lady Nancy Reagan could visit a boy ill with leukemia.

Presidential aides said 13-year-old Randy Raquion had written Reagan in thanks after the White House helped his Filipino grandmother come to Hawaii. Aides said the grandmother previously had been unable to get a visa to be with her sick grandchild.

Earlier in the day, Reagan made use of his weekly radio address to emphasize the U.S. status as "Pacific power" and to denounce the continued occupation of Cambodia by the communist government of Vietnam.

Reagan said efforts to resolve the Cambodian issue will be a principal item on the agenda when he meets with Southeast Asian allies in Indonesia.

His 22,300-mile journey centers on the May 4-6 seven-nation economic summit of industrialized nations, a session expected to be overshadowed by talk of how to deal with terrorism.

Earlier Saturday, Reagan's national security adviser, Adm. John Poindexter called the recent spate of terrorists bombings "a rampage" but said he thought it would be a short-lived one.

Asked if the recent bombings were linked to the U.S. air raid on Libya, Poindexter told reporters "it would be difficult to draw that firm conclusion."

Anchorwoman, body builder exchange vows

HYANNIS, Mass. (AP) — Maria Shriver and Arnold Schwarzenegger exchanged wedding vows Saturday while hundreds of cheering onlookers, drawn by the celebrity of the couple and her Kennedy family ties, crowded streets outside the church in this Cape Cod resort.

Tight security allowed only the invited to view the traditional Roman Catholic ceremony for the "CBS Morning News" anchorwoman and the body-builder-turned-actor.

Among the 500 guests inside St. Francis Xavier Church were actresses Susan St. James Ebersol and Cathy Lee Crosby, pop singer Andy Williams, tennis star Arthur Ashe, columnists Art Buchwald and Abigail "Dear Abby" Van Buren, television personalities Barbara Walters and Tom Brokaw and Austrian Ambassador Thomas Klestil.

They were joined by a heavy turnout of Kennedy family members, including Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., his former wife, Joan, and their children, Ted Jr. and Kara; Ethel Kennedy, the wife of slain Sen. Robert Kennedy, D-N.Y., and her son, Joseph P. Kennedy II, a candidate for the 8th Congressional District seat, and Jacqueline Onassis, the widow of slain President John F. Kennedy.

Family matriarch Rose Kennedy, who suffered a stroke two years ago, did not attend the ceremony scheduled for 11 a.m.

The white clapboard church was ringed by off-duty police officers hired by the Shriver family to keep back the crowd which began to gather under leaden skies before 7:30 a.m.

"Can you imagine getting married and having all these people line up outside?" asked Peg Curry of Sandwich. "We're starved for entertainment down here."

Reporters and photographers jammed into risers set up across the street in the driveway of a rooming house.

Guests began arriving in buses and limousines about 9:30 a.m. Many went unrecognized, but those with famous faces drew cheers and applause.

The crowd gave its loudest response to Mrs. Onassis.

Von Bulow considered pleading guilty, attorney says

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Claus von Bulow was willing to plea bargain during his retrial on charges he tried to kill his heiress wife, but he still appeared to be innocent of any wrongdoing, one of his attorneys says in a new book.

Von Bulow would have considered pleading guilty to a minor charge such as negligence, says Alan M. Dershowitz, the Harvard Law School professor and attorney who headed the successful appeal team, in "Reversal of Fortune," to be published this week by Random House.

But Dershowitz said plea negotiations broke down when Attorney General Arlene Violet rejected any deal that would not have sent von Bulow to jail.

Sources on both sides of the case verified the plea-bargain discussions.

Von Bulow, 59, was convicted of attempted murder in 1982.

Doctors say the 54-year-old heiress will never recover from the second coma, suffered Dec. 21, 1980.

The conviction was reversed in 1984 by the Rhode Island Supreme Court on state constitutional grounds, and last June von Bulow was aquitted in a retrial.

Dershowitz said that when he entered the case he assumed von Bulow was guilty since "most convicted defendants are," but by the end he was nearly certain of his client's innocence.

Congressmen fear wages of raising salaries is defeat

WASHINGTON (AP) — The stories, apocryphal or not, resurface in every debate on congressional salaries: talented people who can't afford to seek office, able members forced to quit because their children are ready for college, lawmakers who sleep in their offices because they can't afford rent.

But Congress demonstrated again last week that it is unable to deal with the issue of its own pay. The House became paralyzed with fear after a handful of members lifted the lid on members' outside incomes, and the cap was slapped back on within 24 hours.

Typical of the worries was this comment on the floor from Rep. William Clinger, R-Pa.: "It is no wonder that the public ranks this body as low as it does in terms of credibility and trust, somewhere just above aluminum siding salesmen."

Added Rep. Butler Derrick, D-S.C.: "We all know it's an election year. That has something to do with it."

Election year or not, lawmakers have never been able to deal gracefully with salary questions. The Constitution says pay for members of Congress shall be set by law, and it says Congress makes the laws.

The conflict has raged for more than 200 years. In 1816, for example, Congress tried to raise its pay to $1,500 a year, and angry voters turned out a number of those responsible — including Daniel Webster. A chastened Congress repealed the raise at its next opportunity.

A report last year by the federal Commission on Executive, Legislative and Judicial Salaries called the system for setting pay levels "a prolonged adventure in futility." It said low pay relative to the private sector is draining federal posts, from Congress to the judiciary and executive branches, of qualified people.

The past week's frenzied activity revolved not around the lawmakers' $75,100 salaries, but around a side issue: how much members of Congress may make from outside activities such as speaking to special-interest groups. Given the difficulty of voting for higher salaries paid by taxpayers, many lawmakers find it easier to seek extracurricular sources of income.

Graham opens Washington crusade

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

Graham

For weeks, Billy Graham has prowled the back streets and stately halls of the nation's capital, chatting with the lowly and mighty, absorbing the city's mixed pulsebeats, weighing its needs in developing his message.

The evangelist starts an eight-day crusade in Washington, D.C., today, his first there in a quarter century, and it's a different, more diverse atmosphere with broader church and civic involvement than before.

"It's a very complex city — it's many cities," he says, pondering his five preparatory visits to talk with cabinet members and cleaning crews, university officials and jail inmates, judges and people in soup kitchen lines.

"I wanted to see if I could understand the magnitude and complexity of the problems and put what I have to say in the perspective of the city," he said in a telephone interview.

"I'm hoping to bring the inner city and the suburbs together in a new kind of brotherhood, something that apparently doesn't exist at the present.

"What's needed is a new beginning, of people standing with each other, black and white, conservative and liberal, the many, different ethnic groups, the powerful and the weak. They're all here."

To some who have viewed Graham, 67, as offering mainly a narrow-gauged appeal to the middle class, his inclusive social and interracial concerns may seem to reflect a "new Graham."

However, while his peace advocacy and opposition to the arms race are recently added notes in his preaching, he has pushed other social dimensions from the start.

"We tried then," he said, recalling his consistent ecumenical effort to involve all willing denominations in his crusades and his initial rule in times of racial segregation never to allow it in his meetings.

"Now we're just more successful in doing these things," he said. "We've grown in it, and that's rather new."

In his advance exploratory trips, Graham has dined privately with President Reagan and separately with Vice President George Bush and Secretary of State George Shultz and met on one occasion with 96 judges.

Ex-Black Panther running in GOP primary

Cleaver

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Former Black Panther leader, international fugitive and prison inmate Eldridge Cleaver sits in a sunny neighborhood cafe, nibbles a croissant and explains how he changed from radical militant to God-fearing Republican.

"It was the repression of other governments I encountered as a fugitive," said Cleaver, who spent seven years in self-imposed exile. "The oppression of the United States was nothing to that of countries like Cuba and North Korea. In Cuba, we wore fatigues and grew beards as revolutionary gestures, but I began to realize that the people viewed those fatigues as a symbol of repression."

Eventually, he said, he concluded that "too much government was dangerous." That perception, he said, accompanied by a conversion to Christianity, led him into the ranks of conservatives who oppose big government and of church-goers who espouse traditional moral values.

But the former Information Minister of the Black Panther Party drew cheers and a standing ovation from hundreds of delegates at the state Republican Party's recent convention for urging listeners to fight the "international communist menace."

"I barely had enough money to get down there; I spent the night at the home of a student," he said. Cleaver supports himself largely by lecturing and writing, but receives no royalties from "Soul on Ice." A brief foray into marketing men's clothing also did not pan out.

"Soul on Ice," a collection of essays exploring Cleaver's feelings on youth, race, love, imprisonment and religion, contained some of the most powerful protest writing of the 1960s.

Cleaver, who spent a decade in California's toughest prisons for assault with intent to commit murder, appears positively benign today with his hair graying at the temples, his conservatively cut clothing, his spectacles. He lives in a white frame house in Berkeley, an American flag fluttering in the front yard. Most people who see Cleaver on the street don't recognize him.

There are photographs of his wife, Kathleen, now studying law at Yale University, and two children, both of whom were born while Cleaver was a fugitive.

Contadora initiative shows new signs of life

An Analysis

By R. GREGORY NOKES

WASHINGTON (AP) — The oft-spurned Contadora initiative for ending the conflict in Nicaragua is showing new life, partly through the efforts of presidential envoy Philip Habib. The next five weeks may determine whether it succeeds.

The Contadora nations hope to arrange a signing of a Central America peace agreement on June 6, with Nicaragua joining El Salvador, Costa Rica, Honduras and Guatemala in endorsing the pact.

At a meeting in Panama earlier this month, Nicaragua refused to sign until the Reagan administration first halted aid to the Contra guerrillas fighting Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government.

And reflecting the low regard for the Contadora peace effort in Washington, President Reagan didn't even mention it in his nationwide address on March 16 urging more aid for the Contras.

But Habib, Reagan's new Central American envoy, helped revive Contadora in an April 11 letter to several congressmen in which he said the administration would halt aid to the Contras when the Sandinista government signs a peace accord that is true to the original objectives of Contadora.

Meanwhile, Reagan's request for $100 million in aid for the Contras, including $70 million for military aid, is languishing in the House. He has wanted the funds approved with a minimum of strings, but so far a House majority has insisted on conditions he finds unacceptable.

Several lawmakers speculate there might not be a vote on any Contra aid bill, with or without conditions, until after the June 6 date that Contradora has set for signing an agreement. Were that to happen there would be no need for any more aid, and probably no vote, said Rep. Jim Slattery, D-Kan., who is promoting the Contadora initiative.

Habib is currently on a 12-nation tour of Latin America to discuss the Contadora process, and some lawmakers on both sides of the Contra aid issue believe he is genuinely seeking a diplomatic solution. There is uncertainty as to whether he will succeed, as Reagan just last week once again pledged his full support to the Contras.

Both the United States and Nicaragua have said they support the basic Contadora document — a September, 1983 statement of 21 objectives that has served as the foundation for subsequent draft treaties, including the one now proposed for signing.

The objectives include promoting democracy and national reconciliation, an end to military intervention and support for guerrilla wars, restraint on the size of the military, a reduction of the number of foreign military advisers, curbs on foreign military maneuvers, and a ban against foreign bases.

The original Contadora nations are Panama, Mexico, Colombia and Venezuela. They are now backed by a four-nation support group of Brazil, Argentina, Peru and Uruguay.

All of the Contadora countries are on record against U.S. aid to the Contras, but the administration has spurned their pleas to stop the aid. No agreement would work if the United States didn't agree to that condition, although it is not a party to the accord.

The Sandinistas have demanded a separate non-aggression agreement with Washington, but the administration has refused direct talks with Managua.

HOW THEY VOTED

Hearst Washington Bureau

KEY HOUSE VOTES:

HOUSE FLIP-FLOPS ON OUTSIDE-INCOME INCREASE. In a bizarre and complex flip-flop caused by unfavorable publicity, the House Tuesday raised the limit on fees members can earn from speeches and professional services, and then reversed itself the following day. While both actions were taken on voice votes, and thus not recorded, a key procedural vote Wednesday was taken to allow consideration of a measure restoring the cap to its previous level. The procedure was easily approved on a 333-68 vote.

Members clearly feared political repercussions if they failed to reverse their action on a resolution intended to raise the limit on their outside earnings to 40 percent of their $75,100 annual salary, up from its current 30 percent level. That fear led the House to rush legislation to the flood in order to reverse the decision. To do that, the approval of two-thirds of the members present — 268 in this case — was needed. Once that was obtained, the chamber restored the 30 percent cap on a voice vote.

Those who supported the move to consider legislation reversing the hike on the outside-income cap argued that if members needed an increase, they should vote themselves a raise. The measure increasing the cap had been passed with only a few members present, they argued, and many on the floor were not adequately informed of what the resolution would do.

Opponents argued that the cap for senators was raised to 40 percent last year, and that House members deserved equal treatment. Some accused their colleagues of being afraid to vote for increased pay or benefits, even though they frequently claimed to be underpaid.

"They haven't got the guts and the courage to say, 'We need a pay raise,'" said Speaker of the House Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass.

Voting to permit the outside-income spending to be reduced: Reps. Larry Combest, R-Lubbock; Henry B. Gonzalez, D-San Antonio; Richard Armey, R-Denton; Beau Boulter, R-Amarillo.

Voting against: None.

Not voting: Rep. Tom Loeffler, R-Hunt.

KEY SENATE VOTES.

SENATE ENDORSES TAX HIKE TO PAY FOR INCREASE IN EDUCATION SPENDING. In a stunning rebuke for President Reagan's policies, the Senate endorsed the concept of raising taxes by $300 million to cover an equivalent increase in education spending for fiscal 1987. The amendment, approved 60-38 Wednesday, would increase funds for education programs to cover losses attributed to inflation and effectively restores funds cut from the budget March 1 under the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings deficit-reduction law.

The amendment was attached to the Budget Committee's fiscal 1987 budget proposal, which reduces funds requested by the administration for defense spending by $25 billion and includes an $18.7 billion tax increase. The amendment's additional education funds, coupled with a tax increase, run counter to the administration's plan for dramatic cutbacks in domestic spending and no tax increases.

Supporters of the amendment acknowledged that spending for education has increased since 1981, but insisted that, when those increases are adjusted for inflation, those programs have actually been cut by 16 percent since fiscal 1980.

Opponents argued that the federal government's financial support of education programs has traditionally accounted for a small percentage of the projected $260 billion that will be spent on education this year. State and local governments will provide all but $18.4 billion, according to Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., with the federal government contributing the rest.

Opponents also said that senators were bowing to election-year pressures to shield high-profile domestic programs like education from budget cutbacks, and expressed concern that this would set a precedent for protecting hundreds of other programs.

Voting to endorse a $300 million tax increase for education spending: Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas.

Voting against: Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas.

Officials: Air Force slow to respond after blast

LOMPOC, Calif. (AP) — Worried people seeking information when a Titan rocket exploded into a toxic cloud at Vandenberg Air Force Base got little help from local authorities, who charge the Air Force was slow to tell the public they were not in danger.

An Air Force general insists he did everything right, and one county supervisor says local officials must share responsibility for the confusion that immediately followed the April 18 explosion.

Most local officials said they were pretty sure there was no danger, but some said their concerns weren't laid to rest for an hour or more. A hospital administrator said it was three hours before he was informed.

"There was never an affirmative statement that 'There is no danger, don't worry about it,' " said Sgt. Dale Schade, commander of the local Santa Barbara County sheriff's station. "I would have expected definitive information from the Air Force when I requested it."

Police Chief Bob Hebert said no one panicked in the Lompoc Valley, where the 50,000 residents are accustomed to the thunder of missile tests and rocket launches eight miles away. Eventually they will watch space shuttles take off from a new launch complex.

'Highway Patrol' star dies

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Broderick Crawford, the jowly actor who won an Oscar for his role in "All the King's Men" but gained fame on television barking "10-4" into a mike on "Highway Patrol," died Saturday. He was 74.

Crawford, who had suffered a stroke about a year ago, recently was admitted to Eisenhower Medical Center where he died, said his longtime agent Al Melnick.

He was a beefy, loose-jowled man with a kicked-in face he considered his career insurance.

The face and its unusual contours didn't come naturally. Crawford carried a cleat mark from a prep football game, and had his nose broken six times — four times in football games and twice in barroom fights.

A Broadway actor in the 1930s who took jobs as a stevedore and merchant seaman between engagements, Crawford first came to notice for his portrayal of dim-witted Lenny in the stage version "Of Mice and Men."

After World War II, he again found little work until he was offered a reading for "All the King's Men" after all the other candidates failed the screen test. He won the role of political boss Willie Stark on a Thursday and stepped in front of the cameras four days later.

Crawford won the 1949 best actor Oscar and New York Critics Award for his portrayal of Stark, a man who forgot his populist goals and became a virtual dictator after election to the statehouse.

He gained his greatest popularity as the jowly, take-charge Chief Dan Matthews of the syndicated series "Highway Patrol." The image of Crawford's character leaning against a patrol car and barking "10-4" into a radio microphone has endured for 30 years.

Apartheid protests held

Associated Press

Seven apartheid protesters were charged with trespassing Saturday after they refused to leave symbolic shanties on the Duke University campus, and a predominantly black college in Georgia voted to sell about $1 million in investments it has in companies that do business in South Africa.

Meanwhile, a protest against Citibank's dealings with the racially segregated nation drew about 50 people Saturday in New York City.

Duke students built two plywood shanties and a symbolic prison of rusty wire on the school's Durham, N.C., campus Friday. University officials had ordered the display removed by nightfall, but workers waited until morning before tearing it down.

Six students and one other person were charged with trespassing when they refused to leave the shanties.

Sanctuary trial jurors take time deliberating verdicts

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Given the length of the sanctuary alien-smuggling conspiracy trial, perhaps it was only fitting that the jurors would take their time deliberating on verdicts.

They're doing just that.

When they return Tuesday morning, the nine women and three men on the federal jury panel will resume their nearly 32 hours of deliberations for a seventh day, spread across three weeks, concerning two priests, a nun, a minister and seven church layworkers.

The jurors received the case April 17 after trial proceedings that lasted six months.

They worked for about 6 hours and 15 minutes Friday without reaching a verdict. In the first six days, they had only one substantive question for U.S. District Judge Earl H. Carroll, asking for and receiving a transcript of a tape recording that is in evidence.

After jurors left the courthouse Friday, defense lawyers asked Carroll to extend from a half-hour to two hours the amount of time to be given for notifying defendants and lawyers to be in court once word of a verdict is received. The request was made to allow the two defendants from Nogales, Mexico, to not have to remain in Tucson.

One lawyer also suggested that that likely would lessen the need for reporters to be crowding the first floor of the courthouse, as they have since deliberations began April 17. About 25 to 30 were in the building at any one time Friday, and during the brief late-day hearing.

But Carroll said he would review the half-hour schedule after Tuesday's deliberations — in the event no verdict has been reached by then.

He also ordered prosecutor Donald M. Reno Jr. to file by next Friday a response to a defense motion contending that the government selectively prosecuted the 11 defendants. Carroll has said he will hold a hearing on the issue if there are convictions in the case.

Reporters from across the country have filled two press rooms. Some played poker, more participated in a pool to guess when the time of verdict and most occasionally paced the first-floor lobby, as several defendants, their lawyers and even the prosecutor stopped by.

One defendant, the Rev. Tony Clark, said Friday he felt confident. But Clark added, "We've been going home each night with our fingers crossed."

All defendants are charged with conspiring to smuggle Salvadorans and Guatemalans into the United States, punishable upon conviction by up to five years' imprisonment and $10,000 fines; nine face additional felony or misdemeanor counts.

Jurors told to expect long trial

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Jurors deciding the fate of 11 sanctuary movement defendants include a book store employee, a nurse, a crossing guard, a computer programmer, a part-time janitor and several mothers and housewives.

Three men and 12 women were selected initially, including three female alternates. Two alternates were excused while the trial was still in progress.

At the outset, they were told to expect a long trial — one of four to six weeks. It began its sixth month on April 22. Besides travel expenses, the jurors were paid $30 a day for the first 30 days of the trial and $35 a pay thereafter.

During questioning by U.S. District Judge Earl H. Carroll and prosecution and defense lawyers, the jurors were asked about such things as their knowledge and opinions about the sanctuary movement, their ability to treat church workers as other defendants, knowledge of immigration laws, attitudes about the government using undercover agents, church affiliations, disputes with the federal government, arrest records and interests in Latin America.

Five jurors said they attended church services, at least occasionally — two Catholic, one Baptist, one interdenominational and one independent.

Anti-terrorist actions will be focus of summit

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

Italian and West German Cabinet ministers, in advance of next week's Western summit in Tokyo, have proposed forming a multinational commando force that could be thrown into action in future terrorist emergencies.

The international anti-terrorist unit is one idea being discussed as the seven biggest industrial democracies prepare for their 12th annual summit, an economic conference overshadowed this year by the terrorist threat.

Past summits produced little more than joint declarations of war on terrorism, but this time President Reagan says a "grandiose statement" will not be enough. The recent surge of terror attacks, followed by the U.S. retaliatory air strike on Libya, may have set the stage for concrete steps.

"The general public in the various nations will not be satisfied with tinkering. They've become tired of inadequate responses to terrorism," Paul Wilkinson of Aberdeen University, an internationally noted expert on terrorism, said in a telephone interview from his office in Scotland.

Reagan administration officials say that at the summit they will seek closer cooperation in sharing intelligence information on terrorists. Wilkinson said he believes the Western allies may agree to boycott the airports of "pro-terrorist" states Libya, Iran and Syria.

European officials, for their part, say Western governments also must work harder toward resolving the Arab-Israeli impasse — the root of much of today's terrorism.

As recently as February, the French, who have long sought to limit the summits to economic issues, objected to putting terrorism on the agenda of the May 4-6 meeeting. But after conservative Jacques Chirac became premier in elections March 16, France relented.

"The (French) government has decided to act so there can be a sort of coordination of action among the Western democracies," Chirac said in a French television interview last Wednesday.

In the past three weeks, in a widening campaign against alleged Libyan sponsorship of terrorism, West European governments have expelled at least 64 diplomats and other Libyans from six countries, and have tightened visa restrictions for entry by Libyans.

But, except for Britain, they refused to support the U.S. air attack on Libyan cities April 15, and none has joined in the U.S. economic embargo against Libya, whose trade with Western Europe and Japan totaled $12 billion in 1985.

For West Europeans, the threat may be too close — they fear a widening military or economic conflict in their backyard. For the Japanese, it may be too distant.

"In general, the Japanese can't feel the fear brought on by international terrorism," Kiichi Saeki, a Japanese scholar on defense issues, told The Associated Press in Tokyo. "So when we talk about international consultations and cooperation, it's quite difficult for Japanese politicians to persuade (the people)."

Few expect the Western leaders next week to agree on broad anti-Libya economic sanctions. But here are some ideas being raised:

— Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher of West Germany and Defense Minister Giovanni Spadolini of Italy suggest creation of a multinational anti-terrorist police unit that could be deployed under joint agreement in skyjackings and similar crises. The U.S. administration was rebuffed last year when it sounded out the Europeans about stationing an all-American commando unit on their soil.

— The British have called for shutting down Libyan embassies in all West European capitals, rather than simply cutting back embassy staffs. Britain closed the London embassy in 1984.

— A U.S. presidential task force on terrorism has urged governments to modify bilateral extradition agreements to keep terrorists from escaping through loopholes. Britain complains, for example, that U.S. courts block extradition of some alleged Irish Republican Army terrorists who have fled to the United States.

— The task force report also called for greater sharing among the allies of intelligence information about terrorist activities. Security officials of the European Common Market nations last week agreed to improve exchange of such information with the United States.

— The United States is expected to push as well for greater cooperation in covert anti-terrorist actions. Secretary of State George P. Shultz says he expects agreements in Tokyo on "things that shouldn't be announced and won't be announced."

— Wilkinson believes the Western allies may be ready to strengthen the anti-skyjacking policy worked out at the 1978 Western summit in Bonn, West Germany. That declaration committed them to suspend commercial flights to countries that do not prosecute hijackers, but they have balked at enforcing the policy, most recently last year when Washington sought a boycott of the airport in Beirut, Lebanon.

In pre-summit interviews, British, West German and Italian officials agreed on the need for closer international cooperation. But all said, too, that more must be done to address underlying causes.

"International terrorism will have to be discussed within a context which will evidence the need to remove the causes...above all, the Arab-Israeli crisis," said Antonio Badini, foreign policy adviser to Italian Prime Minister Bettino Craxi.

Libyan paper wants probe into poor response to raid

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — An influential Libyan newspaper has called for an investigation into what Libya did wrong during the U.S. bombing raid — the first official acknowledgment that the country was poorly prepared.

It also criticized Libyan news media claims that more than 20 U.S. fighter-bombers were shot down, and urged more professional reporting at a time when "the whole world is listening to us."

Official propaganda had been describing the April 15 U.S. air raid as a failure and had praised Libyan air defenses for their performance.

The frank editorial appeared Friday in the al-Jamahiriya, weekly paper of the influential revolutionary committees, which were set up by Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy to carry out his policies.

The commentary did not specify whether the investigation should center on the armed forces or other groups within the Libyan leadership.

Diplomatic sources said the U.S. raid deeply shocked Libya's leadership and led to complaints among senior officers that the military was ill-prepared because it was shortchanged in favor of internal security forces in getting needed resources.

The sources spoke on condition of anonymity.

Some of the sources said Libya's poor response to the attack also alarmed the Soviet Union, which has been pressing the Libyans for an accounting of what went wrong during the attack.

"We have to know exactly who got confused, who was wrong, who ran away and who remained on the scene," the newspaper said. "We have to clean up our Libyan house and (examine) how we behaved hour by hour in the crisis."

Despite weeks of propaganda warning that the United States would attack, the American raid did severe damage, and was estimated to have killed some 100 people in the capital.

Lights remained on in the Libyan capital of Tripoli as waves of F-111 bombers from bases in England roared in from the sea.

U.S. Navy jets from the aircraft carrier Coral Sea in the Mediterranean, meanwhile, pounded targets in the port of Benghazi about 750 miles away.

The U.S. Defense Department has acknowledged losing one F-111 in the attack. But government officials of the official Libyan news media said the Libyans had shot down more than 20 U.S. planes in the attack.

"We don't need such war broadcasts that describe hitting planes as if they were leaves falling in autumn," al-Jamahiriya said. "We do need more professional reporting and war correspondents because the whole world is listening to us."

Handlers find cat has been let out of the bag

LONDON (AP) — Startled baggage handlers at Heathrow Airport found themselves eyeball to eyeball with a snarling, 250-pound cheetah on the prowl Saturday when they opened the cargo door of a Boeing 747 from South Africa.

"He was only two or three feet away, with just a thin piece of net between me and him," said baggage handler Bob Arnold.

"I was looking into his eyes to see if he would back off," Arnold said. "But he started growling, so I thought, 'I'll leave it.' "

The sleek, tawny cat with black spots was being flown from Johannesburg to a zoo in Dublin, Ireland. Airport officials said the animal had been drugged for the trip but that the drug must have worn off during the 6,000-mile flight.

Arnold and fellow baggage handler Howard Kirby, who opened the cargo hold of the British Airways flight to unload luggage, found the cheetah had broken loose from its shipping crate and was on the prowl.

Only a safety net designed to keep baggage in place separated the two men from the testy beast.

"I didn't see him at first, then suddenly I realized there was something looking at me," said Arnold, 45. "I just couldn't believe it."

"I decided it wasn't a very healthy place to be, so I left — fast," he added. "Not even the cheetah would have caught me at the rate I was going."

Kirby, 41, said that when Arnold opened the door, he "suddenly froze and said something which I wouldn't like to repeat."

"He told me, 'There's a wild animal in here,' so I went to have a look," Kirby said. "When I saw what it was, I thought I would shut the door. But he snarled and his paw reached out toward us. So I said, 'Thank you very much, that's enough.' "

Police surrounded the jetliner and sealed off a nearby terminal for fear the big cat might dart from the cargo hold. One marksmen with a high-powered rifle took up position with a clear view of the tarmac.

Heathrow's Animal Quarantine Center, meanwhile, called nearby Windsor Safari Park for help, and the park curator, Paul O'Donoghue, sped to the airport in a police convoy.

Shots fired from a tranquilizer gun knocked the cheetah unconscious, and it was placed in a van and taken to the quarantine center.

The 342 passengers and 13 crew members on the flight had gotten off earlier and were unaware of the scare.

Jobs are the number one concern in our area. Let's vote in strong leadership to rebuild our economy.

The quality of leadership we've been getting from Austin in recent years has been out of step with the times. Today, every county and city in Texas is feeling the impact of economic crisis. We're feeling it where it hurts personally — in layoffs and cutbacks and declining employment. Looking ahead, what will the job situation be 10 to 20 years from now?

The May 3 Republican Primary is your chance to insure the fresh thinking and decisive leadership we need.

Kent Hance has the experience — both in the Texas Legislature and the U.S. Congress.

Kent Hance has the initiative — along with Phil Gramm he was President Reagan's choice for moving the nation's largest tax-cut bill through Congress.

Kent Hance faces the issues:

JOBS

"The early-warning systems were flashing loud and clear. Oil and oil alone can't carry this state. We need new diversified industry, and the incentives to bring business to Texas."

EDUCATION

"Government is taking over the responsibilities of the parent and forcing them on the teachers. The parent is the true steward of the child, not the state. Let's make that a part of our educational policies."

CRIME

"We must stop the early release of prisoners — that's what has made our crime rates go sky high. Let's put our prisoners to work. We must build a crime control program with teeth in it."

ILLEGAL ALIENS

"I have the fullest sympathy for our neighbor to the south, but I have no sympathy for allowing illegal aliens to flood across our border threatening our job-hungry economy and creating new problems."

"I need your vote in the Republican Primary on Saturday, May 3. The Republican nominee must be able to carry the cities and the rural areas of Texas to beat Mark White. I am the only candidate in the Republican Primary who can do that. Please vote for me on May 3 and I will not let you down in November. I will beat Mark White, and if that's your priority, I'm your candidate. Thank you."

Blast damages American Express office; British bank bombed in Beirut

Associated Press

Bombs ripped through an American Express office in France and a British bank in Lebanon Saturday, one day after terrorist violence in four countries killed at least five people and left a U.S. Embassy employee wounded.

Libya has vowed retaliation for the April 15 U.S. air raid launched to punish Col. Moammar Khadafy's government for its alleged involvement in international terrorism. But there was no clear indication that any of the attacks in the past two days were linked to the North African nation.

A bomb estimated to contain 33 pounds on TNT tore through the British Bank of the Middle East in Moslem west Beirut before dawn Saturday. Lebanese police said there was extensive damage, but no casualties.

Christian Voice of Lebanon radio said an anonymous telephone caller speaking Lebanese-accented Arabic later claimed the blast on behalf of a previously unknown organization, "Group 219 FA." There was no way to substantiate the claim.

British employees of the bank had fled west Beirut earlier in fear of terrorist reprisals, as dozens of other Westerners also have.

Last week in Lebanon, a kidnapped American and two missing Britons were found slain outside Beirut, and an Arab terrorist group claimed they were killed to avenge the U.S. air strike, which was backed by Britain.

Another terrorist group has claimed to have hanged a British journalist missing in Lebanon, but his body has not been found.

In Lyon, France, a bomb exploded at the American Express office at 4 a.m. Saturday, touching off a fire and slightly wounding one person with flying glass, officials said.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility , but police found an inscription daubed in red paint on a wall near the building reading: "American Express, Black & Decker, Control Data, U.S. Go Home."

Control Data is an American computer firm whose Lyon offices are located in the same building as American Express.

Friday morning in Lyon, a Briton who was the chief representative of the U.S.-owned Black & Decker Manufacturing Co. was shot to death by a man dressed in black and armed with a sawed-off shotgun.

Police said the victim, Kenneth Marston, 43, was shot twice in the chest as he left home to go to work. Officials said they did not know if the murder was the act of a terrorist or a common criminal.

An obscure Arab group, in recorded telephone calls to French and British news agencies, asserted responsibility for the killing and threatened "British and American imperialists" throughout the world.

In Madrid Friday, a car bomb explosion killed five members of the paramilitary Civil Guard and wounded four other guardsmen and two pedestrians.

Officials blamed the bombing on ETA, the Basque separatist organization. In the Basque language, ETA stands for Basque Land and Liberty.

In San'a, the capital of North Yemen, U.S. Embassy communications officer Arthur L. Pollick was wounded by gunfire from a passing car as he was driving home Friday.

Hospital sources in San'a said Pollick, 41, of Bakersfield, Calif., was hit in the back and left shoulder. A U.S. diplomat in San'a, speaking on condition he not be identified, said Pollick was still hospitalized today but was "doing very well."

Fearful Americans abroad altering everyday habits to evade terrorists

By ELAINE GANLEY

PARIS (AP) — Fearing terrorists and seeking obscurity, American institutions, businesses and expatriates in Europe have begun changing their everyday habits.

Since the U.S. air strikes April 15 on Tripoli and Benghazi in Libya, some schools and cultural centers have removed name plaques from their gates, and companies are doing away with identifying insignia.

In some countries, U.S. embassies, consulates and businesses have issued guidelines to Americans to reduce their chances of becoming terrorist targets.

"We feel threatened," said a business executive in Frankfurt, West Germany, whose company has stepped up security measures. Echoing the sentiment of many expatriate Americans, she added: "I believe I've been taking precautions subconsciously lately."

"I feel self-conscious reading the (International) Herald Tribune, Time, Newsweek, any American publication, on the Metro," said a free-lance writer who has lived in Paris for more than 20 years. "I don't want to attract attention...It sounds as if I'm not proud of being an American, which I am. But I don't particularly want to flaunt it. You never know who's on the (subway) trains these days," she said.

Like most other Americans, she spoke on condition she not be named. She said she would go through with planned trips to London, Malta (an island in the Mediterranean) and the United States, but would not fly on U.S. carriers.

"People are not going places in packs and are not hanging out at McDonald's or spending a lot of time at American Express," said an American mother living in Vienna, Austria. She said bilingual children are being told by their parents not to speak English.

"Everybody is altering everything they do and everybody wants to go back to the States...I don't recall a social situation in the last two weeks where talk has not been dominated by fear."

In Rome, many Americans who normally cash checks or pick up mail at the American Express office in the center of the city are known to have made alternate arrangements. There and in other cities, Americans with U.S. automobile registration plates are applying for European plates.

But a connoisseur of the expatriate scene in Paris, Andy MacElhone, owner of Harry's New York Bar, said he has seen little change in his customers' habits since the raids on Libya.

"The American clientele we have here are mostly steady customers...and they're still coming," he said.

"I'm under the impression that Americans in Europe are not quite as nervous about the repercussions of the raid on Libya as Americans in the United States."

In Amsterdam, Netherlands, Trans World Airline spokesman Rene Tolenaars said the airline has removed TWA emblems from two cars used by its sales personnel. A Dutch company that leases tourist buses to TWA, Beuk Travel Consultants, said TWA emblems have been removed.

Pan American World Airways is asking the U.S. and European governments for permission to add a $5 surcharge on its trans-Atlantic flights to help finance increased security costs.

The U.S. mission to the United Nations in Geneva met recently with about 40 representatives of American firms in the region to discuss tighter security measures.

In West Germany, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce has advised its 2,000 members that the danger of men, women and children becoming targets of terrorists has increased since the U.S. bombing of Libya.

In Rome, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce and the American Club, an organization of U.S. and Italian businessmen, canceled their April luncheon meetings following the air strikes.

American schools around Europe, in addition to removing their names from entryways, have revised programs and taken other precautions.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Kohl praises Waldheim

SALZBURG, Austria (AP) — Chancellor Helmut Kohl of West Germany praised Kurt Waldheim as a "great patriot" Saturday and criticized opponents of the former U.N. secretary-general, who is accused of covering up a Nazi past, the Austria Press Agency reported.

The agency said Kohl made the comments while addressing a gathering in Salzburg of the West German Chamber of Commerce.

In a related development, the Yugoslav magazine Nin said it seemed that Waldheim, regarded as the front-runner in May 4 elections for the Austrian presidency, was covered by an amnesty proclaimed in 1962 by the Yugoslav government.

Nin said the amnesty covered war criminals who did not directly order killings or carry them out, aand "also referred to the matter of Kurt Waldheim."

The World Jewish Congress says Waldheim hid membership in Nazi groups and in a World War II German army unit implicated in the deaths of 43,000 Greek Jews in 1943 and in atrocities against Yugoslav partisans a year earlier.

Violence flares in township

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Violence flared again Saturday in the black township of Alexandra, and residents claimed black policemen have been attacking anti-apartheid activists and burning their houses.

Police headquarters in Pretoria reported one person was shot to death Saturday in the township northeast of Johannesburg, but said it had no details of the shooting.

Alexandra residents told a local journalist that police gunfire killed two people and seriously wounded two others.

Police acknowledged that tear gas had been fired in the township, and said it was used to disperse a mob of about 70 people.

Iraq says positions retaken

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraq said its forces in a lightning strike early Saturday recaptured Iranian-held positions in the southern Majnoon oilfields and killed at least 1,950 Iranians.

Iraqi war communiques said Iraqi forces, backed by artillery, flushed out Iranian positions and seized important stretches in the western, central and eastern parts of southern Majnoon.

There was no immediate comment from Iran. Iran and Iraq have been at war since September 1980, and their battle reports usually cannot be confirmed independently.

Soviets warned Libya of impending raid, editor says

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — The editor of a state-owned magazine said in Saturday's edition that the Soviet Union warned Libya an hour in advance of the U.S. air raids, giving Libyan pilots time to fly their planes to safety in Sudan.

Salah Montaser, editor of October magazine, wrote in his weekly editorial that only four or five Libyan planes were damaged in the April 15 raids on Tripoli and Benghazi. President Reagan has said the raids were ordered in retaliation for what he claimed was Libya's support of international terrorism.

Montaser, attributing his report to sources he said were close to the Reagan administration, wrote that U.S. officials informed the Soviet Union an hour before the pre-dawn raids began, and that the Soviets immediately warned Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy.

In Los Angeles, National Security Advisor John Poindexter told reporters Saturday before flying with Reagan to Honolulu that the United States did not inform the Soviets in advance of the raids.

It has been a privilege to serve as your County Commissioner for the past three years. I am proud to have played a part in the many positive achievements during that time.

In my judgment the two most important issues facing the County are taxes and the jail. My position on each is as follows:

1. TAXES. The declining property and mineral values in Midland County will cause a severe reduction in tax revenues at the present tax rate. My intention is to set a budget which requires no additional tax dollars and, if it is possible to do so without too drastically reducing needed services, to set a budget requiring fewer dollars.

2. JAIL. The temporary renovation to the jail as approved by the voters in 1985 will get us by for a few years but at the appropriate time in our economic life we will need a new jail. After much study I am still convinced that the greatest savings in tax dollars will be realized by building the new jail on the County owned 7 acre tract east of Midland. The land cost is minimal ($7,000) and the site is excellent and large enough for any future expansion. (A downtown site would add several million dollars to the cost of the project). Another major advantage of a new jail will be the opportunity to create a joint City/County facility. I believe this is a must.

I trust this will be helpful to you as you choose between the candidates. Thank you for your continuing support. I will appreciate your vote in the Republican Primary on May 3rd.

Yours very truly,

C. WALLACE CRAIG

South African, black African leaders meet at ceremony

MBABANE, Swaziland (AP) — This landlocked kingdom's new teen-age ruler promised Saturday to serve his subjects and uphold tradition at a ceremony marked by a rare public gathering of both black African and South African leaders.

Observing diplomatic courtesies, the leaders shook each others' hands.

But Lesotho's King Moshoeshoe II referred indirectly in his speech to South Africa's policy of apartheid, or forced racial segregation, by calling on Swazi King Mswati III to join the struggle against "legalized and institutionalized" discrimination.

South Africa's President P.W. Botha and Foreign Minister R.F. Botha, who are not related, were present, but made no comment. Swaziland borders on South Africa and Mozambique.

Officials from more than 30 nations visited Swaziland for the installation of Mswati, the Swazis' 18-year-old schoolboy king.

The ancient coronation rites were held on Friday and were closed to all but a select audience.

Mswati's first public address was made Saturday before about 50,000 people in a stadium.

"I have pledged myself to your service," he said in English, "and throughout my life and with all my heart I shall try to be worthy of your trust."

He said that "splendid traditions have been tarnished or lost" in modern society, and promised to uphold tribal customs and sacred institutions.

"Bayethe — hail to the king!" the crowd shouted, and the stadium erupted in a frenzy of traditional dancing and singing.

Mswati, wearing leopard skins, a cloth skirt and feather headdress, smiled shyly during the ceremony and flinched when the opening rounds of a 21-gun salute took him by surprise.

Hundreds of young women danced rhythmically across the grass, and warriors pranced in mock attacks accompanied by whistles. Then the barefoot and barechested king joined the warriors in foot-stamping tribal dances.

WEATHER SUMMARY

From Staff and Wire Reports

Windy conditions and warm temperatures will prevail across the Permian Basin through Monday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal.

The forecast calls for partly cloudy skies today with a 20 percent chance of afternoon thunderstorms. The high will be in the upper 80s. Winds will be from the south at 10 to 20 mph.

Tonight's low, under partly cloudy skies, will be in the mid 50s. Forecasters say there is a 20 percent chance of evening thunderstorms. Winds will be from the southwest at 5 to 15 mph.

Monday will be fair with a high near 80.

Saturday's high of 90 was seven degrees below the record set in 1959. The low of 64 was 28 degrees below the record set in 1946.

STATE

Showers and thunderstorms wet Northwest Texas and the western Red River Valley Saturday, while low- to upper-level cloudiness covered most of the rest of the state.

A low-pressure system over northwest Kansas and a high-pressure ridge over the southeast coastal states combined to bring a strong southerly wind flow over Texas, the National Weather Service reported.

Low clouds covered most of the eastern half of Texas, while middle- and upper-level cloudiness prevailed over the greater portion of West Texas. Parts of Central Texas and the Hill Country, however, had mostly sunny skies.

Temperatures were generally in the 80s. The extremes at 3 p.m. ranged from 73 degrees at Guadalupe Pass to 92 at Cotulla.

The forecast for North Texas calls for mostly cloudy skies and scattered thunderstorms Sunday, some possibly severe. Highs should be in the 80s and lows in the 50s and 60s. Skies should begin clearing Monday with highs in the 70s and 80s.

South Texas should be partly cloudy through Monday with widely scattered thunderstorms. Highs should be in the 80s and 90s and lows in the 60s and low 70s.

NATION

A storm spread heavy snow over the mountains of Montana, Wyoming and Colorado on Saturday, after dumping up to 2 feet in parts of Utah, but the Southeast had record highs up to 90 degrees.

The mountains of Colorado got 6 to 9 inches of wet snow Saturday morning, and Red Lodge, Mont., had more than a foot of snow.

Rogers

Vic Rogers has been named the April recipient of the Trimble Service Award. The award, co-sponsored by Leadership Midland, Alumni Association and the Reporter-Telegram, was established in order to recognize citizens who represent the spirit of volunteerism in Midland.

Rogers, who retired from Shell Oil in 1969 after 34 years of service, began volunteering at the Recording Library for the Blind in the early 1970s. He spends at least four hours each day, four to five days a week at the library. In addition to the hours he spends working with the Christmas in April organization and serving on the board of directors for the Recording Library.

In addition to reading into the tape recorders from the various texts, Rogers operates the recording equipment, outside the sound booth and proof reads recorded text with print text. Several years ago, he read on to tape an entire college geology textbook for a blind student. His background as an exploration geologist enabled him to describe all charts, graphs and pictures as well as interpreting the text.

Rogers noted that this student made the highest grade not only in the class, but in the entire section for that semester.

The books and magazines taped at the Recording Library go into the collection of the Texas State Library, Division for the Blind and Physically Handicapped and the Library of Congress, National Library Service for the Blind and Physically Handicapped. At the local level, more than 1,500 people are served through the Recording Library and an additional 300 from the greater Permian Basin area are assisted.

A volunteer award winner will be selected monthly. At the end of the year, one of the monthly winners will be the recipient of a free trip for two, provided by American Airlines.

Speakers clarify situation in El Salvador

By ANNTOINETTE MOORE
Staff Writer

SAN ANGELO — Mike Conroy brought the conflicts of Central America to West Texas by showing how almost all of El Salvador would fit in the triangle formed by Big Spring, Abilene and San Angelo.

Within this small area, at least 50,000 political killings have been carried out since 1979, he claimed. These include "people who are 'disappeared,'" he said, picked up by the police, military units or "death squads" and never heard from again.

Conroy, an economics professor at the University of Texas at Austin, spoke to about 25 people, including five from Midland, at a seminar on Central America sponsored by the Texas Conference of Churches and the Central America Resource Center, a non-profit national information clearinghouse located in Austin.

Besides Conroy, John Booth, a political science professor at North Texas State University and academic advisor to the Kissinger Commission on Central America, and Jack Elder, former director of Casa Oscar Romero, a halfway house for Central American refugees in the Valley, also addressed the day-long seminar.

Booth provided the historical context for Central America's current crisis.

When the region was colonized in the 16th century, its economy was structured "to generate resources for Spain," he said. An entire bureaucracy was established "to extract the wealth" — first gold, then other mineral and agricultural riches.

The local Indians were moved off the best agricultural lands and forced to supply the labor for Spanish economic enterprises. If the Indians resisted, they were brought into line by Spanish military forces, Booth continued.

A racially based exploitative extractive economy enforced by the military was established, a situation which still exists today in the relationship between Central America's ruling classes and the military, he said.

After the region, comprising the modern nations of Guatemala, Belize, Honduras, El Salvador, Nicaragua, Costa Rica and Panama, became independent in the 1820s, it almost immediately dissolved into civil war. Most of the countries alternated between military dictatorships or military conflict, Booth claimed, establishing a "firm tradition" of the violation of human rights.

Peace was generally "one enforced by an iron-fisted military ruler," he said.

Beginning in the mid-19th century, the economy depended on exports, coffee and bananas. Wealthy coffee and banana "barons" expanded their plantations, displacing subsistence farmers and vastly increasing the economic gap between the people who owned the means of production and the labor pool which produced it, Booth said.

U.S. economic influence in the region has been dominant, Conroy added. The United States is the primary market for their products and the primary source of economic inputs, such as investments.

But the region is of very little economic interest to the United States, Conroy said. In 1977, before much of the current political unrest in the area, less than one-half of 1 percent of U.S. foreign investment was in Central America, he claimed. In 1980, trade with Central America made up only 1.3 percent of U.S. foreign trade.

Amid the background of a piansist providing show tunes, Midland Memorial Hospital dedicated its new $15 million, 77,000 square foot addition, offering a tour to the public and local leaders.

"This dedication culminates more than two years of construction and six years of planning," said Tom Bruner, chairman of the MMH Board of Trustees. "We're very proud to say this project under the direction of Building Committee Chairman Jim Mays, has been completed on time and at the same time under budget, with $1 million being returned to the hospital and the public."

MISD gears up for boundary change

New lines would be first since 1975

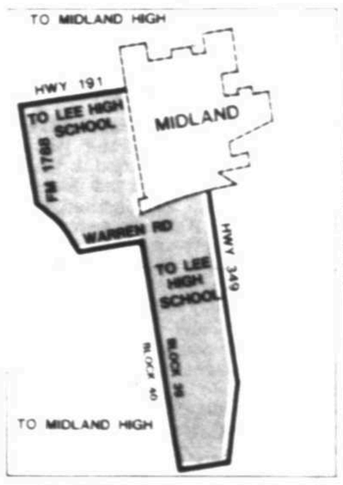
By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

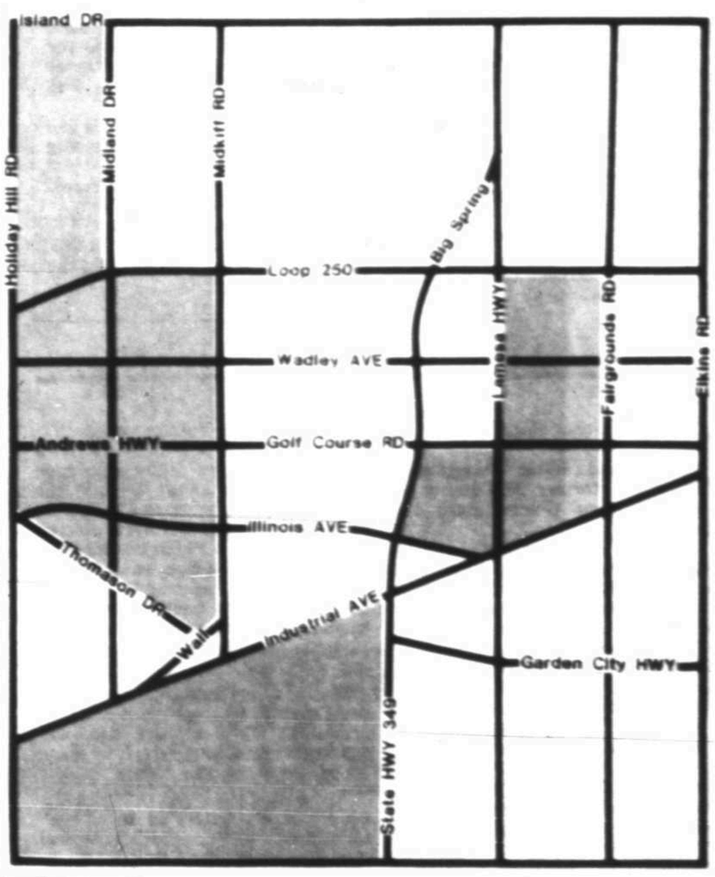
The Midland school board — publicly committed to maintaining a balance between the city's two senior high schools — has paved the way for the first change in high school boundaries since 1975, despite a westside parent organization's request to wait until this fall.

Last week the board approved a plan that, according to MISD Superintendent Dr. Joseph P. Baressi Jr., balances within 4 percent black, Hispanic, rural and total enrollment as well as student ability and achievement by 1997. About 3,000 of the 10,820 students currently in the sixth grade and below will be affected by the change.

The plan assigns to Lee High School students living within the city limits and west of a line formed by Midland Drive, North Loop 250, Midkiff Road, West Wall Street, Thomason Drive, West Loop 250, State Highway 80 and Rankin Highway. Also included are students living in an area bounded by North Loop 250, Fairgrounds Road, Highway 80, Illinois Avenue, Big Spring Street, East Golf Course Road and Lamesa Highway. The remainder of the students living within the city limits will attend Midland High School.

Please see BOUNDARY, Page 2B





At right is a map signifying the MISD's plan to redraw high school boundaries. Students residing in the shaded areas of the city limits will attend Lee High School while the remainder are assigned to Midland High School. The above map of approved changes in rural high school boundaries assigns students residing in the shaded areas to LHS; the remainder are assigned to MHS.

GARY OTT

When in doubt about a gift, go with lingerie

As I think back on it, the first indication that buying gifts for loved ones was not one of my strong suits occurred on my third wedding anniversary.

I won't bore with the gory details, but, suffice it to say, I screwed up. OK, I will bore you with the details. It went something like this:

After thinking long and hard on what the perfect gift would be, something that would give special meaning to this most important day in our lives, I finally decided on a brand spanking new vacuum cleaner. It was not a good choice. It went over like a lead balloon, in fact.

My charming wife, who apparently had her heart set on something a little more romantic than the latest Kirby model, promptly raced to what was formerly our bedroom and spent the remainder of the night weeping. Since she had locked the door behind her there was nothing left for me to do but pop open a six pack and contemplate the future.

That, as it turned out, was unnecessary, too, because the next morning my wife decided the future for me. She announced, in no uncertain terms, that a divorce was the only way out and if I didn't like it I could do something terribly uncomfortable to my body with the vacuum cleaner.

I declined, but did learn a very valuable lesson, nonetheless. When in doubt, go with the lingerie, though that can cause problems too, which I will get to later.

The point is, buying gifts is not easy for me. It is not that I am cheap — indeed, I enjoy spending money — it's just that I sometimes have a difficult time matching up the right present with the right person.

Take the vacuum cleaner, for example. It wasn't a bad gift, it was just given to the wrong person. It should have gone to my mother who, like all mothers, would have squealed and acted like it was the best thing to come along since Willie Nelson's Star Dust album.

Mothers are like that.

Female companions are not.

Female companions, as a general rule, do no squeal over practical gifts. They divorce you over practical gifts.

Having learned that valuable bit of information, I began buying more romantic presents for whomever happened to be that special someone in my life at that particular time.

A dozen red roses was always a safe bet. Rarely will a woman lock herself in the bedroom if you show up with a dozen red roses. Sometimes they will even squeal and fix you a chicken fried steak dinner as a reward.

About the only drawback is that a dozen red roses will eventually die, but then, so do most relationships.

Lingerie, as mentioned earlier, can be a dandy gift, as well. Buying a woman sexy undergarments can make you appear to be very sophisticated and worldly. It can get you on her good side real quick.

The problem, of course, is that you have to go to the lingerie department and try and explain to the female sales clerk exactly what it is you are wanting. It can be a most trying experience.

The sales clerk, who no doubt senses your discomfort, will say, "May I help you?"

You say, "Uh, yeah, well, I was wanting to, uh, get my girlfriend some, uh, well, you know, uh, underwear." You sort of mumble that last word.

The clerk then says, "Fine. What size?"

She giggles and says, "No, I mean what size does she wear?"

You blush and hold your hands about 10 inches apart, "Uh, I don't know. She's about this big."

The clerk says, "I see. Do you want something with lace?"

You, having broke into a major league sweating attack, finally blurt out, "Look, just forget it. You got any vacuum cleaners?"

BOUNDARY

The board also approved recommended changes in rural boundaries assigning to Lee High School those students who live in an area bounded by the city limits, Rankin Highway, the extensions of County Road 260 and Holiday Hill Road, Warren Road and County Roads 1788 and 868. The remainder of the rural students will attend Midland High School.

School officials believe the plan will eliminate enrollment disparities possible under the present boundaries. Assuming the staff's predictions are correct, 5,412 student currently in kindergarten through sixth grade would be assigned to Lee High School compared to 5,408 at Midland High School by the 1996-97 school year.

In addition, MISD staff contends the plan will correct any possible imbalance in ethnic enrollment. Of the total student population at Lee high School, about 61 percent would be classified as Anglo, 27 percent Hispanic and 10 percent black. Similar numbers are expected at Midland High School with 61 percent being classified as Anglo, 29 percent Hispanic and 9 percent black. The differences in rural student enrollment would be balanced within three students with 598 attending Lee High and 595 going to Midland High.

The board has complimented the staff for its remarkable record of projecting enrollment and recommending changes if and when disparities occur; however, Midland Parent Action Committee members say it is impossible to accurately project enrollment at any time.

Speaking on behalf of the group at a April 16 press conference, former Midland Mayor Ernest Angelo Jr. said "It is difficult for me to believe that reliable projections in our high schools can be made under current conditions."

M-PAC is a loosely structured citizens' group that came into existence out of concern for the timing of the boundary change. The group has obtained over 2,000 signatures on a petition asking that the board wait until current economic conditions stabilize before making a final decision.

Angelo pointed out that a comparison of projected and actual enrollments presented to the board at a recent meeting failed to indicate when the projections were made, leaving the inference that the incredible accuracy has been made over a long period of time. M-PAC studies show that frequent adjustments were made, meaning that projections are useful for only a few years at a time.

"Frequent revisions are understandable but not identifying them as such raises questions about the apparent claim of an ability to make long range projections," he said.

MISD president Bill Jackson admitted the district routinely revises projections whenever it receives significant data. "We look at it and see what needs to be done. The board as a whole looks at it constantly. That's just good business and this is a business," he said.

M-PAC suggests the board consider a random sample study of students at the city's two freshman high schools in their decision. Those samples, taken by school personnel, identified 23 percent and 18 percent of the students at Lee and Midland Freshman High Schools respectively as not planning to be enrolled in September.

While the group says it understands the school board's desire to balance the high schools, it charges that the staff plan "cuts the heart" out of the Lee High School district in terms of student and parent participation.

M-PAC member Seree Whitlow reported about 70 of Lee's National Honor Society members would be lost to Midland High, while about 244 of Lee's 543 PTA members would be lost.

Midland Realtor Sarah Crowe also criticized the plan to bring upper socio-economic areas into Midland High School.

The areas with houses that normally sell for $100,000 or more in the Lee High School boundary are Trinity Estates, Greetree, MaMar, Crestgate and the south Emerson Elementary School area. In the Midland High School attendance area, houses that sell for a similar value are located in Saddle Club North, Warwick, Racquet Club/Crescent Place, Polo Park, Saddle Club Sout, Skyline Terrace, the north Emerson area, Plantation Hills, Vista West, Meadowpark, and along Scharbauer Drive, Garfield Street and Golf Course Road.

Under the staff plan, only four of the areas with houses currently selling for $100,000 or more in the Lee district would remain.

"The successful solution to high school population disparities will not be found through bringing additional upper economic areas into Midland High School," Ms. Crowe has said.

She asked that both current and future Midland families have a choice of high schools regardless of their socio-economic status.

The board has asked for citizen input at a public hearing slated for 7 p.m. Tuesday in the Sam Houston Elementary School cafeteria. Final approval of the plan is expected on May 13.

Adams

Midland police are searching for a 22-year-old Midland man missing from his home since April 9, when he was last seen at the Lexington Apartments on South Midkiff Street.

Howard "Howie" Lee Adams, 3309 W. Cuthbert, is six feet tall and weighs about 140 pounds, and walks with a pronounced limp on his right side. He has brown hair and brown eyes, and was last seen wearing blue jeans and a white T-shirt.

Young Democrats to meet Tuesday

From Staff Reports

The Midland County Young Democrats will hold their monthly meeting Tuesday at 5:30 p.m. at the Midland County Democratic Headquarters, 2305 N. Big Spring.

Candidates seeking the office of Midland County Democratic Party chairman will speak at the meeting. Incumbent Janet Massey is being challenged by Robert Pollard for the post.

Also, the Young Democrats will conduct a mock precinct meeting to demonstrate how the precinct meetings, which are scheduled for May 3, can be organized.

Anyone interested in the discussion or joining the Young Democrats is invited to attend the meeting.

Stories give statistics 'dimension'

By ANNTOINETTE MOORE
Staff Writer

SAN ANGELO — Jack Elder wrote four women's names on the easel-supported pad of white paper at the front of the conference room.

"These women — two Guatemalans and two Salvadorans — are all dead," he said. Then he told their stories.

Elder, former director of Casa Oscar Romero, a halfway house for Central American refugees in the Valley, was speaking at a seminar on Central America sponsored by the Texas Conference of Churches and the Central America Resource Center.

John Booth, a political science professor at North Texas State University, and Michael Conroy, an economics professor at University of Texas at Austin, had earlier discussed Central American political and economic issues.

Elder gave these analyses and statistics a personal dimension.

He began with the story of Laura Sanchez, a 35-year-old Salvadoran widow with three girls who died a year ago this month. She had stayed in a region being bombed by the Salvadoran army, Elder said.

Ms. Sanchez was killed when she and her daughters gave up their place in a bomb shelter to another family, he continued. She was shot while fleeing from troops making a sweep of the area. Her daughters escaped to San Salvador and later held a Mass for their mother.

The Mass was a celebration of Ms. Sanchez's life, Elder said.

"Her commitment to her people was seen as part of the suffering the people of El Salvador were going through," he said.

"El Salvador is passing through its time on the cross. Beyond that they could hope for resurrection."

The second woman, a Guatemalan, had been killed after she was petitioning the government for information on relatives who had disappeared, Elder claimed. The third woman, a Salvadoran, died three years ago after she had been investigating bombings of civilians. The last, a Guatemalan, was a law student who had been harassed and had applied for political asylum in Canada. She was killed just days before leaving the country.

Such sacrifices can "give us hope that the blood these people have shed will nourish us who hope for a more just Central America," Elder continued.

Elder, who was convicted of transporting illegal aliens in February 1985 and was sentenced to five months in a San Antonio halfway house, said Central American refugees "are a challenge, even a gift."

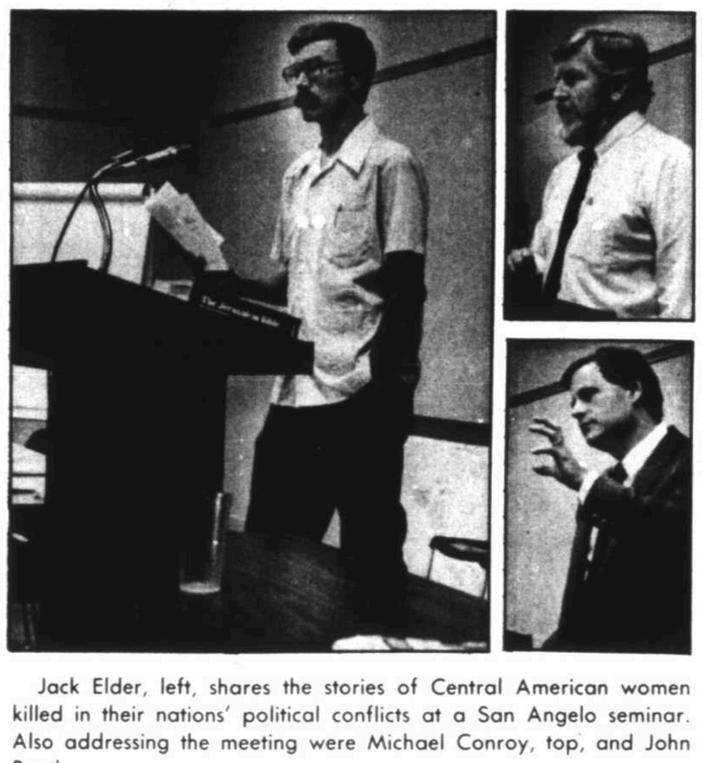
"The conditions which make people refugees have to be a prime focus of (Christians') work...When we're talking about public policy issues which involve tens of thousands of Central Americans, we retreat at our own risk," he continued.

The U.S. and other governments have begun to claim "anyone who takes a stand with the refugees or takes a stand with the oppressed...is an enemy.

"We're being asked to rediscover what is central to our faith...and somehow have the courage to follow through."

Are we going to organize or are we going to remain numb and immobilized? he asked.

"The church in Central America has recognized that to be faithful to scripture there has to be an integration in our lives...When that integration happens, there's good reason for the principalities to be fearful."



Jack Elder, left, shares the stories of Central American women killed in their nations' political conflicts at a San Angelo seminar. Also addressing the meeting were Michael Conroy, top, and John Booth.

"It's that type of refusal to give up the cross in pursuit of the kingdom of God" that threatens the civil and military powers.

The sanctuary movement, which provides aid to illegal aliens said to be fleeing political persecution in their countries, is just part of our response, Elder said.

"If we aren't able to respond (to the refugees)...and are captive to a state religion, who are the oppressed? The Central Americans may not be oppressed (if) we are the ones who remain passive, fearful."

"I consider myself fortunate to have shared the risks" of the refugees, Elder continued, and quoted a Spanish proverb "The load that doesn't kill you makes you stronger."

SEMINAR

However, Central America has been of periodic political interest to the United States, beginning in the mid-1850s when the U.S. needed a shorter route to the California gold fields, Booth said.

In 1857, American William Walker actually proclaimed himself president of Nicaragua and tried to have it annexed to the United States, Booth continued. This ignited the Great National War and generated tremendous anti-American sentiment in Nicaragua. Walker was overthrown but was given safe passage out of the country on a U.S. warship, according to Booth.

The United States also sent Marines to Nicaragua in 1909, 1912 and 1927, he said.

"Nicaragua developed a great deal of antagonism" toward the United States after decades of such intervention.

"Typically, we have intervened on behalf of very unsavory governments...military governments which have been extremely abusive of human rights," Booth said.

Conroy attributes the Reagan administration's virulent opposition to Nicaragua's Sandinista government to "the religion of anti-communism.

"Anyone who uses the rhetoric of a Marxist, agrarian reform or dramatic changes in the power structure...is assumed to be a Communist," he said.

Nicaragua is also the first country in Central America since 1826 that has escaped from direct U.S. control, Conroy claimed. "In the 19th and early 20th centuries we were able to...depose any government, political party or general we didn't like."

Finally, Nicaragua sets a threatening example. Unlike Cuba, it has a "certain amount of political pluralism and a real mixed economy (with both government and private sector production). And it has managed to raise the standard of living of the poorest people dramatically," he said.

It has taken control of imports and exports and carved out "a whole new relationship with multinational corporations," Conroy continued. Corporations cannot exploit their workers as easily in Nicaragua as they can in other Central American nations, he claimed.

Nicaragua by itself is "so small it has a negligible effect, but if others follow those policies, then we might have real concerns."

During the 1960s and '70s, the area experienced an economic boom. But it was really just "superimposed development," according to Conroy, which left a "film of wealth" on the top levels of society. The commercial and agricultural expansion never trickled down to the poorer classes.

For example, in 1965, 35 percent of Salvadoran families were landless, working as wage laborers. In 1979, after the economic boom and some so-called agrarian reforms, 65 percent of the rural population had no access to land of its own, Conroy said.

In 1980, the region was hit with the double whammy of rising oil prices and rising interest rates. These policies were "engineered in the United States," he said, to bring down inflation. But they also decimated Central American economies; the standard of living in many countries fell back to 1968 levels.

Economic chaos generated political unrest and Central America's ruling classes turned to political repression to protect their interests.

In Guatemala, the Ladinos, of Spanish and Indian ancestry, have always suffered from a "conquest mentality," according to Booth.

"They saw the Indians as sub-human...a group of people with no rights and no right to protest their conditions," he continued. When the Indians protested, they were slaughtered.

Since 1980, Richard Adams, a UT anthropologist, estimates that 150,000 Indians, suspected of supporting anti-government guerrillas, have been killed in the northwest region of Guatemala, according to Booth. The army has "exterminated whole cultural groups" and driven perhaps 250,000 people into Mexico.

"This is on the scale of what the Germans were doing to the Jews in World War II," Booth said.

MMH

"Barbara and I are pleased to extend our congratulations to Midland Memorial Hospital," read the letter. "It is evidence of the excellent health care that is being provided."

Letters were also received from U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler and State Rep. Tom Craddick.

The approximately 30 to 40 visitors were shown a slide presentation at the beginning of the ceremony held in the hospital's newly-renovated lobby area. The presentation showed changes and additions made to several parts of the hospital including the northeast area (new basement and first floor) which houses personnel, business offices, classrooms, auditorium and administrative offices; the southwest area (third and fourth floors) which includes the new Labor/Delivery/Recovery and 40 new medical/surgery beds; the main level (renovated) which houses the same day surgery area and the new hyperbaric oxygen therapy room.

The HBO area was the result of a recent anonymous donor who gave the hospital the money to add the service. Visitors witnessed an actual treatment, which involves placing the patient into a Plexiglas "tube" — a special oxygen-rich environment which is widely believed to speed up healing for many medical conditions including burns, smoke inhalation, infections, crush injuries, skin grafts and flaps used in plastic surgery.

The cost of the unit which has been used in 60 treatments since its arrival at MMH a week ago, was $68,000. Treatments, which average 90 minutes, are about $200.

"Currently, there is only six approved HBO centers in the state," said Dr. Shelton Viney, HBO medical director. "There are HBOs in Galveston, Houston, San Antonio, Temple and Dallas."

According to Viney, the number of HBOs in the U.S. has risen from 30 in 1970, to 70 in 1983 and 380 in 1986.

"This field is rapidly expanding and Midland should be proud to have the HBO," he said.

Big Brothers benefit sets sail

From Staff Reports

Big Brothers/Big Sisters of Midland has announced its Spring Fundraiser and this year's goal has been set at $20,000.

Pledges of $20 will sponsor one of the 1,200 nautical miles that the sailboat "Windfall Prophet" will be sailing during the 10th bi-annual Regatta De Amigos in Galveston.

The "Windfall Prophet" will be competing with more than 100 sailboats racing from Galveston to Vera Cruz, Mexico, on June 20. The "Windfall Prophet" was the first place winner in the 1982 race.

A contribution will make the contributor eligible for four chances to win a weekend of sailing on the boat. If a person's ticket is chosen, he and a companion will be flown to Galveston, courtesy of Southwest Airlines, for an all-expense paid stay at the Bob Smith Yacht Club. The drawing will be held the first week in June at Grandy's Restaurant.

For additional information or to make a pledge, contact Big Brothers/Big Sisters at 2111 W. Texas or call 686-0033.

LOOK AT THE NEIGHBORHOOD
One of the most important things you should do before you buy a house is take a close look at the neighborhood. That's what makes location so important in any house-buying decision. No matter how attactive the house may be, the neighborhood location is of primary importance from an investment point of view.
Look at the surrounding houses to see if they are well maintained. If there are large tracts of vacant land nearby, ask your Realtor to check with local planning commission to find out what their future use may be. If you're buying a house in an attractive residential neighborhood, any commercial development may have an impact on property values.
If you have children of school age, your Realtor can also help you by providing information about the school system. Local Realtors are acutely aware of all local conditions that will affect homeowners in the market area. This is just one of many services your Realtor can provide.

Scouting award presented

Smith

Jeanne Smith, 3000 Goddard, has been presented the first Lou Ann Graham Award for outstanding service to the Midland community in Girl Scouting.

Ms. Smith is the community coordinator for Girl Scouts in Midland. She has served the Permian Basin Girl Scout Council as community cookie chairman, day camp director and Junior Girl Scout troop leader. She has also been a member of the Management Operating Unit and the Membership Operating Unit.

The Lou Ann Graham Award was created in memory of Lou Ann Graham, a longtime volunteer who died in 1985. The award was presented to Ms. Smith by Ms. Graham's oldest daughter, Sharon.

"The volunteer who receives this award," said Ava Jane Warren, field director for Midland, "must be a person who represents the Girl Scout image, possesses a positive attitude, has a willingness to serve, a willingness to make a commitment and the ability to accomplish goals. Jeanne is all of these and more. She truly deserves this award."

Also recognized at the recent Leader's Day Luncheon were Alison Slyker, 2812 Marmon Dr., for coordinating Spring Fair and Anne Carroll, 3313 Bauman, for being Program Center Activities chairman.

Katie Wilkinson, a Junior Girl Scout from Troop 384, was awarded a T-shirt and certificate for selling 560 boxes of cookies, the most sold by a girl in Midland. Marylee Westmoreland, 2304 Culpepper Dr., the leader of Troop 389 was presented a certificate because her troop sold 2,858 boxes of cookies, the most in Midland.

Girl Scout mugs were presented to Liz Schammel, 2509 Learmont, for serving as the Service Project Coordinator and Mary Jo Sawyer, 3315 Providence, for serving as secretary of the Midland Community Executive Committee.

Odessan, upset over conviction on manslaughter, commits suicide

ODESSA (AP) — A 26-year-old man who had just been convicted of manslaughter and sentenced to eight years in prison went home, put a pistol to his head and killed himself, police said.

Larry Calicutt, convicted Friday of voluntary manslaughter in a 1985 shooting death, shot himself in the head with a .38-caliber pistol about 7:15 p.m., less than an hour after an Ector County jury convicted and sentenced him to prison, authorities said.

Justice of the Peace J. Hungerford ruled Calicutt's death "self-inflicted," said Police Sgt. John Magee.

Calicutt's cousin, Joseph Stevens, was in the house at the time, and later told police that the convicted man had been despondent over the outcome of his trial, said Lt. Terry Lange.

Calicutt was convicted of voluntary manslaughter in the May 8, 1985, fatal shooting of 22-year-old Robert Clark. Clark died in a hospital two weeks after Calicutt shot him in the face in an apartment complex parking lot, according to police reports.

Initially, Calicutt was charged with murder. But his lawyer, Michael McLeaish said that since the jury opted for the lesser charge of manslaughter, they apparently believed he was acting out of "sudden passion" when he shot Clark.

After he was sentenced, Calicutt collapsed in sobs outside the courtroom, McLeaish said.

The convicted man was due to return to court on Monday, where formal sentencing was to have taken place, the lawyer said. State District Judge Tryon Lewis granted a request to let Calicutt remain free on $7,500 bond until the formal sentencing, McLeaish said.

"Evidence showed that all in all, Larry Calicutt was a pretty good fellow," McLeaish said. "I just feel that the entire chain of events was a tragedy."

He said that during the trial witnesses differed over whether the two men had been fighting over a child or the child's mother.

Witnesses to the shooting said that Calicutt drove up to the parking lot where Clark was standing, got out of his car and approached Clark.

Calicutt pointed a handgun at Clark and fired a shot, critically wounding him in the face, according to police and witness reports.

Mcleaish said that testimony presented during the trial said that Clark had threatened Calicutt on previous occasions and that he may have feared Clark the day of the shooting.

Future of the state

Three of the most important nominations to be determined by voters May 3rd will be those for the positions of governor, lieutenant governor and U.S. Representative of the 21st Congressional District.

After several months of researching the qualifications of the numerous candidates in both primaries and talking with most of the candidates in personal meetings, the Reporter-Telegram recommends the following candidates to voters:

Governor

Democrat: Mark White. This race features a number of candidates, but only the most loyal supporter of one of the others would assume the incumbent governor could be defeated in the Democratic Primary. Such an assumption would have to overlook Texas political history and the readily acknowledged fact that unseating a sitting governor within his own primary election is extremely rare.

While Gov. White's policies may not be particularly popular in this or other politically conservative areas of the state, without a doubt he wields an impressive level of popular support. Notable exceptions would be parents who continue to blame White for the controversial no pass/no play rule and public school teachers who may believe the governor "double-crossed" them after seeking their support in his campaign last time around.

White has been a staunch supporter of the oil and gas industry and has led efforts to diversify the state's economy. Without a doubt, he deserves the Democratic nomination.

Republican: Tom Loeffler. This race, while adding much to the interest level in this year's primary elections, added a particular burden to followers of the Republican Party. Each of the three candidates — former Gov. Bill Clements, former U.S. Rep. Kent Hance and current U.S. Rep. Loeffler has a direct connection to Midland and this congressional district.

As governor prior to 1982, Clements was extremely popular in this part of the state. Hance, a former state senator, served the 19th Congressional District as U.S. representative prior to redistricting that put Midland County in the 21st Congressional District. Hance also was extremely popular in Midland and this area which he served admirably.

Loeffler has served Midland since redistricting although he was first elected to Congress in 1978. In that period of time he has proven to be an effective and hard-working Congressman who is well-respected in this area.

Each of the three has been endorsed by this newspaper in previous campaigns, the economic and free enterprise policies of each would benefit Texas in the hard days ahead, and each, if elected, undoubtedly would bring to the position of governor particular qualities that would reflect the values and principals of the hard-working, enterprising people of this area.

But only one can be endorsed and nominated, and in that regard we believe Tom Loeffler should get the vote for governor. His strengths include a deep love of his native state, an understanding of the special and diverse needs facing Texas, and the youth and vigor to lead this state boldly into the future to face the challenges that are present today and will arise in future years.

Loeffler is the logical choice for not only the people who know him from his service in the 21st Congressional District but all the people of Texas.

Lieutenant Governor

Democrat: William P. "Bill" Hobby Jr. This race pits Hobby, who assumed the state's No. 2 position in 1972 in the wake of the Sharpstown bank scandal, against political neophyte David Young of Austin. Hobby serves an extremely important function in the state government and his leadership should not be flippantly overlooked. The Hobby name is well known in Texas political circles and he undoubtedly will — and should — be nominated.

Republican: No recommendation.

21st Congressional

Democrat: W.E. "Pete" Snelson. No new name to those associated with Texas politics over the past 20 years or so, Snelson served Midland and the rest of the state in the State Senate for 22 years before losing in a bid for Texas Land Commissioner in 1982.

There is a school of thought that the 21st Congressional District, which was engineered as a largely Republican district, will not elect a Democratic Congressman. Snelson is out to refute that belief and we think if anyone can, he is the one.

Snelson's past public service was exemplary. His philosophy reflects the conservatism of the district which few individuals can realistically claim to know better.

Republican: G. Thane Akins. This race drew a large number of attractive candidates, but Akins, who now serves as Midland's mayor, offers all the qualifications the district's voters should want. Having been in the petroleum business since 1957, he is well aware of the needs of that industry and the 21st District, which is a major petroleum producer.

Akins has been in public office for a number of years, serving as a city councilman prior to being elected mayor in 1980. His philosophy is conservative, which reflects the political philosophy of the people of the district.

Midland County races

Only three decisions have to be made by Midland County voters at the local level in Saturday's Republican Primary Election. No Democrat seeking office locally faces an opponent.

The races to be decided are county judge, county commissioner of Precinct 2 and county treasurer. After meetings with each of the candidates in those races, checking their qualifications for service and assessing the needs of the community, the Reporter-Telegram recommends to voters the following candidates:

County Judge, County Commissioner

Matt Blair, County Judge; Guy McCrary, Precinct 2 County Commissioner: It's time for a change, not because incumbent County Judge Bill Ahders or Commissioner C. Wallace "Wally" Craig have totally failed in their duty to discharge their respective responsibilities in most respects to the benefit of county residents. But one major persistent, unresolved county problem — the county jail dilemma — indicates that it may be time for voters to consider injecting some new personalities into the county debate in the interest of getting a new perspective.

Both Ahders and Craig have performed particular functions of their positions well. Ahders is a noteworthy jurist; Craig has provided a stabilizing voice to the court's work. Still, there is a notable degree of concern throughout the community that the county leadership has been wanting is certain respects.

In Blair, a young attorney, and McCrary, a marketing and public relations executive, voters have the opportunity to give a new direction to the Commissioners' Court. McCrary is better known in the community, having led the successful effort to bring Centennial Plaza to reality and being active in other community endeavors.

Blair isn't so well known, but he is well spoken and shows promise in his ability to afford new leadership to the county.

That's important for while it's true that county government traditionally has been primarily oriented to rural residents and was designed to meet those needs, county government is changing — particularly in a county such as Midland that features only one major community with a smattering of residents in the county. Their needs still must be met, of course, but more emphasis today must be given to questions affecting the overall county populace — the county budget and tax base, resolving the sticky county jail problem and planning for growth of Midland's outlying areas.

In that regard, Blair and McCrary offer to give the Commissioners' Court a needed new perspective.

The other candidate in the Precinct 2 commissioner's race, Milton Rister of Greenwood, certainly has to be commended for his interest and for offering himself for public service in this capacity.

Winner of the Precinct 2 GOP nomination will face Don Boydston, the sole Democratic candidate, in November. There is no Democratic candidate for County Judge.

County Treasurer

Thomas E. Miller: Both of the individuals in this race — Dewey Lee, an investigator for the Midland County District Attorney's Office, and Miller, formerly a district manager for Pritchard & Abbott Valuation Consultants — have had experience in receiving and disbursing large sums of money. The real difference between them, then, is which individual would bring the most progressive change to the treasurer's office.

We believe Miller would do that by seeking to modernize office procedures. He is a 1965 graduate of Texas Christian University and holds the bachelor of business administration degree, in addition to his years of experience with Pritchard & Abbott.

Winner of this race will face incumbent Democratic County Treasurer Dee Thompson in November.

Allies should recall Khadafy's threats

WASHINGTON — The hostile response of most Western European governments to the U.S. raid on Libya puzzled and angered many Americans, who supported the military strike as a long-overdue attempt to cool Libyan dictator Moammar Khadafy's ardor for international terrorism. Libyan oil money has financed anti-government terrorist groups from the Philippines to Ireland and most trouble spots in between.

Jack Anderson

Our associate Lucette Lagnado has reviewed classified State Department cables obtained through the Freedom of Information Act. They might well serve as a reminder to our querulous European allies of the threat Khadafy has posed to their safety and peace of mind in recent years. For instance:

— Italy. An intelligence team concluded that Italy was "a country which has witnessed the largest number of Libyan assassination attempts." One of the violent incidents occurred in February 1981, when "at least two but possibly five Libyan gunmen opened fire in ... Rome's Fiumicino Airport, wounding a number of Arabs." The cable noted that "Libyan assassins have killed or wounded a number of Libyan dissidents in Italy."

The intelligence summary went on to describe several other attacks, which Italian police believed were "part of a campaign of intimidation launched by Khadafy against political opponents abroad."

Later in 1981, the consulate in Milan cabled: "Italy's military intelligence service ... turned up evidence at end of May that Libya and Palestinians have supplied weapons ... to Italian terrorists." The Italian police had uncovered a plot by terrorist leader Oreste Scalzone, who was "thought to have received funds from the Libyans to establish a radio station and 'cultural centers' in Rome/Naples vicinity."

The Italians, of course, later made a separate peace with the terrorist community, allowing assassins unhampered transit through Italy in return for a promise to let Italians alone. Even after this pact with the devil was breached by the seizure of the Italian cruise ship Achille Lauro and the bloody attack on the Rome airport, Italian leaders still managed to express shock and dismay when the United States decided to try a different anti-terrorism tactic.

— France. It's probably unfair to suggest that France's refusal to allow U.S. planes to fly over French soil reflected sympathy for state-sponsored terrorism — which the French government practiced in the fatal bombing of the nuclear protest ship Rainbow Warrior in New Zealand. But surely there is little to substantiate the French leaders' claim that the reason they didn't support the U.S. attack was because it wasn't tough enough.

In January 1984, according to a State Department cable, threatening letters were received in the West Berlin offices of the Associated Press and Agence France-Presse with "a message to the French people."

The letters, from a group calling itself "the Armed Arab Struggle," warned cryptically that "not only our children will cry to the memory of the martyrs of Baalbek." The reference was to the recent French air strikes in the Bekaa Valley of Lebanon, in which many civilians were killed. The raid had been in retaliation for the suicide bombing of the French military base at Beirut Airport in October 1983, at the same time as the terrorist destruction of the U.S. Marine barracks there.

According to the cable, the threatening letters appeared "identical with (one) received by the West German embassy in Jidda (Saudi Arabia) which claimed responsibility for the bombing of the Maison de France in West Berlin the previous year."

The last part of the cable is particularly interesting in light of the discotheque bombing in West Berlin that was the immediate cause of the air strike at Libya: "Information recorded by the U.S. military police on duty at Checkpoint Charlie indicated that a blue Mercedes with East German diplomatic license plates entered West Berlin. Because of other evidence they have suggesting a Libyan involvement, West Berlin police suspect that this vehicle may have been used to bring the letters to West Berlin for mailing."

Two years later, the East German-Libyan cooperation would be turned against the United States, not France.

— Greece. Another shrill critic of the U.S. attack on Libya was the Greek government. Yet Khadafy's assassins have struck Libyan dissidents in Greece repeatedly over the years. A cable of July 1984 describes in gruesome detail the punishment meted out to two young Libyan students whose only crime was to be opposed to Khadafy — and to let their opposition be known back in Tripoli. The two, Abdel Molnem El Zawi and Attia Salah El Fartaz were "both studying to be dental assistants on Libyan government scholarships."

Heavy guns ready to converge on Nevada

LAS VEGAS — Nevada, planted more thickly with paradoxes than people, has a new one. Republicans could lose a U.S. Senate seat, and perhaps control of the Senate, because a Las Vegas lawyer, Jim Santini, is thought to have too sharp an eye for the main chance.

George F. Will

Paul Laxalt is retiring and the Republican candidate to replace him is Santini, 48, who used to be a Democratic congressman. His opponent is Harry Reid, 46, the congressman from one of Nevada's two districts, the one in and around Las Vegas, where more than half of Nevada's voters live. Reid seems to be leading by about 5 percentage points, but the boys have just begun to fight, meaning: spend.

The shrinking violet is not a desert flower, and neither Santini nor Reid had to be dragged into politics. Reid was elected lieutenant governor at 29, and lost the 1974 Senate race to Laxalt by 624 votes. Santini was a congressman when Nevada had just one, and has run in five statewide races. One was a 1982 primary challenge to the incumbent Democratic senator, Howard Cannon. Santini lost by 5,000 votes, but Cannon then lost the general election and many Democrats blame Santini's challenge for the loss.

Since leaving Congress, Santini has been a lawyer in Sin City (your nation's capital, as Nevadans see it). Reid's congressional voting record recently earned him a perfect rating from the AFL-CIO, prompting Republican National Committee chairman Frank Fahrenkopf (from Reno; friend of Reid; Santini's college fraternity brother — Nevada is like this) to call Reid a "Tip O'Neill liberal." Fightin' words, pardner.

Reid, a Mormon, opposes abortion and the Equal Rights Amendment. Boys are raised that way in Searchlight, Nev., which had 13 brothels when Reid was growing up.

Reid's ancestors came to Nevada as gold miners before 1900, before the state found a new extraction industry: extracting dollars from tourists. The marriage, so to speak, of divorce and gambling was Nevada's entrepreneurial answer to the exhaustion of the Comstock Lode. The "Almanac of American Politics" notes that Nevada votes conservative but lives off things conservatives dislike: gambling and, worse, government. After the casinos, Nellis Air Force Base is Nevada's biggest employer, and the federal government's nuclear test facility pumps in more money than Nellis. A large and growing portion of the population consists of elderly who like the way Nevada's low taxes treat the Social Security checks mailed here by wicked Washington.

Furthermore (was an almanac ever so rude?), "Nevada is probably the least family-oriented state: 32 percent of its households do not contain families (the highest percentage in the nation), while 64 percent don't have children (a proportion exceeded only by Florida) and 44 percent aren't occupied by married couples (exceeded only by California and New York). Nevada is filled now with people who came here thinking they were sharper than others, that they had a special angle, that they could and would beat the odds..."

Hey, lighten up, Almanac. Some Nevadans may be nutty but all have reasons for feeling different. The federal government owns 87 percent of Nevada. (Other Western percentages: Alaska, 96, Idaho, 67, Utah, 65, Wyoming, 48, California, 45, Arizona, 44...East of the Mississippi the highest percentage is New Hampshire, 12.) What with bombing ranges on Nevada's surface and nuclear tests below the surface, and talk of a nuclear waste dump north of Las Vegas, Nevada is feeling, well, used.

However, between now and November Nevadans are going to be stroked and courted mercilessly as the two parties pour in resources to win a cheap seat. The GOP has two advantages. One is money, but there are limits to its usefulness in a state with only two media markets, both inexpensive. The race here will be less expensive than the races in two smaller states, Idaho and South Dakota. The other GOP advantage is the Gipper. Part of the Republican offer to Santini was at least two Reagan campaign visits — talk about a test of nuclear megatonnage. Nevadans get rubbery in the knees at the mere mention of Reagan, but it remains to be seen whether even here his popularity can be transferred.

Reid and Santini have been mingling with Nevada's small electorate (300,000 registered voters) for so long, the undecided vote — the target of all the seduction — is small. So in late October an isolated herder of Elko may be startled out of a daydream and wonder what is spooking the sheep, and he will look up and see Marine One, the President's helicopter, descending toward him. No Nevadan will be safe from such attention until Wednesday, Nov. 5.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, April 27, the 117th day of 1986. There are 248 days left in the year. A reminder: most of the country goes on daylight-saving time.

Today's highlight in history:

On April 27, 1937, the nation's first Social Security checks were distributed.

On this date:

In 1521, Portuguese explorer Ferdinand Magellan was killed by natives in the Philippines.

In 1791, the inventor of the telegraph, Samuel Morse, was born in Charlestown, Mass.

In 1822, Ulysses S. Grant, 18th president of the United States, was born in Point Pleasant, Ohio.

In 1865, the steamer Sultana exploded on the Mississippi River near Memphis, Tenn., killing more than 1,400 Union prisoners of war.

One year ago: President Reagan used his weekly radio address to say that his upcoming visit to Europe would provide a fitting way to commemorate the 40th anniversary of the end of World War II.

BILL MODISETT

No problem too big for Lone Star State to solve

Bill Modisett

Texas is a big state, which is no surprise to anyone who can read a map or drive a car or listen to politicians talk on and on about solving problems. But, and this may come as somewhat of a shock — so prepare yourself: No problem is larger than the Lone Star State's ability to cope.

How do I know this? Good question, but pardon me for a moment while I collect my rambling thoughts and I'll attempt an explanation.

OK, here goes: Quick, what is Texas' biggest, and for that matter best, resource?

Puzzled? Well, here's a hint. It's not oil, even though "black gold" definitely is up there in the Top 10, if not higher. And it's not land, although the state has plenty of it in a great number of variations. Sad to say, but it isn't even rattlesnakes — despite the fact they seem to be everywhere when you least expect them and certainly could do without them.

Give up? Aw, you guessed it. Texas' best resource, natural or otherwise, is its people! They give to the state a special flavor, a dynamic personality that can't be easily described, and a steamroller entrepreneurial spirit that says: Texas isn't going to fail because it's grounded on the strength of millions of us.

The "oil problem" facing the state is no half-baked dilemma and I'll be the first to acknowledge that it isn't going to be easy to overcome. But that's always the case when a problem hits you "at home" in the shape of lost jobs, home and business foreclosures, and community disruption.

That's trauma at its worst. When the world starts crashing in and there appears to be no place to run, it's time to sit down and get a new perspective on the problem.

Texas has faced serious situations before and always come out on top and that's a direct result of the faith, the character, the determination of the people who live here. We ARE Texas.

I'm not encouraging anyone to be unrealistic, but there has been a lot of talk about "Pollyannas" lately. OK, I agree that it isn't always realistic to be positive about a situation. But whom would you rather follow out of a frightening situation: Someone who honestly believes you will make it and has the courage of his convictions or someone who says, "Well, we're probably not going to make it, but let's go anyway"?

Look up. The sky's still blue. The grass is still green and life is still worth living. Texas will overcome this "problem" because it has any number of wise, determined leaders who can show us the way.

I'm anxious to see this week's arrival of the Texas Sesquicentennial Wagon Train. Heck, that's a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity and I want to be part of it.

Texas is only 150 years old. That's young, but I don't figure on being around for the next wagon train and so this is a good opportunity to make a few memories for the future.

• • •

Vote Saturday. The Reporter-Telegram has carefully researched all the various candidates in all the races and indicated the ones it believes would best serve the Midland community and the people of Texas.

But the real responsibility for choosing political leaders falls to the individual voter. Take your time, review the candidates as much as possible and vote on Saturday.

Help shape the future of Midland and Texas.

Midland needs Akins in hard economic times

Midland needs Thane Akins in Congress. It is no news that Midland faces difficult economic times. While we need to face facts, we also need to look for positive steps that can be taken rather than dwelling on doom and gloom.

While I do not claim the election of Akins will solve all of the economic problems of Midland, it would take a couple of positive steps in that direction. First, Thane is the only candidate who has hands-on experience in the oil industry. He has over 30 years of experience as an oil engineer. Thane will not only vote right, but most importantly will understand why he is voting right. He will be far more effective as a representative talking about the oil and gas industry since other congressmen and bureaucrats will know that he speaks with first-hand knowledge. With the problems the oil and gas industry is now facing, Midland needs more than ever a representative with knowledge and understanding of the industry.

A second positive step that would result from the election of Akins would be in the direction of diversification. We have heard a lot of talk lately about the Superconducting Super-Collider. Our West Texas location seems to be a possibility since the price of building it here would be approximately one-half of other proposed sites. However, if economy were the basis of most government decisions we would not have a $1 trillion national debt.

The hard facts are that most federal government decisions are made for political, not economic reasons. If we have a congressman from Midland to fight for a Midland location our chance of obtaining the location will be much greater than if we have a congressman from the east end of the district who would probably be pushing for the San Antonio site. The location of this site in West Texas would mean hundreds of jobs for Midland — jobs that Midland sorely needs now. The potential of spinoff technologies could mean potentially thousands of jobs for Midland and the entire Permian Basin area.

Midland needs to elect Thane Akins to represent us in the U.S. Congress. Please vote for Thane Akins in the Republican Primary May 3. He is one of us.

David J. Porter
Midland

Akins will best represent needs of Midlanders

Midlanders have an excellent opportunity to help themselves during these times of economic downturn by voting for Thane Akins for Congress on May 3rd. It is certainly clear to me that a Midlander with oil industry experience could best represent our needs in Washington.

As the leader of our local government, Thane has shown his dedication and loyalty to our great city, all the while maintaining his unquestionable integrity and honesty, attributes that many elected officials lose along the way. We are all painfully aware of the drastic drop in the price of oil to the depths that it knows today; however, our city budget has remained on track because of the leadership, vision and conservative nature of Akins.

Historically, Midlanders overcame adversity and economic challenges because they united together. Today, we must continue that spirit and unite behind Thane Akins for U.S. Congress.

Joel Ford
Midland

Midlanders should back Akins for 21st District

This letter is written to urge all eligible Midlanders to vote for Thane Akins for U.S. Congress in the May 3rd Republican Primary.

Although there are several fine candidates in this race, Mayor Akins is the only one both from Midland and in the petroleum industry. He is the one candidate who can best represent our views in Washington concerning the issues of the Permian Basin and the petroleum industry which practically everyone in Midland is dependent upon.

Mayor Akins' qualifications include many years as a petroleum engineer at ARCO Oil and Gas Co., Engineering Manager at O'Briant Engineering and a member and past chairman of the Permian Basin Section of the Society of Petroleum Engineers, AIME. He served on our Midland City Council from 1976-1980 and as Midland's mayor since 1980. Therefore he is familiar with the issues and problems we face in Midland.

It is also important for Midlanders to band together and support their own. This particular Congressional District, the 21st, stretches from the northern part of San Antonio and New Braunfels west to Marfa and north to Midland. Neither Odessa nor Stanton are located in the district. The diversity of interests in the district indicates our views and problems could be diluted or overlooked unless someone familiar with them and with our area represents us in Congress.

Mayor Thane Akins is Midland's man running in this race to perform the job of representing us. I urge support for him in the May 3rd Republican Primary.

Richard W. Turrentine
Midland

Midland, West Texas to unite behind Akins

With the severe recession that is shaking our confidence and straining our ability to survive, Midland and all of West Texas must unite behind a leader who is one of us and who has our interest in his heart.

We have such a man — our mayor, Thane Akins. He is the only candidate for Congress in the 21st District who knows our needs and the needs of the energy industry. He is the only candidate who can establish credibility with other members of Congress on energy issues because he can draw on 30 years of experience in the field. His long experience has brought him to advocate the deregulation of the energy economies of the oil and gas producing states. Akins will work effectively to see that the thousands of independent operators, producers, and service companies are not forgotten when national energy policies are being determined.

Akins has proved his effectiveness again in recent weeks. As a member of the U.S. Mayor's Conference, he worked successfully to secure the passage of a resolution favoring the deregulation of natural gas. This task was not accomplished easily, but he won over undecided participants on the strength of his expertise and commitment.

As our mayor, Akins has worked hard to keep taxes low and to attract the new industry we need to diversify our economy. He has been a leader in the efforts the guarantee future water supplies for West Texas, through the Stacy Dam project, and to secure the location of the SSC (Superconductivity Super Collider) project on a site near Garden City. As an experienced engineer, Akins was able to take a lead position in this important campaign. The key location decision will be made by national political leaders. When that time comes, we need Akins, an experienced engineer, as our spokesman in Congress — not a representative who lives 350 miles to the southeast and who is committed to securing the facility for his area. With this important project, the key to the diversification of our economy is the election of Akins to Congress.

Akins has served Midland well for 10 years, as a member of the Midland City Council and as our mayor. He has demanded that the city operate under a balanced budget. He has helped make Midland one of the safest cities in the country. In a larger arena, he has consistently supported law-and-order candidates, especially Ronald Reagan in 1976, 1980 and 1984. Recently, he has supported President Reagan's response to Libyan terrorism.

We need to nominate and elect an effective congressman who understands our needs and agrees with our opinions. If we think about this race seriously, we will decide that Thane Akins is right for Midland, right for the 21st Congressional District and for America.

State needs Walsh as next attorney general

In view of the general lawlessness sweeping the country, there is no more important office at stake in Texas than that of the Attorney General.

And undoubtedly the outstanding candidate for that office from the standpoint of character and proven ability in prosecuting criminals and sending them to the penitentiary is Ed Walsh, former District Attorney of Williamson County.

Ninety five percent of those brought to trial by Walsh have been convicted while the three guilty or capital murder — including multiple killer Henry Lee Lucas — have wound up on Death Row at Huntsville.

Texas is in crying need of such a man as Walsh and no state office is in greater need of a change right now than that of Attorney General. Texans should vote in the Republican Primary on May 3 to put Ed Walsh in line as the next Attorney General of Texas.

City's paramedics deserve our thanks

We would like to take this opportunity to express our sincere thanks for the efforts of two of this city's paramedics.

Early Monday morning, April 14th, Mr. C.L. Scott called the 911 number, as a result of his being unable to breathe.

The prompt action and professional treatment by Mr. Sammy Fields and Mr. Jeff White very well may have saved his life.

The City of Midland can be proud of these two young men. They were not only professional in their actions, but also very considerate in their treatment of his family at the emergency room of the hospital.

These two men are certainly a credit to their profession and to the Midland Fire Department.

Teachers should stick to education, not politics

One would actually have to be a teacher or coach to believe that you could tie your pride to the coattail of gubernatorial candidate "media bleeder" Don Crowder and defeat Governor Mark White and House Bill 72 No Pass, No Play rule in the May primary. At least something good will come out of their way of thinking though.

They should learn education is their game, not politics. In Texas politics you learn quick not to send a novice up against a veteran like Governor Mark White. If they think they are in trouble now, wait until November. Like the seagulls and ducks along the coast, the teachers have already had all they want of ex-governor Wild Bill Clements and his sure cures. To me it looks like another "White Christmas" in November.

SPEAKING OUT

By TEDDA MCANEAR

A lifelong resident of Midland, Tedda McAnear is victim-witness coordinator for the Midland County District Attorney's Office. She attended Midland College and currently is working toward a degree in psychology at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

The weeks set aside to focus attention on victims' rights are now behind us — although the fact that victims even have rights may come as a surprise to many people in our community. Actually, the concept, if not the program, has been around for more than a decade and is growing and changing at a rapid pace.

We are fortunate in Midland County to have a district attorney that recognizes the need for growth and strongly advocates the victims' rights movement. A decade ago, there were only a few states with compensation programs for victims; today they exist in 39 states, plus the District of Columbia and the Virgin Islands. A decade ago, only a handful of programs designed to assist victims of crime were active; today they are assisting crime victims in all 50 states. A decade ago, the idea of allowing a victim to provide information for a judge's consideration at sentencing was only discussed among victims rights advocates; today a victim impact statement is being utilized in 17 states.

A decade ago, a claim for victims' rights was little more than a concept; today bills of rights for victims have been passed in at least 11 states, including Texas. In addition, the federal government has established a leadership role in victim issues through such programs as Victim/Witness Protection Act of 1982; the Missing Children's Act of 1982 and President's Task Force on Victims of Crime.

The progress made concerning victims' rights issues over the past decade is impressive and holds a hope and a promise for a better future; however, these accomplishments cannot blind us to present facts and realities. Crime is still alive and thriving all around us, and unfortunately only a few victims are given the compassion and justice due them from not only their fellow citizens, but from the institutions of a democratic government designed to uphold the rights of all.

There are devastating facts that remain a part of the makeup of our democratic society: Every minute there are 50 thefts nationwide; every minute there are 13 burglaries; every minute there are nine assaults; every day 1,400 children are abused; every day 408 women are raped; every day there are 55 people murdered. Every year one in three American households is victimized and more than $75 billion is bilked from the national economy as a repercussion of crime.

These statistics should be a disgrace to a country of basically good and generous people. Somewhere hidden in the disgrace of these statistics is the true story, the personal tragedies which are crime's brutal truths.

To bring these national statistics home is the tragedy of the Inskeep family of Midland, who will never be able to understand or accept their son's brutal killing this past year. They are forced to live with the realities of a brutal crime with an emotional impact that will remain with them forever. Before the trial, while they were imprisoned by the circumstances regarding their son's death, the defendant was allowed to remain free. While they were living one day at a time until the trial, the defendant was free to carry on her life as before. While they were told time and time again that the defendant's attorney had been awarded a continuance and that another trial date would have to be set, the defendant was free to plan her strategies of defense.

While the parents and family of the deceased were forced to sit in the hallway outside the courtroom and hope for bits and pieces of information from inside, the defendant was allowed to sit in the courtroom and challenge the testimony of those witnesses for the victims. When the victims were finally allowed in the courtroom to hear the sentence imposed on the admitted killer of their son, the defendant was making plans on how to serve her time, a maximum of seven years on a 20-year sentence.

The injuries of crime, obvious or not, are financial, physical and emotional, and constitute a direct harm that is the result of a criminal's actions. These injuries can be compounded by a second injury, often inflicted by the criminal justice system itself, through an indifference to the victim's fear of retaliation, or the victim's desire to be kept fully informed and consulted on major decisions; through required indignities such as the rape examination or through inefficiencies such as days of wasted time at the courthouse, lost wages or even loss of employment.

The justice system was designed to protect the rights of the innocent and the falsely accused, and justifiably so. However, society must remember the plight of victims and see that they are not denied the rights they are entitled to — the rights that contribute to the recognition that victims are human, with human strengths as well as frailties. We must work to restore their dignity to fulfill the primary goal of all the rights and services that are now in existence.

Although the victims' rights weeks have passed, it is still a time to speak out on the essentials; to review the injuries which victims suffer, to proclaim the rights which they deserve, and to voice the victims' hopes for the future. We should remember with some degree of compassion that no matter what the length of sentence a defendant receives, there is usually a day on his calendar that marks the end of his ordeal — for thousands of families such as the Inskeeps of Midland, there is no calendar, no parole, no avenue of appeal; they have no day of release to look forward to. For the Inskeeps and thousands like them, the most they can look forward to is a night's sleep without pain.

"Speaking Out" columnists are invited to submit articles on subjects of their choice. They should be limited to 850 words or less.

Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

Hearst

Before departing Friday on his courageous trip to the Far East to meet with Asian leaders and attend the Economic Summit meeting in Tokyo, he made two major speeches in Washington that epitomized the inspirational character of his leadership.

Addressing the 10th anniversary dinner of The Heritage Foundation, the leading conservative think-tank organization many of whose former analysts serve in his administration, the president said freedom is on the march around the world, and especially in Latin and Central America.

On terrorism, he served renewed notice that under his leadership Americans are not going to be kicked around any longer without the kickers risking retaliation. Recalling that Jeanne Kirkpatrick, former Ambassador to the United Nations, told the world organization in 1981 that "we've taken down our 'kick me' sign," the president said, no nation, friend or foe, should have been surprised by the American military retaliation against Libya" because he and his cabinet ministers had repeatedly warned "we would not tolerate what amounts to acts of war against the American people."

Noting the United States had not apologized for the raid on Libya, he added: "Things are different. The old politics, the post-Vietnam syndrome, the partisans of 'Blame America' are fading fast."

REAFFIRMING his oft-stated belief that communist and other totalitarian ideologies were losing their force, he said "the romance of revolution is no longer on the side of the totalitarians.

"Democracy is prospering in many nations where it has never been seen before," he continued. "In Latin America and the Caribbean alone more than 90 percent of the people live in nations that are democracies or headed in that direction. What a change from a few years ago. Freedom is on the march."

Declaring that the march of freedom, especially in Central America, and the fight against terrorism are directly related, he pointed out the Nicaraguan communist regime has provided a haven for all sorts of international terrorists, including some of Italy's worst and other elements "of the world's most vicious terrorists groups — West Germany's Baader-Meinhof gang, the Basque ETA, the PLO and the (Uruguayan) Tupamaros." He said these were the same terrorists who called our Challenger astronauts war criminals and said they deserved what they got.

Declaring it is the Contra Freedom Fighters who are stopping the Sandinistas from building "a Libya on our doorstep," the president predicted: "We are going to get the Freedom Fighters the help they need and we're going to get it to them soon. It's going to happen because I know you and I are going to redouble our efforts over the next few months." He was obviously appealing to the American people to urge their representatives in Congress to support his $100 million aid program for the Freedom Fighters, and I hope you will respond quickly and favorably to that appeal.

ADDRESSING a U.S. Chamber of Commerce international forum in Washington Wednesday, the president cited our country's progress in economic recovery — interest rates down, inflation the lowest in 30 years, almost 10 million new jobs created in the last 3 years.

"Looking over the United States," he added, "I'm confident our country's best days are ahead. The winds of (economic) freedom are indeed blowing, and if America puts its minds to it, there is nothing we can't accomplish."

He reiterated to the businessmen that if the Libyan government continues its campaign of terror against Americans "we will act again."

Incidentally, a Paris dispatch from Bernard Kaplan, our chief European correspondent, said the message the U.S. attack on Libya was intended to convey not only to the Khadfy regime but to other Moslem radical regimes may have gotten through.

A week after the American air raid there had been no large-scale anti-U.S. demonstrations in Moslem countries. In the past, frenzied mobs have protested against American actions far less drastic than the raids on Tripoli and Benghazi. This, Kaplan reported, led some Western intelligence experts to believe the most significant reaction to the U.S. attack on Libya was what didn't happen. Perhaps the Syrian and Iranian despots, who control most of the terrorism in the Middle East, were more impressed by the significance of the U.S. action than the habitual critics of the president who insisted the attack on Libya would do more harm than good.

ON ANOTHER subject, I was pleased but not surprised to note that in speaking at the Associated Press lunch for the American Newspaper Publishers Association in San Francisco this week, former President Nixon shared my views about Nicaragua and Mexico. He said that without the Contra Freedom Fighters to check Nicaragua's communist regime, the Soviets will eventually establish a military base in Nicaragua and we will have to use military force to remove it. He also recalled General Charles de Gaulle's warning that Central America is "an incident on the road to Mexico," which is ripe for revolution.

It was gratifying to note the former president received a 45-second standing ovation from the publishers and editors at the conclusion of his speech. As he candidly concedes, his greatest mistake was his incredibly stupid mishandling of the Watergate scandal that forced him to resign as president. However, it is widely recognized that he was an outstanding leader in foreign affairs and did not do badly in handling the economy at home.

Odessa chamber chooses new director of tourism

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 26-year-old Chicago native has been selected to head the Greater Odessa Chamber of Commerce Convention and Tourism Division.

Jean Uehara, formerly operations manager of the Waikiki Hyatt Regency Hotel in Hawaii, succeeds longtime director Rob Varley, who resigned to become head of a new convention bureau in Southern California.

As convention-tourist division director, Ms. Uehara indicated she expects to be able to adapt some of the marketing strategies she learned in Hawaii to encourage tourists and conventioneers to come to Odessa and West Texas. She doesn't believe the area's depressed economy should hinder attraction of visitors.

Ms. Uehara earned a degree in management from the University of Hawaii and has worked for the Hyatt Regency since graduating in 1981.

Ector commissioners to review computer company proposals

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Ector County Commissioners meeting in regular session Monday morning are expected to review proposals from computer companies to update or replace the county's computer system.

The county's lease-purchase agreement on the present Sperry Univac mainframe computer is due to expire and County Judge Jan Fisher said she expects commissioners to approve its replacment before the beginning of the new fiscal year Oct. 1.

Puchase of the Sperry Univac system, under terms of lease-purchase agreement, would cost about $800,000, she said, while Data Processing Manager Joe Franell has estimated a new system that would better serve the county's computer needs should cost from $400,000 to $600,000. Judge Fisher has estimated the county could save as much as $100,000 a year by buying a new system rather than purchasing the outdated Sperry Univac mainframe computer.

Commissioners' Court to meet

The Midland County Commissioners will consider a nine-item agenda on their 9 a.m. Monday meeting in the Midland County Courthouse.

Among other items, the commissioners will consider a report from Road and Bridge Superintendent Albert Stewart and will discuss Texas Legislative hearings on funding misdemeanor probation with Midland County Chief Adult Probation Officer G.W. Thompson.

DOE to make contract notification

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — The Department of Energy will immediately notify bidders for construction work on the Big Hill Strategic Petroleum Reserve facility that contracts will be awarded under bids opened last December.

The Reagan administration requested a deferral of appropriated funds in its fiscal 1987 budget as a money-saving measure and the contracts were shelved.

Faced with a legal challenge to the deferral and pressured by influential congressmen to go forward with the reserve while it can be filled with bargain priced oil, the administration last week backed down and said construction of the last SPR storage facility, near Beaumont, Texas, will continue. It is the fifth facility to be carved out of salt beds on the Louisiana and Texas Gulf coasts.

The reserve is intended to ensure the nation with an oil supply in the event of an interruption of foreign oil imports. Congress has authorized a 750 million barrel reserve, while the administration has made repeated attempts to cap it at its current level, near 450 million barrels.

"This action will go a long way toward assuring that Big Hill (Strategic Petroleum Reserve) is completed, and it will also mean much-needed jobs in Southeast Texas in the next few months."

— Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas

Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas, who represents the district where the Big Hill facility is located, last week wrote to Energy Secretary John Herrington requesting that the DOE not delay the work any longer by requiring a new procurement process for the construction contracts.

According to Brooks, the DOE has directed its New Orleans office to tell bidders of its intent to make contract awards to the "lowest responsive, responsible bidders under the bids received and opened last December, as soon as certain conditions are met."

Brooks said, "This action will go a long way toward assuring that Big Hill is completed, and it will also mean much-needed jobs in Southeast Texas in the next few months."

The two contracts are for construction of raw water and brine disposal pipelines and a crude oil pipeline to connect the Big Hill storage facility to the Sun Terminal at Nederland, Texas.

Final awards of the contracts cannot be made until formal notification is received from the contractors involved indicating their willingness to extend the bids made last year.

In addition, for the crude oil pipeline contract, the DOE must await a determination by the Small Business Administration on a protest that the apparent lowest bidder is not a small business and is, therefore, ineligible to receive the contract.

If the protest is upheld, according to DOE, the crude oil pipeline project would be awarded to the next lowest, eligible bidder.

Brooks said he expects that contracts can be awarded and work can begin at Big Hill within two months.

A third contract, for construction of facilities needed to leach the remaining storage caverns at Big Hill, will not be awarded now, but will be put out for new bids within the next few weeks and awarded by August.

"I am pleased that after our long battles in Congress to save the Big Hill project from termination, we are close to seeing new work begin there," said Brooks.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

MC groups to conclude concert

By H. A. TUCK

At 3 p.m. this afternoon, the Commercial Music Department presents the remainder of its spring concert. This one features groups playing country, soft rock, and blues numbers. It's presented free of charge in the Allison Fine Arts Building auditorium, under the direction of instructors Jerry Tubb and Ron Franklin. Tubb and Franklin thoughtfully presented their hard-rock musical groups in a separate concert earlier this spring to spare the ears of those who aren't attuned to such volume.

Eleventh annual Midland College All-Sports Banquet is set for 7 p.m. Tuesday in the Al G. Langford Chaparral Center. The banquet honors members of the basketball, golf and tennis teams, plus the cheerleaders and the trainers. For those who haven't attended in the past, there aren't any guest speakers. The coaches simply introduce their players, make some comments about them and about their seasons, then make letter awards and other special presentations. It's been another very good year for Chaparral sports, with championships in basketball and tennis. In fact, the tennis teams aren't through playing and won't finish under the end of May. A great many of the sophomores already have signed to continue their athletic careers at four-year universities. You may purchase tickets for the banquet until noon Monday in the college athletic office.

The exhibit of weavings from 13 residents of northern New Mexico ends Friday. Being displayed in the McCormick Gallery, Allison Fine Arts Building, the exhibition features both large and small weavings. Most of them are for sale and, surprisingly, the majority are quite traditional in style. Former MC art instructor Sara Gilstrap arranged for the display and has some of her own works included. The gallery is open from 1 to 5 p.m. Sunday, 8 a.m to 10 p.m. Monday through Thursday, and 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday. Final show for the year is scheduled May 5-11, when the spring student show is put up.

MC voice instructor Janice Archer is beaming over the achievement of one of her former students, Kip Wilborn. He was selected as one of three outstanding American singers to present a concert recently for the newly formed Austin Lyric Opera Company, with Gov. Mark White in attendance.

• • •

The Faculty Council is hosting a reception for Dr. Don Hunt, vice president for instruction, from 3 to 5 p.m. Friday in the Faculty Lounge. Hunt is retiring this summer.

• • •

Spring Interim Session allows students to complete a college course in a short period of time. And this year's interim has a couple of added features...one-week courses in computer information systems. The interim session begins May 19 with the registration and start of classes. Traditional three-hour courses are being offered in English, economics, government, and history. These courses meet for ten days from 8:30 to 11:45 a.m. and 1:30 to 3:45 p.m. The computer courses are offered one at a time and offer one hour of credit. One of them begins May 19 and ends four days later. The other starts May 27 for four days. Each course meets for four hours, followed by four hours of lab work. There's no advance registration for interim courses, but a brochure outlining all the courses being offered is available in the Office of Student Services, Administration Building.

• • •

And early counseling and issuance of time permits for the first summer session opens May 12. Registration is set for May 29 with classes beginning June 2 and ending July 8. Course bulletins listing classes being offered this summer also are available in the Office of Student Services.

• • •

We're going to miss Anita Harwell, who has decided to retire. Anita has been on medical leave this past year. She's taught government to thousands of students since coming here in 1975. All her friends, former students, and colleagues wish her well!

EDUCATION IN BRIEF

Burnet PTA to meet

The Burnet Elementary School Parent-Teacher Association will meet at 7 p.m. Monday in the school cafeteria. Members will hear a report on the school's Excel Math program.

Travis takes look back

Students and teachers at Travis Elementary School will travel 150 years back in time on Friday. Dressed in pioneer clothing, children will relive school days of 1836 and carry books on leather straps and use their own personalized chalk slates. After classes in the one-room school house, students will feast on a Texas-size Sesquicentennial cake.

UTPB sets Mexico trip

ODESSA — A summer travel-course to Oaxaca, Guernavaca and the Hacienda Cocoyoc in Mexico will be conducted July 3-7 by Dr. Frank Sampanaro, associat professor of history at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

"Panorama of Mexico" includes the five-day Mexico trip and Monday and Wednesday evening classes June 4 through July 2. Individuals may take the course for three hours of graduate or undergraduate credit or may register as and ENCORE student which is a non-credit option.

The group will spend three nights in Oaxaca, a colonial city where they will stay in a restored 16th century convent. A trimp to the market, a visit to the Mitla Ruins built by the Zapotecs and a day to explore the Monte Alban ruins are some of the highlights of Oaxaca.

Other archeological sites are included in the travel-course tours. To make reservations by Wednesday, call Samponaro at 367-2116 or 683-7120.

Program to continue

The Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center School of Nursing has received accreditation to continue its Permian Basin program.

The continuing accreditation was granted by the Board of Review for Baccalaureate and Higher Degree programs of the National League of Nursing, a professional accrediting body for nursing education programs.

The School of Nursing began offering courses for registered nurses in Odessa and Midland in the fall of 1985. The Lubbock school opened in 1981.

Fifth Joint Conference on Aging begins

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Controlling the rising cost of health care while maintaining its quality is a top priority among the state's elderly to be discussed at the Fifth Annual Joint Conference On Aging in Odessa, according to Jack Smith with the American Association of Retired Persons.

The cost of health care is among many issues to be examined by administrators and officers of organizations dealing with the state's elderly during the four-day conference beginning today. The conference is being held at the Odessa Holiday Inn/The Centre on 6201 East Highway 80. Retirees may attend the conference for a $3 registration fee.

Texas ranks fifth in the nation with its elderly population of 1.5 million. About 9.5 percent of the state's population is 65 or older. California has the most elderly with a 2.6 million population, followed by New York with 2.2 million, Florida with 1.9 million and Pennsylvania with 1.6 million.

The elderly are concerned about the effect of Gramm-Rudman cuts and Gov. Mark White's 13 percent agency cuts, because they may affect service to the state's indigent elderly, Smith said.

Job discrimination because of age and job availability for the elderly are other major concerns.

"There's not suppose to be any age discrimination, but there is still a great deal of it. People can be offered some kind of early retirement and frequently are," Smith said.

Although surveys show employers consider the elderly to be more productive, many refrain from hiring retirees because of high medical insurance costs, Smith said.

"More and more older people want to go back to work at least on a part-time basis. They're just not happy not doing something," he said.

Smith, who writes columns on the elderly for Gannett News Service, also outlined the following major concerns to be addressed at the confernce.

Inexpensive Long-term Care — New ways of caring for the elderly need to be established, Smith said. The Texas Department of Aging is setting up three models of community-based care, one which will be in El Paso. The models are called "On-Lock" and are based on a San Francisco program that allows the low income elderly to receive health care through the day and return home in the evenings. This system is cheaper for the government and for families facing the expense of placing a relative in a nursing home, Smith said.

Diagnostic Related Groups — Administrators and conference members will address the issue of whether elderly people are being forced to leave hospitals before they should through the government's attempt to cut Medicare costs with DRGs. Through DRGs the government reimburses a hospital a set fee based on the ailment each patient is being treated for.

Alzheimer's Disease — Conference attendees will also examine what can be done to help the victims of Alzheimers disease, which slowly destroys the memory of those afflicated.

Plans made for Midland Sesquicentennial folk festival

From Staff Reports

Preliminary plans are in the making for a folk festival to commemorate the Texas Sesquicentennial on June 28. This event is being organized by the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce and has been approved by the Midland Sesquicentennial Commission.

It will be held at the Midland County Exhibit Building and Grounds on East Highway 80. Plans are to provide an opportunity for Irish, Polish, Jewish, Hispanic, black, Indian, German and any other groups to exhibit ethnic entertainment, food or crafts. Artists, musicians and craftsmen of all areas will be welcomed.

Any non-profit organizations, private organizations and private individuals are invited to participate. The major purpose for this folk festival is to stress and learn about the heritage of Texas.

The booths will be classified in three categories: food, arts and crafts and games. Everyone is invited to get involved in what may be the biggest festival in town. Chairman for this event is chamber member Sam Flores, assisted by Roger Robles and Ruben Vargas.

Clearview conducting free 'How to Help' workshop

From Staff Reports

A "How to Help" workshop will be held at Clearview at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday and is free and open to the public.

The program was created to assist those people who are the friend or loved one of an alcoholic or drug abuser but don't know how to approach them about seeking treatment.

Workshop speakers will be Pat Hooks, executive director of the Midland Council on Alcoholism and Drug Abuse and Lynda Herbold, crisis intake specialist for Clearview.

"The alcoholic or chemically dependent individual is often the last person to admit that he or she has a drinking problem," said Hooks. "We've geared this workshop for the family, friends, parents, teachers, employers, whoever is close to someone with a problem."

According to Ms. Herbold, those attending will learn about the barriers and defenses the chemically dependent person uses such as denial of the problem. "We will discuss how a friend or loved one can help another person. That help could take different forms — for some, the realization that others are concerned may be enough — but it is critical that the user be approached in a strong positive manner," she added.

"We receive hundreds of phone calls each month from concerned person, many wanting to know how they can motivate someone to get help. Clearview hopes to make this 'How to Help' workshop a regular monthly series to meet this need," said Ms. Herbold.

Clearview is located west of Midland on Loop 250 at Thomason Drive. For more information call 697-5200.

WTCC may be able to land atom smasher

AMARILLO (AP) — The federal government is considering building a multi-billion dollar atom smasher that would be the world's largest scientific instrument, and the West Texas Chamber of Commerce may be able to help bring it to the Midland-Odessa area, two Texas A&M professors said.

The instrument is called the Super Conductor Super Collider (SSC), a giant atom smasher that scientists expect to use to solve many of the mysteries of the smallest bits of atomic matter.

The project would employ 2,000 to 3,000 people and have an annual operating budget of $200 to $300 million.

The machine would be housed in a circular underground tunnel 60 to 100 miles in circumference. About 4,000 superconducting magnets would propel protons (or positively charged molecules) through this tunnel at the speed of light. The protons would collide into each other, smashing them into their most basic parts. These parts could then be studied.

It's a lot like smashing two watches together and watching what happens, said Dr. Louis J. Thompson, a professor at Texas A&M's civil engineering department, who talked to the West Texas Chamber of Commerce at its meeting Friday.

By watching the watch break, one would be able to see that it was made from springs, gears, jewels and hands and the person might get some notion as to how to reconstruct the watches, Thompson said.

According to Thompson, the SSC is a project priced at between $2.5 billion and $6 billion, depending on what technology is used and where and when the machine is built.

The project could truly benefit every community in the state of Texas, he said, and probably the best place to build the machine would be in the Midland-Odessa area.

"I believe this is the best site in the state of Texas and it is probably the best site in the United States if the cost is the prevailing criteria for siting it."

After siting several geological surveys, Thompson said the Midland-Odessa area would be cheapest because of its flat, uniform and easy-to-tunnel-through geology.

Dr. Peter McIntyre, a professor at Texas A&M University and founder of the Texas Accelerator Project, also addressed the chamber.

McIntrye has helped design super conducting magnets, which he claims are the cheapest, most commercially producible magnets

Reagan aide advises chamber to seek 'self-help'

AMARILLO (AP) — A special assistant to President Reagan cautioned Texans not to depend on the federal government for aid during the slump in energy prices, but use self-help instead.

Merlin Breaux, Reagan's assistant on economic affairs, said talk of a possible tax increase to make up state budget shortfalls from oil-generated revenues should be replaced by talk of a tax cut, which would spur economic recovery faster.

"The federal government is not going to be your savior," Breaux told the West Texas Chamber of Commerce meeting on Friday. "The savior is locked up, in my opinion, in this great state where we live."

Breaux, whose family lives in Beaumont, said raising taxes would not solve Texas's problems from declining crude oil prices. He said higher taxes discourage businesses from investing, expanding and growing.

The Reagan administration, in austerity moves in government, created nine million new jobs since 1982, he said. He said the prime rate, through efforts of Reaganomics, might reach 6 or 7 percent by the end of the year.

"I'm here to tell you the best thing that can happen to your dollar is for it to stay right here in Amarillo," the Lamar University graduate said, "and let you decide how you want to spend it."

Breaux said eyes should not turn to Washington, D.C. during troubled times.

"You don't need a tax increase," he said, criticizing some state officials who believe otherwise. "What the (federal government) needs to learn is to live within its means. If we run our business properly and correctly, we're not going to need more tax money."

"Don't turn to Washington to save you," he said. "It can't even save itself, so how can it save Texas?"

Breaux, speaking to a group of 200 people at the chamber's convention, said he was concerned by speculation he heard throughout the two-day event that a tax increase would help turn the economy in Texas around.

"I think a very good starting point in Austin, Texas, would be for us to go en masse to the Legislature and say that we not only don't want a tax increase, but we want a tax cut," he said.

Breaux, who was a Gulf Oil Co. industrial relations executive, said Texans shouldn't be surprised their dependence on oil is waning.

"I would pray that some point in time we begin to learn our lessons in history," he said. "When the economic base that we have begins to erode out from under us, we've got enough sense to say 'OK, it's beginning to slip away from us. What are we going to do next?'"

What should determine teacher's worthiness?

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — OK, let's play "What If."

What If Bob Smythe and Bettye Jones are teachers in the SomewhereinTexas Independent School District.

What If the SISD trustees are deciding which of the two should get the last remaining $2,000 bonus next year?

What If classroom evaluations show Bob superior to Bettye in such areas as maintaining discipline, holding the students' interest, preparing lectures and communicating with parents?

Who should get the bonus? Bob or Bettye?

Under the rules that will take effect in September, Bob is the obvious winner. The complicated new system of appraising teachers' classroom performance — and determining who gets the bonuses — includes all of the areas Bob does well. It does not take into account students' grades or improvements.

That's not right, say some members of the Legislative Education Board, the 10-man group of lawmakers which oversees the implementation of public school reforms.

Rep. Bill Hammond, R-Dallas, says student performance is "taking a back seat" when determining who is or is not a good teacher, who should or should not get the bonus. To Hammond, that is complicating what should be an easy process.

"If the job is getting done, you can cut through a lot of this rigamarole," he said. When Education Commissioner William Kirby said that the concept "needs a lot of further work" and that the State Board of Education is researching the issue, Hammond told Kirby to get on it "as fast as you possibly can."

Not so fast, interrupted Rep. Bill Haley, D-Center, chairman of the House Public Education Committee and a former teacher. For such a system to work fairly, Haley maintained, requires "very strong groupings" of students in a classroom.

Only if each teacher has a fairly homogenous group of children — children who are all learning at approximately the same speed — would student test results be a fair measure of a teacher's performance. "All movements now are to get away from all that," Haley said.

"That's all fine up to a point," responded Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, chairman of the LEB. "Then the point becomes 'Has this student mastered this course?' "

The meeting ended with Kirby headed back to his office with obvious orders to get the ball rolling. The idea sounded pretty good until I heard some more background from the Senate Education Committee's expert on education theory. The problem, she said, lies with the "strong groupings" Haley had referred to.

To create those groupings would require schools to once again start tracking students and abandone the currently accepted practice of mainstreaming. Tracking involves placing students with similar skills and ambitions — college-bound, the old business-education types like secretaries and vocational-education students — together. That's fine for the corporations who want the schools to turn out workers prepared for certain positions on the business-world ladder, but trouble for students.

The danger with tracking, she said, is that it grows on itself. Students find themselves placed in specific tracks earlier and earlier, ignoring the fact that children mature intellectually at different ages. Thus we end up stifling the late bloomers and eliminating the general intent of education to teach children how best to adapt to the ever-changing world.

Even worse, my expert told me, using student evaluations to determine teacher evaluations — especially with a bonus on the line — leads teachers down one very obvious path. They start "teaching the test." That is, if teachers know their pay checks depend on how well their students perform on standardized tests, they'll do their best to make certain the students are as ready as possible to take those exams.

That, both she and Haley said, smothers teacher creativity. The real losers become those kiddos we were trying to help out in the first place.

What If....?

Career Change Support Group will meet on Monday at church

From Staff Reports

The second meeting of the Career Change Support Group is set for 7 p.m. Monday at Holy Trinity Episcopal Church, 1412 W. Illinois.

The group grew out of a one-day seminar on career changing held at Holy Trinity last weekend. Led by Will Gove, former executive of Minneapolis Honeywell and current executive director of Episcopal Community Services of Minnesota, the seminar introduced local career changers to the job-finding techniques suggested by Richard Nelson Bolles in his book, "What Color Is Your Parachute?"

"When people work Bolles' four-point system — work it hard, and use every resource they have — they become very creative, and great things start to happen," Gove said.

According to the Rev. Marshal Mason, facilitator of the Midland group, the local group is open, free of charge, to any interested person in the community. "It will be a study group, a discussion group, a networking group and a facilitating group."

Mason added, "But mainly, it will be a support group."

The system is based on self analysis of transferable job skills and development of skills to get the desired job. "Mainly it is a matter of 'Who am I?' 'What skills do I have?' 'What's out there?' 'What do I want?' 'Who has the power to hire me?' " said Gove.

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 46-year-old man slipped into a restroom of First State Bank, 1330 E. 8th St., shortly before noon Friday and apparently shot himself in the head, according to police.

Clayton David Berryhill, initially believed to be from Tatum, N.M., but had a post office box in Fort Stockton, died at Medical Center Hospital nearly five hours after allegedly placing a .22 caliber pistol to his temple and firing a single shot, according to police reports.

Workers drawn to the restroom found Berryhill critically wounded. An ambulance called to transport him to MCH broke down on the way to the hospital and Berryhill had to be transferred to another ambulance, police said.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Al Hirt of Midland's Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 7208 has been appointed by VFW National Commander-in-Chief John S. Staum of Minneapolis to serve as a national aide-de-camp for 1986.

"It is because of the tireless efforts of civic and patriotic minded citizens like Hirt that the veterans and communities the VFW serves have been affected in a positive manner," said Staum.

Help for your child is still available April 28-May 2 at our Dyslexia Screening Clinic.

Dyslexia. It's a word most people don't understand. But if your child is one of the millions who suffer from dyslexia, you understand the pain and frustration this disability can cause.

You know your child isn't lazy ... stupid ... or disobedient, as many have said. Although the strict definition of dyslexia is "a disturbance of the ability to read," you realize that it affects every aspect of your child's life.

Dyslexics find reading almost impossible

Aside from difficulty with reading and composition, your child shies away from sports involving eye/hand coordination. He has trouble following directions and is often clumsy and insecure. These are just a few of the symptoms that can make the life of a dyslexic child confusing and miserable.

The three associate chiropractors of Boyd Chiropractic Clinics of Midland will utilize Dr. Carl A. Ferreri's dyslexia treatment method, having recently completed intensive training under Dr. Ferreri.

A doctor of chiropractic, Dr. Ferreri has practiced for 29 years and has developed a highly effective method for treating basic learning dysfunctions. The treatment involves no drugs or anesthesia, and centers around adjustments of the spinal and cranial structures, along with kinesiological and muscular balancing. In a majority of cases, a marked improvement has been achieved.

Now, our special Dyslexia Screening Clinic, affiliated with Dyslexia Centers of America, has been extended, offering you and your child hope for a normal life.

Call 684-5436 to schedule an appointment for your child's free screening and examination. The initial meeting determines whether your child will benefit from the procedure. In most cases, a correction is performed in conjunction with the free exam. If your child is diagnosed as receptive to future care, a reasonable one-time fee will cover all exams and treatments related to dyslexia. Treatment is covered by insurance in most cases.

So, call today to make an appointment for your child. Appointments may be scheduled Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Boyd Chiropractic Clinics of Midland.

A doctor of chiropractic will be available to answer any questions you may have regarding the Clinic or the dyslexia treatment.

Help your child find a better perspective on life.

Country singers to join benefit

Lynn

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music stars Loretta Lynn, Larry Gatlin and the Gatlin Brothers and Hoyt Axton were to join other celebrities today in the fifth annual Arthritis Foundation Telethon.

The syndicated telethon, to be hosted by country stars Mickey Gilley and Bill Anderson, will be broadcast via satellite from the Grand Ole Opry House to some 70 television stations from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m., the show's sponsors said.

Also scheduled to appear are singers Nicolette Larson, Frankie Laine, Dan Riley, Les Paul, Louise and Irlene Mandrell, actor Bruce Weitz of TV's "Hill Street Blues" and Dallas Cowboys quarterback Danny White.

Last ear's Nashville telethon raised more than $5 million, double the amount a year earlier. Funds go toward the cost of patient services, education and research seeking the cause, prevention and cure of arthritis.

The Arthritis Foundation, based in Atlanta, says the disease affects about 40 million Americans.

Nofziger

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — Former White House aide Lyn Nofziger has called David Stockman "instinctively dishonest," saying he manipulated budget figures he presented to President Reagan to bolster the argument for a tax increase.

Nofziger was commenting Friday on the new book by Reagan's former budget director in which Stockman criticizes administration aides who he said helped subvert Reagan's economic agenda.

The former presidential assistant for political affairs said it was Stockman who deceived the president when he wanted to raise taxes and Reagan resisted.

"The fact that he was deliberately cooking those figures tells you there's something instinctively dishonest about him," said Nofziger.

In his book, "The Triumph of Politics: Why the Reagan Revolution Failed," Stockman claims the Reagan agenda failed and blamed the federal deficit.

PLAIN SPEAKING by

MATT BLAIR

"PAYING ATTENTION"

Since we were all in the first grade we have been asked or told to pay attention. Pay attention when people were talking to you, to the world around you, to the task at hand, to your finances, and so on.

If You Didn't Pay Attention You Suffered The Consequences

The County Judge and the Commissioners Court have not been paying attention to us, the voters of Midland County.

Last week I asked the question, "Why has nothing been done about the jail?" The week before, I wrote about what a County Judge really is, the lack of County Planning, the need for a county personnel office, the necessity of closer cooperation between the City of Midland and the County, and taking a personal 5% pay cut if elected.

These ideas come from my paying attention to the voters. Since December 19th of last year I have tried my best to knock on as many doors and talk to as many voters as I could. Everyone who had an opinion said that the County Judge and Commissioners Court were not getting the job done.

The economy in Midland isn't what it used to be, but the County Judge and the Commissioners Court apparently don't want to do anything about the burden of county government on the taxpayer. In fact the County surplus has been used up under the pretense of "no new taxes." And that sounds just like what they do in Washington; tax and spend, tax and spend.

A year ago the voters said "Do something about the jail!" It seems like no one is paying attention to the voters.

The reason that the United States has the most successful form of Government in the world is because we have elections every few years so the we, the voters, can express our opinion on the performance of our elected officials. If the County Judge, or any other elected official, doesn't pay attention to his duties or the voters, then he or she can expect to be replaced.

This is the last edition of PLAIN SPEAKING. I have tried to be informative and accurate. I hope that it has been useful to you, the voter. You will not see any endorsement ads for me. Just because so and so says he will vote for someone doesn't mean you should too. I have long since learned that the people of Midland County make up their own minds.

I want to be your County Judge. I see a need in county government for energy, hard work, common sense, and leadership. I ask you, the voters of Midland County, for the opportunity to serve and fill the needs I see. I would appreciate your vote next Saturday, May 3rd, in the Republican Primary.

It's time to get the job done!

THANK YOU, MATT

Bob Lilly for Energas

Don't let 'em mess with your furnace!

Winter may be the last thing on your mind when your air conditioner is broken.

But if you replace your air conditioner with an electric heat pump, they have to hook it up to your furnace. That's because a heat pump is so inefficient in our West Texas winter, it won't keep your house warm.

So along with a heat pump, you get all this stuff stuck on your furnace:

- a non-cycling reverse valve
- a defroster control unit
- a thermostatic expansion valve
- an outdoor thermostat and, a control box to run it all.

Now how can your furnace work better with all that on it? So if you need a new air conditioner, get a new air conditioner. And leave your reliable gas furnace alone.

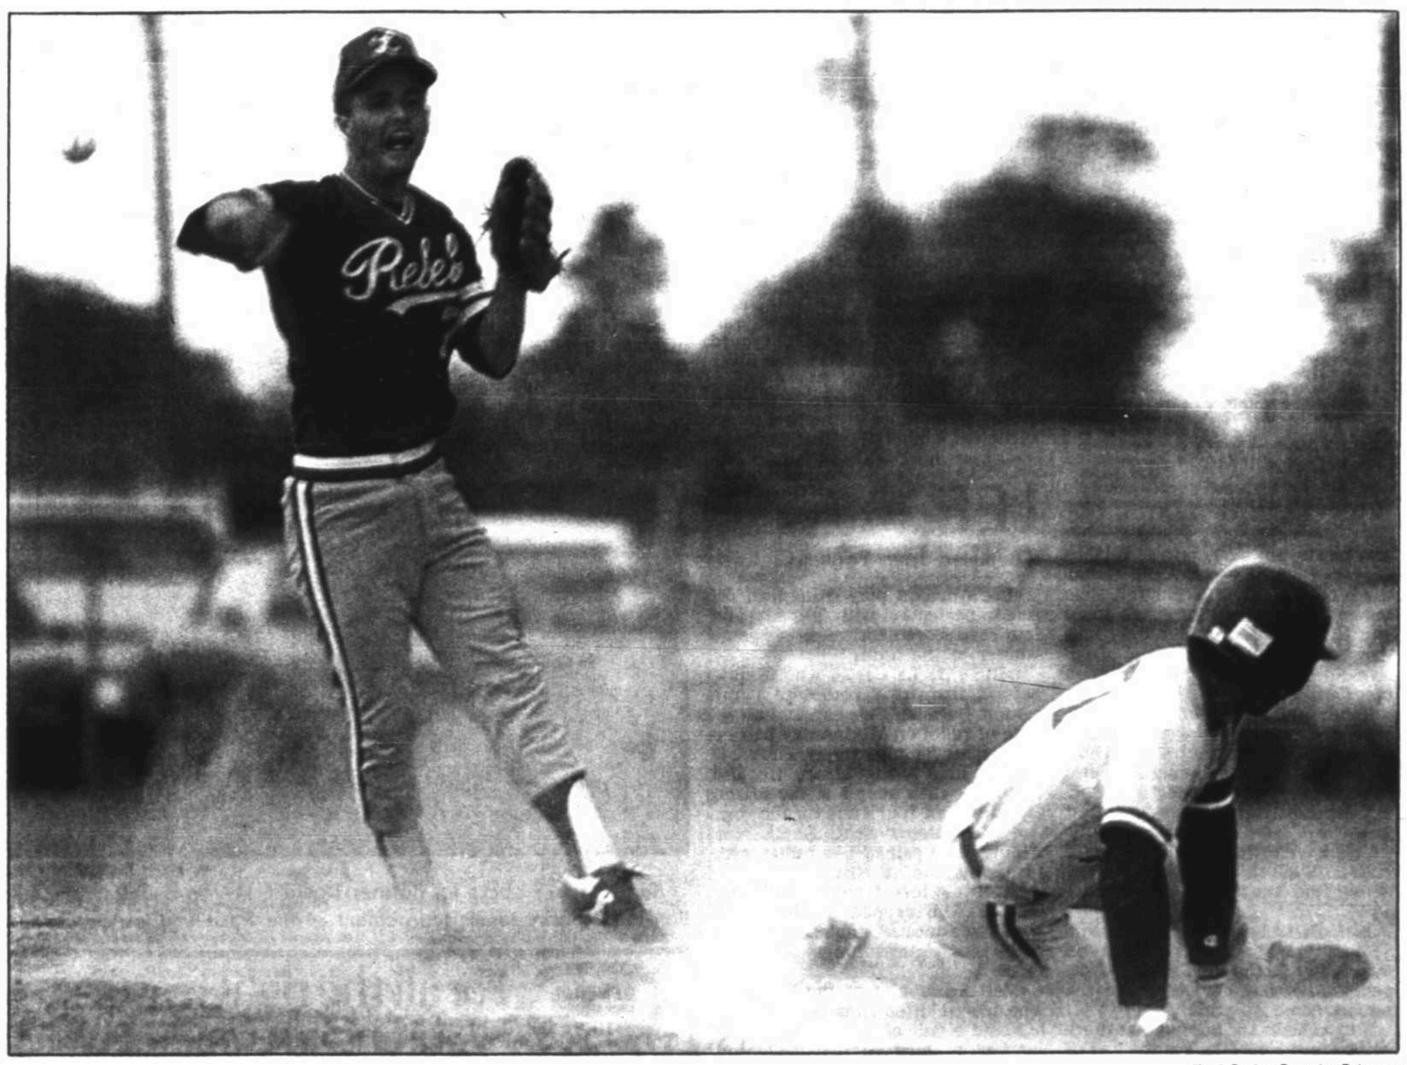
Rebs keep 'Dogs one rally short of 4-5A title



Kent Porter/Reporter-Telegram

Midland Lee second baseman Chad Jordan turns a force play on Midland High's Ricky Castaneda in District 4-5A action Saturday afternoon at Zachery Field. The Rebels won the game, 10-9 in nine innings, but MHS advances to the state playoffs.

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

It was a senior showcase deluxe as Midland Lee and Midland High battled it out for Tall City bragging rights Saturday afternoon at Zachery Field, but in the end, it was Lee sophomore Durian Jenkins who benefited from some outstanding senior performances to hang on for the win in a topsy-turvy 10-9, nine-inning District 4-5A contest.

For the Rebels, the overtime was well worth the effort, salvaging a winning record on the final day of the season at 13-12.

"A lot of little things added up to make the difference," Rebel coach Ernie Johnson said. "We avoided an under .500 season and we're proud of that. These seniors played up to their capabilities, a lot of them played great games."

The playoff-bound Bulldogs may just be glad this week is over. MHS clinched a playoff berth earlier in the week with emotional wins at both Odessa Permian and Abilene Cooper. And although the Lee loss hit them hard, the 'Dogs will have plenty of time to lick their wounds before playoff action begins sometime in May.

"That's a case of the teacher teaching his student," said Bulldog coach Tim Whalen, a JV coach under Johnson in the late 1970s. "It was important for (Lee) to beat us and they just went out there and played ball."

THE WINNING run finally came with two outs in the top of the ninth, moments after Lee's Rankin had seemingly been thrown out at third trying to advance on a pitch that got away from catcher Tom Yorkman.

But the pitch glanced off the bat of Terry Baxter and the ball was ruled dead. Thus Rankin was sent back to second and the Rebel rally was still alive. Baxter then popped a double down the line in right to score Rankin.

Baxter, who had been hitless in three official trips to the plate, was just happy to have one more chance after the disputed foul ball.

"I'm pretty sure the ball hit my helmet, then maybe the bat, I think it hit both," said Baxter. "I was feeling pretty bad after coming in to pitch and losing the lead. But it feels great to win, it's been a pretty frustrating season but this helps make up for it."

Whalen also thought the phantom out was a foul ball, but it was not easy for many MHS fans to swallow. Especially after the team was sitting in the dugout thinking the inning was over.

THE SINGLE run in the ninth stood where earlier Rebel leads of two in the seventh and four in the eighth could not.

It took a pair of dramatic Bulldog rallies to keep the hungry Rebels from ending the game earlier. Trailing 5-3, MHS rallied for two runs in the bottom of the seventh as Jim Werner and De La Garza each worked Baxter for a walk.

Consecutive RBI singles by Anthony Deande and Ricky Castaneda then knotted the score at five, but not for long.

Lee jumped right back at De La Garza for four runs in the eighth. A pair of bunt singles by Danny Jordan and Rankin, an infield hit by Jason Logi, a suicide squeeze by Raul Pena and a two-run double by Jay McCarty did the damage for the Rebels.

Down but not out, MHS picked up four of its own as De La Garza drove home two with a single and Deande smacked his third straight hit for the tying runs.

"We've had three emotional games this week — we're tired," Whalen said. "We were ripe, but it hurt our kids to lose, they've had a taste of winning and they expect to win now. Maybe this will make us realize that we have to be prepared every time we go out."

BUT SATURDAY was a day for the seniors, and there were some truly outstanding performances.

MC owns Region V tennis, wins 12-of-18 matches

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

ODESSA — Midland College not only won both the men and women's Region V tennis titles here Saturday, but they did it in style by winning 12 of the possible 18 titles awarded.

That was enough good news for any one day on the courts, but the MC men added even more spice to the victory by defeating McLennan for the team title by a six-point margin, 21-15.

And that was news since McLennan entered the tournament as the No. 1 ranked junior college team in the nation. McLennan was not only beaten soundly by Midland, but had to settle for a second place tie with South Plains College, which also scored 15 points.

That tie proves to be important since only two teams advance to the national tournament in Tyler, May 25-31. SPC and McLennan must play each other in a dual match at 10 a.m. today to break that tie. The winner advances and the losers are out of the national picture. The No. 1 team in the country has a chance of not even qualifying for the national event.

"There is no question that our men played their socks off," said an elated MC coach Joe Williams. "They played about as well as they can play and it's quite an accomplishment to beat McLennan by that kind of margin."

MC's No. 1 ranked women also waltzed through the Region V field with a 23-15 margin over Cooke County while winning seven of the nine individual titles. Odessa College was third with 10 points, but misses the national tournament in Midland, May 18-24.

However, Williams wasn't too thrilled with the performance of his lady netters, "We won easily, but we should have swept the whole thing. We lost in both the No. 1 and No. 2 singles and that shouldn't have happened."

In the men's competition, MC's Jean Roussel won the No. 1 singles title with a 6-3, 6-3 win over SPC's highly ranked Gerald Kaiser and then teamed with Herve Rousseau to win the No. 3 doubles title with a 7-5, 6-3 win over McLennan's Greg Diemer and Vic Tesar.

"I really feel good about the way I played," said Roussel. "Kaiser is a good player, but I've beaten him two times in a row now. He beat me the first two times we played, but coach (Williams) gave me some good tactics to help keep the ball in play against Kaiser's serve and volley type of game. I broke his serve three times in the finals."

Springtime thoughts include MHS, Lee football

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Thoughts of football are never very far away from the minds of West Texans, but both Midland High and Midland Lee are bringing those thoughts closer to home this week with the beginning of spring training.

Midland High coach Doug McCutchen will start his troops through the spring training process at 3:30 p.m. Monday and those activities will run through May 15 with the annual Bill Mims scrimmage game at Memorial Stadium.

New Lee coach Earl Miller will send his Rebels into spring training formations Friday and Lee will hold its spring training ending Maroon-White game on May 22 at Memorial Stadium.

The 1986 season is of special interest this year since MHS and Lee will open District 4-5A play against each other instead of in the season finale. And both teams are currently facing an unpopular nine-game schedule instead of the 10 fans are used to.

BOTH COACHES feel that spring training is going to be an important aspect of their teams.

"We've got some people who have to earn some positions," said McCutchen of his Bulldogs. "Basically, our job in spring training will be to find out who wants to be the starters next fall. We've got a lot of competition at some positions and we've got to find some players at others."

Miller placed himself in the same boat, "We've got to rebuild our defense and offensive line. We've got a job ahead of us."

"Our linebacker positions are up for grabs. We don't have any returning starters back there and that is a big concern for us going into spring training," said McCutchen. "We have only Mike Mechler, who had some playing time in the offensive line. Any time you line up with inexperienced people, that has to be a concern, but we have more depth and numbers in the offensive line than we ever have. We just need to see who wants to play."

McCutchen will also follow his quarterback situation closely with two juniors and three seniors competing for the position. "It should be an interesting spring at quarterback. Jamie Madrid played two or three games for us last year, but not much. We've got depth here and we need to find out who can handle the job."

McCutchen has speed burners Anthony Atkison and Tyrone Oliver back in the secondary and at running back. "This is the best speed we've had, but we're sure small in size here."

THE BULLDOG receiving corps of Robbie Harkrider, a returning starter at split end, and returning letterman Ricky Duran give promise, but McCutchen is looking for a tight end.

Gators fight way to victory, 11-10

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Beaumont's Golden Gators defeated the Midland Angels, 11-10, to square the Texas League series at 2-2 and this one legitimately qualifies as a donneybrook.

A dugout clearing melee broke out in the second inning as the Gators ended the 24-inning shutout streak of Midland starter Doug Banning. A Beaumont player and coach were ejected and Midland catcher David Heath left the field with leg and hand injuries as a result of the fracas.

The 2,303 who came to see a baseball game were around for the National Hockey League style brawl in the second, but few were around for the game-ending brawl, run-scoring brawl, that is, when Beaumont broke a 5-5 tie with five runs in the eighth and added a throw away run in the ninth. The throw-away run, however, proved to be the difference as Midland stormed back for five runs in the last of the ninth and left the tying run on second base.

TONIGHT'S 6 p.m. game in which the Angels will send Don Timberlake, 1-1, against Mike McClain, 2-1, will be the rubber game of the five-game series. It will also end the homestand.

The fisticuffs, body-throwing began when Randy Byers doubled and Hardgrave, who was on base after being hit by a Banning pitch, raced around from first to score. His slide caught Heath off balance and up in the air and precipated the riot as Heath and Hardgrave grappled, fell to the ground and rolled around in the dirt.

They were quickly swallowed up when both dugouts emptied on to the field.

From Staff Reports

Abilene Cooper clinched the District 4-5A title Saturday night with a 9-5 win over Abilene High at Hardin-Simmons Field.

The Cougars finish the regular season at 11-3, one game in front of runner up Midland High. Both teams will represent the district in the state playoffs next month.

Cooper got a two-run home run by pitcher Dave Tollison, his 12th of the season, in the sixth inning to key pace the 11-hit Cougar attack. Abilene's Chris Priddy tagged a three-run homer in the seventh to help bring the Eagles closer.

Haney's single, homer pace Longhorns past Aggies

AUSTIN (AP) — Todd Haney hit a game-winning single in the opener and a game-winning homer in the nightcap to lead Texas' 5-4, 16-11 sweep over Texas A&M in a Southwest Conference doubleheader Saturday.

Texas' three-game series sweep gives the Longhorns, 48-9 overall and 15-3 in league play, a two-game lead over the Aggies, 36-21, 13-5.

In the first game, Haney's long fly ball with two outs in the bottom of the seventh fell into and out of Texas A&M left fielder Jeff Schow's glove, giving Texas a come-from-behind victory.

In the second game, Texas trailed 11-4 after 3⅓ innings, but with winning pitcher Wade Phillips relieving, the Longhorns cut the lead to 11-10 by the eighth inning.

In the Texas half of the eighth, Haney, whose brother Buddy starred for the Aggies the last four years, smacked a three-run homer over the scoreboard in leftfield to give the Longhorns the first lead of the game, 13-11.

Two batters later, Elanis Westbrooks hit a two-run homer to the same spot.

Texas Tech 11-14, TCU 8-6

Phillip Maldonado, Johnny Vidales and Kevin Lowery rapped two hits apiece in an opening-game, 10-hit Red Raider attack. Craig Chapin went the distance striking out nine TCU batters in running his record to 6-4.

TCU starter Dwayne Williams pulled a muscle in his elbow in the third inning. Vidales and catcher Mark Booth greeted reliever Jim Bane with home runs, breaking what was a scoreless tie. Lew Williams was 5-for-5 for TCU, whose 19 hits were not enough.

In the second game, the Raiders got three runs off Frog starter Tim Mauser in the first inning on three walks and two hits. Tech added five in the second on five walks and just two hits.

The Frogs' four runs in the seventh were not enough as Khris Segrist relieved Bill Schutt (7-3) and pitched two innings of no-hit ball in relief.

Tech's sweep raised its record to 32-22 for the season and 7-11 in league play, keeping its post-season tournament hopes alive.

TCU fell to 31-26 overall, 5-13 in SWC action.

Rice 2-0, Houston 0-7

HOUSTON — Ben Mathews' two-run triple in the fifth inning, coupled with Todd Ogden's four-hit shutout, gave the Rice Owls a 2-0 win over Houston as the two teams split their doubleheader.

In the second game, Houston's Paul Kuzniar and Larry Coker combined to blank the Owls on four hits for a 7-0 win. Rice won the first game of the series Friday night 6-5.

Ogden outdueled Houston's Jody Supak in the first game. The Owls had mustered only three hits off Supak through two outs in the fifth when Ricky Strebeck and Charlie Weese singled. Mathews' triple down the right field line scored them both.

Ogden walked only one, and struck out five in running his record to 7-2 overall and 2-1 in the SWC. Supak fell to 2-1 and 1-1.

In the second game, Houston scored three times in the first to get sufficient support for Kuzniar, now 5-1 and 1-1. Pat Hewes' 22nd home run of the year, a solo shot in the fifth, also highlighted the Cougars' offense.

Baylor 6-7, Arkansas 4-10

WACO — Jeff King blasted a second-inning grand slam home run and two RBI singles to lead Arkansas to a 10-7 victory over Baylor and a split in their doubleheader.

The decisions left Arkansas at 35-14 for the season and 15-6 in league play, with Baylor now 36-20 and 9-9.

Dave Patterson's RBI double and King's RBI single gave Arkansas a 2-0 lead in the first inning of the nightcap. But Baylor responded in the bottom of the inning with three runs on Brad Meyer's homer and RBI singles by Todd Hawkins and Shawn McAfee.

Even after King's four-run clout, Baylor came back to tie the game in the sixth inning.

King's eighth-inning single off loser Blaine Beatty, 8-3, scored Patterson with the game-winning run. Arkansas added two runs in the ninth on Don Thomas' single and Ralph Kraus' triple.

In the opener, Baylor got two hits each from Meyer, Tony Huey and Keith Shepherd. Starting pitcher Bruce Aguilar, 6-3, got the win by scattering six hits over six innings of work. Beatty worked the final inning and got the save.

The Bears exploded for five runs in the second inning off loser Steve Parker, 8-1. The inning was keyed by McAfee's double and singles by Huey, Todd Wilson and Hawkins. Hawkins' hit was the game-winning RBI.

CHAPS — FOOTBALL — LEE

Rousseau won the No. 5 singles title, but had a tough time against McLennan's Diemar, 3-6, 6-4, 7-6. Rousseau was down two match points against Diemar, but eventually won in a tiebreaker, 7-5.

"I wanted to win the match, but it was a struggle," said Rousseau. "I was missing my passing shots and lost some confidence, but I found my strokes in the doubles."

MC's Jos Warmoes won a 7-5, 1-6, 6-1 decision over McLennan's Vic Tesar for the No. 4 singles crown. Tesar was a national semifinalist at No. 5 last year.

"It was a very tough match. I played very bad in the second set and lost 6-1. Then I was down 1-0 in the third set before may concentration came through and I won six points in a row," said Warmoes.

Eric Lingg gave MC the No. 2 singles title with a sound 6-0, 6-3 win over McLennan's Patrik Sundh.

"He (Sundh) kept going to my backhand and that's my best shot," said Lingg. "I expected to win, but not that easily."

With MC's No. 1 Moniek Margaroli and No. 2 Helene Lebeller losing out in the title chase, the Chap women piled up points in No. 3 through No. 6 and swept the doubles.

Margaroli was the big disappointment, losing in her first match. Lebeller reached the finals against Cooke's Jamie McCaffuy, but lost 6-4, 3-6, 7-6. Lebeller, playing with a shoulder injury, was up 5-1 in the third set and lost it.

However, Sarah Swan, Natasha Koprivica, Helen Schildknecht and Charissa Pruim, Nos. 3 through 6, all won in the finals.

Swan defeated Cooke's Lissa Roche, 6-1, 6-0, by "being more aggressive on the court. I really didn't know what to expect from Roche because I'd never played her."

Koprivica defeated Sallyanne Fossey of Cooke, 6-1, 6-0, in the finals, saying, "I'd never played her before and didn't know what to expect, but I had more consistency and confidence on the court."

Schildknecht won a 6-2, 6-3 win over Cooke's Ase Anderson in the No. 5 singles while Pruim was near perfect in a 6-0, 6-0 win over Odessa's Stephanie Hedlund.

"I beat her (Hedlund) in conference, 2 and 1, and it was my goal to win love and love today," said Prium.

Lebeller and Swan won the No. 1 doubles at 6-1, 6-0 over Karen Malinowski and Sandra Torres of Odessa College while Margaroli and Schildknecht won the No. 2 doubles crown with a 7-6, 6-1 win over Cooke's Helena Mansson and Lissa Rocha. The MC duo started badly in that match, but when it drew a crowd for a possible upset, Margaroli and Schildknecht turned up the juice.

Pruim and Koprivica won 6-0, 6-2 over McLennan's Nora Zainal and Nancy Calhoun in the No. 3 doubles.

The MC men are hoping that South Plains can knock off highly ranked McLennan in the dual match today, but most thought that McLennan would win in a heads up team match.

"I would really like to see South Plains and our conference beat out McLennan, but I think McLennan has a lot more depth overall. I think McLennan will win the playoff," said Roussel.

"It hasn't been a good week for the Rebs," says Miller. "Running back Joe Woodard and fullback Stewart Trance will miss spring training due to shoulder surgery. We know of three kids who won't participate because of grades and we had three more move away this week. It makes you wonder how many more we will lose with the way the economy is. It makes you glad you have a job, but we may not have one much longer if this keeps up."

Three highly regarded sophomores announced plans to move from Midland. Defensive tackle Chad Griffin, center Kevin Beach and guard Mike Dalton, all projected starters, won't be at Lee next fall.

"I'm sure some other kids will come through for us with this kind of opportunity, but we'll have to do a better job of coaching to find those replacements," said Miller.

Miller said the major search will be at linebacker.

"We need three linebackers and I don't see them yet," said Miller. "We have some good experience in the defensive secondary with Anthony Pertile, Bill Wagner and Jimmy Fennell, but we need some more help there.

"Dejuan Norris is back at defensive tackle, but we'll have to replace Griffin. Defensive end Mark Breeding is back and Jeff McHugh is looking good at that position. Chris Jones and Mark Barnes are the only kids that have played a lick in the offensive line and that is a wide open race."

Miller does have good skill people. Woodard, who will miss spring training, will return in the fall and Durian Jenkins, both sophomores, is also back as starters. Quarterback Rodney Johnson started three games last year.

"We have to find a fullback," said Miller. "We'll try everybody out until we find one."

THE BULLDOGS have planned a Seniors vs. Varsity scrimmage on May 9, but McCutchen said that depends on "what kind of squad the seniors come up with."

Both schools are hoping that there will be fewer questions at the end of spring training than they have now because these teams will have to grow up fast with the new district schedule.

MHS, in particular, better be ready to play at the end of spring training with an opening loop schedule of Lee, Odessa Permian, San Angelo and Abilene High in consecutive order.

Odessa Permian clinched third place all alone Saturday with a 20-8 pounding of rival Odessa High.

The Panthers, 8-6, exploded for three runs in the first, five in the second, four in the fourth and seven in the sixth to bring the Broncho's misery to an end. OHS finishes the district season at 2-12.

Big Spring, which went into the final day of district play tied with Permian at 7-6, dropped into fourth at 7-7 with a 9-7 loss to San Angelo.

The Bobcats, 6-8 and tied with Midland Lee and Abilene for fifth place, got a three-run homer by catcher Sam Sosa in the fifth inning to take an 8-4 lead and were never headed.

•MHS's De La Garza, who despite having thrown a complete game against Permian Tuesday and an inning of relief on Wednesday battled the Rebels for nine innings and 147 pitches in a losing effort. He also belted his fifth homer of the season and drove in four runs on the day.

•Matt Sears, also of the Bulldogs, who scored three runs on a pair of hits and a pair of walks and nearly sparked a third come-from-behind rally in the ninth.

Rockets leap to 1-0 lead

Nuggets need help stopping Olajuwon

HOUSTON (AP) — Denver center Danny Schayes says the Nuggets are going to need some help if they're going to do a good job defending the Houston Rockets center Akeem Olajuwon.

"Akeem played great. We've got to help out more on defense against him," Schayes lamented after the Rockets defeated the Nuggets 126-119 Saturday in the opening game of the second round of the NBA Western Conference playoffs.

Game 2 of the best-of-7 NBA playoff series will be here Tuesday night.

"It's tough for Schayes and (Blair) Rasmussen to guard Akeem. We didn't make a good enough effort to block him out," Denver Coach Doug Moe said.

"Akeem said at the start of the game he felt a little tired and sluggish, but in the second half he took control of the game," Houston Coach Bill Fitch said.

But Olajuwon said that as far as he was concerned, "the big difference was that we were able to get long rebounds and not give them second and third shots. Denver played their best game this year today. Schayes and Rasmussen were very physical."

Moe credited Houston's 14-0 scoring surge early in the third quarter that gave the Rockets a 69-65 lead as a key in the game.

"I thought we did a really good job, but we had that one bad spurt," Moe said. "The only thing that bothered me was the rebounds. You just have to keep fighting and see what happens. They have too many offensive boards during that run."

Olajuwon scored seven straight points midway through the fourth quarter to put Houston ahead 109-100 with 7:55 left to play. When Denver came within 115-113, Olajuwon again responded by scoring two baskets to increase Houston's lead to 119-114 with 1:28 to play.

Denver led 8-2 early in the game but neither team led by more than four again in the first quarter. The score was tied 11 times and was tied 32-32 after the opening 12 minutes.

Lewis Lloyd, who finished with 28 points, had 16 first-quarter points for the Rockets.

Houston's 14-0 gave them the 69-65 lead with 8:24 to play in the quarter. Denver, playing without reserve defensive specialist Bill Hanzlik, who is suffering from a sore back, came back to tie the score 69-69 but Houston regained the lead 86-81 with three minutes left in the third quarter and led 94-91 entering the final period.

Houston advanced to the second round by sweeping three games from Sacramento, while Denver advanced by defeating Portland 3-1 in the opening round of the playoffs.

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Marshall Holman won his 20th career title and surpassed the $1 million mark in earnings Saturday afternoon with a 233-211 victory over Mark Baker in the title game of the $250,000 Firestone Tournament of Champions bowling tournament.

Holman, 31, of Medford, Ore., became the sixth player to win 20 titles and the Professional Bowlers Association's third millionaire.

The $50,000 top prize, the richest in PBA history, hiked Holman's career earnings to $1,020,569, behind only Earl Anthony and Mark Roth.

"I've absolutely lived for this moment," said Holman, the youngest player to hit the $1 million mark. "This is the pinnacle of our game.

"But the reason I won the tournament is because I had the good carry today," he added.

Holman, who last won this event 10 years ago, held an early 28-pin lead, but let Baker back in the match by missing a relatively easy 2-pin in the fourth frame.

"I guess I didn't know what I was doing when I missed that spare," said Holman.

A foul in the fifth frame, however, proved costly to Baker. He slid over the foul line, negating a strike.

After a spare, Baker put together four strikes to put some pressure on Holman. But the leader had a string of five strikes following his open frame to put the match away.

"After I left the split in the third frame, I saw a big black mark on the approach," said Baker, who earned $28,000 for second. "Litchy (PBA Player Services Director Larry Lichstein) came out and took it out with steel wool, but on my next shot there I fouled by about a foot.

"But things like that happen," he continued. "I came back to make a match out of it, and I'm proud of myself."

In the biggest payoff in PBA history, Warren earned $20,000 for third, Genalo $15,000 and Aulby $10,000.

January, Littler lead Legends

AUSTIN (AP) — Don January and Gene Littler teamed for a third-round 65 Saturday in the Liberty Mutual Legends of Golf tournament that put them 19 under par for 54 holes and gave the duo a four-stroke lead.

The defending champions had entered the third round on the par-70 Onion Creek Country Club course with a two-shot lead over Lee Elder and Chi Chi Rodriguez.

Tied at 195, four strokes behind the leaders, were the teams of Charlie Sifford and Jim Ferree, Peter Thomson and Harold Henning, Mike Fetchick and Bob Toski, and Elder and Rodriguez.

SMU clinches second straight tennis title

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Top-ranked Southern Methodist captured its second straight title, while No. 7-ranked Texas clinched second place after Saturday's semifinal action in six singles and three doubles divisions at the Southwest Conference tennis championships.

The Mustangs have 79 points after Saturday's play, followed by Texas with 64 points, Arkansas at 59, Texas A&M at 42, Rice and TCU at 39, Baylor at 26, Houston at 22 and Texas Tech at 10.

The Mustangs have four singles players in Sunday's finals, and qualified all three doubles teams into the final day of play.

The singles finals will see Kimmo Alkio of Texas A&M face Scott Melville of Rice. Alkio downed Bobby Blair of Arkansas 0-6, 6-2, 6-4, while Melville defeated Tom Mercer of Texas Christian 6-1, 6-4.

The Rice duo of Mellville and Andrew Taylor upset the Texas team of Charles Beckman and Royce Deppe to reach the doubles finals. Melville-Taylor won 6-7, 7-3, 6-4 over Deppe-Beckman who are the top-ranked doubles team incollegiate tennis.

Coles hits 67 for three-shot S&H lead

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Janet Coles, a 10-year veteran pursuing her first victory in three years, shot a career-low round of 67 on Saturday to take a three-stroke lead over Pat Bradley after three rounds of the $200,000 S&H Classic golf tournament.

Swirling winds had an adverse effect on the scores of a number of golfers who started the day within striking distance of second-day leader Lori Garbacz. Coles, however, was a model of consistency with six birdies and only one bogey on the par-72, 6,013-yard Pasadena Yacht and Country Club course.

"Pat Bradley is a great player," Coles said. "I'm going to have to play as well as I have the last three days. Three shot lead or not, she is a great player who is probably playing the best golf of anybody on the tour."

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Texas Tech's Roque Baecker holed a 7-iron for an eagle on his way to a second straight 72 and a share of the lead after 36 holes of the Southwest Conference golf tournament.

He was tied Saturday at even par 144 with SMU's John Sinovic, who had a 70, and TCU's Peter Jordan, who also had a 70. Jordan and Joe Beck, who shot the best round of the day, a 69, helped TCU close to within two shots of Houston in the team competition.

Houston, which started the day with a five shot lead on TCU and Texas A&M, ended the day at 585. TCU is at 587. Arkansas moved up a notch to third at 596, one shot ahead of A&M.

A&M's Jorge Coghlan and Houston's Mike Standly shared the first round lead at 71 but both shot 74 on Saturday. Also at 145 is Steve Jackson of Houston who had a 73 in the second round.

Coghlan got off to a rough start with a double bogey on No. 3 and a bogey on No. 4. Standly was even on the front nine, but bogeyed Nos. 10 and 12 and failed to birdie the short par five 18th when he hit his second shot in a trap.

Sinovic birdied both par fives on the front nine and had to make a difficult bogey on No. 9 to turn in 35. He said the turning point was when he made a par on No. 10 despite a couple of bad shots.

"I birdied No. 11 by hitting a sand wedge within 2 feet of the cup," he said. "A three-putt on No. 14 was the only blemish on the round."

He finished with a two-putt birdie on 18. "My father used to do a lot of business in Little Rock, so I've seen the subtle ways this course can be difficult to score on," he said. "I don't think most of the golfers saw those things in their practice round."

Sinovic, a sophomore, played several groups ahead of the leaders because the players are paired by team scores. Baecker, a junior, played even earlier.

"I saw him on the No. 8 tee, and he said he couldn't make a putt," said Tech Coach Tom Wilson. "I said, 'Well, do something else.'"

So, Baecker, faced with about 175 yards on the 455-yard par-four ninth, took a seven iron.

"I just hit it and waited," he said. "They started hollering when it landed. It got louder as it got closer. I needed something. I couldn't make a putt."

He dropped a shot on No. 14 when his second shot trickled over the green but he holed a 35-foot birdie putt on No. 16. On the 205-yard 17th, he selected a 5 iron and then switched to a 4 iron. It splashed in the back trap and then went into the hazard.

Baecker — whose name is pronounced Rocky Becker — got it up and down for a bogey.

The best he could on No. 18 was par after he pushed his tee shot and had to play up the No. 1 fairway.

Jordan didn't birdie any of the par fives, but picked up birdies on Nos. 1, 7, 13 and 14. He bogeyed No. 5, a 235-yard par three, and No. 9.

Beck, who had the low round of the tournament, said he had been hooking the ball off the tee so he decided to play the hook. "I had six birdies and got up and down when I missed the green," he said. "Four of the birdies were 8 feet and closer."

Russ Beiersdorf of SMU made a hole-in-one on the 175-yard 13th with a 5 iron.

"It went a little to the left, then sucked back in," he said. "I knew it was going to be close, but not that close." He shot 71 and is at 147.

"We're lucky to be alive," said Houston Coach Dave Williams.

"We had a good lead going into the last nine holes. Then we staggered, but came back at the end. We've played TCU four times this year and won three times and tied them the other. I think we have an advantage since we've been there so many times but they don't give you shots for that."

TCU Coach Bill Woodley said the Frogs are in good shape because the tournament is based on the best four 54-hole scores and the Frogs have six players at 153 or better. Houston's sixth man is at 155.

Lamar claims ninth straight SLC track title

ARLINGTON (AP) — Fueled by first places in the javelin, 800 meters and triple jump, Lamar swept to its ninth straight Southland Conference track and field championship Saturday.

Olav Nyman turned in a throw of 225 feet 11 inches in the javelin, Carlos Ward clocked 1:49.77 in the 800, and James Richardson logged a 51-9 in the triple jump for Lamar's first places.

The Cardinals compiled 132 points to outdistance Northeast Louisiana (110½) and host Texas-Arlington (103½).

Louisiana Tech was fourth with 93 points, while McNeese State was fifth with 52, Arkansas State sixth with 41 and North Texas State seventh with 26.

Sansiski Daniels of UTA and Steve Cate of Louisiana Tech, the meet's only double winners, were voted the outstanding track and and outstanding field performers, respectively.

Daniels won both hurdle events, taking the 110 in 13.69 and the 400 meters in 51.19, while Cate added a winning heave of 64-3 in the shot put to his meet record of 185-7 in the discus on Friday.

Meet records fell in the sprints with Brian Cooper of McNeese turning in a 10.22 in the 100 meters and Vincent Coleman of Louisiana Tech blazing to a 20.22 in the 200 meters.

Northeast Louisiana dominated the first ever women's championship, rolling up 187 points to second-place Lamar's 100. Texas-Arlington was third with 94 points, Southwestern Louisiana fourth with 56, Arkansas State fifth with 46, North Texas State sixth with 28 and McNeese State seventh with 13.

Cheryl Henry and Janice Marshall paced the Lady Indians with 35 and 25 points, respectively. Henry had firsts in the 100 hurdles, triple jump and long jump.

Louisiana Tech claims SLC men's tennis title

ARLINGTON (AP) — One month after announcing it is discontinuing men's tennis, Louisiana Tech won three singles and one doubles events to capture the 1986 Southland Conference tennis championship Saturday.

Tech, Northeast Louisiana and McNeese State were tied with 16 points after Friday's opening session before the Bulldogs put together its impressive swan song Saturday to win by seven.

Tech piled up 34 points, while Northeast, which had won the previous two SLC titles, was second with 27. McNeese finished third with 24, followed by Lamar with eight, Arkansas State with four, North Texas State with two and Texas-Arlington none.

McNeese State won both the No. 1 singles with Pontus Lavefalk and the No. 1 doubles with Lavefalk and Ulf Niklasson, while Tech's winning margin came with victories in No. 4, No. 5 and No. 6 singles plus No. 3 doubles.

Franz Kaiser won at No. 4, Trevor Salton at No. 5 and Alan Trivett at No. 6 for the Bulldogs, while Northeast Louisiana's Peter Jetzel captured the No. 3 title and Luis Castro-Malaga the No. 2 crown.

Sean Cole and Claes Ramel captured the No. 2 doubles title for NLU, while Salton and Harold Castillo gave Tech the No. 3 doubles crown.

Brewers have no trouble with Rangers

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Robin Yount's two-run single capped a five-run Milwaukee fifth inning and rookie Billy Jo Robidoux hit a three-run homer, powering the Milwaukee Brewers to a 10-2 victory over the Texas Rangers Saturday night.

Tim Leary picked up his second victory in three decisions for the Brewers. He went six innings, giving up nine hits before he was relieved by Jaime Cocanower.

Yount had three singles and the Brewers chased rookie Edwin Correa, 1-2, in the fifth inning. Correa gave up two walks, hit a batter, yielded two singles and Cecil Cooper's run-scoring double before he was replaced by Mitch Williams.

Williams was involved in a bizarre incident in the seventh inning after Robidoux's homer on "Ball Night" before 25,499 fans. Some patrons were so incensed they held up the game for almost 10 minutes by raining the field with their souvenir baseballs.

White Sox 5, Tigers 4

DETROIT — Jerry Hairston's sacrifice fly in the 11th inning as the Chicago White Sox edged the Detroit Tigers

Carlton Fisk led off the 11th by drawing a walk on a full-count pitch from Bill Campbell, 0-1, the third Detroit pitcher. Fisk stole second and went to third when Campbell bobbled Bobby Bonilla's sacrifice bunt for an error.

The Tigers tied it 4-4 in the eighth. Darnell Coles singled, took second on Larry Herndon's grounder and scored on Chet Lemon's two-out single off Bill Dawley.

Indians 3, Yankees 2

NEW YORK — Pat Tabler continued his bases-loaded success with a two-run double in Cleveland's three-run first and the Indians beat New York, ending the Yankees' six-game winning streak.

Tabler now has 23 hits in 37 career at-bats with the bases loaded for a .622 average and 56 RBI.

Don Schulze, 1-0, gave up one run on four hits over six innings. Reliever Scott Bailes took over, and the Yankees scored with two outs in the eighth on a double by Ken Griffey and a single by Don Mattingly.

Ernie Camacho replaced Bailes and got the final four outs for his fourth save. Camacho gave up a pair of walks in the ninth, but struck out pinch-hitter Henry Cotto to end the game.

The Indians' first-inning runs came on four hits, a walk and a hit batsman against emergency starter Bob Shirley, who started when Ed Whitson came down with soreness in his stomach and rib-cage area.

Brett Butler led off with a double and went to third when Shirley's attempted pickoff hit him in the back and went into center field. Julio Franco singled home Butler.

A's 5, Mariners 3

OAKLAND, Calif. — Joaquin Andujar pitched one-hit baseball for six innings to get his second American League victory as the Oakland A's beat the Seattle Mariners.

Andujar, 2-1, and relievers Steve Ontiveros and Jay Howell combined on a four-hitter. Ontiveros pitched one perfect inning and Howell worked the last two, yielding two runs in the eighth when Jim Presley singled and Ken Phelps had a pinch-hit home run.

Andujar retired the last 11 batters he faced, following Bob Kearney's line drive single to left field opening the third inning. The Mariners scored a run in the first inning without benefit of a hit.

Orioles 11, Blue Jays 5

BALTIMORE — Rookie catcher John Stefero drove in four runs with a single and a three-run homer, leading the Baltimore Orioles to a victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

Stefero's homer, his first as a major leaguer, followed an RBI single by Fred Lynn that broke a 5-5 tie in the eighth. Toronto reliever Tom Henke, 2-1, the fifth Blue Jays pitcher, surrendered all six Baltimore runs in that inning.

Henke struck out two of the first three batters he faced, but then allowed six straight Orioles to reach safely.

Red Sox 6, Royals 1

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Wade Boggs drove across two runs and Bill Buckner homered to support Al Nipper's pitching and lead the Boston Red Sox to a victory over the Kansas City Royals.

Nipper allowed only four singles in squaring his record at 2-2. He had one strikeout and allowed one walk.

The Red Sox reached Bret Saberhagen, 1-2, for two runs in the first inning and chased the American League's 1985 Cy Young Award winner in the fifth.

Angels 7, Twins 6

MINNEAPOLIS — Wally Joyner's two-out, two-run home run — California's third homer of the inning — capped a rally from a 6-1 deficit and gave the Angels a victory over the Minnesota Twins in a game delayed when the Metrodome roof was ripped during a thunderstorm.

Frank Viola pitched a seven-hitter through eight innings but left when Brian Downing doubled and George Hendrick homered to open the ninth. Ron Davis, 0-1, came on and allowed Rob Wilfong's pinch-hit single and a two-run homer by pinch hitter Ruppert Jones.

Flames burn defending champs, take 3-2 lead

Associated Press

EDMONTON, Alberta — Lanny McDonald and Joel Otto scored about two minutes apart in the second period and the Calgary Flames got stellar goaltending from Mike Vernon to hold off a desperate third-period attack by the Edmonton Oilers for a 4-1 victory Saturday night and a 3-2 lead in their NHL playoff series.

The Flames, who wilted under a similar third-period push by Edmonton in Game 2, return home with the chance to dethrone the reigning two-time Stanley Cup champions with a victory in Game 6 of the best-of-seven Smythe Division series on Monday night.

After dropping a 7-4 decision to Edmonton Thursday night in Calgary that evened the series at 2-2, the Flames returned to their tight-checking game plan Saturday night.

And, as they did in three of the first four games, the Flames scored first. Dan Quinn getting the goal at 19:29 of the opening period.

With a two-goal lead and only one period to play, the Flames tightened their defense in the third. That, combined with Edmonton's push to offense, resulted in most of the final 20 minutes being played in Calgary's zone.

Blues 4, Maple Leafs 3

ST. LOUIS — Right wing Mark Reeds scored into the upper right hand corner with a wrist shot at 7:11 of overtime, giving the St. Louis Blues a come-from-behind triumph over the Toronto Maple Leafs and a 3-2 lead in their playoff series.

The Blues can wrap up the best-of-seven Norris Division final in Game 6 on Monday night in Toronto. A seventh game, if necessary, will be played on Blues ice next Wednesday night.

ANGELS

When order was restored, Coach Steve Lubratich protested so vehemently over the ejection of Hardgrave that he also got the thumb from plate umpire Zach Bevington. The umpiring crew declined to comment on any phase of the incident after the game.

WHEN BRENT Gjesdal followed with a homer to left-center, Beaumont not only had ended Banning's bid for an unbeaten, untied and unscored upon season, but led 3-0. But that was just the beginning of the four-hour, two-minute long marathon that not even a rain shower could stop, probably because no one believed knew what it was.

For Midland, Glen Walker went 5-for-5, Brian Brady had three hits and Doug McLemore, Raul Tovar, and James Randall each chipped in with two hits in the 18-hit assault on five Gator pitchers.

Three wild pitches, a couple of passed balls, a hit batsman, balk and three costly errors are enough mistakes to lose an entire series, let alone a one-run game.

In addition, Midland lost three outs on the base paths. Mark McLemore, the Texas League's leading base stealer, twice was caught trying to steal second by the Gator catcher Frank Castro. And if you are going to stop the Angels, keeping McLemore off the base paths is the best way to do it.

In addition Walker was making too big a turn at first after one of his five singles and was picked off.

STILL, THE Angels made it close. Trailing 11-6 going into the home ninth, Midland scored five times. Brady opened with a double, Walker singled a run in, Kevin King singled and Doug Davis walked. That brought in Mark Poston for Rusty Ford, who failed in a bid for his seventh save of the young season.

An error on a double play ball, let two runs race home and Raul Tovar singled home another to trim the margin to 11-10. Paul Mancuso finally came in to strike out Randall for the game-saving out.

The winning run, as it turned out, came in the top of the ninth when Mike DeButch walked and scored on singles by Byers and Castro.

Alabama player dies in car crash

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. (AP) — George Scruggs, a running back at Alabama, was killed and two other Crimson Tide players injured Saturday night when their car went out of control on a Huntsville highway, police said.

Scruggs, of Decatur, died after being taken by helicopter to Huntsville Hospital, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Watson falls from lofty perch into three-way tie

THE WOODLANDS (AP) — Tom Watson bogeyed the last two holes to fall back into a three-way tie for the lead with Calvin Peete and Jay Haas after Saturday's third round of the Houston Open golf tournament.

Watson, who started the day two strokes off the 36-hole pace set by Peete, charged into the lead with five birdies in his first six holes. But bogeys on the last two holes gave him a round of 68 and a 54-hole score of 205, 11 under par. Haas had the day's best round among the leaders, a 67, and Peete finished with a 69 by sinking a 30-foot birdie putt on 18.

Two strokes back of the tri-leaders were Nick Faldo and Wayne Grady, who each had 2-under-par 70s for 207.

Watson was two strokes ahead of Peete and one shot ahead of Haas going into the final two holes of the par-72, 7,042-yard TPC course. But Watson drove into the rough on each hole and settled for bogeys.

The key to Watson's round was a 60-yard chip shot for a birdie after his second shot on the par-5, 530-yard 13th hole went into the water.

Watson started his round with five birdies in six holes to drop to 12 under par for the tournament. A bogie on No. 7 cooled his charge.

Peete, already a two-time winner on the PGA Tour this year, started the day with a two-shot lead, but he bogeyed the par-5, 515-yard first hole.

It was Peete's first bogey of the tournament. He played steadily through the rest of the front nine, running in a birdie on No. 8, and got back into contention with birdies on 11 and 12.

Haas, who started the third round at six under par, charged into contention with three birdies on his front nine, then added a birdie on 13 and an eagle on 15.

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Pinch runner Billy Hatcher scored on a two-out passed ball by Cincinnati catcher Bo Diaz in the bottom of the ninth inning to give the Houston Astros a 1-0 victory over the Reds Saturday night.

Jose Cruz led off the ninth with a single to center, and was replaced by Hatcher, who stole second. After an out and an intentional walk to Kevin Bass, Denny Walling's ground ball forced Bass at second, with Hatcher moving to third on the play.

Mike Scott, 2-2, went the distance, giving up four hits while striking out five and walking one. Gullickson struck out one and walked three.

Gullickson didn't allow a Houston runner past second until the ninth. At one point, he retired 12 of 14 Astros batters he faced.

NL Roundup

Mets 4, Cardinals 3

ST. LOUIS — Len Dykstra's leadoff homer triggered a four-run first inning and the New York Mets withstood St. Louis' ninth-inning rally for their eighth straight victory over the Cardinals.

Tommy Herr greeted relieved Roger McDowell with an RBI double, and Jack Clark followed with a run-scoring single that made it 4-3. Tito Landrum's bunt single put runners at first and second, and Mike Heath then bunted into a forceout at third.

Jesse Orosco was summoned from the Mets' bullpen, and Terry Pendleton hit the first pitch hard up the middle, but second baseman Wally Backman dove, backhanded the ball and started a double play that ended the game. Orosco got his third save.

As a Store Director/Manager, you'll be responsible for the entire management function of one of our Hex Stores, Super Stores, or other Good Neighbor Stores, including P & L responsibility and the hiring, training, supervision and development of 4-12 employees.

To qualify for this highly responsible position, your background must include 2-5 years of management experience in a fast food, grocery, convenience or related retail environment. Strong interpersonal skills and leadership abilities are essential. A college degree is a plus.

Entry-level management opportunities are also available for Assistant Director/Manager trainees.

Don't miss out on this exceptional opportunity. We offer:

- Excellent compensation
- Employee stock ownership plan
- Convenient locations
- Comprehensive training
- Tenure incentive
- Educational assistance (for business related courses)
- Sales/profit incentive
- Gas volume-bonus
- Hospitalization and life insurance

MANAGEMENT DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM

ARE YOU "WENDY'S KIND OF PEOPLE?"

At Wendy's Old Fashioned Hamburger Restuarant we believe in a total commitment to satisfying every customer. We are dedicated to quality--not just talking about it. Our beef is pattied fresh daily at our restuarants. Each sandwich in made to order with the customer's choice of condiments. Our sandwiches never sit under heat lamps like the other hamburger restuarants you know. If you share our dedication to quality, you're "Wendy's Kind Of People", and we want to talk to you.

We are a growing Wendy's operation in the West Texas area committed to hiring only quality individuals who want to be a part of the Wendy's Management team. As a Wendy's Manager, you'll learn that people are your most valuable resource and will be able to lead them to meet our tough standards. You'll relish the opportunity to be closely involved with the daily operation of our restuarants. If you're "Wendy's Kind Of People", and want to recieve the kind of salary and company benefits you deserve, see:

Grandy's

An equal opportunity employer, M/F/V/H.

TWO YEARS WITH US CAN MAKE YOU A LOT MORE THAN PROUD.

You'll be experienced in a skill, better prepared for college, and a bit richer than before. Not to mention having more adventures and meeting more people than most others do in ten years. The Army's special Two-Year Enlistment Program can help you earn $17,000 for college with the GI Bill Plus the Army College Fund.

It can teach you a valuable skill, perhaps in a high-tech field.

And it can give you a couple of years to experience a world outside of school. It's a chance to see new places, meet some interesting people, and do some important growing -- physically and mentally.

Call your local Army Recuiter today to see if you qualify.

MARKETING COMPANY
NO MONEY DOWN

Have you always wanted to be in business for yourself but did not want to pay out a large sum of front money? This is NOT direct sales or multi-level. This is a solid marketing opportunity requiring your ability to pay your own expenses during a two to four week start up time. You will generate much more business from small communities outside of Midland so don't call if you don't have reliable transportation and the desire to use it. If you are fed up with a personal recession and have the burning desire to be very well by the summer's end call John. 699-8088 9am to noon.

It is a very pretty picture

By GIGI MCKINNEY
Advertising Feature Writer

One particular home, located at 3005 Goddard, epitomizes this phrase. Encompassing approximately 2,480 square feet of comfortable living space, this four bedroom domain exudes a warm, contemporary feeling from its muted brick exterior and professionally landscaped lawn (bottom photo on the cover).

Concealed amenities include a freshly painted exterior, timed sprinkler system with bubblers, a new water heater, water softening unit, central heat and air and an electric garage door opener in its two-car garage with rear entry. Plush pale blue shag carpeting throughout projects a luxurious feeling for any style of furnishings.

In the impressive formal dining room (top right photo on the cover), "Mexican red" walls perfectly compliment the custom tieback chintz drapes and white mini blinds on each full length window. Matched patterned cording is stylishly positioned at the juncture of the walls and ceiling.

For easier serving convenience, an open doorway leads into the U-shaped kitchen with all electric appliances including a double range, Jennaire cooktop and microwave. Tan counters with ash raised panel cabinets and muted wallpaper about the backsplash and cabinets adds a practical decorative flair.

In the adjoining breakfast area, a feeling of openness makes the first meal of the day even more pleasurable. Matching wallpaper and white mini blinds on the windows viewing the side lawn complete the look. Easy access can be gained to the large utility room, with full length storage cabinets, and to the garage.

Two hallways, from the entry and the family room, lead to the sequestered master bedroom suite and three guest rooms. A pass-through bath boasting almond tile, navy patterned wallpaper, a double vanity and tub/shower reflects the versatility this home offers.

Fascinating Facts

by Bob & Bill Drummond, Licensed Master Plumbers

Did you ever wonder why snow is white? The white color results from the fact that snow crystals are so minute that each cell of the retina of the human eye receives only a general impression of the crystal produced by the combination of its facets. Red snow, and more rarely other colors such as green, blue, or black are produced by the action of fungi known as micrococcus nivalis. Red snow has been photographed in natural colors. If you live in or visit a snow area this winter, watch for it.

With luck, we won't see red snow or any other kind for a long time. Call SANITARY PLUMBING, HEATING & AIR CONDITIONING now for expert pre-season service on your air conditioning. We also offer emergency plumbing, heating and AC service any time, day or night. Days, call 694-8871. After hours, call 682-0891.

HELPFUL HINT: Lever handle water cut off valves are great - turn off and on slowly.

This past week, a reception hosted by the Board of Directors of Marathon for the Oil industry and other community business leaders, brought to mind again how important this ailing industry is to our own local economics. Every personal, corporate or commercial balance sheet in Midland is directly affected by the price of oil.
Todays problems don't just belong to "Big Oil" or "Independents" but to every one of us. And the problems becomes a National crisis when the concerns of national security, supply and demand, and balance of payments are considered.
What can we as individuals do to help our oil industry?
Some suggestions: 1. Become as informed as possible on the problems.
2. Speak up in the voting booth, support those candidates qualified to work on the behalf of the oil industry.
3. Contact key incumbants to enlist their assistance.
4. Join the Permian Basin Petroleum Association.
I am sure many of you have better answers than I and I hope you will share them with me.

They said it couldn't be done...

Text by Linda Anderson

...but it can, said Dr. Joyce Brothers, and she's going to be in Midland Monday night at the Holiday Inn Convention Center to discuss how.

Her talk on "Managing Men, Marriages & Careers" will begin with a wine and cheese reception at 7:30 p.m., followed by the program at 8:15 p.m. The event is sponsored by Uptown Chapter of Business and Professional Women.

"It is possible to do it all — I've done it all," Ms. Brothers said. A graduate of Cornell University, she earned her Ph.D. in psychology from Columbia University and was on the faculty at Columbia and at Hunter College.

In recent years, Ms. Brothers has become one of the most visible and popular talk-show guests on television. A poll conducted by Universal Press International named her one of the 10 most influential women in America, and a Greenwich College Research Center survey found her to be one of the 10 women most admired by college students. When Good Housekeeping magazine conducted one poll to find "Women in the World Most Admired" by women, Ms. Brothers tied for 10th-place with Golda Meir.

In addition to her television appearances, she has a daily radio show on NBC Radio Network, writes articles and columns for magazines and newspapers and speaks to various organizations.

THROUGH THE YEARS of building her career and public image, Ms. Brothers has still had time to become a mother — and now a grandmother — and share a satisfying 36-year marriage with Dr. Milton J. Brothers.

Does she consider herself a "superwoman"? Ms. Brothers said that notorious stereotype is impossible for any woman.

"More and more men have to adjust to the fact that their working wives require more help. Everyone in the family has to pitch in. There's nothing innately feminine about household tasks ... Some cultures think housework is too holy for women and only men are allowed to do it."

Families who desire or require the benefits Of the second paycheck must be willing to help with household chores, she said. Women are just people, not superwomen.

Unfortunately, sometimes families don't realize that. In to her book, "The Brothers System for Liberated Love & Marriage," Ms. Brothers wrote:

"And it seems that the essentials of the working wife's life are always the same. She shares her income with the family, but the family does not share her second job with her. In some twisted way, people consider a woman's work outside the home an indulgence for which she has to pay by doing her domestic work as well."

"The better-educated and higher-paid men do not seem to feel that they lose status when they help around the house; in fact, studies show that the better educated they are, the more helpful they tend to be."

Not all men share that view, however, she wrote: "The better-educated and higher-paid men do not seem to feel that they lose status when they help around the house; in fact, studies show that the better educated they are, the more helpful they tend to be."

AS MORE WOMEN seek personal fulfillment and financial gain in employment outside their homes, traditional concepts of male and female occupations are changing, but gradually.

Ms. Brothers wrote: "...All over the world many very masculine men do jobs we consider feminine ... from cooking to designing clothes to nursing. We make many men unnecessarily unhappy and frustrated when we try to force them into unsuitable occupations just because we've decided those are men's work."

Some women, however, often have to face more than just lack of help with the housework. "Single mothers have a tough time," she said. "... what gives is their social life and the look of their houses. The kids will grow up ... and the house will still be there. You have to cut every corner you can ... make your whole life drip-dry. Kids have to have some chores — they grow up better if they have responsibilities."

For women who work to feed their families and who may not earn a large salary, "child-care ... is the biggest pressing problem ... today." Government may provide one solution, Dr. Brothers said, and corporate-sponsored day care another. The pressures of the women's movement to get women equal pay have helped, she added.

Finding care for children who are ill is one problem that has not been solved yet, she said. When a working mother has to take time off from work to care for a sick child, the effects on the family budget can be devastating. "Single parents run on the border, and when the kids get sick it really puts them under."

THE SOCIAL SCENE is undergoing changes, too. Only a few years ago, a woman was considered past her prime when she hit 30. "Marilyn Monroe killed herself because she thought she was over the hill at 33," Ms. Brothers said.

But aging is no longer the fear it once was for women, and for many life really does begin at 40.

In fact, a fairly recent social phenomenon — and one severely frowned upon only a few years ago — is the growing number of commitments established between younger men and older women.

Ms. Brothers said such relationships were "inevitable," because "more women get power and power is sexy."

Women are more accepting of commitments with younger men, she added, because marriageable women outnumber marriageable men, and women are more willing to "increase the pool of men they will consider. Younger men are attracted to older women because older women are more visible to them. Before, when you got crows' feet ... you became invisible — even the sacker at the grocery store didn't see you. Now women with more power and more clout become sexy and become more sexual in men's eyes."

The beauty and popularity of such women as Linda Evans, Joan Collins and Sophia Loren — who are all older than "sex symbols" of the past — is proof that the best time in a woman's life doesn't have to be her youth.

TICKETS FOR "Managing Men, Marriages & Careers" and the wine and cheese reception are $12.50, and are available at RepublicBank First National Midland, Pages & Prints Book Store, The Body Shop for Women, Skibells at Dellwood Mall or at the door. Proceeds will benefit the BPW Scholarship Fund.

Have you heard...?

By MARILYN McKNIGHT HARRISON

The past week was filled with a number of lovely parties for Gayle Grimland and Paul Dean, who exchanged wedding vows Saturday evening in the First United Methodist Church.

A potpourri party honored Gayle Tuesday morning at the home of Sue (Mrs. Frank) Mullins. The co-hostesses were Margaret (Mrs. Courtney) Cowden, Jan (Mrs. Robert) Fitting, Dikka Fitting, Sandra (Mrs. Reg) Hyer, Hazel (Mrs. Keith) Somerville, Bea Lea Somerville and Sudy (Mrs. H.G.) Bedford.

Festivities continued on Thursday with a luncheon at the home of Ruth (Mrs. Robert E.) Johnston. Co-hosting were Judy (Mrs. R. Maury) Thornton and Barbara (Mrs. John) O'Brien. That evening the Pinnacle Club atop the First National Bank Building was the setting for a cocktail buffet for the wedding party and those who entertained for the couple with pre-nuptial parties. The hosts were Katie and Matt Manroe of Chicago and Jane and Kim McAbee.

Roxanne (Mrs. William H.) Thams entertained in her home Friday with a bridesmaids' luncheon. Co-hostesses were Ann (Mrs. Mike) Bradford and the bride's sister, Diane (Mrs. Lee) Glaske of Sun Valley, Idaho. The groom's parents, Jean and Dr. Thurston Dean, hosted the rehearsal dinner Friday evening at the Plaza Club. A wedding day brunch was given for out-of-town guests and the wedding party at the home of Linnie and Art Donnelly. Co-hosting were Shirley and Budge McDonnold and Pat and Dan Black.

Following the reception at Midland Country Club, the couple departed for a honeymoon at Caneel Bay in the Virgin Islands. They will make their home in Fort Worth.

LAST YEAR'S LEFTOVER invitations were recycled when Pat and Tom Schneider hosted their second annual "After Income Tax" party at their home. Information concerning this year's event on April 16 was penned in over last year's dates. To continue the "times are tough" and "poor us" theme, the Schneiders also used such clever touches as an odd assortment of cocktail napkins they had on hand and a large bucket at the entry, with a sign reading: "Contributions."

The Schneiders' daughter, Molly, a December graduate of TCU, assisted with the fun party. She is residing in Midland until June when she enters the Tobe Coburn School of Fashion in New York City.

MIDLAND HIGH SENIOR Ronna Laidley was honored by her grandmother, Inez (Mrs. Clarence) Laidley, with a graduation luncheon recently on the patio of her home.

Texas A&M's colors were featured in the refreshments and party decor, which included a miniature tree decorated with maroon ribbons and surrounded by white spider mums. Pictures of Ronna from babyhood to the present also adorned the tree.

Special guests were the honoree's mother, Shari (Mrs. Ron) Laidley; her aunt, Barbara (Mrs. Morris) Riggan, and her cousin, Elaine (Mrs. Frank) Driskill.

SIX MEMBERS of Midland's Aaron Estes Chapter of the Daughters of the Republic of Texas were in Houston Monday for the San Jacinto Day Sesquicentennial celebration. Fern McGuigan, Ruth Erskine, Doris Williams, Charlotte Hallford, Lillian Hanley and Nancy McKinley were joined by Chic Williams, Mary Kay Shannon and Mary Walker, all of Fort Stockton, and Betty Jackson of El Paso in making the trip.

Vice President George Bush and Gov. Mark White led an estimated crowd of 75,000 in a formal ceremony recounting the birth of a new nation and honoring the heroes of the conflict at the San Jacinto Battlefield. Immediately following, a bithday party featuring a huge Texas-style cake and entertainment was held in the San Jacinto park. As members of the DRT's board of management, Mrs. McGuigan and Mrs. Erskine attended the Governor's Reception at the San Jacinto Museum of History. The celebration concluded that evening with a spectacular fireworks display over the old battleground.

The hall was decorated with spring flowers, streamers and balloons. Attending the guest registry were Mrs. Woody's great-granddaughter, Christina Griffin, and great-niece, Lynetta Keeley. At the serving table were the honoree's grandchildren, Kay Blount, Scarlette Bulten, Georgia Briscoe, Connie Radloff, Natalie Radloff and Danny Radloff. More than 100 guests attended.

RUTH AND AUGUST WENCK recently attended the state convention of the Texas Retired Teachers Association in Dallas. Since retiring from the Midland public school system in 1969, Ruth has been active on the local, state and national level of the Retired Teachers Association.

The Wencks also enjoyed a visit in Denton with their grandson, August Wenck II, a music major at North Texas State University and a member of the university band. They attended the grand opening of the Sheraton Hotel and Conference Center at NTSU, at which the band performed. Midlander Win Brown was chairman of the NTSU board of regents when arrangements for the joint venture between the hotel group and the university were made.

Woman president elected; Charter lost

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A Lions Club chapter thought nothing special about electing L. O'Dea president, but the international body voted to revoke its charter when it discovered "L" stood for Lola.

"It's really not news that women are challenging charters of men's service organizations. I think the twist here is that I'm president of one," Mrs. O'Dea said Wednesday. "And I love it."

Mrs. O'Dea, an executive of a nonprofit organization, has been a member of the South Side Lions Club for six years and became its president last year.

"I wasn't a woman who knocked on the door saying I wanted to challenge this charter. I was asked to join," she said.

"I had some reservations, because I knew it was an all-male, basically conservative group. I knew it would put me in a very awkward position, but it took six years for that to happen."

Because the club's constitution states that only men may join the Lions, the chapter submitted the women's first-name initials on membership applications.

The three served in the club without complaint until a district governor saw them at a chapter meeting he attended last year and ordered them to leave or join a Lioness club.

The district governor, Bernard Machesky, said most of the 2,100 Lions in his district supported his decision to report the chapter.

"It's the bylaws of the constitution of Lions International," he said. "If it's good for one club, it's good for every club. Why should one club get away with it?"

But Mrs. O'Dea, a 47-year-old wife and mother of one son, said she bristled at the suggestion.

"I don't want to put on an apron and serve the Lions' luncheons," she said. "The Lioness clubs are women who are spouses of Lions Club members. They serve the Lions Club. It is no option for a professional woman."

Earlier this month, the chapter was notified by Lions Club International that the 28 directors had voted unanimously to revoke the charter.

Mrs. O'Dea said most of the 22 active male members in the South Side club backed the women's decision to remain.

"Our three women do more work for the club than half our members. We won't give them up," said the club's secretary, Robert Young.

Lions Club International, the world's largest men's service club with 1.3 million members in 37,000 clubs in 151 countries or territories, will vote on the question of admitting women in July, when it holds its annual convention in New Orleans. Two other service organizations — Kiwanis and Rotary International — also have refused to admit women.

Mrs. O'Dea said many members hope the Lions at their July convention will approve a measure calling for acceptance of women.

Baskin: Altrusa's Woman of the Year

Joan Ragsdale Baskin, president of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, was named the Altrusa Club's Lucy Mashburn Woman of the Year at the award banquet Tuesday at Ranchland Hills Country Club. This honor, in memory of Lucy Mashburn, educator and community service leader in Midland, is presented annually to one of Midland's outstanding women.

Joan Ragsdale Baskin

Speaker at the banquet was Dr. Charles E.P. Simmons, former president of Lake Erie College. Simmons earned a master of arts degree from Drake University and a Ph.D. from Washington State University. A Latin American historian, he spoke on "Six Women of Texas: Shadow and Substance."

Past recipients of the Lucy Mashburn award are Mrs. John Reid, Mrs. Jack Samples, the late Mrs. J.H. Mims, Mrs. E.A. Culbertson, Mrs. Jack D. Glenn, Mrs. Abbott B. Jenks, Mrs. Leslie Dunlap, Mrs. Robert Hannifin and Dr. Dorothy Wyvell.

Trinity School's Mayfair scheduled

Artists from across the United States will exhibit a variety of arts and crafts at the 13th annual Mayfair, sponsored by Trinity School, from 10 a.m.- 6 p.m. Saturday at the school, 3500 W. Wadley.

The exhibit will include dolls, watercolor paintings, Mexican dresses, woodwork items, stoneware and stained glass. Each artist will donate one representative piece of art work for a silent auction to be at the end of the fair.

Mayfair will also include events such as the Carnival with a Ferris wheel, dunking booth, basketball throw and merry-go-round. Food items available will include Golden China egg rolls, Luigi's pastrami, Kick's Bakery goods, hot dogs, burritos and snow cones. Home baked goods will also be available for purchase.

Proceeds from Mayfair will aid operations at the school. Since 1958, Trinity School has provided academic, athletic and performing arts programs to the children throughout the Permian Basin from ages 3 through ninth grade.

There will be a preview party from 7-10 p.m. Friday. Door prizes and silent auction will be featured. Tickets are $20 per person and may be purchased at the door. For information call 694-2052.

Planning wedding quickly calls for efficiency

Associated Press

Authorities say that planning a formal wedding takes a minimum of six months. In large cities and around popular marriage dates like the month of June, they often suggest pinning down the date and location for the ceremony and reception as much as a year ahead of time.

But, what do you do when the wedding date will be only a month or two away and some form of wedding with guests is contemplated?

It can be done, but the immediacy of the deadline calls for faster footwork, less shopping around, more decisiveness and a willingness to settle for what is available in the way of reception hall, wedding dress and the like. Musts, besides a date and a place, include a guest list, invitations, something to wear, something to eat and drink. Other chores vary depending on plans, but are likely to include planning a wedding trip, selecting household furnishings or arranging the logistics of consolidating two households into one.

By making some compromises, delegating jobs and working fast you may find it amazing how fast the wedding and reception plans come together.

Parents must learn to accept their daughter's adult status

Associated Press

Most women sooner or later find it necessary — but not easy — to divorce their parents.

There are no legal papers, hearings or separation agreements, according to an article in Cosmopolitan, but even becoming a wife and mother may not force parents into accepting a daughter's adult status.

Unless your parents are exceptional in their ability to recognize when the time comes for you to assume responsibility for your own life, you will have to go through several battles before they understand.

Parents like this may emphasize the expense, dangers and possible loneliness of life on your own. Try to ignore these scare tactics.

"You must turn the parent-child relationship on its head and educate your parents to the fact that there isn't just one correct way to live your life," said New York psychoanalyst Richard Milliken.

The trick is not to explain or apologize — just insist that what they may think is the wrong way to live makes you happy. It is part of becoming more than an obedient daughter.

Unless you have the emotional skin of a wart hog, constant criticism from parents can be devastating. Tell them you don't like their treatment and that they are hurting you. This can lead to better communications and rebuilding relationships.

Finally, be aware that in most cases you don't have to cut yourself off completely from your parents — just remember little girls need mommy and daddy, but big girls need parents who can be friends.

Author Gay Haubner offered a "Mantra for the Manipulated," starting with the recognition that parents will often disapprove of your actions — but the important thing is that you approve of yourself. She wrote, "You have no duty to make your parents happy. They are adults, and responsible for their own happiness."

Finally, "Just because you've always done what your parents wanted you to do is no reason to continue — you've merely fallen into a bad pattern. Yes, such habits are hard, but not impossible, to break."

Nora Nichols of Odessa served as matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Emilie Duesler of Odessa, niece of the bride; Mary Fetters of Odessa, sister of the bride; and Heather Campbell of Midland.

Kevin Campbell of Midland served his brother as best man. Groomsmen were Jim Walley of Odessa, Nho Nguyen of San Angelo and Mike Thompson of Stanton. Ushers were Keith Holt and Chuck Holt, both of Fort Worth.

Jennifer Campbell and Star Campbell of Midland, nieces of the bridegroom, served as flower girls. Jacob Fetters of Odessa, nephew of the bride, served as ring bearer.

Mrs. Kelly Dean Campbell

RAY-HERMANCE

DALLAS — Sara Marie Ray of Dallas and William E. Hermance Jr. were married recently in Dickerson Chapel of First United Methodist Church in Dallas.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ben P. Ray of Carlsbad, N.M. Parents of the bridegroom are Dr. and Mrs. William E. Hermance of White Plains, N.Y.

Catherine Hermance of Lake Hiawatha, N.J., sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor. Bridal attendants were Lucy Anne Walker of Columbus, Miss., and Lori Harrison of Jackson, Miss.

George Hermance of Rochester, N.Y., was best man for his brother. Groomsmen were Christopher Hermance of White Plains, brother of the bridegroom, and Douglas Ray of Tulsa, Okla., brother of the bride. Jaime Katz of Long Beach, Calif., was usher.

The bride, a 1980 graduate of Carlsbad High School and a 1984 graduate of Mississippi College in Clinton, Miss., has been an elementary school teacher in the Dallas Independent School District. Her husband graduated from the University of Rochester in Rochester, N.Y., in 1981, and has a master's degree from Indiana State University. He is a geologist with Mobil Oil Corporation.

Mrs. William E. Hermance Jr.

Following a wedding trip to the Bahamas and New York, the couple will live in Midland.

NELSON-STEVENS

Cheryl DeAnn Nelson of Midland became the bride of Patrick Anthony Stevens, also of Midland, at 2 p.m. April 19 at First Assembly of God Church in Midland. The Rev. Raymond Schaeffer officiated, assisted by the Rev. Quanah Jobe, great-uncle of the bride.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T.W. Nelson of Midland. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. James Stevens of Midland.

Debbie Simmons of Midland was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were JaNa Nelson and Rae Jean Nelson, sisters of the bride, and Vonnie Bostic, all of Midland.

Mrs. Patrick Anthony Stevens

SANCHEZ-LUJAN

Terrie Sue Sanchez of Midland became the bride of Manuel Ramiro Lujan, also of Midland, at 2:30 p.m. Saturday in St. Ann's Catholic Church. The Rev. Frederick G. Nawarskas officiated.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Rudy B. Sanchez of Midland. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Emilio Esquivel of Midland.

Olga Enriquez of Midland was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Melinda Garcia and Melissa Ochoa of Midland. Bridesmatrons were Edna Ochoa and Maria Sanchez of Midland, and Catarina Rivera of Marfa. Flower girls were Marcie Esquivel, sister of the bridegroom, Felicia Salcido, Selina Salcido and Erika Ochoa of Midland.

Severo Enriquez of Midland served as best man. Raymond Sanchez of Midland, brother of the bride, was usher. Groomsmen were Arturo Ochoa and Ernesto Sanchez of Midland, and Rito Rivera of Marfa. Mike Ochoa of Midland was ring bearer.

Mrs. Manuel Ramiro Lujan

Following a wedding trip to San Antonio and Corpus Christi, the couple will live in Midland.

Anniversary celebrated

Mr. and Mrs. Melvin D. Wimberley of Midland celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary with a reception 2-4 p.m. Saturday at Bellview Baptist Fellowship Hall.

Wimberley and the former Gladys Phillips were married April 24, 1936 in Midland. They have three children, Mrs. Wayne Coon of Gardendale, W.D. Wimberley of Odessa and Loyd V. Wimberley of Midland, as well as nine grandchildren and 11 great-grandchildren.

The couple ranched and farmed near Seminole from 1939-1949 when they moved to Midland. They farmed northeast of the city until 1975. Wimberley worked for Western Air Drilling from then until he retired in 1982.

Old gowns: Bridesmaids revisited

By ENID NEMY
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — There were pale pinks and funny greens and bright apricots, and a variety of fabrics and styles they wouldn't be caught dead in — usually. The overall effect was a downright fashion disaster.

So what were they doing, 25 women parading around an apartment in long, candy floss dresses? They were, as a matter of fact, spoofing both themselves and what may possibly be the world's most useless fashion — the bridesmaid's dress.

The bridesmaids' dress get-together was probably one of the most unusual theme parties in recent years. In a city constantly looking for something new, it also (small pun intended) took the cake. It proved that it's still possible to come up with an original idea, provide an evening of entertainment and fun and, to top it all off, serve a purpose, frivolous though it may be.

In the fairly recent past, there have been a "Great American Swap Party," where women of the same size got together and swapped clothes; a beer tasting party, conceived partly as an antidote to fashionable wine-tasting events, and a revival of the once-popular scavenger hunt. The hunt was probably the least original, but the reaction of those who took part was almost unanimously positive.

The fact that the news began to circulate at second and third hand probably indicates that running around the city looking for strange objects is in for another round.

BUT BACK to the bridesmaids, who were organized by a young woman named Betsy Blumenthal. Blumenthal, in her 27 years on Earth, has been a bridesmaid six times.

"I had six bridesmaid's dresses in my closet," explained Blumenthal, who is deputy director of finance for the Democratic National Committee and lives in Washington. "They cost anywhere from $80 to $200, and they were each worn once."

So she telephoned friends who had had similar, if not quite so frequent, experiences in wedding parties, and arranged an evening. The party was held in an apartment on the Upper East Side of Manhattan, and men were excluded.

"I thought we might get more of our money's worth if we at least wore the dresses twice," she said with a giggle.

She also got out her peau de soie "wedding shoes," originally white and, over the years, dyed five different colors. The dyeing was done at home by Blumenthal by throwing the requisite color into boiling water, throwing the shoes into that and stirring away.

"The shoes shrank a little each time because I boiled them," she reported. "But they were O.K. as long as there was no hot rain coming down."

Blumenthal said that some of her experiences as what might be called a bridal accessory had been costly but that she hadn't completely given up on the job. In fact, her last go-round was a plus, rather than a minus. The bride bought the fabric and paid for having the two-piece outfit made up by her dressmaker. And, wonder of all wonders, the shirt can be worn again for less specialized occasions.

The clothes-swap party originated because Carole Hyatt and Linda Gottlieb, who are writing a book called "When Smart Women Fail: Turning Defeat Into Success," shop together and constantly try on each other's clothes. One day they packed up bags of clothes to contribute to a charity when one of them got the bright idea of trading with people who wore sizes 4, 6 and small 8.

THE GUESTS — among them a psychiatrist, a department store designer and a writer-producer — brought along clothes they were no longer wearing or were mistakes in the first place and should never have been bought.

"We'd take turns displaying one item and giving its history," Hyatt said. "It was really funny. We'd say things like, 'My mother bought me this and I wore it once, but it's my mother, not me,' or, 'I couldn't wait to get this but it turned out to be brown, not maroon, and I hate brown.' "

When everything had been identified, the guests drew numbers and No. 1 got first crack at the goodies. She was allowed to choose one piece, which she had to try on amid comments from the other guests. If she decided she really didn't like what she had picked, she had to wait for the next round to make another choice.

"At the end of the evening, everyone felt extremely satisfied and we still had a lot left over to give to charity," Hyatt said. "But we each got at least one thing we really loved, our wardrobes were enhanced and we became fast friends. I already have a big pile waiting for the next one."

One of the guests at the beer-tasting party recalled that Amstel Light came out on top, an indication, she said, that "a group of sophisticated yuppie types had simpler palates than we thought." But apparently some of the same yuppie types also had simpler memories than they thought.

THE WINNING beer wasn't Amstel Light at all, according to Mark Walsh, the co-host, and Brian Baine, the scorer. It was New Amsterdam.

About 40 guests attended this party, fairly evenly divided between men and women but, Baine said, "most of the women weren't interested in tasting 18 beers in a row." Those who did take part in the testing drank from paper cups and scored each brew on a scale from 1 to 10.

"It was a totally different tone of party from wine tasting," said Walsh, whose company, I-Data, is in cable television marketing. "It wasn't as stuffy."

"People order beer by brands," Walsh said. "We had a suspicion that the brands people often ordered weren't really their favorites." That turned out to be the case.

Baine, who is in institutional sales on Wall Street, said that because "scoring is not an inexact science," he had to remain alert throughout the evening. This meant he drank sparingly. Some guests undoubtedly had more fun than he did, but next morning, guess who was the most envied one?

The one thing learned from the scavenger hunt party was that judges should not take part in the hunting, although it's difficult to know why not. There were four judges and four teams, which meant that each team had a judge on it and whatever bias there might have been was evenly divided. Still, some guests didn't think it was quite cricket.

But all 40 participants had an evening one described as a "hoot." In teams of 10, they were sent off in search of such items as an old subway token, a touch of class (someone changed into a black tie for that one), something from Staten Island, a busboy's jacket and a horse's hair.

"It was lots of laughs collecting the things and more laughs seeing what everyone else came up with," said Doretta Rinaldi, who is with American Express and was one of the hostesses. "I think the fact that it required resourcefulness was one of the reasons it was so popular."

Helpful tips for buying mattresses, box springs

Hearst News Service

You think you know all these is to know about mattresses? The American Innerspring Manufacturers Association, which represents the makers of steel wire coil springs for interspring mattresses and box springs, thinks otherwise.

For example: Innerspring mattresses come in how many standard sizes? Four, five or seven?

If you said seven, you are better informed than most people. Mattresses today come in seven different sizes: twin, twin extra long, double, double extra long, queen, king and California King. Sizes range from a twin, which is 38 x 74½ inches, to the California King, which is 72 x 83½ inches. Queen and king beds are the most popular today among consumers. Young marrieds aren't advised to cut corners on bedding and go with a standard or double size. Each person has only 26½ inches of sleeping space — just about the same room a baby has in his crib. Many experts say a mattress should be at least five or six inches longer than you are so your feet don't go off the bed.

A mattress and box spring should never be split up. They are designed to go together, and the construction of each piece complements the other to maximize its life. A worn box spring can ruin a new mattress in as little as six months.

Lifestyle policies

The policies for publication of announcements in the Lifestyle Department of The Midland Reporter-Telegram are:

Information for Sunday pages must be in our office by 5 p.m. the preceding Tuesday. For publication in a weekday paper, we must receive the information by noon two days before the information is to run. For example, an item for Wednesday's paper must be received by noon Monday.

Engagement announcements must appear at least two weeks before the wedding date. Wedding announcements must appear within one month of the event.

Engagements, weddings, anniversaries and club notices must be submitted in writing on forms available in the Lifestyle office. All materials must include the signature and telephone number of the person submitting them. These items appear in the Sunday paper only.

We cannot mail pictures or forms to persons within Midland. Pictures must be picked up in the Lifestyle office within one month after publication. Unclaimed photos are discarded after a month.

Photographs may be submitted with bridal announcements, but are not required. Portraits of the either the bride-elect or of the future bride and bridegroom together may be submitted with engagement announcements. Wedding photographs should be of the bride only.

Photos should be vertical, black and white, glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but they may reproduce poorly. Quality reproduction cannot be assured when color prints are used. In general, snapshots are not acceptable.

There is no charge for publication of photographs and stories.

MISTER ROGERS

Individual parents discipline children in different ways

By FRED ROGERS
with BARRY HEAD

Fred Rogers

"I hate being caught in the middle!" a mother told us. "My husband was a military man, and his dad before him. And that's the way he's raising our 4-year-old — as though Toby was a little soldier. And when Toby gets punished by his father, he comes to me for comfort. What am I supposed to tell him? That I think his dad's discipline is wrong?"

That mother certainly isn't alone in her complaint. And it isn't only mothers, either, who find themselves seeming to face divided loyalties. No husband and wife were ever raised in exactly the same ways by their parents, and all of us bring echoes from our own childhoods to the task of raising our children when it's our turn.

And, of course, watching and learning as we grow also bring us to different conclusions about how we want to raise our children.

"But isn't it important for mothers and fathers to be consistent with one another in setting rules and dealing with discipline?" people often ask. They're asking an important question.

I believe that consistency is helpful and even necessary for children's healthy emotional growth, but the consistency I mean is each separate parent's consistency. Knowing what to expect from a mother or a father day by day is part of the security a young child needs as he or she strives to grow in his or her own way.

But something else children need is the understanding that every person is different. With that understanding can come children's appreciation of their own differences and the courage to be who they are — each one different from everybody else.

For a baby, mothers and fathers are different from the beginning. They look different, sound different, smell different, feel different, hold their babies differently, and react differently to their babies' cues and signals. Doesn't it seem natural that they should, as time goes by, have differences in the ways they raise their children?

Husbands and wives need to talk about rules and discipline so that each can be comfortable with the way the other behaves. Agreement won't always be possible — and that's something we have to accept — but that kind of talk can help keep parental disagreements within manageable boundaries.

And when, in the heat of the moment, there isn't time to talk... and one parent reacts in a way the other finds inappropriate... and a child like Toby goes to the other parent for comfort... what then?

I can imagine Toby's mother saying something like, "You know, son, what you did made Daddy angry."

"I know," Toby might reply, "but you never make me stand in the corner or shout at me like that!"

"That's right. But I'm not Daddy, am I? Your dad and I are different people, just as you're growing to be different in your own ways. One thing's for sure, though: We both love you a whole lot, and that's one way your dad and I are the same."

Your child will gain one full grade level in just 36 hours. Guaranteed.

In just a short time, your child will be reading at a full grade level better than he or she does now. Or solving math problems that right now seem incomprehensible. And, best of all, discovering how it feels to succeed.

Such striking progress involves no secret formula. Just patience, some hard work—and two hours a week for 18 weeks, at a Sylvan Learning Center.

Remove the competition, the stress, and the fear of failure from education, and what happens? Children learn.

This simple approach has been tested and proven at Sylvan, where thousands of children have learned how to do better in school. Which is why we offer this unique promise: your child's math or reading skills will improve by at least one full grade level after just 36 instruction hours. Or we will provide up to 12 additional hours of instruction, at no further cost. Improvement will be measured by a nationally-recognized achievement test, given before and after instruction at Sylvan.

A program designed specially for your child.
At Sylvan we concentrate on helping your child master the vital basic skills he's missing—and conquer the problems holding him back. Your child will learn at his own pace in his own program. With the personal attention and positive encouragement that the classroom simply can't provide.

Your child can begin to do better—today.
There's a Sylvan Learning Center near you. Why not call today for a free consultation? The sooner your child begins, the sooner he'll gain a full grade level in reading or math. We guarantee it.

Measurement will be based on a nationally recognized achievement test for improvement in either reading (comprehension or vocabulary) or math (computation or application)

The Sylvan Guarantee
Your child will improve at least one full grade equivalent score in math or reading skills after 36 hours of instruction, or we will continue up to 12 additional hours of instruction, at no further cost.

Call today to arrange for a free consultation, or to receive this free booklet.

Center presented $3,600 scholarship

The contribution will be used for student tuition scholarships at the Center. The Center provides an academic and therapy program for developmentally disabled children ages 18 months to 15 years.

Kay Bynum, founder and executive director of the Center commented that the contribution will be used to fund partial scholarship for three students. "Of the 16 students currently enrolled, six are on a scholarship program," she said. "These programs are based on the family's ability to pay, and help assure that the students receive needed instruction."

The Center's goal is to coordinate all educational services such as speech pathology and occupational therapy, plus play and motor development and social interaction skills. Income is derived exclusively from tuition revenues and private donations.

Those interested in finding out more about the Center or wishing to assist in scholarship funding are asked to call 697-3502.

Crystal Ball benefit for High Sky Children's Ranch scheduled on May 10

The 12th Annual Crystal Ball benefiting High Sky Children's Ranch will be at the Holiday Inn Country Villa from 7 p.m.-midnight May 10.

The evening will include dancing, music by First Crossing, hors d'oeuves and breakfast. Decorations will be by Russell L. Freeman Interior Design. Joe Skeen, of Skeen's Auction Exchange of Midland, will auction selected pieces of Lalique, Waterford, Steuben, Van St. Lambert and Baccarat crystal.

5 CHEAP SECRETS!

Bag & Save is the cheapest grocery store in town. And here are five of our cheap price secrets. (1) We buy in volume and we sell in volume. We get a great volume discount from our suppliers and we pass that savings right along to you. (2) We keep our overhead to a minimum with a simple store. We don't spend money on fancy displays, piped in music, exotic lighting or a designer interior. (3) We don't give double coupons. (4) We don't give trading stamps or play games. That kind of thing costs money. Supermarkets that have these "courtesies" have to raise their prices to cover the cost of the stamps and the game prizes. (5) We also let you sack and carry your own groceries. Why should you pay the salary and benefits of an extra employee when you can do the work yourself? There are other ways to keep prices down, but we don't want to reveal all our cheap secrets! Come on out to Bag & Save today and shop the cheapest store in town.

Expo 86 — the huge world's fair opening Friday in Vancouver, British Columbia — has sparked interest among Midlanders seeking a haven from terrorism, but local travel agencies say it's hard to find a place for tourists to stay there.

Many Midland travel agents said they've received numerous inquiries about the 1986 World's Exposition.

"We sure have," said Scott Brown of Adventure Travel, "especially since the developments over in Europe and with Libya. People are going to the Expo instead of Europe."

"There's a lot of interest," Amy McMann of Holiday Travel said.

"They're not beating down the doors, but I've got more than I expected," noted Robin Fite of Envoye Travel. "A lot of people are wanting to stick around closer to home."

Several travel agents said that because of the recent rise in concern over terrorism Midlanders seem to feel safer in North America than overseas.

"Now with all the chaos overseas, more people are planning on staying over here," Ms. Fite said.

In fact, Grace Ortiz, owner of Travelworld, said some Midlanders might be afraid to even go to Canada for the Expo.

She believes this fear, combined with the slump in Midland's economy and difficulties in getting accomodations in Vancouver, has kept her Expo bookings to a minimum.

SOME OTHER local travel agents also said they haven't booked many Midlanders on trips to the exposition.

The interest in Expo 86 is "not what we'd expected," said Lourene Barron of Allega Travel, "and some of the people we had booked have canceled."

She attributed the cancellations to the economic downturn.

"I've had very few requests for it," said Teresa Cockerill of Travel Time. "I'd have to say it's because of the economy."

"They're running so many specials now to try to get people to Europe," she added, that a European trip might not be much more costly than one to Vancouver.

Nancy Cramer of International Travel and Cruise, who has seen moderate Expo interest among her clients, said, "There probably isn't as much interest in Texas as in some other states just because we're so far away."

APPARENTLY, THOUGH, plenty of people are interested in the Expo. Vancouver hotels have been filling so fast, Ms. Cramer said, that reservations can be very hard to get.

"Starting several months ago, we've had trouble getting the accommodations we wanted," Ms. Barron said.

"A couple of hotels told me that they had rooms available in October, but nothing until then," said Ms. Fite. The fair runs through Oct. 13.

"One tour company has even chartered a ship and docked it in the harbor and is renting out the cabins," said Patsy Welmaker, owner of Adventure Travel. "I'd say it's more than tight; I'd say it's shut down."

The only way Holiday Travel could guarantee their customers Expo accommodations, said Ms. McMann, "is if we're putting people on a cruise leaving Vancouver. For just a little more you can get a room for a couple of nights."

HOWEVER, THE director of tourism marketing for Expo 86, Ad Van Haaften, said that it really isn't impossible to find accommodations in Vancouver, but it can require some flexible planning.

"We conducted a survey April 18 and found that there were over 1.1 million room nights still available within a 60-minute drive of the Expo grounds," he said in a telephone interview.

ResWest — the official British Columbia accommodation reservation agency — is still averaging 1,100 bookings a day, according to Van Haaften. ResWest handles reservations for hotels, motels, bed-and-breakfast, campgrounds and trailer parks.

British Columbia is also encouraging Vancouver residents "to open their hearts and open their homes," he said, by making rooms in private homes available to tourists through the Expo 86 Guest House program. Currently, 800 homes have signed up, he said, "and that's still growing."

"If there's no flexibility, you might have a problem," Van Haaften said. "If you have to have a specific day or have your heart set on specific accommodations, it may be a problem."

Van Haaften recommended that if travelers have trouble finding accommodations, they should try calling ResWest at (604) 662-3300 between 9 a.m.-1 a.m. CDT. The phone lines are less busy after 5 p.m. CDT, he advised.

Obviously, people considering a visit to the Expo should make reservations as soon as possible, he said, because many more visitors are expected.

"We've sold 13 million tickets so far," Van Haaften said. "From my point of view, of course, that's good, but it will be busy here."

Expo overview

New York Times News Service

On Friday, Britain's most celebrated couple, the Prince and the Princess of Wales, will appear in Vancouver to open Expo 86, the only official world's fair planned in North America for the rest of this century. The show will run until Oct. 13 against a spectacular backdrop of the city's mountains and harbor.

Expo 86 was conceived modestly enough as a transportation exhibit to mark the centennials of the founding of Vancouver and the arrival of the first railroad train across Canada. But it has blossomed into an international extravaganza assembling more than 50 countries, 3 American states, 7 Canadian provinces and several dozen corporate exhibitors under the theme "World In Motion, World in Touch."

Much smaller than Montreal's 1967 exposition, but twice as large as the more recent world's fairs in Knoxville and New Orleans, Expo 86 is sponsored by Canada and hosted by the provincial government of British Columbia. Its scientific theme should not dissuade vacationers because there is something for everyone, from rival U.S. and Soviet space stations to a painstakingly restored 1907 carousel with hand-carved and painted wooden horses.

Even before its opening, Expo 86 looks like it is off to a promising start, with 54 international participants, including Hong Kong and the United Nations. Over 12 million visits have already been sold, and 16 million visits — clicks of the entrance turnstiles — — are expected.

Expo 86 has developed into a showcase for the most sophisticated hardware in the world, with exhibits that dazzle, instruct, edify and just plain amuse. It epitomizes the new trend in international exhibitions, built around a coherent theme, directed toward a smaller audience and run on a strict financial budget that does not stint on value. "You can't persuade nations to go somewhere anymore just for the fun and frolic of the local population," said Patrick Reid, a Canadian diplomat who is the commissioner general of Expo 86. "You've got to have some serious theme."

The exposition covers a total of 173 acres and stretches for two and a half miles along the north and east shoreline of False Creek. Its six zones are so vividly color-coded that it is hard to get lost.

There is no problem getting about. A glistening Swiss-made monorail whisks footsore visitors overhead, stopping at seven stations.

World's fair facts

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

■ When to go. The fair runs from May 2 to Oct. 13. Opening day, weekends and mid-June through mid-August are expected to be the busiest times. Operating hours are daily from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m., though three cabarets will remain open until midnight for "Expo After Hours."

Most exhibits will be open throughout the fair, but certain aspects of the transportation and communication theme will be highlighted for periods of a week or two only. Special exhibits include polar transportation, aviation, modern railways, marine commerce, search and rescue and urban transit. Dates and details can be obtained from Expo.

Vancouver enjoys a mild climate year-round, so you can expect comfortable days and cool evenings for the duration of the fair. The city has a reputation for lots of rainy days, but summer months are the least wet. For sun lovers, Vancouver is ringed with sandy, public beaches, some within walking distance of downtown hotels.

■ What it will cost. A one-day ticket to Expo for adults and children 6 and older is $15 in U.S. currency ($20 Canadian). A three-day ticket during the run of the fair is $34.95 for adults and $17.50 for children 6 to 12 and seniors 65 and older. Until May 1, the three-day ticket can be ordered for $29.95 adults and $14.95, children and seniors. Children 5 and under are admitted free. Tickets can be ordered by phone and charged to VISA, MasterCard or American Express: (604) 660-3976.

The ticket includes admission to the fair site, all exhibits and on-site transportation. The fair's five carnival rides will cost extra, about $2 a ride.

The U.S. dollar is strong compared with the Canadian dollar, which means travel expenses within Canada are something of a bargain.

A Canadian dollar costs about 75 U.S. cents. In Vancouver, you will be quoted hotel rates and read menu prices in Canadian dollars that appear to be about what you might expect to pay for similar dining or lodging in some parts of the United States. However, when translated into U.S. dollars, those prices are about 25 percent less.

'On time, on budget'

Copley News Service

Representatives of Expo 86 in Vancouver, British Columbia, proudly echo the response, "We're on time, on schedule and on budget," for what is expected to be a world showcase.

Using the same philosophy as the Los Angeles Olympics, organizers say they have raised $160 million from corporate sponsors, compared with $4.9 million brought in to the New Orleans fair from corporations two years ago.

The United States, the Soviet Union and China are on the same exposition site for the first time, and Expo 86 has attracted three times as many foreign pavilions as New Orleans' world fair did.

Vancouver is the fourth city to mount a world's fair in five years. There was Knoxville, Tenn., in 1982, New Orleans in 1984 and Tsukuba, Japan, in 1985.

But Vancouver's $1.5 billion Expo 86 is bigger than any of these.

One advantage Canada had in mounting both the 1967 Montreal fair and Vancouver's celebration this year is the tax resources and backing of the Canadian government. Knoxville and New Orleans struggled without direct federal subsidy. The 1984 Los Angeles Olympics were successful because private backing was substituted for the big federal subsidies. Vancouver is using both methods.

Fair representatives say they have an operating budget of $700 million. Of that, $500 million is expected to come back through revenue, and the remainder is expected to come from the British Columbia Lottery Corporation.

Money is being transferred into an Expo fund to cover any deficit that may occur of up to $250 million, according to Ray Orchard, director of lottery grants. Lotto 6/49, as it is called, will continue to collect funds and transfer them to the Expo through 1989 or until the $250 million goal has been met, whichever comes first.

"We suspect it will take three or four years to reach the $250 million commitment," Orchard said.

The exposition site is situated close to the downtown area in what is considered to be the biggest urban renewal project in North America. On its 173 acres, Expo is twice the size of the world's fairs in Knoxville or New Orleans.

EXPO

Canada's major airlines, Air Canada and Canadian Pacific, also offer six-seat gondolas of the sort used at ski resorts. Ferries also ply the waters of False Creek. Such rides are included in the admission ticket.

The exposition tries to appeal on two levels — a general one for tourists and a more detailed one for specialists who can attend seminars on aspects of transportation and communications. Fourteen weeklong programs, run separately from the main fair, will focus on subjects like polar transportation, search and rescue, alternative fuel and power systems and human-powered transportation.

Related activities include a gathering of steam locomotives (May 23 to June 1), a fly-by of DC-3 aircraft (June 7) and a meeting of steam and sailing ships in Vancouver's harbor (July 25).

The organizers insisted that at least a third of each pavilion deal with the Expo theme, but this rule has been applied loosely. Expo 86 could not pass up the chance to display ancient Egyptian artifacts from the traveling Rameses II exhibit that drew crowds in Montreal and elsewhere. The exhibit will stay for the five and a half months of Expo 86, on the rationale that its hieroglyphics represented man's earliest written communications.

Many pavilions are also featuring folklore and ethnic cuisine. The Soviet pavilion is importing a dozen chefs to prepare Russian dishes. The Chinese will have two restaurants. Canada's Northwest Territories pavilion will serve musk-ox burgers and grilled caribou steaks. Besides more than 50 restaurants, there will also be quick cuisine, as the fair euphemistically calls the hot dogs and tacos, dispensed from 40 food carts fixed up like space capsules.

This aerial view of downtown Vancouver, British Columbia, Canada, shows the main Expo 86 site along the north shore of False Creek. The 1986 World Exposition will open Friday.

EXPO 86 marks the first time that the United States, the Soviet Union and China have appeared at the same world-class fair. Their pavilions are expected to draw the biggest crowds, so have been spaced across the fairgrounds to minimize congestion. The American and Soviet pavilions will inevitably draw comparisons because both focus on space exploration.

The U.S. pavilion, which covers 16,140 square feet at the western end of the Expo site, offers the sights and sounds of space travel. It introduces a gallery of American space pioneers and some of their equipment, like an MMU — manned maneuvering unit — the chairlike backpack that astronauts use to steer themselves in space.

From there, visitors move into a room with models of seven manned and unmanned spacecraft used in the space program, while eavesdropping on cross-talk recorded between astronauts in flight and the mission control center. The models include the space shuttle Columbia, but not its sister shuttle Challenger, destroyed in the recent disaster. "We will handle it in an appropriate way, with an acknowledgement of the events," said Dale Morrison, the U.S. pavilion's commissioner general.

After a six-minute film taking a shuttle from liftoff to its arrival at a space station, visitors will emerge to view a one-fifteenth scale model of a prototype space station due to be orbited in 1992 suspended in a diorama of a darkened room. They can walk through two mockups of the space station's command module, including its work area, exercise bicycle and sleeping harnesses.

THE EXHIBIT finishes by explaining the reasons for a manned space station, including its applications for manufacturing medicine and semiconductor chips in conditions of weightlessness.

The larger Soviet pavilion at the center of the fairgrounds, covering 26,910 square feet, celebrates the 25th anniversary of manned space flight with a 49-foot-high statue of Yuri A. Gagarin, the first man to orbit the Earth. Visitors can walk through a 108-foot-long mockup of a 35-ton Soviet space station and see a working laboratory. Other displays include models of the world's largest nuclear cargo icebreaker, satellite communications and the mass transport system of the Ukrainian city of Kiev.

The Chinese pavilion at the eastern end of the fairground, distinguished by a painted arch modeled after a gate at Peking's Summer Palace, will also display models of a space rocket and communications satellite. But visitors will probably gravitate to quainter reminders of two milleniums of transportation and communications in China, beginning with a model bronze chariot over 2,000 years old unearthed near Xian. They can crowd into a copy of an old Chinese boat and simulate a filmed trip though the famed Three Gorges of the Yangtze River. Other exhibits include a model of the Great Wall and a computer that transmits in Chinese characters.

The British pavilion will fascinate car buffs. In a setting of an English market town, it displays the latest Silver Spirit edition of the luxury Rolls-Royce, selling for about $120,000, as well as a new Jaquar XJS Cabriolet convertible being introduced to North America. There is also the Thrust II racing car that set the world's land speed record, over 633 miles an hour, in Nevada in 1983.

FROM A mockup of a helicopter landing pad in the North Sea, visitors can watch a display of air and sea rescue equipment in a simulated storm. Afterward, they can dine at a British restaurant on bangers and mash, as sausage and mashed potatoes are called, or other pub food or step up to a bar that dispenses 40 brands of Scotch malt whisky.

The Japanese pavilion, devoted to the changing face of transportation, features Japan's HSST (High Speed Surface Transport) passenger train, which floats on an electromagnetic cushion. Though it has reached speeds of 200 miles an hour, the train will carry Expo visitors at 25 miles an hour around a quarter-mile track. There is also a small Japanese garden where visitors can escape from the future. France's pavilion offers a 427-foot-long ride on the Soule people-mover system, which will be introduced at airports. It is cable-driven, with cabins on steel wheels pulled forward and backward along a single track.

Developing countries contribute their own experiences. Kenya's zebra-striped pavilion, for instance, will show a filmed balloon tour of the game parks. Czechoslovakia, known for its audio-visual creativity, will put visitors in the streets of Prague. Switzerland's pavilion, instantly recognizable, is draped with a wristwatch over 80 feet high. "The big thing is audience involvement, and some pavilions do it splendidly," said Reid, the commissioner general of Expo. "There is literally something for everybody."

The main Canadian pavilion is at Canada Place, which is but a four-minute ride by free rapid transit SkyTrain across the city, or a more leisurely 20-minute walk through Vancouver's Chinatown district.

Built in the shape of a ship three city blocks long, with an opaque woven fiberglass roof simulating five modern sails, it houses what may be the fair's most elaborate exhibit, requiring a minimum of three hours to visit properly.

After passing through four theaters that define Canada — sometimes drolly in a "goose and beaver" skit, sometimes with 3,000 images of Canadians on 14 screens in eight minutes — the visitor emerges into the Pop Art ambiance of the great hall, with displays ranging from a Haida Indian war canoe to a prosthetic arm that folds a piece of paper into a glider and sails it into the air. A "vidiwall" shows off Canadian transportation on a screen of 108 television tubes that project images synchronized by computer.

Arts to take world stage

Copley News Service

When the lights dim and the first expectant hush descends over Vancouver theaters on Friday, audiences will see the first of a galaxy of the world's finest performers take the stage.

The summer-long Royal Bank and Expo 86 World Festival promises visitors a celebration of the best of the performing arts.

For its producer, Ann Farris Darling, the World Festival has been a labor of love. Traveling around the globe, Farris Darling has established a not-to-be-missed lineup of exceptional artistic offerings.

"The World Festival is a galaxy of hundreds of performers from our participating countries," she said. "Music and movement transcend all barriers ... the total effect is joyous, imaginative, universal."

Farris Darling's major coup is the signing of Leningrad's Kirov Ballet. Alma mater for such ballet superstars as Balanchine, Nureyev and Baryshnikov, the Kirov is making its first North American appearance in more than two decades. Its six-performance visit, May 14-19 at the Queen Elizabeth Theater, will be one of the gala events that launch the festival. The company will dance "Swan Lake" and "Knight in the Tiger's Skin."

Dance lovers also will be delighted by the State Theater of Heidelberg's extraordinary choreographic theater production of "Sylvia Plath" in May. Britain's Royal Ballet and the Royal Thai Ballet perform in July. And in August, three Canadian companies, the National Ballet, the Royal Winnipeg Ballet and Les Grands Ballets Canadians, take the stage for an unforgettable gala.

The contemporary dance scene is well represented by five Canadian companies performing new and specially commissioned works.

For music lovers, the World Festival offers a true banquet of sound. Maestro Mario Bernardi and 16 great international singers join the Vancouver Symphony for the spectacular May 2 Opening Gala. The brilliant soprano Dame Kiri Te Kanawa and British mezzo soprano Dame Janet Baker grace the symphony later in the month with the acclaimed American soprano Jessye Norman headlining the World Festival's grand finale.

Opera is on hand with the Vancouver Opera's production of Lucien Pintilie's "Carmen" while the two-week World Drum Festival, featuring 100 percussionists from 25 nations, will culminate in a smashing, four-performance finale on the Expo site. Uptown, the bright, brassy Tony Award-winning Broadway musical "42nd Street"' will tap its magic way into the hearts of its audience.

A wealth of innovative World Festival shows include a lavish, Japanese all-male version of "Medea," the Beijing People's Art Theater's "Teahouse" and the shattering story of "Albertine, in Five Times" by Canada's leading playwright Michael Tremblay.

For a full-color brochure describing the various performances and a flyer with the latest dates scheduled, write: World Festival/EXPO INFO, P.O. Box 1800, Vancouver, British Columbia, Canada V6C 3A2.

■ Where to exchange U.S. dollars. United States currency is widely accepted in the Vancouver area, which is just 30 miles north of the Washington state border, but you probably will get a better exchange rate at banks and other currency exchange offices.

There are exchange booths at Seattle and Vancouver airports as well as on the Expo site.

■ Where to stay. Accommodations range from luxury, water-view hotels at $100 a night or more to budget motels, bed-and-breakfast inns, campgrounds, youth hostels and rooms in private homes.

Away from city center, the prices drop considerably. Vancouver has an excellent bus and ferry system and a new rapid-transit line, which makes getting into the city fairly convenient. Bus fares are $1 Canadian (approximately 75 cents U.S.).

For a $5 service charge, ResWest, British Columbia's official accommodation agency, can book lodgings for you at hotels, motels, bed-and-breakfast inns, campgrounds, trailer parks and hostels.

If there's no space at any of these commercial facilities, visitors can be placed in private Vancouver homes at a rate of $35 for a couple and $5 each for children. For information or a reservation: (604) 662-3300.

FAIR

The fair — designed to handle as many as 130,000 visitors per day — will leave the city a convention center, the B.C. Pavilion, a golf ball-shape Expo Center and a site for what is envisioned as a 30-year expansion of Vancouver's downtown.

The modular pavilions that the more than 50 nations occupy will be dismantled and offered to provincial cities as civic centers.

Fairgoers are expected to travel by land, air and water to attend Expo 86 — just 31 miles north of the Washington border — which has been dubbed "World in Motion, World in Touch."

Once there, fairgoers will find many options for free transportation. A 3.4-mile-long monorail will make 20-minute circuits of the exposition site. Two sky rides, with six-passenger gondolas, will provide a view to other parts of the site. Seven free ferries will serve the 2.5-mile Expo 86 shoreline, dropping passengers at three stops on site. Vancouver's new rapid transit train, called the "Tomorrow Train," will carry fairgoers between the main site on False Creek and the $144 million Canada Pavilion on Burrard Inlet.

Expo 86 is trying to avoid past mistakes. Officials believe its marketing and advertising is far superior to New Orleans', and they boast of a bevy of biggests and bests that makes it hard to resist the 165-day birthday party.

Vancouver: More than exposition

By JAMES T. YENCKEL
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

You know a city is special when you can sun on a sandy Pacific Coast beach only a few minutes from your downtown hotel — and go for a summer swim, too, though the water is a bit nippy. You know it is even more special when, at that beach, your eyes can climb the forest-green slopes of soaring Grouse Mountain, not much farther away, and easily spot the winter ski resort at its 4,100-foot summit.

Ocean beaches on its doorstep and ski mountains in its back yard: Vancouver, at the southernmost corner of British Columbia, is a nature lover's dream. It's an outdoors city that seems to radiate a robust vitality, and the mountain air is clean and spiced with a salty tang. An abundance of outdoor pleasures — sailing, fishing, hiking — has fostered an easy-going informality; Vancouver is as laid back as California to the south. One of its urban beaches, hidden below a cliff, is bathing-suit optional.

Of course, the summer attraction that's expected to draw millions of visitors to Vancouver is Expo 86, Canada's world's fair. It promises to be a first-rate show — a mix of space-age exhibits and plenty of fun. But when the tourists return home, what they remember most may be the city itself, a scenic dazzler.

FOR VANCOUVER is indeed a city of uncommon beauty, rivaling Seattle and San Francisco as the West Coast's (or for that matter, the world's) most eye-appealing setting. The views from almost anywhere — and that includes the colorful fairgrounds on False Creek — are superb.

To the immediate north of the city, just across Burrard Inlet, are the Coast Mountains. They rise sharply from the sea like a protective wall, marking the dividing line between urbanization and a vast wild realm beyond. Much of the year the closest peaks are tipped with snow, though Vancouver itself enjoys a surprisingly mild climate despite its northern location and gets only infrequent winter snows.

To the west, like a wide, windswept lake, is the Strait of Georgia, Vancouver's passage to the Pacific. Protected by the mountain-fringed island of Vancouver on the other side, it is a weekend sailor's delight, its shoreline dotted with inviting coves and fishing villages. (Both the city and the island opposite are named Vancouver, which can be confusing to newcomers.) Downtown Vancouver, the city, is built on a stubby peninsula that juts right into the strait, looking out onto water on three sides.

At times the harbor sea lanes seem almost as busy as city streets: Dozens of sailboats skip before freighters bound for the Orient; the Seabus, a commuter ferry, shuttles back and forth across Burrard Inlet (a fine sightseeing trip); tugs tow floating corrals of logs to the sawmill; windsurfers dart like rainbow-hued gnats beyond the beaches, and every once in a while a seaplane from Victoria, the province's quaint capital on Vancouver Island, comes splashing in for a salty landing.

But Vancouver's beauty is not only in distant views. Its many parks are gorgeous, kept lushly green year-round by what residents admit is a sometimes soggy sky. Winter days often are overcast, and drizzles can last for days. Summers, fortunately, are sunnier, though Expo visitors should take umbrellas. When the clouds lift, the city sparkles with a wonderful rain-washed freshness.

THE MOST famous of Vancouver's parks is Stanley Park, a 1,000-acre hilly preserve of Douglas firs and red cedars that begins just beyond the West End, a classy downtown neighborhood of high-rise apartments. (Thanks in part to these city dwellers, Vancouver's nightlife bustles.)

Miles of trails cut through Stanley Park's woods — one route takes you by a cluster of authentic totem poles — but perhaps the best pathway is along the seven-mile-long sea wall that circles the park, skirting three good swimming beaches. On an early-morning walk, you forget the city, hidden by the trees, and imagine (when the joggers have disappeared ahead) that you are hiking along some remote shore in the wilds to the north.

Vancouver is a young city, officially just 100 years old this year. Originally a logging and mining village at the mouth of the Fraser River, it became in 1887 the western terminus of the trans-Canada railway. As a result, it has grown into one of the busiest port cities in North America, shipping much of the grain from Canada's midwest to foreign markets. Expo 86 is the city's big centennial birthday party.

It was named for Capt. George Vancouver, a British explorer who claimed the area for Britain in 1792, but he only stuck around briefly, leaving the Capilano and Squamish Indians in peace.

NOT UNTIL 35 years later did the famous Hudson's Bay Co. establish the first settlement, a fur-trading post about 30 miles up the Fraser River from the future city site. But in 1858, gold was discovered on the Fraser, and thousands of prospectors flocked to the region.

Small farming and lumbering settlements sprang up, and coal was found near what is now Stanley Park. The sheltered bay on the park's northern shore is still known as Coal Harbour. In 1867, a frontier character by the name of John Deighton — he was called "Gassy Jack" because he talked so much — opened a saloon, which soon grew, so the story goes, into the raucous community of Gastown, now considered the oldest part of Vancouver.

A life-sized statue of Gassy Jack-dressed in long coat, formal vest and wide, floppy hat-stands in the heart of old Gastown, which has been given a Victorian restoration complete with cobblestone streets and a steam-operated town clock that whistles every quarter hour. Jack appears a little sad, and you can't really blame him. A saloon keeper, he spends his days looking out not upon one of the neighborhood's pubs but only the ice-cream parlor across the street.

Eventually, Gastown was renamed Granville, thought more appropriate to a growing community. A few years later, in 1886, it became Vancouver, an even more prestigious name selected by the Canadian Pacific Railway. The first train from the East reached the new town the following year. Today, a century later, Vancouver is a modern city of 414,000 inhabitants within a metropolitan region that totals about 1.2 million — the commercial and industrial headquarters of British Columbia.

EXPO 86 promises exotic foods from many of the 54 nations that are exhibiting at the fair, but outside its gates a visitor will find an equally diverse selection, evidence that Vancouver's youth does not lack sophistication. Part of the reason is the city's ethnic mixture. So many European-style cafes, delis and pastry shops (Mozart Konditorei is an excellent example) line downtown Robson Street that it is called "Robsonstrasse."

Only a few blocks east is Vancouver's large and bustling Chinatown, where every third doorway seems to open onto a restaurant. In nearby Gastown, you can find authentic French cafe's, such as La Brasserie de l'Horloge (across Water Street from the steam clock), reflecting the French side of Canada's dual French and British origins. The Teahouse Restaurant at Ferguson Point in Stanley Park is very properly British, and the sea view is excellent.

FOR ALL its attributes, Vancouver sees itself as still an undiscovered city, as unfamiliar to fellow Canadians as it is to its American neighbors — though residents point out, somewhat smugly, that Canadians who move to Vancouver from colder, less-scenic provinces back East seldom ever want to return to their former homes.

Fair lights up 'After Hours'

Copley News Service

When the sun goes down, Expo After Hours lights up. A nightly fireworks and laser show signals the closing of the pavilions at 10 p.m. and the beginning of Expo nightlife.

Located in the B.C. Pavilion complex, Pacific Station's lively nightlife area is a cabaret-hopper's delight. There is a hot spot for everyone in Canada's largest entertainment complex. Here, three cabarets express the theme of transportation on land, sea and air with whimsical environments.

Imagine sitting above the clouds eating your meal on the wing of an airplane. For those with a sense of adventure, the intimate 200-seat variety cabaret, with its aviation decor, showcases the newest, most progressive vaudeville performers found anywhere.

By day, a variety of jugglers, mimes, ventriloquists and innovative comedy acts entertain the entire family. In the evenings, the cabaret turns to dinner theater and takes off as the raucous Second City comedy troupe presents their unique brand of social satire Tuesdays through Sundays for the duration of Expo.

After hours, the Pacific Station is the place to catch the newest in late-night performance artists.

The second Expo cabaret presents round-the-clock entertainment in the tropical atmosphere of an ocean cruise. In the afternoon, the music is light and breezy. For the dinner hour, the program runs from easy-listening to rhythm and blues. Then guests can rock after dark to the best dance bands around.

A third cabaret has room for 700 fun-seekers. It's a 1980s flashback in time to the '50s and '60s, with a menu full of burgers, milk shakes and banana splits. Family entertainment is scheduled throughout the day. At night, the lights go down and the party heats up! Grab your blue suede shoes and get ready to move

Canadians say Expo unlikely terrorist target

From Staff Reports

The major reason Midlanders are interested in Expo 86 is that Vancouver is considered much safer than Europe, an informal survey of local travel agencies found.

In another recent random survey conducted by the Reporter-Telegram, only 3 of 14 Midlanders said that they would consider vacationing overseas. Most said they feared overseas travel for safety reasons.

On the one hand, "Canada is being perceived as a desirable destination by Americans. We're friendly, close, safe, and we speak the same language," Andre Pascal, consul and trade commissioner for the Canadian Consulate General's office, told the Los Angeles Times recently.

On the other hand, Expo 86 could possibly be a promising target for terrorism. After all, some prominent international figures will be attending the fair.

Prince Charles and Princess Diana will officially open the 1986 World Exposition Friday and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher is scheduled to arrive in Vancouver for a visit to the Expo on July 12.

The pavilions of many of the 54 countries participating in the world's fair could also be tempting targets for striking symbolic blows against certain nations.

"We don't see a problem," said Ad Van Haaften, director of tourism marketing for Expo 86. "Canada is a very neutral country politically; not a very high profile."

Just in case, he added, "We have all the security measures in place."

BLAINE, Wash. (UPI) — The first glimpse of America for thousands of tourists who flock to Vancouver's Expo 86 will be Blaine, Wash., a little border town that is expecting an economic boom — and a crime wave — because of the event.

Blaine, on Boundary Bay, is where Canadians go to escape Sunday "blue laws" restricting liquor sales. And beginning May 2, when Expo 86 opens its gates, the town hopes to find itself pleasantly swamped with Expo tourists and their dollars.

"We think there will be thousands who come here or go on to Bellingham just to say they've been here in the United States," said Chuck Cavanaugh, owner of a travel agency and president of the Blaine Chamber of Commerce.

"What we hope to do is present a real, small-town community — gungho, small-town America," he said. "We want to make an impression."

Cavanaugh says the town of 2,500 will dress up its streets and offer foreigners a slice of "Main Street U.S.A." Business people, who have been hurt in recent years by the plunging value of the Canadian dollar, are hoping for a 30 percent to 50 percent upturn in business during Expo.

BUT TOURISTS who whiz north on Interstate-5 from California, Oregon and Washington will pose a mountainous headache for customs and immigration officials at the border and local law enforcement in Blaine.

The border crossing at Blaine — normally the nation's third busiest exit-entry point — could move into first place during the six months of Expo. Officials estimate customs and immigration inspectors will handle an extra 1 million to 4 million people traveling to Expo from the United States or recrossing the border after a brief visit to Washington.

"We have a chance at being No. 1," said Tom Eberhardt, the port of entry director for Blaine and a nearby commercial crossing. "Our biggest worry will be people."

"We will have tens of thousands of people applying for admission to the United States for the first time," said Tom Shelton, assistant chief U.S. Customs inspector at the Blaine crossing. "Some of them won't be used to our questions or understand why we want to check their cars. They're going to ask us if we have a right to do that and then say, 'Where's a lawyer.'"

The customs deparment has hired 35 fresh recruits to work as inspectors during Expo's six-month run. Immigration also is beefing up its border staff.

"The new people are going to have to learn in a hurry," said custom's Shelton. "The experienced people here have already discovered that the nicest person sitting there in his car talking to you can be lying."

SHELTON AND EBERHARDT say customs also is gearing up to combat an expected "run" on the border by smugglers, dope peddlers and those hoping for illegal entry to the United States. "We will be a target of opportunity for the smuggler," Shelton said.

James "Butch" Hinchey, Blaine's chief of police, contemplates with some dread the thousands who will turn off I-5 and roll into the main street of Blaine.

"Wherever you have a large movement of people, you also get a movement of criminals," Hinchey said, adding his seven-man department has already recorded an upswing in crime and nuisance calls.

The town already gets more than its share of people with mental problems, he said.

"The border draws them here. Some people have stepped out of reality and believe they can come here, cross the border into Canada and walk right into the wilderness," Hinchey said.

"Of course, Canada doesn't want them. They turn them back at the ports of entry and they drift into town here and we have to take care of them. For a town our size, we have way more than the usual load of mentally ill people just wandering around not knowing what they're doing."

The chief said he supports the business community's attempt to open the town to visitors. But he admits Blaine may be caught between wanting to lure tourists and wanting protection from them.

"We're trying to keep an upbeat attitude for Expo because it could have some beneficial effects for us down the road," said Hinchey. "But some days more than others it is hard to stay upbeat."

WASHINGTON STATE economic forecasters say economic impact in Washington from Expo could total $60 million.

The latest estimates on Expo attendance project the fair could draw up to 16 million "visits." Based on the Vancouver Expo committee's average of three visits per person, officials believe the exposition will attract at least 7 million people.

Cavanaugh believes Blaine can only gain.

"We're really focusing on the folks returning from Expo. We want them to remember us and come back sometime," he said.

Blaine, Wash., prepares for Expo 86 crowds

BLAINE, Wash. (UPI) — The first glimpse of America for thousands of tourists who flock to Vancouver's Expo 86 will be Blaine, Wash., a little border town that is expecting an economic boom — and a crime wave — because of the event.

Blaine, on Boundary Bay, is where Canadians go to escape Sunday "blue laws" restricting liquor sales. And beginning May 2, when Expo 86 opens its gates, the town hopes to find itself pleasantly swamped with Expo tourists and their dollars.

"We think there will be thousands who come here or go on to Bellingham just to say they've been here in the United States," said Chuck Cavanaugh, owner of a travel agency and president of the Blaine Chamber of Commerce.

"What we hope to do is present a real, small-town community — gungho, small-town America," he said. "We want to make an impression."

Cavanaugh says the town of 2,500 will dress up its streets and offer foreigners a slice of "Main Street U.S.A." Business people, who have been hurt in recent years by the plunging value of the Canadian dollar, are hoping for a 30 percent to 50 percent upturn in business during Expo.

BUT TOURISTS who whiz north on Interstate-5 from California, Oregon and Washington will pose a mountainous headache for customs and immigration officials at the border and local law enforcement in Blaine.

The border crossing at Blaine — normally the nation's third busiest exit-entry point — could move into first place during the six months of Expo. Officials estimate customs and immigration inspectors will handle an extra 1 million to 4 million people traveling to Expo from the United States or recrossing the border after a brief visit to Washington.

"We have a chance at being No. 1," said Tom Eberhardt, the port of entry director for Blaine and a nearby commercial crossing. "Our biggest worry will be people."

"We will have tens of thousands of people applying for admission to the United States for the first time," said Tom Shelton, assistant chief U.S. Customs inspector at the Blaine crossing. "Some of them won't be used to our questions or understand why we want to check their cars. They're going to ask us if we have a right to do that and then say, 'Where's a lawyer.'"

The customs deparment has hired 35 fresh recruits to work as inspectors during Expo's six-month run. Immigration also is beefing up its border staff.

"The new people are going to have to learn in a hurry," said custom's Shelton. "The experienced people here have already discovered that the nicest person sitting there in his car talking to you can be lying."

SHELTON AND EBERHARDT say customs also is gearing up to combat an expected "run" on the border by smugglers, dope peddlers and those hoping for illegal entry to the United States. "We will be a target of opportunity for the smuggler," Shelton said.

James "Butch" Hinchey, Blaine's chief of police, contemplates with some dread the thousands who will turn off I-5 and roll into the main street of Blaine.

"Wherever you have a large movement of people, you also get a movement of criminals," Hinchey said, adding his seven-man department has already recorded an upswing in crime and nuisance calls.

The town already gets more than its share of people with mental problems, he said.

"The border draws them here. Some people have stepped out of reality and believe they can come here, cross the border into Canada and walk right into the wilderness," Hinchey said.

"Of course, Canada doesn't want them. They turn them back at the ports of entry and they drift into town here and we have to take care of them. For a town our size, we have way more than the usual load of mentally ill people just wandering around not knowing what they're doing."

The chief said he supports the business community's attempt to open the town to visitors. But he admits Blaine may be caught between wanting to lure tourists and wanting protection from them.

"We're trying to keep an upbeat attitude for Expo because it could have some beneficial effects for us down the road," said Hinchey. "But some days more than others it is hard to stay upbeat."

WASHINGTON STATE economic forecasters say economic impact in Washington from Expo could total $60 million.

The latest estimates on Expo attendance project the fair could draw up to 16 million "visits." Based on the Vancouver Expo committee's average of three visits per person, officials believe the exposition will attract at least 7 million people.

Cavanaugh believes Blaine can only gain.

"We're really focusing on the folks returning from Expo. We want them to remember us and come back sometime," he said.

PLANTS IN THE HOME

Moses-in-the-cradle boat-shaped

BY ELVIN MCDONALD

Dear Elvin: Do you know anything about a plant called "Moses-in-the-cradle"?

On a recent visit to the Bahamas I saw it used as a ground cover in the idyllic Garden of the Groves, located in Freeport on Grand Bahama Island.

Could I grow one strictly as a house plant and, if so, is there a mail source? — Signed High and Dry in Kansas

Dear High and Dry: In so many words you have described the growing conditions needed to produce thrifty specimens of Rhoeo spathacea with strongly two-colored olive and burgundy leaves and an abundance of small white flowers borne in boat-shaped bracts — these the source of its popular name.

The answer to your first question is yes, if you have a sunny, warm window garden.

In spring and summer, water freely and fertilize lightly, alternating a balanced (20-20-20) and a flower-boosting formula (15-30-15).

In fall and winter, during the short days of the year, and cooler average temperatures, water less and don't fertilize.

Given plenty of sun and warmth, rhoeo will grow in almost any well-drained soil.

Mine are in my usual mix of about equal parts soil, sand and peat moss.

Following winter it is usual for rhoeo's leaf tips to have died back a third or more.

Trim off the brown parts with scissors; I do this quickly by blunt-cutting rather than the sort of careful shaping one does when trimming only the browned edges of something like corn plant dracaena.

In this case the plant is going to rapidly produce new leaves that will completely obscure those produced in the previous season.

Rhoeo cuttings root easily in spring, and offsets as well may be removed from the parent.

If you have cuttings, remove lower leaves carefully so as not to break the stem, which will be inserted 2 inches deep in moist potting soil or special rooting medium such as equal parts vermiculite, perlite and peat moss.

Cuttings of rhoeo as well as other plants fare better if excess leafage is removed — cut off about half of each mature leaf and remove any flowers or developing buds.

Moses-in-the-Cradle

As a window plant I would set rhoeo in a 6- to 8-inch azalea pot or bulb pan (both relatively short and wide compared to a standard pot) and leave it be.

A variegated form having yellow striping through the olive and burgundy leaves is seen occasionally; it needs even more sunny warmth to bring out strongest coloration.

Today's Bulletin Offer: The soil pH preferences in alpha sequence by common and botanical names for more than 2,000 plants.

For your set of notebook sheets send $2 cash or $2.25 check handling charge and a long SASE with "pH" written on the back flap to Elvin McDonald Reader Service, 225 E. 57th St., New York, N.Y. 10022.

Q. I grew a perennial called lisianthus last summer, but they died after making a beautiful show in my garden for many weeks.

Local nursery growers had the same experience.

Perhaps more water was needed as Florida is a dreadful place for flowers of this type, with the heat and spasmodic rainfalls — but I keep trying rather than giving in to zinnias and prickly pear cactus.

A. Lisianthus is so new on the scene we're all still experimenting.

I bought six flowering plants last spring and managed to bring three through the winter in a moderate greenhouse.

On two of the plants little pruning was done other than to remove dried leaves and flowers; the third was cut nearly to the ground in autumn and it has produced strong new basal shoots, by far the most promising for the coming season.

The American native wildflower known as Eustoma Russelianus, from which the hybrid lisianthus have been produced, is accustomed to fierce summer heat but in a considerably drier atmosphere than we associate with Florida, or Long Island for that matter, which is where I garden.

This tells me to be sure the roots never stand in water and to situate the plants where there is ample room for air to circulate freely. Promptly remove any discolored growth — leaves, flowers or stems.

Go easy on high-nitrogen fertilizers; opt instead for very dilute applications of 5-10-5 early in the season, then 0-6-5 or 1-6-5 at the onset of flowering.

One more thing about the lisianthus: I suspect it is at best a short-lived perennial.

We are likely to be more pleased if we accept it as is and start anew from seeds each year, or from purchased stock at planting-out time.

Q. What care is needed by the fiddleleaf fig, Ficus lyrata? Mine is in a bright window but receives no direct sun.

A. Maintain the soil between nicely moist and slightly on the dry side.

Give the ficus a quarter turn in the same direction each time you water, to encourage symmetrical habit.

Sponge the leaf surfaces clean once a month, or as necessary to keep them naturally shiny and dust-free.

Q. Why do the leaf tips of my gardenia turn black?

A. You are letting the soil be too dry between waterings, a habit that will weaken the gardenia plant until eventually it dies. Apply lukewarm water to the soil surface until it begins to drain into the saucer; allow to soak 30 minutes or so and if all the water from the saucer is absorbed, apply another cup or two. It is imperative that the entire root ball be saturated. Water again when soil at the surface feels barely damp, but before it is actually dry.

ASK DR. RUTH

Marriage untied sister's tongue

BY DR. RUTH WESTHEIMER

Q. My sister was tongue-tied shy before she married this nerd she calls a husband, but now she is The Mouth about private sexual matters, especially at the dinner table. Me it only offends, but it makes our mother upset. How do I shut her up?

A. Tell you sister, "Look, I am not interested in your sexual exploits. I don't care how many orgasms you have a night or how many erections your husband has. Please keep that information to yourself."

You can add that forcing such talk on a parent is gross insensitivity bordering on sadism. Maybe your sister is a little unhinged by her new sexual release and can't stop babbling or she feels free, free, free of all those old parental taboos.

But there is no excuse for such abusive and vindictive treatment of her mother. Respect for the parent's ideas, no matter how dated they may seem to a young person, is still required. Especially in the presence of the parent.

Simply state your case to your sister without getting drawn into a battle. You may expect this issue to come up again, at best to die down gradually, because repetition is the rule in family life. But you have put the ball in her court, and she knows she is being deliberately obnoxious if she continues.

Take your mother aside and say, "Sis doesn't mean harm. She just has to grow up about being married." The fact that you are making peace will help mend her picture of her family.

Q. My fiancee and I have been living together two years. He is less interested in lovemaking than I am. Once or twice a week is all he wants, not nearly enough for me. Will this change after we are married?

A. Your question makes more sense than it seems to at first. Fear of impregnating you at this point could be holding him back, and might be less inhibiting if you were married. But maybe that is not really why your sexual appetities are unequal. It often happens that couples disagree about how often sex should light up their dwelling, though in most ways the relationship is satisfying.

A solution commonly recommended by sex therapists is that the couple have sex as often as the more desirous partner wants it, but without the other partner feeling obliged to take part fully every time.

One may give pleasure to the other without trying for the heights of pleasure himself. Or herself. Perhaps you and your fiancee can strike up a bargain like that. But don't expect marriage to change anything basically amiss in your relationship.

Marriage is an opportunity for great happiness when the couple is truly loving, but it is not a cure for an ill-made relationship.

Q. Although I gratify myself almost daily, I have not had sex with a woman for four years. I have read that abstinence can lead to a low sperm count. What is the truth about this?

A. Do you call that abstinence? I think your main problem lies in not getting out and meeting women. For that you need to join a social group of some kind, or perhaps, to get a little professional counseling about dealing with other people.

Get in touch with a human sexuality clinic through the teaching hospital nearest to you. The same clinic will recommend a counselor and arrange for you to get a sperm count done for your reassurance, since your sort of "inactivity" does not seem likely to lower it.

Q. My boyfriend told me that you recommend a certain book to women who want to learn about having full sexual pleasure, but he couldn't remember the title. What book was that?

A. "For Yourself" by Lonnie Barbach is the book. I have been recommending it for years on radio and TV, and I'm glad to recommend it in print for you and every interested woman. You have thoughtful boyfriend, even if his memory is faulty. So who is perfect?

Q. Before I get seriously involved with a new guy, can I ask him to bring me the results of a blood test? Or would that turn him off?

A. Get to know him well enough to ask for that without feeling embarrassed or worrying about giving offense. In a good relationship, it's a reasonable request before having sex.

Pakistan frowns on girl watching

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — The coming of spring in Pakistan is marked by brilliant flowers, clear blue skies — and a new police crackdown on "Eve teasing."

Eve teasing or "Eve watching" is watching or trying to meet women, and both are illegal in Pakistan. Watching or approaching a woman violates Islamic dictates on modesty and morality and is a vice that cannot be tolerated in the eyes of the government.

Boys may be boys, but trying to pick up girls is going too far and the authorities will not put up with such a challenge to public morality, said one official, who like others was reluctant to discuss the subject.

Pakistani newspapers from time to time carry little articles buried on their inside pages reporting that another batch of youths had been rounded up for girl watching. The reports tend to pop up with the coming of spring's fine weather.

"New town police arrested 18 boys for teasing girl students on 6th Road where the Rawalpindi Women's College is located," reads a typical laconic report.

Plain clothes police and private guards can often be seen standing outside girls' schools in Islamabad at dismissal time to ensure there are no boys hanging around. Young men trying to loiter nearby are chased off or sometimes arrested.

Girl watching violates a section of the prevention of public disorder act and is punishable by up to six months' imprisonment and a $6 fine, police officials said. Prison sentences generally are reserved for persistent offenders, they said.

Pakistani schools are sexually segregated and dating or any social interaction between young men and women is virtually unknown in the strict Islamic nation where most marriages are arranged by parents. Men and women generally wear baggy pajama suits and even a married couple would never dream of holding hands or touching each other in public.

The government of President Gen. Mohammad Zia-ul-haq is determined to build a religious state based on Islamic teachings. "Islamization" has stressed female modesty and put pressure on women to wear veils.

Pakistanis are strongly divided on laws on such things as girl watching, with opponents saying the government has no business regulating morality. The Eve teasing prohibitions are singled out for ridicule by such critics.

It is just as easy to find Pakistanis who strongly support Islamization and view Eve teasing as a social and moral danger that must be repressed.

"We are an Islamic people so we don't like coeducation or anything like that," said a devout Moslem merchant.

Islamic teachings warn against most contact between men and women, the merchant said. Not even a brother and a sister should be left alone in a room, he said.

"We like this very much. These restrictions are very good."

CAN YOU IDENTIFY CLASSIC T.V. THEME SONGS?

GAME RULES:

The Midland Reporter-Telegram, A.M. 1510 KMND Memory Music T.V. Game is based on skill in identifying (6) T.V. show theme songs each week. There will be 12 weekly games beginning Monday, April 7th and ending Friday, June 27th. There will be weekly 1st, 2nd, and 3rd place winners.

Two excerpts from each of the (6) T.V. show theme songs will be broadcast over A.M. 1510 KMND each week. Excerpts will be broadcast at least six, times daily between 6:00 AM and 6:00 PM Monday through Friday. Each show's two excerpts will be broadcast at least twice during the week, with both excerpts from each theme (12 total) being broadcast at least once by 6:00 PM Thursday of each week.

Excerpts will be numbered one through six. The answer (the title of the show) must be printed or typed on the correspondingly numbered line on the official Midland Reporter-Telegram A.M. 1510 KMND Memory Music TV Game Entry Form. Each week's official entry form will be published Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday in the Midland Reporter-Telegram. Hand drawn facsimiles of the entire entry form will be acceptable, BUT MACHINE DUPLICATED COPIES ARE PROHIBITED.

CONTESTANTS MAY ENTER ONLY ONCE PER WEEK. The weekly game number must be marked on the lower left of the envelope on the address side. Envelopes must be postmarked by midnight Friday of each week. NO POSTAGE MACHINE CANCELLED ENVELOPES WILL BE ACCEPTED. ONLY ENVELOPES BEARING THE CORRECT POSTAGE AND CANCELLED BY THE U.S. POSTAL SERVICE OR ENTRIES HAND DELIVERED TO THE CONTEST ADDRESS BY 6:00 AM SATURDAY WILL BE ACCEPTED.

The weekly first prize will be awarded to the entrant with the most or all (6) TV shows correctly identified. In the case that more than one entrant has all the shows correctly identified a drawing will be held. 2nd and 3rd will be awarded to the two entrants with the most correct answers respectively. Again in the case more than one entrant having identified all (6) TV shows, a drawing will be held to determine 2nd and 3rd place winners.

The correct answer and the theme song itself along with the two excerpts will be played back twice on A.M. 1510 KMND Saturday morning between 6:00 A.M. and noon. Answers will also be published in Sunday's Midland Reporter Telegram. Weekly winners will be announced each Wednesday afternoon by A.M. 1510 KMND and in the Midland Reporter-Telegram.

It is not necessary to purchase the Midland Reporter-Telegram to play the game. Copies of the MRT are available for free examination at the Midland Reporter-Telegram, 201 East Illinois and the Midland County Public Library.

All winners must sign a release form acknowledging that both the Midland Reporter-Telegram and A.M. 1510 KMND shall have the right to publish, publicize and broadcast his/her name, picture, voice and the fact that he/she won a prize. If the winner is a minor, a parent or guardian must sign a minor's release form prior to the prize being awarded. Winners are responsible for all taxes incurred on prizes.

Judge's decisions will be final in any interpretation of the rules of this game. Employees of the Midland Reporter-Telegram, Bakcor Broadcasting, Inc. and members of their immediate families are ineligible. The Grand Prize, a cruise on The Mississippi or Delta Queen Steamboat is worth up to $4,000. Does not include bar tab, shore tours or gift shop purchases. It may be used at your convenience based on a 30 day space available basis. It includes round trip airfare to New Orleans.

The winner of the cruise will be determined by a drawing at the end of all 12 weekly games. All weekly 1st, 2nd, and 3rd prize winners will be entered in the drawing.

DEAR ABBY

Couple steals car

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I are retired. We had a second car that we no longer needed, so we decided to sell it.

I parked the car on our front lawn with a "For Sale" sign on the windshield. During the noon hour, a young man rang our doorbell and said he was looking for a second car for his wife. (She was waiting in their car, in our driveway.) I went out, unlocked the door and started the engine. He asked the price and seemed interested. Then he asked if he could drive it around the block. I said he could, so he motioned for his wife to come. He asked her if she would like to drive. She got under the wheel, and he got in on the passenger side. She backed the car into the street, and they drove away.

Thirty minutes later, they had not returned, so I called the police. A policeman came out and checked the car this couple had left behind. It had been stolen in Oklahoma City — some 35 miles away.

This happened three weeks ago and our car is still missing. How could this have been avoided? — C.A. HENLEY, TECUMSEH, OKLA.

DEAR MR. HENLEY: When the prospective buyer asked for permission to drive your car around the block, you should have asked for his driver's license or some other identification to hold until he returned.

However, if you were dealing with professional car thieves — and you probably were — you would have been left holding some phony credentials, as well as the bag.

DEAR ABBY: A technique for helping persons one meets to remember a name:

In 1937 when I was a salesman for an Austin, Texas, new-car dealer, a fellow salesman, Lee Brasfield, took my arm, led me up to a tall, handsome man and said, "Lu, I'd like you to meet a friend of mine, Lyndon Johnson. He's just been elected to Congress from this district. This is Lu Lyman."

Every time I met Congressman Johnson in the next 23 months, I made a point of saying to him, "I'm Lu Lyman." This spared his racking his brain to remember who I was. Being a good politician, the future president always assured me that he remembered my name.

This has been standard procedure in my military, business and social career. — LUCIUS B. LYMAN JR., KENT, OHIO

DEAR LUCIUS: Your "technique" may not help those you encounter to remember your name, but it will put them at ease immediately to know they don't have to.

To spare another the slightest possible discomfort is indeed the hallmark of a gentleman or a lady.

DEAR ABBY: I just finished reading the letter from "Ellie," who bought herself a pretty nightie, had it gift-wrapped and told her bridge club that her husband gave it to her for Valentine's Day.

I also have a story to share. My husband and I have been married for nine years. We're farmers. Our anniversary is during planting season, and my birthday is during harvesting, so he never remembers either one. This past year, I knew he'd forget Valentine's Day, so I worked out a way to ensure myself against hurt feelings. I made arrangements with the florist in our area. If my husband placed an order for me, then she would fill his order. If he didn't order flowers, she should send those I ordered with a card reading as follows: "To my loving wife from her thoughtful husband. Love, Joey."

I was happy and cheerful all day even though I knew my husband would probably forget to send me flowers for Valentine's Day. I was right.

When Joey came home that day, I kissed him at the door and thanked him for the beautiful flowers. The expression on his face when he read the card was the best Valentine gift I ever had! — FARMING AND HAPPY IN N.C.

DEAR HAPPY: That's a bloomin' good idea. Why not do the same for your anniversary and birthday? (Ladies, make a note.)

DEAR ABBY: What is the correct way to spell the name of the colonel from Libya who is causing such a big commotion with his terrorist activities?

I have seen it spelled KADAFI, QUADHAFI, KHADAFY and KHADAFI. There must be a correct way to spell it. Why so many different versions? — CURIOUS IN CONNECTICUT

DEAR CURIOUS: The name is Arabic and cannot be written in English characters, so one must spell it phonetically (the way it sounds). Hence, all ways are equally correct — or incorrect.

AT WIT'S END

Leave her alone

By ERMA BOMBECK

As this is being written, a search is on for a woman who is a Statue of Liberty look-alike.

This may or may not cause women to hyperventilate with excitement who are walking around out there with a 35-foot waist, a four-foot nose, and an arm 12-feet in diameter holding a torch, waiting to be discovered.

Even if you could find a woman to admit she was a hundred years old and had cosmetic surgery over 90 percent of her body, the question is "Why?" Why does the Statue of Liberty have to become mortal?

The answer, of course, is so she can do for commercialism what Clara Peller did for "Where's the Beef?" The Statue of Liberty will be humanized and turned into a pitchwoman.

Ever since the advertising industry discovered names sell products, celebrities have been hucksters. When they had exhausted movie stars, opera singers, business tycoons, sports figures, rock and roll artists and authors, they went for the symbols. And the myths came tumbling down.

We learned that George Washington crossed the Delaware with a cheese snack in his coat pocket, Uncle Sam ate only Kosher hot dogs, Mona Lisa was smiling because she had just experienced the perfect pizza, and King Tut's eyes rolled around in anticipation of a candy bar.

I once saw Abraham Lincoln at a car wash in Ohio and Ben Franklin passing out coupons for a dozen free doughnuts in New York. After that, their places in history paled a bit.

I don't want the Statue of Liberty to become life-sized. If she is given a voice, I don't want to know if she has a New Jersey accent, a twang from Texas or a drawl from Wyoming. I don't want to know what feminine products she prefers, if she wears a bra for a full-figured woman, or if she ever leaves Bedloe's Island without her American Express card.

I don't want to see her doing a sketch on "Saturday Night Live," baking an apple pie on "Hour Magazine," or telling me she won the Reader's Digest Sweepstakes.

Maybe there should be a law protecting our symbols from exploitation... these larger-than-life hunks of concrete with carved eyes and lips of stone who cannot defend themselves. It would guarantee that the woman holding the scales of justice on our courthouses would never be shown wearing Foster-Grant sunglasses and that the Mt. Rushmore quartet would never appear at a bar and request a lite beer.

Let her be. Let the Statue of Liberty stand there from her height of 141 feet. Let her keep the dignity she has earned through years of welcoming the world to our shores. Let her continue to make us weep with gratitude for all she stands for.

Once she has passed out cosmetic samples at Bloomingdale's... it won't be the same.

Mother's Day Cards reflect humor

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — This year's Mother's Day cards reflect the fact that motherhood is back in style, says an official of a greeting card company with headquarters in Kansas City.

The current crop of sentiments recognizes that there's more to motherhood than baby talk and bottles, and reflects its reality — and humor, says Sally Groves, greeting card product director at Hallmark Cards.

"Mothers, including the 3.7 million who will give birth this year, know that being a mother is hard work," she says, "and a good laugh can provide some much-needed relief.

"Friends can be the best support system a mother has, and there's no better time to show that support than Mother's Day," she adds.

A special group of the company's cards, for example, is designed for friends to give to each other. They describe the victory of dressing a squirming infant, the sanctuary of a relaxing and prolonged bubble bath as family members vainly knock on the door, or the horrors of housework.

Other cards confirm that the job of being a mother is doubly difficult when mom works. One, for instance, has a carnival barker extolling the miracle of the modern age: "She walks, she talks, she juggles a challenging career and an active family life! Fantastic? Incredible?" Inside, the card says, "Happy Mother's Day to the star of the show."

Another asks what you get when you cross an octopus with a high-speed computer, and answers, "I don't know, but it still can't do everything a working mother can do!"

A card that shows a young mother in robe and slippers holding a screaming baby on her hip while ironing a blouse says, "Being a mother is a snap! First your mind snaps, then your nerves snap ..."

"Such cards are really inside jokes, and sending them is a way for mothers to share feelings, as well as support each other," Groves says.

BY DEANNA J. NEAL
Business/Oil Writer

Corporate confidence in the state is at an all-time low, according to a statewide survey.

With falling oil prices, such a conclusion might be expected from Texas business leaders, according to Bob Bullock, state comptroller.

The Index of Future Business Conditions in Texas fell three points to a record low of 48.8 percent, according to the survey conducted by the Texas Comptroller of Public Accounts. A general barometer of corporate expectations for the Texas economy, the survey showed the corporate index has fallen below the 50.0 mark — signaling a pessimistic outlook.

Highlights of the survey include:

■ Of the companies surveyed, 56 percent believe business conditions for their industry are worse than a year ago.

■ A third of the firms expect a decline in their profits and plan to reduce employment.

■ Almost half of all firms responding plan to reduce capital spending in 1986.

■ Only a quarter of those surveyed see more favorable conditions and plan to increase capital spending and employment in the year ahead.

The energy industry index fell to 45.8 in the winter quarter. While the decline was not as pronounced as in other industries, the index is now lower than any other index except the wholesale index.

Since the first quarter of 1984, when the oil and gas industry climbed to 67.3, it has fallen more than 20 points — tracking the steady erosion of jobs in that sector. In only four years, the industry's share of employment in Texas has fallen from 12 to 9 percent.

Falling oil prices and increased uncertainty over tax reform, particularly relating to the tax treatment of percentage depletion and intangible drilling costs, are foremost among the factors troubling the industry. Three-fourths of the firms surveyed plan to reduce their capital spending budgets, and not one plans to increase employment.

Home buyers encounter stricter guidelines for mortgage loans

REAL ESTATE

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

Although interest rates have fallen drastically, potential home buyers may still find it hard to buy that dream house.

Stricter guidelines from the Federal National Mortgage Association (Fannie Mae) is one reason home buyers are having difficulty taking advantage of the lower interest rates, say local realty firms.

Another reason is the high rate of foreclosures and defaults in the area that make private mortgage insurance companies look twice at the area. "The area has sustained a great number of foreclosures," observed Poppy Pieper, vice president with Federal Bankers Savings and Trust. "Secondary investors are leery of lending in Midland-Odessa and Houston. Some won't buy loans here. I hope that as the oil industry picks up and foreclosures go down, the guidelines will relax some."

"It's not the banks but the investors who invest on the secondary market that are tightening their requirements. The underwriters are trying to cut their losses," stated Mike Mannion, a realtor with Langston-Monarch.

Noted Neil Moore, a realtor with The Carriage Company: "It isn't getting the money. The money's available. It's getting people approved by the lending institutions. In some cases, they're requiring a reserve equal to three month's house payment after closing costs. That's something relatively new." In some cases, buyers have had to choose smaller homes, he continued.

Area experts agree that those having the hardest time acquiring a home loan are those who are self-employed and the first time buyer. "It's a hindrance to a young couple starting out, who just can't save enough money for a 10 percent down payment," commented Pieper.

Mannion noted that the loans with the most defaults were the high-leveraged, 95 percent loans. And Carla McIntosh, vice president with Home Savings, agreed, stating that "It's harder to get a 95 percent loan right now. The more money you can put down, the easier it'll be to get a loan."

Frieda Little of the Midland branch of Investors, Inc., the mortgage arm of Briercroft Savings, noted that regulations appear to be a little tighter because of the number of repossessions and foreclosures. "Guidelines, especially with private mortgage insurance companies, and especialy on 95 percent loans, are going to be tight. If you can put down 20 percent or even 10 percent, that's in your favor. It's harder to walk away from that than five percent."

Liability coverage tougher to handle

Fewer carriers, higher costs plague oilpatch

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of a two-part series on the crisis in the insurance industry. Today, we examine the local effects of rising costs and slashing coverages. Tomorrow, a look at the underlying causes and the national furor for reforming the industry and capping the boom in liability lawsuits.

By ALLEN HOWLAND
Business/Oil Writer

Providing oilfield insurance these days is "like playing golf in a West Texas sandstorm. Nobody can see for sure what's going on, but at least we're all playing in the same storm." So says Mark Stoltz, partner in United General — Midland, a major provider of general liability and Workman's Compensation coverage for oilfield operators and contractors.

A lack of clear direction among insurance carriers and reinsurance companies, to whom the carriers remarket a portion of their underwriting risk, has thrown the industry into a frenzy of shrinking markets and rising prices. "The primary carriers are gradually defining the direction they want their businesses to develop in, but the reinsurance market continues to be plagued by indecision and panic," Stoltz says.

Costs for most lines of commercial insurance coverage have jumped dramatically in the last 18 months. Paired with falling oil prices, many oil and gas operators and the contractors who serve them have faced the choice of substantially cutting back their coverage or having insurance expenses take a much larger bite of an ever-shrinking pie.

Local insurance agents find themselves caught in the middle of the crisis — able to offer only higher price quotes to clients less able to afford the cost — explains Bill Gesell, owner of W.S. Gesell & Co.

"What we can do is work with our markets, the insurance carrier companies we work with, to make sure that we find the best coverage at the most competitive price for our clients," says UG's Stoltz.

Operators and contractors have been shocked, facing huge premium increases despite the fact that they may never have filed a claim. That is because commercial insurance rates are class-based, rather than experience-based which personal insurance such as auto liability coverage is.

Class-based rates assume that all insureds in a class face the same risks and are equally likely to file a claim based on those common risks, regardless of a firm's operating history. "We are working with our carriers to educate them in regard to oil and gas operations with a fair degree of success," says Stoltz.

"We have been able to develop programs with some carriers, based on a clearer understanding of specific oilfield operations and the attendant risk exposures for each one. In some instances we have been able to save significant amounts in premiums for clients," he adds.

Gesell says that agents are becoming more effective risk managers as a matter of necessity. "We have to be able to recommend which coverages may be cut and by how much."

One small relief for energy operators is that many oilfield insurance rates are at least in part keyed to receipts and payroll levels.

JOHN PAUL PITTS

With national security, we should act like a nation

Bob Darlingron, chief pilot for Tiger Charter, sends me a clipping of an editorial from the Peoria (Illinois) Journal-Star. In the editorial, the writer groups Texas with Moammar Khadafy as a "deserving victim" of the recent oil price plunge.

Says the editor: "The Sun Belt, as we pointed out, is learning that it should not have been laughing at the industrial north five or six years ago, when Texans drove around with bumper stickers saying 'Freeze a Yankee — Drive 75.'"

The writer went on to point out that a decade of prosperity in Texas was made possible by an OPEC ripoff in which Texans were "auxiliary members of OPEC."

In case you haven't noticed, there is no great sympathy for Texas up North. They are dancing at our hanging, and the growing "hate" affair between Texas and the North and Northeast continues.

Governor White, in his speech to PBPA jested that many Texans thought the border patrol was working the wrong rivers in the last boom that brought thousands of Northeasterners into Texas. There may have been more truth than jest to that observation. Remember the jokes about "Yankee boat people" and the bumper sticker: "I don't give a damm how you did it in New York." There has long been a genuine division between these two regions of the country that has alternated from mild animosity to acute hostility. It is a cultural and philosophical division that precedes even the Civil War.

WHEN I WAS growing up in West Texas, a Yankee in our midst was about as rare as a Frenchman, and we tended to treat both with the same curiosity. I can remember the entire class gathering around a kid from Rhode Island in the fourth grade. We lingered on his strange accent. "Say something else!" we pleaded. My little brother in the second grade looked up and asked me: "Big Bubba, do him mouf hurt?" Another kid asked: "What's y'all Yankees eat, anyhow?" There was no animosity then, just curosity.

Later, as the two regions began to mingle, there was only good-natured jesting that went on between us and them. There was a lot of give and take on the regional stereotypes that refused to die. They looked at us as loud, tasteless, somewhat backward braggards, and we viewed them as a bunch of fast-talking rude people — aloof and unfriendly. While there may have been some truth to both preceptions, there was more myth. Beneath all the bantering and ribbing there was still no animosity; we knew we were all Americans.

Now, it seems all of that curosity and good-natured jest has turned to real and open hostility. The Journal-Star editorial is symptomatic of a dangerous, ever-widening rift that could tear this nation apart.

One reason is the regionalization of the national economy. We no longer have a true national economy, but a series of regional economies in which the region looks out for itself to the exclusion of others.

BUT THE PRIME reason is energy. The nation has been through an energy battle in the past decade that has left bruises on the heads of both producer and consumer. Bruised people, we know, tend to become mean people.

I can understand how the energy consuming states of the North and Northwest might feel. With no energy source whatsover, they have always felt like a helpless victim, because it was Texans who heated their homes. But when the price of that heat suddenly skyrockets and gets in short supply, while Texas oil companies show record profits, they became downright vexed and began to imagine all sorts of conspiracies. The liberal northern politicans were turned loose on Texas to do their thing, and they did it very well.

Willie Nelson tells the story about coming home drunk one too many times. When he collapsed in bed, his exasperated wife sewed him up in the bed sheets and worked him over with a baseball bat, then took off with the Cadillac. That's what the liberal Democrats of the North and limits assuming a greater share of risk themselves. Others have taken more drastic actions.

"High insurance costs shut us down offshore," says Art Dumont, president of Midland-based Cactus Drilling Co. "We would have to keep at least three of our seven offshore rigs running just to pay the insurance on the other four. We decided we didn't want to work for the insurance company."

Oilfield businesses are not alone in the plight of zooming premium increases and altering their business practices to accommodate the higher costs.

According to a recent poll of certified public accountants in various industries across Texas, hospitals, medical and other professionals, and corporate directors are all suffering trouble obtaining or affording liability insurance coverage. More than 60 percent of the West Texas respondents to the Texas Society of CPAs' survey reported that their own company or their largest outside client has had difficulty obtaining liability coverage in the past year.

Of those who had insurance problems more than half reduced their coverage, two-thirds paid increased premiums and more than one in five responded — by eliminating their coverage completely. An additional 14 percent turned to self-insurance plans, more than 10 percent utilized industry association insurance pools, while more than 7 percent eliminated business segments which couldn't be adequately insured.

Statewide, responses to insurance problems were similar to West Texans' solutions. A few more businessmen around the state (56 percent vs. 52 percent in West Texas) reduced their coverage, and fewer (63 percent vs. 67 percent) paid higher premiums.

Premium increases more than doubled insurance costs for more than three-fourths of the West Texas respondents to the survey, with more than 30 percent reporting that costs tripled or more. "Insurance costs are to the point that they are larger than the profits for most companies," says A.G. Fuhrman, West Texas drilling superintendent for FWA Drilling Co., Inc.

"Insurance is one of our largest single costs. Since last year, our coverage costs have more than doubled, from $600,000 to $1.4 million."

U.S. must maintain oil technology lead in EOR

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — The United States must resolve not to lose the lead it holds in enhanced oil recovery technology in spite of plunging oil prices, Shell Oil Co. Vice President Donald Russell told petroleum engineers this week.

Russell said legislative and regulatory bodies can help maintain enhanced oil recovery as "a vital part of our industry."

Shell's vice president for production addressed an opening session of a three-day symposium sponsored by the Society of Petroleum Engineers and the Department of Energy.

About 1,400 participants from the U.S. and several other countries gathered to hear technical reports on the latest methods for coaxing additional oil from stubborn formations.

The high-risk, costly methods range from flooding formations with steam to injecting exotic concoctions of chemicals or microbes.

Russell said enhanced oil recovery projects are in danger of falling victim to oil prices that earlier this month dipped below $10 a barrel.

"By far, the greatest current problem area for EOR (enhanced oil recovery) is that of unstable and low oil prices," Russell said.

"Enhanced oil recovery projects are long-term projects," he said. "The perception of future prices weighs strongly in the decision of whether to undertake a new project.

"But even if the perception of future prices is such that a project appears profitable, the current low oil prices are a major deterrent because they strongly depress current cash flow, which in turn leads to deferment of profitable EOR projects."

Russell said delays "may be fatal for certain projects."

The United States realizes about 600,000 barrels a day from enhanced recovery, about half the world total, Russell said.

Most of that is in California, where steam is used to push heavy, viscous crude to producing wells. Carbon dioxide injection is used in some areas to enhance the recovery of lighter crude.

By contrast, U.S. crude oil imports are expected to average about 4.6 million barrels a day in 1986, up from the 1985 level of 4.3 million barrels a day.

The Department of Energy estimates that enhanced recovery techniques might eventually recover 40 to 60 billion barrels of oil, a technology that could slow down an expected domestic production decline.

But Russell noted that during a time when low-yield or stripper oil wells are being shut in, much of the impetus for research into commercial enhanced recovery is removed.

"Although near-term price weakness may tend to defer some EOR activity, the long term outlook continues to support increased activity," Russell said. "Our challenge as an industry is to maintain our momentum in development of EOR technology during this time of oil price instability."

Russell said major enhanced oil recovery projects can be expected to be undertaken in the Middle East and the Soviet Union, where much of the world's oil resources are located.

"We must support legislative initiatives that provide a reasonable economic climate for enhanced oil recovery without causing undue market distortions," he said.

Perry, who is chairman of the board, chief executive officer and managing partner of numerous other businesses engaged in aviation, real estate development, exploration and banking, has been one of the PBPA's most active and influential members in the association's ongoing efforts to influence both state and federal legislation for fair and just treatment as it pertains to the health and welfare of the independent petroleum industry.

In accepting the association's top position, Perry indicated that some of the association's main objectives would be to involve more Basin area communities in association opportunities, especially in those areas which would strengthen industry ties in this period of market depression and to continue its role in coordinating and cooperating with other associations so as to become stronger and more effective in its efforts to influence lawmakers into making decisions for industry enhancement.

Sharing honors with Perry was John E. Reid of DA&S Oil Well Servicing, Inc., who received the PBPA's prestigious 1986 "Top Hand" award for his numerous outstanding contributions made in the past many years for community improvement and support to the petroleum industry. Presented by last year's recipient, Charles Perry, Reid was praised for leading the association's most successful membership drive, which increased membership by over 40 percent and his unselfish efforts in assisting people seeking employment and improving their businesses.

The final honors of the meeting went to Ed and Billie Thompson, who have dedicated the last 22 years of the lives to the association. Ed, who recently retired as executive vice president, was praised by outgoing president Pery Bolger for his remarkable leadership and his single-handed efforts to keep the association together when difficult times were upon the industry. Thompson is to continue serving the association as a consultant when called upon.

jobs, and they don't see any option." She said the high rate of foreclosures and repossessions is not just a local problem. "I can't just single out Midland. If you look throughout the state, there are places worse off than Midland. Like Houston."

As Kathy Phillips, Little's counterpart at the Odessa branch of Investors, Inc., said: "It all ties back to the fact that people want to put down a minimum down payment."

According to Phillips, another effect the high rate of foreclosures is that it has reminded lenders that "Property is important. Actually, the property has become more important than the credit history. We're now asking if the property's a good risk."

Still, realtors and lenders alike say there is money out there, even if the buyer can only put down 5 percent. "If you only have a 5 percent down payment, and a good stable job and good credit, we can still get you into a home," said Little. "From the lender's point of view, now is the time to buy.

SECURITY

Northeast did to Texas — tied us up with punitive legislation and regulation and worked us over. Practically every low blow that has fallen on Texas and Texans in the past decade has been delivered by that lot.

There may be reason for animosity on both sides, perhaps a bit more on the Texas side. But more important than fanning fires at this time is finding a way to reconcile this regional animosity for the sake of national security.

THERE IS actually delight in the North and Northeast over the fact that Texas is finally getting what it deserves. It matters little that the blood of our domestic oil industry is flowing into the gutter — that thousands of families will be left without jobs, displaced. I am prepared to live with that. After all, we are the ones who put on the bumper stickers that said "Let The Bastards Freeze In The Dark," and when the steelworkers were being rooted up because foreign steel was being dumped in this country, Texans lost very little sleep.

The facts are obvious. If our domestic oil industry is allowed to dwindle, we will become dangerously dependent on foreign and Middle East oil. Do we want to count on Iranian and Libyan oil for our tanks and planes? In my mind the choice is clear, we must do whatever it takes to preserve our domestic oil industry, even if it means people in Boston, Chicago, New York, and Houston, Dallas and Midland have to pay more for gasoline at the pump. When it comes to national security, we do what's good for the America first.

There are viable options now that could prevent us from becoming an energy wasteland, but they are "politically" impossible, because of the rift between energy producing and energy consuming states. It is a rift that could ultimately do more damage to this nation than the Civil War.

Graduate Center cuts tuition to aid unemployed

The Permian Basin Graduate Center, a non-profit educational institution, was founded in 1967, during an earlier period of tough times, primarily to provide help and knowledge to struggling oil industry personnel. Once again we find ourselves in troubled times.

In a recent meeting, the Board of Directors of the Graduate Center approved a policy which will make it possible for unemployed persons who have lost their jobs in the past six months to enroll in certain Graduate Center courses at a greatly reduced tuition. Only a limited number of places in selected courses will be available for this program, which is being offered on a trial basis.

Qualifying courses in May are Increasing Performance Potential, May 6, $10; Part II of Application of Geologic Data, May 6-8, $25; Creativity in Oil Exploration, May 7, $15; and Assertiveness Training, May 20, $10.

UT-Dallas professor to address economists

Dr. Dennis J. O'Brien, chief economist of Caltex Petroleum Corp. and Adjunct Professor of International Management at the University of Texas, Dallas, will be the speaker at the April 29 meeting of the Permian Basin Economics Club. The meeting is scheduled for 12 noon at Mission Country Club. The price of the meal is $9 for members and $15 for non-members.

Dr. O'Brien has just returned from a month-long visit to the Arab Gulf countries of Bahrain, Oman and Saudi Arabia. He was present in the Arabian Gulf during Vice President Bush's recent trip and was involved in discussions with senior energy officials from the United Kingdom. Dr. O'Brien is well qualified to talk about the current international oil situation which is having such a strong impact on our local economy.

He was deputy assistant secretary for international energy security for the Department of Energy and has lectured before audiences from the World Bank, National War College, John Hopkins University and Georgetown Center for Strategic and International Studies. In his current position at Caltex, O'Brien is responsible for analysis of international economic and political information affecting worldwide energy matters and is the company's principal spokesman on economic affairs.

Basin, U.S. rig counts continue slide

Rig counts in both the Permian Basin and the United States continued a slide that started four months ago with the rapid fall of oil prices. The count in the Basin fell by seven according to Hughes Tool, and by 18 according to stats released by Reed Rock Bit. The U.S. total dropped by 52.

Locally, activity declined by one rig in both Ector and Midland counties, with counts of two and three, respectively, according to Reed. Hughes shows two rigs working in each county.

Louisiana contributed to the national decline, falling 14, while Texas dropped 12 and New Mexico and Oklahoma each lost six rigs. The only State to show a gain in rig activity was Michigan, up four from the previous week.

Price drop disrupts IPAA forecasting

WASHINGTON, D.C. — During the first quarter of 1986, U.S. crude oil prices at the wellhead have declined by nearly one-third to an estimated March average of $17.00 per barrel. For the past two months, 'futures' prices for crude oil have been running about $5.00 per barrel lower than the average posted level. Price uncertainty continues to worsen in the wake of OPEC's failure to agree on output limits.

Supply and demand statistics for the current period undoubtedly are being influenced by all the volatile economic factors at play in the market. However, basic trends are still apparent such as stronger demand for petroleum products during the first quarter. Total consumption rose to 17.1 million barrels per day, up more than 3 percent from the prior-year average.

Motor gasoline demand jumped over 5 percent during the month of March as compared to last year's 6.6 million barrels per day total. The major factor was a 10 cent per gallon slide in the wholesale price of unleaded gasoline which now comprises almost 70 percent of the market.

Total crude oil and petroleum product imports averaged 4.9 million barrels per day during the first quarter and represented 30 percent of domestic supply. Mexico, Canada, Venezuela and the United Kingdom were the top four suppliers of U.S. petroleum imports last year.

Petroleum Museum taking nominations

Permian Basin Petroleum Museum president Russell J. Ramsland has announced that the names of candidates for nomination to the Petroleum Hall of Fame in Midland are now being taken for the fall election. The deadline for receiving names, along with biographical sketches, is June 2. Names received after the deadline will be held over until the 1988 election.

Six persons, including the committee chairman, are appointed by the museum's governing boards to serve as members of the Hall of Fame Committee. This committee will review files of those persons whose names have been submitted as candidates.

According to the museum's bylaws, anyone, living or deceased, who has made "outstanding contributions to the development of the petroleum industry or has served as a worthy example to those in the industry" may be nominated to the Petroleum Hall of Fame. Four honorees are inducted biennially. A team or partnership is considered as one. Any associate, friend or family member may submit a candidate's name. Proposals may include newspaper clippings and letters of endorsement from others. Neither wealth, nor absence of wealth, are considered as factors in the election.

In 1968, the late Frank T. Pickrell of El Paso, vice president and general manager of Texon Oil & Land Co., which drilled the Santa Rita No. 1, was elected as the initial honoree. Sixty-four men have been inducted into the nationally recognized Hall of Fame. Each honoree distinguished himself in significant accomplishments deserving of this high honor.

Criteria and guidelines for submitting names of candidates may be obtained from Mrs. Betty Orbeck, staff liaison member for the Hall of Fame Committee, The Petroleum Museum, 1500 W. Interstate 20, Midland, TX 79701, 683-4403.

PBGC offers mix of courses

Session Four in "Basics of Petroleum Land Titles" involves a visit to an abstract company to actually work with abstract company records — starting point for landman work. It is designed for those with some background in petroleum land titles, who want to do a little hands-on work. It will be held on Wednesday from 7 to 10 pm. Harris E. Kerr, attorney, will instruct. The fee is $30. An optional text entitled "Landman's Legal Handbook" will be available for $35.

"Increasing Performance Potential" is set for May 6, from 8:30 am. to 4:30 pm. This course is designed for the individual who is motivated and interested in becoming a high performer. This course will discuss the characteristics necessary to become a high performer and how to develop them. Marion Kimberly, counselor, will instruct. Fee is $85. Participants are eligible for 8 CPE credits.

"Part II: Application of Geological Data," is scheduled for May 6 to 7, from 9:00 am. to 4:00 pm. and May 8, from 9:00 am. to 12:00 noon. This course is a follow up to Part I, explaining what is done with the materials once they are located, thus enabling the geo-tech to be a stronger asset to the geologist. Brenda Machost Carpenter, president, Petroleum Technicians, Inc., will instruct. The fee is $250.

"Creativity in Oil Exploration," will be held May 7, from 8:30 am. to 4:00 pm. Geologic exploration requires creativity, and creative geologists formulate most of the drillable prospects. Creativity can be enhanced by programmed learning. This has been established in a study by the UCLA Psychology Department. An attempt will be made to apply those principles to assist geologists and geophysicists in increasing their productivity. This will be a hands-on course where a number of geological problems will be solved using the creative techniques developed by Dr. Elam. Jack G. Elam, consulting geologist and independent oil producer, Midland, will instruct the course. The fee is $130.

Electro-Renaissance man 'no mad inventor'

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Stephen Beck gave up a successful art career for the challenge of the business world, to create what he calls an "electronic Bauhaus with a profit motive."

On one desk is a prototype of an ultrasonic sonar "flashlight" for the blind that emits a signal to indicate its distance from an object, an invention Beck hopes will someday replace the cane for many blind people.

Across the room, Beck's MacMovie transforms an Apple MacIntosh computer into the equivalent of a videocassette recorder with the moving image of the singer Olivia Newton-John. The computer is cooled by Beck's Fanny Mac while another Beck creation, the Chromatron, colorizes the image on a color monitor.

And in the background, like an electronic sculpture, Beck's "Illustrated Music" shows beautiful video tapestries of 4,000 colors and shapes that have been exhibited in more than 25 museums around the world.

Beck's lab is a bubbling cauldron where both pragmatic and fanciful ideas are turned into products.

Some, like an automated building management system that cut energy use in Safeway stores by 20 percent to 30 percent, have made money for him.

Others have potential, such as the Phosphotron, which Beck plans to market for entertainment but hopes may one day aid in the diagnosis and treatment of blindness.

"Sometimes I feel like I have the curse of the mad inventor," said Beck, who said he devotes about 13 hours a day to his small company. "I could spend every waking hour just inventing and developing and going in the lab and working in my notebook."

Beck-Tech has turned out more than 30 products — toys and games, software for personal computers, the energy management system, communication devices — since it was started in 1978 in the labyrinth basement of the Claremont Hotel.

"We have almost the reverse of the standard approach that companies are supposed to follow, which is to take one product and focus on it," Beck said. "The fact is we've survived what's got to be the toughest year in this industry, and one of the reasons is because we've got a variety of products and projects."

While earning his degree in electronic engineering and computer science at the University of California-Berkeley in the late 1960s, he invented the first direct video synthesizer, a machine that sets shapes and colors in motion on a television screen.

"After doing things for five or six years in the art world with very good success, I really got kind of bored with it. I decided that my next piece would be to form a company and try to apply some of those same type of creative ideas.

High-tech inventor Stephen Beck adjusts a pair of his "Phosphotron" opaque wrap-around goggles that allow wearers with their eyes closed to see music synchronized dancing lights, patterns, and visions. Beck's inventions have merged high-technology with art.

Congress poised to rescue Ginnie Mae

The Government National Mortgage Association's $65.3 billion guarantee authority was exhausted on April 4 by the rush to refinance home mortgages at lower interest rates.

The unprecedented depletion of this authority forced the agency, known by the nickname Ginnie Mae, to stop issuing new commitments to guarantee the prompt repayment of securities backed by government-insured mortgages. The securities are issued by lenders with Ginnie Mae's repayment guarantee to raise new mortgage capital.

Industry analysts have warned that unless Congress enacts legislation by May 1, there could be a shortage of mortgages insured by the Federal Housing Administration and the Veterans Administration and slightly higher interest rates for home buyers. The government-insured mortgages account for about 15 percent of all home mortgages.

Legislative aides said Friday that Congress is poised to enact a bill this week to raise Ginnie Mae's commitment authority to $100 billion.

If some procedural problems involving the jurisdiction of the House Banking and Appropriation committees can be worked out, aides say the bill is expected to receive quick approval on the House floor.

The bill, sponsored by Rep. Chalmers P. Wylie, R-Ohio, is scheduled to be brought up Monday under emergency procedures that would require a two-thirds majority of those voting.

The congressional aides, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said that if passed in the House, the bill would go to the Senate where the Republican leadership has agreed to put it up for a quick vote later this week.

Burton C. Wood, a lobbyist for the Mortgage Bankers Association of America, expressed optimism that the bill would be approved by Congress this week.

"We are extremely hopeful that it will be worked out as speedily as possible to restore calm and order to the market and put the Ginnie Mae program back in business," Wood said.

The measure would also raise FHA's authority to insure mortgages from $57.4 billion to $95 billion. The surge in mortgage refinancing that began last month when interest rates fell below 10 percent also threatens to deplete FHA's current insurance authority by next month.

Ginnie Mae President Glenn Wilson said mortgage bankers still have enough guarantee commitments that were made before April 4 to float securities for at least another 30 days.

Wilson declined to say whether President Reagan would sign Wylie's bill, noting that "it does not include some of the things we would have liked to have at least considered."

The White House Office of Management and Budget is drafting a bill that would only raise Ginnie Mae's commitment authority to $87 billion and FHA's insurance authority to $82 billion.

The administration proposal, outlined by Housing Secretary Samuel R. Pierce during a recent appearance on Capitol Hill, would restrict FHA mortages to people whose annual income is below $40,000.

It would also prohibit the use of FHA-guaranteed mortages to finance vacation homes or properties purchased as investments. Pierce said the lower authorization levels for Ginnie Mae and FHA would be sufficient if Congress adopted the administration's proposed restrictions on FHA mortgages.

In the meantime, the Federal National Mortgage Association (Fannie Mae) and the Federal National Mortgage Corp. (Freddie Mac) have offered to package mortgage-backed securities normally guaranteed by Ginnie Mae. But Wilson and other industry officials say it is too early to tell what impact these offers have had on the mortgage securities market.

Namedropping policy

Business Namedropping is intended to inform our readers of promotions, achievements, and changes among the professional business personnel and leaders of Midland.

New presidents, chairmen of the board, directors of major coporations or new officers of organizations are normally treated separately as free-standing stories.

Namedropping generally appears in the Sunday edition but may be published during the week if necessary.

Information for Sunday pages must be in the Business-Oil Department by the preceding Thursday at noon. Items published during the week should be in the department two days in advance.

All information must be submitted in writing and include the name and telephone number of the person submitting it.

Pictures should be black and white, preferably glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but they may reproduce poorly. Good reproduction cannot be assured when color prints are used. In general, snapshots are not acceptable.

There is no charge for publication of photographs and stories.

Information for Namedropping may be sent to the Midland Reporter-Telegram, Business-Oil Department, P.O. Box 1650, Midland, TX 79702.

Secretaries seek raises, respect

AUSTIN (AP) — The Workers Equity Network used this past week — Secretary's Week — to hammer home their contention that secretaries need more than roses, they also need "raises and respect."

"We are here today to call on state and local governments to implement pay equity studies and to correct, if necessary, the wage gap and job segregation of women in the public sector," she told a news conference.

The Texas State Employees Union also released a statement at the news conference, saying it would lobby the 1987 Legislature to establish a Select Committee on Pay Equity "to study job segregation and (the) wage-setting process in Texas state employment."

The employees union said 62 percent of all women employed by the state earn less than $16,000 a year, while only 27 percent of all men are paid less than $16,000.

Ms. Williams said women are still perceived as working for "pin money" and earn 64 cents to each $1 a man makes.

"In fact, in Texas, a woman with four years of college can expect to earn about as much as a man who has never completed high school," she said.

Coca-Cola USA head is optimistic man

ATLANTA (AP) — Brian G. Dyson, the 50-year-old president of Coca-Cola USA, is a restless man, pacing about his desk as he concentrates fiercely. It seems the narrow office can hardly contain the 159 pounds stretched leanly over his 6-foot-2 frame.

For a while this past year it didn't. Coca-Cola faced a situation that had never before occurred in its long history. Tensions were high and decisions were big, and the future course of its biggest product was in doubt.

But it is business as usual again. Almost.

Outside, azaleas and dogwoods are blooming around Coca-Cola's headquarters. The weather is unseasonably warm even for the South, attracting a small cluster of demonstraters who want Coca-Cola to get out of South Africa. Inside, employees attend a Hands Across America rally, browse through the extensive Coke memorabilia available in the company store, and linger in the cafeteria over free-flowing Cokes.

What is different than before is that there is a marked wariness.

Even an outsider's most casual conversational questions to Coca-Cola public relations men are greeted with long pauses, as they seemingly weigh how a response will reflect on their company.

Later, three Coke officials sit in on an interview with Dyson, who also stresses the positive, although he does not tip-toe around. He is alternately exuberant and challenging.

"THERE IS NOT one doubt in my mind that that was the right thing to do," Dyson said.

"That" was to introduce a new formula for Coke last April 23, and after great public outcry and an immense amount of publicity, bring back the original, 99-year-old recipe as Coca-Cola Classic in mid-July to sell beside new Coke.

"Could we have done some of this better than we did? Sure we could," Dyson said. "Were we surprised by some of the roughness we encountered? You bet. Are we proud of the way we managed it? Absolutely."

Sitting, he leans back and squeezes his eyes shut. Then he pitches foreward, rests his arms on his desk and stares long at his questioner without blinking.

"What we did as a system was we faced up to a problem and we made a decision. There was a slowly eroding share position that had taken place over a number of years. That was unacceptable."

The first alternative was to do nothing, he said. "That was unacceptable."

The next alternatives were to bring out the new formula as a "flanker" product rather than as a substitute or to change the formula secretely, he said.

Neither of those were superior choices, he said. "Had we not attempted a substitute, you would not have gotten that strong outpouring in favor of Coca-Cola Classic."

CONSUMERS LOYAL TO old Coke "are far more vehement and committed and they express that in purchases," Dyson said. "I think it is very much more difficult for anybody else to woo them away."

No amount of advertising dollars would have produced that double effect, he said.

Originally, Coca-Cola steadfastly asserted new Coke would be its flagship product. It since has changed its flagship to Classic Coke, but uncharacteristically quietly.

"That's the way the public has received it, voted it. It was an affirmation of reality," Dyson said.

What is important about new Coke is that it, unlike Classic Coke, is flexible, the company could change its formula or marketing, Dyson said. That is "a position of strength," he said. "I think we are well poised."

Dyson also contends new Coke eventually will overcome the negative feelings. "Down the road, Coca-Cola will sell more than Coca-Cola Classic. When will that be? I don't know. I think it's something that is going to be a slow build."

How could the company have misjudged the public reaction to losing old Coke?

"I don't think you can research it properly. Other factors affect it, like the media," Dyson said.

Is the company embarrassed?

DYSON'S EVER-POSITIVE view is: "People say, 'I admire that company because they listen to me.'"

But what does Dyson, in his private moments, wish?

Probably that he had not had to choose between staying in Atlanta last June and going to the 100th anniversary of his family's remote cattle ranch a hemisphere away in Argentina. Dyson, a native Argentine, joined Coca-Cola in 1959 and held various position in the Caribbean and Latin America before being named to his current post in 1978.

He chose to go to the family celebration. "It was a terrible time to be away, but I couldn't not be" at the ranch, he said.

His executive assistant called the latest weekly sales results to Coca-Cola's office in Buenos Aires, which taped them and sent them by car to Dyson, a six-hour drive.

"There I was in the midst of an emotional celebration. It was in the midst of that I got the harbinger of the further continuation of the trend, the deterioration of the position," Dyson recalled. "I said to myself, 'Something has to be done.'" He returned immediately.

How did he take the experience?

"I do not feel highly elevated but in no way denigrated," Dyson said, adding: "You've got to keep trying and believe in your convictions or else you're nothing."

Does he hope to someday head the parent Coca-Cola Co., of which is now a vice president?

"I HAVE NEVER in any steps of my career worried about my next job," he said.

Outside the office, Dyson loves a physical challenge. He enters triathlons and is avid about racquet sports. He does some form of strenuous exercise five days a week. "I am a bit of a nut about that," he says with a laugh.

His wife, Penny, is British. The couple, who lives in suburban Atlanta, has two teen-age daughters.

Dyson, who drinks various Coca-Cola products regularly, likes expensive, red cars, writing short stories and eating a good steak now and then.

"Fundamental optimism toward life, that's what drives me to do all sorts of things, some crazy, some not," he said.

Debate continues over credit card interest

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bank credit cards carry an average interest rate of 19.37 percent, but consumers can find rates below 18 percent in at least 51 financial institutions, according to a congressman who says banks are charging too much.

Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., said banks pay an average 9.24 percent for their funds, making the markup for credit cards greater than 100 percent.

Credit card interest rates could have been more than 4 points lower if banks made the same profit on the cards that they earned on other types of loans, Schumer told a news conference.

The nation's 71.6 million card holders could have saved an average of $41.26 in 1985 at the lower rates, he said, adding that credit card interest should be dropping like other interest rates.

Kirk Willison, a spokesman for the American Bankers Association, said credit cards are "much more than a loan" to consumers, and the interest should be considered a service charge.

Customers get cash advances, monthly statements that can be used for tax purposes and a way of producing identification, he said.

Willison said credit card rates have remained stable between 17 percent and 19 percent since the early 1970s. When the prime rate was 20 percent some five years ago, credit card rates were 18 percent, he said.

But Schumer commented, "Everywhere you look, interest rates are falling except for credit cards. Banks have been overcharging customers for their cards — a markup of more than 100 percent. Competition is not working."

The lawmaker said banks made a $3.6 billion net profit before taxes on their credit card business in 1985, and profits on bank cards were 5.37 percent — more than five times the average profit made by the banking industry on overall lending.

Schumer said he compiled the information from research conducted by the Federal Reserve Board and the Nilson Report, a credit card industry newsletter.

Schumer said he is introducing a bill that would force financial institutions to disclose their credit card interest rates, annual fees and grace periods in any applications and mail solicitations. He previously sponsored legislation for a credit card cap, but acknowledged there is not enough support for passage.

Schumer said his list of 51 banks charging less than 18 percent does not include all such banks in the country with these rates.

According to the list, the five banks with the lowest interest rates are Dominion Bank, Vienna, Va., 10.5 (minimum income $50,000, regional customers only); Union National Bank, Little Rock, Ark., 12; Simmons First National Bank, Pine Bluff, Ark., 12; First Commercial Bank, Little Rock, 12.5 (Arkansas residents only) and Chevy Chase Savings and Loan, Chevy Chase, Md., 14.

Others on the list:

Pepsi-Cola USA's head grabs opportunity

The 42-year-old president and chief executive officer of Pepsi-Cola USA last year rushed to capitalize on Coca-Cola Co.'s decision to reformulate its flagship product. On the morning that Coca-Cola was to make the announcement, before it even did, Pepsi-Cola ran a full-page newspaper ad saying Coca-Cola had blinked in the face of competition.

It was written by Enrico, who says, "I wanted to catch them by surprise." He also gave all Pepsi-Cola employees a day off to celebrate the company's "victory."

Two and a half months later, when Coca-Cola said it was bringing back its original formula as Coca-Cola Classic and would sell it beside new Coke, Enrico sped to New York City, where he made himself available to reporters over and over and over again, taking jabs at the industry leader.

Enrico is still at it. Sitting in his large office at Pepsi-Cola's suburban headquarters, he says: "In the consumers' mind Coke was the gold standard. It got sort of a halo from that. With the new Coke-old Coke fiasco, that halo slipped from above their head to around their neck. That will create opportunity (for Pepsi-Cola) in the future."

Short-term, Coca-Cola's decision gave a boost to Pepsi-Cola sales and otherwise occupied the No. 1 company so that Pepsi-Cola could establish its advantage in juice-added soft drinks, Enrico says.

AND MEDIUM-TERM?

Roger A. Enrico

"My sense of that was a year after all of this settled down, we'd be about the same place we were before. The same situation wasn't bad from our standpoint. We were gaining on them constantly," Enrico said.

Did Enrico kick Coca-Cola when Coke was down?

"I think everybody was kicking them. The fact is it was an outrageous mistake and they handled it with arrogance," Enrico said. "I don't think we kicked them too hard. We could have gotten much tougher with them."

Enrico's statements are incongruous with his appearance.

He is not tall and is a bit thick in the middle. He has boyish good looks, dark brown hair, big brown eyes and bushy eyebrows. He's a little shy and very likeable.

But make no mistake about him.

"I certainly would admit to being intensely competitive," Enrico says. "I'm the kind of person that lives, eats and breaths the business."

All around him are views of the company grounds: well-manicured lawns and hedges, pieces of the company's large sculpture here and there, fountains. The weather is cool, the trees are still mostly barren. The mood is upbeat; a jaunty public relations man sits in on the interview.

What Enrico has done for Pepsi-Cola is turn the image of its principal soft drink from one of a perennial second-best cola to one of a leading-edge product. He did that with the "choice of a generation" advertising theme that has used such celebrities as singers Michael Jackson and Lionel Richie, vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro and football player Dan Marino.

ENRICO'S GREATEST achievement, he says, is "lighting a fire under Pepsi managers as well as our bottlers."

"I don't know how long it will take to surpass the Coca-Cola company. It doesn't bother me if it takes five or 10 years or more. It charges up our bottlers, our managers and me. We like to be thought of as the scrappy underdog in the business."

In the 1950s, Coke outsold Pepsi 8-to-1. Now the lead at various points is less than 2-to-1, depending on how you look at it, Pepsi-Cola says.

Enrico's biggest mistake, he says, was failing to negotiate for the first use of NutraSweet in diet drinks.

"Coke beat us to the punch. We had to play catch-up," he says.

Enrico, who was named to his current post in April 1983, joined the company in 1971 as an associated product manager for Pepsico's Frito-Lay division. Among his various posts throughout the years were two international ones.

ENRICO'S FIRST job, when he was 13, was with a small independent bottling plant nearby where he washed and labeled bottles.

Asked to look ahead, Enrico says: "If you spend too much time thinking about the next job, you kind of screw up the one you're doing. I developed the philosophy that good guys win."

Oldest gym in Dallas marks its 25th year

By SUZANNE GAMBOA

DALLAS (AP) — Grunt, exhale, grunt, slam.

The cacophony of slamming weights, groaning men and women and whirring floor fans is music to Doug Eidd's ears. It is a familiar tune he has orchestrated for 24 years as the owner of Doug's Gym.

While the YMCA and other private clubs in downtown Dallas have become upscale health centers for the city's fitness buffs, Eidd's second-floor business stays an old-fashioned free weights gym. He says it's the oldest in the city.

There's no heated pool, no indoor track and no whirlpool bath. Torn simulated wood paneling fits over broken windows and the sun peers through dusty drapes barely hanging from their curtain rods.

Weight lifters move between the gym's two rooms through a hole knocked in the dividing brick wall and they flex in front of foggy, oddly-cut mirrors and beneath a mural of construction workers.

Located on the rim of east downtown Dallas, Doug's Gym is flanked by the city's police department and is the upstairs neighbor of a bail bond business. Those with old-fashioned stay-in-shape philosophies seek out the gym.

"I've got executives come in here. I've got doctors, lawyers." said Eidd, 55, "The majority of them are people who want to build muscles, lose a little weight. Not everyone who comes in here wants to be a Mr. Universe, although I do get a lot of those types in here."

The following Eidd has built through the years isn't one he expected, he said.

"When I took this gym over, I didn't plan to stay here one year," he said. "Then another year went by and the only reason I stayed was because there was nothing painful enough to make me leave."

After four years as a physical trainer in the Air Force, Eidd took over the gym and saved it from closing.

"I was working out real hard myself. I was only 30 at the time and I enjoyed it." said Eidd, whose 46-inch chest, 34-inch waist and 17-inch biceps hint he probably still does. "I did it (took over the gym) because I didn't know what else to do."

In the years he's stayed, Eidd has resisted fitness trends.

"No Nautilus, no Universal, free weights. No machines. It's more of a personal type of gym and the people know each other.

"Some of my members have been here as long as I have," Eidd said. "A lot of these guys want someone to work with them every minute. A lot of places don't do that."

Eidd said the problem with many health clubs is that members are left to themselves and many staffers aren't thoroughly knowledgeable on the club's equipment.

"I believe in simplicity." Eidd said. "Eat simple foods, live a simple life. That's what's so good about this gym. It's simple and not filled with mysteries that are complicated and meaningless."

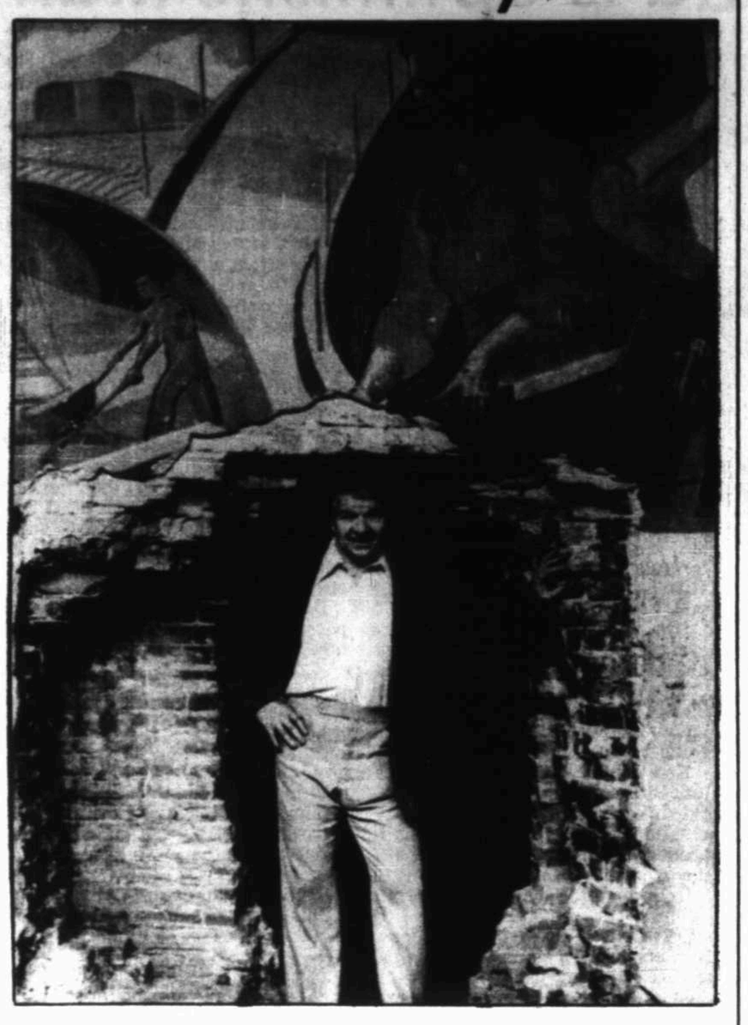
And so do people like 50-year-old Maureen Hickman, a nurse at the Dallas branch of Mental Health and Mental Retardation. She said she tried just about every health center and fitness technique possible in Dallas. If boredom didn't set in, the high price of membership did.



AP Laserphoto

Doug Eidd poses in the doorway joining his two work rooms at the weight training gym in Dallas. He has resisted the fitness trends of Nautilus and Universal weights for 24 years.

"I feel Doug runs an honest, true business. No frills," Ms. Hickman said. "He's super cautious and I've never hurt myself. I really know this is the thing to do, other than to stop eating."

Administration happy with value of dollar

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is sending signals that it has given up, at least for the time being, efforts to drive down the value of the U.S. dollar — a message that could mean bad news for export-hungry farmers.

The administration has said nothing publicly about the dollar's value since early last month and an administration official said in an interview Wednesday that this silence was by design.

A weaker dollar makes imports more expensive and thus less attractive to American consumers, while pushing down the price of farm goods and other American exports on world markets.

The dollar has plunged by 30 percent since its high-point a year ago, mainly as a result of a coordinated effort engineered by the administration beginning last September with the aid of Britain, West Germany, Japan and France.

But in recent weeks, the dollar has edged slightly higher against some currencies as the administration fell silent on its future plans.

"There is no purpose to be served now in commenting on where (the dollar) ought to be or what it ought to be or anything else," the administration official said. "And you should take note of the fact that you haven't seen any other members of the administration (talking about the dollar) either since the discount rate cut."

In the interview, the official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the administration's last public comments on the matter were aimed more at changing worldwide interest rates than at pushing the dollar lower.

Treasury Secretary James Baker, Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige and U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter all made statements in late February that further declines in the dollar would be welcome to help alleviate the country's trading problems.

These comments were a form of pressure aimed at forcing the West Germans to reduce a key interest rate, the official said.

West Germany did indeed cut its discount rate, the rate its central bank charges to make loans to member banks in early March. This reduction was followed in rapid order by similar moves by the central banks of Japan and the United States. The U.S. action was credited with helping to push interest rates in this country to their lowest levels of this decade.

"It was important that we assist the Germans in arriving at a decision that they ought to cut their discount rate," the official said. "The fact that their currency was strengthening was of concern to them."

The threat to push the dollar lower against the West German mark would have had an adverse impact on German exports to this country.

The official did not say whether the administration would consider further efforts to lower the value of the dollar if the country's trade statistics don't begin improving.

However, some economists believe unless the dollar declines further, U.S. manufacturers and farmers, two hard-hit segments of the economy, are unlikely to recover fully their lost overseas markets.

On another subject, the official said the administration will not call for a worldwide conference to reform the international monetary system until it decides what specific changes should be made. He said those decisions are not likely until the end of the year.

Judge allows shell dredging to continue, orders study

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The state Attorney General calls it a great victory for the state's environment, but the shell dredging industry is emitting a qualified sigh of relief today after a federal judge ordered a study on the effects of shell dredging in Louisiana, but didn't halt the practice.

"We are dissappointed that the judge ruled that the impact statements are necessary but we are gratified that he didn't issue an injunction," said Jim Burton, a lawyer for one of the four companies holding dredging permits. "At least the industry is in a position to continue to operate."

The ruling by U.S. District Judge A.J. McNamara refuted a claim by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers that dredging for oyster and clam shells does little harm to the state's lakes and coastal regions.

He ordered the Corps to evaluate dredging's impact on Louisiana's ecology before six five-year permits issued by the Corps in 1982 are resumed or extended in 1987.

Five environmental groups — Save Our Coast Inc., The Orleans Audubon Society, the Sierra Club, the Manchac Fishermen's Association and the Environmental Defense Fund — had asked the court to stop shell dredging altogether as has been done in some other Gulf Coast states.

Last April, McNamara dismissed the suit but the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals overturned him and ordered the case back to his court.

State Attorney General William Guste hailed the ruling as "a great victory for Louisiana's environment."

In a statement, Guste said McNamara's decision upheld the Attorney General's office's contention that environmental studies should have been conducted before the Corps renewed the current shell dredging permits.

Burton said it was too early to decide whether to appeal the ruling.

The controversy involves Louisiana's coastal region and Lakes Pontchartrain and Maurepas, north and northwest of New Orleans.

Environmentalists contend that studies in other states show that dredging shells harms waterbottoms by stirring up sediment, depleting oxygen and causing long-term damage. Shrimpers say waterbottom disruption makes trawling difficult.

Also, environmentalists fear shell dredging helps coastal erosion. They contend that dredging could "kill" lakes and that it removes barrier reefs that keep the Gulf from eating away the coastline.

The shells, ground up or whole, are most commonly used in Louisiana in the same way as gravel.

New mining method blamed for high unemployment

CLINTWOOD, Va. (AP) — Odell Musick, who now works as an animal warden taking home one-third the pay he made as a coal miner, blames his change in fortune on a mining method that shears coal from a vein like a butcher slicing bologna.

The effect on employment of longwall mining, now used in more than 100 U.S. coal mines, is being likened to the late-1940s development of the continuous miner, which sent tens of thousands of unemployed mine workers to Detroit, Ohio and Pennsylvania seeking jobs in the auto and steel industries.

"The only way companies can stay alive is through productivity gains," said Jerry Karaganis, vice president for economics at the National Coal Association. "Longwall mining is one way you can come in with a big chunk of capital in mine coal with less labor."

Longwall mining, developed in Germany and passed to Britain before it reached the United States in the late 1960s, is used in mine chambers to slice away huge coal pillars, letting the chamber roof collapse behind the advancing longwall equipment.

A continuous miner grinds coal out of a seam, but workers need to stop and bolt up the roof where coal is extracted before mining can continue. The work is slower and requires more manpower.

It costs millions of dollars to set up a longwall mine, so the system is only worthwhile when a company has a huge mass of coal to extract, Childress said. The seam must be about the same thickness all the way through.

Steve Anderson, director of communications for Westmoreland Coal Co., said the company last year produced 35.5 tons per miner each shift at its Bullitt longwall mine in Virginia. Average production companywide was about 13 tons per man shift.

Westmoreland's Bullitt mine is one of nearly a dozen operating longwalls in Virginia, officials said. The number of longwall mines nationwide decreased from 112 to 108 in 1984, but annual longwall production is increasing as new equipment replaces old machinery, according to the February issue of Coal Mining magazine.

Musick, who worked for Clinchfield Coal Co. before he was laid off May 22, 1982, believes he was expendable because the company could fill its orders with its new longwall mining operations. He and about 250 others lost their jobs at the Moss No. 2 mine, which used a continuous miner, he said.

"There are a lot of people in my shoes," said the 31-year-old animal warden, who is married and has two sons. "There are some that were laid off when I was, and I don't think they've found anything. I don't know how they survive."

Walter Hibbard Jr., director of the Virginia Center for Coal and Energy Research, said longwall mining gets much of the credit for record production of 44.3 million tons in Virginia last year at the same time unemployment remained about 20 percent. The Bureau of Labor Statistics says 193,000 people were employed in coal mining nationwide last year, fewer than any year since 1974.

Don McCamey, vice president of District 28 of the United Mine Workers in Castlewood, said Virginia has only about 5,500 working union members now, down about half from several years ago.

"It's hard for the guys who lost their jobs to say it's definitely because of longwall," McCamey said. "But we do know the tonnages produced are so much more that it has to adversely affect them."

Westmoreland, which operates longwalls at its Bullitt and Holten mines in Virginia, closed its Wentz mine last June and laid off 365 people, Anderson said. Besides that, he said, there has been no drop in company employment recently.

But the increased production has prompted Westmoreland to contract with fewer mines, Anderson said. Figures from the Virginia Division of Mines indicate other companies with longwalls may be doing the same thing; the number of mines in Virginia has dropped from more than 800 in 1982 to 681 last year.

Karaganis said that in 1972 dollars, coal prices slipped from $15.29 a ton in 1975 to $12.08 in 1984. The collapse of the U.S. steel industry dramatically cut the demand for metallurgical coal, much of which was mined in Virginia. Today, that coal is competing for power-company business, he said.

Broker passionate about bonds

NEW YORK (AP) — Jim Lebenthal sometimes worries about making a nuisance of himself. But most of the time he's more worried about "his babies," and he's out to convince as many people as possible that they should be worried, too.

"Municipal bonds are my babies and my babies are in trouble," says the high-strung chairman of Lebenthal & Co. Inc., a bond trading firm.

The threat, he warns, comes from people in Congress who want to lessen the federal tax exemption for income from municipal bonds.

With a staccato delivery, he describes mayhem for municipalities and taxpayers if Congress tampers with an investment he has been poetically touting as "tax-free, here, now and e'er to be."

The alarm that Lebenthal, 57, conveys has become familiar to television viewers and radio listeners in the New York City area, where his firm's advertisements in which he stars are carried on several local channels.

He is a favorite speaker at industry gatherings. His lively talks focus on the rights of states and local governments to raise money for what he grandly refers to as the "rebuilding of America." He conjures up a specter of higher local taxes if those rights are abridged.

Jim Lebenthal

INVESTORS ARE willing to accept lower yields on municipal bonds because of the tax exemption, and the lower yields represent lower borrowing costs. The Public Securities Association estimates that changing the tax exemption could increase local financing costs by tens of billions of dollars.

Lebenthal says overhauling that portion of the tax code could radically alter the way bond dealers do business. The possibility of changes already have cut his family firm's business about 25 percent so far this year compared with the first quarter of 1985, he says.

During much of his career at the firm founded by his parents in the 1920s, the reasons for the existence of tax-exempt bonds were secondary to selling them.

For instance, when customers would ask what a particular bond was for, he would pooh-pooh the question. "I'd tell them, 'That's like going into a supermarket and asking for salt by a brand name. Salt is salt. The bonds are tax-free, the purpose is irrelevant.' "

Now he relies on "the patriotic virtues of bonds," he says, as a weapon in his fight to preserve them. They are virtues in which he genuinely believes.

James Avram Lebenthal was born on June 22, 1928, to Sayra Fischer Lebenthal and Louis Lebenthal. As a youngster growing up in Red Bank, N.J., he heard grim tales about hard financial times in small towns and big cities, he recalls.

"I GREW UP, as my mother says, weaned on municipal bonds, not milk. Controversy, trouble, angst were part of the lore for me in the bond business," he said.

After attending preparatory schools, he went to Princeton University where he majored in political science and was active in the school's photography service.

He joined Life magazine as a reporter after graduating from Princeton and stayed on six years during which he served for a time as a movie correspondent covering the glamorous world of film stars.

Lebenthal spent time in the advertising business, at the NBC television network and at Walt Disney Productions.

His creativity didn't go unnoticed. A short film he made,"T is for Tumbleweed," was nominated for an academy award.

Creative people are said to have their foibles. Working with highly charged personalities can be exasperating. Perhaps no one knows that better than Eleanor Lebenthal Bissinger, whose brother Jim can sometimes become a bother.

Eleanor and her husband, Gerard Bissinger, have been steering operations at the Lebenthal family firm for about three decades. She runs the back-office as executive vice president and he is president.

"I will give you one summary of Jim Lebenthal — but then I won't say another word about it," Mrs. Bissinger said. "Consistently, at ten minutes to five on Fridays he needs money. The banks are closed, the money has been sent down to the vaults so we all have to scrape around so he has cash. You would think he would remember by 2 p.m."

"I DO LOVE HIM," she added. "But he's a very difficult man to work with when it comes to rules and systems and details."

But she is more than willing to dismiss his ideosyncracies. "Jim's very creative, and he's doing a marvelous job in trying to prevent the government from savaging the municipal bond," she said.

The considerable energies he has devoted toward the municipal bond he may have inherited from his mother.

At 87 years old, Sayra Lebenthal still puts in a full day at the firm. "I'm not here as a dilettante — it's just what has kept me young," she said.

Her son, she says, "is very well-informed — and I'm not speaking as a mother. I'm speaking as someone who's been in the field for quite some time, someone who's ate, drank and slept municipal bonds for over half a century."

Once his crusade against the tax writers is over, Lebenthal says, he plans to happily devote more time to photography, filmmaking and tennis — a sport about which he confesses to be compulsive. "I am the most over-instructed tennis player in America."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Economic growth in industrialized as well as developing countries is expected to average a modest 3 percent in 1986, despite a boost from lower oil prices and interest rates, the International Monetary Fund reported.

Despite the benefits of lower oil prices, virtually all developing countries will continue to be plagued with huge debts in the coming years, the report said. Hardest hit will be those developing countries like Mexico that are also oil producers.

The new IMF report said it sees production for the world's nations, excluding the Soviet Union and some of its East European allies, as growing by 3 percent in 1986 and 3.3 percent in 1987.

It estimated that the U.S. economy would grow by 3.8 percent in 1986 and 3.4 percent in 1987. The Reagan administration has predicted 4 percent growth in both years.

"There is likely to be a substantial shift of real incomes from oil exporting to oil importing countries," said the report, released at a meeting of the 149-nation IMF and World Bank.

In a related development, a group of 10 major industrial nations in the IMF and World Bank vowed to strengthen the organizations' watch over economic performance in those countries receiving loans.

The so-called "Group of 10" also voiced unanimous support for a plan initiated by Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III to raise $29 billion in new loans for developing nations over the next three years, $20 billion of it to come from commercial banks.

Under the plan, the nations would be required to adopt major internal economic reforms to receive the funds.

Also, the five largest industrial nations — the United States, West Germany, France, Great Britain and Japan — met secretly, reportedly to evaluate the relationship of the U.S. dollar to other foreign currencies and to review earlier actions aimed at lowering interest rates.

State, local governments unlikely to help Amtrak

WASHINGTON (AP) — State and local governments may be unwilling to pitch in to help Amtrak because they believe Congress will again bail out the national passenger rail line, says a Reagan administration transportation official.

Federal Railroad Administrator John Riley, testifying before a Senate Appropriations subcommittee, also said he expected a pivotal Justice Department report on Conrail to be released this spring, and that the fate of the government-owned freight railroad should be decided this year.

The administration's proposal for Amtrak for fiscal 1987 is a repeat of last year's plan, in which it proposed ending federal subsidies. However, Congress awarded the line $616 million for 1986, down from $684 million in fiscal 1985. Amtrak's 1986 money was trimmed another $25.3 million under the 4.3 percent spending cuts of the Gramm-Rudman balanced budget law.

"If there was clear perception that funding would stop, there would be more interest," said Riley, whose agency — part of the Department of Transportation — has met with representatives of states that rely heavily on Amtrak.

But Sen. Mark Andrews, R-N.D., chairman of the transportation subcommittee, told Riley that the administration could be doing more to ensure that rail passenger service is preserved.

"We threw you the ball and you caught it, but you sure didn't run with it very far because you didn't find an alternative," he said.

Should federal subsidies end and no party step in to contribute, Amtrak "would, in all likelihood, declare bankruptcy and a trustee would be appointed to manage its affairs," Riley said.

The trustee would likely seek to preserve service in areas where private parties or regional groups offered to assume responsibility, he said.

As part of the process of making the line more self-sufficient, Amtrak President Graham Claytor Jr. said that next week, Amtrak will begin directly hiring many of its engineers, conductors and their assistants.

Many of these workers are currently employed by the freight railroads over whose tracks Amtrak operates. They are paid under the freight industry's standard of train mileage or hours of service.

Under the new system, Amtrak expects to save between $20 million and $30 million per year by paying the employees under its own contract standard, Claytor said.

IN TIMES LIKE THESE YOU NEED A FRIEND

When the price of oil drops 60 percent in a matter of weeks, and cost-cutting becomes a paramount production objective, you need a friend in the pump business.

Whether oil sells for $40 or $14 a barrel, it still takes pumps to move it on and off the lease, and during these troubled times for the oil industry, we at Master Pumps & Equipment are determined to save you, our valued friends, every dollar possible on your pumping needs.

This is our pledge to you:

- Master Pumps will not slash inventory to cut costs. We will keep our stock of pumps, pump parts and fluid end expendibles high and complete, so that you don't have to invest in an inventory of your own. In this downturn period, you need a friendly pump company where you can still purchase 99 percent of your pump needs off our shelves. After all, anybody can order parts for you, while you wait and wait and wait.
- Neither will Master Pumps slash its experienced "brain bank" of qualified and competent pump technicians and sales engineers, because in times like these you need all the friends you can get to help keep your pumps repaired and to help you with special engineering projects.
- Best of all, Master pledges to deep its margins as narrow as possible and pass on those discounts to our friends. In times like these friends need to stick together.

Friendly service is the reason why we're the fastest growing pump company in the nation. If we can take only a little of the sting out of low oil prices for our friends we will be happy. Give us a try. Let us be your friend in the pump business.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A credit union in Jersey City, N.J., was founded to help Russian emigres. In North Carolina, another was begun with the financial backing of black leaders. And in New York, Chinese-Americans stash savings into their own credit union.

What these financial entities now have in common is that a newly published guide on credit unions lists them in the top 100 for having the largest average savings per member.

"By nature, ethnic groups are savers," co-author Edgar F. Callahan said in a recent interview. "They don't build a house until they have enough money saved to afford it."

Even before the writing of the "Credit Union Directory," Callahan's bread and butter was derived from the industry.

In mid-1985, he quit after 3½ years as chairman of the National Credit Union Administration, the federal financial regulatory agency responsible for overseeing the nation's federally chartered credit unions.

Before that, he was director of the Department of Financial Institutions in Illinois.

Credit unions are non-profit financial cooperatives owned and controlled by their members. The first one, chartered in 1909 in New Hampshire under state law, was called St. Mary's Credit Union. It was started as a Roman Catholic parish credit union but evolved into a community-wide institution.

Callahan said credit unions showed initiative in recovering from the recession of 1981. The period also marked the beginning of interest rate deregulation in which credit unions — as well as other financial institutions — were thrown into competition for the first time over how much return they would offer depositors.

By dealing with deregulation well and making other smart moves, credit unions in the nation doubled their assets to $140 billion by the end of 1985.

"It was a rebirth," said Callahan. The directory lists 18,006 credit unions. Of that, 9,000 are small, and could merge with others, he said.

Credit unions had been falling right and left as factories either laid off or shut down, and that awakened them to the necessity of enrolling employees of other segments of the economy.

Another incentive for credit unions is the deterioration of public confidence in savings and loan institutions. "Your can't have what happened in Ohio and Maryland without consumers wondering where to put their IRA (Individual Retirement Account) dollars," said Callahan.

For example, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's credit union in Riverdale, Md., had projected a growth rate of 19 percent at the beginning of 1985. However, when the year ended, growth had exceeded 33 percent because of the state S&L crisis, said Chip Filson, who co-authored the directory with Callahan.

"If they continue their track record, credit unions will become the primary consumer lender in this country in less than five years," Callahan said.

Among the most successful credit unions, according to Callahan, are those started to help ethnic groups.

At least 14 credit unions having Ukrainian, Latvian, Lithuanian and Chinese titles, or associated with ethnic groups in some other way, are listed among the 100 largest when listed by average savings per member.

One of those is New American, a 1,000-member New Jersey credit union founded five years ago to help Soviets resettle in the United States. It is open to dues-paying members of the Committee for the Absorption of Soviet Emigres.

Schwartz said the average member's balance is so high because a relatively few members — "less than 10 percent" — maintain large deposits.

The second-highest average savings is $17,261 by members of the Inter-American Development Bank's credit union here. The depositors are largely South Americans on assignment with the bank, said Filson.

Self-Help of Durham, N.C., a credit union originally backed by black leaders and businesses, had $8,904 savings per member, placing it 13th.

Hearst News and Feature Service

SAN FRANCISCO – The Hyundai Excel, the South Korean economy car with an eye-catching sticker price of $4,995, is a hot, new item on car lots. Hyundai could sell 100,000 cars this year in the United States, more than triple the record for a new import — that record was set by Mitsubishi in 1981 — according to J. David Power of J.D. Power & Associates, a Los Angeles marketing firm that follows the car industry.

Hyundai Motor America, the Garden Grove, Calif.-based subsidiary of Hyundai Motor Co., says meeting its goal of selling 100,000 cars this year would give it 1 percent of the U.S. market. But Power said that figure may be too modest.

"The car is very good," he said. "It's perhaps 80 percent of the Japanese standards today, but it's still a very strong car and of better quality than most cars on the road."

The Hyundai Excel comes in three models. The basic Excel hatchback carries a base price of $4,995. The Excel GL, which includes an upgraded interior, five-speed transmission and several other amenities, lists for $5,895. The Excel GLS, a fully loaded five-speed, has a manufacturer's suggested retail price of $6,395.

Hyundai's base price is nearly $1,000 lower than that of comparable bottom-of-the-line Japanese models such as the Toyota Tercel, Nissan Sentra and Honda Civic. It also is about $1,000 cheaper than cars sold under domestic labels, such as he Chevy Chevette, Chevy Sprint and Dodge Colt.

It's a price that could find favor with American car buyers suffering from sticker shock. The reason for the lower price: Lower labor costs. The average hourly wage for autoworkers in South Korea is $3, about a fifth of that in Japan.

However, the Excel is not the lowest priced new car on the U.S. market. The Yugo, a Yugoslavian car, arrived last year with a suggested retail price of $3,990. About 15,000 were sold. But analysts say Hyundais have a better track record than the Yugo. Power said design technology on the Yugo is more than 15 years old, and the car has encountered some repair problems.

The Hyundai can boast of results in Canada, where it has captured 10 percent of the market in two years with its Pony model. The venture is backed by Mitsubishi Motors, which owns 15 percent of Hyundai Motors.

Hyundai spokesman Joshua Ryan said the company is intentionally offering the Excel through a limited number of dealers to keep down prices. The idea is to offer more vehicles to a select group of dealers so they can make profit through high-volume sales instead of markups.

Japanese producers have turned their attention to larger compact cars such as the Toyota Celica or Mazda 323 DXi that offer higher profit margins. But their higher prices have alienated some consumers and may open a wedge for Hyundai in the subcompact market, according to Jeanette Garretty, senior economist with Bank of America.

Who is buying the South Korean car? Initially, at least, it has been Koreans, according to the first dealer to receive the cars in the San Francisco area. During the first week of sales at the dealership, three fourths of the buyers were of Korean ancestry. About a quarter of the buyers since that time have been of Korean descent.

Industry experts say logical buyers for the Excel include college students, first-time car buyers and people looking for second cars for a commute.

Output upped at Livingston Parish

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Amoco Production Co. has begun producing additional oil from the Lockhart Crossing field in Livingston Parish where $26 million has been spent on enhanced recovery.

The field is currently producing 4,800 barrels per day and the figure is rising. Last April, the field was producing 4,500 barrels of oil per day, falling to 4,200 in October. Dick Fitch, Amoco production manager, said production would have contined to decline without waterflood secondary recovery operations.

Amoco's partners in the field are Callon, a group of Dallas investors, Tenexplo Corp., Chevron, Sabine Corp., Transco Exploration Partners, Ltd., Franks Petroleum Inc., and a group of smaller companies.

Fitch said production should increase over the next nine months to 6,500 barrels of oil per day by year's end. This field will have 28 production wells and 22 water injection wells.

The Lockhart Crossing Wilcox field was discovered in 1962 by Callon Petroleum of Natchez, Miss.

In mid-1985, he quit after 3½ years as chairman of the National Credit Union Administration, the federal financial regulatory agency responsible for overseeing the nation's federally chartered credit unions.

Before that, he was director of the Department of Financial Institutions in Illinois.

Credit unions are non-profit financial cooperatives owned and controlled by their members. The first one, chartered in 1909 in New Hampshire under state law, was called St. Mary's Credit Union. It was started as a Roman Catholic parish credit union but evolved into a community-wide institution.

Callahan said credit unions showed initiative in recovering from the recession of 1981. The period also marked the beginning of interest rate deregulation in which credit unions — as well as other financial institutions — were thrown into competition for the first time over how much return they would offer depositors.

By dealing with deregulation well and making other smart moves, credit unions in the nation doubled their assets to $140 billion by the end of 1985.

"It was a rebirth," said Callahan. The directory lists 18,006 credit unions. Of that, 9,000 are small, and could merge with others, he said.

Credit unions had been falling right and left as factories either laid off or shut down, and that awakened them to the necessity of enrolling employees of other segments of the economy.

Another incentive for credit unions is the deterioration of public confidence in savings and loan institutions. "Your can't have what happened in Ohio and Maryland without consumers wondering where to put their IRA (Individual Retirement Account) dollars," said Callahan.

For example, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's credit union in Riverdale, Md., had projected a growth rate of 19 percent at the beginning of 1985. However, when the year ended, growth had exceeded 33 percent because of the state S&L crisis, said Chip Filson, who co-authored the directory with Callahan.

"If they continue their track record, credit unions will become the primary consumer lender in this country in less than five years," Callahan said.

Among the most successful credit unions, according to Callahan, are those started to help ethnic groups.

At least 14 credit unions having Ukrainian, Latvian, Lithuanian and Chinese titles, or associated with ethnic groups in some other way, are listed among the 100 largest when listed by average savings per member.

One of those is New American, a 1,000-member New Jersey credit union founded five years ago to help Soviets resettle in the United States. It is open to dues-paying members of the Committee for the Absorption of Soviet Emigres.

Schwartz said the average member's balance is so high because a relatively few members — "less than 10 percent" — maintain large deposits.

The second-highest average savings is $17,261 by members of the Inter-American Development Bank's credit union here. The depositors are largely South Americans on assignment with the bank, said Filson.

Self-Help of Durham, N.C., a credit union originally backed by black leaders and businesses, had $8,904 savings per member, placing it 13th.

The Chinese-American credit union in New York also made the top 100 with $6,116 in average savings per member.

Hearst News and Feature Service

SAN FRANCISCO – The Hyundai Excel, the South Korean economy car with an eye-catching sticker price of $4,995, is a hot, new item on car lots. Hyundai could sell 100,000 cars this year in the United States, more than triple the record for a new import — that record was set by Mitsubishi in 1981 — according to J. David Power of J.D. Power & Associates, a Los Angeles marketing firm that follows the car industry.

Hyundai Motor America, the Garden Grove, Calif.-based subsidiary of Hyundai Motor Co., says meeting its goal of selling 100,000 cars this year would give it 1 percent of the U.S. market. But Power said that figure may be too modest.

"The car is very good," he said. "It's perhaps 80 percent of the Japanese standards today, but it's still a very strong car and of better quality than most cars on the road."

The Hyundai Excel comes in three models. The basic Excel hatchback carries a base price of $4,995. The Excel GL, which includes an upgraded interior, five-speed transmission and several other amenities, lists for $5,895. The Excel GLS, a fully loaded five-speed, has a manufacturer's suggested retail price of $6,395.

Hyundai's base price is nearly $1,000 lower than that of comparable bottom-of-the-line Japanese models such as the Toyota Tercel, Nissan Sentra and Honda Civic. It also is about $1,000 cheaper than cars sold under domestic labels, such as he Chevy Chevette, Chevy Sprint and Dodge Colt.

It's a price that could find favor with American car buyers suffering from sticker shock. The reason for the lower price: Lower labor costs. The average hourly wage for autoworkers in South Korea is $3, about a fifth of that in Japan.

However, the Excel is not the lowest priced new car on the U.S. market. The Yugo, a Yugoslavian car, arrived last year with a suggested retail price of $3,990. About 15,000 were sold. But analysts say Hyundais have a better track record than the Yugo. Power said design technology on the Yugo is more than 15 years old, and the car has encountered some repair problems.

The Hyundai can boast of results in Canada, where it has captured 10 percent of the market in two years with its Pony model. The venture is backed by Mitsubishi Motors, which owns 15 percent of Hyundai Motors.

Hyundai spokesman Joshua Ryan said the company is intentionally offering the Excel through a limited number of dealers to keep down prices. The idea is to offer more vehicles to a select group of dealers so they can make profit through high-volume sales instead of markups.

Japanese producers have turned their attention to larger compact cars such as the Toyota Celica or Mazda 323 DXi that offer higher profit margins. But their higher prices have alienated some consumers and may open a wedge for Hyundai in the subcompact market, according to Jeanette Garretty, senior economist with Bank of America.

Who is buying the South Korean car? Initially, at least, it has been Koreans, according to the first dealer to receive the cars in the San Francisco area. During the first week of sales at the dealership, three fourths of the buyers were of Korean ancestry. About a quarter of the buyers since that time have been of Korean descent.

Industry experts say logical buyers for the Excel include college students, first-time car buyers and people looking for second cars for a commute.

Output upped at Livingston Parish

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Amoco Production Co. has begun producing additional oil from the Lockhart Crossing field in Livingston Parish where $26 million has been spent on enhanced recovery.

The field is currently producing 4,800 barrels per day and the figure is rising. Last April, the field was producing 4,500 barrels of oil per day, falling to 4,200 in October. Dick Fitch, Amoco production manager, said production would have contined to decline without waterflood secondary recovery operations.

Amoco's partners in the field are Calion, a group of Dallas investors, Tenexplo Corp., Chevron, Sabine Corp., Transco Exploration Partners, Ltd., Franks Petroleum Inc., and a group of smaller companies.

Fitch said production should increase over the next nine months to 6,500 barrels of oil per day by year's end. This field will have 28 production wells and 22 water injection wells.

The Lockhart Crossing Wilcox field was discovered in 1962 by Calion Petroleum of Natchez, Miss.

Bill Starnes

"I'm a native Texan. I've lived here all my life," says Bill Starnes, executive producer of the two-hour ABC television special "Texas 150: A Celebration Special," scheduled to air at 8 p.m. Monday.

"I don't think we really realize the mystic that exists about Texas around the world and around the country...I did a three-day outdoor show in Wisconsin and Conway Twitty's bus drove in right before me, and we drove in in a car with Texas license plates. They ignored the bus and started hollowering, 'Hey Tex, Hey Tex.'"

Starnes laughs. His face and robust laugh indicate he is no stranger to laughter. This Beaumont native has covered many entertainment miles since his dad pulled him out of Allen Military Academy when he was 14½ years old. He has managed such performers as George Jones, Ray Price, Tammy Wynette, David Allen Coe and Gary Morris; produced movies, owned and managed the Beaumont nightclub The Palace and was the creator and producer of Wrangler Country Star Search, which involved 168,000 contestants nationwide.

The list of performers participating in Monday's "Texas sized birthday party" — an endeavor Starnes has been working on for the past 16 months — reads like a Who's Who list of celebrity names from Texas, including Tommy Tune, Sandy Duncan, Willie Nelson, Freddy Fender and pianist Van Cliburn.

"It's funny how something like that happens," Starnes says in a recent interview held when he flew into the area for the day. "When it really happens and you get it together, then it starts snowballing and everybody wants on the show. And, of course, you can't put everybody on in two hours, so in some of these cases we have to take people who aren't nationally known like a Jerry Jeff Walker or Rusty Weir — people who I have great admiration for — and just introduce them from the audience."

The event will be taped at 7 p.m. today at the 10,500-seat Frank Erwin Center in Austin. The Statewide Volunteer Capitol Committee is selling tickets to the taping and proceeds will go to the restoration of the State Capitol.

Producer Joe Cates, writer Chet Hagan and Starnes will leave Austin around 9:30 p.m. today on a bus bound for Dallas for post production work before handing the show to ABC for transmission to New York Monday.

Starnes, who is president of Eagle Fidelity Corp., an investment firm specializing in entertainment events, credits Cates and Hagen with being largely responsible for his success in selling the show to ABC. Cates, who has produced over 70 television specials in the past eight years, has two Emmy's to his credit and Hagen, a 20-year veteran of NBC who spent four years producing The Today Show, has one. In addition, lighting director is Fred "Red" McKinnon, who has been commissioned to light the Statue of Liberty and an aircraft carrier at the July 4th celebration.

Starnes remembers how he got started in this business.

"My dad owned some nightclubs in Beaumont and a disc jockey on a radio station talked him into becoming a manager for a singer named Lefty Frizzell. My dad had never done anything like that. He'd had him about two months.

"One day — I was going to Allen Military Academy at Bryan — he showed up, took me out of school, took me to Beaumont and bought me a bunch of suits. That night he put me in a car and on the road with Lefty to make sure Lefty would show up where he was supposed to go. I also worked the door and sold tickets for $2 a head, which was big, because Lefty was the biggest thing around at that time."

"From that we founded a record company with a guy in Houston named Pappy Daily. And this record company was called Stardate. The first artist we recorded was George Jones. The second song we recorded is still a country standard called 'Ya'll Come.'"

After his parents divorced when he was 16, Starnes left Texas.

"I went to Nashville and lived with Col. Tom Parker, who at that time managed Eddie Arnold. But I was with the Colonel, working for the Colonel, when he first saw Elvis in Memphis.

His next course of action, he thought, was going to remove him from the entertainment business for two years. He joined the Air Force.

"I went into the service to run away from home. My dad and I were always at conflict. He would take me out and have me do something, like be gone on the road with Lefty Frizzell for 30 days. I'd pay the band; I'd work the door. At 14½, I weighed 225 lbs and was 6 foot tall so I looked like I was a man.

"But, when we would come home, then I was a kid again and I couldn't adjust to both of them. I had some real resentment about it. So I went to the Air Force for 2½ years, and it's funny, I thought I was going into the Air Force to be a radio operator and ended up running the airmen's and NCO club in Japan because of the experience I'd had. I could inherit a billion dollars tomorrow and couldn't live as good as I did those two years in Japan."

'Legend' not glowingly good film

By DAVID LEE FORREST

Forrest

If there's one thing that the director of "Legend," Ridley Scott, understands, it's light. This British filmmaker is one of the masters of motion picture lighting.

Scott's first big success was the science-fiction thriller "Alien." A Gothic cathedral with sunlight streaming through its rose windows could hardly have looked better on film than many of the wonderfully illuminated spaceship interiors seen in "Alien."

Scott also put a flashing strobe light to devastatingly effective use in that movie's scary climax.

His next effort, 1982's futuristic detective film "Blade Runner," made such heavy use of brilliant neon lights surrounded by dark, ominous shadows that some viewers complained about it giving them headaches. It may, however, have been the ultimate color update of the classic black-and-white style of 1940s film noir movies.

In "Legend," Scott once again uses some of the prettiest lighting imaginable, but it doesn't shine on much of a story.

The film is set in a storybook-style fairyland, peopled with the traditional crew of elves, fairies, dwarves, demons and unicorns. The unicorns are an endangered species — there are only two of them — and since they are the sole reason the sun rises each day, every one of the fairyland folks are very protective of them.

Everyone, that is, except for the Lord of Darkness. This horned, cloven-hooved personification of evil — referred to, believe it or not, by his minions as "The Big D" — finds daylight singularly distasteful and wants to kill the unicorns.

The two innocents unwittingly lure the unicorns within range of a goblin's poison arrow. One of the unicorns is poisoned and dehorned while the other is captured. All hell, literally, breaks loose.

Lili is taken captive by the Big D, who tries to seduce her. The audience can tell her soul is endangered when she trades in her frilly damsel-in-distress outfit for heavy makeup, black fishnet stockings and a low-cut dress that makes her look a little like bad horror movie hostess Elvira.

You can't help but notice the lighting since things are constantly floating through the air to be hit by the light. Jack has to slog through some simply astonishing clouds of airborne dandelion fluff, flower petals, leaves, snow and even soap bubbles.

Jack is played by Tom Cruise, who was so good in the satirical "Risky Business" (the '80s reply to "The Graduate"). He manages to get through all of "Legend," though, with three basic facial expressions — blank, befuddled and annoyed.

Lili is played by newcomer Mia Sara, who may not be a bad actress, but isn't given enough decent material in "Legend" for one to really be able to tell.

The Lord of Darkness is played by Tim Curry, best known for playing a Frankenstein-like transvestite from outer space in the outrageously bad cult film, "The Rocky Horror Picture Show." He is almost unrecognizable, having traded in his "Rocky Horror" black lace garter belt for thick layers of red makeup. He seems to be the only one who may actually be having some fun in "Legend."

Of course, maybe it's because he doesn't have to spend as much time being pelted by all that dandelion fluff.

The film's flaws may seem as thick as that flying fluff simply because much of the rest of the movie was blown away. Universal Studios reportedly cut more than 30 minutes from Scott's finished version. Not long ago, Universal tried to do the same thing to Terry Gilliam's controversial "Brazil," sparking a lengthy, well-publicized battle that Gilliam finally won.

While "Legend's" weaknesses are legion, Scott — a genuinely talented director — may not be responsible for all of them.

Odd 'Troll' laced with droll humor

The title troll — not to be confused with a cutesy gnome — is an ugly little creature lurking in the bowels of an apartment building. He kidnaps a little girl, then uses his handy magic ring to change shape and masquerade as her.

While pretending to be the little girl, he still eats like a pig, bellows like a mad beast, bites people and trashes virtually everything in sight — in other words, he acts pretty much like an average kid.

Bono — of Sonny and Cher fame — is hilarious as one of the family's neighbors. He plays a single guy who is so hip that his swinging bachelor pad is decorated with not just one, but two lava lamps.

Bono's swinging days are cut short when the troll turns him into a seedling that not only sprouts into a veritable indoor jungle, but also produces a flock of new little baby trolls. The troll proceeds to perform this unpleasant transformation on virtually everyone else in the apartment building, slowly acquiring a small army of trolls.

"Troll" was directed by John Buechler, who did his own special effects for the film. He also designed a similar special effect creature for the recent Z-grade horror-comedy, "Terrorvision."

Buechler has a fairly distinctive style that no less an authority than the New York Times has described as "slime-happy."

His trolls have their own bizarre charm, much like the surreal little creatures in 1984's "Gremlins." The trolls resemble the slimiest, ugliest Muppets imaginable and are surprisingly cute, in a odd, homely way.

Veteran actress June Lockhart plays a feisty, no-nonsense witch who also just happens to reside in the same apartment building as Buechler's terrible troll troupe. She quickly gets fed up with the trolls — whom she refers to as "those little creeps" — and joins the fray.

New Zealand sends scifi 'Quiet Earth'

There have been plenty of Last Man On Earth science fiction films, but "The Quiet Earth" is probably the first one ever made in New Zealand.

New Zealand's tiny film industry has picked up momentum in recent years, apparently fueled by the strong emergence of the motion pictures from neighboring Australia.

Australia burst on the international film scene with quite a flash in the late 1970s. Australian directors as diverse as Peter Weir — "The Last Wave," "Picnic at Hanging Rock," "Gallipoli" and "Year of Living Dangerously" — and George Miller — "Mad Max" and its sequels — became major talents.

New Zealand hasn't made such a splash, but has gained some visibility. Probably the best-known movie from New Zealand was "Smash Palace," an unusual combination of divorce drama and action film starring the talented Bruno Lawrence.

Lawrence also appears in "The Quiet Earth." He plays a man who wakes up to an exceptionally quiet morning in New Zealand. He gradually discovers that the reason things are so quiet is that everyone else seems to be have simply vanished leaving no corpses or clues behind.

The film, directed by Geoff Murphy, comes up with some extremely good details about what would happen if everyone were just whisked off the earth. An airliner, its crew and passengers gone, simply falls to the ground. A highway department truck drawing centerlines on a road just veers off the road, leaving a crooked streak behind it.

At first, Lawrence is naturally alarmed, then like the teen survivors in last year's "Night of the Comet," finds that there is at least one advantage to being the Last Person On Earth — or at least the Last Person in Auckland — the stores are permanently open.

He moves into a mansion, goes on a wild shopping spree, then, tired with playing with a toy train, takes off to play with a real one. Eventually, of course, he completely loses control, starts wearing dresses and decides that perhaps he's God.

This idea is more than wiped out by his eventual discovery that there are still a couple of other survivors left — played by Alison Routledge and Peter Smith — which looks like it might lead to the Last Menage A Trois On Earth.

"The Quiet Earth's" explanation of what happened to the rest of humanity is essentially some gobbledy-gook about an ominous global experiment conducted by the United States, but even though this part may not make much sense, the film does have many genuinely thought-provoking moments.

It is also directed with great visual style by Murphy, who provides the audience with plenty of odd, sometimes humorous surprises. The enigmatic final scene of his movie has been compared to the mysterious closing shot of Stanley Kubrick's "2001: A Space Odyssey," but with its wit and zip, "The Quiet Earth" most resembles a trip into New Zealand's version of "The Twilight Zone."

BILL

He also used the time to finish high school and come within nine hours of completing a bachelor's degree.

He recalls the education he received during his teen-age years when he was traveling with Frizzell. "I was a snotty nosed smart kid, and I found out I wasn't near as smart as I thought I was."

"I managed Ray Price, who, when my dad had Frizzell, was just the front singer in that band. I've managed George (Jones) three times. I was with George and Tammy (Wynette) — I'm in Tammy's book 'Stand By Your Man' — when they went through all the fun they went through.

"I've done about everything in the entertainment busines that you can do. I worked the stage at Woodstock. I worked the stage at the first Texas International Pop Festival. I've produced other TV shows. And I've produced 20 top 10 records, 2 million sellers."

"It was being in the right place at the right time with some good PR from some people like Steve (Lassiter, who travels with him now). I took a place, the Palace, that had gone bankrupt three times and did just under $4 million of business the first year."

It wasn't a job he enjoyed.

"It was terrible. You had to be there every night. My deal with my partners that I had in there was at the end of the first year I could start to do something else. And what I wanted to do was an national telecontest.

"So I went to Wrangler Jeans and began a contest called Wrangler Country Star Search, the spin off of that is now the Star Search Television Show that Ed McMahon is the host of.

"In that year and a half, we visited every state in the United States except Hawaii, had 168,000 contestents and ended up with winners from 49 states. One of the conditions of that contract was that I had to have a two-hour television show at the end of event.

"Well, I talked to Dick Clark and a bunch of other people. And everytime I talked to them I got a different story about how you did television. So I found a guy I thought was telling me the truth, and he was. And we put together the TV show ourself and syndicated it, and did real well with it."

That was a turning point in Starnes' life.

"I decided I wanted to get in the TV business because it wasn't near as hard as management or anything like that," he says. He laughs. "You could do two or three shows a year and make as much money as you could running around all over the country every day with a star. That move is how I ended up in Midland today, doing a two-hour nationwide television special for ABC."

When Starnes was offered a job by ABC last year as vice president of promotional ideas, he turned it down. He would have to live in New York City and besides, he's been self-employed for most of his life and likes it that way. In reviewing his life he says, "I've lived a full life; I've done everything I want to do."

Hines to perform with chorale

The Midland-Odessa Symphony and Chorale will be presenting their final concert of the 1985-86 Master Season with guest artist bass-baritone Jerome Hines Tuesday at Midland's Lee High School auditorium and Thursday at Odessa's Bonham Junior High School Auditorium. Both concerts begin at 8 p.m.

The concert will also feature the Midland-Odessa Symphony and Chorale, Midland College Choir, Odessa College Choir and UTPB's University Singers. The Midland performance will include the voices of the Sam Houston, Bowie and Bonham Elementary Schools' choirs and the Odessa performance will include the choirs of Blackshear, Ireland and Milam Magnet Schools.

The concert, with voice and orchestra, will include selections from Richard Strauss' "Don Juan," Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe," in addition to works by Verdi, Mozart and Boito.

Tickets are $12 reserved, $9 general admission and $4 for students and senior citizens, and may be purchased at Texas Commerce Bank in Midland and Odessa, or at the door the evening of the concerts. For more information, call the Symphony office at 563-5269.

'Alexander' exhibit at museum

BIG SPRING — The conquests of Prince Alexander of Macedonia is captured in a photographic exhibition, "The Search for Alexander," at the Heritage Museum in Big Spring. The exhibit, which is on display through May 23, gives viewers an opportunity to study images of relics recently discovered in northern Greece, the seat of ancient Macedonia.

The photographic display is based on an international exhibition of Greek antiquities, "The Search for Alexander," which appeared at the New Orleans Museum of Art in 1982.

Harris paintings, ceramics exhibited at bank

Boyd Harris is exhibiting a selection of paintings and ceramics in the lobby of RepublicBank First National Midland through Wednesday. The public is invited to view the exhibit during business hours.

Born in South Dakota and raised in New Mexico and the Southwest, Harris was influenced by the land, culture and people of the West.

Gwyn's paintings at Museum of Southwest

A showing of recent works by Woody Gwyn has opened at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave. The show will hang through June 1.

Gwyn's primary subject matter over the years has been landscapes of Texas, New Mexico and California.

Esteem Machine to hold auditionsfor '86-87

The Esteem Machine, a teen theater repertory company, is conducting tryouts for the 1986-87 troupe at 1 p.m. Saturday. All tryouts will be at Memorial Christian Church, 1001 Andrews Highway.

Teens in the Permian Basin who are currently in the 8th-11th grades (who will be 9th-12th graders in the fall) are eligible. Actors, actresses, singers, and piano and guitar players are being sought. "These teens don't need any acting experience to be selected," said Tricia Shelton, producer/director for the troupe.

"We have a very extensive educational program during the summer and throughout the year so the teens can become very knowledgeable about the subjects they are addressing," continued Shelton.

The Esteem Machine has performed for over 2,000 teens and adults in its first year, helping open comunication between parents and other adults, teens and their peers. Skits and music on subjects of communication, chemical abuse, sexuality, suicide, and stress are developed by members of the teen theater committee and the teen actors.

Teen theater is an educational program of Planned Parenthood of the Permian Basin and is funded primarily by the Department of Human Resources. In March the Esteem Machine was presented one of five Health Promotion Awards from the Texas Department of Health.

For more information on the auditions, contact Tricia Shelton at 687-1016, or Karen Hildebrand, education director for PPPB at 563-2530.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF
© 1986 Tribune Media Services, Inc

DEAR MR. GOREN

A.—First, let's clear up a misunderstanding. An optional double of a preemptive bid shows a no trump type of hand, and I am sure that's not what you mean. You really want to know whether I use takeout doubles or the Fishbein convention as a defense against preemptive opening bids. Bear in mind that partner can always convert your takeout double to penalties if he judges that is the right thing to do.

Next, let's describe Fishbein for those of our readers who do not know the convention. It was devised by the late Harry Fishbein as a method of protection against players who liked to psyche opening three-bids. A double of a preemptive bid was for penalties; a bid in the next higher-ranking suit was for takeout. Partner was never allowed to pass the takeout bid, because the action could have been based on a two-suited hand that did not include the suit bid.

The drawback of this method is obvious. Often, you are forced into a contract at one level higher than you should be. Even if the opponents can't double, you lose a lot of useful partscore contracts.

From the foregoing, you might have judged that I favor a takeout double as the best method of defense against preempts. Since you are forcing partner to bid at the three-level or higher, you need a pretty good hand to take that action. Most play that a takeout double of a three-bid shows a hand about a king stronger than the requirements for a takeout double of a one-level opening bid, i.e., the equivalent of 15-16 points.

When partner makes a takeout double of a three-bid, he presumes that you have at least 6-7 points. Therefore, if that is all you hold, or only a little more, you should make the cheapest bid you have available in your best suit. With 9-10 points or better you can jump in your suit or bid three no trump with a stopper in the enemy suit. If you have the values for game, but are not sure which suit to pick, you can cue-bid the enemy suit to force partner to make the choice. That action does not promise control of the enemy suit.

If you have to choose between an aggressive or conservative action in response to your partner's takeout double, bear in mind that suits are likely to break badly—the preemptor has already warned you that he is likely to be short in a couple of suits. Err on the side of caution. Especially in duplicated bridge, where plus scores are very important.

UTPB to do classic Texas comedy

ODESSA — In honor of the Texas Sesquincentennial, the University of Texas of the Permian basin is presenting the classic Texas comedy, "The Oldest Living Graduate," one of three outstanding plays from the acclaimed work "A Texas Trilogy" by the late Preston Jones. The play, directed by Paul Baker, will be presented at 8 p.m. Friday at the Odessa High School Auditorium.

"The Oldest Living Graduate," the final play in the trilogy, focuses on one of the Jones' most memorable characters, the feisty and slightly senile Col. J.C. Kinkaid, oldest living graduate of Mirabeau B. Lamar Military Academy. Plans are now being made to honor the Colonel in a big academy celebration, but plans are also being made to sell offf the Colonel's land, a scheme he fiercely fights, cantankerous and determined, the Colonel is not about to let his family sacrifice the land that holds so many memories and secrets.

With the exception of two characters, the Paramount production will feature a cast of Texas actors. Auditions were held in San Antonio, Austin, Houston and Dallas to glean the best acting talent the state has to offer. Tickets, priced at $5, may be purchased at the Student Life Office, U.T. Permian Basin, 4901 East University, Odessa.

Wilborn

A former Odessa resident and Odessa College student was selected one of the Outstanding American Singers to perform for the newly organized Austin Lyric Opera Company earlier this month.

Kip Wilborn, who studied under Janice Archer of Midland, performed with two other top singers: Larry Alexander, a baritone from New York, and Kay Pascal, soprano from Houston. For the program, Wilborn sang an aria and duet from "La Boheme" by Puccini, an aria from "Rigoletto" by Mozart, and the Pearl Fisherman's duet.

General Manager Joe McLain said Wilborn "was the hit of the evening — with a brilliant voice that soars and touches the heart and soul."

In May, Wilborn will be auditioning in New York. In October he will come to Midland and Odessa to present two concerts, according to Ms. Archer.

Three years ago, Ms. Archer changed Wilborn's voice from a baritone into a tenor. Four months later, when he was 20, she took him to the District Metropolitan Opera Auditions in El Paso where he received an Award of Distinction for his performance.

Since then he has attended the University of Missouri at Kansas City Conservatory and has accrued a long list of operatic roles and performances including Don Ottavio in "Don Giovanni" by Mozart, Mr. Owen in "Postcard from Morroco" by Argento, Ernesto in "Don Pasquale" by Donizetti, Basilio and Curzio in "Marriage of Figaro" by Mozart, Paquillo in "La Perchole" by Offenbach, Pinkerton in "Madame Butterfly" by Puccini, solo quintet in "Sweeney Todd" by Sondheim, "St. Matthew Passion" by Bach, "The Messiah" by Handel, "St. Paul Passion" by Mendelssohn, "The Requiem" by Mozart and "Laud to the Nativity" by Respheghi.

He has performed with the Kansas City Lyric and Community Opera Companies, and the University of Kansas Opera Workshop and the conservatory.

He is a full-time aid soloist at the Second Presbyterian Church and is on the voice faculty of the University of Kansas City. He will complete his degree in May.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Monday, April 28, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Money worries fade as success comes more easily in the months ahead. An investment provides a happy surprise. Use the phone to drum up valuable financial or political support. Spring weddings enjoy highly favorable influences. Honeymoon near sand and surf. Romance takes on extra sparkle during the summer months. Be careful not to lose contact with loyal friends during your climb to the top. An honest appraisal is much more valuable than flattery.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Prestige is easier to come by than money now. Making changes for the sake of change would be a mistake. Be certain you will receive long-term benefits before making a switch.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Keep abreast of the latest developments in your field by reading or taking a refresher course. Your keen sense of humor is the key to your rapport with difficult member of opposite sex.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Choosing the right business partners could mean the difference between success and failure. Keep records of phone conversations; you could be asked to testify to what was said.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Seek advice from experts regarding the best investments. Term deposits may pay higher interest than savings accounts. A promotion could depend on your accuracy and speed.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): So-called "friends" may try to cash in on your suggestions. Protect your ideas. Take a conventional approach to business problems. Someone influential is monitoring your work.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A friend offers excellent advice -- follow it and you benefit financially. Pin mate down about a sensitive matter; the two of you need to deal with it promptly and realistically.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A good day for introspection. Take a child into your confidence regarding family finances. Catch up on your business and personal correspondence. Give romance a chance to cool off.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your enthusiasm is contagious now. Others jump on the bandwagon, giving you the support you need to succeed. A member of the opposite sex influences your spending habits. Limit luxury purchases.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your interest in current events helps you uncover valuable inside information. A languishing love relationship could catch fire again. Encourage someone to follow his/her conscience.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Poor eating habits could be causing you discomfort. Eat foods that are good for you. Today's events give you a valuable look into the future. The fallout from a mistake will be light.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You will get your way if you are completely honest. An unexpected development boosts your spirits. You need the facts in order to make the correct decision. Insist on answers to your questions.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Let others handle their personal problems; you need to focus on your own concerns. A business plan could hit a snag. Do not despair! Everything will be fine by week's end.

Esteem Machine to hold auditionsfor '86-87

The Esteem Machine, a teen theater repertory company, is conducting tryouts for the 1986-87 troupe at 1 p.m. Saturday. All tryouts will be at Memorial Christian Church, 1001 Andrews Highway.

Teens in the Permian Basin who are currently in the 8th-11th grades (who will be 9th-12th graders in the fall) are eligible. Actors, actresses, singers, and piano and guitar players are being sought. "These teens don't need any acting experience to be selected," said Tricia Shelton, producer/director for the troupe.

"We have a very extensive educational program during the summer and throughout the year so the teens can become very knowledgeable about the subjects they are addressing," continued Shelton.

The Esteem Machine has performed for over 2,000 teens and adults in its first year, helping open comunication between parents and other adults, teens and their peers. Skits and music on subjects of communication, chemical abuse, sexuality, suicide, and stress are developed by members of the teen theater committee and the teen actors.

Teen theater is an educational program of Planned Parenthood of the Permian Basin and is funded primarily by the Department of Human Resources. In March the Esteem Machine was presented one of five Health Promotion Awards from the Texas Department of Health.

For more information on the auditions, contact Tricia Shelton at 687-1016, or Karen Hildebrand, education director for PPPB at 563-2530.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF
©1986 Tribune Media Services, Inc

DEAR MR. GOREN

A.—First, let's clear up a misunderstanding. An optional double of a preemptive bid shows a no trump type of hand, and I am sure that's not what you mean. You really want to know whether I use takeout doubles or the Fishbein convention as a defense against preemptive opening bids. Bear in mind that partner can always convert your takeout double to penalties if he judges that is the right thing to do.

Next, let's describe Fishbein for those of our readers who do not know the convention. It was devised by the late Harry Fishbein as a method of protection against players who liked to psyche opening three-bids. A double of a preemptive bid was for penalties; a bid in the next higher-ranking suit was for takeout. Partner was never allowed to pass the takeout bid, because the action could have been based on a two-suited hand that did not include the suit bid.

The drawback of this method is obvious. Often, you are forced into a contract at one level higher than you should be. Even if the opponents can't double, you lose a lot of useful partscore contracts.

From the foregoing, you might have judged that I favor a takeout double as the best method of defense against preempts. Since you are forcing partner to bid at the three-level or higher, you need a pretty good hand to take that action. Most play that a takeout double of a three-bid shows a hand about a king stronger than the requirements for a takeout double of a one-level opening bid, i.e., the equivalent of 15-16 points.

When partner makes a takeout double of a three-bid, he presumes that you have at least 6-7 points. Therefore, if that is all you hold, or only a little more, you should make the cheapest bid you have available in your best suit. With 9-10 points or better you can jump in your suit or bid three no trump with a stopper in the enemy suit. If you have the values for game, but are not sure which suit to pick, you can cue-bid the enemy suit to force partner to make the choice. That action does not promise control of the enemy suit.

If you have to choose between an aggressive or conservative action in response to your partner's takeout double, bear in mind that suits are likely to break badly—the preemptor has already warned you that he is likely to be short in a couple of suits. Err on the side of caution. Especially in duplicated bridge, where plus scores are very important.

UTPB to do classic Texas comedy

ODESSA — In honor of the Texas Sesquincentennial, the University of Texas of the Permian basin is presenting the classic Texas comedy, "The Oldest Living Graduate," one of three outstanding plays from the acclaimed work "A Texas Trilogy" by the late Preston Jones. The play, directed by Paul Baker, will be presented at 8 p.m. Friday at the Odessa High School Auditorium.

"The Oldest Living Graduate," the final play in the trilogy, focuses on one of the Jones' most memorable characters, the feisty and slightly senile Col. J.C. Kinkaid, oldest living graduate of Mirabeau B. Lamar Military Academy. Plans are now being made to honor the Colonel in a big academy celebration, but plans are also being made to sell offf the Colonel's land, a scheme he fiercely fights. cantankerous and determined, the Colonel is not about to let his family sacrifice the land that holds so many memories and secrets.

With the exception of two characters, the Paramount production will feature a cast of Texas actors. Auditions were held in San Antonio, Austin, Houston and Dallas to glean the best acting talent the state has to offer. Tickets, priced at $5, may be purchased at the Student Life Office, U.T. Permian Basin, 4901 East University, Odessa.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Monday, April 28, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Money worries fade as success comes more easily in the months ahead. An investment provides a happy surprise. Use the phone to drum up valuable financial or political support. Spring weddings enjoy highly favorable influences. Honeymoon near sand and surf. Romance takes on extra sparkle during the summer months. Be careful not to lose contact with loyal friends during your climb to the top. An honest appraisal is much more valuable than flattery.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Prestige is easier to come by than money now. Making changes for the sake of change would be a mistake. Be certain you will receive long-term benefits before making a switch.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Keep abreast of the latest developments in your field by reading or taking a refresher course. Your keen sense of humor is the key to your rapport with difficult member of opposite sex.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Choosing the right business partners could mean the difference between success and failure. Keep records of phone conversations; you could be asked to testify to what was said.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Seek advice from experts regarding the best investments. Term deposits may pay higher interest than savings accounts. A promotion could depend on your accuracy and speed.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): So-called "friends" may try to cash in on your suggestions. Protect your ideas. Take a conventional approach to business problems. Someone influential is monitoring your work.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A friend offers excellent advice -- follow it and you benefit financially. Pin mate down about a sensitive matter; the two of you need to deal with it promptly and realistically.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A good day for introspection. Take a child into your confidence regarding family finances. Catch up on your business and personal correspondence. Give romance a chance to cool off.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your enthusiasm is contagious now. Others jump on the bandwagon, giving you the support you need to succeed. A member of the opposite sex influences your spending habits. Limit luxury purchases.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your interest in current events helps you uncover valuable inside information. A languishing love relationship could catch fire again. Encourage someone to follow his/her conscience.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Poor eating habits could be causing you discomfort. Eat foods that are good for you. Today's events give you a valuable look into the future. The fallout from a mistake will be light.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You will get your way if you are completely honest. An unexpected development boosts your spirits. You need the facts in order to make the correct decision. Insist on answers to your questions.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Let others handle their personal problems; you need to focus on your own concerns. A business plan could hit a snag. Do not despair! Everything will be fine by week's end.

From Staff Reports

Wilborn

Kip Wilborn, who studied under Janice Archer of Midland, performed with two other top singers: Larry Alexander, a baritone from New York, and Kay Pascal, soprano from Houston. For the program, Wilborn sang an aria and duet from "La Boheme" by Puccini, an aria from "Rigoletto" by Mozart, and the Pearl Fisherman's duet.

General Manager Joe McLain said Wilborn "was the hit of the evening — with a brilliant voice that soars and touches the heart and soul."

In May, Wilborn will be auditioning in New York. In October he will come to Midland and Odessa to present two concerts, according to Ms. Archer.

Three years ago, Ms. Archer changed Wilborn's voice from a baritone into a tenor. Four months later, when he was 20, she took him to the District Metropolitan Opera Auditions in El Paso where he received an Award of Distinction for his performance.

Since then he has attended the University of Missouri at Kansas City Conservatory and has accrued a long list of operatic roles and performances including Don Ottavio in "Don Giovanni" by Mozart, Mr. Owen in "Postcard from Morroco" by Argento, Ernesto in "Don Pasquale" by Donizetti, Basilio and Curzio in "Marriage of Figaro" by Mozart, Paquillo in "La Perchole" by Offenbach, Pinkerton in "Madame Butterfly" by Puccini, solo quintet in "Sweeney Todd" by Sondheim, "St. Matthew Passion" by Bach, "The Messiah" by Handel, "St. Paul Passion" by Mendelssohn, "The Requiem" by Mozart and "Laud to the Nativity" by Respheghi.

He has performed with the Kansas City Lyric and Community Opera Companies, and the University of Kansas Opera Workshop and the conservatory.

He is a full-time aid soloist at the Second Presbyterian Church and is on the voice faculty of the University of Kansas City. He will complete his degree in May.

VOTERS GUIDE

to the Primary Election, May 3, 1986

Provided by the League of Women Voters of Midland,
Published by the Reporter-Telegram as a Public Service

U.S. CONGRESS, 21st District

	1. List your qualifications for office, including experience, training, education, etc. (75 words)	2. Describe the two most important issues you will face as Congressman from the 21st District. How do you intend to deal with these issues? (150 words)
DEMOCRATS David Hunsicker	— hold degrees from Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Central Michigan University, the National War College, and the Industrial College of the Armed Forces — retired Air Force officer, flew 100 combat mission in Viet Nam — self-employed businessman, contractor and owner of a north Bexar County real estate company — life member of the Future of America Alumni Association — worked in Washington, D.C. for 4½ years as a planner for the Pentagon, know the budget process thoroughly	Securing a competitive domestic oil industry and guaranteeing representation for all people of the 21st District are the two most important issues. This country is reaching an economic and national security crisis. As domestic oil production dwindles and companies reduce their exploration programs, our reliance on foreign oil will increase. A shift in dependence means danger for the nation. The domestic petroleum industry must be strengthened instead of weakened. I will introduce legislation removing the current counterproductive laws and regulations. I will fight any proposals which would harm the industry. An objective in this race is to insure representation for all people. I believe every person in this district should have an outlet for his concerns. I propose to do this by guaranteeing minority representation on my congressional staff. We need to open avenues of communication because that is the gateway to understanding the entire community of the 21st District.
Terry M. Lowry	I am the candidate most knowledgeable about the crises facing our district, state and nation, as well as presenting workable solutions to resolve them. These crises are centered in the efforts to turn America into a "post industrial society". The solutions to the issues are based on returning to the "American System of political economy" of providing low-interest, long-term credit essential for expansion of our basic industries of agriculture, energy and manufacturing.	The two most important issues can best be described in the fact that Texas is currently in a Depression. WE FACE EMERGENCY CONDITIONS, yet most of our elected officials have done little or nothing. The demise of our domestic energy industry is not only hurting our District and State, it also threatens our national security. Without emergency measures, which must begin with a sliding scale import tariff against cheap oil, Texas stands to lose 9 of its top 10 banks, 20% of our work force and an already thin structure of essential government services. Additional measures include a moratorium of farm foreclosures, repeal of the unconstitutional Gramm-Rudman bill, implementing instead a defense mobilization centered around a program for the Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI). This will guarantee America's and our allies' security in the face of a massive Soviet war buildup, while simultaneously reopening industries and building new ones.
Pete Snelson	Served Midland and surrounding area in Texas Senate for two decades. Legislative ability to "get things done" widely recognized. Chairmanships held included Oil & Gas Committee, Intergovernmental Relations and Education. A Midland businessman for 31 years. Formerly a teacher. Purple Heart Army veteran. Past president Texas Jaycees. Knows entire 21st District; fully aware of issues and concerns ranging from energy to agriculture to military preparedness. Public record one of performance and achievement based on conservative principles.	Development of effective national policies for energy and agriculture that recognize the necessity of our nation preventing manipulations by foreign government cartels. A healthy domestic energy industry is vital to our national security. A sliding import fee on imported oil would bring some stability to the industry and make possible further development of reserves. Agriculture must have an even-handed national policy to open up more world markets for our farm products. An example of poor policy was the decision to help the dairy industry by buying herds for slaughter and thus drastically affecting the beef cattle industry. These problems will require your Congressman to work for both immediate and long range solutions. No one Congressman can solve them but he can make a difference. As the only candidate for this office with major legislative experience and wide-spread knowledge of the entire district, my past service demonstrates leadership and effectiveness.
Joe Sullivan	CONSERVATIVE. PRO-LIFE. Psychology Professor, San Antonio College, 20 years. Retired Lt. Colonel, USAFR. Graduate, Air War College. Korean Combat Veteran with 2 battle stars. Bachelor, Civil Engineering, Georgia Tech; BA (history), Baylor University; MA (world religions), Baylor University; BD (theology), Southwestern Baptist Seminary; MA (psychology), University of Texas. Real Estate Broker, Minister, Boy Scout Master, Businessman. Democratic Nominee for U.S. Congress, 1980 and 1984. Married, 3 children.	The most important issue is to represent ALL the people by voice, by vote and by appropriate legislation. This district needs a conservative but creative congressman who will protect the interests and needs of the 21st District. The oil and gas industry cannot be allowed to suffer from the manipulation of Middle Eastern leaders with severe fluctuation of oil prices caused by them. A general import tax on all foreign oil could automatically protect us when oil prices take severe drops. Farming and ranching interests must be protected also from wide fluctuation caused from weather and imports. We need legislation which prevents these and other problems from developing rather than legislation to alleviate a crisis which could have been prevented. Other issues which must be faced soberly and wisely are international terrorism and the problem of Communism in Central America. America must be strong both militarily and diplomatically in dealing successfully with these two disturbing problems. America must be prepared to negotiate from a position of power — and work for international peace.
REPUBLICANS Thane Akins	Born and raised in Brady, Texas. Age 52. Graduate Abilene Christian Univ., B.A., Texas Tech Univ., B.S., Petroleum Engineering. 25 years with Atlantic-Richfield. Engineering Manager O'Briant Engineering. 3 years Planning and Zoning Commission. 4 years City Councilman, 6 years Mayor of Midland. 2 years Governor's Mayor's Advisory Committee. Texas Municipal League Board. TML Water Task Force. ACU Board of Trustees. Section Chairman of SPE. Boys Club Board. ACU Alumni Citation. Patriot Award Texas State Guard.	Without question, the 2 trillion-dollar debt is the most important issue. It takes 14% of the federal budget just to pay interest. Since 1980, Congress has had over $900 billion in additional money to spend. Federal revenues have grown 8.6%/year during this decade. If Congress had increased spending at the rate of 5.5%/year since 1980, there would be a balanced budget today. Instead, they increased spending 11.5%/year. If increases in spending are limited to slightly less than 4%/year over the next five years, the deficit will disappear - without a tax increase! We must not rob our children of their economic opportunity by leaving them trillions of dollars in debt. Because of my background in the oil and gas industry, I am uniquely qualified of all the candidates to lead the way toward establishment of a comprehensive energy policy for this country.
Van Archer	Van Archer, 45, was elected to four terms as San Antonio City Councilman. Van was first elected over six opponents in 1979. Two years later he was the first unopposed candidate in 18 years. Van Archer has been elected and re-elected to the Texas Republican Executive Committee since 1974. Mr. Archer was twice regional chairman for the Reagan for President Campaign. Member: Presidential Commission on Drunk Driving; Texas Commission on Intergovernmental Relations; and the Anti-Crime Council.	The most important issue facing America is the Federal budget deficit. I will push to balance the budget as I have pushed to cut taxes throughout my career. The budget deficit threatens farmers, ranchers, and businessman and hurts our international competitiveness. I will support a balanced budget amendment, line-item veto and Presidential power to impound funds. I will never vote for tax increases. Americans pay enough taxes. I am dedicated to solving the oil crisis. I have an independent oil man as campaign chairman because this is the biggest issue facing Texas. The oil industry is the favorite source of income for Congress and most of the overtaxed, overregulated business in America. I will push to repeal the Windfall Profits Tax, repeal the Fuel Use Act, fill the Strategic Petroleum Reserve, provide exploration tax credits and expand the definition of intangible drilling costs. Government should get out of the oil business.
Lowell "Duke" Embs	No reply	No reply
Henry Gandy	Attended Tivy High School, Kerrville; Trinity University. Steering Committee, Texas Energy Forum; Co-Founder, Conservative Energy Resource Council; Board of Directors, 1981-85 Legislative Assistant to Congressman Tom Loeffler; Representative Loeffler's Chief Counsel on Appropriations Committee; Top legislative strategist for Republican leadership in the U.S. House of Representatives as Special Assistant to Republican Whip Trent Lott; Special Assistant for Legislative Affairs, President Ronald Reagan, 1985.	The two most critical issues facing the 21st District are oil & gas and agriculture and how we can best support these two essential elements of our economy. We can ill-afford to send an untrained, inexperienced representative to Washington to represent us on these crucial issues, particularly during these difficult times. I am keenly aware of these challenges, having recently served in Washington, first as Tom Loeffler's legislative director, then as a key member of the Leadership team in Congress and as a top aide to President Reagan. The energy industry needs more than just a vote in Congress - it needs the continuity of leadership I can provide to effectively communicate the need to retain and expand IDC's and depletion allowances; immediately repeal the windfall profits tax and Fuel Use Act; deregulate natural gas, and take positive steps to assure fair domestic prices on oil and gas without new federal regulations or taxes.
Lamar Smith	Former Republican County Chairman, State Representative, and County Commissioner. Has oil and gas and ranching interests. Worked for the Small Business Administration in Washington, D.C., and as a Business and Financial writer for The Christian Science Monitor. Graduated from Yale University and Southern Methodist University School of Law. Alternate Delegate to Congressman Tom Loeffler at 1984 Republican National Convention; County Chairman for Senator Phil Gramm, 1984; Treasurer of Bexar County Reagan-Bush Victory Committee, 1980.	(1) How low do oil prices have to drop before we take action? How many Texans have to lose their jobs before we do something? How much must we jeopardize our national security before the government intervenes? A temporary oil import fee would protect our national security and prevent the collapse of the domestic oil and gas industry. Revenues would reduce the federal deficit and allow us to fill the Strategic Petroleum Reserves. We must repeal the Windfall Profits Tax, deregulate natural gas by price, and maintain tax provisions for intangible drilling costs and depletion allowance. (2) Our government must balance its budget. We must cut the fat our of the federal budget not raise income taxes and cut the heart out of the family budget. Texans are working hard to make ends meet and the federal government can do the same.
Jeff Wentworth	45 years of age; third generation Texan; graduate of Alamo Heights High School (student body vice-president), Texas A&M University (senior class officer), Texas Tech University School of Law (student body president); US Army counter-intelligence officer (three years); Assistant to Republican U.S. Congressman from West Texas (three years); Bexar County Commissioner representing 250,000 Texans (six years); self-employed in private business (eight years); married to Karla Whitsitt; one son, Jason Stafford Wentworth.	The most important single problem facing our country today is overspending — the continued inability of Congress to stop spending tens of billions of dollar more than we take in every year. The only way to handle it is to put in the U.S. Constitution — just as we have in the Texas Constitution — a provision outlawing deficit spending and requiring a balanced budget every year — and I also want to give line item veto authority to the President.	The other problem is the current state of the domestic oil and gas industry on which so much of our national security depends. We need to prepare for the rise in the price of oil that is certain to come by repealing the windfall profits tax and the Fuels Use Act, deregulating natural gas and insuring that tax code provisions concerning the oil depletion allowance and expensing intangible drilling costs are retained.

REPUBLICANS William B. Ahders	Bachelor of Administration, University of Montana Juris Doctor, University of Montana Special Agent, Federal Bureau of Investigation Municipal Judge, City of Midland Midland County Judge	The "jail problem" exists because of rules established by a governmental agency, the State Commission on Jail Standards. That agency has declared our jail to be overcrowded and substandard. Delay in correcting the problem could result in a state order to close the jail. Midland cannot afford a new jail at this time but the problem will not go away just because we cannot afford the solution recommended by the state agency. The voters have authorized the repair of the jail. I think the wisest approach is to repair the existing jail so that it conforms to the law.	The existing Midland County Library in inadequate but, like the issue of our jail, the same problem of funding is present. Households in our community face spending cutbacks and income reduction. The county government is no different. Midland County deserves a top quality library facility, but Midland County simply cannot afford a new library building at the present time. We should not place any added tax burdens on ourselves.
Matt Blair	WORK: Practicing Attorney (1979-1986) Oil & gas, commercial litigation, bank regulatory matters, criminal defense as appointed. MEMBER: State Bar of Texas Federal Court: Northern, Southern, Eastern and Western District of Texas. Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals U.S. Supreme Court EDUCATION: Texas Tech University School of Law, Juris Doctor, 1979 University of Texas at Austin, B.A. Government, 1975 CIVIC INVOLVEMENT: Centennial, Boy Scouts, Leadership Midland, Numerous others. Common Sense Hard Work Energy Communication Proven Leadership	1) Do comprehensive planning of what Midland needs in a jail: a) Size; b) Legal requirements (no country clubs); c) Resources available for financing and building; d) Projected 5-10 year needs 2) Win voter approval then stick to your plan. 3) The City of Midland is not subject to jail standards and has no incentive to build a jail with the County! 4) Most of the prisoners in jail are waiting for court on a moment's notice. The Court and jail must be next to each other. 5) A jail that uses less deputies will save on salaries and will quickly payout the extra amount of building cost.	1) PLANNING: Update old studies as required and develop assessment of use and needs. 2) PRIORITIZATION: Place library in perspective with other County needs and resources. 3) PARTICIPATION. Other entities with library requirements should be approached with respect to sharing costs and administration. 4) PROPOSITION: Submit new library proposals to the voters for approval.

COUNTY COMMISSIONER, Precinct 2

	1. List your qualifications for office, including experience, training, education, etc. (75 words)	2. What solution(s) do you believe can best solve the jail problems of Midland County? (100 words)	3. Do you support building a new facility for Midland County Library? Why or why not? (50 words)
DEMOCRAT Don Boydstun	I am a native Texas and Vietnam Era veteran who has lived in Midland County for the past eleven years, many of those years employed by a local engineering firm. I have served our community as a deputy voter registrar and take great pride in having done lots of grassroot, door-to-door registration. I will be a full-time commissioner, meaning I will give up all other gainful employment and earn my commissioner's salary.	Consolidation of our two existing jails into one facility could be effected to eliminate duplicate services. I oppose the concept of privatization on several grounds. Professional law enforcement and prisoner matters are so deeply enmeshed it would not be wise to turn to private interests. Unfortunately, more often than not privatization does nothing except line the pockets of the friends of a few officeholders. I believe nothing has been done regarding the 1.3 million renovation bond approved by the voters because a majority of the commissioners still oppose it. This serves to contravene the will of the electorate.	As one who frequents the Midland County Library I would dearly love to see the present facility, dedicated when Eisenhower was President, replaced by a sparkling new one. Obviously, our declining tax base will not support any new construction. I would favor expansion or new construction were our economy again robust.
REPUBLICANS C. Wallace Craig	B.S. Economics, University of Missouri; 38 years oil marketing and real estate; 6 years on Midland School Board (Pres. 1 year); 2 years as Director of Midland Appraisal District, 3+ years as Midland County Commissioner; many years of community service such as United Way, Centennial Commission, Midland Community Trust, Boy Scout Leader, Midland Alliance and Elder, First Presbyterian Church.	At the appropriate time in our economic life we will have to build a new jail. The present facility cannot be further expanded. The most practical and economical location is on County owned land on East Highway 80, 7 acres which cost $7,000. Size permits further expansion if and when needed at least possible cost. At most it is 10 minutes from courthouse. An adequate downtown site would add several million dollars in land costs and construction costs would be significantly higher. Any further expansion would be difficult and very expensive. I desire most at least cost to taxpayer.	I have repeatedly expressed my support for either building a new library or expanding and completely renovating the existing facility, which-ever is the most desirable, practical and affordable. I supported and worked with the Friends of the Library in constructing the Centennial Branch Library.
Guy McCrary	• Independent Businessman, Guy McCrary & Associates • Commissioned Officer, U.S. Army, 4 years • Master of Science, Management • Bachelor of Science, Texas A&M • Founder, President, Centennial Plaza Association • Board of Directors, Association for Retarded Citizens • Executive Director, Objectives for Midland, 1979-80 • Treasurer, Boy Scouts, 1982-84 • Board of Directors, United Way, 1981-84 • President, Cancer Society, 1980-81 • Vice President, Jaycees, 1980-81 • Distinguished Service Award, Jaycees, 1982 • Midland Centennial Citizen, 1985	In the short run, we must repair the existing jail as mandated by voters a year ago. This facility will provide for maximum risk prisoners. For minimum risk prisoners, we should find an existing building which can be converted to operate as a minimum security facility. For the long term, we should plan for a regional jail in cooperation with other West Texas counties. It is inevitable that prisoner problems at the State will force more responsibility on county governments. Working in cooperation to build a regional solution, we can solve the problem with the greatest economy of public funds.	Within constraints of fiscal prudence, I support a new central library facility. A good library is indispensable to the exchange of information and ideas within a community. It is unfortunate that the jail has been allowed to deteriorate so badly that it must take financial priority over our library.
Milton A. Rister Jr.	• 15 years of sales and management experience (Sales skills are needed to educate voters.) • Extensive knowledge of microcomputers. • Educated at the University of Texas. • Raised on a farm (I understand the fundamentals of road and drainage construction.) • Greenwood resident (I know the condition of our county roads.) • Member, First Baptist Church Midland (We need Christian leaders.) • Member, Midland Chamber of Commerce Small Business Council (Committment to Small Business.)	I believe the ultimate responsibility of government is to provide opportunity for the private sector. Therefore, I propose we let free enterprise provide the solutions to our governmental problems. In other areas of the country, private jails are operating very effectively. They provide new jobs. Private jails operate more efficiently. They generate profit which is circulated back into the local economy. Most important, a private jail could avoid the large tax increase required to build a new jail. Our judicial system would still decide sentences and paroles. A private system simply contracts with government to detain prisoners during that period.	While in office I will not support a real tax increase or bond issue that will result in an increase. There is a need for a new library but I believe we need to maintain our roads first. I would support the donation of a building by the private sector.

COUNTY COMMISSIONER, Precinct 4

	1. List your qualifications for office, including experience, training, education, etc. (75 words)	2. What solution(s) do you believe can best solve the jail problems of Midland County? (100 words)	3. Do you support building a new facility for Midland County Library? Why or why not? (50 words)
REPUBLICAN Winfree L. Brown	Received a BBA from North Texas State University. First elected county commissioner Pct. 4 in 1970 and serving my 16th year. I served five years as chairman of the board of regents for NTSU, held all offices and currently president of the West Texas Judges and Commissioners Association. Past officer and director of the Texas Association of Counties Workers Compensation Self-Insurance Fund. I have always maintained a conservative and business approach to county operations.	Midland voted 3 million to repair the over-crowded jail and conduct a study for future county needs. I supported a new jail and Sheriff offices, with growth capabilities to over 400 inmates. Reclaimed courthouse space would be increased 120 percent over what is presently being used. This additional space would cover courthouse needs for the next 25 years. All of this was for under $9 million. The recommendations of the up-coming study by professional planners, for future county needs, will probably exceed what I supported by three times. My decision will be made after all the information is in.	Our present economy is not conducive to building a new library. I have always supported our library and will do what I can do to obtain a new facility.

STATE REPRESENTATIVE, District 76

	1. List your qualifications for office, including experience, training, education, etc. (75 words)	2. In what ways do you believe the Texas Legislature can best deal with the serious fiscal crisis facing our State? What issues will remain as your priorities even in the face of reduced revenue. (150 words)
REPUBLICAN Tom Craddick	Midland resident 34 years; attended Midland schools, received BBA and MBA from Texas Tech in finance. Married, two children. Sales representative Mustang Mud Inc.; owner of Craddick Properties. Presently serving ninth term in state legislature. Currently chairman of House Natural Resources Committee, vice-chairman of Joint Committee on Water Resources, member of Energy Committee, representative to National Conference of State Legislatures. Appointed by speaker to represent Texas at numerous oil and gas conferences.	I feel that the budget crisis can be best dealt with by looking at all areas of state government closely and by cutting the fat and excess spending in all areas. I further support prohibition of a Texas income tax and feel that the burden of a tax on our citizens would cripple the economy of Texas at a time when it is in need of revitalization. The absence of a state income tax in Texas has attracted new industry and business, thus creating many new jobs. Issues which will remain my priorities are implementation of the water plan which was approved by the voters last November; passage of stronger laws in the area of law enforcement and stricter penalties for criminals.

DISTRICT CLERK

	1. List your qualifications for office, including experience, training, education, etc. (75 words)	2. Please describe the duties of this office and how you plan to carry out the responsibilities. (150 words)
REPUBLICAN Vivian Wood	I am now completing my first term in office. During this time I have constantly sought to improve my skills as district clerk. I have worked in the business world most of my adult life and attended business college and junior college.	We in the district clerk's office are the record keepers for the courts. We issue papers, maintain the files in lawsuits and collect court costs for the county & state. I am adding computers to the office this year which I believe will increase our productivity and add efficiency to the operation of all areas of the office.

MIDLAND COUNTY TREASURER

	1. List your qualifications for office, including experience, training, education, etc. (75 words)	2. Please describe the duties of this office and how you plan to carry out the responsibilities. (150 words)
DEMOCRAT Dee Thompson	Resident of Midland since 1944. County treasurer since 1959. Business school graduate. Attended annual County Treasurer's Seminar at A&M conducted by V.G. Young Institute of County Government. Am certified county treasurer through this school. Member of County Treasurer's Association of Texas and of National Association of County Treasurers and Finance Officers. Serve on the board of directors of Midland Government Employees Federal Credit Union.	The county treasurer is the sole custodian of county funds, being the only person authorized to receive or disburse county monies. Funds are disbursed as ordered by the Commissioner's Court. Handle all phases of payroll for 375 employees including keeping personnel records, retirement plan, group health and dental insurance for employees and retirees, social security, withholding tax, credit union, worker's compensation, unemployment compensation and deferred compensation program. Make all investments for Midland County. In 1985 alone this office wrote receipts and made deposits of almost $44 million. Have set up and maintain the only existing combined record of lot ownership and burials at Fairview Cemetery (county owned.) This is not a duty but a courtesy of this office. I am honored to serve Midland County in this position of trust. My only plans are to continue the same courteous, efficient operation of this office as in the past.
REPUBLICANS Dewey Lee	Having been associated with County Government for the past 25 years, I am very familiar with the functions of the County Treasurer. I have several college hours in supervisory business management and government. I have dispersed millions of dollars as bookkeeper and accountant for the district attorney the past nine years. I attend Midland College and will continue to do so as Treasurer. I believe strongly in continued education to better serve our community in this office.	This office has been managed by the same person in the same manner for 27 years. I will do more for you as county Treasurer than sign checks. I will be a visible, working Treasurer. Certainly we are experiencing economic setbacks but I envision Midland as a dynamic, progressive community that will not roll over for pessimists. I believe in Midland and will be a Treasurer with the taxpayer in mind today, tomorrow and the years ahead in spending your money. I will work to eliminate duplication that wastes taxpayers' money. I will welcome citizen input regarding the distribution of over $14 million of your tax dollars each year and will speak out myself when necessary. Certainly I forsee the need for a new jail and yes , we need more courthouse space but for now, how about getting on with the programs mandated by you, the voters.
Tom Miller	Being a 1965 graduate of TCU with a BBA in finance, and being employed in the private sector of the oil business for over 31 years has provided a firm foundation of management philosophies and proper management procedures. Also, being Assistant District Manager for Pritchard & Abbott has afforded valuable knowledge of recognizing the necessity of a conservative, cost-conscious business approach to office procedures, which will be an asset as Midland County Treasurer.	The County Treasurer's office is responsible for preparing county employee payroll, employee benefits, withholding taxes, insurance and social security. Also, the Treasurer is responsible for maintaining current, accurate information on cemetery plots at the county cemetery. The Treasurer, working in concert with the County Auditor, must provide accounts and timely data to the Commissioner's Court and other offices requiring specific information. The above responsibilities, as well as others, must be fulfilled with the least amount of time...least amount of effort...least amount of tax dollars, to produce the maximum professional results. These professional results can be attained by the proper utilization of data processing hardware and software. With experience in data processing, I will be able to avoid certain pitfalls, by making the hardware and software compatible to attain professional results.

COUNTY CLERK

	1. List your qualifications for office, including experience, training, education, etc. (75 words)	2. Please describe the duties of this office and how you plan to carry out the responsibilities. (150 words)
DEMOCRAT Rosenelle Cherry	I have been a resident of Midland County for 42 years; native West Texan, having been reared on a ranch in Andrews county, two years of college in business administration. My professional experience includes having served as county clerk of Midland County since May, 1951 and three years prior to that as a deputy county clerk.	The duties of the county clerk's office are varied in that we are the official recorder of all real estate records on property in Midland County; record and issue certified copies of all birth, death, marriage license and honorable discharges; record uniform commercial code on personal property; register all lay midwives; issue going out of business permits; record cattle brands and applications for beer licenses are filed here. The county clerk is the clerk of the criminal court, civil courts, commissioner's court and juvenile court. The clerk of the probate court handles all probate of wills, administration of estates, guardianships, small estates, muniment of title, mentally ill, alcoholics and narcotics. All wills for safe keeping are filed in this office. This office is in the process of converting to computers and my plans are to continue to serve all of the residents of Midland County and other areas in the same efficient and expedient manner that they have become accustomed to in the past.

JUDGE, County Court at Law, Place 1

	1. List your qualifications for office, including experience, training, education, etc. (75 words)	2. Please describe the duties of this office and how you plan to carry out the responsibilities. (150 words)
DEMOCRAT Willie B. Dubose	I received my undergraduate and law degrees from Baylor University. I served three years as a judge advocate in the U.S. Air Force. I served as County Attorney in Midland County for five years and practiced law in Midland until Feb. 1978 at which time I was appointed as the first judge of the County Court at Law of Midland County. I have been reelected twice and am running for my third full term.	As County Court at Law judge, my duties are to preside over various types of civil and criminal trials. The County Court at Law has criminal jurisdiction of class A and B misdemeanors and civil jurisdiction of cases up to $50,000 and worker's compensation. I hope to continue serving the people of Midland County by courteously and expeditiously hearing the cases presented.

	1. List your qualifications for office, including experience, training, education, etc. (75 words)	2. Please describe the duties of this office and how you plan to carry out the responsibilities. (150 words)
REPUBLICAN James Fitz-Gerald III	Attended Midland schools and the University of Texas where I received my law degree. Prior to law school, served in the U.S. Army as a military police officer. In Tyler, I was an assistant criminal district attorney. Returned to Midland in 1964 to practice law and in 1979, became Midland municipal judge. Former board member of two state municipal judges' organizations. Appointed as Judge, County Court at Law No. 2 last October.	County Court at Law No. 2 is a statutory court with both criminal and civil jurisdiction. My duties include presiding in criminal class A and B misdemeanor cases. I may also be called upon to hear general civil controversies (up to $50,000) and various other family, probate and juvenile matters. I plan to carry out my duties in a timely and effective manner with the public interest foremost and to handle each matter before the court with deliberate care, courtesy and fairness.

JUDGE, 238th District Court

	1. List your qualifications for office, including experience, training, education, etc. (75 words)	2. Please describe the duties of this office and how you plan to carry out the responsibilities. (150 words)
DEMOCRAT Vann Culp	I have presided over the 238th District Court since the creation of the court by the Texas Legislature in 1977. During the 21 years prior to assuming the bench I primarily handled the trial of all types of cases in the State and Federal Courts. I currently serve as the local administrative judge for the Courts in Midland and I serve on the Executive Committee of the State Judicial Section.	District Judges preside over the District Courts and perform the duties authorized by the Texas Constitution and the laws of the State. The District Courts have original jurisdiction in all criminal cases of the grade of felony; of all suits to recover damages for slander or defamation of character and of all suits for trial of Title to land. The District Courts also have jurisdiction of cases of divorce and of all other suits when the matter in controversy is valued at $500 or more. District judges have power to issue Writs of Habeas Corpus, Mandamus, Injunction and all writs necessary to enforce their jurisdiction. District Judges appoint Grand Jury Commissioners, Probation Officers, Court Reporters, Court Bailiffs and County Auditors. I plan to continue my dedication toward the fair, impartial and speedy administration of justice in disposing of the many civil and criminal cases filed in the court.

JUDGE, 318th District Court

	1. List your qualifications for office, including experience, training, education, etc. (75 words)	2. Please describe the duties of this office and how you plan to carry out the responsibilities. (150 words)
REPUBLICAN Barbara G. Culver	As a candidate for judge of the 318th State District Court, my qualifications include a law degree from Southern Methodist University, experience as an attorney and as County Judge of Midland County. Since March, 1978, I have had the honor of serving as Judge of the 318th District Court and I am seeking re-election to this office for another four-year term.	This Court is the family district court for Midland County and the cases tried here include divorces, custody of children, child support enforcement, adoptions, child neglect and abuse, protective orders, paternity, termination of parental rights and annulments. The attorneys who try cases in this court and I make every effort to schedule the cases promptly and to avoid delays and inconveniences. Child abuse cases are given the highest priority for court time. My plans to carry out the responsibilities of the office are to continue to improve the management of the court calendar to meet the needs of the litigants and their attorneys.

JUSTICE OF THE PEACE, Precinct 1, Place 2

	1. List your qualifications for office, including experience, training, education, etc. (75 words)	2. Please describe the duties of this office and how you plan to carry out the responsibilities. (150 words)
DEMOCRAT Robert H. Pine	I have 21 years experience. My office handles criminal and civil cases. Since coming into office, I have regularly attended the Justice of the Peace In-Service Training Program each year. I have served for many years on Midland's Council on Alcoholism. I have been active in the Midland Downtown Lions Club since 1947 and served as president of the club in 1954. I am a member of the American Legion.	To place the JP civil and criminal dockets on an up-to-date computer system. To keep the doors open part of each day for citizens to come in and talk to the judge about "what is on their minds." To try to combine compassion with a sense of judicial decorum in the office. I originally ran and I am running for Justice of the Peace out of a heartfelt desire to establish and to maintain high standards for the continued efficient operation of this office. I have developed a good rapport with County officials with whom I work. I consider the Justice of the Peace as a key part of the criminal justice system and my arraignments, setting bonds and administering administrative warnings to accused persons must be done both efficiently and according to Texas Statutes.
REPUBLICAN Kent Sutton	— Native Midlander and graduate of Lee High School — Earned law degree from the University of Tulsa — Holds a bachelor's degree in Business Administration from Abilene Christian University — Experienced in the areas of civil and criminal law	The following are two of the urgently needed changes I will implement: A. Make drug treatment a condition of bail on personal bond. Drug abuse is a factor in many of the thefts and burglaries in Midland. One way to fight the problem is to end the abuse by treating the addiction. If drug abuse is related to an offense charged, I will make treatment a condition of personal bond and forfeit the bond should the defendant fail to comply. B. Use community service as an alternative to fines in appropriate cases. When an offender can't pay his fine for a class C misdemeanor, he should be given the opportunity to work it off by maintaining county property like the courthouse yard, which costs the county thousands in maintenance costs each year. This will satisfy the law and save tax dollars at the same time.
