Leaders Of White Slave Ring Sought Here By U. S. Officials

GIRL VICTIM RELATES TALE OF OPERATIONS

TAKEN FROM STATE

Band Carries On Activity In Texas and Oklahoma, Girl Claims

Police and department of justice officials Saturday were searching for known leaders in a Texas-Oklahoma white slavery ring. A 16-year-old girl, victim of the white slavers, is being held in the city jail, nerves shattered by the harrowing experiences through which she has gone. Existence of the white slavery trade, from Wichita Falls into Oklahoma points, was revealed with the arrest of the girl now held, together with a man, by Police Officer Jimmy Gonzales last Thursday.

Federal Man Here

A department of justice official, who reached Wichita Falls early Saturday, denied all knowledge of the whereabouts of a woman who it is alleged was the principal in the selling of white girls into the bondage of men working in Oklahoma railroad camps. The department of justice man also refused to give any statement on the progress of the case.

The victim of the slave traders told police she was taken in an automobile to some point in Oklahoma, the name of which she does not remember, and there sold to the men of a railroad crew by a woman who accompanied her.

Awed and dominated by the woman, the girl was unable to escape the fate meted out to her. She sold for $50, which her captor appropriated, the girl told police.

Transactions Numerous

This was only one of a number of similar transactions, the girl said. She had tried to escape from the woman who bartered her, but was recaptured and beaten. She had been afraid to go to police, she said, for she was afraid the police would keep her in jail and in some way punish her worse than her captor.

"Seven years ago," she sobbed in Spanish, "my mother, some brothers and sisters and I came to this country from Mexico. We had no friends here; we left none there.

Driven from Home

"A few months ago," her voice cracked under a mental strain, "I married a boy whom my mother did not like. She chased me from home. It was then I met the woman. She befriended me. I came to Wichita Falls with her."

Meanwhile—

A man who drove the car which carried the girl into Oklahoma and slavery and the woman who sold the girl to men of the railroad camps are being sought in Texas and Oklahoma. Police are confident of their capture.

TWO COUNTIES CLAIM LANDS

Wichita and Clay To Settle Ownership Of Tract

Preparations to settle a controversy between officials of Wichita and Clay counties relative to territorial rights of 170 acres of lands situated on the border line of the two counties will be started within the near future, according to Everett Hughes, who is working in conjunction with Guy Raley, county tax collector, to settle the dispute.

At the present time both counties are claiming territorial rights for the territory, which is practically all situated in the Sophie St. Johns survey. Both counties for the past 10 years have been collecting county and school taxes from sections of the disputed territory. The amount involved will run into thousands of dollars, according to Mr. Hughes, the exact sum is not determinable until an audit of the tax accounts of the two counties is made relative to the disputed territory.

Both Wichita and Clay county officials during the past few years, according to Mr. Hughes, have broached the subject of having a survey made relative to the territory, however, no definite action has ever been taken, but within the near future it is anticipated that surveyors designated from both counties will endeavor to set a boundary that is agreeable to both counties, Mr. Hughes said.

Mr. Hughes, who is a Wichita Falls abstractor, was retained by Mr. Raley to settle the controversy between the two counties.

In communication with state officials, Mr. Hughes said Saturday, that the officials had indicated that they would use their best efforts to assist the Wichita county and Clay county officials to settle the dispute.

PRIMARIES TO COUNT HEAVILY IN BIG RACE

Ohio and Wisconsin Contests Prominent Among Eight State Elections

CONVENTIONS LISTED

Michigan Primary Monday To Be Next One For Presidency

Eight presidential primaries will be held in April, when the trend as to the nominations of the two major parties may become more apparent.

Secretary Hoover is the outstanding republican aspirant at present, with a group attempting to prevent his nomination by setting up favorite sons, and prepared, if possible, to spring a compromise candidate in the convention. Virtually the same situation exists in the democratic party, with Governor Smith receiving the greatest attention and the favorite-son movement also figuring there.

Seventeen states are yet to hold presidential primaries. Two states have already chosen delegates at such primaries—New Hampshire and North Dakota.

New Hampshire's 11 delegates are uninstructed and favorable to Hoover. North Dakota's 13 delegates are pledged to Lowden. Including delegates selected by conventions, the returns show that Hoover has 31, Lowden 25 and Curtis 21.

Governor Smith has 56 delegates instructed or pledged for him. Senator Reed has 36 instructed and 33 favorable. Senator George of Georgia has his state's 28 delegates pledged.

Presidential Primary Dates.

The next presidential primary will be held in Michigan on April 2. There Hoover and Smith are the only entries. The other primaries will be held as follows:

The physical assets, circulation, Associated Press membership, all feature and wire services for which The Record News has contract, and good will of The Record News has been purchased by The Times Publishing company, publishers of The Wichita Daily Times.

The undersigned believe that this move is in direct line with modern newspaper practice, and will result in better newspapers for Wichita Falls and its trading territory.

The twenty-four hour newspaper is now a fact in many Texas cities, including Amarillo, Abilene and El Paso in the west, and Waco, Austin, Beaumont and Galveston to the south. The larger Texas cities of San Antonio, Dallas and Fort Worth also have similar newspapers.

The rising cost of newspaper publication and the necessity of providing a less cost of advertising for merchants who daily cover all customer prospects through the use of two newspapers are the two main forces governing the modern newspaper trend.

Believing that the undersigned are taking this forward step in the interest of the reader, the advertiser and the publisher, they ask the co-operation of all concerned in the new publishing plan.

Six Injured When Blast Rocks 17-Story Skyscraper In New York

NEW YORK, March 31. (AP)—Six persons were injured and 500 fled panic stricken to the street today when an explosion, believed by the police to have been caused by a bomb, shook a 17-story building in west 38th street, occupied by cloak and suit making firms.

Four of the injured were young women. They suffered from shock, cuts and bruises, received when the blast flung them from their work on the two top floors.

The center of the explosion seemed to be on a fire emergency stairway between the floors. Floors were ripped up, machinery overturned, and broken window glass showered from the whole front of the building to the street.

The injured were among the 30 employes of the Eagle Cloak and Suit company, occupying the top floor, and A. Letterman on the 16th.

County Conventions Send Delegates To State Meeting Free

WET-DRY TIFF HELD

Oklahoma County Caucus Enlivened By Election Of Chairman

OKLAHOMA CITY, March 31. (AP)—Early reports from county democratic conventions in Oklahoma today showed a uniform tendency against instruction of delegates to the state convention in Oklahoma City April 10, when delegates to the national convention at Houston will be chosen.

All of the first 15 counties from which reports were received early tonight voted to send uninstructed delegations to the state meeting, and delegations were bound by the county conventions to vote as units in the state convention.

Preliminary skirmish between wet and dry factions was staged in the Oklahoma county convention here. The Rev. B. M. Nelson, an avowed dry, was elected temporary chairman over James S. Ross, supporter of Gov. Alfred Smith for the presidential nomination. The Oklahoma county meeting, however, followed the trend of other conventions in voting not to instruct its delegates. The Daily Oklahoman will say tomorrow that the delegation is "uniformly dry."

Other county conventions will be held Tuesday, April 3.

Even Wise Men Are Fools Sunday If They Do Not Take Pranks With Grin

And now we've come to the day in the year when a majority of "wise men" generally are fooled in some manner, or another for—

Today is April Fools' day.

The "wise men" will probably walk along somebody's sidewalk and discover a pocketbook 'parked' in full view, just waiting to be picked up, but—

On that pocketbook will be a string and at the other end of the string a group of youngsters who will give the "wise boys" the merry ha-ha as they pull the pocketbook from view, via the string.

And then there will be some more youngsters who will ring a few door bells, run as fast as their legs can carry them, and yell "April Fool" when the occupant of the house opens the door.

But, the "wise boys" will be fools if on April Fools 'day they do not laugh with the youngsters when they have "fallen" for their "pranks."

"Charm" Healer Gets $1035 At Home Of Invalid

Gypsy Witch Mulcts Desperately Ill Woman At Home

Wichita Falls police Saturday were looking for a young woman, believed to be a gypsy, who, contracting to "charm" the illness of an invalid Wichita Falls woman and cure her for all time, Friday obtained $1,035 from the invalid and escaped. It is believed by police that she left the city.

Tries Cure

The invalid, not entirely credulous, but desperate with illness, decided to give the "witch" a trial after the gypsy came to her home Thursday, told her she had heard of madam's illness and believed she could cure it with a charm.

The following day, Friday, the woman secured $1,035 from her bank, purchased certain kinds of cloth as suggested by the "miracle-healer," and awaited the advent of the gypsy. When the wonder-worker reached the invalid's home, according to the story told police, the two women set to work to prepare the charm which was to make a well woman of a life-long invalid.

Taking the new currency the invalid had secured from her bank, the gypsy, before the eyes of her victim, rolled the money in a yellow piece of cloth. Around this was wrapped a layer of white cloth.

"Charm" Prepared

Then, following the instructions of the gypsy woman, the invalid secured a white dress that had belonged to her child. This was wrapped around the bundle which the gypsy woman held, and the charm was ready to do its work.

With the invalid watching her, the gypsy placed the white bundle underneath a pillow on the bed and instructed the woman to leave it there until morning, in no case removing it until sunrise. Then the miracle woman left, after she was paid a nominal fee.

After a short nap of 30 or 40 minutes the woman awoke Friday afternoon. She began thinking of the transaction and grew suspicious.

When she unwrapped the bundle which had contained $1,035, damp slips of paper fell into her hand. Police were notified and the case investigated Friday by Chief of Police Frank Burns. No arrests had been made in connection with the swindle at a late hour Saturday.

DEMO MEETING NOT FOR CONCILIATION, CALL SHOWS

'POLICY' TO BE MAIN TOPIC

Issue Of Call Received In Wichita Falls

The democratic meeting planned for next Saturday in Dallas is not an effort to conciliate the two democratic factions in the state, those who call themselves "constitutional democrats" and the faction which favors uninstruction of delegates to the state convention in so-far-as candidates are concerned, according to a copy of the call for the meeting reaching here Saturday.

Recent dispatches from Dallas made it appear that the meeting Saturday would be participated in by both those who agree with Tom Love and declare themselves to be "constitutional democrats," and those who oppose the plans offered by the Dallas man.

J. A. Kemp, one of those taking active part in plans for the meeting, is one of the signers of a message and the call urging democrats of Texas to attend the Dallas meeting.

The message and the call follows:

Call for Meeting.

"We believe that the existing circumstances call for some expression from the democracy of this state as to its attitude toward national problems. A program of opposition has been advocated, which, if successful, would in our judgment, nullify the efficiency of any delegation which might be sent from this state to the national convention.

"It is our belief that the democratic party has an opportunity for service to the nation, and we fur- believe that the majority in Texas should express it- to secure such expression ary that some charac- ization be effected. our desire to create sion among the vernment who in ght for and es- fple, but rather gram of prin- n thereof and the friends of unite.

"It is desired to receive the call within the week and for that reason we ask that you give us a reply by wire immediately. Yours truly,

"J. A. Kemp, Walter O. Woodward, W. P. Hobby, D. W. Wilcox, Frank Culver Jr., John Davis, M. M. Crane."

The call for the meeting follows:

"To the Democrats of Texas: There is genuine need to place in power at Washington a political party representing in spirit and in truth the interests of the great mass of the people.

G. O. P. Incapacity.

"During the past seven years the Republican party has demonstrated anew its incapacity to protect and foster any but special and sinister interests, and at a time when great problems affecting most vitally the mass of the people have cried out for solution the party in power has presented to the world a spectacle of corruption and special favoritism without parallel in the country's history.

"In such a contingency all loyal Democrats and patriotic citizens should forget personal differences and differences on minor issues; especially is this true in Texas, the greatest Democratic commonwealth in the American union.

"Texas Democrats can and should unite on a platform of principles and send to the Houston convention a delegation in accord therewith.

"We believe that the platform of principles and policy suggested by Governor Dan Moody in his speech at Dallas on March 15th, 1928, contains the essentials upon which Texas democracy can unite. He said on that occasion: 'In this situation I am anxious that every Democrat shall bend his effort toward the success of the party, for the nation now needs a united party. It is to be hoped that we may be able to unite upon men and measures and present a solid front that our country and our people may receive the benefit of an honest government administered by men whose political thought and conduct is in accord with the principle that honesty is the first essential to free government and with the other great principles of the democratic party, assuring freedom equality and justice to all. I do not favor sending our delegates instructed for anyone, because we do not know what acceptable man can come most nearly securing the united support of all delegates of like persuasion. That can best be determined by our delegates in the convention, and I would prefer that our delegates go instructed to support the inclusion of a plank in the platform declaring the party's support of the 18th amendment, and its opposition to any attempt to repeal it, and promising a vigorous enforcement of all prohibition laws. They should be further instructed to bring about the nomination of one who is in sympathy with these principles.'

"We invite all Democrats who are in sympathy with this program of harmony to attend a mass meeting to be held in the city of Dallas on Saturday the 7th day of April, 1928, at 10 o'clock a. m." in the auditorium of the Baker hotel, for the purpose of agreeing upon party principles in harmony with this program and perfecting an organization to carry it out so that the Democratic party of Texas may be united in this crisis of our country."

$1000 Prize On Air Marker

Kansas C-C Posts Reward For Design

A uniform, national system of marking airports, so that the markings may occupy only a small amount of room and be read easily from the air, is announced in the way of a prize contest for the development of a good system by the Wichita, Kan., chamber of commerce.

The plan announced by the Kansans is almost identical with one proposed and considered in Wichita Falls more than a month ago.

Details, received by Hubert Harrison, manager of the Wichita Falls chamber of commerce, call for the giving of $1,000 for the best, practical systems and designs for marking airways and airports.

The designs will be exhibited and subjected to practical tests during the Airway Marking conference called for in Wichita, Kan., May 10 and 11.

A board of judges, composed of government officials, famous aviators, color and design experts and representatives of aeronautical organizations, will select the winners.

Among the kinds of designs wanted are uniform markers or signals that will indicate the direction north, marker or signal that will direct to landing field, a landing field marker, a uniform route marker or signal, and a marker or signal that will indicate or name the town or identify the location.

The plan has been placed before government officials who have given it their approval, the Wichita announcement says. The cooperation of the following government officials and their departments is announced: W. T. McCracken Jr., assistant secretary of commerce for aeronautics; E. F. Warner, assistant secretary of the navy; F. T. Davidson, assistant secretary of war, William Jardine, secretary of agriculture; C. F. Marvin and W. R. Gregg of the U. S. Weather bureau; and W. I. Glover of the United States post office department.

New Treaty With Mexico

Farm Lands May Be Given Protection

By WILLIAM P. FLYTHE.

WASHINGTON, March 31.—Settlement of all of this country's troubles with Mexico is to be made binding in a formal treaty to be negotiated at an early date, it was learned in a high official quarter here today.

This treaty will clarify the very badly confused conventions of 1928, which were designed to protect American property rights, but signally failed to do so.

The first step in the negotiations is the regulation by President Calles of Mexico, in which he makes it definite that the revolutionary constitution of 1917 is not retroactive in so far as it refers to American petroleum rights. This action was announced yesterday.

The regulation made it clear that any oil land acquired prior to 1917 would not be affected by the constitution of 1917 and the confiscatory enabling laws enacted from time to time since.

STYLES OF DECADE AGO AVAILABLE FOR WOMEN OF PRESENT TIME

GAY COLORS BEST SELLERS

Will Have Many Dress Innovations

By MARIE THERESA
Record News Staff

Women will have an opportunity of dressing to resemble the Easter lady of some decades past if she so desires, for the Wichita Falls shops are showing for Easter, attire that would suggest the demure lady of the past.

Filmsy, fluttering, flowered chiffons in all the gay colors of the springtime, their fickleness accentuated by hems of uneven lengths and tucks and pleats of unusual design, will be the best sellers for the Eastertide.

This type of dress worn with a poke bonnet of the new spring mode or the large floppy hat or the newly returned garden hat being shown in some of the Wichita Falls houses, would create an ensemble approaching if not rivaling that of the dainty lady of earlier American history.

Frocks Modern

But the lady of the coming Easter time will have innovations that the former dame did not dream of, for the frock, with all its old fashioned design, will be modern. The hip line will be fitted snugly, with all the grace of panels and uneven hemline below and a becoming fullness above—all gifts of an artistry unheard of in the former years.

If the lady does not like floral designs in her Easter gown then chiffon and georgette in the solid colors will be in demand and a choice selection of these quieter designs can be found in the downtown shops.

Another new feature of the feathery frocks is the cape they display. These capes may be long, short, shoulder, all round or triangular, or merely thrown about the shoulders nonchalantly, with the ever-escaping air. Flowers, if used, are gathered in bunches and pinned on the shoulder.

If you don't want a poke bonnet, there is a group of other hat styles that will harmonize with the light weight spring dresses. Lacy hairbraids will probably hold the center of the stage among the straws while the felt hat will lose none of its favor for the severely tailored ensemble or the sports outfit.

Baku Straw

Baku straw can be had in the smartly tailored ballibuntle or sisol straws, tinted to match all hues or in the natural cream shades.

Crochet hats are still being shown but are somewhat more finely woven than in former years.

Chochet vica purses will match these hats in texture and in color and are the smartest models shown this spring for Easter sales. Trout calf and soft leathers are also being displayed and are finding ready sale to be worn with the light weight dresses.

The interesting note in these filmy dresses is the lining which disposes of the question of suitable lingerie to be worn with the various colors, for now each dress carries its slip and achieves suitable protection where most needed.

Wise Choice

For the woman who is anticipating a spring and summer season of travel, the navy blue georgettes are a wise choice. The downtown shops are showing a tempting array of navy blue georgettes with lace collars and lace trim, usually shown in ecru or cream.

Hosiery for women will follow all shades and the entire gauntlet of tints, with tan leading with the greatest number of devotees due to the unusual popularity of beige tints in slippers for the springtime.

Slippers will be plainer than last season and will be richer in tint. Straps, pumps and ties will be worn for the Easter season.

There will be a sprinkling of grays for those women who prefer that neutral shade to honey beige in accessories. Then there is being shown in a few of the shops a line of Mallison printed silks cut from large gay patterns and showing a tan background.

Capital Society Joins Circus

Washington is agog to attend the Fort Meyer society circus, March 24, in which prominent Washingtonians will perform. Above, Miss Reine Claudel, daughter of the French ambassador, who will ride in a tandem feature, and, inset, Miss Margo Couzens, 17, daughter of Senator James Couzens, of Michigan, one of the youngest tandem riders.

Easter Masculine Garb To Be Of Dark Hue This Year

The Easter masculine garb will be of a darker hue this season than it has for several seasons past, with the smartest suits being shown for the Easter time, being either navy blue or deep gray, with enlivening gay threads forming fine stripes in the material, a peep into the Wichita Falls shops would suggest.

Most of the shops, however, are showing a larger display of stone grays and the deeper shades of tan, which will prove popular among the men of this locality for spring and early summer wear.

Two-Button Suits

The jackets of the suits are showing both the two-button and the three-button styles, the latter quite often showing a turned under effect. These styles were prevalent in the early spring and will be as popular for Easter wear, Wichita Falls style experts predict.

Coats and trousers will continue to fit more snugly than in former seasons. The trouser leg will be narrower than last season. Not a few numbers in pleated front trousers are being displayed.

Shirts will continue to be darker in tone than is the wont during this part of the year, but it is predicted that the white shirt will regain its popularity as summer advances.

The Easter stock, however, will continue to revolve around the shades once though the property rights of the feminine world, the pastel shades with greens and lavendars predominating.

Collars will be attached this season though the demand for separate collars to match is on the increase. Attached or otherwise, they will show a longer point than that of the last few years.

In cravats, foulards the large patterns will predominate for the Easter season. These patterns will be carried out in all the popular shades to harmonize or contrast with the colors of the suits. Gingham patterns and polka dots are being shown, the latter however, in no considerable quantity. Solid neckties are not abating in popularity with the more conservative buyers.

Lisle Hose

French lisle hose for men will be the smartest type shown and will gather all the fantastic designs of the past few seasons. The silk and silk mixtures often with plain background with a vividly colored clock, will hold the attention for the present season among the more conservative and mature men.

For both the young man and the older and more conservative purchaser sox will assume a more rational appearance and will display vertical stripes rather than the checks of recent seasons.

No man will dare wear a dark hat this Easter. The near white hats are showing no decrease in popularity as the spring season advances, and the average man visualizes himself in a light colored hat for Easter Sunday.

Jade white with a dark band is probably the best seller and easily the most in evidence in the show windows and among the stock of the downtown shops this month. Pearls and silver grays are also being greatly sought.

Snap brims will lead the fashion parade, although a few welt and roll brims are being demanded.

Oxfords for men will continue to be dark with black gaining the ascendency over dark tans. The anticipated rush on the lighter shades of tan forecast by those who fear the hot Texas sun, has not yet materialized.

An effort is being made by men this year to gain a closer harmony between the details of his attire. Hat, suit, sox, cravat and other essentials will follow the single color scheme carried out in various blending shades of the same color.

Men's Underwear

Underwear for men has undergone an interesting change during the past few seasons. Two unit suits have replaced the former popular one unit suit. The newer type of under garments have achieved their significance from their colors.

The men's wear shops are displaying a combination garment of gaily colored rayon that is interesting from the standpoint of its novelty for the masculine trade.

Striped trunks are still popular and may be worn with a blending or a neutral colored vest.

Among the newest garments in this department is the "Black Bottom" trunk fashioned cleverly from black and white sateen and broadcloth.

Lindy's Place In History Discussed

By Universal Service.

CHICAGO, March 31.—Has Col. Lindbergh immortalized himself? Will posterity couple his name with the names and fame of Napoleon, Alexander the great, Charlemagne, Washington, Lincoln—men who have, each in his own domain, enriched humanity and changed the "course of empire?"

Historians and educators at the University of Chicago, and at Northwestern university, are occupying themselves with the future position in the world's history which Lindbergh, by his epochal trans-Atlantic flight, will take.

That he will be hailed as forerunner of hardy youths who may traverse space the extent of which is barely dreamed of today, is possible.

"One hundred years from now," asserted Prof. Carl Ruth, of the ancient history department of the University of Chicago, "flying across the Atlantic will be a common occurrence.

"Historians will write up "Lindy" for bringing about a better understanding between countries of Europe, Latin-America and the United States.

"'Lindy' will be written up as the pioneer of the new era of flying," said Prof. Marcus W. Jernegan American history professor at Chicago. "Enormous credit is due him for his impetus and spirit in opening up air routes between cities and nations of the world."

Isaac J. Cox, professor of Latin-American history at Northwestern university, said that "Lindbergh will not only appear in history books as the great figure of aviation, but will be remembered as the greatest 'unofficial" diplomat.'"

SCHOOL GIRLS DRESS CHEAPLY

$200 Per Year Sufficient, Many Claims

By Universal Service.

WINNETKA, Ill., March 31.—It doesn't cost more than $200 to $400 a year to clothe the modern high school girl, she insists, she doesn't want to be dressed like the wealthy movie stars.

The small sum mentioned, kept in the opinion of Miss Winifred Lighter, head of the home economics department of New Trier high school, covers the young women's wardrobe.

"We recommend new good clothes rather than a great number of cheap garments that soon lose appearance, neatness and quality with much laundering," she explained. "Simplicity and appropriateness, together with reasonable price, should be considered.

"During the past year girls have been making a record of their expenses, for which on the basis of their findings, an average budget has been compiled which ranges from $200 to $400 a year. This includes four or six dresses, wraps, hats, underwear, shoes and other articles.

"Sport wear is to take the place of the gay clothes worn for high school girls. The skirts will be longer and fuller. The tendency will be to give women the masculine silhouette, making more to a feminine appearance.

"Gaudiness and flashiness in dress is not in good taste. We're trying, too, to get the girls away from the expensive shops and back to the old-fashioned lisle."

Actors Serve As 'Mannikins'

Paris Sees Hollywood's Style Value

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, March 31.—Paris, the dictator of fashions and the arbiter of modes, has been forced to consider Hollywood in its contemplation of milady's dress, simply because motion picture styles created eight to ten months in advance circulate the world and put ideas in every woman's mind.

To see Norma Shearer sweep through a drama in an ultra frock or to gaze upon Constance Talmadge in a natty sport suit with a carelessly tied scarf, excites both interest and perhaps a little envy.

In planning their wardrobes the leaders of the universe copy those innovations.

And in other words, the stars unconsciously set as mannikins. Lucien Lelong, Callot, Lanvin and other dictating spheres of fashion, realize full well if their styles are to be decadent over the globe they must co-operate with Hollywood.

Winfield Sheehan who knows his Paris as well as the rest of us know our home town has been studying Filmland's contribution to the style mart for a long time. As chief of Fox productions he has been fully cognisant of the importance of dressing the Fox stars as well as possible. With that idea in mind he has imported Harry Collins, one of New York's foremost dressmakers to Hollywood.

I cornered Mr. Collins who deserted a lucrative business to enter the movies to ask him how he expected to dress Janet Gaynor, June Collyer, Mary Duncan and the other Fox actresses.

"Every screen star should be dressed to fit her personality," he told me. "Every woman in the films is not a good actress but everyone of them has a personality else she would not be in pictures.

"Dressing a girl for the screen is entirely different from dressing her for the street," he continued. "On the street you can go after startling effects but on the screen the costume must not be diverting. If it is you are interferring with the play.

"But if the fashions of the films are copied you cannot have somber, uninspired clothes," I ventured. 'Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer not long ago brought over Erte to create a new type of fashions—and Erte is an extremist."

"Plain clothes," he answered. "need not necessarily be somber and lacking in smartness. The best dressed women in the world are those who affect a certain severity in their costumes."

"Beautiful women,' Mr. Collins stated, "should never be overdressed. I might cite Marion Davies for an example," he said "Her beauty needs no adornment. She looks best in simple clothes. People talk about the improvement in her ability as an actress but no one ever says how much better she dresses today than she did when she first started making pictures."

Isn't that true of all of our best known cinema favorites I asked his. "Styles today are much less pretentious. Ruffles and frills are no longer au fait."

"No, I don't think it is true of all stars. I know one of your Hollywood actresses whose entire screen wardrobe should be chucked in the trash basket. She is so beautiful it is a treat to look at her—but her clothes look as if a village dressmaker had come in by the day and made them."

Mr. Collins would not admit that the male sex admired this actress in spite of her frilly, beruffled clothes. He pooh—poohed the idea that women dress for each other, as Mid-Victorian and Archaic.

"Have you dressed any of our Hollywood beauties," I inquired, "before you came west to set the fashions here?"

"June Collyer is a customer of mine," he answered. "I make her clothes to fit her smile which is her greatest charm. She puts her soul into that smile and clothes must not be a distraction.

Sixth Sense.

"Some women," he ventured, "have a sixth sense. They are as clothes conscious as other women are emotionally conscious. Irene Castle is one actress who knows exactly what to wear and how to wear it. Alice Brady and Madge Kennedy are both smartly and beautifully gowned always."

"What is your observation of Hollywood from what you have seen and how will you dress the different Fox actresses to suit their individual personalities?" I asked.

"My observations of Hollywood must necessarily be restricted until I have had a chance to become better acquainted here. It is one of the few resort cities in America. The women here dress on the street much as they do at Biarritz or Deauville, in sport attire suited to the climate.

"I had the surprise of my life yesterday afternoon," he continued, "to see men walking about the Ambassador hotel in knickers. You never see that informal attire in New York. A man in knickers at any big hotel in the afternoon would be both conspicuous and terribly self-conscious.

"As for dressing the Fox stars—I want to wait until I have talked with them and studied them before I even suggest styles for them.

DIRECTOR NAMED FOR EASTER MORNING SUNRISE PAGEANT

READERS' CLUB HEAD CHOSEN

Mrs. J. E. Shipley to Design Resurrection Play

Mrs. J. E. Shipley, of the Wichita Falls Readers' club, dramatic organization, has been selected to direct the annual Eastern morning sunrise pageant, a union affair in which all churches will co-operate, Dr. Floyd Allan Bash, pastor of the First Christian church, has announced. Dr. Bash said Mrs. Shipley had been chosen by the Readers' club, after he had requested the club to choose a director for the resurrection play. The easter pageant for the last two years has been directed by Mrs. A. Abernathy.

Other officials chosen for the event, which is being staged under Dr. Bash's general direction, include Harry Hines, who will preside at the ceremonies, and Nat F. Grafton, pastor of the Presbyterian church, who will deliver the brief Easter morning sermon preceding the pageant announced.

Guy E. Curtis, educational director of the First Christian church, was named musical director for the event last week, and plans being formulated by him, in co-operation with J. S. Cantwell, superintendent of schools, will call for a huge chorus of about 2000 school children, who will assist in the pageant. The children are being drilled in their respective schools, and are to meet for rehearsal in the memorial auditorium next Saturday evening, Mr. Curtis announced.

New Play.

An entirely new production will be given this year, Dr. Bash said. Mrs. Shipley, with her assistants, will give a pageant of the Resurrection story of their own design, leaving the old custom of giving a stock pageant. The title of the play has not as yet been announced.

The pageaant is to be held in a natural amphitheater located about five miles from Wichita Falls on the Seymour road. According to Dr. Bash, who with Mr. Curtis, and Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Bohmfalk are making arrangements for the site, the amphitheater this year will be a slight distance away from the one used last year, so that more room will be available.

Selection of the cast for the play began this week, when Mrs. Shipley named Dorothy Nolen, Anna Harrell, Ella Merle Mathis, Mrs. Charles Reid, Wilbur Kent and John Keevil as participants. Additional names will be announced as they are selected, it was said.

The Easter pageant is to be preceded by union Passion-Friday services, to be held beginning Friday noon at the First Christian church. The majority of Wichita Falls churches are holding Pre-Easter services.

LEAGUES GIVE PAGEANT HERE

Program to Celebrate Anniversary

The Epworth leagues of the First Methodist church will celebrate the anniversary of the parent organization Sunday evening when they meet in special session, and have charge of the regular services, according to Dr. S. S. McKenney, pastor of the church. The league session will begin at 6:30 p. m., and at 7:30 o'clock, members will present a pageant, "Parson Faithful's Debts," in the main auditorium.

The purpose of the anniversary, according to J. W. Thorne, one of the principal characters in the pageant, is to call attention to the birthday of the Epworth league. This organization, he explained, was organized in 1890 under the direction of Bishop H. M. DuBose of the Trinity Methodist church, Los Angeles, Cal.

The leagues in the local church have made enviable records in the past, and are now the sole support to missionaries in the Belgian Congo, and are assisting several young people through college where they are training for future work in the church.

The program at the regular league hour will be devoted to a discussion of the topic, "Mathematics and the Bible," with Mr. Thorne as leader. The speakers, and their subjects follows: "Subtraction," Marguerite Gerhardt and Mrs. Murrell Hooper; "Addition," Willis Tyson and J. S. Minton; "Division," Theresa Kaufman and Mozelle Revere; "Multiplication," Mary Palmer. The entire league will join in the last discussion.

The main anniversary service will be the presentation of the pageant, will picture the life of an aged minister. In connection with the anniversary service, the pageant seeks to assist in the superannuate endowment campaign, which is now in progress, it was explained.

Characters in the pageant follow:

Parson Faithful, J. W. Thorne.
Spirit of Justice, Miss Mildred Mayes.
Young Preacher, David Henry.
Prosperous Business Man, Paul Sisk.
Old Lady, Miss Alta Saye.
Young Mountaineer, DeWitt Yost.
Teacher, Mrs. Murrell Hooper.

CO-OPERATION

Pastor Here Meets Success In Trinidad, Colo., Revival

Churches can really co-operate with success in a revival meeting, according to Dr. Floyd Allan Bash, pastor of the First Christian church, who returned this week from a union meeting in Trinidad, Colo. Dr. Bash was in charge of the meeting.

"At one service," he said, "we had Presbyterian ushers, a Luthern pastor presided, a Christian pastor led in prayer, the Baptist quartet sang, a Methodist minister read the scripture, the Salvation Army captain sang a solo, we met in a Methodist church building, and I did the preaching."

Dr. Bash returned to begin a series of Pre-Easter meetngs at his church. The services will be held each evening of this week. He is to preach at each service on the general theme, "The Greatest Teachings of the Greatest Week in the Life of Jesus."

BAPTISTS PLAN NEW CHURCH

Floral Heights Congregation Starts Campaign

Members of the Floral Heights Baptist church within the near future will begin a campaign to raise funds for a new building, to cost approximately $100,000, the Rev. W. H. Albertson, pastor, announced this week.

The building, it is planned, will be a three-story brick structure, and will be located on the site of the present building at Buchanan and Avenue F.

Campaign for funds probably will start next week, the Rev. Albertson said. The building is expected to be under construction within two months.

Mexico Fears 'Immorality'

By Universal Service.

ACUNA, Mex., March 31.—"It is not the exploitation of Mexican resources by American capital that Mexicans need fear, it is the degradation of the Mexican people by American immorality that presents the most serious problem before the people of this country."

That is the opinion expressed today by Senora Doloras Longoria, wife of an ex-senator from the state of Coahuila.

Senora Longoria has just returned from New York, Chicago and other American cities where she made keen observation of "American morals."

"Here on the border of the United States and Mexico, where our Mexican girls used to play the innocent game of flirting with their sweethearts through barred windows," the Senora continued, "I find that American ways have already corrupted our younger people and they have taken to that horrible American practice of necking and petting.

"They no longer are satisfied to smile and flirt through barred windows. They must steal our nights and neck with their lovers on back seats of cars or they must parade up and down the streets of the towns in automobiles with their dresses above their knees in typical American abandon.

"Even in your newsstand you see on your magazine covers either the picture of a man with gun in hand shooting somebody or a semi-nude woman. The American people have ceased to relish good literature and enjoy only the morbid."

Predicts Use Of Television

By Universal Service.

CHICAGO, March 31.—In a few years every user of the home telephone, as well as the business phone, will be able to see the person he's talking to.

Television will be in common, everyday use then, General James G. Harbord, president of the Radio Corporation of America, predicted today.

"Were I one of the prophets," he said, addressing the Chicago Association of Commerce, "I should perhaps tell you that in the campaign of 1932 we shall both see and hear by radio.

"Even today it links the nations together in the betterment of relations and the promotion of enduring peace. The printed page is already flashed across the oceans. International broadcasting will soon become a commonplace.

"The operas of Europe and the incomparable music of those great countries to the south of ours will be heard nightly in American homes."

The speaker praised the work of the federal radio commission in establishing order and efficiency in the broadcasting field.

Presbyterian Church Shows Large Growth

Report of the year's work at the First Southern Presbyterian church show that a total of 61 new members were added to the church rolls, according to Dr. Gaines B. Hall, pastor. The reports are being compiled, and will be announced probably at the Sunday services, Dr. Hall said.

All financial obligations during the fiscal year, which ends March 31, have been met, and prospects for the new year seem bright.

Church Enlarged For Union Revival Meeting

Special to The Record News.

MEMPHIS, Texas, March 31.—Preparations are about complete for the co-operative revival of most of the churches of Memphis, which begins Sunday, April 1. The large tabernacle at the First Baptist has been greatly enlarged, almost doubling its capacity.

CHURCH HOLDS ANNUAL MEET

Presbyterians to Meet For Business Session

Members and friends of the Floral Heights Presbyterian church will gather for another of their quarterly church suppers next Wednesday evening, April 4, at 7 p. m. The arrangements for the supper are in the hands of a committee composed of Mesdames Sam Queen, B. B. Woodall and David Reese-Jones.

Following the supper the annual congregational meeting will be held in the church auditorium with the pastor as moderator. At this meeting, reports will be received from the various church organizations as to the work of the past year. Mrs B. B. Woodall will speak for the Women's Missionary society, Mrs. E. E. Campbell for the choir, Miss Loma Ray for the Christian Endeavor society, Mr. R. E. Allison for the Men's club, and the pastor for the Sunday school and the church work in general. Mr. Ralph Dick will present a financial report.

Other items of business will be the election of a treasurer and a financial secretary. A proposal will be presented to the congregation for adoption, looking forward to an enlarged session and the introduction of the rotary system whereby the elders will be elected to serve for only three years. The six elders elected at the meeting under this system will divide themselves into three classes, one to serve for one year, another for two years, and the third for three years. If the proposal carries, each year thereafter it will be necessary for the congregation to re-elect either the elders whose term of office expires or elect their successors.

All members of the church and congregation are urged to be present at the meeting.

Pastors Head Delegation To Political Rally

Special to The Record News.

OLNEY, Texas, March 31.—Thursday night, April 5, has been set apart as Olney night in the Will Hogg meeting in Graham. Rep. S. J. T. Williams, campaign manager, has written all the pastors of Olney asking that it be announced on Sunday. The special committee to lead the delegation is Rev. C. E. Lindsey, chairman, Rev. J. T. Jones, Rev. R. E. Matlock and Rev. E. L. Hughes. The Hogg meeting is growing in interest every day. Delegations are coming from Throckmorton, Woodson, Albany, Breckenridge and all of the surrounding towns. It is believed that Olney will visit her sister town that night with a delegation of at least 200 people.

Surprised!

Artists say there's not a prettier profile in Manhattan, but ordinary people compliment her more often on her wonderful mass of soft, gleaming brown hair. She's Adra Adams, lovely New York City girl wh lives at 130 East 57th street.

"I was certainly surprised," says Miss Adams, "to see how easy it is to keep my hair soft, shining and easily manageable by the new method so many of my girl friends are using I don't have to shampoo mine more than once a month now, Danderine keeps it so clean. It makes my scalp feel just wonderful and I never have a sign of dandruff any more. And Danderine is so simple to use. All you do is put a little on your brush each time you fix your hair."

Danderine quickly removes that oily film from your hair and restores its natural color and luster. It keeps bobbed hair in place without showing. It stops dandruff. It isn't sticky or oily. All drug stores have the generous 35c bottles.

Tulsa Oil Man Given Clear Field In Race For National Post

By HOMER A. SOONER
The Record News Staff

OKLAHOMA CITY, March 31.—Oklahoma's delegations to the national political conventions this summer will go uninstructed, if advance indications developed at last week's precinct caucuses mean anything.

Summed up briefly, the democrats and republicans wound up their caucus sessions as follows:

DEMOCRATS: With few exceptions sent uninstructed delegations to the county convention.

Insisted on most cases on a dry plank being included in the party's platform.

REPUBLICANS: Favored uninstructed delegations to Kansas City, although a scattering of votes were ordered for Lowden, a few for Hoover and a very few for Curtis.

The democrats evinced no particular favoritism among those in the field for the presidential nomination. At least, comparatively few delegations received instructions to support any particular candidate. Al Smith was accorded some support and Jim Reed received a smaller amount.

Managers Take Comfort

But these lack of instructions, it must be understood, mean little or nothing. As a matter of fact, campaign managers for the various leaders all are claiming considerable comfort from the precinct results, for all assert, and in the main they are right, that no effort has been made to secure instructed delegations from this state. Reed and Smith supporters profess to see decided advantages for their leaders in the fact that the Houston delegates will be free to vote as they please.

Belief held in many quarters that the recent resignation of Dr. Bradford Knapp as president of Oklahoma A. & M. college was inspired by political exigencies was given full confirmation this week.

When Dr. Knapp resigned a $10,000 a year post in Oklahoma to accept a $12,000 offer from Alabama Poly he said the salary inducement was the principal factor in his decision. Politics, it was understood, played no part in it. Furthermore, as late as last Sunday Harry Cordell, president and dominant figure of the state board of agriculture, told a group of A. & M. alumni that the board was anxious to retain Dr. Knapp.

"We know his worth and we certainly would have matched the Alabama offer if statutory provisions would have permitted," he said.

But the next day Cordell went to Norman and dangled a contract before the eyes of President W. B. Bizzell of the state university—and the contract stipulated a $12,000 a year salary.

Cordell would have been the most surprised man in Oklahoma had Bizzell accepted the post. But the state university executive was far too smart to align himself with the Aggie school and thus be exposed to the machinations of the state's political machine.

Bizzell declined with thanks.

Knapp has had a difficult task and his friends frankly are glad for his own sake that he is leaving Stillwater for work that will be free from the grasp of the politicians.

But that does not answer the question every one in the state is asking—namely, what will be the fate of the Aggies now.

* * *

The republican element of the state was thrown into more or less turmoil this past week by the sudden and unexpected withdrawal of John B. Nichlos of Chickasha from the national committeeman's race. His action virtually assures the election of W. G. Skelly, Tulsa oil operator.

Nichlos, who has been much in the public eye of late through his efforts to obtain a gas franchise in Oklahoma City, was waging a merry battle for the republican national committeeman's post. While Skelly was conceded a margin, it was apparent the final battle would be worth watching.

Now then Nichlos has withdrawn, assigning only vague reasons therefor, and political observers are hunting for the nigger in the woodpile. Coming as it did almost on the eve of precinct caucuses, no one can figure out exactly why Nichlos dropped out unless he saw a profitable swap in the offing.

Thus far no reinforcements have been announced to compete with Skelly. A. G. Alexander, director of internal revenue and former state republican chairman, has been mentioned as a possible candidate. But he is non committal as to his intentions. Others mentioned as possible entrants are Grant McCullough, Pat Hurley and Waite Phillips.

However, experienced observers concede that any opposition for Skelly at this late date is merely an idle gesture.

As soon as they have completed the plans, the necessary arrangements will be made for the construction contracts, Mr. Brown said. The exact cost of these additions will not be known exactly until the plans are finished and the bids all in. However, the total cost of the additions to both schools was estimated to be about $40,000.

"This practice has proved to be very satisfactory, both to purchasers and vendors," Mr. Sherman declared. "The auctioneer stands between the man who sells and the man who buys, and has to please both parties.

"Through auctioneering farm lands bring their true daily value."

School Census For 1928 Duplicates '27 Record Of More Than 10,000

The school census of Wichita Falls this year is practically the same as last year, according to estimates made Saturday on the early returns by W. W. Brown, secretary of the boar dof education. Last year's census showed a total of 10,417.

Principals of the Wichita Falls public schools have worked through the month of March and have covered the entire city. The next few days will be devoted to a final checking up in the office of the school administration of duplications and clearing away loose ends.

Reports of these principals indicate little difference in the present report as compared to last year's, but the exact figure of the city total will not be obtainable for another ten days.

Mr. Brown Saturday issued an appeal to the people of Wichita Falls who have children of school age to call the school administration headquarters, Phone 6302, if they were overlooked by the school census takers. He explained the necessity for this as being due to the fact that the sum of money Wichita Falls receives from the state is based on the number of pupils of school age. As each pupil means $15 to the city schools, he urges everyone to be sure their children were registered.

So far this year the state has paid Wichita Falls $8 of the $15 due on the present year. About $5 more is expected before school is out, and the balance is expected during the summer.

Formal announcement of his candidacy will be made within the near future, Mr. White said.

Duncan Seeks Place On Petroleum Air Line

Duncan, Oklahoma wants a place on the proposed Petroleum Airway from Wichita Falls to San Angelo and Bartlesville.

Pushing their claims, and outlining the advantages to the airline of giving Duncan a spot on the new air map, Ernest Brown and Judge Scott visited Wilbur C. Cahoon, president of the Wichita Falls municipal airport.

Mr. Cahoon said if all of Duncan is as enthusiastic and "rarin' to go" as much as are Mr. Brown and Judge Scott, that Duncan will be on some air line in the near future.

The next meeting of the representatives of the cities along the proposed line, including San Angelo, Abilene, Bartlesville, Tulsa, Oklahoma City and Wichita Falls, will meet in Wichita Falls Wednesday, April 11, at which time the actual decision on the airline probably will be made.

THRIFTY PIGS MAKE PROFIT

Hog Price Makes Business Unattractive

The present price of hogs does not make the business a very attractive one just now, especially with the price of feed as high as it is. Under such circumstances it takes good management and the best of care given to the pigs to make a profit out of the feeding operations. Pigs that are unthrifty and stunted never make a profit equal to the thrifty pigs, no matter what the price may be, and in the years when the prices are down as they are now, a "runt" always loses money.

The farmer who has a lot of young pigs this spring must see to it that they have every chance to kept in good condition and growing all the time. The first thing that should be avoided is the keeping of the pigs in old pens and around the corrals where there is old dirty straw and manure to sleep in. A pen that has been used year after year without cleaning out or moving will be alive with worms and the pigs will soon be full of them. A wormy pig will never be a thrifty one Nine times out of ten the pig that does not seem to grow and get along is afflicted with worms. It will never do any better until it is cleaned out and gotten on to clean pastures. Wherever it is possible to do it, pigs should be taken from the farrowing pens when it is a week old and placed on good clean pastures. There may not be enough grazing to do any good but the sow and pigs will be much better off there on bare ground than to be left in the old pens.

No Worms

Pigs that have been farrowed in clean, sanitary pens and then taken to pasture seldom have worms, "bull-nose" or mange, all of which they will get if left in the usual pens around the barn. The custom is now in the states where hog raising is the most profitable, to rotate pastures just the same as they do their crop lands. Putting the pigs on new pastures every year has been found to be as profitable as changing crops. It is not only good for the pigs but is good for the land. The fertility left by the grazing pigs is a considerable item and that is being taken into account. Grazing hogs on the poorest land on the farm is a practice that is quite satisfactory. The thin, wornout soils planted to sweet clover and then grazed by hogs and cattle or sheep, will very soon develop into the best soil on the farm. It is a practice that does everything good.

This is not the time for the farmer who has hogs to get discouraged. There is not the profit in hogs that there was last year or the year before, but even at seven cents there is a profit if the pigs are kept in condition and given good care. It is possible, and has been done here, to grow pigs to market size for six cents a pound, using commercial feeds the entire time. If home grown feeds are used, it may not lower the cost a great deal but you are selling your feed at a good advance over the market price and at the same time are putting back a large percentage of the fertilizing value in the feed onto the land.

Time to Buy

This is the time when a farmer who has any desire to go into the hog business should give it careful consideration. The time to buy is when everybody else wants to sell and the time to sell is when everybody else wants to buy. The high price of feed and the low price of hogs makes it a little unprofitable to feed hogs, so the tendency is to let hogs go to market just as soon as they are fit. Too many farmers get discouraged as soon as the price goes down and sells his hogs. All of his neighbors do the same and as a consequence the market is still further depressed. In another year the price commences to go up and they decide to go back and commence bidding against each other for breeding stock, driving the price still higher.

This is not the time to quit growing hogs—it is a good time to commence or to get ready for the next cycle of good prices, for they will come. This same thing happens year after year but it is a lesson that is hard to learn. The ones who have learned it are the ones who are making the success in this line. Building up the quality of the herd in times of low prices is good practice—getting ready for the harvest of good prices that is sure to come.

Cow Testing Assn's Are Needed in Texas

The following from Hoard's Dairyman shows what is capable of being done by cow testing associations, the organization of which should go along hand in hand with the purebred sire campaign in Texas:

The Cedarburg — Grafton Association of Wisconsin increased its average production in four years from 290 to 338 pounds fat per cow. This increase in production is ascribed by the tester, Gust Wild, to better feeding, weeding, and breeding. There was a total of 148 cows sold as unprofitable, or 11 per cent of those in the association. There were 103 pure-bred bulls and 83 cows sold, with 20 bulls and 31 cows purchased by members. Fourteen members are using bulls sired by Sir Bess, a son of 37th, five of these being out of cows with C. T. A. records of over 500 pounds fat.

"From observations taken from time to time on my rounds," says Mr. Wild, "I am personally satisfied that there is not a herd in the association that will not produce an average of over 300 lbs. of butterfat if properly taken care of. There is no herd in the association that does not produce good in the winter months. The trouble comes in the summer when the pasture is short and the heat and flies come. Under these conditions the cows go down in milk production. In fact, I have seen herds drop over 4000 lbs. in milk in one month, which could have been largely avoided with a little extra feed. We know that this is the busy time of the farmers, yet it will pay them for the extra work and feed necessary to feed the herd to prevent most of this slump in milk production in the summer."

Dependable "Old Bossy" Plodded Along

Now Family Owns Home From Butter Profits

Butter is quite an important item on the bill of fare of most families. It is one thing that we think we cannot do without. But to Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Williams, living near Iowa Park, butter has been much more than an article of diet. It has been the means where by they have established one of the most comfortable farm homes in Wichita county.

As a foundation material, butter would not ordinarily rank very high, but there are many farms in this community, as well as in every other one, that is building up an enduring prosperity on butter. There are lots of people living in the towns that will not use anything but country butter if they can get it and this demand makes a good market for those on the farms who know how to make a quality product.

Pioneer Settlers

Some 20 years ago Mr. and Mrs. Williams bought 160 acres of land east of Iowa Park—the site of their present home. At that time "diversification" and "crop rotation" were terms that had not been used very much. Farming was largely a business where one worked from daylight to dark a part of the time and waited through the winter for the time to go to work again—very much the same as many of them are doing now. These young people were wise enough to know that this kind of faming would not build them the kind of a home that they wanted. They realized that any business that only brought in money during one season of the year was not the kind that makes its operator a successful business man.

They happened to have a few cows, not particularly good ones but just the average cow, and they decided to make the milking of cows a part of the farm program. Cows gave milk every day so that if the product could be sold they would be assured of an income every day. The only ways of marketing milk then was milk for city consumption, as cream or in the form of butter. Twenty years ago whole milk was not in very great demand in their town; selling cream was not very remunerative then, at least as compared with selling butter, and as Mrs. Williams was an expert in butter making and knew that she could produce the highest quality, they decided on this line of dairy work.

They got a few more cows and their cows since then have been one of the important factors in their success. They now own 400 acres of good land, have a modern, comfortable home; butter making plant that is electrically equipped; have raised a family that is a credit to any community and that is a popular part of the community—all of this has been made possible largely through the help of their cows. They had a good high grade herd of Jersey cows that have been selected for their butter making qualities. Mrs. Williams is now making about 65 pounds of butter per week which she markets at Iowa Park and Wichita Falls. She has made as high as 100 pounds per week.

"Sure Anchor"

Like many others who have tried combining the dairy business with other farming, they have found it to be a safe and sure anchor. The boll weevils may (and often do) eat up their cotton crop; the green bug may (and often does) eat up their wheat and oats crop; the hot winds destroy the corn crop; the chinch bugs eat up the milo and kafir corn, but the dependable old cow plods steadily onward, finding in the salvage from these wrecked crops something that will enable her to carry on and bring in each day something to help the family fortune and enable it to live until another crop season rolls around and another effort can be made to cheat the pests out of a little cotton or grain.

Mr. and Mrs. Williams give their herd of milk cows most of the credit for all they have accomplished in building up this beautiful and comfortable home.

DAIRY BOOM IS JUSTIFIED

Increase in Milk Products Declared Safe

The question has been asked a number of times lately if the whole state of Texas goes to dairying if the market for milk and milk products would not decline to the point that milking of cows would not be profitable.

There is not much danger of the state taking up dairying in such an extensive way as that. A farmer has to be dairy-minded before he will go into the business on a very large scale. There will always be enough farmers in every community that would rather gamble on the cotton market for his crop returns than to have to stay at home every day and milk cows even though he might be sure that the uncertainties of farming might be taken away. Some people just naturally don't like a cow or like to milk and would rather stay poor with cotton than to be well off with cows.

While there is no immediate prospect of getting so many cows that we can not dispose of the product, yet if there were enough cows to give every farmer as many as he could take care of, there would be no danger of not being able to find a market for it.

Products Shipped Here.

A recent bulletin from the agricultural department of the Missouri-Pacific railway company states that for the year of 1927 farm products to the amount of $315,000,000 were shipped into Texas. Of this amount $55,000,000 worth of dairy products were manufactured in other states and shipped in to Texas. From states that are not nearly so well equipped or fitted for milk production as Texas, states that have comparatively few natural advantages produce milk so much cheaper than we do that they can manufacture it and ship it in by freight without awakening us to the things that we are overlooking.

With the natural conditions so favorable the farmers and dairymen of Texas should be able to produce milk at one-half the cost of the dairyman in the Northern states, yet there are pitiably few farmers and land owners that can see the great source of profit that lies at their very door. The farmer can not see it because there is a certain amount of regular work to it that he is not used to and is afraid of. The landowner can not see it because it would require the expenditure of some cash to fix the farm for handling it and he is afraid to risk the tenant. The great probabilities are that if the farm was fitted to care for cows, he could get a different class of tenants—some that could be trusted with stock and that could be depended upon to produce a steady income from the farm.

Can you imagine just what it would mean to increase our herds to such a point that we could produce enough milk in the state to supply us with the amount that we shipped in last year. The average Texas cow will not produce $100 worth of dairy products in one year, but assuming that she will do this, we would have to add over half a million cows to furnish us with the milk and milk products we need for our own consumption—almost have to double the present cow population.

Cows Exported.

As a matter of fact it is an utter impossibility to even think of increasing the herds in Texas by one-tenth or one-hundredth of that amount. There have been many purchases of cows during the past six months but they have largely been transfers from one part of the state to another. Very few cows have been brought in from outside the state. On the contrary, many cows have been shipped out to the Northern states. Our cows are practically free from tubercular troubles and they have been shipped north to replace the cows in herds throughout the northern dairy sections that have been decimated by this scourge.

There is not the faintest possibility that Texas will ever see an over-production of milk. Undoubtedly it will become one of the great dairy states—it has everything to make it such except the cows and a dairy-minded people, and these will come, but as it increases in population the demand for milk products will increase almost as fast as the supply will. No one need fear any trouble in disposing of milk.

Two hundred million cigarettes are being smoked every day in England.

New Zealand expects a boom in the use of automobiles this year.

Balanced Food For Cows Helps Milk

Pastor Remains In Same Church 54 Years

The month of March in Texas is a hard month for the dairymen to get good production or good tests. Grass is just beginning to get big enough to give the cows a bite. The fall grain pastures are eaten down so closely that they are not able to get a bite of that. What little grass they get is so watery that there is little food value in it and the first of it is very apt to weaken them to a certain extent and instead of increasing the milk flow it is decreased, usually.

In addition to this, the dairyman is inclined to commence skimping on the feed. A great many of the farmers do not make a practice of feeding grain during the time that grass is good and about March they commence slowing up on the feed. As the result the milk flow commences to drop and more seriously still, the per cent of butterfat or the milk test will go down also.

Improper Feeding

While it is a fact that the per cent of butterfat in milk cannot be increased by feeding, yet this statement needs some qualifying. A cow is born with a certain inherited capacity for producing butterfat. Above that limit, feeding will produce no results. But the lack of feeding or the use of improper feeding will without doubt reduce the richness of the milk. When a cow is in poor condition, or when she is getting an unbalanced ration there is no question but that the fact is going to show up in the cream test.

Not everything is known about the way milk and butterfat is made by the cow, but it is known that certain definite elements are contained in cream and butter. Those elements must be furnished to the cow in the form of feed. The cow cannot manufacture lime, phosphorous, sugar, protein and the other elements that go into milk and cream unless feed containing these things are furnished. She can then extract these things from the feed and manufacture them into milk and cream. In order to produce her capacity limit of butterfat, the feed must contain all the elements needed—in other words, it must be a balanced ration. The cow cannot take a ration that is excessive in carbohydrates and deficient in protein and change one into the other—she cannot balance it. The amount of butterfat produced will be measured by the deficiency in any one of the various ingredients for the analysis of milk or butterfat never varies.

Balanced Rations

This fact makes it necessary to know what balanced rations are and to use a certain amount of concentrates even when pasture is good. With good pasture it does not require a ration as rich in protein as when Johnson grass or sudan hay or bundle feeds are used for roughage. Cows that are drying off or low producers do not require grain concentrates, but cows that are producing 15 pounds or more should have some grain at all times.

There is one thing that everyone should remember about milking cows, and that is, that if a cow is allowed to go down in milk flow after the second month after freshening, from lack of feeding or improper care, she will never come back to the quantity she was making before the decrease. It is then important that a cow be kept doing her best at all times.

Humans And Pigs Eat For Same Reason And It's Not Pretty Function

By ALAN DALE.
Famous Dramatic Critic.

NEW YORK, March 31.—After all, the act of eating isn't a pretty function, at the best of times. Do you think it is? We eat, for the reason that pigs eat, to sustain our bodies, and nourish ourselves. Yet feeding has become with us a social function of universal appeal. When we want to "entertain" our friends, we ask them to put on their gladdest rags, and come to see us feed, at the same time that we watch them similarly employed.

Should Know Knives.

Richard Mansfield once talked to the pupils of the Franklin Sargent school of acting, and said that "men with the manners of a seacock should no longer disport themselves on the stage—in society dramas. They should know how to use their knives and forks."

He told a beautiful and pathetic story of a young actor who, after he had cut up his meat, laid aside his fork and began picking up his food with his left hand. When Mr. Mansfield delicately remonstrated—and you can imagine how delicately he would have remonstrated—the young actor was amazed, and wondered what in earth the crank meant.

This famous star then advised all young men who had not known the advantage of table etiquette to study a couple of years as footmen in some opulent families and in that way pick up a few stray "manners." Of course if we must "eat" in public, it is just as well to know how to do the thing painlessly, and thus remove the curse.

Theater Progresses.

The theater which has become realistic has progressed from the papier mache stage. There was a time when a meal on the stage papier mache food was liberally supplied. You saw piles of "property" oranges, mounds of "property" grapes, and plenty of knives and forks. Today, managers like to be less callous to the realities. Some of them put real food on the table.

Mr. Belasco during the run of one play, had the stage meal catered by an adjacent restaurant, and the public paid their money to see real food eaten by real actors. Then, comedy is often supplied by these meals. Perhaps you recall the immense courses that came to Mr. Warfield as he showed us the plebian way of eating spaghetti without scissors. You may ask what would be the patrician way of eating spaghetti, to which I am forced to reply that there wouldn't be any, as patricians wouldn't eat it.

Every actress should learn how to "pour tea." It is a delicate art. She must smile, with teapot uplifted, and ask "how many lumps?" or "Do you take cream or lemon?" (In real life, cream is generally milk, but it sounds well to say cream, and suggests opulence, which is necessary.) This seems trivial but it is very important indeed. And no "rough-stuff" if you please. In England, afternoon tea is not a meal but an almost sacred rite, and here the idea is to imitate that. Remember what I tell you.

Asparagus is seldom served on the stage and I'm glad. It is a very difficult job to eat asparagus artistically, without seeming to tickle the uvula with it. It is in fact, a feat. Yet every aspiring young actor and actress should know how to eat asparagus, without inducing ribald laughter.

TURKEY HAS 3 DAIRY BODIES

Associations Formed in Recent Meetings

Three dairy associations were organized in the territory around Turkey at recent meetings held there. The combined membership of the associations are now over 300 and they expect to increase it to 500 immediately. They are also organizing for the purchase of purebred bulls for use in the association.

B. T. Smith, one of the progressive dairymen of the community, kept a record on the milking operations last year. His cows brought in sufficient income to pay for their fed and to return the money and for themselves in the one year.

S. L. Gammill had six cows last year and for six months of the time he kept a record of the receipts and disbursements. These cows furnished milk and butter for a family of ten and still netted him a total of $61 per month.

More and more is it being proven that the farmer who milks a few cows is independent of the help of anyone. The receipt of a regular income from the dairy work is putting him in the same position as the salaried worker. Not the same position, either, but a very much more favorable one, for the farmer with a regular salary can pay his way as he goes and have the proceeds from the crops extra. The salaried man in town can't always pay his way as he goes and has nothing else to fall back on for an income.

HONEY BEES SWARM HERE

Sweet Clover Yields Better Product

The increasing use of sweet clover and alfalfa in the irrigated section of the valley is going to make possible a very interesting side line for the farmers and those living in the urban districts. This is in the keeping of bees. A number of apairies were established last year and most of them were quite successful. Solon Downing, living out beyond the Country Club estates, started in with one hive and by dividing the swarms he added six more hives during the summer and still produced considerable honey. A. F. Dye, living on the Chenault farm on the Iowa Park road, had about 50 colonies which brought in very satisfactory returns.

As the sweet clover and alfalfa increases in abundance and the quality of this product becomes known, the interest in this work will grow. The care of bees is an interesting study. No work can become more absorbing than watching the habits of the bees. It has all the interest of a "hobby" with the financial profits of a "vocation." The boys and girls can do this work and will gain a new interest if they become absorbed in it. The housewife can look after a few swarms without giving it too much of her time and it will make a pleasant change from the routine of household tasks.

Honey is a splendid food for the whole family. It is particularly good for children whose craving for sweets calls for such large amounts of candy and cakes. Honey and honey products can be substituted for the ordinary sugar and with less harmful effects. In fact, many doctors recommend the use of honey in place of sugar for children. Those who suffer from stomach troubles in which sugars are prohibited in the diet, find that honey can be used without harmful effects. It is a predigested form of sugar and very seldom gives any trouble.

Market Open.

There is always a ready market for good honey. The consumption of it is growing rapidly, especially in those areas where sweet clover and alfalfa are used as a bee pasture. These crops produce a much lighter colored honey and a milder flavored product. There are so many other sources of nectar here that it is probable that there would never be any pure sweet clover honey but it would tend to lighten it both in color and flavor.

Bee keepers are beginning to prepare for swarming of colonies. If swarming can be prevented, there will be a much heavier honey flow. Natural swarming always disorganizes both colonies for several days—a week's time is lost and sometimes the swarming colony is lost entirely. The best plan is to divide the hives and prevent this swarming.

When the indications point to an approaching swarming time, which is usually indicated by a restlessness among the bees and the clustering of many of them on the outside, the brood frames should be examined and half of them placed in a new hive. New brood frames with full sheets of foundation should replace the ones taken out. The other hive should be filled with new frames also with full foundation sheets. Of course, the old frames that are transferred to the new hive should contain some queen cells. This some times will prevent entirely, but occasionally it is impossible to break them of the swarming habit.

There is another method of preventing swarming that is sometimes used although not recommended or practiced by many bee men. That is, the practice of removing the queen's wings so that she cannot fly. If this is done—there will be no swarms for the old queen always leads the outgoing swarm. The only trouble is that sometimes the old queen wears out and dies and before you realize it the colony is weakened to the point that it also dies out.

New Plan

A new plan is being perfected by some of the northwestern bee men. S. F. Lawrence originated the idea and it is being worked out. This is the system of having two queens in each hive. It was believed practical to allow the two queens their freedom in the hive as it was believed that two queens would never sting each other if they could possibly avoid each other. It is recommended now though that a division board be used in the hive so that the two queens never get together.

This makes it possible to keep much stronger colonies than with one queen. The two queens can keep the cells filled with eggs without wearing themselves out and they will have a longer life. There seems to be no desire to swarm with the two-queen system, which makes it possible to get a much larger honey production. The larger, stronger colonies would naturally bring better results.

In using the two-queen system a larger hive is used, although the standard sized supers are used. The hive is divided with a thin division board with seven Langstroth brood frames on each side. Above the hive are ordinary Langstroth 10-frame supers for storage of honey.

Some enterprising bee man should give this a trial in Texas. With our long season of honey flow strong colonies should produce an enormous amount of honey.

Complete Campaign For Purebred Sires

Down at Gainesville they have just completed a very successful campaign for purebred sires. Meetings were held in five different comunities in the county under the supervision of the county agent and with the assistance of the A. and M. college extension workers. It was well attended in each community by the farmers and business men and as a result of the meetings it is expected that a number of bull circles will be formed in the various communities.

Huge Eggs Bring Problem

So large are the eggs of Biddy, a Brunswick, Ohio, hen, her owner is puzzled as to whether he should sell them by the dozen or the pound. This is Biddy, in the arms of an admirer.

Cheese Company Predicted Soon To Reach 50,000 Lb. Daily Production

Few people realize the magnitude of the dairy business within the trade territory of Wichita Falls when it is even developed to the point where there is being delivered to the Kraft Cheese company th amount of milk that was promised them. It is not believed that that time is very far off.

Even the supply of milk necessary to furnish this city with the necessary amount is not an inconsiderable item. It should be considerably more, for the consumption of milk in Wichita Falls is too low for best health. But even at that, there is considerably more than two million gallons of milk consumed in the town each year. The farmers and dairymen receive for this in round numbers $680,000. In addition to this, there is paid out for labor in distributing this milk to the households over $110,000, making a total of $790,000 that is paid out directly for milk and its distribution, not counting the investment in trucks, teams and milk wagons.

When the cheese factory gets up to its 50,000 pounds per day it will be paying out to the farmers and dairymen in the neighborhood of half a million dollars a year, or for the entire output of milk for both city use and manufacturing about one and a quarter million dollars a year. This does not take into account that this industry will also furnish a good market for all the grain that can be grown on our farms under a much more intensive farming system than we have at present. The yields of all crops will be increased. The acreage in cotton will be materially reduced but the profits from the reduced acreage will probably be ten times as great as it now is for the yield will be so much greater.

Future Texas Seen As "True Empire," Through Vision Of Modern Farmers

It has been said that when a people loses its vision the nation will perish. Conversely, if the people have no vision, the onward march of the nation is apt to be slow.

Without the vision of a Columbus, the progress of America might have been delayed many years. The vision of a Washington made possible the greatest union of states in the history of the world. The vision of a Houston and other great men of his time made it possible for Texas to become the greatest state of the Union. It is now up to this generation to envision a greater prosperity than Houston ever dreamed of.

The building of the great irrigation works in the Wichita valley was the result of the vision of one man. What is needed now is for others to catch this same vision, for the picture is only half completed. The means have been provided, but until the people themselves catch the vision the crystallizing of the vision is still in the future.

Texas needs land owners that have a vision—not of widely stretching cotton fields with the unprogressive condition that go with that kind of farming—but of small diversified farms with comfortable homes housing happy families. Of waving fields of grain and alfalfa with the snowy fields of cotton. Of herds of sleek, well-bred cattle housed in comfortable quarters and grazing on succulent pastures. Of a system of farming where there is an assured income every day in the year and the farmer is an honored member of the community in which he lives. Where habitations are really homes that are furnished with all the conveniences of the city and where life can be enjoyed to an extent that is not dreamed of by the man cooped up in the towns. Where the telephone and radio bring the farthermost countries of the world into speaking distance of every home. Where children can grow up under very best environment and can go out into the world equipped with habits of thrift and industry and an independence and self-reliance that will enable them to go as far as they like.

Vision Needed

Texas needs tenants that have a vision. Tenants who can see something more in the farm they have rented than just a place merely to stay for the next twelve months at the most. They must see in it the possibilities of a future home where they may surround themselves with all the comforts and blessings that that go with a settled life. They must have a vision of the advantages of becoming a part of the community life; of developing a neighborhood that will be a pride to themselves and their families; of contributing something to the life of the county, the state and the nation that will endure long after they have been numbered with the departed. They must have an enlarged vision that will enable them to see beyond the petty performance of trivial tasks and see the fulfillment of their labors as expressed through fertile fields and bursting granaries; through dairy herds of high production; through beef cattle of pure lineage; through droves of high grade hogs and standard bred fowls that will bring a feeling of pride to the hearts of the owners.

All of these things are possible to the man of vision who is willing to pay the price in careful thought and management and intelligent labor. The tenant who has this vision in his mind's eye will have no difficulty in securing an opportunity to make it come true. The difficulty will be in getting himself in the position where he can see it.

When our people can get this vision, Texas will be on the way to a prosperity that will make it truly an empire.

Frederick May Have Ozark Cheese Plant

The Frederick chamber of commerce is considering the proposal of the Ozark Cheese company of Springfield, Mo., to come to this city and operate a factory to take care of the milk that is produced in that section. The firm contemplates the erection of a modern plant equipped with storage facilities for ripening the cheese.

The operators require contracts pledging the production from 2,000 cows as a beginning. The plant is designed to have an initial capacity of 20,000 pounds of milk daily. The dairy industry in Tillman county is well developed, though far from being as great as it should be. And if a good market is found for the milk undoubtedly there will be many more cows added to the farms.

There is a part of Tillman county that still produces fairly profitable crops of cotton and it will require a few years more of soil depletion before the farmers will see the advantage of milking cows as a side line to their farming business.

SWEET CLOVER BUILDS SOIL

Farmer Has Good Seed Crop

Wichita county has a future "Master Farmer" in the person of Ben F. Greer, who lives on the McCrory farm a few miles east of Wichita Falls.

Mr. Greer came here from Arkansas several years ago. He had been county agent in that state for a long term of years and had done considerable farming as well. He came to Texas believing that there were greater opportunities for himself and his family than he could find there.

On coming to Texas Mr. Greer found all conditions so different from what he had been accustomed to that he had to spend the first year in learning how to farm under these conditions. But he brought with him such a fund of knowledge that he soon mastered the new problems.

Planted Clover

One of the things that he brought with him was the knowledge gained by experience of the value of sweet clover as a soil builder, as well as a pasture grass. He soon discovered that one of the great needs of this soil was to have some humus or vegetable matter incorporated into it, in order to break up the heavy clay nature of it and to make available the plant food that is in it. As he was an enthusiastic believer in sweet clover for this very purpose, he at once began seeding it to see if it could be grown here. He found there was no difficulty at all in getting it to grow. This year he has quite an acreage of it.

Two years ago he seeded a small field of two or three acres which furnished him an abundance of pasture. He pastured it for a while last spring and then let it go to seed. It grew very rank—got to be a regular jungle. He made no attempt to save the seed but after it was thoroughly matured, he went into it with a tandem disc and cut the stalks and turned it all under. As a consequence, he got a stand of sweet clover that was perfect. Some of it froze out during the winter but there is a good stand yet. In addition he has a large acreage that will be ready to pasture soon. This year he expects to save the seed crop as there is getting to be quite an active demand for sweet clover seed here at home.

Alfalfa Crop

Mr. Greer expects to seed alfalfa as well as sweet clover. He is convinced that alfalfa will be a paying crop here. He seeded some last spring and got more than enough off of it the first year to pay for the cost of seeding. It should produce six to seven tons per acre this year.

It is the aim on this farm to get entirely away from cotton growing. Grain, feedstuffs and legume hay and pastures to be utilized through the growing of livestock is to be the program on this farm. Hogs will be one of the principal lines. He has about 50 head of pure bred Poland China hogs of the big type and as fast as he gets pastures provided he expects to add to the number. Mr. Greer is not the type of livestock man that commences to sell out his herd when the price begins to go down. On the contrary, he knows that when hog prices get down to the bottom is the time for the wise farmer to go into the business. As long as he can have good sweet clover or alfalfa pastures he never worries much over the price of hogs for he knows that he can make some money on them every year.

Mr. Greer expects to add dairy cows to his farming program during the coming year. Last year he had only one cow, yet in addition to supplying the family table with butter and milk, she produced a little over $5 per month above feed cost in surplus products.

Poultry Interest

It is with chickens and turkeys, however, that Mr. Greer has made his greatest success and which he expects to make one of the major projects. Poultry and hogs will be the money crops and feed crops will be utilized by these and the dairy herd. The livestock will in turn make it possible to build up the fertility in the soil so that greater and greater yields of feedstuffs can be grown.

In January 1927, Mr. Greer started his poultry with 38 Rhode Island Red pullets, three turkey hens and one tom. On the first of January, 1928, he had on hand 101 fine young pullets, some good young cockerels, five good turkey hens and one tom. In addition to this nice increase in breeding stock he sold eggs to the value of $103.68, chickens, $138.84, and turkeys, 109.35, or a total sales of $351.87. The total feed cost for the chickens and turkeys amounted to $153.24. The total value of all sales of products plus the difference in inventory values was $622.37; the total cost of feeding, brooding and other items amounted to $343.69, leaving a net profit for the year's work from this small flock of $278.58.

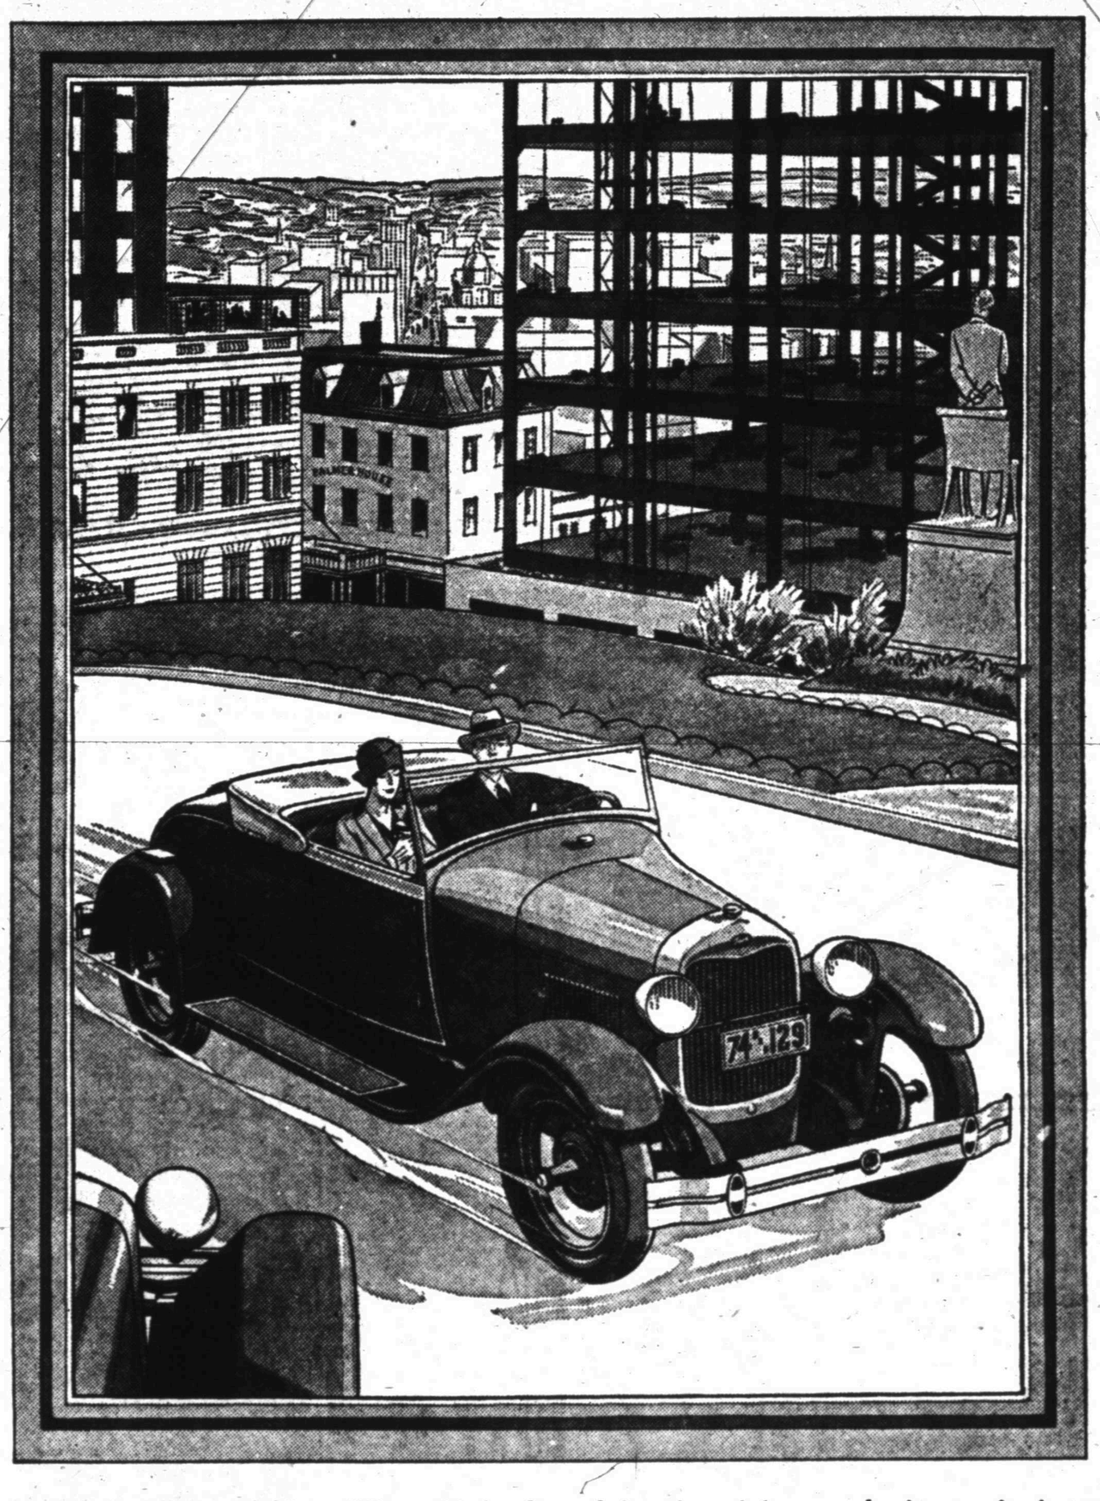

Mr. Greer expects to add capons this year and will caponize at least 50 Rhode Island Red cockerels for the carload that will be shipped from North Texas next winter.

Whipporwill, Crowder and Black-eyed peas, seed corn, red top, sudan, feterita, etc. High grade alfalfa and sweet clover seeds, fertilizers and vigoro.

Forty different kinds of steel are used in the New Ford

The new Ford Roadster is an especially alert and capable car. Quick as a flash in traffic and at home in any company because of its beautiful low lines and attractive colors. Like all the new Ford cars, it has a Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield—an important safety feature.

THE new Ford is an unusually strong and sturdy car because of the enduring quality that has been built into every part. Of especial interest and importance to every motorist is the extensive use of fine steel in the new Ford.

The story of Ford steel dates back to 1905, when the Ford Motor Company developed the use of a new alloy which raised the tensile strength of steel from 60,000 to 170,000 pounds per inch.

This was the beginning of the Ford idea of using specific steels for specific parts—an idea which has perhaps its highest expression in the new car.

In the past twenty-three years the Ford Motor Company has developed many new uses for steel and has greatly reduced its cost by purchasing its own ore mines and by designing new machines and finding new ways to produce steel at low cost.

The Ford open hearth furnaces have a yearly capacity of 420,000 tons of steel. The quality and uniformity of this steel are held to even closer limits than those specified by the Society of Automotive Engineers and the American Society for Testing Materials.

Today, more than forty different kinds of steel are used in the new Ford—each particular kind being selected and perfected to fit the particular needs of each part.

Seven kinds of steel are used in the gears alone in the new Ford because research and experience have proved that seven kinds of steel mean greater efficiency and reliability than one or two. Two kinds of steel are used in the multiple dry-disc clutch, although it could very easily be made with one. One kind of steel is also used for the ring gear and another for the driving pinion. Though these two parts meet, each does a different kind of work. In common practice, the same kind of steel would be used for each part. But Ford uses different kinds of steel—each steel being specially made for the special work it has to do.

There is no limit to selection—no thought that any certain steel must be made to do for many parts to save expense. The Ford policy has always been to use the best possible material for each part, and then through large production, to give it to the public at low cost.

As important as the steel itself is the Ford method of heat-treating steel by automatic control so that the same piece of steel will have different qualities at different points.

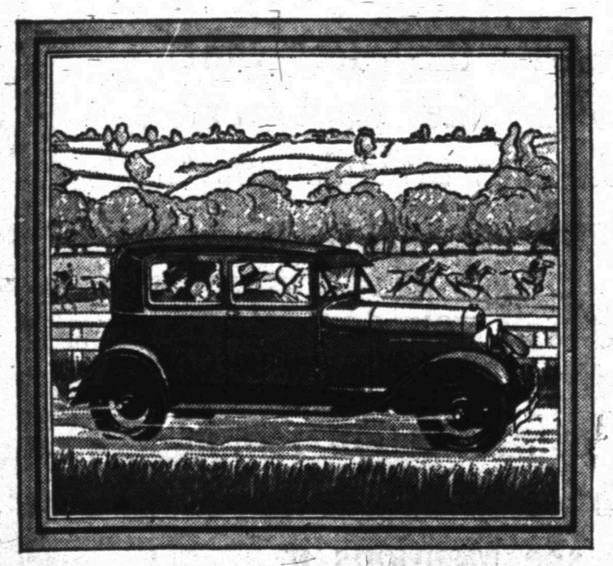

The rear axle shaft in the new Ford is especially strong and reliable for this reason. Being complete in one piece, it is naturally stronger than if the parts were made separately. This same one-piece principle is carried out also in the steering gear sector, which is integral with the steering shaft—in the bolts on the connecting rod which are made in the same piece with the rod itself—and in many other parts of the new Ford car.

Throughout the new Ford you will find that steel forgings are used instead of malleable castings and steel stampings. They are used everywhere in the chassis except, of course, for the engine castings. More steel forgings are used in the new Ford, in fact, than in almost any other car, regardless of price. They are naturally of greater strength than malleable castings and steel stampings of equal size. The use of steel forgings explains why the new Ford is such a strong and sturdy car, yet comparatively light in weight.

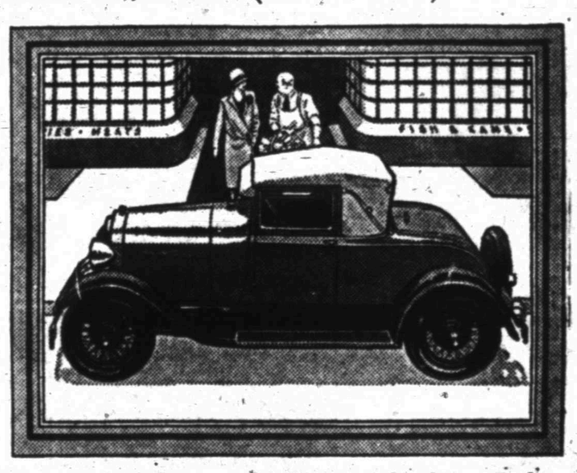

Such high quality of material has a direct bearing on the performance of the new Ford car and is the reason it will give you thousands upon thousands of miles of faithful, uninterrupted service.

When you sit behind the wheel and know the joy of driving the new Ford, you will realize that it is not just a new automobile—not just a new model—but the advanced expression of a wholly new idea in modern, economical transportation.

The Roadster sells for $385; the Phaeton for $395; the Coupe for $495; the Tudor Sedan for $495; and the Sport Coupe, with rumble seat, for $550. (F. O. B. Detroit.)

The new Ford Tudor Sedan is an especially good family car because of its speed, safety, reliability, economy, easy-riding comfort, and the generous room provided for all five passengers.

A new kind of motor car beauty is revealed in this new Ford Sport Coupe. Distinguished by the quiet simplicity of its lines and rich appointments. Body is steel. Furnished in choice of two-tone color harmonies.

SPUDDERS SCORE 4 IN NINTH TO BEAT WACO, 6 TO 5

SWENSON AND WHITE HEROES

Wally's Blow Tallies 3 To Tie and Lester Wins

By LARRY DAILEY.
Record News Sports Editor.

A winning ball club is courageous. And a courageous ball club will win. The Spudders are both. Our nine captured another game yesterday in the ninth inning, the third or fourth exhibition contest they have won this spring in the final round. It was like old times out at the orchard, with the Waco Cubs the opposition and the homelings rallying to win in the ninth. The score was 6 to 5.

They entered the final frame with the 1927 Texas league runnersup leading 5 to 2. But that did not dismay the champions.

Walter Swenson and Lester White were heroes of the triumph. It was a crashing double by Wally, playing for the first time in more than a week, that sent three mates scampering home to tie the score. And it was another smacking two-base drive by White that drove home the winning marker.

How We Won.

Howard Fitzgerald got a life in the ninth on Pratt's ooot with one out. Joe Cobb was hit by a pitched ball and Jenkins tapped an infield knock that filled the bases. Swenson smote down the left field line and all three comrades on bases sped across the plate. Roetz strolled.

White, a pitcher by trade but occupying right field yesterday in place of Lyman Lamb, who was leading the Spudder squad into battle at Amarillo, banged a double to deep center and Swenson ambled home to the plate and more than 200 customers ambled home to the dinner plate.

Despite six errors, four perpetrated by Williamson, it was a snappy game of ball, enlivened by some sensational fielding. Long base drives were frequent, too. George Stanton crashed a home run over the right field wall in the fifth inning with none on base and both clubs smacked five two-base knocks, George Blackerby, our fellow townsman who wears regalia of the enemy smiting a pair of doubles.

Payne Effective.

George Payne was touched for six hits in the five innings he worked but the screw ball artist had excellent control, kept the blows scattered and held the foe to two runs.

Joe Keifer yielded three runs and five hits in the last four rounds.

Pollan turned back the champions with one run and four hits in five innings. He was wild, however, passing four, but excellent support helped him at critical occasions.

McClung allowed only one hit and no runs in the sixth and seventh but gave up a tally and two hits and lost the game in the ninth with the four runs aided by three knocks and a hit batsman.

Cubs Score First.

The Cubs scored in the second inning. Pratt was safe when White dropped his fly and scored on Blackerby's double to left.

Another run was tallied by the foe in the fourth. Sanginette hit to left for two bases, went to third on Vigare's single to right and scored on Wolgamot's double to the same territory.

Stanton's circuit drive put the Spudders in the ball game in the fifth but the Bears added markers in the seventh, eighth and ninth. Etie singled in the seventh. McClung struck out. Adair forced Etie, Roetz to Turgeon. Adair stole second. Shires was safe on a harsh grounder which Stanton knocked down, but Buck fumbled the ball and Adair raced all the way home.

Peaky George Again.

Blackerby cracked his second double in the eighth, went to third while Roetz was throwing out Sanginette and scored on Vigare's single to left.

We counted a tally in the eighth. Swenson singled to center after one was out. Roetz was hit by a pitched ball for the second time in the game. White's infield hit filled the bases. Swenson scored while Kiefer was forcing White, Adair to Pratt.

McClung started the ninth with a knock to left and went to second on Adair's sacrifice, Kiefer to Stanton. Shires grounded to Turgeon. Fitzgerald fumbled Brown's lift, McClung scoring.

Then the ninth—and the ball game.

NOTES OF THE GAME

In an effort to sweep the two-game series Skipper Carl Williams will send Milt Steengrafe and Herb Cobb to the hill in today's game. Danning will catch. The pastime starts at the usual time, 3 o'clock.

The difference between experienced and inexperienced outfielders was shown in the fourth inning when White let Vigare's fly drop safely in the fourth. But he made up for it with his hitting in the eighth and ninth. And how!

Wolgamot smashed a double in the fourth—and was out when he ran onto Vigare, who was resting peacefully at third base.

Maybe the Cubs won't miss Wingle so much if Wayne persists as a holdout. Adair looked good at shortstop, handling six chances flawlessly. He made a corking stop of Swenson's grounder in the fourth.

Fitzgerald dropped Adair's drive in the fifth after a hard run. It was a base hit.

Roetz made a sensational leaping snatch of Pratt's liner in the fifth and doubled Brown at second. Ed played a scintillating game at his natural position, handling nine chances with only one boot.

Boss Williams got an ovation from the fans when he pinch-hit for Payne in the fifth. It was his first appearance in the lineup this year. He grounded to Pollan. But did you notice he ran it out, all the way?

Wolgamot, the excellent Cub catcher, had a difficult time chasing fouls.

Pratt robbed Fitzgerald of a hit with a bare-hand stop of a grounder and a great throw in the seventh.

Sanginette took Jenkins' drive in the eighth off the left field fence.

Playing his first game for several days, Wally Swenson found his batting eye in the eighth and ninth innings. The third baseman looks great, in for another big year.

Pete Turgeon played his usual brilliant, all-around game. Two hits, one a double, and six chances handled perfectly.

South Africa has a business boom.

Bids For Spudder Berth

A rookie will occupy the post as Spudder utility infielder. Ed Roetz, snapped scooping a grounder, and Joe Luciano are the kids fighting for the job. Roetz pastimed last season for Hanover in the Blue Ridge league, where he batted .337; tied for the league-lead in home runs with 13, and fielded at a fast clip at shortstop.
His home is in Philadelphia.

Aggie Track Team Meets Railroaders

COLLEGE STATION, March 31. The schedule of the Texas Aggie track team has been completed with the arrangement for a dual meet with the team of the Houston division of the Southern Pacific at College Station on April 21. The railroad team has two former Texas Aggies on its lineup who will give the A. & M. track men much competition.

J. H. Crump, Menard, is a former letterman in the mile and half-mile; and H. T. McKenzie, Houston, was a star weight man of the Aggies a few years ago. Creth Hines, holder of the intercollegiate title in the javevlin, is also a member of the Houston team.

REDS SCORE 5 TO 1 VICTORY OVER NASHVILLE.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., March 31. (AP)—The Cincinnati Reds, pulling ahead in the fourth inning when Pittinger singled and scored on Ford's double, defeated the Nashville team, 5 to 1 this afternoon in an exhibition game. Following the fourth inning they piled up a score steadily while the Vols labored in vain.

BIRMINGHAM TAKES TWO STRAIGHT FROM SOLONS.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 31. (AP)—Rallying in the seventh and eighth after spotting Washington five runs in the first two innings, the Birmingham barons of the Southern association made it two straight from the Senators today, by a 10 to 8 score.

SPUDDERS GET 19 BASE HITS

Mike and Roland Turn In Four-Hit Game

AMARILLO, March 31.—With Cvengros opening in world series form and Hunter, Texan tryout seeming to feel his many years, the Spudders hopped on the poor old man here this afternoon and before he could get them out in the second inning, had racked up nine hits which were good for seven runs. The score was 13 to 2.

Hunter was yanked and Storti who last year was thought of only as a third baseman was sent in to comparatively stop the hard hitting Spudders. Storti allowed only ten hits, fairly well scattered but which coupled with errors, accounted for six more runs.

Meanwhile Mr. Cvengros, it appeared, would go his six innings without yielding a hit or a run but in the fifth Pullins, tryout from Phoenix with the Broncs rapped out a three sacker to score when Benton booted Storti's grounder after he had yelled to the grandstand that he would bet ten to one the Pullins would not reach home.

What a day Benton had at bat. He went to the plate six times to hit five times safely and have Adams drop his other long fly which was almost against the fence of the big park.

Spudders Hit Hard.

The Spudders were hitting the ball squarely on the nose as the four putouts for Swansboro at first bear witness and Adams, formerly with Beaumont, playing center was given a workout which had him stumbling on his tongue.

With older pitchers coming back tomorrow a tighter game is expected. The Spudders stopped the hitting of the young western nine in a way St. Paul was not able to approach in the three games preceding yesterday.

Texas Champions In Cage Tourney

Austin in Chicago Meet Starting Tuesday

CHICAGO, March 31.—Forty of the country's best basketball teams, survivors of some 20,000 that started the season, will be in the tenth annual university of Chicago national interscholastic tournament starting next Tuesday and continuing until Saturday night.

J. Sterling Morton high school of Cicero, Illinois won the title last year.

Thirty-five teams, representing 31 states, are already entered. Thirty are state champions; three are runners-up, and two hold local titles.

The field this year looks like the best that has ever competed. Among the quintets with unusually fine records is Austin, Texas, state titleholders, which won the championship from a field of 800 schools. Austin has scored 1492 points to its opponents 432, winning 26 out of the 27 games. The the team to which it lost its sole game in the state finals, 33 to 12. Austin had no home gymnasium, playing all its games on strange floors.

Miami, Ariz., New Hanover high, Wilmington, N. C.; Englewood, Chicago; Spartanburg, S. C.; Morris, Ala.; Pine Bluff, Ark.; Andrew Jackson high, Jacksonville, Fla.; Vienna, Ga.; St. Paull, Neb.; U. S. Indian school, Albuquerque, N. M.; Austin, Texas; Woodrow Wison high, Portsmouth, Va.; Bolton high, Alexandria, La.; Winfield, Kan.; Iron Mountain, Mich.; Bristol, Conn.; Stivers high, Dayton, O.; Grand Forks, N. Y. St. George, Utah; Oregon, Mo.; Yankton, S. D.; Ashland, Ky.; Carr Creek, Ky.; Naugatuck, Conn. Wheeling, W. Va.; Tulsa, Okla.; Coeur d'Alone, Idaho; Oak Park, Ill.; Rock Springs, Wyo.; Moorehead, Minn.; and Canton, Ill.

Exporters Score 13-5 Win Over Independents

BEAUMONT, March 31. (AP)—Although outhit by the fast Wilson Hardware semi-pros, the Exporters, regulars and Yannigans, won today's exhibition 13 to 5 by capitalizing on their adversaries misplays.

The Wilsons got to Hokey Garcia for seven hits and four runs in the five innings he worked but Tissing followed him and held the score well in check except for a homer by Niezek inside the park with none on.

Browns Rally In Ninth And Tenth To Beat Blues

KANSAS CITY, March 31. (AP)—The St. Louis Americans, in ninth and tenth inning rallies today avenged the defeat handed them yestereday by the Kansas City American association club, and won an exhibition contest, 7 to 4.

TEXAS TOSSERS TO PLAY BEARS

Longhorns Defeat Rice To Open Conference Play

AUSTIN, March 31.—Having successfully disposed of the Rice Owls in their first two-game series of the Southwest conference race, the Texas Longhorns will meet the San Antonio Bears of the Texas league in their next set-to, Monday afternoon on the new Clark field diamond.

After considerable change and shifting, the Texas team has taken on more definite form. The infield at present is made up of Arvie Walker at first, Meredith Hopkins at second, Jackie Radford at shortstop and Pinkie Higgins at third. Tommie Hughes in left, Pete Edwards in center and Pint Webb in right are just now the regular outfielders.

With a pitching staff headed by Joe Dobbs and Johnny Railton, and including such others as Lefty Browning, Army Armstrong, Tommy Forbes and Jimmy Boyles, the opponents' hit column should be fairly well kept down.

Potsy Allen, captain and all-conference catcher, will do most of the work behind the bat, with Nona Rees in reserve.

DAILY DOPE

By LARRY DAILEY

HIGH PRAISE has been sounded for our Spudders. And by one who knows. Ray Schalk, in fact. The manager of the Chicago White Sox, in a statement recently at Dallas, complimented the Texas league on the class of baseball as played in the circuit. And he paid particular tribute to the Spudders. "One of the best clubs I have ever seen in the minors," Ray said, in referring to the Wichita Falls team.

As for our particular two shining lights, Pete Turgeon and Tom Jenkins, Schalk was quite enthusiastic. "This fellow Jenkins is a wonderful hitter and Turgeon at second base will stand up against most any second baseman," Schalk said.

RAY'S PRAISE of Jenkins and Turgeon indicates how that pair stand in big league circles. There are major league players, holding regular positions today, who are not the equal of Turgeon and Jenkins. It is a certainty that big league scouts will be following this pair around the Texas league this season. If they enjoy brilliant seasons such as they had last campaign their advance to major league clubs is assured.

PETE TURGEON is indeed a wonderful ball player. He has no weakness. Brilliant fielder, fast, heady, sure; a hard and timely hitter, what more could be asked? Jenkins will smack pitching in the big time as he will any pitching. A natural hitter is Tut. He's a fast, sensational fielder, too.

With the possible exception of Mostil, whose condition is uncertain, Alex Metzler is the Sox' greatest outfielder. He'll be a star this year. Baseball men will tell you he is no greater player than Jenkins. The Sox paid $123,000 for Chalmer Cissell. Cissell is a prospect to be sure. He MAY be a great ball player. But Turgeon is a great ball player. As one of the Chicago scribes remarked in the box while the Sox were playing here: "Let's trade you Cissell for Turgeon." And he wasn't joking a lot, either.

THE HOUSE OF DAVID, bearded (as Turgeon says it would be news if they weren't) is not only a unique baseball organization. They can play a corking game and the Spudders evidently face some real opposition when the hirsute-adorned play here Tuesday.

TWO TRIPLE PLAYS have been made this spring by the House of David team. One of the three-ply killings helped beat the San Antonio Bears Friday. Their first triple play this year was made a few weeks ago at Shreveport.

Maybe they hide the ball in their whiskers.

HERE'S ANOTHER member of the Order-of-the-Thirty-Third-Degree-Spudder-Fan. A. W. King, city park commissioner, is one of the city's baseball enthusiasts. He not only attends Spudder games whenever possible, but he is a great booster for amateur baseball in Wichita Falls. Mr. King also is keenly interested in all the sports particularly in helping provide municipal baseball, golf and tennis playing facilities. He richly deserves to wear the royal purple of the order.

ALLRED TAKES TENNIS TITLE

Maurice to Represent Coyotes In District Play

Maurice Allred will represent Wichita Falls high school in tennis singles at the district interscholastic meet this year. Allred has been a star in football, basketball and track this year and won his right to represent the school in tennis by winning over Otto Juhl.

Henry and Ralph Anderson will represent the school in doubles, having eliminated Allred and Clay Nea in the finals.

Henry Anderson is captain of the team.

FORT WORTH, March 31. (AP)—Sunday may be observed as Okmulgee day at Panther park.

Stoner went to the Tigers from Fort Worth. Walkup had a trial with the Tigers the past season.

GOLF TOURNEY TO OPEN SOON

125 New Players Brings Total Up to 250

Weeks' Park Golf club membership drive is still going at full speed. The club membership totaled 250 late last week, though all reports for the week had not been made.

One hundred twenty-five new members have been signed for the fiscal year, dating from April 1, 1928, April 1, 1929. Jim R. Jones, vice president of the club, said yesterday, he expected a membership of 300 or more to be reached before the drive closes April 15.

A $15 golf club will be given to the person signing the greatest number of new members and a $10 club will be given to the person who gets the second greatest number.

Paul Dandes is leading the contest with 23 new members. Mrs. J. C. Thompson is running a close second with 20 new members to her credit. M. G. Boone and J. J. Lawrence are also signing a number of new members.

A club tournament will be started soon as it can be arranged, according to Mr. Jones. The dinner tournaments probably will get under way by May 15.

Memberships to the club cost $25 and are payable all at one time or in four installments of $6.25 each. A membership to Weeks' Park club entitles its owner to all privileges of the links, tennis, court and clubhouse.

Yaqui Joe and Gorman Grapple

Headline Mat-Boxing Show Monday Night at Gym

Yaqui Joe and Jack Gorman, those rough and ready grapplers, will go to the wars Monday night in the feature of a mat-boxing show at The Gym. Joe defeated Dutch Mantell last week in a gruelling, three-fall match in his return here after an absence of several months. Gorman is wrestling at his best and the pair should provide another thrilling, hard-fought bout.

Matchmaker Alex-Ross will present an interesting boxing card of six bouts, with 23 rounds scheduled.

Spike Stewart, the boy with a nifty left, will mingle with George Jernigan in the six-round boxing feature. They are welterweights. Billy Hollis and Floyd Anderson, two promising kids, also step six rounds. They are middleweights.

Country Boy Owens, who made such a sensational showing recently when he defeated Alvie Anderson, will appear again Monday night. His foe is to be Alvie in a return match that promises to be a wow. They are to go four rounds.

Three other four-rounders will be staged. They are: Bob Riley vs. Jim Carey, light heavyweights; Bill Owens vs. Kenneth Adams, lightweights; Sundown Kid vs. Ardmore Black Wolf.

Mallet Swingers Ready For Tournaments

CITY POLOISTS ENTER MEETS

Wichita Players Practice For Summer Tourneys

Wichita Falls Polo club is planning to enter in many tournaments this summer.

Charlie Featherstone has recently raised his handicap from one to two goals which makes the Wichita Falls team carry a seven goal handicap.

Practice games to develop the team are played every Sunday at Call field at 3 o'clock. These games are free and the public is invited to witness them.

It has been anticipated that W. H. Hamilton will donate the club a new polo field on his property near the Country club estates. The proposed field probably will be built within the next two months.

A series of tournaments are planned for this summer. Abilene polo teams probably will be invited here to play a series of games early in May. The club plans to hold a tournament in Wichita Falls this fall and to invite teams from all the leading cities and army posts in Texas and Oklahoma.

The club will participate in tournaments at Houston, Throckmorton and Fort Sill in the next two months. The members of the Wichita Falls polo club are as follows:

H. J. Weller, D. Wighte, Charlie Featherstone, Horace Robbins, J. H. Fletcher, Dick Goodman and John Fastnow.

Junior Polo Club

Besides this polo club Wichita Falls boasts of the Wichita Falls Junior Polo club. This club practices on its own field. The junior club does not play out of town teams but holds practice games among its members and with the senior club. The junior club is composed of:

Bill McKamie, Jack Storey, Walter Nelson, True Cauble, John (Polo Pete) Barnard, Frank Hill Jr., Otto Lazzenby, Hubert Stringer, Jim Dale and Galgon Kilgore.

Last year the Indian racquetteers won the junior college tennis championship in both singles and doubles.

Fifty men are expected to participate in the tournament this week.

'Hoodoo' Holes Bane of Golfers Champion Bobby Jones Declares

Jinx Manifested to All Players and Is State of Mental Condition and Not Due to Physical Reasons

By BOBBY JONES

That a great deal of the game of golf is played "between the ears" is conclusively demonstrated by the "jinx" or "hoodoo" holes which pursue every player. I suppose there is no one who has not run across a hole somewhere that for no assignable reason he was unable to conquer.

In every open championship in which I have played, there has been at least one hole on the course which I could not play in the proper figures. The tenth at Oakland Hills, the ninth at Sciota, the second at St. Andrews, the seventh at Flossmoor; I have had a bug bear on every links. And all, I suppose, because I hadn't enough intelligence to go on and play the hole and forget what troubles I had had on the previous round.

Rarely are these troublesome holes especially difficult. I mean to say that there is no physical reason which could explain the player's inability to overcome the difficulty. As silly as it seems, I have seen a good player reach such a state that for days in succession he would drive out of bounds at a certain hole, never being able to avoid the fence, although there was plenty of room inside.

Mental Hazard

Harold Hilton, the great English amateur, is reputed to have conquered certain holes by playing them a dozen times after dinner in the long British twilight, until he felt that he had overcome whatever fear had at first seized him. Certainly Mr. Hilton's plan was a very good one as his record will attest. I must confess that I have often thought of trying it myself, and more often regretted that I had not. It appears to me the only reasonable way to convince oneself that the hole is not impossible after all.

The feeling is far from comfortable to start upon every round of a championship with visions of disaster upon a certain hole in one's mind. I can recall only one course upon which I was not aware of that feeling. At Oakmont there was no hole which could trouble a player more than another, and the competitor's mind was always so occupied with the immediate problem that it had little time for the contemplation of future difficulties. The only thing about Oakmont which I could contemplate with equanimity was watching the last putt go down on the eighteenth green. Troubles would be over till another day.

Worry All Way

It is, of course, a great tribute to a golf course, that no competitor can feel that his troubles are over after he passes a certain hole. Too many of the courses offered for competition afford few worries except upon a few holes. Usually, if the player gets past a certain point without suffering material damage, he feels that he can go the rest of the way in comparative safety.

I wonder what Hilton would do if he found troublesome not a hole or two, but nine of them all in succession. I should think that would be too many to play a dozen times in the evening even in England. Yet for weeks at home I will continue to play the first nine badly and the second nine well. Then for no apparent reason the worm will turn and all my good scores begin to come on the first nine. It seems to run in streaks.

One or two psychologists have undertaken to tell us something about the golfer's worries. I wish they could tell us more, for if ever a man can learn to bring himself into the right frame of mind, and can learn to approach each hole and each shot with a mind in which there is no fear of future nor remembrance of past difficulties, he will be as nearly unbeatable as it is possible to be in a game of uncertainties such as golf unquestionably is.

Babe Ruth's first home run of the 1927 season was hit on April 15 off Howard Ehmke of Philadelphia.

RULE DIRECTED AGAINST GENE

Holding Helps Tunney Win Important Fights

By ROBERT EDGREN

Tex Rickard may have given up the idea of matching Gene Tunney for a heavyweight championship bout in June. Mr. Rickard's elimination bouts to date having practically eliminated all chance of a ballyhoo for a championship affair just at present. But if Gene is so anxious to fight somebody he might pick up a match with an "outsider." There is Paolino Uscudun, who is tough enough to go 10 or 15 rounds with Gene and run across the ring at him at the beginning of each round, thus providing some interest for the spectators. If Godfrey couldn't even make Paolino hesitate, it isn't likely Gene could do much more.

And there are several fairly effective big fellows around Chicago and other boxing centers who haven't yet been accepted in New York. Also there is Hansen, the tall Dane who knocked out Phil Scott in a round, has quite a little boxing skill and carries an interesting "sock." Gene could pick up a few simoleons going around the country and doing a little fighting here and there. But probably he won't. It seems to be Gene's idea that taking anything less than $750,000 for a bout doesn't quite tally with the dignity of a heavyweight champion.

A new element in the heavyweight situation is Mr. Muldoon's recent rule ordering referees in New York State to immediately warn boxers who hold and wrestle, and to disqualify at the third warning, and judges to give no points to boxers in any round in which they hold. This would almost let Gene out as a boxer. It would have lost him every round at Chicago, for instance, where he gripped Dempsey's arms persistently, held for long intervals and wrestled Dempsey around the ring to throw his weight on him and tire him out.

May Change Gene.

Only, of course, Gene might not have wrestled and held so much under a Muldoon ruling. But in that case half the effectiveness of his work in the ring would have been missing. Tunney is a fairly good boxer and has plenty of endurance to fight all the time instead of wrestling half the time and fighting at intervals. Still, without the usual holding, which Gene prefers to have referred to as "tieing up" an opponent's arms, and without the trick of holding and then suddenly letting go with one hand to land a punch while still holding with the other arm, Gene wouldn't have an advantage over any good fast open boxer.

Under the new Muldoon ruling, Tommy Lougran might have a good boxing chance with Tunney. When Loughran was only 19 he went 8 no-decision rounds with Tunney, was nearly knocked out at the start but carrying the fight to Tunney at the finish just as he carried the fight to Lomski after being almost knocked out by Lomski in the first round.

Tunney is very strong, but it is his strength used in wrestling around that has been most effective. He hasn't been able to apply it in a knockout punch. He wrestled Dempsey until Jack was nearly bowlegged with weariness, and then couldn't hit him hard enough to stagger him. He wore out Carpentier and he "tied up" Tom Gibbons until Tom began swinging wildly to keep clear, and he knocked them both out. But he might not have been so effective without the hauling and mauling that is his best offense.

Might Hurt Gene.

If Tunney fights in New York this year it will be interesting to see if the referee actually enforces Mr. Muldoon's new regulation against such an august person as the champion of all the world. The referee in last year's Chicago bout let the champion do as he pleased in the matter of grabbing both of Dempsey's arms, tucking them up under the arpits, and then pushing and wrestling until Dempsey was able to pull loose. With all wrestling barred, as it should be in any boxing bout Gene might be far from invincible.

I am not arguing that the present crop of heavyweights shows any who are able to whip Tunney. I doubt it very much. But with the grappling cut out there might be a chance, and that might make a New York bout possible. It's the idea that the outsider has a chance to upset a champion that draws a crowd to these affairs. If it is considered a sure thing that the champion will win "on points" the match looks flat as a last week's pan cake.

FROG ELEVENS TIE!

Old Habit of Breaking Even Manifested In Their Own Game

FORT WORTH, March 31.—Texas Christian university played a scoreless tie with itself in football.

The Frogs, after tying almost every team in the Southwest conference at one time or another on the football field, played a spring training game the other day and when the final gun sounded no score had been made.

The losing team was to treat the winning team, so the total number of yards gained was measured and the winner thus determined.

TENNIS COURTS ARE AVAILABLE

More Playing Space Needed For City Racqueteers

Municipal tennis courts of the city have been rolled and marked and are open for play. According to C. C. Bunnenberg, park superintendent, the six courts that are in shape have been in continuous use for the past week.

There are three double courts available for use. They are Bellevue park, Scotland park and Weeks park courts.

More courts are badly needed. Already these six courts are being used to full capacity and in a few more days they cannot accommodate the city's tennis players.

Construction of the new courts that were proposed a few weeks ago has not begun. If the new city budget takes care of tennis allowances asked for by the park commission they probably will be built soon. "If it can be arranged in the new budget, new courts will be built and old ones kept in first-class condition," A. W. King, city park and sanitation commissioner, said yesterday.

If additional courts are constructed from three to five new ones probably will be built on a lot located at the corner of Sixth and Broad streets.

TOM HEENEY TO FIGHT TUNNEY FOR TITLE IN JULY

TEX TO STAGE GO IN LONDON

Gene Regards Australian As Foremost Contender

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., March 31. (AP)—With a characteristic suddenness Tex Rickard today lifted the lid off the heavyweight boxing championship situation by declaring that Gene Tunney will meet Tom Heeney, Australian champion, for the title some time in July, with the possibility that the bout will be staged in London.

Ends Many Rumors.

Rickard's action climabed a chapter of rumors and uncertainties since Jack Dempse yfirst wavered and then walked completely out of the picture. It cleared the way for the British empire to get its first chance at the world title in more than 20 years. Whether the Britishers will see the match depends on London promoters with whom he is negotiating, said Rickard.

By choosing Heeney, the New York promoter also clarified the situation in New York state, where the boxing commission threatened to rule Tunney ineligible unless before next Tuesday he accepted a challenge from Heeney, Johnny Risko or Jack Sharkey.

Date Not Settled.

While the probability was that the bout would be held in New York if London promoters fail to come to terms, Rickard did not mention New York in his statement, merely asserting that the match would be staged "in the United States, if not in England." No date in July was mentioned.

Tunney expressed his satisfaction with Rickard's selection of the brawny New Zealander, declaring that in his opinion Heeney was "the outstanding contender."

Oklahoma Still Third In Long Bunion Race

SANTA ROSA, N. M., March 31. (AP)—Peter Gavuzzi, Southampton, Eng., and Andrew Payne, Claremore, Okla., holders of second and third places in the coast to coast foot race, finished in a dead heat after traveling the 45.5 miles from Palma in 7 hours, 20 seconds.

Gavuzzi's elapsed time for the 1,004.1 miles from Los Angeles was 172 hours, 3 minutes, 26 seconds and Payne's elapsed time is 172: 27:37.

Arne Suominen of Detroit was third in 7:19:30. His elapsed time of 167:55:05 gives him the leadership in the grind.

Bears Beat San Antonio Semi-Pro Team, 7 to 6

SAN ANTONIO, March 31. (AP)—After holding the San Antonio Bears in the hollow of his hand for eight innings while the Strauss-Frank Maulers, a local semi-pro team, made merry at the expense of two rookie pitchers and led the score 6 to 1, Denver Wood lost his own game when he filled the bases on walks in the ninth to start the Bears on a rampage to put six runs across the plate and win the game 7 to 6 with two hands out Saturday.

Thevenow In Lineup As Cards Trim Atlanta, 8-1

ATLANTA, Ga., March 31. (AP)—St. Louis Cardinals pennant hopes took a big jump today when Tommy Thevenow, star shortstop who was injured last season, played his first game of the year and showed he was able to do his stuff. The Cardinals won from Atlanta, 8 to 1.

Omaha Captures Second Straight From Buffs, 7-6

HOUSTON, March 31.(AP)—Wildness on the part of the Houston Buffalo hurlers along with some poor base running gave the Omaha Crickets the second straight win over Frank Snyder's Houston team Saturday, 7 to 6.

White Sox Tally 4 in 9th To Trounce Sports, 9-5

SHREVEPORT, La., March 31. (AP)—A four-run splurge in the tenth inning gave the Chicago White Sox a 9 to 5 victory over the Shreveport Sports today. It was the final exhibition game between the clubs.

Siki Sikes Hurls Aggies To 12-1 Victory Over Rice

HOUSTON, March 31.(AP)—"Siki" Sikes, lanky right hander with a lot of smoke, Saturday was much too good for the Rice Owls, and Texas Aggies won another ball game, 12-1. The owls got but two blows off Sikes.

Steers Drop Two In Row To Minneapolis, 8 to 3

DALLAS, March 31. (AP)—The Minneapolis Millers made it two in a row from the Dallas Steers today by taking the second of the three-game series, 8 to 3. Failure to hit Lefty John Brillheart and Liska, a right-handed submarine pitcher, spelled defeat for Dallas.

DODGERS BEAT BRAVES FOURTH STRAIGHT, 7-6.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., March 31. (AP)—Henry Wertz held the Brooklyn Dodgers to two hits in five innings but both of these were doubles in the tenth inning and the Dodgers took their fourth straight victory over the Boston Redskins, 7 to 6 today.

YANKS FINALLY WIN

But They Have Trouble Beating Floridans By 2-1 Score

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., March 31. (AP)—The New York Yankees today found somebody they could beat. After dropping nine of their first 10 exhibition games, the champions eked out a 2 to 1 victory over the Jacksonville Tars here.

Babe Ruth's single with two men on base in the third turned the trick. The Babe also got a double.

Three Leagues Will Provide Interesting Amateur Baseball Here This Summer

Youth May Be King Walt's Heir

By NORMAN E. BROWN

TAMPA, Fla., March 31.—It will take young Horace Lisenbee, the phenomenal rise of Grant Gillis at short, or some act of providence yet undreamed of to prevent the Washington Senators from wandering through the 1928 baseball season as a very drab, uninteresting team. This is irrespective of where they may be in the standing.

During a recent exhibition game of the Senators, only two things of interest bobbed up—the vaudeville stunts of Nick Altrock and Al Schacht before the game and the work of Horace Lisenbee.

If ever a young man had the opportunity to step into a pair of great shoes worn so long and honorably as those of Walter Johnson this fellow has. Both, by virtue of his present position with the team on which Johnson labored, and because he seems appointed by skill and bearing, the successor of Johnson.

The Sens lost Johnson last winter. Along with him they lost the other man on whom they had counted as a drawing card for a few seasons—Tris Speaker. Speaker proved a sort of a "bust," generally speaking.

While Johnson was singing his swan song and Speaker was trying in vain to set afire the spark of ambition in the club, along with Stanley Harris, Lisenbee went to work in earnest to become a great pitcher. And he finished the season with all the earmarks of one. He won two thirds of his games with a team that got nowhere.

This spring, Lisenbee seems ready to start from scratch—with a full year's experience behind him.

Grid Star Looks Good

Manager Griffith admits that young Gillis, University of Alabama grid star and hero of one of the annual intersectional games on the coast, can fight it out with young Hayes and Bobby Reeves, two other youngsters, for the stortstopping job. Gillis has the best chance.

Gillis is fitted by speed, temperament, general fielding ability and spirit to take the job. He seems to be one of those favored boys who can step into a crisis and turn the tide. Hayes comes from the Birmingham, Ala., club and Reeves is a holdover.

Ossie Bluege, who has played short and even second, is to play third regularly and of course Manager Harris will be on second. But those are the only infield berths definitely settled. Unless either George Sisler or Joe Judge is traded before or shortly after the opening game bell rings they will fight it out for the first basing job. Both are left-handed hitters which precludes the possibility of their alternating to improve the club's batting strength against right and left-handed pitching.

If there is any new color injected in the outfield it will be by either Sammy West, the Texas boy who broke in with the club last season, or Emil Barnes, obtained from Birmingham. West seems to have the call although his hitting last season was punk—.239. Barnes hit but .293 for the Southern League outfit, which may or may not mean anything.

Muddy Ruel and Benny Tate will do the catching again.

Johnson's Presence Missed

You can't discuss the Senators' pitching without feeling the loss of Walter Johnson.

But taking the hurlers as they are Griffith has (or had the day I watched them unlimbering):

| | Club W. | L. | Last Year |
|---|---|---|---|
| Garland Braxton | 10 | 9 | Wash. |
| Milton Gaston | 13 | 17 | Browns |
| Irving Hadley | 14 | 8 | Wash. |
| Sam Jones | 8 | 14 | Browns |
| Horace Lisenbee | 18 | 9 | Wash. |
| Cliff Marberry | 10 | 7 | Wash. |
| Luther Roy | 7 | 7 | Kans. City |
| Van Alstyne | 16 | 9 | Birmingham |
| Edwin Wells | 13 | 1 | Birmingham |
| Tom Zachary | 8 | 13 | Browns-Wash. |

The 10 are booked to comprise the staff which will start the campaign. Limbering up with this squad were Bobby Burke, a youngster with the club last year; Lloyd Brown, from the Memphis, Tenn., club; Clarence Griffin of the same team, and Paul Hopkins, from Albany, N. Y., in the Eastern league.

Now of the 10 listed first only Lisenbee, Braxton, Hadley and Marberry were with the Senators all last season, with the exception of Burke, who won three and lost two games. The first four mentioned won 52 games. They lost 31 games. This in itself was a fair average, but did not go far enough.

AGTHINCLADS DEFEAT TEXAS

Track Events Give Farmers 68 1-2 to 48 1-2 Win

COLLEGE STATION, arch 31.(AP) The Texas Aggies defeated the University of Texas here today in a dual track meet 68 1-2 to 48 1-2.

The Aggies made a sweep of all the running events except two and won first place in one of these two. Today's victory was the first for the Aggies over the Longhorns since 1922.

J. R. Kennedy, Denison, was the outstanding man in the College Station triumph, winning first in the low and high hurdles and running one of the quarters in the mile relay. He missed equalling the conference record in the low hurdles by only a tenth of a second.

D. H. Oneal of Greenville again proved his mettle as a quarter-miler by winning this event and then running one of the relay quarters. Ed Thompson of Cameron ran a swift race to win the mile run for the Aggies. He is a half-miler and ran the mile for the first time.

While losing the track events, the Longhorns were strong in the field events, winning first in all.

The summaries follow:

Mile run: Thompson, A. and M., first; Avila, A. and M., second. Time: 4.47 3-5.

About Amateurs

Archery club at Wichita Falls high school starts a sport soon that has never been played in this city. The new sport is bonarro. The game resembles golf in that targets are set up at various points and shot at with bow and arrow. The course will be built in Scotland Park.

This sport, besides being new in Wichita Falls, will be an interesting form of entertainment for the Archery club. Tournaments could be held among the club members and the champion archer of the school. The act of hitting the bull's eye with an arrow is no easy task and to be champ of the club would mean a lot to some high school boy.

Otto Juhl, small but capable racquet wielder of Wichita Falls high school lost in the elimination finals in singles last week. This lad has been out for several sports at the high school. Handicapped by his size he has never made a first team but he has all the fight and determination that it takes to make an athlete. The little fellow has worked hard to make the squad on some high school athletic teams but has never been quite big enough. It is a shame that a kid who tries like Otto hasn't the size to make the team for he would be a valuable athlete. He made a letter on Kenneth Mill's junior basketball team this year. He richly deserved it.

Representatives of junior college in tennis at the state meet this year will be decided in an elimination contest this week. Out of the 31 men that are out for tennis at the college a good team should emerge winners from the elimination contest. There is no tennis coach at junior college and the racqueteers are self-trained and coached. Last year the Indians won the state junior college championship in both singles and doubles. Several men have been looking good in practice and chances are that the Indians will bring home another pair of loving cups as state junior college champions.

Rooks' Fight for Spud Jobs Narrows

Two Pitchers and Three Infielders Survive

By LARRY DAILEY
Record News Sports Editor

They come to take the veterans' place,
The rookies, bright and gay;
But seldom do they stand the pace
And soon they're on their way.

Many are called but few are chosen.

Meaning the rookies of baseball. In the spring a host of youngsters lauded as Johnsons, Hornsbys and Cobbs, are assembled by ball clubs. But when the championship grind starts only a handfull of the kids are retained. The others are gone, most of them never to return; a few to come back and achieve places in balldom.

Drilling a wildcat oil well is no more a guess than picking young ball players. Ask the man who owns one. J. Alvin Gardner, f'rinstance. A couple of likely-looking youngsters from a squad of 25 is a high percentage. Indeed, the average manager is well pleased to find one star in his yearling class.

Class Will Show

President Gardner and Manager Williams of the Spudders have chosen wisely in the selection of their young playing talent. More than one of the kids in Spudder camp now looks promising. But as usual, there are more who don't. And now, after a month of training, the select few who have shown promise are culled from those who do not look so good.

From a flock of young pitchers, about a dozen, it is apparent now that only one or two merit further consideration for retention by the champions. Of those kids, Roland Roberts, the big right-hand sandlot chucker from California looms as the best prospect. He has shown such a repertoire of curves, speed and change of pace, and an indication that he knows HOW to pitch, as to lend belief he CAN pitch.

Lester White, another large-sized right-hander, back for another trial after a season on option in the Sally league, is the flinger who will give Roberts a contest for the only available job on the mound staff.

One Rookie Lands Job

One rookie has won a regular berth. He is George "Buck" Stanton, the first baseman, from the Virginia league. There is little doubt but that Stanton will deliver; that the praise sung of his performance in the Virginia league was merited. He is a well-rounded ball player, apparently; a capable fielder and dangerous hitter.

Two yannigans are fighting for the utility infield job. There is little to choose. Both men are from the Blue Ridge league, Ed Roetz of Hanover and Joe Luciano of Martinsburg. Roetz has the advantage now because he has played in all the spring exhibition games while Luciano was nursing a sore arm. Joe's ailing flipper has come around all right now, however, and he still is very much in the race.

Both these youngsters had highly impressive records in 1927. Luciano was second in batting in the Blue Ridge league with .360 in 96 games. He hit 11 triples to lead the league in three-ply swats. Joe also was the loop-leading second baseman, with the high mark of .966.

Roetz batted .338, also in 96 games, and tied for the lead in home runs with 11. He also handled 399 chances with only 46 errors, indicating he goes and gets them. Real infielders who can hit. It seems almost too good to be true.

Danning Bids for Place.

While not in the category of a rookie, Ike Danning is a new athlete in Wichita Falls regalia. He is waging a three-cornered battle with Joe Cobb and Pete Lapan for the two catching positions.

Sam Jones also is not to be classed as a rookie. Sam pastimed last on option campaign with Bridgeport in the Eastern league, also a class A loop. He is a great fielder and if he can bat .300 will be a star. There is a posibility he will be retained as a fourth outfielder.

The makeup of the balance of the club is assured, with 1927 champions occupying three infield and outfield positions. They are Pete Turgeon, second base; Wally Swenson, third base; Rabbit Benton, shortstop, and Tom Jenkins, Howard Fitzgerald and Lyman Lamb in the suburbs.

Players not listed above will be turned over tomorrow to Les Tullos, manager of the Abilene club of the West Texas league, the Spudder farm. Tullos is to take charge of the Abilene tossers' work at Athletic park. Some of the kids given him for seasoning have shown such promise that they are regarded as potential future Spudders. Not ready for the Texas league now, however.

Farmed to Abilene.

They include Ash Hillin, Buster Jackson, Chick Galeria, John Buvid, Ed Brower and Johnny Jones, pitchers; Ed Kallina, first base; Jimmy McCarthy and Tob Turgeon, infielders, and Ray Fitzgerald, outfielder.

Kallina is demoted from class A baseball to class D. But it is on the big fellow's own wishes. He was sent to Des Moines of the Western league last year as a pitcher. Ed came to camp this spring, asking that he be played at first base and agreeing to transfer to any club if he didn't make the grade. Kallina can hit. But he has too much to learn of the mysteries of playing the bag to warrant retention now. So he is booked for Abilene, where if he shows fielding skill and grace and continues his hitting exhibited in games this spring, will go back to fast company.

Owner Gardner also has other athletes for Tullos' inspection. They include Tank Horton, the Wichita Falls youth; Jack Enlow from Iowa Park, and Guerra, purchased Friday from Corpus Christi.

Burke's 291 Wins North, South Golf

Tommy Armour Scores 296 For Runnerup

PINEHURST, N. C., March 31.(AP) Starting the final round with a seven-stroke lead, Billy Burke, young professional of New York, who first began tournament golf two years ago, became the united North and south boen golf champion, with a 73-69-74-75—291 for the 72 holes of medal play.

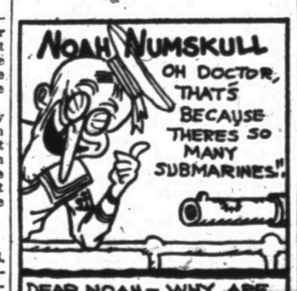

He was never in serious trouble during the tournament, his long drives carrying him well fast bunkers and his approaches dropping consistently either on or near the greens. His card:

Out .....554 444 262—38
In .....444 443 545—37—75

Nearest to him at the finish was Tommy Armour of Washington, national open champion, who had a 73-223—296. Johnny Farrell, winner of the recent $15,000 Miami Beach open, was next at 73-224—297 and Tommy Harmon of New York, fourth, with 76-223—299.

ARCHER, WILBARGER AND YOUNG DIVIDE HONORS IN WEEK

WORK IN FIELD TAKES SLUMP

Two Large Sales Made During Week

By GORDON BROWN.

The lead in the activity of the Wichita Falls oil district was about equally divided between Archer, Wilbarger and Young counties during the past week. Each, however, was less active than for the week previous from the standpoint of completions, although considerable drilling in proven areas is going on with quite a bit of wildcat exploitation.

In Archer county, the Gohlke pool continues to be foremost. Eight locations were made in the county during the week with half of them being in this pool. Seven completions were made in the county with only three of these being in the pool.

Record Well.

The most spectacular well in this area so far and in Archer county for some time, is the Petroleum Producers company's No. 1 L. F. Wilson, in block 13, which is swabbing better than 700 barrels from the sand at 1572-85 feet. It is expected that this well will be completed and placed on the pump in the next day or so. The location is 150 feet from the south and 150 feet from the west and block 13, Geraldine townsite.

Another very good well was brought in by the Bridwell Oil company, Johnson and Cranfill in this area. This is their No. 1 L. F. Wilson, in block 12, which swabbed better than 400 barrels from the sand at 1573-84 feet. This also is incomplete but will be finished in the next day or two. This is a direct offset to the Petroleum Producers 700 barreler. Location is 150 feet from the south and 150 feet from the north of block 12, Geraldine townsite.

Interesting Test.

A location for a wildcat test by the Texas company two and a half miles west of the town of Scotland, eastern Archer county, has been made on the Coleman land. The drilling of this well will be watched with interest inasmuch as this area has only slightly been developed and has no production within a radius of several miles. The location for this test is 2149 feet north and 2330 feet west of the southeast corner of section 80, A. T. N. C. L. survey.

Wilbarger county activity is evidenced by several good producers being completed, among which were the finishing up of the Texas company's two young gushers, No. E-1 and No. C-1 W. T. Waggoner, the former in section 24, the latter in section 35, block 4. No. E-1 was placed on the pump for better than 800 barrels with No. C-1 being placed on the pump for more than 600 barrels.

Tower and McKanna's baby gusher is flowing in excess of 500 barrels daily and has been doing this since it was brought in about two weeks ago. This well is located in section 30, block 4.

A number of locations and completions were made in the county. Among the locations were several wildcats, the drilling of which will be the object of considerable interest. Among these are Marland and Golding's No. A-1 W. T. Waggoner, in section 4, block 17, H. & T. C. R. F. survey, several miles southeast of the Grayback pool.

Two Large Sales.

Two large sales in Wilbarger county were recorded during the week, consisting of 560 acres of leases and production to J. S. Cosden, Inc., by the Milham corporation of Texas, and 480 acres of leases to James E. McKanna by the Sloan Oil company.

The first sale was the Milham corporation's A, B, H and L leases on the W. T. Waggoner estate in sections 31, 42, 47 and 48 of block 4, of the H. & T. C. R. R. survey. These leases consisted of a total of 560 acres and approximately 900 barrels of production. The Cosden company paid $550,000 for the property.

James E. McKanna paid $182,500 for 480 acres lying between the Rock Crossing and Texas company pools. This purchase was made Friday from the Sloan Oil company and consists of the west half of section 32, and the northwest quarter of section 24, block 4, H. & T. C. R. R. survey. This acreage has been undeveloped until the present time with the exception of one well in the northwest corner of section 32 which is a small producer. However, location has been made on the lease for a well to be drilled at once. The holdings in this purchase is a short distance from Wilbarger county's most productive area and two of the county's most spectacular wells brought in in the last month.

Loving District.

In Young county the center of activity still is around the shallow pool area north of Loving. The search for oil here is as hot as ever, with practically all of the week's locations being made in this section. A number of producing wells were brought in here during the week, with one fact evidencing itself which is detrimental to the area. That is that the wells being being brought in lately are of less production than that of those first completed here. At the start of the pool wells were being completed as 100 to 250-barrelers. Wells now are coming in for around 25 to 50 barrels. However, at this extremely shallow depth, this is considered lucrative production.

Two and a half miles to the east of this shallow pool area a wildcat test location has been made in the effort to develop production in that direction. The drilling of this will be watched very closely by those interested in the area and by those having acreage near or in the now producing section. The test is to be made by Kelleher, Rogers and Continental on the J. S. Stratton land, 150 feet north and 150 feet east of the southwest corner of the B. B. B. & C. R. R. survey, abstract 33.

Cooke County.

Cooke county also comes in for its share of the play. Two exceedingly interesting tests are being put down in the southern part of the county, both of which have very good prospects of being completed as producers, according to many oil men. These are the McElreath and Suggetts No. 1 Whaley, 10 miles south of Muenster, and Lawson and Deckers No. 2 E. McFadden, about six miles southeast of Gainesville.

McElreath and Sugrette test has had two shows between 1600 and 1700 feet. Both of these were at the time considered very good shows and held out the prospect of production. However, bailing salt water they were passed up. The well was drilling Saturday morning at 1762 feet and was nearing the depth the best sand is expected.

Production In North Texas Oil Fields Remains Practically Unchanged, Week

Production in the Wichita Falls district for the past week remained about the same as for the week previous, losing only 74 barrels average daily, according to official estimates.

The most remarkable feature in production for the week is the gaining of Wilbarger of an average of 1165 barrels daily and the loss of Young county of 1288-barrels daily, which practically balances the former field's loss. These two fields are the only ones showing a great difference in the figures for the week before, all others remaining nearly the same.

Lielecker Well In Jack County Finally Placed On Production

Carl Liedecker's well in Jack county, three miles south of Bryson, has finally been subjected to the will of the operators and has been placed on the pump as a 40-barreler. A great deal of trouble has been encountered in the drilling and finishing up this test.

A sand was encountered in this well more than a month ago which held out the possibility of production but due to the difficulty encountered in cleaning out and the landing of the casing, completion has been held up until the present time.

The pay in the well was encountered at 3329-42 feet and was reported as causing a flow at that time, creating considerable excitement. Then the trouble began in cleaning out and stopping the caving of 600 feet of open hole.

This well, according to many operators, interested in Jack county, does not give that district a fair test, due to the hard luck had in drilling, claiming that now that the peculiarities of the area are known another test is justified and would probably make a much better producer.

Location is 450 feet south of the center of the north line of the O. P. McKenzie survey, on the First State Bank of Bryson land, southwest Jack county.

RUNNELS WELL TO BE PUMPED

Progress Made in Wildcats Of West Texas

SAN ANGELO, March 31.—Gibson and Johnson's No. 1 Serratt, two miles north of Ballinger, in Runnels county, was to have been placed on the pump Saturday, after swabbing 40 barrels of 44.7 gravity oil in two and a half hours on Wednesday. The well topped a sand at 2325 feet, got the pay at 2328 feet and drilled to 2332 1-2. There was no water with the oil. The well is five miles south of Runnels county's discovery producer, Vacuum and others' No. 1 McMillan, and is in the center of the southeast corner of the northeast quarter of section 150, E. T. R. R. Co., survey. Whether the pay struck in the Serratt is from the same horizon as that which produces in the McMillan wells to the north had not been determined. Globe Oil company No. 1 Webb, ten miles east of Ballinger, completed its contract during the week at 2500 feet, but may drill deeper.

J. T. White and others' No. 1 Shoffner and Sterling, two miles north of Big Lake, in Reagan county, had 100 feet of oil with no water in the hole when the bailer was run Thursday. At 2630 feet a good showing of oil was struck, after which the hole was deepened to 2684. The oil tested around 37 gravity. The well is in the southeast corner of the northwest quarter of section 10, G. C. & S. F. Co. survey.

Hagan and Emch and Marland's No. 1 E. W. Loftin, in the center of the east half of section 1217, D. & S. E. survey, in Reagan county, stopped drilling at 2750 feet in lime to lower pipe from 2727 feet in a further effort to shut off salt water struck at 2540 feet. The lime was topped at 2722 feet, at about the same level it is obtained in the Big Lake field 11 miles to the southwest. At 2580 feet the test struck gas, which, coming through several hundred feet of water, was estimated at 200,000 cubic feet daily. Lowering of the pipe shut off the gas but not the water, and since then more gas has been encountered.

In Crane county, Gulf made a location for its No. 4 Waddell, in the center of the southwest quarter of the southwest quarter of section 3, block B-25, public school land. It is about 3-4 of a mile northwest of No. 2 Waddell, which opened a new pool almost midway between the Church-Fields production in Crane county and the Texas-Cosden Connell pool in Ector county. No. 3 Waddell, three-quarters of a mile north and east of No. 2 recently was abandoned dry after a shot failed to develop production from an oil show.

Wellington School Superintendent Resigns

Special to The Record News.

WELLINGTON, March 31.—John A. Webb has tendered his resignation as superintendent of the Wellington public schools, effective June 30. His contract with the board of education does not expire until June 30, 1929. Mr. Webb has been at the head of the local schools for the past two years but states that his future plans have made it necessary for him to take this step.

This location is in the center of the S. A. & M. G. survey, abstract 999.

The early part of the week, Lawson and Decker picked up a sand in their No. 2 E. McFadden, six miles southeast of Gainesville, at 1254-56 feet which had a very good show of oil. A Parker tester was run Friday which showed neither oil nor water. Pipe is now being set and cemented and a further test will be made.

In the event either of these tests make a well, it will probably mean more to Cooke county than anything found there since the opening of the Meunster pool. Both locations for the test are considerably removed from production, the Whaley is 10 miles south of production and the McFadden 13 southwest.

American typewriters shipped to other countries last year were valued at nearly $21,000,000.

New Lease Law Is Proposed

Legislature to Act Upon New Land Provision

AUSTIN, March 31. (AP)—Rosa Frank of Austin and George W. Thiesen of El Paso apparently will lose even if they win in their attack upon the constitutionality of the 1925 university and leasing law, if a protective law enacted by the 40th legislature in this connection is given effect.

Denying the constitutionality of the 1925 law, Frank and Tiesen seek a mandamus order from the supreme court to force land commissioner J. T. Robison to issue them prospecting permits on university land under the 1917 law at 10 cents an acre and one-eighth royalties. The 40th legislature, however, in enacting senate bill No. 474 of the regular session, provided that in case the supreme court holds the 1925 law unconstitutional the land commissioner may not issue any permits "until further legislation as to same."

Decision Not Made.

This seemingly would prevent Frank and Tiesen getting permits under the 1917 law.

The protective act did not figure in the recent four-day oral submission of the Frank and Tiesen cases, and several others involving the validity of virtually the entire land sales and leasing system of the state, before the supreme court. Decisions in the cases have not been made and may not be for several eeks.

Regents of the University of Texas joined in the attack on the 1925 law, which provides for lease sales on university lands to the highest bidder, with one-eighth royalty reserved to the state university. In addition, they also attacked the 1917 act under which Frank and Tiesen came into court.

The protective act became effective March 31, 1927, when Gov. Dan Moody signed it as an emergency measure. It says in part:

Wording of Act.

"If, in cases now pending in the supreme court or in cases hereafter filed, the said court should decide that the mineral lease or sales act of March 10, 1025 is invalid or ineffective, then and in that event the minerals of all university land are hereby withdrawn from lease or sale until such time as the legislature may enact legislation deemed adequate for the protection of the university available and permanent funds; and the commissioner of the general land office shall not, in the event such sales act is declared unconstitutional, thereafter issue any oil and gas permits on said land upon any application heretofore or hereafter filed, until further legislation as to same."

OSAGE COUNTY ONE OF BEST

Indian Territory Among Leaders in Oklahoma

TULSA, Okla., March 31.—One of Oklahoma's greatest oil areas is Osage county. In its territory exist some of the best producing properties of the Mid-Continent oil province, and when all of the present oil leaders are dead and their bones disintegrated and gone back to mother earth, it will be still producing a grade of crude oil that the refiners love to buy and run to their stills.

The Osage nation is controlled by the federal government and as a result it is not as progressive in many ways as other counties, in spite of the great production of petroleum and petroliferous products, but conditions are improving.

Different Policy.

The department of the interior is adopting a different policy and many of the old rules and regulations are being made less rigid and strict, although the government is not relenting one iota in its positon of being the guardian of the Osage, the richest aborigine in the world.

Sales of oil leases are held annually in the Osage, under act of congress, that requires the offering of 100,000 acres per fiscal year, the year to end April 8. The 13th of such sales took place the week just ended. It was eminently successful, even though the total bonuses was not as large as has been the case at some past sales.

In the past the government insisted that all tracts sold must be done at an initial bid of $500 an acre, and as the choicest of acreage had been purchased, proven good or bad, the remainder was known more or less. The result was that the successive sales were dragging.

Bid Reduced.

After much criticism on the part of the oil associations and trade and daily press the department agreed to reduce the initial bid and also made it possible for a buyer to purchase a tract, hold it for five years and pay rentals in lieu of drilling. Previously he had to drill a well in one year or lose his lease.

It was noted at the December 12 sale, and also at the two days session the past week that many of the tracts were bought by firms heretofore strangers to the Osage. They bought the tracts as a future reserve, and this is a fine idea. It assures the Osage of much future development when the oil market is in a healthier tone than today. It also assures the Osage of a continuous income in the form of future rentals. Further leniency in regulations should come, but that is assured.

Olney Drilling Permits Fall Off

School Teacher Burned When Range Explodes

Special to The Record News.

MEMPHIS, March 31.—Miss Johnnie Christian, teacher of home economics in the Memphis high school, was painfully burned about the face and neck Thursday afternoon, when a gas range exploded as she struck a match to light the oven. Miss Christian was assisting the class in economics to prepare the junior-senior banquet, which was held Thursday night. The burns are not considered serious.

POPULATION GROWS.

Special to The Record News.

VERNON, March 31.—Vernon's population was given as 12,487 by the industrial survey, which was recently completed by Burt Blanton, consulting engineer of Dallas. These figures do not include West Vernon, which has a population of about 800.

LESS COTTON

MEMPHIS, Texas, March 31.—The final government cotton report shows Hall county's ginnings to be 49,984 bales, compared to 69,735 for 1926, making about 20,000 bales less for 1927.

Union Oil To Develop Lease

LOS ANGELES, March 31.—Union Oil company of California is about to start development work on its Hacienda Miahuapam lease in Mexico. This new field, Union officials assert, is expected to prove to be one of the greatest ever developed in Mexico, if not in the world.

The lease consists of 36,000 acres south of the Tuxpan river, about 100 miles from Tampico. Included in the acreage is an eight-mile anticlime strip, which is expected to prove highly productive. In additon, there is another structure in the field which will be developed later.

Shell oil, which owns a lease just south of the Union property, recently brought in a well which is estimated to have a production of 60,000 barrels of crude a day.

Oil is said to be 28 gravity, sweet crude, which is much in demand for general refining purposes.

The new field has been called a second "Golden Lane" (one of the great Mexican fields of former years) by oil experts.

At the present time, there is very little oil production of any consequence in Mexico. This new "strike" may again bring that southern country to the front as a producer of petroleum.

SAYRE FIELD ACTION SCENE

New Operator in Southwest Oklahoma Area

TULSA, Okla., March 31.—The Sayre field of Beckham county, in southwest Oklahoma, the scene of much drilling late in 1923 and early in 1924, is in for a revival, thanks to the scientific well locating instruments now generally used by all operators.

Among new operators entering the Sayre area are the Ramsey brothers of Oklahoma City. They have taken a big block in township 8 north, and range 23 west, and have their geologists busy mapping the area.

Test started by the late J. H. (Cal) Wright of Sapulpa, at the northwest of the southwest of the southeast of 30-9-23, and halted at 4050 feet, by his death, is being plugged. When he was last in the Sayre area, Mr. Wright planned two other tests, but whether his successors will drill them is not yet known.

C. & H. P. T. company has finished rig for No. 1 Sidel, in the southeast of the southwest of 17-9-23. Its No. 1 Barnes, in the northeast of the northwest of 32-9-23, which had an oil showing at 3067 feet, will resume work at once.

Producers Syndicate is winding up a fishing job at 2385 feet, in No. 1 Thompson, in the southeast of the northwest of the southeast of 21-9-23.

Magnolia Petroleum company at No. 1 Martin, in the northeast corner of 28-9-23, was drilling around 2000 feet.

Sayre Oil and Refining company, headed by Bert Barker, a pioneer in the Sayre area, at No. 1 Davis, in the southwest of the northwest of 24-9-23, was drilling at 2000 feet.

A wind storm a week ago lowered several rigs in the field, the derrick of Producers Exploration company at No. 1 Pederson, in the northeast of the northwest of 23-9-23, was blown down.

IOWA PARK SOCIETY

IOWA PARK, March 31.—Miss Helen Dawson was hostess to her Sunday school class of intermediate girls after school when they met at Mrs. J. A. Sewell's home for a jolly good time. They played games, and made candy, afterward enjoying the delicious divinity and cocoanut cream candy for their refreshments.

Those present were: Damarice Hagelstein, Chlotilde e McDonald, Lucill Smith, Neva Smith, Florence Huff, Tommy Harding, Glenda Bevill and the hostess, Miss Helen Dawson.

Miss Dawson was assisted in entertaining the group by Glenda Bevill.

Sunday School Class.

The senior class of the Methodist Sunday school were the guests of Mrs. T. J. Pace, their superintendent, and Mrs. Carroll Hester, a teacher in the department. They met at the home of Mrs. Pace, where they spent some pleasant hours playing "Spinning the Bottle," pitching the bean bag, and running a cracker race, and other jolly games.

Refreshments of punch and cakes were served to Misses Jeraldine Thurber, Georgina Sherwood, Maude Burman, Dorothy Watkins, Mary Lea Smith, Julia Vera Woods, Anna Mae Hobson, Loise Peveler, Helen Dawson, Pearl Smythe, Carol Thurber, Shirley Smythe, Iva Mae Smith, Velva Shipman and Ethel Burnam and Darrel Cagile, Marshall Chrestman, Herman McKinney, Costelle Taylor, Fritz McDonald, Elmer Woods, R. Ll. Sunday, Travis Sherwood and Theo Cheeves.

Domino Party.

Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Wiley were the host and hostess to a group of friends Monday evening in a 42 party honoring Mrs. Wiley's brother, Mr. N. A. Moore and Mrs. Moore of Wichita Falls. Four tables of 42 passed the hours pleasantly, and refreshments of brick ice cream and cake were served.

The following guests were present: Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Coppick, Mr. and Mrs. Scott Ralston, Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Hale, Mrs. Tom Corridon, Mrs. Tom Carpenter, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Hudson, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Kemper, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Bagby, and the honorees, Mr. and Mrs. N. A. Moore and Mr. and Mrs. Wiley.

Athletic Club.

The Athletic club entertained the husbands of the members Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. J. C. Murphree with Mesdames Murphree, W. R. Golden, Gordon Clark and Miles Hines as the hostesses. The rooms were lovely in the spring colors with baskets and vases of lilacs, ferns, carnations and other flowers. Mrs. Fenton Dale in costume sang "My Alice Blue Gown."

Refreshments of rolled sandwiches, peach tarts and coffee with pretty favors with ribbons and lace were served to the following guests: Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Thurber, Mr. and Mrs. Miles Hines, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Coppick, Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Hester, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Golden, Mr. and Mrs. Noel McKinney, Mr. and Mrs. Tayllor George, Mr. and Mrs. J. G. First Year Class.

The first year class of girls who are studying foods in domestic science had a practical demonstration Wednesday morning when they went to Coleman's Park for an early morning breakfast. Leaving the cottage at six o'clock they hiked to the park where some of the girls already had a fire made and breakfast was cooked over the glowing coals. The menu consisted of bacon, scrambled eggs, fruit, marshmallows and cocoa. Have enough of exercise from the walk and outdoor games played they rode back to the school room to take up studies again. Those who enjoyed the morning's fun were: Miss Hill, Miss Sullivan and Miss Lamkin, Pearl Smythe, Jeraldine Jackson, Edith Burney, Carol Thurber, Ozelle Cambron, Jewell Wallace, Helen Dawson, Velva Shipman, Shirley Smythe, Hortense Davis, Ruby White, Glenda Bevill, Helen Ferguson, Zoe Beth Duncan, Opal Hestand.

WAURIKA HUMS WITH ACTIVITY

Spring Ranch Strike Is Big Producer

Special to The Record News.

WAURIKA, Okla., March 31.—Jefferson county, Oklahoma, is now the center of considerable excitement over oil. Waurika, its county seat, is full of strangers, all seeking a play about the new well of Bridwell and Continental Oil company, located on the Spring ranch in section 24, township 6 south, range 6 west.

The new well is the first big well in what has been a light field for the past four years. It was found at 1728 feet and is thought by some to be good for 1000 barrels on the swab, but the owners ran two inch tubing which has a capacity of about 250 barrels.

The first oil operators to arrive were from Wichita Falls, and got the cream of leases which were open but now they are arriving from all parts of the country and are taking most everything they can get at big prices.

NW to SE Trend.

The play is, northwest to the southeast, that being the trend of most of the fields in this locality. The preference is to the northwest for the reason that the Magnolia has a deep dry hole to the southeast, yet there are some that think it has a chance to go that way for the reason that a search of the Magnolia's log shows that it failed to have any sands whatever at the producing horizon and for the further reason that it was drilled wet.

Sigler and McGinley have a nice well of 32 gravity oil on their No. 1 Pfile located in the northwest quarter of section 20, township 7 south, range 5 west. They are making arrangements to start another test, No. 1 Peniston, on lot 5, section 16, township 7 south, range 5 west, on the first day of April, which is a part of a lease held by the Texas company.

Pay High Price.

They also made a contract with Peniston to start a well within 90 days on the northeast of the southwest of section 16, township 7 south, range 5 west, and paid a large cash consideration along with one to be paid in oil. E. P. Daniel et al, are cemented at 770 feet on their No. 1 Black at the center of section 16, township 7 south, range 5 west. It is reported that they drilled 22 feet of sand before taking a core, which proved to be rich, and that it was necessary to swing the pipe.

Amerada Test.

The Amerada in the No. 1 Edmundson, section 28, township 5 south, range 8 west, is drilling at about 550 on their torsion balance core drill structure. This well is being watched carefully but information is being withheld. Nearly 500 feet of 20 inch casing was set and so far it appears there is an absence of the shallow water sands.

HUGE WELLS IN WINKLER AREA

Field Sets New Peak in Past Week

SAN ANGELO, March 31.—New producers, including one rating 37,440 barrels daily in a 20-minute test, and new production records, in Winkler county, shared interest in the Permian Basin of West Texas this week with a Crockett gusher opposite the Pecos field, constituting a possible threat to proration there; swabbing of oil from a new Runnels county well and improved showing by a Reagan county wildcat. Henshaw and others' No. 1 Settles, extending the Howard county field slightly over a half mile west, shut down at 2518 feet after slopping over with oil, swabbing being deferred owing to inadequate outlet.

Big Winkler Well.

The Winkler county well that flowed 520 barrels in a 20-minute test, open, a rate of 37,440 barrels a day, was Southern Crude's No. T-67-3B1 Hendricks in the north area where Cranfill & Reynolds' No. 1-C Hendricks early in March extended the pool one and a half miles to a length of full six miles. No. T-88-3B1 Hendricks topped the pay at 2797 feet and drilled to 2830 feet. It produced 9598 barrels the first 18 hours, pinched after the first hour. The well is in the southwest of the southwest of the southwest of section 33, block 26, public school land, and a west offset to Cranfill & Reynolds' No. 1-C, which recently has been pinched to 12,000 to 13,000 barrels daily. Initially, it flowed 1830 barrels in an hour.

Republic Production company's No. 4 Hendricks, after coming in as one of the biggest wells in the north central part of the field, was pinched to 9600 barrels daily on a 1 5-8-inch choke with 500 pounds back pressure. Under 175 pounds back pressure, the well initially rated 33,000 barrels a day in a one-hour test. It stopped drilling after topping the pay at 2752 feet. The well is in the northeast corner of the east half of the southwest quarter of section 45, block 26, public school land. It is an east offset to Republic No. 1 Hendricks, which has produced over 600,000 barrels of oil. For a long period it flowed 9000 to 10,000 barrels daily on a 1 1-2-inch choke and is now pinched to 4600 barrels daily on a half-inch choke.

One of the latest producers in the field, though uncompleted Wednesday, was Southern Crude No. T-88-A2 Hendricks, in the southwest corner of the east half of the northeast quarter of section 44, block 26, in the north part and on the west side of the pool. It topped the pay at 2965 feet and made 270 barrels the first 18 hours. Roxana No. 6-C Hendricks, 1650 feet from the west line and 990 feet from the north line of section 29, block B-5, flowed 5157 barrels, open, in 24 hours after topping the pay at 2894 and drilling four feet. Atlantic No. 6-A Hendricks, 1650 feet from the west line and 990 feet from the south line of section 34, block B-5, flowed by heads at 2885 feet, after getting a hole full of oil at 2875.

Independent No. 1 Cowden (McCabe), in the southeast of the northwest of the northwest of section 36, block B-5, extending the field a mile east to a width of two and a half miles, landed casing on bottom at 2705 feet to shut off eight to 10 million cubic feet of gas that had been spraying 45 to 52 barrels of oil daily. Amerada No. 1 Walton, in the southwest of the northwest of section 48, block 26, two and one-half miles northeast of production, blew the tools out of the hole again and wrecked the top of the derrick after gas had increased to 50 million cubic feet at 2465 feet, bridging the hole and losing the tools. Fishing was underway when the blow-out came.

May Produce Water.

Whether Grayburg Oil company wells on its 140-acre lease in Crockett county bought from the Osage Oil company produce as heavily as its first two, or go partly to water, as have Gulf wells on the Thompson lease only a quarter-mile up the Pecos river, will determine whether or not the Yates field pipeline pro-ration is endangered. Grayburg early in the week shut in its No. 2 Halff, in section 70, block 7, I.-G. N. Ry. Co. survey, after it had flowed a short time from 1118 feet, two feet in the pay, at a rate estimated at 200 to 400 barrels hourly.

Terrell Makes Race Upon His Performance

AUSTIN, March 31. (AP)—George B. Terrell, state commissioner of agriculture, expects to make his race for re-election "upon performance rather than promises."

In a statement outlining his candidacy, Commissioner Terrell points particularly to the fact that work of his department is being conducted with an appropriation of $105,552 less than the appropriation available when he became commissioner.

French Minister's Note On Peace Treaty Arrives

WASHINGTON, March 31. (AP)—Foreign Minister Briand's latest note in his discussions with Secretary Kellogg concerning a treaty to outlaw war was delivered this evening to the state department. Its translation was immediately begun by the state department in order that it will be available for Secretary Kellogg upon his return tomorrow from a brief rest at Pinehurt, N. C. It may be made public at that time.

NEW YORK COTTON.

NEW YORK, March 31. (AP)—Conflicting influences were reflected in narrow and irregular fluctuations in the cotton market today, the price of July contracts ranging from 19.05 to 19.13, and closing at 19.08, compared with 19.03 at the close the previous day. The general market closed barely steady, net 6 points higher to 1 point lower.

The opening was steady at an advance of 4 points to a decline of 2 points. There was some buying on the relatively steady showing of Liverpool and reports that increasing complaints of droughty conditions were being received from West Texas.

Active months sold up a few points after the opening, while there appeared to be some foreign buying, as well as week-end covering, and a little commission house demand. Buyers were soon supplied by realizing, together with local and a little southern selling promoted by the outlook for fair and warmer weather in the eastern belt, but after selling back to about Friday's closing quotations, the market steadied up again in late trading. Last prices showed rallies of several points from the lowest on old crop positions, but were at about the lowest of the day on the later deliveries.

There were rumors that some of the southern mills carrying comparatively large stocks of raw cotton were selling a few contracts here as a hedge. On the other hand, reports were current that one of the large dry goods commission houses said sales of goods for all of its mills the past week ran 35 per cent ahead of production, and that sales for the five weeks of the March period, were 94 per cent of full production, or somewhat more than 100 per cent of curtailed production.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 109,882 bales, against 177,816 last year and 72,460 two years ago.

Private cables said hedging and Bombay selling had been taken by covering and trade calling in the Liverpool market and that there was a fair demand for cotton cloths and yarns.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON.

NEW ORLEANS, March 31. (AP)—Following a slight reaction from an early advance the cotton market steadied in final trading today and closed at a net advance of 3 to 5 points. The prospects for favorable weather over the week-end brought out selling and realizing. July dropped back to 18.63 and October 18.34, 8 to 10 points off from the highs and 2 to 3 points under yesterday's close. The market gradually improved during the later trading, being supported by the expectations of the bullish weevil report and closed a few points off from the best with July at 18.71 and October 18.39, 3 to 5 points net up.

NEW YORK, March 31. (AP)—The cotton seed oil market was dull and featureless today. Prices moved over narrow limits on a mixed trade, and active months closed unchanged to 1 point net higher. ### BOSTON WOOL MARKET.

BOSTON, March 31. (AP)—Diminished stocks have continued to be an important factor in holding down the volume of trading in wool. Quotations remain very firm on all spot stock, although it consists mostly of fine wool which is still slow. Mills have continued to show an interest in tracing orders for medium, qualities to be delivered out of the contracted wools as soon as graded, but dealers are not uniformly in favor of selling these wools until ready to deliver. Foreign prices continue very strong.

Bonds

Leading Issues on New York Market

NEW YORK, March 31. (AP)—Price changes were few and small in the bond market early today, with some evidence of week-end limiting of committments and profit taking.

New offerings for the week fell below $100,000,000 again, the aggregate of $85,000,000 comparing with about $117,000,000 in the preceding week, and $79,000,000 in the corresponding week of 1917

Anaconda Copper 6s changeds hand around 105½ and Rock Island 4s, Atchison 4s and New York Central 5s were bought in moderate amounts, but at little change in price. Dodge Brothers 6s again had a fractional loss.

The U. S. government and foreign groups were quiet in the early dealings.

Eggs, Poultry And Spinach Lead Market

Local produce and markets during the past week have seen only minor changes. Outstanding among these was an advance in the price of spinach in the face of continued harvest of a large local crop. Squash from Florida were crowded from the market with advent of the south Texas crop.

With a revision of prices the first of the week, poultry and eggs generally showed a slight increase and ducks and geese were added to the market. Eggs advanced 50 cents on the crate and broilers climbed 2 cents, following a 5 cent increase the preceding week.

A record strawberry crop in Texas has had no effect on the market and a lowering in price is not expected prior to arrival of the Louisiana product.

Wave Of Profit Taking Brings Halt To Advance On Stock Market In Record Session

By BROADAN WALL

Universal Service Financial Expert

NEW YORK, March 31.—A sudden wave of profit-taking brought an unexpected halt to the advance in stock prices today and influenced the biggest morning session in history in which all groups of stocks dropped as the market machinery collapsed. It was 55 minutes after the close before all odd-lot transactions were recorded.

Volume of 2,525,000 shares was well scattered throughout the list with the greatest activity centered in General Motors, Radio and other industrials skyrocketed in recent markets. Motors led throughout but the greatest pressure was applied to Radio when the sudden burst of selling started depressing the list after the first half-hour. Radio was off nine points at the close, with General Motors down five, while losses of one and two points were frequent throughout the list.

Foreign exchange was quiet and fairly steady. Cotton rallied slightly while other commodities ruled firm in a very dull market.

Radio's opening transaction totalled 20,000 shares and after holding around Friday's close for awhile it started to slip, and influenced nervous liquidation elsewhere. When General Motors dipped other automobile shares dropped also, but evidenced fairly good support on the decline. American Smelters and other coppers felt the effect of a rush to cash in part of paper profits accumulated in recent advance. Railroads were not spared although offerings were less excited than in the industrial list and the decline proceeded in more orderly manner.

Oils lost fractionally with the exception of Richfield which gained a little for the session coincident with utterance of favorable forecast for the oil industry by its president who spoke particularly optimistic as to the prospects in California. American International registered a new high before dropping with others buying being influenced by appreciation in value of its security holdings. Drug also moved with those most active in leading industrials continuing the'r operation therein.

TEXAS LIVESTOCK.

FORT WORTH, March 31. (AP)—Not enough cattle were in the yards Saturday at Fort Worth to test the market. While the estimate called for 350 grown cattle, 50 calves, 1000 hogs and 100 sheep, practically the entire offering was made up of mixed lots.

There was no evidence to change values and the trading for the day was cleaned up in short order.

A few odd head of cows sold all the way from $4.50 to $8.00 with a few heifers and yearlings included in the supply and most of them were lacking in quality and sold from $6.00@8.00. A few common bulls cleared around $6.00 or about in line with trading for the week.

In the calf division a car of 55 head sold on a bid of $12.10 on packer account. The call calves cleared from $6.00@7.00; common calves from $7.00@8.50.

GRAHAM-PAIGE MOTORS CORPORATION

The Graham-Paige Motors Corporation was formerly the Paige-Detroit Motor Car company. The corporation was renamed after the acquisition of control by the Graham Brothers. The company makes medium priced automobiles and also makes motors for a portion of its cars. New lines of both sixes and eights were introduced in January, 1928.

The stockholders have authorized a contract providing for the management of the company by the Grahams, subject to supervision of executive committees and board of directors, for five years, beginning July 1, 1927, compensation to be based on a percentage of the annual net earnings of the company provided net earnings are $1,000,000 or more.

The company owns a plant in Detroit with a million square feet of floor space and leases two other plants in the same city.

There was a heavy shrinkage of sales in 1926. Net income was $509,200, compared with $2,438,000 for the previous year. The 1926 difficulties were attributed officially, to the fact that the body company from which the concern secured its supply of bodies, went into the hands of a receiver. The first nine months of 1927 showed a deficit of $1,796,000. Shipments of 17,482 cars compared with 37,222 for the full year of 1926.

There is no funded debt. Capital stock outstanding consists of $1,900,600 in 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock of $100 par, $3,747,400 in 7 per cent cumulative second preferred stock of $100 par, and 1,050,934 shares of no par common. The second preferred is convertible into common at the rate of 10 common shares for one share second preferred. The second preferred and the common stock have the voting power, the former having 10 votes for each share, and the common 1 vote for each share.

Accumulated preferred dividends on the second preferred stock amounted to 1 3-4 per cent on January 1, 1928. Regular dividends have been paid on the first preferred. No dividends have been paid on the new common.

As of September 30, 1927, total current assets were $8,657,536; current liabilities $2,756,545; net working capital $5,900,991, and book value of the common stock $9.72 per share.

Curb

Leading Issues on New York Market

NEW YORK, March 31. (AP)—Week-end profit taking in trading was so heavy that a new half-day total sales record of 474,800 shares was established caused a general easing off in prices on the curb market today. At times the ticker was as much as 25 minutes late and it recorded the final transaction 15 minutes after the market closed. The previous record for half-day total sales was 469,300 established on March 17 of this year.

A few issues advanced to new high levels in the early hours, but later there was a rush to dispose of holdings for the week-end, and under this pressure of profit taking the list generally sagged. Recessions were limited in most cases, however.

Canadian Marconi which accounted for more than half the transactions, became weak after opening at 8¼, just under its peak price. Marconi Wireless also sagged. Spanish and General moved to a new high at 6 on reports of a pending change of control of the company, and closed at 5⅝, up a quarter point net.

Proctor and Gamble extended its gain 2 points to a new high at 267. Walgreen preferred, Ettingon Schild, Neisner Bros. General Ice Cream and Parke Davis also were at new highs. Torrington Co., of Maine advanced 8 points to a new high at 102.

Bancitaly resisted selling, closing unchanged at 192⅝ after having touched 193⅞. Interstate Department stores preferred and St. Regis Paper were pounded down nearly 3 points. Melville Shoe dropped 5, National Banking preferred 6, and Newmont Mines and Tubize Art Silk about 5 each.

The Utilities were irregular. Penn-Ohio Edison new and the warrants advanced to new high ground and Hartford Electric Light soared.

CHICAGO GRAIN REVIEW.

CHICAGO, March 31. (AP)—Active speculative buying lifted the wheat market today to the topmost prices which deferred deliveries have reached yet this season. Private crop estimates due on Monday are expected to show a smaller domestic winter wheat crop in prospect than a year ago. Heavy profit taking sales however, by holders of wheat brought about a reaction.

Closing quotations on wheat were irregular ⅛c net lower to an equal advance with corn ¼ to ½c up, oats unchanged to 1c down, and provisions varying from 17c decline to a rise of 15c.

Corn and oats were governed largely by the action of wheat.

Queer Animals Of Many Climes Crowd New Wichita Falls Zoo

Exhibits Started By Lions Club Fast Growing Into Best In State.

By W. K. SHANE

If the Kinkajous could talk to the Ocelot they probably would be talking about places recently seen, and especially about their recent trip to Wichita Falls to join the Lions club municipal zoo. The coatimundi might even go so far as to describe the new zoo houses and cages at Scotland park, the permanent home of the zoo.

However, they don't talk, the nearest approach to talking being the meowing roar of the young lions, and the subdued grunts of the Havoline wild hog.

Joe Joe, the coyote wolf, was the first of the zoo family, being given to the club through Mayor R. E. Shepherd. Joe Joe has some friends in the same cage who were donated by Dr. J. R. E. Richardson.

The second animal to join the zoo was a gray fox, donated by Dr. W. T. Wells.

Many New Arrivals

After this new arrivals were announced almost daily.

Odorless civet cats were presented by Alvin Neil, and chinchila rabbits were given by the Musick rabbitry. A green parrot is there and his speeches so far are confined to imitations of the noises he hears the other animals making.

The fast vanishing race of prairie dogs is well represented by seven little squealers given by Mrs. D. E. Solsby.

The two lion cubs, 4 and 5 months old, are in good health and are developing into powerful young animals. They were purchased by the Lions club.

A crane, given by no one knows who, gabbles about whatever is on his mind when he thinks of his old home near Electra.

The Gila monster is in a semi somnambulistic state, and moves only when proded. He was given by Dr. Graham. The ground squirrel family is represented by three happy little animals which Miss Marie Yonker gave to the zoo. The squirrels are peculiar in their activities at the zoo in so far as they will allow only one male to live in the cage at one time. More than one they will kill.

The lone alligator is hibernating in a queer tank home which was built especially for him. He is a member of the zoo through the courtesy of W. Culbertson.

Mary and Martha are among those present. Mary is a perfect deer as is her pal. Judge R. O. Kenley gave these animals.

Bears Given Bath.

Carter Howard gave a bob cat, and Dr. Graham gave the coatimundi or ant eaters. Two racoons were credited to A. F. Cochran and eight squirrels to Dr. Graham.

The two black bears, both of which were well sprayed with a bear cleaning disinfectant this week, came from St. Louis. They were given by the Panhandle Refining company and arrived in Wichita Falls about six weeks ago.

One pair of rabbits carry with them a sentiment that none of the other animals can reflect. Several months ago, Mrs. S. D. Whitley knew her death was near, and she wanted her pets well cared for. Her two rabbits are there now that she is gone, and are among the finest specimens in the zoo. Their cage bears the inscription "donated by Mrs. C. J. Whitley." Three Angora rabbits, the gift of E. E. Milburn are there as are several Belgians.

The Kinka Jous, which as time goes on probably will attract more attention than any other animals in the zoo, and which will be mistaken frequently for monkeys, were given by D. H. Allday. These little animals are in reality members of the bear family, according to C. C. Bunnenberg, superintendent of parks. They have tails almost twice as long as their bodies. These tails are strong and are used for hanging purposes, a la monkey.

Escape From Cage.

This peculiar pair of little animals are quite docile and like to pet and be pettied. In their cage they are almost continually stroking each other. When taken out of the cage by D. E. Solsby, they are restless but domesticated as dogs or cats. In their first cage at the temporary quarters in the Call field airplane hangar one of these little animals escaped several nights in succession, and contented himself with inspecting the other cages, keeping out of the way of the lions and the big bears, and awaiting his food from the keeper in the morning.

Massive buffalo, donated by J. I. Staley proudly stalk and recall other days. Three black and red African sheep, and 12 goats from the Dallas zoo, were presented by Dr. Graham. Mrs. Solsby donated five opossums. Two badgers are among the more recent arrivals. They were presented by John Teris.

Paddy Purse and G. T. Builderback gave the Havolina wild hog.

The ocelot is a small tiger cat. There is a pair of these animals, one, the compliments of the Ralley Printing company, and the other, the compliments of O. Buchanan. Carter Howard gave a bobcat, as did R. H. Whenton and Carl Ralley.

J. L. Rome gave 14 pairs of pigeons of all breeds, one of the finest collections of blooded birds in Texas.

Seven monkey faced owls and horned owls look wise in their cage together. The two hoot owls are only three weeks old and are in a separate cage. The birds were given by the Arbuckle Grocery company, Charles Sloan and Dr. J. R. E. Richardson.

One of the most beautiful of all in the zoo is the male pheasant. If the females of the human race were as unattractive as the female mate of that male pheasant, it would be a sad world.

"Mickey" the big monk was given by E. W. Graham. The little Rhesus monkey, nicknamed "Grandma" is paired off with Mickey, and was given by B. G. Ripley.

Many additions to the zoo are expected in the near future.

200 MOVED TO PARK.

All aboard for a Sunday outing at Scotland to see the monkey, the bear and the lions and birds. All of the caged animals of the Lions club municipal zoo of Wichita Falls were moved to the new zoo cages at Scotland park from the old temporary quarters in the old airplane hangars at Call field.

The corral and barn animals such as the bison, the deer, the sheep and the goats are still at Call field. Their removal to the Scotland park home awaits the shipment of wire which will surround several acres which have been set off with high metal posts to carry the wire. These animals probably will be moved in four or five days.

The crowds watching the removal to Scotland park Saturday were among the largest yet to see the animals.

Talking And Singing Pictures Make Debut In Wichita Falls

Al Jolson Sways Audiences Through New Vitaphone Just as Star Does From Stage

By W. K. SHANE.
The Record News Staff.

The Vitaphone, one of the outstanding achievements of the age, has come to Wichita Falls.

Saturday afternoon Al Jolson spoke to Wichitans and sang to them, and he did it exactly as the writer has heard him do on the legitimate stage.

All of this is by way of saying that the Strand theater was reopened Saturday afternoon, and that the Vitaphone or talking motion picture "The Jazz Singer," starring Al Jolson, was presented. It is the first time this startling invention ever has been heard in Wichita Falls.

Great Show.

Paramount importance always attaches to the show and the entertainment. From that point of view it safely can be said that at no time, since the advent of the motion picture, has this city had an opportunity to see such a marvelous invention.

Al Jolson is himself.

The audiences Saturday watched, applauded, and listened in breathless awe as the clearly sung words came out of his moving lips. The tone is so perfect, that at the end of a phrase the tone dies exactly as the lips close and the vocal cords relax. It is as perfect a co-ordination of picture and song as anyone could expect to find.

Same Jolson.

Jolson's singing has the tonal qualities that have made him famous the world over, and if a tear does not well up in the eye of the spectator it is because he can't hear and isn't looking.

The story told in the show is that of the boy whose father is a Jewish cantor. For five generations the family had provided the cantors for the Jewish community in which they lived. The boy, being born in America, is modern and preferred modern life to that of a church cantor. He ran away when he was 12 years old, and after years of work, he is to be starred in a New York musical show as a jazz singer. This is where the show gets its name.

The singing by Cantor Josef Rosenblatt, which is a part of the picture, is excellent. May McAvoy, the female star is strikingly good to look at as the surroundings are arranged for the greatest contrast so that she stands out like a diamond in several scenes.

Places the traveler knows such as Coffee Dan's restaurant in San Francisco, the State Lake theater in Chicago and the New York Winter Garden, are shown in the sequence of the play. The principals of the supporting cast do their work well. They include William Demarest, Warner Oland, Nat Carr, Anders Randolf, Richard Tucker, Otto Lederer, Bobby Gordon and Eugenie Besserer.

"The Jazz Singer" is adapted to the screen from Samson Raphaelson's most successful stage play of the same name. Al Cohn wrote the scenario.

Great Horns.

Warner Brothers produced the film on the Vitaphone, and it is one of the unusual things of the age.

Recent developments in sound transmission and amplification undoubtedly play a large part in this film. The great horns are of the same specifications as those recently used to broadcast the human voice a mile across the Hudson river.

The Bell Telephone company, the Western Electric company and allied interests are among the electrical concerns whose laboratories were used in developing the equipment. Electrical Research Products, Inc., is the handling agent.

E. C. Zrenner, in charge of the southern division of activities for the Research company, personally made delivery to Manager T. B. Noble Jr., of the local Dent theaters of all the equipment.

Grimes R. Waller, formerly in charge of radio station W. F. A. A. of Dallas, is the engineer in charge of the installation. R. Michling and W. W. Carpenter are here as instructor operators, and will remain until the local operators are thoroughly acquainted with the operation of the new machinery.

The Vitaphone's operation follows: The sounds are taken from a specially prepared phonograph record and carried to the auditorium of the theater through amplifiers and two gigantic horns which are set directly behind the "transvox" screen on which the pictures are thrown.

The film itself is run in the usual manner. The screen used, however, is a special cloth which will not muffle or deaden the sounds issuing from the horns behind it. A great deal of research and experimentation was necessary before it was possible to develop a cloth that would have the quality of allowing practically the free passage of sound.

Many Batteries.

The projection room and adjoining rooms of the theater have taken on the aspect of an electrical laboratory.

What at one time was the manager's office of the theater is now the battery room. "B" batteries and other batteries, familiar to the radio fan and radio expert, are set on many rows of shelves. They provide the necessary "juice" of the right kind at the right time and place in the process of presenting the spoken motion pictures.

The big Simplex projectors that are used in the usual motion pictures, are used in projecting "The Jazz Singer" and like plays, but there is something added.

Connected with the projection machine is a phonograph mechanism. A shaft attached to the projector runs the phonograph turntable at the same rate of speed as the machine. If the speed of the film should vary in any degree, the speed of the record must change with it and in time as one is shaft driven from the other.

The record and the film are both marked with a notch at the starting place, so that once the film is started, it is in perfect time all the way through.

Three Confiscated Slot Machines Ordered Destroyed By Court

Three slot machines, alleged to be of a gambling nature, were condemned and ordered destroyed Saturday by Judge P. A. Martin, in the 89th district court. Two other slot machines, involved in the proceedings, as the result of raids conducted several weeks ago by Sheriff W. G. Bralley, were ordered returned to the owners by Judge Martin.

Two of the machines condemned were owned by A. B. Ross and one by the Oasis Drug store. The machines returned are owned by W. W. Noe and the Yates Pharmacy.

Mr. Noe and Mr. Yates during testimony taken in the case convinced Judge Martin that the slot machines, which they had in their possession, were not of a gambling nature.

The case was prosecuted for the state by Wayne Somerville, county attorney, and George Anderson, assistant county attorney.

WOMAN BURNED IN EXPLOSION

Gasoline Causes Incubator To Flame

Special to The Record News.

FREDERICK, Okla., March 31. Mrs. Grover O. McPherson, resident east of here, sustained serious burns about the face, arms, and body late Friday when the incubator located in the cellar of the home exploded. Mrs. McPherson had mistaken a can of gasoline for one of kerosene, and after filling the incubator tank, ignited the lamp. Flames which spread over the woman's clothing were quickly extinguished, preventing further injury. Her conditon is not regarded as critical.

Told by doctors that he was growing an extra rib which was pressing on a nerve and should be operated on, John Perkins, 62, of London, hung himself recently.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Card of Thanks 1

WE wish to express our sincere appreciation to our friends and relatives for their sympathy and kindness during the illness and death of our baby, Mildred.
MR. AND MRS. G. C. GORDON.

Special Notice 3

TO THE PUBLIC:
I am a candidate for the office of public utilities commissioner, city election, April 3. It is impossible to meet all the voters so I take this method of soliciting your support for the important office. I earnestly solicit your support for the reason I think I am well acquainted with the needs of the city at this time. I think I can handle this office to the satisfaction of the taxpayers.
If I served the city as your park and sanitary commissioner for four years from April, 1923, to April, 1927. I am glad to refer to my official record as well as my record as a private citizen of Wichita Falls for 15 years.
The most important improvement needed at this time is in our water system. I shall favor that immediate steps be aken to put our water system to where we are assured of plenty of clean, soft water at as low a rate as it is possible to make.
If elected to this office I promise the same faithful service I have always given the city whether it be under a manager form or under our present form of government.
Not being able to see the voters in person I must rely on my friends to say a word to those that are not familiar with my record as an officer. Ask any man that keeps up with our municipal affairs and attends the council meetings and you will find 95 per cent of them will tell you that I have always stood for economy and giving every man a square deal from the largest corporation to the most humble homeowner in the city.
I thank one and all for your continued support until the polls are closed on Tuesday, April 3, and I am confident of a splendid majority. Yours to Serve,
J. H. PATTON.

TO MAKE BIG PROFITS

Buy real estate during a depression. Sell when business of all kinds are active. No thinking person can doubt the certainty of the tremendous profits to be realized by carrying out this free but truthful advice. History has repeated itself too often in the past for one to doubt that it will repeat itself again—right here in Wichita Falls. We all know that there are times when oil goes down, and we know that real estate values are affected by the oil situation. We also know that oil goes up—whe least we expect it, and that hundreds and thousands of families become independently wealthy from the ownership of lands.

CONCEDED FACTS

Wichita Falls is today and has been for years the tremendous business and financial center of Northwest Texas. Thousands of our citizens owe their success in life to the ownership of property in this city. Already hundreds of our far-sighted men and women are providing for the future by paying on a home instead of paying rent. Having sold real estate in this city for 22 years, it is needless to tell you that we know values and can materially assist you in buying bargains. If you are interested in saving money as well as making money, call and see us. It may be the financial turning point in your life.

"HAVANA LAY BURNING IN THE SUN"

S. S. Abangarez, Feb. 3, 1928.

Dear Chloe:

We sighted land this morning when we came on deck about seven and stood for hours, going from one side of the ship to the other watching Havana come out of the sky. "Havana lay burning in the sun," Moro Castle, an old picturesque fort, was on one side of the harbor and a long half circle of white shining buildings that was Havana was on the other. There were no trees as the Spanish people have their gardens inside their patios for their own private pleasure rather than for the enjoyment of all, but while we missed the trees, we were thrilled by the beauty of the island. The ocean was as blue as blue, the towers and crumbling walls of Moro Castle, the glimmer and sheen of the buildings in the sun, the sail-boats and steamers and fishing boats that filled the harbor made a scene that will never be forgotten.

The Abangarez docked and the immigration authorities came on board. They are very careful and rigid in their examinations. The passengers go into the dining salon and are asked about their health and especially concerning their money, where they got it and how much they have and what they intend to do with it, particularly those who expect to remain in the country.

Typewriter Rescued

After we received our blue tickets we started to land—with our baggage. We lined up with our bags and opened them. We had a hard time making them understand that the magnetometers were not infernal machines and a harder time fighting for the privalege of carrying them ourselves. Taxi drivers, hotel men, red caps (without the caps) all yelling and screaming, everyone rushing and pushing and shoving for a place on the bench where they might open their bags for inspection, no one understanding the other person's language, that was our landing in Havana. Tired from standing on deck for hours and wilted with the heat and confusion, we finally reassembled ourselves and our bags and found that a typewriter was lost. We sent a boy to find a man who had seen a steward who had seen the boy that brought our bags on deck. After many minutes Mister went back on board and rescued the typewriter from under the bed and the party went on to the hotel. We were piled with the baggage into two acient automobiles and wound through the narrowest possible streets to the hotel. Most of the main streets in the old part of town have to be one way streets for there is just room for an automobile to pass down them.

Breakfast at $1.65

This is the busy season in Havana. The races are held every day, the city is full of tourists and it cost $1.65 for two dishes of bran and the juice of one orange for breakfast. This city is lovely, just enough foreign atmosphere to make one feel that they are away from home and modern improvements that make one very comfortable. The ceilings in the hotel were 15 feet high and we felt like we were living in the castle in the thief of Bagdad. Most of the floors are made of tile, clean, cool, effective and beautiful

We rested and then went to a roof garden cabaret that was American in its plan of entertainment, the singers and dancers were Cuban and could not have held a job on any profesional stage at home. Later we went to Infierno, another cabaret decorated to represent hell. We might say that it was a very mild Hell and we went home after a pleasant evening. Tomorrow I am going to hunt for a shawl like yours and only wish you could help me select it.

Much love,

MARGUERITE H. WOLFF.

VISITING IN CUBA

Havana, Cuba, Feb. 4, 1928.

Dear Fanny:

This morning at 9:30 we had our passports vised and for the first time wished that we knew Spanish. Then we drove across the island of Cuba, a drive of 50 miles, and had lunch at Batabano. We saw our first banana trees and were disappointed that they were not larger. We inspected a sugar factory and followed the cane until it was poured into sacks as coarse, raw sugar. It was a clean, modern factory of which there are a great number in Cuba and the ox teams and the native workmen were the only factors that made us realize that the factory was not in the United States. When I think of Havana I shall always think of waving palm trees against the sky for there were miles and miles of them making a perfect silhouette. The road was not too rough and the ancient automobile, in spite of its misgiving squeaks, made the trip successfully.

Chinese Theater

In the evening we went to China Town, where 40,000 Chinese live, the largest group of these people living together outside of China. We attended the Chinese theater, about six musicians sat on the stage and made horrible noises come out of strange instruments while three Chinese girls in elaborate costumes stood perfectly still in the middle of the stage and recited for minutes at a time in high, thin, monotonous tones. Occasionally a scene shifter would bring out an article and a painted sign telling what the article was supposed to represent, a glass of water placed on a table with a large painted sign in front of it became a river and a black stick with a red ribbon tied to one end of it was the horse upon which the maiden crossed the river when she was pursued by the villian. The hero was a highly decorated Chinaman who strode about the stage while the musicians made thunder and he roared in a deep voice. It was very interesting to us for about 30 minutes but it amused the Chinese until 1 o'clock in the morning.

We visited the Casino, an edition of Monte Carlo. The gardens were lovely with flowering plants, beautiful trees and wonderful fountains. The Casino is a large, white stone building which might be taken for a handsome country club with a restaurant and cabaret in one end and a number of enormous rooms filled with every known device for gambling. Crowds of men and women in evening clothes were playing the various games and pitting their wits against machines, for most of the wheels and games were of a mechanical nature. It was neither conceivable nor understandable to an inexperienced onlooker.

$50,000 Restriction

Havana is a beautiful city with fine, modern homes and splendid public buildings, the new federal building is to cost eight million dollars. The restricted building districts have magnificent homes and landscaped boulevards, these districts are developed by the realtors and kept up until all of the lots are sold, then the maintenance of the parks and boulevards is assumed by the city. One district had been started when sugar was high and no home is to cost less than $50,000, there were a number in it that had been built at that time but it appears that those realors may be taking care of those parks for quite some time to come if they do not lower that restriction. The university campus and buildings where the pan-American conference was held is as fine as can be imagined anywhere. It is a clean city, the Cubans are courteous and hospitable to the tourists, English is spoken everywhere and it is a most delightful place to go. We recommend it to you for your next trip.

Much love

MARGUERITE E. WOLFF.

ABOARD FOR TRIP TO PERU

S. S. Oropesa,
Feb. 5, 1928.

Dear Pearl:

We started for the S. S. Oropesa at 3 o'clock this afternoon and succeeded in getting on board at seven. The ship did not dock so that everything, including passengers, was loaded from small launches.

When we arrived at the dock, Mister and I got lost in the confusion, our baggage disappeared, our party was gone, we could find no one who spoke English and we had no idea where to go. We knew that we would not be lost long but we realized in those few disturbing moments just how difficult traveling in a foreign country might be. The contract for loading our baggage was let and sublet and having hours to wait the chief argued with one black boy about the price until the station master finally interceded; after much talk and more head nodding and hand waving a price was agreed upon at about $3 less than the original charges and $4 or $5 more than the boys had any idea of getting.

We jumped down into a wiggling wet launch and were taken out to the Oropesa where our launch crowded in between other launches and we pushed in between one man with a chair on top of his head that he was taking some place, (any way he was assured of a comfortable seat on the boat) and a woman with a crying baby and climbed up the waving stairway to the deck of the Oropesa, mighty glad to be there.

The S. S. Oropesa is an English boat, about a 16,000 ton boat, four times as large as the Abangarez, the United Fruit company boat, as large a boat as travels the West coast and as the canal can accommodate. The decks were large, there was a swimming tank and a small store where a seemingly unlimited number of articles could be purchased. There were three classes of passengers which is not so good for it is much more pleasant to have the freedom of the whole ship rather than to be confined to any part of it. The social salon was a large beautiful room as was the dining salon. The cabins were comfortable and large enough to have our trunks with us. The entire boat was spotless.

We explored the ship and each others' cabins and then went out on deck to bid Havana farewell. It was as wonderful to leave Havana by night as to come in by day. The city is effectively lighted and the rows of lights on the boulevards, the lighted buildings, all glowing in the brightest moonlight made us forget how long we stood until the lights became tiny dancing stars in the night.

That beautiful harbor, the fairy city in the distance, the tropical moon and the deck of a ship—we could not recommend it to any bachelor who wanted to remain satisfied to his lot. The Hired Hand sighed out loud and openly lamented the fact that he had just come on board, we know that you can appreciate his feelings.

Affectionately,

Harrowing Battles With Riffians And Hardships Told by Deserters

By Universal Service.

GIBRALTAR, March 31.—Strangeness of far cities, harrowing battles by day and by night against the desert Riffians, and unending hours laboring in the heat of the Moroccan mid-days, where mingled in the story told Universal Service by two Britons who escaped from the French Foreign Legion.

The English fighters, Charles Edward Jacks, and Albert Clements, both of London, reached Gibraltar after having walked 250 miles over the mountains to Tangier. Jacks was a member of the British artillery during the World war. He explained his reason for deserting from the Foreign Legion in the following words:

Fought Riffians.

"I fought with other bodies of the Foreign Legion continuously against the Riffians. We fought both day and night. Our food and water were of the worst. Continuous rains and snow made our tents uninhabitable, and many fell sick, but no doctors and no hospitals were available."

Recounting of his entry into the legion, Jacks explained that he had "served in the Royal artillery for two and a half years during the World war, and was demolished in 1920. I was employed at Swanage, Dorsetshire, until the end of the season when I went to London. As I could get no work, I decided to enroll in the Foreign Legion, thinking it was like the British army."

From the entry into the ranks of the French Foreign Legion after a visit to the French consul-general in London, Jacks told Universal Servise of his experience as follows:

Five Cents Daily.

"I was supplied with a ticket for Calais, and then went to Dunkirk, where I signed on for my engagement with the legion for five years at the daily pay of five French sous (equivalent to five cents in American money). I stayed at Dunkirk at the Gilminot barracks for two days, and then went to Marseilles. From there I sailed in a cattle boat to Oran in Algeria.

"From Oran, I marched with other legionnaires for 60 miles, and passed through Algerian garrisons. The heat was terrific. Belabbes, the Foreign Legion's headquarters in Algeria, was reached in the first week in February.

"After a few weeks of military training, I was sent with hundreds of legionnaires to Morroco, where I found a few British and Americans, and made their acquaintance.

"The thing that surprised me most was the large number of Germans serving with the Foreign Legion.

"At the end of the war, the legionnaires were kept busy road-making, and erecting frontier posts. For this work we had to carry big rocks.

"Frequently we were imprisoned without justification, and legionnaires were often imprisoned if they complained of heavy work. I served a term of imprisonment and underment 'pelote'—carrying on my back sand bags weighing 60 pounds for hours and hours.

Escape Planned.

"Owing to the extremely strict discipline, rough treatment and scarcity of food, I decided to escape. Knowing Clements, and thinking two heads better than one, I proposed to him that we should both escape. After a few days' consideration we decided to abandon the camp at Fez together.

"We walked more than 250 miles along the roughest of roads and over mountains, and passed many military posts, including Petit Jean, Larache and Ceuta. Spanish and French guardsmen demanded passports near Larache, and I produced a British army discharge certificate. The Spaniard could not read it, but allowed us to pass.

"All the way on our trek to Tangier, we fed on Arab bread called casera, and drank dirty rain water from the ditches."

IN THE GLOW OF THE CAMP FIRE

The Wa-ki-ki group met Wednesday afternoon in their club room at the First Presbyterian church. A business meeting was held and the following officers were elected: President, Virginia Wiest; vice-president, Georgia Johnson; secretary, Jean Gullahon; treasurer, Mary Lou Hull. Plans were made to hold a candy sale Saturday afternoon.

The Alahi group held a business meeting in their club room at the Catholic church hall Wednesday afternoon. Some of the dresses made for the Red Cross in connection with the Camp Fire national birthday honor were on display.

Members of the Tami-aLewa group met at the home of Mrs. A. A. McIlheran, 2012 Wilson street, Thursday evening at 7 o'clock and from there they hiked to Weeks park where they cooked their supper of corn chowder, baked biscuits, cocoa, salad, roasted apples and marshmallows. Plans were made to hold the next meeting at the home of the guardian, Miss Birdie Simmons, 1626 Eleventh street, and practice songs for the Council Fire to be held at the Municipal Golf club. Those present were: Mrs. Viola Thomas, Miss Dorothy Rollins, Miss Katye Reeves, Miss Martha Temple, Mrs. J. A. Bell. Miss Therressa Kaufman, Miss Phyllis Creighton, the guardian, Miss Birdie Simmons, the assistant guardian, Mrs. Maude Bartholomew, and Miss Mary McIlheran, local executive.

The Guardians' association will hold the monthly meeting Tuesday evening at the local headquarters in the Memorial auditorium. All guardians are requested to bring a report of all girls that have completed all of the requirements for the national birthday honor.

Yakoma group met at K. C. hall Friday afternoon. Plans were completed for a hike Saturday afternoon to Havener park. Mary Terressa Boyle, Kathleen Medlinger, Alma Nickjas, and Margaret Davis, who are working on their fire makers' rank will prepare and serve supper. The group will visit the boy scout museum at the First Presbyterian church next Wednesday afternoon. Those attending the meeting were: Mary Terressa Boyle, Alma Nicklas, Grace Hall, Kathlyn Medlinger, Evelyn van Emden, Margaret Davis and the guardian, Mrs. Hyland.

The Ahsonzorg group of Reagan junior high, Miss Ginnifred Elrod guardian, went to Havener's park on Wednesday afternoon for an outing. Miss Mary McIlheran taught the girls eight different blazes. Each girl earned the Camp Fire honorbead for knowing six blazes for trail blazing. The girls also learned how to make the plaster of paris casts, making two casts of tracks found in the bank of Holliday creek in the park. The Camp Fire blessing was learned and sung before the picnic lunch was enjoyed. A number of girls turned in garments for the birthday exhibit at Perkins-Timberlake. Plans were made for the next meeting to be held at the school Friday at the regular club period.

Letters from Miss Edith Crump who has gone to Monroe, La., as Camp Fire executive, tell of interesting work being done. Camp Fire Girls held a birthday council fire, are having hikes and interesting meetings. Miss Crump has organized the Guardian association, has met with the local council, camp committee, and has made talks before the P. T. A. of Monroe.

She sends her greetings to all of her friends in Wichita Falls and especially to those who have written her such interesting letters.

Cantawaya group met at the home of their guardian, Mrs. J. C. Mathis Friday afternoon and checked the work done on earning the birthday honor, each girl reporting the requirements she has completed. Plans were made to hold a candy sale to earn money to pay the annual dues of the group. Those present were: Winnelle Ward, Mary Katherine Ward, Betty Jane Sehmann, Eleanor Weiler, Loraine Mathis, Lois Corbin, Beyyt Lee Cossey, Estelle McPhail and the guardian, Mrs. J. C. Mathis. Mrs. Mathis has just recently taken over this group since the former guardian, Mrs. Frank W. Jones, has moved to Big Spring where Mr. Jones has entered the insurance and real estate business in connection with his oil interests there. Local headquarters is very happy to have Mrs. Mathis to take this splendid group of 20 girls and appreciate so much her co-operation.

Drama Department Will Exhibit Work Of Local Painter

By MRS. LUTHER HOFFMAN.

That "A prophet is without honor in his own country" can not be said of the Wichita Falls vicinity. More than any town of its size Wichita Falls is proud of the talent and genius displayed by its citizens. The artists and musicians growing up in the town do not fail to have hearty appreciation and applause from their home town people.

Prominent in that group of talented youth is Mary Lou Thomas Patterson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mack Thomas, who is exhibiting a most marked and unusual talent for portrait painting with uncanny skill at portraying likeness. After study and association among the Taos artists she has gained a technique and color sense that combined with her ability to portray likness and character equip her for professional portrait painting.

The art department of the Womans Forum appreciates the opportunity to present Mrs. Patterson and her pictures to art lovers on Thursday at 3 o'clock in the Womans Forum building. During the year this organization has shown several exhibits of excellent pictures by southern, eastern and western artists. This exhibit of Mrs. Patterson's is a fitting climax of the year's work.

One of her most unusual compositions is a portrait of Mrs. Hill of Abilene, a little elderly lady whose face shows a gentle sweetness and calm that comes only to those whose strength of character has withstood the ravages to time and trouble.

Mrs. Patterson especially catches the character in the faces of elderly people and children. One of her children's portraits is of Billy Bullington, son of Mr. and Mrs. Orville Bullington of Wichita Falls. Billy is about 4 years old and his eyes twinkle in the portrait this young artist has painted of him almost as in life.

Some of the old more established artists are prophesying a great future for Mrs. Patterson with her marked ability and power of application.

Women of City Find Life Work In Many Unusual Occupations

By MARIE THERESA
The Record News Staff

A WOMAN may follow a calling of profession in life, and still be fundamentally gregarious. The time when a woman who forfeited the places alloted women, that of housekeeper and society, was considered somewhat out of line with other women, is past.

A brief talk with the young ladies shown today, chosen for their prominence in the business and professional fields of the city, has disclosed the fact that they have passed successfully the psychological test of womanhood. They display an affection for humanity that cannot be confined to one small household and have for that reason chosen a wider field for their efforts.

Instead of satisfying their natural gregariousness with social activities with the other women of their circles, they have gained the same end by dedicating time and effort toward a goal that holds the maximum of interest to themselves and the greatest amount of service to others.

Now for a brief chat with these women to see what motive has actuated them to choose a career rather than home life.

Woman in Business

Mrs. J. W. Lomax, better known as Elwyn Lomax, is one of the most interesting as well as one of the most attractive women of the city. She is associated with the new Elwyn shop in the Hamilton building which caters to exclusive trade in women's apparel.

Mrs. Lomax shows a great amount of human interest in seeing people well dressed and therefore mentally at ease. She has taken for life work the task of attiring becomingly as great a number of persons as her time will permit.

Previous to owning her own shop, Mrs. Lomax was buyer for one of the largest department stores in the city. But owning her own shop has been her ambition during the 10 or 12 years that she has been engaged in tuying ready-to-wear, and she expresses herself as now achieving the greatest amount of pleasure from her day's work. She is the mother of a 12-year-old daughter, Betty Claire.

• • • •

Dr. Maud Lindsey did a bit of wandering about before she finally found that one place which would guarantee her an interest for life. After pursuing other types of work until they came to an end so far as her interest in life was concerned, she found herself and began to study medicine.

Devoted to Children

Now, one must not get the impression that it took Doctor Lindsey a lifetime to find out these things; one look at her youthful femininity will dispel any such illusion. She is feminine in appearance, and can be called professional looking only when she is intensely interested in a case.

Children's diseases have attracted her the most and she is devoting her time to an extended study of diseases peculiar to infants. She is a graduate of the University of Colorado and received her training in medicine at Washington university of St. Louis, being graduated with the class of 1924.

Following graduation she was for two and a half years on the staff of the children's department in the Mayo Brothers' clinic, Rochester, Minn.

She has been in Wichita Falls but a short time, but has made a large number of friends by her easy courtesy and her professional efficiency.

• • • •

The lady who keeps people from the inner sanctum which conceals the town's singing mayor, has taken a task on her shoulders. One accurate guess would be that she is probably pretty well acquainted with a larger number of women than the casual observer would imagine from her position of stenographer.

She Keeps Secrets

Miss Maurine Williams knows a great many things that she never tells and the person who imagines that a woman cannot keep a secret has overlooked such persons as "Shep's secretary."

Besides enjoying her long run of work, Miss Williams is disappointed in her looks, though mercy knows, she need not be. But what girl isn't who is neither a blonde nor a brunette? She would smile, just as she is doing in the photo on this page, quite often, if only she were

One thousand guests are expected to attend this dinner which will be in the crystal ballroom of the Gunter hotel.

Tuesday, May 29th, will be devoted to a meeting of the general federation executive committee, a meeting of all state presidents and a general federation board meeting all at the Gunter hotel, convention headquarters. So much for the business of the day which will be lightened by a tea in the afternoon at the Woman's club, a courtesy extended biennial delegates by the seven districts of the Texas federation.

These preliminary meetings and entertainments work up to the actual business of the convention which will be opened formally Tuesday evening, May 29, and get down to work with the reports of the convention committees, officers, and standing committees Wednesday morning, May 30. That afternoon there will be greetings from the general federation past presidents, honorary vice presidents and representatives of affiliated organizations. In the evening, the state presidents will be in charge of the program.

The one day free from work in the whole convention will be "play day," Friday, June 1, when the women of San Antonio entertain the delegates, the members of the general federation board, the state president and the state directors with an army review, a ride and a chicken barbecue.

The final program of the convention on June 7 will be in charge of Mrs. John D. Sherman, president, who will present the incoming officers for the next two years.

News Notes of P.-T. A. Council

Many members of Parent-Teacher organizations in this district, are laboring under the impression that they should send delegates and annual summarized P.-T. A. reports for the year's work, to either the first, or ninth district meeting. This is not necessary, now that the new district has been officially created. On the other hand, the whole-hearted support of every association and member, should be given the local district work so that it may prosper and grow under its new regime of service. The new 13th P.-T. A. district has a bright future before it, and bids fair to be heralded as the "Lucky 13th District."

Formerly a part of the first and eighth P.-T. A. districts respectively, the thirteenth district is made up of a compact area including 14 north Texas counties as follows: Hardeman, Foard, Knox, Haskell, Throckmorton, Baylor, Wilbarger, Wichita, Archer, Young, Jack, Clay, Montague, Wise.

The district P.-T. A. organization meeting to be held April 18-20 at First Christian church of this city, should have not less than 200 Parent-Teacher association members in attendance on the three-day session.

Plans are going forward for the convention in every department of the work, and delegates over the district are writing letters of acceptance stating they shall be delighted to be numbered among those present for charter membership. District officers are to be chosen from the four corners of the district, and names of eligibles for these positions of trust should be mailed promptly to Mrs. Claude Woods, chairman of the central committee.

WHITMAN'S FOR EASTER

WHITMAN'S always seems to anticipate the nation's candy wishes, and the Easter packages are a special triumph, both in attractive wrappings and delectable contents. The "Nest" package, filled with eggs and rabbits, heads the list, with the popular Salmagundi in Easter wrappings, a close second. The Whitman's fruit and nut, chocolate covered eggs in Easter packages are a wonderful new treat, and come in half-pound and pound sizes at 45c and 90c, respectively. All of these have arrived at the Haley Drug Stores. Phone 4383 or 7740.

IT IS really surprising what modern cleaning, coupled with scrupulous care, can do with the finest and daintiest of apparel. If you haven't any new clothes for Easter, you can have clothes that look new by sending them to the American Cleaners and Dyers, 1302 Lamar. They call and deliver anywhere. Phone 5101 or 5102.

COLVERT'S EASTER MOLDS

HOW would you like a brick of Colvert's rich, pure ice cream, with a little yellow chick in its center, for your Easter Sunday dessert? On this day of new frocks, bonnets and general rejoicing, dinner should take on a gala appearance itself, and what better way for achieving this than through the old reliable dessert, which everyone likes, in lovely tinted molds or special Easter bricks. Colvert's offers rabbits, eggs, chicks, Easter lilies (complete, even to the yellow stamens), and cups of their incomparable vanilla, filled with frozen whipped cream, surmounted by tiny colored ice cream egg. This week's hostesses should place orders Monday by phone 3165 or through their Colvert dealer.

Modern Sense From the Gems of Literature

"TO BE or not to be, that is the question"—the Hamlets of the world ask themselves this, but we others (presuming that moderns do sometimes stop to think), sooner or later, answer a parallel and equally vital self-put query. It concerns not a choice between existence and death, but between existence and life—"To live or not to live," that is our question.

Ask yourself if, at the close of each day, it is possible for you to say, "I am one step nearer to realizing my ambitions—toward really living." How unsatisfactory many of the answers must be, yet more dangerous still is the period which rapidly follows—the time when you will fail to see a goal, and subside into a coma of smug contentment with little things, leaving the large ones to someone else, without even a mental qualm of shame.

Striving and accomplishment—these two things turn existence into life. But how accomplish? Almost without exception, a successful career of any type calls for sound financial backing. Begin Monday to accumulate a reserve fund, which will enable you to take advantage of the opportunities which present themselves, and to live life, not as a plodder with sensibilities blunted until he would call the dreams that once were his absurd—but free to take enjoyment and inspiration from the cultural side of life undeterred by the numberless worries of financial subservience.

No matter how small your purse, or how great your purpose, you can accumulate an "ambition fund" at the Wichita State Bank and Trust Company, where courtesy and efficiency make it easy to save.

FOR HEALTHY BABIES

A RECENT article by Doctor A. R. Ward gives evidence which proves conclusively that infantile paralysis is included in the list of diseases spread by raw milk—a fact that adds one more argument for pasteurization. Mothers should insist on the milk of Producers Creamery, because it is bottled fresh daily, is rich in cream, and is pasteurized. Fresh milk is not only indispensable to baby's health, but it is his main food. Assure yourself of the best pasteurized milk by becoming a regular patron of Producers Creamery, 1209 Indiana. Phone 3763.

IT IS not necessary to wear old clothes to the Easter service to stay within the allowance. The De Luxe Dry Cleaners will successfully dye a last year's favorite frock in any of the new shades, from the full range of smart blues, dark and bright, to spring greens, vivid reds and yellows, fashionable and serviceable beiges—any tint desired! And in a new shade, with its lustrous fresh ness returned, is not a dress now? Send one to the De Luxe and see—those who have done so once are doing so again. Even the light colored summer coat can be dyed a new pastel shade if you wish. Perhaps these coats and dresses are in no way faded or spotted, and only need cleaning, then send them to the De Luxe as well, but if you are all weary of them, it would be advisable to make it a dyeing order, for here it is done expertly.

After all, Easter can come within the budget. Phone 7174 and ask for the De Luxe driver to call.

ADD to the gladness of Easter day by sending Easter greeting cards. Among the wide assortment of attractive ones at Lovelace's Book Store you are sure to find a suitable message on an artistic card.

THANKS to the courtesy of Mr. Harrison, all who pass by the Wilford-Harrison Drug Store, these days, are delighted by an Easter window of little rabbits and (far more important) an array of baby photographs from Nossett's Studio. Every mother should see these studies. They show Baby just as he is, unhampered by poses. Dial 6070 for an appointment at Nossett's.

New Tu-Tone Frigidaires of Rare Beauty

DON'T fail to see the premier showing of the new Tu-Tone Frigidaires at the Texas Electric Service Company this week. They are things of rare beauty heretofore undreamed of in electric refrigerators, and this is not to be wondered at when you discover that eminent style authorities designed this new model, leading color artists worked out its color combination of Tu-Tone exteriors in lustrous porcelains of gray and white (white porcelain-lined) and the world's foremost designers created the locks and metal work. The result, as you will find, is a cabinet that combines all elements of style and classic beauty in perfect harmony.

But it is not beauty alone that has won Frigidaire first place in the manufacture and sale of electric refrigerators. Today more Frigidaires are used than all of the rest combined. Mechanically, it is dependable under all operating conditions, so that science has contributed as much to its development as art.

Then there is the economical side to be considered. The new model is built to suit the needs of small households as well as large establishments, and may be had in a variety of sizes, and on terms any budget can afford. As for the price of operation, the experience of users proves an average saving in food and operating expenses of $156.36 per year! Quite a record, isn't that? And just think, by making a small deposit, and using the easy monthly payment plan, you can place the Frigidaire in your own home, where it will save this amount—oh, it's a real paying investment.

The cleanliness, convenience and health protection Frigidaire brings into the home are elements that have such a vital bearing on the welfare of the family, that mere dollars cannot compute their value.

See the new Tu-Tone Frigidaire and hear the terms at the:

FOR MOTHER'S DAY

THERE is one gift for Mother's Day that invariably brings Mother joy. You may give it year after year, but it is always new, and always the thing she prefers to any other remembrance—it's your photograph. But you mustn't expect her to cherish a poor likeness and, even when economy is a consideration, you need take no risk as to the result, for at Merrill Ellis' Studio, in the Kahn Building, you may be assured of artistic work at a nominal price.

MAJESTIC

YESTERDAY I saw Emil Jannings in "The Last Command." It's superb—you mustn't allow anything to keep you away from this Majestic attraction! Once more the great European character actor proves his ability to present a tragedy to the happy-ending-loving Americans, with such forceful acting that we cannot but applaud. Here is an outline in scattered phrases of "The Last Command"—a great warrior, beloved by his men . . . a traitor and a girl . . . revolution . . . poverty . . . and authentic views of Hollywood inside the movie studio. Evelyn Brent and William Powell give Mr. Jannings worthy support.

If one particularly thrilling incident may be mentioned as outstanding in this thrill-packed production, I'd say it is that which depicts the cutting of the Trans-Siberian railway.

THE Wichita Cleaning and Dye Works—that name signifies a great deal at Easter time. It means that those who find themselves a little short of funds just now, needn't find Easter a burden. Last year's favorites will look entirely new after a trip to Wichita's Cleaner, for the service there is so complete that the daintiest frock may be dyed a new shade or freed from spots without the slightest fear of the outcome. Don't forget to send the children's things before Easter, too, and of course you know that husband, dad and brother are three staunch believers in the Wichita. Phone 4377 and have the driver call for the family's Easter apparel.

EASTER is the dividing line between spring and summer. As surely as the equator bands the region of torrid days, Easter marks off the days when ice is indispensable. With modern conveniences, all that is necessary is to secure the courteous service of a reliable ice factory. This, the Wichita Ice Company is — their prompt and dependable delivery will not fail on the very day an ice-bag for sickness is imperative, neither will the ice man pass you by when plans have been made for that wonderful home-made ice cream, nor arrive after the milk has soured.

It is the earnest wish of the Wichita Ice Company to offer friendly and economical service 365 days of the year, and their patrons find that they do so with a pure, clear ice and a courtesy, which together form one of the firmest foundations of la cuisine.

ALL ABOARD FOR A VACATION WITHOUT MONEY WORRIES!

TO ENJOY this summer's vacation to the full, you should begin now with a travel fund at the North Texas Building and Loan Association, 822 Scott. Their 6 per cent savings accounts are especially convenient for this purpose, as they involve neither fees, nor obligations for regular payments, and may be started with your spare change (any amount from one dollar up being acceptable). You'd be surprised to find how quickly systematic deposits mount up into "real money" at the North Texas, for not only is the money you save accumulating, but all the time it's earning for you a neat 6 per cent compounded semi-annually!

The important thing is to begin now. Don't let another of these swiftly passing spring days go by before you take this step toward making the trip of 1928 the most comfortable, free and fun-filled jaunt you've ever had. Remember, Easter is just exactly one week away, and after Easter—why it's no time at all from then until summer and travel time!

About the first of June every train whistle, time table, and steamer or resort advertisement will be a certain reminder that, regardless of the family tree, you have Gypsy blood. That's why April is the time to begin putting a regular amount aside for this year's vacation! With a nice sum all ready in advance to practically pay for ticket, hotel bills and the little luxuries, that are half the fun, you'll be a really joyous wanderer. At no place is this so easily accomplished as at the North Texas.

LET THE NORTH TEXAS MAKE YOU A ROYAL VAGABOND!

Dorinda's Diary

THE telephone was ringing so hard it bounced around on the table.

I knew it was Jezica, for I had so much to do I couldn't see my way out, and it is at such times she calls. She started right in: "Dorinda, my club is having some sort of spring party next week, and we all have to bring a poem and I've tried everywhere to get one—new you know—and as a last resort I'm calling on you—yes, I know I told you I wouldn't ask you any more and, of course I know you can't write a real poem, but any sort of little jingle will do—it doesn't have to have any sense in it just so it has 'spring' and 'April' in it—I just have to take something. I always try to do my part in the club—"

"But, Jezica," I interupted her, "I just can't—you know it takes time to write even a little jingle with no sense in it—and I do all my housework, as you know; I have a man working in the yard I have to oversee; sewing is just stacked up and I'm expecting company; I have to write a paper for my own club, and—"

"Oh, I know," said Jezica, "but you can just leave your work and do it after you write the poem—it oughtn't to take you long, the sort you write—tell the man to just come back tomorrow for the yard work; Miss Jones will be tickled pink to get the sewing; nobody listens to club papers, so you'll just be wasting your time writing one—and you have too much company, any way; it's a wonder to me you don't have nervous prostration—this will be a good time to get out of it—just tell 'em you have a little writing to do for me and you'll have 'em another time and then just don't do it—that's easy."

"But Jezica, this company is from out-of-town and—" The telephone shook. "Dorinda, don't dare say you won't write that poem. You wrote one for Sara yesterday and one of the same silly little sort will do me, but I must have it. I'll surely be mad if you don't do it—and have it ready at 2 o'clock, I'll come by as soon as I get a shampoo and marcel." I could tell the receiver was ready to go up and I spoke hurriedly and bravely, "Jezica, you will have to come or send some one to do my work if I'm to write your poem, otherwise I just won't have ti—". The receiver hit before I finished.

I TURNED away from the phone and my disordered house and I stared sadly at each other and the sewing stacked on the machine, jumped down and waltzed gayly around the room. The cat got under a chair and regarded me with wary half-closed eyes, for she saw I was already miles away pursuing a poem that didn't have any sense in it! And she wasn't taking any chances on being stepped on in the pursuit.

Marguerite Wilkinson, speaking of poetry and the causes leading up to its writing, says, there must be an ecstasy brought about by winds of fervor; that ecstasy can never be produced by a wind machine in a beauty parlor that "it comes only from the primeval wind that bloweth where it listeth." But surely having the one who is driving me to poetry sit under a wind machine in a beauty parlor, will help to bring me to a state of ecstasy," said the foolish side of my mind that is always in working order.

"Having her sit there while you try to do her dirty work will drive you into a state of Satanic rage, if you ask me," said the sensible side of my mind that is always out of order. I heeded neither voice; they are always quarreling. I was listening to the primeval wind that was blowing where it listeth. In fact, come to think of it, I had listened to nothing else for days—and surely there must be an ecstasy somewhere about, by now, for there was fervor enough in the wind and it blew everything in the house showed it carriedeth as well as blowedeth. And as for listeth—looking at the yard strewn with paper and all sort of refuse clinging to trees and bushes, showed the wind was strong on listeth—if that word means going exactly where it pleases and doing what it pleases.

I LIKE to listeth myself. Great thought! I'll get outside and listeth and pick up an ecstasy—I got outside but it was the wind's day to listeth—not mine In a few seconds I was inside the house again, but thanks be, clutched in my hands was one gritty little ecstasy I grabbed as I was being blown through the front door. If you are a member of Jezica's club you might just as well read it now.

She makes a face at company,
Spring calls March her "bad little girl."
Her face is always dirty
And her hair out of curl.
And breaks the cup that holds her tea.

Her little sister, April,
Full of smiles, gentle rain
And manners of apple-green,
Gives March a secret pain!"

HERBERT WITHERSPOON, internationally famous, and his famous wife, Madame Hinkle, were added to the galaxy of noted visitors Wichita Falls has entertained this year, when they paid us a visit last week. Mr. Witherspoon is an example of "knowledge is power." He knows so much about so many things he dominates any group in which he moves, although, like all great people, he is modest and unassuming. Singer, teacher, educator, painter, architect, composer and student of law are a few of the things in which he knows a little more than the best, but he is best known as a singer and teacher. According to Goldsmith's definition, Witherspoon is a "citizen of the world," for he says he "loves his own country without hating the natives of other countries and is most undaunted in defending its laws and liberty without despising all the rest of the world."

He has been most every place in the world, has seen most every place worth seeing, yet his own home and the time he was a pupil of Edward MacDowell are the two things he likes best to dwell upon. He thinks the unrest of the present generation lies largely in loosening hold of the home. He summed it all up by saying, "No matter if your home is in a tent it is the spirit for which it stands that counts. Be careful what comes into it. Be careful what goes out of it." Those words should burn so deeply into the minds and hearts of home tenders. They should be framed and hung on the walls of our thoughts and looked at daily. They should be strung up and down the streets of our decisions to light us when we lose our way. They should be buttoned on with the garments in which we clothe our children.

LAST Sunday afternoon I was one among many, privileged to visit another "citizen of the world," but Goldsmith's definition does not cover this man's claim to citizenship, for not only does he love his own country without hating the natives of others, but he loves his fellow man—even the "Yankees he once fought. And many of them came miles to shake his hand on his 90th birthday. Some of them came on the train and that started him thinking of the time he helped to fire (they were run with wood then) an only engine, on an only track in that part of Tennessee and ran it off into the river to keep the "Yanks" from getting it—I tried to find out if the "Yanks" ever found and raised it from the river, so I might tell everybody where the word "yanked" originated, but he was too busy shaking hands. I'll find out yet, for he has forgotten nothing—and how many things must have happened in 90 years!

Just think of the things he knows of this part of the country where he has lived 42 years! Think of the changes he has seen! Why his mind runneth back to the time before the Ford car, the "victer-roller" and the jazz orchestra made the welkin ring. How heavenly to have a place like that where one's mind may retire and put on a loose wrapper and bed room slippers—and rest and rest!

I LOOKED at this stately old man, B. N. Ferguson, standing on the "gallery" of the colonial home of his daughter, Mrs. J. F. Boyd, and thought his own father must have looked like that as he welcomed his guests to the old home noted for its hospitality. I wondered if his father had lived to be 90 if he would have kept up with world events, been interested in local politics and read everything—even club magazines, "to see what the women are up to now."

Iowa Park claims Mr. Ferguson as citizen, but "Uncle Ben," as he is affectionately called, is known and loved all over this part of the country and people from everywhere and from all walks of life came to pay him honor on his birthday. The editor of the Iowa Park Herald, who got out a special edition of his paper celebrating Mr. Ferguson's birthday, had a poem on the front page dedicated to him, two verses of which describe him:

"Serene, he folds his hands and waits
Today at fourscore years and ten,
A pattern of the highest type
Set up before tomorrow's men.

Upon his face we read the tale
A clean and upright life has told,
And hope, like him, to learn the art
Of gladly, wisely growing old."

The two lines,

"A pattern of the highest type

tell the beautiful story of why a special paper was gotten out in his honor and the pages of this unique paper are filled with words of praise from men and women who know every page of his quiet and noble life.

There's a merry twinkle in his eye as if he shared a kindly secret about us, with someone at whom he looks over our heads. No doubt he does. To have lived so long and so well must have peopled his thoughts with many gallant personages who still dwell there. To hear him speak of his wife in the tender voice that is hers, alone is like listening to "Love's Old Sweet Song" sung by every lover in every age, and we feel her presence as surely as if he still held her hand.

Dear old soldier,
Bravely standing,
With your face
Raised to the sun,
May your love be
First, to greet you
When at last
Your race is run.

WHEN every bush has a bud and a bird, proclaiming the wonderful miracle of spring and every heart is renewing its garment for the Eastertide, Galli-Curci's coming seemed as natural as the rest of the beauty that is never old and never new, yet ever new. That wonderful voice seemed a part of the melody that is just beginning to quicken our beings, that will be at full tide on Easter morning.

As I listened to her I could close my eyes and "hear the angels sing" on Galilee's hill. Her voice helps to "roll the stone away" from many weary hearts and I saw many rapt little faces among the children in the seats set aside by the forum for them. It is such things as Galli-Curci's voice that wakes us to an understanding of the things the Womans Forum is putting within our reach and an appreciation of what the Memorial auditorium means as a housing medium between these things and the people.

DIAMOND IN PEA.

LONDON—John Spear, two-years-old, was taken ill after eating a dinner of peas. His mother gave him an emetic, with the result that the boy vomited a cut diamond. His father brought the diamond to the shop where he purchased the peas and was glad to get $10, since the boy had suffered no serious effects. The shop owner carried the gem to the jeweler, who bought the diamond for $250. But how did the diamond get into the pea?

allowed to do so. But seeing the city mayored properly leaves little time for outside activities.

Miss Williams was born in Henrietta but left at the age of two to wander about Oklahoma a while and then return to Texas. She has occupied her present place since 1925.

Miss Berniece Apple places on record some of the most important details in life. She is deputy registrar of vital statistics for the city and knows just who is born and when, just who is dead and the number of quarantined homes in the city and the exact color of the flag that has been placed in the most conspicuous place.

Miss Apple is a Wichita Falls girl and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Apple of 1206 Sixteenth street. She is a good-looking brunette and, she too, is disappointed in her looks—she is a wee bit too slender for her height, she says.

Miss Florence Jackson is one of the city's best known young ladies, even though she was born in Plainview. She occupies the place of managing editor of the chamber of commerce publication, and with the exception of a year's leave of absence spent in Europe, she has had the position for the last four years.

Miss Jackson says that she lacks the urge to write original copy but that she finds a great deal of pleasure in recording the notable events as they are enacted by those about her. She is extremely interested in people and what they are about.

When quizzed about the "how come" of her taking up this type of writing, she firmly said that she would never tell that. And that's that. Miss Jackson was graduated at the College of Industrial Arts at Denton in 1914.

Miss Myrle (and if you dare add a "t" between that "r" and "l," off comes your head) Neeley has the largest family imaginable to take care of. It taxes the strength of even a person of her energy and ambition. For Miss Neeley is secretary of the community chest and meets and aids a great number of charitable cases daily.

Bosses City's Largest Family

Miss Neeley came to Wichita Falls from the New York Charity Organization society in April. Previous to that time she had been six years with charitable organizations in New Orleans.

The young lady is intensely human and has had an insatiable desire to find out why people act like human beings. She is interested in animate things and has almost forsaken the field of inanimate things. She says that she really should say that she is doing settlement work because of unrequited love, but neither she nor this paper could unearth anything animate about that tale.

• • • •

Miss Ella Merle Mathis, instructor in one of the expression studios of the city, just sort of drifted into that work. She took up teaching on a bet and now is "crazy" about it. That's the way it happens, too. And now she has been six years a teacher.

She was the pupil of Mrs. E. L. Fulton for a number of years and studied for a year in the Cutis School of Expression at Boston. Then she came home and went to work. She is a graduate of the College of Industrial Arts, Denton. Miss Mathis is the daughter of Mrs. Dixie Mathis, 1409 Grant street.

• • • •

Miss Ann Ferguson (recently become Mrs. R. E. Cole) has beautified more people than almost any other young lady in town. So she is the proud parent of much beauty that might otherwise have lain dormant.

She has made a thorough study of the human face and head as well as the human form, and has endeavored to get the most from each combination that comes to her hands.

Miss Ferguson has been head of the Beauty shop in the Orchid shop for a number of years, and has been a highly trusted operator in all phases of beauty culture.

Local Couple Wed As Event of Wednesday

The Rev. Guy Curtis read the ring ceremony in the presence of relatives and friends. Miss Lucy Harrison attended the bride and Horace Barron attended the groom.

Mrs. Moore is a young business woman, being connected with the Clinic hospital, as secretary to Dr. C. A. Wilcox. Mr. Moore is connected with the Moore-Richolt Lumber company. Mr. and Mrs. Moore left immediately after the ceremony for Houston, where they will take a boat for New York City.

All the little girls in the neighborhood know Fred John Ebner. Isn't he a handsome youngster? He has brown hair and brown eyes and dimples galore. He is going to be an orchestra conductor when he grows up, he already has a large collection of junior instruments and spends many hours each day instructing his imaginary band.

Fred John is only four years old, but he is well advanced for a boy of his age and is going to start to school next year.

Daddy is going to be proud of this young man some day for he already likes to make money—and keep it.

Fred John Ebner is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred D. Ebner, 1614 Fourteenth street.

Music - Musicians

By MME. COBINA WRIGHT.
Famous Songstress and Society Leader

NEW YORK, March 31.—Since describing a little luncheon party recently with Mr. and Mrs. Albert Spalding in which America's own violinist told me of his plans and habits, a correspondent from Shreveport, Louisiana, has written me asking me to tell something of the characteristics and attributes of the violinist's wife, reproaching me at some length for discussing on previous occasions the domestic inclinations of several foreign couples, yet never divulging how an American wife copes with the artistic temperament and environment.

No Affectations.

To begin with let me say that the Spaldings have none of the affectations often associated with those in the public eye. They are full of fun and energy, and each possess an enviable enthusiasm for living. I can't imagine "temperament," in the uncomplimentary sense of the word, ever disturbing their domestic peace. They are inseperable companions save on those occasions when because of hurried trips or difficult journeys, it is deemed inadvisable for Mrs. Spalding to accompany her husband on his concert tours.

Mary Spalding is a typical American woman of the highest and most refined standards, she finds the task of being an artist's wife the most delightful and inspiring of occupations. She considers that her husband's comfort and his art come before anything else in the world, but being a well-balanced young woman, she does not make a fetich of it. She loves her home, and takes great pride in it. An amiable housewife, the atmosphere of her home is always the essence of good taste and comfort.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Spalding love books and invariably discuss their ideas on the subjects they have read. While they do not always share the same point of view, they always manage by airing their views to each other, to reach an amicable understanding. In other words, I may add, there is a genuine bond of affection and understanding between these two charming people.

Prefers Violin.

Mrs. Spalding tells me that since she was a little girl, she has always adored the violin, and always went to violin recitals in preference to any other concerts. Her musical knowledge stands her in good stead since she has become a violinist's wife for like Merton's ideal, she is not only her husband's best pal, "but severest critic," and never hesitates to tell her husband her frank opinion of his playing. He, on the other hand tells me how greaty he values her criticisms, especially since he discovered that his wife's comments, after a public performance were invariably shared by the discriminating critic, Henderson, in his newspaper columns on the following day. No wonder Mary Spalding has the courage of her critical convictions.

In the winter time while in New York, the Spaldings spend nearly all their spare evenings in the theater for which Spalding has an insatible love, being an amateur actor of parts, I may add. In the summer time while "off duty," so to speak, they lead the life of two normal healthy Americans who love the out-of-doors.

They are both enthusiastic tennis players, preferring to be partners on the court as the best method of maintaining conjugal peace. Having won the men's singles in a tournament at Great Barrington, Mass., Spalding found himself a great favorite with the steward of the club, and was amused one day to overhear the following telephone conversation between the steward and a newspaperman inquiring for news . . . .

"Yes, this is the Great Barrington club! . . . . Yes, a good deal of tennis is now being played here . . . . Mr. Spaulding has just come in from the courts, he is our best player . . . . Yes, Mr. Albert Spalding . . . . Yes, I believe he does play the violin, too."

Mary Spalding told me of an amusing incident which occurred on a recent European tour she made with her husband. While on their way from Paris to London, they were the victims of a highly inquisitive custom's official. He had a decidedly wooden personality and plied them with numberless questions, prompted no doubt, by the stringency of the labor laws, though many of them seem anything but pertinent.

He elicited the fact that Spalding was a violinist and that Andre Benoist, who journed with them, was his accompanist, and then scrutinizing Mrs. Spalding, speculatively, finally asked:

"And what does this lady do in the company?"

"She merely endures it," replied Spalding.

On those occasions when she does not accompany her husband on his journeyings, Mrs. Spalding devotes her time to the many charitable enterprises in which she is interested, sees a great deal of her friends and plays indoor tennis.

Presents Puppy.

Some time ago Spalding presented his wife with a six-weeks-old wire haired puppy, and holding it in his arms he explaned, "I've brought you a bunch of love," whereupon despite its high fallutin' pedigree, they gave it the plebeian name of "Bunch!"

A green parrot is an important member of the Spalding household. Mrs. Spalding has taught him many tricks and recently when her husband was on tour she added numerous phrases to the musical repertoire of the bird, which is an uncanny whistler.

Despite her lavish attention, the parrot utterly ignored her as soon as Spalding returned. She obviously became a person of only secondary importance as the parrot deserting her entirely, perched itself on Albert's shoulder whenever he was practicing, and from that point of vantage would whistle seductively all the tunes which Mrs. Spalding had taught her. From which Mrs. Spalding gathered this was indeed a female bird!

Mothers:

Your babies are too precious to be subjects for any experiment, and it's worse than folly to "try" things on them when you can be sure. Plain, old-fashioned Castoria is making sick, feverish, fretful babies well and happy today just like it has been doing for over fifty years. Physicians recommend it and millions of mothers swear by it. It soothes crying, wakeful babies to sleep quicker than paregoric or any other opiate, and causes no harmful effects. It removes souring material from their little stomachs and intestines quicker than castor oil, and does it without griping or sickening. There's nothing quite like it for spells. colic, constipation, purely diarrhea, colds, or vegetable. Doctors declare it any of baby's little "upset" absolutely harmless to even the very youngest of infants, so you can use it as often as baby needs it. Its taste is delightful. Take a little yourself and see why "children cry for it." Only one thing to watch. Get genuine Castoria—the bottle bearing Fletcher's signature. It is not expensive. "Care and Feeding of Babies," the book worth its weight in gold to every mother and prospective mother, comes with every package.

Tales of Real Dogs :-: By Albert Payson Terhune

FELLOW: The Police Dog That Knows 300 Words

A roomful of grave scientists at Columbia university, sat for an hour last October, studying the mind of a dog—a German Shepherd (commonly known as "police dog") named "Fellow;" owned and exhibited by Mr. Jacob Herbert of Detroit.

Many hundreds of times, before that, a group of scientists has gathered around a dog; but usually in the idiotically criminal and criminally idiotic interests of vivisecton. At Columba, on that day, it was a dog's mental processes and not a dog's quivering and tortured body, which the scientific group were studying.

Jacob Herbert had brought Fellow to the animal psychology department of the university; that the police dog's boasted knowledge might be proven. Incidentally, Mr. Herbert exploded the theory of certain members of the psychology department that a dog cannot think and that a dog does not know the meanings of different words. He spoke to Fellow in a monotonous voice using word after word, without change of inflection and without any guiding gesture.

Invariably, the dog showed his understanding of the words' meanings. For example, Herbert, in that monotone would say, in effect:

"Turn your head. No, turn it the other way. . . . Look out of the window. . . . Jump down. No, jump down, the other side. . . . Suppose you go to the door. No" (as Fellow started toward the door) "never mind."

At once, on hearing the "Never mind!" Fellow checked his progress to the doorway and came back toward his master. He had understood the command and its coutermanding, as completely as would any human. Before the dog could reach his master, Herbert continued in the same expressionless tone:

"Never mind going to the door. Go to the wall instead and stand up against it. Now go outside into the hall; and wait for me there."

Later, Herbert bade him go over to some guest whose name the dog had heard only a few minutes earlier, and lay his head on her lap. He told the dog to "protect" another onlooker. Immediately, Fellow trotted over to the person to be protected; and took up his stand defensively in front of him.

Nor would he allow any one—not even his master—to approach the human he had been bidden to guard. His sense of obedience was so great that it included Herbert himself, when the latter tried to lay a hand on the shoulder of the person under protection.

Test after test, of brain and of powers of thinking, were put to the wise dog, for an entire hour. Lest there might be a suspicion that his master was signalling secretly to him Herbert went behind the screen and then into another room; and issued his orders unseen by

Nor would he allow . . . . even his own master to approach

Fellow. Always, the result was the same. As long as Fellow could hear the voice and understand the words it spoke, he obeyed.

Herbert had claimed that in certain respects Fellow has the intellect of a child eight years old. He was misquoted by several newspapers which said he claimed the dog had, in every way, an eight-year-old child's intellect. Herbert merely claimed that the intelligence covered certain things, and not everything.

For instance, he said that a dog has many instincts which no child of eight and no grown person can share but, on the other hand there are things an eight-year-old child has been taught which no dog can learn—such as reading and the distinguishing of the values of various coins, etc.

At the end of the tests, one of the psychologists, a Professor Lucien N. Warner, sized up his own reactions to the wonderful exhibition by saying:

"Animals obey commands, as sounds, rather than as words. Personally, we are of the opinion that the dog has learned to associate certain sounds, rather than words in the human sense, with the proper objects and commands."

With all due apologies to Professor Warner, I cannot understand what words are, if they are not "certain sounds." Words are nothing but "certain sounds." That is how we know the meaning of one word from another. When Fellow "learned to associate certain sounds with the proper objects and commands," he learned just precisely what you and I learned when we mastered English or any other language.

In brief, Fellow proved beyond any logical doubt, that he knew the meanings of more than three hundred simple words and what those words imply. He proved that he can reason out the changes of command and can use his brain as well as a marvelous memory. He proved that, as far as canine limitations permit him to go, he actually possesses the intelligence of an eight-year-old child.

To me—and I may be mistaken—the one stupid thing he did, throughout, was to "protect" a guest, from his own master's approach. Mr. Herbert does not agree with me that this was stupid; and perhaps he is right. Everyone to his own opinion.

If a father gives his eight-year-old son his pockerbook to guard I think the child would be a dunce not to give back the pocketbook to his father, on the latter's return. When Herbert told Fellow to protect a guest, I cannot see why the guest should have been protected against the loved master who had given the command. That seems to be carrying loyalty and obedience unduly far, I think.

Nevertheless, Fellow gave a magnificient performance: nor could the most sceptical of his audience trip him up in it. He showed a human comprehension of the meanings of words and phrases. He had shown pride at a word of approval. He had been downcast and ashamed at a word of blame, voiced in exactly the same tone. He was able to differentiate one stranger from another, after a single word of introduction. He had done a score of splendidly clever things.

Incidentally, I think he demonstrated to all fair-minded people that dogs can think and that they know one word from another. A wiseacre summed up the subject, back in the nineteenth century, when he said.

"You can teach a dog almost anything. The only trouble is, you've got to know more, to begin with, than the dog knows."

SCANTY ATTIRE BLAMED.

MILWAUKEE — The modern woman's clothing, or lack of it, which heretofore has been blamed for whooping cough, fallen arches, men's eyestrain, etc., now is held responsible for bad acoustics. Because feminine attire is so scarce nowadays, there is a preponderance of echoes in concert halls and theaters, according to Paul G. Andre, head of a loudspeaker firm. When women wore petticoats and woollen socks it was possible to hear better, he asserted.

Dog racing has even gotten into art in England, Miss Fannie Moody having recently entered in the exhibition of the Society of Women Artists in Picadilly, a painting entitled "Speed" showing two greyhounds chasing the elusive hare.

For more than a month this spring washouts caused the suspension of freight traffic over the Guayaquil-Quito railroad, which gives the only connection between the capital and principal seaport of Ecuador.

Nearly 170,000 pairs of French shoes for women were brought to this country last year.

Medicine Stains on Linen.

Stains caused by medicine will sometimes come out with ordinary washing; if, however, a dark brown mark still remains, apply salt of lemon and use a solution of carbonate of soda for rinsing. Should the stain that remains be reddish in color, use moistened powdered starch, leave it on for some hours, rub it well and wash. If all simple methods fail, use chloride of lime in cold water and rinse very thoroughly.

Poverty Stricken Uncle Sam

"INCOME TAX collections first quarter 1928, $6,500,000 in excess of first quarter 1927," reads a Washington dispatch.

Uncle sam is a poverty stricken old gentleman. He advanced loans of $12,000,000,000 to his allies in order to win the World War. He has loaned through his international bankers $12,000,000,000 since the Armistice was signed.

According to a Republican cabinet officer there are 2,000,000 idle wage workers in the United States. According to treasury experts, there is more prosperity in Wall Street than ever before. According to the heads of the farm organizations of America, unless the Haughen-McNary farm relief bill goes over, there is going to be desolation in the wheat belt and corn belts of America.

To complete the picture Senator James A. Reed of Missouri is over in the Carolinas telling the faithful that Andrew W. Mellon is the real president of the United States, the invisible high boss of the Republican party, responsible for all the election scandals and should be kicked out of office without warning.

Reed is a wonderful prosecutor, a wonderful orator, a wonderful writer of wonderful indictments, but Mellon isn't going to be kicked out of office, Mellon isn't a crook. Mellon isn't money mad and Mellon has rendered the American people splendid service as head of the treasury department.

He handled a bloc of the Hays-Sinclair bonds. That is, he smelled the package, his nostrils warned him that it was putrified stuff, he graciously handed the parcel back to the colonel and then he contributed $50,000 of his own money to smash the Republican deficit.

Mellon is a man of many millions. Those who are close to him say that he became secretary of the treasury to win a place and a name in American history, as a financier who had been of service to his people after the conclusion of the greatest war in the history of the world and when the service of a real financier was needed.

Of course, he believes in the use of money in campaign elections. Gifford Pinchot is the greatest reformer in the state of Pennsylvania. He is the most warlike pro. Pinchot spent $190,000 in his unsuccessful race for the senate.

Pinchot was applauded; Mellon was damned.

There should be a corrupt practices act in this republic that would restrict the amount of money a candidate or his friends should be permitted to spend for campaign purposes.

It should be an act armed with two rows of shark's teeth. There should be one law for all. It should be enforced to the letter. It should govern primary elections as well as general elections.

Victory for Petroleum

THIS is to remind the readers that the Humble Oil and Pipe Line company has a legal right to go upon the islands belonging to the state of Texas and into the waters of the Gulf of Mexico and lay pipe lines without specific permission from the legislature or any agency of the state government. It is the dictum of the Supreme court of the commonwealth. Will it be permissible for a pipe line company to poison the waters of the Gulf by polution and destroy the fishing industry of the state as well as the shell fod industry? If so, why?

Where the Fur Will Fly

"THE Walsh following in Montana has warned Smith supporters to keep their hands off despite the fact that Smith has many followers there," reads a Washington dispatch.

The fur is going to fly in Montana when it comes to picking the delegates to the national convention.

In the year 1924 Senator Walsh named a slate of delegates to be submitted to the primary pledged to the cause of McAdoo.

There was a dissenter to the program. Now this dissenter was a Celtic American, a fellow church man of Walsh and a well known lawyer.

He would not stand for a hand picked delegate so he announced as a candidate for delegate and his name was placed on the official ballot.

He ran like a race horse. He defeated one of the Walsh delegates. He had a seat in the Madison Square convention. He voted according to the dictates of his own conscience and that vote was cast against McAdoo on every ballot.

His name? Maloney.

He did not take orders from Walsh. He did not take orders from the Walsh lieutenants. He followed his own flag. He is said to be playing the same game this year. He made a hole in the Walsh slate four years ago. He may make another hole in it in April.

Letters From A Wichitan On Broadway

By Frank Ernest Nicholson

NEW YORK, March 31.—This month marks the close of the opera season in this celebrated but somewhat antiquated temple of music, the Metropolitan. When an opera singer has found a place in this gilded nest of Gatti-Casazzi's silver-toned songbirds, he has climbed his way to the highest pinnacle which the musical world has to offer. There have been but three Texans who have tipped the scales of New York grand opera—Rafaelo Diaz, the first to land a Metropolitan contract—and the only man from Texas who has yet achieved such distinction—comes from San Antonio. Diaz originally planned a career as a pianist. Ht studied for a number of years in America and then went to Germany to complete his musical education. It was while he was in Germany Diaz met the late Lucy Holmes, who, by the way, was a Galveston woman; and who discovered that Diaz had a marvelous voice. He was still centered in the thoughts of becoming a great pianist, but finally Miss Holmes persuaded him to develop his voice. Leaving Germany he went to Italy where he spent three months in voice culture, leaving there to study under a teacher in France. At length he returned to America and made his operatic debut with Emma Eames in the Boston Opera company. Following this engagement Diaz toured America in concert with Tetrazinni.

His debut at the Metropolitan opera house was with Geraldine Farrar in "Carmen." He created the role of The Astroliger in "Le Cog D'Or." Diaz's voice is most extraordinary in its high pitch, and he is the only member of the Metropolitan who can sing the Astroliger's part—owing to the great number of high c's. All of Diaz's immediate relatives reside in Texas with the exception of his mother, who lives with him in New York.

Leonora Carona of Dallas, who made her operatic debut this season, is the second Texan to achieve a berth in the Metropolitan. She attained this great goal by the culmination of years spent in the culture of her voice. During the last few years she has participated in 150 performances, singing 12 different operas in 26 different theaters in Europe. She has also sung in Porto Rico and Havana.

Her first appearance in a theater was made in Dallas when Leonora was but a year and a half old, singing "Out in the Cold World Alone" in a home-talent play. Like Rafaelo Diaz, she planned a career as a pianist. She studied the piano until she was fifteen, but her love for singing was constantly manifesting itself, and at fifteen it was decided that she should study for an operatic career.

On March 13, Carona sang "Tosca" at the Metropolitan for the benefit of the Nassau County society for the prevention of cruelty to children, taking 13 curtain calls at the close of the performance. Now no one can convince Corona that there's ill luck in thirteens. This week's rotogravure section of the New York Times-Herald carries a photograph of Miss Carona in costume, and her portrait was on the cover of the March "Musical Observer."

Dreda Aves of Galveston, is the most recent Texan to enter Gatti-Casazzi's fold. Miss Aves is the is the daughter of the late Rev. Charles S. Aves, former rector of Trinity Episcopal church in Galveston, and niece of Bishop Henry Aves, retired Bishop of Mexico and Central America. She is an American-trained artist, and first studied piano and voice in Galveston. While she was attending the University of Texas, Madame Schumann-Heink heard Dreda sing, and advised her to come east for study. A few years later she made her debut with the De Soe Opera company in Baltimore, singing the title role in "Carmen." After an audition last spring, she was given a long-term contract with Metropolitan, making her New York debut last January, singing the leading role of "Aida."

The sponsors of the spring festival which is held annually in Dresden, Germany, have contracted with the Metropolitan for the loan of Miss Aves, and Dresda is now on her way there for rehearsals. After her engagement in the Dresden opera house she will summer in Germany.

Each of the three Texans who have tipped the scales of New York grand opera planned a career as a pianist; each has made a smashing hit during their first season; none are married and each live in New York with his or her mother.

• • •

Katherine Allen Lively of Houston, and well-known in New York as a pianist and composer, is bringing out a new song called "All Through the Night I Think of You." Lew Pollack is collaborating with Mrs. Lively on this number. One of Mrs. Lively's early hits, "The Walls of China," which many will remember as the song-theme of D. W. Griffith's "Broken Blossoms," has been revived and is being used in this season's "Artists and Models," which is playing at the Winter Garden. Mrs. Lively is giving a series of lecture-piano-recitals, broadcasts each week her own compositions over radio station WGBS and over the Roosevelt hotel station.

• • •

Elva Kalb, also of Houston, is known in New York under the professional name of Marguerite Elva. She is studying voice with Madame Royal, and gives intermittant recitals. Her New York home is at the Three Arts club. Bulah Powell, of Taylor, also a resident of the Three Arts club, is studying voice with Maestro Sturani. I met two other Texas girls, Gladys and Mable Thompson, at the broadcasting studio last week. They are giving a weekly feature over the radio called "An After Theater Party," from WGBS.

• • •

Gaetanina Piazza, of Waco, gave a joint recital with Grace Divine recently at the Cornelius Bliss estate—the occasion being a concert in compliment to the staff of helpers in New York philanthropic activities. For two consecutive years, Miss Piazza has won the Juilliard piano award, and, according to her teacher, Josef Lhevinne, Katherine stands an excellent chance of repeating her achievement this year.

Texas Tales

By C. D. WAIDE

If you were an ordinary jack rabbit, galloping along over a treeless, grassless plain, looking for an early tumble-weed on which to nibble, and you suddenly found that an eagle was on your trail, sweeping down on you, wouldn't it make your hair stand on end? It probably would have that effect on a Georgia swamp rabbit or a Vermont hill hare, but not so on a Texas jackrabbit. Here's how Frank Hamer, senior captain of the Texas rangers, tells the story:

"I was riding along one day on the Staked Plains (Llano Estacado) when I saw a jackrabbit running full tilt parallel to my course. I expected to see a coyote after him, but when I looked back I saw an eagle closing in on the rabbit. The eagle dipped lower and lower, his talons extended.

"Just when it seemed the rabbit was a goner he stopped and squatted low on the ground. The eagle began to circle around him, soaring lower each time, and then zoomed for the rabbit. Old Jack laid his ears flat and waited until the eagle was right at him. Then he sprang about six feet straight upward, his feet fanning the air and the eagle passed under him.

"The rabbit's feet were working overtime as he hit the ground and he made a full 300 yards before the eagle got over him again. They repeated that maneuver three times before the rabit found a little catclaw bush, where he was safe."

The Llano Estacado of Texas, once considered a worthless stretch of land, is one of the most romantic and historic parts of Texas. It is a vast expanse of flat, treeless land, originally inhabited by Indians and buffaloes, then by cattle barons with their immense ranches, but now it is largely devoted to farming. The origin of its name has been a subject of controversy for a century. One version is that Spanish explorers in the sixteenth century crossed it and marked their course by a chain of stakes. A more plausible story is that the fur merchants of Santa Fe, New Mexico, staked a course across it which they followed in taking their pelts to market at St. Louis. A third version is that the Spaniards gave it the name because of a bushy growth from which extends a single stem or stalk to a height of six or eight feet.

Nearly 50 years ago the Texas legislature gave the Capitol Syndicate, composed of Chicago men, 3,000,000 acres of this land for building the Texas capitol. The building cost $3,000,000, is constructed of native granite, finished in a variety of hardwoods, and is second in size to the national capitol.

The Texas lawmakers gleefully celebrated their shrewdness in what they thought was getting the best of the Chicago "Yankees," for they appraised the land at only 50 cents an acre. But that land today is worth easily $30 an acre, making the capitol cost about $90,000,000 on the basis of today's values.

Within the past decade Texas has been busy trying to recover thousands of acres of land included in the block given to the syndicate. Careful surveys made at the urge of the new values disclosed that considerably more than 3,000,000 acres was included, due to the liberal surveys made half a century ago.

---

When land was worth 10 to 50 cents an acre the surveyors didn't take time to measure it carefully. They estimated it, more or less, and always made the estimates liberal.

Turkish Woman Lawyer Alters Court Rules

By Universal Service.

CONSTANTINOPLE, March 31. Appearance of a woman attorney—pretty, bob-haired and twenty-three years old—as counsel for a wife in a divorce action, has led to the decision of the Turkish courts that notices issued for the guidance of members of the Bar will in the future be addressed to advocates of both sexes.

Sureya Ahmed Hanem, the first Turkish woman lawyer, is the immediate cause of the decision. When she made her first appearance recently before the civil tribunal of Angora, a large crowd gathered in the court to witness the ceremonies to her initiation. Afterwards, she was warmly congratulated.

BLINKETY BLANK SIGNAL

BALTIMORE—At the intersection of Belvedere and Falls road, here, the traffic is regulated by a newly-invented device which changes signal lights by the sound of the horn of an approaching auto. Recently, a farmer driving in with a team of horses stopped at the cross-roads when he saw a red light facing him. He sat there for a quarter of an hour, fuming and swearing, while the light continued to stay red. Then a pedestrian told him the secret. Jumping from his wagon, he walked up to the signal, put his mouth to the sound-catching device, and yelled: "Change the blinkety blank light, you blinkety blank blank!" And the lights changed.

JACK and JILL

A MODERN STORY OF LOVE AND ROMANCE

© 1928 THE CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION, INC.

READ THIS FIRST:

Jill Justin, ultra-modern at 20, anad adorably pretty, is kidnaped by auto bandits, but rescued by Jack Stuart, who takes her home and remains to win her hand in marriage.

Three wonderfully happy years of married life are allotted Jack and Jill. At their expiration the young couple find themselves the proud parents of twin boys and a girl.

Then the Big Event transpires. Stuart and Tony Justin are paid $100,000 for an interest in their tungsten mine by Pat Sweeney, father of Mary, whom he has nicknamed "Mike."

Nita Ravelle, a gay divorcee, and Professor Le Tarte, a dancing man, come to town, each with separate identities. They infringe on the domestic tranquility of Jack and Jill. Later reconciliation smooths relations, and for a time all is well.

Nita Ravelle intrigues Jack's presence with her at a gambling and dancing resort. Jill follows, with Mike Sweeney and Le Tarte, and sees Jack and Nita together.

Nita and Jack start back to town. They are kidnaped and taken to a house in the mountains, where Jack writes a note to Jill, telling her to draw $1000 from the bank and deliver it to bearer as ransom for his release. Nita gives her personal check. The house is then locked and they are left for the night. As soon as they are alone, Nita begins to show her hand.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

Jack was teaching Nita a new dance.

Chapter XLIV.

"I can't understand where your wife gets the notion, Jack, that Professor Le Tarte or Tony is a better dancer than you,' said the clever Nita, after the phonograph had run down the second time on a combination waltz-fox trot hesitation, an invention of Jill's that she had taught Jack, and which he had just been teaching Nita.

"Oh, I'm not in the same class with Le Tarte,' 'answered Jack, with all the becoming modesty of the real artist. "He's a regular professional!"

"He's a regular simp!" was the snappy retort. "If you'll let me tell it!"

Nita Ravelle, be if observed, was something of a character student. She was playing a deep game. Not for money, but for something of more importance, even than money—the love of another woman's husband!

She had made a careful study of Jack Stuart during the brief term of their acquaintance, extending over some three months, and she knew the majority of his likes and dislikes. She knew, too, that if Jack had any enlargement of the ego, it was in relation to his sense of humor. He liked to believe, and to have others believe, that his humor complex was of an exalted type. Nita Ravelle, shrewd as the unscrupulous love-thief is bound to be, had seen beneath the surface of Jack's pretenses, and read there the underlying secret of his honest intent. If what she saw smacked some of boyish idealism, it was in the main clean and decent.

But Nita Ravelle was destined to learn that she still had something to learn about men—particularly Jack Stuart. Of course, Nita was unaware of the reconciliation that had taken place between Jack and Jill, and that Jack, as a result, had made himself the confidante of a very solemn promise. Perhaps had Nita known—

"Lithen, thither," lisped Jack, affecting an imitation of a certain little blonde flapper they had just been discussing, as he dropped wearily into a chair. "Lithen till I thpill you an earful!"

"I am all earyth!" exaggeratedly declared his companion. "Go ahead an' thyoot!"

"Well, it's just about like this, Nita," he proceeded, seriously, and without the lisp, his gaze fastening on the clock reposing on the dresser. "We've danced our way, talked, sang, joked and smoked our way through—" Again his sleepy optics turned toward the clock. He scowled, blinked, and "finally deciphered the figures—"through nearly 12 long hours. It was half past eight when we got here, and it's half past eight now. But it was night when we came, and it's daylight now. I'm so tired and sleepy, and you're so tired and sleepy, that we could go to roost, like th' chickens, standing up.

"But here's one—" He paused momentarily to gape—or yawn—"that ain't a-goin' to go to' sleep standin' up. I'm gonna flop on that sofa there. Old Mother Grundy might think she has something on us, but you and I, Nita, know better we know she hasn't a darned thing! Still, we'd have one time explaining things. Therefore, we'll do no explaining; we'll just keep mumm regarding the essential facts of this adventure. We know—you and I—that we've played th' game, done our part according to all th' rules and regulations.

"But, Nita girl, you're tired out. You gotta get some rest, some sleep. And so have I. There's no sense in wearing ourselves out. You take off those crazy, highheeled shoes that 'you keep steppin' on your skirt with'—"

"But, Jack!" expostulated the almost exhausted and thoroughly disguested Nita, "that fellow told us last night—"

A resolunding knock on the door at that precise moment interrupted her. She looked at Jack, startled.

"That's th' 'colored gemmun' with our breakfast, I suppose," he said, grinning at her. "Th' one that 'Ennery spoke about last night." The knock was repeted, even louder.

"Come on in!" called out Jack, in a loud voice, and added, sotto voce: "You gotta key, you bonehead! We haven't!"

As if to verify his words the jangling of keys was heard outside the door, followed by the rattle of one being inserted in the lock. An instant later the door swung open and the tallest, blackest man in the world entered, bearing a huge tray, on which reposed two steaming-hot breakfasts.

The tray bearer placed his burden on the table, straightened and turned around facing Jack and Nita. He was not an inch under six feet, Jack estimated in a cursory glance.

But it was the intense, coal blackness of the fellow's skin that drew instant attention. This was accentuated by the mop of snow-white wool surmounting the huge cranium, and the rows of perfect white teeth over which thick, rubbery lips of a bluish yellow tint rolled back in a perpetual grin. Taken all in all, thought Jack, he was decidedly a formidable person to tackle. This giant, Jack knew, could break him in two with one hand.

"Pessuh, Mist' Boss an' Lady," the big fellow announced, with a magnificent wave of a hand the size of an ordinary ham. "Boss 'Enry done said las' night to fetch two breckfusts at Eighty-thutty sha'hp. Ah'se a couple minnits late, Boss, 'count o' dat lazy, good-f'r-nuttin' Cah'line Brown. She suttnly am de no-good-f'r-dest womern Ah'se eveh sawn in mah bo'hn days. Ah'se don'tole dat womern fawty-lebben times dis mawhn'n Ah'se gotta hav' dem two breckfusts at eighty-thutty' shah'p.

"'Now, don'ts you'uns woh'y yoah'se'f, Geo'ge Washington Brown'," dat womern perzasticates. "Ah'zens don't knows mah biz'ness, Ah'zens does, an' ain't no brack niggah mans—"

"Well, that'll be all for this morning, George Washington," cut in Nita Ravelle's quick, insistent voice on the huge negro's endless explanation. "We've been up all night and we're hungry! I suppose you've got orders from your boss to lock th' door when you go out. All right, George Washington, you may go now!"

"Yessum, Ah'se don't hea'hs yuh, Ma'am Lady," answered the giant black, talking fast as he backed toward the door, his six feet six bent forward in humble obediance. He evidently realized his chance to exercise his vocabulary was limited in this case. He would have to hurry.

"Yessum, youh'uns shuah don' said de trufe, Ma'm, 'bout mah boss sayin' to lock de doah," continued George Washington Brown, his words seeming to tumble over each other in his rush to get them out. "He don' said, say he: "George," he says, 'yuh'uns bettah be shuah to shet an' lock dat doah, els'n—"

"Oh—for heaven's sake!" broke in the impatient Nita again, her ordinarily low-spoken voice going into a high octave screech, "go tell it to your old woman—if you have one! Scat! Get out! Beat it—get away and let us eat our breakfast before it gets cold!"

With the last words the exasperated Nita, following close on the big black's backward movement, gave the conversational George Washington a final push, as he reached the exit and then literally slammed the door in his face!

Jack Stuart laughed, both amused and surprised, at Nita's exhibition of temper. He was surprised at her nerve in charging the huge negro, and amused at the expression of the black's face—a look of frightened awe.

Had he been in possession of the actual truth he would have seen that Nita, knowing all about George's love to hear himself talk, was in an agony of nervousness lest George Washington reveal to Jack the enlightening fact that Nita and he had met before. This was the real cause of her exasperation, her display of temper.

"I'd bet anything," she said hurriedly, as she joined Jack at the breakfast table where he stood looking down in some wonder at the marvelous breakfasts the tray contained, "that George Washington Brown, as he informed us he was called, is an old slave darkey of the south. I've met his type before, and they'll talk your head off if you let 'em. All you can do is just shut 'em up and push 'em out as I did. Give 'em an inch and they'll take ten miles!"

With the disposal of breakfast, Jack again suggested they get a few hours of sleep. The room was steam heated and comfortable, and the sofa was luxurious. He would need no blankets.

"'Ennery said Pete would be here to unlock th' door shortly after noon," he reminded his companion. "Four hours of sleep will make us th' more fit to cope with th' situation, whatever it is. Don't you think so?"

"Uh huh," replied the lady, whose plans somehow seemed to have "gang awry." "I dare say you're right."

ABOUT ten years ago a brilliant young fellow was elected to the United States Senate from a Western State. He had some sort of idealistic scheme on which he wanted publicity, and he asked me to visit him in Washington.

* * *

I found a very attractive boyish face, rosy cheeks, and eyes that were frank and enthusiastic

* * *

The next time I saw him was seven years later He had passed through a campaign for re-election and had borne the daily agony of the office-seekers, contract-seekers and favor-seekers of all kinds who flocked to Washington during the war

* * *

The change in him was almost startling. His cheeks were fatter and flabbier; his smile, like that of a chorus girl, had become automatic, and there were lines of craftiness about the corners of his mouth. What seven years before had been a face of genuine kindness had become a mask of self-protection against the ceaseless assaults of insincerity. The two contrasting pictures of him have stayed in my memory, a tragic record of what politics can do to a face.

* * *

Some weeks ago a motion-picture director was talking to me about a star, a woman who once was a national favorite, a sure success in every picture.

* * *

"She's losing her pull," he said sadly.

* * *

"Why?"

* * *

"Oh, she's getting a little old and tired," he answered. "She's changed inside, and people sense it though they don't understand why. But I know A woman simply can't think about money all the time without having it show in her face."

Have you ever studied the photographs of Lincoln, those rugged cheeks, lined like a battle map; those deep, dark eyes that seem like reservoirs of sadness into which the sufferings of a whole nation had poured? Have you ever noticed the faces of old preachers and priests? Having cast their burdens upon the Lord and freed their minds from all worry about earthly affairs, they often kept the smooth, clear look of boyhood to the very end.

* * *

It was Seward, I think, who once exclaimed: "Don't tell me a man isn't responsible for his face; the man of fifty is responsible for his face."

* * *

If that be true, if the face really be a sensitive record of the mind and heart, what secrets can you read as you walk the streets! What a lot of kindliness and quiet courage is hidden in human lives! And what a lot of men there are who ought to be arrested on the strength of their looks!

JOHN GILBERT IN NEW FILM

"Man, Woman and Sin" Now at Olympic

Paramount film directed by Monta Bell.

Interesting details of how Uncle Sam holds a job as city manager are contained in the trial scenes, prison episodes, and other details of John Gilbert's new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer starring vehicle, "Man, Woman and Sin," coming Sunday to the Olympic theater. In the new story, a romance of newspaper life filmed partly in Washington, the machinery by which Washington and the District of Columbia are governed is strikingly shown.

Washington is the only American city without a mayor, city council, and without any city politics. It is governed by a federal commission, appointed by the President, and known as the District of Columbia commission, and police, street department, fire department and all other details of operation of the city come under this body. Taxes are assessed, police heads appointed, and ordinances made by the commission.

These details come out of the scenes where Gilbert, as the reporter hero of the new picture, is arrested, imprisoned and tried for murder, later to be proven innocent in the story. The courts in which he appears, while passing on superior court cases, are presided over by federal judges. Even police court cases are under federal judges through the operation of the city that is not a city. Civil service governs all general city offices, and the chief of police is an army officer, usually, assigned to the task.

Gilbert's new vehicle is a striking story of a newspaper reporter's adventures in Washington, dictated by Monta Bell, himself a former Washington newspaperman, who is also author of the story. The cast includes Jeanne Eagels, famous stage star of "Rain," in the leading feminine role as the society editor of the newspaper, and Marc McDermott, Hayden Stevenson, Cosmo Kyrle Bellew, Charles K. French, Gladys Brockwell, and others of note.

EMIL JANNINGS HERE AGAIN

Appears with Evelyn Brent In "Last Command"

"The Last Command."
Majestic Theater.
Now playing.
Evelyn Brent and Emil Jannings.
Paramount film directed by J. Von Sternberg.

Emil Jannings' latest American-made picture, "The Last Command," opened Saturday at the Majestic theater, with the great European actor surrounded by the most imposing supporting cast assembled for any of this season's pictures.

Evelyn Brent, the heroine of "Underworld," Paramount melodrama sensation, is cast as Jannings' leading woman, while William Powell, arch-villian of the screen is seen as a scheming and sinister revolutionist in a role that gives him unusual scope for his admitted ability.

The picture is distinguished by not only the remarkable performance of Jannings, as a Russian general who is caught in the vortex of revolution and swept to oblivion, but by the outstanding story and directional treatment of Josef von Sternberg, the young director whose dramatic touches and camera effects in "Underworld" established him as one of the screen's elect.

Playing the role of Jannings' adjutant is Nicholas Soussanin, the Russian actor, who leape dinto front-rank popularity by his performance as "the waiter who wept," in the Adolph Menjou picture "Service For Ladies." The cast also includes Michael Visaroff, another ex-actor of the imperial theatres of Russia, who plays Jannings' valet, and Fritz Feld, one time director for Max Reinhardt in Berlin, who came to America in the cast of "The Miracle."

American automobiles for all Ireland are now being landed at Dublin and driven to their destination.

"Jesse James."

Fred Thompson
Paramount film directed by Lloyd Ingraham.

Leaping over an eight-foot wall onto the back of his white horse, Silver King, is one of the feats Fred Thomson performs in his first Paramount picture "Jesse James," which reaches the Mission Sunday. It is a stunt that calls for an infinite amount of patience and unusual athletic skill.

Clearing the wall with legs spread apart is in itself a feat. Only a trained athlete could do it. But clearing it with such exact precision that the jumper can land exactly in the saddle requires such a high order of skill that it has never been done in the movies.

In the first place, Silver King had to be coaxed into standing without the slightest move in a hot sun as his master suddenly appeared over the wall. This is enough to startle any high spirited horse and cause him to shy. After several preliminary jumps in which Mr. Thompson balanced himself on the wall the big horse became accustomed to the surprise and made no move.

Cotton Watts At Mission Theater

Comedy Pair Featured In Week's Attraction

Cotton Watts will have a good time making folks grin out loud, and Frankie Moore will be at her best in "Mother O' Mine" at the Mission theater starting Sunday.

Cotton plays the part of Chuck Gillhouley, and Miss Moore is seen as Mazie Brice.

The play tells the tale of two boys who went to prison, and how they were finally freed. One does not want his mother to know his record as he has been successful in keeping it from her. He is afraid the other boy may let it be known. The story of love that is wound round the tragic start in life of these boys is told in one of the most beautiful ways imaginable.

Bosley and Manning will give a yodeling and harmony specialty number. Florence and Mildred Oxford are billed for a duet number.

The good looking chorus is up on its toes in some new steps, and has spent a busy week learning new musical numbers.

The screen attraction for Sunday is Fred Thomson in "Jesse James."

WARTIME SKIT IS HEADLINER

"The Rookie" Big Number At Majestic

"The Rookie" will be at the Majestic Thursday and Friday as the headline act on the Interstate vaudeville bill. This is the name of the skit to be presented by Hooper and Gatchett, assisted by a company that is especially picked for the wartime farce.

Clyde Hooper, a member of the A. E. F., got his material for writing the skit while ducking shells in Germany. Every situation in it is said to have been obtained from actual experience. Among the characters are a ranch barmaid, a captain, a misfit rookie, a hard boiled sergeant and a couple of soldiers. Manager Hans Smith quarantees it as a sure fire laugh maker.

Miss Shuron de Vries and her dancers are billed in "Dance Classique." She presents a number of American and foreign ballets. She has sponsored a number of acts as well as having been a principal in many. A ballet, a musical director and a male dancing man are included in the act.

"Mudtown Vaudeville" sounds like the real stuff if they don't sling so much the audience has to duck. Blanche and Jimmie Creighton are the principals. He tells some stories, plays a bull fiddle and speeds things up with some fast steps, while she dances and puts on a show of her own.

Reynolds and White "On a Trampage" are all set to give an inside view of the life of a pair of musical tramps.

A lot of monkey stuff is scheduled in "Umtala" with Fred Galetti and Iola Kokin. They have a dancing monkey and a comedy act.

Chester Conklin is on the screen in "Tillie's Punctured Romance." The Ko Ko Explorers and a Paramount newsreel complete the bill.

'SACK' SUITS FOR SPRING

Stylists Choose Two Men's Designs

By EDWARD M. RUTTENBER
Universal Service Fashion Expert

NEW YORK, March 31.—Two types of sack suits are recommended for the well dressed man who is buying for spring. One accentuates the wand-like type and the other is designed to emphasize broad shoulders where they do not actually exist.

The New York Custom Cutters' Club held its style show in New York recently without making the fatal mistake of recommending a collection of apparel for the well dressed man that would strain the financial resources of Midas, assuming that the famed character with the metallic touch was in our midst at the moment. The style committee recommended the two or three-button sack suit with soft roll front as the accepted thing for spring wear. Lapels are to be of moderate width, notched or peaked.

Trousers are styled to hang staight in the report submitted by the stylists representing the organization. Nether garments will be full throughout the hips, knees and over the shoe, with a single pleat on each side.

Plain bottoms are favored for dressy materials while cuffs for cheviots, flannels and light colored fabrics will prevail. Twenty to 21-inch knee widths with 17 to 18 1-2 inch bottoms are deemed the correct thing.

The general impression carried away from the assemblage of custom cutters was that the young men will wear wide shoulder jackets and peaked lapels, with short, trim body lines and full trousers, thus creating the impression of gladiatorial strength.

The type of outfit mentioned in the preceeding paragraphs is recommended for business wear and it is expected that the more conservative types will embrace the platform outlined.

'Frenchies' Of 1928 Change

Oppose Dowery System And Marriage

By Universal Service.

PARIS, March 31.—The Parisienne in 1928 differs from the Parisienne in, say, 1928, more in the aspect of the gowns she wears than in an outlook upon life.

One fancies her social philosophy has undergone less change than the English woman's or the German's during the past century.

A mild cynicism is its outstanding characteristic.

No other woman has as few illusions.

Life (she perceives) is a harsh struggle, and men, as fellow-combatants, are not greatly to be depended on.

Lacking illusions—and therefore enthusiasms—the Parisienne in the past has revealed herself lethargic in teh struggle for social rights into which her sisters elsewhere have so resolutely thrown themselves.

A change in the respect is now to be recorded. Among unmarried French women a mood of revolt which has alarmed elderly poets is apparent. They are shaking off the torpor which formerly made them accept without questioning the status—or lack of status—which society imposed upon them.

"How tiresome it is to be a spinster in France," exclaimed one of the characters in the latest comedy of M. de Croisset.

In this comedy, and in almost every other social comedy now running in Paris, a married woman is the heroine. For the Parisian novelist, likewise, the unmarried woman lacks interest unless there is the danger of her losing her virtue.

The mood of revolt has already produced good results. Perhaps the outstanding feature in post-war social life in France is the spinster's improval position.

A new type of Parisienne is emerging—the woman who respects herself, and exacts respect from men, who is brisk and competent, who earns her living and provides modestly for the future, who is keen on sport, and whose activities and interests make her indifferent to the allurements of marriage.

Marriage, in short, has ceased to be woman's one profession in France.

The French woman, of course, has not yet attained the complete freedom which women enjoy in Great Britain and Germany. All one can say is that barriers are gradually coming down.

The intelligent modern Parisienne's chief aim at the moment is to get rid of the dowry system.

"Saratoga" Entertains Landlubbers in Harbor

By Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, March 31.—Back in the good old "windjammer days" when visitors came aboard a warcraft, the skipper took delight in showing off his crew by having them man the yards.

The Saratoga, Uncle Sam's latest airplane carrier, doesn't have any yards to man, but when visitors at Los Angeles harbor go aboard, they are entertained with the crew strung out along the deck and superstructure.

While planes take off from the broad decks of the Saratoga, the big hoist derrick creaks and others who land in the harbor near the big ship, are neatly and efficiently hoisted aboard again.

Beside being an airplane carrier, the Saratoga mounts eight-inch guns.

'MOB MERCY' DRAWS FIRE

British Executive Opposes Clemency Pleas

By HENRY CAVENDISH
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, March 31.—"Mob mercy is as bad as mob executions!"

This strong comparison of public outcries for executive clemency in the case of condemned murderers to a resort to lynch law by an outraged public, was voiced recently by Sir William Joynson-Hicks, Home Secretary. Sir William was expressing his disapproval by inference to the recent campaign waged all over Great Britain to prevent the execution of two condemned murders at Cardiff. The agitation was led by a number of famous personages, including T. P. O'Connor, M. P.

"We hear of lynch law in some other parts of the world, and we consider it the most serious thing that can possibly happen to a civilized country.

Sees No Difference

"Yet there is no difference between lynching, and the attempt of a mob of one thousand, or ten thousand, or a hundred thousand men and women to usuary the office of the Public Minister whose duty it is to deal with these terrible cases where murder has been committed."

Sir William explained that "one very rarely speaks about these matters but I hope and trust that after I have been allowed to make this statement the public will realise that they do not make it easier for the unfortunate occupant of the office which I hold as Home Secretary." He justified his protest at public clamorings by remarking:

"I think something ought to be said about the trouble that so frequently arises when the secretary of state for home affairs is called upon to make the most difficult decision which any man may be called upon to make—the decision whether a fellow-creature shall be executed or not."

Declaring that "no secretary of state worthy of his name can permit himself to be influenced in a matter of this kind by public clamor," Sir William explained the course of legal procedure involved in executions by saying:

An Explanation

"I want you to realize what happens. First of all a man is tried by the magistrates. Then he goes to the Assizes and is tried by a jury of his countrymen, and then in the Court of Criminal Appeal.

"If the appeal is dismissed the case then goes before the Secretary of State for final decision. It is his solemn duty to shut himself up and go seriously and carefully over the whole case."

In the case of the Cardiff murderers who were hanged, Sir William was out of the country at the time of the execution, and Winston Churchill, the chancellor of the exchequer, acted in his stead. When petitioned to reprieve the men, Mr. Churchill refused.

Rumor of Painter's Engagement Denied

By Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, March 31.—Pola Negri and Mae Murray are not to be the sisters-in-law of Josem Sert, famous Spanish mural painter. Sert had been reported engaged to Princess Roussadana Mdivani, sister of Prince Serge Mdivani. But cable messages received here from the Mdivani family in Paris denied the engagement of the Spanish artist and the Georgian princess who is related by marriage to two of Hollywood's leading screen stars.

Organizations Enlisted For "Forest Week"

HOUSTON, March 31. (AP)—R. W. ## "HAIR TONIC"

Scalp Treatment Costs Liquor Defendant $100 Fine

By Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, March 31.—Use of bootleg liquor for a hair tonic worked out badly in more ways than one for Joe Cabriello.

Accused of having a bottle of liquor in the house, Cabriello told Municipal Judge Turney he had bought it, on a friend's advice, to use on his little girl's head.

"Was the remedy successful?" the court asked.

"Well, it wasn't really a success," Cabriello replied. "It was beginning to kill the scalp. So I quit using it."

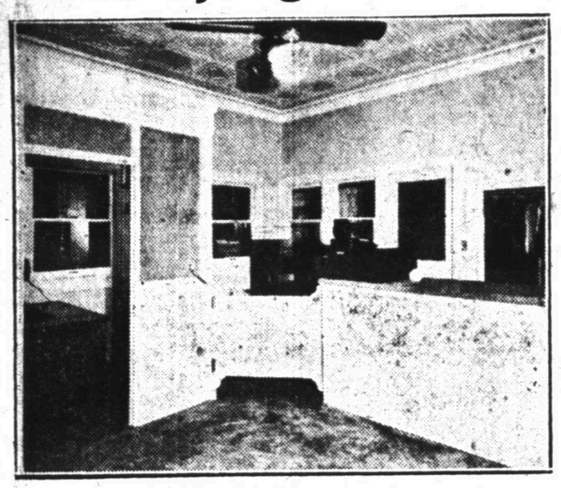

Cabriello paid a fine of $100 for the experiment.

Smith, who for the past 10 or 12 years have been actively associated with the Wichita Cleaning and Dye Works of this city, announce the formal opening of the new home to be known as the Shepherds Dyeing and Dry Cleaning Plant, Monday evening, from 7 to 8 o'clock. Mr. Shepherd states that this new plant is one of the most modern in the entire southwest and that nothing has been left undone to render its patrons the most efficient service.

DOG AT FUNERAL OF ACTRESS.

The chief mourner at the funeral recently of Miss Gladys Ffolliott, a prominent actress in England, was "Delphie," a Scotch collie, who was the favorite pet of the star. Miss Ffolliott was exceptionally fond of dogs, possessing five. "Delphie" was so named because her mistress, when playing in the original production of "Outward Bound," found her one wet night outside the stage door. After the funeral the dog was taken to spend the rest of her days with a friend of Miss Ffolliott who has a farm near Norwich. "Starr," another of the actress' pets, accompanied "Delphie" to the country.

Queen's Beauty Stirs Europe

By Universal Service.

LONDON, March 31.—Because Queen Souriya has been displaying the beauty of her unveiled face throughout Europe, insurrections are threatened in Afghanistan.

When he turns to Kabul with his his lovely consort, King Amanullah will find his country in a ferment.

This information reached Universal Service today from different sources closest to the Afghan court. Photographers of the unveiled queen have been mad by the thousands since the royal party landed in Italy early in the year. Some of these photographs recently penetrated to far-off Kabul and other Afghan towns.

There, they have caused the gravest consternation among the devout Mohammedans, who have turned with horror from the modern ideas of Mustapha Kemal, dictator of Turkey, and his edict banning the use of the veil.

GIRLS WANT AUTO SCHOOL

Oldsmobile Factory Aids Students

Following the lead of the growing number of men college graduates who are selecting the automotive industry for their life work, a group of co-eds of the Michigan State college is seriously considering the place women may attain in the industry. With this in mind, 18 of the co-eds have petitioned the college faculty to extend the course in automotive engineering to the girl students.

For the past two years the Oldsmobile factories, which are located three miles from the State college, have been open to a selected group of college graduates seeking training in the industry. The success of this plan, together with increasing adaption of women to new places in the business world, no doubt has been an influential factor with these Michigan girls.

Encourage Youth

The policy of Oldsmobile officials has been to encourage youth. The introduction of youthful ideas, working with the mature judgement of experienced executives, will, it is believed, maintain the progressive spirits which has featured industry and brought it to its present emminent position.

With this idea the Oldsmobile officials nearly two years ago notified several universities that it would make places for graduates who desired to enter the automotive industry. Scores of senior students were interviewed and a selection made.

A schedule of activities was outlined for the students. They were employed for periods in the various divisions of the factories. When this educational phase of the mechanical training had been completed the students were routed through the service department and later sent to the various Oldsmobile retail branches. At these places they were trained in retail selling, business routine and wholesale contracting.

Good Record

The majority of these students more than made good and several have gained responsible positions in Oldsmobile or other Central Motors units. A second class of students, selected last spring, now are undergoing the same training.

In addition to opening these opportunities for college graduates, employes of Oldsmobile also may obtain a four-year course in automotive engineering and kindred subjects at the Flint School of Technology. The course is so arranged that the students is self-supporting during the four-year period.

The course is open to Oldsmobile employes who have the necessary qualifications, through the General Motors corporation's affiliation with the Flint school. The course consists of 24 weeks a year spent at the institute, 26 weeks at practical shop experience at the Oldsmobile factories and two weeks vacation. Four weeks are spent at the school, followed by four weeks at the factory, this alterating during the year.

Whether women are destined to become automotive engineers and executives is problematical at this time, but the action of the co-eds of Michigan sate is indicative of a trend in that direction.

Chevrolet Carries Adventurers On 10,000 Mile Trip From Africa

There is a motoring tour now under way which, it is safe to predict, will out-do in thrills and drama any of the experiences of some 40,000,000 Americans who will take to the highways this season.

It is a tour through jungle trails, over desert wastes, across rivers unbridged except by make-shift pontoons, through mud and swamps and infested marshes. Four men are attempting the journey, a trail-blazing route 10,000 miles long, from Cape Town, in the Southern most part of Africa, to Cario and thence on a swing through Europe to London.

A good share of the trip is over uncharted lands never before traversed by a stock car, amid jungle life, where a tropical sun burns down by day, and where the wilderness echoes with the threat of savage life at night.

The transportation selected by the adventurers consists of a stock Chevrolet sedan trailed by a Chevrolet truck on which is carried equipment necessary to hew a path through wilderness tangles. Included in the equipment is a complete wireless outfit with which the men will maintain contract with the outside world, and a medical chest containing anti-venom serum and surgical and first aid supplies. Each member has been inoculated against jungle fever.

The run was officially started by radio from New York City by J. D. Mooney, president of General Motors Export, who expects to sail from New York in time to greet the travelers in Europe. The first leg of the run, Cape Town to Cario, is scheduled for completion in 40 days.

Heading the party is the famous African adventurer, Captain Lacey. Others are a wireless operator, a newspaper man, and a motion picture photographer. Selection of a Chevrolet to carry the party was logical, following a demonstration of the rugged qualities of the car conducted recently by Lacey, in which he bested by nine hours the time of the express mail train over the 2000 mile route between Elizabethville and Johannesburg, in South Africa.

The Cape-to-London run, sponsored by General Motors (South Africa) Ltd., was planned originally to end at Cairo, but interest arounsed by the project became so keen that the route was extended to include visits to General Motors plants at Alexandria, Berlin, Antwerp, London, and Stockholm.

New Packard Car Attracts Interest

More than ordinary interest has been shown in the announcement of a new eight cylinder car, made by the Packard Motor Car company last week. The Packard Standard Eight, as the car is called, has attracted unusual attention because it enters a field among motor car sales classifications which had not been occupied before.

Packard executives say it will take care of the thousands of people who want all the performance, beauty, comfort and prestige that has characterized the Packard Eight, but who do not desire the extra luxuries of a custom built car. The Standard Eight completes the Packard line by providing a car priced between the Packard Six and the Packard Custom Eight. With it Packard now has 53 different models from which to choose.

Discovering recently that postage stamps were being cleaned with chemicals and illegally used again, the Ceylon postal authorities suddenly destroyed all the plates and issued six new designs.

NEW ROUTE TO SHIP GRAIN

Denver Tracks Are Near Completion

DALLAS, March 31. (AP)—The 203 miles of new track the Fort Worth & Denver railway is constructing in the South Plains section of Texas will be completed in time to handle the first grain movements of that section; about the last of June, T. V. Murray, general agent, declared here.

Mr. Murray said that present prospects are that the wheat crop of that section will be a plentiful one this year, much better than it was last, and approaching if not equalling that of the year before when 30,000,000 bushels were raised there.

The Fort Worth & Denver is building new lines from Silverton to Lubbock and from Estelline to Dimmitt.

"All the grading on this construction has been completed," Mr. Murray said. "We are laying rail, and beginning at Estilline we have carried it almost to Plainview. We are laying at the rate of one and a half miles per day.

"The rain and snow that section has had have put the ground in fine shape for wheat, and this year's production should be far in excess of that last year, when there was a drouth."

JAPAN-GERMAN BODY ACTIVE.

The new Japan-German Cultural Institute, organized to spread information of each country in the other, is becoming active. Nearly 1500 Japanese books have been shipped to Berlin, where they will be the nucleus of the largest Japanese library in Germany. A gift of 30,000 marks has been pledged for which a German library will be accumulated in Tokyo. The first of a series of lectures on Japan-German cultural questions has been published, and extensive research phases of Buddhism. The staffs of both Berlin and Tokyo divisions includes a German and a Japanese.

ST. MARK'S VENICE, RESTORED

St. Mark's of Venice, Austria, is the first of the three national cathedrals of Europe to be restored. Workmen have just completed their task of 20 years in making it safe for use. The cathedral was built in 1063, and decorated and faced with marble by the Venetiane after the fall of Constantinople. The structure was very weak, however, and large cracks appeared in the wall. Workmen have been filling in the cracks, repairing the vault and replacing the damaged stones and mortar with concrete. The other cathedrals being restored are St. Paul's in London and that at Mayence, Germany.

Texas' Six Flags To Be Decoration In Biennial Hall

Special to The Record News.

SAN ANTONIO, March 31.—The six flags under which Texas has been governed will be a feature of the decorations of the Municipal auditorium where the session of the biennial of the general federation of Women's clubs will be held May 28 to June 7, inclusive. Plans for having the French, Spanish, Mexican, Texas Republic, Confederate, and United States flags displayed as part of the decorations, were discussed at a recent meeting of the decorations committee.

The decorations, however, will be chiefly greens and cut flowers, with plenty of palms, according to Mrs. George Willis, chairman of the decorations committee, which is composed of the members of the Tuesday Musical club. Mrs. Willis says that an excess of decoration would take from the beauty of the auditorium.

As the prickley pear will be in bloom at that season, plans are being laid for using that in decorations, the plants to be transported swathed in heavy comforts and placed in inaccessible spots. Handsome Spanish shawls and gay Mexican blankets will be employed effectively about the balcony and the mezzanine floor of the lobby.

The emblem of the general federation will be outlined in electric lights of blue and white, the Feredation colors and placed before the building.

With the growth in the use of the radio the importation of slippers from foreign countries has greatly increased, Czechoslovakia sending to the United States last year 70 per cent more than it did in 1926.

MORE HIGHWAYS NEEDED FOR FUTURE AUTOMOBILE PRODUCTION

TOO FEW ROADS SAYS C-C HEAD

Industry Booms With Progress

By RAY PRIEST
Universal Service Automobile Editor

DETROIT, Mich., March 31.—Assurances that 1928 will be a good year for the automobile industry and many reasons why are given by Alfred S. Reeves, general manager of the national Automobile Chamber of Commerce, who has just completed a two weeks' business trip to the various factories in and around Detroit.

Reeves cites first of all the heavy demand for replacements.

"Last year it required more than two million of the 3,600,000 vehicles produced to offset cars that went to the junk pile," Reeves pointed out. He said that these figures had just been compiled by the New York office of the association and indicated that henceforth fully 50 per cent of the nation's automobile production would be needed for replacement purposes.

Seeing a universal demand here and abroad for transportation, he says that with the only 23,000,000 cars now in use a bright outlook continues for the motor trade.

"While we may have seasonal dips and occasional recessions the motor industry will continue to grow," its official secretary believes.

Few Roads

"The problem today is not too many cars," Reeves says, "but too few highways. Men like Roy D. Chapin, John J. Raskob, Alvan McCauley, Arthur T. Waterfall and other leaders in the industry are taking a decided interest in directing activties toward traffic control and standardization, both here and abroad."

Reeves through his connection with the industry is closer to it as a whole than even the individual manufacturers. His following comments show the conditions very clearly.

"We may always look forward to good times as long as makers continue to stand on the rock-ribbed policy of value per dollar. Fortunately the business has had competition. Competition means prosperity and not loss of profits as some would have us think. Between a monopoly industry and a competitive industry, in most cases the latter is a safer investment. The trouble with a monopoly industry is the danger of dying from dry rot. There is always in human history a temptation to kill the goose that lays the golden egg.

Costs Reduced

"The automobile industry has compelled to reduce the costs of production because of this competition and to discover more efficient machinery to eliminate waste and bring down the cost to the public. The automobile is one of the few products which is selling today for less than pre-war prices. Whenever anyone talks about the automobile outlook that inevitably must be the first consideration.

"Next to the matter of price comes the factor of general use. When there were only one million automobiles in the country there was only one million automobiles in the country there was a good reason to feel that the saturation point had been reached, but as each succeeding million was added, it became clear that the market would never be saturated, because there will be a constant need for replacement vehicles.

Grade Separations

"Of great importance is our inability to use existing highways because of the lack of grade separations. Motorists in suburban districts on Saturday afternoon and Sunday, in most communities, spend nearly half their time waiting for traffic lights to change. Build more grade separations and you will get more value per dollar from your highways, more trade in your territory, and a quickening of the automobile industry. The highway movement fortunately is coming along steadily and we may look for real progress in that direction.

"Anyone who thinks that the automobile industry is in a static condition is evidently not the father of young men or women reaching the adult or near adult member for his or her personal car. Sometimes the wife is willing to use her husband's car. Sometimes she uses it all the time and makes it necessary for him to get another machine, and always the young people want their automobile.

This photograph from the other side of the world shows American merchandise being lightered ashore at Osaka, Japan. The commodity in question—Buick motor cars—has long enjoyed favor in the Orient, as well as in other foreign countries.

Auburn Company Has Increased Assets

Unless a manufacturer can give the buying public bigger and better values each succeeding year, at less commensurate cost, and at the same time show a fair profit on his company's investment, he cannot count himself a success." E. L. Cord, president of the Auburn Automobile Company, says.

"In four years Auburn has grown from a company with less than a million in assets to one with control of more than sixteen million assets. Its financial rating is among the best in the industry. Each of these years it has paid unusually high dividends, given the public bigger and better values, and in each of these four years its sales have doubled. Auburn, therefore, is a successful company.

New Models Increase Stearns-Knight Sales

Sales of the Stearns-Knight motor cars, according to a report just given out by L. E. Corcoran, general sales manager for the Stearns-Knight Sales corporation, of Cleveland, are the highest since the present models in the six cylinder and two eight cylinder chassis types were introduced. New York City reports retail deliveries for the past six weeks as being greater than total retail deliveries for the preceding four months.

BUICKS FIND FAME ABROAD

Flint Product Seen In Foreign Fields

FLINT, Mich., March 31.—No matter where the resident of Flint may travel, he is never far from reminders of home. Flint-made products have extended their commercial conquest around the globe, until today, even in the remotest corners of the earth, one can not go far without thrilling at sight of the familiar Buick nameplate, striking evidence of his city's industrial prestige.

The Buick Motor company was among the first manufacturers to recognize its field, not as restricted to the United States and Canada, but as embracing the wide world. Buicks have been sold abroad for many years, and wherever one has gone, others have followed. They have made good on the trackless desert, in African jungles as official cars of exploring parties, and with equal readiness, among the snows of Northern Russia.

Buicks Praised

Buicks have served royalty with distinction, in more than one foreign land. At last word from China, General Qu Pei Fu, the famous military leader, was driving a Buick purchased from an American lieutenant of Marines lately on duty in that land.

One of the strongest testimonials to the satisfaction Buick has rendered in other countries came recently from George Jelinski of Warsaw, who is touring the world as a good will ambassador from the Boy Scouts of Poland to those of other countries. Jelinski's admiring fellow-countrymen in Detroit presented him with a Buick coupe in which to complete his globe-circling trip. It was in response to his own wish that Buick was selected.

"There are many Buicks in my country," said Jelinski. "I have always admired the Buick above other automobiles.

Trade Grows

The foreign demand for Buick motor cars, like the domestic demand, which registers a healthy increase year after year, is growing. As commerce extends its frontiers, and highways push their way further into the wilderness, motor cars become not only desirable but matters of economic necessity. Buick's long-established reputation for value has given it a foremost position among American motor cars bidding for favor abroad.

GAS LORE

Ancient Tiny Bugs Now Propel Family Flivver

Few motorists stop to think, when they drive up to a gas station and have the old family "charger" gassed and oiled, about the why and wherefore of the fuel they use every day.

A number of years ago, in fact, according to geologists, about 10,000,000 more or less, things started happening in a way to benefit the automobile owner of today. Diatoms, small animals invisible to the naked eye, abound on the surface of the water. They are of peculiar formation and when they die the shell, or diatom, a silica composition sinks to the floor of the ocean. Harkening back to other days, California was covered with water in many places and as the receding period came and the ages wore on these same diatoms formed diatomaceous earth and subsequently the oil which is pumped from wells today.

NEW BRAKES FOR CHRYSLERS

Low Price Record Is Set

Announcement that four wheel brakes of the hydraulic type are now available for Chrysler cars of the "52" model has been received from the Chrysler Sales corporation by the Davidson-Hamilton company, local dealers.

The addition makes the Chrysler "52" the lowest priced car in the world provided with hydraulic four-wheel brakes, according to an accompanying statement by J. W. Frazer, Chrytler Sales manager, which says that the feature is available as optional equipment for all "52" cars at an added nominal cost of $25.

"Chrysler-Lockheed hydraulic four-wheel brakes have been an outstanding factor in the phenomenal popularity of all our six cylinder cars ever since their introduction," says Mr. Frazer's statement, "and we regard their extension to the "52" as one of the most striking examples yet made of the advantakes of Chrysler's unique manufacturing methods.

"With the equipment the "52" is the lowest priced car in the world provided with hydraulic four-wheel brakes. The result has been made possible through the Standardized Quality policy which governs all Chrysler manufacturing operations and passes a long list of refinements and innovations along from the higher priced models to the lowest priced. Among these one of the most notable is the hydraulic braking system which Chrysler was the first to introduce into the moderate price automobile field and which we adopted after a prolonged study of every existing braking method and perfected by means of an exhaustive series of experiments."

The Chrysler-Lockheed system is simplicity itself. Chrysler engineers point out. No lubrication is necessary. There are no rods, springs or clevices, and no mechanical equilizers.

The pedal pressure is applied against all four brake cylinders in equal degree through the operation of the elementary law of physics that "the pressure exerted upon any portion of a fluid enclosed in a vessel is transmitted, undiminished, equally to all surfaces." This means braking safety and certainty—a positiveness of braking control not attainable, the engineers say, by any other method.

Car Dealer Is Factor In Owner-Satisfaction

While the 1928 cars continue to disclose important advancements in automobile design and construction, the importance of the local dealer as a factor in owner-satisfaction is becoming more and more evident, says DuBois Young, Hupmobile president and general manager.

"Public acceptance of a particular make motor car is resting more and more on its acceptance of that car's local dealer," he declares. His obvious obligation to the owner is to provide necessary service at minimum cost."

RED KNIGHT of GERMANY

By FLOYD GIBBONS

The Life and Battles Of ## BARON VON RICHTHOFEN
The Kaiser's Deadliest Ace

(Editor's Note: Manfred von Richthofen, who shot down eighty Allied airplanes, was killed on April 21, 1918, by Captain A. Roy Brown, a Canadian flier in the British Royal Air Force. In the previous installment, Mr. Gibbons told the story of the German ace's last combat. And now two of Captain Brown's comrades give their recollections of the same fight.)

FINAL INSTALLMENT

IN that vertical line of British Camels that dived upon the Richthofen squadron of Fokker and Albatross planes the morning of April 21, 1918, was Captain Oliver C. Le Boutillier, commander of B Flight of Squadron 209, Royal Air Force, and second in command to Captain A. Roy Brown.

Le Boutillier and Brown were close friends, having served together in Squadron 9 in the naval air force before that branch was merged with the army fliers to form the Royal Air Force.

Despite his French name, Le Boutillier is an American, born in East Orange, N. J. He succumbed to the war fever in May, 1916, when he was twenty years old.

Le Boutillier had at least six German planes to his credit prior to the engagement in which Richthofen was killed. Here is his account of the battle on April 21, as he recalls it:

"We had been operating out of Bertangles about seven weeks before April 21, and only three weeks previous we had been made a unit of the Royal Air Force. We were equipped with single-seater Camels on which were mounted two machine guns, firing over and around the propeller arc.

"We knew the Richthofen outfit was somewhere in the vicinity. Of course, none of us knew Richthofen's plane. We had heard of him, but nobody to my knowledge actually knew Richthofen when he saw him in the air.

"BROWNIE WAS SECOND IN COMMAND."

"Usually we went out in units of one flight each. But this morning, a Sunday, three flights were together. Leading was A flight, Capt. Brown, or Brownie, had C flight, which flew behind and to the right of the first flight, and mine was on the other side of the leaders, and behind.

"Some time during the early part of the patrol we lost sight of A flight. Brownie was second in command, so he moved up ahead. We were then ten planes.

"As we cruised along in a sky apparently clear of both clouds and enemy planes I alternately watched Brownie and the ground. We saw the Germans all at once. A flock of them had jumped on two or three of our slow observation planes.

"Brownie waggled the wings of his plane, or staggered it, which meant he had sighted German planes, and dived. The rest of us were strung out behind, going almost straight down, several thousand feet, toward the German planes.

"Then we were in it."

Capt. Le Boutillier found it difficult to form a complete picture of what followed.

"There must have been twenty of us mixing things up for about half an hour," he continued. "In a dog fight all organization is shot to pieces. It's every man for himself and a machinegun bullet for the slowest thinker.

"The Huns' planes were of all colors—except scarlet, the hue of the plane in which Richthofen was shot down. I can say positively that he was not in that dog fight, though he probably was hanging around on the outskirts.

"During the melee, some of the Germans went down. Then, after what seemed like endless hours of fighting, there was a momentary lull, and out of the corner of my eye I saw one of our machines heading for home. I recognized it as Lieutenant May's plane, one of Brownie's flight. Almost at the same moment I saw a bright scarlet German plane swooping down on him.

"For a second I hesitated, wondering whether I should go after that German plane or stay in the dog fight. But Brownie had beaten me to it. I saw him dart out of the mixup and start after the scarlet plane.

"The three planes—May's, the scarlet one, and Brownie's—were headed for Sailly-le-Sec and were very low over the Australian trenches. Then, suddenly, the scarlet plane seemed to stagger, turn over—and it fell.

"I caught up with Brownie while he was circling over the spot where the German plane lay close to the Australian trenches. I knew he wanted to land and look it over, and I stayed with him, but there was no place to put a plane down, because the ground had been so torn up by shell-fire.

"I remember clearly that the machine was lying by a little hedge. We marked the spot mentally and returned to Bertangles.

"When we got back, we found that no one was missing or hurt, although every plane had been badly shot up. As the scarlet machine had been a clear victory for Brown, I, with several others, confirmed the victory for him when we made our reports.

"Then I heard that the scarlet plane had carried Richthofen.

"Richthofen got a splendid funeral. His grave was dug just inside the entrance to the little cemetery at Bertangles. Every branch of the British army and some of the French units had delegations there. I was among those detailed from our squadron."

Another British war bird who took part in that mad scramble of British and German planes on the April morning when Richthofen went down is a modest young man of 30, who is today a civil engineer in New York City.

He is Capt. W. J. Mackenzie, who was at that time a lieutenant in Capt. Brown's flight. On that memorable day in 1918, Mackenzie accounted for one enemy aircraft and was the only British casualty in the actual engagement. Now he is reticent about discussing either distinction.

"The war is over," is his terse answer to almost every argument one uses in trying to convince him that he is not indulging in self-glorification.

Mackenzie is even inclined to hold his record as of little importance, although it is marked by nine credited victories in the air, includes long active service in France until the armistice and gained him a captain's commission, the British Distinguished Flying Cross and the Belgian Croix de Guerre.

But included in his wwar story is one bit of information that shows how German headquarters was especially anxious to preserve the life of Von Richthofen, whose example stimulated the whole German army.

"Some months after Richthofen was killed," Mackenzie said, "a former member of his circus was brought down on our side of the lines. This fellow told us that after Richthofen became famous, two men were told off on every patrol to act primarily as his bodyguard. They must have lost him on that day he was killed."

Richthofen's mother with her youngest son Bolko during solemn ceremonies that marked return of Manfred's body to Germany.

"We engaged a German two-seated over Cerisy on the Somme," Mackenzie said, concerning the morning of April 21. "This was after we had floated over the lines for some time without being able to draw any German planes into an engagement.

"A group of German single-seaters sat high above us when Brown signaled for us to go down on this plane. We were nine or ten planes and as soon as we got into a low altitude the enemy planes came down. There were at least twenty-one or twenty-two of them.

"I didn't know it was Richthofen's circus. For that matter, I had never heard of Richthofen's red machine. I can not understand all I've heard since about how he had thrown fear into us all by his reputation and his glaring red plane.

"Anyway, we were mixing it up warmly in this scrap, and for a while three of the enemy were on to me, each of them trying to get in a burst. Finally some one took off one of the planes, which left me with two of them.

"With two, one has a fair chance and I was getting in a burst at them now and then, when somewhere came another, and he put over a broadside, and the splinters flew and things crackled. The back of my little wicker chair was shot away. In the excitement I didn't know I was wounded, but when I put my hand back I felt the tear in my flying suit.

"I went into a spin at somewhere between 3,000 and 4,000 feet, with the motor off. One of the Germans followed me down to see the crash, and when he came close he got careless. He flew right in front of me and at this opportune instant I pressed both triggers. I'm sure he never caused us further worry.

"Just as I got over the lines I spotted one of our planes flying for home with a red plane after him. Behind the red plane was Brown. Something distracted my attention for an instant, but when I looked down again the red German plane was gone.'"

When Mackenzie returned to Bertangles he was sent immediately to a hospital for treatment. There it was found that he had been struck by an explosive machine-gun bullet, which had made a slight wound in his back.

"We didn't know until several hours after we were struck," Mackenzie continued, "that Brown had got Richthofen."

Mackenzie never saw Richthofen's body, but he did get a small piece of fabric from the red plane. This piece of cloth, about four inches square, still has the thick red paint on one side. On the reverse is one of the rarest mementoes of the fight; the autographs of eleven English fliers, including those who took part in that historic combat. The names are: A. R. Brown, C. G. Brock, M. S. Taylor, A. W. Aird, S. H. Siddall, W. R. May, R. N. Foster, F. J. W. Mellersh, M. A. Hawker, W. J. Mackenzie, O. C. Le Boutillier.

Mackenzie attended Richthofen's funeral and then went on with the war. He won his captaincy, became a flight leader, and continued to pile up his record of victories. After he was mustered out of service, he studied at the university of Toronto.

Meanwhile, Richthofen's body lay in state in one of the English tent hangars at Bertangles on the day following his death. Many English airmen viewed the remains in silent admiration for a brave foe.

But little remained of the allred Fokker when souvenir hunters got through with it. Superstitious airmen took bits of fabric to carry with them on their hazardous daily jobs aloft. An omen of good luck attached to the plane of the man whose success in the air had blazoned his record around the world.

While the body of the man he had killed lay in the tent, Brown led his flight over the lines on two more patrols. Then he went to a hospital for treatment and rest, and two weeks later he left the fighting zone on a month's leave.

BROWN RESUMES DUTY AS COMBAT INSTRUCTOR.

Six weeks after his fight with Richthofen he resumed duty as a combat instructor in England, where the Prince of Wales pinned an additional bar on his Distinguished Service Cross.

Some time later he fainted in his machine and crashed to earth. When he was lifted from the wreckage he was pronounced dead, but the physicians managed to fan back a spark of life and he survived a skull fracture and several broken ribs. Today, at thirty-three years of age, the man who killed Richthofen lives at 97 Garfield avenue, Toronto, Canada, and is engaged in business. He has a wife and three children.

Richthofen was buried with full military honors on the afternoon of the day after his death. From the tent hangar a plain black-stained wooden box was carried on the shoulders of six fighting pilots of the Royal Air Force who acted as pallbearers.

The coffin was placed in an open army tender and covered with floral tributes that came from all nearby air squadrons. Preceded by a guard of Australian infantrymen who carried their rifles reversed, the cortege moved slowly down the road beside the airdrome.

The procession arrived at the cemetery on the outskirts of Bertangles. There, at the foot of a tall poplar tree, an open grave awaited.

The black box was placed beside the grave while the pallbearers stood bareheaded at the foot. At one side were two files of Anzacs, standing rigidly with bowed heads and the muzzles of their rifles grounded.

FROM THE EAST THE RUMBLE OF GUNS.

From the east the rumble of the guns continued, as the English chaplain in white surplice repeated the burial service of the Church of England. He recited a prayer for the dead, and a murmured amen came from the awed assemblage.

The casket was lowered gently into the grave. The quiet was broken by a sharp order from a lieutenant. The double rank of Australians snapped to attention. Another order and they raised their rifles. Three volleys—a parting salute—were fired over the remains of a respected fallen foe. The grave was filled.

In the big white house in Schweidnitz, Lothar, convalescing from his last wounds, read the telegrams and letters of condolence. One was from Hans Wolff, who flew with Manfred on the last flight. It read:

Airdrome, April 25, 1918.

Dear Richthofen: As yet I can hardly believe that it is true. I feel as if I had had an evil dream which will pass. But nevertheless it is true. Everybody speaks of it. One must not think of it. I can understand your grief. Nothing could have hit you worse than your great brother's death. It is the greatest grief which could have befallen you. But also we, down to the youngest mechanics, are grief-stricken.

After reading aloud Wolff's details of the last flight, Lothar read on in silence. He did not care to have his mother hear the suspicion that followed, which Wolff felt and most probably exaggerated in the agony of his loss. Wolff's letter continued:

The captain is said to have brought down an English plane and shortly thereafter to have made a steep gliding descent. His landing was normal. Now, there are two possibilities: either the motor was overstrained and suddenly refused to work, or the motor was hit. But he most probably was alive and that consoled us greatly.

And next day Maj. Hahnelt came to us and told us that the captain had been killed. This was impossible. This could not be true! We refused to believe it! And I had an awful suspicion, founded on a rumor whispered at that time.

You can not land your machine normally when mortally wounded. And there were Australians there who had seen and testified that the English plane had been brought down by Richthofen. And then the captain landed right among them—No, better not to think of such a horror. Could men really be so barbarous as that? I expect you will hear more details in a very short time.

But should this rumor be true the German people will call the enemy to account. And we, especially we, the Pursuit Squadron Eleven (Jagdstaffel Eleven), will show the English that in spite of Richthofen's death his spirit is right among us. They shall learn to feel it.

Yours very sincerely,
HANS JOACHIM WOLFF.

Lothar folded the letter and switched to an official message from Berlin. It was from Von Hoeppner, the commanding general of the German air forces.

He then read a letter which the father of the ace had received at the front from Gen. von der Marwitz, the army commander.

With hands folded in the lap of her severely plain black dress, Frau von Richthofen sat through the reading of the letters without a word. Her grief was inward and concealed. She knew the Spartan stuff that Germany expected of the mothers of its fighting men.

Her gaze was out of the window on the wet branches of the young firs and pines in the front park of the house. Manfred had played under them when he was young. Yes, it had happened—they said on April 21. Why, that was only eleven days before his next birthday. On May 2 he would be—would have been 26.

Seven months more and the war is over—lost for Germany. Her son died in a vain cause. Another year, and the major, Herr von Richthofen, slips into the beyond. Three years more and Lothar leaves for the same destination by way of a flying accident.

There remains Bolke — the youngster of the family, whose age had kept him from the front—and one married daughter. These were with her two years ago when she went to Berlin to attend the German official burial of her son Manfred.

It was the 19th of November, 1925, that Richthofen's body came back to Germany. After the exhumation at Bertangles, the remains were placed on a private train, which, as soon as it touched the German frontier, became the object of veneration all along the road to the capital.

Draped with black, it passed through Karlshrue, Darmstadt, Frankfurt, Kehl and Baden. It steamed slowly through the stations, between crowds of silent, bareheaded Germans. It arrived at Potsdam at night, where it was met by a torchlight procession which escorted the casket on a gun-carriage to the Berlin church in which the body lay in state for two days.

Two guards of honor, one from the uhlans and the other from the air force, watched over the body night and day. Manfred's uhlan helmet and saber reposed on the new oaken casket at the foot of which rested the simple black wooden cross that had marked the grave in France. In front of the casket were the decorations of the ace. Flowers were banked high in the chapel.

Princes and princesses of the old empire followed common citizens of the new republic in the crush of humanity that came to pay homage at the bier.

And not only Germans, but Americans and Englishmen attended the services. One of the most significant tributes was a large floral airplane propeller, carried to the church and placed before the casket by two Allied airmen who were members of the forces that Richthofen fought so successfully. They were Lieut. John Clayton, formerly of the United States army aviation service, and Lieut. John Hays, a Canadian pilot in the old Royal Air Force.

At the state funeral ceremonies on the second day the casket was placed in front of the altar and at the foot of the cross. Four of the old Spandau machine guns with which Richthofen had shot down so many of his victims were superimposed on the bier, at the foot of which a broken propeller projected through an enormous wreath.

Eighteen silent flying men—somber knights of the air in black leather helmets and jackets—stood the final guard. They were survivors and comrades of the Red Knight's war days. The church was packed with notables of the German state and army.

After the ceremony the casket was carried by eight pallbearers, all wearing the cross of the Pour le Merite order, and placed on a gun-carriage. Frau von Richthofen left the church accompanied by Bolko.

Through long stiff ranks of silent troops a military band with muffled drums led the funeral cortege through the streets of Berlin to the cemetery. Throughout Germany, flags of the republic hung at half-mast, and in many places the old imperial flag was flown.

Before the horse-drawn gun-carriage on which rested the casket, a steel-helmeted soldier carried a cushion bearing Richthofen's decorations. It was a service similar to that which Richthofen himself had performed at the funeral of his old master and airfight instructor, Boelke.

In Mercy cemetery the body was lowered into the grave while the military stood at the salute, civilians bared their heads, and the colors were dipped. Von Hindenburg concluded the impressive rites by tossing the first handful of earth into the grave.

On Oct. 26, 1926, Mother Von Richthofen stood again at the foot of her son's tomb in the presence of a number of German dignitaries, gathered this time to unveil the stone which marks the final resting-place of Germany's greatest war hero.

The mother took one last look at the heavy marble slab and returned to the old home in Silesia.

She lives there today, a woman of dreams and hopes. Her home is a museum of the relics of the life, the battles, and the death of the Red Knight of Germany. These and her memories are her treasures.

Of all the honors and eulogies, praise and tributes that Manfred earned in his remarkable war career, there is one she prefers above all the rest. She has copied it in English in her quaint penmanship into her diary.

It was published in London, three days after Manfred's death, in the British aviation review Aeroplane, a journal widely read by British flying men. It reads:

THE TRIBUTE HIS MOTHER PREFERS.

Richthofen is dead.

All airmen will be pleased to hear that he has been put out of action, but there will be no one amongst them who will not regret the death of such a courageous nobleman.

Several days ago a banquet was held in honor of one of our aces. In answering the speech made in his honor, he toasted Richthofen, and there was no one who refused to join. Thus Englishmen honored a brave enemy.

Both airmen are now dead; our celebrated pilot had expressed the hope that he and Richthofen could survive the war so as to exchange experiences in times of peace.

Anybody would have been proud to have killed Richthofen in actual combat, but there is no doubt that the Royal Flying Corps would also have been proud to shake his hand, had he fallen into captivity alive.

It is not true to say that Richthofen personally was credited with all planes shot down by his squadron. The German numbers are mostly exact and are, perhaps, sometimes exaggerated when strategic necessities make this advisable. It must be mentioned, however, that the Germans include army blimps (balloons) in the number of brought down planes, but, even so, Richthofen's victories would amount to seventy planes.

Richthofen was a brave man, a decent adversary, and a true nobleman.

May he rest in peace!

Beloved by his people, honored by his foes, admired by the brave, the Red Knight of Germany, whose indomitable spirit made him the greatest individual killing force in the ranks of his country's fighters, earned well the epitaph that will be ever his in the hearts of his people:

He was a soldier.

The End.

With these twin Spandau machine guns, which British flyers are examining, and others of similar design Richthofen shot down his victims.

THREE TRAPPED 10 WEEKS.

Three men were trapped for more than 10 weeks in the famous Lonship's Lighthouse at Land's end, Scotland, during the recent storms. The men ordinarily do a month's duty at the lighthouse, but rough weather and stormy seas made it impossible to get a boat to traverse the mile and three-quarters to land. A relief boat waited in Sennen Cove with a stock of supplies, but was helpless during that time. The lone vigil of the men to keep the light burning was not even relieved by radio, for their receiving set had been sent to shore for repairs just before the storm broke. All three were in good spirits when rescued.

THE INVESTMENT

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

It's all over now and we're trying to forget it. But now and then something in the newspapers brings it all back, and for a time in memory we live those terrible days over again. We thought about it when General Motors suddenly began climbing toward the sky, making and breaking men as it climbed; again when Green Cannanea scored up to 145 from 30, and our next door neighbor who had had the wit or the luck to get out in time bought the big house down by the water and his wife hired a parlor maid to answer the door bell. Again it came up when the shorts got squeezed in the Radio Corporation business, and my most intimate friend had to begin buying his golf balls from the caddies for twenty-five cents apiece instead of getting new ones from the pro for a dollar.

So One Day Dolly Went Down Town Determinedly, And When She Came Home She Had Put All Grandmother's Money in Utopian

The trouble with bitter experience is that they are so often repeated, if not in our own lives, then in the lives of others. And so they return to plague the investor. Time cures all woes, we are told, but it is a long and often painful cure. I suppose twenty years from now, if we live that long we shall have forgotten all about it. But that is a long time to wait. And in twenty years we shall have other cares to cast us down. But what can you expect in such an imperfect world? And even if everything ran always smoothly, we should get so used to contentment that it would bore us to death. So I suppose things are just as well as they are. Maybe I'd better get on with the story.

It concerned Dolly's investment. Dolly's grandmother had died and left her money, and we decided that it must be invested for the benefit of the children. How to invest it was the problem. Neither of us knew anything about finance or bonds, or stocks, or debentures, or any of the securities that are bought and sold down in Wall Street. For a week we read the financial pages of the newspapers carefully, but we didn't seem to make much headway. The advertisements were always promising, but now and then we would find that some company which had praised itself highly was selling its stock way down below par, and that didn't seem so good. We subscribed for all the little booklets that you get by inclosing the accompanying coupon and a two-cent stamp, but none of the investments they suggested were in businesses we knew anything about.

"We really ought to have some insight into the business we are interested in," said Dolly. "It would be stupid for a druggist to buy stock in a grocery store."

I don't know about that," I said. "A druggist nowadays carries a full line of groceries, as well as phonograph records and books and children's toys and light lunches. He ought to know a lot about the grocery business."

"Don't try to be funny," said Dolly, "you know what I mean. Here's this Kanogoman Improvement Company. They say it has wonderful prospects, and if we knew anything about the improvement business we might be able to judge its value. What is an improvement business?"

"An improvement business, I said is—I mean, why its a business that improves things."

"What things?"

"All sorts of things. Property for instance. You've heard of improved property haven't you?"

"Improved property is property with buildings on it. Our property is improved property. That's why we have to pay such high taxes on it."

"Well then, an Improvement company is a company that builds buildings on property, and puts all the modern improvements inside the buildings."

Dolly sighed, "You don't know what you're talking about, she said. We shan't put grandmother's money into an improvement company unless we find out what it's about."

"How about a power company?"

"What does a power company do?"

"I suppose it makes power. That ought to be a good business. There are a lot of power companies. We'll have a wide choice."

"How can we tell which one to buy into?"

"Well, of course, all power is much the same stuff—takes just so much of it to run machines and light lights. I suppose any one of them would do."

"No, I can not take the risk. Do you know anybody in Wall Street?"

"Some of the boys over at the club are bond salesmen."

"Ask one of them what to buy."

That was my first mistake. I was overheard by five more bond salesmen when I asked the one I knew best what to buy. For a week, on the train, in the office, at home by personal visit, and over the telephone I was told what to buy. I was told so often and so emphatically what to buy, and what not to buy, the five salesmen each predicting ruin if I bought any securities sold by the others that I didn't dare buy anything. So that was out.

So one day Dolly went down town determinedly, and when she came home she had put all grandmother's money in Utopian Preferred. She had determined to take the bit into her teeth, and take the responsibility.

For a week Utopian Preferred held steady. Then it shot up. It kept shooting up. The financial writers noticed this, and began writing about it. Some of them said there was a corner in it. Others said there was a pool, and that the market was being rigged. Still others said that the company had been keeping vast resources under cover, and the public had just discovered them. They predicted that it would go to three hundred.

We were both up before breakfast every morning scanning the stock quotations. Dolly thought for a time she had better take her profit. Then she decided she would be a fool to do it if the stock doubled in value. It kept going up, and everey day was an anxious day for us. How long should we hold on?

For a year that confounded stock went up and down, up and down, still keeping well about the figure for which Dolly had bought it. I hung around friends who knew about the market, but they said they couldn't advise me—too much responsibility. It got out that Dolly had some of the stock and my prestige increased mightily. So did Dolly's. The suburban reporters wanted to interview her on how to succeed in the street.

All the neighbors were envious. We enjoyed our celebrity hugely, while it lasted.

But that was not for long. The baby got an attack of indigestion and for a week we didn't think about much of anything but diets and specialists and the art of modifying milk. The day he was declared out of the woods by the doctor we looked at the financial page again. There it was at the top of a column, "Crash in Utopia Preferred Spells Ruin for Flock of Lambs. It had spelled ruin for us. Dolly's fifty dollars had shrivelled to five!"

THUGS OBJECT TO JOBS.

NEW YORK CITY.—Mrs. W. L. Whipple and her daughter Eunice were awakened by two prowlers in their room. While the ittruders were ransacking the room, Eunice spoke up: "Why do you do this, don't you know you can't win?" "We have so far," boasted one of the thugs. "Why don't you get a job and become honest?" Eunice asked. "Oh, lady, you don't know about labor conditions; they are terrible. Do you know, there is work attached to every one of the jobs." With that the men crawled out of the window and disappeared.

LITERARY SAFECRACKER.

DETROIT. — Detective Francis McDonald was called by a concern to investigate a safe robbery. Looking around he found a note in the typewriter, tapped painfully by the robber. It read: "The night man was mopping the tea room when this was don and be on watch out for a bomb is hear." The note showed scant evidence of literary qualities, but it did reveal the finest fingerprints it has been McDonald's lot to find in a long time.

A young man who was brought up on a farm in Western Pennsylvania qualified for district school teacher. Further persuing his studies and teaching, he managed to save enough money to put him through medical college. He began the practice of medicine in the new oil section of Pennsylvania, and often rode horse-back through the woods to reach and relieve those who were seriously ill. He was a student of nature, knew and easily recognized most of the medicinal plants growing in the woods.

Finally, he moved to Buffalo, N. Y., where he launched his favorite remedies, and, in a short time they were sold by every druggist in the land. Today, the name of this man, the late Dr. R. V. Pierce, is known throughout the world. His Golden Medical Discovery is the best known general tonic for building up strength, restoring impaired tissues and enriching the blood. More than fifty million bottles have been sold in the U. S. If your druggist does not sell it, in liquid or tablets, you can obtain a trial package of the tablets by sending 10c to the Dr. Pierce Clinic, in Buffalo, N. Y.

ISN'T LOVE LOVELY? By FANNIE HURST

Author of "Humoresque", "A President Is Born"

It was one of those whirlwind situations that often happen in books, but occur with the greatest rarity in real life.

It was a real case of love at first sight. Dazzling, impetuous, sincere love that was too incredible, too delightful, to analyze.

THE remarkable thing about the vaudeville act known as "Duvene Sisters" was not that they were not sisters, most sister-acts aren't. But in this case, the two yellow-haired, blue-eyed, nimble-kneed, buck-dancing, somersaulting "sisters" were mother and daughter.

Marcia Duvene had been born in a theatrical boarding-house and reared in her mother's dressroom. Marcia's daughter Elsie, had been born in a theatrical boarding-house and reared in her mother's dressing-room. Marcia was just eighteen years older than her daughter Elsie. She looked so few of those eighteen years the elder, that even in the theatrical world where youth is not a luxury but a necessity, she was a sort of ninth wonder.

There was really only one kind of light that could reveal the actual difference in the ages of Marcia and her daughter. God's daylight. And since Marcia and her daughter were seldom exposed to it, the illusion of the sisterhood of these two from behind the footlights, at least, was about perfect. For that matter, even to behold them walking down the street revealed scarcely more than five years between them. Those differences lay in the tiny shadows beneath Marcia's eyes. And perhaps in the slightly loose muscles of her face.

But temperamentally, where the wrinkles did not show, never were two sisters more en rapport than Marcia Duvene and her lovely Elsie.

They slept together, they awakened together, they gossiped together, they loved together, they hated together, they lived the full and busy, the picayune, the carefree and the irresponsible life of the theatre together.

IT is doubtful if Elsie, who was her mother all over again, ever thought much of the strangeness of the situation. She had never known her father, who had died one month before her birth; her first crib had been a trunk and for as far back as she could remember, her mother had been someone who could turn a double somersault, flounce a naughty ballet skirt and combine sweetness and tenderness and a bit of temper, with youth, nonsense and a strange wisdom that might have been maternal. But not so that you could notice it.

They thought, these two, not as mother and daughter, but as sisters. Stormy little scenes between them invariably ended in tearful reconciliation. They dressed alike with the rather startling naivete of the theatre, and even in the day of the sophisticated little silhouette of the modern, bobbed-hair flapper, went about in poke bonnets with pale blue facing and yellow ringlets dancing to their shoulders and pastel-colored frocks in which they travelled.

TWO pretty women. Pretty in the same way. Just the right sort of prettiness for successful vaudeville performers.

Cheerfulness, too. A smile and a glimpse of white teeth gleaming between parted, curved lips. A smile that bespoke friendliness, a happy, carefree attitude toward life, a feeling that each day was worth living for the fun and happiness it held.

They were the typical vaudevillians, all right. The usual brand of "sister-act." About the same height, same weight, same accomplishment. Marcia was a little taller than her daughter and had a contralto voice which blended passably with Elsie's fluty little soprano.

Elsie was the more accomplished dancer—after all, the years were irrevocably in Marcia's bones—but Marcia still closed their act on the "split" done with a litheness that Elsie could not equal, much less surpass. They were not "big time" players. They were not sufficiently outstanding in any manner whatsoever for that, but by the time Elsie was eighteen, they had been averaging forty weeks a year for five years. They were a staple act.

IT was as the lovely Elsie crept up toward her late teens, that fears, apprehensions and dread began to creep out of the placid years that Marcia had enjoyed with her daughter as her private own. It began to dawn upon Marcia, as men's eyes turned more and more upon the loveliness that was Elsie's, that life was about to break in upon the placidity of which she was so greedy.

It is true that throughout the years of Elsie's little girlhood, men's eyes had not failed to turn toward Marcia. But Marcia's indifference to them was the indifference of a woman who is satiated with contentment. Her life with her daughter was sufficient unto itself and so there had arisen no problem. But now suddenly, the disquieting awareness had come to Marcia that Elsie was desirable.

To Elsie, her adolescence came as a surprise and a delight. The youths who paid her homage were as novel as they were stimulating. Life was suddenly a Christmas tree hung with sparkling ornaments that seemed within her reach. Watching, Marcia knew that she was helpless.

Helpless as any doting mother is when her daughter reaches the age when youths pay her homage. Close as was the bond between mother and daughter, delightful as was their companionship, Elsie's youth craved the homage that was offered to her. Craved it and answered to it as normal, happy, healthy girlhood does answer.

Elsie was unconscious that anything had happened. All she saw was that the world was a rosier, happier place, that it was a more joyous thing to be alive. That she had more joy to give, more love and affection to give, than she had ever known before.

Elsie knew nothing of the struggle that was going on inside Marcia's troubled breast. Knew nothing of the hours of panic and trouble. Hours, almost, of jealousy. Jealousy that anything so completely lovely and satisfying as her companionship with her daughter should be disturbed. For Marcia knew that it would be disturbed. Knew that she was helpless before the call of youth to youth, love to love.

AND then there began in Elsie's mother the fight to maintain her place in the affection of her daughter. She did it by entering the competition, so to speak. Elsie's wooers found themselves after a while, bewildered between the two of them; the rather dazzling charm of the mother, the less-sure, but nonetheless appealing charm of the daughter.

For every corsage that arrived at Elsie's door, another and sometimes two arrived at Marcia's. Often, with her feet aching and her throat aching and her heart aching, Marcia and one of the youths accompanied Elsie, whose feet and throat and heart were not aching, to dance or cabaret.

And all this Elsie took for granted as part of the natural regime of mother and daughter. It was natural to her since she had never known anything else.

The obvious entanglement which might arise in such a situation as this did not occur. There was never a moment that the affections of these two women fastened themselves upon the same individual.

The youths who milled around the "sisters" were amusing as so much pastime. In her own naive little way, Elsie had a curiosity of maturity. She loved the light, the glitter, the adulation, the adoration that went with her sweetness and charm, but there was nothing in these transient young men that seemed capable of fastening her interest or her emotions.

It seemed to Marcia in her secret fears and dreads and heart-sickness, that she could never be grateful enough for this. This girl, who was her life and almost as much a part of her as the very feet upon which she danced, who might ultimately break her heart when the time came to give her up, at least where affairs of the heart were concerned, was no scatter-brain.

Together, like any two sisters, they twitted and scoffed over their suitors and exchanged intimate jokes after they were tucked into bed at night and gossipped over their breakfast cups with all of the school girl absurdities of the undergraduate social world.

IT was in a town called Bradford where they had played many a time before, that Marcia and her daughter met a man named Grover, who had recently taken over the management of the theatre in which they were appearing. He was a well-preserved, jovial sort of fellow, enormously fascinated by the world of the theatre that was so new to him, a person of fresh, unjaded spontaneity.

The second night of the "Duvene Sisters" engagement, he invited them out to late supper and brought along as a foursome, his own son, Raymond Grover, a young physician in the town.

Then ensued one of those whirlwind situations that frequently happen in books, but occur with the greatest rarity in life. It was a case of love-at-first-sight on the part of two adult males.

For the three subsequent weeks, Lester Grover and his son Raymond followed from town to town the "sisters" who had so dazzled their vision, and their imagination.

To Marcia and her daughter, something incredible and too delightful to analyze had befallen.

They were in love. The rest tells glibly, easily and romantically. It is one of those stories that works itself out to the satisfaction of all concerned, but perhaps with the possible exception of one condition. And up to now, with the two handsome households of Marcia and her daughter so comfortably established in the town of Bradford, there is no reason to believe that this condition is ever going to matter to the detriment of anybody's happiness.

Raymond Grover, the son, married Elsie's mother.
