Iraq to free Kuwaitis

U.S. shoots down enemy warplane

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Iraq agreed Friday to free thousands of Kuwaiti detainees within days as part of truce negotiations, but a U.S. warplane shot down a second Iraqi jet fighter that violated the cease-fire.

At talks in Riyadh with a four-man Iraqi delegation, the Gulf War allies also agreed to quadruple the pace of prisoner of war repatriations, which could mean the 62,000 Iraqi POWs could be home within two months.

In New York, the U.N. Security Council's sanctions committee agreed to allow unrestricted food shipments to Iraq and to ease a ban on fuel, spare parts and other materials after Undersecretary-General Martti Ahtisaari said the bomb-wrecked country faced disease and famine.

Beginning Saturday, about 1,000 Kuwaitis will be driven daily from Iraq to the Saudi Arabian border township of Arar, 550 miles northwest of Riyadh, and flown to Kuwait, said Roland Huguenin, spokesman for the International Committee of the Red Cross in Riyadh.

Arar will also be the transfer point for 1,000 Iraqi POWs daily, Huguenin said. They will travel to the border in Saudi buses, then board buses for Baghdad. Previously the Iraqis were bused every two days in groups of 500.

In Kuwait City, there were scenes of jubilation as Kuwaitis released earlier by the Iraqis arrived in the emirate's capital Friday. Women wept with joy and men fired automatic rifles in the air.

"It's a dream come true," said Redha Meqwar, a 30-year-old army sergeant who was held 7½ months.

The U.S. Central Command estimated that Iraq still holds 5,000 Kuwaitis and said the two sides agreed all would be freed by April 1. It said the allies hold 62,000 Iraqi POWs, 2,000 higher than earlier estimates.

The Kuwaitis were rounded up during Iraq's seven-month occupation of the oil-rich emirate. Some were seized in the final days before allied forces drove Iraqi troops from Kuwait.

Their return was among the conditions set by Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, commander of U.S. forces in the Persian Gulf, during talks on March 3 that established the provisional cease-fire.

Gen. Colin Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said in newspaper reports published Saturday that U.S. military forces would remain in southern Iraq for "some months to come."

Despite the shooting down of two Iraqi jets by U.S. fighters, however, Powell said, "I don't think we're trying to use our military force to influence events

Victory parade to step off this morning

Staff Report

A spirited gala of floats, band, military equipment and even a Confederate Air Force fly-over will be part of today's mammoth Gulf War victory parade down Wall Avenue.

As patriots were putting final touches on their floats Friday, a letter from the White House to the residents of the city was received, saluting Midlanders spirit in organizing the parade salute. (The full text of the letter appears on Page 4A.)

Gayle Dodson, a Salute to Troops Parade Committee member, said more than 2,000 entries will take part in the event to celebrate victory and honor local troops who served in the Persian Gulf war. There are 125 entries, Ms. Dodson said.

She said even Saddam Hussein is expected to show up on some of the floats.

Other participants include a bagpipe band, a 60-member choir from Santa Rita Elementary School, an entry from Summer Mummers, a horseback riding team and antique fire trucks.

George H. O'Brien Jr., a Midlander who won the Medal of Honor for his efforts in the Korean War, will serve as grand marshal.

■ Letter from President Bush/4A

The parade will start about 11 a.m. in Dennis the Menace Park off Andrews Highway and then turn east on Wall Avenue and proceed to Centennial Plaza.

A ceremony honoring the troops will be held in the plaza following the parade's conclusion.

Ms. Dodson said those going to view the parade should bring hand-held American flags in order to create a sea of flags. She said the flags can be bought along the parade route for $1.

Joanne Dinsmoor, another parade organizer, said the event will be a show of patriotic vigor as well as a tribute to troops who served in the Persian Gulf.

She said at least six veterans of that war will join the parade, as will a number of Vietnam veterans, she said.

A $5-a-plate barbecue dinner will be held starting 12:30 p.m. in the Midland Civic Center. A street dance sponsored by KCHX-Foxy 106 FM is scheduled for 7 p.m. to 11 p.m. in the Centennial Plaza area.

Gramm praises local firm

■ Senator points out that in the wake of oil field disaster, Kuwait turned to Permian Basin experts.

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

Sen. Phil Gramm said Friday it should not go unnoticed that in the wake of the greatest disaster in the history of the oil industry, the government of Kuwait turned to Midland for reconstruction expertise.

"It shows that the best technical people in the oil industry are in the Permian Basin," said Gramm, who was in Midland to attend a briefing by OGS Engineering on Kuwaiti rebuilding efforts.

He praised the efforts of T.B. O'Brien, whose firm O'Brien, Goins and Simpson (OGS Engineering) is heading efforts to extinguish the burning wells and reconstruct the Kuwaiti oil fields. Gramm said that because of the efforts of the Midland consulting firm, thousands of Texans would find employment in Kuwait.

Midland Mayor Carroll Thomas and Midland Chamber of Commerce Chairman Gregg Owens both added their congratulations to O'Brien, a petroleum engineer, for the major role OGS

Tornadoes kill at least three in Tennessee

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Tornadoes cut a swath across parts of Tennessee and Kentucky on Friday, killing at least three people, injuring scores more and flattening houses, authorities said.

At least four twisters touched down and between 15 and 18 were reported in western and central Tennessee, authorities there said.

A man was crushed between two cars in an auto lot in Selmer, 80 miles east of Memphis, when a tornado swept across Highway 45 at the south of the town in

Dynagen 'environmentally bankrupt,' says TACB

■ Investigator says Odessa company is too slow in finding solutions to air-pollution violations.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

ODESSA — While Dynagen Inc. is negotiating with the Texas Attorney General to settle a year-old lawsuit over alleged violations of the Texas Clean Air Act, a Texas Air Control Board investigator Friday accused Dynagen of being "environmentally bankrupt."

"The Dynagen corporation is, in my opinion, environmentally bankrupt because of their slowness to respond to air-pollution violations and effective remedies to stop the violations," said Neil Carman, TACB engineering specialist who investigated complaints of Dynagen's solar-ponds emitting foul odors.

General Tire, the world's fourth largest tire maker, is headquartered in Akron, Ohio, and is owned by a West Germany company, Continental A.G. of Hannover.

"These ponds are continuing to accumulate," Carman said. "They have a massive amount of sludge," which he alleged, is laden with hydrogen sulfide.

"It is an environmental time bomb. The company is very good on dragging their feet in fixing the problems in the plants, including the solar ponds."

DYNAGEN: Company negotiates settlement of lawsuit

(From 1A)

Dynagen spokesman Tim Gorman of Odessa disagreed with Carman's characterizations of the plant's evaporative solar-pond operations for disposing of waste-water.

"That's not true," Gorman, plant manager, said of Carman's accusations. "I don't think that's a true or responsible statement."

Dynagen, Gorman said, has made a "commitment," last October in Judge Tryon Lewis' 161st Texas State District Court, not only to "clean up" the ponds but to get rid of them and to install a waste-water treatment plant to recycle the water.

"We don't want just a commitment from them (Dynagen)," Carman retorted. "We want dates and plans and action."

Last year, Lewis found Dynagen guilty of contempt of court for polluting the air with "foul emissions" from its solar ponds even while the company said it is committed to cleaning up the ponds.

"We have committed sizeable funds into studying the ponds," Gorman said. "We communicated those plans in court to Judge Lewis. We have been carrying out the chlorine-dioxide treatment of the ponds. We also told him of plans to ultimately close the ponds."

Chlorine-dioxide treatments are designed to sterilize the ponds by killing the anaerobic bacteria that cause the "nuisance" odor.

Carman called the treatment a "short-term shot in the dark."

Gorman noted, a pond clean-up campaign and a waste-water treatment project involving several millions of dollars cannot be accomplished "overnight."

Dynagen, he said, is "moving very diligently and very aggressively" in complying with the Texas Clean Air Act.

"You don't want to rush a project so it's not designed properly," Gorman said. "I don't want to get into a verbal debate. We want to do the best we can for the plant and this community."

"My management team and our employees are doing everything to resolved and meet the challenges set forth for us. We are going to continue to show good faith and exert our best efforts," Gorman said.

David Preister, assistant Texas Attorney General in the Environmental Protection Division, is negotiating with Dynagen's Houston lawyer, James E. Smith of the Baker & Botts law firm.

Preister said he is optimistic of a settlement by April 5. Otherwise, more violations will be added to the lawsuit, and another injunction will be sought to prohibit Dynagen from polluting the air. An earlier injunction, violated by Dynagen, resulted in the contempt-of-court ruling by Judge Lewis.

Dynagen, Preister noted, holds the "second largest number of violations in Texas Air Control Board history: 428. The record is held by Permian Chemical Co., which filed bankrupcy and closed in 1987.

"I hope it (the record) doesn't get broken," Carman said, "because that would mean we've got more problems. I'm trying to do my job, and it's not easy."

Dynagen attorney Smith noted that only the company's evaporative solar-pond operations, and not its manufacturing processes, have been in alleged violations of the Texas Clean Air Act.

The company does not plan "to do anything other than just be safe, in an environmentally sound way, of getting rid of water by evaporation."

The Dynagen Odessa plant was opened in the late 1950s.

Based largely on evidence gathered by TACB investigators, then-Attorney General Jim Mattox filed suit against Dynagen in December 1989 for violating the Texas Clean Air Act and amended that petition in January 1990. That month, Lewis ordered Dynagen to stop polluting. And nine months later, Lewis found Dynagen guilty of continuing to pollute and in contempt of court.

Since May 1982, plant neighbors and TACB investigators have cited the "air quality downwind from the Odessa petrochemical complex."

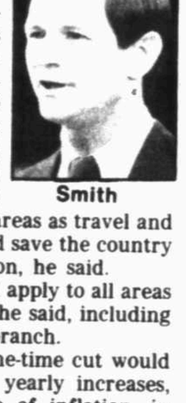

"The complaints alleged the presence of strong chemical odors which allegedly produced adverse health effects (respiratory distress, headaches, nausea, and eye irritation) and interference with the use and enjoyment of property," the AG's petition alleged.

Those complaints resulted in a class-action suit filed by citizens who live near the Dynagen plant in south Odessa. That case has not yet been tried.

SMITH: Cutting deficit should be priority

quire government agencies to cut 10 percent of their overhead costs.

Smith

"If we cut overhead, we are tackling a part of the budget that has never been scrutinized before," he told 60 or so people gathered in the 238th District Courtroom. The cuts — in such areas as travel and supplies — could save the country about $134 billion, he said.

The cut would apply to all areas of government, he said, including the legislative branch.

He said the one-time cut would be followed by yearly increases, tied to the rate of inflation, in money budgeted for overhead expenses.

Smith, R-San Antonio, said a cut in the capital gains tax would also help the economy by stimulating large-scale investment by members of the middle class.

The existing tax on capital gains "is a tax on the middle class to keep them from becoming affluent," he said, quoting what he described as a common capital sentiment.

Although he said he generally supports any kind of tax cut, Smith expressed reservations about a proposed 1 percent cut in the Social Security payroll tax, from 6.2 percent to 5.2 percent.

The cut would put more money in consumers' pockets in the short run, he said, but would leave the Social Security trust fund in dire straits in the long run.

"That's one of the few areas where Congress has actually planned for the future," he said of the trust fund. "I would hate to start tampering with it."

After discussing the economy and the allied victory in the Persian Gulf war, Smith fielded questions from the floor on issues ranging from congressional term limitations to civil rights.

Smith said there are ways other than term limitations to bring about election reform, such as a reduction in the amount of money donated to campaigns by political action committees.

"I'm not opposed to term limitations," he said. "I think we need more turnover than we have now."

Congressional redistricting will cause a lot of turnover in 1992, he predicted. And 1992 is the last year that members of Congress elected before 1978 can cash in unspent campaign contributions for retirement, which should be an incentive for some members to step down.

Some members of the audience were critical of the rule allowing this "take the money and run" arrangement, especially in light of the country's fiscal crisis.

Steve Benson, a draftsman for Marathon Oil Co., wanted to know why Congress last year voted itself a pay raise hidden within an ethics reform bill.

Although Smith said he didn't want the raise, the ethics reform bill it was attached to was too compelling to vote against.

"It's politics," Benson said of Smith's response. "It doesn't change what we see from here. They all got their pay raise and we're all here bleeding to death.

TI has new site manager

Staff Report

Jeff McCreary has been named new site manager for the Texas Instruments Semiconductor plant in Midland. McCreary, 34, replaces Glen Culhane who had been site manager at the Midland facility for the past six years.

Culhane, who has moved to Dallas, will now be responsible for TI semiconductor volume products worldwide with operations in Japan, Maylaysia, Taiwan, Mexico, Germany and the U.S., including Midland, reporting to directly to him.

McCreary, who has reported to Culhane as an applications manager at Midland for two years, will not only be responsible for Midland operations, but will be responsible for business strategy of TI semiconductor volume products worldwide.

McCreary has been with TI for seven years and received a BS in electrical engineering from Rose-Hulman Institute in Terre Haute, Ind.

Man held on murder charge

Staff Report

A man was being held in the Midland Detention Center after he was picked up by lawmen in Dallas and charged with murder, Midland County Sheriff's Office officials said.

Jose Hernandez Castellon, age unavailable, was being held on a $150,000 bond set by 238th District Court Judge John Hyde, officials said.

Castellon was arrested by sheriff's office deputies in Dallas and charged in connection with a Midland murder, authorities said.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Weather to be warmer

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for sunny, warmer and not as windy with a high in the mid-70s and 5 to 15 mph west winds, the National Weather Service in Midland said.

Tonight is expected to be fair with a low in the low 40s, NWS said. Sunday's forecast calls for sunny and warmer with a high near 80.

The record high of 91 for Friday's date was set in 1934, while the record low for today's date was 20 in 1952. Friday's high was 67, after an overnight low of 43.

STATE

North Texans were awakened Friday by thunder as severe rainstorms exited the region with a final burst.

The line of thunderstorms moved into northern Louisiana later in the day, officially ended the outbreak of severe thunderstorms that plagued North Texas and southern Oklahoma for the past 30 hours.

State temperatures ranged from the 60s and 70s in North and West Texas to upper 70s and low 80s in South Texas Friday.

Skies will be fair to partly cloudy through Saturday in South Texas with highs on expected in the 70s and 80s.

NATION

Spring thunderstorms tossed hail and spun tornadoes Friday across parts of the South and the Midwest.

Snow whitened sections of the north-central United States, but weather was mostly dry west of the Rocky Mountains.

A low pressure system stirred up thunderstorms that stretched from northeastern Texas to western Kansas. Storms also clustered over sections of the Mississippi and lower Ohio valleys.

At least six tornadoes were reported over Arkansas Friday morning. One, in Concord, damaged about 25 houses and destroyed several mobile homes, including the sheriff's, authorities said. No serious injuries were reported.

Lexington, Ky., was drenched with more than an inch and two-thirds of rain during the six-hour period ending at 7 a.m. EST.

Light snow blanketed western sections of the Dakotas and light rain and drizzle dampened Minnesota and the eastern Dakotas.

The storm also dumped heavy snow and whipped up high winds in parts of Colorado and New Mexico.

The Associated Press also contributed to this report.

(From 1A)

Engineering will play in the restoration of Kuwait.

OGS Engineering is one of two prime contractors charged with rebuilding Kuwait. OGS will be responsible for restoration of the oil fields and Bechtel Corp. will have responsibility for rebuilding the infrastructure of the nation.

In his briefing to the senator, O'Brien, who first went to Kuwait in the early 1950s as an employee of Gulf Oil Co. (now Chevron) said the nation and its oilfields are devastated.

He said about 550 — 60 percent — of the Kuwaiti wells, which flow from 5,000 to 50,000 barrels daily had been blown up by the retreating Iraqi army, resulting in the burning of 5 million barrels of oil daily.

He said some of the wells were severly damaged and would be difficult to extinguish because sand-bagged, military explosives had been set off at ground level next to the wellheads.

"We don't know how extensive the damage is, or how difficult it will be to put out the fires and repair the wells, because all we can see is smoke and flame coming out of a hole in the ground."

O'Brien is more optimistic about restoration of the oil fields than much of the speculation in the press: "I think we can be producing some oil within in six months and perhaps be up to 1 million barrels within a year."

Neither does he expect any serious reservoir damage as a result of the wells flowing wide open at three and five times normal rates. He said the Burgan Field has reserves of 10 billion barrels and would eventually flow 100 percent water, but predicted the only damage would be loss of product.

He said other reservoirs that have gas-oil solution drive could be damaged, but it would not be the same type of damage as commonly seen in Texas.

O'Brien said three of the four fire-fighting teams hired to put out the fires are in Kuwait and beginning to coordinate efforts. "We put out our first fire yesterday, all we had to do was turn off the valve."

A worker wearing a fireproof suit and drenched by water walked into the flames and simply turned off the valve, O'Brien explained.

He said that some of the wells would be easier than others. Some of the wells which produce poisonous hydrogen sulfide gas will have to continue to burn until they can be shut-in. Because of the thick, black smoke, firefighters working around the wells have to wear paper masks like those worn by painters.

He noted that one of the most difficult tasks was to provide living arrangements for the workers. "The infrastructure is totally gone. We visited the former oilfield town of Al Ahmadi, on the coast. About 8,000 once lived there, but now it has a population of zero and only three buildings are inhabitable. All the water is flown in and the only time one can shower is when they run across a military unit at shower time. Food for the most part is eaten out of cans."

He expects to have housing and facilities for 75 fire-fighters completed sometime this week, but as many as 1,500 will be needed for the well-killing operations.

Neal Hesse, a U.S. Department of Commerce official at the briefing, said $60-100 billion would be needed to rebuild Kuwait, and that the tab would be paid from Kuwaiti assets around the world.

Hesse said most of the contracts for reconstruction would go to American firms, and that of the first $500 million in contracts 70 percent had gone to American firms. The Department of Commerce is acting as a clearing house to negotiate contracts between American firms and the Kuwaiti government.

Even the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers will be a contractor. Hesse said that the corps had received a $46 million design and engineering contract.

Asked if Iraq might have to bear part of the reconstruction cost by surrendering its interest in the giant Rumaila Field which straddles the Iraq-Kuwait border, Gramm said there had been no official talk about that option, but noted that the "transfer of resources" was an option available to the president in the matter of reparations.

O'Brien said the Rumaila Field is in U.S. military possession and that for unexplained reasons the Iraqis had even blown up some of their own oil wells.

FROM THE PRESIDENT

THE WHITE HOUSE

Washington

March 22, 1991

I am pleased to send greetings to everyone gathered in Midland — a city that I love — to give a Texas-size welcome home to the United States troops who have participated in Operation Desert Storm. This is a wonderful way to show our military personnel that we are tremendously proud of them.

Our pride in our Armed Forces is equalled only by the greatness of what they have accomplished. Working together with our coalition partners, they have not only freed a small defenseless country from brutal aggression but also helped to lay the foundation for a more peaceful world — one marked by respect for human rights and the rule of law.

However, while we celebrate the success of Operation Desert Storm, we also remember those who made the ultimate sacrifice, those who lost loved ones, and all the innocent people who have otherwise suffered as a result of this conflict. Let us pray for these individuals as we give thanks to our Heavenly Father for the unparalleled blessings of peace and liberty.

God bless you, and God bless the United States of America.

inside Iraq."

While restating the administration's antipathy toward Saddam, he added that "the interest of the region would be best served if Iraq remains a single country."

Powell said it was hard to know who had the upper hand in the Iraqi rebellion. "Every time you think the Hussein regime has squelched something in one of the towns in the south, for example, it flares up again," he said.

A report on Syrian radio Friday evening quoted an Iraqi rebel source as saying troops loyal to Saddam had been deployed on all the approaches to Baghdad to protect him from any coup attempt.

The radio quoted a spokesman for the Shiite fundamentalist Dawa party, whom it did not name, as also saying that "an intensive guard and extraordinary state of alert prevail around the headquarters of the Iraqi regime's head."

Iraqi rebels reported sporadic clashes with government forces in Baghdad amid growing anger over the alleged arrest of the elderly patriarch of the Shiite Muslim branch of Islam, Grand Ayatollah Abul-Kassem al-Khoei.

Rebels have accused Iraq of using helicopters and warplanes to drop napalm and incendiary bombs on them, in violation of the cease-fire agreement Iraq reached with the victorious allies in the Gulf War.

The United States has warned Iraq not to use its planes against Kurdish insurgents in northern Iraq and Shiite rebels in the south. Saddam Hussein is battling a twin challenge to his rule.

On Friday, an Air Force F-15C fired a single Sidewinder heat-seeking missile at an Iraqi Su-22, downing it at 11:40 a.m., the U.S. Central Command said.

The jet was hit near the key northern oil city of Kirkuk, which has been the scene of fierce fighting between government forces and Kurdish rebels. The pilot of a second Iraqi plane, a PC-7 propeller aircraft, reportedly bailed out when the Su-22 was downed. His fate was not known.

It was the second Iraqi plane shot down in less than 48 hours, and came after President Bush warned Iraq that U.S. forces would not hesitate to shoot down other Iraqi planes.

On Wednesday, an American F-15C shot down one of two Iraqi Su-22 jets spotted near Saddam's hometown of Tikrit about 110 miles north of Baghdad. The other jet landed.

In other gulf-related developments:

■ Kurdish sources said Jalal Talabani, leader of the Patriotic Union of Kurdistan, and aides were on their way to northern Iraq by road from Syria. The Kurds claimed they captured Kirkuk on Wednesday and that most of the mountain region has been purged of government forces. The Kurds also said they were beginning to push south to link up with Shiite rebels.

■ In Saudi Arabia, former Cabinet member Elizabeth Dole said the logistics chief for the Central Command had told her commanders expect U.S. troops to remain in Saudi Arabia long after most of the forces return to the United States in time for the Fourth of July holiday.

■ In Kuwait, the political opposition attacked the government, defying bans on public meetings, demanding a coalition government and criticizing the leadership of the ruling Al-Sabah family.

■ The first large-scale firefighting, by three U.S. firms and one Canadian outfit, began Friday in the Kuwaiti desert, where 600 oil wells set ablaze by occupying Iraqi forces are still burning.

TOWN: Smith holds meeting

(From 2A)

"I don't think the people in Washington realize how hard it is for those of us out here in the working sector."

But Nick Taylor, a Midland attorney and Republican who attended Friday's meeting, said Smith has demonstrated his fiscal responsibility by supporting the 10 percent cut in government overhead.

"He's applying the standards that businesses are applying to government and we need more of that kind of effort," Taylor said.

As far as civil rights legislation is concerned, Smith said he's opposed to a plan being put forth by the Democratic leadership in Congress. Under the Democrats' plan, he said, employers would be required to adhere to minority hiring quotas.

"It forces employers to hire on the basis of sex and race...rather than talent and hard work," he said.

TORNADOES: At least 3 people die

(From 1A)

McNairy County, said Sheriff Eric O. Bell of neighboring Chester County. The victim apparently was a customer at the lot, Bell said.

At least 30 people were treated at the hospital in Selmer, and dozens more were transported to hospitals outside the county, Bell said.

An infant was reported killed in Lewis County, about 70 miles northeast of Selmer.

In western Kentucky, an 11-year-old boy was killed in Olmstead, a town of 90 about 30 miles southwest of Bowling Green, authorities said.

Police Capt. Rawlie Greer in nearby Russellville said at least six people were injured in Olmstead and Auburn, a nearby town of about 1,000 in Logan County.

"Right now there are some people unaccounted for," Greer said.

Logan County Deputy Coroner Dale Shields identified the victim as Timmy Shoemake, who was visiting his grandparents when their mobile home was picked up and slammed against a tree.

Parts of Selmer were devastated, Bell said.

"There are torn down buildings and wiped out cars lots with the cars all jumbled around," Bell said. "It's terrible. Everybody was trying to find their people.

"Where it crossed Highway 45 there was a residential area," he said. "It was impossible to go in there, except on foot. One highway patrol sargeant had gone in on foot and got his family out. His house was destroyed."

David Wolfe, an operations officer with the Tennessee Emergency Management Agency, said another death was reported in Lewis County, about 70 miles northeast of Selmer.

"I heard that it was an infant," Wolfe said. "That's all I've heard." He said a tornado was reported to have touched down near Hohenwald, the Lewis County seat.

Mark Watts, of the McNairy County Civil Defense, said power lines were down all over the county and residents likely will be without electricity for more until Saturday.

TEMA operations officer James Francis said a tornado touched down in Wayne County, about 30 miles east of Selmer, destroying a boat dock and blowing the roof off a rubber plant.

Tornadoes and strong winds also damaged buildings in Benton, Rutherford, Robertson and Montgomery counties, he said. There were reports of minor injuries in those counties.

Tornadoes and heavy rains and winds stormed across much of Iowa Friday, tearing roofs off several buildings, destroying two mobile homes, downing power lines and overturning a semitrailer on Interstate 80.

Minister announces candidacy for council

Staff Report

The Rev. Michael R. DeVaughn, a District 2 candidate for the Midland City Council, said economic development and street repair are two important issues facing his area.

DeVaughan

DeVaughn, 31, will face Jose Alfredo Zertuche in the May 4 election.

If elected, spurring economic development on the city's south side will be one of his goals, he said. Repairing streets in District 2 also will be a priority, he said.

"We have some other concerns we'll take up later," said DeVaughn, who is making his first run at an elected office.

He said he decided to run after his candidacy was encouraged by fellow District 2 residents.

"I am concerned with some of the issues in the minority community," DeVaughn said. "I prayed about it and thought it over a week or two and then decided to go forward with my candidacy."

After attending Vincennes University in Indiana, he received his bachelor's of arts degree from Indiana University in 1983. He then earned a master's of divinity degree from the Perkins School of Theology at Southern Methodist University in Dallas.

He received the B'Nai B'rith award in social ethics and also studied at the Jerusalem Center for Biblical Studies in Jerusalem, Israel, and at the Gandhi Peace Foundation in New Dehli, India.

He was the pastor of Antioch Christian Methodist Episcopal Church in Abilene prior to moving to Midland, where he is pastor of St. Paul Christian Methodist Episcopal Church.

DeVaughn, who is unmarried, is active in a number of community and civic affairs.

He is a member of the Midland Opera Theater Board of Directors and United Way of Midland Communications Board.

He also serves as chairman of Midland schools' Alternative School Advisory Board and is an adviser to the African-American Student Alliance at Midland College.

In addition, he serves on the Palmer Drug Abuse Program Board of Directors, and is a member of Citizens for Positive Change and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

He also is an organizer of the Drug Free Southside Rally scheduled for April 13 in Washington Park.

"I believe Midland has the potential and the capacity to continue moving toward becoming a world-class city," DeVaughn said. "I want it to be a city where all sections of the community are willing and able to work together to achieve common goals which would enhance the quality of life for all of its citizens."

Ranch foreman running for MISD board

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

School board candidate Lex Crawford would like to see something done about the overcrowded conditions in Midland public schools.

Crawford

Crawford is one of three candidates who will vie for the District 6 seat being vacated by Larry Rusk in the May 4 election.

A ranch foreman by trade and a Midlander for 13 years with two children in the school district, Crawford has a second grader at Santa Rita Elementary School who is experiencing the trials of attending an overcrowded school first hand.

"The city of Midland needs to think about what is best for the kids and what we need to do," Crawford said.

Crawford said he supports the upcoming bond election which will fund additional schools and classrooms, including a new junior high school if both propositions pass.

"I agree with the person who said if we can spend 50 cents on a Coke or $2 on a pack of cigarettes, we sure can spend that money on the kids," he said.

Crawford said that he supports the school board's decision to locate the new junior high school on the Scharbauer property west of Loop 250.

"I've seen Midland grow the past 13 years, and it's all growing west," he said. "The school system has had the Scharbauer site for years and already owns the property. It's time to use it."

The ranch foreman, who grew up in Andrews, said, "Andrews has very good schools with plenty of room for all the kids, including a boys' gym and a girls' gym at every elementary school. I don't understand why a small town like Andrews has superior schools to Midland."

The prospective school board trustee said, "I am ready to find out what the people of Midland

Bullock vows no cost, no school vote

The State

AUSTIN (AP) — With the Supreme Court's deadline for action only days away, Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock vowed Friday not to allow a final Senate vote on school finance reform until experts say exactly what it will cost.

"Before we pass a bill that affects over 3 million school children and virtually every individual and business taxpayer in the state, we're going to get a handle on just how much this legislation will cost," Bullock said.

A unanimous Texas Supreme Court gave legislators until April 1 to change the $14 billion-a-year school funding system.

The court said the current method is unfair to poor districts and threatened to stop state education spending if reforms aren't adopted by the deadline.

Bullock, who favors a state income tax to raise additional funds, said it would be irresponsible to approve a school spending bill without knowing how much more state and local tax dollars it will take.

Earlier this week, Bullock said initial indications on the bill's price were "astounding, shocking," but offered no specific numbers.

The current system relies on state aid, local property taxes and some federal money. Differences in local property wealth now lead to wide disparities in funding between rich and poor districts.

In letters to the Texas Education Agency and Legislative Budget Board, Bullock asked for total costs in both state aid and local property taxes. The report, he said, should be "easy to read and easy to understand" and project costs from 1992 to 1996.

Bullock's press secretary, Rafe Greenlee, said early projections show that "local property taxes will go up dramatically, up to 50 percent in some districts."

Greenlee said the cost estimates should be ready by early next week, so the Senate could vote before the court deadline. But Bullock is "not going to vote unless he's satisfied the senators and he know exactly what it's going to cost," the aide said.

Both the House and Senate passed different school bills, and negotiators completed a final compromise Thursday night. That measure was scheduled to be sent to chambers Monday.

John Bender, spokesman for Speaker Gib Lewis, said the House is scheduled to consider the compromise plan on Tuesday.

Leaders in both houses said the bill's fate is uncertain.

One negotiator predicted House rejection because the plan would shift hundreds of millions of dollars in local property tax money from wealthier to poorer school districts.

Bullock said Friday that with the state already facing a $4.6 billion deficit for 1992-93, the Senate is giving extra scrutiny to all spending measures.

"It would be irresponsible of us not to take the same hard look at the most important and costliest legislation the Senate will vote on all session," Bullock said of the school plan.

The compromise would create 183 education taxing districts, largely along county lines.

When fully implemented in four years, an estimated $400 million to $500 million in local tax money would be redistributed each year among school districts within the tax regions.

Additional state aid of $1.4 billion also would be pumped into the system the next two years.

The bill would set a minimum local property tax rate of 60 cents per $100 valuation, climbing to 90 cents in four years.

Blast in school hallway injures 18 students

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — A homemade explosive burst in a high school hallway Friday morning, wounding 18 students, police and school officials said. None of the wounds appeared life-threatening.

The device, made of PVC pipe, exploded at 8:57 a.m. at Hanna High School, said Don Coppedge, spokesman for the Brownsville Independent School District.

Most of the students injured received cuts and abrasions from pieces of the pipe, Coppedge said. Eric Robert Nieto, 17, a junior, was the only student taken from the scene directly to an area hospital for treatment, Coppedge said.

Pieces of the pipe had pierced the back of Nieto's legs and he was treated at Brownsville Medical Center and later released, Coppedge said.

"It was apparently just dropped by someone walking by," Coppedge said.

Police Chief Victor Rodriguez told The Brownsville Herald that the explosion may have come from fireworks.

Coppedge said police are interviewing possible suspects. Rodriquez and a police spokesman did not immediately return calls from The Associated Press.

Friday's explosion occurred on the last regular day of classes. The school will recess all next week for spring break. Coppedge said the school had reported several explosions of fireworks by students in the last few weeks.

The wounded were taken to hospitals or to private physicians by parents. Three complained of eardrum problems, and two students were thought to have more than superficial wounds, officials said, without elaborating.

Classes met on schedule as police investigated the explosion.

Determined rider stalled at border

LAREDO (AP) — Tom Shea and his trusty horse "Rockets" have one last hurdle to clear before they can complete what Shea calls his dream trip.

They have to come up with $350.

Shea says he and Rockets have trekked 2,500 miles across the country to get to Mexico. But now they're stalled in South Texas.

Shea has been told by federal and equine officials that he will have to use a freight forwarding company to get Rockets across the Rio Grande into Mexico. Lockwood Brokers Inc. says that will cost him $350.

"I thought that with a health certificate I could just ride him or lead him across," Shea told the Laredo Morning Times.

But the barrier barely daunts the 47-year-old laid-off research technician from Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y. Shea and 12-year-old "Rockets" have been up against much more since they left Ithaca on Sept. 14.

The first hurdle was mustering the courage to pursue Shea's long-cherished dream.

"When I broke up with my wife, I decided to turn it into an opportunity instead of just sit around moping about it," he said. "I decided to do something I had always wanted to do but never had the chance to because I was so tied down with a job, car payments, a mortgage and paying to put my kid through school."

So Shea said he sold his house, his car and most of his belongings and hit the trail for Mexico. But only two miles out of town, disaster nearly struck when Rockets got stuck on a train trestle with a coal train up the tracks. The engineer stopped the train 200 yards from the horse, which had to be removed from the site with a crane.

Later, Shea said he encountered inebriated "hillbillies" along the Pennsylvania-West Virginia border who threatened to shoot Rockets.

"But luckily I was saved by an older guy who was also drunk but not as mean," Shea said.

But they did have some good luck along the way. Several people, curious about Shea's nationwide trek, offered free meals and lodging.

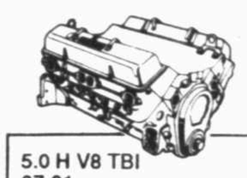

Shea said the trip has helped "restore my faith in human nature."

Congressman named 'Texan of the Year'

NEW BRAUNFELS (AP) — U.S. Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Mission, was named "Texan of the Year" by civic leaders at the 25th annual Texas Legislative Conference.

The South Texas congressman, who received the award Thursday night at the New Braunfels Civic Center, has represented the 15th Congressional District for more than 26 years. He is chairman of the House Committee on Agriculture.

Dallas fines scavengers collecting aluminum cans

DALLAS (AP) — Scavengers looking through trash for aluminum are receiving police citations carrying $240 fines. But some officials and activists are outraged, saying Friday that recycling is a prime source of income for the homeless.

"I think the whole matter is a preposterous example of misapplied resources," Councilman Jerry Bartos said.

"We've got crack dealers. We've got strip joints. We've got people stealing the aluminum off bridges," he said. "And we're chasing around poor people who, frankly, are keeping the streets clean."

"Heads will roll on this one, brother," said Councilman Al Lipscomb, who protested the ticketing in a letter Friday to City Manager Jan Hart.

In recent weeks, about 10 people have received tickets for violating the city code that prohibits illegal collection of trash. Violations, mainly by homeless people searching for recyclable materials, were largely ignored before.

But police increased enforcement after businesses complained about scavengers, spokesman Sgt. Jim Chandler said.

"Businesses complain to the City Council and they pass that complaint to police and we act on it," Chandler said.

"We don't have our patrol officers looking for them," he said. "Obviously there are more important things for them to do."

Larry Fonts, the president of the Central Dallas Association, which promotes downtown businesses, said he has not received any such complaint. He said downtown merchants consider begging more of a problem than scavengers.

Attorney Bill Trantham, who handles civil rights cases, said he was stunned to see a homeless person in court charged with the misdemeanor earlier this month.

"No extreme act should come as a surprise to anyone who deals with the city of Dallas," Trantham said. "It's unbelievable. It's crazy."

"This is going to be extremely expensive," said Joanne Hill, director of Dry Gulch Recycling Centers in Dallas. "How are you going to fine people who have nothing?"

AP Laserphoto

Roy Jones checks a dumpster for aluminum cans in Dallas Thursday. Jones says he makes about $3 a day to supplement his Social Security check, but he faces a $240 fine if he is ticketed.

Can City of Dallas, a recycling center near the central business district, buys more than 100 pounds of aluminum cans from homeless people daily, said manager Greg Johnson.

"A lot of people make a living doing that, get food and stuff like that," Johnson said.

It would take 730 pounds of aluminum cans to raise $240.

James Poole, a 59-year-old homeless man, said that two of his friends were ticketed and feel harassed.

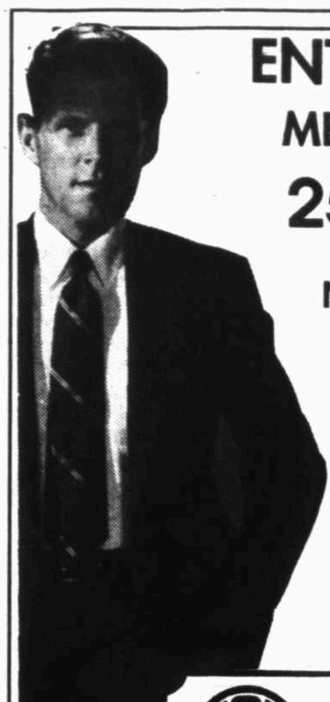

"I pick up cans to make a living. I don't rob or steal," Poole told The Dallas Morning News.

"Instead of focusing their attention on trying to fine people who are doing a public service, the city ought to be turning toward its own wastestream, which they do not recycle," Ms. Hill said.

She described an "underground economy" in which scavengers take aluminum, glass, computer paper, batteries and other items to sell to recyclers. Finding all the scavengers would be "like trying to put your finger in a dike," Ms. Hill said.

"These people have the vision to make their money selling cans rather than selling crack," Lipscomb said.

Plane crash near airfield kills three

PASADENA (AP) — Federal investigators on Friday sifted through the wreckage of a small plane that nose dived into an open field some 200 yards from a residential area, killing all three men aboard.

"We'll be out at the scene all day and we have to listen to the tapes and review the transcripts before we can make any judgment," said Warren Wandell, chief investigator with the National Transportation Safety Board, which joined representatives of the Federal Aviation Administration in the probe.

The Piper Comanche, en route to Houston's Ellington Field from Little Rock, Ark., crashed about 10:30 p.m. Thursday about a half mile north of its destination.

Killed in the crash were pilot Grady Cliff Huron, 39, of Baytown; Brady Tidwell, 41, of Channelview; and Wayne Wilson, 41, Channelview.

"The plane was flying to Baytown Airport from Little Rock, Ark., but for some reason, they changed their flight plan on the way to go to Ellington Field," said Pasadena Police Officer T. Bussey.

Air traffic controllers at Ellington Field lost track of the aircraft from their radar screens about 10:20 p.m., Bussey said, but the pilot had not indicated he was having any trouble.

"A witness revealed having heard an explosion or loud noise, and they found the plane a short time later," said Gene Burke, spokesman for Houston's aviation department.

The plane "looks like it just nosed in," Burke said.

Youth critical after shooting

GALVESTON (AP) — An 18-year-old Houston youth was reported in critical condition Friday after being shot at a Galveston beach, authorities said.

The youth, whose name was not released by police late Friday, was shot in the head about 3:15 p.m. and taken to John Sealy Hospital in Galveston, said police Sgt. John Leslie.

Authorities say the teen-ager had skipped classes with a friend.

The Willow Ridge High School student and his friend were fired upon as they got out of their car Friday, Leslie said.

Leslie said the shooting was not intentional, although early reports indicated that it was a drive-by shooting.

"He was just at the wrong place at the wrong time," Leslie said.

No suspects had been arrested in the case by late Friday.

Carrier helps save home

DENTON (AP) — It wasn't snow, or rain or gloom of night that kept mail carrier Steve Schindler from his appointed rounds. It was smoke.

Schindler was walking his route shortly before 11 a.m. Thursday when he smelled smoke wafting from a home in this Dallas suburb. He banged on the door but no one answered.

"I dropped the mail in and I smelled something burning," he said. "I stepped back and saw the windows were getting a little black. Then I could see smoke kind of seeping out around the eaves. So I ran across the street and told the lady to call 911."

The house, owned by Murray Overton, sustained little fire damage, fire investigator Rick Jon said.

Overton said he didn't intend to be away very long when he drove to a nearby mall. He said he left an oil lamp burning on a stereo speaker in a bedroom.

"I got to messing around and was gone a lot longer than I intended," he told the Denton Record-Chronicle. "By the time I got home everything was covered in soot."

More assaults reported

SOUTH PADRE ISLAND (AP) — Sexual assaults reported by two more women on spring break this week bring the number of rape complaints by students to eight in South Texas and northern Mexico in the past two weeks.

Although the number of rapes reported at South Padre Island this month exceeds the total reported in the town all last year, officials said they doubt that there has been an increase in sexual assaults.

"I feel like we've probably had an equal number in the past," said Ed Sanders, chief of the South Padre Island Police Department. "They just weren't reporting them."

He said women appear to have become better educated about the need to report rapes.

Both of the latest victims said they were passed out from drinking when they were raped, Sanders said.

A 17-year-old high school student from Dallas reported being sexually assaulted in a South Padre Island hotel room early Tuesday morning. Nathan Allen Moore, a 17-year-old high school student from Arlington, was charged with sexual assault in connection with that incident.

On Wednesday morning, a 21-year-old Texas Tech student reported being raped in a South Padre Island condominium. Aaron Ambrose Juaire, 22, of Mankato, Minn., was charged with sexual assault in that case.

President's agenda busy

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari is packing dozens of appearances into his upcoming Texas visit, including a meeting with Gov. Ann Richards, sessions with business leaders and lawmakers and stops at cultural events.

Salinas' itinerary for his April 12-13 trip was revealed Thursday to the San Antonio City Council.

The trip is the final leg of a two-nation, six-city trip Salinas is making beginning April 6, said Mexican Consul General Humberto Hernandez Haddad.

In Austin, Salinas is scheduled to meet April 12 with Richards and the Mexican-American Legislative Caucus and address a joint session of the Texas Legislature. He also will visit the University of Texas campus before flying to San Antonio.

Salinas will preside here over the inauguration of art celebrations at Plaza Mexico in downtown and speak at a luncheon hosted by several business groups.

Later he'll meet individually with business and political leaders, tour the art exhibit "Mexico: Splendors of Thirty Centuries" and attend a ceremony at an arts center.

On April 13, Salinas is scheduled to meet with more business and civic leaders and take a barge tour of the downtown River Walk before departing.

Texan gives birth on plane

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — A Texas woman on her first-ever plane trip gave birth in mid-flight, forcing an America West plane to make an unscheduled landing in Albuquerque early today.

The woman, who asked that her name and hometown not be used, said her daughter's birth was assisted by an emergency medical technician and a nurse who were passengers on the plane, said Presbyterian Hospital spokeswoman Lynn Villella.

Both mother and baby were doing well today at Presbyterian, Villella said.

"All I remember is walking toward the front of the plane," said the 23-year-old woman. "I guess my baby was born first class."

The woman said flying through thunderstorms made her frightened before the delivery.

"It was my first time to fly and probably my last," she said.

The baby, born shortly after midnight on a flight from Dallas-Fort Worth to Las Vegas, was due Monday.

Mike Mitchell, an America West spokesman at the airlines' headquarters in Phoenix, said policy stipulates that pregnant women expecting to deliver within seven days are not allowed to fly without a doctor's permission.

However, he said the airlines does not ask pregnant women when their babies are due, and the woman likely did not volunteer the information.

Mitchell said the woman went into labor and was escorted to the first-class cabin, where she gave birth without incident.

"When she arrived in Albuquerque paramedics were there to meet the flight, cut the cord and transport mother and baby to a hospital," he said.

Woman charged in fire

JACKSONVILLE (AP) — The former owner of a jewelry store destroyed in a 1989 blaze that engulfed one-third of Jacksonville's downtown district was indicted on federal arson and mail fraud charges.

If convicted, Hattie Darlene Hutson, 56, could face up to 15 years in prison and a fine of up to $600,000.

Ms. Hutson is the former owner of Lowell's Jewelry Store, one of five businesses destroyed in the Jan. 28, 1989, fire that caused an estimated $1 million damage. A sixth business was damaged by smoke and water.

■ Total force consists of the all-volunteer army backed by the reserves, military retirees and government civilian workers.

■ An Analysis

By Jim Abrams

WASHINGTON (AP) — Weekend pilots pulverized Iraqi tanks while women flyers criss-crossed the battlegrounds in helicopter rescue missions. White-haired merchant seamen ferried the tools of war and country doctors patched up its victims.

The Persian Gulf War, more than any other American military campaign this century, was a citizens' war, crossing a broad spectrum of the population in what the military calls the "total force" concept.

The total force consists of the all-volunteer army backed by a strong reserve, military retirees and government civilian workers. The policy was adopted in 1973, partly in response to widespread antipathy toward the draft during the Vietnam War.

The war and its buildup were "more than a little significant," said Stephen M. Duncan, assistant secretary of defense for reserve affairs, because the total force policy "had never been tested in wartime."

"I am exceedingly well pleased with the performance of reservists and the policy," Duncan said in interview.

The one disappointment was the Army National Guard's "roundout" combat units that were to have joined up with active-duty troops. Not one of the three roundout units called up could be made battle-ready in time to be deployed, and Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney said the concept of mixing reserves and active-duty forces in combat brigades is "not a good one."

The good news was that the all-volunteer military proved equal both to the physical rigors of desert fighting and the mental demands of high-tech warfare. That's in part because today's soldier is better educated — 94 percent of enlistees are high school graduates; older — the average age of an enlistee is 26.4 years; and more highly motivated.

More than 20 percent of the active force is black, well above the 12 percent of the American population in general. That has Schwarzkopf for president?

■ Experts think Desert Storm commander has what it takes to be viable political candidate.

By Jill Lawrence

WASHINGTON (AP) — He's more than chubby, he's less than tactful and he doesn't have much hair to blow dry. But experts agree: Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf has the makings of an excellent political candidate.

Schwarzkopf

"He exudes a strength and a warmth and comes across exceedingly well on television. He'd be a media consultant's dream," said Frank Greer, a Democratic ad-maker.

The charismatic Desert Storm commander said recently that he would not "slam the door" on a political career. No one seems to know if he's a Republican or a Democrat or even if he's registered at all, so both parties are free to spin electoral fantasies.

Florida Republicans are talking up Schwarzkopf as a possible 1992 challenger to Democratic Sen. Bob Graham.

Greer is thinking on a somewhat bigger scale. "Wouldn't it be great if the Democrats could recruit him to run against George Bush?" he mused. "He instills confidence. That's what Americans want. They're looking for somebody to say, 'We can do it.'"

Hardened professionals offer nothing but rave reviews of Schwarzkopf's tough-but-compassionate persona — a hybrid of Fozzy Bear and Gen. George Patton or a teddy bear and a grizzly bear, in the words of Barbara Bush and Life magazine, respectively.

IF HE doesn't look like Tom Brokaw, they say, so much the better.

"He's not too pretty and that's an advantage. He looks like everybody's grandfather, father or brother," said Democratic media consultant Bob Squier, whose clients include Bob Graham of Florida.

Lyn Nofziger, former political director at the Reagan White House, said the bulky Schwarzkopf might want to lose a few pounds for a campaign — but not too many. "I'd rather he looked like a linebacker than an inside tackle," said Nofziger.

And by the way, he went on, forget the Senate. "I wouldn't run him for a legislative body," Nofziger said. "He's a commander. I'd run him for governor or president. He'd go crazy in the Senate. He's a take-charge guy."

Schwarzkopf's trademark candor — he talks openly, for instance, about falsifying enemy body counts during the Vietnam War — is rare in politics and accounts for much of his appeal, political professionals say.

Coming from the wrong mouth, such bluntness could lead to gaffes and abrasiveness. But Schwarzkopf has already test-marketed his style on a national audience and emerged a star.

"He had every opportunity to get into trouble through all those briefings, and he didn't," Squier said. "He handled himself extremely well. He totally seduced everybody."

THE CHALLENGE facing candidate Schwarzkopf and his advisers would be to stretch his image beyond that of the triumphant battlefield commander.

"The biggest mistake you could make would be just to run him as Stormin' Norman the military hero," said Republican media consultant Larry McCarthy. "I'd show him more as a person who can get things done overall. I'd try to broaden the resume so people would feel comfortable that he has a grasp of something besides waging war."

Greer said he would try to depict "the human side" of the man. "You need to portray him as a family man, a compassionate, concerned citizen who wants to help improve the lives of average families," he said. "If you did that, he'd be unstoppable."

But maybe not.

Any campaign would mean farewell to those familiar desert fatigues, hello to telegenic blue suits and red ties. The exotic, war-torn desert backdrop would be a thing of the past, as would the emotional greetings of troops. Dynamic briefings on brilliant military strategy would give way to speeches on the federal deficit. Could Schwarzkopf survive the transition?

In a domestic rather than wartime context, some strategists say Schwarzkopf's opinionated style could seem more grating than refreshing to prospective voters. And they wonder if his authoritative aura would hold up on matters non-military.

"WHAT WE'VE seen so far is arguably the best general we've produced in modern times speaking on the thing he does best, which is generalship," said Squier. "He would start having to talk about things he doesn't know about instead of the things he knows very well."

Many from both parties believe Schwarzkopf is the rare soldier who could pull off the risky jump from war to politics — that, in fact, he's just the man to lead an all-out assault on problems like homelessness and the deficit.

But at least one conservative Democrat, Atlanta pollster Claibourne Darden, sounded unconvinced. "We've tried making politicians generals and that almost unilaterally didn't work," he said. "Why would you think making generals politicians would work really well? It's not necessarily the case."

FORCE: All-volunteer Army depends on reservists led some critics, such as Rep. John Conyers Jr., D-Mich., to talk of "economic conscription" where poor, jobless blacks are the first to sign up for the military and the first to die in battle.

The military denies discrimination and points to such blacks as Gen. Colin Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. President Bush said the military is "the greatest equal opportunity employer around."

Some 27,000 women were sent to the Persian Gulf. They were excluded from combat units, but their support and supply roles took them to the front lines where two were captured and five were killed. With 223,000 women now in uniform, 11 percent of the military compared to 1.9 percent in 1972, the debate over whether to put women in tanks and warplanes will grow.

But the big debate, once the lessons of Desert Storm are digested, will be over the future role of the reserves.

Some 227,000 reservists and National Guard members were activated after Saddam Hussein invaded Kuwait last August, and 105,000 were sent to the gulf out of a U.S. force of 430,000. Doctors, mechanics, truck drivers and commercial pilots were wrenched from jobs and families to carry out tasks that couldn't be done without the aid of the reserves.

Under the total force concept, the military depends on the reserves for 70 percent of its combat service support. In the Army that includes 97 percent of civil affairs units, 61 percent of hospital units and 54 percent of intelligence units.

"We constructed a military that couldn't fight without the reserves, in particular the logistics capability," said Gen. Thomas Kelly, the outgoing Director of Operations for the Joint Staff.

Some reservists, experts in such essential areas as water purification and chemical contamination, were on duty within weeks of the Desert Shield deployment last August. But the mobilization of combat reservists went far less smoothly.

The commander of the Georgia National Guard's 48th Infantry Brigade, who was replaced while his unit languished at the National Training Center at Fort Irwin, Calif., complained the brigade was resented by regular Army personnel who opposed the roundout concept. "In the future, no brigade should be put through what the 48th was put through," Brig. Gen. William A. Holland said.

"They had close to 90 days training before I found them combat ready," Gen. Edwin Burba, commander in chief of Forces Command, said in congressional testimony. The goal was to finish their training in 30 days, he said. "We were not able to do that. But we learned a lot."

The 48th is the roundout brigade for the 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized), which is part of the Army's rapid deployment force.

"I'm sure one of the things the Army will want to do is to make sure those divisions that wind up having roundout brigades are not considered part of the immediate contingency force," said Christopher Jehn, assistant secretary of defense for force management and personnel.

There were other isolated problems: Sixty-seven soldiers from the Louisiana National Guard in another roundout unit went AWOL, complaining of poor treatment at Fort Hood, Texas.

But citizen soldiers also fought with distinction in Kuwait and Iraq. Duncan said reserves from Yakima, Wash., newly trained in the M1-A1 Abrams tank, took on an Iraqi unit of top-of-the-line Soviet T-72 tanks and stopped or destroyed 34 with no losses. Air National Guardsmen flying F-16s also participated in the devastating attack on Iraqi forces fleeing Kuwait City in the closing hours of the war.

The real challenge, Duncan said, will be maintaining the high quality of people joining the reserves. Recruitment fell 23 percent short of goals in December and January, partly because people who joined the reserves for the extra income now realize going to war is part of the package.

'We constructed a military that couldn't fight without the reserves, in particular the logistics capability.'

— Gen. Thomas Kelly

"It's like somebody joining the Postal Service and then being shocked that they have to deliver some mail," Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams said.

But recruiting is only a side issue for a select reserve force that must trim 245,000 of its 1.15 million members by the end of fiscal 1995.

Pyramid-builders' cemetery found

■ Egyptologists unearth tombs of ancient blue-collar workers who built their own tombs.

By Mimi Mann

GIZA PLATEAU, Egypt (AP) — Some people believe the pyramids must have been built by men from outer space or refugees from the mythical world of Atlantis. Others say slaves built them.

They're here on the Giza Plateau, in a cemetery not found until last fall, when a horse stumbled into a sand dune and onto the top of a tomb.

Each month has brought new discoveries and new tombs to shed light on the blue-collar workers of ancient times.

SO FAR, the dig has revealed 50 tombs of foremen, workmen and their kin. Each is different, like none previously seen by Egyptologists. The labor force dates from the fourth dynasty, when the Pharaohs built the greatest pyramids, until the sixth, 420 years later in 2150 B.C.

Members of the archaeological team believe their work has just begun, that nearby dunes hide a cemetery of enormous size.

Egyptologist Zahi Hawass has spent years sifting clues left by the Pharaonic working class. There are discarded tools and graffiti praising the prowess of ancient construction teams with such names as Vigorous Gang, Enduring Gang, North Gang and South Gang.

He said the notion that slaves built the pyramids probably was invented by Greek and Roman tour guides who wanted "fat tips" from tourists of 2,000 years ago.

"Slaves build things because they're forced to, but they could never build the pyramids," said Hawass, the antiquities director for the pyramids and Sphinx. "These were built with genius, a genius impossible for slave labor."

Nor were they extraterrestrials, a concept vigorously debated in the mid-20th century by laymen and spiritualists. Their cemetery, filled with emotion, shows them to have been very human indeed.

A YOUNG mother is buried with her baby. Primitive, poignant sketches lead a foreman and his wife into the hereafter. A tomb is equipped with an outside spout so the deceased never would want for liquid refreshment.

The dig provides a surprising profile of the ancient blue-collar worker:

■ He was far better off than had been thought, highly creative and industrious even when not building pyramids or serving his Pharaoh with other work.

■ Relationships between worker and boss, unlike slave and master, were very close. Foremen had their crews buried beside them.

■ He demanded a piece of paradise as his king did, and was not above stealing something from the Pharaoh to make his own dreams of eternity come true.

"They used leftovers from the monuments they were building — bits and pieces of the pyramids or the Sphinx or the tombs and temples," Hawass said. "They hauled limestone, granite and basalt chips home for their tombs."

FOR THOSE exploring the cemetery, each day has its surprise.

This day's challenge was to learn what was inside a mud-brick dome shaped like a beehive, one of two found so far.

It was perfect digging weather, except for wind gusts that blew sand in from the desert.

"I'd rather have this cemetery than a golden statue," antiquities inspector Mohammed Shata said, whisking away layers of sand inside the mound.

"A statue you look at, record, then turn over to a museum," he said. "This is our real heritage. It'll keep us busy for years."

As he dusted, Shata saw outlines of a skeleton emerge. "It's a tomb," he said. "I think the man was elderly. Here are bits of a sarcophagus."

THE MAN was buried in the fetal position, a common practice in the cemetery. His skull lay against a stone, facing the front wall.

Mansour Bouraik, another on-site inspector, said: "The stone was put there to block evil spirits. They placed the man, perhaps an elder of the family, toward the outer wall so he could always pick up the scent of offerings his family placed outside.

"Maybe he's in a fetal position for magical reasons, or maybe because that's the way he worked in life, bent over."

Pyramid builders were of two types. Permanent workers labored full time in quarries or art workshops and casual laborers came from farms to work for wages or exempt themselves from other government service.

Men interred in the cemetery were assigned permanently to perform the Pharaoh's work, whether on the monuments or elsewhere.

A big surprise for the archaeologists has been the expertise and creativity the workers showed in constructing their own tombs.

"If you were royalty, you had a certain type of tomb, but these workers wanted something great, too, and were free to use their imagination in building their own," Bouraik said.

'Slaves build things because they're forced to, but they could never build the pyramids. These were built with genius, a genius impossible for slave labor.'

— Antiquities director Zahi Hawass

Will consumers eat biotech food?

SAN FRANCISCO (HNS) — A revelation has come over the young biotech industry as it creeps forward into the marketplace. No matter how fabulous the new gene, how efficient the new technology, somebody's got to buy it.

At a seminar sponsored by the University of California Systemwide Biotechnology Program last week, consumer acceptance was the watchword. Would shoppers welcome genetic engineering with open arms? Or would the industry fall on its face from making such assumptions?

"I have some serious concerns about the response of the consumer to biotech products," said Ernie Hubbard, president of PureHarvest Corp. in Napa. "Food is a very sacred topic when you're dealing with consumer psychology."

Monsanto Corp. is finding out the hard way with BST, the hormone designed to boost milk production. Farmers aren't convinced the drug will cut production costs for anybody but the biggest dairies. Consumers aren't sure they want to drink milk produced by cows treated with a genetically engineered hormone. Now, the St. Louis-based company is scrambling to defend a $500 million investment before it even begins to try to sell it.

Calgene Inc. is next to face the problem with its genetically engineered tomato, designed to last longer in storage and on supermarket shelves. With $60 million invested in research, Calgene faces high stakes when it enters the market.

The Davis company, with its partner Campbell Soup Co., could call it a super tomato, a special tomato, and never even mention genetic engineering. But its products will hit the grocery stores in a few years, at a time when label-sensitive, safety-conscious shopping will probably still be the norm.

Soft drinks, cheeses and other foods already contain genetically engineered components, with no mention on the label. But Calgene has spent many years touting its tomatoes.

John Callahan, Calgene vice president of business development, is hoping for the best. Genetic engineering is the best way to achieve top-quality produce, he said in an interview. Calgene isn't going to cover up its technology.

"Initially, it'll be a big issue – and probably a negative one," Callahan said. "But as people get more comfortable that people aren't keeling over after they eat these tomatoes, you'll get the acceptance."

Calgene wisely has asked the government to examine the safety of its product. The official stamp of approval will be critical.

Consumers are more intelligent than industry tends to believe, Callahan said. Ultimately, he believes, shoppers will probably eat genetically engineered tomatoes just as enthusiastically as they drink Diet Coke with NutraSweet.

"You have the responsibility of demonstrating the benefit of your product," Callahan said. "If it's a better-tasting tomato, that's why you market it. And anything else is smoke."

An executive from Sandoz Crop Protection Corp. argued that labeling of genetically engineered products might hasten their acceptance. Most industry executives pooh-pooh that idea. Some even called the technology boring.

Peters hurt

BRENHAM (AP) — Record-setting schoolboy pitcher Jon Peters, who now plays at Blinn College, will miss the rest of this season after a second operation on his pitching arm, officials said.

Peters, who set a national schoolboy record by winning 50 straight games for Brenham High School in 1989, will not pitch for at least six months, Blinn College officials said.

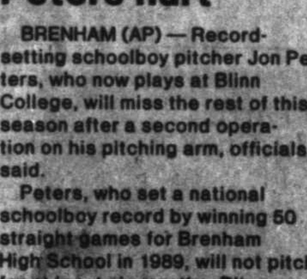

Peters was 1-1 for Blinn this season. Team officials said he felt tightness in his arm following each of his two appearances this season and was diagnosed as having torn ligaments. His final appearance was Feb. 26.

Peters' arm problems go back to his junior year at Brenham High School. He was redshirted for his freshman year at Texas A&M after arm surgery and transferred to Blinn in January.

NCAA pie cut eight ways

■ St. John's Redmen spill highly regarded Ohio State to join the NCAA's last eight basketball teams.

Associated Press

PONTIAC, Mich. — St. John's, a surprise survivor in the NCAA Midwest Regional, had a shock for Ohio State.

The fourth-seeded Redmen beat the top-seeded Buckeyes at their own game Friday night. They outshot, outran and outrebounded Ohio State for a 91-74 victory to move within one victory of their first Final Four since 1985.

Ohio State (27-4) was supposed to have the advantage in all those areas. But the Redmen (23-8) stunned the Buckeyes, building a 43-24 halftime lead and advancing to the regional final Sunday against the Duke-Connecticut winner.

"St. John's kind of catches you off guard," Ohio State's Mark Baker said. "Everybody said they like to control the tempo but they pushed the ball up."

Even St. John's coach Lou Carnesecca marveled at his team's win.

"To play that well and sustain it makes me feel very, very good," he said.

"You never know," Carnesecca said of his team's recovery from a first-round loss to Providence two weeks ago in the Big East tournament. "You grab (the chance) and run when you can."

Sparked by Malik Sealy's 14 points, an 18-12 rebounding advantage and superior shooting, the Redmen raced to a 19-point halftime lead and stayed ahead by 16 to 25 points the rest of the way.

St. John's center Robert Werdann, who had 17 of his career-high 21 points in the second half, said the Redmen compensated for Ohio State's inside strength by moving on offense.

"It's tough to play a guy when you have to run after him," he said. "That's what we were doing. We kept moving and moving. ... We made the extra pass to get the easier shot."

"We went out there pretty flat," said Jimmy Jackson, who led Ohio State with 19 points. "It was really frustrating."

The Buckeyes, who won 25 of their first 26 games, ended their season with three losses in their last five games. Ohio State was the last survivor of the Big Ten's five tournament teams.

Each of St. John's starters scored at least 14 points, including Jason Buchanan, who had nine assists and six steals.

"They just came out and beat us to every loose ball early in the game," Buckeyes coach Randy Ayers said.

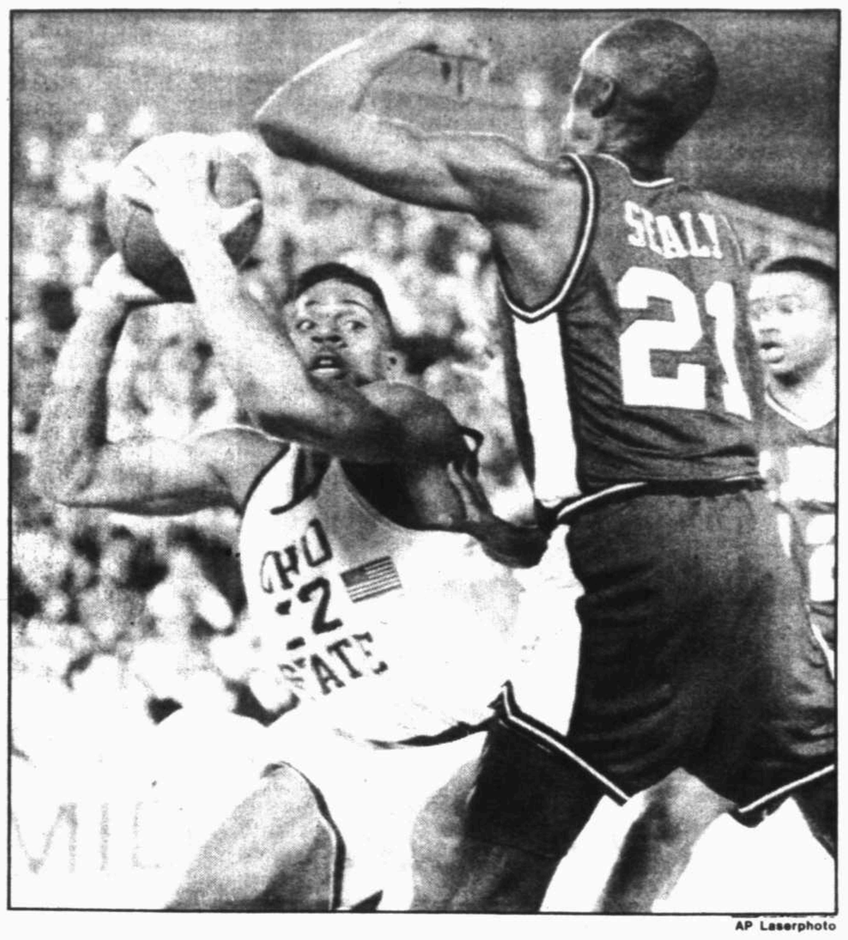

"As the game goes on, you really could tell who wants it more," said St. John's forward Billy Singleton. "We sustained our intensity."

Ohio State, co-champion of the Big Ten, had the nation's sixth best field goal percentage and was seventh best in rebounding margin. But it shot better than 50 percent in just one of its final eight games.

In the first half Friday night, the Buckeyes hit only 9 of 29 shots while the Redmen made 18 of 30.

The tone was set on the first two possessions. Baker missed a dunk on an alley-oop pass from Jackson. Then St. John's grabbed four offensive rebounds on its opening possession, which ended with a layup by Werdann.

St. John's led 9-8 before Werdann's foul-line jumper began a 7-0 run in which Ohio State missed its three shots, had one turnover and no offensive rebounds. That made it 16-8 with 12:56 left in the half.

North Carolina 93, Eastern Michigan 67

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Hubert Davis hit all five of his 3-point shots and North Carolina held Eastern Michigan scoreless for 5½ minutes in the second half to move the Tar Heels to within one victory of their first Final Four since 1982.

The top-seeded Tar Heels (28-5) will meet the Temple-Oklahoma State winner for the East Regional championship on Sunday.

Although North Carolina won by 26 points, it didn't have an easy time against scrappy Eastern Michigan (26-7).

The Hurons stayed close for 28 minutes by hitting 58 percent of their shots, including a barrage of 3-pointers by twins Carl and Charles Thomas.

Carl Thomas' last 3-pointer, his fifth of the game, got the Hurons within 61-57 with 12:49 remaining. But Eastern Michigan then went cold and was outscored 32-10 the rest of the way.

The final North Carolina spurt started with a 15-0 run that featured three baskets by George Lynch and two by Pete Chilcutt. That gave the Tar Heels a 76-57 lead and the margin ballooned to 93-65 in the final seconds.

Chilcutt and Davis led North Carolina with 18 points apiece, while Eric Montross had 17. Carl Thomas had a careerhigh 27 point for the Hurons, while Marcus Kennedy added 19.

Kansas, Arkansas fight for Final Four

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Their names look alike, but that's where all similarities end with Kansas and Arkansas.

From style of game to coaches to personnel, these teams have little in common except impressive Southeast Regional semifinal victories and even those came in different ways.

Kansas' 83-65 dismantling of Indiana became evident early as the Jayhawks (25-7) took a 20-point lead in the first 7½ minutes. Arkansas (34-3) waited until the middle of the second half before getting its offense untracked in a 93-70 win over Alabama.

So with a Final Four berth at stake Saturday, it will be the patient offense and halfcourt defense of third-seeded Kansas against the uptempo, full-court pressure defense of top-seeded Arkansas.

"Nolan calls it 40 minutes of hell," Kansas coach Roy Williams said of Arkansas coach Nolan Richardson's name for his team's style. "I've got some names for it myself that we won't talk about at this time. Our kids will go out and be very competitive. They've accepted the challenges down the line and I think they'll do it this time."

Williams said Kansas will attack the pressure and work on what got his team to the Final Eight.

"With Arkansas, you have to beat an attitude and that's that they are coming at you for 40 minutes and you will wilt," he said. "Our attitude is that we will be there for 40 minutes. Arkansas and Indiana are similar in one way. It's not that difficult to prepare for either, but it's a different story to play them."

■ Five coaches are said to be early candidates in the hunt for the Midland College head basketball coaching job.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

A former Midland College basketball coach, two Texas junior college coaches, a former Division I basketball coach and a Southwest Conference assistant were said Friday to be early candidates for the vacant head basketball coaching position at MC.

Howard College head coach Steve Green, San Jacinto head coach Scott Gernander and former Sam Houston State University head coach Larry Brown all confirmed that they have discussed with MC officials the coaching job that became available earlier this week when the school's board of trustees voted not to renew Reggie Franklin's contract.

Former MC head coach Jerry Stone, who coached the Chaps from 1977-87 and is now head coach at Cameron University in Lawton, Okla., is also a candidate, but would not comment other than to say he is interested in the job.

Green, whose Howard College Hawks were ranked No. 1 nationally late this season before being defeated in the bi-regional championship game earlier this month, confirmed that he has been contacted by MC officials.

"I have been contacted as far as discussing the job," Green said. "I'm more interested in knowing what their interest is in me. You're flattered people are interested in you and the intelligent thing to do is to just listen."

Green, who just completed his third season as head coach at Howard, has led his teams to 60 wins in their last 66 games over the past two seasons.

San Jacinto's Gernander, also believed to be a candidate, said nothing has been scheduled in terms of an interview in his case.

"I know (MC athletic director) Delnor Poss, and I've talked a little bit about it with him," Gernander said. "I have a position that's great, and Midland is a great job. But, nothing has been set up."

Gernander has coached the San Jacinto Ravens for four seasons, having compiled a 27-4 record in 1990-91, and a 129-14 mark during his four terms.

Sources also said Texas Tech assistant basketball coach James Dickey would be interviewed for the position Monday although Dickey declined comment.

"They have an outstanding junior college program and I know they have begun their (selection) process," Dickey said. "I've had great respect for Midland over the years. They've had some great players and some great teams."

Brown, who coached Howard College in 1986-87, recently resigned as head coach at Sam Houston State University, in Huntsville, after two seasons. A former high school coach in Bryan, Tex., Brown confirmed he will be in town next week.

"I'm coming in Monday to talk to Delnor Poss and (MC president) Dr. Parrish," Brown said. "I feel like with Midland you can win a national championship, and that's what I have a burning desire to do."

Brown, whose Bryan High School teams won consecutive state titles in 1983 and 1984, also served as an assistant coach at

'Dogs take on Bobcats

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

For the second straight game, Midland High will get the chance to see if an upstart District 4-5A baseball team is for real, as the Bulldogs host San Angelo at 2 p.m. today in Angels Stadium.

The 'Dogs are fresh off a 4-0 win Tuesday over Odessa High, which owned a 9-2 overall record until meeting MHS. The win over OHS made the Bulldogs 6-7 overall and 2-1 in district.

Now they will see what the Bobcats have, as San Angelo enters the contest at 9-7-1 and 2-0 after taking an open date the first day of 4-5A play.

In other district games today, Abilene High (0-3 in district) visits 0-2 Odessa Permian in a battle that will see one team finally get a 4-5A win, and OHS (1-2) travels to play a 1-1 Abilene Cooper team still struggling to find an identity after seeing head coa-

Heat falls to Spurs; Mavs win

Associated Press

MIAMI — David Robinson scored 28 points and sparked a key third quarter run as the San Antonio Spurs handed the Miami Heat their seventh straight loss, 97-90, Friday night.

Trailing 53-41 at halftime, Miami opened the second half with a 19-5 run that featured eight points each by Rony Seikaly and Glen Rice. The spurt gave the Heat their only lead, 60-58, with 4:05 left in the third quarter.

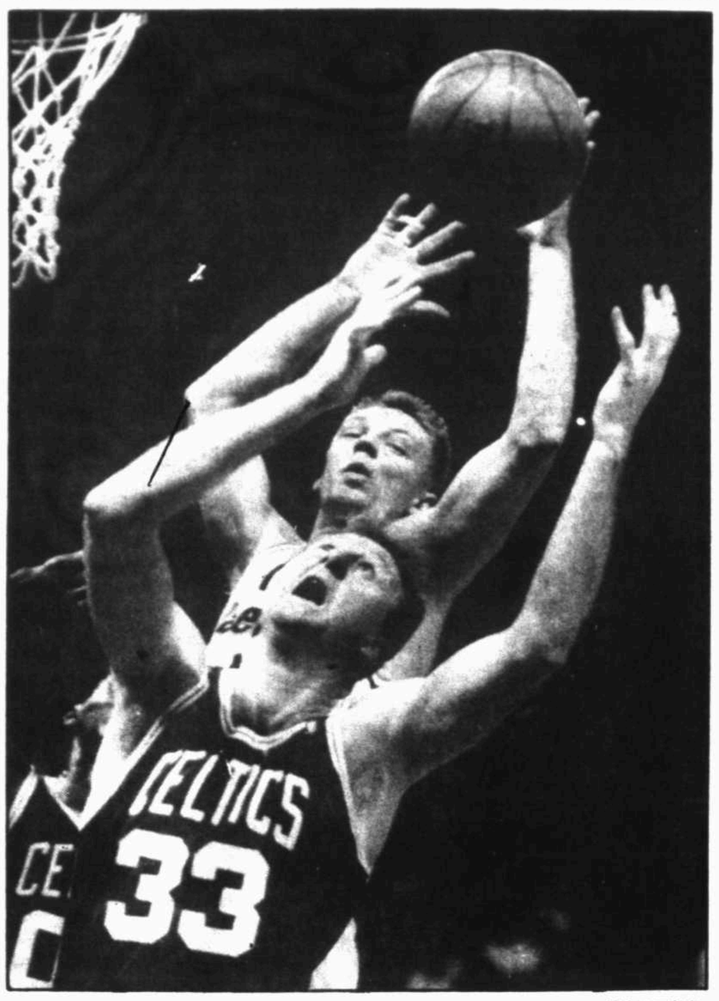

The Spurs, who had only one field goal in the first 8½ minutes of the third period, answered with the next eight points, six by Robinson, to take a 66-58 advantage with 2:29 to play in the quarter.

Terry Cummings scored 17 for the Spurs, while Seikaly led Miami with 25 points and Rice added 21.

The Heat hit only 28 percent of their first period shots and San Antonio closed out the quarter with a 9-1 run to open up a 26-16 lead.

Robinson scored 12 second-period points, as did Rice, and the Spurs maintained a double-digit lead throughout most of the quarter.

Robinson blocked three Heat shots, marking the first time in the four games he has ever played against Miami that he failed to block at least five.

NBA Roundup

Mavericks 104, Knicks 102 (OT)

DALLAS — Rolando Blackman scored six of his 25 points in overtime as Dallas cooled off New York, who missed three chances in the final seconds.

Derek Harper scored 27 points to help stop New York, which had won 12 of its previous 14 games. Patrick Ewing had 29 points and Kiki Vandeweghe added 21 for the Knicks.

The Knicks had late shots at the victory, but Trent Tucker's 3-point try missed with two seconds left in overtime. Ewing and Vandeweghe missed tip-in attempts as time expired.

Rolando Blackman reached the 15,000-point plateau for his career with a first-quarter free throw. Blackman became the 57th player in NBA history to accomplish the feat.

76ers 95, Bulls 90

PHILADELPHIA — Ron Anderson scored 15 of his 20 points in the fourth quarter, including clinching free throws with 9.9 seconds left, as Philadelphia ended Chicago's nine-game winning streak.

Charles Barkley had 22 points and 17 rebounds in Philadelphia's third straight victory. The loss was just the second for Chicago, which got 20 points from Michael Jordan, in 22 games.

Dennis Hopson came off the bench to score seven points in the last 1:47 of the third quarter, giving the Bulls a 76-67 lead. Then Anderson sparked Philadelphia on a 13-4 surge, and his jumper with 6:30 remaining tied the score at 80.

Hersey Hawkins had 16 points for Philadelphia and Horace Grant 16 for the Bulls.

SuperSonics 111, Suns 105

PHOENIX — Eddie Johnson scored 17 of his 34 points in the fourth period as Seattle won in Phoenix for the first time in four years.

Ricky Pierce added 20 points, Sedale Threat 14 and Benoit Benjamin 14 points and 14 rebounds for Seattle, which last won here 10 games ago on Dec. 23, 1987.

Phoenix, which had been 9-1 at home this season against Pacific Division opponents, got 23 points from Kevin Johnson and Dan Majerle. Tom Chambers had 19 points and 10 rebounds for the Suns, who had beaten the SuperSonics in six of the past seven meetings overall.

Seattle, trailing 51-40 at halftime and 79-73 after the third period, took an 85-84 lead on Eddie Johnson's baseline jumper with 8:22 remaining.

Pacers 121, Celtics 109

INDIANAPOLIS — Reggie Miller scored 21 points and Indiana took control with a 14-2 third-quarter surge to beat Boston, handing the Celtics their fifth straight loss at Market Square Arena.

The Pacers improved to .500 for the first time since Nov. 16 and avenged two straight losses by more than 20 points each to the Celtics.

Larry Bird was held to just 3 points in the second half and finished with 11 points.

Timberwolves 110, Cavaliers 105

MINNEAPOLIS — Tony Campbell scored 11 of his 30 points in a stretch of 3:11 in the fourth quarter to lead Minnesota over Cleveland.

Bullets 121, Hawks 116

BALTIMORE — Harvey Grant scored 14 of his 26 points in the fourth quarter as Washington rallied to defeat Atlanta and snap a three-game losing streak.

Pistons 109, Nets 93

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Joe Dumars scored 12 of his 18 points in the first quarter, including eight in a 14-2 surge that got Detroit rolling to a victory over the New Jersey Nets.

Vinnie Johnson scored 20 points for the Pistons, who avenged a 118-110 loss at New Jersey on March 14.

NCAA: Road ends for Cowboys

(From 1B)

Temple 72, Oklahoma State 63, OT

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Mark Macon cast aside bitter memories of the Meadowlands and gave the Eastern Regional another upset Friday night.

Macon, 6-for-29 with eight airballs in the 1988 East Regional final against Duke, scored eight of his 26 points in overtime as Temple advanced to the regional championship game with a 72-63 victory over Oklahoma State.

Macon played the entire game until fouling out with 1:19 left in the extra period and Temple leading 64-56.

The 10th-seeded Owls became the third team with a double-digit seeding to advance to an NCAA regional final. LSU reached the Final Four as an 11th seed in 1986 and the regional finals in 1987 as a 10th seed.

On Sunday, the Owls (24-9) meet top-seeded North Carolina, which defeated Eastern Michigan 93-67 in the other regional semifinal. Third-seeded Oklahoma State finished the season 24-8.

Macon scored the first six points of overtime, giving Temple a 59-53 lead. Mik Kilgore, who scored 17 points, made it eight consecutive points for the Owls with another basket, and Oklahoma State didn't threaten to catch up.

Amazingly, Temple scored 19 points in overtime after getting only 17 in the second half.

Temple, leading by six points at halftime despite Oklahoma State's 6-for-11 shooting from 3-point range, held the Cowboys scoreless for the first five minutes of the second half, but didn't take advantage.

The Owls led 38-30 on Kilgore's follow shot with 16:48 left, then went nearly four minutes without a point. Halfway through the second half, Oklahoma State had seven points and Temple five, leaving the Owls with a 41-37 edge.

Duke 81, Connecticut 67

PONTIAC, Mich. — So much for packing the lane.

Christian Laettner's teammates did to Connecticut what Shaquille O'Neal's couldn't and Duke did to the Huskies what it couldn't do last year — beat them easily.

Laettner scored 19 points and Greg Koubek added 18 Friday night as second-seeded Duke moved within one victory of its fourth straight Final Four appearance with a 81-67 Midwest Regional semifinal victory over the 11th-seeded Huskies.

Koubek, one of only two Duke seniors, is looking for a personal 4-for-4 Final Four streak.

A victory over St. John's (23-8) Sunday would send No. 6 Duke (29-7) to the NCAA semifinals for the fifth time in six years and for the ninth time overall. Duke beat the Redmen 76-72 in last year's second round, the teams' only NCAA tournament meeting.

Connecticut (20-11), hoping to avenge last year's 79-78 overtime loss to Duke in the East Regional final, had been the tournament's lowest remaining seed. Chris Smith and John Gwynn had 16 points each for UConn.

The Huskies got to the round of 16 by daring opponents to shoot from the outside. In their 79-62 first-round win over LSU, they denied O'Neal the ball and the 7-footer's teammates shot only 24.5 percent. UConn used a similar formula to whip Xavier in the second round.

But while Laettner finished second to O'Neal in the All-America voting, his supporting cast is far superior.

Duke proved right away that Connecticut's pack-it-in style wouldn't work. In the first 3:18, Thomas Hill made two 3-pointers and Koubek one for a quick 14-4 lead. Koubek added another 3-pointer and Bobby Hurley hit two in the first half, after which Duke led 44-27.

The Blue Devils shot 58.3 percent — including 6-of-8 from 3-point range — in the opening half against the Huskies, who had entered the tournament with the third-best field-goal defense (.389).

Cougars rip Texas Tech

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Rusty Smajstrla hit his third homer of the season in the sixth inning Friday to help power the Houston Cougars to a 6-2 victory over the Texas Tech Red Raiders in Southwest Conference action.

Houston is 21-7 overall and 1-0 in conference. Tech is 27-6 and 3-1.

No. 3 Texas 5, TCU 1

AUSTIN — Junior righthander Scott Harrison delivered his eighth win of the season without a loss as third-ranked Texas upended Texas Christian 5-1 Friday night in the Southwest Conference opener for both teams.

The Longhorns increased their record to 25-9 on the season, while the Horned Frogs drop to 20-10. It was the 19th conference opening win for coach Cliff Gustafson in 24 years at Texas.

No. 17 Texas A&M 9, Arkansas 3

COLLEGE STATION — Conrad Colby hit two two-run homers to lift the No. 17 Texas A&M Aggies to a 9-3 victory over Arkansas Razorbacks in Southwest Conference play Friday.

Texas A&M improves to 24-9 overall and 1-0 in the SWC. Arkansas falls to 21-10 and 1-3.

Staff Report

ABILENE — Five teams were within eight strokes of each other after the completion of the first stop on the District 4-5A boys golf tour here Friday at Abilene Country Club.

Abilene Cooper's No. 1 team sits atop the field with a 320 stroke total as the teams prepare for second-round play next Friday at Green Tree Country Club. San Angelo No. 1 is in second place at 323, while Midland Lee and Midland High's No. 1 teams follow at 325 and 326.

San Angelo's Cory Adams posted the only score in the low 70s, as windy conditions forced tentative play. Adams' 71 gives him the early medalist lead, while Chad Wellhausen of Cooper is next at 77.

Nine local players are within 10 strokes of Adams as the second of four rounds opens next week, with MHS' Randy Scharfenberg leading the pack at 79.

Another Andretti takes his turn

Associated Press

John Andretti was bathed in sunlight and shielding his eyes from the late afternoon glare as he was handed his trophy as an Indy-car winner.

For the first time, the youngster with the quiet demeanor and the big talent was standing alone, outside the long shadows cast by his uncle Mario and cousin Michael — the driving stars people usually think of when the name Andretti is mentioned.

This time, moments after he had won the season-opening CART event, in the streets at Australia's exotic Surfers Paradise, John was on the victory podium and Mario and Michael were looking up at him and applauding his performance.

"There's no doubt in my mind that Mario is still king of the family," said John, who is the son of Mario's twin brother Aldo. "He still has the most wins (51), and Michael has a lot more wins, too (14). But you have to start somewhere. You've got to have one before you can have two."

Cliche though that is, the newest Andretti winner did take a giant step forward by proving to the himself and the rest of the CART fraternity that he and the rest of the new Hall-VDS team must be taken seriously — now. The team is overseen by four Midlanders, including noted innovator and longtime winner Jim Hall, his son Jim Hall Jr., Franz Weis and Count Rudy van der Straten.

"We've known for a while that this team was coming together in the right way," Hall said. "We got off to a great start last year when Larry (crew chief Larry Curry) was able to leave the team he was working for early and begin to get our team going. We've been ahead of the game from the start."

Deke Houlgate Enterprises

John Andretti aboard Midland's Hall-VDS Racing entry ...a new rising star on the CART circuit

Hall, who won the Indianapolis 500 and the series championship in 1980 with Johnny Rutherford, admitted that he has spent most of his time with his new driver simply trying to instill some patience.

"I told him not to even think about winning," Hall said with a laugh. "I told him to just take care of the car, take care of himself and finish some races for now. I told him that if we could finish races, we'd eventually win some, too. He just got a little ahead of the schedule."

Andretti, who turned 28 just two weeks ago, came to Indy-cars through the dirt car ranks. That's the way it was when Uncle Mario got his start in the early '60s. But it's been the somewhat more antiseptic world of road racing that has spawned most of the current crop of drivers, including cousin Michael and his younger brother Jeff, who also has an Indy-car ride this season.

"I didn't have the money and I had to go where the rides were," John has said.

And being an Andretti, as well as the godson of A.J. Foyt, wasn't all that helpful, either.

"I'm proud of what Mario and Michael have done, but that didn't really help me much. It opened a few doors a crack, but not enough. Without money or a sponsor, you don't get very far these days. I didn't have either. The name wasn't enough."

His lifelong friendship with Michael Andretti was a big asset, however.

Michael, who is a year older, took John along with him to Belgium in the summer of 1979 so that the two could attend Andre Pillette's open-wheel racing school at Zolder.

Then, in 1980, his cousin gave John an important Christmas gift — a trip to Bertil Roos's driving school at Pocono International Raceway. Michael also let John drive his backup Formula Ford in a few SCCA regional and national events.

The love affair between John Andretti and open-wheel cars was burning brightly by that time.

His Indy-car debut came at Elkhart Lake, Wis., in 1987, and John finished sixth. He showed steady improvement over the new few years and, in 1990, driving for Porsche, Andretti had his best finishes prior to the Australian race — fifths at Cleveland and Vancouver, Canada.

John also proved a good prognosticator, saying before the race in Australia, "The team is prepared and I feel I have enough experience to win now. There's no reason we can't win here."

Spoken like a true racing Andretti, and standing on the victory podium, spraying the winner's champagne, John looked the part.

USF&G Golf

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — In a replay from the 1970's, leader Jack Nicklaus and pursuer Tom Watson will be paired in the last group on the golf course today in the third round of the USF&G Classic.

The two Hall of Fame members, heroes of an historic confrontation at Turnberry in 1977, gained the two top spots in this event Friday when most of the field could not handle howling winds.

It is believed to be the first time the old friends and frequent golfing foes have played together in the final twosome since Watson's one-stroke, record-breaking triumph in the British Open on the western coast of Scotland 14 years ago.

And it was obvious that Nicklaus, 51, and Watson, 41, welcomed the chance to go head-to-head again.

"Tom plays the wind as well as anyone in the history of the game," said Nicklaus, whose last regular-tour triumph came in the 1986 Masters.

"There's a lot of golf still left in Jack. No question about that," said Watson, a non-winner since the 1987 Nabisco Championship.

They gained their high positions in this event in a reversal of their usual roles: Nicklaus turned successful scrambler in a second-round 69 and Watson was the grinder in a hard-won round of par 72.

"Considering the conditions, it was a very good round of golf," said Nicklaus, who avoided a bogey by getting up and down for par on six consecutive holes.

He reached the tournament halfway point at 137, for a two-shot lead, 7 under par on the English Turn Golf and Country Club course he designed and built.

Powell owns Vintage lead

Seniors Golf

INDIAN WELLS, Calif. (AP) — Jimmy Powell's 6-under par 66 gave him a two-shot lead after one round of the $500,000 Vintage Invitational Seniors tournament Friday.

John Brodie, Walter Zembriski and Bobby Nichols fired 68s to tie for second place, one shot ahead of five other players.

Powell, a first-time tour winner last year, is looking to snare the first prize of $75,000. His putting was the key ingredient in his 66.

"After the third hole," said Powell, "I just ran the table on the greens."

Powell's only slip was a bogey at the par-4, 448-yard third hole, when his approach shot came up short of the green. He could not get his chip shot close enough and had to settle for a two-putt bogey.

But Powell started rolling when he birdied the par-3 fifth. His 4-iron was 12 feet short of the hole and he made the putt. Powell then birdied the next two holes.

Non-winner Bunkowsky cards eight LPGA birdies

PHOENIX (AP) — Barb Bunkowsky, a non-winner on the LPGA tour since 1984, carded eight birdies in a 5-under-par 68 and a two-stroke lead after Friday's second round of the Standard Register tournament.

Bunkowsky, tied for 11th place after a first-round 74 Thursday, had six birdies on her final nine holes for a 4-under 142 total at the halfway mark of the $550,000 event.

Tied for second place were Betsy King, Danielle Ammaccapane and first-round leader Cathy Gerring.

At 145 were Cathy Morse, Karen Davies, Elaine Crosby and Colleen Walker, who had an eagle on the par-4 15th hole to move into contention.

Gerring, who had an opening-round 70, made the turn at 4 under, but bogeyed the 11th and 12th holes to finish with a 74 Friday.

Ammaccapane shot 70 and King 72 on the 6,514-yard Moon Valley Country Club. Thursday's first round was plagued by wind, rain and cold, and only three players — Gerring, King and Caroline Keggi — broke par.

King won this event in 1985, one of 23 victories in her 15 years on the tour. Gerring has three victory in seven years — all coming last season — while Ammaccapane is winless in her fourth year.

The 144-woman field was cut in half at 153 following Friday's round. Among those barely surviving were defending champion Pat Bradley (151) and Hall of Famers JoAnne Carner (152) and Nancy Lopez (153).

Bunkowsky bogeyed the 12th, 15th and 16th holes Friday to make the turn at 2-over.

HOGS: Both seek respect

a quick tempo, as shown by their 100.1 per game scoring average, 16 points more than Kansas averaged.

"Our game plan never changes," Richardson said. "We don't change game plans for anyone. I think your worst enemy is yourself, so when we go to practice we'll work on our break, our half-court offense. We'll work on our defenses and their changes and then we'll go play. Habits are the keys to succes and our habit is to go out and do what we do well and not worry about Kansas. Make them stop what we do well."

That means getting a lot of shots on the break and taking advantage of its depth to force turnovers in a hectic pace.

"My kind of ball is called 'rat ball' and 'ghetto ball,' and that ticks me off," Richardson said. "I tell our kids we run and execute and that's different from run and gun. That's a big difference, because execution means you score."

Kansas started executing early against Indiana, with Terry Brown starting a barrage of 3-pointers that got the Jayhawks off to their third good start in three NCAA tournament games.

"We have had three good starts in three different kinds of games," point guard Adonis Jordan said. "In the first five minutes against Arkansas we have to control the tempo but the defense will dictate everything."

Neither team is bothered by any major injuries. Arkansas center Oliver Miller is shaking off a groin pull which kept him slightly below par against Alabama, and Kansas reserve Richard Scott turned an ankle against Indiana but is expected to play.

The teams were more concerned with getting the respect they feel they haven't gotten as two of the eight teams still with a chance at the national championship.

"It's been written that we're the weakest No. 1 seed," Miller said, "but right now we're still hanging tough and we have one more game to see if we're going back to the Final Four."

Mike Maddox is the only current player who saw action when Kansas won the national championship in 1988.

"This card here doesn't say New Orleans, it doesn't say Pittsburgh or Indiana," Maddox said, referring to his placecard at a news conference and Kansas' first three opponents. "Nobody thought we were going to win any of our games."

ch Andy Malone suspended for the season.

Midland Lee, 10-5 and 3-0 in district, will use its district open date today to play a doubleheader against Lubbock Estacado and Wollforth-Frenship in Frenship. The Rebels face Estacado at 1 p.m., and Wollforth-Frenship at 3:30 p.m.

Though MHS head coach Rick Wood was still keeping his options open Thursday, he said today's game against the Bobcats could see the return of senior pitcher James Madrid. The right-handed Madrid (2-1 this season) was a consistent starter in the 'Dogs' 1990 playoff campaign, but has been hampered by a sore arm through the early stages of 4-5A play.

Though he has not thrown in district play, he has been the designated hitter in all three 4-5A games and owns a .500 batting percentage with four RBI.

Right-handed juniors Brian Rounding (0-1), Jeremy Burton (0-1) and Ritchie Greth (0-1) are pitching alternatives, as is Dewayne Culpepper (4-2), a junior lefthander who threw a complete game shutout against OHS.

"James threw batting practice Wednesday and did pretty well. The only thing is, after the long layoff we don't know how long he can go," Wood said.

And against a team with as many unknowns as the Bobcats, whose first-year coach Rob Moore was a starting center fielder for Arkansas' 1987 College World Series team, pitching will probably be the key to winning for MHS.

"San Angelo is really the biggest surprise in the district this year (the Bobcats finished last season 7-13 and 3-8). They have a new coach, and from what I've heard, the kids must really like what he is doing. They're playing well and they have more kids out for the team. Shea Morenz, who was their quarterback in football, is playing and hitting the ball real well," Wood said.

As far as hitting is concerned, the Bulldogs have been on a hot streak themselves. Through the three 4-5A games, MHS is averaging 12 hits and eight runs a game.

Burton, who mans the outfield when not on the mound, is leading the team in batting through the district campaign with a .700 average and six RBI, while junior third baseman Jimmy Stanton joins Madrid at the .500 mark.

Senior catcher Jeff Casbeer is hitting .444 and Culpepper .417.

The likely starter for the Bobcats will be Ethan Lopez (5-1), who owns a 1.42 ERA and allowed one earned run in his last outing, an 8-3 win over OHS.

Hitting leaders for San Angelo are second baseman Justin Bryan (.452), and outfielders Chris Cloninger (.348) and Morenz (.339 with three home runs and seven RBI).

Toronto Blue Jays pitcher Jimmy Key takes some warm-up throws during recent Major League exhibition game against the Baltimore Orioles.

Best story already told

By Jim Donaghy
AP Baseball Writer

It didn't make the top of any sportscasts and it didn't make bold headlines, but the best story of the year in baseball might have already happened.

In case you missed it, Jim Abbott hit a triple in California's exhibition game against San Francisco. Abbott has overcome the handicap of being born without a right hand to pitch in the major leagues. In fact he came right out of college to pitch in the big leagues.

Abbott's triple came in the second inning against Rick Reuschel. It was a drive of about 400 feet to center field at Scottsdale Stadium. The 5,848 in attendance knew they had just witnessed something special and gave Abbott a standing ovation.

He wasn't all that surprised. Abbott's been telling everyone he could hit ever since leaving college.

Abbott got a video tape of his triple, just in case he wants to see it again.

"This is for the kids," he said. "Otherwise they may not believe it."

It may have been the most remarkable performance since Pete Gray's efforts in 1945. Gray, who lost his right arm in a childhood accident, had a successful minor league career and got a shot at the majors because of the war.

Big league pitchers proved a little too overpowering as Gray hit .218 with 13 RBIs. But on a day in May at Yankee Stadium, he had four hits, drove in two runs, scored twice and handled nine chances in the outfield. It was another memorable day.

Baseball Notes

Spoil Sports

With the addition of first baseman Glenn Davis, the Baltimore Orioles are looking at Randy Milligan in the outfield. They're not getting a very good look, though.

Entering the weekend, Milligan has not had a putout or assist in 23 innings.

"At least I'm catching all the grounders," Milligan said.

Soundwaves

ESPN will start its regular-season coverage with a doubleheader on opening day. In the opener, Houston visits Cincinnati at 1 p.m. CST and Milwaukee's at Texas for an 7 p.m. game. Nolan Ryan is the Rangers' scheduled opening day pitcher.

ESPN's Sunday night coverage starts on April 14 when Seattle visits Oakland.

Steve Springer is 30, has 1,000-plus minor league hits and hasn't given up his dream to play in the major leagues. He was signed by the Seattle Mariners last November as a minor-league free agent and is in their spring training camp as a non-roster player.

"Not many guys can say they've got 1,000 minor league hits," Springer said. "They're either up in the big leagues early or they don't hang around long enough."

Springer has spent nine seasons hanging around the minors, including the last six at Triple A. He finally got to the major leagues last season — for three weeks and four games.

He made a career-high $43,000 last year, including $13,000 for being on the Cleveland Indians' roster for less than a month.

Taking a Gamble?

Here's something Fay Vincent may take a dim view of.

Pierre Bibeau, head of the Olympic Installations Board, figures he has just the place for a casino in Montreal. It's in meeting rooms near the top of the Olympic Stadium Tower, high above the home field of the Expos.

Bibeau said Quebec will likely get its first casinos in two years' time and promoters are getting ready.

Peanut People Parade

Six proficient peanut peddlers were honored as MVPs (Master Vendors of Peanuts) at Wednesday's New York Yankees-Montreal Expos game in West Palm Beach. Sponsored by the National Peanut Month Committee, an industry group, the day saw each vendor given a trophy in the shape of a peanut.

No one knows Bo

PHOENIX (AP) — Bo Jackson's baseball career was left in limbo Friday when no team was willing to gamble that he would recover from his hip injury and ever play again.

Any club could have claimed multi-sport, multi-media star for $1 on the waiver wire. Instead, the afternoon deadline passed without a single bid and Jackson limped away a free agent.

Jackson can now negotiate his own deal and his agent, Richard Woods, said some unidentified teams were interested. Jackson, however, likely would get far less than the $2,375,000 guaranteed by the Kansas City Royals before he was released Monday because of his football injury.

Jackson will collect $391,483.52, about one-sixth of his salary, from the Royals because they cut him before opening day. It's uncertain how much more this week's sudden developments will cost him on and off the field.

THE NEW York Yankees, who coveted Jackson for nearly a decade, had the first shot at claiming Jackson. Deposed owner George Steinbrenner said this week that he would pursue Jackson, but the team backed away.

"We wanted to be able to sign him. We wanted in every way for it to happen," Yankees general manager Gene Michael said. "We just felt the risk was too great for us."

Michael said the Yankees studied Jackson's medical reports and solicited the advice of six orthopedic specialists. The conclusion was the same one the Royals reached when they cut him: Bo and sports might be a no go.

"We are a bit suprised that he wasn't claimed because the reports out of New York were so strong that he would be," Woods said. "I told Bo that I thought he would be picked up by the Yankees, but I told him it may not happen.

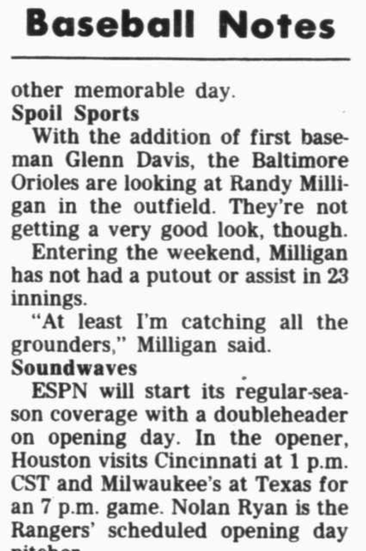

"He was not shocked by what happened," Woods said. "He's very excited that he gets to pick. I'm extraordinarily confident Bo will sign with another club when he wants to down the road."

Even if a team had claimed Jackson, he would have had five days to accept or reject them. If he had said no, he would have become a free agent.

'Whatever it takes'

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas, which last year won its first Southwest Conference football championship since 1983, opens spring training Monday with a goal of becoming the first Longhorn team to repeat as champions since 1972-73.

"Whatever it takes" was the motto of a Texas team that compiled an 8-0 SWC record, after two consecutive losing seasons.

The Longhorns finished the season 10-2, including a 46-3 loss to Miami in the Cotton Bowl, and were ranked No. 12 in The Associated Press poll.

Thirteen starters return, including eight from a defensive unit that ranked No. 18 nationally in college football, yielding 301 yards a game.

But Texas' most celebrated defensive player, end Shane Dronett, will miss the three-week training period as a result of an operation on his right hand in which a pin was inserted.

Dronett, 6-feet-6 and 258 pounds, was a unanimous all-SWC choice and third-team All-American as a sophomore in 1990.

Junior defensive tackle James Patton and sophomore safety Lance Gunn also were unanimous all-conference selections, and will be back.

A balanced offense that produced 398 yards a game — 197 running and 201 passing — has five returning starters.

HUNT: Interviews start Monday

(From 1B)

South Alabama.

MC president Dr. Jess Parrish said, considering the opening has not yet been officially advertised, the response has been almost overwhelming.

"We're very pleased with our slate of applicants to this point, and we're not even started," Parrish said. "It's not any great number because we haven't officially advertised. But the coaches' grapevine is under way."

Parrish said the first round of interviews would be held next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

WLAF debuts with global look

Associated Press

Bring on the world. Or Europe and Canada, at least.

The World League of American Football, with the support of 26 NFL teams (the Bears and Cardinals said no), is here. Hoping to build on popularity established through NFL preseason games in Europe, the WLAF has teams in London, Frankfurt and Barcelona. It also has one in Montreal and six in the United States, from coast to coast.

More importantly, the WLAF has a network television deal for two years with ABC, which paid $28 million for Sunday afternoon games, playoffs and the World Bowl on June 9. USA cable signed up for two years, doing 25 games this season: 10 on Saturday nights, 10 on Monday nights, four on Saturday afternoons and a playoff game.

"We believe the rest of the world is ready for American football," WLAF president Mike Lynn says. He believed it enough to leave his job as executive vice president of the Minnesota Vikings to run the new league. "Our preseason games have had great acceptance and there has been a demand for more American football.

"This is the first major step toward the globalization of professional sports."

The NBA and NHL already have strong ties with Europe, and the NFL, with its masterful marketing skills, sees a jewel ripe for plucking. Obviously unable to stage anything more than exhibition games in European areas, it invented the WLAF.

HERE'S WHAT the NFL has wrought:

— A 10-team league (for now, with hopes of expansion internationally — did somebody say Tokyo and Australia? — and continentally), with U.S. franchises in New York-New Jersey (Knights); Sacramento (Surge); Orlando (Thunder); San Antonio (Riders); Raleigh-Durham (Skyhawks); and Birmingham (Fire).

— Gimmicks galore.

The WLAF held a draft by positions. Salary standards have been set, with quarterbacks getting $25,000 for the season, about what Dan Marino (an analyst on some USA games, along with Warren Moon and Boomer Esiason) gets for one period with Miami. Kickers will make $15,000, everyone else $20,000.

Games will feature 2-point conversions, no-huddle offenses, a 35-second limit between plays, coach-to-QB communication via radio in the quarterback's helmet (TV viewers can listen in) and miking of coaches. There will be no instant replay and, thank you, no in-the-grasp rule. In overtime, a team must score six points to win.

— Educational aids for local fans in Europe, including detailed public address announcements describing and explaining the action.

— Operation Discovery, headed by former NFL coach John Ralston, who toured 15 countries and three continents looking for local athletes to convert into WLAF players.

"The ultimate would be to have a world league made up of international players," he said. "We looked at soccer players, runners and jumpers, knowing that if they had the talent to do well in other sports, they might be talented enough to play football."

Don't expect too many Brits playing for the London Monarchs just yet, however.

"It will take time for them to learn the game, and it will take longer for it to be natural," Ralston said.

While on-field talent will range from NFL rejects to undrafted collegians to bouncers and bodyguards coming out of football retirement looking for some time in the spotlight, the WLAF has an impressive lineup in its front office and owning its teams.

Joining Lynn are Joe Bailey, a VP of the Dallas Cowboys for 19 years, and Jerry Vainisi, general manager of the Bears when they won the Super Bowl. Team owners include San Antonio's Tom Landry; Birmingham's Gavin Maloof, former owner of the NBA's Houston Rockets; Raleigh-Durham's George Shinn, owner of the Charlotte Hornets; and Josep M. Figueras, president of the Barcelona Chamber of Commerce.

For now, the focus will be more on administrators than players.

At 70, Timothy Leary continues to praise psychedelics

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Timothy Leary, who once urged a generation to "turn on, tune in, drop out," contends the government suppresses LSD research because psychedelic drugs increase personal freedom.

Leary

"Scientific study of drugs that expand consciousness and accelerate mental activity is a threat to any authoritarian state because it encourages innovative and creative thinking," said the 70-year-old psychologist, author, ex-convict, computer software designer and nightclub philosopher.

Federal officials and many scientists say the government doesn't ban research involving LSD, but restrictions prevent unscientific, dangerous experiments on humans.

Leary, who lives in Beverly Hills, doesn't see it that way.

"LSD is obviously a very important tool in understanding the brain and human consciousness," he said in a recent interview. "The suppression of that search by the government is a political scandal."

Leary calls the human brain "the No. 1 challenge of the 21st century. We're the licensed operators and owners of it, and we should learn how to use it. Psychedelic drugs are the tool to do that."

Laws against drug use are part of "an inquisition, a moral crusade against individual freedom and choice," said Leary, who was convicted of marijuana charges in the late 1960s, escaped prison, was recaptured, then paroled in 1976.

After earning his doctorate at Berkeley in 1950 and later heading psychological research for Oakland's Kaiser Foundation, Leary became a lecturer and LSD researcher at Harvard University in 1959.

Leary and fellow researcher Richard Alpert, now known as Baba Ram Dass, were fired in 1963 because they used undergraduates in drug experiments.

In recent years, Leary lectured on the college circuit, performed as a "stand-up philosopher" at comedy clubs and showed up frequently at trendy nightclubs.

Leary announced in 1988 he planned to have his head cut off and frozen after he died in hopes of possible resurrection.

Tragedy struck last fall when Leary's 42-year-old daughter hanged herself in jail after being found mentally unfit to stand trial for allegedly shooting her boyfriend in 1989.

Leary now spends time developing computer programs, which he has called "the electronic equivalent of LSD."

"It's software that expands your consciousness," he said.

Stumbling through Jerusalem, Jesus bore on his back a heavy wooden cross. Hanging on that cross on Calvary, He died a slow, torturous death, bleeding from the mocking crown of thorns and the nails that pierced His hands and feet.

"But He was wounded for our transgressions . . . and by His wounds we are healed." (Isaiah 53:5)

Jesus prophesied that in three days He would rise from the tomb, appear in the flesh, and then ascend to His Father in heaven. "And behold there was a great earthquake; for the angel of the Lord descended from heaven, and came and rolled back the stone . . ." and proclaimed:

"He has risen, just as He said." (Matt. 28:6)

Do you bear a cross? Do you feel entombed by doubt and fear? Ask Jesus Christ to help you to rise above the darkness of sin and death.

As we worship this Easter and each Sabbath throughout the year, let us remember that we need not bear our cross alone. We have only to ask in faith, and the Lord will share our burden and walk by our side.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Holy Week services set

■ First United Methodist Church, Main Street at Ohio Avenue, continues the tradition this year of noon-time worshop and lunch available to the general public Monday through Wednesday during Holy Week.

This year the worship services will feature preaching by the senior pastors of three area churches — First Baptist, First Christian and First Presbyterian. these three pastors will be speaking in the worship services in teh chapel from 12:05 to 12:35 p.m. the services will include hymn singing, a solo, prayers and the sermon.

Lunch will be served in the Fellowship Hall for a moderate price from 11:30 a.m. to noon and again from 12:35 to 1 p.m. This enables the downtown working community to participate in the lunch and worship within an hour.

Denison

Monday, the Rev. James C. Denison, First Baptist Church, will speak on "Once Upon a Tree," from the text of I Corinthians 15.

Bristol

Wednesday, the Rev. Russell H. Ritchel Jr., First Presbyterian Church, will speak on "What Jesus Sent to the Cross," from the text of John 2:13-25.

Richtel

In addition, First UMC will hold Maundy Thursday services at 7 p.m. Thursday. At the conclusion of the service the altar will be draped in black and the chapel will remain in darkness until Easter morning.

This Sunday, Palm Sunday, services will be held at 8:15 and 10:35 a.m. there will be a procession of the Palms by the Children's Choirs.

Easter Sunday the church will have identical wroship services at 8:15 and 10:35 a.m. Music will be provided by three choirs and the Texas Tech Student Brass Quintet.

■ First Presbyterian Church will celebrate Holy Week with the Procession of Palms by the children during worship Sunday.

The celebration will continue with a Maundy Thursday Service of Darkness at 7:30 p.m. Thursday. Holy Communion will be offered.

Good Friday services will begin at noon and end at 3 p.m. Friday. This service is divided into eight 20 to 25 minute segments with local Presbyterian ministers offering a message during each segment. Those ministers are Russ Ritchel, First Presbyterian, noon; Steve Schorr, associate pastor First Presbyterian, 12:20 p.m.; Hawley Wolfe, Grace Presbyterian, 12:50 p.m.; Dick Braun, parish associate First Presbyterian, 1:05 p.m.; Al Moreau, Trinity Presbyterian, 1:30 p.m.; Bill Borror, associate pastor First Presbyterian, 2 p.m.; Ray Riddle, pastor emeritus First Presbyterian, 2:20 p.m.; and Charles Hollingworth, Presbyter Tres Rios Presbytery, 2:40 p.m.

Holy Communion will be offered all three hours. This service was designed for the participant to enter the sanctuary, pray, partake of communion, hear a message and leave.

In addition, Easter will be celebrated with the sanctuary decorated with Easter lillies. Sunday services are at 8:15 and 11 a.m. Sunday School is at 9:30 with a fellowship coffee preceeding in Lynn Hall. The public is invited to all services.

■ Memorial Christian Church, 1001 Andrews Highway, is holding special Holy Week services.

On Maudy Thursday, the congregation will have a sader Meal consisting of meat, cheese and frout at 6:30 p.m. Following the meal, there will be a service led by lay people in the sanctuary. During the service, the sanctuary will be prepared for Good Friday.

A 24-hour prayer chain starts Thursday at 8 p.m. and ends Friday at 8 p.m. when there will be a Tennebrae Service, a Service of Darkness. The public is invited to attend.

■ The Interdenominational Ministerial Alliance will sponsor six "Seven Last Words From the Cross" services to celebrate Easter beginning Sunday with an 8 p.m. citywide fellowship service at St. Paul C.M.E. Church, 409 S. Lee St.

The Rev. Walter Hunter will bring the message.

Then, on Wednesday, "The Seven Last Words from the Cross" service will begin at 7:30 p.m. at St. Paul C.M.E Church. Bringing the message will be the Rev. Willaim Ashley and Bernie Wilson.

Services continue at The Mt. Carmel Baptist Church, 1308 E. Pecan Ave., Thursday at 7:30 p.m. The Rev. Tony Williams and Hunter will be the speakers.

Services shift to The Greater New Hope Baptist Church, 2400 E. New York Ave., for a 7:30 p.m. service Friday. The Rev. Johnny A. Mitchell and Curtis D. Joiner will be the speakers.

The series continues at The Antioch Baptist Church, 1400 E. Golf Course Road, at 7:30 p.m. March 30. the Rev. Michael Debaughn will be the speaker.

The special services conclude Easter at The Greater St. Luke A.M.E. Church, 401 S. Adams St., at 6 a.m. Special speaker for the sunrise service will be the Rev. Alvin Mills.

Williams, president of the Alliance, invites the public to attend the services.

■ The congregations of Midland Lutheran Church and Hope Lutheran Church will join each other for Maundy Thursday and Good Friday services.

A Seder Meal will be served at 7 p.m. Thursday at Midland Lutheran Church, 2705 W. Michigan Ave. This symbolic Lenten worship experience will be held at Midland Lutheran and hosted by Hope Lutheran Church.

This is a Christian remembrance of the Passover meal Jesus shared with his disciples. The Jewish symbolism of the elements of the meal will be reflected by readings and small portions of the elements placed before each member. Communion will be celebrated within the meal. Reservations will be necessary so that a place for each person can be prepared. A nursery will be provided for all children kindergarten age and younger.

Reservations may be made by calling 694-1373 or 683-1936.

Hope Lutheran Church, 2003 North A St., will be the site of the 7 p.m. Friday Tenabrae Service.

"Tenabrae, a Latin word for darkness, is observed on Good Friday as a reminder of the consequences of man's sin and the greatness of Christ's sacrifice on Calvary," said a release from the churches. This service is hosted by Midland Lutheran.

On both evenings the choirs of both churches will participate jointly, directed by Charlene Moore of Hope Lutheran and Eric Carlson of Midland Lutheran. Organist is Norman Goad.

The ministers of both churches, the Rev. Ronald Meyer of Midland Lutheran and the Rev. Jonathan Holmer of Hope Lutheran, invite the public to attend the services.

■ Midland Lutheran Church, 2705 W. Michigan Ave., will begin Holy Week services with the Palm Sunday Passion Story at the 10:30 a.m. Palm Procession and Communion Service Sunday.

The service will include hymns and readings from the Passion Story. Special worship assistants and lectors from the congregation will be Dorie Thoma, Gretchen and Larry Schults and Dick Reed. Handbell and piano music will be presented by Todd Giese and Mary Ann Stice. Organist will be Herman W. Porsch Jr.

Sunday School classes for all ages begin at 9:15 a.m.

The public is invited to attend. For more information call 694-1373.

■ A service of Tenebrae will be held at 7 p.m. Thursday at St. Luke's United Methodist Church, 3011 W. Kansas Ave.

"On this night we remember and celebrate the final supper Jesus shared with his disciples in the context of Passover," siad a release from the church.

The service at St. Luke's will include the celebration of Holy Communion and a Service of Shadows.

"Tenabrae depicts through the extinguishing of candles and the dimming of lights in the sanctuary, the flight of the disciples and the approaching crucifixion," the release said.

The return of the lights at the end of the service symbolizes the return of hope as Christians look forward to Easter and the resurrection.

■ Holy Cross Lutheran Church, Missouri Synod, 5023 Princeton Ave. No. 2, invites the public to attend services Palm Sunday and Easter.

■ Golf Course Road Church of Christ will conduct sunrise Easter services at the fountain at Clay-Desta Plaza.

The services will be presented by Gary Hundley and Tom Vermillion, ministers for the church, and will center around the Resurrection with special emphasis on communion.

No seating will be provided and families are encouraged to bring lawn chairs or blankets for their comfort. Dress for the event is casual.

The community is invited to attend.

■ Grace Evangelical Lutheran Church, 3000 W. Golf Course Road, continues its services for Lent at 7 p.m. Thursday.

Other services include Maundy Thursday with Holy Communion March 28 and Good Friday, Tenebrae, March 29.

Non-members as well as members are invited to attend.

Quartet to perform

The Embers Quartet will perform today as part of the Fairmont Park Church of Christ 39ers "Who Am I?" Workshop which begins with a continental breakfast at 8:30 a.m.

Guest speakers for the workshop, which began Friday night, is Charles Hodge, pulpit minister of Duncanville Church of Christ, and Dr. C. Bruce Davis, director of the Center for the Study of Aging, Abilene Christian University.

The Embers will perform at 10:15 to 10:45 a.m. today. The Embers have had two gospel concerts with The Cathedrals, winners of five Dove awards, and performed backup on B.J. Thomas' special rendition of "Amazing Grace." The quartet has recorded six albums, their latest being "Hosanna," on the Harvest label.

For more information call 699-7064.

Crusade to be held

The Rev. Mark L. Williams will be the featured speaker in a spiritual awakening crusade Sunday through Friday at the Midland Church of God, 5300 Thomason Drive.

Williams

"Rev. Williams, a dynamic communication of the gospel message, is a much sought after speaker for revival campaigns, prayer conferences, camp meetings and youth camps through the United states," said a release from the local church.

His sermons have been featured on the minister's tape service of "Forward in Faith," the radio voice of the Church of God. He has written for The Pentecostal Institute for Church Growth, a publication widely circulated among full gospel churches.

Born in Texas, Williams was educated at the University of Denver, Lee College and the Church of God School of Theology, where he received the master of divinity degree. He began his revival ministry in 1984, and, at age 27, has already ministered in 21 states.

Accompanying Williams in this crusade and serving as featured soloist will be his wife, Sandra Kay Williams. As a voice major in college, Mrs. Williams earned the right to compete in the National Association of Teachers' of Singing.

Services will begin at 10 a.m. and 6 p.m. Sunday and at 7:30 p.m. weeknights. The Rev. M.R. Thomason, the local pastor, invites the public to attend.

'The Crucifixion' set

The Chancel Choir of St. Luke's United Methodist Church will perform John Stainer's "Crucifixion" at 5 p.m. Sunday in the church sanctuary, 3100 W. Kansas Ave.

Soloists for the program will be tenor Bruce Peeler and bass Don McCartney. Accompanying the soloists and choir will be Debby Vester, organist and music assistant for St. Luke's UMC.

Stainer, an English composer, began his musical journey at the age of 7 as a choirboy at St. Paul's Cathedral in London. By the time he was 16, he had been chosen as the organist for the College of St. Michael at Tenbury in Worcestershire. He entered Oxford University as organist to Magdalen College four years later. He later became the organist for the university.

Stainer described the "Crucifixion" not as an oratorio or cantata, but as a "Mediatation" on the sacred passion of the Holy redeemer.

Stainer wrote the work for his pupil and friend W. Hodge, and the choir of Marylebone Church, North London.

"Ever since its first performance there in 1887, it has retained both its popularity and deeply partisan loyalty among those who perform it," the release said. "The 'Crucifixion' is the preeminent example of Victorian church music and Stainer, a modest man, could never have forseen that this one work would make him at once popular, notorious and even legendary."

The Rev. Jarrell H. Sharp, senior minister at St. Luke's UMC, invites the public to attend. For more information call 694-2571.

Women's programs set

■ The Midland District Women's Department of the Church of God in Christ is sponsoring a "100 Percent Women in White" program beginning at 10:30 a.m. today in San Angelo at the COGIC Deliverance Tabernacle, 811 W. 17th. Registration begins at 9:30 a.m.

The sessions include one designed for men titled "From the Man's Perspective" and taught by the Rev. Kenneth Weatherspoon and the Rev. Rodney Mayberring.

■ Odessa Christian Faith Center is hosting a Spring Women's Conference from 8:30 a.m. to 4 :30 p.m. today at the club at Mission Dorado, 1 Mission Boulevard. The guest speaker is Joanne Wallace.

"At this special conference you will be taught subjects such as building a positive self image, seeing yourself the way God sees you, bringing balance to your life and much more," said a release from the center.

Cost of the conference is $25. To register or for more information call 1-368-7714.

■ The New Jerusalem Baptist Church, 1801 N. Carver St., pastored by the Rev. John F. Campbell, will be hosting its annual Wo-

Medical tests offered

Free medical screenings will be provided in Midland from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday on the Wal-Mart parking lot. The screenings utilize the Community Services Mobile Medical-Dental Health Clinic.

Tests that will be given include blood pressure, weight and height, blood sugar, glaucoma and cholesterol. Acute findings will be referred to the individual's personal doctor.

Sponsoring the services here will be the Midland Seventh-Day Adventist Church. The church's pastor, Eddie Card, will serve as medical secretary and host during the clinic's operation. Receptionists will be Evangeline Richman, Ann Gearhart and Kathryn Qualls.

The community services Mobile Medical-Dental Clinic is a 38-foot semi-trailer consisting of five rooms — receptionist room, two dental rooms and medical examination rooms.

The purpose of the clinic, which is a public service of the Seventh-Day Adventist Church, is to help other agencies in bringing health, healing and happiness to those of disadvantaged and low income areas in the cities of the southwestern United States.

Missionary to leave

A missionary farewell will be held at 10:50 a.m. Sunday at The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 4805 gateway, for Blaine "Travis" Bushman who leaves April 10 to serve two years in the Oakland, Calif., Spanish speaking mission.

Bushman

Bushman is the son of Blaine Jay and Margene Bushman. His father also served a church mission in the Eastern Atlantic states prior to marriage.

A 1990 graduate of Lee High School, Bushman, a Eagle Scout, played varsity football, the cello in the orchestra and was a member of DECA Club, where he went to state competition for petroleum marketing. While in high school, he attended early morning church seminary classes for four years without missing a day and served as vice-president of the stake seminary program. He also has worked for four years on the Midland "Christmas in April" program.

Since graduation, Bushman has been attending Midland College studying business management and working for Bushman Exxon saving for his mission as he will love off his earnings during his term of service and will not be paid for his work. He will spend 60 to 70 hours per week teaching others about the gospel of Jesus Christ. He will be trained for his service at Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah, before traveling to his new home.

Upon completion of his mission, Bushman plans to attend BYU to pursue a degree in business management.

Couple to lead service

Randy and Debi Kizer will be leading a service of praise and worship at Cornerstone Christian Fellowship, 1610 W. Wall Ave., at 7 p.m. Sunday.

"Randy and Debi have appeared on Trinity Broadcasting Network's Love special program, hosted by singer Nancy Harmon, and currently lead the praise and worship service for evangelist Mike Murdock weekly in Irving," said a release from the Midland church.

The couple recently have released the album "Through the Years," which is being aired nationwide by 1,000 radio stations.

"Their ministry is focused n helping those who have broken hearts and lives," the release said.

The Kizers are from the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

The public is invited to attend. No admission will be charged.

Comedian to speak

SAN ANGELO — Mike Warnke, a Christian comedian evangelist, will be speaking at Tree of Life Church, San Angelo, April 9 at 7:30 p.m.

A door donation will be received to help defray expenses. Warnke is an ex-Satanic priest. His evangelistic career began after his first book, "The Satan Seller," was published in 1972. He has a two-part teaching tape on the market titled "The Powers That Be" and his first video is titled "Do You Hear Me?"

For more information call Warnke Ministries, 1-606-748-9961, 1-655-9044 or 1-942-1865.

Revival upcoming

STANTON — The First Baptist Church will begin a "Look & Live" Revival Sunday with evangelist Glenn R. Watson of Hurst Baptist Church.

Revival music will be led by singer Clydel Chapman of Northside Baptist Church, Odessa.

Watson is a graduate of Oklahoma Baptist University, Shawnee, Okla. He also has a master of divinity and doctor of philosophy from Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary, Fort Worth. He has been a preacher and program leader in numerous revivals, youth conferences, camps and retreats in Texas, Oklahoma, Mexico, Panama and Honduras.

Services will be at 6 p.m. Sunday and at 7 p.m. weekdays.

Special features of the revival will be "Youth Joy Explosion" Sunday, with Reggie Franklin speaking to the youth at 5 p.m. Following the service, there will be a pie fellowship for everyone in attendance.

Tuesday at 6 p.m. the children will have a corn dog supper. Then, Wednesday, following the service, everyone will be invited to a dessert fellowship in fellowship hall.

Tim Swihart, the church's pastor and general chairman for the "Look & Live" Revival, invites the public to attend.

Grieving retreat set

SAN ANGELO — "Healing retreat: Grieving the Loss of a Spouse," will be held at Christ the King Retreat Center April 20 and 21.

"This retreat will provide an atmosphere of support and acceptance for spouses who find themselves divorced, separated or widowed," said Mary Ann Lewis, administrator of Christ the King Retreat Center.

Sessions consist of personal reflection as well as a method of dialogue designed especially for the formerly married.

"The dialogue will be in small groups that are warm, supportive and are geared toward genuine community and real fellowship," the release said.

Cost is $25 per person and includes regisrtation, rooma nd board. Deadline for registration is April 9. For more information call Ms. Lewis, 1-658-3900, Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Prosperity workshop set

Brian and Victoria West will present their three-hour "Prosperity Made Simple" workshop April 3 beginning at 7 p.m. at the Permian Church of Religious Science, 2311 Elizabeth St.

The workshop is sponsored by the church.

"Brian and Victoria West are 100 committed to creating world peace now through total prosperity for everyone," said a release from the church. "They define total prosperity as having everything you want to have, doing everything you want to do and being everything you want to be right now."

Mrs. West has a background in secondary education, foreign language and chiropractic health care.

West has more than 20 years experience as a senior engineer, manager and business owner in the electronics and solar energy industries.

For more information call 684-4230.

Course for divorcees

The Divorce Recovery Workshop continues Thursdays through May 2 at First United Methodist Church, downtown. The workshop begins at 7:30 p.m.

This eight-week senimar is for men and women who are divorced or separated, said a release from the church.

"The purpose of the workshop is to create a safe, locing and open environment enabling separated or divorced persons to discover themselves as whole persons acceptable to God and to themselves and others," the release said. "It will also help participants to discover within themselves and the group the power of a living and forvgiving God."

The Rev. Jeff Lust, associate pastor of First UMC, will lead the workshop. Some of the topics to be discussed are feelings fo divorce, coping with the past, using anger, children of divorce, creating a new identity and forming new goals.

Cost of the workshop is $15. Free child care is being provided.

The workshop is being held in the church's parlor, Main Street at Ohio Avenue. For more information call 682-3701.

Family films to be shown

The Family Ministry of Golf Course Road Church of Christ is presenting "The Hurried Family," a film series by author and lecturer Tim Kimmel.

The hour video runs for 10 consecutive Wednesday at 7 p.m. The concluding session is April 24.

The series, hosted by Gary Grady, will be held in the chapel, south side of the building. Classes for children will run concurrently.

Auction scheduled

A silent auction and luncheon is planned for First United Methodist Church, Main Street at Ohio Avenue, at 11 a.m. Sunday.

Proceeds from the event will go to benefit the Celebration Singers, the church's youth choir. The choir is going to Florida this summer.

Parishioners to sing

Ranchland Heights Baptist Church will have its singing at 7 p.m. Sunday.

The singing, usually held on the fifth Sunday, will be this week so it will not interfere with Easter activities.

Assisting Billy Cook, music director, will be Jo Marie Beck, organist and choir leader, as well as Pat Kidwell and Debbie Galloway on the piano. Choral groups, soloists and quartets will perform with congregational singing also included.

In addition, the church will hold two morning services Easter Sunday. For more information call 683-1947 or 683-7233.

U.S.S.R. talk planned

The Unitarian-Universalist Church, Neely Avenue at Midkiff Street, will sponsor a round table discussion Sunday of the current conflicts in the Soviet Union.

The discussion will begin at 9:45 a.m. and last for an hour. The public is invited to attend and to participate.

Pageant cancelled

The special Easter Pageant, "The Wonder of the Season: The Resurrection," which was to be presented at Alamo Heights Baptist Church Sunday, March 24, at 7 p.m., has been cancelled due to illness.

Regular worship services will take place as scheduled.

Teacher convicted of plotting husband's murder

AP Laserphoto

William Smart, facing camera, hugs a relative at his murdered son's grave Friday shortly after his daughter-in law was convicted of helping to plan and carry out the murder.

EXETER, N.H. (AP) — A high school instructor was convicted Friday and sentenced to life in prison without parole following a sensational trial on charges that she manipulated her student-lover into murdering her husband.

Pamela Smart, 23, stood motionless and displayed no emotion as the Superior Court jury foreman pronounced her guilty of murder-conspiracy and being an accomplice to murder.

Judith Smart, who cried out as each verdict in her son's death was read, said afterward, "She got what she deserved."

Judith and William Smart left the court for the cemetery where their son is buried.

"We're going to tell Gregg," William Smart said. "We're going to tell him that, by God, she did do it."

Pamela Smart's parents, John and Linda Wojas, were stone-faced as they left the courthouse.

"You know how I feel about that," Wojas said when asked if her daughter had gotten a fair trial. Mrs. Wojas wore a yellow ribbon every day, symbolizing her belief that her daughter was a hostage of the judicial system.

"I feel terribly bad for the Wojas family," Judith Smart said. "I can imagine how I would feel and I feel very, very bad for them."

The jury, which heard three weeks of testimony, deliberated 12 hours over three days before returning its verdict. Smart also was convicted of witness-tampering for encouraging her student-intern to lie to police.

Rockingham County Superior Court Judge Douglas Gray immediately announced the mandatory life sentence for the accomplice-to-murder charge. Smart's lawyers said they would appeal.

Smart was school district media coordinator when she met teen-ager William Flynn as one of his instructors in a self-awareness program at Winnacunnet High School in Hampton in late 1989.

She worked in the program, intended to discourage drug and alcohol use, and worked in non-credit student video projects.

The Boston Herald, which dubbed Smart, the 'Ice Princess,' invited readers to 'be the judge' by calling in their verdicts on a 900-number. They voted guilty, 543 to 101.

Prosecutors said the former high school cheerleader and college honor student tantalized and seduced Flynn, then 15 and a virgin, then threatened to end their affair unless he murdered her husband. Smart testified that she broke off the affair just before the murder.

The defense called Flynn and two confessed accomplices "thrill-killers" who shot Smart on their own last May 1, then framed his widow to avoid life prison terms. In plea bargains, they face minimum sentences ranging from 18 to 28 years.

Testimony was broadcast live by WMUR-TV in Manchester. The Boston Herald, which dubbed Smart, the "Ice Princess," invited readers to "be the judge" by calling in their verdicts on a 900-number. They voted guilty, 543 to 101.

Flynn said he lost his virginity to Smart after they watched and re-enacted parts of the erotic movie "9½ Weeks." She denied re-enacting anything.

The most damaging evidence against Smart were four secretly recorded conversations she had with Cecelia Pierce, 16, her student-intern and confidante. The profanity-laden tapes made after the murder show that Smart urged Pierce to lie to police, that she feared being jailed herself, and that she knew her husband would be murdered.

Asked what was the deciding evidence in their verdict, one juror, Charlotte Jefts, said, "The tapes. They told the truth."

Another juror, who spoke on condition of anonymity, referred to Smart's steely demeanor and passivity during the trial that earned her the sobriquet "Ice Princess."

"She was just too cold for my taste," the juror said. "It seemed like she had answers to everything. It seemed too rehearsed, too cold."

On the stand, Smart said she pretended to know more about the murder as a "game" to get Pierce to tell everything she knew.

He and Patrick Randall, 17, testified that they entered the Smarts' condominium through a basement door that Pamela Smart had left unlocked for them. They said they stole some of her jewelry to make the crime look like a botched burglary and waited for Smart to arrive home.

They also said they forced him to his knees as he begged for mercy. When they demanded his wedding ring, he said he couldn't give it to them because his wife would kill him.

But prosecutor Paul Maggiotto said the teenagers' stories were too detailed to have been concocted. He cited Flynn's testimony that Smart psyched him up for murder on an earlier, failed attempt, by playing the Van Halen song "Black and Blue" that the two played when they first made love.

"She was a programmed robot," he said.

But shortly before the verdict, Wojas said people were misjudging his daughter.

"She's not a cold little woman like they're trying to describe her," the retired airline pilot said. "She doesn't show a lot of outright emotion. She never has."

In a brief statement, Flynn's mother, Elaine, said she was pleased. "I'm thankful the jurors were able to see beyond her lies and manipulations," she said.

Both sides agree, new gun laws could come this year

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — After years of intense battling on Capitol Hill, lawmakers and lobbyists on both sides of the gun control issue agree that prospects this year are the best ever for legislation to create a seven-day waiting period to buy a handgun.

House Speaker Thomas S. Foley, who last year blocked consideration of the measure in the closing weeks of the session, said this week he intended to bring it to the floor by the end of April.

And as opinion polls show growing support for a waiting period, some past opponents, like Rep. Les AuCoin, D-Ore., and Susan Molinari, R-N.Y., are switching sides, arguing that something must be done in the face of staggering crime rates.

If the bill passed the House, lawmakers say, it would still face a lukewarm reception in the Senate. And administration officials repeated that President Bush is still against a waiting period.

The measure would establish nationally a seven-day period in which local police could check the backgrounds of potential handgun buyers for criminal and mental health records.

A gun dealer would have to provide the local law enforcement agency with the name, address and birth date of the prospective buyer. The sale could take place after seven days unless the police blocked it.

Although the legislation would not require local law enforcement officials to conduct the background checks, many police agencies have voiced support for such a system. The measure would not apply to rifles and shotguns.

Opinion is mixed over the value of waiting periods. Several states have such systems and there have have been reports of their stopping gun purchases by criminals.

As the advocates of the proposal began a new drive for support in Congress this week, the National Rifle Association intensified its campaign against the measure.

The association supports alternative gun legislation by Rep. Harley O. Staggers Jr., a West Virginia Democrat, that would have no waiting period but instead would create a system that permitted gun dealers to quickly check the backgrounds of customers.

Opponents of the alternative said it was not technologically feasible and was merely a toothless proposal intended to thwart creation of the waiting period.

The waiting period legislation is known as the Brady bill, after James A. Brady, the former White House press secretary who was nearly killed by a head wound when John W. Hinckley Jr. tried to assassinate President Ronald Reagan.

Backers say the measure would save lives by keeping guns out of the hands of criminals; opponents say it would not stop crime and would be nothing but an inconvenience for law-abiding people who want to own guns.

As the tenth anniversary of the March 30, 1981, shooting nears, Brady and his wife, Sarah, this week made an emotional appearance on Capitol Hill, as did Edward M. Prince, the father of a Yale University student who was killed last month by a thief with a handgun.

Police sweep fraternity row; 11 students arrested

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (NYT) — Almost 50 federal, state and local law officers swept down onto the University of Virginia's fraternity row late Thursday and early Friday, seizing bags of marijuana, hallucinogenic mushrooms and LSD and arresting 11 students on charges of selling drugs.

The raid, in which three fraternity houses and their contents were also seized, shocked and embarrassed the university, which since its founding by Thomas Jefferson, has taken great pride in its considerable national reputation as a place of scholarly excellence and campus civility.

Law-enforcement officials said the raid at Delta Upsilon, Tau Kappa Epsilon and Phi Epsilon Pi fraternities was the first of its kind in the country. They also expressed hope that it would send a message, not just in Charlottesville but elsewhere in Virginia and the nation, that campus drug activity would not be permitted anywhere and that major drug seizures and arrests would not be limited mainly to poor neighborhoods.

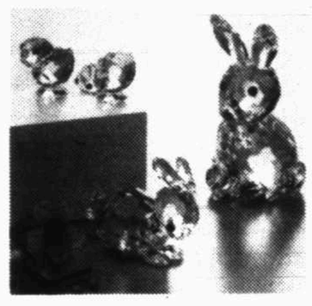

Some civil libertarians have recently complained that enforcement of drug laws is too often aimed at minority and poor people.

"There are no safe havens, no safe places to conduct illegal drug trafficking," E. Montgomery Tucker, the U.S. attorney for the Western district of Virginia, said Friday at a news conference in which details of the raid were released.

The police chief in Charlottesville, John deK. Bowen, said the raid provided proof that his force was not singling out minority residents and people in low-income areas for enforcement of anti-drug laws.

Nor did the raid indicate that drug activity on the campus of the 18,000-student university had suddenly increased, he added.

Officials at the Justice Department in Washington said Friday that the case was the first in memory in which prosecutors are seeking to take over fraternity houses at a college under federal drug laws that allow the seizure of assets involved in drug trafficking.

High-achiever says 'nerd' stereotype doesn't fit

AP Laserphoto

Jared McElhaney, 17, is already a junior at the University of Texas at Arlington. He says being bored in school helped push him to achieve more at an early age but he's definitely not an "egghead."

ARLINGTON (AP) — At 16, Jared McElhaney aced a college physics exam. Now 17 and a junior at the University of Texas at Arlington, he's been offered a full Navy scholarship to become a nuclear engineer.

Nathan Wicker, 17, enrolled at Collin County Community College at age 12. Now a UTA senior, he says that "high school was boring. I just did not fit in there."

Nerds?

Geeks?

No way, these guys say.

McElhaney and Wicker, who attend the University of Texas at Arlington, shun the stereotype found in movies like "Revenge of the Nerds," and television shows such as "Doogie Howser, M.D."

Wicker, who's studying mechanical engineering, said the title character on "Doogie Howser" — a 17-year-old doctor who zipped through medical school, has only one friend and keeps a computer journal — represents pure fantasy.

"That show is not realistic at all," he said. "If any parents want their child to grow up and be Doogie Howser, I feel sorry for them."

Before becoming a legal adult, McElhaney has earned half the credit for his undergraduate degree.

But "I'm not an egghead," he said. "I read a lot, but I don't sit around and study all the time. I go shoot pool, ride my bike or listen to music — stuff like that."

McElhaney, whose family lives in Burleson, said he believes he is just a normal teenager who happens to be pursuing degrees in both physics and mechanical engineering. Anyone, he said, could do it at his age.

Both he and Wicker were educated at home for some of their pre-college years.

McElhaney, who finished nine grades of home school curriculum in seven years, started college at 15.

Wicker got promoted to a private high school at 11, after his parents educated him using old college books and current high school texts. At 12, he enrolled near his home at Collin County Community College.

"I see that potential in other people my age, but they don't have the motivation," he said.

Wicker said that although he looked out of place as an 11-year-old high school student, his boredom with the curriculum wasn't unusual.

"It isn't challenging for most people," he said. "It is paced to go the speed of the slowest student in the class."

UTA, he said, suits him much better.

"Everybody accepts you in college — not in high school," Wicker said. "No one cares how old you are in college."

McElhaney's zest for education also moved him quickly through the grades. After he became bored with third-grade arithmetic at age 7, his parents bought him a more advanced math textbook.

"I was taken out of school back then," McElhaney said. "I finished a fourth-grade math book in two months."

"In a way, I think I lost a little of my childhood," he said. "I'm not like these 5-year-old kids who are forced to do calculus problems, though."

He disputes the idea that home schooling hurt his social growth.

"I'm several people — not that I'm schizoid or anything like that," he said. "I relate to people my age on their level, and then I can shift to another level when I go over to UTA."

Wicker agrees that home education and attending college so early in life expanded his horizons.

McElhaney said he sometimes feels he takes on more than he can handle.

"I've thought about slowing down a little bit, but right now, I've got reasons not to," he said.

The Navy has offered to pay for his last two years of college, then put him to work as a nuclear engineer.

Wicker, on the other hand, has definite plans after graduation.

He will go on a mission for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Cockleburgers sell well in Japan

TOKYO (AP) — The second biggest burger market in the world now has rice burgers, chicken sumiyaki burgers and the ultimate bun stuffer, "chopped burdock root cooked in soy and sesame oil, with bacon and seaweed."

Twenty years and several billion hamburgers after the first McDonald's opened for business, however, industry officials fear Japan may face a burger recession.

But a burdock root burger? "It's very healthy; forces you to chew," said Masayo Muto, spokeswoman for Mos Burgers.

SATURDAY, MARCH 23, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Unspoken emotions between parent and child will surface in June to create a wonderful new understanding. Involvement in a grass roots community project next August could benefit you both financially and psychologically. Practical solutions to long-standing problems will be found in October. A romance could end when the truth comes out in December. Early 1992 will bring a much more rewarding alliance.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: basketball star Moses Malone, singer Chaka Khan, actresses Amanda Plummer and Joan Crawford.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): High hopes could be dashed in a flash today — put your money away. Important phone calls and errands merit top priority early in the day. Touching base with good friends will cheer you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Giving more of your time or money may tax you, yet it is clearly the right thing to do. You have love on your side; allow it a chance to grow unchecked.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You may be about to make a foolish mistake; get some feedback first. Set up meetings, appointments and travel arrangements — everything should click now. A romantic encounter sizzles.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Funds spent on a trip or shopping spree could prove to be a wise investment. Companionship makes everything you do that much better. Go out to lunch or entertain at home tonight.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be open to introductions and interviews. A confidential chat could benefit you. Your hunches are right on target today. Perseverance will help you win a romantic victory. Show your sentimental side.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Turn your attention to financial matters. You have the wisdom to make profitable decisions. Unnecessary struggles are a drain on your energies. Power lies in a quiet, determined detachment.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Ventures you launch or finalize today flourish. A private financial deal could line your pockets. A strong hunch leads to a pot of gold. A romantic relationship requires careful nurturing.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Fulfill your family obligations. Exchanging information with friends or a support group gives you fresh insights. Staying home will not allow you to maximize your potential — get out and about.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You could come across some bargains today, but examine the merchandise carefully before buying. An older person's problems require immediate attention. A romantic relationship progresses nicely.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Domestic life may have its ups and downs today. Getting together with new acquaintances could boost your spirits. A charming member of the opposite sex shows interest in your ideas.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Neglecting your obligations could harm your reputation. Put first things first. It might be best to postpone having house guests. On the bright side, your finances are looking up.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A job assignment could prove more lucrative than you expect. You are poised to make giant financial strides. People with money to invest want to deal with you. Get their offers in writing.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are true creatures of habit who find it easy to get into a rut. Wise parents will expose these youngsters to a variety of interesting places and activities. An early aptitude for writing could lead to a career as a journalist or author. These Aries can be very convincing. Sound nutritional habits are very important for these children as they tend to overeat when under stress. Healthy snacks are essential.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Burt Lancaster is in good spirits and doing well in his recovery nearly four months after a paralyzing stroke, his wife said Friday.

Lancaster

"He's just fine," Susan Scherer Lancaster said.

The 77-year-old film star was visiting a friend in Los Alamitos on Nov. 30 when he was stricken with a stroke. He was briefly left paralyzed on his right side and unable to speak.

Lancaster has been undergoing therapy and doctors are optimistic he would fully recover.

Lancaster has starred in more than 60 motion pictures, including "Elmer Gantry," for which he won an Academy Award for his portrayal of the fiery evangelist.

A circus acrobat-turned-actor, Lancaster has appeared in some of Hollywood's most enduring films, including "Birdman of Alcatraz," "Judgment at Nuremberg," and "From Here to Eternity."

NORTHAMPTON, Mass. (AP) — The movie mavens in Los Angeles and New York were snubbed by the creators of the Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles, who chose this college town for the East Coast premiere of the gang's latest movie.

The turtles' second feature film opened Friday.

"I've been to New York, to L.A., but home here in Northampton is the best because it was in front of 800 friends and family," said Laird.

Laird and Eastman said they've decided to keep their studios in Northampton, and wanted to celebrate their latest movie with local residents.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Ben Nighthorse Campbell found out he's no longer an Olympic athlete. But a would-be robber found out that the former judo champ still isn't a man to mess with.

Campbell, of Colorado, said he was returning to his Capitol Hill apartment from a grocery store Wednesday night when he was approached by a man with his hand in his jacket.

"'Give me your money, I have a .45,'" said the man, according to Campbell.

The assailant, who evidently had been bluffing, hit Campbell in the face.

The congressman, a member of the 1964 U.S. Olympic judo squad, hit back. A brief fight ensued, and ended when the would-be robber ran. Campbell tried to give chase.

"I found out in one fell swoop I wasn't a 28-year-old judo champ anymore," said Campbell, who tore ligaments in his ankle and wound up on crutches. "I found out I'm a 58-year-old, out-of-shape congressman."

ATLANTA (AP) — Former President Carter was awarded the 1991 Physicians for Social Responsibility Award for his "commitment to peace and human dignity."

Carter

In a ceremony Thursday night, Dr. Daniel Young, PSR president, praised Carter's post-presidential agenda.

"Mr. Carter has maintained as a private citizen his original commitment to peace, social justice, nuclear disarmament and to many other important world issues," Young said.

Carter accepted the award on behalf of all the people who work with him at the Carter Center.

Since leaving the White House, Carter has worked through the center to improve Third World health and agriculture and mediate wars in Ethiopia and Sudan. He also has monitored elections in Nicaragua, Panama, Haiti and the Dominican Republic, and privately builds houses for the poor worldwide with Habitat for Humanity.

About 15,000 doctors are members of the organization, whose main goal is to publicize the medical consequences of nuclear war. The group also lobbies to cut defense spending and protect the environment. The group is holding its national convention in Atlanta.

NEW YORK (AP) — The old Metropolitan Opera House is long gone, but three singers who made their debuts there a quarter-century ago are banding together this weekend for a benefit at the Met's current Lincoln Center home.

Soprano Mirella Freni, now 56, will join tenor Alfredo Kraus, 63, and bass Nicolai Ghiaurov, 61, in a Sunday performance of selections from "Madama Butterfly," "Faust" and "Don Carlo" that will benefit the opera's pension fund.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Highway patrol officers pursuing black motorist Rodney King never mentioned he was driving faster than 65 mph in a chase that ended with his beating by club-wielding police, audio tapes released Friday show.

The California Highway Patrol radio conversations cast doubt on initial police reports placing the speed of King's Hyundai in excess of 100 mph.

King, a paroled armed robber who police say was legally drunk at the time of the March 3 attack, was being pursued by CHP officers when city police joined in and finally made the stop.

King, 25, was beaten, kicked and shocked with an electric stun gun in an attack videotaped by a man in a nearby apartment. He suffered injuries ranging from skull fractures to bruised ribs.

The amateur video, shown repeatedly on network television, provoked a national furor and demands for the police chief's resignation. Four officers have been indicted on various assault charges and 21 others remained under investigation Friday.

The 13-page transcript shows the CHP officers communicated in a professional manner, as opposed to the racial slurs and laughter on tapes and computer messages among city police. The highway patrol released the trasncripts at the media's request.

The specific violation that led the CHP officers to begin the chase wasn't clear from the transcript, nor is it possible to determine the duration of the chase. No speeds were mentioned until the car left the freeway and was traveling on surface streets.

The tape recording begins with a CHP officer reporting, "LA50 with a roller," meaning the officers were in pursuit of a moving violator. The operator responds, "9850, go with your roller."

The chase began on the Foothill Freeway in the San Fernando Valley, 15 miles north of downtown Los Angeles, and proceeded on city streets.

"LA60, we're southbound on Paxton (Avenue) about 50 miles an hour. There's ... appears to be three male blacks in the vehicle. It's a white Hyundai, I believe," a CHP officer tells his dispatcher at one point.

Seconds later, the CHP unit reported there was a failure to yield westbound at Paxton. The operator called to see if another unit was nearby.

At 12:54 a.m., the CHP unit radioed: "Code 4, three in custody." Code 4 means no further assistance is needed at the scene.

Moments later, a CHP officer told dispatch, "Just for information ... the party is going to have to be hospitalized ... injuries at the termination of the pursuit."

The audio tapes were released shortly after the four indicted officers won a delay in their case. But Superior Court Judge Gary Klausner said he wants the four to enter pleas next week.

Sgt. Stacey Koon and officers Ted Briseno, Laurence Powell and Timothy Wind stood grim-faced during the brief hearing. Rookie officer Wind appeared particularly distraught, and Koon gave him reassuring pats on the back.

King remained in a hospital Friday with 11 skull fractures, a broken ankle and a variety of other injuries sustained during the beating.

"There's a good possibility that he'll have permanent numbness, permanent paralysis and problems with chewing and opening up his mouth without discomfort," said Dr. Alvin Reiter, a plastic surgeon.

Reiter headed a team of four surgeons who operated on King for five hours on March 14. Releasing new details, Reiter said King sustained a shattered right cheek bone, shattered right eye socket and fractured right sinus bones.

To repair the damage, surgeons inserted wires to help stabilize his broken face bones and placed a plastic film in the eye socket to help the eye move, Reiter said.

King's blood-alcohol level was measured five hours after the beating at 0.79, just under California's limit for drunken driving of 0.80. Police have said that would indicate he was over the limit at the time he was stopped.

Police Chief Daryl F. Gates, 64, has been under intensifying pressure to resign by a diverse group ranging from fellow police chiefs to traditional foes such as the American Civil Liberties Union. But Gates said he plans to stay.

"This is not an issue that will go away immediately," Gates said in a speech Friday. "It has to be dealt with, and I tell you, ladies and gentlemen, I'm going to stay here to deal with it.

"There's been this lynch mob mentality. Let's not indict them until we know all the facts," he said.

Lawyers said at a hearing that the indicted officers could not enter pleas because there had not been enough time to study the grand jury transcript.

The judge said he would postpone the hearing until Tuesday.

Lawmakers propose new limits on use of force

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (NYT) — Responding to the police beating of Rodney Glen King, state lawmakers are proposing new limits on the use of force by arresting officers.

At the same time, legislation to restrict public access to police personnel records and to create new penalties for filing false brutality complaints has been at least temporarily derailed.

Noting that as many as 20 officers stood by while King was beaten after being stopped for speeding in the Los Angeles suburb of Lake View Terrace on March 3, state Sen. Dianne Watson said she will amend an existing bill to require officers to intervene when they witness brutality.

Last year, she said, such a proposal would have been a legislative long shot. But with the King beating being shown on television almost nightly, Watson said, "I think my chances are about 100 percent."

Watson, D-Los Angeles, said that her bill will allow police brutality victims to sue officers who were present but did not intercede.

"We have to hold people accountable whether they are private citizens or they wear a badge and a blue suit," she said.

Senate president pro tem David Roberti, D-Hollywood, is sponsoring legislation that would prohibit police from using more force than is necessary when making an arrest.

An identical bill cleared the Legislature last year but was vetoed by former Gov. George Deukmejian.

Roberti introduced the bill again on March 8 — three days after videotapes of the King beating first were seen on national television — and his spokesman, Bob Forsyth, predicted it will be signed this year "just because of the L.A. incident if nothing else."

Introduced the same day was a measure that would create independent citizen commissions to review complaints against police officers and recommend disciplinary measures to sheriffs and police chiefs, who would retain final authority.

"We need to have the sheriffs and the police accepted by the general society as protectors of property and life," said state Sen. Herschel Rosenthal, D-Los Angeles.

Daily News publisher Robert Maxwell holds up the first edition of the newspaper with his name on the flag. Maxwell is promising readers a paper "as good as it was before, and...it will get better."

Maxwell's first day at Daily News not all that smooth

NEW YORK (AP) — Robert Maxwell's version of the Daily News got off to a rocky start when he pressed a button to start the presses and a huge roll of newsprint tore.

But that was the least of the British press baron's problems Friday as rival New York Newsday hired away gossip columnist Liz Smith.

In addition, too few newspapers were produced to return the News to all the city's newsstands, where the tabloid was unwelcome during the often-violent, five-month strike.

The returning union workers cranked out between 600,000 and 650,000 copies of the paper, substantially less than the 1.09 million papers sold daily before the walkout and the anticipated press run of 1 million.

On Thursday night, with a gaggle of photographers and reporters watching, Maxwell pushed a button to start the presses on the first edition of his newspaper. But the newsprint roll tore, prompting Maxwell to say, "False start."

Hours later, New York Newsday said it had signed Smith, with her first column to appear in the rival tabloid on Sunday. Smith, 68, whose column is distributed nationally, worked through the strike.

Maxwell had said that keeping Smith was among his priorities.

"He evidently didn't really mean it," Smith said. She said she had been working without a contract since February.

The first issue under Maxwell was rife with messages from the flamboyant British publisher who stepped in at the 11th hour to save the 71-year-old paper from extinction. He implored readers to return, and urged advertisers to call him directly about placing ads.

"The Daily News was the greatest paper of the greatest city in the world. I want to put it back up there and then keep it there," Maxwell wrote in a signed Page One editorial.

There was one other change: The price of the paper increased a nickel to 40 cents. The 152-page edition included 88 pages of advertising, including an ad for Sparks Steak House that reprinted a positive review run during the strike.

Other first-day features included a two-page wrap-up of what happened in the comics during the strike; an assortment of celebrity endorsements of the News, ranging from Joan Collins to Ron Darling; and a swipe at the New York Post over a picture of Eric Clapton's son after the child fell to his death.

The News was produced without members of The Newspaper Guild, who will not return to work until next week, and it was distributed without most of the legion of homeless hawkers who peddled the newspaper during the walkout.

Maxwell, whose worldwide operations are headquartered in London, entered the scene after the tabloid's owner, the Chicago-based Tribune Co., could not cut a deal with nine striking unions.

"Let it be the others that die," Maxwell said. "We'll be here."

Federal judge delays accepting Exxon oil-spill plea agreement

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Exxon Corp. and its shipping subsidiary pleaded guilty Friday to misdemeanor violations in the nation's worst oil spill under a plea agreement with the federal government.

U.S. District Judge Russel Holland allowed the pleas but delayed sentencing until he gathers public comment on the plea agreement.

"I will accept a change of plea," he said. "We will not impose any sentence. I will not decide today whether I will or will not accept the plea agreement."

If Holland rejects the agreement, the nation's third largest corporation can withdraw its pleas. If he accepts it, federal felony charges against the oil company will be dropped.

"I intend to solicit information about the impact of the spill from individual victims," the judge said. The court will advertise for comment in newspapers and accept written remarks from the public until April 11.

Holland set sentencing for April 24.

Exxon Chairman Lawrence Rawl entered the company's guilty plea to a misdemeanor violation of the Migratory Bird Treaty Act. Exxon Shipping President Augustus Elmer entered the subsidiary's guilty pleas to three misdemeanor violations of the Migratory Bird Treaty and Refuse and Clean Water acts.

Yeltsin: Referendum flawed, but shows leadership support

By Andrew Katell
Associated Press writer

MOSCOW (AP) — Boris N. Yeltsin said Friday in a triumphant speech to factory workers that last weekend's referendum was a vote of confidence in his Russian leadership even though it "broke all records for ambiguity."

Voters on Sunday overwhelmingly approved Yeltsin's proposal to create a popularly elected presidency in Russia, the largest and most populous of the 15 Soviet republics, as well as Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's commitment to a renewed federation.

While Gorbachev has yet to comment on the results of the referendum, Yeltsin in his first public statements on the vote claimed victory.

"We see the results of the Russian and union referendums as an expression of support for the Supreme Soviet and the leadership of Russia," he told workers at the huge Kirov tractor factory in Leningrad.

Approval of his proposal for an executive presidency in Russia, by 75 percent of the voters, is powerful ammunition for Yeltsin as he heads into a congress of lawmakers from Russia starting Thursday. A group of hard-line Communists plans to propose a motion of no-confidence in Yeltsin, who has been head of the republic since last May.

He is commonly referred to as president now although his formal title is chairman of the Supreme Soviet, the Russian federation's legislature. He was elected chairman by fellow lawmakers, not the public.

Yeltsin told the factory workers he will run for president in a plebiscite whose date has not been set.

While the Communists are trying to dump Yeltsin, he has been leading a campaign to remove Gorbachev, his one-time patron in the Soviet leadership. Yeltsin won a standing ovation at the Kirov plant's auditorium when he repeated his demand for Gorbachev's resignation.

"At the head, unfortunately, of the rightist-conservative wing is the president himself," Yeltsin said.

"What did they start with? A raise of prices. That's their economic program: to begin immediately by putting a maximum load on the people's shoulders."

Yeltsin said he supported the principle behind the referendum on preserving the Soviet Union, even though the question on the ballot "broke all records for ambiguity, its tactless formulation and lack of clarity."

Voters were asked: "Do you consider it necessary to preserve the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics as a renewed federation of equal, sovereign republics in which human rights and freedoms of any nationality (people of all ethnic groups) will be fully guaranteed?"

U.S. diplomat in spat over support of Soviet strikers

MOSCOW (AP) — The usually cautious U.S. ambassador to Moscow has become embroiled in a verbal battle with Kremlin-controlled media over American support for striking Soviet miners.

The debate was reminiscent of the Cold War, when the Soviets often accused the United States of meddling in domestic politics and asked how Washington would like it if the reverse occurred.

The dispute began a week ago, when Dmitri Biryukov, a hard-line commentator on state television's nightly news program "Vremya," suggested that the AFL-CIO was interfering in internal Soviet affairs. He said the American labor organization was offering financial support to miners striking to demand higher wages and President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's resignation.

Biryukov also said that U.S. Embassy officials had attended meetings of the striking workers, and that the embassy helped decide which miners' representatives could visit the United States.

U.S. Ambassador Jack Matlock said he was "startled" by the TV commentary because American unions and miners were merely establishing "natural" contacts with their Soviet counterparts, not interfering.

"Isn't the slogan 'Workers of the World Unite' on Pravda's front page?" Matlock told Soviet reporters on Thursday. "Or does this slogan not imply help? Or perhaps 'Vremya' commentators simply don't read Pravda?"

On Friday, the state-run Tass news agency fired back at Matlock, accusing him of hypocrisy and of overreacting to the "Vremya" commentary.

It was an untypical situation for the low-key Matlock. The ambassador, who has been in Moscow since 1987, has developed a good relationship with the Soviet media. Fluent in Russian, he has appeared in taped reports on "Vremya" and other Soviet TV programs, and holds regular briefings for Soviet journalists.

At one of these briefings, Matlock said the "Vremya" commentary was not the opinion of one journalist but of the state broadcasting monopoly.

State-run television was "trying to distort the natural facts in order to prove something else," Matlock told the Soviet journalists, according to a tape recording of his briefing that was made available to The Associated Press.

"Our embassy and labor unions do not say (Soviet miners) should strike or not," Matlock said.

"There are contacts and of course we are interested in the opinions of miners and others in the country," he said. "That doesn't mean that we try to persuade them to do one thing or another — on the contrary."

He reaffirmed that the United States would like to see Gorbachev's reforms succeed and said blaming foreign countries for Soviet problems hinders their solution.

In Friday's Tass commentary, analysts Albert Balebanov and Sergei Kolesnikov said that "Matlock, nevertheless, dramatized it himself."

The Tass commentators wrote that the U.S. envoy was repeating allegations that some Soviet leaders sought a "return to old thinking and dogmatic rebukes, which Matlock claimed became evident in the Soviet Union from the end of last year."

"Mr. Ambassador is not at all original in his statements," they said. "We have heard this many times from a host of Soviet speakers, who accused the (Soviet) Union leadership of 'shifting to the right,' etc. Does not this create an impression that the ambassador, in fact, sides with these rebukes and thus is in solidarity with the political opposition in the U.S.S.R.?"

The Tass commentary acknowledged that it appreciated the "genuine support of Soviet reforms, including (that) by the United States."

It added: "We agree with Ambassador Matlock that Soviet-American relations are developing in the right direction and that there can be no return to the Cold War."

The Tass commentary appeared after the U.S. Embassy had closed Friday and a spokesman said there would be no comment on it.

U.S. to restore aid to Haitian government

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — The U.S. government will provide direct aid to Haiti's government for the first time since the November 1987 presidential elections were shattered by violence, Ambassador Alvin Adams said Friday.

Haitians in December overwhelmingly elected the Rev. Jean-Bertrand Aristide, a leftist Roman Catholic priest, in the nation's first democratic elections since independence from France in 1804.

Adams said on independent Radio Inter that U.S. willingness to help Haiti was due to the "free, honest, and credible elections and the legitimate mandate" of the new government of President Aristide.

This poor Caribbean island country of about 5.5 million people has been ruled by despots throughout most of its history.

Adams said U.S. aid to Haiti will be around $84 million this year, $30 million more than last year.

Washington suspended government-to-government aid after thugs with the help of the military killed 34 voters at the polls during Nov. 29, 1987 elections. Since then, the United States has channeled its exclusively humanitarian assistance through private non-voluntary organizations.

Adams said part of the 1991 aid package now would be government-to-government. He did not specify the amount.

Aristide has long been a critic of U.S. foreign policy, saying it propped up dictators in Haiti and throughout Latin America. But Adams said, "I don't think Aristide is anti-American."

Drought forces California toward desalination plants

By Kim Cobb
Hearst News Service

California's fifth year of drought is only now pushing the state's water agencies to build desalination plants — technology that has existed for years, but at a prohibitively high price.

"It becomes cost effective when you have nothing else," said Gary Snyder, Chief Engineer for the Metropolitan Water District of Southern California. The district is a whole sale water supplier to 15 million people, including a large chunk of greater Los Angeles.

Southern Californians served by the district are facing short showers, dead lawns and real changes in lifestyle as a result of the drought. The water district voted recently to cut back water delivered to its subscriber agencies by 50 percent, and Los Angeles homeowners have been ordered to cut water use by at least 10 percent or face fines.

But the drought is not restricted to southern California. Residents of Marin County north of San Francisco are limited to a scant 50 gallons of water a day, an amount of water equivalent to two five-minute showers.

While the water that comes from a desalination plant is five to 10 times more expensive than the water Californians traditionally have drawn from runoff pumped from the High Sierras, the cheap water is running out as the state's reservoir levels continue to drop.

"Over the past three years now as our other supplies are running out, we've been looking more intently at it," Snyder said of the desalting process.

"It's not Buck Rogers. It's a simple process," Snyder said. "They use desalination on ships, and it's been used for many years."

The war in the Persian Gulf has educated Americans to the wide spread use of desalination plants in Saudi Arabia. The technology has long made sense for the Saudis because their oil-based economies have provided unlimited funds to build the plants and unlimited energy to run them in a desert country with few water options.

The Saudis use a system which works in much the same fashion as a corn liquor "still," heating seawater until it becomes steam, leaving the salt behind. The steam condenses as it cools and is captured as de-salted water.

"Reverse osmosis" is another method used for desalination and is little more complicated than passing seawater or brackish water through a series of filters.

"There hasn't been much technological improvement in the last 10 years, worldwide," said Jack Jorgensen, executive director of the National Water Supply Improvement Association. His association is working with Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., to restart research and development on desalination, keying on the interest drummed up by recent publicity about the Saudi plants.

"I believe there will be strong public support for this," said Simon at the time of the filing. "Desalination and water shortages have begun to attract more attention. Soon, the people of Illinois and other states will be paying more for groceries because of California's drought."

The early Saudi plants were built by U.S. companies, Jorgensen said. But the later plants have been built by the Japanese, Koreans and Germans.

Jorgensen said a very small amount of drinking water is currently produced in the United States by desalination plants. But in California, one small plant is online on Catalina Island and the city of Santa Barbara is preparing to build a plant to meet its emergency water needs.

Fitzwater: America's not feeling war guilt

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush's spokesman on Friday laid responsibility for Iraqi destruction fully on Saddam Hussein and said, "You will not find America feeling guilty."

Asked about a U.N. report that allied bombing had left Iraq in "a pre-industrial age," spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the United States doesn't know how much damage was done.

In any case, he said, "I just simply reject the argument that somehow there is a guilt associated with the destruction of a war caused by Saddam Hussein."

The U.N. report, by Undersecretary-General Martti Ahtisaari, said that the rain of bombs had been "nearly apocalyptic."

The report recommended the immediate lifting of U.N. sanctions on shipments of food, agricultural equipment and other supplies to Iraq. Otherwise, it said, that nation could soon face "imminent catastrophe, which could include epidemic and famine."

Fitzwater said U.S. officials "have no way of knowing" if the bombing damage was that severe, but "that certainly was not our intent."

At the Pentagon, spokesman Pete Williams said, "The idea that we bombed Baghdad back to the Stone Age is clearly not true."

He said reporters in Baghdad had accurately stated that air attacks were limited to military facilities, with "very little collateral damage."

Williams said there was "no doubt about it that there was lots of destruction and death, aimed at the Iraqi military. ... There were lots of people killed and lots of vehicles destroyed — that's there for the world to see."

But he added that the damage was limited to facilities that supported the Iraqi war effort.

Indeed, Fitzwater said some critics were maintaining "that we ended it too soon, (that) we should have killed more of those tanks and trucks and cars in order to have limited their potential."

Rather, the spokesman said:

"We fought the war decisively; we fought it well, and we fought it as discriminatingly as we could. Were there thousands of Iraqis killed? Yes. Do we know how many? No."

But he said, "The fact is that the Iraqi deaths are attributable to the invasion of Saddam Hussein" into Kuwait on Aug. 2.

As for the future of the U.N. sanctions, the presidential spokesman said that was a matter for the United Nations and that the United States has no objections to humanitarian aid for Iraq.

On other matters related to Iraq:

—Bush proclaimed April 5 to April 7 as National Days of Thanksgiving marking the end of the war.

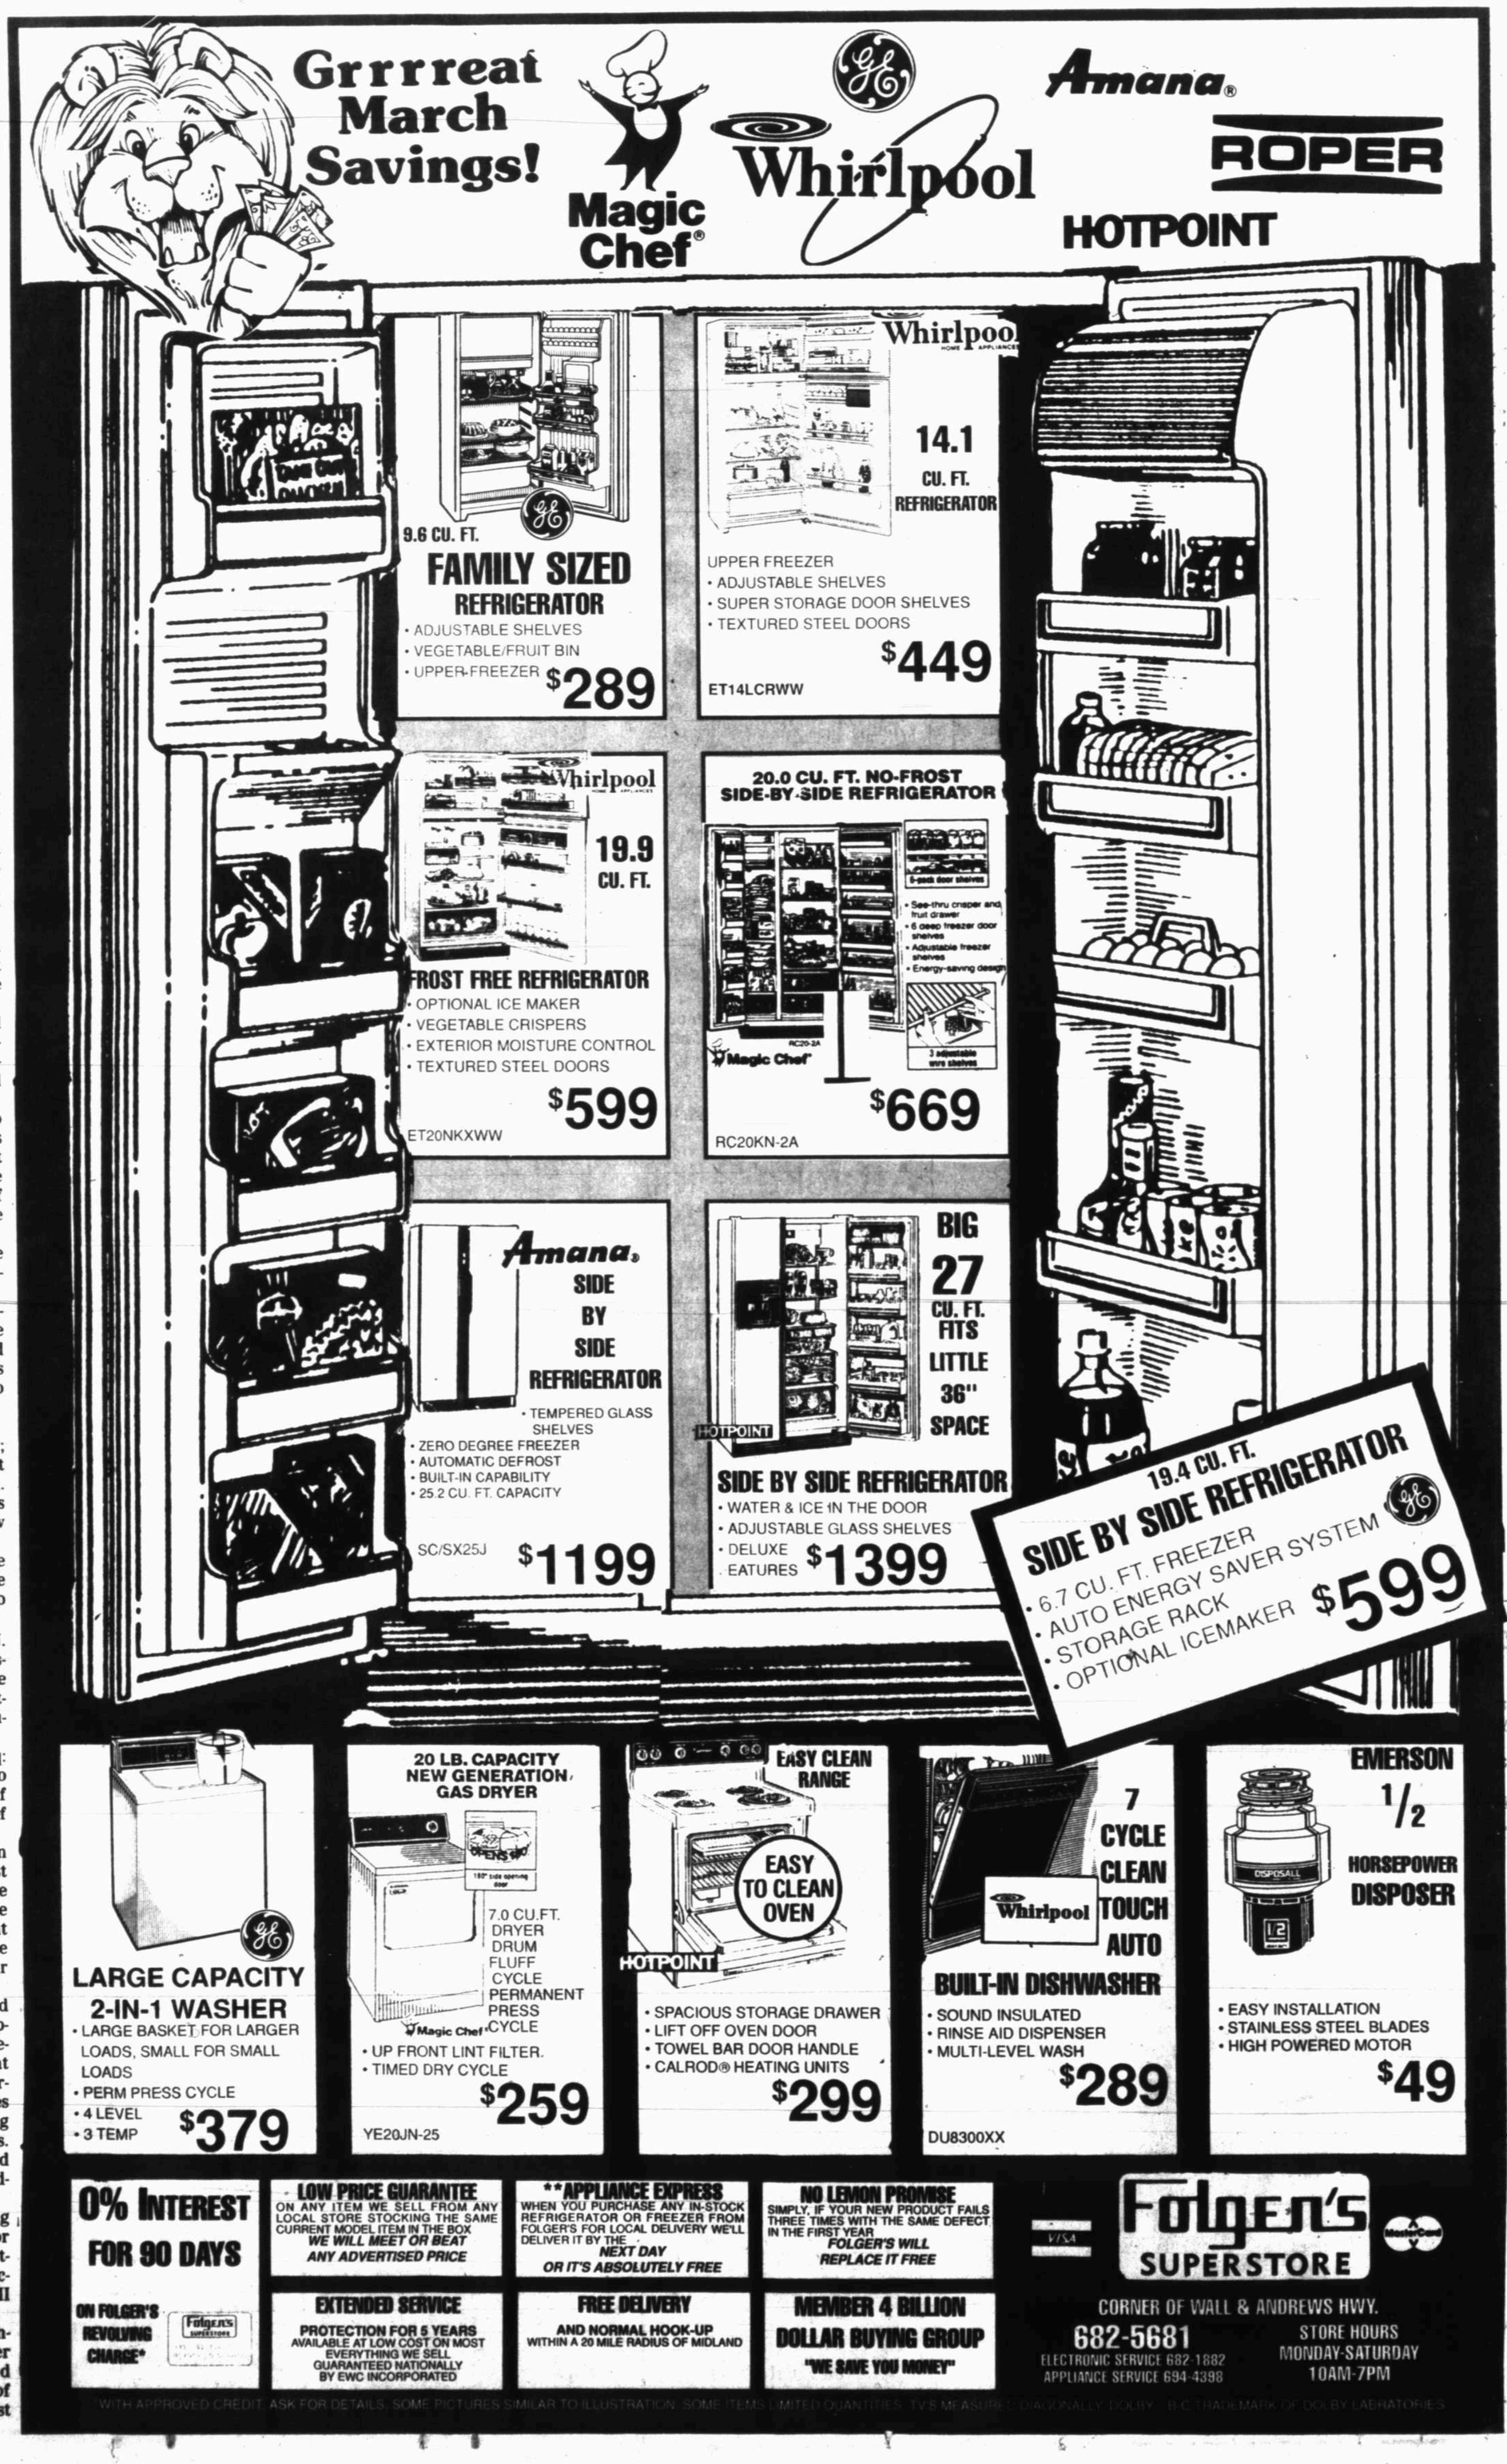

"I urge Americans to unite in prayer and turn to our greatest power," the president said. "We give thanks for the remarkable unity of our people throughout the conflict and especially for the strong support shown for our troops in the field."

—Fitzwater said the United States wants to "keep all our options open on how we might respond" to continued Iraqi combat helicopter flights to quash internal rebellion. The United States has shot down two fixed-wing Iraqi planes in the last two days.

—Bush this weekend will hold talks on postwar plans for the Middle East.

Friday night, he was having Turkish President Turgut Ozal for dinner at Camp David, then meeting there Saturday with Ozal, Secretary of State James A. Baker III and other aides.

Sunday, Bush will meet in Washington with Italian Prime Minister Giulio Andreotti. Both Italy and Turkey were strong supporters of the U.S.-led military effort against Iraq.

Iraqis to Americans: 'The war is over, friends'

By George Esper
AP Special Correspondent

UM QASR, Iraq — Iraqi and American troops eyeball each other across the cease-fire demarcation line but the only shooting is between the government forces of Saddam Hussein and resistance fighters.

"The war is over now and we are friends," said a grim-looking Iraqi officer at a military checkpoint in Um Qasr, a town of about 6,000 residents held by Saddam's government but surrounded by U.S. forces.

"They say hello and we say hello. No problem," the officer said.

"No, no," he said when asked if he was angry at the Americans. A cluster of officers around him smiled. All were sharply dressed in uniforms. Except for one, they were unarmed.

The Iraqis refused Friday to allow this reporter and AP photographer Tannen Maury past the checkpoint, which is the gateway to a major naval base and center of a town where rebel opposition has been reported.

The naval base included docks, loading cranes, warehouses, railroad facilities and military barracks. A ship was docked there.

"We have orders not to say anything," the officer said. "This is Iraqi territory."

"That is the American side," he said, looking down the road less than a mile at the checkpoint guarded by troops of the U.S. 3rd Armored Division. Three Bradley Fighting Vehicles, their guns pointed at Um Qasr, were at the checkpoint.

U.S. forces are occupying about 15 percent of Iraq's territory until a permanent cease-fire is signed. The rebellion in Iraq has complicated its completion.

U.S. troops allowed three Iraqi soldiers to pass through the barbed wire roadblock in a water truck after searching them. The Iraqis' only source of fresh water is on the U.S. side of the demarcation line. The truck goes back and forth at set times, escorted by U.S. military police.

"They're a little intimidated by us," said 1st Lt. Don Murray, 30, of Tampa, Fla., a platoon leader.

Iraqi civilians are allowed passage either way but they and their vehicles are searched for arms and ammunition.

Murray said 50 to 60 cars pass through the American checkpoint daily.

"I don't think a lot are fleeing," Murray said. "The majority of them work the fields. They cross to do their work and come back home. They come back a lot of times with tomatoes. There's a lot of two-way traffic."

Murray said the Americans keep tabs on the officers at the Iraqi checkpoint through night sights and high-powered scopes.

Another U.S. officer, who spoke on the condition of anonymity, said there had been no exchanges of fire but that he saw tracers over Um Qasr during the night. "The next morning," he said, "we saw three bodies sort of hung over a wall on the edge of town."

The officer said in the past 48 hours more than 100 Iraqis had come over to the U.S. side, identifying themselves as government troops.

But Lt. John Bartlett, 33, an interpreter from Pocatello, Idaho, said most of them are resistance fighters and others who want out of Iraq.

The U.S. earlier had been turning back Iraqis who wanted to surrender but began accepting them again Thursday.

"I suspect it's for humanitarian reasons," Murray said. "These guys would be killed if they stayed on their side of the fence. A lot of these guys have done things over there that would cause them to be killed by the government. They're coming out of the woodwork."

The U.S. officer who spoke on condition of anonymity said: "There's a thug running the place," referring to the Iraqi naval commodore at Um Qasr.

United Nations lifts ban on food to Iraq

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — U.N. officials, declaring that war damage threatens Iraq with widespread disease and hunger, agreed Friday to allow food shipments and to ease restrictions on fuel, spare parts and other essential materials.

The emergency measures were was approved Friday by the U.N. sanctions committee, made up of representatives of the 15 nations that have seats on the U.N. Security Council.

It was later accepted by a full session of the Security Council after the council heard a U.N. report stating that the allied bombing of Iraq had caused "near apocalyptic" damage.

In its decision, the sanctions committee agreed to ease — but not remove entirely — restrictions on fuel, generators, spare parts and other essentials to repair water purification systems, power trucks and make humanitarian aid effective.

The embargo imposed on Iraq four days after the Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait covers all trade except in medical supplies. Technically, only the Security Council can lift embargo restrictions.

However, the sanctions committee had the power to effectively remove the embargo on food by declaring a humanitarian emergency. On Friday, the committee decided that a state of emergency exists in Iraq, thereby justifying all food shipments.

"This means it should be perfectly straightforward for any organization that wishes to help the people of Iraq to send in foodstuffs and material relating to food, public health and medicine," said British Ambassador David Hannay.

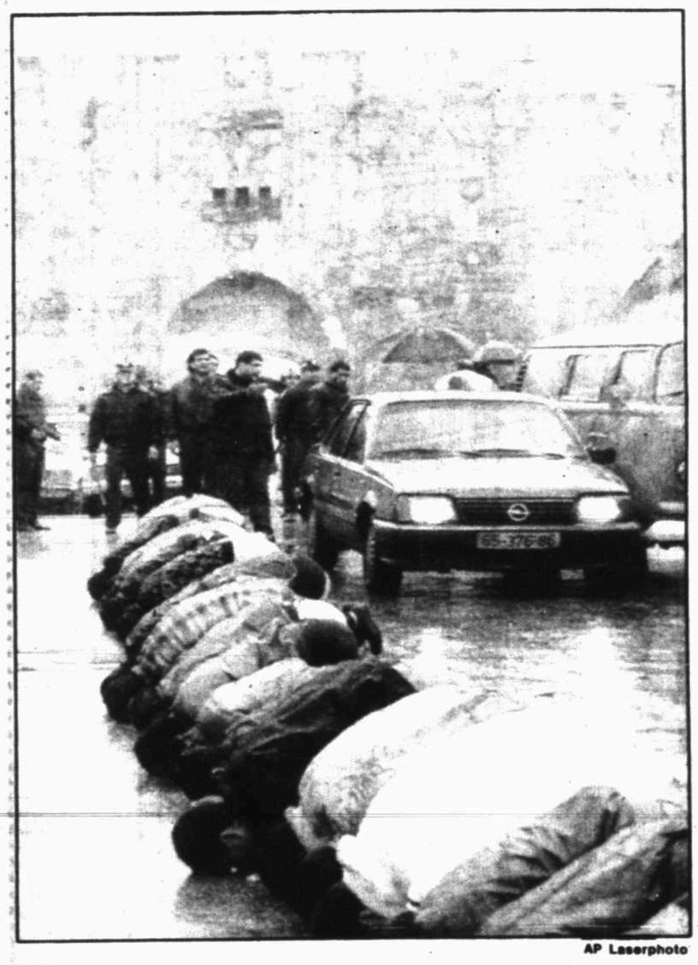

A senior Iraq diplomat, speaking on condition of anonymity, said his government was dissatisfied that the sanctions were not lifted completely. Western diplomats said they hoped the decision would forestall resolutions pushed by Cuba, India and Yemen to lift the embargo.

The U.S. government has said it wanted to retain the embargo to keep pressure on Baghdad while the allies seek other goals, including a partial disarming of Iraq. The White House said Friday that Saddam Hussein was to blame for any Iraqi suffering, and President Bush declared, "You will not find America feeling guilty."

Iraq has agreed to allow food distribution by U.N. officials, diplomats said, even though supplies would be sent to all areas of the country, including the Kurdish-controlled north and southern areas where Shiite Muslims are in revolt.

The United States has proposed a resolution that Iraq destroy all its nuclear weapons-grade materials and ballistic missiles, as well as chemical and biological weapons.

The measures are part of a proposed Security Council resolution on steps Iraq must take before the allied military coalition agrees to lift the embargo and formally end the war.

Attackers kill 30 workers

AMRITSAR, India (AP) — Sikh militants Friday shot and killed 30 factory workers riding home on a bus during a wave of separatist violence in Punjab province that also left 17 others dead, police and news reports said.

In one of the other attacks, Sikh gunmen crept into a small village, rounded up the families of Sikh policemen, and opened fire, police said. Nine people were reported killed.

The attack on the bus occurred near Ropar, near the provincial capital of Chandigarh, as employees of Punjab Tractors Ltd. were riding home for the night, said Dalbir Singh Mangat, the deputy general of police for the province.

Afterwards, the bus was set afire, he said.

The policeman said all the passengers were men, and most of the dead were Hindus. The company is owned by the Punjab government.

In addition to the 30 dead, 10 people were reported injured.

Angry Polish farmers block roads

STOJADLA, Poland (AP) — Angry farmers blocked roads around the nation Friday to protest the government's free market agriculture policy, halting highway traffic for three hours.

Farmers put up roadblocks in 16 provinces, according to Rural Solidarity, the 423,000-farmer trade union which organized the protest.

Youth knocks off nose of Stalin bust

MOSCOW (AP) — A teen-ager attacked the bust of Josef Stalin that marks his grave on Red Square, knocking off its nose to show his hatred of the dictator, a newspaper reported Friday.

The 17-year-old vocational school student, who was not identified, has been charged with desecrating a grave, which is punishable by up to three years in prison, according to Komsomolskaya Pravda.

The nose, which was not needed for the investigation, reportedly was handed over immediately to the Kremlin Commandant's Office, presumably so the bust could be repaired.

Acts of protest at Lenin's Mausoleum, the holiest of Soviet shrines, are rare but not unheard-of. There have been instances of protesters trying to immolate themselves on Red Square or throwing firebombs at the marble structure where the corpse of Soviet founder Vladimir Lenin is displayed under glass. The newspaper reported a second recent act of defiance, saying someone threw a Pepsi bottle at the mausoleum last week.

Because of the 24-hour honor guard and other unseen security officers, however, such demonstrations bring rapid arrest.

The defacing of the bust occurred Sunday when the student vaulted a short, decorative railing in front of the Lenin Mausoleum, and ran behind the marble structure to where Stalin and other Soviet leaders are buried, the newspaper said.

He chose the moment at the top of the hour when the changing of the honor guard occurred so they had no time to stop him, the newspaper said.

Using an unspecified heavy metal object, the youth struck the bust with a couple of heavy blows, then dropped the tool and surrendered peacefully to the guards who rushed up to detain him, Komsomolskaya Pravda said.

The youth told investigators that he wanted to display his hatred of Stalin "and draw public attention to the fact that the butcher's ashes continue to lie at the Kremlin wall," the newspaper said.

After Stalin died in 1953, his body was displayed alongside Lenin's inside the mausoleum, but it was removed in 1956 after Nikita S. Khrushchev denounced him as a tyrant. It was buried between the mausoleum and the Kremlin wall, as are the remains of former leaders Leonid Brezhnev, Yuri Andropov and Konstantin Chernenko, and other prominent figures. Busts mark the graves.

Alexei Chepurin, who is heading the investigation into the vandalism, told the newspaper that although he personally has no fondness for Stalin, that's no reason to deface the bust.

Mali soldiers fire on protesters, killing 22

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast (AP) — Soldiers fired on anti-government protesters in the Mali capital of Bamako on Friday, killing at least 22 people, witnesses and doctors said. The slayings set off widespread rioting.

"Everyone has taken to the streets. It's anarchy out there," said a witness in Bamako reached by telephone from Abidjan.

Witnesses said students with firebombs set government buildings ablaze and looted and burned gas stations, shops and cars belonging to senior officials of President Gen. Moussa Traore's ruling party.

Students demanding the resignation of the education minister were joined by tens of thousands of people shouting for multiparty democracy and an end to Traore's rule, said Demba Diallo, president of the Malian Human Rights Organization.

Traore announced a state of emergency and imposed a 9 p.m.-to-5 a.m. curfew in the main towns of Mali, a West African nation of 8 million people. Violent demonstrations on a smaller scale were reported outside the capital.

The president said in a radio broadcast, "The current situation demands that security be stepped up. ... No grievances ... can justify the violence we are witnessing."

He expressed "total readiness" to discuss protesters' grievances, and said his party would consider demands for a multiparty system within days. Critics demand an open conference and inclusion of pro-democracy leaders.

The general seized power in the former French colony in a 1968 coup, then installed himself as president of a one-party state in 1979. His Democratic Union of the Malian People is the sole legal party.

The Association of African Jurists condemned Friday's "bloody repression" in a statement from Dakar, Senegal. It urged authorities "to put an end to the cycle of violence."

Diallo said Friday's protest was peaceful until soldiers attacked with submachine guns.

"They used their arms of war before they fired the tear gas. It is horrible. They (authorities) have gone mad," he said.

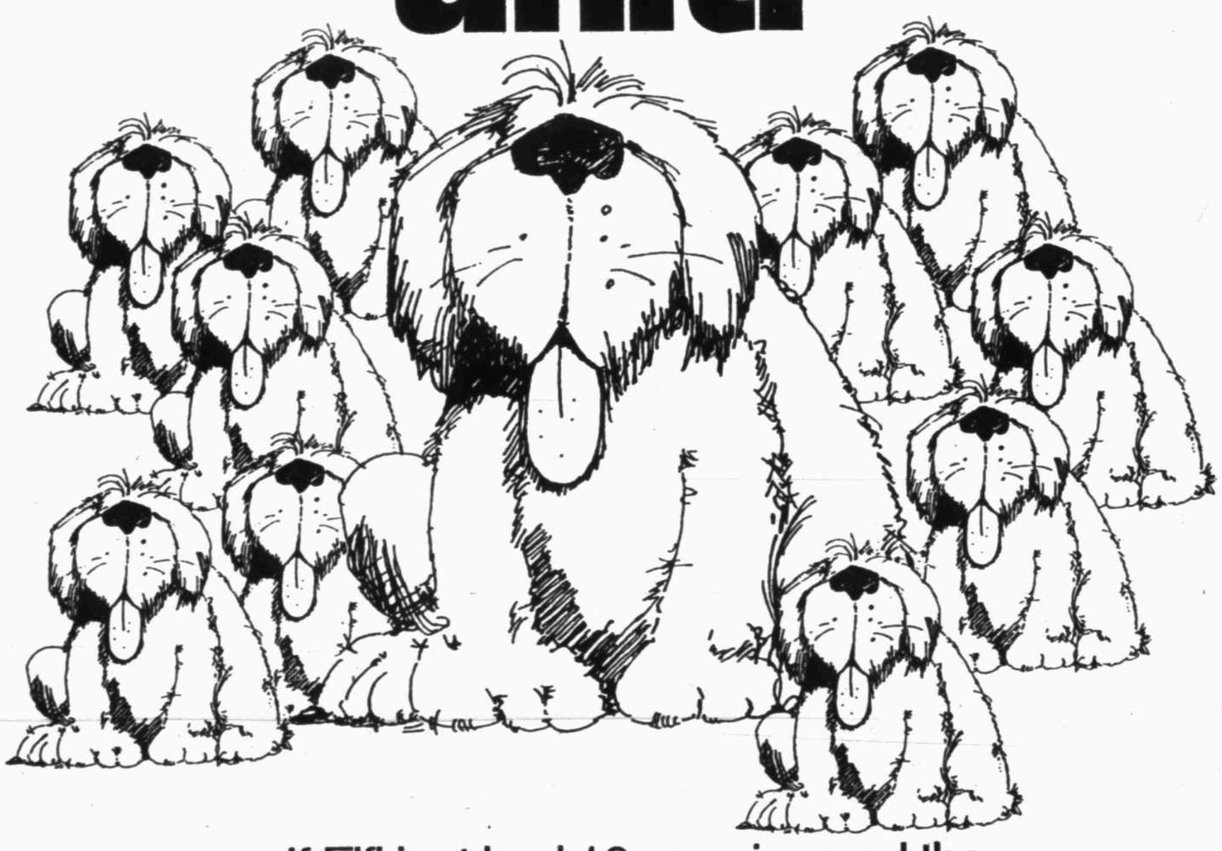

Armored cars and cannons were deployed, witnesses said. By afternoon, streets were deserted except for soldiers, the odd shoe abandoned by a fleeing demonstrator and smoldering tires. Later, traffic slowly returned to streets littered with stones and glass.

A doctor at Gabriel Traore Hospital said the city's two hospitals reported 22 deaths and 249 people suffering from bullet wounds.

The Belgian branch of Medecins Sans Frontieres, or Doctors Without Borders, announced it was flying a medical team to Bamako on Saturday. Diallo said the Red Cross in Geneva also was sending supplies.

The wave of strikes and riots for democracy that have swept Africa for more than a year hit Mali in January.

PVC LAWN SWING

Why not build a lawn swing from strong, weatherproof PVC pipe? Measuring 4½' x 6' at the base and 6' high, the swing seats 2 people comfortably. The removable canopy can be made from weather-resistant plastic-coated nylon. The only tools you will need are a fine-toothed saw and drill. The plan includes step-by-step pictures, detailed instructions, a complete materials list and cutting schedule, plus an exploded drawing.

PART-TIME INCOME AVAILABLE

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has distributorships which need to be filled with dependable individuals.

OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current distributor force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a distributor, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

Depending on the size of the distributorship, from $300 to $700 monthly! Some motor routes make even more!

How long does it take?

The actually delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the route(s). Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many distributor's choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday and Sunday.

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, distributors do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
