Woman killed at church

Midland minister finds secretary stabbed

■ Secretary of The Living Way Church died after being stabbed in the neck and face.

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff Writer

A church secretary died after sustaining multiple stab wounds — many to the neck and face — when an unknown assailant attacked her while she was working in the business office at The Living Way Church.

Brenda Branch, 28, was discovered by the Rev. James E. Whitaker, pastor of the church at 419 Alta St., at 11:12 a.m. Wednesday.

Earlier, Whitaker had been working with Mrs. Branch in the church office, but left at 10 a.m. to run some errands. When he returned just over an hour later, he found the bloody scene in a back-room storage area.

Mrs. Branch was pronounced dead by Justice of the Peace Keith Jobe at 11:50 a.m., shortly after Midland police were called to the scene, officials said.

"Nothing is sacred," said 21-year-old Cindy Rodriguez, a neighborhood resident. "To enter a church and do something as brutal as that is hard to believe."

Ms. Rodriguez walked by the church and observed the obviously shaken Whitaker apparently moments after he discovered the body.

"I was walking to work when I heard, and then saw this man, the reverend, crying in front of the church. I didn't know what to think, but then the police came to where I work and told me. I was horrified," she said.

Ms. Rodriguez said she regularly encountered Mrs. Branch as they both walked to work. Mrs. Branch lived at 414 Alta St., directly across the street from the church.

BGCT's Maples wants to put aside squabbles

WACO (AP) — The new president-elect of the Baptist General Convention of Texas says it's time to put aside intra-denomination squabbles and get on with God's work.

The Rev. James "Dick" Maples, pastor of First Baptist Church in Bryan, said he hopes to be a reconciling force.

"Now I want us to put the controversy behind us and go on to accomplish our mission as Texas Baptists," Maples said Tuesday.

Controversy came to a head earlier this week when convention delegates voted in favor of limiting the convention's control over Baylor University's governing board.

The vote of 5,745 to 3,992 exemplified the perpetual struggle between moderates and fundamentalists within the denomination. The outcome was a decisive blow the

Senate votes to require cuts in credit card interest rates

■ Legislation would cap rates at 14 percent.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate voted Wednesday to require dramatic cuts in credit card interest rates, acting one day after President Bush called for a voluntary rollback as a means of stimulating the economy.

The measure, approved 74-19, was attached to legislation replenishing the nearly insolvent Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. and permitting banks to expand freely across state lines for the first time in 60 years.

A final vote on the overall bill was not expected before Friday.

The credit card amendment, sponsored by Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., would cap interest at 4 percentage points over the floating rate charged by the IRS on late taxes, which changes quarterly.

Until Dec. 31, that rate is 10 percent. That would make the credit card cap 14 percent currently — well under the nearly 19 percent industry average.

"Banks are making windfall profits from high interest rates they are charging consumers on credit cards, while their own borrowing costs have dropped to the lowest levels in memory," D'Amato said.

"This is absolutely unconscionable that they be allowed to do this to the American people. . . . The free market is not working," he said.

Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, however, argued that the government should not cap credit card rates any more than it should cap prices in retail stores. He said capping rates could dry up credit for many people.

"It is incredibly politically popular, but the consumer will pay in some other way," Garn said. "To use this meat cleaver is bad public policy."

At a fund-raising luncheon in New York on Tuesday, Bush said, "I would frankly like to see the credit card rates down. I believe that would stimulate the consumer and get confidence moving again."

Garn said the president was using his office to jawbone

Congress, Bush agree on jobless bill

■ Some unemployed Americans may get extended benefits by Thanksgiving under legislation Bush is expected to sign.

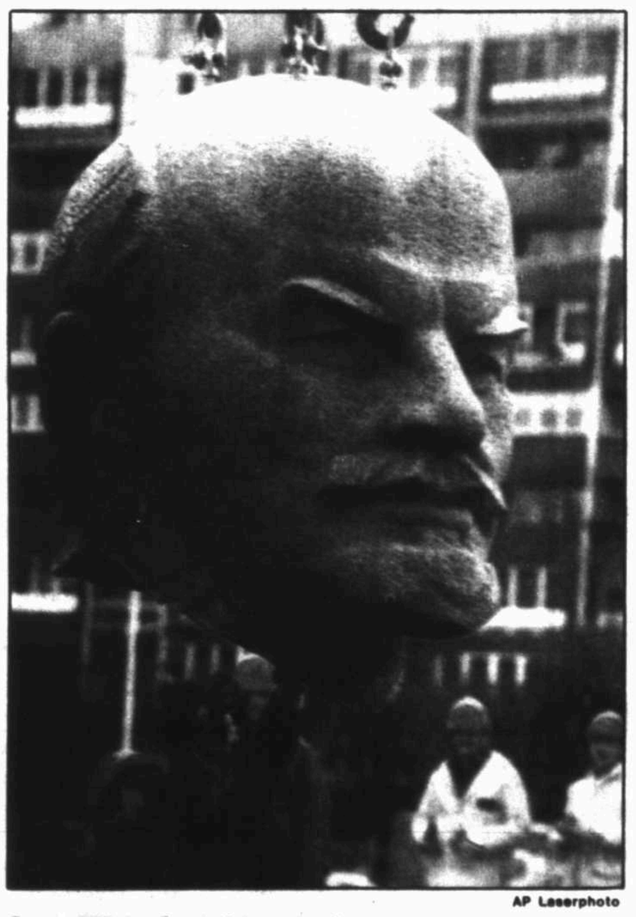

By Richard L. Berke
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Congressional leaders and White House officials reached agreement Wednesday night on a $5.2 billion bill to extend unemployment benefits, with some recipients expected to get their checks by Thanksgiving.

After another day of intense negotiations, the House Ways and Means Committee approved the measure on Wednesday night 29 to 7, with only Republicans voting against, and lawmakers said they hoped the full House and Senate would approve the legislation and send it to a supportive President Bush today.

The bill would extend six, 13 or 20 weeks of additional unemployment benefits, depending on unemployment rates in individual states, for about three million Americans who have exhausted the standard 26 weeks of payments. It would be paid for largely by increasing estimated tax payments by some high-

Study finds women's educations don't pay

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women with four years of college earn roughly the same salary as men with only a high-school diploma, according to government statistics released Wednesday. At every education level, women make less money than men with the same amount of schooling.

An Associated Press analysis of Census Bureau numbers also found that the pay gap between fulltime working men and women grows wider as they get older.

A college-educated woman between ages 18-24 earns an average of 92 cents for every dollar earned by a man of the same age and education. Her earnings drop steadily and by the time she is between ages 55 and 64, the average female

Catholic bishops vote to retain 'holy days'

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Roman Catholic bishops Wednesday rejected proposals to drop four of the church's six holy days of obligation in an emotional debate over the role of the church in the modern world.

A majority of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops voted to move Ascension Thursday to a Sunday and eliminate the holy day honoring Mary on Jan. 1, but fell short of the two-thirds approval needed for the changes.

Backers of the plan to reduce the number of holy days failed to gain even a majority to drop All Saints Day on Nov. 1 or the solemnity of the Assumption on Aug. 15 despite arguing that nearly 14 million regular churchgoers already disregard the requirement that they attend Mass on holy days.

"People are not taking the obligation seriously," said Bishop Michael Kenny of Juneau, Alaska.

But other bishops, including a bloc of the nation's most

Comic canceled

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Two newspapers canceled "Doonesbury" because of the comic strip's series recounting allegations that Vice President Dan Quayle used drugs, its distributor said Wednesday. At least 23 newspapers have pulled "Doonesbury" installments dealing with drug allegations against Quayle, said Lee Salem, editorial director of Kansas City-based Universal Press Syndicate. The Rolla (Mo.) Daily News and The Greeley (Colo.) Tribune have canceled "Doonesbury," and the Record Searchlight in Redding, Calif., said it plans to drop the strip, Salem said. In the past, controversial "Doonesbury" strips have prompted one or two newspapers to cancel, Salem said. The latest series suggests a cover-up involving a Drug Enforcement Administration investigation of Quayle. Quayle has accused "Doonesbury" creator Garry Trudeau of conducting a personal vendetta against him.

JOBLESS: Bush to sign unemployment benefits bill income taxpayers.

Lawmakers said they viewed the variable benefit program as the most even handed way to dole out additional benefits. They said it was fair for workers in states with lower jobless rates to get a shorter extension of benefits because they would likely have less difficulty finding employment.

The plan is projected to run a $895 million deficit in its first year, fiscal 1992, but would run modest surpluses in the remaining four years, with a total surplus of $241 million.

On a speaker phone from Kansas City, Bush called Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas, the Republican leader, and several other Senate Republicans, to praise them for the bill.

"I feel that the deal which you've been able to hammer out is a good one," Bush said. "And I think it's something I know I can enthusiastically support."

Dole told the president that the legislation "meets the criteria that you set out — that you pay for it."

Bush had twice vetoed earlier versions of the bill, asserting first that the recession had ended and then that the bill would add too much to the federal debt. But on Wednesday night, facing pressure from lawmakers in his party to show concern for the jobless, Bush described the measure as essential to benefit those who have been hit hard by the economy.

"We can help people that are really hurting," the president said, "and do it without burdening every other taxpayer by busting this budget agreement."

Rep. Thomas J. Downey, D-N.Y., who championed the measure in the House, criticized the administration for not taking the leadership.

"I am pleased that the president and the Republicans in Congress have finally recognized the need to do something to ease the suffering of jobless Americans," he said. "For months, the Congress has attempted to do something to help the unemployed who are the innocent victims of a recession that is deeper and longer than expected."

Taking issue with such attacks on Republicans, Dole said the agreement would "take heat off the Democrats who are going to pay for something for a change."

By late Tuesday, officials from the Bush administration and Congress declared that they were on the brink of an agreement. But the pact came only at the end of a day of negotiations on Capitol Hill between top Labor and Treasury Department officials and lawmakers in both parties.

Rep. Robert H. Michel of Illinois, the House Republican leader, said a major hurdle was whether to intensify collections of student loans to pay for the measure. Without citing him by name, Michel said that Rep. William D. Ford, D-Mich., who is chairman of the Education and Labor Committee, resisted that provision. But he relented, Michel said, after Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., who is chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, and "the speaker leaned on him."

Assuming the bill is signed by the president this week, Michel said there were "good prospects" that recipients would start receiving their chekcs by Thanksgiving.

While part of the financing — $2.6 billion — would be through speeding income tax collections from wealthy taxpayers with rising incomes who estimate their taxes quarterly, the bill calls for other tax changes.

In one provision, tax refunds would be withheld from people who are delinquent on government loans. The legislation would also retain a 0.2 percent payroll tax paid by employers on the first $7,000 paid annually to each employee.

The high-income taxpayers would be forced to pay higher income taxes only if their adjusted gross income grew by more than $40,000 oyer the prior year, and if the taxpayer had an adjusted gross income over $75,000 in the current year.

People whose incomes were subject to witholding and do not now make estimated quarterly tax installments would not have to suddenly pay new estimated taxes.

Sen. George J. Mitchell of Maine, the Democratic leader, had pressed for giving Bush three alternatives to break the impasse.

But on Wednesday, he indicated that he would go along with the compromise. "I'm encouraged by the apparent breakthrough in providing unemployment insurance benefits to the millions of Americans who need them," he said hours before the agreement was reached.

Woman calls in AIDS threat

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A woman has warned that she will spread the AIDS virus on the campus of Sam Houston State University, a student official says.

Student Government Association president Andy Osborne said he received the threat in three anonymous telephone calls Tuesday morning.

"I kept saying, 'What am I supposed to do about this?' " said Osborne, who had heard of a similar threat in Dallas that turned out to be a hoax.

He was taking the woman seriously, though.

"She was not unsure," he said. "She was very straightforward."

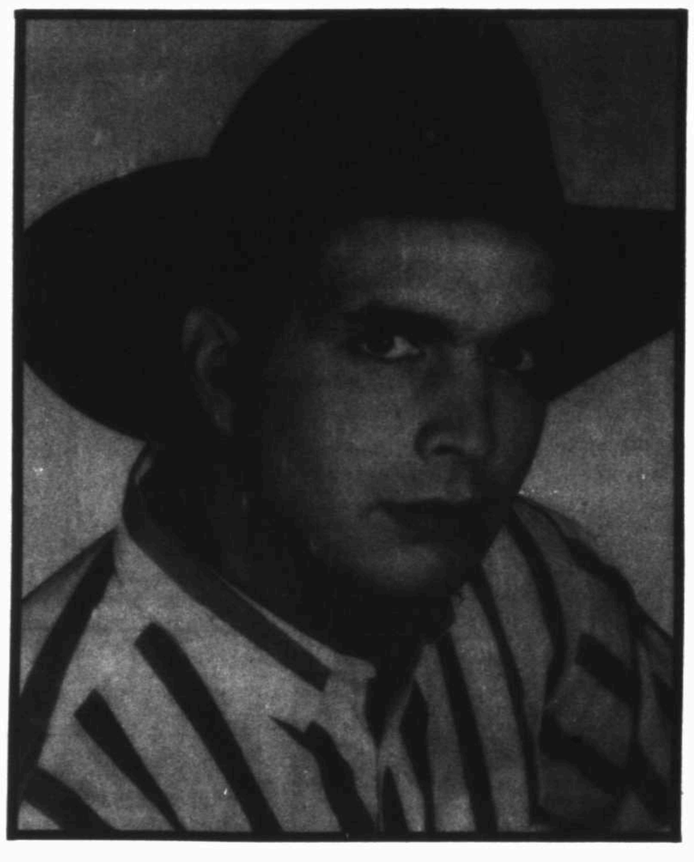

The Student Government Association votes Tuesday on a proposal to install condom vending machines in campus residence halls, Osborne said. He did not know if the calls were related to the vote.

CATHOLIC: Bishops reject plan to drop four of six 'holy days' prominent prelates, argued that reducing the number of holy days would be surrendering to an increasingly secular American lifestyle.

"We need to retain these few signs of Catholic identity," said Archbishop Anthony J. Bevilacqua of Philadelphia.

On the third day of their four-day fall meeting, the bishops also rejected proposed norms on lay preaching that would have allowed Catholics who are not members of the clergy but who have "special expertise" to preach at liturgies.

The bishops' debate on holy days revolved around whether Catholics should have a grave moral obligation to attend Mass other than on Sundays in an age when demanding work and family commitments have led many to stay away.

About a quarter of the nation's 55 million Catholics attend most holy day services while about half the Catholic population attends Mass on Sunday, church officials say.

"Is it prudent to burden the consciences of our people?" asked Archbishop John R. Quinn of San Francisco. "It seems to me it would be better not to burden the consciences of our people."

But several prelates, including the cardinals of New York, Washington and Boston, argued that the holy days remain a powerful symbol of faith for those who observe them.

And the sight of Catholics walking from their offices to midday Mass in a downtown church on holy days shows that others are struggling to live up to the demands of their faith, said Cardinal James Hickey of Washington.

"I submit that we need a spiritual alarm clock. . . . I beg us not to throw away the alarm clocks," he said.

But Auxiliary Bishop Wilton Gregory of Chicago, the Liturgy Committee chairman, said in an earlier interview that the issue will not go away regardless of the bishops' action.

"The heart of the question is, What is fueling American religious practice at the end of the second millennium?" Gregory said. "Merely retaining a custom that's widely ignored, is that addressing the issue?"

Christmas and the Immaculate Conception on Dec. 8 were the only holy days on which the bishops did not vote.

In other business, the bishops voted 141 to 107 to reject norms that would have allowed lay people to preach in church in special circumstances, including when an ordained minister was unavailable or unfamiliar with the language of the congregation.

Cloudy skies forecast

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies with scattered showers and a few thunderstorms possible. Partial clearing should occur by late afternoon and a high around 65 to 70 is expected with southwest winds at 10 to 20 mph and gusty. There is a 40 percent chance of rain. Tonight should be partly cloudy with a low near 50, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Friday should be partly cloudy with a high around 65 to 70.

After an overnight low of 46, Wednesday's high reached 55 compared to the record high for that date of 84 set in 1989. The record low for Wednesday's date is 15 set in 1976.

STATE

Rain spread across North and South Texas Wednesday as a large upper-level disturbance pumped Pacific moisture eastward into the state, and forecasters expected more precipitation through the rest of the week.

The disturbance over the Baja Peninsula produced patches of light rain over North Central Texas. Isolated showers developed over the west and central sections of South Texas.

Meanwhile, patchy fog and drizzle covered the South Plains and Permian Basin.

High temperatures ranged from 50s in West Texas to 60s in the north and upper 70s in the Rio Grande Valley.

The National Weather Service forecast called for scattered showers and thunderstorms through Friday statewide. Thunderstorms should be more likely in west and central sections of North Texas and in the Panhandle.

NATION

The Northwest had cold temperatures and snow Wednesday, with rain in lower elevations.

At least 4 inches of snow fell at Mount Baker and Mount Rainier in Washington state. Three inches fell at Stevens Pass.

Northern Nevada had wind gusts up to 30 mph. Up to 10 inches of snow could fall by late Thursday in the higher Ruby Mountains, the Independence Mountains and the Schell Creek Range in eastern Nevada.

At midday, rain was scattered across northern Nevada, eastern Idaho, western Wyoming and northwest through north-central Texas and New York state.

The National Weather Service had no reports of one-half inch or more of rain during the six hours ending at 1 p.m. EST. Snowfall during the same period included 1 inch at West Yellowstone, Mont.

The low for the Lower 48 states was 14 in Gunnison, Colo.

Temperatures around the nation at 3 p.m. EST ranged from 31 in Bradford, Penn., and the Maine towns of Caribou and Limestone to 87 in Thermal, Calif.

PAY: Salary gaps widen with age worker is making 54 cents for every dollar earned by a man.

The gap is just as wide between men and women workers who did not go to college.

It is illegal to pay women less for equal work. But the law says nothing about paying people differently if they do different jobs. And experts say that's the problem: The pay gap reflects lower salaries paid in fields traditionally dominated by women and the difficulty women have breaking through the so-called "glass ceiling" to higher paid positions.

Some said women are paid less because it's profitable for their companies.

"That discrimination pays, otherwise it wouldn't have flourished so long," said Karen Nussbaum, executive director of 9 to 5, a Cleveland-based association of 15,000 working women. "You can bet people say, 'We can get her for less than we can get him.' You know it goes on."

Women earn less if they choose careers in fields dominated by women, such as nursing, social work, clerical jobs and teaching in the public schools, experts say.

"The fact of the matter is, many women don't wish to go into nontraditional, male dominated occupations," said Carolin Head, assistant director of the American Association of University Women. "It is not acceptable in this country to tell nurses and teachers that if they want to make more, they need to choose a different occupation."

Heidi Hartman, an economist and director of the Institute for Women's Policy Research, said her organization's studies show a year of experience adds about 7 cents an hour to women's pay, compared with 24 cents an hour for men.

"Women's jobs have not been structured to reward experience," Hartman said. "That means there's no incentive to train them, to have productivity increases or skills increases."

Adult women with four years of high school on average earn $17,809 a year, about two-thirds of what a man with similar education would earn. With four years of college, women's earnings rise to $27,344.

That's only about $600 more than what an adult man with a high-school education earns. Four years of college increases his pay to $42,500, more than $15,000 above what a college-educated woman earns.

The study confirmed other findings that women are slighted on pay day and on the promotion list:

■ The Feminist Majority Foundation recently found that fewer than 3 percent of the top jobs at Fortune 500 companies were held by women.

■ A Labor Department study of promotion in nine big companies prompted Labor Secretary Lynn Martin in August to vow to shatter the "glass ceiling" that bars women and minorities from the executive suites.

■ The Bureau of Labor Statistics since 1979 has collected figures showing women's pay overall has lagged behind men's. In that year women earned 62 cents for each dollar earned by men. Since then their earnings have crept up to 70 cents on the dollar.

■ Even on the tennis court women lose out financially. Officials of the Wimbledon tournament in May said the women's champion would receive $367,000, but the men's champion would get $408,000.

Some groups, like the National Commission on Pay Equity, are lobbying employers to target women in their recruiting for traditionally male jobs.

"If the opportunities are there, women will train for them," said the organization's acting director, Kelly Jenkins. Also, "it's a problem of encouraging women to think about those careers as careers that are open to them."

The census study found men and women age 25 and over had about an equal chance of having a high-school education. For both, more than three-fourths had four years of high school, the highest level ever. In 1940, less than a fourth of Americans were that highly educated.

Women were less likely to get a full college education. Fewer than one out of every five women had at least four years of college, compared to one out of four men. Overall, 21 percent of Americans had four years of college or more. In 1940, fewer than 5 percent of Americans had that much college.

The study was based on a survey of 58,000 households covering level of education in 1989.

Midway Airlines discontinues service

CHICAGO (AP) — Midway Airlines, the nation's 12th-largest airline, announced late Wednesday it was shutting down. Hours earlier, Northwest Airlines scrapped plans to buy the carrier, which had been under bankruptcy protection.

Northwest, the nation's fourth-largest airline, said it backed out because Midway gave it false information about past business, causing Northwest to underestimate how much it would cost to run the carrier. Midway denied the allegation.

In a statement later, Chicago-based Midway said: "As a result of Northwest Airlines' unilateral decision to withdraw from its commitment to acquire substantially all of Midway's assets, effective midnight, Wednesday, Nov. 13, Midway will cease operations."

A recording on Midway's reservations line advised ticket holders to contact travel and credit agencies. "Midway deeply regrets the inconvenience caused to our loyal customers by the cancellation of all Midway service," the recording said.

The airline, with a fleet of 62 planes, had nearly 200 flights a day to 41 destinations. It carried nearly 400,000 passengers last month.

Midway also had 4,300 employees. Airline spokeswoman Laura Podlesny said she had no information about their fate. She said they were being advised to contact Midway's human resources department.

The Midway shutdown is the latest in a series of troubles for the nation's airlines, which have been struggling since Iraq's invasion of Kuwait in August 1990 pushed jet fuel prices sharply higher.

The Gulf War that followed scared off many travelers and the recession has kept others away.

That war and its aftermath also led to the death of Eastern Airlines and bankruptcy filings by Pan American World Airways, Continental Airlines and America West Airlines as well as Midway. And Trans World Airlines plans to undergo bankruptcy reorganization next year.

Northwest Airlines' proposed $153 million purchase of Midway had been approved last month by a judge overseeing Midway's Chapter 11 reorganization.

Northwest had viewed a purchase of Midway as an affordable way to expand as it tries to keep pace with the air travel industry's fast-growing leaders, American, United and Delta.

The transaction would have completed an acquisition of Midway's assets that Northwest began last month when it paid $20 million for 21 Midway gates at Midway Airport and assumed $1.7 million in Midway's debt.

Northwest had indicated that if Midway failed, it would consider using the gates to expand its own operations at Midway Airport and likely would hire some Midway employees. Northwest had agreed to hire most of Midway's employees as part of the proposed buyout.

But on Wednesday, Northwest scrapped the deal. Northwest spokesman Mark Abels said Midway misled his carrier on its 1990 traffic and revenues, causing Northwest underestimated by $35 million the amount it would cost to run the airline each year.

CARD: Senate votes to cap interest rate rates but was not asking for caps.

Meanwhile, the House mounted a new effort to pass legislation rescuing the government's dwindling deposit insurance fund and tightening bank regulation. It voted 305-112 to begin debate but was not expected to hold a final vote until today.

Before it adjourns later this month, Congress must expand the taxpayer-backed borrowing authority of the FDIC or risk having the agency which protects 110 million depositors run out of money.

The urgency was underscored by the release of a long-awaited audit of the FDIC by the General Accounting Office, Congress' watchdog agency.

"We believe that the fund in all likelihood will be insolvent by Dec. 31," GAO head Charles A. Bowsher wrote.

He said the FDIC had $4 billion at the end of 1990 and the agency itself said last month its fund had since dropped to nearly $2 billion.

The House bill would expand the FDIC's borrowing authority by around $70 billion. The money is to be repaid through insurance premiums paid by banks and by selling assets inherited from failed banks. Bowsher warned the rescue could fall short, depending on how the economy performs.

The measure under consideration Wednesday was part of a larger bill rejected, 324-89, by the House on Nov. 4. The defeated legislation also would have dramatically revamped the financial system by allowing banks to enter the securities business and to expand across state lines.

With the backing of the Bush administration, Rep. Chalmers Wylie, R-Ohio, was offering an amendment that would give the House a second chance to repeal interstate banking barriers dating back to 1927. But, the securities provisions were not being offered again.

Wylie's amendment also would restrict but not completely close several loopholes allowing some banks to sell insurance. The politically-powerful insurance agents' lobby had vowed to work against interstate banking provisions unless they were coupled with the insurance measure.

Other parts of the House bill would:

■ Require regulators to seize weak banks before they fail.

■ Forbid many so-called too-big-to-fail bailouts that protect deposits over the $100,000-per-account insurance limit.

■ Tighten accounting standards for banks and require regulators to conduct annual exams of all institutions.

In the Senate, lawmakers had voted 76-19 to start debate on the bill but were still negotiating behind the scenes, according to Sen. Donald W. Riegle Jr., D-Mich., the chairman of the Senate Banking Committee.

He said senators had agreed, with the concurrence of the administration, to drop provisions opening the securities business to banks. Senators also are near agreement on interstate and insurance provisions, he said.

BGCT: Local pastor agrees with Baylor decision fundamentalists.

It pleased Maples, a moderate.

"I don't see Baylor straying from Baptist life, not in the near future, and hopefully, not ever," Maples said. "The proposed agreement itself is one we can live with. It's one that both Baylor and Texas Baptists can go forward together with."

The Rev. Larry Ashlock, pastor of the Crestview Baptist Church in Midland, sided with the decision to relinquish control of Baylor.

"I think overall that was the most agreeable of the offers or motions ... (I) don't think any one of us, on either side of the issue, are totally satisfied," said Ashlock, who considers himself an independent.

Although the move may further separate the fundamentalists and the moderates, the university should suffer minimally as a result of any lost support, said Ashlock, a Baylor graduate.

Monday's vote allows the convention to elect 25 percent of Baylor's Board of Regents. The board, which embarked last year on a quest for autonomy, would elect the remaining 75 percent.

Trustees at the 12,000-student university voted in 1990 to create the Board of Regents as part of a reorganization aimed at insulating the school from fundamentalist control.

Maples takes the helm of the convention from the outgoing Rev. Phil Lineberger, pastor of Richardson Heights Baptist Church. Maples said he believes Baylor-BGCT relations in the future will be solid.

"If the experiences in Missouri with William Jewel College are any indication, then there's no reason why a university cannot have a perpetuating board of trustees, and yet remain strong and tightly connected in the denomination. I would hope the same thing happens between Texas Baptists and Baylor."

His plans for the convention include starting new churches and emphasizing evangelism, ministry and Christian education.

"I'm going to be open to listen to all of Texas Baptists and respond in whatever possible way I can," he said. "I want to be a reconciling force between folks who have strong differences of opinions."

CHURCH: Minister finds body

(From 1A)

"She would always stop and talk. She was so friendly and so pretty. She and her husband have a baby and they were such a happy family," said Ms. Rodriguez.

"She always opens the church around 10 a.m. This is truly pitiful. I can't even feel safe walking to work in the middle of the day."

The body was found partially disrobed and investigators have not ruled out the possibility that she was sexually assaulted before the murder.

Although the church's business office doubles as a distribution center for food for needy families, investigators do not believe robbery was a motive in the slaying.

The body was removed by funeral workers at 2 p.m. as several bereaved church members and neighborhood residents watched.

An autopsy will be performed in Dallas at the Southwest Institute of Forensic Science to determine whether a sexual assault did occur.

There were no witnesses and police have no leads in the case.

Timeline to finish redistricting is tight, Richards says

The State

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards on Wednesday urged the state's lawyer to see whether changes can be made in the state House redistricting plan to satisfy the U.S. Justice Department's objections to it.

"We are on a tight timeline to complete redistricting in order to hold elections next year," she told Attorney General Dan Morales in a letter, urging him to work with groups that have sued the state over redistricting.

Morales said he would prefer that lawmakers be called into special session to address the Justice Department's ruling that the plan is invalid because it is unfair to Hispanics.

But he said he was willing to make changes in the redistricting plan, preferably with input from House lawmakers, if that's how state leaders want it. Richards said she would loathe to call a special session on the House plan.

Judith Sanders-Castro of the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund, representing minority interests challenging the House plan in state district court, said that a settlement would offer the only chance of keeping the 1992 elections on schedule.

But the state Republican Party said it will ask a federal three-judge panel, which is hearing its redistricting challenge in Austin, to avoid an election delay by accepting the GOP's alternative House redistricting plan.

"We don't need any more back room deals," said Texas GOP Chairman Fred Meyer.

Republicans, and two Democratic state senators, have objected to a compromise Texas Senate redistricting plan that the state worked out with minorities and that was accepted by a state judge. The Republicans also are challenging the congressional redistricting plan.

Rep. Tom Craddick, a Midland lawmaker who heads the House Republican Caucus, said he also opposes giving lawmakers another chance at the issue.

The Justice Department has not yet ruled on whether Texas' congressional and state Senate redistricting plans follow the federal Voting Rights Act. It is to rule on both this month.

Richards and Morales expressed hope that 1992 elections will be able to proceed on schedule. Candidate filing for the election begins Dec. 3 and ends Jan. 2, with the primary scheduled for March.

Richards said that the Justice Department's questions about the House plan involve several narrow issues. The Department cited specific instances in El Paso County, South Texas and Dallas County where the plan discriminated against Hispanics.

"It seems that common sense dictates that we proceed to resolve these narrow issues rather than calling 181 members of the Legislature back to Austin at a cost of $1 million to reopen the entire issue again," Richards told Morales in the letter.

For more state news/3B

Richards said she would have further discussions with state leaders as the Justice Department acts on the other plans.

Rep. Tom Uher, a Democrat from Bay City who heads the House Redistricting Committee, said that it would be premature for there to be a special session until the Justice Department rules on the other state plans.

House Speaker Gib Lewis said he hoped there would not be a special session on House redistricting.

JFK conspiracy buffs gather in Dallas to trade theories

By Mike Cochran
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — Who killed JFK?

The question has been around from the minute the president was assassinated on that November afternoon in Dallas nearly 28 years ago. This week, a three-day symposium principally of those who reject the official explanation is being held in a Dallas hotel just down the street from the old Texas School Book Depository.

The Assassination Symposium on John F. Kennedy, dubbed ASK, is largely a gathering of conspiracy buffs dedicated to "solving" the Nov. 22, 1963 murder.

For the most part, participants reject the basic Warren Commission conclusion that Lee Harvey Oswald, acting alone, killed the president.

They challenge commission findings that Oswald was the lone assassin who fired three shots into the presidential motorcade from a sniper's perch on the sixth floor of the Texas School Book Depository.

And they insist that Jack Ruby, who murdered Oswald, was a co-conspirator.

The goals of ASK, sponsors say, "are to present and disseminate information about the assassination, and ultimately prompt the United States government to open all files and archives pertaining to the assassination in order to resolve questions that remain unanswered 28 years after the fact."

Among the panelists and speakers are authors and researchers who for years have advanced often novel theories on the events that occurred that day.

The favorite targets of conspiracy buffs are organized crime and the CIA.

Until his retirement in the late 80s, Henry Wade, Dallas County's tough, outspoken district attorney, routinely dismissed many of the Warren Commission critics as crackpots.

Conspiracy fervor was such just 10 years ago that authorities opened Oswald's grave in nearby Fort Worth so that a team of pathologists could determine who was buried there.

A British author named Michael Eddowes insisted that the coffin contained the body of an impostor, a Russian spy in fact.

But the pathologists said the body was Oswald's.

That torpedoed one theory, but did little to stem the skepticism of conspiracy buffs.

In his new book, "Plausible Denial," author Mark Lane maintains the CIA was behind the Kennedy slaying and that Watergate burglar E. Howard Hunt was involved.

Lane has scheduled a news conference Thursday morning in advance of the symposium, which formally opens Friday with a keynote address by Dr. Cyril Wecht.

Sponsors say Wecht is a noted forensic expert, lawyer and doctor and the first private citizen to study the Kennedy autopsy photographs and X-rays in 1971.

Among the other speakers and panelists Friday and Saturday are Gary Shaw and Larry Harris, co-directors of the conspiracy-theory JFK Assassination Center in Dallas and coauthors of a Kennedy book, "Cover-up."

Another panelist is Dr. Charles Crenshaw, one of the doctors at Parkland Hospital who treated both Kennedy and Oswald.

Hispanic students trail in graduation rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — Less than half of the Hispanic students in Texas completed high school, compared with three quarters of their white peers, the Census Bureau reported Wednesday.

Among whites, 74.9 percent earned their diplomas or obtained a General Equivalency Degree, compared with 69.8 percent for blacks and 45.2 percent for Hispanics, the report shows.

The survey was based on a March 1989 survey of 58,000 households nationwide.

Hispanics also trailed in the percentage of students completing at least four years of college, the survey said. Among whites, the rate was 22.9 percent, versus 10.9 percent for blacks and 8.3 percent for Hispanics.

"I think the people still haven't figured out how much the future of our nation depends on educating our minority population, which is increasing in rapid numbers," said Edward Codina, a researcher with the San Antonio-based Hispanic Association of Colleges and Universities.

"You either educate us or you pay for building more jails or for more welfare," he said. "That's the bottom line."

A higher proportion of Hispanic students are educated in poor school districts than Anglos, Codina said. "That's bound to have a tremendous effect on the ability for schools to educate Hispanics."

In the 1989-90 school year, 44 percent of the estimated 70,000 dropouts were Hispanic, said Joey Lozano, a spokesman for the Texas Education Agency.

"The reason most students drop out of school is poor attendance," he said. Poverty and the need for outside income also figure into the dropout rate, he said.

Codina agreed, noting that low-income students face more burdens than their more affluent peers.

"A lot of (Hispanic students) have to work part-time. A lot of them may end up getting married early," he said. "And these are extra stressers in just trying to succeed in school."

There was little disparity in high school rates by gender, with 74.7 percent of men 25 and older having completed four years of high school, compared with 73.9 percent of women.

The gap widened among men and women with at least four years of college, with men 25 and older recording a 25.7 percent completion rate versus 18 percent for women.

Baby boomers recorded the highest high school completion rate, outperforming the generations that came before and after them. The boomers, those 25 to 44, had an 82.2 percent completion rate, versus 70.8 percent for those 18 to 24 and 72.2 percent for the 45-to 64-year-old bracket. Those 65 and older had a significantly lower rate of 49.4 percent.

The trend is duplicated on the college side, with 25 percent of baby boomers completing at least four years of college.

U.S. explores ways to curtail North Korean progress to nuclear arms

SEOUL, South Korea (NYT) — Secretary of State James A. Baker III told South Korea on Wednesday that Washington considered North Korea's suspected development of nuclear weapons a matter of urgent global concern and that it was now actively exploring with Japan, China and the Soviet Union ways to curtail the move.

South Korea's foreign minister, Lee Sang-ock, endorsed the American initiative to try to further isolate North Korea economically and diplomatically until it opened its nuclear installation to international inspection and halted work on what is suspected to be a reprocessing plant capable of producing hundreds of pounds of weapons-grade plutonimum, a senior Korean official said.

In his meeting with the South Korean foreign minister, Baker said Washington had come to see curtailment of the North Korean nuclear development as a "matter of urgency," and something that was "not just a Korean issue but a matter of global concern," according to a Korean official who attended the talks. The North Korean nuclear activity is situated at Yongbyon, a nuclear complex 60 miles north of Pyongyang.

While Baker is in Seoul for the annual meeting of the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation forum, to discuss Asian trade issues, many of his private discussions have focused on how to generate pressures to halt the North Korean nuclear program before it sets off a nuclear arms race in Asia that could prompt South Korea and Japan to try to develop nuclear weapons.

Having been slow to react to the Iraqi nuclear bomb program, the Bush administration is trying to make sure that it does not repeat the mistake by underestimating North Korea's moves.

For now, American officials say they are concentrating their efforts on finding ways to squeeze the North Koreans diplomatically and economically in order to force them to open their nuclear installation to inspection by the International Atomic Energy Agency, which the North is obliged to do as a signer of the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty.

But a senior State Department official told reporters traveling with Baker on Wednesday that while it is important to compel North Korea to open itself up to international inspection, "we need to go beyond that — there should not be a reprocessing facility there at all."

Up to now, North Korea has refused to allow any inspection of its nuclear installations and has spurned a South Korean offer on Nov. 8 that both nations agree to forego development of any weapons of mass destruction.

The first sign of the multilateral American approach was manifested Tuesday when Japan, at Baker's behest, pledged that it would not go ahead with plans to establish diplomatic relations with North Korea unless it scrapped its center for reprocessing nuclear fuel. Japan's foreign minister, Michio Watanabe, who met Baker in Tokyo on Monday, made the pledge during a meeting in Seoul with his Korean counterpart.

That gesture was important to the South Koreans, who were annoyed by a visit to North Korea by senior members of Japan's governing Liberal Democratic Party. Privately, some South Korean diplomats suspect that the Japanese would prefer that the peninsula remain divided.

Saddam Hussein shuffles Cabinet membership second time in a week

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iraqi President Saddam Hussein today shuffled his family-dominated Cabinet for the second time in a week, appointing a half brother active in the security forces as interior minister.

The leadership change, along with several others in recent weeks, signals Saddam's growing dependence on loyal relatives, apparently out of fear of a possible coup. Since his defeat in the Gulf War, Saddam has struggled with internal unrest and economic woes caused by international trade sanctions.

The new interior minister, Wathban Ibrahim Hassan, was appointed by a presidential decree, the Iraqi News Agency said in a brief dispatch monitored in Nicosia.

The appointment appeared to complete a Cabinet shuffle begun last week, when Saddam named his cousin, Ali Hassan al-Majid, as defense minister. Al-Majid was then interior minister.

The new interior minister, the eldest of Saddam's three half brothers, had been governor of Salah ad-Din, a province north of Baghdad, the news agency said. The capital of Salah ad-Din is Tikrit, Saddam's and Hassan's hometown.

The news agency did not refer to the relation between Saddam and Hassan, whose full name is Wathban Ibrahim Hassan al-Tikriti.

In addition, Hassan headed the Estikhbarat, or military intelligence. It was not immediately clear if he would retain that post.

Like his brothers and several cousins in Saddam's inner circle, Hassan is a member of Saddam's infamous Jihaz Haneen, or "instrument of yearning," an underground security apparatus that played a crucial role in the July 17, 1968, coup that brought the Arab Baath Socialist Party to power.

In the late 1980s, Hassan headed the Amn al-Am, or internal security department.

In a Nov. 6 Cabinet shuffle, Saddam sacked his son-in-law, Lt. Gen. Hussein Kamel Hassan, as defense minister and replaced him with al-Majid, known to many Iraqis as the "butcher of the Kurds."

Al-Majid masterminded a chemical gas attack on the Kurds in 1985 that killed hundreds of civilians in northern Iraq, where the 3.5 million ethnic minority has been fighting for autonomy for years.

Syria remains reluctant about U.S. talks site

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — The United States has emerged as the most likely site for the next round of Middle East peace talks, but Syria and some Palestinians are reluctant to agree to negotiations on U.S. soil.

A senior Syrian official said Tuesday that his government was resisting a U.S. location because Washington still regards Syria as a sponsor of terrorist groups and denies Palestine Liberation Organization members U.S. visas.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir of Israel on Tuesday accused Syria of obstructing the peace talks and said the United States would have to set the date and place for the next round.

The negotations would involve separate, direct talks between Israeli negotiators and Syrian, Lebanese and Jordanian-Palestinian delegations.

The United States and the Soviet Union are co-sponsoring the Mideast talks that began in Madrid late last month, but the Soviet Union, preoccupied with its own turmoil, has played a distinctly secondary role.

U.S. and Israeli officials said Tuesday that Washington has proposed that the third phase of the talks, multilateral negotiations on regional issues ranging from water supplies to arms control, would be held at a European site, possibly Moscow.

But Syria has said it will refuse to take part in those talks unless significant progress is made in the direct, bilateral talks, which are being held up by the touchy question of location.

Palestinian negotiators have said they want the direct talks to continue in Spain but would consider American compromise proposals.

Since the talks began with formal Madrid sessions, Israel has urged that the next phase alternate between sites in Israel and in Arab capitals.

The Syrians and other Arab parties think this could be interpreted as recognition of the Jewish state and thus want the dialogue continued in Spain or some other "neutral" country.

In Amman, Jordanian Prime Minister Taher Masri said Tuesday that direct talks are likely to start sometime between Sunday and Nov. 22 in Williamsburg, Va., about 125 miles south of Washington.

Others have proposed Williamsburg, saying it is easy to provide security there and that it has been the site of previous summits.

Also Tuesday, sat-run Syrian radio accused Isarel of "provocations" aimed against the peace process. The commentary responded to a statement by Shamir on Monday that Israel was unwilling to yield occupied territory "because Israel's measurements are too small."

Syria says it will not enter the third phase of the talks unless Israel agrees to leave the lands it captured in the 1967 Middle East war.

The senior Syrian official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said reports that the United States may offer Washington as the compromise venue for the next stage of talks "poses problems for Syria."

The official noted that Syria remains on the U.S. list of countries accused of supporting terrorism.

German government to limit access to Stasi files; journalists complain

BONN, Germany (AP) — Six million documents gather dust in the gloomy building where East Germany's Stasi secret police once worked. They instill fear among the innocent as well as the guilty.

They are the Stasi files, documents containing information on the private lives of East German citizens, the identities of Stasi informers, and perhaps the names of current politicians who aided the Stasi.

On Thursday, Parliament is expected to pass a bill that will effectively open the explosive files only to a few victims of the police's scrutiny, and, in special cases, to intelligence agencies and prosecutors.

Under the legislation, which was drafted by all parties, journalists would be banned from publishing most information from the Stasi files. They could receive up to three years in jail if they break the law.

The bill has provoked an angry debate. Journalists say it jeopardizes freedom of the press and is being used to protect politicians from the east from embarrassing disclosures.

It is not acceptable that facts regarding public figures only be publicized if "that does not interfere with the predominant interests of these people," said Dirk M. Barton, head of the Association of German Newspaper Publishers.

Civil rights activists, meanwhile, charge the legislation provides too few safeguards against government intrusion into east Germans' private lives.

"With the planned law, the federal government has commandeered the old (East German) rulers' knowledge," said Konrad Taut, head of a Leipzig citizens' committee that helped rescue Stasi files from being burned by Stasi agents in 1989.

"The new law will allow the secret services to acquire at least a part of the Stasi information," Taut told the news magazine Der Spiegel.

But government officials say one of the best arguments for carefully limited access to the Stasi documents is that the files may contain totally false information.

"Countless people in the DDR (East Germany) were spied on, hounded and humiliated," said federal Justice Minister Klaus Kinkel.

"Two hundred kilometers (125 miles) of documents are the result — unspeakable muck and filth which one should let disappear if there were no culprits and above all no victims," Kinkel said on German television.

Even Chancellor Helmut Kohl's rivals staunchly defend the bill.

Willfried Penner, a security expert with the opposition Social Democrats, said he does not believe the law impinges on press freedoms, and is confident that access by German intelligence to the documents would be tightly restricted.

Under the law, each request to examine Stasi documents will be considered by a government-appointed committee — headed by Lutheran minister Joachim Gauck — that has acted as the documents' guardian since German unification a year ago.

Ambiguous conditions in the law could permit the panel to block publication of information about important figures.

The files are kept under guard at former Stasi offices in eastern Germany. But a number of the documents are already on the loose, apparently among files that disappeared during the chaos of East Germany's 1989 revolution.

Leaked Stasi information has already led to the political downfall of a number of East Germans.

Gorbachev threatens to resign

MOSCOW (AP) — President Mikhail S. Gorbachev has threatened to resign unless leaders of the republics sign a new Union Treaty by December, the independent Interfax news agency reported today.

Gorbachev made the threat on Tuesday during an appearance before a commission he appointed to investigate the KGB's role in the failed hard-line coup in August, Interfax said.

The news agency quoted Gen. Sergei Stepashin, the commission chairman who is also a lawmaker in the Russian legislature.

"President Mikhail Gorbachev believes the new Union Treaty may be signed in December," Interfax reported. "If it is not signed, he will resign from his post."

Gorbachev has on several previous occasions threatened to resign unless the republics or national lawmakers backed his policies.

Gorbachev and the leaders of the largest republics were scheduled to sign a new Union Treaty on Aug. 19, the day an eight-man emergency committee announced it had taken power and that Gorbachev was under house arrest.

After the failure of the three-day coup, the republics said the treaty had to be rewritten to give them an even larger role in managing their economies and other affairs.

Gorbachev hopes a new Union Treaty can be based on a new economic cooperation treaty signed by 10 of the remaining 12 republics.

Fighting pauses in Dubrovnik; EC monitors leave

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia (AP) — Serb-dominated forces besieging Dubrovnik held their fire today to allow the evacuation of European Community monitors and hundreds of desperate citizens, officials said.

The EC, meanwhile, sent its top negotiator on the Yugoslav crisis, Lord Carrington of Britain, to meet with Croatian, Serbian and other Yugoslav leaders in another bid to end the 4½-month-old civil war.

The fighting has killed 2,000 people since Croatia declared independence June 25. Twelve cease-fires negotiated by the EC have failed to hold.

In eastern Croatia, Serb commanders told The Associated Press today that the long siege of the strategic city of Vukova was about to end in victory.

Shelling stopped in Dubrovnik at about 1 p.m., EC deputy spokesman Ed Koestal said after speaking with EC monitors in the Adriatic port.

Frigate captain Milan Zec told the Yugoslav news agency Tanjug the federal defense secretary accepted a new cease-fire at the request of the Croatian leadership.

Grocers pull British soft drink from shelves in tampering scare

LONDON (AP) — Supermarkets and corner shops pulled some 2 million bottles of a popular soft drink from their shelves Wednesday after police said an animal rights group might have contaminated some of the bottles.

Scotland Yard said seven men and three women were arrested Wednesday on suspicion of planning a campaign to tamper with Lucozade as a protest against its manufacturer, the pharmaceuticals company SmithKline Beecham PLC, which uses animals in laboratory testing of some of its drugs.

Robin Webb of the Animal Liberation Front said at least two of the people arrested were longtime animal rights activists. He said he did not know if his organization was responsible.

"If it were an Animal Liberation Front action, and it certainly didn't endanger life, it has had the success of causing economic loss to the company concerned," Webb said.

The Animal Liberation Front is one of several protest groups that have been employing increasingly violent action in recent years, ranging from releasing animals in raids on laboratories to bomb attacks and contamination warnings.

Last year a car owned by a veterinarian employed by the Defense Ministry was blown up. She escaped injury. In a second attack, a 13-month-old boy was injured in a car bomb attack on an animal researcher.

SmithKline Beecham said it ordered the withdrawal of its gold-colored drink because of the police warning. The company gave no estimate of the cost of removing the bottles and the loss of business.

SmithKline Beecham spokesman Alan Chandler said he didn't know exactly what kind of contaminant might have been introduced in the product. No contamination was detected in any of the bottles returned to the company's plant, he said.

SmithKline Beecham advertises Lucozade as an energy-giving drink for sports enthusiasts. Animal testing is not involved in the production or development of the drink, said the company.

Imported Louisiana crawfish outstay their welcome in Spain

DELTEBRE, Spain (AP) — The Louisiana crawfish was imported here with the hope it would prove a gastronomic success. But the spiny creatures have played a nasty trick: Instead of nestling beside beds of rice on Spanish plates, they are chewing up the country's rice fields.

In the northeastern Ebro River Delta, the fast-breeding visitors have been declared crustaceans non grata.

"I don't know exactly where Louisiana is, but I wish the people there would come and take them back," said Juan Tiron, a rice farmer from this tiny town near the eastern city of Tortosa.

"People say they're good to eat, but I've never tried one," said Tiron, one of hundreds of rice farmers who tend 10 to 20 acre plots in the region.

The regional government of Catalonia called the Louisiana crawfish a plague in July, and told the Department of Agriculture to use all means to destroy them. Already, farmers have tried to gas them, with no luck, and are now using insecticides.

The Louisiana crawfish — known in its native land as "mudbugs" — came to Spain 25 years ago at the behest of the Ministry of Agriculture and entrepreneurs eager to cultivate them in poorer regions.

At the time, Spain's native crawfish — a scarce and slow-growing species that survives in clear, fast-running water — was dying out from pollution.

The indigenous crawfish, which at 2-inches-long is half the size of the Louisiana version, is a delicacy to some rural folk but never became a major market item.

Its American cousin, on the other hand, thrived after being introduced in the southwestern region of Extremadura, and even generated a little revenue in the nation's seafood markets. But it too never really caught on.

In any case, it was too late — the crawfish already were doing their damage to the country's fields.

Biologist Raul Escosa says the first Louisiana crawfish were spotted about 10 years ago in the Ebro delta, one of several major rice-growing regions where crawfish have infiltrated.

Here, "there was a ready-made ecological niche waiting for (them)," he said. "They have a high reproductive level, and there are no predators here that can keep their numbers down."

In winter, he says, the crawfish burrow into fields and levees, draining water from the fields and canals. Undermined levees collapse under the weight of tractors.

An attempt to destroy the mudbugs by injecting lethal gas down their burrows failed. One insecticide, however, apparently helped kill them without damaging rice or other flora and fauna.

In the long run, Escosa is not optimistic.

"There's no way we're going to eliminate this crawfish," he said. "It's a remarkably hardy species."

Prudhomme, however, has an idea. If the Spanish can't learn to love the crawfish, they can always sell them — to the French.

Jewish group demands investigation on lost files

PARIS (AP) — Jewish groups on Wednesday demanded an investigation into why files used to round up Paris Jews to be sent to Nazi concentration camps had been kept secret by the government for nearly five decades.

Nazi hunter Serge Klarsfeld announced Tuesday that he had found the files while conducting research at the archives of the Ministry for Veterans Affairs. Their whereabouts had been a mystery since the end of World War II.

Judge Jean-Pierre Getti, currently investigating two cases involving Nazi crimes against humanity, ordered the files placed under court jurisdiction.

Compiled in October 1940 by police of the Vichy regime, which collaborated with the Nazis, the documents were the first and most complete of numerous wartime files on French Jews. Police used them to identify and round up Jews in Paris.

The dicovery this week sent shock waves through France, still struggling to adjust a confused wartime self-image that ranges from the heroic Resistance fighter to the collaborationist embodied in Vichy officials.

Klarsfeld said he suspected official foot-dragging regarding the files, which provide information on the role of French police in the deportation and death of some 75,000 French Jews.

Veterans Affairs Minister Louis Mexandeau denied the accusation, saying a copy of the files had been delivered to the National Archives in January 1991.

He said the files had been used solely for the purpose of "establishing the rights of Jewish victims of Nazi persecution."

The original census was conducted under the supervision of Theo Dannecker, chief of Jewish Affairs section of the Gestapo in France, and General de La Laurencie, Vichy's representative in Paris.

"The Files of Shame," as Le Figaro newspaper called them, are color-coded in white, blue and orange depending on the nationality of each person. They contain the names and particulars of about 140,000 people.

Historians have long known of their existence, but not their whereabouts. Some government officials had maintained the files were destroyed after the liberation of Paris in 1944.

"There is good reason to open a thorough investigation to find out why these files have been deliberately hidden for decades," Jean Kahn, president of the Representative Council of Jewish Organizations, said in a radio interview.

"By saying these files no longer existed, the authorities committed a serious mistake. So an investigation is necessary to find out why they were covered up and to condemn the guilty parties," he said.

Introducing the Rapha Christian Treatment Program at Glenwood Hospital.

Maybe you or a family member have been suffering through some incredibly difficult circumstances. You feel trapped. You feel hopeless. You can't sleep. Or you sleep too much. You struggle with shame, anger, bitterness and resentment. Now you're taking it out on your family. Maybe you've already gone for help, but life isn't getting any better. And it seems like there's no way out.

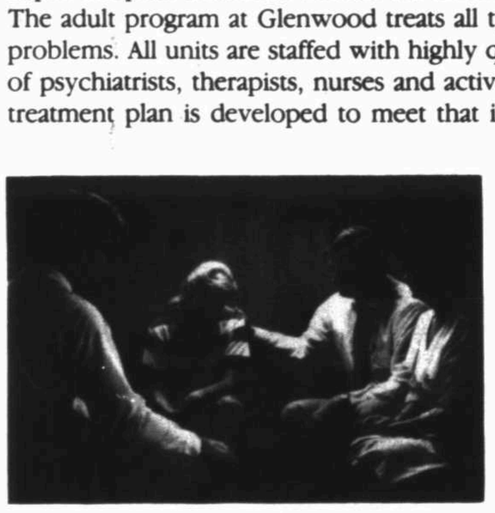

We think we have the answer you've been looking for.

Rapha (Hebrew) - to heal.

Clinically Professional . . .

Rapha Hospital Treatment Centers are Christ-centered in-patient treatment programs. The adult program at Glenwood treats all types of emotional and substance abuse problems. All units are staffed with highly qualified healthcare specialists consisting of psychiatrists, therapists, nurses and activity staff. Each patient is assessed, and a treatment plan is developed to meet that individual's specific needs.

Distinctively Christian . . .

Rapha meets all clinical criteria for treating the physical and emotional issues for a patient, but we also address spiritual issues. Issues that often keep an individual from being all that he or she can be. Our goal is to help people see themselves as God sees them. To experience the healing power of Christ's love, acceptance and forgiveness.

We think you'll find the answer to your problem at Rapha.

Annual list identifies harmful toys

BOSTON (AP) — A plastic Robin Hood sword and dagger, a rabbit-shaped gumball machine and a GI Joe assault vehicle are among toys that could be hazardous to a child's health, according to an annual list released Wednesday.

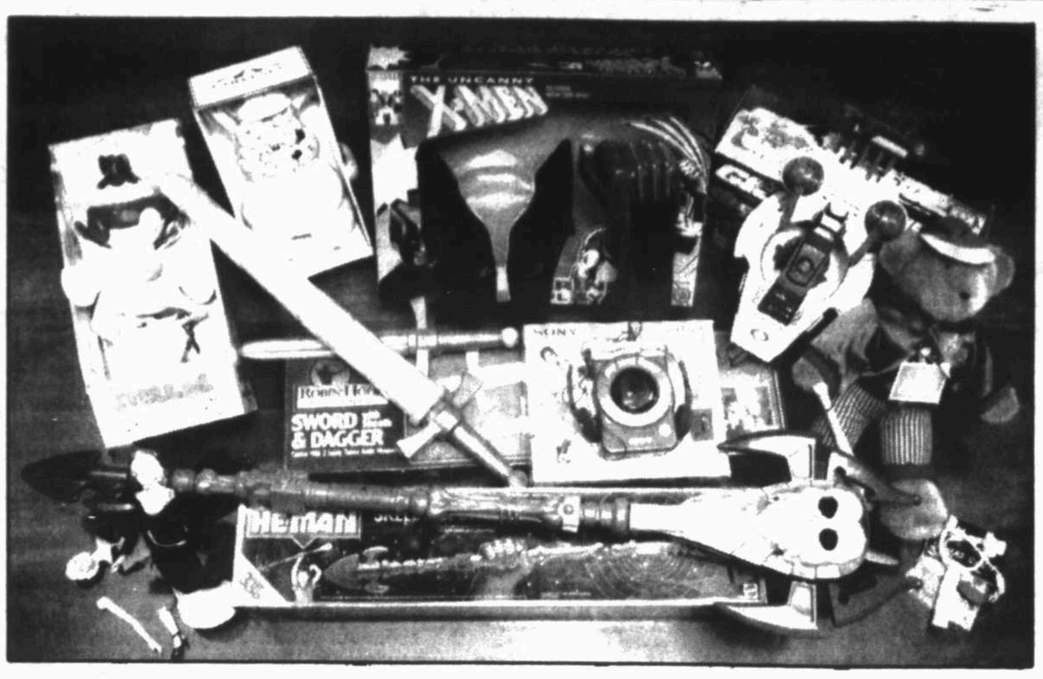

Toy companies targeted by the list generally stood by their products, although in a couple of cases they were no longer being made.

But one company, FAO Schwarz, decided to pull its Slugger Bear from its shelves while studying claims that an accompanying 8-inch baseball bat could be a choking hazard to young children.

"FAO Schwarz remains committed to high quality safe toys and will aggressively investigate this allegation," said Peter Harris, president of the company.

The list was compiled by Edward Swartz, a Boston trial attorney who has scoured the country for dangerous toys for 20 years.

On the list:

AP Laserphoto

These ten toys constitute Boston attorney Edward M. Swartz's annual "10 Worst Toys List" for 1991, respresenting toys that Swartz believes present unnecessary risks.

■ A Robin Hood-Prince of Thieves sword and dagger, both made from plastic. Swartz described these as "rigid and unforgiving enough to have the potential for causing serious injury." The manufacturer, Kenner Products, said the toy had been tested and the company received no complaints.

■ A gumball machine in the shape of a rabbit, made by Carousel Industries Inc. Swartz said the gumballs could cause choking in a toddler, but Leaf Inc., which owns Carousel, said: "In our decades of supplying gumball machines, we have never been informed of an instance where anyone choked on a gumball."

Government source: Indictment charges alleged terrorists

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department has obtained an indictment against alleged terrorists for the Dec. 21, 1988 bombing of Pan Am Flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland, a government source said Wednesday.

The indictment, which Justice Department officials were planning to announce at a press conference on Thursday, is the first set of criminal charges arising from the bomb, which destroyed the New York-bound airliner after it took off from London.

The specific nature of the charges, or the identity of the suspects could not be determined. But there have been reports that the international investigation was focusing on Libyan agents.

The bomb concealed in a radio-cassette recorder killed all 259 people on board and 11 on the ground.

The flight originated in Frankfurt, Germany, and changed aircraft in London.

The government source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, confirmed that federal prosecutors who have investigated the case had obtained a criminal indictment from a federal grand jury in Washington, D.C.

Without discussing the timing of an indictment, Acting Attorney General William P. Barr told senators Wednesday at his confirmation hearing to be attorney general that he was "very satisfied with the progress" of the investigation.

"The American people ultimately will be very, very proud of the job done by the federal agencies involved," Barr said.

Justice Department spokesman Paul J. McNulty also declined to answer questions about the timing of an indictment.

Little more than a week before the Lockerbie disaster, a notice was posted on a U.S. embassy bulletin board in Moscow relaying rumors of a threat against Pan Am flights from Frankfurt to the United States. It advised embassy personnel they might want to alter personal travel plans.

Senator says 'slave' remark misinterpreted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Montana Sen. Conrad Burns on Wednesday acknowledged "a lack of sensitivity" for saying he was going to an auction of "slaves" after last month's Senate vote on the civil rights bill.

"I didn't know at the time I had offended anyone," Burns, a Republican, said in a response to criticism by civil rights lobbyists who heard the remark.

The lobbyists said Burns made the comment to them as he entered an elevator off the Senate floor immediately after the vote.

"I was . . . stunned. When it sunk in, I found it offensive," said Claudia Withers, a lawyer for the Women's Legal Defense Fund who heard the remark.

Burns' remark was first reported Wednesday by The Washington Post, which said seven people had confirmed hearing it.

Press secretary Bryce Dustman said Burns was heading home after the vote to discuss with his son holding such an event to raise money for the youth's church confirmation class.

"He was asked, 'Where are you going?'" Dustman said. "He said he was going home to talk about having a slave auction," an event in which bidders "buy" students to do chores.

"He was making reference to what is a very common term in Montana . . . and in the Midwest, too," Dustman said.

In a prepared statement issued late Wednesday, Burns said:

"I can see that some people here might not have been to a slave auction and wouldn't know what I was talking about, but the thought didn't occur to me at the time. I can see now that there was a lack of sensitivity."

Chinese visitors see our sights

Already this week, Midlanders may have noticed the delegation of visitors to the Permian Basin being shown interesting sights in and around Midland. The five visitors are citizens of the People's Republic of China who arrived Sunday for a week-long stay in the Permian Basin during which they'll be exposed to the West Texas culture.

The visit is being carried out as part of a cultural exchange between the United States and China that began in 1986. Midland and a community in China called Dongying were selected as "sister cities" because both are strong petroleum-producing areas.

During the past several years, groups of Midlanders have visited Dongying. This is the fourth group of Chinese to visit Midland, according to local attorney Barry Beck, who is president of the Sister City Association.

Understandably, the visitors toured the site of Henry Petroleum Company's oilwell named "Dongying No. 1," the Odessa Petrochemical Complex and the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum. But their itinerary also called for stops at the Midland City Council meeting, a Midland College basketball game, Midland Park Mall, the Confederate Air Force facility and even Jewel/Osco grocery store.

That latter stop should prove interesting for the visitors since officials with the Sister City Association note that most families in China grow their own vegetables rather than buying them from a centralized location. That difference in our cultures is just one of many the visitors will experience while in the Permian Basin.

We hope the delegation finds Midland and the Permian Basin interesting and that our West Texas hospitality is pleasing to them. It is through such exchanges that we learn that while our differences are many, our cultures are more alike than dissimilar. Through that recognition we can come to appreciate our differences.

The sister city relationship with Dongying has been an enlightening one. We hope that it will continue and grow in future years.

LETTERS

Woman's letter elicits assistance

In response to Jo Wetzig's letter pertaining to her problem with the Midland Independent School District (MISD) and her child, I too am a parent who can empathize with your situation to a point. My child is a 5th grader in MISD schools who not only has health problems, but also learning disabilities.

Her learning disabilities don't fit the "mold" for placement in special education, and so we have also gone round and round with the school system to insure that she gets the education she deserves. This has been accomlished, but not without outside help and an open, working attitude with the school administrators.

At this point, Mrs. Wetzig has few alternatives. She should address her energies to an open mind in dealing with her child and the school system, or place the child in a private school. If she has not sought outside help medically and developmentally, she must do so. It is ultimately her responsibility to see that her child gets an education by whatever means necessary. We have had access to a myraid of medical professionals who directed us to independent agencies who test children with school problems. They are very much respected in our region, although not local agencies. With their help and testing, we had the information at hand, to treat, then had a direction and a plan for the educators to go by.

Mrs. Wetzig must find a professional that she trusts. It is a possibility that her child does need some medical attention. In reference to her statements about antidrugs, it is drug abuse that the schools deal with. Many of the drugs that are abused have medical purposes and treating a child with stimulants under a physician's care whom is trained in that area is not considered drug abuse.

The public school system is designed to educate the masses. They are under fire and not doing a very good job of educating. In Midland, overall we have a pretty dedicated group of teachers and administrators who do the best they can with the funding available and the state mandates. When you have a child who does not fit the average, it is a problem, but not unworkable. If you are cooperative, you will be surprised how the PEOPLE who work for the school system will try to help.

I am enclosing addresses and phone numbers of the professionals who have helped us.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, Nov. 14, the 318th day of 1991. There are 47 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Nov. 14, 1889, New York "World" reporter Nellie Bly (Elizabeth Cochrane) began her attempt to surpass the fictitious journey of Jules Verne's Phileas Fogg by traveling around the world in less than 80 days.

On this date:

In 1832, the first streetcar — a horse-drawn vehicle called the "John Mason" — first went into operation in New York City.

JACK ANDERSON

Public's discontent continues to grow

WASHINGTON — For 60 years, this has been a watchdog column that has supported the voiceless over the dominant, the helpless against their exploiters, the small enterprise above the octopus.

Anderson

Its role was established by the late Drew Pearson, who became the champion of the downtrodden during the Great Depression. Millions lived vicariously through him as he rooted out the scandals of his day and plagued the scoundrels beyond the reach of the common people.

Not since those grim early years has this column stirred such an anguished response. Mail floods into our office on waves of discontent — troubled letters from concerned readers. They feel threatened by shrinking incomes, rampant lawlessness, exploding costs, inept leadership and an uncertain, onrushing future.

They've lost confidence in their political leaders who debate yesterday's issues and ignore today's realities, who mismanage the government and let the economy drift, who put the special interests ahead of the public welfare, who raise their own salaries while the folks back home endure pay cuts, layoffs and forced retirement.

Those who write to us are worried, above all else, about the economic outlook. They're caught in a downturn that they fear could leave them with mortgages they can't pay. Parents no longer expect their children to live better than they did. Students no longer believe that a college degree will get them a job.

We've received thousands of letters from victims of crime who no longer trust the police to protect them, who feel that the courts are more concerned about protecting criminals than victims. So they're triple-bolting their doors, installing security systems and purchasing guns to protect themselves from marauding criminals.

In some neighborhoods, murder has become a commonplace response to trivial irritations. Legitimate enterprises are packing up to leave and drug pushing, theft and prostitution are the only thriving industries. The violence in these urban neighborhoods is beginning to spill over into the suburbs.

There are constant complaints, too, about the government's clamor for more revenue and its refusal to stop wasteful spending; the daily hours lost in gridlock traffic; the poor performance of our schools; and dozens of other frustrations and aggravations.

We've tried to be an advocate for the helpless against the mighty, the duped against the dupers. In a sense, our function is that of the steam vent. By letting off steam, we may help prevent the boiler from blowing up.

Desperate times could elbow aside the faceless politicians of the recent past and spawn a new wave of political demagogues in the David Duke mold.

LET US KNOW — We're interested in hearing about what bothers you in the current economic and political climate. The volume of our mail makes it impossible to answer all the letters. This doesn't mean we ignore them. We investigate as many complaints as we can and forward others to the proper authorities. Letters should be addressed to P.O. Box 2300, Washington, D.C., 20013.

MINI-EDITORIAL — The Pentagon deceived, hedged and outright lied in some cases to lead families to believe that their sons, husbands, brothers and fathers were killed by Iraqi soldiers during the Persian Gulf War. In reality, 35 of those people died by friendly fire, and the Pentagon in many cases is just getting around to admitting it. Now Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney says the delays in getting the straight story to the families were a "normal, natural part of the process." Cheney says it would have been worse to say someone was killed by friendly fire and then discover after more thorough investigation that it was enemy fire. Worse for whom? How about telling families the truth from the beginning, even if the truth means saying that the military isn't yet certain what happened.

Legislator's departure signals frustration

WASHINGTON — When one of the fastest rising stars in Congress' firmament decides he would rather not try to twinkle any more, his decision is an index of that institution's stresses. When Dennis Eckart, 41, announced that this, his sixth term will be his last, he expressed a frustration, deeply tinged with guilt, that is felt by many members: "I found myself making more family decisions over the telephone than at the kitchen table."

Will

After he said that, a number of congressional spouses called his wife to ask, "What did you put in his coffee?" And could they borrow a cup of it?

Even when he hasn't been traveling to and from his northeast Ohio district — up to 45 times in election years — late sessions in the House have often prevented him from getting home before his son, 11, is asleep.

Eckart is a liberal. He likes government. He was bred to the business. His father was a Euclid city councilor. When 6-year-old Dennis was asked if he wanted to be a councilor he replied, "No. Mayor." In 1960, at age 10, he met candidate Jack Kennedy at a political picnic.

He sped through college in three years and law school in two and after six years in the state legislature he came to Congress in 1980, at age 30. In 1990, he was one of the few incumbents to top his 1988 majority, winning 68 percent. He was on his way — perhaps just another decade would have done it — to a coveted chairmanship, of the Energy and Commerce Committee. But last December he left a letter under the Christmas tree promising his wife he would not run again. Six weeks ago he told his constituents:

"For 18 years I have placed my passion for politics and public service above the rest of my family and friends. At a very early age our son, Eddy, used to say that his Dad 'shakes hands for a living.' One year I was on airplanes more than 90 times. That's more than the total number of soccer games and swim meets I've been able to attend."

A few years ago he was asked to give an orientation speech to freshman Democratic members. He preached what he had long practiced: Go home constantly, do as many call-in radio shows as you can, keep your campaign organization in operation and a storefront office open. He now says, "I would give a different speech today."

Like many members he is dismayed by the increasing truculence of constituents who no longer ask for things, they demand them. He is tired of the treadmill of money raising. When asked if he would be retiring if there were public financing of campaigns (a remote possibility, given public hostility to the idea), he pauses but comes to no conclusion. He does say, with feeling, "You hate walking around with your hand out."

Eckart will be saying "enough" at the end of 12 years, the maximum length of service suggested by many proponents of term limits. He opposes term limits, but the logic of his congressional life, and his litany of widely shared dissatisfactions, buttress the case for them.

In the pell-mell pace of congressional life as he and many other people live it there is a glaring disproportion, an antic hyperkinesis, an extremism. It arises largely from the professionalization of politics by people who come to Congress — often at an early age, with no earlier career to turn back to — desperate for lifetime tenure. Members could lead less distorted lives, could spend less time massaging their districts, if they invested less importance in maximizing their security.

Eckart is a young man with an old soul, the result of a searing experience. No, the experience has not been service in Congress, but rather a lifetime rooting for the Cleveland Indians. He can rattle off the Indians' 1959 lineup. His retirement will mean he can go to more Indians games. No good deed goes unpunished.

His departure from the House, in the interest of his home, is indeed a good deed. There is no disparagement of his congressional career in the observation that nothing in that career has done him more credit than the leaving of it.

D.C. vote aims, shoots gun manufacturers

For a few brief moments the National Rifle Association thought it had it all. Then the voters of Washington, D.C., dealt it a terrible blow. They voted to make the manufacturers and gun dealers liable for any accidents and deaths caused by the weapons they made and sold.

Buchwald

The action produced wails of anguish from the NRA headquarters to the halls of Congress which the National Rifle Association now owns. I found an NRA lobbyist shredding his target vest in front of a congressman's office. "Has anyone ever perpetrated such a foul deed on the gun lovers of America?" he cried.

"The District voters have done you wrong," I said, handing him a Kleenex. "Congress controls this town with its purse strings. You must persuade the U.S. Legislature to declare all those who voted for the measure to be unconstitutional."

He gave me a fistful of money, mistaking me for the chairman of a committee, and said, "They said that if Pinto automobiles killed people the manufacturer must be held responsible, and they now say that if a drug is tainted with arsenic, you can sue the company who made the pills.

"But guns are different. If they kill that means they are doing what they are supposed to do. It's only when the bullet misses its target that the gun can be considered defective. If you bought a weapon to blow away your Aunt Frieda and succeeded, where are the damages?"

It was a good point. "The only time to sue," I said, "is if the gun does not fulfill its promise.

"Suppose I go and stick up a bank, which is unlikely since banks don't seem to have any money any more. I point my gun at the teller, and she isn't frightened. Could I complain to the manufacturer that he failed because he didn't put enough fear at the end of the barrel?"

He responded, "That's how ridiculous the entire anti-gun business is getting. Where is the liability for the maker once the gun is in the hands of an owner? Let us say that you shoot your neighbor's dog — accidentally or on purpose. How can the dog owner claim that the gun dealer is responsible when he was miles away from the trigger finger?"

The lobbyist was stacking piles of money on the floor of the hall.

"What are you doing?"

"Every time the voters go crazy we come up here and buy tables for political fund raisers that congressmen are holding. We want to make damn sure that our side is going to be heard, and in Washington money speaks so much more elegantly than words."

"Will the District of Columbia be punished for this dastardly act?"

He smiled bitterly, "Is the AK47 automatic?"

"What can the average citizen like myself do to show the gun manufacturers and dealers that I'm on their side?"

"Write to your congressman. Tell him he either gets the citizens of Washington, D.C., to see the light, or they'll lose their vote. We're not worried about the District itself — we're worried about the precedent. If the gun liability prevails, no gun owner will be safe from a lawsuit."

"I'll do it," I declared. "Not because I'm on the side of the gun makers and the dealers, but because it's right."

He stopped shredding his gun jacket. "Bless you."

FDA announces plan to speed up drug approval process

WASHINGTON — The federal government announced a plan Wednesday to speed up the process of approving new drugs for patients who most need them.

"Patients with serious and life-threatening diseases will benefit from earlier access to important new drugs," Vice President Dan Quayle said at a news conference also attended by Health and Human Services Secretary Louis W. Sullivan and Federal Drug Agency Commissioner David A. Kessler.

"Unnecessary regulatory burden will be eased and U.S. competitiveness will be strengthened," he said.

The initiative is based on recommendations from the President's Council of Competitiveness that Quayle chairs calling for 11 reforms in the regulatory process, including: setting strict time limits on approval studies, particularly for drugs targeted for terminal patients; allowing the use of foreign data to augment federal studies and computerizing the drug application process.

The FDA estimated these changes would reduce the time needed for approval of drugs for life-threatening diseases from 9.75 years to 5.5 years. The FDA estimated other drugs would take about seven years to be approved.

Kessler said some drugs already had been approved under an accelerated process, such as the anti-AID drugs known as DDI, approved in six months.

"DDI was approved in close cooperation with Canadian researchers working on the same project," Kessler said.

Since the FDA was founded, the government has disallowed the use of foreign data in its approval studies. "But confronted with a life-threatening disease and no other therapy, patients are willing to take risks and should be allowed to do so," said Kessler.

For years, AIDS activists have been calling on the government to allow accelerated approval. People diagnosed with the HIV virus believed to cause AIDS usually live only an additional 12 years, according to the FDA.

"We're really happy that they intend to shorten the time it takes drugs to reach people with AIDS," said Robert Rygor, a representative of the Aids Coalition to Unleash Power (ACT-UP) in New York City. "But we're still skeptical. We'll believe it when we see it — but, boy, would that be great."

Six weeks ago, hundreds of people from Rygor's group descended on Washington to protest the administration's alleged inaction on behalf of people with the AIDS virus. More than 50 ACT-UP members were arrested.

Mississippi clashes with high court over racial bias

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mississippi, once a bastion of segregation, clashed Wednesday in the Supreme Court with the Bush administration and blacks over charges that the state's higher education system perpetuates racial bias.

The state's claim that it has integrated its colleges and universities was disputed by the administration's top courtroom lawyer, who said freedom for students to enroll in the college of their choice is not enough.

Civil rights leaders say the dispute's outcome will affect other states where blacks are seeking greater educational opportunities.

Solicitor General Kenneth W. Starr argued for the administration that freedom of choice for black students is insufficient to overcome a 120-year history of separate and unequal education. The state began desegregating its colleges in 1962, when James Meredith was admitted to the University of Mississippi.

Starr said other Southern states have taken steps to upgrade the quality of education at formerly all-black schools and have made it easier for blacks to attend predominantly white colleges.

"Mississippi has chosen to say 'no' (and instead say), 'we're prepared to litigate to the hilt,' " Starr said.

But William Goodman Jr., representing Mississippi, said the issue is, "Can qualified black students freely choose" their college? "Happily, access to higher education is an accomplished fact" in Mississippi.

Goodman said the state has gone beyond merely offering freedom of choice and rejected the argument that the state must do more.

"The crux of this case is (the) belief that the predominantly black institutions are entitled to be enhanced," Goodman said. It is not up to the federal courts to order such a remedy, he said.

Alvin Chambliss Jr., representing Mississippi blacks who sued over unequal education, said the state still practices "apartheid," or racial separation.

House OKs family-leave bill; veto threatened

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House approved Wednesday a Senate-passed bill guaranteeing many workers up to 12 weeks of unpaid leave in family emergencies, but by less than the two-thirds majority that would be needed to override President Bush's threatened veto.

The final vote was 253-177, leaving supporters 34 votes short of a veto-proof majority.

"We're a long way from where we'd like to be," Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo. and a leading supporter of the bill, said.

The legislation, which last month won Senate approval on a vote of 65-32, is a slightly scaled-back version of the bill Bush vetoed a year ago. His veto threat against the latest version was renewed Wednesday in a statement from the White House budget office.

The House vote came as Democrats were trying to increase the pressure on Bush on domestic issues and at a time when Bush's popularity is suffering from the recession.

But it also marked the second time in a week that House Democratic leaders have failed to muster a veto-proof majority on a top domestic issue. Only last week House Democrats fell short of the two-thirds majority to block enforcement of Bush's regulation banning abortion counseling in federally aided family-planning clinics.

Supporters actually acheved a two-thirds majority on a preliminary vote, 287-143, to substitute a version nearly identical to the Senate-passed version for the stronger original House bill. But 34 House members abandoned the bill on final passage.

"Members like to have it both ways," said Rep. Marge Roukema, R-N.J., the leading GOP sponsor.

Roukema said she would renew her request to meet with Bush to discuss the bill and held out hopes Bush might relent in his veto threat. She said supporters had gained 21 votes over last year.

"It's not veto proof, but let's say the White House reads trends too ... and the trend is clear," Roukema said.

The family and medical leave bill would require employers of 50 or more employees to guarantee workers up to 12 weeks of unpaid leave due to illness, the birth or adoption of a child, or to care for an ill family member.

Supporters said such a leave policy should be a the minimum in an economy in which two incomes are a necessity for many families.

Poll shows Edwards leads Louisiana governor's race

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A new poll shows Edwin Edwards leading Louisiana's hotly contested governor's race, but an analyst said Wednesday that a large number of undecided voters still could swing Saturday's runoff in favor of David Duke.

Edwards, a Democrat seeking an unprecedented fourth term, spent Wednesday campaigning in the New Orleans area. Duke, a Republican and former Ku Klux Klan leader, worked the Lafayette area in the south-central part of the state.

A telephone poll conducted last Wednesday through Sunday by the University of New Orleans Research Center showed that 52 percent of respondents favored Edwards and 26 percent supported Duke. Twenty-two percent were undecided.

Edwards still led by 46 percent to 40 percent after adjusting the survey for an expected "hidden vote" of people who don't want to admit they support Duke, pollster Susan Howell said.

"However, there was a week to go in this race when we completed the poll, and because of the emotion involved in this campaign, that's an eternity," she said. The adjusted survey found 14 percent undecided.

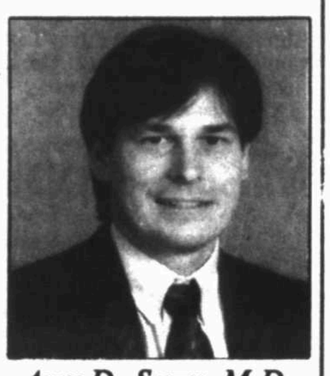

The university surveyed 701 registered voters. The poll had a margin for error of plus or minus 3.6 percentage points.

Trustees will be all 'ears' at community forums

■ The first of seven community meetings held by MISD will begin tonight.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Midland school board trustees say they intend to be all ears at upcoming community meetings.

"We primarily will be there to listen to what people have to say," said school board president Ken Marks. "The meetings will not be the place where decisions are made. This is the community's opportunity to make their wishes known to the school board."

The first community meeting will be in Marks' District 7, beginning 7 p.m. tonight at Quanah Parker Elementary School, 3800 Norwood.

Meetings will continue through Dec. 10. One elementary school in each district will host the community forums.

"We want to go to the people in each district," Marks said. "Anyone can attend who is a resident of MISD. They don't have to be in that district or have children in schools to attend."

At a recent board retreat, trustees discussed issues — including the addition of a new junior high and elementary school — which will affect the district in the next couple of years.

The school board president said, "I know that one of the big things which will be expressed will be drawing the boundary lines for Greathouse Elementary School (to be located north of Briarwood Road on the extension of Mathis Street) and Abell Junior High School (to be located south of the extension of Wadley Street and west of Loop 250).

"Boundaries will be especially important for the junior high school since the lines will have to be drawn to accommodate four junior highs, rather than three.

School board trustee Adela Marmolejo of District 2 said that principals and Parent Teacher Associations are "getting the word out" about the meetings. "We just selected the dates at the board meeting two weeks ago," she said.

"I haven't received any phone calls about the meetings," said Gary Willis of District 6. "However, people have asked about them in face-to-face conversations in school hallways," he said.

Willis said he is "looking forward to all seven meetings."

"I want to find out what the community wants," he said. "If people want to make a difference, they need to come to the meetings now, while it will have the most impact on the what the board and administration does with the issues."

Jackie Hamilton, MISD trustee for District 4, said she has been speaking to PTA boards in her districts about the meetings.

"Most people are pretty excited about coming to the meetings. This is the public's opportunity to tell us their opinion on any of the items listed on the agenda open for discussion," Ms. Hamilton said. "Board members will be at the meetings to gather information."

Willis said, "It's better to come in on the front end of the process rather than the back end when all the deliberations are through and then saying: 'We don't like the decisions that were made.' People need to come to the meetings now to make a difference."

Agenda items open for discussion will include cluster bus routes, junior high and elementary school boundaries and regrouping cluster schools.

The schedule for the community meetings follows. All meetings begin at 7 p.m.

■ Tonight — Quanah Parker Elementary School, 3800 Norwood, in Marks' District 7.

■ TUESDAY — Bush Elementary, 5001 Preston Drive, in Gary Willis' District 6.

■ DEC. 5 — Emerson Elementary, 2800 Moss Ave., in George Staley's District 5.

■ JAN. 13 — Bonham Elementary, 909 Bonham St., in Jack Hightower's District 3.

■ JAN. 16 — Crockett Elementary, 401 E. Parker, in Adela Marmolejo's District 2.

■ JAN. 23 — Bowie Elementary, 805 Elk Ave., in Jackie Hamilton's District 4.

Party honors teen's birthday

Staff Report

Friends of Rob Lawson, the teen-age victim of a Sept. 11 shooting accident, will gather to celebrate his 14th birthday 7:30-9:30 p.m. tonight.

Rob is in a rehabilitation center in Dallas.

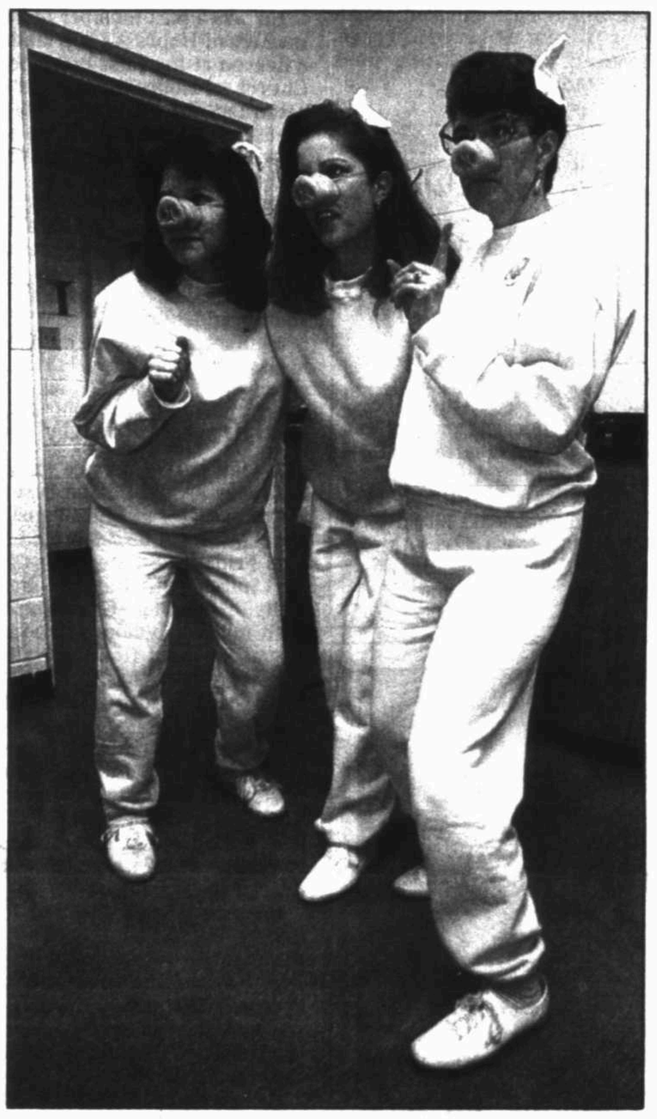

Friends and family will celebrate his birthday at Midland Youth Center, 1001 W. Illinois. The youth center is providing the space for the party and businesses and individuals are donating all refreshments and prizes.

Admission is $5 persons of all ages.

"Every penny raised will go into the Rob Lawson trust fund," said Janet Swallow, executive director of the youth center. "Texas Refreshments is providing drinks. We will have a cake, chances on prizes which have been donated and we will also have a drawing for a baseball autographed by Nolan Ryan."

Experts restore fort's buildings

By Rick Smith

SAN ANGELO (AP) — The most important historical items at Fort Concho National Historic Landmark aren't ancient maps or carefully preserved weapons or yellowed telegrams and letters.

"The buildings are the most valuable thing we have as far as our collection, because they are irreplaceable," said John Neilson historian-archivist at the fort.

A team of Fort Concho research and preservation experts currently are involved in a project to restore the fort's most important building — the headquarters — to a close approximation of its original condition.

Other members of the restoration team include Kathy Roland, curator of collections; Bob Broene, facilities manager; and Mario Rios, grounds-maintenance worker.

The fort's Headquarters Building is not only a San Angelo landmark, but it's also a unique example of frontier architecture, Neilson said.

As far as he can determine, the Headquarters Building is the only original fort headquarters or administration building from its time period still in existence.

"There are restorations," he pointed out, "and there are buildings from other time periods, but ours is unique."

That uniqueness made restoration efforts more difficult for the team because they had no examples of similar frontier headquarters buildings to study.

"We wrote to 50 other sites asking for information," Neilson said.

They received only three period photographs, and, working from the photos, historic descriptions and "plain logic," the team had to figure out how the building's interior looked more than 100 years ago.

"As best as we can tell, what we've done is authentic," Neilson said.

"From fort records, we know the uses of the rooms. It's hard to know how things were arranged, though."

After the military abandoned the fort in 1889, it was used first as a boarding house, then an apartment building, then as a city museum.

"That's why this building survived — because it was used," Neilson said. "People lived in these buildings and took care of them."

During those years, different owners modernized the building in various ways.

The first phase of the restoration was to strip away exposed electrical lines and gas pipes, fluorescent lights, ceiling fans and old museum display cases.

Next, workers stripped the walls back to their original plaster and replastered and repainted them.

Floors also were stripped and refinished and unauthentic ceilings pulled down.

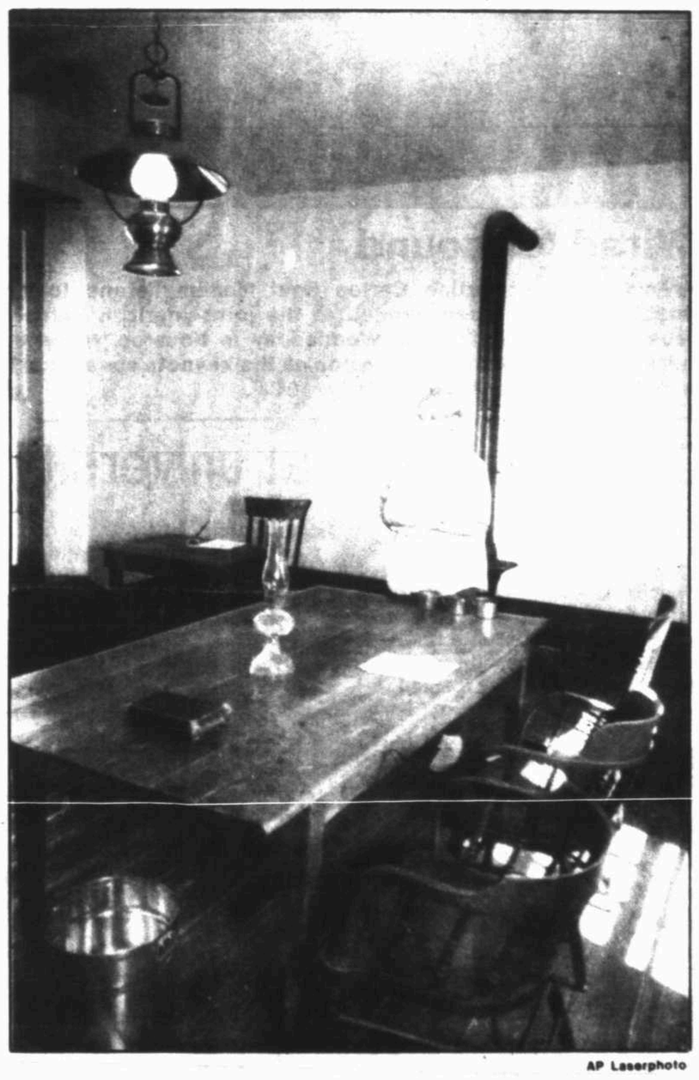

Pulling down the ceilings exposed workers to "lots of antique dust," Broene said.

"It was terrible," he said, laughing. "It's amazing how much dust a ceiling can collect in a century."

The restoration began last January. Three rooms have been restored, thus far, including a large room used for military court-martials, an office shared by the post's clerk and orderly and an office used by the post adjutant — the commander's assistant.

After the rooms' walls, ceilings and floors were restored to 1880s-authenticity, the restoration team began searching for furnishings to make the rooms look much as they did when soldiers worked in them.

Orchard ranks as top pick in saving water

■ Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry gave praise to the water-saving irrigation technique used by a local pecan orchard.

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

Texas Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry, in Midland Wednesday, gave praise first to local use of water-saving irrigation techniques and later to a group of Republican women's dedication to the party.

Perry

The commissioner, saying the state's water is as important as its oil, described the pecan orchard of David and Kathy Harris as one example of the success of new water-saving techniques.

Touring the Harris' orchard southeast of Midland, Perry said the drip irrigation method they use is one of the most efficient available.

"Water is the most important resource we have, and pecans, one of our important crops," Perry said. "We used to flood these orchards, but new techniques have allowed growers to get good results with a lot less water."

People in the agriculture industry were the first conservationists, said Perry.

"This operation clearly emphasizes the fact that economic prosperity and conservation are compatible in today's agriculture," he said. The effects of uneven rainfall and periods of hot, dry weather can be overcome with the drip method, Perry said.

"We really wouldn't have enough water with any other type of irrigation," Mr. Harris said.

The method dispenses one and a half gallons per hour onto the tree roots with a constant drip.

"To think that a garden hose can put out seven or eight gallons per minute, this is an incredible water savings," Perry said.

Norman Winter, executive director of the Texas Pecan Growers Association, said the industry has a bright future in Texas, and West Texas orchards are a growing part of the production.

"We're seeing new plantings out here, new production as it moves west," Winter said. "This is a tremendous growing area, with good opportunity for disease control and insect control. With plenty of water, West Texas could become very important."

Like pecan industry efforts, conservation movements are underway in Texas' High Plains area, where farmers are using low energy precision application (LEPA) methods.

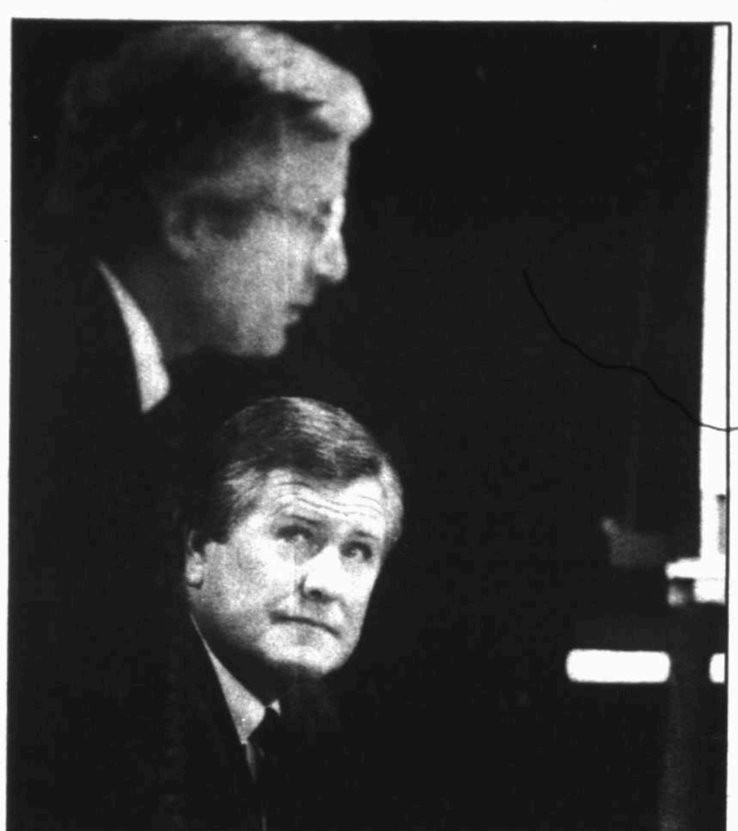

"We used to lose 30 to 40 percent to evaporation," Perry said. "This method keeps water at ground level. We're seeing a 70 percent decrease in water use.

"A great many conservation efforts are going on," the commissioner said. "The agriculture in-

Trial date for Lewis set for Jan. 27

AP Laserphoto

House Speaker Gib Lewis watches as his attorney Tim Evans addresses the court in a pre-trial hearing Wednesday.

AUSTIN (AP) — A judge Wednesday set Jan. 27 as the trial date for House Speaker Gib Lewis, who faces misdemeanor ethics charges.

But a trial may come earlier if State District Judge Bob Perkins' court docket thins out, or possibly later if Lewis' attorneys seek to move the trial out of town.

Lewis, D-Fort Worth, declined to talk to reporters about the case, but his lead counsel, Tim Evans of Fort Worth, said the speaker is eager to face a jury.

"We're confident that he's going to be acquitted," Evans said.

Lewis, 55, was indicted Dec. 28 on charges that he violated state ethics laws by receiving a gift from a powerful San Antonio law firm, and then failed to report the benefit on his public financial disclosure statement.

Lewis has denied any wrongdoing, and has criticized Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle for the investigation.

On Wednesday, Evans down played the seriousness of the charges in relation to the publicity about the case.

"Sometimes things like this are just like an avalanche. You start off with a little snowball and before anybody can look up, they're being swamped," he said.

During a pre-trial hearing Wednesday, Evans unsuccessfully tried to have Perkins reject the first indictment and force prosecutors to turn over testimony given by witnesses before the grand jury.

Assistant District Attorney Mike Lynch argued that the secret testimony did not have to be turned over to Lewis' legal team until after the witness publicly testified at the trial.

On Evans' motion to kill the second indictment, because he said it was written incorrectly, Perkins said he would study that issue further.

Evans also has filed a motion for a change of venue, claiming that Lewis cannot get a fair trial in Austin because of pre-trial publicity surrounding the case.

But, he said, if he pursues that motion he will wait until the trial date gets closer.

"Just common sense will tell you that if you're taking the pulse of the community, it's better to take the pulse of the community as near to the trial as you can take it," he said.

Perkins said that if his court schedule clears out, it is possible to start a trial next month. But, he set a Jan. 27 date and said that if Evans files for a change of venue, a hearing can be held the week before that.

Storytelling guild sets event

Staff Report

ODESSA — "Tale Twisters: A Night of Storytelling" is set for 8 p.m. Saturday at the Globe Theatre on the Odessa College campus.

The annual event is sponsored by the West Texas Storytelling Guild.

The benefit evening is produced by local storytellers who hope to spread the art of tale trading across West Texas. The program is designed to appeal to grown-ups and children.

Tickets, priced at $5, are selling fast. To reserve tickets call Emily Waddell, 570-8608, Annalon Gilbreath, 694-7692, Cindy Harbour, 1-367-6414, or Ritzie Williford, 699-7820.

Proceeds from the event go to play for a professional storyteller to come to West Texas in February to present a performance and a workshop for the public and to perform in six area schools.

Local storytellers participating in the event include Ms. Gilbreath, Susay Hardy, James Jordan, Anne Severson, Peggy Siegal, Elizabeth Smith, Marilyn Teague, Kay Veale 'Klynky," "Debbie Waddell "Drama Mama," and Ms. Waddell.

FORT: Building is historic

(From 1B)

Some of the furnishings, such as a wood stove, are from that era.

One piece, a table in the court-martial room, was actually used in the room during the fort's heyday.

Other pieces, such as a bugler's table, were painstakingly reproduced by the fort's craftsmen.

Craftsmen also built bannisters to keep the public at arm's length from the collections.

A fourth room currently is being restored, and the restoration team hopes eventually to restore the entire first floor of the building.

"Over the years, people thought of this as the museum building where all the collections were housed, and not as the fort's Headquarters Building," Broene said.

"When the building's restored, when it looks like it did back in the fort's day, I think people will begin to realize how important it was — and is."

Big Spring hosts events

Speaking to a luncheon meeting of the Midland County Republican Women's Club later, Perry gave vigorous praise to the group's efforts. He said women's political successes were an important aspect of the party evolution.

"A lot of the molds are being broken," Perry said. "Republican women are doing a lot of the mold-breaking."

Further, the commissioner emphasized the "extreme importance" of upcoming 1992 elections and urged the group to continue its recruitment efforts.

"This is going to be the most important election for a decade," he said. "I want for Texas a majority Republican House and Senate."

He told the group the Justice Department's invalidation of the state's redistricting plan was a move toward "fair lines" for representation.

"We want opportunity for people of like minds, like philosophies to vote together," Perry said.

Bingo generates 5 percent for charity, panel told

AUSTIN (AP) — A House committee began an investigation Wednesday into the multimillion-dollar Texas bingo business, which one state official said returns only 5 cents of each dollar to the charities the games were supposed to benefit.

Frank Coniglio, who supervises bingo compliance for the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission, told lawmakers that 75 cents of each dollar spent on bingo goes to prizes, 6 cents to hall rental, 7 cents to taxes and 7 cents for expenses.

Coniglio told the House General Investigating Committee that bingo receipts total about $624 million annually. With a large amount going to prizes, he said, the money going to charities "is not as big a share as it could be."

The TABC, which took over bingo regulation from the state comptroller's office, and the Travis County district attorney have been looking into allegations of profit skimming, theft, illegal games and other improprieties.

Joe Darnall, TABC general counsel, said in an interview that while the law was designed to help veterans groups, churches, volunteer fire departments and other charities, "The amount actually going to charity is a remarkably small percentage."

A big problem, Darnall said, is that large amounts of cash change hands often in bingo.

"The nature of the beast is such that you've got hundreds of thousands of dollars, in small denomination unmarked bills, floating around before they ever reach a point of accountability," he said. "There is a perception that something is terribly wrong."

But a bingo organization leader said government is to blame for many problems.

"These people (lawmakers) don't know what they're talking about when they talk about bingo. They make all these crazy laws, these senile people up there sleeping. They don't know what's going on," said Chuck Bertani of Houston, president of the Bingo Operators of Texas.

"I think they should look at how this is being governed. They should eliminate some of the rules and regulations that have made it so difficult to run a decent game," said Bertani, who operates two commercial bingo halls.

Bertani tried to speak to the House committee, but Chairman Doyle Willis ruled him out of order. Willis said Wednesday's meeting was to hear from regulators and that other hearings would be held to take public testimony.

Willis, D-Fort Worth, later declined to respond when asked about Bertani's comments. When a reporter asked if commercial bingo operators should be eliminated, Willis walked away.

Committee counsel L. DeWitt Hale said the investigation was begun because "we have reason to believe, on the basis of complaints that have come in, that there's a lot of abuse in this." He would not specify what complaints had been received.

Coniglio said about 1,800 charitable organizations are licensed to run bingo games, and about 520 licenses have been issued to commercial lessors.

Hale told the committee that 111 commercial lessors reported rental income of more than $100,000 a year. Of those, 39 reported income of $200,000 to $300,000, 24 had incomes of $300,000 to $400,000 and five reported income of more than $400,000, he said.

The committee's inquiry comes at a time when some bingo players, operators and charities have questioned whether the state is trying to eliminate the industry.

Couple who chained child denied visits

FORT WORTH (AP) — A court master denied child visitation rights Wednesday to a couple jailed since authorities found their starving 13-year-old boy chained inside their trailer home.

Jean Hudson Boyd, Tarrant County juvenile court master, issued the order while granting the state temporary custody of Jay and Linda Hill's two boys, Stephen and Douglas, 12.

Robert Hoover, a court appointed attorney for the boys, agreed to the order but insisted that the parents be denied custody.

The court master said the Hills may seek visitation once they are released from jail.

The order also stipulates that the parents be psychologically tested.

The Hills, who did not qualify financially for a court-appointed attorney, did not appear at the hearing and were not represented.

Tarrant County prosecutors have said they plan to seek a kidnapping indictment against the couple, who have been jailed since Nov. 4 and face charges of injury to a child.

On Wednesday, Stephen remained in a coma and in critical condition at a Fort Worth hospital. He also was suffering a blood infection caused by malnutrition, doctors said. The bruised, 55-pound teen had a heart attack Nov. 3. He weighs about half what a child his age should.

Hoover said he didn't want the Hills visiting their children until he had completed his investigation of the case.

"Stephen's condition is so grave, I just don't want them to have access. I just fear for the condition he's in and how he got into that condition," Hoover said.

Mrs. Hill has told police that she and her husband, an engineer for General Dynamics, disciplined Stephen by chaining him inside their trailer home and depriving him of food.

Tubal ligation becomes fast growing birth control

Because of higher marriage rates in the Third World and China, voluntary female sterilization is also the most widely used method for women in general in those countries, the journal said. In the United States, birth control pills are slightly more popular, Rinehart said.

BALTIMORE (AP) — Tubal ligation has become the world's most popular method of birth control among married women in developed and Third World countries, according to a Johns Hopkins University journal.

An estimated 138 million women have undergone the procedure, making it one of the fastest growing family planning methods, Population Reports said in its November issue. The number of women who have undergone tubal ligation has increased by 45 percent since 1984, an increase of 43 million, the report said.

"The major reason for the growth of voluntary female sterilization in developing countries is expanding services," the report said. "When services become available, women use them and tell others about them."

Among developed countries, the procedure is most popular in the United States, where 7.5 million, or 23 percent, of married women of reproductive age have undergone the procedure, the journal said.

Pam Harper, of the New York-based Association for Voluntary Surgical Contraception, said the report was not surprising.

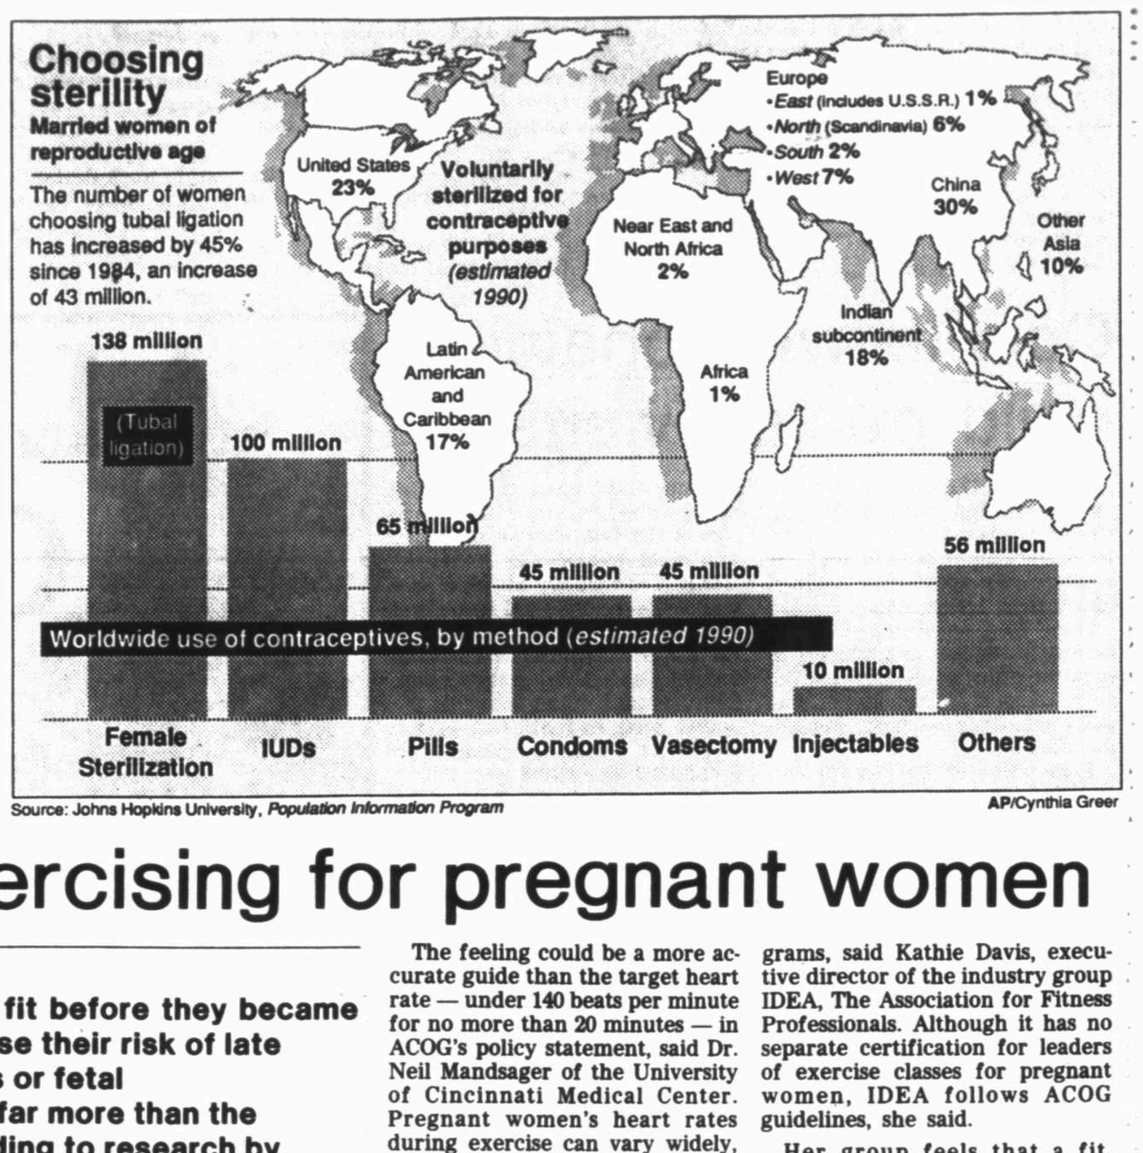

"There are many, many possible explanations, I don't think we know them all," Ms. Harper said. "Many times, women simply want to stop having children. Many people don't have a lot of choices of methods, or it's hard to get contraceptives."

The journal compiled data from surveys by governments and organizations worldwide. Contraceptive sales figures and other related data were also used to extrapolate the figures, said Ward Rinehart, editor of Population Reports.

Because of higher marriage rates in the Third World and China, voluntary female sterilization is also the most widely used method for women in general in those countries, the journal said. In the United States, birth control pills are slightly more popular, Rinehart said.

The procedure can be reversed in some cases, but it involves major surgery and because of that family planning counselors tell women to think of the procedure as permanent.

"If you look at the profile of use, they're older women, 35 and older for the most part," Rinehart said."If you've decided you don't want any more children, it's safe and there are no long-term side effects."

Researchers re-evaluate exercising for pregnant women

Exercisers who were fit before they became pregnant did not increase their risk of late placental complications or fetal abnormalities by doing far more than the standard advice, according to research by Dr. James F. Clapp III of Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Should a woman six to nine months pregnant jog? The idea used to make doctors shudder. But researchers are discovering that pregnant women are capable of more than had been expected.

Exercisers who were fit before they became pregnant did not increase their risk of late placental complications or fetal abnormalities by doing far more than the standard advice, according to research by Dr. James F. Clapp III of Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland.

There's little evidence that vigorous weight-bearing exercise (for instance, running or aerobic dancing) would result in such problems as premature labor, according to Clapp, a professor of reproductive biology. However, he said, there isn't enough data to be sure.

Clapp found some indications that endurance exercisers beyond the 28th week of pregnancy had a tendency to bear lower-weight babies and that the babies tended to be born early.

As a rule, either condition can be associated with health problems for the baby. Clapp said these infants may have less fat at birth.

More important is whether dedicated exercisers gain too little weight — less than 25 or 30 pounds — while pregnant, said Dr. Raul Artal, a professor of obstetrics and gynecology at the medical school of the University of Southern California.

Artal and Clapp noted possible benefits for exercise while pregnant.

Clapp reported that infants of women who continued to exercise during pregnancy had fewer signs of health problems immediately after birth than did infants of non-exercisers.

Artal said women who exercised seemed to endure labor better, although exercise didn't shorten labor.

And a study to be published next month indicates that exercise alone can control diabetes in women who develop it as a result of being pregnant, he said. This could keep such women from having to take insulin, he said.

Current standard advice, as outlined by the American College of Sports Medicine and the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, stays on the conservative side. Both recommend no more than moderate exercise.

"As physicians, we have an obligation to err on the safe side," said Artal, who is developing a revision of the ACOG position statement, issued in 1985.

Artal strongly favors moderate rather than vigorous exercise for pregnant women and suggested that exercisers shoot for a level of intensity that feels moderate to them.

The feeling could be a more accurate guide than the target heart rate — under 140 beats per minute for no more than 20 minutes — in ACOG's policy statement, said Dr. Neil Mandsager of the University of Cincinnati Medical Center. Pregnant women's heart rates during exercise can vary widely, he said.

Clapp said he reviewed the guidelines under development, and felt they were "conservative relative to my research experience." That's because ACOG wants any proposed revision to be applicable to trained and untrained exercisers alike, he said.

Clapp would prefer separate guidelines that could give trained women more leeway.

The doctors said exercise classes for pregnant women may push the women too hard or promise them too much.

The exercise industry has an increasing number of such programs, said Kathie Davis, executive director of the industry group IDEA, The Association for Fitness Professionals. Although it has no separate certification for leaders of exercise classes for pregnant women, IDEA follows ACOG guidelines, she said.

Her group feels that a fit, healthy woman can maintain her normal fitness but should put off competition training, Davis said. A beginner should start slowly and increase gradually, she said.

Walking, biking and swimming are good aerobic exercises, and swimming is probably the best for pregnant women because it causes the least stress, said physical therapist Mary DeLaney of Reston, Va.

Her pregnancy exercise classes also focus floor exercises on strengthening muscle groups affected by pregnancy, such as those in the back, abdomen and pelvis.

Vitamin B-6 may help cure morning sickness

By Jean Carper

Women with severe nausea during pregnancy may want to talk to their physicians about taking vitamin B-6. The idea the vitamin might help control morning sickness was proposed in the 1940s, but proof of effectiveness was lacking.

Carper

Now, researchers at the University of Iowa have conducted a carefully controlled study, showing that fairly high doses of B-6 may help prevent severe nausea and vomiting during pregnancy. However, the vitamin pills did not block morning sickness in those with only mild to moderate nausea.

In the study, 59 women with pregnancy nausea took a 25 milligram tablet of B-6 or a placebo (inactive) tablet every eight hours for 72 hours. The recommended dietary allowance (RDA) of B-6 for pregnant women is 2.2 mg a day.

Twelve of the women suffered from severe nausea; but after taking B-6, only one woman continued to be nauseated. That compared with half of those getting the dummy placebo pill.

The researchers also advised frequent small meals, rich in carbohydrates, to suppress nausea during pregnancy.

Although B-6 is generally considered safe at the doses used in the study, check with your physician before self-medicating.

Coffee and glaucoma patients

Should people with glaucoma drink regular coffee? Some studies show that caffeine raises the eye's intraocular pressure slightly, which could be detrimental; but others show caffeine doesn't make enough difference to worry about.

For example, one study by researchers at the University of Illinois at Chicago found that drinking two cups of regular coffee raised intraocular pressure more than drinking caffeine-free herbal tea did after 90 minutes. Still, the scientists concluded the effect was not enough to discourage glaucoma patients from drinking caffeinated coffee.

Richard F. Brubaker, M.D., chairman of ophthalmology at Mayo Clinic, who has studied the matter, agrees. He tells his patients with glaucoma it's OK to drink caffeinated coffee if they want. He points out that drinking any fluid, even water, raises the pressure in the eye, and that adding coffee and caffeine "probably makes little difference."

"We feel caffeine is not important enough to saddle people with oppressive do's and don'ts for a lifetime," says Dr. Brubaker.

Comfort Me With Oranges

Nature has slipped another one of those potent drugs into our food supply. And scientists are plenty excited about discovering it. It's called D-glucarate. In animals, it lowers cholesterol and helps block cancer at several stages.

It may be one reason fruits like oranges are linked to lower cancer rates. One analysis found oranges exceptionally high in D-glucarate. The new wonder chemical was also detected in apples, cherries, bean sprouts, potatoes and broccoli. It's also produced by the body in small amounts.

Scientists are struck by how potent D-glucarate seems to be in suppressing cell proliferation — excessive growth that can lead to cancer. The chemical has reportedly blocked such cell growth by 30 to 95 percent. When fed to animals that are dosed with cancer-causing agents, D-glucarate has helped squelch breast, lung, liver, skin and colon cancer. It worked both against the beginning and later stages of cancer.

Experts say eating food rich in D-glucaric acid may reduce the risk of cancer. Eventually, the chemical might be made into an anti-cancer drug.

Device not recommended for pregnant women

BOSTON (AP) — A device widely used to monitor pregnant women at home fails to prevent premature delivery, costs too much and should never have been approved for routine use, a group of obstetricians contend.

In a report published, the doctors criticized the U.S. Food and Drug Administration for approving the device without proof that it actually lowers the risk of delivering too early.

The device, called the Genesis home uterine activity monitor, is intended to detect preterm labor early so it can be stopped. It was approved a year ago and has been used so far by more than 75,000 women, according to its maker, Tokos Medical Corp. of Santa Ana, Calif.

"We definitely don't think it should have been approved. It is a very bad example of how technology is getting into clinical practice with great cost without any proof of benefit," said Dr. Benjamin P. Sachs of Beth Israel Hospital in Boston.

A report critical of the device was written by Sachs and four other doctors, most of them prominent in the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists. It was published in the New England Journal of Medicine.

The device was approved only to monitor the pregnancies of women who already had given birth prematurely. The critics said they believed, through conversations with other doctors, that the device already is being widely used by women who are not in this high-risk category.

However, Craig Davenport, president of Tokos, contended in an interview that the device is being used appropriately, and insurance companies refuse to pay for those who do not need it.

Use of the device costs $5,000 per pregnancy. Women strap the monitors to their abdomens to record the contractions of their uteruses. Twice a day they send the recordings by telephone to central offices, where nurses look for early signs of premature labor.

If evidence of labor is found, the women are treated in an effort to stop them from delivering, often by giving them uterus-relaxing drugs.

"The device's role is a tool that can be used for surveillance of patients with the intent of detecting conditions that may lead to preterm labor," said Davenport.

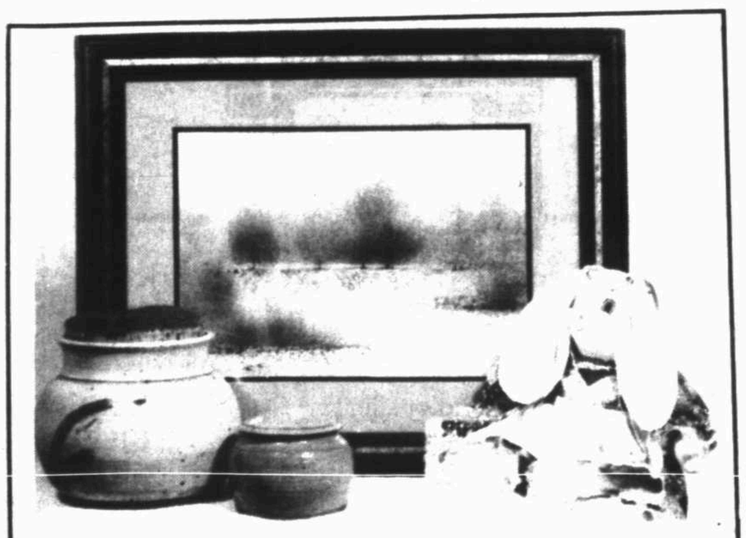

Early contractions can be so subtle that women are not aware of them until it is too late to stop the labor.

In a separate response in the journal, Dr. Lillian Yin of the FDA disagreed with the doctors' contention that the device is worthless.

"The FDA believes that the ability of the device to alert providers to the patient's need for prompt medical attention has clinical benefit in itself," she wrote.

Preterm delivery is the major underlying cause of infant mortality.

Lauren creates modern classics

By Bernadime Morris
N.Y. Times News Service

Ralph Lauren, in a masterly spring fashion show, proved that it is as important to a designer to know who he is and what he stands for as it is to the women who wear his clothes.

He cut his way through the dross and uncertainty of current fashion, presenting what he does best: classic clothes with a modern slant.

In absolute control of his craft, he proved that clothes can be classic without being boring, topical without being tacky, and lovely to look at as well.

The point of departure was the nautical theme. Spurred by the sailing clothes he designed for America-3, one of the teams competing for the America's Cup next year, he made anoraks, peacoats and jackets in bright leather.

He showed them over stretch navy bodysuits and jump suits, giving the sailor suit fresh standing in the fashion world.

It is not necessary to go anywhere near the water to appreciate his navy blue princess dresses with white braid decorating the neckline or collar, or his quiet navy suits with fitted jackets and flared pants.

Details like gold toggle closings, buttons and insignia emphasize the nautical theme. The gently fitted suits are so well cut that they work in yellow, green and bright blue with matching buttons instead of the gold ones.

A particularly whimsical touch that also works is the revival of the masculine tailored suit as worn in the 1930's by stars like Garbo and Dietrich.

WHAT MAKES THEM such eye-openers is the fact that they are worn with shirts and men's neckties, proving that it is indeed true that women can look devastating in men's clothes.

Sometimes he is less than a purist, adding a short, softly flaring skirt or a long one to the jacket-and-tie get-up.

Dress-up clothes maintain a similar austerity. A pea jacket in navy organza floating over navy pants, a T-shirt covered with navy sequins interrupted by horizontal gold stripes, and crisply flaring white dresses in cotton pique or faille — nothing fancy, just confident chic.

At a time when fashion seems to have lost its moorings, Lauren makes waves by doing what comes naturally.

On a more modest scale Christian Francis Roth also added luster to the fashion showings.

He possesses a discreet talent that is quite different from any other designer's. Each season he stands fashion on its head, developing a fresh train of thought. There is a touch of the custom designer's craft in his work.

His jumping-off point for spring is the men's dinner jacket. He literally turns it upside down and sideways as he uses it as a design element in women's clothes, all in black and white.

He takes one lapel off a neckline and ties it around the waist as a belt. He wraps half a jacket around a dresss. While he is deconstructing fashion, he is also building it up.

THE MOST AMUSING styles are decorated with advertising slogans ("Ask the woman who owns one" inscribed around a diamond ring) or cocktail glasses.

Three-dimensional appliques of cherries, orange slices or other garnishes give verisimiltude to the cocktails.

Orange or lime slices appliqued on the bras of outfits in the cocktail series are the only signs of questionable taste; he usually has a delicacy that is quite enchanting.

The mind boggles at the fashion choices Michael Kors offers for spring.

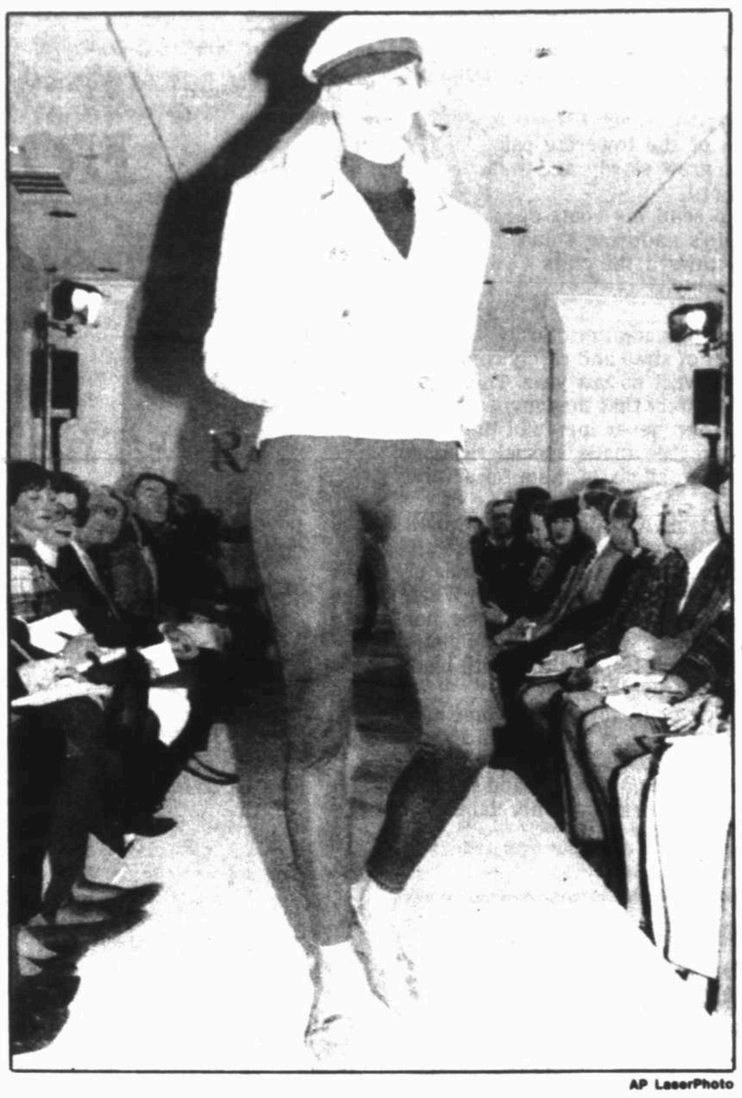

A short full skirt made of three ripply tiers of gray wool, a long black and white overskirt fastened over a matching playsuit — he calls it a romper — and a skinny short green skirt embroidered in raffia lace: these give an idea of his splendid diversity.

One of his neat tricks is tying together many of these different shapes with the same style: a navy wool blazer. The tiered skirt, a brown leather dress and a navy chiffon dress with a full skirt are some of the styles the blazer accompanied.

Kors touches on many current trends, from lacy bodysuits to side-slit long skirts and plaids. His green, navy and white plaids are sizzlers, especially when the pattern is created with beading.

"I am pro-choice," Pauline Trigere said at her show. She was referring to hemlines. But she went on to indicate that she thought long skirts were "for bar mitzvahs, weddings and waltzes," while short skirts were for daytime wear.

SHE PROVED HER point by showing everything above the knee, except for a few dressy full skirts and a good assortment of evening pants suits.

A model struts down the runway at the showing of Ralph Lauren's 1992 Woman's Collection. Much of the collection this year was inspired by Lauren's uniforms for the America-3 racing syndicate which will compete to defend the America's Cup early next year.

The trousers were particularly attractive in white or navy crepe with matching jackets. Jump suits in yellow or lime crepe were also a lively way to dress at night.

Maribel Garcia has concocted a saucy stew of evening styles.

A dazzling group of red and fuchsia dresses includes a crepe tunic worn over a long chiffon skirt that clearly shows the legs. There are some calmer dresses, but the flirty ones are necessarily the eye-catchers.

Menswear simply not predictable

By Laura Fisher
Associated Press

Plaid has cropped up this fall in menswear collections ranging from Isaac Mizrahi to Perry Ellis to The Gap. Mizrahi even breaks a fashion taboo by mixing tartan plaid jackets with gingham shirts. Somehow it works.

"It used to be you only saw plaid sport coats on traveling salesmen in Omaha, but now you see them on the most fashionable runways," says Robert Bryan, fashion editor of M magazine. "It's all-American, and people understand plaid."

Even as American men are getting the hang of mixing new patterns and colors, the tide is changing.

"There's a definite return to the more subtle, sophisticated look," says Clifford Grodd, president of Paul Stuart, a haberdasher in New York. He notes that top Italian designers such as Giorgio Armani are showing the American-influenced classic preppie look.

"All Milanese men are wearing brown shoes with blue suits, which used to be a strictly Northeastern-Ivy League look," he says. "It's all back to a look that's more — and I hate to use such a cornball word — traditional. It's the way America perceives the English who, of course, never dressed that way to begin with."

Jody Kuss, vice president of furnishings and merchandising manager of Barneys New York, puts it more accurately, perhaps. The new direction, she says, is "Italian color inspired by English patterns. The Italian color sense is amazing."

For example, in the spring Barneys will show jackets with two soft blue tones subtly woven into a Prince of Wales plaid. This reflects the shift away from earthy olive and tan palettes to "blue, blue, blue," she says.

Blue yes, boring no. The interaction between color and pattern will continue to play a strong role.

"Men are more receptive today to mixing patterns because of color," Kuss says. "I think they're really bored of navy suits with white ground shirts and they're looking for newness."

DEAR ABBY

Wife begs husband to slow down before he's stopped for good

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband underwent multiple bypass surgery a year ago, and he's rapidly falling back into his old habits of working too long and too strenuously. I'm afraid he is soon going to be back to the state of health he was in when he got that heart attack.

Van Buren

He is in his late 50s and is still a workaholic. He is holding down two full-time jobs and, being the perfectionist he is, he tries to excel at both. Forget exercise. He has a stationary bicycle at the foot of his bed that he's had for two years, and it's as good as new.

The reason I'm writing is that some of my friends have told me that you had a poem in your column titled "Slow Me Down, Lord," and I would like to get a copy so I can have it blown up and framed and hung over his desk. He has promised that if I get it for him, he will read it every day and try to slow down. Please? — "SKEETER" IN SOUTH CAROLINA

DEAR "SKEETER": The poem was written by Wilferd A. Peterson, and I hope your husband can slow down long enough to read it. And here it is:

SLOW ME DOWN, LORD

Slow me down, Lord!
Ease the pounding of my heart
By the quieting of my mind.
Steady my harried pace
With a vision of the eternal reach of time.
Give me,
Amidst the confusions of my day,
The calmness of the everlasting hills.
Break the tensions of my nerves
With the soothing music of the sighing streams
That live in my memory.
Help me to know
The magical resoring power of sleep.
Teach me the art
Of taking minute vacations of slowing down to look at a flower;
To chat with an old friend or to make a new one;
To pat a stray dog;
To watch a spider build a web;
To smile at a child;
Or to read a few lines from a good book.
Remind me each day
That the race is not always to the swift;
That there is more to life than increasing its speed.
Let me look upward
Into the branches of the towering oak
And know that it grew slowly and well.
Slow me down, Lord,
And inspire me to send my roots deep
Into the soil of life's enduring values
That I may grow toward the stars
Of my greater destiny.

DEAR ABBY: My stepdaughter "Susie" and her husband, who live out of state and rarely communicate with us, came to visit us last year. Their visit was complicated by the fact that they invited another couple (whom we had never met) and their two children to join them. We made special sleeping accommodations and fed all six of them for several days.

I was ignored, talked down to and insulted by both Susie and her friend "Betsy" during the entire visit. Neither woman offered to help with the meals or dishes — they just sat while I waited on them. When it was time for them to leave, neither Susie nor Betsy said goodbye or thank you. They simply disappeared into their van while I stood there with tears in my eyes and egg on my face!

Now, Susie is making plans to use our home as a stop-over for several days next year — and she's bringing Betsy and family along. I told my husband that I could tolerate Susie and her husband if I had to, but I would not have Betsy and her family as houseguests again.

Abby, am I justified in my decision, and how should this be handled without offending my husband's family? — FRUSTRATED IN FLORIDA

DEAR FRUSTRATED: You are indeed "justified" in your decision, and if any of your husband's family are offended, they need only be told that you do not wish to accommodate guests who come uninvited and leave without so much as a goodbye or thank-you.

Designers reveal new lines for spring 1992

Simplicity, sizzle receive equal time during 'fashion week'

By Francine Parnes

NEW YORK (AP) — Calvin Klein put a new spin on his minimalist formula for dressing last week, unveiling a simple yet racy line for spring 1992 featuring clothes that took the deep plunge or draped the calf.

The contrast included a a smattering of barely-there hemlines along with longer dresses and skirts.

Klein's show topped the second day of designer collections presentations where buyers, the fashion press and socialites from around the world have converged for the week's glimpse at next year's spring lines.

When Klein did go long, the leg was still on parade. Mid-calf and ankle-length dresses bared lots of skin with high slits and buttons left open, sometimes to the waist. The daring effect was not lost on the audience.

Klein remained wedded to his tried-and-true theme of monochromatic clothes in muted, neutral colors and pared-down shapes. The palette included his signature shades of coral, apricot, pewter, buff and cream.

OTHER OFFERINGS included easy satin tunics, silk knit pullovers, wrap skirts and wool crepe pants.

The best example of Klein's easy-dressing strategy was his fingertip-length white silk crepe jacket. Add matching high heel sandals, wrap a chiffon scarf around your neck, and it's a dress.

Legs went bare and there were no ruffles, bow or other unnecessary embellishments. Shoes coordinated with the monochromatic mood of the clothes. Makeup and hair styles followed suit and stayed natural. Jewelry, if any, was understated.

Jennifer George dropped some hemlines and showed plenty of skin as well, including ankle-length shirtdresses with buttons opened to the waist. Pants were a mainstay, either elephant-wide or pencil-slim.

Trousers were accessorized with George's striped cotton "rainshirts," lightweight ankle-length overcoats belted at the waist.

Todd Oldham's show was strictly standing room only, once word got out that rap star Queen Latifah was planning to work the runway. She was a hit, decked out in a sequinned 1960s style tie-dyed T-shirt with black leggings.

It was all part of Oldham's quirky, campy salute to decades gone by, which waved at the past with kooky print housedresses that would have made Lucy Ricardo proud.

A black satin jacket that praised domestic life with fork and knife, wind-up clock, toaster and coffee cup motif sailed straight out of the '50s and landed on Oldham's runway.

The bra made of coconut shells that was teamed with a grass skirt may not land in the window of Bloomingdale's, but it sure got the crowd to take notice.

Legs went bare and there were no ruffles, bow or other unnecessary embellishments. Shoes coordinated with the monochromatic mood of the clothes. Makeup and hair styles followed suit and stayed natural. Jewelry, if any, was understated.

BILL BLASS, as usual, kicked off fashion week with a show attended by the usual contingent of quotable notables, including Blaine Trump, Barbara Walters and Brooke Astor.

Blass worked up an incendiary blaze of sizzling black lace, bra-top dresses and revealing point d'esprit bodices clothes that looked like they came right out of the boudoir.

Nearly-nude dresses with side cut-outs and see-through fabrics were close enough to swimwear that they actually came down the runway with swimsuits in the same fabric and color.

When Blass cooled down, there were his typically elegant old guard elements that admirers have come to depend on: an animal print chiffon jacket, a cardigan sweater tossed casually over the shoulders with a formal evening dress, and classic, proper shifts with matching jackets.

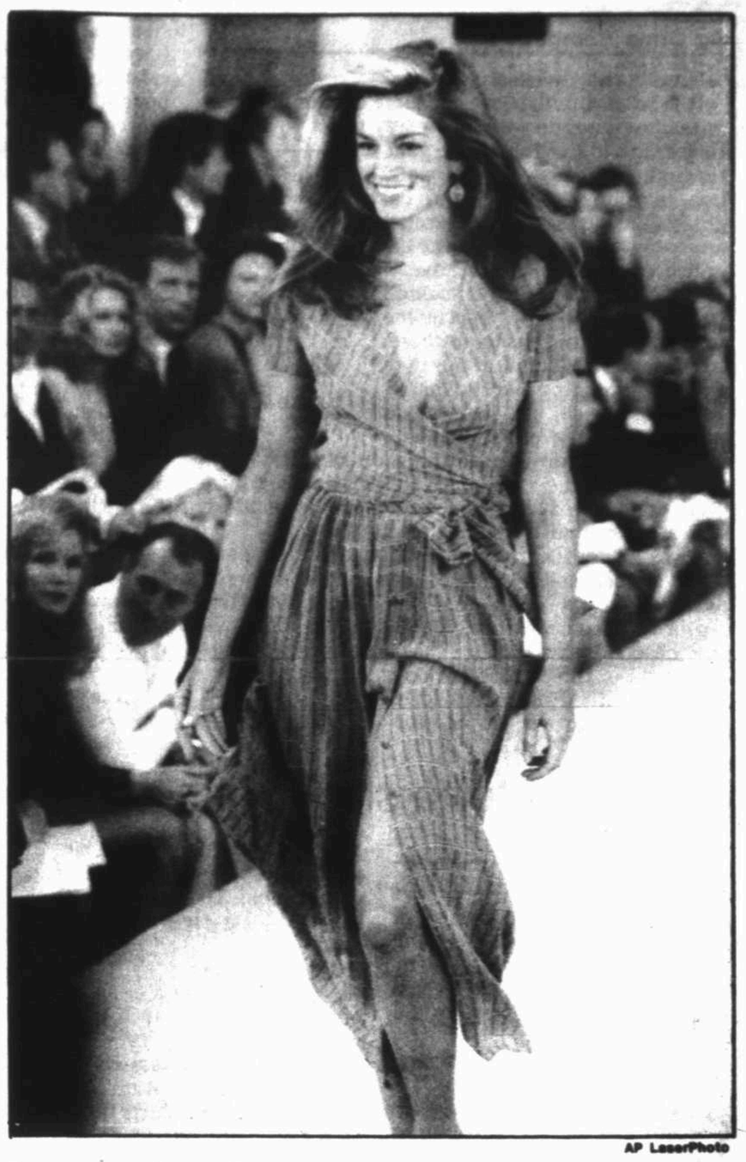

Meanwhile, Marc Jacobs, the designer for Perry Ellis, saluted Los Angeles with a collection inspired by the Beach Boys, glitzy Rodeo Drive, East Los Angeles Chicanas decked out in ruffles and the glamourous film industry crowd.

Jacobs showed how the West was worn with cowgirls in long leather fringed skirts, accessorized with cowboy boots, hats and leather gauntlets. Handpainted cactus and palm tree skirts rounded out the "I Love L.A." mood.

A slip dress with Beverly Hills Hotel motif fairly shouted "Hooray for Hollywood" when accessorized by a turban, enormous shades, a towel and, naturally, the requisite poolside drink.

FERNANDO SANCHEZ launched the ritual week of spring fashion with his signature look of feminine evening and at-home wear. Last time around, he tried wooing retail buyers and fashion editors with a video tape instead of a runway show. His staff said it was pretty much of a bust because so few took time to look it. This week, Norma Kamali is giving video a go.

Spring previews continued through Friday last week. Those with an interest but without a ticket watched some of the action on a big-screen TV at Times Square.

American themes featured for spring

By Francine Parnes

NEW YORK (AP) — Next spring is tallying in as a season that loves the good old U.S.A.

That's how the shows shaped up on Seventh Avenue Thursday as Fashion Week forges ahead. At the helm was Isaac Mizrahi's ode to the frontier West, Bob Mackie's celebration of legendary American ladies of the 20th century and Nicole Miller's salute to baseball.

The Anne Klein collection, meanwhile, offered easy-to-wear interchangeable monochromatic pieces that in five minutes let you zip up and walk out the door.

Mizrahi abandoned his Brooklyn roots and took his audience on a wild stampede through the heartland of cowtown culture. The designer stayed home on the range with ruffled gingham dresses, tooled leather bustiers, whipstitched studded leather cuffs and cowboy belts with steer head buckles.

But even when Mizrahi latches onto a theme, he reworks it with his own spin. This time he conjured up a sexy urban cowgirl, decked out in white lambchop-style ruffled pantaloons that somehow got paired with a city slicker black silk evening skirt.

"Women are getting more glamorous, less afraid to look feminine," Mizrahi said after the show.

There were other incongruous pairings: sporty sweatpants cast in luxurious cashmere, and his sexy second-skin "girdle" shorts teamed with serious tweed blazers.

Louis Dell'Olio, the designer for Anne Klein, revived some of his basic fall silhouettes and recast them in spring fabrics. Shoe pants, his stretch leggings that cover the feet with soles attached, are back again, this time in white or black stretch viscose.

Dell'Olio loves legs, and there wasn't a long hemline in the whole collection.

The color palette was basic black, white and silver, worn monochromatically or in tandem. White rayon double-breasted jackets, soft pants, cardigans, poor boy sweaters and simple chemises created endless possibilities for mixing and matching.

Denim short coats, sundresses and jeans were cast in shades of orchid, lime and mint.

Mackie dedicated his collection to Lucille Ball, Mary Martin, Martha Graham, Betty Boop, former Vogue editor and style arbiter Diana Vreeland, Rita Hayworth, Billie Holiday and Grace Kelly.

Mackie, the Hollywood designer whose shows remain ever-popular for their no-holds-barred flamboyant theatricality, did not let his audience down.

The Betty Boop tribute was an exercise in flirty fluff and frills, with gloves and feathers cast in polka dots, yards of ruffles, bows and organza rosettes, and silver hearts peppered generously inside mile-wide hat brims.

"I design for women who enjoy dressing up, going out and being noticed," said Mackie after the show.

When Miller stepped up at bat, she served up a sporty group of off-white dresses with red baseball stitching.

"I recently designed a major league baseball tie and also put on a Mets wives fashion show in May, so I was in the mood to do some baseball dresses," Miller said before the show.

This may be a season of more modest hemlines for some designers, but Miller's still conjuring up clever ways to bare the body. There were sexy wood beaded bras, lots of cropped tops and fanny-high rompers, all well-deserved rewards if your exercise regimen has paid off.

Tattoos becoming fashionable — even if only 'temporarily'

By Carrie Donovan
N.Y. Times News Service

A tattoo is no longer taboo, at least in fashion circles. At the recent spring showings it was hard to miss the little tattoos decorating the ankles of several top models, and a few designers made a point of tattoos in their collections.

"I use them to emphasize bareness," Anna Sui said, explaining why a small inky butterfly showed up on the knee of a model wearing a short skirt, while a rose peeked over the low-slung back of a pair of hip huggers. In Paris last month, much of the Comme de Garcons collection was accompanied by what appeared to be drawn-on necklaces and bracelets.

Some stylish tattoos, like the small rose on the inside of the model Christy Turlington's ankle, are permanent. But the designers — and many young fashion followers — use temporary alcohol-based transfers.

Temptu, a company that has been supplying movie studios for the last 10 years, is a favorite source. The shop, in lower Manhattan, sells starter tattoo kits with instructions.

The kits, which cost $2 to $5 each, involve some rubbing alcohol and small designs printed on cigarette papers. A spokesman, Michael Benjamin, said the tattoos are made of "all approved FDA ingredients."

The tattoo will last two to six days. So if you're planning to experiment, it's nice to know it's not forever.

New exercise steps into pain

By Erma Bombeck

How boring is exercise?

It is so boring that every couple of months or so, someone comes up with a new way to get you out of the chair and moving. We've gone through jogging, swimming, walking, bicycling, tennis, yoga, t'ai chi, rock climbing and dancercize, and when interest waned, the exercise enthusiasts got creative.

Bombeck

They introduced the treadmill to oblivion, the rowing machine in dry dock and stairs to nowhere. And the very thought of Suzanne Somers squeezing her thighs together as she sits at a party could give one pause over the chip dip.

But perhaps the weirdest new entry into the fitness phase is the step bench. It's a small platform anywhere from 4 to 12 inches off the floor on which you step up and down in time to music.

I was in my 20s when my schoolteacher husband and I chaperoned a group of high school seniors to Washington and New York. The highlight of the trip was a visit to the Washington Monument. The minute these kids saw a 555-foot obelisk of white marble rising out of the earth, they knew what they had to do. Climb it. All 898 steps to the top.

As they returned, gasping for air, red-faced, the steam rising out of their raincoats, I made a vow that I would never be that stupid.

I have stuck to my words. A two-story house we bought was sold after three years. They tell me there were beds on the second floor, but I never got through all the laundry and the toys stacked on the stairs waiting for someone to go up.

If an elevator is out of order, I am prepared to tough it out on that floor until it is fixed. I don't even "do curbs."

One of the problems with "stepercize" is that there is no cute costume to appeal to the shallow people like me who exercise to look cute. It takes a lot to get a woman in a pair of Spandex shorts with a thong-leotard over them to go out in daylight.

I'm not being critical of gimmicks to get people on their feet and into motion. It's hard to keep coming up with incentives to keep you focused on your body. But don't be surprised to pick up your gym newsletter one day and see:

"FIRE ANTS: 8 a.m., Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. High-impact aerobics for medium to advanced. Jump in pain to lively show tunes with a 'Saber Dance' tempo. Relieves muscular tension and tightness as real fire ants bite bottoms of feet in special thong shoes. Warm-up and two-day cool-down suggested."

You can't tell a shirt by its stripes

By Laura Fisher
Associated Press

At a recent show of men's fall fashions, eight models wearing various casual and dressy ensembles lined up center stage, peeled off their jackets and sweaters and started swapping.

Not all of the clothes fit perfectly, but that wasn't the point.

"We wanted to give the audience an idea of the possibilities available," says Tom Julian, fashion director of the Men's Fashion Association. The MFA, a trade group in New York, co-sponsored the show with Joseph Horne's, a men's store in Pittsburgh.

The demonstration also underscored a trend in American men's fashion that designer Andrew Fezza defines as "blurring the boundary between casual and business styles."

It's especially apparent in men's shirts.

"The word casual in fashion is losing its meaning," Fezza says. "I put my linen and silk open-collar shirts with suits and sport coats. Men want to look appropriate for a business meeting and still be comfortable. Today it's not necessary to sacrifice one for the other."

A blue chambray shirt and silk tie can be worn in a casual office or a nice restaurant. Likewise with washed silk.

The new casualness is also reflected in the revival of band collars and collarless shirts that leave men no choice but to go tieless.

"Many restaurants in New York don't even require a coat and tie anymore," notes Wally Palmer, vice president of design for Alexander Julian.

Just as no single hem length is de rigueur for women, no single collar style is right for men.

"We're dealing with five or more collars now," the MFA's Julian says.

Besides band collars there are the traditional button-down collar, the Giorgio Armani-inspired snap collar, the straight or classic pointed collar, the spread collar and the contrast collar that peaked in the 1980s but is now somewhat passe.

The Arkansas at Texas A&M football game Saturday has been rescheduled from 2 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. The time change was made to accomodate the ESPN television network, which will broadcast the game live.

Hards tabbed

Bob Hards has been named director of broadcasting for the Midland Angels baseball club, team officials announced Wednesday.

Hards will take over in the broadcast booth for Russ Langer, who moved from the Angels to the Phoenix Firebirds of the AAA Pacific Coast League. The naming of Hards came in conjunction with the Angels' announcement that KCRS AM has signed on for another season as the team's flagship station. KCRS will broadcast all 136 of the Angels' 1992 games.

Hards, 31, has been a minor league broadcaster for the past four years, spending 1990 and 1991 as play-by-play announcer for the Eugene, Ore., Emeralds of the A Northwest League. He also spent two years with the Bends Bucks, also of the Northwest League.

Showdown!

No. 1 Florida St. hosts No. 2 Miami

By Rick Warner
AP Football Writer

Game of the year. Game of the decade. Game of the century.

Whatever you call it, Saturday's showdown between top-ranked Florida State (10-0) and No. 2 Miami (8-0) in Tallahassee could very well decide the national championship.

College Picks

"This is the game of the year," Florida State quarterback Casey Weldon said Wednesday. "Everything is on the line. I can't wait. I wish we could play right now."

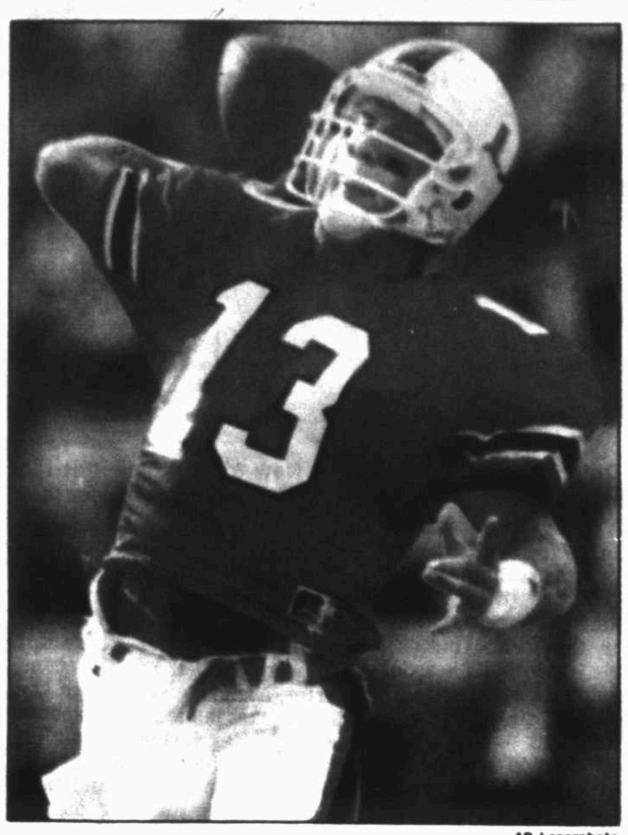

The stakes are clear.

The winner is the front-runner for the national title. The loser is probably out of it.

The winner goes to the Orange Bowl. The loser, depending on which team it is, goes to the Cotton or Blockbuster.

The winner has the longest winning streak in the country. (Florida State has won 16 straight, while Miami has won 14 in a row.) The loser may end up as the third best team in its

Clemens gets AL Cy Young

Associated Press

NEW YORK — For Roger Clemens, winning the American League Cy Young Award has become a November habit.

Clemens

The Boston Red Sox right-hander, who led the league in ERA and strikeouts, collected his third on Wednesday, easily beating Minnesota's Scott Erickson.

"It can only help me down the road to get to Cooperstown, and that's what I'm working on," Clemens said, looking ahead to his Hall of Fame possibilites. "I'll go to work on a fourth one, because it means helping the ballclub."

Clemens, who also won in 1986 and 1987, got 21 first-place votes, four seconds and two thirds for 119 points in balloting by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

Clemens, 18-10 this year with a 2.62 ERA and 241 strikeouts, became the fifth three-time Cy Young winner. Only Jim six years, were the clear-cut No. 1 choice in the Associated Press preseason poll released Wednesday.

DURHAM, N.C. — Duke will start the college basketball season where it left off — on top of the heap — but coach Mike Krzyzewski wants the similarities to end there.

"We've never brought last year into the next year before," Krzyzewski said. "There is no reason to do that this year. The word defending absolutely is not a part of our vocabulary. We've won that championship, it's ours, that's it. That year's over."

Duke received 49 of 65 first-place votes and 1,606 points from a nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters to easily outdistance Indiana, which had 11 first-place votes and 1,533 points.

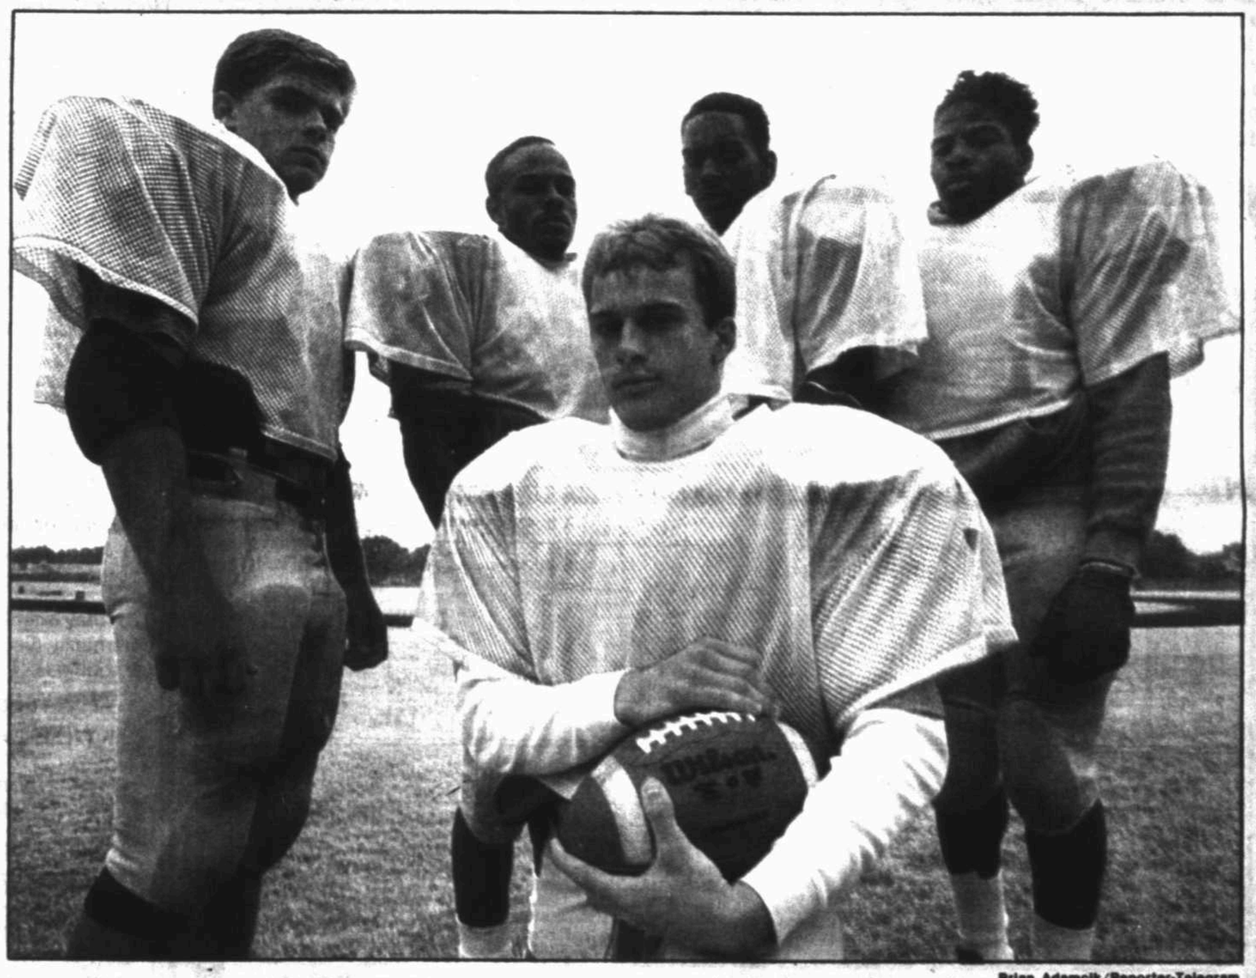

"I have to deal with reality, not with predictions," he said. "The biggest obstacle for us right now is in how we're preparing is focus.

"My expectations have been high every year. I don't see any reason not to have them this year," Krzyzewski added. "I don't base my expectations on anybody else's expectations. If they are the same as other people, then that's great. If we don't meet up to them, I'll be disappointed. It won't be relevant if anybody else is disappointed."

Duke now has the longest consecutive streak of being ranked, having been in every poll since the fifth week of the 1986-87 season. Arizona has the second-longest streak, starting in the preseason

Rebel backfield deep

■ Midland Lee's platoon system at running back has helped the Rebel wishbone offense produce an average of 29.9 points a game.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Quick now, can you name a member of Midland Lee's Wishbone backfield?

The Rebels have vaulted into the Class 5A state football playoffs for the ninth consecutive season while rolling to an impressive 9-1 regular season campaign. In the process, Lee has averaged 29.9 points per game. Yet there is a good chance that many can't come up with a name of a Lee running back.

Why? Well, no back is remotely approaching the star status of a 1,000-yard rushing season. That in itself is unusual for the Rebels, who have seen seven 1,000-yard quality backs in the past decade.

Lee, 1991 style, throws running backs at opponents in waves, leaving no back with week-to-week dominance.

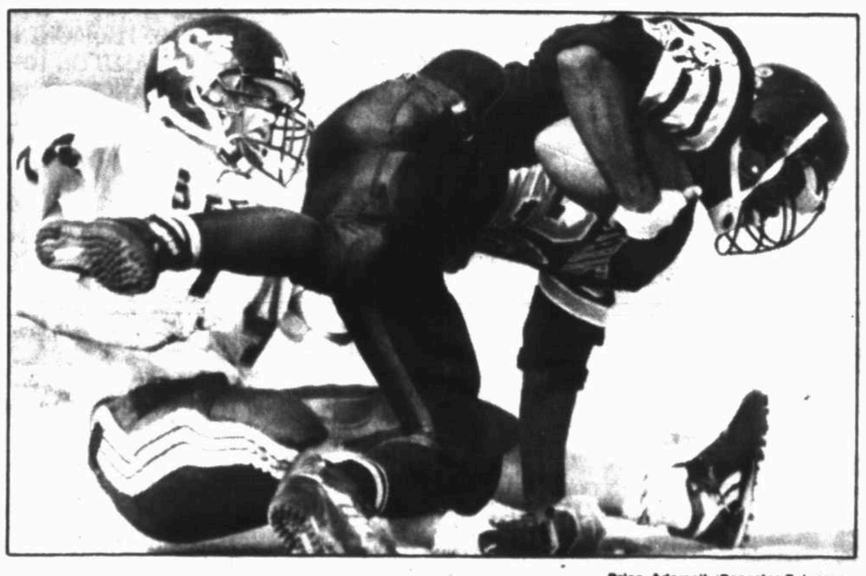

Still, as a group, the job gets done — even if it is in a rather quiet manner.

Sherman Dedrick is the current rushing leader with 614 yards, but three other backs have been holders of that position during the course of the season.

Seven Lee backs are averaging over four yards per carry and quarterback Jimmy Patton is almost in that group with a 3.9 per carry average. This is success by committee.

Steers, Mustangs vie for same playoff berth

By Joe Wyatt

Area Football

The Andrews Mustangs will have their eyes on the visiting Lake View Chiefs Friday night, but their ears will be listening for sounds out of Monahans, where the Big Spring Steers take on the Loboes.

It's regular-season-finale time in District 3-4A and a Big Spring victory will assure the Steers (8-1, 4-1) a share of the league championship with idle Sweetwater, along with a coveted playoff berth. It will also effectively push Andrews (7-2, 4-1) out of the race no matter what the result is between the Mustangs and the Chiefs.

But if Monahans (7-2, 3-2) manages to beat the Steers — and Andrews defeats winless Lake View as expected — Andrews will join Sweetwater in the Class 4A playoffs, as co-champion and the league's top seed.

"We've got another tough opponent in Monahans," said Big Spring coach Dwight Butler, whose Steers dropped Andrews 28-14 in a critical encounter last Friday. "But from here on out it's sudden death for us, and that's how we're approaching it."

Big Spring is not the only area team that needs a win Friday in order to pro-

NBA

SAN ANTONIO — David Robinson scored 24 points and triggered a key fourth-quarter rally with a three-point play as the San Antonio Spurs defeated the Los Angeles Clippers 107-93 on Wednesday night.

Sean Elliott added 21 points, 11 rebounds and seven assists and Willie Anderson contributed 17 points as the Spurs won their third consecutive game and continued its dominance over the Clippers. San Antonio is 52-15 lifetime against the Clippers' franchise since joining the NBA in 1976.

Ron Harper led the Clippers with 25 points while Danny Manning had 21.

Harper hit two 3-point shots to draw the Clippers within seven midway through the final period.

San Antonio led 92-89 with 4:09 left, then scored 13 of the next 15 points to take its largest lead of the game, 105-91 with 33 seconds to play. Robinson's layup and subsequent free throw started the surge and San Antonio made six more free throws during the decisive run.

After trailing by 11 midway through the opening period, the Clippers used a 6-0 run to go ahead on the way to a 50-45 halftime lead. Olden Polynice scored four during the surge for the Clippers, who also got 12 first-half points from Manning.

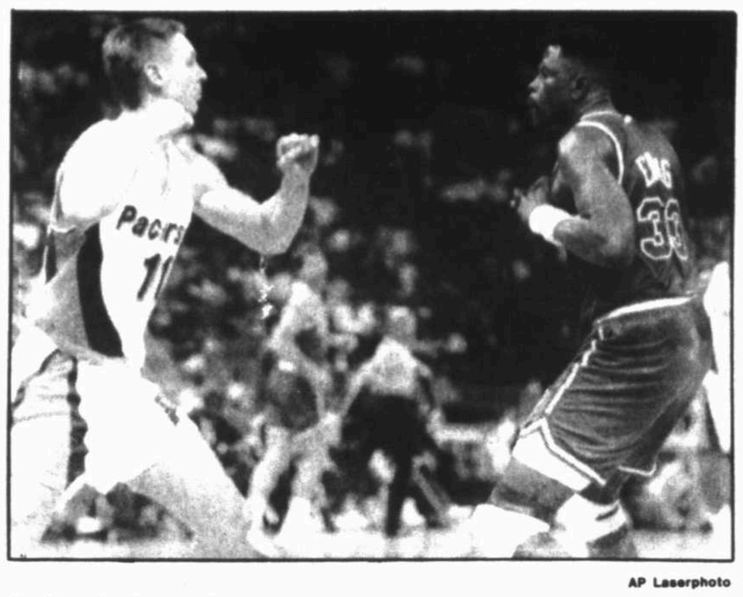

San Antonio made just seven field goals in the second period, scoring only 17 points, its season low for a quarter.

Pacers 110, Knicks 107

INDIANAPOLIS — Patrick Ewing's early ejection seemed to spark the New York Knicks. Problem was, when they really needed him, he wasn't there.

Without Ewing to worry about, the Indiana Pacers held on in the final minutes and beat the Knicks.

Ewing and Detlef Schrempf each were ejected in the second quarter, even though none of the wild punches landed. The incident occurred after Ewing's elbow hit Schrempf in the head as they battled under the boards, and both players began pushing as the benches emptied.

AP Laserphoto

Bulls 117, Hornets 95

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Michael Jordan scored 35 points and the Chicago Bulls beat Charlotte for their 12th straight victory over the Hornets.

Charlotte beat Chicago on Dec. 23, 1988, in the first-ever meeting between the teams. Since then, the Hornets have not stopped Jordan and the Bulls.

Heat 107, Pistons 102

MIAMI — Bimbo Coles and Grant Long each made two foul shots in the final 6.8 seconds, helping the Miami Heat hold off the Detroit Pistons.

The Heat seemed in charge when Glen Rice's 3-point shot made it 103-95 with 3:06 left. But Isiah Thomas, who led the Pistons with 34 points, made a 3-pointer and foul shot as Detroit closed to 103-100 with 29.5 seconds left.

76ers 121, Magic 100

ORLANDO, Fla. — Hersey Hawkins scored 18 of his career-high 43 points in the third quarter as the Philadelphia 76ers beat the Orlando Magic for their fifth straight victory.

Hawkins hit 13 of 22 shots, including four of six 3-pointers, and also made 13 of 14 free throws.

Jazz 98, Nets 92

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Karl Malone had 35 points and 14 rebounds as the Utah Jazz, taking advantage of a four-minute New Jersey scoreless streak down the stretch, beat the Nets.

Bullets 119, Timberwolves 114

MINNEAPOLIS — Larry Stewart scored four of the first five points in overtime and the Washington Bullets snapped a five-game losing streak with a victory over the Minnesota Timberwolves.

Celtics 117, Suns 111

PHOENIX — Larry Bird scored 27 points and Kevin Gamble added 21 as the Boston Celtics defeated the cold-shooting Phoenix Suns.

The Celtics built a 17-point lead early in the fourth quarter and then withstood a rally to send the Suns (3-5) to their worst start since 1987-88.

Woosnam takes PGA Grand Slam of Golf

KAUAI LAGOONS, Hawaii (AP) — Masters champion Ian Woosnam birdied four of the final five holes to overtake British Open champ Ian Baker-Finch and win the $1 million PGA Grand Slam of Golf.

Woosnam, who picked up $400,000 for the victory, had six birdies and two pars on the back nine to score a 6-under-par 66 for the round, one off the Kiele Course record at Kauai Lagoons Golf Club. The record was set by Corey Pavin during a Pro-Am tournament last year.

Woosnam finished 9-under at 135. Baker-Finch shot 71 to finish at 139 and win the $250,000 second-place prize.

U.S. Open champ Payne Stewart shot a 71 to card a 141 for the 36-hole event and won $200,000. John Daly, who won the PGA Championship, shot a 70 for a 143 and got $150,000.

Woosnam, who started the day a shot behind first-round leader Baker-Finch, fell back after Baker-Finch birdied the first three holes.

Tip of the Week
There are times when you may feel like you are throwing the ball well, but everything seems to go left of its target.
The problem is that you are closing your shoulder, causing your hand to come over the top of the ball, thus hooking to the left.
Make your correction in your stance by moving your ball just to the right of your shoulder, holding the ball in the palm of your hand and keeping your shoulder from slumping forward.
This tip is also helpful if you tend to wrap the ball behind you. The straight pendulum swing will always find its target.

REBELS: Dedrick's 614 yards leads Lee backs

offensive coordinator, explains why there is no true "star."

"First, no one is carrying the ball 40 times a game," Quimby says. "We take what the defense gives us and all our backs are pretty equal in ability for their positions. We feel like we can go to any of them."

Dedrick, a junior, came into this season not even knowing if he was going to be a starter. And he still plays the game as if he didn't know he was a starter.

"I didn't know what to expect coming into the year," Dedrick said. "I just wanted to get a shot because we have a lot of good backs. So far, I've been able to do some things."

Despite being limited to a meager 114 carries for a 5.4 per carry average, Dedrick is happy with his current role.

"The Wishbone has to be an unselfish offense. Sometimes the defense allows the fullback to run. Sometimes its the quarterback and sometimes the halfbacks. It doesn't matter to me who carries the ball if the team wins," Dedrick said.

"Sherman has been our most consistent runner. He has good quickness, but not blazing speed. He's a hard runner," Quimby said.

Returning senior halfback Brett Sullivan had 497 yards rushing last season and has 462 yards (4.8 per carry average and eight touchdowns) this season. He says there is still competition among the Lee backs.

"We've got a great attitude now," Sullivan said, "but we still joke with each other. Before a game, we're always saying stuff like, 'Betcha a dollar I get more yards than you do.' But that's all in joking. We know you have to do what it takes to win."

Sullivan has the most experience of any Lee back, but he may just now be coming into his own.

"Brett is still improving. He has the best overall speed on the team, but I feel his best game was against San Angelo Central Friday (122 yards, a career single-game high)," Quimby said.

The fullback slot is almost equally shared by junior Scott McLeod (515 yards, 6.9 average, seven TDs) and senior Roy Robinson (389, 6.4, four). Between them is 904 yards rushing and 11 touchdowns. It has been a real strength.

Although the two have to share playing time, both McLeod and Robinson have no apparent animosity toward each other.

"Oh, there's competition between the two of us, but it's a good competition," McLeod says. "We're very supportive of each other."

Robinson said, "The competition is there, but it's good for us. You know you're going to be sitting on the bench if you don't produce. You just do what you can when you are in the game."

Quimby likes the situation at fullback.

"These two have given us a good inside game and both have improved a great deal blocking," Quimby said. "You don't lose much with either one of them in there."

But if you have to pick out a leader of the pack, it's quarterback Patton. He has completed on 13 of 42 passes for 251 yards and three touchdowns, which won't land him in any Hall of Fame. He has 317 rushing yards and four touchdowns. The numbers aren't all that impressive, but he is the grease that makes the Wishbone purr.

"Jimmy was a defensive back a year ago, but he has shown a lot of leadership ability on the field. He just doesn't make many mistakes running the option and he's getting better at it all the time," Quimby said. "He hasn't completed many passes, but he has thrown only two interceptions."

Lee head coach Earl Miller said, "We have to be careful that we don't ask any of these kids to do things they can't do. We've got to take the talents they do have and make the most of it."

Patton seems pleased with the offensive improvement shown in the game with San Angelo.

"After the last game, we're pretty satisfied with where we are," Patton said. "Basically, we're going to win with power football, eating time off the clock. That's just the way we are.

"I do have to say that our offensive line is the big part of that. They've done a hell'va job for us this year."

Quimby also feels like this "no name" backfield can be a team plus.

"It can actually help if you don't have to rely on one or two backs," Quimby said. "You really can't key on any one player. We feel like the defense has to give you something and it's our job to find out what that is in any given game."

Quimby also has depth to work with and that doesn't hurt, either.

Senior Kenny Earl Williams (185 yards, 5.0 average, two TDs), sophomore Marlon Henry (133, 5.8, 2) and sophomore Phillip Sims (108, 6.8) all have produced when called on.

Williams, no doubt, will see a lot of playoff action. Henry and Sims both have a bright future ahead of them, insuring that Lee's bevy of backs will continue.

Sophomore Courtney Turner has had limited playing time this year, but he is obviously Lee's quarterback of the future.

If Lee's upcoming voyage is fortunate enough to sail deep into playoff waters, you might even be able to recall one of these names.

Sampras, Lendl take big ATP wins

Associated Press

FRANKFURT, Germany — Pete Sampras, mixing powerful serves with delicate passing shots, beat Wimbledon champion Michael Stich 6-2, 7-6 (7-3) in the ATP Tour World Championships on Wednesday.

Ivan Lendl beat Jim Courier 6-2, 6-3 to go 2-0 in the event and virtually assure a spot in the last four. Courier, the top seed and the No. 2 in the world, dropped to 1-1.

Guy Forget beat Karel Novacek 6-3, 7-6 (7-3) to keep alive his chances of reaching the semifinals.

The $2.25 million year-end event pits the top eight players in the world. They are split into two groups, with the top two in each group advancing to the semifinals.

Forget, Novacek, Courier and Lendl are in one group, while Stich, Sampras, Andre Agassi and Boris Becker are in the other.

own state. (Fifth-ranked Florida plays Florida State on Nov. 30.)

Miami has beaten Florida State five of the last six years, including victories in 1987, 1988 and 1990 that may have cost the Seminoles the national championship.

This time, however, the Hurricanes are 3-point underdogs to the Seminoles, who have looked invincible in their first 10 games.

Both teams have explosive offenses and aggressive defenses.

Florida State appears to have the offensive edge, mainly because Weldon has more big-game experience than Miami's Gino Torretta and because Weldon is 15-0 as a starter.

But Miami is more impressive on defense. Although the Hurricanes lack a dominating defender such as last year's All-American Russell Maryland, they've allowed fewer points (58) than any team in the nation.

The deciding factor won't be offense or defense, however. It will be emotion. Miami has spoiled three possible national titles for Florida State, and the Seminoles are determined not to let it happen again — especially on their home field. ... FLORIDA ST. 31-28.

AREA: Bearkats need win

long its season as fifth-ranked Garden City (8-1, 4-1) ends its run through District 9-A at Sterling City (7-1-1, 4-1), where only the survivor will be in the playoffs.

The Bearkats defeated Sterling City 34-12 in last year's final regular-season game and they are the obvious favorites this time around, having outscored opponents 359-90 and suffering their only loss to second-ranked Rotan, 27-13.

Sterling City fared even worse against the 9-A champion Yellowhammers of Rotan, dropping a 51-0 decision Oct. 11.

The Rankin Red Devils (8-1, 4-0) clinched the District 8-A championship last Friday with a 28-0 victory at Fort Davis. Rankin, which did not allow a single point in league play, is idle this week and will have a chance to scout next week's potential playoff opponents.

There are three of them, all in District 6A.

If O'Donnell defeats Petersburg Friday night, then Rankin will meet Sudan. If Petersburg beats O'Donnell, then the threesome could end up tied in loop play. A coin flip would be used to pare the hopefuls to two, and Rankin would meet the one which is determined to be the No. 2 seed through head-to-head play.

A Big Spring victory would pit the Steers against the winner of Friday's bi-district game between Canyon-Randall (6-4) and Lubbock Estacado (9-1). Estacado was ranked fifth in the state before taking its sole loss, 21-18 at Big Spring.

Should Andrews get the playoff nod, the Mustangs would take on the winner between Snyder (7-3) and Pampa (8-2) because Andrews — unlike Big Spring — would be considered the No. 1 playoff seed in 3-4A thanks to a 13-10 win over Sweetwater.

And that means the Sweetwater coaching staff is fortunate to have an open date this week because it will be scouting no fewer than four teams that may lie ahead.

Syracuse falls from Top 25 for first time since '84

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — A smaller, less experienced Syracuse team failed to make the preseason Top 25, ending an eight-year streak as a ranked team.

"It's too bad we didn't get a chance to play our way out of it," Syracuse coach Jim Boeheim said Wednesday.

Syracuse has been ranked in every AP weekly basketball poll since March 5, 1984, and had the nation's longest current run. That honor now falls to Duke, which has been in every poll since the fifth week of the 1986-87 season.

The sports writers who voted in the preseason poll could not overlook Syracuse's loss of All-American forward Billy Owens, who left a year early to join the NBA, or the Orangemen's lack of size and experience. Syracuse has only one senior on its roster and will suit up four freshmen and two sophomores.

As a result, the Orangemen collected just 82 points to finish in 28th position, 21 points behind No. 25 Louisville. Texas and Virginia also received more points than Syracuse.

Boeheim, who was not surprised by Syracuse's absence in the poll, said the team could win its way back into the poll before the end of the 1991-92 season.

"If we can make some 3s, we could surprise a few people. Of course, that's a big if," said Boeheim, whose team dropped its first exhibition game 95-85 to Marathon Oil on Tuesday night.

Although rankings offer no help on the court and Boeheim rarely pays attention to Syracuse's ranking, it is disappointing to see the Orangemen's perpetual presence in the polls come to an end, he said.

"Consistency is a nice thing and it says we've been consistent for eight years. And really we've been pretty much a Top 15 team for most of that time. It's something to be proud of," said Boeheim.

During its eight-year run, Syracuse was ranked No. 1 several times, including the 1987-1988 and 1989-1990 pre-season polls. The Orangemen's highest year-end finish was sixth in 1989-1990, their lowest was 18th.

Syracuse finished seventh last year with a 26-6 mark, although the Orangemen made history by becoming the first No. 2 seed ever to lose to a No. 15 seed when they lost to Richmond 73-69 in the opening round of the NCAA tournament.

POLL: Hogs ranked third

poll of 1987-88.

The opening poll of the season was top-heavy with teams from the power conferences — ACC, Big Ten, SEC and Big East — and lighter without perennial staples UNLV and Syracuse.

Arkansas, with three first-place votes and 1,390 points, was third, the first of three teams from the Southeastern Conference in spots 3-6. Kentucky, which is eligible for the NCAA tournament after serving a two-year ban for violations under Eddie Sutton, was fourth with 1,278 points, two more than Arizona, the Pac-10 invader which broke up the SEC inside straight.

Louisiana State, which will feature 7-foot-2 junior Shaquille O'Neal, had one first-place vote and 1,171 points for sixth and the Tigers were followed by Ohio State, 1,158; North Carolina, 1,135; Seton Hall, 1,096; and St. John's, 1,077.

Seton Hall was the only other team to receive a first-place vote, with one.

UCLA, the last team to repeat as national champions when the Bruins capped a seven-year run in 1973, led the Second Ten with 1,048 points and was followed by Kansas, Oklahoma State, Utah, Connecticut, Georgetown, Alabama, DePaul, Oklahoma and Michigan. The final five ranked teams were: Iowa, Wake Forest, Georgia Tech, Arizona State and Louisville.

Turkey Shootout soccer tourney begins Friday

Staff Report

The Midland Soccer Association's Turkey Shootout Soccer Tournament begins this Friday evening to coincide with the start of play in the first-ever FIFA Women's World Championship in China, where the U.S. team is highly favored to win the world cup.

"The success of the U.S. Women's National Team has a direct impact on the number of girls participating in age-group play," said Frank McCallum, MSA Girl's Commissioner. "This year we have seen a tremendous increase in the number of girl's teams participating in the under-12 and under-14 age groups."

This year's Shootout will boast 109 teams in all, from Texas and New Mexico, with Friday games at Hogan and Dunagan Parks and Saturday games at those parks as well as Windlands and Bluebird Parks. The tourney will culminate with an awards ceremony Sunday afternoon at Windlands Park, where former Dallas Sidekick Doc Lawson will help present the trophies.

Local age-group favorites include the Hot Shots and the Wildcats in the girl's under-10 bracket and Blaze '82 and the Strikers in boy's under-10 play.

Under-12 girl's favorites are the Bruisers and Bad Company. Blast '81 and Blast '80 are expected to do well in boy's under-12 play.

In under-14 girl's action, local favorites include Blast '78 and Shooting Stars, while the under-14 boy's open favorites are Blast '78 and Blast '79. Recreational favorites include the Midland Raiders and Midland Sting.

Under-16 boy's open favorites are Excaliber, Blast '76 and Blast '77. Under-16 girls contenders include Eclipse and Oddessa's Lady Flames.

Bowls lining up teams

Associated Press

While the major bowl picture is clear, the minor bowls are busy lining up attractive — and acceptable — matchups to complete the postseason lineup.

Official bids will be extended Sunday at 3 p.m. EST, but most deals have already been made.

The major bowls hinge on the outcome of Saturday's battle between No. 1 Florida State and No. 2 Miami.

Also, a new NCAA rule prohibits teams with less than six victories against Division I-A teams from playing in a bowl. This rule could present a problem for Stanford, which has a 6-3 record but with one victory coming against Cornell, a I-AA member. Stanford's final games are against Washington State and California.

The bowl picture as of Wednesday:

Jan. 1

ORANGE — Florida State-Miami winner vs. Nebraska or Colorado (Big Eight winner).

ROSE — Michigan (Big Ten winner) vs. Washington (Pac-10 winner).

SUGAR — Notre Dame vs. Florida (SEC winner).

FIESTA — Penn State vs. Tennessee.

COTTON — Texas A&M (SWC winner) vs. Florida State (if it loses to Miami), Big Eight runnerup (Nebraska, Colorado or Oklahoma).

FLORIDA CITRUS — Clemson vs. California

HALL OF FAME — Syracuse vs. Ohio State.

PEACH — East Carolina vs. Virginia or North Carolina State.

Dec. 31

HANCOCK — Illinois vs. UCLA.

COPPER — Baylor vs. Indiana or North Carolina State.

Dec. 30

HOLIDAY — Iowa vs. BYU-San Diego State winner (WAC winner).

FREEDOM — Tulsa vs. BYU-San Diego State loser.

Dec. 29

INDEPENDENCE — Arkansas (with one more victory) vs. Indiana, North Carolina State or West Virginia.

LIBERTY — Air Force vs. Mississippi-Mississippi State winner.

GATOR — Oklahoma or Nebraska vs. Georgia, Georgia Tech or Virginia.

Dec. 28

BLOCKBUSTER — Alabama vs. Miami (if it loses to Florida State), Colorado or Nebraska. Dec. 25

ALOHA — Stanford (with one more victory) vs. Georgia Tech or Pittsburgh.

Dec. 14

CALIFORNIA — Bowling Green vs. Fresno State or San Jose State (Big West winner).

CLEMENS: Erickson second

(From 1C)

Palmer (1973-75-76) had done it previously in the AL. Steve Carlton won four NL Cy Youngs and Tom Seaver three. Sandy Koufax is the only one to win three Cy Youngs when the award covered both leagues.

"The first was very special," Clemens said in Kapalua, Hawaii, where he is playing golf. "The second was a challenge because you guys kept reminding me of the jinx."

Erickson, 20-8 with a 3.43 ERA for the World Series champion Minnesota Twins, got three firsts, 12 seconds and five thirds for 56 points.

"I was a little surprised, but I thought I'd have a real solid chance," Clemens said. "But 20 games are very meaningful and Scott Erickson should be proud of that."

Jim Abbott of the California Angels, 18-11 with a 2.89 ERA, was third, with five seconds and 11 thirds for 26 points. Jack Morris of the Twins was fourth with 17 points and Bryan Harvey of the Angels was fifth with 10 points.

For Clemens, 1991 ended much differently from 1990, when he was ejected in Game 4 of the AL playoffs against Oakland after getting into a verbal altercation with umpire Terry Cooney and bumping umpire Jim Evans. This time, Boston faded in the stretch as Toronto won the AL East title.

Clemens started fast, winning his first six decisions, but had a 3-5 slump after that and was 11-5 at the All-Star break. He was 4-0 in September before losing two October starts.

He led the majors with 271 1-3 innings pitched, won the AL ERA title for the third time in six years and won his second league strikeout title. He had 13 complete games, his most since 1988, and his four shutouts increased his total to 29.

Still, he had better statistics in 1990, when he was 21-6 with a 1.93 ERA but lost the Cy Young to Oakland's Bob Welch, who won 27 games.

"Last year, I felt I had one of my best years, but 27 wins was an awful lot to try and top," Clemens said.

Clemens is the first AL starter to win the Cy Young without at least 20 victories since Pete Vuckovich of Milwaukee in 1982 (18-6). He is the first with 10 or more losses since LaMarr Hoyt of the Chicago White Sox in 1983 (24-10).

Clemens got a $100,000 bonus added to his $2.5 million salary for winning the award. Morris got $50,000 for finishing fourth, raising his 1991 income to $3.6 million.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 14, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your practical side comes to the fore now, enabling you to make exciting personal and professional gains. A new financial venture has great promise. Romance takes on special meaning early in 1992. The respect of your co-workers, friends and family reinforces your determination to have the strength of your convictions. Travel for business and pleasure next fall. You could find a very special place for your retirement years.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: Great Britain's Prince Charles, actors Brian Keith and McLean Stevenson, painter Claude Monet.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Routine matters require special attention to prevent costly mistakes. A co-worker lends a helping hand. Use your charisma to obtain the important information you need.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Do not try to force the issue when discussing a financial matter. Your co-workers are preoccupied. Tend to routine tasks that you can handle on your own. Great ideas abound tonight!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Buying or selling could be as easy as one, two, three now. Taking a calculated risk could pay off. This evening may not be right for entertaining at home; plan to go elsewhere.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): An excellent day to perfect residential and family plans. Also, you should pour your energy into projects on the launching pad. It is not a night to drift too far from your loved ones.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Family members and higher-ups could become testy today. You are better off keeping a low profile. Your thoughts are on the future tonight. Consult mate.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A financial goal can be attained today, probably through a friend's assistance. Expanding your social circle will help speed career progress. Phone faraway friends.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Cast aside any reclusive tendencies today and mingle. It is your time to hook up with wealthy and influential people. You can reel in big money if you fish the right streams!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A festive day, particularly in terms of family activities and home entertainment. A romantic message may herald an exciting new phase. Examine your relationship in the light of a recent discovery.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): This is a "good news" day as far as your household finances go. You can talk your way into a win-win position. Plans made on a moment's notice work out just great!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Overconfidence in a pal could set you back. Stay calm. Getting the whole story will help you rake in new profits. Stay off the beaten track if looking for fresh inspiration.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): There could be an exciting new domestic or financial chapter to your life. Dress to impress. Your creative genius is ignited by an unexpected revelation.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The day begins with a flourish. You are in the money and may win big dividends by reaching an accord with someone influential. A purchase you make for yourself or another is very worthwhile.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are born skeptics, reluctant to take anything at face value. They like to look beyond the obvious and find things out for themselves. Dedicated hobbyists, these Scorpios love sketching nature and working with animals or children. They are also fierce competitors even if they are loathe to admit it!

Opening lead: Queen of ♣ Major league baseball came to a surprising conclusion during the off-season. The Historical Committee decided that most no-hitters were lost in the late innings. We beg to differ—most go by the boards in the first few innings. Similarly, far too many bridge contracts are lost in the very early play.

South bid the hand as well as possible. With only four losers, the hand was surely worth a demand bid. When North showed no values to speak of, South wisely persisted to four spades—three no trump would have had no play after a club lead, which might have come from either defender.

West led the queen of clubs and continued with the jack. Declarer ruffed low, cashed the ace of trumps and crossed to the ten. A heart finesse won, but that was only declarer's ninth trick. When the king of hearts did not drop under the ace, declarer had to concede a heart and two diamonds in addition to the club already lost—down one.

Declarer should have taken time to plan the play before following to the first trick. There were eight sure tricks—six spades and the two red aces. The only place to find the two tricks needed for the contract was in the heart suit. Since a doubleton king of hearts onside was greatly against the odds, declarer should have striven to take two finesses.

"But there's only one entry to dummy!" you say. Right, but there's a 50-50 chance of developing a second. If West has the nine of spades, both of dummy's trumps can serve as entries!

Declarer must ruff the second club high, lead a trump and finesse the eight! When that holds, declarer successfully finesses the jack of hearts, crosses back to the ten of trumps and repeats the heart finesse. Making four-odd.

THE FAR SIDE

Unbeknownst to most ornithologists, the dodo was actually a very advanced species, living along quite peacefully until, in the 17th century, it was annihilated by men, rats and dogs. As usual.

Editor told him to trash Arnolds' house, tabloid reporter claims

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — A former National Enquirer reporter said an editor ordered employees of the tabloid to trash a home rented by Roseanne Arnold and photograph the mess for a story.

Arnold

The comedian and her husband, Tom Arnold, were sued for $205,296 in damage to the $3.5 million home. They countersued, saying the Enquirer did the dirty deed after they moved out in May 1990.

The Outlook newspaper in Santa Monica reported Tuesday that former Enquirer reporter James W. Cruse told his editor the home sustained "normal wear and tear" after the Arnolds moved out. He said his editor ordered other Enquirer employees to empty trash cans in the home and take pictures.

Richard S. Hoffman, attorney for the Lantana, Fla.-based tabloid, denied Cruse's scenario.

Cruse gave a deposition to attorneys for Arnold, star of television's "Roseanne."

Prince Charles

"It's most intriguing, as far as I'm concerned," he said as he looked at water from a mini-reservoir along dunes of the North Sea coast.

The water is purified by filtering it through sand.

Charles also toured a waste water treatment plant in the city of Lelystad and attended a luncheon hosted by Queen Beatrix.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — The country group Shenandoah was released from its contract with CBS-Sony after claiming the company authorized use of a name that led to trademark challenges.

The Nashville group filed for Chapter 11 reorganization in January, citing insurmountable debts from three years of litigation over the name.

The out-of-court settlement with CBS-Sony must be approved by a bankruptcy judge, Shenandoah manager Bill Carter said Monday.

Groups in Kentucky, Nevada and Massachusetts claimed prior right to use of the name Shenandoah. The Nashville group scored hits with "Church on Cumberland Road" and "Sunday in the South."

Spokeswomen for CBS-Sony wouldn't comment Wednesday.

WASHINGTON — Former first lady Betty Ford, former House Speaker Thomas "Tip" O'Neill and baseball great Ted Williams will receive the Presidential Medal of Freedom, the White House said Wednesday.

Others to get the award Nov. 18 from President Bush are: author and columnist William F. Buckley Jr., former Puerto Rico Gov. Luis A. Ferre, University of Chicago President Hanna Holborn Gray, scholar Friedrich August von Hayek and Vernon Walters, former U.S. ambassador to the United Nations.

Also receiving the award will be Russell Train, chairman of the World Wildlife Fund and the Conservation Foundation, and the Rev. Leon Sullivan, whose "Sullivan principles" were used as standards for foreign businesses that wanted to operate in South Africa under apartheid.

SOUTH PORTLAND, Maine — Schoolchildren sent President Bush and first lady Barbara about two dozen books, including "Bambi Gets Lost," to make up for the ones they lost when their vacation home was damaged in a storm.

"I'm sure she'll be happy to receive them," said Kathy Staffy, a spokeswoman for Mrs. Bush. "It's a wonderful gesture on the children's part."

Children at Kaler School collected books at Principal Douglas Caldwell's suggestion. An Oct. 30 storm damaged the first floor of the Bushes' Kennebunkport home and washed many of their books out to sea.

MALIBU, Calif. — Actor Malcolm McDowell has married artist Kelley Kuhr, his publicist said Wednesday.

The Tuesday ceremony was private.

After a California honeymoon, the couple will divide their time between homes in California, London and Italy, McDowell spokesman Brooks Roddan said.

McDowell, 48, and Kuhr, 24, "met on the beach in Southern California — Santa Monica — and developed a relationship over several years," said Roddan.

MIAMI — E.L. Doctorow gave a thumbs-up to the movie version of his novel "Billy Bathgate."

"This is a pretty good film based on one of the great novels of our age," he joked at the Miami Book Fair International on Monday.

The novel tells the story of New York gangsters in the 1930s.

Oil and gas conference opens

Houston Mayor Kathy Whitmire presents the key to the city to Argentina's President Carlos Saul Menem at the InterAmerican Petroleum and Gas Conference.

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Argentine President Carlos Saul Menem said Wednesday his country's efforts to deregulate and dissolve its national oil company are establishing a stronger economic base and encouraging private investment in the South American nation.

Menem was in Houston to kick off the InterAmerican Petroleum and Gas Conference before flying to Washington to meet with President Bush.

"In Argentina we have chosen freedom and risk, and with them the possibility of success, since only on that basis can we rebuild social justice and equity in society," Menem said in Spanish.

Since 1989, Menem's administration has been gradually deregulating the Argentine oil company, Yacimientos Petroliferos Fiscales, setting up an open oil market and increasing market competition.

He said the new operation allows for an oil market "with no crossed subsidies, with free prices all along the chain of production and marketing" and with natural technological development.

The administration also has cut back the secondary national petroleum reserves that have artificially supported prices. Menem said more than 20 million cubic meters of petroleum have been turned over to the private sector with more scheduled for bids before the end of the year.

In four of YPF's main fields — which produced between 60 and 65 percent of the country's petroleum — private in-

MCorp attorneys present company's plan to restructure $505 million debt

HOUSTON (AP) — Attorneys for MCorp, a Dallas-based bank holding company that was once the second-largest in Texas, asked a bankruptcy judge Wednesday to confirm its plan to restructure $505 million in debt.

U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Letitia Z. Clark listened to some arguments on the merits of the Chapter 11 plan Wednesday. The hearing will resume Friday morning, court officials said.

Creditors forced MCorp into an involuntary bankruptcy filing March 27, 1989. Two days later, bank regulators closed 20 of MCorp's 25 banks in a $2 billion bailout that is the nation's second-largest.

The company has since sold four of its remaining banks. It now owns a bank in New Braunfels and has financial service operations in Dallas.

The company has senior debt of about $370 million and junior debt of about $135 million. Estimates of MCorp's assets range from $420 million to $450 million.

The company expects to spend $50 million in settlement of disputed claims and general and legal expenses, leaving about $370 million to settle the debt.

On Tuesday, U.S. District Judge Lynn N. Hughes threw out nearly all of a $262.4 million claim by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. against MCorp. The FDIC had objected to MCorp's restructuring plan.

The move apparently left the agency without standing in the case. An FDIC spokesman said attorneys were considering

Russia set to open oil, gas bidding

DENVER (AP) — The Russian Federation announced the opening of competitive oil and gas bidding Wednesday, marking the first time a Soviet republic has conducted Western-style bidding for foreign contracts.

The move was an effort to reap hard currency and is part of Russian President Boris Yeltsin's goal to transform the republic's stagnant, centrally controlled economy to a free-market system.

Russia, which covers two-thirds of the territory of the Soviet Union, is one of the world's largest producers of oil and gas. Like many Soviet republics, it has begun wresting control over its natural resources from the central Soviet government.

Nearly 4 billion barrels of oil and 22 trillion cubic feet of gas were produced in 1990, which represents more than 90 percent of Soviet fuels production and export. To date, 1,715 oil and 670 gas fields have been discovered in the republic.

"It has vast developed and underdeveloped reserves which may outstrip those of even the Middle East," said

October .7 percent wholesale price increase is biggest jump of year

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices in October took their biggest leap in a year, a 0.7 percent increase that reflected higher costs for a wide array of products from food to oil to autos, the government said Wednesday.

Analysts labeled the jump a one-time aberration and not a sign that inflation is threatening to get out of control.

However, they predicted the price spurt would temporarily delay any further interest rate cuts by the Federal Reserve.

"This is a technical blip in inflation and it will go away after October," said Donald Ratajczak, director of forecasting at Georgia State University. "But the report will keep the Fed on the sidelines for awhile."

The Labor Department said the 0.7 percent spurt in its Producer Price Index, which measures inflationary pressures before they reach consumers, was the biggest advance since a 1.2 percent rise in October 1990.

Last year's increase occurred during a period when world oil prices soared after Iraq's invasion of Kuwait. For most of this year, inflation has been well-behaved as energy prices retreated after the successful conclusion of the Persian Gulf War and weak demand from the recession kept the lid on other price pressures.

But last month, energy prices jumped 1.7 percent as gasoline and home heating oil costs rose. Food prices, which had been

INVESTORS' GUIDE

What is collateralized mortgage obligation?

By Bill Doyle

Q. I have a total of about $100,000 in certificates of deposit at two banks, currently earning about 7 percent and due to reach maturity soon. Because interest rates have declined, I know I will get less if I renew these CDs when they mature.

Doyle

The financial advisor at another bank strongly recommends I put the money from the matured CDs into CMOs to increase my income. I know very little about CMOs. Can you explain them?

A. CMO stands for "collateralized mortgage obligation." They are created in two steps.

First, a mortgage pass-through security, backed by a pool of mortgages is issued. As homeowners make payments on the mortgages, the money — part interest and part principal — is sent along to owners of the pass-through security.

Most investors are familiar with those Government National Mortgage Association, known as "Ginnie Mae"; Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp., known as "Freddie Mac," and Federal National Mortgage Association, known as "Fannie Mae," securities.

When all the mortgages in a pool are paid off, owners of the pass-through securities not only have received interest, but all of their money back. The poll is dissolved and investors get nothing more.

A CMO security takes this one step further. It is backed by Ginnie Maes, Freddie Macs and or Fannie Maes and divided into a number of classes — usually four — which are sold to investors.

The classes have different maturities, ranging from two to 20 years. In some CMO arrangements, a zero-coupon bond also is issued. Interest is paid regularly to all classes except the zero-coupon bond, which is sold at a big discount below its face value and redeemed at face value on its maturity date.

Principal payments do not go equally to owners of all classes. Instead, that money goes first to owners of the class with the shortest maturity. When that class is retired, principal payments go to the next shortest class. That process continues until all classes are redeemed.

Q. Why do CMOs pay more interest than CDs?

A. Because the interest rates on mortgages are higher than CD interest.

Q. A broker told me I can get all my money back from a CMO even before its maturity date. Is that true?

A. It's possible, but not guaranteed.

Many homeowners prepay mortgages early. As a result, the trustee for a CMO has spare cash in the kitty. The owner of a CMO not yet matured can submit his or her security for redemption. If it's at the top of the waiting list for redemption and money is available, the security will be redeemed at face value.

CMOs also can be sold before maturity in the open market. The price you get might be above or below face value, depending on market conditions.

Q. A recent brokerage firm advertisement stated, "While CMOs are fully collateralized by U.S. government agency obligations, they are NOT issued or guaranteed by the U.S. government."

Does this mean they are not a safe investment?

A. Not really. While there is some risk in all investments, CMOs are counted as high on the risk vs. safety scale.

Payment of interest and principal on Ginnie Maes is guaranteed by the full faith and credit of our federal government. Even if homeowners default on mortgages in a Ginnie Mae pool, you can be absolutely certain the payments will be made to owners of Ginnie Maes and CMOs backed by Ginnie Maes.

Freddie Mac and Fannie Mae pass-through securities do not have such direct government backing. However, mortgages in those pools are insured by private companies. And, if there it any additional loss, it is covered by Freddie Mac and Fannie Mae. Count the possibility of lost payments as virtually nonexistent.

Prices ease

NEW YORK (AP) — Petroleum prices eased Wednesday afternoon, reversing course after an early run-up on news that the nation's supply of gasoline was at its lowest level since 1973.

By the end of the session at the New York Mercantile Exchange, only gasoline futures for near-term delivery were still selling for higher prices than in Tuesday's session.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in December settled at $22.35 per barrel, down 15 cents. It was the eight straight session that pushed crude oil lower, for a total of $1.47 per barrel.

All of the petroleum futures rose in early trading, in response to a report released overnight by the American Petroleum Institute, showing the nation's gasoline supply had fallen last week by 4.1 million barrels, to 200.2 million.

Prices gave up most of their gains, with everything but the gasoline losing ground for the day.

The plunge ignored news that stormy weather was causing loading problems at two North Sea platforms, according to Victor Yu, vice president of futures at the Nikkhah Energy Group of Refco Inc.

Dollar slips

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar was mostly lower in domestic trading after rising overseas Wednesday in a muted reaction to a surge in inflation last month.

The British pound rose to $1.7745 in New York from $1.7700 on Tuesday.

But the dollar advanced against the Japanese yen, rising to 130.00 yen in New York from 129.95 Tuesday.

Market rises

NEW YORK — Stock prices closed mostly higher Wednesday after recovering from a dip caused by an an unexpected rise in producer prices. The report sparked fears of renewed inflation.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks closed at 3,065.30, up 11.19 points. Earlier, the key index was off as much as 15 points.

In the broader market, declining issues narrowly outnumbered advancing ones on the New York Stock Exchange, with 768 up, 840 down and 542 unchanged.

Stocks recovered in the last two hours of trading, boosted in part by computer-driven buying and by the market's bullish sentiment of the past few weeks.

Among most-active blue chip stocks, Goodyear fell 1⅛ to 49⅜, Eastman Kodak rose 1 to 49⅛, General Motors gained 1⅝ to 34⅛ and Philip Morris was unchanged at 70⅝.

Many firms lack AIDS policy

■ A 1988 survey of 623 U.S. companies found that 19 percent of the companies had a written or unwritten AIDS policy; 11 percent were considering one.

By Dan Blake
AP business writer

NEW YORK — The compassion and support that embraced Magic Johnson after he announced his infection with the AIDS virus is not typical of the reaction many patients face when they break the news to their employers.

Aside from a few leaders, such as Digital Equipment Corp., Levi Strauss & Co. and International Business Machines Corp., most employers lack any formal AIDS policy and procedures.

"The vast majority of companies have done nothing and smaller companies have done even less," said Alan Emery, a San Francisco-based management health consultant.

But just as Johnson's announcement is helping individuals realize the disease could touch them, employers are starting to understand that their workers and business aren't immune.

Since the Los Angeles Lakers basketball star disclosed his infection, companies have been scrambling to gather information on how they should respond if a worker becomes infected.

Smaller companies frequently haven't encountered the situation and are caught unprepared when a worker tests positive for HIV, said B.J. Stiles, president of the National Leadership Coalition on AIDS, which counts companies and labor organizations among its members.

A 1988 survey of 623 U.S. companies commissioned by Fortune magazine and Allstate Insurance Co. found that 19 percent of the companies had a written or unwritten AIDS policy. Eleven percent were considering a policy, according to the survey, Business Response to AIDS.

Business leaders have come to understand AIDS better in the past few years and the situation for afflicted workers is improving, but AIDS activists say discrimination is still a fact of life for many.

"Magic Johnson is atypical. ... People should think carefully about informing their employer," said Carissa Cunningham, spokeswoman for the AIDS Action Council, which lobbies Congress on AIDS issues.

Most HIV-infected workers have less physically demanding jobs than Johnson's and won't have to retire or quit to take care of themselves.

"One unfortunate aspect is he announced his HIV status at the same time he announced his retirement," said Ruth Harlow, staff attorney for the American Civil Liberties Union AIDS Project. "It plants in people's minds that you can't do your job."

On-the-job reactions range from getting fired to being ostracized by co-workers who don't want to sit next to an afflicted employee or use the employee's telephone.

The virus cannot be transmitted through casual contact such as shaking hands, hugging, crying, coughing or sneezing. AIDS is not contracted from eating in restaurants even if a restaurant worker has AIDS or carries the AIDS virus. AIDS does not spread through eating utensils, office machinery or furniture.

AIDS has a bigger impact on small businesses, where one terminally ill employee in a shop of 20 can dramatically push up independent group health insurance premiums.

Emery said if several small businesses could pool their employees' health coverage, they could spread the risk much wider. By virtue of their size, larger companies are better prepared to deal with the disease and can more easily absorb the costs.

Far from being the most expensive disease, AIDS isn't even considered in the top 10.

The national average for treating AIDS from diagnosis to death is about $70,000. But other health problems that cost far more don't draw a panicky reaction. A complicted pregnancy can run hundreds of thousands of dollars and taking care of a retired worker with Alzheimer's disease can run more than $1 million, Emery said.

Cunningham, the AIDS Action Council spokeswoman, said an employer's written AIDS policy should ensure that the employee's wishes for confidentiality should be observed.

Emery said a policy should also detail the expectations of managers, explicitly saying that an afflicted worker will be allowed to work as long as he or she can. That's already part of the law and is addressed in the Americans with Disabilities Act.

The policy should set a tone for the workplace, so people can feel comfortable discussing the disease, he said. The expectations should emphasize that co-workers aren't to isolate the infected worker and employees need to be educated regarding how difficult it is to transmit the virus.

Emery and others said that one of the biggest problems patients face is getting time off to see doctors. Employers sometimes don't accommodate an infected person as much as they would someone with heart disease or another serious illness.

PRICES: Analysts don't think increase is bad sign falling for four months, turned up as well, led by higher costs for beef, pork and chicken.

The Consumer Price Index for October, which reflects retail prices, was to be released today. Analysts said the bad PPI report had left them braced for a worse-than-expected figure for consumer inflation as well.

Some economists said retail prices in October could be up as much as 0.5 percent, but they said that also should be viewed as a temporary speed up after a prolonged period of price weakness.

A second report Wednesday showed car sales slumping in early November, which economists said confirmed their view that demand remains weak as the economy struggles to recover from the recession.

Many analysts predicted that weak demand will force roll backs in some of the October price increases while the threat of a renewed recession and further job layoffs will keep wage raises under control.

"I do not think we are seeing the beginning of a new upward trend on inflation," said Allen Sinai, chief economist of the Boston Co. "It simply does not square with what else is going on in the economy where there is still tremendous downward pressure on prices and wages."

Still, the wholesale price report unsettled financial markets and analysts said the Fed is likely to delay any further interest rate cuts at least until next month.

Some analysts had expected another Fed easing as early as today, especially in light of increasing pressure from the Bush administration to spur growth in a presidential election year.

The Fed's last round of credit easing occurred Nov. 6.

Preston Martin, former vice chairman of the Federal Reserve, said Wednesday that the Fed would be forced to ease further because the country was still in a recession. He criticized Fed officials for keeping credit conditions "too tight for too long" before the July 1990 start of the recession.

While the administration has insisted that positive economic growth in the July-September quarter shows the country has emerged from the recession, many economists are worried that will prove to be a false start with growth turning negative again in the October-December quarter.

Even with October's price spurt, wholesale inflation through the first 10 months of the year was running at a zero annual rate, reflecting big declines early on.

For the whole year, economists said they expected wholesale prices to increase by 0.7 percent and consumer prices to rise by around 3 percent.

MENEM: Oil, gas companies become private businesses

(From 10C)

vestments dollars already have between 50 and 90 percent interest.

In addition, Menem said, "non-strategic assets belonging to YPF, such as ports, ships, ducts, refineries, storage systems, will be transferred to the private sector during 1992.

"And what is even more important: YPF itself has been transformed into a corporation and its shares will allow the participation of private capital," Menem said. "The company is being structurally reformed, with the assistance of the World Bank and an important international consulting firm."

Likewise, he said, Gas del Estado, the nation's natural gas company, also will become a private operation.

Menem said he recently revealed the "Argentina Plan," that calls for more oil exploration, to the World Petroleum Congress.

BIDS: Russians hope to secure foreign contracts

(From 10C)

Edward Gendelman, president of Wavetech Geophysical Inc., the Denver-based company coordinating the bidding.

Wavetech is the western partner of Geointertech, a joint venture with the Russian government.

Despite the vast reserves, Russian oil production has dropped in recent years, due in part to aging equipment and inefficient management.

The bidding area is divided into 22 blocks and covers about 28,170 square miles.

A bidding conference today and Friday in Denver will detail for companies how the process will work. Sealed bids, which can be submitted by any oil and gas company, must be submitted by April 14, 1992.

"Business relations with Western companies are one of our highest priorities," said V.A. Dvurechensky, deputy chairman of the Russian Federation's State Committee of Geology and Utilization of Energy Resources and Raw Minerals.

European companies have been more aggressive in pursuing the contracts than U.S. firms, he said, although Texaco and Conoco have both expressed interest.

"French, British and Norwegian companies are very active in trying to strike ventures there," Dvurechensky said.

Jack Holten, Wavetech vice president of exploration, said each of the 22 tracts could fetch tens of millions of dollars.

"It's an extremely lucrative area because it's good high-gravity oil that sits close to existing pipelines," Holten said.

MCORP: Firm has debt plan options to "protect its position" in the confirmation hearing.

In September 1989, the FDIC filed claims against MCorp of about $847 million. Earlier this year, the agency reduced the claims to $281 million. The FDIC made the claims because it said the parent company had enriched itself at the expense of its banks.

MCorp has always denied those claims. And the company is hoping damages it expects to collect from the FDIC in a related dispute will help pay creditors.

In February this year, the late U.S. District Judge Robert Porter in Dallas ruled the FDIC illegally took over 12 of the 20 MCorp banks.

MCorp is seeking up to $1 billion in damages, which Porter had not set before his death last week.

Japanese 'foreigners' experience culture shock on return to Japan

By Steven R. Weisman
N.Y. Times News Service

HAMAMATSU, Japan — When Japan opened its shores last year to a flood of immigrants from Brazil and Peru, few adjustment problems were expected. After all, the newcomers were Japanese, or at least descendants of Japanese who had sought opportunities in South America earlier this century.

Now Japanese have discovered that while the immigrants may look familiar, they act like foreigners. They talk more noisily than native-born Japanese do, and greet each other with laughter and embraces. They have trouble with the language. And they complain about their problems.

"The people of Japan do not respect us," said Roberto Ishizuka, 26, a former automobile worker in Sao Paulo who works six long days a week making car seats at a factory in Hamamatsu in the region west of Tokyo. "The Japanese treat us like some kind of an inferior race."

In Japan these days, Portuguese-language radio programs and newspapers have proliferated, offering news and music from Brazil, as well as advice on problems in Japan. There was even a recent Brazilian street festival flavored with samba and salsa in Tokyo.

At the Tia Maria restaurant in Hamamatsu, a couple of dozen Brazilians of Japanese descent were enjoying steaming bowls of feijoada, drinking Brazilian beer and reading newspapers in Portuguese. A sign on the wall warned people to disperse in the late evenings, as requested by police.

Despite sometimes back-breaking work in foundries, factories and construction sites; life on the whole has been good for the newcomers, who can make $2,000 a month and send half of it home. Often they reside in company-owned dormitories and are bused to their 14-hour-a-day jobs.

But the immigrants say they suffer discrimination in stores and restaurants, citing a story of one department store near Hamamatsu that once carried a loudspeaker announcement that a group of them had entered and the clerks should be on guard.

Another major problem, workers and government officials say, is that employers usually pay no health or welfare benefits, leaving workers helpless when injured by molten metal or a sharp blade on the job.

Unscrupulous recruiting agents siphon off their wages, they say, and make sweeping promises about jobs that prove false.

"The people over here think Brazilians are living in Brazil like wild Indians," said Miyako Clemente, who works at an auto-parts company. "Sometimes I can feel my roots here, and I want to learn and write Japanese. But sometimes it makes me desperate and I feel like I want to get out."

In a turbulent world where millions flee oppression and starvation and migrate to other countries, the 150,000 people of Japanese descent looking for work in their ancestral land may seem like a trickle. But it marks a break with decades of Japanese refusal to let in unskilled foreigners.

Not that the need has not been great. Employers universally complain that younger Japanese in a newly affluent society no longer want to do dirty, difficult or dangerous work, and factories, restaurants and shops often seem desperate to fill jobs.

In recent years, many of these jobs have gone to Pakistanis, Bangladeshis, Thais and other Asians who come to Japan on tourist visas and remain illegally while the immigration authorities look the other way. Estimates are that more than 100,000 illegal Asian immigrants work in Japan.

But Parliament, worried that the country might become like France or Germany, flooded by foreigners with strange customs, enacted tough new curbs on immigration of unskilled people two years ago, and the police began expelling the Asians.

Cadillac: new era of design, performance

Bob Plunkett

Expect Cadillac to rewrite its books of design and performance with the new Seville sedan and sporty Eldorado coupe, two familiar names now dressed in decidedly new forms from the ground up.

To fully appreciate these new entries, you must first forget they wear that ultimate crest from General Motors.

You see, Seville and Eldorado drive and ride and feel like no previous Cadillacs, and, for that matter, no other cars coming out of a GM factory.

The suspension is crisp and cocky, much like that of, say, a Lexus or BMW.

Steering is direct and extremely responsive, almost like a sports car.

The ride is plush — as you would expect a Cadillac's ride to be — but you can still feel the road and all of its nuances, which communicate vital data to an active driver.

Power is superb, even zippy, despite the weight and muscular feel of these cars.

And the looks. Smooth to the nth degree, an extended hood with sloping nose and curt rear clip — these can't be cars from a line that caters to blue-haired matrons.

Yet they are. Seville and the more radically styled Eldorado embody the best automotive achievements yet from GM in a new era when this automotive giant is obviously on a strong upswing roll.

The last major revision for the line in the mid-1980s essentially amounted to cosmetics, other than the shift from rear to front-wheel drive.

For 1992, however, changes are so profound you will know in a glance these two Cadillacs chart a new course. Also, they're longer, taller and wider — back to the realm of full-size.

Begin with that stunning new streamlined silhouette, and the articulated grille that caps the downsloping nose.

At the rear, the tail drops quickly to the bumper.

On Seville, the rear width has been accented by an ingenious high-line sweep of brake lights which stretches across the top of the decklid, while on Eldorado twin vertical spikes of lights seem like bold exclamation marks designed to get your attention.

As sharp as the external appearance may be, it's what you can't see at first glance that matters most — beginning with the power train.

1992 Cadillac Eldorado

Fast Facts

Cadillac Seville, Eldorado

Description: personal luxury sedan and coupe
Model Options: Seville and STS
Eldorado and Touring Coupe
Wheelbase: Seville — 111.0 inches
Eldorado: 108.0 inches
Overall length: Seville — 203.9 inches
Eldorado 202.2 inches
Engine size: OHV 4.9-L V8 SEFI
Transmission/speeds: Auto/4
Rear/front drive: front
Steering: power rack and pinion
Braking: ventilated 4-wheel discs
Bosch II antilock
Driver's-side airbag: yes
EPA mileage estimate city/hwy.: 16/25 mpg

The engine, the same big 4.9-liter V8 which powers most of the other Caddies, easily beats its domestic competitors.

With a cast aluminum block, iron cylinder heads and two valves for each cylinder, the package produces 200 husky horses, more than sufficient to pull this big load.

Redline comes to 5750 rpm, and there's enough strength on-board to propel it from zero to 60 miles per-hour in well under nine seconds.

The transmission, a 4-speed automatic, seems especially smooth, thanks in part too a new tubular steel mount designed to quell typical transaxle quivers.

These new cars carry a power-assisted rack and pinion steering system that is far more responsive than previous Cadillacs, and there are four disc brakes aboard, all connecting to a computer-controlled Bosch II anti-lock system.

Seville and Eldorado offer a serious upgrade that adds sporty performance components to the independent suspension system, plus some styling perks and luxury gear that will appeal to the action-oriented driver.

Seville's upscale edition is called the Touring Sedan or STS, while the Eldorado version is the Touring Coupe.

If you're a driver's driver — one who looks forward to the curves instead of a boring interstate slab — then you need to test the STS or Touring Coupe.

The upgrade adds another $2,500 to the car's bottom line, but brings a stiffer suspension package including front and rear stabilizer shafts.

Computers play important roles in all Cadillacs, and for these new entries one runs the Computer Command Ride System which governs four sets of electronically-controlled struts to vary suspension ride qualities as speed changes.

The result is that you can push these Caddies further than you may have dared in previous editions.

The action is lively, quite fun while still maintaining an air of luxury, and guaranteed to draw a whole new market — the young-yet-affluent set — to Cadillac showrooms.

Seville and Eldorado have traditionally differentiated themselves from other models in Cadillac's line due to the level of sport and personal luxury gear, but these new models go even further.

The base Seville comes with electronic instruments, a column shifter and knit cloth seating, but the sport interior option adds analog gauges (including tachometer), four-way power lumbar support for front seats and an option for rich leather upholstery.

Zebrano wood inserts dress up the instrument panel and accent front doors, and there's an overhead console with reading lamps and parking place for a garage door opened, even a built-in case to store sunglasses.

In the rear, passengers are coddled in comfy sculpted seating with fold-down center armrest. A rear booster system for heating and air conditioning brings separate console-mounded controls and vents.

The special editions, Touring Sedan and Touring Coupe, feature an all-leather interior with six-way power front seats, more extensive use of fine wood trim, plus a 200-watt AM/FM sound system with six speakers and cassette deck.

Cadillac has backed its 1992 Seville and Eldorado editions with a four-year, 50,000 mile warranty that covers virtually everything from engine to air conditioner.

That warranty makes its own statement about GM's new commitment to quality in the 1990s.

Sherman Chevrolet-Geo to 'drive for education'

Schools in the Midland area can now receive free Apple computers, Magnavox audio-visual equipment and Compton's encyclopedia sets from Jack Sherman Chevrolet-Geo.

It's part of the "Driving for Education" program designed to provide much needed computer and other high-tech learning equipment to area elementary schools.

"Children are the hope for the future. And, in the future, computer literacy will be as basic to a child's education as reading and writing," said Jack Sherman, president of Jack Sherman Chevrolet-Geo.

Jack Sherman plans to make it easy for schools and their volunteer groups to earn free Apple computers, Magnavox audio-visual equipment and Compton's encyclopedia sets.

■ Jack Sherman Chevrolet-Geo has already notified school superintendents, principals, teachers and school volunteers and support groups about the program and has provided free informational materials.

■ School groups, in turn, encourage their families and friends to simply visit jack Sherman Chevrolet-Geo and test drive any new vehicle during the school's designated "Test Drive Week."

■ When a pre-determined number of "proof of drive" certificates are tallied, schools can select equipment from six different award levels. There is no limit to the amount of equipment a school can receive.

■ The program involves no cost ot the school or the taxpayers and no purchase is required.

There are a variety of state-of-the art computer models and categories from which the schools can choose, including Apple Macintosh LC HD40s, Classic 2/40s, IIe's, Magnavox Television/VCR Combination and Camcorders as well as Compton's encyclopedia sets.

Jack Sherman Chevrolet-Geo is one of a number of Chevrolet/Geo dealerships nationwide taking the lead with the "Driving for Education" program. The program is open to all public, private and parochial schools in the Jack Sherman Chevrolet-Geo service area.

As a business and education partnership, the program relies on the enthusiasm and organizational efforts of PTOs, PTAs, school administrators, teachers and volunteers groups.

For information call Rick Pickard or Dave Roberson at 694-9601. Jack Sherman Chevrolet-Geo is located at 4100 W. Wall in Midland.

Scientists ponder long-term warning system

By Robert Dvorchak
Associated Press writer

Nuclear wastes are dangerous and should be avoided — everyone knows that. But 10,000 years from now, when our descendents happen on a cache of nuclear wastes, how will they know to stay away?

Some type of warning is needed. In 10,000 years fences would rust, concrete would crumble, guard dogs would die. And who knows if anyone will be speaking English 100 centuries from now.

Communications experts say the odds improve if the same warning is delivered several ways: marking the burial site with a universal danger symbol and tombstone-like monoliths engraved with messages in several languages.

And others have proposed an "atomic priesthood" — a relay system to pass the word by mouth from age to age.

"The atomic priesthood is merely a fancy term for a self-perpetuating committee or task force. The worst way to do it is to entrust the government," said Thomas Sebeok of Indiana University.

"The idea is that each generation should re-input the warning and relay it to the next, with the veiled threat that to ignore the mandate would be tantamount to inviting some sort of supernatural retribution," he said.

Sebeok is a professor of semiotics, which studies the ways people communicate with one another by word, symbol and gesture.

He figures the priesthood — which he admits he has been roundly criticized for suggesting — should be made up of contemporary shamans and druids such as semioticians, physicists, radiation experts, linguists, anthropologists and psychologists.

Hopefully, they will have more success than ancient Egyptians, who tried to thwart grave-robbers by attaching curses to Pharoah's tombs. Most of those alarms, unheeded by thieves who didn't understand the words, were found in pyramids that had already been looted, plundered and quarried.

'The atomic priesthood is merely a fancy term for a self-perpetuating committee or task force. The worst way to do it is to entrust the government.'

Indiana University Professor Thomas Sebeok

The responsibilty for giving nuclear garbage a decent burial falls on the U.S. Department of Energy. The stuff must be isolated for 10,000 years before radioactivity decays to background levels. Some of the wastes will keep their potency for hundreds of thousands of years, unless modern day alchemists can convert the mountains of deadly trash into something tamer.

DOE wants to encase tons of spent uranimum pellets, heavy metals and other high-tech junk in a glass-like state so it can't mix easily with water, then entomb it in catacombs burrowed from rock formation deep inside the earth.

The first permanent graveyard for wastes from five decades of atomic bomb production is awaiting opening in the New Mexico badlands. The Waste Isolation Pilot Project, as the final resting place for military wastes is known, cost $1 billion to carve out of salt beds. A legal snag has delayed the first shipments.

Meanwhile, no final resting place has been approved for tons of commercial nuclear wastes, now stockpiling at reactor sites around the nation. But tests are being done at Nevada's Yucca Mountain, where cooled lava formations are 12 times more dense than concrete.

Eventually, if the repositories ever open, people must be isolated from the lethal legacy. So in the 1980s, the DOE sought suggestions from a team of experts called the Human Interference Task Force.

One idea is a symbol that conveys the same message as a skull and crossbones or a Mr. Yuk sticker has on contemporary poisons. It would be a trefoil, colored yellow to stand out, that would mean: "Caution: Biohazardous Waste Buried Here."

Cartoon panels have also been suggested because no words would be needed, something like a futuristic takeoff on the Ghostbusters logo, picturing a shovel with a line through it so no one will dig up the waste.

Engineers are advised not to use precious metals or valuable stones in the warning markers, because future generations will steal them — the way past pillagers looted burial sites.

The nuclear burial grounds should be marked on future maps and detailed scientific documents should be stored at several locations and libraries for future reference, the task force said. The recommendations were contained in a report entitled "Communications Measures To Bridge 1,000 Millenia."

At the very least, the future deserves a warning that it is inheriting dangerous substances such as cesium, plutonium, technicium and other exotic sounding stuff. Then it becomes their problem, authorities say.

Litterbugs invade once-sacred Mount Fuji

By Eric Talmadge
Associated Press writer

TOKYO (AP) — From a distance, Mount Fuji, the symbol of Japan, looks as pure as the fresh snow that caps its peak. But up close, the once-sacred mountain is a mess.

This year, 3.6 million tourists visited Japan's tallest peak. During the two-month summer climbing season alone nearly 200,000 hiked to its 12,385-foot summit.

And, local officials lament, most visitors are leaving more than just their footprints.

"Mount Fuji used to be a sacred mountain, and desecrating it was seen as sinful," said Yoshiaki Watanabe, director of the Keep Mount Fuji Clean Society.

"Now it's a place for tourism," he said.

Though the Japanese have a reputation for personal cleanliness, their lakes and beaches tend to be an unsightly clutter of plastic and paper litter.

Overcrowding has contributed to the pollution of the more accessible scenic spots, like Mount Fuji, and Watanabe said many Japanese simply accept litter as a part of the scenery.

"I guess it's just the way people are," he said. "But with our tradition of worshiping nature, it is very disappointing that Mount Fuji would get like this."

For centuries, Mount Fuji was believed to be a bridge to the gods, or a god itself, and ascending it was considered a religious act. Its near perfect conical shape has long inspired Japanese artists and poets.

But the mythical significance of the mountain has faded this century with modernization. The smoothness of Mount Fuji's slopes has also made it a relatively easy target for even the most timid climbers.

Its peak is snow-free in the summer, and buses from Tokyo, a four-hour drive, go more than halfway to the top — 7,606 feet. From there, the peak is a six- or seven-hour hike.

"Climbers at Fuji are more like tourists than mountaineers," said Watanabe. "They go up at night so that they can watch the sunrise from the peak. They eat a lot on the way, and, figuring that no one will see them in the darkness, they just toss their trash."

Selling counterfeit brand-name rice latest scam in Japan

TOKYO (NYT) — Authorities in Japan are facing a rash of counterfeit cases involving some of the country's best-known and most expensive brands. The bogus merchandise is not designer handbags or fancy watches, but rice.

Earlier this fall police arrested seven men and charged them with unlawful use of a government inspection seal after they were allegedly caught selling common grades of rice in bags labeled as a far more expensive brand.

A more recent case involves a new brand of rice called Hitome-bore (which means "love at first sight") produced in Miyagi Prefecture in northern Japan, a region known for the quality of its rice.

The widely advertised new brand of rice was not officially released to stores until Nov. 6 and is sold in distinctive plastic bags embossed with a dancing celestial maiden and carrying a seal of authenticity issued by the Japan Grain Inspection Association.

But days before the official release, rice in vinyl packets bearing the name Hitome-bore and the information that it was grown in Miyagi Prefecture began showing up in Tokyo, Osaka and other cities throughout the country.

Because of the difference in packaging, Miyagi Prefecture officials suspect the rice to be counterfeit. An investigation is under way.

"This is the first time anything like this has happened with rice from Miyagi Prefecture," said an official with the prefectural government's agriculture division. "I am just shocked."

But the official added with a note of pride that the case offers proof of the wide popularity of rice from the prefecture.

Another case of counterfeit rice that circulated in large amounts involved the Uonuma Koshihikari brand produced in Niigata Prefecture, another region famous for its rice.

Sixty kilograms (132 pounds) of Uonuma Koshihikari sells for about 23,000 yen ($177) at wholesale, compared with 19,000 yen ($146) for the same amount of a standard grade of rice.

The counterfeit rice was discovered in August when a Tokyo retailer complained to an agricultural cooperative in Niigata Prefecture about bugs in a bag of rice carrying the Uonuma Koshihikari brand. When co-op officials checked the rice they found that it was not authentic Uonuma Koshihikari.

Officials of the government's Food Agency launched an investigation and found that miscellaneous varieties of relatively cheap rice were being sold.

Indians' conflict over Rose Parade grand marshal heats up

N.Y. Times News Service

PASADENA, Calif. — While Rose Parade float builders prepare for the annual New Year's Day floral extravaganza, American Indians are planning protests over the selection of Christopher Columbus' descendant as grand marshal.

Tournament of Roses officials have been stung by criticism that selecting Cristobal Colon as grand marshal is an insult, said William Flinn, assistant executive director for the tournament.

"We haven't tried to hurt anybody," he said. "We try to stay out of the political arena, but it seems like a sign of our times. The parade is supposed to bring enjoyment and to free us of some of the daily challenges we all face."

Several American-Indian leaders have rejected a proposal by tournament officials to name an Indian co-grand marshal and say that nothing short of rescinding Colon's invitation will stop parade-day protests.

"They're showing the country they are very insensitive to our feelings," said Vera Roche, chief of the Gabrielino nation. "(Cristobal Colon's) ancestors had done so much to ruin the world. Our people are still suffering from discrimination, hate, dishonor, distrust and killing.

"We're not out to spoil the Rose Parade — I watch it every year on T.V. — but it's an insult and degrading. Do they (organizers) think this is a game?"

Rep. Ben Nighthorse Campbell, D-Colo., Congress' only American Indian member, initially rejected a Tournament of Roses request to be a co-grand marshal for the 103rd Rose Parade.

"It smacks of tokenism," said Campbell's press secretary, Carol Knight.

But Campbell has agreed to reconsider after parade officials offered him a forum before the parade to tell the story of the American Indians, Knight said.

Tournament president Robert L. Cheney, who selected Colon and the 1992 theme, "Voyages of Discovery," did not return phone calls.

Los Angeles-area American Indians rejected the co-grand marshal concept.

"Anyone who was co-opted in that way would be disassociated nationwide as an Indian of substance," said Bunny Nightwalker-Hatcher, an American-Indian member of the Pasadena Human Relations Commission.

At a rowdy Human Relations Commission public hearing last week, American Indians, Hispanics and other residents said they were insulted that Colon, Columbus' 20th direct descendent, was chosen to lead the floral pageant.

On Nov. 1, the Los Angeles County Commission for Women drafted a letter to tournament officials noting that the all-male panel of judges for the rose queen and her court does not reflect the diversity of the region.

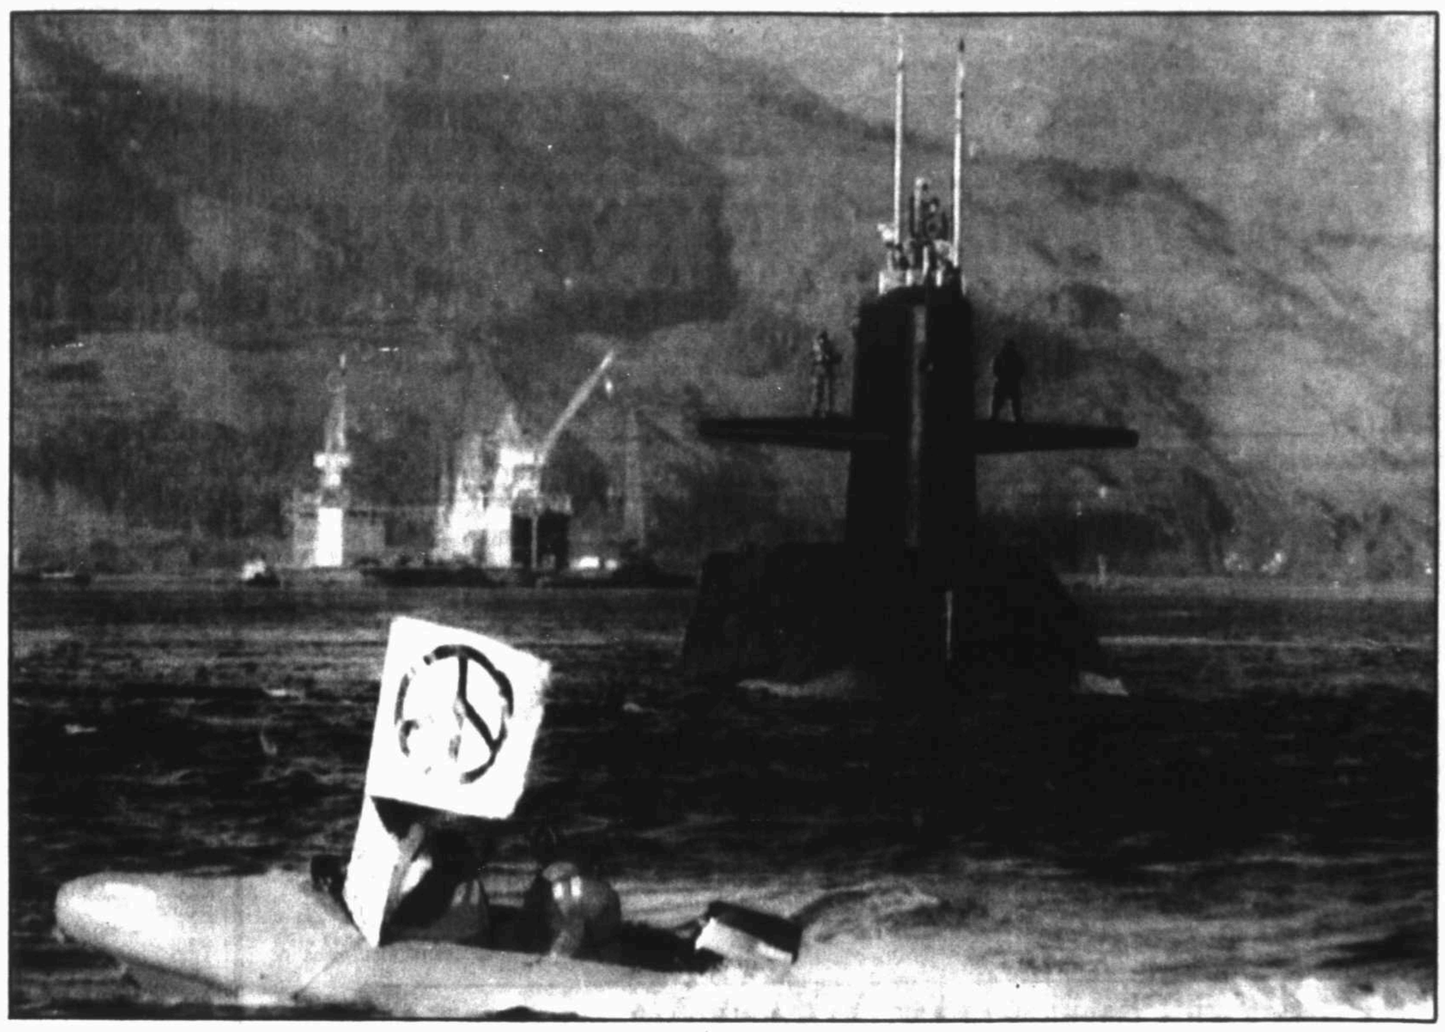

The Pasadena City Council is being drawn into the issue as well. It is expected to discuss Tuesday a recommendation by the commission to ask Colon to withdraw as grand marshal.

"I'll be at the parade to protest if Colon remains as grand marshal," said Roche, from the suburban city of Baldwin Park. "I'll probably stand right in front of the carriage. We have to educate people that history has to be rewritten, and if this is the way to do it, we'll have to do it this way."

Colon, who was away from his home in Madrid, Spain, could not be reached for comment.

Flinn said the private, non-profit group does not intend to revoke Colon's title as grand marshal.

Pasadena Mayor Jess Hughston and Councilman Bill Thomson, also a 14-year tournament member, said they oppose stepping into the issue.

Last to leave

A dinghy flying the flag of the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament speeds past the Poseidon class nuclear powered missile submarine USS Will Rogers in Holy Loch, Scotland, Saturday. The submarine was scheduled to be the last to leave Holy Loch Base, which is due to close early next year. The base has been the focus for anti-nuclear protests for more than 20 years.

Officials seek peek at Weight Watchers' scales

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — A state official who regulates commercial scales said she is tired of fighting Weight Watchers International to ensure that its scales don't make clients pay for pounds they've already shed.

Loretta Townsend, a supervisor for Indiana's Weights and Measures Department, said Tuesday she wants a judge to rule that Weight Watchers' scales are subject to the same inspections as butchers' scales.

A county attorney said he would ask a judge for such as ruling.

Ms. Townsend, whose agents make sure commercial scales and gas pumps in Vanderburgh County are accurate, said she has received nearly 30 complaints in the last five years from Weight Watchers clients.

"We got a few calls from people who say Weight Watchers won't let them see the scales when they're getting weighed and wondered if we'd ever gone out there to check their scales. Then the calls started increasing, so I decided we'd better take a look at this," Townsend said.

Under Weight Watchers' lifetime membership agreement, clients who reach their weight goal can attend Weight Watchers meetings for free. If they exceed that weight by more than 2 pounds, they must pay to attend the meetings.

Studies show drinkers notice warnings

ATLANTA (AP) — Drinkers are noticing the warnings on alcoholic beverage containers, but the messages' sobering effects seem slight, according to two new studies.

A national survey found that the number of people aware of the labels is increasing — especially among heavier drinkers, who are the chief targets of the messages.

Meanwhile, Detroit researchers found that the amount of alcohol consumed by lower-income pregnant women hasn't changed since the warnings began in November 1989.

The studies were presented to the American Public Health Association, meeting this week in Atlanta. The warnings, under federal law, caution drinkers about such risks as pregnancy complications and drunken driving.

The national survey of about 2,000 adults found that by mid-1991 some 48 percent of heavy drinkers — those having five or more drinks on occasion, at least weekly — were aware of the warnings, said Dr. Thomas K. Greenfield of the Medical Research Institute of San Francisco. That was up from 39 percent in 1990.

Greenfield said heavy drinkers who recalled the warnings were somewhat more likely than others to report limiting their drinking while driving: 86 percent to 80 percent, according to 1990 data.

But there's no direct evidence that the labels themselves are influencing behavior, he said. In these times of increased concern over drunken driving, people may change their drinking and driving habits for any number of reasons, he said.

"We can't strictly attribute it to the label," Greenfield said. "But it's a good sign that more people who recall the (warning) message are using the strategy."

The research out of Detroit suggests that lower-income pregnant women in that city haven't reduced their drinking since the warnings began.

From May 1989 to May 1991, researchers from Wayne State University surveyed 2,135 pregnant women, none of whom were teetotalers.

Over that time, there was no difference in their average alcohol consumption.

Castaway Nike sneakers aid researcher

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A scientist studying the currents of the northern Pacific Ocean has put a lot of "sole" into his work.

Oceanographer Curtis Ebbesmeyer is basing his study on the voyages of Nike sport shoes, thousands of which began washing up on Oregon beaches in April.

A storm washed 80,000 shoes, packed in five boxcar-size containers, from the deck of a cargo ship in May 1990. The ship was en route from South Korea to Seattle, where the shoes were to distributed to stores.

The footwear — from Air Jordans to golf shoes — would have been worth an estimated $2.5 million at store prices.

Ebbesmeyer came up with the research idea after reading news reports about Nikes appearing on Oregon's north coast. He has interviewed dozens of beachcombers and plotted the landfalls of about 2,000 Nikes from Brookings, on Oregon's south coast, to the Queen Charlotte Islands in northern British Columbia.

The sneakers are the largest number of man-made drift objects ever dropped in one place in the northern Pacific, surpassing 20,000 drift bottles launched in the 1950s as part of a Canadian government research project.

"It's a fascinating piece of detective work, and I'm hoping the trail will lead to a better understanding of the ocean," said Ebbesmeyer, a specialist in ocean currents. His Seattle consulting company, Evans-Hamilton, predicts where oil or sewage spills will travel.

The sneaker drift data could make combating oil spills a more exact science, Ebbesmeyer said.

He also predicts the study will add fuel to the debate among anthropologists over how ancient peoples drifted across the Pacific.

So far, the only snag to Ebbesmeyer's study has been pinpointing where the shoes went overboard. The best the Beaverton-based shoe giant knows is that the shoes were lost somewhere northeast of the Hawaii Islands.

310 General Help Wanted

MOONLIGHTING!
The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with responsible individuals.
OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:
Is it worthwhile for adults also? Yes! Our current distributor force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
• ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
• MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a distributor, you do not need daycare!
• COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
• SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.
How much money can I make as a distributor?
Depending on the size of the distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!
How long does it take?
The actually delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!
When do papers have to be delivered by?
6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.
Do I ever get a day off?
The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, distributors do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
RESERVE YOUR DISTRIBUTORSHIP NOW!
