Bush, Canadian leader to meet

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine (AP) — Progress on trade and acid rain issues have U.S.-Canadian relations in pretty good shape as President Bush welcomes Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney to his vacation home today, says Bush's national security adviser.

The 15th day of Bush's nearly three-week vacation also included a scheduled speech to the Kennebunk-Kennebunkport Chamber of Commerce, which is giving the president its Citizen of the Year Award.

Mulroney, his wife Mila and their four children were to arrive in late afternoon at Bush's Walker's Point compound for an overnight visit.

Bush's national security adviser, Brent Scowcroft, said Tuesday the private visit would give the two leaders "a chance to relax (and) a chance to exchange views" on world events, including the dramatic changes in Poland as well as the crises in Lebanon and Colombia.

Scowcroft said the two old friends share "a close similarity of views ... on world affairs and a kind of unique personal closeness and frankness in exchanging views."

Scowcroft said U.S.-Canadian ties are "in basically pretty good shape," with efforts underway to implement the sweeping Free Trade Agreement signed last year by President Reagan and Mulroney.

He said Bush's proposed revision of the Clean Air Act, which would seek to sharply curb emissions from utility plants, factories and other sources of pollutants that cause acid rain, "has set us on the road to dealing with one of the other major problems between us, that is the issue of cross-border pollution" such as acid rain.

Scowcroft said the two also would discuss the assassinations by drug barons in Colombia and President Virgilio Barco Vargas' "determination to go after the drug cartel."

Bush, after wrapping up a strategy session with top Cabinet officials and drug policy coordinator William Bennett, offered strong praise Tuesday for Barco.

He declined comment on whether he would meet Colombian justice minister Monica de Greiff's request for $19 million in additional U.S. aid, but Bush added, "We will cooperate with Colombia to the best of our ability to support what (Barco) is trying to do."

Last Friday, the White House announced a $65 million emergency aid package to help Colombia wage war against the drug cartels in the wake of several assassinations.

Asked whether the administration had decided to increase the reported $300 economic aid package for the Andean nations — Colombia, Peru and Bolivia — included in the anti-drug plan, Scowcroft said, "Well, that figure, I think you can assume, has already been increased by the fact that we have given Colombia $65 million."

Bush, who arrived here Aug. 16 for a 20-day vacation that ends on Labor Day, kept his luckless fishing streak alive Tuesday.

County officials say charge of 'jinxing' pay petition untrue

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

A Midland lawman who is directing a pay hike petition drive for police and firefighters charged today that the county is attempting to thwart the endeavor on behalf of City Hall.

Midland County officials who have worked with the Fraternal Order of Police (FOP) and the Midland Firefighters Association (MFA) during their petition drive said today the charge is untrue.

The two organizations undertook a citywide petition drive last Sunday to secure a 10 percent pay increase for the two departments. City Hall has offered its 900 employees a 2 percent pay increase next year.

FOP President Leonard Hendon said today the petition drive has been successful and been "overwhelmingly supported" by the citizens of Midland.

However, during the required petition signature verification process Tuesday, events occurred that led Hendon to charge the county is "stalling" the drive.

The names must be turned in by Friday if they are to be on the Nov. 7, 1989, constitutional election ballot.

The two organizations must double check names on the petition to ensure they are those of registered Midland County voters.

Tuesday, members of the FOP began the verification process at the Midland County Election Administrator's office.

A voter list they had wanted to purchase was not available Tuesday morning because of a computer printing glitch at the Midland County Courthouse, Elections Administrator Bettye Calvert explained today.

The list was received by the FOP today, Hendon said.

Colombian drug lords make threats

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Three more judges resigned in Medellin, the nation's cocaine capital, after threats were made by drug lords seeking to halt a government crackdown on narcotics trafficking, authorities said today.

The resignations brought to 108 the number of judges who have quit since the traffickers vowed Aug. 18 to retaliate against the government, police, journalists and others regarded as a threat to the drug empire.

The traffickers have said they will kill 10 judges for every Colombian extradited to the United States to stand trial on drug charges.

The Medellin magistrates, who resigned on Tuesday, had been investigating slayings believed to have been ordered by drug traffickers.

The government, meanwhile, was reported to be preparing to extradite to the United States the first drug figure since the traffickers' terror campaign began two weeks ago.

The effort to extradite Eduardo Martinez Romero, an alleged money manager for the traffickers, is seen a key test of Colombia's will to battle the drug barons. He was arrested in the first days of an unprecedented offensive against trafficking, which began after gunmen hired by the cartel assassinated presidential hopeful Sen. Luis Carlos Galan Aug. 18.

Jim Bakker and George Davis

Extravagance described in Bakker trial

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Witnesses at Jim Bakker's fraud trial testified that when his ministry was raising millions he spent $2,000 a month on electricity keeping his pool warm and $105,000 moving belongings by private jet.

David Taggart, a former Bakker aide who has been convicted of tax evasion, testified in U.S. District Court that the founder of the PTL evangelical empire was enchanted with real estate.

"He told me he wanted to have 10 homes," Taggart said Tuesday.

Meanwhile, in Clearwater, Fla., former PTL official Richard Dortch, who is expected to be a key witness in Bakker's trial, was admitted to Morton Plant Hospital for undisclosed reasons.

Dortch, 57, was hospitalized in April for chest pains.

Hospital spokesman Paul Gramblin said Dortch, who lives near this Tampa Bay-area city, asked doctors not to release details of his condition and refused to say when he was admitted.

Dortch, the former vice president of the PTL ministries was sentenced last week to eight years in prison and fined $200,000 after he pleaded guilty to fraud and conspiracy charges.

Robert Dash of the U.S. attorney's office here refused to discuss Dortch's involvement in the trial.

Superintendents say no-pass, no-play has helped

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

Midland and Ector County superintendents said Tuesday that Texas' no-pass, no-play law has benefitted education, mirroring a statewide majority opinion on the controversial rule.

In survey results released Monday, 74 percent of those polled said no-pass, no play — which suspends students from extracurricular activities if they fail a class — has positively affected the state's students.

"There's no question it has focused the attention of coaches and athletes on education," said Joe Baressi, superintendent of Midland Independent School District. "Our primary mission is to teach academics."

Deputy Superintendent Don Mercer of Ector County Independent School District also supported the law, created by Texas legislators in 1984 through House Bill 72. The rule was part of public education reforms approved by the Legislature that year.

"I believe strongly that it has been a plus for the public schools of this state," Mercer said. "It has created a need for all educators to focus on academic achievement as a first priority.

"Consequently, it has been a tremendous incentive to encourage student athletes to perform their very best in in school classrooms as well as in their extracurricular activities."

The Public Policy Resources Laboratory of Texas A&M University conducted the telephone survey of 1,007 adults statewide from July 22 to Aug. 5. The Texas Poll has an error margin of plus or minus three percentage points.

While 14 percent said no-pass, no-play has had a negative effect, 5 percent said it has had no effect and 8 percent did not know.

James Dyer, Texas Poll director, said the survey including the opinions of 106 residents in 55 West Texas counties. About 20 respondents live in the Midland-Odessa area, Dyer said.

West Texans' views reflected those statewide, with 74 percent believing the law has had a positive effect, while 11 percent gave a negative response, 8 percent said it had no effect and 7 percent did not know.

In addition, 57 percent statewide said school districts should not have authority to waive the rule, with 58 percent of West Texans also giving that response.

"We asked these questions before the fall of '88 and essentially came up with the same results," Dyer said.

The poll was conducted in the aftermath of a state judge's ruling that could pave the way for school districts to have more control of no-pass, no-play.

The judge ruled that Education Commissioner William Kirby abused his power in citing Carter High School of Dallas for violating the law when the school's principal changed a football player's grade. Kirby's decision temporarily forced Carter out of the Class 5A playoffs.

Baressi and Mercer agreed that school districts should not have control over no-pass, no-play.

Baressi said pressure on some coaches statewide is so great that abuses of the rule would occur if their districts had no-pass, no-play autonomy.

"It would be hard to have a fair, strong policy from district to district if it weren't state mandated," Baressi said.

Hance wants to station clean-up tools on coast

AUSTIN (AP) — The chairman of the Texas Railroad Commission says the petroleum industry should establish staging areas in Beaumont and Corpus Christi for storing oil spill clean-up equipment.

Chairman Kent Hance, in a letter Tuesday to American Petroleum Institute officials, said creating staging areas in the two Texas coastal cities would be "a wise and prudent allocation of industry resources."

The move would enhance public confidence in the oil industry's ability to respond rapidly and efficiently in the event of an oil spill along the Texas coast, he said.

The institute's Industry Response Organization will be a national oil spill effort, funded by oil companies at an initial coast of $70 million to $100 million. Operating costs are expected to run about $35 million annually.

Hance said the industry's response plan calls for five regional emergency response centers nationwide, to be located in the New York area; Norfolk, Va.; Long Beach, Calif.; New Orleans, La.; and Seattle, Wash.

The plan also calls for a network of about 20 spill clean-up staging areas, with Houston as the only Texas staging area currently under consideration.

Highway Commission member Raymond Stoker Jr. holds up what the panel approved as Texas' new auto license plate.

New license plate carries no slogan

AUSTIN (AP) — The state highway commission has dropped plans to place "The Friendship State" on Texas license plates, but commissioners don't want people outside the state to think Texans are unfriendly.

Commission Chairman Robert Dedman said Tuesday the debate should continue on a slogan for license plates and said he hoped a consensus could be reached on a positive slogan that would temper outsiders' views of Texans.

"We should do everything to say 'Y'all come' to visitors to the state and 'Y'all come in bringing hi-tech and other jobs,'" he said.

But the commission made it official. Texas will not be "The Friendship State."

Commissioners conceded defeat, urged unity and asked for help as they unanimously rejected placing the slogan on Texas license plates, ending a debate that stirred Texans' imagination and pride.

Responding to the avalanche of complaints about the earlier decision to use "The Friendship State," Dedman said perhaps "Never give up" should be the new slogan.

As it is, Texas' plates next spring will remain sloganless, although more colorful with a red, white and blue state flag.

On July 19, the three-member commission approved, with little fanfare, "The Friendship State" for the approximately 27 million Texas license plates, hoping the cheery message would attract tourists.

Friendship is the official state motto and the word Texas derives from the Spanish pronunciation of an Indian word meaning "friends."

But once word of the move reached the public, thousands of Texans, prouder of their independence than their friendliness, jammed telephone lines to the highway department and radio call-in shows.

Slim chance for showers noted

From Staff and Wire Reports

There is a small chance of thunderstorms tonight and tomorrow, forecasters at the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport said.

Tonight should be mostly clear with less than a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms. The low should be in the lower 70s with winds from the south at 5-15 mph.

Thursday should be mostly clear and hot with less than a 20 percent chance of afternoon thunderstorms. Winds should be from the south at 10-20. The high should be in the upper 90s.

Tuesday's record high was set in 1964 when it reached 104, while the record low for today was set in 1987 when it dipped to 61.

STATE

Scattered showers and thunderstorms were reported early today across western portions of Texas and along the coast.

Forecasts called for excessive heat to continue through Thursday across south central portions of North Texas and for a chance of thunderstorms over extreme West Texas, Northwest Texas, Southeast Texas and most of North Texas.

The rest of the state will have clear to partly cloudy skies.

Lows tonight will be mostly in the 70s, ranging from the lower 60s in the mountains of Southwest Texas to the lower 80s along the coast.

Highs Thursday will be in the 80s in extreme West Texas and Northwest Texas and in the 90s over most of the rest of the state, ranging upward to around 100 in North Texas and Southwest Texas.

Except for the areas of showers early today, most of the state had clear to partly cloudy skies.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 70s, ranging from the 60s in the Panhandle to the low to mid 80s along the coast in South Texas. Extremes ranged from 63 at Dalhart to 84 at Corpus Christi.

Other early morning temperatures around the state include 65 at Amarillo, 78 at Fort Worth, 79 at Waco, 78 at Austin, 79 at San Antonio, 76 at Houston, 77 at Brownsville, 73 at San Angelo, 72 at Lubbock and Midland and 69 at El Paso.

NATION

Thunderstorms struck West Virginia with intense lightning today, causing widespread damage in some areas. Other parts of the nation also were hit by severe storms.

In the northwestern part of West Virginia, lightning ignited fires at several houses and mobile homes and downed trees, which closed many major roads. Gusty storm winds also damaged trees near Huntington.

Thunderstorms reached across parts of Kentucky, Tennessee, the lower Mississippi Valley, and from Missouri across Oklahoma and northwest Texas to eastern New Mexico.

Storms also caused heavy rain and flooding in the northwest Piedmont of North Carolina.

On Tuesday night, severe thunderstorms hit parts of Nebraska, where hail up to 2 inches in diameter fell.

An upper-level weather disturbance, moving onto the West Coast, resulted in severe thunderstorms in western Oregon. Hail as large as golfballs fell just north of Medford.

Widespread rain fell in southern New England.

Clear skies prevailed this morning from California across most of the Plateau region to the central Rockies. Skies also were clear over the upper Mississippi Valley and upper Great Lakes and from eastern North Carolina to northern Florida.

However, Baressi said the state should reduce the suspension from extracurricular activities from six weeks to three. Six weeks could mean an entire season for extracurricular participants such as football players and marching band members.

"The incentive for a person to get back on the team after a six-weeks suspension is lost," Baressi said. "I just think the rule could be improved if the suspension period was shortened."

Mercer said the six-weeks suspension should stand because districts should maintain high academic expectations for their students.

"I have accepted the penalty as fair," Mercer said. "Most coaches and sponsors of these students in extracurricular activities are following these students week to week to make sure they're passing.

"If you lessen the penalty, you might lessen the care your coaches are taking to make sure students do not fail. When you ask athletes to pass their classes, they do it."

Pi calculated to double previous length

Associated Press

In the world of mathematics, Gregory and David Chudnovsky are known for going the extra mile.

Unsatisfied with their record 600-mile-long calculation of pi in June, the brothers more than doubled that record, coming up with a number containing more than a billion digits.

"They're starting more calculations, so it goes on from here," Denis Arvay, a spokesman for IBM, said Tuesday. "I don't know when they're going to stop."

Meanwhile, six California scientists extended man's search into the infinite by determining the world's largest known prime number.

The find left Joel F. Smith, one of the researchers, groping for a way to describe the 65,087-digit number.

"It's God-awful large," Smith said. "There's nothing in the real universe that is comparable at all, that you measure in those numbers."

Pi, the ratio between the diameter and circumference of a circle, begins 3.14159, then continues on indefinitely with no known duplication or pattern.

Since pi was first approximated at 3 1/7 in ancient Greece, it took centuries and the invention of the computer in recent decades for scientists to calculate the ratio to more than 100,000 decimal places.

But in less than three months, the Chudnovskys extended their record calculation from 480 million decimal places to more than a billion.

The Columbia University researchers did their work on two supercomputers at International Business Machines Corp.'s Thomas J. Watson Research Center in Yorktown Heights, N.Y., the company said.

The new mark of 1,011,196,691 digits appears to be a record, Arvay said.

Peter Renz, associate director of the Mathematical Association of America, said he had not heard of anybody exceeding the researchers' mark.

In June, the Chudnovskys said their 480 million-digit pi would stretch for 600 miles if printed.

At the time, David Chudnovsky said calculating pi to such lengths is useful for testing the performance of computer hardware and software. He called the task "the ultimate stress test."

In California, the six researchers at computer maker Amdahl Corp. spent evenings and weekends during the last year using the company's machines to find the largest prime number.

The number equals 391,581 multiplied by 2 to the 216,193rd power, minus one. To put that in perspective, that's 600 times the number of atoms in the known universe, according to Sergio E. Zarantonello, one of the researchers.

"It's like going to the moon, in a sense. There's not a lot there, but it's important scientifically to do it because the technology proves so useful," researcher Bodo Parady said.

A prime number is any number that can be divided evenly only by 1 and itself.

According to the Guinness Book of World Records, the previous record was set in 1985 by David Slowinski of Cray Research Inc., the supercomputer maker. The new number, discovered Aug. 6, has 37 more digits and is a trillion, trillion, trillion times larger.

Sunnyvale, Calif.-based Amdahl said Guinness had accepted the number for entry into the publication.

The discovery was announced at a meeting this week of the American Mathematical Society by Sam Wagstaff Jr., a computer scientist at Purdue University.

Although the number itself has no known practical application, the advanced multiplication programs honed by the researchers during their work already are being used by scientists searching the universe for pulsars, rotating neutron stars.

The process also has applications in cryptology and bank transaction coding, which use large prime numbers.

The other Amdahl researchers were: John Brown, Landon Curt Noll and Gene Ward Smith.

COLOMBIA

The syndicated TV news program "Noticiero 24 Horas" reported the Colombian government notified Martinez on Tuesday of plans to extradite him to the United States. He was told he had five working days, or until next Tuesday, to appeal.

A U.S. narcotics official had said earlier that the paperwork was going forward on an extradition request for Martinez, a 35-year-old economist who faces federal charges in Atlanta in a $1.2 billion operation for laundering cocaine profits. He is being held under heavy guard by the investigations division of Colombia's national police force.

The television did not cite a source for its report. A presidential spokesman said he could not give any information, and the U.S. Embassy refuses to comment.

President Virgilio Barco re-established the country's extradition treaty as part of a series of emergency measures in the drug crackdown. In raids nationwide, police have seized more than $200 million in real estate including luxurious homes and office buildings, and other property such as airplanes, helicopters and cars. About 11,000 people have been taken into custody.

Drug traffickers in turn have declared war on the state and responded with a wave of bombings and burnings, mostly in of Medellin, 215 miles north of Bogota and the base for the world's largest cocaine trafficking cartel.

Two die in Shreveport derailment

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — About two dozen cars of a 94-car freight train derailed today after a collision with a tractor-trailer rig that killed two people and backed up city traffic for miles, state police said.

Conflicting reports from different sources said as few as 19 and as many as 30 cars left the tracks.

Two bodies were pulled from the wreckage, both were believed to have been in the truck, which was dragged about 50 yards on impact.

One unidentified man was reported missing.

The truck, which was leased to Southeastern Frozen Foods of Louisiana, was enroute from New Orleans to Dallas, officials said.

Don Miller, transportation manager for Southeast Frozen Foods in New Orleans refused to release the names of the drivers.

At least three people on the train were reported injured, although none of the injuries were thought to be serious.

The train and truck collided about 6:20 a.m. on a major city thoroughfare, Lt. Rudy Crain said. The accident, near the Louisiana State University-Shreveport campus, tied up traffic in the area for miles, officials said. Witnesses said freight cars were piled on top of each other, scattered down a hillside, and stuck into the ground.

"I've never seen anything like it," said Shreveport Police officer Dwayne D. Huddleston.

The Union Pacific train was not carrying hazardous materials although several hundred gallons of diesel fuel spilled from one engine.

The Shreveport Journal quoted eyewitnesses as saying the accident occurred when the truck drove past warning lights in front of the train.

"I looked up and saw the train lights flashing and there was an 18-wheeler coming," a motorist told police.

The truck appeared to be slowing for the intersection, but drove on, the conductor on the train said. The two-engine train struck the truck broadside.

BAKKER

Prosecutors say Bakker and other PTL executives diverted for their own benefit at least $4 million of the $158 million they raised from 1984 to 1987 by selling $1,000 "lifetime partnerships." Many of the partnerships were supposed to be good for hotel stays at the ministry's resort in Fort Mill, S.C.

Hollis Rule, a former computer programmer for PTL, testified he went to his superiors with concerns that the partnerships were oversold, numbering 64,000 in September 1985 despite Bakker's self-imposed limit of 25,000.

Richard Ball, a PTL vice president, testified he relayed those concerns to Bakker and another executive during a brief meeting at the ministry's television studio.

"They told me not to worry about it," Ball said.

Former PTL advertising writer Lois Chalmers testified that a campaign for the partnerships offered a David and Goliath sculpture said to be worth $1,000. But the ministry only paid $10 for them, she said. A silver version of the sculpture in Bakker's office might have been worth $1,000, she said.

Taggart testified that Bakker always accepted bonuses from the board, even after objecting to them. The board in 1985 approved borrowing $800,000 for operating expenses while voting Bakker a $200,000 bonus, Taggart said.

Bakker complained during a visit to Oral Roberts University in Tulsa, Okla., that he didn't live as well as other evangelists, Taggart said.

"They were showing us around," he said. "Mr. Bakker said that he lived shabbily compared to Oral Roberts, the (Rex) Humbards and other ministers."

Taggart said electric bills at Bakker's lakefront parsonage in Tega Cay, S.C., usually ran about $1,800 to $2,000 a month because "the pool was kept at a very high temperature ... in the 90s."

PETITION

Later, as the petitioners were cross-referencing signatures against the five-volume voter list, District Clerk Vivian Wood came into the office to borrow the books for State District Judge Pat Baskin who needed a voter list for grand jury selection, Mrs. Wood said today.

Hendon said the computer glitch was unusual because his wife told him she heard at the elections office Tuesday "that was the first time it had ever broken down in the history" of the county.

Secondly, Hendon said this morning he believes Baskin is still miffed at the FOP because it endorsed Midland attorney Nick Taylor — Baskin's opponent — in the 1988 Republican judicial primary.

"All they're trying to do is delay us," Hendon said. "We're getting a lot of rumors out of City Hall. It just seems kind of funny ... we supported Nick Taylor against Judge Baskin.

"Why all of a sudden is he calling for a grand jury? He doesn't like our organization. I think he's friends with City Council."

Baskin this morning disputed the charges.

"It is absolutely, totally and unequivocably false," Baskin said. "I have not spoken to one single soul about anything related to that topic.

"Twice a year, we select a grand jury.

"That is a completely irresponsible and false statement, and I would request that he either back it up or withdraw it," the veteran judge continued.

"It is altogether fully and totally false."

Mrs. Calvert this morning added that employees of her office have taken phone messages for members of the two organizations, answered questions and generally helped in any way they could.

When elections office workers learned the voter list would be unavailable Tuesday, one employee took them to one of the terminals that wasn't being used and showed them how to get into the terminal so they could scan the names," Mrs. Calvert said.

"You tell me what other office in this county or state would have other people use their computer equipment? What is in that computer is public record.

"That computer is not public," the elections administrator said.

"I'm sorry that Judge Baskin said to get the books and I'm sorry the computer" broke down. "You don't tell judges 'No.'

"That's just about all the service I can offer them."

Members of the FOP and MFA have secured 1,200 to 1,300 signatures, Hendon said today.

MFA spokesman Don Baker said the drive was "very positive."

The signatures will be turned over to the city's legal department which will consider alternatives outlined in the Vernon's Annotated Civil Statutes.

Newspapers conducted surveys and the license plate flap became the "Bubba" issue of the summer.

"This has brightened up an otherwise dull Texas summer," said Commissioner Wayne Duddlesten.

Most everyone said the friendship slogan was too generic, too bland and in the words of one politician seeking the governorship, "too wimpy."

The most popular alternative to "The Friendship State" was the "Lone Star State," although some suggested more topical slogans, such as "Texas, the Insolvent State," or "The Bank Failure State."

Dedman said there is a feeling outside the state, particularly in the north and east that Texas has gotten what it deserved in the financial and energy collapse, stemming from the oil embargo when Texans rode around with bumper stickers directed at "Yankees," saying "Let them freeze in the dark."

Dedman said: "There's a lot of hostility coming from Congress. There was a lot of glee almost in getting rid of Jim Wright and Sen. (John) Tower."

Wright, a Fort Worth Democrat, resigned as House Speaker amid an ethics investigation and Tower, a former Texas senator, was rejected by the Senate as President Bush's appointment to Secretary of Defense.

"We should be collectively as a group of people as conscious as we can be of being good marketers to the rest of the nation and try to do whatever we can to overcome some of that perceived negative outlook toward Texas," he said.

He said the "Bubba-mentality will not bring us high-tech." "Bubba" is often referred to by politicians as the prototypical Texan.

Commissioner Ray Stoker Jr. of Odessa said perhaps the Legislature should get into the act and elevate the "Lone Star State" to an official state nickname.

But Dedman said he opposed using the "Lone Star State" on license plates.

"I can see where everyone who owned stock in Lone Star beer would love to have us known as the Lone Star State," he said.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Mortar rounds hit near Beirut peace meeting

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syrian and Christian forces battled for six hours with artillery in Beirut today, and mortar rounds exploded near a meeting between a French peace envoy and a Moslem leader.

Police said one person was killed and 19 wounded in the fighting. The latest casualties raised the toll from the nearly six months of clashes to at least 803 killed and 2,287 wounded.

The French envoy, Francois Scheer, drove from the Christian sector across Beirut's dividing Green Line into Moslem west Beirut during mortar and sniper exchanges. He met with Sheik Mohammed Mehdi Shamseddine, the senior Shiite Moslem cleric in Lebanon.

Scheer traveled with an escort of two carloads of bodyguards.

During a 45-minute meeting at Shamseddine's second-floor apartment in the Tallet Khayat district, five mortar rounds exploded nearby.

Weaker law proposed

MOSCOW (AP) — Moldavia's Communist Party chief, in an effort to placate outraged minority groups, proposed today that the republic adopt a weaker version of a law making Moldavian the official language, an activist said.

The compromise, which reportedly resulted from a telephone conversation between the party chief and President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, is aimed at stopping widespread strikes and other protests in the republic.

The initial proposed law would substitute Moldavian for Russian in virtually all government and business transactions in the republic. Russians and other minorities in the republic say the proposal is discriminatory.

The proposed compromise, outlined to the Supreme Soviet by Moldavian party chief Semen Grossu, would make Moldavian the language for government officials and documents, and Russian the tongue for everyday contact among the republic's ethnic groups.

Indians battle protesters

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Police battled protesters nationwide today during demonstrations against alleged corruption in Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi's government. More than 100,000 people were reported arrested and 10 killed.

A daylong general strike shut down commerce and transportation in the six states governed by the opposition, but it was less effective in the 19 states controlled by Gandhi's Congress Party.

At least 80 people, including five policemen, were injured and more than 103,450 people were arrested during the strike, police said.

United News of India reported two people were killed during a clash involving police and pro- and anti-government demonstrators in the southern state of Kerala, which is governed by a coalition led by the Marxist Communist Party.

The news agency said seven people were killed in the northeastern state of Tripura, also governed by the Marxist Communist Party.

AI appeals to Chinese

LONDON (AP) — Amnesty International said today that it has appealed to the Chinese government to "stop using judicial killing" as a way to suppress internal opposition.

The human rights organization said it sent a telex message to Premier Li Peng saying it feared the brutal crackdown on pro-democracy demonstrators in Beijing last June reflected an official policy of crushing peaceful opposition at any cost.

Amnesty International did not release a text of its message to Li. However, the organization said it appealed for the release of all "prisoners of conscience" and for fair trials for all those facing political charges.

Glemp's remarks renew bad feelings between Jews, Poles

By BERNARD D. KAPLAN
Hearst News Service

An Analysis

PARIS — One of the lingering controversies of the Second World War, still charged with emotion for many people even today, is whether the late Pope Pius XII could have done more to save six million European Jews from the Nazi death camps.

This week, which marks the 50th anniversary of the outbreak of war, friction between Jews and Catholics has again unexpectedly surfaced.

With what can only be described as tragic irony, the latest dispute between the two faiths revolves around the war's ghastliest symbol of inhumanity, the Auschwitz extermination camp.

Glemp

Controversy over the presence of a convent of Carmelite nuns at Auschwitz, which has been simmering for months, was given an alarming twist by an outburst last weekend by Cardinal Josef Glemp, the Polish primate.

Glemp told a large audience, which included Poland's new prime minister, Tadeusz Mazowiecki of Solidarity, that Jews should not use their power with the media, which he said are "totally at your disposal" in many countries, to propagate "anti-Polish feeling."

Jews, he said, should not look upon Poles "with a superior air," adding that "if there were no anti-Polish sentiment (expressed by Jews), there would be no anti-Semitism in our country."

The cardinal's language startled Jews and non-Jews alike — all the more so since the Roman Catholic Church in Poland, which he leads, probably exerts greater moral authority over its followers than the Church does anywhere else in the world.

The Auschwitz dispute has been explained as a struggle about who should exercise spiritual authority at the site.

Jewish spokesmen have accused the Catholics of trying to "appropriate" a legacy that is rightly theirs.

The counter-argument is that Auschwitz should be considered a monument to all its martyred dead, not to the Jews alone, although the vast majority of the 2.5 million who died there were, in fact, Jews.

A 1987 agreement between Jewish organizations and Church representatives calling for the Carmelites to leave has been repeatedly put off.

After a small group of Jewish militants from New York staged a noisy protest and tried to enter the convent last month, Cardinal Franciszek Marcharski of Krakow, whose diocese includes Auschwitz, announced the nuns' transfer was to be indefinitely postponed because of Jewish "aggressiveness."

Many observers on both sides of the religious divide believe the conflict runs deeper than the question of where a convent is to be located.

The dispute could never have attained its present proportions but for old misgivings that continue to exercise a baleful influence even after the terrible lessons of the last war.

According to Father Paul Valadier, a leading French Jesuit writer, the current conflict has revealed that deep Jewish suspicions, partly stemming from Pius XII's wartime silence over the fate of the Jews, have never really been overcome.

To him and other Western European Catholics, the words and actions of the two Polish cardinals offer unwelcome evidence that Catholic anti-Semitism is far from dead.

Father Valadier called Marcharski's decision to repudiate the Auschwitz accord "worthy of total and unequivocal disapproval by Christians."

Several Jewish spokesmen have criticized the failure of Pope John Paul II (Marcharski's predecessor as the Krakow prelate) to speak out on the issue.

As a pope who is also a Pole, he is in a unique position to heal a festering wound, but, unaccountably, hasn't done so, the Jewish leaders contend.

French Cardinal Roger Etchegaray, one of the signatories to the 1987 agreement, has defended the pope, but sternly attacked Marcharski and, by implication, Glemp.

The Polish Solidarity movement, through its newspaper, promptly rebuked Glemp.

The terms employed by the paper, Gazeta Wyborcza, were mild but remarkable for the mouthpiece of a movement whose leader, Lech Walesa, is known for his devout Catholicism. Solidarity itself has, from the beginning, possessed the closest ties to the church.

That Glemp's diatribe was delivered in Mazowiecki's presence was doubly embarrassing to Solidarity.

But few would deny that anti-Semitism, remains a fact of life in Poland, a country where only a few thousand Jews are left.

In the immediate postwar era, the unpopularity of the Polish Communist Party, in which Jews held leading positions, helped to revive anti-Semitism. Later, paradoxically, anti-Semitism became the semi-official policy of the party itself.

Several of Walesa's top lieutenants in Solidarity are of Jewish origin. One of them, Bronislaw Geremek, was the front-runner earlier this month to become prime minister of the new non-communist government.

Solidarity informants here say Geremek himself turned down the job, believing the fact he's a Jew would be a gratuitous source of weakness for the new government.

Events overshadow Poland's WWII anniversary

John Paul II

Mazowiecki

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The nation where World War II began will mark the 50th anniversary of the German invasion beginning Thursday with a series of events nearly overshadowed by the startling political events under way.

Joining Communist President Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski at official events will be Solidarity leader Lech Walesa and newly named Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki, the first non-Communist to head a Polish government in 45 years.

Planned commemorations include an internationally broadcast concert by Leonard Bernstein, speeches at Westerplatte, where the war's first shots were fired, and an international prayer for peace led by a televised message from Polish-born Pope John Paul II.

The war has an enduring poignancy in Poland, which fought against Hitler from the conflict's start on Sept. 1, 1939, to the victory in Europe on May 9, 1945.

More than 6 million Poles died, a fifth of the population and a higher percentage than any other nation. The toll included 3 million Jews, deported to death camps such as Auschwitz and Trebiinka that the Nazis built in the once-obscure Polish villages by those names.

At war's end, 40 percent of Poland's national property was lost and Warsaw was empty and leveled. In the capital, stucco facades of homes still show the scars of battle.

To some, the war's toll continued at the hands of the Communist government that took power backed by Soviet dictator Josef Stalin.

"We will pay homage to all victims of the war, we will pay homage to its heroes and we will express the will to live in peace," said Wlodzimierz Lozinski, a spokesman for Jaruzelski.

The commemoration begins one week after Communist and Solidarity lawmakers joined to elect Mazowiecki prime minister. The Solidarity editor heads the first non-Communist government in the Soviet bloc.

The events begin tomorrow night with a parade to Victory Square and a changing of the guard at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

Jaruzelski, who went to Siberia with his family after the Soviets invaded and later joined the Polish army organized under the Soviets, will lead the ceremony.

Friday, Jaruzelski, Walesa and others will gather in the Baltic port of Gdansk at the 75-foot granite memorial honoring the defenders of Westerplatte, where the German battleship Schleswig-Holstein fired on a garrison of 182 Polish soldiers to start the war.

War veterans from Poland and the Allies will participate, including about 70 survivors of the attack.

Bernstein will conduct a concert Friday evening at Warsaw's Grand Theater with actress Liv Ullmann and others in a televised benefit for the U.N. agency UNICEF.

Bernstein will open with lines from W.H. Auden's poem, "September 1, 1939," and Samuel Pisar, one of the youngest survivors of Auschwitz, will narrate reminiscences accompanied by photographs and film of the destruction of Warsaw. Ms. Ullmann will narrate Arnold Schoenberg's cantata "A Survivor From Warsaw."

An International Day of Prayer for Peace will bring together representatives of world religions for conferences and contemplation on Thursday and Friday.

"The lessons we draw from World War II must be drawn for the whole world, for international reconciliation and understanding," said Wladyslaw Klaczynski, an organizer.

The pope is to address his countrymen Friday evening via a television screen set up in the Royal Castle Square at Warsaw's Old City, rebuilt after the being razed by the Nazis.

Jewish groups representing the few thousand Jews who remain from a population that numbered 3.5 million before the war, will mark the anniversary with a photo exhibition, "Jews in Struggle for Poland," and a service at Warsaw's lone synagogue conducted by the country's only rabbi, Pinchas Menachem Joskowicz, who arrived this spring from Israel.

There will also be wreaths laid at the monument to the Warsaw Ghetto uprising and at Umschlagplatz, where Jews were loaded into railroad boxcars for transport to the death camps.

Solidarity, the independent union born in Gdansk, has scheduled masses and concerts, including one by bands of miners and shipyard workers.

West Germany will send a five-member delegation of parliament members.

The United States will be represented by Secretary of Veterans Affairs Edward Derwinski, the highest ranking Polish-American in the Bush administration.

Aid to Colombia will benefit U.S.

President Bush's decision to provide Colombia with $65 million worth of helicopters, weapons and other equipment for use in battling the drug barons is a good move that is based on U.S. interests.

In choosing to provide materiel support but not U.S. combat troops, Bush is recognizing two unavoidable realities: 1) The United States has as much of a stake in the outcome of the drug war as does Colombia since this country provides the market for the drug barons' illegal goods. Thus, the United States bears a responsibility in breaking the drug dealer's grip on Colombia, the United States and other nations in this hemisphere. 2) Even though many United States residents recognize the threat posed by illegal drugs to our society, this country's flirtation with a "proxy war" in Nicaragua underscored the fact that Americans are not ready to get involved in another conflict by committing troops. The U.S. will send advisers to Colombia, but only to show Colombians how to use the equipment.

The fact that many Americans most likely would not support sending troops at this point has been substantiated by numerous polls over the past several years showing that the majority of Americans do not favor committing U.S. troops to wars carried out by other governments. At some point that consensus could feasibly change in the drug battle now being fought in Colombia, since U.S. residents and interests are inextricably involved in the drug war. But until such a consensus is formed and clearly understood, it would be a tragic error for Bush to commit troops.

Yet, with all that said, it would be the height of hypocrisy for the Bush Administration to let the besieged Colombian struggle in its attempt to bring the drug lords under control without even offering materiel support, knowing that the drug dealers have and will commit literally millions of dollars to keeping their illicit pipeline to the U.S. flowing. They have shown in recent weeks just how far they will go, wounding or killing in the open those who dare to stand up to their operations. Numerous Colombian judges have resigned their positions in recent weeks as they attempted to force the Colombian government into its eventual decision of waging war against the drug lords.

There is no question that President Bush's decision was crucial to the Colombian government being capable of waging an all-out war against the drug scourge. This is a war, but unlike any the United States has been involved in its two centuries of existence. It's imperative in the interest of all the people of this hemisphere that law and order be returned to Colombia, and the threat posed by the drug lords overcome.

Books must come first!

I wonder how many parents are aware of a shortage of textbooks within the Midland Independent School District? How many of them have encouraged their children to bring home their books so they could study to bring up a bad grade only to be told "I don't have a book." This has happened to me for the last two years.

The first year I questioned my daughter's teacher and was told there weren't enough books for every child in the class. Okay, I thought possibly there was an abundance of students for the amount of books; but the second year I was very angry. Sure my daughter could "check" a book out, but what in the world are my tax dollars going to if not for the purchase of sufficient books for every student?

So, in relation to the 13.5 cents per $100 valuation tax hike that was just approved, is any of the monies received going to be utilized to purchase books? Or is it going to be utilized to construct a larger, more modern football stadium to keep up with Ratliff Stadium in Odessa? Or is it going to be used to purchase more land for a "practice field" that can later be turned into tennis courts?

Aren't books the backbone to education? Apparently not in Midland! No wonder some of our students are graduating almost illiterate.

With the recent construction of three new schools, I wonder if there was enough money to supply the books to make these "buildings" a school?

Maybe, must maybe, some of the "new" money will go to the purchase of sufficient books — but then, I'm not going to hold my breath.

Stand up for Del Rio

So now the Defense Nuclear Agency wants to do a little underground blasting in Val Verde County. And they promise the people of Del Rio that no harm will be done to their springs or their environment. If the DNA is so certain there will be no harm done to the environment or the geological structure, then why are they testing?

The people of Del Rio and the surrounding area have borne the brunt of just about every disaster to hit Texas, from drought to the several Mexican crises, to the S&L fiascoes, not to mention the oil bust. And now our government wants to "experiment" with their rocks! If something happens to Del Rio's spring is the DNA prepared to finance the drilling of water wells? And if they do, you know whose pockets that's going to come from!

The citizens of Del Rio are our own, our neighbors, our family. Let's respond to their need by writing the president, our senators, and representatives. Let them know we care what happens in our state.

Quarantine suggestion

In your Aug. 20 letters, Mark Gilham professes to speak for the "majority" regarding smoking, drinking, and even advocates quarantining persons with AIDS. I know of no one who ever received a "Gilham Poll" and God help us all if the "majority" doesn't know more than Gilham about disease transmission.

To compare AIDS to scarlet fever and typhoid admits gross ignorance. It would be much cheaper on the taxpayers to quarantine Gilham instead until he is better informed.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Aug. 30, the 242nd day of 1989. There are 123 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Aug. 30, 1963, Guion S. Bluford Jr. became the first black American astronaut to travel in space, flying aboard the shuttle Challenger. In another first, Bluford and four colleagues blasted off from Cape Canaveral, Fla., at night.

On this date:

In A.D. 30, the seventh and most famous queen of ancient Egypt, known by the name Cleopatra, committed suicide.

In 1797, the creator of "Frankenstein," Mary Wollstonecraft Shelley, was born in London.

In 1862, Union forces were defeated by the Confederates at the second Battle of Bull Run.

In 1893, Louisiana politician Huey P. Long was born in Winn Parish.

Soviet entrepreneurs face uphill battle

GORKY PARK, Moscow — When eating in one of the state-run restaurants in Moscow, if you don't like the food and service, just walk a few blocks away.

Jack Anderson

Visitors can find a luxurious atmosphere in an old, renovated building which a few of Russia's budding entrepreneurs have transformed into a four-star restaurant. And most surprising for the Soviet Union, the service was prompt and courteous, the food sumptuous.

This is in stark contrast to the nicest state-run restaurants, where the waitresses are surly and uncooperative, the food dull.

Why the difference? The first establishment is a sorry relic of a bloated and corrupt bureaucracy; these still vastly outnumber cooperatives, which might be called the seedlings of perestroika, or economic reform. The second establishment is a capitalist enterprise that Soviet premier Mikhail Gorbachev has baptized "cooperative" — created by partners who have pooled their savings, received low-interest state loans and their premises from the state.

Although mere blocks separate the two restaurants, they are, ideologically speaking, light years apart. In a sense, the conflict and competition between these two restaurants personifies the battle now being waged in the Soviet Union between new and old, reform vs. establishment.

The plight of "The Sweet Tooth" offers an ominous omen for Soviet reformers. It was the most popular and successful of Moscow restaurants until shutting down a few weeks ago. The Sweet Tooth attracted Western embassy crowds and even openly boasted — and displayed — letters of thanks and encouragement from both former President Reagan and President Bush. The restaurateurs somehow slipped a cake to Bush for his inauguration, and he reportedly ate the confectionery symbol of perestroika with gusto.

Yet The Sweet Tooth eventually was strangled by the red tape and government meddling that is so endemic to the Soviet Union.

Reform-minded Soviets have fostered the individual or cooperative private enterprises with a series of new laws beginning in November 1986. Only about a fifth of the co-ops that have quickly sprung up are restaurants. The rest offer a wide range of products and services, from key-cutting to proxy line-waiting, dog-grooming to babushka-grooming; from car and shoe repair to match-making services.

Some 100,000 cooperatives are officially registered, and the government estimates more than 1.5 million people are engaged in these private pursuits. Gorbachev desires even faster growth than this. A top Soviet economist, who serves as a close adviser to the Russian leader, told us that the income from these enterprises is expected to reach 10 billion rubles this year, or a little over 1 percent of the Soviet gross national product.

The government's secret target, sources tell us, is to boost it to 15 percent of the GNP in 10 years.

"We have great hopes with the development of the cooperative sector," the government economist told us. "The cooperative means jobs for those who are freed from other sectors, and especially for those soon leaving the army — about half a million soldiers." He touted new laws this year that give cooperatives the right to file lawsuits, create joint ventures with the state, hire workers the state lays off and even engage in foreign trade.

The Soviet old guard, determined to save a dying system, is laying land mines for the new enterprises. A recent law, for example, introduced a new progressive tax for personal income, which was primarily aimed at the more successful entrepreneurs. Many will pay 50 percent income tax, instead of the 13 percent flat rate that most workers in the Soviet Union pay.

The same tax law gave individual republics the right to tax the enterprises almost at their own whim. With no uniform corporate tax, the new taxes run from a low in Estonia of 10 percent to a high in Moscow of 45 percent. Little accident that the Estonians are posting the highest concentration of cooperatives, which are thriving.

Where was Gorbachev? He was apparently forced into the new tax situation by a growing resentment among state-planning officials, Communist party leaders — and even the public — to the cooperatives. Co-op owners have had to charge more than the state industries, which have inferior products and services — and are heavily subsidized to boot.

Even as they shop the co-ops, the latest sport among Russians is co-op-bashing. "Have you heard the latest cooperative joke?" goes the latest gag making the rounds. "It will cost you three rubles."

BAIL OUT BLUES — It's the dream of every lottery player: how to spend $425 million a day. For a newly created Resolution Trust Corporation, it's no fantasy. That's how much it will spend every day for the next 47 days, and then it must settle for a mere $45.6 million a day, every day for the next three years. As part of the historic $166 billion bailout of the savings-and-loan industry, the RTC was created by Congress to close or merge as many as 500 thrifts and sell off their assets. The job is not all that it's cracked up to be. The RTC's work is sure to generate headaches as it seeks to sell off billions of dollars worth of real estate, and attempts to remain alert to the myriad possibilities for fraud and abuse.

MINI-EDITORIAL — Think of the great presidencies and what comes to mind? There was the New Deal, Camelot and the Great Society. President Bush, only eight months into his first term in the White House, must occasionally muse about how he wants to be remembered. If that verdict were delivered today, no doubt the Bush presidency would be immortalized as the "Shovel Brigade," for having to clean up the costly messes left by his predecessor, Ronald Reagan. Bush faces devoting his first term in office to cleaning up the savings-and-loan industry, the HUD scandal, the budget deficit and nuclear weapons plants.

Forbes junket really urgent diplomatic mission

The recent Malcolm Forbes mega-zillion-dollar junket to Tangier once again raises one of society's most pressing questions: "Was it good or bad for the Nouveaux Riches?" It came at a time when instant millionaires have been under tremendous fire for spending their money with gay abandon, while the middle class are trying to find the wherewithal to get their pipes fixed under the kitchen sink.

Art Buchwald

But there is a lot more to this junket than the tabloids would have you believe. The Forbes bash was really designed to be a diplomatic mission of extreme urgency and importance.

This is how they tell it around the water fountains at the State Department. This summer U.S. relations with Morocco had reached such a low point that neither country could be civil with the other. To make matters worse, Morocco had agreed to sell the Soviet Union 100,000 tons of Sahara sand, which because of agricultural failures had become a delicacy in Armenia and Georgia.

The president had decided to send a high-ranking emissary to Tangier to try to get top-level talks going with Hassan, the king of Morocco. The natural choice was Henry Kissinger, who knows the king on a first-name basis. But Henry complained that because everyone recognized him it would be impossible to go to Morocco secretly. He needed a cover story.

"Why not have Malcolm Forbes organize a flying carpet for the rich and famous on his 70th birthday?" he suggested. "I could be a guest on that. It would be a perfect cover because no one would guess I was doing anything more than romping with the Nouveaux Riches."

The CIA man liked the plan, though he objected to Forbes being let in on it.

"Then I won't tell him. We'll have him think the party was his idea. We'll let him invite all the people who have it made, and they can play in Tangier while I take the king for a walk in the Casbah."

"How many rich and famous do we need to make your presence credible?" Henry was asked.

"I figure a 747, a DC-8 and the Concorde ought to do it," Henry said. "But we can expect flak from the press for me being part of a junket to nowhere. I am used to getting flak for serving my country."

The CIA man asked, "How can we be sure all the rich and famous will agree to go to the bash?"

"Because the rich and famous are always worried that they will be in wrong place at the wrong time. Once the word is out that I am on the trip, everyone will fall in line," Henry told him. "To make this work we don't want the rich, we want the super rich — people who fly to the Mayo clinic to go to the dentist."

"Once you get to Tangier, you will be whisked away to have a tete-a-tete with the king," the CIA man told him.

"That comes in time. I have to toast Malcolm and Elizabeth Taylor first, so as to alleviate any doubts why I came. Then they can sneak me off to the palace."

"Good thinking," the CIA man said.

Henry said, smiling, "I will not fear to negotiate or negotiate out of fear."

Everything went as planned with one exception. When Henry got to Tangier the king up and left for other business in Rabat and poor Kissinger never did have a chance to negotiate anything with Morocco, except to make Tangier a duty-free port for any future parties Malcolm wants to give in Morocco.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Shoo away from telling women about shoes

Imagine this poster:

There is a circle. Inside the circle are two feet, which obviously belong to a woman. The feet are wearing a pair of tennis shoes.

Lewis Grizzard

There is the familiar slash through the circle. Underneath the circle are two words: "Dress professionally."

The message is clear. Don't, ladies, wear leisure shoes at work.

That was the poster that employees of one company saw one recent morning when they came to work.

How it got there, according to Beth Zoffmann, public relations director for the company, was that managers noticed a large number of female employees wearing their tennis workout shoes during the entire work day.

"I wear tennis shoes to and from work and on the train," explained Beth Zoffmann. "It makes sense the way women's shoes are designed — for style, not for walking comfort. When I get to work, though, I put on the appropriate shoes immediately."

A number of the employees, however, became irate after seeing the poster. Here's a sampling of what one, who didn't want her name to be used ("It would cost me my job"), had to say:

"A lot of women are mad. How dare you tell us what to wear! It's seen as sexist.

"Not all the men here dress out of GQ, but if they got too bad, then they would be approached individually, and that's what should have happened here.

"A lot of us feel if there were a problem — and I don't see that there is — it was mostly secretaries who stay at one work place all day long and don't meet clients. But if there was a problem, then somebody should simply have talked to the individuals involved."

I've got to agree, and that is precisely how I handled the situation in my own office recently.

Ever see those black hightop workout shoes women wear these days?

They look like correction shoes for people who are missing some toes. Actually, what they look like are shoes an East German female weight lifter would wear — one named Greta with big, hairy thighs.

My own secretary, the lovely and talented Miss Wanda Fribish (whose thighs I have never seen), came to work in a pair of shoes like that the other day.

I called her into my office, shut the door and said, "Good God, Wanda! Where did you get those awful-looking shoes?"

Realizing I wanted to handle the matter in a professional, non-sexist manner, she replied, "You want your nose on the back of your head, Four-Eyes?"

"But, Wanda," I said, "you look like an East German female weight lifter in those shoes."

At this point, Miss Fribish, a former Female Tractor-Puller of the Year, kicked me in the shins.

"My shoes," she said, "are my business."

See how easy it was for me to deal with a female employee about her footwear, one-on-one?

I suggest office managers do the same with those female employees not appearing in the workplace with the proper footwear.

To be on the safe side, however, they ought to wear a pair of shinguards. I didn't know those East German female weight-lifter shoes had steel toes.

The doctor said I should be off my crutches in another couple of weeks.

Tutu's wife among 200 women arrested

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — More than 200 women, including the wife of Archbishop Desmond Tutu, were arrested today as they began an anti-government protest march in central Cape Town, police said.

Police stopped the women, who included blacks and whites, when they emerged from a church hall to march to the British Embassy.

They intended to ask Britain to protest the South African government's handling of student unrest in the Cape Town area and to intercede on behalf of three black activists facing execution for a 1986 killing.

In addition to Leah Tutu, those arrested included Mary Burton, a white who heads the Black Sash civil rights group, and Dorothy Boesak, wife of the Rev. Allan Boesak, a prominent mixed-race activist who is president of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches.

Many of the marchers sat in the street, singing hymns and freedom songs, until they were led into police vans and driven away. Scores of onlookers cheered the women.

Protest marches are illegal in South Africa, and the women acted as part of a month-old, nationwide defiance campaign mounted by the anti-apartheid movement.

Archbishop Tutu, the first black to lead the Anglican Church in southern Africa, commented after the arrests: "I am proud of the women. ... I am very proud of my wife."

"The demonstration was a wonderful success," Tutu said. "The women were disciplined, and they were able to make the police behave with restraint."

A white activist involved in the defiance campaign, Willie Hofmeyer, was admitted to a Cape Town hospital today with suspected internal bleeding, his father said.

Hofmeyer has been on a hunger strike since he was detained by police last week during a protest outside a branch of First National Bank, sponsor of an ongoing tour by an international rugby team which activists say is violating the sports boycott of South Africa.

In other developments:

■ A bomb exploded early today at the home of a member of the Indian chamber of Parliament, causing damage but no injuries.

Police said a limpet mine was used in the bombing, which wrecked a door and several windows at the home of Ahomed Lambat in Alberton, on the southeast edge of Johannesburg. There was no claim of responsibility.

Anti-apartheid militants are urging a boycott of the Sept. 6 elections for the mixed-race and Indian chambers of Parliament, which is dominated by a whites-only chamber and excludes the black majority.

■ A trade union official said several dozen policemen raided the office of a predominantly black food workers' union in Boksburg, east of Johannesburg, and confiscated documents.

The two largest black labor federations have been planning nationwide protests next week.

Commercial strike shuts down city in Gaza Strip

JERUSALEM (AP) — A commercial strike shut down the occupied Gaza Strip's largest city today in protest against the shooting death of an Palestinian uprising activist by soldiers during a stone-throwing incident.

In the West Bank, the military government completed the re-opening of schools, which were closed for much of the 20-month Palestinian uprising, by allowing 10th and 11th grade students to return to class.

In Gaza City, stores and businesses were closed following the death Tuesday of Ismail Abu Jayyab, 27, who was the leader of a PLO-backed students group at the closed Islamic University. He had been jailed four times without charges during the uprising.

Masked youths set tires ablaze and threw up makeshift roadblocks in several neighborhoods in Gaza City, which has a population of nearly 200,000 people. The town of Deir El-Balah, where Jayyab was from, also was shut by a strike.

No casualties were reported in the protest, but a 39-year-old municipal worker was shot several times by unknown assailants in Gaza City. He was transferred to an Israeli hospital for surgery.

After Jayyab's death Tuesday, Palestinian witnesses said he was shot by soldiers after a firebomb was thrown at a military vehicle and during stone throwing at troops in downtown Palestine Square. The army said he was killed by army fire during a disturbance.

The English-language Jerusalem Post quoted a witness as saying Jayyab was shot in the face at close range.

Officials at Shifa hospital, where the wounded Jayyab was brought by soldiers, said he died of a single bullet wound above the right eye.

His death brought to 544 the number of Palestinians killed by soldiers or Israeli civilians during the uprising. At least 100 other Palestinians were slain by fellow Arab as alleged collaborators with Israel. Thirty-eight Israeli also have been killed.

In the occupied West Bank, the army reported no violence as about 45,000 students returned.

Cambodian peace talks fail More fighting predicted

PARIS (AP) — Negotiators today failed to reach agreement during a peace conference on Cambodia, and officials predicted a new round of fighting among the groups seeking control of the country.

Delegates from 19 nations could not come up with a compromise plan for ending the war and continued haggling over a closing statement declaring that the conference produced no results.

Three resistance groups are seeking to topple the Vietnam-supported Marxist government.

"We are deadlocked here because the military situation is not decisive," said Ek Saraywath, a spokesman for Prince Norodom Sihanouk, who heads one resistance group. "If there is no result on the battlefield, there is no result at the negotiating table."

Saraywath made his comments Tuesday when collapse of the talks appeared inevitable.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Jean Gueguinou said Tuesday that delegates were leaning toward calling for another peace conference in the spring, "when it appears that the conditions are present for the conference to have a chance of success."

During meetings Monday night and Tuesday, French Foreign Minister Roland Dumas realized "it was too early to arrive at a compromise, but it was not too early to begin working on it," Gueguinou said.

The factions and the Vietnam-installed government of Prime Minister Hun Sen appeared to be digging in rather than softening their positions on key points.

With 26,000 Vietnamese troops scheduled to withdraw from Cambodia by Sept. 27, the parties seem to be less interested in reaching a peace settlement than in seeing how they stand militarily after the pullout.

Senior conference delegates also predicted a new round of fighting following the conference.

"We may be moving into a period where ... things will go back to the ground, to the battlefield," a senior U.S. official said Tuesday on condition of anonymity. "There may be a period now of some months of testing of the military balance on the ground."

Gueguinou said there was "no movement on the part of the Cambodian parties" on two essential points — the composition of a transitional government and international supervision of the withdrawal of Vietnamese forces.

Hun Sen has rejected any monitoring force under the United Nations, which recognizes Sihanouk's coalition as the legitimate government of Cambodia.

Egyptian rights' groups say detainees tortured

CAIRO, Egypt (NYT) — Egyptian rights campaigners accused the authorities Tuesday of beating and torturing a group of 52 journalists, lawyers, students and workers detained after a strike at the country's biggest steel plant.

At least one worker was shot dead, several others were wounded and 600 were detained when security forces stormed a plant in Helwan on Aug. 1 and attacked workers protesting conditions.

Last Thursday, the authorities announced the arrest of 52 people accused of advocating Communism, an illegal ideology in Egypt, and of seeking to overthrow the government.

The authorities accused members of the group of trying to promote Communism during the one-day stoppage at Helwan.

What You Don't Know Can Hurt You.

But not if you take a few minutes to learn about electrical safety around your home or business.

Here are a few safety tips worth remembering.

Overhead.

Never fly a kite, or raise an antenna or place a ladder where it can come in contact with a power line. Touching power lines with any object can result in serious injury or even death. Stay clear of all overhead power lines.

Underground.

Know before you dig. Some neighborhoods have underground power lines. If you don't know whether you have underground power lines, or if you need to know their location, call TU Electric.

Out and around.

Pad mounted transformers, large metal boxes that are ususally green or cream colored, are safe when they are closed and locked. However, if one is opened or damaged, it can be deadly. Call TU Electric immediately to report the situation and warn others to stay away until the repairman arrives.

Be safe around electricity.

Being aware of the location of power lines can save your life or the life of a loved one. So take time now, before you start your next fix-up project, to learn the location of power lines near your home or business. Because what you know about power lines can make the difference between being safe or being sorry.

DON'T LET A POWER LINE BE THE END OF THE LINE.

Investigation continuing in case of hides

By ED TODD

While Clayton and Modesta Williams' exotic sheep hides are being tanned in accordance with a federal-court order out of Midland, prosecutors in California are conducting an "ongoing criminal investigation" into the hides and horns.

The government, through the U.S. Department of Interior's Fish and Wildlife Service, is contending that the hides and horns are from an endangered species of the mountainous Argali sheep and were illegally shot in a hunt that was set up by and sanctioned by the People's Republic of China.

Williams and the Chinese government contend that the hides and horns are not those of the endangered ovis ammon hodgsoni species but rather are from the ovis ammon darwini sub-species that is not endangered.

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Special Agents John Mendoza and Larry Keeney had seized four sets of hides and horns on Aug. 16, 1988, at the U.S. Customs entry at the San Francisco International Airport. The hides and horns, which represent kills by Mr. and Mrs. Williams and by Robert Chisholm and Mahlon White, at the time were under the care of a travel agent, Chris Klineberger.

An environmental scientist, Dr. Valerius Geist of the University of Calgary at Alberta, had identified the hides and horns as belonging to the endangered Argali long-horn sheep.

What turned out to be a touch of irony cropped up in the investigation.

"The ongoing criminal investigation in this matter was complicated and delayed due to the presence of a Fish and Wildlife Service employee on the hunt," noted Mendoza in a recent account of his investigation.

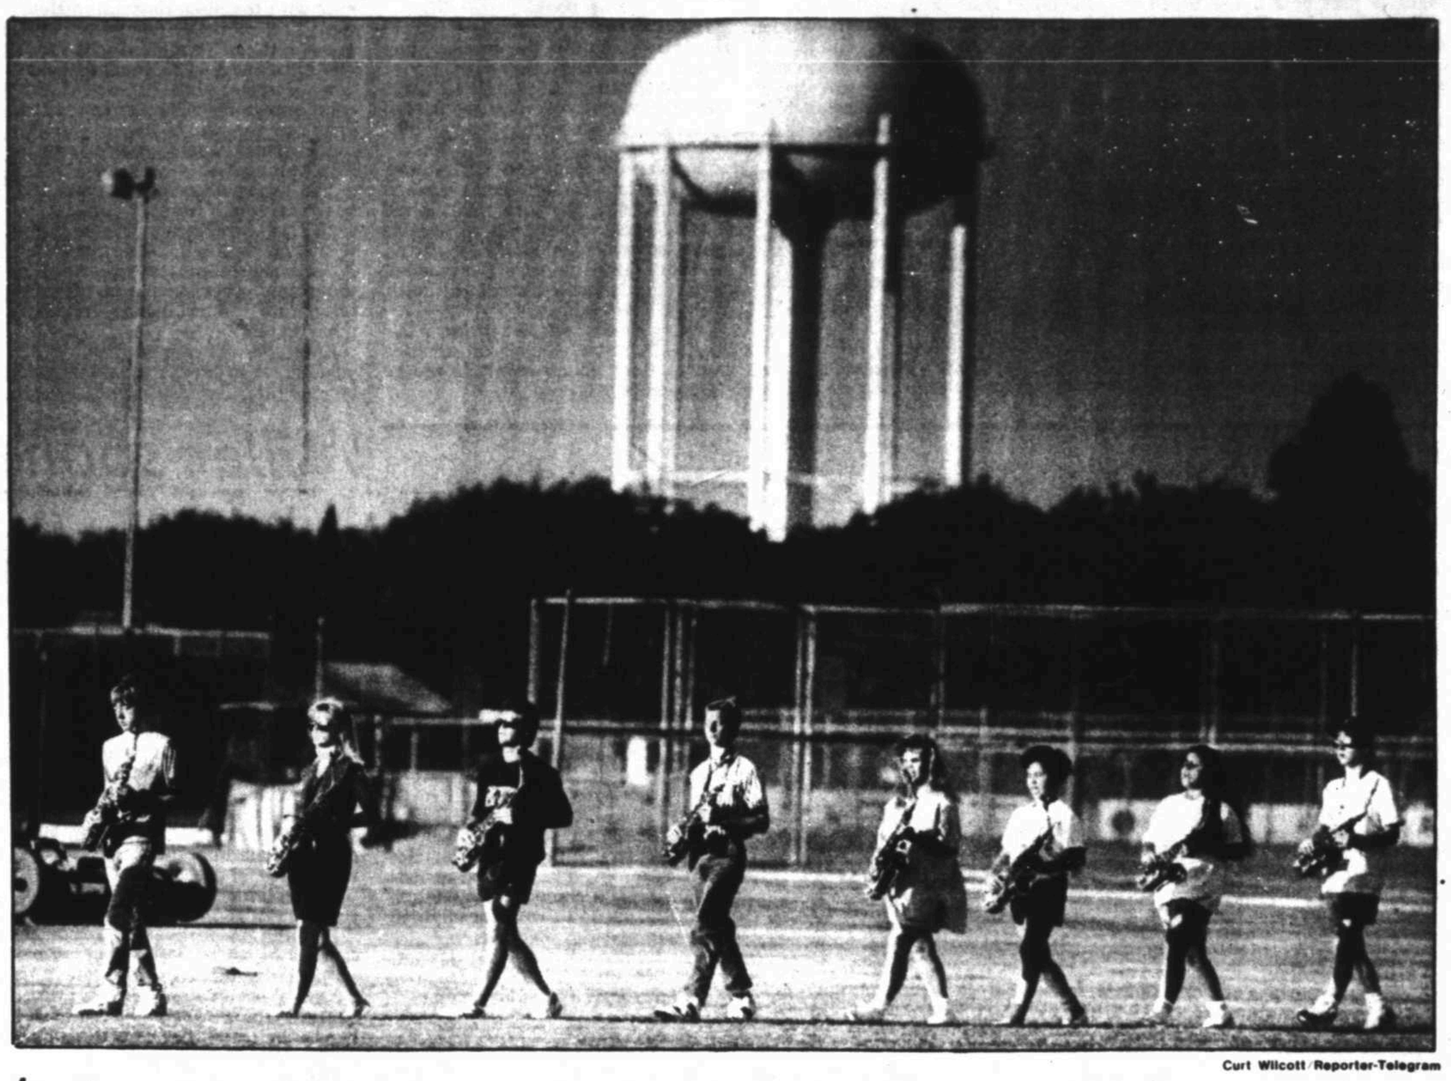

That employee on the hunt was Dr. Richard Mitchell, who, at the time of the hunt, was assigned to the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C.

While the government had possession of the hides and horns, the Williamses, who are Midland-based ranchers, communicators, oil-and-gas operators, bankers and big-game hunters, sought recovery of the hides and horns and, particularly, preservation of the hides through court action filed in Midland.

U.S. District Court Chief Judge Lucius D. Bunton, who initially heard the case in Pecos, had ordered that the hides be turned over to a taxidermist while the dispute is still going on.

The four sets of hides were to be turned over to San Francisco taxidermist Mario Panattoni for "completion of the tanning and fur-dressing process...in consultation with Con-Tan Inc.," Bunton noted in a recent court order.

Midland Lee band members conduct marching routines recently during practice prior to the beginning of school. Local classes begin at Midland Independent School District on Tuesday, Sept. 5.

Colleagues of murdered teacher vent frustrations

FORT WORTH (AP) — Instructors at an elementary school where a teacher was fatally stabbed met with psychologists to vent frustrations and express concerns about school safety.

Glen Park Elementary School teachers sat down Tuesday with four psychologists from the district Tuesday after Jana Simpson, 24, was found Monday on the stairs of a temporary classroom behind the school. She had been stabbed several times in the chest, head and neck, police said.

"We tried to give them an avenue to express those kinds of things," said Fort Worth Assistant Superintendent Dan Powell. "They expressed the same kinds of fears anyone else would.

"I was really proud of them this morning. They handled it all very well. They're looking forward to next Tuesday when the kids come in."

Simpson, who recently left a teaching job in Lake Worth to teach third and fourth grade in Fort Worth, apparently was attacked while moving school supplies into her portable classroom, officers said.

Fort Worth officials stepped up security Tuesday at the school in an attempt to restore confidence to instructors and parents.

An off-duty plain clothes detective will be on duty at the school for the rest of the week along with two campus monitors. One monitor will be stationed at the school for the rest of the year, officials say.

"When you have someone out there with no more regard for human life than that, you have to take every precaution, and we're going to do that," Powell said.

No motive could be established immediately, leading police to classify the slaying as a random homicide. The woman's purse was untouched and she did not appear to have been sexually assaulted.

"We'd like to come up with a motive," said Fort Worth Police Sgt. Paul Kratz.

Kratz said the department is interviewing acquaintances of the teacher to determine if her killer was someone she knew.

Police also are trying to locate a teen-ager residents say they saw in the area before the woman's body was found. He is described as a black male, about 13 to 15 years old.

"We really don't have anything on him that would lead us right now to say that he is a suspect," Kratz said. "But we really would like to talk to him."

Powell said some parents who came to the school Tuesday to enroll their children were displeased with media reports depicting the neighborhood as a high-crime area.

"This has been an isolated incident," Powell said. "It hasn't been an area that we've had problems with in the past.

"They realize that this thing could have happened on a church parking lot or almost anywhere. It has been a quiet, strong, secure school environment."

Board wants to raise home insurance

AUSTIN (AP) — Consumers say homeowners insurance rates in Texas should drop, but the insurance industry says they should go up, a little.

The State Board of Insurance, opening its rate hearing Tuesday, heard from both sides. Board members will decide later on rates to take effect March 1, 1990.

"We urge the board to be aware of the financial strain placed on many Texas consumers in paying their insurance premiums," said Rob Schneider, staff attorney for Consumers Union.

"Even modest increases in homeowners and tenants insurance rates can have a serious negative impact, especially on low-income consumers and consumers who are on fixed incomes," Schneider said.

But Harold Duble, president and chief executive of the Houston-based Highland Insurance Group, told the board that insurers in Texas today are having a tough time.

"At one time, Texas was looked upon as having a climate where rates were adequate and where making a reasonable profit was considered important and desirable," Duble said.

"But not today. Today our industry is struggling — struggling to make an adequate profit and struggling to show the public that we are a decent, law-abiding industry that plays a valuable role in this state's economy," he said.

Insurers are asking for a 0.9 percent statewide average increase in homeowners insurance, with homeowners in the north and northwest seeing an increase of 8.5 percent. Overall, they seek a 0.2 percent hike in residential property insurance rates, which include homeowners, tenants, farm and ranch owners, and fire insurance for dwellings and farms.

The insurance board's staff has recommended a 0.5 percent increase in homeowners' insurance and a 0.7 percent residential boost.

The state Office of Consumer Protection, however, recommended a 10.2 percent cut in homeowners rates and an overall residential reduction of 10.5 percent.

The Consumers Union lawyer contended that much of the difference between the consumers' office proposal for a rate cut and the industry's request for a rate increase can be attributed to a "plugged" expense figure of 25 percent, traditionally used as the industry's expenses.

Attorney general candidate vows 'not to rest until Texas drug free'

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Republican state Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown spent a second day on the campaign trail for attorney general Tuesday rehashing his "crime-fighting" record and vowing to work for a "drug-free" Texas.

"We will not rest until Texas is drug free," Brown said. "If that means enforcing harsh and severe laws, my administration will meet the challenge and not back down."

Brown, 48, of Lake Jackson, became the first Republican to enter the 1990 attorney general's race at an Austin rally on Monday. State Rep. Patricia Hill, R-Dallas, is scheduled to kick off her campaign later this week.

Although the office of attorney general primarily is involved with civil laws, Brown pledged to be a leader in the crime battle.

Brown said he is committed to enforcing environmental laws, pointing to his work in the passage of Texas Superfund legislation in 1981 that provided for the clean up of hazardous waste sites.

"I am committed to a clean Texas. I want a Texas where we can breath our air, swim in our waterways, fish in our lakes, camp in our parks, raise cattle on our ranges and farm our land," he said.

He said consumer protection also will be a priority of his administration, adding that "it is in the best interest of Texas consumers and Texas business to prosecute those people who engage in fraud and deception."

The GOP candidate criticized incumbent Democratic Attorney General Jim Mattox, a likely candidate for governor, for what he charged was politicization of the office.

"After eight years, it is time Texas had an attorney general with the people's interests in mind, not political opportunism," he said.

Brown, a native of Mercedes, was graduated from Texas A&I University and obtained his law degree from the University of Texas. He worked as a briefing attorney for the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals and served as an assistant district attorney for Brazoria County for four years.

He first was elected to the Texas Senate in 1980.

Brown briefly sought the GOP nomination for attorney general in 1986, but he was thwarted by a state law that prohibits legislators from seeking offices for which they raised the salaries.

Couple killed when car jumps guardrail in weekend wreck

From Staff Reports

A Woodlands couple died late Saturday when the 1988 BMW they were riding in jumped a guardrail on U.S. Interstate 10 and landed in the bottom of a ravine about 15 miles southwest of Iraan, a Texas Department of Public Safety spokesman said today.

However, the bodies of Benjamin Moore, 48, and his wife, Susan Moore, 42, were not discovered until about 3 p.m. Monday by employees of the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

They were pronounced dead by Pecos County Justice of the Peace Elsie Mirike.

According to the DPS report, troopers believe the accident occurred between 7 p.m. and midnight Saturday.

A DPS spokeswoman in Ozona reported this morning that the couple was traveling west in the right lane of I-10 when Moore apparently fell asleep at the wheel and lost control of the car.

The impact of the car's collision with a guardrail forced it into the air and then into the ravine where it came to rest after rolling over several times, according to the report.

The wreckage was difficult to locate becauase it had landed in the ravine, the spokeswoman said.

According to the report, the couple was wearing seatbelts when the accident occurred.

MC respiratory students will be allowed to study at MCH

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Medical Center Hospital managers unanimously approved a contract Tuesday to allow Midland College respiratory therapy students to continue gaining experience at the facility.

At a previous meeting, managers tabled action on the contract, saying there might not be enough space for students from Odessa and Midland colleges. The program has grown from eight to more than 75 students in six years.

Eileen Piwetz, chairman of Midland College's health sciences division, said having that training is critical for the students.

"We could not have a program if we did not have clinical affiliation with the hospital," Ms. Piwetz said.

She said the students must have two years of clinical experience before they can qualify to become certified respiratory therapists.

"Our programs have grown and we all need clinical space," Ms. Piwetz said. "And with the demand for health care people, we always have new applicants."

The students spend their two years helping patients, usually at either Midland Memorial Hospital or MCH, Ms. Piwetz said. Midland College this year will send 22 students to MMH and 10 to MCH.

Sims urges Pecos River fish kill-study

From Staff and Wire Reports

AUSTIN — State Sen. Bill Sims, D-San Angelo, is urging the governor's office to study the best way of using the approximately $14 million in compensation New Mexico will pay over a broken compact on Pecos River water.

Sims, who represents Midland, said Tuesday that he believes $200,000 of the money should go to a university to study the Pecos River fish kill problem that has been occurring for the past five years, while using the remaining funds for irrigation systems on the river.

"I believe the money should go back to the people who were using the water from the Pecos River," said Sims. "It is impossible to give it to the people directly and this would be the most beneficial to users of Pecos River water."

Sims also said he has asked Gov. Bill Clements to include in the agenda for the Nov. 14 special legislative session establishment of a trust fund for Pecos River irrigators and landowners.

Old-fashioned shoeshiners being booted out of business

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — James Ellison, a shoeshine man at the downtown Gunter Hotel for the past 43 years, is part of a dying breed.

The soft-spoken 65-year-old shines shoes while his clients receive haircuts or manicures at the hotel's barber shop.

His equipment at one corner of the shop indicates he shines shoes the old-fashioned way, using the basic elements of the trade: polish, saddle soap and a rag. For a mere $1.25, clients walk away with a superb shine.

But Ellison and other owners of one-man shoe shops are facing growing competition threatening their old-fashioned way of doing business.

Grocery store chains and other corporate giants are beginning to offer shoe-care services, offering the inherent advantages of financial reserves and convenient locations throughout the city.

Some fear the small Norman Rockwell-like shoe shops will become extinct in the face of such competition.

"The old-timers are gone. It'll be all assembly line," predicted Carlos Galindo, a veteran shoeshiner. "Good, quality work is going to be hard to find."

The new-breed shoeshiners counter that they are giving on-the-move customers what they want.

"You can't live on charm," said Rene Garza, who owns one of the city's largest shoeshine and repair businesses, with 40 outlets citywide. "The name of the game is convenience."

And shoe shops are becoming almost as common as grocery stores.

There are close to 40 shoe repair and shoeshine businesses — with several operating more than one store — advertised in the San Antonio telephone book.

HEB Grocery Co. secured Garza's business to handle the grocery store chain's shoe services.

HEB spokesman Mike De La Garza said the various services are part of the corporation's one-stop-shopping philosophy.

Kroger Co. followed HEB's lead. Six months ago the chain's store at Huebner and Bandera roads hired Shoe Repair of America to provide shoe servicing. Unlike HEB's service, the shoeshine and repair equipment at Kroger is located inside the store, behind the counter.

"If it works, we plan to do it nationwide," Shoe Repair of America owner Rudy Ramirez said of the in-house shoe services.

Ramirez's success is reflective of the changes in shoe servicing. The businessman started his cobbler career with the Shoe Hospital in Houston. The one-man operation soon grew into a $3 million city wide chain that he sold to a laundry company, Ramirez said. A five year non-competition clause recently ended, affording him the chance of rebuilding his shoe repair empire here in San Antonio.

The 1-year-old company currently has four stores here.

"It's very lucrative if you know what you're doing," Ramirez said.

Garza represents the new breed of shoeshine proprietor that often is lured into the profession from another career.

Upon his retirement from a 37-year career in data processing, Garza bought the successful shoe business six years ago. The outlets have a diverse clientele, from status-conscious Alamo heights residents to personnel on the city's military bases.

Garza expects his business to quadruple in the next two to three years. Such success by newcomers has old-timers worried, but they're not giving up.

"They don't do it like I do," said George Johnson, a shoeshiner for 35 years. "I do it the old-fashioned way."

The Gunter Hotel's Ellison agreed. "They use spray-on polish," he said of some larger companies. "It's a fine shine but it doesn't do anything for the leather."

Galindo had similar thoughts on the matter.

Like many longtime shoe shiners, he sees the trade as transcending the status of mere occupation. It is a craft — almost an art form — that is meant to be passed down from generation to generation.

Although his brother and a nephew are continuing the family tradition with two Galindo's Boot & Shoe Repair outlets, Galindo laments that his two sons did not follow in his footsteps. One son works for the city's Parks and Recreation Department, while the other is a heavy equipment operator.

Even if the two sons were to take up the craft, they are well past their prime. A shoeshine man must start early in life to achieve mastery, Galindo said.

"We're the last of the breed," he said. "If there were a lot of them (old-timers), I'd have a shoeshine shop in every mall in San Antonio."

Miller-sponsored concert compared to 1969 International Pop Festival

LEWISVILLE (AP) — Three weeks after Woodstock, about 120,000 people spent three days on a field outside this Dallas suburb for the Texas International Pop Festival.

This weekend, Miller Brewing Co. hopes to draw 500,000 people to concerts in six Texas cities, including performances by the Who in Houston and Dallas.

The events culminate 16 months of commercials and thousands of dollars worth of promotion by Miller, which is tying in with annual Labor Day festivities in many of the cities.

In addition to the Who, performances by Jerry Jeff Walker, Kool and the Gang, Natalie Cole and many others are planned in Dallas, Houston, San Antonio, Corpus Christi, McAllen and Midland-Odessa.

The Miller event is expected to draw large crowds as the pop festival did 20 years ago. But one was put together on a shoestring budget and the other is the result of months of television hype.

"The whole tone of the two shows 20 years apart is remarkably different," Angus Wynne, who promoted the Lewisville festival, said Tuesday.

Wynne helped line up 30 bands for the pop festival in seven weeks.

The bill included Chicago Transit Authority, Herbie Mann, Janis Joplin, Sam and Dave, Santana, Sly and the Family Stone, B.B. King, Grand Funk Railway and Led Zeppelin.

Wynne says he paid $120,000 for all 30 acts. By contrast, the Who grossed $1.04 million at a concert before 47,000 fans in St. Louis three weeks ago.

AP Laserphoto

Angus Wynne, president of a Dallas entertainment agency, was the promoter of the 1969 Texas International Pop Festival in Lewisville, a Dallas suburb.

The promoters of the Texas International Pop Festival lost $100,000. Miller hopes they'll be able to contribute to the Special Olympics.

The company and promoters have an elaborate security plan, including different colored wristbands for designated drivers, who will be given free soft drinks and not allowed to purchase beer.

For Sam Houston, a Denton judge who was mayor of Lewisville from 1969 to 1973, security was his chief concern about the 1969 festival.

"There were very conservative people who came out to be with very liberal people, and it was just very volatile...Anything could have set off the worst riot this country has ever seen, in my opinion," he said.

"But it didn't happen, thank heavens."

Drugs were common at the Lewisville festival, but the crowd behaved. There were only 36 arrests, most for public intoxication.

"It was all soft," Wynne said. "Psychedelics and pot, I believe, were the prevalent stimulants of choice."

When it was over, Lewisville residents were surprised by the long-haired, easygoing rock fans. Some concertgoers mowed lawns and babysat for residents during their three-day stay.

"That was part of the mind-blow thing that went on here. People expected all these folks to be real nasty, and here they were handing them flowers, just as polite as they could be. It disarmed them totally," Wynne said.

Today, the festival site is gone, replaced long ago by an industrial park. And the peaceful, easy feeling has been replaced by colored wristbands allowing access to multi-million-dollar concert spectacles.

HIDES

Bunton, who has been displeased with the government's handling of the case, has noted that the Williams couple "resorted to the courts only after repeated and unsuccessful attempts to contact the appropriate persons within the Department of the Interior charged with the custody of the hides," Bunton wrote.

The government's conduct "is deplorable and certainly unbecoming of government employees whose positions charge them with custody of property which is subject to claims of private persons."

Last October, a government's prosecutor announced that there would be "no criminal prosecution" of the Williamses "at that time."

However, noted Mendoza, the investigation into "possible violations of the criminal provisions of the Endangered Species Act and other federal laws continues."

The dispute over whether the hides and horns are those of the endangered Argali sheep is to be settled by Bunton in court in Midland.

Firefighters seek radio's return

AUSTIN (AP) — The Austin Fire Department says no questions will be asked — but will whoever stole an expensive two-way radio from one of its fire trucks, then fouled the airwaves with obscenities, please give the radio back?

Officials said the portable radio was taken from the cab of a fire truck during a station shift change Monday. They said the man apparently likes to play firefighter, say lots of obscene words — or both.

"He indeed was playing with it (Monday) night, talking on it and cursing in it and really raising havoc," Fire Division Chief Richard Brumbelow said.

"One of our dispatchers pleaded with him to turn it in to a 7-Eleven or something, to just give it back to us," Brumbelow said. "Of course, the battery will run down in short order if he continues to use it, so it will be of no use to him."

The thief didn't disrupt communications for the Fire Department. It's just that the radios, called handy-talkies, don't exactly come cheap at $2,500 apiece.

"It's a $2,500 thorn on our side because we don't have that many radios," department spokesman Pat Phillips said. The department has about 115 radios. Firefighters will still accept the radio if it comes back damaged, she said, because it can be repaired more cheaply than buying a new one.

"Insurance companies should be required to be accountable for their expenses and efficient in their operation. Consumers cannot afford to support companies which operate inefficiently," Schneider said.

But Sam Winters, counsel for the Texas Insurance Advisory Association, said that regulated property insurance rates, both personal and commercial, are lower today than 10 years ago.

The average annual rate reduction since July 1, 1979, has been 4.2 percent for commercial insurance and 1.5 percent for residential insurance, he said.

Richards sends Hance snorkel in return for life jacket

PORT O'CONNOR (AP) — Democratic gubernatorial candidate Ann Richards sent Republican hopeful Kent Hance a snorkel and face mask after Hance sent her a life jacket.

Ms. Richards' campaign sent Hance his swim gear Tuesday saying he "is in over his head and can't see his way to tell the truth."

Glenn Smith, Ms. Richards' campaign manager, said Hance was wrong to claim that Ms. Richards supported widening the state sales tax to such items as food and medicine.

"That is a lie, and Kent Hance knows it. If lies were taxable and Kent Hance were governor, we'd have a huge budget surplus," Smith said.

He said Ms. Richards, the state's current treasurer, is touring the Texas coast this week to promise expanding the Texas economy, which would eliminate the need for any additional taxes.

"Ann Richards is opposed to a state income tax. The only thing Texans dislike more than an income tax is prevarication," Smith said.

Earlier Tuesday, Hance sent Ms. Richards' campaign headquarters an orange life jacket and urged her to abandon a proposal to increase the state sales tax.

"Just like the captain of the Titanic, Ann will sink our fragile economic recovery with her liberal tax-hike philosophy," Hance said. "I hope she uses this life preserver before we all drown in her tax and spend proposals."

Wife says she won't seek Leland's congressional seat

HOUSTON (AP) — Rep. Mickey Leland's widow, citing her family as her primary concern, ended speculation and said she would not run for her late husband's congressional seat in a special election this fall.

Alison Leland, a 30-year-old investment banker with Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc., released a one-page statement from her office Tuesday that said she would not be a candidate on the Nov. 7 ballot.

Mrs. Leland, who has a 3-year-old son, Jarrett, and is pregnant, said her family responsibilities are too important to consider running for Congress.

"My priority now has to be to my son, who already misses his father very much and needs and deserves my attention even more now," she said. "We also have a new baby on the way, and I want very much for this child to come into the world happy and healthy, too.

"The process of choosing a new representative for the 18th congressional district is a difficult one," Mrs. Leland said. "Many of the people who are running were Mickey's friends, which makes it very sad to consider that some would begin their campaigns before Mickey's plane was ever found."

Although nobody announced their candidacy for the post before Leland's plane was found, one political analyst said he had been asked to do polling for two possible candidates before the six-term Texas Democrat's death was confirmed. He spoke only on the condition he not be identified and he did not name the potential candidates seeking his help.

Mrs. Leland said she would support Houston City Councilman Rodney Ellis if he decides to run for the 18th congressional district.

"Mickey and I did discuss the future and the possibility that someday he might pursue another career," she said. "It is clear to me that Mickey would have wanted to be succeeded by City Councilman Rodney Ellis. He loved Rodney, he trusted Rodney, and considered him to be among his closest friends."

Leland and 15 others were killed Aug. 7 in a plane crash in Ethiopia while on a hunger relief mission to a refugee camp. Rescuers searched for a week before finding the plane wreckage on a rugged mountainside.

Ellis has said he would put off a decision about running until Mrs. Leland announced her intentions. Ellis did not immediately return telephone calls to his office Tuesday.

At least two people — state Sen. Craig Washington, D-Houston, and state Rep. Al Edwards, D-Houston — have announced they will run for the seat, and several others are considered possible candidates.

City Councilman Anthony Hall has said he is inclined to run, but the Houston Post reported Tuesday that he has not told the Federal Election Commission whether he paid off his debts for a decade-old campaign for the same position.

Hall maintains that his bills from the race against Leland have been settled, but records in Washington show he never reported how or if he paid the more than $50,000 in debts from his unsuccessful race in 1978.

In addition, the records show that Hall failed to respond to five separate FEC requests that he account for the debts, the Post said.

"I didn't know that," Hall said. "We need to get that handled. We will."

Federal election laws require campaign committees to continue filing regular accounts with the FEC as long as they have either cash or outstanding debts.

The FEC's last written request for such information about Hall's campaign debts was sent to the campaign treasurer in November 1983. The letter said failure to respond "may result in an audit or legal enforcement action," but the FEC has never pressed a case against Hall.

While acknowledging that his campaign committee may not have informed the FEC as required, Hall also said that the proper report will be filed with the commission.

Man held in murders of officer, his parents

MERIDIAN (AP) — A man suspected of fatally shooting three people, including a Waco police officer, was captured after he crashed his car into a parked truck during a chase in what authorities called a suicide attempt.

The incident began Tuesday when Waco Police Sgt. John Bobby Vicha and his parents, John and Zelda Vicha, were shot to death at their home in Axtell, northeast of Waco.

Zelda Vicha was found in the garage of her home in the community of 105 and her husband was found in a back room, McLennan County Sheriff Jack Harwell said.

Justice of the Peace David Pareya said officer Vicha's parents, both believed to be in their 60s, had been shot in the head.

Waco Police Sgt. Steve De La Rosa said that Waco police broadcast a description of Billy Wayne Coble, and the car he was driving and said the man was wanted on charges of capital murder and aggravated kidnapping. Officers were not told that one of the people killed had been Vicha.

Authorities theorize that officer Vicha was shot to death between 5:30 p.m. and 6 p.m. Tuesday and then someone shot his mother and father to death. The man then went to a nearby home and tied up Karen Coble and her three children.

Axtell resident Chad Stanley, 16, told authorities he went to the Coble home to see his 16-year-old girlfriend when Karen Coble came to the door.

"She had her hands behind her back, and she was shaking real bad," Stanley said. "And she moved her lips like, 'There's somebody in the house.' It was like she was giving me a signal."

Stanley said he and two friends later returned to the Coble home and found his girlfriend, her sisters, ages 14 and 10, and Sgt. Vicha's 10-year-old son with tape over their mouths and their hands tied behind their backs.

"We got them out of the house because they said he was coming back, and he said he was going to kill himself," said Stanley.

Bosque County officers said a deputy spotted Coble's vehicle on Texas 22 and followed it for a time, waiting for backup help, before giving chase.

Witnesses said a car driven by Coble slid off the highway and struck the rear of a parked truck just outside Meridian.

Bosque County Chief Deputy Dewell Harper said it appeared that Coble was attempting suicide when he crashed his car into the parked truck.

"That's what he was trying to do — suicide and another murder," said Dewell Harper, chief deputy for Bosque County.

"The chase didn't last very long," Harper said. "The guy sped up to 80, then intentionally ran into a truck that had pulled over to the side of the road."

Coble and his wife were pinned in the wreckage.

Officers found two handguns in the car after getting Coble and his wife out of the wrecked car.

Coble, his wife and an unidentified person were all reported to be in stable condition early today at Goodall-Witcher Hospital Foundation in nearby Clifton.

Change urged in calculating disaster aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen on Tuesday urged the U.S. Department of Agriculture to change the method in which disaster payments are calculated.

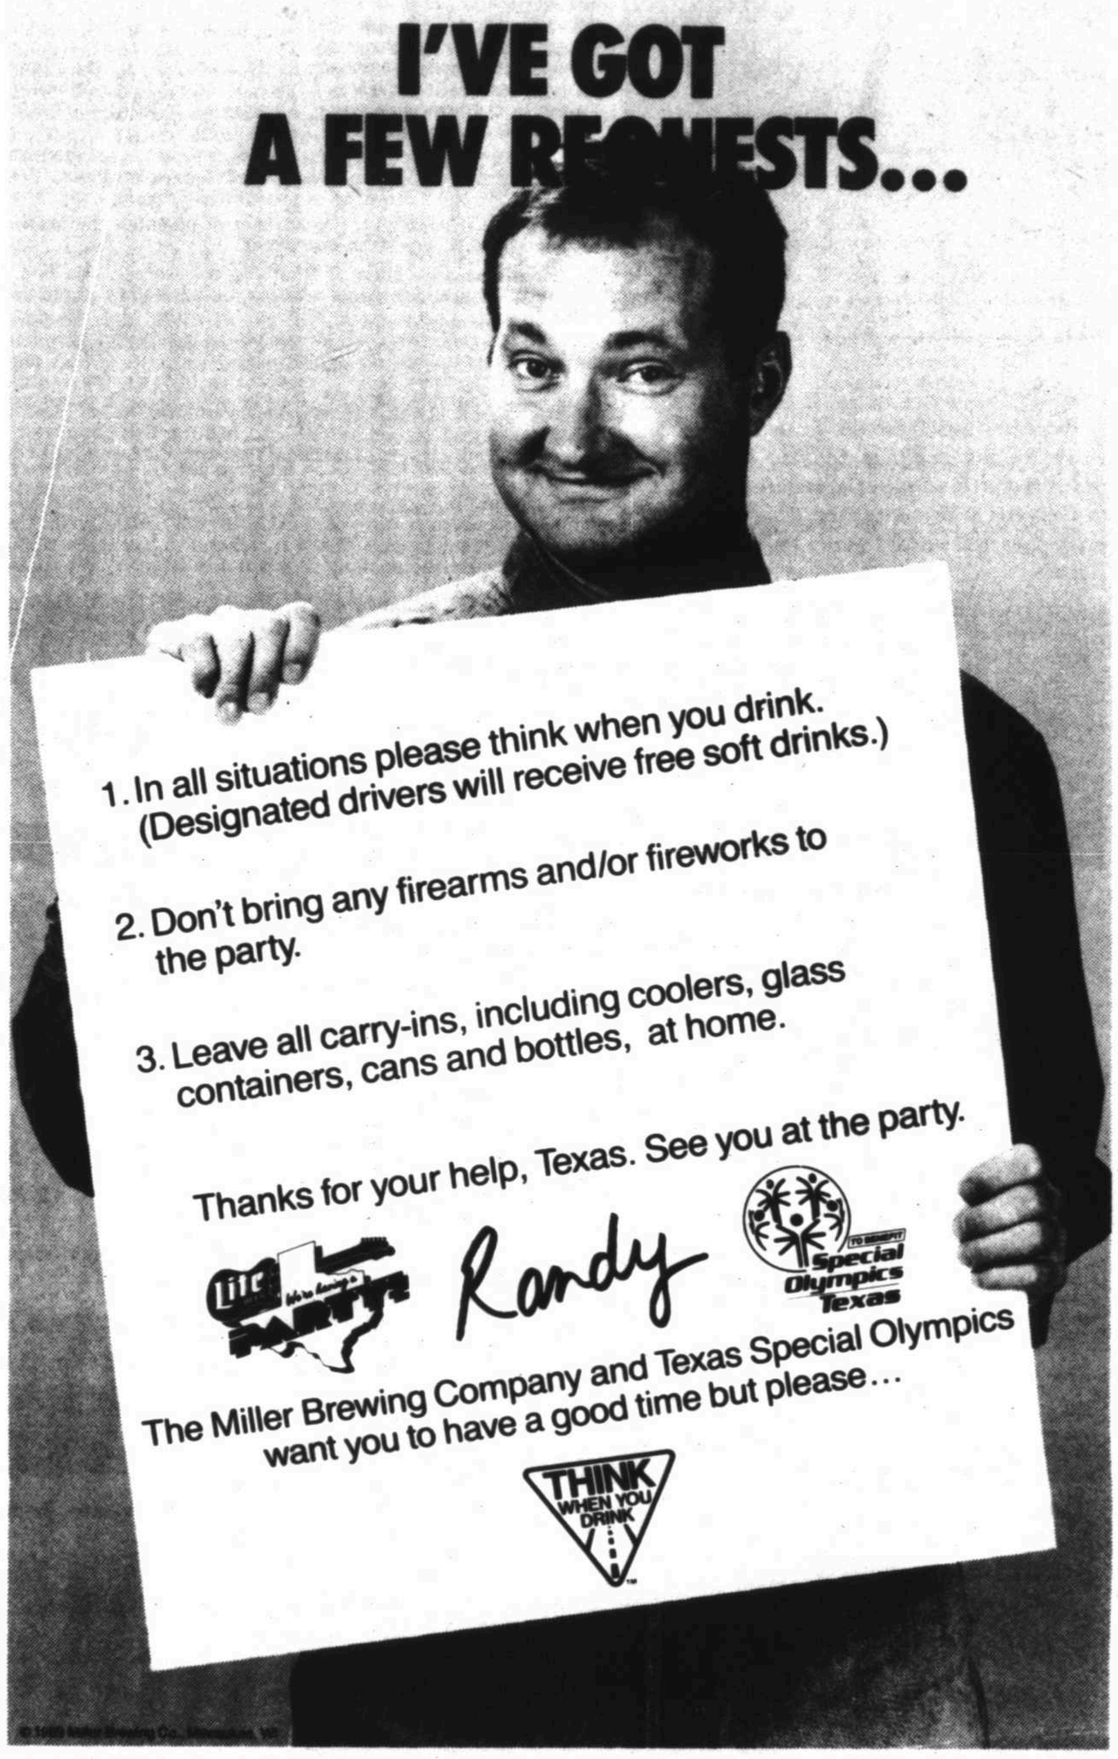

Bentsen asked Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter not to deduct the gross value of second crops in determining how much farmers receive when their first crop is devastated by natural disaster.

A provision of recent disaster relief legislation provides for a reduction of disaster assistance payments in cases where farmers plant a substitute crop to replace a failed crop.

"Department plans to deduct the gross, not net, values of the second crop would result in huge losses in disaster payments for many farmers who have gone the extra mile by planting a salvage crop after losing their first crop," Bentsen said in a statement.

Bentsen said about half of the acreage in Texas which is eligible for disaster assistance has been planted with second crops.

A farmer who lost a wheat crop that was expected to yield 35 bushels per acres would be eligible for about $60 per acre in disaster payments, Bentsen said. However, if he planted a substitute crop of milo — and the gross value rule was enacted — he would receive about $14 per acre in disaster relief.

Excursion train links Houston, Galveston

AP Laserphoto

Houston businessman Franklin Denson waves to the engineer to start the shakedown run of the Texas Limited from Houston to Galveston. The excursion train is the first passenger train in 20 years to link the two cities.

HOUSTON (AP) — After 6½ years of work and more than $1 million in expenses, the Texas Limited began a new era in Texas by becoming the first passenger train in 20 years to link Houston and Galveston.

"It's been an extremely difficult project to put together," said Franklin Denson, the Houston businessman who has spearheaded the project.

"We're dealing with three railroad companies; we had labor organizations we had to work out problems with; and we had Amtrak to negotiate with," he said Tuesday.

"It's just what we came to them with was a hybrid animal that nobody had ever seen before. The passenger trains disappeared between Houston and Galveston many years ago and the companies that own these railroad tracks have been out of that business over a generation. And here we come along trying to put something back together that's been gone for a long time."

Denson, 42, whose great-grandfather was president of the Birmingham Southern Railroad Co., once worked as a brakeman for the Santa Fe Railroad before he went into banking.

Denson said despite all the headaches of planning the project, he never doubted it would be completed.

"I felt it was a question of time and persistence," he said. "I'm absolutely ecstatic. It's going to do so much good for our city."

A special inaugural run for the five-car train was scheduled for Thursday, with the first public service set for Friday. Regular service will be Thursday through Sunday, with two round trips on Saturdays.

Tuesday's first 50-mile trip to Galveston on the Gulf of Mexico left Houston's Amtrak station at 9:34 a.m., about a half-hour later than expected because railroad officials insisted on last-minute brake tests.

Denson said the biggest problem was convincing the railroads that the new passenger service would not interrupt routine freight operations. Some of the track and rail switches also had to be rebuilt or replaced because the equipment was not satisfactory for passenger service.

"The purpose of this is not to run a train back and forth between Houston and Galveston," he said. "It's a bigger picture than that.

"We think Houston has an excellent opportunity really for the first time in its history to get into the business of tourism."

Denson likens Galveston to Fisherman's Wharf in San Francisco, or the French Quarter in New Orleans.

"We want to put it in our back yard so we can benefit from it and promote it — and Galveston can benefit," he said. "We think the key is to make the physical experience to get from downtown Houston to Galveston not an ordeal — and that's what it is today — a very trying transportation experience that most people find unpleasant, particularly on weekends."

The highway route to Galveston is along Interstate 45, Houston's infamous Guif Freeway, notorious for its never-ending construction projects. The trip from downtown by car, however, normally takes less than an hour.

The train, traveling about 35 mph, will take a little more than two hours.

"This is an excursion train, not a bullet train," Denson said. "It's a leisurely journey. It's analogous to a cruise ship. This is a train ride for fun primary and transportation secondary."

The train can accommodate up to 250 passengers, who can choose from among five refurbished rail cars, including the Silver Stirrup, which has a domed roof. Another of the cars, the Chimayo, was used into the 1940s on the famous Santa Fe streamliner, the Chicago-to-Los Angeles Super Chief.

Round-trip fares for adults range from $25 to $40. Children ride for $17.50 to $28.

Denson said reservations have been going so well he'll need to hire additional people.

"We've been overwhelmed," he said. "We want to make the experience of getting from here to Galveston and entertainment experience, a nostalgic, romantic train ride — something that a lot of people haven't done or haven't done in many years."

Vegetables, fruit seized at border

EL PASO (AP) — Federal agents have seized about five tons of fruit, plants and vegetables at border crossings in an anti-produce smuggling blitz, officials said Monday.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture has teamed up with the Border Patrol to stem the flow of incoming produce and plants.

"It's important to ensure this prohibited produce stays out of the United States because it can harbor insects and other pests that are harmful to U.S. crops," said John Vigil, USDA assistant agent in charge of Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service in El Paso.

The agencies have conducted a three-phase, six-week effort at the border to intercept smuggled produce that often is sold on street corners in the United States.

"They're young illegal aliens trying to make a living," said Phil Garcia, assistant officer in charge of the USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service.

Texan pleads guilty to smuggling parrots

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — Two men have pleaded guilty in federal court to smuggling parrots into the United States from Mexico.

Mark Wolf, of Johnson County, Kan., and James Pierson, of La Feria, Texas, entered their pleas Monday to illegal importation charges.

Pierson had arranged for 25 baby yellow-naped parrots from Mexico to be delivered to Wolf for sale in Kansas, said U.S. Attorney Julie Robinson.

Pierson introduced Wolf to a contact who agreed to transport the parrots from Texas to Kansas in the spring of 1988, Ms. Robinson said. Instead, the contact delivered the parrots to U.S. Fish and Wildlife agents. The agents swapped the parrots for 25 legal birds.

Wolf, a bird wholesaler who works from his home, pleaded guilty to knowingly violating regulations requiring wildlife to be imported only through designated ports of entry. Pierson pleaded guilty to transporting wildlife that he should have known was illegally imported.

A two-year investigation by the Fish and Wildlife Service and the U.S. Customs Office ending in late 1988 led to charges being filed against 36 people in several states. Agents seized smuggled parrots valued at $468,000 and aircraft and other vehicles valued at $93,000.

Officials described the operation as their first major undercover effort to crack down on illegal parrot dealers.

Agents seize marijuana

EL PASO (AP) — U.S. Customs Service officials seized 26 pounds of marijuana from the floor of a van and also arrested a Mexican man on Tuesday.

Reymundo Borunda, a U.S. Customs agent, said the van was stopped at about 7:30 a.m. when an inspector became suspicious about a nervous driver.

Officials originally thought the entire floor of the van was filled with marijuana, but only found the single package in the van. A drug-sniffing dog alerted inspection officials to the illegal drug.

The bust is the third in the past two weeks. Official seized $15 million in cocaine in separate busts last week.

Medical school dean named

DALLAS (AP) — Dr. William Neaves will become dean of the University of Texas Southwestern Medical School on Sept. 1.

Neaves has been executive vice president for academic affairs for the medical school since May 1988. He previously served as dean of Southwestern Graduate School of Biomedical Sciences and as interim dean of Southwestern Medical School.

School officials said Neaves was a unanimous choice of a search committee that included 16 department chairmen from the medical school and the head of Parkland Memorial Hospital.

Naves, from Spur, earned a biology degree from Harvard College in 1966. He also received a doctorate in anatomy from Harvard Medical School in 1969.

Yes cancels Dallas concert

DALLAS (AP) — Four former members of the rock group Yes, who have formed a new group and are touring together for the first time in 15 years, canceled Tuesday's scheduled concert in Dallas after a band member fell ill.

Jon Anderson, Bill Bruford, Rick Wakeman and Steve Howe — four members of the 1970s Yes lineup — will halt their tour until Sunday because bassist Tony Levin is hospitalized in Houston with an unspecified illness.

A Starplex amphitheater spokeswoman told The Dallas Morning News Tuesday that Levin had collapsed. She said the group probably will not make up the Dallas concert and arrangements were being made for ticket refunds.

Yes still exists as a California-based band with an almost entirely new roster of musicians.

Assistant secretary named

AUSTIN (AP) — Pete Wassdorf, a lawyer who had been director of administration for Gov. Bill Clements, has been named assistant secretary of state.

Secretary of State George Bayoud said Tuesday that Wassdorf, 44, would assume his new duties next month.

Wassdorf, a graduate of Southern Methodist University and the SMU law school, had been a lawyer and operated a real estate brokerage firm before joining the Clements administration in 1987.

He replaces Brad Gahm, who will return to private law practice.

Motorcyclists to parade in protest of helmet law

ARLINGTON (AP) — A Texas-based motorcycle rights group is expecting more than 3,000 bikers across the state to participate in a parade this weekend to protest a mandatory helmet law that takes effect Friday, organizers say.

Under a law adopted by the 71st state Legislature last spring, motorcyclists will be required to wear protective helmets or face a $50 fine.

"This is all about freedom of choice," said Walt Ward, assistant district coordinator for American Bikers Aimed Toward Education. "We're adults and we should be able to make up our minds. Apparently (legislators) don't think adults in Texas are able to make up their minds on what they want to do."

Bikers in the Parade of Protest will leave sites across the state Friday and Saturday carrying flags and wearing black armbands to symbolize "the mourning of another freedom lost," said Executive Director H.E. "Sundance" Mitchell. The group won't wear helmets, he said.

Chapters from Dallas, Fort Worth, Austin, Abilene, Houston, San Antonio and Longview will meet in Llano County on the river below Buchanan Dam where they will hold a rally and plan strategy.

"We are exercising our constitutional right under the First Amendment with organized parades to draw public and government awareness to the real problems of motorcycle safety and the current disregard of motorcyclists rights," Mitchell said in a statement. "We are inviting all concerned riders in Texas to participate with us."

Mitchell contends that wearing helmets does not necessarily lead to decreased deaths or injuries in motorcycle accidents.

"Calling the helmet law a motorcycle safety measure is like calling sun tan oil a cure for skin cancer," Mitchell said. "Helmet use has nothing to do with being able to safely operate a motorcycle or accident prevention."

Ward agreed, saying the legislature should focus on motorcycle operation education.

The group has more than 3,000 members in 17 chapters in Texas. Several members protested at the Capitol in Austin this spring before Gov. Bill Clements signed the helmet legislation.

Mitchell says the group will make the helmet law a political issue in the 1990 election.

"Perhaps those who ignored our concerns at the Capitol will hear us with next year's elections," he said.

After-school snacks comfort latch-key children

By DESIREE VIVEA
Copley News Service

It's back-to-school time again, and for many children this means several hours at home alone before a parent returns from work. If this is your situation, you can bet your youngsters will get hungry before you get home. But it's no problem, if you do a little planning ahead of time.

If you're worried that your children are eating too much junk food after school, take charge and leave a variety of ingredients around the kitchen, from which they can prepare their own simple snacks.

Some nutritious ideas might include: fresh and dried fruits, crackers and breads, cheese, nuts, peanut butter and jelly, granola bars or cereal (children particularly like individual-size boxes), yogurt, vegetable sticks and leftovers from earlier meals (especially pizza).

Youngsters aren't likely to bother with a snack that is difficult to prepare, but will if they can make it in a few, simple steps. If you know there will be no adult supervision at snack time, do the more difficult cooking or cutting yourself, leaving easier tasks for children to complete. Younger children should stick to snacks that don't require use of knives, and those younger than 10 should not cook without adult supervision.

Older children master the microwave with ease, and like the fact that they can prepare snacks for themselves and younger siblings by simply pushing a few buttons. Since the oven turns itself off, there is no worry about a stray burner being left on.

Be sure your children know which bowls, plates, and casseroles are microwave-safe, and that they understand about standing time — so they don't try to eat a dish before it's completely cooked. Keep pot holders or oven mitts handy, and train children to use them when removing food from the microwave, same as with a regular oven.

A recipe leaflet, "Make It Yourself — Fun Food For Kids" is now available from the American Dairy Association. Most of the recipes are single serving, several are no-cook, and five of the 10 are microwaveable. The leaflet features dairy products like milk, cheese, ice cream and yogurt.

MICRO-TIP OF THE WEEK

To melt caramels (for candied apples, etc.), unwrap caramels and place in a microwave-safe dish. Microwave on HIGH (100 percent power) setting until just melted, stirring once. Time will be approximately one minute for ½ cup; 1½ to two minutes for 1 cup caramels.

CHEESE QUESADILLA
1 (10-inch) flour tortilla
¼ cup shredded cheddar or Monterey Jack cheese
Mild tomato salsa

Yields 1 serving.
Preparation time: 5 minutes.
Cooking time: 1 minute.
Oven setting: HIGH (100 percent power).

Place tortilla on paper plate. Spread shredded cheese evenly over half of tortilla. Fold tortilla in half. Put plate in microwave oven and microwave 1 minute, or until cheese melts. Cheese will be hot. Serve with salsa for dipping.

BAKED APPLE
1 medium-size apple
1 teaspoon raisins
1 tablespoon brown sugar
Pinch cinnamon

Yields 1 serving.
Preparation time: 5 minutes.
Cooking time: 3 minutes (plus 5 minutes standing time).
Oven setting: HIGH (100 percent power).

With small knife carefully cut circle around apple stem, then remove core, scraping inside of apple to remove seeds. In small dish stir together raisins, sugar and cinnamon. Pack into center of apple. Place apple on paper plate and microwave 3 minutes. Apple should be tender. Set apple aside and wait 5 minutes before eating, to let apple finish cooking.

BALONEY-CHEESE MUFFINS
1 English muffin
2 tablespoons mayonnaise
2 slices bologna
Mustard
2 slices American cheese

Yields 2 servings.
Preparation time: 5 minutes.
Cooking time: 1 to 2 minutes.
Oven setting: HIGH (100 percent power).

Split English muffin in half and toast in toaster until crisp. Spread each with half of mayonnaise. Place bologna slice on each muffin, then spread with a little mustard. Top with slice of cheese. Place sandwiches on paper plate and microwave 1 to 2 minutes, or until cheese melts. Cheese will be hot.

HOT DOG FOR ONE
1 hot dog
1 hot dog bun
Mustard or ketchup

Yields 1 serving.
Preparation time: 5 minutes.
Cooking time: 45 seconds to 1 minute and 15 seconds.
Oven setting: HIGH (100 percent power).

Place hot dog in bun. Wrap bun in a paper towel. Microwave 45 seconds to 1 minute and 15 seconds. Top with mustard or ketchup.

CHOCOLATE NOODLE-O'S
1 (6-ounce) package chocolate chips
1 (5-ounce) can crispy chow mein noodles
1 cup round oat cereal

Yields 2 to 3 dozen pieces.
Preparation time: 5 minutes.
Cooking time: 1 to 2 minutes.
Oven setting: HIGH (100 percent power).

Place chocolate chips in large glass mixing bowl. Microwave 1 to 2 minutes, or until chocolate chips melt. Stir with wooden spoon just until smooth. Add noodles and cereal and mix well. Scoop up mixture with tablespoon and drop onto waxed paper. Let stand until firm.

Students think social needs outweigh nutrition requirements

Associated Press

Moderation in all things, including your kid's school lunch.

Yes, be concerned about nutrition, but don't worry too much if he pigs out occasionally.

Obviously, you can exercise greater control over what he eats if he's a brown bagger, but accept that his social needs are going to take him now and then to fast food establishments whose menus include high-fat items like hamburgers and thick milkshakes.

There's no firm agreement among pediatricians and other health care professionals about how much fat is too much, though they do agree that children need fat for growth. About 30 to 40 percent of a child's calories should come from fat, recommends the American Academy of Pediatrics. That's close to the 34-39 percent spread shown in a federal survey of the current diets of American children.

"I think run-of-the-mill parents should be aware that a high-fat diet is not good," advises the academy's nutrition committee chairman, Dr. Laurence Finberg. "You don't need to say it any more stringently than that."

Cholesterol levels in children now average about 160 milligrams per deciliter of blood. Many doctors think a child would benefit from a lower average; the target would be a level of 200 or lower by the time the child reaches adulthood. "We believe that the ideal level of cholesterol in the blood would be between 110 and 140 for children," says Dr. Curtis Ellison, a cardiologist at Boston University Medical School.

"It's normal for kids to go through periods in which they eat the same foods day in and day out," says David Mintz, whose company, Tofutti Brands Inc., makes cholesterol-free foods. "It reflects emerging independent behavior and developing tastebuds."

He suggests offsetting these temporary "food jags" by making sure that a variety of grains, fruits, vegetables, and protein foods — meats, poultry, fish and legumes — are available at home meals. And using the leftovers will enable parents to vary the contents of the lunch bag.

Safety tips offered for teen cooks

NEW YORK (AP) — Teens are spending time in the kitchen.

Seventy-nine percent of the respondents to the Fifth Annual Teen Food and Nutrition survey said they prepare family dinners; 63 percent said they cook for themselves several times a week; 79 percent said they bake at home.

The addition of the microwave oven in the kitchen may be one factor. Eighty-four percent of the students surveyed said their family owns a microwave, and according to Jim Holcomb, a spokesman for Black & Decker kitchen products, "recent surveys have shown that nearly 100 percent of teen-agers in homes that have a microwave use it regularly."

Holcomb provides these safety tips for teens using the microwave:

- Use food containers marked "safe for microwave use." Do not use metal containers.
- Do not heat food in airtight packages such as sealed pouches, closed glass jars or unopened cans.
- Follow package instructions for prepared items like frozen foods.
- Individual foods will heat evenly if placed in the microwave an equal distance apart, preferably in a circular pattern. Never stack items on top of one another.
- Foods enclosed in a shell or skin — such as potatoes — should be pierced with a fork prior to cooking, otherwise they are likely to burst.
- Sandwiches and other foods containing pre-baked bread should be wrapped in a paper towel to prevent drying the bread.
- Use potholders when removing heated food. Dishes can get hot in the microwave.
- Never operate a microwave when it is empty or when the door does not shut completely.

Smart lunchbox lore foils savvy 'commodity' traders

By ALISON ASHTON
Copley News Service

It could be said that great commodities brokers are made in the school lunchroom. That is where kids learn the true value of grain, corn, pork bellies and dairy products.

At lunchtime, savvy tykes quickly learn the trading value of the contents of their lunch boxes.

Pudding cups and nacho cheese tortilla chips command a high price at the lunchtime marketplace. And children have been known to trade a week's worth of fruit roll for a can of Pepsi.

Every mother is well-acquainted with the dilemma of packing a lunch that is the model of nutrition only to have Bobby bring it home uneaten or — possibly worse — to trade it away for a bag of chips.

We start with lunch because that is the trickiest meal for moms to plan. There are ways to pack a lunch that boasts some nutrition and that the kids will eat.

The key, say teachers and veteran lunchroom monitors (who know just how much kids keep and trade), is to involve the kids in lunch preparations.

The idea is that a child is more likely to eat a lunch that she helped shop for and prepare.

Sit down with your child to prepare the shopping list. Discuss interesting ways to work nutritious foods into the lunch box. And be prepared to do some bargaining.

If she won't eat fruit, offer a box of fruit juice for vitamin C (but watch the sugar content), to liven up vegetables, try celery stalks smeared with peanut butter (a favorite standby) or cream cheese mixed with walnuts.

A NOTE OF encouragement: An informal lunch-yard survey revealed that children are not the junk-food fiends mothers always believed. Celery and broccoli topped the list of favorite vegetables. And the kids said they would welcome tuna on whole wheat, more carrots and spaghetti as lunch items.

One common mistake on the part of parents, especially with younger children, is to overwhelm kids with copious amounts of food. Often children open their lunch boxes to a cornucopia of goodies.

For younger kids, pack half a sandwich instead of a whole one and put in a handful of grapes instead of the whole vine. Confer with your child on how much she will eat.

Also, remember that lunchtime is social time for kids, and neat, easy-to-eat foods — chunks of cheese, popcorn and rice cakes — are more likely to be eaten than complicated, messy items.

Here are some tips for what to pack in the lunch box:

Pudding cups are being replaced by yogurt cups. Another favorite is little 5-ounce cups of applesauce. (These cost more than using a thermos, but busy parents welcome the convenience and kids like the novelty.)

Use the thermos to add variety. Fill it with soup, chili, pasta or fruit salad.

Vary the routine. Try peanut butter and banana as an alternative to peanut butter & jelly. Pack homepopped popcorn sprinkled with Parmesan cheese instead of potato chips.

PACK A CONTAINER of yogurt dip for carrot sticks and celery. For tortilla chips, include salsa and bean dip.

Make a kabob of cold, leftover chicken, chunks of cheese and veggies.

Use rice cakes, bagels and pita bread as an alternative to regular sandwich bread.

Don't forget to pack napkins and utensils. Soup without the soup spoon probably won't get eaten.

The lunch box is just as crucial as what goes into it. Always consult your child on which lunch box to buy — lunchroom trends are always changing.

Cartoon and movie characters are always hot, especially with the younger set. This year's favorites will likely include the "Ghostbusters," "Batman" and "Star Trek." Garfield, Roger Rabbit and Mickey Mouse are still high on the list of favorites.

For older kids who have outgrown Mickey, try one of the new high-tech insulated lunch sacks in bright colors. Color coordinating thermoses are also available.

Breakfast and after-school snacks are somewhat easier for moms because they have more control over what the kids eat.

It still takes some coaxing to get a lot of kids to eat breakfast at all. That's too bad, because children who eat breakfast are more alert in the classroom.

As with lunch, the key to getting kids to eat breakfast is to keep it simple. You don't have to prepare a feast of eggs, bacon and toast. A banana and a handful of nuts on the run aren't a bad start to the day.

The main thing is to avoid breakfast foods that are high in sugar but low in nutrition. Flavored oatmeal is a good alternative to sugary cereal. Bagels and rice cakes, which can be topped with just about anything, are good replacements for doughnuts.

After-school snacks are tricky in that kids need something to tide them over until dinner. But moms don't want to spoil dinner with a late-afternoon feast.

A LIGHT SNACK of cheese and tortilla chips, yogurt with nuts mixed in or popcorn should fit the bill.

Even more interesting snacks can be made in the microwave, and older kids can make these without adult supervision. Just leave the ingredients and utensils they'll need on the counter, along with easy-to-follow instructions.

The best goodies are those made at home. Moreover, Susie and Johnny are more likely to eat nutritious meals and snacks if they have a hand in the preparation.

Following are some tasty recipes for breakfast on the run, plus a few healthy lunch-box and after-school treats. Kids older than 10 can fix these items alone. Little ones should be supervised.

Innovative, easy-to-eat treats appeal to school children in the lunchroom.

BANANA CRISP IN A MICROWAVE

2 bananas, ripe
1 tablespoon butter, softened
½ cup granola-type cereal
2 tablespoons honey
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
½ cup favorite yogurt or milk

Peel bananas and place on cutting board. Using utility knife, slice bananas into half-inch pieces. Line slices along bottom of baking pan. Drizzle honey over bananas. Then sprinkle on cinnamon.

Mix together butter and granola, then gently pat mixture over bananas. Place baking dish in microwave and cook for 2 minutes.

Wearing oven mitts, carefully remove baking pan and and place on heatproof surface. Spoon crisp into serving bowls and serve with yogurt or milk.

PEANUT BUTTER QUICKIE

3 tablespoons crunchy peanut butter
2 slices whole-grain bread
Toppings: (optional)
4 strips cooked bacon
6 apple slices
2 tablespoons raisins

Turn on broiler.

Divide peanut butter in half and spread evenly over both slices of bread. Add any or all toppings if you like. Place bread on broiler pan.

Put on oven mitts and carefully place pan into oven. Broil for 2 to 3 minutes. Turn broiler off. With oven mitts on, carefully remove pan and place on heatproof surface.

Slide spatula under bread slices and lift off pan and set on breakfast plate. Let sit for 1 minute.

EGG ON THE RUN

1 English muffin
1 slice American, Muenster or Monterey Jack cheese
1 teaspoon butter or margarine
1 egg

Gently crack egg on side of bowl. Put thumbs in crack and gently pull shell apart, letting inside of egg fall into bowl. Set aside.

Break English muffin in half by pressing thumb into side and pulling apart. Place both halves into toaster and toast them.

When English muffins pop up, let cool for 45 seconds, and then place on plate. Lay cheese on top of one half. Set aside.

Put butter in skillet. Place on stove and turn heat to medium-high. When butter melts, lift skillet up and gently roll from side to side so butter spreads over bottom of pan. Put skillet back down.

Slip egg into skillet and let cook for about 2 to 3 minutes, or until white cooks. Slide spatula under egg and lift it up and flip it over.

Let egg cook for another 1½ minutes. Slide egg out of pan wth spatula and set it on English muffin half with cheese. Place other muffin to cover egg and away you go.

GRANOLA BARS

2 tablespoons butter
¾ cup butter
One-third cup brown sugar
¼ cup flour
1 teaspoon vanilla
5 cups granola

Using paper towels, rub 2 tablespoons butter evenly on bottoms and sides of baking pan; set aside.

Place ¾ cup butter in saucepan and set on stove. Turn heat on medium-high and let butter melt. As soon as it has, turn off heat and pour butter into mixing bowl.

Add sugar, flour and vanilla; mix thoroughly using wooden spoon.

Add granola with wooden spoon until butter/sugar mixture coats granola. Remember to push wooden spoon all the way down to bottom of bowl, then stir. Once you think all butter/sugar mixture is mixed in, check bottom of bowl one more time.

Scrape granola into baking pan. Using back of spoon or your hands, press granola evenly along bottom of pan. Wearing oven mitts, carefully place baking pan on center rack of oven.

Bake granola bars for 15 minutes. Carefully open oven door and see if they are golden brown. If not, close door and let bake for another 5 minutes.

When ready, wearing oven mitts, carefully remove baking pan and set on cooling rack. Let granola cool completely, about 30 minutes, before cutting.

When completely cooled, using utility knife, cut granola bars into 4 even strips lengthwise, and then cut across strips every 3 inches. Slide granola bars out with spatula and put on plate or keep in airtight container.

Note: The longer the granola bars are cooked, the crispier they become; even 5 minutes can make a difference. If your bars are crispier than you like, next time bake them 3 minutes less.

PIZZA POCKETS

¼ cup ricotta cheese
¾ cup grated mozzarella cheese
1 medium tomato
6 slices smoked ham
¼ teaspoon dried oregano
1 pound ready-made pizza dough
⅛ cup flour (for dusting)

Preheat oven to 450 degreees.

Combine ricotta cheese, mozzarella cheese and oregano in mixing bowl and blend with kitchen spoon. Set aside.

Run tomato under cold running water and pat dry with paper towel. Place tomato on cutting board and using utility knife, cut out core. Cut tomato into slices, then chop into small squares. Add tomatoes to ricotta cheese mixture and blend with spoon. Set bowl aside.

Using hands, tear each ham slice into 5 or 6 pieces. Set aside.

Pinch off pieces of pizza dough about the size of a golf ball and place on lightly floured surface. With palm of hand, flatten it slightly. Sprinkle more flour over dough and with rolling pin, roll dough into rounds until it is about ¼-thick. Use ruler to check thickness if you are unsure.

Sprinkle 4 to 5 pieces ham onto top of dough. Spoon about a heaping tablespoon of ricotta filling into center of dough circle. Fold dough over so edges meet. Pinch edges together. Place pizza pocket on baking pan.

Continue making pizza pocket with remaining dough and filling.

Put on oven mitts and place baking sheet in oven and bake 15 to 20 minutes. After baked, put oven mitts back on and carefully remove baking pan and set on heatproof surface. Let pizza pockets cool for 10 minutes, then slide spatula under them and lift off pan.

DEAR ABBY

Anniversary party takes cake

BY ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Abby is off on a two-week vacation, but she left behind some of her favorite letters taken from her best-selling book, "The Best of Dear Abby.")

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I will never again say that a letter in your column is too unbelievable to be real. Listen to this:

My husband and I recently attended the 25th wedding anniversary party of a couple we have known for years. It was a beautiful dinner party at a club for about a hundred guests.

Around midnight, the husband said that he and his wife had an announcement to make. They stood arm in arm, and he said, "We've had 25 years of marriage. Our children are married now, and there is no longer a reason to go on pretending our marriage is a success. It has been a failure for many years, so we've decided that while we are both young enough to enjoy life we're getting divorced. It's nobody's 'fault.' It's mutual and friendly, and we hope you will continue to be our friends."

They kissed each other and danced together as the band played, "Good Night, Sweetheart."

Can anybody top this? — WAS THERE

DEAR WAS: I hope not.

DEAR ABBY: How about a letter from a "winner"? My married lover left his wife for me!

I was told that I wasn't breaking up anything; his marriage was dead long before he even met me. His wife had gotten fat. I was married too, but I assured him that my marriage was also over — my husband had gotten dull and boring.

So I divorced my boring husband and he divorced his chubby wife. Oh, yes, we both had children, but we explained that we were in love and when they were older they would understand.

Our marriage was a dream come true. No more lying and sneaking around. At long last we were legally man and wife for all the world to see.

Our apartment was filled with modern furniture and old-fashioned guilt. And plenty of doubt and mistrust.

Two years later he was meeting someone new. I told him he was a liar and a cheat. He said it took one to know one.

And by the way, he's gotten a little dull and boring, and I've put on a little weight. — A WINNER

DEAR ABBY: I am an Italian man, age 34. I am medium build and am told that I am good-looking. I drive a sightseeing bus by day, so I speak a little English. I am single and would like to correspond with an American woman between the ages of 30 and 60.

She doesn't have to be beautiful, but I want one who has a steady income and owns a late-model American automobile.

If you know of a woman who would like to correspond with me, please ask her to send a picture of the automobile. — VITO IN NAPOLI

DEAR ABBY: I am a girl who just celebrated her 21st birthday. On this occasion my boyfriend took me out to dinner. He doesn't drink much and neither do I, but before dinner we each had three martinis. During dinner (just to celebrate), we split a bottle of champagne. After dinner, we each had four brandies.

Did I do wrong? — BLONDIE

DEAR BLONDIE: Probably.

DEAR ABBY: What's the difference between a wife and a mistress? — BESS

DEAR BESS: Night and day.

DEAR ABBY: I am 11 years old but I know all the facts of life because we live in a dirty neighborhood. My problem is that in my family we get pregnate quick. What I mean is, my sister got pregnate when she was 15 just sitting next to a boy in church. That is what they say anyway. Can this be true? — DONNA LEE

DEAR DONNA LEE: No. Somebody must have moved.

DEAR ABBY: Between you and me, I think the people who write to you are either morons or they're just plain stupid. — HENRY

DEAR HENRY: Which are you?

Everything you'll need to know about planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send your name and address, plus check or money order for $2.89 ($3.39 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Teen diet high in fat, sugar

NEW YORK (AP) — Teens may be aware of the effects of cholesterol on their health, but they haven't made changes in their diets, according to a survey of home economics students.

The Fifth Annual Teen Food and Nutrition survey was conducted by Forecast for the Home Economist magazine in cooperation with Food & Beverage Marketing and Food Processing magazines.

Thirty-six percent of the survey's respondents said they are aware of what serum cholesterol means to their health. Nearly half of those surveyed report that their knowledge of cholesterol influences their food purchases. However, 43 percent said they prefer beef as a source of protein, and another 12 percent said they prefer pork.

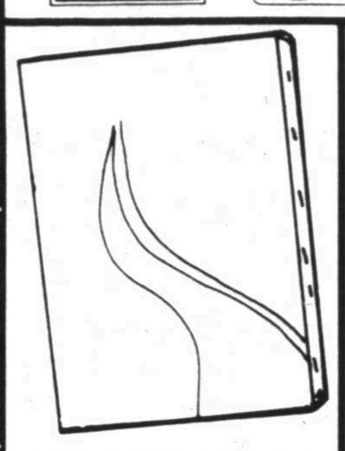

The Fifth Annual Teen Food and Nutrition survey is based on a random sample of students of 200 home economics educators who subscribe to Forecast magazine, which is published by Scholastic Inc.

Sixty-eight percent of those responding to the Teen Food and Nutrition survey said Italian is their favorite ethnic food; 63 percent said they prefer Mexican; 47 percent choose Chinese. Nearly three-fourths reported that potato chips are their favorite snack food; 72 percent prefer ice cream; 68 percent said candy is their favorite snack food.

A recent nationwide survey of 5,000 youngsters in grades 3-12, conducted by Harris-Scholastic Research for the Kellogg Co., showed that kids' favorite restaurant foods are foods that are high in saturated fat and cholesterol: hamburgers, cheeseburgers, pizza, and meats such as roast beef. French fries and Italian food also ranked among the kids' top 10 restaurant choices.

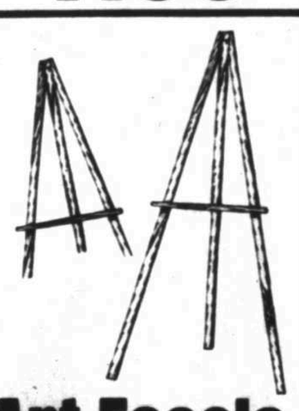

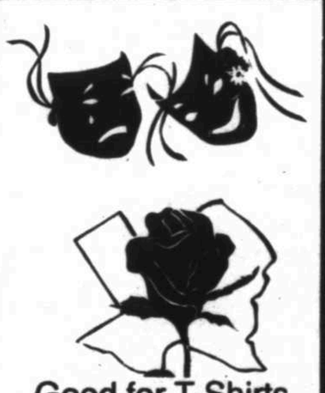

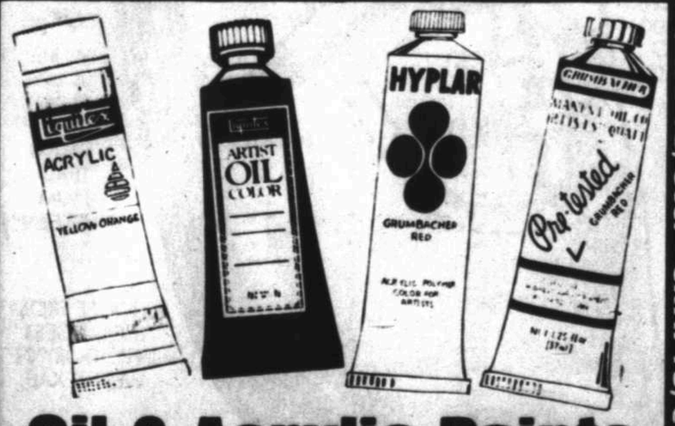

When making these favorites at home, nutritionists suggest substituting ground turkey for hamburger. When making pizza, load up on vegetables. Be generous with the sauce, but go easy on the cheese and pepperoni.

For pasta, consider substituting vegetables for meat. Ladle on more marinara sauce and use less cheese. Instead of French fries, prepare baked or oven-fried potatoes with a very small amount of oil.

U.S. Open darling Chris Evert
...winning on road to retirement

Evert wins before adoring crowd

Shriver uninspired in loss to USSR's Savchenko

NEW YORK (AP) — Chris Evert knows where she is headed. Pam Shriver has no idea where she's going.

Evert, the six-time U.S. Open champion who has announced she is playing a major tournament for the final time, won her first-round match before an adoring crowd that greeted her every move with warm applause and cheers. Shriver, not at all sure what she wants to do with her life, was eliminated.

Evert brought a bouquet of sunshine to a humid, overcast day that ended with heavy rain and a suspension of play. Ivan Lendl was ahead 6-1, 7-6, 2-0 against Diego Perez when the match was halted. French Open champion Michael Chang didn't get a chance to start.

BUT THE fans were there mainly to see Evert win her 98th Open match, a record. They got what they sought as she beat Bettina Fulco of Argentina 6-4, 6-2.

"I'm aware of the people's reaction," she said. "I feel that they're a little more supportive because it is my last U.S. Open.

"I could get real emotional if I let myself. But I can't do it because I don't want to forget why I'm out there — and I'm not out there for them to clap and praise and thank me for all of the years of tennis. I'm out there to win a tennis match.

"I'm trying to not let it filter in and think about it emotionally."

While Evert is fighting the emotions, Shriver is trying to get them flowing again. She was totally uninspired in losing to Larisa Savchenko of the Soviet Union 6-2, 6-3.

"I think in order to beat Savchenko, you have to be really eager and really strong mentally and physically and get out there and want to battle the games out," Shriver said after lasting just 55 minutes against Savchenko. "The emotions of a good effort just didn't get started."

Shriver hasn't gotten started all year, falling from fifth to ninth in the rankings, and is wondering if she can make the commitment necessary to stay near the top.

"I've got to start enjoying myself a little bit, or else in the next six months to a year, I'll seriously start thinking about what else I can do with my time," Shriver said.

BEFORE THE storms hit, suspending seven matches in progress and postponing 14, Martina Navratilova, Jimmy Connors, Stefan Edberg, Andre Agassi, Gabriela Sabatini, Tim Mayotte and Hana Mandlikova advanced.

Today, Lendl was to finish his match, while Evert returned to the court against Elise Burgin. Ironically, Burgin was bumped from the 1988 U.S. Olympic team when Evert decided to play in Seoul.

Also in action today were Navratilova, Steffi Graf, John McEnroe, Mats Wilander and Michael Chang.

Evert admitted she isn't expecting to win her 19th Grand Slam crown.

"The first round, all you want to do is get by it," she said. "I certainly didn't impress myself much.

"I'm not even thinking about winning the tournament. I haven't even played a full year. I'm not really match tough. It would be almost a miracle for me to win this tournament."

The same can be said of Connors, Evert's one-time fiancee who will be 37 on Saturday. The five-time Open winner took a nine-week vacation this summer, gained 16 pounds and decided just 10 days ago to play here.

Connors routed Tom Nijssen of the Netherlands 6-2, 6-1, 6-2 in his 103rd Open match, a record for the U.S. championships. It wasn't much of a test of Connors' capabilities.

"I don't think about things like that," Connors said of his title chances. "I just come out and play the best tennis I can every match. If I continue to win, that's even better."

Connors did have a wish for this, his 20th Open.

"Actually, I was hoping I'd drop low enough to come in here as a dangerous floater, be unseeded and play McEnroe in the first round. Or Lendl or Edberg."

But Connors is seeded 13th, which doesn't seem to bother him a bit.

"I guess my ranking has gone up since I haven't been playing," he joked. "I never cared or worried about it."

Navratilova, who routed Ei Iida of Japan 6-0, 6-2, is worried about Shriver's career. That's why she has switched partners for doubles in the Open — Navratilova and Shriver have 19 Grand Slam doubles titles.

Navratilova is teaming with Mandlikova for the Open. Shriver will play with Mary Joe Fernandez, the 10th seed in singles and also a loser Tuesday.

"I thought Pam needed time to sort her career out," Navratilova said. "She was so scattered. This doesn't mean I won't play with her next year.

"Pam doesn't know if she wants to be a businesswoman, a politician or run for the White House."

Yankees' slide continues, 19-5

AL Roundup

Associated Press

Even in the midst of what could be their worst season in 77 years, the New York Yankees haven't lost the ability to go the Boston Red Sox one better.

While the red-hot Red Sox were scoring nine runs in an inning en route to a doubleheader sweep of the California Angels, the ice-cold Yankees were giving up 10 in one inning in a 19-5 bashing by the Oakland Athletics.

And, in case you hadn't noticed, the American League East, as well as the AL West, is now a three-team race.

"Four games back with 30 to go, that says we're alive," Boston reliever Rob Murphy said after the Red Sox collected 14 hits in the opener and 16 in the 7½-inning, rain-shortened nightcap in pounding the Angels 8-4 and 13-5.

Baltimore leads Toronto by a game and Boston by four in the East while Oakland boosted its lead in the West to three games over California, with Kansas City remaining four back.

Jose Canseco powered Oakland's 18-hit attack with a pair of tape-measure homers. His first, a two-run shot off Chuck Cary, tied the game 3-3 in the third inning — the Yankees actually led 3-0 — and cleared the second fence in front of the visitors' bullpen in left-center field. His second, a three-run blast off Greg Cadaret, capped a club record-tying 10-run fifth inning. This one sailed into Yankee Stadium's Monument Park in left-center, an estimated 442 feet from home plate.

The Yankees have lost 11 of 13 games since Bucky Dent replaced Dallas Green as manager and chants of "George Must Go!" directed against owner George Steinbrenner were loud and clear.

The A's, who are 5-0 in Yankee Stadium this season, would like to stay forever.

"We don't feel sorry for them," Canseco said. "We're in a pennant race."

Dent, who closed his office door and did not discuss the Yankees' latest disaster, got some sympathy from Oakland manager Tony La Russa.

"I remember being on the other side and it's no fun," he said. "It's just about worse than anything. It's just no fun. Especially for that club, because they have some real professionals."

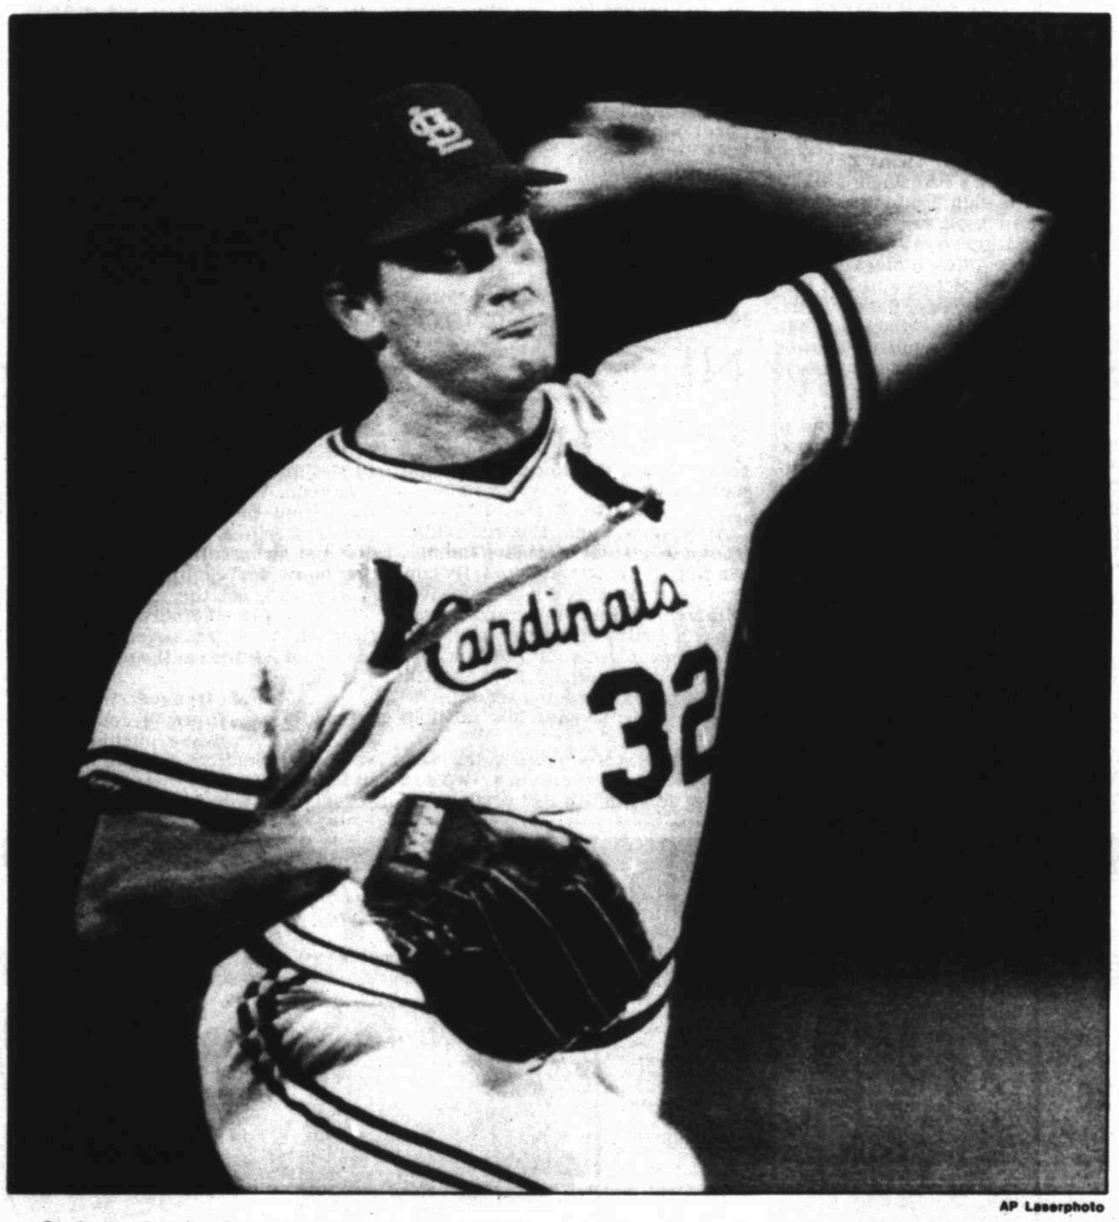

Red Sox 8, Angels 4
Red Sox 13, Angels 5

Wade Boggs had a pair of singles in a nine-run fourth inning as Boston stretched its winning streak to nine games by sweeping California. In the opener, Boston shelled Bert Blyleven, 14-3, for seven runs in three innings and ended his 10-game winning streak.

The Red Sox led 3-2 in the nightcap when they broke it open with nine runs on seven hits, four walks, a hit batsman and a couple of wild pitches. Jody Reed drove in a run with a single, Ellis Burks had a two-run single, Nick Esasky drew a bases-loaded walk, Burks scored on a wild pitch, Danny Heep had a two-run single and Luis Rivera had an RBI single.

California's Tony Armas hit a three-run homer, his 10th of the season and No. 250 of his career.

St. Louis Cardinal pitcher Joe Magrane hurls in the seventh inning Wednesday night in a game against Cincinnati in which he won his 18th victory of the season.

Walls says it's Aikman

DALLAS (AP) — Cornerback Everson Walls, deciding to play soothsayer, predicts that Coach Jimmy Johnson will pick Troy Aikman over Steve Walsh as the Dallas Cowboys' starting quarterback.

"I think it will be Troy, and nothing against Steve," Walls said. "I think he (coach Jimmy Johnson) will pick Troy.

"Johnson has to pick between two different styles. There is a lot of pressure on both of them. I think Steve has played well, but Troy will make fewer mistakes."

Johnson has refused to make a decision on which of his rookies will get the job because "we owe it to the fans who come out to the game to announce it then." Johnson said the lineup that takes the field for Saturday night's exhibition game against the Houston Oilers will get the call for the regular-season opener as well.

ASKED HOW they looked in practice on Tuesday, Johnson grinned and said: "Good — they both looked real good."

Aikman was the NFL's top pick in the regular draft. Walsh was the top pick in the supplemental draft, taken by the Cowboys after Atlanta passed on him.

Walsh talked on Tuesday like he already thinks Aikman will be the pick. "The coaches have made a big emotional commitment to Troy," Walsh said. "He was touted as the next Roger Staubach.

"I think the competition has been as fair as it was capable of being considering that I reported late."

Can Walsh, who played for Johnson at the University of Miami, look into his coach's eyes and tell what he's thinking?

"Oh, he gives you different reads on different days," Walsh said.

Meanwhile, the Cowboys obtained defensive tackle Dean Hamel of the Washington Redskins on Tuesday for an undisclosed draft choice.

Hamel is a fifth-year veteran who played in 60 games for Washington and started in 17 of them. The 28-year-old Hamel, from Tulsa University, has 122 career tackles and eight sacks.

The Cowboys also announced that they have claimed two defensive players on waivers — linebacker Greg Gilbert from the Chicago Bears and defensive tackle John Carter from the New York Giants.

Gilbert, 6-1 and 225, was a fifth-round pick in 1989 out of Alabama. Carter, 6-4 and 260, was a fifth-round pick in 1988 out of Pittsburgh.

The Cowboys also announced that they cut third-round draft pick Rhondy Weston, a defensive end from Florida; and free agents Eric Brown, a defensive back from Savannah State, and Charles Buchanan, a linebacker.

Hayes helps make NL West race interesting

NL Roundup

Associated Press

All by himself, Von Hayes is making the National League West race more interesting. A cool trick, considering he plays in the East.

Hayes hit three home runs and drove in six runs Tuesday night as the Philadelphia Phillies won at San Francisco 6-1. In two days at Candlestick Park, Hayes is 5-for-8 with three homers, two doubles, seven RBIs and six runs scored.

"This really isn't one of my favorite parks," Hayes said, "but when you're hitting good, it can become one of your favorites."

The Giants lost for the fourth time in five games and have dropped nine of 15, including six of the last seven at home. They are still four games ahead of Houston, but San Diego has won six straight and has pulled to within six games of the top.

"I've said this for two months and nobody would listen to me," Giants pitcher Don Robinson said. "I'm really not worried about the Astros. I'm worried about the Padres."

Hayes became the first NL player to hit three home runs in a game this season and the first to do it for Philadelphia since Mike Schmidt on June 14, 1987. The last player to homer three times against San Francisco was Atlanta's Dale Murphy on May 18, 1979.

It has been a long year for Hayes and the Phillies, who are in last place, 20½ games back. Still, some things can be salvaged.

"It's more of a pride thing than being a spoiler," Hayes said. "We've lost some tight games this year. I've been leaving a lot of men on base the past one and a half months."

Hayes hit a solo home run in the first inning, a three-run shot in the fourth and a two-run drive in the ninth. His first career three-homer game gave him 21 home runs this season.

Hayes' first two home runs came against Robinson, 11-9. He connected in the ninth against Craig Lefferts.

"Lefferts was the one I've really had problems with," Hayes said. "I think he's got me out the last 15 times or something. That's when you have to take the approach that if you're feeling good, you're going to get your hits. That homer was as surprising to me as I'm sure it was to him."

Bruce Ruffin, 4-8, ended a five-game losing streak and is 2-6 lifetime against San Francisco. He gave up four hits and left after a leadoff walk in the eighth. Roger McDowell finished with two-hit relief for his 16th save.

"You've got to take the good with the bad, and we're not too good right now," Giants manager Roger Craig said. "We've been struggling lately, but we're fortunate to still be four games up and have the biggest lead of any team in the majors. We're

NFL crackdown warning may have worked

NEW YORK (AP) — The NFL's first-ever suspension of steroid users seems to demonstrate that Commissioner Pete Rozelle's warning last March that the crackdown was coming may have worked.

When the first suspensions were announced Tuesday, just 13 players were caught for using the muscle-building substances. Of those, only Pro Bowl guard Ron Solt of the Eagles was of any prominence.

The number seemed to please even the NFL Players Association, which is challenging the accuracy of the testing procedure and the validity of the suspensions.

"The fact that so few players have been suspended for alleged steroid use indicates that the public perception of the steroid problem in the NFL is greatly exaggerated," said Gene Upshaw, executive director of the union and himself a former All-Pro guard.

Meanwhile, the old drug policy caught two more prominent players — All-Pro cornerback Leroy Irvin of the Los Angeles Rams and tight end Orson Mobley of the Denver Broncos. They were suspended for the final exhibition game and the first three regular-season games after testing positive for the second time for illegal substances.

"It hurts me, it disappoints me, but surprise me? No," Coach Dan Reeves of the Broncos said of Mobley's suspension.

They were the second and third players suspended this season under the policy which set down 24 players in 1988. Tony Burse, a fullback for Seattle, was suspended earlier this summer.

The 13 players from eight teams also include three from the Buffalo Bills — brothers Tom Doctor, a linebacker, and Sean Doctor, a fullback, and linebacker Matt Jaworksi.

Others suspended were defensive back Maurice Douglass of the Chicago Bears, running back Vince Amoia and wide receiver Bobby Riley, both of the New York Jets, tight end Vernon Kirk of the Los Angeles Rams, and running back Keith Henderson and nose tackle Rollin Putzier of the San Francisco 49ers.

The steroid suspension policy was announced last March 21 by Rozelle and a letter detailing the plan was sent 10 days later to all NFL players. Rozelle said he made the announcement so early to allow time for players who might be using steroids to get the substances out of their systems before training camp tests.

In both 1987 and 1988, 6 percent of the players had positive steroid tests at camp, but no suspensions were imposed.

The percentages were much lower this time, and the warnings seem to have worked, even by the testimony of one of those caught, linebacker Mark Mraz of the Los Angeles Raiders.

"He was very disappointed and very emotional," Raiders coach Mike Shanahan said of Mraz. "He said he was aware of the new policy since April 1. He informed me that he had not been on them since then."

Wednesday's Question: Who holds the single-game rushing mark for the University of Houston?

Tuesday's Answer: Jim Wynn smacked three homers in the Astrodome on June 15, 1967. Glenn Davis has also hit three homers in a game for Houston, but he did it on the road.

SWC geared for action

DALLAS (AP) — Neither Rice nor Southern Methodist are picked to do well in the 1989 Southwest Conference football race, but one of them will take an early lead this weekend.

Rice, whose 18-game losing streak is the longest in major college football, is a heavy favorite nonetheless to defeat Southern Methodist, which hasn't played at all the past two seasons because of NCAA sanctions.

Five SWC teams are in action the opening weekend as the league unveils its 75th anniversary season.

The season gets underway first at College Station, where Texas A&M hosts Louisiana State at 5:30 p.m. ESPN will telecast the game nationally.

Two hours later, Coach Forrest Gregg's Mustangs not only resume varsity activity after a two-year absence in the Southwest Conference, they return to their campus stadium, Ownby Stadium, where they haven't played in many years.

Houston, ranked 21st nationally, becomes the first SWC squad to play outside the conference on the road. The Cougars are at Nevada-Las Vegas in a game that kicks off at 9 p.m. CDT.

On Labor Day, the Texas Longhorns wrap up the weekend festivities at Boulder, Colo., against the University of Colorado in a 6:30 p.m. CST ESPN national telecast.

All three of the SWC's new head coaches — Gregg, Rice's Fred Goldsmith and Texas A&M's R.C. Slocum — are in action the first weekend.

Saturday's SMU-Rice contest marks the first time ever that two SWC first-time head coaches have faced one another in their opening games at their respective schools.

Houston, which is ineligible to win the SWC championship because of problems with the NCAA, takes its run-and-shoot offense, one of the nation's most potent offensive attacks, to Nevada after setting SWC records last year for total offense (5,331 yards), passing yards (4,153), touchdown passes (38), average yards passing per game (377.5), passes completed (344), and passes attempted (580).

Next week, five more non-SWC opportunities await area teams. Baylor opens at Oklahoma, TCU starts the campaign at Missouri, Texas A&M travels to Washington, Texas Tech starts at home against Pac-10 contender Arizona, and Rice journeys to Tulane. Arkansas, defending SWC champ and ranked 10th nationally, has the latest beginning among SWC teams with a Sept. 16 lidlifter against Tulsa.

Costs rise for football

LUBBOCK (AP) — When football and big bucks are mentioned at the same time, most people would assume the subject is high player salaries or maybe gambling.

But lots of money is involved in high-school football, too — in the price of equipment. It costs about $300 to $500 to outfit each youngster properly for the rough sport.

"When I first started out, the big expense was game equipment. It cost about $100 to put a guy in game stuff," said John Cardinal, who coached high-school football in the 1950s and now owns a Lubbock sporting-goods business that supplies about 100 schools.

Helmets cost about $25 when Cardinal was a coach.

"It was the lettering and the pants that were very expensive," he said.

Now Cardinal sells helmets for $115. Two companies make football helmets and both have high casualty insurance premiums they pass on through higher helmet prices, Cardinal said.

BUT WITH the increase in prices for helmets and other equipment such as pads, there has been a corresponding increase in the equipment's quality, said Sam Adams, head coach at Dawson High School.

"There's no way to compare the equipment kids are wearing today to what they wore 20 years ago," Adams said. "The most dramatic advances have been in helmets."

Helmets, at $115 to $125 each, are the most expensive piece of high-school football equipment. They are returned to the manufacturer annually for inspection and certification. They usually last a three to five seasons before they are decertified and destroyed.

Other costly elements of the player's wardrobe are shoulder pads, at $75 to $87 a pair; game jerseys, at $20 to $35 each, depending on quality and lettering; pants, at $27 to $35; hip pads and thigh pads, at $10 to $15 a pair; and shoes, which can cost $30 to $50 and up.

Of course, no uniform is complete without a mouthpiece, athletic supporter, belt, ankle tape and socks, and players can spend much more on flak jackets, gloves, knee and ankle braces and neck rolls.

Coaches said shoulder pads, shoes and helmets last three to five years, though quality sets can last up to eight. But even with reconditioned and used equipment, the cost of outfitting a high-school team is steep.

AL

In the opener, Dwight Evans drove in four runs with a homer and a single as Boston handed Blyleven his first loss since May 20. Evans capped a five-run first inning with a three-run homer and had an RBI single in the third. Heep drove in two runs with a double in the first inning and a groundout in the third while Boggs had a single and two doubles.

Indians 3, Orioles 1

Brad Komminsk hit a two-run homer with one out in the bottom of the ninth as Cleveland ended Baltimore's four-game winning streak. Komminsk hit a 2-0 pitch over the center-field fence for his seventh home run as Cleveland snapped a three-game losing streak. The homer was the Indians' ninth hit off rookie Pete Harnisch, who is 0-10 in 11 career starts on the road.

Cleveland starter Tom Candiotti held Baltimore to four hits in seven scoreless innings. Doug Jones got the win in relief despite allowing the tying run in the eighth inning on Cal Ripken's double and Joe Orsulak's single. Brook Jacoby led off the bottom of the ninth with a single.

Blue Jays 3, White Sox 2

Fred McGriff, the AL home run leader, snapped a 2-2 tie with his second of the game and 35th of the season in the seventh inning. McGriff lined reliever Donn Pall's 3-2 offering just over the fence in right with two out. The Blue Jays had tied the game 2-2 on consecutive homers by George Bell and McGriff off Melido Perez in the fifth.

Bell's 15th home run extended his career-high hitting streak to 20 games. That's the second-longest hitting streak in Blue Jays history, one shy of Damaso Garcia's and Lloyd Moseby's 21-game streaks of 1983.

Royals 12, Tigers 8

Kurt Stillwell drove in three runs and he and Jim Eisenreich each had three of Kansas City's 17 hits as the Royals handed Detroit its 10th straight loss. The Tigers are 0-9 on their worst road trip since 1960.

The Royals won for the 12th time in their last 14 starts and remained in third place in the AL West, four games behind first-place Oakland.

Trailing 8-6, the Royals scored three runs off Steve Searcy in the sixth. Stillwell singled home the first run and Mike Macfarlane singled home the tying and lead runs.

Kansas City added three more in the seventh off Paul Gibson on RBI singles by Eisenreich and Danny Tartabull. A third run scored on a throwing error by catcher Mike Heath.

Rangers 4, Twins 2

Geno Petralli's RBI single broke a 2-2 tie in the eighth inning as Texas snapped Minnesota's season-high six-game winning streak. Drew Hall pitched three hitless innings of relief for his first AL victory and Jeff Russell, the Rangers' fifth pitcher, went two innings for his club-record 30th save. Loser Rick Aguilera allowed the four Texas runs and nine hits in 7 2-3 innings.

With the score 2-2 and two out in the eighth and Ruben Sierra on second via a walk and an infield out, Petralli singled to left. Dan Gladden's throw beat Sierra to the plate but Sierra's slide kicked the ball away from catcher Tim Laudner. Petralli wound up at third on the throw home and Jeff Kunkel's pinch single produced the final run.

Mariners 5, Brewers 3

Rookie Erik Hanson, just back from the minors, snapped Seattle's club record-tying 12-game losing streak by blanking Milwaukee until the ninth inning. Hanson allowed four hits, the last one being Robin Yount's 16th homer, a three-run shot with two out in the ninth inning.

Holtz worries as usual

Kickoff Classic

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Overrated, outmanned and, in one case, underfed. That's the way Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz views his defending national champions.

"We're not a Top 20 team right now," he said Tuesday. "We're not as good as you think, but we're probably not as bad as I think."

Holtz is a world-class worrier, but he has legitimate reason for concern as the second-ranked Fighting Irish prepare for their season opener against Virginia in Thursday night's Kickoff Classic.

In the last month, Notre Dame has lost seven players expected to play a significant role on this year's team. One quit, another transferred, two were banished for disciplinary reasons, two couldn't recover from lingering injuries and one was declared academically ineligible.

The most damaging departures were All-American linebacker Michael Stonebreaker and running back Tony Brooks, the team's No. 2 rusher last season. Also gone for the season are defensive tackle George Williams, fullback Braxston Banks, defensive end Arnold Ale, linebacker John Foley and offensive tackle Pete Rausch.

"We've got a completely different team than the one we started spring practice with," Holtz said. "We're awfully thin at a lot of positions and we've got an awful lot of questions marks."

To show just how lean his team is, Holtz cited the case of Eric Jones.

"Our second-string defensive tackle is a true freshman who weighs 216 pounds," he said. "He's going to be a good one — as soon as he finds the cafeteria."

A steady diet of Rice is what Notre Dame's opponents will be fed this season. Versatile quarterback Tony Rice not only threw for 1,176 yards and eight touchdowns last season, but also led the team in rushing with 700 yards.

"We've spent a lot of time working on his best plays," Virginia coach George Welsh said. "But maybe his best plays won't be the same this year."

Unlike Notre Dame, Virginia is not a traditional football power. But Welsh has led the Cavaliers to five winning seasons in the past six years, including a 7-4 mark in 1988.

All but four starters return from that team, which finished with five consecutive victories. The offense will be directed by junior quarterback Shawn Moore, 19th in the nation last year in total offense.

"We think our program has reached the level where we can be competitive with anyone," Welsh said.

"When I first came to Virginia in 1982, it was hard to recruit. Now we have a much more positive image and players want to come here."

Although Virginia and Notre Dame have been playing football for 100 years, this will be the first meeting between the schools.

"Our kids are very excited about playing Notre Dame," Welsh said. "They've worked very hard in practice because they know if they don't play well, they're going to be 0-1."

With so many Notre Dame alumni and fans in the New York area, most of the sellout crowd of 76,891 will be rooting for the Fighting Irish.

"That shouldn't bother us," Welsh said. "We play before that kind of crowd at Clemson and we enjoy it."

Notre Dame is the fourth defending national champion to play in the Kickoff Classic. The others were Penn State in 1983, Miami in 1984 and Brigham Young in 1985. Penn State was crushed by Nebraska 44-6. Miami beat Auburn 20-18 and BYU downed Boston College 28-14.

going to turn this thing around and somebody's going to pay."

Cubs 10, Astros 9

At Wrigley Field, Chicago rallied from a 9-0 deficit after five innings, winning it in the 10th on Dwight Smith's single with the bases loaded.

Rafael Ramirez hit a grand slam, a two-run double and drove in a team-record seven runs for Houston. But the Cubs came back to win their third straight game and send the Astros to their seventh loss in eight tries.

The Cubs scored twice in the sixth and Lloyd McClendon's two-run homer and Smith's RBI single made it 9-5 in the seventh. Chicago tied it in the eighth on three run-scoring singles and a sacrifice fly.

Jerome Walton drew a leadoff walk from Dave Smith, 3-4, in the 10th. A sacrifice, a single by McClendon and an intentional walk loaded the bases for Smith. Paul Assenmacher, 2-3, got the victory.

Mets 2, Dodgers 1

David Cone threw a four-hitter and New York won a pitching duel at Dodger Stadium for the second straight night.

Cone, 12-6, won for the ninth time in 10 decisions. He retired 19 of the last 20 batters.

John Wetteland, 4-6, gave up five hits in seven innings and struck out 10. His wild pitch in the seventh inning allowed Darryl Strawberry to score the tiebreaking run.

On Monday night, Frank Viola pitched a three-hitter and beat Orel Hershiser 1-0 in the first-ever meeting of defending Cy Young winners.

Cardinals 4, Reds 2

In St. Louis, Joe Magrane got his league-leading 18th victory, winning his seventh straight decision as the Cardinals won for the 12th time in 16 games.

Magrane, 18-7, has won 13 of his last 14 starts. He gave up eight hits in his league-leading ninth complete game and is tied Oakland's Dave Stewart for most victories in the majors.

Padres 2, Expos 1

Luis Salazar's infield hit scored Marvell Wynne from third base with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning as San Diego got closer to first place than it has been since June 9. Montreal fell four games behind Chicago in the NL East.

Pirates 5, Braves 4

Andy Van Slyke drove in two runs as Pittsburgh beat visiting Atlanta despite two homers by Oddibe McDowell.

Gibbs thinks Sooners gifted, but depth thin

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — His squad has gone through two weeks of two-a-day practices, and now Oklahoma coach Gary Gibbs says it's time to really see what kind of team the Sooners are.

He's got an idea.

"I think we're a good football team," Gibbs said Tuesday at his first weekly media luncheon of the season. "Obviously we're thin. I don't think you can overlook that, but there's nothing I or anyone else can do about that.

"I think we've got some quality players who will be very, very competitive."

The catch, he said, is that his assessment is based only on what the 15th-ranked Sooners have done in practice. What counts is what happens each Saturday.

"You can be real good Monday through Friday, but it's what you do those three hours on Saturday," said Gibbs, who is preparing for his first game as head coach. "If you don't play well those three hours, then it doesn't make any difference how good you were Monday through Friday.

"I anticipate we'll play well. I know our guys are anxious to play," he said. "But regardless of the talent level or anything else, it's a three-hour final exam on Saturday that determines who wins or who loses."

The Sooners figure to pass the exam this week when they open the season at home against New Mexico State. The Aggies of the Big West Conference were 1-10 last season and have won only four games in the past three years.

Some parts of the test will be of great interest to the Oklahoma coaching staff, particularly how well redshirt-freshman Steve Collins plays at quarterback. Collins was named the starter on Sunday and will become the first freshman in school history to open the season at quarterback.

Collins was impressive enough during the spring to warrant playing with the first-team offense throughout two-a-days this fall. Then he made the most of that chance, holding off Chris Melson and Tink Collins.

"As we progressed through two-a-days, as we had scrimmages, as we put them in different situations — be it play-action passing, be it the option game, be it just basic field leadership qualities — he did not lose any ground," Gibbs said.

"And the others did not overtake him. They all improved, they all progressed, and he also maintained that lead and I think widened the lead in all those areas," he said.

If this was 1987, Collins would be getting ready to run the wishbone. But a new, multiple offense is in place that takes some of the decision-making involved with the wishbone away from the quarterback.

The Sooners plan to remain primarily a running, option team. They simply plan to do it from other formations.

"It's an offense that works toward our strengts and gives us the flexibility we need to be effective," Gibbs said.

One of those strengths should be tailback Mike Gaddis, a sophomore who was voted the Big Eight's newcomer of the year last season.

"I hope we can hang our hat on him," Gibbs said. "The players call him 'Franchise.' That sounds good to me."

There also has been talk about the Sooners passing more often in their new alignment,

'Dudley Dome' sees Texas League finale

EL PASO (AP) — The El Paso Diablos are constantly in a love-hate relationship with their fans, but their former home diamond, Dudley Field, has always been cherished.

The Diablos' 4-1 Texas League baseball victory over the Wichita Wranglers Monday night was the final game in the run-down, 65-year-old field. Plans call for the Diablos, a Class AA farm club of the Milwaukee Brewers, to play in a brand-new, $6 million stadium across town next season.

A crowd of 7,373 fans packed the stadium for Monday night's game.

"This is the way to send the old lady off — in style," Jim Paul, owner of the El Paso Diablos, said following the Diablos' win.

The crowd on hand for the final game at Dudley Field was one of the 15 largest crowds ever to watch a baseball game at the old stadium, Paul said. Despite a disappointing season, the Diablos drew 207,941 fans this season, making it the sixth-largest in the park's history.

The ball park drew the "Dudley Dome" nickname because it frequently would stay dry even when showers fell on the surrounding neighborhood.

To mark the festive occasion, El Paso pitchers Mark Chapman, Mike Mills, John Miglio and Steve Monson joined the Diablo Diamond Girls to dance on top of the El Paso dugout during the fifth inning.

Wichita's Brian Cisarik's grounder to second baseman Sandy Guerrero triggered the final out in the stadium's history. Guerrero flipped the ball to shortstop D.L. Smith for the final out.

Diablos pitcher Tony Ferriera, 2-1, was the winning pitcher. He gave up only three hits, but came out in the ninth inning so that Greg Edge could pitch and thus play every position for the Diablos in the game.

After the final out, fans quietly began filing out the gates for the final time. Some surrounded the dugouts to get autographs.

Edge became sentimental after the game as he stayed behind to sign autographs.

"You really start to get the feeling of the history of this place when people started yelling and clapping in the final innings," Edge said. "All of a sudden, you realize there's not gonna be a Dudley Dome anymore."

Yanks' Thrift resigns

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Yankees, owners of baseball's worst record since the All-Star break, underwent their second major management change in as weeks when Syd Thrift, vice president for baseball operations, resigned.

Thrift, 60, was with the Yankees only five months, coming to the American League team after being bounced by the Pittsburgh Pirates in a front-office power struggle.

Yankees owner George Steinbrenner announced Thrift's resignation on Tuesday.

"He talked to me for a long time earlier today and said that his reasons for leaving the Yankees were personal and as far as I am concerned, they will remain personal," Steinbrenner said.

Steinbrenner reportedly was angered that Thrift did not publicly support his dismissal of Manager Dallas Green and four coaches on Aug. 18. There were reports that the owner voiced his displeasure with Thrift during a recent meeting and rumors circulated around Yankee Stadium that a change would be made.

Cyclist Lemond offered record $1.5 million contract

By SAMUEL ABT
New York Times News Service

PARIS — Five years after he signed a contract that revolutionized the salary scale in professional cycling, Greg LeMond is ready to repeat the feat.

"It's a very good contract," he said with a soft laugh about the reported $1.5 million-a-year offer. "More than I ever expected."

In late 1984, LeMond agreed to a $1 million contract over three years with Vie Claire, a French-based team.

At that time, the biggest stars in the sport were making about $150,000 a year, as was LeMond himself with the Renault team.

Since then some riders, notably Pedro Delgado, Sean Kelly and Steven Roche, have climbed to the $750,000 level.

Now LeMond is trying to choose among three teams, two American and one French, that have reportedly offered the new world champion and Tour de France winner up to $1.5 million each season for a minimum of three years.

The salary would be exclusive of money he would make through endorsements, exhibition races and performance clauses.

Discussing the offers over the weekend, the 28-year-old LeMond seemed torn.

"The money's basically the same," he said, refusing to confirm the widely quoted figure. "So the big thing is picking the best team for me, one that's going to help me do well in the Tour de France."

Riding this season for ADR, a team based in Belgium and co-sponsored by Coors Light for American races, LeMond is believed to have made $500,000 in base salary.

Last year, he was paid $350,000 by PDM, a Dutch team, and could have doubled that through performance clauses. But surgery for tendinitis in his right shin in July ruined his season.

After a contract dispute with PDM, LeMond moved to ADR and Coors in a deal that was completed on New Year's Eve, just hours before he would have been legally obligated to ride another season for PDM.

The Dutch team did not want him back and his market value was low, because he had not won a race since he was wounded by shotgun pellets in a hunting accident in April 1987, almost a year after he became the first American to win the Tour de France.

After he again won the Tour de France this year, nine teams were reported to have begun vying for his services. Of those, he said last weekend, only a few were still being considered.

"To me, my instinct is to go with 7-Eleven," he said then. But he said Coors had also made a very good proposition.

"I prefer being on an American team," he said. "I'm American. I want to be back there racing. If I'm going to be racing in September and October the rest of my career, I want to do it in North America." The European season runs from February to mid-October.

Tuesday, however, L'Equipe, the French sports newspaper, said that LeMond had signed a preliminary agreement with the Z team, which will merge with the Fagor team to meet the salary. Both teams are based in France.

A major consideration, the paper added, was that his new team would ride on the bicycles that LeMond has given his name to and that Bob LeMond, his father and business manager, has been attempting to sell in the United States.

"It's practically done," the newspaper quoted LeMond as having said. That's what LeMond — who has a history of quick shifts during contract negotiations — said last weekend about the American offers, so it is difficult to assess what he really thinks. He was unavailable for comment Tuesday.

While he signed a two-year contract with ADR on Dec. 31, LeMond has made it clear that he has no intention of returning to the Belgian team.

He has charged that it abrogated the contract by continually paying him late and said that his lawyers were confident that he could win any court suit.

Most of the contract offers were made before LeMond won the world championship road race in Chambery, France, on Sunday.

Michigan Wolverines too ugly to rate number one

By JOHN MAHER
Cox News Service

Ugliest helmets in the world.

That's what the Jeff Goldblum character in "The Big Chill" says about Michigan's headgear. That's what I think of when someone mentions Michigan, even as the No. 1 team in the nation.

Sorry, I just can't buy the Associated Press preseason college football poll that has Michigan on the pole position in the race for the national championship.

Yes, the school is on a roll that started with an NCAA basketball championship. And it does seem time for Bo Schembechler to finally have his year.

But when it comes to a national title, I want to pick a team that at least looks fast, just the way the Wolverines don't in their striped helmets. I'll take the Seminoles of Florida State, even if they do have a schedule that is five times as tough as the cakewalks pretenders like Nebraska and Arkansas have.

I'll take FSU ahead of Michigan, even though the Seminoles have to play another quick team, Miami, and the Wolverines don't this year. After all, the Bruins of UCLA should be too fast for Michigan in the second game of the season.

Traditionally, Michigan is the only team that looks slower than Penn State. Like Penn State, the Michigan players love to wear pads. Lots of them. The bigger, the better.

Like the Nittany Lions, the Wolverines wear ugly game pants and black shoes that just make them appear slow. "Clunky," is how Chip Douglas used to describe such a look on "My Three Sons."

Mention the Michigan offense, and the first word that comes to my mind is "plodding." Boring finishes a close second.

Michigan is the 3-yards-and-a-cloud-of-dust school that managed to keep Anthony Carter a secret when he was flanked out there. It's the program that specializes in turning out tailbacks who run 4.6 in the 40-yard dash.

The Wolverines usually spend most of the year pointing for Ohio State, a game in which the winner never scored as many as 25 points in the first 16 years that Schembechler was head coach at Michigan.

Schembechler seems like he's been at Michigan longer than the school has been in the Big Ten. He's overdue to win a national title, and the schedule seems to be in his favor.

The Wolverines could be almost a unanimous No. 1 team after the very first game of the season if they can slide by a Notre Dame team that peaked last year. Everywhere Notre Dame Coach Lou Holtz has been, he's been far better as a quick-fix artist than as a maintainer of programs.

Last year, Holtz won what Schembechler hasn't, a national title. Schembechler, however, has a lot of company in his conference. No Big Ten school has won the mythical title since Schembechler arrived for the 1969 season.

That's not a mere coincidence. High school football in the Midwest peaked years ago. Ohio, which Michigan traditionally recruits the way Oklahoma raids Texas, now can't match booming Florida for talent.

In the past few years, the FSU-Miami game has fielded more talent than any so-called national championship game. Last year the Seminoles played scared and were embarrassed 31-0 in the opener for both teams.

The Seminoles could have come unglued the way Texas did after its shocking loss to Brigham Young. But FSU rebounded and won 11 straight games. No one denies that FSU has a lot of returning talent, it's just a schedule that includes Clemson, Louisiana State, Syracuse and Auburn that scares off voters.

But if Bobby Bowden's team can survive that gauntlet, it will have a far better claim to the title than a team like Nebraska, which faces such perennial pushovers as Northern Illinois, Utah and Oregon State before a Big Eight showdown with Kansas State.

And no matter what, the flashy Seminoles of FSU will always look more like a No. 1 team than Michigan.

Fitts gains WTSU honor

From Staff Reports

Milt Fitts, a coach at Midland Freshman, got an unexpected call this week that puts him in some elite company.

Fitts will be one of 10 athletes to be inducted into the Athletic Hall of Champions at West Texas State University this weekend.

"I'm really looking forward to the ceremony, but to tell you the truth, I didn't even know there was such a thing," said Fitts. "I got a call early this week, asking if I could come."

WTSU inducts 10 athletes each year in the Hall of Champions, but Fitts is the only former basketball player to be honored this year.

Fitts graduated from WTSU in 1960. He was a 6-5 guard and was an All-America selection for the Buffalos his senior season.

Fitts is scheduled to be in Canyon Friday and Saturday for the special induction ceremonies.

Houston denies Parks enrollment

HOUSTON (AP) — Former University of Oklahoma cornerback Jerry Parks, who shot and wounded former teammate Zarak Peters in a dorm incident last January, has been denied admission to the University of Houston, the school confirmed Tuesday.

"I'm very disappointed, I was looking forward to going to school there and maybe later walking on (the football team)," Parks told KRIV-TV.

Parks, who played at Sugar Land Willowridge with Peters, was arrested Jan. 13 in Norman, Okla., and charged with shooting with intent to injure following an argument in the Sooner athletic dorm.

Peters was shot once in the left side of his chest with a .22 caliber pistol and was hospitalized with a bullet lodged in the rib cage.

Parks told KRIV he met with Houston interim president Dr. George Magner and was denied admission.

"I have no problem saying that I met with him but beyond that you'll have to talk to Mr. Parks," Magner said. "Under our rules, we have to protect their privacy."

Parks pleaded no contest to the charge and received a five-year deferred sentence.

He was ordered to submit to two years of supervised probation after spending 82 days in the Cleveland County Jail in Norman.

Trevino commits to 1990 Legends

AUSTIN (AP) — Lee Trevino, who turns 50 late this year, has committed to play in the 1990 Legends of Golf, tournament founder Fred Raphael said Tuesday.

Raphael also said he was pleased with the tournament's new site, the Barton Creek Country Club, where the 1990 tournament will move after 12 years at Austin's Onion Creek Club.

"The Senior PGA Tour has changed rapidly in the last few years, and we must keep up with those changes if we are to remain competitive not only with the Senior Tour but also with the tournaments on the regular Tour," Raphael said.

He noted that the Barton Creek course can be played at distances of 6,500 yards to 6,900 yards, longer than the 6,357-yard Onion Creek layout that has been home to the tournament since its inception in 1978.

"While we owe a great deal to Onion Creek and its members for their many contributions to the Legends tournament and to senior golf in general, moving to the Barton Creek course is in the tournament's best interest for its long-term growth and success," Raphael said.

Dates for the 1990 tournament are April 19-22, with the final two rounds scheduled to be televised by NBC, he said.

For Trevino, 1990 will be his first year on the Senior Tour.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	3 ◇	Pass
3 NT	Pass	5 ◇	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♣

We have often been asked for the one great secret to winning bridge. Are you ready for this? Find yourself a good partner! North had a lot to be thankful for on this hand.

With his collection of losers, North should have realized that, since his hand was likely to produce at least six tricks for partner, nine tricks might prove easier to make than 11. At three no trump, South would have indulged in the pleasant luxury of simply gathering tricks. Five diamonds was another matter.

West led a top club, and declarer could see three possible losers—two spades and a heart. Had South's ten of spades been a low spot card, there would have been only one hope for the contract—to find West with both the king and queen in the suit. Possession of the lowest honor in the suit, however, changed the odds from slight to a sure thing.

Declarer won the first trick with the ace of clubs, cashed the king and ace of trumps and ruffed a club in dummy. After coming to hand with the ace of hearts, another club ruff prepared the ground for an endplay. The king of hearts was cashed and declarer exited with a heart, not caring who won the trick.

Whichever defender gained the lead would have to break the spade suit, since either hearts or clubs would present declarer with the contract via a ruff-sluff. If East won the third heart, his forced return into the spade tenace would limit his side to one spade trick. If West won, declarer would duck the trick to East, who would have to win with an honor and then lead a spade into the tenace. Either way, declarer was able to hold his spade losers to one trick.

Ballerina wins family of fans

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — A Russian prima ballerina went to the dentist for a filling, but came away with a fan.

Yulia Makhalina, a member of the Soviet Union's Kirov Ballet, went to Dr. Stuart Green's office about a week ago to have a chipped tooth fixed.

When she tried to pay her bill, Green balked, saying he was honored to help a rising ballerina with her dental problems. She persisted.

Green said he thought of his 6-year-old daughter, Janae, a ballet student. So he asked for a pair of tickets.

Ms. Makhalina, 21, sent tickets and she and the rest of her troupe welcomed Green and his family backstage Saturday night at the Orange County Performing Arts Center.

Green also took his wife and 9-year-old son to the ballet, but paid for those tickets with his own money. He said he "didn't feel right about asking for four tickets."

LeBlond

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine, (AP) — President Bush's only daughter, Dorothy, has separated from her husband, William LeBlond, sources told The Associated Press.

The White House officially issued no comment on the separation, which was confirmed by sources close to the family. First lady Barbara Bush's press secretary, Anna Perez, said only, "It's her private affair." She said there would be no other comment.

Mrs. LeBlond, 30, has been with her parents during much of the president's vacation that began Aug. 16. She frequently jogs with her father in the morning. She lives in nearby Cape Elizabeth and works for the Maine tourism bureau as coordinator of meetings and conferences. The LeBlonds have two young children, Sam and Ellie.

Humperdinck

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Singer Engelbert Humperdinck will perform a scheduled two-week engagement at the Las Vegas Hilton despite a strike by musicians, a hotel spokesman says.

Humperdinck cited an obligation to his fans and his band as the primary reasons for going ahead with his scheduled appearance, spokesman Bruce Banke said Tuesday.

Humperdinck, who would be the first singer to cross picket lines established by Musicians Local 369 at five major Las Vegas resorts, could not be reached for comment. Banke would not give the name of an agent for the singer.

Musicians also have been on strike at Caesars Palace, Bally's, the Flamingo Hilton and the Tropicana. The dispute centers on the resorts' use of taped music instead of bands and the hotels' plans to drop guaranteed workweeks in favor of paying musicians only for the shows they work.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former first lady Nancy Reagan says fear wasn't keeping her away from a school in a gang-infested neighborhood; she simply was never invited.

Board of Education member Rita Walters had criticized Mrs. Reagan, saying her refusal to appear next month at John Muir Junior High School to present an anti-drug grant was an insult to the community.

But Deputy Police Chief Glenn Levant called a news conference Tuesday to clear up the controversy, saying it turns out to be "much ado about nothing."

"The only thing I can surmise is the school board was not presented all of the facts. There's nothing political about drug abuse," Levant said.

Mrs. Reagan will present a $50,000 Nancy Reagan Foundation grant for school anti-drug programs on Sept. 14 during Drug Abuse Resistance Education Day ceremonies. Part of the money was earmarked for the John Muir school and the school board staff told Walters the former first lady wouldn't go to the Los Angeles neighborhood because of security concerns.

"There simply was no invitation, request or expression of interest conveyed to the foundation or me that I make the presentation at John Muir Junior High School," Mrs. Reagan said.

Blackwell

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Mr. Blackwell, the celebrity fashion critic known for his annual, acerbic worst-dressed list, is glad to see the Beverly Hills Police Department recognized for its nattiness.

The department won a special achievement award in a national best-dressed police contest sponsored by the National Association of Uniform Manufacturers.

"I think it's because in Beverly Hills there is a greater sense of grooming," Blackwell said. "There are never any smudges. They are opulently conspicuous in Beverly Hills.

"Actually, it is almost like a private army in a separate country there in Beverly Hills."

Top honors in cities with fewer than 200 officers went to the Hickory, N.C., Police Department.

Although Beverly Hills officers wear the standard Navy blue uniform, Lt. Robert Curtis said an attention to detail gives them an appearance edge.

• • •

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A group of Nashville studio musicians are disputing a claim by Ringo Starr that he and they were drunk when the former Beatle recorded an album in Memphis two years ago.

Starr has sued to keep the album under wraps, saying he was suffering from alcoholism when it was recorded, and that the recordings are not up to his standards. A Georgia judge has blocked the record's release pending a trial expected in early October.

"He seemed to be real sharp to me," said Bobby Wood, a piano and keyboard player who recorded with Starr in the February and April 1987 sessions. "I noticed that he wasn't on key. But you know, Ringo's never been on key. He's just not that great a singer."

Starr said in his suit against CRS Records of College Park, Ga., and Memphis producer Chips Moman that marijuana was sometimes smoked during the album's recording and he and the other musicians were sometimes intoxicated.

But Wood and drummer Gene Chrisman, whose Memphis Rhythm Section played on the album, said no alcohol or drugs were used during the sessions.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Loretta Lynn has filed an $11.5 million libel lawsuit against the tabloid Globe over its story that the country music queen was hospitalized from a drug overdose that left her "near death."

Lynn filed the lawsuit Tuesday in U.S. District Court.

She charges the Globe's Feb. 28 story was fictitious and caused her "serious mental and emotional injuries, damage to her reputation" and loss of money.

The article, under the headline "Loretta Lynn Near Death After Drug Overdose," described an overdose of Demerol, a powerful prescription painkiller.

Japanese leader heads for U.S.

Offers assurances on trade issues

By STEVEN R. WEISMAN
New York Times News Service

TOKYO — Barely three weeks after taking office, Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu is to leave for the United States this week to offer assurances that Japan's recent political turmoil has not undermined its dependability or willingness to negotiate thorny trade and security disputes.

But Japanese officials also acknowledged Tuesday that Kaifu's other goal in traveling so quickly to the United States was to shore up his political standing at home after a year of scandals, electoral setbacks and rising unpopularity for the governing Liberal Democratic Party.

For many years, it has been almost a ritual for newly installed Japanese prime ministers to pay courtesy calls in Washington soon after taking office.

But for Kaifu, the task is especially urgent because of the atmosphere of weakness and crisis surrounding his government.

"There's a perception in Japan that they need to reassure us that despite all the problems, certain continuities remain," an American diplomat said. "From our perspective, even though the political scene is not stable, we cannot have a hiatus in our relations. We have to move forward."

The Japanese prime minister also plans to visit Mexico and Canada on his 12-day trip, signaling Japan's increasing role in helping to solve the debt problems strangling the economies of several Latin American countries.

Japan has already pledged $2 billion to help restructure Mexico's debt burdens and adjust its economy. Those and other moves are being welcomed by Secretary of State James A. Baker 3rd, but some American analysts say they are nervous that increased Japanese intervention in Latin America may undercut investment and trade by the United States.

As has been the case for years, the biggest problem plaguing the American-Japanese relationship is the persistent trade deficit, which has remained in the range of $50 billion or more despite wrenching steps like the drastic devaluation of the dollar in the last four years.

Japanese officials said Kaifu would not offer new initiatives or concessions on trade matters when he is in Washington, but instead would repeat familiar arguments.

American officials say they are worried that recent electoral trends suggest growing impatience in Japan with making concessions to Washington on trade matters.

AMR said target of takeover

DALLAS (AP) — AMR Corp. stock jumped 12 percent Tuesday as speculation surfaced that the parent of American Airlines had retained two investment firms to help defend against any takeover.

News reports said AMR had retained Salomon Brothers Inc. and Goldman Sachs & Co. to advise the Fort Worth-based company, but AMR remained mum on the speculation.

"We have been directed by senior management not to comment in any way," spokesman Jim Brown said.

AMR common stock rose $10.25 to close at $91.50 per share in composite trading on the New York Stock Exchange. More than 3.86 million shares changed hands, the third most active stock traded on the Big Board Tuesday.

Other transportation stocks also increased in what analysts said was anticipation of continued takeover activity in the industry. The Dow Jones Transportation Average, which includes AMR and six other airlines in its 20 stocks, finished up 13.69 at 1506.58, the fourth consecutive record close.

UAL Corp., object of $275 per share, or $6.19 billion, takeover bid by investor Marvin Davis, closed down $4.25 at $277.25, but other airline companies, including Delta Air Lines Inc., Texas Air Corp. and Southwest Airlines Co. were up on various exchanges.

Transportation stocks have been actively traded in the wake of Davis' bid for UAL, plus the recent buyout of Northwest Airlines parent NWA Inc by Alfred Checchi.

"The latest fad is airline takeovers," said Lee Howard, vice president of Airline Economics Inc., an industry consultant in Washington, D.C.

"They have substantial assets sitting out there which makes them good takeover targets. You're seeing a continuation of what happened to Northwest and United," Howard said.

AMR, estimated by some analysts to be worth $114 per share in a takeover, recently adopted a shareholders rights plan designed to make a buyout more expensive.

$37 million fine fought by Transco

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — Protesting a record $37 million federal fine, the president of a Texas-based energy firm said the construction of a natural gas pipeline across southwest Alabama did not damage any significant archeological sites.

Attorneys for Transcontinental Gas Pipe Line Corp., a division of Transco Energy, filed an appeal with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, which imposed the fine last month.

The commission charged that the pipeline firm violated historic preservation regulations by building the 30-inch diameter line 123.4 miles from Mobile Bay to a mainline near Butler.

Transco began operation of the line April 8, 1988, delivering gas from a Mobil production plant in south Mobile County to Alabama Gas Corp.

In an interview in Mobile on Tuesday, Transco President George Slocum blamed the penalty on disgruntled landowners and a breakdown in communication between the company and the Alabama Historical Commission over procedures.

"Our business reputation is on the line," said Slocum of Houston.

Imposing the $37 million fine July 26, FERC Secretary Louis D. Cashell stated, "Transco's unauthorized construction seriously damaged or destroyed archeological sites located wholly or partly within the right-of-way of the Mobile Bay pipeline or the mainline loop."

Helmsley convicted of tax evasion

NEW YORK (AP) — Hotel queen Leona Helmsley was convicted today of tax evasion for charging personal expenses to her businesses but was acquitted of the most serious charge against her, extortion conspiracy.

She was found guilty of 33 of the 41 counts on which she was tried. The counts on which she was convicted related to evading $1.2 million in taxes from 1983 to 1985.

Mrs. Helmsley showed little emotion while the jury foreman read the verdict, but occasionally shook her head.

Her co-defendants, former aides Frank Turco and Joseph Licari, were convicted of assisting in the tax-evasion scheme. Turco, who had been charged in the extortion conspiracy, was also acquitted on that charge.

All three also were acquitted on mail fraud charges.

Each of the 33 counts Mrs. Helmsley was convicted on carries a maximum prison term of three or five years. She could also face fines as high as $8 million.

Mrs. Helmsley, 69, was depicted at the trial as arrogant, penny-pinching and mean-spirited. Her former housekeeper testified that Mrs. Helmsley once told her, "We don't pay taxes. Only the little people pay taxes."

Her 80-year-old husband, Harry, who heads a multibillion-dollar real estate empire, was charged in the Oil prices flat in quiet trading

From Staff and Wire Reports

Oil futures prices rose 2 cents in morning trading to rest at $18.66 per barrel for contracts on October delivery.

In New York, oil futures prices ended mixed Tuesday in another quiet day of trading.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, the October contract for West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark grade of U.S. crude oil, closed flat at $18.64 per 42-gallon barrel after a gain of 13 cents in Monday's session. Contracts for later delivery closed lower.

Refined products traded on the exchange posted slight gains. The September contract for wholesale unleaded gasoline added 0.96 cent to finish at 54.61 cents a gallon, and home heating oil for September delivery rose 0.45 cent to close at 52.17 cents a gallon.

Other contract months for both products were mostly higher.

Analysts said volume picked up only slightly from Monday's turtle-like pace, with no new developments to move the market.

Monday's activity was the slowest of the year, with only about 21,000 crude oil contracts traded, representing 1,000 barrels per contract. Tuesday's volume rose to about 38,000, said Evan Baron, senior account executive with Elders Futures Inc. Normal trading volume is about 65,000.

Dollar mixed in lackluster trading

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was mixed against major currencies in lackluster European trading this morning.

Gold moved lower.

"It's mostly a technical market right now," said Dieter Manderbach, chief trader at Norddeutsche Landesbank-Girozentrale in Hanover.

In Tokyo, the dollar fell 1.07 yen to close at 143.08 yen. Later in London, the dollar regained some ground to trade at 143.33 yen.

In London, the pound traded at $1.5855, down from $1.5845 late Tuesday.

Gold opened in London at $362.30 a troy ounce, down from $364 last Tuesday. At midmorning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $361.20 an ounce.

In Zurich, gold was quoted at $361.25 an ounce.

Earlier in Hong Kong, gold rose $1.55 an ounce to close at $362.37 an ounce.

Silver bullion prices dropped on the London market where the metal was trading at $5.12 a troy ounce, compared with Tuesday's $5.15.

Stocks drop with program trading

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined broadly Tuesday in a session first lacking in direction but later dominated by program traders.

Airline issues moved up sharply, boosted by continued takeover speculation.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 16.73 to 2,726.63.

Declining issues outnumbered advancing ones by a margin of about 11 to 6 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 640 stocks up, 869 down and 486 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 175.21 million shares, up from 131.18 million in the previous session.

Prices drifted in a narrow range until the early afternoon, when program traders moved into the market and began selling. The Dow Jones industrial average skidded about 38 points before stabilizing late in the session.

The market shrugged off the Commerce Department's report that the gross national product, the broadest measure of the economy's performance, grew by 2.7 percent from April through July, a significant change from the 1.7 percent growth rate originally reported last month. The news eased fears that the economy was slipping into a recession.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Metropolitan Life backs oil merger

DALLAS (NYT) — Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. said in a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission that it supports the Dallas-based Harken Energy Corp.'s proposed merger with Tesoro Petroleum.

Last week, Harken offered to pay Tesoro shareholders $11.75 a share in cash, or about $190 million. The insurance company owns about 25 percent of Tesoro, which is based in San Antonio.

Metropolitan said in the filing that it believed the Harken proposal to be constructive and that it should be considered seriously by Tesoro's board.

A Tesoro spokesman declined to comment on the offer or Metropolitan's filing.

GTE issues 'retroactive refunds'

IRVING, Texas (AP) — GTE Southwest has begun issuing "retroactive refunds" to its customers, but the company said the credits could be placed on hold in the near future, depending on the Third District Court of Appeals.

Refunds will be issued as credits on customers' monthly bills, the company said. The monthly reduction per residential line will be $3.01, and business customers will receive a refund of $7.79 per line.

GTE officials said they began issuing the credits on Tuesday.

A Sept. 7 hearing is scheduled in the appeals court to allow GTE attorneys to seek affirmation of a temporary injunction staying the refunds issued by the Travis County District Court.

Federal regulators propose trading rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal regulators proposed new trading rules plus intensified trading-floor surveillance to combat alleged fraud and other abuses in the nation's futures exchanges.

The Commodity Futures Trading Commission, which oversees the futures industry, voted 5-0 Tuesday to submit the package of rules changes for public comment.

News magazines miss foreign advertising

NEW YORK (AP) — Advertisements from Japanese and West German companies are almost entirely absent from recent issues of Time magazine and U.S. News & World Report, which feature cover stories on the 50th anniversary of the outbreak of World War II.

Japanese and West German corporate advertisers said Tuesday the absence was coincidental. But Time and U.S. News executives said some whom they wouldn't identify, had asked the magazines to switch their ads to other issues.

Canadian group sweetens donut offer

BOSTON (AP) — A Canadian partnership sweetened its offer for Dunkin' Donuts Inc. to $308 million despite the prospect of court litigation over the hostile takeover struggle.

DD Acquisition Corp., a partnership of Kingsbridge Capital Group and Cara Operations Ltd., said Tuesday it had raised its price to $45 a share from $43, regardless of the outcome of a trial scheduled next month in Delaware Chancery Court.

New club aimed at Midland teens

By MELLA McEWEN

Midland teen-agers will soon have a place to congregate that's drug and alcohol-free.

The Zone, located at 3001 Wall in the former Merriman Appliance building, is set to open around Sept. 15, according to Linda Nathern, who is spearheading the project with partner Lynn Manchette.

The club is aimed at junior and senior high school students, and college students who might not like a nightclub atmosphere. Nathern explains that she's always wanted to establish a place where teen-agers could meet and socialize. The fact that her daughter is entering her teens spurred her to establish The Zone.

The building's divided into four areas — a pool room, two video game rooms, and a large dance room with a raised stage where an occasional live band can perform. Painted black and featuring a light show, the dance room will have a live dee-jay. There's also a concession stand where customers can buy soft drinks and snacks. And plans are to add a fitness room in the future, Nathern says.

Hours will be from 7 p.m. to 12:30 a.m. Thursday through Sunday and there will be a $4 charge at the door.

NATURE'S PANTRY has just opened in its new location at 1028-C Andrews Highway, next to Buster Brown Shoes. The store was formerly located in North Park Shopping Center.

Owner Beverly Russell explains that the move was made to a more central location and that the new store will allow her to expand her inventory.

Nature's Pantry carries whole grain organically-grown foods, vitamins, minerals and herbs.

Hours are from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

Also on the move is PETROLEUM INFORMATION, which will be relocating its Geological Information Center to the second floor of the 511 Building, 511 W. Ohio around Sept. 23.

Manager Bert Arguello says the move is to slightly larger quarters totalling 8,000 square feet. He notes that the new location will be better configured to the library. He adds that 11 staff members — sales and library personnel — will make the move.

In addition, Arguello says PI's sales and gathering and releasing employees will be moving from the Baird St. location to the office in ClayDesta Plaza.

BLESS YOUR HEART, formerly known as Lite Bites, will open its third Midland location in The Courtyard at Midland Park October 1 in the former Godfather's Pizza location.

The new location will feature an expanded taco, pasta, soup and salad bar in addition to the traditional menu, General Manager Carol Reyes says. She adds that she is looking for employees for the new location.

In addition, the company is preparing a new concept that will be a subsidiary of "Lite Bites" that Reyes says is more adapted to malls. She explains that the company is working on recipes that can be eaten while walking around. The new location will be in ClayDesta Towers in the near future and will feature a tropical motif. It should be open by the end of the year.

Reyes also reports that Bless Your Heart franchises are opening in College Station October 1, November 1 in Lubbock and in early November in Viro Beach, Fla.

Mike Lewis of Mike Lewis & Associates reports that construction should begin today on the new Senior Citizen's Center in Dellwood Mall, to be located in the former tax office. The facility will have 10,000 square feet.

JAPAN

Japanese officials, for their part, said they hoped Washington would realize that it might not be useful or productive to push Tokyo right now to make such concessions because of Kaifu's political weakness.

Those officials also said they did not want to ask Washington to ease up on such pressures because that would only reinforce the impression of weakness of Kaifu's government.

The officials said the Japanese prime minister hoped to establish a solid working relationship with President Bush so that the two could "pick up a phone and talk" at any moment to defuse disagreements on any number of issues.

Kaifu's trip to the United States also has a clear-public relations component in what officials acknowledge will be an unusual attempt to generate popular understanding at a time of rising American wariness about Japan's expanding economic power.

The prime minister is to leave Wednesday and instead of going directly to Washington is to give a speech in San Francisco on Japanese-American relations. After stopping in Washington, he intends to travel to Massachusetts to meet with American academic specialists on Japan at Harvard and other universities, and then to attend a Boston Red Sox baseball game.

Japanese officials said they hoped Kaifu, a 58-year-old former education minister, would come across as a more vigorous, younger breed of Japanese politician ready to tackle issues directly. He is also traveling with several younger party colleagues to reinforce that impression.

"We expect Mr. Kaifu's personal traits will be well received by our American friends," a Japanese official said, asserting that Kaifu was "young, energetic, accessible and caring."

Kaifu was elected to office after the resignation of Prime Minister Sousuke Uno, who served a little more than two months after the resignation of Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita.

Takeshita stepped down to take responsibility for a major scandal, and Sousuke did so to take responsibility for the July 23 defeat in elections to the upper house of Parliament.

Among the security problems to be discussed in Washington are congressional concerns about Tokyo's paying for the cost of American forces stationed in Japan.

Japanese officials have reacted negatively to the action of the U.S. Senate last month in directing President Bush to negotiate with Japan to persuade Tokyo to meet all the costs of deploying U.S. armed forces in Japan.

Japanese politicians oppose the move, saying it would reduce the presence of American forces to that of mercenaries. The total cost of supporting United States forces in Japan has been estimated at $7.5 billion in the last fiscal year, $2.8 billion of which is paid for by Japan. That amounts to about $44,000 per serviceman, American officials say.

Kaifu is expected to tell members of Congress that Japan is unable at present increase the amount it pays.

Wendy's founder uneasy as pitchman

NEW YORK (AP) — R. David Thomas, the hamburger restaurant chain founder starring in the new Wendy's commercials, has no interest in elbowing Chrysler's Lee Iaccoca aside as one of America's best-known executive pitchmen.

The beefy high-school dropout who amassed a fortune peddling fast food said he'd just as soon retreat to corporate obscurity if Wendy's admakers could devise an alternative campaign that would sell hamburgers.

But for now, Thomas is trying to project grandfatherly sincerity and folksy charm in a series of ads designed to reignite growth at the company he named after one of his daughters 20 years ago this fall.

"If it works, it's fine," Thomas, 57, said as he discussed his new role in an interview. "If it don't work, I'm gone ... I'm history. When I get up in the morning, I'd rather see our stock go up than me on TV."

He owns about 8 percent of Wendy's stock, worth about $40 million at recent market prices.

The ad campaign comes at a potentially pivotal time for Wendy's International Inc., a Dublin, Ohio-based concern that has lost ground by some measures over the past few years among the nation's fast-food chains.

Average sales at Wendy's 3,762 restaurants rose 2.4 percent to $759,000 per store last year, breaking a three-year slide. But sales per store were well below the company's peak of $871,000 in 1984, when Clara Peller's commercial battle cry "Where's the Beef?" helped stir consumer appetites for Wendy's.

In those days, Wendy's ranked third among the fast-food chains behind McDonald's Corp. and Burger King Corp., which continue to claim the top two spots. But Hardee's Food Systems Inc. reported average sales of $920,000 at its 3,200 restaurants in 1988, moving ahead of Wendy's by that measure.

Industry analysts say part of the reason for the decline is that Wendy's advertising message became muddled after 1984.

An ad called "Russian Fashion Show," designed to emphasize the choices Wendy's customers enjoy, generated laughs and awards but sales per store fell in 1985. Campaigns over the next two years using the themes "Choose Fresh. Choose Wendy's" and "This is the Good Stuff" failed to halt the decline.

In 1988, Wendy's and its new ad agency, Backer Spielvogel Bates Inc., scored some points with its funny "Hamburger A-Hamburger B" ads in which a pitchman asked strange people to choose between a fresh hamburger from Wendy's or an obviously inferior product from someone else.

The weirdos always picked Brand X.

But that approach was a reprise of ads another agency had made for Wendy's years earlier. Backer senior copywriter Jim McKennan looked for something new.

Thomas saw a few suggested approaches, didn't like them and decided to urge the admakers himself to stress the basics of what made Wendy's different — fresh meat, choice of toppings and custom preparation. "I didn't think they knew what they was really dealing with," he said.

After hearing Thomas out, McKennan said Backer's creative director, Bob Lenz, suggested that they try to talk Thomas into being in the ads himself.

HELMSLEY

April 1988 indictment but was not tried because the judge found him mentally incompetent.

The verdict came in the fifth day of deliberations in U.S. District Court.

The bulk of the expenses on which the tax charges were based were $3.1 million in renovations and operating costs at the lavish Greenwich, Conn., mansion, Dunnellen Hall, which the Helmsleys purchased for $11 million in June 1983.

Many of the bills were altered to make it appear the work was done at corporate entities. Prosecutors contended that the phony bills resulted in unreported income on the Helmsleys personal tax returns and incorrect business deductions on the corporate returns.

The expenses included more than $1 million for a pool enclosure with a marble dance floor on the roof, jade figures worth $500,000, a $130,000 indoor-outdoor sound system similar to one Mrs. Helmsley had admired in Disney World and thousands of dollars in landscaping work.

The prosecution also alleged that $320,172 in Mrs. Helmsley's personal purchases were charged to the Park Lane Hotel, one of several luxury Helmsley hotels in Manhattan.

These items ranged from tens of thousands of dollars in designer clothing to an $8 purchase of underwear. Another item was a $45,000 silver clock specially designed in the shape of the Helmsley Building, a birthday present to Helmsley from his wife.

During the trial, the hotel's former comptroller quoted Turco as saying the accounting system at the Park Lane was the "Helmsley cheat-the-government system."

The extortion conspiracy charge alleged that three liquor sales representatives were forced to kick back a percentage of their sales to keep accounts at Helmsley hotels.

A former Helmsley executive, Milton Meckler, testified that Turco once held up several envelopes and said, "This is cash. This is what Mrs. Helmsley wants."

The extortion charge also covered three televisions for Dunnellen Hall that were allegedly extorted from the RCA Corp. while it was seeking a lucrative contract with her Cleveland-based Harley Hotel chain.

Meckler testified that Mrs. Helmsley joked with him, "How many more can I get?"

Many of the 44 prosecution witnesses helped paint the harsh personal portrait of Mrs. Helmsley that emerged during the eight-week trial.

They described how she fired employees at the slightest provocation, disputed bills and always sought the lowest price.

Feffer attempted to discredit the witnesses as disgruntled ex-employees who had a vendetta against Mrs. Helmsley, whom he described as tough and abrasive.

Feffer had argued that the Helmsleys did nothing wrong in billing their companies for part of the expenses at Dunnellen Hall because they used the estate for business.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Invest retirement money in IRA for tax purposes

By BILL DOYLE

Doyle

Q. The company for which I work has been sold and is dissolving the employees' retirement plan. As a result, I will receive a lump-sum distribution of $5,000 from the plan. Although that amount is modest, it will be important for my retirement. I am 53 and, barring unforeseen health problems, plan to work until 65 or longer.

I know I can place the retirement plan money in an individual retirement account. However, would it be better to put that money into certificates of deposit, outside of an IRA, even though I would have to pay taxes on that amount?

A. Not unless you need that money immediately. Assuming you are not strapped for cash, you'll do much better putting it in a rollover IRA, for just the reason you cite — taxes.

If you take the $5,000 and put it anyplace other than a rollover IRA, you will be required to add it to your other taxable income and pay whatever tax applies. Depending on your income tax bracket, Uncle Sam would get 15, 28 or 33 percent of the $5,000.

By placing that money in a rollover IRA, you will keep it and the money it earns deferred from tax until you make withdrawals. A lump-sum distribution representing an employer's contributions to any qualified retirement plan can go into a rollover IRA. Why pay tax now, when you can keep that nest egg tax deferred until retirement time?

Just make sure you put that lump-sum distribution into the rollover IRA within 60 days after you receive the check. Miss that deadline and you'll be stuck with taxes on the $5,000.

Q. I and a number of my coworkers, all of whom will receive lump-sum distributions from a dissolved retirement plan, are confused about the differences between IRAs, CDs and money funds. Are there different types of IRAs?

A. Indeed there are. You can open IRAs at banks, savings and loan associations, credit unions, insurance companies, mutual fund organizations and brokerage firms.

At a bank, S&L and CU, you typically put your IRA money into CDs, although you can use other types of deposits. At an insurance company, you usually use annuities. At a mutual fund organization, you can have your IRA in various types of mutual funds, including money market funds. Brokerage firms offer the widest variety, giving you the choice of stocks, bonds, mutual fund shares, CDs, annuities and various other types of investments.

You and your fellow workers should brush up on IRAs. I suggest that each of you obtain literature from a different IRA sponsor, study up and share the information. Don't choose any one IRA before comparing it with others.

Q. Precisely where would you advise people to invest IRA money?

A. There's no precise answer to that query. Everything depends on the overall finances and age of each individual. For young people, my choice would be no-load mutual funds with growth in value as investment aims. For older folks, I'd pick CDs.

Q. My credit union offers regular CDs, but none specifically designated as an "IRA CD." I have inquired as to why the CU does not include IRA CDs as investment opportunities and was told that did not appear feasible.

Can I invest my IRA money in a regular CD and simply designate it as an IRA CD?

A. You can't do that by yourself. You can open an IRA only with an organization that is an IRA sponsor. Most CUs are IRA sponsors. However, if your CD is not, you can't have an IRA there.

Ask at your CU if it is an IRA sponsor. Assuming it is, you can have your IRA there. A CU does not have to name a CD an "IRA CD" in order for you to have it in your IRA. You can put a regular CD in your IRA — if the CU is an IRA sponsor.

Survey says censors gaining ground in school libraries

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — Religious extremists and members of right-wing organizations are gaining in their battle to ban or censor library books and to restrict sex education in schools, an anti-censorship group says in a survey released today.

"Most would-be censors are not content with restricting their own children's freedom to learn by using school policies designed to accommodate parental concerns about curricular material," People for the American Way said in its report.

"Instead, the censors insist on the blanket banning of these materials for both their own and other parents' children."

People for the American Way is an anti-censorship group founded by television producer Norman Lear.

The organization's 7th annual report, "Attacks on the Freedom to Learn," said censorship and other ideological attacks on public education occurred in 42 of the 50 states.

Sex education remains a major target of the far right, which "already scored some damaging victories" during the last school year, the report said.

In South Carolina, for example, the report cited statewide restrictions that forced school textbook publishers to delete information on the use of condoms to prevent the spread of AIDS.

"Across the country, right-wing extremist groups have become increasingly active in state and local battles over sex education," the report said.

"Despite attempts by school boards aimed at building a community consensus on this sensitive issue, these groups continue to demand programs that teach only abstinence and that omit discussion of contraception, abortion, AIDS and homosexuality."

The report said school libraries were the target of significantly more censorship attempts during the 1988-89 school year, with more than half the challenges leveled against materials that aren't required reading but are available in the library.

The main targets of such challenges are literary classics such as John Steinbeck's "Of Mice and Men" and J.D. Salinger's "The Catcher in the Rye," as well as plays by Arthur Miller and Aristophanes, the report said.

Nearly half the challenges to instruction resulted either in removal of the material or in restrictions on its use, such as a requirement of prior parental consent.

The most frequent objections, the report said, were to materials seen as containing "offensive language" and those perceived as touching on "satanism, witchcraft and the occult."

The report found that religious extremists have intensified their campaign to force schools to teach creationism in science classes, sparking controversies in 11 states.

No challenges were reported in Alaska, Delaware, Hawaii, Idaho, Minnesota, New Mexico, North Dakato, Utah or the District of Columbia, the report said.

The West leads in total number of incidents this year, 61, and California accumulated more incidents than any other state with 23.

However, incidents in the Northeast are up significantly at 35 — nearly double the number recorded last year. The Midwest had 31 incidents and the South 45, the report said.

The surface of Neptune's moon Triton is clearly shown in these high-resolution images from Voyager 2, combined to create a map of the body near its terminator (day-to-night) line, released Tuesday at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

Voyager bequeaths legacy of wonders

"Not fare well, But fare forward, voyagers."

— T.S. Eliot

By LEE SIEGEL

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Far in the cold darkness beyond Neptune, a lonely Voyager speeds into the void, dozens of worlds in its wake as it leaves a legacy that may aid the survival of its home planet, a garden island in a sea of space.

What wonders Voyager 2 witnessed as the one-ton spacecraft cruised the solar system, traversing an arc-shaped 4½-billion-mile path in 12 years as it trekked past four planets and at least 56 moons:

In 1979, Jupiter and its moon Io, a hellish satellite of sulfur-spewing volcanoes. Saturn and its graceful rings in 1981. Five years later, Uranus, knocked on its side by some incomprehensible collision. And today, the probe is 5 million miles past deep blue Neptune, with its frozen volcanic moon Triton, once flooded by seas of icy lava.

Such marvels, such sights never before seen by human eyes, were returned to Earth in 81,000 photographs captured by television cameras aboard Voyager 2 and its twin, Voyager 1, which explored Jupiter and Saturn before hurtling toward the stars.

And what, one may ask, did these humble Voyagers, these piles of 1960s electronics, do for their human masters, for the American taxpayers who paid the $865 million to propel them to the outer planets?

"The immediate benefits of Voyager's pictures of Neptune and Triton and their wealth of scientific information is to stimulate our intellects and to nourish our souls," said Bruce Murray, president of The Planetary Society and former director of the National Aeronautics and Space Adminstration's Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

"But surely over the coming generations those arcane facts will become relevant to our destiny on Earth, just as earlier arcane facts from Venus and Mars are now considered vital to our destiny."

Cornell University astronomer Carl Sagan said: "If you want to understand Earth, go look at other worlds."

From Mariner and the space probe Pioneer, scientists studied how Venus' thick clouds trap solar heat, warming the planet to 900 degrees in a runaway "greenhouse effect." It helped alert scientists to how industrial air pollutants threaten to warm Earth, flooding coastal areas and triggering droughts and starvation.

Sherwood Rowland and Mario Molina first warned of depletion of Earth's ozone layer after using chemical formulas devised to help NASA understand Venus' atmosphere, Sagan said.

Sagan and other planetary scientists developed the theory that smoke from nuclear war could plunge Earth into a dark, cold nuclear winter and cause mass starvation of those who survived the exchange of warheads.

At Neptune, Voyager discovered six moons in addition to Nereid and Triton, which were first detected from Earth. It discovered three thin rings of debris and two broad rings orbiting the planet. It found at least six moonlets hidden in one ring.

Voyager 2 keeps looking back at Neptune until Oct. 2. Then, like Voyager 1, it will collect information about particles and magnetic fields in space and search for the edge of the solar system, sending Earth information until about 2020.

Consumers apparently still have confidence in generic drugs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer advocates and physicians say there's no reason to doubt the safety and effectiveness of most generic drugs, and consumers appear to be heeding that advice.

"I don't think there's panic in the streets. I think they're concerned," said Harold Cohen, editor of the trade publication Drug Store News-Inside Pharmacy, referring to drug consumers.

Cohen, who has been visiting pharmacies in St. Louis, Phoenix and Washington D.C. for the past week, said Monday he saw few customers switching from a generic to a brand-name drug.

Disclosures of fraud and corruption in the Food and Drug Administration's generic drug division have tainted the agency's reputation and cast doubts on the industry as well as the safety and efficacy of generic medicines.

But consumer advocates and physicians say the concerns are overblown.

"At the present time, there's no evidence that any generic drugs out there in the pharmacies lack safety or effectiveness," said Dr. Sidney Wolfe, head of the Public Citizen Health Research Group.

Dr. Ray W. Gifford, a trustee of the American Medical Association who is also an internist at the Cleveland Clinic and a clinical pharmacologist, agreed.

"What we've seen in the past few weeks is regrettable, but I don't think it reflects all generics and it really hasn't changed my prescribing habits," he said.

However, Gifford said, most physicians already insist on brand-name drugs for certain hard-to-treat conditions, such as congestive heart failure.

"There doesn't seem to be a surge of phone calls or people bringing back bags of drugs," said James Krahulec, vice president of government affairs for Rite Aid, the nation's largest drugstore chain.

Krahulec said his chain was surveying its nearly 2,300 stores to gauge public reaction to the scandal enveloping the generic drug industry, but "no one has called in with panic information."

The FDA has initiated steps in the past month to pull from the market products manufactured by several generic drug companies.

In the latest move, the agency said Monday it wants to remove Bolar Pharmaceuticals Co. Inc.'s generic version of Dyazide, a popular drug used to treat high blood pressure. The FDA said it found no evidence of fraud.

The Copiague, N.Y.-based Bolar, which says it will appeal within the 30-day limit, said the problem stems from confusion over a clerical error in identification of samples used in safety tests.

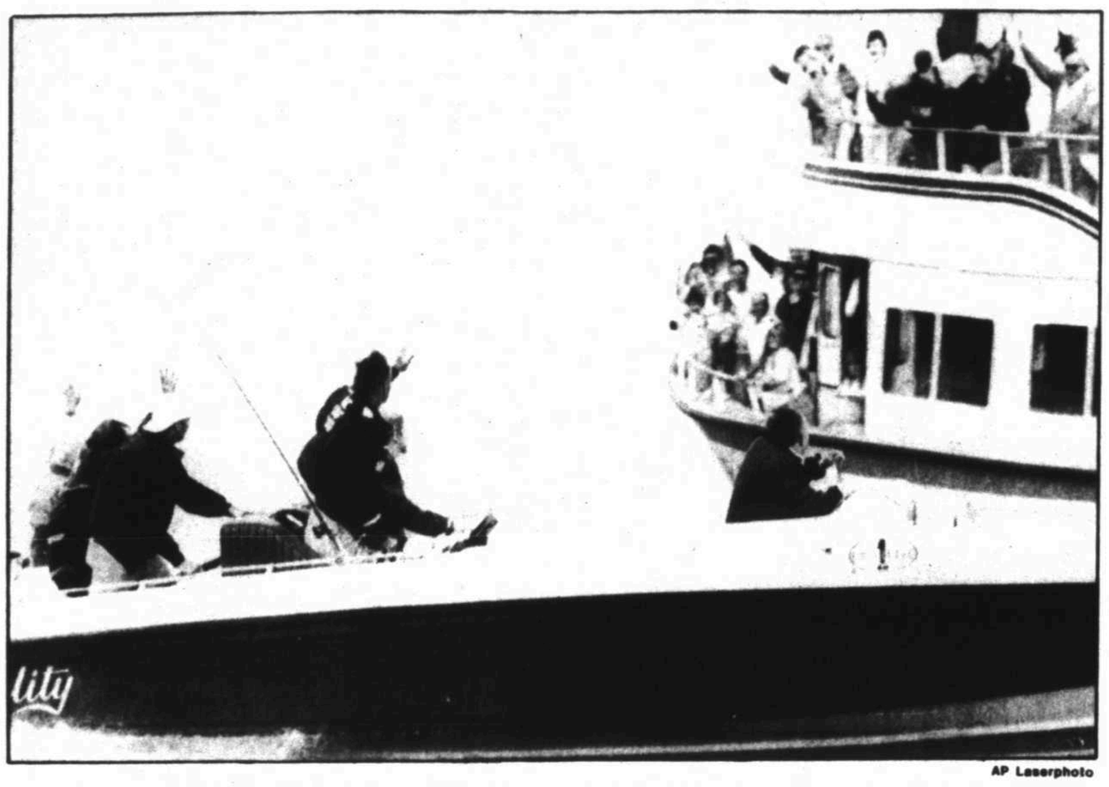

The FDA also has expanded federal inspections of 11 generic drug makers to include the plants of 20 additional generic companies and is reviewing 30 of the most commonly used generic drugs.

The main question raised about the drugs is whether they work as effectively as the brand-name drug — whether they are absorbed into the body at the same rate as the drug they mimic.

Wolfe said potency problems were rarely of any significance. In most cases, he said, doctors prescribe the same dose of medicine for a 125-pound adult as for a 250-pound adult.

"For most drugs, there is a wide range over which the drug will be effective and safe," he said. "This cuts through a lot of the extent to which people are overreacting to the problems that have been brought to light."

Generic drugs are copies of brand-name medicines and are usually much less expensive. A third of all prescriptions written in the United States are filled with generic drugs, according to the Generic Pharmaceutical Industry Association.

Visitors to Kennebunkport, Maine, aboard a sight-seeing boat get a bird's eye view of President Bush Tuesday afternoon as he pilots his boat near his home on Walker's Point.

After 14 days, Bush still fishless

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine (AP) — The vacation was 14 days old and the standings were: Fish-14, President Bush-0. The presidential patience appeared to be wearing thin.

Sure he was worried about the drug lords in Colombia and the civil war in Lebanon. But the other thing bugging Bush as he relaxed on the coast of Maine was why the heck couldn't he catch a fish.

Despite daily excursions in his speedboat Fidelity — sometimes twice daily — to ply the ocean off his seaside home, the president failed to reel one in.

He tried all kinds of lures and a variety of fishing partners — from grandchildren to visiting dignitaries — but still came up with an empty line.

He canceled an afternoon of golf Sunday in favor of a fishing jaunt, and on Monday morning decided to forgo his 6:30 a.m. jog to try again.

On the advice of longtime fishing buddy Bob Boilard the president even ordered the Secret Service to keep extraneous boats, including the small flotilla of press chase boats, 500 feet away on the theory that the vessels might be scaring off the fish.

Still no luck.

Bush tried not to show dismay, and Barbara Bush claimed the president wasn't bothered a bit. But there were signs it was getting to be something of a sore subject.

"The fishing's been lousy," he confided to reporters at the end of the first fishless week. "I fish every single day and haven't got one."

Eventually there were inklings of a Hemingwayesque obsession, as he talked of having a "rendezvous with bluefish." He laid down a decree: "I guarantee there will be fish caught."

When he learned that an 18-pounder was caught off one of the TV crew boats tailing Fidelity, he could barely contain his envy.

"Eighteen pound bluefish?" he repeated several times. "Out there with us? There's no justice here."

Meanwhile, word was spreading fast about the fishless vacation.

The Portland Press Herald came out with a front page graphic called Fish Watch, featuring a picture of a circled fish with a line drawn across it and the statistics on how many days Bush has fished without a catch.

When Bush piloted his boat into town one day, a local fisherman gave him a large fish, and Bush grudgingly agreed with the press corps that this seemed the only way he could hook one.

Evangelist Billy Graham, Bush's weekend house guest, told a local church congregation the president took him along on a fishing trip as a Jonah, a reference to the biblical figure who was swallowed by a whale.

The president laughed and nodded when a reporter asked if he would have Graham bless his fishing rods.

Bush has previously espoused a philosophical viewpoint on fish-free vacations, saying the fun was more in the fishing than the catching.

Federal agencies say power plant polluting sky over Grand Canyon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two federal agencies contend that a large Arizona power plant, partly owned by another government agency, is polluting the skies over the Grand Canyon.

But the operator of the plant, one of the nation's largest coal-burning electric facilities, criticizes the National Park Service study.

"We designed and built the Navajo Generating Station to meet all air-quality standards," said A.J. "Jack" Pfister, general manager of the Salt River Project, which operates the plant near Page, Ariz.

"The plant was located to assure that emissions would blow away from the Grand Canyon," he said Tuesday.

The controversy pits the Environmental Protection Agency and the Park Service against the federal Bureau of Reclamation, which owns 24.3 percent of the plant and would be responsible for much of the cost of expensive pollution controls.

Costs estimates to control the pollution range from $300 million to $1 billion.

The government has tried for years to determine to what extent the plant, 80 miles from the center of the Grand Canyon, is responsible for the layers of haze and pollution that cloud the skies during certain times of the year.

The Park Service defends its $2 million study tracking the plant's pollution and favors strong curbs. But the Bureau of Reclamation sides with plant operators who argue the plant shouldn't be singled out for expensive pollution controls.

Both agencies are part of the Interior Department.

Interior Secretary Manual Lujan said Tuesday he wasn't prepared to accept the Park Service conclusions, suggesting the National Academy of Sciences conduct a review. That suggestion was widely seen as giving the Bureau of Reclamation the upper hand.

The EPA said Tuesday that pollution from the 2,250-megawatt plant "is a significant contributor to visibility impairment" at the canyon.

The EPA relied heavily on last year's six-week Park Service study, in which plant pollutants were traced using a specially colored chemical.

The Park Service said that during the study, an average 40 percent of the pollution could be traced to the plant, and that the figure reached 70 percent on some days.

"We have substantial evidence that the Navajo Generating Station is a significant contributor to the visibility problem," said F. Henry Habicht, EPA deputy administrator. "Action must be taken now to protect the Grand Canyon."

The EPA said it would determine by February how sharp a reduction in sulfur dioxide emissions will be required. Curbs could force the plant to install expensive "scrubbers" or other technology.

Ileana Ros-Lehtinen, right, and her husband U.S. Attorney Dexter Lehtinen give thumbs up to the crowd during a speech at her campaign headquarters Tuesday evening.

Cuban-American woman wins Pepper's congressional seat

MIAMI (AP) — A strong Hispanic turnout helped make Republican Ileana Ros-Lehtinen the first Cuban-American elected to Congress, ending an ethnically divisive campaign for the seat held by Democrat Claude Pepper for 27 years.

"Now it's time to forget our differences and focus on unity ... we are all Americans," Ms. Ros-Lehtinen said after defeating Democrat Gerald Richman in Tuesday's special election.

During the monthlong campaign, Ms. Ros-Lehtinen refused to debate Richman following claims that his "American seat" theme stirred prejudices against Hispanics.

Richman had said his remark "This is an American seat" was an appeal to voters to decide on qualifications, not birthplace. He also said it was a response to GOP National Chairman Lee Atwater's statement that the party wanted to elect a Cuban-American.

"It was a rough campaign. Wounds from it need to heal," said Rep. Guy Vander Jagt, R-Mich., chairman of the National Republican Congressional Committee.

Ms. Ros-Lehtinen, 37, a state senator since 1982 and wife of U.S. Attorney Dexter Lehtinen, called on Richman and his supporters to meet to discuss the drug and crime problems facing Miami.

"We do not have the luxury to waste time on divisive politics," she told more than 1,500 cheering supporters, most from Miami's conservative Cuban community. "We must focus on what we have in common and not ponder on the negative."

Pepper, the liberal advocate for the elderly and the only person to hold the seat, died May 30 at age 88.

Ms. Ros-Lehtinen's campaign included appearances by President Bush and Vice President Dan Quayle. Her campaign chairman was the president's son, Jeb.

Atwater called the victory a GOP milestone in the South.

"That seat has been a Democratic seat since it was created," he said from Washington. "For us to win it is a major victory."

With all 159 precincts reporting, Ms. Ros-Lehtinen had 49,638 votes, or 53 percent, to Richman's 43,759 votes, or 47 percent. Turnout was 50.6 percent, unusually high for a special election.

The district covers black neighborhoods such as Liberty City, most of Miami, Miami Beach and Miami Springs and sections of blue-collar Hispanic Hialeah and upscale Coral Gables and Key Biscayne.

According to unofficial returns, predominantly Latin precincts had turnouts of more than 60 percent and gave Ms. Ros-Lehtinen 80 to 90 percent.

Richman, a 48-year-old attorney and political novice, conceded that a surprisingly strong Hispanic turnout tipped the election.

"They voted overwhelmingly," said Richman, who counted on heavy backing from black and fellow Jewish voters and the 30,000-plus edge in registered Democrats. "We've got to get everyone in this community to get out and exercise their right to vote. If that had happened, we would have won tonight."

Some of the Cuban exiles at Ms. Ros-Lehtinen's victory gathering said that although her election is symbolic of their assimilation into the United States, they still feel excluded from mainstream America.

"We have brought Ileana to office on our own with no support from others," said Richardo Samiter Sr., 55. "We have been trying to cross the bridge that separates us, but we are treated like second-class citizens. These things we do not forget quickly."

"This is a very important step for Cubans. One of us is in Washington now," said Mario Esteves, 49. "She is our blood. She knows our mind. She knows our feelings."

Ms. Ros-Lehtinen faces re-election in 14 months, when Pepper's term would have expired.

Women sentenced to life for letting child be raped

DETROIT (AP) — A judge rejected a crack user's plea for leniency and sentenced her to life imprisonment for letting a man rape her 13-year-old daughter to pay drug debts.

Judge James J. Rashid said Tuesday that Susan Barbier "sunk to an intolerable level of humanity," and showed no potential for rehabilitation.

Barbier, 29, who could be paroled in 10 years, was convicted of first-degree criminal sexual conduct for giving her daughter to a man who raped her twice.

Anthony Sawyer, 28, was convicted on the charge and was sentenced by another judge Thursday 40 to 60 years in prison.

Barbier maintained her innocence.

In a letter to Rashid dated Aug. 18, she said: "I feel I have been punished enough. ... The last two years of my life has been nothing but tragedy."

Rashid said he imposed more than the 10 to 25 years called for in sentencing guidelines because they "don't accurately reflect the nature of this crime."

California panel OKs gun bill

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (NYT) — Bills that would require a 15-day wait for all firearms transactions and a safety course for would-be pistol owners were approved by a key state Senate committee over the stubborn opposition of the National Rifle Association.

If signed into law, the bills issued by the Judiciary Committee may have far greater impact on California gun owners than the ban on semiautomatic assault rifles, shotguns and pistols enacted in May.

Tuesday's votes once again demonstated the weakened state of the NRA, once considered the most-effective single issue lobbying organization in the Capitol.

When deranged killer Patrick Purdy shot up a Stockton, Calif., schoolyard in January with an AK-47, the NRA and a few gun groups found themselves deserted by many of their traditional friends in the Legislature who were responding to sudden public demands for gun controls.

On a 7-to-4 vote, the committee approved a bill that would subject firearms purchasers to a 15-day wait while the state conducted a background check to determine if they could legally own a weapon. The measure will next be heard in the Appropriations Committee.

Voters approve riverboat gambling

DAVENPORT, Iowa (AP) — Voters in four eastern Iowa counties approved riverboat gambling that would allow floating casinos to dock in their areas.

In Scott County, the largest of the four counties voting on the riverboat gambling initiative, the measure was approved by 23,999 votes, or nearly 60 percent, to 16,102, or 40 percent.

"A victory means this community has basically said 'come on in,' " said Mary Ellen Chamberlain, coordinator of Citizens for Riverboat Gambling in Scott County.

Women dies after 911 operator tells her to call back

Hearst News Service

LOS ANGELES — When a frantic Maria Delia Navarro called the 911 telephone emergency number Sunday night to report that her estranged husband was on his way over to shoot her, the operator told her to call back when he showed up.

Half an hour later, Maria Navarro lay bleeding to death in a white party dress with black lace trim. Three aunts, guests at her 27th birthday party, also lay dead.

Witnesses said the estranged husband yelled "I told you!" as he shot Maria at point-blank range.

Raymundo Navarro Jr., 26, was arrested in connection with the shootings, which occurred after he burst angrily into the East Los Angeles birthday party for Maria, sending guests diving for cover.

Forewarned by a phone call from her angry estranged husband, Maria Navarro had desperately tried to get help before he arrived. According to the L.A. County Sheriff's Department, the 911 operator who took Maria's anxious call at 10:35 p.m. Sunday told her:

"The only thing to do is just call us if he comes over there. ... I mean, what can we do? We can't have a unit sit there and wait and see if he comes over."

"Oh my God," Maria responded.

A sheriff's SWAT team arrested Raymundo Navarro at 4 a.m. outside his parents' apartment, about two miles from the murder scene.

A spokesman for the Sheriff's department, Deputy Detta Roberts, said on Tuesday that the 911 operator, who authorities refuse to identify, did not do anything wrong.

"With what information she (the operator) was able to gather that night, she felt that there was not an emergency need," Roberts said. "She handled the call properly according to our policies and procedures."

Roberts added that the 911 operator is still working and that the sheriff's department intends to review its procedures for handling 911 calls.

An ex-Marine who had been ordered by a court to stay away from his wife, Navarro was being held without bail yesterday on suspicion of murder.

In addition to Maria, the dead were identified as Leticia M. Dipp, 46; Maria Garcia, 72, and Francisca Arizpe, 62. All lived in East Los Angeles except Garcia, who was visiting from Mexicali.

Two other partygoers were wounded. Berta Galvan, another aunt of Maria's, was listed in extremely critical condition yesterday at County-USC Medical Center with a bullet wound to the head.

Richard Covarrubias was listed in serious condition with a bullet wound to the abdomen. He is a maintenance worker at the Plaza del Sol shopping center, where Maria Navarro, Dipp and Galvan also worked.

Monday morning, blood still streaked the cement patio outside the one-bedroom converted garage that Maria shared with the couple's three children and a dog named Chiquita.

BUICK LESABRE. THE MOST TROUBLE FREE CAR BUILT IN AMERICA.

Until now, this kind of quality was known to only an elite group, Le Sabre owners.

Great selections of New fully loaded LeSabres in stock now!

Prices starting at $15,295
(List $18,341, Stock#9228)

The latest J.D. Power and Associates Initial Quality Survey* states something Buick LeSabre owners can be proud to know and something all new-car buyers should know. The fact that Buick LeSabre is the most trouble free full-size car sold in America. Import or domestic.

The Initial Quality Survey, which measures things gone wrong with new vehicles during the first 90 days of ownership, marks an improvement in Buick quality for the third year in a row. And today, the Buick nameplate ranks as the most trouble free American brand. Higher than Lincoln. Higher than other prestige cars costing thousands more.

To our way of thinking, it all means that if you're looking for quality, you should just look down the Great American Road for the Buick tri-shield. The new symbol for quality. The sign of your Buick dealer.

*J.D. Power & Associates 1989 Initial Quality Survey covering November and December 1988. Based upon owner-related problems during the first 90 days of ownership.
