House fire

Midland firefighters, left, enter the Paul Crist residence at 1200 N. Terrell St. after a fire broke out Friday destroying the bedroom. The source of the blaze was believed to be a cigarette, according to reports. There were no injuries, and the investigation continues.

Syrian officials: Hostages to go to Damascus

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Most of the 39 American hostages held in Beirut dined at a luxury hotel early Saturday and left carrying red roses from their captors. Syrian officials told reporters the hostages would be taken to Damascus.

In Washington, senior administration officials said they believed the hostages would be released hours after being sent to Syria.

"The end is coming," said hostage Thomas W. Murry, of Newbury Park, Calif. "I hope it's coming, but I don't want to get my hopes high again." he shouted at reporters from the back seat of a car outside the Summerland Hotel on west Beirut's seafont in the early hours of the morning.

"All we've been told is we're going to Damascus — we're getting out," another hostage, who could not immediately be identified, said as they were leaving.

However, a bearded Amal militiaman at the restaurant who said he was a "tourist guide" told reporters the hostages "are going to sleep in Lebanon."

Dozens of heavily armed gunmen stood by as the hostages were taken away in several cars and a white mini-bus.

"I think it's over. We are going now," George Lazansky 53, of Algonquin, Ill., said as the vehicles drove off. "I don't know where."

Like the other hostages, Lazansky was clutching red roses given him by his Amal Shiite Moslem captors.

Reagan administration officials in Washington said they had been notified late Friday of the imminent release of the hostages, but did not make an announcement because "we just want the damn thing to happen. We don't want to screw up."

"We are presuming that all 39 are coming out," said an official who spoke on condition he not be identified. A second official said the hostages would stay in Damascus only for a few hours after their arrival by car from Lebanon, and then sent home.

The New York Times said Friday that the Americans would be released to the United States through a third party, who it did not identify.

Also, the officials would not say what the Shiites might get in return. "There's no deal struck," one official said.

Meanwhile, CBS said Reagan and Syrian President Hafez al-Assad had exchanged messages about the crisis earlier Friday.

ABC News reported that at the dinner, the hostages were presented with a big cake that said, "Have a good trip home."

Shiite militiamen on Friday still were holding 36 passengers and three crew of the TWA jetliner was seized June 14 en route from Athens to Rome. The hijackers earlier killed U.S. Navy Petty Officer Robert Dean Stethem and freed more than 100 other people aboard.

The Amal militiaman in charge of the hostages at the dinner said 32 of the passengers were at the dinner. The militiaman, who refused use of his name, did not say where the four other passengers were. The crewmen were presumed still aboard the Boeing 727 where they have been kept throughout the ordeal. The passengers earlier were dispersed to militia strongholds around Beirut.

The dinner was organized after a Lebanese government official said that Syria, supporter of most Rival Christian and Moslem factions in Lebanon, agreed in principle to take the hostages.

Sources involved in the complex, multinational discussions said they expected the hostages to arrive in Damascus sometime Saturday afternoon local time.

In Damascus, officials at the government information office also told reporters the hostages would arrive in Syria sometime this afternoon. The officials also demanded anonymity. Syria is six hours ahead of Eastern Daylight Time.

On Friday, Government sources said a U.N. envoy was negotiating a plan under which the 39 American hijack hostages would be moved to Syria and held there until Israel frees the 735 Lebanese prisoners.

Nabih Berri, the Shiite Moslem Amal militia leader who has taken responsibility for the hostages, produced three of them for reporters. Allyn Conwell of Houston, said he believed Israel should release the prisoners "because there's got to be one hell of a strong cry from the American people for justice."

Conwell said later he was upset to learn that the United States is now demanding the immediate, unconditional release of seven Americans kidnapped earlier in Lebanon as well as freedom for the airline hostages.

"That distresses me," Conwell said in a taped CBS News interview. "Because they are certainly requesting an entity — the Amal movement — to make concessions that they have absolutely either no control over or would appear to not even have adequate channels of communication to that other group."

Reagan links fate of all hostages

CHICAGO HEIGHTS, Ill. (AP) — President Reagan on Friday linked the fate of the 39 U.S. hostages from the hijacked TWA jetliner with seven Americans kidnapped earlier in Lebanon, saying there was nothing wrong with trying to win the freedom of anyone "kidnapped by thugs and murderers and barbarians."

While refusing to say there has been progress toward winning the Americans' release, Reagan crossed his fingers and, with a smile on his face, said, "You know me, I'm superstitious. I never talk about a no-hitter if you're pitching one."

Reagan made his remarks hours before government sources in Lebanon and Syria reported that a United Nations envoy was negotiating a plan under which the 39 American hijack hostages are to be moved to Syria.

In Damascus, the Syrian capital, government spokesmen told reporters the TWA hostages would arrive there sometime this afternoon. Syria is six hours ahead of Eastern Daylight Time.

Answering reporters' questions during a luncheon with community leaders during a visit to this Chicago suburb, the president used strong language when he was asked if it was a mistake, as one of the TWA hostages suggested, to insist upon the simultaneous release of all 46 Americans held captive in Lebanon — the 39 TWA hostages, taken June

President Ronald Reagan

14, and seven people kidnapped earlier, one as long ago as March 1984.

"I don't think anything that attempts to get people back who have been kidnapped by thugs and murderers and barbarians is wrong to do," said Reagan.

"We are going to do everything we can to get all Americans back that are held in that way."

In a taped telephone interview with CBS, hostage Allyn Conwell said earlier Friday that he was distressed by the Reagan administration's demand for the release of all 46 Americans. He said the Amal militia holding the TWA hostages were not the same Lebanese as those holding the seven, elsewhere in Beirut.

"That distresses me," he said of the linkage, "because they are certainly requesting an entity — the Amal movement — to make concessions that they have absolutely either no control over or would appear to not even have adequate channels of communications to that other group," Conwell said. He said he was "very well convinced" that the Amal militias had nothing to do with the kidnappings.

In Lebanon, an authoritative government source told The Associated Press that Syria had agreed in principle to take the 39 American hostages, and that they could leave 48 hours after an agreement is reached on freeing 735 Lebanese held in Israel.

The Lebanese source did not mention whether an agreement to transfer the hostages to Syria would apply to the seven other Americans kidnapped in Lebanon in the past 15 months. The U.S. government has demanded that they be freed as part of any arrangements.

Reagan, asked if he refused to make a deal, said, "No. We won't," insisting there should be no connection between the release of the captive Americans and the freeing of the Lebanese held by Israel.

He said the linkage "is something that never should have happened." Amal militia leaders and hijackers holding the airline hostages have demanded the release of the Lebanese as the price for freeing the Americans.

Reagan flew to this ethnic, industrial community south of Chicago to address several thousand people outside Bloom Township High School on his plan for overhauling the tax system.

To cheers from the crowd, Reagan said terrorism "must be overcome. We cannot accept these repeated and vicious attacks against our nation and its citizens."

"Terrorists and those who support them must and will be held to account," he vowed.

The president also met privately at the high school for 33 minutes with families of nine of the hostages from Illinois and — for the first time — with relatives of one of seven Americans kidnapped in the Lebanese capital, the Rev. Lawrence Jenco, a Roman Catholic priest who disappeared last January.

The group of 29 people stood and applauded as the president entered the room. Reporters were not allowed to attend the meeting, but a White House statement said the meeting concluded when an unidentified family member stood and said:

"Mr. President. My father is there and I want you to know I support your policies. God bless you."

Justice challenges timing of election

AUSTIN (AP) — Despite federal concerns about the way the special election was called, Northeast Texans can go to the polls today to pick a new congressman, Gov. Mark White said Friday.

The U.S. Justice Department threatened legal action to block the election because the date was not "precleared" with the federal agency as required by the Voting Rights Act.

Gov. Mark White, who set the election date, responded Friday with a letter saying his decision was not subject to federal review. Texas Democratic Party Chairman Bob Slagle responded with a statement charging the Reagan administration with "meddling."

The governor said the election would take place "despite 11th-hour attempts by the U.S. Justice Department to place roadblocks in the path of an orderly called election."

"I cannot understand why the Justice Department waited until less than 48 hours before this highly contested election to raise the issue," he said.

White chose today for the special election on May 28. In a Thursday letter to White, Assistant U.S. Attorney General William Bradford Reynolds said the one-month notice was too short, not allowing "sufficient time, particularly for citizens overseas, to learn of the election and to take the actions necessary to cast a ballot."

Reynolds also said federal officials were supposed to review the special election date to make sure it "will not have the effect of discriminating on account of race, color or membership in a language minority group."

"If the state elects not to comply voluntarily with the provisions of the Voting Rights Act, it may be necessary to institute legal proceedings to obtain compliance," Reynolds told White.

The necessary federal review could have been completed in 24 hours, according to Reynolds.

FERC: Rates must be based on cost

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, tacitly conceding defeat to a Reagan administration attempt to deregulate the nation's 123 oil pipelines, ruled Friday that their rates must be based on cost.

The commission decision came in a decade-old case involving the 8,400-mile Williams Pipeline that runs through 12 Midwestern states. It unanimously reversed its 1982 ruling which concluded there was no "consumer protection" benefit to regulating the pipelines.

Critics had complained that the earlier ruling allowing pipelines in most cases to set their own rates regardless of their costs would have been resulted in consumers being charged millions of dollars in higher gasoline prices.

In its new ruling Friday, the four-member commission said federal courts were forcing it to go back to using the "depreciated trended original cost" of a pipeline as the basis for calculating revenue requirements and the rate of return it may earn.

The U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia in May 1984 struck down the commission's 1982 ruling, saying it found "unconvincing" FERC's attempts at justifying its novel interpretation of "just and reasonable" rates.

"FERC's statutory mandate requires oil pipeline rates to be set within the zone of reasonableness," the court said. "Presumed market forces may not comprise the principal regulatory constraint" as the commission had contended.

In its 1982 decision, the commission said consumers had only a "negligible" interest in what pipelines charged because shipping rates represent a small share of gasoline and other refined petroleum products.

It said then there was little justification for "aggressive federal intervention" and, therefore, the commission would be "liberal to the carriers" and challenge their rates only in cases where "aggrieved parties" complain.

PDAP moves headquarters to Midland

From Staff Reports

National headquarters for the Palmer Drug Abuse Program recently were moved to Midland from Dallas. Administrative offices are located in space donated by Sun Exploration and Production Company, 1 Petroleum Center, Building 8.

PDAP-National Chief Executive

Giffert Aistrin said, "We appreciate deeply the contribution Sun has made to our organization. Free use of their office space tremendously reduces our overhead, and allows us to concentrate on serving our affiliates' needs."

The move from Dallas to Midland was undertaken to locate in close proximity to a viable PDAP affiliate with which to interact for training purposes. PDAP-Midland has such a program.

PDAP-Midland, an affiliate of PDAP-National, is a separate corporate entity with administrative and counseling offices at First United Methodist Church. PDAP-Midland is supported by donations from local foundations, businesses and individuals. Bob Savage serves as director of the local program which has been in operation here for six years.

Sources: Corpus Christi could be chosen as port

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Corpus Christi appeared Friday to be close to being named as the site for the home port of the Navy battleship Wisconsin, a congressional source said.

The unidentified source who is close to the decision process told the Harte-Hanks bureau in Washington that, although no formal decision has been announced, Navy Secretary John Lehman yesterday chose Corpus Christi for the new facility.

Other congressional sources quoted in published reports agreed that Corpus Christi captured the spot as the home port location.

"The word has come down that it is going to be a Texas Port, so you've got a 50-50 shot at picking the right one," freshman U.S. Rep. Mack Sweeney, R-Wharton, told Harte-Hanks.

The Houston Post reported in a copyright story Friday that unidentified sources in Washington said Pascagoula, Miss., and Pensacola, Fla., are the finalists along with Corpus Christi.

Lehman is expected to make the final announcement next week after Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger "signs off" on the decision, according to the newspaper.

"Unless some dramatic change is made at the presidential level, at the secretarial level this is the way the deal is," one source said.

A source quoted by the Houston Chronicle described the decision as "a crapshoot" between Corpus Christi and Pensacola.

Navy Director of Public Affairs, Capt. James B. Finklestein, acknowledged that the decision has been made "and the only thing remaining is to tie up some loose ends."

But he said the Navy "has not released anything on Corpus Christi or anything else."

The newspapers reported Houston-Galveston port lost the bid because of problems in reaching solid ground to set a foundation at Galveston's Fort Point and because of the site's distance to deep water.

"That's just a fact of nature. There is nothing we could have done about it," John Focke, who headed the Houston-Galveston committee promoting the port, told the Chronicle. "If the issue is water depth, the navy could have looked at navigational charts last summer and eliminated a lot of wasted expense."

Focke said the issue of deep water is important for submarine protection for the battleship and its accompanying vessels.

The Wisconsin was launched Dec. 7, 1943, and commissioned April 16, 1944.

Texas attorney sentenced to prison

HATTIESBURG, Miss. (AP) — Judy Marquez, a Texas attorney, was sentenced Friday to one year in prison after pleading guilty to a charge of being an accessory after the fact in a burglary case.

Ms. Marquez was accused of transporting Melvin Neighbors, who faces burglary charges in a break-in and shootout in a Texas judge's house, from Texas to Hattiesburg.

She told Forrest County Circuit

Court Judge Dicky McKenzie that she was planning to come to Hattiesburg to pick up a mobile home and did not know beforehand about the case involving Neighbors.

She said she had been contacted by two persons and asked to take Neighbors with her to Hattiesburg. "I did it without knowing he (Neighbors) was involved in anything," she said.

Simpson receives threats, cancels LULAC appearance

ANAHEIM, Calif., (AP) — U.S. Sen. Alan K. Simpson, who helped write an immigration bill opposed by many Hispanics, canceled an appearance Friday at the League of United Latin American Citizens convention after receiving threats, a LULAC official said.

The FBI advised Simpson, co-author of the Simpson-Mazzoli bill, to bypass the LULAC convention after the threats against his life and family, said LULAC executive director Jose Trevino.

Demonstrators Friday chanted "LULAC, Sit! Simpson, No!" as they awaited his arrival at the league's 56th annual convention. Simpson, R-Wyo., was to appear at an immigration and civil rights symposium.

Before the meeting, LULAC National President Mario Obledo said the league saw no problems in inviting Simpson, even though it disagrees with his stance on immigration issues.

"I'm willing to listen to all views," Obledo said Thursday. "We invited him to inform the membership. We invite friends and foes alike."

If passed, the Simpson-Mazzoli bill would impose strict penalties on employers who knowingly hire undocumented workers. Opponents say that could lead employers to avoid hiring Hispanics for fear they are illegal aliens.

Court rebuffs Texas bid to block nuclear dumps

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas attorney general's office said Friday it will appeal a federal court's refusal to review a Department of Energy plan to consider two Panhandle sites as potential nuclear waste dumps.

A three-judge panel of the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans rebuffed Texas officials Friday in their effort to block consideration of the Deaf Smith County sites.

Spokeswoman Loretta Hendley of the Texas attorney general's office said Texas would ask for the entire 5th U.S. Circuit Court to hear the state's plea. She said that motion would be filed next week.

The court dismissed a petition by Texas officials that sought review of the DOE's listing of the Texas sites as potentially acceptable.

"Review at this point would entail a waste of judicial and administrative resources, would be difficult to conduct in any event for lack of a meaningful framework within which such review may go forward, and would detract from the public review process."

Agency hosts 'most expensive' picnic

It was a picnic at Midland Center Thursday night, but one without the usual West Texas sand, snakes and sunburns. Midlanders were picnicking in style for the Most Expensive Little Centennial Picnic in Texas, an annual benefit for Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children.

About 250 people attended the event, which was expected to bring in $15,000 for the center, according to Wendy McCluskey, president of the board of directors for PBCBWT. Tickets were $75 per couple, $150 for sponsors, $250-$500 for contributors and $750 and up for "Bless Your Heart" contributions.

The "ethnic buffet," created by Charlene Bunnell and Foods Fantastic, featured Italian antipasto trays, Irish and Polish breads, Chinese chicken drumsticks, Austrian veal and pork paste, "soul" sausage corn sticks, French vegetable terrine, Mexican Calabacitas En Vinagre and German linertorte.

The Statue of Liberty theme was used for the picnic because "The Lady" and the PBCBWT are "symbols of hope and promise of new life," said Mrs. McCluskey. Decorations by Dale Kinsey carried out the theme in the stage centerpiece, wall hangings and red-white-and-blue balloons floating above each table.

The Levee Band, of Dallas, performed for the crowd.

Following the meal, Tommie Mar-ricke conducted the auction of items such as a mink jacket, which sold for $625; a diamond and coral pendant which brought in $225; a cocktail party for 50 people, $475; a three-wheeled motorcycle, $1125; and a collector's pinball machine, $1000. Other items were diamond jewelry, art works, an antique quilt and silver spoons. The first edition of the center's centennial cookbook sold for $45.

Throughout the evening bidders were eligible to participate in a "silent" auction for other items, such as antique books, handmade jewelry, a football autographed by the Rice University football team and a baseball signed by the Texas Rangers. Three Cabbage Patch Kids in the silent auction brought in $600 each, and were donated back to the center by their purchaser.

Eleven artists exhibited and sold their works — including weavings, batik, watercolors, knitting, antiques, jewelry and oil paintings — at the picnic. The exhibitors donated 15 percent of their sales during the evening to the center.

PBCBWT's goal is to expand its present facilities, said Mrs. McCluskey.

The 7-year-old center has experienced a continuous annual growth in the number of clients it serves, both in the length of service and the types of services available, said Ron Hanna, board member and volunteer counselor. "People are becoming more aware and agencies are becoming more aware of our facilities," he said.

Midland man accused of murder has bond reduced

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

A Midland man accused of killing a 25-year-old Odessa security guard June 16 had his bond reduced from $100,000 to $20,000 by 142nd District Judge Pat Baskin, but remained in Midland County Jail Friday night while his family tried to raise the money for bail.

"The family's trying to round it up now," said Jim Jordan, an Odessa attorney who represented 33-year-old Ruben Bujanda, 1105 W. Kentucky, at the Friday hearing.

Bujanda was arrested last week while still being treated at Midland Memorial Hospital for the five gunshot wounds he received during the incident, which took place at a race-track southeast of town.

Bond was originally set at $100,000 by Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry. Armed guards were posted outside Bujanda's hospital door until his condition had improved so he could be transferred to county jail.

Sheriff's deputies arrived at the racetrack near county roads 1140 and 120 about 8:30 p.m. June 16 to find the body of security guard James Bells of Odessa, who had been shot once in the head, according to reports. Security guard Charlie Coleman Jr., 1121 E. Chestnut, was stabbed five times but survived. The guards reportedly were trying to break up a gambling argument when the shooting began.

On Friday, Jordan suggested a bond as low as $10,000 would be enough to ensure his client's appearance in court; prosecutors requested that bond be kept high to keep Bujanda, a resident alien, from fleeing to Mexico.

"His relatives fled to Mexico, and I was afraid that he might, too," said

Sheriff's Investigator Jim Newsom after the hearing. Newsom was referring to several other suspects in the incident, apparently related to Bujanda, who are not in custody.

Guillermo Bujanda testified that her husband was a good risk for the lower bond because he owns a home and two cars and is steadily employed as an oil-field worker.

"Ruben's lived here in Midland for 12 years," Jordan said. "His wife and three kids were born in Texas. He's worked here all his adult life. I don't know that you could run him out of town."

Keeping bond at $100,000 "is like declining to set bond," Baskin said. "Twenty-thousand dollars is a pretty sizable bond for somebody in this price range."

Midland woman awarded $161,852

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — An Ector County jury Thursday awarded a Midland woman $161,852 in the death of her husband, who suffered a heart attack while working.

Venita Courtney, through her attorney, Ruff Ahders of Odessa, contended the death of her husband while he was working at the Phillips Petroleum plant in Goldsmith Jan. 6, 1982, was job related.

Phillips Petroleum rejected Mrs.

Courtney's death benefit claim under the Workmen's Compensation Act, contending Courtney's death was not job related, according to Ahders.

The 24th District Court jury, presided over by 70th District Court Judge Gene Ater, heard testimony during the two-day trial and ruled 10-2 in favor of Mrs. Courtney.

Phillips Petroleum was represented by Midland attorney Barry Beck.

Ring, other items taken from home

From Staff Reports

A $500 ring and other items worth a total of $633 were reported taken from the home of Holly Daly, 1500 N. Fairgrounds, according to police. The ring, a $233 payroll check, a $150 pair of earrings and a $50 necklace were taken sometime between June 16 and June 23 while she was out of town, reports said.

In other complaints to police Friday, Adelina Martinez, 1702 S. Main, reported the loss of a $315 television in a burglary which occurred sometime between June 23 and Friday while she was out of town.

Arlene Shuping, 107 E. Michigan, reported a Thursday burglary in which $200 worth of jewelry and a $60 cassette stereo were taken.

CORRECTION

In a story published June 25 it was stated that "Joseph Gallagher, 37, was free on bond while appealing his conviction for indecencies allegedly committed with an 11-year-old boy at a Scout ranch last July." That was incorrect.

The statement should have read "...for indecencies allegedly committed with an 11-year-old boy he met at a Scout ranch."

The Reporter-Telegram regrets the error.

Odessa police return stolen property

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Police Friday continued to contact burglary victims in an effort to return some $25,000 worth of stolen property taken in about 40 burglaries that have occurred since February.

Odessa police detective Harold Thomas said Friday owners of the stolen property have been identified and are being contacted as quickly as possible.

The recovery of the stolen property followed the arrest June 17 of William G. Navarette, 29, 305 McKinney, at a motel in the vicinity of West County Road and West 2nd Street by officers acting on an anonymous tip.

Municipal Judge J.E. Weatherly set bond for Navarette at $20,000 and he remained in the Ector County jail in lieu of bond late Friday.

Navarette is also being questioned by sheriff's investigators concerning several burglaries that have occurred outside the Odessa city limits in the past few months.

Thomas said the stolen property recovered included five 25-inch color television sets, six 19-inch color TV sets, a 15-inch color TV set, two 13-inch color TV sets, a stereo system, a sewing machine and seven microwave ovens.

Thomas said the investigation is continuing and other arrests are expected in connection with the burglaries.

GAO: U.S. intelligence agencies recruited Nazis

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. spy agencies recruited Nazi war criminals to gather intelligence on the Soviet Union after World War II, and then helped some of them immigrate illegally to the United States, congressional investigators said Friday.

The General Accounting Office said the recruitment took place when an ill-prepared intelligence system was suddenly ordered, in 1946, "to produce the highest possible quality of intelligence on the U.S.S.R. in the shortest time possible."

The report by Congress' investigative arm also said the U.S. government employed Klaus Barbie, the Gestapo chief in Lyons, France. This country protected Barbie from extradition and organized his escape to South America, according to the GAO.

The study was requested by Rep. Peter W. Rodino Jr., D-N.J., chairman of the House Judiciary Committee.

Rodino said the report makes it "painfully clear that some of our intelligence agents allowed their preoccupation with the Soviet Union to cloud their judgment and that the anti-communist frenzy of the times led to some highly questionable decisions about the use of Nazi war criminals."

The GAO said the 1946 order came when U.S. forces were demobilized, the Office of Strategic Services (the wartime intelligence agency) dismantled and many experienced agents already home and pursuing private careers.

"Their replacements, besides being inexperienced, were believed by some former intelligence officers we interviewed to be philosophically and politically naive" about the beginning of the Cold War, the report said.

The GAO studied cases of 114 aliens — including Nazis and Axis collaborators — and identified five with undesirable or questionable backgrounds who were employed by U.S. intelligence agencies and received some form of assistance to immigrate. Seven other aliens with similar backgrounds immigrated without identifiable assistance.

Appeals court rules against ex-anchorwoman

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — A federal appeals court Friday took away the $325,000 a jury awarded Christine Craft, the former television anchorwoman who waged two court battles against the station she claimed demoted her because of her appearance.

It marked the second time judges have overruled juries that awarded Ms. Craft large sums of money.

The 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled Metromedia Inc., former owners of KMBC-TV, had not defrauded Ms. Craft by promising "no makeover or substantial changes" in her appearance and then requiring her to spend hours with clothing and appearance consultants.

The court ordered U.S. District Judge Joseph E. Stevens to enter a verdict in favor of Metromedia.

The appeals court also affirmed verdicts in favor of Metromedia on Ms. Craft's charges that she was a victim of sex discrimination and that she was paid less than her male co-anchor when she worked at KMBC in 1981.

"I'm really demoralized," Ms. Craft said in California where she now lives.

"I am not a quitter," she added. "I'm against the ropes, I'm falling, but I'm not going to quit. Somehow, some way against incredible odds, I'm going to go out there, do some fund raising, raise the money to proceed. (I'll) try to get to the Supreme Court if we have to. I do not believe that I should be treated, or any other woman in this country should have to accept that she must be a second-class citizen."

"There's no verdict, no money," said Dennis Egan, one of Ms. Craft's attorneys. "The gist of it is I feel 18 jurors knew what was meant by the evidence. It was for them to say. Not for an appellate court that did not review the evidence and was not there to observe the demeanor of the witnesses."

Court rules Koch can't prohibit groups' anti-gay policies

NEW YORK (AP) — Mayor Edward I. Koch cannot prohibit the Archdiocese of New York or other groups holding city social services contracts from discriminating against homosexuals in hiring, the state Court of Appeals ruled Friday.

"Because of the separation of powers delineated in the City Charter, the mayor has no authority to initiate such a policy," the state's top court ruled in a 6-1 decision that overturned a lower court decision.

The court said the City Council does have authority to require a clause banning discrimination against homosexuals in city contracts. But the council has for 14 years failed to pass such a law.

"No matter how well-intentioned his actions may be, the mayor may not unlawfully infringe upon the legislative powers reserved to the City Council," the court said.

The decision was hailed as a victory for "religious freedom" by charitable groups and denounced as "an ominous warning" by a homosexual organization.

The groups involved — the Roman Catholic Archdiocese, the Jewish Orthodox Agudath Israel and the Salvation Army — receive nearly $90 million a year from the city to provide social services for children, the elderly, homeless and disabled.

Though they denied they discriminated against anyone, the groups threatened to give up the contracts rather than sign an agreement to that effect because it went against religious beliefs that practicing homosexuality is a sin.

The mayor's order that all groups receiving city social services contracts sign a non-discrimination agreement had been in existence since 1980, but became controversial last year when Roman Catholic Cardinal John O'Connor took over the archdiocese and balked at signing it.

Judge resigns after flap over baby-sitting

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (AP) — West Virginia's top judge, acknowledging "public outrage" over his firing a secretary for refusing to baby-sit, gave up the post of chief justice Friday but kept his seat on the Supreme Court and offered the woman her job back.

Pat White, state treasurer of the National Organization for Women, said the decision by Richard Neely was a "step in the right direction" but reiterated NOW's demand that he also resign from the court. She said Neely's announcement will not stop investigations into the controversy.

Neely had won his second 12-year term on the bench last fall. The one-year post of chief justice is rotated among members and Neely would have served until January.

The controversy erupted when it was revealed Neely had fired Tess Dineen from a $23,000-a-year secretarial job because she wanted to stop baby-sitting his 4-year-old son.

As chief justice, the 43-year-old Democrat supervised the high court and the other state courts.

Neely, who has defended his right to order his staff to perform duties such as baby-sitting, collecting his laundry and typing books he has written, said in a prepared statement he was bowing to public pressure.

"The extensive public outrage associated with Ms. Dineen's job requirements have at least given the appearance of impropriety, and the collective comments of senior members of the West Virginia Legislature demonstrate that my particular use of private staff confounds public opinion," Neely said.

Since public confidence is key to the operation of the court system, Neely said, "I hereby resign as chief justice."

He also said he hopes the issue has been "finally laid to rest."

Neely declined to elaborate on the statement.

Ms. Dineen was not immediately available for comment. She was not at her office or home.

White, also a member of the state House of Delegates, joined a NOW demonstration at the Capitol on Wednesday to protest Neely's firing of Ms. Dineen.

Cherokee bands renew ceremonial council

TAHLEQUAH, Okla. (AP) — Eastern and Western bands of the Cherokee Nation renewed a ceremonial council fire Friday, the second such reunion since soldiers 150 years ago herded most of the tribe on a forced relocation march known as "The Trail of Tears."

Tribal officials combined ceremony with discussions of political and social issues, among them the tribe's right to determine its citizenship.

The tribe's membership regulation is "one of the most fundamental and important rights of a sovereign nation," said Ross Swimmer, principal chief of the western Cherokees.

Swimmer and Robert Youngdeer, principal chief of the Eastern Band, lit the council fire at the Cherokee National Historical Center among the wooded hills of a northeastern Oklahoma county that bears the tribe's name, kicking off the three-day "celebration of togetherness."

Many of the Indians were descendants of the 14,000 Cherokees who made a six-month forced march from the Southeast beginning in October 1838. About 4,000 lost their lives in the journey, which came to be called "The Trail of Tears."

Last year, the two bands met for the first time since the resettlement, at Red Clay, Tenn. The meeting near Tahlequah marks a reciprocal visit by members of the Eastern band of the tribe.

Many of the nearly 9,000 members of the Eastern Band live on the 56,000-acre Qualla Reservation in North Carolina. The Western Band, on its short Pine Ridge, many of them living in the western Oklahoma.

The Cherokees were among the first tribes to assimilate white culture and the most sophisticated and organized of the "Five Civilized Tribes."

Swimmer, 41, an attorney, and Youngdeer, 39, was elected chief for 1985. He participated in a traditional dance while wearing a tie and white shirt, and a white shirt and tie.

Youngdeer said his band is not as large as the Eastern band, but it is growing.

Administration trying to deport Nicaraguan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration has begun deportation proceedings against a former Nicaraguan rebel leader, following a trip he made to Washington this month to urge Congress not to renew aid to U.S.-backed guerrillas fighting to overthrow Nicaragua's leftist government.

Edgar Chamorro, a director of the rebels' Nicaraguan Democratic Force, or FDN, until he was fired last November for criticizing the administration, was told by the Immigration and Naturalization Service that his legal status was revoked and he was no longer eligible to remain in the United States.

In a telephone interview from his home in Key Biscayne, Fla., Chamorro said he plans to contest the I.N.S. deportation action.

U.S. officials confirmed they had begun deportation proceedings, but denied that politics was a motivation.

Congressional Democrats, who met with Chamorro before this month's vote, attacked the move as retaliation for the former rebel leader's opposition to President Reagan's call to resume non-lethal aid to the rebels.

Ferraro speaks to feminists

ATLANTA (AP) — Former vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro and astronaut Sally Ride told a convention of feminists on Friday that women still are a long way from achieving true equality in government and science despite recent dramatic strides.

"The battle is far from won," Ferraro told the National Women's Political Caucus in an emotional appearance that produced thunderous standing ovations and shouts of "Gerry, Gerry, Gerry" from the nearly 2,000 women attending the group's seventh biennial convention.

The New York Democrat said her 1984 campaign "took us a long way down the road toward political equality."

"Last week I found myself in a discussion of not whether the Republicans would run a woman for vice president in 1988, but which woman."

Ms. Ride told the caucus that barriers also exist for young women seeking careers in the fields of science and math, barriers imposed by "the educational system and by society in general."

Teen shot by Goetz held

NEW YORK (AP) — James Ramseur Jr., one of the four teen-agers shot by Bernhard Goetz on a subway train, was arrested Friday on charges of raping and robbing a young woman at gunpoint last month, authorities said.

Police arrested Ramseur, 18, after the victim — who was hospitalized for four days after the attack — identified him in a lineup at the 48th Precinct in the Bronx, law enforcement sources told The Associated Press.

Bronx District Attorney Mario Merola, who announced the arrest, said in a statement that Ramseur allegedly accosted the 18-year-old victim in an elevator in her building at the Claremont Houses, a Bronx housing project.

Mean tempered bees threaten Mexico

By MONTE HAYES

CUERNAVACA, Mexico (AP) — They have mean genes. They're ill-tempered. And millions of them are coming soon to Mexico.

The so-called African "killer bees" are expected to arrive at Mexico's southern border as early as next year, a prospect that has government officials and beekeepers alarmed.

The African bees, a far more aggressive breed than the European bees used for honey cultivation in Mexico and the rest of the Western Hemisphere, pose a serious threat to Mexico's $50-million-a-year honey industry, officials say.

"There's definitely going to be a big drop in honey production," said Peter Rabbow, managing director of the Miel Carlota apiculture plant on the outskirts of this resort town 50 miles southwest of Mexico City.

Mexico is among the world's three largest honey exporters, along with China and the Soviet Union. But only Mexico faces a threat to their honey industries from African bees.

Since 26 African queen bees escaped from a research laboratory in Sao Paulo, Brazil, in 1957, and began mating with local bees descended from European stock, they have devastated honey industries on their northward journey through South and Central America.

During their advance north from Brazil, African bees have been blamed for the deaths of more than 150 people and countless animals.

Rabbow noted that honey production in Venezuela virtually collapsed after the arrival of the bees. Output fell from 6,380 tons in 1975 to 970 tons in 1981. Venezuela went from exporting honey to importing it.

Miel Carlota is Mexico's largest commercial honey operation. But it produces only 500 to 900 tons of the more than 80,000 tons harvested nationwide each year.

The country has 2.5 million commercial hives and some 47,000 beekeepers, 90 percent of them small farmers who don't have the resources to combat the bees, Rabbow said.

"Many will simply find it's not worth their time to stay in beekeeping," he said.

The disruption in the honey business comes as the smaller but fierce African bees take over domestic hives, killing the queen bees so their own queens can mate with the gentle European drones.

Though they produce more honey, they consume most of it, unlike European bees, Rabbow said. Their fierceness also make it dangerous for beekeepers to handle them and requires hives to be relocated away from inhabited areas.

Attempts to breed the aggressive bees out of the bees have not produced the hoped-for results, he said.

After one cross between a European queen and African drone, the new generation is less irritable. But succeeding generations re-acquire their mean-tempered ways.

The only effective way to fight the bees, said Rabbow, is to continually kill the African queens and insert artificially inseminated European queens into the hives.

The government has distributed pamphlets to beekeepers instructing them on how to deal with the African bees. It is also considering producing a large number of European queen bees for distribution to small beekeepers, but Rabbow said such a program will take several years to provide the necessary numbers. It's still in the talking stage.

A third proposal under study is to place "traps" along the border between Mexico and Guatemala to slow their entry into the country, but Rabbow said such an undertaking would be "horrendously expensive."

Here at Miel Carlota, the company's beekeepers are preparing as best they can for the sting of the "killer bee" invasion. Because it already produces queen bees to substitute aging queens in its hives, Miel Carlota will be able to adjust to the impact of the African bees more readily than small farmers.

As Rabbow showed a visitor around, two workers opened a hive less than 10 feet away and the air filled with bees.

"If these were African bees, we would be covered with them," he said.

Simply approaching too close to a hive of African bees can set off a massive attack, as can noise, lights and certain smells, he said.

But Rabbow said the danger of attacks on people is not great if hives are moved away from populated areas.

Once they enter Mexico, the African bees will need three to five years to reach the United States. Although cold weather is expected to block their progress into northern states, a U.S. Agriculture Department study warned in 1982 that the "killer bees" could seriously hurt beekeeping operations in southern states.

American beekeepers were not concerned before because the problem seemed too far away, but now they are, said Rabbow. "They realize these bees aren't just something from a scare movie."

Elderly in Japan face untraditional future

TOKYO (AP) — Postwar prosperity has helped give the Japanese the world's highest life expectancy — 74 years for men and 79 for women — but serious questions are being raised on the nation's ability to care for its aged, who traditionally are treated with special respect.

Japan's over-65 population is growing faster than that of any other nation, according to United Nations tabulations. Its 11.9 million senior citizens currently comprise 9.9 percent of the total population, a figure that at present still ranks below some industrialized nations. Sweden stands at 16.5 percent and the United States 11.4 percent.

Japan's elderly, however, are expected to exceed 20 percent of the population by the year 2014, according to government statistics. Care for aging parents historically has been the responsibility of the eldest son. But with urbanization, smaller homes and the desire of young couples for privacy, those elderly living with their children have dropped from just over 80 percent in 1960 to 66.8 percent in 1983.

That change in traditional ways already has resulted in depression among many of the elderly and in some cases suicide.

Housing and care for senior citizens, especially the senile and bedridden, have remained far below the need. Official statistics show 4.6 percent of Japan's elderly suffer varying degrees of senility, while 438,000, or 3.6 percent are bedridden.

Television dramas recently have focused on the hardships of caring for a senile person. "Kokotsu no Hito," a 1982 best-selling novel on the subject, made the word "kokotsu" — meaning entranced or charmed — a popular description of the senile.

"Having a bedridden or senile old person in your home is not just a problem for the elderly. It's a problem for the whole family," said Kazunori Sempel of Tokyo's Seiko Home for the Elderly, which has a special care unit for 80 people and a waiting list of 40.

The government subsidizes three types of public homes for the elderly — special care homes for those unable to live in private households, "care homes" for the less seriously incapacitated, and "low cost homes" which offer housing at reduced costs. In 1982, 2,615 public homes housed a small 1.6 percent of the Japanese elderly.

Special care homes have increased from 539 in 1975 to 1,410 in 1983 and the government plans 100 more annually. Roughly 15,000 elderly nationwide are waiting to get into a special care home, according to the Ministry of Welfare.

Some elderly prefer not to live with their children.

Chileans take vendors of bad goods to court

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — The military government is urging Chileans to take vendors to court if goods they sell are shoddy or not up to standard.

The campaign stems from a commitment by President Augusto Pinochet, an army general, to make free enterprise work.

Consumer claims courts are fining dishonest sellers and awarding cash damages to buyers of defective merchandise.

School children are being taught to check expiration dates on food labels and make sure candy and ice-cream bars are hygienically wrapped.

"For a free-market economy to be effective, we need informed, active consumers," said Mario Ebner Pinochet, the president's cousin and the head of the Economy Ministry's Department of Industry and Commerce, which coordinates the consumer drive.

"The idea is to make consumers the patrolmen of the marketplace, rather than have the government do it in a paternalistic fashion," Ebner Pinochet, a retired army colonel, added in an interview. "In Chile it now is possible for any citizen, even Joe Nobody, to speak up for his consumer rights and be heard."

He said under the socialist administration of President Salvador Allende, which the current regime overthrew in 1973, "we had costly government subsidies, artificial price controls, bad product quality and consumer indifference."

The consumer campaign came about as a result of the complete rewriting, in 1983, of Chile's consumer-protection code. The former law, like many in South America, had high-sounding motives but provided no effective action for ordinary citizens.

Now, any Chilean can go to a Justice of the Peace Court and file a consumer complaint. No lawyer is needed.

Pickens: Stockholders should decide

AUSTIN (AP) — Stockholders who risk their money — not professional managers interested in hanging onto their paychecks — should decide whether companies accept merger offers, Mesa Petroleum Co. President T. Boone Pickens said Friday.

That principle applies whether the takeover target is an oil company or a television network, added Pickens, who has gained a national reputation as a corporate raider.

"Shareholders own the company. They take the financial risks. They put up the money. Why shouldn't they decide what happens to the company?" he asked.

"I have a lot more confidence in stockholders than I do the management."

Pickens said his comments, made during a speech to the Texas Press Association, applied to all kinds of corporate mergers, including cable broadcasting executive Ted Turner's bid to get control of CBS-TV.

"If they (CBS shareholders) want to take Ted Turner's offer...if they want to take all the paper that Ted's pushing out there to them, then fine. It's their company," he said.

Pickens said shareholders are beginning to exercise their rights, adding that such power makes corporate managers nervous.

In many companies, he said, management lacks any financial interest in the corporation beyond their salaries and perquisites.

"The real problems managements are afraid of, we all know, is they're afraid they're going to lose their jobs. That's what it is. They also have a stack of perks there. They have a nice hunting camp and a fishing lodge," he said.

"Managements have done everything they can think of to entrench themselves. I mean, they are scared to death. Their interests frankly aren't the same as the stockholders have. Shareholders are beginning to recognize and exercise their rights, which is good."

Pickens also criticized corporate executives who respond to tender offers by telling stockholders the offer is too small or bad for the company.

"How many times have you heard management say in response to a tender offer, 'It's not in the best interests of the shareholders.' Very sanctimoniously, they get up and say it's not in your best interests. The next thing they say is the offer is 'grossly inadequate.'"

"To me, it's not management's place to give that kind of advice to the owners of the company. It's up to the shareholders to decide," he said.

Chairman of prison board to resign

AUSTIN (AP) — The chairman of the state prison board said he will resign and support a Republican who is expected to try to unseat Gov. Mark White next year.

Robert Gunn of Wichita Falls, a Republican appointed in 1981 by then-Gov. Bill Clements, said White, a Democrat, tried to mix "prisons and politics" and interfered in the selection of a new prison director.

When Texas Department of Corrections Director Raymond Procunier resigned last week, most of the nine prison board members favored TDC counsel Steve Martin for the job. But Assistant Director Lane McCotter was unanimously selected after White talked with the four board members he appointed.

White also had favored McCotter for the job when Procunier was hired last year.

"I feel that prisons and politics don't mix," Gunn said. "It's the role of an executive (governor) to take the advice of his advisers and experts, which should be the board of directors."

However, James Parsons, a Democrat whom White appointed to the prison board in February, said Gunn "like other Republicans on the board, has chosen to play politics" with the TDC.

"It should be pointed out that Gunn voted for McCotter too," Parsons, an attorney, told the Palestine Herald-Press.

Parsons said he and three other board members met with White the morning before McCotter was elected just to "kick around our views."

But Parsons added, "White said he would go along with whoever the board selected."

Gunn said that after he resigns he will be "active to some degree" in U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler's gubernatorial campaign, should the Hunt congressman decide to run.

"I'm not going to support Loeffler until I'm off the board," Gunn said. "I just don't know when it's going to be."

Gunn declined to say how soon he would quit, but said it will probably be before the end of the year.

The governor, when asked about Gunn's pending resignation and plans to support Loeffler, said, "That's fine. I don't think you could do both those jobs at once."

White said he believed Gunn became frustrated several months ago with the prison board post.

New York Indian museum ready to head West

NEW YORK (AP) — A deal that would move the Museum of the American Indian to Texas is all but sealed, its director said Friday, adding that the institution is preparing for a court battle with New York authorities who want to keep it.

"We believe that we have a strong argument, and we're ready to go to court," said director Roland W. Force after the museum's board voted 8-to-3 to tentatively accept billionaire H. Ross Perot's $70 million offer to move to Texas.

Final approval of the agreement was withheld while the museum's lawyer, Edward N. Costikyan, meets with officials of the American Museum of Natural History and asks them for clarifications of their proposal for a merger that would keep the Indian museum in New York.

But Force said chances were slim that American Museum officials could satisfy the Indian museum's concerns by July 3, the date set by the Indian museum's board as the deadline for final approval of the deal with Perot.

Perot said, "It was probably a wise move on the part of the board. They have put the Museum of Natural History in a position where they have to come up with their best and final offer and put all the cards on the table."

The Indian museum is the home of a million Indian artifacts.

South Africa cracks down on dissidents

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The white government on Friday more than doubled the number of anti-apartheid groups banned from holding public meetings, and extended the ban for six months.

A government spokesman also rejected as "absolutely ridiculous and unfounded" a guerrilla group's charge that police had tricked seven activists into killing themselves with grenades this week.

Seven blacks were killed and seven wounded late Wednesday in blasts in three black townships east of Johannesburg. Police said six of the victims had their hands blown off, and suggested they died in a failed "coordinated terrorist attack."

An eighth black died apparently while planting a bomb at a power station.

The main exile guerrilla movement fighting apartheid, the African National Congress, called on Thursday for a full-scale armed uprising by South Africa's blacks.

The ANC also said South African police agents posing as guerrillas gave out grenades to young anti-apartheid militants and "deliberately trained them wrongly" so the grenades went off in their hands when they tried to attack black policemen's homes.

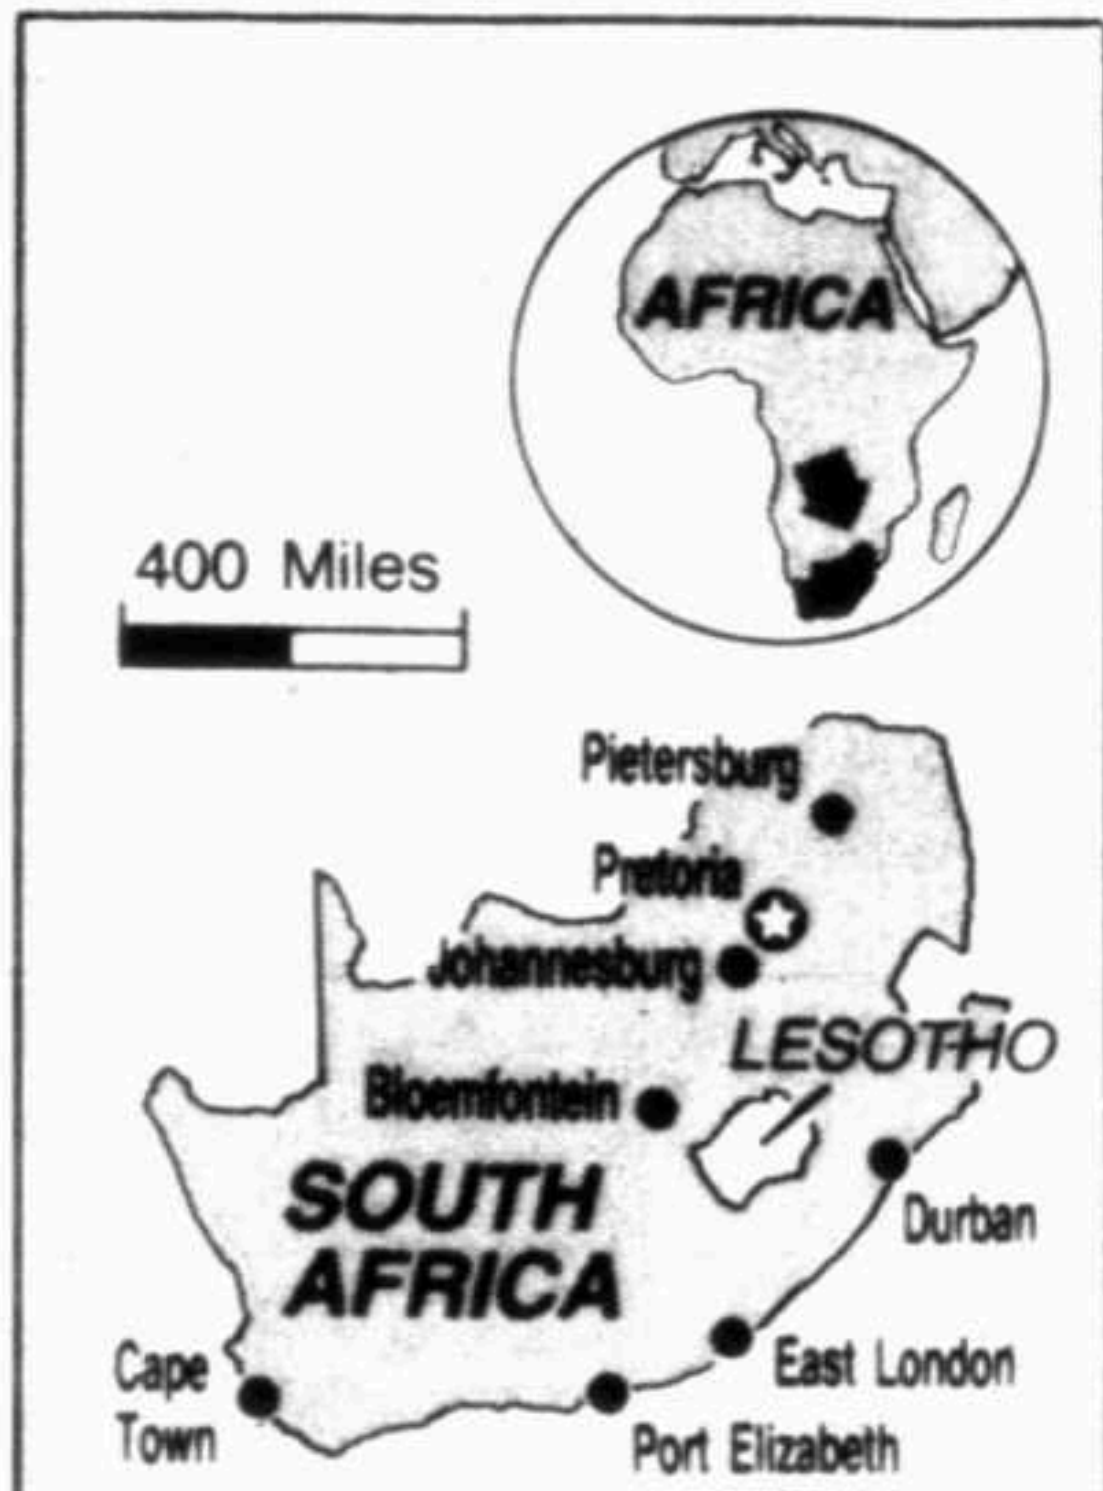

The outlawed ANC accused police "assassins" of entrapping the young activists to "get rid of large numbers of anti-apartheid militants and accuse the democratic movement of involvement in the struggle."

Police headquarters in Pretoria said investigations "proved that the African National Congress was involved in the incidents," and said some of the wounded men had confessed.

The police statement said, "The ANC is desperately attempting to disprove the possibility that the hand grenades... were defective."

On Thursday, the ANC, from its headquarters in Lusaka, Zambia, called on South Africa's black police officers and soldiers to "turn your guns against your masters."

A spokesman for Law and Order Minister Louis le Grange said the charge that police had snared the activists with booby-trapped grenades is "absolutely ridiculous and unfounded. If they want to make claims like this, they must substantiate them."

Le Grange issued the broadened ban on meetings in the official Government Gazette. He had banned meetings of 29 anti-apartheid groups in 18 riot-torn cities and towns for three months in March. Le Grange said then that gatherings by the groups threatened public peace.

Searches disrupt calm of British hotels

By LARRY THORSON

LONDON (AP) — Police ripped up a room because of a receipt found in a suspect's pocket. They evacuated all 108 guests of another hotel and searched it because employees thought they spotted a recent guest among mugshots of terrorist suspects.

Those and smaller disruptions have occurred in London, a dozen seaside resorts and other towns because of fears that the Irish Republican Army might have planted bombs in a string of hotels. Police say the possibility is slight, but they must take precautions.

This has been an unsettling experience for Britain, whose biggest growth industry is tourism. The British like to feel their hotels are refuges of calm, where the loudest noise in the lobby is the creak of a leather armchair or the rustle of a Times newspaper being perused by the person in it.

It began Sunday with the discovery of a bomb with five pounds of explosives and a long-delay timer at the Rubens Hotel, which is a short walk from Buckingham Palace in central London and is filled with foreign tourists during the summer.

Guests were rushed into the street while the bomb squad located and defused the device, then searched the rest of the building. Their experience was to be repeated around the country during the week.

Police said the next day that they had a list of cities and towns in which the IRA may have planted bombs in hotels as part of its guerrilla and terror campaign to drive the British out of Northern Ireland.

They said that, in addition to London, the hotels were in Blackpool, Southampton, Torquay, Bournemouth, Brighton, Eastbourne, Folkestone, Dover, Ramsgate, Margate, Southend and Great Yarmouth.

Tony Broom, a former Scotland Yard officer who directs security at the Dorchester, one of London's leading hotels, said many terrorists will attack any target without regard for casualties among children and other innocents.

"When you think along those lines, what could happen in hotels is almost incomprehensible," Broom told The Associated Press.

A fundamental problem, he said, is that "you're running a hotel, not a fortress."

He said the Dorchester, whose guests include prominent foreign officials, has explosives-detection devices and other sophisticated security equipment he would not describe, but relies heavily on vigilance of its loyal staff.

"They are encouraged to pass along anything that looks not right, and we follow up what they report," Broom said.

He said hotel security once involved little more than keeping an eye out for thieves and prostitutes, but "now you're constantly watching for things far more serious."

In 1982 Israeli Ambassador Shlomo Argov was shot and severely wounded by Arab gunmen as he left the Dorchester. "Now we would tell him not to walk up the street to his car," Broom said.

To allay fears among tourists as the bomb search began, authorities urged vacationers to stick to their plans

Police reopen Glasgow area after search for terrorists

GLASGOW, Scotland (AP) — Police hunting alleged Irish Republican Army bombmakers reopened a section of this city's south side Friday night after sealing it off for eight hours amid reports they had found an arms cache.

Police at the scene said only that bomb squad officers had examined "material" found in the area and that it had been removed for detailed tests.

Bystanders near cordoned-off

James Gray Street, where dozens of families were evacuated from their homes, said they heard a muffled thud from the vicinity, but police refused comment.

Independent Television News, a commercial company, reported that police had found rifles and explosives in one of the gray stone tenements in the Shawlands District.

Authorities arrested a woman Friday night, bringing to nine the number of people detained by police under the Prevention of Terrorism Act. Eight were arrested Saturday after the police said they had received a list of 12 seaside resorts in Britain where bombs were to be exploded.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher escaped from one blast last October that killed five other people in Brighton's Grand Hotel on the English south coast.

Reporters at Scotland Yard, the London police headquarters, said they learned that the people detained in Glasgow were likely to be brought to London's top-security Paddington Green police station for possible charges in connection with past bombings. There was no official confirmation.

Armed police were on the roof at Paddington Green Friday, and officers with sidearms inspected cars and frisked onlookers near the fortified building.

Turkish crew repels attack by hijacker

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — The crew of a Turkish Airlines jet overpowered a passenger who burst into the cockpit during a flight Friday and sprayed the pilots with a fire extinguisher, Turkey's semi-official news Anatolia agency reported.

The Boeing 727, with 81 passengers aboard, landed safely in Istanbul, its destination, the independent Hurriyet news agency said. The flight began in Frankfurt, West Germany.

Anatolia said the passenger, whom it identified as Yusuf Oren, a Turk, was disgruntled because his West German work permit had been canceled.

Hurriyet said the 25-year-old man tried to commandeer the aircraft when it was in Greek airspace.

It said Oren grabbed a fire extinguisher and rushed into the cockpit, spraying foam on the pilots and their instruments and shouting, "I want to blow up this plane."

Folksinger John Denver says Soviet audiences warm up by concert's end

MOSCOW (AP) — John Denver says Soviet audiences seem a little stiff at first but by the end of his concert "I feel as if I'm being embraced by them."

Denver, 41, is in the Soviet Union for a nine-concert "Heart to Heart" tour that opened in Leningrad and Tallinn and closes this weekend in Moscow. He is the first U.S. entertainer to perform for the public in the Soviet Union since Cherkov in July 1982.

Denver said he is negotiating the possible sale here of a recording of his concert, and would like to do some television specials to be broadcast here and in the West.

While he sings "Annie's Song" in Russian, he relies on a translator to introduce songs such as "Fly Away," "Rocky Mountain High," and "Take Me Home, Country Roads."

OVIEDO, Spain (AP) — Raul Alfonsín, Argentina's first freely elected president since the 1976 military coup, was awarded the 1985 Prince of Asturias Award for Iberoamerican Cooperation, a jury announced Friday.

The Prince of Asturias Foundation jury cited the valor and civic responsibility of Alfonsín, elected in December 1983.

"After a war of dramatic consequences, and while in the midst of an economic crisis that has required him to adopt severe austerity measures, Alfonsín has shown enormous courage and responsibility at the head of his nation's government," the citation said.

The jury, presided over by Manuel Fraga Iribarne, opposition leader in the Spanish Parliament, also paid homage to Tancredo Neves, the president-elect of Brazil who died in May before he could take office.

The prize, named for the heir to the throne of the Spanish crown — 18-year-old Prince Felipe, son of King Juan Carlos — consists of $12,500 and an sculpture by the late Spanish artist Joan Miro.

LONDON (AP) — Thieves ransacked the apartment of cameraman Freddie Young, stealing three miniature gold Oscars, his Order of the British Empire decoration and other valuables worth $19,350, he said Friday.

The full-size Oscars he won for "Lawrence of Arabia," "Doctor Zhivago" and "Ryan's Daughter" were left untouched, said Young, 82.

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — George Steinbrenner, owner of the New York Yankees, has been denied an owner's license at Canterbury Downs race track because he made illegal political contributions to Richard Nixon.

Steinbrenner's request was turned down Tuesday, said Dave Freeman, the deputy director of the Minnesota Racing Commission.

"You have to be able to sign a form saying you've never been convicted of a felony, and Mr. Steinbrenner was not able to sign that form," Freeman said.

Steinbrenner was convicted of making illegal contributions during the Watergate era and was suspended by former baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn for 15 months.

Steinbrenner's wife, Joan, has an owner's license, Freeman said. Rules prohibit a licensed owner from running another person's horses.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Life in Oregon may be a bowlful of crawfish and cherries, but Oregon chef Marcel Lahsene couldn't make the combination quite good enough to beat out Paul Prudhomme as king of crawfish cuisine.

Prudhomme's "Crawfish Slam-Bam," a last-minute invention that gets its kick from a veal glaze, beat Lahsene's "Crawfish Tom McCall," named for a former governor.

But the four-judge panel on Thursday scored the pair of recipes from the defending champion only six points above two prepared by Lahsene of Portland, Ore., for the second Crawfish Culinary Cup Cookoff.

Lahsene's "Crawfish Tom McCall" combined fresh cherries, wild mushrooms from Oregon and oriental rice with almonds.

Louisiana is the nation's largest producer and consumer of crawfish with 100 million pounds harvested last year, but Oregonians boast their crawfish — called Evergreen Lobsters — are bigger and tastier.

CONROE (AP) — John Harold Leims, one of about a score of surviving Marine recipients of the Congressional Medal of Honor from World War II, has died of a heart attack. He was 64.

Leims, who was a second lieutenant in the U.S. Marine Corps reserve, received the nation's highest medal of valor for action on Iwo Jima March 7, 1945, said Nicholas Oresko, spokesman for the Congressional Medal of Honor Society in New York.

According to his medal citation, Leims led his platoons on a surprise attack against the Japanese and captured several fortifications. When he discovered communications had been cut, he personally advanced 400 yards over open, fire-swept terrain to string new telephone lines.

After withdrawing his troops safely, Leims learned several casualties had been left behind at the abandoned ridge position beyond the front lines.

In the cover of night and amid a hail of gunfire, he located and carried to safety one seriously wounded Marine before returning to rescue another of his wounded men.

SOUTH CHARLESTON, W. Va. (AP) — Bambi and Honey might never have met in their habitat, but within the confines of an animal hospital the white-tail fawn and black bear cub have become pals.

"They're both babies," said veterinarian Paul Gunnoe of his patients, who roughhouse and fight over the honey jar and his affections. "They don't have any prejudices right now."

Honey, who is 5 or 6 months old, was found by a motorist after she had been hit by a car Sunday night in Cabin Creek.

As the man was driving her to Charleston to seek medical attention, Honey became dizzy from her injuries and nearly fell from the back of his truck. Connie Summers, who was following the truck, stopped when she saw what was happening and volunteered to help.

She brought the bear to Gunnoe, who frequently treats wild animals. "I held her all the way here," said Summers, who stopped Thursday to visit the cub. "She would just lie there and every once in a while get up and stretch — just like a baby."

Honey was suffering from a concussion and shock, and cuts on her back toes required stitches.

Cubs' skid short of Eclipse Club's 26

By Hal Bock
AP Sports Writer

Losing streaks can be contagious. One bad game invariably seems to lead to another. Just ask the Chicago Cubs, tentatively emerging from 13 consecutive losses, two dreary weeks worth of setbacks.

Losing 13 in a row is depressing, but distinctly minor league compared to baseball's all-time record collapse.

Try 26 straight losses. Now that's a losing streak.

The mark belongs to the long-forgotten Eclipse Club of Louisville. In 1889, playing in the then-major league American Association, this team zig-zagged its way through nearly a month's worth of losses and a permanent place in The Baseball Encyclopedia.

Saddled by that losing streak, the Eclipse predictably finished in last place that year, easily eclipsed by seven other teams in a woeful 27-111 season. They were merely 84 games under 500.

And the Cubs thought losing 13 straight was bad?

Louisville went through four managers in the summer of '89, conducting a season-long search for wisdom that would have made George Steinbrenner proud.

Dude Esterbrook, a first baseman-outfielder, started the year as skipper but was dismissed after 10 games with Louisville at 2-8. In view of what followed, management may have decided it acted too hastily in axing him. As it turned out, Dude was doing all right.

Esterbrook's successor was William Van Winkle Wolf, the team's right fielder. You can call him Chicken. Everybody else did.

Chicken Wolf did not have great success with the Eclipse, going 15-51. The team's shabby showing did not interfere, however, with his personal performance. The Chicken batted .291, tied with center fielder Farmer Weaver — yes, Farmer — as Louisville's leading hitter.

Dan Shannon, the second baseman, was the next manager and he didn't have much luck either, going 9-43. He struggled at bat, too, hitting just .257. Apparently, he couldn't shake off Louisville's losses as easily as Chicken Wolf had.

Esterbrook, Wolf and Shannon never had managed before. At season's end, with nothing else working, the front office opted for experience, importing Jack Chapman, who'd previously piloted Milwaukee, Worcester, Detroit, Buffalo, even Louisville. He had reversed a losing situation at Syracuse earlier that year before accepting the challenge of Louisville.

SADLY, THERE was no immediate improvement as the Eclipse finished its dreadful season by dropping nine of 10 games under Chapman, who, by season's end, must have been yearning for the serenity of Syracuse.

Ahh, but wait til next year. That eternal cry of also-rans proved prophetic for the Eclipse.

In 1890, Louisville staged one of the most astounding single season reversals in the history of sports. The team that had finished 66½ games out of first place and 28½ games behind seventh place Kansas City in 1889, rose up to win the pennant with an 88-44 record.

And you thought the 1969 Mets staged a miracle.

The catalysts for Louisville's success in 1890 were old pal Chicken Wolf and pitchers Red Ehret and Scott Stratton.

Relieved of the pressure of managing, the Chicken won the league batting championship, hitting .363. Ehret, 10-29 in the depressing 1889 season, went 25-14 a year later. Stratton, 3-13 the previous year, lost 13 games again, but this time won 31 and led the league with a 2.36 earned run average.

Besides Wolf, three other Louisville regulars returned to enjoy the turnaround. Shortstop Phil Tomney, who struggled with a .213 batting average in 1889, hit .277 the next year. Third baseman Harry Raymond, who changed his name — he was born Harry Truman — went from .239 to .259. Farmer Weaver's batting average actually dipped a couple of points from .291 to .289, but he slugged three home runs for the pennant winners, which was three more than he'd had the year before.

Chapman, of course, was the toast of Louisville, an instant genius, molder of a powerhouse.

And what about next year? The next year, Louisville finished seventh.

El Paso sends Midland reeling

From Staff Reports

EL PASO — The woes of the Midland Angels continued here Friday night as the El Paso Diablos rocked Midland by a 15-7 count, dropping the Angels to a 1-8 record on the current road trip which opened the second half of action in the Texas League West.

Nothing the Angels seem to do is right during the current slump. They piled up a 14-hit offensive attack and still weren't in the game as El Paso went on another long ball binge.

The Diablos connected for round trippers twice with Joey Meyer hitting his 25th of the season with just over half of the year completed. Angel Rodriguez connected for his first homer of the year in the El Paso assault.

But the Angels had the long ball, too, with three four-baggers as Mark McLemore hit his second, James Randle his third and Kevin Davis his seventh.

Pitching continues to be a trouble spot for the Angels in the slump. Starter Scott Cannon gave up five earned runs in three innings of work and Sueher got tagged for six earned runs in just 1½ innings of relief work as El Paso erupted for seven runs in the fifth inning.

Alfaro led the Diablos with three hits and three RBI while Rodriguez also had three RBI with his homer. Scott Roubidoux had two of El Paso's five doubles and knocked in two runs.

Kevin Davis led Midland with two RBI with a double and homer in the game. McLemore also had two RBI on the night.

The victory keeps El Paso in first place as they have won all three games over Midland in the current series that is to last for six games.

El Paso pitcher Juan Nieves got credit for the victory to run his record to a gaudy 8-1 for the year, but this victory wasn't pretty. Nieves was charged with all seven of Midland's runs in 5½ innings of work, giving up 10 hits and two walks along the way.

Nieves was lifted in the Midland sixth when the Angels had their most productive inning of the night with four runs. El Paso-reliever Doug Norton came in with 3½ innings of shutout relief to pick up his first save of the season.

El Paso had a 4-0 lead before Midland got untracked with a run in the third. The Angels cut the margin to 4-3 in the fourth with two runs, but El Paso struck seven times in the fifth to send Midland reeling again.

The Diablos have demolished Midland pitching with 45 hits over the last three games. Maybe some Fourth of July fireworks can spark the Angels when they return home, July 3.

McEnroe, Navratilova, Lloyd survive; Two seeds fall

Jimmy Connors returns a shot to Kelly Evernden, of New Zealand, during Friday's Wimbledon singles action.

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — John McEnroe overcame questionable line calls and fan taunting, while Martina Navratilova and Chris Evert Lloyd won easily, leading a stampede of seeded players into the third round of the Wimbledon tennis championships Friday.

But two seeds fell on a day when rain interrupted play for 35 minutes, then later halted it entirely.

No. 8 Eliot Teltscher of the United States was ousted by Britain's John Lloyd 6-3, 6-4, 4-6, 3-6, 7-5, and Canada's Carling Bassett, No. 13 among the women, was toppled by Rene Uys of South Africa 6-6, 7-6, 6-3. Uys won the second-set tiebreaker 14-12.

Along with the three No. 1 seeds — for the first time in history, tournament officials couldn't decide who should be the favorite in the women's singles and made Navratilova and Lloyd co-top seeds — others advancing on a chilly, overcast day included Yannick Noah of France, Sweden's Stefan Edberg and Joakim Nystrom, and Americans Jimmy Connors, Johan Kriek, Tim Mayotte and Kevin Curren.

In the women's singles, Claudia Kohde-Kilsch of West Germany and Americans Pam Shriver and Bonnie Gadusek won first-round matches, while Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia, West Germany's Steffi Graf, Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina, and Americans Zina Garrison and Kathy

Wimbledon

Jordan posted second-round victories.

McENROE, WHO is trying to become the first American to win three consecutive men's singles titles at the All England Club, was way off his game, yet still managed to win in straight sets, downing Nduka Odizor of Nigeria 7-6, 6-1, 7-6.

"I started really slowly today and finished a little slowly, but I felt good in the tiebreakers," said the feisty New Yorker. He won both tiebreakers by identical 7-1 scores.

"I felt like I just got by, just enough to win," he said. "There's not a lot you can do when you feel like that."

"I've been real flat a lot more this year when I've come onto the court. I don't really know why. I don't think I would win the tournament if I played like this the rest of the way."

McEnroe twice debated line calls with the umpire, and when a spectator called to him, "Come on, John, play," he reacted by shouting, "Shut up."

Later, when a group of fans disturbed his concentration, he belted: "Quiet."

But he said later that he was not disturbed by the fans' behavior.

"I get more vibes from the people here and I get more fan mail here and in Japan than anywhere else," he said.

NAVATILOVA, WHO has dropped only seven games in two matches, rushed to a 6-4, 5-0 lead over Anne Minter of Australia before the first rain interrupted her match. When they returned to the court, Minter held serve before Navratilova, going after her fourth straight women's crown, closed out the 43-minute match 6-4, 6-1.

"My opponent today was a baseline, which for an Australian is unusual," Navratilova said. "It's strange to play an Aussie who stays back, so I prefer to play her on grass than on anything else."

Chris Evert Lloyd also had an easy time, crushing fellow American Susan Mascarin 6-3, 6-0 in 58 minutes.

"I'm pleased with the way I played, especially considering I watched John's match and I was so emotional," Chris said after watching her husband upset Teltscher. "I hope John doesn't have any more cliffhangers before my matches."

John Lloyd, Britain's last hope in the men's singles who reached the quarterfinals in the U.S. Open last year, grabbed an early two-set lead over Teltscher, who was making his first grass court appearance since playing at Wimbledon in 1977. But Teltscher, ranked 13th in the world, fought back to level at two sets apiece and served for the match at 5-3.

Lloyd then won the next four games, thrilling the center court crowd which cheered his every shot.

IN MATCHES that were halted by the second storm that swept through the area, second-seeded Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia and American Mike Leach were tied at one set apiece. No. 6 Pat Cash of Australia led 5-3 in the decisive fifth set against Chile's Ricardo Acuna. No. 5 Anders Jarryd of Sweden led American Scott Davis 2-1 in sets. Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria, the women's No. 4 seed, led American Terry Holladay 3-0 in the decisive third set. No. 16 Kathy Rinaldi of the United States trailed 2-3 in the opening set against South Africa's Rosalyn Fairbank, and No. 15 Tomas Smid of Czechoslovakia trailed 3-5 in the first set against American Sammy Giammalva.

Bassett, who had trouble with her concentration during a first-round victory over Mercedes Paz of Argentina, ripped through the opening set against Uys. After Uys won three straight games and took a 4-2 lead in the second set, Bassett fought back with a three-game streak for a 5-4 advantage.

'Madrid's on the mound, grab trophy polish'

Eastern pitcher Ks 14 for 5-0 win, city title

Eastern shortstop J.J. Johnson (11) applies a tag to North Central's Chad Thomas to complete a fourth inning double play Friday at Lancaster Park in the finals of Midland City-wide Little League championship tournament.

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

When you have 12-year-old James Madrid on the mound in a championship game, you might start thinking about pulling out the trophy polish.

Madrid struckout 14 North Central batters at Lancaster Park Friday night on his way to a two-hit shutout, giving Eastern Midland's city Little League title with a 5-0 verdict.

Madrid was the name of this game. He retired the first seven North Central batters on strikes to set the tone and ended the game by fanning six of the last seven batters he faced.

In all, Madrid KOed 14 of the 20 batters he faced in the six inning championship contest.

EASTERN SKATED through the city's double elimination tournament in unbeaten style, avoiding what could have been a showdown battle with North Central today. Both of North Central's losses came at the hands of Eastern.

It was Madrid who started Eastern on its title voyage on Monday when he had 16 strikeouts and a no-hitter against Mid-City. He ended the tournament with 30 strikeouts in just 12 innings of work.

"James has been a good pitcher for us," noted Eastern manager Andy Madrid, who is the budding star's brother. "He had 17 strikeouts in a six-inning game last year, and of course, had the 16 last Monday."

"I think he had six no-hitters during the regular season. I don't know how fast he throws because we have never clocked him, but I guess he throws fast enough."

North Central's James Zieba ended Madrid's seven strikeout run in the third inning when he walked, but Zieba rounded first and was tagged out on the play. Maybe the walk disturbed Madrid because he hit Greg Wilburn on the next pitch. He KOed Donny Schroeder to end the inning.

Still, Madrid had some more problems in the fourth when he gave up an infield single to Chad Thomas, losing his no-hit bid. However, Madrid was saved when Robert McNeil popped into a double play before Brad Brunson drove a double to right for the only other hit of the game off Madrid.

Madrid then walked Chris Holcomb before getting his concentration back and that was too soon for North Central. That's when Madrid went on to set six of the next seven down on strikes. Schroeder's grounder back to Madrid in the sixth was the only other fair ball hit. Brunson's double in the fourth was the only ball hit out of the infield against Madrid.

Eastern got what proved to be the winning run off losing pitcher Chris Holcomb in the second inning. Paul Zarate laced a one out double to right and later scored from third on a two-out, bases loaded single by

Cubs keep new streak alive, defeat Pirates, 5-0

Trout throws seven-hitter at punchless Bucs

Associated Press

Suddenly, the Chicago Cubs can't lose for winning.

The Cubs won their third in a row Friday night since ending a club record-tying 13-game losing streak, beating the punchless Pittsburgh Pirates 5-0 behind Steve Trout's seven-hitter.

"Even when we lost 13 in a row, we showed a lot of character," Trout said. "We all kept our sanity pretty well. There were no arguments. We've seemed to have found the thing now."

At least Trout has against the Pirates. Trout, 7-3, is 4-0 against the Pirates in 1985 with an 0.80 earned run average; has both his complete games against them and hasn't lost to Pittsburgh in his last five decisions, dating back to last season.

"It's just one of those things you can't explain, why a guy has so much success against one team in a season," said Cub Manager Jim Frey.

"It seems like when I put guys on base against them, I always get a ground ball," Trout said. "They wore me out my first couple of years in the league and now I'm getting some paybacks."

Trout got 14 ground ball outs and retired the last nine Pirates with the help of a double play after working out of a two-out, bases-loaded jam in the sixth.

"Why is he successful against us? Ground ball, ground ball, ground ball," said Pirate Manager Chuck Tanner.

NL Roundup

Keith Moreland homered and doubled among his three hits and scored twice as the Cubs beat the Pirates for the ninth time in 10 games this season. The loss was the Pirates' sixth in their last seven games.

Trout stranded eight Pirates over the first six innings in pitching his first shutout of the season and first since last Aug. 26. He walked four and struck out three.

The Cubs took a 2-0 lead against Jose DeLeon, 2-10, in the third. Bill Hatcher walked and Ryne Sandberg singled ahead of Gary Matthews' RBI single and Sandberg scored on Leon Durham's force play grounder.

Moreland led off the fifth with a long drive into the left field seats, his sixth homer of the season.

Moreland then doubled after Matthews' leadoff walk in the seventh and the Cubs made it 5-0 when reliever Al Holland walked Steve Lake with the bases loaded and Larry Bowa lofted a sacrifice fly.

Trout, 7-3 lifetime against the Pirates, worked out of the bases-loaded situation in the sixth by getting Sammy Khalifa to ground into a force play.

The Pirates couldn't even steal a run against Trout. They lost their best scoring opportunity in the third when Bill Almon tried to steal home with two out, runners on second and third and Bill Madlock at the plate.

Almon appeared to beat Trout's hurried pitch, but umpire Bob Davidson ruled he missed the plate and called him out after he ran into the dugout when Lake, the Cub catcher, touched home.

Tanner complained briefly about the call but said afterward that Almon didn't touch the plate as he collided with Lake.

Expos 5, Phillies 3

Mike Fitzgerald hit his first two home runs of the season and rookie Mitch Webster had three hits night to lead the Montreal.

Bryn Smith, 9-3, pitched 8½ innings, giving up eight hits, striking out two and walking none before giving way to Tim Burke, who retired the final batter for his second save.

Fitzgerald put the Expos ahead in the second inning when he homered off Charles Hudson, 3-7. He hit his second homer in the eighth.

Mike Schmidt tied the game for the Phillies with his ninth home run of the season in the fourth. It was Schmidt's 800th career extra base hit and his 40th home run in Olympic Stadium.

Montreal got that run back in the fourth. Hubie Brooks led off with a single and went to third on Terry Francona's base hit to right. He scored on Al Newman's grounder.

The Expos scored again in the fifth when Brooks doubled home Vance Law and tallied in the sixth when Webster tripled home Tim Lincecum, who had singled.

Philadelphia got its second run in the eighth on pinch-hitter Von Hayes' run-scoring single.

An RBI single by Glenn Wilson after Schmidt's 801st extra base hit, a ninth-inning double, closed out the scoring.

Cardinals 3, Mets 2

John Tudor won his sixth straight game with Tom Nieto and Tom Herr supplying the offense.

Tudor, 7-7, gave up nine hits in 7½ innings, walked one and struck out four. Ken Dayley, the third Cardinal pitcher, came on in relief with two out in the eighth to get his sixth save.

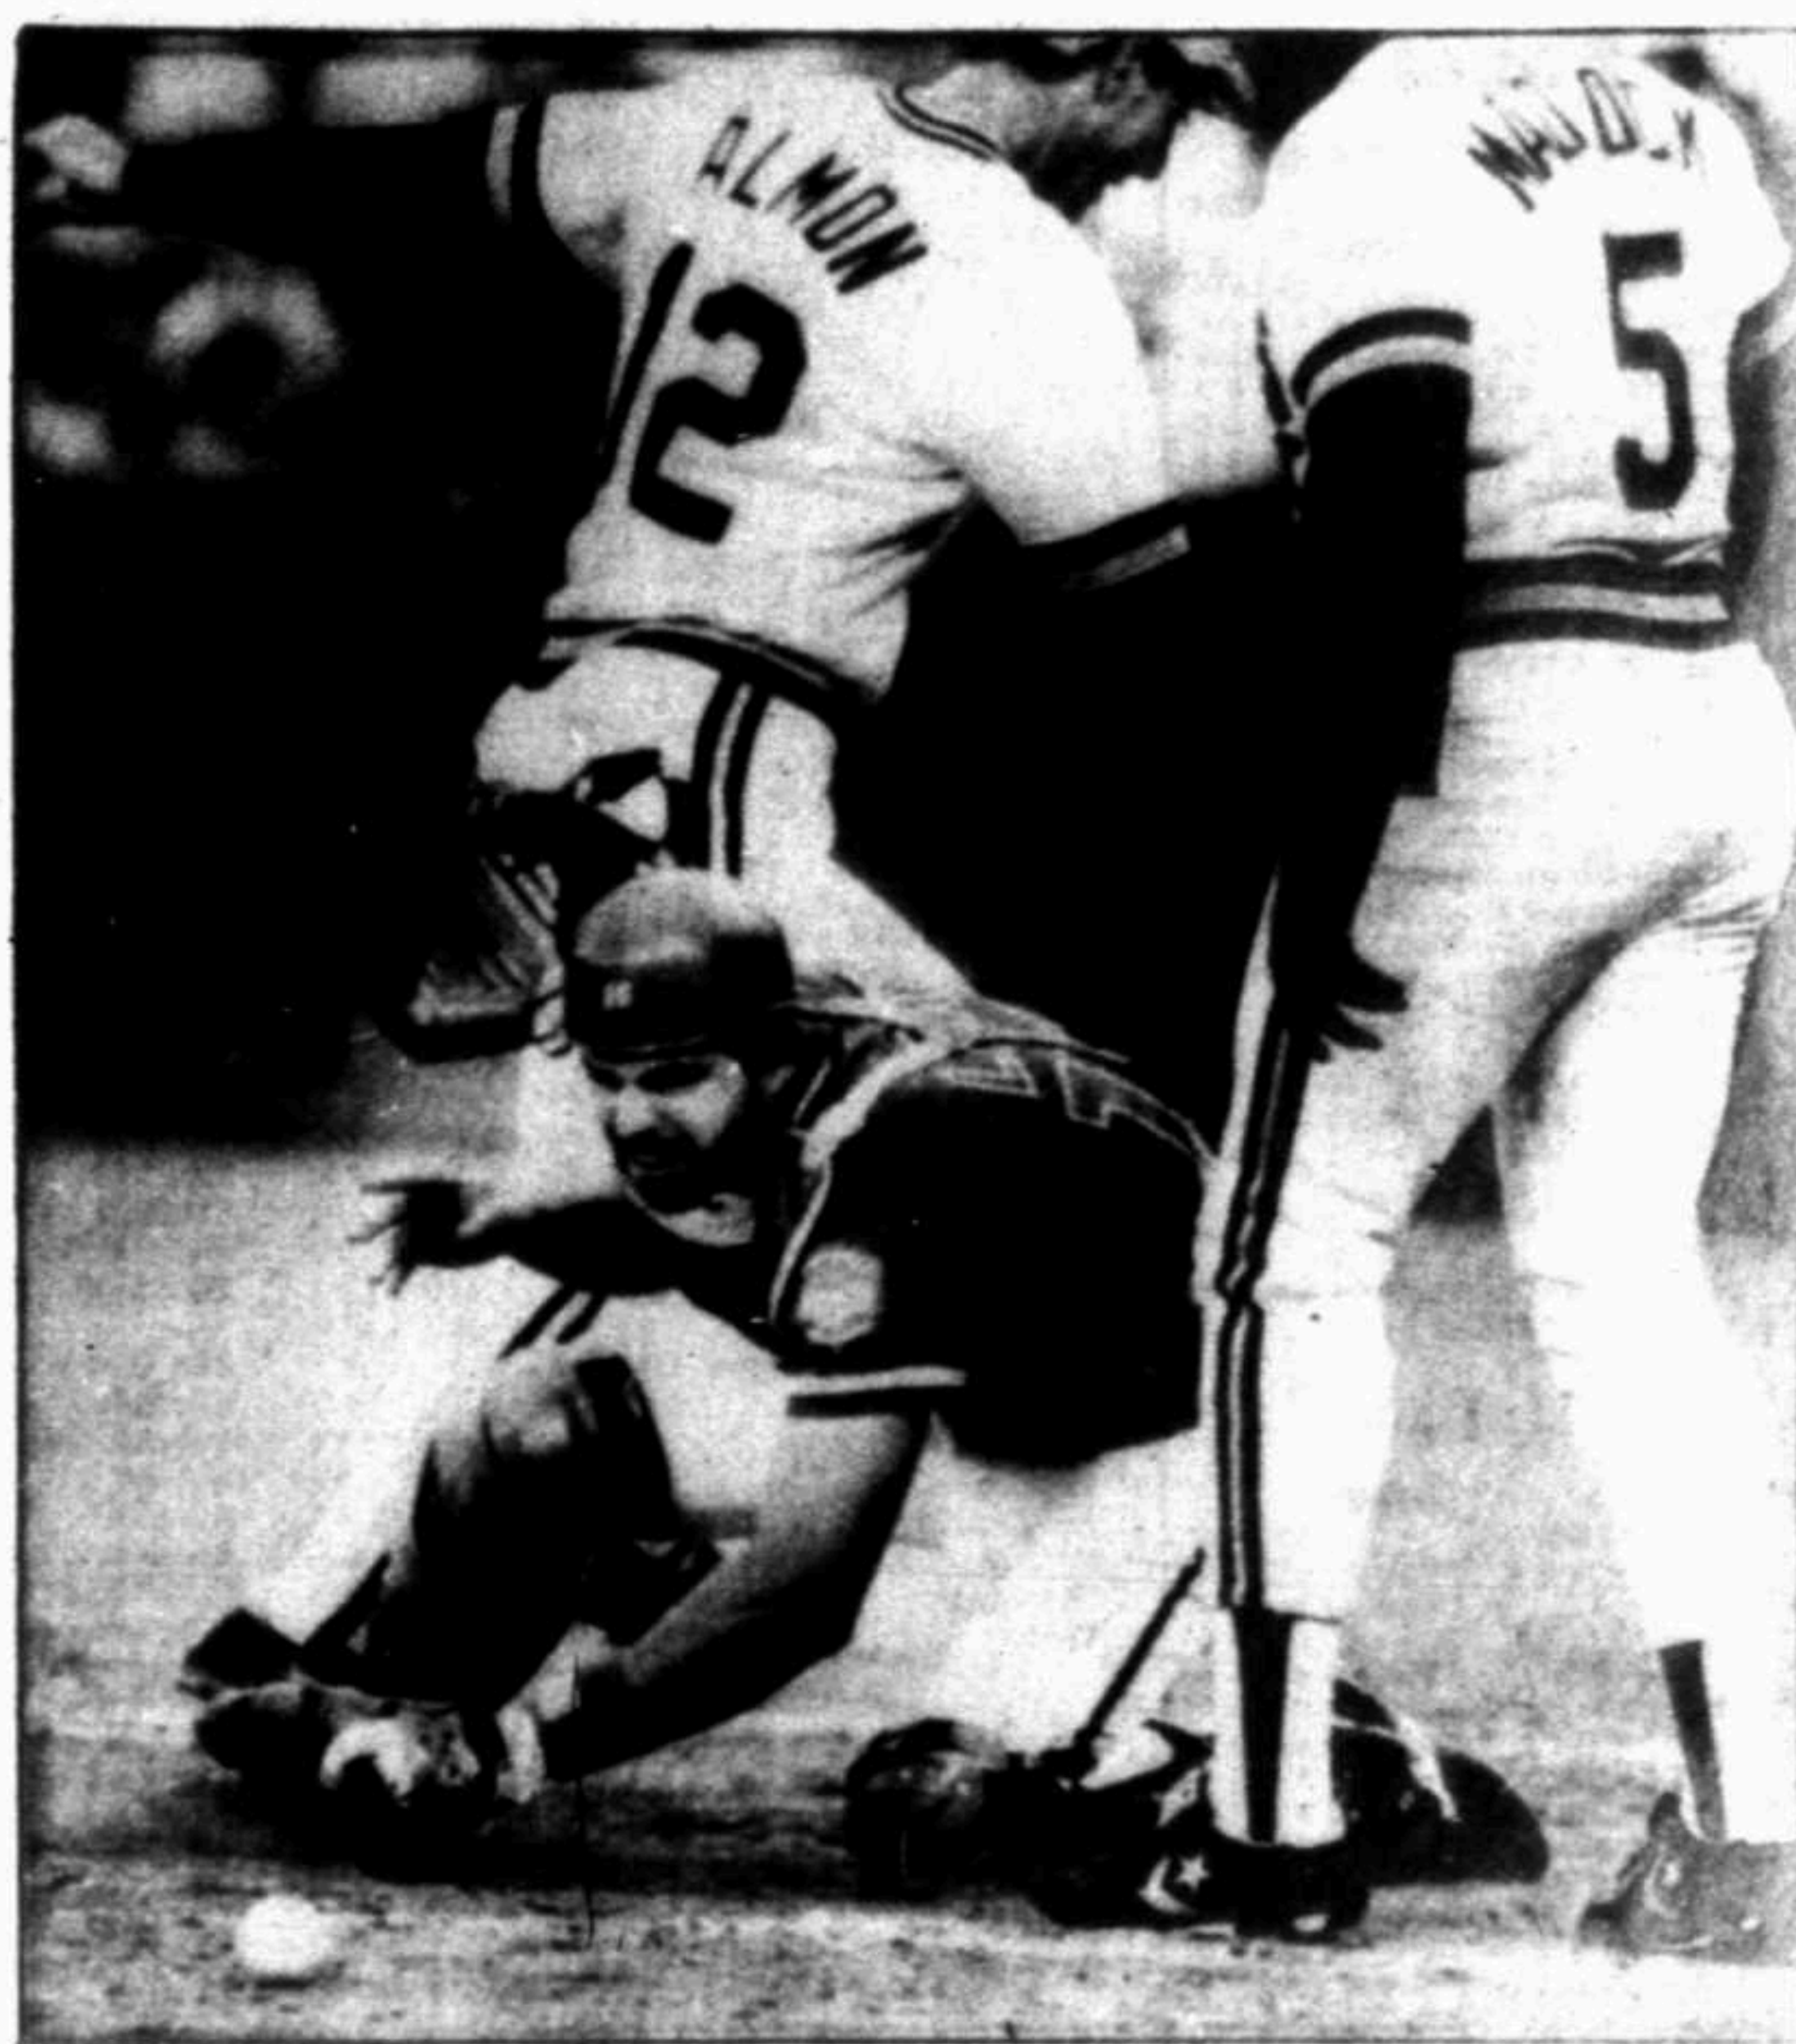

Nieto delivered a two out, two-run single in the second and Herr, the league leader in runs batted in, hit his third home run of the season, a solo shot in the third.

The Mets got their runs via George Foster's 11th homer, in the seventh, and Mookie Wilson's third, in the eighth.

The Cards, now 22-10 at home, remained a half-game behind Montreal while the third-place Mets fell 3½ games behind in the National League East.

After a 1-7 start, the left-handed Tudor has allowed just seven earned runs in 47 innings during June for a 1.34 earned run average.

The Cardinals broke on top after Andy Van Slyke and Ivan DeJesus singled off Met starter Ed Lynch, 4-5, with one out in the second.

Pittsburgh's Bill Almon (12) steals home as ball skips away from Chicago Cubs' catcher Steve Lake during third inning Friday in a game the Cubs won, 5-0.

IAAF gives Nehemiah track green light

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The International Amateur Athletic Federation has decided to allow San Francisco 49ers wide receiver Renaldo Nehemiah to run track again, according to a newspaper report.

Friday's San Francisco Examiner quoted Nehemiah's agent, Ron Stanko, saying of the ruling by the federation, "I was there. I have the decision. It's over. Three years of fighting is over."

Nehemiah, the world record holder in the 110-meter high hurdles, has been trying to gain the right to run in amateur track events ever since he joined the 49ers in 1982. Stanko said.

The Examiner said officials from the federation, which governs international track and field, refused to confirm or deny the reported decision.

"It's not being released yet," a spokeswoman was quoted as saying.

But Nehemiah and Stanko have scheduled a news conference for Monday at which they are expected to announce the decision.

The move to reinstate Nehemiah, which does not allow him to compete in the summer Olympics, would affect other athletes as well.

"If it goes the way we want it to, it applies to a whole slew of guys," said Pete Cava.

High winds can't keep Zembriski from seniors lead

STATELINE, Nev. (AP) — Walter Zembriski fought off 30 mile-per-hour winds and a charging Roberto DeVicenzo to maintain his lead at the halfway point of the $225,000 U.S. Senior Open golf tournament.

Zembriski, a 50-year-old from Orlando, Fla., hit just nine of Edgewood Tahoe golf course's 18 greens in regulation, but a deft touch with his sand wedge enabled him to post a one-over-par 73.

His 36-hole total of 141 led DeVicenzo, who shot a 68 Friday, by a shot.

Defending champion Miller

Barber held third at 143 and Gay Brewer came in at even-par 144. Barber shot a 72 and Brewer a 71 Friday.

"My father called me last night and said, 'What are you trying to do, win something...'" said Zembriski, a Florida mini-tour veteran playing in his first PGA Senior Tour.

Jays take first game in showdown with Tigers, 2-0

Associated Press

George Bell hit a two-run homer and Dave Stieb throttled Detroit on three hits Friday night as the Toronto Blue Jays beat the Tigers 2-0 in the first game of their weekend showdown series.

The victory, before 48,002 fans at Tiger Stadium, gave the American League East-leading Blue Jays a 3½-game lead over second-place Detroit.

Stieb, 8-5, struck out six and walked two in pitching his fourth complete game.

Dan Petry, 9-6, who has won only once since May 22, tossed a five-hitter. Petry now has pitched 21 straight innings without benefit of a run.

Willie Upshaw stroked a leadoff single in the Toronto second and rode home on Bell's 14th homer of the season, a shot into the upper deck in right.

Stieb was in trouble twice, in the third inning and again in the seventh.

Chet Lemon led off the third with a double and Tom Brookins followed with a walk. But Lou Whitaker's bunt went right to Stieb, who threw to third baseman Rance Mulliniks for forceout. Stieb then got Alan Trammell on a foul pop and struck out Kirk Gibson to end the threat.

In the seventh, Stieb walked Darrell Evans with one out and gave up a two-out infield single to Larry Herndon. Stieb retired Lemon on a groundout to escape that jam.

The Tigers had only two other baserunners. John Grubb reached on a two-out error by Upshaw at first base in the second, and Dave Bergman led off the eighth with a pinch-single.

Rangers 7, A's 5

Toby Harrah hit a two-run homer in the eighth inning to lift the Texas Rangers over Oakland.

Harrah's sixth homer came one out after Wayne Tolleson led off the eighth with a single. The home run helped blunt an Oakland comeback that saw the A's overcome an early 5-0 deficit and tie the game in the top of the eighth on Dwayne Murphy's bases-empty homer, his 11th.

Reliever Greg Harris, 2-1, got the victory. Keith Atherton, 3-4 took the loss.

Texas scored in the first when Oddie McDowell bunted for a single and later scored on Buddy Bell's sacrifice fly.

Harrah started a four-run fourth inning by drawing his 69th walk of the year, tops in the major leagues. One out later, Pete O'Brien singled and Gary Ward followed with his fifth home run. Don Slaught doubled home the final run of the inning, chasing starter Chris Codiroli.

AL Roundup

The A's came back for three runs in the sixth. Carney Lansford doubled and Mike Davis followed with a single to center, moving Lansford to third. Dave Kingman followed by hitting into a double play with Lansford scoring. Dusty Baker then hit his ninth homer, and Murphy followed with single and moved to second when McDowell let the ball roll between his legs in center field. Mike Heath then drove home Murphy with a single.

Lansford singled home an Oakland run in the seventh after a two-base error by O'Brien at first base.

Red Sox 6, Orioles 1
Mike Easler ripped four straight hits and drove in two runs as Boston whipped Baltimore.

The Red Sox, shut out by Detroit in their last two games, quickly ended the scoreless string against Storm Davis, 4-4. Boston scored twice in the first inning and added single runs in the second, third, fourth and fifth and sent Baltimore to its fourth straight loss.

Bruce Hurst, 3-7, banished to the bullpen last month, started in place of ailing Bruce Kison and scattered six hits through seven innings.

Hurst, who left the game because of a slight groin pull, struck out seven, including Fred Lynn three times and Eddie Murray twice, and did not walk a batter.

Gary Roenicke spoiled Hurst's shutout bid by leading off the seventh with his sixth homer of the season.

Boston jumped to a 2-0 lead in the first as Wade Boggs walked and took third on a single by Jim Rice. Rice then stole second and Boggs scored when catcher Rick Dempsey's throw to second was low for an error. One out later, Easler grounded the first of his four singles to center.

In the second, Rich Gedman doubled and scored on Steve Lyons' two-out single. Easler singled home a run in the third before Ken Dixon replaced Davis.

Boggs had an RBI double in the fourth and Marty Barrett had a run scoring single in the fifth.

Yankees 3, Brewers 2
Ron Guidry recovered from a shaky first inning and recorded his eighth consecutive victory.

Winfield's two-run blast in the first inning cleared the 111-foot mark in left-center field and tied the score two outs after hitting Rickey Henderson led off with a double. His 23rd hit in 39 at Yankee Stadium was the 17th homer of the season. Danny Darwin, 6-7, who has been tagged for at least one home run in 12 of his last 13 starts.

The Yankees, who have won four games in a row and nine of their last 12, went ahead 3-2 in the third inning. Ken Griffey drew a leadoff walk, went to third on a single by Don Mattingly and scored when Winfield grounded into a double play.

They made it 4-2 on Mattingly's RBI single in the fifth after Griffey led off with a pop-fly double to short center, and Mike Pagliarulo singled home the final run in the eighth.

Guidry, 9-3, who had shut out Baltimore and Detroit in his two previous outings, allowed six hits over seven innings. His winning streak is the longest by an American League pitcher this season.

Brian Fisher relieved Guidry to start the eighth and got two outs before Dave Righetti pitched the final 1½ innings for his 13th save.

The Brewers took a 2-0 lead in the top of the first. Paul Molitor hit the second pitch of the game for a double — the Brewers' 36th consecutive game with at least one extra-base hit — and Charlie Moore walked. After Cecil Cooper forced Moore, Molitor scored on Robin Yount's 400-foot double to left-center and Cooper beat shortstop Bobby Meacham's throw to the plate on Ted Simmons' grounder to short.

Twins 5, White Sox 4
Kent Hrbek drove in two runs and Roy Smalley reached base five times on two hits and three walks.

Viola, 9-6, gave up nine hits and struck out six over eight innings to beat the slumping White Sox. Viola took a 5-1 lead into the eighth, but surrendered an RBI single to Tom Paciorek and Greg Walker's two-run homer, his 13th of the season.

Ron Davis pitched the ninth for his eighth save as Chicago lost for the seventh time in its last eight games.

The Twins took a 1-0 lead against Bruce Tanner, 1-2, in the first on singles by Kirby Puckett and Smalley and a sacrifice fly by Hrbek.

Carlton Fisk beat out an infield single in the Chicago second and scored when Greg Walker's routine fly ball dropped 20 feet away from left fielder Mickey Hatcher, who completely lost the ball in the twilight haze.

Minnesota broke the tie in the fifth on a double by Smalley, who scored on Tom Brunansky's bad-hop single.

The Twins added two runs in the sixth. Greg Gagne, who also had three hits, walked and went to third on a single by Mark Salas. Gagne scored on a fielder's choice by Puckett, and Salas scored following another walk and a fielder's choice grounder by Hrbek.

Burns tied for lead despite double bogey on 17

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — George Burns overcame a double bogey on the 17th hole on Friday to claim a share of the lead with Bill Sander and David Ogren after two rounds of the $500,000 St. Jude Memphis Classic golf tournament.

Burns, Sander and Ogren each finished 36 holes with 8-under-par scores of 136 at Colonial Country Club. Ogren had a 70 and Sander a 71.

Burns, a 36-year-old Baiting Hollow, N.Y. pro in his 10th year on the tour, had the second-round lead all to himself after getting to nine under through 16 holes. Then came the trouble at the 17th.

"I made six birdies, a double-bogey and a real dumb bogey," was the way Burns described his round. "For the way I played, I'm lucky to be tied for the lead."

Burns, who began play on No. 10, said the trouble on his 17th hole — No. 8 on the course — was "a matter of club selection. I hit a very poor tee shot ... It went out of bounds."

"I was real disappointed the way I played the eighth hole. I was determined to play the last hole well." He hit a 7-iron approach within four feet and sank the birdie putt to pull even with Sander and Ogren.

Sander, who had earned only $712 on the pro tour this year, said he "didn't feel as loose today as I did yesterday" when he tied Sutton for the lead.

The Seattle, Wash., golfer got a birdie on No. 8 and, "oh pretty well relaxed," it was tougher today.

John Mahaffey, who had a hole in one while shooting an opening 67, shot a 71 Friday and was tied at 137 with Richard Zokol, who had a 69.

It feels good to be up a 66 with a 70," he said.

John Mahaffey, who had a hole in one while shooting an opening 67, shot a 71 Friday and was tied at 137 with Richard Zokol, who had a 69.

Larry, who had a 69, was in the 216-yard 12th hole to carve out the best round of the day, a 66 that tied him at 138 with Russ Cochran and Bob Tway. Nelson shook off a bogey at No. 11 with his ace on the 12th hole, then added birdies at 15 and 18.

Nelson, playing in a threesome with Burns and Scott Hoch, barely missed a second ace when his approach to the 5th hole came within an inch of the cup. On No. 12, "I hit a 3-iron and George said he thought it looked like it was going in. I knew it was going to be close. It just trickled right in," Nelson said. Cochran had a 68 and Tway a 69. Johnny Miller, with a 68, and Andy Bean, with a 70, were at 139, five under and three strokes off the lead.

Hal Sutton, whose 65 on Thursday earned him a share of the 18-hole lead, plummeted to a 76 on Friday and was at 141, well off the pace.

Among those failing to make the cut at 1-over-par 145 was U.S. Open runnerup T.C. Chen of Taiwan, who struggled to a 76 on Friday for a midway score of 148.

Inkster, King knotted at three-under par

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — Juli Inkster bogeyed the final hole to drop into a tie for the lead with Betsy King at 3-under-par 69 after Friday's first round of the rain-soaked $250,000 LPGA Lady Keystone Open.

Inkster was four under par and a stroke ahead of King after birdies at the 16th and 17th holes of the 6,348-yard West Course at Hershey Country Club. But Inkster put her approach shot on the 401-yard 18th hole into a bunker and took a bogey five.

Patty Sheehan and Kathy Whitworth, two of the favorites here, were joined at 2-under-par 70 by Julie Payne, Barbra Mirrahe, Nancy White-Brewer, Pat Meyers and Lynn Connelly in a seven-way dead-lock for third.

"I missed only one green all day but I never got the ball really close to the pin," said King, who had four birdies. "I just didn't have that great feeling when you know you can get it close."

Inkster, who had six birdies, said she putted with confidence.

"This is the first time this year that I felt I had a good touch with my putter," she said. "It has been a frustrating year. I feel I'm playing almost as well as I did last year, but I haven't been winning."

On the 18th, she said, "I got a little too cute. I cut the shot too much and the ball went into the trap."

Sheehan said she "had a boring round, but you can put up with a boring round when you're two under par."

Mirrahe, who has never won in seven years on the tour, lost a chance to tie for the lead when she bogeyed the final hole.

White-Brewer is a rookie who has missed the cut in eight of 14 tournaments. Payne, who missed the first 14 tournaments this season, has not won a tournament in eight years. Meyers has just one tour victory in 10 years.

Former champs Nancy Lopez and Pat Bradley were among eight players tied at 71, and defending champion Amy Alcott and two-time winner Jan Stephenson had 73s.

Martha Nause, who tied for second here last year, was even-par when a shoulder injury forced her out of the competition on the 16th hole.

King, last year's leading money winner, drilled a 50-foot birdie putt on the 405-yard opening hole, but quickly lost that edge by three-putting the second green for a bogey.

A 20-foot birdie putt at No. 8 enabled King to make the turn at one under, then sank birdie putts of four feet at the 11th hole and 20 feet at the 17th. She missed a 15-foot try on the final hole that would have given her a 68.

Inkster bogeyed No. 1, but knocked an eight-iron 12 feet from the pin for a birdie on No. 2. The 1984 Rookie of the Year was two under at the turn after birdie putts of three feet at No. 3 and 10 feet at No. 6.

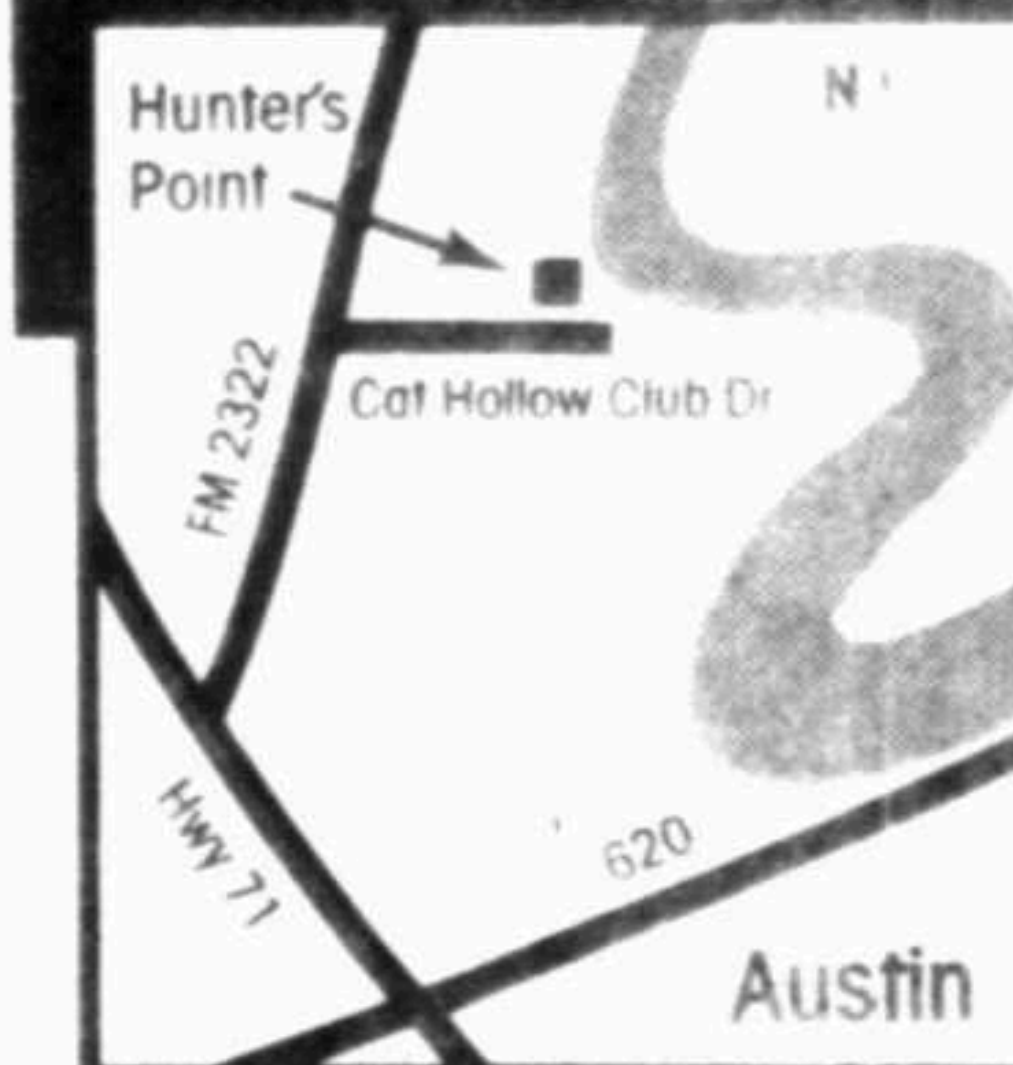

After going three under at 12, Inkster bogied 14 after driving her tee shot into a fairway trap. She had the lead briefly after birdies at 16 and 17, only to fall back when she knocked a six-iron into the trap at 18.

'Dogs Dooley plans to seek Senate seat

ATLANTA (AP)—University of Georgia football coach and athletic director Vince Dooley plans to seek the Democratic nomination for the U.S. Senate next year, according to a report by an Atlanta newspaper columnist.

Bill Shipp, columnist for The Atlanta Journal and The Atlanta Constitution, reported in a column in Saturday's editions that Dooley "has informed close friends, including university President Fred Davison, that he plans to enter the Senate contest as a Democrat to take on incumbent Republican Mack Mattingly."

Dooley was in Florida. His wife, Barbara, said in a telephone interview from their Athens home that she was aware the column was being published, but would have no comment.

Athletic Department spokesman Norm Reilly said Dooley would hold a press conference at 2 p.m. Saturday at Hartsfield Atlanta International Airport to respond.

Kelly returns at quarterback for playoff-bound Gamblers

Associated Press

The Houston Gamblers, who have had nothing but misfortune lately, finally have something to give thanks for — Jim Kelly will be back for the United States Football League playoffs.

Kelly, who was en route to a raft of professional football passing records when he injured his right knee May 28, will be back at quarterback for the Gamblers Saturday when they play at Birmingham in the first of four USFL playoff games this weekend.

The Gamblers started the season 5-0 and looked like the class of the USFL. But they finished 10-8 and were 1-3 in the four games Kelly missed, making the playoffs as the eighth and last seed. At the same time, home attendance fell to an average of 19,129, off almost 50 percent from last year, the last paycheck was missed, and the team will likely be somewhere else when the USFL resumes in 1986.

The Gamblers-Stallions game will be televised nationally by ABC as will Sunday's game in Oakland between the Invaders and the Tampa Bay Bandits. Oakland, the Western Conference champion, finished with a 12-4-1 record and are the top seed in the playoffs.

Denver will be at Memphis Sunday and the defending champion Baltimore Stars will visit the New Jersey Generals Monday night in a game that ESPN cable has declined to televise in favor of its rerun of last summer's Olympics.

Birmingham, who won the USFL's Eastern Conference title with a 13-5 record that was the league's second best, is favored by a touchdown over the Gamblers. The Stallions also have the league's best defense.

"It doesn't matter that we play Houston," said Dave Pureifory, end and defensive captain for the Stallions. "There are no easy marks in this game. People think that, but there are no easy marks."

Houston Coach Jack Pardee says he thinks Kelly, who led the league with 4,623 yards and 39 touchdown passes despite missing four games "gives confidence to this team" and added that the playoff may have lived up to his quarterback's arm.

Kelly says he's fit. "I had one of my best practices ever," he said Wednesday after his first workout in four weeks. "It even surprised me a little. Right now I'm having no pain at all."

New Jersey may also have back its injured quarterback, Doug Flutie, who missed the final three regular-season games with a broken collarbone. He was replaced during the interim by Ron Reeves as the Generals lost two of three to finish 11-7.

"I can run, I can throw, it's a matter of whether I can take a hit," Flutie said after resuming practice Thursday. "If the doctor said I couldn't play, I'd probably die."

But the final decision on Flutie may rest with Coach Walt Michaels and Michaels isn't talking.

Andretti bests own U.S. Grand Prix qualifying time

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Mario Andretti outdueled Danny Sullivan Friday to win the provisional pole for the U.S. Grand Prix at the Meadowlands in record fashion.

Andretti, the winner of both the pole and race last year in the inaugural Indy-car event at the sprawling New Jersey sports complex, shattered his own qualifying mark on the 1.68-mile, 11-turn circuit.

He toured the course, twisting through the parking lots and service roads between Giants Stadium and the Byrne Arena, at an average speed of 98.452 mph. That was considerably quicker than the 96.012 that took the pole a year ago.

In fact, the top three qualifiers Friday were faster than Andretti's 1984 lap, with Sullivan at 97.244 and Bobby Rahal at 96.030.

THE FINAL 24-car grid will not be determined, however, until after another 60-minutes of qualifying on Saturday. The best single lap by each car during the two sessions of time trials will set the starting lineup.

Rain threatened throughout the day, only spitting occasionally. And more of the same was forecast for Saturday.

Andretti, in the Beatrice Lola T-900 campaigned by Chicago businessman Carl Haas and actor Paul Newman, said that he did his best lap on slick (dry weather) tires, rather than grooved rain tires.

"There were a few sprinkles, but all that does is cool the tires off and make you go faster," said Andretti, who can tie A.J. Foyt's all-time record of 53 poles if he holds on Saturday. "The conditions out there were really optimum."

Sullivan, driving a March 85C owned by Roger Penske, was quickest in the final practice session Friday morning, but switched to his backup car for qualifying after hearing a "strange noise" in the engine of the first car.

"We couldn't get the engine changed in the car in time (for qualifying), so we had to switch to the 'T' (backup) car," said the Indianapolis 500 winner, who trails Andretti in the season point standings 81-47.

"The 'T' car was set up for the wet and we tried to throw everything on it we could in the time we had, but we couldn't get it exactly right in half an hour. Still, it was obviously pretty close because our times were about the same (in the morning and afternoon sessions)."

"The thing is, you don't know if it's going to rain tomorrow (Saturday), so when you get a dry spell, you've got to go for it; take a shot at it in case it turns out to be wet tomorrow."

BEHIND RAHAL'S March, other quick laps were turned in by Australian Geoff Brabham, at 96.006 in a March; Brazilian Emerson Fittipaldi, at 95.924 in a March; and Al Unser Jr., at 95.694 in a Lola.

Qualifying was split into two groups, with 32 cars posting official laps. During the session, Roberto Guerrero of Colombia, Ed Pimm and Jim Crawford of Scotland all hit the concrete barriers that line most of the circuit, and Indy-car newcomers Jan Lammers of Holland and Roberto Moreno of Brazil tangled briefly. None of the drivers was injured.

A sale of any kind is basically for one reason, that being to reduce the amount of inventory so new items may be purchased. This sale in that regard is no different than any other, however, the difference is that we are not gathering merchandise just to have a sale for the sake of having a sale. Our reasons are: (1) We have many one of a kind or discontinued items we need to close out for new item floor space. (2) Through the course of a year items get damaged in one way or another and cannot be sold at regular price. Therefore, we want to emphasize the savings you get on quality merchandise that could easily cost you double at other times.

Pastor uses cartoons to express views

NEW YORK MILLS, Minn. (AP) — Ray Johnson says being a small-town pastor and a political cartoonist requires a special kind of balancing act.

"Nothing is sacred in their viewpoint," Johnson says of cartoonists. "While I understand and appreciate that, I have some problems with it. Because of my role in our small town, I naturally can't take that kind of approach. It would be in poor taste."

"But I also kind of envy that freedom," Johnson says of cartoonists.

Johnson combines his avocation as a commercial artist and cartoonist with his vocation as pastor of St. Peter's Lutheran Church of New York Mills. His cartoons appear regularly in the New York Mills Herald and in several daily newspapers and church publications.

While Johnson uses cartoons to express his religious, as well as political, views, he sometimes finds those same religious views complicate his work as a cartoonist.

As art draftsmen, political humorists are free to create outrageous caricatures of politicians, poke fun at human nature and make poignant statements about the inadequacies of our society. Johnson revels in having that natural ability to cartoon, but he strives not to abuse it.

"To me, people are sacred and their lives are sacred, and they have a right to that special kind of dignity. And I don't care if it's Richard Nixon, or whoever," he says. "I suppose that's the danger — to find that kind of balance."

In his cartoons, which take their humor from rural and small-town characters, Johnson says he tries to preserve the integrity of individuals and organizations while illustrating the natural humor of people — humor that helps us cope with life's sorrows and celebrate its joys.

"I really appreciate people — and every small town and every neighborhood has them — people who are humorists. I try to capture some of that. It's not falling-down kind of humor, it's just those things that remind us we ought not to take everything so seriously," he explains.

Johnson sees humor as "a form of grace" at which some people are natural. He focuses on people he's familiar with — cartooning stalwart Minnesotans, or reluctant city officials, or theologians at conventions getting carried away by their own importance.

"I appreciate a total picture of things. There are times when we forget that the average person lives a combination of sadness and celebration. And while we might call a tragedy 'news,' that does not sum up what life is. That's only a part of what life is," he says. "In cartooning, I like to celebrate that joy and dignity and roundness of life."

While Johnson meets a 10:30 a.m. deadline every Sunday to deliver a sermon, he's less comfortable meeting a weekly deadline for cartoons. He sells his cartoons on an "as-available" basis.

Johnson, a native of northern Michigan, got his formal training as a commercial art student in Chicago. He worked there for three years before going into the ministry.

He began cartooning about eight years ago, busying himself at Lutheran Church of American syndical conventions drawing cartoons for church publication.

Johnson's cartoons have won the Minnesota Newspaper Association Best Editorial Cartoon Award (in the circulation category 2,501-4,000) for the past three years. This year's winner is a strong statement against prayer in public schools. Johnson says the cartoon takes a stab at people's hypocrisy and underlines his belief in separation of church and state.

"My concern is that people are really not stumbling all over themselves to pray, but they want their kids to pray in public schools," he explains.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Downings singing at Church of Nazarene

The Downings, one of America's best-known gospel singing groups, will be appearing in concert at First Church of the Nazarene, 1208 W. Wall, at 6 p.m. on Sunday.

Since the group was formed in 1969, it has received two of gospel music's most coveted awards, the Dove Award and the Singing News Award. Hit songs include "I've Got Confidence," "Greater is He This is in Me," and "Operator." The recording hit, "I've Got Confidence" stayed on the charts for more than 26 months.

The group is composed of Paul and Ann Downing, Wendi Watson and Kim Michael. Paul Downing, leader, has been involved in gospel music most of his life, singing professionally with The Rangers Quartet and then the Dixie Echoes. Today his rich bass voice is highly sought for commercials and narrative readings.

His wife, Ann, grew up in gospel music and started singing with the Speer Family in 1963. The Downings were organized following her marriage to Paul in 1968.

Wendi Watson, soprano, and for the past three years a featured vocalist and backup singer for the Jimmy Swaggart Crusade, is from Wilmington, Del., and joined the group in 1984.

Kim Michael, tenor, is the son of a Methodist minister and is from Peoria, Ill. He holds degrees in music and teaching from Bradley University there.

The singing group's newest single, "Lead Me To That Rock," is a chart breaker, according to the record's producer.

POSITIVE THINKING

'Must go down to the seas again,' for peace of mind

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

We need quietness as we need food and water, as we need sunshine and restful sleep. The cumulative effect of peaceful thoughts is amazing.

Once I addressed the annual convention of the National Automobile Dealers' Association in the civic auditorium at Miami Beach, Fla. The audience consisted of some five thousand men engaged in one of the most competitive enterprises in America. The meeting came at a time when this particular industry was under considerable economic pressure. There was, in that group, not a little concentrated tension and frustration.

That morning, before going to the auditorium to give my speech, I was in my hotel room working on a manuscript, but ideas were not flowing. At that moment I had to deal with some personal tendency toward frustration. I became aware that the mounting tension within me was blocking the flow of creative ideas. So, I relaxed and looked out at the beach where the sea was washing softly on the sandy shore and the ocean breezes were moving gently among the palm trees. (Have you ever noticed the relaxed and graceful manner in which a palm tree lies over against the wind or moves with its motion? Their fronds move with a dignified sweep and rhythmic gracefulness and there is complete absence of rigidity.)

I went to the beach which was deserted at that hour. I was alone with the sea and the sky and the winds and the sun and the palm trees. Looking at the sky I recalled that Ralph Waldo Emerson called it "the daily bread of the soul." As I listened to the deep roar of the sea I began to feel quiet, relaxed, and peaceful. What healing there is in the sea, sand, sun, and wind! Frustration and tension left me.

Then I went to speak to the Automobile Dealers. The two speakers who preceded me talked of how difficult it would be to get business that year. They described all the trouble that was in store for the dealers. You could sense the deepening gloom.

When my turn came to speak, I felt moved to ask how many of them in the days they had been in convention at Miami Beach had gone apart and communed with the great ocean that lay before them. I told of my experience before coming to the meeting and quoted a verse from Masfield's poem:

*I must go down to the seas again, to the lonely sea and the sky,
And all I ask is a tall ship and a star to steer her by.*

I suggested that each man go down to the sea, preferably alone, and spend a little time with the sky and with the vast waters. While making this suggestion, I noticed that a curious hush fell over that great audience.

On the plane coming north I met a man who said, "I was sitting in that convention nervous, exasperated, frustrated. I heard you make that statement about your experience by the sea and it appealed to me. So, after the meeting I went to a lonely spot on the beach. I walked along the shore and observed the sandpipers running near the edge of the water. I listened to the roar of the sea. I sat there a long time watching twilight come and the long shadows fall across the waters."

He hesitated, then continued with some embarrassment, for obviously he was deeply moved. "I happened to remember that story about Jesus being on the sea with His disciple and how they were frightened by the storm and He quieted the sea. And I remember particularly where it said, 'And there was a great calm.'

Suddenly I felt peaceful and quiet. It was one of the most moving experiences of my life. So, I have come away from that convention, not discouraged, but encouraged — filled with hope and optimism. I know that I am going to have a good year not only in selling, but in living as well." It was evident that he had experienced a spiritual, mental, and even physical rejuvenation.

Fourteen-year-old Jason White, who lives in Houston, was born with a rare digestive disorder that has made it impossible for him to eat normally, so all of his nutrition is provided by a special high-calorie liquid which is pumped through a catheter into his abdomen.

Oldest person with rare disorder is 14

HOUSTON (AP) — Everyday a small pump feeds a special high-calorie liquid through a catheter in Jason White's abdomen.

The formula replaces the regular meals that most people eat and that Jason, at age 14, has never had.

The teen-ager has vasoactive intestinal polypeptide — or VIP — syndrome, only 40 cases of which have been reported in the world. He is the oldest person to be raised receiving all his nutrients intravenously, said his doctor, Stanley J. Dudrick, chief of nutritional support services at Houston's St. Luke's Episcopal Hospital.

Dudrick said he believes the illness is caused by a tumor that releases the VIP hormone, which is found in most humans in tiny amounts. But doctors have been unable to find the tumor, and excessive amounts of the hormone leave Jason unable to digest food.

Jason couldn't keep his milk down from the time he was born and had to be fed intravenously. Doctors removed his stomach when he was 2, thinking it would eliminate the problem.

But Dudrick later implanted an artificial stomach.

Jason receives three liters of a 3,000-calorie nutritional formula each day. He wears a special vest developed by Dudrick that allows him to carry the formula pouches with him. A small pump attached to the bag infuses the solution through a catheter imbedded in the boy's abdomen.

The unusual vest has sometimes drawn the attention of strangers, who have told him he's too old to play astronaut.

"You can't explain it to regular people," Jason said.

He says he does not miss eating because it uses time that is better spent at other activities.

"People would be better off if they don't eat. Think of it as three hours a day or so spent eating. Use that time to do other things," he said.

Jason is susceptible to infections, so he does not attend school. Instead, he has tutors at home.

His family is from Hope, Ark., but he lives with his mother and grandmother in a small Houston house offered by a teacher. Jason's father suffers from severe heart disease and lives in Arkansas.

Recently, Jason took a girl to a movie for his first date, but he says he gets along best with adults.

"I'm different from regular people in a lot of ways. All these years of isolation in the hospital — I don't get along well with people my own age," he said. "I get along well with older people."

Dudrick says Jason is very intelligent and has an IQ of between 127 and 137. The teen-ager enjoys reading, is interested in science and has about 230 toy robots and models.

"I want to win the Nobel Prize before I'm 40 and live with my robots," Jason said.

'Heroism certainly very much alive'

PITTSBURGH (AP) — More than once, Joe Manford warned his girlfriend to be careful as they pushed an inner tube into a pond one warm afternoon last summer.

He could swim. She couldn't. Despite the warnings, Sumitra Solanki slipped through the center of the tube and was swallowed by dark, murky water 65 feet deep.

Manford dived in to save her, but he disappeared beneath the surface. A rafter rescued Ms. Solanki.

Manford's body was recovered from the Hagerstown, Md., pond later that day, July 14, 1984, two days before his 28th birthday.

"For a person to do what he did, yes, in my opinion, that's definitely a hero," said his father, Curtis Manford, 52, of Boonsboro, Md.

He also demonstrated, unknowingly, that America remains a home of the brave.

"Heroism is certainly very much alive and has never stopped being alive," said Robert W. Off, president of the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission, which honored Manford earlier this year.

"In this day and age, we read so much about the uncaring attitude of people. We don't believe it," Off said. "It's very evident that the flame still burns brightly. The concern we have for our fellow man is alive and well."

Since Pittsburgh industrialist

Andrew Carnegie founded the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission with $5 million in bonds in 1904, the non-profit organization has honored 8,907 Americans and Canadians who risked their lives to save others.

About 90 bronze medals and $2,500 in checks have been handed out each year, with a high of 170 during the early 1970s and a low of 55 in 1978, according to Off. About 650 cases are referred to the commission annually.

"The concern for others is a basic human value. And I don't think that changes through the years, believe it or not," Off said.

"Maybe at one time, there were plenty of opportunities to stop runaway horses or rescue sweet maidens," said Kenneth Clark, president of the Center for Creative Leadership in Greensboro, N.C.

"Today, there are just as many opportunities for people to intervene. The given response of people is the same."

The non-profit institution conducts research and holds training programs for managers and executives.

Unlike the politicians, prelates and entertainers regularly singled out as heroes in popularity polls, Carnegie heroes — "the real heroes" — are modest individuals who happen to be highly motivated and have their lives in good order, Off said.

Nearly all male, many of them first-born, they range in age from 8 to 80, representing virtually all walks of life.

The most common Carnegie hero is a male in his early 20s who, like Manford, witnesses a potential drowning. Other rescue attempts involve fires, tornadoes, collapsing buildings, even bear attacks.

"At that age, there's a more reckless type of thinking and living," Off said.

Heroes seem to show up more frequently in rural rather than urban areas, according to Off. Studies show that people in a crowd are less likely to respond to an emergency than if they're alone or with a few others.

The stabbing death of Catherine "Kitty" Genovese in New York City is a classic example of such behavior. The 28-year-old woman was attacked three times early the morning of March 13, 1964, as 38 people watched or heard her screams. Half an hour passed before police were notified.

"It's not apathy. Everybody is feeling distress. But the movement to act is impeded when somebody else is around to do it," Clark explained.

City dwellers also tend to be less inclined to step forward, he said, because of the presence of professional "heroes" — police officers and firefighters.

Heroism is discouraged everywhere by fear of legal retaliation, according to Dr. George Pollock, president of the Institute for Psychoanalysis in Chicago. "Good Samaritans" are sometimes sued by the people they try to help.

Yet regardless of habit or habitat, heroes are generally envied and respected, according to Clark.

"Most people are thrilled at the idea of heroism. They'd love to be a hero," he said. "But that doesn't run through their minds when they're in that kind of a situation."

Perhaps more than anything, it's a matter of timing, according to John Dovidio, chairman of Colgate University's psychology department and one of four authors of the book "Emergency Intervention."

"Almost anybody has the potential to be a hero if they're in the right place at the right time," he said.

Research by the book's authors shows that "80, 90, 100 percent of the people help if the emergency is clear and they think they're the only witness to the emergency," Dovidio said.

"What's interesting about these heroes...they focus very narrowly on the person in danger to the exclusion of everything else," he said. "Only afterward do they realize that there was danger."

Budgeters on Hill funnier than accountants

By TOM RAUM

WASHINGTON (AP) — A budgeter, says U.S. Budget Director David Stockman, "is somebody who doesn't have the personality to be an accountant." But he must not have been speaking of the 26 House and Senate negotiators on the 1986 federal budget.

The House-Senate conference committee has been meeting for weeks in an effort to produce a version of the budget that both chambers — and Stockman — can live with.

And while the conference panel hasn't made much progress toward that end, it has produced a good number of laughs along the way.

For instance, Rep. W.G. Hefner, D-N.C., clad in a bright green sports coat, was trying to raise a point before the conference panel.

During a long speech by conference chairman, Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., Hefner repeatedly sought recognition.

Domenici said he wanted to finish his own statement first. Then he forgot Hefner's request.

"When do we peons get a chance to speak?" Hefner asked.

"I'm sorry. I didn't mean to overlook you," Domenici said.

"It's all right. Everybody does," Hefner said.

Then he added: "That's why I wore this green coat."

"I didn't win the Masters' (golf tournament), that's for sure."

...

The budget conferees then got into a dispute over which had a higher drop-out rate: the Jobs Corps or the Army, Navy and Air Force academies.

Backers of retaining the Jobs

Corps contended they had a lower rate of dropouts. But Rep. Delbert Latta, R-Ohio, came back with statistics showing the opposite was true.

"I don't see why that should surprise anyone," said House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, a member of the conference. "To get into one of the service academies, you really have to prove you're a success. To get into the Jobs Corps, you have to prove you're a failure."

'Grand ol' lady' of Baytown still shows fiery spirit

By LOUISE SHAW

BAYTOWN (AP) — To outsiders, fire truck No. 35 appears to be only a collage of nuts, bolts and hoses; but to Baytown firefighters "she's a grand ol' lady."

"Thirty-five," as they affectionately call the 1947 Mack pumper, was "born" in Allentown, Pa.

The truck was made to specifications of Baytown's fire department and shipped to the southeast Texas oil town on a box car, says retired fire chief L.V. Bailey.

"They had to borrow $7,000 to pay for her," he recalled.

The truck, which bore no unit number in its early days, was housed at the old Goose Creek Fire Department station. The building now houses Baytown Fire Station 3.

Before he advanced through the ranks to become fire chief, Bailey was the only paid firefighter in the department. All other personnel were volunteers.

No. 35 joined the department's only other truck, a 1929 Seagraves.

"She was one of the most up-to-date pieces of equipment," Bailey said. "She drove real good," in spite of the lack of power steering, he said.

No. 35 and Seagraves truck made all of the major fires in Goose Creek. In addition they answered mutual aid calls to Pelly and Baytown — the other two cities in what was called the Tri-Cities before their incorporation into one town.

"We kept the two trucks running at most of the fires," Bailey said. The newer truck carried 300 gallons of water in the booster tank while the Seagraves had only a 150-gallon capacity booster tank.

"There were no radios then, either," he said. "We put those in later on." The trucks were dispatched by telephone and by an alarm, Bailey said.

During those early days, No. 35 was accompanied on most runs by Pudge, a small black dog owned by the Baileys, who lived in an apartment above the station.

When the fire alarm sounded, Bailey would grab his gear and head out on No. 35. He said he would almost be at the fire before he turned around to see Pudge sitting on the back of the truck.

One day at the scene of a fire, Pudge jumped off on the wrong side of the truck and was struck by a car.

"After the fire was over, I brought the dog back to be buried behind the fire station," Bailey said.

In 1957, No. 35 was moved to Station 4 on Ward Road as the front line pumper and was assigned the number 40.

Ten years later, No. 35 was reassigned to Station 3 as a reserve truck and given the number 32. It wasn't until 1978 that the truck was given its present number, 35.

Since reassignment as a reserve pumper, No. 35 is used primarily for public relations.

"Kids relate to her more than a new truck," Capt. Bernard Olive said. "One day we took the new ladder truck and her to Ashbel Smith Elementary, and the kids left the ladder truck and took to her like a duck takes to water."

Olive said one of No. 35's biggest honors came in the 1981 Houston Cease Fire Parade when it was named best antique truck. Grand marshals Ron Stone and Greg Shry, the muscular dystrophy poster child, rode on the truck.

No. 35 has gone on to win numerous awards in area parades. And each year, it has become a tradition for the truck to carry Santa during the Baytown Christmas parade and the parade marshal during the July Fourth parade.

Olive said No. 35 has quite a reputation in the area.

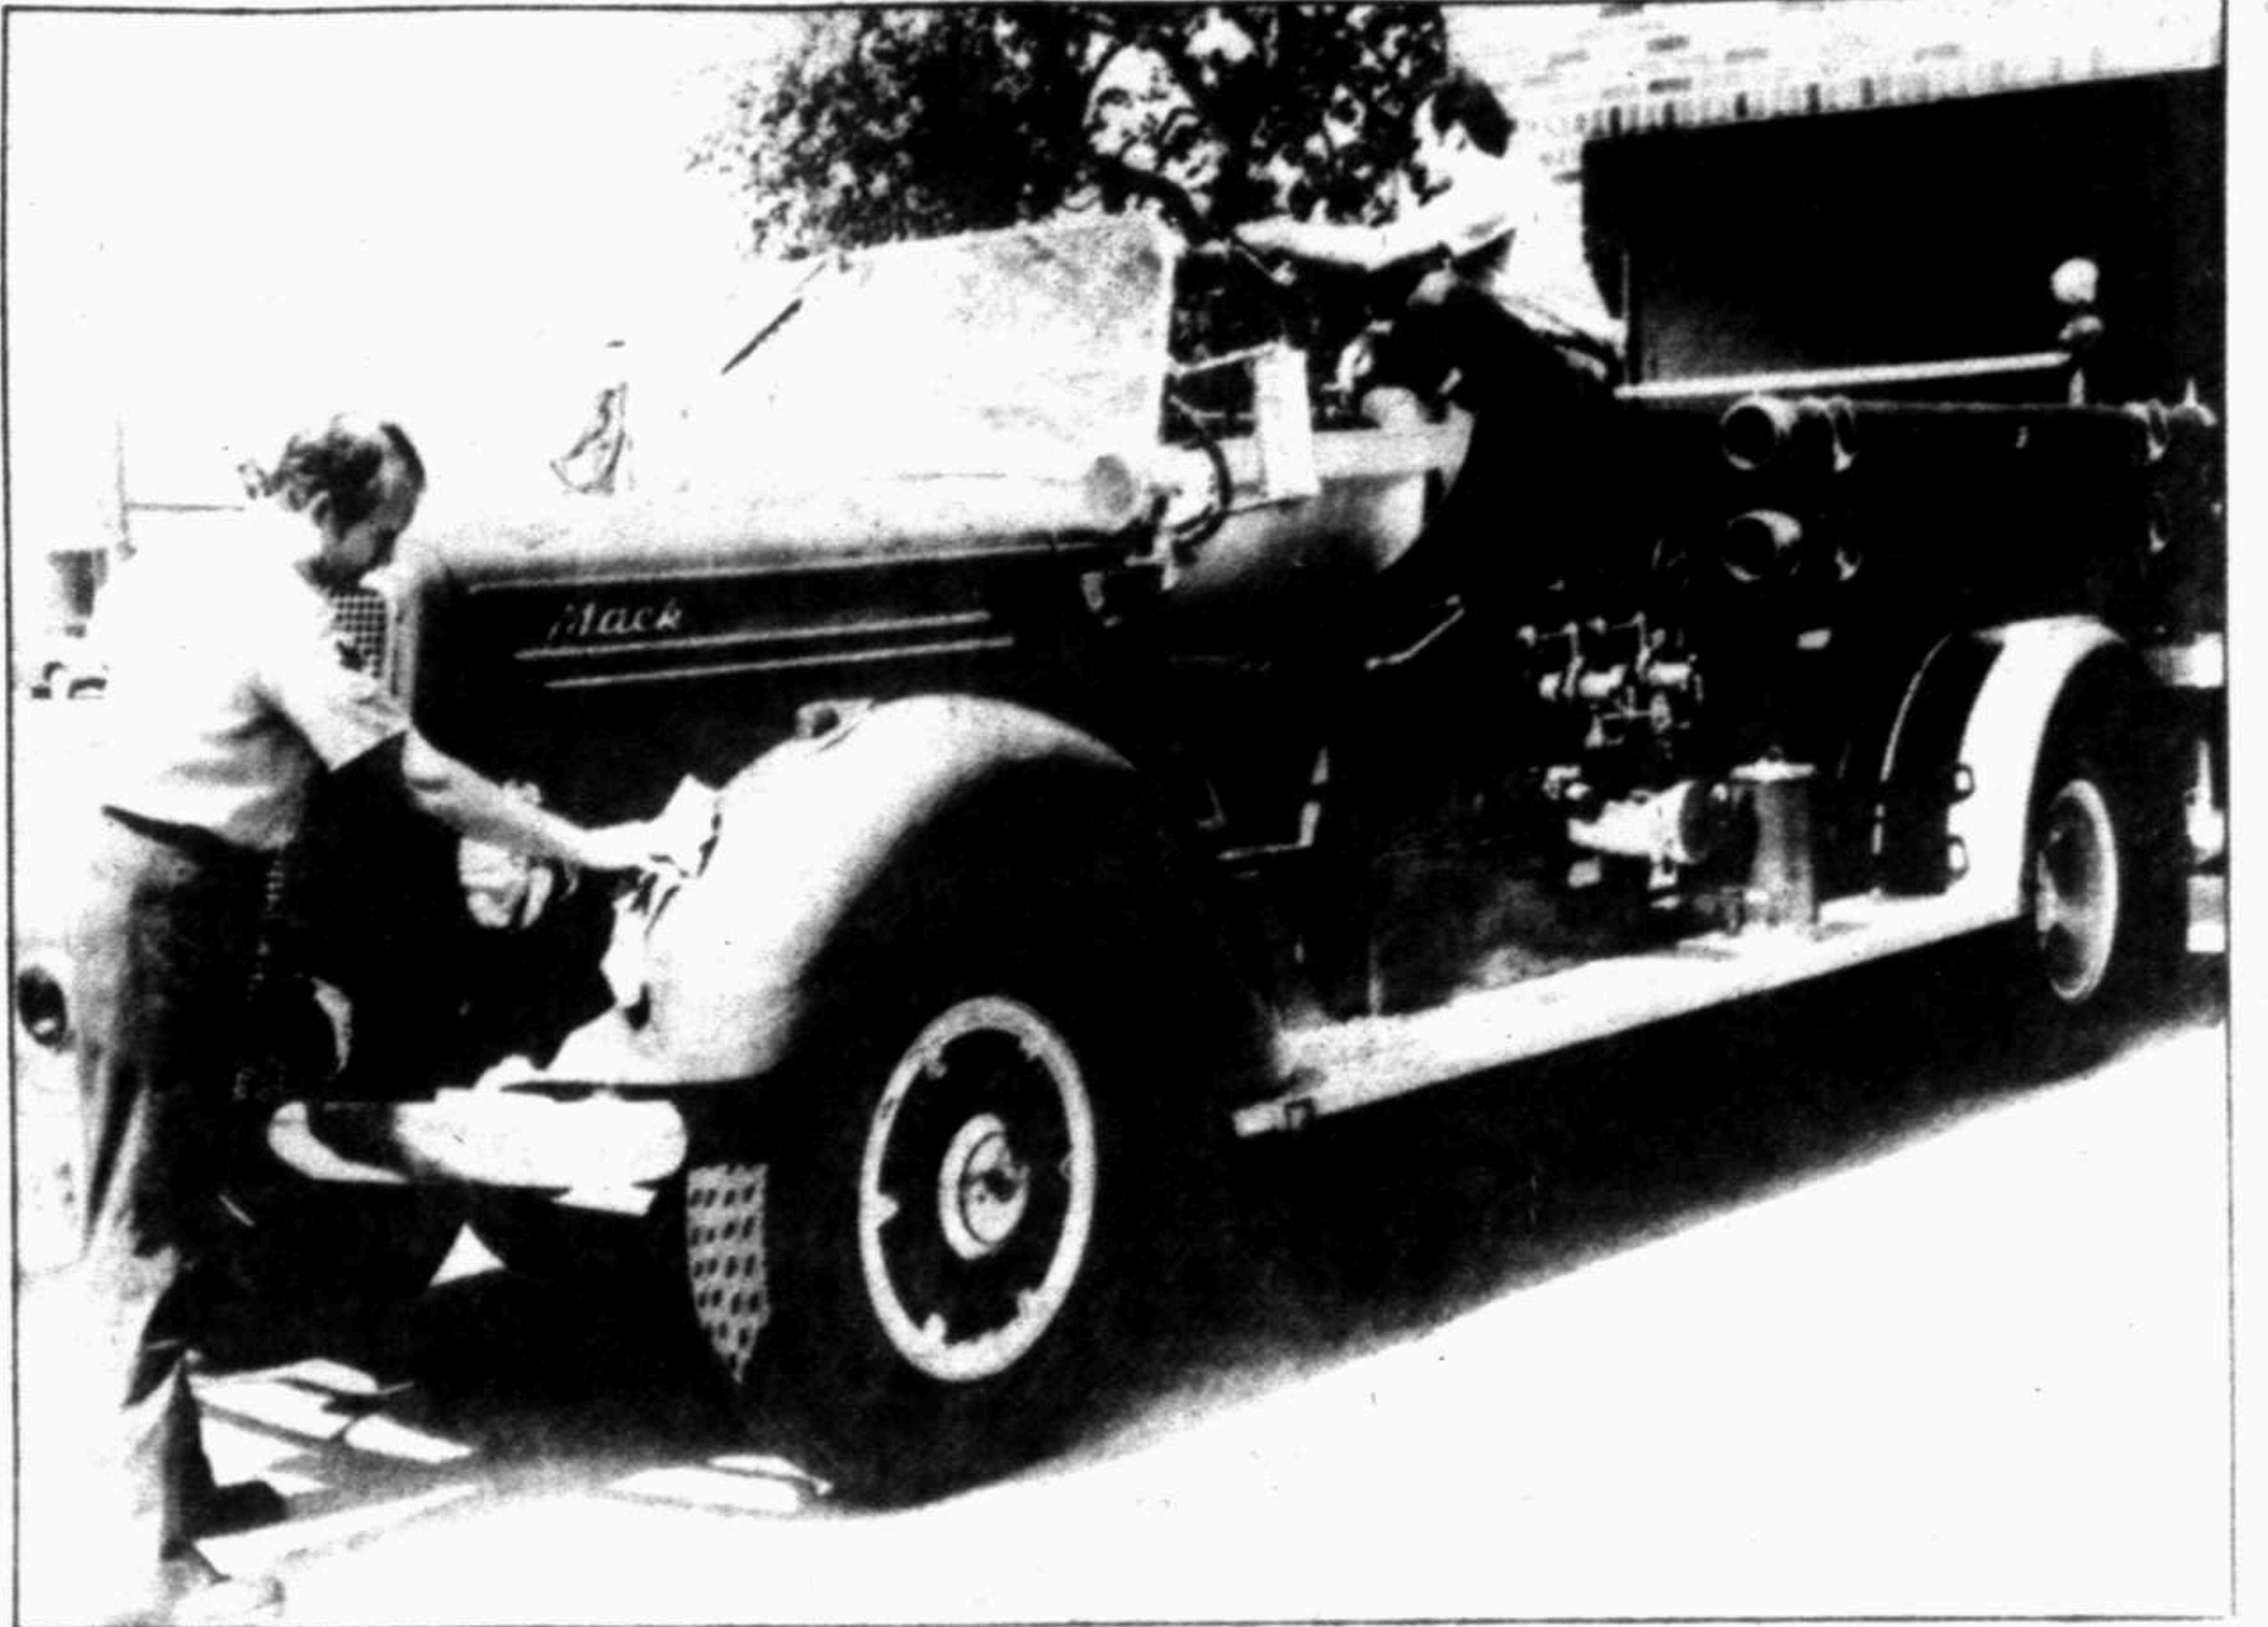

"They call and invite her to attend," Olive said.

In an effort to keep the truck in good running shape, and because it must be driven to out-of-town functions, Olive limits No. 35's travel to a 40-mile radius.

The longest trip No. 35 ever made was at the end of last year when Olive drove it to Huntsville to get a "facelift" — the first since 1968.

"Going to those fires, she suffered heat damage and received some knocks by equipment. We wanted to restore her to her original appearance," Olive said.

Firefighters love the truck so much that several requested in their wills that it be used instead of a hearse to carry their bodies from the chapel to the grave. That duty was faithfully performed at the funerals of captains Henry Rowe and James Thompson.

Members of the Baytown Fire Department Ken Wyse, left, and Richard Lech, seated on the truck, spend their spare time polishing No. 35. The "Grand Ol' Lady" of the department was restored by inmates at the Texas Department of Corrections in Huntsville.

Comic books no longer just for youngsters

FORT WORTH (AP) — Move over, Archie and Veronica. Comics aren't just for kids any more.

Companies that gave kids of the 1930s and '40s adventures such as "Superman" and "Captain Marvel" now produce flashier funnies designed for an older — and wealthier — generation.

"There's no money in selling comic books for kids," said Trip Reynolds, 31, of Arlington, a comic book collector for 25 years. "Adults are the serious collectors."

Local experts estimate that between 50 percent and 60 percent of all comic books are purchased by people aged 15 to 25. The majority of those readers are men.

"Ninety percent of all comic books on the market today are super hero," said Craig Miller, 25, manager of Lone Star Comics in Arlington. "There aren't too many women interested in super hero comics."

Not only are more adults buying comics, more adults are collecting comics. Reynolds and Craig both said they have thousands of comic books in their private collections — such as "The X-Men," "Tales of the Teen Titans" and "Six From Sirius."

"I buy everything that comes in," said Tim Nolen, a comic book collector for 10 years and a back-issue employee at Lone Star Comics. "We usually get 10 to 20 titles (comic books) each week."

Nolen, 21, said he spends "a fair amount of my day" with his head buried in a comic book. Some collectors, like Miller, only read their favorite comics but buy other books for their collections.

"If I've been collecting a certain title since it started, I'll keep buying the title, even if the story has gotten boring," Miller said.

At 75 cents a shot for most titles, comic books still are cheap entertainment — except for the serious collector. In 1983, Reynolds said he spent $1,388.46 — or about $26 a week — on comics. Miller estimates that most serious collectors that visit Lone Star Comics spend between $50 and $100 a month.

Most of those comic books are read once or not at all, sheathed in plastic and stored in cardboard boxes, Miller said.

"I keep them for the fun of it," Miller said. "I like to look through them, look at old issues."

There is money to be made in comic book collecting. Comic books that are rare and in mint condition — like the first issue of a popular series — can be sold for several hundred dollars, Miller said.

Most serious collectors, however, aren't interested in selling.

"Since comic book collecting became popular again (in the early 1960s), old comic books have been surfacing," Miller said. "Most of my comic books won't be worth a lot of money for some time."

According to comic book fans, today's super hero is nothing like his predecessor. The super hero is "easy to identify with" and deals with "real life" problems, Reynolds said.

Take for instance, Iron Man, alias Tony Stark, a multimillionaire industrialist who has been upholding justice in a solar-powered iron suit since 1962. Stark has become an alcoholic and has been unable to perform his super hero duties for two years, Reynolds said.

'Cocoon' offers community chance to cheat Mother Nature

NEW YORK (AP) — Imagine a place where age is timeless, where time has no meaning, where the specter of death is but a grim memory, where life is continually in bloom.

Or, as the character Ben Luckett (Wilford Brimley) says in the movie "Cocoon": "Have you ever thought of cheating Mother Nature?"

He does, as do many of his elderly friends in the $18 million movie directed by Ron Howard. The film is about oldtimers in a Florida retirement community who discover a Fountain of Youth in a swimming pool where alien pods that emit a healing life force have been placed.

Luckett's failing eyesight is corrected to near perfect. His friend Joe Finley (Don Ameche), the bon vivant and twinkling toes of the stalwart three, dusts off his dancing shoes and spins into a break dance. And all three discover that sex can be fun at 70 or 80.

The movie, which opened June 21 in many of the nation's theaters, is destined to be one of the season's hits. The story transcends age and offers something for everyone as a sort of grownup "E.T." There is adventure and humor, mystery and awe.

But layered throughout is a beautiful and special humanity that's been missing from many of the more recent youth-market films about tedious, spoiled teenagers who are a.) fretful about leaving school days behind and going to work, or b.) obsessed with the hows and whens of that first sexual encounter.

Richard D. Zanuck, who produced "Cocoon" with his wife, Lill Finl Zanuck, and David Brown, was initially attracted to the story because it was "different and daring, and by daring I mean it dealt with older people," he said. "That, alone, would be good enough reasons for most studios to reject it out of hand. But mostly it moved me."

Don Ameche

"That's how we select most of our movies. In the case of 'Jaws,' it scared us. In the case of 'Cocoon,' it made us laugh and cry."

The movie, filmed around St. Petersburg, Fla., features some of the industry's most enduring actors: Ameche, Brimley, Cronyn, Jack Gilford, Maureen Stapleton, Jessica Tandy, Gwen Verdon and Herta Ware.

They were assisted by relative "youngsters." Brian Dennehy plays the gentle alien leader. Newcomer Tahnee Welch, daughter of Raquel Welch, and Tyrone Power Jr. are his attractive companions. Steve Guttenberg, who starred in "Police Academy," plays the owner of a cabin cruiser the aliens hire so they can retrieve the cocoons of their countrymen that have rested at the bottom of the sea for 11,000 years.

The movie's extras were St. Petersburg area residents, including a 101-year-old man. "The people of the Sunny Shore Home — I hope we didn't look too young for them," said Gilford, who is 78. "The people there said they had never had a more exciting life than doing the picture. I think we added a couple of years to their lives. That was kind of a spiritual thing."

Gilford plays Bernie Lefkowitz, who feels a person is dealt a certain deck in life and shouldn't reshuffle it. He has no intentions of joining his friends in the pool.

"Bernie was a negative, unregenerative type," Gilford said. "Personally, I take things as they come. I try to do my best. I believe in struggle. I struggled in this business, and I taught my children that struggling was the only thing you can do."

Ameche, 77, was proud to report that he himself performed some of the break dancing in the movie. He also did the dives into the pool. All the oldtimers were given scuba lessons for some underwater shots.

However, Ameche doesn't agree with his character's views toward immortality.

"I believe in the hereafter, but I don't believe there is such a thing as eternal life," he said.

"Cocoon" is director Ron Howard's third movie in three years, following the madcap comedy "Night Shift" and the handsomely reviewed "Splash." The latter forced Hollywood to note the talents of the 30-year-old actor-director, who once played Opie on "The Andy Griffith Show" and Richie on "Happy Days."

'Airwolf' star loves horsing around

By Jerry Buck
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — It's not surprising that Alex Cord, who grew up around horses, should become a hard-charging polo player on a Hollywood celebrity team.

"When I was two my parents put me on a pony and I've never gotten off," says Cord, who co-stars as Michael Archangel on CBS' "Airwolf."

He spent time on a ranch in Wyoming as a youth, competed in rodeos and later took special training to become an expert horseman and two years ago he took up polo. He plays on a celebrity team that includes Tommy Lee Jones, William Devane and Stefanie Powers that is being invited to play all over the world.

"Polo is a rugged sport and it gets even tougher when you play indoors because the field's smaller," he said. "It incorporates several sports, each of which by itself is difficult. You have to be able to ride a horse at speed and control it. Even without hitting a ball controlling a horse is something."

"Then you have to hit the ball and it's never where you want it, and four other people are trying to break your kneecaps. It's tough physically and it's as intellectual as chess. You have to think three plays ahead. It takes about five years of playing to get the hang of it."

Cord started playing only two years ago.

"I always said I couldn't afford polo, it's a rich man's game. But this guy invited me to the Will Rogers park and put me on a horse and in five minutes I was hitting the ball at a full gallop," he said.

In "Airwolf," which stars Jan Michael Vincent and Ernest Borgnine, Cord plays the head of "The Firm," an unspecified intelligence agency. The character's real name is Michael Coldsmith-Briggs III, better known as Michael Archangel.

"I get a lot of fan mail asking why Alex Cord doesn't have more to do in the show," he said. "Last year I was like Charlie in 'Charlie's Angels,' except that you saw me. I took a bunch of those letters to my agent and said, 'Why don't you show these to the people at CBS who count? Let them see that the character is popular.'"

"Jan Michael said the same thing. He said they don't use Alex enough. I'm happy to have the job, but like any other actor I'd like to have more to do. I think people have sparked to the double-edged relationship he has with Jan Michael's character. It's tense, but they'd go to the wall for each other."

He says the basic problem with "Airwolf" is that the helicopter is the star. "But it's such a monstrous weapon, what can you do with it?" he asked. "The thing is to back off from the helicopter and get into people stories."

Storytelling is close to Cord's heart, because he has found time in his acting career to become a novelist as well. He recently completed the first draft of a screenplay adaptation of his first novel, "Sand Song."

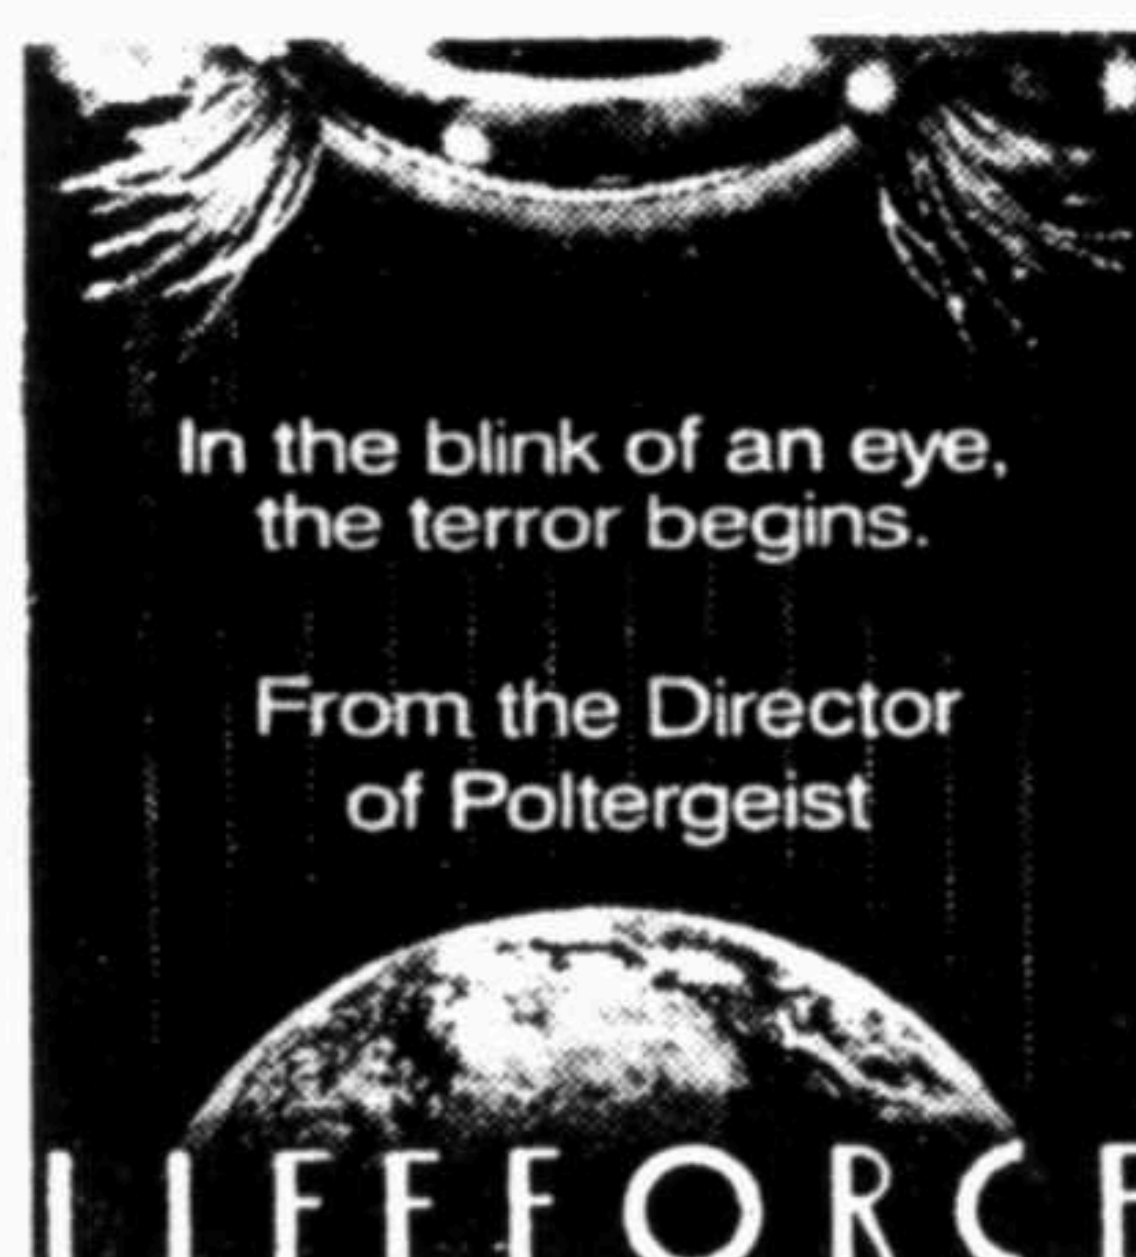

The movie has the tentative title "Trillium."

"It's about a love that endures beyond human life," Cord said, "and 'Trillium' fits because that's a lily with a rootstock that springs back to life every year."

He calls himself a romantic who yearns for the horse and buggy days, and writes his books — he's finished a second — in longhand. But he bought a computer and wrote the screenplay on it.

This scruffy town never was 'Miami Vice,' 'Key Tortuga' love locale

VIRGINIA KEY, Fla. (AP) — Only a shadow away from the notoriety of Miami and down a dirt road close to a sewage treatment plant is a smidgen of Florida that's been untouched for decades — a place to have a cold beer while trying to remember how many times you saw this scene in the movies or on television.

It has no official name, but most folks refer to this section of Virginia Key facing Duck Lake as "Jimbo's Shrimp Dock." It's where James Luznar has been running his shrimp bait business since 1952.

Near the rickety building out of which Luznar sells bait, operates his three small shrimp boats and dispenses snack food and beverages is a large sign that announces: Jack Tyree Fishing Charter & Marine Salvage — 24 hour service.

"There's no such place and never was," says Luznar, laughing, cigar in hand. The sign is a remnant of a movie made here called "Key Tortuga."

On the left side of the dirt road are several shacks. They appear old, broken down and seemingly inhabited by people down on their luck.

Wrong again. They are relatively new, unoccupied and are movie props. The Swamp Bar with the big alligator pictured across the top was never a drinking place and was last used for an episode of the television series "Miami Vice." It, too, is just a shell of a building.

"This is a permanent little movie set," says Luznar, 57, who served aboard merchant marine vessels in World War II. He came to Florida in 1948 and has been a shrimp ever since.

"I love it here," said Luznar, who lives in North Miami Beach with his wife, Ruby. "I'm down here seven days a week."

The attraction for Luznar is the people who frequent this hideaway either by small boat or by turning off the main road that goes to Key Biscayne.

"This is a melting pot for people who don't worry about different people," he says. "It's just like it was 20 years ago."

"I'd clean it up if it wasn't for the movie people. They love the rustic, run-down look. They say, 'God, this is perfect.' So I just leave it like it is."

A walking tour with Luznar is a mini movie trivia trip. He knows where scenes for the early "Flipper" television series were made; "Salty," a film about a sea lion; the "Primus" TV series and, most recently, "Porky's Revenge."

The dirt road was widened some years ago to accommodate a 40-foot man-made crustacean that starred in "Island Claws," explains Luznar.

He collects the props movie people leave behind and has turned that into a profitable business.

What seem to be useless pieces of junk cluttering Luznar's place invariably turn out to be exactly what the next movie set needs.

"I'd clean it up if it wasn't for the movie people. They love the rustic, run-down look. They say, 'God, this is perfect.' So I just leave it like it is," adds Luznar.

If visitors haven't come to chat with Luznar, then it's to visit Lucille "Lu" Porter, a jolly widow, who works here.

"I've been here since 1982," says Porter, a Townsend, Mass., native.

"Here, people, rich or poor, are friendly. If they're not, they'll find out I'm not either," she says with a hearty laugh.

James Luznar sits with his dog, Bo, in front of his shrimp bait store. Luznar describes his property on Virginia Key, Fla., dotted with shacks and clutter, as a "permanent little movie set" where films and television shows are made. Luznar said, "I'd clean it up if it wasn't for the movie people."

Quik Wok offers 'Whopper' of a deal

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press

AUSTIN (AP) — A former $1.80-an-hour cashier for Uncle Sam has completed a whopper of a deal by selling her Chinese fast food business to a conglomerate that owns Burger King, which will operate Quik Wok restaurants.

Pillsbury Co., owner of the hamburger chain, announced recently it was purchasing San Antonio-based Quik Wok Inc. for an undisclosed sum. Quik Wok operates eight stores in San Antonio and one in Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

"Oriental food by Burger King is a first, a pioneer venture," said Quik Wok founder Constance Andrews.

Jeff Campbell, chairman and chief executive officer of Burger King, said, Quik Wok "provides us with an exciting entry into the ethnic food business — a business we feel has substantial consumer appeal and growth potential."

Ms. Andrews, 46, recalled that her last job was as a cashier at the Lackland Air Force Base post exchange when she decided to open a Chinese food restaurant in 1972 — Golden Wok.

She hocked her furniture for $2,500 and borrowed money from

"I had never cooked Chinese food on a Chinese stove until the first customer put in the first order, but I said to myself, 'If the Chinese can do it, you can do it.' Ignorance was bliss."

— Constance Andrews
founder of Quik Wok

her brother's military bonus to invest $3,700 in the restaurant. She did her own plumbing and electrical work.

"I had never cooked Chinese food on a Chinese stove until the first customer put in the first order, but I said to myself, 'If the Chinese can do it, you can do it.' Ignorance was bliss," said Ms. Andrews.

She said the Small Business Administration noted she was operating in the heartland of "Tex-Mex" food, and predicted she would go broke in three months. Later, she said, the SBA loaned her $10,000, "probably to shut up my writing to Washington. I paid it off in 2 1/2 years."

"I had played around at the house frying rice and tried to develop recipes about how to cook in a wok," which is a rounded metal cooking pan, "but a Chinese stove — 36-feet long and stainless steel — is a whole different animal. There are three big gas jets, and the flames practically engulf the wok."

"It was day-to-day, minute-to-minute. I was delighted at the sight of a single customer," she said. "I thought my first $100 day would never happen, then $200."

"I was down on my knees with no help when Kenneth Lau walked in in February 1974, and asked me if I needed a Chinese cook. It was the greatest thing that ever happened to me," said Ms. Andrews. "We formed a corporation, he became vice president, and it all mushroomed."

Another Golden Wok was opened, and then in May 1980, she started her Chinese fast food business. She said the fast food restaurants and Golden Woks have sales of $7 million a year — roughly $19,000 a day.

"This isn't prefabricated, cardboard food," she said. "It's cooked in the store, and the vegetables are fresh daily."

The menu includes pepper steak, sweet and sour pork, chop suey, almond chicken, egg rolls, egg drop soup, Mongolian beef and Genghis Khan roll. An order is ready, Ms. Andrews said, "shortly after you pay," and there are drive-in facilities.

"It wasn't easy," said Ms. Andrews of her business success. "For years I never took a day off and worked 16 to 18 hours a day. I was determined to make it a success because so many people said I couldn't do it."

Asked why she decided to sell out, Ms. Andrews, who will remain with Quik Wok as a consultant, said, "It was a great opportunity for my employees. A large company would offer greater benefits."

"Also, I wanted to see my baby grow and develop."

Residents push a stalled car through a flooded Manila, Philippines, street Friday as a horse-drawn "colesa" passes by. Heavy monsoon rains poured on Manila continuously Thursday night, flooding much of the capital.

Torrential rains from Typhoon Irma send floods surging through Manila

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Torrential rains caused by Typhoon Irma swept flood waters more than 10 feet deep through parts of the capital Friday. At least 28 people were reported killed in Manila and elsewhere on Luzon island.

The flooding in Manila was the worst in more than a decade.

A government television newscast quoted Manila Deputy Governor Ismael Mathay as saying 80 percent of the city of 6.8 million had been flooded.

Government reports said 48,000 people were evacuated from their homes in the city and suburbs and moved to churches and public schools. Navy frogmen in rubber dinghies rescued people from the roofs of buildings.

Domestic flights to and from Manila were canceled because of a flooded runway at the domestic airport. Hundreds of vehicles were stalled in the streets, including the rugged "jeepney" passenger jeeps that provide most public transport.

Schools and offices declared a holiday and many shops were closed by the floods.

The military's office of civil defense and the official Philippine News Agency said eight people drowned in two swollen creeks in suburban Quezon City. Two others were reported electrocuted by snapped electric wires.

Several other people were reported missing, including eight fishermen whose fishing boat capsized.

Bush says Soviet Union deploying medium-range nuclear missiles

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Vice President George Bush said Friday that the Soviet Union is deploying more medium-range nuclear missiles, which indicates it is not serious about arms control.

Bush would not specify the number of additional SS-20s, but a panel of senior NATO officials said later that the Soviets had added nine missiles to the 414 NATO counted two months ago.

"The current Soviet SS-20 force has grown to 423, and construction of a number of new SS-20 bases in both the eastern and western Soviet Union is still under way," said James Dobbins, a State Department official and chairman of the NATO panel.

A U.S. intelligence report to Congress earlier this week said the Soviet Union was embarked on a missile-base construction program that would enable it to boost its SS-20 arsenal to 450 by 1987.

Bush held a news conference after attending a 75-minute meeting with representatives of the 16 nations of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization at NATO headquarters.

He later flew to Geneva, Switzerland, the fifth stop on his seven-nation European tour.

The vice president accused the Soviets of not taking the nuclear arms control negotiations in Geneva seriously. He said the United States was "committed to achieving significant arms reductions."

Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev made the same charge about the United States on Wednesday.

Bush said the latest deployment of triple-warhead SS-20 missiles, which are mobile and capable of striking all of Western Europe, showed that the Soviets were not serious about arms control.

"They don't feel inhibited about deploying their SS-20s, and I think the evidence is objective and rather overwhelming," he said. "There isn't the restraint that perhaps had been advertised by the Soviet Union."

Bush appeared to be referring to a statement by Gorbachev on April 7 in which he said he was unilaterally stopping deployment of medium-range missiles and the moratorium would expire in November unless NATO did the same.

Prisoners held by Israel mostly Amal Shiites, officials say

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The 735 prisoners held by Israel are mostly Lebanese Shiite members of Amal who were involved in the guerrilla campaign against the Israeli army in southern Lebanon, Israeli officials say.

Amal leaders and some of the 39 Americans held hostage in Beirut have argued that the prisoners also are innocent hostages and should be released as demanded by Shiite extremists who hijacked a TWA jetliner June 14.

Israeli officials maintain that the detainees are the hard core left from among the inmates transferred to Israel's Atlit prison from the Ansar camp in south Lebanon on April 2.

"Many have blood on their hands. There are no innocents there," said one defense official who spoke on condition he not be identified.

Amal leaders in south Lebanon maintain most were picked up primarily because they were card-carrying members of the Shiite paramilitary organization and not for any specific anti-Israeli acts.

Israel has repeatedly said it planned to release the prisoners after Israeli forces left Lebanon and when conditions in south Lebanon permit. But Israel has refused to free them under pressure from the hijackers of the TWA airliner.

The legality of the prisoner transfer has been criticized by the International Red Cross as well as a number of Arab and Western governments, including the United States, as a violation of the 1949 Geneva Conventions on the treatment of prisoners of war.

Prime Minister Shimon Peres' government has maintained that the detainees are not POWs because there was no declared state of war and that the conventions permitted the temporary transfer for pressing military reasons. Officials said the move was necessary for both the safety of its soldiers and the security of the prisoners.

While none of the prisoners has been convicted of crimes, Israel insists that most are activists trained either as political organizers or guerrilla fighters.

During earlier releases carried out before the TWA hijacking, freed Ansar prisoners chanted anti-Israeli slogans and told reporters that they would return to their homes and continue the fight until the last Israeli soldiers left Lebanon.

The detainees were picked up in Israeli army search-and-arrest raids on Shiite villages in south Lebanon during a period of guerrilla attacks on the Israeli troops occupying southern Lebanon.

Diplomatic sources, who spoke on condition they not be identified, say that most of the prisoners come from villages around the port city of Tyre and south of the Litani River.

Israel considers that region near its northern border to be of special importance for security and has maintained that it will not free the detainees until calm has been established.

Amal leader Nabih Berri, who says he has taken charge of the 39 American hostages held in Beirut, is seeking release of the Shiites held in Israel because they are crucial to his plans for establishing full control in the south, the diplomatic sources say.

Amal has been confronting the South Lebanon Army, the militia Israel set up to patrol a zone north of the Israeli border. Amal appears to be winning its battle against the militia but its dominance is being challenged by extremist Shiites belonging to groups such as Hezbollah, Islamic Amal and Jihad Islami — all of which are heavily influenced by Iranian thinking.

"Amal has a shortage of manpower. There are not even enough guys to man roadblocks in the south and the group Israel is holding are essential to Amal's control over the area," said one diplomatic source who has extensive knowledge and contacts in south Lebanon.

According to Amal officials in Beirut, there are about 70 members of the extremist Hezbollah organization in Israeli custody.

Israeli officials have given no breakdown by party affiliation and have issued contradictory figures about the total number of prisoners held in Atlit, 55 miles north of Tel Aviv on the Mediterranean coast.

Israel last week released 31 prisoners, but insisted the release was not linked to the American hostages in Beirut.

Syria trying to boost prestige

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Syria could enhance its international reputation by playing a role in freeing the American hostages held in Beirut, but Israel is already hinting it will not accept such a role for its arch enemy.

The Syrian government of President Hafez Assad has said it is trying to help end the hostage crisis, making an unusual public statement through the newspaper of the country's ruling Baath Party.

Government sources in Lebanon, who spoke on condition they not be identified, also said Syria has agreed to take charge of the 39 American hostages if the United Nations can work out a deal for Israel to release the Shiite Moslem prisoners demanded by the hijackers.

While Israel made no immediate official comment on a possible Syrian role, one Israeli official said if Syria took charge of the hostages it would establish "Syrian complicity" in the entire affair.

The official, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said Syria already was implicated in holding Americans in Lebanon, a reference to the seven U.S. citizens kidnapped earlier in Beirut and reports that some of them were being held in Syrian-controlled eastern Lebanon.

The remarks were not surprising, given the enmity between Israel and Syria.

But even though involvement in the hostage situation could be risky for Syria, the Assad government has several reasons to want the American hostages freed.

If Syria were instrumental in freeing the hostages, it would show that Syria was willing to become involved in humanitarian actions and to aid the United States in specific instances.

Irish say British ship has 'tentative fix' on black boxes

CORK, Ireland (AP) — An Irish government spokesman said a British navy search ship had tentatively located the flight recorders of an Air-India jumbo jet that crashed in the Atlantic. The British said they weren't positive they had found the recorders.

Joe Lennon, director of the Irish Government Information Service, said in Cork that authorities had secured "a tentative fix" on the "black boxes" in water 6,000 feet deep.

In London, the British Ministry of Defense issued a statement saying that the seabed support vessel HMS Challenger had received a weak and intermittent signal since Wednesday but that "the nature of the signal has been such that she was unable to locate or analyze it."

"There are a number of other possible causes of such a signal" in addition to flight recorders, the statement said.

The Challenger was to dock in Cork on Saturday to unload wreckage after being replaced in the search by the Guardline Locator.

The flight recorders could reveal why the Boeing 747 crashed on Sunday 120 miles southwest of Ireland after disappearing from radar screens.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Airline experts discuss anti-terrorism measures

MONTREAL (AP) — Security experts representing 18 of the world's airlines met in emergency session Friday to consider new measures to counter terrorism in the air. More than two dozen officials, many of them chiefs of security of their airlines, participated in the emergency meeting of the International Air Transport Association's security committee, a spokesman for the trade association said.

Among the 18 carriers represented were Air-India, TWA, Canadian Pacific, and other airlines directly affected by recent attacks on commercial planes and airports. The meeting was called Sunday, hours after an Air-India flight carrying 329 people crashed off the coast of Ireland and an explosion rocked Tokyo's airport, killing two luggage handlers, as baggage from a Canadian Pacific flight was being transferred.

Investigators are looking into the possibility that bombs could have been secreted in checked luggage when the planes took off from different Canadian cities Saturday night.

Guerrillas attack town

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Armed leftist guerrillas attacked a small western town Friday and battled with police and army forces for six hours, police said. They reported that at least 16 people were killed and 15 wounded.

The rebels, about 100 members of the April 19 Movement, were dressed in military uniforms and entered the town of Genova under the guise of armed forces members, police said.

They simultaneously attacked a jail, the town hall and two banks with bombs, automatic weapons and rifles, police reports said.

The local police force of about 20 fought the rebels for about four hours before being reinforced by army troops based in Armenia, about 120 miles west of Bogota in the country's coffee-growing region. An army assault helicopter also participated in the battle, police said.

The guerrillas fled about six hours after the attack had begun, according to reports.

Rains souring wines

BONN, West Germany (AP) — This year's wines may have a sour taste because of the rains that are drenching West Germany's vineyards, the agriculture minister said Friday.

Rain and below-normal temperatures prevail in much of the country.

Experts say the blossoming of the vines is two weeks behind and the rain, cool weather and lack of sunshine are retarding their growth. They are predicting a 20 percent to 25 percent drop in the yield and without sun, natural sugar content in grapes also will be down.

"The consumers of 1985 German wines may find them sour," Agriculture Minister Ignaz Kiechle said Friday.

Parliament to meet

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — The newly elected Parliament of the breakaway Turkish Cypriot state will hold its first session on July 8, the same day the 50 deputies from four political parties are sworn in.

Afghan general reported killed in 'frontal clash'

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A top-ranking Afghan army general has been killed by anti-Communist guerrillas, official Kabul Radio reported Friday.

In a news flash, the radio said a Gen. Ahmeduddin was killed in a "frontal clash with the bandits," referring to Moslem rebels fighting the Soviet-installed Afghan regime.

The radio identified Ahmeduddin as "counterpart" of army chief of staff. No other name or position was given.

Ahmeduddin is believed to be the highest-ranking Afghan officer killed by rebels. It was the first time Afghanistan's official radio has made a special announcement on the death of a general.

He was 45 years old and trained at a Soviet military academy, the radio said.

The Dari-language broadcast, monitored in New Delhi, did not say when or where the general was killed.

The broadcast said Afghanistan's Marxist government considers his death a "great and irreplaceable loss."

Islamic guerrillas are fighting to oust the government of Afghanistan, which is supported by an estimated 115,000 Soviet troops.

Is TV hostage to terrorists' demands?

By FRED ROTHENBERG

NEW YORK (AP) — Hostage Ally Conwell asked Dan Rather a sophisticated media question before their early-morning interview: Would their conversation be on live?

Who wanted to know, Rather wondered. Was it Conwell, or was it his propaganda-minded captors? In that instant, the CBS anchor was thankful that the interview was not going directly to millions of American homes. Excerpts were shown on Friday's "CBS Morning News" and later on a CBS Special Report.

"The danger in agreeing to do live interviews, under these circumstances, is that the airwaves could be taken over by terrorists," Rather said in an interview. "We won't be put in a position where murderers, kidnappers and terrorists can go straight to air."

Since TWA Flight 847 was hijacked on June 14, CBS' position has been consistent — no live interviews with Shiite Amal leader Nabih Berri or with terrorists who could make unedited speeches and claims, and no live interviews with hostages who may not be speaking of their free will and who may be interrupted by their captors.

"We're not turning this network over to the terrorists," anchor Bob Schieffer said firmly on the "CBS Morning News" Friday.

Hartman

Rather

Meanwhile, on ABC's "Good Morning America," host David Hartman orchestrated a live hookup involving hostages Simon Grossmayer, Rev. James W. McLoughlin and Conwell, members of their families and Berri.

Nothing untoward happened, and at the end of the interview Hartman told viewers: "All of us here at ABC continue to be concerned about our involvement. We try to bring all the information to you first-hand, and to the extent that we become part of the process, we hope and pray we do it in a responsible, useful and positive manner."

Hartman was alluding to the enormous pressures and conflicting concerns on TV since it has, intentionally or not, become a huge part of the hostage story. Daily TV interviews with Berri and the hostages can be construed as a form of video diplomacy.

"I can't be arrogant and think I'm part of the negotiating process," said Hartman in an interview. "I don't have the information and background."

Hartman said his "Good Morning America" interview with Berri, the hostages and their families was supposed to be taped before the program, but contact wasn't made with Berri until airtime.

Was he concerned that Berri had manipulated the timing?

"I had no problem doing (Berri) live," Hartman said. "He's a key player in an international situation. That's what we do here. We do it live every day."

Hartman said he was not oblivious to the dangers of giving airtime of any kind to Berri and others. "The downside is that we are being used to help certain people achieve whatever their goals are...but the greatest danger is that other terrorists will see the press attention and say terrorism works."

One benefit, Hartman said, was that TV's constant vigil kept an interested public informed about the health and welfare of the hostages. (The interviewed hostages themselves told Hartman and Rather Friday to keep making contact.) "And maybe Berri has gotten things out through us when certain parties weren't talking," added Hartman.

Steve Friedman, executive producer of NBC's "Today" show, applauded ABC's live exchanges with the hostages.

"They scored a coup. There was nothing journalistically, morally or ethically wrong with what they did," Friedman said. "The larger issue, though, is whether this plays into the hands of the Amal, and of course it does. But viewers understand that."

Friedman said the main concern is maintaining journalistic control. "As long as you're controlling the thing, you can tell them to shut up," he said. He said he would never let the subjects do the interview or make a speech.

(Five years ago during the Iranian hostage crisis, NBC News was alone among the networks in letting student leader "Mary" have unedited airtime.)

Airlines afraid sky marshals could precipitate gun battles

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three days before the hijacking of TWA Flight 847, terrorists commandeered a Jordanian jetliner. Among the passengers were eight sky marshals, but they could do little against the heavily armed hijackers except themselves be taken hostage.

As President Reagan calls for again putting sky marshals on at least some flights overseas, critics warn that armed guards riding shotgun above the clouds will not necessarily assure more security — and may, in fact, pose new dangers.

"We're opposed to sky marshals. We're opposed to guns in our airplanes whether they're good guns or bad guns," says Capt. Tom Ashwood, a security specialist for the Air Line Pilots Association.

At best, several airline security experts said in interviews, the sky marshals probably will pose a "psychological deterrent." At worst, an armed guard could ignite a gun battle killing innocent passengers or cause a plane to crash. The experts declined to be identified because of the sensitive nature of their work.

Ashwood suggested that had an armed guard been aboard Flight 847 when it was seized by two Shiite Moslem gunmen two weeks ago, he either would have precipitated "a gun battle in the air" or would have been taken hostage and possibly singled out for death by the terrorists.

Sky marshals on aircraft, according to one veteran airline security officer, also cause "enormous coordination problems" for airline crews. They have to know who the marshal is and, in turn, advise him if there are any other armed individuals — police officers, for example — on board.

Recalling the early 1970s when

2,500 American marshals flew the skies as a response to a wave of hijackings and other terrorist acts, one veteran aviation security official said: "One thing we always feared was a good guy-to-good guy confrontation."

"It's a very narrow tube up there at 35,000 feet," he added.

The Federal Aviation Administration continues to have a small cadre of air marshals that are used primarily when an airline requests special security measures. But they no longer fly routinely.

Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole told an international aviation conference Thursday in Montreal that the United States would immediately expand its air marshal program, but she gave no indication how many marshals there would be or where they would fly.

Former hostage Jimmy Dell Palmer and his wife Sammie arrive in Little Rock, Ark., Friday night.

Freed hostage Palmer returns to Little Rock

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Freed hostage Jimmy Dell Palmer, arriving home Friday night, told 200 people greeting him at the airport that "American people are the greatest people because they love freedom."

Palmer, 48, was accompanied by his wife, Sammie, on the flight from London via St. Louis to Little Rock. In a brief session with reporters, Palmer refused to comment on the plight of the 39 remaining hostages held by Shiite Moslem extremists.

His voice tight with emotion, Palmer said: "I did try to collect some of my thoughts on the way home but I don't think I can hold my composure to even think about them. I'd just like to say to my family, my friends and my fellow Americans, this is the greatest homecoming anybody could ever ask for."

A jazz band played "The A Yellow Ribbon," and the crowd cheered as the Palmers exited the TWA airplane. City and state officials presented proclamations declaring Friday as "Jimmy Dell Palmer Day" in Little Rock and Arkansas. Spectators wore yellow ribbons pinned to their shirts, and there were yellow balloons tied with yellow ribbons and a hand-painted banner.

Asked whether reports Friday that the remaining hostages were being taken to Damascus, Syria, gave him hope for their release, Palmer said: "I felt like we were close to an end ever since I've left. I'm surprised it hasn't ended already."

Palmer said the time on the airplane with the hijackers was the hardest part of the ordeal. "Until we were taken off the airplane, our lives could have passed from us at any time, many times," he said.

He would not comment on whether the United States should retaliate against the hijackers once the other hostages are freed.

Although he attributed his release to his health problems, Palmer said he felt great. When reporters asked what he and his wife planned to do on their 29th wedding anniversary Sunday, Palmer said with a laugh, "I'm going to be hiding from you, for one thing."

After the 20-minute ceremony, Palmer and his family, including three sons who greeted their parents on the plane along with about 29 other family members and friends, were driven home in a city-provided van with a police escort.

Officials were notified early Friday that Palmer and his wife had left London, where they were reunited Thursday after he was held hostage for 12 days.

Palmer, Mrs. Palmer and their youngest son, Joe Don, 13, were among 153 passengers and crew aboard TWA Flight 847 when it was hijacked June 14. Mrs. Palmer and her son were among the first hostages to be released.

Amal militia leader Nabih Berri set Palmer free in Beirut, citing his heart problem. Palmer's doctor said he was to undergo a heart catheterization to see how much arterial blockage he had.

Palmer said he will return to Saudi Arabia, where he worked as an air-conditioning engineer.

De la Madrid meets with relatives of two hostages

NUEVO LAREDO, Mexico (AP) — President Miguel de la Madrid Friday told relatives of two Americans held hostage in the Middle East he would look into the possibilities of diplomatic activities seeking their release.

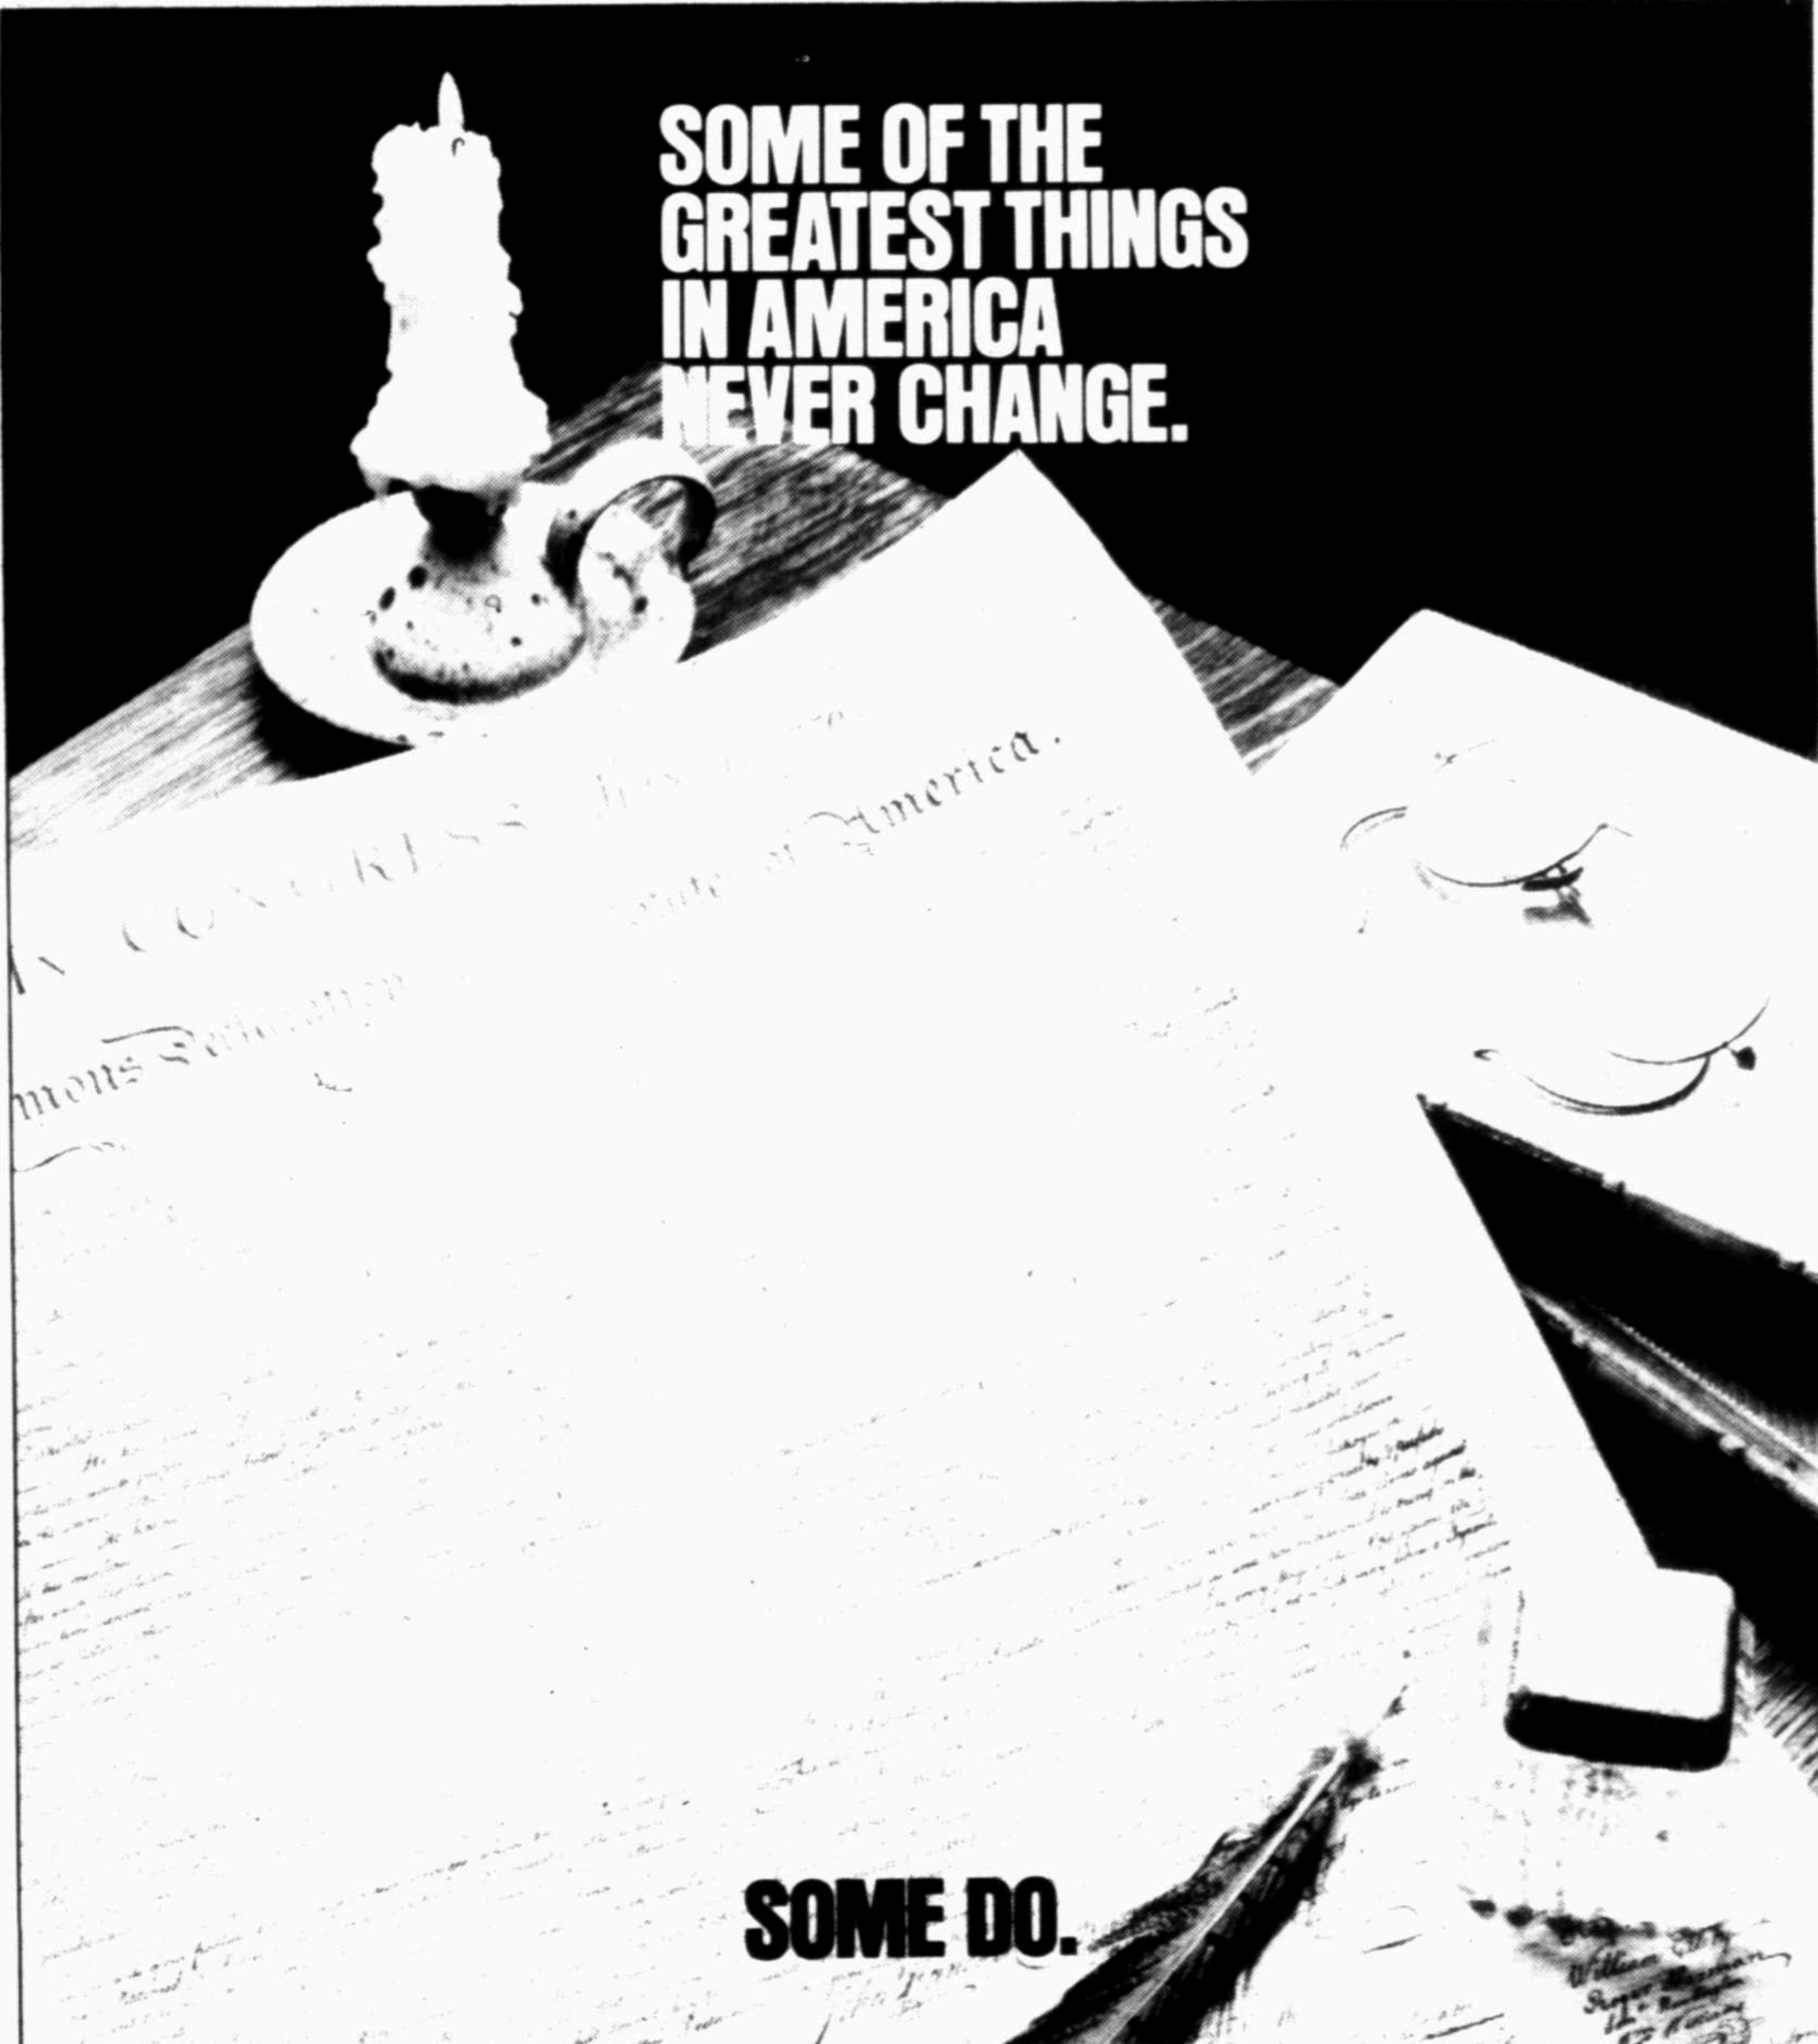

The government news agency Notimex reported that de la Madrid expressed his concern about hijackings and other acts of terrorism in his unscheduled meeting with the families from Laredo.

De la Madrid met with Irma Garza, a native of Mexico, and her daughter, Irma Trautmann, both of whom were aboard the Trans World Airline flight hijacked two weeks ago and whose husbands remain hostages. The husbands are Vicente Garza, also a Mexico native, and Robert Trautmann.

"It concerns me as a human being, as a president of a nation that is a friend of the United States and in your case for being a situation of American citizens of Mexican heritage," de la Madrid told them.

"The problem is difficult and...the government of President Reagan is making its best effort to have an effective result."

U.S. Savings Bonds now pay like money market accounts! At the current rate—10.94%—you could double your money in less than seven years.

Just hold your Bonds five years or more and get the new higher variable rates. Plus, you get a guaranteed return. That means you can earn a lot more—but never less than 7½%. That's the kind of change anyone can appreciate.

But some of the best things about Savings Bonds haven't changed. They're still as safe as ever. They're still exempt from state and local income taxes. And since Bonds cost as little as $25,

U.S. Savings Bonds. Now paying 10.94%.

Or easier still, through the Payroll Savings Plan where you work. Today, more than 5.5 million Americans are saving the easy way—through Payroll Savings. Isn't it time you joined them? That's a sure way to appreciate how much Bonds have changed for the better.

they're as affordable as ever.

What's more, Savings Bonds remain a great way to keep our country strong.

You can purchase Bonds almost anywhere. At neighborhood banks, savings and loans and credit unions.

Variable rates apply to Bonds purchased on and after 11/1/82 and held at least 5 years. Bonds purchased before 11/1/82 earn variable rates when held beyond 10/31/87. Bonds held less than 5 years earn lower interest.

For The Price Of What Most People Think An Alfa Romeo Costs, They Could Actually Buy Two.

Considering the sophisticated technology and engineering that go into every Alfa Romeo, it's not surprising people have a misconception about the price. For example, the DeDion suspension on our GTV-6 can only be found on a $140,000 Aston Martin.

So go see your Alfa Romeo dealer. You'll be so impressed by our affordable 1985 cars, you just might decide to buy two. The 1985 Alfa Romeos start at only $13,495.*

THE NEW LOOK OF LUXURY.

The 1985 Buick Park Avenue.

Buick proves that tomorrow's luxury doesn't have to look like last year's limousine. It can be bright, fresh, and aerodynamically elegant. It can be more efficient in design without sacrificing more traditional values like spaciousness, rich appointments, smooth riding comfort, and a multitude of standard luxury features. It can be everything the 1985 Buick Park Avenue is. And it can be yours today Wouldn't you really rather have a Buick?
