Discoverer II Is In Orbit

By BILL WILKS
United Press International

VANDENBERG AFB, Calif. (UPI)—Scientists working against 900-1 odds hope to recover an instrument package today from the polar-orbiting Discoverer II satellite.

But officials must first determine whether the 1,600-pound baby moon has stablized in a flight position horizontal to earth, necessary before the 195-pound instrument capsule can be ejected over the Pacific Ocean.

Signals from the Air Force satellite, blasted into space Monday as part of a long-range project designed to lead to manned vehicles, were received "loud and clear" at stations in Hawaii, Alaska and here.

The launching took place at this base about 170 miles north of Los Angeles.

An attempt at Cape Canaveral, Fla., Monday to send up two earth satellites in a single Vanguard rocket failed when the rocket's second stage did not fire properly.

The Vanguard carried in its third stage a metallic cylinder designed to collect data on the earth's magnetic field and another satellite made of an inflatable plastic balloon which was to drift slowly in a descending orbit around the earth and be visible to Moonwatch teams.

Discoverer II was reported by the Air Force orbiting the earth every 90.84 minutes at a speed of more than 17,000 miles an hour. It ranges from as far as 243 miles from earth to as close as 156 miles.

If Discoverer II stabilizes, a ground station at Hawaii will give the signal which will eject the small instrument package which will float to earth suspended from a parachute.

Reds Claim Success

It will be the first attempt to recover a capsule from an orbiting satellite by this country. The Russians claim to have made such a recovery.

Cargo planes trailing two 30-foot poles behind, with a trapeze device stretched the 30-foot width of the poles, will fly by the slow-falling capsule and attempt to snag it in mid-air. They will have about 10 minutes to accomplish their task before the package hits the ocean.

Three Navy destroyers will circle the Pacific to fish out the capsule if the planes miss it. The capsule, besides carrying valued data, is equipped with a radio beacon and a dye marker which will assist sailors to spot it in the water.

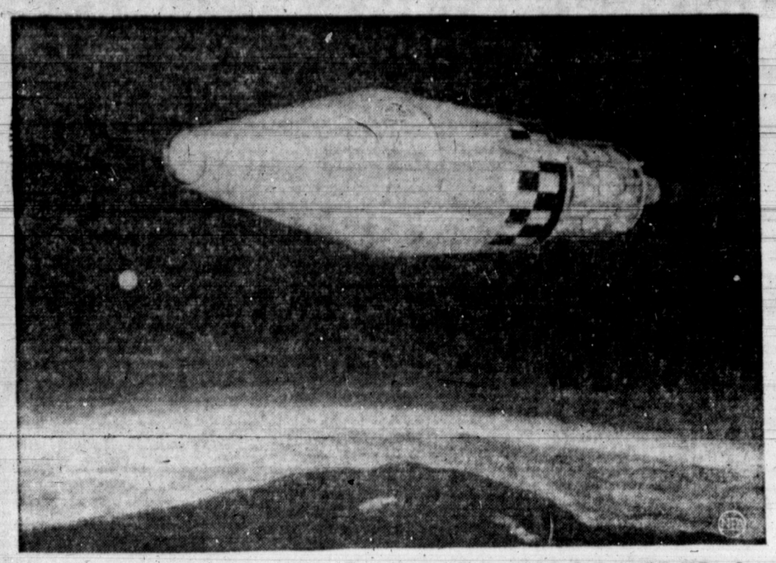

The C-119 cargo planes to be used in the recovery project have been training near Hawaii. They have been reported very successful in their practice attempts.

May Last Month

With the successful ejection of the capsule, the satellite will be rocked off its orbit and begin an erratic circling of the earth. After several days it will plunge back into the dense earth atmosphere and disintegrate, scientists believed.

The satellite would probably last up to 30 days orbiting the earth if it is decided that a successful ejection cannot be made.

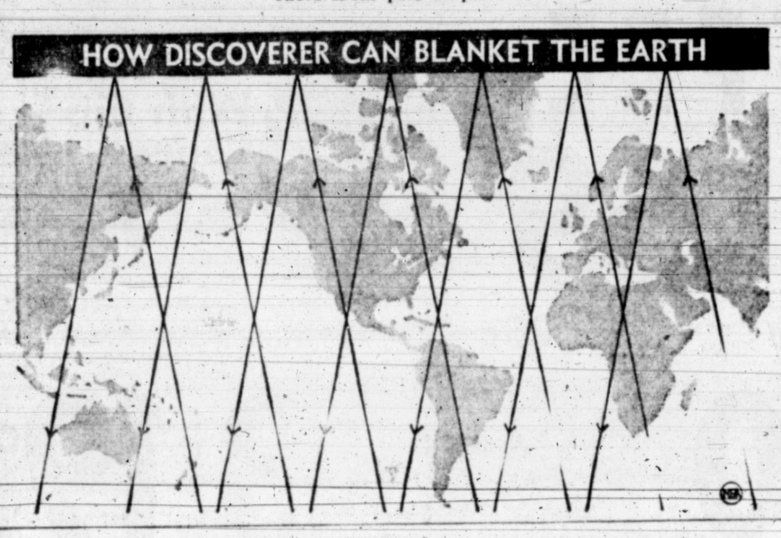

William H. Godel, director of planning for the Advanced Research Projects Agency, said shortly after the Thor-assisted satellite was launched that chances of recovering the capsule were 1000 to 1, but he lowered his estimate to 900 to 1 after being informed the baby moon had achieved an orbit.

SAGA OF DISCOVERER I

With U.S. scientists fighting 900-to-1 odds of recovering the nose cone from Discoverer II, fired into the heavens Monday, here is some background on our first polar-orbiting satellite, Discoverer I. Drawing above shows how the two satellites would look entering their polar paths several hundred miles above the earth. The entire second stage of Discoverer I reached orbit . . . 18.8 feet long and weighing 1,300 pounds. Discoverer II's baby-moon in orbit weighed 1,500 pounds. Chart, left, depicts how Discoverer I was fired southward over the uninhabited Pacific. Because the earth rotates within the ring of the polar orbit, the "shadow" of the satellite traces a spiral pattern around the globe, at times moving southwest and at other times northwest. Flat projection below shows in simplified form how the resulting crisscross pattern will eventually take Discoverer I over every portion of the earth as it races from pole to pole.

Two Red Jets Buzz U.S. Car go Plane

Transports Are Raked By Migs

By JOSEPH B. FLEMING
United Press International

BERLIN (UPI) — Two Soviet jet fighters buzzed an American Air Force cargo plane and forced it to reduce altitude while it was crossing East Germany on a flight from West Berlin April 3, a U.S. embassy spokesman said today in Bonn.

An American spokesman said the new incident would not prevent the United States from making more high altitude flights to and from Berlin any more than the first did.

"We stand on the position we already have expressed to the Soviets that we recognize no ceiling in the air corridors and we will continue to fly as high as we please when we please," he said.

It was the second such buzzing incident and came while the United States and the Soviet Union were embroiled in a series of protests and counter protests involving another buzzing by MIGs on Good Friday, March 27.

Only Monday the United States delivered a protest to the Soviet Foreign Ministry in Moscow charging that Russia intentionally created a hazzard to flight safety in the Berlin air corridor when it buzzed the first plane.

A new protest against the second incident has been lodged at the Berlin air safety center, informed sources said.

"Both planes were harassed because they were flying at altitudes above 10,000 feet in the 20-mile-wide air corridor leading from West Germany to West Berlin, 110 miles inside the Iron Curtain. The United States does not accept such a ceiling on its flights.

The incidents were considered significant because most American transport planes fly at high altitudes and such flights might be necessary to supply the city of West Berlin should the Communists begin a new blockade of the city.

The first plane buzzed was a C130 which usually flies at an altitude of 20,000 feet or more. The second one was a C97 which usually flies at 10,000 to 15,000 feet. It was the one forced down to a lower level by menacing sweeps by the MIG jets.

In an oral protest following the April 3 incident the Soviet representative at the four-power Berlin air safety center repeated his

Dulles To Begin New Treatments For Cancer

By STEWART HENSLEY
United Press International

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State John Foster Dulles was expected to begin today or Wednesday cancer treatments that will determine whether he can resume an active foreign policy role.

President Eisenhower held in abeyance any decision on Dulles' future in the government pending evaluation of the new treatments at Walter Reed Army Hospital. The President visited Dulles in his hospital room for 45 minutes Monday.

Associates of the 71-year-old secretary said it would be a miracle if he could continue for long in the Cabinet post he has held since the start of the Eisenhower administration.

There was no advance word on what type of new treatments Dulles would get. White House News Secretary James C. Hagerty said that whether the treatments would involve surgery or further massive doses of radiation would be announced when they begin.

Begin London Talks

Dulles underwent radiation treatment before flying to Florida two weeks ago for a rest. But after an X-ray examination in West Palm Beach, he returned Sunday to Walter Reed on the advice of physicians.

The report that Dulles was unlikely to be able to resume his role as chief Allied negotiator in the cold war came as the Western powers were seeking agreement on a formula for dealing with Russia at the foreign ministers' meeting in Geneva beginning May 11.

Diplomatic experts from the United States, Britain, France and West Germany began talks Monday in London to try to work out a unified plan for negotiating with the Soviet Union on Berlin and Germany.

Sen. George D. Aiken (R-Vt.), a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, predicted Dulles would resign if his physicians advised him he could not attend the foreign ministers' conference.

Pampa Man Gets 7 Years In Rape Case

AMARILLO — Jimmie Dean Rexroat, 20, of Pampa was sentenced here Monday to seven years in the state penitentiary, after pleading guilty to a charge of assault with intent to rape. Judge Gene Jordan of the 47th District Court passed sentence.

Rexroat had been indicted for rape Jan. 7 by a Potter County grand jury, but District Attorney Wayne Bagley permitted him to plead guilty to the lesser offense. If Rexroat had been convicted of rape, he could have received a death penalty.

The indictment resulted from a charge that Rexroat raped a 26-year-old North Amarillo housewife on Dec. 21, 1958.

After his capture, Rexroat told police officers about three separate incidents. The first occurred on the Fritch Highway outside Amarillo. The 20-year old Pampan said that he forced a woman driver off the highway into a ditch, entered her car, struggled with her, and cursed her.

Rexroat told the arresting officers that a half-hour later he attacked a 26-year-old housewife in northeast Amarillo, after kicking in the back door of her house. He said that he ripped off her clothing as she struggled.

Two hours later, Rexroat entered another house in the same neighborhood and raped another 26-year-old housewife.

The young mother told officers that she was holding her child as Rexroat entered the room. She said that he pushed her to the bed and raped her.

FATHEREE IS SECRETARY

Steele To Head School Board

Newly-elected Warren Fatheree and Elmer Wilson took their respective places on the Pampa School Board Monday afternoon and, after introductions, the course of business flowed without a hitch.

Aubrey Steele was elected president of the Board. D. E. Holt was named vice-president, and Warren Fatheree was the board's choice for secretary.

The board, in one hour, ran swiftly through an agenda that included a report on school construction in Pampa; the adoption of the same school tax schedule for oil as used in 1958 despite lower production in the Panhandle Oil Field; and the strong possibility that a second class for "exceptional" children will begin in September.

Superintendent Knox Kinard at the meeting's opening introduced B. R. Cantrell of Cantrell and Co. Architects, who reported that school construction around the city is proceeding more or less on schedule.

Cantrell said he believes both the Baker addition and Travis Elementary will be ready for operation Sept. 1. The addition onto Pampa High School, he said, is moving along smoothly despite a shortage of bricklayers.

The high school electrical system was brought under discussion by Gordon Lyons, district manager of the Southwestern Public Service Co. He said the present system is "loaded to the top," and recommended the installation of a centrally - located transformer valt in place of the present system of three separate transformers.

The School Board recommended that Lyons and Cantrell look further into the matter and report back to the Board.

The Board also instructed Cantrell to install water softening units in the heating systems at Lee, Austin and Travis schools to combat the problem of waterpipes "liming up".

Turning to other matters the Board considered what was termed the school district's decreased valuation due to the fact that oil production in the Old Panhandle Field had dropped 10 percent.

It was decided to make up for the valuation reduction "elsewhere" rather than increase tax rates or step-up the fields production schedule. The Board estimated that increased building activity in the school district would compensate for decreased oil field activity.

In other tax business the Board officially appointed DeLea Vicars, L. L. Sone, E. M. Samples and Air Safety Center repeated his

New Comission Hears City Financial Report

Ed Myatt took the reins of mayor from Lynn Boyd this morning at the first meeting of the newly-elected Pampa City Commission, a meeting that steadily developed into one of the most illuminating in many weeks.

Following the usual order of business the commission settled back to hear Secretary Ed Vicars' report on the city's financial status as of March 31 — halfway point on the current budget.

A discussion among Vicars, Myatt and the commission steadily developed a picture of the city's participation in such activities as alley development and waterlines, and other city policies heretofore not explained in such detail.

The discussion was meant as a basis of information for new commissioners James Crawford Jr. and H. V. Wilks, and gave the commission a solid basis for work in future months.

During the commission's business session it was decided May 19 will be the date of a runoff election in Ward Three.

The commission also approved payment of $218 to election judges and clerks in the April 7 city election. Presiding judges in each ward will receive $12 each, and clerks will receive $10.

Three men, James Poole, Gene Lewis and George Scott, were appointed to the board of tax equalization by the commission.

Each of the men received words of praise from Myatt, the commission and from Assessor Aubrey Jones.

Myatt was also called upon to sign two proclamations, one declaring the week of April 23-30 as Motion Picture Appreciation Week, the other declaring that Tuesday, April 21, is DeMolay Day.

DeMolay members next Tuesday will take city offices, among them places on the City Commission.

Local Theatre Manager Paul West, on hand for the theatre proclamation, took the occasion to compliment the Pampa Fire Department and Chief Ernest Winborne for "a job well done" during the recent LaNora Theatre fire.

West described Chief Winborne's concern following the fire and Winborne's unquestioned devotion to the job.

This morning's meeting was opened with an invocation by Dr. E. Douglas Carver of the First Baptist church, an innovation that likely will be retained.

SO, WHO'S ALL WET, HUH!

MIDLAND, Tex. (UPI) — It looked like a man from Mars walking down the main street of Midland Monday night, but it was only Cecil Kidwell, searching, he said, for water.

Kidwell, 26, wore a skin diving suit, diving mask, yellow swim fins and he carried a loaded spear gun. When police stopped him and asked what he was doing, he replied:

"Looking for water. I want to skin dive."

Red Intervention Regretted By Nehru

By EARNEST HOBERECHT
United Press International

NEW DELHI (UPI) — Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru expressed new regrets today at the Chinese Communists' armed intervention in Tibet and said he did not think the Dalai Lama would be able to return to Tibet now.

Nehru said he regretted that Peiping had not followed its promise to preserve the autonomy of Tibet and observed that the Chinese Communist government had resorted to armed "intervention" to "put down the anti-Communist revolt.

The Dalai Lama, granted political asylum by Nehru, still was reported resting at the Indian army hill station of Bomdila in Assam. He will take temporary refuge around April 21 at the hill station of Mussoorie where he is expected to confer with Nehru.

New reports from Tibet said the Chinese had consolidated their military positions in some parts of Tibet and had begun to screen Tibetans, arrest some of them and seize their private arms.

The Chinese also have set up special courts to try arrested Tibetans and in some places, particularly areas inhabited by Khampa tribesmen, the Reds are holding mass trials in which defendants are given no chance to defend themselves, reports said.

Moscow Radio today confirmed the rebellion still was blazing in Tibet and blamed it on support from the United States and Britain and "the American puppet on Taiwan, Chiang Kai-shek, who organized the delivery to weapons and supplies to Tibet."

Moscow said the situation in Tibet is "on the way to normal" but added, "Not all the rebel bands have been disarmed as yet."

WHERE'S THE IMAGINATION

LONDON (UPI) — What can a young couple do on a honeymoon without a television set?

Nothing, said honeymooners Jim Johnston, 21, and his bride, Sheila, 19, as they cut short their stay in Inverness, Scotland.

"Our cottage had no TV set," Johnstone complained. "There was nothing to do except eat and sleep."

EXPRESSES CONCERN

Prominent School Principal Takes Life

Harlan A. Yoder, principal at Woodrow Wilson elementary school since 1938, this morning took his own life with a shotgun in his home at 1215 Williston.

Mr. Yoder, 57, died at 9 a.m. from what Justice D. R. Henry described as a shot from a 12 guage shotgun that entered the man's face. He had just arisen from bed and was dressed in pajamas.

Friends of the Pampa educator said Mr. Yoder had been ill the past nine months. He had been on leave of absence from Wilson school since September and since that time had been hospitalized for high blood pressure. He was described as extremely despondent in recent weeks. Recently he returned home.

His body was found by Mrs. Yoder and a private nurse in a bedroom closet. Mrs. Yoder had heard the shot but at first believed it was a garage door slamming.

Mr. Yoder was born Oct. 15, 1901 in McPherson, Kan. He graduated from McPherson high school and McPherson Teachers College, and moved to Pampa in September, 1936.

He taught at both Pampa Junior High and Senior High schools before he was appointed principal at Woodrow Wilson in 1939.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Harlan (Fidelia) Yoder, at the home in Pampa; one son, Gordon of Roswell, N.M.; and one daughter, Mrs. Gerald Neher, a missionary at Nigeria, W. Africa. Mr. Yoder was a member of the First Presbyterian Church.

Rubirosa Survives Embassy Bombing

HAVANA (UPI) — Dominican Ambassador Porfirio Rubirosa, representative here of a government denounced repeatedly by Premier Fidel Castro, narrowly escaped death last Friday night when unidentified terrorists bombed his embassy, it was announced today.

The bomb fell in a patio a few feet from where Rubirosa and his French fifth wife were sitting. The attackers also fired several shots at the building. No one was injured.

A wall shielded the ambassador and his wife, Odile, a former actress, from the bomb blast.

Other diplomats accredited to the Cuban capital sent a six-man delegation to the Foreign Office to demand that the government guarantee Rubirosa's "personal safety."

Foreign Minister Roberto Agramonte said the attack was an "act of terrorists." He promised an official investigation.

The diplomatic delegation headed by the papal nuncio and including the ambassadors of Spain, Argentina, Brazil, Chile and Mexico, demanded increased police protection for the Dominican Embassy and for the persons of the ambassador and his wife.

Rubirosa's ex-wives include Dominican strong man Rafael L. Trujillo's daughter, Flor de Oro; French actress Danielle Darrieux and American millionairesses Doris Duke and Barbara Hutton.

The Board also decided to "absorb" an increase in group life insurance rates for teachers. The increase — eight cents per $1,000 — was called necessary because the insuring company reported it had paid out more than 100 percent of the money collected last year. It was disclosed that 160 Pampa School employees are covered under the existing group plan.

Supt. Kinard closed Monday's meeting after he was given authorization by the board to open a second class for exceptional handicapped children if and when the need arises — probably this September.

Kinard said one such class now exists at Woodrow Wilson school. If a second class is formed, one class will be for physically handicapped children, and the other for so-called slow learners. Kinard said he felt a second class would be in operation this fall, if a qualified teacher if found.

Lewis Speaks At Red Cross Meeting Here

"First aid and safety work just go hand in hand," Alvin Lewis, a safety man for the Northern Natural Gas Company, told directors of the Pampa Red Cross this morning. Lewis spoke at a monthly breakfast following the presentation of a Red Cross first aid film.

"In our company we have cut our accident rate way down through first aid," he said. "If all employees in industry get interested in first aid and get their families interested, we'll have a much safer community."

Lewis, with the help of H. H. Gilliam, first aid area man, has just completed a first aid course, that added ten new instructors to the Pampa and Carson County Chapters.

Bert Pemberton, local first aid chairman, introduced Lewis to the directors and showed the second part of a Red Cross first aid film made in Washington, D. C.

Directors discussed the possibility of sending a young man to a small crafts school this summer in Ardmore, Okla. The school will run June 3-13.

John Gikas, Chapter chairman, announced the annual meeting for May 12. At this time H. V. Wilks' nominating committee will make its report and officers will be elected. There are three outgoing directors who have served three years on the board. They are Bob Carmichael, Foy Barrett and Ray Kuhn.

A committee was appointed to look into the matter of a new cabinet for the Red Cross office. Bob Carmichael, Foy Barrett and Newt Secrest were named to the Cabinet Committee.

America Gets Nuclear Talks To Fresh Start

GENEVA (UPI) — American willingness to accept a limited atomic test ban appeared today to have got the Geneva nuclear talks off to a fresh start despite a mild Soviet rejection of the plan.

Soviet delegation leader Semyon Tsarapkin reacted with a "no," when the United States offered the proposal at Monday's first post-Easter meeting of the conference. However, he promised to give the plan careful consideration.

The proposal called for a step-by-step nuclear ban, beginning with an immediate bar on atmospheric explosions up to 30 miles above the earth's surface and under water. Additional bans would be worked out later by the U.S., British and Russian controls commission to be set up by the proposed treaty.

It represented a major shift in American nuclear policy, which previously had called for an unlimited atomic ban backed by a strong, tight nuclear controls system. The Soviets have been demanding an unlimited, all-time ban with fewer controls.

Western sources said an initial limited ban would require far less than the 180 static control posts advocated by the experts for detection of all nuclear tests and would eliminate the need for mobile test inspection teams that would rush to investigate the sites of suspected violations of the treaty.

The West hoped this would allay Soviet fears that the West wanted to use the nuclear ban treaty to set up an extensive espionage system inside the Soviet Union.

claim there is a 10,000 foot ceiling on all Allied flights to and from West Berlin, the Bonn spokesman said. The United States has never accepted this.

The C97 was using the southernmost of the three 20-mile-wide air corridors and was flying at an altitude of about 12,000 feet when the two Soviet jet fighters approached "from the rear, in attack formation."

They drew level with the U.S. aircraft, ranged along either side about 100 feet from the American wingtips, the spokesman said. Then without notice the two MIGs shifted position in a dangerous maneuver.

One fighter crossed over the top of the American plane, the other crossed just under the American's belly. At this point, the spokesman said, the U.S. pilot decided to drop down to below 10,000 feet.

After he did so, he apparently was permitted to proceed across East Germany without further harassment, the spokesman said.

TOO MANY CURVES

JOAO PESSAU, Brazil (UPI) — The local civil service commission issued Monday an order it said was designed to cut down on loiterers and sight-seers in government offices.

It directs girl employes not to come to work in low-cut blouses or skirts that are cut to "enhance the exuberance of curves."

SEE BETTER, TALK LESS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Irish writer Padraic Colum said Monday the electric light has dimmed the fine glow of Irish conversation.

"In the old days a family and its friends would gather around the peat fire for both light and warmth and there wasn't anything to do but talk, so they became famed for their conversational ability," he said.

THE CHOSEN SEVEN

These are the seven test pilots chosen to train for the risky honor of being the first American to ride a satellite into space. Standing behind models of the space-Carrying capsule and the launching vehicle in Washington, they are, from left to right: Navy Lt. Cmdr. Walter M. Schirra, Jr.; Navy Lt. Cmdr. Allen Shepard, Jr.; Air Force Capt. Virgil Grissom; Air Force Capt. Donald K. Slayton; Marine Lt. Col. John H. Glenn; Navy Lt. Malcom S. Carpenter, and Air Force Capt. Leroy G. Cooper, Jr.

Seven Astronauts Subjected To Physical, Mental Stress

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The seven test pilots picked for the Mercury manned satellite project already have been through enough to make an ordinary mortal holler uncle.

If they don't wonder what space flight can do to them that hasn't been done, they're not human.

For 7½ days and three evenings at the Lovelace Clinic in Albuquerque, N.M., they submitted to every indignity doctors could think up for physical examinations.

Then for six days and three evenings at the Wright Air Development Center Aeromedical Laboratories in Dayton, Ohio, they were buffeted with "stress measurements" and with various psychological evaluations."

Some Exhausting Tests

In the Wright ordeal, for example, they were required to fill out a 568-item questionnaire and then, without pasing for breath, give an acceptable answer to the query, "Who am I?"

The exhaustive and exhausting tests to which the Mercury Astronauts were subjected were detailed Thursday by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Reporters at a news conference with the astronauts asked which of their ordeals they liked least. One complained that wherever the doctors found part of the body into which they could push something into, they pushed—"as far as they could go."

Another lamented the time spent on a "bicycle treadmill." A third said he was not overjoyed by the requirement to swallow a long tube for some gastric examination or other.

The layman schooled by science fiction in the horrors of space—weightlessness, disorientation, claustrophobia, and such—might wonder if life at Albuquerque and Wright was any better.

At Wright, for example, doctors:

—Made the candidate hop 20 inches high every two seconds for five minutes.

—Forced him to walk a treadmill until his heart hit 180 beats per minute.

—Required him to plunge his feet suddenly into a tub of ice water.

—Asked him to make sense out of a control panel with 12 constantly changing signals, each requiring a different response.

—Packed him into a space suit and for one hour checked to see how his heart operated at a simulated altitude of 65,000 feet.

—Isolated him for three hours in a dark soundproofed room to see if he could stand it.

—Put him in a rotating machine to test his ability to suffer with poise pressures many times that of gravity.

—Heated him for two hours at 130 degrees.

—Asked him to control, blindfolded, a tipsy chair with built-in tendencies to whirl in three dimensions at once.

'Prominent' Refers To Eisenhower

By MERRIMAN SMITH
UPI White House Reporter

AUGUSTA, Ga. (UPI) — Backstairs at the White House:

Know what President Eisenhower is called over the ground-to-air communications system of the White House?

"The prominent."

That's code, see.

When the President's plane, the Columbine III, is approaching a landing field away from Washington, personnel of the Army Signal Corps aboard the aircraft and on the ground are in communication via portable shortwave radios which are about the size of portable typewriters.

This system permits the exchange of last-minute details between the air-borne party and the advance group on the ground. It also frees the plane crew from having to transmit this type of information when they have their hands full bringing the Columbine in for a landing.

The other day here in Augusta, airport spectators could follow this drama of the airwaves quite easily. One of the Signal Corps sets, sometimes manned by agents of the Secret Service, was perched atop a parked car and the nearby crowd could hear the monotone interchange with the plane.

"Angel, this is spicy," squawked the loudspeaker.

"Angel" is the Columbine and "spicy" was the ground unit.

The radio traffic dealt at some length with the last - minute addition of an Army general to the welcoming party which would greet Eisenhower after landing.

"The general has just landed here by military aircraft and will be in the party greeting the prominent," said one voice on the radio.

"Thank you," said another voice, obviously speaking from "Angel," and adding, "We'll pass this word back to prominent immediately."

Which amused the daylights out of the airport crowd. They'd come to the airport to see President Eisenhower land and learned that behind the scenes, he's not referred to as the President, but simply as plain old "the prominent."

IRAQ FREEZES OUT AMERICAN BUSINESSMEN, JOURNALISTS

Foreign News Commentary
By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Editor

As Communism tightens its grip on Iraq, one of the most pressing world questions is, what happen now to Iraq's oil?

It is an important question because Iraq sits in the middle of the great Middle Eastern oil pool and, by itself, is the world's sixth largest oil producing country.

This correspondent, on a recent visit to Baghdad, put that question directly to Dr. Hashim Jawad, Iraq's urbane and sophisticated foreign minister. His reply was:

"Iraq's ties are with the West. Most of our income comes from oil and our oil goes entirely to the West. Our pipelines are directed toward the West."

Big Freezeout

American news correspondents and American business alike are being frozen out of Iraq and Western prospects there now appear dim indeed.

But, so far as oil is concerned, there are three elements which today force Iraq to maintain its ties with the Western nations.

One is the oil pipelines. The pipelines handling Iraqi oil run from Iraq to Syria and thence to Mediterranean outlets in Syria and Lebanon. There is no connection with Russia or any of its satellites except via Basra and the Persian Gulf.

A second, and impelling one, is the fact that Russia at this moment has no particular use for the Iraqi oil. Russia is itself an oil exporting nation and has immense and still untapped oil reserves of its own.

And a third is that presently it would be almost impossible for Iraq to nationalize its oil and seek its own oil markets.

In 1951, under then-Premier Mohammed Mossadegh, Iran nationalized its oil and repudiated its contract with the Anglo-Iranian Oil Company of Britain. Iran soon found it had neither the technicians to draw out the oil nor the facilities to market it.

No Income Taxes

By 1954, and with U.S. aid, the dispute finally was settled. But by that time, Iran practically was bankrupt and the world had managed splendidly without the oil on which Iran's economy depended.

Under its 50-50 deal with British, American and other oil companies, Iran today takes in well over 200 million dollars annually in oil revenues. By law, 70 per cent of these revenues must be diverted to national development projects. As a result, income taxes in Iraq are almost non-existent.

So long as relations between Iraq and the United Arab Republic remain in their strained state, Iraq must always have the nagging worry that the Syrians might some day cut the lines. They did that during the Suez crisis and the cost to Iraq ran to about $700,000 per day.

Will Look To West

If this should happen again, it will be to the West and not to Russia that Iraq looks for aid. In fact, Jawad grimly told this correspondent:

"We should regard such an event as serious indeed. But, in this case, it would not be Iraq and the U.A.R. alone. The big powers would be involved."

There seems ample reason to believe that Iraq even now may be attempting to increase either its income or its oil output at the expense of the Western companies. But, for now, it seems certain Iraqi oil will continue to flow to the West.

Revenge Is Sweet! Harvesters Take 2nd Victory Since '48 Over Amarillo, 12-6

Rick Pezdirtz ★ purely paydirt

One of our favorite baseball tales comes from the acute pen of John Lardner, the celebrated author who does occasional sports yarns for such trival compensation as yachts and things.

John was discussing the weather and such other deep subjects with Mr. Willie Mays, the infant supreme of the Giants, whom Sports Illustrated features on last week's cover and of whom has come of age as the hub and mainstay of the 'Frisco baseball club, they say.

WILLIE MAYS
. . . the basket catch

"Do you think you will ever break Ruth's record?" asked Lardner of Willie.

"Well, I tell you about that. I don't zakly know," said Willie. "Ruth who?"

This, of course, is a hilarious little stretch of the imagination, suitable mostly for buying yachts.

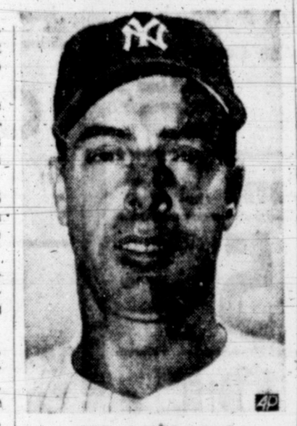

Babe Ruth's record of hitting 60 home runs in one season is the most famous of all sport records, even surpassing another of the Babe's illustrious marks, that of eating 32 hot dogs at one sitting.

But that home run record has been approached several times by such citizens as Jimmy Foxx, Hack Wilson, Ralph Kiner and others. Some minor leaguers have evened bettered the figure.

However, if you please, for sheer unapproachable heights, that record doesn't touch a much-dimmer mark held by Mr. Joseph DiMaggio, who once performed daily miracles for the New York Yankees.

When DiMaggio hit safely in 56 consecutive games, he hung himself a real rag on the bush. That record will take some breaking indeedy.

Common Name, That Smith

JOE DIMAGGIO
. . . whatta record

It was May 15, 1941, when DiMaggio stepped up to bat against one Edgar Smith of the Chicago White Sox.

DiMaggio spanked a single that drove in a run. And continued spanking singles and doubles and things for 55 more games in a row.

Included in his spree were 15 homers and 55 runs batted in. In 22 of those games he got more than one hit.

On July 17, at Cleveland, another pitcher named Smith opposed DiMaggio. This one was named Alfred J.

DiMaggio grounded out twice, walked once, and hit into a double play, and stopped his streak.

But he had stretched out the most fabulous mark of all time, in our grubby little old way of thinking.

Wee Willie Had 44

In comparison, the National League record is held by an ancient warrior named Wee Willie Keeler, who prided himself on hitting 'em where they warn't.

Willie hit in 44 straight games in 1897, the same year Archie Moore was born.

The Modern National League mark is held by Tommy Holmes, a modest 37 games for the old Boston Braves in 1945.

Ain't Everything Easier Today

What brings this all to mind is a hardly publicized bit of action taken last year by the National Association of Baseball Writers, with whom we hold a '59 membership card. You may not recall or have been told, but they passed a rule aiding such streaks.

No longer can a player's hitting stretch be interrupted by cruel fate. Bases on balls, hit-by-pitcher, sacrifice bunts or flys or interference won't count against the hitter.

In other words, he must have a fair chance to hit the ball and prolong his streak. If he's hit safely in 23 games, and in the 24th game, he walks four times, that game doesn't count. He gets another chance the next day.

The writers thought that this new rule would make it easier for someone to shatter DiMaggio's record. They're probably right. It's like spotting Kate Smith 10 yards against Citation. It cuts the miracle down a degree or so but who can notice?

Leafs, Canadiens Play Third Stanley Cup Game Tonight

United Press International

TORONTO, Ont. (UPI) — Can the Toronto Maple Leafs, who rallied to beat Boston in the Stanley Cup semi-finals after trailing 2-0 in games, pull the same trick on the mighty Montreal Canadiens in the finals?

Coaches George (Punch) Imlach of Toronto and Toe Blake of Montreal agreed today this question will be answered tonight when the Canadiens and Leafs clash in the third game of the final round at the Maple Leaf Gardens. Montreal leads in games, 2-0.

"If we can win this one, there won't be any doubt about it," was the way Blake put it.

AMARILLO — Nine young Pampa High School students put aside their history books Monday afternoon, and moved into Amarillo's Sandie Park to make history.

The game was even more one-sided than the score showed. Pampa clobbered two Sandie hurlers for 14 hits, including three extra-base blows, and pitcher Jimmie Walker didn't allow Amarillo a solid, non-flukish hit until the seventh inning.

This was only the second Pampa win over the Sandies, since the current series between the squads begin in 1948. It was the third District 3-4A loss for Amarillo in five years; and it marked only the second time in the last five years that the Sandies have been out of the District lead.

Monday's game left idle Borger all alone in the district lead, with a 2-0 record. Pampa, Amarillo, Tascosa, and Lubbock are all tied for second with 2-1 marks. Monterey is 1-2, Palo Duro 0-2, and Plainview 0-3. The Pampa-Sandie game was the only contest scheduled Monday.

Today, the Harvesters were, to return to Amarillo for a 4 p.m. game against the Palo Duro Dons. Kippy Williams (3-0) was Pampa Coach Deck Woldt's mound choice. Also scheduled today are Tascosa at Lubbock, Monterey at Plainview, and Amarillo at Borger.

The Sandies were never really in the game. Pampa teed off on starting pitcher Ivan Flinn in the top of the first inning, and when the smoke cleared, six runs had crossed the plate, 12 Harvesters had batted, and Flinn was taking a shower.

Actually, Pampa made only three hits in the first inning — singles by first baseman Larry Stroud, centerfielder DeWayne Glover, and catcher Terry Haralson. Two errors, a wild pitch, two hit batsmen, two walks, and a sacrifice accounted for the rest of the damage.

After pitching to eight batters, Flinn left the mound with one out and four runs in. Bob Diggs took over, and allowed two more runs to score before retiring the side.

Harvester second baseman Ruben Strickland set some sort of record in the big first — a record few hitters will try to break. He was hit by pitched balls twice, by two different pitchers.

The first inning, however, was only a warmup. Later, almost everyone in the Pampa lineup began getting solid wood on the ball. Often, the horsehide was snagged by an outfielder, but more often it fell in safely.

The Harvesters did their most solid hitting in the fourth inning, when they tallied two runs on a triple to deep left by Gary Wills, a ground rule double by Glover which took one bounce over the left field wall, and an error.

Pampa added five more safe bingles in the fifth frame, plus three runs. Walker singled and was picked off first when a sacrifice play failed; Strickland singled, Stroud doubled, Bobby Stephens singled, Wills hit a sacrifice fly, and Gary Hill singled.

The only other Pampa run was scored in the second inning on a single by Wills, an outfield error, and a boot by the Sandie shortstop.

Stroud led the Harvester hitting with four hits in four official times to the plate. The lanky first baseman has now hit safely in 8 of his last 11 trips to the plate.

Wills, Glover and Strickland each got two hits. Wills had a triple, Glover and Stroud doubles. Strickland and Glover, as well as Stroud, scored two runs, but Wills led the scoring parade by crossing the plate three times.

Walker pitched a fine game, though the hurling was generally overlooked during the rash of Harvester base hits. The only hits off the little right-hander were a bunt by Bucky Lea in the second inning and a sun-aided double to centerfield by Ken Grenewald in the fifth frame.

Grenewald and George Tiffany got solid singles off Walker in the seventh, to give Amarillo a total of four hits.

The Sandies scored three unearned runs in the first inning on three walks and three errors; added another in the fifth on two walks and Grenewald's double; and got their last two in the seventh on a walk, Grenewald's and Tiffany's singles, an error, and a sacrifice fly resulting in a run and a freakish double play.

Pinch-hitter Burleson, with Grenewald on third and Tiffany on second, with one out, hit a fly to Wills in deep right. Grenewald scored easily from third, but Tiffany had failed to tag up at second and was thrown out from Wills to Strickland to shortstop Wendell Ridgway. This was the third out, but under a seldom-used rule, Grenewald's run counted, since he had crossed the plate before the out.

Harvester fielding left much to be desired, but their fielding lapses were hardly noticed between hits. They committed seven errors — four at third base, two by the pitcher, and one at first base.

Austin Tops Texas Loop

United Press International

Tony Diaz' tight-in-the-clutch pitching kept the Austin Senators riding atop the Texas League standings today.

The right-hander was touched for 11 hits last night by San Antonio, but he held them to three one-run innings while his mates used 11 hits and five Mission errors for an 8-3 victory and a 3-0 season record.

Corpus Christi also remained unbeaten, taking a similar 8-3 decision from Victoria for a 2-0 loop mark.

Amarillo stayed in the thick of the early-season scrap for recognition with a 7-6 triumph over Tulsa that gave the Sox a 3-1 record. Bert Bart's solo homer contribution to a three-run eighth inning helped the Sox to their victory.

Golf Association Meets Thursday

The Pampa Women's Golf Association will hold a luncheon and business meeting at the Country Club Thursday, beginning at 12 noon. Members of the association, and anyone else wishing to attend, should make reservations by noon Wednesday at the Country Club.

Ray Robinson Goes to Court

NEW YORK (UPI) Sugar Ray Robinson turned to the courts today for help in keeping his world middleweight championship.

Attorneys for Robinson caused a writ to be served Monday on Gen. Melvin Krulewitch, chairman of the New York State Athletic Commission, who on April 3 ordered Robinson to sign by noon on April 15 to defend his crown against former champion Carmen Basilio or be stripped of the title.

The writ directs Krulewitch to appear in state Supreme Court at 10 a.m. Wednesday—two hours before the deadline on Robinson expires to show cause why he should not be restrained from vacating Robinson's championship.

Robinson has been dickering with various promoters for a rematch with Basilio, but so far has reached agreement with none of them.

Sugar Ray never has defended the crown he won back from Basilio on March 25, 1958, even though commission rules call for a title defense at least every six months.

TAKES NEW POST

NL Prexy Favors Third Big League

CINCINNATI, Ohio (UPI)—President Warren Giles of the National League admitted Monday he has changed his views and now favors a third major league, but said he knew nothing of a report that money was ready of the teams selected.

"It's news to me," Giles said at Milwaukee when asked about a report here that financial backing was ready for a third team.

Cincinnati Post and Times-Star Sports Editor Pat Harmon, in a copyrighted story, quoted Giles as saying it would be "much easier to form a new eight-team major league than to expand the present leagues from eight to 10 teams." Last November Giles said he favored expanding present leagues.

The story also said financial backing was ready and the teams named.

Would Take Years

But Giles said a third league was a "long way off." He said he thought it would take about 10 a par with the present leagues. a par with the present leagues

"There are problems of financing, players and other things," he said.

The report that broadcaster Harry Wismer said backers for the new league had pledged the money at a meeting three weeks ago drew surprised reactions from other baseball officials.

Paul Crosley Jr., president of the Cincinnati Reds, and Gabe Paul, general manager, said they had not heard of plans for the new league.

Paul said he thought the present leagues "would cooperate" with a new league.

Joe Brown, Pittsburgh Pirates general manager, foresaw more problems for a third league, if it operates independently, "than if it works through present baseball." He said he had not heard of definite plans."

Names Cities

"They would find it very expensive to meet the present pension system for players," Brown commented.

Frank Lane, Cleveland Indians general manager, said he thought expansion of the two existing leagues to 10 teams was the "logical forerunner of a third league."

The Post and Times-Star story said teams in the new league would be New York, Houston, Montreal, Toronto, Dallas, Minneapolis-St. Paul, and two still to be selected.

The report said the New York team would play at Flushing Meadows in a new park built by the Port Authority. It said financial backing was pledged by a group brought together by William Shea, chairman of the New York City Mayor's Committee For Baseball.

Loop Leaders Open At Home

By FRED DOWN
United Press International

The San Francisco Giants and Chicago White Sox make their home debuts as unbeaten, front-running contenders today when an estimated 265,000 fans are expected to view major league baseball's seven "secondary" openers.

Off in front with three straight victories under their belts, the Giants and White Sox will be out to keep the pressure on the defending league champions in the next six days. The Giants have three games each with the Chicago Cubs and St. Louis Cardinals, and the White Sox play six games against the Kansas City Athletics and Detroit Tigers before either hits the road again.

The Giants are sending Jack Sanford, acquired from Philadelphia during the winter, against Dave Hillman while the White Sox have Billy Pierce going against Kansas City's Ralph Terry. A capacity crowd of 22,500 will be on hand to welcome the Giants home and some 25,000 will be on hand when the White Sox face the Athletics.

Big Crowd At L.A.

The biggest crowd of the day—when teams which opened the season on the road play their first home games—will be an expected 70,000 in Los Angeles Coliseum when the Dodgers open at night against the Cardinals. Lefty Johnny Podres has been tapped for the Los Angeles pitching assignment and probably will be opposed by Lindy McDaniel.

The Philadelphia Phillies are at Milwaukee and the Pittsburgh Pirates are at Cincinnati in the other National League action. The Phillies have Seth Morehead slated to face 22-game winner Warren Spahn, who opened the season April 10 with a shutout against the Pirates, and the Pirates have sophomore George Witt slated to go against Bob Purkey. Purkey beat the Pirates in Cincinnati's "advance opener" last Thursday.

The world champion New York Yankees have Don Larsen opposing Arnold Portocarrero of the Baltimore Orioles, the Washington Senators are sending Camilo Pascual against Ike Delock of the Boston Red Sox and the Detroit Tigers have nominated Jim Bunning to oppose Herb Score of the Cleveland Indians in the other American League games.

Score Tries Comeback

The Braves, eager to defend their "attendance title" against the threat of the colossal potential of the Los Angeles Coliseum, expect "only" 42,000 today. But they are convinced a better club and civic pride will enable them to draw more fans than the Dodgers do in their vast if misshapen stadium.

A key game in the American League finds Score making his first start since last July 15 against Detroit. Hit hard in exhibitions and wild in a relief effort last Friday, Score is attempting a comeback after two years of frustration. His troubles began in May, 1957, when he was struck in the eye by a liner off the bat of the Yankees' Gil McDougald.

The first few days of the pennant races definitely turned the spotlight on the Giants and White Sox—both rated strong contenders and both off to perfect starts.

Neither the Yankees nor Braves has lost, of course, but still are in the unexpected position of having to make up ground. With the season less than a week old, the stage already has been set for fireworks.

WALTER ROGERS REPORTS

Representatives Of Jobless Gather In Nation's Capitol

Last week the Nation's Capitol was visited by approximately 6,000 representatives of the unemployed. These jobless came from some 15 cities and gathered at the National Guard Armory to voice their complaints and to insist upon government action. The assembly was under the supervision of the AFL-CIO, as a Conference on Unemployed.

The meeting was addressed by a number of speakers, including George Meany, president, AFL-CIO; Walter Reuther, president of the United Auto Workers, and named as the author of the demonstration; Senator Paul F. Douglas (D-Illinois), and our own Senator Lyndon B. Johnson, majority leader of the Senate.

The group was also addressed by Secretary of Labor Mitchell and they had requested a speech by President Eisenhower. However, the President was in Augusta, Ga. and not only missed a visit with the unemployed, but also missed throwing out the traditional first pitch at the opening Washington-Baltimore baseball game. Some of the delegates at the Unemployment Conference appeared to be very bitter because the President had gone to Augusta, Georgia, at this particular time. Some of the speakers took advantage of this and made remarks about the President's absence that brought forth cat calls, boos and whistling.

Some of the group fell victim to food poisioning as a result of partaking of a turkey and dressing dinner, but everyone recovered. One man was arressed and taken off the train for brandishing a pistol. There seemed to be some difficulty in identifying the delegation he represented. He stated that when he went to get his unemployment check some two weeks ago, he was asked to sign another register. Subsequently, he received a notice that he was a delegate to go to Washington on the Unemployment Conference. He is alleged to have stated further that he didn't know anything about it, but "a trip was a trip and he wasn't doing anything anyway."

The meeting was most orderly and the complaints, the protests and the feelings of the delegates were aired without incident and in keeping with good conduct.

The Supreme Court

The mail has been bringing in many letters highly critical of the Supreme Court and some of its recent decisions. The "double jeopardy" case about which I wrote last week has brought in quite a few comments. These letters also go back and discuss other decisions with which the writers are in disagreement with the Court. The recent decision of the Court refusing to interfere with the ban on women being allowed to attend Texas A & M College has brought forth quite a bit of comment from a number of sources, both within our district and without.

The matter has been discussed editorially and in the syndicated columns in many of the Eastern newspapers. One of the letters I received, concerning the state of the nation, treated the Supreme Court problem by stating, "The Supreme Court should be confined to interrupting the law, rather than making it." The American Bar Association seemed to think that the Court was probably doing both, which probably explains why some of the lawyers in government service have decided to withdraw from the American Bar Association. No doubt, the Supreme Court should, like Caesar's wife, be above suspicion, but in a democratic government it will never be above criticism.

British Troubles

The British seem to be having some difficulties trying to prevent Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery from paying a visit to Nikita Khrushchev in Moscow. They seem to think, from dispatches, that Montgomery is totally void of tact and would probably turn out to be a trouble maker. Some think that he is prompted more by his desire for publicity than by his hope of making a contribution to the solution of some of the problems. As for me, I think he should be allowed to go. It seems that every time Great Britain sends a peacemaker to visit a foreign power, we end up in a world war. Perhaps if they would send a trouble maker over, it might contribute to peace. I might say further that, as far as I am concerned, Montgomery can stay in Moscow, and the same goes for some military prima donnas residing in some other countries.

Visitors

Last week was Cherry Blossom Week in Washington, and there were many thousands of visitors in town for the occasion. Some of them were from the Panhandle, and we enjoyed seeing them, as always.

Mary Whittenburg from Amarillo was in Washington with a group of her fellow students from Principia Upper School in St. Louis. They were seeing many of the sights in the Nation's Capital, and it was certainly nice o Mary to come by to see us.

From Borger, we had Rev. O. A. McBrayer, who is pastor of the Wesley Methodist Church there in Borger. Rev. McBrayer is in Washington attending a seminar and came by the office for a few minutes last week. We enjoyed seeing him.

It was certainly nice of Mary to friends, Mr. Alvin Hill and Mr. Morris Cobb from Amarillo. They were here on business, and we had a nice visit with them here in the office.

Soviet Diplomats Sound Nixon For Summer Tour

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Editor

From the foreign news editors assignment book:

The Sawdust Trail

Doctors Orders

The Kremlin also is wondering how a summit conference could be held this summer if White House physicians advise the President against making long trips. Khrushchev is more than willing to travel to Washington to see the President. The Russians also are considering the possibility the President might ask Vice President Nixon to sit in for him should summit negotiations prove long or drawnout. The Russians might be willing to accept Nixon. They are determined there will be a conference as close to the summit as possible. Their object, as one Soviet diplomat put it, is to "thin out the military fuel" in Europe in order to maintain a political status quo. First objective in the "thining out" process: Western troops out of Berlin.

More About Health

And what of Khruschev's health . . . and the recent report in a West German newspaper that he had been suffering fainting spells? The most authoritative line from the Kremlin is this: Khrushchev is not a sick man, but like any man of 65, he must watch himself carefully. He is beginning to tire easily and has long had liver trouble. It's pointed out that Khrushchev has had a far more strenuous, indeed gruelling life than most statesmen. This includes work in pre-revolutionary coal mines as well as the intense strain of working under Stalin and surviving the power scramble after Stalin's death. So the Kremlin IS concerned about Khrushchev's health. But no specific grounds for concern are seen at the moment.

Welsh Actor In Filmville Tries To Smooth Out Native Accent

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Welshman Richard Burton is playing an American for the first time in his movie career and working overtime not to sound "offensively British."

Through long hours of tape-recording his voice, and playing it back, the actor is ironing out his clipped accent.

"Fortunately, I'm portraying an Eastern American," he said between takes at Warner Brothers. "I would never play a Midwesterner or a Californian."

Up to now Burton has starred in historical epics, mostly in England. His half-dozen Hollywood films have been limited to costume dramas and British roles. He hopes his performance in "The Bramble Bush" will be convincing enough to pave the way for more American parts.

Accent An Asset

"For some reason a British accent is an asset in historical movies," he observed. "It also comes in handy for playing royalty—of any nationality.

"Because I'm Welsh and spoke nothing but Welsh until I was eight years old — my accent isn't offensively British. Actually there are three types of English spoken in the isles. First there is standard English, which can be understood anywhere. Then there is Oxfordian English which indicates a 'superior breed.' The third is Kensington English which is so extreme it can barely be spoken or understood.

"But I must say, it is easier for an Englishman to lose his speech mannerisms than it is for an American.

"So far no American has been accepted playing a Britisher in an English picture."

Career In Eclipse

Burton, back in Hollywood after a three-year absence, boomed to international fame seven years ago playing Marcellus in "The Robe," which has been seen by more millions than any film made in the past 15 years.

Since then his career has gone into something of en eclipse.

"Artistically 'The Robe' wasn't a good picture, but it had tremendous popular appeal," he said. "It didn't help me as an actor, yet I don't think it harmed me either.

"The trouble with epics is you have so many lines to speak there isn't time to act. A smaller picture like 'The Bramble Bush' affords an opportunity to deal in silence.

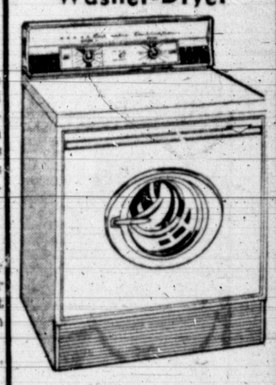

"I've worked harder on this film than any other," he went on. "In addition to conquering my accent, I'm trying to assume American mannerisms.

Cadillac

World's Best Synonym for "Quality"!

In every land where automobiles are seen and appreciated, the Cadillac name has become a part of the language.

In fact, it would be safe to say that "Cadillac" is now an international synonym for "quality".

What a telling tribute this is to the motor car that bears this proud name—and that has given the Cadillac ideal such widespread recognition.

And certainly, that ideal of quality has never been more clearly evident—or more beautifully delineated—than it is in the current "car of cars".

First of all, it can be seen—in the majesty of its lines and contours . . . in the regal grace of its silhouette . . . and in the jewel-like elegance of its finish and trim.

Or it can be felt—in the brilliant response of its great new engine . . . in the incredible smoothness of its ride . . . and in the ease with which it drives and handles.

It can even be sensed—in the superb taste of its interior appointments . . . and in the matchless character of its beautiful fabrics and leathers.

And yes, it can be heard—in the marvelous quiet of its operation . . . and its truly wonderful silence on even the roughest of byways.

In brief, the Cadillac name has never before represented excellence in such great measure—as a personal appraisal will amply demonstrate.

We suggest you visit your authorized Cadillac dealer soon—and view your favorite highway through the windshield of a 1959 Cadillac.

It will give you a new understanding of how truly fine a motor car can be.

ADENAUER QUITTING TO ASSURE THAT POLICIES GO UNBROKEN

Foreign News Commentary
By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Editor

Man of the week: Konrad Adenauer, chancellor of West Germany.

The place: Bonn.

The time: Tuesday, April 7, 1959.

This week a politically stunning announcement came from Bonn. It said that West Germany's "Iron Man" Chancellor Konrad Adenauer had agreed to become a candidate for president of West Germany.

The announcement was the more stunning because it came almost within a month of the start of East-West negotiations critical for the future of Germany, and at a time when the Western nations were striving desperately for a united front with which to meet the pressure from Russia and its Communist satellites.

About 96 per cent of the farms in the United States are family-operated.

The announcement raised two questions immediately:

Who possibly in West Germany could fulfill Adenauer's role?

How much influence could Adenauer, now a "lame duck" chancellor, wield on the May 11 foreign ministers' conference on which Germany's future may depend?

Neither Question Answered

At week's end, neither question had been answered.

And the second question was complicated by the fact that it was the second major change in the Western lineup since last November when Russian Premier Nikita Khrushchev began applying the massive pressure designed to throw the Allies out of West Berlin and achieve a recognized independent status for East Germany.

Cancer knocked U.S. Secretary of State John Foster Dulles out of the lineup, even though his influence remained enormous.

Dulles and Adenauer between them had been recognized as the West's most unyielding opponents to retreat before communism.

Whatever his future, Adenauer's past has been impressive.

Now 83, he has been West Germany's chancellor since its establishment as a single, operating entity.

Despite the fact that Germany had been divided between East and West, the fact that West Germany still contained more than 40 million persons made it inevitably one of the world's major powers.

And coupled with that was the fact that under his leadership, West Germany had risen from the ruins of World War II to become Europe's major financial power.

Along with the nation's meteoric financial rise was an equal rise in the income of labor.

No Doubt of Future

Adenauer managed to re-establish diplomatic relations with Russia without once yielding an inch in his stand that ultimately the two Germanys must be reunited.

And, often to the extreme irritation of his Western Allies, his determination that a democratic West Germany must stand equal with other nations won for West Germany a leading voice in world affairs.

While the world may wonder about Adenauer's future, the "old man" seems to have little doubt himself.

On Wednesday, he said he is quitting as chancellor to assure that his policies continue in effect unbroken. He has made it clear he intends to choose his successor and dictate his works. Whether his influence extends that far within his Christian Democratic Union remains to be seen.

In Communist circles his resignation will be taken with rejoicing. But the rejoicing may be shortlived. Adenauer's previous stubborn refusal either to quit his office or to select a successor has been a cause for deep concern in Germany and for a Communist hope that upon his demise West Germany would sink again to chaos. It apparently is to prevent such a disaster that Adenauer finally reached his decision.

Kennedy, Humphrey Make Springtime Political Hay

United Press International

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two of the Democratic senators who are most actively seeking their party's 1960 presidential nomination are making some early springtime political hay.

Massachusetts' Sen. John F. Kennedy left Washington last Thursday on a nine-speech swing through Wisconsin and Indiana. He spoke first on Friday at the University of Wisconsin in Madison, and has continued to speak thereafter on just about all occasions. The swing is scheduled to end with a speech before Democratic diners today at Decatur, Ind.

Kennedy was down for a speech Saturday at Appleton, Wis., hometown of the late Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy. Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt has been gunning for Kennedy on charges that he is not forthrightly on record with respect to the issue she describes as "McCarthyism." Kennedy was hospitalized at the time the McCarthy censure resolution was voted in the Senate. His illness had developed from wartime injuries. Mrs. Roosevelt has indicated that she would oppose Kennedy for the 1960 presidential nomination but would accept him as the vice presidential nominee.

Humphrey Heads West

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey (D-Minn.) looks more like Mrs. Roosevelt's favorite and the favorite of the left wing, in general. Humphrey will address a Jefferson-Jackson Day dinner in Minneapolis on April 18 and thereafter take off on his first big scale invasion of the West. He will speak in Washington, Oregon, California, Utah and Wyoming.

Humphrey should find the far westerners congenial, at least, although they may not yet be ready as a body to climb aboard his bandwagon. The left wing is on the up among western Democrats, however, and Humphrey should feel pretty much at home. His Principal political problem lies in the South.

The problem in the South seems to be less whether Humphrey can get or expect any delegate support from southern Democrats than it is a question whether or not a great many of them would bolt a presidential ticket if Humphrey had the top spot. There are Democrats in the South who do not care for Humphrey.

Fostered Rights Plank

It was Humphrey in 1948 who rammed the party-splitting civil rights plank into the Democratic platform. That led to a Dixiecrat or state's rights bolt which chipped some presidential electors away from the Democratic ticket. Harry S. Truman was elected despite that or—as some unhappy Republicans put it—the Republican nominee, Thomas E. Dewey of New York, snatched defeat from the jaws of victory.

By 1952 the Democratic left wing was riding high. On July 19, 1952, just before the Democratic National Convention met in Chicago, United Press reported: "A left wing coalition studded with Truman administration figures was grabbing for control of the Democratic party today in maneuvers capped by a drive to bar the governors of Texas and Mississippi from next week's convention.

"Youthful Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey sparked the left wing drive by denouncing Govs. Allan Shivers, Texas, and Hugh White, Mississippi, as 'modern political carpetbaggers.' Humphrey declared open war on the South in his first formal appearance here, a news conference in which he said he and his associates would not compromise on anything."

Lawmakers Speed Up Proposed Bills

By LLOYD LARRABEE
United Press International

AUSTIN (UPI) — Lawmakers were efforting to speed up action on both spending and taxation bills today as the last four weeks of the regular session began.

The 57th Legislature is scheduled to adjourn May 12 — the 120th day of the session and the day legislator's salaries of $25-a-day will end even if the quitting date is extended.

On the taxation front, a select five-man subcommittee was scheduled to report to the House Revenue and Taxation Committee on an overall tax plan to support state government during the next two years.

Action on the spending front was also scheduled as Sen. William S. Fly of Victoria, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, docketed a meeting today on the Senate version of an appropriation bill for the 1960-1961 biennium.

The Senate Finance Committee will go over a subcommittee version of a spending bill that calls for appropriations of some 302 million dollars from the general revenue fund, some 30 million dollars less than a record spending measure approved last week by the House.

Overall, the Senate bill provides spending from all funds of $2,395,035,751, for the next two fiscal years, an increase of more than 223 million dollars.

Fly estimates the Senate draft would require 117 million dollars in new tax revenues — aside from the general revenue fund deficit of 65 million dollars at the end of the current fiscal year.

Under customary legislative procedure, the Senate will substitute its bill for the House-approved measure and the final spending measure on which lawmakers will act will be written by a joint House-Senate conference committee.

Arness Afraid To Watch Own Shows

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Jim Arness, king of TV's Western heroes, is fearless as Dodge City's marshal, but off screen the lumbering actor is afraid to watch his own shows.

"You're darned right I'm scared to watch 'em," Big Jim admitted.

"I'm afraid I won't like my own performances. We've made 157 episodes of 'Gunsmoke' and I'll bet I've seen less than 57 of them. Very often when I do watch I don't like myself.

"Sometimes I'm elated at what I've done. Then maybe the next week I can't believe it's me on the screen acting that badly. I ask myself how I could perform so ignominiously."

Jim, whose vocabulary is limited to monosyllables on the show, waxes profound and philosophical in person.

Has Faced The Extremes

"I've been before the public four years," he mused. "In that time I've had the extremes of acclaim and criticism. There's a tremendous spread of opinion on 'Gunsmoke' and my performances.

"There are those who think I'm a big, dumb, no-talent slob, and others who think I'm some sort of saint. So it's difficult for me to draw conclusions. In my heart I know I'm neither one. I haven't let the praise fool me, but the harsh criticism hurts and depresses me.

"But if you can't take both sides of the enchalada you don't belong in this business. You'd better get out and run a gas station."

"I realize it's a fleeting thing," he said. "How long is it going to last? It has been the top show longer than any other in TV history. So what?

"I can't live for the rest of my life on that. There is the future to think about. The end of 'Gunsmoke' won't mean the end of me. But I don't know what I'll do afterwards. When the show folds it might take me two or three years to find something else. I'll have to sweat out Matt Dillon. The question is whether I can make the public believe I'm someone else."

Realizes Advantages

The 6-foot 7-inch actor went on to say he would never refuse a role or series because of artistic principle.

"I used to. In fact I turned down 'Gunsmoke' for that reason once," he confided. "I'm not kidding myself that I'll go on to great dramatic triumphs and an Academy Award.

"Thanks to a realistic appraisal of myself I realize the advantages, and cash value, that can accrue from continuing to perform as I have.

"Right now nobody draws as big an audience as I do. But next year or the year after I could be nowhere. 'Gunsmoke' won't last forever, particularly if I keep up the volume of exposure. Inside five years people will be so tired of seeing my face they'll be sick."

One person who'll never get sick of watching Arness at work is Jim himself — he doesn't own a television set.

The Balance Sheet

This being a year when many major wage controls come up for renewal, we're bound to get into the old standard hassle about profits.

In any given instance it is fair to argue the issue whether a company is taking an insufficient, a wholly reasonable, or an excessive profit.

But a good deal of harm is done if the idea is accepted that all profits represent some kind of gravy to be sluiced off by company managers of their own benefit.

As pointed out recently by the magazine Steelways, profits perform a necessary function in the provate economic system.

Either they must go to stockholders as vital reward to them for their investment in the company, or they must be reinvested in the business, or both.

Outside investment cannot be attracted without inducement. Profits, the prospect of gain, provide that.

More than this, the cushion of profit is needed to absorb part of the essential pressures for expansion and new development.

A vigorous, alert, effective business organization cannot live simply for today—and tomorrow. It must look years ahead, planning new products, exploring new market possibilities. The firm that doesn't may wake up one day to find its markets fading, its products no longer in demand. With that decline goes a fall-off in jobs.

Profits give a company something with which to bet on the future. Everybody — worker, consumer, stockholder — has a stake in that betting.

Congress On Trial

Some day, perhaps, there may be a public hearing or a public trial labeled: The People of the United States vs. the Government. At the moment such a logically-to-be-desired event is unlikely. The courts, themselves the arm of the government, could scarcely operate in a judicial manner when they are clearly self-serving agencies, and in all too many cases are demonstrating that they follow the direction of their masters with the accuracy of a rubber stamp.

But there's an interesting prelude to such a hearing presently underway in Washington. It was brought about by Vance Trimble, a reporter for the Scripps-Howard newspapers, who has been the instigator of a pair of lawsuits against the House and the Senate in which demand is made for access to payroll records, which at the moment are kept from public view.

Staff writer Trimble, thru two firms of attorneys, has taken legal action against Felton M. Johnston, secretary of the Senate, Joseph Duke, sergeant-at-arms of the Senate and Robert A. Brenkworth, financial clerk of the Senate. A companion lawsuit has been filed against Ralph B. Roberts, House clerk, and Harry M. Livingston, House disbursing clerk.

Trimble is asking, thru due process of law, to obtain access to the current payroll records of the Senate and House in an effort to find out just how much of your money is being given to whom, for what services. He asserts that he has repeatedly asked for this information, but has met with a constant rebuff at the hands of persons named. He claims that these records, since they deal with public funds, of right must be open to public gaze.

"The people have a right to know how Congress spends their tax money," Trimble says.

We hasten to add our voice to that of the Scripps-Howard people and Mr. Trimble. Altogether too frequently we've run across the same sort of thing ourselves, both at local and state level.

It is rather apparent to most of us who have been watching the maneuverings of our political masters, that they enjoy the cloak of secrecy at times and places where it cannot possibly be justified.

It was Trimble who, during the past few weeks, uncovered various instances of flagrant abuse of secrecy and privilege in the halls of Congress which shocked the nation. Colorado's Senator John Carroll was found with his daughter on the payroll, dragging down a handsome stipend while she continued going to school. The payment she received for her part-time services was enormous. Senator Carroll's belated reduction of her salary by $2,000, leaving it at a mere $10,500, failed to calm the people who are becoming jittery over the mounting evidence that they are ruled by men who are unscrupulous and venal.

The petitions which were filed in U.S. district court in Washington, last week, point out a few of these celebrated cases and added "that certain Senators are employing persons, from public funds, and using the services of such persons for non-public purposes."

Things like front porches diverted to office space back home have some folks riled up.

The petitions went on to say "that certain Senators are paying such persons as may be hired by them salaries in excess of those specified by the public laws; that certain Senators have on their payrolls certain persons who do not perform services commensurate with the salary paid."

Trimble, as plaintiff, claims that he has uncovered a wealth of additional information from sources he believes to be reliable, but he has been unable to verify these reports because he is denied access to information which of right should belong to the public as a whole.

Thus far, the evidence indicates that approximately one fifth of all the Congressional office holders are in the practice of performing nepotism — self-serving payments going to relatives on the basis of relationship rather than merit — and there is some indication that only the surface of the practice has been scratched.

We wish the Scripps-Howard people success in their enterprise, tho we do not anticipate it. Meanwhile, we might look forward to the ultimate hearing suggested in the beginning.

Hankerings

By HENRY McLEMORE

Old Mr. Anonymous Packs Big Wallop!

I like anonymous letters.

I don't always like, or agree with, what they say, but they pack a feeling of honesty that 90 per cent of signed letters lack.

"Anonymous" pulls no punches. If he considers you a retarded son of a centipede he says so, with no effort to couch his regard in palatable terms. He gets everything off his chest, and the fact that his chest might not be a very manly one, does not alter the sincerity of his opinion.

I am sure that a great many of us would like to write an occasional anonymous letter if we hadn't been raised and brought up to believe that anyone who didn't sign his name and give his street address, was a skulking poltroon.

There's an insurance company I'd like to write and sign "Disgusted." My home was robbed while I was in Europe and it refuses to pay on the grounds that I wasn't there to report the theft. My signed protests, in which I have pointed out that if I hadn't been going abroad and were going to be at home in the living room with a shotgun and a bulldog, I wouldn't have insured in the first place, have gotten me nowhere.

Another quality of the anonymous letter writer which I admire is his scorn of the stylized salutation.

The ritual of correspondence requires one to address even his worst enemy as "Dear Sir," or "My Dear Madam," or "Gentlemen."

This is as phony as a three, and a half-dollar bill, and "Anonymous" will have none of it.

He will address you as dear if he considers you dear, but if he thinks you are more correctly addressed as "You Ape," or "You Screwball," that's what you get. Let business firms rate you as a gentleman if they care to, but not old forthright "Anonymous."

The closings used by "Anonymous" are equally from the heart.

There is no "Very truly yours" to provide a ring of insincerity. He isn't very truly yours, and doesn't want you to get any idea in your head that he is.

Nor is he "Faithfully yours," or "Your faithful servant."

"Anonymous" much prefers to lay his true feelings bare, with such closings as "Go hang yourself," "You make me sick," "Shooting's too good you you."

Of course, anonymous letters aren't all derogatory. Some express a liking for you.

And these are the kind that upset me. I'd like to know the name and address of the writer so I could send him or her a five-pound box of chocolates, a dozen red roses, and my birth date.

"Union Coercion And Your Newspaper"

No. 4

This is the last installment of Joseph E. Brown's article, "Union Coercion and Your Newspaper", as published in the April issue of "The Freeman" magazine:

Consider for a moment what would happen if newspapers—all newspapers — became controlled by a single church. It is safe to assume that readers would be allowed to read nothing contrary to the doctrine of this church. There would be no broad cross - section of religious ideas and opinions, as we find in the pages of our American newspapers today.

Or what would happen if the press became controlled by the Republican Party, or the Democratic Party, or the Socialist Party? We would find only Republican or Democratic or Socialist opinions, and nothing else.

Using this parallel, it becomes easy to visualize what would happen if our entire newspaper industry knuckled under the thumb of trade unionism. We would read only the type of material that today is printed in labor union-operated organs.

There would be no diversity of opinions that we have today in the Americar press. And the key to the strength of our press is individualism.

The indirect approach by labor unionism in the destruction of freedom in the newspaper industry is a subtle one.

Initiative Is Stifled

In my years of newspapering, it has become increasingly apparent that more than any other single factor, personal initiative on an editorial staff is the spark that keeps one newspaper's star burning more brightly than its competitors. It is initiative that makes a reporter sniff behind every news handout. It is initiative that makes him refuse to accept anything at face value alone. It's initiative that kindles competition and, in turn, provides a better product.

But whether initiative can rise above complacency in an atmosphere of unionism is open to speculation. Will a reporter, for example, remain as dedicated if given the alleged "security" of a collective bargaining agreement? Since unionism tends to destroy individualism, will he expend extra energy, knowing advancement depends not upon what he can produce but what the union, by its force, can "get" for him?

In industry, mechanical advances in an era of technology have to a large degree offset the narowing margin of company profits brought about by union demands in many fields. But in the newspaper field, it still takes virtually as long to write a story, process a photograph, or prepare an ad, as it did ten or twenty years ago. The obvious alternative is to reduce staffs, devote less space to news which is time consuming to produce and adopt wider use of handouts and fewer features. Since a large percentage of handouts are produced by government information specialists in Washington, state capitals, and city halls, it is apparent the public will be getting more and more doctore' information rather than news objectively prepared.

Students Shun Newspaper Careers

A survey taken shortly before graduation time last June showed that the number of students in college schools of journalism destined for newspaper careers had dropped sharply from the year before. The total of journalism students was just as high, but graduates appeared to be eyeing careers in advertising, public relations, and related fields, while shunning city rooms in greater numbers. Educators were quick to theorize that the newspaper field is growing less attractive because salaries and other benefits have not kept pace with other American industries. Though this argument can be debated, it nevertheless represents widespread thinking.

My guess is that there are other reasons for the reluctance of our journalism bent younger generation to enter the newspaper profession. It is a simple rule of human nature that as individuals we cannot be herded into categories like inanimate milling machines or turret lathes. In a field as demanding on creative talent as the newspaper field, those participating cannot be regimented into the columns of statistics that the theory of unionism demands.

Likewise, freedom cannot survive where the individual is regimented and initiative is restrained by a collection of rules and regulations.

If we insist on driving young creative talent from the newspaper field to other areas by allowing the philosophy of trade unionism to downgrade this profession, we may awake one day soon to find our morning paper vastly different. Its news columns will no longer be free, in the sense that we know freedom. They will contain stories carefully slanted by union bosses to promote the ideas of collectivism and the advantages of a socialistic Welfare State.

A victory by the collectivists in the attack against our press, like the skirmish victories in New York and Lima, would be a sad day indeed.

Rule Of Thumb

Robert Allen Reports:

Ike Wants New Two-Fold Expansion

WASHINGTON — President Eisenhower wants a two-fold expansion of the program under which the government guarantees American business investments in foreign countries:

Increase the total authorization for such guarantees to $1 billion, from the present $500,000,000 ceiling.

Extend the scope of losses to be covered by these government guarantees to include revolutions, insurrections, riots and civil strife. Under existing law, these guarantees are limited to losses from war, expropriation and convertibility.

This double-barreled expansion would be part of the President's $3.9 billion foreign aid program — but without boosting that amount. The additional $500,000,000 for business guarantees abroad would be an authorization and not an immediate appropriation of funds.

Deputy Undersecretary of State C. Douglas Dillon presented this enlarged program at a private meeting of the House Foreign Affairs Committee. He stressed the following points:

Of the $4,00,000,000 in business guarantees so far approved by the government, more than half have been authorized in the past six months.

These guarantees protect U.S. investments in 38 countries; ranging from France and West Germany in Europe, Turkey, Iran and Jordan in the Middle East, Korea, Formosa and the Philippines in the Far East, to Haiti and Bolivia in Latin America.

Particularly contemplated are guarantees to expand U.S. business in Afghanistan, Sudan, Libya, Tunisia, Morocco, Pakistan, Thialand, South Vietnam and South America.

Following the discussion with Dillon, an informal poll indicated a safe bipartisan majority of the Foreign Affairs Committee in favor of the expanded guarantee program.

A Committee vote on this issue is slated later this month.

WHAT'S CAUSING IT — While sentiment in the House Committee was definitely approving, Deputy Undersecretary Dillon was subjected to close questioning.

"Why do you want these additional authorizations at this particular time?" asked Representative Chester Merrow (R.,N.H.). "This program has been in operation for several years, but this is the first time an increase is being asked."

"Leading businessmen throughout the country urged that," replied Dillon. "Their companies are either already doing business in foreign countries, or want to do that. A number of concerns are especially eager to build plants in Europe to take advantage of the 'common market' that is now underway there."

"Under your proposals, the government's risks will be substantially increased."

"Yes, in one way that is so," said Dillon. "But a number of factors are involved. This is a form of economic aid that is not a direct burden on the U.S. taxpayer. Also, in talking with business leaders we learned they want to build plants and invest abroad, but feel there should be more protection for their risks.

"We ascertained they are particularly concerned about riots, civil strife, insurrections and destructive disturbances of that type. By doubling the original guarantee program we will be able to meet the considerably accelerated requests for such protection by American businessmen."

Senators Theodore Green (D., R.I.), former chairman, Hubert Humphrey (D., Minn.) and Wayne Morse (D., Ore.) are making it clear they intend to raise a number of questions, in particular the following:

Whether the additional guarantees will adversely affect employment and production here at home; and, whether under this enlarged program companies doing business abroad will receive safeguards from the government that are not available in the U.S.

DIPLOMATIC POUCH — Acting Secretary of State Herter will confer with Cuba's revolutionary Premier Fidel Castro when he comes to Washington next week to address the American Society of Newspaper Editors. Herter invited Castro to have a talk, and he accepted. However, he will not see President Eisenhower because he is vacationing in Augusta, Ga. . . . Canada is urging that the summit conference be held in either Montreal or Quebec. Russia has indicated it's agreeable to that. The U.S. is not directly opposing this, but favors Vienna.

Next week, Marshal Tito will again blast the Kremlin in general and Premier Khrushchev in particular. The State Department has received advance word of this castigation from our embassy in Belgrade . . . Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon Johnson, Tex., is preparing a 'critical speech of the Administration's foreign policy. For this purpose, he has been conferring with former Secretary of State Dean Acheson, who heads the Foreign Policy Advisory Group of the Democratic National Committee. It recently issued a blistering analysis of the Administration's record in foreign affairs.

THE LADIES — Mrs. Clair Engle, wife of California's new Democratic Senator, was secretary to a Republican congressman before her marriage . . . Representative James Roosevelt (D., Calif.), oldest son of the late President, is telling his wife he has no objection to her traveling about the country giving talks in behalf of a cancer research fund, "provided you don't get as used to doing that as mother is." . . . Mrs. Vance Hartke, wife of Indiana's Democratic Senator, was a swimming star while attending university, and three of her children are junior Olympic swimmers . . . Robert Kennedy, young general counsel of the Senate Rackets Investigating Committee, and Mrs. Kennedy are awaiting their seventh child in June . . . Mrs. Eugene McCarthy, wife of Minnesota's Democratic Senator, was a college professor before her marriage. So was her husband, who taught political science.

Looking Sideways

By WHITNEY BOLTON

NEW YORK—Everybody knows that Rome wasn't built in a day. Not even Sandusky, Ohio. Or Harold Rome. Harold Rome is the one that fascinates me. I have never been to Sandusky and all I know about it is that the brothers Warner, of the film-making Warners, erupted from there. I have been to Rome, Italy, and can guarantee you that it wasn't built in a whole shoal of days. And Harold, the music man, took years, too. But Harold was an item for consideration as far back as the roaring days of the 20's. Two major things happened to Harold in the 20's; he passed eight years, not four, at Yale, because he was making so much money playing piano that he had an annual net twice what any professor there was earning and it seemed silly to let go of a good thing, and, when at last he did emerge from the ivied walls it was 1929—and I don't have to explain that to you.

"I was a graduate architect with shining dreams," he muttered the other night. "You know what people were building in late 1929? Apple stands. It does not take a finished architect to design and knock together an apple stand. But I did get a job at my chosen profession: I was hired architect at $10 a week. Although this was $8.15 a week more than most bank presidents were earning at the time, I took a haughty stance for $15 and was forthwith thrown, not ushered, out into the bleak streets. By then, I know what I had to do: I had to play piano and not design houses."

"My memory," I said, "was that even piano players were not glutted with food in the early 30's."

"I was fancy at the piano," he said, "I had a 'sound.' The sound was, to those listening: 'This kid sounds as though he could do much better things if people would give him a chance.' Harold Hecht gave me a chance. He was social director at a Katskills hotel and said: 'Look, boy. Piano you can play. For heaven's sake at least play it where there is a roof and three meals a day.' He gave me $150 for a whole summer, but I slept and ate well.

"In the fall a labor group decided it wasn't much harder to do a musical revue than to stitch ladies' coats. They even had a title: 'Pins and Needles.' It ran for months and my composer's royalties were the riches of Croesus, relatively speaking, of course. Then I did a musical for Broadway called 'Sing Out The News.' What survived of that minor distemper was a song of mine called 'Franklin D. Roosevelt Jones.' Then, as they say in hurried novels, came the war."

"In which you had a distinguished career?"

"Sensational. When young lieutenants were becoming generals in eight crawling months and a lieutenant colonel named Eisenhower dawdled into commanding general of the whole shebang, I skyrocketed from private to corporal in three full years. Naturally, with a boiling career like that my time was at a premium, but I managed to write a couple of soldier shows and when peace came, and none too soon or I might have made Pfc in regression, I did 'Call Me Mister.' After that came 'Wish You Were Here' and 'Fanny' and now I have 'Destry Rides Again' coming in. I have written 36 songs for it, all new, none from the trunk. For David Merrick you write new or get your hands chopped off. He doesn't want any trunk stuff."

"How did you and David get together on the Western musical?"

"He called me one day in his succinct way and said: 'Rome, there was a great Western movie called 'Destry Rides Again.' If you didn't see it, it's your loss. I am doing it as a Broadway musical and you are writing the music. Get going.' I like his soft, casual way with talent. Naturally, thus persuaded, I sailed in and wrote 36 new songs at white heat. If you ever work for Merrick remember one thing: work at white heat. He does not understand anything less."

All of which is why, in a few days or weeks, "Destry Rides Again" will roar into New York with 36 new songs by a man who decided that designing apple stands was a rueful way of life. But he has made a promise: he will design a miniature garage for my motorized lawnmower.

"Just to keep my hand in," he agreed.

The Doctor Says:

by EDWIN P. JORDAN, M.D.

A recent correspondent writes that her husband has been having a lot of stomach trouble and has been told he has gastritis. Information is requested.

Gastritis means inflammation of the inner lining of the stomach. It is not as common as some other disorders of the stomach or digestive tract. It is usually a simple inflammation which is followed by recovery when the source of the irritation has been removed.

It can and usually does result from something swallowed, such as an irritating food or such things as spices or alcohol. Although the stomach wall is acutely inflamed, the inflammation does not last more than a week, as a rule, and clears up without causing complications.

Symptoms usually start a few hours after swallowing the irritating agent. Loss of appetite and an uncomfortable feeling in the abdomen, sometimes with pain, are common. Nausea, headache, belching and slight fever are also frequent.

A severe form of gastritis can result from swallowing extremely irritating substances such as acids or lye. Such poisons may actually destroy the delicate lining membrane and cause an inflammation to develop underneath.

Also, some forms of gastritis follow or accompany acute infections such as influenza, pneumonia, measles or scarlet fever. Gastritis, however, is not of itself fatal, and if the disease which causes the gastritis improves, the gastritis will get better as well.

There are chronic inflammations of the stomach, too. The cause often cannot be discovered, though there are several theories. Symptoms vary a great deal, depending on how seriously the stomach has been involved and how long the condition has been present.

The treatment of all forms of gastritis, of course, depends on their nature, the cause, how long they have been present and the general condition of the patient.

Because it is now possible to look at the inside of the stomach, we now know much more about this organ. Attempts have been made to look into the stomach directly for many years. However, the early instruments were rigid tubes, and to use them to look into the stomach was much like making the patient a sword swallower in the circus.

Since 1932, however, the use of the flexible gastroscope has made possible the examination of the lining of the stomach not too difficult in skilled hands. In fact, it is now possible even to photograph the stomach lining.

THE NATION'S PRESS

INFLATION IN ACTION

(The Wall Street Journal)

The current Treasury financing ought to be a grim reminder to Congress of the dangers of unbalancing President Eisenhower's budget for the next fiscal year.

Starting today the Treasury will try to borrow $1.5 billion to help cover a heavy cash run on last week's exchange offering. Holders of more than 2 billion out of some $9 billion worth of public-held maturing securities chose cash instead of new issues, including an intermediate-term one. So instead of being able to stay away from the money market for large financing until April, as the Treasury had hoped, it must now turn to short-term financing. This not only complicates the Treasury's management of the public debt but also runs the risk of adding to the money supply and swelling the inflationary potential.

In other words, what we have here is one more demonstration that investors are reluctant to go for intermediate or long-term Government securities. And a major reason is that investors are not wholly confident in the view of the heavy deficits accumulated in the past 25 years, including the current fiscal year.

Now some people will tell you that we do not have inflation at the moment. It's true enough that prices have been fairly stable recently, at least as measured by the consumer price index, but then prices do not necessarily respond immediately to an inflationary stimulus. The far more significant point is that the Treasury's headaches stem from this year's $13 billion deficit. As Federal Reserve Board Chairman Martin put it the other day, the continuation of bank-financed Government deficits is "the high road to monetary inflation."

The real difficulty is not that these matters are too abstruse for comprehension in Congress or elsewhere. Part of the trouble is that inflation, for all its manifest evils, has a political appeal for many. It is the only way lawmakers, for example, can push through their favorite spending schemes without taking the politically unpopular course of raising taxes. They can say, sure the dollar is depreciating but look at all the prosperity we have. Unfortunately there are those in the business community who also seem to share a bit of this hankering for inflation.

To say that some politicians' inflationary bias is short-sighted is to put it mildly indeed. The almost continuous erosion of the dollar during the past generation is bad enough; will people still like inflation when the dollar is worth a dime or a penny? But that is not necessarily all. The untimate is a depression.

Running that risk, moreover, is totally unnecessary. All we need is a sense of discipline in our national affairs. This should not be so difficult; we know perfectly well we have to have it in our own individual lives.

The CRACKER BARREL

I wish I was a Connecticut Yankee. They've got a Governor back there named Abraham A. Ribicoff and he, in spite of all the exhilerating examples all around him, seems unable to latch on to the popular ideas of big budgets and high taxes. In fact, he's so backward that on November 23, 1958 he ordered all state agencies to CUT EXPENDITURES BY TEN PERCENT. And blamed if his peculiar notion didn't catch on. The public re-elected him overwhelmingly.
