Gorbachev asks Reagan for meeting

By ROXINNE ERVASTI

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev on Saturday called on President Reagan to meet him in Europe as soon as possible to negotiate a nuclear test ban agreement.

He made no mention of the superpower summit that is supposed to be held in the United States this year, which the two leaders announced at their first meeting in Geneva last November.

In a nationwide television address, Gorbachev said the Soviet Union's unilateral nuclear test moratorium — now in effect nearly eight months — will expire Monday, but that no Soviet tests will be held unless the United States continues its atomic weapons testing.

The United States conducted an underground nuclear explosion in Nevada on March 22.

Gorbachev said, "I am ready to meet President Reagan in the nearest future in London or Rome, or in any other European capital that will agree to receive us, in order to reach agreement on this question (of ending nuclear tests)." He said he did "not see any insurmountable obstacles to this — political, technical or any other."

"What is needed is the necessary political will and understanding of our mutual responsibility," Gorbachev said. "We propose to meet, exchange views on this crucial problem and issue instructions to draft an appropriate agreement."

In Santa Barbara, Calif., where Reagan is on vacation, White House spokesman Dale Petroskey did not issue an explicit rejection of Gorbachev's offer, but called on the Soviets to accept Reagan's "long-standing proposal that we have our experts meet" on limiting nuclear tests.

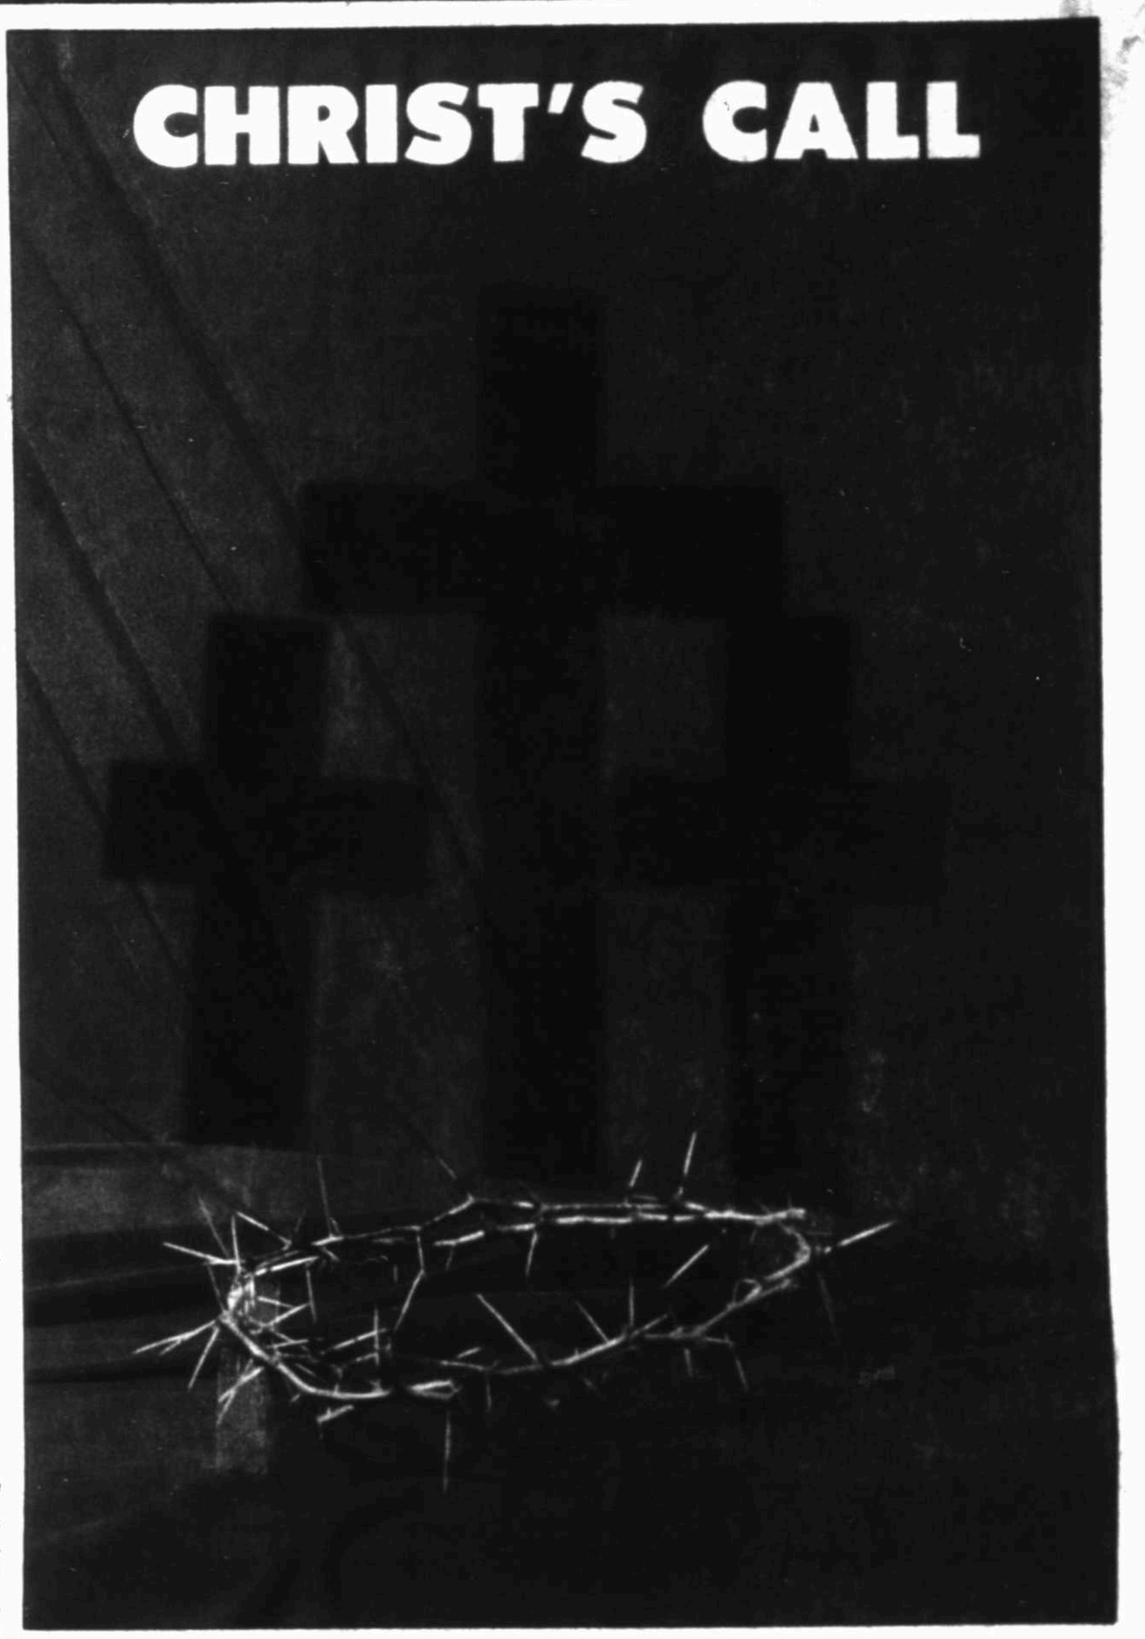

The statement also noted the agreement between Gorbachev and Reagan about meeting in the United States this year.

The Soviets announced in August a nuclear test moratorium to last through 1985. Gorbachev later extended the unilateral test ban to March 31, and then said the Kremlin would refrain from tests if the United States did.

Gorbachev said of the Soviet moratorium, "I can say that it is, as before, in effect until March 31, 1986. But even after that date, as it was announced, we will not conduct nuclear explosions, if the United States acts likewise. We are again giving the U.S. administration a chance to take a responsible decision — to end nuclear explosions, failing which, the Soviet Union will resume testing. This must be absolutely clear."

Wagon train headed west toward El Paso

From Staff Reports

The Texas Sesquicentennial Wagon Train passed about 60 miles south of Midland last week, heading west to El Paso. The train, which this morning was somewhere between Fort Stockton and Balmorhea, will stop in Midland on May 2 before completing its 3,000-mile trip at the Fort Worth stockyards July 3.

"We want to let everybody know they're coming," said Robin Jackson, executive director of the Midland Sesquicentennial Commission. "We hope a lot of people come out to see the wagon train coming in."

The wagon train left Sulphur Springs Jan. 2 on a six-month odyssey celebrating the state's 150th birthday.

"The idea started three or four years ago," when Sesquicentennial planners were inspired by a Bicentennial wagon train which had crossed the country in 1976, Ms Jackson said. Some veterans of that train have joined the current expedition.

MC race contrasts 'expertise, fresh viewpoint'

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Midland attorney Steve Kiser says he would offer a fresh viewpoint to the policy-making body of Midland College if voters on Saturday elect him to the Place 1 seat on the Midland Junior College District Board of Trustees.

His opponent, Midland College founding president Dr. Al G. Langford says his expertise in working with the State Legislature and with local taxing authorities would provide valuable assistance to the institution when it feels the affects of the slow-down in petroleum activities, a decrease in state funding and a decline in local tax revenues.

The candidates, though they have very different campaign philosophies, agree that strong leadership skills are an essential requirement for whoever takes the oath of office in May and begins a six-year term on the board.

"I don't think anybody is better qualified than myself to serve on the board at this time," said Langford, an independent financial consultant to the petroleum industry.

He received a bachelor's and master's degrees from Howard Payne University and his doctorate in education from Texas Tech University.

ELECTION '86

Langford

Kiser

■ League of Women Voters presents its Voters' Guide. — 6B

He was a high school coach and principal, coming to Midland in 1969 to serve as Midland College's founding president. He retired from that position in 1981.

Since that time, Langford has been self-employed in Midland, working with Henry Petroleum Corporation and now with Alta Energy as a financial consultant.

"Those associated with the petroleum industry realize that we are in for several rough years," Langford said. "Midland College is bound to be affected by the slow-down in petroleum activities, a decrease in state funding and a decline in local tax valuations."

He said the Board of Trustees must continue to look for ways to improve upon its program offerings at the college and strive to maintain a high standard of excellence. "As long as we continue to be the finest community college in America, I think we will be serving the needs of the people."

But the slow-down in the economy will require that the college cut back on nonessentials, Langford said.

That, he added, is where "I feel that my past experience working with the State Legislature and with local taxing authorities gives me an expertise which can provide valuable assistance to president Jess Parrish and the Board of Trustees.

"When I retired as president of Midland College, that concluded my service as an administrator. I've been assisting the college through its foundation, and I would like to be of service to the college through the policy-making Board of Trustees," he said.

— De Zavala School, 705 N. Lee St.; precinct 306.
— Midland Freshman School, 100 E. Gist Ave.; precincts 304, 305, 201, 203, 301, 302 and 303.
— Central Fire Station, 1500 W. Wall St.; precincts 205, 307, 309, 212.
— Senior Citizens Center, 2500 Delano; precincts 104, 105, 208, 402.
— Alamo Junior High School, 3800 W. Storey Ave.; precincts 102, 103 and 106.
— Rusk Elementary School, 2601 Wedgewood; precincts 101, 401, 405, 406.
— Greenwood School Administration Building, FM Road 1379; precinct 202.

The races these precincts will decide are:

— Districts 1 and 2: mayor, MC board and hospital board; includes county precincts 204, 206, 207, 209, 210, 211, 304, 305, 306, 308, 403, 404, 407, 408, 409.
— District 3: mayor, city council place 3, college and hospital; precincts 104, 105, 205, 208, 212, 307, 309, 402.
— District 4, mayor, city council place 4, college and hospital boards; precincts 102, 103, 106, 405, 406.
— Rural counties 101, 201, 203, 301, 302, 303, 401, vote in the college and hospital races.
— Greenwood, precinct 202, votes for Greenwood school trustees and hospital board.

Ector County school board names superintendent

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A 46-year-old Oklahoma-born school adminstrator has been named to succeed retiring Ector County School District Superintendent Bill Holm.

Following two final interviews Saturday morning, ECISD board president Mickey Jones recommended appointment of Hugh C. Hayes, currently superintendent of the Texarkana, Texas, school district. The lone dissenting vote to hire Hayes came from retiring board member Bob Clark, who said he favored hiring someone from within the school district to succeed Holm.

The board had received a total of 24 applications from individuals seeking to succeed Holm, Jones said. The field was narrowed to five, then four and then one, he said, with Hayes the top choice of a majority of board members.

Hayes, married and the father of four children, has been superintendent of the Texarkana school system since 1984. From 1980 to 1984, he was superintendent of the Lancaster school system in south Dallas County, and from 1978 until 1980, he was superintendent of the Spring Branch school system.

Hayes, who was born in Altus, Okla., is a doctoral candidate in educational administration at East Texas State University at Commerce. He earned his Master of Education degree in educational administration and guidance at Sam Houston State University and received his Bachelor of Science in 1962 from Lamar University, specializing in English, biology and physical education.

Hayes "can identify with the goals of our district and our problems."
— Mickey Jones, ECISD

Jones said Hayes "is a very outstanding individual and we think he can identify with the goals of our district and our problems. I think he'll be a very fine superintendent, one who will stay with the district for years to come."

In a brief interview after being hired, Hayes said, though this will be his first job experience in West Texas, he lived in Seminole, Seymour and several other West Texas cities as a boy when his father was in the oil business.

As to how his family reacted to their first trip to West Texas, Hayes said said, "Environmentally it's a good deal different than the Texarkana area, but we did live in the Dallas area for four years and this area is not unlike that."

Hayes said he doesn't anticipate any immediate changes. "First of all," he said, "everybody's undergone tremendous change as a result of House Bill 72 and we're basically in the same sort of situation, trying to adjust to that bill and determine exactly what it is the state board of education wants us to do.

"My understanding is that Ector County has an excellent school system, good administrators and good teachers," he said, "So I don't plan to come in and make any major changes."

Jones said Hayes will assume his new position July 1.

Board members have burned the midnight oil on many occasions and spent much of their weekend time in the past few weeks reviewing applications and interviewing potential candidates for the superintendent position. Board member Jim Nelson, following the hiring of Hayes Saturday, said board president Jones had done "yeoman's work" throughout the process, taking care of much of the work that ultimately resulted in the hiring of Hayes.

Factional violence disrupts talks on South African school boycott

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Factional violence that killed at least two blacks Saturday and injured about 20 marred the start of a conference at which black teachers, parents and students will decide whether to resume a big school boycott.

Police said members of Inkatha, a Zulu tribal group, attacked delegates preparing for the conference in the port city of Durban. In the ensuing clash between attackers and students registering for the conference, one Inkatha member was fatally shot and another was burned to death after a gasoline-soaked tire was placed around his neck.

The combatants fought with sticks, spears, rocks and guns.

Witnesses said other Inkatha members, who arrived at the conference hall in two buses, then drove away.

Several conference delegates said their cars were wrecked by fire bombs earlier Saturday.

Many of South Africa's 6 million Zulus are loyal to Chief Mangosuthu Buthelezi, chief minister of the Kwazulu tribal homeland near Durban. Buthulezi rejects violence as a means of ending apartheid, South Africa's racial segregation system, and has had repeated policy differences with militant anti-apartheid organizations.

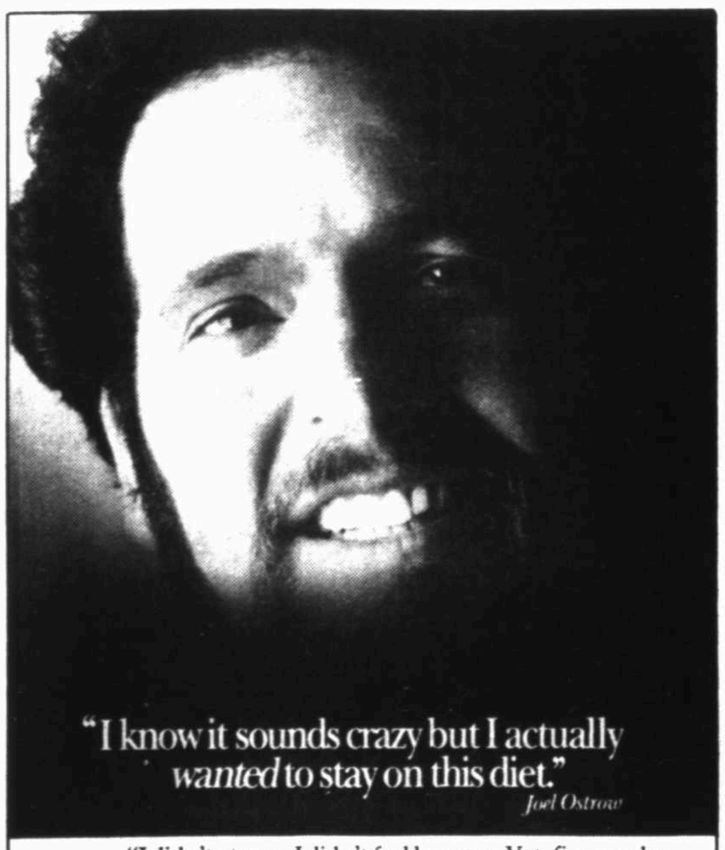

Despite the afternoon violence, more than 1,000 people showed up Saturday evening for the conference of the National Education Crisis Committee, including one student, parent and teacher from most of nearly 600 black districts across South Africa.

Closing arguments due in sanctuary trial

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Closing arguments are set to begin Tuesday in the trial of 11 members of the illegal-immigrant sanctuary movement, after five months of protracted courtroom battles and nearly two weeks of debate over jury instructions.

The only thing handled swiftly was the defense case. After lengthy jury selection, the prosecution's presentation and cross-examination lasted about 3½ months. Defense attorneys, however, rested their case without calling a single witness.

The sanctuary activists are charged with conspiring to smuggle Salvadorans and Guatemalans into the United States illegally. They argued that the Central Americans should have been allowed into this country as political refugees; the government contends the immigrants were merely seeking jobs.

Before the trial opened Oct. 22, legal scholars saw possible precedent in the case, in which evidence had been obtained through government infiltration of church activities.

But on Wednesday, prosecutor Donald M. Reno Jr. was still worrying whether he would be able to keep jurors awake during his summation without the use of elaborate charts.

Reno, a special deputy U.S. attorney, said he needed the visual aid of the charts because detailing the "complicated, protracted set of circumstances would put the most attentive juror to sleep."

U.S. District Judge Earl H. Carroll ruled Thursday that Reno could use his charts.

When the trial began in Tucson, the 84 courtroom seats were full.

By the time a third proposed set of jury instructions had been drawn up late Wednesday, the only two nonlegal spectators in Carroll's home courtroom in Phoenix were two reporters. Even three of the 11 principal defense attorneys were absent.

A day earlier, as technical arguments over the jury instructions wore on, Reno remarked that "so much of this is tedious and monotonous."

Over two weeks, Carroll and the lawyers had spent five full days fashioning instructions on what laws the jurors should apply in their deliberations. Those instructions are considered crucial guidelines in limiting what the lawyers can argue as they state their cases for the last time.

Carroll has set another hearing Monday to go over any remaining loose ends before the jury returns the following day in Tucson for the prosecution's closing statements.

Testimony has touched only peripherally on the most controversial issues that intrigued the scholars — a church-state confrontation stemming from undercover infiltration of church activities, matters of religious motivations, aspects of international law, and U.S. immigration and political asylum policy.

Carroll precluded those and several other defenses before testimony began.

One of his instructions to the jury says, in part, "The law does not recognize political, religious, moral convictions or some higher law as justification for the commission of a crime no matter how good that motive may be."

The defense did get some of its points across during cross-examination of the 17 government witnesses — 15 of whom were Salvadorans or Guatemalans, some named as unindicted co-conspirators, who came into the United States through Mexico with assistance from the sanctuary movement's "underground railroad."

The jury was excused at least as often as it was in the courtroom as the lawyers and judge went through hearings on numerous motions and arguments.

They ranged from allegations of selective prosecution, prosecutorial and governmental misconduct and judicial bias to threats of contempt.

The public was barred from one hearing with a reluctant witness, one of four who refused to testify for the government even under immunity. The four were cited for contempt and held until the defense rested its case.

Austin City Council to debate 'city of refuge' declaration

AUSTIN (AP) — The Austin City Council has set a Thursday debate on whether to ban city employees from helping immigration officials arrest refugees from war-town Central American countries.

The resolution would declare Austin "a city of refuge" that would be a sanctuary for refugees.

A U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service official has said the move would be a "cruel hoax to build hope and aspirations of those people who will make the sacrifice to come to the U.S., presumably to go to a utopia that's not there.

"An open border and an invitation by the city council are not in the best national interests of the United States," said Robert Casillas, San Antonio deputy director for the immigration service.

The resolution is being pushed by several Austin groups, including the East Side Group, a Christian community organization that works with Central American refugees.

"Our basic reason for this is that it would be a statement on the part of the city in favor of legislation to protect refugees and especially extent volunteer departure status to people from El Salvador who come to the U.S.," said Walter Long, a member of the East Side Group.

He said current U.S. immigration policy is to round up and, in some cases, deport Salvadoran refugees who leave their country for the United States.

"Last year, 13,000 asked for political asylum, but only 300 were given that status. Of those denied asylum, about 4,000 were deported to El Salvador," said Long.

Casillas said the resolution could encourage Central Americans to come to the United States "presumably for immunity from prosecution that the city councils cannot deliver."

WAGONS

Though the train's full complement is 150 wagons, far fewer are currently trekking westward. But when the 39 wagons pulled into San Angelo last week, "It was like seeing something from out of a movie or out of the past," said Ms. Jackson, who drove down to help welcome the train to West Texas.

After a long, thirsty trip out to El Paso and back, the mile-long train is scheduled to arrive in Midland from Odessa on the afternoon of May 2. The wagons will travel east along State Highway 191 and enter Loop 250 near Andrews Highway. Taking a left, they will drive north and east past the Midland Park Mall to the Lamesa Highway, where they will turn south to their campsite near ClayDesta Plaza.

"That night we're going to have a fajita dinner, and there'll be entertainment going on all evening," Ms. Jackson said. "We're going to have a country and western dance."

Bleachers will be set up at the mall for those who want to view the train's arrival, and entertainment will be provided in the mall parking lot that afternoon, she added.

The following morning, the train will head north toward Lamesa. Following their usual schedule of traveling 18-22 miles per day, the wagoneers will make camp May 3 in a field about halfway between Midland and Patricia, according to Ms. Jackson.

"That night, they'll have to fend for themselves," she said with a smile.

The wagoneers haven't actually given up all the comforts of modern life on this trip, Ms. Jackson notes. In fact, there are really two trains — one composed of old-fashioned wagons pulled by horses and mules, and an auxiliary train composed of recreational vehicles, to which most of the wagoneers repair each night.

"It's not exactly how they did it 150 years ago," she said. "We expected to see a lot of tents pitched, (but) all but two have big old RVs" following along.

When it's time for the big entrance, though, the RVs stay out of sight — "It's just the train," Ms. Jackson said.

Midlanders who want to saddle up and join the wagon train for the trip into (or out of) Midland can call 1-800-441-1986 for information, according to Ms. Jackson. Would-be wagoneers must pay $15 per person or $25 per family to join the train, even for just a day.

The fajita dinner will be held outdoors at ClayDesta, and tickets must be purchased in advance, she said. The dance, however, is free.

The wagon train visit is the main Sesquicentennial event planned for Midland, but festivities are also scheduled for July 4.

"We're going to do the milk-carton boat race again in the morning at Wadley-Barron Park," Ms. Jackson said. "And we're going to have a street dance again."

Last year Midland celebrated its Centennial on July 4 with a downtown street dance featuring Asleep at the Wheel. This year's dance will be moved to the Midland Park Mall parking lot, Ms. Jackson said. The band has not yet been selected.

The Midland Sesquicentennial Commission is looking for volunteers to help with the wagon train festivities, and Ms. Jackson promises they won't be put to work cleaning up after the horses.

"We're working with the city" on that project, she said.

Langford served as as chairman of the Legislative Committee of the Texas Public Community/Junior College Association and then as the group's president and received a "Distinguished Alumnus" award from Howard Payne University.

In Midland, he is past president of the Midland Downtown Rotary Club and the Midland Chamber of Commerce, as well as a past member of the Board of Executors and chairman of the Personnel Committee of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame.

Kiser, a partner in the law firm of Lynch, Chappell, Allday and Alsup, has resided in Midland since 1963 and attended Midland public schools.

He believes he would offer constituents a fresh viewpoint in setting board policies. "I believe it is time for a young person to serve on this board, a young person who is sensitive to the need for excellence and who understand what our students require."

Calling himself an optimist, Kiser said Midland College will survive the economic challenge ahead, but only if it streamlines its operation.

"There are some gut-wrenching, heart-rending kinds of decisions that will be made. It would be an absolute crying shame if the board would be forced to cut programs it's taken 15 years to build."

Kiser said he would prefer to struggle against raising taxes, but refused to rule out the possibility. "This is going to be the time that we're going to face an economic crisis of this magnitude. People are going to have to decide what kind of community college they want."

A 1973 graduate of Lee High School, Kiser earned a bachelor's degree from Texas A&M University and graduated from the Baylor University School of Law in 1980. He is a member of the State Bar of Texas, Texas Young Lawyers Association, American Bar Association, Midland County Bar Association secretary and Midland County Young Lawyer Association vice president.

Kiser has held a number of civic offices including crusade chairman for the American Cancer Society Midland Unit Board of Directors, loaned executive and allocations committee chairman of the United Way of Midland and commisser and vice president of the Midland Housing Authority. He also is a 1982 graduate of Leadership Midland.

If elected, Kiser said he will be "totally dedicated" to helping make Midland College the very best community college in the United States and bring in a fresh viewpoint to the policy-making body.

"If you mix the old with the new, the young with the more established you make sure you examine things from all perspectives. It's healthy," he said.

Variety of events marks Easter holiday

Associated Press

Easter egg hunts, fashion parades, horse races, boogeying at the beaches and appeals for help for the needy marked the Easter weekend, as many people looked forward to sunrise services.

The Rev. G. Richard Lobs III of St. Mark's Episcopal Church in Geneva, Ill., said his Easter message would be: "Easter is night turned to day.... The earth is bathed in the light of dawn. Light is cleanliness, order, hope and life."

President Reagan and his wife, Nancy, were at their California ranch and had nothing scheduled for Easter Sunday, said spokesman Larry Speakes.

"Easter time for Christians and Passover for Jews are meant to be times of spiritual awareness and of deepening encounter with the Lord and with the Lord's injunction that all nations and people of the world live in peace and harmony with each other," Reagan said in his weekly radio address Saturday.

In Honolulu, former Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos and his wife, Imelda, invited 500 people to a "bring-your-own" party at the rented house they moved into less than a week ago, far from the lavish Malacanang Palace in Manila.

The rite of spring started Saturday in South Carolina with the Carolina Cup, the state's most popular horse racing day. More than 40,000 people toting picnic lunches and wearing their spring fashions were expected for the huge outdoor event, said assistant course director Patty Cooper.

South Carolina also had a parade, egg hunts, entertainment and a carnival at the 20th Annual Governor's Frog Jump in Springfield, held to pick a state champion for the national jumping contest this summer in Calaveras County, Calif.

In Tennessee, newly freed convict Reginald White returned to the Shelby County Correction Center to carry the cross in an inmate-written play about the crucifixion.

"I wanted to play a part so I could help somebody else understand you can do more, even when you're in prison," he said.

In Seattle, live rabbits became artists' models Saturday for the "Draw and Paint Bunnies" art class at the Pacific Arts Center.

For many, a weekend at the beach was in order to shed memories of winter's cold and gloom, and 300,000 to 325,000 people were expected at South Carolina's 65-mile Grand Strand ocean beaches.

Not everyone favored crowded places. Sharon Boyko, 33, an emergency room nurse at the Albany (N.Y.) Medical Center planned to set out alone "as soon as the sun rises" Easter morning to hike the 2,154-mile Appalachian Trail from Spencer Mountain, Ga., to Mount Katahdin, Maine, arriving about June 20. She hopes to raise $20,000 for charity.

In Southern California, where police arrested more than 100 rowdy youths Friday and early Saturday in Palm Springs, festivities included everything from a gala comedy benefit to an egg hunt at the Queen Mary and Spruce Goose in Long Beach to a host of sunrise services.

"Comic Relief," a three-hour benefit performance, featuring hosts Robin Williams, Whoopi Goldberg and Billy Crystal, for America's poor and homeless was on the calendar Saturday night at the Universal Amphitheater.

Quakers readied an Easter Sunday peace demonstration at Vandenberg Air Force Base, a site of missile tests in Santa Barbara County, 140 miles northwest of Los Angeles.

GORBACHEV

Gorbachev said the March 22 U.S. test was "by no means accidental" and was timed with the expiration of the Soviet moratorium. He said the Soviet people and the world were "incensed" over the test.

"I must tell you frankly that we regard the present actions of the American administration, which is continuing nuclear tests despite pressing demands of the peoples, as a pointed challenge to the Soviet Union, and not only to it but also to the whole world ..." Gorbachev said.

"Everything shows that the United States ruling grouping has placed the narrow selfish interests of the military-industrial circles above the interests of the whole of mankind and its own people," he said. "The manner in which this is done is also quite important: pointedly, arrogantly and with disregard for the opinion of the world community. There is neither a sense of realism nor of responsibility."

The United States has rejected a test moratorium, saying the "reliability and credibility" of the U.S. nuclear deterrent depended on its test program. Washington also has said the Soviets called their unilateral moritorium only after completing major testing of their own.

The Reagan administration also has said problems concerning verification need to be worked out. Underground testing also is a component to the U.S. program to develop a space-based missile defense system, popularly known as "Star Wars," which the Soviets seek to stop.

Gorbachev has made verification proposals, and this month Reagan sent the Soviet leader a detailed outline on a sophisticated new verification plan. Reagan also invited Soviet experts to view the next U.S. nuclear test blast.

"We set certain hopes on the Geneva meeting with the president of the United States of America and expected to reach agreement with him on this matter (ending nuclear tests) as well," Gorbachev said.

He said the Soviets proposed the European meeting after concluding "that the situation requires immediate action."

In November, Reagan and Gorbachev decided to hold a summit in the United States in 1986 and one in the Soviet Union in 1987. The United States has proposed a meeting in the United States in June, but officials say there has been no Soviet reply.

Soviet officials have said the Kremlin still wants a summit but that it has to be productive.

'Bulgarian connection' acquitted of papal plot

AP Laserphoto

Sergei Ivanov Antonov is hugged by his sister Tania as he arrives at the Bulgarian embassy in Rome Saturday, following his acquittal on conspiracy charges in the 1981 shooting of Pope John Paul II.

by SAMUEL KOO

ROME (AP) — A court Saturday acquitted three Bulgarians and three Turks — "the Bulgarian connection" — of conspiring to murder Pope John Paul II in St. Peter's Square in 1981, saying not enough evidence was offered to justify a conviction.

The defense said the decision demolished prosecutors' claims that Bulgaria and the Soviet KGB conspired to assassinate the Polish-born pope because of his support for the Polish free trade federation Solidarity.

However, the jury of two judges and six civilians did not completely clear the defendants of suspicion. Italian courts have the option of making an outright declaration of innocence or ruling that evidence was inadequate to convict, as in this case.

The pope was badly wounded in the May 13, 1981 shooting, but recovered.

Prosecutor Antonio Marini had recommended the court acquit the Bulgarians, but said he would appeal the acquittal of the Turks.

The defense also said it was appealing in hopes of completely clearing the defendants.

"I am not prepared to say that these are definitive sentences," said Chief Judge Severino Santiapichi, who led the jury. "I think there will be a second trial."

Under Italian law, an appeals court would hold a full-fledged trial.

WORLD

One of the Turks, Omer Bagci, was convicted Saturday on a lesser charge of smuggling a pistol into Italy and was sentenced to three years and two months in prison. Judicial sources said he will not have to serve the term because he already has been jailed for a longer period since being extradited from Switzerland on Oct. 15, 1982.

In addition, Mehmet Ali Agca, already serving a life sentence for shooting the pope, was found guilty on a new charge of illegally importing the pistol he used.

Sergei Ivanov Antonov, the only Bulgarian defendant in custody for the trial, returned to the building where he had been under house arrest and told the doorman, "I am a free citizen again."

However, authorities blocked his departure for Bulgaria later Saturday. The Italian news agency ANSA quoted judicial sources as saying the defendants will need approval from an appeals court before leaving Italy.

Antonov, 37, was Rome station chief of Bulgaria's national airline.

The other two & 0Y;$Vfendants were in their home country under diplomatic immunity. One Turkish defendant also was tried in absentia, his whereabouts unknown.

The trial began May 27, 1985. The court traveled to Bulgaria, Turkey, France, West Germany and the Netherlands, hearing 80 witnesses during 97 sessions. The jury began deliberations a week ago.

Agca, 28, the prosecution's star witness, claimed in often contradictory testimony that a conspiracy to kill the pope was hatched in Bulgaria's capital, Sofia, and that a Soviet diplomat offered $1.2 million for the shooting.

Bulgaria's official BTA news agency said that Saturday's decision proved the communist Balkan country had nothing to do with the shooting. BTA and the official Soviet news agency, Tass, both applauded the verdicts as a defeat for Western propagandists.

As he was being led into the heavily guarded courtroom for the verdict, Agca shouted, "I'm not God, I'm the son of God in human form! I am Jesus Christ!"

He made similar outbursts during the trial, and Marini said after the decision was read, "The sentences confirmed the fear that the (courtroom) behavior of Agca had an impact on the civilian jurors."

Giuseppe Consolo, counsel for Antonov, said he immediately filed an appeal to seek a verdict of complete innocence for his client.

He said the court did not have "enough courage" to acquit Antonov fully, adding, "They preferred a compromise solution and that smells fishy to me."

Bulgarian sources said appeals also were filed on behalf of the two other Bulgarians, Lt. Col. Zhelyo Kolev Vassilev, 44, a former military attache's aide at the Bulgarian Embassy in Rome; and Todor Aivazov, 42, a former chief embassy officer.

Marini had sought life sentences for Oral Celik, 27, a Turk tried in absentia and accused of being a second gunman; and for Musa Serdar Celebi, 34, a reputed leader of the extreme right-wing Turkish youth movement Gray Wolves. Prosecutors alleged Celebi delivered money to Agca.

Marini had asked the court to sentence Bagci to 20 years in prison for his alleged role in the conspiracy and four years for smuggling the gun. A fourth Turk, Bekir Celenk, died while being held in a Turkish jail on other charges.

Shultz, Pope John Paul II visit

VATICAN CITY (AP) — After a long day defending U.S. policy toward Libya in meetings with Italian leaders, U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz spent a more tranquil moment Saturday evening with Pope John Paul II.

The 65-year-old pontiff received Shultz in a 38-minute private audience in the papal library. Shultz described the meeting as fruitful and wide-ranging.

Shultz, who is Episcopalian, and his wife Helena, a Roman Catholic, were greeted in the Vatican's marbled, frescoed Clementine Room by the heel-clicking salute of seven Swiss Guards. They were then ushered into the pope's chambers by Archbishop Jacques Martin, head of the papal household.

No details were disclosed about the private consultations between Shultz and John Paul. But in front of reporters later, Shultz told Cardinal Agostino Casaroli, his Vatican counterpart, "It was a good discussion that covered a wide range of different topics."

In a news conference earlier Saturday, Shultz reasserted the Reagan administration's hard-line policy on Libya, saying of Col. Moammar Khadafy: "He harbors terrorists, trains them, supplies them and encourages them."

Shultz, who concludes his 10-day European tour Sunday after attending Easter Mass in St. Peter's Square on the steps of the great basilica, has encountered criticism from Italian leaders about America's anti-Libyan actions.

Italian leaders, including Premier Bettino Craxi and Foreign Minister Giulio Andreotti, told Shultz they preferred a diplomatic approach over the sending of U.S. naval forces into a confrontation with Libya last week.

"It's always better to try to have a dialogue" rather than take military action, Andreotti told reporters.

"This is how we try to build our relations with our neighbors," he added. "This is the approach that should have been taken in the Mediterranean."

Shultz acknowledged at his news conference that "there are varying opinions here as elsewhere on what the right tactics are to deal with Khadafy."

The U.S. secretary of state, wearing a dark blue suit, was accompanied to the Vatican on Saturday evening by an entourage of 36 people, including the U.S. ambassador to the Vatican, William Wilson, and Wilson's wife, Betty.

Wilson held a secret January meeting with Khadafy in an unauthorized diplomatic attempt to smooth relations between the two countries, drawing a rebuke from Shultz at the time.

It was Shultz' third meeting with the pope.

After the audience, Mrs. Shultz, wearing a black suede suit and a black lace mantilla covering her hair, also visited briefly with the pontiff, who gave her a rosary and blessed her.

The pontiff, wearing his traditional white-and-gold robes, went to a microphone in front of the carved marble throne and thanked the group for their visit.

"I am using this opportunity to say to you a special word for the season," John Paul said in English. "Happy Easter to you and God bless America."

Shultz thanked the pontiff for arranging a special group portrait in front of the photographers.

The pope, evidently in a buoyant mood, responded with a big smile. "It's a sacred duty."

WORLD IN BRIEF

Ariane seeks business

KOUROU, French Guiana (AP) — After successfully launching its 13th and 14th satellites, the European Space Agency is scrambling to absorb extra business made available by the grounding of the U.S. space shuttle program.

The space agency announced the successful launch of an Ariane rocket Friday from a new launching pad in its South American space center here, putting American and Brailian telecommunications satellites into orbit.

Arianespace President Fredereic d'Allest said later, "The entry into service of ELA 2, the new Ariane launching pad, represents an important event for us.

"We hope to have seven to eight total launchings this year, and our objective for 1987-1988 will be eight launches a year," he said.

He said the second facility would allow Arianespace to launch twice as many payloads, including some grounded by the investigation of the Jan. 28 explosion of the U.S. space shuttle Challenger, which killed seven astronauts.

Punjab villages face fire

AMRITSAR, India (AP) — Gunmen identified as Sikh terrorists fired submachine guns from a jeep at residents of three Punjab villages Saturday, killing at least 10 people and wounding up to 15, police said.

Police said all or most of the victims were Hindus. The attack brought to at least 77 the death toll in 15 days of Sikh-Hindu violence in Punjab state, officials said.

Police said they clashed Saturday with angry Hindus in four Punjab cities who were on a daylong general strike to protest Friday's fatal shooting of as many as 16 Hindus by Sikh terrorists in Ludhiana.

Police also said they shot dead a fugitive Sikh extremist outside Amritsar.

Svetlana seeks return

LONDON (AP) — The daughter of the late Soviet dictator Josef Stalin, who returned to Moscow 17 years after her defection, has applied to Soviet authorities for permission to return to America, the Sunday Times reported.

The London weekly quoted unidentified sources in the Soviet Union as saying that Svetlana Alliluyeva, 60, has been unhappy since she returned to her homeland in October 1984 with her American-born daughter, Olga.

The paper claimed Ms. Alliluyeva, who caused a sensation in 1967 when she defected to the United States, recently made a secret deal with Soviet authorities that allowed Olga to return to America.

However, the Times report did not say when Olga supposedly returned to the United States or where she is.

The girl's father, American architect William Wesley Peters, told The Associated Press he is not aware that Olga was supposedly in America and said he found it difficult to believe reports that she had returned.

Liberian tanker on fire

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iraqi warplanes fired a missile today into a Liberian-registered tanker and set it ablaze in the Persian Gulf, marine executives said.

They said the tanker had loaded oil from Iran's Kharg Island oil terminal.

The 372,217-ton Hawaii was attacked at 6:00 a.m. about 60 miles south of Kharg, the gulf-based executives said, speaking on condition of anonymity. They said the ship was formerly named the Brazilian Splendour.

"All we know for the time being is that the vessel was set on fire after it was struck by an Iraqi missile," said one Bahrain-based executive, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Princess knew of threat

LONDON (AP) — Princess Anne knew she was the target of a kidnap plot by drug traffickers during a four-day visit to Brazil this past week, but insisted upon attending all scheduled public events, British officials said Saturday.

The 35-year-old daughter of Queen Elizabeth II, who escaped unharmed from a 1974 kidnap attempt in which her bodyguard and two other people were injured, returned to London Friday.

Federal police in Brazil were quoted in Rio's Jornal do Brasil as saying drug dealers threatened to kidnap the princess to exchange for their jailed leader, Jose Carlos dos Reis Encina, captured by police this month.

Buckingham Palace and the Foreign Office confirmed Saturday that the princess was aware of "the kidnap threat" and praised Brazilian security arrangements during her private visit.

Filipino strikes continue

CLARK AIR BASE, Philippines (AP) — Dozens of U.S. servicemen trying to get in or out of this American base climbed over fences Saturday to evade striking Filipino workers who have barricaded all the gates for a week.

Air Force spokesman Maj. Thomas Boyd said some of the troops wanted to join their families living off-base. He said "scattered incidents of scuffles" occurred when strikers chased airmen, but no injuries were reported.

Leaders of the striking union federation on Saturday again rejected a U.S. demand that barricades outside Clark and nearby Subic Naval Base be lifted, the federation said.

About 22,000 Filipino workers have been striking since March 21 over the issue of severance pay upon quitting. Along with Clark and Subic, the United States' two largest military posts overseas, the strike affects six smaller facilities, which have not been barricaded.

Nine killed in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Palestinian guerrillas battled Shiite Moslem militiamen with rocket-propelled grenades and machine guns in two refugee camps Saturday. Militia sources reported four combatants killed and 30 wounded.

In all, nine people died Saturday as the result of fighting in Lebanon and 34 people were wounded.

In south Lebanon, Shiite guerrillas killed a Ghanaian U.N. soldier in a shootout and a Fijian U.N. trooper died of wounds sustained Friday, U.N. sources reported.

Rocket and tank cannon exchanges north of Beirut in the Metn mountain province between Lebanese army units loyal to President Amin Gemayel and Syrian-backed leftist and Moslem factions killed two civilians, said police.

Artillery and rocket duels along the three-mile Green Line dividing Beirut's Christian and Moslem sectors killed one person and wounded four people, police said. The fighting tapered off into sporadic sniping by morning.

Soviets set farm plan

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union announced plans Saturday to boost sagging farm production by loosening food price controls, allowing farmers to sell some produce directly to local stores, and giving regional agriculture officials greater autonomy.

Other measures include raising wages at state farms and increasing prices the state pays for grain and other crops.

The reform package is aimed at meeting what Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev last month called the "top priority task" of feeding the nation's 278 million people.

The Soviet Union currently imports 44 million to 55 million tons of grain annually to meet agricultural shortfalls, especially of livestock fodder. The imports take up considerable hard currency reserves.

The new measures, most of which take effect Jan. 1, 1987, are designed to increase food production by cutting red tape and giving incentives to farmers.

U.N. reacts to charges

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (NYT) — Delegates, officials and other employees of the United Nations reacted with dismay last week, and many said they were concerned that the world organization could be damaged by the picture emerging in newly uncovered documents from German and Yugoslav archives of Kurt Waldheim's role as a German officer in World War II.

Waldheim's war record was not an issue when he ran for secretary general of the United Nations in 1971, 1976 and 1981. "He always rejected and denied these charges," said Francoise Giuliani, Waldheim's spokesman for six years. Other U.N. officials said they had no reason to disbelieve what he had told them: that his military career had ended in December 1941, when he was wounded in the leg on the Eastern front.

Afterward, Waldheim wrote in his recently published autobiography, "I made a formal request to be permitted to resume my law studies and take my master's degree and, rather to my surprise, this was granted."

Midland College Is A TRUE Community College!

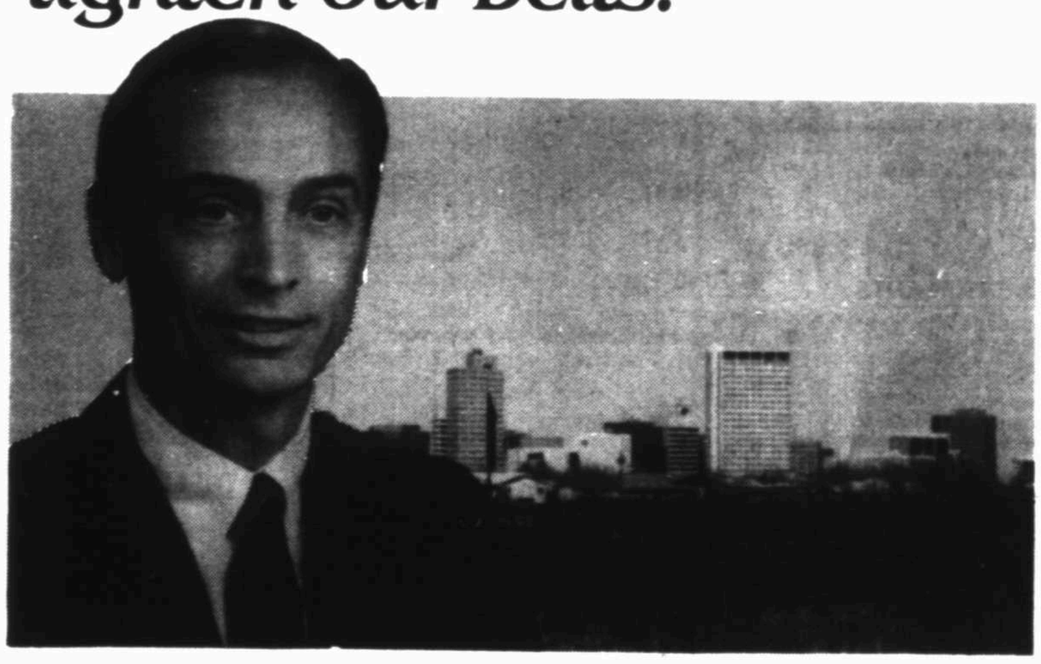

One of the main reasons why Midland College and its leadership have gained national recognition is its community - wide representation on the Board of Trustees. John Cooper has made a real contribution to that reputation. He represents All of Midland, and works hard at his job. We greatly need to re-elect John Cooper and keep that Good Reputation intact.

"We have to be realistic. In hard times we have to tighten our belts."

"Our future is tied to the oil industry. I think it's a very bright future, with 25 percent of the nation's proven reserves right here in the Permian Basin. But our destiny is not in our hands. We're subject to fluctuations in price that are beyond our control.

"We'll see good times again. And I couldn't think of a better resource to have than oil in the ground. But now is a time for caution."

On February 4, Carroll Thomas was instrumental in alerting the City Council that a $10.8 million bond issue at this time was ill advised. Although he is generally in support of the proposed improvements, Thomas felt the election should be delayed until the local economy improves. At its February 11 meeting, the Council agreed, and deferred the bond election.

A Positive Approach

Thomas stands for positive, constructive improvements within the present City government. He is committed to:

- Improved street repair and maintenance programs to protect our $150,000,000 investment
- Drainage system improvements
- Synchronization of traffic signals
- A freeze on the citizen's City tax burden, the City budget, and City hiring
- Better relationships with other elected bodies.

Thomas believes that improvements to streets, drainage systems, and traffic signal synchronization can be funded out of the City's present cash surplus and unexpended bond funds. When the economy appears more favorable, he supports calling the bond issue to authorize necessary capital improvements.

AL G. Langford

Midland College Trustee — Place 1

On Saturday, April 5, Midlanders will elect a Trustee to help formulate a course of action for the future of Midland College. Because of declining funding from the State of Texas and shrinking revenues from oil and real estate taxes, Midland College will be faced with some difficult decisions.

No one is more qualified, or has a greater desire, to help guide the College as a Trustee than Al G. Langford. As its founding President, he oversaw its development from a mere idea in 1969 to its emergence as one of the finest junior colleges in the nation.

His vast knowledge and experience can help solve the problems that will surely present themselves in the future. To achieve this he has pledged to work closely with Dr. Jess Parrish and the other eight Trustees in meeting the challenges ahead, and, without losing sight of the goal of academic excellence, Al Langford will do everything possible to prevent tax increases.

Let's assure the successful future of Midland College — let's elect Al Langford as our College Trustee, Place 1.

Was Sandinista action 'smoking gun, blunder?'

By GEORGE GEDDA

WASHINGTON (AP) — An improbable week in the Central America saga was symbolized by this headline in a Tegucigalpa daily: "Washington Tells Honduras We Are at War."

The headline appeared not long after Reagan administration officials had charged that Nicaragua had sent 1,500 troops across its border with Honduras, the largest of hundreds of Sandinista incursions into Honduran territory in recent years.

Nicaragua denied the charge while the Honduran reaction, at least initially, seemed to underscore that country's reluctance to go along with the role Washington has assigned to it as a potential target of Sandinista expansionism.

On Monday, Honduran presidential press secretary Lisandro Quesada, asked about Washington's charges, said his government had no information about a Nicaraguan assault.

Clearly, the administration saw the Sandinista military move as an opportunity to buttress its case for providing the Nicaraguan resistance movement with $100 million in military and other equipment.

The administration's critics had long maintained that it never offered concrete proof that the Sandinistas were expansionist. Finally, with the weekend border crossing into Honduras, the administration felt it had a smoking gun.

Even some of the most ardent House critics of aid to the rebels said they were appalled by the Sandinista action. Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., who captained the successful House battle against aid to the Contras 10 days ago, said the Sandinistas had committed a "tremendous blunder."

Sen. Patrick J. Leahy, D-Vt., said sarcastically that he "had heard a rumor that (Nicaraguan President) Daniel Ortega is secretly on the payroll of one of our intelligence agencies as a lobbyist for the administration."

President Reagan seized on the issue, telling a gathering in New Orleans on Thursday that the incursion was "a slap in the face" to everyone in the House who had voted against aid to the Contras and who felt the Sandinistas would respond with a show of conciliation. Later that day, the Senate voted 53-47 in support of the Contra aid package.

Still, the incursion was less of a political bonanza than the administration had hoped.

Some doubted the border crossing had taken place at all, citing Nicaraguan denials. In Managua, officials said Washington was guilty of "one more lie in its campaign against Nicaragua."

Indeed, the administration had difficulty substantiating its contention, partly because the area of the Sandinista crossing is so remote. On Thursday, Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., another critic of Reagan's policy, was referring to the "alleged incursion" into Nicaragua.

By the week's end, however, still-secret corroborating information had been received from U.S. intelligence sources that left no doubt even among skeptics in the administration, officials said.

But the administration was on the defensive in other respects. Some said the Nicaraguan assault was aimed less at Honduras than at installations that have been used for years by the U.S.-backed Nicaraguan resistance in southern Honduras.

In that sense, the Sandinista move could be regarded as virtually indistinguishable from the military action Israel has taken over the years against Palestine Liberation Organization facilities in southern Lebanon.

The administration has insisted, however, that past Nicaraguan actions clearly indicate hostile Sandinista intentions against Honduras.

As an example, the State Department contends that in July 1983, 96 Hondurans trained for guerrilla warfare in Nicaragua and Cuba were captured by the Honduran army. Nineteen others with similar training were captured a year later, the State Department says.

And as the administration sees it, under international law a country with a record of aggressive intentions does not have the right to claim self-defense in justification of cross-border military forays.

U.S. officials said Honduras may have been eager to minimize the incursion because of doubts about American resolve.

But after seeming hesitant initially, Honduran President Jose Azcona Hoyo telephoned the State Department Monday morning and told Deputy Assistant Secretary William Walker his army needed help, U.S. officials said.

Palm Springs police increase patrols after youth rampage

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Police patrolled streets in this desert resort Saturday to head off any repeat of rowdiness that erupted among spring break crowds Friday and resulted in 104 arrests.

"It's very calm," police Lt. George Neesan said the morning after groups of youths ran amok, hurling rocks and bottles at officers, harassing motorists and tearing clothes off women.

Police used tear gas to disperse crowds Friday, and some youths sprayed officers with chemical Mace, authorities said.

"We've been able to limit the vandalism to a small area, and I don't think we've reached riotous proportions. We had civil disobedience," Neesan said, explaining that a riot would have been characterized by "lack of regard for life and property."

Much of the trouble seemed to start when hijinks, such as dumping cups of water into passing cars, got out of hand, witnesses said.

"I think that we've seen a lot younger people this year than in the past," Neesan said. "I would guess somewhere between (age) 17 and 22."

"It's a younger crowd," Sgt. David Goodwin said Friday night. "They don't seem to respect authority. You try to arrest one, and you have 500 all over you for it."

Police used a portable booking station to handle the arrests, he said.

Reinforcements from the California Highway Patrol, Riverside County sheriff's department and neighboring towns swelled police ranks to more than 200 during the disturbance.

All the officers were kept in town Saturday, with a large contingent assigned to downtown foot patrol, Goodwin said.

Friday's disturbance began at 3:30 p.m. at a park where several thousand young people had gathered, Goodwin said. The crowd grew increasingly unruly, and Goodwin said thousands remained after police ordered them to disperse, although no precise estimate of the crowd's size was available.

He said groups continued to gather into the early hours Saturday.

Tear gas was used on one small group of people who quickly dispersed, Neesan said.

Those arrested were booked for investigation of public drunkenness, assault and failure to disperse.

Some officers suffered minor injuries such as wrist and ankle sprains.

After the disturbances erupted, police declared an illegal assembly and began arresting people. Police also imposed a 10 p.m. curfew for anyone 18 and under.

Fifty-three people sought treatment at Desert Hospital for mostly minor problems.

Hotels step up security after 12 killed, hurt in spring break falls

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Hoteliers and police are seeking ways to stop students from using hotel balconies as stages for spring break antics following a dozen deaths or serious injuries from falls this year.

Increased security and arrest warrants for people seen climbing on balconies are being used to curb the problem, which is often related to alcohol, but officials say that is not enough.

"Some hotels that are involved in spring break are placing security personnel on all floors, but outside of tying a cowbell around some of these people's necks, I just don't know what can be done," said Fort Lauderdale police spokesman Ott Cefkin.

So far this year, five students have died in falls in Florida and seven have been seriously injured. Two died falling from hotel balconies in Daytona Beach; two others fell to their deaths from balconies in Fort Lauderdale and in Sanibel, on the Gulf coast. A fifth student, visiting Miami, died after falling 40 feet from a drawbridge under construction.

Last year, there were three deaths attributed to balcony falls, all in Daytona Beach, officials said. Estimates of the number of students who pour into Florida each spring break season range up to 500,000.

"People like that, who get drunk on balconies, that's just nuts," said Phil Hicks, 20, an Ohio State University sophomore.

For a full day before his fatal fall on March 22, Michael Hutchings, 22, of Buffalo Grove, Ill., had been drinking with several friends from Western Illinois University, Cefkin said.

"His last night in town, they went out bar hopping," Cefkin said. "At about three in the morning he decided to go out and didn't say where."

A security guard found the sophomore finance major around 6:40 a.m., sprawled on a pebbled walkway at Fort Lauderdale's Pier 66 Hotel.

Investigators theorize Hutchings went out onto a fire-rescue balcony near the top of the 17-story hotel during a period of high winds and slipped backward over the railing while trying to reopen the door.

Paul M. Morse, 21, of Omaha, Neb., died March 23 when he attempted to jump from one balcony to another at a hotel in Daytona Beach. He either lost his balance or misjudged the distance, and fell nine floors to a hotel pool deck, police said.

Ironically, Cefkin said, the increase in reports in Fort Lauderdale of students crawling on balconies, jumping from balconies into pools and tossing objects this year may be due to an effort to curb public drunkenness.

A new ban on drinking in public, following hundreds of drunkenness arrests last year, might mean more students are drinking in their hotel rooms, he said.

NATION in brief

Bush to visit Persian Gulf

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amid aftershocks of the U.S.-Libyan confrontation, Vice President George Bush travels to the Persian Gulf this week with words of encouragement and reassurance for allies feeling threatened by the Iran-Iraq war and stunned by the plunge in oil prices.

The eight-day mission beginning Thursday takes Bush to three oil-rich nations, Saudi Arabia, Bahrain and Oman, and finally to North Yemen, a very poor country where palaces are made of mud brick instead of gilded with gold, and men still wear traditional curved daggers at their waist as a sign of virility.

U.S. officials say privately the trip poses greater danger than usual to Bush's personal safety because of threats against America from Libya's Col. Moammar Khadafy. Security will be tighter than on most overseas trips, "but certainly we don't think we're sticking our necks out," one official said.

Bendectin suit heard

WASHINGTON (AP) — An appeals court decision awarding $750,000 to a Maryland teen-ager born with a deformed right arm could be a turning point in hundreds of damage suits against the manufacturer of the drug Bendectin, say lawyers who filed the claims.

The District of Columbia Court of Appeals ruling was the first judgment against Merrell Dow Pharmaceuticals Inc. in a spate of lawsuits that contend Bendectin caused birth defects in children whose mothers took it for relief from morning sickness.

Until Tuesday's decision, Merrell Dow had prevailed in four cases that had gone to trial, including one in the company's hometown of Cincinnati where the cases of 800 families had been consolidated.

"I think this is a harbinger of things to come — for Bendectin victims to start prevailing in these things," said Thomas Bleakley, the lead attorney in 60 Bendectin cases that have been consolidated for trial in Michigan.

Corruption investigated

NEW YORK (AP) — A sweeping corruption investigation of city government has produced bribery charges against one of New York's most powerful politicians and opened a tangle of allegations that authorities say may take years to unravel.

A second high official labeled a co-conspirator plunged a knife into his heart two weeks ago. Donald Manes, president of the borough of Queens, left a legacy of suspicion that has brought on the deepest examination of the city's government in decades.

"This is and will be a difficult period for New York," U.S. Attorney Rudolph W. Giuliani said last week, as he called Manes a co-racketeer in the alleged manipulation of a city agency for private profit.

"Too many people can unfortunately say with justification that business or politics as usual in New York means paying off," said Giuliani. "We have to change that to a different set of rules."

Volcano erupts again

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Augustine Volcano awoke Saturday after a quiet night and resumed its pulsating eruptions, but shifting winds carried most of the abrasive ash away from cities and out to sea.

Some gritty debris from the earlier blasts by the 4,025-foot volcanic island 175 miles southwest of Anchorage still hung in the air over Anchorage and nearby Kenai, making breathing a chore and stranding hundreds of Easter weekend air travelers.

Health officials said the count of microscopic particles was high and health alerts for respiratory problems remained in effect. Despite the warnings, hardy skiers donned masks to take advantage of the week's record snowfall.

After exploding at approximately two-hour intervals most of Friday, the volcano quieted down about midnight, said Tom Miller of the U.S. Geological Survey. But the activity resumed with a blast at 6:45 a.m., and eruption after eruption followed, said USGS geologist Betsy Yount.

Because the prevailing winds Saturday came from the west, instead of the south, the ash over the cities began to dissipate.

Union rejects TWA offer

NEW YORK (AP) — The union representing 5,800 striking TWA flight attendants rejected the company's latest contract offer Saturday and refused a demand that the offer be submitted to the union membership.

Trans World Airlines issued a statement saying the company was disappointed in the union decision, and said it held out little hope for an early settlement of the 3-week-old strike.

Meanwhile, TWA Chairman Carl C. Icahn sent a letter to newly hired replacements promising they would not be furloughed to make way for returning strikers.

"This is a personal commitment from me that you can absolutely count on," Icahn said.

Rev. Jenco remembered

JOLIET, Ill. (AP) — Friends and relatives of the Rev. Lawrence Martin Jenco, one of the Americans held hostage in Lebanon, held a public prayer meeting to call attention to his captivity.

The Good Friday gathering marked the 444th day of Jenco's captivity, equaling the number of days the 52 U.S. hostages were held in Iran before they were freed Jan. 20, 1981.

Reagan spends anniversary of shooting at ranch

By JOAN MOWER

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan will spend today, the fifth anniversary of an attempt on his life, at the isolated California ranch where he regularly clears brush and rides horseback.

For the 75-year-old Reagan, the March 30, 1981, assassination attempt outside the Washington Hilton Hotel seems to have been a temporary setback. Hit in the chest by a ricocheting bullet, Reagan underwent surgery and recovered quickly.

Since that traumatic episode, Reagan has had another health scare: last July, a cancerous portion of his colon was removed during abdominal surgery. He recovered fully.

Reagan, whose doctors say he is as healthy as a much younger man, rarely mentions the assassination attempt. He has said he holds no grudge against his assailant, John W. Hinckley Jr.

First Lady Nancy Reagan, shaken for months after the shooting, said recently she was more frightened by it than by the news that the president had cancer.

In an interview with ABC-TV's Barbara Walters, broadcast last Monday, Mrs. Reagan was asked whether she had contemplated life alone on learning Reagan had cancer.

Ronald Reagan is shoved into a waiting limousine seconds after he was struck by a ricocheting bullet in the March 30, 1981, assassination attempt.

AP Laserphoto

"I think I went through that on the 30th — March 30th, 1981 — more than this time because they seemed so sure that the cancer was just localized and they could get everything," she said.

Three other people — Press Secretary James Brady, Secret Service agenct Timothy McCarthy and District of Columbia Police Officer Thomas Delahanty — were also wounded in the 1981 shooting.

McCarthy and Delahanty recovered quickly, though Delahanty suffered lasting nerve damage in his neck. Brady, the most seriously injured with a bullet in his head, is still recuperating.

Brady, 45, lives in nearby Arlington, Va., with his wife, Sarah, and 7-year-old son, Scott. Although he retains the title of press secretary and draws a $72,000-a-year salary, Brady spends only one day a week in his office.

The rest of the time he is at home or in physical therapy. He walks with a cane, has impaired use of an arm and is frequently in pain.

But he has maintained his sense of humor and served as a beacon of hope to disabled people around the country. He frequently lends his name to groups that help the handicapped.

His wife, Sarah, 44, has become an outspoken lobbyist for gun control, raising money, giving interviews and testifying before congressional committees.

"Our happy lives were changed forever," she says of the shooting, adding that tightening up on gun registration laws could have barred Hinckley from purchasing his weapon in Dallas.

Brady maintains that he's not bitter because "I don't have time to get bitter." A lawsuit the Bradys filed against Hinckley is still pending.

McCarthy, 36, briefly resumed duties in the Secret Service's presidential protective detail after he recovered from a bullet wound in the abdomen. He then transferred to the agency's Chicago bureau, where he spent 2 1/2 years in the counterfeit division. Now back in Washington, he is a supervisor of the elite presidential unit. Delahanty, 50, retired on full disability shortly after the shooting with 17 years of service.

Hinckley, 30, was found innocent by reason of insanity in June 1982. Since then he has been confined to a maximum security ward at St. Elizabeth's mental hospital.

"He is still undergoing an active treatment program," said Dr. Harold Thomas, a spokesman for St. Elizabeth's. Generally treatment for the 1,600 St. Elizabeth's patients includes individual and group therapy, he said.

Last week, a federal judge rejected Hinckley's request that he be permitted to leave the hospital grounds unattended to visit downtown Washington once a month, and that he be transferred to a less restrictive ward.

"I don't claim to be a perfect person, but I do know that my mental illness is in remission," Hinckley said in a brief courtroom appearance.

Dr. June A. Tukus, Hinckley's psychiatrist since 1982, disagreed. While Hinckley's condition has improved, his mental illness "is not totally in remission," she said, adding he lacks insight and judgment about his illness and "still thinks of himself in a grandiose way."

Kerrville man arrested on state charges after abduction conviction

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A Texas Ranger stepped forward to arrest a 34-year-old Kerrville carpenter on state kidnapping and burglary charges immediately after a federal court jury convicted him in the abduction of a banker's wife three months ago.

Ranger Don Steele said the federal government will keep Ronald Bell in custody until sentencing, then will turn him over for prosecution on state charges.

Gay Louise Haufler, 28, who was seven months pregnant, was abducted Dec. 17 and forced to call her husband, Mark, at the Kerrville bank where he is a vice president, and relay her captors' demand of a $100,000 ransom.

She since has given birth to a healthy child.

The jury deliberated more than six hours over two days before returning its guilty verdict against Bell, who had insisted he had no part in the abduction.

The jury sent a note out Thursday asking to see a transcript of the trial, but U.S. District Judge H.F. Garcia denied the request. Friday morning, the jury sent out another note saying the panel was deadlocked. Garcia sent a note back telling them to continue.

Juror Alton Sauls told the San Antonio Light that the main issue that hung up jurors was a description of Bell's hair. Mrs. Haufler testified she had seen a man whom she later realized was Bell walking past her house the day before the abduction. She testified the man had dark hair.

However, she had also said the color of the man's hair beneath the ski mask had appeared to be light.

Bell's brother, Allen Bell, pleaded guilty Feb. 27 to attempted extortion in the case and was sentenced to 18 years in prison.

The jury in Ronald Bell's trial was not allowed to hear about a confession that Allen Bell signed. In the confession, Allen Bell said he called Haufler at a downtown phone booth where the banker had been directed by his wife to go, but he implicated Ronald Bell as the instigator of the extortion attempt.

Haufler testified that after receiving a phone call at work from his wife, he was sent to two telephone booths before being instructed to leave the $100,000 in a trash can at a scenic overlook outside of town along Interstate 10.

Officers testified that although no one picked up the ransom money, they saw two men they believed to be the Bell brothers in a blue pickup truck nearby.

Soviet girl tours Space Center

STATE

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Soviet schoolgirl Katerina Lycheva visited a space shuttle training center and climbed aboard a lunar rover during a private NASA tour Saturday.

"It's as impressive as the (space) exhibition in Moscow," Katerina said during the visit.

The 11-year-old peace emissary visited the Johnson Space Center on the second day of a three-day tour of the Bayou City. Her trip commemorates the 1983 visit to Moscow by Samantha Smith, the Maine schoolgirl who died last year in a plane crash.

She was making her fourth stop on a tour that began March 20 in Chicago. She also visited New York and Washington, where she met briefly Thursday with President Reagan, and was scheduled to leave Houston on Sunday for Los Angeles.

Tour coordinators scrapped some of her public appearances so she could get some rest, but Katerina didn't miss her planned trip to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

She skipped across the lawn to the visitors' center holding hands with her constant companion, Star Rowe, of San Francisco, who won an essay contest held by the trip's San Franciscio-based sponsoring group, Children as Peacemakers.

Katerina posed patiently for photographers as she sat on a lunar rover trainer, but made only one comment about the tour. Trip coordinators said she was tired and didn't want to talk.

On Saturday night, Katerina planned to eat a dinner of tacos and sundaes with a group of Girl Scouts at a camp in Seabrook. The girls also planned to hunt for Easter eggs.

Katerina arrived at Houston Intercontinental Airport on Friday and was greeted by more than 150 Girl Scouts who presented her with a Texas flag and yellow roses. Her mother has accompanied her on the trip.

"I'm sure I'll like it very much here in Texas," she said upon arriving.

At a news conference Friday, Katerina and Star sang a popular Soviet song in English about there always being blue skies, sunshine and mommies.

Katerina said she has enjoyed the children the most on her trip.

"Today at the airport, I saw Girl Scouts and they were so pretty and I liked them all," she said.

Agriculture race takes comic turn

By KEN HERMAN

AUSTIN (AP) — The challengers for state agriculture commissioner this year are a nuclear power plant worker, a man who calls himself "Farmer" and a candidate dubbed "Chicken Man II."

The incumbent, Democrat Jim Hightower, has been criticized by "Chicken Man II" for being too funny.

It's a race that could be fairly humorous, except that many Texas farmers aren't smiling much these days. There's not much comedy in commodities.

"Texas needs and deserves more than a one-liner comedian as ag commissioner, and I intend to replace the incumbent comedian with sensible, knowledgeable leadership," said GOP contender Bill Powers of Austin, executive vice president of the Texas Poultry Federation.

In 1982, Hightower beat poultry expert Fred Thornberry in the general election. Hightower called Thornberry a "professor of chickenology." He now refers to Powers as "Chicken Man II."

"I don't know what I've done to make the chickens mad," said Hightower.

Powers, a 43-year-old former Democrat, faces Charles "Farmer" Trompler, 43, in the GOP primary. Trompler, of Malone, bills himself as a "Christian farmer."

"It's time Texas had a farmer leading the Agriculture Department," Trompler said.

Hightower's only primary opponent is little-known Noel Cowling of Dublin, a supporter of arch-conservative Lyndon LaRouche.

"I've been a farmer all my life, but I can't farm any more so I had to get a job. I couldn't pay my bills," said Cowling, 48, who works as a chemist at the Commance Peak Nuclear Project near Glen Rose.

The farmer-chemist has some definite ideas about how to bring Texas farmers out of the current economic slump.

"The most important thing is a total moratorium on farm foreclosures. We lost the inefficient farmers 10-15 years ago. We are losing the good farmers now," he said.

The Cowling campaign is a low-budget effort that generally operates only on weekends and vacation days.

"My supervisor was just in and out and I really shouldn't be talking," he said during a recent telephone interview at his job. "I really should go back to work."

Hightower, 42, says he is a marked man, targeted by the GOP as a Democrat that can be beat.

"The issue in this race is me. They'll flounder around with one thing or another, but they don't have any particular issues. They are running on the same old stuff that was used against me in 1982 — that I am just a communist.... That my ambition is to distribute the agriculture lands into little communist cells and hand them out to my political pals," he said.

Hightower has made some enemies during his tenure, including chemical company officials who did not appreciate his push for tighter controls on pesticide use.

Powers said Hightower, former editor of The Texas Observer, is a product of "life-long experience in liberal politics."

"Hightower is more interested in grabbing newspaper headlines and in unionizing Texas workers than he is in helping Texas agriculture move forward and become profitable," said Powers.

The incumbent does not apologize for his ability to turn phrases that reporters can't resist. Middle America does not want its leaders to be moderate to the brink of boredom, he has said.

"The political party that seeks refuge in the yawning middle ground of American politics is destined to lose," he told the National Press Club last year. "A farmer friend of mine told me, 'Hightower, there's nothing in the middle of the road but yellow stripes and dead armadillos.'"

Hightower said he has spent much of his time pushing Texas agriculture products and trying to open new markets for them.

"We are helping farmers — everything from fighting legislative battles in Washington, some of which we win and most of which we lose, to economic development stuff and international forums," he said.

Hightower opponents have questioned his dedication to the job, saying he has aspirations for higher office. The incumbent said he would, indeed, look at political opportunities that came his way in the future. But that doesn't hurt his performance as ag commissioner, he said.

"There is no future in politics. Anyone who plans their next step in politics won't make that next step. There's a lot of luck involved, being in the right place. There are only two ups from this job, governor and U.S. Senate," he said.

He add the best route to those posts is doing decent work in his current job.

Three Republicans seek Mauro's post

By DOUG CRICHTON
Associated Press Writer

Although three Republicans are vying in the May primary for the general land office commissioner's post, GOP Chairman George Strake says the race isn't one the state party has targeted.

The three — a dance hall operator, a teacher and a land surveyor — weren't recruited by the party and filed independently for the seat held by Democrat Garry Mauro, Strake said.

Mauro, serving a first term, is unopposed for the Democratic nomination, but Strake said Republicans might reconsider their stand on the race if Mauro gets embroiled in any controversy before the November elections.

The land office manages the Veterans Land Board and Texas' public lands, which include oil-rich offshore property, highway rights of way, the Capitol grounds in Austin and much of the land used by the Texas Department of Corrections.

Revenues from use of the land — $1.6 billion over the last three years, Mauro says — are used to fund the state's public school system.

McKinney surveyor George Collis, Tyler high school teacher Grady T. Yarbrough and M.D. Anderson Jr., who operates a dance hall in Kemp, have filed for the Republican primary on May 3.

Yarbrough

Collis

Mauro

Collis, 48, a native of White Deer near Amarillo, says the campaign's biggest issue is money and that his goal would be to reduce the land office's budget.

"Spending seems to be rampant in Austin," he said. "Our state is broke, and if we don't tighten our belts and look ahead to the future, then one of these days we won't be able to afford the taxes that'll be necessary."

Collis, who founded Collis Land Surveyors 12 years ago, said he has worked with 162 Texas counties and is familiar with the land office's operations.

Yarbrough, 49, is a career educator who has been a school counselor, an assistant principal and now teaches government and health at John Tyler High School in Tyler.

"I'm running for the post because the land officer is the person who is responsible for getting monies for permanent school fund," Yarbrough says. "Teachers won't get a fair shake under Mauro — he's a carbon copy of Gov. (Mark) White, and they have wrecked our educational system."

Yarbrough, who holds a real estate certificate, said he would have a lot to say about education-related legislation and that Mauro hasn't done enough to ensure a good educational system in Texas.

Anderson did not return repeated calls from The Associated Press.

Mauro is a lawyer who has been a director of the Texas Democratic Party, a deputy comptroller for tax administration and a coordinator with former Congressman Bob Krueger's election campaign.

He says he has fulfilled his campaign promises by increasing the number of loans to veterans from 1,200 per year when he took office to about 5,000 annually over the last three years — "statistically the best years in the history of the program," Mauro said.

He said he also has launched a veterans housing program and a loan program for home improvements that he says are self-sufficient and cost the state nothing.

Mauro campaigned on a platform of running public lands as a business, and even though oil and gas prices have decreased, he said he actually increased deposits into the permanent school fund to $1.6 billion over the last three years.

"I did exactly what I said I would do, and I'm still looking for new ways to use the land," he said. "The bottom line is that will have to diversify our sources of income, such as the current case of the Hilton Hotel leasing state land to build a hotel."

State will say TDC doing best to comply

AUSTIN (AP) — In a federal court document to be filed Monday, the state says Texas Department of Corrections administrators are doing the best they can to comply with court mandates to improve prison conditions.

But Assistant Attorney General Scott McCown concedes that the prison system has not fully complied with the orders that called for more guards, better health care and more single cells and recreation facilities, among other things.

McCown, whose office represents the TDC, acknowledged the deficiencies in a Friday news conference, where he released a legal document to be filed Monday in U.S. District Court in Houston.

Two years after the settlement of a class-action suit that alleged overcrowding in state prisons, the case has been reopened because prisoners have complained that not all agreements have been kept.

McCown said TDC administrators are "doing the best they can" to comply with the court's many mandates.

"The court has seen steady progress toward compliance with the provisions, which should leave the court hesitant to conclude that defendants (TDC) have been contemptuous," the state said in its reponse to a March 17 order from U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice.

Justice ordered the TDC to explain its actions and show cause why it should not be held in contempt of court. He set a June 2 hearing date to review the contempt motion, filed by prisoners in January as an extension of the 15-year-old class-action suit filed by convict David Ruiz against the TDC.

Prisoners, represented by William Bennett Turner of San Francisco, want Justice to fine the prison system more than $1 million for not doing all the things it promised.

Turner called the TDC response a "smokescreen" to obscure multiple violations of court orders.

"My clients want them to comply with the law," Turner told The Dallas Morning News. "It (the state's response) is basically saying, 'We don't have to comply with court orders because we mean well.'

"There's always a chance of settling," he added. "We're still talking, but I am not optimistic of a settlement and we are going full blast ahead to prepare for the trial."

McCown, who emphasized the TDC's achievements in meeting some goals, agreed a settlement is possible.

"While the problems that the plaintiffs (prisoners) are talking about are big problems, they tend to forget everything that has been done, elimination of building tenders (prisoner-guards), for example," McCown said.

To show its good faith, McCown said, the state is willing to allow televisions in prisoners' cells for the first time. He said the state would consent to prisoners keeping a special type of television in their cells, but not at taxpayers' expense.

The black-and-white sets, which could be made available in prison commissaries for under $70, are in a tamper-proof box to prevent their being dismantled or used to hide contraband, McCown said.

He said the state's strategy in the negotiations would be to contend that many of the court-imposed requirements for new staffing levels and facilities were based on out-dated data.

He blamed other areas of non-compliance on the Legislature for not funding certain projects and added that the state hasn't been able to hire all the additional specialty personnel required by the 1984 settlement.

But progress has been recorded, he said, principally through a new agreement that will use Texas Department of Mental Health-Mental Retardation staff in the 27 prison units.

STATE IN BRIEF

Iron overdose kills child

UNIVERSAL CITY (AP) — A 15-month-old girl died four days after mistaking her baby sitter's sugar-coated iron pills for candy and eating 15 of them, officials said.

Lauren Beth Shepherd swallowed at least three times the lethal dose for the iron pills Monday and was in critical condition for four days before her death Friday in a San Antonio hospital's pediatric intensive care unit, doctors said.

Medical Center Hospital physicians worked around the clock to save Lauren, but were unable to forestall lethal heart, liver, blood vessel and intestinal damage caused by the iron overdose, doctors said.

Police officer arrested

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — An undercover "sting" operation involving a staged break-in resulted in felony theft charges being filed against a six-year veteran of the San Antonio police department.

Patrolman Ernesto Trevino, 33, was videotaped early Friday morning removing property from the scene of the bogus break-in and putting it in the trunk of his patrol car, investigating officers said.

Police officials said Trevino had been suspended three times for sleeping on the job and three times for other departmental violations since joining the force in 1980.

Assistant Police Chief Frank Hoyack said Trevino was targeted for the sting operation after the department received "information from various sources that we needed to be aware of this officer's activities."

Trevino was charged with felony theft and jailed after investigators in hiding watched him place an expensive surveying tool from a south side business inside the trunk of his patrol car about 3 a.m. Friday, Hoyack said.

School honors students

DENTON (AP) — Six young women from Malaysia who died in a Panhandle car accident were remembered by friends and faculty at North Texas State University as dedicated students who wanted to serve their people.

"They were sweet and shy. They truly lived their religion. They opened our eyes to a religion we didn't know, and they made it very beautiful," said Peg Antonatos, administrative assistant in the NTSU English department.

Mrs. Antonatos, who befriended the six students when they arrived three years ago, was among more than 400 people who mourned their deaths during a memorial service Friday on the NTSU campus.

The six students — Mariah Abu Bakar, Hartini Ismail, Salamah Mohamed Ismail, Rosesuzana Othman, Mastura Sharif and Marina Taha — were killed March 17 in a head-on collision in Amarillo.

A seventh student, Norlaili Mohamed-Yunus, was critically injured.

The driver of the other car was killed, while a passenger survived.

Fort Worth man killed

FORT WORTH (AP) — A Fort Worth man died Saturday, less than 24 hours after he was shot in the head following what police believe was an altercation between two drivers.

Ricky Lynn Phillips died at 10:05 a.m., said Michael Mayo, John Peter Smith Hospital spokesman.

Officers investigating a call Friday night to the scene of an auto accident found Phillips, 27, slumped over the front seat of his car with a gunshot wound to the head, police said.

Witnesses said two cars pulled up driver-to-driver on Fort Worth's north side and the men exchanged heated words that were followed by gunfire, police spokesman Doug Clarke said.

Clarke said witnesses gave conflicting information about the incident. He was not sure if the drivers knew each other.

Wife shot at AA meeting

AUSTIN (AP) — A 46-year-old Austin man fatally shot his wife and then killed himself at an Alcoholics Anonymous center in Austin, police said.

Witnesses told police the couple was going through a divorce.

CAPITAL SCENE

Gambling debate a reasonable bet

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Anyone who has to compose a regular piece of analysis and commentary knows the feeling: anxiety strikes as you grope for a topic with the deadline fast approaching.

The solution, of course, is to plan ahead. But Tuesday — writing day for this column — seems to come around faster than any other day of the week.

Sometimes ideas show up that simply scream, "Here's a column, here's a column." That's why the lightbulb came on immediately last week in New Braunfels. Thanks, Kent.

Fielding audience questions during the 20th Texas Legislative Conference, Sen. Kent Caperton of Bryan came up with a new twist on the state's forelorn fiscal future. Well aware of the obvious political implications, Gov. Mark White and other state leaders have declined invitations to call the Legislature into a special session to deal with the budget problem.

The governor, instead, has called on state agencies and universities to trim their spending, hoping to fill the projected $1.3 billion deficit. Hold the line until the Legislature returns for its regular session in January, White says, and we'll get by.

Just what might happen in January, though, is what has Caperton asking for a special session now. "We need to call it for the purpose of how we're going to finance the state of Texas for the next few years," Caperton said.

Now wait a minute, Kent. I thought we were going to do that in January. Well, yes — and no — he says.

Look at it this way: The state treasury not only faces a $1.3 billion hole between now and Aug. 31, 1987, it's got huge craters out ahead as well. Comptroller Bob Bullock predicted a "revenue shortfall" of as much as $6.2 billion for the 1988 and 1989 budget years, and that was with expectations that oil prices would stabilize in the $15-per-barrel range.

Implying that lawmakers won't be able to cut that much from the budget, Caperton said it's time to look for a little revenue enhancement. "It's going to come down to this: do you want parimutuel wagering (on horse or dog races), do you want a lottery, or do you want an income tax?"

Now, Kent is stretching things a bit. Some estimates maintain that revenues from either a corporate or personal income tax would dwarf state profits from horse racing and a lottery combined by about 10 to 1. But for the sake of argument, let's continue.

Say lawmakers wish to go ahead with parimutuel gambling, a reasonable bet at this time. Current projections estimate that the state's share will come in somewhere around $100 million per year.

Even if supporters can get a bill through the Legislature, they find an immediate hurdle in the Governor's Mansion. White and all three of his Republican opponents have set several firm standards a parimutuel bill must meet to avoid a gubernatorial veto. Key among those standards is a statewide referendum on the issue.

"This is an issue that the people of Texas and only the people of Texas should decide," said GOP candidate former Gov. Bill Clements. The other three, surprisingly, agree.

So the bill passes, with the caveat that the voters must have their say. As Caperton pointed out, Bullock can't certify any of the $100 million as available for filling the budget hole until after the plebiscite.

The problem becomes one of time lag. The first chance for a referendum comes in November 1987. Then it'll take at least a year for any racetrack to come on line. State gambling revenues for the 1988-1989 would be a trickle at most.

Now the horse racing folks are counting on the state's revenue crunch to provide the final whip to get the bill across the finish line. While both the development of a racing industry and the state's fiscal woes are long-term projects, legislators tend to think in crisis terms.

An early start will capture the current crisis with ease. A special session is just the tool. The possibility of delay could easily poke a hole in the gambling sail.

One last complication. Only White can bring the legislators back to Austin in time to get a racing referendum on the November ballot. And right now he's inclined — mostly for reasons political — to keep them at home.

Steve Levine is the Reporter-Telegram's Austin Bureau chief.

Tougher stand on terror urged

BEAUMONT (AP) — Likening terrorism to a football team's offensive strikes, an Israeli consul chided the United States for not using tougher defensive strategies to thwart terrorists.

Americans should learn a lesson from Israelis, who attack and intimidate the centers of international terrorism with pre-emptive and retributive strikes, said Houston-based Israeli Consul General Yoram Ettinger in a speech to a Jewish organization Friday.

"We hit the PLO (Palestine Liberation Organization) in Samaria. We hit them inside Lebanon. We hit them in Tunisia. We made it very clear, we'll hit them anywhere in the world," Ettinger said. "When you sack the quarterback, then you win the game."

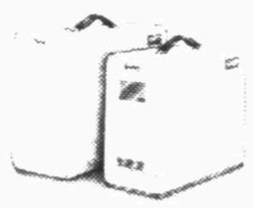

He said the United States, which normally waits for terrorists to strike, should confront terrorists as it confronted Libya in the Gulf of Sidra last week.

Israel carries out pre-emptive strikes and swift retributions for terrorist acts to avoid future incidents like the taking of hostages and the hijacking of planes, he said.

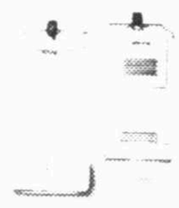

"You do that by intimidating the terrorists so they cannot plan such actions," said Ettinger, who also edits the "Contemporary Mideast Backgrounder," a Jerusalem-based biweekly on modern Arab politics and U.S. interests in the Middle East.

Conditions forecast for 7 A.M. Sunday

In West Texas, widely scattered showers and thunderstorms south and isolated showers and thunderstorms. Partly cloudy southeast Sunday otherwise sunny Sunday and Monday. Fair Sunday night. Continued mild to warm temperatures.

In North Texas, partly cloudy through Sunday night. Lows 52 to 56. Sunny Sunday and Monday. Highs around 83.

In South Texas, isolated showers extreme northwest otherwise partly cloudy with warm days and mild nights through Monday. Lows Sunday night in the 50s and 60s. Highs Sunday and Monday mostly in the 80s.

Temperature in low 80s anticipated

From Staff and Wire Reports

Perfect Easter egg hunting weather is in store for Midlanders today with a high in the low 80s, predicted by the National Weather Service at the Midland Regional Airport.

Today will also be partly cloudy with winds southerly at 10 to 20 mph. Tonight will be fair with a low in the mid 50s.

Monday will be sunny with a high in the mid 80s.

Saturday's high missed the record mark by 15 degrees. The record high of 95 degrees was set in 1963. The overnight low of 49 degrees also missed the record mark by 26 degrees. The record low for Saturday's date was 23 degrees set in 1937.

STATE

High cloudiness and mild temperatures were the rule across most of Texas Saturday as a high-pressure system continued dominating the state's weather.

Scattered thunderstorms were detected over West Texas from the Edwards Plateau to southeast New Mexico, according to the National Weather Service.

Late-afternoon temperatures warmed into the 70s and 80s. The 3 p.m. extremes ranged from 85 degrees at McAllen to 65 degrees at Sanderson.

A south wind of 10 to 20 mph flowed across most of Texas. A few gusts reached as high at 25 mph over North Texas, while a light wind breezed the Rio Grande Valley.

The forecast for North Texas calls for partly cloudy skies through Sunday night and sunny skies Monday. Lows should be in the 50s and highs in the 80s.

South Texas should have isolated showers in the extreme northwest but otherwise have partly cloudy, warm days and mild nights through Monday. Lows should be in the 50s and 60s and highs mostly in the 80s.

West Texas should be mostly sunny through Monday with lows in the 40s and 50s and highs in the 80s to near 90 in the Big Bend valleys.

NATION

Sunny skies and warm air covered much of the nation Saturday, and high temperature records were broken from North Dakota to Michigan and Illinois.

The warmest spot in the 48 contiguous states was not Palm Springs, Calif., or Key West, Fla., but Des Moines, Iowa, where the high of 90 degrees was two degrees above the former record for the date, set in 1895.

Flunking this test could save alcoholic's life

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

Midland television viewers may be "taking a test" Wednesday evening if they tune in to KOSA Channel 7.

The program is the half-hour documentary, "The National Alcoholism Test," which asks viewers 12 questions to determine whether they may have a drinking problem.

"We're airing the show as part of our commitment to the Permian Basin in community involvement," said station manager Tom Hughes. "Alcoholism is a community problem and we felt it deserved more than just public service announcments." KOSA will be following up the show with a series of alcoholism-related news stories by Jan Carroll.

"The National Alcoholism Test," produced by Public Service Video Inc. of New York, is based on a 12-question survey developed by Johns Hopkins University.

"Johns Hopkins is a leader in the field of chemical dependency," said Cathy Clayton, marketing director for Clearview, the show's sponsor. "The questions asked are similar to those used in Alcoholics Anonymous and other chemical dependency groups and programs."

Ms. Clayton said Clearview was approached by PSV about sponsoring the show on KOSA. KOSA was also contacted by the firm which acquired the video distribution rights world wide in November.

The show features Patrick O'Neil as host, with recovering alcoholics who share their experiences related to the 12 questions. According to recovered alcoholic and PSV President William Carpenter, a 1982 Peabody Award winner in the documentary category, "The National Alcoholism Test" was sold to more than 100 television stations at the time it was released. The video was produced by Knight Ridder Broadcasting in association with On the Air and with the cooperation of the New York Council on Alcoholism.

Ms. Clayton said the show, to be shown at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, will be a personal and dramatic presentation of what life as an alcoholic is like, with the 12 questions being answered by both celebrities and laymen.

"These are people you recognize," she said of the film's well-known admitted alcoholics such as Roy Scheider of "Jaws" and "All That Jazz" fame. "The show starts off showing a party scene with people drinking and is immediately dramatic and hard-hitting."

A narrator describes how one young woman at the party will never see her kids again because she'll be killed in an alcohol-related accident that same evening.

Throughout the program various people are asked the 12 questions and then answer them with personal testimony of alcoholism-related problems.

The 12 questions are: 1.) Do you tell yourself you can stop drinking anytime you want to even though you keep getting drunk? 2.) Do you drink in the morning? 3.) Do you drink to build up your self-confidence? 4.) Do you drink to escape from worries or troubles? 5.) Have you ever had a complete loss of memory as a result of drinking? 6.) Do you turn to socially different companions and environments when drinking?

Other questions asked are: 7.) Do you drink alone? 8.) Have you ever felt remorse after drinking? 9.) Is drinking making your home life unhappy? 10.) Have you ever gotten into financial difficulties as a result of drinking? 11.) Is drinking causing you job or business problems? and 12.) Have you ever been to a hospital or institution on account of drinking?

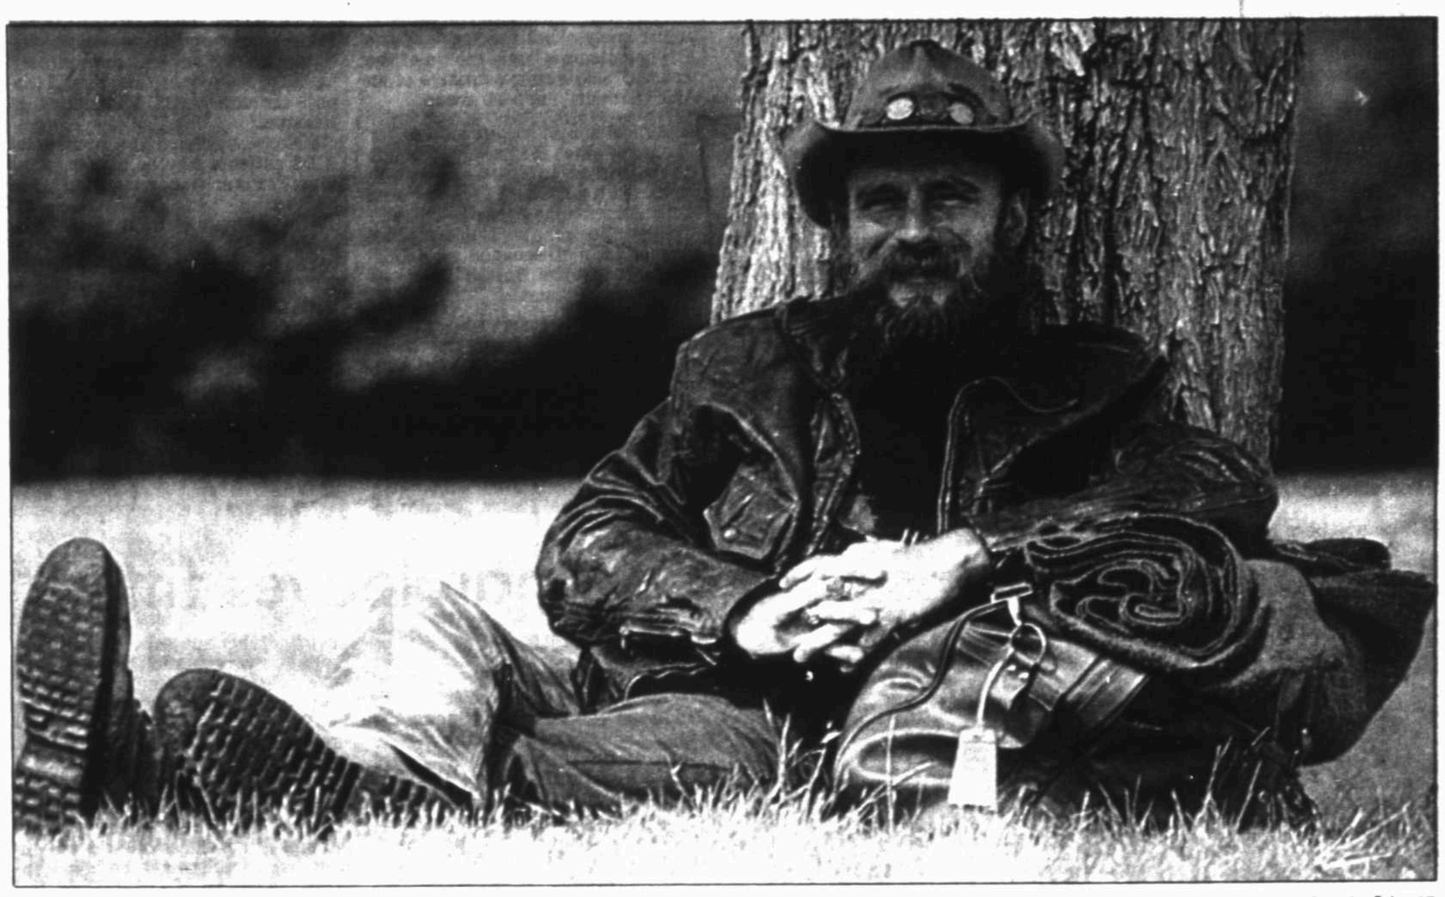

Ms. Clayton said the questions are those asked by Clearview crisis specialist Lynda Herbold when she takes phone calls from potential alcoholics.

"If you answer three of the questions 'yes,' there is a strong chance you may have a drinking problem," she said. "These are all valid assessment questions."

Ms. Clayton added Clearview will be answering calls following the show's presentation.

Statistics indicate that while a relatively low percentage of alcoholics ever seek treatment, once they do, their chance for recovery is extremely good, she added.

Kent Porter Reporter-Telegram

Jerome Dais savors the "good life" of a wanderer, as he takes respite under an elm tree in Midland. He travels by foot and his hitchhiker's "thumb" over highways, byways, back trails and no trails.

Wanderer lured by road's romance

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

I had an old blue suitcase that wasn't even mine and a heart full of sorrow and a tangled-up mind.

And on that note, Jerome Dais "hit the road" almost two decades ago and has been traveling since. He walked and hitched rides as he left behind a failing romance.

And his romance today is fraught with adventures of another sort. Instead of courting a fair maiden to his delight and sorrow, he travels the highways, byways and back trails as a way of life. His solace comes in the wilds of solitude and in the company of dear friends he has made in his travels.

Dais' wanderlust recently returned him to Midland for a visit with friends. And the 37-year-old bearded wanderer shared his adventures in a meandering way.

He was dressed for the road.

"This is the coat that saved my bacon in the Guadalupe Mountains," Dais reflected on his leather "Harley-Davidson" motorcycle jacket. "I was up there to see if I could stumble upon gold nuggets in a draw on (or about) Guadalupe Peak."

He didn't. Instead, he almost froze, like Sam McGee in the ballad set in the Yukon Territory, but survived in his bedroll, longhandle underwear, other garb and leather jacket.

"I poked my nose out just a little bit, and it became frosty."

When he camps out, he strays from the roadside, makes a campfire, roasts a skinned rabbit which he had stoned, settles down to eat and meditate, and sacks out. "There's nothing better than a rabbit cooked over an open fire."

"PEOPLE WHO camp out aren't bothered by spiders and rattlesnakes," he said, but they do avoid skunks.

Coyotes are his friends, but wild dogs are not.

"Coyotes are a pleasure. I like to hear them sing. I saw a coyote sitting in a (passing) boxcar with his tongue hanging in the breeze."

He doesn't deride the often-maligned coyote, the prairie wolf of the plains. "They might eat a fellow's chickens," he said, "but, gosh darned it, he (the fellow) should have had them locked up."

Coyotes are smart, and the hardest thing to trap are he-coyotes." Farmers, ranchers, hunters and trappers unwittingly have strengthened the coyotes. Their tricks and poisoned baits and traps have "weeded out the stupid coyotes," Dais said, and left the smarter, more cunning and crafty coyotes to live on and breed. "We're evolving as friends of the coyotes."

"The real problems are the wild dogs," he said. "Wild dogs are to be greatly feared. Coyotes will avoid a man, but wild dogs will attack."

Dais has experienced what he calls the "stray-dog syndrome" in days of solitude along the trail.

"You're mental attitude changes."

Food discarded by others, such as motorists, along his route ceases to be refuse, trash or just blobs of nothing.

"It's not something people threw away; it's something you eat or don't eat. You'll eat anything. You'll find old dead cookies along the road and eat them." People who have experienced the stray-dog syndrome "would never bitch about food again."

TIME ALONG THE trail is not critical.

Goffigon recipient of Trimble Service Award

From Staff Reports

Melvyn J. "Mel" Goffigon has been named the March recipient of the Trimble Service Award. The award, co-sponsored by Leadership Midland Alumni Association and the Midland Reporter-Telegram, was established to recognize citizens who best represent volunteerism.

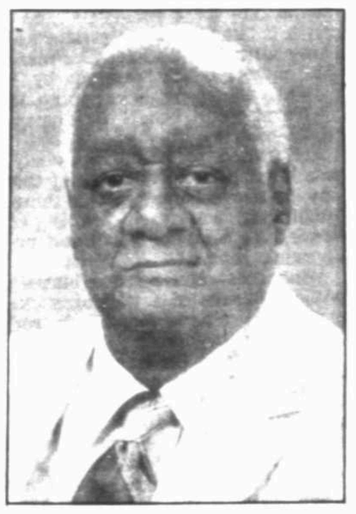

Goffigon began as a volunteer at Casa de Amigos shortly after he moved to Midland in 1972 from New York City, following a 32-year career as a personnel director with the federal government.

He continues to serve on the Casa board of directors. He has been chairman of the program committee and is the personnel advisor on the operations committee. In that role, he reviews all applications for job openings and assists in personnel selection.

While chairman of the program committee, he became the coordinator of a program called "Plan Ahead for Careers and Education" (PACE). Students who were potential dropouts were referred to PACE by the Midland Public Schools. PACE counselors met with the students at least once a week to offer support and to encourage them to stay in school. The program continued until 1978 when funds were no longer available.

Goffigon also served on the planning committee to establish several nutrition sites for the elderly in Midland. Casa de Amigos now serves as a nutrition site for senior citizens Monday through Friday. As an outgrowth of the elderly nutrition program, Casa now has a slate of activities and services for senior citizens and a full-time director of senior services.

Goffigon also serves on the Midland Senior Citizens Inc., board of directors. That board oversees Meals-On-Wheels and Need-A-Meal programs.

Night spots' 'in crowd' found outside restroom doors

Every once in a while I like to go to one of those places if, for no other reason, to make sure nothing has changed.

It rarely has.

I speak of the local night spots that cater to Midland's "beautiful people" — the kind of facility that is terribly large, has blinking lights, specializes in excessively loud music and attracts people, mostly under 25, whose idea of a big time is getting dressed up and walking in circles. I'll get back to the part about walking in circles later.

Basically, there are two kinds of people in these places. Men and women. Each has its own distinctive style and characteristics.

The women, for example, mostly sit in clusters of three and four, chain-smoke long, skinny cigarettes and converse with one another in rapid fashion. They will often put their hands over their mouths as they speak, apparently so the rest of us won't be able to hear what is being said.

This, I hasten to add, is totally unnecessary. It is also wasted energy. World War III could break out in the parking lot and no one would be able to hear it over the music.

The men, on the other hand, just sort of stand around and look nonchalant. There is an art to this, I'm told. You don't want to look thoroughly bored, yet, at the same time, it is not considered cool to appear overly impressed with your surroundings, either. It is a fine line and apparently some men can pull it off and others can't. I think it is something you are born with.

Men are also the ones who walk in circles. This exercise is just as silly as it sounds. The guys who don't have dates spend the bulk of the evening walking mindlessly in a large circle that surrounds the tables where everyone else is seated. Some call it cruising. I call it weird.

No one seems to know for sure why these men engage in such a peculiar ritual, but it has been suggested they do it for the exercise since most of them are junior executive types who spend most of their working hours behind a desk and don't have a chance for physical activity.

Others, especially those with a more realistic view of social behavior, disagree and say the reason is so the men can show off their bodies for the women. The women, unfortunately, don't notice because they are all sitting in clusters, chain-smoking and screaming at one another so they can be heard over the music.

One strange habit both groups possess is a tendency to congregate outside the restroom doors. Again, no one seems to know why. There aren't even any theories on the subject.

Still, it happens. People choose that place to hang out. It can be unnerving. You go in, take care of business and when you step out you are immediately met by 25 sets of eyes. Understandably, your first reaction is to glance down and make sure you didn't forget to zip up.

There are a great many things in this world a person should be allowed to do in private and leaving the restroom is one of them.

But, really, I shouldn't complain. I was there by choice. And, despite the above-mentioned quirks, a large nightclub can be a fun — well, make that an interesting — place to be. It is ideal for people-watching. You can also learn the latest trends in clothes, although you probably wouldn't be caught dead wearing them. And, if you are feeling a bit out of shape, you can always exercise by walking in circles.

The parade starts at 10 p.m. Don't be late. We spectators need a good laugh.

Gary Ott is city editor of the Reporter-Telegram.

DEATHS

Maye Motley

Servies for Maye Motley of Midland will be at 9:30 a.m. Monday in the Ellis Funeral Home chapel with the Rev. Dr. Daniel Vestal, pastor of First Baptist Church, officiating. Burial will follow Tuesday in Pinecrest Memorial Park in Little Rock, Ark.

Mrs. Motley died Thursday at a Midland hospital.

Survivors include two sons, Carl J. Trim of Midland and Loui H. Trim Jr. of El CaJon, Calif.; one brother, William Edgar Strong of Montgomery, Ala.; five grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

The family requests that memorials be directed to Fannin Terrace Baptist Church.

Frances 'Millie' Whitted

Services are pending for Frances "Millie" Whitted, 6, daughter of Jim and Nina Whitted of Midland.

She died at a Midland hospital Friday morning following a lengthy illness.

She was born in Midland Aug. 17, 1979, and had lived here all her life.

Survivors include her parents; two brothers, Lawrence James "Larry" Whitted and Bamon Whitted, both of Midland; and two sisters, Iva Whitted of Las Vegas, Nev., and Carlene Whitted of Midland.

Sabrina Pyle

Services for Sabrina Pyle of Midland will be at 3:30 p.m. Monday at Golf Course Church of Christ, 3500 W. Golf Course Road.

The Rev. Doug Parsons will officiate. Burial will follow in Greenwood Cemetery.

She died Saturday afternoon at a Midland hospital from injuries received in an automobile accident.

Hugh Story

Services for former landman Hugh Story, 70, of Midland, will be at 1:30 p.m. Monday at the Ellis Funeral Home chapel.

Dr. Charles Lutrick of the First United Methodist Church will officiate. Burial will follow in San Angelo at the Fairmont Cemetery at 4:30 p.m.

Story died Saturday morning at a Midland hospital.

He was born Sept. 2, 1915, in San Angelo. He attended school there and began his business career as a scout with Ohio Oil Co. in 1937. Story served with the U.S. Navy during World War II in the South Pacific. Following his discharge from the Navy he started to work with Cities Service Oil Co. as a petroleum landman. He resigned to become the manager of Hancock Oil Co. in 1952 and then went on to become an independent landman and oil operator in 1956.

Survivors include his wife, Pat Story of Midland and five brothers, Hal and Robert Story of Austin, Rectory Story of San Angelo, Richard Story of Midland and Winford Story of Corpus Christi.

The family requests memorials be directed to Hospice of Midland.

AIDS discussion set for Thursday

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

What the media and the general public know about the scope of the AIDS epidemic is "only the tip of the iceberg," said a representative of an AIDS patients' support group.

Paul Malone, a spokesman for Shanti of the Plains, a Lubbock group formed to "lend support to people with AIDS and their families and to educate the public," will be in Midland Thursday as a guest panel speaker for a "Discussion on AIDS," presented by the Human Relations Council of Midland.

Other guest lecturers who also will answer questions from the more than 200 people expected to attend, include Dr. D. Jenkins of Amarillo, Tommy Langham, a Disease Intervention Specialist for the Texas Department of Health and another Shanti representative, Sherry Crowell.

Shanti of the Plains, headquartered in Lubbock, is an offshoot of the founding organization in San Francisco, said Malone.

"We're very much like the the San Francisco group but are not funded by any kind of government sources," he said. "We're more like the KS (Kaposi sarcoma)/AIDS Foundation in Houston."

Malone suggested the number of AIDS patients may be higher in the West Texas area than most are led to believe.

"Unfortunately what you know about what is going on is only the tip of the iceberg," he said. "We've had 700 reported cases in Texas and Lubbock, being a metropolitan community, does have its share as well."

To date, the Midland-Odessa area has reported only a handful of AIDS-related deaths, according to health department statistics.

Malone said while Lubbock has a number of AIDS patients, many do not choose to use the services of Shanti.

"There are many people who want to go through it without help," he said. "They choose not to use our services."

Shanti has a "buddy system" for working with AIDS patients and their families, said Malone, in which a trained counselor is available for one-on-one counseling.

Malone said the group often gets referrals from doctors and hospitals.

While Shanti will address the impact of AIDS on the lives of patients and their families, a Texas Department of Health spokesman will answer questions on how the agency deals with reporting and testing of AIDS cases.

"I'll try and show how the TDH handles the confidentiality of AIDS patients and how the tests results for the HTLV-III virus and the cases are reported," said Tommy Langham, disease intervention specialist for Region 12 of the TDH. Langham has an office at the Ector County Health Department.

A spokesman for the Human Relations Council said the AIDS seminar is being held, in part, because of Midland's conservatism.

"Basically Midland is a real conservative city and no one else has done this type of presentation here before," said Nerissa Teel. "Everyone needs to know the facts about AIDS so they don't go into a panic."

Ms. Teel indicates the HRC sometimes advocates controversial issues.

"We're a multi-ethnic organization and we like to do high-impact presentations when possible," she said. She added Midland has kept a "real low profile on the AIDS cases it has reported so far."

The HRC describes itself as "a group of community residents who have chosen as their purpose to promote understanding and communication between all racial, religious, ethnic and nationality groups within the city of Midland."

The AIDS lecture/discussion will be held Thursday, 7 p.m. at Midland Center and is open to the public free of charge.

Cowman leaves fitting monument

By DAVID WOLBRUECK

MARKHAM, Texas (AP) — Ramrod straight, the grizzled cowman sits tall in the saddle, hands gripping the reins, his hat cocked to one side to shield the sun from a face etched with the markings of long hours on the hot and dusty trail.

His mount, a white mule, peers across the flat ranchland, ears perked attentively. Behind the mounted cowboy crouch two dogs, eagerly awaiting their rider's next sharp command.

The cowman is Matagorda County native Thomas B. LeTulle — lifelong cowman, rascal and legend. But this is not the real LeTulle, but rather a lifesize bronze likeness erected on LeTulle's ranch.

This is the monument that will mark the final resting place of LeTulle and his wife, Alta, when they are called to that last big roundup.

Situated on LeTulle's ranch northeast of Markham, where it overlooks a 175-acre lake, it is the centerpiece of land he is donating for a 500-grave public cemetery. He's also contributing $50,000 to the county so the interest can be used to maintain the cemetery.

"I've always liked history, and I thought I'd like to do something for the history of Matagorda County," the 75-year-old LeTulle explains in a typically Texan drawl.

LeTulle takes credit for thinking up the idea, but the handiwork is that of local sculptor Danny Stephens and a Santa Fe, N.M., foundry. Work on the monument began about two years ago.

Stephens, who lives between Midfield and Blessing, says he first made a small clay model of the monument, working from pictures and measurements of his subjects. Though LeTulle has a reputation as somewhat of a "character," Stephens says he had no problem working with the rancher.

After the miniature met with LeTulle's approval, a larger model was made from clay from which the New Mexico foundry made the lifesized bronzed cast. The completed statue is complete to the smallest detail, including saddle strings, LeTulle's unusual low-horned saddle and the lines in LeTulle's trail-battered countenance.

"They said they've done all kinds of statues, from dinosaurs on down, but this was the first mule they've ever done," Stephens says.

Before the finished product was sent to Texas, it had to meet with LeTulle's approval. So, relates LeTulle, a picture was sent to him.

"I took it to a lawyer in Bay City (LeTulle won't say who) and he didn't know who it was," he says.

So he went to a man in Markham, a junk dealer, and "asked him if he recognized the fellow in the picture."

"He looked at it and said, 'That's you,'" LeTulle said, adding after a pause, "That convinced me."

The finished product, not including the mausoleum underneath, cost $105,000, he says.

Isn't that a lot of money?

"You can't take it with you," LeTulle says.

Though LeTulle usually uses about five dogs, there are only two on the monument.

"Those dogs cost $8,000 apiece, that's why," explains the rancher.

LeTulle is not a man prone to wordiness, a characteristic reflected in the inscription on the mausoleum. It reads:

"Dedicated to my wife
Alta Ree Smith LeTulle"

Where each will some day lie are engraved the names and dates of birth of Alta and Thomas LeTulle.

While LeTulle says he's doing it to be a part of history, the one-of-a-kind cattleman has already made history with a cattle operation whose success is based on a most unusual method of ranching.

"I'm about the only man able to handle cattle with dogs," LeTulle says matter-of-factly. LeTulle and his wife and their unlikely cowhands have "handled" cattle sucessfully for more than four decades, becoming an institution in Matagorda County.

"I started using a mule in 1941. The advantage of a mule is its sturdiness and low altitude," LeTulle says.

Horses are too tall to get through the rattan vines — LeTulle pronounces the word "rat tan" — found in the bottomlands where he has herded his cross-bred cattle.

"A horse is too tall to get through. When the dogs bay, you want to be there. I tried little horses, but that didn't work either."

Fund set up for victim's family

From Staff Reports

Sabrina Pyle, 28, of rural Midland died Saturday from injuries received in an automobile accident March 23 on the Garden City Highway. She had been listed in critical condition at Midland Memorial Hospital since that time.

Ms. Pyle suffered head and abdominal injuries and several fractured limbs in the accident, which occurred about a mile east of Midland.

A trust account has been established at RepublicBank First National Midland to provide financial support to Ms. Pyle's family and her two children, Cason, 4, and Kallie, 2, both of whom were injured in the accident.

The children suffered broken bones, cuts, and bruises and undetermined internal injuries.

Donations will be accepted at the walk-in or drive-in tellers. Contributers need to say their gifts are for the Pyle Family Special Account.

Defendants in sanctuary trial praise governor's declaration

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Two defendants in the sanctuary alien-smuggling trial Saturday praised New Mexico's declaration that it was a sanctuary state and predicted Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt will be asked to help declare Arizona a sanctuary state.

"New Mexico has now become the first state to declare that it is a government for all the people within its borders," said Jim Corbett, one of the co-founders of the sanctuary movement and one of 11 defendants in the sanctuary trial being heard in U.S. District Court here.

Speaking at a news conference Saturday, Corbett said New Mexico "will not permit itself to become a government in which refugees from Central America are below the law."

In making the sanctuary state proclamation Friday, New Mexico Gov. Toney Anaya said the state was opposing the "deportation of Central American refugees back to their home countries where they may face persecution, torture and even assassination by anonymous death squads."

Corbett said Anaya's action would help "a class of people who are running for their lives."

Midland home damaged by fire

From Staff Reports

The interior of an east Midland home was destroyed by a Saturday evening fire, the fire department reported.

The cause and amount of damage to the home at 1919 Morgan Way was under investigation late Saturday night, said Capt. Keith Morrison.

Four units were sent to the house fire that began around 9:30 p.m. Saturday.

R.C. Royals, occupant of the home, said he had no idea how the fire started. Royals was away from the house when the fire began, he said.

TEST

"Eighty-five percent of those who seek treatment will eventually recover," she said. "However, only about 15 percent ever seek that treatment."

Ms. Clayton suggested that "flunking the Johns Hopkins test could very well save a life."

Included in the video are other statistics about drinking problems which reveal 10 percent of all drinkers in the U.S. imbibe 50 percent of the nation's liquor supply. The video has been marketed directly to corporations, hospitals, rehabilitation centers, libraries, schools, churches and other interested groups, according to PSV.

Locally, the video will be available at Midland County Library in the audio-visual department and at Clearview. The tape is for VHS only.

WANDERER

"You aren't concerned with time," he said. "Nobody is looking for you. You don't measure time in days or even hours."

When he's back on the highways and looking for a ride, Dais noted that it is "important" to maintain a sunny attitude. "Be happy." Otherwise, motorists will "pass you by."

"When somebody picks you up, it re-affirms your beliefs in human kindness."

And, when motorists repeatedly pass him by as he hikes along the way, he learns patience. "One thing hitchhiking will teach you is patience," he said, "or you'll end up digesting yourself."

When Dais walks, he paces himself without benefit of a walking stick.

"It's best to have your hands free for talking to yourself."

Oftentimes in his travels, he will transform to "Jerome Dais, psychoanalyst," when he counsels by simply listening to disturbed motorists. He recalled his adventures with a Dallas man who picked him up in his Lincoln Continental sedan. "He was smoking a briar (pipe) that costs 150 bucks if it cost two cents."

The driver talked of his problems and woes.

"It (talking) is cheaper than hiring a psychoanalyst," Dais said, "and he knew that I was onto him. It's easier on the body than booze and is less expensive than psychotherapy."

DAIS IS FROM a wandering family. He thinks himself to be part Irish and part Basque. His father wandered. He wanders. He even went to about 50 different schools before he dropped out in the 10th grade. "I'd recommend it to anybody," he said with a notable lack of seriousness. "I never once had to write a term paper."

It was in 1969 when Dais launched his "romance with the great asphalt river" and began his wandering days.

"I've worked around here and there. I've doodle-bugged, pipe-lined, worked construction, shrimped quite a bit, worked as a longshoreman, scabbing on the docks at Corpus Christi. If I wasn't scabbing, I was running from the game wardens" in and along the coastal waters.

At one of his layovers in Corpus Christi, Dais got his General Equivalency Diploma. In doing so, he made the highest GED grade every scored there. "I just lucked out," he said. "I have a talent for taking tests just like some people have a talent for sticking spoons on their nose."

In his travels in the Southwest, he holes up with friends at New Orleans, Corpus Christi, Dallas, Midland and Odessa. He has traveled through most of the States and recently returned from a two-year stay in Hawaii. "It's a miserable place to visit," he said, "but it's a great place to live."

HIS TIMES ALONE have impressed him that "Reality is more subjective than we think," Dais said. "You'll find that out after three or four days without hearing a voice — just being alone, not having anyone pulling on you, no demands, no overhead."

This roving "gentleman of the highways" has an abiding sense of humor, a kind heart and a keen wit. Topping his crown most always is his olive-drab Australian bush hat, which is anchored by a hat band of 20 coins. Once on a flight, an airline stewardess urged him to remove his hat, so she could better talk with him. He was somewhat nervous then and didn't want to remove his hat or converse much.

"'Lady,'" he told her, "'the last time I took off my hat in public, women fainted and children screamed.' And she left me alone."

This traveler is not without possessions. He collects antiques, particularly coins and swords, and leaves them with friends. Wherever he travels, he finds gifts for friends and kin. In Hawaii, he bought an ivory figurine of a lovely woman for his brother Will Dais, an Odessa artist. "I figured he needed a girl friend who wouldn't do him wrong."

He finds joy in collecting things and in giving them away.

"You've got to give them away before you die," he reasoned. "That way, you enjoy things twice over. You enjoy having them and then giving them away — finding them a good home."

Occasionally, Dais considers settling down.

"I don't think I'll ever be status quo, but I do see the time when I'll settle down and make a nice contribution to society, and by that I mean people."

In the meantime, he continues in his wandering ways and conjures up "nonsense" verses like this tribute to the "stately" pelican which sails "majestically" in coastal waters:

Pelican

Pelican
Peli can't Peli shall Peli shan't
Peli could Peli couldn't
Peli would
But Peli wouldn't Peli cans
In Peli sacks
Peli boxes
In Peli stacks

Midlanders discuss minority business opportunities

From Staff Reports

Opportunities for minority business operations in the Permian Basin are to be discussed April 7 when Midland College presents the fourth and final 1986 Free Enterprise Lecture.

Beginning at 7:30 p.m. in the Allison Fine Arts auditorium, Midland business owners Robbyne Fuller and Manuel Carrasco will discuss how they began their own businesses and give tips about how others might do the same thing. The lecture is open to the public.

Following the presentation, time is allotted for questions. The lecture will conclude with a reception.

Robbyne Fuller

Manuel Carrasco

Mrs. Fuller was graduated from Midland's Carver High School, attended San Angelo Junior College, Odessa College and Draughon's Business College. She also completed coursework at Midland College and Wayland Baptist University.

Mrs. Fuller was the first black woman in Midland to receive a real estate license and was formerly employed by Patil Enterprises and Litton Data Systems in Lubbock. She returned to Midland in 1976 and has since been employed by Texas Instruments.

She is owner of Flowery Ideas by Robbyne, a home-based business providing custom decorations.

Mrs. Fuller is president of the Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs, branch secretary of the Midland Chapter of the NAACP, director of the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, member of the Hispanic Task Force and Black Advisory Council, and director of the Midland-Odessa Texins Association at Texas Instruments.

Carrasco is a graduate of Midland High School and received a bachelors and master's degrees from Sul Ross State University. He has served as an elementary school teacher and principal in Midland, was special assistant to the superintendent of the Dallas Independent School District, then returned to Midland to become administrative assistant to the superintendent of the Midland Independent School District. Currently, he owns and operates Carrasco Real Estate and Insurance Center.

Worthy Is the Lamb

In all the excitement of Easter, let us remind each other often of Christ's quiet surrender, powerful resurrection, and promised return.

He is worthy of our praise.

His Word is worthy of our devotion.

Worthy is the Lamb, who was slain, to receive power and wealth and wisdom and strength and honor and glory and praise!

Introducing the Southwest Kidney Institute

Lubbock General Hospital and the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center are proud to announce the opening of the Southwest Kidney Institute.

Located in Lubbock, the Institute brings hope closer to home for hundreds of people who live in West Texas and Eastern New Mexico affected by kidney disease.

The Southwest Kidney Institute offers comprehensive outpatient and inpatient dialysis facilities, kidney transplantation, a specially dedicated hospital unit for care of the renal patient, and a nationally recognized renal research laboratory.

This special combination of clinical services, research, and medical education combine to provide the Institute with a scope of services previously available only in distant metropolitan areas.

The Southwest Kidney Institute has brought together the talents of leaders in the fields of nephrology, surgery and research to combine with the broad range of medical expertise available at Lubbock General and the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center. These experts include:

Dr. Neil Kurtzman, Director of the Southwest Kidney Institute
Dr. Glen Stanbaugh, Chief of Clinical Services
Dr. Sandra Sabatini, Chief of Renal Laboratories
Dr. Neil Glass, Director of the Center for Organ Retrieval and Transplantation

"Those who bring sunshine to the lives of others, cannot keep it from themselves."
James Barrie

The Southwest Institute is dedicated to treating kidney disease at all levels.

The Institute's goals include offering the finest in patient care, education and research as they relate to the broad spectrum of kidney disease. The Southwest Kidney Institute is a center of excellence, working to increase the state of knowledge for today's and tomorrow's patients.

City decisions

Voters in Midland will go the polls Saturday to elect a new mayor and two City Council representatives, with one of those council positions being unopposed.

In the mayor's race, incumbent Councilman Steve Davidson is being opposed in his bid for the city's top spot by former Councilman Carroll M. Thomas and political newcomer Barbara Harris. The race for the District 3 seat on the council is between newcomers Kelly Fish and Lawrence Connolly, while the other council position, District 4, is only being sought by former County Attorney Robert Rendall.

After meetings with candidates in the contested races and a careful examination of both the qualifications offered by those individuals and the issues in the respective races, the Reporter-Telegram believes voters should cast their ballots for Davidson and Connolly in the opposed races.

As a member of the City Council since 1980, Davidson offers to city voters both experience and enthusiasm that could prove instrumental in helping pull the community's spirit through the tough times now being encountered because of falling oil prices. Davidson speaks openly of the need to ensure delivery of vital community services during these hard times while continuing to plot a fiscally conservative course for the city.

His interest in seeking ways to diversify the Midland industrial base and in selling the "Midland story" to other communities and groups promises to give a young, fresh image of the city to prospective businesses or visitors.

Thomas, who served on the City Council from 1975 until 1983, also holds conservative fiscal views and ably represented the city during his tenure on the council.

Ms. Harris's presence in the mayor's race and her longtime advocacy of civil rights introduced a consideration that should never be overlooked.

In the race for councilman of District 3, Connolly offers to voters of that district a style of representation he says will encourage the city to work closer with citizens' groups in attempting to reduce crime, alcohol and substance abuse. He speaks strongly of the need for the council to be more responsive to the citizens of Midland and the neighborhoods.

Connolly also indicates he would take a conservative fiscal approach to City Hall, noting the city's challenge in tough fiscal times is to manage and maintain city streets, staff and facilities.

Fish, formerly chairman of the Midland County Republican Party, is a native Midlander and an independent oil and gas producer who also says he would take a conservative fiscal approach to the city and who during his campaign has proposed a joint Midland-Odessa task force to facilitate rotation of undercover narcotics officers. That's a good idea that should be explored, regardless of the candidate elected.

The choices were difficult ones, but, again, we believe voters would best serve their interests by casting their ballots for Davidson for mayor and Connolly for District 3.

College candidates

Midland voters will be determining three positions on the Midland Junior College District Board of Trustees when they go to the polls next Saturday. Two of those positions are opposed.

In the race for Place 1, Al G. Langford, former president of the college, is running for the board and is opposed by Steven C. Kiser, a local attorney. In race for Place 3, incumbent board member John W. Cooper is being challenged by Hugh G. White, a local consulting geologist. The third position, Place 2, is being sought by longtime trustee Fred Wright, who is not opposed.

The Reporter-Telegram has interviewed all the opposed candidates and carefully weighed the various qualities each would bring to their respective positions. We recommend voters cast their ballots for Kiser and Cooper.

Kiser promises to bring to the college board new leadership and a new perspective intended to keep Midland College one of the premiere junior colleges in the nation. During these difficult economic times locally, it will be important to not only keep the college operating on a sound fiscal basis but also to continue to look for ways in which Midland College can best serve the interests of all the community's residents.

Kiser says he is committed to the community college concept and we believe he will work harmoniously with the entire board and President Dr. Jess Parrish, to represent those interests.

Dr. Langford's interest in serving on the board is well-intentioned. As the president of Midland College at the time it was founded, and in fund-raising efforts since that time, he has done an outstanding and laudable job. We are second to none in our respect of him and in our admiration for his contributions to Midland College and this city. But we believe his presence on the board could, even though unintentional, open the door to conflict that would not be in the best interests of the institution.

In the race for Place 3, Cooper's seven years of experience on the board makes him a valuable asset. A life underwriter, Cooper argues sensibly that his expertise in financial matters will continue to help him with the college's budgeting responsibilities in these difficult economic times.

Cooper, a black, also offers the opinion that his presence on the board may attract other members of the minority communities to support and participate in Midland College activities.

White's interest in seeking the seat on the board was to stay involved in some way in the field of education. He holds the masters degree in education and his assertion that involvement in education is vital is a belief each of us would benefit from emulating.

Again, we encourage voters to cast their ballots for Cooper and Kiser, and to support Midland College enthusiastically.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

Five years ago, on March 30, 1981, President Reagan was shot and wounded by John W. Hinckley Jr. outside the Washington Hilton Hotel. White House News Secretary James S. Brady, a Secret Service agent and a District of Columbia police officer also were wounded in the attack.

On this date:

In 1822, Florida became a U.S. territory.

In 1842, Dr. Crawford W. Long of Jefferson, Ga., first used ether as an anesthetic during a minor operation.

In 1858, Hyman L. Lipman of Philadelphia patented a pencil with an attached eraser.

In 1867, U.S. Secretary of State William Seward reached agreement with Russia to purchase the territory of Alaska for $7.2 million. The deal was roundly ridiculed in the United States as "Seward's Folly."

In 1870, the 15th Amendment to the Constitution, giving black men the right to vote, was declared in effect.

Also in 1870, Texas was readmitted into the Union.

In 1909, the Queensboro Bridge opened, linking the New York City boroughs of Manhattan and Queens.

In 1945, the Soviet Union invaded Austria during World War II.

In 1964, John Glenn withdrew from the Ohio race for U.S. Senate because of injuries he suffered in a fall.

In 1973, Ellsworth Bunker resigned as U.S. ambassador to South Vietnam, and was succeeded by Graham A. Martin.

GEORGE F. WILL

Now's no time for national weight-loss

WASHINGTON — Since Vietnam, some Americans have been telling this diet-conscious nation that the United States has more political and military weight than is good for it or the world, and that it should shed some lest it be tempted to throw its weight around. But last week was a time for second thoughts about national weight-loss. Weight can come in handy.

George F. Will

Some people supposedly sensitive to Arab sensibilities portray Arabs as crazed. They say Khadafy's status will be enhanced in the Arab world. That assumes Arabs can not recognize a fiasco. Besides, "the Arab world" is a geographical, not a political, expression. That world is rivven by mutual detestations more powerful than sympathy for the "martyrdom" of Khadafy, which consists in his getting his young men killed pointlessly.

The Libyan regime, like the Cuban and Nicaraguan regimes, derives its dynamism from the charisma of a dictator who depends on bravado, which depends in turn on U.S. hesitancy. Episodes like last week's in the Gulf of Sidra usefully demonstrate that such leaders swagger at our sufferance, which has limits.

What is limitless is the faith of some Americans in the power of talk to tame aggressors. Rep. Michael Barnes (D-Md.) is a conscientious communicant in the Church of Negotiations. Last week the planes were barely back on their carriers before Barnes declared they should not have taken off: "There are probably ways that we could have worked with other nations to establish the principles of freedom of the seas and access to international waters without endangering our military forces and without any loss of life."

Such multilateralism is isolationism that dares not speak its name. And the suggestion that U.S. force was used unnecessarily is a form of blaming America first.

Sen. Chris Dodd (D-Conn.), asked about the President's decision to respond to the Sandinista incursion into Honduras by sending $20 million to Honduras, said: The Sandinista attack demonstrates the folly of the policy of aiding the contras.

Now. There is a logic-chopping point here: If there were no contras, there would be no contra bases for the Sandinistas to attack. But even if there were no contras based across the border, there would still be that border, and the Sandinistas dare to speak their attitude toward borders.

On Jan. 30, 1942, in Berlin's Sportpalast, Hitler vowed "the complete annihilation of the Jews." Learned diplomats wondered: "What is he trying to say?" Trying? He was saying it, and not for the first time. Allied governments went on insisting there was "no substantial evidence" of genocide. When will the democracies learn that the reiterated vows of totalitarians is substantial evidence of intentions? When the Sandinistas say they are conducting a "revolution without borders," they are saying — "trying" to say? — that they so despise U.S. resolve they do not bother to disguise their intention to run roughshod over their neighbors.

With the essentially party-line vote in the House against contra aid, the Democratic Party is again driving lickety-split into the cul de sac it found itself in two years ago in the New York primary. Then, Hart and Mondale competed to see who could pledge to withdraw U.S. forces from, or keep U.S. forces out of, more places. Hart won that contest by a whisker because Mondale said he would permit two-dozen U.S. advisors in Honduras.

When the House decided by just 12 votes against contra aid, some votes probably were lost because Pat Buchanan of the White House wrote a column for the Washington Post. He said the vote required representatives to side with the President or Nicaragua's dictator, Ortega. This infelicity occasioned much outcry about "McCarthyism" and "questioning of patriotism." Men are dying and decisions about their fate are being influenced by pique about a newspaper column.

On the CBS Morning News, March 26, Phil Jones, CBS's respected Capitol Hill correspondent, was asked about the Sandinista incursion. Jones said: "He (Ortega) has done something that certainly has hurt his case in the U.S. Congress." Imagine the uproar that would result were Buchanan to say that Congress has been voting for or against "Ortega's case."

President recalls moments of reverence

WASHINGTON — Like most Americans, President Reagan is a Christian who gives Easter Sunday special importance. Recently, in a reflective mood, he recalled four special moments of reverence he had experienced as president.

Jack Anderson

Though an intermittent churchgoer at best, Reagan seemed to experience a deep new conversion after his near-miraculous escape from John Hinckley's assassination attempt barely two months after Reagan's inauguration. This experience was similar to that of his mother, Nelle, who had a brush with death and vowed to "serve the Lord" in gratitude for her survival. It was Reagan's mother who enrolled him in the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ), a denomination founded in the last century that still numbers only about 800,000 members.

Reagan considers his survival of the would-be assassin's bullet a result of divine intervention, and he was imbued with a new religious purpose that was, for the most part, undetected in his earlier career.

Interestingly, though, the soul-searching experience of an assassin's near-miss did not figure in the president's response to a question we asked him recently: "In your five years as president, can you think of a couple of moments that have been moments of profound reverence for you?"

Reagan reflected briefly, and then noted the December crash of a plane bearing members of the 101st Airborne Division in Newfoundland as they were coming home for Christmas from peacekeeping duties in the Middle East. The president was clearly moved as he recalled flying to Fort Campbell, Ky., and meeting there "with the families of all those 287 men who died."

Reagan's second reference was to the explosion of the space shuttle Challenger that killed seven astronauts.

"This most recent tragedy," Reagan said with obvious emotion, "to see the people of our country — and God bless them, I worship them, I think they're the greatest...

"I phoned (the astronauts' relatives) before (I met) with them. In the midst of all their grief, every one of them concluded the conversation by saying: 'You must continue this program.' Now, you know, you could have excused them if there was a little bitterness, if they said, 'Well, was it worth it?' Not one note of that. Everything was: 'This is what they would want, and it was all worthwhile. Continue the program.'"

The president's third recollection was the 40th anniversary of D-Day on June 6, 1984. He spoke first at Pointe du Hoc, Normandy, where 135 of 225 U.S. Rangers were killed scaling the sheer cliffs on the western end of Omaha Beach in the face of murderous German fire. Among the many Americans Reagan addressed there that day were 30 survivors of the seemingly impossible mission. He noted that the young men who carried out that attack had "faith that they fought for all humanity."

The president told us: "I shall never forget that experience, looking out at the group of men — very mature men, approaching elderly. They were the survivors of the youngsters (who) went up those cliffs there from the beach and fought their way to the top. There were fewer than half (who survived). The rest were lost in the attack. And to see how moved they were...."

The president's fourth recollection was prompted by White House Chief of Staff Donald Regan, who recalled the "hush and silence" of the president's visit to the Bergen-Belsen concentration camp in West Germany last May 5. Regan, a World War II Marine veteran, said, "I know (it) affected you almost in a religious experience."

The concentration camp visit occurred on the same day that Reagan made his controversial appearance at the Bitburg Cemetery, where several veterans of Hitler's infamous SS troops lie buried. Among the 60,000 Jews and others who perished at Bergen-Belsen before its liberation by Allied soldiers in 1945 was Anne Frank, the Dutch girl whose diary made the Holocaust real for millions of readers.

At Regan's mention of the concentration camp experience, the president said: "Oh my, yes! To go in there — and the thing for those people who were so harsh about that whole (Bitburg) visit, to see that this Germany of today is not trying to cover up. You can figure where a lot of countries, maybe even our own, would have bulldozed these things down and said, 'This didn't' — you know, 'Let's forget that ever happened.' No. They've said, 'Let's never forget it happened.' So there it is.

"And you go into the building and there are the blown-up photographs of the worst of the horrors for you to see. And every year they (the Germans) bring their schoolchildren there to see this. And then to go out and see those mounds as far as you can see, and know that in every one of them it is a grave for thousands of these people who were killed there — oh, that is, that's really an experience."

The president expressed his firm belief that out of such horrors has come good. He recalled a final speech he made on his German visit, at the 700-year-old Hambach Castle. The young people he addressed were so enthusiastic they interrupted him 40 times with applause.

"The last day, before we left, we went to this castle that is very noted and has quite a history and so forth," he said. "And there were 10,000 German teenagers there."

Symbolic gestures making U.S. look foolish

PARIS — Americans may feel gratified to see the professional bully Moammar Khadafy get a punch in the nose. But beyond self-satisfaction, it is hard to see how the U.S. Navy's operations against Libya can have served any American interest.

Flora Lewis

When President Reagan ordered economic sanctions against Libya on Jan. 7, he said, "If these steps do not end Khadafy's terrorism, I promise you that further steps will be taken."

Now he has done something, but there is no reason to think it will have any effect on terrorists, unless to drive them to more ingenious frenzy. The operation did give Khadafy a chance to present himself as a hero targeted by the superpower that supports Israel, and even his Arab enemies find it hard to denounce him in the circumstances.

And it provided Moscow with some dramatic propaganda material for Third World consumption. Fortunately, no Russians seem to have been casualties in the attacks on the missile base at Sidra. Soviet experts had been there training the Libyans to use the new SA-5s, but apparently they had left. Soviet sources said the Libyan missiles would not have misfired and missed the U.S. planes if their own people had been operating them.

So there isn't likely to be any escalation of East-West tensions as a result. Moscow clearly has ambiguous feelings about Khadafy. It provides him with huge supplies of arms, reportedly $15 billion worth in the last 20 years, and there are said to be some 3,500 Soviet and East Bloc technicians working in Libya.

But Moscow rejected the colonel's request for a treaty of friendship and cooperation last year, and it has avoided any firm commitment to come to his aid.

Still, the U.S. action looked like part of a pattern to dramatize Washington's hostility to Moscow and some of its dependents in recent days. There was the dispatch of U.S. warships just off the Soviet Black Sea coast, a showing of the flag that has happened repeatedly but not so provocatively close to shore in the past.

There was the order for sharp reduction of Soviet staff at the United Nations. There was the flatly disdainful response to Mikhail Gorbachev's offer to stop nuclear testing and to negotiate full "rigid" measures to verify compliance. And there has been the near-hysterical argument about the urgency of sending military aid to the Nicaraguan "contras," though scarcely anyone supposes the $100 million Reagan seeks will achieve anything more than to continue hostilities.

Separate reasons have been given for each of these decisions. Taken together, in a matter of weeks, they appear as if Reagan felt a need to apologize to his right-wing supporters for having said conciliatory things to Gorbachev in Geneva last November, and to reassure them that denouncing dictatorships on the right doesn't mean he has gone soft on the left.

The timing, the arbitrariness and the intensity of these moves do not appear to have much relevance to real foreign policy objectives. They look as though White House staff members had gone through a checklist of low-risk but high-visibility gestures rather than considering the best ways to approach a series of difficult problems.

If there had been a well-considered attempt to put pressure on Khadafy, the economic sanctions would not have been applied so half-heartedly with such feeble enforcement. There are five U.S. oil companies operating in Libya, of which Occidental is the bellwether. The others more or less follow the line taken by its chief, Armand Hammer, who has long had a special relation with the Kremlin.

This assortment of essentially symbolic moves, which cannot produce concrete results beyond a certain euphoria in parts of the American public, is making the U.S. look foolish and uncertain about its means and ends in the rest of the world. True, it is frustrating to be defied without doing something. But a sounder policy guide would be: Don't just do something, think first.

Concern part of message

Bill Modisett

As I walked down the stairs and stepped onto the sidewalk of the newspaper office, the man turned and called to me.

"Do you work here?" he asked.

"Oh no," I thought. "Wonder what this guy's complaint is?"

He began talking and willingly, I listened. He talked about prejudice, about the importance of having a job, about his attempt to get a job. And I listened because this middle-aged black man was telling a story that was important to hear.

"I could go to a church," he said, "and they'd help me." He told the brief story of a man he knew in similar straits who had been getting food and shelter from a local church. "But I don't want to ask anybody to do that," he continued. "I just want a job...where I can work, earn my money. Then I can go to the grocery store, like you do, and buy what I want to eat.

"I'm hungry, man, hungry. Or I could get arrested and go to jail. But I don't want to do that. I just want a job."

When he paused, I talked with him and offered a couple of suggestions I honestly hoped would help. I don't know why but I trusted him. It could have been the honest look in his eyes or his proud nature. But I wanted to help him if I could.

He asked for a little money, not in a threatening or demanding way. I could tell it hurt him to do it. But I was carrying no money. He said he understood.

As I left, I wished him luck. It seemed such a feeble gesture. He said, "Bye."

My wife stopped and I climbed into the car. As we started home I told her the man's story. She said, "I know some people who might be able to give him a job."

I hurried back to the paper and drove up and down the surrounding streets looking for any sign of this man. I didn't find him. My God, I thought, the injustice of life is overwhelming. Here is a man, obviously a good man, who only wants the opportunity to work and earn a living to provide himself the basic essentials of life. Yet he can't. Can anything be more unjust, more unfair?

It's an old story. Today is Easter and throughout this land millions of people will gather in churches to celebrate the resurrection of Jesus Christ and His promise of everlasting life.

Yet the injustices of this world that existed when Jesus walked the earth linger still. This world is full of hatred and injustice.

Some injustice is blatant; some is unintentional. I wasn't able to help this man, but I did listen to his concerns and shared his frustration. That isn't enough by any stretch of the imagination.

But concern for one's fellow man is a good starting point. Solving the problems of this world won't be easy or even always possible, but not closing one's eyes to another's problems is a beginning. And with each new beginning, there is a rebirth of hope.

That's the message of Easter.

Midland burglaries probably drug related

Are your doors locked? I'm locking mine because burglaries in Midland are up.

In 1981 there were 1,270 burglaries here, but in 1985, there were 2,531... a whopping 99 percent increase, whereas the population only increased 20 percent for the same period. The Midland Police Department tells us that our burglaries are 80 to 90 percent drug-related, so no wonder.

In the early 1980's, the Federal Drug Enforcement Agency started cracking down on drug trafficking in southeast Florida. That effort squeezed the traffic our way to the point that our law enforcement agencies conservatively estimate that over 100 planes a night illegally cross our border with drugs. West Texas is becoming known as the "drug drop" of the nation...a dubious distinction that was once Florida's. What's more, a TV series called "Houston Nights" is currently being filmed. It is a takeoff on "Miami —Vice." All this gives me some sort of a clue as to what is behind Midland's rising crime rate.

Texas political candidates are picking up on drug traffic and the related crime as major issues. Gubernatorial candidates Loeffler and Clements are citing a need for more prisons since "early parole" isn't doing the job of reducing crime. Congressional candidate Lamar Smith has declared "war on drugs" in his campaign. But what are our local candidates doing to combat Midland's rising crime rates? In a move to save money, they recently put a spending freeze on all city expenses, including the police department. The MPD can use new equipment, etcetera, so freezing their budget is false economy, I'm sorry to say.

Just look at what crime costs Midland. Alarms, locks, and security guards cost money, and insurance rates are going through the roof, to say nothing of your time lost while trying to establish ID to write a check. Our police are doing a good job recovering stolen items...last year our police recovered $2,392,497 worth of loot but this only amounts to approximately 10 percent of the total that is stolen. Add all this up and you arrive at a staggering figure. Crime is costing Midland tens of millions of dollars a year...each and every year.

So let's get going, Midland. Get involved! Set up Neighborhood Watch groups in your area and keep an eye out for one another, report suspicious activities, lock up your cars and houses, and tell your city government to put crime fighting at the top of their priority list.

Poisoning of family pet creates concern

On March 16th my dog was accidentally let out of the backyard by two little boys. Whenever he manages to escape, the route he takes is always the same — south in the alley between Upton and Tarleton to Story Street, then across the park at Cuthbert, then north in the alley between Alpine and Tarleton, then across the street to home.

By following this route, we have always been able to find him; this time was no different. My wife found him at the alley entrance between Alpine and Tarleton as it opened onto Bedford; she put him in the car and everything was fine.

Within a short time, my wife and neighbor rushed the dog to a veterinary clinic where he was diagnosed as having ingested strychnine. Luckily our dog was treated in time and will live. But what about the next animal or possibly child, since this area is near two schools. And what about the person that put the strychnine out — what was their reason for it? It is a very frightening thought, especially when it happens in your neighborhood.

The route my dog takes was walked twice. We looked for anything unusual; of course, nothing was found. Since our dog is a very picky eater we knew he would not have eaten a pigeon, but he might have played with it. No dead pigeons, feathers or other animals were found. We have been told the city uses strychnine to rid the downtown area of pigeons; the poisoned birds then many times fly to residential areas before they die. They become fair game to animals and children. We were also told the pigeon droppings contain the strychnine as well.

Since no dead birds or feathers were found, we can only feel the strychnine was put out somewhere within our neighborhood by a person for some unknown reason. Should your pet be poisoned, please notify the police department and the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. This is a legal crime and must be stopped.

Outstanding Teacher designation of pride

I would like to thank the Chamber of Commerce for recognizing me as the first Outstanding Teacher in Midland. This is a wonderful distinction, and one of which I will always be very proud. The Chamber of Commerce is doing an excellent job of restoring the well-deserved dignity to the classroom teacher.

Midland Independent School District has some very exceptional talents among its various faculties. I feel I am only a representative of the quality teachers in our district. I know that my son's educational experiences in Midland have been extremely positive. The faculty with which I work at Rusk Elementary is sensational, as is the support staff from the central office.

I sincerely hope that the parents in Midland will continue to look for the outstanding qualities that their children's teachers possess. It takes true dedication to be a teacher during these trying times of school reform. I would like to encourage parents to contact the Chamber of Commerce about the unique ways in which their children's teachers have been outstanding.

Teacher's mistakes makes reader think

I have never felt our schoolteachers should have been required to take the TECAT test, but the letter from Mary Davis published in Sunday's newspaper probably proves me wrong.

Her letter vividly compared the "peaceful" submission of teachers to TECAT first with the manner in which Jews went to the gas chambers in Auschwitz, Germany, and then to the manner in which the followers of Rev. Jones drank poison in Jonestown, Africa.

What, you might ask, is amiss in this emotion-laced comparison? Auschwitz is in Poland, not Germany, and Jonestown is in South America, not Africa.

I sincerely hope Mary Davis does not teach World Geography.

We may lose private, home schooling rights

We're in grave danger of losing our private non-state funded schools and our home schooling within our state. This can be credited to Commissioner of Education W.N. Kirby and his proposed amendment to the compulsory attendance law.

The law now states that the only requirement of private schools is that it include in its course a study of good citizenship. This is how it has been since 1923. Our state truancy laws were never meant to be inflicted upon those enrolled in private or home education. This is proven in our Texas Education Code, as it states that our State Board of Education (SBOE) is set up to "Exercise general control of the system of public education at the state level" (TEC 11.02), and that "This code shall apply to all educational institutions supported either wholly or in part by state tax funds" (TEC 1.04.a). This allows no doubt as to the jurisdiction of our SBOE and Commissioner of Education. It does not, and should not govern non-state funded schooling. There are those who would wish to regulate all schools in a manner as to label students truant if not receiving an education parallel to public school, despite the evaluation scores of the rapid growing private school sector.

Try to picture this: General Motors believes it to be in the best interest of the public to place functioning guidelines over Ford Motor Company, defining its times of production, employee qualifications, materials to be used, etc. If Ford should fail to meet their criteria, they are said to not be an automobile manufacturer. It matters not that Ford's products speak for themselves. It's not hard to see that General Motors would be self-serving, rather than truly protecting the needs of others. This is what is happening in Austin. Private education is our only barrier to a total monopoly of public education.

This issue requires our urgent and immediate response to our State Board Members, Commissioner Kirby, and legislators.

Naval confrontation won't change Khadafy's focus

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

Hearst

NEW YORK — When our Sixth Fleet cruised in international waters off Libya I must admit that I was a little doubtful about baiting the unstable dictator Moammar Khadafy who sure enough fired at our ships. We returned the fire and in the resulting two-day fracas, before the Sixth Fleet concluded its exercises and withdrew, our Navy sank several Libyan patrol boats and destroyed one of Libya's missile sites. But this by no means will change Khadafy's determination as the godfather of international terrorism to try and exact his homicidal revenge all over the world against our people and installations.

Closer to home, President Reagan rushed $20 million in military aid and airlifted friendly forces near a fighting zone where Sandinista communist troops had invaded the country on the pretext of pursuing contra rebels.

On these far-flung fronts half a world apart, both events were responses by the president to pop-gun dictators. In Libya, Khadafy had baited Washington for years with major support and funds for terrorist activities throughout the free world while in Nicaragua, Daniel Ortega took every opportunity to crush freedom fighting Contras in Nicaragua and neighboring Honduras. Both are beneficiaries of Soviet arms and support.

On Tuesday, "USA Today" in a random poll across the nation reported that 67 percent of those questioned backed President Reagan's action against Libya. The paper reported that the retaliation was done with full knowledge of the fact that all polled realize American citizens around the world will be the object of increased Libyan terrorism.

In the Congress there was near unanimity in the Senate and the House supporting the Commander-in-Chief and the action taken by our Sixth Fleet. That includes Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill, a long-time critic of the president, who endorsed President Reagan's stand unqualifiedly, and assailed Khadafy as "a nut case."

The New York Times reported that Khadafy hosted a group of international terrorists about two weeks ago at a very motley convention of supposed revolutionary organizations. The groups heard Louis Farrakhan, the American Black Moslem leader, representatives from a wing of the IRA, the renagade PLO faction led by Abu Nidal — charged with terrorist attacks on the Rome and Vienna airports last December — plus Syrian-backed and other assorted terrorist groups.

In the course of a long sulphurous speech, mainly attacking America, Khadafy reportedly said: "Libya stands firm and declares before the world that parallel 32.30 which marks the beginning of the Gulf of Sidra is a line of death and despite all air and naval attempts during recent months the U.S. has been unable to come near the line because it knows it is the line of death."

Khadafy now knows the meaning of, as President Reagan said, "You can run, but you can't hide."

The Libyan dictator should remember that in view of a statement he made during a press conference to "pursue U.S. citizens in their country and streets."

Secretary of State George Shultz, reacting to Khadayf's statement, said "Khadafy is his own smoking gun."

On the other side of the world, the Sandinista communist troops obviously got out of hand in pushing across into Honduran territory.

The Sandinistas had received indirect support from our House of Representatives a week earlier when it rejected President Reagan's request for $100 million in aid to the Contras. On Thursday, the Senate passed a bill that would aid the Contras, and it now goes back to the House of Representatives.

The border incursion by the Sandinista communists in southern Honduras really boosted the cause of the Contras. The obvious efforts of the Sandinista regime to wipe out any opposition shows that it has reached a point of no tolerance for any opposition whether vocal, written or otherwise.

President Reagan approved an "urgent" Honduran request for $20 million in military equipment, services and training. He also dispatched Gen. John Galvin, commander-in-chief of the Panama-based U.S. Southern Command to assess the situation and provide up to date intelligence. Our forces have used Honduran territory for combined exercises and have some small bases there.

Many Congressmen who voted against the president last week favor his help to Honduras as well as endorse the moves of our Sixth Fleet. One Reagan critic said: "I've never met Ortega. I think he's a bumbling, incompetent Marxist, Leninist, Communist."

Who said that?

Well, that was House Speaker Tip O'Neill, who led the fight against aid to the Contras and is having second thoughts today.

City decisions

Voters in Midland will go the polls Saturday to elect a new mayor and two City Council representatives, with one of those council positions being unopposed.

In the mayor's race, incumbent Councilman Steve Davidson is being opposed in his bid for the city's top spot by former Councilman Carroll M. Thomas and political newcomer Barbara Harris. The race for the District 3 seat on the council is between newcomers Kelly Fish and Lawrence Connolly, while the other council position, District 4, is only being sought by former County Attorney Robert Rendall.

After meetings with candidates in the contested races and a careful examination of both the qualifications offered by those individuals and the issues in the respective races, the Reporter-Telegram believes voters should cast their ballots for Davidson and Connolly in the opposed races.

As a member of the City Council since 1980, Davidson offers to city voters both experience and enthusiasm that could prove instrumental in helping pull the community's spirit through the tough times now being encountered because of falling oil prices. Davidson speaks openly of the need to ensure delivery of vital community services during these hard times while continuing to plot a fiscally conservative course for the city.

His interest in seeking ways to diversify the Midland industrial base and in selling the "Midland story" to other communities and groups promises to give a young, fresh image of the city to prospective businesses or visitors.

Thomas, who served on the City Council from 1975 until 1983, also holds conservative fiscal views and ably represented the city during his tenure on the council.

Ms. Harris's presence in the mayor's race and her longtime advocacy of civil rights introduced a consideration that should never be overlooked.

In the race for councilman of District 3, Connolly offers to voters of that district a style of representation he says will encourage the city to work closer with citizens' groups in attempting to reduce crime, alcohol and substance abuse. He speaks strongly of the need for the council to be more responsive to the citizens of Midland and the neighborhoods.

Connolly also indicates he would take a conservative fiscal approach to City Hall, noting the city's challenge in tough fiscal times is to manage and maintain city streets, staff and facilities.

Fish, formerly chairman of the Midland County Republican Party, is a native Midlander and an independent oil and gas producer who also says he would take a conservative fiscal approach to the city and who during his campaign has proposed a joint Midland-Odessa task force to facilitate rotation of undercover narcotics officers. That's a good idea that should be explored, regardless of the candidate elected.

The choices were difficult ones, but, again, we believe voters would best serve their interests by casting their ballots for Davidson for mayor and Connolly for District 3.

College candidates

Midland voters will be determining three positions on the Midland Junior College District Board of Trustees when they go to the polls next Saturday. Two of those positions are opposed.

In the race for Place 1, Al G. Langford, former president of the college, is running for the board and is opposed by Steven C. Kiser, a local attorney. In race for Place 3, incumbent board member John W. Cooper is being challenged by Hugh G. White, a local consulting geologist. The third position, Place 2, is being sought by longtime trustee Fred Wright, who is not opposed.

The Reporter-Telegram has interviewed all the opposed candidates and carefully weighed the various qualities each would bring to their respective positions. We recommend voters cast their ballots for Kiser and Cooper.

Kiser promises to bring to the college board new leadership and a new perspective intended to keep Midland College one of the premiere junior colleges in the nation. During these difficult economic times locally, it will be important to not only keep the college operating on a sound fiscal basis but also to continue to look for ways in which Midland College can best serve the interests of all the community's residents.

Kiser says he is committed to the community college concept and we believe he will work harmoniously with the entire board and President Dr. Jess Parrish, to represent those interests.

Dr. Langford's interest in serving on the board is well-intentioned. As the president of Midland College at the time it was founded, and in fund-raising efforts since that time, he has done an outstanding and laudable job. We are second to none in our respect of him and in our admiration for his contributions to Midland College and this city. But we believe his presence on the board could, even though unintentional, open the door to conflict that would not be in the best interests of the institution.

In the race for Place 3, Cooper's seven years of experience on the board makes him a valuable asset. A life underwriter, Cooper argues sensibly that his expertise in financial matters will continue to help him with the college's budgeting responsibilities in these difficult economic times.

Cooper, a black, also offers the opinion that his presence on the board may attract other members of the minority communities to support and participate in Midland College activities.

White's interest in seeking the seat on the board was to stay involved in some way in the field of education. He holds the masters degree in education and his assertion that involvement in education is vital is a belief each of us would benefit from emulating.

Again, we encourage voters to cast their ballots for Cooper and Kiser, and to support Midland College enthusiastically.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

Five years ago, on March 30, 1981, President Reagan was shot and wounded by John W. Hinckley Jr. outside the Washington Hilton Hotel. White House News Secretary James S. Brady, a Secret Service agent and a District of Columbia police officer also were wounded in the attack.

On this date:

In 1822, Florida became a U.S. territory.

In 1842, Dr. Crawford W. Long of Jefferson, Ga., first used ether as an anesthetic during a minor operation.

In 1858, Hyman L. Lipman of Philadelphia patented a pencil with an attached eraser.

In 1867, U.S. Secretary of State William Seward reached agreement with Russia to purchase the territory of Alaska for $7.2 million. The deal was roundly ridiculed in the United States as "Seward's Folly."

In 1870, the 15th Amendment to the Constitution, giving black men the right to vote, was declared in effect.

Also in 1870, Texas was readmitted into the Union.

In 1909, the Queensboro Bridge opened, linking the New York City boroughs of Manhattan and Queens.

In 1945, the Soviet Union invaded Austria during World War II.

In 1964, John Glenn withdrew from the Ohio race for U.S. Senate because of injuries he suffered in a fall.

In 1973, Ellsworth Bunker resigned as U.S. ambassador to South Vietnam, and was succeeded by Graham A. Martin.

Now's no time for national weight-loss

WASHINGTON — Since Vietnam, some Americans have been telling this diet-conscious nation that the United States has more political and military weight than is good for it or the world, and that it should shed some lest it be tempted to throw its weight around. But last week was a time for second thoughts about national weight-loss. Weight can come in handy.

George F. Will

Some people supposedly sensitive to Arab sensibilities portray Arabs as crazed. They say Khadafy's status will be enhanced in the Arab world. That assumes Arabs can not recognize a fiasco. Besides, "the Arab world" is a geographical, not a political, expression. That world is rivven by mutual detestations more powerful than sympathy for the "martyrdom" of Khadafy, which consists in his getting his young men killed pointlessly.

The Libyan regime, like the Cuban and Nicaraguan regimes, derives its dynamism from the charisma of a dictator who depends on bravado, which depends in turn on U.S. hesitancy. Episodes like last week's in the Gulf of Sidra usefully demonstrate that such leaders swagger at our sufferance, which has limits.

What is limitless is the faith of some Americans in the power of talk to tame aggressors. Rep. Michael Barnes (D-Md.) is a conscientious communicant in the Church of Negotiations. Last week the planes were barely back on their carriers before Barnes declared they should not have taken off: "There are probably ways that we could have worked with other nations to establish the principles of freedom of the seas and access to international waters without endangering our military forces and without any loss of life."

Such multilateralism is isolationism that dares not speak its name. And the suggestion that U.S. force was used unnecessarily is a form of blaming America first.

Sen. Chris Dodd (D-Conn.), asked about the President's decision to respond to the Sandinista incursion into Honduras by sending $20 million to Honduras, said: The Sandinista attack demonstrates the folly of the policy of aiding the contras.

Now. There is a logic-chopping point here: If there were no contras, there would be no contra bases for the Sandinistas to attack. But even if there were no contras based across the border, there would still be that border, and the Sandinistas dare to speak their attitude toward borders.

On Jan. 30, 1942, in Berlin's Sportpalast, Hitler vowed "the complete annihilation of the Jews." Learned diplomats wondered: "What is he trying to say?" Trying? He was saying it, and not for the first time. Allied governments went on insisting there was "no substantial evidence" of genocide. When will the democracies learn that the reiterated vows of totalitarians is substantial evidence of intentions? When the Sandinistas say they are conducting a "revolution without borders," they are saying — "trying" to say? — that they so despise U.S. resolve they do not bother to disguise their intention to run roughshod over their neighbors.

With the essentially party-line vote in the House against contra aid, the Democratic Party is again driving lickety-split into the cul de sac it found itself in two years ago in the New York primary. Then, Hart and Mondale competed to see who could pledge to withdraw U.S. forces from, or keep U.S. forces out of, more places. Hart won that contest by a whisker because Mondale said he would permit two-dozen U.S. advisors in Honduras.

When the House decided by just 12 votes against contra aid, some votes probably were lost because Pat Buchanan of the White House wrote a column for the Washington Post. He said the vote required representatives to side with the President or Nicaragua's dictator, Ortega. This infelicity occasioned much outcry about "McCarthyism" and "questioning of patriotism." Men are dying and decisions about their fate are being influenced by pique about a newspaper column.

On the CBS Morning News, March 26, Phil Jones, CBS's respected Capitol Hill correspondent, was asked about the Sandinista incursion. Jones said: "He (Ortega) has done something that certainly has hurt his case in the U.S. Congress." Imagine the uproar that would result were Buchanan to say that Congress has been voting for or against "Ortega's case."

President recalls moments of reverence

WASHINGTON — Like most Americans, President Reagan is a Christian who gives Easter Sunday special importance. Recently, in a reflective mood, he recalled four special moments of reverence he had experienced as president.

Jack Anderson

Though an intermittent churchgoer at best, Reagan seemed to experience a deep new conversion after his near-miraculous escape from John Hinckley's assassination attempt barely two months after Reagan's inauguration. This experience was similar to that of his mother, Nelle, who had a brush with death and vowed to "serve the Lord" in gratitude for her survival. It was Reagan's mother who enrolled him in the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ), a denomination founded in the last century that still numbers only about 800,000 members.

Reagan considers his survival of the would-be assassin's bullet a result of divine intervention, and he was imbued with a new religious purpose that was, for the most part, undetected in his earlier career.

Interestingly, though, the soul-searching experience of an assassin's near-miss did not figure in the president's response to a question we asked him recently: "In your five years as president, can you think of a couple of moments that have been moments of profound reverence for you?"

Reagan reflected briefly, and then noted the December crash of a plane bearing members of the 101st Airborne Division in Newfoundland as they were coming home for Christmas from peacekeeping duties in the Middle East. The president was clearly moved as he recalled flying to Fort Campbell, Ky., and meeting there "with the families of all those 267 men who died."

Reagan's second reference was to the explosion of the space shuttle Challenger that killed seven astronauts.

"This most recent tragedy," Reagan said with obvious emotion, "to see the people of our country — and God bless them, I worship them, I think they're the greatest...

"I phoned (the astronauts' relatives) before (I met) with them. In the midst of all their grief, every one of them concluded the conversation by saying: 'You must continue this program.' Now, you know, you could have excused them if there was a little bitterness, if they said, 'Well, was it worth it?' Not one note of that. Everything was: 'This is what they would want, and it was all worthwhile. Continue the program.'"

The president's third recollection was the 40th anniversary of D-Day on June 6, 1984. He spoke first at Pointe du Hoc, Normandy, where 135 of 225 U.S. Rangers were killed scaling the sheer cliffs on the western end of Omaha Beach in the face of murderous German fire. Among the many Americans Reagan addressed there that day were 30 survivors of the seemingly impossible mission. He noted that the young men who carried out that attack had "faith that they fought for all humanity."

The president told us: "I shall never forget that experience, looking out at the group of men — very mature men, approaching elderly. They were the survivors of the youngsters (who) went up those cliffs there from the beach and fought their way to the top. There were fewer than half (who survived). The rest were lost in the attack. And to see how moved they were...."

The president's fourth recollection was prompted by White House Chief of Staff Donald Regan, who recalled the "hush and silence" of the president's visit to the Bergen-Belsen concentration camp in West Germany last May 5. Regan, a World War II Marine veteran, said, "I know (it) affected you almost in a religious experience."

The concentration camp visit occurred on the same day that Reagan made his controversial appearance at the Bitburg Cemetery, where several veterans of Hitler's infamous SS troops lie buried. Among the 60,000 Jews and others who perished at Bergen-Belsen before its liberation by Allied soldiers in 1945 was Anne Frank, the Dutch girl whose diary made the Holocaust real for millions of readers.

At Regan's mention of the concentration camp experience, the president said: "Oh my, yes! To go in there — and the thing for those people who were so harsh about that whole (Bitburg) visit, to see that this Germany of today is not trying to cover up. You can figure where a lot of countries, maybe even our own, would have bulldozed these things down and said, 'This didn't' — you know, 'Let's forget that ever happened.' No. They've said, 'Let's never forget it happened.' So there it is.

"And you go into the building and there are the blown-up photographs of the worst of the horrors for you to see. And every year they (the Germans) bring their schoolchildren there to see this. And then to go out and see those mounds as far as you can see, and know that in every one of them it is a grave for thousands of these people who were killed there — oh, that is, that's really an experience."

The president expressed his firm belief that out of such horrors has come good. He recalled a final speech he made on his German visit, at the 700-year-old Hambach Castle. The young people he addressed were so enthusiastic they interrupted him 40 times with applause.

"The last day, before we left, we went to this castle that is very noted and has quite a history and so forth," he said. "And there were 10,000 German teenagers there."

Symbolic gestures making U.S. look foolish

PARIS — Americans may feel gratified to see the professional bully Moammar Khadafy get a punch in the nose. But beyond self-satisfaction, it is hard to see how the U.S. Navy's operations against Libya can have served any American interest.

Flora Lewis

When President Reagan ordered economic sanctions against Libya on Jan. 7, he said, "If these steps do not end Khadafy's terrorism, I promise you that further steps will be taken."

Now he has done something, but there is no reason to think it will have any effect on terrorists, unless to drive them to more ingenious frenzy. The operation did give Khadafy a chance to present himself as a hero targeted by the superpower that supports Israel, and even his Arab enemies find it hard to denounce him in the circumstances.

And it provided Moscow with some dramatic propaganda material for Third World consumption. Fortunately, no Russians seem to have been casualties in the attacks on the missile base at Sidra. Soviet experts had been there training the Libyans to use the new SA-5s, but apparently they had left. Soviet sources said the Libyan missiles would not have misfired and missed the U.S. planes if their own people had been operating them.

So there isn't likely to be any escalation of East-West tensions as a result. Moscow clearly has ambiguous feelings about Khadafy. It provides him with huge supplies of arms, reportedly $15 billion worth in the last 20 years, and there are said to be some 3,500 Soviet and East Bloc technicians working in Libya.

But Moscow rejected the colonel's request for a treaty of friendship and cooperation last year, and it has avoided any firm commitment to come to his aid.

Still, the U.S. action looked like part of a pattern to dramatize Washington's hostility to Moscow and some of its dependents in recent days. There was the dispatch of U.S. warships just off the Soviet Black Sea coast, a showing of the flag that has happened repeatedly but not so provocatively close to shore in the past.

There was the order for sharp reduction of Soviet staff at the United Nations. There was the flatly disdainful response to Mikhail Gorbachev's offer to stop nuclear testing and to negotiate full "rigid" measures to verify compliance. And there has been the near-hysterical argument about the urgency of sending military aid to the Nicaraguan "contras," though scarcely anyone supposes the $100 million Reagan seeks will achieve anything more than to continue hostilities.

Separate reasons have been given for each of these decisions. Taken together, in a matter of weeks, they appear as if Reagan felt a need to apologize to his right-wing supporters for having said conciliatory things to Gorbachev in Geneva last November, and to reassure them that denouncing dictatorships on the right doesn't mean he has gone soft on the left.

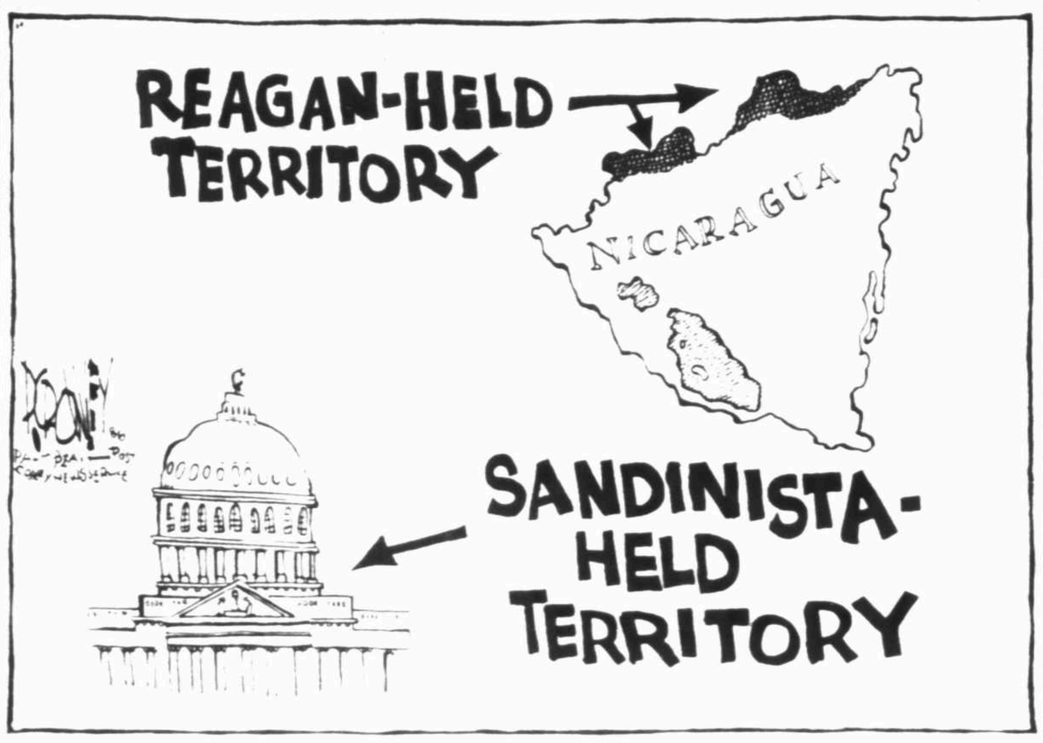

The timing, the arbitrariness and the intensity of these moves do not appear to have much relevance to real foreign policy objectives. They look as though White House staff members had gone through a checklist of low-risk but high-visibility gestures rather than considering the best ways to approach a series of difficult problems.

If there had been a well-considered attempt to put pressure on Khadafy, the economic sanctions would not have been applied so half-heartedly with such feeble enforcement. There are five U.S. oil companies operating in Libya, of which Occidental is the bellwether. The others more or less follow the line taken by its chief, Armand Hammer, who has long had a special relation with the Kremlin.

This assortment of essentially symbolic moves, which cannot produce concrete results beyond a certain euphoria in parts of the American public, is making the U.S. look foolish and uncertain about its means and ends in the rest of the world. True, it is frustrating to be defied without doing something. But a sounder policy guide would be: Don't just do something, think first.

Concern part of message

Bill Modisett

As I walked down the stairs and stepped onto the sidewalk of the newspaper office, the man turned and called to me.

"Do you work here?" he asked.

"Oh no," I thought. "Wonder what this guy's complaint is?"

He began talking and willingly, I listened. He talked about prejudice, about the importance of having a job, about his attempt to get a job. And I listened because this middle-aged black man was telling a story that was important to hear.

"I could go to a church," he said, "and they'd help me." He told the brief story of a man he knew in similar straits who had been getting food and shelter from a local church. "But I don't want to ask anybody to do that," he continued. "I just want a job...where I can work, earn my money. Then I can go to the grocery store, like you do, and buy what I want to eat.

"I'm hungry, man, hungry. Or I could get arrested and go to jail. But I don't want to do that. I just want a job."

When he paused, I talked with him and offered a couple of suggestions I honestly hoped would help. I don't know why but I trusted him. It could have been the honest look in his eyes or his proud nature. But I wanted to help him if I could.

He asked for a little money, not in a threatening or demanding way. I could tell it hurt him to do it. But I was carrying no money. He said he understood.

As I left, I wished him luck. It seemed such a feeble gesture. He said, "Bye."

My wife stopped and I climbed into the car. As we started home I told her the man's story. She said, "I know some people who might be able to give him a job."

I hurried back to the paper and drove up and down the surrounding streets looking for any sign of this man. I didn't find him. My God, I thought, the injustice of life is overwhelming. Here is a man, obviously a good man, who only wants the opportunity to work and earn a living to provide himself the basic essentials of life. Yet he can't. Can anything be more unjust, more unfair?

It's an old story. Today is Easter and throughout this land millions of people will gather in churches to celebrate the resurrection of Jesus Christ and His promise of everlasting life.

Yet the injustices of this world that existed when Jesus walked the earth linger still. This world is full of hatred and injustice.

Some injustice is blatant; some is unintentional. I wasn't able to help this man, but I did listen to his concerns and shared his frustration. That isn't enough by any stretch of the imagination.

But concern for one's fellow man is a good starting point. Solving the problems of this world won't be easy or even always possible, but not closing one's eyes to another's problems is a beginning. And with each new beginning, there is a rebirth of hope.

That's the message of Easter.

Midland burglaries probably drug related

Are your doors locked? I'm locking mine because burglaries in Midland are up.

In 1981 there were 1,270 burglaries here, but in 1985, there were 2,531... a whopping 99 percent increase, whereas the population only increased 20 percent for the same period. The Midland Police Department tells us that our burglaries are 80 to 90 percent drug-related, so no wonder.

In the early 1980's, the Federal Drug Enforcement Agency started cracking down on drug trafficking in southeast Florida. That effort squeezed the traffic our way to the point that our law enforcement agencies conservatively estimate that over 100 planes a night illegally cross our border with drugs. West Texas is becoming known as the "drug drop" of the nation...a dubious distinction that was once Florida's. What's more, a TV series called "Houston Nights" is currently being filmed. It is a takeoff on "Miami —Vice." All this gives me some sort of a clue as to what is behind Midland's rising crime rate.

Texas political candidates are picking up on drug traffic and the related crime as major issues. Gubernatorial candidates Loeffler and Clements are citing a need for more prisons since "early parole" isn't doing the job of reducing crime. Congressional candidate Lamar Smith has declared "war on drugs" in his campaign. But what are our local candidates doing to combat Midland's rising crime rates? In a move to save money, they recently put a spending freeze on all city expenses, including the police department. The MPD can use new equipment, etcetera, so freezing their budget is false economy, I'm sorry to say.

Just look at what crime costs Midland. Alarms, locks, and security guards cost money, and insurance rates are going through the roof, to say nothing of your time lost while trying to establish ID to write a check. Our police are doing a good job recovering stolen items...last year our police recovered $2,392,497 worth of loot but this only amounts to approximately 10 percent of the total that is stolen. Add all this up and you arrive at a staggering figure. Crime is costing Midland tens of millions of dollars a year...each and every year.

So let's get going, Midland. Get involved! Set up Neighborhood Watch groups in your area and keep an eye out for one another, report suspicious activities, lock up your cars and houses, and tell your city government to put crime fighting at the top of their priority list.

Poisoning of family pet creates concern

On March 16th my dog was accidentally let out of the backyard by two little boys. Whenever he manages to escape, the route he takes is always the same — south in the alley between Upton and Tarleton to Story Street, then across the park at Cuthbert, then north in the alley between Alpine and Tarleton, then across the street to home.

By following this route, we have always been able to find him; this time was no different. My wife found him at the alley entrance between Alpine and Tarleton as it opened onto Bedford; she put him in the car and everything was fine.

Within a short time, my wife and neighbor rushed the dog to a veterinary clinic where he was diagnosed as having ingested strychnine. Luckily our dog was treated in time and will live. But what about the next animal or possibly child, since this area is near two schools. And what about the person that put the strychnine out — what was their reason for it? It is a very frightening thought, especially when it happens in your neighborhood.

The route my dog takes was walked twice. We looked for anything unusual; of course, nothing was found. Since our dog is a very picky eater we knew he would not have eaten a pigeon, but he might have played with it. No dead pigeons, feathers or other animals were found. We have been told the city uses strychnine to rid the downtown area of pigeons; the poisoned birds then many times fly to residential areas before they die. They become fair game to animals and children. We were also told the pigeon droppings contain the strychnine as well.

Since no dead birds or feathers were found, we can only feel the strychnine was put out somewhere within our neighborhood by a person for some unknown reason. Should your pet be poisoned, please notify the police department and the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. This is a legal crime and must be stopped.

Outstanding Teacher designation of pride

I would like to thank the Chamber of Commerce for recognizing me as the first Outstanding Teacher in Midland. This is a wonderful distinction, and one of which I will always be very proud. The Chamber of Commerce is doing an excellent job of restoring the well-deserved dignity to the classroom teacher.

Midland Independent School District has some very exceptional talents among its various faculties. I feel I am only a representative of the quality teachers in our district. I know that my son's educational experiences in Midland have been extremely positive. The faculty with which I work at Rusk Elementary is sensational, as is the support staff from the central office.

I sincerely hope that the parents in Midland will continue to look for the outstanding qualities that their children's teachers possess. It takes true dedication to be a teacher during these trying times of school reform. I would like to encourage parents to contact the Chamber of Commerce about the unique ways in which their children's teachers have been outstanding.

Teacher's mistakes makes reader think

I have never felt our schoolteachers should have been required to take the TECAT test, but the letter from Mary Davis published in Sunday's newspaper probably proves me wrong.

Her letter vividly compared the "peaceful" submission of teachers to TECAT first with the manner in which Jews went to the gas chambers in Auschwitz, Germany, and then to the manner in which the followers of Rev. Jones drank poison in Jonestown, Africa.

What, you might ask, is amiss in this emotion-laced comparison? Auschwitz is in Poland, not Germany, and Jonestown is in South America, not Africa.

I sincerely hope Mary Davis does not teach World Geography.

We may lose private, home schooling rights

We're in grave danger of losing our private non-state funded schools and our home schooling within our state. This can be credited to Commissioner of Education W.N. Kirby and his proposed amendment to the compulsory attendance law.

The law now states that the only requirement of private schools is that it include in its course a study of good citizenship. This is how it has been since 1923. Our state truancy laws were never meant to be inflicted upon those enrolled in private or home education. This is proven in our Texas Education Code, as it states that our State Board of Education (SBOE) is set up to "Exercise general control of the system of public education at the state level" (TEC 11.02), and that "This code shall apply to all educational institutions supported either wholly or in part by state tax funds" (TEC 1.04.a),. This allows no doubt as to the jurisdiction of our SBOE and Commissioner of Education. It does not, and should not govern non-state funded schooling. There are those who would wish to regulate all schools in a manner as to label students truant if not receiving an education parallel to public school, despite the evaluation scores of the rapid growing private school sector.

Try to picture this: General Motors believes it to be in the best interest of the public to place functioning guidelines over Ford Motor Company, defining its times of production, employee qualifications, materials to be used, etc. If Ford should fail to meet their criteria, they are said to not be an automobile manufacturer. It matters not that Ford's products speak for themselves. It's not hard to see that General Motors would be self-serving, rather than truly protecting the needs of others. This is what is happening in Austin. Private education is our only barrier to a total monopoly of public education.

This issue requires our urgent and immediate response to our State Board Members, Commissioner Kirby, and legislators.

Naval confrontation won't change Khadafy's focus

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

Hearst

NEW YORK — When our Sixth Fleet cruised in international waters off Libya I must admit that I was a little doubtful about baiting the unstable dictator Moammar Khadafy who sure enough fired at our ships. We returned the fire and in the resulting two-day fracas, before the Sixth Fleet concluded its exercises and withdrew, our Navy sank several Libyan patrol boats and destroyed one of Libya's missile sites. But this by no means will change Khadafy's determination as the godfather of international terrorism to try and exact his homicidal revenge all over the world against our people and installations.

Closer to home, President Reagan rushed $20 million in military aid and airlifted friendly forces near a fighting zone where Sandinista communist troops had invaded the country on the pretext of pursuing contra rebels.

On these far-flung fronts half a world apart, both events were responses by the president to pop-gun dictators. In Libya, Khadafy had baited Washington for years with major support and funds for terrorist activities throughout the free world while in Nicaragua, Daniel Ortega took every opportunity to crush freedom fighting Contras in Nicaragua and neighboring Honduras. Both are beneficiaries of Soviet arms and support.

On Tuesday, "USA Today" in a random poll across the nation reported that 67 percent of those questioned backed President Reagan's action against Libya. The paper reported that the retaliation was done with full knowledge of the fact that all polled realize American citizens around the world will be the object of increased Libyan terrorism.

In the Congress there was near unanimity in the Senate and the House supporting the Commander-in-Chief and the action taken by our Sixth Fleet. That includes Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill, a long-time critic of the president, who endorsed President Reagan's stand unqualifiedly, and assailed Khadafy as "a nut case."

The New York Times reported that Khadafy hosted a group of international terrorists about two weeks ago at a very motley convention of supposed revolutionary organizations. The groups heard Louis Farrakhan, the American Black Moslem leader, representatives from a wing of the IRA, the renagade PLO faction led by Abu Nidal — charged with terrorist attacks on the Rome and Vienna airports last December — plus Syrian-backed and other assorted terrorist groups.

In the course of a long sulphurous speech, mainly attacking America, Khadafy reportedly said: "Libya stands firm and declares before the world that parallel 32.30 which marks the beginning of the Gulf of Sidra is a line of death and despite all air and naval attempts during recent months the U.S. has been unable to come near the line because it knows it is the line of death."

Khadafy now knows the meaning of, as President Reagan said, "You can run, but you can't hide."

The Libyan dictator should remember that in view of a statement he made during a press conference to "pursue U.S. citizens in their country and streets."

Secretary of State George Shultz, reacting to Khadayf's statement, said "Khadafy is his own smoking gun."

On the other side of the world, the Sandinista communist troops obviously got out of hand in pushing across into Honduran territory.

The Sandinistas had received indirect support from our House of Representatives a week earlier when it rejected President Reagan's request for $100 million in aid to the Contras. On Thursday, the Senate passed a bill that would aid the Contras, and it now goes back to the House of Representatives.

The border incursion by the Sandinista communists in southern Honduras really boosted the cause of the Contras. The obvious efforts of the Sandinista regime to wipe out any opposition shows that it has reached a point of no tolerance for any opposition whether vocal, written or otherwise.

President Reagan approved an "urgent" Honduran request for $20 million in military equipment, services and training. He also dispatched Gen. John Galvin, commander-in-chief of the Panama-based U.S. Southern Command to assess the situation and provide up to date intelligence. Our forces have used Honduran territory for combined exercises and have some small bases there.

Many Congressmen who voted against the president last week favor his help to Honduras as well as endorse the moves of our Sixth Fleet. One Reagan critic said: "I've never met Ortega. I think he's a bumbling, incompetent Marxist, Leninist, Communist."

Who said that?

Well, that was House Speaker Tip O'Neill, who led the fight against aid to the Contras and is having second thoughts today.

VOTERS' GUIDE
to local elections, Saturday, April 5, 1986

Prepared by the League of Women Voters of Midland; Published by the Reporter-Telegram as a Public Service

MAYOR

	1. List your qualifications for office. (Limit 50 words)	2. What three major goals have you set for your term of office and how will you accomplish them? (Limit 150 words)
Steve Davidson	1. Six years of service to all of our citizens on their City Council. 2. Extensive and broad civic involvement has given me an ability to work with diverse interest groups. 3. I listen to the public and my voting record exhibits good solid judgement and reflects the views of our citizens.	1. Continuation of capital improvement: These projects must continue to meet stringent criteria both as to need and having the resources available to fund the improvements. The streets, water and sewer systems, and other public services must be maintained to insure that Midland taxpayers' investment, in these items, does not deteriorate. 2. Continue our efforts towards securing and encouraging new industry as well as working to insure a healthy environment for the oil and gas industry. As Mayor, I will be accessible and ready to work with groups that are working on bringing new jobs and economic growth to our community. 3. Continue our ongoing efforts to maximize the efficiency and productivity of the city work force. This will be done by close attention to defining lines of authority, responsibility, and encouraging the people doing the job to assist the council and staff in how a job could be more efficient.
Barbara Harris	I am an American, a Texan, and a Midlander and that is how I wish to be perceived. I have a genuine concern for Midland and its citizenry even though it is stated to be one of the most racist towns in Texas. I'm honest!!! I have also proven my leadership ability. It is my God given right.	1. To see proceedings toward the multi-purpose facility for southeast Midland which has been on the city council agenda for over a year and a half. As suggested to the council community development funds could be used for such as the facility would accommodate all the needy of Midland regardless of race, creed, or color. It would be constructed in phases as this is a long range goal. The proposed name for the facility is the Martin Luther King center. 2. A detention facility to be constructed for wayward boys and girls under the age of 18 who might need guidance. They would not have to be placed in cells with hardened criminals. 3. All city council members would have official license plates on their cars the same as state officials.
Carroll M. Thomas	Eleven years experience in Midland City government: eight — City Council, three — Planning and Zoning (Chairman.) Twenty two years business experience. President: West Texas Geological Society, Permian Basin Section S.E.P.M., Arthritis Foundation. Board Member: Jaycees, Rotary Club, Boy's Club, Midland Housing Authority, Petroleum Museum. Deacon First Baptist Church. M.S. Texas Tech.	My first goal is to help lead Midland through these troubled economic times by applying conservative fiscal management principles to City operations. Midland's future is bright because of our oil and gas reserves in the Permian Basin. Unfortunately, we are subject to price fluctuations in these resources which are beyond our control. That is why I recently called for postponement of the bond issue and a freeze on City hiring, spending and taxes.	My second goal is to provide positive, constructive, solutions to Midland's problems. We need to allocate a greater portion of the budget to overlays and street repair programs to protect out $150,000,000 investment. The drainage system needs improvement to provide for storm water runoff. Our traffic lights need to be synchronized using available funds. My third goal is to have periodic meetings with other elected bodies to improve cooperation.

CITY COUNCIL

	1. List your qualifications for office. (Limit 50 words)	2. What three major goals have you set for your term of office and how will you accomplish them? (Limit 150 words)
District 3 Lawrence H. Connolly	• A Republican who believes in accountable government. • Undergraduate and Professional Degrees in Architecture, The University of Texas at Austin — 1975, 1976 • Midland resident since 1976. • Registered Architect. • Leadership Midland graduate • Member Midland Chamber of Commerce, Streets Task Force. • Board of Adjustments Alternate, City of Midland. • Project Business Consultant, Junior Achievement.	A. This City's Annual Budget should reflect the current price of oil and the conservative spending that we have had to do both personally and in business. During these uncertain economic times the City should not increase staff, expenditures or taxes. The City should efficiently manage and maintain its considerable investment in its staff and facilities. B. The City Council should insure the improved life of our streets, coordinate street construction projects, synchronized our traffic lights and coordinate the drainage requirements of our existing neighborhoods with new land developments. C. Improve City Hall's responsiveness to its citizens, neighborhoods, local businesses, and new businesses considering Midland as a possible location. City Hall should work with citizen's groups dedicated to reducing crime, alcohol and substance abuse. I will invest my time, experience and professional training to insure the wholesome quality of life we enjoy in Midland.
Kelly Fish	Having been raised in Midland, I returned home after earning a Petroleum Land Management degree from the University of Texas. I am an independent oil and gas producer with major oil company experience. My leadership experience includes Chairman, County Republican Party, President, Midland Jaycees, and Vice-President, Centennial Plaza Association.	My primary objective is, to solve the city's dilemma of operating on reduced revenues and providing the same quality of services while not raising taxes. I propose that city government explore free enterprise as a method of providing many of these services. Street repairs, city vehicle maintenance, bus and recreation services might be performed by the private sector at a greatly reduced cost. This type of approach has been successful in other cities because businesses can perform many services better and more efficiently than government. Secondly, to form a Midland/Odessa task force on crime, to build a network of communication for the exchange of criminal intelligence, intensify patrol of major corridors at city entry points and rotate undercover narcotics officers. Thirdly, to create a business "incubator" or internally generated economic diversification program. This program would provide tangibles such as low rent and venture capital for new high-growth businesses to originate in Midland.
District 4 Robert Rendall	1. Native Midlander. 2. Active in community and governmental affairs. 3. Midland County Attorney (1980-1981). Had opportunity to observe operations of and work with City departments, in addition to experience with governmental budgets. 4. Practiced before City commissions and agencies allowing me to observe from a citizens standpoint their strengths and weaknesses.	1. Encourage commercial diversification and expansion of existing industry. The council must continue to work with area Chambers of Commerce, State officials and the transportation industry to see that we have an adequate water supply and exceptional transportation facilities to serve Midland. Existing industries must be encouraged to expand local operations to take advantage of the available office space and highly trained work force. 2. Continue Capital Improvements Projects. I will insist that adequate funds be allocated for a comprehensive street maintenance program. I will support logical scheduling of street rebuilding projects, drainage projects, and the synchronization of traffic lights. I hope to foster cooperation between neighborhood groups and the City to jointly upgrade our neighborhood parks. 3. Increase efficiency of City departments. I will continually review staffing of City departments and their resulting productivity. I will work toward computerization of City departments to increase efficiency.

MMH BOARD OF DIRECTORS

	1. List your qualifications for office. (Limit 50 words)	2. What issues prompted you to seek a place on the Hospital Board of Trustees? (Limit 150 words)
Patricia Ann Estes	Appointed to the board of directors in August of 1979. Have served as secretary of the board through present term.	To insure the proper use of taxpayers money. To see that the best medical care remains available to the residents of the Midland County area. To assist in the challenge of more efficient management for the hosipital.
Margaret M. Purvis	— Midland Memorial Hospital Board of Trustees, Executive Committee — Legislative Task Force on Cancer in Texas — United Way of Texas, Board of Directors, Executive Committee — United Way of Midland, Board of Directors, Vice-President — Permian Basin Perinatal Association, Past President — City of Midland, Planning and Zoning Commission, Past Vice-Chairman	Continue today's momentum of anticipating evolving needs and plan for tomorrow's perpetuation of excellence in health care with particular emphasis on: — increasing personalized patient care, — augmenting out-patient services, — enhancing good relations with physicians and hospital personnel, — providing state of the art equipment

MIDLAND COLLEGE BOARD

	1. List your qualifications for office. (Limit 50 words)	2. What issues do you feel are most important to the future success of Midland College? (Limit 150 words)
Place 1 Al G. Langford	a. Has served Midland College for 12 years as the founding President. b. Is serving on the Midland College Foundation Board helping raise private monies to provide for student scholarships and other projects not in the regular budget. c. Has been a member of Midland's business community as a successful independent oil man.	This is a critical time for Texas Institutions of higher learning, when the governor has asked all state agencies to cut their budgets by 13%. Midland College needs knowledgeable, proven leadership to realize its full potential. I am fully aware of the task called for in setting priorities, planning, and helping achieve the long range goals of the college. As a trustee, I will continue to support the administrative decisions made by Dr. Jess Parrish in meeting these goals and objectives as set by the Board. I will work toward the all-important goal of avoiding tax increases.
Steve Kiser	Age 31; practicing attorney, 6 years; graduate: Lee High School, Texas A & M, Baylor Law School; married, two children; active in civic affairs: (American Cancer Society Board, Crusade Chairman; Midland Housing Authority Commissioner, Vice-Chairman; United Way Loaned Executive, Allocations Committee). I will bring a young person's viewpoint and fresh approach to Midland College.	a. Maintaining the standards of excellence which have been reached by Midland College under its president, Dr. Jess Parrish, and the Board of Trustees, during an economic downturn. We must make every effort to retain the low tax rates we have had historically. Fortunately, Dr. Parrish is Chairman of the Community College Legislative Committee and enjoys a good relationship with our legislators. b. It will not work for a former college president to come back and be a trustee, second-guessing his successor. I fully support Dr. Parrish, recently named "Outstanding Community College President in the United States." c. As the economy worsens, community colleges will be in greater demand. We must prepare for growth while making certain that educational opportunities are always available to needy and deserving students. d. Promoting increased business-industry cooperation with the college, and providing more assistance to business owners in operating their businesses during hard times.
Place 2 Fred S. Wright Jr.	Graduate of Midland High School, New Mexico Military Institute, Unuversity of California — Berkeley; earning B.S. degree in petroleum engineering. Served in WWII — Pacific Theatre. Retired from Mobil Oil with 37 years in various engineering and managerial assignments. Member Midland College Board since 1972; serving at times as secretary, vice-president, and president.	Continue to stress the philosophy that Midland College was established to provide the best in physical facilities and faculty to satisfy the educational needs of the entire community. It is imperative that we anticipate the ever changing educational needs of the academic student preparing for a college degree, the increasing technical skills required by those working in industry, and the continuing educational desires of those who wish to broaden their intellectual horizons. The community has given its whole-hearted support to these goals and I shall continue to represent their desire to have Midland College rated as one of the best in the nation.
Place 3 John Cooper	I have served 7 years as a trustee, know and understand the college and support its administration. A life underwriter for Bankers Life for 27 years in Midland, my knowledge of finance and investments has served me well in the board's budget-making and financial planning responsibilities. I enjoy serving you!	We must continued the work we have begun under Dr. Parrish's outstanding leadership. We have built a great college while keeping our taxes low, but we must not let up in our search for even better programs and instruction. "Tightening our belts" simply means finding more efficient, cost-effective ways of fulfilling our responsibilities...not higher taxes, in these times of hardship. I am committed to Dr. Parrish's programs, and to maintaining the record of accomplishment which has brought national recognition to Midland College. By constantly observing other community colleges and attending state and national seminars, I am always working to become a better-informed and more capable trustee. It has been my goal to represent all Midlanders on this board. I deeply appreciate the support of the people of Midland, and ask re-election to a second term on the basis of my previous record of service.
Hugh G. White	Master of Education. Served on Midland County Library Board, Midland Zoning Board of Adjustments. Graduate Air War College, Industrial College of Armed Forces. Geologist. Member West Texas Geological Society, Permian Basin Geophysical Society. Retired from major oil company; USAF Reserve. Midland resident 28 years.	The economic downturn of the oil business will reduce local and state funding for Midland College. Lobbying for more is part of the solution; better and long-term budgetting is another part. Midland College needs a coordinated plan for orderly growth and expansion, both academically and vocationally, but also vertically. As the Legislature will probably restrict UTPB, and possibly close it, the time has come to initiate contingency plans for the expansion of Midland College to four-year status. West Texas and Midland need a full-curriculum, well-rounded institution of higher learning. We cannot afford to wait until the need is critical. Another aspect of the downturn of business will be that more students will remain home to attend Midland College for their first two years. Planning is required to meet his impending challenge, especially in the face of restricted funding. PLANNING is paramount to the future of Midland College.

EDUCATION IN BRIEF

Casa offers course on home based business

"Home Based Business — The Basics of Doing Business From Your Home" is the topic of a short course being offered at Casa de Amigos, 1101 E. Garden Lane.

The course, sponsored by Casa de Amigos, Midland College and the Eastside Development Task Force, will meet from 6 to 9 p.m. Wednesday beginning April 9. The fee for the course is $18.

Participants will be assisted in outlining a marketing plan, choosing a management structure and setting up business records. Topics such as insurance needs and location also will be covered.

To register, contact Casa de Amigos or Midland College. For information, call 682-9701.

Schools earn $11,000

Bowie, Sam Houston and Quanah Parker Elementary Schools earned more than $11,000 combined in the 1986 Midland Jump Rope for Heart event sponsored by the American Heart Association.

The three schools competed against 11 other schools to earn top honors.

Cancer series continues

ODESSA — The "Understanding Cancer" series continues this week at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin with presentations on breast and uterine cancer by Dr. Tom Kimbrough and Dr. Robert Carter.

The class will be held at 4:15 p.m. Thursday in Room 383. For information, call Dr. Werner Hoeger at 563-2400, extension 2235.

Recreation agency offers tennis classes

From Staff Reports

The city Recreation Department will be offering spring tennis classes for beginners with Vickie Kerr as instructor.

The class will be from 1 to 2 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday April 8 through May 6. It will meet at Ulmer Park tennis courts, 2700 W. Holloway AVe.

Fee is $12.50 per person. For more information call 683-4281, extension 318.

Horses, burros adopted

Since 1973, under the adoption program of the Interior Department's Bureau of Land Management, more than 61,000 wild horses and burros have been sold to individual Americans. Only old, sick and lame animals may legally be put to death; the bureau has had a moratorium since 1982 on the destruction of healthy horses.

Lecture on Islam offered

ODESSA — The continuing Political Science Lecture series at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin will feature Dr. James A. Bill during a lecture and roundtable discussion entitled, "The Resurgence of Islam and the Gulf States." The lecture will begin at 8 p.m. Friday and the roundtable at 10 a.m. Saturday in the Student Lounge.

Bill is professor of Government and Middle Eastern Studies at the University of Texas at Austin. His specialization is the comparison of groups; and classes in the process of political development in the Middle East.

The lectures and roundtable are open to the public. For information, call the Office of Student Life at 563-2400, 2136.

Casas Grandes tour set

ODESSA — A tour of Casas Grandes, Mexico, is slated for April 18-20 by University of Texas of the Permian Basin archaeologist Eunice Barks.

Casas Grandes or "large houses" was an active settlement between 1200 and 1400 A.D. and supported a large merchant class called Puchteca. The area natives call the ruins Paquime and excavation revealed original parrot and turkey cages that held animals to trade for their feathers. Samples of semi-precious stones also were traded.

The cost of the tour is $180 for double occupancy at the Rodeway Inn or $225 for single occupancy. Deadline for reservations is Wednesday.

For information or to make reservations, call the Museum of the Southwest at 683-2882.

Week of the Young Child to be celebrated with fair

From Staff Reports

The Week of the Young Child will be celebrated with a fair April 12 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at Dennis the Menace Park and the Parks and Recreation Gym at 300 Baldwin.

This Children's Fair is a showcase for the kinds of activities that help young children grow intellectually, physically, socially and emotionally. Parents have an opportunity to learn about community resources as well as share a day with their children. Fair activities, geared to children age 2 to 6 years, will include games, face painting, storytelling, a petting zoo, magician and music corner. The fair is free and open to the public.

The week is set aside every year by the National Association for the Education of Young Children to celebrate the young child. The fair is being co-sponsored by West Texas Association for the Education of Young Children and Midland Recreation Department.

For more information call the Parks Department, 683-4281, extension 318.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

MC to host all-star basketball game

By H. A. TUCK

Tuck

Midland College is closed this week for spring break, but there still are some activities you should know about. The college offices reopen April 7.

• • •

Coming next Sunday, April 6, is an outstanding sporting event. Midland will host a Junior College All-Star Game in Chaparral Center at 3 p.m.

MC coach Jerry Stone will direct 10 Texas All-Stars against 10 players from the rest of the United States. The Texas team should include at least one player from Midland College and possibly two, plus someone from national champion San Jacinto. Ironically, the U.S. team is scheduled to be coached by San Jacinto head coach Ron Arrow.

The event is being sponsored by the Midland Jaycees and United-Bank, with lots of local help. Tickets are $6 and may be purchased in advance at the Chap Center box office or at the door that day.

• • •

Tickets for a "Sesame Street Live" production at Chap Center April 22-23 go on sale Monday, March 31. This should be a delight for area youngsters and probably for their parents and grandparents. And tickets for the April 7 appearance of comedian Gallagher are really a hot item and may be gone before the date of the show. The Chap Center box office is open this week from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

• • •

The tennis teams are spending the holidays in Florida, but it's not days on the beach that they'll enjoy. Theirs is a working vacation.

Coach Joe Williams arranged the trip to provide them with numerous matches against the best junior college and university teams in that state.

• • •

Tuesday is the date to vote for the Midland College Trustees in the absentee votes during holidays for those who might wish to vote absentee through Tuesday at the County Tax Office, 709 W. Washington. Candidates for Place 1 are Steve Chrane and Al Langford; incumbent Tom Wright is unopposed for Place 2; incumbent John Cooper is being challenged by Hugh White for Place 3. Trustees serve six terms on the board. The positions are unpaid.

• • •

If you operate a business from your home or have considered doing that you should enroll in a short course that starts April 9. Entitled "Successful Business From Your Home," the course will be taught at Casa de Amigos, 1101 E. Garden Lane, from 7-9 p.m. Wednesdays from April 9 through April 30.

Real Estate today

By Don Harvey

SHOULD YOU SELECT YOUR FRIEND?

Your best friend is a Realtor. You are about to sell your home. Should you list it with your friend or someone else? How do you go about this without hurting feelings?

Look at it this way: If you aren't feeling well, do you select a doctor because he is a friend or because you feel he is the best qualified to treat your problem? Are you concerned that if you select another doctor you might hurt the feelings of the doctor you know?

The really good physician is too professional to have "hurt feelings" if a friend selects another physician.

This is also true of a Realtor. The really good Realtor is concerned only with using all his or her efforts to give the best service to his or her clients. Like a doctor, a good Realtor is too professional to have "hurt feelings". Select the Realtor whom you believe can do the best job in selling your home. Make this a completely objective, business-like decision.

Congressmen to discuss oil, gas industry problems

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Congressmen Larry Combest of Lubbock and Charles Stenholm, chairman of the House Small Business Subcommittee on Energy, Environment and Safety, will conduct a public hearing Tuesday, from 9 a.m. to noon, on the economic problems facing the oil and gas industry in West Texas.

Combest, a member of Stenholm's subcommittee, and Stenholm will receive testimony from the general public and local officials in the Permian Basin on the impact of problems on small businesses related to the oil industry as well as the problems being faced by independent producers.

Combest asked Stenholm to hold a hearing in Ector County "because of the adverse economic conditions facing the Permian Basin."

"The continuing decline in the price of crude," said Combest, "has brought about a severe hardship upon the petroleum industry and in our cities and communities across much of the state."

Observing that the independent producer forms much of the economic backbone of West Texas, Combest said, "a strong and healthy energy industry is vital for the survival of our cities and our national security."

In a news release concerning the Odessa hearing and a comparable one in Abilene Wednesday, Stenholm said, "This hearing is designed to explore the domestic and national security ramifications of the independent oil producers' problems and to bring back to Washington a record to assist Congress as it makes crucial policy decisions this year."

A number of independent oil and gas industry representatives are expected to testify, in addition to representatives of the business community and governmental entities. The hearing is to be held in the Odessa City Hall council chambers, 411 W. 8th St.

Monday, Combest is scheduled to hold a news conference at 1 p.m in his office in the Greater Odessa Chamber of Commerce building to explain details of the Emergency Energy Act of 1986.

According to Combest, the act "was drafted to forestall a further decline in the energy industry by providing some help to producers, explorers and related industry representatives who have been experiencing extreme hardships."

He says the legislation was designed to provide overall improvement in the industry's economic position, with "specific attention" paid to two critical areas — the need to avoid permanent abandonment of high cost marginal production, such as stripper wells, and the need to maintain an exploration and development capability for future production of domestic reserves."

Miss Piggy brings 'Kermitage Collection' to Midland mall

The paintings and sculpture collection of Miss Piggy will be exhibited through April 6 at Midland Park Mall. For 10 days, Midland Park Mall will be transformed into Muppetopolis, an exhibition of Muppet-related events and activities.

The display (described by a spokesman of the exhibit as "a tribute to the Muppet manner in great art"), "Miss Piggy's Art Masterpieces: Treasures from the Kermitage Collection," offers a look at 12 paintings and two sculptures Miss Piggy attributes to such masters as Leonardo de Vinci ("Moni Moi"), Thomas Gainesbourough ("Green Boy"), Henri de Toulouse-Lautrec ("La Belle Epique"), Auguste Rodin ("The Smooch"), and Rembrandt va Rigan ("Arisfroggle Contemplating the Bust of a Twerp").

There are several other events scheduled to take place with the exhibit. The "Kermit Coloring Contest" for children ages 2-8; "Giant Muppet Mural" opening to the public for drawing the Muppet characters; "Big Bird's Rubber Duckie Tub" where children ages 2-10 may choose a rubber duckie and win a prize; "Muppetopolis Marketplace," a display in Center Court of everything pink and green from Mall merchants; "The Muppets Take Manhattan" free showing at 10:30 today and April 5 across the Mall from Musicland; "Pictures with the Muppets" photo booth where pictures can be taken with the whole Muppet gang; and "Kermit's 30th Birthday Party" Saturday, at 1 p.m., when cake and favors will be given out.

"Kids Fingerprinting Day" is also scheduled for Saturday. The event will be conducted by the Midland Police Department and is free. A prize will be given to all participating children.

Visitors to the exhibit can view a videotape showing highlights of "The Art of the Muppets Exhibit. "The priceless artworks will be guarded by Muppet characters Bunson and Bedker, as well as Statler and Waldorf, who will be positioned at the entrance and the exit, to observe all visitors trying to sneak by them," said the exhibit spokesman.

The exhibit has been organized by Leslie Asch, Exhibit Designer/Director for Henson Associates (Ha!) creator of the Muppets. The Kermitager Collection was created under the supervision of Michael Frith, Ha's executive vice president of art and design.

Survey shows Clements ahead in GOP race

HOUSTON (AP) — A survey of people planning to vote in the Republican primary shows former Gov. Bill Clements would win the gubernatorial nomination without a runoff if the election were held now, the Houston Chronicle reported in a copyright story Sunday.

Clements has the support of 53 percent of the voters surveyed, while U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler has 19 percent and former U.S. Rep. Kent Hance has 16 percent, according to the poll. Twelve percent were undecided.

The telephone poll has a 6 percent margin of error. It was conducted March 21-27 by the University of Houston Public Affairs Research Center for the Chronicle and KTRK-TV.

The research center called 3,200 registered voters in 100 key precincts across the state to find 414 who said they are likely to vote in the Republican primary.

Each was asked which Republican gubernatorial candidate they would vote for if the election were held today, the Chronicle reported.

Richard Murray, a political science professor who conducted the survey, said the difficulty in finding people who said they planned to vote in the primary indicates voter turnout will be fairly low. He estimates a turnout of about 400,000.

The GOP gubernatorial race "will be the traditional low-vote Republican primary with the party faithful making the choices," Murray said.

Houston and Dallas, will, as usual, be the "dominant players in this primary" because of low voter interest in other parts of the state, Murray said.

"I want to remind the Texas voters that in the same stage in the 1984 primary, I was behind Bob Krueger even more than the poll indicates I am behind today," Hance said in reaction to the poll.

"I am surprised that Tom Loeffler, who has spent more than $1 million on television, has no more support than he does," Hance said in a prepared statement. "The Hance campaign has spent less than $200,000 on television advertising. We all need to remember that Bill Clements told everyone he was 12 points ahead in the polls just before he lost to Mark White by 230,000 votes in 1982."

The sample of likely voters is overwhelmingly white and conservative.

Dick Armey to address club on economics, public policy

From Staff Reports

Dick Armey

U.S. Rep. Dick Armey, R-Denton, will address the Permian Basin Economics Club on "Economics and Public Policy Analysis of the Oil Industry" at noon Tuesday at Mission Country Club.

Armey, a first-term congressman, is the founder and chairman of the House Trade Expansion Caucus. The HTEC is a bipartisan group of congressmen committed to offsetting America's trade imbalance by expanding trade with other countries.

Armey, 45, was the chairman of the North Texas State University's economics department before running from Congress. He earned a doctorate in economics and has authored two textbooks on the subject.

Rister names Patty Steward to coordinate race

From Staff Reports

Milton A. Rister Jr. has announced the appointment of Patty Steward as coordinator of his campaign for the Republican nomination to Place 2 on the Midland County Commissioners Court.

Steward joins campaign treasurer Charlene Wurtz and other county residents from both the city and rural areas.

Ms. Steward, a Midland resident for more than 22 years, has been active in civic organizations and a variety of political activities. She has served on the board of the American Heart Association, Midland-Odessa Symphony and Chorale, Midland Symphony Guild, and the Opportunity Center Auxiliary. Other activities include Junior Women's Club, United Way of Midland and St. Luke's United Methodist Church Youth Fellowship Program.

Rister said a steering committee will be announced later.

Three parachutists killed in plane crash

SEAGOVILLE (AP) — Three men on a parachuting expedition were killed and two others seriously injured Saturday when their single-engine airplane crashed and exploded into flame, officials said.

The plane had taken off from Seagoville Airport with four parachuters aboard when the pilot apparently noticed a malfunction, turned the plane around and tried to land, said Dallas County Sheriff's spokesman Sgt. Don Wood.

Wood said the plane crashed on the airfield just off the runway in mid-afternoon. The airport in this town southeast of Dallas is small and mostly open field, he said.

Three people were thrown from the plane on impact — one who died and two who were taken to Methodist Medical Center and were in critical condition Saturday night, hospital spokeswoman Linda Schoonover said.

Two other men were trapped inside the plane, Wood said.

City makes changes in summer programs

LIVING/DINING ROOMS
Most living room/dining room areas work best when they are divided into separate but decoratively related spheres. Area rugs, furniture arrangement, platforms and track lighting increase the separate but equal feeling. However, no matter how you separate the two areas, they should be kept in tune decoratively. This could mean using the same fabric on the dining room chair seats as is used for the throw pillows on the sofa. It may mean choosing a cocktail and dining table in the same style and/or material. If eating informally in the living room while sitting on the sofa is preferred, a coffee table that is slightly higher than the norm should be chosen.
We'll help you decorate ypur home with window treatments at WINDOW DECOR, 30 West Industrial Loop, 686-0875. Call for a free in-home consultation. Open: 8 a.m. - 4:30 p.m. Mon. thru Fri., and by appointment.
Hint:

'Sunny' von Bulow's children can't just put her behind them

By BEVERLY BEYETTE
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

FORT WORTH — "People ask, 'Why can't you just put this behind you?' " said Alexander von Auersperg, who was seated beside his sister, Annie-Laurie "Ala" Kneissl, in the board room of the new Sunny von Bulow National Victim Advocacy Center. "But we have to live with this the rest of our lives. How we live with it is what is important."

It has been almost a year since Claus von Bulow, in a second trial, was acquitted on charges of trying to kill his wealthy socialite wife, Martha "Sunny" von Bulow, with injections of insulin to aggravate her hypoglycemia (a low blood-sugar condition). Von Bulow's stepchildren, however, remain unwaveringly convinced of his guilt.

And they perceive their mother, now 54 and lying comatose in a New York hospital since 1980, as a double victim, victimized as well by a judicial system they contend "put her on trial." Now they've put up $1.7 million of the family fortune to help victims, in general.

Yes, Von Auersperg acknowledged, "In a sense, this is therapy." But, he said, he and his sister are determined "to lessen the tragedy for other people, to take our frustration and channel it positively."

They want people to know that every 26 seconds an American is the victim of a violent crime — that adds up to 5.9 million crimes of violence each year in this country. And they want people to know that, as they see it, victims aren't getting a fair shake.

Von Auersperg, who was educated at Brown University and is now a manager for E.F. Hutton in New York, and his sister Kneissl, a Manhattan-based film producer, wife and mother of two, were 21 and 22 when their mother fell into what doctors believe is an irreversible coma in December, 1980.

Their suspicions that she was a victim of attempted murder, and their perseverance, led to the two widely publicized trials of Claus von Bulow.

Theirs was a family tragedy played out in public, seized upon by the world's media as a plot better than an Agatha Christie thriller. It had everything — the heiress taken mysteriously ill, the husband as suspect, the Other Woman, all of this against the backdrop of the Von Bulows' 20-room oceanfront mansion, Clarendon Court, on Newport, R.I.'s millionaires' row.

At the first trial, in 1982, the jury found Von Bulow guilty of trying to murder Sunny von Bulow, first in 1979 and again in 1980. Sentenced to 30 years in prison, he remained free during the appeal process after posting a $1 million bond put up by his friend, billionaire J. Paul Getty Jr. Ultimately, the conviction was overturned on a technicality ("an outrageous technicality," Von Auersperg contends): The police had no search warrant when they seized from the mansion a "little black bag" containing the questionable drugs.

In April of last year, the jury at the second trial found Von Bulow not guilty. Von Auersperg and Kneissl were "devastated" but, they add, "We've come to terms with it." Kneissl added, "That's not to say that every time we see my mother that's not a reminder..."

In July, Von Auersperg and Kneissl filed a civil suit in U.S. District Court, Manhattan, charging Von Bulow with assault with intent to kill and asking for $56 million. A federal judge is expected to rule soon on Von Bulow's request for dismissal.

They "want nothing to do with the money," his stepchildren emphasized (Kneissl calls it "blood money"). Von Auersperg explained that, because it is necessary to sue for money in a civil suit, they decided on $56 million based on their mother's projected hospital costs over her probable lifetime, multiplied by three. They also want Von Bulow removed as a beneficiary of her trust fund.

"Obviously," Von Auersperg said, "it's terribly difficult to put a price on (what's happened to) my mother."

If the civil suit goes to court, Von Bulow would be required to testify, something he did not do at either of his trials and Von Auersperg wants him to have to do that.

"We owe it to my mother to get this man out of her life," Von Auersperg said. "He is still technically her husband, although he lives in her apartment with another woman. Technically, he has control of her life, and we think that's outrageous. I don't want him in any way her spouse. And I don't think he should benefit" from her misfortune.

Should they win the suit, Kneissl said, the money would be funneled to a good cause, perhaps to further knowledge of brain damage through the planned coma research foundation she wants to bear her mother's name. Von Auersperg said, "We haven't gone through this for five years for Claus von Bulow's money."

Sunny von Bulow, the only daughter of Pittsburgh utilities magnate George S. Crawford and Annie-Laurie Crawford Aitken, who was connected to the Carnegies, was beautiful, blond, adored and pampered by her family, a dazzling debutante who wed royalty, Austrian Prince Alfred Auersperg. That marriage fell apart after eight years and, in 1966, she married Von Bulow, a suave Danish-born, Cambridge-educated man-about-society, Claus von Bulow.

During the trials, Sunny von Bulow was depicted by the defense as pathologically shy, a neurotic woman with few inner resources who drowned her anxieties in alcohol.

A "smear," contends her son, "the most outrageous lies." They believe the outcome might have been different if a dozen or so character witnesses had been permitted to testify for their mother. That's one of the changes they want to see made in the system.

"We give the defendant the presumption of innocence," Von Auersperg said, while "so often it's the victim who's put on trial, like our mother, who was helpless and could not defend herself."

Today, Sunny von Bulow lies in kind of a twilight zone between life and death in a private room in New York's Columbia Presbyterian Hospital. "Seventy percent of her brain cells are destroyed," Kneissl said. "She can differentiate between day and night, but probably not focus. She hears sounds but probably does not understand them. We don't think she recognizes anybody."

Kneissl and Von Auersperg visit their mother on major holidays and on her birthday, sometimes in-between. "Maybe," he said, "a familiar voice makes a difference."

There are fresh flowers, which she loves, in the room at all times. She listens to opera cassettes through headphones. "To relax her," her son explained. "The nurses say when the tapes stop she becomes agitated."

Sunny von Bulow is not, Kneissl insists, the physically diminished human vegetable described in some reports. "She was an incredibly beautiful woman," she said, "and she still is beautiful."

Her children describe her condition as "completely stabilized," in good health except for muscle deterioration. She has no life support system, only a feeding tube and a tracheal tube to keep her lungs clear. "She hasn't had so much as a cold since she's been in the hospital," Von Auersperg said.

Louisville, Duke to meet for NCAA title

Duke's Danny breaks tie for 71-67 win

DALLAS (AP) — No. 1 vs. No. 2 lived up to its billing but it was the wrong Danny who made the difference at the end.

Thus top-ranked Duke, survivor of a 71-67 semifinal battle with Kansas, is in the NCAA Tournament championship game and the college basketball record book.

With Danny Manning, Kansas' second-team All-American, held to a career-low four points, it was Duke freshman Danny Ferry who wore the hero's mantle. Ferry rebounded a missed shot by Mark Alarie and scored with 22 seconds left to break a 67-all tie.

Ferry then drew a charging foul that thwarted Kansas' chance to tie.

"I was at the dotted line, I came up with it and went up with it," Ferry said of his winning basket. "I was just in the right place at the right time."

The victory was Duke's 37th in 39 games this season, one more than the 1948 Kentucky team that finished 36-3. Kansas, which finished, 35-4, could also have broken the record had it gone all the way.

Now the Blue Devils still need one more victory, against Louisville Monday night, to win the national championship. The Cardinals solved Louisiana State's "freak defense" and ran away in the second half with an 88-77 victory in Saturday's first game.

THE SECOND game was tight throughout. Neither team led by more than seven points and Kansas, despite losing Manning and 7-foot-1 center Greg Dreiling on fouls, led 67-65 with 2:04 to go.

Then All-American guard Johnny Dawkins, who scored 24 points, rebounded a missed shot by David Henderson to tie it at 67 and set up Ferry's heroics.

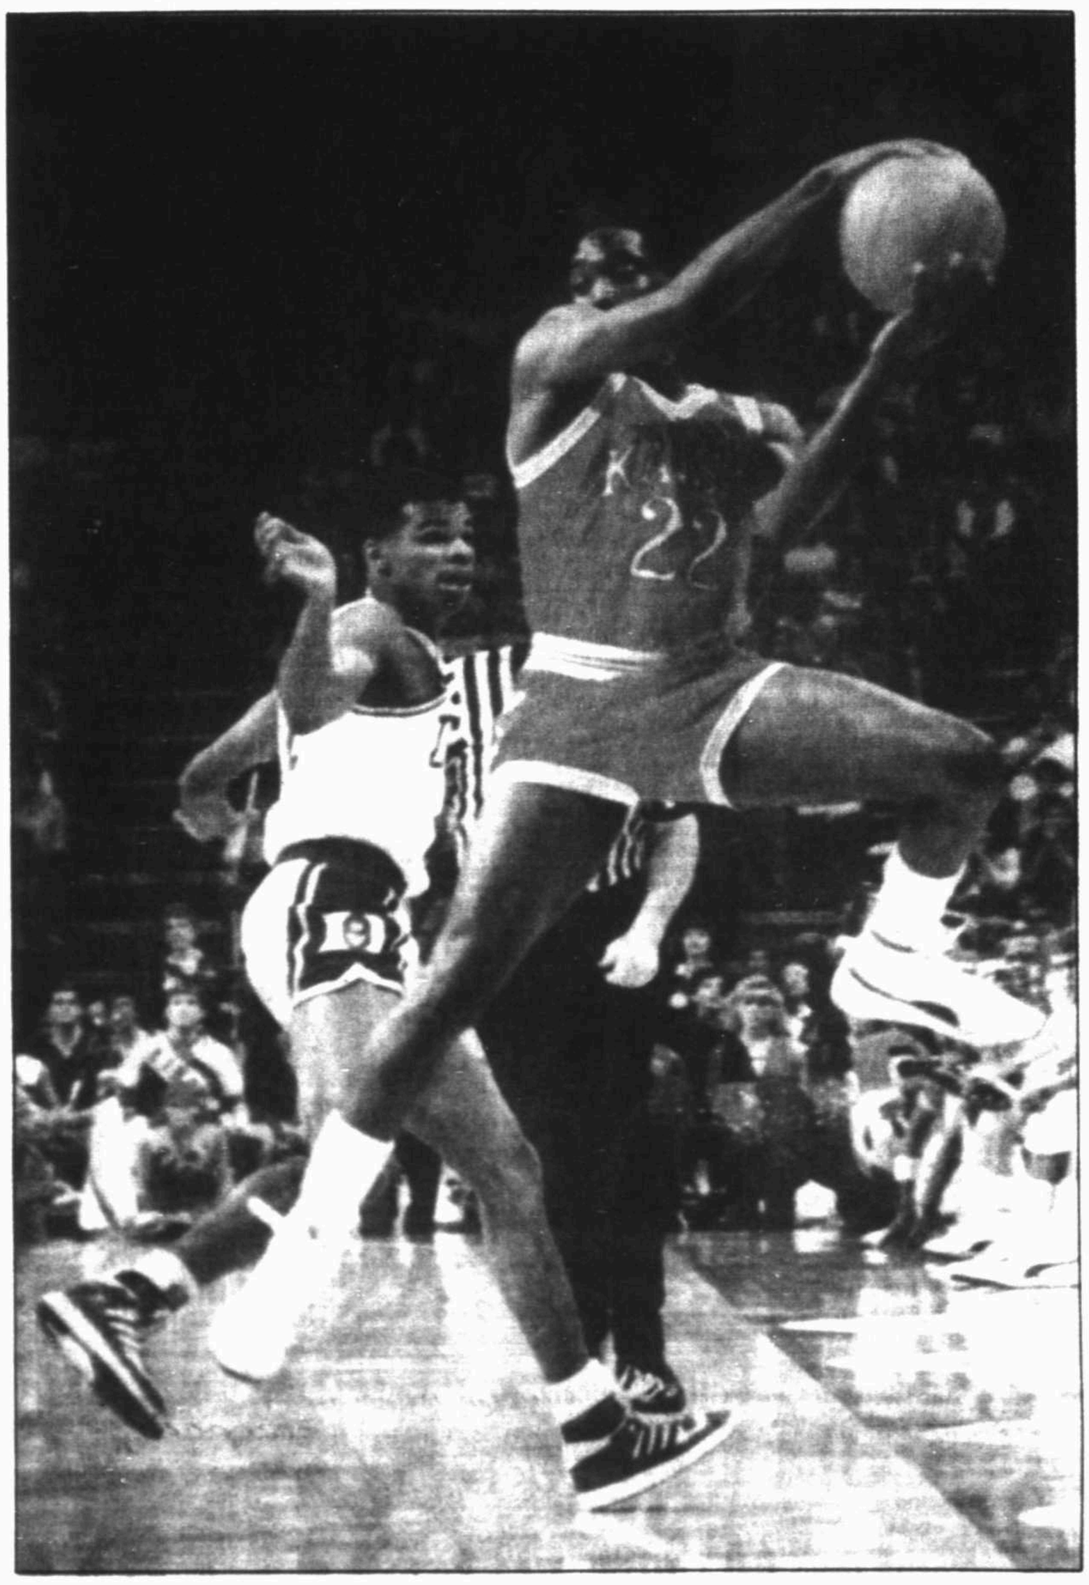

"It was a terrific game," Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski said. "You know, sitting on the courtside you can just feel the emotion, hear the bodies banging. Rightfully so, we won it with a loose ball, taking the ball off the floor and scoring."

Asked why he brought in Ferry at the end, the Duke coach joked, "To pick up a loose ball."

"We had our chance, we got 'em to miss," Kansas Coach Larry Brown said of the decisive basket. "We had everybody blocked out. Ferry made a great play."

Manning, who brought a 17.1-point scoring average into the game, played just 23 minutes and shot just two for nine — the first basket of the game and one with 4:23 to play that put the Jayhawks up 65-61. He played just seven minutes of the first half.

Kansas' Cedric Hunter (22) keeps the ball alive as he chases it down and throws back onto the court while Duke defender Tommy Amaker keeps a watchful eye on the play Saturday.

Thompson carries Cards past LSU Tigers, 88-77

DALLAS (AP) — Billy Thompson's rebounding and near-perfect shooting ended unheralded Louisiana State's run through the NCAA playoffs as Louisville beat the Tigers 88-77 Saturday and charged into the championship game.

Thompson hit 10 of 11 shots from the field, scoring 22 points and backing freshman center Pervis Ellison's 13 rebounds with 10 of his own as Louisville came back from a 44-36 halftime deficit and ran the tired Tigers off the Reunion Arena court.

"We didn't do anything different. We just came out with more intensity," Thompson said after the Cardinals outscored the Tigers 52-33 in the second half. "I'm a senior. My shot was there. I felt I had to maybe get things going."

Milt Wagner added 22 points and 11 assists for the Cardinals, seeking a second national basketball championship for Coach Denny Crum, who led Louisville to the 1980 title.

"We knew we had to come out and play good defense in the first five minutes of the half, go for the steals and rebounds," Wagner said. "Our guys did a great job."

"I think you've got to give LSU credit for that first half," Crum said. "They got all the loose balls. They didn't let us get started. They didn't let us get any runs. Maybe we were a little tight. We didn't shoot real well."

CRUM SAID he had some strong words for his players at halftime. He said he told them: "This is our last shot. Let's give it our best effort."

Wagner said the key to the second-half surge was the Louisville defense.

"We played good defense and put pretty good pressure on them and made them change their shots," he said. "That made the difference for us."

The statistics showed that.

LSU shot 57.1 percaent in the first half, but just 35 percent in the second. Louisville, meanwhile, improved from 46.9 percent before intermission to 63.9 percent after it.

It was the 16th consecutive victory for Louisville, 31-7 and champion of the Metro Conference and the West Regional, in which it was seeded No. 2 to St. John's. LSU, 11th seed in the Southeast Region, closed its with a 26-12 record.

"I think these guys still know that they can dream," said Coach Dale Brown. "I thought we played as hard as we possibly could. We can't expect any more."

He said LSU was unable to shake the Louisville offense in the second half the way it had in the first. "We tried every defense we had in the book. And we might have been too anxious to shoot in the second half. Maybe it was our fault for not being patient enough," he said.

John Williams, LSU's star forward, had 12 points in the first half but only two the rest of the way. Don Redden had 22 for LSU.

The Cardinals came out running at the start of the second half, running off 13 consecutive points and 17 of 18 as LSU was unable to match the preachings of their inspirational coach against the flying feet of the West Regional champions. Louisville outscored the Tigers 29-11 in the first 10 minutes of the half.

WITH GUARD Anthony Wilson canning a pair of jumpers, LSU managed to maintain its tenuous lead in the opening five minutes of the second half. Then Louisville began limiting LSU to one shot and roared downcourt past the exhausted Tigers.

Thompson's jumper 5:15 into the second half began the 13-point run by the Cardinals, with guards Wagner and Jeff Hall feeding each other on fast-break layups — the second one tying it 54-54 at 6:05 of the half — and Hall scoring again 62 seconds later with a five-foot jumper to give Louisville its first lead of the game.

The streak continued with a 20-footer from the left side by Wagner and ended when junior forward Mark McSwain tipped in a follow shot, was fouled and sank the free throw.

It was now 61-54. Redden hit a foul shot for the Tigers, then Wagner canned two more 20-footers from the same left-side location to give the Cardinals a 65-55 lead, a 10-point bulge that was matched twice more and exceeded only when Herbert Crook hit a jumper at the buzzer.

In that 17-1 spurt by the Cardinals, LSU was held without a field goal for 5:07, missing 13 consecutive shots.

But Redden scored nine of 11 LSU points to bring the Tigers back to within four before Louisville pulled away again.

Rebs in contention for first golf playoff berth since '77

From Staff Reports

ODESSA—Led by a parade of underclassmen, Midland Lee is making a run at its first golf playoff berth since 1977.

Saturday, the Rebels fired a second round of 320, the best of the day, to leap into second place in the District 4-5A race after two rounds of the five-round play. Abilene Cooper's No. 1 team is the overall leader, just four strokes ahead of the Rebels.

Junior Bobby Gee carded a 75 Saturday, the second best individual round of the day, to put him in a tie for overall honors with Roone Riley of Cooper at 152.

Another Rebel junior, Larry Bryan, moved into a tie for the fourth spot with Clint Adams of Cooper with a round of 76 and a 153 total, just one stroke behind teammate Gee. Sophomore Randy Milby fired an 80 Saturday to put him 10th on the overall leader board.

Scott Gilreath of San Angelo is the overall tournament leader, posting a second-round low of 74 Saturday, and a two-round low of 147.

Midland High carried some bad luck on its shoulders in the second round, falling one notch to fifth.

ERIC SCHURER

Does anybody want 4-5A title?

Lookout above! Isn't that Midland Lee creeping toward the top of the District 4-5A standings?

Or is it just the rest of the district sliding towards the bottom?

And what about those Bulldogs? One has to wonder how long they will tread water near the top without ever actually breaking into a swim, especially after Friday's 23-3 debacle.

One thing is certain as the first half of the district baseball season draws to a close, there's going to be a real scramble for the two playoff berths in the coming weeks.

A pair of unexpected losses by Abilene Cooper assured us of that.

Tuesday, Lee and Midland High will close the first half of the season in what has turned into a must-game for both teams in the season's first meeting between the rival schools.

LEE, WITH losses in its first three games, can ill-afford a fourth loss, one that would put perhaps too much distance between them and the leaders.

And yes, though the 'Dogs are still tied for second at 4-2, they are badly in need of a win. MHS needs to prove to itself they aren't as bad as Odessa Permian made them look.

And what made it all the worse for coach Tim Whalen and crew, was that just when MHS had played its best game of the year, if not the decade, and had a chance to put a choke hold on the rest of the district, it faltered.

And instead of taking a one-game bulge into Tuesday's crosstown tussle, the Permian Panthers are threatening to pull off a sweep of the four major sports crowns in the district. That's enough to chap the behind of any self-respecting Rebel or Bulldog.

BUT THE Panthers are light years from locking up this district title, although they are in the driver's seat.

But streaks, short and long, are what the season is made of. Thanks to Cooper's two-game losing streak, teams like Lee are far from out of it. Before the Bulldogs tattoed that first loss on the Cougars, the 4-5A title was conceded to Andy Malone's bunch. Some were still giving it to them after it.

And with Cooper handed one playoff spot, the other was a toss up for MHS and Permian, each with just one loss, and maybe AHS still alive with two.

But when the Cougars were beat for the second time, putting them in league with MHS with two losses, it left six teams playing musical chairs for two playoff berths.

Who can be expected to step forward, and who will drop by the gutter?

Tuesday's MHS-Lee match up could eliminate one team from the running, but others may have already shown the "wrong stuff."

Abilene's Eagles may have dropped themselves out of contention with unimpressive losses to Lee and Big Spring. Continually inconsistent is the best way to describe the Eagles so far.

SAN ANGELO, while leading the league in controversial wins with two, is still trailing Permian by two games. Sooner or later, Rex Scofield and company are bound to run out of miracles dressed in blue.

Cooper, despite back-to-back losses, has the most talent in the league and the coach with the sharpest tongue. It's tempting to concede one post-season spot to the Cougars.

Permian has shown a penchant for clubbing the ball, averaging more than 10 runs a contest and beating the best staff in the league mercilessly Friday. And the Panthers' size matches Coopers, if nothing else.

Still they are beatable. They're pitching is suspect and no one is ready to give them a playoff spot, but first someone besides Cooper must tag them with a loss or two.

Enter our favorite sons, one seemingly doomed to crumble Tuesday. A fourth loss could be fatal for the Rebs, while consecutive defeats would take the starch out of the Bulldogs' fast start.

LEE HAS the power of momentum with three straight wins and a renewed feeling of optimism. A sour start had players and fans grumbling, but wins have a way of quieting such disruptions.

Still the Rebels are seriously hurting in the pitching department. George Matta is not likely to be ready for the Bulldogs as Ernie Johnson had hoped, and Terry Baxter's arm seems tired from overuse.

The Bulldogs, almost by default, would seem to be the likely challengers — if only they played like they wanted to win more than once a week.

Angels claim 13-4 win

From Staff Reports

TUCSON, Ariz. — The Midland Angels finally notched a mark in the victory column Saturday night, posting a 13-4 win over Waterbury here.

Angel pitcher Sherman Corbett claimed the victory and was supported at the plate by the hitting of Dante Bichette, who went 2-for-3, including a double, for two RBI.

From last year's Angel squad, Mike Madril went 2-for-4 and Kevin Davis was 1-for-5 with a double in the 10-hit attack.

The victory improves Midland's record to 1-4-1 on the year.

Midland plays Shreveport today in Mesa.

The Angels begin Texas League action on April 8 with a five-game stand in San Antonio. The Angels' home opener is on April 18, a 10-game stand starting with the El Paso Diablos and followed by the Beaumont Golden Gators.

Mize birdies way to four-shot lead

PONTE VEDRA, Fla. (AP) — Larry Mize responded to John Mahaffey's challenge with birdies on two of his last three holes and pulled away to a four-stroke lead Saturday in the third round of the Tournament Players Championship.

"Don't anybody wake me up," Mize said after his 6-under-par 66 in gusty winds had given him sole control and set a couple of tournament records.

His leading margin was the largest in the 13-year history of the annual championship of golf's touring pros, and his 54-hole total of 200 was a three-round record.

And it put him within range of still another mark. The 72-hole record for the Players Club at Sawgrass is 274, set last year by Calvin Peete. That's 14 under par. And Mize is 16 under after only three rounds.

"It was nice to be tied for the lead in the first round. It was nicer to be tied for the lead in the second round. And it's still better to be leading alone after three rounds.

"It's getting closer to the nitty-gritty," said Mize, 27, winner of one title in five years of PGA Tour activity.

And Mize, who has had a habit of letting leads get away from him, has a plan for the final round.

"I can't let my mind get ahead of myself," he said. "I can't let myself worry about winning the golf tournament. I want to win, but I can't let myself think about it.

"When you start thinking about it, then you're not thinking about the shot you're playing, the things you're supposed to be doing," he said.

But it appeared he had only one man to worry about. Only John Mahaffey could keep him in sight. And it took another record performace for Mahaffey to do it.

Mahaffey, a former PGA titleholder, coaxed a 7-under-par 65 from the gusty, shifting winds and completed three rounds at 204.

"This is about as good a round as I've ever played," said Mahaffey, 37, now in his 16th season on the tour.

It also was the best third-round score in the tournament's history and only one off the 18-hole record.

Even with that superlative effort, however, Mahaffey made up only one shot on Mize, who presented the threat of making this a runaway.

Mahaffey, however, was vastly unconcerned about the magnitude of Mize's lead.

"It's much too early in the game to be scoreboard-watching," he said. "You don't start looking at the scoreboard until about the 16th hole tomorrow."

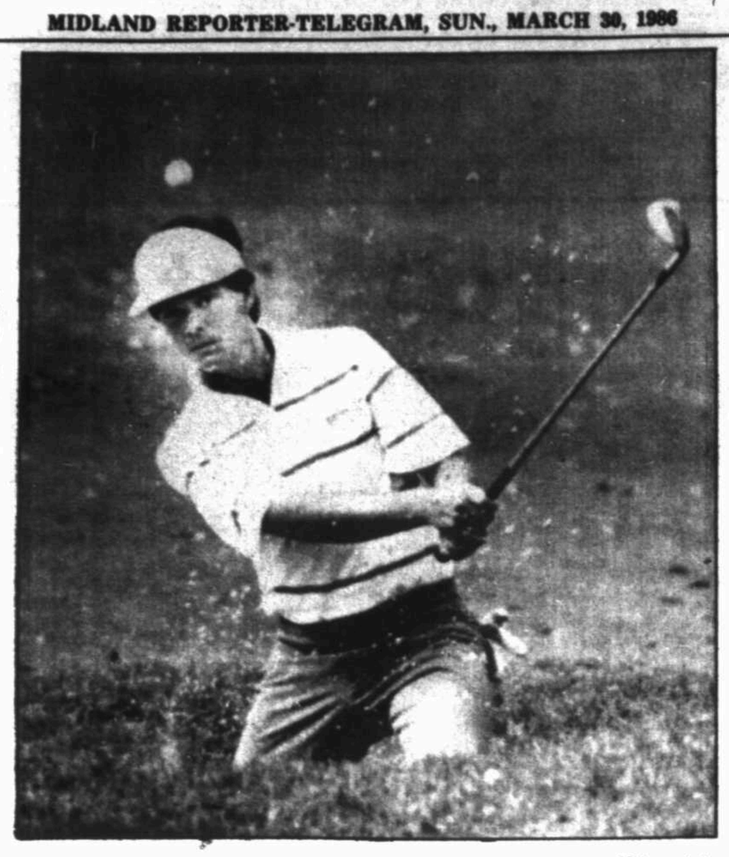

No one else was within eight strokes of the runaway leader going into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $162,000 first prize.

Tim Simpson, who played well before the winds reached peak strength, had a 66 that put him in third at 208.

Tom Kite and Brett Upper were next at 209. Kite had a 71 and Upper shot 73. Dick Mast and Doug Tewell followed at at 210. Mast shot 68, also before the winds reached full strength, and Tewell shot 74.

Lee Trevino, a former winner of this title, had a 70 and was well back at 211. Tom Watson could do no better than 74 and was at 218.

Mize, who has led or shared the lead all the way, both opened and closed with a rush. He birdied two of his first three and, with Mahaffey closing up, birdied two of his last three.

USC's Miller receives Player of Year honor

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Cheryl Miller, the force behind the University of Southern California's talent-laden women's basketball team, was named the Champion Products major college Player of the Year for the second consecutive season on Saturday.

Miller, a senior from Riverside, Calif., who rewrote the record book for the Women of Troy, was chosen for the award by the Women's Basketball Coaches Association.

Miller headed a list of five honorees representing the three divisions of the National Collegiate Athletic Association, the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics and the Junior Collegiate-Community College Association.

Joining Miller at the awards ceremony held in conjunction with the Women's NCAA Basketball Tournament were Vickie Mitchell of Cal Poly Pomona, Jane Meyer of Elizabethtown College of Pennsylvania, Lisa Washington of the College of Charleston, S.C. and Doreatha Conwell of Odessa Junior College of Texas.

Saturday's award was the latest in a series if honors for the 6-foot-3 Miller, who averaged 26.1 points and 12.5 rebounds per game as Southern California rolled up a 31-4 record.

Miller scored in 17 points Friday night, giving her 3,002 points for her career, as Southern California demolished Tennessee 83-59 in a semifinal of the NCAA tournament. Southern California meets No. 1 Texas Sunday for the national championship.

Conwell, a 6-3 freshman center from Los Angeles, averaged 27.1 points and 16.4 rebounds as Odessa Junior College rolled to a 36-0 season. She was the leading scorer, rebounder and shot blocker for Lady Wranglers.

Reagan County golfers stun Buffs

From Staff Reports

BIG LAKE—Reagan County upset Stanton by two strokes here Saturday in the Reagan County Invitational, despite the Buffalos' Mark Gonzalez taking medalist honors.

Gonzalez carded a 72 to tie Dennis Carillo of Alpine in regulation, but the Buff senior won out in the second hole of sudden death to take top honors.

In the team contest, Reagan County used superior depth in the six-man, five-scores-count format.

Bobby Gunnels paced the Owls with a 75, good for third in the medalist race.

McCamey, the third District 8-2A team in the meet, finished sixth with a score of 451. Midland Christian was eighth with 507.

All three District 8-2A teams will resume district play next week with a meet in McCamey and will conclude April 12 back in Big Lake.

Reagan County Invitational

Team Results: 1. Reagan County 'A' 394. 2. Stanton 396. 3. Alpine 410. 4. Ozona 413. 5. Kermit 417. 6. McCamey 451. 7. Reagan County 'B' 492. 8. Midland Christian 507.

Individuals: 1. Mark Gonzalez, Stanton, 72 (won in playoff). 2. Dennis Carillo, Alpine, 72. 3. Bobby Gunnels 75, Reagan County. 4. Keith Bitner, Reagan County, 77. 5. Kelly Baggett, Reagan County, 78.

Stanton: Mark Gonzales 72. Kevin Glaspie 80. Skip Hopkins 79. Greg Avery 79. Stan Young 86. Rusty Haggard 96.

USFL's Bandits want Schlichter

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The United States Football League's Tampa Bay Bandits are talking to former Ohio State University quarterback Art Schlichter about a job, according to a published report.

The Columbus Dispatch reported Saturday that Schlichter, cut by the Indianapolis Colts of the NFL early last season, is among those players the Bandits are looking at to join the roster with their only quarterback, Jimmy Jordan.

Tampa Bay Personnel Director Tim Ruskell told the newspaper that if Schlichter had not injured his hand and undergone leg surgery in January, he would have appeared at the Bandits' recent tryout camp.

Martina's younger sister requests political asylum

COLOGNE, West Germany (AP) — The younger sister of tennis star Martina Navratilova has asked for political asylum in West Germany, a Cologne newspaper reported.

Jana Navratilova, 23, a native of Czechoslovakia, asked for asylum in Bonn, where she now lives, the Cologne Express newspaper said Friday.

She left Czechoslovakia along with her fiancee, the newspaper said. It did not say when she made the move, nor did it name its sources for the report.

The newspaper said the younger Navratilova traveled to West Germany via Austria with a tourist visa.

It said she has requested a tourist visa from the U.S. Embassy in Bonn on grounds of family reunification. Martina Navratilova, 29, also a native of Czechoslovakia, defected to the United States in 1975 during the U.S. Open tennis tournament and is now a U.S. citizen.

The Cologne Express carried the report in its editions today, but a copy was telexed to news organizations in West Germany on Friday evening.

Reached at her home in Fort Worth, Texas, Martina Navratilova said she was surprised by the report.

"I haven't heard anything new from her lately," the tennis star said. "She was just over here with me.

"She's been in West Germany and as far as I know she's still there. She just wants to live there. I don't know anything about asylum," Martina said.

Bonn government officials could not be reached for comment on the report. A U.S. Embassy spokesman said he had no knowledge of an application for a U.S. tourist visa by the younger Navratilova, but said he normally would not be informed of such a matter.

Crites tips Aulby to win in Toledo

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Tom Crites of Tampa, Fla., defeated defending champion Mike Aulby of Indianapolis 190-184 here Saturday to win the $235,000 Toledo Trust PBA National Championship.

Crites, 24, who was top-seeded, won $45,000 and his first Professional Bowlers Association title. Aulby, 26, who was seeded third, won $25,000 for second place.

"I got off to a slow start and hung tough," Crites said. "I hung close and tried to make good shots and it worked out. The money was no doubt in mind. I figured I had $25,000 locked up (for second place), and the rest of that was bonus bucks."

Rockets win without Sampson

Associated Press

LANDOVER, Md. — Allen Leavell scored a season-high 28 points Saturday night to lead Houston to a 114-109 NBA victory over the Washington Bullets, the Rockets' second in three games without forward Ralph Sampson.

Houston increased its Midwest Division lead to two games over Denver behind a balanced attack with six players in double figures. That overcame another outstanding performance by Bullets guard Jeff Malone, who scored 34 points, including 25 of Washington's 51 second-half points.

Washington jumped to an early 13-1 lead as the Rockets failed to score a basket until Rodney McCray tallied at 7:22 of the first period. But Houston rallied to lead 32-29 at the end of the period. The halftime score 58-58 and remained close throughout the second half.

Bulls 106, Knicks 96

NEW YORK — Michael Jordan scored 14 of his 24 points in the fourth quarter as Chicago outscored the New York Knicks 33-17 in the final period for a 106-96 NBA victory Saturday night, snapping the Bulls' seven-game road losing streak.

An 11-0 New York streak during which Darrell Walker had six points, including two steals and breakaway baskets, had given the Knicks a 79-73 lead going into the final quarter.

But Jordan, playing his best game in eight outings since returning from the injured list on March 14, scored 10 points in the first 5½ minutes of the quarter. Jordan's spurt sparked a 15-6 Chicago run that made it 88-85, a lead the Bulls never lost.

NBA Roundup

Jazz 110, Spurs 102

SAN ANTONIO — Forward Adrian Dantley scored 30 points, including 10 of his team's last 16 points, to rally the Utah Jazz to a win over the San Antonio Spurs.

The loss, San Antonio's 18th in the last 21 games, overshadowed the defensive performance from Spurs guard Alvin Robertson, who tied the NBA's record for steals in a season before fouling out late in the game.

Robertson's five steals gives him 281 for the year. Ironically, the current record holder is Spurs assistant coach Don Buse, who set the mark while playing with the Indiana Pacers in 1976.

Saturday's game, Utah's sixth win in its last seven contests, was close through most of the last period.

The Spurs, who had led by as many as 22 points earlier, fell behind in the last quarter but managed to grab a 97-96 lead with two minutes left when Robertson dunked the ball over Utah's 7-4 Mark Eaton.

Cavaliers 123, Hawks 105

ATLANTA — World B. Free scored a season-high 43 points, including 15 in the fourth quarter, as the Cleveland Cavaliers defeated the Atlanta Hawks.

Cleveland made 64 percent of its field goal attempts and never trailed after taking an 18-17 lead with 6:43 remaining in the first quarter. Atlanta did manage five ties.

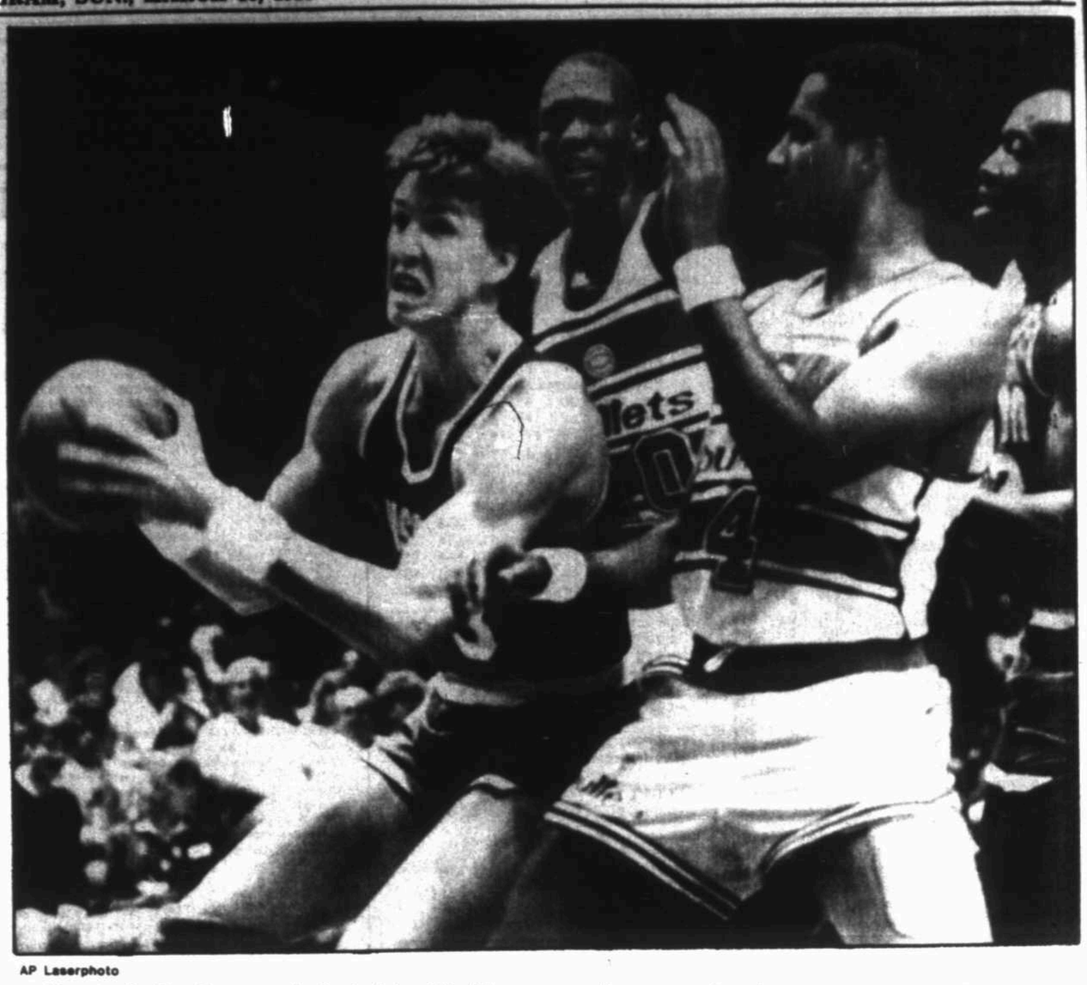

The Cavs led 97-86 with 8:17 left in the game when Atlanta rallied to score six straight points on field goals by Doc Rivers, Kevin Willis and Jon Koncak and pull to within 97-92.

But Free then hit consecutive three-point shots to spark a surge that gave Cleveland an 11-point lead with 5:10 remaining. The Cavs then outscored Atlanta 15-4, including five points by Free, to close out the game.

Bucks 130, Pistons 121

MILWAUKEE — Sidney Moncrief scored 31 points and fueled a fourth-quarter surge as Milwaukee defeated the Detroit Pistons to clinch a share of the Central Division title.

Moncrief scored eight final-period points, including two free throws with 1:11 left. The Bucks and Pistons entered the period tied 100-100 after Earl Cureton scored Detroit's final six points of the third quarter.

Money for 'Horns available from coaches

DALLAS (AP) — University of Texas football coaches routinely doled out small amounts of money to players who said they needed it, a violation of NCAA rules, The Dallas Morning News reported in its Sunday editions.

Sixteen former UT football players said they knew they could go to football coaches when they had money problems, and nine former players claimed they received cash, bank loans, bail money or promises of a loan from Texas coaches, the newspaper reported in its copyright story.

The allegations stemmed from the News' two-month probe into Texas' sports prgoram in which 28 former players were interviewed. Fifteen of those players specifically mentioned Ken Dabbs, recruiting coordinator for the Longhorns from 1975 until 1984, the newspaper reported.

"We used to go by the coaches' office all the time because we were running short ...," said Don Holloway, a Longhorn tailback from 1981 to 1983. "We'd go to (Ken) Dabbs. Sometimes he'd give you the money, or sometimes he'd say, 'Come back later,' and he'd be gone."

Holloway and former Longhorn Robert Smothers said they each received about $300 to $400 from Dabbs.

Dabbs was reportedly on a fishing trip in Mexico, and he did not return messages The Associated Press left on his Austin home's answering maching Saturday night.

But Texas head coach Fred Akers said he did not believe that any Texas coaches, including Dabbs, would give players money.

"I just don't believe that," said Akers. "When a kid comes in to talk to any one of us, Coach Dabbs, or anyone else, about needing some money for whatever reason, I know that we refer them to our financial aid department (or) our student loan committee to see if they qualify there, or some lending institution around town. If they qualify with those lending institutions, that's their business."

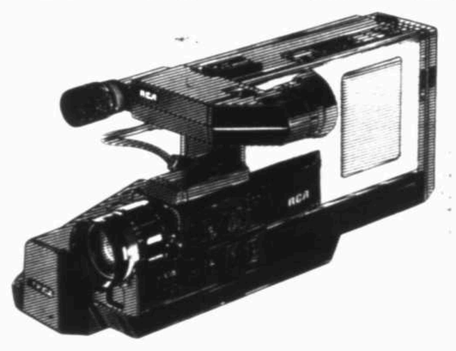

National Collegiate Athletic Association rules forbid student athletes from receiving any benefits beyond the tuition, room, board and books provided by their athletic scholarships.

Players also said they were given money by former defensive coordinator David McWilliams. McWilliams, now head football coach at Texas Tech, says he did not remember the incidents.

The newspaper reported earlier that 24 of the 28 players interviewed routinely sold their complimentary tickets to boosters at inflated prices, some saying they earned $4,000 per season through the sales.

Cardinal Sin of skiing

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

OUTDOORS

Reports of the best snow of the year is the blame.

I broke my Golden Rule of Skiing and committed the Cardinal Sin. The only solace was that Vince Lombardi wasn't around any more to read the Riot Act.

The first Golden Rule of skiing is to "Never, absolutely never, try to ski Sierra Blanca— amended this year to Ski Apache— on a weekend. At least, not unless your intent is to stand in a lift line waiting to get to slopes that resemble a Lee-Permian game on a playoff weekend.

Naturally, I paid the price. Saturday was demoralizing. Sunday was even worse. It was hard to believe that people could exist in such isolation.

Saturday lift companions were hard to find and Sunday there were even fewer companions. And lifts partners are part of the fun of skiing.

It's where you learn what's going on in the world around you, a reflection of the times in which we live, as it were.

One woman disclosed her husband was in the steel business in Fort Worth. "Things are really bad since the oil prices began dropping. I was semiretired, but had to go back to work so we could take a ski trip."

A pattern maker from Kerrville also was hit hard by the effect of the downturn, even in the hill country. "We used to do a lot of work for oil companies, but now I making carousels just to keep busy. You can make souvenirs anywhere, so I'm thinking of moving to Durango, where my son is going to college."

The only wait was when the lift stopped running for a few minutes. Even regulars, or particularly regulars, couldn't believe their good fortune.

FOR THOSE who have followed the adventures of Herr Eng Boen (internationally anonymous slope master who shuns lifts to do it the old-fashioned way) through 60-to-100 mph blizzard winds high up in the Sangre de Cristos or in fog shrouded peaks in his futile search for something called "Spring skiing", the search finally ended in shirtsleeve warmth and searing sunshine. As proof of the discovery, well, when you look down at your toes all week and see only a fat upper lip, you know you've been sunburned.

Although the name has changed, not much is different than a year ago. Oh, they've added a few curves and in a few years the access road should be corkscrewed all the way to Ruidoso.

But Ruidoso is a fun place to ski, perhaps because it's very being defies and contradicts logic and its environment. The southwest desert stretches in every direction to the horizon. Yet in the midst of it is a winter playground.

From atop the mountain, the Llano Estacado stretches into seeming infinity to the east.

To the west, the mountain ranges loom bleak and snowless in the distance. In between the view point atop Apache Bowl and the jagged crests beyond the Rio Grande, White Sands sprawls across the valley floor. The fury man unloosed here 40 years ago affords a frightening dimensional depth to the view that one on a ski lark hestitates to linger over...an advancement for mankind or the prelude to Noah's second ark?

BUT PART of the charm is Ruidoso and the Old West halo that dangles like a waiting noose, if you're imagination gets the best of you. Long-ahired Mescaleros are in evidence every where and on the sun-deck halfway up the mountain, you wonder what their secret is for making plain old hamburgers taste so good.

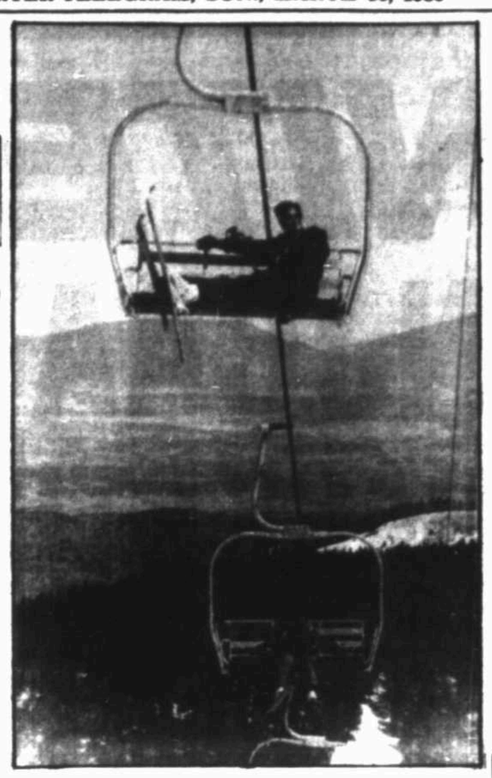

This is Pat Garrett, William Bonney and Lincoln County War country, as anyone who was introduced to territorial New Mexico as a kid by Walter Noble Burns is aware.

It was brought home Sunday upon checking out of the motel.

"Did you get any sleep? It was pretty noisy," the proprietress declared, rather than asked.

"Well, it was for a while."

"I told those two guys they'd have to tone it down, people were trying to sleep," she explained.

Even regulars couldn't believe lack of lines.

"Well, it did get quiet all of a sudden and it was easy to sleep after that," I offered.

"I told them twice to quiet down, but they acted like they didn't even hear me."

"Yes, but they did quiet down. How did you manage it? What happened?" I pursued.

"They shut up when the guy next door came out and waved his gun at them." Her off-handed tone made it sound like it happened every day.

In Billy the Kid country one respects the lessons of the past.

Wulff gets anglers to think like fish

By BILL SCHULZ

ATLANTA (AP) — The thinking angler is the one who really enjoys his sport, according to Lee Wulff, fly fisherman, teacher and creator of the Wulff series of dry flies.

"What I like to do at my school is to get people to think," Wulff said.

"You make the decisions. You say, 'I'm going to do this because water is such and such a temperature, the flow is so fast, he should be here or he should be there, and I know what I'm doing and that makes fishing a wonderful thing.' "

"For 400 years," he said, "we dragged insects with wings on them under the water where no insect would be and no trout would expect to see it. It was 400 years before one of the British said, 'There are no flies under there, they're nymphs. There are crawling insects under there. Use them and you'll catch more fish.'

"Now we fish with nymphs under water and flies on top of the water."

Wulff thinks trophy fish must be allowed to live.

"Every cattle breeder, every horse racer, every one of them knows it's heredity that makes his horses run faster and his cattle grow fatter and we haven't brought that into fish and game," Wulff said.

"In Europe they don't kill their best animals. We kill our best breeding stock. For years and years we killed the biggest fish we could find and we made them all runts.

"It's not that we didn't all love the sport," he said, "and not that fishing hasn't been a wonderful thing, but we didn't respect it, didn't revere it, didn't treat the game with the respect that the Europeans did."

That must change, he said, if future generations are ever going to enjoy wild trout fishing with any hope of landing a large, beautiful fighting fish.

WEST TEXAS OUTDOORS

82 public hearings scheduled by TPWD

TEXAS PARKS and Wildlife Dept. officials have announced public hearings to consider proposed regulation changes for the 1986-87 hunting and fishing seasons will be held at 82 locations during April 1-9.

Among proposals will be a uniform statewide white tailed deer season from Nov. 8, 1986 to Jan. 4, 1987; expanding the number of counties with either sex hunting seasons for white-tailed deer; expanding mule deer season from nine to 16 days and moving the anterless-only white tail season in six South Texas conties from prior to the regular gun season to following the gun season.

Proposed fishing changes include a statewide 14-inch minimum length limit on largemouth black bass, except on reservoirs that have special length limits and except in the Panhandle where the minimum size would be 12 inches; and a statewide crappie bag limit of 25; possession limit 50 (no minimum length limit), except on Toledo Bend and reservoirs with special limits...

Midland County Courthouse will be the site of one of the 82 meeting 7 a.m. April 1....

MULE DEER hunters will have a longer season if a proposal to extend the dates is accepted. The season in all counties offering a mule deer season would be Nov. 22-Dec. 7, or 16 days instead of the nine-day season of last year.

Mule deer populations have increased substantially during the past few years, and only about two percent of the herd is harvested each year.

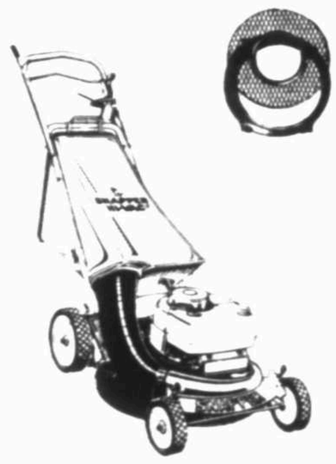

THE MINI-Boat Bass Club of Amarillo held its tournament at Lake Spence and the winning string for the 13 contestants was 20 1/2 pounds..

Cecil Sudduth of Winters took four striped bass going from eight to 19 pounds for one of the week's top catches at Spence...

At Lake Thomas, Odedsa's Tom Couch caught a 4 1/2 pound black bass, but for the most part crappie were providing the action for spring anglers....

Oilers, Islanders in deadlock

Associated Press

UNIONDALE, N.Y. — Jari Kurri's second goal of the game and 64th of the season with 7:08 remaining in the third period gave the Edmonton Oilers a 4-4 overtime tie with New York on Saturday night, a deadlock that enabled the Islanders to clinch third place in the NHL's Patrick Division.

Kurri directed Dave Hunter's pass behind goalie Kelly Hrudey after a snappy cross-ice series of passes with Wayne Gretzky. It marked the third time the two-time Stanley Cup champions erased a one-goal deficit.

Flyers 8, Rangers 2

PHILADELPHIA — Tim Kerr scored twice in a four-goal second period as the Philadelphia Flyers defeated the New York Rangers and moved into a first-place tie with Washington in the Patrick Division.

Washington, which began play one point ahead of Philadelphia, tied Hartford 6-6. Both the Capitals and Flyers have four regular-season games left.

NHL Roundup

Devils 3, Blackhawks 2

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Rich Preston and John MacLean scored second- period goals to break a 1-1 tie and lead the New Jersey Devils to a victory over the Chicago Blackhawks.

Canadiens 4, Penguins 3

MONTREAL — Mike McPhee scored one short-handed goal and set up another as the Montreal Canadiens snapped a seven-game winless streak by edging the Pittsburgh Penguins.

The victory enabled the Canadiens to maintain a two-point lead over Boston in the race for second place in the Adams Division. The Bruins defeated Buffalo 2-1.

North Stars 5, Red Wings 4

DETROIT — Dino Ciccarelli scored three goals as the Minnesota North Stars continued their challenge for the Norris Division title with a victory over the Detroit Red Wings.

Capitals 6, Whalers 6

HARTFORD, Conn. — Larry Murphy scored on a 40-foot slapshot with 2:05 remaining in regulation Saturday night to help the Washington Capitals salvage a tie in an overtime shootout with Hartford and hang on to a piece of first place in the Patrick Division.

The Whalers scored three goals, including two by Kevin Dineen, to take the lead in the third period before Murphy tied the game with his 19th goal of the season.

Maple Leafs 4, Blues 1

TORONTO — Al Iafrate scored two goals as the Toronto Maple Leafs broke a four-game losing streak with a victory over the St. Louis Blues.

Wendel Clark and Steve Thomas scored Toronto's other goals while Kevin LaVallee was the only St. Louis shooter beat goaltender Ken Wregget, who made 27 saves in one of his best performances of the season. Greg Millen stopped 37 shots for the Blues.

Auburn's Jackson innocent victim

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — A Tampa Bay Buccaneers official who helped arrange a plane flight that forced Bo Jackson to end his sports career at Auburn said the Heisman Trophy winner was an innocent victim.

Phil Krueger, assistant to the president of the National Football League franchise, said he spoke with a Southeastern Conference official before Jackson flew to Tampa for a medical exam Tuesday in the private plane of team owner Hugh Culverhouse. The exam was in prepartion for the NFL draft April 29 in which Tampa Bay has the first pick.

"I asked for clarification as to what could take place during Bo's visit," Krueger said. "I was told no negotiations, no talk of money or contracts, no signing of a contract, and no representation of Bo by an agent. We abided by all of those restrictions."

Krueger would not identify the SEC official he talked to, but he said the official did not tell him that SEC rules require a player to forfeit his amateur status if he accepts a plane ride paid for by a professional team.

The rules of the National Collegiate Athletic Association allow a college athlete to be a professional in one sport and an amateur in another. But SEC rules are more stringent.

Jackson's ride forced the senior to be dropped from the baseball team Thursday, Auburn officials said.

Jackson, a standout at Auburn in football and baseball, said he never would have taken the airplane ride had he known it would mean the end of his sports career at Auburn.

"I regret very much that this has happened," said Jackson. "It was an honest mistake. Had I known it would jeopardize my eligibility, I never would have gone. I was under the impression that it was within the rules."

Jackson, a 6-foot-1, 222-pounder who has competed with world class sprinters, led Auburn's baseball team in home runs with seven.

Big Spring wins second straight

From Staff Reports

ABILENE — The Big Spring Steers took advantage of numerous Abilene High mistakes to walk away with their second straight District 4-5A win here Saturday, and put some distance between themselves and the district basement.

The Steers, 2-4, 5-8, could manage only nine hits, but the Eagles contributed eight errors to help Big Spring push across runs in all but one of the seven-inning contest.

Sophomore Jeff Reese was tagged for the loss for the Eagles, now 3-3 in district. Reese allowed just one earned run as the Steers piled up six unearned tallies to take their second consecutive district win. Starter Carey Fraser earned the win with four innings of work, and Mike Dodd earned his second save.

Spartans kings of NCAA ice

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Mike Donnelly's blast from the top of the left circle with 2:51 remaining gave Michigan State a 6-5 victory over Harvard and the 1986 NCAA hockey championship Saturday night.

Donnelly's goal, his 59th of the season, capped a strong third-period comeback by the Spartans, who had trailed for much of the game.

The Spartans did not take the lead for the first time until early in the third period when they scored twice in 69 seconds to go ahead 5-4. They beseiged the Harvard net and prevented the Crimson from getting out of their end for the first three minutes of the period.

With his team trailing 4-3, Brad Hamilton beat Harvard goalie Grant Blair from the left faceoff dot. And Brian McReynolds put Michigan State ahead when he slid a 20-footer into the far corner past Blair's outstretched skate.

However, when Harvard got a chance, it used its speed effectively. Andy Janfaza, flying down left wing, converted a pass in front at 6:37 with a shot over the pads of Spartans' goalie Bob Essensa to tie the game 5-5.

Cougs' Williams says money was offered for silence

HOUSTON (AP) — Former University of Houston basketball star Rob Williams says school interests promised him money after he threatened to go public with claims he received booster payoffs while in college, the Houston Chronicle reported Saturday.

Williams, now playing professional basketball in the Philippines, said the money amounted to the balance of his athletic scholarship, which he surrendered in 1982 when he turned professional, the Chronicle said in its copyright story.

"They gave me the scholarship and stuff back," Williams said, not elaborating on who the "they" was. "Everything got squared away."

The Chronicle quoted two unidentified sources as saying the payment Williams described was believed to be a payoff. One source said the amount exceeded $7,000 and was intended to keep Williams quiet.

"Not only do I not know anything about it, I don't believe it," said Guy V. Lewis, head basketball coach. "I don't believe what you're saying happened."

IF ONLY THE GOVERNMENT SPENT OUR TAX DOLLARS AS SCRUPULOUSLY AS THEY COLLECT THEM.

Last year, the federal government collected over $300 billion in personal income taxes.

Money that was used to take care of the needy. To run the country. And to protect it. But that's not all it was used for.

LAST OF THE BIG-TIME SPENDERS.

Your taxes also went to pay $435 for a $7 hammer. $7,417 for a 1-cent pin. And $511 for a 60-cent light bulb.

In a single year, the government gives away over $5 billion in benefit payments. Totally by mistake.

And the government not managing its money properly costs taxpayers over $2 billion every year.

These incidents of inefficiency and mismanagement are so vast they could fill a book. (To be exact, they fill over 21,000 pages of documents in the President's Private Sector Survey on Cost Control.)

Yet as wasteful as they are, they're not the problem, just the symptoms.

The problem is a system of inefficient government procedures and practices that allows them to happen. Out-dated policies and controls that are out of control and threatening the interests of all Americans.

IS AMERICA GOING TO WASTE AWAY?

America is staring straight down the barrel of a financial disaster. The federal deficit is closing in on $200 billion a year. The national debt has already reached an unimaginable $1.8 trillion.

One of our only chances to head off disaster is to stop wasting our tax dollars.

That's why we formed Citizens Against Government Waste.

WHO AND WHAT IS CITIZENS AGAINST GOVERNMENT WASTE?

Citizens Against Government Waste is a non-profit educational foundation made up of concerned citizens. Democrats, Republicans, Conservatives, Liberals.

Taxpayers just like you, who are extremely concerned with how their tax money is being mismanaged.

To that end, we've established a toll-free phone number: 1-800-USA-DEBT. By calling it, you can receive information that will give you a better understanding of the real magnitude and consequences of government waste. And what you can actually do about it.

So call, or write us at 1511 K Street, N.W., Suite 540, Washington, D.C. 20005. Please.

Because our country can't afford this. And neither can you.

Krueger would not identify the SEC official he talked to, but he said the official did not tell him that SEC rules require a player to forfeit his amateur status if he accepts a plane ride paid for by a professional team.

The rules of the National Collegiate Athletic Association allow a college athlete to be a professional in one sport and an amateur in another. But SEC rules are more stringent.

Jackson's ride forced the senior to be dropped from the baseball team Thursday, Auburn officials said.

Jackson, a standout at Auburn in football and baseball, said he never would have taken the airplane ride had he known it would mean the end of his sports career at Auburn.

"I regret very much that this has happened," said Jackson. "It was an honest mistake. Had I known it would jeopardize my eligibility, I never would have gone. I was under the impression that it was within the rules."

Jackson, a 6-foot-1, 222-pounder who has competed with world class sprinters, led Auburn's baseball team in home runs with seven.

Big Spring wins second straight

From Staff Reports

ABILENE — The Big Spring Steers took advantage of numerous Abilene High mistakes to walk away with their second straight District 4-5A win here Saturday, and put some distance between themselves and the district basement.

The Steers, 2-4, 5-8, could manage only nine hits, but the Eagles contributed eight errors to help Big Spring push across runs in all but one of the seven-inning contest.

Sophomore Jeff Reese was tagged for the loss for the Eagles, now 3-3 in district. Reese allowed just one earned run as the Steers piled up six unearned tallies to take their second consecutive district win. Starter Carey Fraser earned the win with four innings of work, and Mike Dodd earned his second save.

Spartans kings of NCAA ice

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Mike Donnelly's blast from the top of the left circle with 2:51 remaining gave Michigan State a 6-5 victory over Harvard and the 1986 NCAA hockey championship Saturday night.

Donnelly's goal, his 59th of the season, capped a strong third-period comeback by the Spartans, who had trailed for much of the game.

The Spartans did not take the lead for the first time until early in the third period when they scored twice in 69 seconds to go ahead 5-4. They beseiged the Harvard net and prevented the Crimson from getting out of their end for the first three minutes of the period.

With his team trailing 4-3, Brad Hamilton beat Harvard goalie Grant Blair from the left faceoff dot. And Brian McReynolds put Michigan State ahead when he slid a 20-footer into the far corner past Blair's outstretched skate.

However, when Harvard got a chance, it used its speed effectively. Andy Janfaza, flying down left wing, converted a pass in front at 6:37 with a shot over the pads of Spartans' goalie Bob Essensa to tie the game 5-5.

Cougs' Williams says money was offered for silence

HOUSTON (AP) — Former University of Houston basketball star Rob Williams says school interests promised him money after he threatened to go public with claims he received booster payoffs while in college, the Houston Chronicle reported Saturday.

Williams, now playing professional basketball in the Philippines, said the money amounted to the balance of his athletic scholarship, which he surrendered in 1982 when he turned professional, the Chronicle said in its copyright story.

"They gave me the scholarship and stuff back," Williams said, not elaborating on who the "they" was. "Everything got squared away."

The Chronicle quoted two unidentified sources as saying the payment Williams described was believed to be a payoff. One source said the amount exceeded $7,000 and was intended to keep Williams quiet.

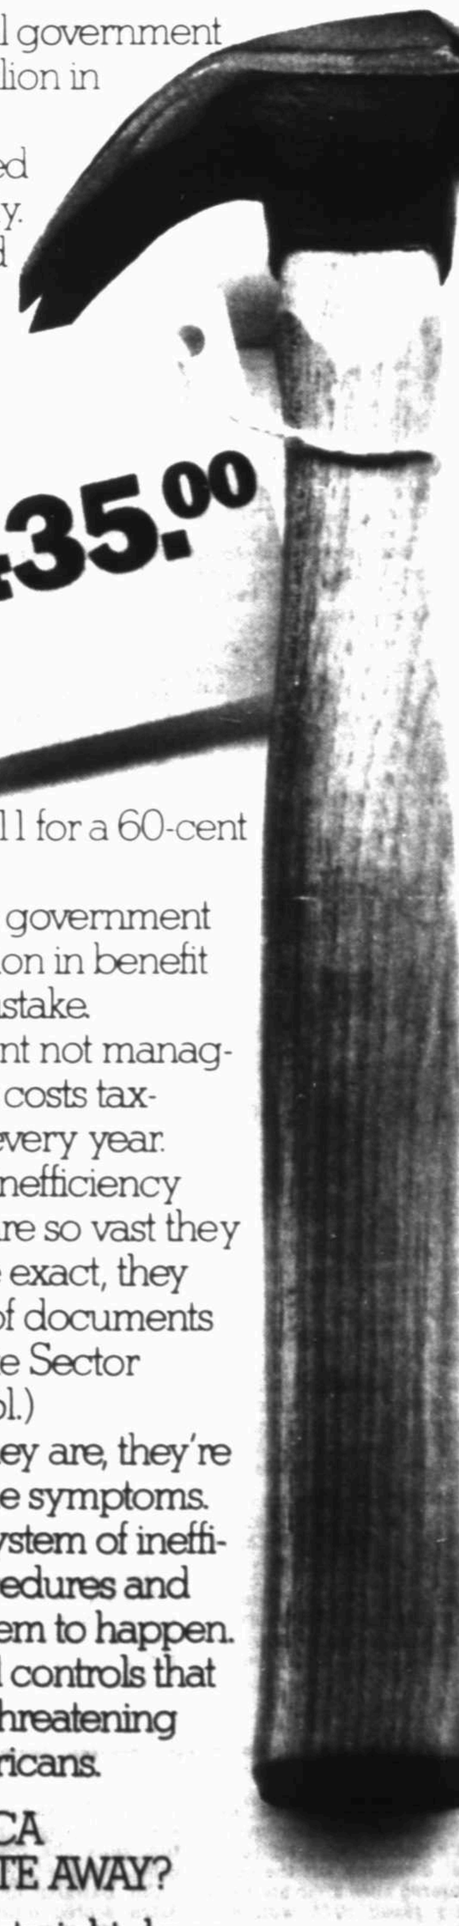

"Not only do I not know anything about it, I don't believe it," said Guy V. Lewis, head basketball coach. "I don't believe what you're saying happened."

IF ONLY THE GOVERNMENT SPENT OUR TAX DOLLARS AS SCRUPULOUSLY AS THEY COLLECT THEM.

Last year, the federal government collected over $300 billion in personal income taxes.

Money that was used to take care of the needy. To run the country. And to protect it. But that's not all it was used for.

LAST OF THE BIG-TIME SPENDERS.

Your taxes also went to pay $435 for a $7 hammer. $7,417 for a 1-cent pin. And $511 for a 60-cent light bulb.

In a single year, the government gives away over $5 billion in benefit payments. Totally by mistake.

And the government not managing its money properly costs taxpayers over $2 billion every year.

These incidents of inefficiency and mismanagement are so vast they could fill a book. (To be exact, they fill over 21,000 pages of documents in the President's Private Sector Survey on Cost Control.)

Yet as wasteful as they are, they're not the problem, just the symptoms.

The problem is a system of inefficient government procedures and practices that allows them to happen. Out-dated policies and controls that are out of control and threatening the interests of all Americans.

Oilers, Islanders in deadlock

Associated Press

UNIONDALE, N.Y. — Jari Kurri's second goal of the game and 64th of the season with 7:08 remaining in the third period gave the Edmonton Oilers a 4-4 overtime tie with New York on Saturday night, a deadlock that enabled the Islanders to clinch third place in the NHL's Patrick Division.

Kurri directed Dave Hunter's pass behind goalie Kelly Hrudey after a snappy cross-ice series of passes with Wayne Gretzky. It marked the third time the two-time Stanley Cup champions erased a one-goal deficit.

Flyers 8, Rangers 2

PHILADELPHIA — Tim Kerr scored twice in a four-goal second period as the Philadelphia Flyers defeated the New York Rangers and moved into a first-place tie with Washington in the Patrick Division. Washington, which began play one point ahead of Philadelphia, tied Hartford 6-6. Both the Capitals and Flyers have four regular-season games left.

NHL Roundup

Devils 3, Blackhawks 2

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Rich Preston and John MacLean scored second- period goals to break a 1-1 tie and lead the New Jersey Devils to a victory over the Chicago Blackhawks.

Canadiens 4, Penguins 3

MONTREAL — Mike McPhee scored one short-handed goal and set up another as the Montreal Canadiens snapped a seven-game winless streak by edging the Pittsburgh Penguins.

The victory enabled the Canadiens to maintain a two-point lead over Boston in the race for second place in the Adams Division. The Bruins defeated Buffalo 2-1.

North Stars 5, Red Wings 4

DETROIT — Dino Ciccarelli scored three goals as the Minnesota North Stars continued their challenge for the Norris Division title with a victory over the Detroit Red Wings.

Capitals 6, Whalers 6

HARTFORD, Conn. — Larry Murphy scored on a 40-foot slapshot with 2:05 remaining in regulation Saturday night to help the Washington Capitals salvage a tie in an overtime shootout with Hartford and hang on to a piece of first place in the Patrick Division.

The Whalers scored three goals, including two by Kevin Dineen, to take the lead in the third period before Murphy tied the game with his 19th goal of the season.

Maple Leafs 4, Blues 1

TORONTO — Al Iafrate scored two goals as the Toronto Maple Leafs broke a four-game losing streak with a victory over the St. Louis Blues.

Wendel Clark and Steve Thomas scored Toronto's other goals while Kevin LaVallee was the only St. Louis shooter beat goaltender Ken Wregget, who made 27 saves in one of his best performances of the season. Greg Millen stopped 37 shots for the Blues.

Auburn's Jackson innocent victim

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — A Tampa Bay Buccaneers official who helped arrange a plane flight that forced Bo Jackson to end his sports career at Auburn said the Heisman Trophy winner was an innocent victim.

Phil Krueger, assistant to the president of the National Football League franchise, said he spoke with a Southeastern Conference official before Jackson flew to Tampa for a medical exam Tuesday in the private plane of team owner Hugh Culverhouse. The exam was in prepartion for the NFL draft April 29 in which Tampa Bay has the first pick.

"I asked for clarification as to what could take place during Bo's visit," Krueger said. "I was told no negotiations, no talk of money or contracts, no signing of a contract, and no representation of Bo by an agent. We abided by all of those restrictions."

Krueger would not identify the SEC official he talked to, but he said the official did not tell him that SEC rules require a player to forfeit his amateur status if he accepts a plane ride paid for by a professional team.

The rules of the National Collegiate Athletic Association allow a college athlete to be a professional in one sport and an amateur in another. But SEC rules are more stringent.

Jackson's ride forced the senior to be dropped from the baseball team Thursday, Auburn officials said.

Jackson, a standout at Auburn in football and baseball, said he never would have taken the airplane ride had he known it would mean the end of his sports career at Auburn.

"I regret very much that this has happened," said Jackson. "It was an honest mistake. Had I known it would jeopardize my eligibility, I never would have gone. I was under the impression that it was within the rules."

Jackson, a 6-foot-1, 222-pounder who has competed with world class sprinters, led Auburn's baseball team in home runs with seven.

Lady Longhorns one win shy of perfection

By CHARLES WOLFE

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Top-ranked Texas and ambitious Southern California, a pair of star-quality teams in a high-stakes rematch, meet Sunday for the NCAA championship in what the coaches hope will be a showcase for their sport.

Texas, at 33-0, places a perfect record as well as the No. 1 ranking on the line. Third-ranked Southern Cal, 31-4, is led by former Olympian and four-time All-American Cheryl Miller.

Each team made it to the final with lopsided victories in Friday's semifinals — the Lady Longhorns stampeding past local favorite Western Kentucky 90-65 and Southern Cal whipping Tennessee 83-59.

"This is a dream come true for women's basketball. You couldn't ask for two finer teams," Southern Cal Coach Linda Sharp said Saturday.

"I was hoping this game would be worthy of women's basketball and I think it truly will be," said Texas Coach Jody Conradt.

Women's NCAA Final

THE LADY Longhorns pummeled the Women of Troy 94-78 in a game at Austin, Texas, in December. But everyone involved at a news conference Saturday said the first game should be disregarded as either an indicator of Southern Cal's talent or a motive for vengeance.

"We played at home and we played about as well as a team could play," Conradt said.

Miller, a 6-foot-3 senior forward who averages 26 points per game and scored 31 against Texas, said the loss "has nothing to do with this game coming up."

"We just didn't show up," Miller said. "But I'll tell you, Texas is a tough team."

Texas features depth and superbly balanced scoring and the Lady Longhorns' statistics suggest no superstar. But their checkmate for Miller is Annette Smith, a 5-11 senior center who said Miller "shows me how good I can play defense."

"ANNETTE HAS to be one of the best small centers in the country," Miller said. "She's a great defensive player, a great offense player and she's right when she says I bring out the best in her."

Smith, a 10.6-point scorer on the season, had 22 in the December game.

Kamie Ethridge, a 5-5 senior, and Beverly Williams, a 5-8 sophomore, team at guard for Texas. They average 5.3 and 11.6 points, respectively.

Smith's partners on the front line are 6-2 junior Andrea Lloyd and 6-foot senior Fran Harris. Lloyd averages 9.4 points and a team-high 7.6 rebounds. Harris is the team's leading scorer at 13.8 points per game.

The top reserve is Clarissa Davis, a 6-1 freshman forward who averages 13.2 points and 7.5 rebounds. Davis came off the bench to roll up 32 points and 18 rebounds against Western Kentucky, but Conradt said she would not subject her freshman star to the pressure of a starting job in the NCAA final.

Cynthia Cooper, a 5-9 senior averaging 16.9 points, and Rhonda Windham, a 5-5 junior averaging 8.9 points, form the backcourt for the Women of Troy.

Emotional loss drains Jays

DALLAS (AP) — Danny Manning and Greg Dreiling, the two big men Kansas looks up to for scoring and rebounding, spent much of their time Saturday night sitting down. And down with them went the Jayhawks' hopes for an NCAA basketball title.

With the 6-foot-11 Manning and the 7-0 Dreiling troubled by fouls most of the night, Kansas was beaten by the Duke Blue Devils 71-67 in the semifinals.

"I'm emotionless right now," said Dreiling, a senior who scored only six points in his final game for the Jayhawks. "This has been quite an ordeal. I just don't know what to feel at this point."

"I felt frustrated to be on the bench," said Dreiling, who has had foul problems all season. "That's not where you want to be. You want to be out there helping somebody. It's just something you have to live with."

Dreiling fouled out with 5:41 to play, and the game still on the line.

Manning, who was voted the Player of the Year in the Big Eight Conference and was the Most Valuable Player in the league's postseason tournament, hit only two of nine field goal attempts for four points. He drew two quick fouls, played only seven minutes in the first half and fouled out with 4:23 to play. "It really hurts to lose this one," said Manning, a sophomore who led Kansas in scoring this year with a 17.1 average. "We wanted to go all the way.

"I get tired of saying 'wait until next year.' Personally, everybody has expectations of himself. It's kind of hard to take this year, to end it this way."

Kansas Coach Larry Brown said he was pleased his team was in contention although two of his principal players hit a combined three of 16 from the field and 11 rebounds between them.

"When you have two kids that struggled like that, you wouldn't think we'd be in the game," Brown said. "I think it's a credit to our team that we were able to be in the game at the end."

Asked if he considered leaving Manning in the game in the first half, Brown said no.

"That's the way I coach," he said. "If we had gotten down by six or eight, Danny would have been back in the game. But I wanted to save him, if possible."

LSU follows big man out of NCAA tourney

By DAVID MCCORMICK

DALLAS (AP) — As John Williams went, so went Louisiana State — out of the NCAA tournament.

The 6-foot-8 forward, LSU's best player, scored 12 points in the first half Saturday as the Tigers took a 44-36 lead over favored Louisville. But double-teamed in the second half and barely able to get off a shot, he scored just two more points as Louisville rallied for an 88-77 victory.

That ended the run of four straight tournament upsets for the Final Four's only unranked team.

"I don't know what happened," a sullen Williams told reporters before slipping out of the dressing room. "Sometimes I was inside and they double-teamed me."

Coach Dale Brown said the keys to the defeat were the inability of the defense to stop Louisville's offense and Williams' problems. The other LSU players concurred.

"They knew he was the heart of us," center Ricky Blanton said of Williams. "They wanted to split our heart and that's what happened."

GUARD DERRICK Taylor said the pressure on Williams caused the other players to attempt some questionable shots.

"It kind of threw us out of our game plan," Taylor said. "That put them into the position to get their rebounds and start their fast break."

"I thought we played as hard as we possibly could — you can't expect any more," he said. "We played with everything we had. I'm heartbroken we didn't win it, but there will be another time, hopefully."

The magic that Brown had talked so much about during the week before the game fell apart in the final period.

THE MOOD inside the dressing room was somber but the spirit was not broken.

"I'm hurting now because I thought we had a chance to win, but at least we showed that we contenders," said junior guard Anthony Wilson.

"I thought we did some things a lot of people didn't expect us to do," said Taylor. "We played well. I couldn't be happier."

"The chemistry on this team is the best that I've ever been around," added Wilson.

The Final Four appearance was made all the sweeter by the Tigers' celebrated adversity during the season, including the loss of key players to injury, ineligibility and even an outbreak of chicken pox.

"It's really been a great achievement for a group of guys that have gone through so much adversity," said Don Redden, a senior who led the Tigers with 22 points Saturday.

"This has by far been the funnest year since I've been here," Redden added. "It's a great way to go out."

LSU'S PERFORMANCE disproved those who said the Tigers had no business in Dallas, Brown said. "They outhustled a lot of people," he said. "Whether or not anybody thought we belonged here, we were here."

"I'm heartbroken we didn't win it, but I think these guys still know they can dream," Brown concluded.

"Pervis is a freshman, and you put him under the competition and ask him to play 40 minutes really well, and that's an awful lot," Crum said. "I said, 'Nobody expects you to make miracles. Just get in there and hustle.' He did that and he got a lot of quick rebounds and got a couple of baskets in the stretch."

Senior forward Billy Thompson, who keyed Louisville with 22 points and 10 rebounds, said the help from Ellison and Crook in the second half made his job a lot easier.

"They outrebounded us in the first half and that really hurt us," Thompson said.

Duke frosh shines through senior shadows

By TOM FOREMAN

DALLAS (AP) — Seniors like Johnny Dawkins have led Duke through the NCAA basketball tournament, but it was freshman Danny Ferry who put the Blue Devils into the championship game against Louisville.

Ferry picked up a loose ball in the lane and scored on a layup with 23 seconds left Saturday, giving Duke the lead for good and sending the Blue Devils to a 71-67 victory over Kansas in a semifinal game.

Needless to say, the 6-foot-11 Ferry was a little dazed by his heroics.

"I don't remember much about it. I'm still in a daze," Ferry said.

Ferry, the object of an intense recruiting battle within the Atlantic Coast Conference, was also involved in another key play. After his basket, Ferry drew a charging foul from Jayhawk Ron Kellogg. Ferry said that was the only option he had to prevent a Kansas basket.

"Next time down, Kellogg drove the lane. There wasn't much I could do," Ferry said. "I'm not a shot blocker."

FOR A moment, it appeared Ferry would be charged with a blocking foul, but the officials saw it the way Ferry saw it.

"I knew I was there. I really didn't have to worry about it at all," Ferry said.

While Ferry was the key in the stretch, it was Dawkins who kept Duke alive. The All-America guard scored 24 points and his follow shot with 1:49 remaining tied the score at 67-67, setting the stage for Ferry.

"Senior leadership was evident. We didn't panic, we settled down and took the good shots and got back in it," Dawkins said.

It was Dawkins who, literally, had a hand in setting up Ferry's basket. He was chasing an errant Mark Alarie jumper but couldn't get control of the ball.

"I just remember me and Cedric (Kansas guard Cedric Hunter) went up for it," Dawkins said. "I was mad because I didn't grab it. I wasn't trying to hit the ball to a specific spot."

THROUGHOUT THE NCAA Tournament, Dawkins has been the catalyst for the Duke offense, averaging more than 25 points per game in the postseason. He says while teammates can do the job, he wants to handle the close situations himself.

"You have to really want the ball. A lot of times on transition I've been able to create some things," Dawkins said.

Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski got a slight scare in the second half when Dawkins appeared to have suffered a hand injury. His fears were later eased when it was discovered that Dawkins' only problem was hitting the funny bone in his elbow.

"With 4:18 to go, Johnny was talking about his hand," Krzyzewski said, "and I said, 'Forget your hand, forget everything. Take your shot.'"

Dawkins scored two baskets after that advice and it was the start of Duke's first trip to a championship game in eight years.

Ferry was thankful to have played his part.

"All year, the seniors have been doing it," Ferry said. "I was just happy to get my chance."

Who's best, Duke or Cards? We'll find out Monday night

By HAL BOCK

NCAA Final

DALLAS (AP) — Two red-hot basketball teams, both fueled by outstanding senior players, duel for the NCAA basketball championship Monday night.

Duke's attack is constructed around its guards, Dawkins, an All American, and junior Tommy Amaker, arguably the best backcourt in the nation. They will be starting their 105th game together and the Blue Devils have lost only 20 times in the three years since they first teamed up.

Amaker, a 6-foot, 155-pound junior, had six assists against Kansas, pushing his total for the season to 234, a school record. He has led the team in steals and assists for three straight years and dropped in the clinching foul shots at the end of the game against Kansas.

The 6-2 Dawkins, winner of the 1986 Naismith Award and Duke's career scoring leader with 2,532 points, has been on a tear during the tournament, averaging 26 points per game. He hit 11 of 17 shots Saturday night.

THEY WILL work against a pair of taller Louisville seniors, 6-5 Wagner and 6-4 Jeff Hall.

Wagner, a fifth-year player, came back from a broken right foot that kept him out last year and led Louisville with 14.8 points per game this season. He had a career-high 11 assists against LSU.

Hall had 14 points on 6-for-11 shooting against LSU, maintaining his 56 percent tournament accuracy. He's also a zone-buster with a fine outside shot, and a good ballhandler.

Duke starts three seniors up front with 6-8 Jay Bilas at center, flanked by 6-5 David Henderson and 6-8 Mark Alarie.

Louisville counters with Thompson, a 6-7 senior, and 6-7 sophomore Herbert Crook on the wings, surrounding 6-9 freshman Pervis Ellison.

THE CENTER matchup has Bilas, a hard-working, high-percentage shooter, against Ellison, the only freshman starter on either team.

Bilas leads Duke with 59.3 shooting accuracy but he is not a big scorer.

Ellison had 11 points and a more important 13 rebounds against LSU, as well as his team-leading 90th blocked shot of the season.

Henderson is Duke's No. 3 scorer with 14 points per game in his first year as a starter.

Alarie, who will be starting his 130th consecutive game, leads the club with better than six rebounds per game. He had eight against Kansas to go with 12 points.

THOMPSON WAS almost perfect from the field against LSU, missing just one of 11 attempts, and grabbing 10 rebounds. He is the only player in Louisville history to be among the school's top 10 in career scoring, rebounding and assists.

Crook continued his sizzling tournament play by hitting eight of 13 from the field against LSU, giving him 27 for 51 in five games. He also had nine rebounds.

LSU built a quick 11-4 lead two minutes into the game with Redden's three-point play to open the scoring and baskets by Williams and Derrick Taylor off steals.

With Thompson suddenly asserting himself, getting Louisville's next three field goals, the Cardinals began establishing inside control.

But with LSU going inside to Williams on almost every trip downcourt and the 6-foot-8 sophomore forward bulling his way under the basket, the Tigers managed to stay even with or ahead of Louisville.

DUKE

"That's the way I coach," Brown said. "If we had gotten down by six or eight, Danny would have been back in the game. But I wanted to save him, if possible."

"I get tired of saying 'wait until next year,'" Manning said. "Personally, everybody has expectations of himself. It's kind of hard to take this year, to end it this way."

Ron Kellogg, a 6-5 forward, paced the Jayhawks with 22 points, and Calvin Thompson, a senior guard, and Archie Marshall each added 13.

Marshall, a reserve, left the game with an injured knee after his layup put Kansas ahead 59-55 with 8:10 remaining.

Henderson, one of four seniors who make up the nucleus of the Duke team, hit five of six free throws and Amaker one to put Duke ahead 61-59 with 6:25 left. Dreiling's two free throws and consecutive baskets by Kellogg and Manning, his first since the first basket of the game, put the Jayhawks up 65-61.

But Dawkins hit a jumper and Alarie scored inside to pull Duke even at 65-all. Manning picked up his fifth foul on the play, but Alarie failed to convert the free throw.

But Thompson's basket was followed by Dawkins' rebound to tie it again at 67-67 with 1:49 remaining.

Twins snap skid with win over Astros, 5-3

Associated Press

KISSIMMEE, Fla. — Minnesota left-hander Frank Viola scattered five hits over six innings to help the Twins beat the Houston Astros 5-3 Saturday in an exhibition baseball game.

The victory snapped a five-game losing streak for the Twins and halted a five-game winning streak for the Astros.

Losing pitcher Bob Knepper, 0-1, became the first Astro to work seven innings this spring. Knepper had given up only a single to Viola in the third before running into problems in the fifth inning.

Minnesota scored all five runs with five hits, but only two were earned.

The win upped the Twins record to 10-12, while the Astros fell to 8-13.

White Sox 12, Tigers 8

SARASOTA, Fla. — Ron Kittle collected three hits, including his second home run of the spring, and drove in four runs to carry the Chicago White Sox past the Detroit Tigers in a split-squad game.

Kittle, the designated hitter, raised his spring average to .350. He has struck out only three times in 60 at bats.

Bryan Little and Jerry Hairston also homered for the White Sox.

Kirk Gibson slammed two homers for Detroit, giving him six for the spring. Mike Laga also homered for the Tigers, his eighth.

The White Sox announced two roster moves after the game. They optioned catcher Scott Bradley to Class AAA Buffalo and sent left-handed pitcher Bryan Clark to their minor league camp for reassignment.

Expos 3, Orioles 2

MIAMI — The Montreal Expos took advantage of loose defensive play by the Baltimore Orioles to register a victory.

The Expos, 7-13, scored all of their runs off losing pitcher Storm Davis, who allowed five hits in the first four innings.

Bryn Smith, who gave up only three hits and one run in five innings, was the winning pitcher. Bert Roberge and George Riley finished up for the winners, pitching two innings each.

Tim Raines led Montreal with three hits, opening the game with a double and reaching third on an infield out. Andre Dawson followed with a soft bouncer to the mound and Raines appeared to be trapped off third base. But Davis threw to first, allowing the run to score.

An inning later, Vance Law singled with one out, stole second, went to third on a ground out and scored on a wild pitch. The Expos got their final run in the fourth when Hubie Brooks scored on a squeeze bunt by Law. Brooks and Law both had two hits.

Mets 6, Pirates 3

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Rick Aguilera scattered eight hits over six innings, drove in a run and scored another in New York's five-run second inning outburst that carried the Mets to a victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Gary Carter ignited the Mets' rally with a leadoff double in the second and GeorgeFoster drew a one-out walk. Rookie Kevin Mitchell's run-scoring single made it 1-0. Augilera and Len Dykstra followed with RBI singles and Tim Teufel capped the surge with a two-run single.

All the damage came off Pirates' starter Bob Walk, 1-1. Aguilera improved his record to 1-1, despite giving up a two-run homer to Joe Orsulak in the fifth and an RBI single to Denny Gonzalez in the sixth.

Ed Lynch and Roger McDowell held the Pirates scoriess the rest of the way, with Lynch allowing one hit in two innings and McDowell getting out of the ninth without allowing a run after giving up two hits.

Red Sox 9, Tigers 5, 11 innings

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. — Rookie outfielder Mike Greenwell belted a bases-loaded homer with two out in the 11th inning to lift the Boston Red Sox to a victory over the Detroit Tigers.

Greenwell, who replaced Jim Rice at the start of the 11th, lined Randy O'Neal's first pitch 400 feet over the right-field wall.

With one out in the 11th, Steve Lyons, who doubled home the tying run off Willie Hernandez in the eighth, beat out a bunt and stole second. O'Neal walked John Christensen and, after Wade Boggs grounded out, Dave Stapleton walked, filling the bases. Greenwell then drilled his first spring homer in 30 times at bat.

Minor leaguer Jeff Hermann, debuting in a Detroit uniform as the Tigers split their squad to play both the Chicago White Sox and Boston, hit a two-run homer to cap a five-run third inning against rookie Jeff Sellers.

The Red Sox got three runs back in their half of the third on a walk, the first of three hit by Lyons, and Dwight Evans' first homer of the year.

Detroit starter Eric King was nicked for another run in the sixth before giving way to Hernandez, who allowed three hits in two innings. Bill Scherrer pitched the ninth before being replaced by O'Neal.

Blue Jays 6, Phillies 4

DUNEDIN, Fla. — Non-roster outfielder Rick Leach hit a two-run homer in the eighth inning to break a 4-4 tie and give the Toronto Blue Jays a over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Leach, who is trying to make the Blue Jays after being the final cut last year, had his third game-winning RBI this spring.

The victory improved Toronto's Grapefruit League record to 12-8, while visiting Philadelphia slipped to 10-9.

The Phillies went up 1-0 in the top of the third on a triple by John Russell and a groundout by Steve Jeltz. They added their second run in the fourth on a triple by Glenn Wilson and an RBI single by Von Hayes. The Jays came back with in the fourth when Rance Mulliniks singled and eventually came home when Garth Iorg grounded into a double play.

Toronto tied the game at 2-2 in the fifth inning on singles by Jesse Barfield, Cecil Fielder and Whitt.

The Phillies regained the lead in the seventh on singles by Hayes and Joe Lefebvre, and a groundout by Jeltz. The Jays went ahead 4-3 in the bottom of the seventh as Fielder drove in two runs with his third home run of the spring.

The Phillies pulled even in the eighth on a solo home run by Wilson.

Quirk uses ninth inning heroics to beat Rangers

Associated Press

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. — Jamie Quirk's two-out, three-run ninth-inning homer snapped a 2-2 tie and carried the Kansas City Royals to a 5-2 exhibition baseball victory over the Texas Rangers Saturday.

Quirk's home run off losing pitcher Dwayne Henry came only moments after Lonnie Smith tied the game with a solo homer. It was the second straight game in which the Ranger bullpen had blown a lead in the ninth.

Texas rookie right-hander Jose Guzman worked seven shutout innings, allowing only one hit. Ranger starters Guzman, Bobby Witt, Edwin Correa and Mike Mason have combined to allow only six hits and one run in their last 22 innings.

Don Slaught and George Right hit solo homers for the Rangers.

Kansas City reliever Dan Quisenberry recorded the win as the Royals lifted their spring record to 7-10. The Rangers are 11-8.

Yankees 4, Braves 3

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — Former Midland Angel Henry Cotto's two-run double in the bottom of the ninth inning off Craig McMurty lifted the New York Yankees past the Atlanta Braves.

Cotto's game-winning drive, his third hit of the game, came with none out after the Yankees had loaded the bases on a walk to Dan Pasqua. McMurtry's wild throw on a bunt by Mike Pagliarulo and a bunt single by Bobby Meacham.

The Yankees had opened the scoring in the first inning on singles by Cotto, Willie Randolph and Mike Easler, in his first at-bat with New York after being obtained Friday in a trade with Boston. Gary Roenicke homered in the sixth for the Yankees.

The Braves scored all their runs in the eighth off Brian Fisher. Doubles by Kelly Heath and Omar Moreno produced the first run. Moreno, who had reached third when second baseman Randolph bobbled the throw to the infield on his hit, scored on a sacrifice fly by Andres Thomas.

Two walks and a double by Gerald Perry accounted for the third run of the inning.

Rookie Bob Tewksbury pitched six scoreless innings for the Yankees, giving him a string of 13 consecutive scoreless innings. After the game, New York Manager Lou Piniella said Tewskbury had won a job in the starting rotation and would pitch the fourth game of the season.

Angels 8, Mariners 2

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. — Rookie first baseman Wally Joyner had three hits, including a home run, and Reggie Jackson, Rob Wilfong and Ruppert Jones drove in two runs each as the California Angels pounded out a victory over the Seattle Mariners.

Right-hander Jim Slaton blanked the Mariners on two hits for five innings to earn the victory as the Angels improved their Cactus League record to 12-10. Seattle is 10-11 this spring.

Jackson's two-run single off Mike Moore gave California a 2-0 lead and the Angels added four more runs in the sixth.

Joyner, who'd already singled in the first and third innings, led off with his second homer. Wilfong's two-run triple and Bob Boone's run-scoring double capped the rally.

Danny Tartabull's two-run homer off reliever Donnie Moore in the top of the seventh inning averted the shutout. Jones singled for two runs in the bottom of the eighth off Steve Fireovid to complete the scoring.

Joyner's 3-for-5 performance raised his spring average to .465. The lone California player to have played all 22 exhibition games, Joyner has 31 hits, 13 more than any teammate has.

Joyner had a pair of four-hit games earlier in the week and has 12 hits in his last 18 at-bats.

Brewers 6, Indians 5

CHANDLER, Ariz — Jim Gantner and Rob Deer each hit two-run singles in a five-run Milwaukee fifth inning as the Brewers defeated Cleveland.

The Brewers entered the inning trailing Cleveland starter Tom Candiotti 3-1. Rick Cerone reached base when hit by a Candiotti pitch. He went to third on Mike Felder's single to left. Cerone scored on Manning's grounder to short and Felder was forced at second for the inning's first out. Manning stole second, then went to third on a wild pitch. Paul Molitor was walked, and stole second base. It was one of three for Molitor in the game, in which Milwaukee logged seven steals.

Candiotto, whose preseason record fell to 1-2, walked Jim Adduci to load the bases, and was relieved by Dickie Noles. Noles struck out David Green, but Gantner singled to right, scoring Manning and Molitor and giving the Brewers their first lead, 4-3. Deer's single drove in Adduci and Gantner, making it 6-3.

Braves 9, Dodgers 2

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — Rick Mahler and Bruce Sutter scattered eight hits, and Billy Sample knocked in four runs as the Atlanta Braves beat the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Mahler, who is slated to be Atlanta's starting pitcher in the Braves' regular-season opener, worked seven innings, allowing two runs and six hits. Sutter, pitching two consecutive innings for the first time since undergoing shoulder surgery, allowed two hits, one walk and struck out one in relief.

Sample hit a leadoff home run for Atlanta. He drove in another run with an infield single in the second inning and had two RBI with an eighth-inning single.

Dale Murphy hit a two-run homer for the Braves in the seventh inning.

Cubs 4, Giants 1

MESA, Ariz. — Rick Sutcliffe struck out eight and held San Francisco to one run in six innings as the Chicago Cubs downed the Giant.

Sutcliffe gave up six hits in evening his record at 1-1.

Matt Keough pitched two scoreless innings in relief and Lee Smith picked up his third save by striking out the side in the ninth.

The Cubs scored three unearned runs en route to improving their Cactus League record to 9-15.

Bob Dernier led off the first with a double and moved to third on Davey Lopes' sacrifice before Sandburg drove him home with a fielder's-choice grounder.

The Cubs added two unearned runs in the third inning off losing pitcher Mike Krukow (1-2). Lopes singled and stole second before center fielder Dan Gladden dropped a deep fly ball hit by Sandburg. Keith Moreland hit a sacrifice fly to score Sandburg.

Reds 5, Cardinals 1

TAMPA, Fla. — Eric Davis and Ron Oester each had a pair of hits and a run batted in Saturday to lead the Cincinnati Reds to a victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Reds starter Mario Soto, 2-2, overcame wildness in his six innings, allowing six hits and the Cardinals' only run. Soto walked five and struck out four, permitting a Cardinal runner to reach second base in five of his six innings.

Frank Pastore and Ted Power retired the last nine Cardinals in order.

Davis led off the Reds' first inning with a solo homer off Kurt Kepshire, 1-2, who allowed six hits and one earned run in five innings. It was Davis' team-high fifth spring homer.

Soto singled in the fifth and took third on Davis' double. Soto was tagged out in a rundown started by Buddy Bell's grounder to short, and Davis was hit in the face with a throw while taking third during the rundown. The ball bounced out of play, letting the run score as catcher Tom Nieto received an error. Bell then came home on Nick Esasky's single.

Padres 5, A's 3

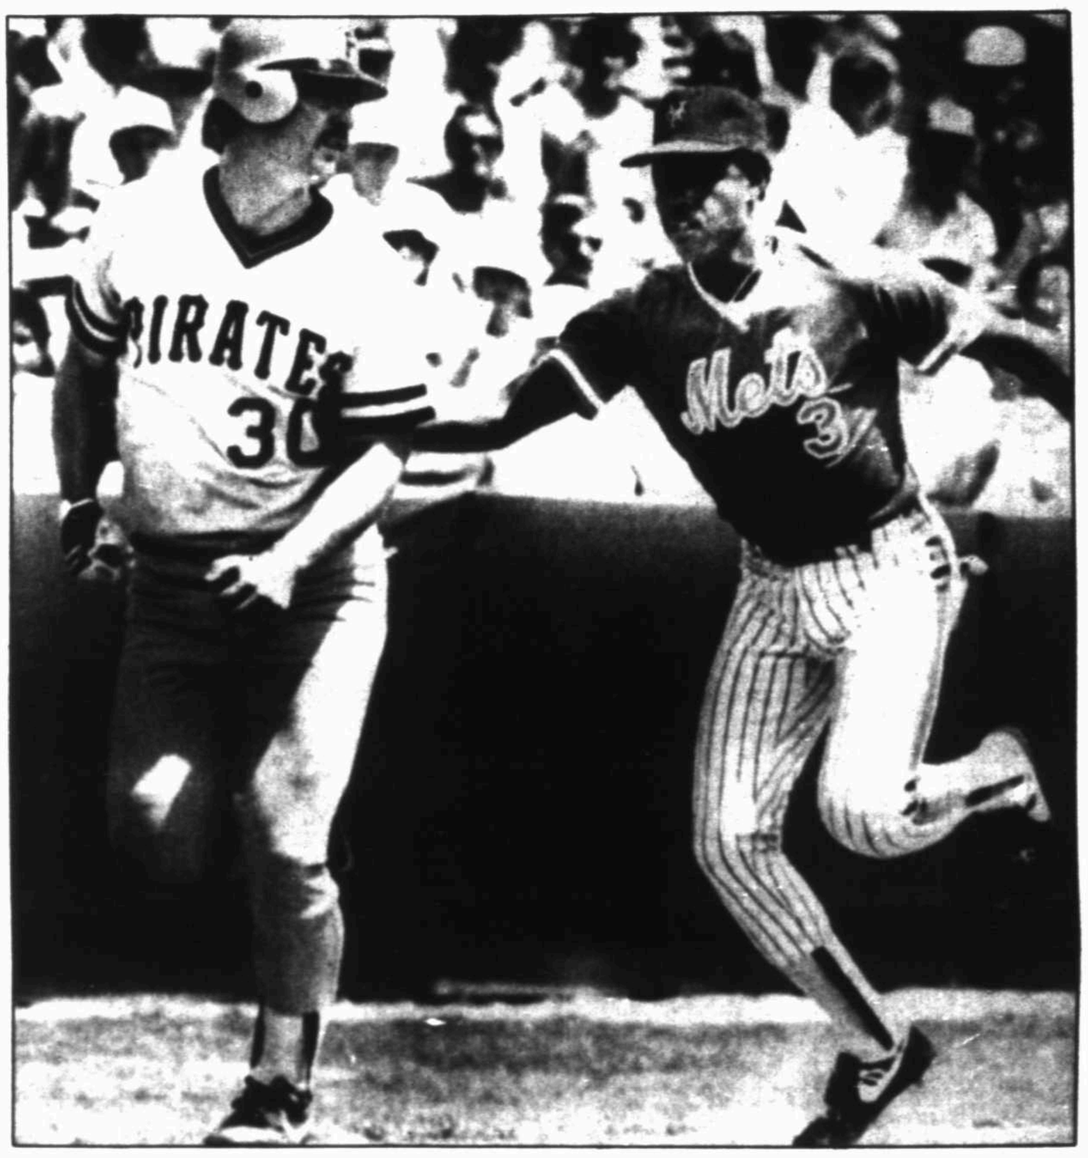

YUMA, Ariz. — Mark Thurmond pitched six scoreless innings and Kevin McReynolds and Jerry Royster hit solo homers as the San Diego Padres downed the Oakland A's.

Thurmond allowed six hits and no walks while striking out five.

Gene Walter and Tim Stoddard then blanked the A's for one inning apiece before Goose Gossage was touched for four hits and all three Oakland runs in the top of the ninth.

Chris Codiroli worked the first six innings for the A's, allowing all 11 San Diego hits and all five Padres' runs.

Tony Gwynn, Garry Templeton and Tim Flannery had two hits each for the Padres, who are 12-12 this spring. Mike Davis and Donnie Hill had three hits each for the A's, who fell to 13-9.

Red Raiders outgun Cougars for pair of victories

Associated Press

LUBBOCK — Houston changed pitchers 11 times but couldn't stop Texas Tech from rallying to 10-9 and 14-8 victories in a Southwest Conference baseball doubleheader Saturday.

Two Houston pitchers were pulled after Texas Tech scored five runs in the first game's first inning, and two more came out in the sixth.

Houston catcher Pat Hewes hit two homeruns, his 17th and 18th, to set a new team record for most homeruns in a season. Teammate Damen Baldwin set a Cougar doubles record by collecting a two-sacker in the first game.

The Red Raiders clinched the first game with two runs in the bottom of the seventh. Mike Walker suffered the loss, while Bill Schutt recorded the win.

In the second game, Tech's Johnny Vidales pitched eight and one-third innings and picked up the seventh win of his so-far undefeated season and second in SWC play.

The Red Raiders scored three runs in the second, fourth and sixth innings and added five more insurance runs in the eighth.

The Raiders are still in first place in the SWC with a 5-1 record and 29-9 overall. The Cougars fell to 2-4 and 27-11.

FORT WORTH — Texas had to struggle in both games but managed to sweep a Southwest Conference doubleheader against Texas Christian 5-3 and 3-6 in college baseball play Saturday.

The Frogs pushed the Longhorns to an extra inning in the first game before Texas scored two in the eighth to take the lead. Outfielder Scott Cooldaugh drove in Todd Haney with one out in the eighth for the game-winner.

Greg Swindell came in to pitch the final inning and picked up his first SWC save, while Mark Tetkovsek picked his seventh win against one defeat.

The second game was shortened to seven innings because of the length of the first. TCU jumped off to a strong 6-2 lead in the fourth inning on Tony Wilmot's home run, which was followed by four consecutive singles.

The Longhorns stormed back with one run in the fifth and five in the sixth. The key point in the sixth inning came when TCU reliever Kerry Knox fielded a double-play ground ball and threw wildly into the TCU dugout, allowing Eric Koenig to score.

Comics stand up for relief of homeless

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A star-studded cast of funny men and women joked for a serious cause Saturday night as the "Comic Relief" benefit for the homeless asked a national TV audience to give money to help people on the street.

With hosts Billy Crystal, Whoopi Goldberg and Robin Williams, the show at the Universal Amphitheater was carried live on the Home Box Office cable television network, beginning at 8 p.m., CST. The three-hour gala was taped for the West Coast audience.

In an opening skit, Miss Goldberg portrayed a homeless welfare mother living in a cardboard box house with her two children, played by Crystal and Williams.

"Our house is one you can put windows in anywhere," Miss Goldberg said.

Williams parodied President Reagan in another skit.

"I understand the plight of the homeless. I have some friends who are losing their mansions," Williams said.

The opening segment ended with a plea by Miss Goldberg for the homeless: "The bottom line is, it could be you tomorrow."

Stand-up routines by 40 of the biggest names in comedy were sandwiched by sad pictures of people without.

"The main thing is to make the funniest show possible, but not to jam it home or proselytize, or beg every five minutes...puhleeeeze," Williams said before the show.

"The only restriction is time," he said. "If you're going well, there's a tendency to want to go a little longer. If you're not doing well, there's a tendency...to want to go a little longer."

The cast included Steve Allen, Harry Anderson, Sid Caesar, Jerry Lewis, Madeline Kahn, John Candy, Bette Midler, David Steinberg, Richard Dreyfuss and the Firesign Theater.

Also on tap were Michael J. Fox, Estelle Getty, Mary Gross, Buddy Hackett, Pee Wee Herman, Michael Keaton, Eugene Levy, Howie Mandel, Pat Morita, Martin Mull, Minnie Pearl, Joe Piscopo, Gilda Radner, Carl Reiner, Rob Reiner, Dick Shawn, George Wendt, Henry Winkler and Henny Youngman.

"Let's just say it's the greatest collection of funny people since (Charlie) Chaplin dined alone," said Crystal.

In New York, about 160 homeless people turned out Saturday night for a free meal and comedy show at The Improvisation, a night club that normally showcases the city's struggling comedians.

Following on the heels of the Live Aid concerts for African famine relief and the FarmAid concert for America's struggling farmers, "Comic Relief" was the brainchild of screenwriter and producer Bob Zmuda.

"Some of them (the homeless) have no choice," Crystal said. "One guy came up to me in Seattle and said, 'Billy, just make sure you tell 'em we're not all bums.'"

"I could find myself homeless tomorrow, and the current administration doesn't seem to care," said Miss Goldberg, star of "The Color Purple" who was on welfare several years ago.

HBO agreed to allow local cable companies to carry HBO's signal on a free channel, increasing the show's potential audience from 14.5 million homes to 39 million.

'Lourdes of Southwest' draws Easter pilgrims

By FRANK TREJO
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

CHIMAYO, N.M. — From his home perched upon a hill, Manuel Martinez is virtually within a stone's throw of El Santuario de Chimayo.

Each year during Holy Week, he watches a seemingly endless stream of cars, vans and trucks and a parade of people on foot turning off State Highway 520 onto a dirt road that leads to what is perhaps the most venerated Catholic shrine in the Southwest.

On this particular day, Martinez, too, has made his visit to the shrine. But instead of walking the short distance from his home to the sanctuary, Martinez hitched a ride to the town of Pojoaque 10 miles away to begin his journey there.

"It really is such a little thing," Martinez says, leaning against the side of his car, rubbing the soreness from his legs. Like many worshipers, Martinez chooses to show his devotion by hiking considerable distances to reach the adobe shrine. "It's just that we believe in God so much that this (walking) is just a little thing. It's a little penance."

Year after year, time-honored tradition brings thousands of Holy Week worshipers such as Martinez to the modest shrine that some here call "the Lourdes of the Southwest." All come seeking the legendary healing powers or simple statement of faith of the ancient sanctuary 30 miles northeast of Santa Fe.

By the time Holy Week culminates with the saying of noon Mass on Easter Sunday, perhaps as many as 30,000 pilgrims will have visited El Santuario de Chimayo, some of them walking 10, 20, 50 or more miles.

Many come to pray for help with a particular problem. Others come to give thanks for a prayer answered. The walls of a side room are lined with crutches placed there by people who — because of some medical or miracle cure — say they no longer need them.

They come speaking of miracles — both major and small. One woman comes because, after three months of believing her daughter had cancer, additional tests came back negative. Another man has survived a heart transplant. And three young men come to give thanks that the children born into their families last year are healthy.

"It is simply a matter of great faith," said the Rev. Casimir Roca, who has been a parish priest at Chimayo since 1959. "And it just so happens that when Holy Week comes around, that faith is in full blast."

Although there may be other Catholic shrines that attract thousands of devoted pilgrims each year — such as the one to La Virgen de San Juan in the Texas town of San Juan — Roca said that Chimayo probably is the only Catholic shrine in the United States that is credited with curative powers. In Chimayo's case, pilgrims believe the moist dirt from a small hole in a side room of the 170-year-old building can work miracles.

"I really don't know where the idea began that the dirt had curing powers. We keep telling people it's not the dirt but the faith that you have in God that performs the miracles," Roca said. "But they still want to take home a little something, a souvenir of their trip to Chimayo."

By most estimates, Chimayo, an old Tewa Indian word meaning flaking stone of superior quality, is a community of perhaps 2,000 people scattered over several miles along the Santa Cruz Valley.

The shrine is a modest church building of almost pink adobe located in an idyllic setting of almost perfect tranquillity. In the early morning, before the crush of the curious and the devoted, one can hear the rush of the Santa Cruz River that runs behind the shrine.

According to legend, a series of miracles led to the creation of the shrine about 1800.

They began around Holy Week when a man named Bernardo Abeyta looked down from the hills one evening and saw a bright light coming from the ground of some land he owned near the river. When he investigated, he found a 6-foot wooden crucifix.

It was decided the crucifix should be placed in the church of nearby Santa Cruz. But the next night, Abeyta again saw the light and again found the crucifix, which had disappeared from the church and reappeared at the original site. After the third time it happened, the townspeople realized that this place by the river was where the crucifix belonged.

'Diff'rent Strokes' co-star released on bond

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Diff'rent Strokes" co-star Todd Bridges has been released on bond after being booked for investigation of making bomb threats against a man with whom he had a business dispute, police said.

Bridges, who plays the older brother of diminutive star Gary Coleman on the series, was arrested early Friday at his home 25 miles northwest of downtown Los Angeles, police Sgt. Mike Krecioch said.

The 20-year-old actor twice threatened to blow up a car belonging to Greg Tyre, who had been hired to customize Bridges' car, police spokesman Willie Wilson said. The most recent threat came Wednesday, he said.

The threats stemmed from a business dispute between the two, details of which were not available, Wilson said.

In 1983, Bridges was fined $240 and placed on a year's probation for carrying a loaded weapon in his car. His attorney said at the time that Bridges bought the gun to protect himself against Ku Klux Klan members who he said fired a rifle at him outside his home.

GLENS FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — Black Sabbath lead guitarist Tony Iommi believes the heavy-metal rock group was a victim of censorship when protests caused it to back out of a concert here, his publicist says.

However, publicist Mitch Schneider refused to elaborate on the group's reasons for the cancellation Friday. And he said the group wants to reschedule the concert.

Schneider released a statement from Iommi, a founding member of Black Sabbath, in which Iommi said, "I think it's ridiculous that certain pressure groups are interested in censoring freedom of speech."

The rock group came under fire for what local protesters called the satanic nature of its music, which they said was particularly inappropriate on such an important Christian holy day as Good Friday.

"It was strictly the decision of the band to cancel the show," said Keith Beccia of Northeast Concerts in Wethersfield, Conn., the promoters of the event. "Why they did it, I don't know."

Glens Falls Civic Center Director Jack Kelley said that about 2,400 of the 7,000 seats in the civic center had been sold for the concert. "One might be suspicious" that the event was canceled because of slow advance ticket sales, he said.

Yoko Ono

NEW YORK (AP) — Singer Yoko Ono, who has been on a "Starpeace World Tour" with a rock band in Europe for more than a month, has canceled some U.S. bookings because of poor ticket sales, her spokesman says.

Miss Ono, the widow of former Beatle John Lennon, canceled the appearances on the advice of American promoters, publicist Elliot Mintz said Friday.

Originally, 16 North American cities were listed as part of the tour, from April 1 to April 29. Now she will appear in only four as part of her first public tour since 1974, when she went on the road with the Plastic Ono Band.

The four North American appearances will be: May 15, San Francisco; May 16, Los Angeles; May 20, Montreal; and May 22, New York. The first three are in the originally scheduled halls. New York's date is at the Beacon Theater.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — New Jersey prosecutors have appealed a federal judge's ruling that threw out the triple murder conviction of Rubin "Hurricane" Carter and freed the former heavyweight boxer after 18 years in prison.

The appeal filed Friday with the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals contends the Nov. 8 ruling by U.S. District Judge H. Lee Sarokin, that Carter's conviction was "based on radical prejudice," was legally flawed.

Sarokin, in Newark, N.J., also found that the Passaic County prosecutor's office had concealed evidence that could have hurt the credibility of a key witness against Carter.

The 49-year-old former boxer was convicted twice with co-defendant John Artis of killing three white people in a Paterson tavern in 1966.

Country Living the Way Y'all like it

Finding a home with a relaxing country flavor well-blended into an urban setting is a difficult task in most cities.

Quietly nestled in the heart of Llano Estacado Estates is #72 Dahlia; country living the way even a "city slicker" would like it.

Only four minutes from the busy shopping areas about North Loop 250, this estate encompasses approximately 1.7 acres featuring a lovely domain with about 2,500 square feet of very comfortable living space.

Approaching the front entry from the pebblecrete walk, visitors can at once relax in the quiet environment with its landscaped planters with individual bubblers and various types of shade trees.

The exterior of this domain has a quite native appeal in a ranch style design, offering an earth tone stucco with chocolate brown shudders on the front-facing windows.

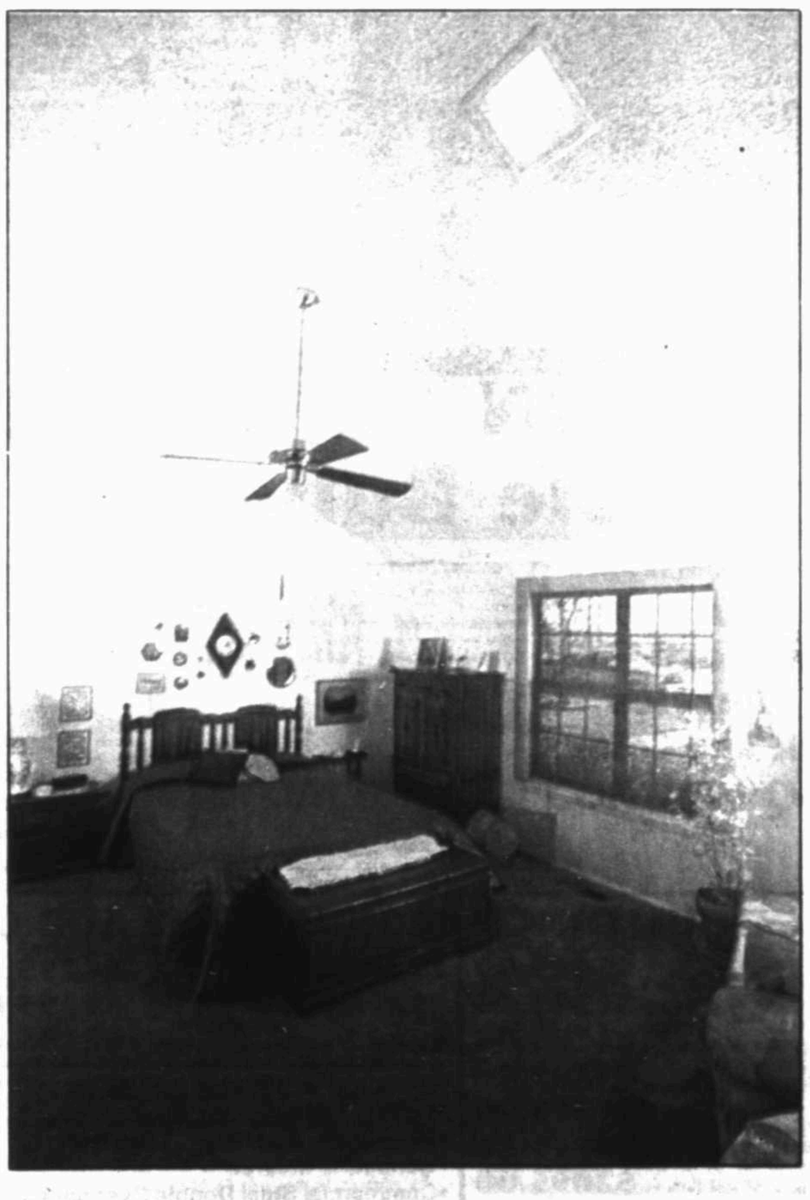

A more modern luxury for today's active family is a full-size trampoline in the side yard for these long summer afternoons of playtime.

In the foyer, glazed Mexican tile is illuminated beneath vertical windows on each side of the six panel door.

Please see Y'ALL, Page 2D

In the beautiful leisure area, an elevated gazebo with a hot tub looks onto the lazy-L shaped pool.

The master bedroom exudes a more modern theme, using rich peaches and stark whites to complete a plush, elegant look.

The family room is designed for just that: a spacious, cozy room for members to gather. With a handsome brick fireplace stretching to the deeply vaulted ceiling, the picture is complete.

Home buying has many facets

Associated Press

Buying a home is the biggest purchase most Americans will ever make, and it involves a grasp of financial strategies along with learning a new vocabulary, says a real estate consultant.

The process can be overwhelming for the first-time homebuyer, according to Dick Schlott, president of the New Jersey-based Schlott Realtors Co., who advises the first step should be the gathering of information.

"When you begin to seriously consider buying a home or a piece of land, you'll find that everyone has an opinion," he says, pointing out that real estate language includes such esoteric terms as "title insurance" and "points."

But buying real estate is not like purchasing an obscure item such as computer graphics equipment, Schlott adds.

"Friends and family members will have plenty of advice," he explains. "Use it to conduct your own consumer information survey. The same pro-con process that you've used to purchase a new car or a piece of audio equipment will be utilized in the home-buying process."

Schlott says potential purchasers should analyze their financial situation by making a list of their annual income, assets and liabilities.

"These calculations will help you foresee the outcome of the mortgage qualification check," he explains, adding "a good rule of thumb calculation to help you analyze your financial situation is what I call the 28-percent factor: "Twenty-eight percent of your gross monthly income should go to your mortgage payment."

Schlott says mortgage payments include principal plus interest on the loan, one-12th of the annual real estate taxes and one-12th of the annual hazard insurance.

"Calculate the total cost of these three items," he says. "And if it fits within the 28 percent guideline, you're on your way."

Schlott suggests homebuyers should be prepared financially to buy when shopping because "with today's low interest rates and good market value, dream homes are going quickly — the home you like might not be available when you return in two weeks to make the purchase.

"Know your financing options and mortgage strategies before you make the rounds."

When it comes to paying for a home, buyers have an almost unlimited number of financing options from which to choose, according to Schlott, who describes the selection as a real "mortgage smorgasbord" — a table filled with exotic names like "wrap-arounds," "balloons" and "buy-downs."

Many, he explains, involve financing assistance from the home seller, while others are from regular financial institutions like banks and savings and loans organizations.

Schlott says reputable real estate sales associates can help walk the customer through the mortgage maze because they are familiar with the financing options and will make sure the correct mortgage is selected.

He also emphasizes that the role of the attorney is important in a home-buying transaction, since lawyers should make a full examination of the title.

Home ownership costs taking higher percentage of family income in 1980s

By KATHLEEN NELSON
Associated Press

From 1968 through the late 1970s, the costs of owning a home took about 15 percent of a family's income.

Today, it's 30 percent or more, according to a study published last fall by the MIT-Harvard Joint Center for Housing Studies.

Especially vulnerable to escalating prices, the study said, is the "young household," under age 35, the group most likely to be buying their first home.

In 1969, Paul and Evelyn Sciallo were typical first-time home buyers. They bought an $18,500 ranch house on a third of an acre in Suffolk County, Long Island, N.Y. They financed it with a 7½ percent, 30-year, fixed-rate mortgage that required a minimum 20 percent down payment of $3,700. Monthly payments came to $142, including $50 to cover a $600 annual property tax bill. A gallon of heating oil at the time cost 12½ cents.

Sciallo's annual income was $8,300.

If the Sciallos bought their house today, it would cost $90,000.

The National Association of Homebuilders says the average price of a new home sold in the last quarter of 1985 was $102,500. The median was $84,700, meaning that half of home sales were above that amount and half below it. The median price of an existing home was $74,600.

The interest on a similar fixed-rate mortgage is about 13 percent, carrying a monthly payment of more than $1,000. The Sciallos would need $18,000 for a down payment.

Their annual property tax is now $2,500; heating oil is a dollar or so a gallon.

With these comparisons, could the Sciallos afford their house if they were starting out today?

"Probably," says Mrs. Sciallo, "but we'd have to give up an awful lot to do it."

Despite these financial hurdles, young people are buying homes. With condominiums, mobiles and duplexes added to the choices, their ideal remains the single-family home.

Nearly two-thirds of all Americans own their own home and the children of these households expect to own one, too, according to industry professionals and homeowners.

They're likely to use and need two incomes to afford the house and may put off having children, but they still have the "will" to own a home.

Today's homebuyers are described by those in the industry as savvy, educated consumers who do their homework and buy their first home as an investment more than a permanent residence.

Y'ALL

The interior of this two-story home features many hidden amenities including zoned heating and cooling and a private water well.

In the adjoining family room (bottom photo on the cover), a feeling of openness and comfort are the orders of the day. A handsome tan brick fireplace easily stretches to the deeply vaulted ceiling with recessed lighting and ceiling fan. Several windows with white mini blinds beneath matching custom sheer tieback drapery appointment s easily compliment the plush caramel brown carpeting. This "common area" opens into several other living areas of the home.

Just beyond, for example, is the formal dining area, sunroom and pool, kitchen and breakfast room.

In the formal dining expanse, carpet and drapes matching the family room paired with teal blue patterned wallpaper and a low-hanging brass chandelier complete the theme of the area.

Through French doors stands the leisure sunroom with redwood walls and ceiling, track lighting and a convenient ceiling fan , all atop stark white Italian tile. Full length windows face and a sliding glass door leads to the fenced lazy-L shaped pool and hot tub area (top photo on the cover). Adjacent is a most unique relaxation area. A hot tub stands beneath a large, elevated gazebo with a bit of "West Texas elegance": An authentic windmill provides for the ample water well, mentioned earlier, adding to this home's country charm.

Just off the formal dining room is a large kitchen and breakfast area for more informal dining. The kitchen, boasting beige ceramic floor tile, white counters, birch cabinets and fluorescent lighting is quietly accented by country blue and white floral wallpaper. With a large pantry for extra storage, trash compactor and dishwasher as added amenities, this work area lends itself to any chef's fancy.

In the adjoining breakfast room, a bay window with a matching window seat and gathered cornice in country blue perfectly compliment the matching wallpaper in a Wainscoat style and the lighted ceiling fan.

Beside this eating area is a convenient utility room with matching tile, several storage cabinets and space for a full-size freezer.

A powder room, convenient to both the family room and kitchen, features a powder blue metallic wallcovering with a matching blue vanity and recessed lighting.

A luxurious aura exudes from the master bedroom suite (center photo on the cover), with matching caramel carpet. One wall in a rich peach hue reflects a more modern appeal, stretching to the deeply vaulted ceiling. Front-facing windows trimmed in peach are decorated with white mini blinds.

Through an arched passageway to the bath, the real "escape" begins. A separate vanity area with peach floral wallpaper and a lighted brass makeup mirror are illuminated beneath recessed lighting and a tunnel skylight. For added convenience, an immense walk-in closet with storage shelves and a full length mirror can accommodate apparel for every season. In the bath area, matching paper and carpet continue the elegant theme. Amenities include a brass-edged glass shower and a mirrored wall about the oval tub. A full length window accented by white mini blinds and recessed lighting complete the open, airy appeal.

Upstairs, are three bedrooms, to perfectly accommodate today's active family, each with ample walk-in closets.

Two of the bedrooms feature ceiling fans and white mini blinds and balloon cornices matching custom bedspreads; one in a contemporary navy plaid and the other, a deep cranberry.

The third bedroom, a loft overlooking the family area through an open "window", offers feminine blue sheer tieback drapes decorating a window overlooking the pool area.

Along this hallway are two large closets for off-season storage.

The bath with a tub/shower combination sparkles in stark white: tile, counter and fixtures illumianted beneath a tunnel skylight.

Listed by Stephenson Realtors for $175,000, this estate truly has "country charm" appeal. For more information about this home or others, please contact your Realtor.

Words Worth Knowing

Negative Amortization

Occurs when total monthly payment is not large enough to cover interest due, resulting in an increase in the outstanding balance due on the loan.

Point

A charge of one percent of the mortgage value. "Points" are a one-time charge assessed by the lender to increase the interest yield from the mortgage loan to a position competitive with the interest yields from other types of investments.

Principal

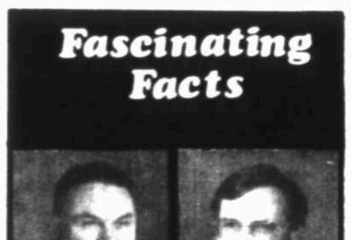

Amount of money borrowed in a mortgage loan, excluding interest and other charges.

Fascinating Facts

by Bob & Bill Drummond, Licensed Master Plumbers
The frog is valuable to man in many ways. It is a mosquito killer and clears gardens of insects and slugs. Among both civilized and savage populations it has been used for food. In France, the edible European frog is bred for the market in large preserves. In both the U.S. and France, it is the hind legs, which have a flavor and texture something like chicken, are the parts that are eaten. In Germany all the muscle parts, served stewed with sauce, are eaten. The frog is also a common laboratory specimen for biological research. Regeneration of animal tissue is often illustrated by the regrowth of the tadpole's tail.

Baby boomers start trading up

WASHINGTON — As the population ages and the first wave of the post World War II baby boom approaches 40, an increasing number of the nation's home builders are redesigning their homes for trade-up buyers and the elderly, according to a random survey of builders.

In a survey of 715 builders attending the 42nd Annual Convention/Exposition of the National Association of Home Builders, 60 percent of the respondents said they are now building for that market by the end of the decade. The 5 percent now building for the elderly is expected to increase to 14 percent by the end of the decade.

Kent Colton, NAHB's executive vice president, noted that the results of the survey are in line with NAHB's previously conducted market research. The survey was conducted during a NAHB convention in Dallas.

"Major shifts in demographic patterns will continue to influence the way we design, construct, market and finance the homes of the future," Colton said. "There will be greater demand for trade-up housing as the baby boom generation moves up the ladder in the last half of this decade and early 1990s and as their family income and family sizes increase," he said.

Noting that tradeup buyers now account for 60 percent of all new home sales, Colton said that the trade-up market is expected to gain an even larger market share in the years ahead because of the decline in young household formations and the large number of starter homes in the existing inventory. The 1980s and early 1990s will also be growth years for specialty markets, especially homes designed for the elderly and adults whose children have left home, he said.

Reflecting the fact that the first-time buyer market is expected to gradually decrease during the remainder of the century, the survey showed that 34 percent of the builders are now constructing starter homes but only 21 percent expect to be building for first-time buyers by the end of the decade.

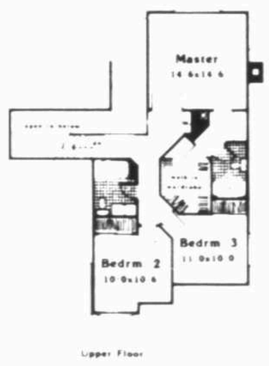

Builders were generally optimistic about market conditions for single-family homes in 1986, with two out of three saying they will build more homes this year than in 1985. However, builders' predictions about starts showed considerable regional variation.

Builders in the Northeast were the most optimistic, with 88 percent predicting that single-family starts will be "good to excellent" in 1986. Seventy-two percent in the Midwest said starts will be "good to excellent" and 70 percent in the west expect starts to be "good to excellent." the South recorded the lowest figure — 66 percent.

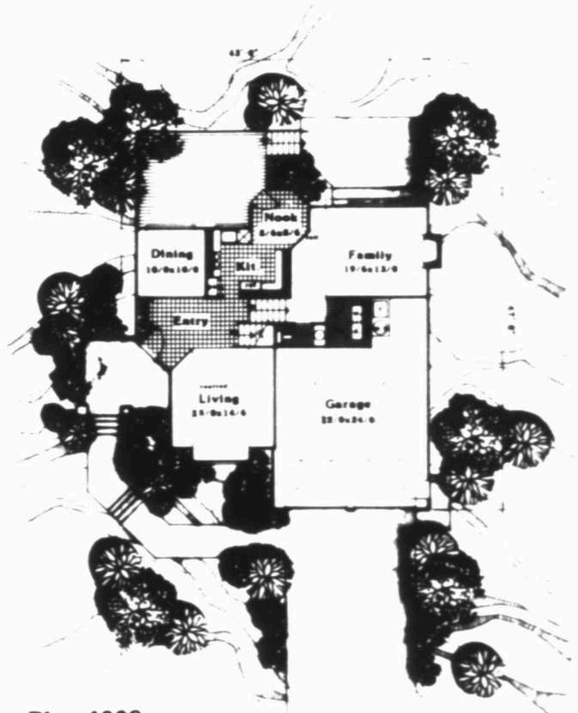

tinue in 1986, with overall demand strong but with significant variations and shifts within and among various areas around the country," Colton noted. "Markets with strong local economies where incomes are rising and new jobs are being created can expect a strong housing market in 1986."

Eclectic trends influence home design

Upper Floor

Multi-paned windows and details give a very traditional feel to this contemporary design. The beautifully vaulted living room and the dining room are separated for elegant, formal entertaining.

The spacious kitchen is equipped with abundant storage and counter space for the homemaker. Both the nook and kitchen overlook the family room and hearth below for an eye-catching layout.

Note too how the upper level opens to the nook and family room to add visual height and excitement to the interior.

Upstairs, you'll find a spacious master suite with an enormous walk-in closet for those who never have enough storage space.

Peasants among first to use wallpaper

Wallcoverings have taken many forms through time. The Chinese created decorative papers but did not use them on their walls. The peasants of Europe were the first to use wallpaper to imitate the velvet and tapestry hangings of the rich. Soon the wealthy Europeans were also applying paper and cloth wallcoverings to improve their decor.

Now wallcoverings are used to solve a wide variety of decorating problems. With a little know how, the average homeowner can make a small room look more spacious, brighten a dark room or create a warmer, more inviting atmosphere for the whole house. All with the help of today's wallcoverings.

Color should be the first consideration when redecorating a room, easy the Wallcovering Information Bureau, because it is the first thing people notice. Dark colors enclose space while neutral and light colors expand space. Bright colors add a touch of excitement. And greens or blues on the other hand are peaceful, calming colors.

Think purpose. Then go from there. do the morning hours get you down? Choose a wallcovering with a warm color combination to give the bedroom and yourself a lift. Earth-tones, reds and yellow should work well. If relaxing after a hard day is what you seek, consider decorating the bedroom in pale violet or green to give the room a soothing effect.

Architectural flaws can be camouflaged by choosing a strong patterned or textured wallcovering.

Wallcoverings can add a look of elegance to any room. In this setting, the floral wallcovering with companion fabrics in the chairs and headboard serve to tie the bedroom together.

Insurance lingo confusing

By May Adelaide Barber

Like most professions and special interest groups, Realtors and others involved in real estate transactions have a language all their own. Sometimes the professionals use terms which are a sort of shorthand, immediately recognized within the profession but often confusing to the majority of others.

One area of confusion is in the matter insurance. Frequently there are three categories of insurance involved in the sale of a house: the fire and hazard insurance, the title insurance and the mortgage insurance. All three are usually addressed at the actual closing of the sale, when the settlement costs are paid and the various documents are signed.

Most people think of insurance as the coverage on a building which gives some financial protection to the owner in case of damage to that building. This is what is referred to as fire and hazard insurance. If the contents of the house are included in the coverage, the owner has what is called a homeowners' policy. This is merely a more comprehensive form of coverage than the basic fire and hazard policy, but it falls into the same category. Lending institutions generally will not make a loan on a property that does not have this sort of coverage.

Title insurance protects the buyers of a property against future claims which might be brought against their title to the property. It insures the free and clear ownership of the property with any exceptions, such as a lien or an easement, being noted. Usually, on the sale of a house, the seller purchases the title insurance policy to insure a clear title to the buyer. This is referred to as the owners' title policy. The buyer, on the other hand, will be required by his or her loan company to furnish them with a title policy insuring the lending institution against possible financial loss if a claim should be made against the property. This is called a mortgagee's title policy.

The third type of insurance, required by most loan companies on all mortgage loans with a loan to value ratio of more than 75 or 80 percent, is the private mortgage insurance or PMI. This category of insurance partially protects the lending institution from financial loss if the loan goes into default and the property goes to foreclosure. The buyer of a house who take out a new loan for the purchase of the property may pay for their PMI at closing, or finance it with their loan, or a combination of the two payment methods. At any rate, if buyers do not make a very substantial down payment on their new home, their settlement costs and/or their monthly payments will increase to cover the MIP or mortgage insurance premium.

Catch A Wave

Text by Elizabeth Edwin

Photos by Kent Porter

Counter clockwise from top right: Mona Gale Gibson enjoys the sun in an aqua and black bikini by Rose Marie Reid and aqua coverup by West Bound from Dillard's. For pool parties, Felix Zentner wears a Hawaiian print shirt by Ocean Pacific and black swim shorts by Breezin' Sportswear, both from K.G. Menswear, while Carol Kilborn shows an elegant black one-piece suit by Catalina, available at The Islands Swimwear Shop. A Liz Claiborne sun hat and West Bound yellow cover-up accent the diagonal striped tube suit with ruffle accents by Sirena all at Dillard's. Soaking up the sun are Michele Basham in an aqua suit with yellow belt by La Blanca and yellow straw hat by Phyllis Ann and Stacy Basham in a black one-piece suit with pink ruffle and spider-web accented back by Sirena available at The Islands Swimwear Shop.

There seems to be a lot of disagreement among designers as to exactly what type of swimwear will make the biggest waves in Spring '86.

One report says that for the first time in almost a decade, the two-piece suit is making a comeback, but not in the teeny-weeny bikini styles that have previously graced the pool side. These suits will have wider bands on tops and bottoms to help close the midriff gap.

Another report states that the designers' scissors have taken the plunge, creating skimpy bikinis and daring one-piece suits, cutting legs and necklines to the waist, and offering very little material in between.

Some say more, some say less — but all seem to agree that the one-piece suit, no matter how covering or revealing, will be a no-miss buy for spring and local retailers seem to agree.

"The one-piece suits are expected to be popular this year," said Susan Belsher, assistant manager in charge of merchandising for Dillard's Department Store.

"The bikini is still going to be your basic tanning suit, but you can do so much with a one-piece. A bikini is basically just a bikini. You can change the color or the fabric pattern, make it a little smaller or add a little fabric, but there is still a basic bikini style," Ms. Belsher said. "But the designers really have a lot of variety with a one-piece."

"The one-piece is really more popular overall," said Susan Holland, co-owner of The Islands Swimwear Shop.

One-piece suits panel, skirt or sarong accents are particularly popular among more conservative swimmers, she said.

"Sometimes we run out of these types of suits first, but manufacturers don't make as many of them. Boy-legs are also popular," Mrs. Holland added. "They are a lower cut leg with wider elastic so it helps the suit stay in place better."

The maillot suit — a tank-style suit — is expected to capture a lot of attention in waterwear. The maillot's design is similar to a gymnast suit, making it comfortable and easy to wear for water sports and activities.

AS FOR men, "I haven't sold as many speedos this year. Most men seem to buy the longer boxer-style shorts that come just above the knee and wear them for short and for swim suits," said Randy Conatser, manager of K.G. Menswear. "We also sell a lot of the short boxer-style shorts for swimwear, especially in the wet-look material."

Colors for spring swimwear will follow sportswear trends with bright colors topping the list and yellow is in position number one. "Yellow is everywhere," Mrs. Holland said. Yellow can be found in variety of shades for solids, teamed with black or used as an accent color.

"Black is always a good color in swimwear too," Ms. Belsher added, because of the slimming illusion black has.

Teddy bears, polar bears, polka dots, geometric shapes and tropical scenes are just a few of the patterns that line swimsuit display racks. A popular pattern is the "Chevron Stripe" with stripes angling downward to form a V-shape, Ms. Belsher said.

Popular swimwear accents for spring '86 are ruffles, cutout work, ruffles, belts, ruffles, ties, ruffles, bows and more ruffles. Suits of 100 percent cotton are popular this spring as well as suits made from Matelasse — 90 percent Enkalure nylon and 10 percent spandex — which creates a textured look.

Please see SWIMSUITS, Page 3E

How to care for swimwear

While you may want to take home memories of the waves from your beach vacation, be sure your swimwear doesn't take home remnants of the ocean as well.

Proper care of swim apparel will help maintain a new appearance.

"Treat it like it was a fine washable, because it is," suggested Susan Belsher, assistant manager in charge of merchandising for Dillard's Department Store. "Wash it in Woolite by hand or in a laundry bag on the delicate cycle in the washing machine. Don't put it in the dryer, just let hang dry or lay out flat to dry."

"After every time the suit is worn it should be rinsed out in cold water and washed in Woolite about every third time it is used," advised Sue Holland, co-owner of The Islands Swimwear.

"Never, never use a washer or or dryer. The suit should be drip dried away from heat or sunlight because the heat breaks down the elasticity. A good place to dry it is on a hanger in the shower."

The reason it is important to rinse the suit after each use is to wash out the chlorine, salts and minerals as well as dirt. These can affect the condition and cause discoloration of the suit over an extended period of time if left unattended.

Have you heard...?

By MARILYN McKNIGHT HARRISON

Members of the Midland County Medical Auxiliary honored their husbands recently at the annual Doctors' Day celebration.

Claudio's was the setting for this year's event, which began with a seven o'clock social hour. A four course dinner followed, featuring fettuccine alfredo and chicken cacciatore, accompanied by white wine. A sumptuous cream cake was brought out by restaurant owner Claudio Brugalossi and two of his staff to top off the meal in style. Background music was provided by Darryl Knapp.

Each doctor was presented a red carnation boutonniere, and red carnation centerpieces decorated the tables.

Party arrangements were made by president-elect Bambi (Mrs. Don) Nix. Current auxiliary president is JoAnn (Mrs. Shelton) Viney.

The traditional March observance to honor the doctors began a number of years ago in the South and has spread throughout the U.S. The Midland doctors' wives have participated in the observance for approximately the last 20 years.

A DISPLAY SHOWER and reception in the home of Barbara and Windell Thomason recently honored Jill Garrison of Oklahoma City. She is the bride-elect of John Grace, son of Betty Lou and Bob Grace.

The other host couples were Judy and Bill Jackson and Marion and Sikes Johnson.

Coming in from Oklahoma City for the party were Jill's mother, Joann (Mrs. Wayne) Garrison, and her sister, Lea Ann.

The couple, who met while students at Trinity University, will marry in the university chapel on April 19 and make their home in Uvalde, while John pursues a career in broadcast management.

LIBERACE'S MUSEUM in Las Vegas, Nev., was the unexpected meeting place recently for three Midland couples, who were touring the city.

All celebrating wedding anniversaries, they were Helen and Brutus Hanks, longtime owners of Hank's Superette who have recently retired; Nova Lynn and J. Wayne Campbell and Essie and Tom Merrill.

"THE BRADY BUNCH" and "The Addams Family" recently merged when Midlanders Pam Brady and Duane Adams exchanged wedding vows. Since both sets of parents live in the Denver area and the couple wanted a skiing honeymoon in Colorado, they chose the Mile High City as the location for their Feb. 28 wedding. Duane is an independent geologist, and Pam is a decorator with Mid-Tex of Midland.

To celebrate their marriage and the first day of spring on March 21, the Adamses entertained with a fun party in their home. Among the 65 guests were Pam's sister-in-law and brother, Lumen and John Brady Jr., and their daughter, Laura, of Hobbs, N.M., and her sister, Caroline Brady, a student at North Texas State University.

THE TREND THIS YEAR in senior parties is toward informal luncheons held during the school lunch hour.

One of the latest was a baked potato party Tuesday noon at the home of Ann (Mrs. Bobby) Page to honor MHS senior Ronna Laidley. Co-hostess was Nell (Mrs. Don) Furgeson.

An Easter theme and the school colors of purple and gold were used to decorate. Each place was marked with a personalized Easter egg and a Texas-shaped cookie with the letters "A & M" iced in maroon and white to denote the honoree's choice of college. Ronna is the daughter of Shari and Ron Laidley.

Nancy Sumner, daughter of Betty and Bill Sumner and also a senior at MHS, has been honored with two such luncheons recently.

Soup, sandwiches and sundaes were served at the home of Janet (Mrs. Lee) Foster, with Martha (Mrs. Dan) Kallus and Nell Furgeson co-hosting. A wreath in the school colors adorned the front door. Favors were MHS note pads.

A baked potato and salad lunch was held at the home of Jane (Mrs. Dick) Lamphere. Co-hostesses were Marsha Nickel and Judy (Mrs. Bill) Jackson.

New swimsuits take the plunge

By CATHY LAWHON
Copley News Service

Just when you thought it was safe to come out of the water, designers take another slash with the scissors, cutting swimsuits skimpier than ever.

They're lower in the front, deeper in the back, higher on the sides. Even the so-called one-piece suits make the itsy-bitsy bikini of '50s rock 'n' roll fame look tame.

Here are just a few of the suited-for-summer looks:

■ No-cover maillots. One-piece suits (or maillots) are still most stylish. Designers can do more, theoretically, with more fabric. But it's very little more. In fact, calling these suits one piece is almost misleading.

Oh sure, they have seams up the side. But they're opened up with little ties, buttons or zippers.

Side seams also are diminished by the high-rise legs on maillots. Borrowed from the Europeans, the theory is that high-cut swimsuits elongate the leg rather than cutting it off right at the apex of the curve. In reality, however, a long flabby thigh is no more attractive than a short one.

■ Truly teeny bikinis. If you prefer the midriff-baring look of a two-piece, look for Rio de Janeiro-inspired bikinis. Typical of what is called the Rio suit are rolled or braided hip treatments over the briefest triangle of fabric at front and back. Bra straps are also braided or rolled, often in contrasting colors.

■ Look-at-me neons. Pick a trend, any fashion trend, and you'll find it sexily reflected in swimsuit collections. Take neons, for example. If you're not in peak condition and plan on fading into the sand in a nice neutral suit, forget it. Fluorescent greens, yellows and purples, often paired with black, are big for spring. Floral prints are also coming on strong.

■ The layered look. The newest swimsuits are layered. Tiny bikini bottoms are worn under the briefest one-piece maillot. One-shouldered crop tops are worn over tube tops and scant bottoms.

There was a time when swimsuit cover-ups were strictly low tide. A terry cloth robe, a cotton muumuu and an oversize bath towel were pretty much the main choice.

Today, cover-up dressing has become a snazzy, sophisticated branch of the sportswear industry, featuring everything from colorful shorts and oversize shirts to flowing sarongs in glittery evening fabrics.

Diet, exercise equally effective in weight loss

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

To lose weight and cut blood cholesterol, dieting and exercising are equally effective, Stanford University experts conclude after a study of 155 overweight men.

Some of the men jogged 10 miles a week, some cut calories by 300 a day, and some did neither.

In both the exercise and diet group, levels of the good high-density lipoproteins (HDL) went up, and the bad low-density lipoproteins (LDL) went down.

Experts warn against sun exposure

Hearst News Service

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. – Attention parents: a single blistering sunburn at this summer's beach vacation may be enough to put children or teens at risk decades later for an often fatal form of skin cancer.

Harvard skin cancer specialist Arthur J. Sober says the rising rate of malignant melanoma can be tracked not only to cumulative results of long-term exposure to sunlight, but also to certain types of "traumatic exposure."

"A critical exposure to sunlight seems to be a really bad blistering burn in childhood or adolescence," Sober told science writers at a meeting sponsored by the American Cancer Society. "Our studies lead us to suggest that less is best, that children should be protected from these burns. While it's especially important to use effective sunblockers or other protection for fair complexioned children and poor tanners, my personal bias is that it makes sense to protect all children from excess traumatic solar exposure."

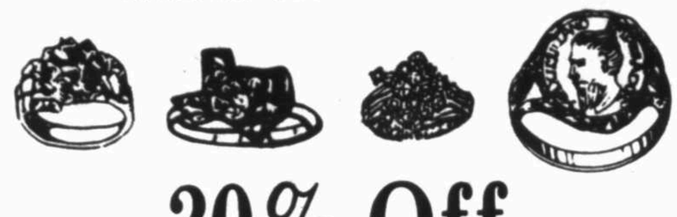

The American Cancer Society estimates there will be 23,000 new cases of malignant melanoma in 1986 and 2,800 deaths. Diagnosis is generally made in the victim's 50s or 60s, suggesting that this cancer takes decades to develop.

The incidence of this cancer of the pigment forming skin cells has been increasing at an "alarming rate," says Sober and other experts. A relatively rare tumor 40 years ago, melanoma rates have doubled in the past few decades.

Scientists believe that wider and longer exposure to sunlight –linked to more liberal clothing fashions and preference for tanning – are largely to blame. This is because the tumor mostly affects light complexioned, easy sunburners, and occurs mostly on parts of the body exposed to the sun. Melanoma is far less common in blacks, Orientals and dark complexioned Caucasians.

In his studies at Massachusetts General Hospital, Sober looked at vacation and leisure time sun exposure in 111 melanoma patients and 107 very similar individuals without melanoma. He found a two-fold increased risk of melanoma in those who had one or more blistering sunburns early in life.

Analysis showed that the finding was not merely reflecting poor tanners who sunburn easily. Within each subgroup – poor tanners, good tanners, light and dark complexioned – patients who reported painful sunburn during childhood had at least double the risk of developing melanoma.

SWIMSUITS

Swimwear made from metallic materials don't seem to be fashionable in Midland. "I've heard the metallics are big in California, but they haven't been in demand here," Mrs. Holland said. "They are probably more of a pool-party type suit."

In men's swimwear, tropical scenes are hot.

"Hawaiian prints have been real popular for swimwear and the brighter the better," Conatser said. "Most of the yellow- and orange-based suits have sold but I still have several of the basic blues left."

Other popular patterns for men are bold vertical stripes in bright colors and black suits accented with bright aqua, yellow, orange, green, hot pink and white.

"For the more conservative men the basic solids are popular. I've had a hard time keeping black suits in stock, especially in the wet look material," Conatser said.

In women's fashions, the bikini can still be found in abundance, but designers have added some creativity, and, in some cases, some more material, to the 1986 line.

"A lot of the two-piece suits coming in have the high cut leg and rise higher on the hip, some of them are just below the bellybutton," Mrs. Holland said.

"The suit of the year may look great, but if it doesn't work for you, if it doesn't do what you need it to do, you have wasted $40," Ms. Beisher said.

Ms. Beisher's advice is to not go shopping with a decision already made for a particular style. Instead, she suggests a person try on several suits in different styles and colors to see what looks best and to ask for second opinions from others, such as the sales staff.

She also cautioned that sizes vary from suit to suit and maker to maker and a person should not lock themselves into a preconceived idea of what size they should wear.

"When someone comes in the store, we like for them to let us help them pick a suit. When people are shopping for swimsuits they need to realize that 90 percent of the suits in stock are not for them. A suit may be cut wrong through the leg or through the chest and they will get discouraged trying them on," Mrs. Holland said.

"Our staff knows the stock and can help find a suit that is right for the person," Mrs. Holland said. "Like if they pick out a group of suits they like but feel like they are all cut too high on the leg or the size is wrong, our staff would quickly know that that particular designer or brand of suit was not what the customer wanted because all of their designs are cut high on the leg and eliminate a lot of frustration. It can make getting a suit a much more enjoyable experience.

"Every suit has a emphasis point to draw the eye away from figure faults," Mrs. Holland said. "Like a one-shoulder suit is a great for people with heavy thighs to draw the eye to face and shoulders."

The Islands also offers special-order swimsuits by Roxanne for women who have had a mastectomy. "We have had very quick delivery from Roxanne," Ms. Holland said.

"A lot of our popular suits have already sold or we don't have them in every size and we can't reorder because the manufacturers are out of stock," Mrs. Holland said. "We are getting ready to go the market (in Dallas) the first week in April and we will be seeing preview lines for '87."

Swimsuit cover-ups offer variety

Along with new styles in swimwear, designers are offering more in cover-ups for the beach or poolside.

"A lot is being offered in the way of cover-ups. This wasn't true until a couple of years ago," said Susan Beisher, assistant manager in charge of merchandising for Dillard's Department Store. "You used to have to shop around to find an oversized shirt but now there are a variety of cover-ups offered right in our swimwear department."

Men are using cover-ups too, but have a more casual look than in years past. The most popular cover-ups are Hawaiian print shirts and camp shirts, according to Randy Conatser, manager of K.G. Menswear.

Two-piece swimsuits are back — with a difference

By KIM MARCUM
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

It is an annual phobia. An event that causes most American women to stand ramrod straight, suck in their stomachs and thank heaven for private dressing rooms. Yes, that's right, the first of the season's swimsuits have hit the racks.

For those who still harbor fear and loathing for physical fitness, there is yet another wicked twist to this year's offerings. The craze that spawned body-conscious clothing has hit swimwear. For the first time in almost a decade, two-piece suits are staging a comeback. Previously outnumbered in sales three to one by maillots and tank suits, two-piece styles are now close to breaking even with one-piece versions.

Now the good news: Two-piece no longer means only itsy bitsy. A lot of times it is not even a bikini. Waist-high briefs and sport-bra tops help close the gap between tops and bottoms. Wider sides can be adjusted for minimum or maximum exposure. Strings have been snipped in favor of wider bands. Mere triangles of fabric have been replaced by broader bandeau tops.

This shift toward extra coverage also has affected maillot silhouettes. Most fashion-forward styles have the panels and flippy skirts reminiscent of late-night movie reruns from the '40s and '50s. These are suits that Betty Grable, Esther Williams and Doris Day would have loved.

Sometimes a suit's support system is incorporated into the design. Swimwear newcomer Adrienne Vittadini outlines the underwire and stays on her ticking-striped suits with decorative stitching.

Those who have weathered many a season in the swimsuit business attribute this change of attitude to maturing baby boomers. "The baby boomers are having babies, and they think they have to act the part," says Ardene Flahavin, the Southwestern representative for Gottex swimsuits. "When I go to stores and have these young mothers in their late 20s saying they need to be covered up, I can't believe it."

Just because legs and necklines are not slashed to the waist does not mean that this newest generation of swimwear is boring. Far from it. Many think it has caused manufacturers to experiment more.

What the manufacturers have delivered for '86 are splashy prints, glitz and glitter, red-hot colors. These trends reflect many of the same influences that have marked the season's ready-to-wear.

Flahavin is cautious about the proliferation of prints. "We've been stung by prints before," says Flahavin. "They can be tricky. It's one of those love-hate things that you either like a print or can't stand it."

The most important prints include sprawling tropicals. Gottex meets the challenge with tutti-frutti patterns in greens and reds. Conversational prints are also strong. Esprit delivers a kicky rendition of bright-haired faces floating on a fuchsia or aqua background of a tank suit. Last but not least are the no-print prints of abstracts and Memphis-inspired squiggles. La Blanca splatters black zigzags across an aquamarine suit accented with shots of purple.

Metallic and sequined suits are also picking up popularity. Lurex threads now are less likely to penetrate the fabric and prick the wearer. Recently developed processes have cut in half the price of making these glitzy fabrics. Suits that formerly retailed for more than $120 can now be purchased for $60 to $70.

Gideon Oberson spangles the fuchsia front of a sleek maillot with clear, light-reflecting sequins. Gottex outlines a floral jacquard with wispy golden threads. Esprit goes for the Goldfinger look with a silky roll-top brief and sport bra-styled top.

That same wet-look shine glosses hot-hued brights of celadon, orange and fuchsia. Turquoise, strong last year, loses ground to a new cast of colors. Greens, pinks and corals make a fresher, stronger statement.

Black is back in swimsuits also. Several collections have made black a lot less boring. Gottex peppers the front of its skating skirt maillot with shiny brass buttons and accents the low back of another suit with rhinestone-studded clasps. Gideon Oberson mixes it with white in an angular geometric print on a belted brief and bandeau. Cole of California creates the ultimate Texas Sesquicentennial suit — a black-and-white appal print bikini that is fringed and accented with silver conchas.

When selecting a swimsuit, Dorothy Rydell, vice president of Viewpoint by Gottex, suggests:

As a rule, look at suits one size larger than your dress size. Swimsuits are usually sized according to the bra. For example, if you wear a size 36 bra, look on the size 14 rack; a 34 should wear a size 12.

Select styles that camouflage your weaker features and accentuate the positive. A small-busted woman, for example, should look for a suit that has ruffles, a contrasting border treatment or shirring across the bust. Heavy-busted women should steer clear of such attention-grabbers. Blouson styles are best suited to women with a midriff problem.

Women who are long in the torso should opt for suits with more stretch. For younger women, that means styles in cotton-lycra fabric or with shirring. Older customers can look for sheath or sarong styles that are usually cut on the bias.

Americans consider drinking water bargain

DENVER — (AP) Most Americans consider their drinking water a bargain.

This was noted in a recent survey sponsored by the American Water Works Association Research Foundation.

It said results showed more than 66 percent considered the cost about right to very inexpensive.

Fewer than 13 percent considered the cost somewhat expensive to very expensive. All others — 21 percent — had no definite opinion.

The AWWA says more than 1,000 gallons of drinking water cost about the same as one six pack of soda pop, one half gallon of milk, or one quart of concentrated orange juice.

Cleaning tips offered for sweaters

NEW YORK (AP) — Wool or synthetic sweaters should be turned inside out before washing, suggests Susan Downing of Woolite's Fashion Forum. After washing in cold water by gently squeezing suds through, and rinsing thoroughly, roll in a towel to absorb excess water.

Then dry on a flat surface, away from direct heat or sunlight. For turtle or cowl necks, put crushed white tissue paper underneath and roll the collar into place to help it retain its shape.

Mrs. Charles A. Haynes III

After honeymooning in Hawaii, the couple will live in Midland.

Premarital contracts more common

Associated Press

America's rising divorce rate is being reflected in premarital contracts spelling out how assets will be divided if the marriage breaks up, according to matrimonial consultants.

"Many women are insecure about the strength of the marriage bond," says attorney William Zabel. "The chances are good that they have been touched by divorce in some way, either through the divorce of their parents, brothers, sisters or friends. They are being scared into action."

Prenuptial agreements frequently are initiated by women remarrying later in life who want to ensure that assets acquired during a previous marriage are distributed to their children and not to the future spouse, he adds.

At one time, premarital agreements were initiated almost exclusively by men.

But now — with women making strides in the workplace and accumulating significant assets — such contracts increasingly are prompted by women, says Zabel, a partner in the New York and Palm Beach, Fla., law firm of Schulte Roth & Zabel.

Since many women planning to marry are earning more than their future husbands, he explains, "it's logical that more women are thinking about protecting their assets.

"Prenuptial agreements appear to be the answer for many of them."

Lifestyle policies

The policies for publication of announcements in the Lifestyle Department of The Midland Reporter-Telegram are:

Information for Sunday pages must be in our office by 5 p.m. the preceding Tuesday. For publication in a weekday paper, we must receive the information by noon two days before the information is to run. For example, an item for Wednesday's paper must be received by noon Monday.

Engagement announcements must appear at least two weeks before the wedding date. Wedding announcements must appear within one month of the event.

Engagements, weddings, anniversaries and club notices must be submitted in writing on forms available in the Lifestyle office. All materials must include the signature and telephone number of the person submitting them. These items appear in the Sunday paper only.

We cannot mail pictures or forms to persons within Midland. Pictures must be picked up in the Lifestyle office within one month after publication. Unclaimed photos are discarded after a month.

Photographs may be submitted with bridal announcements, but are not required. Portraits of the either the bride-elect or of the future bride and bridegroom together may be submitted with engagement announcements. Wedding photographs should be of the bride only.

Photos should be vertical, black and white, glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but they may reproduce poorly. Quality reproduction cannot be assured when color prints are used. In general, snapshots are not acceptable.

There is no charge for publication of photographs and stories.

PLANTS IN THE HOME

Easter plants require special care

By ELVIN McDONALD

Dear Elvin: I must have an Irish Easter cactus. It always blooms St. Patrick's Day. With a name like McDonald, maybe you'll know the answer.

A. March 17th remains constant while the date for Easter shifts every year. Easter cactus blooms according to the care it is given, but it also responds to increasing day-length and the warmer average temperatures that accompany the end of winter and beginning of spring.

In a nutshell, Easter cactus needs abundant warmth, moisture, sunlight and fertilizer from late winter to early fall. During the cooler months and shorter days of the year keep it on the dry side, withhold fertilizer, and provide cooler temperatures, ideally in the low 50s at night, up to not more than 70F. or so by day.

Getting Easter cactus to bloom at the moment of the holiday for which it is named requires careful scheduling. In other words, change from lean to fat conditions six to eight weeks before flowers are wanted.

Getting plants to bloom on a set schedule is something I have always tried to do in my own apartment garden. This year I dared commit myself to doing it for nearly a thousand square feet at the New York Flower Show. Some things were spectacular before, some will be later, but almost exactly the right quantity popped precisely as the first of a hundred thousand visitors poured into the exhibition hall.

Before this show is over I am already planning next year's. The challenge of getting plants to bloom on schedule has proved for me one of gardening's greatest pleasures. In future columns I'll share more details of what has been learned so far; I welcome any reader's experiences — or questions. (You may write directly to Elvin McDonald, 225 E. 57th St., New York, N.Y. 10022.)

Easter Cactus

Q. I received a cineraria in full bloom for Easter. Why did it wilt and die within a few days?

A. Lack of water and too much heat. Cinerarias in bloom need soil that is always moist and temperatures on the cool side — preferably not over 70F. With good care, one plant will stay in bloom for several weeks, but when the last flowers wither, there is nothing to do but throw it away; cineraria is not a perennial.

Q. On a recent visit to Kew Gardens in London, I saw bleeding-heart vine covering most of one wall in a small display greenhouse that seemed unusually warm and humid. Is this a plant that can be grown in a window garden, or does it require too much room and moisture in the air?

A. It's true, the bleeding-plant vine, Clerodendrum Thomsonae, needs warmth and humidity. However, it will grow nicely in a south-facing window garden and responds well to twining around and around a large wreath form, say 15 to 20 inches in diameter. In fact, I find that, like many vines, this one seems to bloom more when controlled on some kind of frame or trellis and nipped back from time to time.

Bleeding-heart vine and numerous other clerodendrums grow well for me in an ordinary potting mix of equal parts soil, sand and peat moss. During warm sunny weather, I fertilize regularly, alternating 20-20-20 and 15-30-15, or similar NPK ratios.

White flies are frequent visitors, but they can be routed from clerodendrums by regular sprays of insecticidal soap. (Apply in early morning or late afternoon, not when the sun is shining directly on the foliage. The only effective technique is to spray the leaf undersides thoroughly as that is where most of the white flies hang out.)

The ideal treatment for a potted or tubbed clerodendrum is to put it outdoors in warm, frost-free weather. My bleeding-heart wreath bloomed all last summer on a south-facing terrace and has recently commenced flowering heavily in a warm home greenhouse, nighttime minimum temperature 68F., up to around 80F. by day. I hasten to add that the reader with no space to garden outdoors can readily succeed with these plants, among them a pink-edged double white that is intensely fragrant, a knockout fiery red and a bright medium delphinium blue.

Notebook pages detailing 11 ways to train vines, including clerodendrums, a packet of White Wings thunbergia seeds, and how to grow them can be yours. Send $1 cash or $1.25 check handling charge to Elvin McDonald Reader Service, 225 E. 57th St., New York, N.Y. 10022.

Q. How can I propagate impatiens?

A. From seeds or cuttings, either way is easy and extremely rewarding. The seeds are tiny; scatter them over the surface of moist vermiculite or any other prepared package mix labeled for seed starting. Enclose the planting in a clear plastic bag until seedlings show. Transplant to individual small pots when large enough to handle. Allow about three months from sowing to first flowers.

Stem cuttings 3 to 5 inches long will root quickly in water or in moist vermiculite; remove leaves from that part of the stem that will be submerged in water or inserted in vermiculite. Transplant to pots of regular soil (equal parts soil, sand and peat moss) when roots are about an inch long.

Although we think of impatiens as a shade plant, in these early stages of propagation and growth the young plants need bright diffused light such as the relatively cool sun found in an east-facing window garden. Fairly constant warmth — 70-75F. — is also needed to get seeds or new roots established.

ASK DR. RUTH

Boyfriend seems 'shy'

By DR. RUTH WESTHEIMER

Westheimer

Q. I'm 38 and interested in marriage, but my present candidate seems shy of making a move for the bedroom, and I think we should get there before tying the knot. I can accept some sexual limitations, but how do I get close enough to find out what they are?

A. You say shy, but it could be something more damaging to your expectations. If he's shy or unsure of himself sexually, you can be inviting and reassuring, but maybe he's in this relationship for company without sex.

He could be saving himself sexually for someone else who hasn't shown up yet — Ms. Right, let us call her. Or he could be one of those sexually inactive people.

You have to assess the situation for yourself. You can initiate, or invite. Sometime, sitting next to him watching TV, your hand on his lap would be an invitation and encouragement. He probably won't knock your hand away!

But if he doesn't respond actively in some way, the next day begin considering other candidates for marriage. Mentally, start shopping around. And write this man a note: "I always want you for a friend, but I have to get on with life. I need a suitor and a lover."

Q. I want a divorce, but my wife says the kids need us even if we aren't happy and that a home and our interest in them means more to the kids than our happiness. Who is right?

A. Without saying she's right, you're wrong. I do think that usually it's a mistake to stay together solely for the sake of the children. If a couple think they can stay together in the best interests of all concerned, let them try. If they try to stay together just for the children, there can be such tension in the house that the children are unhappy and resent the home that is being preserved just for their good.

The food on the table and the car in the driveway don't cure the illness. But before you decide one way or the other, you and your wife should consult a marriage counselor. You both need that calm third viewpoint.

Q. I have a male friend who thinks I'm gorgeous but is happy to be just friends. I asked him to share an apartment with me, no sex. He said no, because he would have to explain our arrangement again and again as people heard about it, and it would hurt his image — even with himself. Is he silly or what?

A. He's absolutely right, and I think he is a very smart man. If he were to move in with you, he would be walking around aroused all the time. And what if you had a man visit you? Would he have to go to his room, lock the door and stuff a gag in his mouth? Tear his hair?

If he moved in with you, every man would be poking him in the ribs with an elbow and asking what it's like. He could let them think he's having sex with you, and lose his self-respect, or keep explaining how it really is, which would start people wondering if he's gay or a eunuch.

The setup could spoil his chances with other women. Whether they thought he was gay, or involved with you, or just without enough respect for them to be quite separate from another woman, they would not like his connection with you.

A less intelligent man might jump at the chance to move in with you, dreaming that you would change your mind some cozy night and get in bed with him. With that possibility in mind, he could get to be a pest. You wouldn't ever want that. Would you?

'Dumpster-diving' no laughing matter

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

In the comic strip "Doonesbury," it was whimsically called "dumpster-diving." But a group of Minneapolis doctors, writing in The New England Journal of Medicine, reports an increased number of real injuries to homeless people falling into or out of trash dumpsters.

Dr. Richard T. Zera and several colleagues at the Hennepin County Medical Center said these three cases occurred in a three-month period last year:

■ A 31-year-old man suffered a deep cut to his right hand while trying to pull himself into a dumpster. Although he could not bend his right index finger, suggesting a cut tendon, he left the hospital, refusing further treatment.

■ A 53-year-old woman scavenging through a dumpster fell into the street, damaging her right knee. After six months, she is still recovering from treatment, which included surgery.

■ Emergency room doctors found two shards of glass in the back of a 36-year-old man who fell backward into a dumpster. The glass was removed and he recovered.

One other homeless person was less fortunate, they report. In St. Paul, a 30-year-old man apparently fell asleep in a dumpster "and was killed when it was emptied into the back of a trash truck."

Muscular dystrophy researched

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Wasting away of muscle tissue in muscular dystrophy may relate to the ability of muscle to take up muscle-building glucose and amino acids. This ability may depend on the body's sensitivity to insulin.

Dr. Richard Moxley of the University of Rochester Medical Center says he is studying these relationships to learn why muscles deteriorate. Evaluation of amino acid uptake in muscle tissue of volunteers receiving insulin infusions makes it possible for Moxley to determine the degree of their insulin resistance.

"If we can identify decreases in muscle building associated with insulin resistance, we'll be able to design treatments," Moxley says.

NEIL SOLOMON, M.D.

Hypertension pills normally a life-long need

Solomon

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am taking pills for high blood pressure, and while I realize that this is not the worst thing in the world to have to do, I would feel relieved if I did not have to take a pill every day. Is it ever possible to give up this kind of medication? — Fletcher, Bridgeport, Conn.

Dear Fletcher: In general, antihypertensive medication must be taken for life; however, some people whose blood pressure has been controlled by medication have been able to be withdrawn from the medication without experiencing an increase.

I assume your physician has instructed you about the importance of restricting your intake of salt, and the need for weight reduction and exercise. If you have complied in the areas, and if your blood pressure is well controlled, you might want to discuss the advisability of a trial period without medication. It should go without saying, however, that you should not alter the dosage without your physician's knowledge and approval.

Dear Dr. Solomon: This is probably not the most important question you have received, but what happens to the cord after a baby is born? — Ms. J.R., Detroit.

Dear Ms. R.: The remnant of the umbilical cord usually drops off about the eighth day after the birth of the baby; however, it may take a couple of weeks for this to occur.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Why is it necessary for so many women to have an incision made at the time they give birth? — Mrs. A.D., Richmond, VA.

Dear Mrs. D.: I assume you are referring to a procedure call an episiotomy. This is a small incision made to enlarge the exit from the vagina. The purpose of the episiotomy is to prevent strain during childbirth because of the baby's size. The incision is closed after the delivery of the placenta (afterbirth), and the stitches generally are absorbed or drop out, or may be removed by the physician.

Dear Dr. Solomon: If a woman is heterosexual, is there any possibility at all that she can get AIDS through sexual intercourse? Also, can a woman with AIDS give it to a man? — Ms. K.R., Dearborn, Mich.

Dear Ms. R.: A heterosexual woman can contract the acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS) in the same fashion that a homosexual man can — that is, through exposure to the semen of a infected partner. The biggest risk seems to lie in the practice of anal intercourse, which more easily permits the virus to enter the bloodstream.

As for your second question, it is theoretically possible for a woman to pass AIDS on to her male partner, but this is less common than transmission through male-to-male or female-to-female sexual contacts.

If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., P.O. Box 21487, Pikesville, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.

SIDS causes premature deaths

ATLANTA (AP) — Sudden infant death syndrome is the seventh leading cause of premature death in the United States, each year robbing Americans of more than 300,000 years of potential life, according to government health researchers.

The national Centers for Disease Control has said SIDS in 1984 deprived its U.S. victims of 314,000 years they would have had if they had lived to be 65.

The syndrome accounted for more than 2 percent of all life-years lost in the United States. Injuries topped the list of life-years lost, robbing Americans of 2.3 million life-years, or 20 percent of the total from early death.

The CDC, which measures potential life-years lost as an indicator of premature deaths in this country, stresses that 65 is not the average U.S. life expectancy, but is a statistical benchmark its researchers use.

SIDS, defined as the unexpected death of a previously healthy baby aged 2 weeks to 1 year, usually occurs during the first six months of life. Research suggests SIDS is the result of an abnormality of the body's automatic breathing or heartbeat regulators, but scientists do not know why it occurs.

The CDC, which studied statistical findings from the National Center for Health Statistics on causes of death between 1979-82, said SIDS robbed its victims of potential life-years numbering 340,000 in 1979, 356,000 in 1980, 342,000 in 1981 and 340,000 in 1982.

Scientists continue gene therapy research in curing destructive hereditary diseases

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — Scientists are getting closer to finding a cure for some of man's most destructive hereditary diseases.

Human gene therapy, in which doctors transplant copies of a normal gene into cells of a patient whose own body lacks the gene or has an abnormal gene, may eventually be used to cure patients with cystic fibrosis, various forms of hemophilia, and possibly muscular dystrophy.

Foreign genes have been transplanted successfully in animals, but scientists say successful human gene therapy is still a few years away.

"There is still plenty of work to be done before we get too optimistic," according to one scientist.

National group organized for 'preemie' parents

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — As doctors and nurses are increasingly able to treat babies born prematurely or with congenital or birth complications, they are realizing that the parents as well as the babies need special attention. Intensive care nurseries and communities have responded by developing support groups.

"Parents need to know that they are not alone in their feelings of guilt, anger, asking what they did wrong, and why this happened to them," said Sandy Garrand, president of Parent Care, a nonprofit national association aiding hospitals and communities in forming support groups and disseminating information on neonatal care.

Based at the Salt Lake Medical Center in Utah, Parent Care links parents, medical professionals and support groups across the country with the aim of helping parents cope with the ordeal of having a critically ill newborn. Medical personnel involved with neonatal departments felt that as more infants survived and social programs were being cut back, there was a need to increase parent support.

Begun in 1982, Parent Care now has over 400 members, including parents, professionals and groups, and officials expect membership to more than double by the end of this year. Over 700 parents and medical professionals attended the organization's most recent international conference.

According to professionals in the neonatal field, between 7 and 10 percent of all babies are born with complications. There are 700 intensive care nurseries nationwide, and over 350 support groups. Parent Care board members say that there are organizations for parents of babies with specific diseases but that Parent Care is the only umbrella group.

Parent Care officials emphasize, however, that local support groups are the backbone of the organization. Some are more than 10 years old. Additionally they say that support groups will continue to gain importance, as effects of interpersonal relationships on a baby's recovery are studied further. Many neonatal units have embarked on developmental programs to teach parents how to work with their infants in the unit.

"Support groups function to help parents cope emotionally so they can go into the intensive care unit and develop better family relationships from the beginning," said Patricia H. Evans, president of Neo-Life, the community-based support group in Lexington, Ky.

When Martha Paquette delivered Tricia four months early, the infant weighed only 17 ounces and doctors offered little hope that Tricia would survive. Paquette was helped through the ordeal by the Evanston Hospital support group, which Parent Care helped organize.

"It was very difficult to talk to outsiders," Paquette said. "Friends were afraid to ask about Tricia on a day-to-day basis and when they gave me sympathy I would just cry. We confided in the other parents and in the staff."

Patty M. Piaggesi's daughter, Elizabeth, was delivered 11 weeks early and suffered cardiac arrest twice in her first 60 days. The support group at the McGee Hospital in Pittsburgh gave Piaggesi a chance to share her concerns and fears with parents who had similar emotions and to have her questions answered by a social worker.

Across the country, support groups are structured in various ways. Most include parents of babies currently being treated in a hospital and are led by a social worker or neonatal nurse.

Some hospitals, such as the Evanston Hospital, offer parent-to-parent groups in which parents whose children were critically ill at birth return to help parents going through the ordeal. This counseling can be difficult, parents and neonatal professionals say, because it requires the parents to relive their experiences.

MISTER ROGERS

Mistakes learning experiences

By FRED ROGERS
with BARRY HEAD

Rogers

"A scaredy cat! That was me growing up," a friend told us the other day. "There was so much I didn't dare try. I can remember even back in first grade wanting to be able to kick a ball as well as some of the other children, but I didn't think I'd be able to, so I found something else to do instead.

"I avoided anything I thought I wouldn't do right or well, and I'd choose weird things to do because no one else would be doing them...and so no one would be better than I. When everyone was collecting stamps, I collected coins. When my friends got interested in riflery, I learned how to shoot a bow and fletch my own arrows. I wonder what I was so afraid of."

Listening to our friend talk, it was clear he had plenty of curiosity, so that wasn't the problem. We wondered whether he'd been afraid of competing — afraid of losing the love of the people he loved by losing out in a competition. He didn't think so; he remembered his parents always being supportive of his efforts to do the best he could, win or lose or draw.

"No," he said, "I think it was something else. I just never learned that making mistakes was a natural part of being human and a natural part of the way human beings learn."

What an important conclusion to come to — at any time of life — but certainly the earlier the better. We all do make mistakes as we learn, and not only is there nothing wrong with that, there's everything right about it. But if we grow up in our early years fearing mistakes, we may really become afraid to learn or try new things.

In our earliest years, of course, just about everything is a new challenge as we learn to control all the parts of our bodies and the many things our bodies can do. During these early months and years, a child is going to pick up from his or her closest caregivers an attitude toward taking on all these new challenges.

Most of us would probably agree that by showing outright disapproval of mistakes and accidents during this busy learning time, parents could dampen a child's willingness to try. But I believe there's another pitfall, too, one that may be less obvious, and it's this: As children strive to master the tasks ahead of them, parents can easily lavish praise and approval more on successful outcomes than on the trying itself.

In other words, the pleasure and pride a parent shows when a child tries may be more helpful in the long run than parental expressions of pleasure and pride when a child succeeds.

Our friend's reflections about his own growing up reminded me of the story of the young apprentice who applied to a master carpenter for a job.

"Do you know your trade?" the older man asked.

"Yes, sir!" the young man replied proudly.

"Have you ever made a mistake?" the older man inquired.

"No, sir!" the young man answered, feeling certain he would get the job.

"Then there's no way I'm going to hire you," said the master carpenter, turning back to his work, "because when you make one, you won't know how to fix it."

Parade of homes

Some of the exercise equipment in the home gymnasium was custom-made to Randal Kirk's specifications.

The home of Mrs. Jayne Kirk and Mr. and Mrs. Randal M. Kirk is featured in the the first of a four-part Sunday series on the Midland Junior Woman's Club's 17th Annual Parade of Homes benefit. Proceeds from the homes tour will go to the Palmer Drug Abuse Program, the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children, Hearthstone and the Educational Division on Child Abuse through the Rape Crisis Center. The Parade will be presented 1:30-5:30 p.m. April 27. Tickets are $7.50 and are available from club members. Children 12 years old and younger will not be admitted and tickets will not be sold at the door. For more information, call 689-8314, 683-6404 or 699-6696.

THE KIRK HOME

The sprawling house at 2 Edinburgh in Saddle Club Ranch Estates is actually two homes under one roof. The cozy home of Jayne Kirk shares a utility room and sunny garden room with the home of her son and daughter-in-law, Randal M. and Donna Kirk.

Jayne Kirk's living area has its own master bedroom and bath, guest bedroom with bath, living room, dining room and a kitchen with a triangular island and many built-ins. Mr. and Mrs. Randal M. Kirk's separate living area includes three bedrooms, four baths, a living room, a dining room, kitchen, den, a library and a gymnasium.

The house stands on a 2½-acre lot adjacent to a pecan orchard about three miles west of Midland. It is esentially a contemporary ranch-style home, but was decorated by the owners primarily in French Provincial with a number of Oriental accents.

Donna Kirk humorously described the French Provincial furnishings as "hand-me-downs" because many of them have been in her family for years.

Please see PARADE, Page 2F

An elaborate set of wooden toys brightens the room of young Randy Kirk.

Jayne Kirk's section of the home even has its own kitchen.

The curved stone fireplace is an outstanding feature of the family room.

DEAR ABBY

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Here's another for your continuing saga of grammar misuse: The misuse of I, ME and MYSELF. One does not answer the question, "How are you?" with, "Fine — and yourself?" That's like asking, "How is yourself?" The answer would have to be, "Myself is fine!"

To elaborate further, making a statement such as "My mother had three children — John, James and myself" is also wrong. Remove John and James, and you've said, "My mother had myself," instead of the correct, "My mother had me." One must be mentioned earlier in the phrase to qualify for the use of a "-self" word later in that phrase. Thank you! — JONA DENZ, RADIO ANNOUNCER, SACRAMENTO, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: Please resume your pet peeves in language abuses. My nomination for the most abusive misuse of the English language is the phrase "free gift." This is a redundancy because, by definition, a gift is something given without cost or obligation. Otherwise, it's not a gift.

How many times a day do advertisers promise us a "free gift"? The phrase is not only redundant, it's false, as when the "free gift is inside a box of breakfast cereal." If you want the gift, you must buy the cereal. — STEVE INGRAM, PORTLAND, ORE.

DEAR ABBY: I'm delighted that you continue to pass along common errors in the use of words. Here's my contribution: The misplacement of the word "only."

The following four sentences contain the same words, but the placement of the word "only" gives each sentence a different meaning:

Only I can tell you how to make this trip.

I can only tell you how to make this trip.

I can tell you only how to make this trip.

I can tell you how to make this trip only.

— GLEN B. SMEDLEY, COLORADO

DEAR GLEN: I can tell you only that your letter was a "trip." But apropos misplaced "onlys," remember the old favorite: "I Only Have Eyes for You"?

Since the composer obviously meant "I have eyes for you and you only," the title should have been, "I Have Eyes for Only You."

To say, "I only have eyes for you" means, "All I can offer you are eyes," which would be a big disappointment for the loved one.

DEAR ABBY: Two words, "capitol" and "capital," are often confused. My fifth-grade teacher taught us that we should think of a government building with a dome on it as the capitol.

Every other kind is spelled with an "a" — capital letter, capital in referring to money, and, of course, there's capital punishment, which is what happened to you if you confused "capitol" and "capital" in that class. — STANFORD '62

DEAR ABBY: Between you and me, the most irritating mistake in grammar is "between you and I."

I have heard some very well-educated people make this mistake, and I mean schoolteachers, talk-show hosts, radio and TV announcers and clergymen.

Please print this to let people know that nothing is ever between you and I — it's between you and ME. — OFF MY CHEST IN LONG BEACH

DEAR ABBY: Please add "further" and "farther" to your language abuse column. Many people don't know there is a difference. Is there a simple rule to remember to prevent further confusion? — FLORIDA FATHER

DEAR FATHER: Yes. Use "farther" to denote distance in space, and "further" for everything else. (Any further questions?)

AT WIT'S END

People have become paranoid about possessions being stolen

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

Sometimes you get to wondering if there's anything people won't steal anymore. Our houses are held together with locks and bolts. Our cars are wired with alarms against intruders, and thieving fingers have taken anything that isn't nailed down, from library books to pink flamingos from the lawn.

This nation has become paranoid about its possessions.

We've come a long way since we left bicycles out on the sidewalk all night long and slept with our doors open in the summer. I never knew how far until I entered a restroom recently and an attendant handed me two squares of tissues before I entered the booth.

I felt like a kid at camp. "Thank you but I can help myself," I said.

"There isn't any tissue in the booth," she said. "People steal it."

A restroom frequented by a class of freshman girls before the prom, I could understand the concern for the supply of toilet tissue, but what did she think I was going to steal it for?

However, there are still a few things left in this world that even an habitual thief will not filch, and I thought the world would sleep better tonight knowing what they are.

There is no need to bolt down hotel lamps and pictures anymore. Honest. We're not talking art here. We're talking ugly lamps that even the hotel doesn't want to waste a bulb on. The picture is the same one in every hotel room. A Japanese fishing boat with an orange sun going down behind it hangs above every bed in the country.

The theft of a grocery store shopping cart is punishable by fines or imprisonment or both. Think about it. How can you steal something that is welded together with 30 other carts and can be separated only through the use of a blowtorch? Assuming you separate one, what would you do with a large metal basket with four wheels that do not go in the same direction and is incapable of turning a corner?

The warning that always puts me off is the one posted in city and state parks about stealing the picnic tables. You could steal the Chrysler building easier than you could steal a picnic table. The chain on it is tethered 30 feet underground and the benches are set in cement. The table itself has enough graffiti on it to supply New York.

A post office pen is perfectly safe and doesn't even need a chain to contain it. The reason is obvious. They never work. No one steals a stray mutt or a generic kitten, an abandoned car or a broken umbrella.

As a matter of fact, this very newspaper you are reading that is packed with vital information, entertainment and the talents of hundreds of writers, photographers and cartoonists could be left in a public place tomorrow and not one person would steal it.

Maybe you'll sleep better tonight knowing that. I won't.

PARADE

The predominant color is peach and blue — except in the kitchens and utility room, which feature neutral tones, and the gym, which is rust.

The home gym is packed with free-weights and Icarian brand equipment, much of which was custom-made. Kirk worked with the California manufacturers of the Icarian equipment to choose what he wanted and how to best fit it all into the available space.

Although Kirk is the one who uses the gym the most, his wife said the entire family makes good use of the equipment.

Her mother-in-law uses the gym to keep fit, she said, and "can do 125 sit-ups."

"My son, who's 3, can use most of the machines," she added.

Another unusual feature of the home are the curving exterior walls of the living room and breakfast room and the curved stone fireplaces.

The rounded walls are a favorite feature of Midlander R.D. Bond, who designed and built the house approximately two years ago. The home's curves are echoed in the exterior front fencing, which encloses two brick patios.

Energy efficiency was also taken into account in the home's design. In the winter, warm air circulates from the garden room into the other rooms.

To further control the interior environment, the house has an automatic humidity control system.

"We fiddle with it," Donna Kirk said. "It really does help. You can feel the difference in your throat and sinuses."

There is also a central vacuum system designed so that vacuum hoses can just be plugged into wall connections, eliminating the hassle of lugging a machine around the 6,500-square-foot house.

Many nails needed

Copley News Service

If you're building a modern, 2,000-square-foot house, how many nails will you have to hammer? You're right if you guessed approximately 75,000.

Amsterdam: 'City of Diamonds' sparkles with attractions

By KATHERINE DAVIDSON
Copley News Service

This year Amsterdam is celebrating the 400th anniversary of its beginning as a diamond center, for it was in 1586 that city records first mention the name of a diamond cutter, Willem Vermaet. Since then, Amsterdam has become one of the most important diamond centers in the world — its cutters and dealers receive stones from every diamond-producing nation — earning the sobriquet "City of Diamonds."

Amsterdam is the capital of the Netherlands, a small country (at 16,464 square miles, it's about half the size of Maine) that offers a myriad of attractions — from clean, lush countryside and romantic canals to hearty cuisine and priceless collections of art. There also are the traditional tulips, windmills and wooden shoes, but the Netherlands has shed its stereotypical cocoon and emerged a modern butterfly.

A GREAT WAY to introduce yourself to Amsterdam is with a canal ride. As you wind through miles of waterways in a long narrow boat, a prerecorded multilingual tape points out sights of interest. Among them are houses richly decorated with ornate cornices, unusual gables and delicate stonework trimmings and tiles. The homes, built by powerful merchants during the golden age to flaunt their wealth, now are offices, apartments and houses for today's wealthy. The not-so-wealthy also live along the canals, setting up housekeeping on boats to avoid the high rents and costly utilities of the city.

Other sights include the narrowest building in the city, the "Cat Boat," a houseboat for wayward cats, and the Centraal Station, whose hot-pink trams are eye-catching, to say the least. Also lending color to Amsterdam and a canal cruise are bright flowers that treat the eye to unexpected flashes of pink, orange, yellow, red, purple from window boxes and gardens. At night the canals are lit with thousands of tiny bright lights that enhance the festive atmosphere.

The visual feast continues at the Rijksmuseum (National Museum). Built of brick (as is almost everything in the Netherlands, from houses and walls to sidewalks and streets), the massive red building is frosted with lacy white stonework and dotted with mosaics.

THE RIJKSMUSEUM contains the world's largest collection of paintings by the Dutch masters, including works by Rembrandt, Jan Steen, Vermeer, Reubens and Van Dyck. One easily could spend several days exploring the mazelike gallery, but if time is limited there are several "must-sees." The most famous painting is Rembrandt's "The Company of Captain Frans Banning Coq and Lieutenant Wilem van Ruytenburgh" — better known as "The Night Watch." Other exquisite paintings found here are "The Merry Drinker" by Hals and Vermeer's "The Love Letter" and "Lady in Blue."

Through the graceful archways of the Rijksmuseum and down Museumstraat is the Van Gogh Museum. This three-story gray-brick building houses the world's largest collection of the celebrated French painter's works: 200 paintings and 400 drawings. Paintings on display follow the chronological progression of Van Gogh's short career, and include such famous works as "Self-Portrait," "Sunflower" and "Wheatfield with Reaper."

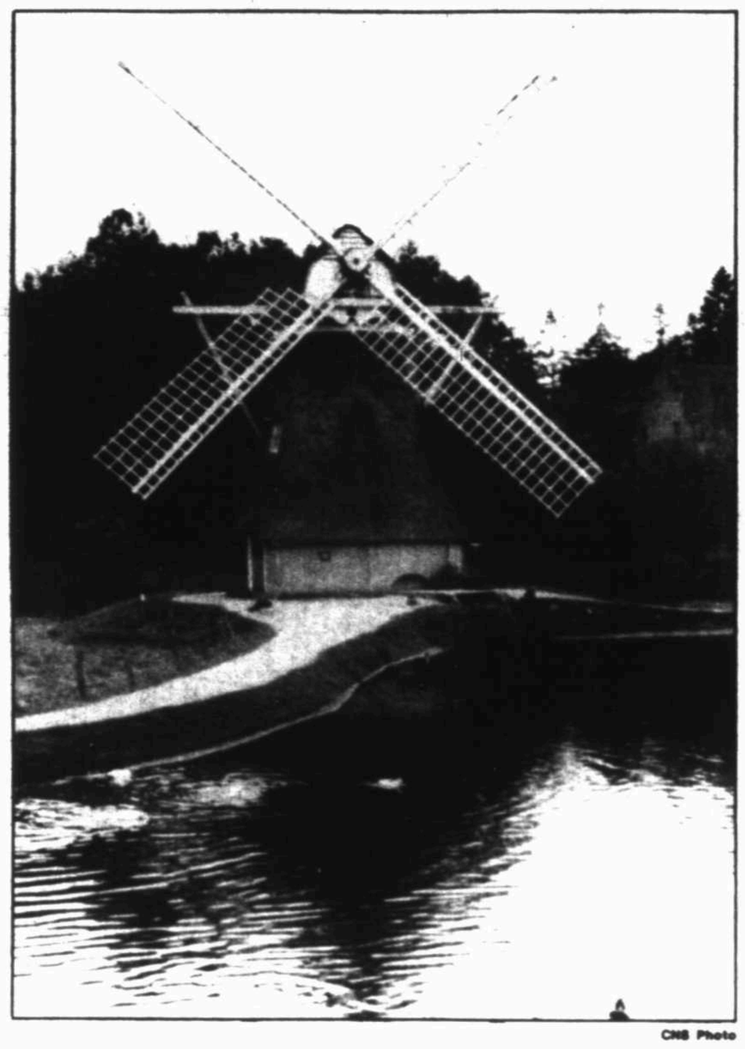

Other interesting museums are the Stedelijk Museum (Municipal Museum), which houses a fascinating collection of modern art; the Historic Museum, one of the most beautiful old buildings in Amsterdam, and the Anne Frank House, which preserves the memory of the girl who wrote her famous diary during World War II.

IN ADDITION TO visual treats, Amsterdam features taste treats. One is the popular rijstaffle (ricetable), a delectable Indonesian feast brought to the Netherlands by sea captains in the 17th century. Rijstaffle is a combination of different dishes and sauces served with nasi putih (white rice). Dishes include ayam smoor (chicken braised in Indonesian soy), rendang (spicy beef cubes), ikan goreng (fish in sweet-and-sour sauce) and sambalgoreng boontjes (green beans in spicy sauce).

The proper way to eat rijstaffle is to place rice in the center of your rimmed plate and servings of each dish around the rice. This allows you to enjoy the flavor of each dish separately. It's suggested you try the milder dishes first and work up to the hotter ones.

De Orient, one of the oldest Indonesian restaurants in Amsterdam, serves an excellent rijstaffle. The popular restaurant, decorated with leather wayang shadow puppets and wooden figurines, is intimate and inviting. The mini-rijstaffle is perfect for two, and vegetarians can order a meatless rijstaffle. It's best to phone ahead for reservations, but if you don't and the restaurant is full, the host will direct you to a nearby pub and fetch you when your table is ready.

ANOTHER CULINARY treat is the traditional Dutch pannoken. This plate-size pancake is served with apples, ham, bacon, ginger or combinations of these, and then topped with a thick dark syrup. Deceivingly filling, the pannoken is satisfying for lunch as well as breakfast, and some restaurants specializing in the pancake serve nothing but.

Restored buildings, such as this windmill, have been brought together at the Open-Air Museum near Arnhem to show how the Dutch worked and lived in the past.

With the sparkling city of Amsterdam as a home base, one easily can explore and sightsee other gems in this multifaceted country. To the east is Apeldoorn, home of the State-museum Palace Het Loo, former residence of the Dutch royal family and one of the major attractions in this region.

Het Loo was established in 1684 by King-Stadholder William III as a hunting lodge. Through the years, the palace was altered drastically — colonnades were removed, pavilions were added, the garden was extended, the brick exterior was stuccoed, the windows were fitted with shutters and additions were built. However, after seven years of extensive restoration that ended in 1984, the palace now can be seen in its original state.

WHILE HET LOO is not as opulent as some other European castles or palaces, it contains exquisite examples of Delft ware — from delicate vases to enormous planters — and large 17th century tapestries. At first glance, the use of marble from floor to ceiling is impressive. However, upon closer inspection you'll discover the marble isn't marble at all, but painted panels. Because the building isn't structurally strong enough to withstand the weight of real marble, artists were commissioned to paint — with feathers — the pale gray-, wheat- and salmon-colored panels.

Extensive gardens stretch behind the palace. The original Dutch gardens, said to have been more beautiful than those of Versailles, at one time were covered over, but have been unearthed and restored.

Precise scrollwork patterns, made with shrubs, flowers and pebbles, unfold between wide pathways of white gravel. Water shoots high out of some fountains and gurgles out of others, while graceful statues keep watch over the botanical cornucopia.

Near Apeldoorn, in the heart of the Hoge Veluwe National Park, is the Kroller-Mueller Museum, a showcase for paintings, sculptures and objets d'art of the 19th century. Allow yourself plenty of time here, for you will find a wealth of art outside as well as inside. The grounds surrounding the museum are a sculptural garden, where masterpieces created by Rodin, Moore, Hepworth and Dubuffet complement the natural beauty of the park. Inside the world-famous museum is a collection of 276 Van Gogh paintings and drawings in addition to works by Renoir, Picasso, Mondrian and Seurat.

ON ANOTHER DAY you might visit the Nederlands Openluchtmuseum (Open-Air Museum), north of Arnhem. This is not your typical museum. Rural life is the theme here, and buildings from all over the country have been brought together to create a living picture of how the Dutch worked and subsisted in the past.

You can wander around the lush park and see wooden houses, farmhouses, cottages, a brewery, a horse-driven oil mill and a school. You can visit the paper mill and see how the thick vanilla sheets are produced. The houses and other buildings are fully furnished, chickens scratch around the farms and there is a special exhibition of regional costumes.

After visiting Amsterdam and its outlying areas, head south to Maastricht, the provincial capital of Limburg and the oldest city in the Netherlands. Maastricht is a charming town of intimate cafes, winding streets and small shops, all of which line the River Maas, the city's namesake.

A walking tour of the city will take you by Vrijthof Square, centuries-old cathedrals — one with an unusual oxblood-red spire — historic and government buildings, museums and a water mill.

ONE OF THE MOST interesting attractions here is the famous Caves of St. Pietersberg, just south of the city. The caves are not nature's handiwork, they are the result of people cutting out blocks of marl, a kind of sandstone particularly suitable for building.

An enormous labyrinth of more than 20,000 passageways runs through the mountain, some of which open into enormous caverns. As you and your guide make your way along the rough path with a kerosene lantern lighting the way, charcoal drawings, inscriptions and fossils — shells, sharks' teeth, petrified bones and reptiles — can be seen on the walls. It's quite cool in the caves, so be sure to dress warmly.

Also south of Maastricht is the Chateau Neercanne. The hilltop chateau was built in 1698 for Baron Daniel de Popff, the governor of Maastricht, and has been turned into a restaurant. While retaining the stately manner of a chateau, oil paintings now grace the richly covered walls, crystal chandeliers sparkle overhead and fresh flowers adorn the tables.

The French cuisine of this romantic restaurant makes for an unforgettable dining experience. The specialty here is wild game, and for our dinner the chef prepared salade de caille au foie gras de canard cru (salad with quail and duck liver pate), filet de gigot de chevereuil au porto et champignons de grottes (filet of venison with wine sauce, mushrooms and baby vegetables), trois mille feuilles de fruits frais et son sorbet aux fruits de la passion (fresh fruit in pastry shells and sherbet).

THE HIGHLIGHT WAS a visit to the restaurant's wine cellar, which is really a Roman cave. Holding areas for the different wines have been carved from the marlstone, and flickering candles reveal that some of the dusty bottles, their labels crumbling with age, are more than a century old.

Many more attractions lie between Amsterdam in the north and Maastricht in the south, including the Hans Brinker Museum, the Museummolen, where you can visit a windmill and learn how it works, the sixth century St. Jan's Cathedral, a U.S. war memorial, and much more. All are worth seeing, if time permits.

Travel bargains still available for careful tourists

By LAUREN TSUJIMOTO

Americans traveling abroad should eat where the locals do, stay in the countryside or outside major metropolitan areas and shop for the specialty products of the country they are visiting. That's the advice of several heads of foreign government tourist offices to travelers trying to get more for their money this year.

"The value of the dollar has steadily dropped since last summer," explained Stella Plunkett, director of marketing for Deak-Perera, foreign exchange broker.

"In general it has dropped against those of European countries ... and particularly against the Japanese, Swiss and Germans," Plunkett said. "We're noticing a trend toward more travel in the South Pacific and Asian countries, and a decrease in the Middle East and Central Europe."

While the decline has averaged about 25 percent against most major currencies since last March, the news is not all bad for Americans traveling overseas. For instance, the exchange rate with Greece remains close to what it was a year ago.

"Americans don't have to do much to stretch their money here," said Vasilis Papadatos, director of the Greek National Tourist Organization. "Greece is one of the cheapest countries in Europe to visit now.

"You can find some terrific buys when it comes to leather goods, gold, silver, jewelry and copper items," Papadatos said.

"A bargain would even be possible now in a deluxe hotel because, as a result of last year's unfortunate events, our hotels and cruises have suffered the loss of many American travelers," he said.

Eager to see Americans return, many hotels and cruise lines have reduced prices to encourage more visitors, Papadatos said.

Tim Bartlett, the British Tourist Authority's manager for the Western United States, recommends that travelers to Britain try lower-priced accommodations.

"Country inns and bed-and-breakfasts are very reasonable," Bartlett said. For example, a bed-and-breakfast that costs $100 a night in the United States is as inexpensive as $15 or $20 there, he said.

"Spend more time outside the capital city. York, Edinburgh and Bath all have plenty to see," Bartlett said. "Save money by limiting the area you cover. One can happily spend a week in an area such as Oxford. As for dining, you can save a lot of money if you do as the British do and eat in pubs."

If shopping is your object, Italy has a lot to offer, according to Agostino Petti, travel commissioner of the Italian Government Travel Office in San Francisco.

Designer goods that cost $200 in the United States are as inexpensive as $60 or $70 in Italy, Petti said. "In addition to shoes, gloves and fashions, excellent artist silver is available at reasonable prices," he said.

In Germany, there are reasonable prices for rail travel and car rentals, according to Hans J. Baumann, director of the German National Tourist Office.

For savings on accommodations, Baumann recommends tourists stay at castles that have been converted into hotels or at converted historic buildings of the Romantik hotel chain.

"If you want lower-priced meals, go into smaller towns and restaurants. Or even into the suburbs of Munich, Frankfurt and Stuttgart," he said.

"It is going to be somewhat more expensive than last year, but prices are just about the same as they were two or three years ago," Baumann said.

Jean-Michel Harzic, Western U.S. director of the French Government Tourist Office, advises: "Buy in large stores where tax rebates are available. Pay with traveler's checks or credit cards for a better rate of exchange.

"Look in Paris for discount fashion stores. Use the Metro (subway system) around Paris — it is very safe. Try medium-range restaurants, especially in the Halles area, a district where a lot of new restaurants are opening."

Tips for passports, rail passes abroad

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Passports: Apply for passports at local county courts and post offices. The fee for a new 10 year passport is $42. Renewals cost $35, children under 18 pay $27 valid for five years. Take evidence of citizenship, some other identification (a driver's license) and two photographs no larger than two inches square.

Rail Passes: Here's what you'll be paying for Eurailpasses this year: $260 for 15 days, $330 for 21 days, $410 for a month, $560 for two months, $680 for three months. These are all first-class passes. If three persons are traveling together, Saverpasses sell for $199 each. The Eurail Youth Pass (second-class) is $290 a month, $370 for two months.

Refinance boom hits Midland

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

Suzan Conder/ Reporter-Telegram

With interest rates under 10 percent, the only question among Midland homeowners is when and how to refinance.

With interest rates plunging from as high as 21 percent in 1982 to an average of 9 percent currently, Midland homeowners are flooding lenders with requests to refinancing their loans.

"We've had a lot of calls the last 30 days," said Poppy Pieper, vice president for First Bankers Trust and Savings Asociation. "We've really been refinancing the last 60 days."

"We have had incredible interest," said Jim Muir, vice president with Jackie Johnson Mortgage Co. "We've had so many calls we just have to take a name and number and try to get back to them when we can."

However, Muir and other experts caution that the rush to refinance could prove to be premature.

The general rule is that refinancing a loan is beneficial if there is a 2 to 2.5 point drop in the interest rate, and if the borrower can get the closing costs back in about two years. "We figure the savings on an individual case because there's so many variables, like what the original interest rate was, and whether or not the amount is the full 90 percent of the appraised value," Pieper stated.

According to Karla McIntosh, vice president with Home Savings, "In most cases, if they have any equity at all we're able to add in the closing costs and save them some money. Anyone with a 12 or 12.5 percent note should look at refinancing. And if you can recoup the closing costs in two years or less, it could be beneficial."

According to James Geeslin, president of MPACT Mortgage Bankers, "MPACT advises that the monthly payment for a 30-year mortgage on a $90,000 loan at 15.5 percent is $1,175.06 per month. That same loan refinanced at the present 10.5 percent rate would have a monthly payment of $823.26. The yearly savings comes to $4,209.60, which would pay for the first year's closing costs under a conventional loan."

Locally, rates range from 8.5 percent to 10.5 percent. Drew Mortgage offers Federal Housing Administration (FHA) loans at 8.5 to 9.5 percent, and conventional loans range from 9.5 to 10.5 percent, according to Mitzi Booker, loan officer with the company. She estimated that 80 percent of Drew's new loans are for refinancing.

First Bankers offers a 9 7/8 percent rate for a 30-year fixed rate mortgage while Jackie Johnson offers rates ranging from 9 7/8 to 9.5 percent on conventional loans and 9 to 9.5 percent for FHA-VA loans.

The rate at Vista Savings is 10 1/4, one and one, according to Branch Manager Ben Weibel. He noted that, although the branch has been open about 10 days, there are an average of three inquiries a day about refinancing, or 20 percent of the calls into Vista.

Weibel also suggested that interested homeowners not wait, because "I feel like in the near future we'll see rates start to creep up. The last few months they've gone down so drastically, I think the law of supply and demand will take over."

Don Rardin, branch manager of First Federal Savings, said that from the time the rates dropped the first week of March, he's averaged 20 calls a day inquiring about refinancing. "We've experienced some slowdown, but we're still getting plenty of inquiries," he commented. His branch offers a 10 percent, one and one, on conventional loans, and 9.5 percent, 0 and one on FHA loans.

"We've been getting close to 100 calls a day," McIntosh said. "There's not quite as much interest right now, but we're still getting a lot." Rates at her savings and loan range from 9 7/8 to 10 percent on 30 year mortgages, and 9 5/8 on a 15 year mortgage. FHA rates range from 9.5 percent on a 30 year loan and 9 percent on a 15 year loan.

The FHA loans are attractive because they are assumable, and are guaranteed by the federal government, Rardin said, noting that 95 percent of his loans are FHA.

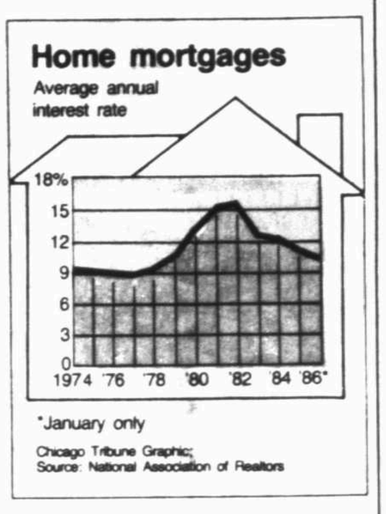

Muir said that something else homeowners might consider is a 15 year mortgage, as opposed to a 30 year mortgage. "In most cases, if you realize a 2.5 percent drop in interest, payments on a 15 year mortgage would be equal or less than a 30 year, and the payout would be quicker."

Another advantage would be faster build-up for equity. "This would be one method of getting equity," he said. His office has been offering the 15 year mortgages on a daily basis for two years, and Muir said approximately 38 percent of their loans are for 15 year mortgages.

Why the rate decline?

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — To understand why mortgage rates have dropped so low, stirring a frenzy in the housing industry, it helps to look backward a bit and then to look forward.

Little more than a half decade ago lenders made two declarations that at the time seemed unassailable.

First, they said, the fixed-rate, long-term mortgage was dead, destroyed by a volatile marketplace that made it impossible to trust the future. Instead, mortgage rates would vary with economic conditions.

Next, they declared the single-digit mortgage dead, perhaps never to be resurrected again — at least, they often told listeners, "in our lifetime."

Though the declarations sounded believable at the time, they have already been proved incorrect, to the dismay of the forecasters and the elation of borrowers.

By some estimates, 70 percent of mortgage loans today are at fixed rates. Many mortgages are back to the single digits, especially variable-rate loans. And if trends continue, single-digit, fixed-rate loans could become common.

What happened?

The restructuring of mortgage markets has made a lot more money available to lenders and, therefore, to borrowers.

Regulations that limited the level of interest rates that lenders could offer to depositors are largely gone now. And so are the old usury laws that limited the amount they could charge for loans.

Deregulated, mortgage lenders now compete for available capital with other institutions, such as commercial banks and businesses. No longer are they restricted in what they can pay — or in what they can charge to relend.

Lenders also have been freed of some of the risk in making mortgage loans because a strong "secondary market" has been created.

That is, mortgage lenders need not hold the mortgages they make; instead, they can sell them to wholesalers such as the Feder-

CONSIDERATIONS TO REFINANCE

It's a matter of balancing costs and savings

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

When should I refinance? That is the question on many minds in Midland these days, with mortgage rates dropping to 9 percent range.

Qualified lenders and mortgage brokers can help with the decision, but according to MPACT Mortgage Bankers, a mortgage subsidary of MCorp Texas Bank holding company, there are basically two key considerations in deciding to refinance. They are: 1. How much money will I save with a lower interest home mortgage? 2. What will be the closing costs involved in refinancing.

Some homeowners in Midland are finding savings of several hundred dollars per month in monthly mortgage payments, but for others refinancing charges may reduce those savings. The chart provided here lists typical charges normally involved in refinancing, but homeowners will want to prepare their own chart and check list when considering refinancing. Here are items to consider when preparing your own chart:

The Mortgage Bankers Association says you may not save money by refinancing your home unless your answer is yes to the following questions:

- Will you live in your home three more years?
- Will your interest rate go down at least two points?
- Your lender for the new loan will tell you how many points you will have to pay. Each point equals 1 percent of the loan amount.

According to the mortgage brokers, consulting with the lender can lead to other savings. Here are items to consider, using your settlement sheet from the original closing on your home or the chart provided here:

- Payoff penalty: Consult your contract to ascertain what the penalty will be for paying off your loan early.
- Title search: This fee can be negotiated.
- Title insurance: The mortgage bankers recommend asking the original lender if a "substitution loan rate" policy can be issued, rather than a new owner's policy. The old policy may apply, they say, and the savings could be as much as 70 percent of the roughly $400 fee.
- Credit report: This fee may be waived if you stick with the same lender.
- Attorney's fee: You can use your lawyer or the lender's. Ask what the fee will be.
- Points: Check with a number of lenders, especially institutions where you have accounts. You'll often do better where you already do business.
- Appraisal: This charge covers the cost of making sure your house is worth enough to justify the amount you want to borrow.
- Document preparation: These include standard fees for preparation, notary services and recording taxes may also apply.

Once you have roughly determined the expense of refinancing, you need to consider the savings.

Calculate only the principal and interest payments, since other fees such as insurance and taxes collect-

American familes smaller, homes bigger

WASHINGTON (AP) — American families are smaller than they used to be, but their homes are larger. More comfortable too, with amenities once considered luxuries now almost commonplace.

They cost more, too, of course.

The Census Bureau reports that the average American home had 5.1 rooms in 1983, the most recent statistics available, an increase from 5.0 in 1970 and 4.9 in 1960.

And the median price of homes being sold climbed to $75,200 in 1985. That's up from $20,100 in 1968, when the National Association of Realtors started keeping track. Median is a halfway point; half of all homes cost more than that amount, and half less.

Televisions are the single, most popular appliance in American homes. The A.C. Nielsen Co. estimated a few years ago that 98 percent of all U.S. homes had at least one television set, and the percentage has probably climbed since then.

The Census Bureau, in 1982, found that color sets were in 84.8 percent of homes.

In 1982, the Energy Department said virtually every home in America had at least one refrigerator.

Other popular appliances are: clothes washers, in 71.4 percent of U.S. homes; clothes dryers, 59.8 percent; electric ranges, 53.3 percent; electric ovens, 51.9 percent; gas water heaters, 51.1 percent.

Lower rates make homes more affordable

WASHINGTON (AP) — The decline in loan rates has not only triggered a homeowners' run to refinance high-interest mortgages at more favorable terms, but has also made homes more affordable to first-time buyers.

The housing affordability index, kept by the National Association of Realtors to measure how prices and interest rates affect home purchasing power, has risen to its highest point in eight years.

The index rose to 101 in January, one point above the level at which the average family has exactly enough money to qualify for financing the average-priced home.

The January reading means that a family with a median annual income of $28,054 had $275 more than the minimum amount required to buy an average-priced home, which now costs $77,000.

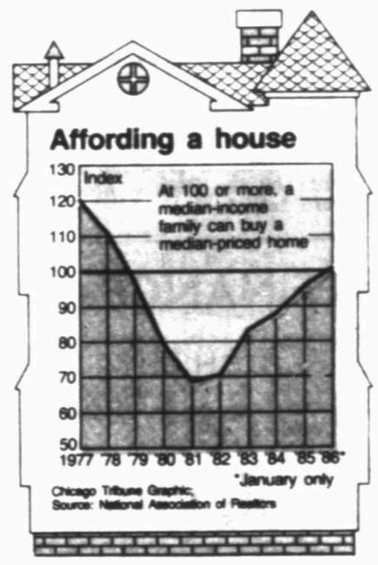

The typical family could have afforded a house priced at $77,700, according to the index. The Realtors' computations assume that buyers put down 20 percent of the purchase price, a standard requirement to obtain a conventional mortgage.

The January increase was up from the December mark of 100.2, the first time the index had gone above 100 in eight years.

"The drop in mortgage rates coupled with generally modest increases in home prices through much of the nation" put the average home more within the financial grasp of the average American, said Realtors' spokesman Walter Maloney.

The average home mortgage rate dropped from 11.12 percent in December to 10.83 percent in January, he said.

At the same time, however, homeowners are now more often late in making their mortgage payments, the National Association of Mortgage Bankers reported last week.

How many more times must we walk this road?

Over a year ago, Sheik Yamani, Saudia Arabian oil minister, warned that the golden age of Arab oil was not the seventies, but would be in the nineties. This week, at Geneva, he repeated that warning, saying the world would be jarred, in the 1990s, by price shocks more severe than those of 1973.

Why will it be the golden age of Arab oil, and how does Yamani know it?

It will be so, because the U.S. will be running on empty, totally and helplessly dependent on foreign oil for its most basic energy needs. We will become that way, Yamani warns, not so much because of a political crisis, but because of shortages caused by low oil prices which destroyed the incentive of non-OPEC producers to explore for and develop new reserves.

It is too bad some politicians and geographical factions in this country do not share Yamani's insight and wisdom. The fact is: Yamani and Saudi Arabia have discovered the magic of the boom-bust cycles in worldwide energy production and consumption and are learning to play them to their advantage, just as some investors become wealthy by playing the high-low cycles in the stock market. But better than the stock market, the Saudis can use production and market manipulation to make the cycles happen at will.

BASICALLY, here's how the cycles go:

In cycle one, the nation becomes addicted to cheap foreign oil. Conservation measures are thrown to the wind, waste encouraged. The national mentality quickly becomes like that of the automobile driver in a recent editorial cartoon. The man is shown driving a big car til the wee hours of the morning. In the caption he is saying: "With prices this low, I can't afford not to be driving." America gets high on cheap energy and thinks it will last forever. A national energy policy cannot be found anywhere, and nobody cares.

On the negative side of cycle one, the domestic energy industry shrivels from lack of incentive and U.S. reserves shrink. As dependency increases, OPEC market share increases.

In cycle two, when the U.S. and the rest of the energy importers are thoroughly hooked, Saudi Arabia constricts supplies for political or economic reasons, causing the price of oil to rise sharply. Because of the high oil prices, the Saudis are able to make billions upon billions in U.S. dollars, which they use in turn to buy U.S. assets, which have been put on the market at distressed prices because of high energy costs.

But there is also a built-in negative for Saudi Arabia or OPEC (positive for the U.S.) in cycle two. The same high oil prices that fill Arab coffers also provide incentive for America's domestic oil industry and that of other oil importing nations to revitalize and expand reserves. Because of higher prices, a drilling boom is generated in the depressed U.S. oilpatch. In time, new reserves are found and non-OPEC production increases. As a result, oil prices begin to soften legitimately and Arab worldwide market share begins to gradually contract.

SENSING THAT the noose is loosening, the Arabs contrive some reason to slash the price of oil again, causing cycle one to repeat.

It is a proven boom-bust cycle that obviously works very well for the Saudis and one they intend to capitalize on regularly, judging from Yamani's statements.

We are now obviously in cycle one, headed for cycle two, and others share my concern for the continual replaying of this scheme.

Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca warns: "Cheap gas is like a drug. We're going to get hooked again, and become energy hostages again. If not us, our children...our country's energy policy is just plain stupid."

Charles DiBona, American Petroleum Institute: "Falling non-OPEC production and rising consumption, produced by lower oil prices, will set into motion the next phase of the cyclical progression of the world oil industry — higher oil prices."

Raymond Hefner, president Independent Petroleum Association America: "The U.S. will again be at the mercy of OPEC both as to supplies and prices of essential energy."

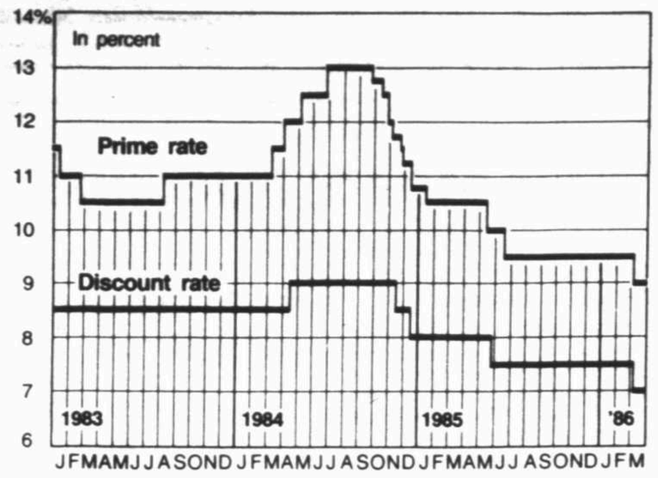

Mack Wallace, Texas Railroad Commission: "With crude prices at $15 per barrel or below, we will lose 30 percent of the nation's producing capacity by 1990...We are stacking drilling rigs faster than any peacetime army ever stacked its rifles... Spurred by low prices, the nation is headed down the same road to energy disaster."

The question is: How many more times must we walk down this road, before a comprehensive energy policy, designed to protect consumers and producers, is drafted by our political leaders.

BOOM

"A lot of people are going from the 30 year to the 15 year mortgage. They're cutting the term in half and substantially reducing the interest rate over the life of the loan," McIntosh said. "In some cases we can even go to the 15 year loan and still reduce payments."

The falling interest rates have been given credit for a 4.4 percent climb in sales of new single-family homes in January, their highest monthly level in two years. Also, sales of existing homes have been at their highest pace in seven years, the government reports, a trend many industry analysts expect to continue through most of 1986.

The refinance boom has generate tremendous fee income for lenders, but some industry analysts have expressed concern that lower yield on mortgage portfolios could have an adverse effect on certain ailing thrifts, by squeezing profit margins. Midland lenders, however, are unamious in their approval of the refinance boom, saying it is good not only for the consumer but for the lenders.

Richard Baxter, president First Bankers doesn't believe his business and that of other will be affected that much. "The majority of our rates were variable, and were coming down anyway. There might be a bit of a squeeze, but I don't anticipate much impact." He said he's glad to see the lower interest rates, especially during the present downturn in the local economy. "I consider it good for the consumer."

Peter Link, president of Home Savings, said refinancing interest at his firm has been "significant," and feels the lower rates are positive for both the industry and the consumer. He added that he doesn't anticipate any adverse affects on Home Savings profits.

Rardin said his company sells its mortgage loans on the secondary mortgage market, and the only income the loans generate is a portion of the monthly interest for servicing.

Another negative effect industry experts anticipate is a slowdown of savings and loan industry's efforts to originate more variable-rate loans.

The variable rate loans were begun in the early 1980s to help combat rising interest rates. Rardin said the variable rate loans are not as attractive now that the average fixed rate is below 10 percent. First Federal now offers an 8.75 percent, one and one variable loan with a two and five cap. The cap means the rate can vary only 2 percent in one year, and five percent over the life of the loan.

Muir said his firm has discontinued the variable rate loans.

al National Mortgage Association, which package them as securities that are sold to investors.

Such securities compete in the open market with stocks and bonds for the investor's dollar, making available to housing much larger amounts of money than ever could be accumulated from savings deposits alone.

Most economists agree that progress in curbing inflation is almost as basic a reason for the improvement in mortgage markets.

After several years of inflation at less than 5 percent a year, even the cynical began to believe that double-digit rates wouldn't return quickly. And the decline in oil prices reinforced the notion of economic stability.

Adding enormously, economists in housing and elsewhere state, was Congress' passage of the Gramm-Rudman act, which afforded even the doubters some convincing evidence that the nation finally would face up to its budget deficit problems.

These events, said David Seider, a former Federal Reserve economist and now a senior staff vice president of the National Association of Homebuilders, not only helped lessen inflation but also squeezed out inflationary expectations.

Such expectations, financial people contend, had produced the "inflation premium," an additional few interest points that lenders added to rates in case inflation returned. Some called it "the just in case" fee.

Seider, along with thousands of other economists, academics, bankers, business people and the like, believe an accommodative stance by the Federal Reserve Board helped.

ed as part of your mortgage payment will likely remain the same after refinancing.

Subtract the potential new payment from the current principal and interest payment to determine the monthly savings.

Divide the cost of refinancing by the monthly savings to determine the number of months it will take refinancing to pay off.

If you plan to be in your home for considerably longer than that, it may pay to get rid of that costly old mortgage.

Most real estate brokers and lenders should be able to determine quickly what monthly principal and interest payments would be at today's rates on the amount you still owe.

What are they saying?

The mortgage lending industry has its own language. Here's a list of terms, prepared by Hearst News Service, which lenders say are often misunderstood by home buyers:

– Adjusttable rate mortgage (ARM): An ARM is a mortgage loan that allows the interest rate to be changed at specific intervals over the maturity of the loan based on an established index, such as U.S. Treasury bonds.

– Amortization: This refers to a gradual paying-off of a debt by periodic installments. For example, a $100,000 loan is arranged at a 12 percent interest rate. The borrower pays $13,500 in the first year. Of that payment, $12,000 is for interest and $1,500 is amortized payment of the principal amount.

– Closing: The closing is the act of transferring ownership of property from seller to buyer in accordance with a sales contract.

– Closing costs: Closing costs represent various fees and expenses payable by the seller and buyer at the time of closing. Some of these fees are brokerage commissions, lender points, title insurance, inspection and appraisal fees and attorney fees.

– Conventional loan: A conventional loan is a mortgage loan obtained from a lender other than the Veterans Administration or the Federal Housing Administration.

– Fannie Mae: This term is a nickname for Federal National Mortgage Association, a corporation that specializes in buying up mortgage loans, mostly from mortgage bankers, to become the underwriter of the loans, or the agency to which the loans must be repaid.

– Federal Housing Administration: FHA is an agency of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development that administers many loans, loan guarantees and loan insurance programs designed to make more housing available.

– Fixed rate: This refers to a mortgage loan with an interest rate and monthly payment that remains constant over the life of the loan.

– Freddie Mac: This is a nickname for Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp., an organization that purchases mortgage loans, mostly from savings and loan associations. See Fannie Mae.

– Origination fees: These are charges to a borrower to cover the costs of issuing the loan, such as credit checks, appraisal and title expenses.

Basin rig count up first time in four months

After 15 weeks of downturn, the Permian Basin rig count gained five to end the week at a count of 177. However, there was continued bad news for the U.S. rig count, falling an additional 74 rigs to hit a low of 1,063 rigs.

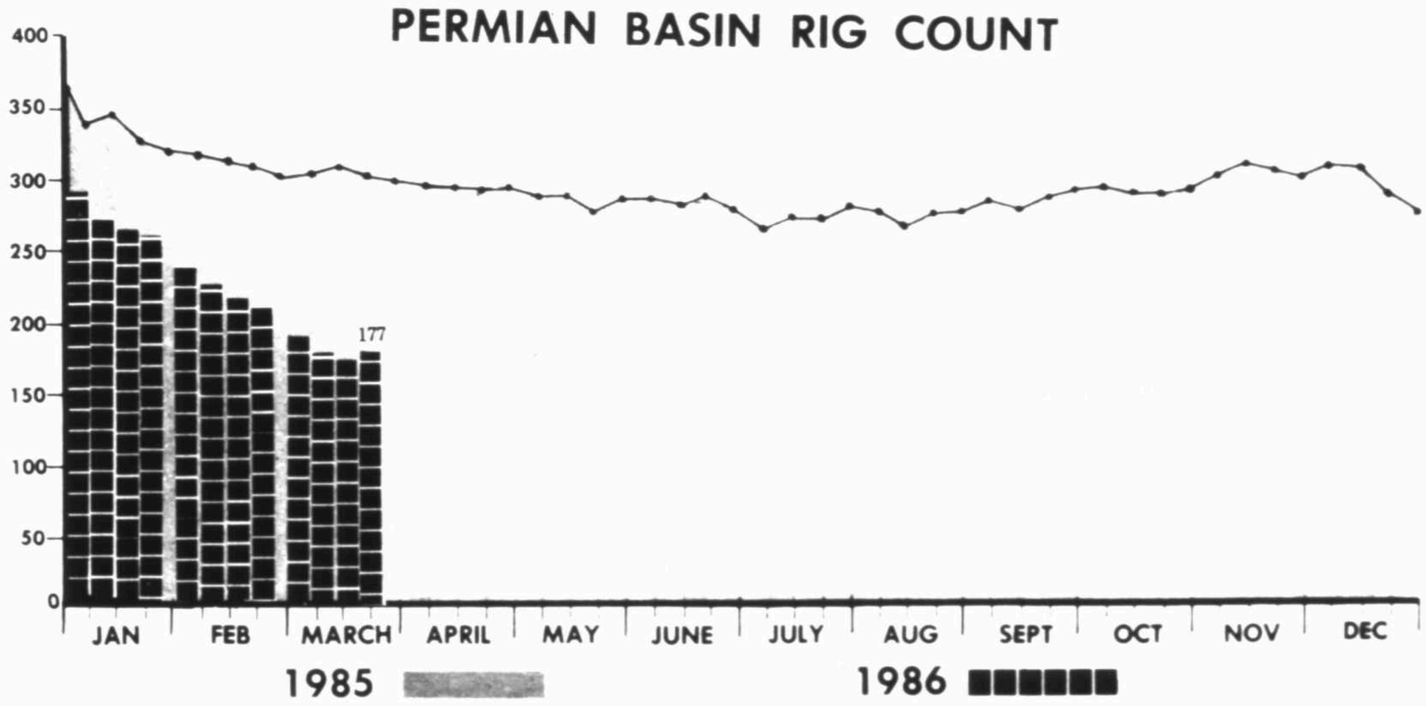

Locally, Midland County dropped a rig, leaving nine rigs at work here. Ector County added to its count, up one for a four rig tally. Andrews County proved the big gainer, jumping five rigs to 21. Lea County continues to be the most active in the Basin with 22 rigs working there. New activity was seen in Concho, Cottle and Culberson counties.

Nationally, Texas rig activity declined by 28 rigs to post a week-end total of 358. Louisiana totals also fell, down 24 from last week's count of 185. Oklahoma managed to add to its count, up seven to 166.

Canada, like the U.S., has been experiencing severe downturn in the industry, dropping 43 rigs for a total of 325 active.

A year ago there were 302 rigs at work in the Permian Basin and 1,939 active rigs in the nation.

JOHN R. SEAY, Midland, has been appointed to the Interstate Oil Compact Commission by Governor Mark White.

Seay, owner of Fossil Productions, attended undergraduate school at Angelo State University. He is a member of the Society of Petroleum Engineers. Seay is replacing Edward Callahan of Houston.

Congress wants imported cars shipped on U.S. boats

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the flow of Japanese cars to America sure to continue unabated, some members of Congress are trying to at least guarantee that a fair share of the imported autos gets shipped here on U.S. vessels.

A House Merchant Marine and Fisheries subcommittee held its first hearing last week on two bills designed to increase U.S. shippers' business from foreign exporters. One is specifically directed at Japanese cars, requiring exporters to ship as many vehicles on U.S.-registered vessels as they do on Japanese carriers.

Rep. Walter Jones, D-N.C., chairman of the committee and sponsor of that bill, said the legislation is needed to help U.S. shippers break into a market whose exporters have been shutting them out.

About 44 percent of the 2.2 million cars Japan sent to the United States in 1985 were carried on Japanese-registered vessels, and the rest were carried on Liberian, Panamanian and Singaporean car carriers, many of which are owned by Japanese companies, according to the committee.

Currently there are no U.S.-flag car carriers, but American companies have expressed interest in getting into the market.

Jones told the merchant marine subcommittee, "It is virtually impossible for the U.S. merchant marine to develop any new business if they are being discriminated against in the international marketplace."

Rep. Mario Biaggi, a New York Democrat who chairs the subcommittee, is the sponsor of a second bill that would require the United States to make cargo-sharing agreements with its major trading partners, reserving up to one-third of trade for each of the partners and leaving the rest unrestricted.

Representatives of automobile importers and the Reagan administration criticize both bills as anti-competitive and potentially costly to American consumers.

Robert McElwaine, president of the American International Automobile Dealers Association, said the two bills would create no more than 600 to 1,000 jobs and ultimately cost American consumers $1 billion a year in higher prices due to increased shipping costs.

The Automobile Importers of America, representing 11 European and eight Japanese companies, said no policy restricts U.S. shippers from bidding for Japanese cars shipments, but that American companies in the past haven't been able to compete in price or quality.

Jeffrey Shane, deputy assistant secretary of state for transportation affairs, said the legislation would "severely undercut" efforts to foster free trade. Administration efforts to encourage more access to Japanese shipping markets already have "borne fruit," he added.

Honda Motor Corp. has announced it will begin shipping 40,000 autos a year on a U.S.-registered ship starting in 1987, and Toyota Motor Co. intends to transport 10 percent of its U.S.-bound cars on American ships, starting with a contract to ship 30,000 cars annually on U.S. vessels, Shane noted.

Philip Shapiro, vice president of Apex Marine Corp. which manages U.S.-registered ships, says American companies are being excluded from the Japanese market by exporters' "blind adherence to past industry practices rather than by an inability of the U.S. operators to compete in price and service."

"Because the Japanese exporters which control carrier selection are so strongly motivated by nationalist preferences for their own companies and so unwilling to disturb the status quo, this bill is needed to give us an opportunity to compete on an equal basis," he said of Jones' bill.

Frank Drozak, president of the AFL-CIO's Maritime Trades Department, said that while there's no set policy against Japanese cars being transported on American ships, "access to the market for shipping services in Japan has long been restricted through a complex variety of trade barriers.

Adobe Resources reports income, full cost ceiling impairments

NEW YORK — Adobe Resources Corp. has announced income from operations, before full cost ceiling impairments, of $12.2 million in 1985.

These earnings represent the results of Madison Resources, Inc. for ten months and Adobe Resources for two months reflecting the consolidation of Madison Resources with Adobe Oil & Gas Corp. on October 31, 1985. On a pro forma basis, income from operations, before full cost ceiling impairments, was $40.7 million. The pro forma results assume the consolidation took place on January 1, 1985.

Despite an increase in volume of oil and gas reserves during 1985, Adobe will record certain impairments related to its oil and gas assets. As announced in September 1985, Adobe has recorded a write-down in connection with the consolidation of Madison Resources with Adobe Oil & Gas. In addition, the Corporation has chosen to reflect first quarter 1986 oil price declines in its 1985 full cost ceiling impairment. The following impairments have been recorded in 1985:

- $94.7 million caused by the full cost ceiling write-down resulting from the purchase accounting treatment of the consolidation of Adobe Oil & Gas Corp. with Madison Resources, Inc.
- A full cost ceiling write-down of $89 million, of which $82 million is due to post year-end price reductions
- A write-down of certain of Adobe's equity and cost basis investments, a primarily in the oil and gas industry amounting to $55.5 million.
- Office consolidation and severance expenses of $4.5 million.

All but $2.8 million of these impairments are non-cash charges. The result of the impairments discussed above combined with the Corporation's operating revenues and expenses and its results of discontinued operations is a loss for the year of $219.1 million.

Stanley R. Rawn, Jr., chairman and chief executive officer, stated: "It is important to note that about $95 million, or approximately half of the total ceiling impairment charge to earnings, relates to the particular accounting treatment involved in the consolidation of Madison Resources and Adobe Oil & Gas Corp.

Computer, geology courses planned at Graduate Center

The Permian Basin Graduate Center has slated new courses in geology and computers.

"Roosevelt Positive" in Oil and Gas Fields in the Permian Basin, will be held April 1 from 7 to 10 p.m. Will Green and David Glenn, BHP Petroleum "Americas," Inc. will instruct. Fee is $35.

"Introduction to PC(MS)DOS" will meet April 8-9 from 7 to 10 p.m. A basic knowledge of DOS is fundamental to operating a personal computer. DOS is basically the set of instructions that run the computer, the traffic that controls all activity, such as data transfer, disk access, printing, screen display, etc., inside the computer. T.R. Windecker will instruct. Fee is $130. Eligible for 6 CPE credits.

All IRAs work against the clock.

Ours give you one.

When you contribute $2,000 to an InterFirst Individual Retirement Account by April 15th, you'll receive more than a tax break. We'll give you an AM/FM clock radio as a gift. And if that's what gets your attention, great. But we also feel you should know that an InterFirst IRA has quite a bit more to offer you than a clock radio.

Bonus rates are how we begin. To get your IRA off to a good start, InterFirst offers a special bonus rate when you invest in a fixed-rate IRA CD for one year or longer. Simply talk to an InterFirst banker for details.

How you earn is your option. You can also invest in a Money Market Savings IRA Account or a variable-rate IRA CD. With these investment options, you can make periodic deposits up to your maximum contribution. Additionally, if you enjoy trading stocks, bonds, government securities, zero-coupon bonds and options, you may want to consider managing your own Self-Directed IRA. Through InterFirst Brokerage Services, you can do so and save up to 70% on brokerage commissions.

Your first step is InterFirst. To open your InterFirst IRA, step into your nearest InterFirst bank. You'll find experienced IRA counselors ready to help you choose the IRA plan that's right for you. All it takes is a little free time. And as we mentioned, we'll give that to you. We believe in you.

West Texas oilmen struggle to endure

By THOMAS C. HAYES
New York Times News Service

MIDLAND, Texas — Perkins D. Sams acquired luxury cars, a penthouse office and expensive artworks before the oil boom ended four years ago. Now, having lost much of that personal wealth, he is straining to keep together the small oil exploration business that created it.

"Our revenue has dropped from $400,000 a month to about zero," said Sams, who has ridden the boom-and-bust cycles here for 35 years. "We have money available, and we're going to continue, but it's going to be a totally skeleton operation."

That is more than can be said for thousands of deal makers, drilling contractors, geologists, geophysicists, engineers and financiers who came here over the years to plumb for oil in the Permian Basin of West Texas. If oil prices stay below $15, they will see their businesses and careers wiped out before the year is over, according to local lawyers, bankers and executives.

Indeed, while much of the nation celebrates falling gasoline prices, the high plains of West Texas seem destined to suffer severely if crude oil prices stay low. The region holds the biggest concentration of oil reserves in the lower 48 states, with 22 percent of the nation's total.

It is an inescapable fact for West Texans that it costs more to extract oil here than in other high-production parts of the world, especially Saudi Arabia and Kuwait. Oilmen were not too troubled by that four years ago when they ordered rigs and added employees, expecting that by now oil would be selling for more than $45 a barrel. The truth, at $12 a barrel, has left many companies broken and many egos humbled.

"BEING POSITIVE thinkers by nature, it has taken a while for people in Midland to realize what is happening to them," said F. Henry Callaway, a petroleum engineer who operates a small exploration company with his two sons. "There are a lot of highly paid, highly skilled technical people heading for an extremely difficult time. People are in a state of shock."

Although oil prices have been stable or declining gradually for a few years, the impact from the two-month-old collapse of crude prices "is just beginning to hit us now," said James L. Williams, a local business consultant. "In a year or year and a half, it will have rippled through the entire economy here."

Midland, in the heart of the Permian Basin, became a boom town after the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries jacked up prices in 1973 and again in 1979. Between 1980 and 1984, it was the nation's fastest-growing city, with per-capita income and education levels that ranked among the nation's highest.

Last year, however, the county's population remained stable at 110,500. Bank deposits and airline boardings fell.

In February, new unemployment claims doubled, to 729, from 1985's monthly average. The unemployment rate climbed to 5.5 percent in Midland and to 6.4 percent in nearby Odessa in January, rising a full percentage point from December. Bankruptcies among individuals and businesses are running 25 percent ahead of last year.

EMPLOYMENT IN the oilfields fell in Midland and nearby Odessa to a combined 19,900 in January, from a peak of 24,700 early in 1982. And the distress is spreading to other business sectors. Total nonfarm employment in Midland fell by 5,600, to 49,100, in January; in Odessa, it dropped by 12,600, to 51,900.

One industry especially hard hit has been banking. The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. set up shop in 1983 after the failure of the First National Bank of Midland, which had $1.3 billion in assets. Six other, smaller banks in the Permian Basin have failed, and the FDIC, which is supervising the disposition of the bad loans, is now Midland County's third-largest employer.

"Everybody geared up and borrowed," recalled Mac McGee, marketing director of the Cactus Drilling Co., one of the largest contract drillers in West Texas. "The banks can't afford to carry companies very long. If things don't pick up some, it's going to be a real tragedy."

The tally of active rigs in the Permian Basin has dropped to 173, from 298 a year ago, trimming an estimated $50 million from local incomes. Drilling companies that were paid $200,000 to open a 10,000-foot well during the boom — a job that takes two weeks — today ask for $90,000 and lose money at that. Rigs that cost $3 million to build four years ago now fetch $150,000 at auction.

DOZENS OF incomplete wells have been abandoned, hundreds of slow-producing wells have been capped permanently and thousands of others temporarily shut. With 15 people idled every time a rig stops working, hundreds of workers are roaming the oilfields seeking active rigs.

Analysts say that if oil prices stay below $20 for two or three years, the industry in the United States will be reshaped into a dramatically smaller business that will have lost its technological edge.

"You're going to see an exodus of both people and capital" from the oil business, said John C. Sawhill, a former energy secretary and now head of the energy consulting group in Washington of McKinsey & Co. "There is no question that we're going to lose capability."

Already, geologists and engineers are quitting the industry. As many as half of the 44,000 members of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists could be unemployed by summer, according to Fred Dix, the group's executive director.

One young geologist, William J. Conroy Jr., who is 28, is looking for partners to invest in a new well after he lost his job at a major independent production company in January. Among other young geologists whom he knows, one has headed for law school, another into a Navy flight training program and another to Arizona to become a financial planner.

"IT DOESN'T matter how good you are as a geologist," he said. "If a company cuts back in a county you are working in, you get laid off."

The harshest slap yet to the Permian Basin is expected to arrive shortly, when payment checks for February's crude-oil production arrive from refiners. The receipts are expected to be about $6 a barrel less than the previous month's, with another drop of $6 or $7 a barrel possible in April.

MEETINGS

Local operator to address paleontologists

Benjamin F. Hoffacker

The Permian Basin section of the Society of Economic Paleontologists and Mineralogists will host a noon luncheon speaker on Tuesday, April 1, at the Midland Center. The luncheon is slated for 11:30 a.m.

Benjamin F. Hoffacker, an independent operator and consultant in Midland, will address the society, providing a presentation on "The Hylton NW Field's Tectonic Effect on the Suggs Ellenburger Producing Area - Nolan County, Texas."

A re-evaluation of the geology of the field indicates that the pre-Pennsylvanian tectonics associated with this field may have affected the recently developed and active Suggs Ellenburger field some six miles to the west. Both fields are located along the Fort Chadbourne Fault System of the Eastern Shelf of the Midland Basin.

Hoffacker received his bachelor's in geology from Lehigh University, and a master's degree in petroleum geology from the University of Pittsburgh. After holding a variety of managerial and staff assignment positions with Monsanto, The Texas Co., Seaboard Oil Co., South Penn Oil Co., and Stanolind, he is now president of Hoffacker Exploration, Inc.

Basin economists host Dallas congressman

Congressman Richard K. Armey, of the 26th Congressional District, which covers North Dallas,Denton and Arlingon, will speak at the Permian Basin Economics Club meeting on April 1. The meeting is scheduled for 12 moon at Mission Country Club.

Guests will be offered a special meal price of $12, compared to $9 for members.

Dr. Armey received his doctorate in economics from the University of Oklahoma, and is former head of the Economics Department at North Texas State University.

API, IADC schedule joint meeting April 8

Alex Massad

There will be a joint meeting of the American Petroleum Institute and International Assocation of Drilling Contractors on April 8, at Green Tree Country Club. Social hour will begin at 5:30 p.m. and dinner at 6:30 p.m. Price is $15.

Guest speaker for the meeting will be Alex Massad, director of Mobil Corp. and president of the firm's Exploration and Production division. His topic will be "Where to From Here," a look at how the petroleum industry got to where it is today, what the near-term outlook is, and what the indications are for the balance of the decade.

The Oklahoma native received his bachelor's degree in petroleum engineering from Oklahoma University in 1944, and lager served as an engineering officer in the U.S. Navy during World War II.

He has worked in various field activities and held numerous engineering and managerial positions in Mobil operations. He came to the Midland division in 1965, following a Middle East assignment, later becoming general manager of the division. In 1968, he was named executive vice president for Exploration and Producing of the North American division, moving to a similar position in the International Division in 1970.

He was elected senior vice president of Mobil Oil in 1975, and made a director in 1976. He was elected to the board of Mobil Corp. in 1977, when he was appointed president of the Exploration and Producing division.

Firm found guilty of age discrimination

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Thousands of Westinghouse Electric Corp. employees nationwide could share more than $20 million under a judge's ruling that the company practiced age discrimination, an attorney said.

U.S. District Judge Marvin Katz ruled that Westinghouse had engaged in "blatant, willful" discrimination in denying severance pay to retirement-age employees after they were laid off.

The ruling followed a seven-day trial in September on a 1983 lawsuit filed by the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

EEOC attorney Lanier E. Williams said he was "absolutely delighted" by the ruling, but added, "I regret the fact that it has taken so many years for it to get to this point."

Westinghouse spokesman Charles Carroll in Pittsburgh said the company would not comment until seeing a copy of the 66-page ruling.

The EEOC had challenged a Westinghouse policy barring laid-off union and management employees from collecting severance pay and a pension.

Katz dismissed Westinghouse's argument that the practice amounted to "double-dipping," saying the two serve different purposes.

"Severance pay is a short-term separation allowance," he said. "It affords an employee breathing room to think through his situation and alternatives, and provides time to seek new employment without starving.

"In contrast, the pension is a provision for long-term retirement."

Westinghouse had said its severance-pay policy was based not on age, but on whether the employee was eligible for a pension.

But Katz said: "Age and retirement are, in fact, so closely linked that a criterion based on one is a criterion based on the other."

The judge ordered Westinghouse to abolish the practice and without specifying a damage amount ordered the company to pay the workers double what they are owed, citing a reckless disregard for federal age-discrimination law.

He also appointed a court master to hold hearings to determine the exact amount due each worker.

EEOC regional attorney Spencer H. Lewis Jr. estimated the damages at more than $10 million, but Williams said later the amount could be more than $20 million and affect thousands of Westinghouse workers laid off around the nation since 1980.

"We'd much prefer that employers would come in compliance with the law," said Williams. "Naturally, if employers come in compliance, workers don't have to wait so long to get their benefits."

Katz, in his ruling, said Westinghouse "ignored increasingly clear signs that its policies were illegal," including court rulings striking down benefit plans similar to its own.

Instead, the judge said, the company made "feeble excuses" and mounted a "stubborn, protracted and futile defense."

The original suit was brought on behalf of 35 employees laid off from Westinghouse's Lester, Pa., plant. In 1984, the EEOC expanded the suit to include Westinghouse operations nationwide.

In a similar case, the U.S. Supreme Court in 1984 let stand a ruling against Westinghouse that the company could not deny severance pay to older workers allowed to take early retirement after their plant in Belleville, N.J., closed down.

Breckenridge, like other towns, facing realities of oil bust

AP Laserphoto

Roger Wootton, mayor of Breckenridge, left, and C.J. Myrick, owner of a small field service company, are preparing for the worst. As the price of oil drops, residents of the town that once billed itself as the "world's greatest oil field" are cutting jobs, slashing salaries and refiguring budgets.

BRECKENRIDGE, Texas (AP) — Like so many former boom towns across the nation's top oil-producing state, this community set amid the scruffy beauty of west central Texas is studded with oil wells.

At the start of the decade, $30-a-barrel petroleum prices enabled the local school district to pay cash for a new track, two new buildings, classroom additions and a complete overhaul of the football stadium.

"We got used to having this much money," said school board president Ron Payne.

But with today's spot price hovering near $11 a barrel, Payne is talking about tax increases.

The harsh realities confronting Breckenridge also face the entire state as Texas wrestles with a sudden cycle of economic decline after years of plenty.

The year in which Texas is celebrating 150 years of independence perhaps will be remembered as the time when another kind of independence began — the beginning of the end of the state's dependency on oil.

"For a long time, oil prices were going up. That allowed Texas to provide growing services for a growing population. There's nothing wrong (with that)," said Dr. Thomas Plaut, the former economic forecaster for the Bureau of Business Research at the University of Texas, who recently joined the state comptroller's office.

But while most of the rest of the country is benefiting from cheap oil, it has tarnished the glittering lure of Texas.

THE IMPACT CAN be seen in an 8.4 percent February unemployment rate, the worst in three years, as well as a dramatic decline in Texas' population growth, a projected two-year state budget shortfall of $1.3 billion, troubled banks, empty office towers and dozens of business failures.

The problem has been particularly pointed in the oilfields of West Texas, where the line outside the Texas Employment Commission office in Odessa stretched for nearly a block last week.

"We've had a line here for the last two months, and our claim load has tripled from last year," said Texas Employment Commission Area Manager Ron Norris, whose office processed 1,248 claims in February, compared to 420 in February 1985.

"We've already taken 954 claims this month," he said. "That's phenomenal — it's more than 95 a day. All of it is oilfield-related."

The slump will stymie the state's healthy growth of the 1970s unless prices rise sharply, said William Gruben, senior economist for the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas.

"The dominant industry in the state of Texas is a lagging industry and over the next few years is likely (to continue) to be," he said.

Most experts are hesitant in projecting just how gloomy Texas' outlook for the rest of the decade could be, and they disagree on the future price of oil.

Independent Houston oil analyst Dale Steffes and others, including the state comptroller's office, believe the posted price will settle around $15. In recent weeks, that price — based on major refiners' long-term contracts — ranged from $14 to almost $19 a barrel.

"THREE-DOLLAR oil in 1972 was too low a value, and $32 oil in 1982 is too high a price. The question is where is the equilibrium point," Steffes said.

But Stephen Brown, a senior energy economist for the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas, disagrees.

"If there is no inflation between now and 1990, prices could be $25 a barrel and rising. Consumers usually respond to changes in oil prices," he said, adding that renewed demand would push prices back up.

The most likely source for that demand would not be consumers rushing to buy big cars, but industries that find oil a cheaper fuel than coal, Brown said.

Many in the industry fear Texas and other oil-producing states will lose a lot of oil wells permanently if the price sinks to $15 or below.

Seventeen percent of Texas' annual production of 800 million barrels comes from stripper wells, which produce 10 barrels of oil a day or less. Most operators consider it unprofitable to continue production in such wells and may cap them when the price falls to $15 or below, Brown said.

"If those wells are closed, they will probably never be reopened, even if the price is $50 a barrel," he said, because they are even less productive after capping.

More worrisome to state officials than the loss of wells, though, is the loss of jobs.

GOV. MARK WHITE called February's 8.4 percent unemployment rate "another grim casualty report from the battlefront over oil prices." The rate was 1.1 percent higher than the national level.

The decline in new jobs, which began with the oil crunch in late 1982, also spells a decrease in the state's once-frenzied population growth, formerly swelled by the influx of non-Texans seeking to capitalize on the boom years.

From 1980-82, the number of Texans grew at a rate 1½ times the previous decade's gain in population. But that dropped sharply in 1982, said Steve Murdock, a demographer at Texas A&M University, which has kept track of the state's population for the past several decades.

THE U.S. Census Bureau reported that net migration to Texas fell from about 400,000 in the 12 months ending July 1, 1982, to some 30,000 for the year ending July 1, 1984.

"I think the safest thing to say is there is greater uncertainty about Texas' population than at any other time in the last decade and a half," Murdock said. "We have had some pretty volatile changes."

Those changes have pushed many workers into unemployment lines for the first time.

"We're getting in oil well crews that have never filed unemployment claims before," said Jerre Howard, a state unemployment supervisor in Sweetwater who oversees offices in two counties west of Abilene.

"These are men in their 40s who are coming in that have never been out of work before," she said.

Across the state, the jobless come from businesses as small as a 50-man drilling crew in Big Spring to a mammoth corporation like ARCO Inc., which laid off 1,000 employees in Dallas.

Business failures in the state were up 188 percent in 1985, according to a Dun & Bradstreet survey. That failure rate was even higher in finance, insurance and real estate, where bankruptcies almost tripled over the previous year.

Twelve Texas banks shut their doors in 1985, many of the closures blamed on portfolios too dependent on energy loans.

Despite the gloom during a year filled with sesquicentennial celebration, Gruben and other economists say the slump should be viewed in historical perspective.

In the 1950s, when Middle East oil fields gained strength, Texas also experienced serious problems, Gruben said.

PBPA will host candidates for governorship

By DEANNA J. NEAL
Business/Oil Writer

The Permian Basin Petroleum Association has announced that it will have all four candidates for the governorship present for its annual meeting scheduled for April 23.

The full-day agenda which will deal with the issues, prospects and challenges in the oil industry in 1986 will begin with a kick-off breakfast at 7:30 am. at the Midland Hilton. The keynote speaker at this event will be Dr. Duane Leach, president, University of Texas Permian Basin. He will speak on "The Role of the Energy Center of the Permian Basin."

The breakfast will be followed by two forums and a briefing, all at the Midland Hilton. The first forum, beginning at 9:15 am., will feature C.E. Boyd, financial consultant, speaking on "Avoiding and Contending with Bankruptcies & FDIC Activities." The 10:00 am. forum will be addressed by Marvin Schiebout, executive vice president, RepublicBank First National, Midland. His topic will be "Investment Banking for the Independent." The briefing, set to start at 11:00 am. will hear Bud Scoggins, president-elect of the Independent Petroleum Association of America speaking about "Capitol Hill Update."

A general membership luncheon will begin at 12:00 at the Hilton with Gib Lewis, Texas Speaker of The House of Representatives delivering the keynote address. Committee reports and awards will also be presented at the luncheon.

From 1:45 to 2:30 Texas Railroad Commissioner, Mack Wallace will present a forum entitled: Domestic Petroleum, An Issue of National Security.

At 3:00 pm. the meeting will continue at the Midland Center with a Texas Gubernatorial Candidate Panel discussion. Panelists will include Bill Clements, Kent Hance and Tom Loeffler. Energy issues are expected to dominate this session.

The meeting will move to the Holiday Inn Country Villa Convention Center for a President's Reception from 6:00 to 7:00 pm. that evening. At 7:00 pm., a banquet honoring Ed and Billie Thompson will begin. Thompson, the former executive vice president of the association, retired at the end of 1984. Special guest at the banquet will be Governor Mark White.

On site registration and registration materials can be obtained on April 22 from 1:00 to 5:00 pm. at the Midland Hilton; April 23 from 7:30 am. to 12:00 noon at the Midland Hilton; and Holiday Inn Country Villa Convention Center on April 23 from 6:00 to 7:00 pm.

Attendees are encouraged to register in advance to obtain fee discounts and to insure event admission. Event tickets and name badges are required for breakfast, lunch, the President's reception and banquet events.

Shakeout continues for would-be software entrepreneurs

Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

He is 28 years old, but Terry Garnett says he feels closer to 50. In less than three years, he nurtured an idea into a computer program, then into a company and finally into an acquisition plum. Along the way, Garnett picked up a load of executive-level pressures and headaches.

Garnett is one of those bright young entrepreneurs who seem to come along as regular as payday in California's Silicon Valley. Last year he sold his company — named Lightyear, after the software package he and two programmers created — to a Cocoa Beach, Fla.-based software developer and publisher. His riches, he said, are mostly of the unspendable specie: experience. Still, he is not complaining. He's lined up a short consulting stint and then will rejoin his peers at Stanford University to start his MBA.

In the software business these days, there are hundreds of bright young entrepreneurs just waiting for a chance to be as lucky as Terry Garnett. They are gussying up their companies and tramping along the courting circuit, looking for a merger mate so they, too, can get back to "the creative part of business and not have the pressure of these make-it-or-break-it situations," as Garnett puts it.

Analysts say 1986 will be a good year for software companies, but they mostly mean the kinds of companies that Garnett's was not: companies with established product lines, such as the big three: Lotus Development, Ashton-Tate and Microsoft. The others, they say, are up for sale.

That is because 1985 was a rough year, and the changes forced by the marketplace will be long-lasting. Developers that do not have the wherewithal to get their products on the software best-seller lists will be gobbled up or forced out by the stronger companies. The remaining companies will add to their shares of the market.

And, strangely, the average computer buyer who looks around for software programs will see little difference.

There may be fewer programs to choose from than there otherwise might have been, but who will miss what never was? The discount pricing trend sparked by mail-order houses will continue, but analysts are saying that prices on some of the more popular packages probably will go up.

To observers of the high-technology industry, this all has a familiar ring to it; the personal computer industry has been going through the DTs of withdrawal from years of what Adam Osborne, one of its victims, called "hypergrowth."

The shakeout of personal computer makers turned into the slump of 1985, when sales of PCs failed to keep up with past growth rates. Orders for semiconductors, the amazingly tiny circuits that are the brains of the computer, dropped. And computer makers and chip makers alike began reporting losses, laying off workers and closing plants — many of them the same companies that just a year before swaggered from a full stomach of record profits and expansion.

Like the third climber roped for a mountain trek, software companies also stalled. Venture capital for software developers dried up, leaving many enterprises like Garnett's Lightyear stuck halfway between success and failure.

But this year, most segments of the industry are expecting better times. Analysts predict 20 percent to 25 percent growth in business for companies that sell microcomputer software — the kinds of programs that a department head might use in a desk-top computer to put together a budget, or that enable a salesman to keep track of his customers' orders, or that make it easier for authors to write and secretaries to correspond.

That means revenues approaching $3.1 billion, just in this segment of the market, according to Robert Lefkowits, director of software research at InfoCorp. (The segment excludes the much more costly software used by mainframes, the big computers that cost $1 million or more apiece.) That is about 19 percent higher than last year's sales of $2.6 billion of applications software, including specialized niche programs, such as for lawyers or funeral parlors.

Joe P. Liberty

Scholarship named for local broker

Rauscher Pierce Refsnes, Inc. has established the Joe P. Liberty Endowed Scholarship in the College of Liberal Arts, University of Texas at Austin, in honor of Liberty's 24 years of service to the firm — the past 20 as manager of its Midland brokerage office.

"We are very proud of Joe and his considerable accomplishments over a 24-year career with our firm," said John H. Rauscher Jr., chairman of the board of directors, "and we are delighted to establish this endowed scholarship in his name at his alma mater."

Liberty, a senior vice president, graduated from UT Austin in 1959 with a degree in economics from what was then called the School of Arts and Sciences. He joined RPR in Midland in 1962, and was named resident manager in 1966.

RPR has asked that recipients of income from the endowment be full-time students in good scholastic standing in the College of Liberal Arts. Economics majors and financial needs are to be first, but not absolute, considerations in naming scholarship recipients.

A committee appointed by the dean of the college will make the selections.

Liberty recently announced his intention to step aside as resident manager in order to spend full time with his individual clients as an RPR broker.

"Management presented an exciting challenge," Liberty noted, "but I'm looking forward to the prospect of applying my full time and energy to solving investment problems for my clients. That's the part of the business I like best. A search is under way for someone to assume the resident manager responsibilities, but in the meantime, we haven't slowed down a bit. It's business as usual."

RPR's Board of Directors presented Liberty with a plaque citing him for achievements as "resident manager, broker, industry pacesetter; in recognition of personal leadership and contributions to our Midland office during the past 24 years; for his professional guidance as resident manager for 20 of those years; and for his exceptional service, to clients and community, to RPR, and the betterment of our industry."

Cash reporting violations found

DALLAS (AP) — Officials at Dallas-based MCorp say the bank holding company has disclosed violations of federal cash reporting requirements to the Treasury Department.

MCorp, Texas' second-largest banking company, has found violations of certain provisions of the Bank Secrecy Act, which requires all banks to report cash transactions of more than $10,000 to the Internal Revenue Service, vice president George McCane said.

McCane told the Dallas Times Herald that the bank company was discussing the matter with the Treasury Department.

The reporting requirements are intended to aid investigations of certain illegal activities, such as drug trafficking, money laundering and tax evasion.

InterFirst Corp. the state's third-largest bank-holding company, earlier this month had indicated in its annual report that there were "inadvertent, untimely filings of certain reports" under the secrecy act by its subsidiary banks. The company also said it had notified the Treasury Department.

Last month, Texas Commerce Bancshares Inc. of Houston was fined $1.9 million by the Treasury for not reporting 7,000 cash transactions exceeding $10,000 each at banks on the Texas-Mexico border.

Bridges

Q. I don't know much about Jeff Bridges. Can you help?

Sheila
South Bend, Ind.

A. He's 36, one of three children of actors Lloyd and Dorothy Bridges (she gave up her career to devote time to her family). Appropriately enough for a member of a show-business family, he made his film debut at the age of 4 months in "The Company She Keeps," but his real acting debut came at the age of 8 in his father's TV series, "Sea Hunt," the show in which his older brother, Beau, also appeared.

Being a part of a successful acting family wasn't easy on him, apparently. He went through a stage of serious depression and drug involvement in his teens and was placed in couseling. Fortunately for him, the counseling worked and he moved to New York after high-school graduation to study acting. In 1971, he earned an Academy Award nomination for his third film, "The Last Picture Show," and in 1972, won other raves for his performance in the film "Fat City."

Later that year, though, the depression hit again. He felt that success had come too easily because of his father and that he hadn't really done anything on his own. He finally got over it when he co-starred with Frederic March, Lee Marvin and Robert Ryan in a production of the classic "The Iceman Cometh" and felt he'd done an acting job comparable to theirs.

The next year, he got another Oscar nomination for "Thunderbolt and Lightfoot" and later a string of good reviews for the films "Hearts of the West," "Stay Hungry," "Cutters Way" and "Rancho Deluxe." He even survived such flops as "Heaven's Gate," "Somebody Killed Her Husband," the "King Kong" remake, "Kiss Me Goodbye" and "Tron."

Lately, the notices have been even better for "Against All Odds," "Starman," for which he got another Academy Award nomination, this time as Best Actor, and "The Jagged Edge." Currently, he has the film "8 Million Ways to Die," co-starring Rosanna Arquette, due for release and, as we go to press, is set to start a film with Jane Fonda called "The Morning After" next month.

He's married to photographer Susan Geston, they have two daughters, Isabelle, 4, and Jessie, 2½, and live in Santa Monica, Calif., and on a ranch in Montana.

Conti

Q. I am desperate! Please tell me whatever you can about actor Tom Conti. He's gorgeous!

Valerie McClain
Laurel Lake, N.J.

A. He's 44, from Paisley, Scotland, near Glasgow, the only child of an Italian father and a Scottish mother, both of whom were hairdressers, as he was expected to be.

Being half-Italian and dark in fair Scotland made his childhood difficult, even painful, after his father was interned on the Isle of Man during World War II when the Italians allied with the Nazis.

Going to strict Catholic schools didn't help, but he did seek refuge in music. From the ages of 4 to 8, he studied piano until his female piano teacher was suddenly sent out of town "for entertaining men at night," as it was explained.

He continued studying, however, at the Royal Scottish Academy of Music, but he became interested in acting. After graduation, he was accepted into the prestigious Citizens Theater of Glasgow, but following that, got very few acting jobs. He instead supported himself by playing guitar in local clubs and leading tours, telling "terrible lies" to tourists. He was about to give up on acting when he finally got his big break: a lead in the play "Savages" in London in 1973.

Three years later, he became a TV star in Britain with his starring role in "The Glittering Prizes," which was later aired here, along with another triumph, "The Norman Conquests," earning him the nickname of the Sex Symbol of Public TV.

Other TV appearances include the Faerie Tale Theater/Showtime presentation of "The Princess and the Pea" with Liza Minnelli; stage: his Tony-winning role in "Whose Life Is It, Anyway?"; and films: "The Duellists," "Merry Christmas, Mr. Lawrence," "American Dreamer" and his Oscar-nominated role in "Reuben, Reuben."

He has another film, "Miracles," co-starring Teri Garr, ready for release, but no firm date has been set as yet. He's married to painter-actress Kara Wilson and they have a 12-year-old daughter, Nina.

Q. Please tell me when Duran Duran's next album will be released. Will they be touring the U.S.?

T. Padella
Fresno, Calif.

A. According to a spokesperson for the band, the next album should be out by June and a tour of the U.S. should follow.

Q. You recently said that Charlie Ruggles never played the role of Topper. But he did play it in a TV series starring Anne Jeffries. Right?

Betty J. Colvin
Fresno, Calif.

A. Sorry, but no. We checked the credits for the series, which did star Anne Jeffries, but the actor who played Topper was Leo G. Carroll.

Sheen

Q. Please tell me if Martin Sheen is an actor in a Mexican soap opera and is known in Mexico as Miguel Palmer.

Pat Figueroa
Jersey City, N.J.

Can you tell me what Martin Sheen's real name is and whether he comes from a Spanish background?

M.P.
Union City, N.J.

A. His real name is Ramon Estevez and his background is Spanish on his father's side and Irish on his mother's. As far as we know, he's so busy in this country acting, directing and producing that we don't know when he'd find the time to be a soap star in Mexico under any name.

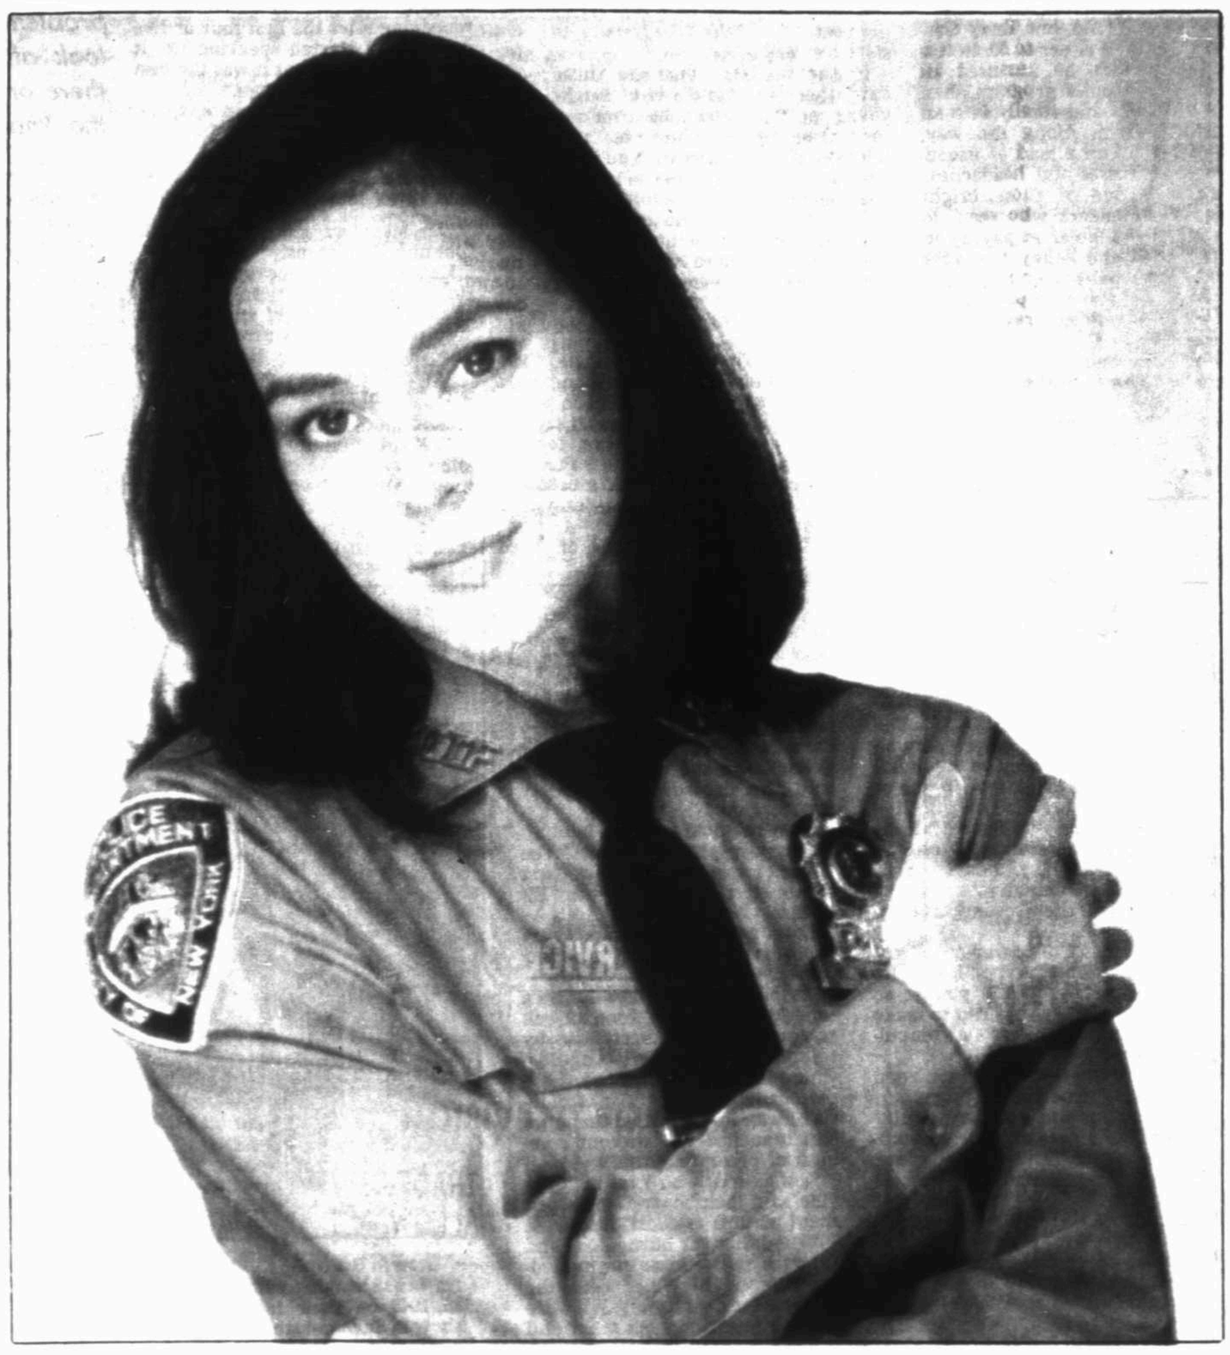

Laughlin

Q. I am a fan of Tom Laughlin from "Billy Jack." Is he still acting?

Mrs. Anne Park
Corner Brook, Nfld.

A. Indeed he is. He's currently in the process of filming "The Return of Billy Jack," in which our hero takes on the Mafia in New York — they are threatening a home for runaway kids near Times Square. Originally, the film was scheduled to be released in July, but now, due to a distributor switch, according to an aide, it could be released at any time during the second half of the year. Laughlin also sustained injuries shooting one scene, and filming could be delayed while he recovers.

Meg Tilly played Agnes, the young nun, in "Agnes of God," and is currently starring as a policewoman in the film "Off Beat."

Meg Tilly

By JANE ARDMORE
King Features

Remembering her as the intense, spiritual young nun of "Agnes of God," and seeing her now as Rachel, the animated policewoman of "Off Beat," might lead one to the conclusion that Meg Tilly — acknowledged one of the swiftest rising stars in the current film sky — is a dedicated, ambitious actress who eats, sleeps, thinks and dreams career.

What she is, at 25, is a slender, waiflike creature, with large, dark and innocent eyes and tender mouth, who might be mistaken for an uncommitted college freshman. But she is a devoted wife and mother who schedules interviews so they don't interrupt her time with her 1½ year old daughter, Emily.

She has been happily married for two years to producer Tim Zinnemann and has accompanied her husband on all his location trips. "We do have a lot of locations. What we want is to be together. It's a lot easier for me to go on location with him than it is for him to go on location with me, but he does come for long visits, like if two weeks have gone by and we haven't seen each other.

"And I've been with him everywhere. This is true love. I went with him on 'Fandango' and we were all over Texas: Pecos, El Paso, Marfa. Then on 'Impulse,' to Marin Country outside San Francisco. I wasn't going to go on that one because I knew they were going to ask me again to do a role I'd already turned down.

" 'Don't be so conceited,' Tim said; so I decided he was right, packed my gear and went. And sure enough, four days into shooting, the girl who was supposed to do it dropped out and they asked me again and — we were at dinner — I was too embarrassed to say no."

She was with him in Florida for a "Miami Vice" episode he was directing and in Mississippi for his production of "Crossroads" during which she was sent the script of "Off Beat." She hadn't planned to work so soon because of Emily.

The baby was right with them, of course. "I had my baby to have a baby," says this surprising girl who looks so meek and mild and speaks with a dash of pure pepper. "Not to give it to someone else to raise."

She continues. "She was only 4 months old when we started 'Agnes.' I used to have the trailer moved away from the set so she wouldn't hear me scream. The minute one of those traumatic scenes was over, I'd go running across the lot to the trailer.

"Well, I hadn't intended to work again this soon, but I decided to do Rachel because Agnes was still hanging on to me. Usually I can drop characters as soon as I finish shooting, but Agnes wouldn't let go. It was a lot easier when I was actually working on that picture. I'd have Agnes all day.

"If you spend your whole day at the office, you may like the person you're working with, but when you're home you're glad to be away from that person. But when I stopped working, wasn't being Agnes any more, I kind of missed her. Not the Agnes part really, but the religious part which bombarded and bombarded me. I was raised without any formal religion. The only time we went to church, when I was a child, was when my mother was asked to solo at church on some special occasion — she has a lovely voice.

"Working on 'Agnes' was terribly intense. So I decided to do Rachel," Ms. Tilly explains, "not because it was a big important part but because this character is totally different from Agnes. She's a New York police officer hostage negotiator. Always in control. Very much in command. She doesn't take any garbage from anybody.

"She's different and she's funny. And I'm glad I did it. I'm really picky about myself, seeing myself on the screen, but when I saw some of the scenes, I found myself laughing aloud. Very embarrassing. You're not supposed to laugh at your own jokes! And here was the character doing something and I'm going, 'Ha, ha, ha.' "

"Off Beat," co-starring Joe Montegna and Cleavant Derricks, was shot in New York. It was summer and Ms. Tilly's mother, who teaches first grade near Vancouver, was able to join them and spend time with Emily.

"My mother really loves the baby and the baby loves her. They get to see each other. Tim and I go to Canada, we have a house there. The only time I've ever left the baby was when Tim and I had to go to Toronto for a big benefit and we left Emily with Mama for one day while we flew there and back. And it was fine because the baby feels right at home with Mama, who is so like me."

Ms. Tilly reflects, "I'm sure many of the things I do are things I picked up from my mother when I was a baby. Emily senses this instinctively. I noticed that when we were in Canada for Christmas. Such a happy time! I'm so happy, I don't even know when I'll work again. I've even been talking to Tim about another baby."

That wonderful serenity...the child-face with the woman's radiance. Most actresses her age have had such a struggle or are in the midst of one.

"I really started out to be a dancer," she muses. "Who knows what my life would have been like had I not been injured? Dancing is so dangerous. You're lucky if you make it to 35. And such stress. People watch ballet and of course it's the most beautiful art in the world; but you should see the dancers' toes. They're gross. They bleed. Such hard work and such pain.

"I went to New York right after high school to study on scholarship. Classes 10 hours a day. A wonderful teacher. I spent two years and a half in New York training, but I was dropped in a pas de deux and hurt my back. The doctors in New York said, 'You must quit.' I thought they meant I was going to die. I couldn't imagine life without ballet.

"So I went home and was very nice to everyone. I wanted them to remember me this way, miss me. But I didn't die, so I thought maybe what I was being told was something else. I decided to go into acting. Wasn't I lucky? It's worked out for the best. I know it's the best because I'm so happy.

"My back is better. I take a dancing class now every day. Just for me. People have suggested, 'Will you do a ballet tape?' But my ballet is for me now, a personal thing. I'm doing it just for the joy."

Easter brings back memories of time spent alone with father

By ELISE BELL
King Features

At this time of year, when spring begins to touch our lives and the earth is reborn, memories are reborn also. I remember how, when I was a little girl, my father always got me a corsage to wear on Easter morning. I remember how grown-up it made me feel. He gave corsages to my mother, my sister, my aunt and my grandmother — so when I pinned mine on, I felt I belonged to a special group.

We all got new spring outfits too. My sister and I especially loved our Mary Jane black patent leather shoes with a strap, and our straw bonnets with flowers and ribbons.

We did not like the white gloves we had to wear on Easter Sunday, but we tolerated them, feeling they were a small price to pay for the rest of the finery.

I remember, too, the hours spent boiling and dyeing the eggs, then coloring and decorating them. I remember the fun of looking for them in the garden if the weather was nice or in the house if it wasn't.

I remember how different they looked when we put them in our Easter baskets. Could these be the same eggs we had decorated the night before? They had taken on a mysterious beauty overnight.

There was, of course, always at least one egg which could not be found. No one could remember where it had been hidden. But if it was inside the house, our noses would find it eventually.

Easter was my favorite holiday when I was a child, but it was not because of the egg hunting, the new clothes or the goodies. It was because of the sunrise service that my father and I attended every Easter Sunday by ourselves.

Attending entailed getting out of bed in the cold dark of early morning. No one in the family was willing to do this but me. It wasn't that I liked that aspect; it was that I knew I would have my father to myself, something difficult to achieve in our family of four children.

My father and I would creep silently out of the house while everyone was sleeping and we'd get in the car for the drive out to the service.

I would sit in the front seat — normally occupied by my mother — and we would drive through the deserted, dark streets. It was wonderful feeling of loneliness and at the same time complete safety because I was with my father.

The idea of the sunrise service was to stand on the top of a hill and watch the sun rise, signifying rebirth, while a few simple words were spoken in a nondenominational sermon.

The only trouble was that the weather usually was not good, and we hardly ever saw the sun. It was cold, dark and dreary and mostly we saw gray clouds.

To me, this didn't matter at all. I would stand there, dressed up in my Easter clothes with my corsage proudly pinned on my coat, shivering and shaking with cold, but my small white-gloved hand was warm and secure in the huge engulfing hand of my father, and that was all I needed to make me happy.

This was a time when he gave me undivided attention. It was our moment and ours alone.

After the service, my father would drive us to a nearby diner where we had hot chocolate together. Then we would go back to our home where everyone else was still sleeping.

Michael Keaton admits he can be pain on movie set

Michael Keaton

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Michael Keaton readily admits that he can sometimes be a pain on a movie set.

"I get excited and I express myself," he said. "That can cause problems, but that's a risk you have to take. You gotta look after yourself. After all, it's your face that's up there on the screen. You're the one who's going to take the knocks if the picture fails.

"I read about Dustin Hoffman being nuts or a pain on his movies. I can understand why he stands up for what he believes in, though I admit there are different ways of doing it."

On his first starring movie, "Mr. Mom," the story of a husband who stays home with the children while his wife (Teri Garr) pursues a career, Keaton gained a reputation for being assertive, and he doesn't deny that he had been a bit of a problem for producers Aaron Spelling and David Begelman.

"They were making one of those cute 1964 movies with the house and the picket fence, a slice of Americana," said the actor. "I hated what I was doing after the first four or five days, and I started speaking up. It was a fight, man, but it was the best thing I could have done."

He next filmed the gangster spoof, "Johnny Dangerously."

"I should have been more assertive, but I decided to take a rest," he said in an interview.

"Mr. Mom" was a box-office smash, "Johnny Dangerously" bombed.

Keaton's latest movie is "Gung Ho," Paramount's timely comedy about the takeover of an American auto plant by a Japanese company. The director is Ron Howard, who launched Keaton's movie career with "Night Shift."

"Ron and I complement each other," Keaton said. "We're alike in some ways, not in others. But we're enough alike to be compatible. There's a lot of trust between us; Ron is secure enough that he is not threatened by what I say and do, as some directors are."

"I get excited and I express myself. That can cause problems, but that's a risk you have to take. You gotta look after yourself. After all, it's your face that's up there on the screen. You're the one who's going to take the knocks if the picture fails."

— Michael Keaton

That doesn't mean that Keaton was a pussycat on "Gung Ho." Along with Howard and producer Tony Ganz, the actor argued for a Tokyo location to open the movie. Paramount finally agreed to the extra expense.

"It didn't cost much," said Keaton. "We shot it like a student film, with a small crew, grabbing shots, improvising scenes, me talking to passers-by on the street. It was important to the picture. With comedies you gotta get out of the box fast and down to first base like a shot. You can't let the audience sit there and say, 'OK, make me laugh.'"

Michael Keaton, a fast talker with a broad Irish face, thinning brown hair and darting eyes, seems to have been off and running since his childhood in a Pittsburgh suburb.

A born actor, he studied speech for two years at Kent State University in Ohio, arriving a year after the 1970 National Guard slaying of four students.

"Kent State was a very political place in those years, a real hotbed," he recalled. "I saw everybody speak on the campus, and if you had an eye for drama, you could find plenty. I was very active politically, but I also observed, studying all kinds of people."

He returned to Pittsburgh, where he drove a cab by day and acted in plays at night. When he moved to Los Angeles, he tended bar and parked cars and performed his own routines at the Comedy Store.

His first acting job came on "Maude," then he joined the 1977 sitcom, "All's Fair," starring Richard Crenna and Bernadette Peters. On "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," Keaton met his wife, actress Caroline McWilliams.

Keaton starred as a parole officer in a short-run series, "Report to Murphy," then won the "Night Shift" role as Billy Blaze, the hustler who turned a morgue into a call girl operation.

"I came along just at the time when the changeover from television to film actors was becoming possible," he said. "Tom Hanks and other guys followed me. Until that time, the studios believed that the only good comedy actors were in movies.

"Most sitcoms are stupid, and it's real difficult to be good in that form. But the good ones can be great."

Everlys can't say 'bye, bye' to music

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Everly Brothers have learned they can't say "bye-bye" to music as they once did to love in one of their hit songs.

The singing duo have a hit record, "Born Yesterday," on the pop and country music charts. The song is from an album of the same name, their second LP since they reunited three years ago.

"You can't get away from music," said Phil Everly. "It's an internal part of you. If you go so long, you'll be compelled to make something up. There's a compulsive zest."

His brother, Don, said it's good that they're performing together. "We're at our peak musically now....There seems to be an audience for us. And it's fun now. There was resentment against us in the early days — our hair, and mixing rock 'n' roll and country."

In the late 1950s and early 1960s, the two guitar-playing brothers were one of the most popular acts in rock 'n' roll doing harmony on such hits as "Bye Bye Love," "Let It Be Me," "All I Have to Do Is Dream," "Wake Up Little Susie," "(Til) I Kissed You," "Cathy's Clown" and "Bird Dog."

In 1973, after 16 years of hits, they dramatically broke up during a concert at Knott's Berry Farm in California. Phil threw his guitar down and walked off. Don told the crowd: "The Everly Brothers died 10 years ago."

They reunited a decade later after brotherly love overcame the allure of solo careers. Their first album after the reunion was "EB '84."

Both agree their years apart may have contributed to their current success.

"A friend of mine says there's a time for seeding a garden as well as reaping," Phil Everly said by telephone from Los Angeles, where he lives. "You need those periods. We had peculiar circumstances and we rectified them; we had branched out without commercial pressures."

Don Everly, who lives in Nashville, said their separation helped them mature as individuals.

"We didn't get burned out and we were able to hone our individual talents. There had been the Siamese twin syndrome. We were never away from each other and things could get crazy. We eliminated that. We manage ourselves now and we call each other up to discuss things; we compromise, and there are no long tours," he said.

Phil Everly, left, and brother Don, are back on the charts with their hit "Born Yesterday."

Born in Brownie, Ky., the Everlys began singing country music in 1945 on their family's radio show in Shenandoah, Iowa, where a street will be named after the duo this summer.

Between 1957-62, they had 19 Top 40 hits, and influenced other artists. Early in their career, the Beatles once referred to themselves as "the English Everly Brothers." Bob Dylan has said, "We owe these guys everything. They started it all."

Earlier this year the Everly Brothers were inducted into the Rock 'n' Roll Hall of Fame.

"We never followed trends," said Don Everly. "We did what we liked and followed our instincts.

'Texas Realism' works displayed at institute

ODESSA — Selections from Texas Fine Arts Association's "Texas Realism 1985" exhibition are on view at The Art Institute for the Permian Basin, Odessa, through April 25.

This traveling exhibition was organized by the Texas Fine Arts Association.

Covering the spectrum from traditional to contemporary, the exhibition showcases a broad range of realist work by members of Texas Fine Arts Association., a statewide visual arts organization.

Juror Tom Livesay, director of the Art Museum of New Mexico, looked at over 1,300 slides submitted by some 300 artists to select the original exhibition of 60 works which opened in Austin at the Atrium Gallery, St. Edwards University.

Selections range from watercolors, pastels and prints to photographs, drawings and paintings. Subject matter includes evocative portraits, sweeping landscapes and intimate domestic interiors. Traditional themes, referencing the past, appear beside scenes depicting contemporary urban life.

According to Livesay, the show represents "an incredibly diverse spectrum of excellent works as varied as the possible views of reality."

Describing his selection criteria, Livesay says, "I was looking primarily for fresh versions of 'realism,' fresh interpretations and view points. Technical mastery was an important consideration, since by its very nature realism deals with recognizable features and forms. I tried to determine whether the artist expressed a genuine affection for the work, for the subject matter. The ones that work best mesh all of these concerns.

"One of the purposes of an exhibition of this nature — selected without consideration of media, name, location or reputation of the artist — is to provide a forum for artists just beginning their careers or for mid-career artists who, through no lack of diligence or talent, have not been widely viewed in museums and galleries. Such exhibitions, professionally presented, present important opportunities for young and emerging artists."

TFAA is the oldest and largest statewide visual arts organization in Texas composed of working artists and supporters of the arts.

For membership information, contact the Association at Box 5023, Austin, Texas 78763, or call 1-512-453-5312.

When she decided on acting, she came out to the West Coast where her sister, Jennifer, was working (she is perhaps best known for a sustaining part on "Hill Street Blues"). "This was five years ago, I was just 20 and my sister said first of all I must have a resume. I got my picture taken and we wrote a phony resume, I auditioned for a play and got it. It's kind of unbelievable. I had 14 lines, and out of that, I got an agent."

She continues, "Even more important, I found a teacher who was going to influence me greatly. Sean Penn was in the play — that was before he'd done anything either — and he told me I must study with Peggy Feury, the wonderful teacher with whom I worked from that day until she died tragically just recently in a car crash."

The dark eyes grow soft with sorrow. "Such a wonderful teacher. I've grown so much thanks to her and her husband, Bill Trailer. I still go to The Loft every day, their workshop. Peggy gave me work that stretched me. And in my life she was a wonderful influence because whenever I found I was stuck in a scene and couldn't break through to the character, I would have to turn around and look at my life. She made me realize that everybody has a bit of everybody within themselves.

"I have to find that part of myself, uncover what I've been hiding. If you're honest with yourself, you can be honest in your work. I think that's why I can play such different parts. I can find those people inside me. It might be just a tiny thing like the bud of a flower, but water it and it grows into a whole person."

Six months after she'd arrived in Hollywood, Ms. Tilly made her film debut as Matt Dillon's girl friend in "Tex." They'd been trying to cast the part for several months. Ms. Tilly says, "The director's wife was Cindy Hunter. She and her husband, Tim, were going through the players' book and she found my picture. They called me in. It was the last day, the last half-hour reading. By the time I got home, my agent was calling. 'You got the part!' he yelled. 'You've got to leave next week.'T"

They were shooting in Oklahoma. "We'd been rehearsing for about a week," Ms. Tilly remembers, "when we got tickets for this rodeo. I was sitting next to a really nice man I figured was some Oklahoma rancher. He was wearing cowboy boots and jeans.

"I'd never gone with anyone any older than I was, so I didn't think of him that way. He was just nice and started explaining things to me because I had never been to a rodeo.

"Four or five days later, I see this same 'Oklahoma rancher' sitting in a corner on the set. It seems he was our producer, Tim Zinnemann. I didn't know what a producer did actually. And I didn't know how to pronounce his name. After we had been together a while, his secretary said, 'I think it's time to learn how to say his last name.'

"It sure was time. We certainly hadn't planned it, but it just happened that we were falling in love. I'm so glad that I met Tim before I was doing real well. It was a difficult period in his life, although he'd always been around the business — his father, Fred Zinnemann, was a famous director.

"The way it was, we started our marriage with nothing except love, so we've worked together. Whatever we accomplish is a joint effort. Whatever I make or whatever he makes is both of ours because it's come out of our love and our life."

They married January 1, 1983. "We were together for a year and a half and then waited another year to have Emily, who is really an experience. She has dark brown hair and big hazel colored eyes, Tim's ears and the shape of Tim's head; his hair swirls here and Emily's swirls too and she has my eyes and a lot of my personality.

"And she tries to dance! She'll hang onto the sofa in an attitude, she points her feet and does plies when she hears music. I don't know where she learned it. I don't dance at home, but I danced until six days before I had her. Maybe that's it. Any time there's ballet music on, she goes crazy.

"Tim enjoys her as I do. We like raising her ourselves. We three are happy together and I'm lucky. If I'd been a dancer, where would I be now? I'd be making barely minimum wage, traveling, have bleeding toes, no husband, no baby, no home and by the time I was 35, I'd be thrown out like a used-up Kleenex."

She continues, "Even in acting I don't expect a hundred parts after I'm 40. I won't mind., By then, I'm going to want to go to college. I've always wanted to go to college. Then I'll start up a new profession. I'll probably teach theater.

"I don't worry about growing older. I hear others say, 'Look what's happening, I have a gray hair!' I have several gray hairs. I'm happy to be getting older. I feel like I know more. I'm happier. More content. And life is going to get better. I believe that.

"The more you give out, the more comes back. The way you live shows on your face. I've had a happy life, so I don't care if I have lots of happy wrinkles."

EASTER

Later, when the family was all up and we had Easter breakfast, my father and I would sit silently not saying a word about having had hot chocolate, but exchanging glances of our secret knowledge.

Years later, when I had children of my own, I never forgot how important it was to spend some time with just one child alone once in a while.

My father died three years ago at the age of 89. Sometimes during the long months of winter, with the problems and pressures of daily life filling my days, I have no time for memories and they lie dormant like the bulbs in the ground. But when spring starts to come, my memories are reborn, as fresh and alive as the daffodils and tulips that push up out of the earth to bloom.

The strange thing is that when I remember the sunrise service on Easter morning, standing with my father at my side, I always see the sun coming up over the hill.

'Gung Ho' not exactly an epic

By DAVID LEE FORREST

Forrest

You can't see famed Japanese director Akira Kurosawa's historic epic "Ran" unless you go some place like Dallas, Austin or Houston.

So what's a poor Midlander to do?

Well, you could go catch the not-so-epic look at Japanese culture, "Gung Ho." Of course, the two films don't have too much in common.

"Ran" is a Japanese reworking of Shakespeare's "King Lear," while "Gung Ho" was born from a report on the CBS television program "60 Minutes." Veteran screenwriter Edwin Blum saw the report about Japanese auto manufacturer Nissan opening a car plant in Smyrna, Tenn., and decided to try to make the story into a comic clash of cultures.

The lightweight result stars Michael Keaton as a vaguely obnoxious foreman from a closed-down auto plant in Pennsylvania, who is sent to Japan to woo an auto company, Assan Motors, into taking over the plant and saving the economy of his one-company town.

Some of the film's funniest moments are the early ones of Keaton in Japan. His wisecracking, smart-aleck character gets his comeuppance early while trying to navigate the streets of Tokyo and then makes a complete fool of himself trying some greasy good ol' boy charm on a group of staid Japanese executives.

Amazingly, Assan Motors decides to go ahead and reopen the plant on a trial basis.

The ensuing conflict between the Japanese management and the American labor force is the most hostile seen since Pearl Harbor blew up in "Tora! Tora! Tora!"

The Japanese stay aloof from their American hosts and demand absolute loyalty to the company. They seem to have little understanding of — or tolerance for — American ideals of individualism.

For their part, the Americans are depicted as somewhat lazy and unspeakably sloppy workers, who boorishly refuse to take the culture of their Oriental managers seriously.

Director Ron Howard has said that he was very concerned about being accused of racist stereotyping. "So," he's told the New York Times, "we decided to poke fun at both sides equally."

While Howard's intentions were surely admirable, it's a difficult approach to comedy.

Keaton's character, for example, is something of a jerk. As the official liaison between the Japanese and the Americans, he lies — more than once — to both sides.

Yet, "Gung Ho" insists on trying to make Keaton cute and lovable. Actor John Candy, who was so wildly rude in Howard's 1983 "Splash," probably could have had a field day with such a role by milking the character's obnoxiousness for all it was worth. This could have been much funnier than all of Keaton's mugging.

The American workers, who one would normally root for, hardly seem competent. When they become outraged at the Japanese desire for all cars be defect-free, you realize these are definitely not the guys you want to build your family car.

At the same time, the admirable wealth of Japanese culture is shoved aside so that all we see is their rigid work ethic. They come across as little more than unamusing efficiency-crazed technicians.

While the film is uneven and the humor is a bit sporadic, it does have some genuinely funny scenes.

Keaton has a few good zingers, with perhaps the best being when he tells his super-competent bosses, "If you're so great, how come you lost the Big One?"

The main Japanese character, played by "Sixteen Candles' " Gedde Watanabe, is hilarious when he decides his children are becoming too Americanized. "No more Twisted Sister! No more MTV!" he screeches as he wrenches the television set off.

"Gung Ho" certainly isn't "Ran," but after a year in which Asians were depicted horribly in such films as "Rambo: First Blood, Part II" and "Year of the Dragon," it's a big relief simply to see a film treat them as recognizably human.

"Gung Ho," rated PG-13 for strong language, is now showing at the UA Cine IV.

Blues Foster Brothers meet at 'Crossroads'

"The Devil Went Down to Georgia" meets "The Karate Kid" in the new film directed by Walter Hill, "Crossroads."

The movie centers around an old man, played by Joe Seneca, who in his younger days sold his soul to the devil to become a great blues singer. He's sprung from a prison hospital by a teenaged aspiring blues musician, played by "Karate Kid's" Ralph Macchio, and the unlikely duo hit the road together, a la "Huckleberry Finn."

"You're just one more white boy ripping off our music," Seneca bitterly tells Macchio at one point, but, of course, these Blues Foster Brothers slowly grow fond of one another as they stumble from one minor misadventure to another.

Hill is a director who seems to genuinely care about music and has always put a lot of emphasis on music in his films:

■ His 1979 "The Warriors" had a rock music soundtrack and voice overs by a radio DJ served to keep the narrative going.

■ His 1980 Western, "The Long Riders," used a haunting score by guitarist Ry Cooder.

■ Hill's 1981 "Southern Comfort" also featured a terrifically evocative Cooder score.

■ The soundtrack album from Hill's 1982 "48 HRS" spawned a number of Top 40 hits.

■ 1984's overblown "Streets of Fire" was billed as Hill's "rock'n'roll fable," with the Blasters and Cooder contributing music to a plot involving the kidnapping of a singer.

In "Crossroads" music is again at the center of the story and Hill again uses the talented Cooder.

Besides Seneca, who co-wrote one of the film's numbers with Cooder, there is also a brief performance in a Deep South bar by Frank Frost and the Wonders, real bluesmen from the Mississippi Delta.

The film is primarily a rites-of-passage film, with Macchio's slightly cocky guitar student from Juilliard learning from Seneca's grizzled octogenarian just how little he really knows.

The film doesn't exactly get off to a rip-snorting start. The chemistry between the two main characters takes a while to develop, largely because Macchio seems to have a hard time keeping up with Seneca's earthy, spry performance. Sparks do eventually fly, though.

Hellfire also blows throughout the movie because of the Satanic subplot. On the one hand, this gives a nice dimension to the film, particularly because of Hill's effective use of vaguely spooky sepia flashbacks.

On the other hand, that storyline doesn't end up leading to anything more than a thoroughly predictable supernatural Battle of the Bands between Macchio (who just mimes playing; Cooder did the actual music) and a devilish heavy metal musician, played by Steve Vai, who is a real guitarist with the band Alcatrazz.

The screenplay — by newcomer John Fusco, who originally wrote it as a thesis while a New York University film student — is also not very concerned with the niceties of law and order. At one point, our heroes are fugitives from the law driving a Cadillac stolen from a pimp with a 17-year-old runaway girl, played by Jami Gertz, along for the ride.

Like it's characters, "Crossroads" takes a few wrong turns, but the trip is reasonably worthwhile.

"Crossroads," rated R for a great deal of strong language and some sexual innuendo, is now showing at the UA Cine IV.

David Lee Forrest is film critic of the Reporter-Telegram.

First female Olympic champion was golfer

The first American woman Olympic champion was Margaret Abbott, 22, who placed first in a nine-hole golf tournament in 1900 during the Paris Games by shooting a 47.

Because of much political confusion surrounding the Games, she thought all her life that she had merely won "the golf championship of Paris," for the Games were held during the Paris Exposition.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

New Mexico weavers' work to be dislayed at MC

Thirteen weavers from Northern New Mexico are presenting the next show in Midland College's McCormick Gallery.

The exhibit begins April 8, with a reception for the artists from 7-9 p.m. This show remains on display daily through May 2.

Former Midland College art instructor Sara Gilstrap, now living near Santa Fe, served as curator for the exhibition.

Artists participating in the show include Teresa Archuleta-Sagel, Faith Blakely, Rachel Brown, Sara Gilstrap, Robin Knight, Norman Medina, Nancy Neeley, Roman Sakiestewa, Connie Taylor, Irvin Trujillo, Lisa Trujillo, Kristin Wilson, and Maria Wilson.

Located in the Allison Fine Arts Building, the McCormick Gallery is open without charge Monday through Thursday from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m., Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday 1-5 p.m.

Fun Camps scheduled

The Recreation Department of the city of Midland is sponsoring a Spring Break Fun Camp starting Monday and lasting until April 4.

The camp is open to all children ages 6-12 and the cost will be $22 per child. The camp will be limited to 30 children and will be staffed by one supervisor and two recreation leaders.

"Our goal is to plan supervised, structured programs with maximum supervision," said a department spokesman. The program will include games, arts and crafts, movies, a skating trip and a bowling trip. Children should bring a sack lunch each day.

The daily schedule for the week is as follows: 7:45-9 a.m., drop-off (free play); 9 a.m.-4 p.m., structured programs; 4-5 p.m., pick-up. Transportation can be arranged by Midtran, but they must be called in advance. To obtain this service, parents must call Midtran at 684-RIDE.

Anyone who is interested must register at the Parks and Recreation office at 300 Baldwin St. by Friday.

Easter egg hunt planned

The first annual Grandparent-Grandchild Easter Egg-Bunny Hunt will be held from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m. today on the grounds of Golden Park, 3100 W. Kansas Ave.

The event is sponsored by Midland's Parks and Recreation Department's Senior Citizen Center, Golden Park Senior Town House Community, Adventure Travel, National Video Westwook Village and Shenanigans Restaurant.

First prize is two round trips via Southwest Airlines to Dallas for a day at the zoo courtesy of Adventure Travel. Second prize is free use of player and movie of your choice at Monday Night in April courtesy of National Video Westwood Village. third prize is dinner for two at Shenanigans, courtesy of the restaurant.

Refreshments will be provided courtesy of Albertsons at Andrews Highway.

There is no age limit requirement for participants.

Crestview plans concert

The youth choir of Crestview Baptist Church will present a concert of sacred music at 7 p.m. today. The 75-voice choir is composed of students from grades 7 through 12 and college-age young people interested in the youth music ministry.

The group makes an annual tour during spring break. The Easter Sunday performance at Crestview, 3300 Thomas St., will kick off this year's tour which will take place in the Dallas-Fort Worth metroplex. It will include concerts in churches, schools and state institutions. The concert includes old gospel favorites and contemporary anthems.

The program will be presented at Greenwood Baptist Church at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday. The group will then Wednesday through April 5.

Easter musical at Kelview

The Adult Choir of Kelview Heights Baptist Church will present the Easter musical "How Great Thou Are" at 9 and 10:45 a.m. today.

The musical, arranged by David Clydesdale and directed by Stan Glover, traces the life of Christ during Passion Week. Beginning with Jesus' triumphant entry into Jerusalem, it portrays his compassion for Judas, his betrayal in the garden, his trial before Pilate, his crucifixion and the glory of his resurrection on Sunday morning.

The Rev. Frank Johnson, the church's pastor, invites the public to attend. The church is located off North Big Spring at Scharbaure Drive.

Rogers artwork at bank

Ernestine Rogers is exhibiting a selection of watercolors in the lobby of RepublicBank First National Midland through Monday. The public is invited to view the exhibit during business hours.

Ms. Rogers attended art classes at Midland College and during two summer terms the School of Fine Arts in Banff, Canada. She also studied with a number of well known artists, including Bud Biggs, Robert E. Wood, Frank Webb and Larry Weston.

An extensive foreign traveler, she sketches subjects to paint later. "Painting is my hobby, and I believe in creative art," Ms. Rogers says. "Persons should use creative ability to express themselves, but most of all to me painting is fun."

'Easter Triumphant' slated

"Easter Triumphant" will be presented by First Assembly of God, 100 W. Wadley, from 8:30 to 10:30 a.m. today. The program is a dramatization, with music, of the last week of Christ's life.

Services will feature guest speaker, Dwight Thompson at 10:30 a.m. and 6 p.m. Thompson will speak again on Monday at 7:30 p.m.

Thompson, whose ministry began in 1963 at Faith Temple in Fort Worth, was associate pastor with his father, James Curtis Thompson before becoming an evangelist. He has lead evangelical crusades in the United States and overseas.

Art show held at UTPB

The University of Texas of the Permian Basin Art Gallery is the center of a spring showing of photography, stained glass, ceramics, jewelry, sculpture, paintings and drawings through April 11.

All part-time and full-time U.T. Permian Basin art students were invited to submit their works for display. Thelma Blake, president of the association, said last year's show enjoyed a wonderful response "The community was amazed at the variety and quality of the works," she said.

The show is in the Third Floor Art Gallery at UTPB.

Party honors centenarians

YORK, Pa. (AP) — Eleven people who grew up at a time when "The War" meant the one between the states shared laughter and memories at a special birthday party.

The recent celebration honored area residents who would be at least 100 by year's end and two men and nine women showed up. The oldest was 105.

The party originally was planned for the six centenarian residents of Rest Haven, but rest home officials later decided to invite everyone in the area who fit the age requirement.

One of the 11 recalled her childhood in Gettysburg, where her father took visitors on horse-drawn carriage tours of the battlefield in the days when the Civil War was the nation's most recent conflict.

The festivities included the reading of a letter from 90-year-old comedian George Burns, who declined an invitation.

"Unfortunately, kid, I'm booked," he said. "But please give my best to my...elders. I guess I can't call any of them kid now."

Gallery 1114 will host to ceramic artists

Gallery 1114 is hosting an exhibit of works by two nationally recognized ceramic artists, Dan Doak and Gayle Prunhuber. The exhibition features their recent work and runs through April 26.

"Both artists, who have chosen clay as the medium best suited to express themselves, have developed a reputation for their very innovative approach to a timeless art form," said a spokesman for the gallery. "They have worked together since 1980 at the Sun Valley Center for the Arts and Humanities in Idaho, yet their styles area very unique."

Dan Doak is a skilled ceramist, known for his designs incised on the sides of his works. He uses virtually only earth tones to give color to his pottery.

Gayle Prunhuber, on the other hand, uses bold, bright colors to decorate her work. "She fashions both utilitarian and sculptural pieces equally well, both decorated with abstract designs," the spokesman said. "The contrast between the style and color choice of each artist will create a very interesting and challenging exhibition, one that has something to appeal to everyone's taste."

Also on display at the Gallery are selections of work by the Gallery members. Gallery 1114, a contemporary artists cooperative, offers an opportunity to see work by the Permian Basin's leading contemporary artists.

The Gallery is open Wednesday through Saturday 10 a.m.-5 p.m. and Sunday 1-5 p.m. Special viewings can be made by appointment.

The next exhibition will be a photography show featuring the work of Steve Goff of Odessa College and Marth Edwards of the Cinema Station, Odessa.

Easton withdrawn from concert

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Singer Sheena Easton says she's one of the performers first lady Nancy Reagan wanted removed from the list of acts tentatively scheduled for the "Concert That Counts."

The Scottish singer eventually had to withdraw from the anti-drug concert anyway, but because of a scheduling conflict.

Global Media Ltd, the concert's promoters, withdrew a request for Mrs. Reagan's endorsement when the first lady's staff said she wanted certain acts removed because of the content of their songs. Neither Mrs. Reagan nor Global Media released the names of the acts Mrs. Reagan found objectionable.

The concert is scheduled for April 26 at the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum.

Neil Simon's play 'Fools' will be presented by MCT

"Fools," a play by Neil Simon is the next production in Midland Community Theatre's 1986 season line-up.

"The Theatre has found 10 funny people to act in the comic fable," said a spokesman for the theatre. "The cast of ten, three women and seven men, is hard at work polishing their lines for this hilarious play."

Casting committee members were Wanda Mohr, Jim Bell and Joe Hathaway, assisted by talent director Jo Stroker. Christopher Goree is Leon, Mike Huslage is Snetsky, Jerry Green is the Magistrate, Jim Galyean is Slovitch, Jason Lyons is Mishken, Jo Hayes is Yenchna, Mike Stannatd is Dr. Zubritsky, Jane Burgess is Lenya, Lana Grubb is Sophia, and Gary Askins is Gregor.

The play is directed by Don Bachman. Set designer is David Layman, who will also handle technical directing and lighting design. The stage manager is Amy Fults.

Members of the staff include: construction, Jed Barker; costumes, Mae Dawson; dresser, Sharon Perkins; lights, Laurie Green, Rebecca White, Cindy Bohannon; props gathering, Patti Loftis; props running crew, Jolene Bolch; projections, Doug Page; publicity, Charles Campbell and Sandra Worendle; stage crew, Bill Perry and Steve Gandy; sound, Phil Newell; soft scenery, Martha Lassetter; painting, Mary Eimers and Janie Hofer.

"Neil Simon's plays have run the gamut of being mildly amusing to outrageously funny," said the spokesman. " 'Fools' is outrageous and funny as it pokes fun at Mother Russia. If you can only see one play this year, make it 'Fools'. MCT is expecting sell-out crowds for this laugh-a-minute play, so make sure you don't miss it."

For reservations, call the box office at 682-4111.

Basie autobiography too conversational

"Good Morning Blues: The Autobiography of Count Basie as told to Albert Murray; Random House; $19.95; 399 pp.

A Review

by LEONARD FEATHER
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Show business autobiographies are generally of two types. Some aim at sensationalism, letting it all hang out. Others are more discreet, omitting or altering facts to suit the author's wishful recollection. Count Basie's story falls into the latter category. Even Albert Murray's skill and professionalism cannot overcome this handicap.

Readers unfamiliar with the Basie story will find Murray's work richly anecdotal and evocative of the Zeitgeist in the early New Jersey, New York and Kansas City years. Much of the writing, however, is as elliptical as was Basie's piano. One problem is that it reads too much like Basie in conversation, as if, for authenticity's sake, Murray took it off the tapes, verbal warts and all.

At one point, I began checking off the sentences that included, "I don't remember" or "I can't recall" or, worse, "I'm not going to get into that." I tired of the process after losing count.

Basie's unique story deserved an honest retelling. His was a classic instance of an artist who had greatness thrust upon him. A capable soloist who once played good stride piano, he was limited in his schooling ("I didn't go any higher than junior high school...that was the worst mistake I ever made"), in his musical education (he had trouble reading music), and in his ambition: Leading a band was more the result of chance than of any burning success drive.

All he wanted was to be around show people and remain a part of their world.

The early years as a sideman with Walter Page's Blue Devils and with the Bennie Moten Orchestra, in which he and Moten played piano, make an absorbing documentation of black urban life. The further the story moves along, however, the more we are inundated with irrelevant details ("The movie that week was Ricardo Cortez in 'City Girl' ") and dubious facts.

Having known Basie almost as long as his discoverer, John Hammond, did (I met him during his $21-a-week Reno Club days in Kansas City, saw him frequently until his death in 1984, and even wrote a couple of arrangements for the band), I found it particularly easy to spot the gaps in Basie's recall.

The introduction states that he will avoid gossip but will not "leave out anything just because it is personal." Yet a glaring personal omission is the great trauma in the lives of Katy and Bill Basie: Their only child, Diane, was severly handicapped and still requires constant care.

The errors of commission, though minor at times, could have been checked. Jeanne Taylor is described as "our new girl singer" in 1947 (an amazing coup if true, since Taylor is a very blond white woman; she was with Basie only on a record date). Hot Lips Page, the trumpeter, is described as "the emcee" of a 20th anniversary party for the band, which I attended; Page that night was dying in a New York hospital.

Marshall Royal, Basie's lead saxophonist for 20 years, "became ill" and quit the band, though, in fact, he was inexplicably fired and was quite bitter about it. This misstatement typifies the book's faults; it tells what Basie would like us to believe.

Racial problems are dealt with only glancingly, but this reflects one of Basie's strengths; he tried to ignore race and transcend bigotry. The words black and Negro are avoided, and the old fashioned sepia is substituted.

If the objective in leaving so many details fuzzy is to show us how absent-minded Basie was, Murray has succeeded. In 1960, when I was researching a booklet to accompany one of the band's albums, his road manager told me: "One thing you can be sure about on a road tour with Basie. Basie won't know where he's going, who he's playing for, or how to get there."

What does emerge in these pages is Basie's easy-going, kindly attitude, a disposition that enabled him to retain an ensemble with an unprecedented team spirit.

Lena Horne once said: "Basie isn't just a man, or even just a band. He's a way of life." Much of that feeling comes across, despite the flaws in Basie's dictation and Murray's documentation.

GOREN BRIDGE

Q.—We missed a grand slam on a hand where I held:
♠QJ109652 ♥AK ♦AKQ6

Partner did not hold much besides the ace-king of spades, but I didn't need any more. How should I have gone about finding out if he had what I needed?—J.N., Portland, Ore.

A.—In the good old days you would have no problem. You would have opened the bidding with five spades. That would have asked partner to raise your suit one level for each of the following cards that he held: the ace or king of your suit. Thus, partner would pass if he held neither of the missing honors, bid six spades if he held one, and seven spades if he held both.

No one seems to play that any more. Today, you would have to open the bidding with a demand bid (either two clubs or two spades, depending on the methods you employ), and then try to force partner to take a spade preference. Once he has done that, you can bid five spades. Partner should realize that you are looking for high cards in the trump suit and nothing else.

Q.—I don't see why you should score exactly the same for, say, four spades making five as for five spades making five. In the latter case, you have ventured further and should be rewarded for your pinpoint bidding accuracy. What's your opinion?—E.K., New Rochelle, N.Y.

A.—There is no end to that argument. You could claim that you should score more for three hearts making three than for bidding only two hearts and scoring an overtrick.

The scoring of contract bridge is still pretty much the same as was devised by Harold S. Vanderbilt in 1925 when he originated the game. Over the years, there have been many attempts to alter either the game or the scoring. Among the most significant of these was to make the first odd-trick at no trump worth only 30 points, instead of 40, to change the value of the minor suits, to play with six suits instead of four.

None of these changes lasted very long, and the game has prospered as devised by Vanderbilt. And when you come to think of it, that is perhaps the finest tribute that can be paid to both the game and its inventor.

CHECKING THE LIBRARY

Children's magazines can be educational, entertaining, stimulating

By CONSTANCE ROE

The Children's Department of the Midland County Library has a broad selection of magazines. They are educational, entertaining and stimulating. All of them may be checked out for three weeks except for the current month's issue.

Jim Trelease, author of "The Read Aloud Handbook," in "U.S. News and World Report," points out that children need to learn to read for fun as well as for competency. He suggests that to build better readers "...give students time to sit down and read anything they want, within reason — not just good books but good magazines as well."

"COBBLESTONE" is an outstanding U.S. historical periodical for youth. It is well written, with pictures and drawings. Each issue has a bibliography for "Digging Deeper," listings for places to visit, and a puzzle related to the theme plus other attractions.

"NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC WORLD" has colorful photographs to capture the interest of children as well as articles about wildlife, people, and travel take them around the world. Tips on sports such as backpacking give practical information. A monthly poster is included as well as science puzzles, games, and tricks.

Another colorful periodical for young naturalists is "Owl" The Discovery Magazine For Children." Quips, cartoons, and jokes, all on the theme, add to the lively format. Once picked up, it is difficult to put down. The January 1986 issue has a 12 double-page calendar and articles on inventions, ones that fizzled, the successes, and the ones that changed our lives. In humorous pictures and short narrative style, these include the vacuum cleaner, toothbrush, soap, corn flakes, cool chairs and a dimple maker. "Owl" also has charts, diagrams, experiments, and stories.

"STONE SOUP" has entries from children ages 6-13 in poetry, artwork, book reviews, and stories. "The no-nonsense, conservative format and the variety and quality of the writing and art serve to inspire the children to express their creative thoughts," said a library spokesman.

"Pack-O-Fun" covers crafts for holidays, scout troops, religious and school groups, parties, seasonal events and includes healthful recipes. Some crafts are for all ages and others for specific age groups. This quarterly periodical will help clean out the closets since it is designed to use scraps.

For the younger teen-age girls "YOUNG MISS" brings fashion, fiction, question and answer columns, career articles, recipes and patterns. It is full size, upbeat and very popular. Two current titles are "How I Lost 82 Pounds" and "FunFashions: Back to the 60s!"

"TEXAS HISTORIAN" is published by the Texas State Historical Association in cooperation with the Center for Studies in Texas History, University of Texas at Austin, five times a year. The articles cover people, buildings, events, banking, places and whatever else is of historical interest in Texas. Each publication has a "Chapter Showcase" which features different Junior Historian groups around the state. There are biographical sketches, including one of an 84 year old curandero (one who cures the sick), who gives an account of her life in West Texas.

The following is a list of other magazines the library carries to encourage reading for fun and learning: BOY'S LIFE; CHILDREN'S DIGEST; CRAFTS N' THINGS; ELECTRIC COMPANY MAGAZINE; FRIEND; JACK AND JILL; RANGER RICK'S NATURE MAGAZINE; 3-2-1 CONTACT; HIGHLIGHTS FOR CHILDREN; and ZOOBOOKS.

Constance Roe is assistant children's librarian at Midland County Library.

Quilt exhibit will close at museum

Closing today at the Museum of the Southwest is the exhibit "Contemporary Texas Quilts."

Featuring the work of Texas quilters, the exhibit is one of three the museum has planned for the sesquicentennial year. It is a part of Tex-Art/150, a statewide program of art exhibitions celebrating the 1986 sesquicentennial.

Curated by Acting Director Sue Devine, "Contemporary Texas Quilts" brings together quilts made in traditional patterns as well as those made with innovative designs and techniques.

"Today's quilters are drawing from the traditions of the past as well as creating new trends for the future. These quilts are particularly beautiful examples of the design and artistic talent of Texas Women," Ms. Devine said.

"Contemporary Texas Quilts" is a juried exhibition. Quilters from across the state were encouraged to enter slides of up to three quilts made during the last five years.

Hours at the museum are Tuesday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday 2-5 p.m. No admission is charged to view exhibits.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Monday, March 31, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Good news! Your special talents receive new recognition and praise from those who count. The financial picture looks golden. Your flexibility and sensitivity serve you well in your dealings with others. They know you will give them a fair hearing. Romance is rapturous. A desire to help the less fortunate grows stronger. Be on the lookout for unusual investment opportunities. Real estate deals hold special appeal.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: mini-series star Richard Chamberlain, "St. Elsewhere's" William Daniels, actor Richard Kiley, Rhea Perlman of "Cheers," labor leader Cesar Chavez, "Hill Street Blues" patrolman Ed Marinaro, Austrian composer Franz Joseph Haydn.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Any confidential material received from a friend should be evaluated before it is used. A happy romance brings you new admirers. A career or business venture flourishes!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A talent for making friends and impressing older people opens new doors. Your social horizons expand. More fulfilling relationships are part of the picture. Stick close to home.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Planning is the key to greater success and financial security. An important business or personal relationship takes on a new dimension. Be prepared for surprises at both work and home. Adventure beckons!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Good luck plays a major role in your plans this week. A personal relationship could end abruptly. Do not despair! A more positive alliance lies just ahead. Business travel enjoys favorable influences.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The atmosphere at work is closely linked to your attitude. Tie up loose ends before they become a financial liability. New admirers could be after your money. Keep your emotions in check.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your intellectual interests put you in touch with someone sensitive to your emotional needs. Deal with a tricky business matter before a higher-up has to step in. Your prestige is at stake.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A joint trust will provide extra income only if it is expertly managed. A romantic interlude could jeopardize your work or scholastic career. Meet a deadline on time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your relations with your co-workers improve. You learn something important about yourself. Romance buries a disappointment under an avalanche of fun. Be honest with mate.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Give a business partnership a second chance. Time and patience will put you on top financially. A deal could fall apart if you try to rush things. Avoid acting pushy with bank officials.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): There is no way you can balance a budget by gambling. Reject a friend's advice and listen to someone who has guided you to success in other areas. Contact someone at a distance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A romantic relationship that develops over an extended period of time will prove highly rewarding. Do not try to rush things; pressing for a commitment could backfire.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Have lunch with someone who really cares and any problems will suddenly seem less important. A sensitive family matter will improve with more time and money.

McAllister coined 'The 400'

The phrase "The 400," used to describe the socially elite, was coined in 1892 by American social leader S. Ward McAllister. He was inspired by the fact that New York's Astor Hotel ballroom held only 400 people at a time.

Each day our culinary staff, under the direction of Chef Michael A. Wehbe, prepares special entrees for your enjoyment. You can enjoy these special entrees Monday through Saturday, in addition to our fine menu selections.
