'ONLY IN EMERGENCY'

Zarb Explains Ford's Gasoline Ration Stand

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Energy director Frank Zarb, clarifying President Ford's dead-end stand against gasoline rationing, said Thursday Ford would make an exception in the event of "extreme emergency conditions."

Zarb also told Democratic senators pushing an alternative to the President's energy proposals that "we are very, very close in our attack on language, our specific provisions."

Zarb testified before the Senate Interior Committee whose chairman, Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., is pushing legislation to give the President emergency power to control energy supplies rationing.

Jackson, holding a copy of Ford's legislative proposal which also contains a rationing provision, told Zarb.

"It is confusing for President Ford to say that only over his dead body there would be gas rationing, yet here's rationing authority."

Zarb explained that Ford's opposition is to rationing under any "mainstream program" of energy conservation, and that he could accept it only under extreme emergency conditions such as an embargo or other kind of disaster.

Jackson and other Democrats also expressed reservations about Ford's proposal to set a price minimum on petroleum products, particularly since he opposes any price ceiling.

offered a measure to set both a floor and a ceiling on oil prices, with a top of $9.50 a barrel for both domestic and imported crude.

At the White House, Press Secretary Ron Nessen said the President still endorses putting a floor under domestic oil prices although he has not decided on a specific level or the timing of such action. Meantime Assistant Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd told reporters it is the President's fault Congress is not cooperating on his energy proposals. Byrd said for example that if Ford had consulted with lawmakers before announcing an increased levy on imported oil, "we could march down the road together."

In other energy-related developments:

- The Teamsters Union concluded a legislative conference with resolutions including one urging Congress to impose gasoline rationing as an alternative to Ford's proposal to increase petroleum prices.
- Sen. Adlai E. Stevenson, D-Ill., introduced a bill to deep the $5.25 per barrel limit on the price of oil from long-operating domestic wells and limit new-well oil to $8 a barrel.
- Sen. Richard Stone, D-Fla.,

MOD Planning Bucket Brigade

March of Dimes bucket brigade will be held Saturday. Corners will be manned from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Local clubs participating in the fund drive are Pampa High School Key Club, Kentucky and Hobart; Downtown Kiwanis Club, Francis and Cuyler; Top O' Texas Kiwanis Club, Gibson's Discount Center parking lot; Rainbow Girls, Foster and Cuyler; Pampa Optimist Club, Kingmill and Cuyler; Knights of Pythias, Ballard and Browning.

Club members need to pick up buckets at 9:45 a.m. at Pampa Hardware Co.

The brigade had been postponed the last two weekends because of bad weather.

Cartoonist Takes A Hilarious Look At Bureaucracy

Veteran political cartoonist Jim Knudsen has taken a look at government bureaucracies from the local to the federal level and come up with a series of sometimes hilarious cartoons poking good-natured fun at agency fumbling and mumbling.

"The Bureaucrats" will appear twice a week in the Pampa News beginning Sunday on the editorial page.

Sometimes you'll see yourself in Knudsen's cartoon stories of bureaucrats as they shuffle mountains of papers in their overkill efforts to "protect" the American consumer-taxpayer.

Knudsen isn't out to nail any agency, but only to suggest subtly that there must be easier and better ways for government bureaucracies to conduct the business of enforcing the mile-high stack of laws, ordinances and regulations Mr. and Mrs. America must abide by in these days of "government by paper."

Even if you haven't run into the machinations of bureaucracy you'll get plenty of chuckles from Knudsen's parade of bureaucrats.

Police Chief Selection Causing Controversy

By TEX DEWEESSE

Disputation continued at high pitch today over the selection of a chief of police for Pampa.

Telephone calls to city officials plus petitions for and against certain candidates muddled the air as still a sixth Pampan filed for the post.

The latest local applicant was Lt. Preston Bailey, a member of the department for nearly 22 years, who filed shortly after noon Thursday.

Two additional applications came in today's mail, bringing the total to 19. Both were from out of town.

Bailey went to work for the Pampa department in 1953 and has served in all capacities. He was promoted to lieutenant four years ago.

He holds intermediate certification, is married, has two daughters and a granddaughter, and is a member of the Central Church of Christ.

Other members of the department who have already filed for the job include George Wallace, now acting chief; Detective J.J. Ryzman, Lt. John Thomas and one who asked that his name be withheld.

One other local applicant is H. Robert Muna, a former police sergeant and FBI technician in Washington, D.C.

It is known that the city manager, mayor and four other members of the City Commission have been besieged with telephone calls and personal contacts, many of which have been strong expressions for and against certain candidates.

Those officials are getting the brunt of the barrage because the city charter provides that the city manager must recommend an appointment and it must receive at least a 3-2 approval of the City Commission.

Monday is the last day applications for the police chief's job will be taken.

From what could be learned today it is expected City Manager Mack Wofford will call the City Commission into closed session next Tuesday or Wednesday for a final review of applications.

The choice of a Pampa police chief has become a top-drawer item of conversation almost everywhere people meet for coffee breaks and long-time residents and public officials say they cannot recall when there has been so much controversy over appointment to a public office.

One city official said today he wouldn't be surprised if the Monday deadline for filing brings a spurt of additional applications for the post vacated last Jan. 1 by the death of Police Chief James B. Comer who held the job for nearly 23 years.

Asst. Chief George Wallace was named acting police chief and currently is serving in that capacity.

County Tables Reviews Of Fire, Tax Contracts

Gray County Commissioners today tabled a planned discussion of fire and tax contracts with the City of Pampa, and approved fire contract proposals for the cities of McLean and Lefors.

Fire departments in those cities will be reimbursed $165 per run for fires outside city limits, but within the county.

First National Bank was designated as bank depository for two years, and commissioners approved payment of bills okayed by the auditor and considered time deposits and transfers of funds.

A FAA civic rights report regarding airports was heard and submitted for approval and commissioners heard a report concerning show barn improvements from Clyde Carruth.

Carruth also presented the commission with a resolution from the agriculture committee of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce, commemorating the court's support of the 4-H and FFA programs by making improvements at the show barn. The resolution stated the committee and Chamber fully recognized and appreciated said support.

The commission already held one review session a couple of weeks ago when only nine applications were on file. It is understood no formal action was taken on any of them at that time, but there were indications that several could be quickly eliminated for various reasons. However, all applications are expected to be on the table again at the final review meeting next week.

Police Investigating Several Burglaries

An intensive investigation is underway by the Pampa Police Department to determine suspects in a burglary of the Pampa Youth Center, which is believed to have occurred early this morning.

Officers were alerted by Mrs. George Smith, wife of the Center manager, at 9 a.m. Reports indicate extensive damage to machines in the building and theft of money, records, a clock and checks.

An undetermined amount of money was removed from machines. Reports indicate some $200 in cash and undetermined amount of checks were stolen in a bank bag from the office.

Officers said the premises of the Center had been ransacked. More than one of the nine machines damaged were recorded as total losses.

A screw driver removed from a tool box at the Center was believed used to obtain entry to coin boxes on the venders.

Officers said candy machines not robbed of money, were missing candy after glasses were broken. Vending machines were torn from the wall and littered the area.

No monetary value had been placed on damage shortly before noon.

An electric clock had been unplugged and indicated 12:45 a.m. Police said it could be an

Ag Committee Arranges Stock Show Assignments

Members of the Agricultural Committee of the Chamber of Commerce met yesterday at a noon luncheon at Furr's Cafeteria. Assignments were made for the annual Top O' Texas Junior Livestock Show scheduled here March 2, 4 and 5.

Luther Robinson, chairman, announced that John McNeill of the Agriculture Department of West Texas State University would judge the steer division and L.M. Hargrave of Texas Tech would judge the hog. Clyde Carruth will serve as show superintendent with Bill Skaggs and Jim Greene as assistant superintendents.

The committee went on record commending the Gray County Commissioners Court for their interest and support of the 4H and FFA students of this area through the Top O' Texas Junior Livestock Show.

The resolution reads as follows:

Whereas, the Honorable Gray County Commissioners Court has recognized the importance of supporting the 4H and FFA youth program of this area by making needed improvements in the show barn, and

Whereas, the Gray County Commissioners Court in years past, has seen fit to liberally support these worthy youth projects;

Now be it resolved that the Agricultural Committee of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce fully recognizes and appreciates this fine support of the Gray County Commissioners Court on this 13th day of February, 1975.

'A MOCKERY OF JUSTICE' Senator To Fight Blue Laws

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — A San Angelo discount store manager was arrested and hauled into court last November for selling a pair of socks to an investigator on a consecutive Saturday and Sunday in violation of Texas' Sunday closing law.

A country club golf pro shop in the same city was allowed to sell golf clothes on the same two days without being prosecuted.

Rep. John Hoestenbach, D-Odessa, cites those cases as examples of why the state's 14-year-old Sunday closing law — commonly known as the "blue law" — needs to be repealed.

The law, passed in 1961 to head off a fight between downtown merchants and discount houses in Texas cities, has been regularly criticized and unevenly enforced since its inception. But attempts to repeal it have regularly failed.

"This law is an example of selective law enforcement," Hoestenbach says. "It's a discriminatory law."

"The law is a mockery and makes a mockery of justice. It's ridiculous to keep a law on the books that is not enforceable."

Hoestenbach, D-Odessa, is the chief sponsor of a House bill to repeal the Sunday closing law and allow stores to sell any merchandise they choose seven days a week.

Still a jury took only five minutes to acquit him.

"The thing that should be pointed out," Hoestenbach said, "is under the law you can't buy a mirror on Sunday, but you can buy lipstick. You can't even buy baby diapers. If your plumbing breaks you can't buy plumbing fixtures."

"If you go to the pro shop at the country club, you can buy all the clothes you want. The retail merchants want to clamp down on stores and shopping centers, but they don't want to touch the country club. It's almost from the ridiculous to the sublime."

Hoestenbach said the Sunday closing law is particularly hard on people in his West Texas district who often work six days a week and have to shop on Sunday.

either, and that's the reason the law is unenforceable."

Hoestenbach's bill has been editorially endorsed by the Odessa and San Angelo newspapers.

Moore is likely to be the strongest legislative critic of the bill, if it ever reaches the senate. But he apparently isn't concerned about its chances.

"I don't know of anyone but Mr. Hoestenbach and that Odessa newspaper who are very nervous about the Sunday closing law," Moore said. "It's not something I lose sleep over every night."

Volunteer Army recruits younger

WASHINGTON, D.C. — At the height of the Vietnam conflict, about 10 per cent of the draftees were college graduates, according to Assistant Defense Secretary William K. Brehm, but in the volunteer Army there are hardly any.

The average age of recruits 10 years ago was 20 years and four months; now it is 18 years and eight months. — CNS

Lyndon And The FBI

The revelations that the FBI, under orders from former President Lyndon Johnson, employed electronic surveillance equipment to spy on the late Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., and the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, should come as no surprise to a post-Watergate public.

In retrospect, we wonder if that clandestine executive branch operation, reportedly carried out at the 1964 Democratic National Convention in Atlantic City, N.J., would have initiated the same tumultuous effects as Watergate had it been known at the time.

Objectively the two incidents appear roughly the same: a White House up for re-election directed a spying mission against political enemies. The differences in the two cases, moreover, seem morally insignificant.

It is debatable that implication of the FBI constitutes more of a threat to the democratic process than the signing of ex-CIA agents. Perhaps it does, perhaps in which case Lyndon Johnson performed more subversive of democracy than did Richard Nixon. FBI agents are supposed to be official agents of the American people. Ex-CIA agents, along with their criminally-minded cohorts,

ARE American people. Not only that, but it has never been proven that Nixon actually ordered the original spying, as it is said Johnson did. Nixon's culpability arose only with respect to the coverup of the affair.

This is by no means a defense of Richard Nixon's role in Watergate, which was reprehensible through and through. But it is a puzzle why history had to select Watergate, with such enormous fury, to demonstrate the ineffectual potential for perfidy reposing in the White House. Why, when there was such a perfect example of it eight years earlier?

By now it is a hackneyed observation, but the White House has simply been fed too much power for the complexities of the modern age. No chief executive can possibly own all the equipment, intellectual and physical, to deal with all the situations expected of him.

Because of that impossibility, corners will be cut, legal obstacles circumvented, the moral dimension fuzzed. That is why we can expect even more presidential corruption — at least in the executive branch — campaign cleanup legislation or no.

Dear Abby

Nurse wheels Dad away from Mother

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Our whole family is in a turmoil because, after 52 years of marriage, our father has left our mother. They used to have their fights over the years but we never thought it would come to this.

Dad left Mother to go and live with a 53-year-old nurse he met three years ago when he was in the hospital. (Dad has been in a wheelchair for three years.) The nurse came right into the house, packed Dad up and moved him out, and they drove off together.

Now that this has come out, everybody is saying they knew about Dad and this nurse all along. Dad is 74, and Mother is 73. Mother is so humiliated, she hasn't been out of the house since Dad left.

What do you think of this mess? How can we get Dad to come to his senses and go back to Mother? It's the talk of the town. DISGRACED

DEAR DISGRACED: Stay out of it. And you needn't feel "disgraced." A person can disgrace only himself.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 35-year-old widow, not unattractive. A middle-aged physician (divorced) invited me to dinner at his home.

When I arrived, he fixed a cocktail, then the phone rang. I could tell by his conversation it was a woman. And she wasn't a patient. I sat quietly sipping my drink while he talked for 30 minutes! When he finally returned, he resumed the conversation with me, making no apologies for leaving me alone for so long.

About ten minutes later a car drove up in front of his house and stopped. He said: "Let me see who that is." Then he went outside.

When he didn't return in 20 minutes, I took my wrap and purse and went outside to tell my host I was leaving. He was standing by the car, talking to a lady who apparently had come to see him.

I said: Good night, I am going home." The lady immediately drove off. My host insisted that I go back into the house. I did, but only because I wanted to tell him off for his rudeness to me. Before I had a chance to say anything, he told ME off for having "embarrassed" him by coming outside.

Was I wrong? How would you have handled it? MISTREATED

DEAR MISTREATED: You were not wrong. I would have handled it much the same as you. Only I'd have said my goodbyes immediately after my host returned from his 30-minute telephone conversation.

DEAR ABBY: I never miss your column. It's a kick to read about some of the stupid problems some of those fools who write to you come up with. I'm amazed at the number of women who write to say they're afraid of losing their husbands to another woman.

That's the last thing I'm worried about. I say: "The woman who steals my husband steals my troubles."

Sign me... NOT WORRIED

DEAR NOT: If that's the way you feel about your husband, why don't you just turn him loose, so there will be one less potential thief in the world?

DEAR ABBY: About the woman who always mentions the fact that one of her three children was adopted. One shouldn't be so quick to criticize her. Perhaps she wants to publicly announce the fact that, although she is the mother of three children, she brought only two into the world, and because she adopted the third, she is not guilty of adding to the world's overpopulation. JUST THINKING

DEAR JUST: Thanks for thinking of an angle I didn't think of.

Question Box

QUESTION: The economy has had quite a lot of ideas brought forth. First Chrysler Corp. offered a cash refund of $500 to $600 on each car sold in the next few weeks, depending on size of car, to stimulate business. President of the auto workers asked the government to give a 10 per cent income tax cut. President Ford suggested a 10 or 12 per cent refund in 1974 income tax. Now, my question why don't the auto workers offer to take a 10 per cent cut on their wages? I think that would do more to sell cars and get the workers back on the job. Might it not be a good idea that all employees take the cut from top to bottom? — J.D.

ANSWER: There may be some merit in the suggestion that all individuals take a cut in earnings in order to bring prices down and stimulate buying. Whether such a program will be adopted is doubtful.

Why Prices Drop

The business people, such as the motor car manufacturers, generally have to cut back prices when purchases fall as low as they have. They are not in a position of having a government subsidy to sustain them, so big inventories of unsold automobiles are a dead loss. Overhead and taxes continue, even though work forces are laid off. So the business people must sell, even though they may be selling their product at or below cost of production.

The same generally does not apply to the auto workers and many other workers with some form of job protection. Many have been able to do better when working by virtue of having tax-exempt unemployment pay, plus employer-financed supplemental payments. And when the Washington politicians speed through an extension of unemployment pay, it encourages individuals not to offer to take lower pay for re-employment.

It should be noted that voluntarily taking pay cuts to stimulate business and employment can be beneficial but still have little or no effect on inflation. Only a reduction in the creation of additional credit and monetary units, not backed by production, will bring deflation. And cutting back government spending below income is the most important step needed.

Start With Government

It would appear from this angle that the suggestion of all workers taking a 10 per cent cut in pay could well start in government. Perhaps President Ford instead of proposing a 5 per cent limit on pay increases, should suggest a 10 per cent cut for all government payrollers, starting with himself. Such an example might well be followed by a lot of others, who would willingly relinquish a little something, if workers felt they were not alone in taking the action.

It may take a full-fledged recession or depression to bring individuals back to reality. We hope not, and suspect the politicians will continue all of the phony antics of the past 40 or more years in hopes of avoiding the necessity of facing the facts of life. Too many of them, we think, realize that their days will be numbered when the people realize the falsity of the political house of cards.

INTERNAL SECURITY Taps For House Committee

By WILLIAM RUSHER

The decision of the House Democratic Caucus to abolish the Internal Security Committee (formerly the House Committee on Un-American Activities) no doubt gave considerable satisfaction to America's liberals, who always detested it, but essentially it was an empty gesture, of no more current significance than the belated explosion of some bomb or hand grenade left over from a long-forgotten war.

In its day, however, it was a real war, and the committee played a major role in it. It is hard, and understandably so, for any American who cannot personally remember the 1930s and 1940s (and even for some who can) to realize how deeply the Communist party and its numerous fellow-travelers penetrated our national life during those decades, and how thoroughly they polluted life during those decades, and how thoroughly they polluted the national discourse. I remember a national radio debate in 1946 or thereabouts between Clare Boothe Luce, then congresswoman from Connecticut, and the late Harry F. Ward, Professor Emeritus of Christian Ethics at the Union Theological Seminary in New York. Ward was a notorious fellow traveler, who admired the Soviet Union and Josef Stalin enormously, and he positively bristled when Mrs. Luce ventured to condemn what she described as "the concentration camps" in the Workers' Paradise.

"These are not concentration camps," Ward shot back. "These are personal rehabilitation camps, and they have done those people a world of good."

"Since then, we have had 'The Gulag Archipelago' and much else, and we know better. But that is the sort of out-and-out pro-Communist propaganda that America was up to its ears in by 1946 — dashed out by distinguished authorities seemingly beyond moral reproach. It was into that almost bottomless pit of lies and liars that the House Un-American Activities Committee waded, and controversy was to put it mildly, inevitable.

The official liberal view was then, and more or less still is, that there was never anything worth investigating; that the committee and similar Paul-prys merely defamed a lot of earnest reformers and pacifists; and that the whole grisly era was repudiated and closed forever by the Senate's condemnation of Joe McCarthy in December 1954.

In fact, however, there were a great many things to investigate. In 1946, for instance, the director of the Office of Special Political Affairs of the Department of State was stepping down to assume the presidency of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, and an Assistant Secretary of the Treasury had just resigned to become U.S. Executive Director of the International Monetary Fund. As it happened, both men — Alger Hiss and Harry Dexter White — had been slipping secret information to the Russians, and the House committee played a central and honorable role in proving it.

By the mid-1950s thanks in no small part to the House committee's efforts, a majority of the Communists and fellow-travelers who had penetrated the government during the Roosevelt years had been shaken out, and their colleagues in other areas of our national life — labor, entertainment, even the clergy — were distinctly on the defensive. America promptly forgot all about the problem (which was imprudent, since of course the Communists didn't disappear altogether), and a few elderly Reds even managed to crawl back to a level of near-respectability — Dalton Trumbo for one, the Hollywood screen-writer, who resumed writing slanted scenarios without ever disavowing his Communist faith.

Meanwhile the whole field of subversive activities has grown larger and infinitely more complex. We are no longer dealing with one party and its agents and dupes but with a whole series of Communist organizations — Muscovite, Maoist, Trotskyite and Castroite — not to mention such home-grown outfits as the Weathermen and the Symbionese Liberation Army. Keeping an eye on them all for Congress will henceforth be the job of the Internal Security Subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee; and personally I wish it luck, as "Taps" sounds for its elder brother over there on the southern side of Capitol Hill. Bitter Controversy Seen Over CIA Investigation

By C. MOLLENHOFF

WASHINGTON, D.C. — President Ford's commission to investigate the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) is probably doomed to bitter controversy by the limitations of its charter and the identity of its members.

While President Ford has no direct responsibility for past CIA operations and no motivation for a cover-up, it is likely that he will be vulnerable to such a charge when the commission makes its report April 4.

And, President Ford's commission will probably be more vulnerable as various politically motivated congressional committees, armed with subpoenas, will dramatize CIA faults in public hearings with witnesses under oath.

The fact that competition has developed between those who believe the agency needs investigating will likely fan political flames in the manner of the Watergate investigations.

Critics have already raised questions about "the one-sided panel" headed by Vice President Nelson Rockefeller that is "too sympathetic" to the CIA and the intelligence community, and criticism will swell to a crescendo if the panel files anything less than a scathing report.

The weaknesses of the commission are:

1. Vice President Rockefeller's objectivity is suspect.
2. His vulnerability stems from his role as a member of the Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board (1969 to 1974) and from his long-time association with Secretary of State Henry Kissinger. Kissinger's former dual role as head of the National Security Council and head of the Forty Committee (overseeing foreign intelligence gathering) placed him in a position of heavy responsibility for the activities of the whole intelligence community.

(Sen. William Proxmire (D-Wis.) has noted that Kissinger's role in intelligence means that he either "knew what was going on and is culpable, or he didn't know and was negligent.")

2. The commission will not have subpoena power, but will rely on reports from the CIA and other agencies of the intelligence community that are skilled in dealing with false documents and half-truths.

3. The commission will not have the authority to put witnesses under oath if there are questions about the authenticity of documents or the truthfulness of statements.

4. The executive director will be named by Vice President Rockefeller. Rockefeller will also have a major role in the selection of staff that will carry on the day-to-day work.

5. The hiring and security clearing of a staff for access to the super secret files of the CIA could take several weeks or even months. If CIA employees are relied upon for these sensitive tasks the commission will be no more than a CIA investigation of itself.

Even if the resulting investigation is done as conscientiously and thoroughly as it can be, it is almost certain to leave some stones unturned. Even if honest mistakes are made, it is likely that the investigation will be pictured as an intentional cover-up or "just another whitewash of the CIA."

President Ford has given the eight-member commission an impossible assignment, apparently counting on the distinguished reputations of the members to make up for the lack of a credible depth inquiry. Any flaw that emerges is likely to reflect on all of the gentlemen, particularly Vice President Rockefeller.

And, if the commission finds that the CIA has been up to improper or illegal activities, the result could be disastrous for both Rockefeller and Kissinger.

Economic Madness

More evidence that politicians have no business trying to regulate the economy: Rep. Henry Reuss of Wisconsin, now taking leadership of the House Banking Committee from the deposed Wright Patman of Texas, has leapt into his level of new found mightiness with the ferocity of a cub lion. He could if he succeeds, pull down the whole lair.

Reuss has introduced a bill requiring the Federal Reserve to lower interest rates by increasing the money supply at a faster rate. But the Fed, as the Wall Street Journal reports, "is already trying to pump up the money supply, with the only result being the dollar's collapse on the foreign exchange market. If the Fed went faster...the inflation rate would be up in the 20s and the interest rates close behind."

Finished? No. Reuss next wants a new government agency with the power to roll back prices in "non-competitive" industries, such as steel, automobiles, oil, heavy chemicals and sugar. How Reuss adjudged those industries "non-competitive" is one of the mysteries of the age; surely his conclusion did not come after an intelligent look at the economy.

All the gloom and all the talk of apocalypse naturally engenders madness, even the suicidal notion of demolishing the steel, automobile, oil, heavy chemicals and sugar industries. We have to wonder what stew Representative Reuss has been tasting.

That is what is so dangerously wrong about our political system: that it elevates men of such consistently wrong beliefs to positions of actual, damaging power. And we all have to suffer the consequences.

Independent Oilmen Costs Rising Outdoor Drama

TULSA (UPI) — A cluttered jumble of rolled maps, stacks of reports and assorted other papers obscure the desk and overflow onto the bare floor. On the wall hang pictures of old oil fields, now deserted boom towns and a figurehead from an old sailing vessel.

The office of independent oilman David Blue Jr. is far from plush — just a simple headquarters for his family-owned production company. His chief task is to try to balance rapidly escalating costs against an uncertain price for the oil his wells bring in — if they bring in any oil at all.

The Toomey Oil Co., still bearing the name of its founder, is as far removed from the majors like Exxon and Phillips as the family owned grocery is from the national supermarket chain.

Blue's problems are symbolic of most independent producers. The average independent, he says, is a man in his 50s who worked for a major company for awhile after graduating from college and is now making somewhere between $25,000 and $40,000 a year operating strip-per wells in fields long abandoned by the majors or in areas nearby which only the independent could afford to explore.

"Everything connected with this business has escalated," Blue says, "compounded by a scarcity of materials. There isn't any great big bonanza."

The independents have brought in more than 75 per cent of all domestic oil wells and continue to do nearly 80 per cent of all domestic exploration and production. Some fear they will be forced out of business by congressional actions aimed at high profits reported by the majors.

"If they make these things (price rollbacks and increased taxes) retroactive, then you'll see a bunch of people out of the business who placed their funds back into exploration and production," Blue says. "If you can't produce these properties at a profit, you'll either have to shut them down or plug them."

"The only alternative is government operation, and based on their track record, I can think of nothing more wasteful than letting the federal government run the domestic oil industry."

Blue's company operates about 75 producing oil wells, which bring in less than 500 barrels a day in total production. That could be doubled if the materials were available and the future price of oil certain, he says, but the uncertainties now plaguing the independent have made most hold off on any new efforts.

"We're not quite like anything else — we're neither fish nor fowl. We can't figure costs and returns like a retail merchant. You have to play it pretty much by ear."

"It used to cost $10 a foot to drill a well. Today it's twice that."

If congressmen from non-oil producing states see depletion allowances on items like sand, gravel, coal, timber and more than 150 others disappear, Blue predicts "they'll start hearing from their constituents."

"Our product is not replaceable. It's not like timber. When oil is gone, it's gone."

Japanese Competition Doesn't Worry Leader

By JOHN PINKERMAN
Copley News Service

LANCASTER, Pa. — Japan is cutting into American industry's foreign markets, Australia being the latest example. However, one leader of the U.S. electronics market scoffs at the idea that he cannot whip the Japanese in over-all competition.

This man is Gene W. Duckworth, division vice president and general manager of the RCA Industrial Tube Division here. "I'm delighted to take them on," Duckworth said in an interview, chewing on a cigar and spitting out strong views on many aspects of the electronics industry.

Duckworth pilots his own plane and has the computerized mind that deals in the intricacies of today's scientific world. He also laughs like a happy man, speaks tough like the pudgy fullback he resembles and gives off an air of confidence that American industrialists might need in staying abreast of the Japanese sales campaign for foreign markets that are vital to U.S. balance of payments and the good health of U.S. firms.

He even is confident of his own place in the business world. Presiding over a segment of business whose major product is the industrial television tube and other types of tubes, he is not at all awed by the great to-do over entry of solid state techniques that some have said would put tubes out of business. "What do I think of the imminent 'death' of the tube industry?" he said.

"I'll tell you this — I'll take my retirement in tubes." And, what is his retirement year? It's 1985.

But, how about competition with the Japanese? "We can compete with the Japanese," he said. "They are extremely good acquirers of knowledge under license agreements. They've done very well in electronics and communications, particularly in industrial cameras, tubes, photo multipliers. They've not done so well in solid state."

"Here's an idea how well we compete with them. We sell TV camera tubes to them, also power tubes and photo multipliers. We compete very successfully with them in Brazil. And, our marketing does very well in Japan in Europe, our No. 1 foreign customer; Canada, No. 2. Asia is fourth with us, and they do well in Asia. Latin America would be our No. 5. But, we watch them. We saw them coming with a TV camera and they were cutting into the market."

"We had to do something. We've done it and we compete very well."

"Don't ever forget — with rare exceptions, nobody matches American products in quality and in service." Duckworth did not mention a specific aspect of quality but not long after he spoke, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration ordered the recall of 300,000 Japanese-made color TV sets (made by Matsushita) due to radiation dangers.

Neither is Duckworth the only leader in electronics who is not afraid of the Japanese salesmen. Dr. D. Joseph Donahue, RCA division vice president for world operations at the firm's Somerville, N.J., solid state complex, supported his statements and added, "My division sells components while the Japanese sell finished products. But, in Europe, 63 per cent of solid state components come from U.S. companies."

"The Japanese, while doing quite well, do not do as well as we do in the very important service aspect of the business."

Donahue also alluded to some discrimination against the Japanese, even 30 years after World War II. "Europe is a problem for them," he said. "Europe is not as open to Japanese imports as to American. France seems to find a way to keep them out."

"Don't forget, too, American technology leads the world. The United States even provides 20 per cent of electronic components to Japan itself. Right here in RCA we recently have had record months in European sales and we like to think it is due to our record of high-quality performance. With the recession, of course, new orders are tougher to get but we're doing reasonably well."

Film Institute Schedules Salute To Orson Welles

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Orson Welles, the movies' first real maverick director, was acclaimed a genius and a scoundrel simultaneously with the release of his first film, "Citizen Kane," in 1941.

The scoundrel part has faded and on Feb. 17 he will be honored on a national telecast, "The American Film Institute Salute to Orson Welles."

Because "Citizen Kane" was generally accepted to be an account of the life of publisher William Randolph Hearst, all hell broke loose.

It was not shown in many cities for years. Controversy surrounds the landmark film even today. Welles was only 26 when he made the picture.

He had established himself as a mischief-maker in 1938 with his radio broadcast of "The War of the Worlds."

His news-type approach had listeners streaming into the streets, fearful that Martians had invaded the earth. The young genius loved the notoriety.

Welles follows the late director John Ford and Jimmy Cagney as the third recipient of the AFI Life Achievement Award. Ford and Cagney were safe bets, revered within the movie industry and by the public. Welles is a different breed.

Charlton Heston, chairman of the AFI board of trustees the past four years, will be making the presentation to the beely director-actor.

"I've made 45 movies," Heston said on the eve of Welles' big night, "and I don't think anyone would quarrel with the opinion that Orson Welles has the greatest talent of all movie directors."

"Not that talent is all of it. I've worked with DeMille, Wyler, Stevens, Olivier and Peckinpah, but Orson owns the store on pure talent.

"He has the capacity to make his actors think every scene, every line is tremendously important. Believe me, that takes talent."

Heston co-starred with Welles in "Touch of Evil" (1957), which Welles also wrote and directed.

"In 1956 and again in 1972 a poll was taken to determine what was the best motion picture ever made," Heston said. "Citizen Kane" won both times.

"Orson doesn't have a huge body of work as did Ford and most of the other great directors. But as the first of the real independents his pictures were qualitative rather than quantitative."

"He was among the most innovative. He was first to use ceilings on sets, shooting upward. He introduced deep focus, overlapping dialogue and 360-degree panoramic shots, among other things."

"Orson was asked how he prepared to be a director. He answered that he ran films for three weeks watching the masters — John Ford, John Ford, John Ford."

Film purists acclaimed his work on "The Magnificent Ambersons," "The Lady from Shanghai," along with "Macbeth" and "Othello."

A man of Faustian proportions himself, Welles has appeared in more pictures, 60, than he has directed. 20. Perhaps his most memorable performance aside from Kane was his 1949 role as Hary Lime in "The Third Man."

"I suppose the choice of Welles for the award may be considered unusual in some quarters," Heston said. "But it's nice to reward mavericks now and then — they're valuable."

Heston explained a committee of trustees including producers Ted Ashley, David Brown, and Director Billy Friedkin had selected Welles for the honor which was approved by the AFI board.

The 90-minute televised award program (CBS) will be hosted by Frank Sinatra and include appearances by Joseph Cotten (who worked with Welles in the old Mercury Theater days), Ingrid Bergman, Jeanne Moreau, Jack Lemmon and Natalie Wood.

Police Arrest Suspects For 2 Burglaries

Pampa police jailed a burglary suspect today after a series of events involving two burglaries and attempted theft of gasoline was discovered by officers.

A patrolling officer stopped the suspect for questioning shortly before 2 a.m. when the man reportedly walked from behind the American Service Station, 225 W. Brown.

About the same time another patrolling officer reported the front door of Gates Valve Co. was open. The foreman was called and checked the business, telling officers he could determine no missing items other than approximately $12 in change and bills kept in a hiding place.

The suspect was taken to the police department for further questioning and reportedly told officers his car was parked on South Russell.

Officers located his car. According to reports, it was near the site of a Macabar Co. truck which had a siphon hose in the tank, transferring gasoline to a can on the ground. Officers' reports indicate a cup containing coins and bills and a calendar were found in the car.

Shortly after 6 a.m. an employe at Pampa Milk Co., Inc., 601 S. Cuyler, reported a break-in to police. A check of the premises revealed nothing was believed missing but a large calendar with several days circled.

Officers' reports indicate the calendar found in the suspect's car matched the description of the one stolen from the milk company.

Burglary charges were expected to be filed against the suspect later today.

Dr. King's Deeds Aren't Forgotten

By VERNON E. BROWN
Copley News Service

Jan. 15 was the birthday of the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., and I want to share a little insight with you on this unique individual.

Many people in the black community would say that Dr. King was an Uncle Tom, but to me, calling Dr. King an Uncle Tom would be like calling actor John Wayne a Communist. Both accusations are absurd.

Dr. King was a man who loved everyone. He was a man of great personal energy, who knew how to communicate with people of all ages and backgrounds.

He was a nonviolent man with a good education who was chosen by some of his fellow religious leaders, who also deplored violence, to be the leader of their nonviolent civil rights organization, the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

One of the biggest problems Dr. King faced in the early going was that he, himself, was not a poor man, nor was his family. Dr. King's father preached at one of the largest black churches in the South.

When he assumed the leadership of the SCLC, Dr. King saw the opportunity to put his education and his God-given abilities to good use.

He wanted to right all the wrongs overnight. Mistakenly, he felt that reason could overcome hatred and bigotry. He knew that violence was not the answer.

Yet the militants had their day with this man and he was hurt and discouraged that the people he dreamed of helping had turned toward destructive methods to gain their freedom.

He left the movement, traveled and began writing his book, but the effects of this rejection would follow him to his grave.

During this period he was continually hounded and harassed by various agencies of the federal government, and berated by militant blacks who saw his views as a cop-out.

Yet Dr. King endured these attacks and returned with renewed dedication and direction only to find the SCLC in desperate need of funds. Legal battles and operating expenses had taken their toll.

The SCLC "fad" was slowly dying and the movement was almost dead.

Dr. King knew that the supreme sacrifice for any dedicated leader was to make sure his movement lived on even if it meant his life.

History shows us that the movement lived and he died, but if we as practical people think about his death we have to question it.

Why was Dr. King at that particular hotel? He never stayed in cheap hotels. He always had a suite of rooms, the best.

Isn't it strange that a white man carrying a box could register in an all-black hotel, so near Dr. King's hotel, without raising any suspicion?

It's even stranger that a white man driving a white Mustang could get out of a black ghetto and all the way to England before being arrested.

Dr. King's life was not the first or the last to be given for a cause. God gave His only Son so that people of all races could be saved and enjoy everlasting life.

No one should dispute the fact that Dr. King was a truly great human being. His deeds and words will never be forgotten and will stand as an everlasting monument to him.

Dr. King was, and is, my main man.

McDowall Acting Since He Was 8

By RICK ROBERTS
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — The TV Mailbag:

Q. Where can I write to get in touch with actor Roddy McDowall, who stars in the television series "Planet of the Apes?" I'm a big fan of his. — B.P., Nova Scotia, Canada

A. You can write to McDowall in care of 20th Century-Fox Studios, 10201 Pico Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif. 90067.

As you may know, McDowall appears in the role of Galan on the show, a role he created in the highly successful "Planet of the Apes" movies.

McDowall has been acting since he was 8 years old and became a star at the age of 12 in the picture "How Green Was My Valley." He has appeared in some 40 feature films and has also directed a movie.

Q. I've always liked Jeff Chandler's acting, but heard recently that he died some time ago. When and how did he die? — R.M., Dartmouth, Nova Scotia

A. Chandler, one of the most popular actors of his times, died in 1961 at the age of 42. His death was attributed to complications suffered following a back operation.

Q. Please settle a dispute for us over who is the mother of James MacArthur of "Hawaii Five-O." One of my friends insists his mother is Helen Hayes. I say it's Rosalind Russell. Who's right? — B.P., Terrace, California

A. Your friend is correct.

MacArthur is the son of Miss Hayes and the late newspaperman and playwright Charles MacArthur.

MacArthur has been on the series since it began seven years ago in the role of Danny Williams. He began acting at the age of 8 and has appeared in numerous plays, movies and television shows.

Q. Do Claude Atkins and Frank Converse of "Movin' On" do their own driving in the series? — N.S., Phoenix, Ariz.

A. The two do most of the driving on the show, according to television sources. To learn the intricacies of handling the big rigs they underwent a special course at a truck-driving school for the series.

Rock Music

By Bruce Meyer
United Press International
New music of interest:
Henry Gross — "Plug Me Into Something" (A&M SP-482) — A tour de force of rock 'n' roll versatility. Henry Gross was one of the original members of the 1960s resurrectionists Sha Na Na. Now he's left the groove and the gold lame behind to go solo. Gross has a good voice, writes first-class songs with a touch of tongue-in-cheek humor and plays a searing guitar.
There's none of Sha Na Na in this record; it's a kind of guided tour of the last decade—from the British invasion ("All My Love") to heavy metal ("Dixie Spider Man") and country-rock ("Evergreen"). And just to keep things balanced, there's a gentle, acoustic ballad ("Only One"), some raunchy Lou Reed ("Tomorrow's Memory Lane") and a solid sprinkling of straightforward 1975 rock 'n' roll.
There is not a single weak cut on this album—and if that makes it sound like Henry Gross can do everything, then you've got the idea. Don't miss this one.

New Program Helping Parents Teach Children

Houston (UPI) — A child development professor says rubbing velvet on a baby's skin, tying a rattle to the child's arm and painting pictures on baseboards of the nursery teaches the infant to use his senses.
"A person learns from birth to death," says Dr. Edith Crouse. "Years ago it was thought you didn't talk to your children until they were about six years old. There are still some of those looks around."

Mrs. Crouse, assistant professor in child development and family life at the University of Houston, is director of a new program at a laboratory school for parents to learn how to teach their children. The lab also teaches children how to use their senses.
One goal of the program is to help parents communicate with each other and with the child. Mrs. Crouse describes communications as a major step in Ray Manzarek — "The Whole Thing Started With Rock & Roll And Now It's Out Of Control" (Mercury SRM-1-1044) — The late Jim Morrison was once quoted as saying that Ray Manzarek "is the Doors." Then Jim died in his Paris bathtub and proved it wasn't so, because the Doors died with him.

Still, it was a high compliment and Jim Morrison was not the sort to bestow such without good reason. This is Manzarek's second solo album — and it is a startling improvement over the first.
The thing is, it would be good to see Manzarek succeed, because he is one of the genuinely nice people in the Rock Biz, and he has put together an undeniably fine band. In live performance they handle the simplest or most complex patterns — from basic rock to pure jazz — with professional aplomb. The rhythm section particularly is impressive, carrying Manzarek's often delicate keyboard leads lightly and surely.
Manzarek's first album, "The Golden Scarab," was lost to a heavy-handed production and a laughably pretentious philosophical "concept." On "The Whole Thing..." Manzarek retains intact much of the underlying style in that initial effort, but gets back to music. His voice is improving, the production is surer and, most important, the songs have more guts.
This is the first album made by a former Door that a hardcore Doors fan might actually enjoy. And that, too, is a high compliment.

John Lennon has won the first battle of the New Year in his deportation struggles. A federal judge has granted Lennon's request that he be allowed to personally cross-examine government witnesses in the case — including convicted Watergate conspirators John Mitchell and Richard Klein-dienst... the film version of the Who's rock opera "Tommy" premieres in New York in March, starring Who lead singer Roger Daltrey in the title role... at a recent L.A. concert, the Eagles and stablemate Dan Fogelberg were joined — unexpectedly — on stage by Joe Walsh, Jackson Browne, Linda Ronstadt and J.D. Souther. Nice to have friends.

CLASSICAL MUSIC Death Occasion For Records

By WILBUR G. LANDREY
United Press International
Death is the occasion, if not the excuse, for records to be issued each as living anniversaries are.
There is nothing wrong with this; we get some welcome albums this way, and hear again some great performances. So it is Columbia's repackaging of David Oistrakh's mono concertos from the middle 50s, still in the catalog, it is true, but now brought together in one two-record album. (MG 33328).
Oistrakh, one of the great violinists, died last year of a heart attack at the age of 62, far from his native Russia, while on a concert tour in Holland.
He has later stereo recordings still extant of some of the pieces in this album. But these mono performances, whose sound is excellent, remain as a great tribute to the performing genius of a great violinist.
They include Mendelssohn's E minor concerto, Vivaldi's A minor concerto for two violins played with Isaac Stern, Mozart's Concerto No. 4 and Bach's Concerto No. 2, all with the Philadelphia Orchestra under Eugene Ormandy; and Shostakovich's Concerto No. 1 with the New York Philharmonic under Dimitri Mitropoulos.
An interesting addition to the current catalog is Belgian violinist Arthur Grumiaux's recording of the works by three Walloon composers—Sonata for Violin and piano by Guillaume Lekeu (with Dnorah Varsi), "Reve d'Enfant" by Eugene Ysaye and Ballade and Polonaise by Henri Vieuxtemps (Philips 6500 814).
Leonard Bernstein's latest (and second) recording of Gustav Mahler's "Resurrection" Symphony, No. 2, (Columbia M2-32681) is a must for Mahler lovers.
It was recorded in Ely Cathedral with soloists Janet

Baker and Sheila Armstrong, the Edinburgh Chorus and the London Symphony Orchestra sometime after the 1973 Edinburgh Festival (the jacket does not say exactly when). It is a stunning performance.
Another noteworthy performance recently released on records is that of Tchaikovsky's "Manfred" symphony by the Moscow Radio Symphony Orchestra under Gennady Rozhdestvensky (Melodiya-Angel SR-40267).
Dvorak's Symphony No. 8 (once listed as No. 4) was overshadowed by the popularity of his New World Symphony (No. 9 or No. 5 depending on the listing). Nevertheless, it is a fine and great work and there are two recent releases to choose from.

One is a recording by the Czech Philharmonic under Vaclav Neumann, a Supraphon import issued by Vanguard (SU-2). The other is a budget Odyssey resurrection of Bruno Walter's performance several years ago with the Columbia Symphony Orchestra (Y 33331). Both are fine.
Also recommended:

—Sibelius' Tempest Suites and Scaramouche played by the Hungarian State Symphony Orchestra under the Finnish specialist in Sibelius, Jussi Jalos (London CS 6824).
—Berlioz' Symphonie Fantastique played by the Concertgebouw Orchestra under Colin Davis (Philips 6500 774).

Dance Students Attend Master's Ballet Class

Joy Ludlow, Administrative Director and ballet mistress for the Oklahoma City Metropolitan Ballet Company taught a master's class Sunday for ballet students of Madeline Graves School of Dance, Pampa.

The class served as auditions for special ballet parts in the annual Madeline Graves dance recital, slated for May 31 in the M.K. Brown Auditorium.

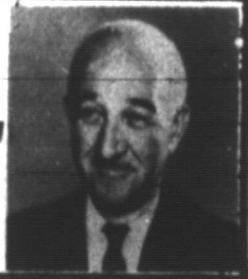

Mrs. Ludlow has held her present position for one and a half years, coming to the Oklahoma City Metropolitan Ballet Company from the New York City Ballet Company. Born in New York City, Mrs. Ludlow studied at the School of American Ballet, official school for the New York City Ballet Company.

The mother of two children, Joy Ludlow is the wife of Conrad Ludlow, artistic director for the Oklahoma City Metropolitan Ballet Company, artist in residence for Oklahoma City University and former principle dancer for the New York City Ballet. Ludlow was unable to come to Pampa Sunday due to a scheduled performance with the New York City Ballet Company.

Following Sunday's master ballet class, recital auditions were held in tap, jazz and acrobatics. Out-of-town judges for the auditions were Mrs. Elaine Lambert and Mrs. Mary Lou Rosser, both of Snyder; and Mrs. Joy Ludlow, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED KARPIN

It is perhaps surprising that after all these decades, in which hundreds of chapters have been written on "safety - plays," many bridge players still fail to apply a safety - play in obvious situations. Such was the case in today's deal, which arose in a rubber-bridge game.

Neither side vulnerable. South deals.

The bidding:
South West North East
1♦ Pass 1♦ Pass
2NT Pass 2♦ Pass

Pass Pass

Opening lead: Five of ♥ South's second rebid of two notrump was a poor call, for North was under no obligation to bid again. With South having 17 high-card points, and North promising a minimum of 10 points for his two responses, South should have jumped to three notrump. As it turned out, North put his partnership into the correct contract.

East played the queen on West's opening heart lead, and South won the trick with his king. Without counting his tricks, declarer promptly led a diamond to the board's ace, after which he cashed the diamond king. East discarded a spade on the latter lead. All declarer could now make in diamonds was three tricks, and a defeated contract was the result.

In a sense, declarer was unlucky in finding the adversely-held diamonds divided 4-1, since they rated to be divided 3-2. Had they been so divided, South would have made six diamond tricks by playing the suit as he did. But South could have overcome the bad break by stopping to count his tricks. He would then have realized that all he needed was five tricks in diamonds to fulfill his contract, and he would have played the suit to make five tricks.

At trick two the tree of diamonds would be led out of the South hand. West following suit with the four-spot Dummy's eight would be played, and East would win the trick with his nine.

No matter what East now returned, South could not be prevented from fulfilling his contract, for he would now have five cashable diamond tricks. By availing himself of the "safety-play" — the deliberate giving away of a diamond trick — South would be paying a premium of 30 points, the value of an overtrick, to bring home a game. Surely this would have been a sound investment.

Foster-Fuqua Say Vows In Woodward

Miss Marsha K. Foster and Jimmie L. Fuqua exchanged nuptial vows at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 11 in the First Baptist Church of Woodward, Okla.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Glen Foster, and parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Fuqua, all of Woodward.

THE CEREMONY

The Rev. Wendyl Glenn, pastor, officiated for the double-ring ceremony. Donna Johnston, soloist, sang "If...Where Ever Thou Goest," and "Wedding Prayer," accompanied by Mrs. Ernie Johnston, both of Fargo.

The ceremony was performed before a background decorated with two basket arrangements of pink roses and white carnations. The bridal aisle was decorated with pink and cranberry red satin bows.

The bride presented a rose to her mother during the processional and to the bridegroom's mother as she presented her engagement ring during the recessional.

THE BRIDE

The bride, given in marriage by her father, with the "her mother and I" avowal, was attired in a formal silhouette gown of nylon organza and peau d'ange lace over taffeta. The empire styled bodice of peau d'ange lace featured a scooped yoke with lace and pearl trimmed neckline and full Bishop sleeves enhanced with tiny self-covered buttons.

The A-line skirt was fashioned with panels of scalloped matching lace. The back styled with a detachable train was secured at the waistline with an organza bow and trimmed with appliques of lace.

Her three-tiered fingertip veil of bridal illusion was edged in scalloped Chantilly lace and was secured by a pearl and lace trimmed bandeau. She carried a colonial bouquet of pink carnations, and red rose buds, and baby's breath and with pink and cranberry red satin streamers. She carried out the traditional something old, new, borrowed and blue and wore two birthdate pennies in her shoe.

ATTENDANTS

Janis Stubblesfield, Pampa, served her cousin as maid of honor and Joveda Bunch, Lawton, also cousin of the bride, was bridesmaid. They wore identical floor-length gowns of cranberry red polyester knit trimmed in white and pink lace with pink ruffled garden hats with matching lace. Each carried a cascade of pink carnations, tipped in red with baby's breath and pink streamers.

Best man was Jerry McAllister, Woodward, and Larry Foster of Watonga, brother of the bride, served as groomsman. Leslie Ashlock Woodward, served as usher.

MOTHERS

The bride's mother wore a floor-length gown of hot pink polyester knit with sheer pleated sleeves and matching accessories. The bridegroom's mother wore a floor-length gown of pastel pink polyester knit styled with long sleeves and matching accessories. Both wore red rose bud corsages.

RECEPTION

The reception was held in fellowship hall of the church. The serving table was covered with a white Chantilly lace cloth over white tulle. The centerpiece was a tiered arrangement of coral roses, each centered with tiny pink lights.

The white sentimental cake featured three tiers with large pink and white sugar bells with pink roses arranged on the edge of white icing on each tier. The cake was topped with a music box which played the traditional "Here Comes The Bride." The miniature bride and bridegroom, housed in petals and roses, rotated with the music. The bride's bouquet also adorned the serving table.

The bridegroom's table was decorated with a white lace cloth and double heart chocolate cake with icing similar to the wedding cake.

Serving the wedding cake were Mrs. Jerry McAllister, and Vickie Charmasson both of Woodward. Pam Baldas of Lawton, cousin of the bride, presided at the punch bowl. The bridegroom's cake was served by Donna Johnston. Registering guests was Vickie Charmasson, who was dressed in pink polyester with lace similar to the bridal attendant.

Other members of the houseparty were Mrs. Frank Horner and Mrs. Leonard Dungan.

As the bridal couple left the reception, guests were handed pink and cranberry red rice bags tied with white lace.

For the wedding trip, the bride chose a hot pink polyester knit dress and wore white accessories. She lifted the corsage from the bridal bouquet. The couple will reside in Woodward after the wedding trip.

Family Financial Inventory

COLLEGE STATION — Inventories are just as important for families as they are for profitable businesses, Mrs. Doris Myers, family resource management specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System, pointed out this week.

"This can determine net worth and guide future needs and planning. Another use is as a basis for insurance coverage or even claims if property is lost," she said.

A good place to begin is the household inventory — a room-by-room listing of every item. This should include the date purchased, original cost and present value. To determine replacement cost, figure deductions for depreciation, the specialist explained.

For gift and homemade items, Heirlooms and antiques may have increased in value rather than depreciated. This may call for an appraisal by an authority to determine present value. Don't forget to include personal effects such as clothing, jewelry, etc., she said.

Mrs. Myers pointed out that items in the garage and store room such as the family car, yard care and recreation equipment can amount to a sizeable sum.

"If the home is paid for, find out its value today. If you are paying on a mortgage, determine how much is invested. Add the value of any other real estate owned.

"Include in your inventory the name and value of investments, bonds, other savings and life insurance. Figure cash value for each."

Also include the amount of money in checking accounts and the amount others owe you. If there is any other item that has value, add its worth to complete the total family assets.

Turning to the liabilities column, the specialist advised listing each by name and amount owed. The list may include debts such as home mortgage, installment contracts, notes, charge accounts, credit card obligations and personal loans.

"Total the debit side, then take the difference in what is owed and what is owned — this gives the family's financial picture," she said.

"In fact, they find out exactly where they stand overall — and many families are pleased to find out they're really doing better than they thought they were."

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise:

I am not an ecology nut, but I could not stand to throw away the beautiful egg cartons made of styrofoam. They are just like new once you put the eggs away and it is such a waste to chuck them. I was trying to think of something else to use them for and came up with this idea.

Wash and dry them. Then use them as gelatin molds! I cut the top off the carton and just spooned in the liquid in each egg cup. Put them in the refrigerator and let it do the rest.

When you are ready to use them, just take a knife and run it down the middle of the carton. Turn it over and pop each one out carefully.

The greatest thing is that they jell faster and there isn't much mess to clean up.

Heloise II

Gals, there has to be a "gillion" other things we can use these for. So put your thinking caps on and let us know in care of this paper.

Heloise

Dear Heloise:

It always bothered me to let my baby go to bed with damp hair following his bath and shampoo.

Then we remembered Dad's hot comb. It works like a charm and baby doesn't object if I put him on the counter so he can make funny faces in the mirror.

Better yet, I plug in the comb by Dad's easy chair and let him style his son's hair while they share a book.

This gives me a few extra minutes to straighten the bathroom, pick up toys or just take a breather before putting the little guy to bed.

Sharon Reedy

Dear Heloise:

To keep chocolates fresh, place them in a plastic bag and put them in the freezer compartment on your refrigerator.

Esther J. Judkins

Dear Heloise:

I am 12 and have been looking for a diary. Every store I went to, the diary cost too much.

So when school started, I got a new notebook and my old one was left for junk. I got this idea, to just put paper in the old notebook and I would have a diary.

In the front, I taped a piece of paper and put the names of my friends, what street they lived on and their phone number. In the back, I listed all of my relatives.

Valerie Betts

Dear Heloise:

I've had the best luck with this method of freezing okra for frying. Slice, dredge in a mixture of cornmeal and flour. Place on towels to dry ten or 12 hours. Package and freeze.

To cook, hit package to separate. Fry in hot grease until crisp.

If not cooked until crisp, it will be a little tough.

Tulsa Professor Will Head Assembly Meet

According to an announcement by the pastor, R.L. Courtney, The First Assembly of God Church in Pampa will be the scene for many exciting activities Friday through Sunday of this week.

The Rev. Nolan Christian from Tulsa will be coming to Pampa to share some knowledge and an ability that will bring help to those who hear him. He is a man who has been filled with the Holy Spirit, a practicing psychologist with a Family Counseling Service in Tulsa, and also serves as a half-time Professor at Oral Roberts University in Tulsa.

Rev. Christian has served as a pastor and a Bible College instructor which provides a background equipping him to minister in such a way as to be a means of rich spiritual blessing to all who hear him.

He will be the after dinner speaker at a special "Couples Banquet" to be held Friday evening where a capacity attendance is expected with tickets already sold.

Saturday morning at 8 Rev. Christian will be speaking to a group of men gathered for coffee and donuts.

At the noon hour on Saturday he will be the guest at a carry-in luncheon for the ladies.

Saturday evening at 6:30 there will be a "Rap Session" with the young people where questions will be answered and discussion entered into that will provide

REV. NOLAN CHRISTIAN help to those looking for some answers.

Newspaper Stories Report Jesus' Life

NEW YORK — "The reddest-faced man in Bethlehem today is Jonas, owner of the Bethlehem Inn, the Jonas Chariot Court, and the Hebron-Jerusalem Tourist Home," the newspaper account says.

"He is the man who turned the Nazareth carpenter and his wife away last night. Today he is mad enough to, well, in his own words, 'mad enough to eat every No Vacancy sign' in his three hostleries."

Jonas explained that "they didn't look like they were our kind of guests."

So reads one of the items on the front page of The Bethlehem Banner, "a nonexistent newspaper published at the time of Christ to show how the story of Christ's life would have been reported then."

The "lead" story, of course, reports the birth of Jesus, "unattended by a physician... in a stable here last night, and the talk of the town today is that the child might be the long-promised and long-promised Messiah."

"Whether this is just another of the Messiah false alarms, the Banner is in no position to say," the item continues.

From this first page, and on through 40 simulated editions, the life and times of Jesus are chronicled in today's newspapers. In today's newspapers, Jim Comstock, editor of the West Virginia Hillbilly, in McLean, Va.

He began his project with a page in each issue of the weekly Nicholas County News Leader in 1963, and has now brought it out as a book entitled "Good News," with photographs of Alderson-Broadus College students in styles of the early Christian era.

In addition to history, Comstock delves into the social practices of the time, featuring advertisements such as one in the fictitious Jerusalem News Letter suggesting, "See Palestine First — Hertz Rent-A-Chariot Co." Another newspaper, the Galilean Disturber, has a news story headlined "HEROD SINKING FAST; SUFFERS MUCH," below which is an ad for the "shortest, best way to Rome — The Appian Way — Travel over this wonderful turnpike and save time and the tires of your chariot!"

Most of the space in the "editions" of the newspapers, variously called The Antioch Daily Mirror, The Jerusalem News Letter, The Daily Roman Empire Journal, The Phoenician Daily World, the Egyptian Daily News and The Damascus Daily Mirror, is devoted to the "top" story of the day — a man called Jesus.

Dallas Bible College Plans Summer Courses

DALLAS — Dallas Bible College, through an enlarged and greatly expanded Summer School curriculum starting May 5 and continuing until August 2, is well on its way in the development of a new Summer School curriculum built on the belief that Christian education is an on-going and creative process instead of a "packaged deal."

"This view of Christian education is actually being applied to every aspect of the College's academic program so the change is not just updating courses but truly meaningful reform," explained President U.A. Doiron who became the institution's third chief executive office eight months ago.

Ten regular Summer School and mini-mester classes are planned, ranging from two to 10 weeks duration. These include classes in pastoral and theological studies, music, social sciences and Biblical studies.

While many students attending Dallas Bible College are already engaged in a Christian vocation, or anticipate entering a specific ministry, Doiron pointed out that many students are simply "dedicated Christians who will use their training in everyday-life experiences" as businessmen, or homemakers.

He added that many adults take advantage of such classes to increase their awareness in certain fields of study to become more effective in their lay roles in the local church program.

Doiron emphasized that college students home on vacation from their regular studies may earn several transferable credits "toward their regular degree program" while enriching their spiritual lives.

"Each course is designed to convey a definite message to the students," said Doiron. "Marriage and Family, for example, concerns today's tangled world and is taught by an experienced counselor."

Doiron noted that the college's primary concern is the individual and his personal development. The new summer curriculum will focus on this development, reaching "the mind as well as the spiritual."

Persons interested in attending regular Summer School or a mini-mester should write now for an application. The college is located at 8733 La Prada Dr., Dallas, Texas 75228.

Lamar Slates Guest Speaker

Lamar Full Gospel Assembly will have as their guest speaker Wednesday 19 of Feb., Dr. Dabbs.

He was reared in the Baptist Church, and was saved at the age of nine. He was called to the Medical Mission field as a freshman at the University of Arkansas Medical School. He served his internship at Baylor in Dallas with general practice in residency in Fort Worth.

Dr. Dabbs was a Flight Surgeon in the Air Force for five years, including one year in Viet Nam. He was in the Medical Mission field in northern New Mexico for three years for the Baptist church.

He received the Baptism in the Holy Spirit in 1972, and since has been doing teaching and preaching in seminars on the Holy Spirit's work and ministry in the Believer's life.

Dr. Dabbs resides in Cebolla, New Mexico with his wife and two children.

Penecostal Church Meeting For Sunday Sets Old Fashioned

Penecostal Faith Assembly 944 S. Dwight, will have an old-fashioned church service Sunday during its morning service beginning at 10 a.m.

Following the service, a covered-dish dinner will be held, according to Rev. Harlan Gamber, pastor.

The public is invited.

The Weekly Message Of Inspiration

Father Martin J. Calligan, C.M.

Jesus said: "Whoever wishes to be my follower must deny himself, take up his cross each day, and follow in my steps." Lk. 9:23.

This past Wednesday we began the Lenten season of forty days which will terminate with the commemoration of Jesus' Resurrection at Easter. Lent is a time for penance, self-denial and bearing one's burdens daily in an effort to follow in the steps of Jesus. One of hundreds of ways to follow in Jesus' steps would be to eradicate every trace of covetousness from our lives.

Most likely a good part of our economy would collapse without the present widespread cultural urge to covet goods of all kinds, licit or illicit, useful or unuseful, and unuseful or harmful.

A bad case of the "covets" merely unleashes desires that are not very well understood by persons afflicted with it. That is why all their longings and all their acquisitions often leave them unhappy, which in turn compels them to desire and to acquire more, and in the end leaves them still in a state of complete unhappiness and often drowning in the red sea of debt.

In the area of covetousness fantasy, we are living in an age geared for long distance intimacy and voyeurism for hundreds of thousands of people. Entrepreneurs, perspiring freely with erotic enthusiasm, capitalize on the covetousness in people by giving them a layhold as gigantic as a movie screen, as colorful and illustrated as the directions for constructing a model airplane in their audio-visual and printed media.

Indoor and outdoor theaters, establishments which stock this "adult literature," and some T.V. programs, provide men, and also sad to say, adolescents and children, with the stimulation and fantasy in which they can fan some warmth from the fires of their own covetousness.

However, the more a man covets, the more frustrated he becomes. This just happens to be the problem with coveting, not to mention that it can be a serious sin.

How can the covetor be helped in this culture of ours where men speak all the forbidden words out loud and where ads in newspapers and magazines, and commercials on T.V. make one feel like an outcast if he doesn't possess every gimmick ever invented?

First, we must pray to the Spirit for enlightenment and good judgment. Then pray that afflicted persons will make room in their hearts for God's love and that they in turn will respond to God's love through an inner conversion. Then we must help them grow through counseling, to a deeper vision of life and its meaning. Finally, we must encourage them to attend and participate in weekly worship of God in church so they can be enlightened and educated to the fact that the Gospels are indeed the "Good News" because they tell man HOW to live and how to attain happiness. Each of us must try to understand what Jesus said relative to denial of self, carrying one's cross daily, and following in his steps. This is the way to Christian maturity. This is the way to Christian peace of heart and mind... to deny oneself from launching into the sea of uncontrolled whims, desires, and wishes — the sea of covetousness.

Pampa, Tascosa In 2nd Half Showdown

By PAUL SIMS
Pampa can either put itself in the driver's seat or wreck the car completely tonight, depending on if the Harvesters win or lose against the visiting Tascosa Rebels.

A win would leave the Harvesters with a 2-0 record in the second half after finishing second to Tascosa in the first half. A loss would give Tascosa, first half winner, a 2-0 mark and likely the district championship.

"I imagine it means the whole ball of wax," Rebel coach Dave Camfield said. "If we win it, we can still lose a game then," meaning all Tascosa needs is a tie for first in the second half to cop the championship. If the Rebels win tonight, a loss to Borger wouldn't hurt Tascosa this half.

"I imagine we'll be up a little. We're trying to get ready; we're working on a few things. We've issued a few things, like tennis rackets to bat down Howie Lewis," Camfield said.

Instead of tennis rackets, Tascosa will try to use its awesome rebounding strength to "bat down" Lewis and the Harvesters. It worked in the teams' last encounter, as Tascosa used a 42-26 rebounding edge to slip past Pampa, 60-58, in the Rebel gymnasium.

"It'll be a battle of the boards. We didn't play at Tascosa, we just stood around," Pampa coach Robert McPherson said. "We should win if we do a real good job on the boards."

Both teams have been red-hot recently. Tascosa has won six games in a row and 12 of its last 14, while Pampa owns a four-game winning streak and has won nine of its last 10. Pampa played exceptionally well in the last 3 1/2 games, whipping Palo Duro in the second half of that game and downing Amarillo High, Borger and Caprock.

BOYS vs. MOBEETIE

Allison Teams Shining Despite No Gymnasium

ALLISON — Allison coach Eddie Dawson has more to be proud of than most coaches.

First of all, Dawson has two teams in the playoffs. His boys will take on Mobeetie in the District 3-B championship game tonight at Wheeler, and his girls have already won the district championship and are preparing for the bi-district game and powerful Valley.

Secondly, Dawson's cagers made it the hard way — without a home court and gymnasium to practice in. Allison's school and gym were levelled by a fire last summer.

The fire really didn't change his players' attitudes about basketball, says Dawson, in his seventh year at Allison. "I don't think it's made that much difference."

Although it didn't mar any attitudes about the game, the fire has put a slight damper on Allison's basketball program. If the disaster never happened,

Dawson says, "I think the boys definitely would be stronger. With the girls, there would be little difference. There's not so much movement and hard work with the girls."

Which means females can practice on outdoor blacktops, strange gyms or anywhere and still play basketball. Boys need to practice inside, preferably in their own gym. The boys' game is so intricate and to develop a team.

Dawson's teams (boys) at Allison had won four district titles in six years prior to this season, but this year's Antelopes have climbed higher than any of these championship teams. Three starters, all exceptional players, were graduated last spring and then came the fire.

Five-nine guards Mark Shelton and Johnny Grayson, brothers Clyde and Garland Duke and Clifton Miller, the tallest player on the team at 6-11, are not big on talent but the Allison starters are big on overcoming adversity. Allison, 23-7 for the season and 9-1 in district, may not beat Mobeetie tonight but have already clinched a successful season.

Perhaps even more impressive have been Allison's girls, who were picked third in pre-season polls but have captured the first girls' title at Allison since 1958.

Allison, 27-4, nosed out the Groom Tigerettes, 46-45, Tuesday for the district championship and will take on powerful Valley in the bi-district game next Tuesday in Pampa's Harvester Fieldhouse.

Valley was the Class A girls' state runnerup a year ago and has the material to capture the state championship in Class B this year. At first glance, it looks like Tuesday's bi-district contest will be a massacre with Allison on the short end.

But the girls, and boys, at Allison have proved nothing is impossible.

PAMPA SLEEPER — Junior Richard Lane, 6-1 forward, is Pampa's "sleeper", which means you don't know he's there but he's always getting the job done. Lane will be among the Harvesters in action starting at 7:45 p.m. today when Pampa hosts tough Amarillo Tascosa in a crucial district game. Tascosa won the first half with a 5-0 record and is tied with Pampa and Borger at 1-0 in the second half.

When Weather's Warm, Go Hook That Big Bass

AUSTIN — For all the exotic fish stocked in Texas lakes by the parks and Wildlife Department, the largemouth bass probably remains the top game fish for most freshwater anglers.

And yet, how many bass anglers know the first thing about their quarry?

Largemouth, spotted and smallmouth bass actually are sunfish and belong to the scientific family Centrarchidae. Bream and crappie are of the same family.

Lakes with temperatures in the 70-degree range and with moderate turbidity stimulate the rapid growth of bass if abundant food also is available. Lack of proper temperature or adequate food supply will slow the growth rate of all black bass.

In colder, northern lakes, largemouth bass may live to be 16 years old.

The average age of largemouths in warmer water is five to 10 years. There is some indication that the female bass not only grows larger than the male, but, like humans, she outlives the male.

Depending on the part of the state, spawning begins from February to May, when the surface water temperature reaches 60 degrees, and may continue throughout the summer in some parts of Texas.

Texas largemouth bass can spawn at one year of age and a female can produce from 2,000 to 100,000 eggs depending on her size and age. Fry are guarded by the male for several days but fall prey to insects and other fishes. Fewer than one percent of all fry hatched live longer than a year.

During the spawn is one of the ideal times to fish for bass. While guarding his nest, the male fish will attack fish or lures which come too close to his small charges. This is more of an instinctive move rather than a feeding action since the male does not seem to feed while tending the nest.

Female bass will resume foraging soon after laying their eggs.

A male taken from the nest usually means that the eggs or fry are lost to predators. This does not seem to harm the overall bass population since more young fish from the remaining nests take their place. Reducing the number of adult bass in a given area increases the production of young bass.

Many of the young fish are devoured by their cannibalistic parents and other bass. Cannibalism is seasonal and reaches a peak in May — June after spring spawning.

For the most part, largemouth bass do not school and are generally solitary creatures. Under certain conditions such as favorable temperatures or abundance of food, black bass will congregate but rarely school. A concentration of forage fish during the day will often trigger this response in bass.

Forage fish disperse at night and bass do likewise. There are specific movement patterns of bass which are caused by feeding, spawning, escape and changes in water quality, weather or habitat conditions.

Studies show that bass move through open water rather than along shorelines. They travel along submerged creek and river channels and prominent underwater irregularities.

Bass occupy deep water during the winter then move long distances to find suitable spawning habitat during the spring. After spawning, the fish will return to deeper water and follow routine patterns during the summer.

Bass weighing up to three pounds move about randomly. Their main concern is feeding and escape from larger bass. Larger species are more restricted and defined in their movements and require less food in relation to weight.

Curiously, bass have homing instincts. Fish displaced from their range have been recovered at the original site after a period of time. Various theories have been offered to explain this behavior. Their sense of smell seems to be the reason.

The senses of smell, hearing and taste are poorly developed, however. The major senses are sight and a sense of touch arising from the lateral line. The lateral line is sensitive to vibrations in the water.

Dumas "Y" To Sponsor Tournament

Area volleyball teams, men and women's, are invited to play in the annual Dumas YMCA Volleyball Tournament March 13-15 in the Dumas High School gym.

More information can be obtained from the Dumas YMCA, Box 1148, Dumas, 79029.

Volleyers Bounce Over Whitefaces

It didn't take Pampa High volleyball coach Lynn Wolfe long to put her regulars in the match against Hereford Thursday night in Harvester Fieldhouse.

Playing without some starters in the first game, Hereford stunned Pampa, 15-3. "I was trying not to play them but I did after that game." The regulars went in and Pampa won the next two games, 15-1, 15-4, and upped its season record to 8-0.

In the junior varsity match, Pampa, now 2-0, won, 15-5, 15-9.

Annette Keeton, who didn't play in the first game, downed four spikes in the second game and three in the third. A downed spike is one which hits the floor and has no chance for a return.

Top setter for Pampa was Donna Doggett with seven in the second game and nine in the third. "She's the reason Keeton got all those good spikes," said Mrs. Wolfe.

Best servers were Peggy Tyrrell, who served six straight points in the third game, and Wanza Jernigan with seven straight in the second.

The Harvesters take on Plainview at 8:30 p.m. today in the first round of the West Texas State tournament in Canyon.

Plainview Hosts Girls Golf Affair

Plainview High is hosting the four Amarillo schools, Borger, Pampa and Canyon today in an 18-hole girls' golf tournament at the Plainview Country Club.

Amarillo High and Tascosa are favorites in the event, which has opened Pampa's season. Play began at 9:30 a.m. today.

New Golfing Academy Training Professionals

By FRANK MACOMBER
Capley News Service

What this country needs is more golf club professionals. The game is gaining popularity so fast that too many American amateurs are developing bad playing habits. The hooks and slices you learn today are tough to cure tomorrow.

Moreover, there's a shortage of competent teachers and club pros because so many good young golfers are trying for the golden PGA tournament tour instead of learning the trade of the all-round golf professional.

Hopefully, however, the pendulum slowly is swinging over toward new emphasis on the need for the club pro, as country clubs and public courses search, often in vain, for combination golfer-businessmen to boss their operations.

Typical of the swinging pendulum is a new golf academy opening in suburban San Diego, Calif., at Whispering Palms Golf and Country Club. Charles Pierce, a veteran pro teacher and president of the San Diego Golf Academy, says the school is designed to train professionals for management careers at golf courses and country clubs.

With a first-semester class of about 20 students, the academy is expected to attract at least double that for the second semester beginning June 18, as word spreads that the young golfer can go to a state-approved school to learn his trade.

The golf academy approach seems destined to catch on nationally. Johnny Miller, the hottest golfer on the PGA tour today, says his career hopefully will take him some day to the role of an instructor or headmaster of an academy like the one Pierce has founded.

"Some day I would like to set up a golf-training school," Miller said in a recent interview. "Right now I'm looking over a site for such an academy in the Napa Valley, Calif., area."

"I wish there had been a school where I could have been taught more about the role of a golf professional than just that of a player."

"My idea is to establish an academy for advanced players and club pros."

Pierce meanwhile has set up a demanding two-year curriculum combining instruction in golf with college academic courses in business and management. The specialized courses are designed to prepare future golf pros to operate country clubs, manage golf courses and work in a variety of management posts in the burgeoning golf industry.

Teaching the golf pro how to teach amateurs the game is an important facet of the academy course, too.

INCOME TAX

Some Sick Pay Could Qualify For Exclusion

In some instances, there are waiting periods before you may qualify for exclusion of sick pay as your federal income tax.

This information is included in this section of an 11-part series on helping you prepare your federal income tax.

By United Press International

Taxpayers who received certain payments because of medical expenses, permanent injury or sickness during 1974 may not be required to pay federal income tax on such amounts, according to Commerce Clearing House, national reporting authority on tax and business law.

Amounts received under workmen's compensation acts as compensation for personal injuries or sickness, or damages received on account of personal injuries or sickness, are not taxed.

Amounts received through accident or health insurance or through an employer's health and accident plan as reimbursement for medical expenses or for personal injury also are excludable.

Otherwise, amounts received for personal injuries or sickness are taxed to the extent they are paid for by an employer or are attributable to contributions made by an employer to a plan.

If wages were received for a period during which an employee was absent from work due to sickness or injury, such amounts, within limit, can be excluded from income on Form 1040. To figure your sick-pay exclusion under the sick-pay rules, you must first determine whether your sick pay was over 75 per cent of your regular weekly rate of pay.

If you received over 75 per cent of your regular weekly pay for periods of absence from work because of sickness or injury, there is a 30-day waiting period (even if you were hospitalized) before you qualify for the exclusion. After 30 days, you can exclude up to $100 per week, CCH says.

If you received 75 per cent or less of your regular weekly pay, there's a seven-day waiting period if you were not hospitalized and the exclusion is limited to $75 per week. There's no seven-day waiting period if you were hospitalized at least one day during the absence period. After 30 days, the exclusion rises to the $100 limit.

CCH said the seven or 30-day waiting period applies to each period of absence.

A statement should be attached to your tax return in support of a claimed exclusion for sick pay. Form 240 (one for each period of absence) may be used to explain the exclusion. If the period of absence extends into a second year, a statement containing the information required by the form, not Form 240, should be used. If, however, an employee's Form W-2 (Wage and Tax Statement) received from his employer shows excludable sick pay, a need not file Form 240. Instead, the Form W-2 should be attached to his Form 1040 and the excludable sick pay claimed on line 30, Form 1040.

Where an employee retires because of disability, the disability payments qualify as sick pay until he reaches the normal or mandatory retirement age. Also, the sick pay exclusion is applicable to regular wages paid under wage continuation plans to employees working past the normal retirement age. (NEXT: Capital gains and losses.)

Television In Review

By FRANK S. SWERTLOW
NEW YORK (UPI) — The award-winning National Geographic documentaries, dropped by the commercial networks, are moving to the Public Broadcasting Service with the help of the largest single corporate contribution ever made to public television.

The Gulf Oil Corp. has donated $3,720,000 for the next three years to National Geographic Television Films and WQED, the Pittsburgh PBS affiliate to produce the Emmy and Peabody Award-winning nature and educational series, according to a spokesman for PBS.

The official announcement will be made Thursday by PBS, National Geographic, and Gulf. The previous high for corporate funding to public television was $2 million by Arco for the Adams family series, which will be aired later this year. The National Geographic series is the first time Gulf will support a nationwide public broadcasting production. Gulf, which is headquartered in Pittsburgh, has funded local shows for WQED.

Under the agreement, National Geographic and WQED will co-produce four one-hour shows, the first of which will air in January of 1976. The other shows will air in February, March and April. In 1977, there will be four new shows plus four reruns of the first year. In 1978, PBS will air another four new shows plus eight reruns. The first year's programs are "The Britons," which will concentrate on sea life around the British Isles; "Incredible Machine," which is about the human body; "Animals Nobody Loved," a documentary about the coyote, the rattlesnake and mustang; and "Great Apes," the gorillas of Rwanda and the orangutangs of Indonesia.

The National Geographic documentaries originally were telecast by CBS. That agreement lasted eight years. ABC aired the shows last year, but dropped them this year.

Dennis Kane, the executive producer of National Geographic Television Films, said he was pleased by the new agreement and said he expected the new series would be more creative than those aired on the commercial networks.

"I think we will have more freedom," Kane said in a telephone interview from Washington. "I had with the commercial networks. There we had network executive and sponsors looking at our programming decisions. For the PBS shows, we are just given the money and will produce the type of films we see fit to do."

Thursday night CBS aired "Queen of the Stardust Ballroom," starring Maureen Stapleton and Charles Durning. It's the bittersweet tale of a widow who finds love at a Bronx dance hall. Miss Stapleton, who lost her husband, and Durning, who plays a postman, begin their affair with a waltz and escalate to a tango. The show is poignant and delicately handled. But the surprise ending seems phony.

The Lighter Side

By DICK WEST
WASHINGTON (UPI) — No sensible person would quarrel with the concept of civilian control over the military establishment, but this arrangement does present certain difficulties.

Chief among the problems is the fact that the civilian overseers are not always well versed in military affairs.

Things that through civilian eyes appear unrelated to the defense effort may from a military viewpoint have strategic significance.

Face-lifting and bust-enlarging operations, for example.

In a recent news release, Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., reported that plastic surgeons in the armed forces are performing almost 800 such operations a year.

Beneficiaries of the beautification program are, for the most part, wives of admirals and generals, he surmised.

Aspin indicated these findings had left him disquieted if not aghast. He said, "I thought military surgeons were supposed to practice military medicine."

As a member of the House Armed Services Commission, Aspin should have known that face-lifting and bust-enlarging have a direct bearing on national defense.

I can't get into too many details because classified information is involved, but two facts may be noted without breaching security.

The material used in bust-enlargement operations is silicone.

This is not the only reason silicone is a strategic material. It also is used by the military to seal rocker boxes on aircraft and tank engines; it stays flexible enough to reseal bomb-bay doors after they open at high altitude; and it is used to insulate communications cables on naval vessels.

Now suppose the Pentagon decided it would be prudent to stockpile a certain amount of silicone for emergency purposes.

Well, the wives of our admirals and generals unquestionably are highly patriotic and undoubtedly could be counted on to volunteer as silicone repositories.

And what of the face-lifting? Well, if large numbers of middle-aged military wives suddenly turned up exceedingly bosomy, the Soviets might get suspicious.

But if they had simultaneously face-lifts to make them look younger, the bust-line expansion would not seem so unusual.

For reasons already stated, I dare say no more on this subject. And if Aspin has any regard for military security, he will drop it too.

AT HIGHER PRICES

Plan Would Stop Relabeling Goods

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — The shopper looking through all those cans of peas trying to find one that might have escaped the grocer's mark-up may soon get help from a state legislator.

Rep. Ron Bird, D-San Antonio has sponsored a bill to prohibit the relabeling of retail goods at higher prices.

"I'll probably be called a commie or pinkie because I'm 'thwarting free enterprise,'" Bird said.

His bill would make offending retailers guilty of a Class C misdemeanor, liable to a fine up to $200. A stock boy marking up goods on orders from the boss would be protected from prosecution.

"He (the grocer) shouldn't go back and re-mark goods because, he already figures in a good profit for himself when he first marks the goods," Bird said.

"Many retailers are making a profit off inflation. They tell their customers they're real sorry about inflation, but they're not so sorry they don't send the stockboy out to remark goods."

Bird said opponents argue the law would be unenforceable and would stymie competition and ultimately free enterprise.

He admitted enforcement wouldn't be easy but he said "with 11 million people in the state, there'll be enough people able to bring violations of the law to the attention of proper authorities."

Competition doesn't discourage price lifting because "everybody's doing it," and only the force of law will stop it, the legislator said.

Bird predicted tough sledding for his bill which must go before the House Business and Industry Committee, a body he characterizes as extremely conservative.

"I'm just trying to protect people on fixed incomes," Bird said. He said the demand for relief from retailer markup came mainly from his San Antonio constituents.

"I represent a district comprised of the oldest people per capita in San Antonio. The mean age is 57. They're living on retirement incomes they thought in the 1940s or 50s would be sufficient now."

Bird said he foresees problems even if his bill becomes law. "This is a scary thing," he said. "We'll have to put some people out of work — people who were hired solely for remarking."

Grim Mood Awakens Fun City

By JOHN FINKERMAN
Copley News Service

NEW YORK — The sign on the door of a Madison Avenue shop tells the story: "No Browsing. Shoplifters Stay Out. We know you by sight." At night the entire store is enclosed in steel bars.

So this is Manhattan. The city with a heart. The real America. Fun City, as so named by former Mayor John Lindsay. For one who once loved almost every inch of the city, one who boasts he once could roam the back streets of Harlem at any hour of the day or night, the "homecoming" after nearly 20 years was a rude awakening, a shock despite all the derogatory stories newspapers have been printing the last few years.

It just couldn't be. But, it is. And, it's something more than crime statistics, as bad as they are. There is a mood apparent and the mood is a grim one. The junior executives exhibit it best. They trudge along midtown streets at 5:30 p.m. They are in trench coats, dark suits, white shirts with button-down collars and they are carrying briefcases. Their heads are down, their eyes are glassy, their complexion is almost gray. Some of the glassy eyes are the result of too many midday $2.50 desperation martinis. Others are the result of the now decaying once great city getting to them.

Even the women show this mood. No longer are the elegant ladies of Fifth Avenue the world's best dressed.

They now don't look much different than those of "Double Fifth" (10th Avenue) — drab slacks, sloppy jackets, neither gloves nor hats — and the grim look that matches the despair of the junior executives.

The movies on 42nd Street tell another story, advertising "Lady Frenks" and "Devious Girls" plus "Peep Show — Orgy, American Style." The prostitutes don't seem to knock you down or rob you at Times Square, as reported recently, but big, bouncer-sized men, black and white, hand out handbills advertising "The Meeting Room. You'll Never Forget the Experience." The "visual aids" on the handbills indicate that New York authorities have had no more luck than California in suppressing massage parlors.

The prices, too, are something to contribute to the junior executive's depression. A luncheon of hash and a bit of spinach at a fashionable midtown hotel goes for $6.25. "Sea bass" that isn't sea bass goes a la carte for $11.50.

Thank goodness, the old-time pushcart hot dog still is available along 3rd Avenue and if you shop carefully you can get one for 30 cents, plus the Greek proprietor's mean that "I once had a restaurant — but went broke."

Amid the glooding and sullen masses there appears, this particular day, a sprightly and well-dressed young woman in red coat. She steps along at a lively pace, softly humming a song and showing the only smile on 49th Street. One in a million in a depressing city.

A newspaper story, continues the tempo of the times. The headline reads, "City to Require Exterminators at All Food Places." All restaurants, the story says, must employ a licensed exterminator to stem the tide of vermin infestation.

Forty per cent of 256 restaurants had been found with insect or rodent violations. Fun City?

Food isn't the only commodity that has skyrocketed in price. Cabs are vital to New Yorkers, and a 17.5 per cent fare hike brings the cost to 65 cents for the first one-sixth mile plus 10 cents for each additional sixth and 10 cents for every 60 seconds a cab is stopped in the 24-hour traffic jams.

A policeman is on trial for killing a pimp and a prostitute. The 15-year-old son of Deputy Mayor James Cavanagh survives a subway attack by six young robbers. A man found dead in a hotel hallway had been stabbed repeatedly. And, on and on with the grisly details of the police blotter.

One might say things haven't changed much over the years.

George Welsh, writing a new biography, "Gentleman Jimmy Walker," tells of the 1890's and '70s when it wasn't safe to walk the streets of the lower East Side after dark.

Justice is elusive today, too. Fifty-six per cent of New Yorkers polled said they had no confidence a robber, mugger or thief would go to jail even if caught.

Sadly, the best thing about Fun City today is leaving it — by the Lincoln Tunnel, the George Washington Bridge, the parkways to the north or the jets to the West. For those of us who remember it way back when, it's too bad. There just isn't much fun in a most-ly grim Fun City.

The Almanac

By United Press International
Today is Friday, Feb. 14, the 68th day of 1975 with 296 to follow.

The moon is between its new phase and first quarter.

The morning stars are Mercury and Mars. The evening stars are Venus, Jupiter and Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Aquarius. American suffrage leader Anna Howard Shaw was born Feb. 14, 1874. This is actor Vic Morrow's 43rd birthday.

On this day in history: In 1886, the West Coast citrus industry was born as the first trainload of oranges left Los Angeles for eastern markets.

In 1933, President Theodore Roosevelt signed a law creating a Department of Commerce and Labor.

In 1933, an eight-day bank holiday was declared in Michigan in a depression-era move to avert a financial panic, and $50 million was rushed to Detroit to bolster bank assets.

A thought for the day: Irish poet James Stephens said, "Virtue is the performance of pleasant actions."

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

SATURDAY, FEB. 15

Your birthday today: Few ventures turn out as planned this year, partly from your own growth, partly from broad changes in your environment. Current situations are bridges between the past and an interesting future. Give all the attention you can to long-term goals. Today's natives include stars of the theater, romantic heroes, steadfast people who accomplish what they set out to do.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: It's a mixed day, unfavorable for overconfidence or short cuts, but good for carefully watching details and catching up on a neglected hobby interest or correspondence.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Forget the past and go on to what you can achieve here and now with those who are now on deck. You've got enough to keep you busy and good incentive for action.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Don't worry about keeping up with anyone else or slowing down to cater to unreasonable demands. You have far too much to do for yourself and a romantic thought to go over.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Be alert for news of or reasons for unaccustomed offers of help. Household arrangements are in clearer focus for positive change. Pace your efforts to avoid fatigue.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Bright ideas pop up on all sides. You're more likely to succeed with an indirect approach over several phases by using tact. Attend to home repairs and maintenance.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: Follow romance and emotional lead without future regret. Let impulse color your days intuition show the way. Select clothing for a new image.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Home life springs into livelier action. Your mate and younger people require more of your attention; give generously and without prompting in accord with your true feelings.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: You can talk everybody into a better mood, but don't expect sweeping transformations. Find out what's new on the scene. Learn to recognize difficulties at an early stage.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Being overly insistent or trying for too large a share provokes a reversal in your program. Take the time to be sure of your facts. Check on security and safety.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: Let people make their own plans, and don't bring clashing personalities together. Your endurance is challenged today.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: Appensement is not the ready course. Go along with a sensible program rather than push for drastic measures. Romance deserves gentle care and more free time than you have.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Offer symbolic expressions of your feelings. You spend much of your day switching from one routine to another and substituting available materials for those in short supply.
