SHOOK AND FIVE OTHERS BREAK JAIL

Score Killed, Many Injured In Rush Hour Subway Wreck

CITY THROWN INTO PANIC BY RAIL DISASTER

Surgeons in Five Hospitals Busied by Inrush Of Injured

CAR SPLITS SWITCH

Second Worst Trolley Car Tragedy Ties Up Traffic

NEW YORK, Aug. 24. (UP)—A subway wreck at the rush hour—the thing every New Yorker stops to speculate upon now and then—happened tonight.

It took perhaps as many as 20 lives. It injured from 50 to 100 people. It disrupted underground and surface traffic for blocks around. It spread brief panic through the thousands who were underground.

It brought to New York probably its worst transportation tragedy since an elevated train left the rails and crashed from the supporting structure in Brooklyn about four years ago.

District Closed

Hours after the accident 10 blocks in the heart of the Times Square district, where the wreck occurred, were still closed and under police guard, with none permitted to enter.

At five hospitals 100 surgeons were busy attending the injured and reviving those who were shocked and fainted.

In morgue rooms there were strewn gruesome relics of the havoc which had occurred when the thing all New Yorkers fear came suddenly upon the city.

It was 5:10 p. m., with the rush of home going traffic approaching its peak, when the accident occurred. Every subway platform in lower Manhattan, there were crowds, milling about and waiting for trains.

Cars Packed

The Interborough Rapid Transit company's express train whirled into the Times Square station.

"Let 'em off; let 'em off," shouted the guards and a few left the train, their places taken by as many as the guards could squeeze inside the doors.

With effort, the doors of the cars were closed and inside each car was packed 200 or more persons.

The heavy train pulled out, leaving hundreds of people still on the platform, waiting for other trains.

The train gathered speed. Those on the platform saw it whirl by, five, 10, 15 miles per hour.

At the end of the platform its lights faded into the gloom of the underground tunnel.

Car Splits Switch

A city block beyond the end of the platform, there is a switch on the express track. The first seven cars of the train passed swiftly over it with only the usual clash and clatter.

But the eighth car, in railroad parlance, "split the switch" and went hurtling from the track. The momentum carried it on. About 100 feet from the switch it smashed with a deafening crash into one of the great, steel pillars which support the street above.

The impact tore the car in half and ripped it loose from the forward seven cars of the train.

The forward half smashed and plunged its way alone some 200 feet beyond the stanchion. The rear half telescoped into the two cars behind it.

The 200 or more people in the eighth car, which had been torn apart were thrown wildly about. Through the train there went the shriek of hundreds of people, seized with near-panic.

But the passengers were too closely packed in to struggle much. Women fainted and men fought—but it was a futile fight for they could hardly move.

Victims Help Others

Someone tore open a window in one of the rear cars; then another and another.

Peter Moither of Manhattan saw two women beside him. Their faces were pale and their forms were stiff. He thought they were dead. He lifted them both through a door, left them on the track, and sought safety for himself.

Men pulled other men and women through doors and windows after them. Everyone seemed to scream for a moment and then to concentrate upon winning safety for himself and his fellows.

Bodies Along Track

A hiss went through the wrecked cars and blue smoke curled from the electrical wiring, short circuited and burning.

But the fire was soon out.

"As I fled from the place," Moither said, "I could see bodies

SWIMS CHANNEL

London Nursemaid Fails, However, to Beat Ederle's Record

LONDON, Aug. 24. (US)—Hilda Sharp, boyish bobbed London nursemaid of 18 years, today failed to lower Gertrude Ederle's channel swimming record of 14 hours, 34 minutes. Hilda swam the channel but the fact that she joined the growing band of aquatic heroines is only incidental to the venture, the purpose of which was to beat Miss Ederle's time.

Miss Sharp entered the water at Cape Gris Nez half an hour after midnight and landed near Dover at 3:52 this afternoon, being in the water 15 hours, 22 minutes.

KELLOGG READY TO SIGN PACT

Last Minute Plans Finished On Arrival at Paris

PARIS, Aug. 24. (UP)—Secretary of State Kellogg arrived here today to sign his anti-war pact on behalf of the United States. Meanwhile, from two distinctly opposite sources came questions of just how far the pact would go in maintaining world peace.

Henri Berenger, former French ambassador to Washington, said France need not expect the pact, even if ratified by all nations, to liquidate the problems of the great war. The Catholic organ "La Croix" declared that it is futile to expect the document to end wars, "any more than it is for us to expect Minister of War Painleve to bring an era of peace by changing the name of his ministry."

In an effort to arouse popular feeling for the pact in France, the government has ordered the city be flagged and fully lighted over the week-end.

During the afternoon, Kellogg, accompanied by American Ambassador Myron T. Herrick, called at the Quai d'Orsay where they conferred for more than 40 minutes with Foreign Minister Aristide Briand. Last minute details regarding the signing of the pact Monday were arranged at the conference.

Two Sets of Twins Join Herd at Texas Tech

LUBBOCK, Aug. 24. (AP)—The old adage that "good things never come single," was called to mind today when the school of agriculture at Texas Technological college reported the birth of twin calves by two pure-bred Holstein cows.

The new arrivals, three heifers and a bull, are to become members of the college herd.

MOODY HOPES SMITH'S IDEA IS 'ACADEMIC'

Texas Governor Issues Statement On Talk By Nominee

FRANKNESS PRAISED

Lone Star Executive Is Of Opinion Change Impossible

AUSTIN, Aug. 24. (AP)—Governor Moody, who fought unavailingly at the Democratic national convention for a "bone-dry" plank, said tonight he hoped Gov. Al Smith's advocacy of a change in the amendment "is academic," and that he (Moody) believes it is.

Governor Moody said:

"Governor Smith's speech was frank and candid, qualities which I understand to be typical of him. The equivocations which so frequently characterize political utterances were noticeable by their absence. I sincerely hope that the advocacy of a change in the 18th amendment is academic, and I believe that it is, for surely neither the congress nor the American people will ever permit any change in this amendment."

W. J. A. Cooper Dies Suddenly at Graham

Special to The Record News.

GRAHAM, Texas, Aug. 24.—W. J. A. Cooper, 70, former sheriff of Young county, and a pioneer resident here, died suddenly of heart failure on a roadside near his home, one mile east of here, early this afternoon. Members of the family discovered the body. An inquest was held in which Justice of the Peace J. T. Rickman ruled that death had come from a heart affliction.

Deceased is survived by his widow, three daughters and one son. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Theft of Wine From Cornerstone Revealed

KEOKUK, Iowa, Aug. 24. (UP)—Elaborate plans were made for the opening of the cornerstone of the old Estes house, a historic building which is being razed here. The committee in charge of the ceremony arrived and all was ready for the speeches when it was discovered that a bottle of wine, placed in the cornerstone at the time of the construction 60 years ago, had disappeared.

Theft of the wine spoiled the party. Two suspects are being held in the city jail.

Byrd's Polar-Barkentine to Carry Many Notables as It Sails Today

NEW YORK, Aug. 24. (AP)—What probably will be one of the most distinguished gatherings that ever sailed on a barkentine will be aboard the City of New York when it starts down the harbor tomorrow towards the open sea and the antarctic.

Headed by Commander Richard E. Byrd, the passengers will include many of the leading financial backers of the polar expedition of which the ship is the first to get under way. Byrd and his guests will be taken off the ship in the lower bay and return to Manhattan aboard the municipal tug Macom.

Among those invited are Mayor Walker, Mrs. Floyd Bennett, widow of Byrd's pilot who died on the expedition to bring the Bremen fliers out from Greenly island; Mrs. Frederick E. Guest, backer of the Friendship's flight to England; Amelia Earhart, George Palmer Putnam, Lincoln Ellsworth, Paul Block, James I. Bush, Otto H. Kahn, Clarence Mackay, Charles V. Bob, Bernard F. Gimbel, Admiral De Steiguer and Grover Whalen. Mrs. Byrd also will be in the party.

When Commander Byrd steps off the ship in the lower bay it will probably be the last time he sees the City of New York until he arrives at his base on the edge of the Ross sea late this year. He is to sail on one of his other ships, the Chelsea or the Larsen, and may not overtake the ice breaker until the base is reached.

NOTED TEXAS INVENTOR DIES

George H. Judia Once Captured by Bass

FORT WORTH, Aug. 24 (INS) Funeral services will be held Saturday at Cisco for George H. Judia, 57, prominent Texas inventor, who died here last night, it was announced here today.

At the time of his death, Judia was working on an attachment for airplanes, which he claimed would revolutionize the aviation industry. During his life time he had more than 100 articles patented. Among those best known locally were patents on a box car door, building ventilator and a humidifier for bettering automobile carburetion.

When a lad of 13, Judia was kidnaped by Sam Bass, noted outlaw of the Texas frontier.

WINS TRAP SHOOT

VANDALIA, Ohio, Aug. 24. (AP) F. B. Hoggatt, teacher in public schools at Goshen, Ohio, won the preliminary handicap feature event of the grand American trap shooting tournament.

GANG LEADER SLAIN

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 24. (UP)—William F. ("Big Bill") Davis, gang leader, was shot and killed today by a police squad which trapped him as he allegedly was extorting tribute from a soft drink parlor.

Firemen Save Lives Of Texas Honeymoon Pair

Screaming Hotel Guests, in Night Clothing, Are Carried to Safety at Denver

DENVER, Colo., Aug. 24. (UP) Firemen carried between 75 and 100 guests down ladders when fire threatened to destroy the Auditorium hotel here today.

Extension ladders were erected on three sides of the building as smoke poured out from the windows and guests leaned out screaming for help.

The blaze started in a huge pile of baled paper in a wooden compartment under the kitchen.

Miss Helen Fleming of Oklahoma City, clad in blue pajamas, was the first to reach the street by the ladder route. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S J. Fleming, then were rescued.

Morrill Nelson and his bride, of Claude, Texas, here on a honeymoon, were carried to safety. They were in their night clothing.

Others trapped by the flames and rescued by firemen were: C. E. McCoy and wife of Oklahoma City; Mrs. R. H. Sparling of Lindsey, Okla.; Lester Glenn and wife of Salida, Colo.; Elizabeth Walker, Austin, Texas; R. G. Mitchell and wife of Fountain, Colo.; M. E. Nelson and Mrs. J. G. Cantrell of Chicago; Edwin Massa and wife of St. Louis.

Senate Race and County Contests Hold Primary Spotlight in Wichita

Vote Expected to Be Lighter Than in First Election With State Poll Placed at 500,000

By FRANK GRAHAM

Just another day to be voted away, and candidates may cease their worry and wonder. Sunday congratulations will be in order following the second and last primary of Texas Democrats Saturday, when about 500,000 voters are expected to signify their preference in state, district, county and precinct offices.

The race for senator between Tom Connally of Marlin and Earle B. Mayfield of Austin is the only state race in which any degree of intensified interest has been aroused. The races for superintendent of public instruction and general land commissioner have excited but scattered comment.

Love Out of Race

It is believed that a much larger vote might have been expected over the state had not Tom Love, fiery exponent of constitutional Democracy and Herbert Hoover Republicanism, withdrawn his name from the race for lieutenant governor.

In Wichita county candidates have been unable to arouse the lagging interest of voters in contests to be decided Saturday. Despite charges of Oklahoma hunting expeditions and of dangerous political combinations and alliances which have been flung back and forth in a number of the contests, the public has seemed chiefly interested in today because it is Saturday.

Constitutionals "Out"

Political experts of the county have forecast a vote of between 6,000 and 7,500 with expressed favor toward the smaller number.

Constitutional Democrats, with a number of contestants in the first primary, were ruled out by the voters with no rumor of opposition toward the Democrat presidential candidate surviving for today's battle of ballots.

E. C. DeMontel, county chairman, predicted a quick and hurried count of all boxes. Orders to the various precinct chairmen have instructed them to be prepared to turn in the unofficial totals of their boxes at as early an hour as possible.

LIGHT STATE VOTE IS SEEN

Senatorial Race Takes General Interest

By L. B. DILBECK
Associated Press Staff

AUSTIN, Texas, Aug. 24. (AP)—Votes of the Texas Democratic electorate—split three, four and five ways in the first primary election—will be split only in twain tomorrow.

The fate of six candidates and numerous local bidders for public favor, is enfolded in the mystery of how the large blocks of votes cast for eliminated first primary candidates will be divided among the two surviving contestants for each office involved in the run-off primary.

U. S. Senator Earle B. Mayfield, who got 199,922 for re-election in the July primary, closed his campaign tonight at Fort Worth. His opponent, Cong. Tom Connally, who got 177,402 in the preliminary heat, wound up at corsicana.

A total of 294,295 votes were cast in the first primary for their four eliminated opponents.

Despite interest in the senatorial race, however, the vote in the run-off is not expected to go much higher than half a million, as compared to 671,820 for senator in the first primary.

State School Spuperintendent S. M. N. Marrs is opposed for re-election by W. F. Garner of Nacogdoches. The only other state race to be decided is between State Land Commissioner J. T. Robison and Otis Terrell of Austin.

Woman Drops Dead At Revival Meeting

HOUSTON, Texas, Aug. 24. (UP)—While telling of her religious experiences at a camp meeting in a Pentecostal tabernacle here yesterday, Mrs. J. W. Siefert, 58, fell dead.

A weak heart, overtaxed by the strain of the excitement under which she was said to be laboring while telling of her religious happenings, probably caused her death, Justice Campbell Overstreet, who conducted the inquest, said. Her death was due to natural causes, he ruled.

Mrs. Siefert had gone to the tabernacle with a daughter and during the meeting she was called upon to tell of her religious activities.

Jeff Davis' Birthplace Ravaged by Fire

FAIRVIEW, Ky., Aug. 24. (AP)—Fire early today razed the business district of this little town, in Christian county, birthplace of Jefferson Davis. Loss was estimated at $15,000.

Ice Cream Plant Sells For Reported Figure of $100,000

Sale of the Colvert Ice Cream company to Jasper Ferguson of Wichita Falls was announced by officials of the concern Friday. The consideration involved, although not revealed, is thought to have been more than $100,000.

Paul P. Colvert, W. L. Colvert and George W. Colvert, sellers of the company, said that physical assets and the good will of the company had been transferred to Mr. Ferguson and that the new owner would continue operation of the plant as the Colvert Ice Cream company.

The entire personnel of the Colvert plant will be retained under the new management and the former owners will cooperate in operation of the plant for the present, it was announced.

Active management of the plant will be under direction of Fred L. Thompson, who was connected with dairying and creamery work for 22 years in St. Louis and was manager of a division of creameries for the Southern Ice Utilities company in Dallas for the past 18 months.

Mr. Thompson, as a boy, began making his livelihood on a dairy farm in Illinois and knows the dairy business from the production of milk to its marketing in various forms, Mr. Colvert said.

The policies of the former owners will be followed under the new management, it was announced.

EXPERTS BRAND HASSELL RADIO PLEA AS FRAUD

Messages Telling of Safe Landing On Island Doubted

PLANE STILL SILENT

Fast Rescue Boats In Search On Coast Of Greenland

NEW YORK, Aug. 24. (UP)—Another day has failed to bring any definite word from Bert Hassell and Parker Cramer who reached the coast of Greenland on a flight from Rockford, Ill., to Stockholm, Sweden.

The last word was a radio message purporting to come from the fliers and received at 3 p. m. today by Eric Talmer Jr., of Brooklyn, an amateur operator.

The message said:

"Our power is failing. No more communication possible."

Wrong Wave Length

Talmer had been in communication with a radio set which was sending messages signed "the Rockford Fliers" earlier in the day. The messages were not sent on the wave length used by the aviators and were too comprehensive for Cramer's knowledge of radio, according to experts at Madison, Wis.

Donald Mix who installed the radio set in the Greater Rockford, said he could not give any credence to today's reports.

The messages received today were all similar in text, stating that the plane had been forced down on a small island about 100 miles north of Newfoundland; that the fliers were safe but nearly out of food; that a failing oil feed line forced them down; and that they were using a generator for a transmitter.

Started Saturday

Hassell and Cramer left Cochrane, Ont., last Saturday for Mount Evans, Greenland. Their radio signals ceased after they had reported the plane 75 miles out over Davis strait. Thursday word came that the fliers had reached the coast of Greenland and had been positively identified by native several hundred miles off their course.

Messages Called Frauds

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24. (UP)—Members of the federal radio commission regard the messages purporting to have been sent by the Rockford, Ill., fliers, lost en route to Greenland, as fraudulent.

It was pointed out that dispatches from Rockford said that neither Hassell, the pilot, or Cramer, the navigator, were expert radio operators and that Cramer, who was to do the sending, knew only enough of the code to send signals.

Tilden Declared Ineligible to Play Amateur Tennis

NEW YORK, Aug. 24. (UP)—William T. Tilden II, for 10 years the leading American tennis player, tonight was found guilty of violating the amateur rule of the United States Lawn Tennis association and declared ineligible for further amateur competition.

The decision was announced by the executive committee of the association after nearly five hours of deliberation.

GAS FATAL TO 7 STOWAWAYS

16 Men Victims of Ship Fumigation

BALTIMORE, Md., Aug. 24. (UP) Sixteen stowaways paid dearly today for their free voyage from Rio de Janeiro. When the freighter Steel Inventor, in which they had stowed away, was fumigated for yellow fever at quarantine today, seven were killed, three were dying and six were overcome by fumes. Others may be still hidden under the cargo in the hold.

As the dead and dying were pulled out their condition indicated a desperate battle had taken place as the men fought each other to get out of the hold. Several had broken arms and ribs and others had cuts and bruises on their bodies, such as could only have been received in fights.

All of the victims were either Brazilian or Portuguese. Their bodies were severely emaciated, indicating they had little food during their long voyage which ended in disaster for them just as they were about to reach their goal.

Man Fatally Stabbed At Dallas Girl's Home

DALLAS, Aug. 24. (AP)—Eddie Conatser, 26, was fatally stabbed this evening at the home of Miss Dorothy Jones here.

Officers were searching for a man who walked calmly out of the house after plunging a knife into Conatser's throat.

Conatser, Miss Jones and several other persons, were eating dinner when two men entered the home, witnesses said. "One of the men walked up to the dining table," Miss Jones said, "and looking at Eddie said, 'You think you're pretty smart, don't you?' then jerked out a knife and started toward Conatser."

A large artery in Conatser's throat was severed. He died immediately.

Surgeons Helpless to Save Woman As Husband Sternly Bars Operation

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 24. (INS)—Barred by a ruling of the city attorney's office, surgeons stood by an operating table in San Francisco county hospital awaiting the death of Mrs. Zenia Gonzales before removing by caesarean operation the child which was to have been born next month.

Chief Surgeon Edmund Butler appealed to City Attorney John J. O'Toole for authority to perform the operation when the woman's husband, Antonio, refused to permit an operation prior to his wife's death.

Mrs. Gonzales, suffering from an incurable malady, has been in the hospital for nearly a month. Her death was expected hourly following a collapse early today.

Surgeons ordered Mrs. Gonzales taken to the operating room at once when her condition showed that death was near and were about to perform a caesarian operation when her husband reached the hospital.

When Gonzales refused his consent surgeons appealed to O'Toole. He informed them that a decision in such a case rested entirely with the husband.

Preparations were then made to perform the operation as soon as Mrs. Gonzales expired.

Acosta and Levine Land at Amsterdam

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 24. (US)—The Queen of the Air, piloted by Bert Acosta, and carrying Charles A. Levine as a passenger, landed here shortly before 10 o'clock tonight on a flight from Dessau, Germany. The plane, a Junkers, of the same type as the transatlantic Bremen, will fly to London tomorrow and there await favorable weather for a flight across the Atlantic.

BODY OF GIRL FOUND IN PIPE

Mystery Surrounds Death Of Pretty Miss

ELKHORN, Wis., Aug. 24. (US)—The body of a pretty girl, clad only in her negligee and wrapped in a bedsheet was discovered late this afternoon in an iron culvert two miles north of here.

All marks of identification had been removed from the body. The girl had evidently been killed by a blow on the chest. This had crushed one of her ribs and had punctured one of her lungs, physicians declared.

The body was discovered by a deputy sheriff making a short cut near the culvert. Because no girls had been reported missing in this vicinity for several weeks it is believed the girl was a resident either of Milwaukee or Chicago. The body had been stuffed into a large pipe. As there was no signs of a struggle police believe the girl, about 18 years old, was slain in her sleep. She had been dead about three weeks.

NIGHT JAILER ATTACKED AS BOLT IS MADE

Prisoner Leaps Upon Jailer As He Gives Men Supper

TWO RE-CAPTURED

Deputy Constable Finds Pair Shortly After Bold Delivery

Six prisoners, including Tom Shook, under indictment for murder in connection with the fatal stabbing of W. O. Daugherty at Electra two weeks ago, escaped from the Wichita county jail shortly after 6 o'clock Friday night.

The delivery was effected after Frank Watkins, night jailer, had been attacked and beaten. He was not seriously injured.

Two of the prisoners were recognized a few minutes later by C. T. "Blackie" Wilson, a deputy constable, at Fourth street and Indiana avenue as he drove along in his automobile.

Pair Retaken

Pulling his gun as he jumped from his car, he covered the men before they realized what had happened, had a man in the crowd that gathered to drive his car to the jail for him, and returned to the jail with his prisoners.

The prisoners recaptured were J. H. Whitner and Bill Hill.

Those at liberty are:

H. T. Rich, charged with robbery and assault with intent to murder in connection with shots alleged to have been fired at City Officer Ralph Rohatsch.

Tom Shook, under five indictments.

Dewey Ross, a federal prisoner.

Jack Flippin, under indictment on forgery charges.

Fourth of Year

This brings the number of deliveries at the county jail this year to four and the total number of prisoners to escape to around a score. Most of these have been recaptured.

Jailer Watkins said that he had come on duty only a short time before the jail break happened.

The prisoners who escaped were in the "run around" on the top floor of the jail which has been the starting point of previous jail breaks and which has been ordered changed by two grand juries.

As Mr. Watkins opened the heavy iron door to the run around, carrying the tray of dishes with the supper for the prisoners, a prisoner jumped out of the dark from the left side of the door and attacked him. At the same time, another prisoner leaped on him from a large post and the others closed in from all sides.

Takes Jailer's Gun

Bearing him to the floor, they did not injure him, but took his gun, keys and watch and fled after locking the door behind them.

Taking their time, they went down stairs, ripped out the money inside of the telephone box, broke in the safe where the money and personal belongings of the other prisoners were kept and took all the money in sight, broke open the cabinet containing cigarettes and other supplies and left.

They unlocked and locked the main door of the jail and fled.

Cheap Watch Kept

In going through the safe down stairs, they tore open the individual envelopes containing personal belongings of their fellow prisoners. Despite the fact there were several good watches in these envelopes, they kept the dollar Ingersoll that belonged to the jailer.

The escape was discovered by John Riggs, negro cook, who was

NEW PRECINCT BOXES LIKELY

Commission to Consider Jail Alterations

A redistricting of voting precincts in Wichita county, which will add either five or six boxes to the 39 at present in use, will be passed by the comissioner's court at the regular session Monday, it was learned Saturday. The commissioners also are expected to ask for bids on remodeling of the interior of the county jail.

The designation of additional precincts in the county was advocated by the commissioners two weeks ago, and J. M. Isbell, county engineer was ordered to prepare a survey which would tend to relieve congestion in a number of large boxes in Wichita Falls. Mr. Isbell's survey created five aditional boxes and moved the box formerly at Allendale school to the Crockett school.

Sixth Box Wanted

M. A. Bundy, commissioner from precinct one, affected by the proposed change, was of the opinion Friday that a sixth additional box would have to be designated at Allendale school to take care of those persons living on the Seymour road who would be some distance from the Crockett school box.

Bids on alteration work inside the county jail will be asked by the commissioners following a recommendation from the July grand jury. The grand jury reported to Judge E. G. Thornton that a careful investigation into the construction of the interior of the jail had revealed that the arrangement of pillars and aisles within the jail was responsible for a number of jail breaks recently.

Bids Delayed

The court has been delayed in advertising for bids by an effort to secure information of proper construction from concerns which have made a special business of building jails from county authorities throughout the state and adjoining states. Most of the desired information has been received and commissioners expresed the hope Friday that the court would be in a position to ask for bids at the Monday meeting.

Staleys Fly Here In New Monster Airplane

The wartime fame of the Hispano Suiza motor is reflected in the most powerful, three place airplane to come to Wichita Falls for its permanent home, it was announced Friday following the arrival from the factory at Colorado Springs of the Wichita Falls Air Transport company's new Eaglerock.

Fulcher Armstrong of the company flew in it as far as Shumaker, N. M., and from there to Wichita Falls. Mr. and Mrs. J. I. Staley were passengers, making the trip of 540 miles in five hours. This is not fast time for the ship, but on account of its newness it was not pushed to maximum performance. Mr. Armstrong has the distribution over a wide territory for the Eaglerock.

The gigantic Hispano Suiza motor, nicknamed by the wartime flyers the "Hisso," is a 150-horsepower job, capable of the most difficult work airplanes are called upon to perform. The ship has a normal cruising speed of 120 miles an hour.

30 Votes Cast On Bonds by Absentees

Thirty absentee votes were cast in the Wichita Falls $250,000 municipal bond election, it was announced Friday night by W. E. McBroom, city clerk, at the close of the time for receiving absentee votes. The election will be held Tuesday.

It was pointed out at the city hall that if the bond issue passes, the city will save considerable money as it is now paying 6 per cent on the obligations which the bond issue would redeem with 4½ per cent bonds.

Damage Petition Says Steak Caused Illness

Alleging that an illness of several weeks was caused by food eaten at the Cameron cafeteria in July, Mrs. Lillie Mae Edwards Friday filed a suit against W. I. Cameron, asking $5,158.70 damages.

Mrs. Edwards in her petition attributes an illness from which she claims she has not entirely recovered to a steak eaten at the cafeteria.

Too Weak to Enjoy Visits of Her Friends

Had Dreadful Pains, Swelling and Headache. — Neighbor Suggested Cardui, and It Helped Her.

Livingston, Ky.—"I had been very much run-down," says Mrs. Hannah Hodges of this place. "I could not do my work, and was so weak I could not do any visiting with my friends. In fact, I was in such a condition that, when they called on me, it was too great an effort to talk to them.

"I had dreadful pains up and down my legs. At times, this would become so acute it was as bad as toothache. My legs swelled, and sometimes I could hardly put my feet to the floor.

"Often I had headache, and had to lie on the bed, days at a time. I had a dreadful bearing-down feeling across my abdomen that I cannot describe, and if I stood on my feet for any length of time, this became very much worse.

"Cardui had been recommended to me by several of my friends, but somehow I had never gotten right down to the point of taking it. However, my health had gotten so bad, something had to be done, so one day, when one of my neighbors said, 'I wish you would try Cardui,' I said, 'Well, I will,' and I did, and it has made the difference between a sick woman and a well woman in me. I would say to every woman who is suffering from womanly troubles, 'Try Cardui.'"

City Made Defendant in Third Suit As Improper Drainage Is Claimed

The city of Wichita Falls was defendant in a third damage suit Thursday following of a petition in district court by Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Sullivan, who seek damages of $2,500.

The petitioners base their claim for damage upon an allegation that in improving roads adjoining their residence on Carolina, Lincoln and Webster streets the city failed to provide adequate drainage facilities. As a result, the petition sets out, the Sullivan premises are flooded each time a heavy rain falls and in lieu of proper drainage stagnant pools of water stand about the property for several days after rains.

Previously the city had been made defendant in two suits asking damages of more than $300,000. One suit is an outgrowth of alleged water-logging of land along the city water ditch and the other results from a claim that the waters of the Wichita river have been polluted by refuse from the city.

High Voltage Wire, Dislodged in Arizona Storm, Kills Five Persons

PHOENIX, Ariz., Aug. 24. (INS)—Five seared bodies, the victims of a high voltage electric wire grounded in a high windstorm here Tuesday night, lay in a local morgue here pending a coroner's inquest into the tragedy.

The deaths occurred Tuesday night when Richard Miller, walking across the lawn at his home, stumbled into the high tension line. His screams for help brought his wife and son, Eugene, 8, to his aid.

They, too, were enmeshed in the lethal wire, carrying what investigators said was 2,000 volts of electricity. Wesley Miller, 16, an older son, and Carl Meek, a neighbor, met death at the fatal cable in attempting to rescue the bodies of the first three victims.

JUDGE FLAYS DRY OFFICERS

Cops Raid Building Without Warrants

CHICAGO, Aug. 24. (AP)—Evidence and other records seized by federal prohibition agents in a raid in a loop building Tuesday were impounded today by Federal Judge Wilkerson, who indicated he would order the evidence suppressed if the agents tried to use it in further investigations.

The judge's action was at a hearing where attorneys were arguing over procedure of prohibition agents accused of raiding the offices without either a search warrant or a warrant for arrest.

Judge Wilkerson assailed the federal men and asked what justification they had in making the raids and the arrests if they had not seen any offense committed. Receiving no answer, the judge said:

"It certainly would be a great help to the court if agents would go through the simple ceremony of procuring warrants when they desire to make arrests."

The judge set Sept. 24 for a hearing on a defense counsel motion to return the seized documents.

The raid Tuesday was made on offices of P. & E. Morton. Eight men were arrested and one, Merle Adams, was shot and seriously wounded by one of the agents when he said Adams tried to escape.

Thirteen other defendants, accused of affiliation with the alleged syndicate operating out of the offices raided, were arraigned today and held to the grand jury under bonds ranging from $1,000 to $10,000.

Adams is under guard in a hospital.

Electra Golfers Hold New Member Day Program

Special to The Record News.

ELECTRA, Texas, Aug. 24.—Wednesday was New Member day for the Ladies Golf club of Electra, when each old member was expected to bring a new member. An early breakfast was served in the club rooms, and the games began at 6 o'clock.

With each old member playing with a new member, Scotch foursomes were played, with Mrs. G. F. LeBus and Mrs. J. E. LeBus winning the prizes. The next meeting of the newly organized club will be next Wednesday at 6 a. m.

Those attending the meet of Wednesday were: Mesdames Jack Prince, C. R. Miller, A. T. McDannald, H. B. Krohn, L. O. Holloway, Frank Fisher, J. G. B. Totten, Louise Williams, J. E. LeBus, F. L. LeBus, T. H. Parmley, G. R. Davidson, Grace Jennings, Mary Jowell, C. F. Kolp, G. F. LeBus, Francis Awtrey, R. Y. Smith, J. H. Marriott Jr., H. D. Miller; Misses Mary McGann, Babe Helen Jennings, Alice Chatman and Elizabeth McGann.

City Heads Review Record Canine 'Haul'

Nineteen dogs howled mournfully as they were taken to the city dog pound Friday morning.

The same 19 dogs howled hopefully Friday afternoon as they were visited by George D. Fairtrace, the city manager, and W. E. McBroom, the city clerk, who had gone to the city disposal plant and dumping grounds on a trip of inspection.

The dogs, however, if they held any hopes because of the coming of the city dignitaries, soon lost them as the officials drove away.

The city poundmaster said that many good dogs are received at the pound, and that frequently they are redeemed. Friday's haul of dogs was the largest in many months.

Electra W. M. U. Directors Meet

Special to The Record News.

ELECTRA, Texas, Aug. 24.—The board of directors for the W. M. U. of the Electra Baptist church met in business session Thursday afternoon, with Mrs. J. M. Tanner, president of the Wichita Falls district W. M. U., presiding.

Work for the coming associational year which has just begun, was planned and discussed at length. Reports and suggestions were submitted by the following chairmen:

Mission, Mrs. A. M. Rose; Ruby anniversary, Mrs. J. M. Tanner; benevolence, Mrs. E. E. Holcomb; mission study, Mrs. C. F. Birkhead; young people's leader, Mrs. John Brownlee; treasurer, Mrs. W. R. Skinner; personal service, educational and others discussed by Mrs. J. M. Tanner, in the absence of proper chairmen.

Monday, Sept. 3, is the regular all-day meeting of the W. M. U., at which time the new work for the coming associational year will be finally completed.

CALLES WON'T SEEK OFFICE

Administration Leader Makes Announcement

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 24. (UP)—President Calles is determined not to continue in office after December, despite the nation-wide sentiment in favor of such action, said Puig Casaurano in a farewell speech to the department of education executives tonight. Casaurano's words were the first official public announcement made by any member of the administration of the president's attitude.

Casaurano will take over the ministry of industry, commerce and labor.

President Calles already had intimated that he would not be willing to retain the office to which the late Alvaro Obregon was elected. It was generally believed, however, that the strong demand for his retention as president would be effective.

Petitions to change the constitution or to pass legislation excepting Calles from the clause making consecutive terms illegal had been circulated throughout the provinces and received favorably.

If Casaurano's words prove correct, the nation faces a vital problem in the selection of a successor to Calles. The bitter enmity between rival party leaders and the charges that the Labor party was indirectly responsible for Obregon's death left the country so torn that it was believed only Calles could continue the constructive program started.

Although several political leaders have been mentioned to succeed Calles, none has as yet become a serious aspirant.

Absentee Vote Comes From Buffalo by Air

All but seven of 52 ballots sent residents of Wichita county, vacationing out of the state had been received by Miss Elizabeth Hall, county clerk, Friday afternoon. The total number of absentee ballots sent to the various precincts of the county by Miss Hall Friday was 255, the largest absentee vote ever polled in a run-off primary in Wichita county.

Houston Rogers, vacationing in New York state, returned his ballot from Buffalo by air mail. The ballot was received Friday morning. Mr. Rogers is believed to be the Wichita county resident most distant from home and voting. The ballot was sent to him by air mail on Aug. 18.

SUMMER MEAT BIG PROBLEM

Quick Substitute Recipes Are Given

DENTON, Texas, Aug. 24.—One of the most difficult problems of the housewife in the summer is the question of meat. Meat cannot be so well taken care of in the summer as during the winter as it makes one too warm to eat very much of it. Another thing to be considered is the difficulty in the preparation of it as it takes so much time and so much heat in doing so. To obviate the necessity of spending the afternoons in the kitchen the following recipes are used:

Ham Mousse—Six Servings

One level tablespoon of gelatin.

Half cup cold water.

Three cups hard boiled eggs.

Half cup cream or evaporated milk.

One teaspoon mixed mustard.

Few grains cayenne.

Three cups cold boiled ham.

Soak gelatin in cold water and dissolve in the hot water. Cool and add all but one-fourth of it to the ham, add mustard, cayenne and cream beaten stiff. Run the eggs yolks and whites through a sieve separately and make layers of yellow and white in the moulds. Pour in the remainder of the gelatin and then add the ham mixture. Chill, remove from the mould to serving dish and garnish with parsley.

Pressed Veal—10 Servings

Two cups cooked veal, ground.

One and one-half cups hard cooked eggs.

Three-fourth cup bread crumbs.

One and one-half cups hot veal stock.

One dozen stuffed olives.

Three pimentos cut fine.

Salt and pepper.

Combine veal, eggs, crumbs and seasonings. Pour into the hot stock and stir thoroughly. Cool and add olives and pimentos. Pour into attractive individual moulds, chill and serve on a bed of crisp lettuce leaves. Serve either plain or with mayonnaise.

Jellied Chicken and Vegetable 12 Servings

Two tablespoons gelatin.

Two cups vegetables cooked.

Half teaspoon salt.

Half cup cold water or stock.

Two cups chicken soup (canned).

One pimento or green pepper.

Soak gelatin in cold water five minutes and dissolve in hot stock. Add salt and cool. Rinse a square mould in cold water, pour in a thin layer of the jelly, let stiffen slightly and decorate with peppers and other vegetables. Arrange so on in layers and chill. Serve on crisp lettuce and garnish with parsley.

Meat Loaf in Aspic—12 Servings

One cup cold water.

One onion peeled and sliced.

One-third cup canned pimentos.

Two tablespoons gelatin.

Two cups cooked veal, ham, beef or chicken.

One stalk celery.

One-half tablespoon finely chopped parsley.

Soak gelatin in cold water five minutes. Add onion and celery to the stock, bring to the boiling point and let boil three minutes, strain and pour over the soaked gelatin. When the mixture begins to thicken add the meat, pimentos and chopped parsley. Turn into wet moulds and chill. Remove from the mould and cut in slices for serving. Garnish with lettuce.

Silver's Plea for Life Answered Next Week

AUSTIN, Aug. 24. (AP)—A report from the board of pardons to Governor Moody on the application of J. R. Silver of Fort Worth for commutation of his death sentence to life imprisonment is expected next week.

A petition urging commutation, signed by some 6,000 Tarrant county citizens, has been submitted to the pardon board by William Parker, attorney for Silver, who was convicted of participation in the Fort Worth theater robbery in which a cashier was killed. W. A. Stone, who claims to have fired the fatal shot, while Silver sat in an automobile, is serving a 99-year sentence.

Silver is slated to be electrocuted Sept. 3.

Wilkins Lays Plan For Antarctic Trip

OMAHA, Neb., Aug. 24. (AP)—Declaring his expedition will not compete with Commander Byrd's, Captain George Wilkins, who flew across the arctic from Point Barrow to Spitzbergen, announced today his plans for exploration of the antarctic.

Leaving New York September 22, Captain Wilkins and his three companions will not return until next March.

Sandino Is No 'Rebel' Texas Prof Declares

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Aug. 24. (AP)—American capital has ushered in a new era for Central America, encouraging commerce and industry, Wallace Thompson, author and publisher, today told the institute of politics.

Designation of Augustino Sandino as a bandit, was objected to by Prof. Charles Hackett, the University of Texas, who presided at a conference on Sandino's status in Nicaragua. He held "Sandino is entirely within his rights as a Nicaraguan officer to refuse the American settlement accepted by leaders of the two political parties."

Big Corporations Give More Attention Now to Training of Their Beginners

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

NEW YORK, Aug. 24. (US)—Large, progressively managed corporations are coming to realize that the search for experienced workers has been overdone.

Banks and industrial companies are recognizing a responsibility to train their own leaders. Many regularly take on a quota of inexperienced high school and college graduates each year for a period of development. Accordingly, employers are increasingly learning to stand on their own resources, instead of grafting on the experience which competitors have allowed employes to acquire.

Henry S. Dennison, president of the Dennison Manufacturing company and an authority on problems of management, in referring specifically to men for higher posts, said, "While it is very important to get in an executive a combination of experience with the work he is responsible for plus the necessary personal qualifications, it is not always possible. Where a choice has to be made between them, we have found that usually the personal factors outweigh the factor of practical experience. This is particularly true in the cases of the more advanced executive positions.

Where Experience Counts

"As the position approaches more and more nearly the actual carrying out of the work, experience counts more and more heavily. Nevertheless, in the most routine executive job, so long as it includes the management of men and women, it is usually true that we might select a man of energy, foresight and good influence, but without any practical experience, rather than a man full of experience, but with none of the personal qualities necessary to executive ability. In the most advanced executive positions, we have again and again made very successful shifts of men of good personal qualities into quite new fields of work."

Examples are numerous of business leaders who moved from one line of work to an entirely alien branch of industry and who succeeded. Benjamin Winchell, a railroad man, rehabilitated the Remington Typewriter company. O. P. and M. J. Van Sweringen, suburban real estate developers, have brought a new viewpoint into railroad management, and have quickened the earning power of the railroad properties. T. F. Merseles, former head of Montgomery, Ward & company, is now president of the Johns Manville company, makers of roofing. Walker D. Hines, a lawyer and a stranger to the cotton goods trade, is doing a useful job in building up the standards of the cotton textile industry through the cotton textile institute.

Initiative Important

In a symposium among 17 company heads as to what makes a good department head, system finds that the most important quality is initiative; the next most important is "adaptability," and the third most significant is "constructive imagination." "Loyalty" and "thoroughness" were also stressed.

Volstead Takes Fling at Smith

ST. PAUL, Minn., Aug. 24. (AP)—Governor Smith's advocacy of modification of the dry laws in his acceptance speech was criticized tonight by Andrew Volstead, author of the prohibition enforcement law.

Mr. Volstead said the Democratic presidential candidate avoided his party's issues in dealing with the liquor situation and said the governor "purposely seeks to become the candidate of the liquor interests."

Roosevelt to Stump Nation in October

Officers Seize Distillery Plant

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 24. (UP) The Waterloo Distillery corporation at Waterloo, N. Y., whose plant and equipment is valued at more than half a million dollars, was seized by the prohibition department today, according to an announcement by Prohibition Administrator Andrew McCampbell.

Mr. McCampbell said he will request the United States attorney to have the properly libeled and destroyed.

The move followed convictions in conspiracy to violate the prohibition law. The seized property includes an industrial alcohol plant, denaturing plant, bonded warehouse, 35 acres of land, 318,000 gallons pure grain alcohol and the machinery and equipment used in operating the plant.

The raid was staged June 23, 1927, by government agents for Washington.

MY! Wasn't it spring-like on the streets yesterday? Yes, I know the next season is fall, but did you get a squint at the styles on display on all hands? Spring suits and spring coats were the order of the day for ladies, and men wore their coats.

But the cool breezes have been inspirational and some signs of activity were seen. Quite a difference from the day before when the oppressive air gave rise to nothing more gratifying than expressions of discomfort.

HAVEN'T yet discovered why barbers have to us such strong perfumes, or whatever men choose to call the strong odors that stay with 'em long after they leave the barber shop. Somebody in this office has been to a barber shop. No he isn't sitting near. I should think that a trip to a barber shop should not be such an event in the life of a man that he should want to have a constant lingering reminder of it.

BETTY SIMPSON, whom I knew as a co-ed in the University of Oklahoma, has just been "sent up" for a month for taking her fifth free ride across the Atlantic when the Asquitania docked at Southampton recently. Poor girl, but just think of the fun she is having anticipating her sixth stolen voyage. And nobody gets peeved at Betty, either, for she tells the captain or whoever catches her, that she must travel and that she always picks the best boats. Not so bad, and it is hoped that a girl with that much "it" and tact will turn her energies to better usage. With about five more trips as a stowaway, with no passport, an money, a small bundle of clothes and large dose of wanderlust, Betty should be able to be fairly good at anything she chooses as a profession. Wanderlust is a masculine quality, at least we have supposed that women couldn't possess it to any great degree, but look at Betty! Goes to prove that even human nature might be undergoing a change. But I dont' believe it. Betty hasn't settled down yet, that's all. Anyway, she has had her name and picture in the best papers in the country and has been put out of fairly good ships.

THIS department has been trying to save the best for the last. I am leaving tomorrow for places where there are leaves to turn yellow and brown and red, and where persimmons are not yet ripe, but where there are many of 'em. And there are hills and in the distance, mountains. It is not possible there to see great distances as it is here in Texas, but there is more to see. But I shall be glad to return to Texas, for trees and leaves and hills and mountains and even green persimmons aren't everything.

People to work with and somebody to talk to are not so bad. See you in two weeks.

'Backless' Bathing Suits Thrill Beach Swarmers

CHICAGO, Aug. 24.—The thrill-seekers of 1929 will not have to go "tail-spinning" in airplanes, or risk their lives in any fashion, to obtain that which they seek. All they will have to do is hie themselves to the nearest bathing beach.

This was evident today when 25 beauties exhibited the new "backless" bathing suit at the convention of 200 bathing suit dealers who are meeting here.

GREAT RESULTS FROM COMPOUND

Read How This Medicine Helped This Woman

Brainerd, Minn.—"I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in a newspaper and I have got great results from its tonic action at the Change of Life. Before I took it I was nervous and at times I was too weak to do my housework. I was this way about a year. But now I do all my housework and do chores outside also. I must say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done wonders for me and no woman should be without it. I sure can speak a good word for it."—MRS. JIM SMITH, R. R. 7, Brainerd, Minnesota.

"Bryant Tells of Standardization"

My opponent, J. A. Hood, in a political advertisement yesterday, said Wichita county had only two standard rural schools so recognized by the state. This statement is very misleading. He evidently made this statement because only two of our schools have used a score card prepared by an assistant in the state department of education. This score card was prepared two years ago and I have felt that it is not the proper basis for judging standardization of schools. Clara, a rural high school with eighteen units affiliation, has not used this score card, but no one can say that it is not a standard school. Valley View and other excellent rural high schools in this county have never used this card. It is unfair and misleading to state that Wichita county has only two standard rural schools. The best standard for judging schools is through the classification and affiliation. We have been told by the officials of the state department of education that the rural schools of Wichita county are not excelled in Texas.

Husband Should Be Sportsman As Well as Honorable and Industrious

Besides the Basic Qualities of Honor and Industry, Every Husband Should Be Chosen for His Sense of Sportsmanship and for His Ability to Be a Perfect Companion to His Wife

A girl asks: "What characteristics should I look for in the man I pick out for a husband?"

That depends upon your taste, my dear; and happiness in marriage for a woman depends more upon her getting what she likes than it does upon all the cardinal virtues. Nobody can gauge your preferences for you. The attributes in a man that fire one woman's fancy leave another cold. Probably every girl in the world paints a different portrait of the Prince Charming that she is expecting to come along some day and carry her off to the abode of the blest.

Of course, there are certain qualities, such as honesty, morality and sobriety, steadfastness and industry, that are the very cornerstones of character, and that every man must possess in order to make him desirable as a husband. Pre-supposing that a man has these, the first thing that I should look for, if I were a girl and a man came a-courting me, would be:

His ability as an entertainer. Marriage lasts a long time, and it seems even longer with a bore. I should think of the thousands upon thousands of evenings when I would be shut up alone in a house with that man, with no one to talk to but him, and I would want to know whether I would be entertained and amused or whether I would yawn my head off.

I should think about a lot of homes that I know that are as deadly dull as the grave, where the husbands and wives have nothing to say to each other and have to get into a fight to have something to discuss. I should think of the homes I had been to where husbands and wives fell on any chance caller with cries of joy, because he had rescued them from each other. That wouldn't be my idea of a pleasant way in which to spend the next 30 or 40 years.

So I would discount the love-making, for any man is a spellbinder so long as he is telling you beautiful and wonderful you are, and how different from all other women. I would try to find out whether he had a conversational line on other topics that could hold my interest. Nor would I depend altogether on my own judgment in this. I would observe whether other people listened while he talked, or whether he was one of those at whose approach every crowd melted away.

Furthermore, I should say particular attention to the subject of his discourse, and if it touched brightly and entertainingly on books and world events and politics and gossip and Shakespeare generally, I should know that I would never have enough of it. But if, on the contrary, he began every sentence with "I"; if he spent hours telling what the president should do, and how foreign powers should run their governments, and if he was never weary of monologuing about his own achievements, I would have none of him, because I should have a premonition that it wouldn't take long for me to get fed up on his society.

Next, I would try to get a line on his ability to chum up with me. Passion perishes of satiety. Romance goes to tatters under the wear and tear of everyday life. No husband can remain the perfect lover; no wife keep up the vamping stuff perpetually. And so when the glory and the circling wings of courtship are over there is nothing left unless a man and woman are comrades.

Therefore, consider well whether a man has it in him to be Friend Husband. Not every man is capable of a friendship with a woman. There are men who, in their souls, always despise women, and have a contempt for them, who will always find companionship with men only, and whose only use for women is as playthings and slaves.

Never marry a man like that unless you will be content to be merely the mother of his children and his housekeeper. Therefore, observe closely whether a man merely makes love to you and pays you silly compliments, or whether he talks to you about real things that he is interested in—his hopes, his plans and ambitions—and above all, note whether he is interested in what you think; whether he regards you as another human being with human intelligence, or as a doll.

Then I should try to find out whether my man was built on the plan of a shoestring, or if he was all-wool and a yard wide. If a man is little and narrow and prejudiced, he is hopeless. He never grows. He never learns. He never xepands. He makes the kind of a husband who refuses to give his wife an allowance, who growls over the bills, who never sees why a woman wants any other amusehent than staying home and taking care of the children, and who makes a wife's life a curse to her.

But if a man is broad-minded, being married is an education to him, and he learns to look at things from his wife's point of view, and to sympathize with her, and every day and in every way he becomes a better husband and pleasanter to live with.

Finally, I should try to size up how good a sport a man was before I married him. I should know that marriage for him, as for every one else, was bound to have its disillusionments and its hard sledding. I should know that he was found to find out that I was not the pin-feathered angel that he was probably picturing me to be, but just a mere woman with a thousands faults and weaknesses, and tempers and unreasons, and that there would be plenty of times when I would be hard to get along with.

I should know that I would lose my good looks and be less physically attractive. I should know that it would take about three times as much to support a family as he had counted on, and that he would have to make many sacrifices for his family, and that often the price of a set of new golf clubs or a fine reel would have to go in little Mary's teeth or Johnny's adenoids.

I wouldn't want a husband who would repudiate his bargain when he found out what it cost. I wouldn't want a man who would quit cold when he discovered that matrimony comes high. I wouldn't want a man who would forsake me because my beauty had faded. I would want a dead game sport who would smile through it all, no matter how luck went against him.

And so I would observe how a man took it when he was beaten at golf; how he acted when an automobile broke down on the road, what he did and said when a train was late, or he was served a bad meal in a restaurant, and by these tokens I should know with what philosophy he would meet life.

TEA TO HONOR MISS JARDINE

Official's Daughter Is New Social Bud

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 24. (UP)—Uncle Sam will have another debutante in his official family when the last Coolidge social season gets under way next winter.

Last year Miss Alice Brooks Davis, daughter of the secretary of war and Mrs. Dwight F. Davis, was the first administration debutante since Wilson was president.

This year Miss Marion Jardine, daughter of the secretary of agriculture and Mrs. William Jardine, will be presented to Washington society at a tea dance to be given the day before Christmas.

Marion was a little girl when her father was appointed to the cabinet, four years ago. Secretary Jardine had been president of the Kansas State Agricultural college but his daughter attended one of Washington's select finishing schools for young ladies, which teach the social arts and graces as well as the more formal branches of learning.

The cabinet debutante is a pretty young girl, with dark eyes and hair. Like most of the very young group of the younger generation, she has let her hair grow and is just putting it up.

Her mother will make her coming out as simple and unpretentious as possible, in keeping with the family's official position, she says.

One other official debutante is on the 1928 list—a senator's daughter. She is Miss Julia Harris, daughter of Senator and Mrs. William J. Harris of Georgia. Miss Harris will come out at a large ball New Year's eve.

The debutante season will begin late in November, and will reach its climax around Christmas week and New Year's day. Thirty buds of more or less social importance had already been announced.

Mr. Thomas Heeney Toots His Own Horn

VANCOUVER, B. C., Aug. 24. (UP)—Tom Heeney, now aboard the S. S. Aorangi, bound for his home in New Zealand, is confident he will succeed Gene Tunney as heavyweight champion of the world.

Heeney, before his departure with his bride and three brothers, indicated he expected to win the heavyweight elimination tournament upon his return to the United States in December, thus attaining the goal he missed when defeated by Tunney in the champion's last fight.

The Aorangi is due at Auckland, N. Z., Sept. 10.

Crosbyton Woman Brings In Largest Cucumber

Special to The Record News.

CROSBYTON, Texas, Aug. 24.—Several people of Crosby county have taken a great interest in seeing who can produce the largest cucumber in their gardens. Several have been brought to the Crosbyton Chamber of Commerce office, the largest being brought in by Mrs. J. H. Wall, who lives a few miles east of Crosbyton. The cucumber measured 14¾ inches in length and weighed 3¾ pounds. It is on exhibit in the window of the First National bank.

Mrs. W. E. Lindley Honored at Lovely Shower Thursday

Complimenting Mrs. W. E. Lindley, who is leaving Saturday to make her home in San Angelo, and Mrs. C. W. Morris, who celebrated a birthday anniversary this week, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Alexander of 1801 Giddings street were hosts at a lovely "42" party and handkerchief shower Thursday evening. Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Ehlert assisted them in entertaining.

Games and a treasure hunt, which was the means by which the honor guests found the gifts, were features of the evening. Mrs. Ehlert presented each honoree with a lovely wall pocket filled with artificial sweet peas.

The house was attractively decorated with cut flowers and potted plants to follow a color idea of green and yellow, which was also carried out in the table covers and refreshments.

Guests were Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Morris, Mrs. Lindley, Mrs. O. H. Scott, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Sparkman, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Bryan, Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Allen, Mr. and Mrs. Bryan Bailey, Mrs. Clark, Mrs. Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Ehlert; Misses Frances Clark and the hosts.

Olympic Winner Returns To Win Pretty Co-ed

DETROIT, Aug. 24. (UP)—Kenneth Doherty, winner of third place in the Olympic decathlon, returned home today to claim his real prize—the hand of Miss Lucille Mason in marriage. Miss Mason, adjudged the most beautiful co-ed in Detroit City college, promised Doherty she would marry him if he scored for the United States.

Irene Castle Believes Flapper's Day Is Done

For County Superintendent

Below is one of the many expressions of confidence from teachers who have been working with Burl Bryant:

Mr. Burl Bryant,
County Superintendent of Wichita County,
Wichita Falls, Texas.

Dear Mr. Bryant:

We, the teachers of the Valley View School, District No. 6, Wichita County, wish to make the following statement, which will, in a way, show our appreciation for your efforts toward the upbuilding of the rural schools of Wichita County.

Our own school is an example of the progress in rural schools of this county, and this progress has been brought about during your term of office, through your hearty co-operation. We firmly believe that this steady progress would continue under your supervision.

Also, we consider ourselves fortunate in having as a leader of the rural schools, a man who has state-wide recognition as a leader in educational affairs. Your experience as a school man, and your ability along this line, especially fit you for this office you now hold.

Consider this as an expression of our sympathy with your efforts and work, and accept our wishes for your success in the coming campaign. Sincerely yours,

POPE SWELTERS IN VATICAN

Cooler Summer Home Is Being Sought

By PRINCE PIGNATELLI

ROME, Aug. 24. (US)—"God willing, this will be the last summer I pass enclosed in the vatican."

With these words, the pope today addressed an old friend as both suffered the effects of the terrific heat wave here. Large drops of perspiration fell from the pope's forehead as he continued:

"I do not descend to the vatican gardens because it is too hot. I am spending the days longing to cross the small part of Rome, climb the hill, and sit under the pine trees of Pineta Sacchetti, visible from my windows and waving under a fresh wind."

The pope's personal physician is pre-occupied with the matter of the health of his holiness. The physician asserts that it would be dangerous for the pontiff to spend another summer in the vatican.

The papal secretary of state is studying the problem with a view of reaching a solution that both will protect the health of his holiness and also the principle of self-imprisonment. Three steps appear possible. The first is to purchase the Pineta Sacchetti adjoining the vatican gardens and obtain from the Italian government an extension of extra territoriality. The other two are the use of one of the pope's other properties, the Lateran palace or the Castle Gandolfo.

Grandfield Seeks City Swimming Pool

Special to The Record News.

GRANDFIELD, Okla., Aug. 24.—Several people of the city have, in the last week, made the suggestion that the city officials or some organization of the city, obtain a lease on the Grandfield refinery tank and turn it into a swimming pool for the city.

It is claimed that the tank is ideal for that purpose. It has a depth of a few inches to 15 feet and the bottom is sandy. No mud or dirty surface water flows into it, and a two-inch stream of water from the city mains will keep it in a sanitary condition.

The pool now belongs to the Old Dominion Oil company and is standing idle. It is believed that a small tract of land on each side of the pool can be bought cheaply and the whole plot turned into a city park.

Connally Committee Record Is Explained

Uvalde, Texas, Aug. 19.—Congressman John N. Garner of Uvalde, who has been in congress for 26 years, was appealed to by many Uvalde friends to give them information concerning Senator Mayfield's charge that Connally has been in the National Congress for ten years and had been appointed on only one committee, while Mayfield was on a number of committees.

Garner said:

"There are three exclusive committees, the Foreign Affairs, the Ways and Means and the Judiciary. If a member is on either one of those committees he can serve on no other committee. Connally has been in the House ten years and he is on the Foreign Affairs and can serve on no other. It is one of the most important committees in Congress. I have been in the House for 26 years and on only one committee, the Ways and Means. Hatton Sumners is on the Judiciary Committee and is on no other. In fact, there are eleven Congressmen from Texas who are on one committee only. They could, if they desired, be on several smaller and less important committees, but if they do their duty they will have all the committee work they can attend to by serving on one of the three exclusive committees mentioned."

We Solicit Your Support for Wayne Somerville For County Attorney For the Following Reasons:

1. He is the first County Attorney of Wichita County to maintain his office at the courthouse, and give his personal attention to official duties.

2. He is the first County Attorney to make a serious effort to collect delinquent taxes, filing 3,846 tax suits and collecting $420,673.38 delinquent taxes in three years, the most that has ever been collected in that length of time.

3. The office is on the fee system, receiving its income only from costs taxed against defendants in misdemeanor cases wherein pleas of guilty or convictions are obtained; during the last three years it has handled 2,923 misdemeanor cases in the County Court at Law, out of which there were 1,010 pleas of guilty or convictions and 93 acquitals; it handled 290 juvenile cases, 3,846 tax suits, 169 lunacy cases and represented the state when necessary in over 12,000 misdemeanor cases in Justice courts, earning enough money to pay all expenses of operating the office, and collecting delinquent taxes, and paying into the county treasury $14,496.14 in excess fees, the most that was ever paid in by any County Attorney, regardless of the length of time in office.

5. He has fairly and impartially enforced all criminal laws coming within his jurisdiction, trying all classes of cases presented to him, as well as securing injunctions against drink stands, houses of ill fame, dance halls and social clubs. Social clubs, commonly called pool halls, exist and operate under charters granted by the secretary of state and are subject to prosecution only when they violate the terms of their charters. Such violations can be prosecuted by any citizen or officer, either independently or before the District Attorney or County Attorney; however, the County Attorney is the only one who has handled a single case of this kind in the five years they have been operating. He has never refused to take a complaint or failed to file injunction when requested either by officer or citizen, and every person arrested for any violation of this law has paid such fine as the County Judge saw fit to impose.

6. His plea for the office has been based on his own record, qualifications, ability and experience, and not on criticisms of his opponents.

His vote of 4,371 to his nearest opponent's 1,996 in the recent primary speaks well for the satisfactory nature of services rendered.

Real Inventor of 'Talking' Movies Is Poverty-Stricken Frenchman

By SAM LOVE

BLOOMFIELD, N. J., Aug. 24. (UP)—The talking movies may be filling Broadway theaters, and forcing theater owners and producers to spend a few extra millions for equipment and actors, but they are no thrill for Eugene Lauste, 72.

He invented them.

It is axiomatic of the movies that no development has been claimed by less than a score of inventors, but Lauste has circumstantial and documentary evidence to support his contention that he is the papa of the "talkies."

He is an old man and dependent on the earnings of a son for support. It is too late for the aged Frenchman to make any money from the "talkies." But as he putters in his garage here among tubes, earphones and cabinet pieces, Lauste strokes his bald head and smoothes with a gnarled finger his busy grey eyebrows and bristling Van Dyke beard and hopes that the world will at least make a bow toward him as the originator of its newest popular marvel.

Worked With Edison

Lauste has been missing success all his life. When he was 28 he was working with Edison in the famous "room 5" at West Orange, from which came the peep show and finally projected pictures that flickered on a screen.

Thirty-four years ago he had left Edison and was with the Lathams, working night and day in a small room beneath the Manhattan end of the Brooklyn bridge. Later he went to the Biograph company. His entire adult life has been wrapped up in the bright dream that finally made staying at home of evenings unnecessary.

"All the time I was working on my idea of photographiing sound as well as objects," said Lauste, "in 1906 I finished my machine and took it to England when I went over there in the employ of the Biograph company. It was widely acclaimed and I had it patented."

Patent Not Renewed

Lauste has the official record on a master patent taken out in Great Britain in 1906, but not renewed in recent years.

Lauste stroked the pages of a worn scrap-book as he talked. They bore printed appreciations of his work from motion picture weeklies and monthlies. Some dated 1907 hail his "photocinephone" as the "marvel of tomorrow." One brief technical paper refers to him as "the grand old man of the talking movies," but this one adds that the actual working out of his plan had been crude and "only a dozen men in the country know that he is the fore-runner of the latest craze in motion picture production."

"I eventually had a company formed," said Lauste. "Most of the stockholders were German. When the war came, the company went to pieces. I came back to America and this country joined the war, too.

"New" Invention

"I knew very few persons in America when I came back. My machine needed money. I took a young man into partnership and he took the $5,000 that we had collected to put over my invention."

The old man paused.

"And then I suddenly heard that De Forest and Western Electric had put a sensation on the market—the talking movies. Somehow it sprang into success without warning. I didn't dream that the machine I had not had the time and money to perfect over here would be called somebody else's invention—and 35 years of my life would be wasted.

"Now, even parts of my machine have been taken by my partner to pay for his debts."

Robinson's Stump Tour Announced

NEW YORK, Aug. 24. (AP)—Fourteen speaking engagements in eight southern states were announced today by the Democratic speaker's bureau for Senator Robinson, the party's vice presidential nominee. These are in addition to a previously scheduled address in Dallas Sept. 3.

The schedule from Dallas:

Cisco, Sept. 4; Nashville, Chattanooga, Knoxville, Tenn., Sept. 6, 7 and 8, respectively; Richmond, Va., Sept. 10; Raleigh and Charlotte, N. C., Sept. 11 and 12; Columbus, S. C., Sept. 13; Jacksonville and Miami, Fla., Sept. 14 and 17 (Sept. 15 and 16 being vacant for a rest); Atlanta, Sept. 18, and then three engagements in Kentucky, Bowling Green, Sept. 19; Louisville, Sept. 20, and Henderson, Sept. 21.

It is expected, the next move after Henderson will find Robinson routed to Oklahoma and from there through the southwest to the Pacific northwest.

The senator attended notification of Governor Smith. He said he regarded the acceptance speechr as "frank, clear and forceful," adding that "no one who understands English is left in doubt," he declared that the address would "go down in history as a very great speech."

Head of Denton Bank Is Bankrupt

SHERMAN, Texas, Aug. 24. (AP)—H. K. Schweer, president of the First National bank at Denton, which suspended operations last week, today filed a plea in bankruptcy and was so declared by Charles Batsell, referee.

The petition in the matter was filed by the American Exchange National bank of Dallas.

L. H. Schweer, son of H. K. Schweer and former cashier of the Denton bank, is being held in jail here in default of $2,500 bond under which he was placed on charges of embezzlement.

Jap Descendants of Early 'Gods' Held

TOKYO, Aug. 24. (AP)—The fact that 393 members of a fanatical religious sect had been arrested last April and that 179 had been committed for trial on charges of lese majeste was made public today.

The persons claim they are true descendants of the early gods of Japan and consequently should rule the country.

Makes Personal Statement to the Citizens of Wichita, Archer and Young Counties

It was my purpose in asking you to elect me your District Attorney, to do so, because I felt confident that I could and would be of service to the citizenship of this district. This I have done from the first day of the race.

I have not and will not subscribe or be a party in a campaign of mud-slinging—to be in politics to me never meant to be a "scandal-monger."

My experience of two years and ten months as Assistant District Attorney (14 months longer than my opponent) has qualified me to represent you as your District Attorney.

If elected I promise the people of this district that the office will not be conducted for the benefit of any individual, or group of individuals, but for the benefit of the citizenship of this district and society as a whole.

I am obligated to no man for anything he has done in my behalf. To my many friends in this and the first race I can only say, "thank you," and will show my appreciation by service rendered when in office.

I earnestly solicit your consideration and vote on Saturday.

Sincerely,
Signed: SAM B. SPENCE,
Candidate for District Attorney.

Don't Listen to Last Minute Stories and Campaign Propaganda of Politicians

For three months or longer the politicians who are fighting Ben Allred for District Judge have had the opportunity to tell any and all stories and political propaganda on him, and his brothers, or his family that they saw fit.

Ben Allred fights fair and in the open. He has repeatedly challenged his opponent and his son-in-law, Roy J. Daniel, and all politicians to meet him on the stump and discuss all of the issues in the hearing of the people, but none of these repeated challenges have been accepted. The politicians and opponents of Ben Allred are seeking to defeat him by a "whispering" and "stabbing-in-the-back" last minute campaign. When you hear or read such charges, ask yourself why didn't they come out during the past three months and make such charges openly and give Ben Allred a chance to answer????? The reason is such charges are FALSE.

The Day Book of a New Yorker

By GRANT DIXON

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—The white uniformed street cleaner is as common a sight today as the policemen. But it was not many years ago when the appearance of a street cleaner in a white uniform released a shower of ridicule from both adults and children. The latter went so far as to aim at him bits of garbage, over-ripe fruit and vegetables. The novelty of a white uniform for the street cleaner, above all, was too much for the New York public. Even the newspapers took up the ridicule.

The adoption of the white uniform for street cleaners was the culmination of more than 200 years in the evolution of street cleaning in New York. Pigs were the first official street cleaners of old Gotham. In 1658 the Dutch governor Peter Stuyvesant, declared that all householders owning pigs must release them from their pigpens every now and then and lead them onto the highway where they would act as public scavengers.

So long as the town was a mere countryside the pigs proved their ability as public scavengers, but as soon as New Amsterdam increased in size the pigs no longer were efficacious in the removal of dirt and garbage from the highways.

In 1695 the first street cleaning commissioner was chosen. His salary was $150 a year, a meager sum even in those days. He was held responsible for the removal of dirt from the main thoroughfare, but the responsibility was too great without some sort of system of street cleaning.

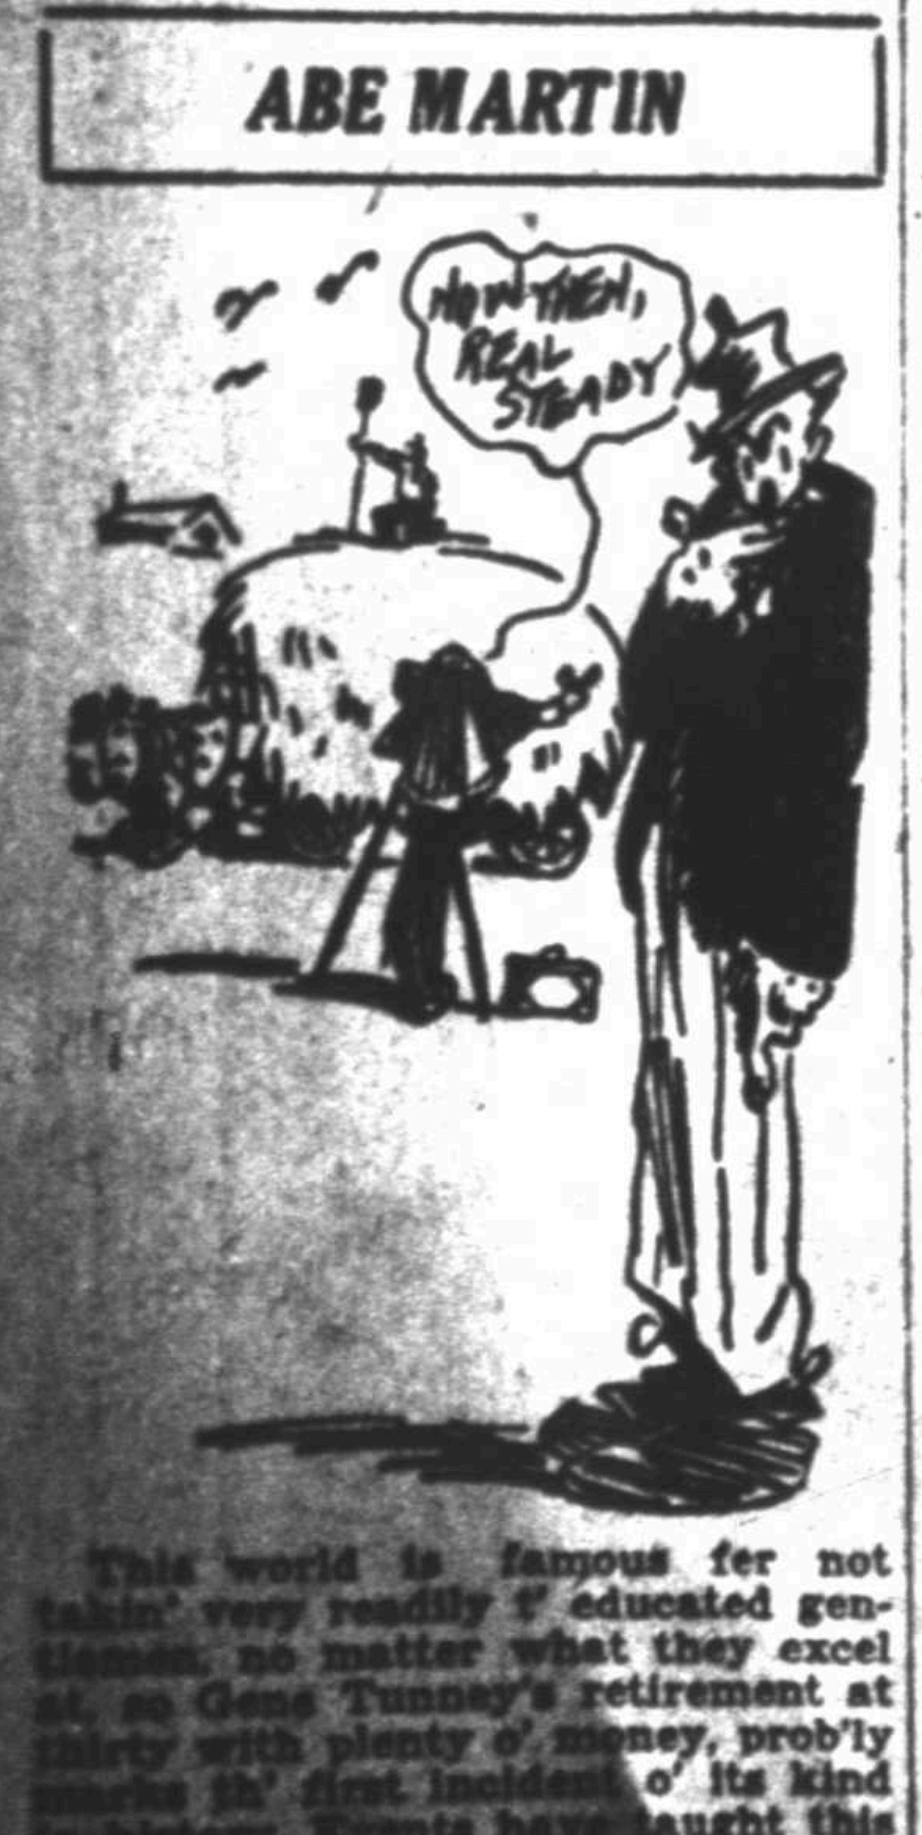
In 1701 the alderman therefore passed a law to the effect that all householders must sweep the dirt in heaps before their houses every Friday when the city carts would pass by and collect the dirt. If the householder did the loading himself he was taxed threepence for the carting, but if he called upon the driver of the cart to do the loading, he was obliged to pay sixpence.

Broad street, the largest thoroughfare of that time, was cleaned at the total expense of the city. This was because of the fact that during a rainstorm dirt would be washed into the street, and it was not fair to hold the residents responsible for the cleaning of the thoroughfare.

A new public official was then selected at $200 a year. He had the title of public scavenger and was in complete charge of street cleaning. The removal of dirt from the main thoroughfare was put into the hands of men hired by the city and as time wore on the property owners were more and more relieved of their responsibility for keeping the streets clean.

It was at the close of the last century that street cleaning as a whole was revolutionized by Col. George F. Waring. Before then only New York's main thoroughfares were cleaned. The streets of the tenement house districts were sadly neglected, and the accumulated dirt and garbage were a direct cause of many diseases among the residents. It was then that the department of street cleaning was organized into the efficient body it is today. All streets of New York were from then on systematically cleaned every day by a staff of men hired by the city.

ABE MARTIN



This world is famous fer not takin' very readily t' educated gentlemen, no matter what they excel at, so Gene Tunney's retirement at thirty with plenty o' money, prob'ly marks th' first incident o' its kind in history. Events have taught this country one thing—never put all your scientists in one airship.

Business—and Utopia

NOW that Secretary Hoover's acceptance speech has been analyzed by the experts and the last drop of political significance extracted therefrom, there remains one section of it that might be given a little thought quite apart from any political considerations.

Discussing the rise of America's industrial prosperity, Mr. Hoover remarked:

"We in America today are nearer to the final triumph over poverty than ever before in the history of any land."

Mr. Hoover is not the first person to say that. We have heard it a good many times before. But we don't often appreciate what it really means.

Perhaps we can understand better what an epochal thing it is that is happening by reflecting that never before in the world's history have any but the wildest visionaries ever believed that poverty really could be put out of existence. It has always been taken for granted that there never would be quite food enough, clothing enough, houses enough, happiness enough, to go around. Even the wisest of men felt that a hard providence had decreed that some men, in all ages, should be downtrodden and miserable.

Now and then, of course, a Utopian dreamer arose and announced some new scheme of society in which there should be no poor people. But his scheme always called for a revolution in the conduct of human relations in which society would be overturned. It never looked quite practical.

But now look what is happening. It is precisely the most practical, realistic of business and industrial leaders who are declaring that it will soon be possible for everyone in the land to have a job that will provide for more than simple subsistence. Matter-of-fact, selfish, uninspired and materialistic as the business world may be, it is nevertheless carrying us straight to a realization of the dreams of the Utopians.

This isn't to say that the reign of human brotherhood and equality is at hand. It doesn't necessarily mean that the Golden Age is about to dawn again. There will be plenty of wrongs in the world for our children to right.

Yet this modern age is more deserving than we sometimes think. It may be very crass and materialistic; but it is entirely possible that, by releasing millions of men from the grinding oppression of material cares, it is paving the way for a mental and spiritual awakening such as the world has never seen.

The Law and Racing

ORDINARILY, when anyone speaks of law enforcement in America we assume at once that he is taking about something connected with the 18th amendment.

But it happens that we have a law enforcement problem quite aside from prohibition. We had it before prohibition was adopted, and we would still be having it even if prohibition had never come.

It comes to the surface in various ways and in various parts of the country, but nowhere more strikingly than in connection with what the sports writers like to call "the sport of kings"—horse racing.

There are some states where the process of making wagers on horse races is perfectly legal. But they are few. In most states there are strict laws against it.

Now, no track can conduct horse races without gambling. It doesn't pay. Without the percentage derived from the pari-mutuel machines the backers cannot come close to breaking even. Receipts from admissions alone do not begin to pay expenses. Everybody that knows anything about horse racing knows this perfectly well.

Yet many and many a state that has strict anti-gambling laws has horse racing every summer.

Wherever this happens, one of two things is taking place: either the law enforcement officials are shutting their eyes, or the track has one of those flimsy pretenses that putting a bet on a horse is not really gambling, but is "investing." By this theory, the "investor" shares in the horse's winnings. That excuse has been knocked out by the courts time and time again. It does not hold water, even in this land of legal hair splittings.

In plain English, most of our horse racing is conducted in plain disregard of the law.

It may be that horse racing is a good thing and that gambling is harmless. If so, we ought to amend our laws and recognize that fact.

But as long as gambling—without which horse racing can never be conducted—is illegal, we ought to stop it.

The course at present followed in so many states is sheer hypocrisy. It is more demoralizing and disgusting than any of the widely-mentioned abuses of the prohibition law.

Let Lindy Alone

QUITE a bit of fuss is being made over the fact that an unidentified young lady rode with Colonel Lindbergh in a flight to New York recently.

Nothing much can be learned about her, it seems. Dispatches say she was "a tall, beautiful girl with gray eyes"; she left the field with Lindy's mother, who also was a passenger in the plane, and couldn't be found by reporters.

It's too bad the boys couldn't learn her name. But, after all, isn't it about time the young colonel had a rest from this sort of prying? Suppose he did take a "tall, beautiful girl with gray eyes" up for a flight in his plane; what of it? We say that we think a lot of him. Why not prove it by letting him go his own sweet way for a while, unbothered by reporters and cameramen?

COTTON CROP SPOTTED

Farmers who have lived in this county for many years say that they have never seen a parallel to the present cotton situation in the county. There have been times when part of the county would have good crops and another part would show failure, but never before has the crop been so spotted. A distance of one mile will make an extreme change in the prospects. Oftentimes on one side of a lane will be a fine crop while on the other side will be a crop that has been sadly retarded either from a mistake in planting or lack of rainfall. Cotton in one field will be doing well while in the same field the feed stuff will be burned beyond all hopes.

BUT HE FAILED TO EXPLAIN ABOUT IT TO THE NEW MAID.

The FORBIDDEN DOOR — by Herman Landon

Ernest Mallingham was alone in the library filled with strange curios gathered from many lands by the great scientist, Winthrop Gaston Martenet, erratic and tireless explorer into the mysteries of life, who had now been dead seven years.

Ernest was waiting for a woman and because these queer surroundings got on his nerves he was waiting impatiently. Julia was late again. Julia was the young widow of old Martenet's son Maxwell, a man twice her age. Maxwell had disappeared four years after his father's death and because he had been more or less a nobody it was taken for granted he was dead. But Ernest Mallingham was suspicious and when the young widow appeared he accuses her of keeping a secret from him and the rest of the world. Breaking down, she promises to tell him all. Hannan Martenet, son of Maxwell Martenet, lately arriving in New York from the tropics, finds he is being trailed by a young woman. He visits the family lawyer, who gives him a letter from his grandfather, which he is to read and then destroy. The letter warns Hannan not to open "the iron door until the clock has stopped" and ends with a drawing of a man his grandfather calls dangerous. As Hannan finishes reading there is a knock and the original of the drawing stands before him. Peters, the stranger, gives Hannan a letter from his father. Just as Peters leaves Hannan notices it is dated two years after his supposed death. He runs after Peters. The chase led to a house, where Hannan is overpowered by Peters' servant, who after a short absence from the room returns to give Peters Hannan's watch, collar buttons and such things as could not be destroyed by acid. At Valhalla Notch, the former country home of Winthrop Martenet, John, the watchman, is startled by the sight of footprints on the floor and by a knock at the gate. Answering the knock John admits a girl who notices the footprints and admits knowing Hannan.

The Iron Door

John almost dropped his pipe. "You know Hannan Martenet?"

"Not exactly. I've only met him once or twice."

"Where did you see him?"

"Why, in New York, a week or two ago. It was just a casual sort of meeting."

Her hazel eyes twinkled slyly at the portrait. "He's a casual sort of young man, you see."

John pulled darkly at his pipe. "I've heard Hannan was back in America. That's his granddaddy up there. They say he takes after him a lot."

"Yes," with a thoughtful nod. "I am sure he does. He has the same forehead, nose and eyes. But the mouth is different, not so tight and grim. Hannan Martenet has a nice mouth."

John smoked stolidly. He wondered just how "casual" her meeting with young Martenet had been.

"But he is clever—cleverer than you would think from looking at him," Miss Lane went on. "Ever so many young men with nice mouths are only fools. Hannan Martenet is different, though. If you don't look out he'll fool you." She gave a laugh that sounded reminiscently rueful. "Have you heard what happened to him?"

"Has anything happened to him?"

"Don't you read the papers, John?"

"About twice a month. It's eight miles to the postoffice, and there's no deliveries in these backwoods. What's happened to Hannan?"

"He's disappeared."

John choked on tobacco smoke. "Eh?"

"Disappeared—vanished off the face of the earth." Her tone was grave and mystified. "It happened the second night he was in New York. Nobody knows what's become of him. Many people think he is dead."

"Dead?" said John in a hollow voice. "You mean—murdered?"

"Maybe. Or else kidnaped. There's been no trace found of him. He left his hotel late in the evening shortly after a friend had called on him. At least, it's supposed his caller was a friend. None of the hotel attendants seem able to describe him except to say that he was a short man with a funny face and a large nose."

"Almighty queer," said John after a long pause.

"Yes, it's very strange. Did you ever see Hannan Martenet, John?"

John appeared to search his memory. "Once, when he was a wee mite of a tot. His granddaddy brought him out here one day. But that was many years ago. I guess he's forgotten all about it." He relit his pipe with a troubled air. "So Hanna's gone, eh? Terrible queer!"

"His father, Maxwell Martenet, disappeared the same way, didn't he?"

John nodded heavily. "That's what makes it so darned queer—father and son vamoosing the same way. It's four years now since Maxwell Martenet dropped out of sight. There's no mystery about what happened to him, though. He just went away and died."

"Sure of that, John?"

John gazed narrowly down the stem of his pipe. "Maxwell Martenet wasn't the kind mysterious things happen to."

"So they all say." A somber, whimsical smile tinged her lips. "I sometimes wonder, though—John, does it seem reasonable to you that a man should just walk away and die?"

"Why not? I've seen dogs do the same thing. Some dogs know by instinct when they're going to pass out, and they pick a nice and quiet spot to die in. They don't want nobody around. Maybe it's the same way with some folks."

Miss Lane sat down and gazed speculatively into the corners of the room. Her small face, with the lights and shades of the fire playing upon it, was very serious. Suddenly she fixed a searching gaze on the caretaker.

"John, didn't you see Maxwell Martenet soon after he—disappeared?"

John shook violently. He fixed startled eyes on her. He seemed to be trying to suppress an intense excitement. Then, with a dry chuckle, he clamped down the ash in his pipe.

"You're a queer one, Miss Lane. What are you driving at, anyhow?"

"Just this, John." Her voice was steady and very low. "Didn't Maxwell Martenet come here after he disappeared?"

A jerk passed through the caretaker's long, gaunt body. He rose, came over to where she sat, placed a hand on her shoulder, and asked in a husky voice:

"Who are you, miss?"

Her large, hazel eyes were full upon him. She smiled faintly.

The girl smiled faintly as she reflected on John's question of her identity.

"I've told you I'm Viola Lane—that's all. Isn't it true, John? Didn't Maxwell Martenet come here?"

"No!" John's voice crackled with excitement. "No—no! Anyhow," controlling himself with an effort, "if he did, I didn't see him."

For a moment longer her gaze searched his face. "I believe you, John. It's probable you didn't see him. But you had reason to think he came here. Isn't that so?"

"Maybe," said John, and slunk back to his seat. "A man living alone in a place like this gets to imagining all sorts of queer things."

"Then you imagined something about Maxwell Martenet? You needn't answer—I can see you did. Well, what about Hannan? What are you imagining about him?"

"Not a thing," said John stoutly. "I didn't even know he was missing till you told me."

For a moment longer she studied him with that calm, steady gaze which made John feel as if she were reading his unspoken thoughts. At length she lowered her eyes.

"Yes," she said a little drowsily. "I believe you are being frank with me, as far as Hannan is concerned. Dear me, I'm beginning to feel sleepy. Do you really intend to sit up all night, John?"

He nodded grimly, his eyes fixed on the caked mud prints.

"The skeezicks may come back." He seemed to be talking to himself. "There's no telling. If he does—"

"Mercy!" she gave an amused laugh. "You look as if you might treat him rough. But what about me? Aren't you a bit suspicious of me, too?"

"You?" John grinned gingerly. She looked so slight and artless that he could see no reason why he shouldn't trust her. Yet she had said certain things that stuck in John's mind, and there were moments when her manner puzzled him. John was taking no chances. "If you're ready, Miss Lane, I'll show you to your room."

"Thanks, John. I'm getting terribly sleepy. Is this the way?" She opened the small door in the rear, the one guarded by Old Winthrop's watchful eyes in the oil painting.

"Hey, come back!" John called sharply.

But already she stood in the little hall, a portion of it dimly illuminated by a wedge of light falling through the door.

"Why, what's the matter?" she asked simply. "Isn't this the way out? Where does that door lead?"

John gasped. With an air of frank curiosity she pointed down the little hall to the iron door. He reached out his hand to jerk her back, but she eluded him and walked clear up to the door.

"What a funny old door!" she exclaimed. "Iron, isn't it? And dusty—ugh! You need a woman's refining touch in this house, John. I never saw such a——"

"Don't touch it!" John cried in a trembling voice, although she had already brushed her fingers lightly against the iron surface. "You've got to get out of here, miss. It isn't safe."

"Safe?" She laughed incredulously. "Just as if an iron door could hurt anybody. What would happen if I opened it?"

"I don't know. Get back, miss."

She gave him a mocking glance. "You make me very curious, John. What's inside?"

"Just a large room with cement walls and no windows. It was Old Winthrop's lab'ratory. Honest, miss, I wish you wouldn't—"

"I promise not to touch a thing. Is the door locked?"

"I—I don't know for sure. I never tried to open it. It hasn't been opened in seven years. It never will be, if I can help it."

"How mysterious!" She looked up toward the top of the door. "What a huge clock, John! What's it doing in here, where nobody has occasion to look at it?"

"Can't tell you, miss. Don't know a thing about it. Come now, miss—it ain't healthy to look at these things."

"Just a minute." Her eyes were still on the immense clock imbedded in masonry above the door. "When do you wind it, John?"

John mopped his forehead. He was acutely worried. He did not know how to handle this inquisitive young person. Of course, she was doing no harm. There was no danger as long as one didn't attempt to open the door. Even in that event John was not clear in his mind what would happen, but he had a suspicion that it would be something dreadful. He stood in wholesome awe of the clock and the iron door. The atmosphere of this little hall always gave him an uneasy feeling.

"When do you wind it?" asked Miss Lane again.

"Wind it? Why, I never——" He checked himself on the point of blurting out a secret.

Miss Lane looked at him curiously. "What's the matter, John? Are you ill? Shall I get you a glass of water?"

"No, I'm all right." John steadied himself with a tremendous effort. "It's kinda close in here—that's all. We'd better get out."

This time he seized the girl's wrist and started to pull her away. She yielded reluctantly, but over her shoulder she was still looking at the clock. Suddenly she uttered a little gasp.

"Listen!" she cried.

John's hand fell limply to his side. He stood stonily still.

"Lordy!" he exclaimed.

With a sudden recoiling movement, the girl clutched his arm. He heard a sharp intake of breath. She was trembling.

"Look, John!" she cried hoarsely, pointing a shaking finger at the door.

John looked. Something was crawling with an icy touch along his spine. Step by step he shrank back, Miss Lane following. Very slowly, an inch at a time, the iron door was opening outward. In a spasm of horror the girl pressed closer to him. Each passing moment, each jerky movement of the door touched their nerves like the clutch of some abominable thing.

Farther and farther outward swung the door. Longer and more tortuously the seconds dragged. Blithely, melodiously the clock ticked.

The girl screamed. She clung to John in an ecstasy of dread. Again her hand rose; she pointed shakily. For just a moment the flicker of a face was seen in the opening. It passed like a darting shadow, like some sudden and ephemeral apparition.

After a while John looked down at the girl in his arms. She had fainted. The door was closed again. The clock was still ticking—peacefully, joyously, as if nothing had happened.

Oklahoma Dancer Claims Damages Because School Barred Bare Legs

OKLAHOMA CITY, Aug. 24. (AP)—The question of propriety of the stockingless fad reached the courts here today.

Mrs. Jonne Wallace filed suit in Oklahoma county district court against a dancing school company and its manager, Thomas A. Hoover, for $5,000.70, charging she was humiliated to that extent when employes of the company barred her from the dancing school because she wore no stockings.

"It is the custom and practice to abandon the wearing of hose and the same is not against the correct rules of society," Mrs. Wallace's petition said.

The 70 cents was claimed as a refund for the price of the ticket Mrs. Wallace said she bought to enter the ballroom.

Students Expelled

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 24. (AP)—A showdown on the propriety of girl students coming to class stockingless was in prospect at Lowell high school here today as scores of girl students temporarily expelled yesterday were to return to school.

The girls were sent home by Miss E. Lacoste, vice principal, who instructed them to return "properly dressed."

Several of the girls reported they had protested to the teacher citing a ruling by U. S. Webb, state attorney general, that cleanliness was the only requirement of the state in regard to the clothes of public school students.

The state department of public instruction recently decided to take no action against the stockingless fashion.

Coal Parley Ends Threat

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Aug. 24. (INS)—Signalizing the end of the long-drawn out and bitterly contested struggle between bituminous coal miners and operators, a formal wage agreement was on record here today between the Central Ohio coal operators and union miners. The operators control 14 individual coal mines.

Five days of star chamber conferences attended by representatives of both ended here late yesterday with the announcement that a new scale would be put in effect September 1, calling for $5 per day and 70 cents per ton for cutting and loading.

Both sides expressed themselves as not wholly satisfied with the scale but said concessions were made "to bring peace to the industry."

About 14 mines employing approximately 3,500 men, a proportionately small number, are affected by the agreement, but many other Ohio operators will fall in line according to the belief voiced by union officials.

Morris Sheppard Sticks to Smith

MARSHALL, Texas, Aug. 24, (UP)—Senator Morris Sheppard of Texas is not in accord with the prohibition stand of Gov. Alfred E. Smith, Democratic presidential nominee, but will support the Democratic ticket because he cannot give "aid or comfort to the Republican party, whose policies will not only destroy prohibition but all other beneficent measures."

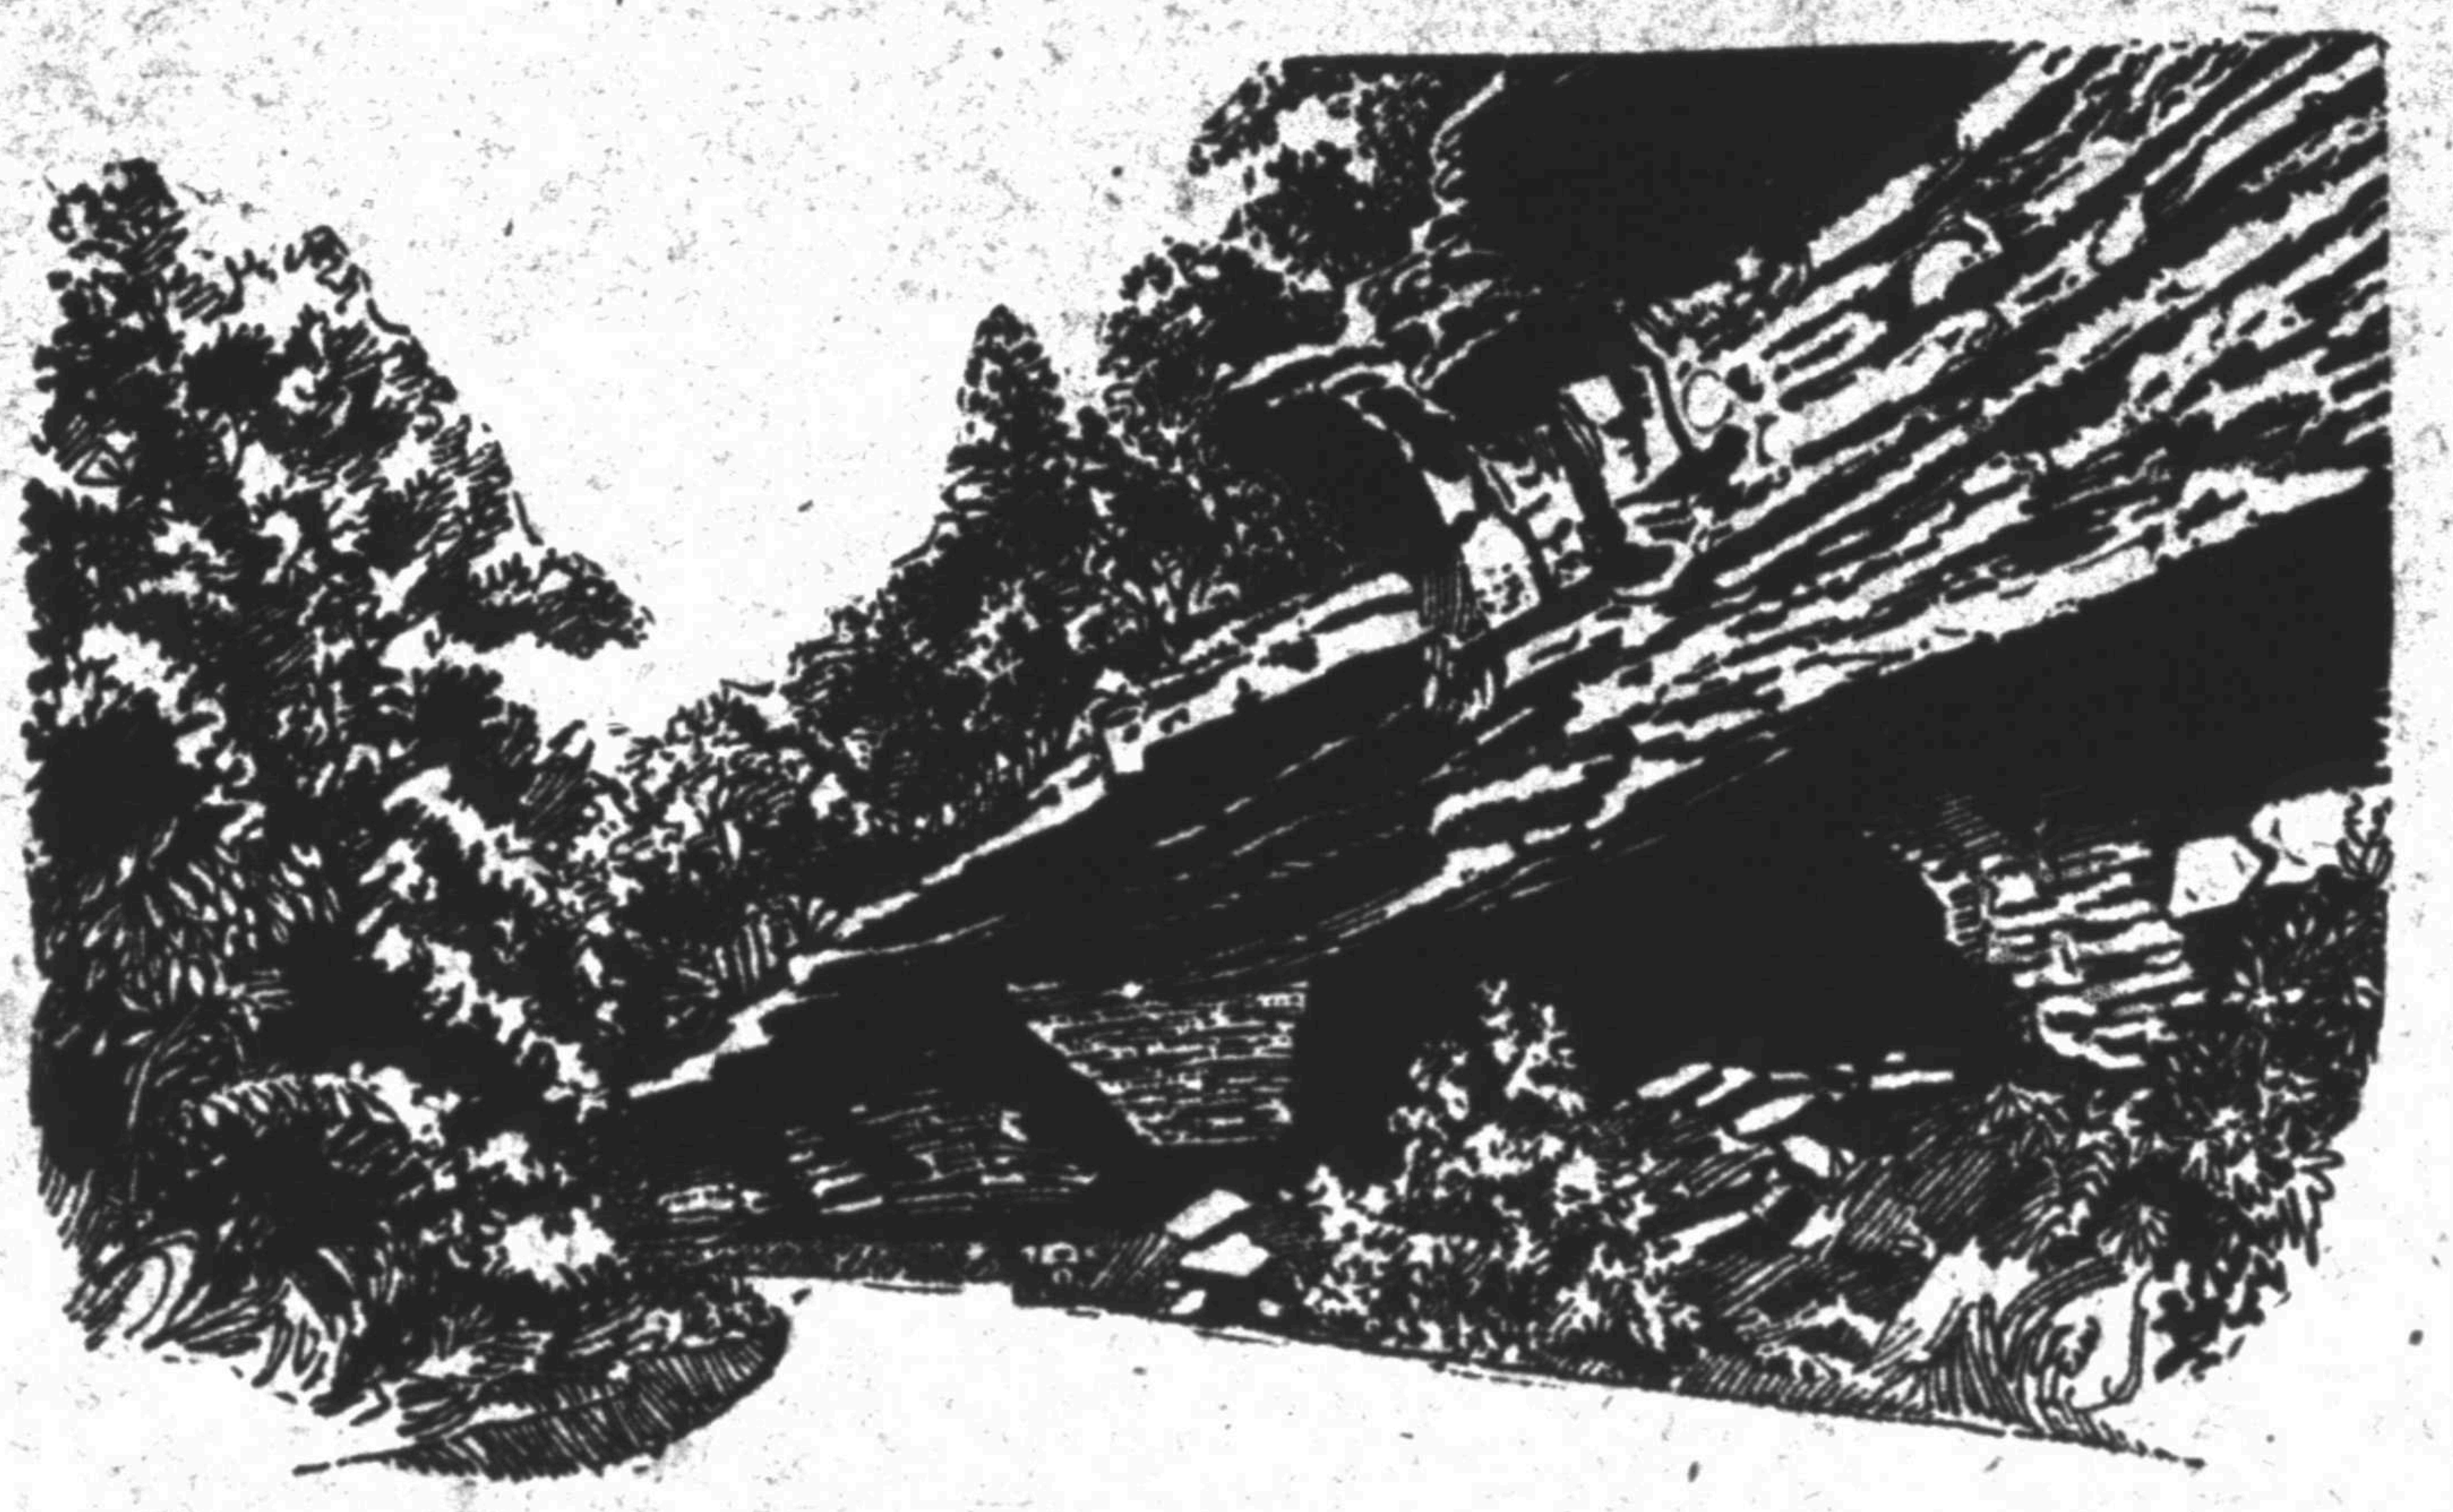
Senator Sheppard made known his stand today in a letter to the Marshall Morning News.

Sheppard said he would oppose the prohibition plans of Governor Smith, but "within, not outside" the Democratic party. He declared that, in his opinion, it is absolutely beyond the power of Governor Smith, or anyone else, to destroy the 18th amendment.

Nationalist Party Withdraws From Race

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 24. (AP)—John Zahnd of Indianapolis, National party candidate for president of the United States, today announced the party's national ticket would be withdrawn. He was nominated by a referendum last January.

Zahnd said the National party could hardly expect to receive more than 1,000,000 votes in the November election.



Week-end Trips Mean Happiness

When You Drive with Magnolia Anti-Knock Gasoline

When Saturday comes, bringing to many business workers a half-holiday, the highways beckon to every family possessing a car, and promise good times ahead. Over Sunday is sufficient time to drive from almost any place in the Southwest to a nearby lake, stream or camping place to enjoy a picnic, fishing, hunting or other sports and return in time for duty Monday morning. The change of scene and activity refreshes the worker. Children grow rosy-cheeked and strong from play in the great outdoors and mothers gain relief from the tedium of household routine. Your car represents a valuable investment. Let the family car pay you generous dividends in added health and happiness from week-end outings rather than be only an item of expense and depreciation.

The illustration above shows a picturesque bluff overhanging the highway near Fayetteville, Arkansas. Views of equal grandeur varying greatly in character are to be found throughout the Ozarks. The mountain heights, the rolling prairie and the far-flung plains invite you with views of equal beauty.

Make sure of unquestionable performance from your car for the full enjoyment of your week-end trips. After looking to its mechanical condition visit the Magnolia Man. He will check your tires, fill the radiator and give you a highway map of the State. For superior motor performance he has Magnolia ANTI-KNOCK Gasoline, free from chemicals or poisonous compounds, Magnolia Gasoline for the utmost mileage and Magnolene Motor Oils and lubricants to keep the youth in motor and chassis.

TODAY'S THE DAY!

SAM'S The MAN

You Are Cordially Invited to Review the Campaign

Sam Spence led the ticket in the first primary in a four-cornered race for District Attorney. Mr. Spence is thoroughly qualified for the office of District Attorney, having been born and reared in the South, a Democrat of the old school, an experienced, capable and vigorous prosecutor; and his two years and ten months experience in the office, better qualifies him to render efficient service to the public.

Mr. Spence Has No Political Alignments of Any Character Which Might Embarrass an Office-Holder

If elected, he will go into the office free of all "entanglements," no one to boss him and under obligation to none except the people as a whole, whom he will serve. Mr. Spence is honest, courageous and capable and if elected would make an ideal District Attorney. Why not elect him?

He alone will run the office, in the interest of law enforcement, treating all alike.

Mr. Spence winds up his campaign believing that the policy of fair minded, clean, constructive politics is the incentive which caused the voters of this district to place him at the HEAD OF THE TICKET in the first primary, over three worthy opponents. He has been open and above board in everything he has done, and has allowed no devastating rumors or insinuauations to be spread by his friends to embarrass hs opponents or bring the dignity of his profession into disrepute.

He is a father, which fact places him in a position to respect the sanctity of the home, and protect the same when elected.

Mr. Spence through his friends wants to thank the voters who placed him at the HEAD OF THE TICKET in the first primary, and particularly the host of others who have rallied to his support since. Merit is his campaign cry—May the Best Man Win.

CHAMPS POUND 15-HITTRIUMPH

Turgeon Stars in 12 to 7 Win in Opener

BEAUMONT, Texas, Aug. 24.—The startling Spudders continued to wield their bats today with devastating effect, and the Exporters were beaten in the opener of the series, 12 to 7. The champions hammered Buzz Phillips and Ad Holzhauser for 15 blows, and while the Exporters did some clouting on their own account, the prodigious hitting of the Spudders offset the home nine's attack.

Pete Turgeon smacked a home run in the fourth inning with the bases filled and also maced a single. Benton, Lamb, Smith and Lapan each banged a brace of hits. Stanton spanked a triple.

Milt Stengrafe was driven off the hill in the second inning and four runs and five hits were made off his delivery. Herb Cobb yielded three runs and seven blows and fanned five the remainder of the way in a very good display of chunking.

Rallies in late innings won for the Spuds. Tied at 7-all they scored two in the eighth and three in the ninth.

Beaumont made 12 hits, with Bagwell and Odom leading the Shipper offense with three knocks apiece.

Turgeon Glitters

Brilliant fielding by Turgeon, the Spudder outfielders and Bailey featured.

The Spudders tallied in the first inning when Fitzgerald, who had reached second on a fielder's choice and passed ball after two were out, scored on Lamb's single to right. The Exporters tallied three in their half.

Bailey doubled to left. Swanson grounded to Turgeon, Bailey going to third. Petrie strolled. Bagwell doubled to center, scoring Bailey and Petrie. Odom singled to left, tallying Bagwell.

Beaumont counted again in the second. Robertson singled to left. Phillips sacrificed, Stanton to Turgeon. Bailey was hit by a pitched ball. Swanson beat out an infield hit, filling the bases. Cobb relieved Steengrafe. Robertson scored while Petrie was forcing Swanson, Turgeon unassisted.

Both clubs tallied two in the third. Benton singled to left after one was out. Turgeon doubled to right, Benton stopping at third. Fitzgerald lifted to Schliebner in short right, Benton scoring. Lamb singled to center, scoring Turgeon.

Exporters Tally

Swenson threw low to first on Schliebner's grounder. Odom singled to right, Schliebner going to third and Odom taking second when Cobb failed to field the throw-in. Marshall flied to Fitzgerald, Schliebner scoring. Robertson singled to center, Odom scoring.

Stanton started the fourth by walking and went to second on Smith's single to center. Stanton was forced at third on Cobb's bunt. Benton singled, filling the bases. Turgeon hit over the right field wall for a home run.

The Exporters tallied their last in the fourth. Bagwell tripled to center. Schliebner was passed. Odom singled to center, scoring Bagwell.

Wichita Falls took the lead in the eighth. Jenkins hit safely to the middle garden. Odom threw out Swenson. Stanton tripled to center, scoring Jenkins. Lapan singled to left, scoring Stanton.

Three more were added by the Spuds in the ninth. Fitzgerald singled to right. Lamb fouled to Campbell. Fitzgerald stole second. Jenkins walked. Swenson singled to left, scoring Fitzgerald, and Jenkins took third and Swenson second on Swanson's fumble. Holzhauser went to the hill. Lapan singled to right scoring Jenkins and Swenson.

BUFFS DEFEAT CATS IN TENTH

Kittens Fail to Hold Big Early Lead and Lose

HOUSTON, Texas, Aug. 24. (AP)—It took 15 players and 10 innings for Houston to defeat Fort Worth, 8 to 7 here today. The Cats piled up a five-run lead in the first two innings, but Walkup was unable to hold the advantage and the Bisons, with a two-run rally, tied the score in the eighth. Score:

San Angelo Wins, 23-12; Ties Series

SAN ANGELO, Texas, Aug. 24. (AP)—San Angelo won today, 23 to 12, from Abilene.

The Snapper victory balanced the West Texas league playoff series, each team now having won two games.

Eight home runs were clouted by the rival aggregations, five by San Angelo players. San Angelo made 26 hits, blasting Cromer, Roberts and Jackson from the slab.

After the game the rival managers tossed a coin for the site of the deciding game, Sunday, Manager Les Tullos of Abilene winning the toss. J. McAllister Stevenson, league president, was not present for the toss and declared it illegal.

Tullos said that unless the game was played at Abilene, as decided by the toss, he would withdraw his team from the series. Score:

Kala Pasha And Kopecky Grapple

Another Rough Mat Match Forecast On Ross Card

Joseph Kopecky will meet Kala Pasha, from the shores of the Bosphorus, in the main card of Promoter Alex B. Ross' sports program Tuesday night at Spudder park.

These two devotees of legalized brawling have met in the presence of local mat fans before. It was about two and a half years ago, and the local fans still remember it as one of the roughest encounters in local wrestling history. Kala Pasha came off victor that time.

"But, not again" says Joe, who craves revenge and plenty of it. Therefore the fans ought to see the kind of match they like.

Preliminary to the main number, K. O. Shorty and Howard Scott meet in a six-round boxing engagement. It will be a return affair in which Scott hopes to wipe out a close decision victory K. O. Shorty acquired two weeks ago. Olin Hearn meets Johnny Owens in a four-round fracas.

Boxing Thrives in Philadelphia, Where Fans Get Run for Money

Blitman and Bass Fight in September Is Home Town Affair and Promises to Draw $100,000 Gate

By DAMON RUNYON
(Copyright, 1928, by Universal Service)

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—The sour science seems to be thriving lustily in the city of brotherly love, otherwise Philadelphia. My operatives inform me that they drew upwards of $30,000 with a card there the other night, featuring Peter Latzo, the anthracite man, and Matt Adgie, the ice wrestler.

Philadelphia has always been one of the best boxing towns in the world, but the ringworms there are a little bit smarter than they are anywhere else. You have to give them a show for their money. They would laugh right out loud at some of the New York pugilistic productions.

The Philadelphia ringworms were brought up on a diet of champions at $3 "tops." In the days of the six-round no-decision game in Philadelphia, before boxing was legalized, titleholders delighted in displaying their wares there, because it gave them the opportunity of getting in some necessary rehearsing for more important bouts without extraordinary effort, or risk.

I believe that two or three champs have been seen on one card in Philadelphia in bygone nights, all for the one price of $3 "tops." You can't expect a ringworm nurtured on that sort of fistic fodder to find any satisfaction in the average fare offered by promoters.

But give the Philadelphian a real show, and he'll respond nobly. Only he must be the judge of the show, and the Philadelphia promoters have long since learned that the home town ringworm is a canny judge. The Latzo-Adgie matter with its backing, was a pretty fair presentation, wherefore it drew very well, indeed.

Blitman and Benny Bass

Philadelphia holds a unique record in the sour science for the number of heavyweights it has heaved from its rings in times gone by, the heaving being based on the ground of unsatisfactory performance.

The heavees includes such notables as Mister Gene Tunney, and John Arthur Johnson, and Bob Fitzsimmons, all former heavyweight champions of the world. I'll say one thing for Philadelphia—they play no favorites there.

As a rule, the Philadelphia ringworm prefers seeing the home town boys in action, and unlike most towns, Philadelphia gives the hometowners loyal support, sentimentally, and financially. The home town boy in the average town has to go away from home to find recognition, but in Philadelphia a home towner can remain right there and get rich—if he can really fight.

They are presenting a match in Philadelphia next month between two home town boys that will draw up around $100,000, and decide more money in a betting way than any other presentation of the sour science anywhere in the country in years. These boys are Harry Blitman and Benny Bass, featherweights. I believe Blitman comes from Atlantic City, but he has established himself in Philadelphia to such an extent that he is to all intents and purposes a hometowner.

Blitman and Bass are both Hebrews, and representatives of two rival pugilistic factions in Philadelphia. Blitman belongs to the camp of Maxey Hoff, called "Boo Boo," while Bass is managed by Phil Glassman, former manager of Lew Tendler, and Glassman is aligned with Bobby Gunness and Herman "Muggsy" Taylor, who are promoting this bout.

The Tale of the Rivals

The bitterness of feeling between the two factions is well known throughout the pugilistic world. It began years ago when the boys were all younger and more excitable than they are today.

Glassman and Hoff were business associates. Taylor and Gunness were promoters then as now, and all were just like that, if you know what I mean. They all said, "hello, howsa boy?" when they met.

Glassman and Hoff fell out and severed relations and friendship. Then Taylor and Hoff fell out, Glassman and Taylor remaining friendly. Glassman and Taylor ceased saying "howsa boy?" when they met Hoff. They didn't care how he was. I don't know just how Taylor's partner, Bobby Gunness, figured in the matter, but I imagine he kept on saying "howsa boy?" to one and all. Bobby is that way. He is a fellow who can't make enemies.

Glassman has been connected with the sour science for years, but up to the time of the squabble between Glassman and Hoff, the latter hadn't paid much attention to the pugilistic dodge. He got in it at once, however, assembled a stable of gladiators and proceeded to do some promoting on his own hook.

He does his pugilistic promoting through a representative, preferring to be known as a manager, apparently. Glassman became a sort of silent partner in the promotions of Gunness and Taylor, as well as a manager. And so for years the two factions have gone along in Philadelphia hating each other, and fighting each other in the field of promotion.

Should Be Great Battle

Meantime, they both developed some great local cards and occasionally it befell that the factions were possessed of fighters that would draw a lot of money pitted against each other. At one time, so bitter was the feeling between Maxey (Boo Boo) Hoff and the triumvirate, it would have been impossible to match a man belonging to Hoff against one of Glassman's gladiators.

But, as I say, the boys grew older and less excitable. Presently a neutral promoter occasionally found it possible to match fighters of the rival camps. But Hoff remained hostile to the idea of letting the triumvirate use one of his men, and Glassman wouldn't listen to sending a gladiator of his in under Hoff's promotion, indirect or otherwise.

I suppose all promoters and managers connected with the sour science are business men under their thick skins, so when it came about that Harry Blitman of the Hoffs and Benny Bass of the Glassman's became the biggest "natural" of years in Philadelphia, the boys laid aside all their animositities, and let the match go on under the direction of Gunness and Taylor, who, by the way, are among the best promoters in this country.

The bout takes place Monday night, September 10, at Shibe park, the home of the Athletics. It is at 126 pounds, and the winner is sure to get a match with Tony Canzoneri for the featherweight title. Blitman, a fine looking youngster, gave Tony a beating in Philadelphia not long ago. Blitman is a southpaw, and a great puncher. Bass is also a great puncher, so something ought to happen in this fight.

In any event, as a result of it, I expect to go to Philadelphia some day and find Maxey (Boo Boo) Hoff and Phil Glassman either kissing on Broad street, or heaving glassware at each other.

HUSKERS CLASS OF BIG SIX 11'S

Heavy and Fast Nebraskans Face Hard Schedule

By EDWARD WERKMAN
United Press Staff Correspondent

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 24.—A husky football eleven from Nebraska rules as pre-season favorites in the Big Six, with the University of Missouri challenging the Cornhuskers for supremacy.

One of the heaviest teams in the history of Nebraska will represent the school this year. The team will average 195 pounds, it has been predicted, but it won't be all beef, for there will be a lightning fast backfield and a fast charging line.

In the backfield, Co-Captain Blue Howell will be one of the halfbacks with Farley, McBride, Sloan, Witte and Peake serving as other ball toters. Russell, a 210-pound quarterback, and Scherzinger, speedy halfback, are the backfield candidates coming up from the freshman squad.

Graduation took a heavy toll in eliminating Captain John Brown, and Bronson, quarterbacks, and Presnell and Oehlrich, backs.

Always a Munn

Included in the 11 lettermen returning for gridiron duty are eight linemen. These are Co-Captain Elmer Holm, guard; Ashburn, end; James, center; Lucas, tackle; Munn, tackle; McMulle, guard; Richards, tackle, and Zuver, guard.

The tough schedule of the Cornhuskers has been the basis of argument in predicting the success of the season. Some contend the hard list of games is an indication that Nebraska officials saw a winning grid machine in prospect and so took on the big boys; others claim the heavy grind will prove too much for the Huskers.

The Heavy Schedule

The season opens Oct. 6 at Ames with Iowa state; Montana state visits Lincoln the following Saturday. Two hard games then follow, Syracuse being met Oct. 20, and Missouri is on the schedule for Oct. 27. Later in the season, Pittsburgh comes to Lincoln, Nov. 17, and the following week the Army is met at West Point. The schedule thus provides no rest periods in between their heaviest games.

Gwynn Henry, coaching Missouri, the Cornhuskers' closest competitors, will have 16 lettermen back but he has lost some valuable players through graduation. Captain-Elect Lucas also is ineligible to play.

Miller and Tarr are the stars gone from the line, and Flamank and Clark, superb passing combination, are not in the backfield this year. But the Tigers will have Mehrle, Rosenheim, Delmund and Gorman in the backfield. These speedy backs will cavort behind a front line that will tip the scales around the 200-pound mark to a man.

Baer Facts

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER
(Copyright, 1928, by Universal Service)

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—With Smith and Hoover all stamped and sealed, the notification committee has advised Lindbergh that he flew the Atlantic last year.

The notification committee is a trifle dilatory this season. They just caught up to their 1926 work.

George and Al were nominated in June. All that the notification committee requires is a slight clue. The Paul Revere of the committee immediately started dashing around the country on a snail.

Hoover got his delayed certificate last week. They knocked Smith off this week in Albany. Naturally, both men accepted as they knew a refusal would bring on some more conventions.

This business of electing temporary presidents is peculiar, if nothing else. And it's nothing else.

We pick 'em in January, boost 'em in April, nominate 'em in June, notify 'em in August, elect 'em in November and inaugurate them in March.

Which is killing two birds with the U. S. army.

Probably the notification squad holds off several calendar sequences in the hopes that the candidates will change their minds.

That's where they are as wrong as blue streaks in milk. Things may happen under circus tents, but nothing is ever changed under a high hat.

From November 6 to March 4 the president is twins. One lives in the White House during November, December, January and February, knowing that his successor is watching the front door like a hawk.

We should switch our political business around. When we elect a man president on November 4 he should still be important on November 5.

Instead of that he is compelled to stall around four months making patriotic speeches to Boy Scouts who would rather be throwing snowballs.

What are the most important events of a new year?

Ground hog day on February 2. And inauguration day on March 4. We could at least move the inauguration up ahead of the ground hog.

However, our politicians seem to think it is o. k. to use a system that started when roads were bad and it took a successful candidate four months to go from his back porch to Washington.

The way the notification committee should work is to step right up to the candidate and say, "You're the new president. What's the veto?"

His first official act would be to fire the committee.

After that he would retire for the evening wearing dark glasses to keep from getting sunburned.

DAILY DOPE

By LARRY DAILEY

THE SPUDDERS aren't "in" with the second half flag, but they are so near clinching of that fact that plans have been made for a meeting of the Wichita Falls and Houston club owners to arrange for the playoff. President J. Doak Roberts of the loop yesterday advised J. Alvin Gardner and Fred Ankenman, the Houston magnate, to meet with him next Monday at Dallas, to make arrangements for the Buff and Spudder titular series.

◆ ◆ ◆

THE PLAYOFF will be for five or seven games, and will be started probably Sept. 12, though there is a possibility that it will get under way Sept. 11. The Texas league season closes Sept. 9, while the Southern association program doesn't end until Sept. 16. In the event there is no playoff in the Southern wheel, this will give the Texas clubs ample time for their series and will, in fact, tune up the survivors for the meeting with the champions of the John Martin circuit, for the honor of being the greatest ball club in old Dixie.

◆ ◆ ◆

Gardner doesn't care particularly whether the playoff is for five or seven games, being confident of course that the Spudders will win in either event. It has been suggested that seven games be played, with a contest at Fort Worth and Dallas in addition to the pastimes in the contenders' cities. Our prexy also is open to reason on the matter of playing a game at Fort Worth and Dallas, providing the series is for seven games. However, he isn't particularly enthusiastic over that project, though he probably wouldn't oppose it.

◆ ◆ ◆

THE DIXIE SERIES is for seven games; that is, four out of seven, and it isn't improbable that the moguls, at their meeting Monday, will decide that a seven-game playoff, with a seven-game Dixie series to follow, would be too much baseball, for fans and players. My guess is that the playoff will be set for five games, and will open Sept. 12. That's only a conjecture, however, and as reiterated above, Gardner will agree to five or seven games; or rather, to the number of contests that seems best suited to the occasion. Should Fort Worth and Dallas make representation for games at the meeting Monday possibly the moguls will agree to a seven-game playoff with contests in those towns.

◆ ◆ ◆

Meanwhile, Gardner and our hustling, efficient secretary, Mr. Guy Guying Airey, are engaged in preliminary work preparatory to handling box seats and reserved seat reservations for playoff games here. No reservations will be accepted until the Spudders mathematically clinch the second half championship. The sale of box seats and reserved seats is to be held at the Miller and Renfro Drug stores and none will be sold at Spudder headquarters, though out of town reservations will be accepted there. Tentative plans call for a raise of 25 cents in the price of seats, from kid bleacher to box tickets. With the playoff involving the championship of the Texas league, such a raise is not unreasonable; indeed, it is most logical. World series prices are considerably higher than the admission charge for regular major league championship games. The Dixie series admission charge is raised, too, as are all prices on championship ball games. And the Texas league playoff will be as important, hard fought and interesting as the Dixie series. Indeed, it is MORE important, for without winning the playoff the Spudders won't be in the Dixie series.

Chick Evans, Far Off His Game, Defeated

CHICAGO, Aug. 24. (US)—There's a Chicago golfer in the finals of the western amateur golf championship, but it isn't Chick Evans.

No, it's a sandy-haired person, Gus Novotny, who eased his way past Lawrence Moller of Quincy today at Bobolink, 4 and 3, while Evans was kicking away chance after chance to win from Frank Dolp of Portland.

Evans finally succumbed, 3 and 2, while a gallery of a few hundred wondered how any golfer could miss crowding through the openings that Dolp left for the eight times' ruler of western golf.

Helen Is Extended To Play Best Game

FOREST HILLS, L. I., Aug. 24. (US)—Only Mrs. Molla Mallory, New York veteran, eight times' national women's singles champion, was left in the 41st annual national women's tennis championships tonight to stem the advance of California's sun-kissed daughters.

Led by Helen Wills, acknowledged queen of the feminine tennis world, three California stars won their third and fourth round, matches today and along with Mrs. Mallory, advanced to the semi-finals.

The semi-final singles program for Saturday afternoon is: Helen Jacobs, Santa Barbara, Calif., vs. Mrs. Molla Mallory, New York, 2 p. m.; Helen Wills, Berkeley, Calif., vs. Edith Cross, San Francisco, 3 p. m.

Although Miss Wills won both her matches by decisive scores, she was at times extended to her best game. She defeated Mrs. L. A. Harper, Los Angeles, 6-0, 6-2, in the third round, and Miss Charlotte Hosmer Chapin, Springfield, Mass., ranked No. 6 nationally, 6-2, 6-4, in the quarter-finals.

BUSINESS GOOD, SAYS REPORT

Commerce Department Survey Is Optimistic

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24. (UP)—The present stability of American business is unparalleled in the economic history of this or any other important industrial country, the commerce department said today.

Business during the first half of 1928 continued the prosperity and progress of the previous year, the department said.

The only important industries lagging behind are textiles, coal and agriculture, a survey revealed.

The first half of 1928 has been a period "of almost unbroken increase in production and consumption, without exhibiting any of the characteristics of a business boom," the department said.

"There have been unprecedented amounts of savings and investments of new capital in recent years. This investment together with improvements in methods have greatly increased the efficiency of industry and the output per worker.

"The large income of the people is indicated by the continuance of a great volume of savings, which take a variety of forms. One of these is life insurance, new sales of which, during the first half of 1928, were the largest on record.

"Savings in the New York State Savings banks, believed to be representative for the country as a whole, showed a large gain at the close of June, 1928, as compared with the previous year.

"The declines in a few businesses for the first half of 1928 are due to exceptional conditions. Cotton and wool manufacturing industries, unusually active during the first half of 1927, showed some decline in 1928. The copper and petroleum output decreases represent a conscious effort of producers to bring about a closer balance between supply and demand.

"For the first time since 1923 employment in June was higher than in May.

"Foreign trade also continued in a satisfactory position. Exports were greater than for the first half of any year since the close of the prewar boom."

FRANK E. NICHOLSON

By MADGE KENNEDY

Madge Kennedy beat Horace Greeley to his famous line by being born in the West, later coming to New York, where she entered an art school. As a side-line, Madge got a job in a theater and soon found she could draw an audience much better than a picture.

MADGE KENNEDY

She scored an immediate success in "Fair and Warmer," but it was while playing in "Twin Beds" that Madge displayed her best talents.

In 1916 she abandoned the legitimate stage, returned to the West and began work in the Hollywood movie foundries. During her four-year film career she rose to rank as a star with Mary Pickford and Clara K. Young. Miss Kennedy returned to the New York stage in 1920, and is still there. She is at present starring in "Paris Bound."

"I like the story about the negro who worked for a circus," Miss Kennedy told me. "It seems that one day the lion tamer was sick and the manager of the circus called this darkey into the office.

"'Sam,' he said, 'the lion tamer is sick and I want you to ride in the cage with the lion during the parade today.'

"'No, suh, boss!' replied the negro emphatically, 'not me, boss. I craves to live and do well!'

"'Why,' replied the circus man, 'that lion won't bite you—he hasn't a tooth in his head!'

"'Mebby so,' said the colored boy, 'but jes' the same, boss, ah don't crave to be gummed to death by no lion.'"

HEALTH and DIET ADVICE

By DR. FRANK McCOY
Author of "The Fast Way to Health"

Questions in regard to health and diet will be answered by Mr. McCoy who can be addressed in care of this paper.

Doctor McCoy's menus suggested for the week beginning Sunday, Aug. 5:

Sunday: Breakfast—French omelette, toasted triscuit, ripe figs. Lunch—Ice cream, fresh peaches. Dinner—Broiled chicken, spinach, buttered beets, salad of cucumbers and celery, jello, no cream.

Monday: Breakfast—Cottage cheese, Melba toast, applesauce. Lunch—Corn, string beans, lettuce. Dinner—Roast mutton, zucchini (Italian squash), McCoy salad (lettuce, tomatoes and cucumbers), apricot whip.

Tuesday: Breakfast—Baked eggs, retoasted shredded wheat biscuit, stewed prunes. Lunch—Watermelon as desired. Dinner—Steak with mushrooms, cooked small carrots and peas, head lettuce, pineapple gelatin.

Wednesday: Breakfast—Retoasted breakfast food with milk or cream (no sugar), stewed figs. Lunch—Melon as desired. Dinner—Roast pork, cooked spinach, salad of tomatoes, cabbage and endive, baked apple.

Thursday: Breakfast—Eggs poached in milk, Melba toast, dish of fresh or canned berries (no sugar). Lunch—Ice cream with one kind of fresh fruit (except bananas). Dinner—Salisbury steak, baked grated carrots, string beans, salad of shredded lettuce, prune whip.

Friday: Breakfast—Coddled eggs, crisp bacon, Melba toast, stewed raisins. Lunch—*Avocado salad. Dinner—Baked white fish, cooked eggplant, cooked celery, salad of sliced tomatoes, no dessert.

Saturday: Breakfast—Crisp waffles, butter, with a small amount of maple syrup, stewed apricots. Lunch—Berries with milk or cream (no sugar). Dinner—Roast veal, summer squash, cooked greens, salad of asparagus tips, prune whip.

*Avocado salad: Cut a ripe avocado in half and scoop out the pulp, being careful not to tear the shells. Mash pulp with a fork, mixing in the desired amount of chopped raw celery and minced ripe olives. Add no other seasoning; heap into the half shells, and top with a ripe olive. Serve each shell on a bed of leafy celery stalks.

Questions and Answers

Question—"Thank You" asks: "Is there any way that broken muscles and tissues of the bust can be strengthened? It was caused by too tight a binding."

Answer: It is quite normal for the breasts to drop down gradually after the birth of a child or even sometimes after puberty. Exercising the muscles of the chest will tend to strengthen the muscles lying under the busts, but this will seldom raise them to their original position. There is nothing injurious about this sagging, and you must not injure yourself by using treatments to eliminate a condition which is probably natural for your age.

Question—Mrs. W. B. L. asks: "Will you kindly tell me the difference between buttermilk and acidolphilus milk, and what would you advise taking for an acid stomach or intestinal indigestion?"

Answer: There is some difference between buttermilk and acidolphilus milk, but not much difference in that which is commercially sold. Either of these milks makes an excellent diet to take for a short time, excluding all other foods, or a pint of either milk may be used in place of a meal.

Question: Mrs. A. D. asks: What would cause my husband to have a pain under the left shoulder blade? Several years ago that lung closed for some time when he suddenly stepped under a very could shower. Could it be a result of that?"

Answer: Pains under the left shoulder usually come from either heart trouble or from some lunk disorder such as you mention. If the lung has remained collapsed it may still be possible to open it up by having your husband take deep breathing exercises.

NOTICE PEACE
PEACE

During the first twenty-five years of our government, New England threatened to leave the Union several times. During Madison's administration, in 1814, a number of leaders met in Hartford and advocated dissolving of the Union. They were opposed to the War of 1812 because it stopped profits of shipbuilding and trading.

By NEA, Through Special Permission of the Publishers of The Book of Knowledge, Copyright, 1923-26.

Shortly after this, however, the war ended with an American victory and the feeling died out.

Madison, like Washington and Jefferson, served two terms. Like them, too, he was a Virginian.

Madison proved himself one of the ablest and best men who served as president. During his two terms the War of 1812 was successfully fought, a new Bank of the United States was chartered, the New England discontent was diplomatically adjusted and the new America began to have more confidence in itself. A great stream of settlers began pouring westward.

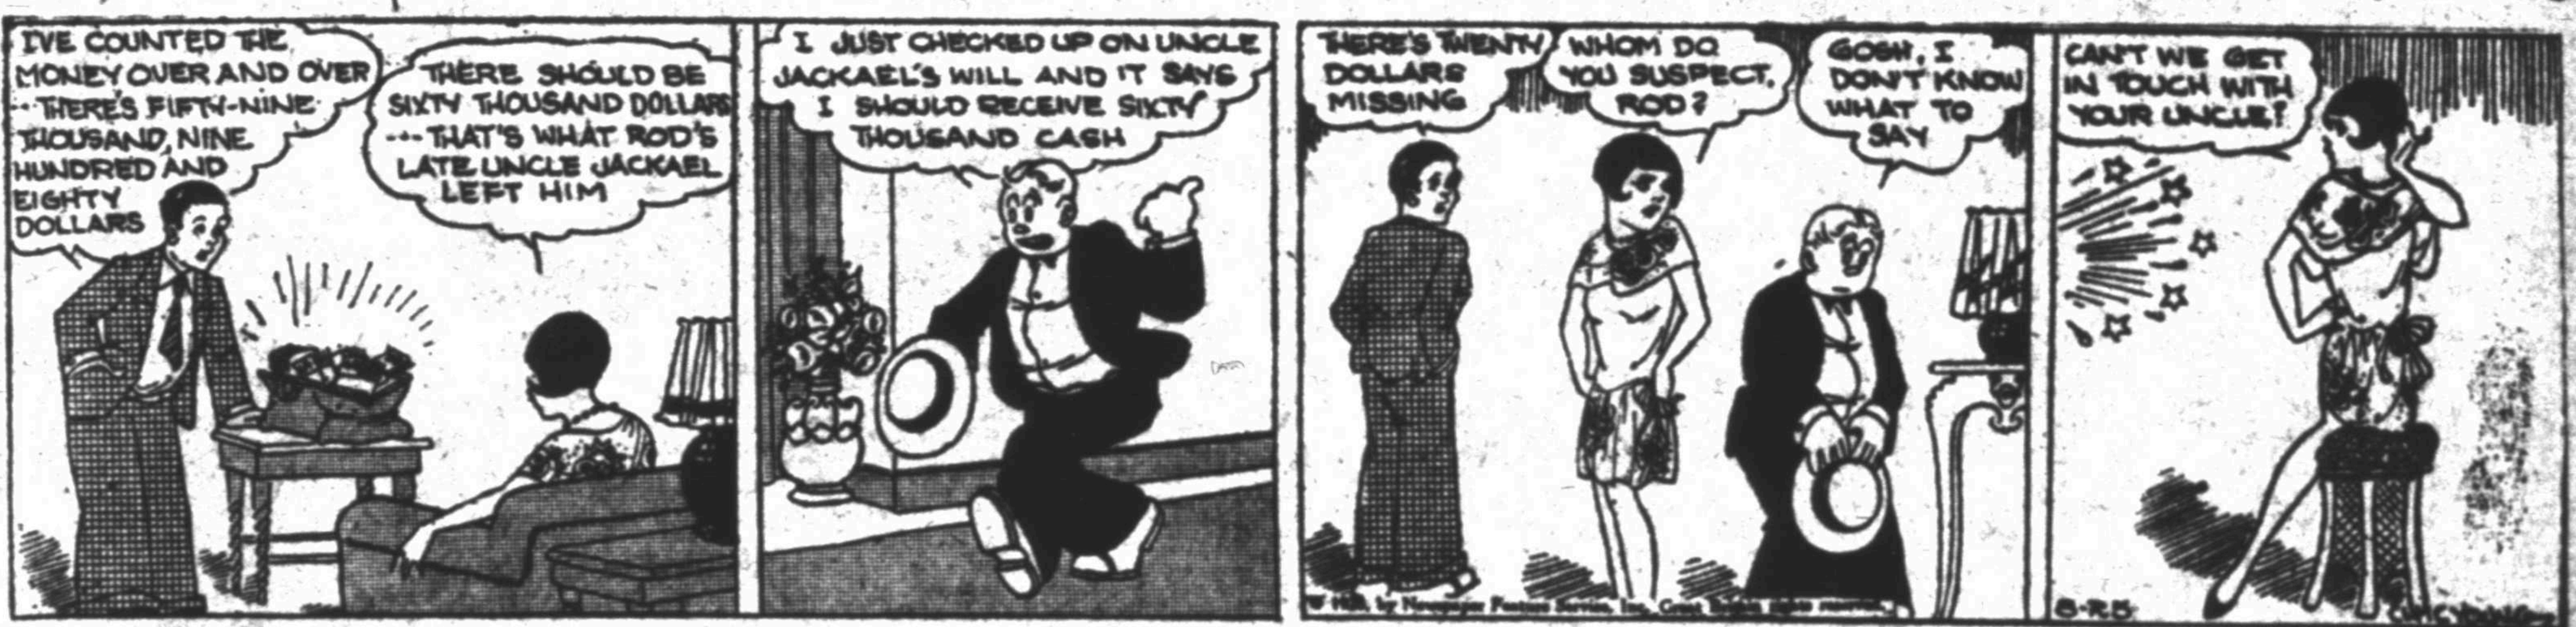
DUMB DORA

By Chic Young



I'VE COUNTED THE MONEY OVER AND OVER -- THERE'S FIFTY-NINE THOUSAND, NINE HUNDRED AND EIGHTY DOLLARS
THERE SHOULD BE SIXTY THOUSAND DOLLARS --- THAT'S WHAT ROD'S LATE UNCLE JACKAEL LEFT HIM
I JUST CHECKED UP ON UNCLE JACKAEL'S WILL AND IT SAYS I SHOULD RECEIVE SIXTY THOUSAND CASH
THERE'S TWENTY DOLLARS MISSING
WHOM DO YOU SUSPECT, ROD?
GOSH, I DON'T KNOW WHAT TO SAY
CAN'T WE GET IN TOUCH WITH YOUR UNCLE?

FROM HONEST ABE, THE KEEPER OF THE GAMBLING DEN, RUDY FOUND THAT FLINT HAD VISITED THE PLACE NIGHTLY AND WAS STOPPING AT THE SAME HOTEL THAT HE WAS — IN FACT IN THE VERY NEXT ROOM
HEY! OPEN THAT DOOR, OLD KID, OPEN THE DOOR AND WHEN I TELL YOU THE GOOD NEWS, YOU'LL FEEL LIKE GIVING ME A HUG AND A KISS!!
BANG BANG
OH-A-A-ER- EXCUSE ME, BUT IS MR. CLAYMORE PERKINS IN THIS ROOM?
NO — THERE'S NO ONE BUT ME IN THIS ROOM — AND DON'T YOU COME POUNDING ON MY DOOR AND THEN MAKE PHONEY EXCUSES — I'LL HAVE YOU ARRESTED IF YOU PESTER ME AGAIN!
SAY, CAN YOU TELL ME WHERE CLAYMORE PERKINS, WHO HAD 801, HAS GONE?
HE CHECKED OUT THIS MORNING — I ASKED HIM IF HE CARED TO LEAVE A FORWARDING ADDRESS AND HE SAID IF ANYONE ASKED FOR HIM TELL THEM TO ADDRESS HIM IN CARE OF THE UNITED STATES OR CANADA
I'M A LUCKY GUY — HERE'S FLINT LIVING RIGHT IN THE NEXT ROOM — IF HE HAD A CONTAGIOUS SICKNESS, CHANCES ARE I'D CATCH IT FROM HIM — AND I DON'T FIND OUT HE'S THERE UNTIL HE'S GONE — IF BAD LUCK WAS WORTH ANYTHING, WHAT A RICH GUY I'D BE!

DOESN'T HE ANSWER? HAS HE GONE? WHICH DEPOT DID HE GO TO? MAYBE I CAN...
OH, HELLO MR. SNOOP! GENTLEMAN TO SEE YOU, SIR! YES, VERY IMPORTANT!
HOLD HIM HERE! YOU'LL BE RIGHT DOWN! YES, SIR!
PHEW! WHAT A CLOSE SHAVE. IF I HAD MISSED HIM I ALWAYS WOULD HAVE BEEN WORRIED ABOUT WHY HE...
OH, HELLO THERE! DID YOU WANT TO SEE ME?
YES... ER... THAT IS... MY WIFE WANTED ME TO ASK YOU WHY YOU WERE INVESTIGATING MY PARTNER ALEC! HE'S OKAY ISN'T HE??
IT'S A LONG STORY... MY TRAIN LEAVES IN HALF AN HOUR, AND I'M A LONG WAYS FROM THE DEPOT...
MY CAR IS OUTSIDE! HOP IN... I'LL RUN YOU DOWN WHILE YOU'RE TELLING ME! COME ON...

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Aug. 24. (AP)—An irregular opening was followed by advances in the New York cotton market today with December contracts selling up from 18.55 to 18.88 on more unfavorable crop advices from the Southwest and apprehensions of lower temperatures in that section. The advance was checked by realizing which caused reactions in the late trading and December closed at 18.69. The general market closed steady at net advances of 2 to 12 points, except for July which was nominally 3 points lower.

The opening was steady at an advance of 4 points to a decline of 5 points with the active months showing net losses of 2 to 6 points during the first few minutes under a renewal of the selling which was noted here yesterday afternoon. The offerings were light, however, and the market soon turned steadier on covering or rebuying by recent sellers who appeared to be influenced by reports that cotton crop prospects showed market deterioration over a good part of Texas.

Later the buying seemed to be somewhat further stimulated by reports of lower temperatures in the Southwest, while there were continued reports of deterioration and increased insect damage in other sections of the belt. For a time the market showed considerable firmness with prices advancing to 19.02 for October and 18.87 for March, representing net gains of about 22 to 39 points on the active months.

The demand then tapered off and the market later was comparatively quiet and irregular with last prices showing reactions of 15 to 20 points from the best under realizing or liquidation. Some trade buying was reported early, while there was a little southern selling on the advances but much of the business was again considered due to the closing out of accounts for over the week-end or the private crop reports which are expected within the next few days.

Private cables said that continental liquidation had been supplied by local buying and trade calling in Liverpool, and that Manchester reported slightly more business in cotton cloths for India and China. Port receipts today 20,371. U. S. port stocks 443,127. Exports today 7,605, making 206,265 so far this season.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 24. (AP)—Rather listless trading characterized the cotton market today and although prices tended towards higher levels enough realizing developed to hold net gains to small proportions. An advance of about $1.50 a bale on unfavorable crop summaries was followed by profit-taking which carried December contracts down from 18.46 to 18.27 where the option closed net 7 points higher for the day. The general market closed steady at net advances of 6 to 9 points.

Near the end of the first hour a good demand developed on unfavorable crop accounts and fears of rains in the eastern belt where moisture is considered favorable to weevil activity. October ultimately traded up to 18.41 and December 18.46, or 29 to 31 points above the early lows and 28 points over the previous close.

Business tapered off at these levels and prices fluctuated aimlessly within the early range and gradually eased off under spasmodic profit-taking. October trading to 18.20 and December 18.27. The deliveries closed at these prices, net 6 to 9 points lower.

DUN'S WEEKLY STATEMENT

NEW YORK, Aug. 24. (AP)—Dun's tomorrow will say:

The sustained comparative buoyancy of business in various channels and in different geographical sections forms a tangible basis for the prevailing expectations of future expansion.

It is a point for continued constructive comment that there is less evidence of a recession of activities than ordinarily is revealed at this period, and the impending change in seasons encouraged logical hopes of a quickening and broadening of operations.

Unexpected Decrease in Loans Speeds N. Y. Stock Market Upward

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, Aug. 24. (US)—Montgomery Ward soared 16½ points as the stock market speeded into new high territory today under the stimulus of the unexpected decrease in loans. The wildest opening of several months was experienced as shorts rushed to cover.

Favored industrials showed gains of from 2 to over 4 points over night and many added further to the climb during the session which was the most active in over two months. Sears Roebuck gained 6¼, General Motors 5¾, Allied Chemical 7, American Smelting 8¾ and other industrials to a lesser extent as outside participation enhanced the influence of new recruits to the bull side in the professional ranks.

Call money held stiff at 7 per cent throughout, but was entirely ignored in the spread of the speculative enthusiasm aroused by the spectacular advances of the technically cornered specialties.

Montgomery Ward's sensational rise was largely due to short covering. Those most interested in the stock, however, did not confine their efforts to its action alone. They were responsible in good part for the further rise in Park and Tilford, the buying in which was described here yesterday. Improvement under the Schulte management in Park and Tilford's affairs will be demonstrated in the forthcoming six months' report which will show gain of over 150 per cent as compared with last year and indicate net of from $9 to $10 a share for the current year. In addition, the company has its large holdings of overhold to dispose of when the government gets ready to agree as to a distributing company. Schulte, in which the same group were engaged, held strong also with talk of early retirement of the preferred shares being planned.

The first sign of real awakening in the ranks of General Motors shorts came right near the close and caused the stock to finish at the high of the day. Those bearish on Motors have been the most stubborn shorts in the market. Other motors were comparatively quiet, except Chrysler and Studebaker. In the former there was indication that those with most control of the market were preparing to try for new high ground, while Studebaker's rise was brought about by the same group that accomplished a new high for the stock two months ago. They reputedly work with the largest stockholders who never have relished their stock selling so far behind other motor shares.

GRAIN REVIEW

By Thomas Temple Hoyne

CHICAGO, Aug. 24. (US)—Once again expected frosts in Canada failed to materialize and wheat sold off sharply today. The previous day's short covering had weakened the market and prices moved off easily, closing 1⅞@2¼c lower. Corn prices held within a narrow range and finished ⅛ to ⅜c lower. Oats held fairly steady with corn, closing steady to ⅜c off, but rye was weak with wheat and finished 1⅛@1⅞c lower.

Foreign markets, confronted with the same situation that existed here, also displayed considerable easiness. Winnipeg futures prices registered net losses of 3¼c at the close, and Buenos Aires was ⅛c lower at mid-session. Liverpool, while closing ⅜@⅝c up was not as strong as expected and finished at a fair reaction from the day's top.

The disappointing cables, forecasts for warmer weather in Canada and advices which put at rest fears of frost damage caused recent buyers to sell. Commission houses and locals were on the selling side and their offerings, together with some scattered hedging sales, gave the market a heavy tone.

The cash wheat market was lower with the futures, the basis was unchanged and prices ruled 1c lower. Local shipping sales totaled 15,000 bushels.

Lower temperatures over parts of the corn belt brought some support to the deferred deliveries of the yellow cereal, but in a moderate trade, scattered selling carried prices slightly lower in sympathy with wheat. There was some buying of the September because of the strong cash market and reports of charters made for 245,000 bushels to Georgian Bay and 240,000 bushels to Buffalo.

Cash corn demand continued fairly active, with the basis unchanged to ½c higher and prices steady to ¼c up. Local shipping sales of corn were 61,000 bushels. Bookings to arrive totaled 28,000 bushels.

Produce Markets Quiet Here During Past Week

Produce markets in Wichita Falls were inactive during the week, except for slight variation in fruits and vegetables. East Texas peaches were taken from local markets the latter part of the week as the first of the Arkansas crop arrived. Washington cherries also were discontinued. Arkansas Jonathan apples at $3.25 and Tokay grapes at $3 were new additions of the week.

Cotton closed at 17.75 Friday, slightly below the week's opening. The first of the 1928 cotton crop of Wichita county found its way to brokers during the early part of the week.

Wheat and oats were unchanged in prices.

WHEAT PRICE SLUMP SEEN

Large Harvest Forecast In 20 Countries

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24. (UP)—Lower wheat prices may be expected due to an indicated harvest of 2,873,000,000 bushels in 20 countries, R. W. Dunlap, assistant secretary of agriculture, warned today.

The expected harvest for all countries in the northern hemisphere is 73,000,000 bushels greater than last year.

"The wheat situation is somewhat similar to that of 1923," Dunlap said, "when the world harvested the record crop and prices fell to a low point."

Some hope for wheat growers was held out by Dunlap in the fact that the prospects in Europe, outside of Russia, indicate a small crop.

Rye production in all countries, for which reports are available is estimated at only 557,000,000 bushels as compared with 649,000,000 bushels last year.

Europe's potato crop seems likely to be smaller this year than it was last year, reports reaching the department indicate.

Reports also indicate that Russia will have no wheat to export.

"Farmers who sell their crop immediately after harvest without regard to the state of the market may have cause to regret it later," Dunlap said. "It is not too late for wheat growers to protect themselves against what may be an unduly depressing influence now exercised on prices in the early part of the marketing season, and a subsequent upward tendency generally can be expected."

Cotton Situation In Frederick 'Baffling'

Special to The Record News.

FREDERICK, Okla., Aug. 24.—Of all the 25 years that cotton has been grown in this community the present season is the most puzzling. With the first bale expected at any time such an experienced cotton man as B. Robey can not state whether a rain at present would be beneficial or baneful. Insects of various kinds have been making damaging inroads on the cotton crop the past few days and cotton men do not know whether a rain would prove more advantageous to the crop than it would afford the insects more opportunity to get in their deadly work.

This baffling situation has been brought about by a great per cent of the cotton having been replanted from two to five times making much of it as much as six weeks late. With a late frost and plenty of rain much cotton can still "put on," old settlers say. But should there be a lack of moisture and an early frost the yield will be small regardless of the insect feature.

'Talkies' to Be Shown In Plane While Aloft

NEW YORK, Aug. 24. (UP)—The talking motion pictures take another step forward Sunday when "talkies" will be projected in the interior of a new 25-passenger airplane en route from Atlantic City to New York. Newspaper men will witness the demonstration. Observations of the newspaper men will be broadcast by radio from the plane.

Prairie Drills Only Test in Moore County

Only one wildcat test is drilling today in Moore county, the area west of the main Panhandle field, and where four oil wells have been completed so far.

Prairie Oil and Gas company is drilling below 2,700 feet at No. 3 Gober ranch, in section 16, block M-1, some eight miles east of Dumas. It is the third test of the Prairie. Rotary tools are being used.

BURBANK DECLINES

The Burbank field declines steadily in output. For the fiscal week ended Wednesday it averaged 24,811 barrels from 1,903 wells. The Kay county extension made 2,974 barrels from 185 wells.

South Burbank or Fairfax pool, made 512 barrels from 20 wells.

ANDERSON COUNTY

The fourth oil producer in the Boggy Creek-Carey Lake area of Anderson county, East Texas, is Humble Oil and Refining company's No. 2 Jones, gauging 2,080 barrels a day partly choked.

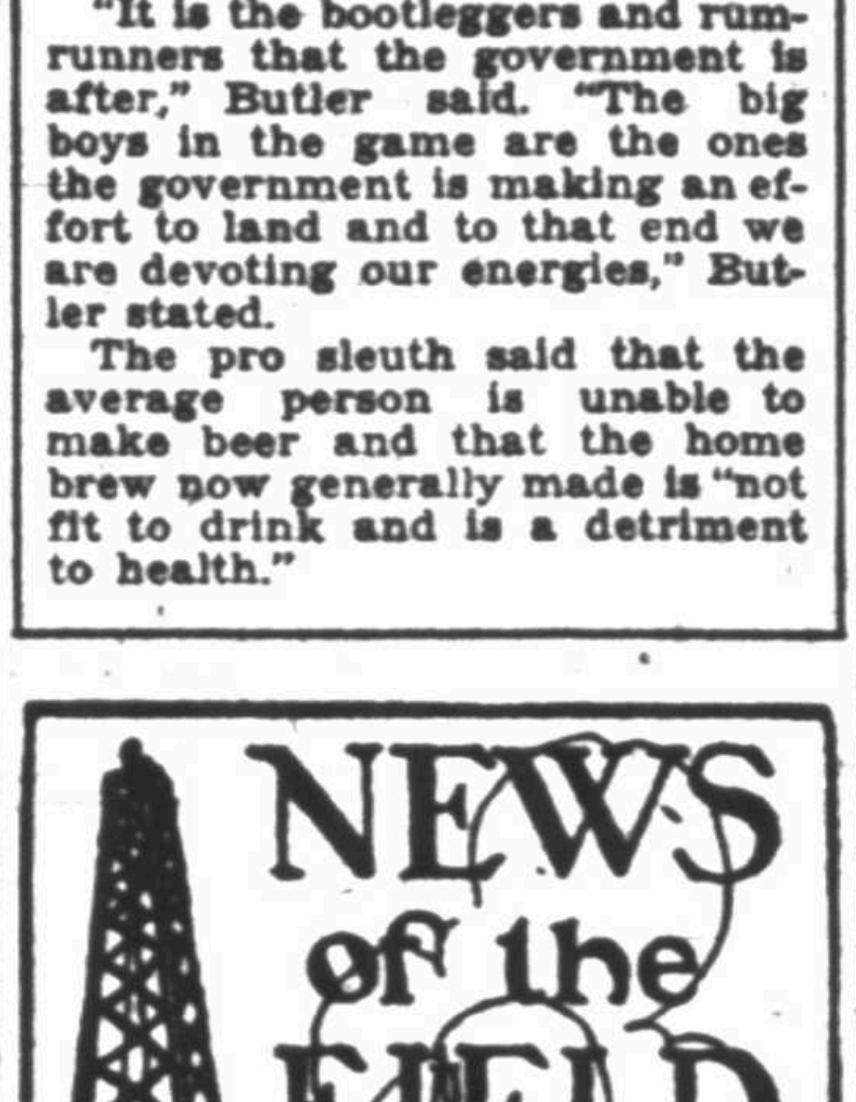
BREW O. K.

It's the Big Boys That Pro Sleuths Want Mostly

AUSTIN, Aug. 24. (INS)—The government is not much concerned with home brew makers as long as the beverage is made and used strictly for home consumption, and not for sale, A. R. Butler, assistant federal prohibition administrator for Texas, with headquarters at Fort Worth, said here today.

"It is the bootleggers and rumrunners that the government is after," Butler said. "The big boys in the game are the ones the government is making an effort to land and to that end we are devoting our energies," Butler stated.

The pro sleuth said that the average person is unable to make beer and that the home brew now generally made is "not fit to drink and is a detriment to health."



SOUTHEAST OF OLNEY

Hamilton and Anderson located in southeast corner of southwest quarter of T. E. L. survey 227, southeast of Olney in Young county is drilling at 600 feet.

CONSOLIDATED-NEIMEYER

With 700 feet of oil in the hole from the sand at 1,427-34 feet, the Consolidated Oil company's semi-wildcat located in section 2,415 T. E. L. survey east of Megargel in southwest Archer county, is being equipped for the pump as a 40 barreler.

TEXAS-WAGGONER

The Texas company is rigging up on its No. K-1 located 1,713 feet south, and 582 feet east of the northwest corner of the S. P. R. R. survey, abstract 534, W. T. Waggoner lands in Wilbarger county.

GULF LOCATION

Gulf Production company's No. 42 S. B. Burnett has been made 1,500 feet east, and 1,500 feet south of northwest corner section 5, H. T. B. R. R. survey south Electra pool, two miles southeast of Electra.

BRIDWELL-BURNETT

Bridewell & Heydrick are moving in and will start drilling in the next few days on their wildcat test located in the center of the northwest quarter of section 3, abstract 132, southeast of Electra in Wichita county about six miles.

Drilling Wells Keep New Mexico Active

Southeast New Mexico keeps busy and news from that area, while not very exciting, is interesting. The Texas company's No. 1 Compton, in 9-16s-31e, Eddy county, was drilling at 4,130 feet and was making one bailer of oil a day. This test is northeast of the Maljamar area, opened during 1925.

Pueblo Oil company at 1-17-13, also in Eddy county, had a hole full of sulphur water at 4,412 feet, total depth.

Empire Gas and Fuel company No. 1 State, in the southeast corner of 8-21-35, Lea county, made 257 barrels of oil and 186 barrels of water.

Seminole Barely Gains On Thursday Gauge

TULSA, Okla., Aug. 24.—A very slight increase was noted in the production for the Seminole area the last 24 hours. Thursday's gauge was 319,328 barrels from 1,171 wells as compared with Wednesday's gauge of 319,195 barrels.

The comparative production report follows:

James V. Allred Replies to Bob Long

Says Young Representative-elect Allowing Himself to Be Influenced By Politicians

To the People of Wichita County:

I am sorry that our young representative-elect, Bob Long, has allowed himself to be used by some of the politicians who are fighting my brother so bitterly. I am sure he did not read over, or consider, the statement attributed to him, as it is not true.

I have publicly charged in this campaign that while Roy Daniel serving as a member of the state legislature from this county was active in procuring pardons for murderers and bootleggers, and taking money for his services. I was naturally grieved at the activity of Roy Daniel in procuring these pardons, because in every case the conviction had been obtained by my brother Ben or me; and through Roy Daniel's efforts the work of my brother Ben and me, the verdict of juries and judgments of courts were being nullified. When Roy Daniel announced as a candidate for a third term to represent the people of this county in the state legislature, I felt it my duty as a law abiding citizen of Wichita county, to use my influence to the end that he would not be given an opportunity to again serve the law-abiding citizens of Wichita county. I therefore solicited Bob Long to become a candidate against Roy Daniel, and furnished him with the information as to the conduct of the said Roy Daniel in connection with the obtaining of pardons for murderers and bootleggers who had been convicted by Ben and me in this county. I dictated the letter sent by Bob Long to ex-Governor Ferguson. When Bob got ex-Governor Ferguson's reply, with its startling disclosures, he came back to my office and was highly elated. He showed these letters to a few of Roy Daniel's friends and soon thereafter Roy Daniel withdrew from the race.

I supported Bob Long for representative. After the first primary Bob Long brought the Ferguson correspondence to my office and allowed me to have photostatic copies made of the same. (I told him that I was going to use them for the purpose of showing why Roy Daniel, W. W. Cook's son-in-law, was making a personal attack upon, and slandering me, in this campaign, and why Roy Daniel had withdrawn from the race for state representative. Bob Long did not object to me so using said letters, but only requested that I let him have the copies back after August 25th.) Neither Roy Daniel nor W. W. Cook, to my knowledge, have denied the truth of my charges about Roy's connection with the procuring of pardons for murderers and bootleggers.

I have no quarrel with my young friend Bob Long and regret that he has been drawn into the campaign. I do challenge Roy J. Daniel, W. W. Cook, or any of the politicians to show where any of the Allred family have ever, at any time, been instrumental in procuring pardons for convicted murderers and bootleggers, or have taken money for their services in behalf of the procuring of such pardons. The people of Wichita county are too intelligent and their moral standards are too high to let the "bunk" of politicians thwart their better judgment; hence the Allred boys expect on tomorrow a great majority for Ben Allred for Judge of the 78th District Court.

Faithfully yours,
JAMES V. ALLRED.

BOLT LEADER IS OPTIMISTIC

Lightfoot Believes Al Defeats Himself

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Aug. 24. (AP)—M. D. Lightfoot, chairman of the national Democratic Hoover for president committee, in a statement here today, declared if Gov. Alfred E. Smith's statements on immigration and prohibition in his acceptance speech do not defeat him, "then nothing can defeat him."

"Democrats as well as Republicans favor strict restriction of immigration under the present law," he said, "and labor especially will be opposed to lowering the bars."

As for Smith's proposal for state option on prohibition, Lightfoot said it "just means that we would have liquor back with us," and it would be a step backward to "where we were 20 years ago."

Cato Sells of Fort Worth, Texas, commissioner of Indian affairs under President Wilson and former national committeeman from Texas, in a letter to Lightfoot, said: "The Tarrant county convention which met here Saturday contained 222 delegates. Of these 215 were anti-Smith. This great Democratic county will give Hoover at least 3,000 majority over the wet Tammany candidate. I shall be pleased to cooperate in an earnest effort to elect Hoover."

Contests Attract Much Interest

Special to The Record News.

FREDERICK, Okla., Aug. 24.—As usual, much interest is being taken in the 4-H boys' and girls' club contests and the Farm Women's club contests which will be judged at the Tillman county fair Aug. 28-31. The women have selected canned products and sewing for their entries. The style show contests for senior and junior girls also promises to be interesting, the first composed of girls from 16 to 21 and the latter from 10 to 16 years of age. The girl in each class making the dress which is deemed most appropriate for the occasion intended will be given a free trip to the state fair at Oklahoma City.

Club girls will also compete on yeast bread, cookies, canned fruits and vegetables and each girl must have a complete exhibit in order to win. The two highest ranking will be given trips to the state fair.

A practical exhibit for farm women will be in club canning or the amount of canned goods to be used by a family of five in one week.

Judges for the women's and girls' exhibits will be Miss Martha McPhetters, nutrition specialist from the Oklahoma A. and M. college at Stillwater and Miss Virginia Chambers, home economics teacher at Grandfield. They will be assisted by Miss Jewel Graham and Miss Agnes Schultz.

Boys will compete in crop judging, farm engineering and livestock judging, the two boys scoring highest in each contest on records kept, exhibits judging ability will be awarded a free trip to the state fair. Judges for the boys are Paul Adams, livestock specialist, and L. W. Osborne, crop specialist, both from the A. and M. college.

LITA FREE

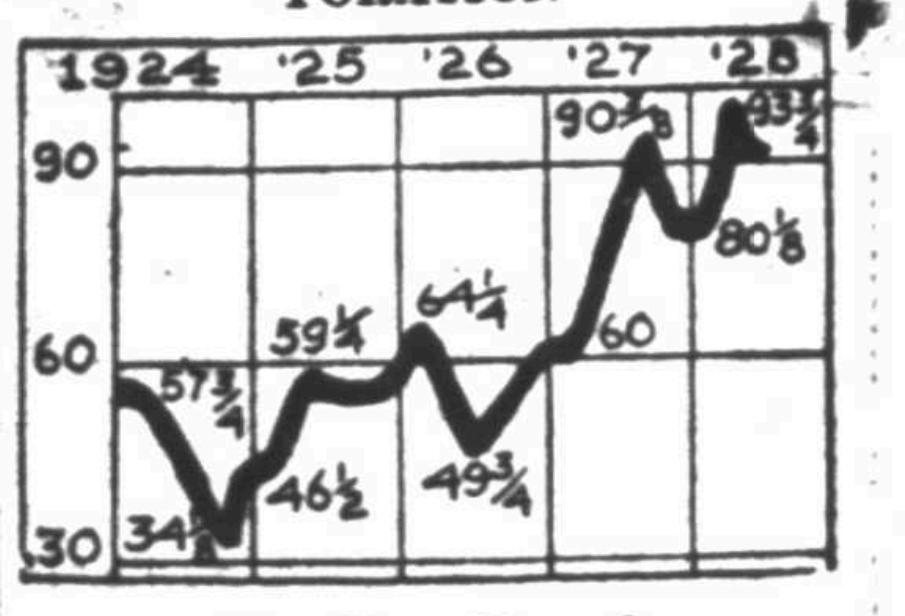
Comedian's Wife Wins Complete Severance Of Bonds

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 24. (INS)—Lita Grey Chaplin today was entirely free of her marital bonds to Charlie Chaplin.

Superior Judge Edwin F. Hahn signed the final decree on application of Roland Rich Woolley, attorney for the former wife of the screen comedian.

Hollywood gossip has linked Mrs. Chaplin's name with that of Roy D'Arcy, screen villain, who must wait seven months for his final decree of divorce.

KENNECOTT COPPER CORPORATION



Five-Year Record

The Kennecott Copper corporation dominates an important mining group. Its properties consist of those controlled and operated by its own organization directly, and those run by separate organizations. The revenue is derived in large part from the subsidiaries. As a whole, the Kennecott copper group is the largest producer of copper in the world, aggregating approximately 454,783,000 pounds of refined copper in 1926.

Kennecott owns all the capital stock of the Braden Copper Mines company of Chile; 96% of Utah Copper which controls Nevada Consolidated Copper Co., which in turn has absorbed the Chino, Ray Consolidated and Ray Hercules companies. It also owns the entire capital stock of the Alaska Development Mineral company and through that company, owns 46% of the stock of Mother Lode Coalition, and a controlling interest in the Bering River Coal Co. It owns and operates directly the Kennecott Mines and the Beatson Copper Co. Kennecott controls the Alaska Steamship company and the Copper River and Northwestern Railway company.

Earnings were equal to $5.80 a share in 1926, and in 1927, net income before depreciation, amounted to $28,127,934, or $6.23 a share. The increase in the earnings of subsidiaries for the first quarter of 1928 indicated that the income of the parent company also would be increased this year.

There is no funded debt. Capital stock consists of 4,530,180 shares outstanding of no par value.

The present dividend rate is $5 a share per annum.

As of January 1, 1928, current assets were $47,494,671; current liabilities were $6,512,792, and net working capital $40,981,879. Book value applicable to the capital stock amounted to $59.51 a share.

Singer Struck in Head By Sliced Golf Ball

LAKE PLACID, N. Y., Aug. 24. (AP)—Rosa Ponselle, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera company, was recovering at her camp on Lake Placid today from a slight concussion of the brain, caused when she was hit just above the eyes by a golf ball.

She was playing with her vocal coach, Mastro Romano Romani, and other members of the house party she is entertaining at her camp, Wawbeek, and was just preparing to tee off from the eighth hole when a sliced ball driven by an unidentified golfer from a neighboring tee struck her

Actress Escapes Filing Of Bigamy Charges

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Aug. 24. (INS)—Despite the fact that Jacqueline Logan yesterday married Larry Winston, Los Angeles broker, in Tia Juana, Mexico, seven months before her divorce from her first husband, Ralph Gillispie, will become final, no bigamy charges will be filed against the screen actress, Deputy District Attorney Forrest Murray declared.

Rumors had been afloat earlier that action would be taken at once against the pretty film star, should she and Winston establish a home together here.

MARINE SHIPPER DIES

BOSTON, Aug. 24. (UP)—Captain William Anderson, retired manager of the marine department of the United Fruit company, died at a hospital here today. From 1901 to his retirement in 1921 he had charge of the operation and construction of what is now known as the "Great White Fleet."

SOMERVILLE'S RECORD:	CRAIN'S PLATFORM:
1. He has openly favored the pool halls, and in some instances acted as their attorney.	1. He will close every pool hall in the county in less than 30 days, or resign.
2. He has made no effort to stop gambling devices around the public schools.	2. He will stop the operation of gambling devices around public schools and elsewhere.
3. He has made no effort to close the bawdy houses and other dens of vice.	3. He will make every effort to close all bawdy Houses.
4. He has not tried a felony case since he has been county attorney.	4. He will assist in the prosecution of liquor cases and other felony cases.
5. He has neglected the county's business to do a private practice. (Wholesale divorce business.)	5. He will not neglect the county's business to do a private practice.
6. He has tried more divorce cases than he has contested criminal cases.	6. He will try all criminal cases speedily.
7. He has allowed the county to expend $20,000 hiring outside lawyers to do work he should have done.	7. He will represent the county in civil suits and save the $20,000 expended during Somerville's term.
8. Last December he swore that he was a citizen of Sulphur, Okla., to save $13.75 on a hunting license.	8. He has never made a false affidavit in his life, and never will.
9. He has recommended $5.00 fines for defendants represented by his brother, when the law fixed the minimum penalty at $100 and 30 days in jail.	9. He will not favor any lawyer or set of lawyers.
10. He is asking a THIRD TERM on this record.	10. His ability and integrity are unquestioned. He has the respect and confidence of those who know him.

Former Brigadier General Driven From Wealth to Dish Washer's Job

QUEBEC, Aug. 24. (UP)—Brig. Gen. Charles Henry Gough, world war hero, started down the chute that led to a job as dish washer in the Chateau Frontenac kitchens by trying his hand in the New York night club warfare, he said today.

The general found the Broadway going too tough and its competitive methods too ruthless for a mere veteran of the Egyptian and Gallipoli campaigns of the world war.

He told about it as he prepared to give up his dish swab and take a better job with the Clarke Steamship company, offered when his plight was made public.

Promoted on the field of battle, General Gough rose from the ranks to a brigadier generalship with the Australian forces. He was demobilized in June, 1919, and made his way to Canada at once, then ran down to New York for a visit. He returned to Canada, but shortly afterwards went back to the United States for a "three weeks' visit," which turned out to be nearer three years.

"I held down executive positions with John Wannamaker & Co., Abraham & Straus, and Gimble Brothers, respectively," he said. "While I also had my own orchestra playing at the Club Polle in New York.

Overstayed Leave

"With my job, my orchestra, and the broadcasting we were doing, I was making about $7,500 a year—not so bad for an old soldier. I would still be there, drawing down that amount, if it had not been for a man whom I will not name, but who informed the immigration authorities in Washington that I had overstayed my leave in America.

"Three months ago I went to Montreal and made application for an executive position. I couldn't find anything at all in Montreal and so feeling in rather a cynical mood, I came to Quebec last week, and here I am."

The general, who was off-duty at the moment, waved an imaginary dish towel.

Given Medals

"I would rather have been allowed to bury my identity and carry on in the quiet," he said. "But of course I can't stay here now.

The warrior-dishwasher's penchant for orchestras was developed by the fact that, born in England in 1884, he joined the British army at the age of 14 as drummer boy. He plays half a dozen musical instruments. Five pieces of shrapnel shattered his thigh at Bullecourt, but the thigh bone of a dead officer was grafted onto his own limb and he walks as erectly as ever.

Among his possessions are a twice-won distinctive conduct medal and a letter of thanks from King George V.

Football Star Held on Theft Charges Jailed

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 23. (US)—"Johnny" Hawkins, former captain of the University of Southern California football team, was remanded to jail today by Superior Judge Edmonds, who refused to continue his bail. Hawkins had already pleaded guilty to five burglary charges out of the 33 held against him by police.

Application for probation was set by his attorney, Joseph Ryan, and the date for the hearing was set for September 13. Hawkins has confessed to numerous burglaries of the homes of friends, but was declared that he was not mentally responsible.

RADIO MAY BE COOK STOVE

Scientist Frys Sausage With Short Waves

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 24. (US)—Just turn on the radio, and fry an egg on it!—or cook a fricassee, or something . . .!

That's the probability that looms in the near future as the result of experiments being conducted by the General Electric company, to test the heat effects of short-wave radio.

It hasn't been generally known, this. But the cat was let out of the bag here today by Dr. Charles Sheard, head of the bio-physical research laboratories of the famous Mayo clinic at Rochester, Minn., and one of the foremost physicists in the world today.

In cooperation with the General Electric, Dr. Sheard revealed on a visit here today, he has been conducting experiments with short waves to determine the heat effects on these waves.

"Only recently," he revealed, "working with wave lengths of six to 10 meters, we have been able to fry sausages simply by letting the electric waves pass through them!"

No Heat Involved

There was no actual heat involved at all, the scientist explained. The sausages were simply hung between two plates, between which the heatless and invisible short length waves passed. As those waves passed through the sausage, the sausage simply cooked, that's all!"

"Then one can broadcast heat precisely as one broadcasts music?" the psyicist was asked.

"It's possible," he agreed.

General Motors investigators had found, said the scientist, that their people working in the vicinity of short wave apparatus developed fevers of 100 to 101 degrees.

"It was purely an artificial fever induced by the short waves," Dr. Sheard explained, "precisely as those waves fried the sausage. If the waves were short enough and intense enough, the humans would have been fried just like the sausage."

At any rate, from the viewpoint of scientific possibility, it's not improbable that some day, soon, you'll be able to broil the family steak on the radio while it plays "there'll be a hot time tonight . . ." On the very same wave that's carrying the cooking heat!

Blasts Theories

You see, X-rays, light, heat, radio are all the same thing, in the final analysis—they're all wave emanations. The difference lies purely in the wave length, Dr. Sheard made plain.

As a matter of fact, you don't need either heat or radio to cook, this science-wizard went on.

"You can cook the white of an egg with ultra-violet light rays!" he said. "That's why people get cataracts."

You see, it's all linked together, all these apparently widely varying matters of light, and radio, and heat, and eye troubles, and colors, and health.

All sorts of experiments conducted with different-colored lights on chickens and plants have given the Mayo scientists a wealth of information about sunlight and ultra-violet rays. They have found, for instance, that the much-touted ultra-violet rays are of absolutely no value to a normal body. There are only of value under abnormal conditions of the body.

"Moreover, ultra-violet rays proving cod-liver oil," explains the docduce exactly the same effect as taktor. "Both produce the vitamin D in the body, and both have the same result—correction of anaemic conditions and malnutrition."

MONUMENT ON SCHOOL YARD

Old Bell Placed Atop Completed Slab

The memory of the Wichita Falls first brick school building, the first of its kind in West Texas, is now perpetuated in a stone monument that will live as long as the city.

The monument, just completed by Taylor Brothers, contractors, according to the plans drawn by Voelcker and Dixon, is in the east portion of the school yard beneath the trees.

Traditions are built into the marker as every bit of material in it was taken from the old "public school" which stood on the same land a few feet away and which was torn down this summer after having been condemned.

The bell that called thousands of present day Wichitans to school when they were children, will ring no more, for it forms the apex of the monument and is cemented to the stones which once were foundation stones of the building.

The gray granite corner stone of the old building has been placed in the monument in the center of the west side, facing the new Austin school.

Otis T. Bacon was mayor of Wichita Falls, and W. E. Brothers, J. C. Zigeler, C. W. Werd and R. E. Huff were the councilmen at the time of the erection of the building, and their names are engraved on the stone.

Raised letters on the old bell, which was made by Meneely and company, at West Troy, N. Y., give the name as the "Public School", Wichita Falls, Texas," and the date as 1890. Mr. Bacon was also mayor then, and the organization of the council was somewhat different from that of today and contained five names instead of four. They were Mr. Huff, Mr. Ward, Mr. Ziegler and J. F. Keller, and J. F. Edwards.

Many Die In Subway Wreck

strewn along the track clear back as far as the stanchon which the car hit. And I could see arms and legs and parts of bodies. It was a frightful vision and I can never forget it."

Back on the Time Square platform, where hundreds were crowded waiting for trains, the people heard the crash, then a shriek, and a shout of terror; the thundering of the derailed cars as they plunged along the track; and the hiss of the short-lived fire; all in such a brief space of time none could tell what sound had followed the other.

Girl's Story

The cries were echoed from the crowd on the subway platform. Like sheep, the people crowded towards the end of the station from which the terrifying sounds had come; then turned and fought for the exits.

"I heard the shrieking and saw the smoke coming from the tunnel," said Katherine Kelly of Astoria, N. Y., who was on the platform. "Then I started for the exit and soon I was on the street, I don't know how I got there."

Miss Kelly's experience was typical of hundreds. Few could remember details.

It was in the center of that part of the city which quits work at 5 o'clock, has dinner, and gives itself up to the theaters, the night clubs, and the flea-circuses for the night—The Great White Way.

Firemen and police crowded down the narrow stairways leading underground and soon the stretchers began coming back up. One by one, they were borne to ambulances and the injured carried away to the hospitals.

Mayor Arrives

Then came the clang of fire engines, ambulances, police wagons on the street above and behind them, the rush of crowds—thousands upon thousands of people poured from uptown Manhattan's buildings onto the streets, their day's work done. They pressed toward the scene as whispers of disaster passed.

Here and there would come a stretcher with the form upon it still. Apparently that was someone dead and the early crowd would draw back a little. Soon police had driven everyone away and there was no more peering by the curious.

Just before 6 o'clock Mayor Walker arrived. He was not a wisecracking mayor, nor was he late. Soberly, with hands twitching nervously, he stepped down the stairway, with police, and in the next half hour he went as far as he could penetrate through the scene of wreckage below.

Cause Unknown

Then he came out and in the midst of a group of newspapermen said: "There will be an investigation. I find the deputy chief inspector in charge of police had all the apparatus and all men who can be used at the scene within a few minutes after the accident and the fire department did equally well.

"The cause of the accident no one knows. No opinion will be formed until all officials have reported."

By The Record News Critic

Theatrical news was made in Wichita Falls Friday, when "The Lights of New York," the world's first complete "all talker" was presented at the Strand theater for the first time. The picture, in addition to being the first of its kind, is the only one of its kind which has been made to date. It is now being presented in its first showing in New York city The highest praise is given to the play, and everyone is urged to see it.

There is nothing in past photoplay history with which to compare the new production.

Radically different from anything that has ever been attempted, the picture is a combination of the acting, "business" and speaking as known on the legitimate stage, combined with the pantomime and the art of telling a story in action of the movie world.

A difference that will be at once noticeable is the absence of subtitles throughout the picture. Another difference, not noticed unless watched for, is that characters tell in dialog what in the past has been told by showing the picture of certain action that is described in words in "The Lights of New York."

An example of this is where the boy, along with his small town pal, talks his mother into letting him have $5000 with which to go into the barber business in New York. Two Gotham crooks are in on the conversation, and the little old lady consents. She tells them she trusts them implicitly. In the movies of old, this would have been told by showing the picture of the old lady going to the bank with her son, drawing out her $5000 and giving it to him while the crooks looked on with greed.

Astonishing in its combination of the two arts, the stage and the screen, "The Lights of New York" tells an interesting story of the New York underworld.

Those who are used to legitimate stage plays will recognize at once the fact that it is the stage play with comparatively few scenes transferred to the screen, and that the pictures of actors seem to talk instead of the actors themselves talking.

Those who are used to the movies will note a smaller amount of action that they are used to and a smaller number of scenes. They will be astonished to realize, on thinking it over, that while they are not used to the talking movies, the show ran along so smoothly that they did not notice any hitch after it was once started.

The marvel of it is that the combination has been effected as easily as it was.

Allred Closes Stumping Campaign At Iowa Park; Praises Hudson

Special to The Record News.

IOWA PARK, Aug. 24.—Declaring he "would keep weeping wives and babies out of the courtroom," as a measure of enforcing an atmosphere of impartiality for the benefit of the jurors, Ben P. Allred, in his closing campaign speech tonight, outlined in the main his platform upon which he seeks to defeat Judge W. W. Cook for reelection as presiding magistrate of the 78th district court.

Allred wound up his stumping tour before an audience of more than 200 persons who had assembled in Knox park.

In his final plea, he assured the voters that, if elected, he would try criminal cases. He asserted that Judge Cook had not tried any number of cases of this nature. He further promised that he would require attorneys before the bar to make applications for continuance of trials in writing, and would speed up trials that came into his court. Finally, he promised to "keeep jurors busy."

Diverting for the moment, Allred praised the editorial comment of C. C. Hudson, vitriolic exponent of "action" in the courts of Wichita county, and editor of the Iowa Park Herald.

The candidate was introduced by James V. Allred, his brother, who said he "pleaded guilty to the charge that he wanted to see his brother in the office."

The schools of Wichita County are outstanding. Our schools did not use the standardization card because it was intended to boost very elemental school conditions.

Our schools had advanced far beyond this test of standardization before it was used.

Ask the school people of Wichita County about Burl Bryant. Practically every teacher under his supervision is supporting him.

Burl Bryant's record speaks for itself in Wichita County and the State of Texas.

SCHOOL TERM PLANS MADE

College Will Receive Students at Once

Every boy and girl in Wichita Falls is looking forward to Sept. 10. Many a fishing, swimming and diving hole will then be neglected and the schoolgrounds will swarm with thousands of the children of the ctiy, for that is the day the public schools open.

A slight increase in enrollment is expected this year, according to W. W. Brown, business manager of the school board. Just how large the increase will be, Mr. Brown did not say.

The public grade schools will enroll the pupils and start classes at once on Monday Sept. 10.

The Zundelowitz and Reagan junior high schools expect to hold open house for the new pupils Thursday and Friday, Sept. 6 and 7. The old pupils of these schools will come to school Monday, Sept. 10.

The boys and girls of the senior high school who attend class at the Junior college building may confer with Dean S. H. Rider at any time now, and are urged by the dean to get their courses arranged at the earliest possible date. It was explained that the Junior college entrance examinations and registrations take up practically all of the time Sept 7, 8, 9 and 10, which will mean that the senior high school pupils who do not register before Monday, Sept. 10 will have to wait a day or two to enroll.

In the Junior college itself, the entrance examinations will be held Friday and Saturday, Sept. 7 and 8. Students will register Sept. 8 and 10. Active class work will start Tuesday, Sept. 11.

A 50-page bulletin giving the schedule of oourses and other like information for the Junior college has been issued and is available to all prospective pupils.

in the dining room and who saw them go out of the door. Riggs said he had two thoughts. He put them both into effect at once when he ran faster than he ever ran before, to the sheriff's office in the court house 200 feet away and reported to Sheriff Bralley.

The surrounding towns were notified, and the river bridge into Oklahoma, the county around Electra where Tom Shook was living, and all cities were warned with a description of the men.

Tom Shook is one of the most noted prisoners ever to occupy the county jail. He is known to practically every peace officer in Texas because of his long service as a peace officer in Wichita Falls and later in Electra.

He is of small stature, has glittering eyes and a set of gold teeth.

The U. S. Army claimed Shook during the war, and he was discharged in 1918. He was a police officer in Wichita Falls from 1919 to 1923 and was noted for his lack of fear. It was said of Shook that force or circumstances could never make him do anything he did not want to do.

He joined the Electra police force uin 1923 and served in that capacity until April 1926 when he became Electra's chief of police. He resigned this position in April 1927.

Shook was indicted by the special grand jury in the 78th district court Friday, Aug. 11, following the fatal stabbing of W. O. Daugherty at Electra, Aug. 9. It was because of this indictment that he was in jail at the time of the escape Friday.

Other indictments for which Shook was facing trial at the time of the escape were: burglary of the Grand theater at Electra; burglary of the King news stand at Electra; robbery of a clerk at the Jefferson hotel at Electra and driving an automobile while intoxicated.

This is the fourth break from the county jail this year. In the last break, on June 24, Henry Shumate, Robert Moore and Jeff Whitt walked from the jail at daybreak. It was this break which ultimately led to the arrest and filing of charges against Shook and Pryor.

On the morning of June 25, Shumate was surprised by Sheriff W. G. Bralley, while sleeping with Pryor, at that time Electra constable. Pryor and Shook were arrested and brought to Wichita Falls. Charges of concealing a criminal were filed against them and later they were indicted on a charge of burglary. The other indictments followed in early August.

Whitt recently was recaptured in Arkansas, but Moore still is at large.

Shipley Girl Shows Slight Improvement

Miss Eulah Shipley, who was seriously injured in a fall from a fourth story window in a downtown office building last Monday, was thoubht to be in a slightly improved condition at the Wichit-aFalls Clinic hospital Friday night. Physicians, however, hold but litle hope for her recovery.

Miss Shipley suffered a broken back, body bruises and fractures in both legs in the drop to the concrete sidewalk when she fell from a window during a fainting spell.

GREENSBURG, Pa., Aug. 24. (INS)—Between six and seven thousand persons thronged the Pennsylvania station and tracks here to see and hear Herbert Hoover when the Republican presidential nominee's train made an eight-minute stop en route to Washington.

You liked him in "The Noose." You applauded him as the conceited but lovable fighter in "The Patent Leather Kid."

You'll rave about his dual role characterizations in this screen version of Fannie Hurst's masterful drama, of the destiny of twin brothers.

TO MY FRIENDS AND THE CITIZENS OF THE 30th JUDICIAL DISTRICT—COMPRISING THE COUNTIES OF ARCHER, YOUNG AND WICHITA:

You have been good to me and I deeply appreciate it. I have given my whole heart to this work, and while serving as FIRST ASSISTANT DISTRICT ATTORNEY, I tried to show my appreciation in a substantial way by rendering you conscientious, faithful and effective service. YOU ARE THE JUDGES OF WHETHER I HAVE DONE SO.

In asking you to promote me to the office of District Attorney, I am asking you TO JUDGE WHAT I WILL DO BY WHAT I HAVE DONE. I PLEDGE YOU THE SAME HONEST, FAITHFUL AND ENERGETIC ADMINISTRATION OF THE OFFICE WHICH I HAVE GIVEN IN THE PAST.

I WISH TO STATE EMPHATICALLY THAT I AM NOT ALIGNED WITH ANY CLIQUE; AM UNDER NO OBLIGATIONS, AND HAVE MADE NO PROMISES. IF ELECTED, I WILL ENTER THE OFFICE OPEN HANDED AND PROMISE YOU A NEW ADMINISTRATION, SELECTED WITH FAIRNESS AND TO THE BEST ADVANTAGE OF THE OFFICE DURING THE NEXT TWO YEARS.

As I owe my victory in the First Primary to my friends and citizens, so I am entirely dependent upon you for success at this time. I want you to know that I am, and always shall be most grateful.
