FNB president responds to rumors

'Support, confidence' sought

By DAVID C. SODAMANN
Business-Energy Editor and JULIE FAUBEL
Business-Energy Writer

Responding to what many are calling a "run" on troubled First National Bank, Thomas J. Wageman, the bank's new president and chief executive officer, said this morning FNB would not let the community down.

"We and Midland are inseparable. That is why in these difficult times we are working so hard and cheerfully to serve our customers and develop and execute our capital plan."

Wageman made his remarks during today's early morning press conference hastily called in an effort to clear up rumors questioning the bank's ability to continue operations. In response to those rumors Thusday, hundreds, if not thousands, of people filled the bank's lobby, many withdrawing large sums in cash. However, many were known to be making deposits and opening new accounts.

"We're important to Midland," Wageman said. "That's a heavy responsibility. We are the beneficiaries of a legacy of 93 years. That's a big plus, but it's also a heavy responsibility. We will not let that legacy bear heavy on our shoulders, we will wear it lightly. And we will continue to give the best of our talents and our energy to our cutomers today, as we did yesterday, as we did the day before.

"I believe that we've earned the support and confidence of this community and of our depositors. In the past we were givers. It was our good fortune to be able to give. The community benefited and prospered. Now we need that support to be returned to us."

The financially strapped institution has called a special shareholders meeting October 14 to consider a new capital plan needed to keep the bank operational.

"Our capital plan will come before our share holders...and with their approval we will begin the program to raise capital for the bank. This program and the progress we're making on other fronts will give us what we want most, and that is to contine to serve our customers and this community," Wageman said.

In its proxy statement to shareholders the bank said of the proposed offering, "There can be no assurance that the funds, if any, raised by the proposed offering and the additional funds, if any, raised by any subsequent equity offering will be sufficient to absorb future loan losses of losses from operation or to permit the bank to generate net income. Further, there can be no assurance given that the Federal Reserve will continue its funding assistance, whether or not the bank completes any such equity offerings."

Bad loans — primarily to the recession-plagued oil and gas industry — have sapped FNB's strength. Deposits are dwindling, having dropped by 31.7 percent between Dec. 31, 1982 to $965.8 million June 30, 1983; and by an additional 39.6 percent to $854 million on Aug. 31, 1982, according to the proxy statment.

The bank is relying on loans from the Federal Reserve System to help make up for these lost deposits. It has borrowed a $535 million, as of Sept. 30, out of an allowed limit, according to the proxy statement, of $610 million.

The bank says in the proxy statement, "The Federal Reserve could terminate its funding assistance at any time, followed by action by the Comptoller of the Currency to declare the bank insolvent."

Wageman said the use of the word "emergency" to describe the upcoming shareholders meeting, and during which this problem will be addressed, is "inflamatory."

Wageman said he is confident shareholders will approve the new capital plan, but would not speculate about what might happen to the bank, and how soon it might happen, if the capital plan is not approved.

Wageman criticized, at length, press coverage of the bank's planned meeting and interpretation of the proxy statement sent shareholders.

(See FNB, Page 2A)

"We and Midland are inseparable. That is why in these difficult times we are working so hard and cheerfully to serve our customers and develop and execute our capital plan."

"This event and...information contained in the proxy have been extensively reported.... But I don't believe the story has been reported in a complete and coherent way."

"I would not call it a run on the bank. There have been a lot of people here in the bank."

Businessmen rally to support 'old friend'

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

It's their turn to help an old friend, reasoned a number of local business leaders this morning who were shoring up the pillars of support for The First National Bank of Midland.

Overnight, these people organized a petition campaign to gain names of persons who still support the bank in light of its money problems and its investigation by two federal agencies. In addition, other businessmen are asking friends and employees to deposit money in the bank or to open an account. Reports by these organizers showed they were getting widespread backing.

The reasoning behind the effort is to turn around the run on the bank that started Thursday.

"The bank has been a neighbor and a friend," commented George T. Conly of Laguna Petroleum. His wife, Trina, thought up the idea of public support Thursday night.

"I believe in the Old West tradition of helping our neighbors and friends when they're in trouble. This bank has been one of the greatest assets this town has had in almost 100 years."

At the same time, Gerald Nobles Jr. of EF Hutton and a co-worker came up with a similar idea. The two joined forces this morning to gather signatures.

"We're trying to get people to remember the day when local banks made Midland what it is. A bank failure would make local companies and individuals pay off their loans immediately. Regardless of people's bank affiliation, if FNB failed it would affect everyone.

"I would like to stress to the people they need to sit down and think what a bank failure would do," said Nobles. Those people who lined up in the FNB lobby Thursday and this morning to withdraw cash are the ones who would cause the bank to fail, he said. "They're making matters worse."

Thursday afternoon, several persons questioned by the Reporter-Telegram about why they were at the bank brought several replies that they were withdrawing cash for the three-day weekend with Columbus Day being celebrated Monday.

Frank Villa said he was depositing his paycheck and Bryan Parks was taking out money for the weekend. Both said they had heard rumors about the bank, but neither was too concerned.

Glenn Little, a stockbroker, said he'd had calls from New York offices Thursday morning to take their money out of FNB and he refused. "Their money is staying here and I intend to continue making deposits here."

Jan Foust, on the phone this morning trying to obtain names for the petition, said she was disgusted with the people who went to the bank, drank the free coffee and tea and then withdrew their accounts.

One man who watched the boom in 1981 when people poured into Midland from across the country to sink their toes into the black gold petroleum industry also was horrified that the public went running to withdraw their money.

"I was shocked people would react like that; I can't understand it," said Ed Thompson, executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association. "This bank has given support to the community down through the years," he said, listing Midland Community Theatre, the symphony, ballet, museums and his own association. "And to individuals when other people wouldn't help them."

"I think we all ought to pull together in solving our problems instead of creating new ones."

Bill Morrow with Magnatex had joined the Conly-Nobles effort this morning. Downtown employees were asked to make a deposit in their accounts at FNB or to open up an account there, he said, emphasizing that no one was forced to do it.

Looking back to the day he arrived in Midland 16 years ago, Morrow said if it hadn't been for FNB he would have left town.

"I came here with nothing. Everything I have is because of this town and that bank. They've been instrumental in my life."

Like the others, Morrow couldn't sit back and watch the scores withdraw their money. "This bank has helped build this town; they deserve our support just like supported us."

Another man added, "We sort of arrogantly abused that bank. They've been a bulwark in the community."

Ralph Way, one of those who signed the petition, said he felt the bank's leaders had done a good job in disclosing the bank's problems to the public. "They're doing everything they can to make the bank work. They've admitted they made some errors, and they're working to correct it."

'This bank has done so much for Midland'

By CAROLYN FITZ-GERALD

It was Thursday, Oct. 6, and the scene at the First National Bank was reminiscent of the first days of the Great Depression when many banks failed and numerous Americans lost their cash, their homes and their hopes for the future.

It was like sale day at J.C. Penney as customers waited for the doors to open Thursday. During the day lines increased. The tenor of the crowd was serious. They spoke in low tones that are usually reserved for funeral home viewing rooms.

Many were small depositors who were closing out checking accounts and filling out savings withdrawal slips. Some accounts were for as little as $600 and nearly all were for amounts that would have been protected by the FDIC. But they were afraid.

"It's all I have," said one woman. "And even if it's covered, they may close for a week and we couldn't make it."

There were also some depositors.

One independent oil man sent over $50,000 in lease payments early. Others just came to look. A geologist who offices in the building said that he came down every hour just to watch. He shook his head. "It's a sad thing," he said. "this bank has done so much for Midland; the symphony, the library, the schools...." His voice trailed off.

What was felt at the bank was also felt over the rest of the city as attorneys and accountants were flooded with calls from clients wanting reassurance that their money was protected.

A West Texas oil heir, who noted she was on her way to Odessa, said: "I've talked to my accountant. I've already withdrawn most of what I have; I left about $500."

Some left hundreds on deposit. Some left thousands as if they were reluctant to totally desert an old friend.

In a local dress shop, an Odessa physician's wife commented: "Don't Midlanders realize that the First National Bank made Midland what it is today? There's no reason for panic."

On Friday there were more lines, and the tone was the same. A hush hung over the terrazzo-floored lobby. A weathered old man in boots and a western shirt sighed, "It's a shame that Jno. P. lived to see this happen."

Nicaragua protests 'generous assistance' of U.S.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — A captured rebel pilot claims CIA officers are directing anti-government attacks from Honduran bases, prompting Nicaragua to protest the "generous assistance" provided to the rebels by Washington.

At a Managua news conference Thursday, Nicaragua's Deputy Foreign Minister Nora Astorga presented the man, identified as former National Guard Maj. Roberto Amador Narvaez, as "proof of the growing involvement of the CIA" in rebel attacks on targets in the leftist-ruled country.

His claims could not be confirmed independently.

The Honduran-based rebels, meanwhile, said they mined the coast off Nicaragua's only oil unloading port and threatened to blow up any approaching oil tanker.

Also in Honduras, police said Nicaraguan troops attacked the border town of Las Dificultades and killed a civilian, the latest in a series of border incidents that has strained relations between the neighboring nations.

And in El Salvador, an army spokesman said Thursday that U.S.-trained troops trapped a guerrilla column in an abandoned resort and killed 157 of them. He said troops surprised the rebsl Tuesday at Amapulapa, 40 miles east of San Salvador.

Mrs. Astorga said the rebel pilot, whose plane was shot down Monday 90 miles north of Managua, was a member of the Honduran-based Nicaraguan Democratic Force. Many leaders of the Force are former officers of the national guard of late President Anastasio Somoza, a U.S.-backed rightist who was deposed by the Sandinistas in 1979.

House panel approves emergency livestock feed plan

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Just hours after two Upton County farmers pleaded for help, a House panel Thursday approved a measure that requires the Agriculture Department to provide emergency feed for drought-stricken livestock producers.

"You watch the drought eat on you like terminal cancer," Upton County sheep rancher Duane Lindsay said during testimony before the panel. "You try harder for survival, but it's still there."

The House Agriculture conservation, credit and rural development subcommittee put a $500 million cap on the amount of money USDA could spend to provide livestock and poultry producers with feed from government stocks.

The department currently holds 75 million bushels of grain for such emergencies, but has decided not to use the grain because there isn't enough to handle the drought-stricken areas.

Under the measure, producers could buy a bushel of government grain for 75 percent of the federal commodity loan rate charged in their county. Producers in areas where grain is not available, would split the cost of buying and shipping the grain with the government.

The legislation, approved unanimously, included a section that requires the Farmers Home Administration to judge disaster assistance on an individual basis.

Currently, the FmHA requires 30 percent of all crops in one county to be destroyed, or 30 percent of a major crop in a county to be destroyed before disaster assitance is provided.

Everett Rank, USDA administrator, remarked, "In the face of the criticism the Administration and Congresshas already received over the amount of money now spent on farm programs, it is imperative that we draw the line at some point."

Campers make own history

By JOHN M. DOYLE
Associated Press Writer

ROCHESTER, Ind. — Frenchy, clad in the black cocked hat, knee breeches and moccasins of an 18th-century fur trader, winced and squeezed the tomahawk in his belt when he spied the snack food box beside the campfire.

"Please get those out of sight," he told the buckskin-clad woman making dinner outside the tent. "I don't want to see anything modern. Anything that says 1983, no plastic coolers or beer cans. We're trying to create an atmosphere."

Known most days as Bob Kuyoth, 42, Frenchy is one of a growing group of hobbyists who spend their weekends faithfully recreating the clothing, food and lifestyle of our pioneer ancestors, right down to the last musket ball.

He and thousands like him will gather on the banks of the Wabash River this weekend for the Feast of the Hunter's Moon, a two-day event considered one of the nation's outstanding historical festivals. Sponsored by the Tippecanoe County Historical Society, it is held at Fort Ouiatenon, the site of an 18th-century French outpost in the New World.

Last year, 55,000 visitors enjoyed the efforts of 4,500 participants portraying 18th-century Indiana frontier life. The secret of the feast's success is the attention paid to detail — all participants are screened and monitored by a quality control committee to be sure they maintain an authentic reflection of the period.

Kuyoth, a respiratory therapist in real life, was "booshway" at last month's Trail of Courage Rendezvous, a living history festival near Rochester, which means he ensured that the the 20th century did not intrude into the historical recreation.

"I've always been interested in primitive camping since my days in the Boy Scouts," said Kuyoth, who has been a living history enthusiast for the last six years. "I just took my camping and interest in history and put it together."

Deficits clouding outlook

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP) — The nation's economy should continue expanding next year at a healthy clip, but large budget and foreign trade deficits cloud the picture, according to a forecast released today by the nation's business chiefs.

The forecast prepared for the fall meeting of the 200-member Business Council said, "The recovery has gathered momentum and our consultants are confident it can be sustained" through 1984.

"At this point, the outlook is very optimistic," said John R. Opel, chairman of IBM Corp., in presenting the forecast put together by 20 economists at major corporations.

The business economists predicted the economy would grow 3.1 percent, adjusted for inflation, in 1983 and 4.8 percent in 1984. The Reagan administration is predicting a similar growth rate this year and a slight rise next year.

"Two dark clouds in the picture cannot be overlooked, however," the report said. "They are ... deficits in the U.S. federal budget and in the U.S. foreign trade balance."

It also said employment should improve over the coming year "but not nearly enough to erase unemployment as a critical public issue."

Interest rates, still at high levels after adjustment for inflation, drew a question mark in the consensus forecast.

Opel said the economists' predictions varied widely on the future path of the prime rate — the barometer of commercial bank lending fees. Two of the 20 forecasters looked for the prime rate, now at 11 percent, to remain steady through the end of 1984.

"The remaining 18 are split equally between rising and falling rates. Obviously, the uncertainty on this issue is very, very great," said Opel. The prediction averaged 11.3 percent, he said.

While the forecast was generally upbeat, some business executives said certain industries have yet to share in this year's rebound.

Ruben F. Mettler, chairman of TRW Inc., said the recovery "is dramatically lopsided."

"On Tuesday, Oct. 4, we mailed a notice of a special meeting of shareholders and a proxy statemment of that meeting to all our shareholders. This event and bits and pieces of information contained in the proxy have been extensively reported in the media. But I don't believe the story has been reported in a complete and coherent way," Wageman said.

The bank announced its intention to raise new capital in August.

"The share holders meetings set for Oct. 14 and the proxy statement for that meeting are the logical and required first steps in any such plan.

"This meeting has been reported as an emergency meeting. Nothing could be further from the truth. It has been organized and scheduled as part of our capital plan, which began in August. The reporting of this part of our program has, up to now, not reflected essential elements of what we're doing; elements included and available in the proxy.

Listing elements he believed had not been properly reported Wageman said:

"1. We've begun the process we promised in August to prepare to make an offering of equity to the public in order to raise capital. This program is organized, methodical. It is supported by top-notch professional talent. It in no way reflects an emergency as has been reported.

"2. Present holders of $20 million of subordinated debt will be given the opportunity to have that debt redeamed and to replace it with a like amount of equity. So that $20 million of debt on which the bank is presently paying to the holders interest, can be converted to equity on which the bank will not pay interest — an important building block in our plan.

"3. Certain of our directors have agreed to ensure that the public offering, if it is approved by our shareholders, will raise at least $20 million of new equity — a second important building block in our plan.

"These two actions," Wageman said, "will ensure that our equity account will grow by $40 million in conjunction with our public offering of stock. I believe that speaks the best way I know of to the committment of our board to the health and vitality of the bank and to its mission of service to the people of our community."

Although the bank's lobby Thursday was filled to capacity with people anxious to transact business, and bank officers viewing the crowds were visibly nervous, Wageman did not concede at the press conference there has been a "flurry of activity" at the bank.

"There has't been a flurry of activity," Wageman said. "We've had 'unusual' activity in the bank."

Wageman did not know how much money was withdrawn from the bank Thursday. He did say more money was withdrawn than deposited and he expected that would also be the case Friday.

"I can tell you that long lines, obviously, are a definitional word. What is long? We had 'waiting periods' at our teller counter.

"I would not call it a run on the bank," Wageman said. "There have been a lot of people here in the bank."

Striking copper miners shore up Arizona dikes

By ARTHUR H. ROTSTEIN
Associated Press Writer

Striking copper workers helped shore up dikes ravaged by flooding that left 15 people dead or missing in southern Arizona as Texas was battered by heavy thunderstorms packing 80 mph winds.

The National Weather Service warned Thursday that Tropical Depression Priscilla could dump an inch of rain on Arizona by Saturday. Some mountain areas could receive more than 2 inches.

The weather service called Priscilla "a potentially dangerous weather situation, especially in view of the amount of rain and flooding that has occurred in Arizona during the past week or two."

Thunderstorms plowed into western Texas on Thursday afternoon, dumping heavy rain and knocking out power amid winds that ranged as high as 80 mph in Aspermont, in Stonewall County, which had 2½ inches of rain.

Three Texas counties — Haskell, Jones and Shackelford — were under severe thunderstorm warnings today. Power lines were downed in the southern portion of Stonewall County.

Raging waters from heavy rainfall last week and this week have caused an estimated $300 million in damage in Arizona.

Britons not concerned by Parkinson's affair

LONDON (AP) — Britons, used to the peccadilloes of their politicians since Lord Palmerston's bedroom romps in Queen Victoria's reign, are shrugging off a Cabinet member's confession he had an affair with his secretary and she is expecting his child.

The scandal involving Trade Minister Cecil Parkinson shows no sign of weakening the government of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, but it is likely to end the political stardom of the Conservatives' disgraced "Mr. Clean."

The urbane Parkinson, 52, who masterminded Mrs. Thatcher's landslide re-election victory last June, had been widely mentioned as a future Conservative Party leader.

Mrs. Thatcher and other leading Conservatives have declined comment on the episode.

Parkinson admitted in a statement Wednesday that he'd had a long affair with his former secretary, Sara Keays, 36, and had promised to marry her, but has since returned to his wife and three daughters.

He braved a crowd of reporters and photographers Thursday to attend a Cabinet meeting and work at his desk in the Trade Ministry.

With his pale-faced wife Ann at his side, he told reporters outside his London home: "We'll get over it."

But the mass-circulation Sun tabloid asked: "Will he be able to last out the week?"

Newspapers reported that Parkinson confessed to Mrs. Thatcher several months ago, giving her time to move him out as party chairman to the Trade Ministry to distance the party machine from the scandal when it broke.

But many Britons did not appear unduly troubled by the latest in a long chain of scandals in high places.

"What's all the fuss about?" one man commented during a phone-in on London's Capital Radio. "Everyone's at it anyway."

"The man's a fool, but at least he's gone back to his wife and kids," said office cleaner Gladys Lyndon. "She's probably making his life hell, so he's paying for what he's done. But he shouldn't have promised to marry the girl."

Nicholas Fairbairn, a Conservative legislator ditched by Mrs. Thatcher as Scotland's solicitor-general last year after he confessed to a romance with his secretary, urged Parkinson not to quit.

Soviets say new arms plan would 'intensify' race

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — The latest U.S. proposal for reducing long-range nuclear warheads is on the bargaining table, but the Soviet Union says the plan would only intensify the arms race.

U.S. negotiator Edward L. Rowny formally presented the new offer to his Soviet counterpart, Victor L. Karpov, as the fifth round of the year-old strategic arms reduction talks (START) resumed Thursday.

The talks are separate from the parallel INF, or Intermediate Range Nuclear Force negotiations on limiting medium-range missiles in Europe, but both sides agree the two are linked.

Rowny and Karpov, whose next session is scheduled for Tuesday, did not make any comment after the two-hour, 50-minute meeting Thursday at the Soviet Mission.

In Moscow, however, the Communist Party newspaper Pravda denounced the new U.S. proposals as an attempt to continue the arms race "along the channels of improving the quality of missiles and bombers."

A day earlier, the official news agency Tass dismissed the plan as a "cover up" for an American arms buildup and termed its wording "vague, obscure and unclear."

The United States proposes that the Americans and Soviets annually reduce their long-range missile stockpiles by 5 percent and retire old systems as new ones are deployed. It also offers to negotiate limits on long-range bombers and air-launched cruise missiles.

The Soviets previously offered to limit both sides to a total of 1,800 missiles and bombers. The United States has 1,600 missiles to the Soviets' 2,340.

The Soviet news agency Novosti, in a commentary delivered Thursday to The Associated Press, said the proposal does not affect U.S. plans for new weapons systems, which it characterized as increasing U.S. potential for a devastating first nuclear strike.

Novosti also said President Reagan's Sept. 29 speech to the United Nations on medium-range nuclear weapons talks was "far from constructive."

Reagan offered to negotiate reductions in the number of U.S. medium-ranger missiles NATO plans to deploy starting in December, and said he was willing to consider ways of addressing Soviet demands that nuclear-capable U.S. bombers stationed in Western Europe also be reduced.

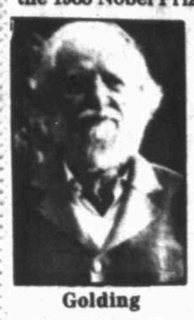
Golding's choice for Nobel somewhat surprising

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — British writer William Golding, who wrote "Lord of the Flies" and other novels depicting the dark side of human nature, won the 1983 Nobel Prize in literature Thursday.



Golding

The Swedish Nobel Committee cited Golding's novels for their clarity, diversity, and "universality of myth" that "illuminate the human condition in the world today." Deceptively simple narratives make his work popular and accessible to most readers, they said, yet gives scholars much to think about.

However, one of the members of the Nobel academy was quoted as saying that, for the first time in the history of the award, the committee was "deeply divided" on the selection.

Swedish writer Artur Lundkvist was quoted as telling the newspaper Dagens Nyheter that Golding "is quite a decent author, but hardly in Nobel prize class.... Internationally, he is of no importance whatsoever."

Lundkvist was quoted as citing French author Claude Simon as an example of a writer of an "immeasurably higher class."

The academy's permanent secretary, Lars Gyllensten, was quoted as saying Lundkvist's statement was probably based on a misunderstanding and that this year's decision produced no more dissent than in previous years.

London Times literary editor Philip Howard called Golding one of the three great living British novelists, along with Graham Greene and Anthony Burgess. "He is a very powerful novelist and it's a good award," Howard said. "I don't always feel that about the Nobel Prize, but I do this time."

"I really am delighted," Golding said by telephone from his cottage in Wiltshire, England.

Pointing out that it was the first Nobel literature award to a Briton since Winston Churchill won in 1953, he said "In a sense one can say I'm in extraordinary company.... I have enough old-fashioned patriotism to be glad not just for myself but because the prize has been won after 30 years by an Englishman."

Golding, 72, wrote stories from the time he was 7, but did not begin his professional writing career until he was 43, with the publication of his best-known novel "Lord of the Flies."

The nightmarish story of a group of English schoolboys stranded on an island traces their degeneration from a state of innocence to one of blood lust and savagery.

It sold millions of copies in Britain and later in the United States, where it became something of a classic among college students in the 1960s.

In its citation, the Nobel Committee said "'Lord of the Flies' was a bestseller in a way that is usually granted only to adventure stories, light reading and children's books."

Churchill was the last Briton to win the literature prize. Bulgarian-born writer Elias Canetti, who won the prize in 1981, has lived for many years in Britain but writes in German.

Previous British winners were Rudyard Kipling, George Bernard Shaw, John Galsworthy, T.S. Eliot and Bertrand Russell.

Among Golding's later works are "The Inheritors," "Pincher Martin," "Free Fall," "The Spire," "The Pyramid," and "The Scorpion God." His most recent works are the novels "Darkness Visible' in 1979 and "Rites of Passage" in 1980, and a book of essays entitled "The Moving Target" last year.

"Rites of Passage," about life aboard a 19th century ship sailing from England to Australia, won the 1980 Booker McConnell Prize, Britain's top literary award.

Golding's name had not been prominently mentioned in speculation about this year's prize. The names most mentioned were Britons Greene and Burgess, South African Nadine Gordimer, American Joyce Carol Oates and Marguerite Yourcenar of France.

Critic withdraws charge of Nobel 'coup'

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — The head of the Swedish Academy said today that member Artur Lundkvist, critical of the academy's choice for the Nobel prize in literature, "has beaten a retreat" and acknowledged that William Golding was a worthy winner.

Lundkvist told journalists that Golding was "hardly in Nobel prize class" and that he himself had been the victim of a "coup" by which Golding was unfairly voted winner Thursday of the 1983 literature award.

But Lars Gyllensten, permanent secretary of the academy, told The Associated Press this morning that Lundkvist had backed off from his dissenting position.

"Last night I was in contact with Lundkvist to find out what he has actually said," Gyllensten related. "He has beaten a retreat and acknowledged that Golding is worthy of the prize.

"He also admitted that there has been no 'coup' against him and his choice."

Lundkvist's wife Maria Wine told The AP her husband would make no further statements to the press.

Lundkvist's remarks, carried in the national newspaper Dagens Nyheter, were an apparent breach of the academy's code of silence about Nobel deliberations.

Lundkvist reportedly claimed there had been an extra voting session in which he had not been present before the final meeting on Thursday before the award was announced.

He explained that two voting sessions took place, on Sept. 22 and Thursday, and that Lundkvist was present for both of them. The body met one other time, he said, and Lundkvist, who was not present, mistakenly thought members had voted.

Negotiations continue in Chicago, Oakland

By The Associated Press

Negotiations between school officials and striking teachers continued in Chicago and Oakland, Calif., where a total of nearly half a million students have been idled by the walkouts, while picket lines went up in a fourth Michigan district.

Meanwhile, Pennsylvania's lone strike entered its 14th day Thursday, and 4,100 Boston teachers continued working without a contract.

In Chicago, a stalemate in talks eased Thursday when Chicago Teachers Union representatives agreed for the first time that the issue of wage increases would give way to bargaining on concessions such as class size, health care, sick days and other matters.

However, union President Robert M. Healey said that did not mean the union would accept any of the proposed concessions, and the union spurned school officials' plea officials to reopen classes for 436,000 students that have been interrupted since 27,000 union members and 11,000 support staff members went on strike Monday.

The two sides negotiated for 3½ hours Thursday and agreed to reconvene at noon Friday, officials said.

Oakland Mayor Lionel Wilson met with teachers and district representatives Thursday in an effort to end the three-day strike which has all but stopped instruction at city schools. Afterwards, it was announced that talks between the Oakland Unified School District and the 3,500-member Oakland Education Association, which had broken off Wednesday, would resume.

But at the same time, 4,000 teachers and strike supporters rallied and marched to City Hall, and the union charged that the latest district offer is "a slap in the face to the students of Oakland."

Administration officials said only about 12,000 of the district's 49,000 students showed up for school Thursday, a 25 percent drop from the previous day. And 40 more teachers joined the boycott, meaning only 380 of the district's 2,500 teachers went to work.

Picket lines went up Thursday in the Kingston, Mich., public schools, bringing the total to 1,386 teachers and 28,240 students idled by strikes in four school districts in that state. Strikes also continued in Wayne County's Plymouth-Canton schools, Walled Lake in Oakland County and Monroe County's Carleton-Airport district.

But Joliet, Ill., teachers were back in school Thursday after a 13-day strike was settled Wednesday night.

Teachers also set up picket lines Thursday in the southern Illinois district of Cairo, but school remained open for the 1,300 students.

Boston teachers and school officials said they have made their last compromise as both sides agreed Wednesday to discontinue talks with mediator Arnold Zack.

Reagan speaks to Republican women's group

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — President Reagan's economic policies have been a major contribution to women, say leaders of the National Federation of Republican Women who are trying to combat a perceived gender gap in the president's popularity.

An audience of some 2,000 delegates to the GOP group's convention expected to hear Reagan laud his administration's economic policies, particularly their effect on women, in his address today to the gathering.

The president was a natural choice as speaker for the convention based on the theme, "Economic Recovery: Closing the Gap," organizers say.

"I THINK THE BEST THING the president has done for women is the economy," said federation president Betty Rendel of Peru, Ind. "Women will vote their pocketbooks."

Huda Jones of Beattyville, Ky., a vice president of the national federation, agreed.

"Reagan has said all along his policies would work," Mrs. Jones said. "Now that things are looking better ... he really was right."

Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole, whose appointment is cited by the GOP as evidence of Reagan's concern for women, will speak to the convention tonight.

THE MUCH PUBLICIZED gender gap refers to polls which show that women are less receptive to Reagan than men.

"I don't have any doubt it exists," said Mrs. Rendel. "I think the reasons for it are as varied as the people you talk to about it. I think a great part of it is perception. I think a part of it is myth."

The Republican women argue that Reagan and his policies are misunderstood and are, in fact, helpful to the nation's women.

BUT AREA CHAPTERS of the National Organization for Women and other activist groups planned demonstrations to protest those policies.

Organizers announced Thursday that 40 to 60 demonstrators planned to tote signs outside the Galt House hotel, site of a reception for the president and Kentucky's GOP gubernatorial nominee Jim Bunning.

The White House advance team, citing security, would not say whether Reagan's route would take him by the demonstrators.

KENTUCKY REPUBLICANS hoped Reagan's appearance would bolster interest in their candidate, a state senator and former major league pitcher, and help fill his campaign coffers.

The Republican women and Reagan have endorsed Bunning's gubernatorial bid against the state's first female nominee, Democratic Lt. Gov. Martha Layne Collins, in the election this Nov. 8.

The Reagan visit highlighted a week of studies by conventioneers into the problems faced by female political candidates. Women were told how they could help campaigns or start their own.

Bookkeeper arraigned on murder charges

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A 30-year-old bookkeeper will be arraigned Oct. 14 on murder, kidnapping and assault charges in the slayings of five boys, a judge has ruled.

The 3rd District Court arraignment for Arthur Gary Bishop was ordered Thursday by 5th Circuit Court Judge Maurice Jones following completion of a two-day preliminary hearing.

Bishop, of Salt Lake City, was charged with five counts of first-degree murder, four counts of kidnapping, three counts of forcible sexual abuse of a child and one count of sexual exploitation of a minor in the deaths of the boys, who disappeared between 1979 and 1983.

He is to be tried separately on each of the murder charges.

Bishop's preliminary hearing was closed to the media and the public after both defense and prosecuting attorneys said extensive pre-trial publicity endangered his right to a fair trial.

Bishop was arrested in July after being picked up for routine questioning in the disappearance of Graeme Cunningham, 13, who had planned to accompany Bishop on a trip to California.

Police said Bishop's statement led them to the bodies of Cunningham, Troy Ward, 6, Alonzo Daniels, 4, Danny Davis, 6, and Kim Peterson, 11.

Capital delay

There is no justice in an appeals process that requires a condemned man to prepare to die, holds his hand to the fire of eternity and then snatches him back at the last moment on the behest of one person.

Yet that's exactly the system of criminal justice being operated in the United States now. The latest "saved" man is Texas' own James David Autry, who was scheduled to die by lethal injection Wednesday, but spared that fate on the stay of Supreme Court Justice Byron R. White.

Autry certainly isn't the only condemned convict to be saved just in the nick of time in recent years. On Aug. 24, Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr. noted as the Supreme Court delayed John Eldon Smith's planned Aug. 25 execution that it was the 17th time Smith's Georgia case had been reviewed.

Ironically, a strong case can be made against this perpetual system of delays in carrying out executions. Can it not be argued that such a charade constitutes "cruel and unusual" punishment, not only for those on death row but also for the families of their victims? If we are going to claim that capital punishment is of value in our criminal justice system for whatever reason, don't we have to carry it through to the completion?

The present system is a mockery of justice that should be immediately changed. It is undermining the integrity of capital punishment by leaving more than 1,200 "living" dead men and women on death rows around the country and educating others that their worst actions won't get them executed. That should be resolved immediately by the Supreme Court so the appeals process doesn't continue until the moment a prisoner dies.

Otherwise capital punishment will be all that gets executed.

Campus courtesy

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., the liberals' liberal, has spoken his piece at Liberty Baptist College, the stronghold of Moral Majority leader Jerry Falwell, proving that a guest can expect to be treated with courtesy on a conservative campus.

Kennedy accepted a good-humored invitation that arose out of a computer mix-up that sent him a Moral Majority membership card in the mail.

Although Kennedy used the occasion to lecture the Rev. Mr. Falwell and his followers on church-state relations, the senator was received politely and applauded by his audience.

The hospitality shown to Kennedy by the Rev. Mr. Falwell at the college in Lynchburg, Va., was in sharp contrast to the shabby treatment received by the fundamentalist minister when he spoke at Harvard University, the senator's alma mater. There the audience was disruptive.

The senator and his host joked and kidded with one another, and neither horns nor halos were on display. The experience should be beneficial and instructive to all concerned.

Slow ban on EDB

The Environmental Protection Agency has banned the use of the pesticide EDB, ethylene dibromide, and it's certainly a welcome move. But it's hard to jump up and down with enthusiasm over the protection the federal government is providing for the public.

The action, after all, came more than 10 years after the first tests indicating that EDB caused cancers, birth defects and miscarriages in laboratory animals — and more than six years after the government announced that its own scientists also found EDB to be highly toxic and almost certainly extremely dangerous to humans.

It's been, in fact, three years since the EPA promised to act, after concluding that any worker exposed throughout his or her career to the levels of EDB that were then legally allowed could be expected to die of cancer. (Fortunately, it appears that no American workers received such continuous exposure. But the EPA scientists also found that workers exposed for only a few weeks each year had a one in 128 chance of contracting cancer, and they found that exposure to EDB is closely associated with various kidney, skin and nervous system disorders.)

For nearly two years, it seems, the EDB ban was held up by the machinations of Dr. John Todhunter, an assistant EPA administrator since forced to resign during the EPA scandal last spring. According to EPA staffers, Todhunter — at the behest of his own superiors and various industry representatives — delayed their reports by insisting on unnecessary revisions and recomputations. And when the results kept coming out the same way anyway, he demanded that they find an alternative to the outright EDB ban to which all their evidence pointed.

Meanwhile, only days before the EPA ban was finally enacted, the Occupational Safety and Health Administration concluded its own study of EDB with a recommendation that exposure levels allowed in the work place be sharply reduced — only to be prevented by the White House's Office of Management and Budget from proposing this or any other new EDB regulation.

It's going to be another several years, moreover, before much of the EPA's ban goes into effect. The ban on using EDB as a soil fumigant was issued as an emergency measure — after EDB contamination was found in water supplies in California and Florida — and thus this use of EDB will be prohibited during the period of industry appeals against the new regulation. But the ban on using EDB to fumigate stored grains, picked fruits, felled logs and agricultural machinery is only a "cancellation." It thus will be lifted as soon as the industry files its appeals and will remain unenforced for as long as it takes the courts to hear all the industry's arguments against the ban.

So what does one say about the government's response to the EDB problem? Better late then never, we suppose.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Watt's policies still unchanged

WASHINGTON — Interior Secretary James Watt has been keeping in his bunker, his head 1 inch below the purge line, to avoid the political backfire from his latest gaffe.

Jack Anderson

But he has lost none of his enthusiasm for assaulting nature. He is occupied with the conquest of the wilderness, not its preservation.

Watt's bulldozers are not only threatening irreplaceable wildlife refuges in this country, but they're on a collision course with Canadian interests as well. Egged on by North Dakota politicians out to please their rural constituency, Watt has quietly awarded the first contract for an irrigation project known as the Garrison Diversion Unit. Phase I involves construction of most of the components.

What is planned is a massive network of dams, reservoirs and canals that will move Missouri River water from western North Dakota to the north central part of the state. This would irrigate farmland near the Canadian border.

The project is of questionable economic value, to put it charitably: At a cost of $1.2 billion, Garrison will irrigate 1,200 farms at most. That's an average cost of $1 million per farm.

Its boondoggle aspect aside, Garrison has created a storm of protest from Canada. Manitoba's multimillion-dollar fishing industry faces irreversible damage from the introduction of alien Missouri River fish species and parasites into Canadian waterways.

To assuage the Canadians' wrath, the Interior Department has decided to pare down the 250,000-acre project that was originally planned. But Canadian officials suspect that political pressure will force construction and use of the whole irrigation maze, with its harmful impact on Canadian rivers.

Internal documents seen by my associates Corky Johnson and Donald Goldberg indicate that the Garrison boondoggle will have a drastic impact on the environment. In its entirety, it would destroy 130,000 acres of wetlands and grasslands that provide food and shelter to perhaps a half-million waterfowl and marsh birds each year.

Interior officials maintain they will "mitigate" any loss of acreage, in part by a cockamamie scheme to create new wetlands by pumping water onto prairie grasslands. In fact, in their latest environmental impact statement, officials claim that the Garrison project will "add quality and quantity to the habitat base."

But internal department memos, intended for official eyes only, show that Watt's ditch-diggers have blatantly manipulated or ignored scientific data supplied by the team of biologists assigned to the Garrison project.

One Garrison scientist complained that the model used to obtain environmental impact data contained "bogus" information. While the numbers in the resulting evaluation added up, he wrote, "the biology behind them is extremely suspect."

Another memo said the Garrison biological assessment was "two steps removed from reality." Still another biologist wrote that officials' claims of a net gain for wildlife were "ludicrous." All three biologists signed a report complaining that the department's "mitigation" plan was based on data that they hadn't even seen nor approved. Interior Department sources said it is commonplace for scientific information to be "laundered" or manipulated to political needs.

A memo written by an aide to North Dakota Gov. Allen Olson indirectly alluded to the political reality of the Garrison project, saying: "I had a very skeptical feeling that we were still going to be sandbagged unless we somehow methodically controlled the technical exercise associated with developing the final mitigation plan ... and am convinced that we have to dominate this process."

The North Dakota governor has a powerful ally in Washington. Watt sent a letter to Olson confirming the go-ahead on Garrison even before the mitigation plan was completed. At the end, Watt scribbled a personal note: "A staff-prepared letter — if not OK, call me. Jim."

BABY FORMULA UPDATE — After I reported on the mental and physical disorders that resulted from a mistake in the manufacture of Neo Mull Soy, an infant formula, many worried parents called and wrote asking what might happen to their children.

Unfortunately, there's no way of knowing. A government study ordered by Congress three years ago has never been conducted. Congress neglected to appropriate money specifically for the project. And the ranking minority member of the House Appropriations Committee is a stockholder in the company that made the formula.

Here's the story:

As I reported, Neo Mull Soy formula from March 1978, until its recall in August 1979, lacked an essential ingredient: chloride. A baby deprived of chloride can develop any of a number of learning disabilities and physical malfunctions.

In 1980, Congress passed the Infant Formula Act in hopes of preventing future manufacturing blunders. The law directed the Health and Human Services Department to study the long-term effects that Neo Mull Soy had had on children.

The task was given to the National Institute for Child Health and Development. One poorly designed study was dropped after parental objections. A second study has been proposed, and a decision is expected by the end of this month.

The study is expected to cost anywhere from $2 million to $6 million. But no specific sum has been earmarked for the study. That means it will have to come out of general agency funds — for which there is always stiff competition.

INSIDE REPORT:

Emigrant undercuts Soviet deceit

WASHINGTON — New East-West tension has triggered a massive Soviet disinformation campaign highlighted by the dramatic intercession of an Israeli emigre from Bulgaria who scotched Moscow's new smear of Zbigniew Brzezinski as a CIA recruiter in Sofia in the 1960s.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

With the two superpowers approaching cold war, the Soviet disinformation campaign — designed to purify the Kremlin and stigmatize the U.S. and its leading officials — has been curiously immune from political and media attention. Considering that its recent victims include U.N. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick, famed foreign operative Irving Brown of the AFL-CIO and numerous American diplomats abroad, this indifference is damaging to the West and feeds the rising tide of Soviet deceit.

A confidential letter from a Jewish emigrant who miraculously escaped the death sentence of a Bulgarian court may end that indifference. Now an Israeli citizen, Dr. Henry Spetter's Aug. 31 letter to Zbigniew Brzezinski, Jimmy Carter's national security adviser, closes the circle on an ugly series of events. It also exposes exactly how the wheels of Soviet disinformation turn, crushing innocent targets to create a false picture of Soviet purity.

Writing from Tel Aviv where he is an economic consultant, Spetter said that he had read a recent article in Izvestia, the Soviet government's newspaper, under the head: "The 'Bulgarian Trace' of Zbigniew Brzezinski." The article alleged that during a visit to Sofia as a guest of the Bulgarian Academy of Sciences in the early 1960s, Brzezinski "contacted a Bulgarian citizen with the nickname 'Andrew' whom he instructed to collect information on behalf of the CIA."

"Since I am the person (Andrew) in question," Spetter wrote, the "following facts" should be understood: that on one occasion, some 20 years ago, he had been asked to drive Brzezinski in Sofia from the academy to his hotel — because he could speak English; that "this was my only meeting" with Brzezinski; that, as a result of the brief encounter, he had been arrested by the Bulgarian secret police in 1973 and tortured to "confess" his recruitment 10 years earlier by Brzezinski, who was then an occasional consultant to the State Department.

Spetter was sentenced to death by a Bulgarian court, then released from the trumped-up charges and allowed to emigrate to Israel in the summer of 1974. There the matter rested — until the assassination attempt on Pope John Paul II in 1981 and the ensuing allegations charging Bulgarian complicity in the shooting.

Only after those charges of a "Bulgarian connection" with the attempted assassination of the pope did Izvestia dredge up the old smear against Brzezinski, using Spetter as the foil. Both Brzezinski and Henry Kissinger had publicly raised questions about the Bulgarian connection and the complete control of Bulgarian intelligence by the Soviet KGB. One way to convince the world that neither the Bulgarians nor the Soviets had a hand in the shootout in St. Peter's Square was to portray Brzezinski as a longtime conspirator for the CIA inside Sofia.

The Soviet disinformation net is cast wide. Early this year a bogus speech reputedly made by Kirkpatrick was printed in far-left Indian newspapers. According to the speech, Kirkpatrick advocated a policy of "Balkanization" of India. Communist members used it against the U.S. in their speeches in the Indian parliament.

Irving Brown, for decades the top AFL-CIO operative abroad, was the victim last March of a forged letter carrying his signature and published in an Italian newspaper. The letter implicated Brown in the secret use of AFL-CIO money to finance the outlawed Solidarity movement in Poland through an Italian labor official known to be an agent of Bulgarian intelligence. The object was to stigmatize the U.S. and cleanse both KGB and Bulgarian intelligence services.

Spetter's dramatic rebuttal — "Since I am the person in question" — was an unusually swift knockdown of the false Izvestia charge against Brzezinski. But other Soviet disinformation, scattering poisoned seeds against the U.S., flourishes undetected in a campaign that has become a prime policy instrument of Moscow, growing every day in boldness and intensity.

CHARLEY REESE

Deterrence makes attack less likely

Whether we have a nuclear war depends primarily on our deterrent forces. Whether these forces will deter the Soviet Union from starting a war depends on the Soviets' belief in how effective they will be after having absorbed a surprise nuclear attack.

Charley Reese

In evaluating this matter, there are several factors you should consider.

Surprise is the single most important principle of war in the nuclear age in Soviet military thinking. To quote Soviet doctrine surprise is achieved "as a result of poor knowledge by the adversary of one's true intentions, as a result of subjective errors in assessing intentions and plans, as well as a result of shallow analyses of measures taken to achieve surprise."

The Soviet Union has an entire department led by a high-ranking officer which is charged with strategic deception. This office which knows exactly where and when American reconnaissance satellites pass over the Soviet Union is in charge of making sure that those satellites see only what the Soviets want them to see.

Another important factor is to realize that virtually all of our data about the Soviet Union comes from satellites and these cameras cannot see in the dark, in bad weather, or through buildings.

Much common "knowledge" about the Soviet Union is in fact not knowledge but mere guesses. We do not know, for example, how many missiles and how many warheads the Soviet Union actually possesses. We only know that we have been able to see 1,400 missile silos.

We do know that the Soviets go to extraordinary lengths to deceive us. One example, provided by a defector, is a Wilkinson Sword Blade razor factory. The Soviets contracted with the British firm to provide it, but they constructed the five-story building before the British engineers arrived to install the machines. Underneath the building was a nuclear-hardened command post shelter yet the British engineers never knew that nor did we until the defector told us.

The dominant theme running through Soviet military analyses of World War II is the importance of secret reserves. To quote, "In the final analysis decisive defeat of the enemy and achievement of war aims are secured by the offensive reserves whose successful deployment is dependent on secrecy and concealment."

The United States abandoned its anti-missile defenses and has no system now and no system ready to deploy. The Soviets have an anti-missile system deployed around Moscow and recently the U.S. discovered it has deployed radars which are compatible with anti-missile systems and which violate the anti-missile treaty.

The United States has emasculated its air defenses against Soviet bombers. We have no surface to air missiles deployed and only about 360 fighter interceptors, many of them ancient planes in national guard units, to protect Alaska and the main 48 states. The Soviets have over 12,000 surface to air missiles and around 2,600 fighter-interceptors deployed.

The United States has no civil defense program. It cannot protect either its population or its industry. The Soviet Union has invested over $10 billion in civil defense that we know about and has gone to extraordinary lengths to provide protection for both people and key industry.

United States intelligence agencies, particularly the CIA, have a deplorable record in terms of finding out what is going on in the Soviet Union. For nearly 10 years, the CIA insisted Soviet defense expenditures were no more than 6 percent of the GNP, until they were shown to be off. Andrei Sakharov, the Soviet nuclear physicist, has said those expenditures were closer to 40 percent of the Soviet GNP.

Are the Soviets planning a surprise nuclear attack on the United States? Nobody outside the Kremlin knows. Have they tried to achieve the capability to launch a surprise attack? Definitely, yes.

The emphasis being placed in Washington on disarmament negotiations amounts, in my opinion, to criminal negligence.

Pakistan is the place to be for tourists who like boar hunting

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — Nearby wars, a virulent political opposition at home and a strict Islamic code hardly make Pakistan a vacation paradise.

But Changez Kureishi of the Pakistan Tourist Board says it can be to the tourist who likes to be where tourists aren't.

"Pakistan is difficult to find and hard to travel in, but it is all very rewarding," he said in a recent interview.

To Kureishi, Pakistan comes out as something special for the tourist who doesn't like to be overrun by other tourists, who stay away because of the wars next door in Iran and Afghanistan, the political opposition that is trying to unseat a martial-law, military government, stringent Islamic law that makes alcohol and night life hard to find, and the country's own development problems.

"We're off the beaten path. We're different," Kureishi said.

Still, about 314,000 tourists found Pakistan last year, according to a government travel publication. That was about 5 percent more than the previous year.

The largest group of tourists came from West Germany, and Kureishi said they mostly were interested in climbing and hiking in rugged northern Pakistan, in the western wing of the world's highest mountains, the Himalayas.

Next in number were the Japanese.

"They were keen on Moenjodaro," said Kureishi, referring to the archeological site 250 miles northeast of here that offers a window back into the ancient Indus Valley civilization.

Then came the Americans.

"They were a mixed bag," Kureishi said. "We got all types."

The Americans wanted everything the Germans and Japanese did, and more — including wild boar hunting.

Because of the thickly knotted red tape involved, boar hunting remains a little practiced sport, however. Last year only about a dozen people hunted the hairy hogs in Punjab and Sind provinces.

Nonetheless, Pakistan does not seem to be for everyone.

Karachi, the country's largest and most cosmopolitan city with 7 million people, has had brighter days. Situated on the Arabian Sea, it once echoed to the revelry of sailors of various fleets and fun-loving tourists, mostly Arabs seeking relief from the heat and dryness of the Middle East.

Now Karachi is subdued, even somber. The big tourist attractions, Kureishi said, are the Defense of Society Mosque and the mausoleum of Mohammed Ali Jinnah, Pakistan's founder. The sailors now call at other ports. Many of the Arabs prefer Bombay, India.

There are several luxury hotels here, but even within their walls there are restrictions.

Artist paints skipjacks

URBANNA, Va. (AP) — John M. Barber is painting against time to capture on canvas an endangered species — the wooden skipjack oyster boats of the Chesapeake Bay.

Barber, a marine artist from Richmond, says about 24 examples remain of the only fishing boats in North America that operate exclusively under sail. The skipjacks, usually 30 feet to 70 feet long, are used solely in dredging for oysters.

There were probably 1,500 of the vessels working the bay at the turn of the century, Barber said.

"I've painted 10 skipjacks," he said at his cottage near here at the confluence of the Rappahannock River and Lagrange Creek. "That leaves 14 or so left to paint. I hope to finish the rest in two years or so. We're going to lose some, so I'm painting the oldest ones first."

The next one he's going to portray in an oil painting, his preferred medium, is the Rebecca Ruark, homeported in Cambridge, Md., and built in 1886.

"Some say by 1985, these boats will not be working. So I'm pretty frantic to get the older ones painted," he said.

He docks a speedboat here, the better to reach such spots as Tilghman Island, Md., and other skipjack haunts in the upper bay.

Barber says he must go to Maryland to find working skipjacks because of a difference in the laws of Virginia and Maryland. Maryland, Barber explains, stipulates that oyster dredging boats must operate only under sail while Virginia also allows dredging from power boats.

The youthful-looking Barber, 36, works in three media: sketchings, watercolors and oil paintings.

"I feel most fulfilled when I finally lay the brush down after an oil painting," he said. "That's the entree. This is where my heart is, in the final oil painting.

"The pencil sketches and watercolors are fine byproducts, but I do them as stepping stones to the oil."

Barber left a 10-year career as a commercial artist and photographer about four years ago to devote all his time to painting and sketching Chesapeake Bay scenes. He acknowledges that the move has been lucrative.

For each of his paintings he has 950 prints made, selling for $55 apiece.

"We do that because we want a limited number of our prints but we want to do enough to make it profitable."

Former game warden still keeps in touch with lions

KORA GAME RESERVE, Kenya (AP) — George Adamson, who with his wife Joy helped popularize wildlife conservation, is busy at 77 doing what he likes best — keeping in touch with the lions he set free after their birth in captivity.

Up at 6:15 a.m., he slips on Biblical-style sandals and faded green shorts, then steers his Land-Rover out of "Kampi ya Simba" (Swahili for "Camp of the Lions"), a collection of thatched huts.

Loaded in the back of the vehicle is a fresh camel carcass. Adamson hopes to feed it to some of the dozens of jungle cats he rehabilitated to survive in the African bush after they were born in zoos or kept as pets in Europe, North America and elsewhere.

The long-haired and goateed former game warden and wildlife author can no longer free lions. After a mauling incident here in 1980, the government stopped the controversial practice, saying the risk outweighed any benefit and that the species was not endangered.

The practice, which gained worldwide attention through his wife's books — "Born Free," "Living Free" and "Forever Free" — spawned continuing debate in conservation circles. Joy Adamson was murdered by a young servant in a dispute over wages in 1980 while living apart from her husband.

Some experts maintained it was costly and unscientifically sentimental. They argued that money used to reintroduce the animals to the wild would be better spent on research.

Also, they contended that lions once used to human contact were a danger because they no longer feared man.

Of the risk, Adamson who has been attacked by lions three times said in an interviw: "It's an occupational hazard. In auto racing, people get killed. In steeplechasing, people get killed. But you don't hear people saying you should stop auto racing or steeplechasing, do you?"

Adamson himself opposes transferring more lions to Kora, which he says would now upset the wildlife balance. But he and his assistant, Briton Tony Fitzjohn, 39, hope soon to receive two leopard cubs from France with the help of movie starlet Brigitte Bardot, an animal protection activist.

"I am not a qualified scientist," said Adamson, also a Briton. "My reason for doing this is that I don't like seeing animals suffering in captivity."

If he were a millionaire, Adamson said, he would rent the reserve back from the Kenyan government, hire his own game wardens and restock the 500-square-mile area with rhinoceroses, an endangered species. Only one-tenth of the estimated 12,000 rhinos that were in Kenya 15 years ago have survived the poacher's rifle.

It was due largely to agitation by Adamson, who moved here and leased the area from a county council in 1971, and by wildlife groups that the government made it a game reserve three years later. Aside from promoting conservation, the Kenyan government in Nairobi sought to use Kora as a buffer zone between nearby settlements and nomadic herdsmen, who are ethnic Somalis.

Recent encroachment by the Somalis and more than 10,000 head of livestock led Adamson to call in the paramilitary anti-poaching unit to remove them before too much destruction was done. Many of the poachers caught here with contraband elephant tusks and rhino horns have been Somalis.

Adamson said he keeps the reserve going on his pension, interest from a trust set up by his wife and donations from admirers who want him to continue protecting Kora provide him about $18,000 a year.

It's not enough to do all he wants, but sufficient to operate his two camps — one for visiting lions, the other for leopards. Friends frequently fly in fresh vegetables and other supplies unavailable in the nearest town, Mwingi, 93 miles away.

Adamson said that until this year he has received little help from the Elsa Wild Animal Appeal which Joy established to encourage conservation. Although named for the first lioness set free and funded by royalties from her books on rehabilitating captive and injured lions, the foundation doesn't much care for Adamson's continuing the practice.

"They would prefer I'd do something more conventional," he said of the British-based Elsa fund.

Malcolm Coe, an Oxford University biology professor who is scientific leader of a joint British-Kenyan ecological survey of Kora, said Adamson has proven that readying captivity-bred lions for the wild can succeed.

"I am not saying anyone else could or should, and it's scientific value is very small," Coe said.

Adamson's biggest contribution to science, he added, has been to help create and protect the Kora reserve, one of Africa's few largely untouched areas of acacia-commiphor bush that remains.

Memorial Stadium scoreboard in jeopardy

Bulldogs, Cougars have high-scoring potential

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Don't be alarmed if the sound of an explosion blast rips across the Midland skies tonight. It will only be the Memorial Stadium scoreboard going up in smoke.

The reason: Midland High faces Abilene Cooper in a District 4-5A matchup at 8 p.m. That could mean a scoring battle that hasn't been seen in the Tall City since last basketball season.

Consider the facts. Midland High has scored 50 points in two district outings. Abilene High has scored 49. Add the fact that both defenses have been less than saints in those same outings with MHS giving up 67 points over that span and Cooper 66. That also means that this game is dead even on paper with a 50-49 pick 'em winner expected.

"Maybe we should turn the team over to Coach (Jack) Stephenson for this one," said MHS coach Pat Culpepper. "It may look more like a basketball game. Anyone who liked what they saw in our game with Big Spring (a 38-33 MHS victory), should like this one. Both teams have been able to put points on the board this year, but we haven't stopped people from scoring either."

NEW COOPER boss Dick Winder feels much the same way, but cautions, "I expect a high scoring game, but when you've been coaching as long as I have, you learn that things may not work out that way. But you have to expect this one to have a lot of points in it."

With the offensive weapons both teams possess, it may take an adding machine to add up the points if the teams play to form tonight.

MHS offensive facts: Quarterback James Welborn has thrown for 1,094 yards this year, an average of 218 yards per game. He has also connected for 10 TD aerials, but has given up 14 interceptions.

The MHS receiving corps is unmatched. Allan Foret has 448 yards in receptions and four TD receptions. Todd Shiplett has 352 yards and two touchdowns while tight end Darrell Davis has scored four times on receptions of 197 yards. Mix in I-Back Randall Collins, who last week had his first 100-yard rushing game against Big Spring, and you can see the offensive punch the Bulldogs possess.

BUT COOPER also has stinging punch on the offensive side of the ball. Highly touted tailback Allan Gunter, who is starting for the third year in a row for Cooper, has over 600 yards rushing this year, averaging just over 131 yards per outing. Quarterback Doug Hadley can also throw the ball and is averaging over 101 yards per game in the airways.

"I just hope we can keep Cooper from breaking one end of the scoreboard off," said Culpepper. "Coach Winder has put Gunter at tailback this year and that makes him a powerful threat. He punishes you and never quits running.

"Really, our defensive line has played well most of the time, but we haven't had much help in the secondary. That's where we keep making changes, hoping to find something we can hang our hat on."

Culpepper has made some defensive changes for tonight. Since fullback Jeff Pulley has sore ribs from the Big Spring game, defensive end Keith Byrd will move to fullback. Safety Kenny White will move to end and Shiplett will start at safety, going both ways. Ronnie Hernandez has also been inserted to the defensive secondary.

"Everyone thinks all Midland High can do is throw the ball, but they proved against Big Spring that they can run too," said Winder. "They can come at you from all directions and we've had our share of defensive problems. We were fortunate to win against Odessa High, but we felt like we beat a good football team. It sure beats coming off another loss."

A VICTORY is almost a must for both teams. This game can be a springboard for the rest of the season. Both teams are 1-1 in district play and the winner will have two straight victories and some momentum.

Midland High used the Cooper game a year ago as a springboard to a strong finish. MHS was 1-4 at this time last year, but won four of its last five games, only to lose a playoff berth by the flip of a coin.

MHS is one game ahead of that pace with a 3-2 record this year after the win over Big Spring and could be off to the races with another Cooper springboard attack.

Cooper is only 2-3 on the year, but is coming off a major District 4-5A upset over Odessa High last week, 29-28. Cooper also scored 20 points off state ranked San Angelo two weeks ago.

Orioles blank White Sox, 4-0

BALTIMORE (AP) — Mike Boddicker spent part of his day installing a CB radio in his pickup. Gary Roenicke used the time to play with his children. Then they went to work, and helped the Baltimore Orioles escape a dangerous situation in the American League Championship Series.

Boddicker, a 26-year-old rookie, registered a record-tying 14 strikeouts and Roenicke, a veteran at age 28, hit a two-run homer and scored two other runs Thursday night as the Orioles beat the Chicago White Sox 4-0 to tie the series at one game apiece.

The best-of-five championship set resumes tonight in Chicago, with Rich Dotson, 22-7, pitching for the White Sox against Baltimore's Mike Flanagan, 12-4, and the situation facing them is drastically different than if the White Sox had won Game No. 2.

Since the league championship series began in 1969, no team has ever dropped the first two at home and come back to win the pennant, a point not lost on either manager.

"I feel an awful lot better than I did last night," Baltimore's Joe Altobelli said.

"Am I happy with a split? Not particularly," said Chicago's Tonny LaRussa.

Boddicker became the first rookie to hurl a shutout in AL championship play, limiting the White Sox to five hits. His 14 strikeouts were a career high and the most by an American League pitcher this year, but his chief thought after the game was more of of pain than elation.

"All I have in mind right now is ice," he said as he waited for reporters' questions to end so he could soak his tired right armm.

Told he had struck out 14 batters, the Norway, Iowa, resident grimaced and said, "No wonder my arm hurts."

Boddicker inflicted some pain himself Thursday night, both physically and psychologically.

He tied a championship series record by hitting two batters, Tom Paciorek and Greg Luzinski. And the White Sox conceded that they were constantly out of tempo with his curves and sliders.

More teaching involved at junior high level

Kitto passed up offers to coach at Midland High

Sports Special

By Bob Brundage

(Editor's Note: This is the second of a three-part series on junior high coaching.)

For some coaches junior high football is a stepping stone to higher ambitions like high school varsity and college coaching. To others, like San Jacinto's Karl Kitto, junior high coaching is where he has been for some time and where he wants to remain.

For the coaches and kids at the junior high level, it's more of a teaching and learning process than at the higher levels of athletics. The basics are throughly drilled into the players and the start of advanced play is taught. And, that's part of the reason Kitto likes it at SJ.

"I like it because, No. 1, you get to see the kids when they're first coming up," said Kitto who is one of several long-time coaches at San Jacinto. "You don't have the pressures to win in junior high that you do in high school because you are trying to get the kids started. If you win along the way, that's fine too.

"And, there's the why. Here they ask why you do something this way and you have time to tell them. You can teach them more here. At the varsity level it's accepted that they already know."

Kitto, who has a son starting at linebacker for Midland High, has had the opportunites to jump to varsity football but chose to remain at San Jacinto where he is now entering his 11th year.

"I've been offered a couple of times to go to Midland High," said Kitto. "Coach (Pat) Culpepper asked me a couple of years ago but I said I could do more for him down here."

From the junior high ranks, coaches can watch a player's career from the time they first step into the pads until they're graduating seniors. Kitto feels a sense of pride when he sees his former players in their later playing years.

"It's good to walk into the locker room at Midland High and see all those 200 pounders who used to be little guys and it's good to watch the improvement they make," said Kitto. "We (the entire SJ coaching staff) feel good to see our kids go out and do well and see how they change. Some of the players, who were on our B team here, have gone on to start for Midland High."

Kitto realizes the impact he has over the kids at the junior high age, the role model he's playing in helping to develop their characters, both on and off the field.

"You've got to watch what you say around these kids because a coach has a heavy influnce on their lives," he said. "You can take a kid a work with him and what you say can help build their confidence in themselves in whatever they do."

IN HIS 11 years at San Jacinto, Kitto hasn't seen much change but feels now is a time when one thing, in particular, needs to be adjusted: Boundary lines.

"Things haven't changed that much," he said. "The last time there was a boundary change was 1976 and that's when Fannin (Elementary School) was moved into the Goddard district. We felt like that took away from us a little bit and we have to have a redistricting again because we only field 150 players where Goddard has twice that number."

Those 150 San Jacinto players are also divided up pretty sparsely considering the number of teams each junior high fields at the seventh and eighth grade levels. At both age levels, there are six teams (Goddard fields a total of seven) with the eighth grade A team competing in the Midland-Odessa Conference and the remaining three in inner-city play.

If the players are divided into an equal number on each team at the two schools, Goddard holds a 42-plus to 25 per-team advantage. That's a considerable edge in a sport where depth to overcome injuries and needed breaks can be a strong factor.

Another area Kitto isn't to thrilled with are the enforced offensive and defensive styles of play in City Conference play. The M—O conference teams have no restrictions and Kitto would like to see that extended into the other teams.

"Sometimes we don't have the man-power to play with these teams and we'd like to change our offense and defense," said Kitto.

But, the rules say it can't be done so they make the best it. So far San Jacinto is 8-9-1 for all its teams with three fielding above .500 records.

The season is still young and there is a lot more learning to accomplish.

(The third and final part to this series on junior high coaching will run in Sunday.)

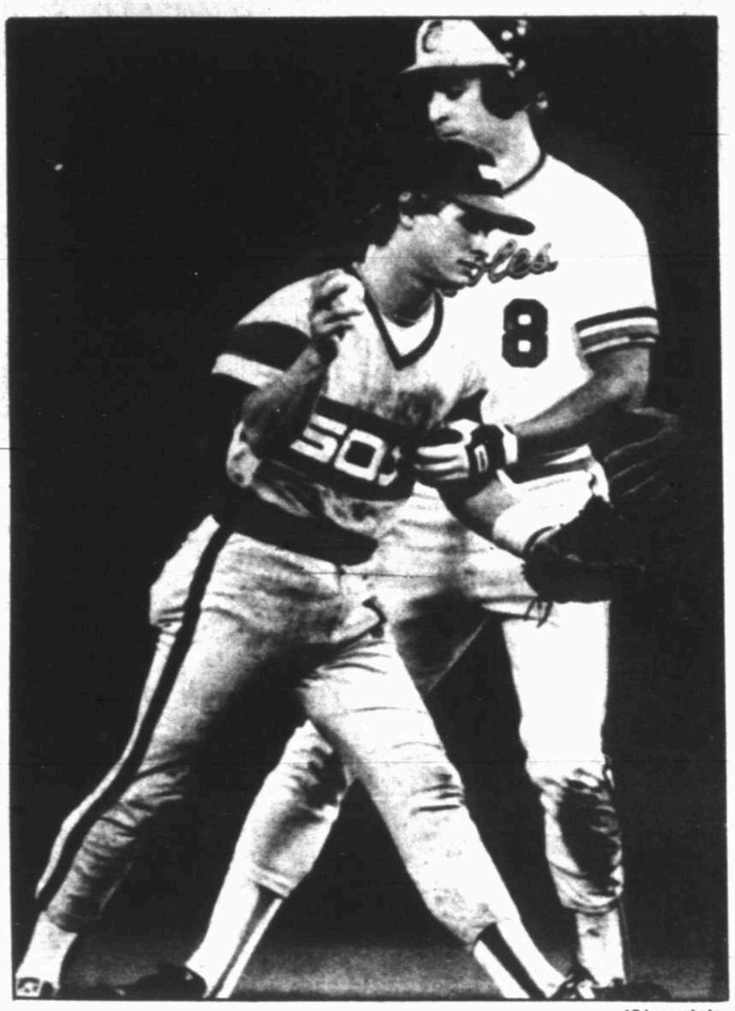
Boddicker, Roenicke help Orioles save home split



AP Laserphoto

Former Midland Cub Scott Fletcher leaves the field after making an inning ending out, but doesn't seem too happy with the way things went for his Chicago White Sox Thursday night.

"He kept his breaking ball low, and there's nothing you can do with a low breaking ball," said Chicago's slugging left-fielder, Ron Kittle, who had a single and a walk. "If he sees he can get you on it, he'll throw it all night.

"He changes speed so well, we were swinging at bad pitches," said third baseman Vance Law. "They look good, but by the time you start to swing you know they're not. We weren't patient enough."

Boddicker's 14 strikeouts tied a playoff record set by Detroit's Joe Coleman in 1972 and matched by Pittsburgh's John Candelaria in 1975. But the historic day started like any other, he said.

"A friend came over and we talked about the game. Then I installed a CB in my pickup," said Boddicker, whose citizens band handle is "Trapper."

Until he got to Memorial Stadium, Roenicke's day also was rather routine.

"I have two sons, ages 1 and 4, and I spent the day with them," the left-fielder said. "We went out and bought a toy box, and we watched movies and washed the car."

The idea, Roenicke said, was to take his mind off the game. A platoon player who gives way to left-handed batter John Lowenstein against right-handed pitching, Roenicke sat out Wednesday night's series-opening 2-1 loss to the White Sox and righty LaMarr Hoyt.

"I've been thinking about this game a lot," he said. "I did a lot of things to take my mind off it, but nothing worked."

The wait was worth it.

"In six years of professional ball, this is the best game I've ever had," Roenicke said, after going 2-for-2.

Roenicke doubled leading off the second inning and scored the game's first run when Law first bobbled Ken Singleton's grounder, then threw it past first baseman Paciorek.

He walked with one out in the fourth and came home on Ken Singleton's ground-ball double to left, then finished the scoring with a two-run homer to left-center field following a leadoff double by Cal Ripken in the sixth.

LaRussa said Boddicker "didn't give us much to hit. He pitched well, and Roenicke broke our backs. We beat them yesterday. They outplayed us today."

Boddicker now is 3-0 against the White Sox, and this was his second shutout against Chicago. He blanked the Sox 5-0 on five hits for after being recalled from the Orioles' Rochester, N.Y., farm team last May 17.

Despte his heroics in Game Two, Roenicke will be on the bench tonight against the right-handed Dotson.

"I'd like to play every day," Roenicke said, "but so would John."

Cubs name Jim Frey as manager

CHICAGO (AP) — The last time Dallas Green and Jim Frey met head to head on the baseball field they were managing opposing teams in the World Series. Now they're on the same side.

Green, Chicago Cubs' general manager, announced Thursday that Frey, the former manager of the Kansas City Royals, will be the new Cubs manager.

In 1980, Frey managed the Kansas City Royals to the American League pennant and faced the Philadelphia Phillies in the World Series. Green was manager of the Phillies at the time and Philadelphia won 4-2.

"Jim was one of my choices from the start," Green said in a statement released by the team. "In my mind, I felt we needed a man who had managed before in the major leagues and been successful. We also needed someone who had a background with a solid minor league organization that believed in player development."

In an interview later, Green commented, "I think Billy Martin said it best, that managers are hired to be fired. Jim Frey will probably be fired, too."

During his career as a major league manager, Frey, 51, compiled a 127-105 record, including a 97-65 record with the Royals in 1980. For the past two years he has worked as a coach for the New York Mets.

Frey replaces Charlie Fox, who last Sunday announced he would return to his job as Green's assistant in the National League club's front office after taking over managerial duties Aug. 22 from Lee Elia, who was fired.

The Cubs finished the season with a 71-91 record for a .438 percentage and ended up 19 games back in the National League East. During his brief tenure, Fox managed the club to a 17-22 record.

"Jim has the ingredients we have been looking for," Green said. He was a career minor league player who always made the most of his talents and learned his trade. He is a tough competitor. He was raised in the Baltimore organization and had their caliber of training, which is obviously very successful."

In 1970, Frey was handpicked by former Baltimore Orioles Manager Earl Weaver to work as a coach. Frey stayed with the Orioles for 10 years, working as a hitting instructor, bullpen coach and first base coach.

"With the Mets, he also served as a hitting instructor and helped tremendously in the development of Darryl Strawberry," Green said of Frey. "The past two seasons he has been in the National League. He knows the league and he knows the Eastern Division."

In 1980, Frey became the 11th manager in the American League and the 19th in major league history to guide his club into the World Series in his first year as manager when the Royals won the AL flag.

Although no announcement was made regarding the current coaching staff, a spokesman for the Cubs said Frey would hold a news conference Monday.

Frey started his career in baseball in 1950 as a minor league outfielder and spent the next 14 years with the minor leagues organizations of the old Milwaukee Braves and the St. Louis Cardinals. His lifetime minor league batting average was .302.

Mangione tune comes too early

BALTIMORE (AP) — Chuck Mangione pulled out his horn in the Baltimore locker room and played a few bars from a popular Italian folk tune often played at ballparks. But the Orioles knew it was too early to start dancing.

So did the Chicago White Sox, despite their having gained a split in the first two games of the American League Championship Series while playing away from home.

"The team that plays the closest to the way they did all season will come out on top," said Chicago first baseman Tom Paciorek, as the Orioles and White Sox prepared to head for the Windy City for the third game in the best-of-five series. "I don't really think there is a home-field advantage."

Asked if he were happy that the White Sox would be returning home with one game under their belt, Chicago Manager Tony LaRussa groused, "Right now, I'm just aggravated we got beat."

While the Orioles were not ready to start dancing to the tarantella — Mangione was at the stadium to play the national anthem — pitcher Mike Boddicker's dazzling 4-0 shutout of the White Sox on Thursday night did boost their spirits.

"Of course we'll be in different surrondings when we hit Chicago, but this was a big win for us ... it has given us a lift," said the hard-hitting Oriole shortstop Cal Ripken Jr., whose bat started to come alive in Game 2.

"We needed this game and now we're heading to Chicago on a positive note," said Ripken, who had a single and a double on the night.

Using an assortment of slow pitches to keep the White Sox off stride, Boddicker tied a playoff record by fanning 14 hitters. The day before, pitching was also the key when LaMarr Hoyt hurled a five-hitter to give Chicago a 2-1 victory.

Despite being down one game, Boddicker said he didn't feel there was any special pressure on him.

"That's all I've heard for the last week is the word 'pressure.' I always get nervous going out there for the first inning. But really that's the easy part," he said. The rookie right-hander said the hardest part of any game is being interviewed afterward.

Oriole catcher Rick Dempsey said his team is hoping that it doesn't have to face Hoyt again. "We don't want to have to see him again. We're hoping we can go to Chicago and get two in a row."

Chicago left fielder Ron Kittle may be the one White Sox who will be the happiest to be back on his own turf. Kittle, who had 35 home runs and 100 runs batted in, had only one hit at Memorial Stadium and was also doused with beer while trying to field a ball off the wall.

The beer incident occurred in the second inning of Thursday night's game.

Kittle said he didn't think the beer interfered with the play. "It was just an aggravating incident," he said.

LaRussa, however, went out on the field to talk with the umpires after the dousing.

"Our fans in Chicago get nailed all the time for that and it happens all around the League. I just wanted to be sure everyone knows it happens places other than Chicago," he said.

When Game 3 does get under way, the Oriole player who has produced the most post-season firepower so far will not be in the lineup. Left fielder Gary Roenicke, who drilled a two-run homer and a double off Floyd Bannister in Thursday night's game, will give way to John Lowenstein against right-hander Richard Dotson, 22-7.

Phil Niekro cast out

ATLANTA (AP) — Phil Niekro, whose knuckleball has fluttered past National League hitters for 20 years, is leaving the Atlanta Braves.

At 44 the oldest player in the major leagues, Niekro had hoped to return for a 21st season with the only club he has ever known, but that is not to be.

"We decided at our staff meeting near the end of the season that Niekro would not return as a starting pitcher," Braves Executive Vice President Al Thornwell told the Atlanta Constitution.

"If Phil does not pitch for some other team, he could be back with the Braves in some capacity," Thornwell said. "There will always be a position for Niekro in our organization as long as Ted Turner owns the team.

"He is, of course, the greatest pitcher the Atlanta Braves ever had, a gentleman and a tribute to baseball."

Niekro said only: "I'm cleaning out my locker at the stadium Friday morning. That should tell you something."

WINDSOR WINS AGAIN.

TASTE TESTS PROVE WINDSOR BEATS V.O. AGAIN.

In 1982 Windsor's taste was chosen over 86-proof Seagram's V.O. 57% to 43% in informal bar tests in selected markets.

Again in late 1983, Windsor's mild, smooth taste was chosen over the new 80-proof V.O. in two different broad-scale tests among Canadian whisky drinkers—55% to 45% both times.

Try the taste of Windsor and find out for yourself why you can't beat the taste of Windsor. And you certainly can't beat the price.

Philadelphia Phillies' third baseman Mike Schmidt took grounders in a light workout Thursday in Veterans Stadium as the Phils prepare to face Los Angeles today with the National League series tied at one game each.

Phillies search for hot bats

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Phillies must find their bats if they hope to beat the Los Angeles Dodgers in the National League Championship Series.

The Phillies have scored just 15 runs in 14 games against the Dodgers this season, including one in each of the first two games of the best-of-five playoff, which is tied 1-1.

Phillies' Manager Paul Owens was asked if he could pinpoint the Phillies' failure to score against Los Angeles.

"Darn right, good Dodgers' pitching," snapped Owens.

The Phillies' left-handed hitters took hitting practice Thursday in a voluntary workout for today's third game in the Series, set to start at 2:05 p.m. CDT.

The Dodgers are scheduled to go with right-hander Bob Welch, and Owens will use left-handed hitters Joe Lefebvre and Greg Gross in the outfield in place of right-handers Sixto Lezcano and Garry Maddox.

OWENS IS optimistic that the hitting which carried the club in its September stretch drive to the NL East title will reappear.

"We hit the ball a lot better Wednesday night than we did Tuesday," Owens said.

"But we hit into three doubleplays and that always takes the wind out of any club. I think we're swinging better than we did earlier against this team."

Owens was happy to get out of Los Angeles with a split.

"You go on the other guy's turf you have to feel fortunate to get out, 1-1. I never thought it would be a sweep. These are two evenly matched clubs. It well could go to a fifth game."

Although the Phillies haven't hit much in the first two games, the Dodgers are nothing to brag about. They averaged .206 to .190 for the Phillies.

NL Playoff

Mike Marshall, who contributed a nice running catch of a liner by Joe Morgan to save a couple of runs in the sixth inning Wednesday night, has left 10 on base.

"Sure I'm frustrated," said Marshall, who hit .300 in the stretch for the Dodgers. "My defense did not make up for it (lack of offense). "I'm like anyone else. I want to get a hit every time I go up," Marshall said.

Marshall said he expected to get a lot of chances to get some hits in Philadelphia.

The Phillies are going with rookie pitcher Charles Hudson in game three.

"I've got a lot of confidence in him," said Owens. "He's partly responsible for us being here," the manager said of the youngster who posted an 8-8 record after being called up May 31, from Portland in the Pacific Coast League.

Owens isn't concerned that Hudson lost twice to the Dodgers in the regular season. He worked 12 2-3 innings, allowed 11 hits and six runs for a 4.26 earned run average. All the runs were earned. He allowed one home run, struck out 10 and walked three.

HUDSON ISN'T trying to fool anyone. He admits he's nervous. The 24-year-old right-hander said he's trying to treat this as just another game.

"But I know everyone in the nation will be watching," Hudson observed.

Hudson, who won important games from Montreal and Pittsburgh in the battle for the East title, said the Expos and Pirates had more left-handed power.

"The Dodgers have more right-handed power and as a right-hander this will be an advantage to me.," Hudson said.

Hudson's opponent, Welch, probably was the best pitcher for the Dodgers in the stretch.

He was 15-12 during the season, beat the Phillies once, pitching a one- hitter. Von Hayes' fourth inning single was the only hit in that 1-0 game. Welch also has league championship experience, appearing in four playoffs. He won game one from the Phillies in 1978. He was 0-0 in three relief stints against Montreal in 1981.

Los Angeles Manager Tom Lasorda said knowing that the Dodgers beat the Phillies five of six in Philadelphia gives him a good feeling, but he can't consider the past.

"It doesn't matter what you did in the past, we have to go there now and play aggressive baseball, and play good defense," Lasorda said.

Defense against the Dodgers has frustrated the Phillies, who made 15 errors to but seven for L.A. during the regular season. The trend has continued in the playoff. The Phillies have made three to but one for the Dodgers. And two of them led to three unearned runs in the 4-1 second game defeat.

Ironically, the Phillies are supposed to be the team with the tight defense, while the Dodgers are considered one of the poorest defensive teams in the league. But they make the plays against Philadelphia.

Third baseman Mike Schmidt and center fielder Garry Maddox have 15 gold gloves between them and each has made an error in this series. Maddox' cost two unearned runs Wednesday when the score was tied, 1-1.

Pete Rose observed, "I wish I could figure it out. They don't ever seem to get a bad hop or anything. Mike Marshall played that ball (Morgan's drive) all wrong (in right field) and comes out smelling like a rose."

Lee's Rebs blank opponents, 80-0

If the Lee Rebels have any doubts about the future of the football program, they should be laid aside.

The varsity, of course, is Texas' tenth ranked 5A football team. But the Junior Varsity and Sophomore teams were destructive Thursday in blanking opponents by a combined count of 80-0.

Lee's sophs posted a 33-0 win at Permian that was highlighted by the running of Rodney Sims. Sims scored three times on long runs to up the sophomore record to 6-0.

"The ground game looked real good," understated coach Bill Jordan. "We had really good blocking from the line."

Sims opened the Lee onslaught in the first period by bolting 55 yards for his first score. Brian Wurster's point after was successful.

Chris Alexander added a touchdown with a dive into the end zone from the two later in the quarter. Wurster's PAT was on the mark, and the Rebs held that score to lead 14-0 at the half.

Lee iced the game with three tallies in the third quarter. Sims again ripped loose from the Rebel 45 and went all the way for his second 55-yard scoring run. Minutes later, Sims got free again and scored from 40 yards out.

Tony Brown scored near the end of the third quarter on a six-yard carry. The extra points were missed on the final two touchdowns, giving Permian a 33-0 bruise to take home.

"They are always tough," Jordan said of the Mojo-men. "They have one of the best programs in the state and a real good under-program."

Jordan's boys will get another chance to beat Permian next week when they tackle the next step, the Panther JV. Thursday's game was the fourth Lee shutout of the year, and the Rebs have surrendered only 20 points in six games this season.

"The most important thing," Jordan says of his charges, " is that when they have had to do the job, they've done it. So far, they have competed real well when the pressure was on. That's the biggest plus about this group. They really compete in a game situation."

Lee's JV's stayed in the win column with a 47-0 pasting of the Abilene JV's. A first quarter fumble recovery by David Houston in the Abilene end zone got the Lee rout started. Dexter Traylor's point after was good. Traylor got six more points when he scored on a 25-yard pass from quarterback Dirk Bergoon, but then Traylor misfired on the PAT.

Lee made it 20-0 after Craig Swearingen scored on a two-yard run and Traylor converted.

The rampage continued when Tuey Rankin rambled 57 yards for another score. Lawrence Medlock handled the extra point chores after the score and after Kevin Witt scored moments later from 28 yards out.

At the half, Lee had a 34-0 advantage. After a scoreless third quarter, the Rebs' J.V. Brown and Witt both added two-yard scoring runs to hand Lee the win. The Rebs are now 4-2, and visit unbeaten Kermit's varsity next Saturday in a real test.

"They weren't very strong," said Lee coach Mike Quimby of Abilene. "Our kids just did a good job." Quimby's date with Kermit has him on the move. "It will be very tough. They are an undefeated 3A football team. We've got lots of work ahead of us."

Stewart effort comes up pink

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — Payne Stewart's outfit was as spectacular as his iron shots.

His shocking pink knickers and matching attire drew attention. His irons helped put him up front going into today's second round of the $250,000 Southern Open golf tournament.

Stewart fired a 5-under-par 65 Thursday to take a one-stroke lead over Gary Hallberg and Sam Torrance, a European Ryder Cup player from Scotland.

Rebs win, MHS loses

Midland High's volleyball team suffered a key district defeat, while Lee's Rebels dumped Odessa to keep their slim title hopes alive Thursday.

Midland's 14-16, 9-15 loss to Odessa Permian dropped the 'Dogs to 4-4 in district 4-5A competition. The defending district champs have now seen their chances to repeat almost totally dry up.

"We made a lot of costly mistakes and they benefitted," coach Linda Jolly said. "It's not very encouraging.

"They just outplayed us," said the frustrated coach. Jolly said a lack of concentration had hurt her team. "These girls are just a little bit inexperienced. They know what to do, but they have lapses, places where we relax. Volleyball's such a quick game you can't relax."

MHS gets a chance to improve its' mark next Tuesday at Big Spring. "We beat them the first round, the girls will just have to play better. We have to start all over."

The Lee's team upped its' mark to 6-2 in the district with a 15-10, 15-10 handling of Odessa. The Bronchos are 1-7 in the district, so the win was fodder for coach Janice Baulch's squad. Lee's JV's won by a 15-6, 15-8 count for the sweep.

Abilene Cooper helped set up next week's confrontation between Lee and San Angelo. Cooper shocked San Angelo, giving them their first defeat. SA and Cooper now top the district with 7-1 marks. A Lee win on a home court Tuesday would put the Rebs in the thick of the race and give Lee a chance to avenge an early loss.

New York loses football team

NEW YORK (AP) — If the New York Jets ever do come back to the city after this season, it won't be for at least five years.

That's the term of their initial agreement to play at Giants Stadium in East Rutherford, N.J., according to Jon F. Hanson, chairman of the New Jersey Sports and Exposition Authority.

Hanson also said Thursday that if the Jets decide after five years to leave the Meadowlands sports complex, they will pay the Authority a $10-million penalty. The Jets will determine before Feb. 15, 1986, whether to exercise an option to stay permanently or return to New York, according to Hanson.

The terms of the Jets' agreement with the Meadowlands came shortly after owner Leon Hess officially announced his intention to move to New Jersey in a letter to New York Mayor Ed Koch, which was simultaneously released to the press.

The move had been previously announced last week by Koch at a City Hall press conference after the city reached a stalemate in negotiations to keep the team in New York.

Hess' letter to Koch said the Jets "have been and still are playing our home games in a rundown, neglected stadium, which is well-known to be the NFL's poorest facility for athletes and spectators alike." His reference was to Shea Stadium, which the Jets share with baseball's New York Mets.

Hess said that at a Sept. 26 meeting Koch promised to offer on Sept. 30 a plan for a new stadium but that on Sept. 28 he "held a news conference ... announcing a Jets move to New Jersey, although you knew very well that no such decision had been made."

In announcing the move to the Meadowlands, Hess left the door open to return the Jets to New York. He said he would return if the city built "a first-class professional football stadium."

But Koch answered that this was unlikely because of economic reasons. The mayor said that it would be ludicrous to "build a $20-million stadium so he can play 10 games a year."

"It's not possible to devote 20 per cent of our capital budget for that use," said Koch. "If such a stadium were commercially viable, then he should be able to put together a private consortium to use private funds for that purpose, the city would certainly cooperate. Leon Hess is aware of that."

Koch felt that Hess' letter Thursday was misleading, in that the Jets' owner had no intention of ever returning to the city.

"His letter is nothing more than a smokescreen to deter angry fans from venting their frustration with catcalls when he appears a week from Sunday at Shea Stadium," the mayor said in a news release.

The Jets next play at home on Oct. 16 against Miami.

Using football terminology, Koch added in an open note to Hess, "Leon, your effort to conceal your true intentions reminds me of a trick play and it won't work."

Koch said that Hess has never been true in the prior negotiations to try to keep the team in New York.

In the week following the news conference, Hess said, "the Jets received 9,000 telephone calls from fans ... less than 60 people voiced opposition to the Meadowlands move, with virtually every caller requesting ticket information if the Jets move to the Meadowlands. The Jets also received more than 4,000 written requests to buy seats for next season if the Jets move to the Meadowlands."

Sampson is hit in Rocket debut

DALLAS (AP) — Ralph Sampson's long-awaited professional debut drew raves from everyone except himself and his coach.

The millionaire rookie of the Houston Rockets scored 24 points, collected six rebounds, blocked two shots, hit a three-pointer and had four assists in Houston's 122-111 National Basketball Association exhibition loss to the Dallas Mavericks Thursday night.

All in 30 minutes.

"I made mental mistakes and I have a long way to go," said Sampson, the Virginia All-American who was the No. 1 pick in the NBA draft.

"Sampson played a sporadic game and his shot selection was poor, which caused us to have to defend against some fast breaks," said Coach Bill Fitch. "I'm not disappointed with him. He'll get better."

Sampson hit 11 of 23 attempts from the field and the only free throw he tried.

Most of his field goals came from deep in the corner or at the top of the free throw lane.

"He's a great outside shooter," said Dallas Coach Dick Motta. "He did float outside quite a bit. He's just an excellent outside shooter."

Teammate Elvin Hayes said Sampson "did some real good things for his first game. He shot the ball real well. He's just trying to get a feel for what is happening but that's what the exhibition season is for.

"He blocked some shots and I think he is a very aggressive player. He is also a very intelligent player."

Sampson said he wasn't trying to be a one-man team.

"I'm not trying to be God and win the thing myself because I know that's impossible," he said. "It takes all 11 or 12. I have no personal goals as far as points or rebounds or anything."

Sampson played longer than he thought he would and added "I'm in a lot better shape than I thought."

He had been bothered by fluid on his knees during early practice sessions but showed no problems against the Mavs.

Sampson delighted the crowd of 12,304 fans in Reunion Arena by hitting a three-pointer as time ran out in the third period.

Dallas' No. 1 draft pick, Dale Ellis, scored 19 points to lead the Mavs to victory.

Sampson said he wasn't as tight as he thought he would be.

The course in race driving, "makes you a much better driver on the streets," she said.

The actress noted that sitting behind the wheel of a low-slung machine traveling at 100 mph can be an eye-opening experience for any freeway flyer.

"So many people out on the road are pretending they're racing," she said. "I think if people took it (the course) they probably would drive a lot slower."

'Cooke confronted, conquered death'

NEW YORK (AP) — Roman Catholics around the world mourned the passing of Cardinal Terence Cooke, an advocate of the sanctity of human life who the president of the United States said "confronted and conquered death" in his last days.

The cardinal's funeral was scheduled for Monday, and the city's annual Columbus Day parade was canceled. Leaders of the archdiocese of New York chose the vicar general, Auxiliary Bishop Joseph T. O'Keefe, to serve as administrator until Pope John Paul II appoints the eighth archbishop of New York.

Cooke, who wrote during his last painful weeks that "Life is no less beautiful when accompanied by illness," died Thursday at his home behind St. Patrick's Cathedral from "acute leukemia complicating a chronic lymphoma condition," according to the archdiocese. He was 62.

The cardinal's body was to be brought to the cathedral toda for public viewing over the weekend. A Mass of Christian burial was scheduled for 2 p.m. Monday, followed by burial in the crypt under the cathedral's main altar along with his predecessors.

Tributes to Cooke poured in from political and spiritual leaders, many noting Cooke's leading role in the Catholic church's fight against abortion and praising his decision to reject heavy pain-killers and elaborate life-maintaining procedures.

In death, said President Reagan, "he had for us a special gift and a special inspiration. The world has rarely seen a more moving display of the three cardinal virtues than the faith, hope and love with which Cardinal Cooke confronted and conquered death. He bore his suffering in imitation of his Savior.

'Why does anyone watch violence on television'?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The surgeon general of the United States, rising to the defense of the television networks on the subject of violent programs, says the real question for social researchers is "Why on Earth does anybody watch that stuff?"

Dr. C. Everett Koop said that having studied the problem for years, "broadcasters and mental health researchers are equally sensitive to the social problems caused by some popular shows."

Koop was the keynoter Thursday at a conference of the National Coalition on TV Violence. His was a strong dissent to the message carried to the all-day conference by speaker after speaker about the effects of television violence on children and society.

He said that instead of more study on the linkage of TV and violence, there should be research into why people experience fear in American society, why they are insecure, and why they withdraw from the real world.

"We must confront the hard fact, that if all television stations in this country would shut down tomorrow, millions of Americans would still be frightened of the life around them," Koop said.

"We may have our differences over how to define the term violence," Koop said. "Some shows will have a segment that rather teeters on the edge of what can be tolerated and public health people leap to some brilliant judgments about the broadcasters' motivation. "The real issue, however, is this: Why on earth does anybody watch that stuff?"

He said "we may be very unhappy about the fact that millions of people, including thousands of impressionable children would voluntarily watch something that we believe is violent and socially harmful. Our job, it seems to me, is to research further into the motivations of the audience, rather than continue pounding away at the broadcasters."

A 1982 government review of scientific literature over the past 10 years concluded there was overwhelming evidence that television violence leads to aggressive behavior by children and teen-agers.

Crop yields vary widely over state

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — An ideal week of harvest weather allowed Texas farmers to forge ahead to get their crops in, agricultural experts said.

Cotton harvesting is the main farm operation, but farmers are also harvesting grain sorghum, corn, sugar beets, soybeans, sunflowers and peanuts, said Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

Crop yields are varying widely over the state, Carpenter noted, due to weather conditions that ranged from not enough rain to too much. Overall, though, crop yields have generally been fair to good, with a few locations boasting above-average crops.

One crop that boasts excellent yield prospects this year is the pecan crop, Carpenter said. Both yield and quality of the crop appear to be excellent as early varieties start to hull.

Sugar cane is maturing in the Rio Grande Valley and the area's citrus crop looks good. A few early oranges have already been picked.

Some hay making continues over the state, with second and third cuttings under way in the Coastal Bend. Hay yields have been sporadic this year due to weather conditions, Carpenter said, and the demand for hay will be heavy this fall and winter, particularly in western areas where hay feeding has already been under way for some time due to drought conditions.

Farmers over much of the state are planting small grains — mainly wheat and oats, but rain is needed in many areas to get the crops up, said Carpenter. In the plains, farmers have had to irrigate to get wheat up.

Reports from district Extension directors showed these conditions:

WEST CENTRAL: About 60 percent of the cotton is open, with yield prospects at about one-fourth bale per acre. Most of the grain sorghum crop is in, with fair yields. Early peanut yields are running about one-half of normal. Some farmers continue to dry-seed wheat. Ranchers continue to cull herds due to a shortage of forage and stock water. Supplemental feeding is under way.

FAR WEST: Scattered rains over the region have greened up pastures and ranges, but ranchers are continuing to ship cattle and sheep to market. Some early cotton is being harvested, and farmers are applying defoliants to prepare the rest of the crop for harvesting.

SOUTHWEST: Peanuts and cotton continue to produce above average yields. Harvesting of a bumper pecan crop is about to start but growers face low prices. Ranchers are continuing to cull herds heavily and to provide supplemental feed due to poor grazing conditions. The mohair market remains strong.

PANHANDLE: Harvesting of grain sorghum and high moisture corn is active, and the sugar beet harvest has started. Cotton is maturing under open weather. Up to 75 percent of the wheat crop has been seeded in some counties, but rain is needed to get the crop up. Pastures and ranges are in poor shape.

SOUTH PLAINS: Farmers are harvesting early grain sorghum, corn, soybeans and sunflowers, and a few early bales of cotton have been ginned. The sugar beet harvest is also under way. Farmers have started applying a desiccant to some cotton to prepare it for harvest. Rain is needed to get up the wheat crop.

ROLLING PLAINS: Cotton continues to open under hot, dry conditions; some farmers are applying defoliants to prepare the crop for harvest. Peanuts are being harvested but yields are poor due to the summer drought. Stock water is critically short in some locations and ranges continue to deteriorate.

NORTH CENTRAL: Cotton harvesting is under way and peanut harvesting is about to start. Harvesting of a good corn crop is generally complete. Late-planted grain sorghum is maturing. Farmers continue to plant wheat and oats but need rain to get the crops up. Pastures also need rain although grazing is generally good.

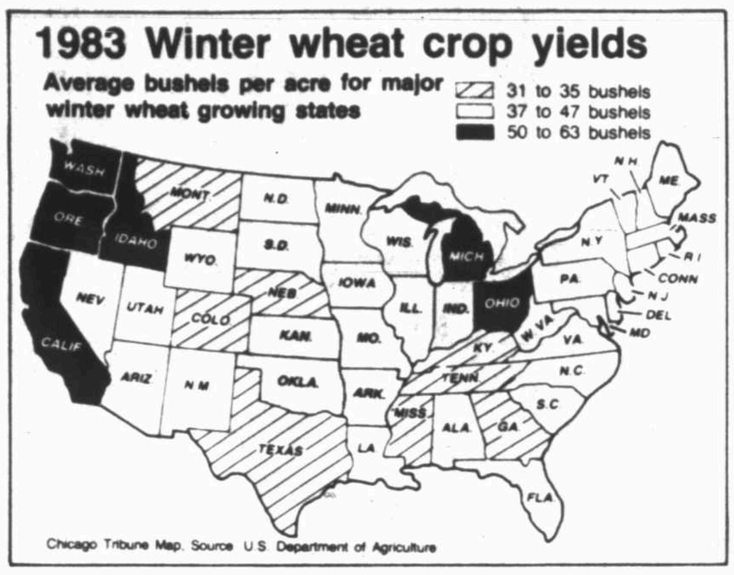
NORTHEAST: A good grain sorghum harvest is about complete while the cotton harvest is at the halfway point. Wheat planting is active but rain is needed to get the crop up. Some early cattle feeding has started due to lack of grazing.

CENTRAL: Cotton harvesting continues active, with fair to good yields. Farmers continue to "dust in" small grains, hoping that rain will come soon to get the crops up. Stock water is running low and grazing is short, with supplemental feeding in progress.

EAST: Hay yields have been excellent this year, with most harvesting complete. The peanut crop continues to make good progress but acreage is limited. Most oats have been planted but need rain. Livestock remain in good to excellent shape. The pecan crop is heavy.

UPPER COAST: The second rice crop is heading and soybeans are maturing. Peanuts are about 80 percent harvested, and farmers are still harvesting a little cotton and corn. Hay making continues in a few locations. Cattle have good grazing.

SOUTH CENTRAL: The cotton harvest is past its peak, with generally good yields. Most small grains have been planted, with some fields up. The pecan crop continues to look good although aphids are a problem in some locations. Pastures are providing good grazing.



Gypsy moth infestation seems to be easing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The gypsy moth invasion that has caused millions of dollars in damage over the last three years is continuing to retreat this year, federal officials say.

But the officials also hold out no hope of ever seeing the insect's complete demise in the United States.

"The gypsy moth's been around for a hundred years," said Agriculture Department spokesman Ray Steiger. "We don't expect it will ever be controlled, certainly not eradicated. About the most we can hope for is to keep it controlled to the point that the amount of defoliation will be less."

Steiger said chemical spraying was continuing this year, mainly targeted at residential areas with valuable shade trees. But he said fewer acres were being sprayed than last year, when 671,000 acres were treated, indicating "a downtrend in the severity."

But in contrast to annual damage recorded before 1980, defoliation by the gypsy moth caterpillars this year will still be out of control. Steiger said, however, that it would likely be less than the 8.1 million acres of forest attacked by the insect in 1982.

In 1981, defoliation by the gypsy moth hit a record 13 million acres, mostly in the Northeast, up from 5 million acres stripped of leaves in 1980.

Before that, no more than 2 million acres a year was ever defoliated by the gypsy moth, which was accidently released in the U.S. in 1869 after being brought here from France in an unsuccessful silk worm experiment.

Insects found in meat

WASHINGTON — Pieces of insects, including parts of a spider and a moth, have shown up in meat samples from shipments intended for the school lunch program, says the Agriculture Department.

The latest test results announced Tuesday showed insect particles in five of 12 samples. Those were the first indications of contamination in a widespread investigation involving millions of pounds of ground beef USDA bought for donation to the school lunch program.

A spokesman, John McClung, said the insect fragments "represent no health threat, but they are, nonetheless, contaminants."

In one sample taken from meat stored in Spokane, Wash., 10 insect fragments were detected, which McClung said could have come from one insect.

The other four contained one insect fragment each. Those were taken from meat stored in Versailles, Ky.; Long Beach Calif., Charlotte, N.C., and Seattle, Wash.

McClung said the other seven samples were from Aurora, Colo., Lebanon, Tenn.; and Tulsa, Okla., each with two samples, and one from Spokane, Wash.

The samples were from frozen ground beef which had been sold to USDA for distribution to school districts across the country. The meat was bought from two plants — Cattle King of Denver and Nebraska Beef Inc. of Gering, Neb.

Department officials impounded an estimated 6.5 million pounds of meat from the two plants last month following reports that some of it may have been processed under unsanitary conditions. The companies have denied the allegations.

McClung said that laboratory tests now have been performed on 46 samples from the impounded meat, including the dozen announced Tuesday. The five with insect fragments were the first to be found contaminated.

Officials said most of the insect fragments were "non-descript or not determined" as to species. However, the fragment from Versailles, Ky., was identified as part of a spider, while the one from Long Beach, Calif., was said to be a scale from a moth.

Benign lumps don't change into cancerous ones

Solomon

Dear Dr. Solomon: I went to my doctor when I found a lump in my breast, but he told me that it was benign. But now I'm wondering: Does a benign lump ever become a cancerous lump? — Estelle, Waynesboro, Va.

Dear Estelle: Benign lumps do not change into cancerous lumps. However, it is possible for a woman to have both benign and cancerous lumps.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I know that it is not good for a baby to be born prematurely, but what is there about such a birth that makes it dangerous? — Mrs. F.C., Cheyenne, Wyo.

Dear Mrs. C.: Immature lung development is the most common form of death in premature infants. Sometimes women who are expected to give birth prematurely are given steriods, which may cause the fetus' lungs to develop at a faster rate.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My mother was helped tremendously by one of your columns in which you wrote about the interaction of different drugs. Now I wonder if you can help me. I am on the pill and I would like to know if it would be safe for men to take other medication. — Mrs. G.R., Yonkers, N.Y.

Dear Mrs. R.: Dr. Edward A. DeSano Jr., of Bannock Memorial Hospital in Pocatello, Idaho, has reported that 16 of his patients became pregnant while taking oral contraceptives. Fifteen of the 16 said they had used antibiotics or antihistamines, which apparently reduced the effectiveness of the pill.

The extent to which a particular woman who is on oral contraceptives will be affected by antibiotics or antihistamines cannot be predicted. Much may depend on a variety of factors, including the woman's general health.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I hurt my knee playing ball a few months ago and it has been bothering me ever since. My doctor says that if it doesn't clear up soon, I should think about having it arthroscoped. I'd be willing to think about it if I knew what it was. Will you explain what the purpose of this form of treatment is? — Roger, Charleston, S.C.

Dear Roger: Arthroscopy is both a diagnostic procedure and a treatment technique. The surgeon enters the knee with a small scope, which is about the size of a pencil. This permits him or her to see the structure of the joint, particularly the ligaments and cartilage. The arthroscope allows an operation to be performed without the need for the surgeon to open the knee.

Arthroscopy has about a 95 percent accuracy rate, compared with the 70 percent rate achieved by history, physical examination, and x-ray.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1727 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column).

Cat may have used last of its nine lives

Film maker says animated movies dead

LOS ANGELES (AP) — There's little life left in the production of animated feature movies, which have had a troubled history since Walt Disney invented the art form in 1937.

"It's dead," Ralph Bakshi proclaimed recently as he announced he was switching to live-action movies.

Bakshi is the filmmaker who brought vigor and controversy to the field of animation with such films as "Fritz the Cat," "Heavy Traffic" and "Lord of the Rings."

"I tried to create an adult animation market, and it proved too difficult," said Bakshi, who is planning a film with real actors for Paramount Pictures. No producer of animation — the trade doesn't like to call them cartoons — can compete with Disney, he added, citing the recent failures of "The Secret of NIMH," "Heidi's Song," "Twice Upon a Time" and his own "American Pop."

Warner Bros. has also released compilations of old Bugs Bunny and Daffy Duck cartoons to scant return. Bakshi spoke just before the release of his latest feature, "Fire and Ice," which has failed to catch on in a limited release by 20th Century-Fox.

Ever since Walt Disney made "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" in 1937, rival producers have tried to match his success. It has never happened. Film makers claim they can make features of equal quality, but they lack the power of the Disney name and the company's marketing skill.

"None of the major studios knows how to sell animated features," said Don Bluth, the Disney defector who produced "The Secret of NIMH." "If you give your film to a major, you're certain to fail.

"I have believed for the past five years that the animated art form was dying," Bluth said. "Except for Disney, there hasn't been a commercial success in the field."

He added that he believed "NIMH" would eventually turn a profit — "After all, 'Pinocchio,' 'Bambi' and 'Fantasia' lost money on their first releases."

Although his company has two feature in story development, Bluth has turned his energies to a new area: video games featuring animated displays. He created the hit "Dragon's Lair," which he described as a $3-million investment that has already grossed $40 million. He plans to make four or five games a year — 22-minute films at $100,000 per minute.

"Animated features have a place, especially with the coming of cassettes and other markets," said Joe Barbera of the Hanna-Barbera studio, which produced "Huckleberry Hound," "Yogi Bear" and "The Flintstones."

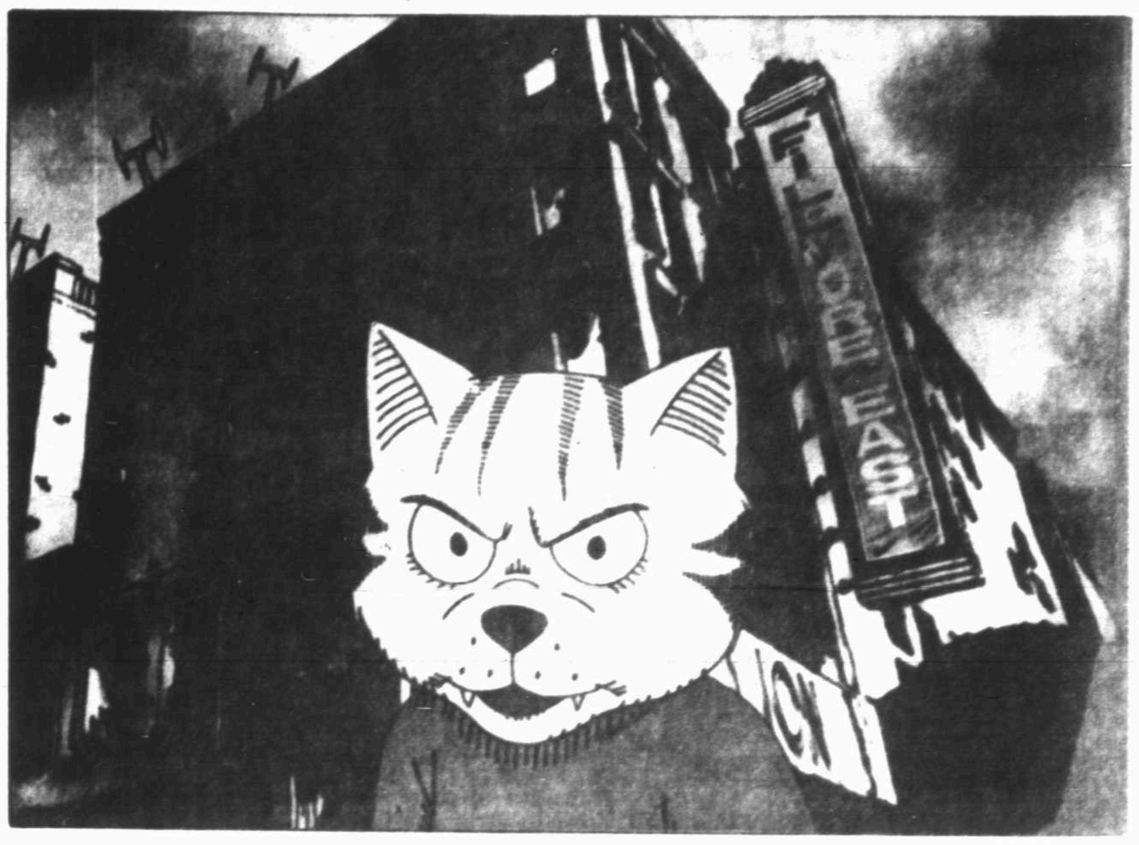
"The main problem is that they take too long (to make) and cost too much. When you're in production for five-six-seven years, the interest keeps piling up," Barbera said.

Walt Disney Productions maintains its confidence in the animated feature and has trained a new generation of animators to replace retired veterans and those who left with Bluth three years ago.

"We're half-way through the rough animation of 'The Black Cauldron,'" said Ed Hansen, head of the Disney animation department, "and we're aiming for release in the summer of 1985."

The sword-and-sorcery adventure has been in production since May 1981 and is expected to cost $20 million.

Disney also has a 30-minute film "Mickey's Christmas Carol," using all of the studio's old-time characters, which will accompany the re-release of "The Rescuers" this Christmas. Hansen reported that "Basil of Baker Street," a mouse's-eye view of Sherlock Holmes, is developing nicely and may go into production soon.



Fritz the cat's nine lives may not be enough since there's little left in animated feature movies. Ralph Bakshi, who made animated films "Fritz the Cat," "Heavy Traffic" and "Lord of the Rings," has recently claimed that he was switching to live-action movies.

It's more in the style of the cartoons and we hope it could be done for $13-15 million," he said.

Eric Larson, 78, is the last of the animators to remain the studio from the era when Walt Disney was expanding for "Snow White." He trains new animators and said they include "some doggone good talent."

"I feel a kind of rebirth here," said Larson. "Mickey's Christmas Carol' created a lot of excitement. 'Basil of Baker Street' has the same kind of warmth that 'Dumbo' had ... a lot of charm and a minimum of dialogue. We've been letting dialogue tell the story too much."

Council chips away at culinary idea

WELSHPOOL, Wales (AP) — A pub owner's bid for culinary immortality has been spiked by the local government, which has stopped him from selling potato chips that claimed to be "hedgehog flavored."

After submitting a bag of chips to exhaustive chemical tests, the Trading Standards department of the Powys County Council declared it couldn't find a trace of hedgehog, a cross between veal and pork, in Philip Lewis' "hedgehog-flavored" snack.

"I never dreamed anyone would seriously think we were using hedgehogs in them," exclaimed Lewis, owner of The Vaults pub in this Welsh village. "It all started as a joke. We have several Gypsy customers who kept asking if we sold hedgehog-flavored crisps."

Continental Airlines ads offer strikebreaking pilots profit sharing

By ANDREW M. WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON — Continental Airlines representatives and striking pilots were set to return to the negotiating table today for what the airline described as "one final attempt" to reach a contract settlement.

Continental spokesman Bruce Hicks declined to say what moves the company planned if negotiations failed. Hicks also said the two groups met for several hours on Thursday and that the airline made a new proposal but he declined to elaborate.

In other developments Thursday, the troubled airline started advertising for replacements for the striking pilots and announced a profit sharing plan under which employees would get 15 to 20 percent of the company's profits.

The profit sharing plan is subject to approval of the bankruptcy court and the Internal Revenue Service, Continental said.

In announcing the plan, Continental chairman Frank Lorenzo said, "As we work together to strengthen and enhance our airline's position in the deregulated marketplace, the 4,000 employees here today, as well as many, many more we rehire as Continental grows, will realize the fruits of their labor by sharing in the company's profitability."

While negotiations with the striking pilots continued Thursday, the classified ads appeared in Houston and Dallas newspapers seeking pilots licensed to fly three types of passenger jets. The ads were to begin in Denver and Los Angeles papers today, Hicks said.

The ads were purchased because the airline had "no way of knowing how many more of our employees will come back to work," Hicks said. He also conceded more pilots were observing the strike than airline officials had anticipated.

"There were a number of pilots who had made commitments to us that have not honored those commitments," Hicks said. Hicks refused to say how many pilots are working through the strike.

"There's a pretty intense peer pressure campaign going right now," Hicks said. "We're not going to provide information to ALPA (the Air Line Pilots Association)."

Pilots and flight attendants struck after the airline halted flights Sept. 24, reorganized under federal bankruptcy laws and reopened Sept. 27, instituting a contract that pays workers about half what they made previously.

The attempt to hire replacements "indicates the company is severely lacking in flight crews," said Julie Graves, a spokeswoman for the flight attendants' union. "There are not that many professionals who will fly under the unsafe working conditions that have been unilaterally imposed."

The Los Angeles Times reported Thursday that the airline was prepared to concede two noneconomic issues.

Continental was prepared to rescind a demand that pilots surrender their seniority rights and remove a clause from the new contract that would allow the airline to suspend the work agreement whenever officials deem it necessary, the newspaper said.

Hicks said Continental had sent out memos to pilots some time ago that "clarified that those were some of the issues that the company was planning on changing from the emergency work rules." Those rules are in the contract imposed after the reorganization.

Continental filed for reorganization under Chapter 11 of the Federal Bankruptcy Act, suspending all domestic flights for two days and resuming service to only 25 of the 78 U.S. destinations it previously served. It laid off about 70 percent of its 12,000 workers.

The airline has lost more than $471 million since January 1979. Lorenzo has said losses in the first nine months of this year could top $130 million, including more than $50 million in the third quarter.

In Washington, Hoyte Decker, a deputy director of the Civil Aeronautics Board, said Continental credit card customers need not pay bills for tickets they were unable to use.

The CAB also voted Thursday to hold a meeting next week to see what could be done about refunds for customers holding Continental tickets purchased prior to the firm's reorganization.

In another development, Reps. George Miller, D.Calif. and William Clay, D-Mo., said following a meeting with Lorenzo in Washington that they believe the Continental chairman used the bankruptcy laws to break the unions.

Miller said Lorenzo told him his actions were necessary to keep the airline functioning.

"But what has not yet been explained to me is why bankruptcy court was used to tear up contracts," Miller said.

Three Mile Island to reopen?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three Nuclear Regulatory Commission members complained about the uncertain status of Three Mile Island proceedings and a fourth stalked out of the room during a turbulent meeting on the future of the troubled plant.

Commissioner Victor Gilinsky led Thursday's demands for a timetable on determining whether to allow the undamaged Unit 1 reactor to reopen.

"We just can't keep putting this off," Gilinsky said. "There are a lot of people with big stakes in this case. We need a public statement on this subject and soon."

Commissioners James Asselstine and Fred Bernthal echoed his concerns.

"If we're literally years away from a management decision, people have a right to know," said Asselstine. "I would urge us to reach a decision on where we are and where we think we're going."

The NRC, its staff and various boards have been weighing the restart since 1980, a year after the nation's worst commercial nuclear accident crippled the adjacent Unit 2 reactor at TMI.

Convenience store chain buys U-Totem

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Circle K Corp., operator of Phoenix-based chain of convenience stores, will purchase all stock in UtoteM Inc., owner of another chain of convenience stores, from American Financial Corp., according to an agreement in principle announced Thursday.

The purchase price of about $225 million includes cash, mortgage notes, convertible preferred stock and warrants, announced Circle K Chairman Karl Eller and Carl H. Lindner, chairman of AFC, based in Cincinnati.

The transaction is subject to approval by Circle K shareholders and by the Federal Trade and Securities Exchange commissions, said Ray Cox, a spokesman for Circle K.

UtoteM has about 960 stores, mostly in Sun Belt states from Florida to California. Circle K operates about 1,200 stores in 12 Western and Southwestern states.

Texon buys producing properties

HOUSTON (SWN) — Texon Energy Corporation (NASDAQ: TXON) announced today it has entered into a letter of intent to acquire 50 percent undivided interest in a group of producing oil and gas properties from Oxoco Inc. for $9,800,000 — payable in $7,000,000 cash and 533,333 shares of Texon stock.

Texon simultaneously announced that they have commenced drilling a 15,000 foot test in the Fandango area, Jim Hogg County, Texas. The Tom Brown No. 1 No Sellers is located 2,200 feet northwest of the new gas discovery by Diamond Shamrock, Mesa and Ensearch.

Mitchell Energy debt goes to fixed rate

THE WOODLANDS, Tex. — Mitchell Energy & Development Corp. has converted $155 million of the company's outstanding debt from floating to fixed-rates.

Philip S. Smith, senior vice president-administration and chief financial officer, said that the conversion was accomplished through an unsecured financing agreement with three insurance companies. The new loan agreement, which comprises five- to 15-year notes at interest rates of 12-1/4 percent to 12-7/8 per-cent, replaces a number of existing floating-rate bank lines of credit.

Smith said the conversion is in keeping with the company's financial strategy of restructuring a greater portion of its debt to fixed-rate borrowings.

Inventor more interested in product

By JANE SEAGRAVE
Associated Press Writer

EVERETT, Mass. (AP) — He was an eccentric inventor with a reputation for fussiness and generosity, and an idea for molded plastic dishes that elevated in-home sales to a new national pastime — the Tupperware party.

But the brains behind the multimillion-dollar Tupperware empire — Earl S. Tupper, who died this week at age 76 — was more interested in the factory where his plastic containers were made than in the living rooms where they were sold, according to those who knew him when he launched his now-famous housewares from a small Massachusetts town.

"He was the fussiest man you ever saw," said Tom Damigella of Everett, who has distributed Tupperware for 40 years. "But he didn't care a thing about promotion.

"He told the management at one time that under no circumstances would he appear before anyone at a meeting. And he never did.

"He was an oddball, a hermit."

Tupper, who sold his profitable business to Rexall Drug Corp. in 1958, was remembered by former employees and friends following his death Monday in Costa Rica, where he had lived for 10 years.

In an interview seven months before his death, the Berlin, N.H., native said he had become disenchanted with his own country.

"I think the U.S. has lost its objective: to do things with verve," he told the Burlington (Vt.) Free Press. "I doubt they will ever recover because they lost what they were aiming for. People became dulled. There was no longer the enthusiasm to live life naturally and do things constructively."

Plastics were still in their infancy in the early 1940s when Tupper stumbled onto a way to inject the paraffin-like polyethylene into molds to create airtight containers and household products.

In 1942, he founded Tupper Plastics and opened his first factory in South Grafton, a small town in central Massachusetts.

"It was during the war. We did a lot of war things," said Zenia Porter, who went to work at the factory as soon as it opened. "We made Army buckles, things for jeeps, tops for gas masks. When the war was over, that was when we started on the other things — containers, stirrers, teething rings."

Employees say Tupper was a perfectionist who would dress down a worker if a piece didn't meet his satisfaction or he found litter on the floor.

He lived in seclusion with his wife and six children on a farm in South Upton. Despite his reputation as a recluse, workers said he was very generous.

"He used to buy us nice presents and he used to take us horseback riding and roller skating," said Camillia Lachance, who went to work at the plant in 1943. "He used to have a car and if you worked all week you could take the car for the weekend. He would always have a Christmas party for the children."

Initially, Tupperware was sold mainly in stores, said Jack Linn, a spokesman for Tupperware Home Parties, now based in Orlando, Fla.

Judge says settlement will ease tensions between two giants

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Settlement of a lawsuit by IBM against Hitachi of Japan alleging theft of trade secrets will ease tensions, not only between the two electronics giants, but between the United States and Japan, a judge says.

The accord, signed Thursday by U.S. District Judge Spencer Williams, requires Hitachi Ltd. to pay an unspecified amount to International Business Machines Corp. for costs of the suit.

Hitachi also agreed to deliver to IBM any secret trade information it now possesses and to give IBM the names, addresses and business affiliations of people who made any disclosure or offered to disclose protected IBM information — and to describe the circumstances.

The suit had sought unspecified damages, noting that IBM had spent hundreds of millions of dollars to develop computer hardware technology that allegedly was stolen.

The settlement means 14 Hitachi Ltd. employees, Hitachi affiliate Nissei Electronics of Japan and an employee of Nissei no longer are defendants in the suit. Remaining as defendants are National Semiconductor Corp.; a subsidiary, National Advanced Systems; NCL Data Inc. of Santa Clara, and its president, Tom Yoshida.

Similar proposals to settle were being offered to the other parties.

The accord has "international significance broader than the mere settlement of this dispute," Williams said. "It will serve to reduce tension between the countries of the United States and Japan."

Noting that the settlement was negotiated not by attorneys but by top executives from each company, Williams called the agreement "farsighted."

Hitachi spokesman Shinji Shimokawa, in Tokyo, said it was an "important step" toward restoring good relations between the two companies.

IBM charged in its civil suit that the defendants conspired in activities resulting in the receipt of stolen IBM trade secrets. It contended they had infringed on IBM copyright material and data and engaged in unfair competition.

Yoshida and several executives of Hitachi were arrested earlier this year in an FBI "sting" operation in which an agent opened a computer brokerage agency in San Jose and spread the word he could get confidential industrial information for a price.

Hitachi and two employees pleaded guilty Feb. 8 to criminal charges of conspiring to transport stolen property from the United States to Japan.

Hitachi paid a $10,000 fine and the two employees were fined a total of $14,000. Charges against nine other employees living in Japan remain open; charges against two other employees were dismissed.

Yoshida, 38, pleaded no contest to transporting stolen goods and received a suspended sentence and a $7,500 fine.

IBM now has the right to inspect any new Hitachi product shipped before before Oct. 1, 1988, when all provisions of the agreement end, except for those sections requiring Hitachi to refrain from using trade secrets.

Also, a procedure was set up to resolve any disputes stemming from use of protected information or a breach of the agreement.

The settlement calls for dismissal of an action brought by Hitachi against IBM in Japan on July 1.

Testimony in the IBM-Hitachi case was among that heard this summer in Congressional subcommittee hearings on the theft of U.S. technology by foreign firms. Some lawmakers are pushing for more effective laws, claiming that American companies are losing billions of dollars and that U.S. secrets could fall into Soviet hands.

Copper unions to continue talks

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Phelps Dodge Corp. and copper union negotiators are scheduled to return to the bargaining table next week to continue talks on work agreements at the company's Ajo mine and smelter.

The two sides met for about 95 minutes on Thursday and reached agreement on 20 side issues before agreeing to resume the talks next Thursday.

On Tuesday, the company had said it was breaking off talks indefinitely because of violence in the mining communities of Clifton and Morenci.

After Thursday's session, company labor relations manager Jack Ladd said Phelps Dodge officials needed to study numerous work agreements covering the Ajo plant.

"They've given us a pile of Ajo work agreements that were cancelled" July 1 when the strike began, Ladd said.

An arbitrator is scheduled to consider on Wednesday a dispute over medical benefits for strikers. The company contends the strikers, because they were replaced after they refused to return to work.

The main economic issues, including the company's demand for an end to cost-of-living pay adjustments, have not been discussed in the talks for more than a month.

Ladd said he hoped tensions would not rise in the mining towns despite the delay, but he said the company will not alter its position on the major economic issues.

Cross-stitching updated

By ELLEN APPEL
Copley News Service

Up until recently, if you thought about "cross-stitch" at all, you thought about white pillowcases with printed blue crosses.

Nowadays, however, another form of cross-stitching, called "counted cross-stitch," has surfaced.

Instead of covering a printed design, modern stitchers now count threads on blank, unprinted, cross-stitch fabric. The design is printed on a separate chart. By counting one group of threads for each box in the chart, you simply copy the design onto the fabric.

With or without a kit, the craft is relatively easy to master. Although the technique may not sound simple, even beginners can learn to cross-stitch by counting threads. The secret is in choosing the right cloth.

With "aida," "hardanger" and other special cross-stitch cloths, the weave is large, even and highly visible. Threads are therefore easy to count and crosses, easy to stitch evenly. In addition, since the background remains blank, projects may be completed fairly quickly.

Here are directions for counted cross-stitch:

MATERIALS: Aida, hardanger or other even-weave fabric from your local craft, needlework or fabric shop; blunt tapestry needle; embroidery floss; charted design, or graph paper and colored markers. Optional: embroidery hoop.

DESIGN: 1. Choose a charted design, or draw you own design on graph paper. 2. Mark your design with the colors you plan to use.

CENTERING: 1. Count boxes to find the center of your chart. Darken horizontal and vertical center lines. 2. Fold fabric in half lengthwise and widthwise. 3. Baste along horizontal line nearest vertical horizontal fold in fabric. 4. Baste along vertical line nearest vertical fold in fabric. 5. Open fabric and press flat.

STARTING TO STITCH: 1. Counting one square of fabric for each square on your graph, count fabric squares to find the top of your design. (A fabric square is an intersection between horizontal and vertical threads.) 2. Count left to find the first square of you design. This is your starting point for stitching. 3. Position fabric in hoop.

STITCHING: 1. Thread needle with two strands of floss. 2. Cross-stitch designs on fabric following illustrations. 3. For each square in the charted design, make one cross-stitch over one square of fabric. 4. Use colors of floss to correspond with colors on the chart.

HINTS: 1. Work one color at a time, stitching all crosses in the same direction, from top to bottom through each design section. 2. Use the same holes for adjacent stitches so that all crosses touch. 3. Don't jump too far from one area to another. 4. Hide loose ends by running them through stitches on back of fabric. 5. Cut away basting lines as they interfere with stitches.

Opinions offered with diapers

By The Associated Press

SOUTH SAN FRANCISCO, Calif. (AP) — Care for a bit of dogma with your diapers?

If it bothers you to mix Reaganomics and rash remedies, gun control and the benefits of breast-feeding or the nuclear arms race and temper tantrums, you are probably not a potential customer of Nan Scott's diaper service.

For the most part, her regulars don't mind. Besides getting a fresh weekly supply of white cotton diapers, they also get Mrs. Scott's views on life.

They know that she doesn't think much of President Reagan, fears the "Superbaby" trend, favors gun control and the Equal Rights Amendment and finds no redeeming qualities in disposable diapers.

Every other month, the 59-year-old Dy-Dee Wash owner and mother of five grown children writes an eight-page newsletter that includes everything from advice on how to get rid of diaper rash to names of parent support groups to an essay on "whatever strikes" her fancy.

In recent newsletters, she has castigated Reagan for "selling us fairy tales from his 1950s-vintage mind," compared disposable diapers to the short-lived paper underwear for adults — "I would guess adults didn't like wearing paper underpants anymore than babies do" — and decried the push to create "Superbabies."

"I've seen too many children 'messed up' by their parents' ambition, their parents' image of what their children should look like, act like, be," she said.

She also offered a list of child-abuse prevention and treatment centers, thanked a reader for calling her a "mensch," and provided her usual list of support groups, poison control centers, infant care classes and want ads for babysitters and baby items.

While she has received letters telling her to "stick to diapers," Mrs. Scott refuses to soften her stands on controversial issues in order to keep customers.

"I have chosen deliberately to take a stand because I'm appalled at how other business people put blinders on and say, 'All I want to do is make money,' " Mrs. Scott said in an interview. "If I'm willing to sacrifice how big the company can be to be able to say something about the world, that suits me fine."

The newsletter began shortly after Mrs. Scott and her husband, Bill, took over the firm in 1962 after owning a similar service in Maryland for 12 years. She's been running the service by herself since her husband died in 1971.

As Mrs. Scott points out, the newsletter was not born controversial. At first, she offered the typical "women's fare" — recipes, sewing, homemaking tips and other ideas for young mothers that were related to the home.

Love will not spoil 'Cheers'

NEW YORK (AP) — Love and marriage ruined "Rhoda" several years ago, and the producers of "Cheers" aren't about to let Sam and Diane's newfound togetherness destroy a delightfully hostile relationship in the same way.

Last week, Diane and Sam, the often-antagonistic leads in NBC's Emmy-winning comedy, finally consummated their off-again, off-again relationship. But have no fear, love won't spoil them. They won't be happy ever after.

"Whatever their relationship, they still will not like each other," says Glen Charles, one of the program's executive producers.

"Cheers" will be preempted tonight by the American League baseball playoffs. Televised sports have interrupted many a relationship, so it's only fitting that the new lovebirds in "Cheers" have to wait another week for more non-marital bliss.

In last week's season-opener, Sam (Ted Danson) at long last got Diane (Shelley Long) behind closed bedroom doors. When the story picks up next Thursday, their chronic billing and cooing will disgust the bar's regulars.

That's a relief. The funniest, most adult comedy on TV could not stand too much sappy syrup. What gives "Cheers" much of its bite is that Sam and Diane are wildly drawn to each other by the same things that pull them apart: their differences in intellect, attitude and lifestyle.

"What do you think it's like to be attracted to someone who makes you sick?" Sam said in last season's final episode. "I could write a book about the subject," responded Diane.

Danson said Sam couldn't live much longer on banter and no touching. "I had to have something happen. We couldn't tease ourselves and the audience forever," he said. "I think you can be in a relationship and have tons of conflict."

NBC has had many discussions with the "Cheers" staff on the subject. The network is well aware that art can imitate life. Too much domesticity can remove the excitement from a sizzling relationship, on-screen or off. Washing the dishes and taking out the garbage aren't the same as candlelight dinners and breakfast in bed.

In the 1970s, audiences identified warmly with Valerie Harper's character on "Rhoda" — when she was single and wishing she weren't. When she married her dream man (David Groh), the stories lost their edge, and audiences lost interest.

By the time Rhoda and Joe were divorced, viewers had found new programs. "Marriage may have spoiled that show," said Josh Kane, a former programmer at NBC now working for CBS.

"Curious hand," remarked the kibitzer after the play. "If the finesse is right, you don't need it!"

After he received a jump raise of his suit, South was reluctant to launch into Blackwood because of his club weakness. Instead, he tried a diamond cue-bid, then jumped to slam when partner showed the ace of clubs in response.

West led a top-of-nothing club, and declarer was quite satisfied with his dummy. He had to worry about a potential loser in both clubs and hearts, and a cursory look at the combined holding would suggest that the heart finesse or a 3-3 break in the suit would guarantee the slam. Fortunately, declarer found an even better line.

Declarer won the opening lead in dummy, drew trumps in three rounds and then cashed the ace and king of hearts. When the queen dropped, declarer claimed 12 tricks.

Note that, as the cards lie, declarer would have gone down had he tried the heart finesse. Was he just lucky or did he peek?

Neither — he simply played the hand correctly. Had the queen of hearts not dropped in two rounds, declarer intended crossing to dummy with the king of diamonds to lead a third round of hearts. If East produced a low heart, declarer would play the jack. If that held, the slam was home; if it lost to the queen, declarer's fourth heart would be set up to take care of the table's losing club.

And if the East showed out on the third heart? Then declarer would go down — the same fate he would have met had he taken an early heart finesse. South simply gained in all cases where West held an insufficiently guarded queen.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: American aviator and war hero Eddie Rickenbacker was born on this date. Other celebrities sharing your birthday: heart transplant pioneer Dr. Christiaan Barnard, civil rights leader Jesse Jackson, comedian Chevy Chase and gossip columnist Rona Barrett. Trying to impress others is a waste of time. As long as you do your best every day, you will rise to the top. Although there are no shortcuts to solving a financial problem, you make steady progress. Enlist the aid of someone who has proven his loyalty in the past. You have several romantic options now. Take your time in making up your mind.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Although get-rich-quick schemes will not work, a hobby may have commercial potential. Check it out. Do not push for a commitment if mate is hesitant. Present a child with alternatives.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Travel enjoys favorable influences now. A phone call brings good luck. Romance affects your ability to make wise decisions. Take off the rose-colored glasses and do what you know is right.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Give a family member the benefit of the doubt. Spend money on household comforts. Your loved ones are delighted by your romantic choice. A pet could bring great joy into your life.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A new personal alliance brings you luck. Guard your home and valuables when you travel. Think about joining a neighborhood watch group. Romance pursues those who appear aloof.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A busy day lies ahead. Romance keeps you on the run. You may be trying to juggle too many obligations at one time. Slow down. Travel is expensive but worthwhile.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You are successful in resolving a family problem. Social events leave you tired but happy. Save time for someone who needs moral support. A move is only temporary. Make the best of it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Take advantage of a lucky break that comes your way. Exciting opportunities abound. Senior citizens find a more rewarding lifestyle. Try to get out and socialize this weekend. Your popularity soars.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You can salvage a family business that is in trouble. Be prepared to accept new responsibilities. Once things settle down, your relationship with a sister or brother improves. Romance brings contentment.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Use this weekend to tackle some long overdue home improvements. You will feel much more comfortable. A child needs greater freedom and privacy. Force yourself to loosen the apron strings.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A financial windfall enables you to help some deserving children. Take care of yourself as well as others. You need to disregard a family member's words and watch his/her actions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): So-called friends may be giving you bad advice. Seek the facts for yourself. An absurd request opens your eyes. Romance and travel mix beautifully now. Make your vacation plans.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A spontaneous act wins your loved ones' respect and admiration. You can change something that is not in your best interest. Playing hard-to-get helps romance along.

Love will not spoil 'Cheers'

NEW YORK (AP) — Love and marriage ruined "Rhoda" several years ago, and the producers of "Cheers" aren't about to let Sam and Diane's newfound togetherness destroy a delightfully hostile relationship in the same way.

Last week, Diane and Sam, the often-antagonistic leads in NBC's Emmy-winning comedy, finally consummated their off-again, off-again relationship. But have no fear, love won't spoil them. They won't be happy ever after.

"Whatever their relationship, they still will not like each other," says Glen Charles, one of the program's executive producers.

"Cheers" will be preempted tonight by the American League baseball playoffs. Televised sports have interrupted many a relationship, so it's only fitting that the new lovebirds in "Cheers" have to wait another week for more non-marital bliss.

In last week's season-opener, Sam (Ted Danson) at long last got Diane (Shelley Long) behind closed bedroom doors. When the story picks up next Thursday, their chronic billing and cooing will disgust the bar's regulars.

DEAR ABBY

Guy's line has been old for long time

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a very mature 13-year-old girl in love with a guy who just turned 18. I'll call him "Brian." I asked my parents if I could go out with him, and they said no, right off, so I've been sneaking around to be with him.

Abby, we really love each other, but Brian says he is not a talker, he is a doer. He wants to show me how much he loves me by making love to me. I'm still a virgin, but we have come very, very close to going all the way.

Brian wants me to prove my love by going all the way with him, but something is holding me back. He says it's not wrong to have sex if you are really in love.

What should I do? — BRIAN'S GIRL

DEAR GIRL: Brian may tell you he is not a "talker," he is a "doer," but he is both, so don't let him talk you into (or out of) anything. That old "prove-your-love" line has been around for a very long time, and it's just as phony today as it was when your grandmother was a girl.

No respectable young man would allow — much less encourage — a 13-year-old girl to sneak around and lie to her parents. I can understand how your young heart throbs when you're near him, but it's not "love" — it's a natural sex desire, which is nothing to be ashamed of. But you are too young, emotionally immature and vulnerable to become sexually active.

Be wise, young lady, and cool it with Brian before you lose control and find yourself in serious trouble.

DEAR ABBY: Very often you advise your readers to "consult your clergyman." While there is absolutely nothing wrong with this advice, there is something definitely wrong with your terminology.

Since most major denominations have been ordaining women for quite some time, the proper term is no longer "clergyman." It is either "clergyperson" or "member of the clergy." Only when the individual's sex is known should the terms "clergywoman" or "clergyman" be used.

Please sign me ... THE REV. SUSAN F. JAREK-GLIDDEN: a clergywoman, a clergyperson, or a member of the clergy — but most definitely not a clergyMAN. — UNITED METHODIST CHURCH, SALEM, N.H.

DEAR SUSAN F. JAREK-GLIDDEN, CLERGYWOMAN: Old habits die hard. I shall henceforth watch out for gender-benders — and other offenders.

DEAR ABBY: I identified with the 13-year-old girl who was ashamed to invite her friends over because she lived in a "dump." You see, I also grew up in the same kind of home.

Only a year ago did I learn at a class reunion that my friends loved coming to my house because they found it so comfortable and my parents so kind and friendly.

Many of my former classmates told me their homes were so "perfect," and their parents so concerned with keeping the house "neat and tidy," their friends couldn't relax there.

I was actually envied for my parents and the home I thought was a "dump." I'm sorry I didn't know sooner, before my parents died. — WISER NOW IN MAINE

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Mate traits rated

NEW YORK (AP) — Half the people in a recent survey said that similar interests were more important than any other trait a mate or partner in a lasting relationship could have.

It was listed by 50 percent of the more than 1,200 adults interviewed for The Merit Report. A distant second choice was intelligence, 19 percent; sense of humor, 13 percent; physical attractiveness and a good income, both 5 percent.

Woman helps others deal with eye disease

Hearst Feature Service

In 1970, Grace Halloran was labeled legally blind, on welfare, at what seemed the lowest point in her 23 years. Then the doctor told her that her infant son had inherited her eye disease, retinitis pigmentosa, and would be "totally blind by his teens."

Instead of making her feel hopeless, that diagnosis made her furious. And out of that anger she fashioned a brighter future for herself, for her son and an increasing number of other shadow-dwellers. Her dedication has evolved into the unique Wholistic Eye Institute in Santa Rosa, Calif., now attracting RP victims from as far away as New Zealand for its self-help therapy.

Retinitis pigmentosa is an inherited degenerative eye disease that results in loss of visual acuity, night blindness and a restricted field of vision that can close completely.

"There is no known cure," Halloran says. "I am not talking cure, but I am talking improved lifestyle. I have improved my condition, and I have impartial evaluation reports of the improvement of many who have tried my educational program. It is based on psychological motivation, eye and body exercise, nutrition, muscle movement and stimulation and stress reduction."

Halloran's vision has improved enough to permit her to drive and read. Describing her condition today as at a maintenance plateau, she traced her personal turnaround.

"In 1970 I was a key-punch operator at the Pacific Stock Exchange. My vision began to blur; I saw flashing lights. I started going to doctors. A neurologist suspected a brain tumor and put me through tests that nearly killed me. After those barbaric tests revealed nothing organic, they decided it must be psychological. I was about to go to a psychiatrist when my mother's own severe eye problem was diagnosed as retinitis pigmentosa.

"Told it was heritary, she suggested I be checked for RP. When the ophthalmologist found it, I felt relief — relief that I didn't have a brain tumor and that I wasn't going crazy. Going blind wasn't that bad, but I did suffer from the doctor's abruptness. He said, 'Going blind may have a maturing effect on you.'"

When Halloran was discharged from the hospital with her own diagnosis and less than 20-degree peripheral vision, she was jobless, on welfare, learning Braille, using a cane and anticipating a pencils-in-a-cup future.

"I cried for most of one year. Then I visited every free clinic, hoping something had been missed. Finally, a friend sent me to the eye hospital that was supposed to be the best in the world. I was told I only had two years of sight left, and I also was told my son was doomed. That did it. I had a drink and decided to find my own answer."

She started with education: nutrition and science at Santa Rosa Junior College, Marin Junior College, the North American College of Natural Health Science and at Columbia Pacific University. Her independent research led her to yoga, acupuncture and acupressure. She apprenticed herself to a vision clinic and did nutrition consulting.

The early studies, when her sight was at its worst, were exhausting sessions with tapes, readers and magnifying glasses. But she persevered. "I felt it was a mistake to look only at the eye. The whole body feeds the eye, and I investigated the total body function, how stress affects the vision system. And I experimented — on myself, on my son, on my mother."

By the time she earned a Ph.D. in wholistic health science — a film on her RP educational program served as her dissertation — she was working with vision clinics. Word of mouth was bringing her inquiries, and she decided to go into private practice. This year she opened the group training program.

"I have distilled 12 years of my study into a three-week course to launch the individual's self-therapy. There are no prescriptions, no diagnosis, no treatment in the medical model. It is basically an education program designed to offer people tools, and some of these tools are a thousand years old."

Halloran evaluates each person, incorporating "a lot of psychological therapy and exploring what is possible with limited eyesight. It is an intense introduction, and each person goes home with tapes and a workbook. There is a lot of motivation because the person sees and feels better while practicing the program."

Each new client is tested by an outside optometrist for visual function in field, color and acuity before and after participation. "Seventeen of the last 22 persons at the institute have shown improvement; some slight, some significant. The age range has been 25 to 86, and the 86-year-old really pleases me. He had not read in two years, and he was able to read a newspaper when he left."

By the year 2000, Halloran said, an estimated 25 million persons would have serious degenerative eye problems. "That gives me less than 20 years of prevention effort, and I think most of these can be prevented."

Marriage 'a process'

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Love may make the world go round, but our society does a poor job of teaching us how to sustain or repair a relationship, says a University of Rochester professor.

"In our popular media, marriage is viewed as an institution, not a process," says Gerald Gladstein. "The typical romantic movie ends with the happily-ever-after scene. It doesn't prepare us for the problems that not only are normal in a marriage, but that also provide a means for growth."

Peking Opera's production exquisite

Lady Yuji (Diao Li) is grief-stricken over the death sure to befall her royal spouse in this scene from the Peking Opera's presentation of "The Conqueror Bids Farewell to his Concubine." Standing behind her is one of the guards (played by Li Songlian). Midland was the second stop on the touring group's month-long tour.

Exquisite. Defined by the American Heritage Dictionary as "showing a high degree of craft or excellence; delicately or poignantly beautiful," this word, more than any other, describes the Peking Opera's Midland production.

By the time the lights in Theatre One dimmed at the opera's close Monday, the performers had captivated and amazed the 550 audience members with their physical agility and vocal expertise.

Because the production was entirely in Chinese, some there wondered, before the curtain rose, if they would be able to understand what was happening on stage. Many had come to see the stories that generations upon generations of Chinese have enjoyed, presented in an art form which traces its inception back to 618 A.D.

The concern was quickly alleviated.

Program notes plus a brief oral description of each selection given by Midland hosts, Nancy and Buddy Anguish, amply explained what was about to be staged. And it wasn't necessary to understand what was said because the performers' movements, also based upon centuries of tradition, were precise and clearly defined.

WORKS PERFORMED included:

— "The Crossroads Inn," a story of a misunderstanding based on an ancient folk legend, "Generals of Yang Family;"

— "Autumn River," an episode from the full-length opera "Romance of the Jade Hairpin," the romantic tale of a nun who falls in love;

— "The Magic Herb," a selection from the fairy tale "Romance of the White Snake;"

— and "The Conqueror Bids Farewell to his Concubine," based on a story about the last moments of Xiang Yu, the King of Chu, defeated by Liu Bang, the King of Han, at the close of a five-year struggle from 206 to 202 B.C. for national supremacy.

Every movement and sound made by an actor in this form of opera is enacted in accordance with time-honored convention. Peking Opera also includes acrobatics, martial arts and strict conventional pantomimic movements.

Training for Peking Opera performers begins at the age of 11 or 12 with eight to nine years of training at the academy. A performer who has been selected for Peking Opera knows that he must put all his energy into his work.

THE 11-MEMBER troupe and the 7-member band were excellent, but it was the three actresses who stole the hearts of those there.

This is 31-year-old Zhang Jinghong's second foreign tour. She performed with the opera in West Germany and Switzerland in 1980.

As a "wu dan" actress she must be proficient in acrobatics and versed in martial arts. Her almost flawless portrayal of Bai Sizhen (White Snake), was spellbinding. The audience's applause overlapped itself several times over during her amazing fight scene where she gracefully deflected her opponents weapons by using her hands, feet and the calfs of her legs.

For Zhang Yanyan and Diao Li, both 21, this is their first time on tour.

Miss Yanyan is a "hua dan" actress; thus she portrays a vivacious maiden or a woman of questionable character. Great emphasis is placed on the acting in this type of female role. "Autumn River," in which she starred, deals with fixed movement. She and 22-year-old Lu Kunshan, who plays the role of the old boatman, must create in the viewer's mind the rocking motion of a boat with none on stage. They both do so beautifully.

Chinese troupe tours Midland

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

Seated midpoint in the dining room at Cook's Pantry, Peking Opera actress Zhang Jinghong finished her breakfast. As she moved to the next table to talk with others on the tour, her eyes and those of a small child met.

Miss Jinghong smiled. The little girl smiled back in that bashful way children have which indicates they're interested.

Before long, Miss Jinghong and the young girl's mother were communicating in a combination of sign language, facial expressions and the few English words Miss Jinghong had learned since arriving in the United States Sept. 24. Interpreter Madam Yu Shilian, council member of YOUXIE, was sitting close by, but her services weren't need in this instance.

The scene is probably only one of many such encounters troupe members will have during their month-long tour of the Southeastern United States. During the time they had here Sunday afternoon through Tuesday evening, troupe members were not hesitant to meet people and practice the English some members were rapidly learning.

For most of the performing members of the entourage, this is their first tour outside China. The first difference they noticed upon arriving in Houston, (after they realized their 14 big aluminum costume trunks, plus five more containers full of props didn't arrive) was the difference in population.

"There are more automobiles in the States (in China bicicyles are ridden with the frequency we drive cars), and we hardly see anybody. We hardly see a person in the street. In China you see large crowds of people all the time," Madam Yu said.

The Chinese indicated while they were more comfortable with their population size, they felt there were too many people in China and too few in the States.

Judge: Action 'despicable'

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

"What you did was despicable," U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton told Midland helicopter pilot J.C. Short Jr. and Odessa sportsman Larry Todd moments before he sentenced them to prison and fined them $30,000 for violating U.S. wildlife hunting laws.

Neither defendant appeared contrite.

Short, 35, was accused of flying trophy hunters in the airborne pursuit of eagles, bear, deer and other game animals. Todd, 30, was the alleged "promoter" who was accused of soliciting sportsmen to go on airborne hunts for fees up to $5,000.

Bunton sentenced Short to prison for 1½ years, fined him $20,000 and forbade him from flying "any aircraft" or doing any hunting during a five-year probation following his prison term.

The judge fined Todd $10,000 and sentenced him to one year in the federal penitentiary.

The judge told Todd and Short to report to the U.S. marshal's office Oct. 24 for the carrying out of the sentences. However, their lawyers indicated the cases would be appealed. Such an action would postpone the sentences should the convictions be upheld.

Bunton encouraged them to appeal their convictions but said he doubted that a mistrial would be declared.

SHORT WAS convicted of conspiring to violate the Lacey Act by plotting to sell wildlife via airborne hunts, of violating the act by flying the aircraft on hunts and by violating the Bald Eagle Protection Act by killing an eagle in January 1982.

On the conspiracy count, Short was sentenced to one year in prison and fined $10,000. For violating the Lacey Act, the judge sentenced him to an additional six months in prison and fined him $5,000. For violating the eagle act, Short was given a one-year suspended sentence, fined $5,000 and placed on probation for five years.

The judge could have given him up to 11 years in prison and fined him up a maximum of $35,000.

Todd was sentenced and fined for conspiracy. He could have been sentenced up to five years in prison. He was fined the maximum — $10,000 — allowed for the offense.

"I certainly do not condone what happened in this particular case," Bunton told the defendants.

He addressed Todd, who manages the Sportsman's Den stores in Midland and Odessa: "I don't understand why you did this.

"YOU HAVE A license to fly an airplane, which I think you have abused," he told Short, "and the jury so found."

Prior to pronouncing the sentences, Bunton asked each defendant to speak in his own behalf.

Todd told the judge he apologized for wasting the court's time on the case and said he was "sorry" for the crime for which he was convicted.

"I am not a criminal," Todd said. "I had a good upbringing. I feel I have been an asset to the community." Todd said his businesses have been financially damaged by publicity of the case.

His attorney, Walter Wilson, said Todd has an "impeccable record."

Short told the judge that he would "like to work out some kind of deal with you." The pilot suggested that the judge place him on probation. "I feel my family needs me."

Testimony in the trial indicated that Short had made his living in part by hiring out to ranchers to control predators, mainly coyotes, by shooting them with a shotgun from the airborne helicopter.

"No one seems dissatisfied with my work here," Short told Bunton, "and I could do better here than I could anywhere else."

Short had elected not to testify in the trial; Todd did, however, and denied any role in illegal airborne hunting.

"The court seeks apology, contrition and a change in attitude," Short's attorney, Bill Alexander, told Bunton. Short, who offered no apology to the court, "insisted on his constitutional right" not to testify in the trial and perhaps "handicapped himself before the court," Alexander said.

ALEXANDER said that Short has been through enough trouble in the wildlife case "to last three life times" and that Short would not so much as get a traffic traffic from now on.

Rocky road

J.T. Morgan measures the slope from the street to the driveway of his mother's house at 417 W. Shandon Ave. Morgan and other property owners are afraid the city paving project on Shandon will result in the flooding of their homes because the street level is being raised 18 inches from its previous height. The city, though, says the project includes provisions that will actually lessen the risk of flooding in the area.

City says homeowners' fears unfounded

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

The fears of some homeowners whose property abuts the street paving project on West Shandon Avenue are unfounded, according to city public works Director Fred Baker.

The city recently undertook an assessment paving program — which involves property owners having to pay a portion of the cost — on a two-block stretch of Shandon between Big Spring Street on the east and Pecos Street to the west.

When construction is completed, Shandon will have been raised about 18 inches, leaving the street higher than the yards that front it.

Property owners are worried that water flowing down the street in heavy rains will escape the curb and flood their yards, garages and homes.

Of particular concern to Mrs. Henry Doss and other homeowners is where the curbs break to street level at driveway entrances.

"Water will come through like it does across the sluice of a dam," said Mrs. Doss, who lives at 427 W. Shandon. "Our driveway will have to be ramped."

J.T. Morgan, a New Tripoli, Pa., civil engineer whose mother lives at 417 Shandon, is especially irritated:

"I used to drive up an incline to the house; now I drive down an incline.

"Why should a homeowner have to pay for raising his driveway when it was built in 1951 according to the street level at the time? And how do you raise a house?"

Noting that his mother had to pay $900 as her share of the paving project, Morgan added: "Hell, we're paying to get flooded out."

Morgan is also upset because the water meter in front of the house was buried under a foot of the caliche that's being used as a paving base.

And he said he "got nowhere" with city officials when he contacted them about the potential for being flooded out.

Public works Director Baker, however, says Shandon lies in a normally dry playa lake that traditionally has filled with water from all directions during storms.

Previous work on the streets that immediately border Shandon (Dengar, Loma, Wadley and Pecos) has diverted and thereby reduced the amount of rain that flows into the lake, according to Baker.

In addition, he said the raising of Shandon will further mitigate the area's drainage problem.

"If we had not graded Shandon and the surrounding streets to reduce the amount of storm water that flows into that old playa lake," Baker added, "flooding indeed would have occurred where those people live."

At least one homeowner is not at all apprehensive about the possibility of being flooded out.

"I don't think we're gonna have a problem," said J.A. Atwood of 414 W. Shandon. "We put up with a dusty street for so long, we're lucky to get it paved. I think the proper drainage will handle it."

As for the buried water meter, Baker said: "It will be raised when the work is finished."

MHS sponsors drama workshops

Ronald E. Nocks, former director of the International Thespian Society, lectures to a Midland High School drama class.

Guest artist to judge some events

Ronald E. Nocks, former director of the International Thespian Society, is a special guest artist at Midland High School this week. He came to Midland from Columbus, Ohio, to hold two days of drama workshops and judge some events in the forensic tournament at MHS today and Saturday.

Nocks received his bachelor's and master's degrees from Ohio State University. For eight years he served on the Board of Trustees for the ITS; in 1978-80 he was assistant director and in 1980-82 he was international director of the society.

Nocks directed six mainstage productions at the International Theatre Arts Conference at Ball State University in Muncie, Ind. — the only high school director in the nation with this distinction. Other accomplishments include being featured soloist at Carnegie Hall in New York City and serving as guardian and line coach for Doug McKeon ("On Golden Pond").

He will judge rounds of humorous interpretation, duet acting and dramatic interpretation at the tournament and will give an oral critique to six finalists in the latter two categories. The tournament will begin this afternoon and conclude Saturday evening.

Lions member sparks city-wide clean-up

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

George Loudamy wanted to put a spark into the community and he's doing it without benefit of fire.

From a small match of an idea he ignited the community-wide blaze to clean up Midland Saturday.

Every year the city's Lions clubs participate in "World Lions Service Day," which falls on Saturday. Loudamy was in charge of finding a service project for the Downtown Lions. He called Mayor G. Thane Akins for an idea and was told he could clean up Midland.

"I said OK. It's a pretty big project but maybe we could get all the city's clubs behind it," Loudamy said.

"We wanted to do something for Midland, something that would be profitable to the public."

To assist the Lions, the city has dropped the fees at the landfill to encourage Midland residents to also get involved in the clean-up. Anyone with any kind of trash — including old refrigerators — may dump it at the landfill, which is located on Cloverdale Road three miles east of the Fairgrounds Road intersection. Landfill hours are from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Commercial carriers are excluded from the special waiver.

The eight Lions clubs have targeted selected public areas for clean-up, and other citizens also can assist, said Loudamy.

Eastside club will begin cleaning at the east end of Scarbauer Draw. In charge of that project is Secuindino Lara.

Morning Lions will tackle the west end of Scharbauer Draw with George Thomas and Leo Merriman in charge.

Hudspeth County could get waste site

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

AUSTIN — A Trans-Pecos county is among two sites in the state strongly being considered for a low-level radioactive disposal plant to be in operation sometime in 1987.

The Texas Low-level Radioactive Waste Disposal Authority is scrutinizing University of Texas holdings in central Hudspeth County, as well as a site in Dimmit County in South Texas.

"That's where land has been identified that we think we can obtain," said Tom Blackburn, director of special programs for the Authority. "But we still are looking at 14 other counties."

The Authority was created by the Legislature in 1981 and charged with the responsibility of finding a suitable disposal site for low-level radioactive wastes originating in hospitals, universities and industries. The plant would comprise 50 acres surrounded by a buffer zone of 300-400 acres and have an active life of 30 years.

Blackburn said an ultimate decision on the site would be reached in mid- to late December. "Then for a 30-day period we will run ads in the local papers and post at the local courthouse (announcements of) a public hearing for sometime in mid-January. Public informational meetings will explain what we're doing. At (the public hearing), the general citizenry gets a chance to get their views known to the board of directors. And if the board of directors deems the site appropriate, we will purchase the land."

University of Texas land manager Billy Carr of Midland said the Authority first contacted the University a couple of months ago.

"The University would dispose 60 percent of the waste into the thing, so we'd like to help them out," he said, adding that the board of regents could take the matter up at its meeting next week. "We have an area out there that has few people and no water."

He added that the land currently is being sparsely grazed by livestock.

Hudspeth County Judge Doyle Ziler of Sierra Blanca said that while he would reserve judgment until he is presented with all the facts, the plant could be an economic boost to the county. The Authority has indicated the operation would employ 20-25 persons and have a payroll of $500,000-$750,000.

"That's quite an economic influx to a county like ours," said Ziler. "Our per-capita income is below the national poverty level...I think probably what a lot of our people would look at is how many jobs the project would create. That is something that has to be balanced off against the undesirability of radioactive waste."

Ziler noted, however, that the unavailability of housing in the county may be a limiting factor.

"We don't have any housing available in Sierra Blanca, Dell City or Fort Hancock," he said. "We're an area about 4,500 square miles (in size) with 2,700-2,800 people in it."

The Authority received considerable opposition from some counties under consideration earlier, and Dimmit County Commissioners Court has presented the agency with a resolution asking "us to look elsewhere," said Blackburn.

The "Great Scott" Wells magically reveals the $1,095,690 total for the third United Way of Midland report meeting Thursday.

Magic fills the air at United Way event

There was magic in the air at the United Way report meeting Thursday, but the agency's goal is no illusion — United Way of Midland has reached 64 percent of its $1,712,000 goal.

After Midland's resident magician "Great Scott" entertained the luncheon crowd, United Way's fundraising efforts were reported.

With two weeks left in the campaign, the umbrella agency which helps fund 23 Midland service agencies reached a total of $1,095,690.

Following the division reports, United Way Executive Director Bob Cornelius said: "We've heard a lot of numbers. Let's get to the bottom lines."

Unit totals for the third report were:

— Special Support, $365,796, or 79 percent of its goal.

— Industry/Commerce, $240,050, or 46 percent.

— Oil, $350,669, or 65 percent.

— Public/Professional, $148,166, or 74 percent.

League backs child support amendment

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

A statewide survey that revealed child support payments aren't being paid has prompted the state League of Women Voters to support passage of Proposition 6 on the Nov. 8 constitutional amendments election.

Lois Carpenter of Midland, state league president, announced the organization's position during a news conference Wednesday morning.

Proposition 6, if passed by the state's voters, would allow child support payments of someone shirking his or her duty to be taken out of the paycheck.

"Current methods of enforcing court-ordered payments for child support are obviously inadequate," said Ms. Carpenter. "In 1982, over 155,000 Texas children living in one-parent households were on welfare, meaning they received Aid to Families with Dependent Children from the Texas Department of Human Resources."

TEA resets hearing in MISD, ECISD spat

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

The Texas Education Agency has rescheduled a hearing to determine whether or not a section of Midland Independent School District can be annexed into Ector County ISD. The hearing has been set for 10 a.m. Dec. 2 in Austin.

The area in question is 4,189 acres of land in west Midland County. It includes the Ridgewood subdivision, a mobile home park, undeveloped Mission Estates and part of the Faudree-Parks Ranch.

For more than a year residents of Ridgewood have been seeking to have the land, much of which is already within Odessa city limits, annexed into ECISD so their children could attend Odessa schools tuition-free. The area is about five miles from Odessa and 15 miles from Midland, and many of the residents say they consider themselves Odessans.

"It's not been a picnic on either side (defense or prosecution)," Alexander said. "This man financially has been punished." The attorney suggested that the judge mete out "punishment to suit the three crimes" for which Short was convicted.

In responding to Alexander's comments, Bunton said he hopes he's "never accused of 'charging rent for the courthouse' " — giving preferential treatment in sentencing those who plead guilty versus those who entered "not guilty" pleas but who are convicted in trials.

"I don't ever want to be accused of that," Bunton said. "I don't want to be guilty to that."

Short and Todd this year became the sixth and seventh defendant to be convicted by pleas or by jury verdicts for violating wildlife-related laws.

Previously convicted were:

—Steve Dudley Quain, 40, and Frankie Keller, 30. They were found guilty by a jury of violating U.S. Customs laws by smuggling bears which they had killed in Mexico to Texas in June 1981. The government accused both of shooting bears from an airborne helicopter piloted by Short. Each was fined $6,000 and ordered to spend 179 days in federal confinement.

—Karl Brosig, 26, a Midland taxidermist. Brosig pleaded guilty to misdemeanor violations of federal wildlife laws by working on game animals which he was aware were killed in violation of the U.S. Airborne Hunting Act. He was placed on probation for two years and fined $500.

—Lee Bell, 29, and Wesley Michael Nickell, 23. Both, who testified as government witnesses in the Short-Todd trial, pleaded guilty to killing animals from an airborne helicopter piloted by Short. Nickell admitted killing a Barbado sheep; Bell said he killed an eagle, a javelina and a mule deer. Each was placed on probation for five years. In addition, Nickell was fined $2,000, and Bell $3,000.

The cases were investigated by agents of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

Prosecutors were Christopher A. Nuechterlein and Jose A. Toro of the U.S. Department of Justice's Wildlife and Marine Resources Section.

TEA reschedules hearing

At the time that a majority of qualified voters in Ridgewood signed the petition, 67 of about 80 students in the area attended Odessa schools. Midland school officials say that number has been reduced to 42 children this year.

The Ector County school board and county commissioners have already approved the proposed annexation, while Midland county and school officials oppose it. At issue is whether or not the action can take place without the consent of Midland officials.

Attorneys for the petitioners feel this can be accomplished through section 19.261 of the Texas Education Code.

"The majority of qualified voters can petition the school board and county commissioners to change boundaries and to detach land from one school system and annex it into another," was attorney Richard Bonner's interpretation of the code.

MISD's lawyer, Charles Tighe, said the section only deals with school systems within the same county and insisted the area cannot be detached without the consent of Midland County officials. Another argument is that Ector County school boundaries were set up by the state legislature in 1921 and local governing bodies and the Texas Education Agency do not have jurisdiction to change those boundaries.

Both attorneys declined to comment on their arguments, saying it was inappropriate to discuss pending litigation.

The TEA hearing will be open to the public.

Peking Opera production elegant

Miss Li is a "qing yi" actress who portrays the good matron, faithful wife or filial daughter. In the case of "The Conqueror and his Concubine," she plays the faithful concubine who takes her own life rather than live alone without her love, the conqueror (37-year-old Zhang Lianxiang), or have him worry about her safety.

IN HIS ROLE of the innkeeper in "The Crossroads Inn," 21-year-old Sun Shaodong holds an audience in rapt attention with his acrobatics. He and 36-year-old Gao Muchun do an excellent job of missing each other in the dark (on a lit stage).

Stage manager for the troupe is Cao Yunqing. Musical director is Geng Jingqun.

The Peking Opera (actually referred to in China as Beijing Opera Theatre) is composed of more than 700 people, divided into four theaters (companies). Each troupe has its own band.

Although the four troupes are called Troupe One, Troupe Two, etc., the numbering does not mean one troupe is better than another. It is simply a means of identification. The traveling troupe that performed here was from Troupe One. None of the members had ever been in the United States before (another troupe of the Peking Opera toured major U.S. cities two years ago).

No discussion of this type of production would be complete without talking about makeup and costuming.

Two hours is spent applying makeup. That time does not include dressing in the Chinese costumes which are absolutely perfect from head to toe. In fact, these costumes put to shame many of those worn on U.S. stages.

AND PERHAPS IT needs to be mentioned that those who saw Monday's performance did not see all of the curtains the Chinese normally use in a production. The stage at Theatre Midland, as is true of many U.S. stages, was not deep enough to allow space for all of them to be hung.

The Chinese have a delightful custom which took the Midland audience by surprise Monday whenever the audience applauded, the actors responded with applause. And when the Chinese officials traveling with the troupe were introduced, they also responded to the audience's applause by clapping. The gesture means "Thank you."

The "thank yous" which remain to be made are the ones to Midland Opera Theatre and the Anguishes for bringing this sterling production to our town.

Lucas indicted for capital murder

CONROE (AP) — Henry Lee Lucas, a drifter sentenced to 75 years in prison for one of the 150 murders he claims to have committed in 16 states, could face the death penalty if convicted under his latest indictment.

Lucas, a 47-year-old former mental patient, was indicted Thursday on three counts of capital murder after leading officers to sites where he claims to have buried bodies. Lucas was charged with the deaths of two Houston women and an unidentified woman.

Frank Newton, an investigator with the Montgomery County district attorney's office, said it was the first capital murder charge against Lucas.

The indictment alleges Lucas kidnapped, sexually assaulted, and killed the women.

'Midland Gold' services offered to seven counties

Due to the success of the "Midland Gold" program, its services will now be offered to elderly and handicapped citizens in seven neighboring counties, it was announced Thursday during a Chamber of Commerce news conference.

"Midland Gold" was instituted in February 1982 and offers senior citizens and permanently handicapped persons discounts ranging from 5 to 50 percent at some 150 Midland business establishments.

To date, about 3,100 senior citizens hold Midland Gold membership cards.

Benefits on necessities alone, according to program Executive Director Janet Hestwood, can mean savings of more than $400 a year for elderly Midlanders participating in Midland Gold.

As phase two of the program gets under way, more than 1,500 city merchants will be contacted to enlist their support. By participating, they will not only be performing a valuable community service, but will also be gaining new customers from surrounding cities and towns now being added to the program.

Included in expansion of the program are neighboring Martin, Andrews, Crane, Howard, Ector, Glasscock and Upton counties.

It is thought that several thousand handicapped persons and elderly citizens 62 and older of those surrounding counties will sign up for the program, according to a press release issued at Thursday's news conference.

As they sign up, they will be given a directory listing the Midland merchants honoring Midland Gold cards, as well as a description of discounts on products and services.

More information can be obtained by calling Ms. Hestwood at 682-7577.

Lions cleaning up Midland

Northside, lead by Gordon C. Schrank and Richard Garcia, will meet at San Miguel Square and work west on Wadley. They noted the worst area will be between A and I Streets.

Terminal, under the eye of Pete Adams, will also work on Wadley Street.

Southside Lions, led by Ken Overstreet, will work on their clubhouse and surrounding lots at 111 E. New York Ave.

Tall City Lions will blaze a trail in an area bounded by Lee Street, Fairgrounds Road, Cloverdale Road and Front Street. Chairmen are James Burton and Johnny Russell.

Westside Lions, led by Carl Pirkle, will begin cleaning the railroad right of way beginning at Holiday Hill Road and moving east toward Midkiff.

And the Downtown club will start at the east end of the railroad right of way and move west toward Midkiff. Additional help can hoe weeds on main thoroughfares, such as Andrews Highway and entrance streets to the city, according to Loudamy.

Containers for these clubs' cleanup are being placed at the southeast corner of Washington Park, in a cul-de-sac at Windlands Community Playfield, at Front Street near Lamesa Road, at Kelview Heights Baptist Church and at Industrial Street near Midkiff Road.

"We want people to think about cleaning up their yards and the whole town," Loudamy said. "Maybe they'll think twice next time they start to throw trash out a car window."

League backs Proposition 6

That department, she noted, has reported a 70 percent rate of noncompliance with court-ordered child support payments owed their clients despite the fact most of these parents could pay.

"The result is that these non-custodial parents have transferred their child support responsibilities to the state's taxpaying public," Ms. Carpenter contended, adding that present enforcement methods are inadequate.

If the amendment is passed, she said, it could mean a savings of $9 million on welfare cases alone by 1985. This figure was provided by the Legislative Budget Board and Department of Human Resources.

Other groups have figured the amount could go higher, she said, citing the Texas for Child Support number of $10 million. Linda White, the governor's wife, is honorary chairman of that organization.

Automatic garnishment of wages wouldn't apply to everyone. Ms. Carpenter said it would be enforced on those people who have missed one or more payments in the past year and the total owed must equal or exceed two months' worth. Also, someone wanting his or her employer to automatically deduct that payment from the paycheck may do so.

This money is sent to the court registry, or in most cases the district clerk's office, which then distributes the payments, said the state president.

Employers also may deduct $5 a month from the employee's wages to cover administrative costs, she said.

The league doesn't support political parties or candidates, but does take positions on issues.

Opera troupe gets taste of city

The entourage made the 13,000-mile trip from Beijing to San Francisco on a CAAC 747 changing to a 24-passenger Dresser plane sent from Houston by the China Cultural Society of Texas and Louisiana, the organization responsible for setting up the tour. On Dresser's Boeing 111 bound for Houston were Consul Zhang Zongxu of Houston and the 23-member Peking opera delegation, plus their personal luggage (the other was sent by Continental, promptly lost, but retrived after a massive hunt in time for the Sept. 27 performance).

Except for the flight to Midland and back to Houston, the group is traveling by bus. The driver, Frank Hail, a native of Houston, flew to Midland to drive for them while they were here. For him, this opportunity represents an experience he will remember all his life.

He has been amazed by their industry, and charmed by their manners. His only complaint is they won't let him do a thing but drive. Whenever he tries to help they say, "You rest. You rest."

While they were in Midland, their hosts, Nancy and Buddy Anguish, took them on tours of Midland College, the Petroleum Museum and the Midland Reporter-Telegram.

Their Midland stay was also packed with opportunities to eat a variety of food. Radically changing eating habits can be such a problem for traveling performing groups that some carry their own food.

Not so with the Peking Opera members.

Whether dining on barbecue at the home of Joanie and Bobby Holt Sunday, Mexican food at La Bodega following Monday's performance, fried chicken served at a ranch outside Odessa for lunch Tuesday or lasagna at Nancy and Buddy Anguish's Tuesday evening, troupe members tried whatever was served. When asked how the members were reacting to such a diversity of foods not common to their palates, Madam Yu laughed. (When the Chinese laugh, their entire face lights up.)

"It takes time for the younger ones to get accustomed to the food," she replied. "But they are very satisfied with it, especially the barbecue."

But, perhaps the highpoint of their free day Tuesday came several hours before they left when they had a couple of hours to unwind at the Anguishes.

This particular touring group of the Peking Opera (which has 700 members and four main troupes) met the Anguishes when they were in China last spring. It was apparent from the minute they walked in that they felt right at home. Several crowded around the baby grand piano, while others relaxed in the back yard.

Earlier in the day, Madam Yu talked of a belief commonly held in China by the people who live there. It was the action of this belief that could be so clearly seen in Chinese and American faces gathered at the Anguishes.

Her statement was, "I think there exists a tradition of friendship between the people of China and the American people."

Woman burned in blast

An elderly southside woman was transferred to Lubbock General Hospital following an explosion at her home Thursday.

In serious condition this morning with first and second degree burns to her arms, legs, chest and back was 59-year-old Martha Tinner of 408 S. Carver.

She was burned about 10:30 a.m. Thursday when the pilot light of a bathroom water heater ignited gasoline fumes as she was cleaning a rug, according to fire department reports.

A minor fire was out when firefighters arrived. Heat and smoke damage were reported to the bathroom and kitchen of the residence.

Three hurt in windstorm Thursday

FORT STOCKTON — Three persons were injured and several mobile homes damaged in a late Thursday afternoon windstorm in the northeastern part of Fort Stockton.

Treated at Pecos County Memorial Hospital were a boy with a broken arm, another boy with a cut on his neck, and a woman who sustained bruised ribs when limbs fell on her, said Police Chief Dale Cope.

The winds, accompanied by rain, struck at approximately 6 p.m. and overturned four or five mobile homes, blew roofs off houses, shattered telephone poles, and caused a power blackout, according to Cope.

Theme of the meeting is local history.

Other speakers for the division meetings will include Tumbleweed Smith, Joe Pickle, Don Fortner, Janice Rosson, and Texas Tech University's Dr. Dale Cluff.

Several companies will have exhibits tonight and Saturday.

Judith Gray, director of Howard County Library and chairman of TLA, District 9, will preside.

Five guns, knife stolen

In burglary complaints filed with city police during the past 24 hours, James Davidson of 816 W. Spruce said five guns and a hunting knife were taken from his home Thursday.

The loss was placed at $2,899. Entry was gained by kicking in the back door.

Sheila Brown of 3415 W. Storey told officers jewelry, a watch, two pocket knives and $8 in cash were stolen during a break-in at her residence. Entry was through a bedroom window.

Laura Carter, 5009 Rio Grande, reported the disappearance of a $2,500 man's diamond studded gold ring. The ring was taken from a drawer in the bathroom of her apartment. There was no sign of forced entry, according to police.

In an auto burglary complaint, Poggie Harold Ames Jr. of 3609 Caldera said tools valued at $850 were stolen from a tool caddy in the bed of his pickup truck while it was parked at the Windscape Apts. Thursday.

And Anthony A. Washington of 901 Cannon told police someone broke into his locked garage Monday and stole a $200 registered pit bulldog.

The Rev. Gordon Bergstrom, left, and Lynn Godsey go over plans for a Spanish-language mission at First Baptist Church in Godley. Bergstrom and Godsey were concerned over threats that if they insisted on building the mission it would be torn down.

New Spanish-language mission subject to threats, vandalism

GODLEY (AP) — Southern Baptist churches normally thrive in this rolling dairy country, but Lynn Godsey feared bigotry was trying to destroy his small congregation.

On July 30, amid threats that a new Spanish-language mission would be torn down if the First Baptist Church insisted on building it, someone clipped the fences that surrounded the construction site.

The next day in East Texas, a mission pastor, Jose Amaya, was picking up parishioners for a Sunday afternoon service when he was allegedly assaulted by a farmer.

Godsey, a portly seminary graduate whose mother was Mexican-American, said he feared the attacks sprang from a new round of racism, this one aimed at Spanish-speaking clergy and their congregations.

A newspaper publisher in nearby Cleburne called on the tiny community "to put the 'God' back in Godley."

"Apparently people don't think we have the right to worship," said Godsey. "We've been here for years working, worshipping God and minding our business and now we're being persecuted."

Rumors about the mission still circulate around Godley among disgrunted residents, certain that the church will become a sanctuary for undocumented workers.

But Godsey, and members of First Baptist, pressed forward with their plans to build the new church and a record 100 people attended a Spanish-language service after the vandalism.

"If these people think they'll scare us off, they're wrong," Godsey said.

The threats have subsided, and Saturday about 40 volunteers, many members of churches in nearby Fort Worth, are expected to help frame the small sanctuary which will be the site of the community's annual Thanksgiving service.

The situation "seems to have smoothed out a whole lot," says the Rev. Gordon Bergstrom, pastor of First Baptist. "It's a minor irritation, not really confrontation."

Angers had begun simmering this summer in Godley, population 612, after Roy Carrell, a dairy farmer and First Baptist deacon, donated two acres of his land to the church on which to build the Spanish-language mission.

Residents near the church site, located about a mile northwest of town, submitted a petition to Johnson County Judge Tommy Altaras demanding that the project be stopped and claiming the church would really be a sanctuary for illegal aliens.

Altaras acknowledged that there was nothing the county could do. But rumors of further vandalism persisted for a while.

"I moved to the country for the peace and quiet," said Nan Grimsley, whose home is several hundred feet toward town from the church site. "I feel that they definitely need a place of fellowship, but I think they should be where they're wanted."

Mrs. Grimsley said she was resigned to the fact that the mission would be built but convinced that illegal aliens would flock there.

"I haven't heard anybody say they wanted it next to them," she said.

Bergstorm says the church and mission members "didn't do a good job of letting people know that we were here."

The Spanish-language program began 3½ years ago when the church took a survey and found that at least 300 people of Mexican descent along with a few Cubans and Salvadorans lived in the area.

Godsey, then a student at Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth, took over the mission, which eventually hopes to become an autonomous church when its membership and contributions increase.

The 90 people who now attend the Spanish services squeeze into a Sunday-school room at First Baptist. They were using the civic center, but left when the city tripled the rent after complaints the mission members weren't keeping the building clean.

Carrell then offered a corner of his farm for a new church, and later began receiving threats aimed at the church.

"They just don't want illegals there," he said. "We can't help that. They're already here...They come here to work. They don't come here to rape and steal."

A few rumors about the church still persist. One has it that the plumbing roughed in at one of end the slab poured recently for the church is for a washer and dryer — further proof that the church will become a sanctuary, says Bergstorm. The plumbing is actually for the church baptistry.

Medical examiners to study bags of human bones found under house

FORT WORTH (AP) — Medical examiners said they would begin the task today of reassembling "several bags" of human bones found under a house in the hope that they can piece together clues to what police believe was the murder of at least one person.

The bones were unearthed Thursday from a house where a man had committed suicide the same weekend a woman and child disappeared, police said.

The bones were found as crewmen were leveling a house that had been gutted by a fire. The house had been occupied by George Earl Gray, 43, who committed suicide on Feb. 22, 1980 by slashing his wrists and hanging himself from a light fixture, police said.

Officials say a woman and child have not been seen since the man's death.

Fort Worth homicide detective Lt. T.C. Swan said police suspect murder because the human bones were found in a shallow grave. He said there were enough bones to "fill several bags," but it was undetermined whether the bones belonged to more than one person.

Bill Fabian, a spokesman for the Tarrant County Medical Examiner, said an examination of the bones would begin today, as well as a possible reassembling of the bones.

He said medical examiners made a tentative identification of the bones Thursday, but he said it was not a positive one.

"We struck out in our first try at it (identifying the bones)," he said.

When the bones were dug up police had to restrain Doris Faye Salone, who ran up to the site, screaming: "My sister's in there."

Later, Ms. Salone said her 20-year-old sister, Gloria Jean Salone, was staying with Gray until he was found dead.

Florida fishermen rescued in Gulf after being stranded for 11 days

HOUSTON (AP) — Three Florida fisherman, hungry and sunburned but apparently escaping serious injury, have been rescued by a freighter in the Gulf of Mexico after floating undetected for 11 days on their 18-foot fishing boat.

"They're fine, we spoke to the ship. They're slightly sunburned," said Ardley Hanemann, director of public affairs for Lykes Shipping of New Orleans.

The freighter Leslie Lykes, en route from the Mediterranean to Houston, spotted the trio in their boat Wednesday about 200 miles offshore from Fort Myers, Fla.

The men were scheduled to arrive at the Port of Houston aboard the freighter early today.

The Coast Guard in Miami, which abandoned an extensive search for the three, identified the missing men as Roger Ulrich, 38; his stepson, Thomas W. Beasley, 25; and the owner of the boat, Donald M. Balsley, 42. All are from the Fort Myers area.

Balsley's wife, Margaret, said the trio, who once worked together as appliance repairmen, left Fort Myers in their "old beat-up boat" early Sept. 25 to go grouper fishing in Redfish Pass on Captiva Island, a barrier island off the Florida coast. Winds at the time were about 30 mph.

They were not heard from until about 5:30 p.m. EDT Wednesday when the crew aboard the Leslie Lykes saw them waving clothing and life jackets and blowing a whistle.

Texas ranchers win; Border areas lose

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas, suffering from the double whammy of drought in West Texas and economic turmoil along the Mexican border, has won one and lost one in Congress in the battle to provide additional federal aid to those areas.

The victory came Thursday in the Senate, which approved an amendment that would require that the Agriculture Department sell damaged corn at bargain prices to livestock growers suffering from the drought.

The loss also came in the Senate, which rejected a provision approved earlier in the day by the House that would have provided an estimated $30 million in additional social services money for Texas over the next two years.

Supporters had said they wanted a good chunk of that money used in high unemployment areas, such as those along the U.S.-Mexico border.

The livestock assistance amendment, sponsored by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, was attached to a price support measure for dairy products and tobacco. The Senate was expected to vote Friday on the overall legislation.

Bentsen and Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, had been seeking to get Congress to force Agriculture Secretary John Block to take steps to assist livestock growers suffering from the drought.

Last week, Block announced a reduction in interest rates on emergency loans for farmers and ranchers. But Bentson said Thursday that "most ranchers tell me they already have too much debt.

"They need something a cow can eat, not another note at the bank," he said.

The Bentsen amendment, which was co-sponsored by Tower and several others, would require the Agriculture Department to sell at reduced rates about 83 million bushels of damaged corn held by the government in warehouses around the nation.

The corn would be sold to livestock growers in counties suffering from drought or other natural disasters and declared disaster areas by the department. There are 23 such counties in Texas.

The corn would be sold at 75 percent of the government price floor for corn, a rate that various from county to county. But in Lubbock County, for example, ranchers could buy the corn at about $2.04 per bushel compared with a market price of about $3.15 per bushel, said a spokesman for Bentsen.

Bentsen said that "the irony of this tragic situation is that help is literally around the corner," referring to about 21 million bushels of the corn that are being stored in the Texas Panhandle.

That corn is costing the government more than $11 million a year in interest and storage, and is so damaged "it is suitable only for livestock feed," Bentsen said.

Democrats rip Reagan and each other

NEW YORK (AP) — John Glenn said he was tired of being called a "celluloid candidate" and Gary Hart said straw polls bore voters, as the seven announced Democratic presidential contenders appeared together for the first time in the 1984 campaign season.

All seven, addressing 2,000 people at New York City's Town Hall Thursday night, accused President Reagan of running the economy into the ground and, with good-humored swipes at each other, sought to spell out their strategies for nuclear arms reduction.

Former Vice President Walter Mondale, the front-runner in most polls, declared himself the best qualified potential president in "modern history." George McGovern, the Democratic nominee in 1972, accused the administration of "closing its eyes" to human rights violations abroad.

TO LOUD APPLAUSE, Sen. Ernest Hollings of South Carolina blasted the press for "a tremendous disservice" in narrowing its coverage to the purported front-runners — "an astronaut and a vice president that have name recognition" — to the detriment of the issues.

Former Florida Gov. Reubin Askew said he was proud to be "the different Democrat." California Sen. Alan Cranston suggested the president and the "top Soviet should meet and start from scratch" and concluded, "If we blow ourselves up in a nuclear holocaust, those other issues won't matter."

The applause was long when Glenn, the former astronaut who became a U.S. senator from Ohio, referred to Reagan's movie career and a newspaper's description of himself as a "celluloid candidate."

"I wasn't doing 'Hellcats of the Navy' on a movie lot when I went through 149 (fighter) missions. ... And when I was on top of that booster down there getting ready to go it wasn't 'Star Trek.' ... It was representing the future of this country."

GLENN IN 1962 BECAME THE first American to orbit the earth. He is one of the subjects of the upcoming movie, "The Right Stuff," about the early astronauts.

. Hart, a senator from Colorado, belittled the pre-primary straw polls and warned, "I think this party better shape up."

"I don't think the unemployed blue-collar workers of Buffalo care who wins the straw polls," Hart said. "I respect all the Democrats on this platform ... but I challenge this party and my colleagues to stop campaigning by reshuffling yesterday's proposals."

The New York State Democratic Committee forum was organized by Gov. Mario Cuomo and U.S. Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan.

QUESTIONS CAME FROM THE candidates themselves and from a panel composed of former U.S. Rep. Barbara Jordan, author Theodore H. White and Duke University political science professor James David Barber.

Hart joined Cranston in proposing U.S.-Soviet summit meetings on nuclear disarmament, while Mondale called for annual or semi-annual conferences.

AFL-CIO to support Mondale, even if he 'makes mistakes'

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — AFL-CIO leaders say they will support Walter F. Mondale's presidential campaign, even if he "makes mistakes" and loses some primaries.

With their endorsement of Mondale now official, union officials said labor must be prepared to stand behind him during any hard times in the coming 1984 primary and caucus season.

Introducing Mondale to some 800 delegates Thursday, during the concluding session of the AFL-CIO convention in this seaside resort, federation President Lane Kirkland said, "We have made more than a choice. We have made a commitment, a commitment to stand by at your side in every primary, every caucus, in every state...."

Several union leaders were asked whether labor's political unity will surmount any Mondale losses in the tests of vote-getting strength.

"If he stumbles, we're going to pick him up," said Glenn E. Watts, president of the Communications Workers of America. "But I don't think he's going to stumble."

Watts, co-chairman of the Democratic National Committee's labor council, suggested that the winning streak Jimmy Carter ran up during the 1976 primary season was an "anomaly" that won't likely be repeated any time soon.

Vincent Sombrotto, president of the National Association of Letter Carriers, said of Mondale: "He's on the top of his game right now. Sure, he's going to make mistakes, but we're not going to desert him."

"We're going to stick with him for the duration," said Gerald W. McEntee, president of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees.

Barbara Hutchinson, a vice president of the American Federation of Government Employees, said, "We're going all the way to the (Democratic) convention with him."

These and other union leaders will not talk about what the AFL-CIO and its affiliates might do if Mondale falters badly, to the point of dropping out of contention.

At the same time, the labor leaders say they believe such a prospect is extremely unlikely.

However, some labor officials, saying they didn't want to be identified, voiced concern about Mondale's desire and ability to be elected.

"I'm still not convinced he has that fire in his belly," said one union official. Another said that he had recently told Mondale point-blank that he was concerned about Mondale's electability.

But in accepting the endorsement, the former vice president declared that "I know myself and I am ready. I am ready to be president of the United States."

Mondale, sounding confident after winning the endorsements of the AFL-CIO and the unaffiliated National Education Association and topping a straw poll in Maine, thanked convention delegates "for joining me in this campaign and for demonstrating your confidence in my candidacy and in my upcoming presidency."

In another development, Mondale's campaign aides asked black labor leaders what ramifications any presidential bid by Jesse Jackson would have on Mondale's chances.

Bush remark angers feminists

WASHINGTON (AP) — Feminists are angry at Vice President George Bush for saying it was "a little degrading" for Democratic presidential candidates to promise to consider a woman for running mate in 1984.

Judy Goldsmith, president of the National Organization for Women, said Bush's comment reflected "a view that we've seen over and over again from the Reagan administration — that women don't have to be taken seriously. If they don't learn that lesson now, they'll learn it at the polls next November."

Six candidates for the Democratic nomination, Walter Mondale, John Glenn, Gary Hart, Ernest Hollings, Alan Cranston and George McGovern, all told NOW's annual convention here last weekend that they would consider a woman for the vice presidency. The seventh contender, Reubin Askew, did not attend the convention.

Bush, asked his views on a woman as vice president, said, "I like the vice president we've got."

As for the Democrats' promise to consider a woman for the ticket, Bush said, "I really must confess I thought there was something — I hope I don't offend anyone — a little degrading.

And I've been through it myself, in these so-called cattle shows. To troop before the women and have to go down the vice presidency trail, almost in an embarrassing fashion. ... And maybe they didn't feel that way. I do. And I think there's a lot of people in the country that do."

President Reagan has promised to keep Bush as his running mate if he seeks re-election next year.

Ms. Goldsmith, whose group is the country's largest feminist organization, said "women are a newly emerging, serious political force in this country that deserves to be respected, and the Democratic candidates treated it with respect."

She said no one has ever suggested that it was degrading for candidates to address male-dominated groups such as veterans groups, Chambers of Commerce, labor unions and others. In the case of NOW and the Democrats, she said, "It's obvious the vice president feels it was degrading because they were doing it before women."

Bush made his comment in an interview with the board of directors of AP Broadcasters Inc.

He also voiced support for Ferdinand Marcos, the embattled president of the Philippines resign.

Sick turtles treated at Marineland

MARINELAND, Fla. (AP) — Marine biologists have two sick turtles on their hands, one suffering from indigestion and the other swimming in circles in a daze.

A 400-pound male loggerhead sea turtle was rushed to Marineland Tuesday, suffering from a buildup of gas under his shell which prevents him from diving to feed, officials said.

A smaller, female loggerhead — dubbed "Myrtle" by a police officer who aided in her rescue last weekend — is not faring as well and police fear she is the victim of a gunshot.

Myrtle refuses to eat and continues to swim in small circles in a daze, Walker said.

Murder suspect returns to jail

MARSHALL, Minn. (AP) — A teen-ager charged with second-degree murder in the killings of two bankers at a farm once owned by his father was returned to the Lyon County jail after failing to post $250,000 bail.

Steven Jenkins, 18, charged with his father in last week's killings at the Ruthton farm, spoke quietly and did not enter a plea Thursday during a bail hearing before Lyon County District Judge George Marshall. He was ordered back to court Oct. 20.

James Jenkins apparently killed himself before his son surrendered Sunday night in Texas, where they had fled. The victims, Rudolph Blythe and Deems Thulin, were officers of the bank that had foreclosed on Jenkins' mortgage.

Accountant takes hours to kill

MILFORD, Conn. (AP) — A retired accountant charged with beating his wife to death with a sledgehammer told police "it took me hours to kill her," according to an affidavit filed in Superior Court.

Frank Pizzolorusso, 63, was despondent over his own heart condition and the chronic poor health of his wife, Alene, 60, according to a friend who alerted police after receiving a call from the man Saturday night. Police said the man struck his wife 17 times on the head Saturday morning, then slashed his wrists and scalp.

State's Attorney John Kelly said a warrant charging Pizzolorusso with first-degree manslaughter would be served when he leaves Yale-New Haven Hospital, where he was in guarded condition Thursday.

Therapy refused because of tattoo

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — An appendicitis patient who was refused treatment by a Jewish doctor because of his swastika tattoo says he tried to explain it symbolized "white power," not Nazi Germany.

Dr. Jason Balaban said Wednesday he referred John Brickell, 24, to another doctor after telling him the swastika "means white power to you, but it means entirely different things to me." The symbol was used by Adolf Hitler's Nazi Party, which led Germany to exterminate 6 million Jews in World War II.

The mother of Brickell's fiance said she has considered suing over Tuesday night's incident. However, the state hospital association said doctors may treat "whom they wish" in non-emergencies.

Husband jailed for wife's sex acts

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A woman testified she obeyed her husband and had sex with other men about 80 times because she feared beatings, chokings and his threats to send pictures of her and the other men to her parents.

Glenn Bayne, 36, was ordered held Thursday on $200,000 bail on charges of rape, involuntary sexual intercourse, simple assault and terroristic threats. He sat silently while his wife of eight years testified during a preliminary hearing.

Reagan marks newspaper week

WASHINGTON (AP) — National Newspaper Week begins Sunday and President Reagan says no force is more crucial in "shaping the destiny of our civilization" than "the responsible reporting and truthful analysis of the events of our era."

Reagan issued the proclamation Thursday and also declared that Saturday is International Newspaper Carrier Day. He said newspaper carriers play "a valuable part in the development of an educated and knowledgeable electorate."

In a message marking National Newspaper Week, Reagan said:

"Throughout National Newspaper Week, all Americans are pleased to note the many contributions of the men and women of our nation's press to the preservation of the First Amendment's guarantee of freedom of the press.

"Of the forces shaping the destiny of our civilization, none is more crucial to our future than the responsible reporting and truthful analysis of the events of our era."

Observers will be allowed

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syrian-backed opponents of President Amin Gemayel's pro-American government said today they have agreed to let observers from Western Europe help police Lebanon's civil war cease-fire.

Their announcement, which could help solidify the truce, coincided with U.S. intelligence reports that the Soviet Union may be preparing to supply Syria with SS-21 surface-to-surface missiles that could pose a new threat to both Israel and Lebanon.

If deployed in southern Syria, the SS-21s, which have a range of 75 miles, could hit Israel's major air bases and the multinational peacekeeping force in Beirut, including U.S. Marines and an American 6th fleet squadron off the coast.

Troops in control of Punjab

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The Indian government today empowered top policemen to "shoot to kill" lawbreakers in Punjab and sent in additional troops after imposing federal control over the state because of mounting political violence.

Federal officials also empowered authorities to search houses without warrants to arrest Sikh extremists suspected of terrorizing the state and "destroy" those places suspected of being used as terrorist hideouts.

Both Punjab and the adjacent territory of Chandigarh were declared "disturbed" areas, one day after Indian President Zail Singh dismissed the state government and suspended the legislature.

The "disturbed" designation gives expanded powers to authorities and enables police officers above the rank of sub-inspector to shoot to kill all lawbreakers.

Nicaraguan rebels mine coast

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Honduras-based Nicaraguan rebels Thursday said they have mined the coast off of Nicaragua's only oil unloading facility and threaten to blow up approaching oil tankers.

The Democratic Nicaraguan Force, a Honduras-based rebel group, said it mined the area around Puerto Sandino to prevent the leftist Sandinista government from using the port to unload fuel.

Force Commander-in-Chief Adolfo Calero Portocarrero said Force rebels had placed mines in waters surrounding the port 30 miles west of Managua, Nicaragua's capital.

Rebels receive U.S. planes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nicaraguan counter-revolutionaries, who began air raids inside Nicaragua last month, have received planes from the Central Intelligence Agency, U.S. sources say.

One intelligence source said it was a CIA-supplied Cessna, piloted by two Nicaraguan rebels, that crashed at the base of the control tower at Managua's international airport during a Sept. 8 bombing raid. The two rebels and an airport worker were killed.

Two other sources said the CIA has provided five light planes to the Costa Rican-based forces of former Sandinista hero Eden Pastora, who claimed responsibility for the airport raid.

Panama crash victims sought

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — U.S. officials said Thursday they are searching for two U.S. Army officers missing at sea after the army helicopter they were riding in crashed near the Panama Canal.

A news release from the U.S. Southern Command said a UH-60 Blackhawk crashed into the Caribbean Sea about two miles northeast of Ft. Sherman near the north entrance of the Panama Canal late Tuesday with three men aboard.

Missing are Chief Warrant Officer 3 William H. Tuttle and Spec. 4 Richard J. Thompson, the release said. It gave no hometowns for the two men.

Aid delivered to flood victims

NOGALES, Mexico (AP) — Soldiers and volunteers delivered food, water and clothing Thursday to victims of torrential rains that meteorologists say were the worst to hit the area in at least four decades.

Julian Lopez, 21, a volunteer with the Red Cross in Nogales, said flooding has left about 50 people homeless since Sept. 28.

He said some 250 other persons lost almost their possessions, although they have been able to remain in their houses.

The rains began to taper off over the weekend.

Acid rain plans discussed

QUEBEC (AP) — The Reagan administration is leaning toward an "evolutionary and flexible" plan to fight acid rain, although there is opposition from Cabinet members who feel it is too costly, a U.S. Environmental Protection Agency official says.

Fitzhugh Green, EPA associate administrator developing an acid rain program, told the eight-member Great Lakes Commission on Thursday a Cabinet council has made no recommendations yet to President Reagan from a range of acid rain proposals submitted by EPA administrator William Ruckelshaus.

A GOOD USED CAR... MORE CAR FOR THE MONEY.

Year in and year out cars depreciate in value. You've heard it. But it's not true! Cars only depreciate each year in price, not in value, because the next year's models have arrived.

There's a difference between price and value. Today's late model used cars, specially those that received good care, actually can give you as much value as a new one. When you can buy a good used car for thousands of dollars less than a new one - that's real value. Our reputation for offering good value for the money is your best assurance - buying your used car.
