Meese says 'others involved' in dual deals

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Edwin Meese said today that people outside the White House appear to have known of the secret scheme to funnel millions of dollars in profits from Iranian arms sales to Nicaraguan rebels.

"It appears there were some others involved," and not just the two presidential aides forced from their jobs Tuesday, Meese said in an interview on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America."

Meese said that, apparently, "there are some consultants involved and other people who have a tangential relationship to the U.S. government."

Appearing in another interview, Meese pledged that Reagan's national security adviser, who resigned, and one of his top aides, who was fired, will not be "scapegoats."

"People who have done things will be accurately portrayed and, if necessary, actively prosecuted...if there's anything criminal," he said on the NBC-TV "Today" show.

But he added in the NBC interview that his investigation, begun Friday, has so far found no evidence of involvement by others close to Reagan in concealing the secret arrangement from the president.

"As far as anyone in the top levels of government — let's say at the department-head level or top people in the White House such as the chief of staff, certainly the president or vice president, or any Cabinet members being involved — we've pretty clearly established at this point that that has not happened."

Minutes later, appearing on ABC, he said:

"It appears there were some others involved and that's what we're looking into now, but I don't have any definitive information at the present time other than that there are other leads that we will be pursuing and there will be a considerable number (of people) that will be talked to."

Asked if he was referring to people in the government, Meese answered:

"At this stage, I couldn't tell you for sure or tell you that there are not such people. There are some consultants involved and other people who have a tangential relationship to the U.S. government that we will be talking to."

He said he did not know how long his investigation will take, but said it would not drag out. He pledged that "we'll be getting to the bottom by talking to everyone who may have had any involvement whatsoever."

Congress questions legality, calls for more probes, firings

WASHINGTON (AP) — The revelation that Iranian arms money funded Contras in Nicaragua is leading stunned legislators of both parties to call for more firings and new investigations of Reagan administration foreign policy and predict that Congress will ban further U.S. aid for the Nicaraguan rebels.

Numerous legislators also said Tuesday that several laws may have been violated by the program.

Most appeared surprised by the White House announcement of the connection between secret arms shipments to Iran and military aid to the guerrillas trying to overthrow Nicaragua's leftist government.

President Reagan announced Tuesday the removal of his national security adviser, Vice Adm. John Poindexter, and his assistant, Marine Lt. Col. Oliver North. Attorney General Edwin Meese said money from the Iranian arms sales went into a Swiss bank account for use by the Contras.

"Today you have a situation in which two policies are colliding around a Geneva bank account," said Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee.

He said his panel is investigating the tangled situation, but "it is way beyond our wildest imagination" that something like it would occur. "It comes as a shock."

Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., who will replace Durenberger as head of the committee in January, said Reagan should admit he made a mistake, fire all those responsible "and try to start again with a clean slate."

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., incoming chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said, "the Reagan administration has to understand that they cannot abuse the laws of democracy to foster democracy abroad."

Nunn said there should be an investigation of whether laws were violated, including the Boland Amendment, which bars U.S. support for overthrowing Nicaragua's Sandinista government, and the 1977 Arms Export Control Act, which limits the transfer abroad of U.S. weapons.

Durenberger, an opponent of Contra aid, said, "I suspect it will be a cold day in Washington before any more money goes to Nicaragua. Ollie North may have killed his Nicaragua program."

Nunn, a backer of Contra aid, concurred. "Contra aid was already a very close question," and the latest revelation "puts it in further jeopardy."

Congress last month changed its earlier position and voted to permit $100 million, including $70 million in military help, to the Contras. The Democratic-controlled House and Republican-run Senate narrowly approved the program after heavy lobbying by Reagan. Many legislators had predicted that Democratic control of both chambers in next year's Congress would mean the end of the program.

Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., said, "It was a shocking revelation and it further shows up the chaotic state of our foreign policy."

Byrd said Reagan should "admit it was a mistake and pick up from there."

House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, said he thought the opertion violated the Boland Amendment, at least in spirit, and said it "defies credulity" to believe that North "could be making foreign policy."

"Surely someone else had to be involved in discussing it," Wright said. "The president should have been aware. If nobody knew of it, that in itself is a confession of a great void in the execution of our foreign policy."

But Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., called the Iran arms-Contra connection "a bizarre twist" and urged people to "do everything possible to resist" the temptation "to act and speak before they think or before all the facts are known."

But Democrats didn't wait. Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., said "An atmosphere of recklessness and lawlessness has permeated foreign policy." And Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, said, "It is clear from what has been said that laws have been violated" and called for an independent special prosecutor to investigate.

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, said his view of U.S. foreign policy is "complete and total disarray, of a president not in charge of his administration."

Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., incoming chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, said Reagan's credibility was damaged and foreign policy is in "a bit of a shambles." He also predicted Contra aid is in deeper trouble.

Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Calif., said, "There was a signal given by someone in this administration that the law need not stand in the way when it came to implementing policies in Iran and Central America. The public needs to know who gave that signal.... " He also called for an independent prosecutor.

Rep. Dave McCurdy, D-Okla., said Reagan should fire White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan because Regan has done "the greatest disservice to his president and the country."

"This policy is a cancer on the presidency," said Rep. David Bonior, D-Mich., "leading the administration from one dirty deal to another in an effort to carry out an illegal and immoral war. It is time to put an end to it once and for all."

Tower named to inquiry

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan today appointed former Sen. John Tower to a special review board that will investigate the activities of the White House National Security Council, which coordinated the secret sale of U.S. arms to Iran.

Sen. Phil Gramm earlier had urged the president to name Tower to succeed Vice Adm. John Poindexter, as national security adviser, congressional sources said.

Reagan also appointed former Secretary of State Edmund Muskie and one-time national security adviser Brent Scowcroft to the special review board.

Tower, who most recently served as a U.S. arms negotiator, was picked as chairman of the three-member panel.

Reagan said the review board was charged with conducting "a comprehensive study of the future role and procedures of the National Security Council staff in the development, coordination, oversight and conduct of foreign and national security policy.

Small gains in daily attendance will pay off for Midland schools

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Incentive programs to encourage student attendance on Midland school campuses apparently have paid off this fall as daily attendance increased .39 of a percent over last year, officials said Tuesday.

The increase — when translated into dollars — means the Midland Independent School District will receive more money from the state for the 1987-88 school year.

Larry Lusby, director of computer and special services, said the average daily attendance for October totaled 17,378 students or 95.71 percent — up from 95.32 percent in October 1985.

"We fared pretty well (even though the MISD fell short of its goal of 96 percent average daily attendance)," Lusby told trustees during a bi-monthly meeting.

Lusby said the district offered student incentives — including cash and other prizes — to encourage 100 percent attendance.

The state awards money to schools based on Average Daily Attendance during October.

Lusby said the MISD also fared well in comparison with other school districts of its size.

San Angelo ISD reported a 96.84 percent attendance rate, while Abilene and Ector County ISDs reported rates of 95.94 percent and 96.77 percent, respectively.

MISD Business Manager Don Furgeson said the 1 percent difference between Midland and Ector County attendance rates represents a net of $300,000 less to the MISD than ECISD in state appropriations.

In other business, Lusby said there have been no major shifts in the community's population to eliminate the need for the boundary changes approved by trustees last spring.

As school officials projected, a comparison of student enrollment (for grades 1-6) shows 49.63 percent will attend Midland High School and 50.36 percent will attend Lee High School when the boundary changes go into effect in 1988.

Philippine government, guerrillas reach cease-fire pact

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The government and Communist guerrillas today agreed to a 60-day cease-fire — their first nationwide truce since the insurgency began 17 years ago.

The pact, which was announced by both sides, is to be signed Thursday and take effect Dec. 10. President Corazon Aquino had set a Sunday deadline for the rebels to accept a cease-fire.

"Both sides won the war," said Ramon Mitra, the chief government negotiator. "We gained a new phase in the life of our country. It's something we both longed for, and the president had wanted all along since she decided to seek the presidency."

Mitra told The Associated Press he had informed Mrs. Aquino of the agreement and she congratulated the panel.

Satur Ocampo, a negotiator for the Communist-dominated National Democratic Front, said the two sides agreed to meet 30 days after the signing to begin talks on substantive issues, including land reform and human rights.

He said the draft of the agreement provided for a possible extension of the truce and contained a guarantee that guerrilla negotiators will not be arrested.

The draft does not require the guerrillas or the military to withdraw from positions they hold, Ocampo said. The NDF previously made it a condition of a cease-fire that the military withdraw from positions the rebels consider under their control.

The two sides have been negotiating since August. They met for eight hours Tuesday.

The NDF, which represents the Communist Party and its military wing, the New People's Army, originally wanted a 100-day cease-fire. The government proposed a 30-day truce, subject to extension if both sides agreed.

Moslem guerrillas who want a separate state on southern Mindanao island have been fighting the government for 14 years. The government announced Tuesday that one Moslem group, the Moro National Liberation Front, agreed to begin cease-fire talks by early January.

On Sunday, Juan Ponce Enrile resigned as defense minister. He had repeatedly criticized Mrs. Aquino for not being tough enough in dealing with the Communists.

Asked whether Enrile's departure had an effect on the talks, Ocampo said: "It did not make much difference to us because we are not sure something major has changed in the armed forces."

But Tony Zumel, another NDF negotiator, said he detected "a sense of optimism" in the government after Enrile's departure.

Zumel said the cease-fire would not automatically end the insurgency.

Police have suspect in disappearance

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Midland police investigators said this morning after 18 days of investigation they have a suspect in the mysterious disappearance of 24-year-old June Gilkerson of Midland.

The man, 40 years old from Midland, has been linked to Ms. Gilkerson's car by "independent physical evidence," according to Det. Lt. Ron Aaron. The car, a 1986 Honda Civic, was found at the Best Western motel on Interstate 20 after the woman disappeared. Her purse, shoes and car keys were still inside.

Aaron said police have questioned the man several times, and he has denied any involvement in the case, and denies knowing or ever seeing Ms. Gilkerson.

"He is cooperating to some extent," said Det. Capt. Billy Ray.

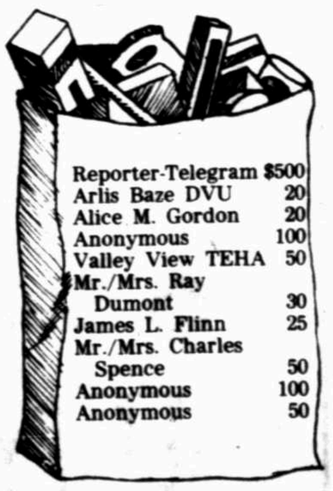

Ray said the man has been considered a possible suspect for about a week.

Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre, who police have kept informed, declined to comment on the suspect.

Berlin court convicts Palestinians

BERLIN (AP) — A court today convicted two Palestinians of attempted murder and weapons violations in a West Berlin bombing and said Syria aided in the attack.

Shortly before the verdicts were announced, West Berlin justice officials said they have issued an arrest warrant for a man identified at the trial as a Syrian intelligence officer. The officials said the man, Abu Ahmed, was sought on suspicion of attempted murder in connection with the attack.

The court sentenced Ahmed Nawaf Hasi, 35, to 14 years in prison and his accomplice, Farouk Salameh, 39, to 13 years. Both men admitted the March 29 bombing of the German-Arab Friendship Society, in which nine people were injured.

West German officials have said the outcome of the trial would play a role in West Germany's relations with Syria.

In Bonn, chief government spokesman Friedhelm Ost refused to say what action West Germany might take. "The government does not yet have the reasons for the verdict. When we receive them, either orally or in writing, we will examine them and then decide whether we are going to draw any conclusions," he said.

Britain broke relations with the Damascus government after a Jordanian, Nezar Hindawi, was convicted in the attempted bombing of an Israeli jet in London — an attempt Britain said was backed by Syria. Hindawi and Hasi are brothers.

In issuing the verdicts, Presiding Judge Hans-Joachim Heinze said the three-judge panel determined Hasi picked up the explosives used in the bombing from the Syrian Embassy in Communist-controlled East Berlin.

The court also said it believed the two defendants' pre-trial testimony, read into the record, that they planned the attack with the help of Syrian officials.

"The court has no reason to doubt these versions when other facts in the case have been confirmed throughout the proceedings. The court must therefore find them credible," Heinze said of the defendants' statements about Syria.

The defendants said Abu Ahmed, who real name is Lt. Col. Haitham Saed, aided in planning for the bombing. British police testified at Hindawi's trial that he told them he was recruited by Saed to carry out attacks against Israeli targets.

Reports have said Abu Ahmed is the deputy intelligence chief of Syria's air force.

Syria's ambassador to East Germany, Faysal Sammak, in an interview Tuesday, denied his country was involved in the West Berlin bombing.

"There is no connection or contact between us and these people," he said in an interview with The Associated Press in East Berlin.

Sammak, speaking in Arabic through a translator, said the trial was part of an elaborate plot aimed at embarrassing his country. "Syria's enemies are behind this. The main opponent in this is the Israeli Mossad," or secret service, he said.

The Israeli Embassy in Bonn, the capital of West Germany, today accused Syria of spreading "propaganda lies" about Israel and claimed that Damascus planned and carried out terrorist attacks in Europe.

Sammak said he did not expect the trial would further hamper relations between Syria and West European nations, and the Arab League mission in Bonn warned against any action being taken against Syria in connection with the Berlin trial.

The United States and other European nations imposed limited sanctions against Syria after Britain urged action against Damascus.

In their summation, the prosecutors said the West Berlin bombing was plotted by Hindawi, who was sentenced to prison for attempting to blow up the Israeli jet.

— The White House announced today, as expected, that former Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, will chair a three-person board formed to investiagate the activities of the National Security Council staff.

The NSC's director, John Poindexter, resigned under fire Tuesday and a principal aide, Lt. Col. Oliver North, was fired after Meese learned that North had watched over the arms-sale-profits-diverson scheme and that Poindexter had been aware of the operation.

Also named to the panel were former Secretary of State Edmund Muskie, a Democrat, and Brent Scowcroft, President Ford's national security adviser.

A statement issued in Reagan's name said the panel had been asked "to review the NSC staff's proper role in operational activities, expecially extremely sensitive diplomatic, military and intelligence missions."

— Presidential chief of staff Donald T. Regan told reporters that "the National Security Council does not report to me."

Comparing the NSC controversy to a bank found to be guilty of fraud, Regan asked and answered the hypothetical question, "Does the bank president know whether a teller in the bank is fiddling around with the books? No."

— Reagan received the annual Thanksgiving turkey — a 57-pound bird — during a morning Rose Garden ceremony and ignored shouted questions from the press. As a reporter called out to the president, he bent over the turkey and said, "Did you ask a question?"

When another reporter asked whether he really didn't know anything about the money going to the Contras, Reagan replied, "All I know is this is just going to taste wonderful and I'm looking forward to tomorrow. He (the turkey) is not looking forward, but I am."

Actually, the turkey will not be slaughtered but will be put on display at a family-style restaurant in northern Virginia.

Meese, asked by an interviewer if he would consider recommending a special prosecutor, as some on Capitol Hill have proposed, Meese said that decision would "depend on the people involved" and that if his investigation found apparent criminality on the part of people covered by the independent-counsel lesigiation, "then we will utilize those laws."

Meese would not speculate on whether some of the arms profits may have found their way to Eugene Hasenfus, the American convicted of anti-government activity by Nicaragua after his plane, which was carrying supplies to the U.S.-backed Contras, was shot down.

Hasenfus has said he felt the supply operation was a U.S. government operation.

Meese, asked about that, said: "I'm not going to speculate. Our investigation will bring out whatever did happen. I think we have to wait until then to make those conclusions as to exactly what did occur."

The swirling controversy over the secret sales and profit diversion deepened as a top Contra leader, interviewed on the "CBS Morning News," denied that any of the money had made its way through a Swiss bank to his forces.

"We do not control a Swiss bank account and we have not gotten any money from any Iranian connection," Adolfo Calero said. While he said the Contras have, "like the Red Cross, received anonymous donations," he added that he had "gotten no donation near the amount being talked about."

SUSPECT

He did say the case has been investigated intensively, and "there seems to be progress."

Aaron and Ray, part of a team of detectives who have logged hundreds of hours of overtime in the case, said they were happy to have a suspect, but both stressed that there had been no arrest, and the investigation was continuing.

"We still have some people to talk to," Aaron said.

While police claim the 40-year-old Midland man is the first official suspect in the case, they have questioned another man, a 20-year-old man from Michigan, about the case. According to police, the men are acquainted.

Ms. Gilkerson, a volunteer worker at the Midland County Restitution Center, was reported missing by her husband, Ronald, the evening of Nov. 8.

According to police, Gilkerson said his wife left their residence in west Midland about 9 a.m., and was planning to go to the Restitution Center. Employees there said she never arrived, and motel employees first remember seeing her car about 10:30 a.m.

High school enrollment projections also shows identical enrollment in the two schools through the 1990s, Lusby said.

He added that the schools not only will be balanced racially and ethnically, but an equal number of students will perform in the upper, middle and lower IQ and achievement groups.

"We're pretty much on track, even though we have fewer students than we projected in January," Lusby said.

He said the district's enrollment has declined about 100 students compared to the same time last year.

Lusby said enrollment normally peaks about the second week in October. This year, however, attendance reached its pinnacle much earlier than expected.

"Since then, we've been declining at a normal rate," he added.

Lusby said "There's no doubt that there's an exodus (that hinges on the county's economic troubles), but I would say the term 'mass' is incorrect because the kids that are leaving, are leaving from all parts of the city."

Lusby said he will continue to monitor enrollment day-to-day and present an updated report to the board in March.

Given the current data, Lusby said he expects spring enrollment to be less overall as students withdraw from school over the holidays.

He added that the district also will pick up fewer students after the Christmas break.

Youngsters fix holiday banquet

SAND SPRINGS, Okla. (AP) — The Thanksgiving banquet at First Presbyterian Church may not be the most elegantly served meal of the holiday season, but the waiters and waitresses will be among the most attentive.

The 29 kindergartners in Dee Ann Herje's class have prepared the four turkeys, the 300 yeast rolls, green beans, 40 pounds of mashed potatoes and 20 apple and pumpkin pies.

"The kids really do it all themselves. Really," said Ms. Herje, a teacher at Lake Country Christian School.

"My philosophy is that children can do a lot more than we expect them to. We adults are just there to guide them," she told The Tulsa Tribune newspaper.

The 5- and 6-year-olds will arrive bright and early Wednesday to complete preparations for the meal they have been working on for a week.

"One group (of students) will be mashing, another group will be carving, another will be making gravy," Ms. Herje said.

"We lay it all out buffet style. So the children also will be stacking plates, putting out cups, filling them with water and setting the tables.

"Nobody is going to be running around playing chase. They all have a job to do. They even cut the pies — in slices of all sizes."

Family and friends gather at noon for the meal, followed by a kindergarten version of the Thanksgiving story.

The banquet "is a way for them to show that they're thankful for their families. And they are real proud," Ms. Herje said.

Children can learn lessons in the kitchen, she said. Her class has prepared lunches each Monday, coordinating the food with their lessons.

They can learn math skills from shopping and sequencing from following a recipe. Stirring encourages coordination. Kneading dough is a fun way to strengthen small hand muscles.

The children also learn how to work safely with knives, potato peelers, electric skillets and electric mixers, Ms. Herje said.

"I've never had a child cut. But I do have a box of Band-Aids handy on the days we use potato peelers," she sd.

"We teach respect for knives and we learn discipline with respect for our friends and neighbors. This is another way to teach that," Ms. Herje said.

The children learn about taking turns, sharing, waiting, cooperation "and how to cope with something different — and that includes tasting things, too," she said.

Texas schoolchildren advise Baby Turkey

By RHONDA TALLEY

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — They read like words of wisdom for the weight-conscious going into the holiday season:

"Do not get fat."

"Go on a diet."

"Don't eat sweets like apple pie."

But these wise words are advice for Baby Turkey, as given by third-graders from Sam Houston Elementary School.

Baby Turkey is experiencing the most horrifying time for a young turkey: the days before Thanksgiving when farmers are out looking for that perfect bird for their Thanksgiving dinner.

Farmer Jones can be seen in Jacquelyn Ashbrook's third-grade classroom. With rifle in hand, Farmer Jones is pictured combing the woods for his dinner, and behind him Baby Turkey is hiding in a bush.

"What advice would you give to Baby Turkey?" Mrs. Ashlock asked her class.

Each essay begins, "Baby Turkey, watch out because Thanksgiving is coming...."

Some of the students, such as 8-year-old Dustin, stated the simple plea, "Please do not get fat," in the prose published in book form and given to their parents at the school's open house this month.

Other students explained why Baby Turkey should be his thinnest until after Thanksgiving on Thursday.

"Oh, don't get fat or Farmer Jones will get you and that is that," said Olivia Molina, 8.

"Be on a diet because he (Farmer Jones) doesn't eat turkeys that are skinny," according to Chris Johnson, 9.

And because it wasn't just Farmer Jones Baby Turkey had to fear but "pilgrams and Indians," too, disguises, places to hide and trips were also suggested.

"Go to the moon and no farmers are going to get you there," said Olivia Jane Castro, 8. "You better go to the weight watcher's room. Go to California."

"You could go to the garage. And you can hide in the hay stacks. Or hide in the truck. But you can't eat very much," said Bud, 9.

"Find a disguise or turn invisible so he will not see you. You've got to watch out, Baby Turkey," said 9-year-old Tonya Newsome. "If Farmer Jones finds you, you will get killed. You will not live to see the sunshine anymore."

Wright: Reagan 'believes what he wants'

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Majority Leader Jim Wright says President Reagan may have overlooked the explosive nature of his administration's arms deals with Iran because the president disregards facts he doesn't want to hear.

"Mr. Reagan, of almost all the people I have met in high government positions, is uniquely capable of psyching himself up into a frame of mind in which he can believe whatever he wants to believe and can just utterly reject factual information which does not fit comfortably with his preconceived predilections," Wright, D-Texas, told reporters Tuesday after meeting with Reagan at the White House.

"I think that's just a characteristic of Mr. Reagan," Wright said. "It makes it very difficult for those who have information which is unpleasant to him to get through to him and to get him to accept that it is fact, that it is truth. ... I think the president is able, in his own mind, to reject information that he doesn't want."

Wright offered the observations after a briefing at which Reagan and Attorney General Edwin Meese outlined how a few administration officials had authorized the sale of arms to Iran, using some of the proceeds to help Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

TOWER

Poindexter resigned Tuesday and a key aide was fired after the White House said it learned that up to $30 million received from the secret sale of weapons to Iran had been divereted to U.S.-backed Contras fighting the Nicaraguan government.

"I have not been contacted by anyone in the administration and I have no other comment to make at this time," Tower said Tuesday when reached by telephone at his Dallas office.

He refused to say whether he would be open to taking the job as national security adviser.

Gramm, who holds the Senate seat formerly held by Tower, refused to go on the record as pushing for Tower as Poindexter's successor, but he did say the former senator would be a logical choice.

"His extensive experience in foreign affairs would make him an effective national security council director and would immediately re-establish the credibility of the administration," Gramm said.

Tower, 61, is a conservative Republican who served in the Senate for nearly 24 years. He was chairman of the Armed Services Committee and a supporter of the U.S. weapons buildups.

Police continue hunt for suspect in robbery

EDNEYVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Residents of this mountainous region locked their doors and kept guns handy today as police hunted for a robbery suspect and survival expert whose mother said he had read "too many cowboy stories."

Volunteers carried barbecue, stew and sandwiches to 400 officers searching in thick fog and pouring rain for Michael John Shornock, 21, of Swansboro, who is charged with robbing a bank Friday. Authorities say he has exchanged fire with them several times since then, injuring two officers.

"We're staying put, just watching and not letting anybody in," said Sarah Russell, 67, who sat with police and fire scanners in her cramped living room and kept a loaded .22-caliber rifle on the couch. She and her family were the only residents on their mountain road who did not evacuate Tuesday.

Authorities believed they had formed a perimeter around Shornock, and decided to "sit tight" and wait for better visibility today, said Henderson County Sheriff's Capt. Tom Hatchett. "They don't want to run around in them woods at night, with the fog the way it is."

A sheriff's sergeant was in serious but stable condition after being shot Tuesday under the eye as he and three other officers were searching a field for Shornock's tracks. A state Highway Patrol trooper avoided injury when a bullet was deflected by an ammunition clip in his hip pocket. A trooper was wounded Monday by flying debris.

"Apparently he lays in wait 'til an officer approaches, then he fires and runs a further distance and waits again," Hatchett said of Shornock.

"It certainly seems as though he read too many cowboy stories or something," said Shornock's mother, Ann Shornock of New Bern. "He thinks he can steal things and shoot cars and get away with it.

"He knows they're talking about big-time prison now. I don't know what he'll do for sure, but he said he would never go back to prison. I figure he's serious, and this all was just a form of suicide. I know we're his family, and we're biased, but I hope he gets out of this alive. We love him."

Sandra Horne, 46, who said she taught Shornock techniques of wilderness survival, described him as a crack shot, but said he did not need a firearm to survive in the woods.

"He can take a stick and chew it (to sharpen it) and hit a bird with it at 40 feet," she said. "He can catch a snake and eat it. He can take sticks and make a bow and arrow and kill a deer with it."

Henderson County Sheriff's Capt. George Erwin, expressing skepticism about Shornock's abilities, said, "He's gonna run out of food. He's the one who's gonna be wet. He's the one who's gonna be cold. We can get by on two or three hours of sleep. We've got plenty of food and we're dry. He's the one with problems."

Aid to brothers also brings problems

EDITOR'S NOTE — The flood of aid that poured in to help the seven O'Kelley brothers, left alone when their mother and grandfather died and their father abandoned them, astonished their local benefactors. But the boys are still waiting for the happy ending. Along the way, they've become guarded, even suspicious, having watched good will turn to resentment and misgivings.

By TAMARA JONES

GAINESVILLE, Ga. (AP) — The O'Kelleys were seven abandoned boys trying desperately to scrape by. Their trailer was a firetrap, dinner came from a can and threadbare clothes were handed down from brother to brother to brother. The mailbox overflowed with their runaway father's bills.

The Hodges were a successful young couple living on the other side of town. Active in their church and community, they had plenty of friends, a beautiful home and the best of intentions.

What happened after these two families came together is both heartwarming and heartbreaking.

It is a Thanksgiving story about giving too much. It is a story of generosity gone astray, of hopes gone awry.

"All we wanted was to be together," said Terry O'Kelley, at 19 the eldest brother.

But, still, they're not.

Terry was just 15 when his mother died of a brain tumor. The last thing she told her eldest son was to "take care of the boys" and feed her mongrel dog, Bill.

"I will," Terry promised.

The brothers ended up living with their grandfather in a ramshackle trailer on his 7½-acre farm, where they helped the old man till his garden and tend his chickens. In September 1985, he died of a heart attack.

The boys' alcoholic father showed up long enough to sell the chicken houses for scrap lumber, clean out the bank accounts, buy and wreck a new Buick and bounce some checks he had stolen from Terry before he disappeared again. He has since been imprisoned for three years on a conviction for child abandonment and theft.

Dunning notices started to mount for unpaid bills — medical care, farm payments, tombstones for his mother and grandfather. The O'Kelleys were $33,000 in debt.

Terry, by then barely 17, and Tommy, a year younger, quit school to work 60-hour weeks in poultry plants to make ends meet, but they never did, and last spring, Terry reluctantly placed his four youngest brothers in a foster home.

A friend of Terry's working at Jack Hodge's poultry distributorship told his boss of the O'Kelleys' plight. Curious, Jack asked to meet Terry. Bit by bit, the shy teen-ager confided in the 30-year-old businessman.

Terry O'Kelley didn't ask for anything.

The Fund for Seven Brothers was launched by the First Presbyterian Church that Jack and Martha Hodge attended. The local paper ran a front-page story, and donations started coming in.

At first, they were modest. One woman brought by some banana pudding. Somebody donated used furniture. A store provided blue jeans, and a barbershop offered free haircuts.

In August, a fire sparked by faulty wiring destroyed the trailer and all the new treasures, and the story attracted reporters from national news organizations.

Terry, Tommy and 16-year-old Charles moved in with the Hodges. On weekends, they saw the "little guys" — David, 15; Jeffrey, 14; Michael, 11, and Jason, 8.

"We all had fun," recalls Martha Hodge, a 27-year-old travel agent.

Suddenly, the O'Kelleys were free to enjoy childhood. There were birthday parties and matinees, cookouts and shopping sprees.

Gradually, the rambunctious boys with Huck Finn grins came to trust, perhaps even love, the Hodges.

"Whenever they went somewhere, they'd always bring you back a little something. They brought me a jewelry tree and a little shrimp boat from a garage sale," Mrs. Hodge said.

Meanwhile, the national publicity brought an avalanche of good will. The Fund has grown to almost $100,000. The North Georgia Homebuilders' Association has built a four-bedroom house, at no cost to the O'Kelleys, on the chicken farm. A philanthropist wants to set the boys up in the poultry business. Debts have been paid off or forgiven.

The gifts keep pouring in — a case of toothbrushes, 13 pairs of sneakers, a trip to Disney World, a car for Terry. New furniture, china, linens, a case of paper towels. About $250,000 worth of help in all.

Hollywood types began hounding Terry for the screen rights and a parade of "do-gooders" trekked to northern Georgia, including a flashy, self-described Florida millionaire who took the boys cruising in a limousine and a Wisconsin man who sold his home in the vain hope of moving into the new house as a foster parent.

The three oldest boys moved out of the Hodges' house about a month ago for "some peace and quiet," Terry said, adding, "We're tired of him and everyone else running our lives."

Racketeering convictions should spur more probes, prosecutor says

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Racketeering convictions against the Bronx Democratic leader and three others in New York City's biggest corruption scandal in decades should spur further investigations, a federal prosecutor said.

The defendants, including party leader Stanley Friedman, were found guilty Tuesday of turning the Parking Violations Bureau into a hotbed of bribery.

U.S. Attorney Rudolph Giuliani called the verdict "a victory for the honest and decent citizens of New York who have labored too long under the yoke of crooked politicians...," and called for Friedman's resignation.

"There can be little doubt that this verdict sends a crystal-clear message to all those who would attempt to manipulate the system to their own ends. The public has a right to hold those entrusted with its money to the highest standards," Mayor Edward I. Koch said in a statement.

Koch, a Democrat, also called for Friedman's resignation from the powerful Bronx post that allowed him determine which Democrats ran for office in the overwhelmingly Democratic borough of 1.2 million people.

But Friedman said he would not step down despite what Giuliani said were "a substantial number of matters" under investigation involving him and other "politicians who violate the public trust."

"I think the convictions here have given us momentum," Giuliani said.

Friedman said, "As far as I'm concerned, the fight is over when they close the box on you. I'm not giving up. I've never quit a fight in my life."

He, former city transportation chief Michael Lazar, ex-Parking Violations Bureau head Lester Shafran and businessman Marvin Kaplan were found guilty of racketeering, conspiracy and mail fraud. All four said they would appeal.

Friedman testified during the trial that he could secure city contracts with a single telephone call.

Karen Argenti, coordinator for the Bronx County Democratic Committee, offered a two-word answer Tuesday when asked who was running the organization: "Stanley Friedman."

Friedman and the others face up to 50 years in prison and fines of $1 million each when sentenced March 1. In addition, they will be required to forfeit ill-gotten gains and face possible state charges.

Friedman, a lawyer, could be disbarred.

Hours after the verdict, Friedman and his wife, Jackie, were arrested after a scuffle with New York Daily News photographer Robin Graubard at their hotel. The Friedmans and Ms. Graubard were charged with assault and released.

Friedman sat impassively as the verdicts were read. Besides racketeering and conspiracy, he was convicted of two counts of mail fraud.

Lazar and Shafran also were convicted of two counts of mail fraud each. Kaplan was convicted of one count of mail fraud and perjury for lying to the Securities and Exchange Commission.

After deliberating four days, the jury acquitted Shafran and Lazar of bribery in a Times Square real estate deal and found Shafran innocent of accepting gifts from a collection agency president.

The trial, moved here because of pretrial publicity, began Sept. 22.

Friedman and the others converted the PVB, the agency responsible for ticketing parking offenders and collecting fines, into "an enterprise for illegal plunder" from 1979-85, the prosecutor said.

In the end, Friedman was convicted of acting as bagman for a $30,000 bribe and holding a $1.5 million stock bribe for himself, former parking bureau Deputy Director Geoffrey Lindenauer and the late Queens Borough President Donald Manes, who committed suicide after early reports of the scandal.

The stock bribe was paid to ensure that Citisource, a company headed by Kaplan, would receive a $22 million bureau computer contract.

Lazar was convicted of preceding Friedman as a bagman for bribes from Datacom, a collection company that paid for a lucrative franchise — the right to hound scofflaws and take a percentage of the money recovered.

Shafran was convicted of accepting meals, theater tickets and other bribes from parking bureau clients.

Lindenauer, a confessed extortionist who admitted using a pair of phony degrees to establish a psychiatric clinic where he had sex with four patients, pleaded guilty to charges in the scandal and testified for the prosecution.

Marcos says he's 'realist' about situation

HONOLULU (AP) — Asked about mounting litigation and the possibility of living permanently in exile, deposed Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos shrugs.

"I accept what is. I am not a fatalist; I am a realist," Marcos said. "I try to improve my situation and if that cannot be improved, so be it. That is a verdict of God."

The government of Corazon Aquino alleges Marcos stole up to $10 billion during his 20-year presidency. Her administration has been trying to recover Marcos' allegedly ill-gotten wealth.

Marcos and his attorneys have been served repeatedly with legal papers. He and his wife, Imelda, occasionally have submitted to court-ordered questioning in legal cases against them.

The litigation, while tiresome, has not taken a psychological toll, says Marcos.

"I am a lawyer, and litigation is similar to writing," Marcos said in an interview Friday. "It reveals your strengths, wisdom, legal acumen as well as your weaknesses, deficiencies and ignorance."

After arriving in Hawaii in February, Marcos lived at Hickam Air Force Base, then spent months at a rented beachfront home.

He recently moved to a secluded hillside mansion in the Makiki Heights area overlooking Honolulu.

The Philippine government, alleging the property is owned by the Marcoses and is part of his illegally acquired wealth, is trying to take ownership of the home.

Traffic reporters take to air despite dangers

Associated Press

McCormick

Kathy Collins is still haunted by the last panicky on-air cries of a fellow traffic reporter, whose helicopter crashed into the Hudson River. And after 19 years, Ms. Collins is thinking about giving up her career in the clouds.

Her fiance wants her to get another job, said the 39-year-old reporter with KOY radio in Phoenix, Ariz. "But the pay is good, I enjoy the work and the station has been good to me. I don't know what I'm going to do right now."

And, she admits, "I'm scared a little bit."

Her fear is not unfounded.

Since April, airborne reporters have been involved in crashes of seven helicopters and one plane. Seven lives were lost, making 1986 the worst year ever for such accidents, according to the National Transportation Safety Board.

Last month, New York City reporter Jane Dornacker was killed when her helicopter crashed into the Hudson during a WNBC broadcast.

Ms. Dornacker's panicked cries of "Hit the water! Hit the water!" were heard by thousands of rush-hour commuters.

The latest fatalities occurred Tuesday in Cincinnati, where a chopper crashed in heavy fog, killing pilot Dan Gould, 31, and WKRC reporter Nancy McCormick, 26.

"Every time something like this happens, those of us in the air make a little extra effort to be vigilant," said Carl Dombeck, traffic pilot-reporter for KING-AM in Seattle.

Many veteran reporters remain undaunted.

Dennis Nordin has survived two freeway crash landings in the three years he's reported on traffic from a helicopter for KEX-AM in Portland, Ore.

He knows he is lucky to be alive, but the sight of a twinkling city below him outweighs the fear of flying.

"In the evening when we are coming over the west hills, when it's a clear-air night, it's just beautiful up there," he said.

Concentrating on so many things at once — ground traffic, flying conditions, radio chatter — makes airborne reporting a hectic job.

"You have to remember you're also the foil for the disc jockeys," said Nordin, 34. "If you're up there wondering if you're going to make it through the weather or not, you can't forget you're still expected to be the Ed McMahon.

"It's difficult to be jovial when you're somewhat frightened."

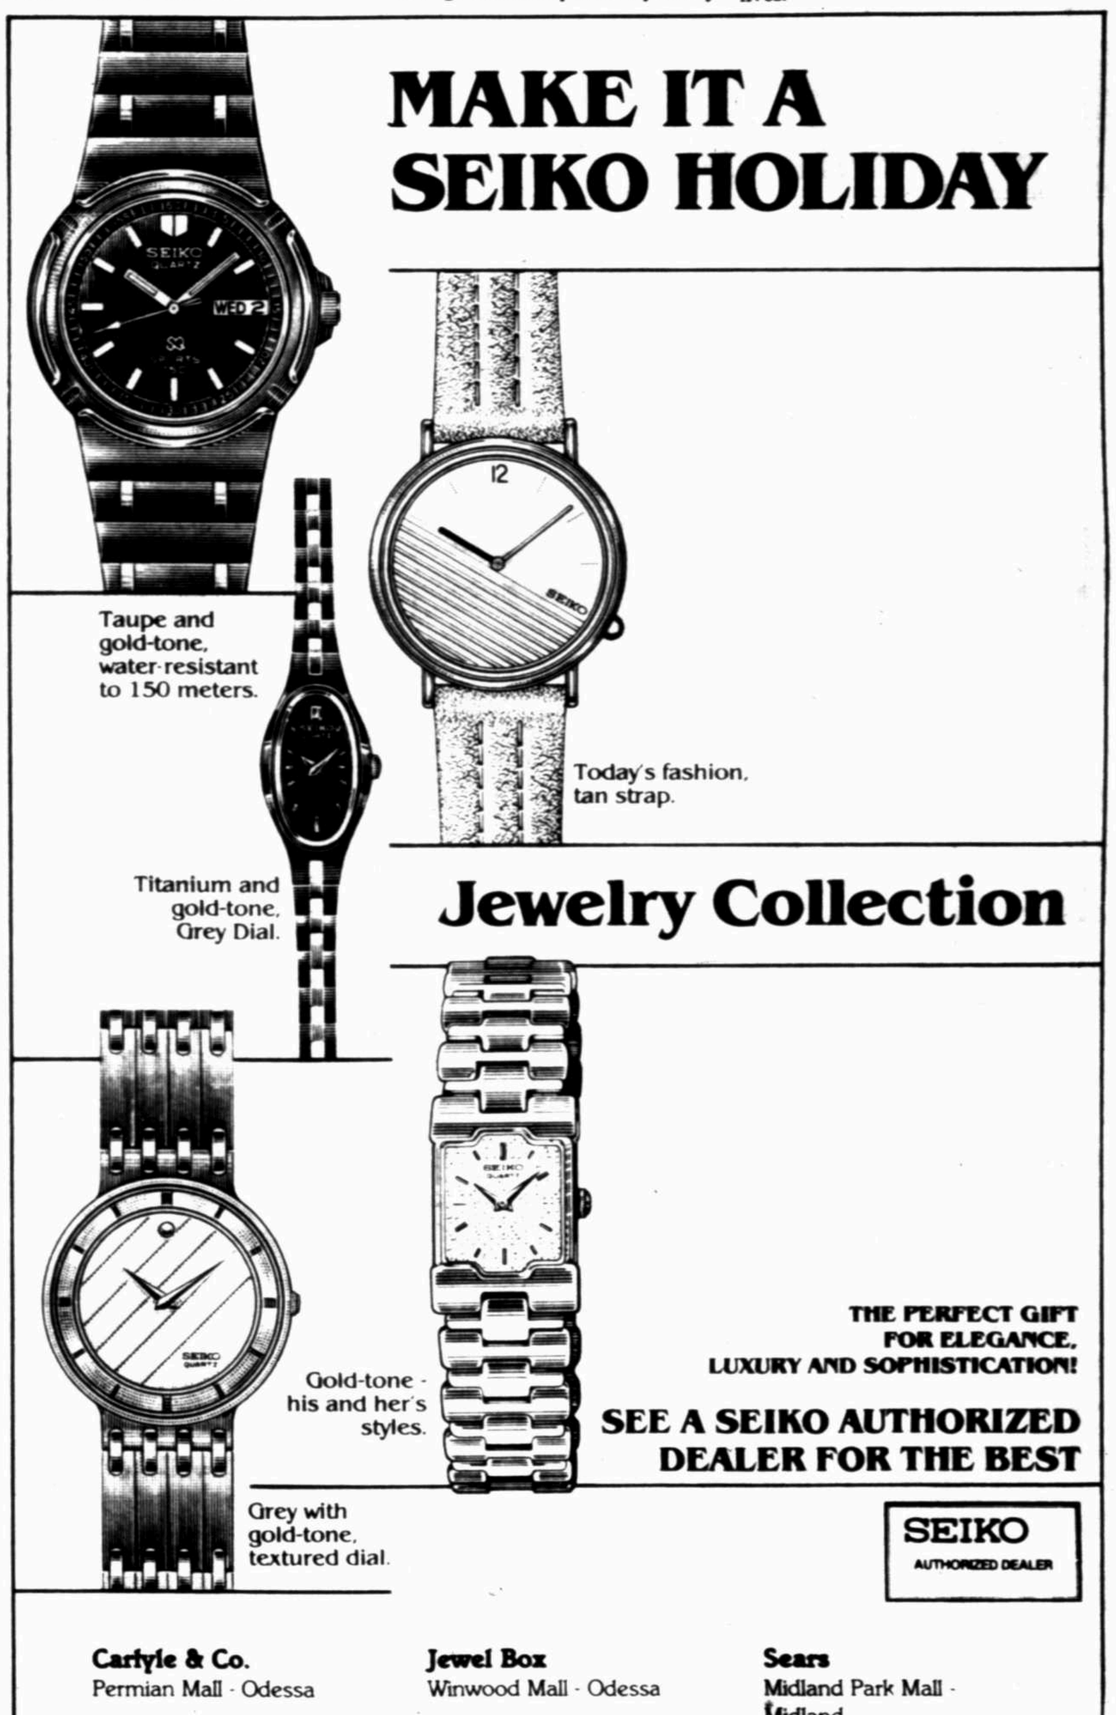

In Los Angeles, "Commander" Chuck Street, who pilots "Yellow Thunder" for Los Angeles' KIIS-FM, said the Cincinnati crash reminds him of the inherent danger of the occupation.

"It takes a lot of concentration," said Street, who earns $50,000 to $75,000 a year. "You have to constantly fight against complacency."

Since 1975, when the NTSB began keeping such records, 17 traffic helicopters have crashed killing 12 people. The most in any year until now was 1983, when three accidents killed four people.

This year's accidents remain under investigation, so officials are unable to speculate on any reason for the increase.

How often have you seen the five of a suit win a trick legitimately when all four players have followed suit? We would wager that it has never happened to you. It did occur during the Swiss Team Championship at the recent World Bridge Olympiad in Miami Beach.

Purists might quibble about West's two diamond overcall at any vulnerability. Few would have anything to say about North's leap to four hearts.

Declaring was Norma Borin of Australia. West hit upon a most unfortunate moment to make the top-of-nothing lead of the nine of spades. Dummy's jack forced the king from East, taken by the ace. Two rounds of trumps brought happy news in the shape of the queen, and declarer exited with a diamond. West won and found the club shift, but it was in a losing cause.

Declarer rose with dummy's ace and called for the five of spades. East contributed the three, declarer the four and West the two! The miracle had happened. It was a simple matter for declarer to cash the queen of spades, get back to the table with a diamond ruff and discard two club losers on the good spades.

At the other table North bid a mere two hearts over East's interference, and East raised diamonds. The contract was again four hearts but now West, Carole Rothfield, decided the diamond suit was unlikely to yield tricks, so she led a club. That proved to be deadly. Declarer ducked, East's ten won and a club return made sure that the defenders collected a spade trick, a diamond and two clubs for a one-trick set.

"She has used her office, in the best sense, to help make every American own the drug problem," the Rev. Val J. Peter, Boys Town executive director, said in making the award Tuesday.

Mrs. Reagan is the 11th recipient of the award, named after the founder of Boys Town, Edward Joseph Flanagan.

Mrs. Reagan told students she understands if they feel "beaten down."

"But please, believe me, drugs aren't the answer," she said. "They'll only make the pain worse in the long run."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The comic strip characters of about 175 cartoonists, including Garry Trudeau of "Doonesbury," and Mell Lazarus of "Miss Peach" and "Momma," will ask Thanksgiving Day readers to help the hungry.

"We all know about Africa because of the incredible attention it got last year," said Lazarus. "But it's time now to turn that same kind of searchlight on the people in this country who are starving."

Lazarus said that in Thursday's "Momma" cartoon, "I have her kids walking into the house on Thanksgiving Day, and she says, 'This year, instead of the traditional turkey, stuffing, cranberries and yams, what if we were to have what millions of less-fortunate families will have for dinner,' and they're all staring at a huge, empty dining room table."

Lazarus said Tuesday that about 175 cartoon artists will participate in the second annual project. Newspapers were asked to donate space for Hands Across America ads.

Charles presented the award, a silver statue of a British soldier, a case of lager and silver-plated mugs to the mortar platoon, which also was cited for outstanding performance in a five-mile march-and-shoot competition.

Charles was leaving for home today.

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Former jockey Ron Turcotte has lost a $100 million lawsuit he filed after he was paralyzed below the chest in a 1978 racing fall.

New York's top court, the Court of Appeals, said Tuesday that Turcotte acknowledged "horse racing is a dangerous activity" in which "speeding horses lawfully and properly come within inches of other horses and frequently bump each other."

Turcotte rode Secretariat when it won racing's Triple Crown in 1973, and was in more than 22,000 races in a 17-year career before the accident at Belmont Park in New York City.

Turcotte, now in his mid-40s and living in New Brunswick, Canada, sued jockey Jeffrey Fell, racehorse owner David Reynolds and the New York Racing Association. He alleged that Fell, riding a horse named Small Raja, improperly crossed in front of his horse, Flag of Leyte Gulf.

The toy-raising campaign is sponsored by the Marine Corps Reserve in cooperation with the Music Country Radio Network. The show will be taped to air over the network before Christmas.

NEW YORK (AP) — Where are the new hit American musicals?

Not on Broadway, where "Smile," which opened Monday, became the fifth home-grown musical comedy this season to get blasted by the critics. The four others — "Rags," "Honky Tonk Nights," "Raggedy Ann" and "Into The Light" — closed quickly, and "Smile" will have to struggle to survive.

"We're going to take a deep breath, collect our thoughts and see what happens at the box office," said Richard Kagan, one of the three producers. "We've got to see whether or not people are going to come to the theater. The problem is — at $47.50 a ticket — they like to be told whether they should go."

The problems facing "Smile," a show about a small-time beauty pageant, are symptomatic of how difficult it has become for a new American musical to get to Broadway today — and run.

The show, written by Marvin Hamlisch, who wrote the music for "A Chorus Line" and Howard Ashman, co-author of the off-Broadway smash "Little Shop of Horrors," took four years and $4 million to produce.

It went through two workshop productions and had to scramble for backers.

Timely research

Unlike those medical problems that claim an impassioned constituency raising funds and awareness, brain-tumor research has never received the attention it deserves. That unfortunate state of affairs has changed, though, thanks to the good work of medical researchers.

The brain is the body's most complex and yet least understood organ. That's one reason that knowledge about the origins and treatment of tumors has hardly advanced in more than two decades. Meanwhile, the disease has remained as deadly as ever, with the 13,000 cases diagnosed annually resulting in about 10,000 deaths.

Eighteen months ago, Peter Preuss of San Diego, Calif. was spurred to study brain tumors following an illness in his family. As the innovative founder of Integrated Software Systems Corp., Preuss brought a scientific mind and a businessman's savvy to the task and quickly became disturbed at the lack of a coordinated, well-funded research effort to study this affliction.

He set aside $3.5 million to establish the Preuss Foundation for Brain Tumor Research. This money has been used for a variety of purposes, including the support of scientific experiments around the globe. Preuss hopes that private funds will expand the foundation's work in the future.

Perhaps the foundation's most important undertaking was the staging of a scientific conference the other day. Specialists from as far away as Sweden came together in San Diego to discuss and debate the merits of different brain-tumor research methods.

Preuss is quick to admit that this sudden focus on brain-tumor research could lead to a breakthrough — or to nothing at all. In any event, his initiative and generosity have given new life to this long-neglected field of medical endeavor.

Reagan should lead

Argentine exporters aren't allowed to buy marine insurance from foreign insurers ... India bans imports of most manufactured consumer goods ... Norway prohibits apple imports until its own apples run out ... The BBC limits foreign television shows to 12 percent of its air time.

These examples all come from Washington's newest catalogue of horrors, of foreign barriers to free trade, compiled by the Office of the U.S. Trade Representative. This annual document, required by law, is designed to support charges that 41 countries treat American goods and services unfairly.

It would shed more light if the document also covered the transgressions of one more country: the United States. The Reagan administration, while proclaiming fidelity to free trade, has been writing its own wretched record. Fidelity begins at home.

The election campaign accentuated pressure to do something about the loss of American jobs to foreign competition. In response, the administration has done a great deal: negotiated tighter curbs on world trade in textiles, curbed imports of Canadian shingles and lumber, made a restrictive pact with Japan on semiconductors, tightened sugar quotas.

For good measure, it offered Russia a special bargain on wheat that the Russians ignored but that infuriated other wheat producers. Last week, negotiators concluded two more trade-constricting arrangements with Japan, covering textiles and machine tools. If the aim of all this promotion and protectionism was to protect Republican Senate seats, it failed. If, as the administration maintains, such backward steps were taken to pre-empt worse from Congress, they may have worked. But for how long?

Last summer, Congress did narrowly sustain President Reagan's veto of a bill to impede textile imports, and the Senate did block the House Democrats' broader bill to impede trade generally. But the Democrats won control of the Senate and their leaders promise to resurrect the trade bill. Meanwhile, the restrictions intended to head that off are in effect and, because of them, there will be less world trade.

To its great credit, the administration took one giant step forward this year: it finally won international agreement for a new round of global negotiations to reduce trade barriers. To be convincing, America's negotiators now need congressional authority to negotiate. That's reason enough for the president to take the initiative on legislation in 1987. The constructive answer to protectionist pressure is not appeasement but one that combines resistance to truly unfair competition and aid for industries and workers wiped out by fair competition.

Part of the president's successful strategy this year was to submit no trade legislation at all, thus providing no vehicle that could be loaded up with protectionist amendments. In the new Congress, however, ducking and pre-emption are likely to be a losing game. If the president truly abhors protectionism, the time has come for the leader to lead.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Nov. 26, the 330th day of 1986. There are 35 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

Nov. 26, 1789, was a day of thanksgiving set aside by President George Washington to observe the adoption of the U.S. Constitution.

On this date:

In 1716, the first lion to be exhibited in America was shown to the public in Boston.

In 1825, the first college social fraternity, Kappa Alpha, was formed at Union College in Schenectady, N.Y.

In 1832, public streetcar service began in New York. The fare was 12½ cents. The streetcar was the horse-drawn "John Mason," unveiled 12 days earlier.

In 1940, the 500,000 Jews of Warsaw, Poland, were forced by the Nazis to live within a walled ghetto.

In 1949, India adopted a constitution as a republic within the British Commonwealth.

In 1950, China entered the Korean conflict, sending troops across the Yalu River to begin a counteroffensive against soldiers from the United Nations, U.S. and Republic of Korea.

In 1973, President Richard M. Nixon's personal secretary, Rose Mary Woods, told a federal court she had accidentally caused part of the 18½-minute gap in a key Watergate tape.

In 1975, a federal jury in Sacramento, Calif., found Lynette Fromme guilty of trying to assassinate President Gerald R. Ford.

Ten years ago: House Majority Whip John J. McFall, D-Calif., admitted receiving $1,000 from South Korean businessman Tongsun Park in 1972, in addition to $3,000 McFall had previously admitted getting.

Five years ago: The 10 nations of the European Economic Community began a two-day conference in London to try to resolve differences over the organization's financing. The summit concluded without a solution to the disagreements.

One year ago: The space shuttle Atlantis roared into the nighttime sky over Cape Canaveral, Fla., carrying seven astronauts on a seven-day mission.

Today's birthdays: TV commentator Eric Sevareid is 74. "Peanuts" cartoonist Charles M. Schulz is 64. Singer Robert Goulet is 53. Actress-singer Marian Mercer is 51. Singer Tina Turner is 48. Impressionist Rich Little is 48.

Paying for hostages gets them killed

WASHINGTON — The frustration and ultimate futility of trying to ransom American hostages with arms or money were tragically demonstrated last spring, a few days after the American bombing raid on Libya. A gentle, pro-Arab librarian at the American University in Beirut was murdered when his kidnappers, tired of waiting for the $3 million the Reagan administration was hoping to raise for his release, sold him to the Libyans, who wanted revenge for the U.S. air raid.

Jack Anderson

Peter Kilburn, 60, was abducted on Dec. 3, 1984. His body was found last April 17, three days after the U.S. bombing raid on Libya. Here's what happened during the 16½ months of private hell that Kilburn endured:

An erudite, generous man, said to have had the best collection of Verdi opera records in Beirut, Kilburn often paid for the education of needy students and bought books for them and the American University library out of his own pocket. He had spent 20 years in Lebanon and had suffered a stroke that left him walking with a cane. "I don't think he could have harmed a fly," said a onetime assistant.

Despite his record of kindness toward the poor and his sympathy for the Arabs — or possibly because of it? — Kilburn was kidnapped by a gang of extortionists, a sort of Lebanese mob. They contacted the U.S. government and demanded $3 million for the return of this harmless, sickly hostage.

Last Dec. 27, we reported that Kilburn "was being held by a different group than the (pro-Iranian) captors of the other American hostages." We withheld details while negotiations for Kilburn's release continued.

Several times within the next few weeks the White House seemed close to springing Kilburn from captivity. The National Security Council gave serious consideration to the idea of raising several million dollars privately from American humanitarian and church groups to meet the kidnappers' ransom demands for Kilburn and other hostages.

The same well-meaning groups were providing (as they do to this day) tens of thousands of dollars to keep negotiations alive through Anglican minister Terry Waite. As a special adviser to the archbishop of Canterbury, Waite seemed to be close last Christmastime to getting several of the hostages out. (He also visited the United States at least twice during that period, and met with Lt. Col. Oliver North, the National Security Council official who, as it turned out, was overseeing the arms/hostages negotiations with Iran at the time.)

Waite's negotiations for Kilburn broke down several times — and ended abruptly and finally when the United States bombed Libya last April 14. Kilburn's kidnappers were already sorely frustrated at their inability to sell their hostage for the $3 million they had demanded.

The Libyans had already offered them $1 million for the unfortunate Kilburn two days before the U.S. raid. The kidnappers quickly closed the deal and sold their captive to Libyan agents. On April 17, Kilburn's body was found on the roadside near Beirut along with the bodies of two British hostages, who had also been shot in reprisal for Britain's cooperation in the American raid on Libya.

According to our intelligence sources, the British hostages — and presumably Kilburn — were shot by a Libyan army officer, identified only as a Major Khalifa, who had come from Tripoli to do the job.

Kilburn, generous, warmhearted friend of Arabs, was one victim of a tragic situation that has made every American in the Middle East a potential target for abduction and murder by pro-Iranian terrorists — or mercenary thugs who hide out in the Bekaa Valley of Lebanon under the protection of Syria.

BILLBOARD ALERT: Communities across the nation face a deluge of applications for billboard permits before Congress reconvenes in January and takes up revisions of the Highway Beautification Act. "The billboard industry is going all out to erect thousands of new billboards before Congress takes up the billboard issue again," warned James McMahon, executive director of the Coalition for Scenic Beauty. "Cities need to act now or they are going to be inundated by new, giant billboards." Fear of stricter controls is inspiring the industry's action; they want to get their billboards up in case Congress passes tough restrictions.

MONEY MEN: Bankers may not all fit the cartoonists' standard depiction of bloated, cigar-smoking fatcats wearing silk hats and diamond stickpins, but they have a pay advantage over those in other financial jobs, according to a study by Robert Half International, a big recruiting firm. Starting salaries in the major banks rose an average of 5.8 percent last year, compared to salaries for non-bank financial jobs, which rose only 3.1 percent. Perhaps the most surprising thing was the salary increase for senior loan officers, whose credit decisions have led to record losses in the industry. They went up 5.8 percent to a range of $36,000 to $55,000.

TOM WICKER

Reagan should heed calls for 'wise men'

NEW YORK — Not since his stumbling performance in his first debate with Walter Mondale in 1984 have Americans seen President Reagan so uncertain, so tongue-tied and so inept as they saw him in his news conference on Iran. Or so deceptive, some in Congress and elsewhere would add.

Tom Wicker

Reagan's performance must have been a shock for many television viewers, who have so often seen him rise above difficult situations with charm, sincerity and indifference to detail. As Sen. George Mitchell of Maine, a Democrat, put it, Reagan was clearly "ill at ease, and understandably so, defending a policy that is indefensible."

Repeatedly, the president denied that he or his administration had "condoned," or that he even knew about, shipments of arms from any other countries to Iran — a denial contradicting what had been established by statements from the Israeli government and from White House officials, including Reagan's chief of staff and his national security adviser.

These misstatements led to a written White House admission, issued within 30 minutes of the close of the news conference, that a "third country" had been involved in the arms shipments.

That was only the most egregious presidential error, if that's what it was. Reagan stated as fact, for another example, that he had the legal power to withhold from congressional leaders information about his secret dealings with Iran. Those leaders deny his authority to do so for 11 months, when the law in question requires "timely" notification to them.

Sen. Richard Lugar of Indiana, the chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, has been a loyal spokesman for the president. But even he conceded on an NBC News program following the press conference that Reagan apparently did not understand the law on "timely" notification of Congress.

The president also continued to insist that his shipment of arms to Iran and the release of three hostages by their captors in Lebanon did not constitute a "swap." Yet he indicated that in selling arms to Iran he had been demonstrating that "we were trustworthy" and he conceded that the Iranians had been told that they could show their good faith "by releasing our hostages."

He admitted no contradiction in "waiving" a U.S. embargo to supply arms to Iran while urging other nations not to make such shipments. And he insisted that Secretary of State George Shultz had been "involved" in the Iranian affair, although Shultz's own statements have cast doubt on the extent of his involvement.

The U.S.-Iranian dealings were not "government to government," the president insisted. But he did not explain how arms could be sold to the Iranian armed forces if the Iranian government was not a party to the agreement. Nor did he explain how shipping arms to one of the belligerents might help end the war between Iran and Iraq — one of his four stated goals.

At one point, in enumerating those goals, Reagan could remember only three of them. At another, he could not remember a toughly worded question that had just been put to him by Bill Plante of CBS News. Frequently he appeared confused and inarticulate, as the press corps bombarded him with some of the most specific and skeptical questions of his six years in office.

As expected, Reagan said no further arms shipments would go to Iran. Beyond that, however, he promised no steps at all to study or rectify what had gone wrong, or to make any necessary changes in his foreign-policy-making procedures.

This may have put up a bold front but it violated the sound political principle of cutting short a damaging controversy by taking some remedial action; and it immediately brought crushing criticism from Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia and former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

Nunn, the incoming chairman of the Armed Services Committee, spoke on the NBC News program with Lugar. He probably enhanced his emerging position as a national Democratic leader when he bluntly accused Reagan of "seven major contradictions" and urged him to call on a group of "wise men" for help in reshaping the administration's foreign policy and its policy-making machinery, including personnel.

On the same program, Kissinger, who is usually circumspect about criticizing a Republican administration, not only said it was "impossible" that the U.S. knew nothing of Israeli arms shipments to Iran; he also agreed with Nunn's call for "wise men" to straighten out the president's foreign policy. No doubt he'd be one of them, if Reagan himself is wise enough to take some good advice.

ART BUCHWALD

All Reagan wants is a sign of moderation!

I was walking through Lafayette Park when I noticed a turbaned, bearded man dressed in a mullah robe. He was frothing at the mouth, shaking his fist at the White House and shouting, "Reagan is an imperialist, mangy, flea-bitten running dog."

Art Buchwald

"Who are you?" I asked.

"I am a moderate Iranian."

"Of course you are," I said. "What brings you to the United States?"

The man whipped out an American flag and set it on fire.

"I'm here to open a dialogue with the Great Satan. Our countries cannot allow the extreme hatred we guard in our hearts to interfere with the disgust we hold for each other as people."

"We're always willing to talk," I said.

The man said, "First, what do you slimy American pigs have to offer?"

"I think the President was hoping that the Iranians would forget past misunderstandings between our two countries and begin meaningful talks that will change the course of history in the Middle East."

"If that is what he wants, where are the spare parts?"

"What spare parts?"

"The defensive arms we were promised so we can unleash rivers of blood against Iraq. The arms were promised to us by that thieving camel blanket dealer Robert McFarlane. I've been waiting for them all day long."

"If Bob promised the arms to you, you'll get them," I assured him. "Are you going to give us any hostages in exchange?"

He swung at me but I ducked. "Why should we give you hostages?" he shouted.

"That's our price for spare parts. The going rate is one plane, one hostage."

"We have no objection to giving you American hostages. We can always get more where they came from."

The Iranian started to hang an effigy of Ronald Reagan from a tree.

"I didn't know moderate Iranians were still hanging effigies of Ronald Reagan."

"Old Persian customs die hard. No matter what goes on between our countries Shiite tradition Demands we always hang the American President in Tehran Square."

After hanging the effigy the man then proceeded to throw rocks at limousines coming out of the White House. He shouted at them, "Long live terrorism! May you be bitten by the scorpion that lives in the Ayatollah's beard."

"I wish you wouldn't shout so loud," I said. "Don Regan and John Poindexter are sleeping."

"I spit on Regan and Poindexter," he said, flailing his arms. "And all the members of the National Security Council who tried to buy us off with chocolate cake. If I don't get my spare parts in a half-hour I will give orders to start rounding up the usual hostages."

"You'll louse up Reagan's entire foreign policy."

"This is what moderate Iranians think of Reagan's foreign policy."

The man turned his back to the White House, bent way over and lifted up his robe.

"Now you have ruined Mr. Reagan's day," I said.

"Why?"

"That is not exactly the moderate signal that the President was looking for."

Israel's Peres denies link with Contras

JERUSALEM (AP) — The Israeli government today defended shipping arms to Iran for the United States and denied Israel made a profit on the deal or channeled money to Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

Facing a barrage of criticism in Parliament, Foreign Minister Shimon Peres asked, "Did we do this out of greed?"

His voice rising, Peres told Parliament: "Did Israel make a single penny from this?...Israel was asked to help, and it did so willingly."

Peres, prime minister at the time of the shipments, denied Israel passed on money from the arms shipments to the U.S.-backed Contra rebels in Nicaragua. "That is absolute nonsense. The money never came through Israel," he said.

"I don't ask forgiveness for anything. We acted by the book," he said, shaking his fist. "Our aim was to seriously, honestly and innocently aid a country which has aided us...to help save human lives," an apparent reference to American hostages in Lebanon.

Peres said Israel had been asked to act in secret, and had complied.

But left-wing legislators criticized Israel for its secrecy. Elazar Granot of the Socialist Mapam Party told the government: "You must be accountable to Parliament. You did not even report to the Cabinet. Who gave you that right? Is this a democracy?"

"Israel again is mixed up in a dirty business. By selling arms to Iran we have harmed our best friends in Washington," said Yossi Sarid of the Citizens' Rights Movement.

Earlier today, Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir issued a statement that was the first government acknowledgment of Israeli involvement in the deal. It said the Iranians paid directly into a Swiss bank account for the weapons.

U.S. Attorney General Edwin Meese III on Tuesday in Washington claimed that $10 million to $30 million collected from Iran was taken by Israeli middlemen and transferred to bank accounts set up by the Contra rebels.

"Israel did not serve and would not have served as a channel for such a transaction," Shamir said.

Shamir's statement, released by his spokesman Avi Pazner, said Meese's announcement came as a surprise and that "if such a transaction took place, it had nothing to do with Israel."

Shamir issued the statement after meeting for three hours late Tuesday with Peres and with Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

Meese said the first U.S.-sanctioned arms shipment to Iran took place in 1985 without President Reagan's knowledge and was approved by the president only after the fact.

Reagan told journalists Tuesday in Washington that he was not told all the details of the Iranian arms deal. His national security adviser, Vice Adm. John Poindexter, resigned and a Poindexter aide, Lt. Col. Oliver North, was fired.

Israel radio said Shamir's adviser on terrorism, Amiram Nir, who has been identified in some accounts as a key figure in arranging the arms transfers, attended the late Tuesday meeting between Shamir and his top ministers.

Israel Army radio reported that Nir and former Foreign Ministry director David Kimche might be summoned to testify in the United States.

Israeli sources have told The Associated Press that Kimche was among the initiators of the arms deal idea, while Nir ran the operation with North.

Israel television said some U.S. officials appeared bent on creating the impression that Israel carried out the weapons deals in coordination with Poindexter and North behind Reagan's back.

Israeli sources told The Associated Press on condition of anonymity that David Kimche, former director-general of the foreign ministry, and Israeli arms merchant Yaakov Nimrodi were involved in the initial contacts between Washington and Tehran.

Crisis can't alter president's style

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
AP White House Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Even when confronted with the most serious crisis of his political career, President Reagan is not attacking the problem but letting his staff bring him information and propose solutions, as is his custom.

Never one to get bogged down in detail, Reagan has managed the presidency with detachment, making decisions from the options presented to him, delivering speeches when and where his aides suggest and generally playing the part of a strong leader, a role the American public found most attractive.

That leadership style, popular as it was, depended on a strong, competent staff capable of presenting problems to Reagan for his consideration and carrying out his policies with a minimum of guidance from the top.

The system broke down, it was revealed Tuesday, in the secrecy-shrouded operations of Reagan's National Security Council staff.

But as doubts and questions mushroomed regarding his apparently self-contradictory policy toward Iran and terrorism, Reagan remained a passive president.

In describing the most recent bizarre turn of events, Attorney General Edwin Meese, the president's longtime friend and adviser, revealed that Reagan had little to do with uncovering the skimming of Iranian weapons payments for Nicaraguan rebels.

The president himself, speaking from a prepared text, told reporters he had become concerned about the completeness of the information he had received regarding the Iranian arms shipments he previously had approved and "directed the attorney general to undertake a review of this matter over the weekend and report to me on Monday."

Asked what prompted Reagan to go to Meese and tell him to look into the matter, the attorney general said, "He didn't. I came to him."

"My suggestion to the president was that we get all the facts together to be sure that anyone testifying before Congress was being absolutely accurate, not only as to what they knew, but as to other facts, since they were representing the administration," Meese said. "The president suggested that that be done."

Meese also acknowledged that Reagan apparently did not know, at least until after the fact, that the Israelis shipped arms to Iran more than a year ago in a move that was condoned — if not specifically sanctioned — by the United States. Nor, he said, was the president aware for several months that a second shipment went from Israel to Iran only to be turned back by the Iranians.

But after he learned of the first shipment, Meese said, Reagan "agreed with the general concept of continuing our discussions with the Israelis concerning these matters."

Asked how it was possible that so much went on without Reagan's knowledge, the attorney general said, "Because somebody didn't tell him, that's why."

Nor, apparently, did the president ask.

Reagan's acknowledged reluctance to fire anyone also was evident, even after he announced his national security adviser had resigned and a key operative in the Iranian arms deal had been relieved of his duties.

Iran arms sales saga packed with mystery

By TERENCE HUNT

WASHINGTON (AP) — Like a good suspense novel, the saga of American arms sales to Iran, and now the transfer of money to rebels in Nicaragua, is packed with mystery, secrets being kept from the president, possible violations of the law and numbered Swiss bank accounts.

"Let me say that all of the information is not yet in. We are still continuing our inquiry," Attorney General Edwin Meese readily acknowledged Tuesday as he revealed the latest, bizarre twist in the secret U.S. initiative to Iran.

Meese disclosed that some of the money paid for U.S. arms by Iran — as much as $30 million — was deposited in numbered Swiss bank accounts for withdrawal by rebels trying to topple the leftist government of Nicaragua. The transactions occurred at a time when Congress had cut off money for the rebels, known as Contras.

Who knew about the caper?

Meese said Marine Lt. Col. Oliver North, a shadowy operative of the National Security Council who was a U.S. liaison with the Contras, was the only person in the government who "knew precisely about this."

His boss, Vice Adm. John Poindexter, the national security adviser to President Reagan, "did know that something of this nature was occurring but he did not look into it further," Meese said. "He did not know the details" and "he did not try to stop it," the attorney general said.

North was fired by Reagan. Poindexter resigned.

Poindexter did not notify the president or other members of the NSC about the Central American connection, Meese said, adding that Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger, Secretary of State George Shultz, CIA Director William Casey and Meese himself did not know.

Why didn't Poindexter at least tell Donald Regan, the president's chief of staff?

"I cannot explain it other than the fact that it happened," Meese said.

Robert McFarlane, who was Reagan's national security adviser until last December and a key player in the Iranian deal, learned last April or May that Iranian money was going to the Contras but did not disclose it to Reagan, Meese said.

Why?

"I don't know. He didn't," Meese said.

Was the transfer of money to Contras a crime, in view of the congressional prohibition against financing the rebels?

"We are presently looking into the legal aspects of it as to whether there's any criminality involved," Meese said. "We're also looking precisely at his (North's) involvement and what he did, and so the conclusions as to whether there's any criminal acts involved is still under inquiry by us."

Meese said that "as best we know" the money was deposited in Swiss accounts by "representatives of Israel" whom he did not identify.

He acknowledged that Israel acted as the intermediary between Iran and the United States on the sale of arms.

There were three or four shipments of arms to Iran during 1986, Meese said, adding that he could not provide specific dates. "The transfer of funds (to the Contras) were involved with at least one and possibly three of those shipments during the period of roughly January of 1986 or February through probably September of 1986."

He said "there was at least one transaction" in the late summer or early fall of 1985 in which Israel shipped weapons to Iran without authorization from the United States. Another shipment was made in November 1985 but was returned to Israel three months later, Meese said.

The summer-fall shipment, he said, was condoned after the fact by the United States.

Meese was unclear about how the Central American link was uncovered.

"In the course of a thorough review of a number of intercepts (a term frequently meaning wiretaps), and other materials, the hint of a possibility that there was some monies being made available for some other purpose came to our attention, and then we pursued that with the individuals," he said.

Later, he said it turned up in the course of an investigation of what was known about the Iranian connection.

"The first thing that triggered...an inquiry was the fact that as people prepared their testimony — because this had been done in a rather compartmentalized way — as people prepared their testimony for the Hill on Friday, there were certain things where facts — there appeared to be more facts out there than we had already put together," Meese said.

"And it was a matter, then, of the president requesting me to talk with everyone who had any participation at all, because one agency was doing one thing, another agency was doing another thing.

Ortega: Sending funds to Contras 'illegal'

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — President Daniel Ortega said the diversion of up to $30 million to Contra rebels from clandestine U.S.-Iranian arms sales was "totally illegal," and Nicaragua planned to file a formal protest.

Ortega, speaking Tuesday night after the diversion of funds was revealed at a White House press conference, also challenged President Reagan's claim that he had not been kept fully informed of the secret arms sales to Iran.

"He knew what was happening, so he is deceiving the North American Congress and is violating American and international laws," Ortega said before meeting with a group of European parliamentarians.

In Miami, however, a Contra leader denied the rebels had received money from U.S. arms sales to Iran to help finance their seven-year battle to overthrow the Sandinista government.

Ortega said it was "time to clear up this scandalous situation in which the president of the United States is involved."

He said Reagan was trying "to save face" by sacrificing his national security adviser, Vice Adm. John M. Poindexter, who resigned Tuesday, and Lt. Col. Oliver North, the council's deputy director for political-military affairs.

North also became the chief contact between the U.S. government and the Contras after Congress cut off CIA aid to the rebels in 1984, officials in Washington said.

Reagan said in Washington that he had not been kept fully informed of his aides' activities.

If Reagan didn't know of the transfer, Ortega said, "He cannot be president of the United States because how can someone be president of the United States who does not know that there they are carrying out totally illegal actions, negotiations in which they are moving funds for the mercenary forces that are carrying out an illegal war against Nicaragua?"

President's explanations burdened by contradictions

WASHINGTON (LAT) — In firing one of the lowest-ranking men involved in a spreading White House scandal, President Reagan has shown at least one of the reasons his administration was being pulled down by a secret foreign policy of his own making.

Each of the administration's attempts at public explanation of the controversial arms-for-hostages operation has been weighed down by almost immediate contradiction and an overall air of unbelievability.

Whether it was sorrow or anger was uncertain, but Reagan Tuesday clearly did not want to admit that he had just fired an aide for apparent wrongdoing.

Again, almost immediately, a small but significant detail of a presidential statement was contradicted. Attorney General Edwin Meese III made it clear that the ax was dropped on North after a Department of Justice grilling that turned up what the president termed "serious questions of propriety."

And, again, the overall statement of the president rested on an assertion that was difficult to believe.

Suddenly, it seemed that a 43-year-old junior officer with a reputation for ramrodding orders from the top was at the bottom of Reagan's crisis. "I was not fully informed," the president said. It may become his administration's motto in the coming month.

According to Meese, North, on his own and without the approval of higher-ups, arranged for between $10 million and $30 million in profits on secret U.S. arms sales to Iran to be funneled via Swiss banks accounts to the Contras, rebels waging the not-so-secret U.S. war against the Marxist government in Nicaragua.

Meese was uncertain whether North had violated a series of congressional bans or had broken no law at all.

In most cases, the men in the basement have been taking their orders from the man in the Oval Office. Freeing U.S. hostages held by Iranian-controlled terrorists and aiding the Contra "freedom fighters" are at the top of the presidential priority list.

In flying to Iran aboard a plane loaded with weapons last May, North was carrying out Reagan decisions opposed by Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Secretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger.

North is known as "Night Rider" to his Pentagon friends.

Shadowy colonel linked to controversial policies

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fired Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, a key official in the plan to finance anti-government rebels in Nicaragua with money from arms sales to Iran, has been linked to many of the Reagan administration's most controversial foreign policy decisions.

North, a staunch conservative trained in unconventional warfare operations, held the title of deputy director for political-military affairs on the National Security Council since 1981.

The NSC, dubbed the "National Security Cowboys" by some congressional critics, adopted an activist role during Reagan's tenure, with North figuring prominently in the equation.

"Colonel North was on the staff as the resident gun-runner," said Gary Sick, a NSC staffer in the Carter administration.

But others rallied to North's defense, describing him as an "American hero" who had served the president well.

"North would never have committed any violation of the law," said F. Andy Messing Jr., executive director of the conservative National Defense Council. "North's motto is God, family and country, and he is a strict adherent to constitutional processes."

Besides helping the Contras in their attempt to topple Nicaragua's Sandinista regime, North played a part in persuading President Reagan to send Marine "peace-keeping" forces to Lebanon, and in the U.S. invasion of Grenada, administration sources, declining to be named, have said in the past.

The Marines were withdrawn from Beirut in early 1984, a few months after 241 of them died in an terrorist attack.

North's boss at the NSC, Vice Adm. John Poindexter, resigned, even though Reagan said that he was not "directly involved."

Meese said it was his understanding that North intended to retire from the Marine Corps.

North was not available for comment, his office said.

North has long been a avid backer of the Contras, and those who knew him said his alleged role in setting up a secret funding mechanism probably stemmed from his devotion to their cause.

North was "energetic" and 'gung-ho," a workaholic whose commitment to the job was carried out at great sacrifice to his family, said a former colleague who asked that he remain anonymous. North regularly worked 17-hour and 18-hour days, he said.

North's prodigious work habits, his articulate views, his close relationship with former NSC Director Robert McFarlane and his ties to New Right conservatives combined to give him vast power, despite his innocuous-sounding title.

His 1983 biography described him as "responsible for for national level contingency planning, crisis management and counter-terrorism."

Mrs. Reagan: President took steps

OMAHA (NYT)— Nancy Reagan Tuesday briskly dismissed suggestions that the president had been badly damaged by the growing turmoil in his administration over the Iran arms affair.

"I don't know how you can be either embarrassed or damaged when you find something has not been done correctly late in the afternoon and you correct it the next day."

She said her husband did not find out about the secret bank account that was used to send money for the Nicaraguan rebels until "late yesterday afternoon" after the 2 p.m. staff meeting.

In a rare extemporaneous news conference, Mrs. Reagan talked candidly about the crisis in the White House, standing in front of her Air Force plane Tuesday afternoon, after giving a speech to a group of young people at Boys Town.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Temperature in 50s due

From Staff and Wire Reports

The Thanksgiving Day forecast given by the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport calls for partly cloudy skies and cool temperatures. The high should be in the middle 50s. A 20 percent chance of morning showers also is predicted.

Tonight's forecast also holds a 20 percent chance of showers and a low predicted to be the in the lower 30s. Winds will be out of the northeast at five to 15 mph, shifting to the north at five to 10 mph on Thursday.

Tuesday's high of 64 was 21 degrees below the record high set for that date in 1965. Today's low, 35 degrees, was 17 degrees above the record low set in 1938.

STATE

A weak cold front curved from Southeast Oklahoma into Texas early today.

The front pushed across North Central Texas and into the Concho Valley and Trans Pecos region. Much drier air had spread across the Panhandle and South Plains.

Otherwise, the frontal system was having very little effect on the weather across Texas. Meanwhile, the upper level storm system was still producing some wrap around cloudiness over North and East Texas as it continued to track off to the northeast.

Elsewhere, high level clouds were being observed over parts of extreme South Texas and the Rio Grande plains, while mostly clear skies covered the rest of the state.

Light south winds breezed across extreme South Texas and the coastal plains at speeds of 10 mph or less. North to northwest winds prevailed across the rest of the state at speeds generally in the 5 to 15 mph range.

However, north winds were gusting up to 20 and 30 mph in the guadalupe mountains and parts of north Texas. Temperatures overnight were in the 50s over parts of south Texas and the gulf coast, while the higher elavations in the big bend had readings in the 20s.

NATION

Widespread heavy rain set off high water alerts in four states today after thunderstorms spawned tornadoes in Alabama.

Showers and thunderstorms rumbled across the Florida Panhandle, eastern Alabama and western and northern Georgia.

Rain spread from the lower Great Lakes across the Ohio and Tennessee valleys into the southern Appalachians. Rainshowers also dotted the middle Mississippi Valley, southeast Kansas, eastern Oklahoma and Arkansas.

Council OK's bid, requests land annex

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

"We can come in and we'll be the low bidder. We can save you more money on a comparative bid."
— Terry Donathan, Permian Tractor Sales

The City Council Tuesday approved a sole bid of $36,600 received for a backhoe loader, after four dealers sent in no bids.

Two of the several road equipment dealers, who contend that total cost bids waste taxes, addressed the council Tuesday.

"We can come in and we'll be the low bidder. We can save you more money on a comparative bid," said Terry Donathan, sales representative with Permian Tractor Sales.

In other action, the council also asked the city staff to develop an ordinance to annex the land around the future northeast airpark site. And the council amended an ordinance requiring oil companies to obtain permits before they reopen wells in city neighborhoods.

Several area road equipment dealers have opposed the city's and county's acceptance of total cost bids — which guarantee five year warranties and trade-in prices.

The dealers say the extra money saved by taking the lowest bid could be better used. The differences between recent low bids and total cost bids have been between $14,000 and $16,000.

But city officials and council members said total cost bids are the best deal when the city is buying road equipment.

Mayor Carroll Thomas said the difference between accepting the lowest bid or the total cost bid is who takes the risks.

Total cost bids make the equipment dealers take the risk instead of the city by guaranteeing a trade-in price, Thomas said.

On total cost bids the city pays for only a certain amount of repairs and the city is guaranteed a resale price if they sell the equipment back within five years.

The city will buy the backhoe from West Texas Equipment, a Caterpillar dealer. The Abilene-based dealership has won the three total cost bids with the city and the one total cost bid with the county.

"Our reason for going this way is we feel like this is the cheapest cost to the taxpayers as a whole. We certainly don't want to eliminate any dealers," said Deputy City Manager Fred Poe.

In other action, the council corrected a loophole found in a city drilling ordinance.

The ordinance did not require a permit for operators re-entering abandoned oil and gas wells.

The loophole was closed to prevent any danger that exists to the public in the operation of oil and gas wells, City Attorney David Reagan said.

The loophole was found after an oil company asked to reopen a well, Reagan said.

The council also asked the city staff to prepare an ordinance to annex the 10-square-mile area of the future airpark site, northeast of Loop 250 and State Highway 349.

None of the six landowners in the area have opposed the annexation, except the Scharbauer family, who owns a 600 feet area west of State Highway 349 that is proposed for annexation.

The Scharbauer family is one of the original families to settle in Midland.

Councilman David Godfrey said instead of annexing the Scharbauer land, the city may allow the family to notify the council if they intend to sell the land.

The other landowners in the area have not voiced opposition to the annexation, but the Scharbauer family wants to keep their land for ranching, Godfrey said.

If the city annexed the land, the Scharbauers would face higher taxes on city annexed land than land used for agricultural purposes, he said.

Computer mapping system 'unaffordable'

From Staff Reports

Two council members voted Tuesday against the purchase of a $350,000 computer mapping system, they say shouldn't be bought until Midland's economy improves.

"As meritorious as this project is, we just can't afford it right now," said Councilman Kelly Fish.

David Godfrey agreed. "I'm concerned about dipping into the general fund surplus. With the tough times we are in, we should adhere as closely to the budget as we can," he said.

Of the about $350,000 needed to buy the computer, 50 percent would be drawn from the general fund. A remaining 40 percent would be taken from the water fund and 10 percent from the sanitation fund.

Public Works Director Fred Baker said the system is needed now to save money later.

The system would allow employees to make new additions on city maps by using a computer instead of having to redraw maps.

Water and sewer valves could also be located quickly by the system, Baker said.

The system would be used by public works, engineering, traffic, planning and the utility divisions.

However, the other council members said the system needs to be bought now, before the price of a city map goes up.

Instead of compiling its own map, Baker said the city has a chance to buy a computerized map Texas Electric has made of the city. The price of the map will go up as new subdivisions are added, he said.

MMH welcomes new finance VP, touts procedures

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Midland Memorial Hospital's new vice president in charge of finance — J.R. Kendrick Jr. — made his West Texas debut Tuesday at the hosptial's monthly Board of Trustees and Directors meetings.

Kendrick, who most recently worked for the Harris County Hospital District (Houston), said during the meetings that he counts among his plans a look into better identification of MMH bad debt and indigent cases that may instead be eligible for Medicaid benefits.

Kendrick said the MMH year-end fiscal reports are coming in and they "look good" and that emergency room collections (paid bills) have just about doubled.

The hospital also announced new services, one of which is a first to Midland.

To test the workings of the cardiopulmonary system, MMH has acquired a nuclear medicine "Gamma Camera" and facilities to conduct cardiac catheterizations as well.

The Gamma Camera is a device used in nuclear medicine. It involves injecting thallium (a radioactive element) into the body and then taking pictures with the nuclear camera. It will be used for studying the circulation in the wall of the heart, a hospital official said.

As opposed to the camera, the facilities for cardiac catheterization involve "invasive" procedures in that, a foreign object is introduced into the body.

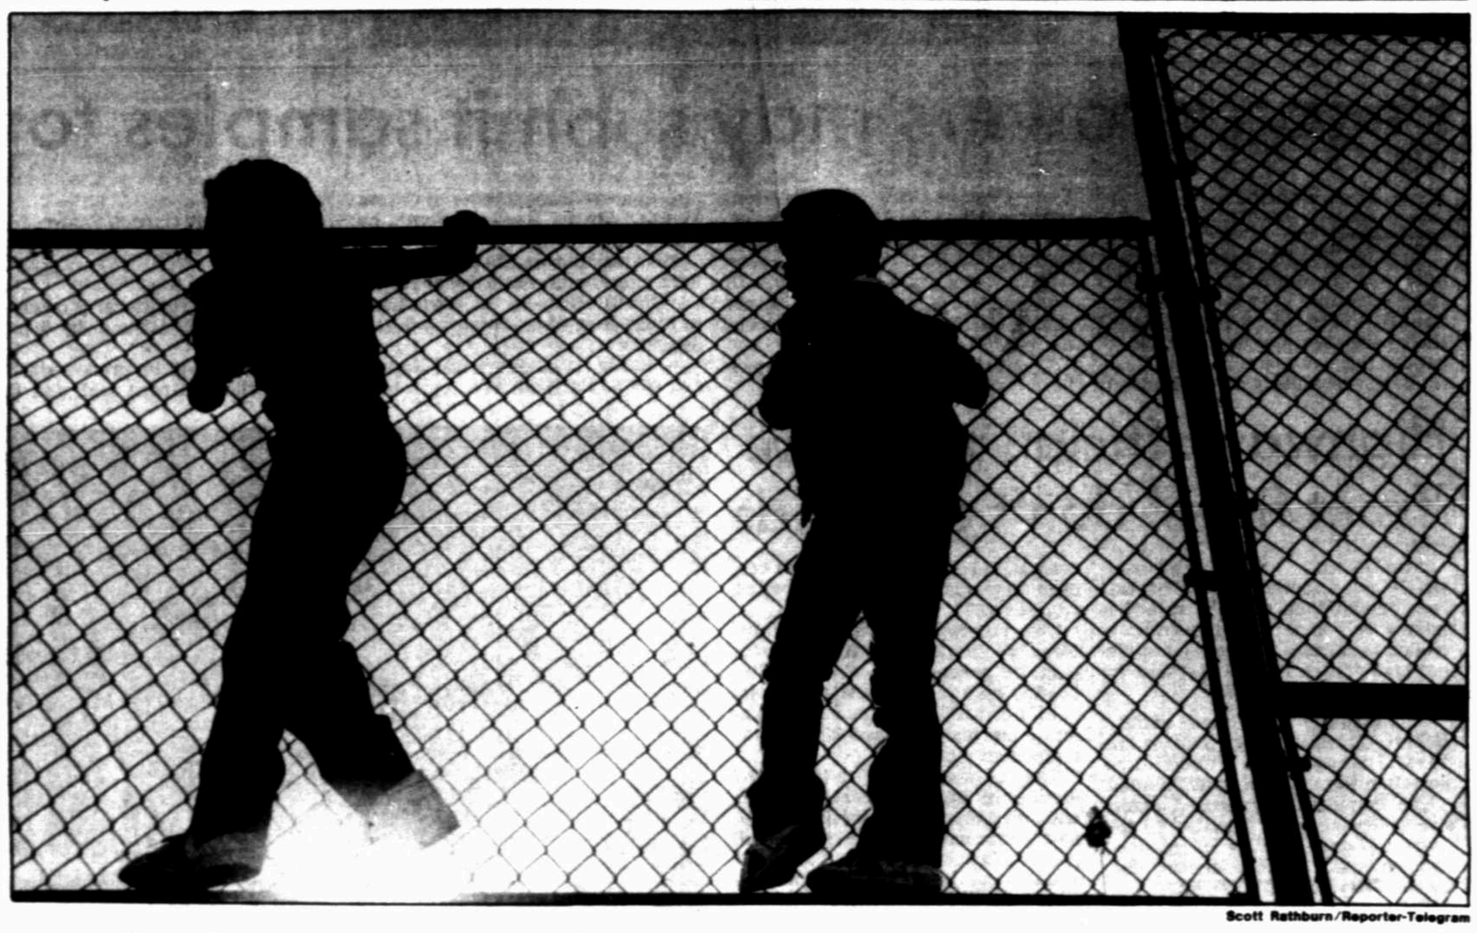

The catheterization involves injecting a long tube down into the heart through a large vessel in the arm or leg. The doctor watches its path on a screen and X-rays of the heart may be taken.

Bob Bregant, director of the Allison Cancer Center, said the American Cancer Society program "Guest Room" is now almost one year old and doing great business.

"Hotels provide lodging for out-patients who are receiving cancer treatment, and a family member, for up to six weeks at a time. The hotels involved are the Holiday Inn Country Villa, the Ramada Inn and the Texian Inn.

"It adds up to over 440 nights of lodging and $20,000 worth of services," Bregant said.

He said the whole point of the program is to alleviate the financial burden of patients who are already under physical and psychological burdens.

Report: $23,000 in goods stolen from house

From Staff Reports

The Midland County Sheriff's office is investigating the burglary of a house Tuesday which reports said was virtually emptied of merchandise valued at more than $23,000.

According to reports, the burglary occurred between 4 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at a residence on County Road 1133 North, south of County Road 60 East. The owner, Felix Quiroz Jr., told deputies that a garage door was broken into, and in the following three-and-a-half hour period, several television sets and videocassette recorders, a satellite television set system, several firearms, men's clothes, including suits, cowboy hats and boots, were stolen.

Also, Quiroz told investigators that jewelry, including rings, braceletes, gold chains and watches, were missing.

In other reports, Midland police are investigating a burglary that occurred Tuesday in the 1100 block of South L Street. According to reports, two television sets valued at $640 were stolen. The burglary occurred between 10 a.m. and 3:45 p.m., reports said.

Vandalous teens believed to be experienced

GARLAND (AP) — Investigators believe four teen-agers arrested in connection with a fire that caused $1.5 million in damage at Garland High School were involved in recent vandalism at other area schools.

Fire Department spokesman Lt. Ronnie Smith said all will be charged with burglary of a building.

Two suspects are 18, one is 16 and the other is 15, police said. One of the ju· eniles arrested was a student in the Garland school system and two others were graduates.

Smith said the same people also may have burglarized and vandalized Lakeview Centennial High School here just after the Garland High School incident over the weekend.

Authorities said burglars broke into the Garland school building, ransacked administrative offices and smashed trophy cases and damaged a teachers lounge before setting the building on fire.

School resumed on schedule Monday, despite the damage.

Tale of farmhouse slayings relived by man who was there

By SHERRY WEBB

STEPHENVILLE (AP) — Sixty-one years ago on Thursday, three members of an Erath County family were slain in a gruesome series of attacks at a farmhouse about eight miles southeast of here.

The horrifying memories still are vivid for a 79-year-old man who figures he may have helped thwart the killer.

F.W. Snow was convicted in the slayings and executed. Authorities said Snow first bludgeoned his wife, Maggie Poston Snow, to death with a two-by-four board and then went after his mother-in-law, Mrs. S.A. Olds, with an ax and nearly severed her head. After he killed both women, he cut up their bodies and burned portions of them in the family fireplace, authorities said.

Later that same day, Snow shot his stepson, Bernie Connally, in the back with a Winchester and then chopped off Connally's head. He dumped the head in an old cellar with the intention of coming back to get it some time later, authorities said.

Jesse Elvis Riggs, 79, of Erath County, says he believes he messed up Snow's plans.

Riggs stumbled on the severed head before the killer could retrieve it. The discovery unleashed one of the most sensational murder investigations in the area's history.

"I was 18 years old when all this happened," said Riggs. "I was in the 10th grade at Pony Creek School and I took off at dinner time to go set some traps out with Ben Aycock." Aycock ran a neighborhood store and sometimes bought furs from local trappers, Riggs said.

"Well, we went to what I now call the 'old place.' It was my grandfather's cabin..." Riggs said.

"I crawled down in the cellar of that old house to set some traps. That's when I saw this old tow sack...it was real bloody...and it was sort of hanging in mid-air.

"I started yelling at Ben to come take a look at this bloody sack and he said he would when he got through setting his traps outside."

The top of the sack was anchored by two logs on the topside of the cellar and the rest of the bag was pushed down through the cellar so that it "just sort of hung there," Riggs said.

"Well, when Ben got through with his traps he began to pull and tug on that sack. I was still in the cellar when he finally started pulling it through the hole in the top of the cellar towards the outside. It went right by my face and that's when I realized it was an EAR that was showing through a big hole in the sack.

"I began to holler, 'It's somebody's head! It's somebody's head!' " said Riggs.

"Well, I don't think ol' Ben believed me at first. But when we opened that sack, sure enough I was right and that head was staring straight at me.

"I began screaming, 'I know who it is!' Then I said, even louder, 'It's Herman Starnes!' "

Riggs said he and Aycock ran for their car to go get help. "But then we turned around and went back for one more look just to make sure about what we'd seen. When I looked a second time at that head, I realized it wasn't Herman Starnes." Riggs added. "But, I've been kiddin' Herman about it ever since."

But it wasn't a joke at the time. Riggs recalls, "I was so scared myself that every time I closed my eyes I'd see that head with those eyes staring straight out at me. I finally made a pallet on the floor of my mother and father's bedroom so I could sleep."

Snow was arrested by Sheriff D.M. Hassler and Ranger Stewart Stanley as he attempted to escape by driving south to Hico.

"They'd been watching Snow for a few days and knew that he always carried that Winchester. When the cow that he was toting behind his wagon got loose, he jumped down from the wagon to catch it and that's when the law moved in on him. Snow didn't grab his gun when he jumped from the wagon," said Riggs.

Starnes, who owns and operates the Old Place Antique Shop in Stephenville, says he remembers the Snow case very well. "It was really something. Why, people came from all around for that trial. Folks were standing knee-deep to try to get a glimpse of the courtroom."

"Yeah, I was the star witness in the case," Riggs said.

"I was the first one called to the stand and after that, they wouldn't even let me stay in the courtroom for the rest of the trial. It lasted nine days."

Riggs said several accounts have been written of the case. "Some of them...I wouldn't even read because they were so far from the truth," he said.

"Most of the stories mention Ben as the first one to find the head, but he wasn't," Riggs said.

"A lot of the stories kept mentioning that the dog was with us, like it was a hero," Riggs added, laughing. "Why, that ol' dog was a bulldog, not a hound dog like one story said, and he didn't discover anything. He wasn't even around me when I found the head."

"Oh, I guess it doesn't really matter now," Riggs said, "but things sure have a funny way of getting all mixed up."

Congress criticized on meetings regarding border's 'twin plants'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Jim Kolbe on Tuesday criticized Congress for stopping the U.S. Commerce Department from participating next month in meetings regarding so-called "twin plants" along the U.S.-Mexico border, which Kolbe said save U.S. jobs.

"I understand the anxiety many members (of Congress) feel about the twin plants," Kolbe, R-Ariz., said in remarks prepared for a House subcommittee hearing on the maquiladora plants. The meetings on the twin plants were to be on Dec. 5 in Acapulco, Mexico.

"However, there has not been adequate discussion of the pros and cons of this issue to warrant such an effort to hobble a successful and productive program," Kolbe said. A 1987 spending bill keeps the Commerce Department from participating in the meeting in Mexico.

Kolbe said the maquiladora system helps plants in U.S. border towns, such as El Paso, Texas, where Kolbe said 20,000 "direct and indirect jobs" are spinoffs of the plants, in which Mexican workers assemble U.S.-built components.

"The maquiladora system saves American jobs," Kolbe said. "American companies have the choice of utilizing Mexican labor to assemble U.S.-built components, or they can manufacture components and assemble them in the Far East, or they can lose their shirt to more effective competitors."

Cisneros named 'Mr. South Texas'

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Henry Cisneros, mayor of San Antonio, has been named "Mr. South Texas" by Laredo officials planning the border city's annual Washington Day celebration.

The celebration is the only one in the country and activities have expanded from past celebrations, Hank Sames, chairman of the Mr. South Texas committee, said Tuesday.

The Washington Day Celebration will record its 90th year when festivities begin on Feb. 14, 1987. Cisneros will be the guest of honor at a luncheon on Feb. 21.

Washington Day officials began honoring distinguished leaders in South Texas in 1952.

"We try to select someone who has done something good or has the potential for doing something good for South Texas," Sames said. "We just don't look in Laredo area. We look in the whole South Texas area.

"Henry obviously meets all those qualifications. He's concerned about not just San Antonio, but the whole region," Sames said. "He has great ideas and he has a lot of momentum in getting things accomplished."

Cisneros said Laredo as an overland port is important to the commerce of the United States and Mexico.

"I am committed to San Antonio's relationship to South Texas, Laredo in particular," Cisneros said.

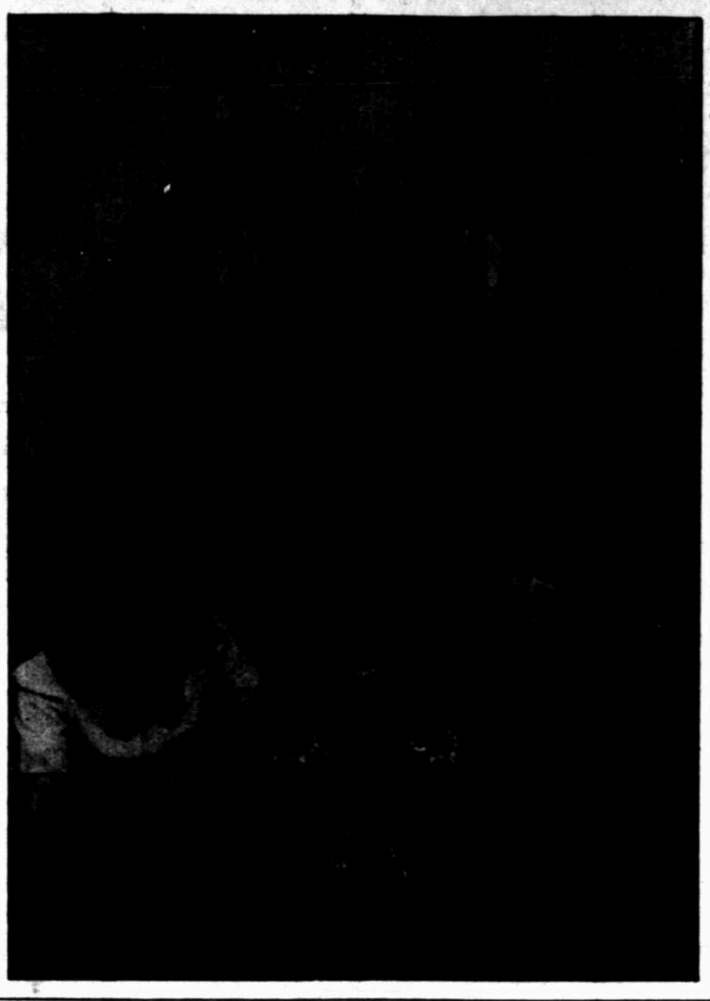

"Any discussion of international trade must involve Laredo of necessity," he said, adding that San Antonio is supporting international trade.

He said San Antonio would play a role in questions dealing with immigration, border development and international trade.

"San Antonio plays a role as a hub city throughout the region. ...No mayor of San Antonio could ever address the real relationship of San Antonio to the land around us without being attentive to South Texas and the border," Cisneros told a news conference.

"I regard it as part of my job. I regard it as an intricate part of how I can advance our own city to relate to the whole of South Texas," he said.

The festivities next year include bicycle races, a fireworks display, an international bridge celebration and a colonial pageant and ball.

Pecan growers may submit samples to one of six locations

From Staff Reports

Midland County pecan growers, who wish to enter prime samples from their 1986 crop in the Midland County Pecan Show, may submit their pecan samples to one of six locations this week, according to Charlie Green, president of the Midland County Pecan Growers Association.

The show will be held Monday and Tuesday in Dellwood Mall at Illinois Avenue and Midkiff Road.

Pecan fanciers are to enter 40 pecans in each variety they plan to enter in the show.

Growers may take their samples to:

— Charles Green, corner of Cotton Flat and County Road 125 South, by 5 p.m. Saturday.

— Village Barber Shop, No. 2 Meta Drive, by 5 p.m. Saturday.

— Frank Mills, No. 26 Perrie Lane in Ridge Heights Addition, by 5 p.m. Saturday.

— Black Hawk Electrical Supply Co., 905 S. Garfield Ave., by 5 p.m. Wednesday.

— Casa Verde Garden Center, 2615 N. Midland Drive, by 5 p.m. Wednesday.

— Texas Agricultural Extension Service, east of Midland, by 5 p.m. Wednesday.

The pecans will be processed Sunday afternoon, Green said, and the show officially opens at 10 a.m. Monday when judging begins.

Judges will be Dr. Austin Stockton, TAEX horticulturist from Fort Stockton; Dr. Sammy Helmers, TAEX horticulturist from El Paso, and Dr. Charles Neeb, TAEX District VI director from Fort Stockton.

The pecan food show will be held in Dellwood Mall Monday and Tuesday.

Green expects more than 100 pecan entries in the show.

He said that each of the 40 pecans in each variety should be unblemished and solid. Growers, he said, should be careful not to mix varieties.

Highway officials to ensure 'front firms' don't get funds

AUSTIN (AP) — State highway officials have endorsed a series of staff recommendations to make sure that money set aside for minority-controlled businesses does not go to illegitimate "front firms" operated by white contractors.

"I absolutely hate these shams," Robert C. Lanier, chairman of the Texas Highways and Public transportation Commission, said Tuesday.

The commission proposed extensive policy changes Tuesday to improve the state's review of minority applicants and to help identify phony minority-owned companies.

The focus on a new contractor policy follows a report earlier this month by The Dallas Morning News that almost one in four firms that received highway department contracts under the minority aid program since 1983 were questionable or ineligible under federal guidelines.

Bobbie Templeton, the state's construction engineer, said the state may ask Attorney General Jim Mattox's office to review some of the disqualified firms to determine if fraud charges can be filed.

In many instances, the News reported, state-certified minority subcontracting firms actually were created and run by a white-owned company.

The program, which is administered by the state, requires that a certain percentage of federally-funded highway projects go to companies controlled by blacks, Hispanics, American Indians and other minorities.

The newspaper said of the $364 million in highway contracts that went to minority businesses in the past three years, more than $105 million was awarded to firms deemed suspect or decertified by federal, state and local authorities.

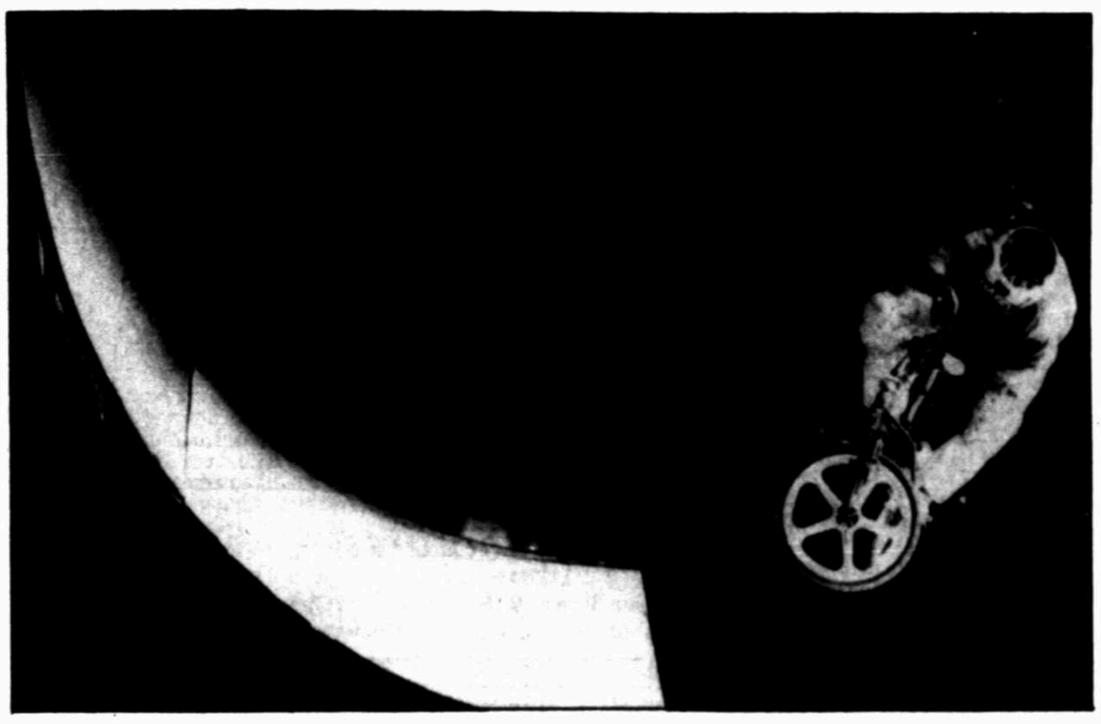

Policies proposed by the highway department staff, and endorsed by the commission, would impose rules in Texas similar to those followed by most other states in the Southwest.

Among the changes:

— companies seeking certification will be required to provide records and other documents establishing the firm as an independent minority enterprise;

— unannounced visits will be made to the companies;

— companies with the same address as a non-minority business will be denied certification under the program.

PUC approves refunds for TESCO residential customers

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Public Utility Commission late Tuesday approved a settlement that will give Texas Electric Service Co. residential customers an average $10 credit on their December electric bills.

The settlement on $58.4 million in fuel cost overcollections stipulates that the refunds will come on the next billing cycle after the commission's approval.

Texas Utilities Electric Co., TESCO's parent company, asked the PUC last month to approve the refunds for overcollections on fuel costs. The residential share of the refund is $21.1 million.

The price of fuel, mostly natural gas, has declined steadily all year. This most recent refund brings the total of TUEC overcharges this year to $263 million.

The settlement was reached between TUEC and the Office of Public Utility Counsel, which represents consumers and small businesses at the commission. TUEC officials originally had wanted the refunds distributed on customers' January bills.

Dollar slides

LONDON (AP) — The dollar declined against most major currencies in early European trading today. Gold prices were little changed at about $384 an ounce.

In Frankfurt, currency dealers said the market was still evaluating the significance of Tuesday's 6 percent drop in U.S. durable goods orders, but predicted the dollar might rise later.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar fell 1.40 to a closing 162.50 yen from Tuesday's 163.90. Later, in London, it was quoted at 162.45 yen.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Tuesday:

Dow rally sputters

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices moved higher Tuesday, as a four-day rally sputtered, but kept going.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 6.05 points to 1,912.12, its highest close since it stood at a record 1,919.71 on Sept. 4. In the last five sessions, the average has gained 85.49 points.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange totaled 154.57 million shares, compared with 150.82 million shares Monday.

Despite the higher Dow index, the balance of winners-to-losers on the New York Stock Exchange — which tilted in the losing direction frequently during the day — ended up about even, with advancers outpacing decliners by roughly 8-to-7.

The market had been ripe for a setback, since the Dow Jones industrial average had risen 79.44 points over the previous four sessions, breaking through the 1,900 barrier for the first time since the Sept. 4th record close.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 184.01 million shares.

Eastern merges with Texas Air

NEW YORK (AP) — Eastern Airlines is officially a subsidiary of Texas Air Corp. today following approval of the $676 million purchase from a majority of the troubled carrier's shareholders.

"It's a done deal," Eastern spokesman Jerry Cosley said after the company announced that 70 percent of the shares voted during a special meeting Tuesday were cast in favor of the acquisition, which was fought bitterly by employees who said they had the financial resources to make a superior bid.

Approval of Texas Air's offer had been a near certainty because the Houston-based airline company owned at least 51 percent of Miami-based Eastern's stock.

John Fallon, chairman of the executive committee of Eastern's board, announced the approval as he abruptly adjourned the meeting in New York because of screaming matches with union leader Charles Bryan and his supporters.

"We went to an emergency procedure. The meeting is over," Fallon told reporters before he and Richard Magurno, vice president for legal affairs, left the meeting that lasted about 90 minutes.

Standing in the audience, Bryan was repeatedly cut off during the session by Fallon and Magurno as he tried to explain his version of Eastern's troubled history to shareholders, charging management with inefficiency, insincerity and conspiracy to foil any threat to the acquisition by Texas Air.

"Let the man talk!" some stockholders shouted. Others clapped in unison to support Bryan, who yelled, "You can turn up your mike as loud as you want but I'm not going to sit down!"

Texas Air bid $6.25 in cash and $3.75 in securities for each share of Eastern stock. Eastern employees, who own more than 20 percent of the airline's stock under a wage investment program, said they could assemble financing for an $11.25-a-share cash acquisition.

Eastern Airlines stockholder Lewis Gilbert, right, tries to interrupt Charles Bryan, president of the Machinist union representing Eastern employees during a special shareholders meeting.

Dozens of Eastern shareholders, many of them employees, shouted obscenities at the fleeing executives, while others expressed confusion and disgust at what they perceived to be an unfair deal in which they were the victims.

A coalition of employees had sued to block the special meeting, but U.S. District Judge James L. King ruled against them Monday in Miami, saying a delay in the Texas Air merger could irreparably damage Eastern.

Shareholder approval was the last hurdle in the deal, negotiated last February when Eastern verged on financial collapse. The federal Transportation Department approved it in September, and Texas Air chairman Frank Lorenzo became Eastern's new chairman last month.

Combined with its Continental, New York Air and People Express subsidiaries, Texas Air eclipses Chicago-based United Airlines as the country's biggest airline operator.

Incorporated in 1938, Eastern grew to become one of the nation's largest airlines, serving 80 domestic markets and more than 12 countries with 40,000 employees and a fleet of 290 planes.

Automakers report improved sales

New York Times News Service

DETROIT — Sales of new American-made automobiles rose by 6.4 percent in the Nov. 11-20 period from the corresponding period last year, the major manufacturers reported Tuesday.

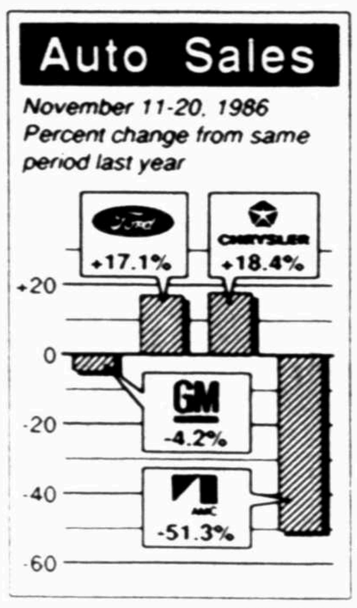

Cars sold at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 6.7 million units in the period, which had nine selling days this year and in 1985. The rate was up from 6.5 million early in November but down from 7 million for all of October.

Light-truck sales, still recovering from late-summer incentive programs, slipped 8.3 percent, bringing total sales of cars and light trucks to 288,317 units, up 1.2 percent from the period last year.

Despite the increasing car sales, most of the manufacturers have resumed sales incentives, primarily on compact or subcompact cars. The General Motors Corp. and the American Motors Corp. announced new programs Tuesday, following the lead of the Chrysler Corp., which started the latest round of low-rate financing and cash rebates last Friday. The Ford Motor Co. followed suit on that day.

Since the last round of incentives, which ended in early October, sales have generally been flat, but no poorer than analysts had expected.

"I think this highlights what we've been saying all along," said Jack V. Kirnan, an auto analyst with Kidder, Peabody & Co. "Inventories continue to build at all the Big Three companies and particularly at General Motors. G.M. has made some modest production cuts, but I think we're going to see more aggressive financing campaigns as well as more production cuts in the future."

AP Lasergraphic

Susan G. Jacobs, an automotive consultant with Merrill Lynch Economics, agreed. "If G.M. does increase their incentive programs, I would expect the company to cut back production, as well to control the rising inventories from both ends."

Jacobs said she also believed that sales would pick up in December as consumers took advantage of the sales tax deduction that will be eliminated under the tax revision program.

In mid-November, G.M.'s car sales were down 4.2 percent, to 98,306 units, from the period last year, and light-truck sales of 36,453 were down 19.2 percent.

Ford's car sales rose 17.1 percent on deliveries of 55,331 vehicles, but light-truck sales fell 19.2 percent, to 31,373 units.

At Chrysler, car sales rose 18.4 percent, to 27,569 vehicles, and sales of light trucks jumped 44.5 percent on sales of 17,983 units.

American Motors estimated a 51.3 percent drop in car sales, to 1,120, and Jeep sales of 4,300 were off 10.4 percent.

Volkswagen of America Inc. said sales slumped by 29.5 percent, to 1,625 vehicles, while the American Honda Motor Co. reported sales of 8,579 units, double the number in the 1985 period.

More taxes, Sims tells PBPA

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

Texas can look forward to another increase in taxes when the state legislature meets in 1987, said State Senator Bill Sims, in a briefing to members of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association Executive Committee Tuesday.

The San Angelo senator from the 25th district said he hoped governor-elect Bill Clements would have a plan they could implement, but it would be hard to make deeper cuts in state programs. "The system we have now was started 100 years ago and has grown little by little ever since," said Sims. "A lot of people depend on the state whether we like it or not." Sims said he would like to see a flat budget, with no increases.

He said he was not in favor of cutting funds for Mental Health and Mental Retardation and putting patients into private institutions or on the street, but he was in favor of not using state funds to pit Texas University and Texas A&M against Harvard and Yale.

Warning that he had never seen a university yet that couldn't be cut, he hinted that research might not be an area to cut. "Research is going to play an important role in future of Texas," said Sims. He spoke highly of "star wars" research being conducted at Texas A&M's Balcones Fault research facility. "They have a rail gun there that can fire a plastic bullet through 40 inches of solid steel," he said.

Other major issues Sims expects the legislature to address are tort reform to bring insurance costs in line and jurisdiction of Texas ground water.

The Concho County rancher said he was opposed to proposals that would give the state jurisdiction over all ground water in Texas. "That is taking away a basic property right," he offered.

In other business, the PBPA voted to request a public hearing from the Texas Railroad Commission on rules that would permit the continued operation of "shadow pipelines" while removing priority status from casing head gas. It also announced the availability of operator liability insurance for PBPA members and voted 12 to four to reword its resolution in support of an import fee. PBPA, in July 1985, was one of the first oil and gas groups to support an oil import fee.

Midland plays host to Irish crystal makers

By DEANNA J. NEAL
Business/Oil Writer

Mercedes Benz and Rolls Royce are the cream of the crop when talking automobiles. It's Godiva when you're buying chocolate. And, when talking crystal, one name springs to mind as top of the line in quality and craftsmanship — Waterford.

Two master crystal makers brought the Irish craft and its intricacies to Midland this week. Appearing at a crystal exhibition and signing at Driscoll's Gifts, Inc., Eddie Doyle and Noel Jacob talked about the delicacy of their profession and the durability of the company they work for.

Tracing the origin of Waterford crystal shows a history rich with tradition. Consider: Westminster Abbey commemorated its 900th anniversary with installation of 16 Waterford crystal chandeliers; a Waterford crystal bowl was presented to President John F. Kennedy during his much heralded trip to Ireland; and, a Waterford trophy was presented to a Nobel laureate who pioneered work in immunology.

While the ancient art form began more than two centuries ago in Waterford, Ireland, archeological finds indicate it was prevalent as early as the 6th century A.D. Experts say the ornamental use of cut glass became popular in Ireland because there are no precious stones there.

On their first trip to the United States, Doyle and Jacob have made stops in Atlanta, Austin, Corpus Christi and Midland, and are on their way to Los Angeles.

Both agree that a visit to the states, which accounts for 70 percent of the crystal-maker's market, has been good for the company. "We have been well-received and accomplished everything we intended to on this tour," says Jacob.

Jacob, a master cutter, has been employed at the Waterford factory for 29 years, following a family heritage that includes a father and five brothers also involved in crystal making.

Jacob says the intricate cuts are done in a two-step process. "The first cut is made by a Carborundum wheel, many of which are manufactured in the United States. This rough wheel cuts the initial pattern on the blank crystal.

"A second step is the more delicate cuts made by a fine sandstone wheel. The finished crystal is then dipped in an acid polish to bring out the lead in the glass."

"All of the patterns are in the head — the design is cut strictly from memory. A large piece could take days to cut."

The master cutter says the company is proud of the fact that the 33 percent lead content in its crystal is the highest of any crystal which is hand worked. He says the company can't keep up with the orders it has, and expects that to become more of a problem as marketing inroads are made into the European continent, Japan and Australia.

He adds that the recent acquisition of the Wedgwood China Co. in England is anticipated to boost sales even higher.

He says the only major modernization of the craft is that the batches are mixed by computer now, and electricity drives the wheels that cut the glass. "It is an art form that has remained virtually unchanged by the advances of time and technology."

Like cutting, he says the art of blowing has remained unchanged since its first mention in 30 B.C.

"It is an art that requires the finest judgment, a steady hand and a keen eye. You cannot get too much or too little glass or you ruin the piece and end up starting over," explains Doyle.

He is proud of the fact that the Waterford plant is the biggest operation of its kind in the world and the only fully hand-made crystal.

Blowing requires the use of implements made of the wood from pear trees. Glass heated to 2500 degrees Celsius and then cooled to 1250 C is worked and rotated on the implements to achieve the proper size and thickness.

He says the fact that he has been involved in the craft for 24 years and still considers himself to be in the learning process attests to its difficulty and intricacy.

"You just have one chance to do the job. You can't reheat it and start over if you mess up. A blower has approximately ten seconds to shape the stem of a glass before it cools too much to be workable. It is a difficult medium to work."

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

EE bonds at 6 percent still good present rate

By BILL DOYLE

Q. We started buying $50 Series EE, U.S. Savings Bonds, for our young grandchildren last summer, when the interest rate was 7.5 percent. Now that the interest rate on new bonds is only 6 percent, would you advise us to forget about "bonds for the babies" and, instead, open bank savings accounts for them?

Doyle

A. No, for the simple reason that 6 percent is a good rate at the present time. It's more than the same money would earn in savings accounts at banks and savings and loan associations.

EE bonds issued since Nov. 1 have 12-year maturities. They accumulate interest at that guaranteed 6 percent rate when held for five years or longer. And, if interest rates in general go up, they will earn a higher variable rate, based on 85 percent of the average yield on marketable U.S. Treasury securities with five-year maturities.

However, if those EE bonds are redeemed before they are five years old, they will earn less than the guaranteed rate. Since you are buying them for the "wee wanes," it's unlikely the bonds will be cashed early.

EE bonds were not particularly good investments before the "market-based" rate tie-in went into effect in November 1982. Since then, they have turned out to be good investments. Buy them now and you know they will earn no less than 6 percent — and might earn more.

• • •

Q. Which kind of U.S. Savings Bond is the best to buy for children? Does it make any difference which bank or savings and loan association we make the purchase?

A. There's only one kind you now can "buy" — Series EE bonds.

The only other Savings Bond currently being issued is the Series HH bond. HHs cannot be purchased. They are available only in exchange for Series EE and E bonds and U.S. Savings Notes.

It makes absolutely no difference where you buy. All banks, S&Ls, credit unions and other Savings Bond agents sell exactly the same EE bonds.

• • •

Q. When a Savings Bond is purchased as a gift for a child, whose Social Security number should be put on the bond?

A. If the child has a SS number and you know the number, that number should be used.

If the child does not have a SS number or has a SS number and you don't know it, use your SS number and make sure the word "Gift" is inscribed on the bond. There's a special section in the Savings Bond purchase application form for this.

When the second method is used, the child will be required to provide his or her SS number at some later date when the bond is redeemed. The federal income tax liability on the bond interest is the child's.

• • •

Q. I know I could exchange my Series EE bonds for Series HH bonds and start receiving HH bond interest by check every six months. Since I don't need that income, isn't it advisable to keep my EEs until they mature?

A. Most advisable! EE bonds purchased before Nov. 1 are accumulating interest at anywhere from 7.5 to 9 percent — depending on exactly when they were issued.

If you exchange those EEs for HHs, you'll get only 6 percent annual interest. That's an almost overlooked wrinkle in the latest Savings Bond interest rate change.

HHs issued since Nov. 1 receive 6 percent interest. Older H bonds entering an "extended maturity" since that date also have their interest cut to 6 percent.

Q. A friend who has retired to Italy has some U.S. Savings Bonds she wants to cash. Can this be done, without making a trip to this country?

A. Sure. Savings Bonds can be redeemed through the U.S. Embassy or Consulate or a foreign office of a U.S. bank.

But tell your friend to hold off cashing her bonds until Nov. 1, 1987, at the earliest, so that her bonds become eligible for the higher market-based interest rate.

Otter stages daring breakout

SEATTLE (AP) — Clam Chops is back in the glass house after staging a daring breakout.

The 3-year-old otter apparently used his paws to pick up a large rock from the bottom of his tank at the Seattle Aquarium and smashed it against an observation window, just above the water, spokesman Fred Lighter said Monday.

Clam Chops had minor cuts on his paws the morning after last week's window-bashing, so aquarium workers figure he must have climbed through the opening and had a taste of freedom before jumping back into the tank.

Now, staff members are trying to figure out how to keep Clam Chops in the tank, Lighter said.

Hobbs' Jamie Mitchell passes off while Midland Lee's Anissa Pyatt defends.

Lee girls exhaust Hobbs

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

It isn't often that Herb McDaniel finds his Hobbs Eagles outrun on the basketball floor.

McDaniel had his Eagles run into the floor as the Midland Lee girls posted a 73-53 win over Hobbs, N.M., Tuesday night, running its pre-district record to a neat 6-0.

"I'm not used to going out on the floor and not being the quickest team on the floor," said McDaniel. "Tonight, we were not the quickest team on the court. We were outquicked. I don't think my kids were quite used to it."

The Lady Rebels are getting used to outquicking their opponents, and putting them away early with fierce defensive pressure. For the second time in two nights, Lee jumped out to a big lead in the opening minutes and just stretched it out all night.

Lee broke on top 10-1 lead, but that lead was cut to just five points at the end of the first quarter. From there it was all the "running Rebels" as Hobbs was outscored 24-9 in the second period.

Lee led by as many as 26 and never less than 12 as the Rebels' full-court press gave the Eagles fits.

"I didn't think we would have so much trouble breaking their press because that's what we work on in practice," said McDaniel, whose team is in the midst of an eight-game stretch against Texas teams. "But pressure like that makes you panic a little bit, set up wrong and throw the ball away."

Lee placed four players in double figures, led by Regina Calicutt's 16 points. Calicutt, the senior point guard, poured in seven of 10 field goal attempts while directing the Rebel running game.

"Monday we played a terrible game and we really thought tonight would be tough," Calicutt said. "I told them 'Hey, we've got to get it together tonight.' We did a few bad things tonight, but we'll make up for them."

Calicutt and the rest of the Rebels didn't do too many things wrong against Hobbs, and that leaves coach Shirley Stephenson searching her club for its weaknesses.

Chaps seek 8th victory

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — By the time the Midland College Chaparrals return to their home court, they'll have been absent for almost a month. But before they appear at home Dec. 1, there's the Thanksgiving Tournament here at Odessa College Thursday through Saturday.

The Chaps open the tournament with a game against the Angelo State University JV at 6 p.m. Odessa College plays TSTI-Waco in the 8 p.m. game with Western Texas and South Plains both getting byes.

If Midland gets by the Angelo JV, it would meet South Plains Friday at 6 p.m. The third place game is set for 6 p.m. Saturday with the championship at 8 p.m.

"We've heard that TSTI is pretty strong this year and Odessa has been playing well since the Chap Classic," MC coach Jerry Stone noted.

The Chaps have a 7-0 record with the championship of both the Chaparral Classic and the Blue Dragon Classic in Hutchinson, Kansas, last weekend.

"We're ready to get back to Chaparral Center and to start conference play," Stone said.

Clarendon College comes in at 7:30 p.m. Monday for the opening of the Western Junior College Ahletic Conference schedule. That's the first of four conference games that close out the fall competition. On Dec. 4, the Chaps go to Roswell, N.M., for the annual contest with New Mexico Military Institute and its rabid Corps of Cadets. It's back to Odessa Monday, Dec. 8, for a conference tilt with the Wranglers.

The fall campaign ends back at Chaparral Center as MC hosts New Mexico Junior College Dec. 11. All the Chaparral conference games are carried live on KCRS Radio, 550 AM.

"Odessa lost two at the Chap Classic, but hasn't lost since; New Mexico Junior College was undefeated the last we heard; Western Texas is scoring lots of points and winning big; Howard College is getting tougher; and we still expect South Plains to be one of the top contenders." Stone pointed out. "It looks like it could be a race to the end this year and we know everyone is going to try to knock off Midland."

That's understandable as the Chaps won 33 games last year before losing to the eventual national champion, San Jacinto. It was the first time MC had gone undefeated in the regular season and conference play.

As expected, sophomore guards Mookie Blaylock, Lincoln Minor and Todd Duncan are leading the way and are the only Chaps to drop a three-point shot. Duncan has 17 of them, Blaylock 14, and Minor 2.

But freshmen Billy Ray Smith, Alex Stanwood, and Herman "Skeeter" Henry are providing good help inside, both in scoring and rebounding.

SURPRISE! Santa Fe, Taos open for skiing

Associated Press

A storm that left up to 2 feet of snow in parts of northern New Mexico will give the Taos and Santa Fe ski areas a top-notch opening, resort officials say.

Santa Fe Ski Area received 20 inches of new snow and will have natural ski conditions as good as any of the resorts in the Rockies when it opens Thanksgiving Day, according to the resort.

Taos Ski Valley, which opens Wednesday, received 14 inches of new snow, while Southern Colorado ski areas received none, a Purgatory (Colo.) ski area spokesman said.

On Monday, Santa Fe reported 45 inches of snow at midway; Taos reported 44 inches; Purgatory, near Durango; reported 43 inches; and Wolf Creek, near Pagosa Springs, Colo., reported 74 inches.

The Colorado areas already are open.

Santa Fe plans to open 80 percent of its slopes and Taos plans to open 55 percent.

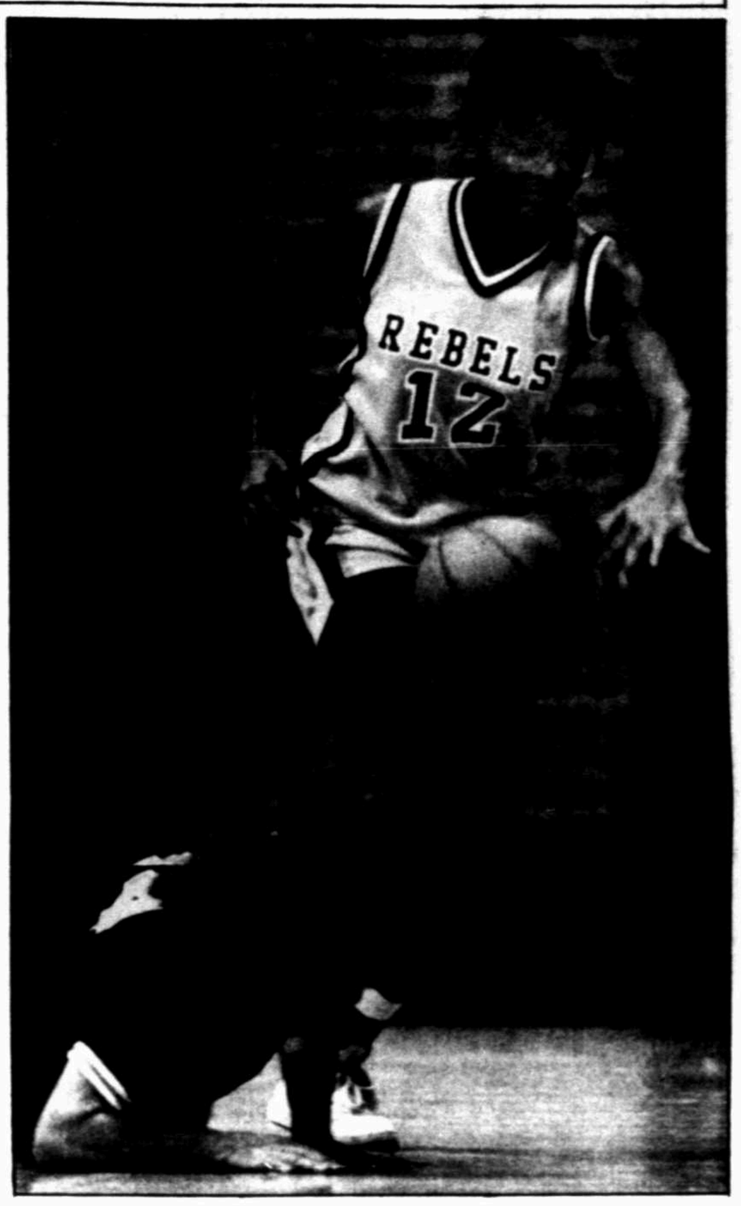

Red River plans to open beginner and intermediate areas on Thanksgiving and Angle Fire plans to open in mid-December.

Sandia Peak Ski Area near Albuquerque plans to open Thanksgiving Day thanks to two snowfalls.

"It's very unusual to open this early," said Sandia Peak publicity director Jane Doran Woodward.

The area reports 18 inches of new snow, 14 inches at the base and 26 inches at midway. All upper-mountain trails are scheduled to be opened.

Ski Apache near Ruidoso is scheduled to open on Thanksgiving and is reporting 21 inches of snow at midway.

Aggies go for title

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas A&M will play for the Southwest Conference title on Thanksgiving night, while Texas may be playing for Coach Fred Akers' job.

Texas A&M, 8-2, can win its second consecutive trip to the Cotton Bowl by beating Texas in the oldest rivalry in the Southwest Conference.

Texas didn't receive a bowl bid this year for the first time since Akers replaced Darrell Royal, who resigned after the 1976 season. Royal never had a losing football season in 20 years.

A Texas loss would drop the Longhorns to 5-6, which would be their first losing season in 30 years, and also would fuel speculation that the Thanksgiving game might be the last for Akers, 48.

"I've had too many other things to think about," Akers says when asked about his job being in jeopardy.

His 10-year record at Texas is 86-30-2 but he was won only five of nine games against the Aggies.

Texas lost 37-12 to Texas A&M in 1984 and 42-10 last year, and another loss would be the first time that the Longhorns have fallen to the Aggies in three consecutive years.

Midland lasses defeat Andrews, 77-37

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Midland High girls basketball coach Jane Young wanted her team to work on its zone defense, but it was the shooting eye of the Lady Bulldogs that turned heads in a 77-37 win over Class 4A Andrews at the MHS gym Tuesday night.

The Bulldogs were coming off a narrow loss to cross town rival Midland Lee in the finals of the Del Rio Invitational, but this game was proof positive that the Purple Pack didn't waste a lot of time dwelling on that loss.

This was never a contest as MHS hit an amazing 21 of 34 shots (65 percent) in the first half for a 45-19 advantage. They cooled off to a 54 percent shooting eye before the game was over as Young used her bench liberally.

And did the zone work for Young? Well, just about any team can live by giving up an average of 37 points per game.

"In the loss to Lee, we pressed the whole game and we wanted to work on our zone defense tonight," noted Young. "I want this team to be able to slow it down when it has to and to press when it has to. I must say I was pleased with the way the girls played tonight."

And about the shooting eye? "These girls can hit when they take the good shots," said Young.

And hit they did. Shooting star Amy Cumings hit 11 of 13 shots from the field and ended the night with 23 points. Sebrenia Finch hit seven of 10 from the field for 14 points and Brenda Rodriquez scored 18 of her 20 points in the first half.

Cumings wasn't shocked that she hit 85 percent from the floor, but was shocked over the fact that she took 13 shots. "I don't usually shoot that many times."

But when she shot, she recorded cords. "Amy just doesn't take many bad shots," said Young.

Rodriquez, who had 25 points for a career high against Lee over the weekend, hit on eight of 15 shots in the first half before cooling off. Still, she is averaging 19 points per game to lead the team.

"I think we are going to go a long way this year because we get along good on the court. We have a lot of team play," said Rodriquez. "We played a good game against Lee, but missed too many free throws. We still need a lot of work in that area."

The Bulldogs did hit only seven of 19 shots from the charity stripe.

The Mustangs hit only 16 of 46 shots from the field, but Holly Luck had a good outing with 14 points, hitting five of eight from the field. Unfortunately for the Mustangs, Andrews had little to go with her.

Down memory lane with Polk

Polk Robison took the Texas Tech from the old barn to the Coliseum era of basketball, the old Border Conference to the Southwest Conference.

When Tech moved into the spanking new Coliseum back in 1954, he had a spitfire little guard from Borger running the team on the floor. He now runs the team from the bench.

But it was Polk, retired but still vitally interested in Tech sports and a regular at home football games, who established the tradition that continues to this day.

Robison goes back a long way with Tech. "Yes, I was there when Texas Tech played in the Cotton Bowl game, only I was coach at Burkburnett at the time.

"The thing I remember was that St. Mary's had a center named Dowd who did all the punting, so they had to bring in another center. I'd never seen that before...or since."

Robison came to Tech after the war and coached 14 years, compiling a 210-144 record.

BACK WHEN Tech was playing in the Barn, replaced this year by the new multi-purpose balloon dome south of the Jones Stadium, Robison was taking his basketball teams out to Tucson where they played the University of Arizona in the notorious Bear Down gym. If anything it was worse than Tech's Barn on visitors.

His teams played Arizona when Morris and Stuart Udall were guards for the Wildcats.

"It was a terrible place for a visiting team. The bench was right on the sidelines and in the stands," Polk remembered. "Visiting teams were really abused by the fans. They called you names and even threw things at you."

It was such an intimidating gym that Coach Fred Enke once had a string of 100 home gym victories. During the same stretch UA lost 30 games on the road.

"I remember getting a letter from Stuart Udall, who was playing then, complimenting the Tech team on the poise with which it handled the hostile Bear Down atmosphere.

Udall eventually graduated, but never coached, probably frightened by the prospect of having to play on the road.

TODAY'S RULES? Polk doesn't like the stall and feels the 45-second rule perhaps was necessary. "Still, surveys show that it's rarely employed.

The new three-point shot with its inviting 19 foot, nine inch arc?

"I like it. I know some feel it's too close, but it should open the game up and bring teams out of their zones and loosen things up inside."

"Another thing I could never do," said Robison, "is to tell a boy to go out and deliberately foul. A team or player shouldn't be able to commit a foul for gain. There's something wrong with a rule that allows it."

And Tech's chances of a third straight SWC championship?

"That won't be easy, but Gerald is strong at guards and he plays a strong November-December schedule with teams like Cal State-Fullerton, Kentucky, Kansas State, Clemson, SW Louisiana, Wyoming and Kansas. That should pay off later on in the Southwest Conference schedule. In fact, a strong preseason schedule is one of the reasons he won again last year."

Rutgers, football's cradle, produces Raiders' Pickel

Given their reputation, when you look down the Raiders' roster for the institutions of higher learning they came from, you half expect to see alma maters like the University of Just Win, Baby, the I'm Innocent I Tell You Correctional Institution, Electric Chair Tech and Up The River State College.

What you don't expect to see is Rutgers.

Rutgers is the cradle of football. The first intercollegiate game ever was played there. But it does not come into public focus as your basic big-time football factory.

You never read "Bowl-bound Rutgers" in the sporting prints. No one is quite sure what the team mascot is or whether there is one. Rutgers is not famous for its goat or horse or leopard on a leash. They're not the Big Red or the Golden Horde or the Purple Pythons.

YOU GET an image of a tree-lined campus with carved mahogany doors and the faculty wearing powdered wigs and a student body that can recite the Tudor Succession from memory. You'd expect the cheers to be in Greek and the biggest statue on campus to be Shakespeare. The school was founded before America was, in 1766, and George Washington probably slept there.

You figure the football team shows up with chauffeurs and learned the game by playing catch with their butlers.

IT'S the last place in the world you'd expect the Raiders to come looking for a defensive lineman, especially since they'd have to go right by all the pool halls in Perth Amboy to get there.

It's an image that annoys Bill Pickel no end. Bill Pickel may be the best football player ever to come out of Rutgers, certainly the best since Paul Robeson - or Ozzie Nelson.

It irks Bill Pickel that most people think of Rutgers as some sub-Ivy League college whose annual biggie is with Hampden-Sydney or Seton Hall and whose varsity is only playing because the polo ponies are sick.

"We play Army, Alabama, Kentucky, Penn State, Syracuse, Florida," Pickel said. "We're not Harvard. Everybody thinks East Coast football begins and ends with Penn State and Pittsburgh. But we're upgrading our program. We can play anybody in the country."

m

YOU HAVE, therefore, to resist the temptation to say to Pickel "What's a nice Ivy League boy like you doing in a place like this?" in a tone of voice that indicates you just caught him using somebody else's toothbrush or attending a gangland funeral.

The Raiders may be looking for football players in the played-out ore beds of the Northeast because they think nobody else is looking there. They got Howie Long from Villanova and Sean Jones from Northeastern.

Getting football players out of small, unknown colleges with names like Middle-Eastern North Carolina State Teachers is a tried and tested NFL formula. Getting them out of venerable institutions that were old when Lincoln was born is a daring tactic.

Putting a Rutgers man alongside Lyle Alzado would seem to smack of putting a nun in the Mafia.

THEY GAVE Pickel what may be the toughest job on the ball club. Playing nose tackle has been likened by Raider official Al LoCasale to "lining up in the middle of the Hollywood Freeway." They should call it bloody-nose tackle.

It's a position that formerly was played by two men, to give you an idea. Football not too long ago was played on defense by a front four whose job it was to rush the passer mercilessly. They disdained the run because they figured it was a nice little diversionary tactic they could put a stop to any time they wanted. It was the pass that won championships.

This philosophy gained so much currency with the brain trusts of the NFL that they soon conceived the idea of peeling another player back from that front four to further discourage the pass.

This meant that the third man in what was left of the line had to be (1) strong, (2) durable, (3) fast and (4) suicidal. Also willing to do the work of two men.

YOU WOULD think a Rutgers man would be too smart to go in for this line of work, that Rutgers people would hire someone to do it for them, the way they would hire someone to do windows, and that Pickel would tell the Raiders politely "I think you came to the wrong place for that kind of workman. Have you tried Arizona State? I was thinking more along the lines of safety man. Some place where you don't get dirty."

But Pickel may be right about Rutgers. It may be getting so tough it's on the verge of getting into the Big Eight. If it's got players like Bill Pickel on its campus, it has sure outgrown Ursinus. Army isn't even a match for it anymore.

WHILE Rutgers is still a long way from the gridiron juggernaut Pickel makes it out to be, he himself has become a one-man gang and a strong advertisement for the old girl on the banks of the Raritan.

In the last two seasons, Pickel has registered 25 quarterback sacks and led the Raiders' front line with 82 tackles. This year, he has 7.5 sacks and again leads the line with 48 tackles.

A sack is never entirely an individual effort but Pickel and his fellow members of the terrible trio, Sean Jones and Greg Townsend, sacked Cleveland quarterback Bernie Kosar six times in Sunday's game. Bernie may wonder why Rutgers isn't on probation.

You're supposed to die for dear, old Rutgers, not kill for it. But if you can get ready for the Los Angeles Raiders playing there – well, either Rutgers has changed or the Raiders have. And if the Raiders have changed, so have Doberman pinschers.

So, dear old Rutgers is not dying for anybody these days. If it's now turning out all-pro nose tackles, the presumption is it now wants to get back in this racket it started personally 117 years ago.

A few more like Bill Pickel and the student body can begin practicing up on cheering "We're No. 1!" In Latin.

Study in contrasts

OU's Bosworth and Temple's Palmer

Associated Press

By JOEL SHERMAN

NEW YORK (UPI) — Paul Palmer, Temple's standout tailback, walks into a hotel meeting room for breakfast wearing a pair of diamond stud earrings and a gold ring inscribed with his first name.

Five minutes later, Oklahoma star linebacker Brian Bosworth strides in decked out with one diamond stud and a gold "Boz" in his ear and a half-dollar sized national championship ring. And, of course, there is the hair: it's blond and black and red; it's long in some places and short in others and has a tail flecked in magenta.

Palmer is chic. Bosworth is different.

So it's not surprising when Palmer, good enough to be the nation's leading rusher but at 5-foot-9 is having his stature questioned by the pros, says of the NFL: "I'm from the East Coast and I can play there, but maybe if I went out west or down south I'd grow more as a person," while Bosworth answers the same question with the "Los Angeles Raiders."

BOSWORTH is a Raider, individualistic and marauding, who is spending his time keying the nation's best defense. Bosworth, who with Palmer was in New York representating the Kodak All-America team, plans to become a Raider or a New York Giant, his second choice "because they've always been known for tough defense."

The 6-2, 240-pounder does have a trump card. He was red-shirted in 1983, meaning his playing status is as a junior, but he will have enough credits to graduate this spring. Because of that he can become eligible for the draft, but like everything else Bosworth does, it will be on his terms.

"I'm in a different situation than Paul," Bosworth said. "He'll go to whoever they tell him to go to. I can dictate where I go. I can say I'm coming out or do the John Elway thing or go into the supplemental draft. There's a lot of different things I can do.

"I'm not caught in their system (the draft). I'm not saying the system isn't good. After all, if it wasn't in place everyone would want to play for Los Angeles, New York or Dallas. It's just I'm not tied to the system."

ELWAY used his status as a member of the New York Yankees' minor-league chain to drive the Colts to trade him to Denver after drafting him in 1983. In 1985, Bernie Kosar's status was similar to Bosworth's and he skipped the regular draft and worked a deal to get selected in the supplemental draft by Cleveland, a city close to his Boardman, Ohio, home.

Bosworth, who if eligible is expected to be among the top five picks, is accustomed to winning at Oklahoma and claims he will avoid a losing NFL team.

"Ill stay another year (at Oklahoma) before I play with Indianapolis," Bosworth said. "I got enough losing in high school. I don't want to get stuck in Buffalo, Houston or Indianapolis. It's not a bad reflection on those teams, players or front offices. It's just a fact that if you play for bad teams like that you get beat up more then in a place that wins."

And Bosworth has helped Oklahoma re-establish itself as a place that wins. The Sooners lost four games in each season from 1981 to 1983. In the three seasons Bosworth has played, Oklahoma has lost a total of four games. The Sooners have won the Big Eight the past three seasons, and the national title last season.

HIS MENACING, intense style has helped him lead the Sooners with 136 tackles this year and helped Oklahoma establish itself as the nation's best pass, rush and scoring defense as the nation's third-ranked team.

"I would like to be remembered as an integral person in helping Oklahoma back to national prominence," said Bosworth, 21.

It's is more likely he will be remembered for the punky look and outrageous statements he has made about opponents.

"I've been The Boz for 21 years, I guess, unfortunately," Bosworth said. "I deal with it and like it, but it does bother my girlfriend some times. But you know the thing for me is to perform on Saturday. I still go into each game nervous as hell. My biggest worry is not to get pinned or block. I'm not worrying at all about being The Boz."

East Carolina walks to gallows

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — As East Carolina football coach Art Baker pondered the Thanksgiving night battle with top-ranked Miami, his school's biggest game in 49 years of football, he could not avoid the time-honored hope of every coach who has ever been an underdog.

"Any coach and any player has to realize that anything can happen on a given day," Baker said Tuesday. "I don't want to be the coach of any team that went into a game believing we were going to get beat."

EAST CAROLINA, located in the tobacco-oriented town of Greenville, N.C., can throw chaos into the pre-arranged national collegiate football championship game between the Hurricanes and No. 2 Penn State on Jan. 2 if it can pull off the upset. But while Baker is optimistic, he is also realistic because of his team's 2-8 record.

"Our approach with our players has been that we have been improving and our players feel much better about themselves than they did earlier in the year," Baker said in a telephone interview.

He added, though, that he is not selling the idea of an upset.

"We're not as naive as to think we've improved that much."

Three years ago, the Pirates went into 11 of their games thinking they could win, and save for 11 points, they almost pulled it off. They faced Miami in that season's ninth game, and only a collision between two East Carolina receivers in the end zone kept the Pirates from beating the Hurricanes at the final gun. That year, the ECU record was 8-3 and East Carolina finished the season ranked 20th in the nation.

BAKER WAS the offensive coordinator for that 1983 team, but he says there's no comparison between that team, which sent several players to the National Football League, and the current youth-laden team which has struggled with two freshmen quarterbacks and a schedule which listed four of the nation's top 20 teams — Penn State among them.

"Not many teams have the privilege of playing the No. 1 and No. 2 ranked teams in the U.S. in the same year."

And not many teams, Baker said, will face a quarterback like Vinny Testaverde.

"Testaverde, I would guess, is the Heisman Trophy winner without any question. And yet, we're trying to take the attitude that we don't have a lot to lose and everything to gain," he said.

THIS YeAR, using the slogan "Rallying To The Challenge," East Carolina didn't offer much of a challenge on most occasions, and the times they were in contention, fate dealt a bad hand.

North Carolina State took a big victory, and West Virginia scored with six seconds left to beat the Pirates at home. There was the 45-0 loss to Auburn and a 42-17 drubbing from the Nittany Lions. Losses at Southwestern Louisiana and Temple followed, but the Pirates snapped a 15-game losing streak with a triumph over Division I-AA reigning champion Georgia Southern.

WHIPPED BY South Carolina, the Pirates returned home and thought they had a victory over Southern Mississippi with eight seconds left. But the Golden Eagles completed a 74-yard pass play and were penalized for an illegal lateral at the end of the play which led to a touchdown. Faced with the choice of declining the penalty and losing on the touchdown or taking the penalty to set up a Southern Mississippi field goal.

Baker took the penalty and the Pirates lost on the field goal.

Last week, East Carolina took out its frustrations on Cincinnati for a 33-19 victory.

Baker sees his one chance against the Hurricanes in trying to control things before the opponent gains the advantage.

Cornhuskers' Osborne questions grid calls

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne has questioned some calls by officials in the team's loss to Oklahoma and said a face-mask penalty against the Cornhuskers' Brian Davis with 3:03 left was the game's biggest play.

Osborne said Oklahoma tight end Keith Jackson pushed Nebraska's Broderick Thomas on a reception that set up the winning field goal in the 20-17 loss Saturday. Osborne also said officials erred in not awarding Nebraska a first-quarter fumble that Thomas recovered near the sideline.

What Osborne called "the play of the game" came on fourth-and-one at the Oklahoma 15 and Nebraska leading 17-10. Sooners' quarterback Jamelle Holieway ran an option play to the right for 5 yards and was stripped of the ball by Davis, who recovered.

But an official called Davis for grabbing Holieway's face mask, giving Oklahoma a first down.

"If we had a face mask, it sure wasn't much," Osborne said Monday. "It could have been around his throat or it could have been face mask. If they hadn't called face mask, we would have had the football and the game would have been over."

Bobcat tickets go like turkeys

SAN ANGELO (AP) — Fans of San Angelo's Central Bobcats have snatched up the team's allotment of 6,000 seats for Saturday's Class 5A regional playoff with Wichita Falls, but thousands of other fans were unable to get tickets.

More tickets will be available if 3,500 tickets set aside for use by Wichita Falls fans are not sold, San Angelo Athletic Director Dick Rittman said.

Rittman said 2,000 tickets were sent to Wichita Falls and another 1,500 were put on hold for the visiting team in case it requests them. Late Tuesday afternoon, a secretary in the Wichita Falls ISD Athletic Department indicated that only 375 of the 2,000 it received had been sold.

Upshaw says refs must take charge

NEW YORK (AP) — Gene Upshaw, executive director of the NFL Players Association, officials should take greater control of games to prevent flagrant fouls and Bears' quarterback Doug Flutie suggested starter Jim McMahon take legal action after Sunday's flagarant late mugging.

Upshaw cited the incident Sunday in which McMahon was slammed to the ground by Green Bay's Charles Martin in the Bears' 12-10 victory. McMahon's sore right shoulder was re-injured and he may be out for the remainder of the season.

"Officials should control the game," Upshaw said. "I had a report prior to the game that Green Bay players came on the field with a hit list of players they wanted to get. Officials should immediately call the coaches and say 'We're not going to tolerate this. If you don't control it, we're going to control it.' I've been in games where referees like Ben Dreith or Jim Tunney said, 'I'm taking control.' I've heard it."

Martin was ejected from the game and Tuesday was suspended for two games without pay by Commissioner Pete Rozelle. It was the most severe penalty for an on-the-field incident that Rozelle has handed down in his 26 years as commissioner.

Upshaw said "All he can do is discipline a player after the fact," Upshaw said. "Rozelle has suspended players in the past. He might do it again. It can be controlled. Things like that don't just happen on the spur of the moment. Look at the point in the game when the foul occurred. There was a buildup. I played in 200-some games. I know everytime I ever got in a beef, I didn't walk on the field and just do it. It was provoked. Something led up to it.

"Players are not going to control aggressiveness on the field. That's what the officials get paid for."

LEE

"Sometimes we don't get down the court fast enough on the press, but in the press you're going to get burned some," Stephenson said. "You'd like to see them steal every pass, but that's just not going to happen. I was pleased with the way we handled their man-to-man pressure."

With Hobbs trying to do the same things the Rebels were doing, that meant for a lot of running. It was just something the Rebels were able to do better.

Even with the Eagles stepping up the pressure after intermission, in an effort to get back in the game, the Rebels stayed with the Eagles step for step, never allowing them to get too close.

The Rebels came up with another cast of heroines against the Eagles. Senior post Melissa Hart had her finest game of the young season as she connected for 14 points and 13 rebounds. LaVette Wallace and Piette Mayfield each added 11 to the Rebel attack. Roz Eaden scored just five points, but added 10 rebounds and six steals in another strong performance.

Stephenson and the Rebels will take more than a week off from competition after six wins in eight days. Next up is Andrews Dec. 5.

Corner Kick

By PAUL BREITZMAN

Last weekend's Big Country Soccer Association Invitational in Abilene may have lasted two days, but for 15 members of the Midland Soccer Association's U-14B Raiders there was enough drama to remember for years to come.

On Saturday, with the benefit of a balanced attack that saw five different players scoring goals, the Raiders disposed of the Dallas Jets 2-0, the Abilene Cowboys 2-1 and the Abilene Jets 4-1 to earn a spot in Sunday's semifinal.

Sunday was not as easy. The Raiders took on Abilene's Spurs in the semifinal, which went into overtime after a 2-2 deadlock in regulation.

In the overtime, the Raiders took the lead when a pass by Jordan Reed set up a Chris Murray goal. Solid play by goalkeeper Brian Rounding and defender Joe Martinez helped the Raiders hold the one goal lead as overtime elapsed and the Raiders advanced to the championship game.

In the championship, Midland took an early 1-0 lead on another Murray goal, but Abilene United scored to tie the game before the half. Another United goal in the second half looked to be the game winner until Murray converted a penalty kick to knot the score at 2-2 with only eight seconds left in regulation.

Early in the overtime, Murray again scored on an assist from Eric Collins. But fatigue was becoming a factor and constant pressure by United led to a late goal and a 3-3 tie.

A five-by-five penalty kick shootout then left the spectators speechless, but the score still tied. Finally, in the sudden death phase of the shootout, the eighth Raider shot was saved by the United goalkeeper, leaving the Raiders in second place.

Raider coach Buster Dickey does note, however, that second place qualifies the team for the Gatorade Invitational in Dallas in August. If a pressure game is a good teacher, the Raiders should do well.

The MSA sponsored high school and junior high soccer seasons will again feature January and February games this winter. This season will also have Big Spring and San Angelo Central fielding teams in the high school division while the junior high side will also include an Odessa team.

Tryouts for all Midland schools will begin the week of December 1-5. Interested youth should watch for announcement at each school for time and place. Call 685-3343 for further information.

Bill Yeoman... it's time to come out clawing.

An AP Sports Analysis
By MICHAEL A. LUTZ

HOUSTON — Tom Ford, the University of Houston's last athletic director, called AP from a pizza parlor to announce his resignation.

Ford said he was leaving town on vacation and thought someone should know.

When Guy V. Lewis retired as Houston's basketball coach, indecision by the search committee almost cost the school the services of Pat Foster, a former assistant at Arkansas and head coach at Lamar University.

When the committee was finally moved to act, hurried negotiations concluded at a service station on Interstate-10 between Houston and Beaumont.

NOW MAY be the time for the Cougars to remove the pepperoni and lube jobs from the settings of their negotiations and follow the advice of head football Coach Bill Yeoman to reogranize and "come out clawing."

The school's athletic program may be at the most critical stage in its 40-year history:

— It faces a possible NCAA investigation into allegations by former players that Yeoman and his staff paid them. President Richard Van Horn says an NCAA investigator has been on campus in the past month.

— Houston has possibly the worst athletic training facilities in the Southwest Conference. The school's regents have approved, for the third time, plans for a $4.5 million training facility, but funds must be raised to start construction.

— Houston has played its home games in the Astrodome for the past 21 years and Yeoman once used the facility as a recruiting tool. But now the Cougars play in the "Empty-Dome."

HOUSTON averaged 39,000 fans in 1978 but the figure has dropped to 16,727 this season and the Cougars are headed for their lowest average attendance since 1950.

— The school's athletic budget was $3 million in the red before the season started.

Houston fought hard to gain admittance to the Southwest Conference. Former Athletic Director Harry Fouke and Yeoman pulled the Houston athletic program into the SWC on a shoestring.

But athletics could deteriorate if the school doesn't get the right people in decision-making positions.

"If everything is terrible in five years, we obviously would have to think seriously about changing our whole athletic structure," Van Horn said.

THE SCHOOL currently has search committees seeking a new coach and athletic director and their choices could make or break the Cougars over the next five years.

There is a need for leaders who want to be at the school.

Ford's freeway announcement was a continuation of recent history at UH.

Fouke retired as athletic director in 1979 after 34 years on the job, and his successors have been using the interstates to get out of town ever since.

Cedric Dempsey replaced Fouke and he hit the road for Arizona in 1982 and his replacement, John Kasser, motored out to California in 1984.

Ford announced his resignation earlier this year through the media because he said Houston officials wouldn't make the announcement. School officials finally confirmed Ford's departure two hours later.

Yeoman and Foster serve as the present foundation of the school's athletic program.

Yeoman, who will resign as head coach at the end of this season, will become a special assistant to Van Horn and will head up the school's athletic fund-raising programs.

THE SCHOOL must become accountable to its fans, Yeoman said.

"We've got to get out there on the street and apologize to our fans for some of the things that have been going on," Yeoman said. "We've got to cater to them and tell them how desperately we need them."

Although it is common practice at other schools, Yeoman said a policy of charging season ticket-holders $100 for the privilege of season tickets had driven some fans away.

Houston's marketing department sent out 48,500 letters seeking season ticket purchases this year and only 100 responded.

"Letters and telephone calls are fine, but we've got to get out there face to face and let them chew on us and tell us what's wrong," Yeoman said. "We've got to let them know that we are here to be a service to them."

Yeoman's approach might help reduce the confusion and uncertainty.

Canesco beats out Joyner

By MIKE TULLY

NEW YORK (UPI) — Oakland A's slugger Jose Canseco, in a surprising triumph over California's Wally Joyner, Tuesday was named the American League Rookie of the Year by the Baseball Writers' Association of America.

Canseco, a 22-year-old outfielder, received 16 of 28 first-place votes for 110 points. Joyner collected the other 12 first-place votes and 98 points.

The writers — two from each of the 14 AL cities — voted for first, second and third place, with the votes worth five, three and one point, respectively.

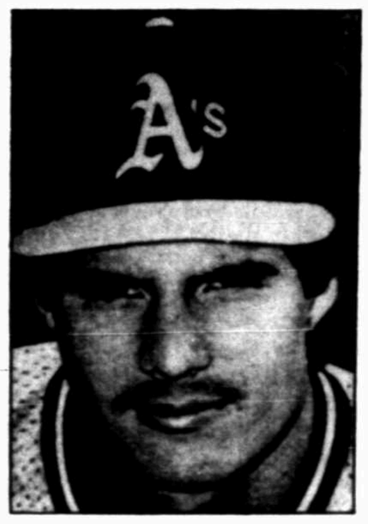

"I thought it might go down to the wire, but I thought Wally may have an edge because of all the publicity he got down in Anaheim," Canseco said.

The vote came as a surprise because of the popularity Joyner generated over the season. Though owning less impressive statistics than Canseco, he helped the Angels to a West Division title. Joyner not only handled the pressure of succeeding Rod Carew but excelled both in the field and at the plate. In addition, Joyner's boyish face and friendly attitude gave him the nickname "Wally World."

Canseco, by contrast, proved to be a one-dimensional player. He struck out often, was an erratic fielder and even received some criticism within his team for subpar work habits. The one dimension he provided, however, was one that electrifies baseball fans — power.

"I think the difference was I simply put up better stats and the writers voted for me," Canseco said.

AL Rookie

Joe Canesco
....banner season

"Oakland does not get good publicity and is not a well-known team so it had to be that my stats were that much better than Wally's."

A right-handed hitting Cuban, Canseco had a .240 average with 33 homers and 117 RBI and did it without enjoying a prolonged hot streak.

The left-handed Joyner hit .290 with 22 homers and 100 RBIs.

"Hopefully I'll have a better season than I had this year," Canseco said. "I want to improve in every area — my offense, my defense. I want to cut down on my strikeouts and hit a lot of home runs."

Toronto reliever Mark Eichhorn finished third with 23 points, followed by Cleveland infielder Cory Snyder with 16, Seattle infielder-outfielder Danny Tartabull with four and Texas outfielder Ruben Sierra with one.

Canseco and Joyner were the only players named on all 28 ballots.

After hitting five homers in a 29-game, late-season fling with the A's in 1985, Canseco arrived in spring training with the buildup that accompanies the greatest sluggers. His batting practice displays, in which he routinely hit 500- and 550-foot shots, did nothing to discourage the expectations.

Canseco was a 15th-round selection in the June 1982 free-agent draft. He played four years in the minors before joining the A's.

Ivies coaches seek change

NEW YORK (AP) — Several Ivy League football coaches want to ask their university presidents to allow a modified form of spring practice, the New York Times said in Tuesday's editions.

The coaches, concerned by a sharp dropoff in the level of play in recent years, will meet in January and would "definitely talk about spring practice and see what we can do. We've tried before several times," Harvard Coach Joe Restic said.

Pardee among top UH candidates

HOUSTON (UPI) — Former Houston Gamblers coach Jack Pardee, Texas A&M assistant Lynn Amedee and Philadelphia Eagles defensive coordinator Wade Phillips appear to be the top three candidates for the University of Houston coaching job.

The school is searching for a replacement for Bill Yeoman, who announced he is stepping down at the end of the season after 25 years as head coach.

UH offensive line coach Ted Unbehagen has officially turned in his application and Arkansas State Coach Larry Lacewell, a former Oklahoma assistant, was interviewed Sunday.

Pardee, former Midlander who is currently a scout for the Green Bay Packers and a Houston resident, is a 1957 graduate of Texas A&M and played 15 seasons in the NFL. He also coached the Chicago Bears and Washington Redskins, and the Florida Blazers of the World Football League.

Amedee, a former LSU quarterback, created A&M's explosive offense.

"I've talked to them (Houston officials) informally," Amedee said. "I'm interested, very much so. I think it's time I got a shot at being a head coach."

Amedee said he hoped to meet with the UH search committee as soon as this weekend.

Phillips, son of former Houston Oilers and New Orleans Saints Coach Bum Phillips, and a former linebacker at UH, met with the search committee last week.

A Traditional Thanksgiving...

for Today

Thanksgiving is a celebration of the sheer perseverance and determination of the first colonists to survive the harsh conditions in their new home. The early homemakers learned to adapt familiar European recipes and cooking methods to fit new foods and lifestyles. The first Thanksgiving dinner was a "pitch in" meal with special dishes from each family.

Thanksgiving dinner for a house filled with relatives doesn't have to be a survival test for today's busy cooks if they follow the colonists' customs of adapting traditional recipes to incorporate new eating trends and asking each family to contribute a favorite dish to the gathering.

Today's convenient, time-saving ingredients such as sweetened condensed milk, bottled lemon juice, ready-to-use mincemeat and chicken-flavor bouillon allow the cook to create recipes that are not only delicious but quick and easy to prepare.

Add hearty, rich flavor to the turkey stuffing and gravy, with instant bouillon or bouillon cubes, which are easier and more economical to use than canned broth. Dissolve one teaspoon instant or one cube in one cup boiling water in any recipe calling for one cup broth or stock.

Keep bottled lemon juice on hand to give a zesty flavor to punches, salads, sauces and vegetable dishes. Ready-to-use mincemeat is the quick and convenient ingredient for the traditional holiday pie. For other luscious desserts, choose sweetened condensed milk, today's easy way to homemade taste and goodness.

Celebrate the joys and traditions of the American spirit with this memorable Thanksgiving dinner.

Thanksgiving feast made memorable with tasty side dishes

Hearst News Service

There's simply nothing better for a Thanksgiving dinner for eight people than a 20-pound turkey roasted your favorite way and leaving plenty for leftovers.

Kay Baumhefner of the Opera House Cafe in Petaluma, Calif., has sent along these recipes for a truly wonderful Thanksgiving feast; all will serve eight. The cornbread and porcini mushroom stuffing is savory with a rich, earthy fragrance. Parsnips have a sweet, mild flavor that goes well with the yams, and no, there are no marshmallows on top.

Everyone has a particular Thanksgiving favorite: Kay's family likes mashed potatoes, braised red cabbage, a green salad with grapefruit and avocado and creamed onions — Thanksgiving would be unimaginable without them, she says. But for something different, try her cold pumpkin souffle with crunchy spice wafers.

All in all, a happy Thanksgiving.

CORNBREAD AND PORCINI MUSHROOM STUFFING

2 ounces dried porcini mushrooms
4 cups hot water
½ pound unsalted butter
4 cups diced red onions
1 teaspoon salt
2 cups diced celery
2 cups diced fennel bulb
2 pounds domestic mushrooms, thinly sliced
½ teaspoon pepper
4 large garlic cloves, pounded
1 cup chopped tomato
1 tablespoon dried thyme
2 teaspoons dried rosemary
½ teaspoon ground juniper berries
1 teaspoon dried sage
1 teaspoon dried savory
1 cup dry white wine
2 cups heavy cream
6 cups coarsely crumbled cornbread
6 cups coarsely crumbled french bread, dried in a slow oven
1 cup chopped parsley
1 cup chopped fennel fronds
2 cups freshly grated romano cheese

In a saucepan, soak the mushrooms in the hot water for an hour. Carefully remove them from the water and cut into slivers. Reserve. Filter the liquid through a paper towel to remove sand. Over high heat, reduce the liquid to about one cup. Reserve.

In a large skillet over medium-high heat, melt 4 tablespoons of the butter and saute the onions with the salt until translucent. Add 4 tablespoons more of the butter and the celery and fennel. Saute for 10 minutes.

Add the domestic mushrooms and the pepper and saute until they turn chestnut brown, gradually adding the remaining butter as it is absorbed.

Add the garlic and tomato, thyme, rosemary, juniper berries, sage and savory. Stir for 5 minutes.

Add the wine and the porcini liquid and then the cream, letting each bubble up and reduce somewhat before adding the next.

Stir in the porcini mushrooms and let simmer about 5 minutes.

In a large bowl combine the breads, parsley, fennel fronds and cheese. Add the mushroom mixture and stir to combine.

The stuffing may be used in the turkey or put into a buttered casserole, covered and baked for about an hour along with the turkey. Baste the stuffing periodically with the turkey roasting juices.

SCALLOPED YAMS AND PARSNIPS

3½ pounds yams, peeled and sliced ¼-inch thick
1½ pounds parsnips, peeled and sliced ¼-inch thick
Finely grated zest and juice of two oranges
½ cup brown sugar (reserve half)
4 ounces unsalted butter (reserve half)
2 teaspoons grated nutmeg
Salt and white pepper
2 tablespoons Grand Marnier
2 cups boiling water
2 tablespoons honey

Generously butter a 9x12-inch baking dish. Make three layers of yams with two layers of parsnips in between, sprinkling on each layer the orange zest, brown sugar, butter, nutmeg, salt and pepper.

Mix together the orange juice, Grand Marnier and boiling water. Pour over the yams and parsnips.

Cover the baking dish tightly with foil and bake in the upper third of a 400 degree oven for 20 minutes. Reduce the heat to 350 degrees and bake 20 minutes more.

Remove the foil from the dish. Evenly distribute the reserved butter, brown sugar and honey over the vegetables. Bake, uncovered, in the upper third of a 350 degree oven for 10 to 20 minutes more until liquid has been absorbed and top is brown.

BRAISED CABBAGE

½ pound bacon, cut into ¼-inch strips
1 cup thinly sliced carrots
2 cups sliced yellow onions
8 cups sliced red cabbage (almost 3 pounds)
3 cups peeled, cored and sliced tart apples
4 garlic cloves, pounded
1 large bay leaf
¼ teaspoon ground cloves
½ teaspoon grated nutmeg
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
½ cup apple cider
½ cup fruity red wine
2 cups chicken stock

In a heavy oven-proof casserole, saute the bacon until almost crisp. Remove the bacon and pour out half the fat. Add the carrots, onions and butter and saute until the onions are translucent. Return the bacon to the pan.

Add the cabbage to the casserole and stir to coat with fat.

Add the apples, garlic, seasonings, cider, wine and chicken stock to the casserole, stir well and bring to the boil. Cover and place in a 325 degree oven for about three hours (or simmer on top of the stove). Check periodically to make sure all the liquid does not evaporate. Add more liquid if necessary.

COLD PUMPKIN SOUFFLE

2 tablespoons unflavored gelatin
½ cup cold water
6 egg yolks
1 cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt
¼ cup lemon juice
2 cups pumpkin puree (or canned pumpkin)
½ teaspoon freshly grated ginger (or 1 teaspoon ground ginger)
1½ teaspoons ground cinnamon
½ teaspoon ground cloves
½ teaspoon ground allspice
½ teaspoon grated nutmeg
¼ teaspoon ground cardamom
6 egg whites
Pinch of salt
Pinch of cream of tartar
2 cups heavy cream
Minced crystallized ginger

In a small bowl, sprinkle the gelatin over the water to soften for about 10 minutes.

In the top of a double boiler or in a heavy enameled pan, beat the egg yolks until thick and pale. Gradually add the sugar, salt and lemon juice. Whisk over low heat until thickened. Do not boil. Add gelatin to dissolve. Cool.

In a large bowl combine the pumpkin and spices. Add the gelatin-yolk mixture. Chill, covered, until syrupy and beginning to set, about 30 minutes.

Beat the egg whites with salt at medium speed until foamy. Add the cream of tartar and beat on high speed just until stiff peaks forrm. Beat the cream until stiff peaks form.

Fold the cream and then the egg whites into the pumpkin mixture. Pour into 8-ounce wine glasses or a souffle dish with a waxed paper collar. Chill at least four hours. Garnish with crystallized ginger.

COCOA HAZELNUT SPICE WAFERS

1 cup sugar
1 cup flour
½ teaspoon baking powder
1 cup toasted hazelnuts or almonds (in 350 degree oven for 15 minutes)
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1 teaspoon ground ginger
½ teaspoon grated nutmeg
1 tablespoon unsweetened cocoa powder
4 ounces cold, unsalted butter cut into 8 cubes
1 large egg, lightly beaten

In a food processor or blender, grind together the first eight ingredients until the nuts are fine.

Add the butter to the food processor and pulse 12 to 15 times until the butter is evenly fine, or cream in the butter by hand or with an electric mixer.

Add the egg and process or mix until the dough masses. Let the dough sit, covered, for about an hour.

Turn the dough out onto a piece of waxed paper about 20 inches long. Shape into a roll about 1½-inches in diameter. Roll up in waxed paper. Place in the freezer for half an hour or in the refrigerator overnight until firm.

Slice the dough ¼-inch thick and place on cookie sheets covered with baking parchment paper. Brush with egg glaze (1 egg beaten lightly with 1 teaspoon water). Bake at 375 degrees for 10 minutes. Remove to a rack to cool and crisp. Store in an airtight container.

'Best way to cook turkey' depends on cook

By MARIE BIANCO
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Barbara Kafka found the best way to cook turkey purely by accident. Crank the oven up to 500 degrees and let it roast. Two hours, no more.

"Even the people who hate me say it's the best," confided Kafka, a food consultant with fiercely held opinions. She discovered this approach when, at an elaborate photographic shoot, the centerpiece turkey sat there raw; while photographers and assistants waited, she frantically tried the incendiary approach. And it worked.

OK. That's one way to cook a turkey. And everybody knows the 350 degrees, 15-to-18-minutes-per-pound method. It's on the package, after all.

But there are other ways to approach the holiday bird, each designed to solve the basic dilemma: how to keep the breast meat moist while cooking the dark meat thoroughly.

FOR YOUR consideration, we offer from 1 to 10:

■ 1. Roasted at 325 Degrees. Rub turkey with melted butter or vegetable oil and place in lightly greased shallow roasting pan breast side up. Do not add water to the pan. Cover loosely with a sheet of heavy duty aluminum foil. Remove foil during last 30 minutes or so of cooking to allow turkey to brown. A 16- to 20-pound turkey will require from 4 to 5 hours of cooking. Add another 90 minutes of cooking time if the turkey is stuffed.

■ 2. Roasted at 500 Degrees. This is Barbara Kafka's method. Place a 15-pound turkey in a roasting pan and roast in a 500-degree oven for 2 hours. Do not truss. Secure stuffing in the neck cavity with a skewer and simply make an "X" with skewers across the body cavity, lacing it with string if necessary. Baste with a pastry brush every 15 minutes with whatever fat was used in stuffing (bacon fat, butter, etc.) or pan drippings. Deduct 15 minutes of cooking time if turkey is unstuffed. Turkey is done when thigh joint wiggles. Allow to stand 10 minutes before removing stuffing and carving.

■ 3. Roasted in an Oven Bag. Shake 1 tablespoon flour into bag first to prevent it from bursting. Slice a stalk of celery and an onion and place these in bottom of the bag; lay the turkey on top. Close the bag and make 6 half-inch slits to allow steam to escape. Place turkey in a 350-degree oven. A 16- to 20-pound turkey will take 2¾ to 3¼ hours; if stuffed, add 30 minutes. To remove turkey, carefully cut bag down center. Never use brown grocery bags for roasting turkeys because they contain chemicals.

■ 4. Cooked in a Microwave. Because microwave cooking requires that a turkey be turned several times, use one under 16 pounds. Cover wing tips and ends of drumsticks and remove cover halfway through cooking time. Place turkey in a microwave-proof baking pan, breast side down, making sure there are 3 inches of space between the turkey and the oven walls. A lot of fat slows down cooking in a microwave oven, so it must be removed as it accumulates. Turn turkey 90 degrees every 15 to 20 minutes, propping it up with glass measuring cups or similar microwave-proof utensils. For extra color, the turkey can be basted with a mixture of 2 tablespoons melted butter and 2 heaping teaspoons paprika. Since cooking time varies with different ovens, it's best to consult manufacturer's directions. As a rule of thumb, a turkey cooked on medium high heat, in a 600- to 650-watt oven, should take 8 to 9 minutes a pound. At the end of the cooking time, remove turkey from oven and check with meat thermometer. It should read 15 to 20 degrees lower than 170 degrees for white meat and 180 degrees for dark. Cover turkey with foil for 20 minutes as it continues to cook outside the oven. Oven-roasting bags work very well in microwave ovens and turkeys cooked in these bags tend to be very moist and well-browned. If your oven has a removable glass tray, use this as the baking pan.

■ 5. Roasted Upside Down. Some people swear by this method as the way to keep the breast meat juicy. However, it is difficult, since you have to turn a hot bird over to brown the top when cooking is two-thirds done. Another potential problem is that the skin has a tendency to stick to the rack (try a nonstick spray on the rack). If you believe, then go ahead; just be sure to insert a meat thermometer into the thigh and consider the bird done when it reaches 185 degrees.

■ 6. Turkey Cooked in Parts. One method of assuring perfectly cooked dark meat and breast meat is to cook the parts separately. Once cooked, the parts can be arranged on the serving platter to look like a whole turkey. Calculate weights and cooking times and place the legs and breast in the oven so they will finish cooking at the same time. Dark meat takes 25 to 30 minutes per pound; white meat 15 to 20 minutes. Arrange the thighs and drumsticks in a roasting pan and cover lightly with aluminum foil and place in a 325-degree oven. At the appropriate time, rub breast in pan juices or butter, cover lightly with aluminum foil, and add to pan. Remove all aluminum foil 30 minutes before end of cooking time.

■ 7. Turkey on the Rotisserie. Use only unstuffed turkey. Secure the neck skin with a skewer and tie back the wings so they do not flop around. Tighten the holding prongs. If the turkey does not rotate when the spit is turned, rearrange the tail and drumsticks to balance it. An 8- to 10-pound turkey will take from 3½ to 4 hours.

■ 8. Turkey on an Outdoor Grill. This method works only on a charcoal grill with a dome-like cover and adjustable air holes. Arrange briquettes in pyramid shape and ignite. When coals are ready, place a drip pan in center of fire bowl and arrange coals on both sides. Lightly grease the grate as well as the turkey. Place unstuffed turkey directly over drip pan and cover grill. Add additional charcoal every 45 minutes. An 8- to 12-pound turkey will be done in 2 to 2½ hours, depending on the weather and the wind. Aromatic wood chips that have been soaked in water for 30 minutes can be added to the fire for a smokier flavor.

■ 9. Covered with Cheesecloth. This old-fashioned method eliminates the need for frequent basting and is especially popular for very large turkeys. Before the turkey is placed in the oven, soak a length of cheesecloth with 4 ounces melted butter and drape it over the breast. Baste the bird every 30 minutes. As the bird is basted, the butter is retained by the cheesecloth and doesn't drain off. This method should not be used with cheesecloths manufactured from synthetics or containing chemicals. As the skin browns there is a tendency for the cloth to stick, so remove the cheesecloth about 30 minutes before the bird is done.

■ 10. Topped with Bacon. A Southern favorite is to cover the turkey breast with strips of bacon. As the bacon cooks, its fat bastes the turkey. This also adds a smoky flavor to the drippings, which, in turn, affects the flavor of the gravy.

THANKSGIVING TRUTHS

Fresh vs. Frozen

According to Teresa Farney, director of consumer affairs for the National Turkey Federation, today's turkeys are bred differently from the ones 10 years ago. "Because of genetic engineering, they have more breast meat today," she said. And there is no difference between fresh and frozen turkeys, Farney said, "It's a matter of preference." Fresh turkeys should be ordered from butchers well in advance so you can get the size you want. According to the USDA, all fresh turkeys, unwrapped or in Cryovac bags, should be used within two days of purchase.

The Big Thaw

Don't wait until the night before Thanksgiving to buy a frozen turkey or you may find yourself eating out. Keep the original wrapper intact and allow one day of defrosting in the refrigerator for every 5 pounds of frozen turkey. If time is short, place frozen turkey, still in original wrapper, in sink or large roasting pan and slowly run cold water over the bird, turning every hour or so, allowing 30 minutes per pound of bird. Remove plastic wrapping and take the package of giblets out of the cavity (these are used in the gravy). Rinse turkey, pat dry and sprinkle with salt. If there are any pin feathers, remove them by squeezing between your thumbs or with a tweezer.

The Stuffing Controversy

Though purists might argue the point vehemently, any dressing will taste just as good baked in a casserole alongside the bird. It will have a nice crusty top and the messy job of removing stuffing from a hot turkey is eliminated. If you decide on a dressing, do not stuff the bird until right before it goes into the oven. Fill the neck and body cavities loosely. More cooks are leaving their turkeys untrussed, securing the stuffing by tucking in slices of bread to cover the body cavity opening or using loosely crumpled aluminum foil.

To add flavor to an unstuffed turkey, place a sliced onion, a quartered apple, a stalk of celery and a carrot inside the cavity. These will give the turkey a pleasant aroma and their juices will add to the pan drippings.

Carol Owen, director of consumer service at Reynolds, has a new suggestion for the stuff-or-not-to-stuff controversy. She recommends placing the stuffing in an oven-cooking bag and placing the bag inside the turkey cavity. If 15 half-inch slits are made in both sides of the bag, she said, the turkey juices will flow into the stuffing as it cooks. "It's neater and easier to remove," she said.

The Basting Myth Shattered

Today's turkeys do not require intensive basting; the skin is so tough that no fat or liquid could possibly penetrate it. The main purpose of basting is to avoid a bird with dry skin, and basting once or twice should be sufficient. Turkeys have a natural layer of fat covering the breast meat and this fat makes them self-basting. Frequent basting actually prolongs the cooking process because every time the oven door is opened, the temperature drops 25 degrees.

Wine ideal with turkey

By NATHAN CHROMAN
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Thanksgiving turkey and the grape seem to be made for each other.

Just about any kind of wine will do, so selecting the right wine ought not to be a problem. One can be torn among the many solid dry or sweet choices that go well with turkey.

If making a choice becomes a strain, do not worry: Place all of the selections into a hat and pick one. You are not likely to go wrong with such staples as Chardonnay, Cabernet Sauvignon, Champagne, Claret, red or white Burgundy, Rhone, Pinot Noir, red or white Zinfindel, Sauvignon Blanc, Sherry and Port.

At one Thanksgiving or another, I have tried them all and have never been disappointed. Each year however, I vary the choice. Although my palate leans heavily toward Cabernet or Chardonnay, trying something challenging and dramatically different has never offended my guests nor the turkey. Indeed, it has always been appreciated.

This year, Beaujolais is the choice. That may sound risky, because it is generally light structured, soft in texture, fruity to excess and not always given to taking on the melange of Thanksgiving tastes of turkey, dressing, condiments, baked yams and a variety of vegetables.

I USUALLY abhor fruity wines for special occasion meals but the 1985 Beaujolais vintage was exceptional in producing lush wines of intense concentrated flavors and elegance, and they are excellent with turkey. The taste is soft and generous without any hard edges, and because there is so much fruit here the higher-than-usual 13 percent alcohol is no problem.

Didier Mommessin, Burgundy proprietor of Clos de Tart, is so high on the vintage that he says the alcohol is of no consequence because of the enormous quantity of natural fruit. "In many cases," he said, "chaptalization, the traditional practice of adding sugar to raise alcohol limits, was not necessary. Natural sugars were sufficiently high for the natural sugars and alcohol of the Gamay grape to melt into the structure of the wine far better than when sugar is added. 'Voila!' Superb Beaujolais wines, many of which may need to age and reach their peak between four and 10 years."

It is unusual for Beaujolais to require any aging. Occasionally, in a fine, fully ripened vintage like 1985 some wines contain ample tannin and fruit to provide the kinds of tastes and nuances resembling fine Burgundy. Interestingly, Beaujolais is entitled to the appellation of Burgundy, but in more years than not the wines are so light and distinctive, any association is meaningless. Not the case for 1985.

Do not confuse these wines with Beaujolais Nouveau, wines that are so light and delicately fruity they require immediate consumption a few months after bottling. The intense fruit flavors and textures of '85 "non nouveau" are by no means light, nor are the aromas that are more refined, elegant and with floral scents that refuse to quit.

MOST OF THE vintage successes are Cru Beaujolais, wines from specific vineyards or special growths that highlight the distinction between Gamay, the Beaujolais grape, and Pinot Noir, the Burgundy grape.

Mommessin explains, "Regardless of the quality of the wine, you can distinguish a good '85 Gamay-produced Beaujolais by likening it to the tip of the tail or the equivalent of the finish of a wine in perceiving the last flavors as it goes down. Gamay starts out in the mouth as fruity, lush with flavor, without subtlety and ends a bit shorter. But the fruit is so assertive and dominating with flavor, there appears to be be no time to even look for finish. It seems irrelevant."

Ordinarily Mommessin does not ship much Beaujolais to the United States but because these '85s turned out to be superior and with Burgundy prices going through the roof, he believes Americans will take to this wine, not as a substitute for Burgundy, but rather as a new entry for daily and special table use. I tasted seven Mommessin Beaujolais, all of which were quite good and characteristic of the vintage.

The best was Domaine de la Rochelle, Moulin-a-Vent, an exclusive of the company with a limited production of 5,800 cases. Here is assertive, strong fruit with a bit of spice in nose and taste that comes across more like a Burgundy than as a Beaujolais.

For change of pace put pumpkin in rolls

By ROSE DOSTI
Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

For a change of pace try this recipe for pumpkin biscuits, a real crowdpleaser for holiday meals.

HOT PUMPKIN BISCUITS
2 cups sifted flour
3 tablespoons sugar
4 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon ground cinnamon
⅓ cup butter, cut up
1-3 cup chopped pecans
⅓ cup half and half
2-3 cup canned or mashed cooked pumpkin

Sift together flour, sugar, baking powder, salt and cinnamon into bowl. Cut in butter until mixture looks like coarse crumbs. Stir in pecans. Combine half and half and pumpkin. Add to flour mixture. (Dough should be quite stiff.)

Turn dough onto lightly floured board and knead gently a few times. Roll out dough to ½-inch thickness. Cut with 2-inch round cutter.

Place biscuits 1 inch apart on lightly greased baking sheet. Bake at 450 degrees until golden, about 2 minutes. Serve at once with butter, if desired. Makes about 20 biscuits.

Regional American recipes are 'all the rage'

By MERLE ELLIS

Regional American specialties are "in" in "in" gastronomic circles around the country. "Blackened Redfish," for example, is all the rage, and done the way Paul Prudhomme does it, it's delicious. But there is a very significant difference between "blackened" and "burnt" that chefs outside New Orleans' French Quarter seem to have trouble with.

Another food unique to a particular part of the U.S. is "goetta."

Goetta is a German specialty found in southwest Ohio, northwest Kentucky and southeastern Indiana, the greater Cincinnati area. The dish can trace its heritage back to the days when Cincinnati was the meat processing capital of the country.

True to pork processors the world over, no part of the pig was wasted. Goetta is made from some of those parts. Pork, sometimes some beef, pork hearts, pork skins, onions and spices were cooked in pork broth with a special kind of oatmeal called "pinhead oatmeal," then chilled in loaves to be later sliced and fried to serve up for breakfast with eggs and fried apples or applesauce. It is indeed a delicious breakfast treat.

You'll find goetta, ready-made, in the meatcase of most every market in the greater Cincinnati area, but that's about the only place in the country that you will find it. The reason, it seems, is that "pinhead" oatmeal, the main ingredient aside from the pig, is processed by only one company, The Dorsel Company in Erlanger, Kentucky, just south of Cincinnati. Unlike regular oatmeal which is cooked and rolled into a flake-like product, "pinhead" oatmeal is simply washed, then cut with steel blades into a coarse meal, then cooked and, finally, mixed with cooked pork to make goetta. The texture is like that or barley; indeed, some folks put a little barley in their goetta.

If you would like to try this delicious regional American specialty but can't find it ready-made, you can make your own. Pinhead oatmeal is available by mail direct from the factory at 99 cents plus postage for a two-pound bag. Write to the Dorsel Company, Erlanger, KY 41018 for more information.

GOETTA
2 pounds pork neck bones
1 pounds beef marrow bones
3 pounds pork shoulder
3 pounds beef chuck
2 pounds pinhead oatmeal
1 pound whole barley
1 onion, chopped
2 teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon peppercorns, whole
1 bay leaf
A pinch of thyme

Soak oatmeal with barley in water to cover in a covered roaster for two hours with some salt.

Cook pork and beef in pressure cookers for 35 minutes. Let pressure go down by itself. If you don't have a pressure cooker, cook meat in a stew pot until done. To the meat before cooking, add onions, salt, peppercorns, bay leaves and a pinch of thyme.

When the meat is done, pour the juice into the roaster, along with the grain. See that the barley and oatmeal have enough water to more than cover. Bake at 250 degrees for 2-1/2 hours with cover on.

Each hour, scrape the bottom of roaster with wooden spoon. Add more liquid if needed. Grind the cooked meat and mix with the oatmeal barley mixture. Pour mixture into wax paper-lined loaf pans and chill until firm. Remove from loaf pans, cut into desired portions, wrap and freeze. Makes about 8 lbs. To serve: Slice and fry in butter or bacon fat.

Baking bread warms up kitchen and Yuletide spirit

By DIANE SAVAGE
Copley News Service

The holiday season is when I do most of my baking. Having the oven on warms up the house, and the aroma of baking breads, pies and other goodies goes a long way toward warming up the Yuletide spirit, too.

Guests seem to drop by more often during the holidays (or come to visit for a week or two), and I like to have home-baked treats on hand and ready to serve. I find them much more flavorful than the store-bought alternative, and I know they're fresh, preservative-free, and contain healthful ingredients.

Today's recipes make three different breads, all easily prepared and quick-rising. It's a good idea to make them a day in advance of serving, for easier slicing. Serve "as-is" or lightly toasted, spread with a dab of butter, cream cheese, honey, jam — or just plain, for fewer calories.

Pumpkin-Apple Quick Bread gets a burst of natural apple flavor from frozen apple juice concentrate, while Country Apricot-Nut Bread gets extra nutrition from the heaping helping of wheat germ added with the nuts and fruit. Holiday Rum Bread is spiked with dark rum for a rich flavor, and is made extra-special with small, sweet currants.

All of these breads cook in an 8-by-4-by-2-inch loaf pan, and bake in one hour or less. To freeze loaves, package tightly in foil, then wrap in plastic wrap.

These healthful breads make nice gifts, too, when wrapped in colorful cellophane and tied with a fancy ribbon.

PUMPKIN-APPLE QUICK BREAD
2 eggs
¼ cup vegetable oil
1 cup cooked, pureed pumpkin (fresh or canned)
¾ cup light brown sugar
¼ cup frozen pure apple juice concentrate, defrosted
Grated rind of one orange, plus 1 tablespoon orange juice
1 cup whole wheat flour
1 cup unbleached white flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon ground nutmeg
⅛ teaspoon ground cloves
½ cup coarsely chopped walnuts or pecans

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. In large mixing bowl beat together eggs and oil. Blnd in pumpkin, sugar, apple juice concentrate, orange rind and orange juice. Set aside.

Sift together the flours, and all remaining ingredients except nuts. Fold gently into pumpkin mixture, stirring until well blended. Fold in nuts.

Turn batter into buttered and floured 8x4x2-inch loaf pan and bake in preheated oven 50 minutes to 1 hour, or until toothpick inserted in center comes out clean. Turn onto wire rack to cool.

HOLIDAY RUM BREAD
¼ cup butter or margarine, at room temperature
3 tablespoons light brown sugar
2 eggs, lightly beaten
1¼ cups milk, or 1 cup milk and ¼ cup buttermilk
½ cup dark rum
1 teaspoon vanilla
1½ cups whole wheat flour
1½ cups unbleached white flour
1 tablespoon wheat germ
1 tablespoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup coarsely chopped walnuts or pecans
½ cup raisins or currants

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. In large mixing bowl cream together the butter and ugar. Add eggs and beat well, then blend in milk, rum and vanilla. Set aside.

In medium mixing bowl combine all remaining ingredients except nuts and raisins or currants. Toss with fork to combine.

Add to liquid ingredients, stirring just enough to moisten, then stir in remaining ingredients.

Turn batter into a buttered and floured 8x4x2-inch loaf pan. Bake in preheated oven 50 to 60 minutes, or until toothpick inserted in center comes out clean. Turn loaf onto wire rack to cool.

DEAR ABBY

Show Thanksgiving gratitude by sharing blessings

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR READERS: By popular demand, here is my traditional Thanksgiving column:

Tomorrow is Thanksgiving Day, so take a few minutes to think about what you have to be thankful for.

How's your health? Not so good? Well, thank God you've lived this long. A lot of people haven't. You're hurting? Thousands — maybe millions — are hurting more. (Have you ever visited a veterans hospital? Or a rehabilitation clinic for crippled children?)

If you awakened this morning and were able to hear the birds sing, use your vocal cords to utter human sounds, walk to the breakfast table on two good legs and read the newspaper with two good eyes, praise the Lord! A lot of people couldn't.

How's your pocketbook? Thin? Well, most of the world is a lot poorer. No pensions. No welfare. No food stamps. No Social Security. In fact, one-third of the people in the world will go to bed hungry tonight.

Are you lonely? The way to have a friend is to be one. If nobody calls you, call someone. Go out of your way to do something nice for somebody. It's a sure cure for the blues.

Are you concerned about your country's future? Hooray! Our system has been saved by such concern, concern for fair play under the law. Your country may not be a rose garden, but it also is not a patch of weeds.

Freedom rings! Look and listen. You can still worship at the church of your choice, cast a secret ballot and even criticize your government without fearing a knock on the head or a knock on the door at midnight. And if you want to live under a different system, you are free to go. There are no walls or fences — nothing to keep you here.

As a final thought, I'll repeat my Thanksgiving prayer; perhaps you will want to use it at your table tomorrow:

O, heavenly Father: We thank thee for food and remember the hungry.

We thank thee for health and remember the sick.

We thank thee for friends and remember the friendless.

We thank thee for freedom and remember the enslaved.

May these remembrances stir us to service,

That thy gifts to us may be used for others. Amen.

Have a wonderful Thanksgiving, and may God bless you and yours. Love, ABBY

An afterthought: Want an instant high? The surest cure for the post-holiday blues is to do something nice for someone. Why not call someone who lives alone and invite him (or her) over for dinner?

Better yet, call and say, "I'm coming to get you, and I'll see that you get home." (Many older people don't drive, and those who do don't like to go out alone after dark.)

Try it. And let me know the results.

P.S. Special greetings to those of you in the military who wrote from remote corners of the world to tell me that you are using my Thanksgiving prayer on this Thanksgiving Day.

Simple turkey carving technique yields neat portions

By PIERRE FRANEY
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The sheer size of a Thanksgiving turkey allows even the most maladroit carver to rescue enough meat for the family, even if the carcass left behind looks as if it has been picked over by a pack of wolves. The simple carving technique described below yields neat portions with minimal struggle.

But first, a word about roasting. Dryness is a turkey's weak point, so basting is critical. My method involves preheating an oven to 425 degrees and rubbing the bird all over with oil, salt and pepper. Toss two large whole onions, peeled, in the roasting pan with the turkey and cook about 30 minutes or until the skin is lightly browned. Reduce the heat to 350 degrees, baste well and cover the turkey loosely with aluminum foil. Baste every 15 minutes.

About 20 minutes before the turkey is cooked — and this, of course, depends on its size — add some chicken or turkey stock to the pan. Continue roasting until the internal temperature measured with a meat thermometer reaches 160 degrees. Let the turkey rest for 20 to 30 minutes before carving.

STEP 1

Place the turkey breast side up on a cutting surface. Pull the legs away from the body and slice through the hip joint to loosen without separating entirely.

STEP 2

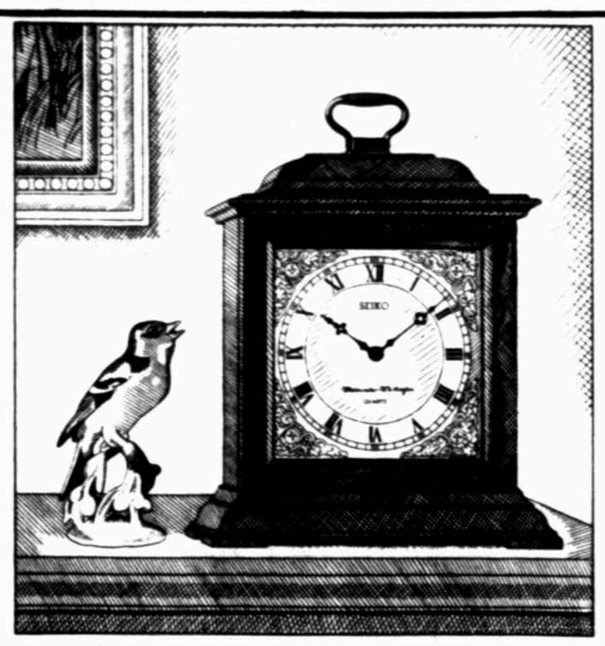

Make a deep horizontal incision in the breast meat just above the wing joint and running all the way to the breast bone.

STEP 3

Slice away thin portions of breast meat vertically (and slightly on a bias), as illustrated, until all the meat is removed. Repeat with the other side of the turkey.

STEP 4

Remove the legs. Sever the thigh from the drumstick at the joint. Slice as much meat as possible from the thighs. Serve the drumsticks whole.

WHAT'S COOKING

Kitchen detail is family effort

The Patton family — George and Anita and their sons Brandon, 13, and Brett, 10 — were named Midland's 1986 Family of the Year last week.

"I don't know what caused us to win," said Mrs. Patton. "We're a family like any other family in Midland — a carpooling mother and a dad who works."

They also are a busy family. Mrs. Patton is a first-grade teacher at Emerson Elementary School and her husband is an attorney. The whole family is involved in many community, school and church functions.

Of course, all these combined activities leaves little time for cooking, but Mrs. Patton confides that she doesn't "microwave as much as a lot of people do, partly because I haven't had a microwave that long, and partly because I learned (to cook) on the oven.

"I do a lot of quick things in the crock pot before I leave ... that are ready to eat when we come home."

Mrs. Patton isn't the only cook in her family. "The kids love to cook. They really help out in the kitchen. They make their own breakfasts and all pitch in to help out at night. That's when this family business really comes in — the kitchen needs to be bigger."

Some of the family's favorite recipes are:

American's adding more spice to diet

By STEPHEN FRANK
Hearst News Service

With record amounts of herbs and spices being stirred and sprinkled into dishes from breakfast to dinner, the American diet is growing spicier. Americans last year consumed more than 636 million pounds of fragrant leaves, flavorful seeds, roots, barks and tropical fruits in quest of a more savory diet.

U.S. spice use last year hit an all-time high, according to figures from the American Spice Trade Association in Englewood Cliffs, N.J. The 636 million pounds consumed was a third more spice than was used 10 years ago.

Hot spices like chili peppers, black and white pepper and ginger are also the hottest sellers. But spices of all kinds are being used in greater measure. Songwriters may sing of parsley, sage, rosemary and thyme, but the American palate is also tingling to the taste of cinammon, nutmeg, bay leaf, basil, tarragon, anise, mustard, sesame, saffron, cloves, chives, oregano, coriander, cumin and fennel.

In the past 10 years, annual U.S. consumption of pepper, America's most popular spice, increased by 19 million pounds. In the same period, basil use jumped by 3.5 million pounds, enough to season an additional 14 billion servings of spaghetti. Oregano use is up by 2.8 million pounds. And so much additional cinammon is being sprinkled — 16 million pounds — it could flavor 102 billion slices of apple pie.

This taste revolution is reflected in the growing popularity of pungent ethnic cuisines, such as Szechwan, Mexican, Cajun, Indian and Thai foods. Cajun, a style of cooking native to Louisiana and popularized by New Orleans chef Paul Prudhomme, is in the fiery forefront of the taste for torrid foods. At the heart of Cajun and Creole cooking is a blend of cayenne, black and white peppers, added to the food at different times in its preparation.

People with a taste for milder flavorings also are creating a booming herb market. The rising popularity of these seasonings has followed the trend toward lighter food — fish and poultry — which calls for delicately flavored sauces.

Other dietary changes are turning people toward the spice shelf as well. Among them are the growing popularity of pasta dishes and the desire of many people to eat heart-healthy, low-sodium diets. Herbs are being used as alternatives to salt by these dieters. Another factor is the increased consumption of prepared foods — the Lean Cuisines and Le Menus — which use more spices than home cooking.

The fastest growing segment of the spice market is the industrial and food-service sectors — not supermarket sales. In the 1950s, about 60 percent of all the spices sold in America were sold to consumers. Today that spice shelf represents only 40 percent of total volume, according to the spice trade association.

While it may be improving the flavor of our food, the taste for spice is doing little to enhance our balance of payments deficit. Two-thirds of the spice consumed is imported. Domestically produced spices include chili peppers, paprika and mustard seeds. Fine herbs such as parsley, tarragon, dill and basil are grown commercially in California, as well as in many backyard gardens.

Tropical spices, though, must be imported because many will only grow within 15 degrees latitude from the equator, a geographic fact that led to a trade in spices from ancient times.

In earliest days, herbs and spices were used not so much to season foods as for religious ritual. Spices were used as incense, for embalming and for sacrificial and funeral rites. Herbs and spices also have been in great demand as medicines, perfumes and charms.

The Phoenicians and Arabs were among the first to exploit the economic possibilities of the spice trade. High in value and low in weight, spices could be transported and sold at great profit. Later, the Venetians, Portuguese, Spaniards, Dutch and English entered the trade with Eastern spice lands as demand for spices kept increasing throughout the Mediterranean and Europe. America entered the spice trade in the late 1700s.

Historically, the term "spice" applied only to certain fruits, roots or barks grown in the tropics. Today, the spice industry groups together not only those from hot countries but some 50 other aromatics — herbs, seeds, dehydrated seasoning vegetables and salts — that are being added to everything from omelets to stews.

Book offers suggestions for beginning spice users

By STEPHEN FRANK
Hearst News Service

Spices may smack of the exotic tropics, where many of the roots, barks and fruits are grown. But there is no great mystery about their use. Here are some suggestions Lillie M. Stuckey, co-author of "The Spice Cookbook," offers to the beginning spice user. The guidelines are excerpted from the entry she wrote on Herbs and Spices in the "Encyclopedia Americana."

■ The potency of common spices varies greatly. Red pepper and saffron are examples of strong spices. Start by using one-eighth teaspoon of these for each four servings. It is always easy to add more.

■ Chive, parsley and chervil are "good mixers" with many foods. — Herbs that are strong enough for accent include basil, dill, mint, marjoram, tarragon and thyme.

■ Pungent herbs such as rosemary, sage, oregano and winter savory should be used with discretion.

■ Whole spices are ideal in foods that require long cooking or in clear liquids that might be colored by the product in ground form. Allow 20-30 minutes of cooking time to release the aroma of whole spices, and then remove the spices before serving.

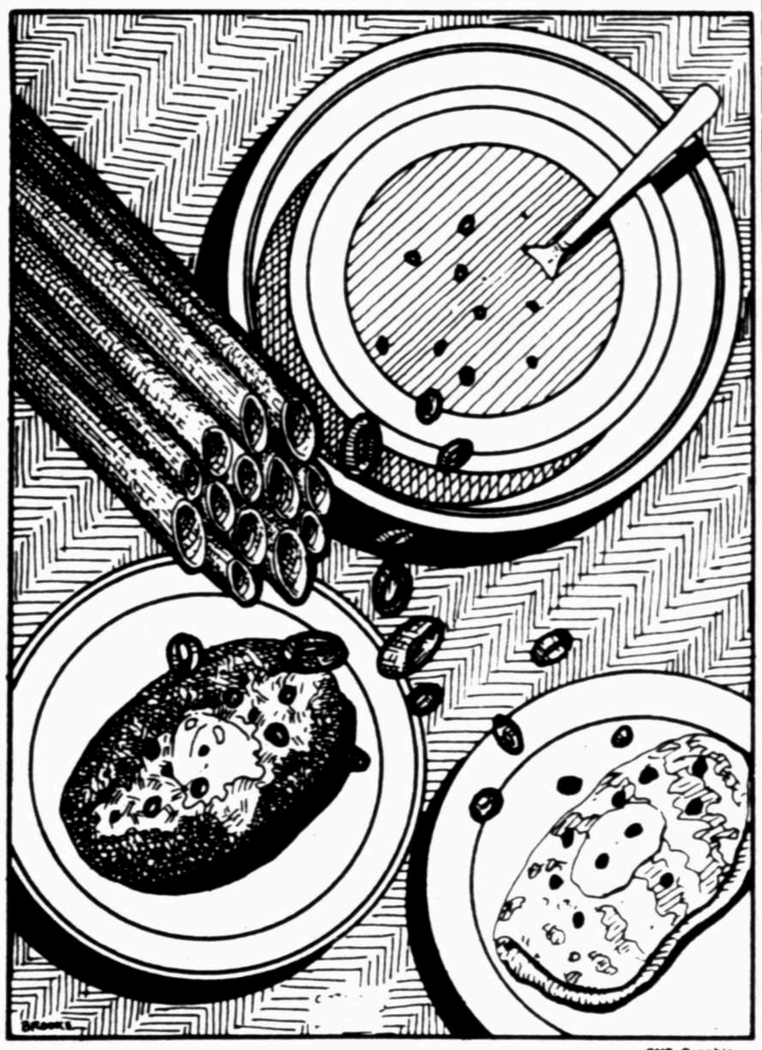

■ Use ground spices in quick-cook foods, baked goods, desserts and convenience foods.

■ Let a bay leaf cook 15-20 minutes, but whenever possible, herbs should be added during the last 10 minutes of cooking time.

■ If dehydrated vegetable flakes are to be sauteed or used raw in an uncooked mixture, they should be rehydrated. Add an equal amount of water and let them stand 5-10 minutes.

Chives easy way to add zest to recipes

By PAUL BENSEN
Copley News Service

For thousands of years cooks have used chives to flavor almost every kind of dish. From prehistoric days to the present, this member of the onion family has provided busy chefs with an easy way to add zest to a variety of recipes.

In the kitchen, chives are a versatile and lively helper. They are wonderful with soups, eggs, vegetables, meats and salads. Their fresh, distinctive flavor combines the sweetness of young onions with a very mild hint of garlic.

In France, chives are most often found in egg dishes and sauces. The Japanese use them as a colorful garnish for clear soups. In the Middle East chives are often included in spicy stews. Russian cooks add them to beet dishes and lamb.

Many large supermarkets carry chives during the spring and summer, but you may have to visit an herb store or specialty grocer to find them during other seasons. The best way to be sure of a ready supply of fresh chives, of course, is to grow your own. They are very easy to raise, and a pot of chives in a sunny window adds a cheerful touch to your kitchen all year round.

Almost every garden center carries chive seeds, but you may want to buy potted plants and then transplant them, since it takes three weeks or more for the seeds to germinate. Chives need a light soil — half sand and half loam is ideal — and plenty of water and direct sunlight.

When purple blossoms first appear on your plants, clip them off to keep the greens coming. The blossoms, which have a garliclike flavor, make a beautiful garnish for clear soups.

Generally, when you're cooking with chives, they should be added close to the end of the cooking time. If you're mixing chives with cheeses or other dairy products they should not be added to the mixture until shortly before serving, since their flavor grows stronger the longer they are left in.

In today's recipe for Chive and Crabmeat Omelets with Hollandaise, the chives blended excellently with the flavors of the eggs, crabmeat and cheese. I used stone crab and Danish Havarti cheese, but frozen crabmeat and another mild-flavored cheese can be substituted with very good results.

Chive Cheese Puffs are an elegant hors d'oeuvre that is surprisingly easy to prepare. The pastry is the same kind you'd use for cream puffs or eclairs, and the filling combines cream cheese, cream and chives in a light, fluffy mixture.

Blue Cheese and Chive Salad Dressing is one of my very favorite ways to top a great salad.

In an emergency, freeze-dried chopped chives, available in almost every supermarket, can be substituted for fresh chives in any of today's recipes. If you use dried chives, reduce the volume by about half.

CHIVE CHEESE PUFFS
1 pound cream cheese
¼ cup heavy cream
½ cup chopped fresh chives, or more to taste
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

Whip cream cheese, adding cream little at a time, until light, fluffy mixture is formed (you may not need all the cream). Add chopped chives and salt and pepper to taste.

Cut cocktail puffs (recipe follows) in half, and fill each half with chive-/cream cheese mixture.

CREAM PUFF PASTRY
½ cup water
¼ cup butter
¼ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon sugar
½ cup flour
2 large eggs

In small saucepan, boil water and stir in butter, salt and sugar. Add flourall at once and cook over low heat, beating constantly, until ingredients are thoroughly combined and mixture leaves sides of saucepan and forms a ball. Remove from heat and beat in 2 large eggs, one at a time, until thoroughly mixed.

Grease baking sheet. Drop a teaspoonful of pastry mixture at a time onto it, leaving room for the puffs to expand. Bake in a 425 degree oven for 15 minutes, then reduce heat to 375 degrees and bake until puffs are golden brown and fully expanded. If they begin to brown too rapidly, cover with a piece of paper.

Makes about 25 cocktail puffs.

CHIVE AND CRABMEAT OMELETS
5 large eggs, well beaten
Meat from 2 medium or large stone crab claws, shredded; OR 2-3 ounces crabmeat, shredded
3 tablespoons freshly cut chives, finely chopped
4 ounces Danish Havarti cheese, grated
Hollandaise sauce sufficient to top omelets (optional)

In small frying pan, heat ½ tablespoon butter over medium heat. When butter starts to bubble, add crabmeat and saute, stirring with fork, for 30 seconds or so. Remove from heat and set aside.

Divide beaten eggs equally between two small bowls. In medium-size non-stick frying pan or omelet pan, melt ½ tablespoon butter. Pour in one portion of eggs and cook over medium-high heat, tipping pan from side to side frequently, so that uncooked egg runs over edge of cooked egg. When eggs are almost cooked, add half of grated cheese, sprinkle over it half the crabmeat and garnish with half the chives. Cover, reduce heat and allow cheese to melt. Slide omelet onto plate and fold in half. Either serve immediately or remove to a preheated 200 degree oven while the second omelet is cooking.

Top with Hollandaise sauce (optional) just before serving.

Makes 2 omelets.

Smaller families enjoy traditional Thanksgiving feast, too

By BETSY BALSLEY
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Food trends and fads come and go, but there is one meal a year that stays the same no matter what. That, of course, is Thanksgiving dinner. The thought of Thanksgiving without turkey and its obligatory accompaniments is ... well ... unthinkable to most of us.

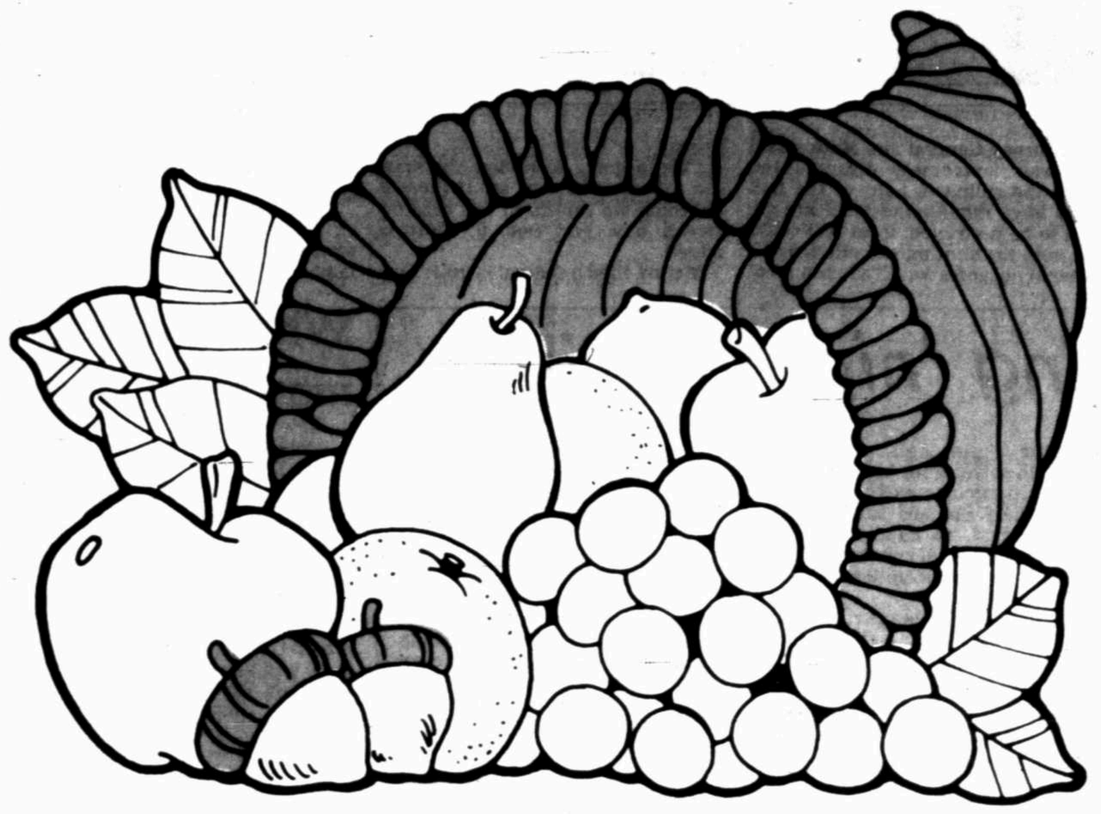

Some things have changed, however. When families were larger and relatives lived nearby, it was easy to go all out with an elaborate holiday menu. Those were the days when the real difficulty lay in how to seat everybody, not how to cope with the leftovers.

But today's smaller, less close-knit families often view a traditional Thanksgiving meal less enthusiastically. It is a heartwarming meal the first time around, but later on regrets set in. Will that bird never end?

So how can one celebrate as always, but not face endless leftovers?

One happy solution is to gather a group of friends and acquaintances who are in the same situation and band together for a smashing potluck supper. Not only will the cooking chores be split among many, but any leftovers can be parceled out among those attending.

With such a Thanksgiving celebration in mind, here are some traditional holiday recipes, plus a few new favorites that would enhance any potluck feast. Some of these recipes are simple, some more complicated. But all are wonderful and all will fit into a festive menu designed to celebrate this very special American holiday.

OYSTER-SPINACH BISQUE

¼ cup finely chopped salt pork
½ cup minced onion
1 clove garlic, minced
3 tablespoons butter
4 (8-ounce) jars oysters with liquor
5½ cups (about) chicken broth, preferably homemade
1 (8-ounce) bottle clam juice
1 stalk lemon grass, cut into 3 sections
1 (10-ounce) package frozen chopped spinach, thawed
3 cups whipping cream
1 tablespoon flour
Salt, white pepper
¼ cup dry Sherry
Red caviar
Lemon wedges
Hot pepper sauce

Saute salt pork in large saucepan until lightly browned. Add onion, garlic and 2 tablespoons butter. Continue to saute until onion is tender.

Drain oysters into measuring cup. Add enough chicken broth to oyster liquor to measure 6 cups. Set aside oysters, cutting up any large pieces.

Add broth mixture to saucepan with clam juice and lemon grass. Cover and simmer 20 minutes. Add spinach and continue simmering 5 minutes. Remove lemon grass. Puree soup in batches in blender or food processor. Return to pot. Stir in 1 cup whipping cream.

Melt remaining 1 tablespoon butter and blend in flour. Add to bisque. Bring to boil, stirring until slightly thickened. Add reserved oysters. Simmer just until oysters begin to curl, about 2 to 3 minutes. Season to taste with salt and white pepper. Stir in Sherry. Pour into serving tureen. Serve with remaining 2 cups cream, heated, for each guest to add to bowl of bisque, if desired. Serve with caviar, lemon wedges and hot pepper sauce. Makes about 10 cups.

ROAST TURKEY WITH SAGE DRESSING

Salt, pepper
Sage dressing
Melted butter
Sage leaves
Gravy

Remove neck and giblets from turkey. Cook neck and giblets in water to cover to make broth for gravy.

Rinse turkey and pat dry. Rub salt and pepper into neck and body cavities and onto skin surface. Lightly spoon some sage dressing into neck cavity, then skewer neck skin to back. Stuff body cavity with some remaining dressing and secure drumsticks with string. Twist wings akimbo under turkey, if desired, or secure to body with wood picks.

Place turkey, breast side up, on rack in roasting pan. Brush with melted butter. Insert meat thermometer into thick part of thigh. Point should not touch bone. Roast at 325 degrees until meat thermometer registers 175 degrees or until thick part of drumstick feels tender when pressed with thumb and forefinger or until drumstick and thigh move easily.

Remove turkey from roasting pan onto serving platter and garnish with sage leaves or as desired. Pass Gravy on side.

Sage Dressing:
1 cup butter
1 cup chopped celery
1 cup chopped onions
2 (12-ounce) packages seasoned dressing
1 (8-ounce) can water chestnuts, drained
Chicken broth
2 bunches sage, about ½ cup leaves, chopped
Salt, pepper

Melt butter in large saucepan. Saute celery and onions until tender-crisp. Add seasoned dressing, water chestnuts and enough chicken broth to moisten mixture. Add sage and season to taste with salt and pepper.

Remove from heat and use to stuff turkey. Place any remaining dressing in baking dish and bake at 300 degrees during last 30 minutes of roasting turkey. Makes about 8 cups.

Gravy:
Reserved giblets and broth
Drippings from roast turkey
½ cup flour
¼ cup Sherry
Salt, pepper

Remove giblets (and turkey neck, if used) from broth and chop giblets. Extract any meat from neck and discard bones. Set giblets and neck meat aside.

Strain broth through 2 thicknesses of cheesecloth in colander. Set aside.

Drain fat from turkey roasting pan, reserving about ½ cup fat and brown drippings. Pour reserved fat and drippings into large skillet, scraping roasting pan to loosen drippings.

Place skillet over medium heat and cook until fat is hot. Add flour and cook, stirring constantly, until flour is well-browned and all lumps have disappeared.

Add enough water to reserved broth to make 4 cups. Stir into flour mixture. Cook, stirring, until mixture is smooth and thickened. Stir in Sherry and season to taste with salt and pepper. Boil mixture 1 to 2 minutes, then stir in giblets. Makes about 1 quart gravy.

WALNUT-PUMPKIN SQUARES

1 cup flour
¼ cup brown sugar, packed
⅓ cup butter or margarine
½ cup walnuts, chopped medium fine
1 (3-ounce) package cream cheese, softened
1 egg
1 (1-pound) can pumpkin
1 (14-ounce) can sweetened condensed milk
1 teaspoon pumpkin pie spice
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup hot water
Whipped cream, optional

Combine flour and brown sugar. Cut in butter until mixture resembles coarse meal. Add walnuts.

Press walnut mixture in firm, even layer over bottom of 10x6-inch baking dish. Bake at 350 degrees about 20 minutes or until lightly browned.

Beat cream cheese until creamy. Beat in egg. Add pumpkin, condensed milk, pumpkin pie spice and salt. Beat until smooth.

Immediately stir in hot water to blend. Pour over baked crust and return to 350-degree oven. Bake about 50 to 60 minutes or until filling is barely set in center. Cool before cutting into squares. Garnish with dollop of whipped cream. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

4 large red potatoes, quartered, then cut in halves

6 eggs, beaten
½ cup sweet white wine
6 cloves garlic, sliced
1 large onion, sliced
Garlic salt
Onion salt
Freshly ground pepper
Hot pepper sauce
¼ cup butter, melted

Cook bacon until crisp in large skillet. Cut into 1-inch pieces. Rinse mushrooms and potatoes. (Potatoes may be peeled or unpeeled.)

In large mixing bowl, combine bacon, mushrooms, potatoes, peas, eggs, wine, garlic and onion. Season to taste with garlic salt, onion salt, pepper and hot pepper sauce. Add butter.

Turn mixture into buttered 13x9-inch baking dish and cover tightly with foil. Bake at 350 degrees about 1 hour. Halfway through baking, stir contents. Makes about 6 to 8 servings.

PINK ARCTIC FREEZE

2 (3-ounce) packages cream cheese
2 tablespoons mayonnaise
2 tablespoons sugar
1 (1-pound) can whole cranberry sauce
1 (9-ounce) can crushed pineapple or pineapple tidbits, drained
½ cup chopped walnuts
1 cup whipping cream, whipped
Leaf lettuce

Soften cream cheese. Blend in mayonnaise and sugar. Add cranberry sauce, pineapple and walnuts. Fold in whipped cream. Pour into 8½x4½-inch loaf pan. Freeze until firm, 6 hours or overnight. To serve, let stand at room temperature 15 minutes. Slice and serve over leaf lettuce. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

HOLIDAY PANCIT

¼ cup vegetable oil
4 cloves garlic, crushed
1 small onion, chopped
1 cup thinly sliced pork
3 tablespoons soy sauce
1 (1-ounce) package shiitake mushrooms, soaked and cut up
1 cup diagonally sliced celery
1 carrot, peeled and cut in thin round slices
10 to 15 Chinese pea pods
1 cup chopped bok choy
4 ounces medium to large shrimp, peeled and deveined
3 cups chicken broth
1 (8-ounce) package Canton or chuka soba noodles
Salt, pepper
Sesame oil
Lemon wedges
Cabbage

Heat vegetable oil in large wok or deep skillet. Saute garlic until lightly golden. Remove garlic and reserve.

Add onion to wok and saute until tender-crisp. Add pork and soy sauce. Stir-fry until pork is tender and cooked, 10 to 15 minutes. Add shiitake and cook 5 minutes.

Stir in celery and carrots. Stir-fry 3 minutes. Add pea pods and bok choy and stir-fry another 3 minutes. Add shrimp and chicken broth and bring to quick boil (do not overcook shrimp). Drain shrimp-vegetable mixture and reserve.

Return broth to wok. Bring to boil over medium heat. Drop in noodles and simmer 5 minutes or until noodles are tender but firm, stirring only occasionally so they do not get mushy. Broth should be absorbed, depending on consistency desired. Add salt and pepper to taste.

Reserve ⅓ of shrimp mixture for topping. Gently fold remaining mixture into noodles. Turn onto cabbage-lined platter, topped with reserved shrimp mixture and garlic. Serve with sesame oil and lemon wedges on side. Makes 6 servings.

Note: If serving immediately, 2 tablespoons cornstarch dissolved in 2 tablespoons water may be added to 1 cup seasoned chicken broth and added at last minute to hot noodles.

Holiday desserts lower-calorie

By TONI TIPTON
Los Angeles Times-

Deprivation is often the term used by waistline watchers to describe their holiday sweets-eating strategy. The obvious alternative is to substitute prepared light, low-calorie and sugar-free products on the buffet table.

There is still hope, however, for those who want to indulge but not bulge from gooey and chocolatey holiday desserts this Thanksgiving by substituting less-caloric ingredients for those with higher fat content.

We offer here some lower-calorie desserts that tally a lot less than their traditional counterparts, although a range of 200 to 300 calories per serving may still seem high to some.

Some holiday hints: Use milk and evaporated skim milk in place of cream, yogurt, low-fat cottage cheese and part-skim ricotta for sour cream, ice cream, whipped cream and cream cheese; fruit purees and fruit-juice concentrates to replace some sugar; fresh fruit and fruit canned in unsweetened juice instead of fruit canned in heavy syrup; beaten egg whites for whipped cream; small amounts of liqueurs and extra vanilla to enhance flavor without adding sugar or calories; and crumb crusts instead of higher-fat pastry crusts.

PUMPKIN DESSERT SQUARES

2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
2 cups water
1 cup canned pumpkin
½ cup sugar
2 eggs, lightly beaten
1 teaspoon pumpkin pie spice
¼ teaspoon salt
⅔ cup nonfat dry milk powder
1 cup orange juice
1 teaspoon vanilla
9 thin slices orange

Soften gelatin in 1 cup water in medium saucepan. Stir over low heat until dissolved. Stir in pumpkin, sugar, eggs, spice and salt. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until mixture just comes to boil.

Dissolve dry milk in remaining 1 cup water. Stir dissolved milk, orange juice and vanilla into pumpkin mixture. Chill until mixture mounds from spoon. Beat 1 to 2 minutes or until light and smooth. Spray 8-inch square pan with non-stick coating spray and pour mixture into pan. Chill until set. Cut into 9 squares. Garnish with thin slice of orange. Makes 9 servings.

Note: Nutrient data does not include orange slices.

Variation: Serve pumpkin squares with packaged gingersnaps, chocolate-covered graham crackers or 2 tablespoons sweetened whipped cream. Add 17 additional calories per gingersnap, 62 per graham cracker and 20 for dollop of whipped cream.

Pat in even layer on bottom and up sides of greased 10-inch tart pan with removable bottom. Set on baking sheet. Bake at 325 degrees 15 minutes. Crust may shrink during baking.

Reserve ½ cup fruit cocktail for garnish. Spoon remaining fruit cocktail into bottom of hot shell. Beat cream cheese with remaining ¼ cup sugar, remaining 2 eggs, milk, vanilla and almond extract. Forest Service gets OK to cut, burn trees in national forest

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The U.S. Forest Service has received the go-ahead to continue cutting and burning trees in the Sam Houston National Forest.

A U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals panel Tuesday overturned a ruling that blocked the clearing.

Last Thursday, 5th Circuit Judge Jerre S. Williams of Austin agreed to halt the controversial razing of 2,500 acres in the Four Notch Area after the Texas attorney general's office argued the tree-cutting would cause irreparable environmental damage.

The stay issued by Williams, however, was to be in effect only until a three-judge panel of the 5th Circuit could review the case.

The panel composed of judges Henry Politz of Shreveport, La., Edith Jones of Houston and Williams issued a nine-page ruling Tuesday saying the forest service had taken steps to protect endangered species.

"There is no showing that the Forest Service's motive is anything other than the rehabilitation of the area to an effective pine forest," the ruling said.

"It is hard to conclude that the stay would serve the public interest when the purpose of the reforestation is to improve the forest rather than replace it with buildings, industry, highways, or the like," it said.

STATE

Attorney General Jim Mattox said he was "extremely disappointed with the ruling in light of the fact that huge numbers of trees are going to be destroyed, trees that could be used for hunting and other recreational purposes for all the people of Texas.

"We're going to review the opinion to determine and see if there is anything we can do in this case between now and Dec. 9," Mattox added.

Mattox filed a federal lawsuit Nov. 13 against the forest service, calling for a halt to the destruction of the pine beetle-infested forest near Huntsville.

"The forest service is now free to go back to work" razing trees in its program to stop the spread of pine beetle infestation, forest service spokesman Hal Glassman said.

Forest service officials have been clearing the area with a 52-ton tree crusher.

"While we never doubted for a moment that we are practicing the most modern forestry techniques, the courts have now agreed with what we're doing twice in a week," Glassman said.

"Perhaps now there will be some rethinking by the state attorney general to pursue this matter at the taxpayers' expense," he added.

The approach for dealing with the problem adopted by the forest service calls for knocking down the remaining trees, destroying them in controlled fires and planting new trees in their places.

Environmentalists have staged protests to block the program, saying it would endanger certain wildlife by destroying the habitat.

Computerized voting 'nightmarish'

By DAVID PLESA
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Punched-card voting systems commonly used in Texas "present great dangers" because they are susceptible to fraud and mistakes, a computer expert for the state of Pennsylvania testified Tuesday.

"The problems are of nightmarish proportions," said Michael Shamos, who since 1980 has served as an examiner of electronic voting systems for the Pennsylvania Bureau of Elections.

"The possibility of manipulation on such a grand scale does not exist either with paper ballots or with lever machines," Shamos told a public hearing of the House Committee on Elections.

The committee met to hear testimony on what safeguards are necessary to prevent fraud and mistakes when computers are used to gather and tabulate votes in an election.

"I believe (computers) can be efficient and good for the election process, but I am very concerned that we have not taken a close enough look at computer security and integrity," said Rep. Clint Hackney, D-Houston and chairman of the committee.

Although punched-card voting systems provide a permanent physical record of each cast ballot and a method to tabulate votes very rapidly — at speeds approaching 2,000 cards per minute — the system's negative aspects outweigh the positive, Shamos said. These include:

— Overvote, undervote potential: A voter, once he has punched the ballot card with the metal stylus, cannot determine whether he has cast a complete ballot or whether he has voted for more candidates than he is entitled, resulting in an invalid ballot and uncounted votes.

— Booth/ballot tampering: "It is a straightforward matter" to alter a punched-card voting booth so votes for one candidate or a particular party will go to another, Shamos said. Ballots also must be handled, stored, transported and counted, providing many opportunities for tampering.

— Computer tampering: Computers can be manipulated by radio or wire or by substituting a memory component that can be hidden in a shirt pocket. The computer can be programmed to await the receipt of a special ballot card, which can alter election counters after it is retrieved from the ballot box.

"The possibilities for this type of tampering are endless, and virtually no detection is possible once tabulation has been completed," Shamos said.

— Organized election fixing: When one company supplies unauditable computer software from one central location, there exists the possibility of large-scale tampering with elections.

To guard against fraud and mistakes, Shamos recommended that lawmakers pass a strict statute that spells out specific requirements a computer system must meet before it can be used in an election.

He also recommended performing a thorough audit of the computer system and its manufacturer and preventing a company that supplies voting equipment to also supply the programs used to count votes.

Lawmakers must carefully track advances in computer technology and alter legislation accordingly to keep security up to date, he said. Stiffer regulations for ballot handling and tougher laws for computer tampering also are needed, he said.

To further prevent fraud, Shamos recommended that the state use more than one computer system supplied by different sources to independently count ballots.

White's opposition to college mergers excludes two possibles

By MICHAEL HOLMES

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White, while reiterating general opposition to proposed state college mergers, hints that a plan to combine two South Texas schools might have merit.

White flatly rejected Tuesday proposals for mergers of Texas Woman's University and North Texas State and between the University of Houston-Downtown and Texas Southern University.

But he sounded less emphatic about a suggested merger of Corpus Christi State University and Texas A&I at Kingsville. Some boosters of the plan say it could increase the number of doctoral programs available to South Texas students.

"I do not support any of those mergers. I would just look very cautiously at the one in South Texas because there is the prospect of some enhancement and strengthening of programs," White told news reporters.

"The other prospects (TWU-North Texas and Houston-TSU), I think, would diminish educational quality. That one (Corpus Christi-A&I) has some potential — depending on how it's done," White said.

The three mergers are being considered by the Select Committee on Higher Education, which is scheduled to vote on recommendations next month.

White said any merger proposal must be analyzed carefully.

"The way in which you strengthen those institutions is very important," he said.

"You have to make very wise choices, and certainly that expansion of doctoral programs is something that could be done. I'm just trying to make clear that some of these mergers are not, I think, well thought out."

White said merging North Texas State with Texas Woman's University would reduce alumni support for both schools.

"People that went to those schools are proud of their schools and are going to be working to support those institutions. I think that you diminish that support when you talk merger," he said.

"What do you think you'd do to the alumni support if you merged the University of Texas and (Texas) A&M? That tells you what I'm talking about."

On another subject, the governor said he hasn't made a final decision on a career after he leaves office in January.

"I've been talking to a whole bunch of people and I'm very excited about the prospects," he said. "I've had several opportunities to do that (stay in Austin) and I'm sure I'll have some responsibilities here, but I'm not certain where we'll be on a permanent basis."

Refugee shelter between rock, hard place

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — The Brownsville Diocese of the Roman Catholic Church has until Dec. 5 to move a shelter for Central American refugees out of San Benito but won't know until Dec. 8 if it can continue construction at a new site near Brownsville.

Diocesan official Hernan Gonzalez says he doesn't know what steps the church will now take to find a home for Casa Oscar Romero.

"I'm disappointed the commission took this action," Gonzalez said Tuesday after Cameron County commissioners voted 4-0 to suspend building permits for five mobile homes and a restroom on six acres east of Brownsville.

Several elderly people wearing stickers that said "Casa Romero, no!" crowded around Gonzalez after the meeting, accusing the church of "admitting criminals" and bringing in illegal aliens that the government was spending millions of dollars trying to keep out of the country.

The commission agreed to reconsider the permits at a Dec. 8 meeting but told diocesan officials to suspend construction until then.

More than 200 people, many of them Winter Texans who live in mobile homes near the diocese's land, attended Tuesday's meeting to protest the shelter.

Commissioner D.J. Lerma said Bishop John Fitzpatrick of the Brownsville diocese was guilty of breaking one of the Ten Commandments: "Thou shall not steal."

"He's robbing these (mobile home) owners of money. They're losing money. The value of their property will come down if this is established down there," Lerma said. "He should be nice to the local people, not the illegal aliens."

Gonzalez said he had no comment on whether the diocese would consider another location.

Reynaldo Garza Jr., an attorney representing the diocese, said he questioned whether the commission has the authority to suspend building permits.

"Our biggest fear is the illegal aliens coming into the neighborhood. There are no controls on them at all," said Lee Zieger, who represented the mobile home owners before the commission. "Once you've dealt with a bad one, another one will be there the next day."

San Benito City Manager Demetrio Lucio, who negotiated an agreement between the city and the diocese to move the shelter by Dec. 5, said he believed the diocese would fulfill its obligation to meet the deadline. The shelter was asked to leave nearby San Benito because of friction between the refugees and residents of the neighborhood where it is located.

The diocese had previously agreed to close the shelter in San Benito, and on Oct. 30 chartered five buses to transport 523 aliens from Central and South America to the Immigration and Naturalizaion Service in Harlingen. Of that number, 222 were taken to a federal detention center west of Port Isabel and the others either posted bond or were released.

But illegal aliens seeking refuge continued to come to the shelter, and it still houses aliens.

Former county judge escapes prison term, faces DWI charges

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Former Duval County Judge Archer Parr, who escaped a prison term for violating his probation, still faces drunken driving charges in Nueces County.

State District Judge Darrell Hester ruled Tuesday that Parr would remain on probation although he was charged with driving while intoxicated.

Parr told the court he had several health problems and promised to seek treatment for what he described as a severe drinking problem.

"I don't think you'd live through another penitentiary term," Hester told Parr, 60, at the probation revocation hearing in Cameron County.

"You've made a lot of promises this morning and a lot of resolutions, and we'll see how you've kept them at the end of six months," Hester told Parr.

Hester ordered Parr to return to his court for another hearing in May.

Cameron Count prosecutor Rick Lara said Parr faced up to 10 years in prison for the probation violation.

Parr had served eight years of a 10-year probated sentence on 1978 felony charges of stealing equipment and services from Duval County. He was stopped Sept. 1 and charged with DWI.

The former judge was arrested by Texas Rangers at his home in Alice earlier this month on charges he violated his probation by being arrested on the DWI charge. Hester ordered Parr be held without bond in Cameron County pending the hearing Tuesday.

The DWI charge is pending in Nueces County District Court, said Lara, who argued that Parr be kept on strict probation.

"I know I've got to have help," Parr testified. "If I'm going to survive as a human being I know I've got to. I don't have any choice in the matter."

Parr was given a deferred adjudication on the 1978 charges, meaning that at the end of his 10-year probated term Hester will determine whether to drop the charges, Lara said.

Parr said he realized he had a drinking problem in August but felt he couldn't do anything about it at the time.

"I have learned my lesson," he said. After 19 days in the Cameron County Jail, Parr said he realized "what a doggone fool I've been. I thought drinking would solve my problems but it hasn't solved a doggone one of them."

Prior to the 1978 charges, Parr had served three years of a 10-year prison sentence after being convicted of lying to a federal grand jury.

Hester was appointed to hear a number of cases involving political corruption in Duval County.

STATE IN BRIEF

CableVision's chief named president, makes pledge

AUSTIN (AP) — The acting chief executive of Austin CableVision has been named president of the company and has pledged to improve customer service.

Jim Gleason, appointed Monday, also promised to work with city officials in developing the cable system.

Gleason has been acting head of the company since the dismissal of Bill Thomison. Thomison ordered the disconnection of a data and video link, known as the institutional network, after his arrest Sept. 2 on drunken driving charges. Under Gleason's leadership, the company paid the city an $805 fine for the disconnection.

'Stability' is in superpowers

GEORGETOWN (AP) — The superpowers' nuclear arsenals have played a major role in keeping the world relatively stable, former Sen. John Tower said Monday.

Tower, the former leader of a U.S. delegation that negotiated arms control with the Soviet Union in Geneva, said the U.S. posture is that "arms control must not be regarded as an end unto itself. It's an element of national security policy."

"So possession is not all bad," he told students at Southwestern University, his alma mater.

"The possession of nuclear weapons thus far has served as a deterrent to war. Europe has had an unusually long peace," Tower said.

Student punished for hoax

SAN MARCOS (AP) — A Wimberley High School student was placed on one year's probation Monday for his role in a bomb hoax at the school.

Hays County Court-at-Law Judge Howard Warner ordered the probation for a misdemeanor offense which makes it illegal to cause law enforcement and emergency personnel to respond to a bomb hoax.

The 15-year-old student brought a fake bomb to the hish school Sept. 22 that "looked real," according to Ed Cooper, chief juvenile probation officer for Hays County.

"He took some tent posts and some rags and some putty, and had some little wires sticking out. It looked real," Cooper said.

Rains halt oyster fishing

AUSTIN (AP) — Runoffs from heavy rains have forced the state health department to closed the Galveston, East Galveston, West Galveston and Trinity Bay complex to oyster fishing.

The department order was effective at 12:01 a.m. Tuesday.

State Health Commissioner Robert Bernstein said since all other harvesting areas remain polluted by the "red tide," his order in effect closes the entire Texas coast to commercial and recreational shellfishing — oysters, mussels and clams.

State shellfish sanitation technicians will monitor water conditions until pollution levels subside and the bays can be reopened, the department said in a statement.

The department said clearer weather will improve water purity in the bays, and lower temperatures are expected to reduce the red tide, a microorganism that kills fish.

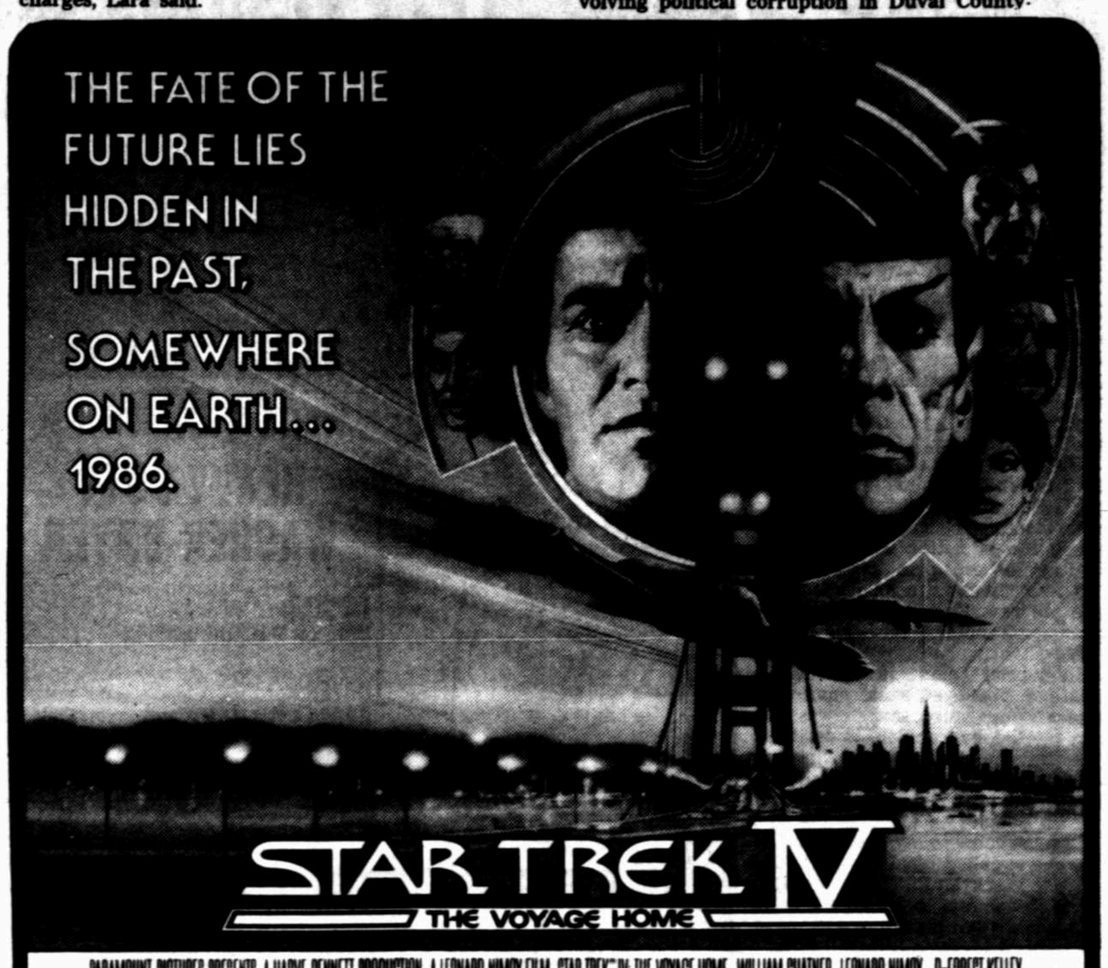

School OK s dropout plan

AUSTIN (AP) — Austin school trustees have approved an ambitious dropout prevention program designed to cut the dropout rate in half within the next 10 years.

During the 1985-86 school year, 1,911 students dropped out of school, for an annual dropout rate of 10.7 percent.

The program approved Monday was designed in a year-long cooperative effort that included the Austin Independent School District, Austin Chamber of Commerce and other local agencies.

The new program reaffirms the district's commitment to identify potential dropouts and provide the support needed to keep them in school.

Group opens Temple of Love to reporters

Yahweh ben Yahweh

MIAMI (AP) — The secretive Yahweh religious sect, linked to murders and accused of brainwashings and beatings, opened its Temple of Love to reporters and allowed them to meet the group's leader, who claims to be the son of God.

"I thank my father Yahweh for the chance to meet all of you and to dispel some of the rumors about the nation of Yahweh," Yahweh ben Yahweh, born Hulon Mitchell Jr. 51 years ago in Enid, Okla., said after the tour of the sprawling headquarters in the Liberty City area and the nearby Yahweh education center.

The two-hour tour featured visits to the ice cream parlor, the grocery store, the sewing shop where the members' white robes and pants are made and to the laundry room where modern washers and dryers keep them white.

On sale were Yahweh comic books, T-shirts, booklets, pamphlets, posters and records. Dotting the workplaces were small signs exhorting: "Life is better with Yahweh" and "Come on up to Yahweh."

The Yahwehs are an offshoot of the Hebrew Israelites, a black supremacist religion founded in the 1960s.

In a brief statement, Mitchell, a bearded, blue-eyed husky man with a mellifluous voice, said he was chosen by God, or Yahweh, to establish his name in America and that his message will "bring peace to the entire world. My message is of morality for all people.

"I must come to my people first of all...the so-called black people." The former Black Muslim who founded the Yahweh sect in Miami six years ago denied that his group was racist or violent. He did not answer questions.

Earlier, spokeswoman Judith Israel read a litany of denials of charges made by authorities and ex-members against the Yahwehs, including murder, child abuse,, premature pregnancy among its youth and beatings.

She denied that the members were suicidal or in any way similar to the Jim Jones cult in Guyana. Jones' 900 members committed suicide in 1978.

Among the Yahwehs' legal difficulties are murder charges, including one filed Tuesday, against member Neriah Israel, a former pro football player and commodities broker born Robert Rosier.

He is accused of two slayings that occurred when violence erupted Oct. 30 as the Yahwehs tried to evict tenants of a tenement the sect bought in nearby Opa-locka. The group has been barred from the apartments by a judge.

Yahwehs were linked by Miami police to two 1981 slayings, including the beheading of an ex-member in Miami, although no charges were filed. Opa-locka residents recently filed a lawsuit describing the sect as a racketeering organization. Yahwehs were also blamed by residents for arson in Delray Beach after a recruiting and fund-raising drive in a black neighborhood this year.

NATION in brief

AIDS patient to be released

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — An AIDS patient committed to a state mental hospital two weeks ago after he reportedly said he wanted to infect as many people as possible could be released soon under a treatment plan ordered by a judge.

Anthony Marks, 24, of Oklahoma City, was committed after Oklahoma County Special Judge Joe S. Wallace ruled he was mentally ill.

A counselor testified at a closed hearing Nov. 12 that Marks refused to abstain from sex and was possibly infecting others, The Daily Oklahoman has reported.

Four unidentified sources told the newspaper that Marks was despondent about having AIDS and had said he wanted to infect as many people as he could.

Woman gets artificial heart

TUCSON, Ariz. — (AP) A woman dying of a congenital heart defect was given an artificial heart in an operation that ended early today, and a man who lived for four days on an artificial heart left surgery today with a donor human heart.

The 40-year-old woman was not identified at the request of her family, said Jan Rooney, a spokeswoman for University Medical Center at Tucson, Ariz.

Ms. Rooney quoted Dr. Jack Copeland, who headed the implant team, as saying there were no major complications during the nearly nine-hour operation and that the woman was doing well. The mini-Jarvik mechanical heart was intended to keep the woman alive only until she is well enough for a transplant, she said.

SWAT team searches store

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — A SWAT team using dogs searched a five-story department store Tuesday night for suspects and 250 people were evacuated after gunfire broke out and a 25-year-old man was wounded, police said.

Three youths were detained for questioning during the evacuation of about 250 people from the Sears, Roebuck & Co. store, and police came up empty-handed during a nearly five-hour search, said police Capt. James Butts.

One-room schoolhouse

NOVATO, Calif. (AP) — Marin County, known for hot tubs and luxury cars, also has three of California's seven one-room schoolhouses.

The schools, where kindergarten and grades one through six learn lessons in the same room, are clustered within a few miles of each other in the bucolic dairy country of northern Marin.

With gables, porches, attics and the original separate entrances and cloakrooms for boys and girls, the schools seem relics of the past. Inside, however, the throwback image vanishes: Each school has television, computers, projection equipment, a piano and a library.

"I particularly love what I can do in a school like this," said Elaine Boling, for 11 years the teacher, principal and playground director at Union School, built in 1895. "I can't even imagine teaching any other way."

Boling has 20 pupils, while Patty Pomi, her counterpart at nearby Lincoln School, founded in 1872, has 12. Barbara Armington at Laguna School a few miles away teaches 21 children in the one-room school built in 1906.

"Most teachers, in the larger schools, have a child for only a year," said Armington. "You're never really sure what impact you've made on their lives. But here, I and my students are part of each others' lives for as much as seven years. I get to know them, see them grow, see them mature, see them learn. It's enormously satisfying."

Virtually all the children come from area dairy farms. All will go on to Petaluma Junior High School when they graduate.

"I've yet to see any evidence that students from our one-roomers suffer any scholastic deficiency when they move on," said Rick Sheviakov, chief psychologist for the Marin County Office of Education. "It may be an older approach to education, but it still works just fine."

Sheviakov said instruction in the one-room schools is highly individualized.

"There's a lot more cooperation and a lot less competition," he said. "It's an absolute joy to watch them work together."

Armington said she teaches her students to read in kindergarten.

"We don't wait for the first grade like the larger schools do."

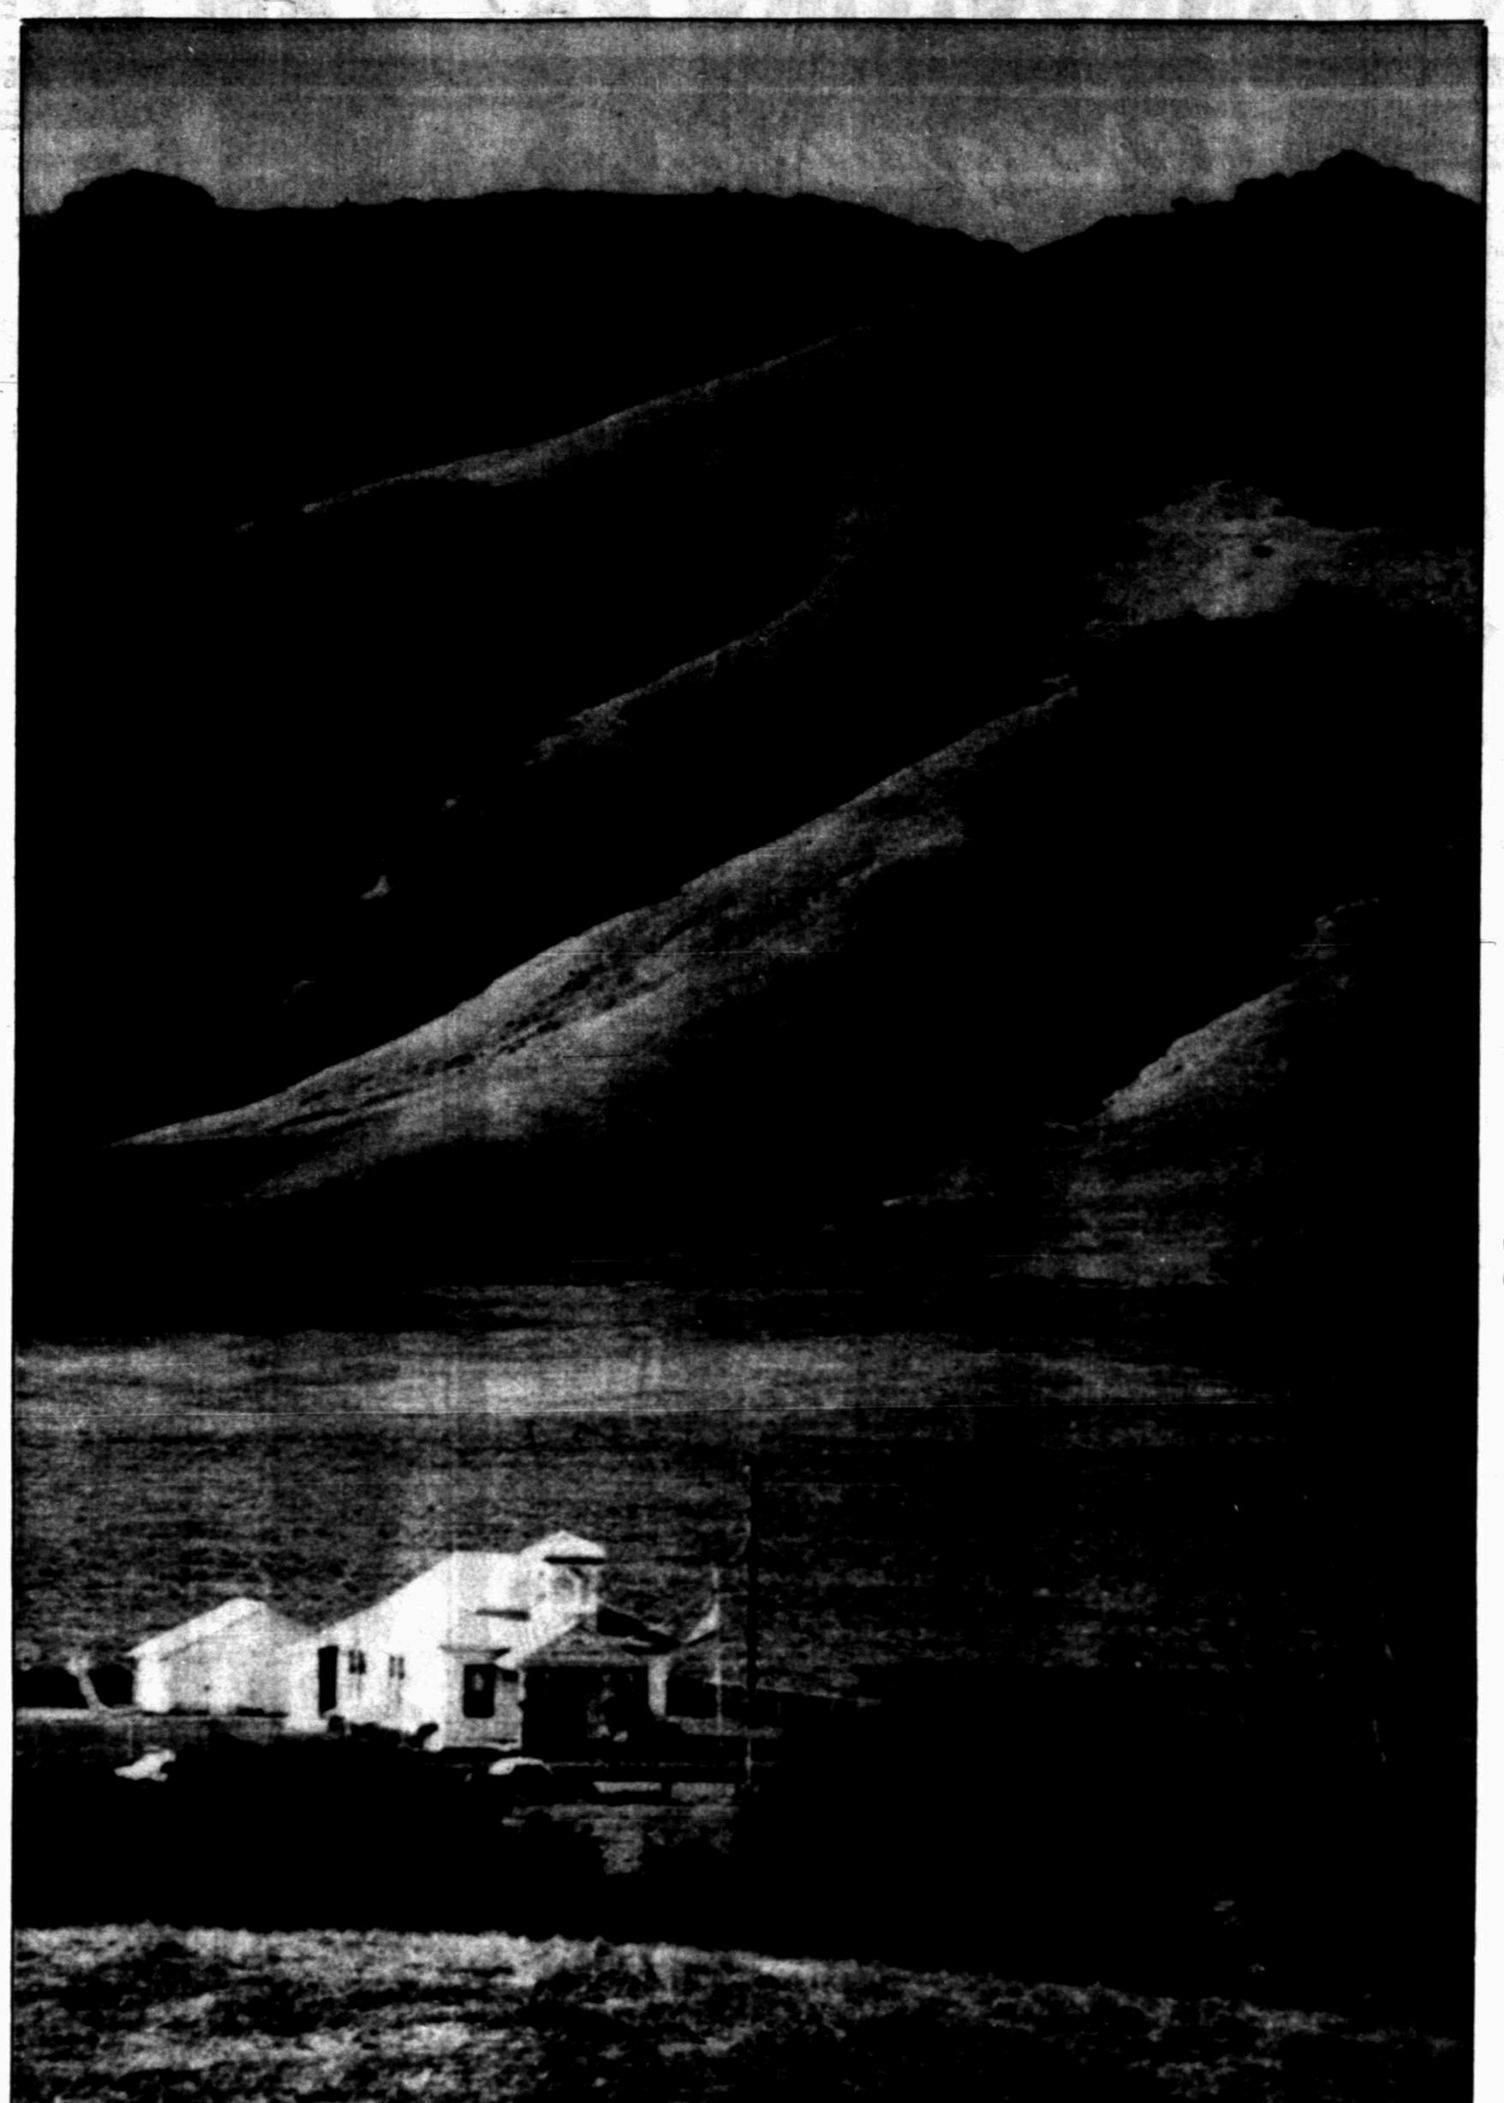

The teachers move from pupil to pupil, guiding each child at their own level in the subject.

The pupils also help each other.

"It's something you really only see in schools like this," said Boling. "The big help the little, the fast help the slow. They really don't compete with each other."

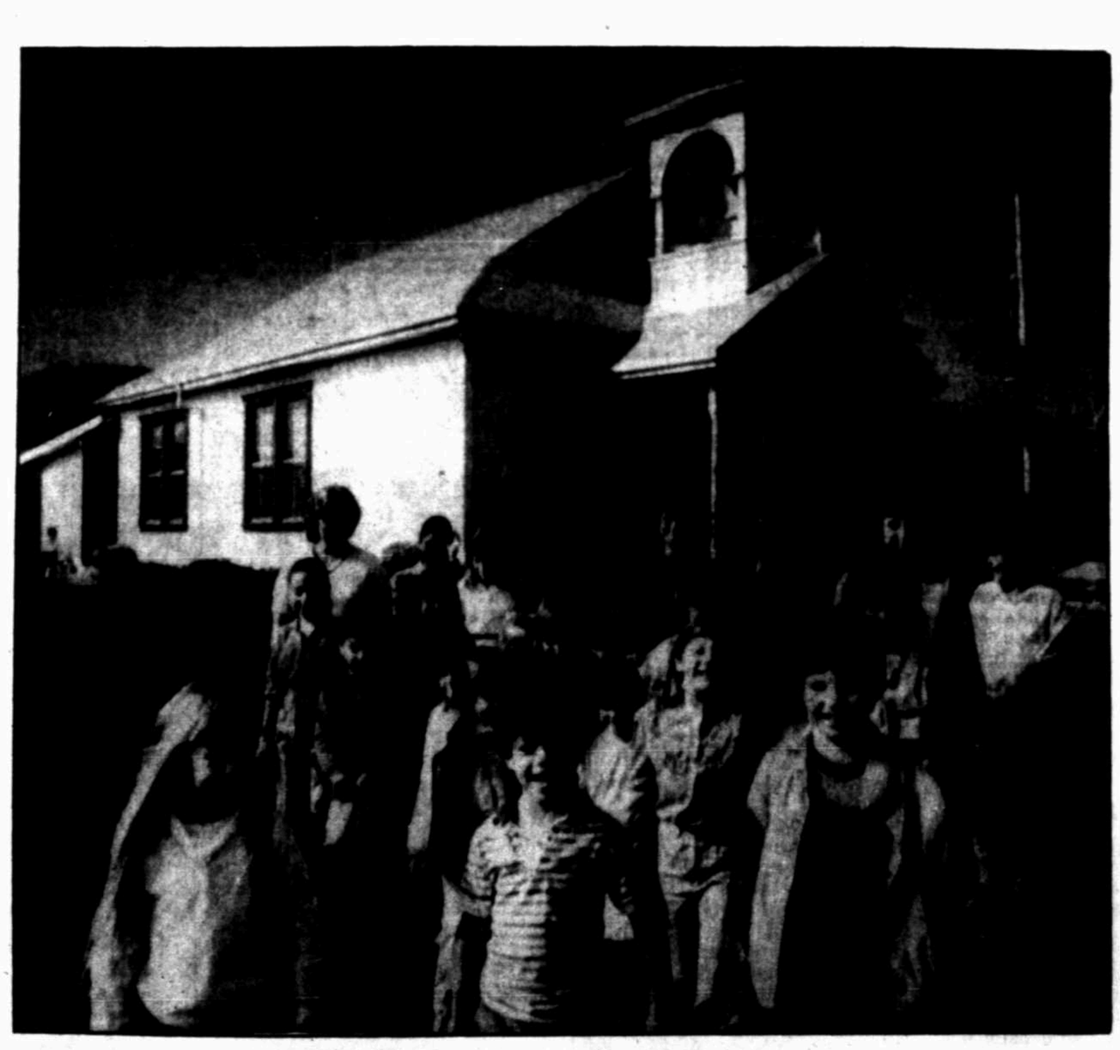

Disciplinary problems are virtually nonexistent, the teachers said.

"There's enormous peer-group pressure not to disrupt the class," said Boling, pointing to a list of class rules posted on the wall. "My students drew up that list, not me. And they enforce it."

A one-room school, nestled in Chileno Valley, surrounded by the hills of northern Marin County, California's dairy country. The Laguna District School, founded in 1906, breaks the hot tub and luxury car image of Marin County. There are only seven one-room K-6 schools in California, and three of them are located within a few miles of each other, on the quiet roads of rural Marin County.

The student body minus one, right, of the Laguna District School in northern Marin County in California, leaves the one-room school house for a field trip. Barbara Armington, below, helps six-year-old Maria Ortega with her computer lessons, as other students do their lessons, in rural Marin County's Laguna District School. Outside, the K-6 school founded in 1906, maintains its traditional one-room school house appearance.

Central African Republic trying Bokassa

BANGUI, Central African Republic (AP) — Former Emperor Bokassa I went on trial for his life today before a court that includes judges who once swore loyalty to his empire.

Judicial sources said a death sentence was almost a foregone conclusion because of the long list of charges that includes murder, treason and cannibalism.

But Information Minister Joaquim da Silva Nzengue said President Andre Kolingba may decide to commute any death sentence to life imprisonment.

As paratroopers led Jean-Bedel Bokassa into the sweltering courtroom, some of several hundred carefully screened spectators raised a timid cheer.

"I was a faithful soldier of de Gaulle and I have always done my duty," Bokassa shouted, raising his arms in a greeting patterned after the late French President Charles de Gaulle.

Bokassa, who seized control of this impoverished former French colony in 1965 and conducted a 14-year reign of terror, was exiled to the Ivory Coast and France after being ousted in a French-backed coup in 1979.

Although sentenced to death in absentia in 1980, he was arrested Oct. 23 when he returned voluntarily to his country. The law requires he be tried again.

The Kolingba had planned to hold the trial in the 2,000-seat indoor sports stadium where Bokassa crowned himself in 1977, but announced Tuesday that the proceeding had been moved to the 200-seat Bangui Appeals Court.

Bokassa's French chief attorney Francis Szpiner said the prisoner regarded the change of venue as a "positive development."

"It is a good thing to avoid the circus atmosphere which the stadium would have given the trial," Szpiner said.

Szpiner is being assisted by another French lawyer, Francois Gibault, and by three Central African attorneys.

The opening of the trial was delayed by three hours as the Supreme Court considered and rejected a defense motion challenging presiding Judge Edouard Franck's impartiality.

The defense challenged Franck on the grounds that he presided over a tribunal which sentenced several of Bokassa's top aides to death, that he wsa not named to head the special court trying Bokassa until four days ago, and that he was judicial adviser to Kolingb. until last week.

Franck, who was ambassador to France for two years after Bokassa's ouster, served as a circuit judge in the "Central African Empire," as did the state prosecutor, Gabriel Mbodou.

The two other judges hearing the case also were members of the "imperial" judiciary. The tribunal also includes six citizens chosen by lot, whose only required qualification was that they could read and write.

The government said it planned to broadcast the proceedings, but that cameras and tape recorders would be allowed in the courtroom only for a few minutes as the trial opened.

Some French newspapers and extreme right-wing politicians have suggested Bokassa was encouraged to return by people close to French Prime Minister Jacques Chirac in an attempt to embarass his rival, former French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing.

Giscard d'Estaing lost the French presidency in 1981 elections to Francois Mitterrand after being widely accused of receiving costly diamonds and other favors from Bokassa. Giscard d'Estaing denied the accusations.

The Central African Republic was a French colony until 1960.

Gandhi calls Gorbachev 'crusader for peace'

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

NEW DELHI, India — Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi hailed Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev as a "crusader for peace" when the Kremlin chief arrived here Tuesday for a four-day state visit.

Gandhi also echoed Gorbachev's attacks on President Reagan's plans for a space-based missile defense and said they wrecked chances for a disarmament breakthrough at last month's superpower summit meeting in Reykjavik, Iceland.

It was the strongest endorsement to date of Gorbachev's arms-control proposals by Gandhi, who prides himself on his leadership of the nonaligned movement.

Gorbachev, making his first visit to an Asian nation since taking power 20 months ago, said "the chains of militarism" are blocking progress toward a U.S.-Soviet arms accord.

"The arms race devours the resources that are so badly needed to solve the burning problems affecting the lives of hundreds of millions of people," Gorbachev declared.

Surrounded by the tightest security seen in recent memory in the Indian capital, Gorbachev received a 21-gun salute and other honors usually reserved for a head of state.

Tens of thousands of spectators, including children who were let out of school for the occasion, tried to get a glimpse of Gorbachev as he and his wife, Raisa, raced by in a bullet-proof Zil limousine flown from Moscow.

But it was a modest crowd by New Delhi's standards despite the efforts of Gandhi's Congress-I Party to dramatize backing for the Soviet leader by bringing busloads of people from outlying areas.

"Rajiv Gandhi told us to come," said Shanti Ujainwal, 30, a woman from a suburban area across the Jamuna River from New Delhi. She said a bus driver arrived in her neighborhood shouting, "A big minister is coming!" and urging residents to get on the bus.

Police blocked attempts by scores of refugees from Afghanistan to protest the presence of Soviet troops in their country, however, by seizing their placards and banners and putting their leaders under house arrest.

Said Mohammed Maiwand, an Afghan refugee leader, said he was told by Indian officials that they did not want any demonstrations that would "embarrass the guests" from Moscow. Police broke up a demonstration by 200 Afghans in Lajpat Nagar, an area far removed from the main ceremonies. A police official said 57 Afghans were arrested.

There were weeks of intensive preparations before Gorbachev's arrival, partly because of concern over security in the capital, where Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, the current prime minister's mother, was assassinated by two of her own bodyguards in 1984.

At times, the Soviet leader was barely visible behind a wall of tall, heavy-set agents sent from Moscow. He was housed in Rashtrapati Bhavan, the president's palace, where he and his party took over an entire wing of the red sandstone building that once housed the British viceroys.

The palace — with 340 rooms and almost 2,000 servants — has 330 acres of grounds and sits on a high bluff dominating the city.

Rajiv Gandhi welcomed Gorbachev "not only as a world statesman but as a friend" as the two men opened talks on Indo-Soviet relations and world problems.

Demjanjuk nervous as trial for Nazi war crimes begins

JERUSALEM (AP) — John Demjanjuk, trembling and nervously rocking back and forth at today's start of his trial for Nazi war crimes, denied he was the sadistic concentration camp guard "Ivan the Terrible."

Demjanjuk repeatedly stood up and down, and grimaced throughout the 40-minute session in the packed courtroom at Jerusalem's District Court.

Judge Dov Levine did not read the 26-page indictment after Demjanjuk told him through a Ukrainian translator that he had been read the charges by his lawyer.

"But I am not the 'Ivan the Terrible' that you want to hang," the 66-year-old Ukrainian-born, former U.S. citizen said.

Demjanjuk's American attorney, Mark O'Connor, asked to delay his client's plea, saying he had not had enough time to review the massive quantity of evidence.

But Levine refused and said the court considered Demjanjuk's statement to be "a plea of not guilty to the charges" in the indictment. He adjourned the court and scheduled the next session for Jan. 19.

Demjanjuk was taken out of the courtroom temporarily during the proceedings to be seen by a doctor. His attorney latersaid Demjanjuk had slightly banged his head during the trip to the court in an armored police van.

The indictment accuses Demjanjuk of war crimes, crimes against Jews and crimes against humanity, punishabale by death.

Demjanjuk has claimed he is a victim of mistaken identity. His attorney claims "Ivan the Terrible" was killed in a prison revolt at Treblinka in 1943.

Demjanjuk's trial is Israel's first against an alliged Nazi war criminal since Adolf Eichmann was convicted of masterminding the killing of 6 million Jews in World War II, and hanged in 1962.

During most of the trial Demjanjuk will face his accusers in a bullet-proof glass booth built for the Eichmann trial and now on display in the Ghetto Fighters House museum in a kibbutz north of Jerusalem.

Demjanjuk has been kept in solitary confinement at the Ayalong maximum-security prison since he was extradited from the United States in February after being stripped of U.S. citizenship for concealing his alleged Nazi past when he immigrated in the 1950's. He had been an autoworker in Cleveland.

The Demjanjuk trial is the second in an Israeli court of an alleged Nazi war criminal since the Jewish state was founded in 1948. Eichmann was kidnapped by Israeli agents in Argentina in 1960 and brought to Israel.

Despite Israel's policy of seeking out Nazis to bring them to justice, feelings were mixed about the Demjanjuk trial. Many are worried the 40-year lapse since the war may weaken Israel's case against him, which is largely based on the memory of eight camp survivors.

"We may have to let the man go and that would be terrible," said Tamar Amarant, a Holocaust survivor, and official at the Ghetto Fighers' House museum where war crimes are documented.

The prosecution will also try to jog witnesses' memories with a scale wood model of Treblinka, slightly larger than a billiard table. The model was built in 1956 by the late Yaakov Wiernik, a carpenter who escaped from the camp in the uprising which destroyed it in 1943.

Suriname still awaiting rebel's return

PARAMARIBO, Suriname (AP) — When the electricity failed and plunged this capital city of 200,000 into darkness one evening earlier this month, many people thought rebel leader Ronny Brunswijk had arrived as promised.

Brunswijk, an ex-army private determined to topple the military government of Lt. Col. Desi Bouterse, had distributed leaflets two days earlier saying he would soon be in Paramaribo.

But when the lights came back on, Bouterse was still in power and Brunswijk and his rebels were still somewhere in the remote jungle interior of Suriname, a nation of 350,000 people on South America's northeast coast.

The incident underscored the climate of fear and uncertainty created in this former Dutch colony by Brunswijk's 4-month-old insurgency and the army's efforts to quell it.

Brunswijk, 25, a former Bouterse bodyguard, took up arms against the Surinamese leader in June after being booted from the army. Since then he and his followers have staged hit-and-run attacks against remote army outposts and sabotaged production of such key exports as bauxite and palm oil.

Estimates of the size of Brunwijk's band range from 200 to 600, and they are reported to be armed with shotguns, some M-16 automatic rifles and other small arms.

"It's difficult to talk about Brunswijk's 'controlling' the interior because it's so big and so empty, but there is a feeling that there's a ring around Paramaribo," said one Western diplomat, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Bouterse has responded by deploying the army's 3,000 men to key sites, including the bauxite mines, the Afobaka Dam hydroelectric complex and Zanderij International Airport.

Casualties from clashes between the army and rebels number only in the dozens. But some refugees fleeing to neighboring French Guiana and human rights activists in Paramaribo claim troops have indiscriminately killed civilians in northeast Suriname for presumed support of the rebels.

The claims could not be independently verified. Henk Heidweiller, Bouterse's government chief of staff, was asked about the reports in an Associated Press interview. He called them "rumors" but did not directly deny them.

Bush Negroes, or maroons, descendants of runaway slaves who settled in the Surinamese interior, are Brunswijk's base of support.

A maroon himself, Brunswijk has told Dutch journalists he wants better government treatment for his people, a 10-percent minority in a country dominated by mixed-race Creoles and the descendants of indentured servants from India and the East Indies.

Bouterse, a Creole, enjoyed some popularity when he seized power in 1980.

Vietnam surrenders what may be MIA remains

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Vietnam today turned over to a U.S. military delegation what are believed to be the remains of three Americans listed as missing in action from the Vietnam war.

A U.S. honor guard saluted as the remains, placed in caskets with a folded American flag on top, were hoisted on to a U.S. C-141 transport plane at Hanoi's Noi Bai Airport, said Lt. Col. Paul Mather, head of the U.S. delegation that went to Vietnam.

The remains were flown to Honolulu, where U.S. Army specialists will try to identify them.

Mather headed a 15-member team from the Honolulu-based Joint Casualty Resolution Center and the Army Central Identification Laboratory. Mather is head of the center's Bangkok office.

He declined to give details on the remains, but quoted the Vietnamese as saying they had retrieved them while investigating reports from local people.

Mass draws big crowd

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Pope John Paul II drew his largest Australian crowd today at an outdoor Mass appealing to spiritual wanderers to return to the church. One papal appearance was marred briefly by shouts of "Fascist pope!"

At Sydney University, two people shouting, "Fascist pope, go away!" were booed by the audience until police grabbed them and led them away. John Paul waited until they were out of sight before continuing. The identity and motivation of the protesters was not known.

In his Mass at Randwick Racecourse, the pope said he had in mind those who were baptized but no longer go to church. He conceded that some "perhaps have been hurt by the church, by the misunderstanding or abruptness of the church's ministers, by the scandal of their fellow Christians....

"To all of those who have wandered from their spiritual home, I wish to say: Come back. The church opens her arms to you, the church loves you," he told an estimated 200,000 people.

Playtex Inc. sells out

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — International Playtex Inc., an American underwear maker, has sold all its South African assets to local management, the local manager said today without disclosing a reason or details.

The Stamford, Conn.-based company sold 100 percent of its assets to the local managers on Nov. 14, said Bill Quinn, managing director of Playtex Africa Ltd.

The new company, PTX Distributors Ltd., will continue to manufacture in Durban under the brand name, paying a royalty, and retain access to new products and designs from the former parent company, Quinn said.

The 400 to 450 employees, 90 percent of them Indian, will retain their jobs, he said.

Quinn said he had no formal statement from International Playtex on the reason for the pullout, and would not disclose the sale price or value of the assets.

Ton of marijuana taken

REYNOSA, Mexico (AP) — More than one ton of marijuana was found in a truck traveling without license plates about 80 miles (120 kms) south of the U.S. border, the regional commander of the Federal Judicial Police announced Friday.

Police Commander Joaquin Salvador Galvan told reporters the marijuana was being transported from Michoacan state in central Mexico to this border city. He placed the cargo's street value at more than $100,000.

He said the truck's two drivers were taken into custody.

The truck was detained on the highway running from Monterrey to La Mier, Galvan said.

48 killed by missile fire

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — An Iranian missile launched against Baghdad early today struck a residential neighborhood, killing 48 people and wounding 52, all civilians, Iraq's official radio reported.

It was the sixth missile attack by Iran this year against the Iraqi capital.

Iran's offical Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Nicosia, said the missile was fired at Baghdad at 3:45 a.m. and that the target was the Iraqi Defense Ministry. It said the attack was in retaliation for four days of Iraqi air raids on Iranian cities in which 112 civilians have been killed.

Korean ferry capsizes

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Seven people drowned and two were missing today after a 55-ton coastal ferryboat capsized near Kanghwa off the west coast, National Police reported.

The boat, carrying 58 people, overturned offshore the port of Sokpo in Kanghwa, 35 miles northwest of Seoul, the police report said.

Rescue workers rescued 49 people and recovered seven bodies but were unable to locate two passengers listed on the manifest, police said.

ACTION:
The Postal Service is planning to construct a new General Mail Facility to house all mail processing operations, administrative offices and support functions, including a retail/post office box unit for Midland, Texas. A portion of the exisiting Main Post Office will be retained for a downtown station to house a retail/post office box unit and the carriers serving the ZIP Code Area 79701. The existing Air Terminal Station will be vacated. The new facility will be located on a 15-acre site directly adjacent to the Midland Regional Airport at the intersection of Sloan Field Road and Wright Drive.

The project is needed because the existing post office at Midland is not of sufficient size to handle the present and increasing mail volumes efficiently.

FINDING:
The finding is based on the Environmental Assessment dated June 1985, that was prepared for the proposed project. The project was found to have no significant impacts on either the physical or the cultural environment of the project area. Where adverse impacts were found, they were determined to be moderate and will be mitigated by appropriate design measures.

Therefore, I hereby find and declare that this action will not have a significant effect on the human environment and that it will not require the preparation of an Environmental Impact Statement.
