Committee Set Up To Settle Dispute

To Decide Which Service Has The Best Missile

By JOHN W. FINNEY

United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON (UP)—The Defense Department has set up a top-level committee to resolve the seething inter-service controversy over whether the Army or Air Force has the better anti-aircraft guided missile, it was learned today.

The step was taken in response to congressional complaints over the fact that the two services are building up competing missile systems. The critics said the department should settle on one missile and clearly define the roles the Army and Air Force are to play in anti-aircraft defense.

The controversy is between the Army's Nike missile, now installed around most of the nation's principal cities, and the Talos missile, which the Air Force proposes to start installing around its major air bases.

Accuses Air Force

The Army has publicly accused the Air Force of trying to invade its anti-aircraft mission.

The Defense Department, in response to inquiries by the United Press, disclosed today that a committee has been established to study "the relative merits from a technical standpoint" of the Nike and Talos systems.

The committee is headed by Eger V. Murphree, special assistant to the secretary of defense for guided missiles. It is composed of C. C. Furnas, assistant defense secretary for research and development; Frank D. Newbury, assistant defense secretary for application engineering; William H. Martin, Army director of research; and Richard E. Horner, acting assistant Air Force secretary for research.

Will Study All Data

The Defense Department said the group "will take into account all available data concerning the respective capabilities of the two systems." In drafting its conclusions, the department said, the committee will call upon such groups as the weapons systems evaluation group—a Defense Department scientific group that studies the merits of new weapons.

The Defense Department statement indicated that the review will be limited to a scientific evaluation and not include an actual duel between the two missiles as demanded by the Senate Armed Services Committee to resolve the dispute.

The review, however, is partly in line with another Senate Armed Services Committee recommendation calling upon the Defense Department to set up a group of scientists to make a thorough evaluation of the relative merits of the two missiles.

Little Theater Sets First Play Tonight

The curtain will rise at 8 o'clock tonight on the initial production of the newly organized Pampa Little Theatre, "The Male Animal," a three act comedy, employs a variety of characters thrown together in a skillfully woven plot that will afford the entire family an evening of hilarious entertainment.

Ellen Turner, portrayed by Pauline Smyth, is an emotional woman in her late twenties who becomes infatuated with the ex-football player to whom she was once engaged, Joe Ferguson (Ed Young). Joe becomes involved in the triangle and frantically tries to avoid a clash with Tommy Turner, Ellen's husband.

Tommy (Jack O. Miller), is an introvert, a college English professor who lives in the world of books. Through the series of events brought about by Ellen's interest in Joe, Tommy is transformed into "The Male Animal," who fights for the preservation of his home.

Comedy situations are enacted by Wally Myers (Jim Terrell), the college halfback who hero-worships Joe and dates Patricia, Ellen's sister (Carol Cooper). Michael Barnes (Billy Clay), student and writer for the college literary magazine, also is Patricia's suitor, and the unwitting cause of Tommy's perilous predicament.

The pompous and rude Ed Keller (Wynne Vaele), trustee of the college, threatens Tommy with the loss of his job on the grounds that he is a Communist. Dr. Damon (J. B. Reid) is a mild little man who is hopelessly bewildered by the series of events. Cleota, the Negro maid, portrayed by Marilyn Spoonmore, constantly confuses the household by her haphazard and garbled reports of telephone messages she has taken.

Mrs. Damon (Gladys Howard)

MARILYN SPOONMORE

...confusing 'Cleota'

and Mrs. Keller (Marie Herring) are also included in the fast-moving plot.

The play was written by Elliott Nugent and James Thurber and is directed by Jim Terrell. Tickets may be purchased from members of the Little Theater, Kit Kat Klub or at Richards Drug.

Adlai, Estes Wind Up 'Pre-Campaign' Tour

By TOM NELSON

United Press Staff Correspondent
STOUX CITY, Iowa (UP)—Adlai E. Stevenson and Sen. Estes Kefauver wound up a hectic 5,000-mile "pre-campaign" tour today with a flight into the friendly South.

The Democratic presidential candidate and his No. 2 man, firing blasts at the Eisenhower administration for breaking promises to farmers and workers, were slated to leave StouX City for Knoxville, Tenn. There they were to motor to Norris Dam and the atomic installation at Oak Ridge, Tenn., and then settle down to a political huddle with Democrats from 10 Southern states.

For the first time in their four days of touring a wide section of the nation, they were in friendly territory. Whereas most of the states they had visited previously were Republican in 1952, seven of the 10 states represented there went Democratic.

Midwest Meeting Friday

Stevenson-Kefauver leaders expected the main topics to come up today would be related to farm subjects, public power, small business and water resources policies.

From Knoxville, the candidates will fly 480 miles tonight to Chicago, where there will be a five state Midwest meeting Friday.

Speakers at a closed session in StouX City Wednesday told the candidates they should exploit the effects of a farm price decline on small business, and praised the Democratic farm plank.

Stevenson said in talks at StouX City that when farmers are "in trouble," it has effect on the rest of the economy, too. Already, he said, "the farm depression is being felt right here."

Cites Benson Charge

Stevenson noted a Benson charge that the Democratic farm plank is a "tossed salad of inaccuracies, half truths, platitudes and promises impossible to fulfill."

"That's a severe indictment, because when it comes to farming, authority on half truths, platitudes and promises—especially broken promises," Stevenson said.

Though in the heart of the farm belt, Stevenson took time out to issue a statement denouncing President Eisenhower's labor policies. He said he and Kefauver were "proud" to get the endorsement of the AFL-CIO Executive Council, and charged that working people have "no confidence in Mr. Eisenhower."

France Assembling Fleet To Use In Canal Crisis

Airliner Crashes In Alaska

COLD BAY, Alaska (UP)—A Canadian Pacific DC-6B airliner with 22 persons aboard crashed and burned while attempting to land at Alaska's Cold Bay airfield early today and airline spokesmen said there were only seven "known" survivors.

CPA public relations personnel said there was "still a big question mark" as to the precise number killed among the 14 passengers and the crew of eight. They said seven persons had been "confirmed as survivors, with more information to follow."

Earlier reports reaching the CPA public relations department and relayed to newsmen had said only seven persons escaped the crash as the big airliner ploughed into the rugged terrain just south of the Cold Bay landing field.

Wilderness Town
Cold Bay is 300 miles west of Kodiak. A little wilderness community at the lower end of the Alaska peninsula, it is the site of a United States Air Force base and is used as a refueling station for trans-Pacific flights.

Jack Crump of the CPA public relations department said the aircraft's captain, second officer, navigator, stewardess and three of its passengers were among the known survivors. The captain was identified as T. A. Tweed, 33, of Burnaby, B. C., a veteran CPA pilot.

Crump said Tweed had been flying for the company since February of 1944.

Others Identified

The second officer was identified as Robert Love, 28, Victoria, B. C., a former Royal Canadian Air Force pilot who joined the company a year and a half ago.

Two passengers who escaped uninjured were the daughters of CPA's manager in Hong Kong, Crump said. He identified them as Miss Sharon Edelstein, about 16, and her seven-year-old sister, Patricia.

Crump said most of the passengers aboard the plane were Chinese.

The 170-mile northwesterly flight from Vancouver to Cold Bay normally takes about 7 1/2 hours.

20 Feet Above Sea

Witnesses said the airliner crashed about 20 feet above sea level and was about 1,000 feet from the shore of the North Pacific Ocean as it was coming in to land. It caught fire and burned after crashing into the ground.

A spokesman for Reeves Alaskan Airlines, who witnessed the crash, said four of the seven survivors were in critical condition. They could not be moved until they received medical attention, the spokesman said.

The United States Coast Guard said two Navy amphibians, each carrying a doctor and medical supplies, were sent to Cold Bay. The two planes were dispatched from Kodiak and Adak.

Daniel Assured Votes In Tarrant Co. Will Be Certified

By UNITED PRESS

U.S. Sen. Price Daniel said he has received assurances from Tarrant county Democratic Chairman Tom Ward that Ward will certify the county's returns from last Saturday's runoff primary election today.

Ward, who supported Daniel's opponent, Austin lawyer Ralph Yarborough, first announced he would certify the returns in spite of the fact a grand jury investigation has been ordered into the ballot box of Precinct 120.

With the assurance he gave Daniel, he appeared to have changed his mind again. Meantime, District Attorney Howard Fender was trying to find Mrs. C. M. Allen, Negro election judge of Precinct 120.

He wants to serve her with a summons to appear before the grand jury. Her husband said she was out of town, "possibly in Houston" attending a union meeting. He could not say when she would be back.

Precinct Investigated
The scandal of Precinct 120, which went heavily for Yarborough, stopped certification of the entire Tarrant county vote, which was won unofficially by Daniel by a narrow margin.

Two Announce For Senator Spot Held By Price Daniel

AUSTIN (UP)—James P. Hart, former Supreme Court jurist and ex-chancellor of the University of Texas, today joined Sen. Searcy Brackenwell as an announced candidate for the U. S. Senate post held by Price Daniel.

"I am a Democrat," said Hart at a news conference this morning.

"Results of the official canvass of votes by counties have been reported, indicating Price Daniel as the Democratic nominee for Governor. At such time as Sen. Daniel resigns his present post, I will become a candidate to fill that vacancy," he said.

Brackenwell, of Houston, "a conservative Democrat," and a supporter of President Eisenhower, entered the race Wednesday.

Hart had long considered entering the Democratic primary for Governor, but shied away after Austin attorney Ralph Yarborough revealed his intention to run.

Known as Liberal

The former University of Texas chancellor is frequently linked with liberal democratic groups. However, he prefers to be known as a "moderate."

He pledged his "support of the nominees of the Democratic party," and said he will "co-operate fully with my Democratic colleagues in the Congress."

On the question of desegregation, Hart said in his opinion the Supreme Court ruling "is now final."

Brackenwell has predicted "at least 12 to 15 candidates" would enter the race.

French Troops Will Be Sent To Cyprus

By WILLIAM SEXTON
United Press Staff Correspondent

LONDON (UP)—France was reported assembling a 30-ship task force in the Mediterranean today for joint Anglo-French military moves against Egypt should the Suez crisis deteriorate further. Hopes for a peaceful settlement were low.

France and Britain announced jointly that French troops would be sent to Cyprus, easy striking distance of the canal zone, and unofficial reports said French paratroopers were already en route to the British base from Algeria.

Some sources spoke of a "grave" deterioration of relations between Britain and Egypt, but the foreign office refused even to comment on the situation. British newspapers accused Egypt of imposing a "reign of terror" on Britons living there.

The feeling of crisis was heightened by the arrest of three Britons and the expulsion of two British diplomats on spy charges. Egyptian sources said they were engaged in a plot to overthrow the government of President Gamal Abdel Nasser.

All dispatches from Egypt indicated that Nasser would not budge from his stand that the Suez Canal was and must remain Egyptian, although Egyptian government sources said he was anxious to negotiate a compromise settlement.

Egyptian sources in Cairo denounced the Anglo-French decision to move troops to Cyprus as "crude pressure" and said it would have no effect on the firm Egyptian stand.

It was against this background that the five-nation Suez Committee headed by Australian Prime Minister Robert Gordon Menzies prepared to fly to Cairo Sunday for talks with Nasser on the Dulles plan to place the canal under international control.

Nasser was buoyed in his firm stand by a pledge of Soviet support, a hint of Soviet help in event of hostilities and a promise of Soviet pilots to man the canal should foreign employees of the old canal company cripple the waterway with a mass walkout.

He also had promises of help from the Arab world, including threats to sabotage Western oil installations in event of war.</

COMMUNITY PROJECT—Over-population met surplus food supply in Casper, Wyo., to produce a happy tale. "Chichi," a small white Chihuahua owned by Mr. and Mrs. Ford Porter, found herself the mother of four puppies at the same time the Porter's cat, "Pretty-Kitty-Kelly," was bringing a litter of three kittens into the world. The hungry quartet proved too much for Chichi, so Pretty-Kitty-Kelly took over the job of nursing all seven newcomers. Since the initial shock, Chichi has recovered somewhat, regained her interest in the puppies, and now spells the charitable cat in the feeding schedule. The two mothers and "Bambino," a black male Chihuahua, have been friends for many years, according to the owners. Above, Mrs. Porter gathers the clan for a group picture, as the "community seven" satisfy their appetites.

Widmark Says Violence On Film Doesn't Affect Youth

EDITOR'S NOTE: Aline Mosby is on vacation. Today's guest writer Richard Widmark answers the question often put to him — does the violence in his films harm young fans?

By RICHARD WIDMARK
Written for the United Press HOLLYWOOD (UP) — I've been quite a violent fellow in motion pictures. If you counted the notches on my Screen Actors' Guild card you'd find almost a hundred. I've slain good actors and bad in quite a variety of ways.

But movie mayhem rests lightly on my conscience. There is a wide divergence of opinion as to whether violence on the stage or screen incites some persons in the audience to violence. I may be rationalizing my point of view, but I think it does not.

We have to face the fact there is a more-or-less sublimated urge to violence in all of us.

A good husband and father at times comes pretty close to being a homicidal maniac while driving his car. The housewife who angrily smashes a dish and the rude salesgirl are being violent in their own ways. The papers are full of examples of less inhibited violence and of course we all live under a cloud of mass violence, the possibility of war.

Therefore people have violence in them and are surrounded by violence. I think that persons seeing violence on the screen may work off some of their own more primitive emotions. I would doubt very much that a maniac needs a suggestion from a movie to set him off into some act of atrocity. In my last movie, "The Last Wagon," at 20th Century Fox, I kill seven men — one with a hatchet, one with a bow and arrow and another with a length of chain.

"I don't anticipate that these methods will replace guns, knives and arsenic as the favorite instruments of American homicide.

It's true that my wife and I haven't let our little daughter see some of my epics because we feel they are too rough. We are pretty selective in the type of entertainment we permit her to see and only recently acquired a television set. The point I'd like to make is that people who provide entertainment can't be expected to gear it to children. The responsibility for what the child sees rests upon the parents. We think our daughter should discover the ranges and aberrations of human emotion gradually.

Actually, I have been a killer in only about a third of my films. Yet I seem to be identified with violence to a point where I accept the identification myself. I'd like to do a good drawing room comedy.

Toning Down Obscene Novel For Movie Is A Tall Order

EDITOR'S NOTE: Aline Mosby is on vacation. Today's guest writers, scenarists Denis and Terry Sanders, tell how they have toned down the best-selling book, "The Naked and the Dead," for the screen.

By DENIS and TERRY SANDERS
Written for the United Press HOLLYWOOD (UP) — Bringing Norman Mailer's important and powerful novel, "The Naked and the Dead," to the screen is a tall order, and we're both proud we were selected to write the screen play for it.

You probably want to know about the obscenity in the novel and how we are handling it. The novel itself is so powerful that, when it is rendered into visual scenes, each one becomes an even greater distillation of power. If we were to go along with the obscenity it would put too much shock value into these scenes and the viewer would be distracted from the story. Screen obscenity can't be used, but even if it could we would delete it, anyway.

The public would be reacting to the obscenity and not to the drama.

Remember how Ernest Hemingway handled it in "For Whom the Bell Tolls?" He had much the same situation and the dignity of the story stimulated him to create a new language. That would sound strange in a film, so we broke down the obscenity into two elements: The suppressed desire for a woman, and antagonism toward authority.

We took those two elements and presented them in their own separate ways. Wilson, the chief user of obscenity, has been changed into a man who has an overblown enjoyment of women instead of an overly erotic desire for them as in the book.

We found it helpful also to tone down the brutality of the book which, again, might prove distracting on the screen. "The Mak-ed and the Dead" is not primarily an "action" novel, anyway, but a multi-colored story of characters who reveal themselves under stress.

Many characters, of necessity, have to be eliminated or reduced in importance.

We don't want you to get the idea that there has been any sugar-coating done to the story. There hasn't. It has the same things in it that Norman Mailer, the author, intended it to have. It will move fast and hit hard.

Our ending, for instance, should be like an uppercut, but we can't know yet whether we have succeeded. No one ever knows until

Cost Of Running Government Up

WASHINGTON (UP)—The average American's share of the cost of running the federal government is rising again. The administration's fresh look at the budget indicates it will cost the estimated 169,601,000 Americans who will be around next Jan. 1 some $407 each — $8 more than last year.

The post World War II high occurred in fiscal 1953 when the per capita cost hit $409. It dropped the next year to $421 and in fiscal 1955 to $394 — the low point under the present Republican administration.

BUSY BRUSH-SWISHER—An 11-year-old girl in Hutchinson, Kan., is keeping herself busy in an unusual fashion during her summer vacation. Sheryl Ehresman, lacking other interesting summer entertainment, decided to paint her family's house. "It's a lot of fun," she claims, "and there aren't any real problems—just rain and bugs, that's all." Mrs. Ehresman says Sheryl is a good worker, determined to stick with the job until it's completed. When she finishes the house, the young painter plans to do her bedroom.

Club Is Dedicated To Crystal Ball Preservation

By HARMAN W. NICHOLS

WASHINGTON (UP)—The Clear and Opaque Club is dedicated to the preservation of the crystal ball. Clear means clear. And if that isn't clear you can look to the opaque side, which Webster defines variously as "dull; not reflecting or giving out light."

Anyhow the C. and O. gang will gather in meeting Sept. 7 in something special. And, according to advance notices, it will run along until all problems are settled. That could take a good bit of time.

Rear Adm. George J. Dufek, USN, will be aboard to "take general observations." Rear Adm. Richard E. Byrd, also has been invited.

There is a serious side to the meeting. A little history:

Last year the Clear and Opaquers came up with three genuine crystal balls. One was carried to Little America.

SHE MEANS IT—Close friends of actress Cleo Moore, above, insist she's dead serious about her plans to run for governor of Louisiana in 1960. "And why not?" asks Cleo. "All good politicians are good actors, so what's so funny about an actress being a politician?"

"Where did this come from?"

FUNERAL TRAIN FOR WEEDS—Chicago transit authorities have devised a way of killing weeds that grow along their roadbeds. A special weed-killing train, above, manned by a crew of nine, moves along the entire line spraying plant-destroying chemicals on the weeds. Non-flammable and non-toxic to human beings and animals, the solution is said to be totally effective in the war on weeds.

Bar Group Warned Of Dangers

By CARLTON WILSON
DALLAS (UP)—The American Bar Association was warned today that common law, from which stems court justice as the English-speaking peoples of the world know it, is in grave danger.

The danger, as Sir Edwin Savory Herbert, president of the law society of London, sees it is in "a subtle, inward corrosion of the very mind of man." Every lawyer must live to serve and preserve the common and civil law system, he said.

Many lawyers are inclined today to "fall under" the power of the state and forget the "very real and basic freedom of the human being," he said. They must resist this inclination, he said, and "strike out for government under law."

Herbert's observations were contained in a speech prepared for delivery before the general assembly of lawyers attending the 79th ABA convention.

Lodge Speaks Tonight
Henry Cabot Lodge Jr., U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, is scheduled to address the association's annual dinner tonight when a medal will be awarded for outstanding service to the legal profession.

"The growth of the common law has been more a process of education than anything else, and that education is more of the kind you get in a family at home than the kind you get at school," Herbert told the lawyers.

Herbert termed the law "a most precious heritage, a living, growing thing, a noble contribution to the life of the world that we lawyers have to sustain and defend."

Bracewell Enters Race For Daniel's Senate Seat

AUSTIN (UP)—State Sen. Seary Bracewell of Houston, a "conservative Democrat" and a supporter of President Eisenhower, has entered the race for the U.S. senate post held by Price Daniel.

Bracewell, 38, announced Wednesday. He said he assumed Daniel is the winner of the close governor's race and that Daniel would resign so that a special election may be held with the Nov. 6 general election to fill the U.S. Senate vacancy.

Bracewell said he is a candidate whenever a special election might be held. The time of the election depends on when Daniel resigns.

Winning a special election in a field of 19 candidates in 1948 sent Bracewell to the State Senate. Previously he served two terms in the Texas House of Representatives.

Predicts Big Field
The Houston lawmaker said he believed "at least 12 to 15 candidates" would enter the race for Daniel's post.

Congressman-at-large Martin Dies has announced he will run for the U.S. Senate whenever

Stolen Checks Are Still Being Passed

Checks stolen from the Fisher Panhandle Grain Company the night of August 6 are still being passed by Wayne LaRue, Sheriff Rufe Jordan reported today.

Jordan reported that the checks, which are forged on blank checks of the First National Bank of Panhandle belonging to Emmett LeFors, were being given by LaRue in the area around Great Bend, Kan.

The forgeries are being signed with the name of Lee Heaton. Some of Heaton's cancelled checks were stolen in the burglary along with personalized checks on Citizens Bank and Trust Company of Pampa.

A Paymaster check protector taken from the office of the grain company at the time of the burglary is being used on the forged checks.

"God forbid that we should ever forget it or take it for granted," he said.

End of Force Seen
Another Englishman addressed some of the 5,000 delegates to the ABA yesterday. Sir Reginald Edward Manningham-Buller, attorney general of Great Britain, predicted that the time may come when all disputes between nations can be settled without force.

"The fundamental difficulty of international law at this time, however, is the absence of other means than force to enforce it," he said.

"In this century we have seen very considerable and most regrettable disregard of international law, even though the rule of law is one of the main buttresses of the democratic society," Manningham-Buller told the lawyers.

The House of Delegates, 230-member policy making body of the ABA, held its next-to-last session today.

Rotarians Hear Talk By Marsh

The Pampa Rotary club yesterday heard Cameron Marsh talk on the historical background of American political parties and policies.

Starting with the founding of the United States, Marsh explained how the Federalists dominated the scene from 1789 to 1800 at which time Jefferson, under the banner of the Democratic-Republicans, came to power and held the presidency for 24 years.

In 1824, four of the nation's leading political figures ran for the presidency and, due to the split vote, forced the election into the House of Representatives where John Q. Adams was elected.

The Democratic party as it is known today was born in 1828 with the election of Andrew Jackson as president but Jackson managed to arouse so much antagonism that in 1832 the Whig party came into focus as the major party and held this position until 1854.

By this time the forces against slavery had drawn together to form the Republican party and 1860 found the first Republican president, Abraham Lincoln.

Marsh concluded his talk by commenting that there appeared to be little basic difference between the two parties today and that the points of disagreement seemed to be a matter of degree.

Canadian Airliner Crashes; 15 Persons Known Dead

COLD BAY, Alaska UP — A Canadian Pacific DC-8-B airliner crashed and burned one and one-half miles south of the landing field here early today and 15 of the 22 persons aboard the plane were killed.

Witnesses said the plane crashed about 20 feet above sea level and about 1,000 feet from the shore of the North Pacific Ocean as it was coming in to land. The Canadian Pacific DC-8-B airliner crashed and burned one and one-half miles south of the landing field here early today and 15 of the 22 persons aboard the plane were killed.

The airliner, carrying 14 passengers and eight crew members, left Vancouver, B. C. at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday enroute to Tokyo. It was scheduled to refuel here.

Cold Bay is a little wilderness community at the lower end of the Alaska Peninsula near Unimak Island, approximately 390 miles west of Kodiak Island. Cold Bay is used as a refueling station for trans-Pacific flights.

A spokesman for Reeves Aleutian Airlines who witnessed the crash said four of the seven survivors were in critical condition. The other three were in fair condition.

The survivors included a child and the captain, co-pilot, navigator and a stewardess. The four most seriously injured survivors could not be moved until they received medical attention, the Reeves spokesman said.

Doctors Fly to Scene
Two Navy amphibians, each carrying a doctor and medical supplies, were dispatched from Kodiak and Adak, Alaska. The Coast Guard cutter and the Navy vessel Tom Higbee also were directed to proceed to the crash scene.

"If the planes can't land, the ships will get through to Cold Bay," a Coast Guard spokesman said.

The visibility here at the time of the crash was only one mile with a ceiling of 800 feet.

The crash was the first major accident for the Canadian Pacific line since it started operations to the Far East during the Korean War.

French Fried Vegetables Perk Up Menus

Anyone who has never eaten French fried yams has a treat in store for themselves. Try them with meat patties, pork chops or ham. They're like peanuts. You'll want more and more. Here's how you make them.

Peel raw yams and slice them in one-half inch strips the way you do regular French fries. Then pop them into ice water at once, says the Crisco Kitchens. This prevents darkening. In a deep kettle, or an automatic deep fryer, heat Crisco to 365° F. Use a deep fry thermometer if you have one, or drop a one-inch cube of bread into the fat after it starts to bubble. If the bread cube browns in 60 seconds, the temperature is right for frying. Now, drain and dry the yams. Fry them in the hot vegetable shortening for three to five minutes or until they turn golden brown and tender. Remove from fat, drain on paper toweling and sprinkle them with extra fine granulated sugar. If you like foods with a different taste, these are for you. Try them and see. And properly prepared like this, they're so digestible you can eat as many as you like as often as you like.

Carrot sticks and cauliflower buds are also deliciously different when French fried, and these vegetables can be coated with batter before frying, if you like. For four servings you'll need one head of cauliflower, and five or six small carrots. If you like batter, mix together one cup sifted flour, one cup milk, one egg and one tablespoon of melted Crisco, besides the Crisco for deep frying. Separate the cauliflower into small flowerettes, and slice the carrots into four lengthwise slices. Fry them in the deep hot shortening either plain or coated with the batter, a few at a time until they are tender and slightly brown. Drain on absorbent paper and season. They're really good.

Cinnamon Crunches Rate With Children

Children will clean their plates and call for more when you serve their favorite foods. Remember, children like food that is fun to eat and cookies are always a favorite.

Summer, winter, spring or fall, Reba Staggs, home economist, recommends Cinnamon Crunches. The children ask for them and for the head chef in the family. Well, they're easy to make. Made with hard, they have a delicious, crunchy texture.

CINNAMON CRUNCHES
1 cup sifted enriched flour
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
1-3 cup lard
1/2 cup sugar
1 egg, separated
2 tablespoons milk
1/4 teaspoon vanilla
3 tablespoons sugar
1/4 teaspoon vanilla
3 tablespoons sugar
1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
1/4 cup chopped nuts
Sift together flour, salt and cinnamon. Cream lard; add sugar gradually and cream well. Blend in egg yolk, milk and vanilla. Add dry ingredients gradually and mix well. Spread mixture in un-

Meat Balls Espagnol Go With Vegetables

These delicious meat balls are a wonderful accompaniment for garden vegetables and salads, to be served with crusty French bread, rather than the usual spaghetti with tomato sauce. The secret of success is frying them slowly for ten minutes in fine Spanish olive oil.

Moisten three slices of dry bread with water and mix with a pound of lean chopped beef, adding three slightly beaten eggs, three tablespoons of grated sharp cheese, two tablespoons of chopped parsley, salt and pepper. You can add a chopped clove of garlic, or brown the clove in the olive oil, removing it before frying the meat balls. Serves four.

Cool Summer Meals

Summer meals can be ever so simple when menu plans include a ready-to-serve canned ham. Because canned ham is boneless and waste-free, it lends itself well to easy outdoor meals. Cool ways to serve this subtly flavored ham include, slicing for use in hearty sandwiches, topping with hot or cold fruit sauce, and cutting into strips to combine in refreshing tossed salads.

Canned hams made available by a well-known packer come in a range of weights to serve groups both large and small. Choose from whole canned hams weighing 2 to 15 pounds. Since canned hams are completely waste-free, plan on 4 to 6 servings per pound.

When there's company on the agenda or an outdoor picnic is in the offing, plan to serve an "outdoor holiday" ham with a flavorful fruit glaze. For a pretty ham garnish arrange clusters of fresh red cherries around the ham.

Fruit Glaze For Canned Ham

Yield: 1 cup... enough for 1 5-lb. Swift's Premium Canned Ham
2 teaspoons cornstarch
1 tablespoon brown sugar
1/8 teaspoon ground cloves
1/8 teaspoon cinnamon
1 cup syrup from canned fruit such as peaches, pineapple, apricots, etc.

Artichokes Sevilla Compliment Steaks

Artichokes are delicious vegetables to serve with steaks and grilled meats, and one of the best ways to prepare them is mix three tablespoons of chopped parsley with one or two chopped garlic cloves, salt and pepper, and sprinkle the mixture on six medium-sized artichokes, from which you have cut off the top half-inch of the leaves. Place upright in a saucepan, pour a half cup of Spanish olive oil over them, cook over a high flame for five minutes, then turn down the heat and add half a cup of water.

Cook uncovered for another six minutes, add another quarter cup of water, and cook covered for twenty minutes, or until the leaves pull off easily.

Hat shapes and colors are really pretty this fall. Treat yourself to several; they've a brand new look.

Rice Makes Tasty Summertime Salad

Rice makes a delicious cold salad and is much easier to prepare than many other salads. Try it for a change. We have added shrimp to this variation of an old Spanish recipe to make a festive main course. Precede it with a cold soup... follow it with a fresh fruit salad and you'll have a memorable summer dinner.

BARCELONA RICE SALAD
1 lb. fresh or frozen shrimp, cooked
1/2 cup salad oil
1/2 cup wine vinegar
1 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1 clove garlic, minced
2 cups cooked rice
1-3 cup finely sliced green pepper, 1 whole
1 tablespoon finely sliced pimiento
1 cup peeled, cubed tomatoes
2 whole tomatoes
3-oz. can chopped broiled mushrooms, drained
1 tablespoon chopped onion
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
Cut shrimp into thirds, reserving a few whole ones for decoration. Combine and blend oil, vinegar, seasonings and garlic. Pour half of the marinade into a mixing bowl and add shrimp. Toss lightly to coat shrimp thoroughly and allow to remain in marinade for several hours, turning twice. Combine rice, green pepper, pimientos, tomatoes, mushrooms, onion and parsley. Pour remaining marinade mixture over rice and toss lightly. Allow to stand for several hours. Drain shrimp and add to rice, tossing lightly. Decorate with whole shrimp. Makes 6 servings.

Honey Chocolate Sauce Gives Pep

Subsiding summer heat waves lure back lost appetites. It is then that the homemaker must plan those something - different menus because the desire for nutritious food is lessened by excessively warm weather. Mid-summer menus need to include foods that will perk up the appetite and give the body a chance to regain the necessary health food elements omitted in the quest for lighter foods when the mercury was around the hundred mark on the thermometer.

Honey Chocolate Sauce not only has eye appeal but is energy building without giving that overstuffed feeling that a heavy dessert gives.

Once the family has tasted this "yummy" sauce, you will be serving it frequently. Cut out the following recipe, order any needed ingredients first thing in the morning, plan the dessert, make and refrigerate the sauce, and after your family is served listen to the praise for the following:

HONEY CHOCOLATE SAUCE
1/4 cup butter, melted
1 tablespoon corn starch
4 tablespoons cocoa
6 marshmallows
1/2 cup honey
1/2 cup water
1/2 teaspoon vanilla
1/4 teaspoon salt
Stir in corn starch and cocoa to melted butter. Add honey and water and cook until thick. Add 6 marshmallows and stir until just melted. Add 1/2 teaspoon vanilla and 1/4 teaspoon salt. Serve hot.

Unless you plan ahead it's easy to get into a spot where there's literally nothing in your closet fit to wear. Be sure to fill in your wardrobe as the need arises and always make repairs immediately. Don't save nearly all of your clothes for one trip to the cleaners or the laundry; this is a fine way to wind up staying home from a party you really wanted to attend.

If you burn easily, never underestimate the power of a sunny autumn afternoon. The waning, golden sun still packs plenty of burning power.

NEW POWER FOR THE FUTURE—This sketch depicts Michigan's first atomic-electric generating station, to be built in Detroit. Prospective Candidates Loom As Illinois Candidate Withdraws

CHICAGO (UP)—A number of prospective candidates loomed on the political horizon today as possible replacements for Herbert C. Paschen, who resigned under pressure as Illinois' Democratic candidate for governor.

Paschen, also Cook County (Chicago) treasurer, stepped down from the top spot on the state ticket following charges about a political "welfare fund" in his office.

His resignation also was a submission to the powerful Democratic Chicago machine and downstate party leaders who felt the investigation of his office fund by federal and local authorities made him a liability on the ticket. Meanwhile, state party Chairman James A. Ronan said the 25-man central committee will meet in Springfield Tuesday, the state capital, to pick a successor to Paschen.

Several names have been mentioned as possible candidates to face Republican Gov. William G. Stratton in the November election. Chief factor in the selection of a new candidate probably will be an ability to aid presidential nominee Adlai E. Stevenson carry his home state against President Eisenhower.

Considered likely successors to Paschen are Stephen A. Mitchell,

YOUR CHILD'S HEALTH PROTECTED THE NATURAL WAY

The need of immunization against various children's disease is being stressed at the present time. Parents desire to do all in their power to protect their children's health, so proceed to have them vaccinated. There are those, however, who believe that vaccination is not necessary, and that if the body is in the right condition it will build up resistance to all diseases naturally. These people do not wish to subject their children to the dangers attending vaccination. They have a right to their opinion.

Parents who desire to do more to protect their child's health should investigate Chiropractic. Spinal adjustments allow the body to build up a natural defense against all disease. Don't let it be said that you have neglected your child's spine.

Jacoby On Bridge

By OSWALD JACOBY
Written for NEA Service

It's easy to play today's hand correctly when you look at all of the cards. Imagine that you can see only your own hand and the dummy. How should you plan to make three no-trump?

West leads the six of hearts, and dummy wins with the king. You must try to win four clubs. How should you play the clubs?

Naturally you begin by taking the king of clubs. Then you lead a club towards your hand. East plays low. Should you finesse the ten or play the ace?

This is a situation that often arises at the table, and it will pay you to work it out once for all. The percentage play is to go up with the ace of clubs.

Either play will work if each opponent has three clubs. The difference arises only when East has four clubs and West has two. Playing the ace will work when West has Q-x or J-x, but the finesse of the ten will work when West has two small clubs.

Frequency gives you the answer. West will more frequently have the doubleton queen or jack than a pair of small cards.

If you're interested in the method of knowing this, here it is. West can have any of six pairs of small cards: three pairs headed by the seven, two pairs headed by the six, and one pair headed by the five. However, West can have eight pairs headed by a picture card: queen and any of the four small cards, or jack and any of the small cards.

The odds are 8 to 6 in favor of playing the ace. It pays to play with rather than against the odds.

Trick Phrases

There are a number of phrases in common usage which are contradictory in themselves. Most of these phrases are political in origin. They indicate the constant effort of the bureaucrats to turn black into white and white into black.

One of the most common phrases is the term "paper money." By precise definition, if it is money it cannot be paper. True money must have value in itself. A check drawn on an account at a bank is not money. It is a draft against known balance.

Let's put it this way. Money is a medium of exchange. It is a universal denominator of value so that we do not have to exchange a house for a carload of wheat. Instead, we translate the house and the wheat into money, the amount of which is determined by the amount of labor that went into building the house and raising the wheat. But to be a medium of exchange, money must have value in itself. Otherwise, if a man would sell his house, he must specify what he wants for his house, i.e., 1,000 dinners, 14 suits of clothes, an automobile, a television set and a vacation in Europe. Being unwilling to do this in advance, the man specifies instead that he wants $10,000 for his house. When he has the money, he must know that the money has value in itself, for if it does not, it can only be a promissory note based on the other things that he hopes to get in time.

Our Constitution grants the government the right to coin money. There is nothing in the Constitution which permits the issuance of paper money. The currency we use is supposed to be the same as a check. It is supposed to indicate that there is a specified amount of money, i.e., coin, on deposit so that the paper could be redeemed. This is not the case.

Every piece of currency in use in this country above the $1.00 denomination carries this sentence: "This note is legal tender for all debts, public and private, and is redeemable in lawful money at the United States Treasury, or at any federal reserve bank."

Thus we see that what we call "paper money" is in fact a note, which is redeemable in "lawful money" presumably coin, since that is the only lawful money provided for in the Constitution. And coin, since it is made of metal which has value in itself, is in fact money. Consequently we see that what we are using for money isn't money; it is just paper. The term "paper money" is a misnomer. There is no such thing.

Another pet term of the bureaucrats is "federal aid." The term is supposedly a description of what occurs when the federal government hands certain sums of money over to states, schools, businesses or people. But in point of fact, it cannot be so construed. There is no such thing as federal aid.

The money which the government doles out is collected from the recipients before it is handed back. Thus, before any aid can occur, injury against the taxpayers must have taken place. The federal government has no money of its own. Everything that it acquires it gets by aggressive violence against the taxpayers. To term this lost as federal aid is a contradiction in itself. Therefore, there is no such thing as federal aid.

President Eisenhower not long ago made an appeal to the citizens of this country. He stated that he was imbued with enthusiasm for a policy which ordained a conservative attitude respecting money, but a liberal attitude respecting people. This is another contradiction. If a "liberal" attitude, in its present meaning is applied, it conveys the thought of generosity with money. What Mr. Eisenhower apparently wanted to say was that he would listen to the demands of the people and hand them money whenever it appeared that they needed or wanted it. Yet, in the same sentence, he made it clear that he intended to be conservative with money. One cannot be careful and frugal with money and at the same time be openhanded and generous with money.

The aim is contradictory and perhaps reflects the contradictions and the frustrations of the Eisenhower policy. There is no such thing as a conservative-liberal. A person is either dedicated to the conservative viewpoint, a tendency to mind his own business and not interfere however helpfully with others, or he is not. If he is, instead, dedicated to the position claimed and held by today's "liberals," he is filled with the desire of redistributing the wealth by aggressive force on the basis of need.

We hope that the American public will look closely during the coming months at the immense amount of verbiage put out by the politicians. And we hope they will correctly determine the meanings of the words used by the swashbuckling predators who besiege all of us for our votes. Any politician running for any office who uses two-headed terms like these is trying to fool the public.

Congress is considerin' raisin' your fingernails and two more told the price of postage stamps and this will be a great thing for business. Especially for the Magazine business. There are many aspiring young writers in the United States and many magazines can show a profit by saying they are always ready to consider stories from outsiders and then by neither acceptin' the stories nor returnin' the return postage. As a matter of fact, most magazines don't need stories any more. A magazine I saw the other day devoted TWENTY-SIX pages to "How To Be The Prettiest Girl In Town". Two pages were devoted to how to take a bath, two pages told how to cut

BETTER JOBS

By R. C. HOILES

Who Should Get What Is Produced?

Alfred P. Haake, in his book, "Faith and Fact," has an interesting chapter under "Distribution." Most of the conflict between capital and labor is how what is produced should be divided. To my mind there would be no question as to how wealth should be distributed if jobs were interchangeable; if there were no combinations of employers and employees that interfered with men advancing as rapidly as their abilities and efforts permitted them to advance. In short, if there was an absolute free market for labor and the products of labor.

Our trouble comes from interfering with jobs being interchangeable; from interfering with a free market. The government, of course, is the primary offender against a fair distribution of what is produced. It does this by passing might-makes-right laws that give one man or a group of men an advantage over another man or group of men.

RELATIVE SHARES IN THE PRODUCT

On this subject of how what is produced should be distributed, Haake writes:

"The problem of determining the relative shares of the common product which must be paid in wages, interest, rent and profits is not the same problem that we deal with in determining the price of commodities for sale, even though it is true that each of the shares is a price paid for services rendered and risks taken."

"The elements in cost are not complete commodities whose value can be expressed by price in a merchandise market. It is only as part of the completed product that they have market value; and it is practically impossible to determine exactly how much of the total value (not price) of the completed product is due to any one of the cost elements."

"Another difficulty in the way of determining the several shares in relation to the total price received for the product, is that the sharers are not actually partners in the operation. Some one person or group employs the others, takes the risks involved and hopes for profits. He becomes owner of the final product, and regardless of his success or failure in selling the product, he is expected to pay a fair price for the labor and other services used in production. And 'fair wages' is as likely to be related to the cost of living, or the price of other products, as to the cost of production or the price of the article whose total value is about to be distributed."

"If the recipients of wages and interest, and the sellers of materials to be used in production, were willing and did share with the owners in the risks involved in making and selling, we would have a different basis for the determination of their shares. But the process would remain essentially the same."

"There are limits within which the actual prices called wages, interest and rent are set. The difference between these limits, or the area between them constitutes the 'bargaining area.' How far the actual price goes toward either the upper or the lower limit will depend upon the relative bargaining power of the parties."

There is no power in a real bargain that is not interfered with by politicians. The power in bargaining comes from politicians. Competition would take away from any individual any advantage he may have in making a bargain if the government did not make laws that help one group by hurting other groups.

The large railroad or large retail stores have no bargaining power over the customer. Competition takes care of that. The large employer has no bargaining power over the individual worker. Competition also takes care of that. If a big employer tries to hire an employee for less than any other employer will pay him, the employee selects the employer who will reward him the most, everything considered.

Haake continues: "... The value of the product is determined in the market where it is sold (exchanged for other products through its sale for money). Then the total products are apportioned among several parties and groups who shared in its production, by the process of bargaining within the limits that set off the bargaining area. What are those limits?"

"There is a minimum limit for each factor. For labor the minimum is enough to provide bare subsistence. If labor is paid wages below the level of subsistence there will be a decline in the supply of labor and those workers still alive will be able to sell their work at higher prices (wages), thus forcing wages to go up."

"The minimum limit for rent and interest is a payment that will replace the tools and equipment furnished and also pay barely enough to encourage people to save and to invest those savings in tools and equipment to be used for production. If less is paid there will be a decrease in supply of funds and equipment, and the supply remaining will be able to command higher prices or rates."

"So with the materials and partly finished goods bought to be used in production. The price paid must be enough to enable the supplier to remain in business. "The same reasoning holds for profits, with this difference; in profits there is a payment for the use of tools which are bought with the money advanced or capital invested by the owners of the enterprise. But the largest part of the profit payment may have to be for the risk assumed by the investor or entrepreneur. If the pro-

Suez Causes Grave Doubt On 'New Military Look'

WASHINGTON — The Suez Canal crisis has stirred grave doubt here and abroad on the practicability of a national defense system based on smaller ground forces equipped with tactical or bombing atomic weapons. It is known at the Pentagon as the "new military look."

Despite considerable controversy, Admiral Arthur W. Radford is known to have proposed such a revision. In fact, the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and without too firm a denial, has been quoted as suggesting a reduction of Army personnel by 800,000.

President Eisenhower himself has conceded that weapon advancement, including guided missiles, greater fire power and atomic bombs, permit a balancing of strength along the Radford line. Maintaining both conventional and atomic forces, it is argued, would be too expensive for the national pocketbook.

Although the two national conventions handled this problem gingerly, it will figure in the Presidential campaign. In denouncing against a "second best defense," the Democrats reiterated Capitol Hill charges that the proposed reductions were motivated by budgetary rather than military considerations.

However, recognizing advances in warfare since Truman days, they declared in favor of development of "modern weapons" for use against "any sort of attack."

They did not commit themselves on military problems raised by the Suez controversy, as well as by the conflicts in Korea and Indo-China.

The Republicans were content to deny the charges that our forces have been weakened for reasons of economy. They trust the voters will disregard this whole complicated issue because of President Eisenhower's experience and background.

The politicians' vagueness is understandable, for even the military experts now begin to fear that the Suez difficulty, more so than the suspicions raised in Korea and Indo-China, has demonstrated that even small atomic armies and minor atomic skirmishes are wholly impracticable in the world's highly complex and organized economy.

When Britain and France originally planned to use force immediately against Egypt, they discovered that they lacked sufficient conventional strength for the task. It was due not only to postwar cuts, but also to the fact that they had been ousted from bases in the Middle East and in the Mediterranean. Their sole remaining strongholds, Gibraltar, Cyprus and Aden, were too remote or too inadequate.

Had they used atomic weapons against Colonel Gamal Abdel Nasser, even the tactical type, they would have damaged the canal and its installations. Even worse, they would have lighted a perpetual flame of Arabian hate against the West, including the United States.

Russia would not have had to fire a shot. All Asia and Africa would have virtually fallen into her hands overnight.

A similar problem will confront the United States, if we cannot stamp out brush fires, with conventional forces and weapons, which means ground troops.

Like Britain and France, we stand in danger of losing our forward positions in Iceland, Japan, Okinawa, The Philippines and North Africa. We did not dare to bomb in Korea or Indo-China for fear of alienating the Asians forever.

Our European Allies do not want our protection or liberation at the cost of destruction of European civilization for a hundred years. It may be that Kipling's Suez will force the Administration and Congress to take another look at the Eisenhower - Radford "new military look."

SCHIERSTEIN, Germany — If I did not look so bizarre in bell-bottom trousers I would enlist in the Navy in the hope that I would be assigned to the Rhine River Patrol, which has its headquarters in this little town near Wiesbaden.

Of all the sailors in the world, the members of this patrol must get the most spectacular view when they poke their heads out the portholes. Most sailors see nothing but water and seagulls, but the Rhine River Patrol mariners see a scenic wonderland of twelfth-century castles, medieval towers, walled cities, storied villages, and a lush, landscaped countryside.

The American sector of this international waterway is 120 miles in length, and for a great many of those miles the Rhine winds through country celebrated in song and story. Tourists from all over the world pay a pocketful of marks for excursion trips on the same path covered each day by the Navy's sleek, powerful, patrol craft.

However, before you gain the idea that the Rhine River Patrol is run by the American Express, not the U.S. Navy, perhaps I had better tell you that the sailors are not sightseers, but a strong and vital link in America's defense of Europe.

If the men of the RRP gaze at the Lorelei, or wave at the townsfolk of Bingen, it is a quick gaze and a hasty wave, because they have few idle moments. Controlling the river traffic — and the some 10,000 registered barges which ply it, flying the flags of many countries, and keeping it as cluttered as Broadway — is only one of the Navy's jobs.

Before I boarded a patrol boat I was briefed by the Patrol's commanding officer, Captain Axton T. Jones; its executive officer, Commander Wesley Gebert; and the operations officer, Lt. Commander Richard Gozard.

In case of war, the patrol would be a work horse unit, supplying material during an advance, and standing ready to haul men and guns to the West bank in case of a withdrawal. For the job assigned them, the Rhine River boys have several types of craft, many of them designed especially for Rhine conditions.

Not long ago, in a United States Aided field maneuver, the patrol ferried across 13,000 men, 512 tanks, 144 artillery pieces, and 8,000 assorted vehicles. On another giant exercise the Rhine boys carried two fully equipped divisions across the 350-foot Rhine in sixteen hours — a much shorter period than it would have taken to throw across a pontoon bridge.

The Army hasn't anything too large for this inland waterways command. It handles the massive atomic cannon — all 85 tons of it — with ease, and it doesn't bat an eye when told to get a Corporal guided missile to the other side.

My trip on the patrol boat was my first on the Rhine, and even to my inexperienced eyes its treachery was plain. The Rhine is shallow to begin with, and it's fast for another. It has a five-knot current of its average, and at many points it runs much faster than this, boiling and eddying.

To increase the navigation hazards, the channel is scarcely 150 feet wide, and most of it is occupied by the endless stream of barges, broad of beam and anywhere from 90 to 120 feet in length.

No one travels the Rhine at nightfall, respectful of its dangers. But the Rhine boys, knowing that in combat there would be around-the-clock action, practice for just such an emergency. There are no lights on the river at night, but the Americans sail steadily along, much to the amazement of the Germans.

As I was not asked to steer even once during my trip, I took 10,000 pictures. That is the number I have to take to get three or four recognizable prints. I am thinking of swapping my camera for a bowl of sauerkraut.

WHEN I FIRST RETURNED FROM my vacation, I promised to give you some of the recipes I brought back with me. I've finally got my affairs in order enough to fulfill that promise, so here are two of them. I can brag about them as they aren't original with me. Both of them are by mother-in-law's, Mrs. Anna Kadingo, of Shamokin, Pa., who is a marvelous cook.

"YOU HEAR that many a rift is caused in a marriage because the husband wishes his wife could 'cook like mother.' Well, there's no rift in our marriage over this, as I wish I could cook like Nick's mother, too. I agree with him wholeheartedly!

The first is for cole slaw, which is delicious and not at all hard to make. We like it creamy, so I double the dressing recipe.

COLE SLAW

Grate one very small head of cabbage. Add two stalks of celery and one-half green pepper, both cut up fine. Add one small carrot, grated, and one small onion, grated fine. Add two hard-boiled eggs, cut up. Season to taste.

DRESSING

1/4 cup mayonnaise
1/4 cup sour cream
1 tsp. white vinegar
1/2 tsp. sugar

Beat well and add to other ingredients. Makes 1/2 cup of dressing.

For variation, this dressing is also very good for potato salad, making it tastier than just using plain mayonnaise.

ANOTHER recipe I brought back from my mother-in-law is for a bacon dressing, which has multiple uses.

BACON DRESSING

Cut two strips of bacon into small pieces and brown. Beat one egg well. Add to the egg, 2 tablespoons water, 1 tablespoon white vinegar, and one tablespoon sugar. Beat mixture well. Pour over bacon, stirring constantly, over medium flame, until it thickens. If it becomes too thick, add 1 tablespoon water.

VARIATIONS: Shred and salt lettuce. Pour dressing over it right before serving and garnish with 1 hard-boiled egg.

* Boil potatoes and cut up into pieces. Add bacon dressing.

Cut up fresh string beans and boil. Add bacon dressing.

* Both of these recipes take very little preparation, which is essential to a working gal, but they taste as good, if not better, than some things which take hours to prepare.

Nick and I have enjoyed both of them since we've returned, as I'm sure you will.

NEXT WEEK I'll give you two of my aunt's recipes. One is for "glorified hamburgers" and the other is for shortcake, especially aimed at people like me who are not especially fond of the baking-powder-biscuit type of shortcake.

While in Shamokin, Pa., on our vacation, I also learned how to make Russian pierogies, which I can only describe as being made from potatoes, cheese and dough, and served with an onion-and-butter sauce; and Polish pigeons. I especially love the pierogies, but the recipe itself is not much use to

HD Council Plans Achievement Day

Plans for an Achievement Day, to be held Sept. 8, in the American Legion Hall, were made at the meeting of the Gray County Home Demonstration Council in the office of Miss Helen Dunlap, county HD agent.

It was announced the 4-H girls will present food demonstrations, which will be judged, during Achievement Day. The Carson County 4-H girls have been invited to participate, the women were told.

Plans were discussed for educational exhibits and for the demonstrations to be given during the day. It was explained that all women of the Panhandle area are invited to attend Achievement Day activities.

Miss Dunlap announced that all clubs which have not sent in titles for their Achievement Day projects should do so as soon as possible.

Mrs. Ernest McKnight asked that delegates to the national and state conventions in San Antonio, Sept. 25-28, meet at 10:30 Wednesday in Miss Dunlap's office for a training session.

Miss Dunlap explained that club reports are due for the annual meeting in October and asked that all committees attend the meeting. She told the women that films have been ordered for the Council's camera and urged the clubs to use them while they are fresh.

The women were asked to keep records of all aid given to non-club members.

Skellytown SS Class Will Elect Officers

SKELLYTOWN N.— (Special) — The Dorcas Sunday School Class of the First Baptist Church met in the church recreation rooms for a coffee and business meeting recently.

Election of officers will be held at the next meeting, it was announced. Mrs. George DeMoss gave the devotional. Mrs. E. C. Fitch and Mrs. Digger Dean served coffee and sweet rolls.

Present were Meses, Paul Mathews, C. R. McCloud, Edd Kliebrink, Johnnie Willison and George DeMoss.

After a party, stack the overflowing ash trays on the sink overnight. Makes a mess to face in the morning, but a mess is better than fire which could start in a wastebasket from smoldering butts.

Latest Freezers Are More Practical And Feature More Built-In Attractions

By KAY SHERWOOD
NEA Staff Writer

Planning to add a home freezer to your kitchen conveniences this fall? If so, you'll find more built-in attractions than ever in new models. Specialized storage compartments — ice cream keepers, juice dispensers, glide-out drawers for odd-sized packages and a "bookshelf" arrangement of shelves that puts packages within easy reach on the door, are a few of the added conveniences.

Some of the arguments in choosing between upright or chest models no longer carry as much weight. One major manufacturer, for example, has brought the production cost of upright 13 and 18 cubic-foot models down to that of chest models of comparable size and quality.

COLOR MATCHED to other appliances in a line, freezers fit into kitchen decor now. Upright models are obviously more saving of floor space than chest models but where the freezer is to be located in a utility room, garage or basement this factor is not so important. I happen to have a chest model in the utility room and the flat countertop work surface is a great convenience quite apart from food storage.

No matter which type best suits your needs, the question of how big a freezer should be comes up at once. Often the difference in cost between one model and the next larger size is not prohibitive. The U.S. Department of Agriculture estimates the life of a freezer at 12 years.

My young, growing family doesn't account for a great deal of frozen food consumption yet but they will in four or five years and this persuaded me to buy a larger (14 cubic foot) model than we really need right now.

In most urban homes, freezer storage supplements fresh and canned food so we don't need to figure as great an allotment of cubic-foot space per person as if the freezer were the principal source of the year's food storage.

When you have plugged in the freezer, take a tip from home economists. Don't hoard the contents, something that novices are apt to do. The real economy of freezer ownership, they say, can be measured in part by the turnover of its contents.

Freezer instruction books tell you how long individual foods can be held without appreciable loss of quality. When the local market has a sale on beef cuts or poultry, I buy several for freezing but I use them up on a regular schedule.

PROBABLY the most important feature of having a freezer at

Into the freezer goes a gala birthday cake to set the frosting before it's packaged for storage against the day when Junior and his pals will devour it. Upright freezer, color matched to other kitchen appliances, also features shelves on door to permit easy reaching of food packages.

your fingertips is the time it can save, the varied and flavorful meals you can serve and, for me, the chance to preserve foods in the quantity and way we like them.

Milwaukee Win Gives Bum's
Rush To Brooklyn Hopes

By FRED DOWN
United Press Sports Writer
Joe Adcock has dealt the Brooklyn Dodgers many a crippling blow in person but few hurt so much as one he struck 90 miles away.

The blow, a three-run, ninth-inning home run, came Wednesday night to give the Milwaukee Braves a 4-1 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates while the Dodgers "sweated out" the result 90 miles down the tracks in Chicago. The world champions had walloped the Cubs, 11-4, in an afternoon game. It was as important a blow as has been struck for the Braves all season because it was the difference today between a 1½ game first-place lead and a slender half game margin over Brooklyn. Even the Dodgers would admit that none of the 11 homers he's hit against them this season provided a greater setback to their pennant plans.

Adcock's 34th round-tripper of the campaign came after Hank Aaron singled and Ed Mathews drew a walk off Elroy Face. Mathews put the Braves ahead with his 33rd homer in the second inning but the Pirates tied the score in the ninth when Dick Groat singled home Dale Long. The game was held up by rain for 53 minutes at the start of the ninth.

Campanella Big Gun
Lew Burdette shut out the Pirates on four hits until the ninth and wound up with a seven-hitter to win his 17th game of the year. Roy Campanella drove in five runs with a three-run homer and a double to spark an 11-hit Dodger attack on four Cub pitchers. Carl Erskine yielded 11 hits but went the distance for his 12th win. Duke Snider contributed his 37th homer for Brooklyn.

Johnny Temple and Roy McMillan, Cincinnati's "mighty mite" double play combination, took over for their more muscular teammates to drive in two runs each in the Redlegs' 4-3 triumph over the New York Giants.

Robin Roberts was combed for 12 hits including a homer by Ray Katt but hung on for his 18th win as the Philadelphia Phillies beat the St. Louis Cardinals, 8-4. Del Ennis smacked his 23rd homer, a double and a single for the Phillies.

Yanks Eight In Front
The New York Yankees remained eight games ahead in the American League when they rallied for three runs in the ninth to beat the Kansas City Athletics, 7-6. Mickey Mantle, who hit his 46th homer in the third inning and now is four games ahead of Babe Ruth's record pace, climaxed the winning rally with a 400-foot single to score the decisive run.

Vic Wertz singled home the tying run in the sixth and knocked in the winning run with a sacrifice fly in the eighth to give the Cleveland Indians a 3-2 decision over the Baltimore Orioles.

Tom Brewer won his 17th game when the Boston Red Sox beat the Detroit Tigers, 4-2, as Dick Gernert came through with a run-scoring double and a two-run single.

Jim Wilson won his first game since July 3 when the Chicago White Sox beat the Washington Senators, 9-7, and mathematically eliminated them from the race.

Ike Better Than Average As Golfer

TODAY'S SPORT PARADE

(Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.)

By OSCAR FRALEY

United Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UP)—President

Eisenhower always has been secretive about his D-days—whether debarkation or divots—but the first details available today make it a matter of record that

Ike is a better than average occasional golfer.

Last week the President played his first full round since his operation last June. Considering the long layoff, Ike's play was amazingly effective as he carded a steady 90.

And that practice behind the White House paid off as he chipped with laudable precision for a total of five one-putt greens.

This marked the first time, his

18-hole tour of the tough Cypress

Point course at Pebble Beach,

Calif., in which observers were permitted to follow him with card and pencil. The conclusions were that, while Ike may never win the National Amateur, he'd be a tough cookie in a weekend five buck

Nassau.

Drives Erratic

Running over the recorded details, you can draw a pretty fair analysis of his game. His drives are erratic, measuring 200 to 215 yards when he connects, but like you and me he is bothered by a slice.

Just as any other weekend golfer, he is troubled by his long fairway woods and long irons. His short irons are good, he's a terror

when chipping but his sand shot is a slice.

Baylor Gets Track Star

WACO, Tex. (UP)—James

Baird, star broad jumper and sprinter from Dallas Sunset, has accepted a track scholarship at Baylor, Coach Jack Patterson an-

are unsteady. His putting touch was rusty, as attested by two three-putt greens, but those five one-putters helped.

The details of his round, as recorded by Sports Illustrated Magazine, herewith explain his "90 or 91" as he picked up on one hole in which he figured he "could have had a six or seven."

On the 418-yard first hole he three-putted for a double bogey six. He bogeyed the par five, 532-yard second when he missed the green. On the third, 156 yards, Ike spanked a four iron four feet from the pin but missed his birdie putt.

Traps Approach
Trapping his approach on the fourth and needing two to get out, he double-bogeyed the 378-yard par four hole but then played the 468-yard fifth in a regulation five.

On the 503-yard sixth he flubbed his pitch shot for a bogey six and took a bogey four on the 385-yard seventh. On the eighth he picked up after three whacks in a monster trap. But he walloped a 215-yard drive on the 295-yard ninth and wedged 15 feet from the pin for a par four.

He had five straight bogeys starting home, smothering a three iron second on the 10th, slicing a four-wood second on the 11th, missing two iron shots on the 12th, pushing a three iron into the rough on the 13th and leaving his three wood second shot short on the 14th hole.

He parred the 125-yard 15th; and played the famed 222-yard 16th the safe way for a four. He lost his second shot in the trees on the 17th and on the 334-yard 18th hit his four iron second 20 feet from the cup—and three pulled.

So from now on, when he says he was in the low 90's, don't bet he wasn't. This even convinces the Democrats.

Oilers Swamp Clovis Twice, 19-9 And 6-1

The Pampa Oilers made it three out of four over the Clovis Pioneers as they swamped the losers in both ends of a two-night double header last night by the scores of 19-9 and 6-1.

In the lid-lifter, starting Oiler pitcher Hoyt Benedict was cuffed around for four base hits and six runs including two doubles and a home run by Pioneer catcher Bob Smith. Art Perina came on to put out the fire and get the win.

After having the sacks crammed in the first inning and not scoring a run, the Oilers put their hitting logs on and came up with five runs in the second, third, and fifth inning to take a commanding lead of 15-6. Big stick men for the Oilers in the first game were Jim Robinette, Len Tucker, and Frank Kempa. Pitcher Art Perian helped his cause with a pair of base hits and a couple of runs.

The second game matched lefty Bob Juergco against fire-balling Buddy Woods. Although Juergco fanned ten Oiler batters, two big hits knocked in three runs each for the winners, one a line-drive double by manager A. B. Cross cleaning stacks sacks, the other a home run by Bob Flores.

Buddy Woods, scattering five hits and two walks, was never in trouble. He was aided considerably by three lightning-like double plays engineered by the Oiler infield. The double win moved the Oilers to a game and a half in front of fourth place San Angelo. Manager A. B. Cross announced that Hoyt Benedict would twirl in tonight's game against the Roswell Rockets.

This September Was Goal For Removal Of Racial Barriers

By AL KUETTNER
United Press Staff Correspondent

ATLANTA (UP)—Here it is almost September morning when Johnny goes marching off to school again and, throughout the Deep South, the white boy will go to his school and the Negro to his as they have done for generations. This September of 1956 — two autumns after the Supreme Court ruling on segregation — was to have been a historic date. People working for quick compliance with the ruling had set it as the goal for removal of racial barriers in the public schools.

Let's see how close they have come to the target.

The integrationists have a solid record of accomplishment in some areas, mostly the states bordering the Old South. But there is no minimizing their failure in the heart of Dixie.

Ruling in 1954

On May 17, 1954, when the court made its ruling, there were 21 states and the District of Columbia with segregation laws.

Almost 600 school districts in these states have been integrated in whole or in part during the past year. Don Shoemaker, executive secretary of the Southern Education Reporting Service, says some 300,000 Negroes will attend integrated schools for the first time next month.

A pin-studded map of the South shows a thicket of integration in Maryland, West Virginia, Kentucky, Missouri, Oklahoma and Texas. That thins out to three spots in Arkansas and two in Tennessee.

WIRED TO STAY—In Norrby, Sweden, 14-year-old Goeran Andersson managed to balance himself on his bicycle on the wire for a world record time of six hours and 40 minutes. The youngster, who broke a long-standing German record during his wiry feat, used an ordinary bicycle and drove directly on the rims. He has been invited to repeat his wire act in Moscow next year.

But there is not yet the slightest crack in public school level in the segregation wall in Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana.

Those are the states most likely to hear out predictions that generations of litigation over the race issue are in prospect. If anything, pro-segregation feeling there is more determined than ever.

Already this year Florida and North Carolina legislatures held special sessions and strengthened segregation laws. Virginia and Louisiana are in extra session this week.

Virginia Court Order
Charlottesville, Va., is under court order to integrate this fall but that is likely to be postponed by appeal. Gov. Thomas B. Stanley will ask the Assembly to permit closing of white schools forced to admit Negroes.

In Tennessee, where Gov. Frank Clement's influence has held down an all-out pro-segregation drive, it is reported that the issue will hit the 1957 Legislature full force. With election year politics out of the way, Clement may go along with stronger segregation measures.

In Memphis, the old Crump organization backed a "Citizens for Progress" group that won with a segregation platform over a local good government league. School integration is virtually an accomplished fact in the metropolis of St. Louis which is 20 per cent Negro.

TRUCKIN' ON DOWN—Carlos Londono, his wife and four children, and a 36-year-old White truck finally arrived in Cleveland, Ohio, after nearly 27 months of travel through steaming jungles, across plains and mountains from Bogota, Colombia. Beginning in May, 1954, when Londono decided to head north, the saga has included an attack by a jaguar in the jungles of Costa Rica, crossing through a No Man's Land in a shooting skirmish between Costa Rica and Nicaragua, a violent storm that upset their truck, and two children born along the way. The truck was plastered with advertisements en route to help pay travel expenses. Having been nomads for so long, the Londonos are planning to settle in Cleveland. He presented the truck to the White Motor Co., with which he hopes to get a job as a machinist.
