Energy firms want action on Atlantic drilling

Searching for oil and gas along East Coast is Obama administration's call

By Jennifer A. Dlouhy
Houston Chronicle

WASHINGTON — Energy industry leaders are fretting that it could be a decade before the federal government allows them to hunt for oil and gas along the East Coast, unless the Obama administration shifts its approach to offshore drilling.

Although the federal waters of the Atlantic Ocean are technically open for oil exploration, drilling leases must be sold in government auctions, and none of those sales are planned for the area under a schedule that runs through mid-August 2017.

With the Interior Department poised to soon begin the long process of drafting the next five-year sale schedule spanning 2017 to 2022, oil industry representatives are imploring the administration to keep the door open to Atlantic auctions.

"Let's continue to allow opportunities and provide opportunities to at least explore and see what's actually out there," said Erik Milito, upstream director for the American Petroleum Institute.

In assembling the current sale schedule, Interior Department officials insisted that private companies should first conduct geophysical research to get a sense of the area's potential oil and gas resources before the government makes any leasing decisions or schedules sales. But industry representatives worry that sticking to that same approach for the 2017-2022 schedule would likely foreclose Atlantic auctions for that time period too.

Their concerns are wedded to one hard reality: Under federal law, if a potential offshore lease sale doesn't make it into the five-year plan, it can't happen.

Generally, the multi-year process of assembling those leasing blueprints begins broadly, with plenty of acreage on the table, and potential offerings scaled back over time. Randall Luthi, a former federal offshore drilling regulator who now heads the National Ocean Industries Association, said that makes it crucial that Atlantic acreage is not ruled out at the beginning.

He likened the planning process to an inverted pyramid. "You start on the five-year plan including as much as you can, and as you go through the process, it winnows down," he said. "You never add during the process. You only delete."

While the Interior Department's Bureau of Ocean Energy Management appears likely to broadly approve seismic research in the Atlantic as soon as next January, industry representatives said litigation and individual permit reviews mean the geological surveys might not begin for several years — long after planning for the next five-year drilling lease sale schedule gets underway.

The ocean energy bureau said in a statement that it expects to complete a broad environmental assessment of seismic studies in the Atlantic early next year, potentially allowing potential surveys in 2014.

Mayoral candidates support pet adoptions

By Joseph Basco

Adorable puppies were encapsulated in the arms of the mayoral candidates Friday as they all voiced their support for pet adoptions in a booming city with few shelters.

At Lone Star Sanctuary for Animals on Fairgrounds Road, space and other resources are becoming scarce commodities as animals arrive at a greater rate than their departure. Staff and volunteers estimate that for every animal that gets adopted, three more arrive.

Volunteer Matthew Ash said the influx of animals is because of the influx of humans. When people from out of state move into an apartment complex that's not pet-friendly, the pet may be taken to the shelter, or worse, left out on the street.

"We are here supporting volunteers that are working hard and of course they need donations for food, medicine and so forth," said candidate Jerry Morales.

"And there's plenty of Midland money right here to help, so come on, let's take care of business here," Kathy White said.

"And wouldn't it be incredible if Midland were the first no-kill city in the state?" said John James.

"I agree," said Keith McLelland.

Plans are in place to expand the only no-kill shelter in Midland by 16 acres, adjacent land that recently was donated. Lone Star plans to add more buildings, such as a clinic, a new cat house and storage buildings.

"We're out of space," said Kirk French, executive director of Lone Star. "When we get full we can't take any more in until we get some out."

But the city's plan to widen Fairgrounds Road has complicated the platting and zoning for the expansion. The cost, up to $5 million, and shortage of staff and volunteers are pushing the expansion further from reality.

Ash said he is seeking help from foundations for the expansion. In the meantime, French suggested that pet owners spay and neuter their pets, while treating them as family members.

Editors waged war of words about county seat

Editor's Note: The following is excerpted form "A History of Character: The Story of Midland, Texas," to be published in 2014.

Midland's first newspaper, The Enterprise, began publication in 1884 and a year later, editor Charles Rathbun wrote an editorial insisting that the state carve Midland County out of Tom Green County.

Though a sleepy, dusty burg in the middle of a land still largely unsettled, Rathbun wrote with confidence of how he saw his town and provided an early example for us today of the progressive nature of the people who have always lived here:

"Midland must be a county seat, as every prosperous railroad town should be. The Enterprise would prefer the organization of a new county in this large one ... but if that is not accorded by the legislature we will have to vote (to move) the Tom Green County Courthouse here and inconvenience our San Angelo neighbors, as much as we would regret it," Rathbun wrote.

The editor of the San Angelo Standard took exception to the outrageous suggestion, firing back in an editorial of his own: "Don't you think, Charlie, it is a little too previous to talk about moving the county seat before you have a single voter or even a saloon with which to influence him? Go a little slow and fill up the country surrounding your imaginary agency to "leave the Atlantic areas in the five-year plan throughout the development process and schedule some lease sales at some point in that 2017-2022 time frame."

Then, he said, if seismic research does not reveal promising resources or the geological data are not collected in time, the bureau could cancel the sales.

"You don't have to prejudge that," he said. "Don't rule it out at the beginning because you don't have the data."

Interior Department officials insisted they will take an expansive view when they begin piecing together the 2017-2022 leasing plan sometime next year. Atlantic acreage won't be ruled out just because seismic data isn't in hand, stressed Tommy Beaudreau, Interior's acting assistant secretary for land and minerals management.

Nor must the Interior Department completely resolve concerns about Defense Department activities in the same Atlantic waters as drillships and rigs, he added.

"We don't have to have the full set of data from the seismic work and we don't have to completely work through the issues around deconfliction in order to make a decision around scoping a new five-year plan," Beaudreau said.

In line with the oil industry's recommendation, Beaudreau said the ocean energy bureau was open to tentatively scheduling lease sales in the Atlantic — as it has done for waters around Alaska — with the idea that they could be canceled if necessary information isn't ready in time. An Atlantic lease sale could be penciled in for 2021, for instance, to allow time for harvesting geological and environmental data.

Ultimately, any final decision on the issue will rest with Interior Secretary Sally Jewell.

Federal Atlantic waters are estimated to contain 37 trillion cubic feet of gas and 3.8 billion barrels of oil.

Shallow water: New offshore energy regulator warns 'risk does not discriminate'

But estimates about the area's oil and gas potential may be conservative because they are based on geological surveys conducted three decades ago. New seismic technology and computer modeling can more clearly see geological features that could signify pockets of oil and gas.

Environmentalists and some political leaders say offshore drilling and the seismic research that precedes it are too risky.

Seismic surveys generally involve sending pulses of sound through the ocean and under the seafloor; when the sound waves bounce back, they bring clues about what lies below.

But along the way, the seismic blasts can harm whales, dolphins and fisheries, said Matthew Huelsenbeck, a marine scientist with the conservation group Oceana.

"Seismic air gun blasts are the first dangerous step to offshore drilling in the Atlantic, which has not been made safe since the disaster in the Gulf," Huelsenbeck said, referring to the 2010 explosion and fire at the Macondo well.

Industry officials argue that geological survey techniques have advanced, lessening the potential risk to marine life.

The Interior Department could require companies to take precautions such as shutdowns during whale migration seasons and when dolphins are nearby. Additional limits also may be embedded in federal permits governing the work.

village or the results will be disastrous to you …"

Bert Rawlins, the former editor of the Midland Gazette, a newspaper that followed The Enterprise, wrote, "It was discovered that there were not enough regular inhabitants in the proposed county and city to justify organization. That was remedied by announcing a town lot sale in Midland and setting special excursion rates on the T&P Railroad from as far east as Colorado City. On the day of the sale, visitors let us have their support by signing the petition and the matter was adjusted."

Author John Howard Griffin wrote, "The transporting of people to Midland via rail was an early creative form of marketing the town, a Chamber of Commerce-like effort that offered people a mini-vacation if only they would debark the train and sign the petition until enough names existed to make a legitimate request to 'legally' become a county seat in the eyes of Austin lawmakers."

Despite the acrimony of the editor of the San Angelo Standard, on February 28, 1885, a special act of the Texas Legislature granted Rathbun's wish, naming Midland the county seat.

Carl Ray Pannell

Carl Ray Pannell, 71, passed away October 26, 2013 in Midland, Texas. Carl was born to B.C. and Mary Pannell on October 23, 1942 in Sundown, Texas. Services will be on Tuesday, October 29, 2013 at 2:00 PM at Nalley-Pickle & Welch Chapel with Brother Bob Porterfield officiating. Interment will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park.

As a young boy, Carl moved with his family to Midland, Texas and later graduated from Midland High School. For a short time, he was on the Sul Ross College bull riding team. Carl served his country during the Vietnam War as an electrician in the Army, thereafter, making a career as a cable television engineer. His passion as a young man was bull riding and anything to do with the cowboy lifestyle. He truly loved the West Texas way of living, spending time with his friends shooting the bull, especially if it had anything to do with cowboys, guns and good times. Carl enjoyed spending time with grandchildren and family whenever he could.

Carl is survived by his three sons, Dustin L. Pannell and wife Christine, of Midland, Texas, Colton L. Pannell and wife Melissa of Aledo, Texas, and Nathan D. Pannell of Midland, Texas; grandchildren, Sydney L. Pannell of Midland, Texas, Ryan L. Pannell and Katelynn E. Pannell of Aledo, Texas; sister, Shirley Fortenberry of Slidell, Texas; and many nieces, nephews and cousins.

Pallbearers will be Jim Morrow, Conner Morrow, Dick Venator, Les Fortenberry, and Christopher Davis. Honorary Pallbearer, Charlie Jezek.

He is preceded in death by his parents, B.C. and Mary Pannell of Midland, Texas, and brother, Milton Pannell and wife Patsy of Lubbock, Texas.

In Lieu of flowers donations may be made to Home Hospice of Midland, Texas or the charity of your choice.

Arrangements are under the direction of Nalley-Pickle & Welch Funeral Home & Crematory of Midland. Online condolences may be made at www.npwelch.com

Kelly Love

Kelly Love, 51, passed away October 26, 2013 following a long illness. She was born August 11, 1962 in Chandler, Arizona and grew up in Kingsville, Dallas, and Midland, Texas. Kelly was a licensed beautician in the State of Florida, and lived and worked in Ft. Lauderdale for 25 years. She returned home to Midland in 2005.

She is survived by her parents, Paul and Margie Marko of Midland; sister Erin Peets and spouse Robert of Kyle, Texas; aunt Linda Wilmot, uncles Wayne, Terry, and Donald Hembree of Arizona; nine nieces and nephews; and her beloved dog and companion Jesse.

Critical Mass reaching tipping point

Associated Press

HOUSTON — With hoots and hollers and flashing lights, the riders of Critical Mass surge joyously down Washington Avenue.

At first this seems like any other group bike ride — but the cheers and lights keep coming. And coming. And coming. Red lights be damned, the stream of cyclists powers through, to the chagrin of drivers trying to get through the intersection.

Scenes like this one, during the group's September ride, fuel complaints that Critical Mass riders disobey traffic laws and display hostility to motorists. Yet the group is gaining momentum. Hundreds of riders show up for the start at Market Square Park the last Friday of every month.

Houston's Critical Mass, like others across the nation, is part protest, part party and part intentional public nuisance. Its rapid growth, while increasing interest in cycling, challenges participants to police themselves and strains the unwritten contract between drivers and bicyclists.

"We can't just sit back and have no one step up," said Hector Garcia, who has ridden in the event since 2005 and manages the group's online presence. "Everyone is learning. Every group ride faces challenges."

Estimates of the typical number of Critical Mass riders in Houston range from 1,000 to 2,000. Though the Houston group has been active for more than eight years, city police haven't issued tickets or taken steps to assist the riders.

"We are aware of the Critical Mass group," Houston police spokesman Victor Senties said. "We do encourage its members to express their First Amendment rights. We do want them to understand they have to (respect) the rights of others" by obeying traffic laws.

Critical Mass has faced similar struggles since its beginning in San Francisco in 1992. Riders there organized a large group to take advantage of their legal right to the road.

As other cities jumped on the Critical Mass bandwagon and crowds grew, they have faced the same tipping point with mixed results. San Francisco and Chicago police often ride in the group, and officers have arrested cyclists for offenses ranging from blocking intersections to denting vehicles with a bike lock. In Poland, riot police shut the ride down.

In New York, chaos ensued after a police officer pushed a cyclist off his bike during a dispute. The officer later was convicted of falsifying parts of his police report, ending his police career.

Houston's loosely organized group is looking to rein in its more extreme elements without dampening the fun.

"This ride is a lot more of an organized ride than people give it credit," said Neil Bremner, co-owner of Bike Barn, a local bicycle and repair shop. "Probably more organized than a fringe group within the ride would like and less organized than many others, including some drivers, would prefer."

Police and other city departments are talking with organizers — the group symbolically lacks leadership — to help make the ride more manageable.

"If it is unsuccessful, then the next step is enforcement," Senties told the Houston Chronicle. "They have got to understand they have to respect other people's rights."

Drivers caught in the crowd complain of cyclists cursing at them and beating on car hoods. Some motorists have complained to police, saying the red light-running is an unwelcome disruption and a safety issue.

"If there was an ambulance, could it get through?" asked Chris Whitehouse, who lives off Washington Avenue near Shepherd Drive.

Critics of all the attention to cycling have called Houston's lack of enforcement and focus on trails and bike lanes a war on cars.

Parkinson's patients learn to find their voice

Associated Press

RICHARDSON — As Pam Wood sang along to the car radio, she caught a glimpse of herself in the mirror. Her lips were barely moving. She said she looked "like a ventriloquist."

Since her Parkinson's diagnosis last year, Wood, 59, has worked to curb the paralyzing effects of the neurological disease. She joined support groups and signed up for research trials and yoga classes. She practiced swinging her weaker arm when walking and raising her eyebrows in conversation.

Early on, Wood decided Parkinson's would not turn her "into a statue." When she had trouble speaking clearly, she resolved it wouldn't silence her either.

She turned to Parkinson Voice Project, a nonprofit based in Richardson that offers free voice therapy to Parkinson's patients.

Michael J. Fox and Muhammad Ali have long been public faces of Parkinson's, highlighting side effects such as tremors and stiffness. But in recent months, Linda Ronstadt has turned the spotlight on another effect of the disease: It has robbed her of her singing voice.

But at Parkinson Voice Project, patients sing in a choir and their vocal warm-ups echo in the hallways. Instead of aiming for the perfect note, their goal is to preserve their voices.

The organization, which began in 2005, has a $1.3 million annual budget covered by donations from patients, foundations and supporters. The staff of 15 people moved into larger office space last month and has begun hosting conferences for speech-language pathologists from around the country.

Therapy is offered without a price tag but with a promise that recipients "pay it forward."

The nonprofit's mantra — "Speak With Intent" — is based on the research of Daniel Boone, a speech-language pathologist who found that people with Parkinson's spoke louder when counting backward rather than forward. The secret, he discovered, was thinking about every word.

Parkinson Voice Project was founded by speech-language pathologist Samantha Elandary, who began offering therapy out of her Dallas home in the late 1990s.

Some of her patients paid for therapy with their health insurance, but she saw many others who were unable to pay after losing their jobs or weighing voice therapy against the cost of medicine and doctor's appointments.

"The voice is a necessity, but basic needs come first," Elandary told The Dallas Morning News.

For most patients, voice trouble begins with sensory deficit. Patients think they're speaking at a normal volume, when they're speaking much more softly. Some blame their troubles on a spouse's hearing loss. Over time, speaking with reduced amplitude weakens muscles used to speak and swallow. Breathing can become choppy and uncoordinated.

Although physical impairments can overshadow voice loss, Elandary saw its spiral effect on self-confidence. Patients received wrong orders at restaurants, faded into the background at business meetings and avoided social gatherings. In some cases, they lost the ability to laugh, cough or swallow.

"The ability to communicate effectively is so important to who someone is," said Elandary, who was born with a cleft palate and had years of speech therapy. "It impacts how other people see you, how they treat you, what they think you can do."

"Our job here is so much more than treating patients and training therapists," she said. "Our mission is to instill hope."

When Wood noticed signs of Parkinson's, she thought she was just getting old. She moved slower and felt off balance. She thought she might have carpal tunnel and went to a masseuse, who urged her to go to the doctor.

She's in the early stages of the disease and takes fewer pills than many in her support group. Her most noticeable symptoms are her slower pace, muted facial expressions and soft voice.

The average person speaks at a volume between 72 and 78 decibels. Wood's voice averaged 62 decibels.

For four weeks in August, Wood went to voice therapy before going to her sales job for a sports equipment company. Her vocal exercises resembled choir warm-ups. She slid her voice up and down a scale, sustained an "ah," counted aloud and recited poetry. She threw her voice over a mountain and a lake in a photo on the wall.

In her East Dallas home, she set up her desk with a workbook, decibel meter and glass of water. On the wall, she taped two signs — "Think Big" and "Speak With Intention." She raised her voice above her barking dogs and blaring TV.

More than 100K in area lose electricity

Crews worked to restore power after storms in the Houston area knocked out electricity to more than 100,000 CenterPoint Energy customers.

Utility records show the number of outages dwindled to about 6,600 by late Sunday afternoon as repairs continued.

CenterPoint spokeswoman Leticia Lowe said the outages happened as strong storms moved through the area early Sunday.

Storms also soaked parts of North Texas on Saturday night. Crews worked to restore electricity to the last few hundred customers of Dallas-based Oncor still without power Sunday afternoon.

The Texas-TCU football game Saturday night in Fort Worth was delayed more than three hours because of lightning and rain. The game ended early Sunday with the Longhorns beating TCU 30-7.

City bus crashes into eastside home

A city bus has crashed into a car, jumped a curb and collided with the front of a home on San Antonio's eastside.

Several television stations reported that the driver wasn't injured and no one was aboard the bus when it crashed around 1 p.m. Sunday.

There were no reported injuries in the home. A woman driving the car was hospitalized with minor injuries.

Police were investigating the cause of the crash.

It came two days after three children and two adults were injured when a school bus crashed into a home at Fort Sam Houston in San Antonio.

That bus was returning from Fort Sam Houston Elementary School on Friday afternoon, when it ran into a home in a military housing area. The driver said the brakes failed.

Davis makes Baldwin veteran her campaign manger

Democratic gubernatorial candidate Wendy Davis has picked the architect of Tammy Baldwin's historic U.S. Senate election last year to manage her campaign.

Karin Johanson managed Baldwin's 2012 campaign, helping her become the first openly gay candidate elected to the Senate. Baldwin is also the first woman from her home state of Wisconsin elected to that body.

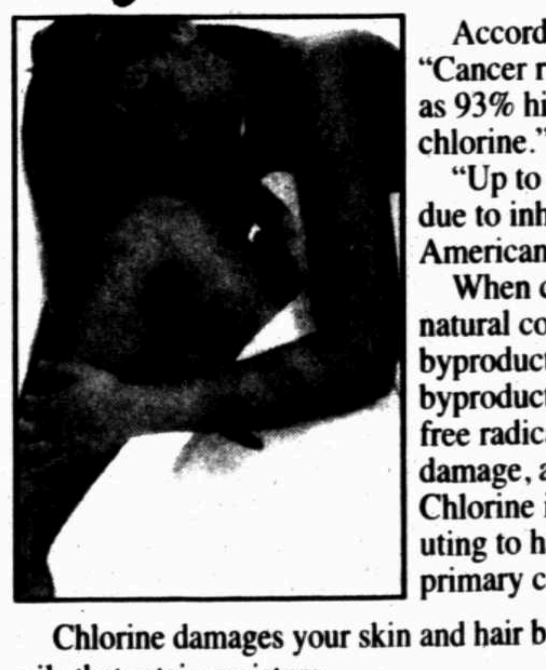
Why Remove Chlorine from Your Water?


According to the U.S. Council of Environmental Quality, "Cancer risk among people using chlorinated water is as much as 93% higher than among those whose water does not contain chlorine."
"Up to two-thirds of the harmful effects of chlorine are due to inhalation and skin absorption while showering."- The American Journal Of Public Health.
When chlorine is added to our water, it combines with other natural compounds to form trihalomethanes (chlorination byproducts), or THMs. These chlorine byproducts trigger the production of free radicals in the body, causing cell damage, and are highly carcinogenic. Chlorine is also suspected of contributing to hardening of the arteries, the primary cause of heart disease.
Chlorine damages your skin and hair by killing cells and attacking the oils that retain moisture.
Chlorine-free showers and baths will leave your skin softer and more hydrated.
Your hair will be silky smooth and hair color will last longer.

Challenging time for Christian adoption movement

Associated Press

To many Christian evangelicals, their commitment to finding homes for the world's orphans is something to celebrate — and they will, gathering at hundreds of churches across America to direct their thoughts and prayers to these children.

But the fifth annual Orphan Sunday, this coming weekend, arrives at a challenging time, and not just because the number of international adoptions is dwindling. The adoption movement faces criticisms so forceful that some of its own leaders are paying heed.

The gist: Some evangelicals are so enamored of international adoption as a mission of spiritual salvation — for the child and the adoptive parents — that they have closed their eyes to adoption-related fraud and trafficking, and have not fully embraced alternatives that would help orphans find loving families in their home countries.

Some adoption advocates in evangelical circles have angrily rejected the criticisms. But the president of the coalition that organizes Orphan Sunday, Jedd Medefind of the Christian Alliance for Orphans, has urged his allies and supporters to take the critiques to heart even though he disputes some aspects of them. Alliance partners, he says, should be eager to support a broad range of orphan-care programs and to avoid the temptation of viewing adoptive parents as saviors.

"When the dominant feature of our thinking becomes 'us as rescuers,' we're in grave danger," Medefind wrote on the alliance website. "What often follows is the pride, self-focus and I-know-better outlook that has been at the root of countless misguided efforts to help others."

One leading critic of the movement comes from within evangelical ranks — Professor David Smolin, director of the Center for Biotechnology, Law and Ethics at the law school of Baptist-affiliated Samford University in Alabama. Smolin plunged into the debate after he and his wife adopted two daughters from India in 1998, then learned that the girls had been abducted from an orphanage where they'd been placed temporarily by their mother.

The evangelical movement "uncritically participates in adoption systems riddled with child laundering, where children are illicitly obtained through fraud, kidnapping or purchase," Smolin wrote in a law journal article. "The result is often tragically misdirected and cruel, as the movement participates in the needless separation of children from their families."

Many of Smolin's concerns were reinforced with the recent publication of "The Child Catchers," a book about the evangelical adoption movement by journalist Kathryn Joyce. It details cases where foreign children adopted by evangelicals were mistreated and looks at problematic Christian-led adoption initiatives in such countries as Ethiopia, Liberia and Haiti — where Idaho church group leader Laura Silsby briefly was jailed for arranging illegal travel of children after the 2010 earthquake.

The evangelical adoption movement, writes Joyce, has provided millions of new advocates for a global adoption industry "too often marked by ambiguous goals and dirty money, turning poor countries' children into objects of salvation, then into objects of trade."

Medefind wrote a detailed response to the book, crediting Joyce for providing an "important warning regarding potential hazards, excesses and blind spots" within the movement.

Bullies: They're not just in middle school

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Was a losing team bullied? Is your angry spouse a bully? How about that co-worker who's always criticizing you? Or the politicians who forced a government shutdown?

Bullies aren't just for middle schoolers. These days, they're everywhere.

In Texas last week, the football coach at Aledo High School was accused of bullying after his team won 91-0. With no mercy rule in place to stem lopsided victories, the coach even tried to minimize the blowout by benching his starters and letting the clock run uninterrupted after halftime.

A parent from the losing team accused the coach of "bullying" — an accusation that requires the school district to investigate under state law.

And while many found the accusation baseless, it's the kind of complaint that seems to have become more common thanks to national campaigns to draw attention to the real problem of bullying. There are people who use the term bullying "to get what they want. They use it as professional victims to gain power and control," said Ben Leichtling, founder of BulliesBeGone.

Smith said what constitutes real bullying is measurable: Is the behavior so damaging that it interferes with the target's ability to go to school or do their job or otherwise conduct themselves safely?

Bullies in sports

In the Texas case, school district administrators found no grounds for the complaint, and many observers agreed.

"Of course it's not bullying. That's ridiculous! It's a game. It has people who lose. That's a fact of life," said Smith.

Which is not to say that bullying or other types of personal intimidation don't happen in sports. Rutgers basketball coach Mike Rice was fired for screaming at his players, calling them names and kicking and shoving them.

But under normal circumstances, absent that type of behavior, losing in sports can actually be good for kids, said Nadine Connell, who teaches criminology in the University of Texas at Dallas. "It teaches you the mechanism for coping with losing, in a protected way, so that when it happens in a more serious situation you've learned to deal with disappointment."

Leichtling's reaction to the Texas football game? "The coach of the good team did what he could" to mitigate the humiliation of the other guys. "If the behavior of the winning team was cruel, nasty, rubbing it in, I would call that bullying," he said. But that's not what happened.

He noted that there are other remedies for lopsided victories in kids' sports: Parents might lobby for a mercy rule or rearrange leagues so weak teams don't face powerhouses.

Connell said the football bullying charge raises another question: "How do we continue to use a term that we know represents a lot of emotional pain in such a way that it doesn't get watered down and make people roll their eyes at every little thing we call bullying?"

Bullies in Washington

In May, U.S. Sen. Harry Reid, D-Nev., called Sen. Ted Cruz, R-Texas, a "schoolyard bully. He pushes everybody around ... and instead of playing the game according to the rules, he not only takes the ball home with him but changes the rules. That way, no one wins, except the bully."

Cruz responded: "The Senate is not a schoolyard setting." He added: "Speaking the truth ... is not bullying."

Bullies on the job

Dr. Harold Pass chairs a committee that evaluates allegations of disruptive behavior at Stony Brook University Medical Center in New York. He said "bullying" accurately describes workplace situations where someone is targeted by a fellow employee — whether it's a doctor trying to make another one look bad or a nurse targeted by a superior.

"Bullying means intentionality," Pass said. "If a football team happens to win by a large score, it doesn't mean the players intended to denigrate, hurt, humiliate, damage or diminish the other team. But that does occur in workplace situations all the time — in hospitals, in factories and corporations, as well as in schools. Any place there's a power differential, where someone puts other people down, where it's done willfully, not randomly or unconsciously, that could be bullying."

Bullying elders

No one denies that bullying among kids is a serious problem. Just look the many tragic cases of adolescents committing suicide after being tormented by peers in school or online.

But some kids have been called "bullies" over stupid pranks. Lawyer Monrae English represented three boys at a Fresno, Calif., high school accused of bullying after they created a phony Facebook page with the principal's name on it.

"They put silly stuff on there — about how homework needs to be done and something about liking 'Twilight' movies," she said. "Most of the students knew it was in jest, but the principal got irate about it and said he was personally being bullied."

But there are other situations where adults may legitimately feel they're being bullied by kids — even their own. Social worker Sean Grover gives workshops in schools around New York City on the topic "The Bullied Parent" where parents can be seen weeping in recognition as he describes families where kids are in charge, mocking their parents, criticizing them and making demands.

And let's not forget the bus monitor in upstate New York. After a video was posted online showing kids cursing Karen Klein out, threatening and insulting her, a campaign to send her on vacation raised more than $700,000.

Bullies in relationships

Leichtling, founder of BulliesBeGone, said "bullying is not only about kids. It happens all the time, in every culture, with people at every age, in every situation, and always has."

When he coaches adults coping with bullies on the job or in bad marriages, he offers the same advice used to curb bullying in schools. "You have to say, this behavior is not allowed," Leichtling said.

FROM WIRE REPORTS

NEW YORK

NYPD: Cousin admitted fatally stabbing mom, 4 kids

A Chinese immigrant has been arrested on five counts of murder in the deaths of his cousin's wife and her four children in a late-night stabbing rampage in their Brooklyn home.

The New York Police Department said Sunday that 25-year-old Mingdong Chen has implicated himself in the deaths.

Two girls, 9-year-old Linda Zhuo and 7-year-old Amy Zhuo, were pronounced dead at the scene, along with the youngest child, 1-year-old William Zhuo. Their brother, 5-year-old Kevin Zhuo, and 37-year-old mother, Qiao Zhen Li, were taken to hospitals, where they also were pronounced dead.

Chief of Department Phil Banks said the victims "were cut and butchered with a kitchen knife."

Banks said Chen is a cousin of the children's father and had been staying at the home for the past week or so.

LOS ANGELES

'Bad Grandpa' sinks 'Gravity' to top box office

Apparently astronauts are no match for Jackass.

According to studio estimates Sunday, Paramount's "Jackass Presents: Bad Grandpa" tops the weekend box office with $32 million, sinking three-week champ "Gravity" to second place.

The Warner Bros. space drama starring Sandra Bullock added another $20.3 million to its haul, bringing its domestic ticket total to nearly $200 million.

Sony's high-seas thriller "Captain Phillips" held on to third place with $11.8 million.

Fox's "The Counselor," a gritty drama with an all-star cast that includes Brad Pitt, Cameron Diaz and Penelope Cruz, debuted in fourth place with $8 million.

"Cloudy With a Chance of Meatballs 2" rolled into fifth place in its fifth week of release with $6.1 million.

PENNSYLVANIA

Pet owners buy organic, raid fridge to feed Fido

BETHLEHEM — Organic kibble? All-natural chow? Fido and Fluffy don't know it, but their owners want them to eat better — and they are forking over big bucks to make it happen.

Marketed as a healthier, more nutritious alternative, some premium dog and cat cuisine has gone the Whole Foods route.

Nowhere is that more evident than in the new $25 million eastern Pennsylvania factory of upstart pet food maker Freshpet, where thousands of pounds of fresh meat and poultry are pasteurized, mixed with vegetables and then immediately chilled, packaged and sent to branded, refrigerated display cases in more than 10,000 stores across America.

The 7-year-old company, founded by former Purina executives, is trying to establish a new category in an industry long dominated by kibbles and cans: fresh, preservative-free food that requires refrigeration. With sales exceeding $100 million, executives said they're on their way.

New snack info feeds Hispanic hype machine

■ Forget any takeover. Maybe there is a chance tortillas have been around so long they're just part of the scenery

ESTHER CEPEDA
Washington Post Writers Group

There's something I contemptuously refer to as the "Hispanic Hype Machine." It's the Internet-enabled echo chamber that goes into overdrive every time a Latino-centric statistic comes out.

Here's an example: A recent news story reported that tortillas now outsell hamburger buns and sales of tortilla chips outpace those of potato chips.

Overeager headline writers glommed onto the data points and made it sound as if these numbers pointed to some sort of impending brown supremacy — "As demographics change, so does the menu."

As usual, this sort of ballyhoo misses the point. Such foods are tasty and consumed in mass quantities by people of all races and ethnicities. It does not point to the Hispanization of America.

If anything, the Great American Assimilation Machine is perfectly tuned for blending in. Unless a child is intentionally sheltered from popular culture, he or she will adopt it as a matter of course.

For instance, my youngest son eats hot dog tacos for dinner every Sunday night at his grandparents' house.

Whatever image has just popped into your brain — of an old-world abuelita delicately cradling a sausage into a deep-fried homemade corn shell and topping it with chopped onions, diced tomatoes, shredded cheese and a dollop of crema fresca — just forget it.

We're talking about a boiled frank wrapped in a microwaved, store-bought tortilla.

That's it.

I wouldn't eat this if my life depended on it, but it was concocted with much grandmotherly love to suit my son's ultra-finicky tastes.

When we took this same child to Tacos El Norte last week to treat his downstate relatives to an authentic Mexican dinner, he ordered chicken nuggets and fries — a menu item my parents had a hard time believing is actually sold at the place where they get their Sunday menudo.

I actually need a little more Hispanic conquest in our household, where my older son enjoys getting under my skin by pronouncing his Spanish class vocabulary assignments like a "gring-go." But that's not happening.

According to a public opinion poll conducted by the Center for American Progress, the older, less-educated population may be nervous about the possibility of a young Latino wave washing away their comfortingly familiar majority-white America. But everyone else seems to, like me, have a little more faith in the melting pot.

Interestingly, the Hispanic Hype Machine successfully makes it seem as though whites are bordering on extinction and as a result, Americans vastly overestimate current and future levels of diversity. In fact, most ethnic groups tell pollsters that they believe the nation is nearly or already majority-minority. Yet the actual figure is 37 percent minority, and most Americans aren't too upset about it.

On measures of openness to diversity versus measures of concern, the poll found that more respondents believed in the positive opportunities that can result from a diverse population than those concerned that rising diversity is likely to result in joblessness and discrimination against whites.

Surprisingly — that is, if you believe the narrative about how fearful Americans are about immigration — the fewest number of respondents to the poll agreed that rising diversity will result in there being "no common American culture."

This jibes with the real story behind the tortillas. It's not that there are so many Hispanics in the U.S. that they simply outnumber burger and hot dog lovers. It's that tortillas — like any number of south-of-the-border treats — have been around so long they're just part of the scenery.

"When you think about pizza and spaghetti, it's the same thing," Jim Kabbani, CEO of the Tortilla Industry Association, told The Associated Press. "People consider them American, not ethnic. It's the same with tortillas."

What amuses me is that in topping hamburger and hot dog buns, the tortilla emblematically re-enacts past fears of the Germanization of America.

Once upon a time, Americans feared that a scourge of German immigrants, with their ethnic foods and stubborn preservation of their mother tongue, would be the country's undoing.

See? Nothing to worry about.

U.S. Senate is lacking since Hutchison retired

Houston Chronicle

Does anyone else miss Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison? We're not sure how much difference one person could make in the toxic, chaotic, hyperpartisan atmosphere in Washington, but if we could choose just one it would be Hutchison, whose years of service in the Senate were marked by two things sorely lacking in her successor, Ted Cruz.

For one thing, Hutchison had an unswerving commitment to the highest and best interests of Texas at all times. This revealed itself in a thousand different ways. Hereabouts, we miss her advocacy for NASA, the Port of Houston and the energy industry. And we know she worked just as hard for Dallas, San Antonio and a hundred smaller Texas cities and towns.

And dare we say it? We miss her extraordinary understanding of the importance of reaching across the aisle when necessary. Neither sitting Texas senator has displayed that useful skill, and both the state and the Congress are the poorer for it.

One reason we particularly believe that Hutchison would make a difference in these hectic days is that if she had kept her seat, Cruz would not be in the Senate.

When we endorsed Ted Cruz in last November's general election, we did so with many reservations and at least one specific recommendation — that he follow Hutchison's example in his conduct as a senator.

Obviously, he has not done so. Cruz has been part of the problem in specific situations where Hutchison would have been part of the solution.

We feel certain she would have worked shoulder to shoulder with Sen. Susan Collins, R-Maine, in crafting a workable solution that likely would have avoided the government shutdown altogether.

But we'll never know.

While we're on the topic, we'd like to think our first choice to succeed Hutchison in the Senate, Lt. Gov. David Dewhurst, would have been more amenable to following Hutchison's example than Cruz has been. But these days, we're not so sure. Dewhurst, long considered a moderate in the Texas GOP, clearly was rattled by his unexpected loss to Cruz for the Senate seat.

Since the defeat, the lieutenant governor has attempted a full-blown political makeover designed to make him the darling of the conservative wing of the Texas party.

Faced with the impossible task of outflanking three strong conservative challengers, the traditional moderate Dewhurst does not seem like a man comfortable in his own skin. It's painful to watch.

Immigration stalemate is on the way

■ There's too much on the line for too many for immigration reform to happen this time

RUBEN NAVARRETTE
Washington Post Writers Group

Washington is getting ready to lead the way down a dark and dead-end road. Now that the White House has mangled the rollout of Obamacare and Congress has bungled the politics of the government shutdown, those at both ends of Pennsylvania Avenue are likely to bring the same level of skill and sensitivity to the explosive debate over immigration reform.

President Obama delivered a speech on Thursday rebooting the debate and daring Congress to pass "common-sense immigration reform."

This would be the same sort of reform that Obama helped to thwart in 2006 while he was a senator. And it is the same sort of reform he did nothing to achieve in his first term as president. And this would be the kind of reform that his administration has pushed further onto the horizon with heavy-handed enforcement policies that deported nearly 2 million people and divided scores of families.

Meanwhile, Speaker John Boehner expressed optimism last week that the Republican-controlled House could get something done on the issue by the end of the year.

Boehner is dreaming. It will take that long for lawmakers to get through the first round of name-calling. Besides, what Republicans have in mind isn't a full-out amnesty for the estimated 11 million illegal immigrants currently living in the United States but at most a pathway to legal status without citizenship, or legal status with citizenship — but only for young people who were brought to the United States as children. That's not going anywhere with Democrats, who are counting on the fact that citizens can vote and non-citizens can't.

So Washington wants to get back to immigration. All I can say is: Please don't. Americans have had enough.

Every time those who actually care about immigration reform delve back into this debate, they wind up with nothing but bruised hearts, broken promises and brazen dishonesty. Lawmakers in both parties — most of whom don't care about this issue, and care even less about what happens to immigrants — will ultimately create more animosity, cynicism and false hope. Hundreds of thousands of protesters on both sides will take to the streets, pitting groups against each other. Before you know it, we'll get distracted and wind up yelling at one another on talk radio about sideshow issues such as whether protesters should wave the Mexican flag or whether journalists should use the phrase "illegal immigrant."

Spare me. It might be worth it to go through this exercise if the advocates who are leading the charge in Washington were pursuing something larger than their own self-interest. Most aren't. They're dealing in bad faith, and spend most of their time trying to fool the people whose cause they supposedly champion. Immigration advocacy has become a big business, with New York-based foundations giving tens of millions of dollars to the host of Washington-based organizations that are profiting from this debate. Some of the wiser grass-roots activists who are in this fight for real — people like Alfredo Gutierrez, the former majority leader of the Arizona Senate who has spent the last few years battling Sheriff Joe Arpaio and the Arizona immigration law, and groups like Presente.org and the National Day Laborer Organizing Network — refer to the Washington groups as the "Immigration Non-Profit Industrial Complex."

You know what lifted the veil on this masquerade? It was the DREAM 9, a group of defiant young people who found themselves back in Mexico, because they either "self-deported" for more opportunity or were physically removed by the Obama administration despite the president's insistence to Spanish-language media that he isn't deporting DREAMers. The nine activists crossed the border at Nogales, Ariz., and were quickly apprehended by U.S. immigration officials.

What did those Washington groups say in defense of the DREAM 9? Nothing. In fact, a top official with one of these groups — the American Immigration Lawyers Association — went on the attack, incensed that the border crossers had embarrassed an administration that AILA had spent five years cozying up to. Eventually, the activists were released.

Along the way, those at the grass roots realized they were on their own. They learned to follow the money, to trust no one, and to demand results and not settle for rhetoric.

Now, as Congress and the White House restart the immigration debate, these activists should keep those lessons in mind.

Here's a tax increase Republican lawmakers support

Republicans in Congress don't usually fight for tax increases, especially ones that are part of President Barack Obama's health care law.

But GOP senators balked when Democrats proposed delaying a new temporary fee on everyone covered by health insurance.

So employers, insurance companies and other health plan sponsors are in line to pay $63 a person next year for everyone who has coverage. The temporary fee covers all workers, spouses and dependents covered by health insurance.

Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., proposed delaying the fee in recent budget talks with Senate Republican leader Mitch McConnell, of Kentucky. McConnell and other Republican senators objected; the fee was left intact.

GOP senators complained the delay was basically a favor for labor unions, traditional Democratic allies that oppose the new fee.

"It's beyond ironic that the mantra from the president and the Democrats has been, 'There can't be any changes to Obamacare. After all, it's the law of the land,'" said Sen. Pat Toomey, R-Pa. "And then big labor comes along and wants a change and, lo and behold, there's got to be a change."

But also opposing the fee are large employers, traditional Republican allies, even though in many cases the fee probably will be passed on to workers.

"It's a sizable expense. For some of my employers it's millions of dollars a year and we don't get anything from it," said Gretchen Young, senior vice president for health policy at the ERISA Industry Committee, a group that represents large employers on benefits issues. "It's definitely not solely a union issue."

Sen. Ben Cardin, D-Md., said the proposed delay was meant to balance Republican demands for other changes to the health law. Republicans in Congress have been attacking the law since it was passed in 2010, and earlier this month, they forced a partial government shutdown over Obama's refusal to negotiate changes.

Cardin said he didn't want any changes in the law to be part of the deal for reopening the government and extending the country's ability to borrow.

Sebelius to face tough questioning on health law

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Republicans said Sunday they intend to press Health and Human Services Secretary Kathleen Sebelius on the Obama administration's troubled launch of healthcare.gov, the online portal to buy insurance, and concerns about the privacy of information that applicants submit under the new system.

The Obama administration will face intense pressure this week to be more forthcoming about how many people have actually succeeded in enrolling for coverage in the new insurance markets. Medicare chief Marilyn Tavenner is to testify during a House hearing Tuesday, followed Wednesday by Sebelius before the House Energy and Commerce Committee. The officials will also be grilled on how such crippling technical problems could have gone undetected prior to the website's Oct. 1 launch.

"The incompetence in building this website is staggering," said Rep. Marsha Blackburn, R-Tenn., the second ranking Republican on the panel and an opponent of the law.

Democrats said the new system needed time to get up and running, and it could be fixed to provide millions of people with affordable insurance. Kentucky Gov. Steve Beshear, a Democrat, said the system was "working in Kentucky," a state that has dealt with "some of the worst health statistics in the country. ... The only way we're going to get ourselves out of the ditch is some transformational tool," like the new health insurance system.

Blackburn said she wanted to know much has been spent on the website, how much more it will cost to fix the problems, when everything will be ready and what people should expect to see on the site. Blackburn and Rep. Mike Rogers, R-Mich., raised questions of whether the website could guard the privacy of applicants.

"The way the system is designed it is not secure," said Rogers, who is chairman of the House Intelligence Committee.

The administration sought to reassure applicants about their personal information. HHS spokeswoman Joanne Peters said when consumers fill out their applications, "they can trust that the information they're providing is protected by stringent security standards and that the technology underlying the application process has been tested and is secure."

The botched rollout has led to calls on Capitol Hill for a delay of penalties for those remaining uninsured. The Obama administration has said it's willing to extend the grace period until Mar. 31, the end of open enrollment. That's an extra six weeks. The insurance industry says going beyond that risks undermining the new system by giving younger, healthier people a pass.

Sen. Joe Manchin, D-W. Va., who is seeking a yearlong delay to the penalty for noncompliance, said his approach would "still induce people to get involved, but it will also give us the time to transition in. And I think we need that transition period to work out the things." Sen. Jeanne Shaheen, D-N.H., who has urged the Obama administration to postpone the March 31 deadline, said she was concerned applicants would not have a full six months to enroll.

The administration was under no legal requirement to launch the website Oct. 1. Sebelius, who designated her department's Medicare agency to implement the health care law, had the discretion to set open enrollment dates. Officials could have postponed open enrollment by a month, or they could have phased in access to the website.

But all through last summer and into early fall, the administration insisted it was ready to go live in all 50 states on Oct. 1.

The online insurance markets are supposed to be the portal to coverage for people who do not have access to a health plan through their jobs. The health care law offers middle-class people a choice of private insurance plans, made more affordable through new tax credits. Low-income people will be steered to Medicaid in states that agree to expand that safety net program.

An HHS memo prepared for Sebelius in September estimated that nearly 500,000 people would enroll for coverage in the marketplaces during October, their first month of operation. The actual number is likely to be only a fraction of that. The administration has said 700,000 people have completed applications.

Rep. Darrell Issa, R-Calif., said the president had been poorly served by Sebelius "in the implementation of his own signature legislature. So if somebody doesn't leave and if there isn't a real restructuring, not just a 60-day somebody come in and try to fix it, then he's missing the point of management 101, which is these people are to serve him well, and they haven't."

Blackburn spoke on "Fox News Sunday." Beshear appeared on NBC's "Meet the Press," Rogers was on CNN's "State of the Union," Manchin was interviewed on ABC's "This Week," and Shaheen and Issa made their comments on CBS "Face the Nation."

The Saving True Pairs One Mammogram at a Time clay shoot was among the many events held this month to raise funds and awareness for breast cancer. More than 200 people participated in the clay shoot that raised $103,585. It was Oct. 18 at Jake's Clays and featured all things pink, including the clays and ammunition. In the sport of clay shooting, "true pairs" is when two birds (clay pigeons) are thrown at one time, according to Peggy Floyd, co-owner of Jake's Clays.

Texas Country Eye Care has options for treating dry eyes

"Most people think the hot summer is the worst time for dry eyes," says Dr. Blake Golson. He and his wife, Dr. Heather Kern Golson, own Texas Country Eye Care. "Actually, winter air is dryer and people tend to stay indoors in the HVAC-controlled air more in the winter."

The Drs. Golson have already seen a number of patients this fall who are dealing with dry eyes, either just from dry air or from allergies. Fortunately, there are a variety of treatment options available.

They see a lot of patients who move here from Houston or other coastal cities, and who notice that their contacts began bothering them. This is not a surprise, say the Golsons, because of the vast difference in humidity. For patients with certain prescriptions, there is an exciting new type of contacts, called Dailies Total 1®. Years in development, these daily lenses are literally made of 80 percent water, and float on your eye. "These are great for those whose contacts have given them trouble since they moved here," says Dr. Kern, "and also for those who have tried contacts before but couldn't wear them." Many Dailies Total 1 wearers report that they don't feel the contacts at all!

Because contacts tend to trap germs and allergens, the Golsons only recommend daily wear contacts, and even with those they strongly suggest patients remove contacts at night. People who sleep with their contacts in are 15 times more likely to get an eye infection than those who don't.

With fall allergens in the air, many people take antihistamines to relieve runny noses, which is fine—but, the Golsons report, the same medicine that dries up your nose also dries your eyes. They recommend against grabbing the first and cheapest thing off the shelf to remedy dry eyes.

"There are some over-the-counter treatments that work, but because dry eyes can be caused by a number of factors, you need to see a professional first, to determine what will work. The most popular eye drops are usually just vasoconstrictors, which only reduce redness," Dr. Golson explains.

If OTC treatments are not successful, there are a number of prescription treatments that offer more strength. Dr. Kern stresses that perseverance is the key. "Your eyes did not get into this situation overnight, and neither will they heal up that fast."

To test patients' eyes for dryness, Texas Country Eye Care has what they call "tear breakup time," which renders its results in a colorful graphic format. "I have had patients who were sure they did not have dry eyes," Dr. Kern reports, "who were astonished at how dry their eyes looked this way."

Gomes, Red Sox beat Cardinals to even WS at 2

Boston's Jonny Gomes (5) celebrates at home after hitting a three-run home run in the sixth inning of Game 4 of the World Series against the St. Louis Cardinals on Sunday in St. Louis.

Series tied, 2-2

ST. LOUIS — There's no telling how these wacky World Series games will end.

One night after a rare obstruction call, Jonny Gomes hit a decisive homer when he wasn't even in the original lineup and Koji Uehara picked off a rookie at first base for the final out.

An entertaining, even goofy World Series is tied at two games apiece following Boston's 4-2 victory Sunday night, which ensured the title will be decided back at Boston's Fenway Park.

"Emotional roller-coaster here, obviously," Gomes said.

Inserted into the lineup about 75 minutes before gametime, Gomes hit a tiebreaking, three-run shot off reliever Seth Maness in the sixth inning.

Felix Doubront and surprise reliever John Lackey, both starters during the regular season, picked up for a gritty Clay Buchholz to help the Red Sox hang on.

And of course, another bizarre ending: Uehara picked off pinch-runner Kolten Wong — with postseason star Carlos Beltran standing at the plate.

It was the first postseason game in history to end on a pickoff, according to STATS.

Game 5 is tonight at Busch Stadium, with Boston left-hander Jon Lester facing Cardinals ace Adam Wainwright in a rematch of the opener won 8-1 by the Red Sox.

Gomes helped get Boston started in the fifth when he followed David Ortiz's leadoff double with a 10-pitch walk that tired starter Lance Lynn, who had faced the minimum 12 batters through the first four innings.

Stephen Drew's sacrifice fly tied the score 1-all, erasing a deficit created when center fielder Jacoby Ellsbury's third-inning error advanced Matt Carpenter into scoring position for Beltran's RBI single.

Ortiz, who homered in the first two games of the Series, had three of Boston's six hits and was the club's leader, smacking his hands together and screaming at teammates to get going when he pulled into second base on his double. Then, after the fifth inning,

Cowboys blow late lead

Detroit quarterback Matthew Stafford (9) celebrates scoring on a 1-yard touchdown run against the Dallas Cowboys in the fourth quarter of Sunday's game in Detroit. The touchdown was the game-winner in Detroit's 31-30 victory.

Stafford's TD plunge caps Lions' improbable win

DETROIT — Jason Garrett walked off the field red faced. Ahead of him, Tony Romo slowly shook his head from side to side as he trudged toward the locker room. Sean Lee remained calm until he got inside, where he screamed two curse words.

After showering, dressing and regaining his composure, Lee summed it up perfectly with just three words.

"We blew it," the linebacker said after the Dallas Cowboys allowed the Detroit Lions to steal an improbable 31-30 win Sunday.

"It" was more than just the game. The Cowboys seemed poised to win their third straight, claim back-to-back road games for the first time since 2009 and separate from the pack in the NFC East after Romo threw his third touchdown of the game and second to Dez Bryant for a 27-17 cushion with 6:45 left.

But instead of closing the deal and signaling to the rest of the league that they have no intention of missing the playoffs for a fourth straight season, Dallas folded to fall to 4-4, a disappointing record at the halfway mark that signals the club could be headed for a third-straight 8-8 finish or worse.

"We're going to keep fighting," said Lee, who had two interceptions in the second quarter. "But until we win games like this, when we have an opportunity to win, we're going to be an average football team. We're not going to be in the playoffs until we win these games and don't make these mistakes. We're going to be 8-8."

In addition to overcoming a 10-point deficit in the fourth, the Lions (5-3) became only the second team in 56 games since 2011 to win when committing four turnovers. Propelled by Calvin Johnson's whopping 329 receiving yards, the second most in NFL history, the Lions capped the comeback when Matthew Stafford faked a spike to stop the clock and leaped over a pile for a 1-yard score with 12 seconds remaining.

Detroit had no timeouts when it began the six-play, 80-yard drive with 62

Defensive Texas handles delay, takes Big 12 lead

By Stephen Hawkins
Associated Press

FORT WORTH — Texas has figured out how to deal with lengthy weather delays.

There won't be any Longhorns coaches fired in the aftermath this time.

The Longhorns overcame a lightning delay that lasted 3 hours, 6 minutes — longer than it actually took to play the game — in a dominating 30-7 victory at TCU that ended early Sunday morning.

Seeming to get better each game under defensive coordinator Greg Robinson, a swarming Texas defense forced a fumble on an early sack that set up a short touchdown. The Longhorns (5-2, 4-0 Big 12) won their fourth game in a row while limiting TCU to 246 total yards.

"We were all around the ball," defensive end Jackson Jeffcoat said. "That's what coach Robinson wants us to do, always be around the ball."

Seven weeks earlier, Texas had to wait out a delay of 1 hour, 47 minutes before starting its game at BYU. The Cougars then won 40-21 while running for 550 yards, the most ever allowed by the Longhorns. Defensive coordinator Manny Diaz was fired the next day and replaced by Robinson, the former Syracuse head coach and Longhorns coordinator.

Texas went to TCU after an open date that followed an impressive Red River Rivalry victory when Oklahoma had a season-low 263 yards.

"We're just playing pretty sound, solid football with our guys. It really does start up front, and our defensive line, they just keep getting better," Robinson said. "And the rest of the guys, they're getting around the ball. I just think that all in all we're playing pretty well together. And that's real important on defense."

Gordon grabs 1st win of season at Martinsville

By Jenna Fryer
Associated Press

MARTINSVILLE, Va. — Jeff Gordon pulled into the championship picture Sunday with a win at Martinsville Speedway, his first of the season.

It was Gordon's eighth career win at Martinsville, but first since he swept the two races at the track in 2005. He's tied with Hendrick Motorsports teammate Jimmie Johnson for Martinsville victories, but both trail Richard Petty (15) and Darrell Waltrip (11) on the career list.

Most important, though, is that the victory moved Gordon from fifth to third in the Chase for the Sprint Cup championship.

Matt Kenseth and Johnson left Martinsville tied atop the standings with three races remaining, and Gordon sits 27 points behind the leaders. Kevin Harvick is 28 points out, while Kyle Busch is 36 points behind.

Kenseth led a race-high 202 laps and was out front on the final restart with 77 laps remaining and Gordon lurking in third. Gordon stalked him for more than 50 laps, thinking to himself, "What would Jimmie Johnson do, or better yet, what would Richard Petty do?" before finally making the pass for the lead with 21 laps remaining.

Gordon didn't look back in snapping a 32-race losing streak dating to last year's season finale at Homestead.

"Matt drove a really first-class caliber race today, and I didn't know if we were going to get him, but it sure was awesome when we finally did and just kind of hoped there were no cautions," Gordon said.

The victory clinched the manufacturers' championship for Chevrolet, which won for the 11th consecutive season and 37th time overall. Chevrolet did it this year in the debut

Gray wins women's bout in MMA main event in Odessa

By Ruben Ochoa
MRT Correspondent

ODESSA — On a night that saw several knockouts, the KO of the night was delivered by a woman at the 24/7 Entertainment's State of Emergency fight card Saturday night at Ector County Coliseum.

The main event featured the first women's fight in the Midland-Odessa area.

In a back-and-forth fight that saw an assortment of kicks, punches and grappling, El Paso's Alida Gray delivered a TKO five seconds into the second round against Sonnia Tiem.

In other action, San Antonio's Allen Nelson took 18 seconds to TKO El Paso's Julio Hinojosa.

Dallas' Evan Martinez used a Kimura submission 1 minutes, 42 seconds into the opening round to defeat Levelland's Santana Martinez.

Arlington's Victor Reyna needed 1:30 in the third round to get a referee stoppage due to strikes to TKO Amarillo's Joseph Brooks.

El Paso's Adam McGurk ended Abilene's Xavier Siller's night with a Triangle Choke at the 1:29 mark of the second round.

Dallas' Daniel Weinberg took a unanimous decision (29-28, 29-28, 30-27) from San Antonio's Gerald Gagnog.

Local fighters Yuri Santos and Nathan Torres lost their matches. Big Spring's Torres lost a decision (29-28, 29-28, 29-28) to Paco Castillo. Midland's Santos was TKO'd on strikes by Arlington's Justin Patterson 1:30 into the opening round.

Oregon edges past Florida State in BCS standings

By Ralph D. Russo
Associated Press

Oregon passed Florida State and moved into second place behind Alabama in the BCS standings.

The Ducks jumping the Seminoles was not a surprise. Florida State had a slim lead on the Ducks in the first standings last week. Oregon's convincing 42-14 victory against UCLA gave the Ducks the boost it needed.

Oregon moved up to third from fourth in the computer ratings and remained second in both the USA Today coaches' poll and the Harris poll to give it a .9517 BCS average.

Florida State, after routing North Carolina State 49-17, has a .9211 BCS average. The Seminoles are third in each poll, though they gained a little ground on the Ducks, and second in the computer ratings.

Two-time defending national champion Alabama is first across the board.

Alabama's remaining schedule is LSU, Mississippi State, Chattanooga and Auburn before a possible Southeastern Conference championship game. If the Crimson Tide run the table, it'll likely play in a third straight BCS championship game, and fourth in five years.

Florida State has a chance to gain on Oregon this week when it plays seventh-place Miami on Saturday. The Ducks are off, but Oregon's next game comes against sixth-place Stanford on Nov. 7.

Florida State's schedule after Miami has Wake Forest, Syracuse, Idaho and Florida before a possible Atlantic Coast Conference championship game. Oregon's schedule after Stanford has Utah, Arizona and Oregon State before a possible Pac-12 championship game.

GOLFROUNDUP

FROM WIRE REPORTS

Champions

AT&T CHAMPIONSHIP: At San Antonio, Kenny Perry made a 10-foot birdie putt on the first hole of a playoff with Bernhard Langer to win the Champions Tour's AT&T Championship.

Perry and Langer each shot 5-under 67 to finish at 13-under 203 on TPC San Antonio's AT&T Canyons Course. Perry saved par on the final hole of regulation with an 18-foot putt.

PGA/Asian

CIMB Classic: At Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, Ryan Moore birdied the first hole of a playoff with Gary Woodland on Monday to win the CIMB Classic after an overnight wait caused by thunderstorms.

Moore made a 5-foot birdie putt on par-5 18th hole after Woodland was short with his chip from just off the green.

PGA European

BMW MASTERS: At Shanghai, Gonzalo Fernandez-Castano chipped in for birdie on the tough 17th hole that became more important than he realized in winning the BMW Masters.

The 33-year-old Spaniard was flawless at Lake Malaren until it no longer mattered. The birdie gave him a three-shot lead going to the final hole, and Fernandez-Castano needed every one of them. He hit into two bunkers and had to make a 2-foot putt for double bogey to close with a 4-under 68 and win by a shot.

LPGA

LPGA TAIWAN CHAMPIONSHIP: At Yangmei, Taiwan, Suzann Pettersen successfully defended her title in the LPGA Taiwan Championship for her fourth tour victory of the year and third in her last five starts.

The Norwegian star closed with a 3-under 69 for a five-stroke victory over Solheim Cup teammate Azahara Munoz. Pettersen finished at 9-under 279 and earned $300,000 for her 14th LPGA Tour title. She has five LPGA Tour victories in Asia and won a Ladies European Tour event in China this year.

CHIEFS 23 BROWNS 17

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Alex Smith threw for 225 yards and two touchdowns, and the Kansas City Chiefs held off the scrappy Cleveland Browns late in the fourth quarter to preserve a victory and remain the NFL's lone undefeated team.

The Chiefs (8-0), off to their best start since 2003, built a 20-7 lead late in the first half before the Browns (3-5) made it a game.

Jason Campbell, starting in place of the ineffective Brandon Weeden, threw for 293 yards and two touchdowns for the Browns.

The Chiefs kept stopping the Browns down the stretch. They forced a turnover on downs with just over 2 minutes left, and Ryan Succop kicked his third field goal in the closing seconds to help seal the victory.

BRONCOS 45 REDSKINS 21

DENVER — Peyton Manning overcame four turnovers and Denver scored the last 38 points against former Broncos coach Mike Shanahan and his new team. Manning finished with 354 yards and four touchdown passes to offset his three interceptions and lost fumble.

His first two turnovers led to points that gave the Redskins (2-5) a 21-7 lead early in the third quarter. From there, Manning led the Broncos (7-1) on two long scoring drives, then the go-ahead score on a 35-yard touchdown pass to Knowshon Moreno.

Robert Griffin III finished with 132 yards passing, one score and two interceptions for Washington before hurting his left knee.

Griffin's replacement, Kirk Cousins, threw an interception that Dominique Rodgers-Cromartie returned 75 yards for Denver's final points.

SAINTS 35 BILLS 17

NEW ORLEANS — Drew Brees passed for five touchdowns and 332 yards, and the New Orleans Saints pulled away for a victory over the Buffalo Bills.

Saints tight end Jimmy Graham played after missing practice most of the week with a left foot injury and scored on 13- and 15-yard passes over the middle, powering through tackles at the goal line both times.

Rookie Kenny Stills had touchdowns of 69 and 42 yards for the Saints (6-1) and Lance Moore snagged a 15-yard scoring pass in his return from a hand injury that sidelined him three games.

Thad Lewis was sacked four times, intercepted once, lost two fumbles and appeared shaken up at times, but stayed in the game for the Bills (3-5), finishing with 234 yards passing and one touchdown. Buffalo's Fred Jackson scored on a 1-yard run.

BENGALS 49 JETS 9

CINCINNATI — Andy Dalton threw a career-high five touchdown passes, four of them to Marvin Jones.

Jones set a Bengals record for touchdown receptions, scoring on catches of 9, 6, 17 and 6 yards.

Dalton's five touchdown passes gave him 11 in his last three games, his best such span. He's the first quarterback to throw for five TDs against the Jets since Dan Marino in 1988.

The Bengals (6-2) won their fourth in a row and padded their AFC North lead.

New York (4-4) took its most lopsided loss since 2010. Rookie quarterback Geno Smith threw two interceptions that were returned for touchdowns.

RAIDERS 21 STEELERS 18

OAKLAND, Calif. — Terrelle Pryor ran 93 yards on the first play from scrimmage for the longest touchdown run by a quarterback, and the Raiders won following a bye week for the first time since 2002.

Darren McFadden added two touchdown runs and the defense did the rest for the Raiders (3-4), who had been outscored by more than 13 points a game in losing their last 10 games out of the bye.

Ben Roethlisberger struggled against heavy pressure from Oakland's front, and Shaun Suisham missed two short field goals as Pittsburgh (2-5) squandered any momentum gained during back-to-back wins following an 0-4 start.

CARDINALS 27 FALCONS 13

GLENDALE, Ariz. — Rookie Andre Ellington rushed for 154 yards on 15 carries, including an 80-yard touchdown run, and the Cardinals intercepted Matt Ryan four times.

Ellington's big run, tied for third longest in Cardinals history, was part of a 21-point second quarter that put the Cardinals (4-4) in control for good.

Arizona's Larry Fitzgerald caught four passes for 48 yards and a touchdown, in the process becoming the youngest player — at 30 years, 57 days — in NFL history to reach 800 career receptions.

Ryan had thrown three interceptions total in the first six games of the season for the Falcons (2-5). Rashad Johnson had two of Arizona's interceptions.

The Cardinals picked off Ryan five times when the teams played last season.

PATRIOTS 27 DOLPHINS 17

FOXBOROUGH, Mass. — The New England Patriots shook off a dismal first half and another mediocre performance by Tom Brady to beat the Miami Dolphins.

Trailing 17-3 after gaining just 59 yards in the half, the Patriots quickly turned the game around in the third quarter with two touchdowns in a span of seven plays.

The Patriots (6-2) outscored the Dolphins (3-4) in the third quarter 17-0. Miami lost its fourth straight game.

Brady completed 13 of 22 passes for just 116 yards, but threw a 14-yard touchdown pass to Aaron Dobson with 6:32 gone in the third quarter that began the comeback.

49ERS 42 JAGUARS 10

LONDON — Colin Kaepernick led the way with his arm and with his feet, throwing for one touchdown and running for two more to lead the San Francisco 49ers over the Jacksonville Jaguars at Wembley Stadium.

Kaepernick ended up with 164 yards passing and 54 yards rushing, and Frank Gore also ran for two scores for the 49ers (6-2).

The Jaguars (0-8) were the "home" team at London's iconic soccer venue, playing in the British capital for the first of their four-year run of regular-season NFL games in London. It was the eighth regular-season NFL game at Wembley, the home of England's national soccer team, and the second this year. The Minnesota Vikings beat the Pittsburgh Steelers 34-27 last month.

GIANTS 15 EAGLES 7

PHILADELPHIA — Josh Brown kicked a career-high five field goals, Eli Manning played error-free and the New York Giants beat the Philadelphia Eagles.

Michael Vick returned for the Eagles (3-5) after missing 2 1/2 games with a hamstring injury, but clearly wasn't healthy and was removed for rookie Matt Barkley late in the second quarter.

The Giants (2-6) snapped an eight-game road losing streak while extending Philadelphia's home losing streak to 10 games. The Eagles' last win at the Linc was over the Giants on Sept. 30, 2012.

Chip Kelly's high-flying offense that racked up at least 425 yards in each of the first six games has been grounded. The Eagles followed a 17-3 loss to Dallas with another poor offensive effort. They had just 201 yards of offense and have totaled 479 the past two weeks.

PACKERS 44 VIKINGS 31

MINNEAPOLIS — Aaron Rodgers threw for 285 yards and two touchdowns to lead the Green Bay Packers to a 44-31 victory over the Minnesota Vikings on Sunday night.

Rodgers completed 24 of 29 passes and Jordy Nelson had 123 yards receiving for the Packers. Micah Hyde returned a punt 93 yards for a touchdown late in the second quarter, and Eddie Lacy rushed for 94 yards and a score for Green Bay (5-2).

Cordarrelle Patterson set an NFL record with a 109-yard return on the opening kickoff and Adrian Peterson rushed for 60 yards and a touchdown for the Vikings (1-6). But Christian Ponder struggled again in his return to the starting lineup and the Packers scored on every possession until they took a knee to end the game.

Winston

ERIC WINSTON
OT, ARIZONA CARDINALS
(LEE HIGH SCHOOL)

Winston started at right tackle for the Cardinals in a 27-13 victory against the Atlanta Falcons on Sunday at home. The Cardinals had 348 total yards of offense, and the Arizona offensive line did a good job of protecting quarterback Carson Palmer for much of the day as he was sacked three times.

Tannehill

RYAN TANNEHILL
QB, MIAMI DOLPHINS
(BIG SPRING HIGH SCHOOL)

Tannehill completed 22 of 42 passes for 192 yards along with two touchdowns and two interceptions during Sunday's 27-17 loss to AFC East Division rival New England. Tannehill was also sacked six times for 47 yards, and had one rush for 12 yards in the loss.

Cannon

MARCUS CANNON
OL, NEW ENGLAND PATRIOTS
(ODESSA HIGH SCHOOL)

Marcus Cannon came in as a substitute for the Patriots in a 27-17 victory against the Miami Dolphins at home on Sunday. The Patriots tallied 252 yards in the victory.

COWBOYS

"We didn't do what we needed to win the ball game. Period," Garrett said. "They did. We have to live with that. Look at yourself in the mirror. It starts with me."

The Lions' rally began with Reggie Bush capping a seven-play, 80-yard drive with a 1-yard run. The Cowboys then had to settle for Dan Bailey's third field goal of the game with 1:02 left after a holding penalty against left tackle Tyron Smith on third-and-14 stopped the clock following a 9-yard run by Phillip Tanner.

"That was a big play," Garrett said of Smith's hold. "We had to kick the field goal, but you would have liked to in that situation, let the rest of that time go down because they had already used their timeouts."

Stafford, a graduate of Highland Park High School in Dallas, set up the winning score with strikes of 17 yards to Johnson, 40 yards to Kris Durham and 22 yards to Johnson.

Due to injuries, the Cowboys were playing with undrafted rookie safeties Jeff Heath and Jakar Hamilton down the stretch. But the defensive leaders didn't use that as an excuse.

"You got to play to the last whistle," said defensive tackle Jason Hatcher, who sacked Stafford late in the fourth quarter. "We should have closed the game out. No way we should (allow) a team to drive down the field with a minute left and win a ball game. It's on the defense."

The defense got completely fooled by Stafford's fake spike.

"He made a very smart play there," Hatcher said. "He kind of caught us off guard."

Said Stafford, who was 33 of 48 for 488 yards with one TD and two interceptions, "It was a feel thing. I was yelling, 'Spike!' I saw linebackers kind of standing (around)."

Johnson's yardage total trails only the 336 yards Flipper Anderson had for the Los Angeles Rams against New Orleans on Nov. 26, 1989 in an overtime game.

"At the end of the day, we just couldn't stop him," Jerry Jones said.

Just like they now might not be able to stop another 8-8 season.

SERIES

From 1C

he huddled the Red Sox for a pep talk in the dugout.

Not long after, Gomes' drive put Boston ahead 4-1 in the sixth.

With adrenaline taking over, Gomes spiked an arm through the air as he rounded first base, yelled and banged his chest with a fist twice. Teammates tugged on Gomes' beard for good luck when he got back to the dugout, including a two-handed pull by Mike Napoli.

While talk of umpires' calls dominated discussion following two of the opening three games, this one turned on a manager's pregame decision.

John Farrell's original Red Sox lineup didn't include Gomes, but Victorino's back had been bothering him since Saturday, so Daniel Nava was moved from left field to right and from fifth to second in the batting order. Gomes was inserted into the No. 5 hole behind Ortiz.

"Since I signed up for this game, all I wanted was the opportunity," Gomes said. "I just wanted to be in the box."

Gomes had been 0 for 9 in the Series before the home run, and Red Sox outfielders had been 4 for 40 with no RBIs. Following Dustin Pedroia's two-out single and a four-pitch walk to Ortiz by Lynn, Maness threw five straight sliders to Gomes, who sent the last one into the Red Sox bullpen in left as Matt Holliday kept running back only to run out of room.

"I take a lot of pride in the at-bat in front of me and behind me," Gomes said. "Obviously, Big Papi is pretty much an intentional walk. I did what I could to give him a little protection."

From 1C

season of its SS race car.

Kenseth tied his career-best with a second-place finish, closing the gap on Johnson, who was up four points as they came into one of Johnson's best tracks and one of Kenseth's worst tracks. He had to drive from the middle of the pack to save his finish after a call not to pit midway through the race backfired, but Kenseth was still a bit disappointed not to leave with the victory.

"Whenever your team puts you in front for that last run and you're out there leading, you get beat, you're always a little bit disappointed," Kenseth said. "I just got beat by honestly experience and a better driver of this track. I was hesitant to change my line and do the things he was doing because what I was doing got me there. Just got too tight at the end. Wish I could do it over."

When it was time to leave, though, Kenseth had found the silver lining.

"I mean, gosh, for how Martinsville has been for me, how could you not be pleased?" he said. "The only guy happier is Jeff. I feel like when my team is at its best and we do everything right, I feel like we can race anybody at these next three tracks. Anything can happen, but man, we're in it."

Clint Bowyer finished third, his best finish of the Chase and moved two spots in the standings to sixth.

HOW TO PLAY

Select a winner from each of the week's games, listed below. Select in descending order of your CONFIDENCE in your choices. Win points at left for each correct selection toward possible total of 136 points. See complete rules below. You must be at least 8 (eight) years old to enter. To enter, clip along dotted line, then place game entry in POWER POINTS container at Midland Reporter-Telegram. Entrants must list name, address and phone number below.

LIMIT: You may enter the contest only once per week.

DEADLINE: 2 P.M. THURSDAY

TIEBREAKER 1 ☐ Total points scored (both teams) in FALCONS game.

TIEBREAKER 2 ☐ Total offensive yards (both teams) in this game.

THIS WEEK'S GAMES

Cincinnati at Miami	Tampa Bay at Seattle
Atlanta at Carolina	Baltimore at Cleveland
Minnesota at Dallas	Pittsburgh at New England
New Orleans at NY Jets	Indianapolis at Houston
Tennessee at St. Louis	Illinois at Penn State
San Diego at Washington	Ohio State at Purdue
Philadelphia at Oakland	Iowa State at Kansas State
Kansas City at Buffalo	Michigan at Michigan State

POWER POINT OFICIAL RULES

1. Object of the game is to amass as many of the 136 weekly points as you can. Simply review the week's schedule of games, listed on entry form, and decide which game you are SUREST of picking a winner in. Write the name of your projected winner on the 16-point line, and so on down to the 1-point line, which game you figure to be a tossup. Next, fill in Tiebreaker 1, the total points scored by both teams in the week's designated game. If this step fails to produce a winner, the judges will apply Tiebreaker 2, total offensive yardage from scrimmage in this game. If a winner still doesn't emerge, a drawing will be held among those contestants still tied. Decisions of the judges are final. The weekly contestant from among all participating newspapers who tallies the most of the 136 points will win $1000. Local prizes to be decided by newspapers.
2. Any entry form that does not contain a legible name, address, etc., will be disqualified.
3. Entries that fail to forecast a winner from each and every game will be disqualified, as will entries that fail to distinguish between the Jets and Giants of New York and other similar-sounding team names.
4. No points are awarded on tie games or in case any game is not played for any reason during its scheduled week.
5. Entering POWER POINTS constitutes permission by contestant for his or her name and photograph to be used for news and reasonable promotional purposes at no charge.
6. Employees of this newspaper and their immediate families are ineligible to participate.
7. Any inquiry about or protest of weekly results must be made by noon on the Friday following the announcement of winners.
8. No purchase necessary. Facsimile game entry forms will be accepted. Enter contest by dropping entry form into POWER POINTS container at participating co-sponsors.
9. Weekly deadline for entry will be 2 p.m. Thursdays except when noted otherwise on weekly entry form.
10. Neither this newspaper nor any co-sponsor will be responsible for illegible entry forms or those lost, stolen or damaged in any way or entries mis-directed or arriving postage due or for any claim or injury by contestants made in connection to any activity involved in entering contest. Entrants assume all liabilities.
11. Limit: one entry per person per week. Each entry must represent the original work of one entrant, "group" entries, "systems" or other attempt to enter multiple entries will be disqualified. Filling out extra forms and putting your friends' and relatives' names on them violates this rule. Any such entries are destroyed prior to grading.
12. Contestants must have reached the age of eight (8) years by the Sunday of any week's play.

Girlfriend living rent-free racks up bill of resentment

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: I am divorced, successful, and the father of two teenage girls. I have been seeing my girlfriend, "Stella," for a year and a half. She also has two teenage daughters. When we met, Stella's divorce was becoming final, and her house was near the tail end of a foreclosure. The sheriff removed her from her home a few months later.

I bought a couple of condos and let Stella choose one she wanted to move into. She agreed she would pay the bills and some rent once she settled in.

Two weeks after she moved in, she quit her job. It has been almost a year, and she hasn't gone on one job interview. I pay all her bills now, and I'm getting resentful.

It's not the money (I've got plenty), but I feel she continues to see me only so she can live rent-free. Our communication isn't the greatest, and she gets angry if this topic is brought up. How should I approach her without sounding like a cheapskate? — DON'T WANT TO BE A SUGAR DADDY IN CHICAGO

DEAR SUGAR DADDY: Of course she gets angry! Have you never heard the saying, "The best defense is a strong offense"?

If you want to resolve this, you must be prepared for Stella to react negatively. Start the conversation by saying, "When you moved into my condo, you agreed to pay your own bills and some rent. It's been a year, and you haven't even looked for a job." Then give her a date by which you want her to move out.

Because she has been living there for some time, she may have certain tenant's rights that will have to be respected. It doesn't take a crystal ball to see that you will probably have to evict her — so talk to your attorney before you discuss this with Stella.

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of a 31-year-old son, "Johann," who is in the Navy. He just posted a picture of himself in his uniform on Facebook. I am praying it's not his official photo, because he made an incredibly stupid face on it.

He used to do this when he was a child. Even his high school photos look like this. It is embarrassing to me! I could never show it to anyone and proudly say, "This is my son."

Johann is an accomplished young man, a supervisor. But I can't reconcile this picture with the man he is. What can I do? — FREAKED OUT IN GERMANY

DEAR FREAKED OUT: Your son is an adult. If he is making this expression in photographs on purpose, perhaps it's time you asked him why. While it may be a display of immaturity on his part, it could also be that he is uncomfortable in front of a camera. (Many people are. It's referred to as "deer-in-the-headlights" syndrome.)

Explain that you would love to have a picture of him that depicts how he REALLY is, and ask if he would be willing, as a favor to his mother, to sit for a session with a professional photographer when he comes home for a visit. If he isn't, then perhaps he'd be more relaxed posing for a photo that YOU take.

DEAR ABBY: My fiancee, "Tina," and I made a resolution to lose weight for our wedding. Everything has been going great except for one thing. Because men lose weight faster than women, I now weigh less at 6 foot 1 than she does at 5 feet 4.

Tina already has self-esteem issues. I want to look good for our wedding, but not at the cost of my fiancee's hurt feelings. What can I do? — AT A LOSS IN MICHIGAN

DEAR AT A LOSS: Continue being supportive and help Tina to maintain her self-esteem. But her weight issue is her responsibility, not yours. If she becomes frustrated or depressed that she isn't losing quickly enough, suggest she consult her doctor or a registered dietitian about the reason why.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Monday, Oct. 28, 2013:

This year you develop a very gentle side to your personality that seems irresistible to many people. This quality, combined with your innate magnetism, adds to your ability to draw others toward you. You discover that your plans, ideas and projects naturally seem to gain support. If you are single, you might need a flyswatter to chase some of your many admirers away. Choosing the right person might not be possible with all this activity. If you are attached, your magic helps enhance your bond. Be sure to let your sweetie know how important he or she is to you. LEO is as strong-willed as you are, though you usually come out on top because you endure difficult situations more easily.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★★ It might be Monday, but that is not enough of a reason to sit on your creativity. There could be a lot of inconsequential hassles that others need help resolving. Your ability to think outside the box will emerge. They value that quality in you. Tonight: Make it early.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★ If you can spend a little more time at home and on yourself right now, you will find that the benefits outweigh the problems. Sometimes, you need to slow down and relax. Invite a favorite person to join you. What was a task before now becomes fun! Tonight: At home.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★★ You speak your mind loudly and clearly. You might decide that it's time to get past a problem that has been slowing you down. Sometimes just expressing the caring you feel can help clear up a hassle. Tonight: Head home early, while your luck is still hot.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★ Focus on what is important to handle. You could be taken aback by what is going on and by how undisciplined you might be. Realize that you are a creature of extremes. You need to let your moods run their course without reacting to them. Tonight: Start a conversation.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★★ You are in your element during the daytime. Your natural response points you in the right direction. You will not make a mistake by remaining open to others; in fact, you can only gain! Tonight: Speak your mind.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★ The daytime hours could be challenging, and they might be causing you a lot of tension despite someone's support and obvious caring. Know that you will feel better as the day ends. Your energy changes as the workday comes to a close. Tonight: Chill out, then decide.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★ A meeting points to the best path for success. How you say what you need and how you express your need for acknowledgment is very likely to change. Be more forthright at times and a little less charming. Tonight: Get some extra R and R.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★ You'll assume your normal role as leader of the gang. You handle responsibility well, though it takes its toll on you. Stress needs to be handled quickly right now, as you have a lot of ground to cover. Take a walk or just take a break. Tonight: Join a favorite friend.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★ You could be excited by an upcoming event or by a visit from someone. This excitement flows into every other part of your life, or so it seems. You might want to revisit your impression of a key matter. In a different mood, everything could change. Tonight: Out late.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★ Consider getting feedback from others about what they feel is necessary. A brainstorm session easily could evolve. Let a close associate take a lead role in a key matter. You might not realize it, but this person expresses his or her caring by taking action. Tonight: Be creative.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★★ You have the ability to visualize more of what you want from a situation and express it, which could affect your friends. You probably don't realize the impact that you have on others. Start the process of manifesting a desire through sharing more. Tonight: Go with a suggestion.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★ You see a great deal of sensitivity and understanding emerge as others deal with their daily routines and events. A sense of well-being will be contagious, and it might allow a difficult situation to be resolved. Tonight: Reach for the stars. Nearly anything is possible.

Bidding Quiz

Q 1 — Neither vulnerable, as South, you hold:
♠ J 10 9 3 2 ♡ Q 6 5 2 ♢ K 8 7 ♣ 2
The bidding has proceeded:

NORTH	EAST	SOUTH	WEST
1♢	Pass	1♠	Pass
1NT	Pass	?

What is your re-bid?
A — Most players use New Minor Forcing with good hands, so a re-bid of two hearts is "pass or correct," showing a weak hand with at least five spades and four-plus hearts. Bid two hearts.

Q 2 — Both vulnerable, as South, you hold:
♠ 10 8 2 ♡ A 7 ♢ A K Q 9 8 3 ♣ Q 10
Pass-Pass to you. What is your opening bid?
A — There was a point in time when any opening other than one diamond would have been unthinkable. Today, many good players would open one no-trump with this essentially balanced hand. We like it!

Q 3 — East-West vulnerable, as South, you hold:
♠ A K J 7 5 ♡ A Q 9 4 ♢ J 5 3 ♣ A
The bidding has proceeded:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
1♠	Pass	2♡	Pass

What action do you take?
A — If you play the modern Two-Over-One approach, a forcing raise to three hearts is perfect. If not, this hand poses a real problem. It is way too good to bid four hearts. Bid four no-trump!

Q 4 — Neither vulnerable, as South, you hold:
♠ K Q 10 8 5 4 3 ♡ 9 6 ♢ 3 ♣ A 8 5
You are the dealer. What is your opening bid?
A — It is easy to promote the playing strength of this hand and open one spade. At this vulnerability, we prefer to put maximum pressure on our opponents. Open three spades!

SALES JOBS

Multi-Media Sales Consultant

The Midland Reporter-Telegram and mywesttexas.com advertising department is looking for a Multi-Media Sales Consultant. The ideal candidate will have a proven track record of personal sales successes, preferably in a newspaper/media environment. Some knowledge of the advertising industry would be helpful, but not required.

Duties for this position will include, but are not limited to selling advertising in all print publications of the Midland Reporter-Telegram and all online products, including mywesttexas.com.

Qualifications & Skills:

- Ability to work in a fast-paced, deadline oriented environment
- Excellent customer service and time management skills
- Highly organized with the ability to work independently with minimal supervision
- Detail-oriented with good communication, spelling and math skills

The Hearst Corporation is one of the largest diversified communications companies. Its major interests include magazine, newspaper and business publishing, cable networks, television and radio broadcasting, Internet businesses and more. As an associate of the Midland Reporter-Telegram, you join more than 20,000 in the Hearst family. The Multi-Media Sales Consultant is a full-time, outside sales position. We offer a competitive compensation plan and benefits package, comprehensive training, mileage allowance, and the opportunity to advance your career in an exciting, progressive, and innovative organization in one of the fastest growing markets in Texas.

If you are the one we are looking for, please send current resume to:
