Ask Us

Q. — How old do you have to be to purchase cigarettes in Snyder?

A. — The law specifies an individual must be legally an adult (age 17 or older) to purchase cigarettes. Application of this law is left up to individual retailers, however, since there is no state agency specifically set up for enforcement.

Attorney position due talk

A discussion related to accepting applications for the post of Scurry County attorney is slated Monday by the county commissioners court.

The discussion is among the agenda items facing commissioners at their regular Monday meeting. It begins at 10 a.m.

Gary Terrell, current county attorney, submitted his resignation to the court last Monday.

He will continue to serve until April 1. His announcement was prompted by his planned move from Snyder.

Terrell joined the Lubbock-based law firm of McWhorter, Cobb and Johnson last October and will be closing the local branch office of that firm to relocate with them in Lubbock.

His departure will mark the second time in the past seven months the county attorney's office has come unexpectedly vacant.

Terrell won the post in the Democratic primary last May, then assumed the job's full responsibilities at the request of county commissioners August 1 following the death July 6 of incumbent County Attorney George Killam.

Killam had announced last January he would not be a candidate for office again.

In addition Monday, the court is scheduled to meet with Gwen Sealy, former county auditor who was replaced for her office this past Dec. 31.

She reportedly is to discuss payment for vacation time not taken with commissioners. Sealy has requested she be placed on the agenda.

Commissioners are to accept several bid items as well.

BEATING THE BIG CHILL — Afternoon snowfall Friday added to the 4½ inches of snow which fell Thursday and the day's temperature never rose above 13 degrees. Saturday's overnight reading in Snyder was a record minus-11 degrees. But despite winter's worst storm of the season, Hugh (Brud) Boren Jr. and wife Billie Jean found a way to beat the cold — taking a dip in their backyard hot tub. (SDN Staff Photo)

State to begin filling RS&P crossings

Beginning this week, staffers with the Department of Highways and Public Transportation will fill-in highway crossings formerly occupied by track of the RS&P Railroad.

The plan is to follow behind crews who will be tearing up the crossings, according to Eddie Thane, maintenance director for the highway department's Snyder office.

He said the work will begin east of the city at farm to market road crossings in the Hermleigh area, then progress toward Snyder. Affected farm to market roads include FM 644 and FM 1606.

Inside Snyder, the RS&P currently has rails crossing the Colorado City Highway (State Hwy. 208); East 37th St.; East Highway (U.S. Hwy. 180); and North College Ave. beside the old Santa Fe Railroad Depot.

The RS&P officially closed a 78-year history in Snyder last Aug. 1. The shortline railroad was organized Oct. 1, 1906.

Contract crews have been busy since the fall tearing up the track, which begins in Roscoe and passes through and to the north of Snyder, the two cities

Filing to begin Monday

Monday is the first legal day to file as a candidate for both the Snyder city council and the Snyder school board.

The last day to file is March 6 with absentee voting to be conducted March 18 through April 2.

The election — with the city and school vote combined in one polling location at Snyder city hall — will be April 6.

City council members facing expiring terms include Gene Thomas, place 1; Truett Bryan, place 3; and Mickey Nunley, place 5. Council members serve two-year terms.

Thomas, superintendent for all SACROC operations in Scurry County, has served on the council since June 12. He was appointed to fill out the unexpired term of Gale McPherson, a SACROC engineer who was transferred

The feller on Deep Creek says, "It was cold enough that even Hub Evans put on a jacket."

Friday morning there was much discussion about just how cold and how much snow the Snyder area got. The official reading at the Snyder water plant was two degrees, however Bob Clifton at the radio station said it was -1 degrees at 4 a.m. Saturday morning, the official low was -11 although SCAT Channel 2 showed a -16 reading, the state's lowest

When it gets that cold, most agree the reading really doesn't matter, and most of us don't care if we're able to stay under the covers.

There were plenty of folks who had to brave the elements in order to provide for our safety and comfort, and we have to really appreciate them.

The only reason the groundhog wouldn't see his shadow Saturday is because it was too cold to come out. With at least six more weeks of winter in the forecast, what this country needs is a batch of new weathermen.

There are some places in this country which live with blizzard-like conditions all winter. Here's some responses to the statement, "It was so cold that..."

--Our snowman begged us not to leave him out another night.

--Even my soft water was hard.

--We lit a candle and the flame froze before we could blow it out.

--I let my dog out, and I had to break him loose from the tree.

--Even the world leaders couldn't get into a heated argument.

--When I went out, my shadow froze to the sidewalk.

--You could freeze an egg on the sidewalk.

--I saw a frog jump in the lake and the splash froze.

--I had to go up and break the smoke off my chimney.

--The alter boy had to jump-start the candles.

--My false teeth chattered and they weren't even in my mouth.

--The police said freeze to a robber, and he did.

--I put steaks in the freezer to thaw.

--I saw a 32nd Degree Mason and he was down to 10.

Ed Owens didn't intend it this way, but he found a warm spot at Methodist Hospital in Lubbock. Owens, who retired in December after many years in the department store business, had a quadruple bypass. His wife, Dorothy, reports that Ed is doing great.

'Crash' driver to jail

Probation has been revoked for a 22-year-old suspect originally arrested in August of 1983 after causing damage to the Snyder police station by wedging his automobile into the facility's front door way.

Angel Carreon — who was living in Phoenix, Ariz. when arrested earlier the week — now faces five years confinement in the Texas Department of Corrections.

His probation was revoked by 132nd District Court officials due to his failure to report to probation officers over the past several months.

He was originally placed on probation for five years in September of 1983 after he pleaded guilty to a charge of felony criminal mischief.

In Brief

Homicide

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Officials have ruled homicide in the death of the latest young woman found slain in Fort Worth, but declined to say how she died.

The scattered skeletal remains of Catherine Davis, 23, were found Jan. 23 by a survey crew in far south Fort Worth.

Davis is the fourth young woman found slain since September in the same area of Fort Worth. A fifth is still missing.

Dr. Nizam Peerwani, Tarrant County medical examiner, ruled this week that Davis' death was a homicide but declined to pinpoint how she was killed.

"We ruled the manner of death as homicide. We left the cause of death as undetermined," Peerwani said. "In our opinion, it would be wrong to discuss (autopsy results) in depth, but we do have a fair amount of evidence that will come out later."

3 injured

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Two bombs exploded on a crowded shopping street in mostly Moslem west Beirut this morning, and at least three people were injured, according to initial police reports.

One of the explosions was outside th Bank Saradar and the second destroyed a carpet shop.

Boosters slated

The Snyder Band Boosters will meet at 7 p.m. Monday at the high school band hall. It is a very important meeting.

Meet this week

A called meeting of the Snyder school board and the regular February session for Scurry County Appraisal District board members is due this week.

The school board will meet Monday at 7 p.m., a called session to award the bid for property casualty insurance for the district.

Appraisal district members are scheduled to meet Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the district office on College Ave.

In addition to any old business, they will appoint the Appraisal Review Board — the three-member entity charged with deciding disputed tax values.

Mixed reviews for proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farm belt lawmakers and lobbyists say the Reagan administration's rural credit aid proposal is a good start but may be only a small bandage on a much larger wound in the nation's agricultural economy.

"It will be helpful as an emergency measure," said Dean Kleckner, president of the Iowa Farm Bureau, who attended a meeting on the proposal Friday. "It will allow some who would not have otherwise been able to borrow money for spring planting."

Others were more harsh in their assessment, including Rep. Dan Glickman, D-Kan.

"It offers crumbs to a problem that requires a loaf of bread," said Glickman, a member of the House Agriculture Committee.

The Independent Bankers Association, which has been pushing for weeks for a liberalized credit relief program for its rural member banks, withheld judgment until it can examine the proposal more closely at a meeting on Monday.

Spokesman Weld said the group also was concerned over efforts by the administration to use the credit package to buy congressional support for its austere long-term farm policy proposals.

While its details will not be formally announced until next week, the package essentially would make available $650 million in federal loan guarantees — and more if agricultural banks exhaust that amount — to banks that agree to "write down" interest rates to qualifying farm borrowers.

The interest rate concession must be sufficient to bring loan payments within the reach of the farmer's income, and it is up to the banks to decide which of their troubled loans are salvageable.

The aid program is aimed at alleviating the most immediate needs: credit to buy fertilizer, fuel and seed to plant spring crops, and interest-rate relief for farmers having trouble making scheduled loan payments.

"It's a Band-Aid, it's not a solution. There's no way the federal government is going to go out and rescue everyone who may be in difficulty, in agriculture or in any other area," said Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., who helped engineer the compromise aid package.

Dole said farmers must realize their salvation is not entirely dependent on federal largesse.

Gold medalist wants respect

HOUSTON (AP) — Olympic gold medalist Carl Lewis, who has been booed by spectators and criticized by the press for his inaccessibility, says what matters most is that he is respected.

"Whether people like or dislike me is one thing," said Lewis, 23. "As long as people respect me, then I can't ask for more. When you can make your own decisions, you're doing alright."

Lewis, who captured four gold medals in track and field events at the 1984 Summer Olympics, spoke at a news conference Wednesday for the 1985 Heart and Sole Fun Run.

Valentine coronation scheduled

Crowning of the 1985 Valentine King and Queen is being planned for Feb. 14 at the Senior Citizens Center.

Senior citizens elect a Valentine king and queen each year and the pair reigns for a year. Voting this year will be held Feb. 7-13, with the winners to be announced and all nominees introduced at the coronation.

Music by Hoss Clayton's band will entertain senior citizens in the center's dining room starting at 11:30 a.m. Tuesday. Students from Elaine Lambert's Dance Studio will present a program at 11:30 a.m. Friday.

A series of bridge lessons is to start in the center on Feb. 20. The cost will be $30 per person for the 15 lessons and a minimum of 12 persons will be required to form the class. Colleen Palmer of Colorado City will be the instructor. Registration will close on Feb. 15.

The Sunshine Choir will resume practice sessions at 1 p.m. Wednesday afternoon. Bowlers meet at 2:30 each Wednesday afternoon at Snyder Lanes. Persons interested in joining either group are invited to meet with them at any session.

The senior center offers a variety of activities for county residents 60 years of age and older and their spouses. Visitors are welcome at the center on weekdays from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and information about daily activities can be obtained by calling the office at 573-4035.

Purple clothes selling well before concert

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — You can still buy purple underwear, and there's a new shipment of purple sashes, but anything else in purple was sold out well in advance of tonight's concert by rock dynamo Prince.

"We're out of purple belts," said Gina Misenhelter, a sales clerk at a shop catering to young suburbanites. "No purple socks. No purple pants. Out of purple sweaters, too."

Purple is the color associated with Prince since his semi-autobiographical movie "Purple Rain."

At least 50,000 people were expected to attend his concert tonight at the Louisiana Superdome.

Sesquicentennial recipes needed

Recipes ranging from old family favorites to microwave specialties are to be included in a cookbook planned for publication during Scurry County's Sesquicentennial celebration in 1986.

Working on the project is a special committee set up by the County Sesquicentennial group. Jean Everett, June McGlaun, Barbara Hamlett and Alice Guerra. They have begun collecting recipes and invite all county residents to help with the project. Recipes can be sent to Mrs. Everett at Route 3, Snyder, and the sooner the better.

The new book will have somewhat the same format as the popular "Country Doins'," a collection of local recipes published in 1976 as part of the Centennial observerance. In addition to some local history, however, the Sesquicentennial book is to include notes about the history of the recipes and the person sending recipes are asked to add these notes in 50 words or less. The information might tell how long the recipe has been used by the family or how it was introduced to family fare. In short, the information should tell why this recipe is a favorite.

Special sections are to include one for men's cooking specialties, recipes from local eating establishments and one on ranch cooking from the days of the train drives to foods which can go from a modern kitchen to the pasture by pickup today.

"We have received some recipes and would like to thank everyone who has helped us," Mrs. Everett said. "We need more recipes of all types, however, and we would like to have a black and white photograph of a person closely associated with the recipe to accompany it in the book.

"We want this book to represent a cross-section of Scurry County cooking, with recipes fom the oldest to the newest, and we would like to hear from newcomers as well as those who have lived here all of their lives. We do need to have the recipes in as quickly as possible because of the time required for compiling and printing. Anyone who would like more information can call me or any member of the committee," she said.

Ex-elementary head receives probation

WACO, Texas (AP) — A former elementary school principal was ordered never to seek jobs that might involve children after he pleaded no contest to a charge of indecency with a child.

State District Judge George Allen on Friday put Harry Gillett, 57, on 10 years' probation, fined him $2,000 and ordered him not to seek work that would put him in "direct contact" with children younger than 17.

Speaking almost in a whisper, Gillett told Allen that he understood his "nolo contendre" plea was the same thing as pleading guilty. The sentence came as a result of a plea bargain struck between prosecutors and Gillett's attorney, Merrilee Harmon.

The former Kendrick Elementary School principal's plea came after a 10-year-old boy's statement was introduced into evidence. The statement regarded the Nov. 9 incident that led to charges against Gillett and another incident on Nov. 2, the Waco Herald-Tribune reported.

"Mr. Gillett was always telling me I was a real cute boy," the statement from the boy said.

Gillett, a 34-year veteran of the Waco Independent School District, faced up to 20 years in prison and a $10,000 fine on the third-degree felony.

Gillett would not comment after the hearing.

But the 10-year-old student's aunt, who attended the hearing with the boy's father, said she was satisfied with the sentence, particularly the agreement that prohibits Gillett from seeking employment around children.

Gillett was suspended with pay on Nov. 13 by superintendent Frank Kudlaty after the allegation was reported by Department of Human Resources officials.

He entered a not guilty plea Jan. 2 and submitted a letter to school trustees announcing his retirement on Jan. 24.

Assistant District Attorney Deanna Fitzgerald, who said investigators have documented about 10 other incidents involving abuse of students dating back to 1971, has accused school officials of being uncooperative during the investigation.

The grand jury that indicted Gillett wrote a letter to the judge "expressing concern" about school officials' attitudes toward the allegations. School officials initially told authorities they felt the incident should be handled "internally."

Kudlaty has said that the school system "cooperated totally" with authorities.

1986 deficit at $180 billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first budget of President Reagan's second term will run a deficit of nearly $180 billion, with $40 billion in new domestic spending cuts nearly offset by a proposed $30 billion increase in military spending, officials say.

The administration's plan also projects that the 1987 fiscal year could mark the first time the federal government spends more than $1 trillion in a single year, according to documents circulating on Capitol Hill. The documents project the government could spend $1.027 trillion that year.

The spending plan projects declining budget deficits through the end of the decade. But annual deficits would not fall below $100 billion until 1990, well after Reagan leaves office.

The president's budget, to be submitted to Congress on Monday, calls for a total of $973.7 billion in federal spending for the fiscal year that begins next Oct. 1, according to the documents and to officials who spoke Friday on the condition that they not be identified.

That would represent an increase of just 1.5 percent over current spending and would be the lowest rate of growth since the mid-1960s. The administration currently estimates total spending for the 1985 fiscal year at $959.1 billion.

The president's budget proposal forecasts revenues of $794 billion and a deficit of about $180 billion, the officials said. The president is recommending a spending cut of $1.4 billion for rest of the current fiscal year, leaving an estimated deficit of $222 billion.

Even before its formal submission, the budget plan — and particularly its defense component — had encountered considerable congressional resistance.

Senate Republicans, working on their own deficit reduction plan since early last month, have called for a far greater degree of military spending restraint than evidenced in the prospective administration budget.

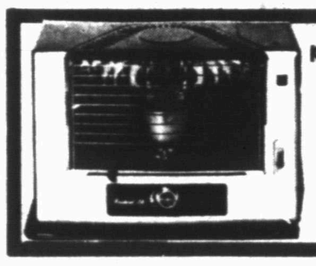

However, administration officials were continuing negotiations with Senate leaders on a possible defense compromise even as advance copies of the thick printed budget document were being distributed.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the overall plan comes close to the president's initial target of an overall spending freeze, at least for domestic programs.

"It's a programmatic freeze, a freeze on program outlays," after adjusting for an increase in interest payments, Speakes said.

The budget proposal is expected to recommend a sharp reduction in student loans and farm programs, a 5 percent pay cut for federal workers, elimination of federal subsidies for Amtrak and other transportation programs, and canceling programs such as revenue sharing for cities and counties and the Urban Development Action Grant program.

Group says testing of teachers may cause headaches

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Education Agency may have more headaches with teacher testing than it expects, an advisory committee of seven state and national experts on educational testing standards warns.

Several committee members, who issued recommendations Friday on education revisions passed in last summer's special legislative session, also questioned the need for new competency exams that lawmakers ordered.

The group's recommendations, which indicate that the testing process will be longer and more complicated than expected, will go to the personnel committee of the State Board of Education at its Feb. 8 meeting.

"We had hoped to exempt current teachers who have taken competency exams mandated by local school boards or organizations," said interim state Commissioner of Education W.N. Kirby.

"But they are telling us there are so many problems involved that we should just go ahead and require everyone to take the tests," he said.

Kirby said the personnel committee had planned to exempt current teachers from taking the tests if they had successfully passed tests judged to be equivalent.

"However, this advisory committee tells us two things," Kirby said. "One, the people who own the tests will not let us use them for this purpose, and second, we likely would be subject to lawsuits claiming our action was discriminatory."

"They are telling us that so many problems could develop, that we might just as well give the tests to every teacher," Kirby said.

Provisions of the new public school reform law require that all teachers pass two competency tests — one basic exam based mostly on reading and writing and the second on the teacher's assigned duties.

Kirby said it was estimated to cost $3 million to give the first basic test but at least $17 million to give the 150 different tests required to test individual assignment skills. He said the Texas Education Agency had the $3 million but would have to ask the Legislature for the $17 million second exam.

"Every teacher you have now has a college degree, every teacher has been certified as competent by the state and every teacher has been evaluated by local authorities," said Dr. Gregory Anrig, president of Education Testing Services, New Jersey, a member of the advisory group.

"Now, well into their career you say you want to check their literacy? ... I'll cooperate but I think it is wrong equitably, and I suspect legally," he said.

"I endorse everything he said," said Dr. Manuel Pachero of Laredo State University. "I am exremently concerned about using this process to interfere with the life of teachers."

Dr. James Popham, representing IOX Assessment Services of California, disagreed. He said he thought it personally reasonable for the Legislature to install an assessment system for teachers to protect school children.

"We must help those teachers or find them another line of work," he said.

Kirby said TEA officials expected the reading and writing tests to weed out 80 to 90 percent of the misfit teachers.

Kirby said he was ready to concede the state education agency would not be ready to give the detailed assignment tests by summer of 1986, as prescribed by the Legislature, and might not have the reading and writing tests by then.

Osmond's wife has 3rd child

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Entertainer Donny Osmond's wife, Debbie, has given birth to the couple's third child, a son, a spokeswoman says.

Brandon Michael Osmond weighed 8 pounds, 1 ounce when he was born at 10:17 p.m. Tuesday, said spokeswoman Jennifer Van Ryn. Mrs. Osmond, 25, returned to the Osmonds' Provo home with the new arrival Thursday.

The Osmonds have two other boys, Donald, 5, and Jeremy, 3.

Hostages are released after 15-hour ordeal

PENDLETON, Ind. (AP) — Authorities today regained control of a prison block where knife-wielding inmates rebelled in protest of conditions, injuring five guards and holding two others hostage for more than 15 hours. A third hostage was released earlier.

The last of the guards was released shortly before midnight Friday after Department of Correction officials agreed to meet some of the prisoners' demands.

"I'm OK," said one hostage, corrections officer Carl Ingalls of New Castle, as he waited early today at the Indiana Reformatory entrance for his wife.

Five guards were hospitalized with stab wounds suffered in the disturbance that broke out about 8:30 a.m., with one listed in very serious condition, authorities said. Two inmates were injured, one seriously, and were hospitalized.

Callers to local news outlets who identified themselves as inmates said that "about 17" prisoners armed with knives and other weapons were involved in the siege, which was sparked by poor treatment and by the beating of an inmate who authorities said attacked a guard during a search for weapons.

Under the agreement worked out by inmate and state negotiators, Department of Correction Commissioner Gordon Faulkner will ask the U.S. Justice Department to have the FBI investigate alleged violations of inmates' rights, ask state police to investigate alleged crimes by the prison staff and ask members of the General Assembly to hear inmate grievances.

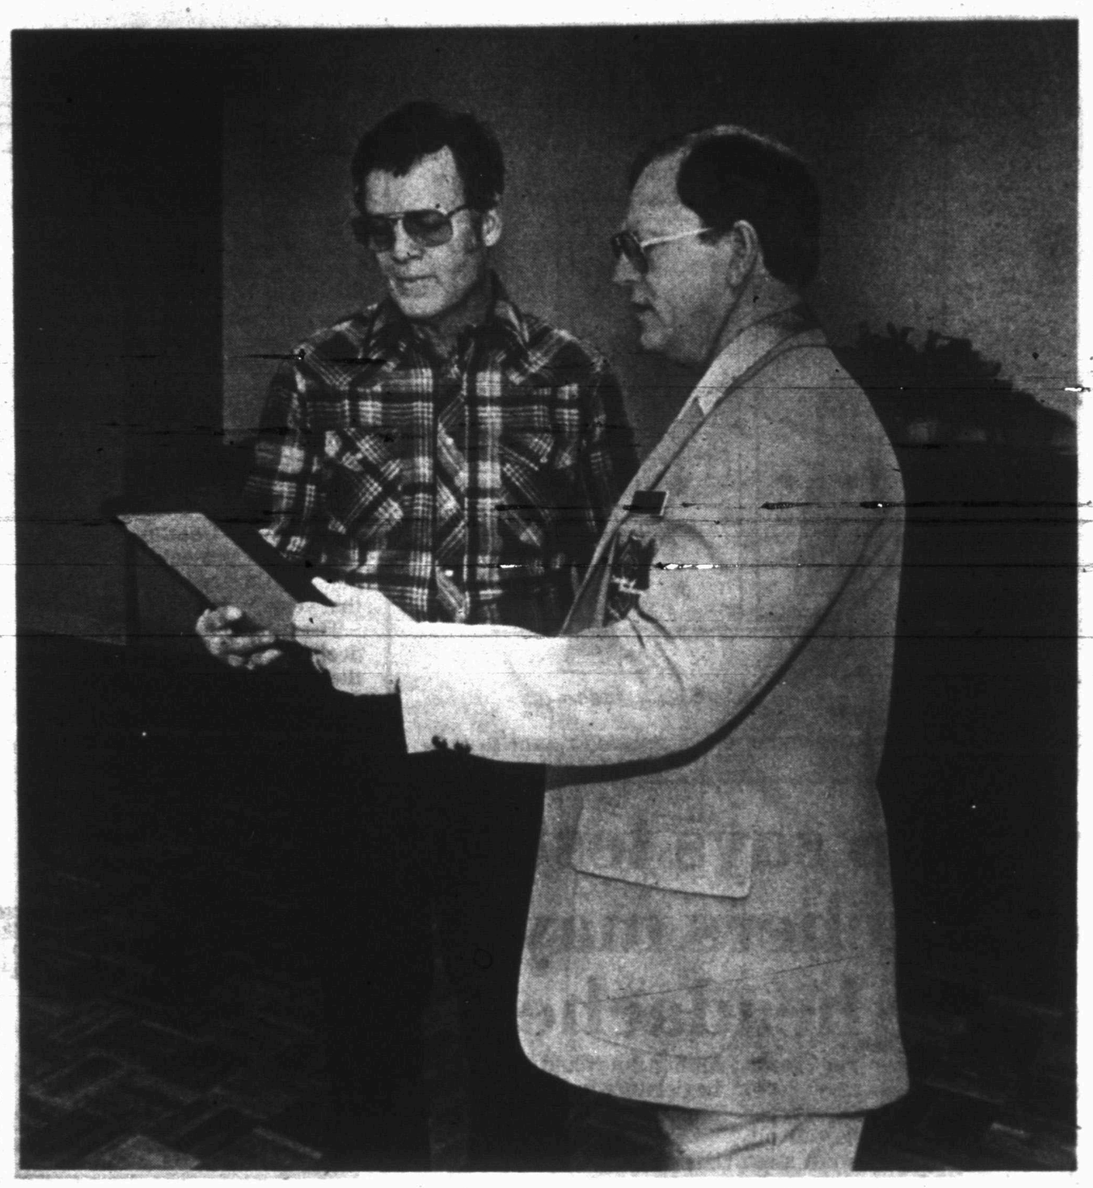

The demands telephoned to reporters included adequate food and water, an impartial observation committee to monitor their return to cells, amnesty for participants, minimum wages for work, ending censorship and improving education and narcotics programs.

The inmates' request for amnesty was not met, authorities said.

Under the agreement, six inmate negotiators went to the cellblock to organize an orderly lockup, completed about 1:30 a.m. today, officials said. They said the cells would be searched, and inmates identified as having harmed prison staff might be segregated from others.

Upon their release, Ingalls and correction counselor John Weist of Indianapolis were led through a waiting room filled with cheering staff members, appearing tired but unharmed. A third guard taken hostage had been released unharmed early Friday afternoon, after having been held 5½ hours, officials said.

The disturbance began while inmates were being searched for weapons, said assistant prison superintendent Craig A. Hanks. Officials ordered the search after an inmate threw a substance believed to be bleach on a corrections officer, Hanks said. During the search, he said, inmate Lincoln Love assaulted a staff member with a knife. Love was subdued, but four other inmates then went to the shift supervisor's office and assaulted officers there, according to Hanks.

Infant safety classes slated

The first of a series of four infant safety classes will be held Thursday night at Western Texas College.

This new course has been developed by WTC's Continuing Education department for the parents of infants who want to know more about what to do in emergency situations. The subjects to be covered include CPR for infants, and what to do if bleeding, burns or choking occurs. Judy Cave, a certified EMT, will teach the class.

Persons attending may meet with the class on Feb. 7, 14, or 21. Each class will last from 7-10 p.m. and enrollment will be limited to five couples. Fees will be $20 for a couple or $10 for an individuual. Persons attending are to bring their infant to the class.

Persons who would like to enroll are to call the Continuing Education office ar 573-8511, ext. 240 and specify which night they plan to attend.

Reagan's budget proposes cuts in array of services

WASHINGTON (AP) — A wide array of government services would be cut under the fiscal 1986 budget that President Reagan will propose on Monday, with farm programs and Medicare absorbing the largest shares, it was learned.

In all, Reagan will propose reductions of nearly $40 billion in domestic programs, according to documents made available Friday in advance of their public release scheduled for Monday.

Farm programs would take the biggest cut — $5.5 billion, including a $2 billion reduction in commodity price support and related programs.

The next largest reduction would be under Medicare, which provides health care to the nation's elderly. Reagan will recommend a reduction of nearly $4.2 billion in 1986 and $19 billion over three years.

The changes would include freezing Medicare payments to doctors and hospitals for one year and restricting their growth afterwards as well as increasing both premiums and co-payments paid by beneficiaries.

Terminating the revenue sharing program for cities and counties would save $3.4 billion next year and $6.5 billion annually in fiscal 1987 and 1988.

Reagan also will propose cutting energy programs by $3.2 billion and housing and commerce programs by $3.1 billion. Most programs under the Small Business Administration would be eliminated.

The federal subsidy to the Postal Service would be cut by $700 million.

Imposing a 5 percent pay cut on government workers except uniformed members of the military would save $1.6 billion. The civilian work force at the Pentagon would be required to take the same cut at a savings of $250 million.

Mass transit programs would be cut by $770 million.

Reagan also will propose a cut of $171 million in funds for congressional activities. The proposal is unusual because it is customary for presidents to permit Congress to make its own recommendation for its own expenditures.

Expenses for running the White House and affiliated offices would be cut by $6 million, including a $1 million reduction in salaries and expenses in the portion of the White House where the first family resides.

Almost every domestic program that the government runs would have to absorb a share of the cuts, but there are increases sprinkled throughout the president's recommendations. National Science Foundation programs, for example, would rise by $24 million while funds for criminal investigations of the Drug Enforcement Administration and the Federal Bureau of Investigation would increase by $40 million.

Defense spending would rise by $30 billion, although that figure is nearly $9 billion less than the Pentagon requested.

The budget will include these other proposed reductions:

—Natural resources, $1.3 billion.

—Transportation, $2.1 billion.

—Community development programs, $900 million.

—Education, training programs and social services, $2 billion.

—Health programs, $1.7 billion.

—Social Security administrative costs $95 million.

—Retirement programs, $1.25 billion.

—Housing assistance, $1.7 billion.

—Nutrition programs, $700 million.

—Veterans programs including medical care and compensation for disabled veterans, $1.1 billion.

Agent accused of involvement

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — A Border Patrol agent, honored two years ago for helping rescue several illegal aliens from drowning, was behind bars over the weekend, accused of helping to smuggle Colombians into the United States.

Joe Navarrette, whose age and address were unavailable, was arrested Friday afternoon in El Paso after two weeks of undercover work by agents of the Border Patrol and the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, a Border Patrol intelligence officer said Friday.

FROSTY DAY–Weather continued its icy grip on Scurry County as snow still blanketed the ground Saturday and temperatures stayed below the zero mark. The Friday night low was minus 11 degrees. This duck at Towle Park huddles against a branch in a vain attempt to seek some respite from the icy blast which has settled over the area. (Staff Photo by Noble Bryant Young)

President wants strict compliance

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says he is aiming for tighter arms control agreements with the Soviet Union and will accept only "strict compliance" with treaties already on the books.

"This administration will not accept anything less," Reagan said in a statement Friday accompanying a report to Congress accusing the Soviets of three distinct violations.

He and other U.S. officials acknowledged, however, that efforts to persuade the Soviets to halt activities questioned by the United States had not paid off.

After charging several violations in a similar report a year ago, Reagan said, "The Soviet Union has thus far not provided satisfactory explanations nor undertaken corrective actions sufficient to alleviate our concerns."

Kenneth L. Adelman, director of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, told reporters "we will continue to press these issues with them."

According to another U.S. official, Secretary of State George P. Shultz raised the U.S. concerns with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko last month at Geneva, Switzerland, while they were setting up a resumption of negotiations.

Asked for Gromyko's response, the official said "it's best to describe it as basically listening."

In the report, a large Soviet radar under construction at Krasnoyarsk in Siberia was described as a violation of the 1972 U.S.-Soviet anti-ballistic missile treaty. Last year, Reagan called it "almost certainly" a violation of the accord.

Notorious hoaxer behind 'faint-in'

NEW YORK (AP) — A notorious hoaxer claims he staged a "faint-in" during the "Donahue" show last month to protest the state of American television but an NBC spokeswoman says the network is not amused and was taken advantage of.

The scheme was revealed Friday when one of the pseudo-fainters, actress Deborah Harmon, told the WNBC-TV show "Live at Five" that those who swooned during the Jan. 21 broadcast were planted in the audience by Alan Abel.

Abel was the brains behind such hoaxes as the Society for Indecency to Naked Animals in 1959; the 1964 Yetta Bronstein for President campaign ("Yetta" was his wife); the 1971 Sex Olympics; and a topless string quartet, all of which were diligently covered by the press. He also tricked The New York Times into printing his obituary in 1980.

Abel said in a telephone interview Friday the fainting was staged by a new group called FAINT — Fight Against Idiotic Neurotic Television — to protest the quality of TV, which he described as "the pits."

"We want to raise the consciousness of the public by going unconscious," he said, adding that the group consists of about 12 of his friends and acquaintances.

Ms. Harmon was the first of seven people to faint during the Jan. 21 program. The topic that day was gay senior citizens, and when Ms. Harmon stepped up to ask a question, she said she felt faint and tumbled at host Phil Donahue's feet.

Donahue went to a commercial break and tried to help Ms. Harmon, who was escorted out of the studio. Six others fainted at intervals, all of them off-camera. Finally, the studio was cleared.

At the time, a spokeswoman for the show, Penny Rotheiser, attributed the episode to the disparity between the warm temperatures in the studio and the sub-zero temperatures outside. Most of the "victims" had little or no breakfast, she said.

Black Democrats split over position in party

WASHINGTON (AP) — Black Democrats are feuding over the selection of a Democratic Party vice chairman, a choice that provoked a bitter fight for the position traditionally held by blacks.

One prominent black Democrat accused the winner, Illinois Comptroller Roland Burris, of selling out the interests of the party's black caucus to defeat the incumbent vice chairman, Mayor Richard Hatcher of Gary, Ind.

Hatcher lost the position to Burris on Friday at the DNC's annual winter meeting. Paul Kirk Jr., a former aide to Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., was elected the new Democratic Party chairman.

Burris, the first black politician to win a major statewide office in Illinois, polled 198.27 votes to Hatcher's 148.727.

Democratic Rep. Mickey Leland of Texas, told reporters Burris should have withdrawn his bid for the vice chairmanship after the black caucus had voted 32-25 Thursday night to endorse Hatcher, a political ally of the Rev. Jesse Jackson.

Burris decided to force a vote by the full party committee after failing to win the caucus' endorsement.

Leland accused Burris of undermining the interests of black Democrats, likening him to a black servant or black plantation overseer.

"The process that we have is protective of black people's interests," Leland said. "And when you violate the process, you violate the black people's interests.

"I think the classic term is 'Uncle Tom,'" he said.

Burris did not return the call of a reporter seeking comment on Leland's statement. But Ron Smith, an aide, quoted Burris as saying Leland's remarks were made in the heat of the battle. "'Congressman Leland is an honorable man,'" Smith quoted Burris as saying.

Some members of the black caucus were angered by the vote and by Kirk's decision to let the full DNC decide whether it wanted Hatcher or Burris. They argued the full committee should have deferred to the wishes of the black caucus, as in 1981 when Hatcher's selection as the group's choice was ratified by the DNC.

Hatcher, who reacted less bitterly than Leland, said nonetheless that Burris was "used" by forces intending to break down the ethnic caucus system. He included organized labor among those forces.

"I think quite clearly one of the major groups that supported Mr. Burris in this election were those elements of organized labor that are active in the Democratic Party," Hatcher commented.

Earlier, Burris had told reporters he was "not in any way watering down the authority of the black caucus" and pressed his candidacy because he thought he was better qualified to build coalitions of white and black voters.

Incumbent Vice Chairmen Lynn Cutler of Iowa and Polly Baca of Colorado were re-elected over challenger Alice McDonald, Kentucky schools superintendent.

Unemployment up due to cold days

AUSTIN (AP) — Cold weather and the usual post-holiday decline combined to send Texas' unemployment rate up to 6.9 percent in January, according to the Texas Employment Commission.

The TEC reported Friday that 7,218,900 Texans had jobs in January, down from 7,459,000 in December, when unemployment stood at 5.6 percent.

Unemployment rolls included 536,000 in January, up from 443,000 in December when holiday shopping created jobs.

The U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics figures released Friday showed a 6 percent state jobless rate, the same as December. That figure is seasonally adjusted, meaning seasonal variables are factored out.

Bryan Richey, regional commissioner for the labor statistics bureau, said the numbers indicate "steady, but unspectacular growth which I think will be a trend for the coming months."

It was the seasonal variables that accounted for the difference in the state figures, said Terence Travland, TEC assistant chief of economic research.

Chinese want 40 percent of farmworkers sent to industry

PEKING (AP) — China plans to move 40 percent of its farmworkers off the land by the end of the century, and give them work in commerce, industry, transport and service trades, Agriculture Ministry officials say.

To help finance the transformation from paddy field to production line, the government is encouraging foreign investors to invest in rural businesses, and 360 such contracts have already been signed, the officials said Friday at a press briefing.

American, Japanese, European and Hong Kong investors have been attracted by cheap and readily available labor and land, lack of red tape and local raw materials, the ministry officials said.

Those areas doing best are former communes, now called townships or villages, on the edge of cities in the rich coastal provinces. Townships are communities with at least 3,000 people in which 40 percent or less engage in farming.

The industrialized village of Daqiu near Tianjin, specializing in food processing plants, has a per capita income of $714 dollars a year, more than six times the national average.

The development of rural business is designed to sop up excess labor as farming becomes specialized and mechanized, and to tap the resources of the countryside to serve the crowded cities.

"Investors can, within the same year, have initial discussions, construction, the start of production and even see a return," said Zhang Yi, deputy director of township enterprise management.

He said China has about 1.7 million rural enterprises, employing 40 million people, or 12 percent of the rural work force of 350 million.

The government reported last year that 4 million rural inhabitants are running hotels, restaurants, stores and other small businesses, and 1 million have bought trucks and tractors to transport goods.

Zhang said the average rural enterprise employee makes $21 a month, twice the per capita figure for most Chinese peasants.

By the year 2000, he forecast that 180 million rural wage earners will be employed in factories, transportation of goods, commodity trading, construction and other trades.

That represents 40 percent of the 450 million people the government projects will be in the rural labor force in 15 years, when China's total population will likely surpass 1.2 billion.

The ministry distributed a catalogue showing more than 100 rural enterprises in China's richest province, Jiangsu on the east coast, where rural townships are producing glass fiber boats, boilers, microcomputers, duck down jackets and bathtubs.

The value of the nation's rural enterprises in 1984 was about $53.5 billion, Zhang said.

Pope urges dialogue in Peruvian unrest

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Pope John Paul II, arriving in a nation scarred by four years of guerrilla warfare, urged Peruvians to seek political rights through "dialogue instead of violence."

Thousands of people greeted the pope in this sprawling Pacific coast capital of 5 million Friday evening at the start of a four-day visit that will take him to the ancient Inca city of Cuzco, the Amazon jungle area of Iquitos and the heart of the guerrilla war zone in Ayacucho.

"John Paul, everybody loves you," chanted the throngs lining the streets of Lima. Armed security forces with guard dogs roped off the airport and streets.

The Shining Path, a Maoist guerrilla group operating in the Andes mountain region of Ayacucho, has been battling government forces for four years in an effort to install a Marxist state. About 4,000 people have died in the fighting.

President Fernando Belaunde Terry, who met the pontiff at the airport, has refused suggestions of a dialogue to end the bloodshed. The rebels have made no peace initiatives.

"I hope my visit will be translated into helping to reinforce the faith of the Peruvian people and in promoting the cause of peace, of their living together in mutual respect for the demands of the rights of each one (to be settled) through dialogue instead of violence."

Cake decorating class to begin

A 12-hour cake decorating course is scheduled to start Monday night at Western Texas College.

Classes are to meet from 6:30-9:30 p.m. on Mondays through Feb. 25. Students will pay fees of $25 per person and must provide a cake decorating kit. These can be purchased at the first class meeting at a cost of about $18.

Terri Lyons will be instructor for the course.

Persons planning to enroll are to pre-register by calling the Continuing Education office at 573-3511, ext. 240.

SHS baseball season nears

There may be snow on the ground now, but Snyder baseball coach Albert Lewis has hopes that the weather will take an abrupt warming trend in the next two weeks.

His Snyder Tigers are scheduled for their first scrimmage on Feb. 12. The Tigers, defending District 2-4A champions, will workout against Abilene Cooper at 5 o'clock here.

The scrimmage is one of four scheduled for the Tigers. They will be at Midland Lee on Feb. 16, at Cooper on Feb. 19, and host Midland Lee on the 23rd.

Snyder opens the 1985 season Feb. 26 by entertaining Abilene High at 6 p.m. on Moffett Field.

Other scheduling highlights include the Fredricksburg Tournament on Feb. 28 through March 2 and the Snyder Tournament March 14-16.

The Tigers open District 2-4A play on March 29, hosting Fort Stockton at 8 p.m.

WTC resumes golf Feb. 27

Western Texas College will pick up spring golf by playing in the Elkins Lake Invitational late this month.

The 36-hole tournament, to be held near Huntsville, is scheduled for Feb. 27 through March 1.

The tournament is one of seven on the WTC spring schedule.

Conference tournaments will be April 5 in Roswell, N.M.; April 12 in Hobbs, N.M., and April 19 in Odessa.

The regional tournament is slated for April 24-26 in Fort Worth.

In addition, Western will compete in the Padre Isles Intercollegiate Invitational in Corpus Christi on March 11-14 and the 17th Annual Southern Junior-Senior College Golf Invitational in Dadeville, Ala., on March 28-31.

Country club sets schedule

Snyder Country Club will open the 1985 golf season with the Feb. 9-10 Ground Hog Partnership.

Sign-up for the annual tournament began Thursday.

USFL commissioner...

Usher urges salary balance

NEW YORK (AP) - Harry Usher, new commissioner of the United States Football League, says a balance of players' salaries "has to be achieved, not only by us but in the National Football League."

Usher, former chief operating officer of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, officially took over Friday as head of the young league - a league which already has signed two Heisman Trophy winners and is about to sign a third, quarterback Doug Flutie, to a record contract.

"If you're going to have a league that's not going to go right out of sight, you have to say, 'Let's curtail some of this incentive to buy the biggest and the best all the time,'" Usher said.

"The problem is - and it's a good and a bad problem - you want every club to be a winner, or at least to believe it can be a winner, 'cause if it's always a loser, it's not going to get fan support. But if it's always a winner, that can be boring, too. So is pure parity.

"So there's a continual pull and tug between the finances of the individual clubs and the competitive aspect of the league itself. The league is only as strong as its weakest member, and it can't allow an economic policy to develop where the wealthiest clubs can blow everyone out."

Nevertheless, Usher had only praise for Donald Trump, owner of the New Jersey Generals, who is close to signing Flutie to a five-year contract conservatively estimated at $5.6 million, a record for pro football.

"In terms of money that is spent for something that really benefits the league, in terms of fan attention, of morale, of the effect on TV ratings, the addition of Doug Flutie is fabulous," Usher said.

The Generals already have a veteran quarterback in Brian Sipe, whom they are paying a reported $800,000 per year. And they have one of the other Heisman Trophy winners in running back Herschel Walker and his reported $1.5 million-per-year contract.

Just as some USFL owners have privately complained about the money being spent by some of their colleagues to sign players, some NFL owners also have criticized the spending policies of a few teams within their league, most notably the San Francisco 49ers, winners of Super Bowl XIX.

NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle said two weeks ago that the salary scale of players within his league was running at 30 percent inflation and that if it continued at that rate, a majority of NFL teams could be losing money by 1986.

The USFL, which started with 12 teams in 1983, expanded to 18 in 1984 and now has dropped down to 14 franchises, is beginning its third and perhaps last spring-summer season later this month.

The league plans to switch to a fall-winter schedule in 1986, going head-to-head with the NFL. So far, it has no commitment from any network for television coverage - including ABC, which holds the option for that season.

White, Riggins free agents but are expected to re-sign

by The Associated Press

Some 269 National Football League players, headed by Randy White and John Riggins, officially became free agents Friday. But a combination of the NFL's restrictive free agent rules and the United States Football League's financial problems left most with little choice but re-signing with their old teams.

White, the Dallas Cowboys' defensive tackle, was one of four first-team all-Pros on the list. The others were linebacker E.J. Junior of the St. Louis Cardinals and defensive backs Mark Haynes of the New York Giants and Deron Cherry of the Kansas City Chiefs.

But the free agents also include a number of other key players, including Riggins, the 35-year-old Washington fullback who was the Most Valuable Player in the Super Bowl two years ago, and his Redskins teammates defensive tackle Dave Butz and kicker Mark Moseley.

NFL teams almost never sign free agents because of prohibitive compensation requirements. Only one player has jumped from one NFL team to another in the more than a decade the rules have been in effect.

Those rules specify that if a team signs a player entering his third year for $280,000 or up, it owes his old team two No. 1 draft picks; from $230,000 to $280,000, a first and a second pick; from $180,000 to $230,00, a first and a third; from $140,000 to $180,000, a first; from $120,000 to $140,000, a second, and from $100,000 to $120,000, a third. From $80,000 to $100,000, a team gets a chance to match the salary.

Rozier signs with Bulls

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) - The Jacksonville Bulls signed running back Mike Rozier to a multiyear contract Friday and became the first professional football team to have the owners of three Heisman Trophies on the same squad, a club spokesman said.

Rozier, 23, formerly of the University of Nebraska and the defunct Pittsburgh Maulers of the United States Football League, will join two-time Heisman winner Archie Griffin, formerly of Ohio State and the Cincinnati Bengals of the National Football League, in the Jacksonville backfield.

"I'm real excited to get back on the field," said Rozier. He was scheduled to begin working out with the Bulls Saturday.

Neither Rozier nor the Bulls would reveal the terms of the contract, but earlier he had rejected a one-year deal for $250,000.

The 5-foot-10, 210-pound Rozier said he wanted to remain in the USFL. He said one of the reasons he chose Jacksonville was "the sunshine."

Miller struggles but shares lead at Bing Crosby Pro-Am

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) - Johnny Miller didn't spare himself when he assessed the scoreboard for the 44th Bing Crosby National Pro-Am.

"A bunch of mediocrity today," he mused.

"But I'm still in good shape."

Miller had a 71 Friday, despite a ball that found water on the final hole at Pebble Beach, and retained a share of the lead at the tournament's halfway point with a 36-hole total of 139, five under par.

He was tied, entering today's third round, with George Archer, a 45-year-old veteran who won this title 16 years ago. Archer managed a 70 in more calm weather conditions at Cypress Point.

Brad Faxon, a PGA Tour sophomore, was another shot back at 140 after a 68 - equalling the best round of the day - at Cypress Point. Ken Brown of Scotland was alone at 141 after a 70 at Pebble Beach.

Greg Norman of Australia had a 68 at Spyglass and, at 142, was the only man in his portion of the field who completed 36 holes under par. He was tied with Kikuo Arai of Japan, T.C. Chen of Taiwan, Mark O'Meara, D.A. Weibring and Doug Tewell. Arai had a 69, O'Meara 72 and Chen 73 at Pebble Beach. Weibring shot 69 and Tewell 70 at Cypress Point.

Norman and most of the game's more glamourous names were subjected to extreme winds in their opening round at Cypress Point on Thursday. The gale force blasts produced scores that, at times, bordered on the ridiculous and put such figures as Jack Nicklaus, Tom Watson, Lee Trevino, Ben Crenshaw and Lanny Wadkins in a catch-up position.

The rotation - each professional plays one round on each of three Monterey Peninsula courses before the field is cut for Sunday's final round at Pebble Beach - takes them to Pebble Beach Saturday.

Miller played that course Friday. The group that will test those greens Saturday, all of whom played Spyglass Hill Friday, include Watson, 71-146; Wadkins, 74-147; Nicklaus, 72-148; Trevino, 73-148; and defending champion Hale Irwin, 71-148.

Hal Sutto and Masters champion Ben Crenshaw also are in that group, and have virtually no chance of qualifying for Sunday's final round. Crenshaw had a second-round 81 for 160. Sutton scored a hole in one on the way to a 71 but, after an opening 87, is at 158.

Report denied

HOUSTON (AP) - Another newspaper is reporting that the paths of West Virginia coach Don Nehlen and the Detroit Lions will cross, but once again he's denied the story.

The Houston Post reported that Seattle Seahawks' coach Chuck Knox has turned down the Lions' job and that Nehlen is in line to replace Monte Clark, who was fired after last season.

Washington leads Orangemen to win

by The Associated Press

The count in the Carrier Dome was a record 32,520. The count for Dwayne "Pearl" Washington was 25. The count on the scoreboard was Syracuse 92, Villanova 79. And the count for the Orangemen was two in a row.

Washington, Syracuse's sophomore guard, led six teammates in double figures as the Orangemen won for the second straight time over a ranked team.

The ninth-ranked Orangemen, who beat No. 2 Georgetown 65-63 Monday night at the Carrier Dome, played before the largest crowd ever to witness a basketball game on a college campus. The attendance figure broke a two-year-old record of 32,382.

"Obviously, they got their transition game going, and the Pearl once again was just fabulous," Coach Rollie Massimino of 18th-ranked Villanova said.

The victory gave Syracuse a 14-3 record, while Villanova was 14-5. Both clubs are 6-3 in the Big East Conference, led by top-ranked St. John's with an 8-0 mark.

Syracuse used a fastbreak offense to go on a 14-8 run that gave the Orange a 55-40 lead with 13:36 to play. Villanova cut the lead to five points with 6:40 left on a pair of free throws by Ed Pinckney, but that was as close as the Wildcats could get.

Rafael Addison added 21 points for Syracuse, and center Rony Seikaly, a freshman from Greece, had 10 points, 10 rebounds and two blocks. Pinckney had 23 points.

In the only other game Friday night involving a ranked team, No. 11 North Carolina defeated The Citadel 83-62 in Charlotte, N.C.

Saturday's schedule included five Top Ten teams. St. John's, 16-1, coming off consecutive victories over Syracuse, Georgetown and Providence, returned home to play Connecticut in the Big East Conference.

Also, Virginia Tech was at No. 3 Memphis State in the Metro Conference; No. 7 Oklahoma played Oklahoma State; eighth-ranked Georgia Tech, coming off a loss to North Carolina State, played No. 17 Maryland in the Atlantic Coast Conference, and No. 10 Michigan played at Wisconsin in the Big Ten.

The other games Saturday involving ranked teams had Furman versus North Carolina at Charlotte, No. 12 Tulsa at Indiana State, No. 13 DePaul at Louisville, No. 14 Oregon State at Stanford, No. 15 Lousiana Tech at Northeastern Louisiana, Utah State at No. 16 Nevada-Las Vegas, No. 19 Kansas at Nebraska and South Alabama at No. 20 Alabama-Birmingham.

Second Ten

Center Brad Daugherty scored 18 points and had 12 rebounds, and North Carolina led by as many as 22 points in easily beating The Citadel. The Tar Heels, 15-5, led 45-27 at halftime.

North Carolina's biggest lead came at 56-34 with 13:31 to play. The Citadel cut it to 67-55 with 4:52 to go, but the Tar Heels then went into a delay. Regan Truesdale led The Citadel with 24 points.

Unranked

In a two-overtime game, Southern Cal took over the Pacific-10 Conference lead with a 78-77 victory over UCLA. Derrick Dowell scored 24 points and had 21 rebounds for the Trojans, who are 12-5 and 6-2 in the league. UCLA is 9-8 and 6-3.

Wharton saddled

WHARTON, Texas (AP) - Legislative financial cuts will force Wharton County Junior College to drop its varsity football, baseball and golf programs in the upcoming school year, officials announced.

The college's board of directors made the decision Friday after learning reduced state funding will saddle the school with a $1 million budget shortfall, officials said.

BEAUTY LAWN
OFFERS CORE AERATION

Does your lawn seem to be in the 5 year slump - does it not respond to watering and fertilizer? If so, aeration may be your answer!

Core Aeration is the removal of small cores of soil (5/8" in diameter by 3" in length) in order to allow air, moisture and fertilizer to reach your lawn's root zone. This in turn creates healthy roots and thicker more beautiful lawns.

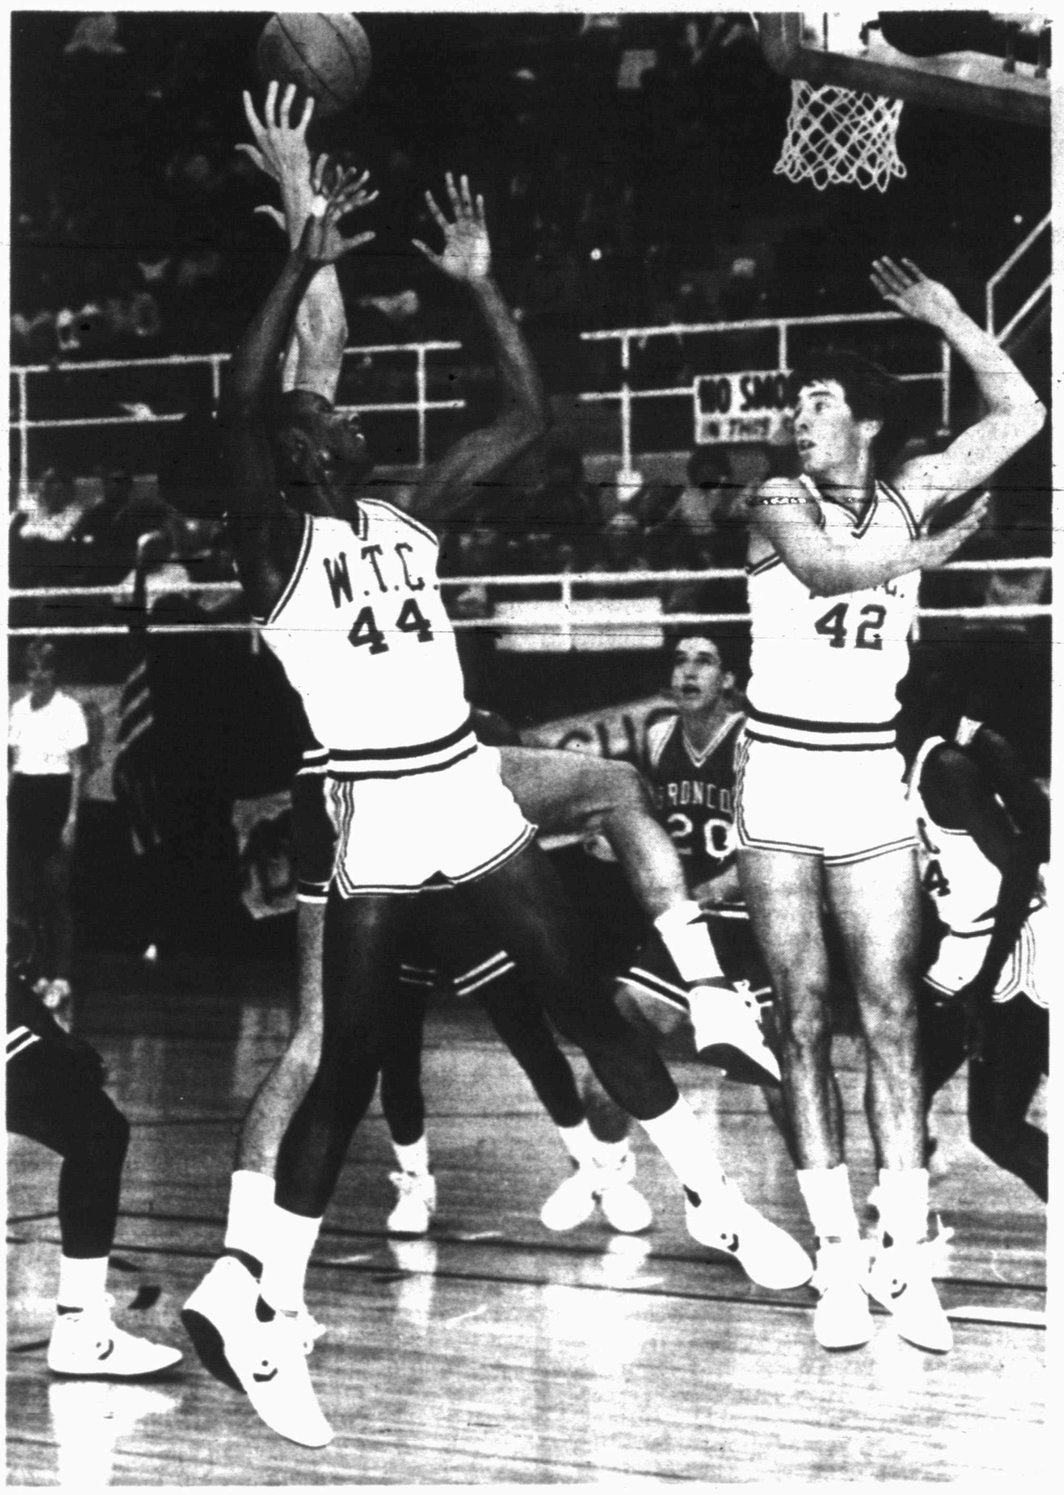

The core removal also helps reduce soil compaction and help retard thatch build-up by increasing micro-organism activity thus allowing thatch to decompose naturally.

Aeration Can Save Up To 50% Off Your Watering Bill

PLAY MONDAY – Western Texas College basketball teams play Monday. The Dusters will host South Plains in a makeup game at 7 while the men will travel to Roswell, N.M. for an 8 p.m. MST tipoff with New Mexico Military Institute. Dusters to host SPC at 7 o'clock Monday

Coach Joe Cushing is hoping a later tipoff time will bring more fans out when his Western Texas Dusters take on South Plains in a makeup game here Monday.

"Be sure and stress that we are playing at 7 and not 6," said the Dusters' Coach, who will be going for his 24th victory of the season against only four losses.

Monday's game had originally be scheduled for last Thursday, but adverse weather conditions led to a postponement. Because WTC's men will be playing out of town in Roswell, N.M. Monday, officials decided to start the Dusters' game an hour later than normal.

Fans who do come out to the coliseum Monday will see one of the best women's junior college teams in the nation. Despite being ignored by the polls all season, the Dusters have won twice as many games as some of the ranked teams have played. The current No. 12, 13 and 18th ranked squads have all won fewer than 12 games, for instance. A list of WTC's credits includes a victory over Tyler Junior College, which was ranked No. 2 in the nation at the time, and is now No. 17 with an 18-3 record.

Monday's Duster opponent, South Plains, is 14-12 on the season and 1-6 in conference play.

The Texans are led by Sally Walling and Shari Schilling, who together average 33.1 points and 13.1 rebounds a game. Vicky McKenzie, who averages 9.4 points and 4.6 boards, is the conference's leading freethrow shooter. She hits with a .860 accuracy rate.

Westerners on road to face NM Military

ROSWELL, N.M. – Western Texas College's Westerners, two and a half games out of third place in the Western JC Athletic Conference, will try to climb a notch when they play New Mexico Military Institute here Monday night.

The Westerners need to start putting together a series of victories to insure they finish the regular season in fourth place or above. First and second seeded teams gain an automatic bye into the upcoming Regional Tournament while the No. 3 and 4 teams have the luxury of playing at home throughout the pre-tournament playoffs.

Western is currently 4-5 in conference play, a half-game behind New Mexico Junior College and Frank Phillips. WTC lost a half-game in the standings when Thursday's contest with South Plains was postponed. The make up date has yet to be scheduled.

New Mexico Military is 7-3 and tied with Amarillo for third place in the conference. The Broncos are coached by Dave Campbell, who earned his 200th career win when NMMI defeated Frank Phillips 67-60 on Thursday. The Broncos are 15-6 for the season; Western is 14-8.

"We are still in pretty good shape, but we've got to start winning and keep winning," said WTC Coach Phil Spradling. "If we can win Monday and in Amarillo (Feb. 21) on the road, we should be in a good situation. The rest of our games are at home."

After playing NMMI on Monday, the Westerners will entertain Howard and Odessa in back-to-back games Feb. 7 and 11.

Monday's game will start at 8 p.m. MST.

TCU cracks Cougars at home

by The Associated Press

The Houston Cougars' home winning streak has been halted at 43 games.

Texas Christian, which had never before won in Hofheinz Pavilion, kept its cool in the closing moments for an 85-80 Southwest Conference victory Friday night.

Clutch free throw shooting carried the Horned Frogs to victory. Which was ironic, considering that TCU head coach Jim Killingsworth drew a technical foul because it appeared that Houston was the only team getting the opportunity to go to the charity line.

"I looked on the score sheet, and it had them shooting 30 free throws and us four. I'm not going to be real cool then," Killingsworth said.

Houston had the momentum at that point, reeling off 10 straight points for a 61-60 lead. However, the Frogs rallied after the technical, and Dennis Nutt's 20-footer gave TCU the lead for good at 74-72 with 2:19 left.

The Frogs managed to hold on to their uncomfortably slim lead by cashing in 10 straight free throws in the game's final minute, including four free throws by Greg Grissom in the last 10 seconds.

"I guess the reason we didn't shoot any free throws in the early going was because we were saving them for the end," Killingsworth said.

Nutt led TCU with 28 points, despite having only 6 at the half.

TCU improved to 12-8 for the year and 4-5 in SWC play. Houston, losing for the third straight time, fell to 13-7 and 5-4.

In the only other league game Friday night, Arkansas defeated Texas A&M 58-53 in Fayetteville, Ark.

"It was a big win for us, because it keeps us in the league race," Arkansas coach Eddie Sutton said. "Had we not won, we would've had no chance catching SMU. Now, if we can beat SMU here, we'll be only a game behind them, and we've been to the toughest places to play in the conference."

Charles Balentine scored 21 points to lead Arkansas, which led by 12 points before a late Aggie rally cut the advantage to five points with 3:48 remaining.

Arkansas journeys to Washington, D.C. Sunday to play Georgetown, the nation's No. 2 team.

"We're going to Georgetown with the thought of winning," Sutton said.

"Last year about this time, we beat SMU and North Carolina back to back when North Carolina was ranked No. 1. Georgetown is the best team in college basketball, and I'm sure John Thompson will have them ready after two losses, but we have a chance to beat Georgetown. We would've had no chance had we lost tonight."

Arkansas improved to a 15-7 record overall and 6-3 in SWC play with the victory. Texas A&M fell to 14-6 overall and 6-3 in conference play.

In the only SWC game scheduled Saturday, Texas Tech was at Texas.

with the Bulls was an attempt to guarantee his future.

"I was looking for security as every young player is. I never wanted to leave the USFL. I didn't leave football, the Pittsburgh Maulers folded," he said.

At Nebraska, Rozier set numerous team and Big Eight Conference records, including a season-high 2,148 yards rushing in 1983 and a career rushing total of 4,780 yards. He also broke an NCAA record for average yards per carry with 7.81 in 1983, the year he won the Heisman Trophy.

Thank You

PERHAPS YOU sent a lovely card, or sat quietly in a chair. Perhaps you sent a funeral spray, if so we saw it there. Perhaps you spoke the kindest words as any friend could say. Perhaps you were not there at all, just thought of us that day. Whatever you did to console our heart, we thank you so much, whatever the part.

THE FAMILY OF JACK BYRD

Thank You

IN APPRECIATION to all our friends who stood by us in our time of bereavement, the family of William R. Horton wished to thank everyone for the food, beautuful flowers, words of inspiration and prayers that touched our hearts. May God's richest blessings be yours.

Thank You

WE WOULD like to thank all who were so kind and thoughtful during the loss of our loved one Joesph Paul Harris. Special thanks to Dr. Burleson and Nurses at Cogdell Hospital. Also, to Pastor Robert T. Metzger, Jane Womack for singing and Betty Watts for music. The beautiful flowers, memorials, cards, phone calls, prayers and the abundance of food were appreciated very much. Thanks to the Pallbearers and all the people who donated blood.

South Texas farmers have wait, see attitude

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — South Texas farms are keeping a wait-and-see attitude as a third winter storm moved into the Rio Grande Valley this weekend.

"We don't expect, with all the forecasts we've seen, that it's going to be a problem," said Ray Prewett, executive vice president of Texas Citrus Mutual. "It looks like it's going to be pretty miserable out there, but we're not that concerned. In fact, we're pretty confident at this point."

The Rio Grande Valley was under a winter storm watch today as subfreezing temperatures were expected for the third time this winter.

In December 1983, a week of record-low temperatures virtually wiped out the citrus industry, causing more than $100 million damage to citrus and vegetable crops.

Temperatures Friday night were to range from the 20s in the west to near 30 in the east end of the Valley. Freezing rain also was expected. The outlook for today called for highs in the upper 30s to low 40s with more chance of freezing rain. Lows tonight should be in the teens and low 20s.

"We're anticipating that it probably won't be that cold — that we'll be in the same situation as in the other little freezes," Steve Johnson, spokesman for Texas Citrus and Vegetable Association, said Friday.

Larry Hobbs, spokesman for the Rio Grande Valley Sugar Growers Inc., said crews were out all night Thursday harvesting the tender sugar cane, some of which was damaged during an earlier freeze Jan. 20.

He said it will take crews about six weeks to harvest nearly 350,000 tons of sugar cane.

"But if it gets down to 28 degrees for five hours ... it will kill what's above the ground, in fact the sugar," he said.

Johnson said some shippers were not harvesting some lettuce and cabbage because it was too expensive to go into the field and pick what was not damaged by the previous freeze.

"They're taking their losses because the markets are not good enough," Johnson said.

During the December 1983 freeze, about 35,000 of 70,000 citrus acres were destroyed and thousands of farm workers were left jobless.

Prewett said Rio Grande Valley growers proportionately suffered more than those in Florida, where subfreezing temperatures Jan. 20-22 destroyed about 100,000 of 760,000 acres of the citrus crop.

"We were hurt much worse last year than they were," Prewett said. "The Florida industry is spread out ... it hardly ever gets hurt as bad."

Experts say it will take five years for the citrus trees to get back to normal.

As in the previous freezes, farmers are taking precautionary measures.

"People are flooding the fields, blowing some smoke in the orchards to keep the clouds in, wrapping new growth and putting burlap sacks around trees," Johnson said.

They also are keeping their fingers crossed.

"We're just waiting to see what happens over the weekend," Johnson said.

Obituaries

Robert Vaughan

Services for Robert Vaughan Jr., 54, of Snyder will be at 10 a.m. Monday at Calvary Baptist Church with the Rev. Larry McAden, pastor, officiating. Burial will be in Snyder Cemetery under direction of Bell-Seale.

He died at 8:15 p.m. Friday at St Mary's Hospital in Lubbock.

He was born May 8, 1930 in Cass County, Tex. He was the operator of Well Tech in Snyder.

Winter storms blamed for one death

By The Associated Press

The winter's longest and nastiest storm dumped up to 8 inches of snow and dropped temperatures to single digits, paralyzing traffic from El Paso to Longview and causing at least one death.

Although forecasters said there might be a short break in the weather today, the storm is expected to kick up again Sunday and bring up to 7 inches of additional snow to some areas, the National Weather Service said.

Winter storm watches and warnings posted for most of Texas were lifted late Friday as the disturbance moved east. But traveler's advisories remained in effect today, with Friday's impassable freeways, car pile-ups and endless traffic accidents a grim reminder of the storm's bite.

A 20-year-old Purdon man was killed Friday when he apparently lost control of his car on ice-slick Texas Highway 31 east of Corsicana. James Ray Baker, 20, died when his eastbound car slid into the westbound lane and collided with a pickup truck, the Department of Public Safety reported.

The driver of the pickup was in stable condition at a Corsicana hospital.

In Dallas, officials said the cold may have played a part in the death of a 73-year-old man. Ernest Lunday was found dead of a heart attack Friday by a mail carrier. None of the gas heaters were on, and the temperature in the house was below freezing, police said.

A 39-year-old Casey, Ill., man escaped injury Friday night when his plane burst into flames after he made an emergency landing seven miles north of Stockdale in Wilson County near San Antonio.

Lawrence Patchett told the Department of Public Safety that the windshield of his single-engine plane iced over and obscured his view, so he landed the plane in a field.

Up to 8 inches of snow buried Wichita Falls, with blowing drifts reaching 6 feet. In the Dallas-Fort Worth area, more than 4 inches of snow fell — the worst beginning shortly before the 5 p.m. rush hour.

The heaviest snows fell in a band from south of Dallas across Athens and Tyler to the Louisiana border, the weather service said. Athens reported 7 inches by 10 p.m.

Traffic ground to a standstill on Interstate 35 through Austin Friday afternoon. Both north and southbound lanes were shut down, but cars were still bumper-to-bumper from the Capitol south for several hours Friday night, officials said.

A seven-car pileup on Interstate 45 south of Richland stalled traffic for several hours Friday afternoon.

San Antonio police began closing all freeways at 5 p.m. due to treacherous ice and after 160 accidents were reported in an hour.

Lubbock driver strikes sign here

A Lubbock man apparently lost control of his vehicle Friday afternoon, striking a road sign located where the Ennis Creek Road intersects with U.S. Hwy. 84.

The sign was leveled and minor damage reported to a 1984 Oldsmobile Toronado driven by James Lafayette Trammell of 2414 92nd St. in Lubbock.

The mishap was reported to local Department of Public Safety highway patrolmen around 5:02 p.m.

Arrests are few

The snowy conditions in Snyder Friday kept most individuals inside with police reporting only three arrests for the day.

Two male suspects were charged with public intoxication in separate incidents.

A third male was charged with driving while intoxicated after being involved in a two-vehicle collision here.

Smoking ballast causes fire run

A smoking light ballast at Piggly Wiggly Super Market prompted a fire run to the store Saturday at 5:29 a.m.

Upon arrival, it was determined that the light fixture was only smoking with no fire noted.

Friday at 7:20 p.m., firemen also extinguished a car fire reported at 1610 8th St. The vehicle — a 1970 BMW — was owned by Lynn Powell, a resident of that address.

Friday streets noted for hazardous driving

Snow and ice on Snyder streets made for hazardous driving conditions Friday with eight wrecks reported.

Four of these did not require accident investigations due to the minor extent of damage, however.

The day's first accident was reported shortly after noon, a hit and run incident with exact details regarding location unknown.

Don Cheek of 2302 Sunset reported the mishap. He said his 1979 Oldsmobile had been hit by an unknown driver.

At 1:57 p.m., police investigated a minor wreck occuring in the Safeway parking lot. Involved vehicles were a 1974 GMC pickup driven by Leslie Oak Gill of 108 34th St.; and a 1980 Chevrolet driven by Toni Jean Callahan of 1909 30th St.

A parked vehicle was struck here around 4:46 p.m. in the 2600 Block of Hidetown Drive. A 1977 Pontiac driven by Zepherine Reed of 2313 Merrill struck a parked 1983 pickup owned by Darrell Craig of Rt. 1.

A Texas Electric light pole was struck following a two-vehicle collision here around 5:05 p.m. Friday. It occurred at the intersection of 30th St. and College.

Involved vehicles were a 1977 Ford Pinto driven by Robert McKinney of 3718 Ave. U; and a 1981 Ford Mustang driven by Randy Teaff of Post.

from the city.

Bryan, owner of Snyder Motor Inc., the local Chrysler dealership, is finishing his first two-year term after being appointed to the office in the fall of 1982. Prior to this appointment, he had served on the council previously.

Nunley, a co-owner of the Chevron wholesale distributorship here, is completing his first two-year term. He was elected in April of 1983.

Two positions are expiring on the school board: Place 1 now held by Lillie Sullivan; and Place 2 held by Leslie Butler.

Sullivan is a school teacher with the Ira school system and Butler a local chiropractor.

Trustees serve three-year terms. Sullivan is completing her second three-year term and Butler his first three-year term.

Snow arrives causing 14 mishaps Thursday

Fourteen minor traffic mishaps were reported to Snyder police Thursday afternoon — two involving Snyder ISD school buses.

The weather was said a factor in each wreck with no injuries reported from any of them. Damage to vehicles in four of the accidents was so minor that no official reports were filed.

Mishaps with reports filed included the following vehicles in collision:

—12:54 p.m.: 400 Block of East Highway, a 1984 Ford driven by O'Neal Bloom of Rt. 1, Snyder and a 1973 Chevrolet driven by Samuel David Barrera of 2508 Ave. K.

—1:12 p.m.: 1900 Block of 30th St., a 1983 Renault driven by Leo Ray Peveler of Rt. 3, and a 1980 Ford driven by James Richard McDonald, and a 1980 Pontiac driven by Jo Ann Cagle of Snyder.

—1:18 p.m.: 400 Block of East Highway, a 1981 Ford driven by Willie Garth Potter of 3208 42nd St. and a 1974 Ford driven by Carroll Pete Harbin of Rt. 2.

—1:18 p.m.: 30th St. and El Paso Ave., a 1981 Chevrolet driven by Sandra Bradshaw Pennington of Ira and a 1984 Ford driven by Harley Ray Carmichael of 2602 34th St.

—3:29 p.m.: 1800 Block of 30th St., a 1979 Ford driven by Alvin Gonzales of 3607 Kola St. and a 1974 International School Bus owned by Snyder ISD and driven by Dudley Dale Hamby of 2602 34th St.

—4:45 p.m.: 20th St. and Ave. R, a 1978 Ford driven by Belinda Langford Dollins of 3205 40th St. and a 1981 Chevrolet driven by James Elliott, Jr. of Snyder.

—4:49 p.m.: East Highway and Ave. E, a 1976 Ford driven by James Arthor Frakes of Ira and a 1977 International School Bus owned by the Snyder ISD and driven by Glen Olen Butler of Hermleigh.

—5:07 p.m.: 1100 Block of College Ave., a 1978 Chrysler driven by Thomas Edward McBroom of Rt. 2 and a 1972 Oldsmobile driven by Pedro Martinez of 104 33rd St.

—5:19 p.m.: 24th St. and College Ave., a 1982 Chevrolet driven by Cynthia Smith Valadez of 219 36th St. and a parked 1977 Ford owned by Jaime Herrera of Rt. 2, Snyder.

—5:50 p.m.: 25th St. and Hidetown Dr., a 1982 Pontiac driven by Robert Glen Turner of 4503 College Ave. and an unidentified vehicle which fled the scene.

No injuries were reported from any of these mishaps.

Welding torch reported stolen

Police are investigating a misdemeanor theft report filed Thursday afternoon involving a missing cutting torch.

Bill Guynes of B&J Welding called at 12:19 p.m. to report the missing equipment.

It is thought to have been taken from Guynes' truck while the vehicle was parked at a local restaurant on College Ave.

In other action, city police jailed one suspect for DWI and one for public intoxication while sheriff's officers arrested three men for public intoxication outside the city limits Thursday night.

Scurry County Folks...

By Vicki Brown

New technology has given 19-year-old Shawn Gould of Snyder a chance to see life more clearly — literally. On Nov. 6, he became the youngest person in the area to undergo eye implant surgery.

Shawn suffers from cataracts, a condition that is normally associated with the aging process. His doctors believe that he may have been born with the problem (congenital cataracts) or that the condition may have been the result of a high fever suffered when he was two months old.

The problem can be caused not only by aging. Among other causes are trauma (an injury to the eye), diabetes and high fever.

A cataract is not a "thing" at all — not like a tumor or cyst that can be isolated and removed. Rather it is the clouding of the lens, a transparent substance behind the pupil that focuses light rays.

In a normal eye, the lens picks up an image by using rays of light reflected by an object. The lens transfers the image to the retina, a sensitive membrane in the back of the eye, which sends the image to the brain. When the brain registers the image, the object is "seen."

When the lens becomes clouded, light rays are scattered and distorted causing the individual's vision to dim. Eventually the person sees only a dim shape with no detail.

Even though Shawn has never been declared legally blind, his diminishing vision caused several problems. "When I was in school, I had to go to the front (of the room) to see the board, write down the problems and go back to my seat."

His parents took him to an ophthalmologist in Big Spring when he reached the seventh grade. The doctor told them nothing could be done. When Shawn entered his freshman year, the ophthalmologist prescribed darkened glasses. "They didn't help much," Shawn said, "but they did cut the glare a little."

Another problem developed when he began driving. "I did get to drive but I was restricted to wearing glasses. I couldn't drive over 45 (miles per hour) either."

Even though his doctor said nothing could be done, Shawn still hoped his sight could be restored. "I just kept hoping something would happen. I just kept hoping I would see."

Last October Shawn's wish began to come true. "My mom took my sister to TSO (Texas State Optical) in Big Spring. My sister told the doctor there about me," he explained. "He looked up my record. He had my records because I had been there before for glasses. He recommended that I see Dr. DuBiner."

Dr. Harvey DuBiner is a recent addition to the Malone-Hogan eye clinic in Big Spring. Originally from New York, he completed his undergraduate studies at Syracuse University. After graduating from Chicago Medical School, he headed for Louisiana State University for training in his specialty — implant surgery and laser therapy.

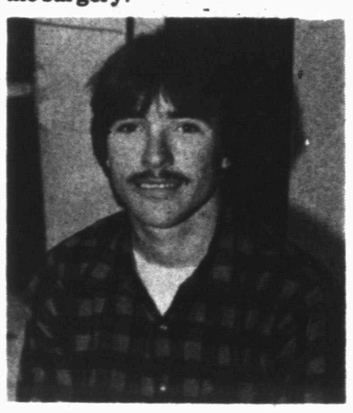

"I wanted to practice in a small Texas town," he said. After he had completed his studies, he accepted an offer from doctors at the Malone-Hogan clinic. "Dr. Malone recruited me because there was no ophthalmologist in town doing implant surgery," he added.

In Shawn's case, Dr. DuBiner felt that removing the cataracted lens and replacing it would be simple. But before the operation could be scheduled he had to obtain permission from the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) to replace Shawn's natural lenses with plastic implants.

"I had to get permission from the FDA," he explained, "because the normal bottom age for receiving a transplant is 50."

On Shawn's third visit, Dr. DuBiner set his surgery for Nov. 6.

For the doctor, the surgery was fairly routine. But for Shawn it meant almost a new life. "It seemed like I was looking through a magnifying glass. Everything was zoomed in and colors were so bright," he beamed. "And my driving restrictions were removed three weeks after the surgery.

SHAWN GOULD

Dr. DuBiner explained that implant surgery began when a Dr. Ridley noticed that World War II pilots did not suffer inflammation when pieces of plexiglass from a shattered plane windshield remained in the eye.

From that observation, Dr. Ridley developed the first artificial lens. The lens did not work well because it was too heavy.

During the 1970's, eye specialists discovered that lenses developed for spy satellites were also effective for eye implants. Even though the proceedure took off in 1978 and 1979, according to Dr. DuBiner, only about half of today's eye surgeons utilize implant surgery.

Shawn's second implant is set for Feb. 12. Dr. DuBiner said that replacement of the right lens will enhance Shawn's peripheral vision. "Most patients," he explained, "require glasses after surgery. But Shawn's vision in his left eye is nearly perfect. This second surgery will make him see that much better."

Shawn probably will not need glasses for anything except reading and work that requires close scrutiny. A normal eye is perfectly focused at arm's length and must thicken to focus on something closer. Since implanted lenses are fix-focused, bifocals are required to make the necessary focusing adjustment to see items at a closer range.

Dr. DuBiner has opened an office in Snyder now with Dr. Bryan Cave, a Lubbock optometrist, to serve his post-operative patients and to make initial evaluations for local residents. In operation for about a month, he and Dr. Cave offer local services every Monday and Tuesday.

He is quick to explain, "Not everyone who is blind can be made to see, but I think its important for people to know what's available."

For Shawn, surgery means seeing the world much more clearly now. Employed by Submergiable Pump for about a year, he said, "When trying to examine and repair cable I used to only be able to see the bumps (in the cable). But now I can see it all.

"It (seeing) is something I've been wanting all my life. It's so hard to explain how I feel," he added.

Now he and wife Kim are looking to the future. "I hope the Army will accept me after the second surgery."

Sketches of early history displayed

NEW YORK (AP) — A selection of 42 watercolors and sketches by Baroness Hyde de Neuville, a prolific and astute recorder of early 19th century America, is on view at the New York Historical Society through March 17.

The society says, "These works commemorate a remarkable life as well as provide an absorbing and rare glimpse into an important era of American history."

During two lengthy stays in the United States, the artist made hundreds of pencil sketches and watercolors. The 200 of these that survive present "a picture of a newly formed nation and its people."

New center open

SAN MARINO, Calif. (AP) — The Archives of American Art has opened a new research center at the Huntington Library in San Marino, Calif.

The facility expands to six offices the archives' national network of facilities for the study of the history of visual arts in the United States.

Now in its 30th year, the archives has collected more than 8 million original records of American painters, sculptors, craftsmen, collectors, dealers and others concerned with art in America.

The archives is a bureau of the Smithsonian Institution in Washington.

Married in San Antonio...

Rossett, Grimmett united

SAN ANTONIO — Tammy Dee Rossett became the bride of Jacky Dale Grimmett in an afternoon ceremony on Jan. 5 at Trinity Baptist Church. Dr. Buckner Fanning, pastor, officiated the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Rossett Jr. of San Antonio. Mr. and Mrs. Norman Grimmett, also of San Antonio, are parents of the groom. He is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Grimmett of Snyder and Mrs. Jessie Bowden of Denton.

MRS. JACKY DALE GRIMMETT

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore the wedding gown worn by her mother thirty years before. Lined with antique cream satin, the bodice was covered with Chantilly lace. Chantilly lace also highlighted the Victorian collar and long sleeves. Cream satin flowed from the waist into a long train.

She chose a headpiece embellished with tiny pearls. The veil originally had been worn by the siste[illegible] the groom.

Sharon Luther served as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Sylvia Samano, Linda Stephens, Nancy Duncan, sisters of the bride, and Eileen Price. Wearing cream lace and orchid knee-length dresses, the bridesmaids carried stems of cala lilies as bouquets.

Carolyn Samano, the bride's niece, was flower girl.

Kelly Grimmett, brother of the groom, was best man with Greg Minor, Scott Bowen, Dean Armacrest and Robert Stinson as groomsmen. Brian Joshlin and Randy Stephens served as ushers.

A reception at the Mehren House honoring the couple followed the ceremony.

The bride and groom are graduates of the University of Texas. The groom is completing master's degree requirements in engineering.

Following a honeymoon trip to Lake Tahoe, the couple will make their home in Austin.

The Charles Solomon Award is presented annually by the International Bridge Press Association for the best-played hand of the year.

Zia Mahmood of Pakistan, London, New York and bridge tables the world over, received this prestigious award for his play of today's hand in the World Team Championships in 1983 in Stockholm.

Because of the lead-directing double of two diamonds by East, and the double of four clubs by West, Zia placed West with only two diamonds. His line of play was simple. He trumped the opening diamond lead, trumped a club in dummy and ruffed another diamond. Another club ruff was followed by a spade to the ace. A third club was ruffed in dummy, and another spade played to the king. Trumps were now drawn with the ace, king and queen. When Zia now exited with a spade, West had to win the queen and lead into declarer's A-Q of clubs.

That was 12 tricks and a well-earned pickup for Pakistan in the World Championship in 1983. I'm curious to see how Zia will top this act in the future.

The Byzantine Empire kept its defenses up by gathering information from distant ports, naval patrols, envoys, merchants, spies and defectors. Collating the intelligence was the Bureau of Barbarians, Constantinople's intelligence agency, says National Geographic.

SCS Notes

By SAM BUCHANAN
District Conservationist

February is the month to disk strips throughout pastures to improve quail habitat for next summer. The purpose of disking is to prepare a seedbed for increased germination of large seeded forbs, such as crotens, sunflowers and ragweeds as the soils warm up next spring. Proper disking in February will remove winter annuals that would compete next spring with germinating quail foods for moisture and sunlight. Ranchers who install fire guards to protect pastures along highways will notice an increased growth of forbs favorable for quail. Quail prefer smooth, hard seeds and have difficulty eating chaffy seeds such as tobosa grass or any of the bluestems.

The land should be disked at least four inches deep to kill or bury existing vegetation. Locate 25- to 50-foot strips near woody cover or areas of tall and medium height grasses to enable birds to move safely between protective cover and food supply. At least five percent of a pasture should be disked to have a noticeable effect on your quails' food supply.

Buying Wool Clothing

The combination of unusually cold weather and traditional winter sales have made this an excellent time to buy wool clothes.

Wool fashions are an investment in quality and long life. When buying wool clothes — even on sale — consider the cost per wearing. Simply divide the total cost by the number of times you estimate you will wear the garment.

Because wool clothing is durable, resists tearing and often doesn't show wear, it can generally be worn for several seasons. So the per wearing cost of buying "investment" clothing such as a wool suit may be lower than the cost of less expensive clothing worn over a shorter period of time.

When shopping for wool clothes, look for the woolmark, which may be on the label or a hang tag. In addition, certain descriptive terms on the label may indicate wool quality, origin or quality:

—"Virgin" wool has never been used before. The term indicates use and not quality.

—"Reprocessed" wool has never been worn but is remanufactured from fabric scraps and is usually of lower quality than virgin wool.

—"Reused" wool has been remanufactured from items use before and is usually of lower quality than reprocessed wool. It is often used in blends.

Wool is often blended with other fabrics to produce fabrics which cost less than pure wool or to enhance care, appearance or wearability features for a particular type of clothing. If a garment contains at least 50 percent wool fiber, it will behave much like pure wool.

Texas is the number one wool producing state and it provides almost 50 percent of the nation's fine grade wool.

Imitation Cheese Not Always Like the Real Thing

It may look and even taste like cheese, but these days, only the label will tell you what you're eating.

TAFFY CAKE

1 ¾ cups sifted cake flour
1 teaspoon baking soda
¼ pound stick butter
1 cup firmly packed light brown sugar
3 tablespoons molasses
¾ cup buttermilk
3 large egg whites

Line bottoms of two 8-inch round cake pans with wax paper; grease paper. Stir together flour and baking soda. Cream butter and sugar; beat in molasses. Beat in flour mixture in 4 additions, alternately with buttermilk, just until smooth. Beat egg whites until stiff and fold in. Turn into prepared pans. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean — 25 to 30 minutes. Cool on wire racks for 10 minutes; loosen edges and turn out on racks; cool completely. Delicious sandwiched together with a butterscotch filling and served with whipped cream.

Surgeon's finger is amputated

By RON JENSEN
The Tulsa Tribune

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — It was a simple game of catch between father and son.

But with each catch of the baseball on that July afternoon, Dr. Tex Goen Jr. unknowingly was damaging a blood vessel in the index finger of his left hand.

The finger eventually had to be amputated, and his career as a heart surgeon was put in limbo.

"It's the finger that I tie every knot with," Goen said.

Goen knew shortly after playing catch with his son, Gary, a ninth-grader, that something unusual had happened. The finger was stiff and swollen.

In five hours of surgery that night, Dr. William Harrison tried to bypass the damaged blood vessel, but the injury was too severe.

The next day, Goen, 42, began to suspect the worst.

"I knew from that time on I would never be able to use that finger the way it was and may lose it, and began to prepare myself emotionally for that possibility," Goen said.

For two months, the pain was constant. The finger was so sensitive to cold that entering an air-conditioned room made it throb. Holding a glass of cold water was excruciating.

To attend Gary's football games, Goen had to wear a glove even on pleasant nights. As the summer heat gave way to cool fall, the pain increased. Harrison sug[illegible]station.

"I certainly was receptive to it because I had had enough," Goen said.

On Oct. 23, the finger was removed, and perhaps along with it his career as a cardiovascular surgeon.

It was a traumatic decision, but "the discomfort made it really easy," Goen said.

In October, Goen began working in the St. John Medical Center emergency room where his medical duties are not hampered by the loss of his finger.

He says he misses the close relationships he has had with heart patients and their families and contact with colleagues in the operating room.

"I loved the surgery, but I loved the care of the patients more," he said.

Goen literally wrote the book on the subject.

His 1981 "Smile or I'll Kick Your Bed!" helped prepare patients for surgery and subsequent recovery.

Goen is contemplating his next step: whether to give up on his career as a heart surgeon or try to regain his dexterity.

Friends meets again after 8 decades

By TERRY BONIFANTI
Scranton Times

SCRANTON, Pa. (AP) — They were born 18 days apart, on March 8 and March 27, 1884. They graduated from Scranton (Central) High School together in 1902. And then Julia Henwood and Alberta Speich didn't see each other again until they were both over 100 years old.

Miss Henwood had been a resident of the Jewish Home in Scranton for about a month when a nurse told her another centenarian had just moved in. It had been 82 years since she last set eyes on Miss Speich.

"Sure I remembered her name. We weren't in any of each other's classes, but we graduated together in the class of what we called the 'naughty twos,' " Miss Henwood said.

On her part, once informed Miss Henwood was living down the hall, Miss Speich also recalled her old classmate and looked forward to seeing her. It is, after all, a bit difficult to find people your own age to spend time with when you're 100.

"I never saw anyone who was 100, except me," Miss Speich said.

Before long, Miss Speich got a friend to take her to Miss Henwood's room. Then came stories that encompassed over 80 years of teaching, memories of Scranton that take in all of the 20th century thus far, and tales of children and their children's children who were students in the Scranton schools where the two taught after graduation from the Scranton Training School.

Miss Henwood, who lived in the same house for the first 100 years of her life, taught at the Thomas Jefferson School for 42 years, retiring in 1948 at the mandatory retirement age of 64.

"I wanted to go to college," she said.

She decided to be either a teacher or a nurse, had a chance to substitute, liked it and made up her mind to teach. Like Miss Speich, however, Miss Henwood had to wait for an opening before she was able to pursue that career.

"I always wanted to be a teacher, but I waited quite a while for a position," said Miss Speich, who retired from teaching in 1950. "In those days you had to have a little pull. I went to Stroudsburg Normal School, and I worked for the county while I waited.

She remembers being paid $44 a month in her early teaching days, "and I was able to put some of it away." Miss Henwood says it was more like $39.50.

Teaching, they both agree, is a profession that has changed in leaps and bounds over the years. Some of the changes were for the better. But others, like the changes in discipline, are definitely a step backward, they said.

"I had good children in all my classes," Miss Speich said.

"That's because they behaved or they knew what they would get," Miss Henwood added. "The trouble today is they're sparing the rod and spoiling the child."

Neither Miss Speich nor Miss Henwood ever married. They were, Miss Speich said, "married to their work."

"We were too busy teaching school. And I had my mom to take care of. I stayed home nights correcting papers," Miss Henwood said.

The line about being married to their work isn't all that farfetched. They couldn't keep their teaching jobs if they married.

"But that changed and I guess we just haven't met the right man ... yet," Miss Henwood said.

The years of teaching were great ones, but retirement wasn't bad, either, Miss Henwood said. During retirement, she taught religious classes and night school. She cared for the garden of the home she was born in and where she lived for more than 100 years.

Miss Speich said her retirement had been "rather active, but quiet." Every year, she said, has been special in its own way.

How does it feel to be 100?

"Old," Miss Henwood said. "Old age is no joke. It's not what it's cracked up to be."

You get to be 100, she said, by hard work. "Tell people not to be afraid to work. I used to work hard. Take things as they come — one day at a time."

"Just live each day for itself," Miss Speich said.

"When I think about being 100, I really don't understand it. I don't know why I'm here," Miss Henwood said.

Singer's town to name street after him

FREEHOLD, N.J. (AP) — The mayor of Bruce Springsteen's hometown has written the rock star to tell him that a street with his name on it is his for the asking.

The town's council has discussed various ways of honoring Springsteen, including a parade, presenting him with the key to Freehold or changing the name of South Street to Bruce Springsteen Boulevard.

A letter sent to Springsteen's agent earlier this month didn't get a response, so the council decided Monday that Mayor John McGackin should write directly to him.

"The main thing is if he would be in favor of having something or whether he doesn't want it," town Clerk Vivian Taylor said Tuesday.

Springsteen, 35, grew up in Freehold and has an aunt who lives there, she said.

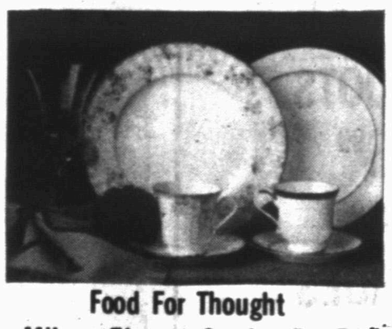

Tasmanian evenings are characterized by strong winds that, at times, include hail, sleet and rain. The TKAMANIAN Aboriginal hated the night and believed it was ruled by his most frightening devil, Wraggeowrapper, said to be "like a black man, only very big and ugly," National Geographic reports.

Cautery removes spider veins

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Is it possible to remove broken blood vessels on the legs or thighs? Since physicians cauterize or seal broken blood vessels on the face and around the nose, can this be done to the leg area? I saw a vascular surgeon, and he offered no advice on cosmetic treatment for this condition, other than elevating the legs and wearing support hosiery. I'm mostly concerned about the appearance of my legs. Would it be appropriate to seek advice from a dermatologist?

DEAR READER — I presume you are talking about fine spider veins. Those on the nose are quite small, and electric cautery works just fine, but it is painful. The very small veins in the leg could be treated this way, but most of them are larger than the small veins on the nose and face. For that reason, dermatologists may inject a concentrated salt solution that scars and destroys the small veins. Not all dermatologists do this, but you probably can find one who does.

These spider veins are not really varicose veins. Varicose veins involve the large superficial veins in the legs and appear to be about the size of a pencil. They are dilated, and the valves in the veins that prevent blood from pooling in the leg veins are usually damaged.

It is not absolutely certain that the small spider veins are related to varicose veins. However, anyone who has these should take extra precautions to avoid developing varicose veins of the large superficial veins in the legs. This is why wearing support hose, elevating the legs and avoiding prolonged standing are probably good measures to be taken.

I have discussed treatmnent of spider veins and varicose veins in the Health Letter, Special Report 21, Varicose Veins and Venous Insufficiency, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station New York, NY 10019.

In many cases, the large superficial varicose veins can also be treated by sclerosing agents that are somewhat stronger. This procedure is a bit more involved, but is far simpler than having surgery if a patient's case permits the use of injections rather than surgery.

DEAR DR. LAMB — A friend told me that at my age (38), my body will not produce muscle tissue. I was also told that the amino acid L-ornithine would turn body fat into muscle tissue if I exercise. I'm pretty heavy in the stomach area and want to reduce this. Will L-ornithine help me? I have rheumatoid arthritis. Would L-ornithine aggravate this?

DEAR READER — Nonsense. You may not grow new muscle fibers, but you can increase the size of the ones you have if you use a proper strength-training program. Many men a great deal older than you have increased the size of their muscles with strength-training exercises. You may need to approach strength exercises with some caution because of your rheumatoid arthritis. I recommend that you talk to a specialist in physical medicine for a program that would be helpful and not harmful.

Ornithine is an amino acid that your body can make from glutamic acid, a common amino acid in a balanced diet. Don't expect any miracles from it. Any ornithine you take as a supplement will most likely be converted to arginine, another amino acid that is found in food. It won't affect rheumatoid arthritis. Rather than taking some fad product, you should follow a good balanced-diet plan and a suitable exercise program.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am studying to be an emergency medical technician. When a person goes into cardiac arrest, cardipulmonary resuscitation (CPR) is needed for revival. When a person's heart goes into fibrillation and he has not yet gone into cardiac arrest, should chest compressions be started to correct the unequal rhythm of the heart? Can the heart be made to beat evenly with cardiac compression, not precordial thump, just compressions? I read that gentle pressure on the eyeballs during fibrillation can correct this heart action. What should we do?

DEAR READER — You have been trapped by some unfortunate medical terminology. The term "cardiac arrest" is used when the heart fails to pump enough blood to create a pulse. The most common cause of this is ventricular fibrillation. The heart is not electrically inactive in this case. In fact, the lower pumping chambers are twitching at a fairly rapid rate. However, you will not be able to get a pulse or measure blood pressure. Before the heart can beat normally again, the ventricular fibrillation must be stopped. This is the purpose of the big paddle-shaped electrodes that are placed on the chest to deliver an electrical shock to the heart. The electrical shock does stop the heart, and it's hoped that the heart will then resume its normal rhythmic beating.

Meanwhile, as the ventricles fibrillate and cannot pump blood effectively to establish circulation, CPR is used. The chest compression and relaxation suck blood into the lungs and heart and compress it out to maintain enough circulation to sustain life.

The heart can stop entirely, in which case there is no electrical activity. On an electrocardiogram, this would register as a straight line. This differs from ventricular fibrillation, but both are called cardiac arrest and both are associated with a pulseless patient.

Chest compression does not correct the heart rhythm. It is an emergency procedure to sustain circulation until something better can be done to restore a normal heartbeat. If the victim has an irregular pulse, but does have a pulse at a fairly decent rate, there is no point in chest compression. The heart is already pumping and the victim does not have cardiac arrest or ventricular fibrillation.

The information about using pressure on the eyeballs to stop fibrillation is incorrect. You can massage the carotid arteries in the neck, press on the eyeballs or do other things that stimulate the vagus nerve. In rapid heart action (supraventricular tachycardia), this may stop the fast heartbeat and cause a sudden return to more normal heart rates. It will not work for any ventricular rhythms, such as ventricular fibrillation, nor will it work for atrial fibrillation involving the top part of the heart.

You may wish to read the description of CPR in The Health Letter 7-4, Save A Life: Heart and Lung Arrest, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio city Station, New York, NY 10019.

Donna Reed still nervous over her part

NEW YORK (AP) — Donna Reed says she's still "very nervous" about replacing another actress on the CBS television series "Dallas," but admires Miss Ellie, the character she plays.

"I feel comfortable with (the character of) Miss Ellie, so I hope that comes through," Miss Reed said in an interview published Thursday in Parade magazine. "She's one of the few good female role models on television. She's strong and sturdy."

Although she won an Oscar for her role as a prostitute in the movie "From Here to Eternity," the 63-year-old actress is better known for maternal roles, first as the happy homemaker in the 1960s "Donna Reed Show" and now as the kindly matriarch of the Ewing clan, Miss Ellie.

She was semi-retired from 1966 until her big comeback in "Dallas," when she replaced Barbara Bel Geddes in the part.

Dogs trained to aid people

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — People make jokes about dogs who go to the refrigerator for a can of beer, pour it into a glass and chug it down.

Everyone knows dogs can't open beer cans. But the concept is no joke to Sandy Maze, founder of Support Dogs for the Handicapped.

She says they can be trained to get a soda pop from the refrigerator, turn on a coffee pot, answer the telephone and to give bank deposits to tellers — acts of canine gallantry that make life more livable for grateful handicapped masters.

Her Columbus organization, an extension of sorts of Seeing Eye dogs, may be on its way to becoming international.

Linda Allaby heads a similar training organization at Johnstown, Ohio. Her organization is known as Happy Canine Helpers Inc., a non-profit operation.

Mrs. Allaby says she takes part in training the dogs, which are of two different types. One, she says, is trained to help people confined to a wheelchair, and the second aids ambulatory people who live more independently.

Eight years ago, Miss Maze, 32, was training to become a police officer. Then she contracted muscular dystrophy, a degenerative disease of the muscles. She slowly lost strength, becoming too weak even to squeeze a tube of toothpaste. Forced to relinquish her independence, she became a virtual prisoner in her home, unable to go places or do things for herself. A television show on Seeing Eye dogs gave her an idea.

"I wondered, why not train dogs to help the physically disabled," Miss Maze said.

She found a trainer willing to undertake the task. Then, she found Stormy, a 90-pound black German shepherd who sits obediently at her feet, awaiting her commands.

She doesn't need Stormy as much now as she once did. Miss Maze's disease is now in remission, thanks to medication. But the medicine weakened her bones, and she expects to again be confined to a wheelchair within five years.

For now, Stormy is there to steady her as she walks down steps, to help pull her up if she falls, to pick things up with his mouth and hand them to her if she drops something.

Once Stormy did much more. And 22 other dogs she has trained are serving handicapped masters.

Three years ago, Miss Maze decided what had worked so well for her could work for others. She, her mother and an attorney incorporated Support Dogs for the Handicapped.

"Four more dogs will graduate next month," Miss Maze said. "But there are about 35 or 40 people waiting for a dog."

The dogs are trained to act as their masters' muscles, just as Seeing Eye dogs act as their masters' eyes.

"They can be taught to pull a wheelchair, to help pull someone up off a toilet seat, to hit an elevator button," Miss Maze said. They can be taught to turn on a coffee pot, she said, or to fetch a soft drink from the refrigerator, which they open by pulling on the handle with a paw.

Raising money to pay for training the dogs is a constant necessity. Miss Maze estimates it costs $4,000 to train one dog. The dogs, once fully trained, are given free to handicapped people.

Support Dogs for the Handicapped screens candidates for a dog. "We rely a lot on their attitude," said Miss Maze. "If they haven't accepted their disability, we usually tell them to get counseling. If you're going to rely on a dog, you must accept your disability."

Her graduates are scattered across the country. There's Piper, a German shepherd in Zanesville, Ohio, who pulls his mistress' wheelchair up ramps, opens doors and picks up dropped items.

Kelly, a shepherd in Phoenix, Ariz., carries 10-year-old Matt Huston's schoolbooks in a knapsack on his back, and was at his side when his young master met the president at the National Easter Seal Telethon last March.

There's Dusty, a Lansing, Mich., shepherd who picks up the telephone receiver when it rings and gives it to his mistress, Kelly Bolley. Ms. Bolley, unable to use her arms, feeds herself with her feet — and Dusty watches, never attempting to eat her food, which is within his easy reach.

There's Duke, a Doberman in Pontiac, Ill., who serves two masters. June and Bill Miller, both born with cerebral palsy, have been married for 15 years.

Collecting stuffed animals is okay

EAU CLAIRE, Wis. (AP) — James Benning is an arctophile.

If that's Greek to you, try this modern-day translation: lover of bears. Teddy bears, to be exact.

And if you think that's a little strange for anyone old enough to tie his own shoeslaces, Benning can call upon his expertise as a professor of psychology at the University of WisconsinEau Claire to explain that an attraction to teddy bears is normal at any age.

"Often you get a bear or stuffed animal when you're little," he says, "and that bear represents security."

The bear comes to be "a symbol of faithfulness, trustworthiness, loyalty. Bears never tell. You can tell them secrets ... and they're always there."

In scientific terms, he says teddy bears have a "solacing effect" on young and old. As troubled adults look for psychological comfort, he explains, it's only natural for them to return to their trusted childhood friend.

Bears are so deserving of Benning's professional regard that he maintains a teddy bear file, brings bears to some classes for discussion, and delivers teddy talks to civic groups.

Among the tidbits in the expert's file:

—A book on how to make stuffed teddy bears that includes an introductory chapter on the history of the creature. The most accepted explanation has them named after President Theodore "Teddy" Roosevelt because he refused to shoot a cub or sickly bear that had been caught by a member of his hunting party.

—The Arctophile, a newsletter for bear collectors. It explains that arctophile comes from the Greek "arkto," meaning bear, and "philos," meaning friend or love.

—An article reporting on studies at three universities that found 80 percent of all female and 40 percent of all male students keep a teddy bear or other stuffed animal in their room.

But Benning's interest goes beyond the professional.

"They are all unique," he explains, sitting in his campus office stuffed with books and "bearaphernalia" accumulated in his 27 years at the west-central Wisconsin university. "They have different expressions. They have a quality about them that's intriguing."

Benning traces his affair with bears to his childhood — yes, he had a teddy bear — and to the bears he and his wife, Carol, have given to their three children.

At first, Benning found himself buying "a bear here and a bear there." Now he has bears everywhere.

His campus office contains just the bear necessities: a few teddies, a bear calendar, an "anatomy of the teddy bear" poster and the like.

The rest of the professor's four to five dozen bears stay at home, where the three bears first given to his children sit in their own chairs in front of the fireplace.

Then there's the bearaphernalia. He has a bear mug, teddy tray, pens, a "bear lovers are the best" T-shirt, note pads — and a lot more.

Benning has also made 15 to 20 teddy bears of different sizes and styles. Perhaps out of respect for his furry friends, Benning doesn't sell his handmade bears. They become gifts for family and friends on special occasions, such as birthdays and weddings.

"It's the satisfaction of creating something that makes people feel good and brings a smile," he says.

And that's the reaction Benning says he usually gets from people who find out about his hobby.

Indeed, he says there has been a real increase in interest in teddy bears. He points to books and newsletters about bears and stores that specialize in teddy sales.

That's good news if Benning is right when he says: "Anybody who likes teddy bears can't be all bad."

Emancipation Proclamation is rarely seen

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Mona Lisa hangs in the Louvre. The Rosetta stone sits in the British Museum. And Abraham Lincoln's only handwritten Emancipation Proclamation is locked up most of the time in a New York State Library vault.

A rare public display is planned in February of the four aging, but barely fading, cream-color pages that declared freedom for slaves in the Confederate states during the Civil War.

To celebrate Lincoln's birthday and Black History Month, the handwritten draft of the Sept. 22, 1862, proclamation will be exhibited in the state museum at the Empire State Plaza.

The document reveals a shrewd president with an enlightened view of mankind, but usually his renowned proclamation lies dormant in darkness. It is encapsulated in a doublechambered, 150-pound, steel case filled with nitrogen gas at a temperature of 64 degrees. Each carefully preserved page rests on a sheet of pure cellulose.

Proposals to fund a permanent exhibit for the proclamation have been considered by the New York Legislature, but other priorities have taken precedence.

"We do not say publicly where the document is stored," says John VanDerVeer Judd, a state librarian in charge of security and preservation of the proclamation and other priceless possessions in the state library system.

James Corsaro, another state librarian, says Lincoln's proclamation is clearly New York State Library's most prized historical document. But the public has rarely gotten a chance to see it since 1865. That was when the state Legislature purchased it for $1,000, two days after Lincoln's funeral cortege passed through this capital city.

The document's journey from Lincoln's hand in Washington to Albany involved statesmen, wealthy do-gooders and a raffle ticket, according to historical accounts.

Emily Weed Barnes, a daughter of master political strategist Thurlow Weed, and her husband, journalist William Barnes, helped organize the 1864 Army Relief Bazaar in Albany for the United States Sanitary Commission. The commission was a civilian-run charitable organization that raised funds for the care of wounded Union soldiers.

Mrs. Barnes used her family connections to request that the document be donated as a raffle prize. She wrote to Lincoln's secretary of state and former New York Gov. William H. Seward and his son Frederick Seward, who served as assistant secretary of state.

Some 5,000 raffle tickets were printed, but apparently there were only about 1,100 sold for $1 each.

Noted chef shares some cooking tips

NEW YORK (AP) — Chef Stanley Kramer has no closely guarded culinary secrets that have to be pried out of him with a lobster pick.

"I don't want anybody to keep secrets from me and I don't want to keep secrets from anybody," says the chef at the Oyster Bar in Grand Central Terminal. He wants to attract diners to the famous arch-ceilinged seafood restaurant with fish that's fresh and well-prepared, not with mysterious ingredients in sauces.

Kramer shares a couple of recipes and some cooking tips in the fourth week of PBS' 13-part series "New York's Master Chefs." The series, airing on most stations on Thursdays, started Jan. 17 with Andre Soltner of Lutece. Kramer will be seen on Feb. 7.

Kramer, 44, an American, got his first job at New York's Four Seasons Restaurant after graduating in 1960 from New York City Community College's culinary arts program. His first important chef's job was at La Fonda del Sol, a South American restaurant. He has been chef at the Oyster Bar 5½ years.

On TV, Kramer prepares two fish dishes, mako shark steak au poivre and tournedos of lotte (also called monkfish) with lobster and lobster butter, that are designed for serving at home.

"My idea was to make something that would be interesting but at the same time not intimidating to the home viewer who would like to duplicate it," he says. "These recipes are really simple.

"I think eating in the home is warmer than eating in a restaurant. If you could capture the warmth of serving the meal in your home and the elegance of being in a restaurant where everything is just so, then you've really made a wonderful evening for people."

The commonest mistake home cooks make with fish, Kramer says, is cooking it too little or too much. "It should be cooked until it becomes snowy white, just at that point where it goes from being shiny or transluscent. Past that, it gets too dry.

"And I see a lot of recipes that say to wrap fish in aluminum foil and put in a broiler. When you put it in aluminum, you're not broiling it, you're baking it."

His favorite way to cook fish at home is on a grill, even a sandwich grill, getting the grill hot first, putting bread crumbs and a little oil on the fish, turning the fish once.

Kramer grew up with a mother who was a good cook. Her mother was a good baker. His father owned a butcher shop and his uncle owned a luncheonette. When he was 13, he'd ask his uncle if he could work for him Saturdays instead of going to movies with his friends. When he was 14, he worked Saturdays for his father and Sundays for his uncle.

Dear Abby

Ex-Wife's Offer to Talk Intrigues Man's Fiancee

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am very much in love with a man I've known about a year. We have plans to marry soon. "Joe" is 41 and I am 29. This will be my first marriage and Joe's third.

Yesterday I received a letter from Joe's second wife, whom I had never met. She said, "If you want to meet me, I will be glad to tell you about my marriage to the man you hope to spend the rest of your life with. This letter comes from someone who wants only to help you. I am sorry that Joe's first wife didn't offer to meet with me before I married him."

Abby, her letter had a sincere and benevolent ring to it, and I want very much to meet this woman, but I don't want to be disloyal to Joe.

TEMPTED

DEAR TEMPTED: Don't be disloyal to Joe. Tell him about the letter from Wife No. 2, but don't expect him to be overjoyed. Should you see her? You have nothing to lose—except some illusions, perhaps.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Recently I started attending Al-Anon meetings to help me cope with an alcoholic wife. I've been to five meetings and have benefited greatly, but there's a problem.

Some members resent my presence and make me feel unwelcome. Why? Because I suffer from asthma and am allergic to smoke.

I am 67 years old and my doctor ordered me to quit smoking 22 years ago. Smoke still brings on coughing spasms. Some longtime members of the group seem to resent the fact that I, a new member, have asked them not to smoke during the one-hour session. One member gets up two and three times during the hour to go out and smoke. I am sure this disturbs the group, and I feel guilty.

Numerous organizations ban smoking. Why not Al-Anon? I can't imagine anyone so addicted to tobacco that he can't go for one hour without a cigarette. Don't these people realize they have a health problem as serious (or possibly more so) than the alcoholic they are living with?

FEELING GUILTY

DEAR FEELING: Every nonsmoker is entitled to a smoke-free room. The smokers have the problem; they're addicted. There is no smoker who cannot quit if he really wants to.

DEAR ABBY: I am an attractive 26-year-old female. I've never been married, but I probably will marry when I fall in love.

My mother is pressuring me to get married and let a man take care of me. I have a college degree, a good position and am perfectly capable of taking care of myself. My father keeps reminding me that I am not getting any younger.

The guy I'm currently dating is considered a "good catch," but I don't love him. He's serious about me, but I like him as a friend. I'm not in love with him and I told him so.

My mom says I'm being foolish—that 99 percent of the women who marry don't marry for love, and it's time I grew up and faced reality.

Please give me your opinion.

OLD MAID AT 26

DEAR 26: You are not an "old maid." And you appear to be sufficiently grown up to chart your own course. I'm sure your parents mean well, but you're wiser than they are. Tune them out.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: What do you do when the grandparents forget their grandson's birthday?

WABASH, IND.

DEAR WABASH: Gently "remind" them of the oversight. (Better late than never.) And next year remind them about two weeks in advance of the date.

Siberian lake water refreshingly clean

LISTVYANKA, U.S.S.R. (AP) — This tiny village in remote Siberia sits on the edge of the world's deepest, purest and oldest lake, once worshipped by Siberian tribes and now the most protected national treasure in the Soviet Union.

The Soviet government's efforts to maintain the unique ecology of Lake Baikal have kept it the world's largest body of fresh, clean water. But they also have affected the lives of the hardy people who made their homes on its rocky shores.

A ban on killing rare species of fish, for example, has caused fishermen to move away from the surrounding villages.

The population around Lake Baikal, which lies 4,000 miles southeast of Moscow, has dropped by two-thirds since the ban was introduced, says Komsomolskaya Pravda, the Communist youth newspaper.

Regulations protecting the lake were approved in 1971 by the Communist Party's Central committee, after naturalists protested that toxic wastes from a cellulose factory were threatening the 1,200 species of plant and fish life unique to the lake.

These days when ecologists worry about lakes being polluted by industrial waste and acid rain, the water in Lake Baikal is still so clean that residents carry it home in buckets rather than drink from their own taps.

Visitors who reach the area on the Trans-Siberian Express get their first glimpse of Lake Baikal as the train winds around its south side. Ringed by the snow-covered peaks of the Khamar Daban range, Lake Baikal's shimmering beauty comes into view through a morning mist.

Standing on the shores of the 46-mile-wide, 385-mile-long, crescent of water, it's impossible to see the opposite side even on a clear day.

Covering an area as large as the lowlands of Europe, the lake is more than a mile deep in one spot and contains one-sixth of the world's supply of fresh water, as much as America's five Great Lakes combined.

Believed to have formed 25 million years ago, Lake Baikal also is the world's oldest lake.

It has many ocean-like features, including currents and the "sarma" wind, which blows up to 80 miles an hour.

After a winter in which temperatures plunge to minus 40 degrees Fahrenheit, the lake warms slowly. Ice floats on the surface in some areas even in July.

The golomyanka, a species of fish unique to Lake Baikal, live 1,600 feet deep. They are almost completely blind and are little more than backbones encased in fat. They melt or burst when washed ashore, leaving a pool of oil rich in vitamin A that the Buryats, a Mongol people of eastern Siberia, use medicinally.

Golomyanka also are eaten by the nerpas, fresh-water seals who number about 70,000 and are believed to have migrated from the Arctic Ocean, although scientists can't explain how they reached Lake Baikal.

The native Buryat tribes believed evil spirits lived in the lake. They also believed their great hero Genghis Khan had a camp on one of the lake's 22 islands.

Legends and myths still surround Lake Baikal and residents speak of the lake with awe.

They have reported mirages over the lake, including a whole train of the Trans-Siberian Express. Earth tremors are common, producing rumblings and disturbing the lake's surface.

Sincerely yours,
Dan Aycock
2300 32nd Street,
Snyder, Texas

To the editor,

I would like to express appreciation for a spirit of hospitality, honesty, and kindness which my family and I recently experienced in Snyder. Late Sunday night, Dec. 30, our car, after thirty miles of ever-dimming lights and sluggish wipers, died at the Plaza Truck Stop north of Snyder. A helpful young woman suggested a wrecker service, which we called. A few moments later, Dan Howell, of Mason's Automotive, told me he would send a wrecker and would do whatever he could to help us continue our trip to Houston. Within fifteen minutes, his associate, whose first name is Graham and whose last name I did not learn, helped us get our car to the garage, ran a few tests, then, with the promise that he would get to work on the car first thing the next morning, despite the fact that the garage would be closed, graciously took us to the Purple Sage Motel. The next morning, the motel owner, Art Feinsod, offered to take us to a restaurant for breakfast, and pick us up when we were through. We would have accepted this offer had Dan Howell not called to tell us the car was ready. Mr. Feinsod drove us several miles to Mason's Garage. At the garage, we learned that what we had feared would be an expensive bill for a replaced alternator was a $30 charge for a repaired alternator mount.

In Houston, where we live, or in many small towns in America, it would have been possible for a garage either to have refused to help us on a holiday or to have taken advantage of our situation and defrauded us or charged us an exorbitant amount for a modest amount of work. Instead, we were treated kindly, generously, and honestly by several citizens who made us feel as good as we could possibly have felt, under the circumstances. It was my birthday and our wedding anniversary. I cannot say if was the best we have ever spent, but it could have been much worse, had it not been for the reception we received. Our feelings about Snyder will always be positive because of the kindness these people showed us. You can be proud of them as representatives of your city.

Sincerely,
William Martin

Your Birthday

February 3, 1985

Two ambitious aims that were unachievable last year will be attained in the coming months. Each will be important, yet they will be in different areas.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Be certain you know what you want today. You may work hard to get something, only to discover it wasn't worth the effort. Looking for romance? The Astro-Graph Matchmaker set could help you find it. Send $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Someone you mix with socially should not be drawn into your ambitious plans today. He might not fill a useful role.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Know when to stop selling today. If you press on when you already have an affirmative answer, it may cause your prospect to reject your proposal.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Stand by your decisions today if you feel they are fair and just. Wishy-washy compromises could undo what you hope to achieve.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You will be rewarded today in proportion to the efforts you expend. If you expect returns for something you haven't as yet done, you'll be disappointed.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) As long as you stay in your own bailiwick today, all will run smoothly. However, if you attempt to manage something for another where you lack expertise, problems could result.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't become involved in a partnership arrangement today with a person you've already had a bad experience with. History may repeat itself.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Do not be envious of a close friend if he is more popular and well received by others than you are today. Your turn will come later.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Material conditions are likely to be a mixed bag for you today. You have the ability to acquire but there's an extravagant streak in you as well.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Others will have more respect for your opinions today if you do not try to impose your ideas upon them. Express your thoughts with a flair, not force.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Do not sell your talents short today or underestimate their worth. If you feel what you have to offer is of small value, others will as well.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Sometimes it is not advisable to get involved in financial ventures with friends. Keep this in mind today if an old pal comes to you with a proposal.

February 4, 1985

Stick to your present course of action in the year ahead, even though you may have to contend with some obstacles. Success will come through persistence and perseverance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Strive to be helpful to others today, but do not let them make demands of you that totally restrict your independence and mobility. You need room to operate. Major changes are in store for Aquarians in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Unless you plan your moves carefully today, there's a good chance you'll make more work for yourself than necessary. Try to bring order out of chaos.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You'll fare better today if you lay aside your desires for pleasurable pursuits and devote your energies and attention to serious matters.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You may experience stiffer competition than you anticipate today in areas where you'll be trying to gratify your personal ambitions. Don't buckle under.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) It's best not to try to impose your philosophy or ideas on subordinates today. They're not likely to be in the market for what you're proposing.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Make an effort to keep current on financial obligations that are now due. At the least, try to acknowledge them with token payments.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Hard feelings will result today if you break your word pertaining to something you promised to do for another. Honor your commitments.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Do not rationalize your duties and responsibilities away today, hoping you'll get around to them later. This type of thinking creates logjams.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Try to steer clear of risky financial ventures today. Someone may profit from these situations but it isn't likely to be you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Be careful not to place yourself in an awkward situation where you have to defend a position you don't truly believe.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Try to be flexible regarding your mode of operation today or you may back yourself into a corner by sticking to ideas that aren't feasible for your present needs.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Prudent management of your resources is a must today. Don't take any impulsive risks if buying, selling or trading.

Sadat's widow wants peace

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The widow of Egyptian president Anwar Sadat says the foundation of world peace lies in people wanting to help each other in the future and forgetting about the past.

In a lecture to 500 people at the University of Texas on Thursday, Jihan Sadat encouraged students to promote their own sort of peace by helping the needy and disabled.

Mrs. Sadat, whose husband worked for peace in the Middle East and was assassinated in 1981, also said women will play a large role in helping attain world peace because they are by nature for peace. "It is my firm belief that we have a special vocation to make the voice of reason and gentleness prevail whenever we can," she said.

Above the Fold

By Donny Brown

It's probably a sin to derive pleasure from another newspaper's problems — and the Head Foobah who look's over journalist's shoulders will no doubt mete out his justice in time.

But it tickled us several months ago when the Abilene Reporter-News admitted "universal reader disapproval" in connection with a format switcheroo for the publication.

Specifically, when they changed how they displayed the pictures of all those folks who have regularly scheduled newspaper columns.

In the trade we call it "dramatic cropping." To the reader's eye, what they did was lop off the forehead just above the eyebrows of Erma Bombeck, Dr. Lamb, Lash Lashbrook (of the oil and gas news) and Art Lawler, who generates all of those letters to the editor with his daily inside column.

To give the Abilene paper its due, they noted all of the other changes had provoked favorable comments from their readers.

But the no-forehead idea turned out to be a real stinker. In response, the Abilene paper quickly returned to a more conventional mug shot of all those "persons" you love to read on a daily or almost-daily basis.

We might note, in a world filled with TVs, journalists have begun sticking their pictures at the top of columns to give readers someone to "identify" with.

We view it as an attempt to compete with all of that teeth and combed hair you see on the nightly news. And we often hope that looks don't ever start to replace talent when it comes to the written word.

So anyway, we got to wondering why the big squawk?

Okay, okay, it made those people look ridiculous. But we doubted it was Erma or the good Dr. Lamb who was complaining. It was the readers who pitched a shoe, not the writers — and why would they care what someone else looked like?

Then we remembered a phenomenon we first noticed years ago when looking through an old class yearbook. When you look at that many faces in a row, they all start to blur together anyway.

But the real charge comes when you turn the page upside down, adjust your eyeballs to semi-focus and continue to look. Pretty soon, all of those upside-down faces right themselves.

Except everyone is now bald on top with beards of varying lengths, sizes and shapes. And the funny thing is, everyone looks like shiny-headed, extremely ugly apes.

Then we noticed that when you perform forehead surgery on a picture, you appear to lower that individual by approximately 40 IQ points.

Again, the people begin looking like apes. So it occurred to us that readers complained because — like it or not — they do care what those guys look like.

Nobody likes taking advice from a gorilla. And newspaper folks had better take a cue from their fellows in the electronic media.

Mrs. Jones, call my hairdresser.

I was sitting under a blanket by the fire watching uncle Ted's channel when they went to a commercial. I think this all news station would be more accurate if it was called 50/50, since ads and news items seem to be about equal. But anyway, here was this snow covered kid on the screen announcing that his glasses were stuck to his face.

"It's time," he was saying. Then I saw a picture of sunny Florida, the object of the ad. However when the news came back on, there was Florida in her present state - all covered in snow and ice!

A citrus farmer in an overcoat and wearing glasses was saying he was gonna go broke for sure now. No doubt, his glasses were stuck to his face.

This would qualify as a blooper, if you stretched things a little. Of course without stretching, you could call half the shows on prime time bloopers, and some of them continued. The other half will be cancelled, so don't get attached.

But I'm not here today to expose the sorry state of TV. By the time this cold snap breaks you will be well aware of that. What I want to point out is that it is cold all over. You have probably got wind of that too by now. It has been on television and in all the papers.

What I want to know is what are we going to do about it? Are we going to sit around and freeze without even a whimper?

Our first step should be to exile all the weather forecasters to Russia where they belong. It is almost always cold in Russia, right? And now it is cold here. A coincidence? I wonder?

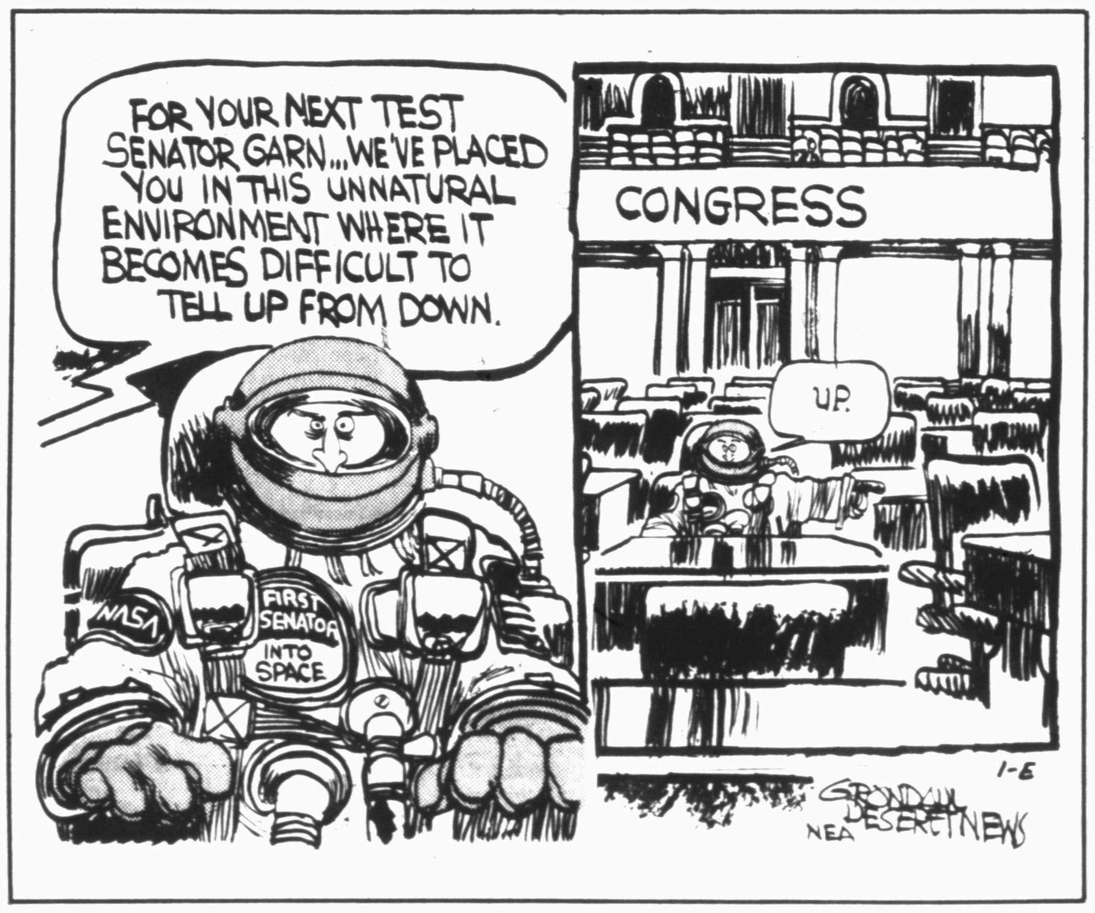

If the new weather people, elected of course, cannot do better, then we the people must take this matter into our own hands.

In the event that abolishing winter doesn't work, I have a contingency plan. Simply reschedule it.

Why not? It worked with the Presidents' birthdays didn't it? There are 50 or so Mondays in a year. That should be enough. Every time it gets cold, just call it a Monday.

Think of the advantages. First, Mondays are downers anyway, so why not kill two birds with one stone? Second, never again would a weekend be spoiled by nasty weather. If you wake up some Saturday morning with your rod and reel already packed, or your hunting gear already stashed in the pickup and there is cold, wet stuff all over the ground, no problem. It is suddenly a work day, right? A Monday to be specific. No need to panic or get depressed. Simply call your boss and tell him the roads are too bad to drive, which is true, or if you are in the habit of lying, tell him your car won't start. He'll buy it. Snowy days aren't much good for business anyway.

With that out of the way you can go hunting or fishing like you planned. Or if you prefer, just lay around the house and watch TV. When you tire of that you could put your head to helping me decide what would be a good day to designate for sandstorms.

MONDAY
January 28

Scurry County Attorney Gary Terrell informed county commissioners Monday morning he will be resigning his position effective April 1 as part of a planned move from Snyder.

Terrell, who joined the Lubbock-based law firm of McWhorter, Cobb and Johnson last October, will be closing the local branch office of that firm and relocating to Lubbock.

He won the post in the Democratic primary last May, then assumed the job's full responsibilities at the request of county commissioners August 1 following the death July 6 of incumbent County Attorney George Killam.

More than $49,000 worth of renovation to city-maintained facilities — to include the Snyder police station and city hall — is now nearing completion, it was reported Monday.

The fixup has included the addition of handicapped ramps for better access to city hall as well as the downtown square area.

The work now being finished at city hall involves adding a roof overhang around the facility. At the Snyder PD, five outside windows have been added and the area formerly used for prisoner holding cells has been changed into a dayroom for police officers.

Scurry County sheriff's officers are investigating the third burglary of the G&G Grocery Store — at the intersection of Huffman Ave. and the Clairemont Highway — since Jan. 9.

City police on routine patrol shortly after 2 a.m. Monday reported discovering a broken front window.

In both of the previous burglaries — Jan. 9 and Jan. 12 — thieves apparently gained entry by breaking out the front window and then exited through the back door.

TUESDAY
January 29

A series of articles began Tuesday in the SDN related to one aspect of House Bill 72 which Snyder administrators are gearing to implement before the end of the school year — career ladder payments for classroom teachers.

It was noted while the intent of this new state mandate is to reward the "good" classroom teacher, local administrators see it as a double-edged sword which could create its share of the "bad."

WEDNESDAY
January 30

"The Marines have landed," became more than just an often-used phrase this week for some Scurry County residents, it was reported Wednesday.

Repairs to a CH-53D Sea Stallion helicopter were completed Wednesday morning by members of the U.S. Marine Corps "Ugly Angels" aircrew.

A Lubbock resident was identified Wednesday as the man authorities believe stole an AMF Tuboscope company pickup in Snyder Monday night before commiting suicide in Grand Prairie Tuesday morning.

No note was found at the death scene in Grand Prairie and investigators reported no evidence to explain why he abandonded his car in Snyder and took the truck and an attached trailer.

THURSDAY
January 31

Friendship Home, a home for abused or neglected teenage girls, has received its provisional license and is now ready for operation, it was reported Thursday by representatives of its sponsoring agency SCOOP.

Thursday marked the final day before unpaid property taxes in Scurry County became delinquent.

FRIDAY
February 1

A rural Scurry County family lost their mobile home to fire Thursday night.

The trailer — callled a total loss by fire officials — was the residence of Jack Almquist, his wife and children. The dwelling was located some 9 miles south of Snyder on Texas Highway 208.

County school students and teachers received the first unscheduled holiday of the 1984-85 school year Friday as heavy snow prompted administrators to call off classes.

School was dismissed at Snyder, Hermleigh and Ira in addition to Western Texas College, where both classes were canceled and administrative offices closed.

Falling snow in the area since Thursday morning caused an official estimate of 4½ inches of the white stuff.

Look Back

By Noble B. Young

FIVE YEARS AGO

Scurry County farmers were celebrating the harvest of what was thought to be the county's biggest cotton crop ever. Bale counts for county gins released by Scurry County Agent Billy Roach Jan. 27 showed just over 96,000 bales either already ginned on sitting on yards with an estimated value of over $30 million dollars.

Snyder High School students participating in distributive education conferences and contests in San Angelo this weekend include Valerie Wilson, Carrie Ainsworth, Teena Hopper, Tammy Justice, Jo Beth Stephens, Terry Thames and Destry Greenway.

10 YEARS AGO

Scurry county commissioners today — Jan. 27 — took the first official action to establish an official observance of the United States Bicentennial for Scurry County during 1976. The commissioners appointed Delbert Downing as general chairman for the event — responsible for coordinating activities of the various organizations expected to be involved.

Officers of the Snyder Chamber of Commerce Gold Coaters organization for 1975 elected this week were Bill Clayton, president, and Milton Ham, vice-president.

Scurry County basketball fans all knew the score Thursday night as Scurry County Coliseum staffers put the new four sided center arena scoreboard in operation for the first time. In the game, the WTC Westerners ran their season record to 20-1 defeating New Mexico Junior College 83-74.

15 YEARS AGO

Southwestern Bell officials today — Jan. 28 — released figures for total telephones connected in Scurry County for 1969 showing a growth of over 1,500 installations for the decade with 8,733 units in place — up from 7,201 in operation in 1960.

20 YEARS AGO

Members of the Board of Directors of the Scurry County Industrial Foundation today — Jan. 27 — elected Claude McCormick president of that organization for 1960. Other officers elected were G.B. Clark, first vice president; Bill Wilson, second vice president; and Hubert Cargile, treasurer.

Letters to the editor

To the editor,

It has become apparent to the citizens of this community that the office of County Attorney will be vacant as of April 1, 1985. This vacancy must be filled by the Commissioners' Court, and this office requires that a licensed attorney be appointed.

After examining the list of available attorneys who might want this office, it is obvious that the choices will be narrowed down to two attorneys. There are those attorneys who do not want the office and there are those who have already been appointed to an office.

There is an attorney who was turned out of office by the voters and there is an attorney who ran for the office of County Attorney but was not elected because he was not well enough known at the time.

In my opinion and the opinion of many others with whom I have talked, it is time this County brought in some new blood to serve this community. There is a local attorney who is qualified (Baylor Law School graduate), honest, young, community-minded, dedicated, caring and willing. He has not only done a great deal of free legal work for those who are indigent and unable to find help from anyone else, but he has tried diligently to give of himself in various community endeavors. He is an active church member and teaches Sunday School. Also, he is a service club member.

This young man does not have any outside income, such as oil royalties or the like. His income depends only on his own efforts. He has made every effort possible to become a worthwhile member of this community, and he has had to struggle in order to do so.

Some available attorneys may not really need the job of County Attorney. This young man does — and when a man truly needs and

Genius said to be 99 percent perspiration

BOSTON (AP) — Few achievements of human sweat are so difficult or so satisfying as creating something new — an insight, a melody, a turn of phrase that has never occurred to another soul in the history of the planet.

Psychologists poke into those moments of clear vision, so elusive and unpredictable, when fresh ideas are born, and they analyze the people who are blessed with a talent for bringing them to life.

Their goal is to learn what nourishes creativity, what kills it, what makes these masters of originality so different from the hordes who never rise above the commonplace.

The innovators of great and memorable works are in some ways surprisingly ordinary, it turns out. Studies show that they are frequently smart but not too brainy, educated but not too learned.

If anything sets them apart, it is their drive. They start young; they work hard; they keep going, often far into old age. Above all, they are motivated, and their drive to achieve comes from within.

Creativity is often a fragile thing, easily stifled. Researchers are learning that the forces that inspire it — or try to — also shape its quality.

At Brandeis University, psychologist Teresa M. Amabile has boiled down nine years of study into one observation: "Intrinsic motivation is conducive to creativity, but extrinsic motivation is detrimental."

When people are inspired by their own interests and enjoyment, she says, there is a better chance that they will explore unlikely paths, take risks and, in the end, produce something unique and useful. When their goals are imposed on them by others, when they are goaded by fear of firing or lust for money, creativity withers.

Many endeavors — science, technology, the arts — live and die on people's creativity. Yet those worlds are often filled with traps that kill the very originality that they need.

The single best prod to creativity, Ms. Amabile says, is freedom — the power to decide what to do and how to do it, a sense of control over one's own ideas and work.

Dr. Salvador E. Luria of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, mentor to several famous scientists and himself a Nobel laureate, contends, "The most important thing is to leave a good person alone."

Adds Dr. Mahlon B. Hoagland, scientific director of the Worcester Foundation for Experimental Biology: "I've often said that running a scientific institution is a lot like running an artist colony. The best an administrator can do is leave people alone to do what they want to do."

Among the things that smother creativity, Ms. Amabile found, are frequent evaluation and criticism. A study of scientists and engineers in commercial laboratories showed that people flourish best when their output is not reviewed frequently.

"There's a sense that they are professionals, and over time they are going to produce something that's reasonable," she says. "The people who are most inhibited in creativity are those who are in high-pressure environments where they have weekly or monthly performance appraisals."

Offering rewards for coming up with innovative work also undermines originality, she says. Creative people need to feel that they are well paid and appreciated. But their work will suffer if the goal of each project is a bonus, not simply the pleasure of doing something well.

Ms. Amabile reached her conclusions mainly by conducting brief experiments in which volunteers worked out puzzles, wrote poems or performed other creative tasks while hindered or helped by such influences as rewards or surveillance.

Meanwhile, Psychologist Dean Keith Simonton of the University of California, Davis, stalks clues to this perishable quality in the lives of highly creative people from times past. He recently summarized his work and that of other investigators in a book called "Genius, Creativity, and Leadership."

One of the most striking findings that runs through the research is how hard these creative giants work.

"Genius is 1 percent inspiration and 99 percent perspiration," goes Thomas Alva Edison's famous line. And it seems to be true.

Edison himself held 1,093 patents. Albert Einstein wrote 248 publications. Pablo Picasso averaged over 200 works of art a year. Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart had more than 600 compositions to his credit before he died at age 35.

"For the most part, they tend to start earlier and end later," Simonton says. "The idea of early burnout — that if you start early, you end early — is not true."

U.S. Nobel laureates in science during this century averaged more than a dozen publications before their 30th year, about four times as many as ordinary scientists contribute over their entire lives.

Sigmund Freud wrote his first professional paper at 21. Johann Sebastian Bach dictated his last composition, well over his 1,000th, on his deathbed at age 65.

"Something appears to drive these creators to venture into the world of truth or beauty at an early age, to contribute masterworks at a hectic pace and to continue their creative endeavors until late in life," Simonton says.

While good works may start early and end late, the peak productive age comes midway through the modern lifespan, or around age 40. Michelangelo finished the Sistine Chapel when he was 37, the same age that Ludwig van Beethoven wrote his Fifth Symphony.

Simonton studied 420 literary creators from 25 centuries of world literature. He found that the peak age for writing prose was about 43, while the peak for poetry fell around 39.

For all their prowess, however, awesomely inventive people are in some ways quite ordinary. Many were lackluster pupils, neither especially well educated nor particularly brainy.

Creative people are intelligent, but a high IQ is no guarantee of success. In fact, Simonton says there's evidence that too much brainpower may actually be a bad thing.

SUGAR vs EYESIGHT
"You can improve your eyesight especially your nearsightedness, by cutting down on sugar, and reducing prolonged eye strain," said optometrist Ben C. Lane, addressing the Optical Society of America. Tests on 100 patients to check diet, eye strain and hair samples indicated that the intake of sugar and other refined carbohydrates may force the body to use its supplies of E-complex vitamins, needed to regulate fluid pressure in the eye. "Folks with worsening nearsightedness consumed relatively more sugar and refined carbohydrates than those folks with unchanging eyesight," said Dr. Lane.

Factory uses 'clever system'

ROCKFORD, Ill. (AP) — Their coats and gold pins — and even the oath for newcomers — suggest membership in an exclusive club.

In fact, they are factory workers.

Eight hours a day, 1,000 men and women toil at the Woodward Governor Co. factory, where an extraordinary credo in corporate America has held sway for nearly half a century. Woodward believes all workers are created equal.

At Woodward, supervisors and supervised are not called bosses or workers, but members, one and all. And membership has virtually a lifetime guarantee.

"We never use the word employee . . . that word connotes labor and management, a conflicting interest," says Leo Powelson, assistant to Woodward's chairman, Calvin Covert: "We don't think that fully represents what we're trying to achieve in the organization."

That is not to say there aren't rules.

Men must wear ties. Women must wear skirts or dresses. Shopcoats are mandatory in production areas. No beards or long hair are allowed.

For members, there are no coffee breaks. Or smoking, snacking or drinking coffee at the desk. Members are paid for only two weeks of vacation. Anything more comes out of their benefit package.

In other ways, Woodward has its special attractions. The plant has its own barbers, a chaplain, dentist, in-house doctor, part-time legal adviser and an accountant who will do your taxes. Free vitamins are available in the cafeteria.

But Woodward, which manufactures governors, devices that control the speed of an engine by regulating the intake of fuel, offers more than its everyman philosophy and sometimes old-fashioned styles.

The company prides itself on profitability — net earnings in 1984 were $15.3 million — as well as its "corporate partnership plan," which some compare to the paternalistic Japanese way of running a business.

Woodward has been profitable every year since going public in 1940. Though the company is public, a good deal of the stock is held by current or retired members, members of the board and Woodward descendants.

Finances of the 114-year-old company, as well as the inventory, are posted on a bulletin board near the cafeteria. All members have a personal interest because their own earnings are influenced by the company's performance — and their own.

Powelson says wages are not "top level" but are competitive. But he says when times are good, few local companies can compete. Several years ago, he says, a member who earned $16,000 a year nearly doubled that with profit sharing and other benefits.

An average worker earns from $20,000 to $32,000 a year.

Even more unusual is how workers are paid. Each member, including management, is ranked yearly by his peers and supervisors. His salary depends on that ranking.

The governors Woodward manufactures can cost from a few hundred dollars to tens of thousands. They're found on thousands of engines and plants, including most Tennessee Valley Authority power plants, DC-10 aircraft, the B-1 bomber, Hoover Dam and a hydroelectric plant at the Khyber Pass.

Woodward's system — developed in steps — hums as smoothly as its governors, says Willard Zangwill, a University of Chicago business professor. "It's a very clever system."

Indeed, there have been no major revolts and Powelson says there was only one feeble attempt to unionize in 1942. The company boasts it has never lost a day's work to labor discord.

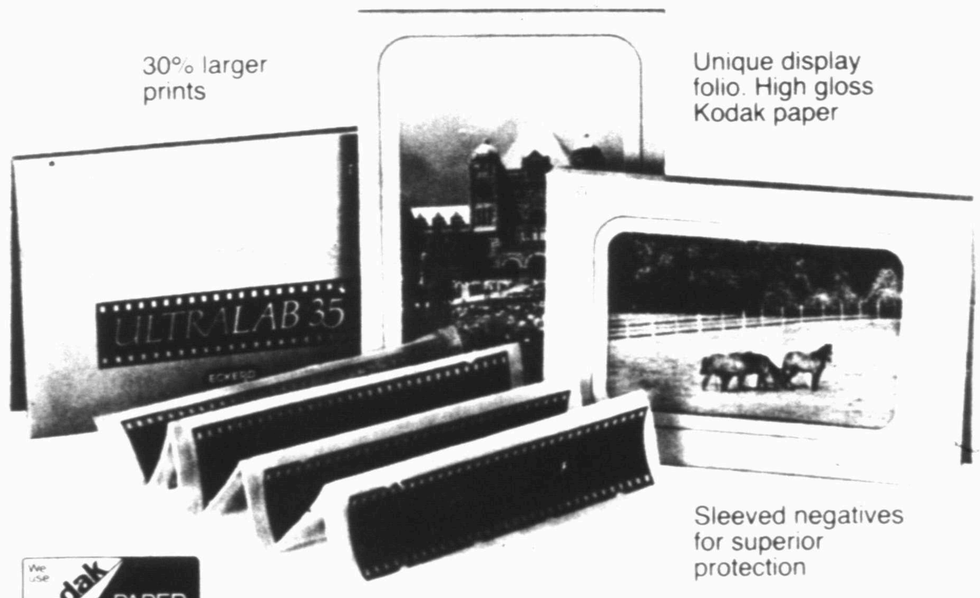

In addition, more than 10 percent of Woodward's Rockford members have been with the company more than 25 years. The company has about 2,500 members worldwide. The policies are the same at each plant.

ATTENTION FIRELOG USERS

As a precautionary measure Safeway Stores, Inc., has recalled all 5 lb. Safeway-Brand fire logs manufactured by Pine Mountain of Austin, Texas, due to the possibility of a build-up of water and wax deposits in the production line of logs. The water and wax deposits, when ignited, could cause excessively high flame resulting in a potential fire hazard. Consumers are asked not to burn these logs and to return unused logs to their nearest Safeway for a refund or exchange.

Prices effective Sunday, February 3 and Monday, February 4, 1985 in Snyder .....
