Midland County Sheriff's Deputy Mike Hall uproots marijuana plants discovered Monday in a farm greenhouse southeast of the city. More than 100 plants were found and confiscated by law officers, and a 52-year-old man was questioned.

Pot patch weeded from farm

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A tip led law officers Monday to a southeast Midland County farm where more than 100 marijuana plants were being grown in an operation complete with a greenhouse and homemade irrigation system.

The 52-year-old farmer who was allegedly growing the weed arrived after officers had found the plants. He was questioned at the scene but was not arrested, Art Van Dorn, commander of the Permian Basin Regional Narcotics Task Force, said early today.

"We notified him that court proceedings would follow," Van Dorn said.

Task force officers went to the farm, 12 miles southeast of Midland near the Glasscock County line, about 6 p.m. and confiscated the plants. Earlier in the day, one of the stands of plants had been spotted from the air by officers flying in a Department of Public Safety helicopter, and officers obtained a search warrant for the property, Van Dorn said at the scene.

After information about the general location of the pot patch came from Odessa Crime Stoppers, sheriff's department officers from Midland, Glasscock and Martin counties launched an effort to locate it, Van Dorn said. An officer from the Drug Enforcement Administration assisted at the scene, he added.

Fifty-four of the bright green plants were found growing in neat rows of twos in a newly constructed greenhouse next to the farmer's one-story residence. Several dozen feet away, nine plants were found, protected from sight by a ring of hay bales.

On the other side of a barbed wire fence near a stand of trees, the remaining 44 plants were found growing in two areas.

"From what I have heard, this is not anything you will run into very often" in West Texas, Van Dorn said of the operation. "You might think there would be more of it, but you can get up in a plane and spot it — it has a different green to it than other plants."

Officers also found an irrigation pipe which originated near the house and ran underground to the two plant patches farthest from the residence.

Leaders stall on farming subsidies

TORONTO (AP) — Leaders of the world's economic powers put the finishing touches on a final summit communique today that offered the poorest countries of the world new debt relief but failed to resolve the contentious fight over agricultural subsidies.

The draft communique, obtained from summit sources, said the leaders had agreed on a plan that will allow creditor countries to choose from a menu of options in granting debt relief to nations of sub-Saharan Africa.

But on the agricultural subsidies issue, the leaders essentially adopted vague language papering over West European and Japanese resistance to President Reagan's proposal to eliminate subsidies by the year 2000.

In a largely self-congrulatory draft statement at the end of the 14th summit, the leaders said the club of rich countries will launch a new seven-year cycle of summits starting in France on July 14-16 of next year.

"Summits have proven an effective forum to address the issues facing the world economy, promote new ideas and develop a common sense of purpose," the draft said.

Officials completed the 34-paragraph document at 5 a.m. and the leaders met through the morning putting the final touches on the communique.

"Since we last met," the leaders said, "our economies have kept up the momentum of growth.

Unemployment down slightly

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Assistant Business/Oil Editor

The Midland economy was able to absorb 500 new workers last month, as the city's unemployment rate slipped 0.1 percent lower to 6.0 percent, according to figures released today by the Texas Employment Commission.

Odessa's job performance during May more closely resembled the state trend, rising 0.5 percent to 7.6 percent. The statewide rate in May was 7.3 percent, up from 7.0 percent in April.

An influx of seasonal job hunters — including high school and college students, plus previously discouraged job seekers who begin looking harder for job in advance of summer hiring — swelled the labor force during the month.

In Midland, a total labor pool of 49,700 workers was available, of which 46,700 were employed. The 3,000 total unemployment figure equaled April's level, when 46,200 of 49,200 available workers held jobs.

Odessa registered greater labor force growth, from 53,400 in April to 54,100 in May, while employment growth failed to keep pace, gaining only 400 to stand at a total of 50,000.

TEC employment supervisor Charm Carl called the minor fluctuations in employment figures "hard to analyze."

Midland's improvement while many other metropolitan areas lost ground, allowed the city to regain a position among the five lowest jobless rates in the state. Midland trails Bryan/College Station — with a state-low 4.5 percent rate — Lubbock, Amarillo and Dallas.

Odessa dropped one spot to 17th on the list. McAllen continues with the highest rate in the state, 15.1 percent.

Compared to 1987 levels, both Midland and Odessa continue to showed marked improvement. Last month's 6.0 percent rate in Midland is down 38.8 percent from last year. Odessa's rate is down a like amount from its 12.5 percent level a year ago.

Total employment in Midland is 700 ahead of May 1987 while Odessa has shown 1,900 job growth over the same period, the TEC figures show.

In outlying counties in the Permian Basin, gainers outnumbered losers four to three during the month. The four counties with higher joblessness last month were led by Ward County, which saw it rate go up 0.8 percent to 7.9 percent.

Other areas with higher rates were: Pecos County, up 0.7 percent to 7.6 percent; Reeves County, up 0.5 percent to 11.5 percent; and Andrews County, up 0.2 percent to 5.0 percent.

Counties with lower jobless rates during the month were: Winkler County, which dropped 1.2 percent to 6.8 percent; Howard County, 0.5 percent lower at 6.4 percent; and Dawson County, down 0.2 percent to 7.5 percent.

Trade, energy policies needed, Bryant says

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

America needs a trade policy and an energy policy, U.S. Rep. John Bryant of Dallas, told the executive committee of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association Monday.

Bryant said it is time the United States ask allies such as Japan to help foot the military bill for keeping the Persian Gulf open. "Most of the oil from the Persian Gulf goes to Japan. Yet, Japan has not paid a penny to help keep the Gulf open. On the other hand, each American pays $1,000 a year to keep oil flowing from the Gulf to Japan and other allies," said the Democrat who represents the 5th District in Dallas.

He said it was not a matter of rearming Japan, but of asking for assistance. He said despite Japan's offer to pay $250 million of costs, not one penny had been paid to date. "We don't require anything of our allies anymore," he said.

The Dallas businessman and attorney said America was generous to a fault, "always paying more than its fair share."

"We allow more legal immigrants into America — not including illegal immigrants — than all the other nations put together. We give twice as much to charities as all the other nations put together," he explained.

He said a huge trade deficit and a devalued dollar have helped foreign countries obtain a $1 trillion stake in America. "Foreign ownership in America has tripled in the last four years. In Houston 39 percent of the real estate is owned by foreigners. In Los Angeles 43 percent."

Bryant blamed part of the foreign in-roads on the lack of an energy policy. "We have a no-policy energy policy that has made America energy dependent to the point that energy accounts for 25 percent of the trade deficit," he explained.

The third term congressman said the Reagan Administration was philosophically unsuited to enact the badly needed energy policy. "Once you have declared that government should not intervene in enterprise, the only thing you can do is nothing."

To drive home the need for an energy policy, he compared the energy policies of America and Japan. "With a comprehensive energy policy enlisting the cooperation of government and industry, Japan, with no energy resources, will be energy independent by the year 2,000.

"On the other hand, America, with an abundance of energy and no energy policy, is now 40 percent dependent on foreign oil and will be over 50 percent dependent by the end of the decade."

Bryant, who serves on the House Energy and Commerce Committee, said not having an energy policy leaves America vulnerable.

He said it doesn't much matter whether the administration is following an unannounced energy policy of buying cheap energy for as long as possible, as some suggest, or reacting with a non-policy. He said the bottom line was still the same.

"Personally, I had rather believe that the administration is following an unannounced policy of cheap energy instead of just doing nothing about our energy problems."

Average man stands only 5-foot-10

NEW YORK (AP) — The average American man is 5-foot-10, 172 pounds, with a lean build. He wants to be an inch taller, a pound lighter, more muscular, and thinks a great deal about the body shape of the average American woman.

The average American man thinks women want a man who's 6 feet, 173 pounds and muscular. In fact, they want men the way men want themselves: 5-11, 171, muscular. Men think women like them to have hairy chests, and they're right.

So says the Gallup Organization's "national body image survey," which was commissioned by, and described in, American Health magazine.

Now, as for the average American woman:

The average American woman wears a size 10 to 12 dress, stands 5-foot-3½ and weighs 134 pounds. She has a soft body tone, short, straight, brown hair, and imperfect, untanned skin.

The average American woman wants to wear a dress two-to-four sizes smaller, stand an inch taller and weigh 11 pounds less. She would like more muscles, wavy or curly brown hair and smooth, tanned skin.

The average American woman thinks men want a woman who wears a size 8 dress, stands 5-foot-4 and weighs 118 pounds. She thinks they want a woman with a thin, soft body, long, wavy, blond hair and tanned, smooth skin.

Target of Pentagon probe to cooperate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government in the last few days has persuaded one of the targets in the Pentagon bribery probe to cooperate with investigators, a source familiar with the matter said today.

The target is someone whose voice turned up frequently on court-authorized wiretaps installed during the investigation, said the source, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Sources familiar with the probe also said that one of the wiretaps is a conversation between former Navy Secretary John Lehman Jr. and his then-aide Melvyn Paisley.

The sources said the conversation, recorded late last year or early this year, can be interpreted as being a tip-off by Lehman that Paisley might be under investigation.

In addition, another target of the probe appears on the verge of cooperating with government investigators, said the source. It could not be determined whether the target who is cooperating is a Pentagon employee, a consultant or a defense contractor.

Attorney General Edwin Meese III refused to say Monday whether Lehman is among those under scrutiny. Paisley and another former Lehman aide, retired Adm. James A. "Ace" Lyons, have been implicated.

Highs in 90s continuing as summer swings in

Associated Press

The first full day of summer today promised the same hot and dry weather that has buckled highways, sent people without air conditioners to public shelters and added to the woes of drought-plagued farmers.

High temperatures today will be in the 90s across most of the nation, the National Weather Service said.

Nearly 40 cities in the central and eastern United States set temperature records Monday as the early-season heat continued to intensify, according to the weather service.

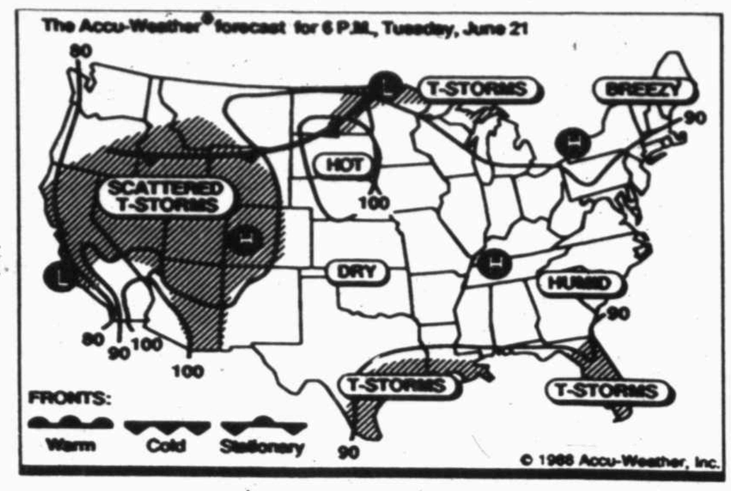

Temperatures soared above 100 degrees across much of the northern and central Plains, the upper Mississippi Valley and the desert Southwest. Highs in the 90s were common elsewhere across the nation except for coastal and mountain areas.

Authorities in several areas opened up shelters Monday to residents without air conditioners. In Chicago, where it reached 104, city officials invited the public to use the city's libraries and other air-conditoned municipal buildings during daytime hours to escape the heat. The Chicago temperature reading tied the record for the month of June.

Customers of Chicago's Commonwealth Edison Co. set a single-day record for electricity usage, said spokesman John Hogan, while Consumers Power Co. in Michigan set a usage record for the month.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Fair skies anticipated

From Staff and Wire Reports

Fair skies are in the forecast for tonight according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. The low will be in the mid-60s and winds will be southeasterly at 5-10 m.p.h.

Wednesday is expected to be mostly sunny. The high will reach into the mid-90s and winds will continue southeasterly at 10-15 m.p.h.

Monday's high of 95 was 14 degrees cooler than the record high of 109 degrees set for that date in 1951. The overnight low of 65 was 12 degrees warmer than the record low of 53 degrees set for this date in 1973.

STATE

Scattered showers and thunderstorms were expected across a vast area of Texas tonight, but most of the state was going to continue to have summerlike weather for the first full day of summer.

The scattered showers and thunderstorms were expected to begin in the late afternoon and continue tonight across the Panhandle, South Plains, the mountains of West Texas, across East Texas and on the coastal plains.

The rest of the state will have more of the same with forecasts calling for clear to partly cloudy skies and warm to hot temperatures through Wednesday.

Lows tonight will be in the mid 50s in the mountains of West Texas and in the 60s and 70s over the rest of the state.

Highs Wednesday will be mostly in the 90s, ranging from the 80s along the coast, to near or slightly above 100 in extreme South Texas and in the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas.

There were a few isolated showers just offshore in the Gulf of Mexico off middle and upper sections of the Texas coast, but the rest of state had clear skies.

Early morning temperatures were in the 60s and 70s. Extremes ranged from 64 at Marfa in the Davis Mountains of Southwest Texas to 79 at Corpus Christi.

Other early morning temperatures around the state included 68 at Amarillo, 74 at Wichita Falls, 73 at Fort Worth, 71 at Waco and Austin, 74 at San Antonio, 69 at Houston, 73 at Brownsville, 71 at San Angelo and Lubbock, and 69 at Midland and El Paso.

NATION

Summer got off to a scorching start today as a heat wave blistered dozens of cities in the central and eastern United States.

Summer officially began just before midnight Monday, following a sweltering day of record-setting temperatures in nearly 40 cities.

The mercury hit 110 degrees at Bullhead City and Phoenix, Ariz., Hill City, Kan., and Laughlin, Nev., setting a record high for the date.

A cold front brought some relief to parts of the north-central United States with readings in the 50s and 60s over much of the Great Lakes region and the upper Mississippi Valley.

A few showers and thunderstorms lingered along the cold front, while other storms were widely scattered through western portions of the nation and east of the Mississippi River. The sky was clear across the southern and central Plains and the lower and mid-Mississippi Valley.

A thunderstorm in Fernley, Nev., spawned a tornado that damaged several roofs, ripped down power lines and uprooted several trees Monday night.

Today's forecast was for mostly sunny skies and hot temperatures for much of the nation; showers and thunderstorms scattered from the Gulf Coast region across the southern Atlantic coast states and over the Rockies and the Great Basin; and a few severe thunderstorms possible from eastern North Dakota through Minnesota into Wisconsin.

High temperatures were forecast in the 90s across much of the nation; in the 60s and 70s along the Pacific coast; in the 80s over the Rockies, the Appalachians, the Great Lakes, the central Gulf Coast and the south Atlantic coast states; reaching 100 to 110 degrees in the deserts Southwest; readings over 100 degrees from the central Plains into northern Illinois.

Temperatures around the nation at 3 a.m. EDT ranged from 50 degrees at Quillayute, Wash., to 93 degrees at Phoenix, Ariz.

Texas taking on 'Dust Bowl' look

AUSTIN (AP) — Areas of Texas are beginning to look like the Dust Bowl of the 1930s, yet the dry summer season is just starting, says State Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower.

"In Texas, there actually are sections of our state that already are in Dust Bowl situations," Hightower told a news conference Monday.

National Weather Service data shows only parts of North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana and Minnesota are worse off than South Texas from a searing drought's effects on crops.

"We have the potential literally for Dust Bowl conditions. And the tragedy is, of course, under the Reagan administration, they have made efforts to do away with the soil and water conservation programs that were developed as a result of the Dust Bowl," Hightower said.

The worst years of the Dust Bowl, with extreme wind erosion in Texas, were 1933-36.

Hightower was asked to comment on the drought after a news conference with State Treasurer Ann Richards about a new agricultural loan program.

"We have an emergency. We need to be treating it as an emergency rather than just appointing task forces up in Washington, D.C. to decide whether it's dry or not," Hightower said. "We need to be responding immediately with tools that already are in the hands of the U.S. secretary of agriculture."

Hightower said his office had appealed to the secretary to declare certain Texas counties eligible for federal drought assistance.

"They agreed to do that but they are moving very slowly with the designation process," he said, adding that the local and state paperwork had been finished a long time ago.

Hightower said 40 counties have been approved for federal aid but probably 150 need assistance.

He said ranchers are being forced to liquidate herds, and farmers and ranchers are going out of business as a result of the drought — "it's devastating."

Asked what his office had done to try to alleviate drought conditions, Hightower responded, "Yelling at the top of my lungs."

"There's nothing we can do except to pressure for this" federal aid, he said. "We have no authority, we have no money...."

He said his office had no dollar figure on damages and, asked what sections had been hardest hit by the drought, he replied, "Not a section of the state.... I guess way up on the High Plains there's some water."

Even traditionally wet areas such as East Texas are having water problems, he said, mentioning that state agriculture officials would meet this week with county officials at Longview.

"It's not just a matter of this year's drought — it has been dry through the '80s," Hightower said. He added that dry weather building up over the years led to the Dust Bowl and drought of the 1950s.

HEAT

The heat caused discomfort for people with breathing difficulties and heart conditions and prompted authorities in the Chicago area and in Wisconsin to post ozone advisories, cautioning people with those conditions to remain in air-conditioned rooms.

The heat also proved dangerous to animals. Forecasters said the livestock weather safety index entered the emergency zone in several parts of Midwest and Plains. Farmers were advised to keep animals in shade and provide plenty of water.

"Animals react to the heat in the same way humans do," said Michigan Department of Agriculture specialist Edwin Renkie. "It does affect the animals and in some cases can kill them."

Heat distorted railroad tracks in Mobridge, S.D., last weekend, causing five cars of a Burlington Northern train loaded with corn to derail, said spokesman Al Wiegold in St. Paul, Minn.

During the weekend, the heat in the Sioux Falls, S.D., area also caused 25 roads to buckle, about the usual damage for the entire summer.

In Des Moines, searing heat buckled pavement Sunday, slowing traffic on U.S. 6 and Interstate 235. On Monday, Des Moines' high reached 101, breaking the 98-degree reading set for the date in 1933.

Also Monday, Concordia, Kan., reached 106, breaking the 103-degree record of 1952; Sheridan, Wyo., went to 102 degrees, topping the 100-degree mark of 1940; Madison, Wis., recorded 101 degrees, topping the record for the date of 97 also set during the 1933 Dust Bowl drought.

Temperature records also were broken in Michigan, Montana, Vermont, Ohio, Missouri, North and South Dakota, Nebraska, Minnesota and Illinois, the weather service said.

Agricultural experts said the heat is adding to the problems of the drought in the Midwest and the Plains by evaporating what little moisture remains in the soil.

AVERAGE

The average American man doesn't think much about dress sizes, but apparently speculates a great deal about the body shape of the average American woman. He wants one with a full rear-end, medium-width hips, a small-to-medium waist and medium-sized breasts. He wants an average body type (not thin), soft body tone (not muscular), long wavy hair and smooth, tanned skin.

The poll also found the American woman's zest for thinness is on the wane. Only 35 percent of women say they'd like a thin body; about half are satisfied to be of "average" weight.

But Gallup found women still are more weight conscious than men: while they would like to lose about 10 pounds each, men on balance are satisfied with their weight.

The Gallup Organization said Monday it used a representative national cross-section of 1,037 adults who were interviewed in person.

Among the survey's other conclusions:

■ Richer women are lighter and thinner than poorer ones, but rich men have the biggest waistlines and the broadest shoulders and chests.

■ Almost two-thirds of college educated women want a more muscular, "hard-bodied" look, compared with 27 percent of those without a college degree.

SUMMIT

Employment has continued to expand, inflation has been restrained, and progress has been made toward the correction of major external imbalances.

"These encouraging developments are cause for optimism but not for complacency," the draft said. "To sustain non-inflationary growth will require a commitment to enhanced cooperation. This is a key to credibility and confidence."

The proposal on Third World debt essentially was a compromise put forward by Canada that permits countries to exercise several options for granting debt relief. They include extending the time period for paying off loans, reducing interest rates or actually writing off a portion of the loans.

The United States was willing to extend payment periods but was opposed to the other two debt relief measures, prompting the need for the so-called "menu" approach.

On the farm subsidy question, the world leaders failed to make any movement toward Reagan's proposal for an end to all farm subsidies by the next century, adopting instead language simply instructing their trade negotiators to keep working on the problem.

President Reagan, questioned by reporters before the final session, acknowledged that "there are some differences of opinion" on the subsidy question but he said, "I am not going to give up on that."

The communique contained no surprises or new breakthroughs except for the Third World debt plan.

The leaders endorsed the process of closer economic cooperation which was begun at the Tokyo summit in 1986, saying the system, which has been championed by Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III, was a key reason that the world was able to avoid a global economic downturn following the shock from last October's stock market collapse.

"Developments in the wake of the financial strains last October demonstrate the effectiveness and resilience of the arrangements that have emerged," the statement said.

To further the coordination process, the statement said the countries were adopting use of a commodity price indicator to give them an early warning when inflationary pressures are rising. The indicator will monitor the prices of some 40 different commodities, including gold.

The communique gave no details of the commodity indicator, which was first proposed by Baker last September. However, European sources said that two separate indicators had actually been agreed on — one including oil prices and one without. Gold would have a weight in the index of 5 percent, said these sources, who spoke on condition their names were not used.

The economic communique was to be read later in the day by Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney at the closing session of the three-day summit among the United States, Japan, West Germany, France, Britain, Italy and Canada.

On Monday, the world leaders issued a political statement that endorsed Reagan's call for tougher action to combat terrorism and illegal drug trafficking.

They also welcomed the progress made in reducing nuclear weapons and said: "We now look for deep cuts in U.S. and Soviet strategic offensive weapons."

Fire damages building near summit hotel

TORONTO (AP) — Fire swept early today through a building a block from the hotel where President Reagan was staying for the economic summit.

The blaze in the vacant, six-story building prompted fears for the safety of Reagan and other world leaders in nearby accommodations awaiting the final-day sessions of the seven-nation conference, said fire chief Walter Shanahan.

But firefighters extinguished the blaze within an hour of the initial alarm and no leaders were reported evacuated.

Cinders showered the street in the city's financial district as the blaze initially threatened to spread to nearby buildings. But a wave of firefighters arrived and doused the flames, preventing further damage.

The fire marshal's office was called in to investigate because of suspicions the blaze was deliberately set, said Shanahan.

Sgt. Rick Morris, a spokesman for the summit security force, said, "It doesn't look like it's related (to the summit) at all."

Security around Reagan's hotel was tight, but Morris said there were no plans to evacuate the president from the Royal York Hotel, about 150 yards southwest of the fire. British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher remained inside the King Edward Hotel, about 150 yards northeast of the blaze.

One fireman was taken to the hospital with a broken wrist, and another was treated for a minor injury on the scene, said Shanahan.

DEFENSE

The sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, refused to describe the possible warning, which investigators are examining as a potential obstruction of justice and which occurred after both Lehman and Paisley had left the government.

Meanwhile, Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci is reassigning five Pentagon officials under scrutiny in the Pentagon bribery probe, other sources said.

Those sources, who spoke only on condition they not be identified, said Carlucci had signed an order directing the reassignments. The sources said the affected employees were being notified of the decision by their respective services today.

The five are:

■ James Gaines, the deputy assistant Navy secretary for acquisition management.

■ Dr. Victor Cohen, the deputy assistant Air Force secretary in charge of buying tactical command, control, communications and computer systems. His office was searched last week.

■ George Stone, a Navy official in the Space and Naval Warfare Systems Command.

■ Stuart Berlin, an executive with the Naval Air Systems Command.

■ Marine Corps official Jack Sherman, who works in the equipment and service acquisition section of the contracts division, installation and logistics department.

One source called the reassignments "a dicey thing.

"They haven't been charged or indicted and most of them are civil service."

Another source said, "They are being given other jobs; it's happening this morning."

The action followed a high-level meeting on Monday at which Pentagon officials reportedly studied what actions they could take in the case.

Carlucci may also consider whether to suspend contracts with the companies involved in the probe, including some of the biggest military suppliers in the country. The companies' offices were searched last week in pursuit of illicitly obtained inside contracting information.

Suspension of contracts could be disruptive to the military, ruinous for contractors who live or die on government business, and damaging to their employees.

One source said he doubted so dramatic a step would be taken at this point because the Defense Department itself lacks information about the dimensions of the affair.

"I don't think the FBI is sharing much with us yet," he said.

The New York Times reported today that three additional defense contractors — Hercules Inc., Gould Inc. and Electronic Data Systems Corp., a General Motors Corp. subsidiary — acknowledged that they had been subpoenaed in the probe.

The U.S. attorney for the eastern district of Virginia, Henry Hudson, who is coordinating the investigation, held out the possibility that more information about the scope of the affair may come this week when more of the 38 search warrants issued a week ago are unsealed and made public.

One search warrant that has already been made public said the investigation centers on leaks of confidential information — "provided by government employees receiving bribes or gratuities" — about contracting details which could enable one company to outbid another.

Hudson said 270 subpoenas have been issued so far and more search warrants may be served.

The affair came to light June 14 when federal investigators seized materials from defense contractors, military consultants and Defense Department officials.

DRUGS

Most of the plants were between a feet and 2½ feet tall, and had been growing about six weeks, Van Dorn said.

The plants, if properly pruned, can reach up to six feet tall and can yield from a pound to three pounds of marijuana, so the 107 harvested plants could have been worth "several hundred thousand dollars," Van Dorn said.

"And we have no idea really how long he had been growing it," he said. "He could've been doing this for years."

Officers took a written statement from the man, but Van Dorn would not comment on what he told investigators. A preliminary search of the house did not turn up anything else illegal, he said.

The man will likely be charged with possession of marijuana with intent to distribute, Van Dorn said.

Former CIA officer latest charged in Iran-Contra case

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — A former CIA official accused of participating in an illegal conspiracy to arm the Nicaraguan rebels is the latest person charged in independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh's broadening Iran-Contra investigation.

Joseph F. Fernandez, the CIA's former station chief in Costa Rica, was named Monday in a five-count indictment charging that he and unidentified co-conspirators "deceitfully and without legal authorization" organized a private arms supply network for the Contras when Congress banned such aid.

Fernandez, 51, who left the agency late last year after he was disciplined by CIA Director William Webster, also is charged with lying to his superiors to conceal the operation.

In addition, he is accused of obstructing an investigation of the Iran-Contra affair that was conducted by the presidential commission headed by former Sen. John Tower, R-Texas.

The indictment charges that Fernandez lied to the Tower Commission last year by stating that he did not know for a fact that fired National Security Council aide Oliver L. North was involved in aiding the Contras.

Fernandez's attorney, Thomas Wilson, declined to comment on the charges, saying he needed more time to study them.

Each of the five charges carries a maximum sentence of five years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

The indictment shows that Walsh is continuing his grand jury investigation even while preparing for the trials of North, former national security adviser John M. Poindexter and arms dealers Albert Hakim and Richard V. Secord.

The judge in that case, Gerhard A. Gesell, indicated last week he was ready to schedule a trial for North in U.S. District Court. North and his co-defendants are to be tried separately on the charges they conspired to divert U.S.-Iran arms-sale profits illegally to the Contras.

The case against Fernandez was assigned to Aubrey E. Robinson Jr., chief judge of the U.S. District Court here.

"The grand jury's investigation is ongoing," associate independent counsel Laurence Shtasel, told reporters after the indictment was returned against Fernandez.

Shtasel also suggested that the 18-month term of the special grand jury investigating the Iran-Contra affair be extended before its scheduled expiration next month.

The indictment charges that Fernandez helped North and Secord, a retired Air Force major general, coordinate air drops of weapons and supplies to Contra groups in southern Nicaragua in 1986.

Fernandez, who operated in the field under the cover name Tomas Castillo, also is accused of overseeing the construction of an airstrip in northern Costa Rica that the conspiracy built to help deliver arms to the rebels.

The indictment charges that Fernandez lied to an official of the CIA's Central American Task Force in September 1986 about the purpose of the airstrip and later sent incomplete or unresponsive cable messages to the agency in response to CIA queries about the covert operation.

The cables were designed to conceal the operation when the CIA questioned Fernandez after a C123K cargo plane carrying weapons for the Contras was shot down over Nicaragua on Oct. 5, 1986, the indictment says.

The indictment does not identify Fernandez's alleged co-conspirators and prosecutors declined to do so either. But a list of overt actions taken by the conspirators includes a June, 28, 1985 meeting in Miami between North, Secord and Contra leaders Adolfo Calero and Enrique Bermudez.

It notes that Fernandez exchanged messages with North and the White House aide's associate Rafael Quintero over secure communications devices supplied by North.

He also met with Robert W. Owen, an associate of North, to discuss construction of the airstrip, the indictment said.

At the behest of North and Secord, Fernandez met with William Haskell in late 1985 in the Costa Rican capital city of San Jose to discuss the operation, according to the indictment.

Haskell, a former Marine colleague of North's who went by the pseudonym Robert Olmsted, helped negotiate the purchase of the land for the airstrip, according to the report of the congressional investigation of the Iran-Contra affair.

Fernandez is accused of helping North and Secord coordinate air drops of arms to the Contras in April 1986 and participating in eight subsequent deliveries of weapons and supplies that year. At the time, Congress had banned direct U.S. military aid to the Contras.

He is accused of lying to the CIA's inspector general office on Jan. 11, 1987 by stating that the airstrip was built by the Costa Rican government to train fighters for a possible invasion by Nicaragua.

The indictment charged Fernandez also falsely told the Tower Commission that he did not know the supplies he helped deliver the Contras in September 1986 included weapons and ammunition.

Dukakis, Jackson to meet; Bush 'burned up' over issue

Associated Press

Jackson

Dukakis

Democrats Michael Dukakis and Jesse Jackson were holding their first face-to-face talk today since Dukakis wrapped up the party's presidential nomination two weeks ago. Republican George Bush, meanwhile, said it "burns me up" when politicians fail to credit federal drug agents for a job well done.

Meanwhile, a poll published today in The Washington Post suggested Dukakis holds a double-digit lead over Bush. Several other surveys in recent weeks have turned up similar results.

The vice president was highlighting drug issues today for the second day in a row, meeting with narcotics-interdiction officials and holding talks with drug advisers. On Monday, he attended a memorial service for three Drug Enforcement Administration agents killed in the line of duty.

"In this political season I hear comments from people of both parties giving no credit to all the job the men and women in this room and across the country are doing," Bush told agency employees, "It burns me up."

The vice president, the all-but-certain Republican nominee, has come under frequent fire from both Dukakis and Jackson over what they describe as a failed anti-drug effort by the administration.

Dukakis dished out more criticism on Monday, pointing out that a committee President Reagan set up to coordinate anti-drug programs was headed by Attorney General Edwin Meese III and adding sarcastically: "'Nuff said."

Meese, who has been under criminal investigation for more than a year, was on hand for the ceremony Bush attended, and praised the vice president for his stance on drug issues.

The vice president took the opportunity to repeat his call for the death penalty for drug kingpins. Dukakis opposes the death penalty under any circumstances.

The Massachusetts governor has been on the defensive on law-and-order isues in recent days. Bush has attacked him over a Massachusetts prison program, now revised, which allowed murderers serving life sentences to go out on furloughs. One murderer out on a Massachusetts furlough raped a Maryland woman, prompting the change.

"I know of no responsible corrections program in the country, with very few exceptions, that does not include furloughs," Dukakis said Monday, adding that there was a furlough program in California when Reagan was governor.

As governor, Reagan terminated a work furlough program after two prisoners out on furlough killed a person during a 1972 robbery, said Bob Gore, a spokesman for the California Department of Corrections.

Both Dukakis and Jackson were to be in California today, and aides said they would meet this afternoon. Dukakis was speaking to a labor convention in Los Angeles; Jackson had no campaign appearances planned.

The pair's last get-together was also in California — on June 7 the day of the state's primary that, along with contests in three other states, gave Dukakis a numerical lock on the nomination. They have spoken frequently by phone since then.

Neither campaign offered any specifics about what might be discussed today.

"They've been talking about convention issues," said Jackson spokesman Pam Smith. That, of course, could include the prickly matter of who will be on the ticket with Dukakis.

With less than a month remaining before the Democrats convene in Atlanta, the Massachusetts governor must soon select a running mate.

Jackson has been insisting he deserves special consideration by virtue of his second-place finish in the Democratic contest. But while he has indicated he wants to be offered the No. 2 spot on the ticket, he won't say whether he'd accept it.

Dukakis has said repeatedly that the choice is his alone to make. Several polls have suggested that the ticket would be hurt by Jackson's presence.

The Massachusetts governor said Monday he is unworried about a possible confrontation with the Jackson forces over his choice of a second, or over platform issues.

"I think we are going to be very much together," he told broadcast executives in Boston.

And he was at pains to dispel any notion that he feels pressured on the matter of a running mate, pointing out he has the "luxury of a few weeks" to make the decision.

Dukakis also has the luxury of being well below the federal spending cap for the preconvention phase of the campaign. Bush, by contrast, is bumping up against that limit and has been forced to curtail his campaign travel.

Financial disclosure forms released Monday by the Dukakis campaign indicated that as of May 31, Dukakis had spent $19.4 million of the $27 million allowed.

"Careful budgeting has paid off," said Dukakis spokesman Mark Gearan. The Massachusetts governor has trips planned to the Midwest and the West before the convention opens July 18.

The vice president, however, has found himself unable to travel at a time when polls are suggesting he needs to come on strong. The Washington Post survey out today gave Dukakis a 12-point lead, 51 percent to 39 percent. The telephone survey of 1,012 adults, of whom 782 were registered voters, had a margin of error of 3 points for the larger sample, and 4 points for the smaller group.

EPA proposes more sites to 'Superfund' list

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency today proposed to add 229 sites to the "Superfund" priority list for toxic waste cleanups and to drop 30.

The action brings the priority list to 1,177 sites, of which 378 are still proposals and 799 have been formally designated for the list.

Eventually, the agency has said, the list could grow to about 2,500 sites.

Fourteen of today's new sites are owned by other federal agencies, 12 of them either related to nuclear weapons manufacture or a military base. Last week, EPA announced agreement with the Defense Department on penalties to be imposed if the department fails to live up to cleanup agreements.

The 30 sites being proposed for deletion have not been cleaned up, but "do not satisfy any of the criteria" for listing, EPA said.

Newspaper poll puts Dukakis ahead of Bush

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic presidential contender Michael Dukakis leads Republican George Bush in double digits, a new poll by The Washington Post indicates.

However, Bush has slightly improved his standing since the latest such survey, the newspaper reported in Tuesday's editions.

The latest poll suggests Dukakis leads Bush 51 percent to 39 percent. In a similar survey on May 25, the Massachusetts governor was ahead of the vice president by just a bit more — 53 to 40 percent.

After the May poll, Dukakis went on to lock up the Democratic nomination in the final round of primaries on June 7. Bush has been the all-but-certain nominee since April, when he attained enough delegates for the GOP nod.

The Post poll suggests that Bush is significantly better known than Dukakis. Ten percent of the voters said they know a great deal about Dukakis, compared to 29 percent for Bush.

The survey suggested that only half the supporters of both candidates described themselves as "strong" supporters of the candidate of their choice, with the remainder saying their preference is "not strong."

The telephone survey of 1,012 adults was conducted from Wednesday to Sunday. Of those, 782 were registered voters.

ClayDesta Communications is a proud sponsor of the Buy West Texas program.

The Midland and Odessa Chambers of Commerce are constantly working to improve and strengthen the economy of the Permian Basin.

We know that once West Texans make up their minds to do something, more often than not they'll get it done. And we know that jobs are born, and the economy thrives, when we all pull together to make things happen.

Over $334 million in retail sales alone are made outside the Midland-Odessa area each year. If just 30 percent — $102 million — were spent locally instead, it would have a substantial positive impact on the businesses and lives of virtually everyone who lives in West Texas.

The bottom line to more business and a better lifestyle is simple — whenever we can, let's all "buy West Texas."

When "commerce" is a one-way street leaving town, it's hard to make a come-back.

ClayDesta presently has 14 offices statewide and is still growing.

Because of your support, we've become the largest long distance company headquartered in Texas!

West Texas based businesses like ClayDesta Communications benefit thousands of people in the Permian Basin because of statewide sales and service efforts. Support by West Texans has helped make us not only the largest long distance company headquartered in Texas, but a major force in the long distance business in the southwest.

Supreme Court ruling opens private all-male clubs to women

NEW YORK (AP) — Women's groups and city officials around the nation hailed a U.S. Supreme Court ruling that cracks open the door of private all-male clubs to women and minorities by upholding a ban on exclusive membership policies.

"Hallelujah! We've been waiting for this for a long time," Mayor Edward I. Koch said Monday. "Let's open up the doors to women. They don't bite."

"We feel it's one more nail in the coffin against discrimination of women in this country," said Kelly Conlin, president of the New York chapter of the National Organization for Women.

But members of some of the city's all-male clubs reacted angrily to the high court decision upholding a 1984 New York City law.

"If men want to get together and have a club, what's wrong with that?" said a man heading into the New York Athletic Club. Like all of the nearly two dozen members approached for comment Monday, he refused to give his name.

The ruling will strengthen the position of cities across the country, including Boston, San Francisco and Los Angeles, that are trying to force large private clubs to comply with ordinances resembling New York's Local Law 63.

Buffalo; Sacramento, Calif.; Chicago, Detroit and Washington, D.C., have or are considering similar laws.

The New York law bans discrimination in clubs that have more than 400 members, provide regular meal service and rent their facilities to non-members for private functions. The New York State Clubs Association, comprising 125 private clubs and associations, challenged it almost immediately.

Beate Bloch, a lawyer who helped represent the U.S. Conference of Mayors and other governmental organizations in backing the law, called Monday's ruling a victory that allows cities to enforce their laws against discrimination.

In Boston, the last bastions of single-sex socializing have a month to decide whether to fight or switch in light of the ruling, said Licensing Board Chairwoman Andrea Gargiulo.

The Somerset Club and Tavern Club for men and the Chilton Club for women must decide to comply with the city's policy, or a hearing will be held to determine whether any club should be exempted, she said.

Los Angeles plans to press ahead with a lawsuit accusing the 3,000-member Jonathan Club of violating an anti-discrimination ordinance by reserving a bar and grill for male members, city attorney James Hahn said. The club admitted its first female and black members last summer.

In San Francisco, city attorney Louise Renne said the ruling should strengthen the city's lawsuit against the all-male Olympic Club, from which then-Judge Anthony M. Kennedy resigned shortly before he was appointed to the Supreme Court last fall.

That lawsuit does not involve the city's anti-discrimination ordinance but instead relies on a state law barring discrimination by businesses.

New York has invoked the law against four male-only clubs: the 10,003-member New York Athletic Club, the 4,329-member University Club, the 1,900-member Century Association and the 1,600-member Union League Club.

The University Club has since voted to admit women and the Century Association has said it would pending the high court's ruling.

"The law merely prevents an association from using race, sex or other specified characteristics as shorthand measures in place of what the city considers to be more legitimate criteria for determining membership," Justice Byron R. White wrote for the court.

Though the court held that the law was constitutional it "was careful to point out that specific clubs, depending upon their facts and circumstances, may mount case-by-case challenges to the constitutionality of the law," said attorney Alan Mansfield, who represented the clubs association.

American Bar Association President Rober McCrate, whose organization had supported the city law, praised the court's decision.

"If women and minorities are to have equal access to the marketplace," McCrate said, "so-called private clubs that are common place for business discussions and other activities related to the marketplace must be subject to anti-discrimination laws."

Study: People spend years standing in lines

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Time flies, but those earthbound spend about five years of their lives standing in lines and six months sitting at stoplights, according to a time management expert who says every minute counts.

"Most people don't realize how much time they're wasting," said Michael Fortino, president of the consulting firm Priority Management Pittsburgh Inc. "The whole point is to spend time doing the things that you want to do rather than the things you dislike."

To determine how time is spent, Priority Management researchers, often with stopwatch in hand, studied hundreds of people around the nation for more than a year, Fortino said Monday.

The study estimated the average person spends six months at stoplights, eight months opening junk mail, one year searching for misplaced objects, two years trying to return telephone calls to people who never seem to be in, four years doing housework, five years in line and six years eating.

To determine which fast-food giants are the fastest, University of Pittsburgh business students commissioned by Priority Management timed clerks at Wendy's, McDonald's and Burger King restaurants in Pittsburgh at least 100 times each.

Wendy's won, taking an average 46 seconds to serve a hamburger, french fries and soft drink. It took 1½ minutes at McDonald's and three minutes at Burger King.

"If we realize we're wasting five years standing in line, we can shift our time, attend a more efficient grocery store or more effective bank," Fortino said.

Many people spend relatively little time on things they say they value, Fortino said.

Priority Management conducted a telephone survey of more than 1,000 married people and marriage guidance counselors across the nation. The study estimates the average married couple spends four minutes a day in meaningful conversation and the working couple spends 30 seconds a day talking with their children.

"Most people say their families are important, but they don't live that way," Fortino said. "Schedule a dinner with your family and commit to it as if it were a dinner appointment with a major corporate executive."

Researchers called 'irresponsible' in fighting AIDS, FDA chief says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Food and Drug Administration Commissioner Frank Young says academic researchers are choosing to stay at home for "the big bucks" in research grants instead of volunteering to help the government respond to the AIDS crisis.

In a speech at a conference of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, Young said Monday he believed "the academic community has markedly failed in the AIDS problem."

University researchers, he said, "are being irresponsible because they want to stand on the sidelines and grab the big bucks instead of taking the heat" of helping to make AIDS policy decisions in Washington.

Young, 56, said scientists from his generation felt an obligation to contribute time to government service and that he gave up a laboratory with $2 million in research grants to take on his government job.

Most academic researchers now, he said, refuse to give any time to the government, even as the nation confronts what Young called "an extremely serious disease" in acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Young said the FDA is attempting to hasten the approval process needed to put new AIDS drugs on the market, but he said there is a shortage of the experts needed to evaluate drug applications and testing results.

Right now, he said, there are 162 drugs being evaluated, but the agency has only 127 people available to sift through applications that may include 100,000 pages.

Without the help of experts from academic laboratories, said Young, "the process will be slowed."

The commissioner said he repeatedly has asked academic researchers to spend two years in government service, at their same academic salary, to help battle AIDS. But, he said, "they don't want to leave their laboratories. I see very few people willing to pay the price."

Officials at several major research institutions declined to comment on Young's statements, although Martin Hersch, a Harvard University researcher, said it still is common for scientists to spend several years early in their careers in government laboratories such as those at the National Institutes of Health and the Centers for Disease Control.

Young said of the 162 AIDS drugs now in some phase of evaluation and testing by his agency, three are vaccines. Tests of the vaccines, he said, are at least two years away and when those tests do occur "it's going to be horrible."

He said there is no laboratory animal that can be used to test AIDS drugs and the vaccines will have to be tested on human patients. This means dangerous side effects usually detected in animal tests will be found, instead, among the human test subjects.

Also, Young said, only half of the AIDS patients being tested will receive the vaccine and the rest will receive a placebo. Since AIDS is thought to be 100 percent fatal, he said, those receiving the placebo will not survive.

Pastor sentenced for attempted bombing of clinic

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A federal judge has sentenced an outspoken fundamentalist minister to 21 months in prison for the attempted bombing of a family planning clinic by anti-abortion protesters.

"I am genuinely sorry for what I've done," the Rev. Dorman Owens told the judge at Monday's hearing.

U.S. District Judge Earl B. Gilliam also sentenced Owens to five months probation, during which time he is forbidden from participating in anti-abortion protests or preaching on the subject.

Japanese view of U.S. relations improving

NEW YORK (AP) — A majority of Japanese surveyed describe relations between their country and the United States as friendly, a reversal of the opinions found last year, according to results of a poll released Monday.

However, the Japanese are still much more negative about relations between the two countries than they were three years ago, according to the CBS News-Tokyo Broadcasting System Poll.

The poll found that 54 percent of Japanese surveyed termed relations with the United States as "friendly," while 43 percent said they were "unfriendly." In 1987, 43 percent said they were "friendly" and 55 percent said they were "unfriendly."

In 1985, the breakdown was 73 percent saying "friendly" and 21 percent "unfriendly."

The current poll found Americans' opinions about bilateral relations to be more positive than the Japanese view: 73 percent of those surveyed answered "friendly" and 17 percent said "unfriendly."

The survey also found that one-third of the Japanese interviewed said their personal feelings about the United States were unfriendly — twice as high as the proportion of unfriendly opinions reported among American respondents.

Residents demand facts

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — About 40 angry residents of a Tampa neighborhood begged authorities Monday night to find elusive mutilation rapist Lawrence Singleton so they can stop worrying and allow their children to play outside again.

Singleton listed his brother's home in the quiet Forest Hills area as his address two weeks ago to comply with a state law on incoming felons, but he hasn't been seen there and his brother refuses to say where he really lives.

"I find it hard to believe that none of the police departments can tell where he is. This is totally incredible," said Lester Heitlinger, among the neighborhood residents who met at a neighborhood center.

Singleton was convicted of raping a 15-year-old hitchhiker, chopping her arms off with an ax and leaving her for dead in a ditch southeast of San Francisco in 1978.

Youth jailed for ferret

MANASSAS, Va. (AP) — A district judge sent a teen-ager back to jail for failing to reveal the whereabouts of her pet ferret, Fuji, which authorities fear might be rabid and may have bitten a 5-year-old boy.

Nineteen-year-old Jennifer Au, who hid her ferret to protect it from decapitation in a rabies test, claims she doesn't know its whereabouts because she arranged to have it picked up at an abandoned house by an anonymous person who volunteered safe haven.

But Prince William County Circuit Judge Percy Thornton Jr. on Monday told Ms. Au, "you will sit in the jail until whoever brings in the ferret."

"It is now the 20th of June and still no ferret. You will go to jail today," he declared.

Actress wages campaign

WASHINGTON (AP) — To moviegoers, she's the Lois Lane of Superman's affections. But to Jesse Jackson, she's a "superwoman" who has traveled the country this spring as an emissary of his presidential campaign.

Actress Margot Kidder devoted the better part of more than two months to almost non-stop campaigning for Jackson, a man she can't even vote for because she is a Canadian citizen.

Kidder lives in the United States, along the Hudson River outside New York, and feels strongly about national and global politics. Aside from her acting, Kidder works with the human rights group Amnesty International.

Jackson has other high-profile celebrity backers, among them Bill Cosby, disk jockey Casey Kasem and singer Holly Near. But Kidder has been the most visible on a regular basis — at times traveling with the campaign and other times making her way to small towns across the country where she was a surrogate speaker for Jackson.

Cafe for homeless opens

ATLANTA (AP) — About 25 homeless people gathered for a hot meal at the opening of 458 Cafe, where patrons are asked for their order instead of told to wait in a soup line.

The cafe, housed in an art deco-style building, serves as a full-service restaurant for the homeless. Volunteer waiters take orders from seated patrons who are offered a choice of meals.

The clientele Monday was not demanding — many simply shrugged when asked to choose from the menu of beef burgundy or chicken-and-rice casserole, salad, green beans or corn, and chocolate cheesecake or peaches.

25,000 evacuated in fire

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Cleanup crews hauled away 300-pound barrels of chlorine compounds and officials met to assess the damage of a four-day fire that destroyed a chemical factory and forced the evacuations of 25,000 people.

Residents who fled their homes as poisonous yellow-green fumes wafted over the state's third-largest city were allowed to return Monday after firefighters neutralized leftover chemicals in the Advanced Laboratories plant.

Defense consultant tied to others in Pentagon probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense consultant William Galvin, one of the 38 subjects of FBI search warrants in the Pentagon fraud investigation, has a wide variety of ties with other people and companies named in the probe.

FBI agents last week scoured Galvin's office in the Watergate complex where Melvyn Paisley, the former assistant secretary of the Navy identified as a key figure in the 2-year-old investigation, also has his office.

Federal agents also looked at the office of Galvin's stepson, Ken Brooke, of Vienna, Va.

No arrests have been made in the fraud case, which involves allegations that defense contractors used consultants to obtain confidential Defense Department information. Bribes were paid to people inside the Pentagon, officials claim.

Galvin, whose business is named Athena Associates, and Paisley both worked as consultants for United Technologies Corp., a large defense contracting firm based in Hartford, Conn.

Galvin is a consultant to Norden Systems while Paisley works for Pratt & Whitney. Both Norden and Pratt & Whitney are divisions of United Technologies.

The Hartford Courant has put the relationship even closer.

"When Paisley was with the Navy, Galvin was a conduit to him," the newspaper quoted a source as saying. "They had a relationship." Paisley, who resigned from the Navy in April 1987, was a close associate of John Lehman Jr., the former Navy secretary.

Efforts to contact the men were unsuccessful. Galvin was not in his office, said a man who answered the telephone. All calls were referred to his attorney, William Nussbaum, who did not return a call. Paisley did not answer his telephone. Brooke declined to talk about the investigation.

Larry Bingaman, a UTC spokesman, said the company had a policy of not divulging information about consultants. Norden manufactures military radar and communications equipment; Pratt & Whitney makes aircraft engines.

Galvin has three other clients that were the subjects of FBI search warrants last week. They are Loral Corp., Unisys Corp., and Cubic Corp., according to published reports.

Galvin had another relationship with a firm on the list of companies investigated by the FBI: he was director of Armtec Inc., of Palatka, Fla., according to records on file with the Florida secretary of state.

Armtec, a small 80-person firm that manufactures wiring harnesses, is located in the congressional district of Rep. Bill Chappell, D-Fla., chairman of the House appropriations subcommittee on defense.

Chappell is reportedly under scrutiny in the nationwide inquiry, but he has denied any wrongdoing and called the reports a "bunch of bunk."

The Florida Democrat, however, said he was instrumental in getting Armtec to move to the state's 4th Congressional District in 1986 because the company's president, William Roberts, is a close personal friend.

Roberts, who has a house in Alexandria, Va., as well as in Florida, said in a statement that the company "intends to cooperate fully with the government in its investigation," though it has done nothing wrong.

Friends of Galvin said he and his wife, Evelyn, recently moved from an exclusive area in McLean, Va., where former CIA Director Stansfield Turner was a neighbor, to the Watergate apartment complex.

"They were wonderful people," said Mrs. Robert Kimberly, a friend. The couple entertained frequently as part of their active social life, acquaintances said.

Galvin's daughter, Joan, works on Capitol Hill as a legislative aide to Rep. Andy Ireland, R-Fla. She coordinates Ireland's work on the House Armed Services Committee, according to his spokesman, Doug Hattaway.

Safety still concern in germ war lab

In 1972, the major powers signed an accord banning the development, production and stockpiling of biological weapons. It was a historic breakthrough, but it doesn't mean that the world is safe from the dangers of germ warfare.

Biological and chemical weaponry remain the "poor nation's atomic bombs." And as Iraq's hideous gas attacks against soldiers and civilians in the gulf war shows, the use of these weapons remains a real possibility. Because of the threat of clandestine germ-weapon production, the major powers, under the accords of the 1972 pact, maintain bioweapon research facilities. These laboratories are used to develop countermeasures, including antidotes, protective clothing and detectors.

While the need to maintain a defensive capability exists, the U.S. Army's plans for a new bioweapon lab at Dugway Proving Ground in Utah should be studied carefully. Residents are understandably concerned about deadly biological agents escaping the lab. Their fear is not unfounded, given both the Army's past record of mishandling gas weapon tests at Dugway and a recent congressional report of "serious deficiencies" in safety procedures at other Army chemical and biological test sites.

A full congressional review appears to be in line. Safety is a primary concern. Although the lab is a maximum containment facility, serious consideration should be given to situating it in an even more remote site. Also, congressional oversight should be strict, monitoring both the number and types of tests and biological agents used. These safeguards could reduce safety concerns and international fears that the site could be used for the mass production of new germ agents.

We recognize the military justification to even have such a lab. But that very reality is a chilling reminder of how much further we need to go to ban weapons of mass destruction.

Another View:

Finish START now

Conventional wisdom now holds that it's too difficult to resolve the remaining issues in the Strategic Arms Reduction Talks before the Reagan administration ends. But just because the issues are complicated doesn't mean a treaty is beyond reach. The ultimate prize is well worth the strain: an agreement that cuts long-range nuclear forces nearly in half.

Unless the president moves quickly, however, he risks more than delay. The treaty's prospects could come unstuck politically. What's needed is renewed will in the administration to make critical compromises, and a sense of urgency in Congress.

Conservatives, worried about the administration's failure to delineate the nuclear balance after a treaty, grow uneasy about further compromise. European leaders and American liberals meanwhile assume that the next president won't have much trouble finishing Start.

That's a dangerous assumption for two reasons. One is politics. The American right is already rumbling that even its hero, Ronald Reagan, is ready to give away the store. Just imagine the decibel level when the right is joined next year by conservatives from the present administration who fear arms control is going too far too fast. Neither Michael Dukakis nor George Bush would easily find the two-thirds needed for Senate treaty approval.

The second reason is that neither Mr. Bush nor Mr. Dukakis knows the subject well. Mr. Bush's answers at news conferences are often misinformed; he wasn't even aware of exactly what was being eliminated by the Euromissile treaty. Mr. Dukakis ducks details. Presidents need not know technical details and either man could, in office, master the background soon. But considering everything else a new president must do, it would take months to build the confidence necessary to make the required compromises. By then, the old anti-arms-control coalition could reassemble.

By contrast, the Reagan team is in a strong position to finish Start. Secretary of State Shultz; Paul Nitze, the senior arms control adviser; Max Kampelman, the senior negotiator, and others could proceed promptly on the four outstanding issues: space-based defenses and the Antiballistic Missile Treaty, sea-launched cruise missiles, mobile ballistic missiles and verification.

■ Space-Based Defenses. Mr. Reagan wants Soviet agreement to conduct Star Wars tests that Moscow believes would violate the ABM treaty. In return, he would agree not to deploy until the mid-1990s. But hardly anyone thinks that a reliable system could be deployed until much later, if ever. And congressional majorities have repeatedly backed Moscow's argument that the proposed Reagan tests would exceed ABM treaty limits.

There are two solutions. One is simply to reaffirm a restrictive reading of the ABM treaty and agree to review the matter in a few years as more is learned about defenses. The other is to work out guidelines for some limited testing. Either remedy is better than leaving the issue hanging, thus forfeiting Washington's bargaining leverage.

■ Sea-Launched Cruise Missiles. Longer-range ground-launched cruise missiles have been banned by the new Euromissile treaty, but the two sides have agreed to allow air-launched cruise missiles. U.S. experts still haven't decided whether the sea-launched variety would help American security. All agree, however, on the difficulty of verifying limits. The best approach is to ban further deployments for two or three years until answers are clearer.

■ Mobile Ballistic Missiles. These have been an American idea to enhance the survivability of land-based forces. But Moscow has moved ahead with deployments while Washington still debates the future of its own mobile missiles, Midgetman and MX. The rationale for mobile missiles remains correct, and Moscow finally has come to accept it. Such missiles must be permitted. As for verifying limits, this can be done by checking factories and requiring all mobiles to be situated in designated areas.

■ Verification. The two sides have already agreed to dramatic provisions for on-site inspections. Details can be worked out without becoming obsessive. The best way for Washington to gain additional confidence is to expand its spy satellite systems.

Washington and Moscow have been exploring these issues for a decade. The only thing left to explore is political will. If Mr. Reagan can, quickly, find the strength and courage, he will leave his most lasting legacy — a treaty that creates genuine hopes for reducing the risk of nuclear war.

Ambassador's spending to be probed

WASHINGTON — To hear Ambassador Sheldon Krys tell it, he easily cleared himself of those nagging accusations that he misspent funds while remodeling his embassy residence in the Caribbean island republic of Trinidad and Tobago.

Jack Anderson

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee recently met to debate Krys' confirmation as the new assistant secretary of state for administration. Krys told the subcommittee he was "exonerated" by official probes into the allegations that he had been too lavish with the taxpayers' money.

But our associate Stewart Harris obtained the report of one investigation into Krys' actions. It shows that the ambassador did not come out smelling as sweet as he might have led the senators to believe.

The State Department Inspector General has recommended that Krys reimburse the Department for first-class airline tickets for trips two of his daughters took to Trinidad in 1985. Ambassadors' families can fly first class if they are with the ambassador. But the family must fly coach if the ambassador is not along. Krys has said he didn't know there was anything wrong with first-class air travel for his daughters.

The special inquiry by the inspector general criticizes other spending that occurred on Krys' watch.

Krys, 54, is a former radio reporter. In his new job at the State Department, he will be one of its top budget officials. Charges of fiscal irresponsibility in Trinidad could have been particularly damaging to his confirmation, even though the auditors laid much of the blame at the feet of other embassy workers. Ironically, Krys will oversee the Foreign Buildings Office, the agency that approves embassy renovations. It was his own renovation budget in Trinidad in 1986 that drew the attention of the inspector general.

At a time when the State Department was cutting salaries to pay for the increased cost of protecting embassies against terrorists, Krys asked for about $150,000 worth of improvements to his embassy and official residence. He wanted a tennis court, central air conditioning, a chandelier and another bathroom for the master bedroom because, as he explained in a State Department cable, the master bathroom "can only accommodate one person at a time." The department drastically cut Krys' wish list.

The later audit by the inspector general criticized several transactions that occurred while Krys was ambassador to Trinidad.

■ Without permission from the Foreign Buildings Office, the embassy bought a $4,325 meat smoker and barbecue grill.

■ More than $3,000 was spent out of the salary-and-expense account on a video cassette recorder, water distillers, air conditioners and a lawn mower. State Department regulations only allow $1,500 to be spent from that account on furnishings.

■ The auditors could find no reason why the embassy spent $140.18 to transport by air $248.08 worth of goods — laundry soap, shower heads, a pruning saw, garden sprinklers, plastic hangers and seeds — ordered by Krys. Other forms of shipping are less expensive.

■ As renovations at the official residence proceeded, Krys wired the State Department on July 16, 1986 for an additional $27,000 to fill the embassy's depleted account. Auditors later found that the embassy's budget was already overspent when the cable was sent, and that the additional money was used to pay old debts. Krys signed the cable, but told the auditors he didn't know the embassy was in the red at the time.

David S. Wick, the embassy employee who tipped off the inspector general's auditors to many of Krys' excess expenses, was sent back to the United States by Krys. He is currently assigned to Iraq. Krys was cleared of allegations that he persecuted Wick for being a whistleblower.

When Krys appeared for his confirmation hearing before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, he had an easy time of it. Even Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., a harsh critic of State Department nominees, congratulated Krys on the way he handled the unpleasantness. "Sometimes in public life you get into sticky situations ... and you are innocent," Helms said.

The committee and the full senate are expected to swiftly approve Krys' nomination.

A ROCK AND A HARD PLACE — Michael Dukakis is caught in a squeeze between two traditional Democratic voting blocs — blacks and Jews. Dukakis doesn't seem to attract black voters, and that means he will need to forge a close relationship with Jesse Jackson to rally blacks behind a Dukakis ticket. But the closer Dukakis gets to Jackson, the more he antagonizes Jewish leaders. Dukakis' political mentors tell us that their candidate has engaged the considerable clout of Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., who has personally asked Jewish community leaders to get on the Dukakis bandwagon. Some have told Kennedy bluntly that they will support George Bush if Jackson is granted a major role in the Dukakis campaign. The campaign needs the strong support of both groups, but so far, Dukakis has failed to line up either.

Howard Baker has served nation brilliantly

The announcement that Howard Baker Jr. is about to leave the White House reminds the nation of the brilliance and affectiveness of his public service over many years. President Reagan's chief of staff deserves a medal of honor for the manner in which he has performed in that capacity for seven months, and as a distinguished United States senator from Tennessee for many years before that.

Russell Baker

Mr. Baker noted quite correctly the achievement of three important goals with which he was associated during his tenure with the Administration. One was the Iran-contra investigation, for which he praised the President for coming through with "flying colors." Others included the arms-control agreement and working out a reasonable budget program with Congress.

The gentleman from Tennessee displayed the same talents while working in the executive branch for which he had become well known as a member of the legislative branch. A willingness to compromise was one of them, as were an innate political shrewdness and an understanding of both the principle and practice of our democratic system.

Throughout his career he has maintained an engaging good humor, and a candor and trustworthiness that won him the respect of all political factions. New York's democratic Senator Patrick Moynihan said his former Republican colleague's decision to leave before the end of this administration's term "should be taken as a good sign." Then he noted another of Mr. Baker's admirable qualities by saying: "His sense of duty . . . is such that he would never leave were it not possible to continue without him."

Howard H. Baker Jr. has served his country nobly, and is sure to do so in the future in whatever activities he becomes engaged.

Cuban meddling may force U.S. hand

WASHINGTON — Cuban infiltration of money and arms for Panama strongman Manuel Antonio Noriega may force the Reagan administration to try getting rid of him with direct action, an approach radically different from the failed inducements that have proven so costly to U.S. prestige and credibility.

The White House has not held a single top-level meeting since May 22 on how to break Noriega's stranglehold over his country. Thus, officials say privately, the Reagan administration has ended face-saving efforts to remove him via negotiations.

That suggests President Reagan may be considering less public means to stop the indicted drug-dealer's nose-thumbing at Uncle Sam. High officials are silent about what those means might be. But they confide that time is running out on the U.S. recovery of credibility as a great power. National prestige and U.S. influence in Latin America demand getting Noriega and Cuban dirty tricks out of Panama.

Cuban fingerprints are multiplying. Using highly sensitive intelligence only recently received here, administration officials have been able to reconstruct events on the night of April 12 at the Marine perimeter protecting the U.S. tank farm at Howard Air Force Base. The midnight firing, only about five kilometers from the Panama Canal, was briefly reported at the time by the Pentagon as a sporadic "firefight" of unknown origin or intensity.

Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

In fact, that engagement pitted the small Marine detachment against an estimated "special force" of about 50 Cubans, known by their Soviet designation as "speznetz."

Defensive flares were inadvertently tripped by the Cubans, giving the Marines fairly accurate lines of fire. Eight Cubans were wounded, one of whom later died. The wounded were taken by their officers under extraordinary secrecy to the Panama City military hospital of the Panama Defense Forces (PDF). The PDF, embodying the nation's entire military and political strength, is commanded by and constitutes the power source of Gen. Noriega.

Under cover of darkness the following night, all eight Cubans (including the one who died) were spirited out of the hospital under direct supervision of the first secretary of the Cuban Embassy. U.S. officials told us they were placed aboard a Cuban vessel at the Pacific end of the Canal and shipped immediately back to Cuba.

That incident points up dangerous possibilities of Cuban intervention if the U.S. struggle to oust Noriega ever turns into full-scale military combat. It has been completely hushed up, both here and in Panama. Officials in position to know the facts refuse to speculate on whether it was an isolated event or perhaps one of several efforts by Cuban "speznetz" to penetrate or at least test U.S. defenses in the Canal Zone. That would provide vital information for any assault trying to overrun the Marines.

Also hushed up is a report that Noriega has approved stationing a secret Cuban transmitting station in the Panama jungles manned by the DGI, the Cuban intelligence service. U.S. officials also say it is incontrovertible that Cuban and Panamanian aircraft, mostly the U.S.-made Boeing 727, make frequent runs between Cuba and Panama; they often carry Soviet or Eastern bloc weapons such as the AK-47 automatic rifle to Noriega's PDF or for pre-positioning against the possibility of future conflict.

The current theory that the Reagan administration is unconcerned about these events stems from the absence of public posturing against Noriega since failure of "plea-bargaining" to get him out of Panama in return for cancellation of his drug indictment.

The last meeting of the National Security Planning Group (NSPG) on the Panama crisis was chaired by the president in the West Parlor of the White House on Sunday, May 22, before the Moscow summit. No new meeting has been scheduled.

That implies policymaking has gone underground, as Reagan himself obliquely suggested it might as that Sunday session in the White House living quarters ended. Once again Secretary of State George Shultz had been unable to persuade Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci that force was essential to exorcise the Noriega devil. The president's two top advisers had been able to agree only on the passive route of negotiations.

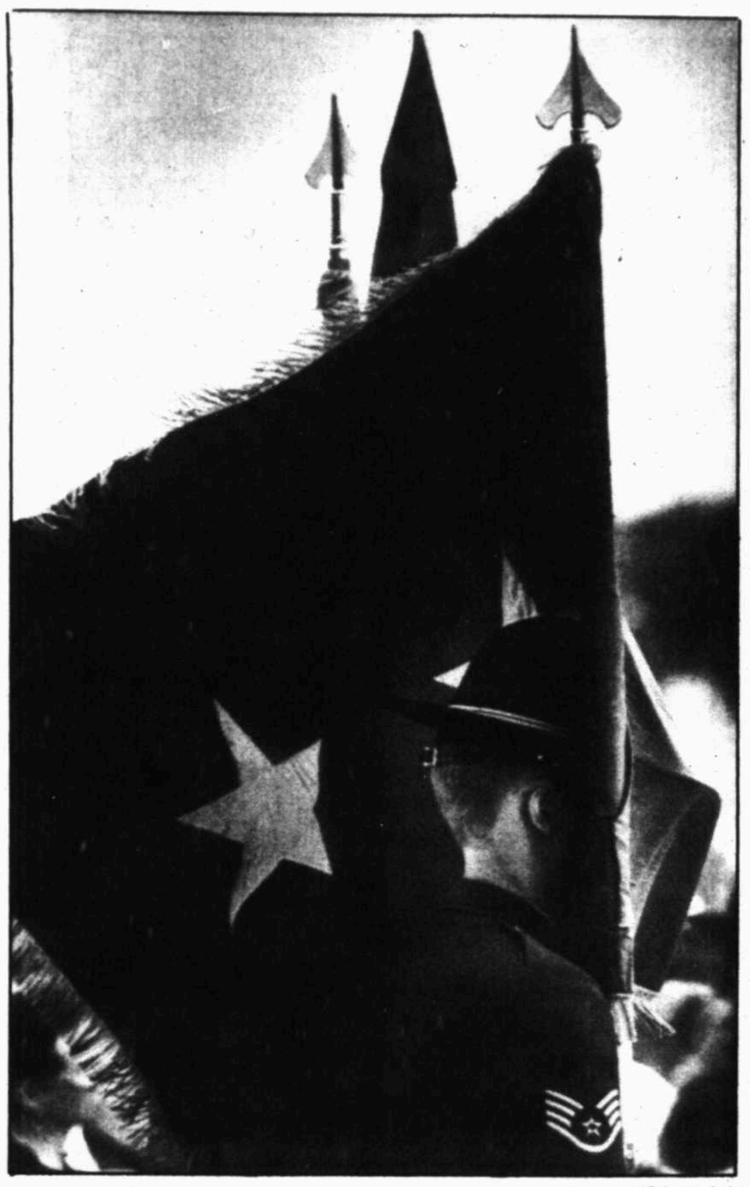

At the conclusion of the meeting, Reagan himself raised this question: What do we do if Noriega won't deal? What if he decides to sit there?

Referring to Shultz's long-standing plea for using force against Noriega, one of Reagan's advisers replied: Well, Mr. President, George Shultz had some ideas about what we could do. Yes, said Shultz with heavy sarcasm, but "I thought those were hare-brained schemes."

One month later, policy may now finally be moving the way Shultz always wanted, away from negotiations and toward some form of direct action. Nobody is yet spelling it out, but Cuban meddling is pushing a reluctant Washington that way.

Jury deliberating in secretary's trial

AMARILLO (AP) — Prosecutors called Jane Ada Callaway a woman with "champagne appetite on a beer salary" whose desire to get ahead led her to plot the death of her boss' wife.

Jurors were to resume deliberations today in the former secretary's capital murder case after recessing Monday evening without reaching a verdict.

During final arguments, prosecutor Lyn McClellan said the state presented evidence linking Ms. Callaway with the man who shot Judy Saragusa, 39, to death in her palatial Houston home Sept. 2. The trial was moved here on a change of venue from Houston.

Mrs. Saragusa's husband, Michael Saragusa, was Ms. Callaway's employer and had a brief affair with her.

Lead prosecutor Chuck Rosenthal charged Ms. Callaway plotted the death of Mrs. Saragusa and broke all but three of the Ten Commandments.

"As far as I know she didn't break the Sabbath, build a graven image or put another before God," he said.

But in maintaining her innocence, Ms. Callaway told "a number of lies and then broke another commandment," Rosenthal said. "She took the name of the Lord in vain."

When Ms. Callaway was asked by defense attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes whether she had anything to do with Mrs. Saragusa's murder, she testified, "As God is my witness, I did not."

The prosecution alleged that Ms. Callaway paid Leon Hawkins Jr. to kill Mrs. Saragusa because she was envious of the woman's wealth and her place as Saragusa's wife.

Saragusa testified he had a brief affair with his secretary, but broke it off two months before his wife's death.

Rosenthal said Ms. Callaway pursued Saragusa, the co-owner of a lucrative liquor wholesale business, because of his wealth.

"Jane Callaway set out to be a fancy dresser, a Rolex watch wearer, where Judy Saragusa was not that way," he said. "She tried to show that she would be a type of person more fitting to Michael Saragusa and his financial status."

However, the defense maintained that Saragusa seduced Ms. Callaway. Defense attorneys also attacked large parts of his testimony.

"There are those of us who believe Michael Saragusa did not tell a lie and there are also those of us who believe in the Easter Bunny," Cogdell said.

Haynes disputed Saragusa's assertion that he told his wife about his affair with his secretary although the three continued to socialize.

"No woman that I know — with the kind of backbone I believe the evidence showed Judy Saragusa had — would tolerate such an abuse of human dignity," Haynes said.

Rosenthal said that in plotting Mrs. Saragusa's death, Ms. Callaway was going after the best things in life in an energetic fashion.

"She went about this (the killing) the same way she went about being a secretary — she got things done," he said. "I can tell you that as sure as I stand here, she never thought she'd be caught."

Strake: Consultant has 'persecution complex'

SAN MARCOS (AP) — State Republican officials have nothing against a political consultant charged with organizing forged signatures on a presidential petition, the ex-chairman of the Texas GOP testified.

George Strake's testimony came Monday as defense lawyers tried to show that defendant Rocky Mountain and his compaign Southern Political Consulting Inc. are victims of selective prosecution. Prosecutors say Mountain organized a "forgery party" for signatures for a petition to put Delaware Gov. Pete du Pont on the state's presidential primary ballot.

Attorney Joe Bailey, representing Mountain, asked Strake if his client and the company were something "other than the fair-haired children of the Republican Party."

Strake said he had nothing against them.

"They've taken on a persecution complex," he said.

Mountain, a Houston resident, and his firm, Southern Political Consulting Inc., are on trial for forgery in connection with the du Pont petitions. Mountain and the company are each named in 64 misdemeanor forgery counts. Prosecutors say Mountain staged a "forgery party," complete with beer, in which teenagers forged signatures on petitions.

He faces a fine of up to $2,000 per count and up to a year in jail. The firm could be fined $10,000 per count.

Strake, who stepped down as party chairman earlier this month, denied that anyone in the Texas GOP or the George Bush presidential campaign tipped reporters about possible forgeries in the du Pont petitions. He also said he had nothing against Mountain or the company.

"I am fond of anybody who helps us build the Republican Party. This company has had a good record in several campaigns and I appreciate them," Strake testified.

Boulter addresses breakfast club

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Amarillo Congressman Beau Boulter brought his breakfast club to Midland this morning in hopes of buttering up supporters to help burn U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen's "milk toast" campaign for a fourth term.

Boulter's Breakfast Club was organized in contrast to Bentsen's Chairman's Council, which the senator formed in 1987 shortly after he was elected chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

Choices on the menu included Boulter's offerings of "leadership" and "experience" as opposed to what he called the three-term Democrat's "milk toast campaign" and his "history of waffling on the issues."

Boulter charged that Bentsen's Chairman's Council — a once-a-month breakfast club — wrongfully gave Washington lobbyists an opportunity to discuss matters that were "peculiarly within the jurisdiction" of the finance committee.

"These people were invited to pay $10,000 to his (Bentsen's) re-election committee for the privilege of discussing issues that fell under the jurisdiction of the Senate Finance Committee," he said.

"The real idea behind our breakfast club," said the congressman, "is to get all Texans together to talk about the issues that affect our country and Texas."

Boulter acknowledged that "there's nothing immoral" about Bentsen's brand of old-style politics. "It just doesn't work and it's bad for America, it's bad for our children," he said.

"I will guarantee that if Michael Dukakis is in the White House and Sen. Bentsen is chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, they'll keep their promises and they will raise taxes and it will ruin this economic recovery that the rest of the country is experiencing.

"I would love that recovery to continue at least long enough for Texas to get on board," he added.

Characterizing his opponent as "one of the most incessant voices for more revenue," Boulter asserted that America doesn't need to raise taxes to reduce deficit spending.

"Fundamentally, Sen. Bentsen thinks that the deficit is our fault because we're not paying enough in taxes. He doesn't realize that it's the government's fault because it's spending too much money or spending it the wrong way," he said. "What we need to do is reform the way this government spends money."

Boulter is counting on the vote of hundreds of thousands of Texans who have moved into the state since the last senatorial election to propel him into office in November.

"The days are gone when we can get Republicans in a telephone booth. Those days may have been simpler, but we weren't winning anything. Now we're winning because we have people and I want us to go forward to victory in November," he said.

Bentsen announces formation of re-election steering committee

From Staff Reports

U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen announced Monday the formation of a Midland County Re-election Steering Committee which includes key local business and political leaders.

Grant Billingsly, public relations director for Wagner and Brown, will chair the committee.

Other members will include Malcolm Abel, James M. Alsup, Mary and Barry Beck, William B. Blakemore II, Perry Bolger, Jack Brown, Tom Brown, Maurice Bullock, Roy Campbell, Oralia Corrales, James Cox, Murray Fasken, William P. Franklin, Richard Gaddy, Mike Owens, Roger Robles, Marvin Schiebout, Tom Sealy, Kelley Smoot, Pete Snelson, Margie Titus, Cyril Wagner Jr. and Clayton Williams Jr.

The Democratic senator from Houston is chairman of the Senate Finance Committee and is a candidate in the November general election.

Bentsen faces U.S. Rep. Beau Boulter in the race. Boulter is an Amarillo Republican.

Bentsen said of Billingsly: "I'm glad to have his support and the active backing of the other outstanding citizens of Midland County who have signed up to work for my re-election this year."

"The committee represents a broad cross-section of Midland County, people from every walk of life. I would hope membership will increase in the months ahead as the Bentsen organization in Midland County continues to gear up for the November election," the senator said.

Arrest warrant against Ector sheriff's officer dismissed

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — An arrest warrant naming an Ector County sheriff's lieutenant on a misdemeanor assault charge was dismissed Monday by Precinct 3 Peace Justice J.E. Pressly.

Pressly ordered the arrest of Lt. Jerry Davis Thursday after a complaint was signed by Lucy Llanez, 38, 703 E. Monahans St., alleging Davis assaulted her the night of June 3.

The order to arrest him came after a southside high speed automobile chase resulted in the arrest of Mrs. Llanez' 19-year-old son, Robert, on a charge of resisting arrest.

However, Pressly Friday ordered the sheriff's office to hold up service of the warrant on Davis when it was found the complaint signed by Mrs. Llanez listed the wrong charge.

According to Pressly, the Class C misdemeanor assault charge filed against Davis by Mrs. Llanez implied Davis had, in some fashion, physically assaulted the woman. Conviction on a Class C misdemeanor charge carries a maximum fine of $200.

Pressly said Mrs. Llanez's allegations would have warranted a Class C misdemeanor disorderly conduct charge being filed because she only contended Davis used profane or abusive language.

The peace justice said he talked to Mrs. Llanez Friday and informed her the warrant for Davis had been issued on the wrong charge, and she would need to go to the sheriff's office and sign a new complaint.

Though she initially said she would go to the sheriff's office about 12:30 p.m. Friday, she later called and said she wanted to talk to an attorney. It was then that Pressly ordered the warrant on Davis held until Monday.

Pressly said he later made arrangements for Mrs. Llanez to go into the sheriff's office Monday about 10 a.m. However, he said, she called Monday morning and said she couldn't make it until 3 p.m.

When she didn't appear as scheduled Monday afternoon, Pressly dismissed 12 law enforcement officers present the night of the alleged incident who were to testify at a hearing.

When Mrs. Llanez failed to appear the peace justice dismissed the charge against Davis.

Pressly said Monday afternoon if he had been aware Thursday of statements by law enforcement officers present the night of the alleged incident he never would have accepted the complaint against Davis.

The incident involving Mrs. Llanez's 19-year-old son stemmed from a June 3, 4 a.m. attack on an apartment in the Springwood Apartment complex, 1201 Harless. The apartment was struck by about 35 bullets believed to have been fired from a car occupied by at least two individuals.

About 11 p.m. that same day, sheriff's deputies spotted a vehicle matching the description of the one described earlier by witnesses. Deputies began chasing the 1987 Pontiac Trans Am and were joined by Odessa police and DPS units.

The chase ended when the driver turned onto a dead end street near the intersection of Williams Street and Broncho Avenue. In an apparent attempt to further elude officers, the driver turned the car and collided with the sheriff's unit driven by Davis. About the same time, an officer shot out one of the tires on the Trans Am.

Of the three individuals in the vehicle, Mrs. Llanez's son and the driver, Horacio Herrera, 20, were arrested. Llanez was arraigned on a charge of resisting arrest. He was released after posting a $1,000 bond. Herrera was charged with possession of cocaine and evading arrest. He was released after posting bonds totaling $8,000.

In connection with the shooting attack on the westside apartment, Albert Llanez, 20, Mrs. Llanez's older son, and Blas Andrade Pineda, 25, 2410 W. 9th St., surrendered on arrest warrants charging attempted capital murder.

Bond for the older Llanez son was set at $50,000 and at $100,000 for Pineda. However, neither was allowed to post bond because of holds placed on them for parole violations.

Mary Kay cosmetics changes life of Odessan

Mary McDowell of Odessa, once known as "the minister's wife," now has an identity all of her own.

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — As a preacher's wife she spent the better part of 32 years of marriage working in small churches "up in the hills of Tennessee" and had no identity of her own.

She was always the minister's wife.

Then her husband, the Rev. Dr. Leonard Evans, suffered a heart attack and died, leaving her with only a car that had been paid off a couple of weeks earlier. Her son, the Rev. Dr. Connally Evans, helped her sell that car and move to Odessa, where he was pastor of Belmont Baptist Church.

Again she had no identify of her own. She was the minister's mother.

When she married retired Texas A&M instructor C.H. McDowell in the mid-1960s after being a widow some 20 years she began to come into her own.

She became Mary McDowell "a professional joiner."

She belonged to a church, taught a large Sunday school class, organized an American Business Women's Association chapter with 125 members, was a garden club member, a member of two dinner clubs, a member of Eastern Star, was one of the organizers of the YWCA and president of the City Service Council for two years.

"I found myself running from one meeting, almost breaking the speed limit, to get to another. I was spending the greater part of my husband's income on dues, meals and gifts," said Mrs. McDowell.

Her life changed, almost by accident, when she was 63.

A friend called one day, knowing she knew a great many people, and asked if she knew anyone her daughter could talk to about selling Mary Kay cosmetics. Her friend described the Mary Kay Co. and its product so glowingly that Mrs. McDowell finally asked her "Why not me?"

Now, 21 years later, there is no question in her mind, or the minds of those who know her, who Mary McDowell is. From the first month she joined the Mary Kay Co. she has become a star producer, garnering nearly every major honor the company has to offer.

During her career, Mary McDowell has rung up sales that have earned her three pink Cadillacs, three pink Buick Regals (she takes delivery on the third in September this year), three $6,000 and one $4,000 mink coats, plus innumerable trophies that fill display cases in her modest Odessa home.

She kept one of the pink Cadillacs, her secretary drives one of the Buick Regals and she gave one of the Cadillacs to her minister son in Florida. The others have been donated to charitable causes.

'Warbirds' to be part of air show

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Erdmann

Classic antique, aerobatic, and military aircraft will be flying high and low and fast and slow in Midland Air Show '88, which is coordinated by the West Texas Aerobatic Club this Saturday at Midland International Airport.

The show will feature aerobatic biplanes, World War II "warbirds" allied with the Confederate Air Force, supersonic jet fighters and interceptors, the world's largest military transport, and helicopters.

Air Show '88 aircraft will be on static display from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday. Aerial demonstrations will begin at noon with sky diving, which will be followed by precision aerobatic flying by West Texas members of the International Aerobatic Club (IAC) and by tactical jet-fighter demonstrations by United States Air Force pilots.

"Aerobatic flying is often referred to as 'stunt' flying," said Paul Erdmann, president of the West Texas Aerobatic Club, "but it is not characterized by the reckless impulse flying and hazards associated with stunt flying, dare-devil flying and barnstorming."

Erdmann said that "aerobatic flying is done by precise lines and angles, which are pre-planned before flights.

"This allows a pilot to understand in advance the precisions of the maneuvers and lends to the safety of those maneuvers," Erdmann said. "The pilot has practised the maneuvers many times over and over."

Air-show spectators cannot "expect flying by impulse or barnstorm flying," Erdmann said, "but instead can view beautifully executed aerial maneuvers — aerial ballet."

Flights will be flown around airline schedules, he said.

Erdmann said that "the main thrust of the air show is helping the military in its recruiting activities."

U.S. Air Force Brig. Gen. James S. Allen, commander of the 833rd Air Division of the Tactical Air Command at Holloman Air Force Base in New Mexico, will swear in U.S. Air Force recruits, and U.S. Navy Cmdr. Martha Norman of Albuquerque, N.M., will swear in naval recruits in Air Show'88.

"It's a ceremony that people should see," Erdmann said.

The static display of aircraft and the swearing-in ceremony will be held on the apron of Rich-Air Co. South, a fixed-base operation at Midland International Airport.

Woman 'thrilled' to promote music, Stanton as head of national group

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

STANTON — Mary Prudie Brown sings the praises of American music coast to coast.

And that is quite a musical feat for a country girl whose year-round aim, aside from drumming up support for American music, is boosting her hometown — Stanton.

Mrs. Brown is president of The National Federation of Music Clubs, the world's largest music-filled organization which encourages music education and promotes the creative and performing arts in America.

"I'm an organizer," said Mrs. Brown. "I'm not really a concert artist. (But) I've sung all of my life. My family was a musical family."

Her father, C.E. Story, was a Martin County rancher, farmer, county judge, county-school superintendent, fiddler and violinist.

"His sisters were music teachers, and all the boys played, too, but my daddy could play by ear," Mrs. Brown said. "He could hear his sisters play a classical piece. And he could play it without practicing like they did. They had to work hard to do it."

Her father played rousing country-western and hoedown music on the fiddle and performed classical music on the same stringed instrument — the violin.

Mrs. Brown's mother, Fannie Pearl Story, had a "lovely voice."

"I consider the voice an instrument, a God-given instrument," said Mrs. Brown, a pianist and a soprano, who sings at weddings, funerals, music-club functions and community events.

HER RISE FROM a neophyte member of the music federation in the 1950s to its 1987-1991 president came not from any stardom in a metropolis but from "the work that you do" as an industrious and enthusiastic civic leader and national music aficionado and promoter from a West Texas farming-ranching community of about 2,300 folks 20 miles east of Midland.

"No one knows where Stanton is," Mrs. Brown said without a note of apology. She is proud of hee town. "I never dreamed I'd do that (serve as president)," she said. "I was just thrilled to be working at the national level."

The music federation's 500,000 members promote the world of music by fostering young musical talent, encouraging talented musicians in competition and concerts, and honoring accomplished musicians, composers, songwriters, ballet dancers, opera singers and other artists in the fine arts.

Federation members attend functions in such renowned places as the Metropolitan Opera House, Carnegie Hall, Essex House, The Plaza, United Nations, Lincoln Center, Kennedy Center, and aboard the Hotel Queen Mary.

"We promote good music in all areas" — classical, jazz, hymns, popular and folk. "There's good music in all areas," Mrs. Brown said. "We want to promote what's good. And whose definition are you going to use? We promote American composers and American music," she said, and cited American classical composers such as Charles Ives, Morton Gould, Ezra Laderman, Aaron Copland, Dr. Julia Smith and Virginia Kendrick.

"WITHOUT MUSIC, part of your life is a void — not fully developed," Mrs. Brown said. "Your education is one-sided. Music is good for the soul." And so, she said, the music federation is "continually championing American music" and is promoting "our marvelous musical heritage."

In her role as president of the music federation, Mrs. Brown's theme is "Impart The Gift of Music to All Ages," and her official song is "Climb Every Mountain" by Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein II.

Mrs. Brown will preside at the music organization's 1988 Fall Session in August in Oklahoma City, Okla. Theme of the session will be "A Musical Run in Sooneriand."

And Mrs. Brown, who is an Oklahoma native who grew up in Texas, has been heralded by Oklahoma composer Ruth Brush in the song "Ki-He-Kah Tonkah" — American Indian for "Our Great Leader."

Ham operator visits with friends over radio

By GLENDA PETTIT

PORT NECHES (AP) — Every morning, come rain or shine, Phil Richards, also known as K5 India November Echo, keys up his microphone and checks in with his buddies around the world — just like he's been doing for over half a century now.

Before he was even old enough to go to high school, Richards, 80, became fascinated with the world of ham radios — and that fascination has not diminished one bit since its inception 68 years ago.

He vividly remembers the first radio station he received on his set at home. It was WHB in Kansas City, Mo. When he heard the transmission, he got so excited he shouted a loud "hoot," he said, which promptly resulted in his daddy running in to see if he was hurt.

"Back then, we had headphones but no speakers," Richards said. In fact, his first radio was a coil wound on an oatmeal box, one tube, switch points, condensors and was mounted on a bread box.

When he built his first radio back in 1920, Richards was an elementary student at Franklin School. His daddy was a merchant who ran a clothing store in Port Arthur.

For 78 years, Richards lived in Port Arthur, after which he and his wife of 52 years, Blanche, moved to Port Neches.

"Lordy, Lordy, Miss Claudie," he grinned as he looked at his wife. They have one daughter, Phyllis Webb of Oklahoma, and one grandson and one grandaughter.

The radio is a way to keep in touch with old-time friends, Richards said. He belongs to a network which visits over the air on Sundays. To be a member of this network, you must have been a licensed ham radio operator for at least 25 years.

Time after time, Richards has either made new friends or found old friends via the radio. He often times his vacations to include radio conventions around the country.

Daily radio conversations last anywhere from 15 minutes to 2 hours, he said.

"It's a great hobby," he said.

Ham radio operators don't just chit-chat with each other, though. In times of emergencies, they swing into action by communicating with each other and emergency management personnel, Richards said.

U.S. Forest Service receives threatening letter

LUFKIN (AP) — Authorities are attributing a sudden increase in food stamp applications and an anonymous threatening letter to the U.S. Forest Service to the planned July 4 gathering of the Rainbow Family at three East Texas forest sites.

Department of Human Resources spokesman Pattie De Lamar said 25 new applications for food stamps have been received in Lufkin near the campsites in the past three weeks.

The Rainbow Family, a loosely organized group of back-to-nature advocates, have met in annual "gatherings of tribes" of thousands of people since the early 1970s and proposed to gather this year in Texas.

Ms. De Lamar said some applicants have identified themselves as early arriving members of the Rainbow Family, while others decline to say whether they are affiliated with the back-to-nature group. She said Rainbow Family members are eligible for food stamps if they can prove they are living in Angelina County.

The U.S. Forest Service has actively sought to prevent the group from camping in East Texas forest land for this year's celebration.

An anonymous letter sent to Jim Morphew and Billy Ball, law enforcement officials with the Forest Service's Lufkin office, said five men would die by the end of June if the agency continues to keep "an armed camp" near Rainbow campsites.

Copies of the letter, dated June 7 and signed "The Peacemaker," were mailed to The Lufkin Daily News and the Tyler Morning Telegraph.

The letter called the officers "brothers" and assured them of "The Peacemaker's" brotherly love, but said: "These people whatever their lifestyle should be free to camp in public forests without the fear of looking down the barrel of a gun. Are we in Russia?"

"You are going to bring about death in our beautiful forest, and I ask you to prevent this by pulling out your men," the letter added. "If you do not, mark my words, five men will die by the end of this month."

Special Agent Roger Dunfee told the Lufkin Daily News Monday that the FBI is investigating the letter, but has no suspects.

OPPORTUNITIES FOR VOLUNTEERS

We know that a volunteer is someone who possesses certain skills and talents and freely shares them with other people and organizations.

We know that volunteers have a deep sense of social responsibility and moral obligation.

We know that volunteers really do get paid, but payment comes in non-monetary forms.

We know that volunteers are vital to the American way of life.

If you are interested in making a difference and would like to volunteer a few hours a week, here are some ideas:

- Relief Switchboard Operator
- Individuals are needed to assist with laboratory specimens and cultures
- File Clerks
- Clerk Typists
- Computer Data Input Clerk
- Testing Assistant to administer educational tests and evaluations
- Literacy Tutors
- Clerical Assistants

These are all great opportunities to meet new friends, learn new skills or polish old ones, and/or just to feel good.

Special Need of the Week: Special Literacy Tutor that will teach handicapped adults to read twice weekly for one hour each time. Training provided.

For more information on how you and/or your family can volunteer, please call The Volunteer Center at 697-8781.

MCDOWELL

One of her mink coats was donated to Grand Canyon Bible College and another was given to the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, both to be sold and proceeds used to set up scholarship funds. Another mink cost was donated to the Door of Hope Mission, where she has been on the board of directors for more than 15 years.

She also served on the Ector County-City of Odessa Parks and Recreation Advisory Board for about 15 years and about nine years on the Ector County Child Welfare Board.

In 1983, former Odessa Mayor Bob Bryant recognized her with the Mayor's Distinguished Odessan Award as an outstanding leader, decision maker and civic statesman, who has made notable contributions to Odessa.

In 1985, the Heritage Foundation of Odessa presented her the Award for Excellence in Community Service.

In keeping with her charitable, caring nature, Mrs. McDowell has built a special building behind her home to store clothing which are donated to needy men, women and children. A pantry is lined with food that is also distributed to those who need it.

One might say that Mrs. McDowell's success with Mary Kay has afforded her the opportunity to share her good fortune with those less fortunate and causes she believes in. It also helps her keep a promise she made to God many years ago in Tennessee during a time of extreme need.

Not long after beginning to sell Mary Kay products tragedy struck. Mrs. McDowell's husband was found to have cancer that was too far advanced for the doctors to do anything about. He died about three months later.

"Those were trying days for me," acknowledged Mrs. McDowell.

Her minister son and family came to Odessa for the funeral. The annual Mary Kay Dallas seminar was due to be held a few days after the funeral and she had decided not to go. However, her son, knowing she wanted to go, unbeknownst to her, arranged the trip, with the promise he and the family would stay at the Marriott Hotel with her.

Despite his support in this instance, her son had been trying to convince her to retire, Mrs. DcDowell said. But, instead of following his advice she decided to become a Mary Kay director "just to prove to my family that I was not ready to be put on the shelf."

"At this point," she added, "I thought I would rather be a (Mary Kay) director than president of the United States."

Her second year with Mary Kay saw her recognized as top salesperson in her unit and she was presented to 2,100 people in Dallas as Queen of Sales. "This was good for my ego," she laughed.

She has been in the Queen's court for 11 of her 21 years with Mary Kay Co.

Today, Mrs. McDowell doesn't do much personal selling but she does fill reorders from old customers and travels nationwide speaking to Mary Kay consultants. She has spoken to groups in 32 states this year.

BROWN

The lyrics tell of a little babe, a papoose, whose life is to become a "leading force for many years." In the song, the Great White Spirit (Wah-Kon-Tah) tells the babe's mother to teach the child "to be true and to never have fear" and to "keep her eyes on goals so high like the sky." The songs sings of "trust and noble spirit," "strength and courage," "love for everyone," and "thankfulness and praise...and hope."

Mrs. Brown's husband, Glenn Brown, said that his wife has a knack for getting things done.

"Whatever she does, she does a good job of it. I'll guarantee you," said Brown, a Stanton druggist. For 32 years, Brown and his wife owned and operated the Stanton Drug Store. The Browns' three children, Guy, Suzanna and Baxter, are blessed with musical talents. One son farms in the Stanton area, another is a national cultural director in Washington D.C., and their daughter is a commercial graphic artist and a private art dealer in Dallas.

"Music says things to our hearts and souls that you can't put into words," said daughter Suzanna Brown. "I don't know how much closer you can get to God than through classical music. There's a real meditative and cleansing feeling about classical music," she said.

"We are all real proud of Momma," said the farming son, Baxter Brown, 29. "She works real hard. She's gone all of the time, and she's on the phone all night long. I think they take advantage of her kindness."

IF SO, MRS. BROWN seems to welcome it and obviously revels in her volunteer work in the national music federation and in West Texas and community civic-cultural affairs. She has been listed in national "Who's Who" biographical dictionaries and has received "Woman of the Year" and "Outstanding Civic Leader" awards. She helped establish the Martin County Historical Museum and works in the annual Old Settlers Reunion in Stanton.

Mrs. Brown, who was named Mary Prudence at birth, moved to Martin County with her parents in the 1920s, attended the rural Merrick community school and Stanton High School.

By 1944, she was teaching school in Stanton. Mrs. Brown, who holds two college degrees, majored in English and speech and minored in music, Bible and science. She has worked toward doctorate degree in English literature.

"Mary Prudie has been deeply involved in Martin County civic affairs for years," said Martin County Judge Bob Deavenport, "and has made major contributions to a number of activities."

Mary Prudie Brown boosts Stanton.

"I have always felt that if you live in a place, you really should be a booster," Mrs. Brown said. "It's a free country, and I do everything I can to boost my hometown and my country. If you don't, no one else will."

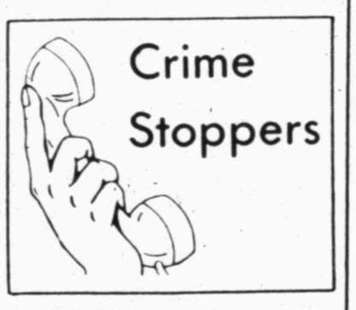

Crime Stoppers seeks information on theft

This week, Crime Stoppers is asking for information on the theft of oil field equipment.

Between 5 p.m. Saturday, May 7 and 9 a.m. Sunday, May 8, suspects entered an oil lease located about five miles east of Midland.

The suspects backed a pickup truck to a pump jack and removed the motor, a Continental C-96, one-cylinder, gasoline-powered engine. They then loaded it onto the truck and left the scene.

Crime Stoppers is offering up to a $1,000 cash reward, this week only, for information that leads to the arrest and indictment of the the persons responsible for the theft. Crime Stoppers in Midland can be reached at 694-TIPS, and in Odessa at 333-TIPS.

Persons with any information about other oil field related crimes can also call 1-800-OIL-COPS.

AIR

"I think it will prove to be an exciting annual air show that our community will sponsor each year in supporting the recruiting arms of the Navy and Air Force," Erdmann said.

Tickets to the Air Show are $5 each. However, advanced tickets may be purchased at $4 each at Sportsman's Den stores in Midland and Odessa, at Sears, Roebuck & Co. in Midland, and at the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

Children under 12 years of age will be admitted free.

A $1 parking fee will go to the summer-camp fund for the Boy Scouts of America, Erdmann said.

Proceeds from the show will be "plowed backed into our contest budget" in providing aerobatic training for pilots who hope to compete at the world-class level, Erdmann said.

In addition, he said, the West Texas Aerobatic Club will donate airshow funds to help "worthy causes" in the Permian Basin.

"The show on Saturday will be excellent family entertainment," Erdmann said.

Dress for successful sporting events

By LISA LEBOWITZ
Copley News Service

CNS Graphic

You're crazy about him. He's crazy about baseball, bowling, fly-fishing and sailing, both as a spectator and participant. He asks you to accompany him on various outings. You cringe. It's not that you're not interested. It's, well, you just don't know what to wear....

In a new situation, dressing appropriately can ease first-time awkwardness. Dressing inappropriately, particularly overdressing, can add to your discomfort.

Consider the case of Sue Silver, 26-year-old tennis novice. Her new beau, Rod, ace tennis player and darling of the country club set, invites her to play a game. In preparation, she buys a graphite racket, an Ellesse skirt and top, spanking-white tennis shoes and a diamond tennis bracelet (faux).

For the first minutes on the court, everything goes well. Rod flashes an appreciative smile. Sue looks great. Like a pro circuit professional. He serves at lightning speed.... What's this? She's missing every ball?

Rod is confused. If only she had told him she couldn't play, he'd have asked her to lunch instead.

Sue, in the meantime, is embarrassed. Everyone else at the club is playing like a professional. They're also sporting simple tennis whites and broken-in sneakers. The money she spent on her outfit would have been better spent on some last-minute tennis lessons.

THIS IS one instance in which overdressing is the earmark of a rank amateur who lacks the know-how to back up her dressing clout. Here's another.

Mark, a diehard Mets fan, invites his girlfriend, Amelia, to go to the season opener with him and his boss. In fact, they're sitting in exclusive box seats, a perk the corporation gives the boss every year.

Amelia has never been to a professional baseball game before. She wants to make a good impression. Not only to please Mark, but to help him get a promotion he is in line for. She's panicked about what to wear and decides to visit a kitschy tourist shop that sells Mets memorabilia. Emerging a full hour later wearing a hat, T-shirt, various buttons and carrying a banner — all emblazoned with the Mets logo — Amelia feels thoroughly prepared.

Mark and Amelia meet the boss at their seats. He is entranced. A fine day for an opener, a favorite employee and, by the looks of her apparel, a guest who's a true Mets aficionado.

He starts to talk trivia, to trade knowledge with Amelia about Ron Darling's pitching record the year before. Amelia looks blank. She feels awkward, and after a few minutes of rapid-fire questioning to which she answers, "Gee, I just don't know," Amelia admits she knows nothing about baseball. She spends the rest of the game worried she has blown Mark's chance for a promotion.

Although these are two extreme scenarios, dressing inappropriately does have downsides. If only for reasons of comfort. High-heel shoes, for example, present a big problem when you wear them to a stadium game. In the bleachers at a hockey game, they ensure several hours of cold feet. If you have to climb steep stairs at a football game, your ankles may be in peril.

SENSIBLE FOOTWEAR is the key when you're participating as well as spectating. Boat shoes or sneakers with sturdy soles are prerequisites for sailing. They're a necessity for softball, too. Many an ill-shod woman has left her huaraches at home plate when she has run for first base.

It's always appropriate to wear casual clothes to sporting events such as baseball, football or hockey. Make sure you're dressed warmly enough or cool enough, or you'll spend hours battling the elements. Jeans, a T-shirt, a denim skirt, casual pants and a sweater (depending on the season) are all good choices. And, of course, wear comfortable shoes.

When you're watching a baseball game outdoors, beware of bad sunburns. Even when the weather is warm, you might want to wear a lightweight long-sleeve shirt and easy cotton pants for cool coverage. It also makes smart beauty sense to don the baseball cap of the team of your choice. The look is cute and casual, with the benefit of great sun protection. Sunglasses are a smart accessory, too. When the sun shifts in the sky, you could find yourself with a headache from squinting.

Hats are great for fishing or sailing, as are pants and long-sleeve shirts. Sunblock is a must, too, because the rays reflect off the water, creating a terrible glare and upping the burn factor.

And whether you're fishing or sailing, be sure to wear clothes that can take a splash. Eleanor, a recent Boston transplant, was invited to go sailing on the Charles River with David. She wore pink silk pants and a shirt, expecting a small yacht. What she got was a small Sunfish — and silk clothes with water stains.

AND IF you truly can't stand the aroma of fish, wear clothes you don't mind burning. After a successful day of deep-sea fishing, clothes will be thoroughly saturated with the scent.

One sport in which dressing the part can boost first-time morale: bowling at the neighborhood lanes. A vintage bowling shirt is fun to wear and gives you the plucky air of Laverne and Shirley. And when you're dressed for fun, rather than loaded down with unnecessary (expensive) sporting gear, you're guaranteed the psychological stamina to endure embarrassing moments — like gutter balls in the guy next door's lane.

Kids need to know it's normal to feel confused

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Our Middle Level Education Week events are behind us, but I want to thank you for taking the time and effort to send our students a personal bit of advice on how to renew positive attitudes toward themselves and their school.

Our principal read it over the public address system, and as I walked through the building, I was very much impressed with how attentive the students were.

Would you please consider publishing that message in your widely syndicated column? It deserves a national audience. — BARBARA ZELLEY, CHESAPEAKE BAY MIDDLE SCHOOL, PASADENA, MD.

DEAR MS. ZELLEY: With pleasure:

The years between 10 and 15 are indeed filled with self-doubts, confusion, excitement and energy.

If you want to help students renew a positive attitude toward themselves and their school, let them know that ...

THEY ARE NORMAL!

ALL kids are filled with self-doubts, insecurities — and not a little envy because there will always be someone in the class who is brighter, more popular, taller, shorter, thinner, fatter, richer, smarter and more likely to succeed.

I say, Don't sweat it. Just do the best you can. Thank the good Lord that you have as many good qualities as you do have, and don't worry about what you don't have. Go for improvement, but always accentuate the positive.

Good luck! — ABBY

DEAR ABBY: How does a mother handle hurt feelings when a 41-year-old son doesn't remember Mother's Day or her last birthday?

There have been no misunderstandings or hard feelings, as we both live in different states and have for the past several years. I visit the grown children once a year, and he and his family seem happy to see me, but there's very little correspondence during the year except an occasional note, and that is always from his wife.

Maybe I failed him as a mother somewhere along the line? — FEELING HURT

DEAR HURT: You haven't failed him as a mother; he failed you as a son. While thoughtlessness is not a cardinal sin, it can be painful. Perhaps you can nudge him without needling him by sending him this letter.

Problems? Write to Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. All correspondence is confidential.

AT WIT'S END

You've seen one Rembrandt, you've seen them all

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

Forget Nancy Reagan's and Raisa Gorbachev's differences at the summit in Moscow.

My heart goes out to Lidiya Gromyko, the wife of Soviet President Andrei Gromyko. She embodies every woman in the world who lives near a major tourist attraction and in the summer must play hostess to every visitor who drops in. I found myself nodding sympathetically as I read where she accompanied the first lady on a tour of the Hermitage in Leningrad.

We don't exactly live in the shadows of the Grand Canyon, one of the World's Greatest Wonders. In fact, we're four hours away, but summer visitors will invariably ask, "Do you suppose we could pop up and see the Grand Canyon?"

I pack the traditional Grand Canyon picnic lunch, fill up the traditional Grand Canyon tour car with gas and ride the traditional 220 miles to the site, only to have a guest stand on the rim and observe, "Back in Ohio, we call that a big ditch!"

How many times do you think Lidiya, who is the first lady of the Soviet Union, has been to the Hermitage? I can imagine her reaction to going again sounded something like this:

Moscow: "Lidiya, how would you like to take a guest to the Hermitage tomorrow?"

Lidiya: "You want another revolution? I told you the last time, you put a moving sidewalk in the czar's palace and I'll take another visitor through."

Moscow: "You don't understand. This is the first lady of the United States."

Lidiya: "Why doesn't Raisa take her?"

Moscow: "She's been holding hands with her for two days now. It's your turn."

Lidiya: "If I see that diamond-encrusted blanket for royal horses one more time I'll ..."

Moscow: "Lidiya, darling. She won't be there for more than an hour. Surely ..."

Lidiya: "ONE HOUR! She's going to see 3 million art treasures in an hour? Why don't you just let her hang out of the car with an Instamatic as we go by? I've got a better suggestion. Why don't we tour a day nursery and have 35 children sing, 'The Farmer in the Jail'?"

Moscow: "That's 'dell.' "

Lidiya: "Whatever. OK, I'll go. But remember, I'm 77 years old. What does she look like?"

Moscow: "She's 64 and weighs about 90 pounds."

Lidiya: "Oh God!"

And while Lidiya was touring the Hermitage one more time, I was saying to my guests, "You are standing on the south rim of the Grand Canyon, which was discovered by Don Lopez de Cardenas in 1540. It has an area of 1,900 square miles, is about 190 miles long and contains 277 miles of the Colorado River ... please hold your questions until lunch."

Vacationing requires using extra skin care

Hearst News Service

Vacation skin care means more than just avoiding too much sun. Windburn can also cause skin pain and redness, and going from a warm climate to a cold one, or vice versa, can cause mystery rashes and itching.

Flying dries the skin, and extra activity may stimulate oil glands, resulting in blackheads and blemishes. Hotel soap can be irritating, and harsh "mystery" shampoos can leave a vacationer wondering if his hotel pillow has fleas.

"Most people do not realize how travel can affect their skin," said Dr. Michael Reed, assistant professor of clinical dermatology at New York University Medical Center and a member of the Purpose Skin Care Advisory Board. "Dehydration from the air in the plane, irritating hotel soaps, and burns from wind and sun are just some of the more common problems."

Here are some tips from Reed and other experts:

■ Bring along your own soap, shampoo and moisturizer, especially if you have sensitive skin. Products furnished by the hotel may contain unknown additives such as perfumes and detergents that may be irritating.

■ Before making trips that require adjustment to time zone changes, consult your doctor for dietary and behavior modification recommendations or medication to help you minimize jet lag. Fatigue, stress and uneven sleep patterns will affect your complexion.

■ Apply a moisturizer before flying. Cabin pressurization creates a dry atmosphere that drains the body of moisture, causing dehydration and dry skin. A moisturizer will help keep skin from becoming dry and rough.

■ Exotic fruits, vegetables, dairy products and certain meats can cause external as well as internal problems. Hives and other rashes may result, so take it easy on the gastronomic indulgences until you have a chance to see how your system reacts.

■ Consider altitude and climate as well as exposure time when regulating sunbathing. Sun exposure is greater on islands, boats and ships and at high altitudes. Even if your skin doesn't usually burn at home by the lake or pool, you can burn in the mountains or on a beach. Use a sunscreen product and limit sun exposure at first — even if it's a ski vacation.

■ Use an insect repellent to prevent bites. If it's too late for prevention, however, treat insect bites with an antiseptic solution to avoid infection. Mom's advice — "don't scratch" — is still good.

■ For an inexpensive on-the-road facial, mix equal parts of baking soda and water in the palm of your hand. Dab the mixture on your face, paying special attention to trouble spots and massage gently for a couple of minutes. Rinse with warm or cool water.

■ Keep brushes and combs clean by soaking them in alcohol or a baking soda and water solution. Four tablespoons of soda to a basin of water is recommended. Rinse brush and comb in clear water and let air-dry.

■ Use powders and moisturizers to counteract the effects of unaccustomed heat and cold. Heat rash and dry skin are common vacation ailments. Moisturize after sunning or swimming.

■ Water supplies whose mineral content differs from that to which your skin is accustomed can cause skin irritation as well as digestive disturbances. If your system is sensitive or your water supply questionable, drink bottled water.

■ To neutralize water for bathing and help provide a soothing soak for tired muscles, sore feet and traumatized skin, add a handful or two of baking soda to a lukewarm bath. Baking soda also helps neutralize acids caused by sunburn and restores the pH balance of the skin. A baking soda paste can be applied directly to irritated skin areas such as sunburn or insect bites. In case of severe sunburn or infection, consult a doctor.

Summer brings vivid new shades of makeup color

Associated Press

The bright lights of summer fashions are changing the face of makeup.

Not only do the new brilliant hues of cosmetics set off such hot fashion colors as stinging chartreuse but, according to an article in the current issue of Haper's Bazaar, they also brighten your mood.

To make the most of these exciting, briliant shades, key them to your skin tone.

If you are fair and the sun leaves you with a rosy or coral-tinted tan, choose a warmer palette that includes red, orange and yellow.

If your skin is more olive, cool it a bit with emphasis on blue, green and violet.

Tawny skin gains an alluring highlight from bright colors and paler complexions get a needed lift.

Versatility is built in since these makeups are matte with a transparent formulation that allows you to control their intensity.

The cosmetics companies are providing a wide range of tints. Yellow, for instance, can look fabulous on everyone. It is simply a matter of experimenting to find the right shades. Try it as a nail color to add a touch of sun to your fingertips or "washed" across the eyelid and out toward the temples.

Powerhouse pink with a strong blue undertone is another great choice, and not only for the lips. There are softened versions for the eyes, too, along with a slew of high-impact blues, greens and violets.

There are as many ways to wear these vidid makeups as there are bands to the spectrum but they need the correct canvas for best results.

Start with a sheer foundation or a tinted moisturizer. Use blush that's a less intense variation of your lip color. With so much focus on eyes and lips you don't want to look like a clown.

For eyes, keep color in the same ombre tone. Add depth by applying blue shadow on the lid. It should become more and more sheer as it appraches the brow. Extra definition comes from a touch of electric blue along the lashline or even penciled on brows which should be brushed up and filled in for special prominence.

With these shades you need to blend well. The effect should be soft, one tone flowing into the next.

Finish with mascara — the traditional darks for a chic, sophisticated image or one of the flashier ones for fun.

Maintain a balance between features — subtler eyes look best with a barely "stained" mouth — powder lips, apply lip color, blot and dust with transparent powder again. When you're going all out, complement eyes by brushing on a high-gloss color.

Red lipstick not suited for everyone

NEW YORK (AP) — Although red has just been declared as basic as black for fashion, that doesn't necessarily mean that red will become the No. l-selling color in lipsticks.

Most women feel comfortable in mauve lipstick shades because they're neutral, according to the Avon Beauty Center.

Itsy, bitsy bikinis for men debated

By MITCHEL BENSON
Copley News Service

I am not now, nor have I ever been, a slim fella.

I am a wide body. Always have been. Always will be. As a Young Man — which is what department stores like to call boys — my pants always came from the "husky" shelves in the Young Men's departments. This was a source of great embarrassment.

Every so often, I would sneak over to the aisles where the normal kids bought their clothing. I'd huff and puff and squeeze into a pair of normal Wrangler dungarees, only to hear some patronizing saleslady tell my mom, "Oh, no. I think this Young Man needs huskies."

Since those bad old days, I have graduated to Levi's for Men. "A skosh more room in the seat and thighs for the grown man" is the pitch. Grown man, indeed.

So it should come as no surprise to anyone that when the subject of swimwear has come up over the years, my personal fashion statement always has been boxers, boxers and more boxers. The wider and roomier, the better.

NONE OF these tight-fitting, form-fitting, circulation-blocking, lap-swimming, water polo-playing, weight-lifting, revealing slivers of nylon and Lycra that the folks at Speedo America call racing briefs. Briefs, indeed.

Who thought up these bikini briefs, anyway, and who the h— wears them?

Sure, competitive swimmers and divers must wear them. Apparently so must all those hardworking folks in the Hewlett-Packard commercials, the ones who spend lonely hour after lonely hour swimming laps, taking showers and wandering aimlessly on deserted beaches with yapping dogs until they can answer all those "What if ..." questions. At least these bodies seem to belong in Speedos.

What about real people, though, the people who don't spend four to six hours each day working their bodies in mirror-walled aerobics prisons or submerged in solutions of chlorine and H-2-O. What about the desk potatoes who walk the 100-yard dash to the snack machines?

They couldn't and shouldn't be wearing these things, should they?

"I have seen very, very large men wearing Speedos," says Tim Tate, a Speedo sales representative who works out of a showroom in Portland, Ore. "You do see very large men wearing Speedos."

Tate then tells me about the Chicago Bears' William "The Refrigerator" Perry, one of the nation's best-known football players — largely for his largeness. Apparently, "The Fridge" was an avid diver at Clemson University. And whenever he dived, the story goes, the man wore a Speedo.

THIS IS frightening, I tell myself. This is a double dose of fright. First, to visualize The Fridge's 6-foot-2, 300-plus-pound frame wrapped in nothing more than a delicate swatch of material. And second, to imagine this human projectile — so large it could cause a momentary eclipse of the sun — falling from the sky like some meteor from another galaxy.

How in God's name, I ask Tate, could a Speedo cover The Fridge where he needs to be covered?

"Well, heh, heh, heh," Tate explains, "The fabric that we make them out of is extremely pliable. It stretches a lot. You can stand on a woman's Speedo suit and pull it up over your head."

Which is exactly what I'd do, I say to myself, if I came upon a Speedo-wrapped Fridge attempting a jackknife, swan dive, tuck, gainer, belly-flop or whatever.

Other than Perry, I ask, who wears these Australian-born bikini briefs? This is what Tate says:

"Usually, there are two kinds of customers. One is the fitness customer, the customer who is working out, getting in shape and cross-training and using swimming as a foundation for total fitness, who rides a bike, runs and swims. The guy who is going to wear it for lap-swimming or suntanning.... It's very hard to lap-swim in anything but a Speedo.

"The other customer is the person who is a little more, oh, extroverted, who has a good build and wants to show it off. It's also worn as an undergarment, either under regular casual clothes or under 'water shorts' (boxer swimsuits). It's worn for support and comfort and takes the place of bikini underwear."

Sounds pretty uncomfortable to me. But it's obvious that a lot of folks disagree.

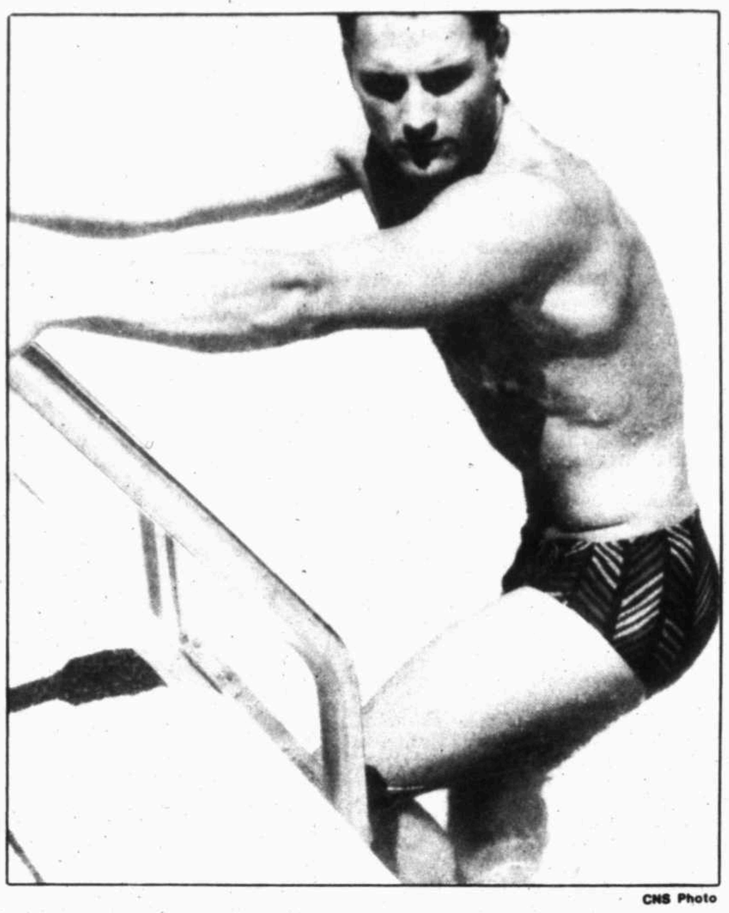

TATE REPORTS a 225 percent increase in sales of racing briefs this year — and last year's sales were ahead of the year before. And, he adds, "95 percent of the guys who wear a brief are wearing Speedos."

OK. So I'm convinced that people do wear racing briefs. But I still can't figure why.

"Women make men wear Speedos. That's what it comes down to," says my Speedo-wearing friend Alan. "It's not something you leap into."

Alan is a Speedo salesman's dream: a tall, blond Californian whose body type could be described as lean, sinewy, well-toned and a bunch of other adjectives that men feel uncomfortable using when writing about other men.

But even Alan didn't and wouldn't wear one of these shiny slivers of man-made material until his girlfriend cajoled him during a trip to Spain.

Jack, a sophisticated Washington reporter and Speedo devotee, owns two pair: maple-leaf green and basic black. When you get Jack started on his brief of choice, he sounds more like salesman Tate than Tate himself:

"From a utilitarian point of view, they just have a way of gliding through the water. There is no drag factor with Speedo racing briefs.... I swear by them. You can't swim without them. What can I say?"

What can I say? Jack is not built like you or me. Or at least not like me. One of his former female colleagues described him as, "Oh, a very Italian man."

MY NON-ITALIAN friend Barry recently revealed that he wore Speedos when he was a Young Man. But not today.

Why the switch in sartorial splendor? "I wore them when it didn't matter," he says.

When what didn't matter? I ask.

"When it didn't matter what you looked like down there."

Which brings us to one of the toughest questions for sales rep Tate — whose livelihood depends on Speedo sales — to answer.

Can you think of people who should not, under any circumstances, be seen in public wearing Speedos?

"Absolutely," he shoots back. "It's rather subjective, but I'd say somebody who is extremely overweight and probably someone who — no, I wouldn't want to say that — well, like someone like John Holmes."

Now comes the question that is the toughest for me to ask. I am about to bare my soul and a lot more.

"Tim," I say, "what about someone like me who's got a large rear end? So what if the material stretches. There isn't a heck of a lot of material to stretch." This is where Tate's product knowledge shines through.

"Actually, our briefs offer an extra inch and a half of coverage in the rear," he assures me. Compared to what? I ask. "Compared to our competitors' line," he replies.

I guess if The Refrigerator can wear a Speedo, I guess I could, too, huh?

"I know you could," Tate tells me.

I wonder if they come in huskies?

Breast Cancer Detection Unit Available to Area Women

An early read could save your life...

According to the American Cancer Society, one out of eleven women in the United states will develop breast cancer sometime in her lifetime. It is currently estimated that over 37,000 women die each year as the result of breast cancer.

Ninety percent of breast cancer are diagnosed by women or their physicians finding a lump in the breast. Women who are diagnosed with a lump large enough to feel have a 50 percent five year survival rate. A woman who is diagnosed as having breast cancer by mammography, before a lump can be felt, has a 97% five year survival rate. A mammogram can detect a cancer this small, even before it can be felt. The American Cancer Society has established guidelines for a mammography in asymptomatic women. (Women who have no symptoms of disease). Those guidelines have been adopted by the American Academy of Family Physicians, American College of Obstericians and Gynecologists, and the American College of Radiology. Those guidelines are:

I. 35-40 years of age - One baseline mammogram.
II.. 40-50 years of age - A mammogram every 1-2 years depending on breast type and risk factor.
III. 50 years of age and over. An annual physical examination and annual mammogram.
IV. Asymptomatic women under 50 years of age with significant high risk factors should be examined at appropriate intervals. These risk factors include previous breast cancer and family history of cancer.
V. A symptomatic woman should have a mammogram at any age when she experiences a mass, nipple discharge, skin changes or unexplained breast pain.

A screening mammogram is an x-ray of the breast using extremely low dosages of radiation (usually comparable to dental x-rays) and is designed to find very early cancers.

A female technologist who is highly trained in mammography will perform the examination.

The charge for the screening mammogram is $50.00. The unit accepts cash, check, Visa, Mastercard and American Express.

Dallas Red Cross says it couldn't handle crisis on scale of Saragosa

DALLAS (AP) — The 350 American Red Cross volunteers on call for disasters here would be overwhelmed by a calamity on the scale of a West Texas tornado that killed 30 people last year, local Red Cross officials say.

The Dallas chapter of the Red Cross estimates it needs 1,150 additional workers in case of catastrophe like the twister that tore through Saragosa in May 1987.

Officials launched a drive to boost its volunteer force to 1,400 as a safeguard, said Dan Wagner, director of the chapter's disaster services.

"We are not in a crisis," said Dan Wagner, director of the chapter's disaster services. "We just want to feel that we have enough volunteers to handle a crisis."

The chapter has about 350 volunteers on call during disasters to run emergency shelters, operate food trucks and kitchens, counsel victims, assess property damage and perform other duties.

Red Cross officials told the Dallas Times Herald on Sunday they determined the need for 1,400 by multiplying the number of people needed to operate a shelter during a less serious emergency by the number of shelters needed in a catastrophe.

"We were frightened," Gail Barron, spokeswoman for the Dallas chapter, said of the Saragosa twister. "If a tornado came into our area, we would be understaffed."

The closest the chapter has come to a crisis was last February when a fire in Oaklawn burned down 48 units of an apartment complex, leaving 140 people homeless.

Wagner said volunteers — mostly retired people, homemakers and business owners — helped victims find food and shelter, distributed blankets and later replace clothes, furniture and other things.

The Red Cross is especially interested in finding volunteers who have knowledge in the reconstruction of damaged buildings.

Janice Gardner, a bank teller who volunteers as a cook with the Red Cross, said she gets personal satisfaction out of helping others in sticky situations.

Gardner, who grew up in a poor neighborhood in New York City's Harlem, knows what it's like to not have all the necessities in life.

"I get a natural high knowing I can do something to help someone else," she said. "It takes away the pain of a bad childhood."

Former teacher to be tried for sexual abuse

PEARSALL (AP) — A Frio County grand jury has indicted a former Pearsall teacher on charges accusing him of molesting five female students.

The indictments were returned Monday after the former teacher refused to sign a plea bargain agreement.

Don F. Thompson, 48, of Floresville, a former instructor at Pearsall Intermediate School, was indicted on five charges of indecency with five girls, ages 9 and 10.

District Attorney Alger Kendall said he was disappointed after Thompson refused to sign the agreement that would have capped his sentence at 15 years in return for pleading guilty to two counts of indecency with children.

"I was hoping it would be put behind us," Kendall said, "not only for us, but for the kids and the town."

Thompson was being held in the Frio County Jail today in lieu of $100,000 bond on two charges on indecency with two girls.

Thompson, described by colleagues as brilliant, reportedly speaks Chinese, Portuguese and Spanish fluently. He is also legally blind and his lawyer, Allan Manka of San Antonio, said Thompson is losing his hearing.

The grand jury, which had convened earlier in the day, reconvened to hear testimony from police, state Department of Human Services officials and a Texas Ranger before returning the five indictments an hour later.

Pilot testifies Delta crew couldn't see storm developing

FORT WORTH (AP) — The crew of Delta Flight 191 probably did not see the huge thunderstorm that caused the plane to crash in August 1985, a Delta Air Lines pilot testified.

William Melvin, a Dallas-based pilot and a wind shear expert who was part of the initial investigation into the disaster, testified Monday that his interpretation of flight information and interviews with witnesses led him to believe that the pilots did see one rain-filled cloud, but that it blocked their view of a more severe cloud.

Melvin also testified that it was his opinion that the crew could not have seen the development of the storm because they were too close to the ground.

"The people to the south of this storm on the ground said later that it was building like an atomic bomb," Melvin added. "I just don't think 191 could see it."

Flight 191 crashed just after 6 p.m. on Aug. 2, 1985, killing 137 people and injuring 25 others while trying to land at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport during a severe storm.

Delta has filed a suit against the U.S. government, alleging that government meteorologists and air traffic controllers should have informed the crew of the worsening weather conditions.

Attorneys for the government have claimed that the crew had enough equipment and other means to have avoided the crash.

The airline wants the government to share financial liability for the more than two dozen lawsuits still pending against the Atlanta-based airline in connection with the crash.

Melvin described the conditions he thinks the pilots of Delta 191 saw immediately before the plane went down.

He said the plane went through a light rain, but he said that to the crew, it probably looked like a normal "summertime" cloud that appeared to be "fairly innocuous."

The pilots likely could not see the more severe cloud just behind that one because "they were too low" and had already turned the plane away from DFW — and the heavy storm cloud, he said.

Government lawyers are expected to begin their case next week in the case being heard by U.S. District Judge David O. Belew Jr. without a jury.

STATE IN BRIEF

Officer fires two shots at teen who was aiming pistol at him

DALLAS (AP) — Two shots were fired at a 15-year-old boy who pointed a pitol at an undercover Dallas officer, police said.

Police said Cpl. Keith Wenzel was disguised as a Dallas Power & Light Co. employee and was working on an undercover burglary detail when he saw the youth pick up an object thrown from a passing car.

Wenzel, 31, told investigators he fired his revolver after identifying himself as a police officer and ordering the youth to drop the gun.

The youth was being held today for investigation of attempted capital murder.

Authorities said Wenzel followed the youth several blocks and confronted the youth, who pulled a pistol and pointed it at the officer.

The officer then took cover behind his car and pulled his gun from his ankle holster, investigator Rick Kirk said.

He saw that the suspect was still pointing the gun at him, and fired one shot, missing him, Kirk said. When he saw that the youth still had the gun pointed at him, Wenzel fired at a second shot at him, missing again, Kirk said.

Agricultural loan program ready

AUSTIN (AP) — Officials announced Monday that the state is ready on a $5 million program to encourage lower-interest loans for agricultural projects such wine grapes, herbs and spices and oriental vegetable production.

State Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower said "this little dab of money" will go a long way towards providing affordable financing for producing alternative crops, establishing marketing channels and building food and fiber processing facilities.

Hightower and State Treasurer Ann Richards held a news conference to announce details of a program linking state deposits with certain agricultural loans.

Hightower said the $5 million could fund as many as 65 projects over the next five years and generate $36 million in new revenue, while creating 4,800 jobs.

The measure earmarks $5 million in state deposits as an incentive for Texas banks and savings and loan institutions to make lower-interest loans for agricultural diversification projects.

Texas firm helps anti-crime group

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — The Oregonians Against Crime organization spent $254,188 — including a contribution from a Texas firm — to get its anti-crime initiative on the November general election ballot, according to a campaign finance report.

The effort, spearheaded by U.S. Rep. Denny Smith, R-Ore., was financed by large contributions, including a $100,000 gift from Valhi, Inc. of Dallas, Texas, which owns the Medford Corp. lumber company.

A spending statement filed with the secretary of state's office showed the group spent $14,744 for printing and $32,637 for consulting and polling work.

Supporters of the initiative gathered 106,000 voter signatures to qualify the measure for the ballot — far more than the 63,578 needed.

If it passes, the measure will eliminate parole, probation and early release for criminals convicted twice of Class A felonies.

Gili Lope and Mama Elia are two ingredients that make Gili's Restaurante y Cantina such a taste-tempting treat. Come by Gili's in Oak Ridge Square today for the finest Mexican cuisine in the Permian Basin.

Mama Elia very important ingredient in recipe for Gili's Restaurante y Cantina

"Nobody cooks Mexican food like Mama Elia," says Gili Lopez, owner of Gili's Restaurante y Cantina. "Mama Elia is our head cook and it's her talents that help make Gili's what it is."

The finest Mexican cuisine in all of Midland begins with the freshest ingredients, painstakingly prepared in the tradition of Old Mexico.

"Mama Elia oversees every step in the preparation of the méals we serve," Gili explained. "The recipes we use are special ones that have been handed down over the years in both our families. But Mama Elia takes each one, adds her own special touch that makes it unique and even better tasting than it was before."

In fact, Gili was so impressed with his mother-in-law's cooking that he predicted their future at his first meal from Mama Elia.

"I had only been dating Maribel a short time when I was invited over for dinner," Gili remembered. "Mama Elia served Carne Guisada (steak tips in natural gravy) and it was the best I had ever tasted. I told her right then 'Someday I'll own a restaurant and I want you to cook for me,' and now it has come true."

If you haven't tried it yet, you'll want to sample Mama Elia's cooking personally. "Don't let the construction on Wadley keep you away," Gili says. "Come in and try our Rio Wadley special, an 8 oz. grilled catfish filet served 'fajita style' with jalapeno hushpuppies, tarter sauce and your hcoice of rice, beans or French fries."

To compliment your favorite Mexican food, Gili suggests that you sample his variety of imported beers from Mexico. Domestic beer is on tap also at the cantina which is well-stocked for your favorite high balls and call drinks as well.

And you'll want to get in on the weekly specials at Gili's. Mondays you can have 5¢ tap beer with any meal purchase, Tuesday's is Margaritas night at Gili's. 15 oz. margaritas are 98¢ all night long! Come in on Wednesdays and enjoy 15 oz. sangria or pina coladas for 98¢, and Thursday night is margarita night once again.

Gili's is open seven days a week with continuous service from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. Major credit cards are gladly accepted.

With Isiah injured, Lakers hold big edge

By SAM GOLDAPER
New York Times News Service

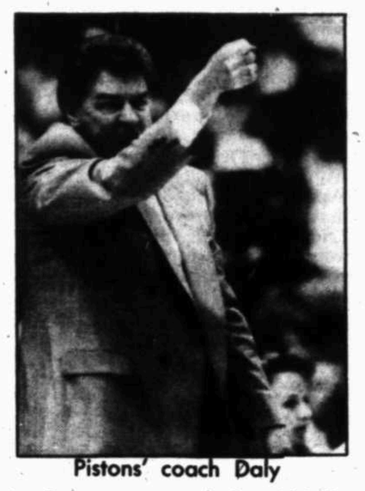

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Isiah Thomas, minus his usual smile, was sprawled out on the bed in his 10th-floor hotel room Sunday night, his severely sprained and badly swollen right ankle inserted into the sleeve of a Jobst machine, an icing unit designed to reduce swelling.

For some seven hours, Mike Abdenour, the Detroit Pistons' trainer, carefully removed and re-inserted Thomas's painful ankle into and out of the machine.

"Nobody said winning a championship would be easy," Thomas commented.

When someone asked if Thomas had thought it would be this difficult to win one, he said: "I don't know. I've never won one before."

The Piston captain injured his ankle Sunday in the third period of Detroit's 103-102 loss to the Los Angeles Lakers, a quarter in which he scored a championship-round record 25 points. Limping badly after the injury, Thomas still managed to score 11 more baskets, many while favoring the ankle. He finished the game with 43 points.

Pistons' coach Daly

NBA FINALS: GAME 7

AFTER THE game, Thomas also received two stitches to close a cut on his cheek, and one of his eyes was half-shut. Those injuries came from Michael Cooper, who was guarding Thomas.

The Pistons practiced Monday at the Forum to get ready for Tuesday night's seventh and deciding game of the National Basketball Association championship series. But several hours before, Thomas, on crutches and accompanied by Abdenour and Dr. Ben Paolucci, the Pistons' physican, had gone to the Los Angeles Raiders' training facility in El Segundo, about six miles away.

"The Raiders offered us the use of the facilities," Abdendour explained. "They have a Jobst machine that is bigger and more stable than the one I carry. After some icing, we'll try and get some motion exercises going.

"The ankle is ugly-looking. I don't know if he can play. It's not like the back he hurt in the fourth game. You can do something with back injuries, but ankles are different. If this was the regular season, I would be telling Chuck Daly that Isiah is down for a week to 10 days."

But this is not the regular season. This is what Thomas has waited eight long years for.

LATER, PAOLUCCI said that "the swelling is down, but the ankle is very sore."

"You know Isiah," he said. "He's going to play."

Laker boss Pat Riley

Win or lose, for Thomas, who has scored 128 points, handed out 55 assists and made 16 steals, this will be a long-remembered series. First, he suffered a sore back that kept him sidelined for three practices, then his wife, Lynn, gave birth to their first son, Joshua Isiah Thomas. Finally, there were those 12 inspiring minutes in the third period Sunday when he single-handedly kept the Pistons in the game.

How well Thomas can play Tuesday night, and how much, will have a major bearing on whether the Pistons win their first NBA title or the Lakers become the first team in 20 seasons to win successive championships.

To accomplish their feat, the Lakers will have to become the first team in league history to win the title by winning three straight seven-game series. It took the seventh game home-court advantage for the Lakers to beat the Utah Jazz in the Western Conference semifinal and the Dallas Mavericks in the conference final.

Strange pulls it off

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

BROOKLINE, Mass. — Emotion tugged at the face of Sarah Strange and tears dampened the eyes of her brother-in-law, Allan Strange.

As Curtis Strange walked up the 18th fairway at The Country Club, his wife and his twin brother embraced, sharing the joy they felt for him.

U.S. Open

Curtis Strange was still at work at the time, putting the final touches on his 18-hole playoff victory over Nick Faldo in the U.S. Open, his first major tournament title.

"There's nothing like coming up the last hole of a major championship with a two- or three-shot lead," Strange said later. "All I wanted to do was get two putts and get out of there."

Strange hit a 2-iron off the tee on the 438-yard finishing hole, taking the safest route home with a three-shot lead over Faldo. Another 2-iron, from 225 yards out, reached the center of the green, just past the bunker that he had found in each of the previous four rounds.

"Actually, I was just trying to put it in the bunker, and if it made it to the green, fine," Strange said. "When it hit the green, that's when I knew it was mine."

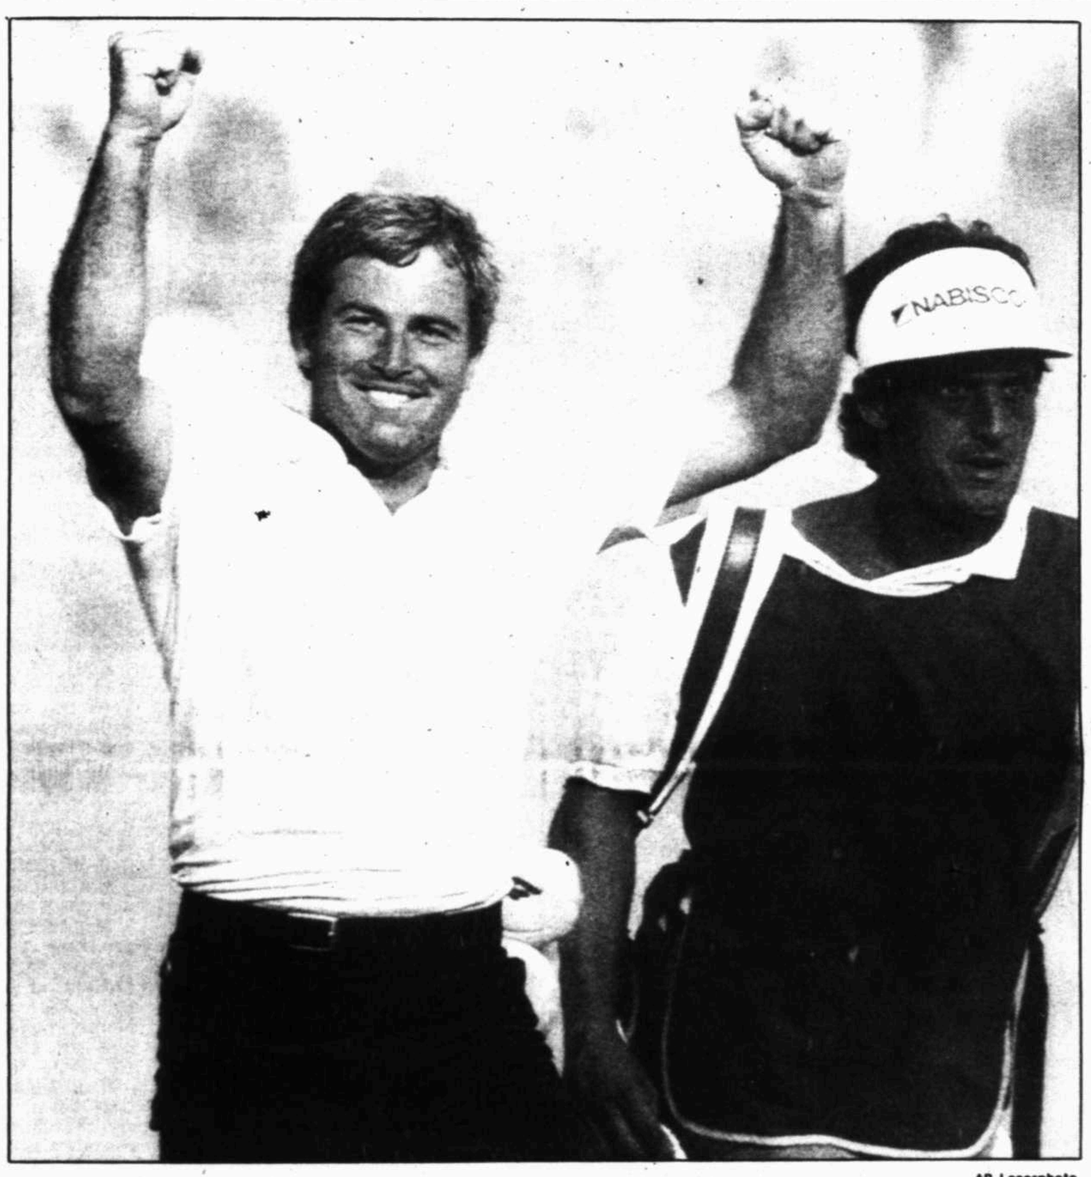

The emotion showed plainly on Strange's face as he made that victory march, the crowd strung out along the fairway and packed into two sets of bleachers by the green, where his wife and brother waited.

The gallery chanted his name and cheered, some waving American flags to display their patriotism in Strange's duel with the Briton, Faldo.

Standing next to Strange's wife and brother at the 18th green was Faldo's wife, Gill. She hugged Sarah Strange and congratulated her. She had felt the same joy when her husband won the British Open last year.

During his stroll up 18, Strange said he thought about his loved ones, and his father, who died when he was 14 years old. He later dedicated the victory to his father at a tear-filled, emotional news confernce.

Big Three overpowering

By ANDREW WARSHAW

WIMBLEDON, England — Ivan Lendl started it off with power serving. Pat Cash blitzed his opponent with lightning returns. Boris Becker then went out, combined the two and looked unstoppable.

The grass courts of Wimbledon, idle for a year, took a pounding from the big guns Monday as they posted straight-set victories on the first day of the 1988 championships.

Wimbledon

But it was Becker who stole the show.

"The way it started today, I think I should be very satisfied," the 20-year-old West German, going for his third men's singles title in four years, said after whipping Australia's John Frawley in fading light.

"When you play that kind of tennis and you're in your favorite place, it's a lot of fun," Becker said after resuming his love affair with the Center Court, scene of his greatest and most emotional triumphs.

"Every other tournament I play at, I'm nervous. But not here."

The latest chapter in another Centre Court romance was due to unfold today, when defending women's champion Martina Navratilova began her quest for a place in Wimbledon history.

The 31-year-old American, bidding for a record ninth women's singles title, took on Sabrina Goles of Yugoslavia in her first-round match.

Following her was Sweden's Mats Wilander, opening his bid for the third leg of the Grand Slam, against Eduardo Masso of Argentina.

Third up on Centre Court was 33-year-old Chris Evert, back after a heel injury to play in possibly her last Wimbledon. Her opponent was Alexia Dechaume of France.

Across on Court One, West Germany's Steffi Graf, the top women's seed, was scheduled to take on Hu Na of the United States in her opening match. Like Wilander, Graf is gunning for the Grand Slam after collecting the Australian and French Open titles.

Graf's match was to be followed by the return to Wimbledon of John McEnroe. The 27-year-old American lefthander, back for the first time since 1985, was up against Horst Skoff.

Angels rack up first flaw of second half

By BILL GRIMES

Poor Steve McGuire.

The Midland Angels' right-handed ace has enjoyed several strong outings this month. But the Angels didn't score for him on most of those occasions.

They gave him an early 5-3 lead in Monday's game with the El Paso Diablos, but the Diablos drove out McGuire with a five-run fifth inning in what became a 10-8 El Paso win.

McGuire has piled up All-Star statistics against most of the Texas League. His 3.39 earned run average against six of the Angels' seven league opponents would almost rank in the TL top 10.

But he's allowed 28 earned runs in 15 innings against El Paso this season and is only 2-9 against the league despite posting the best ERA among Angel starters.

McGuire had little trouble in the first four innings, save two homers by recent Diablo returnee Tim Casey in the second and fourth innings. Only three other Diablo batters reached base until the fifth, however.

"I wasn't too disappointed with my first four innings," McGuire said. "I just got a couple of pitches up."

Five of the last six Diablo batters against McGuire reached base safely. The Angel starter was finally driven out by George Canale's 14th home run of the season with one out in the fifth that gave the Diablos an 8-6 lead.

The Angels hung in with a run in the sixth on a single by C.L. Penigar and a double by red-hot Norm Carrasco. But El Paso struck back for two in the seventh off relievers Shane Young and Miguel Alicea, and not even an Angel run in the ninth was enough to avert Midland's first loss of the TL's second half.

"We've played three good games (since the first half ended Friday)," Midland manager Max Olivares said. "It just wasn't McGuire's night."

The Angels tried to help their ace as much as they could in the early innings. Penigar led off the first with a single under Canale's glove at first base, and scored on Erik Pappas' double to give the Halos a 1-0 lead.

Midland batters pounced on El Paso starter Ramon Serna for three runs in the third on RBI singles by Craig Gerber and Carrasco.

Mike Knapp just missed a homer off Serna in the fourth, but got a triple and scored on Gerber's sacrifice fly. Jim McCollom didn't miss, though, helping drive Serna from the game with a solo shot in the fifth.

But Keith Fleming, 1-1, threw 3⅔ innings of one-run relief to pick up his first Texas League win of the season. And, Diablo stopper Barry Bass struck out the side in the ninth to pick up his ninth save.

Tim Burcham, 2-3, starts on the mound for the Angels tonight. Jim Hunter, 5-5, will counter for El Paso.

Cubs set date for lights

By JAMES LITKE
AP Sports Writer

CHICAGO — Star light, star bright, soon you'll be able to see a Chicago Cub in his home den at night.

More than five decades after baseball debuted under the lights and 40 years after the Detroit Tigers became the last team to flip the switch, the Chicago Cubs announced that the first night game at Wrigley Field will be Aug. 8 against the Philadelphia Phillies.

"It is an historic event for our club and fans," said Don Grenesko, executive vice president for business operations. "This is an opportunity for more fans to experience Cubs baseball, and a positive step to ensure that our club remains competitive."

Monday's announcement ended weeks of suspense over when the lights atop the left- and right-field upper decks would be turned on.

At least one night practice session is scheduled before the Aug. 8 game. The contest will end a 72-year tradition of playing baseball only in the sunshine at the major leagues' second-oldest park.

But as soon as the Cubs said the lights would go on, opponents promised they'll keep fighting to keep them off.

"The first couple of night games will probably go smoothly because the police, the Cubs, everybody will be paying serious attention," said Charlotte Newfeld, president of Citizens United for Baseball in the Sunshine — CUBS — a neighborhood group that fought the team's owners, Tribune Co., over lights for seven years.

"But then, emergencies will be reported here and there and manpower will be moved around, the crowds will get rowdy ... and we'll be going to court to test the public nuisance laws," she added.

Newfeld said another tactic community organizers are considering is a petition drive to vote the precinct around Wrigley Field "dry," meaning no liquor could be sold there.

Allison remains critical after Sunday accident

Associated Press

ALLENTOWN, Pa. — Hundreds of messages have been pouring in to Lehigh Valley Hospital Center, where veteran driver Bobby Allison is being treated for injuries received in Sunday's NASCAR Miller 500 auto race.

Maria Pillsbury, media relations director for HealthEast, the hospital's parent company, said 300 inquiries about his condition had come in by late Monday afternoon.

Allison, 50, of Hueytown, Ala., remained in critical condition today in the hospital's central nervous system unit, according to a hospital statement.

Donnie Johnson, Allison's brother-in-law, said Allison recognized his brother, Donnie Allison, when the latter visited him Monday.

"HE SQUEEZED his finger," Johnson said. "He's wiggling his toes. He recognized the doctor friend of ours. ... The doctor said he's responding to treatment, so we've got a little brighter outlook than we had earlier yesterday."

A blown tire shortly after the start of the race Sunday at Pocono International Raceway in Long Pond sent Allison's Buick into a wall. It bounced into the path of another car that rammed Allison's vehicle on the driver's side. Allison had to be pried out of his car.

Allison was treated for a concussion, possible internal bleeding and other injuries.

DAVEY ALLISON said Monday his father had a broken lower left leg, which was in traction, and fractured ribs. He said doctors drained fluid from his father's chest and relieved pressure in his skull, but said there was no further build-up of fluids or internal bleeding.

"The doctors tell us that everything is normal as far as his vital signs and internally (are concerned). Everything is stabilized," said Davey Allison, 27, who finished fifth in the race.

"Dad has control of his body. He moves his fingers, and that seems to be normal," the younger Allison said at the hospital after the family met with doctors. "He took a pretty good shot and he's busted up pretty bad. It's going to be a long haul.

"The people here were impressed with how much progress he made last night."

Davey Allison decided to go ahead with plans to race this weekend in the Miller 400 at Brooklyn, Mich. He said he plans to stay with his mother, Judy, until Friday, when practice starts in Michigan.

"I'm sure he would want me to go on with what I'm doing," Allison said. "I will be able to concentrate, especially after the progress he's made today.

ANGELS

ANGEL NOTES: Monday's game was characteristic of the way Midland and El Paso batters have been performing, with both teams picking up 13 hits. El Paso was hitting .330 against Midland pitching going into Monday's game, while the Angels were belting .301 off Diablo pitching ... The Angels' good fortune is still not rubbing off on outfielder Tom Alfredson, however. Alfredson was hitless in four trips Monday to extend his slump to 0-for-24 in the last six games ... Jim McCollom and Craig Gerber, though, did snap slumps Monday. McCollom was two-for-five on the heels of a two-for-18 stretch, while Gerber tried to overcome a four-for-39 drouth with two hits in three trips ... Carrasco kept rolling along with his two-for-five night. The Venezuelan infielder has hit almost .500 in a five-game hitting streak that has yielded 11 RBI.

... Tim Casey hit 18 home runs for the Diablos last season, but aggravated an old ankle injury while jogging before spring training near his Oregon home. Subsequent surgery forced him to miss the first two months of the season.

But a 17-day rehabilitation assignment for the Beloit, Wis., team in the Class A Midwest League apparently helped Casey hit his stride Monday. He hit his second-inning homer over the left field wall on a full-count fastball. Then in the fourth, Casey bashed a 1-0 changeup over the right field wall.

"I'm just glad to be back," Casey said. "I was staying up there (in Beloit) in a hotel. It's just good to be back here and be with the guys."

LIGHTS

"If lights can be turned on," she said, "they can also be turned off."

Besides fighting the neighbors over lights, Tribune Co. has locked horns with alderman over ordinances and state legislators over statutes since acquiring the club and the North Side park in 1981.

But a City Council vote in February removed the final roadblock, even while limiting the team to eight regular-season games in 1988 and 18 games each season for the next 14 years.

The Aug. 8 game will be broadcast on WGN-TV, the superstation owned by Tribune Co., and the following night's contest against the New York Mets will be shown nationally on NBC.

Wrigley Field's seating capacity is 39,012, and about 13,000 tickets remain for the Aug. 8 game. Sales for that game were frozen by the club Friday as word circulated that it would be the date of the first night game. The remaining tickets will bo sold over the phone through Ticketmaster starting June 28.

More than 15,000 seats were still available for the Aug. 9 game, as well as for the Aug. 22-23 games against the Houston Astros; Sept. 6 against the Phillies; Sept. 7 against the Mets; and Sept. 20 against the Montreal Expos.

Five of the contests will start at 7:05 p.m. CDT; the final two begin at 6:35 p.m.

Even as the announcement was being made, about 100 people crowded outside the box office at Wrigley Field buying tickets.

"I'm really a White Sox fan," salesman Tim Lynch admitted sheepishly.

But Lynch said he came all the way from his home on the South Side — where Comiskey Park and the Chicago White Sox of the American League draw their following — because "this really is a bit of history.

"Besides," he added, "seeing the Cubs will be something of a novelty for me. I work days and so right now, I've got to take vacation to come here."

Tigers defeat, dethrone Yankees

The Associated Press

The Yankees lose people and lose games. The Tigers lose people, and win divisions.

New York, playing without starters Rickey Henderson, Willie Randolph and Don Slaught, fell out of first place in the AL East for the first time since May 3 as Detroit, which won the division last year, vaulted past the Yankees with a 2-1 victory on Tom Brookens' 10th-inning homer.

AL

Is Yankees manager Billy Martin worried?

"No," he said. "If we win the next two, we're back 1½ games up. I don't lose my cool over things like that. These guys are playing hard and they are playing hurt. Anybody who runs scared now is crazy.

"I'm playing without my regular catcher (Slaught), second baseman (Randolph) and center fielder (Henderson) and we're still there. I've got no complaints."

Neither does Tigers manager Sparky Anderson, who has seen All-Star catcher Lance Parrish leave for Philadelphia as a free agent in 1987 and lost Kirk Gibson the same way, to Los Angeles, this year.

"We're scrappers, guys like Tom Brookens," Anderson said. "We'll come and play you. There ain't no way to keep us from playing.

"Everybody laughed at us. We lost (Lance) Parrish and we lost (Kirk) Gibson. We lost almost 400 home runs right there. How would they like to lose (Don) Mattingly and (Dave) Winfield? That'd kill you."

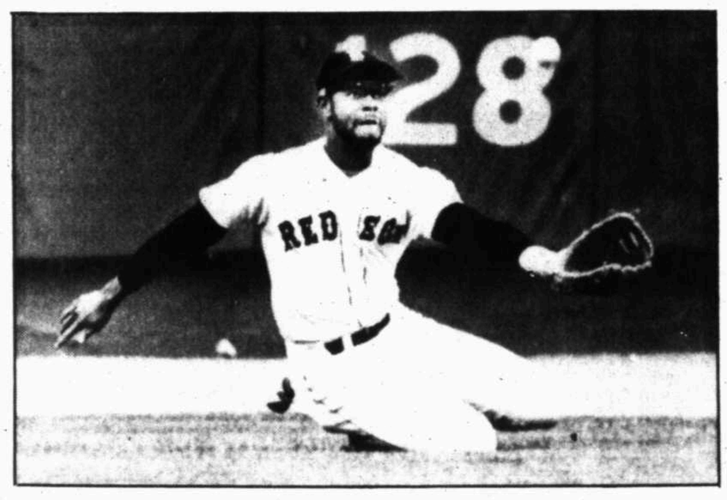

The Tigers have been killing the opposition lately, winning 10 of their last 13 games.

"This is not a spectacular team," Brookens said. "We're kind of blue-collar. We have some good days and we have some bad days. We punch the clock on the way in and we punch it again on the way out."

Detroit got a second-inning run on second-inning doubles by Ray Knight and Darrell Evans and made it stand up until the ninth, when Dave Winfield spoiled Jeff Robinson's bid for a second straight shutout with a two-out RBI double.

Brookens then won it off reliever Cecilio Guante.

"I can't say I ever hit a home run to win a game in the last inning before," Brookens said.

Boston outfielder Ellis Burks dives — but misses — for a sliding, would-be heroic grab.

Rangers 4, Mariners 3

Jeff Russell improved his record to 7-0, six of the wins since he became a starter on May 14. Russell tied Jim Kern's team record for quickest start by a pitcher. He gave up only four hits.

Jeff Kunkel, who hit a homer in the eighth, won it with an RBI double in the bottom of the ninth in his first start this year.

"I woke up this morning, picked up the paper, saw that a left-hander was starting and I was real happy," said Kunkel.

Athletics 5, Brewers 4

Oakland built a 4-0 lead on Dave Henderson's solo homer, an RBI triple by Mark McGwire and Dave Parker's two-run homer. After Parker's shot in the sixth, Teddy Higuera was ejected by home plate umpire Derryl Cousins when he hit Henderson with the next pitch.

"Teddy said he wasn't trying to hit him," Brewers manager Tom Trebelhorn said. "I don't think Teddy has thrown at anybody in his whole life."

Athletics manager Tony LaRussa wasn't so convinced.

"I have as much respect for him as anyone in the league but he lost a couple of points tonight," LaRussa said. "That was just a cheap shot. The guy has pinpoint control."

Higuera's ejection seemed to spark Milwaukee, which tied it on Jeffrey Leonard's three-run homer in the sixth and Paul Molitor's two-out RBI single in the seventh.

But pinch hitter Terry Steinbach doubled in the winning run in the ninth and Oakland's Dennis Eckersley pitched a scoreless ninth for his major league-leading 21st save.

Oakland starter Bob Welch also lasted only five innings after suffering a bruised hand when he reached out and deflected Dale Sveum's hard grounder in the fifth.

Red Sox 14, Indians 7

Boston continued its power surge. After collecting 23 hits against Baltimore on Sunday, the Red Sox went to Cleveland and belted Indians ace Greg Swindell, 10-5, who lost his fourth straight, allowing five runs on nine hits in 2 2-3 innings.

Angels 6, Twins 5

Wally Joyner was the difference at Minneapolis with a three-run homer and a run-scoring single. California, which has won five straight, also was aided by Joyner's sensational running catch in the ninth inning.

White Sox 5, Royals 3

At Chicago, Steve Lyons hit Jerry Don Gleaton's first pitch for a two-run homer in the ninth inning.

With one out in the ninth, Gary Redus walked. Gleaton relieved Jeff Montgomery and threw to first a half-dozen times before finally throwing a pitch to the plate. Lyons hit it into the upper deck in right field for his third homer of the season.

The drive made a winner of Bobby Thigpen, 3-5, as the Royals suffered their fourth straight defeat.

Blue Jays 5, Orioles 2

Dave Stieb, 10-3, won his ninth straight decision and Fred McGriff keyed the offense with a two-run homer. Stieb allowed four hits in six innings.

Despite age, Nettles still hitting well in pinch

By HILLEL ITALIE
Associated Press Writer

As a part-time player at age 43, Montreal's Graig Nettles can't be blamed for feeling a little rusty. But he felt loose enough to help the Expos defeat the St. Louis Cardinals.

St. Louis starter Jose DeLeon had held the Expos to two hits through seven innings Monday night and Montreal trailed 2-1. In the bottom of the eighth, pinch-hitter Wallace Johnson doubled with one out and lefty Ken Dayley was brought in to face the left-handed Nettles, also a pinch hitter.

"I haven't had a chance to swing against too many lefties this year," said Nettles, whose double tied the game. "But I've had a long career and I've hit lefties pretty well throughout it.

"He threw me a fastball which I was looking for."

Tim Raines was walked intentionally and, one out later, Andres Galarraga's double off relief ace Todd Worrell scored pinch-runner Tom Foley to give the Expos a 3-2 victory and snap a five-game losing streak.

"The pine boys really did the job for us tonight," Expos manager Buck Rodgers said, praising the efforts of Johnson and Nettles.

Until the Expos' rally, it seemed like another hard-luck night for starter Floyd Youmans, who had allowed only two runs on five hits. Youmans, 3-6, had lost three of his last five decisions despite giving up less than two runs per game.

"Maybe this will turn things around for me," Youmans said. "I know I could have five or six wins if I got some more support, but I can't doing anything about that."

Jeff Parrett worked the ninth for his fifth save.

The Cardinals had taken a 2-1 lead in the seventh when Tom Brunansky led off with a triple and scored on a single by Tony Pena.

"This is just another tough loss for us," said Cardinals manager Whitey Herzog. "But we've had a lot of them this year, so it's no big deal."

NL Roundup

Reds 2, Astros 1

Tom Browning allowed five hits in 7 2-3 innings to win his fourth straight game and Nick Esasky's sacrifice fly in the sixth inning scored the go-ahead run for Cincinnati.

Browning, 6-3, defeated Houston starter Jim Deshaies, his former teammate at LeMoyne College, for the second time in a week.

Browning struck out six, walked three and gave up Kevin Bass' sixth homer in the fourth inning for Houston's only run. John Franco relieved with runners on first and second and two outs in the bottom of the eighth. He struck out Billy Hatcher and then retired the side in order in the ninth to earn his ninth save.

Deshaies, 4-5, allowed eight hits in eight innings, walking four and striking out five. Barry Larkin, who had three hits, tied the game with his sixth homer in the sixth.

Cubs 7, Phillies 2

Jamie Moyer and Les Lancaster combined on a four-hitter, allowing only two base runners after the first inning, as Chicago won its fifth straight game.

Moyer, 4-7, gave up three hits in the first inning, hit Mike Schmidt with two outs in the bottom of the third and gave up a one-out single to pinch-hitter Keith Miller in the eighth. Lancaster retired the side in order in the ninth.

Bruce Ruffin, 4-6, was the loser.

The Phillies took a 2-0 lead in the first on a single by Schmidt and Lance Parrish's 11th homer. The Cubs made it 2-1 in the fourth on Manny Trillo's RBI single and scored four times in the sixth. Shawon Dunston had a two-run homer in the eighth.

Pirates 8, Mets 5

John Smiley won his fourth straight decision and Pittsburgh scored six runs on eight singles in the seventh inning as the Pirates won in New York.

With one out in the seventh, pinch-hitter R.J. Reynolds singled and took second on a single by Barry Bonds. Jose Lind then bunted to the third base side of the mound and Bob Ojeda, 5-6, threw the ball wildly to first, allowing Reynolds and Bonds to score. The Pirates then added five RBI singles.

Smiley, 7-4, allowed six hits in six innings, striking out seven and walking one. Jeff Robinson, the Pirates' third pitcher, earned his eighth save by allowing one hit in 1 2-3 innings.

The Mets took a 3-2 lead in the fourth on Darryl Strawberry's three-run homer, his 17th of the season and fifth in the last seven games.

Dodgers 7, Braves 3

Shawn Hillegas scattered 10 hits in 8 2-3 innings and Dave Anderson had three singles to lead a 14-hit attack.

Hillegas, who was called up Saturday from the Dodgers' Triple-A farm club in Albuquerque, struck out six and walked two in his 11th major-league start. Alejandro Pena got the final out to earn his fifth save.

Los Angeles scored five runs on 10 hits in the first four innings against Tom Glavine, 3-8, who is winless lifetime against the Dodgers in four decisions.

Dion James spoiled Hillegas' shutout bid with an RBI single in the top of the eighth.

Padres 2, Giants 1

Andy Hawkins and Mark Davis combined on an eight-hitter and San Diego Padres made the most of three hits off San Francisco's Mike LaCoss.

Hawkins, 6-6, allowed six hits, struck out four and walked two before being relieved by Davis with one out and runners on second and third in the bottom of the eighth. Davis struck out Will Clark and Candy Maldonado.

Worthy-Dantley match-up a sight to behold

By JOHN NADEL
AP Sports Writer

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — It doesn't take a rocket scientist to realize the importance of Adrian Dantley and James Worthy in the NBA Finals.

If Dantley explodes, the Detroit Pistons win. If Worthy goes off, it's the Los Angeles Lakers who prevail.

"I just feel I have to be into the game as far as the intensity is concerned," Worthy said Monday of tonight's seventh and deciding game of the Finals. "Quite naturally, I have to make my contribution to this ballclub. But I don't feel any added pressure.

"I'm sure he (Dantley) feels he has to make his contribution just like I do. We're going to try and contain him just like we did Sunday, keep him from getting as many shots as he might like."

Worthy scored 26, 24 and 28 points in his team's three victories in the championship series, and 19, 7 and 14 in the losses. Dantley scored 34, 27 and 25 points in the Pistons' victories and 19, 14 and 14 in their losses.

In Sunday's sixth game, which the Lakers won 103-102 to force tonight's game, Dantley made only three of 10 field goal attempts.

"It seemed like they were playing a little bit of a zone," Dantley said of the Lakers' defense in Game 6. "We just have to spread out a little more and go to the hole.

"My points are different. I think my 20 or more points might be more effective than 20 points by somebody else because I go to the (free throw) line, get them in foul trouble."

That's what happened to Worthy in Game 4. He picked up three fouls in the first quarter and was limited to 26 minutes during Detroit's 111-86 victory.

"I'm aware if I'm scoring, it makes it tough on other teams," Dantley said. "But our team's different than their team. Our team's not geared around any one guy. We've got eight or nine guys to go to. The ball just might go different ways, to different people. That's the makeup of our team.

"I know how our offense is, I know what my role is on this team. I'll just play my same game, do what I have to do. If they double me, I'll just pass."

Even though the Lakers have a 46-7 record at the Forum this season, including the playoffs, Worthy said the fact that the seventh game is being played there won't be a big factor.

"I don't think it's crucial at all, I don't think it makes any difference," he said. "Detroit has proven it can win on anybody's court."

Indeed, the Pistons won the opener 105-93 at the Forum before losing 108-96 in Game 2 and 103-102 in Game 6.

Yankees call up Velarde

From Staff Reports

The New York Yankees Monday called up Midlander Randy Velarde from their Triple A Columbus farm team.

Velarde, who has continued to set the International League afire, received word that he would be replacing infielder Wayne Tolleson, who was placed on the 15 day disabled list.

The Yankees, riddled by injuries as of late, also sent catcher Bob Geren to Columbus and re-activated caatcher Don Slaught.

New York, due in large part to its overabundance of injuries, fell out of first place Tuesday in the AL East.

Wimbledon Facts

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — A recap of Monday's highlights at the 102nd Wimbledon tennis championships, and what's scheduled for Tuesday:

Attendance—29,078. A year ago, rain postponed the first day's play. The record for the first day is 32,288, set in 1984.

Weather—Hazy and humid with an hour's break for rain in the late afternoon. The high temperature was in the mid-70s.

Results—Defending champion Pat Cash, top-seeded Ivan Lendl and two-time winner Boris Becker all scored impressive victories. Cash beat 17-year-old Todd Woodbridge 6-1, 6-1, 6-2; Lendl defeated Britain's David Felgate 6-4, 6-1, 6-3; and Becker defeated John Frawley 6-3, 6-1, 6-2.

Among the women playing, 12th-seeded Zina Garrison of the United States beat American Wendy White 6-3, 6-1, while 14th-seeded Katerina Maleeva of Bulgaria beat Anne Simpkin of Britain 6-1, 6-0.

Upsets—The only seed to lose on opening day was Manuela Maleeva, the seventh seed in the women's draw. She lost to Pascale Paradis of France 6-4, 6-3.

Tuesday's matches—The women's field is featured, with top-seeded Steffi Graf playing American Hu Na and defending champion Martina Navratilova taking on Sabrina Goles of Yugoslavia. Also scheduled are two American veterans, fifth-seeded Jimmy Connors against Leif Shiras of the United States and eighth-seeded John McEnroe against Horst Skoff of Austria.

Speaking—"I tried everything, but it didn't make any difference. He just kept pounding them down." David Felgate, after Ivan Lendl defeated him with the help of 20 aces.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 22, 1988

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You will enjoy the time you spend in your kitchen or outdoors more than any other. Companionship is what makes a relationship last. Have faith in your abilities and others will follow suit. Your confidence grows on the job. You may decide to quit looking for greener pastures. Regular exercise and good nutrition are the keys to having plenty of energy. A newcomer is strongly attracted by your down-to-earth ways.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Meryl Streep, author Anne Morrow Lindbergh, fashion designer Bill Blass, correspondent Ed Bradley, left-hander Carl Hubbell, actor Kris Kristofferson.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Contact someone you have not seen for a while. You need to let partner take the lead for a change. Certain people will find it hard to see your point of view. Persist anyway.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Struggling too hard to make a point is counterproductive. Be on time for appointments. Look for a safe exit if you feel trapped by a relationship. Success comes when you make a phone call.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Use a talent you have not relied on previously and good things will happen quickly. Financial and professional gains come from using all your skills. Travel may be too expensive to help business.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Dig until you get to the bottom of a relationship problem. Do not give in to pressure. Be careful about making too many demands on someone new. Take things one day at a time.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A personal decision cannot be postponed. Take time off from work and get things settled. You will have the advantage if you keep your emotions under control and act quickly. Romance is in bloom.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Watch your step when dealing with people at a distance. Look out for someone who flatters you all the time. Ulterior motives are possible. A good day for working behind the scenes.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Sudden career developments prompt a permanent change. A newcomer makes an intriguing suggestion. You are unable to resist! Be conservative in business and you will win big. Widen your social circle.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Acting on impulse could prove costly. Avoid issuing ultimatums. Mate or partner is your strongest ally. Continue to expand your circle of professional contacts. Romance has its usual ups and downs.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A former business associate does you a huge favor. Seize a golden career or financial opportunity. Your influence is greater than you imagine. Romance thrives. Show your tender, sentimental side.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The emphasis is on putting your keen intellectual powers to good use. Recycle old projects to make new business gains. A college-bound student receives good news about a loan or scholarship.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your versatility counts big with an influential person. Revise your travel schedule to include a visit to a loved one. Romance begins to flourish when both partners are more considerate. Trade favors and make intelligent concessions.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Helping others brings you great satisfaction. Do not be afraid to take a chance on a career opportunity. You will be able to scale new heights. Exercise discharges tension, nervous energy.

Opening lead: Jack of ♣ Even double dummy, it is not easy to spot the winning line to the grand slam after a club lead. We are told that it was actually found at the table. Although we accept this statement at face value, the declarer who made this hand so brilliantly remains anonymous.

After South's reverse, North cue-bid his club ace at the three-level as a temporizing measure. Once South could look for a grand slam with five no trump, despite the fact that he had poor trumps, North realized that South had to have enough controls to make the grand slam a viable contract.

Declarer won the opening club lead in hand, cashed the king of diamonds, then crossed to dummy by leading a low trump to the ten. Next came the ace of clubs, on which declarer discarded the the ace of diamonds!

The rest was relatively easy. Declarer ruffed a diamond high, cashed the ace of hearts and returned to the table with a heart ruff. Another diamond ruffed high set up the suit, and declarer was able to overtake his last trump on the board to draw trumps and claim his contract after cashing the queen of diamonds.

Note the beauty and complete safety of South's line. If diamonds were 3-2 and trumps 4-1, declarer would still get home. The distribution of the diamonds would become known after one ruff, and declarer would still have enough high trumps to draw trumps ending on the table, then run diamonds. As the cards lie, all he had to do to land his contract was to execute a dummy reversal combined with a jettison play, and declarer is too modest to claim his work of art!

Columnist helps fulfill dying wish of Texas collector of Zane Grey's works

EULESS (AP) — Mack Landers, whose last wish was granted through the work of syndicated columnist Bob Greene, has died of cancer.

Landers, 74, a collector of Zane Grey western novels, had searched for years to find "Don," the one book he needed for a complete collection of the novels.

In February, not long after doctors told Landers he had three months to live, Greene learned of Landers' last wish and wrote about in his column syndicated by the Chicago Tribune.

"Every expert I talked with told me there was no way we'd ever find it," Greene told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram in a telephone interview Monday.

Greene tracked down the book and delivered a copy of the book to Landers on Feb. 21. Landers got many cards and letters and additional copies of the book after the first one was delivered.

Greene obtained the book from James Vickers, president of Zane Grey's West Society.

Vickers told the Fort Worth newspaper Monday that he had owned the book for about 10 years and giving it to Landers broke up his complete set of first-edition Zane Grey novels.

"From Bob Greene's column, it sounded like this was an individual that at this stage in his life needed that book more than I did," Vickers said.

Landers read the book three times before lapsing into a coma June 10, his wife, Aliene Landers, said.

When Landers became so ill that he could no longer hold the book, she said, she placed it on an easel at the end of his bed so he could look at it.

"It was not that he worshiped it, but he was so proud of it," she said. "He was so proud he got it."

"We talked about it almost every day until he couldn't understand what was going on," his wife said Monday. "He never ceased to be amazed at what did happen. When I'd bring in another batch of mail he would say, 'I don't believe it.'"

Landers whetted his appetite for western novels in the 1920s when he worked as an assistant cook on trail rides across West Texas.

He had worked as a master plumber for General Dynamics at Fort Worth for about 10 years and worked as a building engineer at Harris Methodist HEB Hospital until he retired in 1979.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Former President Jimmy Carter and his wife, Rosalynn, donned dungarees and went to work in a blighted north Philadelphia neighborhood to help volunteers renovate five row houses for the poor.

Carter

Carter Monday hammered at the rear of a row house that a low-income family will buy at cost from the volunteer group, Habitat for Humanity. Mrs. Carter pitched in with a shovel to help with landscaping.

"We'll finish 20 homes in one week," Carter said during a break.

Buyers will pay about $25,000 apiece for the five houses being renovated west of the Temple University campus and will pay no interest on their loans.

The former president and first lady are in their fifth year of helping Habitat, a non-denominational Christian group that began in 1976 in Americus, Ga., near the Carters' home in Plains.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedian Garry Shandling says he had to turn down a stint as guest host of "The Tonight Show," which helped him get his start, because he has too many other projects in the works.

The production schedule of "It's Garry Shandling's Show" and the immediate start of production on "It's Garry Shandling's Movie" kept him from accepting NBC's offer, his manager Brad Grey said Monday.

"Johnny Carson has been one of the biggest supporters of my career from the beginning," said Shandling, whose series appears on cable TV's Showtime and Fox Broadcasting Co.

"It's ironic that 'The Tonight Show,' which has been such a catalyst in my career, has helped put me in a position where I simply don't have time to host it right now."

Forbes

LONDON (AP) — Publisher Malcolm Forbes said he had his father's body exhumed from a grave in New Jersey and reburied in Scotland so his dad could be home forever.

"My father's heart was in Scotland," the 69-year-old publisher of Forbes Magazine said in a British Broadcasting Corp. television interview. "Bringing somebody home to a place that they love is a tribute, not a dig-up or a put-down."

Bertie Charles Forbes, who died in 1954 aged 74, was reburied Sunday in front of St. Kane's Church at New Deer in northeast Scotland where he worshiped before emigrating to the United States at age 24 to make his fortune in the magazine world.

Malcolm Forbes said his father originally was buried in Englewood, N.J. But Forbes said he and his brother decided to bring their father's body home and bury him in the family plot beside his grandfather, James Moir.

NEW YORK (AP) — A professor says he has determined that an unsigned, untitled story was by Charles Dickens and shows the author's penchant for interchanging personal details of his own life with those of his characters.

Professor Harry Stone of California State University at Northridge made the find in Household Words, the weekly journal edited by Dickens for nine years.

Stone has named the 1857 work, "The Bride's Chamber," The New York Times reported today.

The story is a self-contained segment of a tale in five installments called "The Lazy Tour of Two Idle Apprentices," the Times said. Scholars knew the overall tale was a collaboration between Dickens and Wilkie Collins, but until now, no one could say which of the two wrote which segment, the Times said.

The story reveals how Dickens fell in love with an 18-year-old actress, Ellen Lawless Ternan, who remained the married author's mistress until his death, Stone said. The character of the young woman in the story also is named Ellen.

Two other Dickens scholars — professors Steven Marcus of Columbia University and Richard Dunne, chairman of the English department at the University of Washington in Seattle — said Stone's find could add to a more complete understanding of the British master.

"I know Stone and his writings, and he is a very careful researcher," Dunne said.

Besides the connection created by the use of the name Ellen, which Stone considered a key clue, the professor said he also concluded that Dickens was the author by using letters from Dickens along with other contemporary evidence.

Consumer prices post small rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices climbed a modest 0.3 percent in May, the government said today, easing fears of inflation and indicating that the drought plaguing the Farm Belt has yet to reach grocery store shelves.

The May increase, less than the gains of 0.5 percent in March and 0.4 percent in April, would amount to an annual inflation rate of 4.2 percent if prices climbed at the same pace for 12 months, the Labor Department said.

Food prices prices rose just 0.4 percent, compared with a 0.6 percent increase in April. Analysts said the only area where the effects of the drought showed up were in higher retail prices for vegetable oil and mayonnaise.

The biggest price increase was for gasoline, up 1.7 percent after a 1.1 percent increase in April. Gasoline prices, however, are still just 2.9 percent higher than they were a year ago.

Automobile prices rose 0.2 percent last month with the paring of many dealer incentives.

Stock prices opened higher today on the New York Stock Exchange an hour after the inflation report was issued. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks fell more than 20 points in slow trading Monday as analysts had anticipated a larger increase in the Consumer Price Index.

"It was pretty low compared to expectations," John Hagens, an analyst for the Wefa Group, an economic consulting firm in Bala Cynwyd, Pa., said of the price report. "The food picture hasn't really passed into the CPI yet."

For the first five months of 1988, overall retail prices have risen at an annual rate of 4.4 percent, the same pace they grew in 1987, the government said.

Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III said last week that the Reagan administration remains optimistic that its targeted inflation cap of 4.5 percent for 1988 will not be exceeded.

However, low unemployment-spurred wage gains that have been outpacing price increases over the last three months plus anticipated future food price hikes from the current drought in the Farm Belt have triggered fears of a inflationary wage-price spiral later this year or in early 1989.

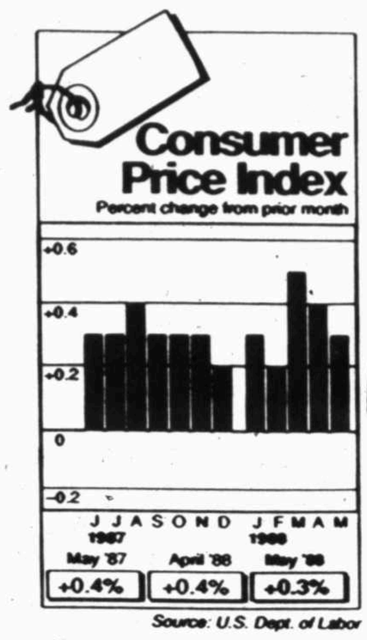

Leading the food price increases were gains for meats, poultry, fish and eggs, up 0.8 percent last month compared with a 1.4 percent rise in April. Price increases for fruits and vegetables also slowed from their 1.4 percent rise in April to 0.6 percent in May.

The increases for other food and beverages were one-half of 1 percent or less.

"The drought and major hikes in commodity prices that we're seeing are scary, but it's just too soon for them to have reached the retail market," said Sandra Shaber, an economist for the Futures Group, a Washington consulting firm.

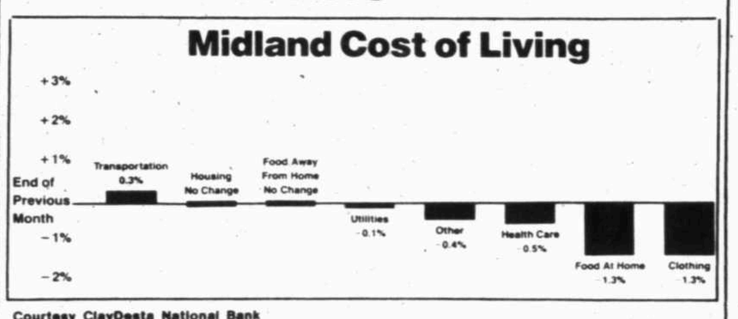

Donald Ratajczak, an economist who directs his own survey of wholesale and retail prices from Georgia State University in Atlanta, said poultry was a key ingredient in higher consumer food prices last month.

COST OF LIVING

Local living expenses show modest decline

From Staff Reports

The cost of living in Midland reversed a three-month upward trend, dropping 0.4 during May, according to data compiled by ClayDesta National Bank.

The annualized rate of deflation based on May's figures would be 4.7 percent.

Odessa saw a smaller decline in the cost of living, 0.1 percent during the month, which would result in an annual rate of 0.9 percent.

In Midland, higher transportation costs — largely gasoline — were offset by sizeable declines in expenses for clothing and food for home consumption and smaller decreases in the costs of utilities and health care.

Both housing and the cost of eating out remained flat in the Tall City last month.

Compared to last June, overall living costs in Midland are down 0.1 percent.

Grocery and housing costs rose in Odessa, but were more than offset by lower costs for clothing health care, transportation and utilities.

Midland saw 1.3 percent declines in both the clothing and food at home components of the cost of living index.

Clothing price declines were led by lower price tags on men's apparel and a third month of cheaper ladies' wear as well.

Grocery prices in the Tall City fell despite a 3.0 percent rise in meat prices — led by beef items. Overall, produce costs were lower, as were shelf items and alcoholic beverages.

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Carl C. Icahn conceded Monday that he had lost his proxy battle with the management of Texaco Inc. after Kohlberg, Kravis, Roberts & Co., which held the second-largest block of voting rights after Icahn, said it had voted for management.

Icahn said in a statement: "I am, of course, sorry that I did not win. But so be it."

Kohlberg, Kravis, which voted nearly 12 million shares, or 4.9 percent of Texaco, said it no longer held any shares. Proxy votes were granted based on stock ownership as of April 12.

Icahn, who owns 14.8 percent of the nation's third-largest oil company, had said immediately after the annual meeting that he was confident he had won — unless Kohlberg, Kravis had cast its ballots against him.

A Kohlberg, Kravis spokesman said Monday that the firm was "impressed by the retructuring steps that Texaco has taken since emerging from Chapter 11 and is supportive of the management's stated objective of increasing stockholder value by executing a significant restructuring program in the months ahead."

Kohlberg, Kravis said it would consider buying shares in the future, "depending on market and other conditions."

Texas cattlemen cheer Japan-U.S. pact

By READ MARTIN
Associated Press Writer

Texas cattlemen say Japan's decision Monday to liberalize import restrictions on beef boosts morale by opening the door to more trade in the future, although they doubt they'll see an immediate financial gain.

The agreement, announced in Tokyo by U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter, calls on Japan to nearly double its beef imports by 1991. It also provides for doubling of Japan's imports of oranges from the United States.

"We're very pleased with this agreement," said Charles E. Ball, executive vice president of the Texas Cattle Feeders Association in Amarillo.

"It is something that we have felt we should have had for a number of years. The Japanese have been very slow to negotiate on quotas. The principle of quotas is just contrary to free trade and all that we stand for in this country."

But the immediate financial impact of the decision is less certain.

"This (Japan) will become a significant market in the future, but in terms of dollars this year or next year it's going to be very difficult to measure," Ball said.

"The import quota as I understand it was very small anyway, and doubling something that was small to begin with is going to have a pretty minor impact, but it's a step in the right direction," said San Angelo rancher Skipper Duncan, who raises feeder cattle.

Under the pact, tariffs would be gradually cut to a level of 50 percent by 1993 and import quotas on oranges would be eliminated.

"This has been a psychological thing for our people: the fact that we import so much from Japan while they've had barriers on our beef and citrus over there," Ball said. "It's going to be a morale booster for us and it's going to help our markets some."

Texas citrus growers, heavily concentrated in production of fresh grapefruit, will be indirectly affected by the pact on oranges, said Ray Prewett, executive vice president of Texas Citrus Mutual, the citrus growers trade association in the Rio Grande Valley.

"Primarily our export is in grapefruit, and that's in fresh grapefruit," Prewett said.

"We will benefit as far as oranges go, because if Florida and California increase their orange exports that will have an effect on us by not having as much domestic oranges (in the market). It will have a positive long-term effect."

By 1990, quotas on fresh oranges would be eliminated and tariffs set at 20 percent to 40 percent. Quotas on orange juice will also be phased out.

The United States also demanded and got compensation on tariffs for other farm products in return for concessions on allowing Japan to slowly phase out its tariffs. Included were liberalized restrictions on imports of grapefruit, lemons, frozen peaches and pears, pistachios, macadamias, pecans, walnuts, pet food, beef jerky, sausage and pork and beans.

U.S. thrifts lose record $3.8 billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's savings institutions lost a record $3.8 billion in the first three months of this year, more than half the loss for all of 1987, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board said today.

Big losses in three southwestern states pushed overall industry losses over the previous quarterly record of $3.2 billion, set in the last quarter of 1987, despite a rise in the percentage of profitable institutions from 65 percent to 69 percent.

The bank board said the 20 institutions with the worst loses — most of them in Texas — accounted for $3 billion of the losses.

A total of 2,164 institutions out of 3,118 had earnings of $1.3 billion. But that was overwhelmed by the losses of the other savings and loans.

The board reported in May that the industry's capital had declined by $3.3 billion in the January-March period.

Capital represents the amount of money an institution's stockholders or owners have invested in the savings and loan.

Capital declines can be less than the institution's actual losses if investors offset part of the loss by putting up additional money. If an institution is already insolvent, losses sometimes do not translate into a capital decline because the capital has been consumed by previous losses.

Last year, the thrift industry had its worst year since the Great Depression, losing $6.8 billion dollars.

Despite regulators' efforts to shut down or bail out sick institutions, the flow of red ink has continued this year. The bank board said earlier this month that capital declined about another $550 million in April.

The scope of the industry's losses is becoming increasingly critical as regulators and Congress try to determine how long the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp., which insures savings deposits of $100,000 or less, can continue operating without an infusion of more money.

Dealers seeing Samurai sales improve

Associated Press

Suzuki Samurai dealers say sales of the popular sport vehicle are showing early signs of a comeback from the damage done by assertions that it rolls over too easily.

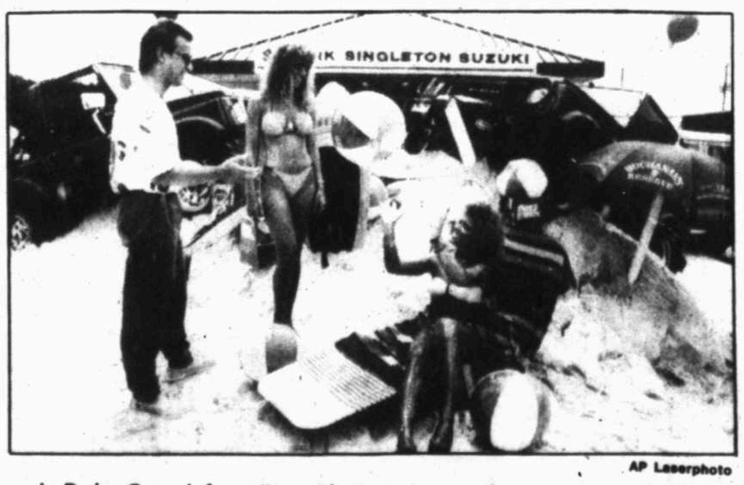

In an Associated Press survey, the nation's top 10 dealers predicted their June sales would be off by as little as a tenth to more than half because of the June 2 report by Consumers Union.

"For the first three or four days we had just literally no traffic," said John Alexander, general sales manager of McDavid Suzuki in Houston, the nation's No.10 dealer. "But time is helping. Time is the big healer."

Separately, Consumers Union said Monday that it received a June 11 letter from American Suzuki Motor Corp. demanding a retraction of its report, but rejected it.

Dealers contend the people who still are buying Samurais are skeptical of the Consumers Union report and are confident the sport-utility vehicle is safe as long as it is driven sensibly.

"Believe it or not, it's beginning to turn around already," said Mickey Rhines, a salesman for the nation's No.1 Suzuki dealership, Earnhardt Suzuki in Tempe, Ariz.

Consumers Union gave the Samurai its first "not acceptable" rating for a vehicle in 10 years after concluding the high center of gravity and light weight gave the vehicle a hazardous propensity to roll over if a driver swerved to avoid an accident.

Futures flat after Monday's fall

From Staff and Wire Reports

Deterioration of futures prices continued Monday and West Texas crude oil buyers responded by dropping their posted price for intermediate crude by 50 cents per barrel.

Among the purchasers dropping their postings to $15.75 effective Monday were Enron, Marathon Oil Co., Permian Corp., Pride Pipeline Co., Sun Refining & Marketing and Texaco Trading & Transportation.

In early trading Tuesday, futures prices remained flat causing one buyer to speculate hopefully that "maybe the market has found a bottom at $16."

Pessimism in the wake of last week's OPEC meeting continued to wash over the energy futures market as July delivery contracts neared expiration, which may have combined to send prices skidding.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, the July contract for West Texas Intermediate fell 45 cents Monday to close at $16 a barrel.

John Azarow, a trader with Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc., said WTI had not traded at such low levels since the end of March.

The July contract — due to expire today — contributed to the sharpness of the decline, said Jim Fiedler, a trader with ED&F Man International Futures Inc. The August contract slipped 30 cents and the September contract fell 24 cents.

"There was no new news" to drive prices lower, Fiedler said. Fiedler said the market was pressured by liquidation of long positions.

Reports that Saudi Arabia was discounting the price of its crude deepened the market's pessimism on Monday, Azarow said.

Dollar retains small European gains

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was holding steady in calm European trading late this morning despite a small increase in short-term West German interest rates earlier in the session.

Gold prices fell.

In Tokyo, the dollar rose 0.24 yen to a closing 126.33. Later, in London, it was quoted at 126.45 yen.

Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Monday:

— 1.7569 West German marks, up from 1.7543

— 1.4605 Swiss francs, up from 1.4580

— 5.9280 French francs, up from 5.9173

— 1.9767 Dutch guilders, up from 1.9730

— 1,304.50 Italian lire, up from 1,302.00

— 1.2065 Canadian dollars, down from 1.2094

In London, the dollar fell against the British pound. It cost $1.7867 to buy one pound, fractionally more expensive than $1.7865 on Monday.

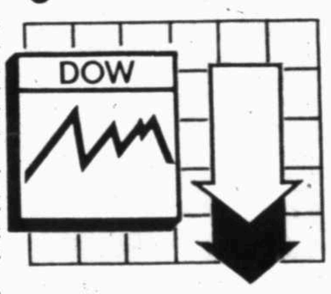

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $451.40 a troy ounce, compared with late Monday's $453.90. At mid-morning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $451.70.

In Zurich, the bid price was $451.80, down from $452.50 late Monday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell $2.55 to close at a bid of $452.75.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $7.19 a troy ounce, down from Monday's $7.26.

Slow trading drags Dow lower

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market weakened Monday in the second-slowest session of the year, which brokers attributed largely to recurring fears of drought-spawned inflation and talk that interest rates will rise.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped at the opening bell on Wall Street and remained lower throughout the session, finishing at 2,083.93, down 20.09. Broader market indicators also fell.

New York Stock Exchange volume totaled 116.75 million shares, the slowest since a 1988 record low of 102.64 million shares traded May 23.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 3-to-2 in nationwide trading of NYSE-listed stocks, with 883 down, 588 up and 485 unchanged.

Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trading at regional exchanges and on the over-the-counter market, totaled 136.18 million shares.

The Wilshire Associates Equity Index, the market value of NYSE, American and OTC issues, fell $15.06 billion, off 0.56 percent from Friday.

The NYSE composite index of all listed issues fell 0.88 to 151.96.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials fell 2.04 to 310.76, and S&P's 500-stock composite index fell 1.74 to 268.94.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index fell 0.58 to 305.12. The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market closed at 385.99, down 0.93.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Tristar Energy purchases Foster plant

From Staff Reports

Tristar Energy Co., a division of American Central Gas Companies, Inc., has purchased the Foster Plant and Gathering System near Odessa from El Paso Hydrocarbons Co., an affiliate of Meridian Oil.

The facility consists of approximately 200 miles of gathering lines, 10,000 HP of compression, a gas treating plant, a cryogenic gas liquids extraction plant, and a 150,000 gpd liquid fractionation train.

USX sheds all but tanker transportation

PITTSBURGH (AP) — USX Corp. says it plans to sell its transportation businesses for more than $500 million to a joint venture it is forming with Blackstone Capital Partners and managers of the rail and water subsidiaries.

The deal disclosed Monday would raise the total of USX asset sales to $5.5 billion since David Roderick became chairman in 1979. It also would pare USX's wholly-owned transportation businesses to the petroleum pipelines and ocean-going tankers of its Marathon Oil and Texas Oil & Gas subsidiaries.

Southland agrees to $10 million settlement

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Southland Corp. has agreed to pay nearly $10 million to settle charges that a former division conspired with other producers to fix prices of milk sold to Florida schoolchildren, the state said.

Past and present officials of Velda Farms Dairy of Miami, formerly owned by Dallas-based Southland, acknowledged the company participated in illicit price fixing, Florida Attorney General Bob Butterworth said Monday.

Southland, parent of 7-Eleven convenience stores, will help Butterworth litigate cases against six other milk producers as part of the agreement.

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Sun reports 328 barrel discovery

From Staff Reports

SUN EXPLORATION & PRODUCTION, INC., Midland, has recorded an Atoka discovery in Upton County, surrounded by production in the McCamey field.

On potential test, the No. 2 John Lane flowed 328 brrels of 32.2 gravity crude and 55 barrels of water on a 12/64 inch choke from perforations 7,460 to 7,526 ft. The interval was acidized with 3,200 gallons of acid. Gas-oil ratio is 1,241:1.

Total depth was 7,770 ft., where 5 1/2 casing was set, and the well was plugged back to 7,550 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,735 ft., include the Rustler at 794 ft., Tansill at 1,452, Yates at 1,509, Grayburg at 2,196, San Andres at 2,267, Clearfork at 3,990, Wichita Albany at 4,733, Wolfcamp at 6,177, Pennsylvanian at 6,988, Atoka at 7,330, and the Woodford at 7,733 ft.

Location is 1,000 ft. from north and 800 ft. from west lines of Section 32, Block 1, MK&T survey, five miles northeast of McCamey.

★Atoka discovery

A prolific 328 barrel Atoka discovery has been recorded in Upton County, surrounded by production in the McCamey field.

San Andres producer added to Dawson field

The Welch South field of Dawson County gained a new San Andres producer as PITTS ENERGY CO., Midland, completed activity in the area.

Pitts finaled the No. 1 Beaty to pump 29 barrels of 34 gravity crude and 32 barrels of water from perforations 4,926 to 4,949 ft., no treatment reported. Gas-oil ratio is 207:1.

Permitted as a 5,100 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 5,019 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 5,018 ft.

Location is 467 ft. from south and east lines of Section 84, Block M, EL&RR survey, four miles southwest of Welch.

Lower Tannehill find pumps 82 barrels oil

A Lower Tannehill discovery has been completed in King County, northeast of the Pitchfork field.

TEMPO ENERGY, INC., Big Spring, tested the No. 1-L S.B. Burnett to pump 82 barrels of 35 gravity crude and no water from perforations 3,362 to 3,367 ft. The interval was acidized with 1,250 gallons of acid. Gas-oil ratio is 350:1.

Permitted as a 6,600 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 6,301 ft. and plugged back to 3,544 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set.

The well topped the Merkel at 803 ft., Lower Tannehill at 3,360 and Saddle Creek at 3,533 ft. on ground elevation of 1,832 ft. Pay was topped at 3,360 ft.

Location is 1,270 ft. from north and 1,860 ft. from east lines of Section 1, G&BN survey, 1 sw Guthrie.

Runnels field gains six barrel extender

A second Gardner producer has been added to the Norton East field of Runnels County, extending the pay 3/4-mile northwest.

CLODHOPPER OILS, Winters, completed the No. 1 Bryan-Elliott to pump six barrels of 42 gravity crude and one barrel of water from perforations 4,555 to 4,562 ft., which had been acidized with 250 gallons of acid. Gas-oil ratio is 5,833:1.

Permitted as a 4,650 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 4,620 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set.

Location is 467 ft. from north and west lines of Section 24, Thomas M. Fowler survey 440, Abst. 177, 2.4 miles east of Norton.

Sugg Ranch field gets three new producers

IP PETROLEUM CO., INC., Midland, continues development of the Sugg Ranch field, adding three new Canyon producers to the Sterling County portion.

On potential test, the No. 3 Bailey "10" flowed 229 barrels of 48.5 gravity crude, 180 Mcfd and one barrel of water on a 12/64 inch choke from perforations 7,553 to 7,682 ft.

The No. 4 Bailey "12" was tested to flow 254 barrels of 48.7 gravity crude, 185 Mcfd and one barrel of water on a 14/64 inch choke. The well flowed from perforations 7,717 to 7,923 ft.

IP also finaled the No. 1702 Sugg "B", flowing 20 barrels of 43.4 gravity crude, 628 Mcfd and six barrels of water on a 10/64 inch with flowing tubing pressure of 1,130 psi. Production is from perforations 7,504 to 7,657 ft.

PRICES

"The poultry producers may be responding to higher feed costs, but they are the result more of large U.S. soy meal sales to the Soviet Union last fall than the drought," he said.

About the only place where the 1988 drought could have reached the retail level so far, Ratajczak said, is in the prices of vegetable oil and mayonnaise. Those prices rose 0.8 percent in May, but account for only one-fourth of 1 percent of the consumer price index.

Medical costs jumped 0.7 percent in May and are now 6.4 percent higher than they were a year ago, making them the single biggest propellant of inflation in the Consumer Price Index.

But prices for women's clothing, which had skyrocketed a total of 7 percent in March and April, fell by 0.4 percent last month.

The 0.3 percent increase in the overall index in May was the smallest since a 0.2 percent rise in February.

The May figures raised the index to 117.5, meaning that a hypothetical selection of goods costing $100 during a 1982-84 base period would have cost $117.50 last month, a dime more than in April.

While severe inflation has yet to rear its head, analysts expect a combination of drought-related commodity shortages and decade-low unemployment to push prices up faster in 1989.

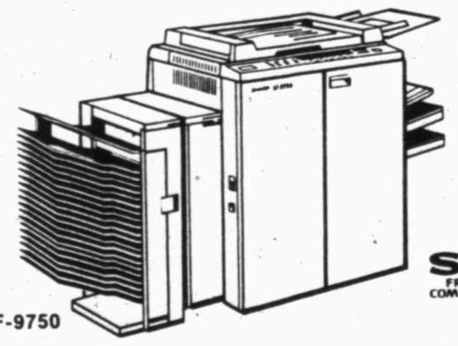

Hourly wage increases, for example, have outpaced price inflation the last two months.

To some, like Ms. Shaber, the wage increases can only be expected at some point to catch up with price inflation. But to other analysts, particularly those with close ties to the financial markets, the prospect is scary.

"We're definitely getting an acceleration of inflation and the beginning of a wage response to that," said Allen Sinai, an economist for the Boston Co., and New York consulting house. "I think we're in the incipient stages of a wage-price spiral."

California oil company signs on with Kern River pipeline project

HOUSTON (SWN) — Kern River Gas Transmission Co., a joint venture of units of Tenneco Inc. and The Williams Companies, Inc., announced the signing of a letter of intent with Berry Petroleum Co. of Taft, Calif.

The letter of intent envisions an agreement for firm transportation by the pipeline of up to 25 million cubic feet of natural gas per day for Berry. Harvey L. Bryant, president of Berry, said, "This agreement testifies to our strong belief that an interstate pipeline is sorely needed. The recent gas delivery curtailment by the gas utilities in California strengthens this decision."

The Kern River line is expected to begin operation in 1991.

The Kern River pipeline will transport natural gas for the use of enhanced oil recovery producers in Kern County.

Kern River Gas Transmission Company currently has a filing before the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission in Washington seeking authority to construct and operate the 36-inch-diameter pipeline with an initial capacity of 700 million cubic feet per day. The Kern River line would transport gas acquired by the enhanced oil recovery producers from a point of interconnection with the facilities of Northwest Pipeline

The market reacted unfavorably to the news of how Kohlberg, Kravis had voted, and Texaco shares closed at $46.875, down $1.125.

Texaco spent a year in bankruptcy, ending in April, as a result of its defeat in court by the Pennzoil Co., which charged that when Texaco merged with Getty Oil in 1984, it illegally interfered with Pennzoil's plans to do the same. Faced with a $10.3 billion judgment, Texaco eventually settled the case for $3 billion.

GENERAL NEWS

Mulroney likely to get boost from summit

TORONTO (AP) — Whatever the final communique says today, host Prime Minister Brian Mulroney may remember the 14th economic summit with gratitude.

In a crucial special parliamentary election Monday in Quebec, Mulroney's handpicked candidate, Lucien Bouchard, won with ease, ending a series of reversals for Mulroney's Progressive Conservative Party.

In addition, summit partners signaled a general endorsement of the Canada-U.S. Free Trade Agreement, which has run into all-out political opposition at home and will be the biggest issue in a general election Mulroney must call by September 1989.

Mulroney had put his personal credibility on the line in the election in Lac Saint-Jean, Quebec, and he shared news of the victory with summit partners at dinner.

Defeat for the Conservatives would have been a humiliation for the prime minister, who campaigned extensively in the district and showered it with $135 million in federal projects.

In March, Bouchard was brought back from Paris, where he was Canadian ambassador to France, and Mulroney appointed his old friend to the Cabinet as secretary of state. Cabinet ministers must be members of Parliament, and another Conservative resigned to let Bouchard run in Lac Saint-Jean.

Known as the "Mr. Clean" of Quebec politics, Bouchard will be a key lieutenant for Mulroney in the general election.

"I'm very happy. Mr. Bouchard is an excellent Quebecer and Canadian who can render great service to Canada's unity," Mulroney told reporters.

A Mulroney aide later visited the prime minister and said: "He's not crowing or gloating but he's got his shirt off and his feet up and he says maybe now people will start seeing things the way he has."

Most Canadian governments run for four years of their five-year terms when the prime minister calls an election to seek a new mandate.

Mulroney swept to power in September 1984, but has hesitated to call an election because opinion polls show the Conservatives trailing the main opposition Liberal Party with just 30 percent voter support.

The Liberals, and the socialist opposition New Democratic Party, have said they would tear up the Free Trade Agreement Mulroney negotiated with the Reagan administration and which would dismantle trade barriers over the next decade.

Mulroney's opponents accuse him of sacrificing Canadian sovereignty in the deal.

The New Democrats also oppose Canadian membership in NATO.

With the election win, trade endorsement and successfully hosted summit, one Mulroney aide, speaking on condition of anonymity, commented: "You would think these things would have a great impact on the opinion polls."

White-robed "druids" celebrate the summer solstice at the English site of Stonehenge, in the Salisbury Plain today.

Vagabonds clash with police near Stonehenge

AMESBURY, England (AP) — Anti-establishment vagabonds clashed with police before dawn today as a crowd of 4,000 tried to reach the ancient Stonehenge monument to celebrate the summer solstice.

Police said about 70 people were arrested and 10 were injured after the vagabonds pelted police with stones, bottles and other debris in an attempt to break police lines around the site. The injured included eight policemen and two hippies.

The estimated 4,000 vagabonds were quickly driven back by the 1,000 riot police carrying shields and truncheons and later obeyed police orders to move off an illegal camping site nearby.

"It seems to have quieted down," Inspector Stephen Chandler of the police in Devizes, about 15 miles north of Stonehenge, said. "The tents have started coming down, the shelters started coming apart."

"We're not expecting more problems," he said, adding that the hippies were leaving the site in small groups.

The arrests were made about one hour before 60 white-robed, modern-day druid sun worshipers celebrated the summer solstice, the longest day of the year, with a ritual sunrise ceremony at Stonehenge at 4:47 a.m.

The ceremony at the 4,000-year-old site culminated with the blowing of ram's horn trumpets.

The government-funded English Heritage, which manages the site, said the vagabonds had earlier this week refused an offer of 1,100 tickets to attend the ceremony under escort.

Stonehenge is a double circle of gigantic standing stones set in Salisbury Plain about 80 miles southwest of London. It is thought to have been a center for pre-Christian and astronomical worship, since the sun rises over a certain stone on the summer solstice.

The vagabonds, sometimes referred to as "hippies" in Britain because of their 1960s lifestyle, wander the countryside of southwestern England in a ragtag convoy of vehicles.

In the past, they have held loosely organized music festivals at Stonehenge coinciding with the solstice, when the sun reaches its greatest distance from the equator.

Duarte to return to El Salvador, resume duties, son says

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — President Jose Napoleon Duarte will return next month from Washington, where he is being treated for terminal liver cancer, and continue in office, his son says.

Alejandro Duarte told a news conference Monday that his 62-year-old father will return between July 5 and July 8 and immediately resume his duties.

"His intellectual capacity is not affected by the treatment; in fact it is admirable," said the younger Duarte.

"My father is a fighter," he said, emphasizing that doctors say a cancer patient's will and morale are a big factor in the prognosis.

The younger Duarte said chemotherapy could extend his father's life well into next year.

South Africans arrested after Botswana raid

GABORONE, Botswana (AP) — Security forces arrested two white South Africans after a shoot-out in which South African commandos injured three Botswanan policemen, the president's office said today.

The statement said the shooting occurred late Monday when six unarmed police officers were fired at by five South African commandos who were planning a raid on a target in Gaborone, the capital.

South African commandos have staged numerous cross-border raids in the past on Botswana and other neighboring countries to attack suspected hideouts and bases of the African National Congress. The ANC is the main guerrilla movement fighting South Africa's government.

The commandos escaped, the statement said, but two other South Africans were later arrested at an army roadblock and were being questioned. Initial reports said the arrests came early today, but the announcement said only that the arrests followed the 10:30 p.m. shooting.

The announcement came hours after Gaborone police announced that a car bomb had exploded early today near the home of a building contractor in the capital.

The presidential statement said the bombing was "yet another South African attempt on the lives of innocent Batswana."

The South African military said Botswana's allegations were being investigated "to establish the facts" before any other public comment was made.

The statement issued by President Quett Masire's office said the shoot-out occurred at 10:30 p.m. Monday when the six-man police patrol was surprised by five South African commandos about four miles south of Gaborone.

These commandos — three whites and two blacks — fled in a stolen Botswana police vehicle which was found abandoned at the South African border, the statement said.

The bomb went off at 6 a.m. today under a car belonging to contractor Allison Seeketso, parked outside his house, the statement said.

"Fortunately, neither Mr. Seeketso, his wife nor any of his four children who were sleeping in the house were injured," it said.

It could not immediately be determined if Seeketso is in any way affiliated with the ANC.

The statement said Botswana "reiterates its position that the problems of apartheid in South Africa will not be solved by cross-border raids, murder of innocent civilians and shooting of unarmed policemen in cold blood."

"We once more condemn those acts of state terrorism by the South African government."

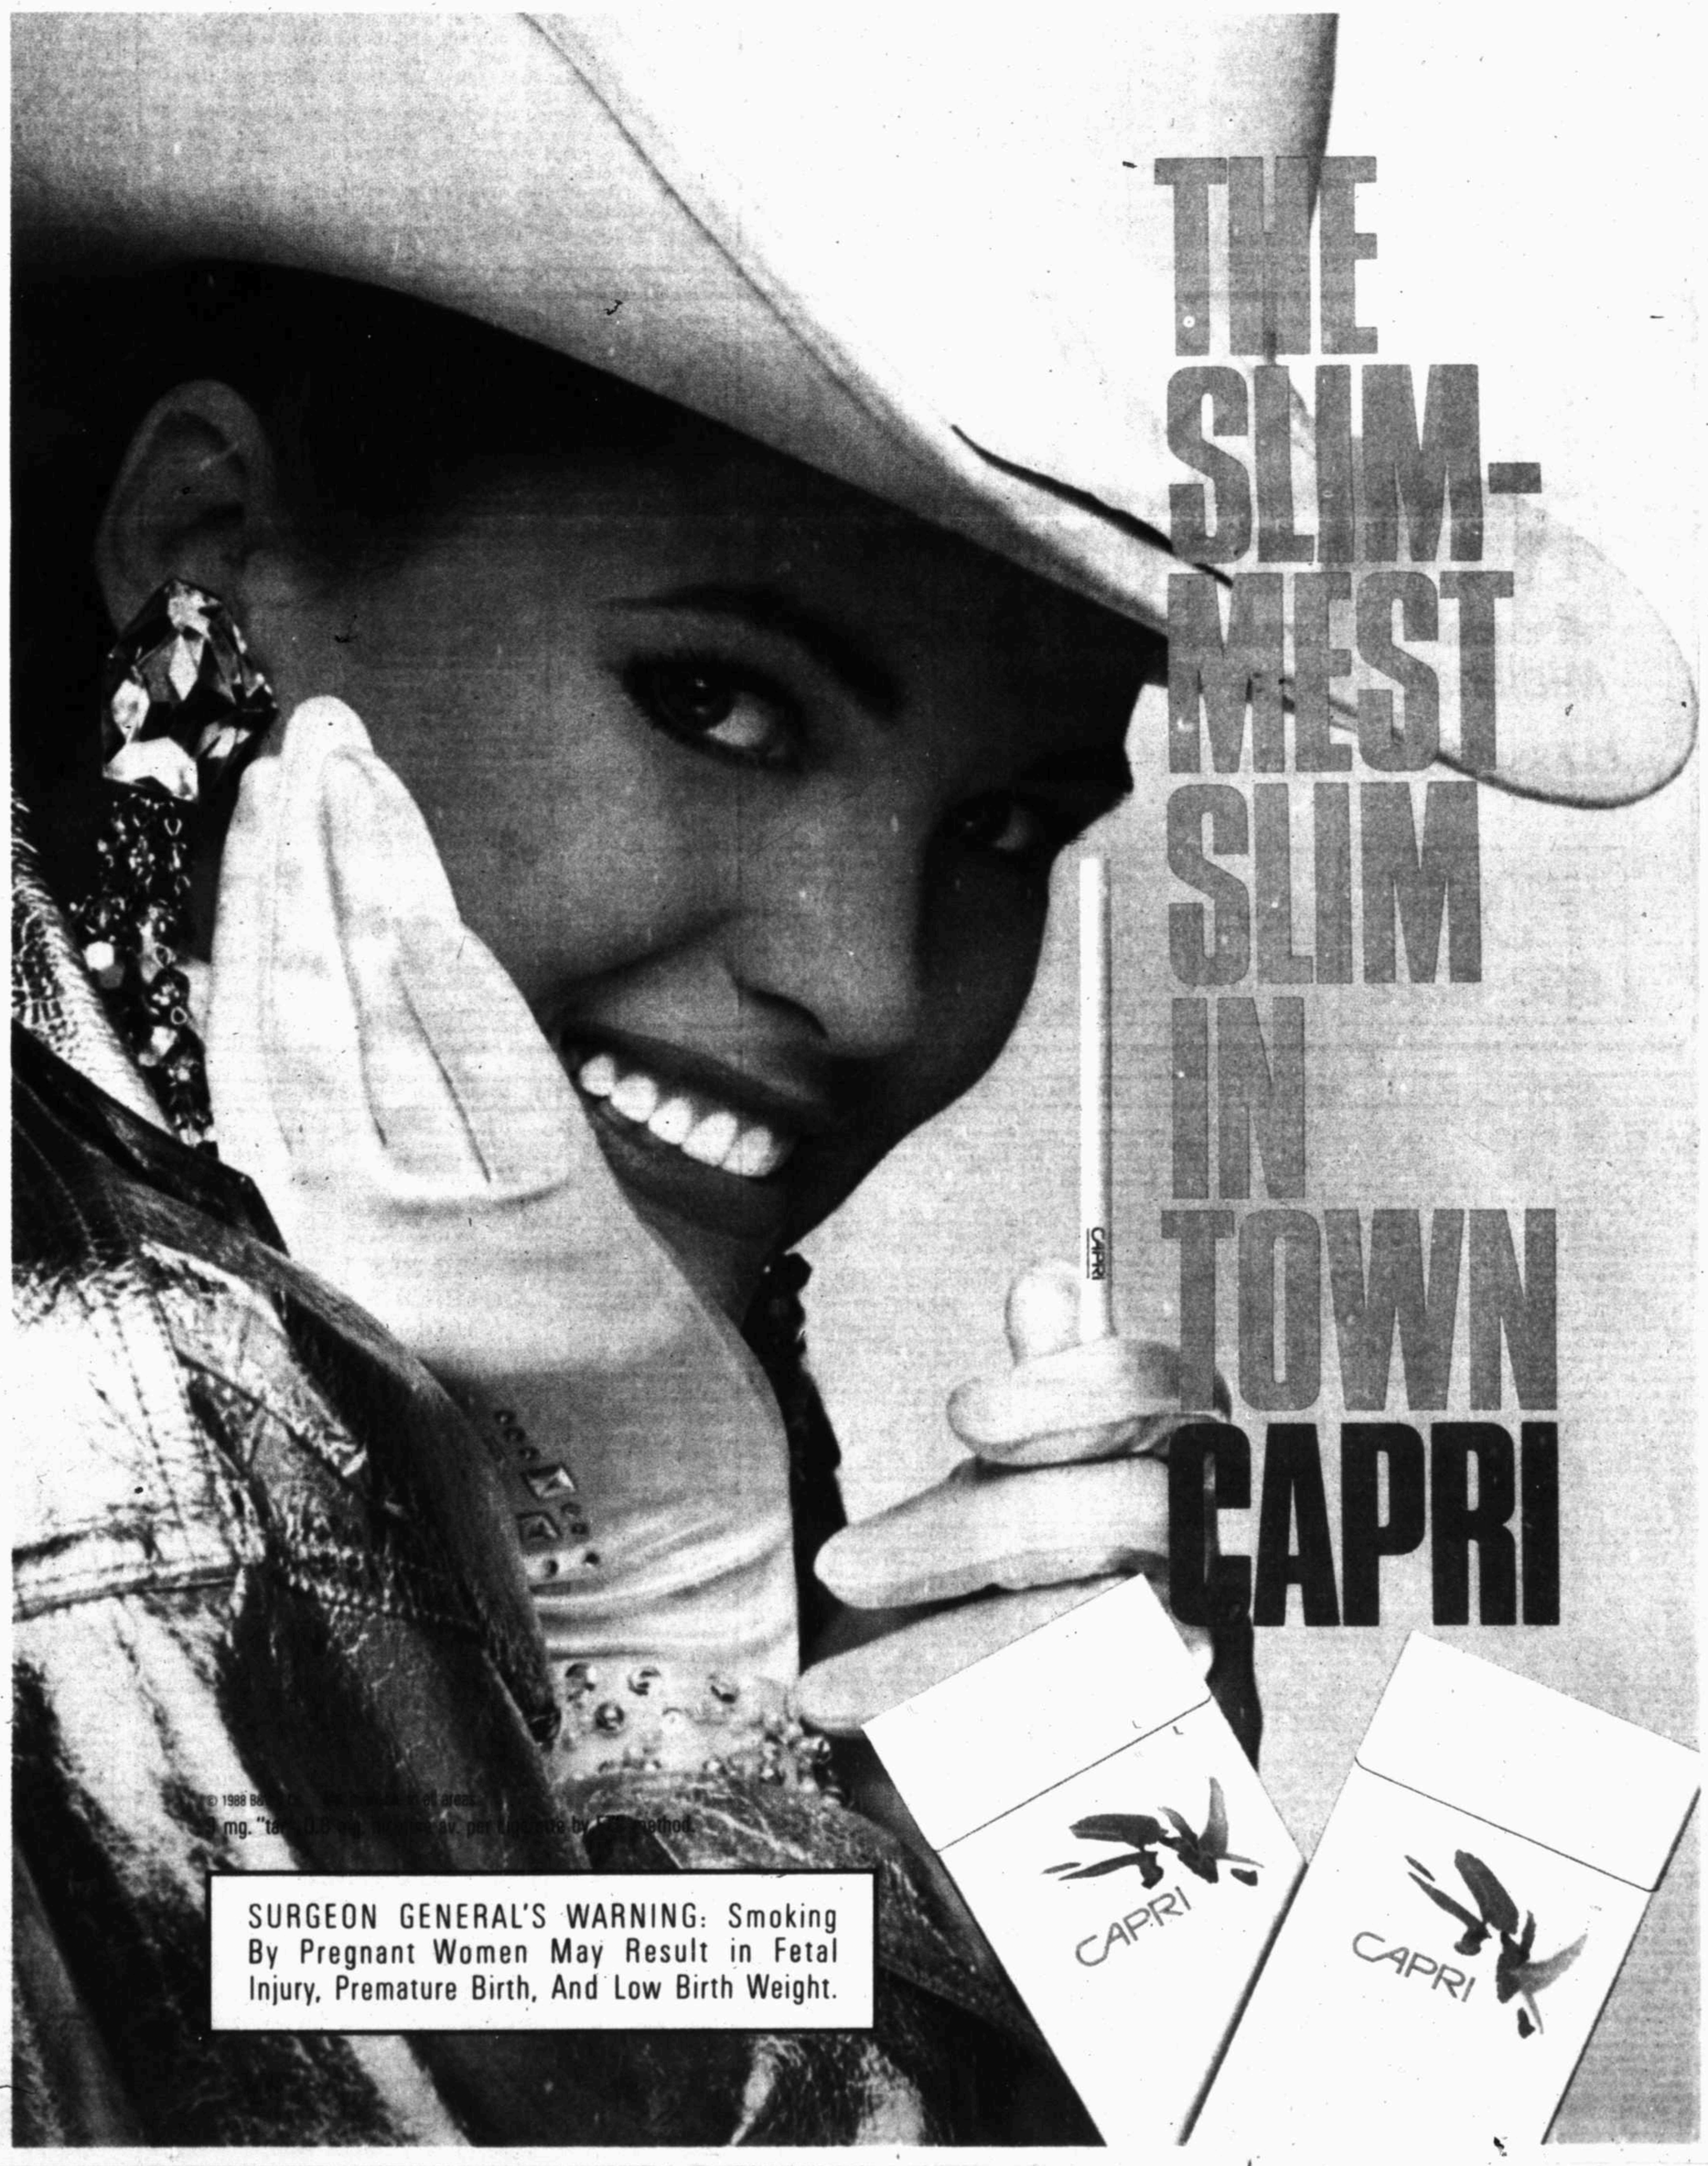

South African commandos have conducted several raids in Gaborone against people they say are black nationalist guerrillas using the Botswana capital as a staging post for sabotage attacks in South Africa.

South African soldiers killed three women and one man in March when they raided a house and waged a gun battle on the edge of the city.

South Africans killed one person in a May 1986 attack against alleged hideouts of ANC guerrillas. Fifteen were killed in a June, 1985, South African raid.

Botswana officials have often denied the presence of ANC guerrillas, although the government is sympathetic to the ANC's aims.

The ANC seeks to end the apartheid system of race-segregation, to install a one-man, one-vote political system and to establish government controls over major economic sectors.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Philippine rebels captured

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Government troops captured a communist rebel leader and 40 other guerrillas and dismantled a major base used by insurgents to launch raids on the main island of Luzon, military officials said today.

Gen. Renato de Villa, the army chief of staff, presented the captured guerrilla leader at a news conference and identified him as Francisco Pascual, 41, a member of the central committee of the Communist Party of the Philippines. De Villa refused to identify the others or say where they were being held.

He told reporters that Pascual and 40 other rebels were arrested in raids Monday night in the northern province of Pangasinan, about 110 miles northwest of Manila.

Six die in Rangoon battles

RANGOON, Burma (AP) — The government imposed a curfew in the capital today after at least six people were killed in street battles between thousands of protesters and riot police.

Government radio said in a nighttime broadcast that the restrictions began immediately and would last until August 19. The curfew runs from 6 p.m. to 6 a.m.

Witnesses said thousands of students and other protesters fought stone-throwing duels with police after authorities closed a Rangoon university where students had staged peaceful anti-government rallies.

"Five police personnel were killed, and 26 others seriously wounded as a result of an attack by unruly mob armed with swords, sticks and catapults," the broadcast said. "A member of the mob also was killed and several others wounded."

Pravda attacks Stalin

MOSCOW (AP) — A Communist Party newspaper has heaped more criticism on the late dictator Josef Stalin, faulting him for signing a friendship pact with Nazi Germany and hobbling the army with purges just before World War II.

Radical Korean students demand reunification

IMJINGAK, South Korea (AP) — Hundreds of radical students marched at the border today to demand reunification of North and South Korea and the withdrawal of American troops.

About 350 students from Seoul's Konkuk University held their peaceful protest in front of steel barriers and barbed wire that block a bridge leading to the border with communist North Korea.

"Drive out Yankees who hinder unification!" students shouted as they marched near the bridge after a ceremony at which they prayed for reunification of the peninsula.

In Seoul, a survey indicated that anti-U.S. sentiment was growing among South Koreans and went beyond radical student protesters.

According to the survey, 16 percent of 2,000 eligible voters questioned said they dislike the United States, compared to 3 percent in 1984.

As the students protested today, an American soldier guarded the bridge, and about 20 South Korean policemen and soldiers in plainclothes patrolled nearby.

The bridge is the only civilian access linking the Koreas. U.S. forces help control the southern side of the Demilitarized Zone across from Imjingak and roads to the truce site of Panmunjom, which straddles the border.

The students demanded withdrawal of about 42,000 U.S. troops stationed in South Korea under a mutual defense pact to help deter North Korean attacks. The protesters contend the United States enforces partition of the peninsula.

They also denounced the blocking June 10 of a planned march to the North Korean border. Fierce street clashes broke out that day when riot police fired tear gas to block thousands of students trying to march to Panmunjom for talks with North Korean students.

During today's border rally, student leaders called for dialogue with North Korean students to help form a unified Korean team for the Summer Olympics, opening Sept. 17 in Seoul.

In the poll, at least 37 percent of those surveyed said they like the United States, down from 70 percent.

Haitian streets filled with people day after general seized power

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Haitians ventured back into the streets today after a military coup catapulted Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy back to power after four months of civilian rule and ended hopes for democracy.

Some telephone service was restored after being cut Monday. The streets filled with cars and people in the morning after being nearly deserted the previous morning.

Scattered gunfire was heard in the streets overnight and into the dawn, but there were no signs of factional fighting. Soldiers have often fired their weapons into the air to frighten civilians from the street since the coup.

Namphy re-established military rule by decree and named his own government Monday just hours after rallying troops, who seized the national palace and quickly ousted President Leslie Manigat's 4-month-old civilian government.

The ex-president, a 57-year-old former political science professor, was expelled with his family to the Dominican Republic, which shares the Caribbean island of Hispaniola with Haiti.

He issued a statement through a spokesman saying he was unhurt and would soon speak to reporters. Dominican government sources said Manigat might travel to Venezuela, where he had been offered political asylum and lived in exile in the late 1970s.

Monday, some citizens and officials predicted a bleak future for the Western Hemisphere's poorest country.

Most businesses and schools in this capital of 1 million people were closed. There were no reported protests in this arid, mountainous country of 6 million people.

"This means the end of democracy. We are going to have to live under a military dictatorship," a bus driver said hours after Namphy expelled Manigat.

"The army has taken power. This is a government of murderers and machetes," said a former Haitian diplomat, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The coup dashed hopes for democracy promised by Namphy after popular unrest toppled the Duvalier family's 29-year dictatorship.

The general had led the three-man junta that ruled Haiti after Jean-Claude Duvalier fled exile in 1986. The junta stepped aside after Manigat was elected Jan. 17 in fraud-riddled balloting run by the military and boycotted by most Haitians.

When a rift occurred last week in the military, Manigat sided with a powerful officer whom Namphy had tried to strip of his 700-man command. Manigat retired Namphy as military chief and placed him under house arrest.

But loyal soldiers freed Namphy Sunday and, after brief gun and grenade battles, Haiti's 7,000-man army united solidly behind the 55-year-old career soldier. It was not known if there were casualties in the fighting.

Neither the Haitian public nor democratic-minded politicians publicly expressed support for Manigat's government.

10-year-old Arab boy shot by Israeli civilian in West Bank

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israelis shot and wounded two Arab youths today, including a 10-year-old boy who was shot by a civilian firing at a stone-throwing mob in the West Bank, hospital officials said.

Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin said all Israelis, not just the army, must defend the occupied territories, and he said he was right to encourage civilians to open fire on Arabs armed with firebombs.

Rabin also said that a Jewish farmer found stabbed and bludgeoned to death Monday should have carried a weapon. Police blamed Palestinian activists for the slaying.

The army confirmed an Israeli civilian was stoned in Nablus, in the West Bank. It said the man told the military that he fired in the air to disperse the attackers. Army officials said they had no reports of injuries as a result of the shooting.

Officials at Al Ittihad Hospital in Nablus said the boy was shot in the leg.

The second reported injury involved a 16-year-old Arab who was shot in the shoulder during a clash with troops in the village of Burka near Nablus, said officials at Al Ittihad.

The officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, quoted Burka residents as saying the army clamped a curfew on the village and rounded up all men over 16 at the local schoolyard.

The army confirmed a Burka resident was injured in a clash with troops, but it would not provide further details.

"We are in a prolonged war of independence...and everyone has to be aware, prepared, equipped," Rabin said today.

He spoke a day after Eli Cohen, 33, was found dead in a field near Moshav Shekev, a communal farm inside Israel and bordering the West Bank.

Cohen was the fourth Israeli to be killed during the Arab uprising in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, which began Dec. 8. At least 210 Palestinians have died.

Rabin, in an interview with The Associated Press, said he was "really sorry" that Cohen "did not have the weapon that we would have hoped he would."

"I believe the whole results would be entirely different. He would be alive today," said Rabin, who has been criticized for encouraging Israelis to carry weapons to defend themselves against Arabs.

Cohen left home Sunday evening to spray insecticide on his vineyard and never returned, said farm spokeswoman Etti Elinsky. His body was found nearby Monday.
