ROCKY ROAD TO FACE CONGRESS IN SHORT TERM

G. O. P. Insurgents Still A Problem As Solons Meet Monday

BUSY DAYS PLANNED

House and Senate Both To Seek to Put Through Needed Measures

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—With the breach between the regular and insurgent republican organizations still further widened, the sixty-eighth congress, which already has established a record as the most turbulent in the nation's history, will reconvene tomorrow for its short and final session.

In the three months intervening before March 4, efforts will be made to put through some important general legislation in addition to the annual appropriation bills, but with little apparent prospect of success.

La Follette Still a Problem

The key to the whole situation is still held by the insurgents, whose recognized leader, Senator La Follette of Wisconsin and his three chief supporters in the senate, have been read out of the party councils by party leaders in the senate. Whether they will undertake reprisals for this action remains to be developed.

One thing is certain, the last chapter on this subject has not yet been written. Senators who have disagreed with this action of their republican colleagues, intend to express their views when the senate is called upon to act on the report of the republican committee covering the new assignments to standing committees to fill vacancies caused by the death of several senators during the last six months.

Leaders of the house republicans have no present intention of following the lead of the senate organization by reading out of their councils Representative John M. Nelson of Wisconsin and others who supported Senator La Follette in his campaign as the independent candidate for the presidency.

Wheeler Seems Safe

There is no occasion for the democrats of the senate to meet in party conference and some of the minority leaders have stated that none would be called solely to consider the question of reading from the party Senator La Follette's running mate, Senator K. Wheeler, democrat, Montana.

There will be little activity in either house until after receipt of President Coolidge's second annual message, which, under present plans will be transmitted by messenger on Wednesday and read in the house and senate by their respective clerks.

Early attention will be given by the house to the annual supply measure, the first of which, that for the interior department probably will be reported on Tuesday. The appropriations committee has the work of a number of others under way and Chairman Madden hopes to get them all out before the first of the new year.

While the house is thus engaged, the senate, under plans of the majority leaders will take up such general legislation as the steering committee shall deem of first importance.

Farm aid legislation is one thing that leaders in both houses are anxious to put through but early action is not in prospect as congress probably will desire to await the report of the farm committee appointed by President Coolidge, which already has begun its work.

Pullman Rates Up

Amendments to the transportation act make up other legislation for which there will be a demand from all sides in both houses. Bill affecting freight rates and the Pullman surcharges and providing for the abolition of the railroad labor board, already are pending in one house or the other and there will be determined efforts to bring them to the front.

In the house, the Barkley-Howell bill to abolish this board has the right of way, but since there will be no legislative action there Monday, the measure will have to go over for two weeks under the rules.

The president's veto of the postal salary increase bill also is pending in the senate and here probably will be a move for early action.

TWO GOVERNORS TO DINE

Neff of Texas and M'Rae of Arkansas Guests At Texarkana

TEXARKANA, Texas, Nov. 30.—Governor Pat M. Neff of Texas, and Governor Thomas C. McRae of Arkansas, will be guests of honor at a banquet tendered by the Texarkana chamber of commerce tomorrow night. In the afternoon Governor Neff and members of the Texas state park board and state highway commission will participate in the formal dedication of the McCartney bridge, a new $130,000 structure connecting Bowie and Cass counties, spanning the Sulphur river on Texas state highway No. 47.

COTTON MARKET MODERATE.

Little Activity Shown at New Orleans In Past Week.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 30.—The past week in cotton has been a period of only moderate activity and limited fluctuations by comparison with most of the weeks of the present season that have gone before. While the January position at one time during the week traded as high as 24.64 and at another time as low as 23.55, but the final closing price on Saturday of 23.91 was only 33 points below the closing of the previous Saturday.

KILLS WIFE'S ADMIRER

EL PASO, Nov. 30.—William Love, El Paso butcher, hit Tecio Paz, 67, who is said to have been an admirer of Love's wife, in the head twice with a shovel here today killing Paz instantly. The killing took place in Love's back yard, and Paz's body fell headlong into an open abandoned pit six feet deep.

Pictures Travel Through Thin Air as Radio Tests For Photography Succeed

LONDON, Nov. 30.—(AP)—What is claimed to have been the first demonstration in sending photographs by wireless from England to the United States was given this afternoon. A new system developed by R. H. Ranger of the engineering department of the Radio Corporation of America, was used.

There was no receiving demonstration, because the new receiving apparatus has not yet reached here. The Ranger apparatus for sending arrived two weeks ago and has been tested successfully each night since. Sixteen photographs were transmitted today in eight hours.

The photographs broadcast were of Frank B. Kellogg, the American ambassador, the Prince of Wales, Premier Baldwin, Austen Chamberlain, the British foreign secretary; Queen Mary, Dowager Queen Alexandra and late news pictures taken in London.

Coming in Beautifully

This afternoon a wireless message was received from New York saying the pictures were coming beautifully.

The sending apparatus which is remarkably simple, consists of a transparent drum containing a small high powered arc light.

The photographs were fastened outside the drum facing a lense and as the drum revolves, half turning in each direction slowly the box with the lens moves at a rate of 64 horizontal moves per inch in front of the drum, the photographs being recorded through the lens on photo-electric cell

Light Rays Vary

The impression on the cell, varying with the intensity or weakness of the light cast through the photograph and transmitted to the cell through the lens are then automatically transformed into wireless rays, which finally are transmitted across the Atlantic as dots and dashes, the method used in sending ordinary messages.

The receiving is carried out by means of a pen or pencil directed by radio, the motor here and in New York being synchronized.

PICTURES COME IN THROUGH THIN AIR

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—A portrait of the president of the United States was put on the air in London today and in 20 minutes was reproduced in New York.

As the finished picture was removed from an oscillating cylinder in the offices of the Radio Corporation of America, the jiggling stylus which had drawn it, remained poised for a moment. Then there was a buzz, the stylus perked its head this way and that, and putting its inky nose to the paper, traced out a panel in which it embroidered these words, from an old Chinese proverb:

One vs. 10,000.

"One picture is worth 10,000 words."

Again the stylus rested for a moment and again it resumed dancing upon that cylinder until as the hours passed, it perfected the likeness of Minister Stanley Baldwin, Secretary of State Hughes, the Prince of Wales, Queen Mother Alexandra, Owen D. Young, showed H. M. S. Reclamation aground in the Tees river and finish of the Oxford-Cambridge relay races, and topped off the performance with an artistic flourish by reproducing a mural from the Royal Academy.

California Field Suffers Big Loss In Oil Well Fire

Santa Fe Springs Territory Swept By Disastrous Blaze Sunday

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 30.—One death and property damage approaching $1,000,000 was caused by a fire that broke out in the Santa Fe Springs oil field southeast of here early today. At dusk tonight the blaze was still out of control after having destroyed eight derricks and several small tanks.

The fire originated in the boiler house of a derrick belonging to the Belleview Oil Syndicate, oil company officials said, with the breaking of a fuel oil feeder line. The fuel line immediately burst into flames at the break and within a few minutes the blaze was spreading from the Belleview property to adjacent derricks, which in that section of the field stand almost shoulder to shoulder.

The companies which early tonight had suffered loss in the fire included, aside from the Belleview syndicate, the Mohawk Oil Co., the United States Royalties Co., and the McIntyre and Cox properties.

The one man who lost his life was not burned to death, according to physicians but died of heart disease aggravated by the shock and excitment of the fire. He was J. Mills, 50, a watchman stationed close to the Belleview derrick.

As darkness fell the oil field companies, assisted by firemen from all nearby communities abandoned attempts to save the 12 derricks immediately surrounding the Belleview and Concentrated their efforts on preventing a disastrous spread of flames to other sections of the field.

THIEF IN GRAFTON HOME

Gets $2 in Change and Jewelry; Does Not Molest Silverware

Burglars entered the home of Rev. and Mrs. Nat F. Grafton at 1009 Bluff street early last night while Dr. Grafton was delivering his usual Sunday night sermon at the First Presbyterian church, and after making a thorough search of the house managed to get away with something like $2 in change, a gold pencil inscribed with Dr. Grafton's name, a silver pencil, a Masonic ring and a wrist watch and bracelet. Silverware and clothes were not molested beyond being scattered over the floor. Other jewelry that was handy was not taken.

It is supposed that the thief, whoever he was, knew something of a special collection that had been taken at the church that morning and was in hopes of finding the sum at the pastor's house while he was absent at church. Dr. Grafton had placed the money in safekeeping earlier in the day, however, and no loss was sustained.

PRELIMS FOR BIG SCRAP

Boxers Matched For Christmas Relief Fund in Madison Square

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—Johnny Wilson, former world's middle weight champion will meet Tiger Flowers, Atlanta negro and Luis Vicentini, hard hitting Chilean lightweight will oppose Tommy O'Brien, of Milwaukee, in two 10-round bouts preliminary to the light heavyweight battle between Tommy Gibbons and Kid Norfolk at the Christmas fund benefit show in Madison Square Garden December 8.

ANTI-FASCISTS MEET

Many Gather to Protest Rule of Italy By Mussolini.

MILAN, Nov. 30—(AP)—Seventy-four members of the chamber of deputies and 99 representatives of various opposition committees from different towns in northern Italy attended an anti-fasciati conference here.

Filippo Turati, leader of the intransigeant socialists, was unanimously chosen chairman of the conference.

Underworld Plot Blamed in Death Of K.C. Officer

Man and Woman Sought After Detective Is Found Shot to Death

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 30.—Lawrence I. Hatfield, 26, an assistant superintendent of the Kansas City branch of the Pinkerton Detective agency, was found mortally wounded in his motor car on an unfrequented road south of here this afternoon.

Hatfield had been shot four times. All the shots were fired through the rear curtain of the car. He died without naming his assailant.

Thomas C. Vest and his wife who were motoring, found Hatfield. Vest said a small coupe bearing a Kansas license tag passed him just before he came upon the scene where Hatfield was shot. He said a few minutes later he saw the coupe parked near Hatfield's car. A man and a woman entered the coupe and drove off, he said.

Other motorists reported having seen a woman driving with Hatfield. Hunters who heard the shots said they saw a man and woman drive away from the scene in the coupe.

Was Not Robbed

Hatfield apparently had not been robbed. He had been active in investigating several recent holdups, including the robbery of the Peoples Bank of North Kansas City. Police expressed the belief that he had been slain as the result of an underworld plot.

NO APPOINTMENTS YET

Fergusons Giving Careful Attention to All Applicants For Jobs.

AUSTIN, Texas, Nov. 30.—The Ferguson slate of appointments for the new administration may not be completed until after the first of the year, James E. Ferguson said while here Friday.

Governor-elect Miriam Ferguson and James E. Ferguson, her husband, do not yet know whom are to be appointed, he said.

They haven't gone over all the applications and endorsements yet, he said; but are considering every one.

NOTED HUMORIST DEAD

Writer and Composer Expires Sunday in His New York Home

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—Thomas J. Gray, 30, humorist playwright, song writer and for the last few years associated with Charlie Chaplin, "Buster" Keaton and Harold Lloyd in the production of moving picture comedies died today in his home here. He had been ill since June.

Gray wrote several popular songs and was the author of Ned Wayburn's "Town Topics Revue."

YOUTHS ARRESTED

Upon the complaint of two high school girls two young men were taken into custody last night by police officers and in default of a bond remanded to jail to spend the night. The girls complained that the two men had followed them for some distance and forced their attentions upon them.

Both of the men are known to the police force, one of them having been lately married and his wife having already requested that he be locked up every night so that she would know where he was. The case will come up before corporation court this morning.

WHITE HOUSE OPEN

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—The custom of receiving officials, diplomats and the general public at the White House on New Year's day is to be continued by President and Mrs. Coolidge.

The program of receptions and dinners at the White House for the social season of 1924-25, made public today, provides a place for the usual New Year's reception although presidents in recent years have been urged to abandon the custom in the interest of conserving their health.

CAIRO WATCHES BRITISH FORCES GROW STEADILY

More Troops Arrive At Principal Egyptian City Sunday

SITUATION QUIET

Reports to Foreign Office At London Indicates No More Uprisings

CAIRO, Egypt, Nov. 30.—(AP)—The fourth battalion of Egyptian infantry arrived here today from Khartum and will be confined in the Abbassia barracks for a week.

No further arrests took place yesterday. The thirty-four men who previously had been taken into custody were interrogated by the public prosecutor. A delegation of members of the chamber of deputies has protested to the prosecutor and the liberal-constitutional party has published a manifesto protesting against members of the chamber.

Meeting Held.

A meeting was held at the ministry of interior today, presided over by an under-secretary at which measures were discussed for preserving order. The meeting also went exhaustingly into the matter of the assassination of Sirdar Stack and the progress of the inquiry into the assassination.

A rumor was current yesterday that the British authorities had called the attention of the Egyptian governt. of lack of results of the murder inquiry, although eight days had elapsed since the sirdar was shot. The manifesto of the liberal-constitutional party says, among other things, that the British government should have waited for the outcome of the inquiry into the murder of the sirdar instead of displaying strength against a nation "whose sole fault is to claim its rights and to attack a nation's independence for the acts of a few criminals."

STILL UNABLE TO FIX BLAME FOR MUTINY

LONDON, Nov. 30.—(AP)—The situation in Egypt is described as being "in good order" in dispatches to the foreign office today from Viscount Allenby, British high commissioner in Egypt. Official despatches from the Sudan likewise report conditions easier and satisfactory.

Nothing, however, yet indicates the real origin of the Khartoum mutiny which took several hours to suppress. By that time the building in which the mutineers took refuge was in ruins from gun fire, and the mutineers separated into small parties.

Some of them escaped to the surrounding towns, while others were arrested by the soldiers.

The government is still of the opinion that it will not be necessary to employ force, but the steady reinforcement of British troops in Egypt continues.

KORETZ ON WAY TO CHICAGO

Leaves New York in Custody of Two Assistant District Attorneys.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—Leo Koretz, wanted in Chicago in connection with alleged stock swindles totalling approximately $2,000,000, left here for Chicago this afternoon in company of two assistant state's attorneys for Illinois.

The party left at 2:45 o'clock on the Broadway limited of the Pennsylvania railroad. They arrived here this morning on the liner Carolina from Halifax.

STORM WARNING ISSUED

Severe Weather Expected Along Atlantic Coast Monday

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30. — The weather bureau today issued the following storm warning:

"Advisory 11 a. m., northwest storm warnings continued Block Island to East Port, Maine, and northwest storm warnings from Delaware breakwater to Block Island. Disturbances over Ohio will increase in intensity and move eastward causing fresh to strong, southwest winds this afternoon, shifting to strong west and northwest winds tonight."

WRECK DRIFTS TO SHORE

CUTTYHUNK, Mass., Nov. 30. — Wreckage, evidence of possibl tragedy, which overtook some vessel in the storm which swept the New England coast early today, was washed ashore near the Cuttyhunk coast guard station this morning. The wreckage, consisting chiefly of portions of a pilot house and deck house, might have come from a boat which was the victim of a collision rather than the storm, it was said.

A chart box bearing the lettering "H. S. Camden" was among the wreckage found strewn on the beach.

Both Want To Handle His Case

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—The unsual spectacle of government counsel appearing on both sides of a controversy is scheduled for tomorrow in the supreme court.

The situation has developed in the Philip Grossman case. Solicitor General Beck, by special direction of the president, will contend that the executive was clearly within his constitutional powers when he granted Grossman a pardon, and Amos C. Miller and F. Bruce Johnstone, special assistants to the attorney general will attempt to sustain the position taken by the federal district judges at Chicago that Grossman, having been sentenced by them for contempt, could not be pardoned by the president.

Grossman was convicted on a charge of violating the prohibition law and a padlock injunction was issued against his place of business in Chicago. Later he was brought back into court charged with having violated the injunction.

Over 3 Millions Expended By GOP In Last Election

$3,063,952 Is Total Put Out; Has Surplus of $355,264 Now

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—The recent campaign cost the republican national committee $3,063,952, Chairman Butler announced tonight, adding that a surplus of $355,264 which compares with the deficit of about $2,000,000 incurred in 1920, remained in the treasury after all expenditures had been met.

"The campaign was financed by 90,005 individual contributors," said Mr. Butler. "Of this number, 83,290 made individual contributions of less than $100."

"While the total amount collected was $4,359,478.82, approximately a million dollars of this amount $956,525.11 was collected by the national committee in certain states, but only in its capacity as agent for the local state committees, and this money was immediately returned to the committees in the states in which it was collected, no part being available for the national committee budget expenditures.

"Thus for the actual expenditures of the national committee, there was collected and made available $3,402,952.71, which with bank interest and small balances of $16,263.58, made a grand total of $3,419,217.20."

More Die In Crime Wave

Chicago Cop Killed As Bank Cashier Mistakes Him For Robber

CHICAGO, Nov. 30.—Four men, one a police officer, were shot to death and two patrolmen seriously wounded here in the last 24 hours.

High Stewart, cashier for the West Highlands State band is being held pending the outcome of the inquest over the body of Detective William Perrin who was shot dead by Stewart in front of the latter's house. Detectives David Van Booven and Frank Warburton also were wounded when the bank cashier opened fire on a police crime squad which he mistook for a band of holdup men who have been terrorizing residents of the far south side by the perpertation of many robberies and assaults upon women who have been kidnaped from their escorts.

AIRPLANE BOATS COMPLETE

Two Big Ships Converted to Transports; Will Build Others

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—Completion of the navy's two big airplane carriers through conversion of the battle cruisers Lexington and Saratoga as provided by the Washington naval limitation treaty will be delayed beyond July 1, 1926 in the opinion of Rear Admiral J. D. Beuret, chief of the bureau of construction and repair.

"The present rate of progress is not satisfactory," Admiral Beuret's annual report states, "and the bureaus concerned are investigating the steps necessary to avoid further delay."

Texas Aggies Can't Get Started at Chicago But They Made the Winners

CHICAGO, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Five men from Nebraska, the team from the University of Nebraska, were awarded first honors today in the collegiate livestock judging contest of the 25th International Live Stock Exposition.

The cornhuskers, in competition with teams from 23 other state universities and agricultural colleges throughout the United States and Canada in the world's premier stock show, came out with a final score for all classes of 4,386, out of a possible 5,000. The score was the composite of the five men for individual competition in horses, cattle, sheep, and hogs. It is the highest score ever made in team competition in the intercollegiate division, 55 points better than last year's winners, the previous record, established by Iowa State college.

Missouri won second place in the team standing for all class scores with 4,231, and Ohio state was third with 4,220.

Oklahoma A. & M. was fourth with 4,214 points. Texas A. & M. was 21st with 3,902 points.

In the individual all-class standings, F. A. Hatcher, Oklahoma A. & M. registered 883.

W. W. Derrick, instructor in animal husbandry at the University of Nebraska, has coached the winning team. Mr. Derrick was a graduate of Texas A. & M. in 1915.

MANY FROM U. S. SEE CALLES AS HE TAKES OATH

New President of Mexico Inducted Into Office At Noon Sunday

25,000 SEE CEREMONY

Many Visitors From Texas And Other U. S. Points In Mexico City

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 30.—(AP)—General Plutarco Elias Calles, today at noon took the oath as president of the republic of Mexico.

The great national stadium in which the ceremony took place was crowded with a vast assembly which taxed the seating capacity of 25,000. Brilliantly uniformed cadets from San Jacinto military academy with an infantry regiment guarded the entrance to the enclosed platform where General Calles took the oath.

High Officials There.

Fronting the presidential stand were platforms occupied by the members of congress, the diplomatic missions, justices of the supreme court, state governors and high political and military officials. A portion of the arena was reserved at the special request of the retiring president, General Obregon, for more than 600 crippled soldiers, many of whom were victims of the latest revolution.

On request of President-elect Calles, General Obregon accompanied him from the palace to the stadium and occupied a seat with him on the platform. Colonel Filiberto Gomez, president of the lower house, administered the oath of office.

James Rockwell Sheffield, the American ambassador, was unable to attend on account of illness, but the United States was represented by H. F. Arthur Schofield, counsellor of the embassy. Other countries represented by ministers with special inaugural credentials were France, Spain and Japan.

U. S. Labor on Hand.

The most commented upon labor delegation was that from the American Federation of Labor, headed by its president, Samuel Gompers. This delegation consisted of about 300 members and occupied a reserved section. Similar arrangements were made for seating the many excursionists from New Orleans, Laredo, San Antonio, St. Louis, Little Rock, Houston and Dallas, the foreign office, which was charged with the arrangements for the inaugural delegations from the United States estimating the total number of American delegates at nearly one thousand.

FEARS HER BROTHERS LOST

Believes They May Be Ones Burned to Death in Jail

WACO, Nov. 30.—Fear that two boys who were burned to death in a jail at Katy, Texas, 23 miles from Houston, Friday night, were Lois and Lloyd Shelby, 19 and 16, respectively, brothers of Miss Jessie Shelby, Waco, was expressed tonight by Miss Shelby. The two boys have been working in Oklahoma and Kansas oil fields for the last three months, Miss Shelby says, and wrote her a week ago that they were to pass through Waco en route to the south Texas oil fields.

A. P. MEN MEET IN AUSTIN

Managing Editors of Texas Papers Gather For Conference.

AUSTIN, Texas, Nov. 30.—Managing editors of Associated Press papers in Texas were entertained today at "Perry Winkle," an outing lodge eight miles south of Austin, belonging to E. H. Perry, cotton dealer. A barbecue was tendered the editors, followed by speeches by Edmunds Travis of the Austin Statesman, Ray Baumgardner of the Associated Press, A. L. Perkins, Galveston Tribune; W. D. Hornaday, University of Texas, and Henry Ellis of the Denison Herald.

SHERMAN BOY IS KILLED

Pinned to Post By Auto As He Darts In Front Of It.

SHERMAN, Texas, Nov. 30.—B. T. Hill, Jr., small son of B. T. Hill of this city, was killed this afternoon when accidentally struck by an automobile, while playing football with other youths. Young Hill had run across the street to retrieve the ball and on his way back, ran in front of an automobile driven by James Long.

The driver, in an effort to avoid a collision, swerved his car and crashed into a telephone post, pinning the boy between the post and the car.

ITALY MOURNS FOR PUCCINI

Chamber of Deputies Takes Recognition of Passing of Great Composer

ROME, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Premier Mussolini announced the death of Giacomo Puccini the composer, at the close of the sitting of the chamber of deputies late last night saying that the passing of the maestro was the occasion for mourning not only on the part of the Italian people but of the whole of the civilized world. He requested the chamber to pay tribute to the memory of Puccini. The chamber voted to send a message of condolence to the family.

COACH TO RESIGN

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 30.—T. E. J. W. s, director of athletics at the University of Wisconsin, said tonight he probably would submit his resignation as director to President E. A. Birgetw prior to a conference of the board of regents athletic commission with the athletic counsel tomorrow night.

FAVOR NEW CONFERENCE

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 30.—Permanent organization of the national conference for progressive political action, along lines similar to the Cleveland conference which nominated Robert M. LaFollette for president last July, was favored by the executive committee of the Wisconsin conference which met here today.

8 Hurt as Ambulance In Ft. Worth Crashes Into Speeding Auto

Hot Dogs Pay Well

Samuel Shanker, "hot dog" vender in Boston, was hailed into court on complaint of a restaurant in front of which he cried his wares, and fined $3. Shanker went to the owner of the building and bought it for $11,000, every cent of which he made in the "hot dog" business. Couldn't afford to lose that spot," he explained.

Carrying One Injured Man to Hospital, It Gets 7 Other Persons En Route.

FORT WORTH, Nov. 30.—Eight persons were hurt, two seriously when an ambulance, en route to a hospital with a severely injured victim of another automobile accident, crashed with a sedan and turned over at Seventh and Throckmorton streets this afternoon.

Clyde Holden, 23 years old, Riverside, the automobile victim whom the ambulance was taking to the hospital, is in All Saints hospital near death. All but three of the injured were permitted to leave the hospital after emergency treatment.

Others Hurt

The other two now in the hospital are: O. H. Granthan, Mineral Wells, head injuries, at All Saints.

Mrs. Grantha, back injury, at St. Joseph's infirmary.

George Mahan driver of the ambulance was cut on one hand. He said a policeman had signalled him the right of way.

Driver Injured

Mahan, responding to a call at 503 East Belknap street picked up young Holden, his sister, Lois Holden and Ella Kurtz, all of Riverside. They had been driving with Tommie Smith, Riverside; garage employe and Clyde was riding on the running board holding to the windshield support. The support gave way, his sister said and he fell into the street, his head striking first, inflicting a deep wound at the base of the brain.

24 Parties Seek Votes As German Elections Near

8 Major and 16 Unattached Groups Qualify For a Place On Ballot

BERLIN, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Germany next Sunday will elect a new reichstag. The eight major parties and sixteen non-partisan and unattached groups have qualified for entry on the official ballot. The political party leaders anticipate there will be a falling off of several million votes next Sunday, as compared with the balloting last May, of 29,000,000 votes and a reduction of the number of deputies in the new reichstag by at least 50, as the proportionate system of voting all on mandate to every sixty thousand votes.

The three liberal parties—socialists clericals and democrats—are making the issue one of democratic principles by appealing to the voters to stand by the republic and the Weimar constitution. They also are making an effective bid for votes on the plea that the government's course in accepting the London agreement has been amply vindicated in the progressive improvement in the nation's economics since September 1, and that any deviation from present policies, both with respect to the government's internal and foreign program not only would incur a recrudescense of economic convulsions.

The heavy gains, in mandates scored by the nationalists and communists last May and the advent in the reichstag of General Ludendorff's fascist party, with 30 deputies, primarily were the result of the widespread social unrest growing from the era of inflation.

LEAGUERS IN HARTFORD

Magnates Meet in Connecticut For Annual Conference.

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 30.—(AP)—Baseball men from coast to coast started their invasion of Hartford tonight for the annual meeting of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues which convenes here starting Tuesday and continued Wednesday and Thursday.

Several important issues will come up at this year's session, including the inauguration of a program of economy which will curtail high salaries, cut down bonuses and reduce the number of optional players on minor league teams.

TWO MORE OIL WELLS.

University Lands in Reagan County to Get More Tests.

AUSTIN, Tex., Nov. 30.—Two additional oil wells on University of Texas lands were listed in locations filed with the oil and gas division Saturday. The J. K. Hughes Developing company will drill its first well on the university lands in Reagan county, and E. V. Cole et al., filed location for their No. 1 well on the J. J. Edwards lease, university lands, in Shackelford county.

BANK DEPOSITS INCREASE

Gain of 148 Per Cent In Savings Shown In 12 Years

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—An increase of nearly 148 per cent in savings deposits in the United States during the past 12 years is reported by the American Bankers association which has just completed a survey of the subject.

In 1912 a total of $8,425,275,000 was in deposit as savings accounts in mutual savings banks, state banks, trust companies, private banks and national banks. During the ensuing 12 years this total has increased to $20,873,502,000.

DAWES WON'T SIT IN General Would Be Welcome, But He Prefers Not to Do It.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—The new Coolidge cabinet won't have the privilege of smelling Vice President Dawe's pipe as it tussles with the problems of the Coolidge administration.

General Dawes already has told the president he did not care about sitting in the cabinet, as Mr. Coolidge did when he was vice president. The president would like for General Dawes to sit with the cabinet and will welcome the vice president around the council table if he changes his mind, but it is not likely the president would draft him to such service.

Just what General Dawes' aversion to sitting with the cabinet might be is not made plain. But while visiting the president at Plymouth last summer, Mr. Dawes said he believed the old system of having the vice president just presiding over the senate was better. Possibly he feels responsibility for the administration rests with Mr. Coolidge and the president could function better just with his own personally chosen advisers sitting in on the intimate discussions of policy.

The president will talk the matter over with General Dawes again when he takes office and whatever Mr. Dawes decides then will be acceptable to the White House.

GOLD IMPORTS DECLINING

They Gain in October But Still Stay At Low Levels

NEW YORK, Nov. 30—While gold imports in October of $20,000,000 were more than three times the $6,000,000 of September, they were otherwise the smallest since April, 1923. Figures to this effect contained in the monthly review of the federal reserve bank for the second district, made public today, also show that the excess of imports for the month was $16,000,000—exports aggregating $4,000,000.

There was no British gold shipped to this country in October for the first time since January, 1920, according to the report.

IS VICTIM OF BLACKMAILERS

Famous Carver Believed Killed By Underworld Gang

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Nov. 30. That Detrick Kuldjian, nationally known wood carver, whose body was found last Monday in John Ball park with a bullet in the brain had been victimized by blackmailers previous to his death, was the substance of a statement made public tonight by James Mol, investigator from the sheriff's office who has been investigating the affair.

Four women with whom the bachelor was acquainted have been found and two of them are claimed by Mol to have figured in recent quarrels with the dead man.

CROMWELL PEAK.

50,803 Barrels Reached Nov. 14, Believed Zenith.

The upward swing of Cromwell field production, due to the drilling of the pool's northern extension, is thought to have reached its peak Friday, November 14, when the output reached 50,803 barrels. It declined gradually throughout the past week until the daily average production for the entire week amounted to 47,801 barrels. This compared with 44,988 barrels for the week previous.

According to last week's averages, the best producing lease in the field was the Sinclair-Transcontinental Bunner property in 9-10-8, which made 5,351 barrels daily from 7 wells. Waite Phillips' Hall property in 4-10-8 was second best with 4,467 barrels from 3 wells.

Output of the wells in the southern part of the field is falling rapidly. The 6 wells on the Wilcox Brunner lease in 15-10-8, for instance, are making only 213 barrels a day. Holm & Jarvis are getting but 15 barrels from their well in 21 and 3 barrels from the edger in 22-10-8. Cosden's King lease in 22-10-8 is making but 151 barrels. Gilliland's Proctor in 16-10-8, has dropped to 289 barrels.

In the northern sector, the Laurel Oil and Gas company's extensioner in 4-10-8 is still making 95 barrels. The "head" is not off the sand in this locality as it is farther south. The Tidal Osage east extensioner in 14-10-8 is still averaging 1,271 barrels daily, but despite a fair maintenance, authorities declare that the pool seems to have been fairly outlined on all sides.

MA DONATES TO STADIUM.

Helps Put First $500,000 Fund Over the Top at Austin.

AUSTIN, Texas, Nov. 30.—The name of Governor-elect Miriam A. Ferguson has been added to the roll of contributors to the Texas Memorial stadium, which was dedicated Thanksgiving day before a crowd of 38,000 persons. Mrs. Ferguson's pledge was made shortly after the game, at which she occupied a box seat as a visiting notable.

Though the first goal of $500,000 has been reached in the campaign to build the stadium, thereby assuring enough money to pay for the units now completed, another campaign will shortly be launched to raise $100,000 to add another section to the west stands and to build the two memorial towers which are provided for in the original plans.

Babson Pictures Golden Path of New Prosperity Stretching From Sunny Florida to the Kansas Wheat Fields

South To Profit Greatly By Horn Of Plenty's Favor This Season Declares Statistician On Basis Of Year's Crop Report.

BABSON PARK, Mass., Nov. 30.—Tracing the path of business recovery, Roger W. Babson, the statistician, today called attention to certain developments already apparent in five states.

"A business survey of the entire country shows a golden path of prosperity stretching from Florida diagonally northwest through Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas, and into the wheat wealth of Kansas," says Mr. Babson. This bright strip of improvement is believed by many to foretell a period of good times, not only for the particular states mentioned above where activity seems to be appearing first—but also for practically the entire south. The other southern states will undoubtedly have their turn presently; it simply happens that these four states are in some ways the first to feel a radical revival. We might fancifully call them the Four Horsement of Prosperity.

Florida Shows Vigor.

"Florida has held up through this whole era of national dullness with astonishing vigor, due, of course, in part to the influx of people and pocketbooks. Incidentally, Florida's cotton crop this year is valued at more than 50 per cent in excess of last year's crop. Alabama not only has a cotton crop valued at more than 20 per cent above last year, but also appears to be on the eve of a revival in the iron and steel industry. Moreover, the development of electric power is an unquestioned source of strength for this state. Mississippi is another state where the cotton crop should show a pronounced gain in value over last year, the increase probably exceeding 30 per cent. There are also reports of approaching improvement in the lumber industry.

"The cotton crop in Arkansas should bring a third more money than a year ago. Economic statistics show that Arkansas is displaying great strength. There is evidence that the business indications for this state make it one of the most favored localities in the country for the months ahead. Moreover, consultations with leading business men of the state show that local sentiment is exceedingly favorable for improvement. It is a locality where business men are facing the future not only with confidence and courage, but with intelligent foresight based upon accurate appraisal of conditions.

"Looking further into the future and including a large region than this one state of Arkansas alone, some observers have pictured this entire section as a great industrial site where there will be paralleled the manufacturing development already witnessed in the Atlantic states of the south. In other words, there is the prospect of a mighty industrial center toward the western parts of the south as well as the further expansion of the western zone.

"Economists point to the demonstrable fact that the south has four fundamentals of industrial success: abundant and flexible power, ample and varied materials, favorable labor conditions, and access to great and growing markets. Certainly there is a combination of conditions here which seems to assure the south of an industrial future rivaling or surpassing many of the records achieved in other localities.

Natural Trade Trend.

"Other economists attach considerable importance to what is called the 'natural trend of trade.' It has been advanced as an economic principle that the most powerful and permanent movement of trade is ultimately from north to south and from south to north, since each region has a natural pre-eminence in the production of certain products and likewise has a natural need for the specialties provided by its neighbor. Hence, the economists argue, trade reaches its full and final development in an interchange of products from south to north and from north to south.

"In this connection it is of passing interest to note that even the long-range weather forecasts—which have been the subject of so much popular discussion recently—can be interpreted as favorable to the south. Whether or not the next few years will witness abnormal cold, the science of meteorology is not yet sufficiently advanced to foretell with assurance. Suffice it to say that many students of this subject are inclined to look for a general lowering of temperature during the immediate years ahead, as an eventual result of observed declines in the sun's heat. Should there be a tendency in this direction, it is not impossible that during the next few years the whole country will depend upon southern agriculture and affiliated activities to an extent even greater than in the past.

"Returing to the more immediate prospects, the favorable trend of export trade, backed by a more reassuring outlook in Europe, means much to those interested in the prosperity of the south.

"In spite of diversified agriculture and developments of industry, the backbone of much of the south's purchasing power is still obtained from the cotton crop. Naturally, therefore, this year's crop is a leading barometer of probable business in the south and a fairly close indicator of how much money the south should be able to spend over the next eight or nine months. The picture is distinctly encouraging. This year's crop is estimated by the government at over 12,800,000 bales—the largest crop that the south has produced since 1920. With the exception of that year, it is the largest since 1914. It is especially gratifying to know that supplies of cotton will be adequate to furnish consumers with cotton goods this season, for the country had three successive crop failures during the period 1921, 1922, and 1923. Last year's production totaled 10,140,000 bales. Production in 1922 was 9,762,000 and the 1921 crop totaled only 7,954,000 bales.

High Value For Crop.

"The south will enjoy nearly as high value for this year's crop as it did for the 1923 crop, even though farmers may not be getting quite as much per unit this year as last. The estimated farm value of cotton as of December 1, 1923, was $1,563,347,000. Prices to the farmer at that time were ruling around 32c per pound. The per pound price today is about 23c. In other words, a reduction of about 30 per cent has occurred this year in cotton prices. Based on prevailing prices, the farmer will receive about $1,408,000,000 for the 1924 production of cotton—a figure within 10 per cent of December's farm value last year. Despite the lower prices and even reckoning the total farm value this year about the same as last, it is estimated that the actual money received as profit by the average farmer is greater than that received as profit last year. This is because the yield per acre showed a good gain this year over last and hence the cost of production per unit was much lower.

"Another point in favor of the cotton farmer is that prices of industrial products have also tended downward in the past year and this partially offsets the decline in the per pound price of cotton. Here are some southern states where the value of this years cotton crop as compared to last year's shows a fine increase. (100 per cent represents the value of the state's cottou crop last year): Alabama 121 per cent, Arkansas 183 per cent, Florida 163 per cent, Georgia 127 per cent, Mississippi 134 per cent, Missouri 114 per cent, New Mexico 119 per cent, Oklahoma 143 per cent, Tennessee 116 per cent.

Greater Buying Power.

"States such as Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Mississippi and Oklahoma in which the cotton crop constitutes 30 per cent or more of the total crop value, should have a decidedly greater purchasing power during the 1924-25 season than they have had for years. Considering the entire situation, the purchasing power derived from this year's cotton crop is of a very substantial nature. Taking the cotton growing south as a whole, the final purchasing power should be in excess of that of last year, which in turn was the best since 1919-20.

"Prosperity is already evident in the south," said Mr. Babson in conclusion. "Improvement is spreading rapidly and general business as reflected by the Babsonchart is but 1 per cent below normal as compared with 7 per cent below normal a year ago."

MONEY AT WORK

Brief but important lessons in finance, markets, stocks, bonds and investments.

Although called "Federal Reserve banks," not a share of stock in these institutions is owned by the government.

The Federal Reserve system deals only with banks and with the government and does not deal with individuals so far as banking transactions are concerned.

The Federal Reserve system is owned by banks (national and state) and neither the government nor individuals possess any stock in the system.

The directors of the Federal Reserve bank are elected, two-thirds by the member banks and one-third appointed by the government. These conditions, along with others, make the Federal Reserve banks very truly what they have often been termed—"banker's banks." The advantages of such a system are numerous, including great elasticity of currency.

It is probable that now that this system is in force in the United States there will never be another financial panic such as shook the country in 1907.

Chinese Ask For Protection When Feud Flares Out

On Leongs and Hip Sings In New York At Each Others Throats Again

LEADERS IN DANGER.

They Wear Bullet Proof Vests; Four Victims Slain Since Thanksgiving

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—Leaders of both the On Leong and Hip Sing tongs have applied for police protection since recent resumption of hostilities claimed four victims here and at least four leaders, who are said to have been "marked for death" have been supplied with bullet-proof vests, police announced tonight. Of the four so armored, three are On Leong leaders and the other is secretary of the Hip Sing. The On Leong men are said to have been "marked" as a result of their activity in causing the expulsion of 140 members of their tong of whose actions they disapproved.

Hard upon police orders that Chinese in the Chinatown district were not to leave their houses except upon business and must then proceed at a leisurely pace, detectives swarmed through Chinatown tonight to run down reports that there was a hidden store of arms and ammunition there. Every building in the district was thoroughly searched to no avail.

Another rumor that approximately eighty hatchet men had slipped into the city from the west during the past two days was also being investigated. Police announced today they had completed arrangements with Immigration authorities for the deportation of eleven leaders of the On Leong tong as soon as they can be found.

Tom Hong, a Hip Sing, who was shot yesterday died today bringing the death list here to three since the latest outbreak Thanksgiving day. Gon Sing, who was shot last night in mistake for his father, an On Leong, was reported dying tonight.

Person-to-Person Long Distance Calls

This service requires a greater amount of operating effort and more circuit time than "Station-to-Station" calls because a particular person must be to the telephone before you can talk. The rate for such calls is about one-half greater than the "Station-to-Station" rate.

Again, when calling party, in placing a call, names a specific time at which he wants to talk and the conversation is held accordingly, the "Appointment" rate applies. Additional operating labor and circuit time have been required to make the appointment.

Magg Law Is Called Into Sece Under New Invention

BRLIN, Nov. 30.—Man has speculatfor ages on a method of harnessand employing the force of the windust as he has tried to make the s serve his ends, but so far the omplishments in either directionve not proceeded beyond a sailing. This tremendously vast elemeas awaited its conqueror. Perhaphat lucky man is Anton Flettnerhose sailless sailing-ship has ared world-wide curiosity.

sailless-ship is not just a desion paper, it is an accomplished fa

s ship is a 2,000-ton freighter m over with masts removed. Inst of masts, two steel cylinders th feet in circumference rise from thael, through the deck, and stand so sixty-five feet in the air. The eiders are set in motion by a small ctric motor, and the ship moves opropelled by the utilization of air rents. One man can operate the wo apparatus.

Details Kept a Secret.

r Flettner has kept that point to iself and to the group of men surnding him. This group inclu the Krupps, who equipped his shipund Hamburg-American Line offils interested in his patents. No explation has yet been made of the met of catching enough power from the nd to drive the ship.

Sntific men point out that a sixtive-foot cylinder three feet aro would offer little resistance to the nd, and therefore could not gen-ra much power, according to all acced principles.

If Flettner seems to have a new prple, or a new method based on an one. He says that his plan is a elopment of the Magnus law, discred in the middle of the last cery by another German. This law —lly stated—maintains that a cylier revolving in a current of air wikert pressure at the right angles to current.

The Magnus law, however, has nothing do with electricity. Flettner, it suggested, may have hit upon a neseans to store the energy derived frothe wind by some other method thathe generation of electrical power. If is true, the influence of his dsery will extend much further thamarine power. It would in all probility open a chapter in science equto that which Benjamin Franklin troduced with his kite.

as Established Reputation.

Is said that plans are already undeay to erect a 300-foot cylinder of Flettner type in Berlin to generelectrical power.

ttner says that his plan will reduthe cost of operating a ship by 50r cent. If so, he may be able to solva problem that has seriously affed the commerce of the world. Shoperating costs never were —gher thi today, save at the peak of the wand there is no early prospect of a fuction. This applies especially to merican shipping, which is contred by law in regard to American crs, the eight-hour day and such mers.

a method has been found to redu crews by something like twothis, at the same moment doing away with the cost of coal and the lo of space needed for storage, then ocn communication will indeed have ered upon a new period of its long exstion.

Flettner is not a newcomer in marine invention. He perfected a rudder nne years ago that bears his name. He is now director of aerodynamic at the Institute of Amsterdam and is familiarly known to scientific men as a experimenter along original lines. His present affiliation with the Krupps and the leading steamship interests of Germany has been accepted as evidence that his discovery is a matter of the first consequence.

Nicholas Says Contract Still Is a Proposal

Terms Rejection At National Meeting Just What Was Expected

TULSA, Nov. 30.—Despite the fact that many jobbers who belong to the National Petroleum Marketers' association of which L. V. Nicholas is president, marginal contracts under the proposed contract that Mr. Nicholas recently devised, and which the Western Petroleum Refiners' association has characterized as "violating the Sherman anti-trust laws," the weekly letter of the N. P. M. A. goes on to say:

"The marginal contract proposal received no official indorsement at Cleveland for the reason that indorsement was asked for or expected.

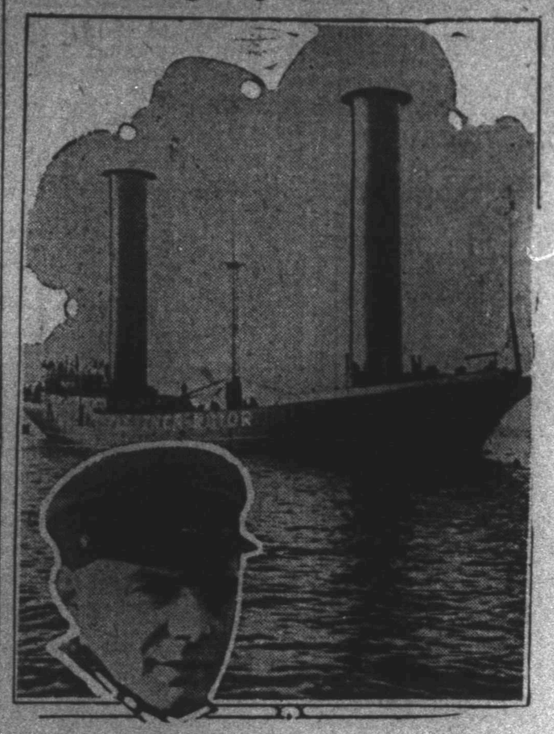

"Our proposal is exactly what we termed it—a proposal. And our idea in submitting it to the industry was not for the sake of bringing about immediate and concerted action in its favor but rather to develop thought and discussion along the line of replacing our old types of contract with something more dignified and in keeping with the truly independent position of our branch of the industry."

In the above language, Mr. Nicholas appears to have assumed a more conservative and dignified attitude on the marginal contract proposition, since the unfavorable attitude that the marketers manifested at Cleveland proved to him that the marketers, just as is the case with the refiners, are unwilling to be drawn into a contract that on its face, if not by thorough legal analysis, appears to be directly in conflict with the law of the land, even though that law may be unpopular or unwise.

In his letter Mr. Nicholas stated that the attendance at Cleveland was the greatest the association has ever enjoyed, the official registration being 1,452 against 987 at the fall meeting in 1923 at Milwaukee, Wis.

Sooner State's Operations Show Small Decline

Wewoka-Cromwell Area Most Active With Tulsa-Okmulgee Behind

A total decrease of 24 total operations is reported in this week's comparative statement of the current issue of the Oil Weekly. The largest decrease is found in the number of drilling and shut down wells. The total operations were 1,363 as compared to 1,387 total operations for the previous week.

General Decline

Every department save one showed a decline; the lone department to gain was the number of new rigs with 174. Of the total operations 65 were new locations, 174 new rigs, 731 drilling wells, 307 shut down wells and 76 completions.

Wewoka-Cromwell district continued to lead in total number of operations with 357 to its credit. However, it lost the lead in one department to Tulsa-Okmulgee district when it reported 21 completions as compared to Wewoka-Cromwell district's 14.

Summary

Following is the complete summary of the comparative statement as issued in the Oil Weekly:

THANKS

The colored employes of Kemp hotel highly appreciate the privilege of being entertained with a Thanksgiving dinner Thursday evening by the manager, Mr. Joseph Huckins III. We as a body also appreciate the courtesy shown by Mr. Carter, assistant manager and the magnificent menu, directed by Mr. Wilson Steward of the Kemp hotel.

The following program was enjoyed: Address—H. E. Hudson, head bellman, "Bellman Duties to the Hotel." Address—Hosea Wilson, bellman, "Thanksgiving Day." Address—Willie Lee, Jr., head porter. Address—Eddie Draughon, assistant porter, "Porter's Duties to the hotel." Brifford Williams and Willie Drumley furnished music for the occasion. The maids joined us in a merry good time with an address by Mrs. Pearly Booran. We closed with "My County 'Tis of Thee."

The Mothers clubs of Wichita Falls have an entire toy section of their own at the Wichita Hardware Co. store. Patronize your Mothers club every day this week.—Adv.

Every mother should be interested in the Mothers clubs sale at the Wichita Hardware Co. all this week. Even if their babies are still under their personal care, soon they will grow up and benefit from the good influences of the Mothers clubs.—Adv.

Institute Lays Meeting Plans For Dec. 9-10-11

Oil Men Are Urged to Make Hotel Reservations At Once

TULSA, Nov. 30.—The American Petroleum Institute requests that all oil men desiring to attend the fifth annual convention of that organization to be held at Fort Worth, Texas, December 9, 10 and 11, wire in for hotel reservations immediately. Hotels are the Texas, Westbrook, Metropolitan, Terminal, Siebold and Melba.

Special Trains Scheduled.

Frisco and Illinois Central railroads will operate special trains for the accommodations of guests. The Frisco's special will leave St. Louis at 6:50 p. m., December 7, and after passing through Tulsa and Oklahoma City will arrive at Fort Worth December 8 at 1:30 p. m. The Illinois Central will leave Chicago December 7 at 11:45 a. m. and arrive at Fort Worth at 1:30 p. m., Monday December 8. The Pennsylvania railroad will operate the necessary sleeping cars from New York to St. Louis to accommodate guests desiring to make connections with the Frisco's special out of St. Louis.

Rate Reduction Granted.

All roads will allow a 25 per cent reduction in rates on the certificate plan provided 250 certificates are turned in to the validating agent, Lacey Walker of the institute, at Fort Worth.

Leading issues to be decided upon at the meeting are the proposed publicity campaign of the industry to educate the public of the high points of the business, and the standardization of oil field equipment.

Manufacturers of, and dealers in oil well supplies and equipment, will hold a conference at the Texas hotel, Fort Worth, Monday, December 8, to discuss the formation of a national organization.

Oklahomans to Speak.

Among the Oklahoma-Texas oil men scheduled to speak, and their texts are the following:

Amos L. Beaty, The Texas company, "The People, the Government and the Oil Industry"; D. E. Buchanan, president Association of Natural Gasoline Manufacturer, "Reducing the Losses from Natural Gas Gasoline"; E. DeGolyer, Amerada Petroleum corporation, "The Geologist and the Petroleum Industry."

FACE COVERED WITH PIMPLES

Spread to Hands and Arms. Cuticura Heals.

"My face was covered with pimples which soon spread to my hands and arms. The pimples were hard, red and large, and festered and scaled over. The irritation caused me to scratch and the scratching caused eruptions. My face was so badly disfigured that I was ashamed to go in company. The trouble lasted one year.

"I read an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a free sample. It helped me so I purchased more, and after using two cakes of Soap and about one and a half boxes of Ointment I was healed." (Signed) Miss Bernice Smith, Ofahoma, Miss.

Use Cuticura for all toilet purposes.

Samples Free by Mail. Address: "Cuticura Laboratories, Dept. R, Malden 48, Mass." Sold everywhere. Soap 25c. Ointment 25 and 50c. Talcum 25c. Try our new Shaving Stick.

Oklahoma Would Initiate Texas Permit Practice

W. C. Geers Will Ask Next Legislature For Conservation Laws

ENFORCE PLUGGING

Drillers Must Take Out Permit For Operators, Under Prospective law

A law requiring the driller of an oil or gas well in Oklahoma to obtain a permit from the corporation commission before drilling begins and to furnish bond guaranteeing observance of conservation rules of the commission is to be asked of the next legislature by W. C. Geers, director of the oil and gas conservation bureau of the commission according to reports emanating from Oklahoma City.

Such laws are enforced after a manner in both Texas and Arkansas, according to Mr. Geers, who believes that they would do Oklahoma drilling much good.

State Important Now.

"Hundreds of wells have been drilled in Oklahoma of which the commission has no record and the plugging of which when dry the commission could not enforce," says Geers.

"The state has no funds with which to plug wells and it has found it impossible in some instances to otherwise arrange for plugging. We have no trouble along this line with the major operators; it is with the promoting wildcatter who has no interest whatsoever in conservation principles."

Geers, who recently succeeded to the position from the secretaryship of the commission, announces that he will energetically continue the efforts of the bureau toward getting a complete well log record of the state. It is estimated that about 50,000 logs are already on file.

Harmony Is To Be Sought.

"The policy of the bureau," says Geers, "will be to work in accord with the oil and gas interests. We shall welcome advice and suggestions. We have no desire to unduly dictate and certainly no desire to injure any one. We want to be what the law intends we shall be and what legitimate oil operators expect us to be, an unbiased intermediary between the public and the oil interests, to promote the welfare of each and conserve the resources of each."

Three new district conservation agents were appointed recently by the commission. W. D. Oliver of Edmond succeeds H. W. Coe in the Tonkawa district, J. E. Amis of Tulsa succeeds John Whayne in the Holdenville district, and J. W. Ryan of Chickasha succeeds G. T. Potts in the Ardmore district. All new men are said to be experienced field operators.

CHILDREN'S CROSS WORD PUZZLE

HOW TO SOLVE PUZZLE

The words start in the numbered squares and run either across or down. Only one letter is placed in each white square. If the proper words are found each combination of letters in the white squares will form words. The key to the puzzle—the first word—is given in the drawing. Below are keys to the other words.

(Running Across)

Word 1. The reason why the boys aren't climbing over the fence.

Word 3. The people Abraham Lincoln freed. Singular.

Word 5. Something that can be used only when there is snow.

(Running Down)

Word 1. What poor ol' Brer Rabbit fears these days.

Word 2. People who inhabit heaven. Singular.

SCOUTS FINISH ENCAMPMENT.

Boys of District Break Up Meeting at Henrietta Saturday.

HENRIETTA, Nov. 30.—Approximately 100 Boy Scouts of Wichita Falls and Henrietta finished a two-day encampment at the Henrietta Country club here Saturday. The encampment was in the nature of a get-together affair, with District Scout Executive Frank C. Creighton of Wichita Falls and Paul Teague, scoutmaster of Henrietta, in charge.

Five tents and frame building provided rooms for the boys during the encampment. A radio set, besides furnishing entertainment, was tuned in with a Henrietta broadcasting station and signal drill through the ether given the scouts.

LO, THE POOR INDIAN.

By Hugh Nugent Fitzgerald.

Lo, the poor Indian, has found himself. Senator Charles Curtis of Kansas, in a political sense, has been advanced to the seat of the mighty. He takes the vacant chair of Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts. Senator Curtis was born in Kansas, he sold newspapers in Kansas, he was a jockey on the race track in Kansas in the long ago and now he is the most powerful of the senate leaders of the republican party.

There is another Indian, Senator Robert L. Owen of Oklahoma, who has served his time as a statesman under the big dome in the city of Washington. Senator Owen was not a candidate for reelection. He was born in Virginia, had every advantage in his youth, had Cherokee blood in his veins, moved to Oklahoma in territorial days, became a lawyer and a banker and finally landed in the senate of the United States.

Blindness came on him as he was nearing the close of his second term and this forced him to retire to private life. Senator Owen is a democrat. His successor, W. P. Pine, is a republican. Senator Owen advised the democrats of Oklahoma to defeat Jack Walton and a hundred thousand of the followers of Owen voted for the republican nominee for the senate. Senator Curtis never voted for a democrat in his life. He is a never-scratch-a-ticket republican. He has never deserted the republican reservation. He has never voted against a republican measure. He is more of an Indian than Owen of Oklahoma, and he had a harder row to hoe in his boyhood than the statesman from Oklahoma who boasts of his Cherokee blood and his friendship for William Jennings Bryan.

Four years ago in the city of San Francisco Bryan announced four distinguished democrats with presidential oil. Owen was the first and the late Thomas M. Campbell was the last. Oklahoma remained true to Owen until the flag went down. This was before the coming of Jack Walton who played hell with democratic prospects in Oklahoma in two campaigns and is about ready to desert the Indian state for Texas. He has purchased a large farm in the magic valley and may be a candidate for congress against the Hon. Jack Garner two years hence.

All things are possible in this land of the free and the direct primary.

MONEY FOR THE WORKERS.

There are no bread lines or soup houses in America and none in sight. Now it is announced that the railroads of the United States in their contribution to new business in 1925 will spend $1,100,000,000 for new equipment and new improvements. Some rail officials say that if business continues at the rate expected even more than $1,100,000,000 may be expended by the class one roads.

In this connection it is pointed out by the editor of the Railroad Age that the railroads are most liberal when they are making the most money, and that improvements which have been under consideration for some time may be developed during the coming year provided the volume of traffic will warrant such action.

American railways employ two million men. American railways represent an investment of thirty billions of dollars. American railway managers almost to a man backed Calvin Coolidge for president.

They backed a winner and now they know that for the coming four years it will be impossible for the radicals of congress to force fantastic legislation or to interfere in any way with the business program of the nation.

A WIDOW'S ADVICE.

Most men will tell you that there is "something" about a widow that is very fascinating.

Hardly any one of them can exactly define just what the magnetism is that draws them to her side—but the widow knows, and one of them was sweet enough to disclose some of her wiles to me.

We were having tea at the Ritz. Mrs. H. had just returned from abroad, and was gowned in the latest French fashion. (Her skirt was terribly short and so was her curly black hair.)

As I gazed at her I thought to myself: "She wouldn't have to do anything—or know anything to attract men. She could just sit and 'be herself'—and she would have every man at her feet."

But I knew she had been a small town girl, and had, through study and observation, made herself into the beautiful and charming creature who faced me.

"Here is some advice for your readers," she said, in answer to my question: "How do you manage to have so many men in love with you?"

"I do not idolize men—nor do I expect a great deal from them. Never do I set a standard and try to get a man to live up to what I think constitutes a grand and noble life. I let him be as he is. If he finds out that his ways do not please me, he changes them without my suggesting anything to him. Men do not want to be molded—most of them take pride in building their own characters.

"If a woman is pleasing to men, they will do almost anything to make her like them. A fascinating, beautiful woman can do more in the way of reforming men, than all the Carrie Nations that ever trod the globe.

"So I think it is really a woman's duty to dress so that a man will be proud to walk with her, and to court him so that he will crave her society. Then the right kind of woman can have a wonderful influence on almost any man."

More Truth Than Poetry

AFTERWARD

Last month when I met Colonel Jones,
He greeted me in genial tones
And paused to chat
Of this and that—
The wife, the kids, the weather.
He said it caused him deep regret
That he and I so seldom met,
And after this
We ought to miss
No chance to get together.

Last evening when I chanced to meet,
The Colonel strolling down the street
And paused to chat
Of this and that,
A chilly glance he cast me;
And as I stood and stared the while,
My features garnished with a smile,
He gave an odd
Unfriendly nod
And calmly walked right past me.

Perhaps I ought to pick no bones
And nurse no quarrel with Colonel Jones.
Six weeks ago,
As well I know,
My ballot he expected
To help him gain the place of state,
For which he was a candidate,
But don't forget
That since we met
The Colonel was elected!

IT CAN'T BE DONE

A post, inflamed by the sight of a screen version of a great novel expresses the hope that the movies will get what they deserve. He ought to remember that there is a constitutional prohibition of cruel and unusual punishments.

DIFFICULT PICTURE

We are liberal enough, we believe, but somehow we cannot imagine a mother taking a cigarette out of her mouth to tell the children that there is a Santa Claus.

By Dr. Frank Crane

GRANDMOTHERS

A grandmother has something else to do than grow old. She has her niche in the world and it is as important that it should be filled as may be said of any other niche. People cannot get along without grandmothers. They need them and are the better for them.

That is, when grandmothers are aware of their position and their responsibility. For, in the first place, grandmother cannot be a flapper. She can have much influence with the girls, but she cannot compete with them. Here is the advantage of age and experience an advantage which all sensible young girls are glad to make use of. But she is not a competitor.

Grandmothers should not take the position of condemning all the young girls do. They were young ones themselves and people in their day exposed portions of their anatomy that they shouldn't, danced with gentlemen that they oughtn't to dance with, arranged their hair in a way to shock their elders, exposed their ankles more than they should, and did other nice and devilish things which every young generation thinks of.

Of course they have outgrown that sort of thing and the disposition has gone by with the coming of motherhood and of age. But they ought not to forget that they once had it and that so long as time shall last youth will have its fling.

It is the business of old age to give good advice and to hold the young as steady as they can, but not to be discouraged, for youth is a disease that will cure itself in time and unfortunately some people who have had it forget that it was ever theirs.

A grandmother who can grow old gracefully, whose presence is always welcomed, whose advice is a benediction which, if not always followed, is always listened to with respect and who, beyond all things, does not try to be young herself out of her time, is indeed a blessing.

No house is complete without one and her place in the family will be hard to fill when she is gone.

What Today Means to You

SAGITTARIUS

The planetary aspects of today are quite favorable for all customary pursuits until late in the afternoon, and thereafter become very benign and stimulating. During the early part of the day, extra care and caution should be used in order to avoid misunderstandings and curb deception in business affairs. In the evening, the vibrations are excellent, and tend to create an optimism which will largely contribute to the success of any enterprise that you may have in hand. It will also foster romanticism, and the question that you have delayed so long in asking of the one in whom you are most interested may now be put in full assurance of a favorable reply.

A child born today will be healthy, robust, and comparatively free from the weaknesses and ailments of infancy and childhood. It will be self-reliant, authoritative, determined and persevering. It will have great executive ability and spare no pains in accomplishing its desires. It will like to read good books and be fond of travel. Its aims will be in the main, high and noble, and it will enjoy the respect and esteem of all with whom it is acquainted.

If today is your birthday, you are self-confident, forceful, and determined, somewhat quiet and reserved, but full of fun. You have a well balanced, discriminating mind, much executive ability, and people generally follow your lead. You are clean-minded and lovable, affectionate in your home, and always looking for an opportunity to add to the happiness of your loved ones.

Notwithstanding your self-reliance and courageous determination, you have not achieved that material success which has distinguished others, less gifted than yourself. This is largely due to the fact that your impulses will not allow you to take advantage of others' misfortunes or troubles, and to an excessive confidence in the motives of those with whom you are brought in contact. Shrewdness, which is a word often employed to camouflage dishonesty and trickery, forms no part of your mental equipment, and you are "as honest as the day is long."

Successful people born on this date are: Clark Mills, sculptor, made the statue of liberty on the capitol dome, Washington, D. C.; Matilda Heron, actress, the first to play "Camille" in America; Frederick S. Church, artist; Wm. H. Holmes, geologist and ethnologist; Robert Wilson Shufeldt, biologist; William H. Truesdale, railroad president.

Dilemma of Arrangement Committee For Party — Nobody Came

Dorothy Dix

It's Hard to Draw the Line Between Duty to Husband or Wife and Duty to One's Family, But the Matrimonial Partner Comes First.

You often hear a young man say, in speaking of the girl whom he is about to lead to the altar and of whose family connection he disapproves: "I am marrying Jane, and not her family." Or a young woman who is about to marry a man with a disagreeable mother will say, "I am marrying John, and not his mother."

In such cases, it is the voice of inexperience that speaks for it is not long before the foolish young people find out that they have espoused each other's families, and that there is no way of ridding themselves of them short of divorces.

To begin with, every man and woman in the world are what their families have made them. They are the sum total of heredity and environment. They are diseased or healthy; well bred or ill bred, according to the blood that runs in their veins.

More than that, they have high ideals or low ideals; they are courteous and considerate, or ill-mannered and boorish; they are unselfish or selfish, according to how they were brought up. They are their mother's handiwork. And so every man and every woman who got married are united until death do us part to their mothers-in-law, in spirit if not in flesh.

The young man who says he isn't marrying a girl's family, and the girl who says she isn't marrying a man's mother, seems to think that there is some magic in the marriage ceremony that blots out the past, with all its old affections, and gratitudes, and sense of obligation, and that enables them to start their new life with a clean slate an no one else to consider.

This is far and away from being true, and the finer and the more loyal the man or woman the less it is true.

Because a woman marries and has a husband does not make her love her father and her mother, and her sisters, and her brothers less, or cause her to be less interested in their welfare. Because a man takes unto himself a wife, he does not cease to care for the mother who bore him or become indifferent to the fate of those of his own flesh and blood.

This brings about one of the most delicate and difficult problems in matrimony—a problem that is full of heartaches and quarrels, and criminations and recriminations—a problem whose solution often results in a great and unintentional wrong being done either to the wife or husband. For it takes a great wisdom and an inspired sense of justice to know how to render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's and to hold the scales even between one's husband or wife and one's family.

Take the case of a man who, before his marriage, has been the mainstay of his family. He has supported his people. He has indulged his sisters in pretty clothes. He is sending his younger brothers through college. His nieces and nephews feel they have a perfect right to call upon him for whatever they want.

Often when such a man gets married he lacks the courage to cease being the family easy mark, and he denies his wife the things she has a right to in order to lavish money on his family. I know of one case of a woman who slaved through 30 years of wedlock helping support her husband's ne'er-do-well brothers, who were always in debt and always coming to her husband for money, that he could never refuse them, although his own wife and children had to pay the price in bitter privation.

Women sacrifice their husbands to their families far more frequently than men offer up their wives on their ancestral altars. It is the wife's family that is eternally camped in the spare bedroom, and far more men are supporting their wife's parents than are supporting their own.

The tie between a woman and her family is a very strong one. The appeal of her family's needs goes to her heart, and so when she sees a chance to help her own people she is very apt to do it without even considering the hardship that it puts upon her husband.

Mother doesn't want to go and live in a boarding house, so she brings mother to stay with her, though mother rubs her husband's fur the wrong way and ruins his home life for him. Mary is a pretty girl, and she wants to spend her winter in town, so Mary is invited, and husband has to pay for Mary's party clothes, and have Mary's beaux under foot, and be made generally uncomfortable.

Brother comes and stays by the month, and wears husband's clothes, and smokes his cigars, while he casually looks around for a job. Sister has to have an operation, and husband has to pay for it. Nieces and nephews are always needing something done to their teeth, or their adenoids, or to have new clothes and shoes, and the woman gives, and her husband pays.

Many a man who works hard and makes good money never has anything to show for his labor at the end of his lifetime because his wife has given it all away to her people. And she has committed this crime against the man she loves without realizing how cruel and unjust she has been to him.

It is a difficult thing to draw the line between one's duty to one's husband and wife and one's family, but undoubtedly the husband or wife has the greater claim. No man has a sacrifice his wife to his family. No woman has a right to sell her husband in bondage to her family, and neither has a right to inflict in-laws on the other. But nobody respects these rights of the other half, and so the poor family goat is led bleating and protesting up to the sacrifice.

It is a pity, but what are you going to do about it? For the parasitic family is always with us.

DOROTHY DIX.

HOW IT STARTED

The Lining in Your Coat.

Strange stories some of our common customs and accepted practices have to tell when traced to their origins, tracked to their lairs!

Today we have coat linings for purposes of warmth and protection, sometimes for style; but coats are worn on occasions, and good coats, too, with no lining at all! And these have not ragged ends or frayed edges.

However, tailoring has not always been what it is today and therein lies the story of the coat lining. It was in the day when fabrics were coarse and workmanship crude that such linings had their origin for the purpose of concealing imperfections, of covering ragged inside surfaces and rough seams!

Tailoring has become an art and today there is no need of subterfuge or concealment—but the coat lining remains!

MATTERS OF HEALTH

So mark the day
When grouches grow;
When skies are gray
And east winds blow.

Better a cold bath than a cold bottle.

The fewer the clothes the tougher the skin.

When the east wind blows, rheumatic toes will ache and swell like sixty.

Oh, fortunate baby
Whose mother allows
Only clean, cold milk
From clean, healthy cows.

The health officer is the guardian of our good health; the physician, of our bad health.

Light, porous underclothing is just as essential for the good health of our skins and their contents, as light, well ventilated sleeping rooms are.

If we would spend as much money for disease prevention as we do for fire protection, we could prevent more disease than we do fires.

There was sadness in the village,
There was sound of tolling bells;
There was typhoid in the water
From the shallow, surface wells.

The idea that heavy clothing is altogether necessary for comfort in ordinary cold weather is frequently fallacious. With proper training, our skins will accommodate themselves to low temperature without discomfort to ourselves.

The jury hangs the lawyer's mistakes, but clergymen bury the doctor's.

When the weather's cold there is no harm if the head is cool and the feet are warm.

SMOULDERING FIRE

BY LAIN C. LANE

CHAPTER XIV.

The make-up was heavy upon Grace's face. She sat down with a sigh of exhaustion. "I'm about dead. Too tired to even wash the paint off."

She made a movement to arise. "I'm going to take a bath and go to bed. Is there anything in the icebox to eat?"

Margie laughed.

"We've been waiting for you to come home so we could borrow money to buy some stuff from the delicatessen. "We're all broke."

Grace hesitated. She virtually had been supporting her jobless apartment mates for a week. The rent would be due the following Monday.

"I haven't got much, I'm getting low myself. She opened her purse, and surveyed the contents, then drew out a small pack of bills. "I think I can spare two dollars."

"That'll be simply scrumptuous cried Margie. "Get on your coat, Stella, and go down and buy the eats. I'm starved.

"Want to go with me?" Stella asked Grace.

She shook her head wearily. "I feel like I need some one to wash me and put me to bed like a child. We worked all day in the blazing sun, and then had to ride back in dusty, jolty old automobiles from God knows where.

"Is it the Courtleigh Curtis picture you're still working in?" Margie asked.

Grace shook her head. "No, it's a western, with Harvey Strupp. I'm doing a dance hall girl. The dance hall they're using is a mile from shade. It's just the exteriors they're making out there, of course. The interiors are yet to come. We waited all day today, the dandill girls, I mean, for them to film one showing us running out in the street when Strupp begins shot up the town. Doesn't seem real to me, anybody running out the street when it's full of shot." She laughed. "Isn't where I would. But suppose they do things dumbly out where the east ends."

Stella departed to bring back rations. Grace arose and went into the front room and closed door.

"Humph!" sniffed Mabel. "Wheare her makeup home because wants people to know she's a moactress."

Margie smiled indulgent.

"Do you see how she begged letting Stella have the me? The stingy, stuckup thing." Mabel spoke as if the loan was not made them jointly.

Margie did not come to Grace's defense. She sat with a lighted face, unindicative of any thought.

"When I ask her to come here to live with us, I didn't think she was such a detestable little cat. Sorry I ever asked her."

Such is gratitude.

In her vehemence, Mabel forgot herself and raised her voice. Stella not hear the door to the front room.

"She'll put on all of her side the party, and try to vamp all the men," Mabel said. "She's that kind."

Grace, her face afire, stood the portal regarding her. Nothing caused Margie to look up. Shock ran through her body as she saw Grace.

"I couldn't help hearing you," Grace announced, coming toward Mabel angrily.

Uncommon Sense

Rich and Poor.

I know a man who owns a Rolls Royce and a hundred acres of ground around his residence—and he is poor.

I know another who has never owned a car, and who rents the small house in which he lives—and he is rich.

The first man has in his name the ownership of broad stretches of grass and many beautiful trees.

But he does not own them.

They belong to the second man, who looks at them over the high iron fence, and enjoys them because he loves and appreciates it.

The first man can ride out in his car, crossing hundreds of miles, and he will see only the road ahead, or little town filled with people for whom he is sorry, but whose money he knows will go to buy the merchandise which he manufactures and thus swell his fortune.

The other man, if he walks through the country for a few miles, owns it all, for he owns the beauty of the hills and rivers and valleys, and the glory of the dawn and sunset and the spectacle of playing children.

These are his because he understands them.

And nothing can take them away from him.

The first man is honest and kindly and well disposed to all men.

But he is poor because he does not know what is in the world or how to enjoy it.

He is as poor as would be a mouse in a magnificent mansion from which all the food had been removed before the family went on a vacation.

Far richer would be a mouse in a field where there was plenty corn to be found.

POEMS THAT LIVE

LITTLE THINGS.

Little things that run and quail
And die in silence and despair;

Little things that fight and fail
And fall on sea and earth and air;

All trapped and frightened little things,
The mouse, and coney, hear our prayer;

As we forgive those done to us,
The lamb, the linnet, and the hare,

Forgive us all our trespasses,
Little creatures everywhere.

GUARANTY FUND DOOMED

New System For State Banks Must Be Devised, Belief

AUSTIN, Texas, Nov. 30.—The Texas guaranty fund system for state banks, by which all members of the fund underwrite the losses of unsecured deposits of every other member, is probably doomed to abandonment, either at the January session of the legislature, or in the near future, according to a member of the Texas Bankers' association executive, a banker of wide experience.

"It is a socialistic scheme," the banker declared. "It discounts private initiative and individual ability, and undertakes to say that a bank, no matter how poorly handled, shall benefit by the capacity, ability and energy of the best banker.

A majority of the Texas Bankers' association members are convinced the guaranty fund plan must be either repealed outright, and the state system patterned after the national bank system, or sharply modified, this banker declared. This view was expressed, it is understood, in the recent conference on legislation with the governor-elect at Houston.

TECH CLUB MEETS TUESDAY

Will Make Plans for Annual Gridiron Christmas Party

Plans for the gridiron Christmas party, an annual event of considerable pretentions, will be discussed Tuesday night when the Wichita Falls Technical club holds its bi-monthly meeting at the Wichita club. The dinner starts promptly at 7 o'clock and will be followed by the business session.

W. M. Priddy, elected president for the ensuing year at the last meeting of the club, will make his initial appearance as an executive of the organization and will give an address. It is possible that a moving picture on some technical subject may also be shown. Efforts to secure the film are being made but it is not yet certain that it can be obtained.

ARMY DEATH RATE DIPS

Reaches Low Point in Last fiscal Year, Report Shows

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—The army death rate during the last fiscal year reached a low point, attributed in part by Surgeon General Ireland, in his annual report made public today, to advances made in preventive medicine and surgery.

Deaths per thousand were 3.8 the first time in the history of the army below 4.00 per thousand. For diseases alone the rate was 2.01 per thousand, also a new record, the best previous record being that of 1921 which was 2.24 per thousand.

GIRL ELOPER CLEARS CASE

Sends Word She Married Another As Fiance Waited At Altar

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 30—Mystery surrounding the sudden disappearance of Miss Jane Conley, pretty Columbus girl, on the eve of her wedding to Frank A. Strear of Philadelphia, was cleared late tonight when she sent a telegram from Buffalo to her mother here telling of her marriage to another suitor, Arthur C. House.

Formal announcement of Miss Conley's engagement to Strear was made last August. Guests had been invited for a wedding supper at the Conley home Thanksgiving evening and Strear was there.

1924 Grid Campaign, Greatest in Annals of Game, Comes to Virtual End

Few Titles Remain On Boards To Be Fought in South

Two Intersectional Clashes Billed for Pacific Coast

MICKS VS. STANFORD

Pennsylvania to Square Off With Golden Bears Of California

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Added with startling upsets, shattered attendance records and individual tests of almost unparalleled brilliance, the 1924 gridiron campaign, now virtually at an end, will go down in football history as probably the most remarkable on record.

A few battles remain to be fought in the south while several intersectional features are slated for Pacific coast gridirons, with unusual importance attaching to battles among four unbeaten teams on New Year's day when Notre Dame opposes Stanford at Pasadena, and Pennsylvania meets California at Berkeley, but the season was brought to its real climax Saturday when the Army Mule kicks proved too much for the Navy in the greatest service spectacle ever staged.

Attendance Records Go.

The Army-Navy struggle at Baltimore before a record throng of 78,000 was a fitting finale to a season which has witnessed amazing forward strides in the popularity of the game. This widespread interest has resulted in attendance at college games alone throughout the country estimated at close to 10,000,000 while the radio has brought millions more within earshot of gridiron strife. The previous record single game attendance of about 80,000 set and equalled several times in Yale bowl, was eclipsed when 90,000 saw Stanford and California in their annual classic at Berkeley, while the western conference games were watched by close to 1,500,000, a figure shattering all previous marks.

A variety of factors have contributed to the games' astonishing growth, testified to by the increasing number of giant stadiums everywhere, but probably the outstanding two reasons for this year's increased interest were the unprecedented streak of upsets, toppling favorites and champions by the wayside and the meteoric rise to individual fame of Harold "Red" Grange. The feats of Grange, sensational Illinois halfback, lifted him to a plane that few, if any, gridiron heroes have ever occupied in the popular imagination.

Notre Dame Best.

With titles races settled everywhere but in the south, the array of championship elevens for 1924 includes only a few of those which held the peak a year ago. Comparing country-wide performances critics generally pick Knute Rockne's flashy Notre Dame eleven, which blazed a conquering path through opposition from the east, south and middle west, as the greatest combination of the season. The Hoosiers with nine straight triumphs were the only major team to finish the season neither beaten nor tied, but their title claims rest upon public opinion since they participated in no organized title race.

Yale, in the east and California on the Pacific coast, are the most notable of last year's title-holders to retain their grasps on the top again, but in both instances their championship claims are disputed. Along the Atlantic seaboard, Yale capturing the "big three" crown for the second straight year, is forced to share chief laurels with Dartmouth and Pennsylvania, both undefeated and boasting fine records, while in the far west, Stanford university presses the Golden Bears for title honors.

Baylor Tops Southwest.

The only possessors of undisputed laurels in the east were Williams, which conquered Amherst and Wesleyan for the "little three" title and Army, which won the service championship yesterday when Captain Garbisch booted four field goals to make the Cadet margin of 12 to 0 over Navy.

In the western conference the season closed with Chicago as champions and Illinois the post-season favorite in a tie with Iowa for second place.

Indiana and Purdue had fewer conference games than usual this year, but each had one conference victory when they met for the Hoosier title, Purdue dedicating its new stadium with a clear cut victory.

Missouri, by defeating its ancient rival, the Kansas Jayhawkers, 14 to 0 on Thanksgiving day, captured the championship of the Missouri Valley conference with Nebraska finishing second and Drake third. The Missouri Tigers went through the season with only one defeat, losing to Nebraska early in the season.

Baylor university was the winner of the southwestern conference championship nosing Southern Methodist university; neither team was defeated in competition, but the Southern Methodists played four ties while Baylor had only one tie battle.

Weight Worries Leonard Little, Declares Billy

Gibson To Match Champion With Benjamin In California

TUNNEY GOING GOOD

Scrap Between Gene And Jeff Smith Coming Up Next Month

By ROBERT EDGREN.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—The best way to get a rise out of Billy Gibson is to question Leonard's weight.

"Benny doesn't weigh over 143 or 144 right now," says Bill. "He never gets big and will probably never weigh much more than he does now. When Benny is out of the ring for a long time he will pick up a few extra pounds, but this flesh gathers only on the legs and thighs. When the champion gets down to real hard training he will take off three and four pounds the first week. Reducing is never troublesome for Benny. It is only the last half pound that really hurts.

"Leonard is always careful of his diet," continued Gibson, "and this helps a great deal. On his long layoffs from boxing if Benny took on weight around the stomach it would be very serious and perhaps he could not get down to the lightweight limit. But fortunately for us the flesh is put on where it can be taken off without permanent injury.

Leonard Training.

"Benny's in training now. We hardly expect to have a bout before Washington's birthday, but Benny prefers to spread his training over a long period rather than go through the more strenuous course of any three or four weeks' preparation. We have signed a tentative agreement for the champion to meet Joe Benjamin out on the coast. The next boxing law in California will permit ten rounds to a decision and twelve rounds to no decision and needs only the governor's signature. When the governor puts his name on the bill, as many in California expect him to do, we will quickly settle everything for a Leonard-Benjamin meeting to a decision, but the bout will not take place before Washington's birthday at the earliest.

"The lightweight tournament here ought to produce an opponent for Benny, but it is only guesswork who he will be. The rival contenders all seem to be fairly evenly matched and it is hard to pick one from the other. The situation now is much different from a year or two ago when Lew Tendler was the outstanding opponent for the champion. But Benny is hopeful that things will pick up and he'll have considerable action early in the new year."

Hug Has Tough Task Before Him

Miller Hates to, But Must Give Scott the Gate.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—Miller Huggins' favorite melody these days is "Die Wacht Am Rhyne."

The Yankee manager faces the task of filling the shoes of Everett Scott, veteran shortstop, before another season rolls around. Scott insists that he has another big year left in his legs. He may have in his heart but Huggins realizes the earnest one cannot pound the infield turf many more years at his old speed.

And the man Huggins is much interested in at this time in connection with the shortstop problem is Hal Rhyne, scintillating shortstop of the San Francisco team last season.

Rhyne's fielding was superb. His hitting seemed of big league caliber. Scouts who reported on him said that he should be able to hit around .300 in the big show his first season.

The stumbling block in negotiations for the youngster is the price. Blind to the signs of the times the Frisco club is demanding a fancy price for Rhyne. Huggins, with a row of "bots" floating before his mind's eye, hesitates to call on the New York treasury for $75,000 or $100,000 for another gamble. He is watching the "market" however.

Bernstein Hopes To Impress Commish With Good Showing in Mandell Scrap

Gotham Scrapper Expects to Earn Leonard's Crown Whether Champ Fights Him or Not

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—Before the present boxing campaign passes into history a successor to Benny Leonard, world's lightweight champion, must be named, or one of the most popular divisions of pugilism will become very stagnant.

Inactivity on the part of the king of the division has been a decided detriment to boxing already and the longer he continues to leave his padded mittens on the shelf, the less interest there will be in the 135-pounders. To pick a successor is by no means an easy task. There are several candidates and one of the leading ones is Jack Bernstein of New York, formerly junior lightweight champion. Bernstein will attempt to demonstrate his right to his claim to recognition as Leonard's successor this week when he meets Sammy Mandell of Chicago in the feature bout to be staged in New York.

His battle carries the edge in fan interest because of the fact that Bernstein has asked the New York commission to recognize him as champion until Leonard decides to return to the ring. But there are others on the program that are of importance, including two in which world's champions will perform. Mike McTigue, light heavyweight king, suspended in New York because he refuses to sign contract to fight Gene Tunney, will meet Jack Thompson in Montreal, and Mickey Walker, suspended in New York for refusal to fight Dave Shade, will box Joe O'Hara in Milwaukee.

When Bernstein recently laid claim to the lightweight title, claiming Leonard is no longer able to make the required weight limit and even if he can make it, will not defend his title, he was told that there is one black mark on his record that he will have to erase before his claims will be taken seriously by those who follow the destinies of the knights of the padded mittens. That one mark is a defeat at the hands of Mandell which was handed to Bernstein January 1, 1924, in a 15-round bout in New York.

Just prior to the Mandell fight Bernstein had lost the junior lightweight title to Johnny Dundee, having held it about six months after taking it from the same Dundee. When the boxing commission told Bernstein he would have to whip Mandell to be taken seriously as a successor to Leonard he immediately consented to the meeting.

Bernstein has been fighting since 1914 and is 25 years old. He has lost but eight fights in his entire career and only three in the last three years, one of which was to Mandell and one to Dundee. The third was to Archie Walker early in 1922. He has had thirty-seven fights in the three seasons, including bouts with such high class performers as Rocky Kansas, Pal Moran, Pepper Martin, Tommy Noble, Harry Kabakoff, Kid Wagner and Bobo Herman.

Dallas Gets Diving Third Baseman From Big Show to Lead Club.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 30.—The only man who ever became proficient in using the swan, double jacknife and springboard dives for capturing infield grounders in the big show, will be missing when the 1925 campaign opens.

Larry Gardner's the man.

Gardner, who drew his unconditional release a short time ago that he might become a minor league pilot, will be tossing the Dallas team in the Texas league next summer.

He leaves the Big Times with the reputation of being one of the best third baseman the game has known. In addition to his ability to play the last corner his pleasing personality and his odd way of "attacking" grounders won him such popularity as has been enjoyed by few ball players.

Does More Than "Play" Ball.

Gardner literally dives after fast hopping bounders when playing third. An infielder should play the ball. Gardner does more than that. He goes after it as though he knew the ball was in a conspiracy to elude him. He spears it at arm's length. Then, recovering quickly he pauses coolly while he times his throw to the base. At times this pause seems unnecessary, exasperating and fatal. But he rarely fails to get his man. This pause prevents many of the overthrows or poor heaves that many infielders uncork on hurried tosses.

Gardner's passing takes from the big leagues one of the four members of the old Red Sox machine of the "palmy days" of 1912, 1915 and 1916 who still retained their major uniforms last October. The three men still on the job are Tris Speaker, Harry Hooper and Dutch Leonard.

Speaker will be in the big show many years as a manager in all probability but has begun to slow up as a player. Leonard was out of the majors for a time but was reinstated last season that he might help Ty Cobb in the dash of the Detroit team for the pennant. Whether Leonard, at his age, will survive a full campaign against big league batters is a matter for conjecture.

Hooper is nearing the end of his playing days.

Gardner played a prominent part in the wonderful work of the Red Sox teams which captured A. L. pennants in 1912, 1915 and 1916.

Then Moves On.

He was traded to the Athletics in 1918, however, so did not get a slice of the series melon the Hub team cut that year. In 1919 he was traded to Cleveland and the following year was one of Speaker's aces in the drive which landed Cleveland its first pennant.

Gardner was born in Enosburg Falls, Vt. He is in his thirty-eighth year.

He takes charge of a tough situation at Dallas, judging by reports of conditions there. The ball club handed to him has a mixture of indifferent and "mean" ball players. If given free rein and the backing of the club bosses Gardner will get order out of chaos. Those who know him believe he will.

BREAKS OF THE GAME

By BILL BRUCE

Sing a song of baskets,
Center six feet high,
Closely guarded forwards
Set to go on high.

When the ball is tossed up
Guards trip merrily.
Some one oversteps his bounds
And trips the referee.

Football has passed by the way over the Southwest with the final grid forays knocked off Thanksgiving and the past week-end. The moleskin game has still a grip on Texas, however, for there remain eight high school elevens in the championship, but the cagers are now coming into their own.

Already the call has been sounded over Texas for the pre-season practice sessions in conference colleges. And here in Wichita Falls our own court athletes are getting set for the annual basketball warfare. A four-team city league has already been organized. Junior high school players answered the first call last week, and senior high and Junior college will turn out today for preliminary work.

If you want to break off friendly relations with a Harvard grad these days just walk up behind him, slap him roundly between the shoulders and say: "Well, old dear I hear Tad Jones has signed to coach Yale three more years."

* * *

It took the Illinois football team about as long to elect Red Grange captain for next season as it did for Red to break away on one of his long runs during the season. Which made the election a brief affair.

Should Bob Roper decide not to return to Princeton as football coach next season Herb Treat, star tackle of the 1922 eleven, will be seriously considered for the post. He coached the linemen for Roper last fall, with success.

* * *

While no members of its team appears on all-star lineup these days the School of Experience is still a thriving one.

Most of the track athletes who essayed to become football stars the past season will go back to tracking—back tracking, so to speak. For the majority of the shining lights of the cinder path and pit failed to make good on the grid, records show.

Howard Brookins, Iowa university student and holder of world's records as a hurdler, tried diligently to make the Iowa team as a halfback but met with only fair success on the squad.

J. Morgan Taylor, Olympic track star sought a place on Grinnell college's eleven and had better success. He proved to be exceptionally sure at catching forward passes so the coach hit upon the plan of sending him in at end when a forward pass was needed badly and chances of having the pass fail had to be minimized. Taylor was but mediocre in other angles of the game, however.

Hillis, Olympic weight man, failed to make the lineup with Princeton in the big games. Legendre had better success but did not stand out as one of the stars of the team. Bowman, another Olympic star, might have played, had not injuries handicapped him most of the season.

Jack Dunn, Baltimore Oriole owner who specializes in selling stars to the big league bosses at fancy apple prices, is now shining up Joe Boley, shortstop whiz, for the counter.

Dunn had him out for show once before—a year ago—but the price ticket scared the Brooklyn Dodgers and other clubs away. Dunn was reported to have asked a hundred grand for him then.

The New York Yankees later entered the bidding circle but did not want to pay six figures for the infielder.

Pierre Wertheimer's action in signing Jockey Everett Haynes to ride for him next year is interesting in view of the discussion provoked by Haynes' handling of the French star, Epinard, in the International races.

Haynes' generalship was criticized by many persons after Ladkin had won the second of the big races by a nose. Owner Wertheimer's latest move indicates clearly that he held Haynes blameless for the European nag's defeat.

Charles H. Graham, manager of the San Francisco club of the Pacific Coast league and the man who is credited with having developed Jimmy O'Connell into a brilliant young player plans to appeal personally to Commissioner Landis for the reinstatement of O'Connell.

Graham feels that the youth was the goat in the Giant-Philly bribe scandal which resulted in his disbarment and that the mess has made O'Connell realize the need for a strong will.

I believe that the majority of fans have only sympathy in their hearts for O'Connell. I believe that the majority of them would be pulling for O'Connell, were he to obtain reinstatement.

O'Connell's frankness in the whole matter and his repentant air are in striking contrast to the attitude the veteran Cozy Dolan has taken.

Junior College Cagers Called

Prospects for Successful Season Good

First call for basketeers will be issued today at the Junior college by Coach Mosley, and preliminary practice is slated to begin this afternoon in the college gym.

Prospects for a fast quintet in the 1925 season seem to be of the best with four members of last season's team back in uniform and a wealth of promising material coming up. John Tyson, guard; Riley Rawls, forward and center; Preston Beck, forward; and Mike Caskey, forward; veterans from the cage five of '24 will all don the abbreviated pants again this year for the Indians.

Among the likely prospects who will try for berths on the first string five are John Keevil, another member of the 1924 squad, Lowery Chrites of the high school last season and Charles Brewster.

A number of players have been practicing the past several weeks of the football season, and are prepared to get away to a running start in the competition for the team. The Junior college has two indoor courts which rank among the best in the state.

Effort will be made, said Coach Mosley Sunday night, to gain admittance to the Texas Junior college cage association.

Britons Out To Beat Their Brilliant Record Of 1921

By RAY M'CARTHY
Special Correspondent of the Record News
Copyright 1924, by the Consolidated Press Association.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—George Duncan and Abe Mitchell, Great Britain's foremost golf team, announced on their arrival Friday for their third tour of the United States that they were out to better their records of 1921 when the won 50 matches in 60 plays.

The peerless Georgie and the hard hitting Abe will play their first match against Bobby Jones and Perry Adair at Ashville, N. C., on Wednesday, Dec. 3. Then they will jump down to Tampa where they will encounter Johnny Farrell and Bobbie Cruickshank. Both of these youngsters, but Farrell in particular, have been playing remarkable golf lately.

Duncan and Mitchell will compete next in a one day tournament at Miami and on Sunday Dec. 14 they will face Walter Hagen and Gene Sarazen, America's leading home bred professionals, in a match of 36 holes at St. Augustine.

Then to California

On leaving Florida the Britons will head for California playing through Texas. They will return to the Atlantic seaboard some time in February to engage in some of the Florida tournaments and will sail for home late in March.

Duncan and Mitchell have established an enviable record as a team. Many critics in fact, rate this pair as the most formidable combination in the game. Each is a really great golfer, possessing a distinctive style of game. Duncan is without doubt the fastest playing golfer in the world.

Mitchell has few equals in long driving and is matched in this respect only by two fellow countrymen, Arthur Havens and Cyril Tolley. Both are very colorful in their play.

On their first visit in 1921 the Britons played 60 matches, winning 50, tying two and losing eight. On their second tour Duncan and Mitchell appeared in 40 matches, winning 28, losing 10 and being tied in two. It will be interesting to note how they fare on the sandy courses in the southern states and the adobe layouts in the golden west.

The coming of Duncan and Mitchell brings to the front again a question that is oft discussed in golf circles—"who are, or were, the greatest golf team."

Who's Best Team?

The writer has seen all combinations now in existence, has toured with several and is of the opinion Harry Vardon and Ted Ray had no superiors when in their prime. Their showing in this country in 1920 when their combined ages totaled nearly 100 years—93, to be exact, was nothing short of remarkable. Playing in the heat of the summer against the best combination of American professionals and amateurs, this pair won something like 45 games and lost only a dozen matches.

No-hit Game Just Like Any Other Contest For Knuckle Ball Jesse

Cardinal Slab Artist Twirled Eight Stanzas Of Hitless Ball, Then Had to Be Told About It By Mate

There's one slab artist in the hall of fame who didn't have the slightest idea he was on the road to join the select few until waked up near the end of the last lap by one of his teammates and informed of the phenomena. This lad was burning 'em up, yet figuratively speaking, was sound asleep and didn't know what it was all about.

Jess Haines, the knuckle ball expert of the St. Louis Cardinals, had been toiling nearly two hours against the Boston Braves when suddenly some one slipped him the information in the eighth inning, that his knuckle offerings hadn't been nicked by a single batter. Only one man had reached second base and that is the result of a pair of walks which were the only slips that prevented it from being a perfect pitched game.

As it is the heart's desire of every pitcher who ever faced a batter—all the way from the sandlots to the big leagues—to some day, somehow turn in a no-hit game, the experience of Jessie Haines carries one valuable pointer.

And that is—he didn't work any harder after he knew it was a hitless game than he had before. Here's what he says himself: "If I hadn't pitched my best for those first seven innings the last two wouldn't have meant a thing. I figure a fellow's got to be in there working hard all the time. You might say he ought to aim to make every game a no-hit game.

"To show how it works, when the boys told what was going on it did not effect me at all. I might have gone out the next inning and tried so hard that everything would have been spoiled. And that's what's liable to happen if a fellow has been sort of idling along and suddenly steps on the gas. I worked just as steady after I got the exciting news and when it was over I could have gone back for a second game."

Haines has been in the big show about seven years; 1918 was the first year and really didn't count as he only pitched one game. That was with Cincinnati and the only interesting thing is that his first manager was Christy Mathewson.

Ever since that date he has been with the St. Louis Cardinals. He has been a hard worker, but until his no-hit classic came along the big boy from Phillipsburgh, O., had never horned into the spotlight.

Like Howard Ehmke and most other twirlers of no-hit fame, Haines had the elusive honor within his grasp on several occasions. In 1920 the Phillies cheated him out with two scratch hits and then to make things worse beat St. Louis, 1 to 0. Before that he had trimmed a team in Springfield, Ill., without a hit or run so with these several experiences as encouragement he never let down till the trick was turned.

The interesting twist on no-hit games and other super-performances by big league box artists is that in a great many cases the goal is reached in a comparatively poor year. Walter Johnson's no-hit classic came sometime after his biggest pitching years. In 1923 Haines turned in twenty wins for the Cardinals, which is going some for a team that finishes low in the percentage column. Last year has been slow and poor for him—and yet his explanation is that he just felt it was in him that particular day. An odd thing about his record this year is that with thirteen defeats against him and only six wins, he has found the Champion Giants rather easy picking and beat them three out of five starts.

They're Off At Tia Juana With Quick Get-Away

Greatest Winter Season In Racing Game On Cards

HOLLYWOOD CASHES IN

Movie Stars Stuff Wads Of Jack On Brilliant Opener

By STUART N. LAKE,
Special Correspondent of the Record News.
Copyright 1924 by the Consolidated Press Association.

SAN DIEGO, Nov. 30.—They're off at Tia Juan—and off to such a start as even the famous winter race course just across the Mexican border from this city seldom has boasted.

There is a certain liberty about old Mexico—especially since the adoption of the Volstead act—that it draws thousands of patrons to Empress del Hippodromo, which is Spanish for Sunny Jim Coffroth's racing establishment. But Coffroth and his general manager, Jack Atkin, are not relying on extra equine bait alone to lure the crowds. Purses big enough to attract the best of the racing stables end eight good races a day run under sunny, warm skies, are the factors upon which they are counting to make this "million dollar" renewal of the Tia Juana Jockey club's season a dazzling success.

Thanksgiving Great Day.

Lovers of the sport of kings from all over the United States and Canada are here and the first three days of the meet, which started on Thanksgiving day, saw the track crowded to the rails with turf enthusiasts and tourists. The Thanksgiving day opener, of course, has been the high spot of the meeting to date. It drew a crowd of 25,000 persons, including hundreds of holidaying motion picture gentry from Hollywood, and provided a spectacle well worth seeing—off the track as well as on it.

With the mercury hovering around eighty, the sun shining from the perfect blue of a lower California winter sky and a cooling breeze sweeping in from the nearby Pacific it was an ideal day for the movie people to strut their stuff. But they paid and paid and paid for the privilege. The Hollywood picture foundries will have to turn out miles of pictures to make up the losses they suffered.

Sunstar, widely known as the "moving picture hoss" was the cause of their downfall. On his last appearance here, the Spreckels racer won last season's $50,000 Coffroth handicap. This fact and his alias sent the movie people to the mutual machines in droves when he pranced forth for the feature race of the day.

Runstar Loses.

The movie favorite ran like a star for a while but then he pulled up lame and finished 50 yards in the ruck, Sunnyland, owned by the Bronx stable, and third choice in the betting, winning by half a length over Postillion.

Then along came an event which the wily Mr. Coffroth had named the "Hollywood handicap" and all the movie people went out to get even. They picked everything in the race except a horse called Time Exposure. They laid off Time Exposure because as one of them explained, time exposure's have nothing to do with the movies and a hoss with a name as slow as that would certainly be left at the post.

Time Exposure won, of course, and paid five to one to the wiseacres who had bet on him.

"One Eye" Arrives.

But even these reverses didn't dampen the ardor of the folks from Hollywood and they departed with the rest of the crowd, vowing to come back and clean up all the coin in Mexico before the season was over.

Whenever they come, there's little doubt that they will have company. For, according to the dope, there will be top notch racing all season. Sunny Jim Coffroth has sagely sprinkled six stakes, totaling $90,500 in added money throughout the program, with the Coffroth handicap on March 29, to gross $68,000—the richest stake in America for horses of all ages—to keep the big stables tied to the spot.

If further guarantee of success be needed, it may be stated that promptly at 1:40 o'clock Thanksgiving afternoon—just five minutes before the meet started, One Eye Connelly, the champion gate crasher of the universe, sauntered nonchallantly into the paddock and announced that he had got in on the usual way—free. As everybody who knows anything, knows Mr. One Eye Connelly wastes his talent on anything but the biggest of attractions.

MINOR MOGULS SETTLE DISPUTES

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—Several disputes and claims in the minor leagues have been adjusted, according to announcement today by John H. Farrell, chairman of the board of arbitration of the national association of baseball leagues which has been in session three days.

In the case of player Kenner, drafted by Fort Worth from Ardmore, Oklahoma, the claim of half of the $1,800 draft price entered by Oklahoma City was disallowed.

Izzy Bandrimer's claim for transportation against Galveston was allowed but that of Blake against E. A. Daniels of Oklahoma City was denied.

NURMI AND RITOLA TO RACE JAN. 6.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—The first interesting athletic event of the new year, as the sport calendar reads now, will be the appearance simultaneously in Madison Square Garden of Paavo Nurmi and Willie Ritola, the runners who brought fame to Finland in the Olympic games last year. They will appear in races in the garden, Jan. 6.

Ritola, a naturalized American, returned to Finland long enough last summer to represent his native country in the international games.

Nurmi is expected to arrive in New York late this month and expects to keep in trim on his way over by working out daily on the liner.

THESE FISHERMEN HAD THE EVIDENCE

Fish stories may be told as the years roll by and be taken by the listeners as is usually the case with a grain of salt for lack of evidence as to the truth of these yarns. But J. L. Ware and Ed Sinclair were able to narrate a story about the finny fellows and the huge number of them which they declared they had caught six miles up the Wichita river Sunday, and not fear contradiction. For the pair produced the goods. They drove into the city last night with a string of channel cat of all weights, about 55 in number, on a string longer than the car in which they rode. No lack of evidence there.

BILLY WHISKERS

BY FRANCES TREGO MONTGOMERY

Billy had just found out that the picnic lunch he was eating belonged to the moving picture people from whom he had escaped.

"Well, I'll be switched," said Billy to himself, "if I haven't run into the whole company!" and in the twinkling of an eye he had turned and run down the opposite side of the knoll toward the stream. But horrors! What was he facing but all the men from the studio in bathing suits, coming up from their bath in the stream. Dressed like this and fresh from a cold plunge, they were in fine trim to run, and in less time than it takes to tell it the whole lot started to chase Billy, and they caught him before he had gotten fifty feet away.

They led him up to where the autos were and tied him to the one in which he always rode. Then they made doubly sure he could not get away from them by chewing his rope by putting a chain around his neck.

"Now, old fellow, I guess you won't escape us," gloated Mr. Dates. "I should like to give you a good beating for the trouble you have given us."

"And so would I," added Mr. Benton.

As for Mr. Strobel, he shook his fist in Billy's face and said, "We will work you hard and give you few favors for running away from us and causing us to lose so much time and money. But one thing now is that we have found you ourselves, and that will save us giving the five hundred dollars reward to someone else."

This evidently made Mr. Strobel feel good, as he walked away rubbing his hands together.

For the rest of the day Billy lay behind the auto and chewed on bits of food they threw to him as they ate their luncheon. But at one time he really thought they would beat him, and that was when Mrs. Strobel discovered Bill had eaten the cake she had taken so much time and trouble to make.

At last the day came to an end, as all days will, and Billy was put in the limousine and driven to the studio stables, where he was not only locked in, but also fastened to a stall by a chain. And as Nick closed the door, he said:

"Dar now, Master Billy. I hopes you sleep well and have pleasant dreams, for they will be all the pleasant things that will be comin' your way for one while, I'm thinkin'."

"Oh dear, oh dear! I wonder what awful tricks I shall have to go through. And I also wonder where Stubby and Button are, and if they are here or have escaped. I am almost certain they have made their escape and are miles away from here by now, and probably are looking for me."

(But we know that Billy's friends are at the studio too.)

Color Cut-Outs

"How do you make these bells?" Betty Cut-out asked Joan, who was spending the afternoon with her, working on Christmas decorations.

"They're very easy to make. This paper is just the right size, 6x8. Fold it in half. That's right—the long way. Then paste it up the side like this. Gather the top of the bell and tie it with wire, and stretch the bottom part so it will flare."

"Then how do you make the clapper?" asked Betty.

"Cut off a piece of wire a little bit longer than the bell and cover it with crepe paper. Here—wind it, like this, and cover a piece of cotton for the end. Paster it to the top of the inside of the bell. That's right," directed Joan.

"Let's make lots of these paper balls for the tree," suggested Betty. "All you have to do with those is to cut about 10 strips and tie them with wire."

(Learn how to make a fancy dress for Christmas parties tomorrow.)

"Life" Is Theme Of Judge Kay In Sunday Lecture

475 PERSONS PRESENT

Big Increase in Attendance Is Recorded At Men's Bible Address

An increase in attendance of 145 men was reported Sunday from the Kay Bible class at the Strand theater when 475 persons turned out to listen to Judge John C. Kay's lecture. The speaker's addres was on "Life" and was as follows:

For a little topical subject this morning, I want to mention profanity. It is a curious paradox about humanity that those fellows who say they do not believe in "hell," mention it oftener than anybody else. It is a shabby, sorry, ignorant vice. I want to tell you a little something about it that, perhaps, some of your might not have thought about. A profane man is always wanting in his vocabulary. He is lacking in words. His emotions express themselves in profanity because he does not otherwise know how to set forth his emotions. Go out and learn some good language. You might as well be learning it, if any of you are guilty of this thing, as learning profanity.

All Want Life.

Now, the lesson this morning is about life. Ah, that is the thing that we all want. A man says: "I want this." "I need that." "I must have the other." But, his great want, and his great passionate desire, is to live on, and on, and on. So that, when he gets sick, he says: "Doctor, hurry. Hurry!" Hurry—why? In order that I may stay here. You know, some of you fellows (I know by myself), when you get sick, you are not concerned so much about the suffering and misery and pain that you are in, but your real misery and your real pain and your real suffering, is in wondering whether you are going to get to stay. Life!

This lesson says that a lawyer asked the Savior a question. Now, a lawyer in that day does not mean anything like our present word. He was a teacher of the Jewish church history, traditions and laws. That is what he was. A church official. So, he comes to the Savior with a great, very great, question. And, he says: "What shall I do?"—not what the American people shall do, or the people of Texas, or the people of Wichita Falls, or the people of Tenth street or Ninth street, or the Methodist people, but—"What shall I do, even me—what shall I do to inherit . . ?" Now, there is a world of wealth in the Bible that you run very readily and very easily over-look. "What shall I do to inherit eternal life?". No more important question has ever been asked by trembling, uncertain humanity, and no more important answer has ever been given them than was given in the parable of the good Samaritan. It looks to me as if it were a place where the Savior used infinite care to answer his question intelligently, satisfactorily, carefully, and so that he might grasp it.

"What shall I do to inherit eternal life?" Now, man cannot regulate the stars in their courses. He can do nothing about the trembling planets that swing about us. The clouds, the sunshine, and the rain, the eternal orbit of the seasons, and the days, and the nights, all these belong to God, and are beyond the reach of man. Then, if these things are beyond his grasp, what shall he do to inherit eternal life? Ah, he must bring himself in touch with his fellowmen.

His Fellowman.

I learned something from a very old gentleman, that I never saw before or since the one occasion, and I was quite a young man then, even younger than I am now. I struck him in a great railway station and he commenced talking to me, and I didn't talk, and was grouchy, like some of you sometimes, and he kept on talking to me, and I said: "Why are you talking to me, I never saw you before," or some such foolishness, and he said: "Why, nothing personal. You are just my fellowman." I took that little rebuke and that little lesson home with me, and got quite intimate with the old gentleman for the time being, but it was a real lesson for me, and ought to be for all of us.

Now, I said to you that this wish for life is the most important of all our wishes, of all our needs, of all our desires. This New Testament says in one place, that the sacrifice of the Savior, and the effort of the gospel was made in order that you might have a more abundant life. It isn't the length of your life here, but the width of it that counts. It isn't the praise or the applause of men, but it is that quiet, low voice that speaks to you alone and says: "Well done!" Ah, I would like to live my life, I would like to live on that high plane, so that I could cry out that "None but the Master shall praise me and none but the Master shall blame." That is the kind of a life to live, and that is the kind of a life to have. I say that your life ought to be wide. Oh, what a kingdom a man's mind ought to be to him. God pity that man and that woman, whoever and wherever they be, who have never discovered and have never explored the fine, high things of life.

Books a Treasure.

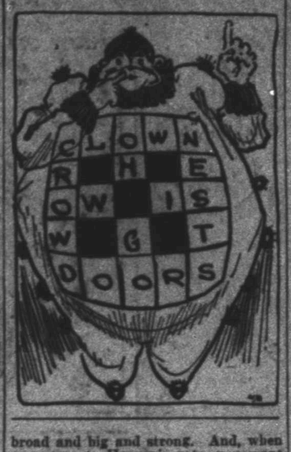

Life's jewels consist not in houses and lands and precious stones, but it consists and must always consist, for those who know and those who can appreciate, It must consist in the fine things of the mind. That is the reason that you ought to know good books. Happy is the man who can shut the door of his room and sit down understandingly and commune with the great that are in the books. Did you ever think what a fine thing that is to do? There is none of earth's great ones that I cannot command to come to my hearthstone on a stormy night, and there converse with him. Shakespeare is not buried at Stratford-on-Avon, as they say, but he comes at night to my hearthstone, and will come to you, and speak from his great artistic soul even to me and to you.

Quit thinking about the stocks, and stones and the ordinary things of your home, and make it a cultured home. Once in a while, I go to a man's house and I see an array of bookcases, spick and span, and all locked up, and the leaves, perhaps, have never been out. Now, if you are a cultured man, if you love books, if you love the voice of the writings of the great, then the boys are going to be lying all about the house, and on the floor, and they are going to keep them for your business and your use.

Dual Existence Of Man Bared In Minnesota City

Supported One Woman In Luxury In St. Paul, Other A Drudge in Minneapolis

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 30—The story of a dual existence in which he supported one wife in luxury in St. Paul, while his first wife lived as a drudge in Minneapolis was revealed by Minneapolis police tonight, when William Franklin, alias Langley, 30 years old, and Evelyn Combs Franklin the second wife, were charged with highway robbery.

The couple, according to Peter Orfin of Minneapolis, held him up and took $53 Wednesday night. Franklin, according to detectives married his first wife in December, 1921. She lives here in a room, where Franklin, who told her that he was a traveling man, spent a portion of his time. The woman works in a factory for two dollars a day.

Under the name of Langley, the detectives declared, Franklin married Evelyn Combs of Cambridge, Minneapolis on November 15. They lived in St. Paul in sharp contrast to the establishment in Minneapolis. While the first wife was a drudge the officers said, the second was supplied with jewelry and fur coats.

Cowboy-Actor Has Laugh on Sharks As He Beats Tax

"Depreciation" Of Will Rogers, Inc., Eats Big Hole In His Income Payments

IT'S NOT SO BIG

He Gives Wall Street Some New Pointers In Way To Slice Assessments

By JANE COMPTON.
Special Correspondent.
(Copyright, 1924, by the Consolidated Press Association.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—Will Rogers, famed maker of laughs, got another loud hee-haw out of little old New York today.

Will got the laugh on the income tax. For with the publication of figures that have worn the brains of many good Americans, came the word that Will clears some $70,000 a year for writing jokes for the newspapers and $4,000 a week for at least thirty weeks per annum for lassooing laughs from Flo Ziegfeld's audience — and pays less than $6,000 income tax.

Business men who read the bulletin quoting Will's income tax—bankers and investment men from Wall Street held their sides and groaned while Will laughed at each as he met them. If he really had an income of $200,000 a year the tax return should have been $86,640. If it was $150,000, it should have been $58,140.

And that is where the laugh comes in.

He Loses.

Will Rogers is a company. He loses tremendous sums through depreciation and he charges for undivided dividends.

"Will Rogers, Inc."—that is what he calls his act. Mrs. Rogers is the remainder of the corporation and pays an income tax that far exceeds the $5,906 he offered to Uncle Sam for the privilege of amusing his relatives last year.

"There is no trick to bringing down an income tax if you go at it right," said Rogers in the writer tonight as he dodged a group after group of Follies beauties tripping through the wings at the New Amsterdam. "I have simply taken a leaf out of the book of those financiers who profess to be so puzzled at my income tax.

"My brain would be a scrambled mess if I should try to figure out what the multi-millionaires' taxes would be if they didn't charge for incornoration, depreciation and undivided dividends. I used the same idea."

Tough Time for Will.

Poor Will—he has a tough time with depreciation. You know his jokes are not half as good the second time they are heard as they were the first, and they are almost nothing in a full year's time compared to their early value. He has to count some 25 per cent off the company's income on that account.

But worst of all is the trouble with undivided dividends. Rogers hardly gets a cent for all his efforts, so he said. Why, more than half of the money has to go back into making the act better and better. He gets no dividends from it all—well, hardly none, that is. And the remainder of the corporation requires half of the pitiful bit there is.

"Incidentally," said Rogers, "I bought a lot of land in California and I am paying a lot of interest on that and paying to keep it up. You know that takes a slice out of any man's income."

U. T. GLEE CLUB ON TOUR

Will Make Swing Through South and West Texas

AUSTIN, Nov. 30—The University of Texas Glee club is planning tours this year through south Texas, west Texas and the Rio Grande valley. The valley trip will be the largest excursion. Other shorter trips will be to Baylor college at Belton, to Taylor and to other towns near Austin. Although the smaller trips are tentative, the trip through the Rio Grande valley promises to be the most successful one.

STAGE STAR HERE

"Foot Loose" Here Wednesday Shows 2 Stars At Best

Margaret Anglin and William Faversham Comprise Notable Cast.

No two players appearing on the stage today are more popular than Margaret Anglin and William Faversham. Each has won a foremost place in the American theater; each has an unrivalled gallery of famous stage portraits; and either one appearing alone would be a sufficient magnet to pack any theater. But this season, George C. Tyler, who has in the past brought many famous stars together for touring purposes, has achieved another managerial coup, and Wichita Falls theatergoers are promised a theatrical treat, the like of which is seldom seen here, when he sends Miss Anglin and Mr. Faversham in Zoe Akin's "Foot-Loose" to the Palace theater Wednesday, December 3.

"Foot-Loose" is a gripping portraiture of character, being a rewritten version deferring to present day tastes and standards in the theater, of the famous and successful, "Forget-Me-Not." The older generation will recall with affection the remarkable triumph achieved by Genevieve Ward in this piece, both here in America and England. Its popularity was tremendous, different versions of the play springing up everywhere, and actresses, high and low, aspiring to play it. One production in particular that had been staged by the late Lester Wallack at Wallack's theater in New York, with Rose Coghlan as Stephanie de Mohrivart, was stopped by Miles Ward who sought to protect her rights by means of an injunction. Subsequently it was performed in America more than 2,000 times, no play of its period enjoying greater popularity.

The story of "Foot-Loose" has a lasting appeal; in fact, few plays are so grippingly dramatic or provide more solid and trenchant drama. As Stephanie de Mohrivart and Sir Horace Welby, both Miss Anglin and Mr. Faversham have roles which are said to radiate their own magnetism and personalities, and seldom is an opportunity given to witness such keen, well-shaded and powerfully effective acting as these players reveal in "Foot-Loose."

THE SENATE MUST DECIDE

At Least Three Election Contests Are to Be Aired.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—The senate of the next congress will be called upon to decide at least three election contests. A fourth will be added to the list unless the present senate disposes of the contest against Senator Mayfield, democrat, of Texas, which has been the subject of investigation for nearly two years.

Senator Bursum, republican, of New Mexico has informed senators in Washington he will contest the election of Sam G. Bratton, democrat, who was awarded the election by the official count.

To Have G. O. P. Support.

Senator Brookhart, republican, of Iowa, will be forced to defend his election, Daniel J. Steck, his democratic opponent, having announced plans for bringing a contest. An unusual situation has developed in this contest, as several republican leaders, including Senator Smoot of Utah, have announced their intention of supporting Steck.

Ferguson Assumes Role Of Pacifier In Tick Dispute

He Will Aid Wife in Ironing Out Trouble Between Cattle Men

THREE FACTIONS.

South, East and West Texas At Odds Over Question Of Eradication.

AUSTIN, Tex., Nov. 30.— James E. Ferguson, the peacemaker.

Jim Ferguson, about whose meteoric career to victory, his overthrow and his long, slow fight back, crowned by victory in his wife's election to the office from which he was removed, there has been a seven-years' fight in the politics of Texas, will essay the role of peace-maker, the harmonizer, agent for putting elements now warring, at work with each other, even before the start of his wife's administration.

To Smooth Out Trouble.

The series of pre-inauguration conferences with interests concerned in legislative programs, and government, and in particular, the meeting of cattlemen from every part of the state, have for their purpose, getting the conflicting interests together, as well as the decision as to what particular legislation is needed, Ferguson said here Friday.

There was something dramatic in Ferguson's appearance here this time. The former governor, whose clash with the University of Texas had much to do with the developments which brought about his impeachment trial, and the governor-elect, came to the Texas-A. & M. football game, and the dedication of the Texas stadium. Within the shadow of the institution his enemies have claimed he hated, Ferguson stood with bared head as the great stadium was dedicated, and the band of the university played "The Eyes of Texas," and as a guest of the university, sat with the governor-to-be in one of the boxes nearest the football field, and watched such a battle as Ferguson must have liked—one where ultimate victory was snatched in the face of apparent failure to win.

Three Factions.

Ferguson declared there are three conflicting interests among the cattlemen of Texas, which the conferences at San Antonio are undertaking to get at peace and unified behind some proper program.

There is west Texas that wants to keep up the tick work, he said. There is south Texas which shares in different areas in both sides; and east Texas, "dead-set against" spending money for the work.

"From their own viewpoints, each one is more or less right," Ferguson said a newspaperman.

"But from the point of view of a governor, trying to do the right thing by the entire state, some way must be found to get them at peace, and decided upon what is best for them."

LIBRARY FOR CLARENDON

CLARENDON, Texas, Nov. 30.—The Pathfinder's club of this city has filled a long felt need here with the opening of a public library in the city hall. The library was formally opened at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon with a reception and entertainment on the lawn of the Municipal building. Books for the association were procured by public donation.

Celebrate Fifth Anniversary Of Wichita Lodge

Encampment No. 6, I. O. O. F. Founded 5 Years Ago; Appropriate Ceremony

Wichita Encampment No. 6, I. O. O. F., observed its fifth anniversary Saturday night at the local I. O. O. F. hall, a large proportion of the membership being present and several visitors there from neighboring towns, among whom was Past District Deputy Grand Patriarch W. A. Pauncey of Vernon, who instituted the encampment on Nov. 29, 1919, five years ago.

Officers of the Royal Purple Degree Staff exemplified the work of the patriarchal branch of the order in a very impressive manner to the large number present, the patriarchal golden rule and royal purple being conferred on the following candidates: H. M. Simpson, W. L. Trammell, J. W. Cole, L. B. Reese, T. D. Yancy, W. B. Walker, G. C. Jefferies, L. B. Paul, L. W. Gibson, Reverend J. J. Bell, Arthur Gore, R. H. Ramsey, Carl Meade, Joe Marlowe.

A keen interest in the entertainment of the grand lodge to be held here in March was manifested by the assembly. Lunch was served by the Rebekahs following the ceremony.

Postal Workers Of City Agitating 'A Higher Wage Scale

Business Men Here Write to Solons Urging Passage Of the Bill

SENATORS FAVORING IT

Sheppard and Mayfield Both Announce Their Support Of Measure

The question of postal salaries, more or less dormant since President Coolidge's veto of a bill authorizing an increase earlier this year, is being revived again by postal employes in Wichita Falls who are seeking support in their movement by having the business men of this city write state senators and congressmen of their attitude toward the proposed increases.

Letters Written.

Several letters from prominent men in Wichita Falls have already been mailed at the instigation of the postmen, and promises have been obtained from others, it is said, that similar epistles will be forthcoming. The local postal organization is said to have received assurance from Congressman Guinn Willimans, and Senators Morris Sheppard and Earle B. Mayfield that these three are favorable to increase and will support the movement to secure it that has been put underway.

The increase asked for by the postmen is a $300 a year raise, this to increase the maximum salary of $1,800 which can be obtained now to $2,100. A bill to this effect was passed almost unanimously in both houses of congress last year, 73 to 3 in the senate and 362 to 6 in the house, but vetoed by the president, who characterized the appropriation as "extravagance."

It is pointed out by the postmen that in eighteen years postal salaries have been regulated, so as to increase the maximum salary from $1,200 a year to $1,800, an increase of 50 per cent, while the increase in the cost of living in the same period of time, according to figures of the department of labor, has increase over 110 per cent. During the same period postal receipts have increased over 210 per cent and weights of the mails over 500 per cent, while the personnel has only advanced 60 per cent.

The postal clerk represents a type of skilled labor, so it is held, which necessitates a degree of intelligence and familiarity with the work to be performed which has been found far more remunerative in other crafts.

SOLVE COAL PROBLEM.

Storage on Basis of Yearly Requirements Favored by Committee.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—A report of the coal storage committee of the American Engineering Council, made public today by James Hartness, president of the organization, outlines a series of community plans, by which the principal cities of the country may, through a system of uniform monthly shipments, avoid coal famines. Mr. Hartness said the survey on which the report is based has revealed storage to be the remedy for the nation's coal troubles.

The committee recommends, according to the report, that all consumers purchase coal on an annual contract for yearly requirements, with a provision the coal be delivered monthly in equal allotments. Consumers are urged to provide storage facilites to meet the terms of such a contract.

The recommendations are based on the finding that purchase of coal on a monthly delivery basis will enable coal mines to inaugurate and maintain a regular production schedule, and make it posible for carriers to plan definitely both schedules and equipment for a uniform movement of coal.

"A reduction of the price of coal will be made possible," the report states, "by more regular schedules of production and transportation, and by elimination of peak demands in the winter months, when the costs of both production and transportation are the highest."

Will Come in Nicely For Christmas, Says Big Winner

Cash awards totalling $1,000 in The Record News elephant contest are announced this morning. The contest, which ended Nov. 14, resulted in a number of ties for first place. A second problem was submitted to prize winners and the solution of R. H. Hollinger, 1613 Garfield avenue, won first prize.

Mr. Hollinger is part owner of the Wichita Typewriter Exchange at 808 Eighth Street and is a pioneer subscriber of the Record News.

"Handy for Christmas."

"Well, now, you can't tease me about that elephant contest," said Mr. Hollinger, as he was informed of his good fortune last night. "All my friends have been giving me the razzoo about burning the midnight oil," he said with a laugh.

Mr. Hollinger has been a Wichitan for 15 years. He says the $500 will "come in mighty handy for Christmas."

There are twenty-four other prize winners. D. H. Allday, 1823 Pearl Street, of this city, won a second prize of $200.

Milton E. Price, 1701 Huff Avenue, won third prize of $75.

The problem of unemployment has again presented itself to Captain Wilkes of the Salvation Army who, since Saturday, has had seventy-five calls from men for work to do, or aid, either for money, food or a place to sleep. The fair weather seems to have caused the increase.

Captain Wilkes may be reached at the Salvation Army headquarters, call 6221.

Rone Liquor Case Now on Trial Here

L. E. Rone of the Scotland addition, charged by the state with possession of intoxicating liquor for purpose of sale, went to trial in eighty-ninth district court yesterday before Judge P. A. Martin.

Witnesses for the state testified they had found whiskey near the Rone residence and John B. Smiley, a boy, said he had played with Rone's son and had seen the elder Rone sell liquor in bottles and glasses.

Ben Allred, district attorney, and his assistant, Harry Bishop, are presenting the state's case, while Jimmy Allred, former district attorney and brother of the prosecutor, and Shields Heyser, are counsel for the defense.

FARM WORKER IS VICTIM OF 2 HI-JACKERS

Two unmasked white men, each armed with a gun, took $41.40 in cash off of Alec Thompson, cotton picker, in a hi-jacking episode on upper Barwise street shortly before 9 o'clock last night. Thompson, according to the story told police, was returning from Byers, where he had been picking cotton, on his way to his home in central Texas. He had camped on the edge of town and had started in to buy a pair of shoes when he was accosted by the two men and told to hand over his money. They took all he had except $4.00 in a shirt pocket which they did not find.

Thompson furnished police a fair description of the two hijackers.

The employes had just left the department store when their delivery wagon was forced to the curb by the robbers who were in an automobile.

SHOPPING FOR HOLIDAYS ON A BOOM HERE

Two And Half Million Increase in Clearings Shown

SPEND MORE WISELY

Practical, Though Expensive Gifts Are Much In Favor

Christmas shopping has begun earlier in Wichita Falls this year and merchants are anticipating the greatest season of holiday buying in the history of the city, they said yesterday.

Merchants not only agree that shopping has begun earlier this season than ever before, but say that customers are spending more money, buying more judiciously, and choosing their gifts with more deliberation than has been the custom of previous years.

Figures Show It.

Banking conditions show that Wichitans are shopping earlier. In the month of November, 1925, banks of Wichita Falls handled $14,119,224.02, an increase of more than two and one half millions handled in 1924 in the same month, according to a statement issued by the clearing house association yesterday. The clearings for November, 1924, were $11,583,077.36.

To show that conditions are stable and that business is good is still further recorded in the bank clearings from January 1, 1925, through November 30, when the banks cleared a

LYRICS OF LIFE.
By Douglas Malloch.
The Crossing Cop at Home.

I'd like to see a crossing cop
At home, some way of knowing
If when at home he hollers "Stop!"
Where do you think you're going!
I wonder if he scaters gloom
And does as much of bossing
When he is in a dining-room
As when he's at a crossing!

I wonder if the other folks
Back up when he is present,
Or if he cracks his little jokes,
Those jokes so seldom pleasant!
If so, I'm sorry for his wife—
It must be something awful
To feel each moment of your life
You're doing things unlawful.

I often have suspected, though,
At home it's Mrs. Copper
Who tells the traffic how to go,
And does it good and proper.
And then he hurries out, mayhap,
To where the autos pass him
And takes it out upon some chap
Who doesn't dare to sass him.

So, Mrs. Copper, hear my plea:
Deal gently with the erring,
Because your man takes out on me
The things at home occurring.
Please be as gentle as a dove,
Observe his faults with blindness,
And put him on a diet of
The milk of human kindness.

The passage across the Atlantic was made in five days, six hours and 26 minutes.

ROAD FIRM'S CASH IS TIED UP BY MOODY

Hoffman Company Is Enjoined From Distributing Money

AUSTIN, Texas, Nov. 30.—(AP) Attorney General Dan Moody late today refused to give the Hoffman Construction company permission to pay two of its sub-contractors $68,756.75. This sum is due J. F. Dexter of Dallas and H. K. McCollom of Fort Worth for work done on state highways, contract for which was let the Hoffman Construction company. The company owes Dexter $40,908.07 and McCollom $27,848.68.

The fifty-third district court earlier in the day had issued a temporary order, restraining the Hoffman Construction company until December 16 from disbursing any of its funds, except for current expenses, from collecting any money due from the state and from removing any property from the state. Application of the state for a temporary injunction and for appointment of a receiver will be considered beginning December 16.

Charge Excess Profits

The state is sueing for $100,000 damages, which it claims is due it because of excess highway profits made by the company, for preventing the payment of $296,000 in approved estimates and for cancellation of charter.

Moody pointed out that should the company pay the money due Dexter and McCollom, it would not have enough money in the bank to satisfy claim of the state, should the state gain judgment.

Company Head Ill

Illness of George Davisson of Eastland, president of the Hoffman Construction company, caused attorneys for defense to ask for postponement on the hearing for temporary injunction.

The defendants contend the attorney general, in arriving at conclusion the company had made exorbitant profits, neglected to take account of expenses of $118,230.55.

Mine Owners Ban Pinchot's Plan

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 30.—(AP)—The anthracite operators in a letter to Governor Pinchot late today wrote that "it is impossible for us to find in your proposals the basis of a sound and lasting settlement and for the same reasons they cannot be considered as a basis for conference and negotiations."

The letter was signed by William W. Inglis, chairman of anthracite operators' negotiating committee.

The miners have already accepted the governor's proposal as a "basis of settlement."

TEXAS PRISON BREAK BLAMED ON OFFICIALS

Negligence Is Charged By Widow in Seminole Tragedy

SHE SHOT SLAYERS

Good And Ross Bear Wounds Due to Woman's True Aim

SAN ANTONIO, Nov. 30.—(AP) The escape of Milt Good and Tom Ross from the penitentiary at Huntsville Sunday was the result of negligence on the part of prison officials and guards and was pre-arranged by Good sometime ago, while out on furlough, according to Mrs. Martha Robertson, widow of H. L. Robertson, for whose murder, and that of W. L. Allison, the men were serving 51 and 55 years sentences respectively.

Mrs. Robertson is superintendent of the Robert B. Green Memorial hospital here. The two escaped men bear scars inflicted by bullets from a 25 calibre pistol fired by Mrs. Robertson on that Easter Sunday night in 1923, when her husband and Allison were slain in a little hotel at Seminole, an isolated west Texas village.

Were Cattle Inspectors.

Robertson and Allison were inspectors for the Southwestern Cattle Raisers' association and were shot to death in the lobby of the little hotel.

Mrs. Robertson, who had accompanied her husband to Seminole, was upstairs undressing for bed when she heard shots in the lobby. She rushed down the steps with the small calibre pistol in her hands and as Good and Ross departed through the front door she fired two shots.

One hit Ross' belt buckle and deflected, inclicting a flesh wound in his abdomen, and the other penetrated one of Good's hands. The men got into a waiting automobile and drove rapidly away. Ross' wound bled profusely, however, and fearing that the wound was serious, they stopped out on the plains and telephoned back to the sheriff that they would give up. When they returned to town, Ross' first request was for medical attention.

It is the general belief in west Texas, according to Mrs. Robertson, that but for her true aim, the men would have made good their escape and would never have been brought to trial.

"I wish I had killed them," Mrs. Robertson said Monday, as she brooded over their escape from the Texas penitentiary.

State-Wide Search On.

DALLAS, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Texas Rangers, penitentiary agents and officers all over Texas were today scouring the state in the effort to capture Milt Good, Tom Ross, Clarence Whalen and George Arlington, who made a sensational escape from the Huntsville penitentiary yesterday. A woman who visited Arlington in the prison Sunday afternoon is held in jail at Conroe in connection with the escape.

GRAVE DIGGERS ON STRIKE

200 of Cemetery Employes' Union Ask For Recognition of 8-Hour Day At $6.

CHICAGO, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Approximately 200 grave diggers were reported on strike today at several cemeteries.

The newly organized cemetery employes' union announced yesterday that its members would strike at five Roman Catholic cemeteries as a test strength.

The union announced that its strike was for recognition of the union, a $6 a day minimum wage for an eight-hour day instead of $4 or $5 for a nine or nine and one-half hours work.

Drys Call Ma's Hand for Reward

DALLAS, Nov. 30.—(AP)—The Texas Anti-Saloon league today challenged Governor Miriam A. Ferguson "to make good" on her offer of a reward of $500 for the conviction of every liquor law violator worth more than $5,000.

Through Reverend Atticus Webb, superintendent, the league offered "to take down the reward as fast as the governor can put it up until her funds are exhausted."

R. Q. Lee Declines Highway Post

AUSTIN, Nov. 30.—(AP)—R. Q. Lee of Cisco, president of the West Texas chamber of commerce, has refused an appointment as member of the Texas highway commission, it was authoritatively learned today. Arch Allen of Dallas, former Dallas county judge, it was understood, has tentatively accepted a highway commission post. One of the provisions Mr. Allen will insist on before definitely accepting the appointment is that the other member to be appointed meet with his approval. Mr. Allen has had two long conferences with the governor. Mr. Lee has not conferred with the chief executive.

Ma to Revoke Her Butler's Pardon

AUSTIN, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Although it was reported at Governor Miriam A. Ferguson's office today that the woman executive had no comment to make on the arrest Saturday of George Brady, 35, butler at the executive mansion, on a charge of possession of liquor for the purpose of sale, it was indicated the conditional pardon she granted him will be revoked. The negro was first paroled by Governor Pat M. Neff.

Governor Declares She Will Not "Throw Myself to the Wolves Who Want to Gather Here and Tear Me Apart."

TEXAS NEWSPAPERS UNDER FIRE

"We're Asking No Favors," Jim Tells Writer From Baltimore, and Then Ma Warns Ex-Governor About That 'We' Stuff.

AUSTIN, Nov. 30.—(AP)—In an interview Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson stated that she would not call a special session of the legislature by December 10, as requested by more than forty members of the legislature, but her five proclamations today calling for elections to fill vacancies in the house of representatives indicated here that the woman governor has reserved the prerogative of calling the special session in an expediency.

AUSTIN, Texas, Nov. 30.—(AP)—A representative of the Baltimore Sun, who today obtained an exclusive interview with Governor Miriam A. Ferguson and her husband James E. Ferguson, quoted the former as declaring she would not call a special session of the legislature as demanded in a petition signed by Speaker Lee Satterwhite and fifty of its members. She added, according to the Sun representative, that she was not going to "throw myself to the wolves who want to gather here and tear me apart."

"Let them assemble if they want to," she declared. "Let them start something. I'll still be here when they finish." She said she was a fighter.

The Sun will say that political opponents of the Fergusons—Jim and Miriam—are seeking to unhorse the woman governor. That the claim is made by political opponents that Jim Ferguson, former governor impeached eight years ago, has usurped the functions of his wife and is the real executive.

"Every Newspaper In Texas Against Us"

Attorney General Dan Moody has compelled road contractors to refund huge sums to the state on contracts granted under the present regime. Members of the legislature seek a special session to investigate these conditions, and Jim's enemies are openly seeking to impeach his wife—not that they declare because they have anything against her—because Jim, they say, has usurped her duties and is the dictator of the state.

Ferguson denied, according to the story, a statement that he made a "tacit" admission that he carried out the duties of the governor. He said he never made any such admission, tacit or otherwise. "Now please make that clear," he said. "Every newspaper in this state is against the Fergusons. That's their privilege. Now, you boys come from all corners of the country. We're asking for no favors. Just a square deal."

"There goes that 'We' again," said Ma. "You want to watch out, Jim."

"That's where they got me wrong again," he said, "I've been saying that for years where Ma and I are concerned. I just can't help it."

"I'm No Statesman," Governor Confesses

"Hasn't he got the right?" Ma spoke up. "When I was on the stump campaigning I told the people I hadn't a thing but common sense. I'm not a statesman. How could I be? I've been a housewife for thirty years and nothing else. I told them when I felt I needed advice I'd ask for it from those who were capable of giving it to me. They've got to admit Jim knows politics. I've asked for his advice and I've taken his advice. And what are they going to do about it?"

"Jim dominates me?" she asked with a world of humor in her eyes. "From cooking dinner to pardoning convicts, I am his little willing slave. Do I look it, Mr. Man?"

She does not, the Sun will say.

"I should call a special session, thereby authorizing my enemies—my enemies, mind you, as much as Jim's in spite of all that mush about my being a frail delicate woman—I should authorize the state to pay the expenditures of these wolves who want to gather here and tear me apart. Throw myself to them! Not on your life. I know them too well. Born and bred among them."

Jim was asked if former Governor Colquitt had an active part in his own impeachment. "Yes," he laughed, "he was coaching on the sidelines. I walked out holding Ma's hands, and now they'd like to see her walking out holding mine."

Ferguson Explains Road Firm's Refund

"Now I want you to get another angle on this highway business," Jim said. "Our angle, and not what everybody has told you since you've been here. Dan Moody (the attorney general) claims a great victory over the fact the American Road company has refunded $800,000. What the Texas newspaper has brought out is the fact that the company only refunded this money when it was relieved of the obligation to put a second coat of asphalt over their job. Now the state must do that, and I doubt very much if the state can do it for $600,000. So, where is the great victory?"

Why Road Men Quit.

Jim was asked concerning the resignations of the two highway commissioners, Frank V. Lanham and Joe Burkett. Ma, however, the story says, volunteered the answer.

"They just naturally quit on us. They said, 'Here's all this mess stirred up while we've tried to do our best. We're through. Worry it out yourselves.'

"There's a lot of people who have done that since the trouble started. It's pretty hard fighting when you are alone. There isn't a newspaper in the state for us. And the other state officers are looking to themselves. There's Dan Moody. Do you know we put him on the ticket? Why, he's a neighbor. Known him since he was knee high (the attorney general is only thirty-two years old).

"About this impeachment business," Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson said, "let them come on. I see they claim to have raised $300,000 to pay the expenses of the special session. Dray

"Love Bound In Wichita Falls"

As Written for the Record News By the Flapper Wife

"A Telegram Is a Terrible Thing . . . You Never Know What's In It!" Moaned Mrs. Middleton.

READ THIS FIRST:

FLOSSIE and MARY ROSE MIDDLETON are two pretty sisters, the daughters of a widowed mother. Both of them work for the Dexter Oil company.

Flossie helps keep the files under MISS MACFARLANE. She is engaged to SAM JESSUP, secretary to HILARY DEXTER, the president of the company.

Mary Rose is stenographer to JOHN MANNERS, the sales manager, and is in love with him. But he is half engaged to DORIS HINIG, a girl of wealth.

Mary Rose discovers that Flossie is carrying on a more or less harmless flirtation with Hilary Dexter, who's married and the father of grown children. When she begs Flossie to give him up, the girl threatens to leave home and go to live with her chum, ALICE JAMES, a gay young flapper.

And her fair with Dexter goes merrily on. One night she is arrested by LENNIE BLAIR, the son of the neighborhood gossip, ANT HENNY BLAIR, for speeding in Dexter's car. Mary Rose manages to keep the story of the escapade from her mother's ears.

Flossie, not at all daunted, goes on her flirtatious career. One noon after she has spent $20 of the family savings on a permanent wave for her hair, she asks John Manners to take her to lunch. And rather reluctantly he does. That night he drives Mary Rose home from work, and ask her why she won't go out with him. She tells him that her reason for refusing is his engagement to Doris Hinig. And he answers that he'll tell her all about that engagement some time.

When he drives her up to her door, TOM FITZROY, a young doctor who wants to marry her, is waiting for her. She had completely forgotten that he was coming that night to take her to the "movies." Tom looks after Manners' departing car with wrathful eyes.

(Now Go On With the Story)

And when she came downstairs, he was standing in the hall waiting for her. Outside, the shining car that he drove stood at the curbstone.

"What time do they eat at your house?" he asked, as they settled down. "Six thirty?"

"Six o'clock." She wondered why he wanted to know.

"Then they've had supper," he answered, "and you've missed it, anyway. I'm going to take you for a drive out into the country—just a short run. It'll rest you. You've looked awfully tired all day."

"I'm not!" she answered, her eyes glowing. Suddenly she wasn't tired. The weariness she had felt all day had dropped from her like a shabby garment. She felt wonderfully alive and keen, and filled with happiness.

"I'm going to show you a little road where I went Sunday—all by myself," he went on, presently, as they left the close-packed houses behind them. "It's getting too dark to see it, really. But you'll feel the peace that's there—"

Then neither of them spoke for several minutes, while the soft spring wind rushed in their faces and lifted Mary Rose's hair in little dark sprays.

"Here it is," he said, and swung the car away from the Iowa Park road into a little lane.

They slowed down. All around them was the strong pungent odor of the pines. And they lifted their black pointed tips against the silvery evening sky. Somewhere in the stillness, a little stream sang to itself.

Mary Rose sat perfectly still, listening.

She felt as if time had stopped for that breathless moment. As if nothing had ever happened before—as if nothing would ever happen again. Just they two, together!

And suddenly she knew that if she moved, or turned her head toward him, John Manners was going to kiss her!

She knew it as every woman knows when a man wants to kiss her—long before the man knows it, himself! It is part of her instinct to love. To give herself!

And so Mary Rose closed her eyes. She longed to turn toward John Manners, and let him take the kiss she yearned to give him—

Ah, but suppose she should do it! Suppose she did let him take her in his arms! And then suppose that next week, next month, next year, he married Doris Hinig?

"Ah, no!" she said aloud, and started at the sound of her own voice in the stillness.

The magic moment passed. And once more she was John Manners' stenographer, and he was taking her home from work because she had stayed late at the office.

"What did you say?" he asked and she only shook her head. With a little sigh she held her wrist watch to the light on the dash.

"Heavens! It's seven thirty!" she cried. "And I've a date at seven thirty!"

In the dim glow she saw his face set grimly. "Why didn't you tell me you had a date?" he asked heavily. "I wanted you to have supper with me tonight."

"I told you last night I wouldn't have supper with you—because of Doris Hinig," she answered, her voice trembling.

He started the car. "But you also told me that you'd rather go with me than do anything else in the world. Did you mean that?"

Her head drooped. "Yes," she said, so softly that he had to bend to hear the whispered word.

"Then why not?"

"Because you're in love with another girl," she answered.

There was silence in the speeding car for a minute. And then John Manners said slowly: "I'll tell you all about that some day."

As they drove up to the house, Mary Rose saw three people standing on the tiny porch—her mother, Flossie and Tom Fitzroy.

"There's Tom!" she cried, as she stepped out of the car. "And I'm late! Good night!"

"Oh, Tom, I'm so sorry!" she called to him, as she ran up the front walk.

Manners' car stood at the curbstone for a moment more, and then moved slowly down the street, with its tail light winking at her through the darkness.

She turned to meet Tom's angry eyes. "Where have you been all this time, while I've been cooling my heels here?" he asked.

CHAPTER XV

"He—he brought me home from the office because I worked late," Mary Rose faltered in explanation.

"Who's 'he'?" Tom asked as the tail light of the car disappeared around the corner of the street.

"Why, Mr. Manners, the man I work for," the girl answered. "I thought you knew. I must have spoken of him to you—"

"Oh, yes," Tom growled. And then there was a tense silence.

Mary Rose looked up at him. In the dimness he seemed very tall, very good looking, very masculine.

"Listen, d-d-darling," he said presently. "Let's not go to see a movie tonight. There's going to be a moon, and we could drive out in the country to see that little house I told you about—the one I want to buy."

Mary Rose mused. She had a queer feeling that walls were closing in around her—that if she went to see the little house she would love it, would go there with him as his wife.

And yet as she looked up at him, outlined against the dark sky, she know suddenly that she was going to marry him some day. It was as if something within her spoke and told her so.

"I haven't had any supper," she objected. "Come on in, while I have a bite, and then we'll drive out and see it. Will that be all right?"

She opened the door of the house and went in, Tom following her on slow, unwilling feet.

It had hardly closed behind them when the doorbell pealed loudly in the little hall. A messenger boy stood on the porch with a sheaf of yellow envelopes in his grimly hands.

"Mrs. Anson Middleton live here?" he asked, thrusting one of them toward Mary Rose.

The girl took it and looked at it with wide, frightened eyes.

A telegram was a rarity in the little household. The last one had come years and years ago when Grandma Middleton had died down in Florida.

The kitchen door opened and Mrs. Middleton looked out. "I thought I heard the front door bell ring," she began, and then she caught sight of the yellow envelope in Mary Rose's hands.

Under the electric light her face went white to the lips.

"Your Uncle Charlie Dyer—" she said hoarsely, and held the envelope as if it were a snake, called to strike her.

Uncle Charlie Dyer was Mrs. Middleton's only brother, and for years he had been slowly dying with rheumatism of a curiously crippling kind. He was a great deal older than Mrs. Middleton and she looked up to him and loved him as if he were her father.

"I know he's dead," she said, drawing her eyelids together in pain. "I know he's dead!"

"Oh, Mother!" Flossie cried. "Open it, and let's see if he's dead!" Excitement in any form was the breath of life to her, and a telegram in the Middleton household was the apex of excitement.

"Flossie!" Mary Rose reproved her. She turned to her mother.

"Open it, Mumsie," she said. "Maybe it isn't bad news, after all."

Mrs. Middleton gave her a wild look and thrust the envelope into her hands. "Of course, it's bad news! Telegrams are always bad news for me," she said, and collapsed on the bottom step of the stairs. "You open it, Mary Rose. I can't! A telegram is a terrible thing! You never know what's it it!"

Mary Rose tore open the telegram. "It is about Uncle Charlie, Mumsie," she said slowly. "But he isn't dead—only a little worse than usual, Aunt Jane says. But she wants you to go down there right away."

"Then I know he's dying! She would not have sent for me unless—" and Mrs. Middleton began to cry without a sound. She threw her white apron over her head and rocked to and fro.

Mary Rose bent and put her young arms around the shaking figure.

"Now, Mother, that won't do, dear," she whispered. "You've got to be brave—and you've got to hurry! Aunt Jane says to come right away—"

She had a feeling that if only she kept things moving, her mother would not have time to think of her trouble. The one sight in the world that Mary Rose couldn't bear to see was her mother in tears. She would have gone through any torture to spare her any grief.

"Tom," she said sharply, "you look up the next train for Dallas! And Flossie, you dash up in the attic for mother's valise. You'll find it way up in the front, under the windows. Come along, mother, and I'll help you dress."

She dragged the shaking little figure up the stairs. Mrs. Middleton sat staring straight ahead of her into the mirror, while Mary Rose did up her hair in a neat knot, laced up her best shoes, and brought the black taffeta dress that Mrs. Middleton wore on Sundays.

"There's a train in half an hour. We'll have to shake a leg to make it," Tom called upstairs at the top of his voice.

For the next ten minutes there was great excitement in the little house. The valise was packed, with Mrs. Middleton's mourning veil laid in a neat square on the very top, and suddenly Mary Rose remembered that there was no money in the house, but a dollar or two that she and Flossie had for their lunches.

"Never mind, I have a hundred with me," Tom called up the stairs, as he heard them discussing it. "Hurry up, Mother, the car's waiting outside. Bring down the valise, Floss, and I'll put it in."

"I wish you were my son, Tom," Mrs. Middleton said soberly, a quarter of an hour later, as she kissed him and Mary Rose goodby at the station.

"I wish I were," Tom repeated, when he and Mary Rose were driving back to the house. He drove slowly, with one hand. His right arm was thrown around the girl's shoulder, and Mary Rose had not the heart to ask him to take it away.

How good he was! How quick and willing he had been to lend his money, his automobile and his comfort in her mother's hour of need!

"Tell me about this Manners guy that you work for. Is he young?" Tom asked suddenly. And at the very sound of John Manners' name something stirred in her heart—something that Tom, for all his goodness, could never stir and waken.

"Yes, he's young," she said in a low tone. It was very hard for her to speak of him to Tom.

"I think my mother plays bridge with his mother, or something like that," he went on. And she realized that Tom had been talking to his mother about John Manners. "But I've never met him as far as I know."

He stopped and looked closely at her. "Mary Rose, he isn't the fellow you're in love with, is he?"

She couldn't speak. A lump came in her throat. She turned to Tom, and buried her head against his coat.

She felt the car stop after a while, and knew that they were standing before her own house. But she didn't move. She felt as if she couldn't raise her eyes and look at Tom, now that he knew her secret—that she loved John Manners.

She felt his clumsy hands stroking her hair. "Poor little kid," he was saying. "Poor little kid."

Strangely enough, all his pity was for her—none for himself.

Flossie met them at the door with shining eyes.

"Houp-la! We're going to have a party!" she shrilled at them, shaking her glistening curls and executing a short but spirited toe dance. "A reg'lar, honest-to-George party!"

Mary Rose stared at her. "A party!" she repeated. "What are you talking about?"

"Exactly what I'm talking about, and nothing else but!" Flossie answered pertly. "I just caled up Alice James and Dodie Schutz and—some of the boys, and they're coming over for a while. Have you any objections, Purity?"

As she spoke, she turned on the lights in the living room and began to take the sheet music from the piano bench. Mary Rose folowed her and stood looking down at her with angry eyes.

"Why, Flossie Middleton, this is the pink limit!" she said to her. "Your Uncle Charlie lying dead, and you goving a party!"

"How do you know he's dead?" Flossie asked, looking up brazenly. "You know Aunt Jane throws a fit every time his heart skips a b[eat] and sends for Mother! He'll live to bury all of us! These chronic invalids always do!"

jected. "Come on in, while I have a

Mary Rose looked at her for a minute or two before she unfolded a slip of yellow paper that she had been holding in the palm of her hand for the last hour.

It was the telegram from Aunt Jane Dyer. "Read it," she commanded, and Flossie glanced at it.

"Charlie died at six this evening. Come at once," it read.

Flossie shrugged her shoulders. "You should have told the truth about the telegram," she said. "You're always telling me what a liar I am—and here you are telling Mother a whopper, yourself."

And yet she knew that Mary Rose wouldnt have lied about anything else.

"Do you suppose I would have let her know what was in that telegram, knowing it?" Mary Rose asked. "It'll be time enough for her to find out about it when she gets there. And it won't be such a shock to her. Don't you think I did right, Tom?"

Independent Well Broadens Oldham Area

COMPANY'S NO. 1 WOLFE, LOOKS LIKE NICE WELL

Petroleum Producers Fishing at 1,225 Feet to West Of Pool

Independent Oil and Gas company apparently had the fourth well in the new Oldahm pool southeast of the old Comac in southwest Archer county. Its No. 1, Wolfe, is understood to be showing for about 75 barrels from sand topped at 1,313 feet. The well is located a full quarter of a mile south of the three Texhoma wells here and gives the "proven" area a breadth of about six locations now. It looks as good as any well in the district, reports said yesterday.

West of the Texhoma group Petroleum Producers were fishing at a depth of 1,255 feet on their fifty-fifty with Primrose Refining company, No. 1, Wolfe. North of the Texhoma group Pink Hammond is starting up his No. 1, Oldham, Hubble survey. The Texhoma No. 1, Abercrombie, in the southwest corner of the SPRRCO survey, abstract 1281, section 2, is pumping 66 barrels now.

Madill Shallow Field

Humble Oil and Refining company and Lane and Watson are drilling ahead at 650 and 725 feet respectively after having failed to find the pay in their two tests south of the Geo. W. Bilbo et al well two miles east of Madill in Marshall county. The well mentioned had an initial production of 250 barrels at 571 feet, and is now doing 125 barrels pumping after making 206 barrels average over 42 days, oil measuring 48 degrees gravity. The No. 1, discovery well, completed last July 2 is still making about thirty barrels a day. The producers are located in the southeast corner of section 24-5-5e.

Major Pool

E. L. Smith Oil company has a small well offsetting the Major Petroleum company's No. 1, Turbeville, Jefferson County School Lands, south of Archer City to the south. Major Petroleum company's No. 2 is a dry hole and has been abandoned, the rig skidding north to the No. 3 location, just 300 feet north of the No. 1, which was a 35 barrel well or better.

E. L. Smith Oil company has moved the rig into the northwest corner of the lease for No. 13, a location west of the small well.

Terminal Area

Phillips Petroleum company should have been on the sand some time late yesterday or today in their No. 1, Falls County School Lands near the Terminal Oil company's small well north of the Carey pool. It was last reported drilling at a depth of 1,100 feet.

Atlantic Oil Producing company's test in the same district is drilling below a last reported depth of 675 feet.

South Harmel

W. J. Green has an oil sand at 1,314-22 feet and is setting a casing to test on his No. 1, Morrison, in block 1576, south of the northwest end of the Harmel pool, four corners district. Meager reports give the sand credit for showing a well.

Gulf's No. 1, Wilburn, west offset to the Green No. 1, Wilburn, and located in the northeast corner of block 1584, TE&LCO survey, is understood to be a dry hole.

Atlantic Oil Producing company No. 1, Powell, in block 1588, TE&LCO survey, southeast of the Green's No. 1, Morrison, had pulled casing yesterday to drill deeper after testing salt water in sand at 1330-36 feet.

Kentucky Oil Corporation has made a location for a test in the northwest corner of the west half of the southeast quarter of TE&LCO survey, block 1590, northwest of the old Verschoyle Wainscott hole, northwest Young county.

News of the Fields

Roberts-Hill Pool

Atlantic Oil Producing company No. 7, Murray, on the east side of the Hill and Roberts pool, southeast of Iowa Park, south Wichita county, was down 750 feet yesterday and drilling.

NE of Gambrell

M. & V. Oil company's No. 1, Kunkel, in the BBB&CRRCO survey, section 3a, abstract 51, east of the Mahlstedt-Monk well, was on sand yesterday and testing at a depth of 1,073 feet.

Orth Vicinity

Consolidated Oil company's No. 1, Jefferies, in TE&LCO survey, block 51, southwest of Orth, north Young county, was supposed to be bailing during the day yesterday. Sand showing some oil was topped at a depth of 912 feet.

Wichita Wildcats

Texhoma Oil and Refining company Mrs. Nora Michie, in the Netherly survey, between the Roberts and Hill pool and the Lockridge land production, southern Wichita county, is spudded and is drilling below a last reported depth of 90 feet.

Throckmorton County

Texhoma Oil and Refining company No. 3, Reynolds Land and Cattle company, in the Comanche Indian reserve, lot 57, southern Throckmorton county, was down 2,447 feet in a red shale, according to reports yesterday.

Wichtex-Dixie Area

Wichtex Oil company and Dixie Oil company have skidded their derrick over and are spudded and drilling to the location for No. 4, Annie P. Jackson, located 450 feet each way out of the northwest corner of block 132, Aldridge survey, north and east of the lone producer.

Archer City

M. L. Lewis is rigging up rotary on a test on the Bagget land on a 47-acre tract in lots 4, 5 and 10 of the Martin addition to Archer City, on the southeast edge of the townsite, central Archer county.

NW Harmel

Jones et al had spudded and were drilling yesterday on their No. 3, Darilek, a location north of the southwest corner of the northwest quarter of section 1582, TE&LCO survey, northwest Harmel area. The well will offset Magnolia's No. 3, Cowden-Portwood to the east. The No. 1, discovery well for the area, has been abandoned at a total depth of 1,415 feet after a number of attempts to make a well. No. 2 was plugged and abandoned some time ago.

Haskell County

Herbert Oil company-Gose have all but about ten feet of casing in the bottom of their test in northwest Haskell county drilled up and should be through with that and on their way again in a few days. The mud was partially taken out of the hole a day or so ago, at which time the gas pressure was so strong that mud and slush was blown all over the country for several feet around. Bottom of the hole is about 2,330 feet.

East Archer County

Atlantic Oil Producing company has a derrick up for a test offsetting the Steward Development company's newest well west of the old Delmar production, northeast of Archer City, east Archer county. The well will be located 577 feet east and 167 feet north of the southwest corner of lot 67, Corzine survey. It will be a north offset to the new producer which is pumping about 70 barrels from pay at 1,021-22 feet.

Wilbarger County

Clark-Harbin-Baldridge No. 1-E, Waggoner, in the northwest corner of section 6, block 5, H&TCRRCO survey, southern Wilbarger county, is down 1,130 feet and drilling.

Clark-Harbin-Baldridge No. 1-B, Waggoner, in the M-K-T railway company survey, block 2, about two miles southwest of Harrold is stringing up cable tools.

Clark-Harbin-Baldridge No. 1-K, Waggoner, in the northeast corner of the south half of the north half of section 46, block 2, H&TCRRCO survey, is a derrick for a cable tools test.

Petroleum Producers are spudding on their No. 1-C, Dill, in the southwest corner of the east half of the southeast forty of the southwest quarter of section 84, H&TCRRCO survey, block 14, South Vernon, Wilbarger county. No. 2-B was drilling in yesterday after setting casing atop sand at about the depth of 2,280 feet.

Garber Area

While Garber's total production Saturday morning was slightly more than 55,500 barrels a day from all sands, being a decline of approximately 25,000 barrels from its recent peak, operators there were forecasting a new peak shortly when wells drilling in the potential north end are completed.

Their forecasts are qualified, however, with the opinion that the new production cannot last long and its decline will be as sharp as has already been noted. Among active oil companies the opinion already exists that Garber is no longer a menace to the stability of the Mid-Continent oil market, even should it experience an increase shortly.

The deep sand Saturday morning was estimated at 51,000 barrels, although several sources put it at 50,423 barrels.

Hearings Start For Carbon Black

AUSTIN, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Hearings on applications for permits to erect plants in the Breckenridge oil field to make carbon black from natural gas began before the Texas railroad commission today. The hearings were set with Hurber Gasoline company, Breckenridge, Phillips Petroleum company, New York, and the Humble Oil & Refining company, Houston.

874 AIR DEATHS.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—(AP)—In the eight years from 1917 to 1924, there were 874 army deaths resulting from airplane accidents, not including from world war battle casualties. These figures are disclosed in the annual report of Major General M. W. Ireland, surgeon general of the army.

ANOTHE BRIDGE FOR RIO GRANDE

Rene B. Creager of Brownsville and incidentally the republican boss of Texas, has returned from the city of Mexico where he had a conference with President Calles. He brought back with him cheering news. He expects to have a bridge across the Rio Grande at Brownsville in the near future and predicts it will be a great benefit to the people of that section of Texas, as well as the people of Mexico.

There is to be a bridge acrorss the Rio Grande at Brownsville and another at Hidalgo.

He found everything quiet in Mexico, as usual. He admits there seems to be some trouble in the minds of foreigners over Article 27 of the Mexican constitution and pending bills to change it, and found also some worry and agitation over the prospective labor bill, but is of the opinion these matters seems to be near solution.

On the other hand, Boss Creager says, Mexico is going forward in practically every respect. He says the highway work is getting under way, so far as preparations to build the roads are concerned; finances of Mexico are in good shape and the country is on a firmer basis financially, following the satisfactory settlement of the foreign debt difference. Boss Creager knows Mexico. He is a native Texan. He has lived for many years on the banks of the Rio Grande.

He speaks the language of the people. He knows the traditions of Mexico, the customs of the people, the conditions of the people, the aspirations of the people, and he understands the Latin-Indian temperament. A very wise man when it comes to the so-called Mexican problem, is this republican boss of Texas. Dismissing his policy and political ambitions, the human element enters largely into the composition of Rene B. Creager. He would have peaceful relations with Mexico. He would extend a guiding as well as a helping hand to Mexico. He would see public highways everywhere in Mexico. He would make the public schools of Mexico second to none.

He would abolish peonage in Mexico, and he would use some of the wealth of Mexico, taken from the soil of Mexico, to uplift and educate the masses of the people of Mexico. In saying this, vastly more can be said for Boss Creager than for many of his countrymen who are willing to exploit the national wealth of Mexico and never contribute a just share of the wealth for the educational and moral uplift of the unfortunate peon class.

Mexico has been kicked in the face for centuries by the nationals of European countries and the adventurers known as the Knights of the Golden Fleeche of the United States. God Almighty made Mexico rich in natural resources, with a wealth and fertility of soil unsurpassed, and many varieties and degrees of climate unknown in less fortunate lands. Mexico should be given the helping hand, and in Mexico, the underdog, who is the peon, should not be kept in the ditch and kicked in the teeth year in and year out by he exploiters of his own country and the exploiters who flock to Mexico from other elimes and countries. What Mexico needs is the helping hand; what the peon needs is justice.

SAFE FOR STUPIDITY

American intelligence is declining and civilization makes the world safe for stupidity, Albert Edward Wiggam, biologist and associate editor of the American Magazine, declared in an address before a session of the convention of the Texas State Teacher's Association.

Which is mostly bunk. American civilization is not declining, and there is less stupidity in the world today than ever before. Professor Wiggam has a queer theory, it follows:

"Vice purifies the race. So does disease. They weed out the vicious and the weak." This may be true. If it is, why the doctors? Why medicine? Why surgery? Why school houses? Why churches? Why laws for the protection of life and property? Why civilization?

Why not go back to the jungles and jungle practices? Education must make some men mad. Education must make some men fools. Every civilization that has ever perished was succeded by a more advanced and more humane civilization. There are more civilized people today than ever before. There are more law abiding people today than ever before.

Uncommon Sense

THE DUTY DODGER

Sometimes while working in an office where perhaps a hundred people were employed, I have wondered how anybody could grumble about the difficulty of advancement.

For in every hundred workers there are at least fifty duty dodgers.

And the fact that these workers either will not or can not take the trouble to do their work properly ought to make it easier for those who do to get ahead.

In one office which I visited from time to time there were more than 200 girls in various departments, and it seemed as if half the number could usually be found employing lip sticks and mirrors instead of their typewriting machines and stenographic pads.

Many of these duty dodgers would hurry to the rest room as soon as one of the managers appeared with a job to be done, in order to avoid it.

Had they worked half as hard at their jobs as in trying to evade work, they would not have had to look so sourly at their thin pay envelopes at the end of the week.

It is hard to understand what profit there is in this sort of thing.

The day seems short when there is plenty of work to do, long and tiresome when there is not.

The fatigue at its end is just the same whether a person has been kept busy or idle.

It is interest in work that makes for contentment. And almost any job can be made interesting if the worker thinks continually of better and more efficient ways to do it.

The old story of the hod carrier who when the whistle blew carried his hod down from the top of the ladder, which he had just reached, instead of depositing it on the scaffolding, is not as far fetched as one might imagine.

There are plenty of people who feel some how that they are getting ahead of heir employers if they do as little work as possible.

As a matter of fact they are getting behind with themselves, for the only chance of promotion comes with good work, and the only way good work can be done is by plenty of practice.

The cases I speak of are not cases in which the office boss was a driver, or was trying to get the last ounce of effort out of his employees.

The man whom I visited was good natured, well disposed toward his office force, and only too willing to send them ahead if they deserved it, for he had plenty of higher places to fill.

But he got only about 75 per cent as much work out of the girls he employed as he was entitled to get. And the duty dodgers among them got only about half the pay they could have got if they had been willing to do all their worrk and do it as well as they could.

It is the type of girl who lets her mother wash the dishes while she goes to the movies who makes the duty dodgers.

And it seems to me that perhaps the mother who lets her go to the movies, and does the house work so that she can, may be in part responsible for the failure of her daughter ever to be anything more than a low paid employee, most of whose time is spent trying to see how little work she can do.

AT ITS OLD TRICKS

Since nobody but the whole country wants tax reduction and wants it speedily, the House Ways and Means Committee and both Republican and Democratic representatives generally show a plebeian disposition to let the country have what it demands. The bill has been substantially finished. The prospect is that it will pass the house within ten days after the meeting of Congress. But such rash doings are scorned by that greatest common deliberator, the Senate. The impulsive children of the house must be corrected by these majestic censors and augurs, in sage wisdom old. Senator Simmons, whose mutilation of the last tax law helped endear the Democratic party to the voters last fall, is again cooking up rates of his own. Mr. Norris is marshaling hosts of words for the bombardment of "wealth" and a defense of income tax publicity. Senator Borah is preparing to show that everybody but the senior senator from Idaho is wrong about everything.

Senator Walsh of Montana will fortify a commanding position and maintain it so long as there is paper enough left to keep the Congressional Record going. Young Mr. La Follette will strive to prove that he inherits his father's genius. Frazier and Shipstead are full of utterable thoughts. If Brookhart holds his seat, copiously will he hold forth from it. In short, the etiquette of the Senate will be followed carefully. To give it the last touch of impressiveness, "Jim" Reed sends notice from Kansas City that he means to discuss the bill "fully"—in his mouth a temporal adverb of days, of weeks. "What, goodman boy; go to!" Old Man Senate says to Child House: "You always must be doing something; I'll show you how not to "do it." Such is the function of the senate, and a tax bill is peculiarly rich in covered walks, side-alleys, mazes wherein to stray and entertain the senatorial fancy.

Besides, who knows what stratagem may be behind this program of blocking and bedeviling tax reduction? It is so momentous that there is no hurry about it. Can't the discussion of it be spun out so long that that unfinished business, the World Court, itself capable of infinite discussion, unfinished must remain?

Down in the Cornfield.

Straight into a green jungle plunged Growly, with Peter close behind him, the silken tassels of the corn waving about their heads. The Bear came to a stop, and so suddenly that the Boy bumped into him. Peter's heart flew into his throat.

"W-w-hat's the matter?" stuttered he. "Do you scent trouble, Growly?"

The Bear shook his shaggy head and drew a deep breath.

"Nugh! Nugh!" grunted he, and Peter, used to Bear language, was glad to know that his friend meant no. "I can't smell a thing but corn, but it is always best to be on the safe side, so I'll take a look around before I start a-feasting."

Petter stepped back a pace, and just in time. Growly f ntrying to rise to his hind feet in the narrow rows between the corn lost his balance and would have tumbled on the boy had Petter still bee in the same spot where he had been standing a second before. A second trial, and Gowly's nose was poking out of the tassels. Slowly Growly pivoted around and he looked so clumsy and so comical that Peter snickered.

"Laugh on, Boy!" growled the Bear. "It is best to be merry while one can. One never knows when one must laugh out of the other side of one's mouth. All safe in the cornfield. Not a Two-Legs this side of the high hill. 'Tis milking time in the barnyard and they will be too busy to come strolling this way."

"Ugh!" grunted Growly, as he bent a knee. "Wuh!" grunted he as he rocked from side to side. "G-r-r-r!" he growled, as he sat down upon his haunches—sat down right plumb in the middle of the cornfield.

"What are you going to do next?" asked Peter, but he might as well have saved his breath. Growly believed that actions spoke louder than words. In reply he merely winked a wicked eye.

"Crack!" A green, juicy cornstalk tumbled to the ground. "Crack!" A second fell across it. "Crack!" A third dropped to keep them company.

Growly, the greedy giant, was stretching out his long arms as far as they would go and breaking off stalk after stalk of corn. And when he thought he had cut down as many as his arms would hold, Growly gathered up the sheaves and one by one devoured the ripe, sweet ears that grew on the top.

Peter watched his shaggy friend for a while, and then suddenly his own "tummy" began to feel very empty, indeed.

Now, if there was one food of which the Boy was very fond it was corn. He looked at Growly and then at the mass of stalks in the Bear's arms, and then straight at Growly again, and this time his friend saw him and winced.

"M-m-m-m! Good!" gruited he. "Don't you wish you were me?"

"No," replied Peter, truthfully. "I don't but I would like an ear of corn. Would you care if I picked one?

"What a joke!" chuckled Growly, making a queer sound in his throat. "I never hoped to live to see the day when a Two-Legs would ask such a favor. Fancy a Boy asking a Bear's permission to gather corn in a Two-Legs' field!

Growly grunted ungain and then remembered his manners.

"Don't bother to break off another, Boy. Have one of mine," and he held out an ear to Peter.

"Thanks!"

Stripping off the leaves, the Boy took a tink bite. But when he had tasted the sweet, juicy kernels he gave a cry of delight.

"Great! No wonder you were in such a hurry to begin your feast Growly," cried he. "This is the first time I have ever eaten raw corn, and I like it. 'Tis sweet as sugar and just as tender. Only thing is I have to chew it longer."

Editors Say So In T. and O.

What Texas and Oklahoma Editors Think of Things In General

From the looks of some folks, it would seem that when man made his famous jump from monkey, their ancestors were bringing up the rear.—Childress Post.

We once ran across a man who declared that every editorial paragraph in the local papers of his town were intended for him, if they were the least suggestive. He said he knew all the newspapers were against him. A careful poll of the editors of that town revealed the startling fact that not one of them there had thought of that man in months, let alone wrote of him.—Stamford Leader.

HOW IT STARTED

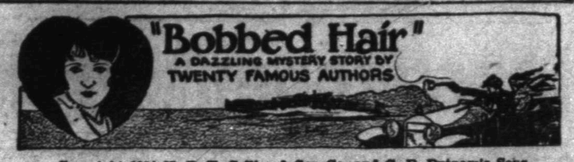

"Calamity Jane."

One of the most familiar slang expressions in everyday speech is "Calamity Jane." "Calamity Jane!" we call a person who seems inseperable from trouble, usually one who is reputed to be a "joy killer," whose faculty for sensing and exaggerating trouble is so great that she seems almost to bring trouble when he comes into our midst. That connotation, however, has a somewhat different shade of meaning from the original significance of the expression.

We have the term from a flesh and blood woman of pioneer times in the West, one of the best known and most picturesque characters of frontier days. She was Martha Cannary, born in Princeton, Mo., in 1852, the daughter of a minister, subsequently a hard drinking, hard swearing, a dead shot of a gunwoman—with a heart of gold, nicknamed "Calamity Jane!"

A product of the open prairie and Indian Wars, Jane was a woman who had no fear, and her expertness with firearms gained her a reputation in the frontier country that was second to no man's. Although she was thrice married, it was a man's part that she wanted to play. In 1870 she enlisted with General Custer as a teamster and discarded her woman's clothes for man's. She also is known to have carried one of the most dangerous pony express routes on which many daring men had met death from the mail bandits.

How she received the soubriquet is a somewhat disputed fact, one version being that Bill Nye gave her the name in his paper, the Laramie Boomerang, in the early '70's, another being that she acquired the nickname after saving the life of a soldier of the scouting band with which she was traveling. According to the story the officer was shot by a pedestrian and was just about to lose his scalp when Jane galloped and dispatched the Indian. When he regained consciousness he remarked that he was lucky to have such a heroine as Jane around in times of "calamity." In any disturbance in the Black Hills in frontier days, "Calamity Jane," as she had come to be called, was certain to be found somewhere in the heap! And her nickname has survived for the person whom we associate with trouble.

SYNOPSIS

From David Lacy's farm home on Long Island, Aunt Celimena, Connemara Moore and Bing Carrington set out in Lacy's car to return to auntie's Connecticut home. On the way to the shore they overtake Saltonstall Adams, still wearing the fancy costume he put on for last night's ball. Connemara was to have announced her engagement to either Bing or Salt but has become greatly interested in David. Aunt Celimena has a premonition that more adventures are ahead for the entire party.

George Palmer Putnam

By George Agnew Chamberlain

CHAPTER XVIII

It can be imagined that Moorelands, under its long virginal regency, had not been much given to indiscriminate hospitality. In spite of the outcrop of sporting blood in Aunt Celimena, she was still a victim of that high voltage New England reticence which senses a sort of violation in having unattached gentlemen sleeping on the place. As for the presence of Sweetie, that was simply more and worse of the same thing. Never would Aunt Celimena forget or forgive the shock of finding one of her own sex wearing male attire, not in the simpering spirit of a fancy dress ball, but as if she gloried in its opportunities for unmaidenly display. Could the unwilling hostess have had her way, she would have locked Sweetie in the cellar.

Nevertheless, in spite of all the varieties of tension which troubled its inmates, the house finally settled down to an exaggerated calm. A palpitating stillness which was harder on the nerves than any amount of noise teased Connemara with the illusion of peace. Her common sense told her there was no reason whatever why sleep should not come swiftly to her exhausted body, and yet, for what seemed hours on end, sleep played around like a tormenting demon, always just out of reach of her snapping eyelids. She tried to calm herself by thinking how good it was to be safely back in her own room, and instantly her mind was more awake than ever. In all seriousness, she asked herself this double-barreled question: Was she back in her own room, or had she never been away?

Her thoughts began to race and presently became a jumble, a kaleidoscope with a thousand points of light blazing against the immovable seer background of Aunt Celimena. Never had that background changed. Pattering against it like the toy torpedoes of childhood on a wall, rained and burst all the events of her life. Ping! her first and only spanking. Pong! Auteuil, and David Lacy's handsome face, glowing for an instant in the blaze. Boom! and the strange marriage contract. Bang! and she an immaculate nun, stepping into a high powered motor car of foreign make at the mercy of a strangely fascinating young man.

And yet there was one sweet interlude which lived in memory as an indubitable fact. Never would she forget the blessed relief of plunging into the black waters of the Sound, of squirming out of her new-made slip, and finding herself swimming freely in her silk undies, unafraid and unashamed. Before her had shone a pilot light, a head of hair as red as her own.

At the thought of hair, she sat erect and put up her hands to her head. The face of the New York barber leered before her, reminding her that whether she was awake or dreaming she still had a secret to keep. She tried to remember if she had locked her door. She arose, went to it, found that she had turned the key, and started to return to bed; but so dilated were the pupils of her wakeful eyes that she was arrested by the sight of the familiar objects in the room, coming toward her as if out of a mist. Impulsively she walked to the triple mirror and stood before it. How slim and virginal appeared the straight shaft of her body, shining through the filmy drapery of her sheerest chiffon nighty! It seemed so young, so unsullied, surely only in the tortured twistings of a disordered mind had it been exposed to the post-Volsteadian night life of Long Island Sound!

Gradually she perceived her uncovered head. What if she should, in the morning, open the door to her aunt or a tattling maid without remembering to guard her secret? There was a long linen runner on the bureau. She snatched it, bound it around her head, and tied a great butterfly bow above her brows. The confection, which looked like one of those wet-me-not bathing caps you see at Deauville, was almost as fetching as had been the turban before its ruin.

Her mind at rest, she slipped back into bed, drew the sheet up to her chin, and snuggled her face into the pillow. Now, cradled in the memories of her girlhood, soothed by contact with the homely objects she had known all her life—the ponderous mahogany furniture, the ancient hooked rug, her little four-posted bed with its fluted pillars, the patched quilt folded over its foot—she could believe she had never been through the torment of the foregoing night. In fact, its events seemed more than ever improbable. She closed her eyes sleepily, her lips curved in an adorable childlike smile, and she drew a contented sigh. The next instant she was again sitting rigidly erect, staring into the shadows of the room.

A sound only half heard can be more terrifying than a near-by explosion, and it was such a sound, faint and ominous as the ticking of a death watch in the wall, that had galvanized Connemara into a sitting posture. She held her breath and listened until her back ached, then she let her head down to the pillow, and listened some more. Yes; she heard it again—a stealthy footstep in the hall or somewhere in the house below. Someone was striving so intently to walk noiselessly that the faint whisper of a footfall became surcharged with its own threat of disaster until it actually seemed to reverberate in Connie's ears.

Her impulse was to scream, but she suppressed it. In the first place, as the events of the last twenty-four hours had proved, she was not the kind to scream before she was hurt. In the second place, the thought came to her that perhaps only unnecessary scandal would arise from rousing the whole house. She was by nature innocent, and yet no fool. Her personally conducted tour of the Sound had brought in its train a certain amount of awakening of one sort and another. She had seen modern mah fight with gats, butts, and iron bars; she had envisaged his primeval prototypes grappling as savagely as wild beasts and battling with teeth, gouging knuckles, and stamping heel. But the one thing which had implanted a first mental hazard of fear within her was the look she had trapped in Mr. Pooch's glittering slits of eyes as they gorged themselves on her bared loveliness even while his groping hands were reaching for her throat.

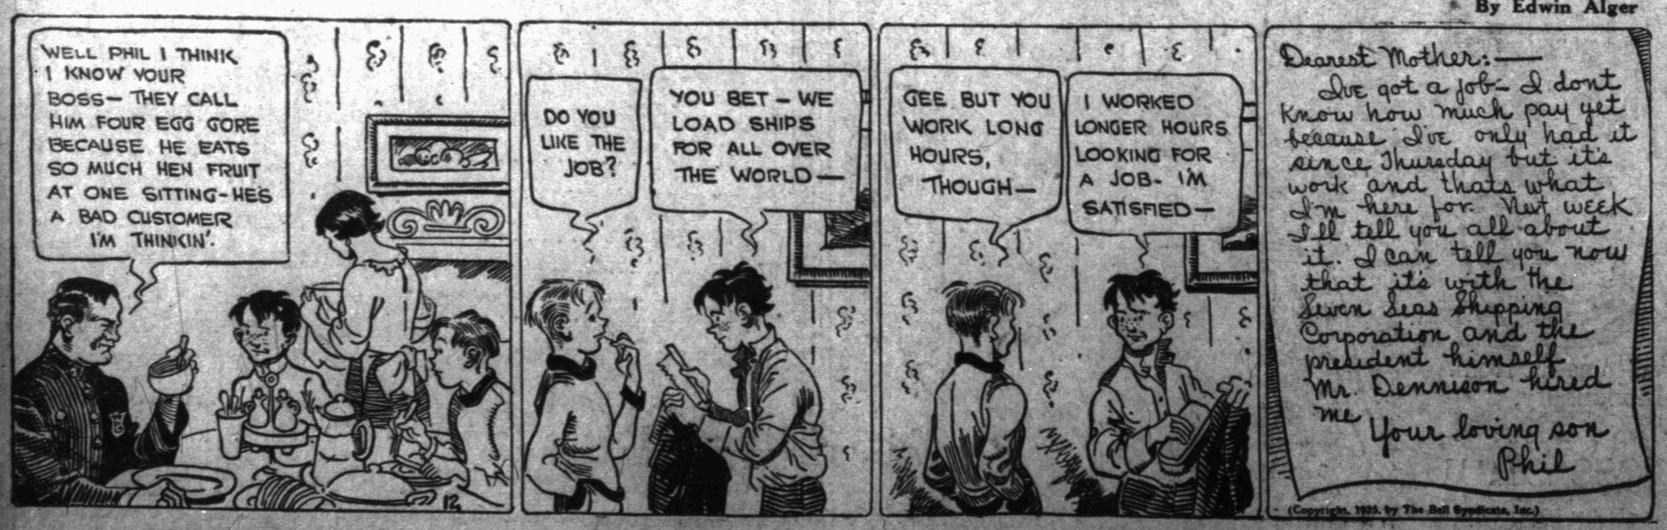

Her first thought was to put more than a filmy chiffon nighty between herself and the world before she ventured out to meet it. Characteristically enough, she took it for granted that she would creep out, come what may, rather than lie shivering on a warm night with her head under the covers.

She arose, went to a closet, and rummaged in its depth until her fingers encountered a mackintosh. She put it on over her night dress, buttoned it, stole softly to the door, unlocked it, and crept out along the wall. Instantly she felt something like a blown breath fly past her face. She just had time to flatten her back and her outflung hands against the wall when a tremendous Bang! resounded through the house.

A large and appreciative audience attended the "thank you" program presented by the Musicians' club at the Junior college auditorium Monday evening when a group of Wichita Falls' most talented artists were heard.

A varied and elaborate program was given featuring several popular musical ensemble organizations, also some of the favorite local soloists.

The concert was opened with a lovely Russian composition "Minuet a l'antice" by Karganoff, which proved a stately dance on which both Haydn and Mozart lavished some of their finest imagination. A beautiful concert number was adroitly demonstrated by the more modern composer in the use of this old dance form.

The second number, "Melody from 'American Indian Fancies'" composed by Eithel Allen Nelson of this city was played by a stringed orchestr composed of his pupils. The composer called the number a picture, and it gives the impression of an old warrior telling a story.

Alva Willgus, local baritone, gave two splendid numbers, "Irish Love Song" and "My Love Nell," and Mrs. Jouette Bonner, artistic violinist, gave "Slavonic Fantasie," by Dvorak-Kreisler.

Two well known, lovely airs, "Carry Me Back to Old Virginny" and "Massa's in de Cold, Cold Ground," were the contribution of the Woman's Choral club, directed by Mrs. Luella B. Thompson.

A string quartette composed of Stanley Raub, Mrs. T. B. Greenwood, Miss Anette Walsh and Mike Ellis, gave a Russian number, "Andante Cantabile," in which the theme was taken from a Russian folk song, "Little Russia." Miss Adele Ray, soprano, gave "Variations on a Mazart Air," and Miss Walsh played for a piano number, "Hungarian Rhapsody No. 13."

An attractive number was "Czardas Folk Dance," given by a group of girls and directed by Mrs. E. L. Fulton.

The program was arranged by Mrs. Lois Parker, chairman of the program committee, and Miss Emma Nala Voss.

Each number was well received and brought forth hearty applause. The concert was free and given by the Musicians' club as a recognition to the public for the co-operation given them on the presentation of several lecturers and programs given recently for the benefit of their Junior college piano fund.

Popular Young People Are Wed

Coming as a surprise to their many friends is the announcement of the marriage of Miss Anna Ruth Kahn and Jimmie D. Anderson, which took place at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. A. Kahn, on Morning Side Drive Saturday evening.

The ceremony was read by Dr. O. L. Powers, pastor of the First Baptist church in the present of relatives and a few intimate friends.

Both young people are popular here in social circles, and the bride is one of Wichita Falls' most talented dancers. She was a student this year at S. M. U. Mr. Anderson is prominent in business and social circles and is connected with the Panhandle Refinery in the office. He is an ex-student of Baylor university.

Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Nolan announce the arrival of a son, Mack Thomas Nolan, born Monday afternoon.

Miss Sarah Virginia Covert of Fort Worth, is the guest of Mrs. E. P. Bass.

Mrs. S. E. Hughes of Dallas, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Williamson.

Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Ray and Mrs. J. T. Carter have returned from a week-end trip to Mineral Wells and Fort Worth.

Mrs. J. W. Carden and son, George Carden, of Breckenridge, were week-end visitors in Wichita Falls. They returned yesterday, accompanied by Miss Maxine Pope and Eugene Jennings who will be their guests at a house party.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Clough and small daughter, Patricia, spent the week-end in Fort Worth with Mrs. Clough's grandmother.

A. O. Barnes of Fayetteville, Tenn., who has been the guest of his daughter, Mrs. R. C. Anderson is in Vernon this week visiting his son, W. W. Barnes. Mrs. Anderson and her son, Sherman, spent the week-end in Vernon with Mr. and Mrs. Barnes.

B. O. P. Class Will Hold Regular Meeting

Members of the B. O. P. class of the Floral Heights Methodist Sunday school will be entertained Wednesday at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs. W. E. F. Wright at her home, 1302 Taylor. A regular business session of the class will be held.

Pen Women Meet Monday Afternoon.

Members of the Pen Women's club enjoyed an instructive and entertaining talk given by J. H. Allison on "Newspaper Work," at the regular meeting held Monday afternoon at the library. Mrs. J. S. Pitman directed the lesson and Miss Lucile Sherrod also read an interesting original monologue.

Those present were Mesdames W. H. Sanford, E. A. Shalinder, Marjorie Purce, Wayne Somerville, J. S. Pitman, Claude Williamson, Marie Engle Johnson, Sam Kruger, W. A. McKee, S. E. Hughes of Dallas and Miss Lucile Sherrod.

TODAY'S CALENDAR

Miss Emily Miteham will be hostess to the Children of the Confederacy, afternoon.

Mrs. M. C. Leopold, 1502 Polk street, will be hostess to the Sans Souci club, afternoon.

Mrs. E. S. Haddox will be hostess to group six of the Alathean class of the First Baptist church Sunday school at her home, 1815 Huff avenue, afternoon.

PASTORS HEAR OF NEW EVIL IN DRY LAW WORK

Liquor Forces of Europe Invade U. S., Says Rader

"The prohibition forces of America are facing the most serious question they have had yet to confront," W. M. Rader, superintendent of organization of the Anti-Saloon League of Texas, said at the regular meeting of the Ministerial Alliance here yesterday morning at the First Christian church. "We have just found out that the liquor forces of Europe are coming over here and are helping to break down the prohibition laws of America, and the organization in America is more intensive and able to be carried out than ever before," he declared.

Want "Dry" Legislature.

"The Anti-Saloon League of Texas has planned within the next six or eight weeks to put on a field day program in every town in the state, to organize every locality for helping to enforce the law and getting the people to vote for a 'dry' legislature next year."

Mr. Rader said the present legislature was "wet."

Following his talk, the second Sunday in January was set aside for special services to be held in the churches. It is probable that ex-Governor Pat M. Neff or Cullen Thomas will be secured to speak at two periods during the Sunday.

Want City Auditorium.

Ministers of Wichita Falls expressed their interest in the building of a city auditorium, but they were not favorable to having the auditorium built far away from the business section of the city.

A committee composed of Dr. S. A. Barnes, Dr. Milo Atkinson, and Rev. Leslie Miller was appointed to confer with chamber of commerce officials asking that the proposed auditorium be placed closer in and not at Call Field, as has been suggested.

Dr. S. A. Barnes, president of the organization, presided at the meeting.

Those present included the following ministers: Leslie Miller, Nat F. Grafton, O. L. Powers, A. C. Turner, Walter J. Johnson, W. D. Cook, Captain Wilkes, Barnes, Frank M. Richardson, and W. M. Rader of the Anti-Saloon League of Texas.

MEET HERE TO HELP RANDOLPH COLLEGE

In the interest of the financial campaign for Randolph Christian College at Cisco, a banquet will be held at the First Christian church this evening beginning at 6:30 o'clock, with Wayne J. Holmes, chairman of the official board of the church, acting as toastmaster.

Rev. T. T. Roberts, president of the college, will speak on "The Christian College." Other talks will be made by Lewis P. Kopp, field secretary of the college, and Joseph Keevil, business manager of the school.

Randolph college is now in its second year of actual school work, and $250,000 is needed to establish the school. At the present time there are 55 students.

Two hundred persons are expected to attend the banquet.

JOINT STEWARDS MEET AT FLORAL HEIGHTS CHURCH

A joint meeting of the senior and junior boards of the Floral Heights Methodist church is announced for Tuesday evening at the church at 7:30 o'clock when they will discuss ways and means of completing the underwriting of the church budget. A. R. Archambeau is president of the junior board, and W. P. Ferguson is chairman of the senior board.

CHURCH GIVES AID TO HOSPITAL FUND

Subscripting to the Gold Cross membership for the support of Methodist hospitals, particularly the Dallas sanitarium, amounted to $200 at the Floral Heights Methodist church Sunday. Subscription blanks and a Gold Cross button were distributed among the congregation by Misses Opal Culp, Harriet Peterson, Ella Craig, Pauline Newman, Margaret McCord, and Isabel Sterling who were dressed as nurses, wearing the gold cross on their uniform.

PERSONALS

Dr. O. L. Powers, pastor of the First Baptist church, has gone to Mineral Wells to attend the Baptist General Convention of Texas.

Dr. Nat F. Grafton, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, will leave Wednesday for Atlantic City, N. J., where he as chairman of the Executive Council of the Texas Synod, will represent this state at the General Council of the Presbyterian church, a national organization.

Rev. John J. Bell, pastor of the Floral Heights Baptist church, will leave today for Mineral Wells to attend the State Baptist convention which is in session at that place.

Dr. T. T. Roberts, president of Randolph Christian college at Cisco, Lewis P. Kopp, field secretary of the school, and Joseph Keevil, business manager of the school, are in Wichita Falls to attend a banquet tonight at the First Christian church which is being given in the interest of the school.

ANSIL LYNN PARTY

The Ansil Lynn League of the First Methodist church will entertain with a party at the church Tuesday evening, according to announcement made yesterday. G. C. Donaldson is president of the organization.

ANOTHE BRIDGE FOR RIO GRANDE

Rene B. Creager of Brownsville and incidentally the republican boss of Texas, has returned from the city of Mexico where he had a conference with President Calles. He brought back with him cheering news. He expects to have a bridge across the Rio Grande at Brownsville in the near future and predicts it will be a great benefit to the people of that section of Texas, as well as the people of Mexico.

There is to be a bridge acrorss the Rio Grande at Brownsville and another at Hidalgo.

He found everything quiet in Mexico, as usual. He admits there seems to be some trouble in the minds of foreigners over Article 27 of the Mexican constitution and pending bills to change it, and found also some worry and agitation over the prospective labor bill, but is of the opinion these matters seems to be near solution.

On the other hand, Boss Creager says, Mexico is going forward in practically every respect. He says the highway work is getting under way, so far as preparations to build the roads are concerned; finances of Mexico are in good shape and the country is on a firmer basis financially, following the satisfactory settlement of the foreign debt difference. Boss Creager knows Mexico. He is a native Texan. He has lived for many years on the banks of the Rio Grande.

He speaks the language of the people. He knows the traditions of Mexico, the customs of the people, the conditions of the people, the aspirations of the people, and he understands the Latin-Indian temperament. A very wise man when it comes to the so-called Mexican problem, is this republican boss of Texas. Dismissing his policy and political ambitions, the human element enters largely into the composition of Rene B. Creager. He would have peaceful relations with Mexico. He would extend a guiding as well as a helping hand to Mexico. He would see public highways everywhere in Mexico. He would make the public schools of Mexico second to none.

He would abolish peonage in Mexico, and he would use some of the wealth of Mexico, taken from the soil of Mexico, to uplift and educate the masses of the people of Mexico. In saying this, vastly more can be said for Boss Creager than for many of his countrymen who are willing to exploit the national wealth of Mexico and never contribute a just share of the wealth for the educational and moral uplift of the unfortunate peon class.

Mexico has been kicked in the face for centuries by the nationals of European countries and the adventurers known as the Knights of the Golden Fleeche of the United States. God Almighty made Mexico rich in natural resources, with a wealth and fertility of soil unsurpassed, and many varieties and degrees of climate unknown in less fortunate lands. Mexico should be given the helping hand, and in Mexico, the underdog, who is the peon, should not be kept in the ditch and kicked in the teeth year in and year out by he exploiters of his own country and the exploiters who flock to Mexico from other climes and countries. What Mexico needs is the helping hand; what the peon needs is justice.

SAFE FOR STUPIDITY

American intelligence is declining and civilisation makes the world safe for stupidity, Albert Edward Wiggam, biologist and associate editor of the American Magazine, declared in an address before a session of the convention of the Texas State Teacher's Association.

Which is mostly bunk. American civilization is not declining, and there is less stupidity in the world today than ever before. Professor Wiggam has a queer theory, it follows:

"Vice purifies the race. So does disease. They weed out the vicious and the weak." This may be true. If it is, why the doctors? Why medicine? Why surgery? Why school houses? Why churches? Why laws for the protection of life and property? Why civilization?

Why not go back to the jungles and jungle practices? Education must make some men mad. Education must make some men fools. Every civilization that has ever perished was succeded by a more advanced and more humane civilization. There are more civilized people today than ever before. There are more law abiding people today than ever before.

Uncommon Sense

THE DUTY DODGER

Sometimes while working in an office where perhaps a hundred people were employed, I have wondered how anybody could grumble about the difficulty of advancement.

For in every hundred workers there are at least fifty duty dodgers.

And the fact that these workers either will not or can not take the trouble to do their work properly ought to make it easier for those who do to get ahead.

In one office which I visited from time to time there were more than 200 girls in various departments, and it seemed as if half the number could usually be found employing lip sticks and mirrors instead of their typewriting machines and stenographic pads.

Many of these duty dodgers would hurry to the rest room as soon as one of the managers appeared with a job to be done, in order to avoid it.

Had they worked half as hard at their jobs as in trying to evade work, they would not have had to look so sourly at their thin pay envelopes at the end of the week.

It is hard to understand what profit there is in this sort of thing.

The day seems short when there is plenty of work to do, long and tiresome when there is not.

The fatigue at its end is just the same whether a person has been kept busy or idle.

It is interest in work that makes for contentment. And almost any job can be made interesting if the worker thinks continually of better and more efficient ways to do it.

The old story of the hod carrier who when the whistle blew carried his hod down from the top of the ladder, which he had just reached, instead of depositing it on the scaffolding, is not as far fetched as one might imagine.

There are plenty of people who feel some how that they are getting ahead of heir employers if they do as little work as possible.

As a matter of fact they are getting behind with themselves, for the only chance of promotion comes with good work, and the only way good work can be done is by plenty of practice.

The cases I speak of are not cases in which the office boss was a driver, or was trying to get the last ounce of effort out of his employees.

The man whom I visited was good natured, well disposed toward his office force, and only too willing to send them ahead if they deserved it, for he had plenty of higher places to fill.

But he got only about 75 per cent as much work out of the girls he employed as he was entitled to get. And the duty dodgers among them got only about half the pay they could have got if they had been willing to do all their worrk and do it as well as they could.

It is the type of girl who lets her mother wash the dishes while she goes to the movies who makes the duty dodgers.

And it seems to me that perhaps the mother who lets her go to the movies, and does the house work so that she can, may be in part responsible for the failure of her daughter ever to be anything more than a low paid employee, most of whose time is spent trying to see how little work she can do.

AT ITS OLD TRICKS

Since nobody but the whole country wants tax reduction and wants it speedily, the House Ways and Means Committee and both Republican and Democratic representatives generally show a plebeian disposition to let the country have what it demands. The bill has been substantially finished. The prospect is that it will pass the house within ten days after the meeting of Congress. But such rush doings are scorned by that greatest common deliberator, the Senate. The impulsive children of the house must be corrected by these majestic censors and augurs, in sage wisdom old. Senator Simmons, whose mutilation of the last tax law helped endear the Democratic party to the voters last fall, is again cooking up rates of his own. Mr. Norris is marshaling hosts of words for the bombardment of "wealth" and a defense of income tax publicity. Senator Borah is preparing to show that everybody but the senior senator from Idaho is wrong about everything.

Senator Walsh of Montana will fortify a commanding position and maintain it so long as there is paper enough left to keep the Congressional Record going. Young Mr. La Follette will strive to prove that he inherits his father's genius. Frazier and Shipstead are full of utterable thoughts. If Brookhart holds his seat, copiously will he hold forth from it. In short, the etiquette of the Senate will be followed carefully. To give it the last touch of impressiveness, "Jim" Reed sends notice from Kansas City that he means to discuss the bill "fully"—in his mouth a temporal adverb of days, of weeks. "What, goodman boy; go to!" Old Man Senate says to Child House: "You always must be doing something; I'll show you how not to "do it." Such is the function of the senate, and a tax bill is peculiarly rich in covered walks, side-alleys, mazes wherein to stray and entertain the senatorial fancy.

Besides, who knows what stratagem may be behind this program of blocking and bedeviling tax reduction? It is so momentous that there is no hurry about it. Can't the discussion of it be spun out so long that that unfinished business, the World Court, itself capable of infinite discussion, unfinished must remain?

Down in the Cornfield.

Straight into a green jungle plunged Growly, with Peter close behind him, the silken tassels of the corn waving about their heads. The Bear came to a stop, and so suddenly that the Boy bumped into him. Peter's heart flew into his throat.

"W-w-hat's the matter?" stuttered he. "Do you scent trouble, Growly?"

The Bear shook his shaggy head and drew a deep breath.

"Nugh! Nugh!" grunted he, and Peter, used to Bear language, was glad to know that his friend meant no. "I can't smell a thing but corn, but it is always best to be on the safe side, so I'll take a look around before I start a-feasting."

Petter stepped back a pace, and just in time. Growly f ntrying to rise to his hind feet in the narrow rows between the corn lost his balance and would have tumbled on the boy had Petter still bee in the same spot where he had been standing a second before. A second trial, and Gowly's nose was poking out of the tassels. Slowly Growly pivoted around and he looked so clumsy and so comical that Peter snickered.

"Laugh on, Boy!" growled the Bear. "It is best to be merry while one can. One never knows when one must laugh out of the other side of one's mouth. All safe in the cornfield. Not a Two-Legs this side of the high hill. 'Tis milking time in the barnyard and they will be too busy to come strolling this way."

"Ugh!" grunted Growly, as he bent a knee. "Wuh!" grunted he as he rocked from side to side. "G-r-r-r!" he growled, as he sat down upon his haunches—sat down right plumb in the middle of the cornfield.

"What are you going to do next?" asked Peter, but he might as well have saved his breath. Growly believed that actions spoke louder than words. In reply he merely winked a wicked eye.

"Crack!" A green, juicy cornstalk tumbled to the ground. "Crack!" A second fell across it. "Crack!" A third dropped to keep them company.

Growly, the greedy giant, was stretching out his long arms as far as they would go and breaking off stalk after stalk of corn. And when he thought he had cut down as many as his arms would hold, Growly gathered up the sheaves and one by one devoured the ripe, sweet ears that grew on the top.

Peter watched his shaggy friend for a while, and then suddenly his own "tummy" began to feel very empty, indeed.

Now, if there was one food of which the Boy was very fond it was corn. He looked at Growly and then at the mass of stalks in the Bear's arms, and then straight at Growly again, and this time his friend saw him and winced.

"M-m-m-m! Good!" gruited he. "Don't you wish you were me?"

"No," replied Peter, truthfully. "I don't but I would like an ear of corn. Would you care if I picked one?

"What a joke!" chuckled Growly, making a queer sound in his throat. "I never hoped to live to see the day when a Two-Legs would ask such a favor. Fancy a Boy asking a Bear's permission to gather corn in a Two-Legs' field!

Growly grunted again and then remembered his manners.

"Don't bother to break off another, Boy. Have one of mine," and he held out an ear to Peter.

"Thanks!"

Stripping off the leaves, the Boy took a tink bite. But when he had tasted the sweet, juicy kernels he gave a cry of delight.

"Great! No wonder you were in such a hurry to begin your feast Growly," cried he. "This is the first time I have ever eaten raw corn, and I like it. 'Tis sweet as sugar and just as tender. Only thing is I have to chew it longer."

Editors Say So In T. and O.

What Texas and Oklahoma Editors Think of Things In General

From the looks of some folks, it would seem that when man made his famous jump from monkey, their ancestors were bringing up the rear.—Childress Post.

We once ran across a man who declared that every editorial paragraph in the local papers of his town were intended for him, if they were the least suggestive. He said he knew all the newspapers were against him. A careful poll of the editors of that town revealed the startling fact that not one of them there had thought of that man in months, let alone wrote of him.—Stamford Leader.

HOW IT STARTED

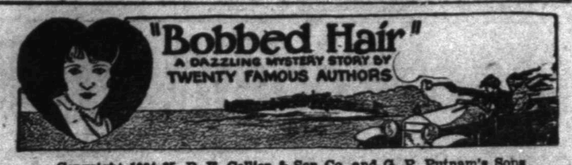

"Calamity Jane."

One of the most familiar slang expressions in everyday speech is "Calamity Jane." "Calamity Jane!" we call a person who seems inseperable from trouble, usually one who is reputed to be a "joy killer," whose faculty for sensing and exaggerating trouble is so great that she seems almost to bring trouble when he comes into our midst. That connotation, however, has a somewhat different shade of meaning from the original significance of the expression.

We have the term from a flesh and blood woman of pioneer times in the West, one of the best known and most picturesque characters of frontier days. She was Martha Cannary, born in Princeton, Mo., in 1852, the daughter of a minister, subsequently a hard drinking, hard swearing, a dead shot of a gunwoman—with a heart of gold, nicknamed "Calamity Jane!"

A product of the open prairie and Indian Wars, Jane was a woman who had no fear, and her expertness with firearms gained her a reputation in the frontier country that was second to no man's. Although she was thrice married, it was a man's part that she wanted to play. In 1870 she enlisted with General Custer as a teamster and discarded her woman's clothes for man's. She also is known to have carried one of the most dangerous pony express routes on which many daring men had met death from the mail bandits.

How she received the soubriquet is a somewhat disputed fact, one version being that Bill Nye gave her the name in his paper, the Laramie Boomerang, in the early '70's, another being that she acquired the nickname after saving the life of a soldier of the scouting band with which she was traveling. According to the story the officer was shot by a pedestrian and was just about to lose his scalp when Jane galloped and dispatched the Indian. When he regained consciousness he remarked that he was lucky to have such a heroine as Jane around in times of "calamity." In any disturbance in the Black Hills in frontier days, "Calamity Jane," as she had come to be called, was certain to be found somewhere in the heap! And her nickname has survived for the person whom we associate with trouble.

SYNOPSIS

From David Lacy's farm home on Long Island, Aunt Celimena, Connemara Moore and Bing Carrington set out in Lacy's car to return to auntie's Connecticut home. On the way to the shore they overtake Saltonstall Adams, still wearing the fancy costume he put on for last night's ball. Connemara was to have announced her engagement to either Bing or Salt but has become greatly interested in David. Aunt Celimena has a premonition that more adventures are ahead for the entire party.

By George Agnew Chamberlain

CHAPTER XVIII

It can be imagined that Moorelands, under its long virginal regency, had not been much given to indiscriminate hospitality. In spite of the outcrop of sporting blood in Aunt Celimena, she was still a victim of that high voltage New England reticence which senses a sort of violation in having unattached gentlemen sleeping on the place. As for the presence of Sweetie, that was simply more and worse of the same thing. Never would Aunt Celimena forget or forgive the shock of finding one of her own sex wearing male attire, not in the simpering spirit of a fancy dress ball, but as if she gloried in its opportunities for unmaidenly display. Could the unwilling hostess have had her way, she would have locked Sweetie in the cellar.

Nevertheless, in spite of all the varieties of tension which troubled its inmates, the house finally settled down to an exaggerated calm. A palpitating stillness which was harder on the nerves than any amount of noise teased Connemara with the illusion of peace. Her common sense told her there was no reason whatever why sleep should not come swiftly to her exhausted body, and yet, for what seemed hours on end, sleep played around like a tormenting demon, always just out of reach of her snapping eyelids. She tried to calm herself by thinking how good it was to be safely back in her own room, and instantly her mind was more awake than ever. In all seriousness, she asked herself this double-barreled question: Was she back in her own room, or had she never been away?

Her thoughts began to race and presently became a jumble, a kaleidoscope with a thousand points of light blazing against the immovable seer background of Aunt Celimena. Never had that background changed. Pattering against it like the toy torpedoes of childhood on a wall, rained and burst all the events of her life. Ping! her first and only spanking. Pong! Auteuil, and David Lacy's handsome face, glowing for an instant in the blaze. Boom! and the strange marriage contract. Bang! and she an immaculate nun, stepping into a high powered motor car of foreign make at the mercy of a strangely fascinating young man.

And yet there was one sweet interlude which lived in memory as an indubitable fact. Never would she forget the blessed relief of plunging into the black waters of the Sound, of squirming out of her new-made slip, and finding herself swimming freely in her silk undies, unafraid and unashamed. Before her had shone a pilot light, a head of hair as red as her own.

At the thought of hair, she sat erect and put up her hands to her head. The face of the New York barber leered before her, reminding her that whether she was awake or dreaming she still had a secret to keep. She tried to remember if she had locked her door. She arose, went to it, found that she had turned the key, and started to return to bed; but so dilated were the pupils of her wakeful eyes that she was arrested by the sight of the familiar objects in the room, coming toward her as if out of a mist. Impulsively she walked to the triple mirror and stood before it. How slim and virginal appeared the straight shaft of her body, shining through the filmy drapery of her sheerest chiffon nighty! It seemed so young, so unsullied, surely only in the tortured twistings of a disordered mind had it been exposed to the post-Volsteadian night life of Long Island Sound!

Gradually she perceived her uncovered head. What if she should, in the morning, open the door to her aunt or a tattling maid without remembering to guard her secret? There was a long linen runner on the bureau. She snatched it, bound it around her head, and tied a great butterfly bow above her brows. The confection, which looked like one of those wet-me-not bathing caps you see at Deauville, was almost as fetching as had been the turban before its ruin.

Her mind at rest, she slipped back into bed, drew the sheet up to her chin, and snuggled her face into the pillow. Now, cradled in the memories of her girlhood, soothed by contact with the homely objects she had known all her life—the ponderous mahogany furniture, the ancient hooked rug, her little four-posted bed with its fluted pillars, the patched quilt folded over its foot—she could believe she had never been through the torment of the foregoing night. In fact, its events seemed more than ever improbable. She closed her eyes sleepily, her lips curved in an adorable childlike smile, and she drew a contented sigh. The next instant she was again sitting rigidly erect, staring into the shadows of the room.

A sound only half heard can be more terrifying than a near-by explosion, and it was such a sound, faint and ominous as the ticking of a death watch in the wall, that had galvanized Connemara into a sitting posture. She held her breath and listened until her back ached, then she let her head down to the pillow, and listened some more. Yes; she heard it again—a stealthy footstep in the hall or somewhere in the house below. Someone was striving so intently to walk noiselessly that the faint whisper of a footfall became surcharged with its own threat of disaster until it actually seemed to reverberate in Connie's ears.

Her impulse was to scream, but she suppressed it. In the first place, as the events of the last twenty-four hours had proved, she was not the kind to scream before she was hurt. In the second place, the thought came to her that perhaps only unnecessary scandal would arise from rousing the whole house. She was by nature innocent, and yet no fool. Her personally conducted tour of the Sound had brought in its train a certain amount of awakening of one sort and another. She had seen modern man fight with gats, butts, and iron bars; she had envisaged his primeval prototypes, grappling as savagely as wild beasts and battling with teeth, gouging knuckles, and stamping heel. But the one thing which had implanted a first mental hazard of fear within her was the look she had trapped in Mr. Pooch's glittering slits of eyes as they gorged themselves on her bared loveliness even while his groping hands were reaching for her throat.

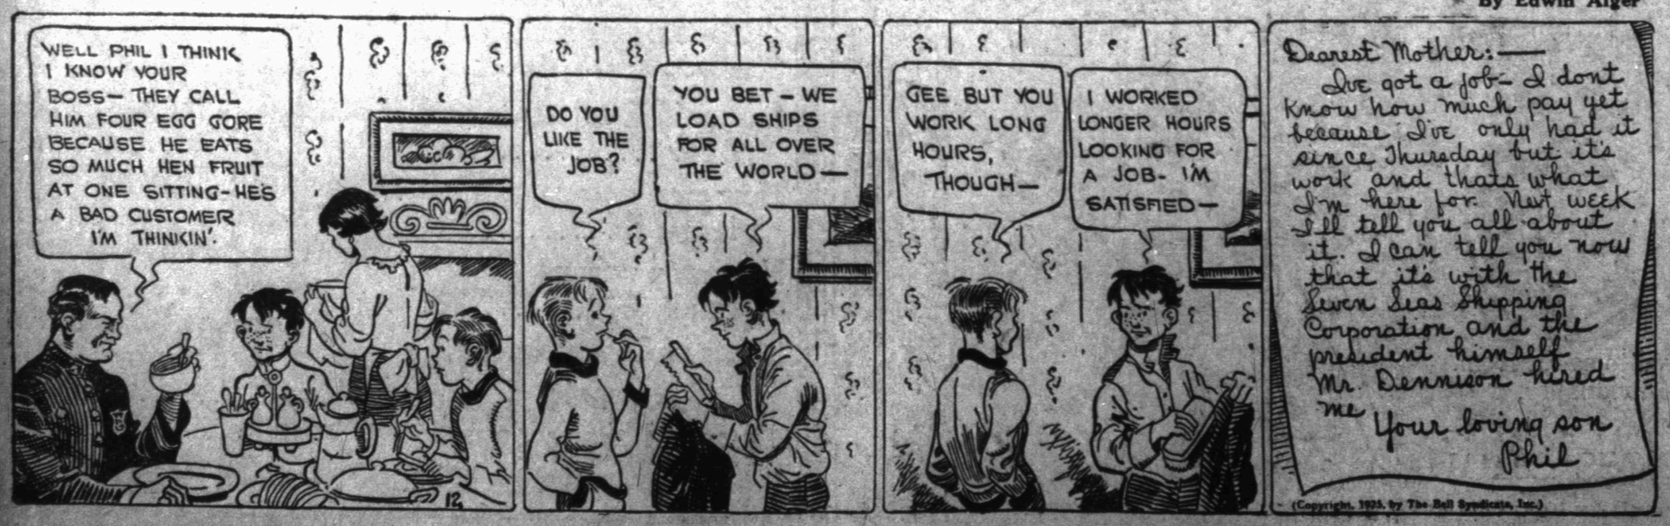

Her first thought was to put more than a filmy chiffon nighty between herself and the world before she ventured out to meet it. Characteristically enough, she took it for granted that she would creep out, come what may, rather than lie shivering on a warm night with her head under the covers.

She arose, went to a closet, and rummaged in its depth until her fingers encountered a mackintosh. She put it on over her night dress, buttoned it, stole softly to the door, unlocked it, and crept out along the wall. Instantly she felt something like a blown breath fly past her face. She just had time to flatten her back and her outflung hands against the wall when a tremendous Bang! resounded through the house.

Society

A large and appreciative audience attended the "thank you" program presented by the Musicians' club at the Junior college auditorium Monday evening when a group of Wichita Falls' most talented artists were heard.

A varied and elaborate program was given featuring several popular musical ensemble organizations, also some of the favorite local soloists.

The concert was opened with a lovely Russian composition "Minuet a l'antice" by Karganoff, which proved a stately dance on which both Haydn and Mozart lavished some of their finest imagination. A beautiful concert number was adroitly demonstrated by the more modern composer in the use of this old dance form.

The second number, "Melody from 'American Indian Fancies'" composed by Eithel Allen Nelson of this city was played by a stringed orchestr composed of his pupils. The composer called the number a picture, and it gives the impression of an old warrior telling a story.

Alva Willgus, local baritone, gave two splendid numbers, "Irish Love Song" and "My Love Nell," and Mrs. Jouette Bonner, artistic violinist, gave "Slavonic Fantasie," by Dvorak-Kreisler.

Two well known, lovely airs, "Carry Me Back to Old Virginny" and "Massa's in de Cold, Cold Ground," were the contribution of the Woman's Choral club, directed by Mrs. Luella B. Thompson.

A string quartette composed of Stanley Raub, Mrs. T. B. Greenwood, Miss Anette Walsh and Mike Ellis, gave a Russian number, "Andante Cantabile," in which the theme was taken from a Russian folk song, "Little Russia." Miss Adele Ray, soprano, gave "Variations on a Mazart Air," and Miss Walsh played for a piano number, "Hungarian Rhapsody No. 15."

An attractive number was "Csardas Folk Dance," given by a group of girls and directed by Mrs. E. L. Fulton.

The program was arranged by Mrs. Lois Parker, chairman of the program committee, and Miss Emma Nala Voss.

Each number was well received and brought forth hearty applause. The concert was free and given by the Musicians' club as a recognition to the public for the co-operation given them on the presentation of several lecturers and programs given recently for the benefit of their Junior college piano fund.

Popular Young People Are Wed

Coming as a surprise to their many friends is the announcement of the marriage of Miss Anna Ruth Kahn and Jimmie D. Anderson, which took place at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. A. Kahn, on Morning Side Drive Saturday evening.

The ceremony was read by Dr. O. L. Powers, pastor of the First Baptist church in the present of relatives and a few intimate friends.

Both young people are popular here in social circles, and the bride is one of Wichita Falls' most talented dancers. She was a student this year at S. M. U. Mr. Anderson is prominent in business and social circles and is connected with the Panhandle Refinery in the office. He is an ex-student of Baylor university.

Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Nolan announce the arrival of a son, Mack Thomas Nolan, born Monday afternoon.

Miss Sarah Virginia Covert of Fort Worth, is the guest of Mrs. E. P. Bass.

Mrs. S. E. Hughes of Dallas, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Williamson.

Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Ray and Mrs. J. T. Carter have returned from a week-end trip to Mineral Wells and Fort Worth.

Mrs. J. W. Carden and son, George Carden, of Breckenridge, were week-end visitors in Wichita Falls. They returned yesterday, accompanied by Miss Maxine Pope and Eugene Jennings who will be their guests at a house party.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Clough and small daughter, Patricia, spent the week-end in Fort Worth with Mrs. Clough's grandmother.

A. O. Barnes of Fayetteville, Tenn., who has been the guest of his daughter, Mrs. R. C. Anderson is in Vernon this week visiting his son, W. W. Barnes, Mrs. Anderson and her son, Sherman, spent the week-end in Vernon with Mr. and Mrs. Barnes.

B. O. P. Class Will Hold Regular Meeting

Members of the B. O. P. class of the Floral Heights Methodist Sunday school will be entertained Wednesday at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs. W. E. F. Wright at her home, 1302 Taylor. A regular business session of the class will be held.

Pen Women Meet Monday Afternoon.

Members of the Pen Women's club enjoyed an instructive and entertaining talk given by J. H. Allison on "Newspaper Work," at the regular meeting held Monday afternoon at the library. Mrs. J. S. Pitman directed the lesson and Miss Lucile Sherrod also read an interesting original monologue.

Those present were Mesdames W. H. Sanford, E. A. Shalinder, Marjorie Purce, Wayne Somerville, J. S. Pitman, Claude Williamson, Marie Engle Johnson, Sam Kruger, W. A. McKee, S. E. Hughes of Dallas and Miss Lucile Sherrod.

TODAY'S CALENDAR

Miss Emily Mitcham will be hostess to the Children of the Confederacy, afternoon.

Mrs. M. O. Leopold, 1502 Polk street, will be hostess to the Sans Souci club, afternoon.

Mrs. E. S. Haddox will be hostess to group six of the Alathean class of the First Baptist church Sunday school at her home, 1815 Huff avenue, afternoon.

PASTORS HEAR OF NEW EVIL IN DRY LAW WORK

Liquor Forces of Europe Invade U. S., Says Rader

"The prohibition forces of America are facing the most serious question they have had yet to confront," W. M. Rader, superintendent of organization of the Anti-Saloon League of Texas, said at the regular meeting of the Ministerial Alliance here yesterday morning at the First Christian church. "We have just found out that the liquor forces of Europe are coming over here and are helping to break down the prohibition laws of America, and the organization in America is more intensive and able to be carried out than ever before," he declared.

Want "Dry" Legislature.

"The Anti-Saloon League of Texas has planned within the next six or eight weeks to put on a field day program in every town in the state, to organize every locality for helping to enforce the law and getting the people to vote for a 'dry' legislature next year."

Mr. Rader said the present legislature was "wet."

Following his talk, the second Sunday in January was set aside for special services to be held in the churches. It is probable that ex-Governor Pat M. Neff or Cullen Thomas will be secured to speak at two periods during the Sunday.

Want City Auditorium.

Ministers of Wichita Falls expressed their interest in the building of a city auditorium, but they were not favorable to having the auditorium built far away from the business section of the city.

A committee composed of Dr. S. A. Barnes, Dr. Milo Atkinson, and Rev. Leslie Miller was appointed to confer with chamber of commerce officials asking that the proposed auditorium be placed closer in and not at Call Field, as has been suggested.

Dr. S. A. Barnes, president of the organization, presided at the meeting.

MEET HERE TO HELP RANDOLPH COLLEGE

In the interest of the financial campaign for Randolph Christian College at Cisco, a banquet will be held at the First Christian church this evening beginning at 6:30 o'clock, with Wayne J. Holmes, chairman of the official board of the church, acting as toastmaster.

Rev. T. T. Roberts, president of the college, will speak on "The Christian College." Other talks will be made by Lewis P. Kopp, field secretary of the college, and Joseph Keevil, business manager of the school.

Randolph college is now in its second year of actual school work, and $250,000 is needed to establish the school. At the present time there are 55 students.

Two hundred persons are expected to attend the banquet.

JOINT STEWARDS MEET AT FLORAL HEIGHTS CHURCH

A joint meeting of the senior and junior boards of the Floral Heights Methodist church is announced for Tuesday evening at the church at 7:30 o'clock when they will discuss ways and means of completing the underwriting of the church budget. A. R. Archambeau is president of the junior board, and W. P. Ferguson is chairman of the senior board.

CHURCH GIVES AID TO HOSPITAL FUND

Subscriptins to the Gold Cross membership for the support of Methodist hospitals, particularly the Dallas sanitarium, amounted to $200 at the Floral Heights Methodist church Sunday. Subscription blanks and a Gold Cross button were distributed among the congregation by Misses Opal Culp, Harriet Peterson, Ella Craig, Pauline Newman, Margaret McCord, and Isabel Sterling who were dressed as nurses, wearing the gold cross on their uniform.

PERSONALS

Dr. O. L. Powers, pastor of the First Baptist church, has gone to Mineral Wells to attend the Baptist General Convention of Texas.

Dr. Nat F. Grafton, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, will leave Wednesday for Atlantic City, N. J., where he as chairman of the Executive Council of the Texas Synod, will represent this state at the General Council of the Presbyterian church, a national organization.

Rev. John J. Bell, pastor of the Floral Heights Baptist church, will leave today for Mineral Wells to attend the State Baptist convention which is in session at that place.

Dr. T. T. Roberts, president of Randolph Christian college at Cisco, Lewis P. Kopp, field secretary of the school, and Joseph Keevil, business manager of the school, are in Wichita Falls to attend a banquet tonight at the First Christian church which is being given in the interest of the school.

ANSIL LYNN PARTY

The Ansil Lynn League of the First Methodist church will entertain with a party at the church Tuesday evening, according to announcement made yesterday. C. C. Donaldson is president of the organization.

GOVERNOR DEMANDS CARTER RESIGN JOB AS DIRECTOR OF TEXAS TECH COLLEGE

Alleged Disregard of Dry Laws Given as Cause For Her Request

AUSTIN, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Protesting that she not gave her much pain, Governor Miriam A. Ferguson in a lengthy letter today demanded resignation of Amon G. Carter, Fort Worth newspapper publisher, as member of the board of directors of the West Texas Technological college. Mr. Carter's alleged disregard of prohibition laws is the cause given for the governor's request.

In her letter Governor Ferguson charges Carter with causing stimulants to be dispensed when the Oil Men's association met in Fort Worth last year. She charges, too, he was under influence of stimulants Thanksgiving Day at College Station, when he attended the Texas University-Texas A. and M. football game.

Task Unpleasant.

The letter assures the task is unpleasant to the governor and states that she is informed that in December last year Carter "fitted up a building owned or controlled by you (perhaps a garage building) in the old fashioned barroom way providing a bar with the foot rail and the sawdust on the floor and behind the bar you had a man dressed in the old fashioned bartender white apron style," for the oil men's association in Fort Worth."

"To this place I am informed that you invited some two or three hundred guests and to those who came, you dispensed drinks that were to say the least stimulating and that you caused to be given away souvenir canes in which there is a hidden vial some 30 inches in length that contained approximately one pint of beverage," the letter reads. "I have one of these canes in my possession which I am reliably informed came from your place. I am also informed that at said reception given by you many became stimulated and others were under the influence of an invigorating decoction and that you in company with your guests participated in the consumption of the beverages".

Amon G. Carter is president of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. At the Texas A. and M. College and Texas university football game Thanksgiving day he is reported to have admitted yelling "Hurrah for Texas A. and M. and Dan Moody."

Moody is the attorney general of Texas, who has been investigating the state highway department and who has recovered $600,000 from the American Road company.

The Letter.

At the game Carter's statements evidently aroused the ire of Governor Ferguson and her husband, former Governor James E. Ferguson, for Saturday she issued a proclamation offering a $500 reward each for the conviction of all wealthy Texas persons for violation of the liquor laws.

The governor's letter continues:

"You, of course, remember your being in College Station on Thanksgiving day of last week upon the occasion of the annual football contest between the A. and M. College and the University. If you do not remember, I can inform you that it was an imposing meeting of some 25,000 people from all parts of the state and there were thousands of young boys and girls, students and friends of both these two great institutions, the pride of our state.

Yorfies Cheers.

"I see from the papers that you admit that many times you cheered for Hon. Dan Moody and the A. and M. team. I can verify that you are correct in this statement as you were right behind the box that I was occupying, and on two occasions when you gave vent to yon vociferous exclamations you were only a few feet from me. I believe your statement when you say in the papers that you were not aware of my presence and that you meant no personal discourtesy to me. Your friends who know you best assure me (and I believe them) that when you are in a normal condition that you are a courteous gentleman to the manner born and I attribute your seeming affront to your unusual condition and the influence under which you were laboring at the time. In you state it was but natural for you to have been unable to distinguish between a colonel on my staff, dressed in khaki, yellow, and a town policeman, dressed in blue, who under orders from the local authorities ejected you from the grounds in the interest of public peace. No member of my staff laid hands on you as suggested by you in the public press. Personally, I gladly forget any apparent discourtesy to me as from my own observation I know you were not responsible at the time. But your actions involve a great principle and a matter of sound public policy which I can not overlook.

"We have on the statute books a law against the unlawful sale, transportation or possession of intoxicating liquors. Also there is a law against intoxication in public places.

Virtue of Sobriety.

"It will not be denied that the foundation of our civilization is our educational institutions. In and around these temples of knowledge from the country school to the college and the university we seek to teach the rising generation the virtue of morality, sobriety and correct living. It is here that the proper precepts and example is set or should be set before the young boys and girls that will aid them to become good and intelligent citizens. These simple truths are so self-evident that to state them is to prove them.

"If those in charge of the management and direction off our educational institutions shall by their personal deportment display those vices that are repugnant to the idea of strict morality and sobriety, then such result in the students of these institutions cannot be expected. If as head of the board of the West Texas Technological college you reserve to yourself the right to appear in a public place in the condition you were in at College Station on Thanksgiving day, then every student who saw you could justify him or herself for doing the same thing. If a student at Tech college should appear on the Lubbock campus as you appeared in College Station the faculty would promptly expel such student from the college. And yet in such case the student could plead your case and the example and the precedent set by you in justification. If the heads of our institutions can not practice and preach sobriety then our hopes for educated citizenship are vain and useless.

"It is with deep regret that I protest against your further occupying a place on the West Texas Technological board. I plead for a better example for our boys and girls. You have set a standard that can not be tolerated. For the good of the public service I emphatically affirm that you should send me your resignation. Miriam A. Ferguson, Governor of Texas."

total of $154,852,253.30, an increase of $48,751,801.53 over the same period of last year.

Never Before.

"Never in the history of our business have we had such early Christmas shopping as we have had this year," says Samuel Schienberg, of the Hub.

"People are making their Christmas selections earlier this year," Burton Stayton of Freear's Furniture company said. "This idea of buying early in place of waiting until the last minute is making the Christmas shopping easier on the clerks and the buyers as well, and they are more likely to get a better selection before the stock is looked over."

Are Buying Now.

Homer Sanderford of Sanderford's Booterie said that many Christmas sales had been made especially in house shoes and hosiery. "People are making their purchases now in order to send gifts away and avoid the usual rush of the last minute shopping."

"Customers have already begun buying for Christmas," Mr. Wells of the Orchid Shop said yesterday. "Novelties of imported beaded bags, fancy handkerchiefs, hosiery and others are popular gifts."

Practical Gifts in Favor.

"Practical gifts of the best quality are characteristic of the holiday shoppers," Jack Barnard of P. B. M. said yesterday. "Good luggage, hat bags, traveling bags, fitted cases and Gladstone bags are most popular, then novelties, beads, pearls, bracelets, toilet sets, hosiery, silk underwear and the novelty boutennaires are also in demand."

Are Spending Freely.

"Conditions are good and the people are spending freely on their Christmas shopping," Saul Lebenson of Saul's Department store, said in speaking of business conditions and the early Christmas shopping. "They are buying holiday goods, including dolls, novelties as well as staple goods."

Many Give Blankets.

Practical things are accepted as among the best sellers for gifts, says J. W. Ferguson of the Ferguson Dry Goods company. "Blankets, double and single woolen ones, are popular, and many sales have been made. Smoking jackets, linens, shirts, silk underwear, are featured also in Christmas sales."

Business Good.

"The holiday spirit is being shown by the people who are shopping early. All the departments of the store are doing good business with the holiday goods," R. D. Kennedy of Perkins-Timberlake Department store, said in speaking of business conditions.

That the spirit of optimism is reflected in the Christmas selections made by early shoppers is expressed by Claude Miller of the Miller-Ferguson company, and J. S. Riggs of Ludlam-Riggs Clothing company.

"MA" DARES

them in from all the corners and let them do their worst. You know we've been through this once before and we learned something."

The governor referred to the time eight years ago when Jim had been driven from the executive mansion.

With the governor's definite statement that she will not call a special session, it remains for the legislature, which has given her until December 10 to decide, to announce its further action.

It is within the bounds of possibility that the legislature may vote to impeach Ma Ferguson, the Sun story says. It is also within the same bounds that the senate, sitting as a court, may convict and remove her. Ma and Jim are certain they can't and won't. Certain anti-Fergusonites are just as certain they will, declaring that she has proved herself incompetent and has allowed her husband to usurp her office without effort at restraint.

One thing is certain. If Ma goes down to defeat her colors will be nailed to the mast. If for the second time in her troubled life she will be forced out of the executive mansion, she will come down the steps with her head high and her clear eyes looking through you, the story reads.

When winter's snow is falling outside—and the noise of wind roars through the trees—when the house is dark but for the blazing logs in the fireplace

—have a Camel!

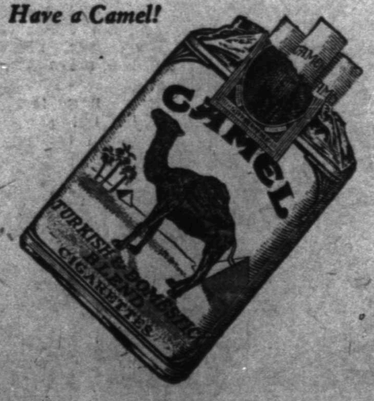

No other cigarette in the world is like Camels. Camels contain the choicest Turkish and domestic tobaccos. The Camel blend is the triumph of expert blenders. Even the Camel cigarette paper is the finest—made especially in France. Into this one blend of cigarettes is concentrated the experience and skill of the largest tobacco organization in the world.

WHEN it's a winter night and the day that was busy is done. And outside the snow is driving through the trees before the wind. When, inside, the crackling logs catch fire and burst into flames above the hearth—have a Camel!

For Camel is the tried and trusted friend of millions of experienced smokers. Whether your returning steps bring you home tired or jubilant, no sweeter, more mellow fragrance ever came to you from a cigarette. There's not a cigaretty after-taste, not a tired taste in a whole county full of Camels. Only mild and mellow flavor, deep-down contentment in your home or any home where Camels are lighted.

So this night, before your roaring logs of oak or hickory—have a Camel. Open up the famous package of Camels and know the fragrance, the contentment that brings happiness to millions. Put a Camel between you and a light and taste the mellowest, most delectable blend ever made into a cigarette.

Have a Camel!

Our highest wish, if you do not yet know Camel quality, is that you try them. We invite you to compare Camels with any cigarette made at any price.

More Truth Than Poetry

NO GRATITUDE

Let servers of summonses redden with shame
When they learn that a man of their guild
Can look upon ladies who wallow in fame,
And never be properly thrilled.
Nay more, who can stare at a cinema queen
Without one faint quiver of awe,
And serve her with trivial papers which mean
She must answer an action at law.
No wonder the lady turned red and then white,
Curled her lips in a passionate sneer—
Extended a supple and sinewy right
And cuffed the rude oaf on the ear.
No wonder she seared him with withering scorn,
Which we haven't the heart to repeat
And the summons, all crumpled and tattered and torn,
Was hurled like a stone at his feet!
And yet not a thrill did this dull fellow find
In the sting of that masterly blow,
The slap of that beautiful hand left behind
No pleasant and soul stirring glow.
As the great lady daintily tripped up the stair
His gaze was resentful and rough,
And he said with a sullen and insolent air,
"I'm going to bring suit for that cuff!"
What a man can this be, not to lift up his voice
And to shout in the gathering gloom,
So that all of the neighbors might hear him rejoice
As he climbed up the stairs to his home;
And to cry to his wife as the doorway he passed
Of his cosy domestic demense—
"Well, well, Esmeralda, I'm lucky at last;
I've been cuffed by a photo-play queen!"

ONCE UPON A TIME — THE PUMPKIN PIE PRINCESS—XIV

by W. J. ENRIGHT.

THE STORY UP TO NOW

ONCE THE PUMPKIN HOUSE OF A TINY LITTLE GIRL NAMED ESMERELDA FELL TO THE MOON. AS NOBODY IN THE MOON HAD EVER TASTED PUMPKIN PIE, THE MOON KING ASKED THE LITTLE GIRL TO SHOW THE COOK HOW TO MAKE ONE. HE INSISTED ON A TINY TASTE AS IT CAME ALL BROWN AND STEAMING FROM THE OVEN, BUT ESMERELDA TOLD HIM HE MUST WAIT FOR DESSERT BEFORE HE HAD ANY MORE. THE KING LIKED THE PIE SO MUCH THAT HE TOLD ESMERELDA HE WOULD DO ANYTHING IN THE MOON FOR HER.

ESMERELDA LOOKED UP AT THE KING AND SAID: "THERE IS ONLY ONE THING I REALLY WANT AND THAT IS TO BE AS BIG AS OTHER LITTLE GIRLS."

"I'M AFRAID THAT IS A DIFFICULT TASK," SAID THE KING. "BUT WE WILL SEE WHAT MY MAGICIAN CAN DO FOR YOU." SO HE RANG A BELL AND WHEN THE SERVANT CAME HE SAID: "SEND THE COURT MAGICIAN TO ME AT ONCE."

© McClure Newspaper Syndicate

SOON THE DOOR OPENED AND IN CAME THE QUEEREST LOOKING LITTLE OLD MAN YOU COULD FIND ANYWHERE. HE WAS SO OLD THAT HIS LONG WHITE BEARD HAD TURNED GREEN. HIS NOSE WAS LONG AND QUITE RED AT THE POINT AND HIS EYES SPARKLED LIKE BITS OF FIRE BEHIND HIS SQUARE SPECTACLES.

HE HAD ON A LONG BLACK ROBE AND TALL POINTED HAT WITH STRANGE DESIGNS IN RED ON THEM. "YOU SENT FOR ME, YOUR MAJESTY?" HE ASKED IN A HIGH, PIERCING VOICE. "YES," REPLIED THE KING. "THIS LITTLE GIRL WISHES TO BE AS BIG AS OTHER LITTLE GIRLS, AND YOU MUST ATTEND TO IT."

CAGE LOOP FASTER.

With the entrance yesterday of the Dixie Tire-Stephens Lumber quint team the 1925-26 Wichita Falls commercial cage league filled out its quota of four teams. Play will begin in the immediate future. The league this season has a wealth of far more experienced material to choose from that of last year. And playing on the Junior college court, far faster than the old legion cage, a much better brand of basketball can be expected.

Right now, team managers refuse to announce the personnel of their clubs. Sounds strange, doesn't it? But each leader is afraid another will steal some of his players before they're all down on the dotted line. That was reason given yestereday by two managers.

AD A SWIMMER.

Ad Santel, champion of the light heavies, may be the greatest wrestler in the world at his weight, but that's merely one of his accomplishments. Ad is a wonderful swimmer. Also, he's a football player.

Santel besides being a star gridder formerly was one of the coaches of the powerful Olympic club football team out in California. He's played professional ball, but in recent years held his grid activities to that of a mentor.

As a swimmer, there's few who have it on Santel. Well do we remember occasions back in the old Travis club pool at San Antonio about 1913 or '14 Santel used to give swimming exhibitions as a portion of his training exercises. We've seen Ad go to the bottom in the shallow end of the pool, let two or three youngsters stand on him, and stick down there under water for fully five minutes, possibly more. Then come up with a sudden lunge that would scatter the kids, shouting gleefully, half way across the tank.

Back in 1912, Santel through his great ability as a swimmer saved the life of a young Bohemian boy in a flood near Taylor. Streams had broken over their banks until at the point Santel went to the rescue the turbulent waters were fully two miles wide. He battled swift currents and hurtling logs and debris for several hours before he succeeded in taking the youngster from a small house which was giving away rapidly, to safety.

Santel was in the water fully eight hours that day, forced to duck under logs, around them, fight the current, and disentangle himself from masses of floating brush wood, death lurking at nearly every stroke. The father of the lad rescued endeavored to press a $300 reward on the wrestler-swimmer, but Ad in characteristic manner shrugged his shoulders, and grunted refusal.

* * *

Sully Montgomery, the Fort Worth heavyweight who the past year or so has been fighting out of Chicago and making a lot of the big boys look awful, apparently has his heart set on visiting Wichita Falls during the Christmas holidays. Sully intends to call on the home folk down in Fort Worth, he told us in a recent letter, and would like to participate in a bout here. Yesterday we received a missive from Roy Montgomery, Sully's brother, asking that we put him in touch with local promoters. Sully, his brother said, will be down this way about Dec. 15.

THAT BIG TEN ARGUMENT.

It can be said, in all justice to everyone concerned, that Fielding H. Yost celebrated his twenty-fifth year as coach of the Michigan grid team by winning the Big Ten title.

Now, of course, technically he didn't win a clear claim to it. The Wolverines lost one game. Northwestern also lost but one conference game. And it so happens that Michigan's only defeat was at the hands of Northwestern.

So a Northwestern loyalist will tell you the Evanston institution deserves the title.

But on the other hand—

Michigan played six conference games and won five of them. The Yostmen turned back Illinois, Ohio State, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Indiana. The Ann Arbor team met the Minnesota eleven when it was at the peak of form and was, without a doubt, the most formidable team in the conference.

Northwestern played Chicago, Indiana, Purdue and Michigan.

Indiana and Purdue were the poorest teams in the conference. Chicago whipped Northwestern. The slender threat on which the latter's claim to the title rests is that 3 to 2 victory over Michigan—whereas Michigan presents five victories, with Indiana the only weak spot on it. Ohio State was rounding into form when the Michigan game came along. That is proved by Ohio's showing the following week against Illinois.

Go farther into the records of the teams. Both Illinois and Wisconsin trounced Chicago, conquerors of Northwestern. Michigan licked both those teams.

Iowa had beaten Illinois and Ohio State and lost a close game to Wisconsin when Minnesota tackled the Iowans—and proceeded to score five touchdowns.

Then Michigan trounced Minnesota by the handsome score of 35 to 0.

Northwestern can not produce such a record.

Glenn Thistlewaite had a good team. Had Ralph Baker been available all through the season the result might have been different. But no one, under existing conditions, can question Michigan's supremacy.

Noska Ready To Get At Santel In Mat Feature At Majestic Theatre Tonight

Chicagoan Heavier Than Light Heavy Champ—Mason All Set for Bout With Brewster.

Paul Noska, Chicago heavyweight who meets Ad Santel, world's light heavyweight wrestling champion, tonight in the feature match of the Wichita Falls Wrestling association card at the Majestic theatre, arrived in Wichita Falls Monday night primed for action, according to Matchmaker Alec Ross.

Noska was declared in the best of condition and fully prepared to give his lighter but formidable opponent the battle of his life. The match is a finish affair, but should Santel be defeated he will not forfeit his belt. Noska is well over the light heavy limit, tipping the scales a few pounds more than 200, said Ross.

The Bohemian has been getting over strong in heavyweight mat circles, and is expected to give Santel a tough fight. However, Ad expressed confidence last night that he will be able to take care of himself.

"I know little about Noska's style, however," the light heavy champ said, "I realize he has been beating some mighty strong heavyweights. He may beat me. But all I have to say is I will give my best. I don't say I can beat anybody in the world, but I'm willing to try, anyhow."

Incidently, Santel has gained quite a bit of fame for his ability to throw the big boys around, and there are but a few close followers of the mat game here who do not believe that no matter how hard the match tonight Santel eventually will be returned the victor. His enormous strength for a light heavy, quickness and agility, and wonderful knowledge of the technique of the game make him the favorite.

Charley Mason of Butte, the middleweight champion of the northwest, said Monday that he is ready for Jack Brewster, the tough middleweight from Olney. Brewster beat Kala Pasha, Texas middle champion, not so long ago, but the Olney grappler was over the middleweight limit. He is expected to weigh about 163 pounds tonight. Mason will weigh about 158.

The first bout begins at 8:30, said Ross.

46 TURN OUT IN FIRST PACK CAGE SHOWING

Frazee Talks Charge Of Squad All This Week

OTHERS COMING OUT

Flippin and Howard Flash In Short Practice Game

Wichita Falls high school athletes opened basketball training Monday afternoon on the Junior college court with a record turnout of 46 contenders for berths on the team.

C. C. Frazee who will handle the squad during the first week of practice, sent the gang through a light workout session. Several games of five-minute halves were played.

The first contest resulted in an 8 to 2 victory for a quintent led by Perk Ray, including Coyal Francis, W. J. Howard and Bill Flippin in the lineup. This quartet of youngsters all looked good.

Flippin and Howard, however, made the best showing. Howard was high point man. Jot Hodges also displayed court ability.

Fritz Taylor, Roy Porter, and Ralph Woodson made a nice showing on a 6 to 2 win during another game.

The 46 men who were out for practice were:

Captain Perk Ray, David Hanna, William Flippin, Luman Taylor, Emil Flusche, Tank Horton, Norman Adams, Frank Rugeley, Oscar Thoms, George Cotton, Ollan Dickey, George Brown, Melvin McKinney, Ralph Woodson, Frank Williams, Gabbert Stephens, John Reed, Bill Young, Norman Rosser, Gabriel Disosway, Pete Gouge, Hayden Osbourn, Clyde Vance, Cecil James, W. J. Howard, Bill Miller, James Molstein, Coyal Francis, Fred Boone, Bill Harban, Harrold McConnell, Marvin Robertson, M. A. Smith, Bill Blakeney, Clarence Beavers, Raymond Mitchell, Jot Hodges, Fritz Taylor, T. P. Duncan, Johnnie McMahon, Neal Prichard, John Ross Haley, Edmund Coffey, Sewell Cox, Clarence Adams, Roy Porter, and Dempsey Moore.

Ed Powell and other members of the 1925 grid squad are expected to join the court squad soon.

Neal Plans Game For Landon-Hill

C. E. Neal, manager of the Landon Hill basketball club in the city league, announced Monday morning that he would have his team on the practice court at Call field and is planning on an out of town game Friday night.

Who the opponent will be has not been decided, but Neal said he was trying to line up one of three high school teams, Clara, Harrold and Grandfield.

'BAMA PLAYERS PLACE

Tulane Earns Two Positions on All-Southern.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 30.—(AP)—An all-southern conference football team compiled by The Associated Press from 32 selections made by coaches and sports writers throughout the south, resulted in the following nominations:

Lowe, Tennessee, end. Rives, Vanderbilt, tackle. Buckler, Alabama, guard. Kent, Sewanee, center. Levy, Tulane, guard. Goldstein, Florida, tackle. Thompson, Georgia, end. Hubert, Alabama, quarter. Flournoy, Tulane, halfback. Brown, Alabama, halfback. Wickoff, Georgia Tech, fullback.

UNDECIDED ON SHERMAN PLAYER'S ELIGIBILITY

AUSTIN, Nov. 30.—(AP)—The executive committee of the Texas University Interscholastic league was unable today to reach a decision on eligibility of Elbert Caraway, Sherman high school backfield performer, but expects to make a decision Wednesday at the latest, Rol Henderson, athletic director said. Dallas Forest Avenue high school charges Caraway is over 21 years old. Regulations of the league provide no man as old as 21 may compete.

TEARNEY TO CONTINUE AS WESTERN PRESIDENT

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 30.—(AP)—A. R. Tearney today withdrew his resignation and will continue as president of the Western League for two more years. The action was taken at a meeting of league directors here. Tearney's resignation was submitted September 19, after several club owners had charged that the president was not devoting enough time to the league affairs.

Junior High Cage Squad May Begin Work Next Week

The Coyote Pups probably will start their basketball grind next week at the earliest, Coach Montgomery says he wants to take a short breathing spell from football before he rushes his cagers out on the court for any games.

Montgomery expects a host of players out who will give him a good team this year. Much will be expected from Hunky Farris, Roy Brackett, Red Nichols and other youngsters who will be on the list for basketball.

Incidently, junior high has no court on which to practice at present. No arrangement has been made for the use of any other cage.

Writers Select All-Star Major Baseball Team

Vance and Hornsby Poll Heaviest Vote For Places

The Sporting News, national weekly newspaper devoted to the affairs of organized baseball, this week publishes an all-star major league team selected from the vote of members of the Baseball Writers' Association of America. One hundred and two writers cast ballots in the vote which was carried out by mail.

Dazzy Vance of the Brooklyn Robins, scored the heaviest total of votes, polling 98 out of the possible 102, for top choice as one of the three pitchers. Rogers Hornsby of the St. Louis Cardinals, was an overwhelming choice for second base, getting 94 votes. The closest contest was on the center fielder, Captain Max Carey of Pittsburg, beating out Tris Speaker of Cleveland, by a margin of two points.

Glenn Wright and Harold (Pie) Traynor, shortstop and third baseman, respectively, of the champion Pirates, won their places easily, while Jim Bottomley, of the St. Louis Cardinals, beat out George Sisler of the Browns, for first base. Cochrane of the Athletics was the ruling choice for catcher, with Ruel of Washington, second.

Here is the selection:

Carey, Pittsburg N. L., center field.
Cuyler, Pittsburg N. L., right field.
Traynor, Pittsburg N. L., third base.
Wright, Pittsburg N. L., shortstop.
Hornsby, St. Louis N. L., second base.
Bottomley, St. Louis N. L., first base.
Cochrane, Philadelphia A. L., catcher.
Vance, Brooklyn N. L., pitcher.
Johnson, Washington A. L., pitcher.
Rommel, Philadelphia A. L., pitcher.

HOME FINDER RETIRES TODAY

Texas Man Gave Up Fortune to Place 1,950 Children in Past 25 Years.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Robert L. Neill, who 25 years ago gave up a lucrative cotton brokerage business at Houston, Texas, to devote his time to finding homes for orphans as an official of the New York Children's Aid society, will retire today after spending much of his personal fortune in getting homes for 1,950 orphans.

Ercanbrack and Denton Added to Legion Program

Martin and Clark Ready For Gong in Ten-Rounder Says Don

Jack Denton has been matched for a six-rounder with Jack Ecranbrack in the semi-final of the legion fight card slated Thursday night in the 812 1-2 Scott arena, announced Matchmaker Wofford Monday.

Both Jacks are the slugging type of lightweights. Each has performed before Wichita Falls fans several times. That the mill should prove a stiff tussle between two evenly matched boys seems assured, many fans will tell you.

That ten-round main event billed between Roughouse Clark and Buster Martin, Wichita Falls Heavyweights, still stands, said Wofford. Both of the big fellows are in condition and ready for the going, he said.

Redcap Martin and Battling Kosse meet in a four-rounder. These lads are getting to be preliminary favorites.

Kid Norford and Black Tornado, two negro scrappers, are carded for a six-rounder.

The promoter asked that attention be called to the fact this week's card will be staged Thursday night. Last week the bouts were held Wednesday.

BARNEY HAS NEW IDEA

He Would Start Rain-Cut Games from Point Stopped.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 30.—(AP)—President Barney Dreyfuss of the world's champion Pittsburgh Pirates, has a plan he will submit to the magnates at the December meeting whereby games once started and stopped by rain will be played out from the point at which they were interrupted.

President Dreyfuss said that the general public and owners had become disgusted with the actions of players in games where a downpour of rain is expected.

"Every means of delaying the game is resorted to," he added. "Under this new rule nothing would be gained by the stalling."

DANCER SUES FOR WRIT

Evans Burrows Fontaine Fights Extradition to California.

CHICAGO, Nov. 30—(AP)—Evans Burrows Fontane, dancer, who sued Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney for $1,000,000 for breach of promise in New York, was granted a writ of habeas corpus today in her fight to resist extradition to California to answer a citation for contempt of court. Her removal recently was ordered. She was enjoined by a California court from proceeding further against Whitney after a previous suit had been dismissed.

Hearing was set for December 21.

MEEHAN PICKS ALL-EAST

Two Each from Dartmouth and Syracuse on Club.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Syracuse and Dartmouth each have two players on an all-eastern football team selected today for the Associated Press by John F. "Chick" Meehan, head coach at New York University and former Syracuse mentor.

Meehan's selections follow:

Ends, Hanson, Syracuse, and Tulley, Dartmouth. Tackles, Joss, Yale, and Sprague, Army. Guards, Wissinger, Pittsburgh, and Skubin, New York University. Center, McMillan, Princeton. Quarterback, Foley, Syracuse. Halfbacks, Tryon, Colgate, and Oberlander, Dartmouth. Fullback, Kreuz, Pennsylvania.

Let Story frame it.—Adv.

The PASSING HOUR

by Wm. B. Ruggles

QUERY

When Adam delved and Eve span,
There was no All-American.

They did not pick the ends and backs
When Cain dropped Abel in his tracks.

I doubt if Solomon could say
The best right halfback of his day.

Moses, the sapient, could but hush
If asked to name a center-rush.

The Good Book tells about these gents—
They had their little arguments;

But leaves a wonder, now they're gone,
As to what they had to argue on.

He Deserved It.

IT is doubtful if any one around the Southwestern circuit will begrudge D. X. Bible his new-won championship. Adherents of the Texas eleven naturally were grieved by the formidable score that the Farmers ran up, but the actual tally of the game should have been 14-0, more nearly representing the actual superiority of the Aggie team on Thanksgiving day. Dana Bible, who has had his share of hard luck in recent years, deserves an occasional break of fortune.

It is to be regretted that the loss to T. C. U. spoiled for the Farmers both an undefeated year and a clean slate in the conference. While nearly every one regards the College Station team this year as better than Matty Bell's, the victory of the fighting Frogs still stands out.

But back to Bible. Here is an able coach, but one who has met with reverses since his long string of successes. The logical result has occurred. Dissatisfaction on the part of many supporters who are inclined to ask consistent victories. Even counting in the T. C. U. defeat, the success of the Aggie team can not be discounted this year.

The point is that the best of tutors may have bad years—sometimes with indifferent material, sometimes with bad breaks (as he had in plenty in 1924.) Given the men and a little luck, the coach will deliver.

The moral is, don't cry for a change of doctors. Sometimes the combination will be on hand.

BABE RUTH may be slipping, but there are at least 9,556 present and ex-ball players who would not mind fading out on the last year of a $52,000 contract.

Why are the players who garner the shells
Always the Raymonds, the Ruths and Waddells?

DON'T they ever manufacture a great star with a modicum of common sense?

Figures Are Deceptive.

THAT baseball's statistical figures are deceptive can always be gleaned from any careful study of the records of players you know in a new league who once played in the same company elsewhere. It is a test that you can apply annually in the majors and the 26 minors.

In mind are this year's figures issued for the Western association.

Here is Metzler of Ardmore hitting .360 and a notch or so below Najo of Okmulgee, clouting at a .356 pace.

Najo, a slashing class D hitter, has never managed to stick out a class A trial. He has weaknesses that the pitchers discover. He does not seem to be a .270 hitter in the Texas loop.

Metzler on the other hand, has twice forced Buddy Tanner at Wichita Falls to mourn that he could not carry another outfielder. He was back in the Lone Star loop before the end of the 1925 season. His .360 pace is his natural gait in class D or class A.

After you read 'em in baseball, you frequently weep.

ILLINOIS statisticians have figured out that Red Grange traveled two miles across gridirons in four years at college. And hasn't caught up with a BA yet.

THE real definition of a football upset seems to be that occasion when the teams do not play as the experts expected them to.

Nor Can Three.

GOING east to meet Rockne and Tad Jones in the selection, undoubtedly for a news syndicate, of an all-American eleven, Glenn Warner explained to interviewers that the choice had outgrown any one-man system. Undoubtedly it has. But it is impossible for three to choose better, especially on the theory outlined by Warner, where each has seen the stars of different sections play.

What common basis can they reach to make the choice agreeable to all?

There isn't any good system of naming an all-American or an all-conference team. They are all impracticable.

The selections are a whole lot like Christmas ornaments. They please the eye. They do not really mean anything.

East Carries Off Major Share of Sectional Honors

South Slipped up on Big Ten and Missouri Valley

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—(AP)—During a campaign marked by keener rivalry than ever before among various college gridiron areas, the eastern sector of the football battle front has carried off the major share of intersectional honors for 1925.

Fifty-five games among prominent teams in the east, south, middle west and far west, nearly twice the total of such contests in 1924, from the basis of comparison and out of this competition the east emerges with a convincing lead, piling up 28 victories against 12 defeats. The Atlantic seaboard section thus succeeds to the title held last year by the middle west, which finished second this season with 15 victories and 23 set backs.

Illini Stopped Penn.

Despite the east's big numerical advantage, however, the middle west and south collected a fair share of laurels where the bigger teams came into conflict.

Western conference or "Big Ten" teams, for instance, broke even in six contests with major eastern rivals. In the most conspicuous of these Illinois and Michigan upheld middle western prestige by trouncing Pennsylvania and the Navy, respectively, while Dartmouth provided a finishing flourish for the east and swamped Chicago.

The eastern score also was aided by the performance of the Army and Navy in taking the measure of Notre Dame and Marquette, respectively, for victories that squared 1924 accounts.

The strength of southern contenders for inter-esctional honors was displayed in Tulane's victory over the Northwestern team which defeated Michigan. Souther Methodist's triumph over Drake and Georgia Tech's defeat of Penn State on a neutral battle ground, New York. Tulane also tied Missouri, champions of the Missouri Valley conference.

The far west's biggest victory in inter-sectional play, which still may witness a post-season game or two of that type on the coast, was scored by Southern California over Iowa. Washington, coast champions, was held to a tie by Nebraska.

Steers Select Captain Tonight.

AUSTIN, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Selection of the 1925 Texas University football squad will be made Tuesday night at a wild duck dinner to be given at the home of "Doc" Stewart, head coach.

FOURTH TEAM LINES UP FOR CAGE LEAGUE

Dixie Tires and Stephens Lumber to Enter Quintet

MANAGERS MEET SOON

Club Leaders Not Ready To Announce Their Rosters

A four-team arrangement for this season's Wichita Falls commercial basketball league was completed yesterday with announcement that Dixie Tire company and Stephens Lumber company have combined to place a team in the race.

B. G. Sharpe, business manager of the tire-lumber outfit, said a player-manager would be elected this week.

The league is to be composed of quintets backed financially by the Dixie Tire-Stephens Lumber combine, Landon-Hill, Draughon's Business college and Texhoma Oil and Refining company.

Gerard Boone has been selected manager of the Texhoma five. Metzger leads Draughons, C. E. Neal is in charge of the Landon-Hill team, and Sharpe handles the combination club until the player-manager is selected.

Team managers refused to announce their rosters yesterday, declaring they would not be prepared to do so until the next league meeting at which time each player will have been signed up.

The league is to meet some time inside of the next few days, it was said.

HEWITT LEADS ARMY

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 30.—(AP)—Orrville M. (Tiny) Hewitt, fullback, has been elected captain of the 1926 army football team. Hewitt, a native of Pennsylvania, played for the University of Pennsylvania before coming to West Point, where he had appeared in the back field for three years.

PALACE WILL TREAT SCHOOL KIDS TO SOUSA

Special Matinee Rate Offered for Noted Band Concert

The Palace theatre offers a most unusual treat to the school children of Wichita Falls. Mr. Hoenscheidt of the Palace has received permission, through special arrangement with Lieutenant-Commander John Philip Sousa, to sell to school children 200 admissions at 50 cents each. These school tickets for the matinee concert of Sousa and His Band, to be given at the Palace on the afternoon of Wednesday, Dec. 2, will be sold as coupons that may be exchanged for reservations any place in the theatre, so that children may be seated with their parents or guardians.

Through the cooperation of Miss Voss, superintendent of music in the schools, all pupils desiring to attend the concert will be excused after two o'clock.

At the matinee performance, Sousa will introduce a musical novelty, the title of which is "Showing Off Before Company," 1925 edition—wherein various members of the band will do individual stunts.

The first section that appears are the clarinets, playing the ballet music of Sylvia.

Story Gives Bond, But Goes to Jail

DENTON, Nov. 30.—Yancey Story held in connection with the slaying of R. B. Parsons, former Denton policeman, made $4,000 bond here today on charges of theft and burglary in connection with the robbery of a bank at Tioga, Feb. 17. Story is under bonds totalling $75,000.

He made bonds under 12 complaints filed against him Saturday in Gainesville in connection with the robbery of two banks and the burning of Valley View. He was turned over to Denton county officers and returned to Denton to face additional charges there.

Atwell Speaks to Lawyers Today

OKLA. SCHOOL HEAD DIES IN AUTO WRECK

A. E. Wickizier of Near Duncan Killed Near Marlow

WAURIKA, Okla., Nov. 30—A. E. Wickizier, superintendent of Empire consolidated schools, near Duncan, was killed near Marlow late Sunday night when a car driven by C. G. Stuard of this city struck Mr. Wickizier's automobile.

Mr. and Mrs. Stuard were driving home from Norman where they had been to accompany home their two daughters, Mrs. A. Meachem and Miss Ruby Stuard, both of whom are students at the University of Oklahoma.

The accident happened on the highway just a few miles from the city of Marlow.

Mr. Wickizier, who was accompanied by his daughter, had stopped his car to replace a flat tire, borrowing a jack from a car which was headed north. Mr. Stuard, coming from the north, was blinded by the lights of the car Mr. Wickizier had hailed and did not see the Wickizier car until he struck it. Mr. Wickizier, who had not yet gotten back into his car, was struck by the overturning car and killed instantly.

Mr. and Mrs. Stuard were badly injured when their car turned completely over, pinning them beneath. They had to be extricated by outside help.

Mrs. Wickizier's daughter, although in the overturned car, was practically unhurt. The inquest was held at Marlow today.

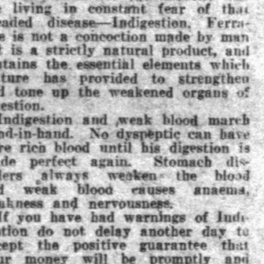

Wickizier was 54 years of age, and leaves a wife, three daughters and a son. He has been a teacher for the past 30 years, 11 of which have been spent in Oklahoma. He was formerly superintendent of the Cameron Agricultural college at Lawton but was superintendent of the Empire consolidated schools 10 miles south of Duncan at the time of his death.

KILLS LION ON ROAD

BROWNSVILLE, Texas, Nov. 30—(AP)—A half grown mountain lion was killed near Laferia when struck by an automobile driven by J. K. Durston of Brownsville. The animal apparently became blinded by the lights of the automobile.

"BAYER ASPIRIN" PROVED SAFE

Take without Fear as Told in "Bayer" Package

Does not affect the Heart

Unless you see the "Bayer Cross" on package or on tablets you are not getting the genuine Bayer Aspirin proved safe by millions and prescribed by physicians over twenty-five years for

Colds	Headache
Neuritis	Lumbago
Toothache	Rheumatism
Neuralgia	Pain, Pain

Each unbroken "Bayer" package contains proven directions. Handy boxes of twelve tablets cost few cents. Druggists also sell bottles of 24 and 100.

Millions Die Of Indigestion

Most Common, Yet Insidious of Fatal Diseases, Strikes Like Lightning and When Least Expected.

Protect yourself by strengthening your digestive organs with Ferraline—then eat what you please without trouble.

Nature, with her infinite wisdom, has provided in Ferraline a quick and sure relief for the millions who are living in constant fear of that dreaded disease—Indigestion. Ferraline is not a concoction made by man but is a strictly natural product, and contains the essential elements which Nature has provided to strengthen and tone up the weakened organs of digestion.

Indigestion and weak blood march hand-in-hand. No dyspeptic can have pure rich blood until his digestion is made perfect again. Stomach disorders always weaken the blood and weak blood causes anaemia, weakness and nervousness.

If you have had warnings of Indigestion do not delay another day to accept the positive guarantee that your money will be promptly and cheerfully refunded if the very first bottle of Ferraline does not give you relief. Don't be misled into believing that heart-burn, gas, bloating, constipation, biliousness, sick stomach, heart and kidney pains will gradually go away. These are danger signals warning you that the dread disease, Indigestion, is gradually sapping your very life. Regenerate your digestive organs at once with Ferraline, then you can eat three good meals every day without discomfort. A 10 days' treatment of Ferraline will cost you only One Dollar at your druggist's.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 30.—(AP)—The cotton market today was moderately active and aside from the initial dip due to liquidation on good weather and fears of large ginnings, it was largely a trading affair, operators buying or selling for quick turns. There was no disposition to take hold in an important way owing to the coming annual estimate and ginning report to December 1. The opening decline of 31 to 41 points established the low levels of the day and although at one time prices rallied to within 7 to 10 points of the close of Saturday recovering most of the early loss, a final break of 19 to 21 points on realizing closed the market at net losses for the day of 26 to 29 points.

The start was easy and first trades showed losses of 31 to 41 points with December at 19.20, January at 19.10 and March at 18.85. These proved to be the low points of the day. The early weakness was due to lower cables than due and to continued good weather creating fears of very large ginnings for the last period. The market improved soon after the start on trade buying and switching from near positions to later months and in the middle of the afternoon prices made new highs within seven to ten points of the previous close and 24 to 34 points above the lows with January at 19.44, March at 19.14 and May at 18.84, but a good part of the rally was lost in the final trading on realizing, the final figures being 19 to 21 points below the highs. Exports for the day totaled 54,989 bales.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—(AP)—The cotton market was lower today with near months relatively weak under liquidation, promoted by unfavorable British trade reports and rumors of freer spot offerings in the south. January contracts sold off to 19.46 and closed at 19.51, compared with 19.80 at the close of last week. The general market closed barely steady at net declines of 22 to 26 points.

The market opened easy at a decline of 13 to 30 points in response to relatively easy Liverpool cables and reports that stocks of both cotton cloths and yarns were accumulating in Manchester. There was some southern hedge selling and a good deal of near month liquidation in early trading, but later the bulk of trading appeared to represent the transferring of long accounts from near to late months, or switching between markets.

Near the close there was a renewal of southern selling. December made a new low late in the afternoon but the lowest prices of the day on later months were touched shortly after the opening. December broke to 20.15 and closed at that figure. After selling off to 19.37 early, March rallied to 19.72 and closed at 19.53. As a result of the day's switching from near to late months, the December premium over January was reduced to 64 points at the close, compared with 71 points at close Saturday, while the January premium over May was reduced to 33 points compared with 38 points at the close of last week.

Conflicting opinions were expressed as to the probable showing of next week's government crop report, some expecting it to show an increase over the last figures while others were looking for a further reduction in the indicated yield. Uncertainty in this respect checked general business and much of the day's trading was regarded as an incidental to the evening up of December contracts.

It was rumored that private returns pointed to a ginning of only 13,250,000 bales to December first.

Port receipts 100,211. U. S. port stocks 1,565,074.

The offer came from Governor Richardson.

The chief justiceship recently became vacant by resignation of the incumbent judge.

N. Y. Stocks

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Uneven price movements characterized today's stock market, but the main tendency appeared to be downward. Trading showed a marked falling off in volume, reflecting substantially reduced public participation and temporary suspension of pool operations in several issues. Stiffening call money rates while directly traceable to the sharp decrease in excess reserve shown in last Saturday's clearing house statement and heavy month-end currency requirements revived conjectures as to what action the New York Federal Reserve bank will take on its re-discount rate this Thursday. Wall street generally was of the opinion that if the Bank of England rate was raised on Wednesday the New York bank would announce an increase the next day. The advance from 6½ to 7 per cent in the Bank of Belgium rate was generally construed as another indication of Belgium's intention to return to the gold standard.

Outside the stock market, chief speculative interest centered in the sharp rally in French francs and the announcement of higher gasoline prices in New England. Commodity markets were irregular wheat closing higher and cotton lower on the day.

Railroad shares displayed a relatively firm undertone with special buying apparent in some of the so-called merger roads. Kansas City Southern was bid up nearly five points to a new record high at 48⅝ on reports of a definite announcement this week regarding the southwestern rail merger, of which it is the main link. The preferred touched a new top at 62½. Wheeling and Lake Erie common and preferred each advanced about four points to new high records at 40⅝ and 52, respectively.

Atlantic Coast Line jumped five points to a new top at 235 on a relatively small turnover. Net gains of one to 2½ points were recorded by Chesapeake and Ohio, Delaware and Hudson, Frisco, Louisville and Nashville, Perre Marquette, Western Maryland and Western Pacific. Michigan Central, on one sale of ten shares, attained a new record price at 750, or 90 points above the previous sale.

Standard Industrials showed mixed changes. U. S. Steel common closed nearly a point lower at 128⅞ while American Can and Baldwin showed fractional improvement. Motors experienced another sinking spell although most of them closed above the low figures of the day. Mack Trucks showed a net loss of four points at 211 after having sold down to 209½. General Motors was off 1⅝ at 114 after having been down to 112⅞ and White, Hudson, Chrysler and Pierce Arrow common and preferred showed recessions of one to three points.

Among the specialties, International Combustion Engineering stood out with a gain of 3⅜ at 64¼, a new high record. New peak prices also were attained by Air Reduction, American Sugar, Consolidated Cigar, Devoe and Reynolds and Gimbel Brothers common and preferred.

Call money renewed at five per cent and then advanced to 5½ when banks called about $15,000,000 in loans. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged. French francs rallied about 12 points to around 4.00 cents in reflection of a similar advance in the London market before the New York banks opened. Other European exchanges moved within rather narrow and irregular limits with the exception of Polish zlotys, which broke 80 points to a new low record at 13.00 cents. Demand sterling held fairly steady around $4.84 3-16.

CHICAGO GRAIN REVIEW

CHICAGO, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Official announcement that wheat exports from Russia are banned until next March did a good deal today to bring about a material upturn in wheat values here. Wheat closed strong, 1¼ to 2⅞c net higher, new style, December 1.66 to 1.66¼ and May 1.61⅞ to 1.62, with corn at ⅝c to ¾c advance, oats ¼@⅜ to ½c down and provisions varying from 10c decline to a rise of 22c.

Corn prices were ruled largely by the action of wheat. The fact that arrivals of corn were of less volume than was looked for counted as a strengthening influence but not until December corn had touched the lowest price yet this season.

Oats were depressed by an outlook for fair sized deliveries tomorrow. December oats as well as December corn outdid the season's low prices record. Despite weakness of hog values provisions averaged higher, in line with corn.

FORT WORTH LIVESTOCK

FORT WORTH, Nov. 30.—Monday's cattle trade opened with 11,000 cattle and calves in the pens, calves numbering 4,000. A week ago the number of cattle and calves was posted as 9,307, and a year ago the count revealed 10,643.

The cattle market had a slow start but subsequently operations made up for the early delay, since the market yielded more cows in carloads than any previous day in the past month, and values were fairly in line with those noting the trade at the close of last week. Canners and cutters were fully steady, the number on offer being smaller than usual taking into consideration the number of she stock on the market. Beef cattle were early sellers at around steady prices.

Calves developed strength on weighty calves for shipment, while off color calves and the general run of undesirables had to take a cut of 25 to 50c.

Beef cattle were shown in general as grassers of good to strong weight and the early sales showed the heavy sort taking $6.35—the steers weighing around 1,000 pounds moving at $5.50.

Best of the cow contingent took $4 to 5.00. A 10 car string of canners made $2.75.

Best of the light calves made up to $7, and an $8 values was placed on the most desirable of the shipping calves. Low grade calves moved within the $3 to 4.50 spread.

The hog trade was a dime to 20c lower, following the trend of western markets, where more than 100,000 arrivals were posted for Monday. A butcher paid $12 for a few choice butchers, packer top stood at $11.75, some fair butchers selling at $6.60. Pigs were unchanged.

Sheep market was steady on arrivals of 800. Wethers at $8 and $8.10; slaughter yearlings selling at $11 and feeder yearlings at $10.

Cattle 11,000, including 4,000 calves; market slow, steady; beeves $5.50@8.00; stockers $4.50@7.50; fat cows $3.50@5.00; heifers $5.00@7.00; yearlings $5.25@10.00; canners $2.20@2.30; cutters $2.40@2.75; bulls $2.50@3.75; calves $4.00@7.00.

Hogs 400; market 10 to 20c lower; best medium weight $11.80@12.00; good mixed $11.70@11.80; good light $11.50@11.70; fair mixed $11.40@11.60; fair light $11.35@11.45; common $7.00@9.00; packing sows $11.00@11.50; pigs $10.00@11.25.

Sheep 800; market steady; lambs $12.00@14.00; feeder lambs $10.00@13.50; wethers $8.00@13.50; wethers $8.00@8.25; yearlings $10.00@12.00; ewes $7.00@8.00; culls $3.00@5.00; stockers $5.00@7.00; goats $1.50@3.00.

MARKET GOSSIP

R. E. Flowerree and company, brokers, Staley building, today received the following market comment from Fenner and Beane of New York, New Orleans, and Chicago:

Cotton

Cotton opened under pressure with a good deal of liquidation in evidence and dropped two dollars a bale during the first few minutes.

Rumors of large tenders of December in the near future, good weather over Sunday and talk of large ginnings for the period encouraged selling and brought on the liquidation. Liquidation soon ran its course and the market recovered most of its loss around mid-day on short covering but slipped again in the last few minutes, largely on acount of hedging sales.

Two weeks favorable weather, and its possible effect on both ginnings and the final yield, coupled with slackening spot demand have apparently changed sentiment.

There are indications of more liquidation to come and the general expectation is that prices will work some lower before it is finished.

Grains

Lowest prices of the day in wheat were made at the opening due to decline in foreign markets. Recessions in foreign prices could hardly be accepted as anything but natural reactions after the recent sensational advances. There has been a tendency in trade to minimize the appearance of Argentine damage news. We all know that some exaggeration is natural, and this year may be no exception but the fact remains that the crop has been materially reduced from early prospects and it is increasingly apparent that the importing countries of Europe were depending upon the Southern Hemisphere for a good part of their supplies.

We see nothing in sight to arrest the upward tendency of prices.

Corn started lower in sympathy with wheat and then developed independent firmness. The movement from the country is now well under way and the demand is receiving its real test. We are firm in the conviction that the producer will not be an anxious seller and that there will be a good commercial demand for the grain that comes to market during the next few weeks.

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Company, Atlanta, Ga. (adv)

Lucky Beggar!

"I'm hungry!" said the man at his elbow, and the banker gave him a coin with a sigh. For he was hungry, too, but feared to eat much more than crackers with a bowl of milk. Indigestion is a very real misfortune to those who haven't learned the simple means of avoiding it!

Dyspepsia! Indigestion! Sour stomach! These ailments are not caused by what you eat. Give your digestive system a chance, and it will function with almost any kind of food. Yes, doughnuts; baked beans; dishes cooked with onions. Stuart's dyspepsia tablets give your stomach the alkaline it needs—and that's all there is to it! Eat your fill, and don't fear acidity, gas, or distress in any form! Pleasant, harmless, and they do the work.

Full Box FREE!

Every druggist has Stuart's tablets, 25c and 60c. Or, a full box free if you write the F. A. Stuart Company, Dept. K, Marshall, Mich. Get a metal box of Stuart's for the pocket—and keep it filled! A new stomach for twenty-five cents.

PAVING ISSUE IS BIG TOPIC OF CITY DADS

Final Approval Given On Three Projects By Council

Paving matters were the chief concern of the city council at the regular weekly meeting of that body last night. Final approval on seven blocks, representing three projects was given. One project involved two blocks of paving on Smarsh from Holliday to Grace, when nearly one-half of the property owners protested on the grounds that "the price was too high." Two other projects carrying pavement on five blocks on Hayes and Sixteenth Streets had final action postponed for a time.

A contract for seven blocks of bitullithic pavement from Avenue H to Avenue O on Kemp Boulevard was awarded the West Texas Construction company, low bidder on the project.

Petitions were received and approved on four projects centering in the Floral Heights district entailing pavement of five blocks on Van Buren and Denver. A petition for certain work on Park Street was not presented but will come up at the next meeting of the council.

Cured His Rupture

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation. If you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 809 M. Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.
