RETURN DELAYED—William Cobb of El Paso and three other students from Lubbock Christian College had their return to Lubbock delayed Wednesday afternoon when Cobb's 1976 Ford was involved in a major collision at the intersection of U.S. 84 and the Ennis Creek Road around 4:55 p.m. The Cobb vehicle was west bound on 84 when they collided with a 1966 Chevrolet pickup driven by Clarence Elmo Moore of Snyder. The Cobb vehicle sustained extensive front end damage while the Moore truck received extensive damage to the right side. No injuries were reported in the mishap.(SDN Staff Photo)

Republican Senator Says...

Nicaragua, Cuba Control Guerrillas In El Salvador

WASHINGTON (AP) — A key Republican senator says he is "absolutely convinced" Nicaragua and Cuba are controlling leftist guerrillas in El Salvador, but that the Reagan administration should reveal more evidence to garner public support for its Central American policy.

Sen. Robert Kasten of Wisconsin made his comments Wednesday as a Senate subcommittee began hearings on President Reagan's proposal to send $350 million in emergency aid to the Caribbean Basin, including $128 million to El Salvador.

The hearings got under way just hours after the aid package was sent to Congress. Besides emergency money, the proposal calls for a 12-year period of duty-free entry into this country for virtually all Caribbean exports and tax incentives to encourage U.S. private investment in the region.

The trade subcommittee of the House Ways and Means Committee called a hearing for today on the economic aid package.

Kasten, chairman of the Senate Appropriations subcommittee on foreign operations, said he had no doubt about outside involvement in El Salvador's insurgency.

"I am absolutely convinced of Cuban and Nicaraguan support and control of terrorist guerrillas in El Salvador," Kasten told Thomas O. Enders, assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs.

"But you have to bring the information out into public view and let the people of this country know what is going on." He said the administration should move to counter "what is clearly a tide in American public opinion" against support of El Salvador's civilian military junta, he said.

Enders replied, "The evidence we have, although it cannot all be made public, is, we believe, overwhelming." He said Cuban weapons have been sent to insurgents in El Salvador, Honduras and Guatemala and "now some arp" in Costa Rica and Colombia.

Reagan, in his message to Congress, charged that "extremist groups and violent minorities are exploiting" economic misery in Central America and the Caribbean.

"El Salvador's economy is in desperate straits," Reagan said. "The insurgents have used every tactic of terrorism to try to destroy it."

The package includes no aid for the leftist-run government of Nicaragua, which the administration charges is funneling Cuban and Soviet arms to the Salvadoran rebels. American aid to Nicaragua was cut off last April.

The president's Caribbean Basin package got a generally favorable reception from the Senate panel, with some grumbling about the details.

"The president's Caribbean Basin initiative is a welcome new strategy for our neighbors to the south," said Kasten.

But Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., said he would not support a proposal providing tax and other incentives to industries to locate in Central America.

Agency Determined To Launch On Schedule

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Determined to prove "we can launch on the day we say," NASA began the countdown early today for a Monday liftoff of the space shuttle's third flight and shifted the landing site from a flooded Mojave desert floor in California to the white sands of New Mexico.

The clock started ticking at 4 a.m. EST with test conductor Andy Browne's announcement, "The launch countdown is now in progress." Immediately, technicians activated Columbia's computer systems and its electricity-producing fuel cells.

While launch preparations were routine, planning for a first-ever landing in New Mexico preoccupied space agency officials.

The U.S. Army's White Sands Missile Range is usually the backup landing site for the shuttle. Today, NASA decided to shift landing and "safing" equipment there because of heavy rainwater that fell on Edwards Air Force Base in California, the site of Columbia's first two landings.

Launch is scheduled for 10 a.m. EST Monday and a "once-around" emergency landing — if necessary — would be made at White Sands. Landing is scheduled at White Sands one week and 115 orbits after liftoff.

NASA spokesman Dick Young said the decision to "use White Sands all the way" was made after top management officials assessed the latest reports from Edwards and determined that conditions there might be marginal to support a landing on March 29.

Earlier, officials had hoped to designate White Sands as an early-abort site while still planning to use Edwards for an end-of-mission landing.

The SDN Column

Mark Robertson, a student at Southern Methodist University and son of the Rev. and Mrs. David Robertson, found an unexpected Snyder souvenir in Dallas the other day. It was a picture postcard showing business buildings on the west side of the Snyder square some 25 years ago. It was included in a display of postcards in an establishment in the posh Fairmont Hotel in Big D.

He purchased one of the cards and brought it home, and since the Robertson family has been in Snyder for less than 10 years, the scene appeared strange to them, but brought back some memories to those who have been around here longer.

Automobiles parked at the curb were models made from 1955 to 1957.

Snyder Drug was located near the middle of the block, next door to the Texas Theater. Erwin Drug was on the corner at 26th St. (where First Federal Savings and Loan is located now), and toward the north end of the block were Owens and McDonald's Department Stores.

Also in the block were Williams Jewelry and Texas Electric, which later remodeled its building and then more recently moved off the square. The street surface was brick.

We remember seeing copies of that particular postcard, but not in the last 20 years or more. The mystery is how and why it still is available in Dallas.

Bingo is going to be in the spotlight throughout Texas come April 3.

Bob Bullock, state comptroller of public accounts, has advised that 156 bingo elections will be held on that date. Bullock's office has the responsibility of administering the bingo law, which permits the game to be sponsored by non-profit organizations, such as fraternal organizations, churches, etc.

Sixty-four of the bingo elections will be county-wide affairs, while 57 are in cities and 35 are in justice precincts. The legislature made bingo a local option after it was approved by voters in a constitutional amendment in 1980.

The bingo election here involves the City of Snyder only. Others in West Texas include county-wide bingo elections in Andrews, Dawson, Gaines, Glasscock, Howard, Lubbock, Pecos, Potter, Reeves, Stephens, Wilbarger and Winkler Counties; city bingo elections in Petrolia, Coleman, Eden, Dickens, Stephenville, Plainview, Dumas, Big Lake and Graham; and justice precinct bingo elections in Brown, Fisher, Knox, Randall and Terry Counties.

Nicaragua...

Must Guarantee Not To Attack

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The leftist Sandinista government says it will not consider Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr.'s terms for improved relations unless the United States promises not to attack Nicaragua.

"One cannot negotiate with a pistol on the chest," Interior Minister Tomas Borge said Wednesday. "One cannot negotiate when they are threatening us."

Borge was responding to Haig's conditions Monday for restoring U.S. aid to the leftist regime and curbing anti-Sandinista exiles training in the United States. First, said Haig, the Nicaraguan government must "get out of El Salvador," not acquire heavy offensive weapons and limit foreign military advisers.

"To negotiate there must be a clear guarantee that the United States is not going to attack our country," said Borge, speaking at the departure of North Korean Prime Minister Li Jong-ok for Cuba after a three-day visit.

The Reagan administration has accused the Sandinistas of supplying weapons and advisers to leftist insurgents in El Salvador. Washington has also claimed Nicaragua's military strength is growing beyond its defense needs.

Oil Cartel Is Over A Barrel

NEW YORK (AP) — The oil weapon of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries has turned on its creator. As the cartel gathers in Vienna, Austria, for an emergency meeting Friday, its very future may be at stake.

A huge glut of oil on world markets is pushing prices lower, OPEC production is at a 13-year low and its petrodollar surplus is fast dwindling. Internal bickering, while always present, seems to be growing.

"OPEC has never before been seriously threatened," said Stephen Smith, director of energy services at Data Resources Inc. "But it is today."

Some analysts believe that unless OPEC drastically reduces its production, its members will launch a free-for-all in price-cutting to avoid losing customers. That could push oil prices to $25 a barrel or lower. The current contract price averages about $33 a barrel.

For nearly a decade OPEC flaunted its power to set prices, and in doing so reshaped the economic paths of the industrialized West. Now OPEC is seeing its strength sapped by such non-OPEC producers as Mexico and Great Britain.

By forcing prices higher in the 1970s, OPEC spurred the importing nations to conserve, to find oil outside the Middle East and to use alternative fuel sources.

As a result, Great Britain and Norway — which had virtually no oil production before 1967 — have rapidly developed rich oil fields in the North Sea. Production there now exceeds 2.4 million barrels a day and is growing.

The increased output from non-OPEC countries has come at a critical time for the oil group. Its competitors have cut prices far below the Saudi Arabian price of $34 a barrel, around which other OPEC members set their prices. As a result, oil customers are walking away from OPEC contracts.

And many energy analysts believe OPEC will be forced to reduce its benchmark price in order to avoid a further, possibly disastrous, erosion of its finances.

If OPEC lowers the $34-a-barrel base, which is far above the cost of production, it would mark the first such collective price reduction in the group's 21-year history.

Jury Ponders Punishment

Jurors in the 132nd District court this morning returned a verdict of guilty in the burglary trial of Ted Eugene Morris.

Morris is on trial for the Dec. 24 burglary of the Lew Bob Wood residence west of Snyder.

After hearing testimony from two witnesses, and final arguments from attorneys for both the state and the defense, the jury retired around 11 a.m. to consider punishment for the defendent.

The offense for which the jury convicted Morris carries possible punishments ranging from 15 years to life in prison.

Thursday update

Permanent Hearing Loss

VERONA, Italy (AP) — U.S. Brig. Gen. James L. Dozier testified today that he suffered permanent hearing damage from listening to loud rock music through earphones for six weeks while he was held prisoner by Red Brigades terrorists.

Dozier, taking the witness stand on the fourth day of the trial of 17 men and women accused of kidnapping him December 17, said his hearing was also damaged by a blow to the ear when he was abducted.

"I was forced to listen to music and that has permanently damaged my hearing. First I asked that the type of music be changed and then that the volume of music be turned down, but this was never completely satisfactory," Dozier said. "The physical exam I have had, has confirmed that the music has damaged my hearing."

Begin Peacekeeping Duties

(AP) — An American paratroop battalion is taking up peacekeeping duties between Israel and Egypt in the deserts of the Sinai Peninsula.

The 670 troops of the 82nd Airborne Division, armed with automatic rifles, entered their uncompleted base overlooking the strategic Straits of Tiran after a march in 80 degree temperatures Wednesday.

The paratroopers, who left cool, rainy weather in Fort Bragg, N.C., marched non-stop for over three hours along a highway to reach their new base.

"Well done, I'm proud of you all," Lt. Col. William Garrison told the Americans who are part of the 11-nation peace-keeping force.

Kremlin Grip Loosening

MOSCOW (AP) — The Kremlin, showing signs of loosening its iron grip on farming, has cautiously endorsed a new policy designed to decentralize the management of agriculture and stimulate production from privately owned plots.

The shift comes amid consumers' complaints that food is less plentiful and of poorer quality this winter than in many years. Farm output in 1981 was 2 percent less than the year before, and the government has not announced final figures on the grain harvest last year, indicating it was so poor it was embarrassing.

President Leonid I. Brezhnev, apparently exasperated by the third consecutive bad harvest and the general inefficiency of Soviet farming, called food production the nation's foremost "political problem."

County Observes Agriculture Day

Scurry Countians join the rest of the nation today in observing Agriculture Day, a special day set aside to focus attention on agriculture's contribution to American life.

The featured Agriculture Day event here will be a buffet dinner this evening at the Scurry County Museum, sponsored by the Tejas CowBelles. The main course will be barbecued beef brisket, a Scurry County product.

Serving hours will be from 7 p. m. to 9 p. m.

Agriculture has been a major factor in Scurry County since it was founded, and it continues to play a significant role today.

The value of agriculture products in the county has averaged some $29 million per year for the past few years.

Farming and livestock have kept pace with the industry in which one worker now produces enough food and fiber for 78 persons.

Special attention has been called to the development of machinery and efficient methods of operation that have enabled farmers to produce more.

"A farmer can now harvest in one day what it took nearly a month to do when mechanical farming began," said Roy Kidd, manager of Snyder Truck and Tractor Co.

In 1831, when Cyrus McCormick invented the mechanical reaper, it required a whole day to harvest 200 bushels of wheat, but today there is equipment capable of harvesting more than 5,000 bushels of wheat in a 10-hour day.

Scurry County's major crops are cotton and grain, while livestock production continues as a major industry.

Ask Us

Q.—Why can't people out in the country vote in the bingo election?

A.—The election was petitioned for the City of Snyder only. This means that only voters residing inside the city limits may vote on the proposal, and if approved, bingo would be legalized only inside the city limits.

WTC To Begin Spring Break

Students at Western Texas College will begin a week-long spring break when classes are dismissed Friday at 1 p. m.

Offices at the college will be closed only on March 25 and 26. The Scurry County Museum, located on the campus, will be closed from March 25-28.

Spelling Bee Set Friday Morning

The stage is set for the seventh annual Scurry County Spelling Bee. The county contest will be held at 9:15 a. m. Friday in the Fine Arts Theatre at Western Texas College.

Officials of the event are Dr. Tom Scannicchio, director, and Mrs. Margaret Presswood, reading consultant for Snyder Public Schools, pronouncer. Judges are Dr. Ben Brock vice president of WTC; Dr. Edward Barkowsky, chairman of the English Division at WTC; Mrs. Mary Nell Bullard, head librarain at the Scurry County Library; and Milton Ham, mayor of Snyder.

Students from all schools in Scurry County will compete in the spelling bee. They are winners and runnersup in their own school spelling contests which were held earlier.

There will be prizes for the top five winners in the Scurry County Spelling Bee, and in addition, the county winner will receive a plaque and compete for additional prizes in the 30th Regional Spelling Bee scheduled April 3 in Lubbock. Winner of the regional contest will win a one-week, expense-paid trip to Washington, D. C., and compete in the 55th annual national Spelling Bee the first week in June.

The nation-wide educational event is sponsored by the Scripps- Howard newspaper organization. The regional sponsorship is provided by the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal.

The spelling contests are designed to help boys and girls improve their spelling, increase their vocabularies, and develop correct English usage that will help them all their lives.

Crews Readying For Landing

WHITE SANDS MISSILE RANGE, N.M. (AP) — Technicians and officials at White Sands Missile Range are working overtime schedules to prepare for the increased possibility of a space shuttle landing at Northrup Strip here.

National Aeronautics and Space Administration senior engineer Alex Paczynski says telephone conferences scheduled for today and Friday will determine whether Northrup Strip's status as a landing site will be upgraded.

NASA officials announced Wednesday that they planned to stick to the scheduled Monday morning launch of the shuttle, even though bad weather has ruled out the primary landing site — at least for the first day of the seven-day mission.

Rain at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., the primary site, has dampened the prime runways to the extent that they are not safe for an abort-once-around landing. Abort-once-around is the contingency that would allow for a landing after one orbit of the Earth because of an emergency.

Depending on how fast the California landing site dries out, Northrup could also become the primary landing site for several days into the mission.

Paczynski said NASA officials were to make the final decision Friday on whether to upgrade Northrup's status for an emergency landing during the mission and for the end-of-mission landing.

NASA officials have hoped that a landing at Northrup won't be necessary because it would mean more expense and time to ship recovery equipment here from California. Northrup is equipped with a crane to lift the shuttle onto a jumbo jet for its piggyback return flight to Florida, but other support equipment would have to be moved to New Mexico by train.

Paczynski said the weather system that has disrupted plans in California is expected to reach Northrup during the weekend, but he expects that it will not bring as much rain to the white gypsum flat as it did further west.

"Actually, we could use about .1 to .2 of an inch to keep the sand packed down and keep it from blowing," he said.

He said technicians and Northrup administrators would work extra hours Thursday and Friday to complete final preparations for a possible landing. Extra drills were being scheduled, he said.

Also, shuttle astronauts Jack Lousma and Gordon Fullerton were scheduled to make extra landing practices at Northrup on Friday. Pilots of the chase planes that lead the shuttle to Earth and film its descent were scheduled to make extra runs on Thursday.

Paczynski said a decision also would be made on replacing a device that receives data from the descending shuttle and relays it to the space centers in Houston and Florida.

Northrup's device was removed after the shuttle's second mission, but Paczynski said it likely will be replaced by a portable unit. If the unit is not replaced, NASA officials would still have voice contact with the astronauts, but couldn't constantly monitor the subsystems aboard the orbiter.

Dumping Ban Reinstated

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reacting to a firestorm of criticism, the Environmental Protection Agency is reinstating a ban on dumping liquid hazardous wastes in landfills.

In a decision praised by environmentalists, the agency announced Wednesday that it was putting a modified ban into effect.

The old rule, which the agency announced it was suspending Feb. 25, had prohibited dumping any liquid hazardous wastes in landfills, no matter how small an amount.

The new requirement will prohibit the dumping of barrels containing any visible, "free-standing" liquid wastes.

Chemical companies and landfill operators had protested that the total prohibition would be impossible to enforce and was not needed to protect public health.

The EPA initially agreed and suspended all restrictions on dumping liquid wastes for 90 days while it considered implementing less-stringent requirements.

Environmentalists charged that EPA's action opened the floodgates to the possible dumping of 20 million gallons of liquid wastes over the next three months.

Your Birthday

March 19, 1981

Over-all conditions look extremely promising for you this coming year, if you seek knowledge and equip yourself well before embarking on any new enterprise. Don't go off ill-prepared.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Rather than going along with the crowd today, investigate your individual alternatives. Chances are you'll find a road paved with potential that everyone else missed. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in each of the seasons following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) The less visible you make yourself today, the better your chances are for peace and quiet. Someone looking for a scapegoat will choose you, if you happen to be around him!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you're too stubborn today, you may turn a deaf ear to good advice and continue trying to hammer square pegs into round holes.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Worthwhile opportunities are around you today. Unfortunately, however, you go after the quick and easy "blue sky" promotions, thus gaining nothing.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) An old but abrasive domestic issue should not be resurrected today. It'll only cause turmoil on the home front.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Normally you're extremely courteous in dealing with people from all walks of life. Today, however, you may treat those not in your inner circle with disdain.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You know all the right things to say to bring about opportunity for yourself today, but chances are you'll go after the same thing that incurred losses in the past.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Consideration, diplomacy and tact are your traditional tools, yet today you may forget this, and fail by using hard-nosed tactics.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Even if someone wrongs you, your greatest weapon today against the affront is to turn the other cheek. You'll be amazed how everyone will side with you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Quit knocking your head against a brick wall. If something is not bringing in the promised returns, look elsewhere for better results.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Don't attempt to champion unpopular causes today, no matter how dedicated you are to them. Your acceptance lies in going along with the majority.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Something may be wrong with your judgment if you continually come up empty. Try today to change directions and have faith in your decisions.

at wits end

by erma bombeck

I watched my mother put on lipstick the other day.

She twisted the tube as far as it would go. Then she dipped in a toothpick and scooped a little piece off and put it on her little finger. With quick, brisk strokes, she covered her lips.

Then, she carefully ran her finger over the rim to scrape any excess back into the tube, twisted it down and put a cap on it. You'd have thought it was an elixir to retain youth forever.

It occurred to me my mother has two cars in her garage, owns her own home, wears 35 credit cards next to her body and goes through the lipstick ritual at least four or five times a day. When I asked her why she didn't buy a new tube of lipstick, she said, "They don't make Persimmon Jungle anymore."

There is an entire list of things people never throw away in this country that has nothing to do with sentiment. Lipstick is only one of them.

I have never known a woman who can let go of a cookie sheet. In some of the finest kitchens in America are cookie sheets that look like they've been a drip pan for a 1938 Chrysler. They cost $2.95. You'd think they cost $295.

Keys are another commodity that have permanent status in our culture. To throw away a key is like dancing on a grave. It doesn't matter that it doesn't fit anything. Throw away a key today and tomorrow a trunk full of krugerrands will fall in your path and you won't be able to open it without the key you threw away.

I've never been able to figure out why people save eyeglasses they can't see out of anymore. We have a whole drawer of them and my husband keeps saying, "But they're good yet," and I keep saying, "Only for bumping into walls."

It goes without saying that the No. 1 survivor among objects around the house is underwear.

It's all part of my Mother's Laws that I learned at her knee: If it doesn't show, don't replace it. If you're too full to eat it, save it and throw it away later. If it's too dirty to wash, store it. If it makes you happy when you see it again, put it in the kitchen drawer. If you can't get to it...use a toothpick.

Candy Man Gets Execution Stay

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge has dissolved the stay of execution granted to a Death Row prisoner dubbed the "Candy Man" by fellow inmates after he was convicted of poisoning his 8-year-old son on Halloween 1974.

U.S. District Judge John V. Singleton Jr. dismissed the delay Wednesday, allowing a state court to hear Ronald O'Bryan's appeal of his death sentence.

The inmate's attorney, Stanley Schneider, said the judge's action was "super."

O'Bryan was convicted of murdering his son, Timothy, on Oct. 31, 1974.

Following the sensational trial, the jury foreman said evidence was "overwhelming" that the former Deer Park optician murdered his son and intended to poison his daughter, Elizabeth, then 6, to collect more than $60,000 in life insurance policies.

But O'Bryan still insists he is innocent, arguing the prosecutors evidence was circumstantial and the testimony lies.

At Ira...

Mrs. Burrow Receives PTA Life Membership

Ira PTA held an evening meeting March 16 in the high school gymnasium. Janet Brown, president conducted a brief business session followed by presentation of the 25th Honorary Life Membership to Mrs. Betty Burrow.

Betty Joyce was born July 2, 1933 in Longview to William and and Mary Gandy. She has one brother, William Asa, and four sisters, Gladys Inez Hogan, Willie Eloise Mullins, Opel Turner, and Bobby Blakey.

She attended school in Springhill, Placedo, and graduated from Bloomington High School in 1950. She received an associate of arts degree from Victoria Junior College in 1952 and a bachelor of science degree in business education from Southwest Texas State Teachers College in San Marcos in 1954. She moved to Scurry County that same year.

Betty married Manley Burrow Nov. 23, 1955. They have two children, Marla Sue Rigsby of Snyder and Jana Lynn, a sixth grade student at Ira, and one grandchild, Jennifer. Mr. and Mrs. Burrow have spent their 26 years of married life on the farm. Betty is an active member of Ira Church of Christ.

Mrs. Burrow has been associated with the Ira school system, either as teacher or secretary, for most of her 28 years in Scurry County. She is currently teaching the fifth grade.

PTA positions she has held are vice president, two years; membership chairman, one year; publicity book, one year; lunchroom chili chairman, one year; banker for carnival, one year; high school representative, one year; parliamentarian, one year; and program chairman, two years. She received a perfect attendance pin in 1973 and is currently health, safety and welfare chairman.

She received a life member certificate, pin, and an inscribed PTA bell, Leona Wiggins and Linda Dunn made the presentation.

"The Wizard of Oz," the UIL one act play to be presented in zone competition Friday, March 19, was previewed for the audience.

To The Honest Christian Citizens of Snyder

The American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars are made up of men and women who fought for this United States of America. Some of you might not be here today if it were not for them.

Both of these are Non-Profit Organizations. The money they make through Bingo is all used for a number of worthwhile projects:

1. Sending deserving boys and girls to Boys State or Girls State to learn more about how our State Government is run.
2. Provide Wheelchairs, Breathing Machines and Hospital Beds to people who cannot afford to buy or rent them and are not on Medi-Care.
3. Each and every month they take refreshments and entertainment to patients in the Veterans Administration Hospital in Big Spring. Also every Christmas they take gifts to the hospital for the patients.

Therefore I would appreciate it if you would keep helping these organizations. Without your help these projects can't go onward.

A "Yes" vote for Bingo means this work can go on.

A "No" vote means it will be discontinued.

So it will be left up to "You", the people of Snyder and Scurry County.

I thank you for giving me your attention for a few moments.

Ed Jones Addresses AARP

The Scurry County chapter of American Association of Retired Persons met at the Senior Center March 16. Twenty-three members and a few guests were present.

Following the supper brought by the members, the meeting was called to order by Andy Deen, president. Minutes were read by Doris Gafford, and a treasurer's report was given by Verdi Kimbro.

Ed Jones of Odessa, assistant director of West Texas AARP chapters, was the speaker. He briefly outlined the association's insurance and some recent changes for AARP. He then conducted the installation of 1982 officers. They are Chick Hale, president; Verdi Kimbro, vice president; Maureen Ward, secretary; John Wiman, treasurer; and G. Z. Autry, nominating committee chairman.

Mr. Hale also conducted the drawing for the money donated by West Texas State Bank. The other banks have also been most supportive in this respect.

The next meeting will be Tuesday, Apr. 3.

Alan: "Bill Root and Dick Pavlicek have just produced a book called 'Modern Bridge Conventions' that should be around as a long-time classic."

Oswald: "It covers almost everything and it is a pleasure to recommend it. Not that we will agree with everything in it. Still, I can say unequivocally that there is nothing unsound or wrong between its covers."

Alan: "They show no complete hands, but they show single holdings such as this South hand in their chapter on Blackwood. We have added three other hands to make it suitable for the column."

Oswald: "They point out that you should not use Blackwood with a void. Thus, South wants to be in a slam after the heart raise. If he tries Blackwood and North shows just one ace he will fear that the one ace is in spades. If North shows two aces he will bid six. At worst the slam will be on a finesse, but Bill and Dick point out that the way to go after a slam is to cue bid in clubs."

Alan: "North quite properly cue bids right back in diamonds. South jumps to six hearts and North should now realize that his partner's failure to use Blackwood has been because of a spade void. North may gamble on seven which is of course a lay down."

Dear Abby

Daughter's Ecumenical Bent Breaks With Parents' Faith

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am a very upset and frustrated 15-year-old girl. My parents have forbidden me to date boys of a different religion, but I have been doing it on the sneak and this bothers me.

I can understand their objections and have no intentions of marrying out of my faith, but I am not considering marriage now.

My parents and I have had some very heated arguments over this. Dating at 15 and marriage are two different things, but my parents can't see it that way.

I am proud of my heritage, and when it's time to look for a husband, I will restrict my dating to men of my own faith. In the meantime, I can't see the harm in dating others.

I hate sneaking around, but what am I to do?

15 IN SHAKER HEIGHTS

DEAR 15: If you have no intentions of marrying out of your faith, you will avoid a lot of possible heartaches by dating only boys you may one day marry. The heart doesn't care what the head is thinking.

DEAR ABBY: Three of us girls from the office decided to go to a club that features male strippers. I told my boyfriend I was going and he didn't want me to go, but he wouldn't give me a reason.

I went anyway just to see what it was like, and I enjoyed it. I didn't get "turned on" like some of the women in the audience appeared to be. I thought it was funny. The audience was more fun to watch than the male strippers.

One of the girls who went with us is married, and she said her husband would not approve of her going to see men strip, so she didn't tell him. The other girl is engaged, and she said her fiance thought it was disgusting.

Now we're asking you, Abby. Why would a man get upset because his wife or girlfriend wanted to see a male stripper?

NORA

DEAR NORA: Probably for the same reason some women get upset because their husbands or boyfriends want to see female strippers. They feel that comparisons will be made and they won't measure up.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the woman who lamented that her guests never used her pretty little guest towels, preferring instead to dry their hands on the rug or whatever was handy, brought back memories.

When my wife was living, we didn't entertain much. But when we did, my wife always had the bathroom spotlessly clean, and she laid out her fancy guest towels. Of course, my son and I were admonished not to use them — they were for the guests. However, none of the guests used them either.

Finally, after one party, my wife mentioned that nobody used her guest towels and she seemed hurt about it. The next time we entertained, I went into the bathroom and dried my hands on not one, but two guest towels, and just to make sure they looked "used," I wadded them up and left them in plain view. Sure enough, one or two guests followed my example!

The morning after the party, my wife and I were discussing what a good time we had, and she said, "And this time they used the guest towels!"

After that, I always did the same thing, and it worked like magic. I never did tell my wife my secret, bless her heart.

Gag Order Issued In Mike Martin's Trial

FREDERICKSBURG, Texas (AP) — Indicted Rep. Mike Martin's latest trip into the courtroom had reporters scrambling for their lawyers and a publicity-wary judge slapping a gag order on everyone in sight.

The reporters won their battle to keep the pretrial hearing open Wednesday, but State District Judge Robert Barton ended the session by barring anyone who knows anything about the case from talking with reporters.

Martin, R-Longview, sat quietly through the three-day pretrial hearing.

The freshman lawmaker, charged with aggravated perjury, is accused of lying to Travis County grand jurors in August when he denied staging his own shooting. Prosecutors say Martin planned the July 31 Austin shooting — he was wounded in the elbow by shotgun blasts — as a publicity stunt.

Defense lawyer Frank Maloney won no major victories during three days of motions. Barton turned down a defense request to move the trial away from here because of extensive publicity. The case came to Gillespie County in Central Texas because of news coverage in Austin.

After Maloney invited reporters into the courtroom with subpoenaes for the change of venue motion, he kicked them out by persuading Barton the testimony on other motions was too hot to be reported. The judge, agreeing that potential jurors could be prejudiced by news coverage of the testimony, closed the hearing despite reporters' objections.

On Wednesday, lawyer Jim George, representing the Austin American-Statesman, Dallas Morning News and Dallas television station WFAA, came into town with a solution approved by Barton.

"Ways exist to have our cake and eat it too," George said in proposing a solution to the dilemma of protecting Martin's constitutional right to a free trial and the reporters' constitutional right to cover it.

Under the George solution, Barton decided to reopen the hearing. Matters which did not include potentially prejudicial testimony were heard Wednesday in open court.

"How can that be the kind of emotional evidence that is going to pollute the pool of jurors in Gillespie County?" George said of those motions.

The second half of the solution involves the motions which will draw testimony that could be damaging to Martin. Barton said those motions will be heard after jurors are selected and sequestered, as suggested by George.

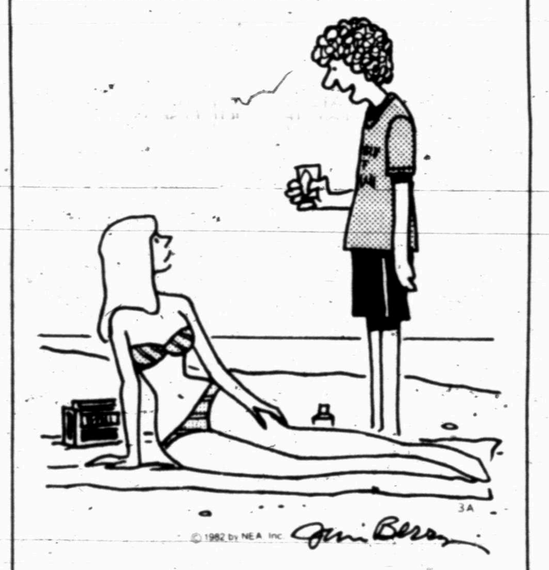

The trial is scheduled to begin April 19, about two weeks before Martin faces two opponents in the May 1 Republican primary.

After the jurors are picked, Barton will hear Maloney's motion to dismiss the indictment. The defense lawyer claims Martin was entrapped by law enforcement officers. A motion to suppress Martin's grand jury testimony also will be heard.

Barton denied several different attempts to dismiss the indictment Wednesday. Maloney argued the indictment was no good because grand jurors were not investigating a crime when Martin appeared because, if Martin indeed planned the shooting, it's possible that no crime was committed.

"There was no crime under investigation, otherwise (the indictment) would have alleged it," said Maloney.

Cook-Off To Honor Shaw

A chili cookoff honoring Rep. Larry Don Shaw has been set for Saturday evening in Big Spring.

Billed as the "First Annual Shaw Shili Cookoff Shindig and Shakedown," it will begin at 7 p. m. and continue until 10 p. m. in the Dora Roberts Community Center in Comanche Trail Park.

Tickets are priced at $12.50 per person, or $25 per family, and will be available at the door.

There will be live music and chili entered in the cookoff will be served.

Shaw, currently representing the 63rd Legislative District, which includes Scurry County, will be in the new 69th Legislative District under the new legislative lineup, while Scurry County is shifting to the new 78th District.

Panel Says FAA Management Has Problems

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite the upheaval caused by the air traffic controllers strike, the government has done little to correct the management problems that led to the walkout, according to a special task force.

A panel of management experts concluded Wednesday that morale among working controllers is low, strife between management and controllers persists, and many of the factors that led to last summer's walkout are resurfacing.

Flooding River Seeps Through Many Dikes

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP) — Firefighters hurried people out of their homes and onto city buses as the floodwaters that have ravaged this city began leaking through a dike so waterlogged it was "just like mush."

Hundreds of volunteers forming long chains passed sandbags in bucket-brigade style up to the muddy, 50-year-old dike "because our engineers tell us the sheer weight of the sand is the only thing that can save it," said Al Zirkle, director of operations for the city utilities.

Water was filling streets today along the Maumee River dike in the Lakeside neighborhood in the eastern part of the city. The river, bloated from thawing ice and days of rain, was expected to crest today at a level higher than it reached in 1913, when a series of floods killed 700 people in Indiana and Ohio.

About 7,900 people in Fort Wayne and surrounding Allen County have already been evacuated in the worst flooding on the Maumee since that disastrous year, bringing the number of Indiana evacuees to as many as 10,000.

The National Weather Service predicted thundershowers for tonight and Friday.

Rivers were receding in Ohio and Michigan, where floods have done a total of $19 million in damage, but the Illinois River was still rising and causing minor flooding in Peoria. A tornado damaged an Atlanta building Wednesday as thunderstorms hit Georgia, and the San Francisco area was pelted with hail, snow and rain.

Two people were killed in Michigan, two in Ohio, and one in Fort Wayne over the weekend, but no deaths have been reported in the three states since. Flooding has caused an estimated $16.8 million damage in Fort Wayne.

"The entire dike area here is just like mush," Zirkle said. "The dikes are just saturated. It's not water lapping over the top."

"It could break loose at any time in the next 24 hours," Public Safety Coordinator Anthony Meyers said late Wednesday night.

Police used loudspeakers and firefighters went door-to-door along eight blocks to evacuate an undetermined number of people. Five city buses were sent to help take residents away, and evacuees with nowhere else to stay were brought to one of two churches. The firefighters also disconnected gas and electricity to prevent fires.

Later, buses were standing by in case the volunteers had to be evacuated, and a crane was brought in to help dump dirt on the earthen dike, if necessary.

"We have engineers all along the dike and they'll give the word if we need to get these people out," Zirkle said, adding there would be plenty of warning if something went wrong.

"We're gonna beat that river," Mayor Winfield Moses Jr. told volunteers Wednesday.

About 4,100 people left their homes Wednesday, and seven more emergency Red Cross shelters were opened, bringing the total to 11.

The three rain-swollen rivers that join in Fort Wayne — the Maumee, the St. Joseph and the St. Mary's — were expected to rise almost a foot overnight and threatened to divide the city of 170,000 into six isolated communities. All city schools were closed.

The water began trickling through about 11 p.m. EST.

"The leakage has accelerated. We've not had a full breach of the dike yet," said Frank Heyman, Fort Wayne city controller. He said earlier that if any of the dikes broke it could cause a flash flood.

The Lakeside area gets its name from a holding pond near the Maumee, which has spilled over into the pond. Water depth in the pond is about 12 feet, almost the height of the dike, which rises steeply near homes in the area.

"The latest report from the National Weather Service is that the Maumee is at 25.88 feet and still rising," said the mayor. "By tomorrow morning, it will crest at 26.5 feet."

The record crest for the Maumee at Fort Wayne is 26.1 feet, or 10.6 feet above flood stage, which was set during the 1913 flood.

Road Closed To Ease Toad Love

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — This is a tale of travelin' toads, and how the amorous amphibians are winning a struggle with civilization in the Netherlands.

Each March, as soon as the temperature goes above 46.4 degrees Fahrenheit, when a toad's fancy turns to thoughts of love, up to 1,000 of the warty wanderers will cross a well-traveled road behind the North Sea dunes to reach their mating and egg-laying grounds in the water-filled ditches beyond.

And for the seventh year in a row, this city will close the road to vehicles each night so the toads — known to science as Bufo bufo — can romance without risk of a squashing.

The story began in 1965, when naturalists discovered that a city highway crossed the toad-mating route from their home in the seaside dunes bordering the city. Traffic was taking a rising toll in toads.

Wijnand Bleumink is one of those who came to the toads' defense.

As the population of this city has grown, Dune Avenue — Duinlaan in Dutch — carried more and more traffic.

"Because more and more cars passed, more and more toads were being flattened," said Bleumink, an amateur naturalist who works for the city Education Department.

A former director of the Education Department, Jan Nijkamp, told of the slaughter in a nature column he wrote for one of the local newspapers.

"He got more and more protest letters," recalled Bleumink, noting the Dutch concern for conservation in a society that owes much of its dike lands — former sea beds — to nature's willingness to adapt to man.

So the Education Department began a campaign to adapt a bit to the toads, at least during the mid-March to mid-April mating season.

Meanwhile, local newspapers began to carry stories about man's inhumanity to toads, and how they were dying out around The Hague.

That carried some weight in this country, known to its inhabitants as "Kikkerland" — Frog Land — because of its wetness.

The close toad relation has also worked its way into the language in such expressions as "You can't [illegible] feathers from a frog," the local equivalent of the English "You can't make a silk purse out of a sow's ear."

In 1976, the city's police and Public Works Departments decided to close 500 yards of the highway between 6 p.m. and 6 a.m.

"The problem was not only to close the road, but at what moment," said Bleumink, who noted that the toads, common all over the Netherlands, breed once a year and only when the temperature and humidity are right.

Every March evening, Bleumink, who lives nearby, checks his thermometer about dusk, the time toads prefer to fall in love. He has permission to close the gates on the road as soon as he spots the migration beginning.

The crossings, which last about a week, begin with mostly male toads, who are joined in increasing numbers by the larger females.

At the height of the mating period, the 2.6 inch females carry the 2.2-inch males piggy-back to the breeding grounds. Bleumink said the piggyback position, known as amplexus, provides the stimulation for the female to lay 3,000 to 6,000 eggs in the stagnant ditch water.

And Bleumink noted that the Dutch Department of Culture, Recreation and Social Work organized a study day last month for some 50 groups throughout the Netherlands that have taken similar actions to protect animals.

Each year amateur naturalists monitor The Hague toad crossings. This year, Bleumink expects between 600 and 1,000 toads.

Are a thousand toads worth all the trouble?

Bleumink, a tall man with a gentle smile, says yes.

"I'm not allowed to take a toad home and put it in a terrarium. But you're allowed to run over a toad on the highway," he said.

"Every environmental problem starts with the death of a certain animal. I think people need every living creature in the world," he said. "The duty of man is to find a certain balance."

The average charge for a hospital semi-private room rose nearly 6 percent in six months, according to the Health Insurance Association of America. It says every state in the country reported an increase in room rates in the period from January to July of 1981.

Many Celebrities Fear Violence From 'Fans'

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — It's a celebrity's nightmare — the "fan" who holds a gun or a knife instead of an autograph book, the admirer whose obsessive love has twisted into hate and violence.

The bad dream became reality for John Lennon, killed by a deranged fan on a New York street in 1980.

This week the dream recurred, this time to actress Theresa Saldana, stabbed in the chest and critically wounded on a Hollywood street by an assailant who "formed a fixation on her" after he saw her in the movies, authorities said.

"We feel he was in love with her," a sheriff's detective said.

As the latest attack made headlines, other celebrities were taking action — intensifying their security precautions, hiring bodyguards and learning to handle guns.

The chic Beverly Hills Gun Club, opened last year in response to the growing crime wave, is doing a brisk business among celebrities who practice shooting at the club's target range.

Hollywood's top stars take precautions — they remember that the young man who took a shot at President Reagan last March did so after his other attempts to catch the eye of actress Jodie Foster failed.

Frank Sinatra, Bob Hope, Johnny Carson and Jane Fonda are among the celebrities who employ permanent bodyguards.

"Every time Frank gives a charity show, we provide the security," Clyde Duber, whose bodyguard service has branch offices throughout California, said shortly after Lennon was killed. "Before he steps on an airplane, there are bodyguards in there."

Why do celebrities get attacked?

"It has to do with one of the most common of class dreams, what we call the dream of celebrity," Dr. Charles Wahl, professor of clinical psychiatry at the Universtilifornia at Los Angeles, says. You dream of intimacy with a celebrity. It is a self-aggrandizing dream — you want to be important."

"But there is a second aspect to this — envy and rivalry," he said. "It is strongest in people who have not worked out envy and rivalry in their own lives."

Wahl noted Mark David Chapman, convicted of killing Lennon, began his interest in the star with "intense idolatry" and tried to contact him.

Estacado Favored...

9-Man Tourney Opens

Eight teams, including Andrews, Odessa Ector and host Snyder from District 2-AAAA, will battle in the annual Snyder Baseball Tournament, which began here this morning.

The field also includes 1981 state tournament contender, Lubbock Estacado.

According to Snyder Coach Albert Lewis, there is no doubt about about which team is the favorite.

"Without question it has to be Estacado," Lewis said of the team that knocked the Tigers out of a regional berth last year. "Most of us are still struggling to fit everything together but they are already there. I think they'll get some competition in this tournament, but going in I'd have to say they were the favorite."

Today's pairings opened with Andrews and Canyon at 11 a.m., followed with Plainview and Estacado at 1:30. Odessa Ector and Lubbock Dunbar vie at 4 and Levelland and Snyder square off in the feature game at 7.

Friday's action keeps a similar schedule, with losers of the Andrews-Canyon and Plainview-Estacado games playing at 11 and losers of the Ector-Dunbar and Levelland-Snyder games playing at 4. Winners vie at 1:30 and 7 p.m. respectively.

Seventh place will be played Saturday at 11, followed by consolation at 1:30, the game for third place at 4 and the championship tilt at 6.

Lewis said he would start freshman Charles Bollinger against Levelland tonight. The Tigers have beaten the Loboes twice already this season. Bollinger is 0-1.

All games will be played at Moffett Field.

Rangers Blast Minnesota, 12-4

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) - Pat Putnam's second-inning home run started an 18-hit attack for Texas as the Rangers blasted the Minnesota Twins 12-4 Wednesday.

Putnam got his solo homer off Twins starter Frank Viola. Catcher Bob Johnson got a two-run homer in the sixth and doubled in an run across in the four-run eighth.

The Twins, who gave up 17 hits Tuesday to Pittsburgh, fall to 1-7. Texas improves to 6-3.

Boston Defeats Houston Astros

COCOA, Fla. (AP) - The Boston Red Sox capitalized on three Houston errors to score six unearned runs and defeat the Astros 8-1 Wednesday in an exhibition baseball game.

The victory evened Boston's pre-season record at 5-5, while Houston dropped to 2-5.

The Astros' lone run came in the bottom of the first inning. Tony Scott doubled, advanced to third on a sacrifice bunt by Craig Reynolds and scored on a sacrifice fly by Danny Heep.

Boston's big break came in the second inning when Gordie Pladson, the Astros' losing pitcher, walked Ed Jurak, who then advanced to second on a throwing error by Reynolds.

Jurak went home on another Reynolds error, and Marc Sullivan scored on a single by winning pitcher Dennis Eckersley. Reid Nichols, Jerry Remy, Dave Stapleton and Wade Boggs also scored to give the Red Sox a 6-1 edge.

The Red Sox scored two more runs in the fourth inning off relief pitcher Billy Smith. Garry Hancock doubled and went to third on a single by Jurak, and Sullivan singled to make it 7-1. Julio Valdez brought Jurak home on a sacrifice fly.

Caponi Seeking Third Straight

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) - Donna Caponi was seeking a third straight title while Nancy Lopez-Melton was hoping to get back on the winning track in the $200,000 J&B Scotch Pro-Am women's golf tournament.

The event, which began today, also featured the return of Jan Stephenson, playing for the first time since suffering a broken foot bone last year.

Caponi, who came from 12 shots back after two rounds last year to capture the $30,000 first prize, also won the tournament in 1980, each time with a 2-under-par 286 total.

But Caponi, who points to the event as the beginning of her serious tournament schedule, predicted lower scores this year among the field of 88 pros that includes the biggest names in women's golf.

"You're going to see some very, very low scores," Caponi said. "The scores are going to be lower this year because the greens will hold better."

Last year, the women pros complained they couldn't hold a shot on the hard, fast greens at the Desert Inn Country Club which had been rebuilt just a few months earlier.

Canyon Reef Event...

Relays Slated Saturday

Eight boys teams and 13 girls teams make up the field in Saturday's annual Canyon Reef Relays here, which gets underway with field events at 9 a.m.

Running prelims begin at 10 and finals are slated to start at 2 p.m. The meet is being held at Tiger Stadium.

Boys entries in the single-day tournament include Abilene Cooper, Lubbock Monterey, Aspermont, Merkel, Slaton, Levelland, Sweetwater and Snyder.

Class 5A schools Cooper and Monterey are expected to be the favorites, primarily because of numbers.

Girls teams entered are Sweetwater, Lubbock Monterey, Midland, Hereford, Levelland, Pampa, Merkel, Floydada, Hobbs, N.M., Aspermont, San Angelo Lake View, Coleman and Snyder.

Mottram Tops Brian Teacher

ROTTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) - Britain's Buster Mottram upset Brian Teacher 6-4, 3-6, 7-5 in the third round of the $250,000 Rotterdam Grand Prix Tournament.

In other matches, Chip Hooper ousted Mel Purcell 6-4, 6-3, while Guillermo Vilas of Argentina beat Tim Wilkison 6-2, 6-3.

Favorites in the girls division (division I) include Sweetwater, Monterey, Midland and Hereford.

Events begin with the boys shot put, pole vault and long jump and with the girls triple jump, high jump and discus.

Running prelims open with the 400 meters and the finals will start with the 3,200 meter run. In each running event, division I, girls, will be held first.

No Clear Favorite Seen In Players Championship

PONTE VEDRA, Fla. (AP) - Two factors - the unknown demands of a new and potentially-controversial course and the failure of the pro golf tour to produce a dominant figure this season - contributed to the absence of a clear-cut favorite in the $500,000 Tournament Players Championship.

"We're still learning the golf course. Everyone - even the officials - are still learning the golf course," said Ray Floyd, the defending titleholder in this, the annual championship of golf's touring players.

"We still don't know, the officials don't know, if the course will play easier or harder if its set up this way of another way," said Floyd, who won last season a few hundred yards away at the Sawgrass links.

This time, he and the other 146 men face the tests and demands of a brand-new course, the Players Club, owned by the touring players themselves and a permanent site for the event that is growing annually in prestige and importance.

It was designed by Pete Dye, who said the underlying thought was "to create a golf course to bring out all the shots, all the great shots the professional players are capable of playing."

There have been suggestions, however, that the penalities for a missed shot are too severe.

Hall of Fame players Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer, both of whom also are professionals in the field of golf course design and construction, have lauded the course, however.

"To be able to play this course, you have to have all the shots," Arnold said, and listed Nicklaus, Tom Kite and possibly Tom Watson as potential challengers for the $90,000 first prize.

Kite, who has finished 10th or better in 26 of his last 33 starts, has won once and finished second twice this season, probably the tour's best record.

Georgetown Presents 'Tall' Problem

by The Associated Press

Georgetown will present some tall problems tonight for Fresno State in the NCAA's West Regional basketball playoffs at Provo, Utah.

The tallest is Pat Ewing.

"I think Ewing's presence creates more problems on defense than he does on offense," says Fresno State Coach Boyd Grant. "John Thompson is a good coach and he has Ewing play so alertly in the middle of his defense."

The Hoyas' 7-footer rejected 112 shots in the regular season and figures to block a few more in tonight's action at Brigham Young University's 22,700-seat Marriott Center.

The game will be the nightcap of a West Regional semifinal doubleheader. In the other contest, Idaho faces Oregon State.

In other action tonight, Louisville plays Minnesota and Alabama-Birmingham faces Virginia in the Mideast Regionals at Birmingham, Ala.

Friday night, Memphis State, 24-4, plays Villanova, 23-7, and North Carolina, 28-2, meets Alabama, 24-5, in the East Regional at Raleigh, N.C. In the Midwest at St. Louis, it's Boston College, 21-9, vs. Kansas State, 23-7, and Houston, 23-7, against Missouri, 27-3.

Finals in the West and Mideast will be played Saturday and in the East and Midwest on Sunday. The winners of the regional tournaments will advance to the Final Four in New Orleans March 27-29.

The West Regional features some of the toughest defenses in the country, including Fresno State's statistical country leaders. The champions of the Pacific Coast Athletic Association have surrended a mere 46.7 points a game, using a combination of presses and zones and man-to-man defense.

The 11th-ranked Bulldogs, 27-2, advanced to the West Regionals with a 50-46 victory over No. 14 West Virginia in subregional play, while sixth-ranked Georgetown, 27-6, the Big East champion, defeated Wyoming 51-43.

In the Division II championship at Springfield, Mass., Bakersfield State meets the District of Columbia and Florida Southern takes on Kentucky Wesleyan in the national semifinals Friday night. In the Division III national semifinals at Grand Rapids, Mich., Friday night, it's Stanislaus State against Wabash and Brooklyn College vs. Potsdam State.

Tulane Has Tough Test Again

by The Associated Press

If it's Thursday, it must be Peoria, Ill., for the Tulane basketball team.

"I don't know what they (NIT officials) are thinking," says Coach Ned Fowler. "We have had to play three games in a row in hostile environments."

Of the eight teams remaining in the NIT field, only Tulane hasn't played at home. And tonight, Fowler's players find themselves facing another unsympathetic audience in Bradley's Robertson Field House.

It's one of three NIT games tonight. Elsewhere, Dayton plays at Oklahoma and Virginia Tech visits Georgia. In another third-round game Friday night, Purdue entertains Texas A&M.

The winners tonight and Friday night will advance to the semifinals at New York's Madison Square Garden next Monday night. The championship will be decided Wednesday night.

Tulane has been the surprise team in this year's NIT. In its first-ever postseason bid, the Green Wave has beaten Louisiana State 83-72 and Nevada-Las Vegas 56-51 en route to the quarter-final round.

Bradley, meanwhile, has surprised few people, including Coach Dick Versace. The Braves' coach was critical of the NCAA's tourney selection committee for inviting four Big East teams while ignoring his club.

Bradley took out its frustration Monday night with a 95-81 trouncing of Big East team Syracuse in the Big Orange's own arena. Bradley's other victory was a 76-65 decision over American University.

Oklahoma has bounced back from large deficits in both of its earlier games. The Sooners opened the tourney by beating Oral Roberts 81-73 after overcoming a 17-3 deficit. They then beat California-Irvine 80-77 after shaking off a 17-point disadvantage.

Georgia, 18-11, will have the home court advantage for the third straight time in this tournament, hosting a Virginia Tech team with a 20-11 record and two victories over NCAA entrant Louisville. The Bulldogs beat Temple 73-60 and Maryland 83-69 in earlier games while Virginia Tech stopped Fordham 69-58 and Mississippi 61-59.

Like Georgia, Purdue, 16-13, will be playing its third straight NIT game at home. The Boilermakers have never lost in postseason competition in Mackey Arena.

Texas A&M, 20-10 this season, is coming off a 60-58 win over Lamar and 69-65 over Washington.

Midland Outlasts Dixie Utah, 85-82

HUTCHINSON, Kan. (AP) - Tunxis of Connecticut became easy prey for Vincennes of Indiana, thanks mainly to the straight shooting of Courtney Witte and Bernard Campbell.

Witte popped off 28 points and Campbell rattled in 21 more as Vincennes romped over Tunxis 94-78 in a quarterfinal game Wednesday night of the National Men's Junior College Basketball Tournament.

Midland of Texas had a tougher time handling Dixie of Utah in the other quarterfinal match. Midland outlasted Dixie to post an 85-82 win and earn the right to meet Vincennes in semifinal action Friday.

In first-round action Wednesday, Volunteer State of Tennessee skipped by Allegany of Maryland 99-87; and Henderson County, Texas, ran past Calhoun of Alabama 86-57.

In a loser's bracket game, Ferrum of Virginia scored a 99-87 triumph over Nebraska Western.

Vincennes, 33-4, cruised to a 43-24 halftime lead and never fell behind. Tunxis, 27-1, could come no closer than nine points, 85-76, with 1:20 left in the game. Bob Haskins led Tunxis with 25 points.

Today's consolation matches pit Westark, Ark., against Mercer, N.J.; Jamestown, N.Y., against Southern Idaho; and Allegany against Calhoun.

Plagens Takes Over As Coach

Joyce Plagens, former star for the Western Texas College Dusters, has been named coach of the women's basketball team at Tulsa University.

Her appointment was announced by Dale McNamara, assistant athletic director at TU. She succeeds Bill Biggs, who resigned.

Plagens, one of four former WTC athletes on the Tulsa women's team the past season, graduates this spring. She has been on the starting team at Tulsa since transferring there from WTC two years ago. She is a native of Rankin.

Other former WTC players at Tulsa, all starters, are Katie Fisher, Liz Hooper and Shari (Teal) Spradling.

Plagens played at WTC under Joe Cushing and established six individual records during 1978-1980. Her records of most steals in a game (8), most steals in a season (127) and most steals in a career (207), still stand.

Carano Ready To Be Traded

DALLAS (AP) - Glenn Carano, the Dallas Cowboys' backup quarterback, will go on the trading block next week at the National Football League owners meeting in Phoenix.

Coach Tom Landry said he will consider all trade offers for the five-year veteran and that he expects more than a few inquiries.

Carano, 26, became expendable by virtue of Gary Hogeboom's rise from third string quarterback to a contender for Danny White's starting job.

"I think that any time a player has given his best and he still can't replace somebody, I should help him with a trade if I can," Landry said.

"Carano has been very loyal to us. He is the kind of player who I would help if I could get the chance.

"I plan to make it known that I would be receptive to a trade possibility. As I get into the owners' meetings next week, maybe something will materialize."

Carano reportedly requested the trade during a recent meeting with Landry.

He played only one entire game, against Baltimore, when White was nursing a cracked rib. He completed seven of 18 passes for 59 yards in a 37-13 victory.

Harris Fined

NEW YORK (AP) - Del Harris, coach of the Houston Rockets, has been fined $1,000 for his behavior during, and statements following, the Rockets' 119-117 loss to San Antonio March 2, the National Basketball Association announced Wednesday.

Harris was fined for not leaving the floor immediately after having been ejected from the game and for the negative remarks about the officiating which he made to newsmen, said Joe Axelson, the league's vice president of operations.

Oilers Thinking Of Trading Barber

HOUSTON (AP) - The Houston Oilers have discussed trading tight end Mike Barber with the Chicago Bears and two other National Football League clubs, head Coach Ed Biles confirmed Wednesday night.

The Houston Post reported today that the club is seeking a second-round draft choice for the 6-3, 235-pound Barber, who played behind All-Pro Dave Casper in the 1981 season.

"The Bears and two other teams are interested in Barber," Biles said. "Frankly, I've had more conversations with the other two clubs."

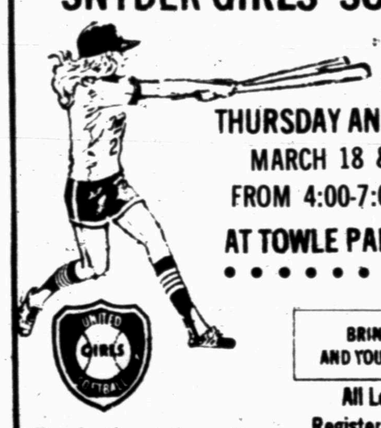

Barber, who could not be reached for comment on Biles' statements, said in November that he wanted to be traded.

Chicago head Coach Mike Ditka, a former NFL tight end himself, pointed out that since the Bears pick fifth in the draft this year, their second-round pick will be the 32nd player chosen.

"That's almost like a first-round pick," he said. "We're not really in a hurry to give that up."

The Bears list converted running back Robin Earl astheir starting tight end.

Family Affair...

Talented Mom Likes Candy Business

CASTLETON-ON-HUDSON, N.Y. (AP) — Two homemakers in this tiny Hudson Valley village have hit on a recipe that sweetens the quality of their intellectual, economic and family life.

Margaret Helms, 37, and Joanne Van Beusichem, 37, say the chocolate businesses now being operated from their homes have provided their families with a much-needed second income while allowing them to fulfill their need to be creative and to be there for their children and husbands.

"It's really filled a gap in my life," says Mrs. Helms, mother of four boys. "I love raising my kids, I love being here for my husband. But everything was routine. I had to prove I could do something for myself."

"Maggie's Old Fashioned Candies" is now responsible for a substantial part of the family's income. Without the business, Mrs. Helms says, the family would have to do with one less car, change their eating habits, do away with their small swimming pool, and return to "a garage sale way of life."

Mrs. Van Beusichem says "Candies by Joanne" has meant her oldest daughter can ski, her younger daughters can roller skate and the entire family can enjoy camping vacations.

"Everybody needs two incomes today," she says.

For Mrs. Helms, the odyssey she has turned into a 7,000-pound annual business began 17 years ago when, as a young mother, she was in the market for birthday cakes.

"The prices at the stores were more than I wanted to pay and the quality just wasn't there," said Mrs. Helms.

So she made her own cakes. In time, with the help of mailorder books and supplies, she began to create elaborate cakes complete with light buttercream frosting, pipe figures, custard fillings, and flowers.

Word of her prowess with tubes and molds spread and she was offered a job demonstrating cake decorating at an Albany department store.

Her husband, Robert, was skeptical. But in a few years, his wife had saved $3,000 — the down payment on a house for the growing family.

For the next few years, Mrs. Helms taught cake decorating at an adult-education program at a local high school. Five years ago, she began to dabble in candy after she volunteered to teach a candy-making class.

The fruits of her early experiments were given as gifts. But soon the recipients returned orders and Mrs. Helms took the big plunge.

"I had $20 and I said to my husband that I was going into business. I turned that $20 into $40 and that $40 into $80 until I had $1,000. Then I bought molds, candy, and lollipop sticks. I put an old door on the porch and a friend printed up 200 flyers. My boys put the flyers on cars and I made 100 cupcakes to give away during the grand opening."

Three people came.

"I sat down and I cried and cried. But as I sat there I ate a piece of candy. And I thought, 'boy, is this good.'"

So Mrs. Helms wrote a letter to the editor of an Albany newspaper. She told what it's like to be a woman trying to go into business. She told how no one would give a woman credit. She told how no one would give her a chance. She told him about her American dream.

The newspaper printed the letter on the front page of its business section on Palm Sunday. Within a week, 2,500 people showed up on Mrs. Helm's front porch. Candy sold as fast as she could make it — faster at times.

Her husband began to pitch in. Her oldest son built shelves. Her second and third sons worked on the books. Her youngest bagged jellybeans and became the "weigher."

Recently, Robert Helms made a tough decision. He decided to switch trucking jobs for one with a less rigorous schedule, and less pay, so he could spend more time with his family and help his wife with the business.

Mrs. Van Beusichem, known as the "cake and candy lady," works 24 hours a week at a day-care center. For her, the candy business has been a hobby, a source of income, and a blessing in raising her four girls.

Mrs. Van Beusichem specializes in novelty items. Eventually, she would like to make candy full time. But she's hanging on to her job because, she says. "I have to be cautious — I have four girls to put through school."

Might Force Budget Vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — Faced with President Reagan's continued intransigence on key elements of his 1983 budget, the Democratic chairman of the House Budget Committee is threatening to force a potentially embarrassing vote on the unpopular spending plan.

"I've explored every possibility of trying to break this logjam and this is the only one that I can see as of now that has a realistic chance of moving us forward," said Rep. James R. Jones of Oklahoma.

Jones, who presented the proposal to a closed meeting of House Democrats Wednesday, said later that "nobody spoke against it" during the session.

Top House leaders appeared to withhold their full support for the plan, but Jones indicated he expected the leadership would support the move after he has had a chance to explain it in more detail.

"I'd hate to go that route, to tell you the truth," House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., said. "What are we going to do it for except to embarrass the president?"

But a Democratic leadership aide said that while O'Neill "has some doubts" about the plan, "I know his mind to be open" on the idea.

Even Reagan's congressional allies concede that his big-deficit budget as submitted last month could not win approval in either House of Congress. Thus, forcing a vote now would result in defeat and embarrassment for the president.

However, Jones — who lost a series of budget battles on the House floor last year — denied his move is aimed at embarrassing the president. Instead, he said, it is the only way to demonstrate that it is time for the partisan name-calling to end and to open the way for serious negotiations on a bipartisan alternative to Reagan's proposals.

"So maybe the only thing we can do is to report the president's budget out (of committee) and make it subject to a vote....I don't see any other way of moving us off the dime...unless (simply) the threat of doing this results in some real action," Jones said.

House Democratic Leader Jim Wright of Texas, who also appeared cool to the idea, conceded Wednesday that such a tactic might prompt Reagan to be more willing to compromise on his budget, which according to the administration's latest projection would have a deficit of $96.4 billion.

"What needs to happen is not for the president to be embarrassed ...but for him to be brought to the reality of things and become a little less inflexible," Wright said.

Reagan has said repeatedly that he would consider alternatives to his budget recommendations as long as the plans do not include major tax increases or reductions in his requested military buildup.

"The main block to a comprehensive alternative is the president because he has ruled off base three-quarters of the alternatives...to get the deficits down," Jones said.

Obituaries

Mr. Sharp

Randal C. Sharp, 67, died at 9:45 a. m. today in Cogdell Memorial Hospital.

Graveside rites have been set for 2 p. m. Saturday in Hillside Memorial Gardens. The Rev. Buck Hatfield, pastor of Faith Baptist Church, will officiate, with Bell-Seale Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

A native of Bell County, he had lived here most of his life. He was a retired mechanic.

Surviving is a sister, Otha McIntosh of Snyder.

Mr. Selman

Don L. Selman, 43, who lived at 1808 37th St., died at 5:15 a. m. today in Cogdell Memorial Hospital following a long illness.

Funeral service has been set for 11:30 a. m. Friday at Colonial Hill Baptist Church. The Rev. Miller F. Robinson, Colonial Hill pastor, will officiate, assisted by the Rev. David Haladay, pastor of Green Hill Baptist Church.

Following the service here, the body will be taken to Denison for graveside rites and burial, with the Rev. Houston Garner of Bells officiating. Bell-Seale Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements.

A native of Whitewright, Mr. Selman had lived here for the past six years. He was a pumper for Chevron U. S. A.

He was married on Feb. 9, 1970, in Sherman to Mary Cogburn, who survives.

Also surviving are two daughters, Laurie Ann and Robin Donette Selman, both of the home; two sons, Don Lyle and James Kelly Selmon, both of Whitewright; his parents, L. D. and Viola Selman of Sherman; and two sisters, Laurie Pierson of Pottsboro and Clydean Tillison of Dickerson.

Thompson

Funeral services for Edna Jay Thompson, 93, of Snyder Nursing Care Center are set for 10 a.m. Saturday at Bell-Seale Funeral Chapel. Rev. Gary West, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, will officiate. Interment will be at Mount Olive Cemetery in Big Spring under the direction of Bell-Seale Funeral Home.

Mrs. Thompson died Wednesday night at Cogdell Memorial Hospital. She was born Oct. 26, 1888 in Pennville, Ind.

She moved here from Big Spring in 1971. She was preceded in death by her husband in 1950 and a daughter in 1948.

Survivors include a daughter, Mrs. Joe Carlson of Roseville, Calif.; one son, Jimmy Thompson of Snyder; four grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

Commodore Robert Peary, Matt Henson and four Eskimos planted an American flag at the North Pole April 6, 1909. The party spent nearly 30 hours at the spot which scores of explorers had sought to reach for nearly 100 years. Peary won wide acclaim for his feat. In 1911, the U.S. Congress gave him the rank of rear admiral.

Minor Mishaps Reported Here

Snyder police officers investigated two minor traffic mishaps Wednesday afternoon.

The first accident occurred in the 1800 block of 37th St. around 1 p.m. Involved in the mishap were a 1980 Ford pickup driven by Bryan Gerald Walton of Rt. 2, Snyder and a 1982 White Freightliner pulling a mobile home and driven by Jimmy Franklin Spikes of Wichita Falls. Minor damages were reported to both the Walton vehicle and the mobile home.

The afternoon's second mishap occurred at 1:08 p.m. in the the 2700 block of College Avenue. Involved in this mishap were a 1977 AMC driven by JoAnn Alarcon Tovar of 507 20th St. and a 1977 Chevrolet driven by Teresa Willis Hand of 3308 Avenue A. Again, only minor damages were reported to both vehicles.

Discipline Is Still Needed

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — Old-fashioned school discipline is the way to curb school violence, a survey of more than 12,000 junior and senior highschool students indicates.

In the poll of subscribers to the national school publication, Read Magazine, 80 percent of the students said violence could be curbed with discipline. Eighty-seven percent said they would appreciate "a lot of" or "some" discipline, says editorin-chief Dr. Terry Borton.

The magazine, published by Xerox Education Publications for half a million junior-high and high-school students in reading and English classes, runs student opinion polls on a regular basis.

"What surprises us about the discipline survey," says Borton, "is both the large response — twice the normal — and the overwhelming support for school discipline."

As one student from Beaver, Pa., put it: "Principals and teachers let kids break rules. They say 'well, just this once we'll let it go.' But, every time they let a kid get away with something, they make the situation worse for themselves, for the troublemaker and for the kids who want to learn something."

The discipline survey was conducted in conjunction with a Read Magazine article that cited several causes as the root of vandalism and the lack of discipline in today's schools:

—Violence in society is on the increase.

—Large impersonal schools, which make students feel like "nobodies."

—High divorce rates, resulting in kids who feel no one cares.

—Boredom; students, used to the quick stimulation of television, become bored with school.

—Lack of discipline; many think school control is now in the hands of parents and students instead of principals and teachers.

Borton said the students wrote about all problems, but comments on the last — lack of school discipline — far outnumbered the others.

"Kids are disruptive to prove they are someone," wrote a boy from Lowell, Mass. "They need to show they can survive in the world."

A boy from Boontown, N.J., said: "I think parental negligence — and lack of parental discipline — is at the root of it."

From Gillet, Wis., a girl wrote: "I think problems are caused by boredom. Kids have nothing to do, but they want action, so they vandalize."

From Marquette, Mich., another girl suggested: "Teachers just don't know how to handle troublemakers. They've got to take strong action against these kids."

A Grand Blanc, Mich., boy explained: "The teachers are afraid of the students, so they don't discipline. The kids know it and think they can get away with anything — merely by threatening the teacher."

The students have a number of suggestions for solving the problem.

"Hire teachers who are strong enough to handle bigger kids," advised a girl from Grand Blanc, Mich. "Then use a lot of discipline."

A Rio Hondo, Texas youth urged: "Get the principal to tell the kids 'this is the rule and if you don't abide by it, you will get a punishment to suit your crime.'"

Differing iron requirements

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I read in your column that 10 mg of iron a day is a good amount. I am 68 years old and take one vitamin tablet a day that contains 18 mg in each tablet. The label says that is 100 percent of the U.S. RDA. Is it too much? Of course this amount is in addition to whatever I get from my food. I have stopped taking the pills and will wait until I hear from you.

DEAR READER — There is no fixed amount of iron for healthy people to take. The recommended daily dietary allowance (RDA) is a guideline for most normal healthy people.

There are four phases in life that can increase the iron requirements: infancy (milk — including mother's milk — contains little iron); during rapid growth as in adolescence; during pregnancy; and in women during the reproductive years because of loss of blood with menstruation (which can be a highly variable amount).

The RDA for a menstruating woman is 18 mg and for other normal adult women and for men it is only 10 mg. Only about a 10th of iron you consume is absorbed. Absorption is highly variable. Some foods, including sources of bulk such as bran, may decrease iron absorption.

A normal adult can usually tolerate 25 to 75 mg of iron in the diet without deleterious effects. In a number of medical conditions, though, this would be hazardous. It could result in storage of iron in the liver such as occurs from too many blood transfusions.

Since there is iron in a number of foods we consume and from iron cookware, had I been asked I would have recommended to the vitamin companies that they limit the amount of iron in vitamin tablets to no more than 10 mg. My alternative suggestion is that people who take iron this way should use a tablet that contains NO iron one day and the iron tablet the second day, averaging an intake of 9 mg a day, or find a preparation that only contains 10 mg of iron. Of course, if your doctor wants you to have more iron for a medical problem that is different.

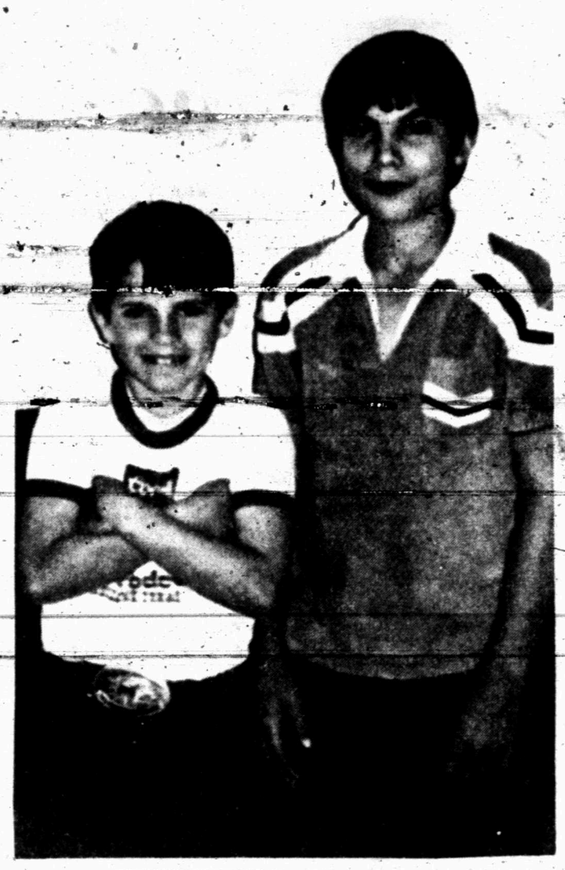

I am sending you The Health Letter number 4-4, Iron and Anemia. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My husband has gotten into the habit of eating a bedtime snack right before retiring. The snacks range from a piece of fruit to a bowl of ice cream. He says it tides him over until breakfast. I have heard that the calories consumed before bedtime will not be burned up and will contribute to weight gain. What is your opinion on this? Is anything eaten before sleeping beneficial?

DEAR READER — Calories are just like making a deposit in your checking account. It does not make any difference what time of day or week you deposit your calories. If the amount consumed is more than the amount used, the excess will be deposited as fat. The total calorie consumption is what counts. I am aware that this is a common misconception but it is just that, a misconception.

I am not enthusiastic about eating before bedtime because food in the stomach can leak back into the esophagus and cause indigestion in some people. However, if that doesn't happen and the snack helps a person sleep it is far better than a sleeping pill. But the total calorie intake for the entire day must be limited to avoid weight gain.

2 Texans Help With New Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two Texans are among seven members of the House Ways and Means Committee who have introduced a bill to replace the federal income tax with a low, single-rate tax on gross income.

The tax burden would be distributed more equitably among all taxpayers since all would pay one low tax rate on all their income, Rep. Kent Hance, D-Texas, of Lubbock said Wednesday in a speech on the House floor.

The bill calls upon the Treasury Department to conduct a two-part study detailing the economic and administrative consequences of such a system and report back to Congress within six months on its findings.

In 1789, Gen. George Washington was sworn in as the first president of the United States.

Inmate Claims Knife Ignored

HOUSTON (AP) — A convict who supervised other inmates says a Texas Department of Corrections official once found a homemade knife under his mattress but pretended the weapon didn't exist.

Chester Smith Jr., 42, said a TDC officer found the weapon in his cell during a 1981 shakedown but did not confiscate the knife.

Smith, who is serving a 35-year sentence at the Ramsey 1 Unit near Rosharon for aggravated robbery, also said a TDC captain confiscated a claw hammer from a "building tender" but later returned the weapon.

Smith testified Wednesday at a hearing on two complaints before U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice.

State Attorney General Mark White contends the special master appointed to oversee sweeping court-ordered prison reforms has overstepped his authority and should be fired.

Special Master Vincent Nathan argues the state of Texas has refused to end its use of inmate supervisors, such as building tenders, as Justice ordered a year ago.

During his testimony, Smith said another inmate wrote the special master, mentioning Smith witnessed the fight and saw the captain return the claw hammer.

Later, the captain approached Smith and told him "that I better forget it and go on back to the wing and do my job," the inmate said.

Earlier Wednesday, an inmate supervisor testified prison officials assured him that "building tenders" would continue to control his prison unit despite Justice's order that the job be eliminated.

"We were all concerned what would happen if we lost our jobs. What would happen to our status" after U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice's prison reform order in 1980, inmate Bennie Earl Hudson said.

But, he said, a warden and a prison major "told us we were still in control of the farm — still running the penitentiary."

Hudson said he was a building tender at the Texas Department of Corrections' Ramsey Unit, where he was serving a life sentence for theft, from 1975 until January. He is now in federal custody.
