Mission education emphasis set Sunday at Paint Creek Baptist Church

Sunday, April 29, Paint Creek Baptist Church will conduct a mission education emphasis beginning at 10 a.m. The primary focus of the program will be to learn more about opportunities and funding distribution for Christian missions both locally and worldwide through agencies of the Baptist General Convention of Texas. Glenn Majors, the Director of Cooperative Program Distribution for the Baptist General Convention of Texas, will be the guest keynote speaker, preaching in the 11 a.m. time of worship. Members and guests are invited to a luncheon immediately after the 11 a.m. worship service.

"Many Christians are unaware of the literally thousands of opportunities that they have to participate in mission work personally, prayerfully and/or financially," said Paint Creek

Pastor Steve Russell. "And, unlike what people might think, this event is not a fundraiser. The emphasis is on education," he added. "We Baptists have often been guilty of giving money to the church rather blindly hoping that somewhere out there it does some good. That makes it hard for our prayers to follow our money." He said, "Every Christian should be a continual learner when it comes to our mission actions."

In addition to Majors from BGCT, at 10 a.m. other mission speakers, vocational and volunteer, will have information booths set up so that participants can hear about personal missions experiences. Andre Raymond, Director of Big Country Baptist Assembly at Lueders, will close the program with a slide presentation of the work done by the encampment where he serves.

All are welcome to attend. There is no charge for the meal, but local participants who stay for the luncheon are asked to bring salad, vegetable and dessert dishes. Paint Creek Baptist Church will furnish ham and beverages.

State Capital

HIGHLIGHTS

By Mike Cox
TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN — Texas has 120 attractive and interesting state parks and historic sites. But anyone who has visited a park lately would agree that they could be better.

Parks have had to make do with skimpy maintenance budgets, and the results are showing.

But Senate Bill 305, approved April 17, will mandate a sweeping analysis of the state's land and water conservation needs and a plan to improve things.

Also required under the bill is that Parks and Wildlife Department place more emphasis on its historical holdings, referring to them in the future as historic sites, not parks.

The bill also prohibits the agency from using alcohol or tobacco advertising in its publications.

Bullock Museum open

After what's known as a "soft opening" last week, the Bob Bullock Texas State History Museum officially opens to the public at 9 a.m. Saturday.

The grand opening will feature live music, historical reenactments and educational activities.

Located at 1800 N. Congress Ave. in Austin, the cost for admission to the museum exhibits is $5 for adults but is free for children younger than 18. Tickets to the IMAX Theater, the Texas Spirit Theater and the Journey into Amazing Caves are extra.

To learn more about the new museum, check out its website at www.TheStoryofTexas.com.

Job hunting?

High tech companies are still laying off Texans right and left, but on large employer based in Austin is seeking qualified applicants.

The job comes with a high performance car and a pistol, shotgun and rifle.

Knowing that it's going to be hit hard in the next few years with a wave of Baby Boomer retirements, the Department of Public Safety is planning six new recruit schools in the next two years?

The agency is so serious about getting new applicants that it's putting advertising bumper stickers on its patrol cars.

Borrowing from the "My child's an honor student and such-and-such school" concept the DPS bumper stickers say: "Become a State Trooper" and give a toll-free number for interested applicants to call, 866-TXTROOP (866-898-7667.)

The next recruit class starts Sept. 3. Even though that class is almost full, other classes will be following and it's not too early to get the application process under way.

Free civics lesson

Next time someone you know complains about some governmental issue, from taxation to law enforcement, try using a story popular with Austin lobbyists.

First, ask the person to name the seven dwarfs. Chances are, they will know all the names, or at least most. Next ask if they can name the five Marx brothers. This is a little trickier, but most people can come up with the names. Then ask if they can name the Tree Stooges.

Finally, and to make the point, ask them if they can name the nine members of the Texas Supreme Court. Or the U.S. Supreme Court, for that matter.

The sad fact is that most people have an easier time picking off the names of Walt Disney characters than elected officials.

Bottom line, the lobbyists say, if you want good government, a first step is not being Dopey when it comes to knowing the names of the people elected to represent you.

From The Inside Out

By Mary Kaigler

"This is my Father's world, and to my listening ear all nature sings, and 'round me rings the music of the spheres."

The old traditional English hymn is right. There is no doubt about it. Every living thing in our part of the world is straining to respond to the grand, eternal prodding of nature. With the encouragement of moisture, it seems that every seed of weed and wildlife in West Texas is stirring to do its yearly rites of spring.

Admittedly, for gardeners and 'yardners' trying to deal with all the uninvited, thriving 'carrot' weeds, dandelions, irritating pollen, and allergies, the new season may very well not be evoking poetic flights of fancy.

But for the birds, (and bird lovers), there is now once again that indefinable presence in the air that makes us want to respond to the "music of the spheres" and sing our hearts out in praise to the Grand Mystery of life.

To this shade-tree philosopher it seems mightily appropriate that the time of our collective reflection and celebration of the Ultimate Resurrection of the eternal soul, and the promise of daily resurrection of our human spirit, coincides with the time of physical resurrection of life and growth in nature. Could this be one of those coincidences that no one has yet named as a miracle?

The awareness that this earth on which we have been put to live, enjoy and tend, is such an unearned gift of creative magnitude, should make us all wish to sing unabashed like the mocking bird that fills the air with the splendor of heart-bursting notes from the top of our old pecan tree.

Of course, unlike the bird, we know that rougher times and seasons may well be ahead for us. But thankfully, like our hope, Spring springs eternal with new beginnings in the world and in the human heart.

What can we do but enjoy the day we have? It is a gift; unwrap it with joy.

***

Recently, our daughter sent the following thoughts taken from their Pasadena, California, First United Methodist Church weekly news letter. Written by senior pastor David Richardson, it speaks beautifully to this urge within the human heart to sing in praise to the Giver of all life.

One Hand Cannot Wash Itself Alone

I could hear the singing. Although the voice was probably a quarter of a mile away, it filled the air with joy. From previous walks, I knew that the singer was a horse rider I have encountered on my walks before. He usually rides alone and he sings in Spanish without restraint or self-consciousness, although when we pass by each other, he stops and we exchange greetings. I in Spanish and he in English.

"Hola. Buenos dias, Senior," I say, and he responds, "Good Morning."

Then he rides on, singing songs of praise and love in his native language. The other singers of life, the California thrashers, Bewicks wrens, and house finches seem not to mind which language one sings in, so long as it is a part of the morning chorus that they lead. Occasionally, he moves me to sing.

I understand most of his songs but only hear bits and pieces as we go our own ways. Sometimes he stops his horse on some promontory and just sings to the hills and morning sun.

The singers of life, whether birds, frogs, crickets, or humans, add an indomitable chorus to nature's rhythms that storm, hardship or suffering cannot erase. I had started my walk worried about some hospital calls and personnel issues that I had to face that morning, but by the end of my sojourn in the woods, I, too was singing.

A snippet of one of his songs was an old Spanish proverb, "una mano no se lava sola (one hand cannot wash itself alone)."

So true! Even a solitary walk reveals my connectedness to everything else in life, especially the singers of life. Despite the concerns I carried that morning, I knew I wasn't alone. My God and my community were with me.

Yes, there are songs that are solos, but the audience is everywhere. Thank God for those who dare to sing.

April 22-28 is Infant Immunization Week

National Infant Immunization Week is April 22-28 and with almost a million children in the United States under the age of 2 lacking routine immunizations, it's a good time to check up on your own children's immunizations records.

"Children should be immunized on time and their immunizations complete by the age of 2," says Dr. Jane Siegel, professor of pediatrics at UT Southwestern Medical Center at Dallas.

Childhood vaccines prevent 10 diseases: polio, measles, diphtheria, mumps, whooping cough, German measles, tetanus, Haemophilus influenzae type B (a cause of meningitis), chicken pox and hepatitis B. Also, it's important for children in high-risk areas to be immunized against serious pneumococcal infections and hepatitis A.

High-risk states, identified for a high number of pneumococcal cases per 100,000 residents, are Alaska, Arizona, California, Idaho, Nevada, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Dakota, Utah and Washington. High-risk areas outside of those states include Dallas-Fort Worth.

Shopping online

by Lou Gilly

Haskell Co. Extension Agent

If you are looking for a hot deal, many consumers today are going online. However, when shopping online, consumers should remember to use many of the same principles used in more traditional forms of making purchases, according to Sue Lynn Sasser, family economics specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"Because online shopping is still new to many people, they may have the tendency to make impulsive decisions rather than searching for specific items or have a budget in mind," she said. "Animated, colorful Web pages may entice you to spend more than you would normally because it's an exciting, convenient method of shopping."

"It is wise to set a budget for the items you want to purchase and then make a list of all purchases that need to be made before you begin shopping online. It also helps to note the amount you want to spend on each item. If you find one at a special price below your budgeted amount, you can add that amount to your savings account."

Sasser advised that there is more than the cost of the item to consider. "Purchases made online will require some shipping and handling charges," she said. "Be sure you calculate those costs before determining if it's a good price. You might actually come out better to pay a higher price locally than order online and pay the additional charges."

"Shipping and handling charges will vary from business to business, so it's important to check out those costs before finalizing the purchase. You should remember that larger items are more expensive to ship than smaller, lightweight products," she said.

Reading and understanding the terms of the purchase are important considerations for online shopping.

"When shopping over the Internet, we don't always know who the seller is or where it is located," Sasser said. "Anyone can create a Web page and begin selling products. There is no guarantee that things are what they seem to be. Also, there is no guarantee that you will receive the merchandise or that the company will be in business if you decide to return the purchase."

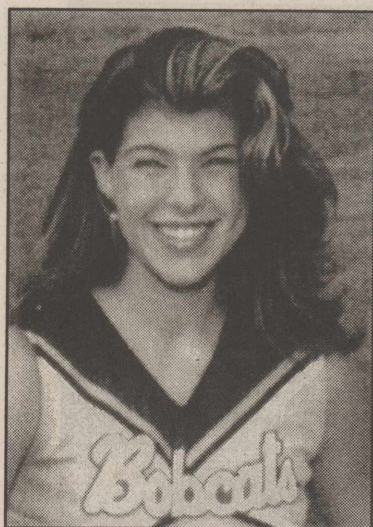

"Therefore, it's generally best to search the Web sites of companies you already know and trust. You can't judge the reliability of the seller by the quality of the Web page."

Sasser said it's best to use a credit card when shopping online because it gives the shopper some recourse if there is a problem with the transaction.

"But you need to be very careful about giving your credit card number to just anyone asking for it," Sasser warns. "And never give your bank account number, your social security number or other personal information unless you know exactly why it is needed to make the purchase. It's also best not to use a debit card because that gives the seller direct access to your checking account."

Sasser said shopping online puts "an additional responsibility on the buyer."

"Be sure you keep a copy of your purchase order and confirmation number for your records," she said. "Make sure you know the company's policies about refunds and returns before you place your order."

Tiny toys are big choking risk

When you choose toys for your children, think about where that toy might end up.

Give a baby an object and where's the first place it goes? Usually in the baby's mouth. That "mouthing" instinct in which babies put everything they can reach into their mouths may be normal, but it also puts babies at risk of choking.

Doctors at UT Southwestern Medical Center at Dallas say you can do a quick test at home to see if a toy is too small to give a baby. If the toy or a detachable toy part will fit through the cardboard tube in paper towels or toilet paper, it's small enough to get caught in a child's throat and cause choking.

For babies and very small children, stick to larger toys that can't be swallowed. Researchers in New York say things get a little easier for parents after babies reach the age of 18 months. At that time, the "mouthing" instinct declines and children are less likely to put inappropriate things in their mouths.

The instinct stems from the need for the baby to suck from a breast or bottle to feed. Putting other objects in their mouths may give babies the same sense of security they get from feeding. Babies are also likely to put objects in their mouths when they are teething so they can ease the pain of new teeth pressing against sore gums.

Walking is good for your health

Today, more than 50 percent of adults in the United States are overweight or obese.

This is a dangerous statistic because obesity is a risk factor for type 2 diabetes, heart disease, stroke, high blood pressure and some forms of cancer and other conditions. Obesity also is associated with psychological disorders such as depression. Fortunately, lowering your risk may be as easy as healthy eating and a walk in the park.

Physical activity decreases the risk of obesity and factors associated with being overweight. The Surgeon General recommends that adults exercise five times a week for at least 30 minutes. However, according to the National Institutes of Health, only 22 percent of adults are getting this amount and about 25 percent claim they do no physical activity at all.

If you're interested in starting to exercise, walking is one of the easiest and most effective forms of physical activity you can choose. You can do it almost anywhere at any time and there's no need to join a gym. All you need is a comfortable pair of shoes.

There are many benefits of walking, including that it:

- Gives you more energy.
- Makes you feel good.
- Helps you relax.
- Reduces stress.
- Helps you sleep better.
- Tones muscles.
- Helps control appetite.
- Increases the number of calories you body uses.

To walk correctly, hold your chin up and your shoulders slightly back. Walk so the heel of your foot touches the ground first. Roll your weight forward, walk with your toes pointed forward and swing your arms.

Protect your family from tornadoes

Think you may never encounter a tornado because you're not in Kansas? Think again. Tornadoes have been reported in every state except Alaska.

Twisters usually occur east of the Rocky Mountains during the spring and summer. These fierce, unpredictable storms can stir up winds of more than 250 mph and destroy everything in their paths.

Tornadoes form inside thunderstorms, frequently when a cold front or a line of hot, dry air collides with warm, humid air and winds create a horizontal spinning effect. Strong updrafts then pull the warm, moist air upward and create a giant vertical funnel of rotating air.

Twisters are most likely to occur between 3 p.m. and 9 p.m., but they have been known to happen at all times of the day.

If conditions in your area are right for a tornado, a tornado watch is issued from your local weather service. A tornado warning is issued when a tornado has been sighted or indicated by weather radar. If there is a warning and the sky looks threatening, move to safety.

To prepare your family for a tornado, you should:

- Develop a disaster plan for home, school, work or outdoors. Discuss what you would do if there is a warning to evacuate and perform drills.

• Pay attention to changing weather conditions, especially if you are planning a trip. Keep a map nearby to follow storm movement in your area by monitoring weather bulletins.

• Prepare a disaster supplies kit. Include three gallons of water per person; nonperishable food; a can opener; a first aid kit; prescription drugs; a portable radio, a flashlight with extra batteries; sleeping bags; protective clothing; an extra set of car keys; cash and credit cards; and pet supplies.

• Remember that the safest place in the home is the interior part of the basement. If an underground shelter is not available, move to an interior room or hallway on the lowest floor and get under a sturdy piece of furniture.

• If you are in a public building, go to the innermost portion on the lowest floor. Avoid areas not sheltered by overhead floors and rooms. Avoid using elevators in case the power goes out.

• If you are in a vehicle, don't try to outride the tornado. Cars, buses and trucks are easily tossed by tornado winds. Get out of the vehicle and seek shelter in a nearby ditch, gully or low spot. Don't get under your vehicle. Lie flat and put your arms over your head.

• Don't stay inside a mobile home. They offer very little protection.

• If you're in an open building like a shopping mall, gymnasium, indoor pool or civic center, try to get to the restroom which often is made from concrete block and offers more protection. If you can't go anywhere, lean against something that will support or divert falling rubble.

Weddings on a tight budget

by Lou Gilly
Haskell Co. Extension Agent

The most important part of planning a wedding is setting a budget and staying with it, according to Sue Lynn Sasser, Family Economics Specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"Remember, every dollar spent on the wedding is a dollar that cannot be used to pay for housing, clothing, transportation and other expenses," Sasser said. "So, it pays to plan wisely and stay within your budget."

Sasser said it's important that a wedding be a special occasion, but the amount of money spent does not indicate how successful it will be, nor how long the marriage will last.

"There are many ways to cut costs and still have a festive, memorable day," Sasser said.

"For example, having your wedding on a Friday or Sunday is less expensive because there is less demand for those days of the week, making locations cheaper to rent. Or, better yet, have your wedding in a location that doesn't have a rental fee, such as a park, a garden, or a friend's home or backyard. Having a wedding in a natural setting reduces the cost of decorating as well."

Selecting flowers that are in season and locally grown can be much less expensive than flowers that are shipped to the area.

"And using less expensive plants such as daisies or ivies can stretch your flower budget," Sasser said. "You can also mix silk and fresh flowers in center pieces or other arrangement or use a few large blooms like tulips or lilies tied with ribbons instead of large bouquets. You can use those same flowers for the reception, too."

Sasser said it's a good idea to avoid getting married around special flower holidays, such as Valentine's Day or Mother's Day.

"Flowers are more expensive then," she said.

For smaller weddings, Sasser said it's acceptable to use handwritten or computer-generated wedding invitations instead of engraved or printed ones.

"After all, the wedding and not the invitations is what people will remember," Sasser said. "And, it's also cheaper to mail them. Size can also affect the cost of postage, so be sure to use a standard size envelope to save on mailing costs."

For wedding dresses, Sasser said it's easy to go overboard when out shopping. She suggests that brides can save money by renting dresses, including the bridal party, or borrowing one from a friend.

"There are also consignment stores and outlets that carry bridal gowns," Sasser said. "You might even consider buying a nice suit or dress that can be worn for other special occasions later on. If your dress needs to be altered, be sure that service is included in the price or request that it is included."

When it comes to buying shoes, choose shoes that are comfortable and that can be used with other outfits after the wedding. Jewelry or other accessories can be borrowed instead of purchased, Sasser said.

Wedding photos can also be assigned to friends or family members, which can be another cost-saving method.

"Having friends and family members take pictures is cheaper than hiring a professional photographer and buying your own cake at a local bakery is usually cheaper than using a caterer. And, you can borrow items like punch bowls, dishes, tables and glasses instead of paying to rent them."

Sasser said planning for a wedding isn't much different from planning for any other event in one's life.

"It always pays to shop around and compare prices and to start early so that you aren't rushed into making hasty, expensive decisions," she said.

Choosing a babysitter is important step

Babysitters should be carefully chosen because a child's life is in their hands.

The Texas Department of Protective and Regulatory Services, Prevent Child Abuse Texas, and the Children's Trust Fund of Texas make some recommendations for choosing a babysitter and keeping kids safe.

Babysitting requires someone old enough to be responsible and competent and make the right decision in case of emergency.

Babysitters should like and enjoy children.

Babysitters should be expected to answer questions such as:

*Can you change a baby's diaper?

*Can you make a peanut butter sandwich?

*Do you know how to call the police or fire department?

*What would you do if the house caught on fire?

Babysitters should be able to give references of families they have worked for in the past.

Babysitters should not have any problem with you contacting other families who have used them. Ask the families these questions:

*How did the babysitter treat your children?

*Did the babysitter follow your rules?

*Was the babysitter reliable, polite, honest and friendly?

Babysitters should not have a problem with you contacting their families. If the babysitters are teenagers, talk to their parents. This can give you a good idea on how they were treated as children. People often care for children in the way they were treated a children.

Babysitters should be expected to follow your rules regarding disciplining children.

Ask yourself common sense questions before allowing someone to care for your children.

Take steps to prevent bone loss

Did you know that in the United States, every 20 seconds there is a fracture caused by thinning and brittle bones? According to the National Osteoporosis Foundation, 10 million Americans suffer from osteoporosis, 8 million of whom are women. In fact, women are four times as likely to suffer from the debilitating disease.

All women need to take steps now to protect themselves against bone loss and prevent the onset of osteoporosis.

Bone loss, a natural part of aging, can begin in your 30s when the body begins to produce less estrogen, a bone-preserving hormone. When women enter menopause and no longer produce estrogen, their bone density may decrease leaving them more susceptible to fractures.

Recent studies report that most of the bone loss that women experience in their lifetime occurs in the first five years after menopause. According to the National Osteoporosis Foundation, one in two women over age 50 will suffer an osteoporosis-related fracture in her lifetime.

Fortunately, simple lifestyle changes can be highly effective in preventing osteoporosis. For post-menopausal women, replacing the hormone estrogen is the most effective means of slowing bone loss.

Today, more than 17 million women use hormone replacement therapy to relieve the symptoms of estrogen loss and protect against bone loss. Other measures that can prevent and treat osteoporosis include eating a diet rich in calcium and vitamin D; not smoking; reducing caffeine intake; and doing exercises that require weight-bearing techniques.

"Osteoporosis often has no early symptoms, so women may not know they have the disease until they experience their first fracture," said reproductive endocrinologist

Dr. Valerie Montgomery Rice. "If you are reaching the age of menopause, have a discussion with your doctor about your risk factors for osteoporosis to determine if you need to schedule a bone mineral density test, which measures bone mass and is the only way to test for osteoporosis before the disease progresses."

Fractures, such as wrist and hip fractures, are the most common health threat associated with osteoporosis; others include severe back pain, loss of height and stooped vertebrae.

Speak to a health care provider for more information.

Immunizations keep babies healthy

One of the great success stories of modern medicine has been the development of vaccines to ward off infectious diseases, especially childhood diseases.

Childhood immunization coverage in the United States is at a record high while vaccine-preventable diseases are at all-time low levels. The level of vaccine-preventable diseases, such as diphtheria, measles and polio, has been reduced by at least 97 percent since the introduction of vaccines.

But much remain to be done and the need is great. Nearly 1 million children are still not fully immunized, putting them at risk for serious illness or even death.

Each year, National Infant Immunization Week highlights the importance of immunization of children younger than 24 months. NIIW, which will be observed April 22-27, is a time to remind parents that immunization is the best protection for their children.

Measles, whooping cough, diphtheria, rubella and polio — diseases that just a few years ago caused tremendous suffering and death — still circulate in the United States and in many other parts of the world. They can return with devastating consequences if immunization coverage rates are allowed to fall.

Immunizations are extremely safe, thanks to advancements in medical research and ongoing review by doctors, researchers and public health officials. The Center for Disease Control and Prevention points out that children are far more likely to be harmed by serious infectious diseases than by immunization.

The main goal of NIIW is to make parents and caregivers aware of the need to protect their babies against 11 vaccine-preventable diseases and to encourage better communication among parents, caregivers and their primary healthcare provider.

Every community can play a vital role in protecting its children from vaccine-preventable diseases. Partnerships with government and non-governmental organizations have proven especially effective.

Browning honored with championship ring

In 1951, Jimmy D. Browning of Haskell was co-captain of the Junior College National Championship basketball team at Tyler Junior College.

Fifty years later, he and all twelve surviving members of the 1951 championship team and all thirteen members of the 1949 championship team were recent recipients in a ring presentation ceremony and participants in an unveiling of a championship banner at the Floyd Wagstaff Gymnasium, named in honor of the late coach of both teams.

Speaking of the time lapse involved, Dr. William R. Crowe, Tyler Junior College president said, "We were creating the ring design for the 2000 TJC Apache Ladies national championship team, and I asked a member of the '49 basketball team if I could see his ring. When I learned that they only received jackets, we began plans to present them with rings."

Team members were also presented framed team photographs and honored at a luncheon, reunion and an evening reception with college and community leaders.

Browning recently retired from teaching and farming. He and his wife, Janice have seven grandchildren.

This Week's Devotional Message:

THE CHURCH CAN BE A BRIDGE AS WELL AS A BUILDING

Is there a generation gap at your house? Have the lines of communication and understanding between parent and child fallen into a deep chasm of selfishness, intolerance and mutual mistrust? Take your family to Church and let them all listen to the word of God, who sent His only Son to preach the gospel of faith and love to young and old alike, so that both may better understand the meaning and purpose of life. When family needs replace individual desires, your faith will provide answers that will benefit all. Let your Church span the gap of discord with a bridge of love.

Poison ivy

It's possible to have a number of outbreaks from just a single encounter with a poison ivy plant.

That's because the sap of the plant that causes the allergic reaction tends to get on shoes, clothes and gardening tools. If it's not washed off, it might prompt a miserable rash that can appear over and over again, said Dr. Rajani Katta, an assistant professor of dermatology at Baylor College of Medicine.

At least 70 percent of the U. S. population has an allergic reaction to even casual contact with the poison ivy plant. In order to keep the rash from appearing after contact, you must act quickly. "If you can wash it off with water immediately after you're exposed, that's probably sufficient," Hatta said.

Open Letter Modern Way to Celebrate 20 Years of Service

Jan. 21, 1981, Sam and Gayle Bitner purchased what was known as the JRB Food Store. Thus the beginning of Modern Way Food Store. At that time the store was a modest 14,700 sq. ft. supermarket with about 12 employees. Now 20 years later and some 40-50 employees, we now operate out of a modern 19,000 sq. ft. Supermarket. Unlike the older store, we feature a fresh bakery, hot deli, fresh hand made pizza, large selection of fresh produce and the best meat department between Abilene and Wichita Falls. A fuel center is able to handle eight cars at a time.

Modern Way IGA is supplied by The Fleming Co., Lubbock, Texas. Fleming is the largest grocery supplier in the U. S. Modern Way carries most major brands plus a large selection of IGA, and a upcoming new label Best Yet (The Best Is Yet To Come).

A two week Anniversary Sale will begin Monday, April 30 at 7:30 a.m. and will continue through Saturday, May 12 with drawings for great giveaways at 6:00 P.M. Prizes include a Sharp 27 inch color TV with remote control, 4 head VCR, electric keyboard plus other prizes. Saturday, May 5 we will feature a Truckload Produce Sale. Sat., May 12, we will feature a Big Hot Dog Sale.

A special thanks to our son, Sammy, for managing the store and to all of our loyal employees and customers a very special thank you. And thanks to Dwain Wardwell, Market Manager, who has been employed here for over 20 years. Dwain invites all his friends and meat customers to come by and visit the Meat Department during our 20th Anniversary Sale.

For the past 20 years, we have had the privilege of serving Haskell County and the surrounding area. We strive to bring the lowest prices possible. We are committed to that. We thank you our loyal customers, without your support, these things would not have been possible.

Sincerely,

Sam Bitner
