Well blows, 1 dead

CARLSBAD — Well experts from Midland were working Monday to cap a natural gas well that blew out earlier in the day, killing a Lovington man and leaving a mist of gas in the area. About a dozen people from various Midland oilfield-related companies were working on the well and hoped to have it capped Monday night, said Eddy County Sheriff Jack Childress. The sheriff did not know the names of the companies involved. Childress identified the dead man as Richard Cook, 40, a production tester for Bennett Cathey Co. of Artesia.

Bert Convy dies

LOS ANGELES — Emmy award-winning game show host Bert Convy died Monday after a long battle with cancer. He was 57. Convy died at his home in suburban Brentwood, with his wife, Catherine, at his bedside, manager Howard Hinderstein said. He was diagnosed with a brain tumor in April 1990, Hinderstein said. Convy had been admitted to Cedars Sinai Medical Center after collapsing during a visit to his mother, who was hospitalized for a stroke. Convy won an Emmy in 1977 for hosting the CBS-TV show "Tattletales." He also hosted the game shows "Win, Lose or Draw" and "Super Password" and was a guest host on "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson."

MOSCOW — Vladimir Pozner, the Soviet spokesman who helped erase Americans' view of Russians as crude and boorish, has quit Soviet TV and is planning to co-host a U.S. television show with Phil Donahue. It has been a dizzy 12 months for the journalist. First he wrote a bestseller saying his loyalties were misguided. Then he resigned from the Communist Party. Now he has quit his highly popular monthly show on Soviet television on a "matter of principle," spurned a tentative offer from Russian Federation President Boris Yeltsin to be his press secretary, and signed a contract with Multimedia Entertainment to appear with Donahue on a talk show beginning in October.

Chemical, Manufacturers plan largest U.S. banking merger

■ Agreement reflects urgency of the financial crisis in the banking business.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Chemical Banking Corp. and Manufacturers Hanover Corp., two of the nation's largest and oldest banks, announced a $2 billion merger Monday that would create the second largest bank in the country.

The deal, the largest merger in U.S. banking history, combines two intense New York rivals with face-to-face headquarters across Park Avenue and a history of bitter battles over employees and customers.

The Manufacturers Hanover name will be dropped and about 70 branches from the combined system will be closed.

The combination would create a bank with over $135 billion in assets, second only to Citicorp with $217 billion. Such a deal had been rumored for years, but the announcement before the opening of business Monday was nonetheless surprising.

Both banks managed to keep the deal secret despite two months of negotiations.

The agreement reflects the urgency of the financial crisis in the banking business, which is overloaded with bad loans in a tough economy and ripe for consolidation.

Chemical and Manufacturers Hanover, the sixth and ninth largest banks respectively, are both nursing wounds from losses on loans to

Governor convenes state budget session

'We are biting the ear of government, settling it down long enough to get a saddle on it and turn it into a workhorse.'

'We should allow the people of the state of Texas to vote on a lottery. It is the rarest of all creatures: a popular way in which to generate revenue.'

Gov. Ann Richards opens a budget-writing special session of the state Legislature Monday at the State Capitol. Richards urged lawmakers to allow Texans to vote on a state lottery and to follow Comptroller John Sharp's plan to decrease the deficit.

■ Plan calls for cuts, consolidation, lottery — no income tax.

By John Gonzalez and Karen Potter
N.Y. Times News Service

AUSTIN — Gov. Ann Richards, convening the 72nd Legislature for a 30-day special session on the 1992-93 state budget, predicts that no income tax will be needed to bridge a shortfall of nearly $5 billion.

Richards said that can best be done if lawmakers approve a money-saving government reorganization and create a new revenue generator — a state lottery.

"We are now beginning a session where there is not even a remote possibility of an income tax," Richards said Monday.

But she admonished lawmakers to trim state spending or face the need to raise other taxes.

"No agency of government is a sacred cow and no one is exempt from the duty to find ways to save money in hard times," Richards said at a joint session of the Legislature.

Other state leaders were even more explicit, warning of assorted tax and fee increases even if the government is reshaped and a lottery is created.

Secretary of Commerce Robert Mosbacher announces that the 1990 census counts should stand.

Mosbacher rejects census change

WASHINGTON (NYT) — In a decision laden with political overtones, Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher says he will not revise the 1990 Census, prompting Texas and other states and cities to demand that the courts impose an adjusted estimate.

■ Hispanics stunned/1B

"If we change the counts by a computerized, statistical process, we abandon a 200-year tradition of how we actually count people," Mosbacher said Monday. "I find the evidence in support of an adjustment to be inconclusive and unconvincing."

At stake for all Americans is the distribution of federal dollars and the allocation of political power. Many federal programs contain a population formula, and congressional delegations are determined by the number of residents in each state.

Republicans have been largely opposed to adjusting the Census because a revision would expand the ranks of undercounted minority groups that historically have favored Democrats.

At stake for all Americans is the allocation of political power.

"The Republicans have, in effect, told minority voters in the United States, 'You don't count,' " said Rep. Ron Coleman, D-Texas, who described himself as "enraged."

Boston Mayor Raymond Flynn said, "This decision will rob our cities of millions of dollars needed to

Thomas' job-rights panel record defies easy labels

By Robert Pear
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — As head of the federal agency responsible for enforcing the laws against job discrimination, Clarence Thomas was often at war with other Reagan administration officials, with members of Congress, with civil rights groups and with himself.

Thomas, President Bush's nominee for the Supreme Court, was chairman of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission from May 1982 to March 1990, longer than any of his predecessors.

A review of agency files for that period shows that he expressed complex, continually changing and often contradictory views, particularly on questions of affirmative action.

Thomas

As a member of Ronald Reagan's transition team in 1980, he had written a memorandum challenging affirmative action. But as commission chairman in 1983, he defended the use of numerical hiring goals in several celebrated cases.

Political scientist David Eisenhower and World War II fighter ace Joseph Jacob "Joe" Foss are scheduled to headline the Dec. 3-6, 1991 World War II International Symposium, "Prelude to Pearl Harbor: The Interwar Years," in Midland.

The symposium is to precede the dedication of the Confederate Air Force (CAF) headquarters and the opening of the American Airpower Heritage Museum at Midland International Airport on Dec. 7 and 8.

The four-day symposium is to discuss events leading up to America's entry into World War II following the historic Dec. 7, 1941, Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

"From a scholar's point of view, here's a perspective that's unique," symposium co-chairman Dr. Barbara Breier said of David Eisenhower's appearance as the symposium's keynote speaker Dec. 5.

Showers and thunderstorms developed over much of the state Monday, with some heavy rains and strong winds ripping through the Lower Rio Grande Valley and South Texas.

Those thunderstorms were moving west and northwest at 15 to 20 mph. Elsewhere, skies were partly cloudy, allowing temperatures to soar into the upper 90s.

Afternoon temperatures were in the mid to upper 90s in South Texas with winds blowing from the east and southeast at 5 to 15 mph.

A weak trough across North Texas triggered a band of thunderstorms from near Greenville to Tyler. A thunderstorm produced downburst winds near Hawkins in Wood County around 2:30 p.m.

North Texas skies were otherwise partly cloudy, as temperatures climbed into the upper 90s.

The hot spots at 3 p.m. were Dallas-Fort Worth and Waco, both checking in at 98 degrees. Marfa reported a 77-degree reading.

Mostly sunny skies prevailed in West Texas, but some rain did fall in the far west and the Panhandle. Winds blew mainly from the south at 10 to 20 mph.

Scattered showers are forecast statewide through today. Temperatures will remain in the 90s, except near 100 in the Rio Grande Plains and in the 80s along the Texas coast.

NATION

Heavy rain kept soaking New Mexico Monday, pushing two rivers to flood levels. Rain also fell in the South and Northwest, and the northern Plains had heat pushing the century mark.

Showers were reported in much of Florida and parts of Louisiana, Georgia and the Carolinas.

A flood warning was posted around Roswell, N.M., where an average of 6 inches of rain fell during the previous two days. The Rio Hondo and Pecos rivers were swollen from heavy runoff, the National Weather Service said.

Thunderstorms and rain were reported across much of the south-central section of the state at mid-afternoon.

Moist air from the northern Pacific Ocean caused showers in northwest and southeast Washington state, central and south-central Oregon and Northern California.

Heavier rainfall during the 6 hours ending at 1 p.m. CDT included 1.25 inches at Columbia, S.C., and almost an inch at Melbourne, Fla.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

RICHARDS: Governor pledges no income tax pact of state spending decisions, the Governor's Reception Room in the Capitol was peacefully occupied by 25 chanting demonstrators in wheelchairs. Disabled protesters, including several from Arlington, pleaded for state money to help them live in community-based housing rather than in nursing homes or state schools. Richards refused to meet with the protesters until late Tuesday afternoon.

Nearby, committees began considering thet package of legislation comprising nearly 975 recommendations by Comptroller John Sharp, who led a five-month audit of state agencies.

Several of the proposals are sure to draw intense and prolonged fire, including consolidation of state agencies, adjustments in the budgets of colleges and universities, and a variety of tax and fee proposals.

As one point of reference, Richards issued her own budget proposal, which relies in part on a lottery to avert tax increases. The governor's budget plan, a document that is traditionally ignored by lawmakers, balances the state books with a 5 percent across-the-board cut in agencies' administrative budgets and an overhaul of the franchise tax on business.

Part of Richards' approach to controlling spending is to exert more influence on agency management by appointing agency chiefs. She pointed to the state Commerce Department as an agency that would have benefited had she had the authority to hire and fire its chief.

"When the Department of Commerce sent a delegation on a ribbon-cutting trip to Frankfurt, they had a refueling stop in Paris that lasted three days," Richards said. "And when we called them on it ... (the head of the agency) said he was not responsible.

"I am telling you that we can cut and consolidate to a fare-thee-well, but it won't do any good as long as we have to depend on a system where oversight is assigned to voluntary boards who are often the captives of the bureaucracy rather than its masters."

Richards warned lawmakers that they will not be allowed to stray from the mission.

"I want to be real clear with you here. Do not muddy up what is going on in this special session. The focus of this session is going to be to cut and consolidate."

MERGER: Chemical, Manufacturers to combine developing countries and soured real estate deals.

"We think this is the harbinger for things to come in the banking industry," said James J. McDermott, president of Keefe Bruyette & Woods, a bank analyst firm.

Chemical Bank is the parent company of Texas Commerce Bancshares, but the merger is not expected to have a negative effect on employment or operations at Texas Commerce Bank Midland, bank president Ed Jones said.

"To the contrary, it should make us a much stronger bank, able to provide more services at lower costs," he said.

"And since the merged bank will be the second-largest in the nation, it will put it on the leading edge of new banking technology."

Jones called the merger inevitable and said he was pleased with the union.

Jones said that with $8 billion in capital the bank will exceed all regulatory minimums for reserves, which will allow the newly merged bank to offer a host of new products.

"Without the minimums, a bank is restricted on what it can do. It will definitely help us improve customer service," he said.

Jones said the union will not affect Permian Basin firms' ability to make larger loans, because the bank already has no limitations there. Currently, local loans of up to $250 million are possible through Texas Commerce Bank Midland.

The bank will have earnings of $1.4 billion annually and will be a large capital earnings machine, Jones said.

The merger follows last month's announcement that North Carolina's NCNB Corp. was discussing a merger with C&S-Sovran Corp. of Norfolk, Va. If completed, that deal would create the nation's third-biggest bank behind the new Chemical bank.

Analysts believe only banks with stellar credit ratings and ample capital reserves can regain their lost influence in the world economy.

"We're just a much more powerful corporation going forward," Chemical Chairman Walter V. Shipley said at a news conference, accompanied by Manufacturers Chairman John F. McGillicuddy.

NOMINEE: Thomas abruptly switched positions

on the commission, he said the agency would once again advocate the use of goals and timetables, despite his personal opposition to them.

Trying to elucidate his shifting views on affirmative action, and acknowledging his personal reservations, the chairman once told a congressional hearing, "I'll abide by the Supreme Court, whether I like it or not."

But if confirmed for a seat on the High Court, Thomas would help shape the law by which others must abide. It is by no means certain that his judicial rulings would echo his views from the world of politics and policy. But for those searching for clues to his likely course on the court, his record at the commission yields many clues to what he might do.

Thomas, who has sat on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit since early 1990, declines to discuss his record with reporters, but the commission's files, including some of his speeches and correspondence, suggest that he was often torn by conflicts inside himself and with others.

For instance, he said the "single most devastating event" of his tenure was the EEOC's failure to pursue thousands of age-discrimination complaints in a timely manner.

He said the agency's performance was "embarrassing and inexcusable," and attributed the lapses in part to management problems in district offices.

Congress eventually passed a law extending the statute of limitations for victims of age bias who would otherwise have lost the right to sue employers.

He had mixed results in his effort to improve the internal management of the commission, which he said was "teetering on the brink of self-destruction" when he took office.

The agency adopted many policies to increase the "certainty and predictability" of its law enforcement. Annual statistics compiled by the EEOC show that the number of lawsuits filed by the agency rose sharply during his tenure, to 640 in the fiscal year 1990 from 241 in 1982. But there was no increase in monetary benefits secured for the victims of discrimination.

Other Reagan administration officials crusaded against the use of numerical goals for hiring blacks, women and Hispanic Americans; however, Thomas shunned the flamboyant, confrontational tactics of officials like William Bradford Reynolds.

CENSUS: Mosbacher decides not to adjust deliver essential services to people in need."

People in inner cities, blacks, Hispanics and Southerners were more likely to be overlooked in the original Census than were residents of smaller communities, whites and Midwesterners.

If added to the population, those people would have meant big money for the cities and states where they live.

Mosbacher said his decision had no political element, although he acknowledged making it despite strong opposition from his own Census Bureau, which is part of the Commerce Department.

Census Bureau director Barbara Bryant told reporters that she had recommended the adjusted count, which she and others in the bureau believed to be more accurate.

The Census Bureau calculates that the population is 5.3 million greater than it counted in 1990, bringing the U.S. population to between 253 million and 254 million. But Mosbacher's decision means that the calculations on federal dollars and the political maps will rely on the lower 1990 data.

Mosbacher noted that participation in the Census was worse among blacks, Hispanics and American Indians, but he urged the Bush administration to find ways of correcting the undercount in federal programs.

Texas Attorney General Dan Morales wasted no time in saying the undercount will cost the state more than $1 billion over the next decade, and he said his office is researching a $1 billion lawsuit against the federal government. He declined to be more specific about the legal action.

Morales said Mosbacher's decision is "the denial of simple basic justice."

"The fact that there was a split on the committee advising the secretary indicates that the secretary's final decision indeed was in a minority even within the department. That is something a court in a relevant forum would take into consideration," said Morales.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said, "Congressional and legislative districting maps won't give adqueate representation to all the people of Texas if they are based on figures the Census Bureau concedes are wrong."

SYMPOSIUM: Event to precede CAF dedication

senhower: At War 1943-1945," is the first of a three-volume series on his grandfather, the United States Army's four-star general who commanded Operation Overlord, known as the D-Day Invasion of Europe on June 6, 1944.

Popularly called "Ike," Eisenhower became a five-star general in late 1944 and later became the nation's 34th president, serving from 1953 to 1961.

Joe Foss, a leading United States Marine Corps fighter pilot in the South Pacific in World War II, also is scheduled to be featured within those four "intensive" days of the symposium, said Dr. Breier, who is a professor and administrator at Hardin-Simmons University in Abilene.

Foss, the spirited, cigar-smoking Marine Corps ace who scored victories over Japanese Zero fighters in the Grumman F4U Wildcat fighter, received the Medal of Honor, the Bronze Star, the Silver Star and the Purple Heart.

In the war's Pacific Theatre, Foss headed up a Marine Corps group called "Joe's Flying Circus," which destroyed 72 Japanese airplanes. Foss shot down 26 of them himself.

After the war, Foss became operations director of the Central Air Defense in the Korean War. He was the Republican governor of South Dakota from 1955 to 1959 and served as commissioner of the American Football League from 1959 to 1966.

"The goal of the symposium is to bring together scholars, researchers, students and participants of World War II and engage them in a dialogue and a discussion about the events surrounding World War II," Dr. Breier said.

Co-chairing the symposium with Dr. Breier is David Smith, the executive director of the Abell-Hanger Foundation of Midland.

"We want it to be an academic pursuit, an intellectual pursuit, of all the events that came about to cause Pearl Harbor," Smith said. "We are trying to give the symposium as much academic credibility as we can."

Scheduled to speak at the symposium are Walt Rostow, an economist and political adviser at the University of Texas, and Dr. Clayton James, a distinguished professor of military history at the Virginia Military Institute.

The symposium, sponsored by the CAF and the American Airpower Heritage Museum, is slated to be held in the Holiday Inn Convention Center in Midland.

The lineup of symposium sessions includes:

- Dec. 3: The early pre-World War II period.
- Dec. 4: The latter pre-World War II period, coupled with a performance of the dinner-theatre play "Keep the Home Fires Burning."
- Dec. 5: Events and the political-economic-diplomatic-social climate that involved the United States in World War II and led to the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

David Eisenhower is scheduled to deliver his keynote speech and hold a session with scholars and high-school and college students on the Midland College campus.

- Dec. 6: Studies on the Dec. 7, 1941, Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor — a day that President Franklin Roosevelt told the U.S. Congress and nation "would live in infamy."

CAF reenactments — complete with WWII fighters and bombers — of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor are scheduled to occur Saturday, Dec. 7, and Sunday, Dec. 8.

The opening of the American Airpower Heritage Museum is to coincide with the "Tora! Tora! Tora!" attack.

"We're looking at it in a broader prospective" than just the combat aspect of the war, Dr. Breier said.

Economic summit opens; massive Soviet aid 'not in cards'

Leaders consider a political communique expressing support for economic reforms in the Soviet Union and 'new thinking' in its foreign policy.

LONDON (AP) — President Bush and America's rich allies opened their 17th annual economic summit Monday and plunged immediately into debate over Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev's appeal for help to rescue his failing economy. A top U.S. official declared that massive aid was "not in the cards."

In the absence of a financial bailout, the leaders were considering a political communique expressing strong support for economic reforms in the Soviet Union and "new thinking" in its foreign policy, a diplomatic source said.

The communique, to be released today, says the West is willing to help the Soviets move to a more open, democratic society and free-market economy. Yet, any pledges of tangible assistance will be put off until the summit's final statement on Wednesday, the source said.

On another topic, the political communique makes a veiled overture for the removal of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, saying the people of his country "deserve the opportunity to choose their leadership openly and democratically."

It also emphasizes the Western leaders' stance that sanctions must be maintained against Iraq until it complies with all U.N. resolutions, including the identification and dismantling of Baghdad's nuclear program, and it singles out Iraq in a proposal for a central registry for arms sales.

But the draft version of the document stops short of threatening military action against Saddam, sources said.

The leaders of the world's seven biggest industrial democracies — the United States, Japan, Germany, Britain, France, Italy and Canada — were all smiles in bright sunshine for the traditional "class photo" that always opens the summits.

Then they dug into three hours of discussion of their differences on such sober topics as Soviet economic troubles, impediments to free trade and other problems confronting the global economy.

The leaders' opening session took place in the music room of Lancaster House in central London. Monday night, the leaders gathered for dinner and more discussion at the historic Tower of London.

U.S. Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady, in a briefing on the first meeting of the summit partners, sought to lower expectations of an expensive Western aid package for Moscow.

"If you are talking about the kind of grand bargain mentioned before, that's not in the cards," Brady said. He was referring to a suggestion of aid approaching $25 billion or more a year.

The U.S. official said one item on which the United States and its economic allies likely could agree was bestowing on the Soviet Union an associate membership in the International Monetary Fund — giving it access to technical advice but not direct loans from that body.

With much of the attention focused on the Soviet Union, Brady said there had been some talk at the first session that "preoccupation with problems in the Soviet Union should not lessen" any movement to help emerging democracies of Eastern Europe.

But French President told his summit partners that Gorbachev "would be the major item" at the meeting, a French spokesman said.

On other topics, Bush expressed optimism about concluding a nuclear arms treaty with Moscow and praised the acceptance by Syria of a U.S. proposal for a Middle East peace conference, calling it a "good response." He said he was sending Secretary of State James A. Baker III to the Mideast for new talks.

On the arms control talks, Bush said Baker had told him there was only one issue left to be resolved. "It's encouraging — one point remaining but an important one," Bush said.

Following their opening session, which was devoted primarily to economic issues, the summit leaders were scheduled to devote time during a Monday night dinner to talking about political issues, ranging from Saddam to the nuclear arms control talks.

While Germany, backed by France and Italy, is pushing strongly for a major economic package for the Soviets.

Bush pushes trade issues, sort of

By Matthew C. Quinn
Hearst News Service

LONDON — President Bush took a stab Monday at salvaging stalled world trade negotiations, but the prospects for a breakthrough appeared bleak at the annual economic summit of the leaders of the seven richest democracies.

Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady said at the conclusion of the first session of the three-day summit that he had heard nothing during the first day of discussions that gave him cause for optimism.

"I think, to be honest with you, that the discussion inside these meetings isn't too different from that which takes place outside the meetings," Brady told reporters.

The talks, referred to as the Uruguay Round because they began in that South American country in 1986, have become hopelessly stalled over a dispute between the United States and the European nations over European government subsidies to agriculture. U.S. trade specialists argue that those subsidies enable small European farms to compete unfairly in world markets against larger, more efficient U.S. farms.

The talks, being held under the auspices of the 99-nation General agreement on Tariffs and Trade, were originally supposed to end in December 1990 with a worldwide free-trade accord. Last year's economic summit, held in Houston, Texas, ended with the summit leaders agreeing to give their "highest priority" to reaching an agreement by that date. However, the talks broke down last December over the issue of agricultural subsidies.

Administration officials said last week in advance of the London summit that the issue of aid to the Soviet Union would take up most of the leaders' time and held out little hope for progress on trade.

However, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Monday that Bush was anxious to dispel "rumors" that the administration was not interested in pursuing the matter here.

"The president very specifically took those on with everybody he talked to and said that is definitely not the case and we do want these trade negotiations to succeed," Fitzwater said.

Gorbachev note falls short on far-reaching reform plan

LONDON (NYT) — In a letter he sent to the Group of 7 leaders before he meets them on Wednesday, President Mikhail S. Gorbachev of the Soviet Union makes vague reform proposals that fall short of the detailed, far-reaching plan that Western leaders are seeking as a condition for granting large-scale financial aid.

Despite recommendations from Gorbachev's reform advisers that he outspokenly embrace a market economy, his letter talks in ambiguous and ambivalent terms about moving toward a Western-style economy.

As described by a senior member of one delegation, the letter talks of a "transition to a mixed economy" and a "socially oriented market system." It does not support outright sales of property and hedges on the goal of privatizating large enterprises.

Gorbachev's letter does not demand a specific amount of Western aid, but instead talks about wanting an "accommodation" between the Soviet Union and the Group of 7 that would help Moscow on its difficult transition to a market economy.

Nonetheless, at a news briefing on Monday at the Soviet Embassy, Soviet officials said Western aid was essential.

■ Demonstrators to spend night at Capitol

AUSTIN — About 40 people, many in wheelchairs, refused to leave the governor's reception room at the Capitol on Monday, and planned to stay overnight to protest the lack of services for the disabled.

Members of the Texas chapter of American Disabled for Attendant Programs Today, ADAPT, rejected an appeal by a fire official who asked the protesters to leave the room for safety reasons.

The group demanded Gov. Ann Richards sign a resolution calling for improved services for the disabled.

Richards refused to sign the resolution or come out and meet with the group, which was chanting, "What do we want? Freedom. When do we want it? Now."

Richards spokesman Bill Cryer said ADAPT leaders rejected an offer to leave and then return Tuesday for a private meeting with Richards.

Cryer said Richards still planned to meet with them Tuesday.

He said the governor agreed with many of their proposals, but added, "She doesn't sign anything that is presented to her in this fashion."

Fire Marshal Robert Jacobson urged the protestors to leave, and continue their vigil on the ground floor, saying that if a fire broke out, security officials would have difficulty moving them to safety.

ADAPT leaders huddled and then announced that the decision to leave would be up to each individual. No one left.

ADAPT wants Richards to sign a resolution that calls for redirecting funds from state schools and nursing homes to more community based service programs. These services help disabled people with dressing, eating, bathing and other functions so they can live in their own homes.

"Ann Richards is the leader of our state. She has the power to redirect funds, to make the legislators do it. I've been in a state school for almost 30 years, and it's not a place for people with disabilities," organizer James Templeton said.

Karen Greebon, also a member of the group said, "A nursing home is like a prison, and people don't get respect."

Activists for the disabled staged a 9-day protest in June at the Massachusetts Statehouse over cuts in the state's Medicaid program.

The protesters ended their protest after meeting with Gov. William F. Weld and David Forsberg, the state's health and human services secretary.

■ TRW starts toll-free number for consumers

DALLAS — Two of the nation's largest credit-reporting agencies Monday announced plans to set up toll-free lines to make it easier for consumers to receive information after their credit applications have been denied.

The move by TRW Inc. and Equifax Inc. comes about a week after six states accused TRW's giant credit agency arm of violating consumer privacy and making reporting errors that harmed the credit ratings of thousands of consumers.

The attorneys general sued TRW in state courts in Dallas and New York, saying they had received thousands of complaints against the company's Dallas-based unit, one of the nation's largest credit-reporting agencies.

TRW fired back with countersuits in federal courts in both cities, saying that state laws are superseded by the federal Fair Credit Reporting Act.

But TRW and Equifax officials both released statements Monday, saying they want to improve their public images.

TRW's toll-free number will be launched in several phases, beginning in October. Atlanta-based Equifax says its 24-hour number will be fully installed by December.

■ Apparel maker reportedly owes $450,000

EL PASO — An apparel maker who has been the target of workers' strikes for nearly three months owes more than $450,000 in state and federal taxes and penalties.

The International Ladies Garment Workers Union distributed photocopies of state and federal tax liens filed against Andre Diaz and his commercial laundry Apparel Conditioners Corp. at a Monday news conference.

The union helped garment workers at three factories organize a hunger strike and work strike in attempt to recoup unpaid wages and to force Diaz to allow a union election.

The workers are protesting against DCB Apparel Group Inc., Apparel Conditioners Corp. laundry, Sonia's Apparel and H&R Apparel Group.

The strike has continued for 11 weeks with a variety of state and federal agencies taking action against Diaz. The attorney general's office won a injunction against Diaz that forces him to pay wages owed by his subcontractors. The Department of Labor also has a suit pending against him to force him to pay about $24,000 in back wages.

The liens filed by the Internal Revenue Service and the Texas Employment Commission list owed taxes and penalties totaling $452,019.84.

■ Boy in custody for stabbling classmate

MINERAL WELLS — A boy was in custody Monday in connection with an attack on a female classmate who was stabbed 54 times while babysitting, police said.

Both are 14 and attend Mineral Wells Junior High School, officials said.

Shauna Gilstrap was in stable condition Monday at Palo Pinto General Hospital, after transfer from the facility's intensive care unit.

A closed hearing was held Monday morning for the boy, who was led from the courtroom in handcuffs.

Rate-increase hearing begins

AUSTIN (AP) — The Public Utility Commission on Monday denied requests by the state ratepayers' advocate that Chairman Paul Meek step aside and that a report recommending a TU Electric rate increase be rejected.

However, the commission, in the first day of the TU rate hearing, did vote to allow a legal hearing on evidence having to do with communication among PUC staff members and administrative judges.

Dallas-based TU Electric has requested a $442 million rate increase. A panel of PUC administrative law judges recommended the utility be given a $353.8 million rate hike.

But Public Counsel Luis Wilmot has urged the PUC not to consider that recommendation, saying there was improper communication between PUC staff who testified in the case and the judges.

The commission voted 3-0 Monday not to suppress the report. Commissioner Jo Campbell said the communications fell within a policy adopted by the agency in 1987, and that advocates could challenge the policy in court.

Wilmot said the Office of Public Utility Counsel also would appeal Meek's decision not to remove himself from the case.

Meek is a stockholder and board chairman of Fina Inc., formerly American Petrofina, which has sold fuel to TU Electric. Utility officials say $8.9 million of their $7 billion to $8 billion in gas and fuel oil purchases from 1983 to 1989 were from American Petrofina.

"Sir, your conflict involving Fina permeates this whole case," Stephen Fogel, assistant public counsel, told Meek. "We raise a continuing objection to his participation in this case."

But Meek refused, saying his ties to Fina had been investigated before he was confirmed to serve on the commission by the Texas Senate. In addition, the amount of trade between TU Electric and Fina has little significance to either company, he said.

"If I had any financial gain to make in this situation, I'd step aside," Meek said.

Parties in the case began oral arguments late Monday afternoon. Arguments were scheduled to continue through Wednesday.

The legal hearing will begin Thursday if Harley Clark, a retired state district judge from Travis County, agrees to oversee the proceeding, and Attorney General Dan Morales approves the appointment, Ms. Campbell said.

Commissioners said they intend to make a decision in the case by July 31.

Perry said 600 Brahman heifers and bulls from 62 ranches were scheduled to be transported by a specially outfitted jet on Monday and July 22.

Judge bars repair of Fort Worth police car

FORT WORTH (AP) — A judge ruled Monday that the patrol car driven by an officer who was videotaped beating a handcuffed suspect cannot be repaired.

Attorneys for officer Edward J. Parnell III, who has been charged with assault with a deadly weapon in the July 3 beating, said the patrol car is critical to his defense.

Judge Bill Burdock ordered the Fort Worth Police Department to preserve the present condition of the patrol car.

Parnell and his attorneys contend marks on the car show the officer hit in the cruiser with his baton in an attempt to deter auto theft suspect Ernest Alvin Anderson from wriggling free of the car.

The beating occurred after Anderson kicked out a rear window in the cruiser while Parnell was driving him to jail. Anderson tried to jump out onto Interstate 30 from the moving car.

Anderson, 21, said he was only trying to loosen his handcuffs. But Parnell said he had already adjusted the handcuffs.

Parnell admitted to hitting Anderson but said he had no choice. He emerged from Monday's hearing saying he was confident he would be cleared.

"I feel good. I'm just anxious for the grand jury to receive the information and act on it so I can get back to my job," Parnell said.

He has been relieved of duty with pay pending a grand jury hearing.

Jeff Kearney, Parnell's attorney, said his client repeatedly hit the vehicle to try to frighten Anderson into calming down. Kearney said he wanted to present the car as proof that Parnell was not trying to abuse Anderson.

A videotape of the incident, made by a woman from a nearby yard, shows Parnell striking at Anderson or in his general vicinity, at least 28 times.

A Dallas television station was allowed to videotape the cruiser, which has several black marks which Parnell maintains he made during the incident.

But Kearney told the judge that police officials refused to let him inspect the vehicle, saying damaged patrol cars typically are impounded until they've been repaired.

"We think that damage to the car is critical physical evidence in this case," Kearney said in an interview with Dallas' WFAA-TV.

Fort Worth Police Chief Thomas Windham said he was not disappointed with the judge's decision.

■ FDA panel won't endorse Alzheimer's drug

WASHINGTON — The first drug to be proposed for approval for treatment of Alzheimer's disease failed to win the endorsement of an advisory panel to the Food and Drug administration on Monday.

The panel, by an 8-0 vote, adopted instead a statement saying the tests made to date were "an insufficient demonstration of clinical effectiveness" of the drug Tacrine.

The panel left open the question of whether the FDA should permit patients to have access to the drug while its safety and efficacy are tested further.

An FDA regulation permits such access when tests are inconclusive but a drug shows promise of being effective.

Warner-Lambert Co., which wants to market the drug under the name Cognex, proposed to make it available to approximately 50,000 patients, who would be enrolled at a rate of approximately 10,000 a month.

The company said the program would be limited to patients with mild to moderate Alzheimer's disease.

Members of the advisory panel said any such program should be accompanied by expanded testing to determine the efficacy of the drug.

There was no immediate comment from the company.

■ Milken taps Dershowitz to reduce sentence

NEW YORK — He gained an acquittal for accused killer Claus von Bulow and cleared hotel queen Leona Helmsley of tax evasion. Now big-time lawyer Alan Dershowitz will aim his legal artillery at the sentence of Wall Street's biggest white-collar felon, Michael Milken.

Dershowitz, a Harvard Law School professor who is an aggressive appeals specialist, said Monday he will try to reduce Milken's prison sentence and help defend him against a rash of civil suits.

Milken was the biggest fish netted in the government's well-publicized campaign against securities fraud begun in the late 1980s. He helped build the now-collapsed Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. investment bank into a trading powerhouse for high-risk junk bonds.

Earlier this year, Milken began serving a 10-year sentence for six securities-related felonies, most involving famed inside-trader Ivan F. Boesky.

Dershowitz said the case for reducing Milken's sentence has strengthened with a recent string of reversals of convictions against Wall Streeters.

The most dramatic ruling came last week when a federal appeals court threw out the conviction of stock speculator John A. Mulheren Jr., who was accused of manipulating stock with Boesky.

■ CIA denies secretly selling arms to Iraq

WASHINGTON — The CIA on Monday denied a broadcast report that it secretly provided weapons to Iraq through a Chilean middleman during the Iran-Iraq war.

The report last Friday on ABC-TV's "Nightline" said President Bush's nominee for CIA director, Robert Gates, met with Chilean arms dealer Carlos Cardoen as part of a covert CIA operation to transfer arms to Iraq.

Gates was the agency's deputy director at the time of the alleged arms deal.

The CIA issued a brief statement Monday saying the allegations that it provided military equipment or technology to Iraq, "with or without authorization, are totally false."

"There has never been a covert action program authorizing such action. Reports suggesting the contrary are without basis. Moreover, the CIA has never had a relationship of any type with Carlos Cardoen," the statement said.

■ Senators would block fighter sale to Korea

WASHINGTON — Five senators, including Appropriations Committee Chairman Robert Byrd, D-W. Va., said Monday they will try to block the $3.7 billion sale of F-16 fighter planes to South Korea because that nation has yet to fulfill its monetary pledge in the Persian Gulf War.

"Quite obviously, Korea has not fulfilled its commitment," Sen. Robert Bryd, D-W.Va., chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee said.

He said Korea still owes the United States $179 million of the $385 million it pledged to offset Operation Desert Storm.

"It is my sincere hope that we will collect all of the outstanding pledges, but until that happens I will continue to oppose any sale to a delinquent country," Byrd said.

Byrd pointed to a section of this year's emergency spending bill for the war, passed in April, which requires that all such pledges be paid before arms sales are consummated.

The Bush administration plans to sell Korea 120 F-16s worth $3.7 billion. It would pay an additional $1 billion for training and follow-up costs.

Congress has 30 days in which to block the sale.

■ Airlines agree to halt exotic-bird shipments

WASHINGTON — KLM Royal Dutch Airlines, the largest transporter of wild tropical birds to the United States, and an Indonesian airline on Monday agreed under pressure from environmental groups to halt shipments of birds caught in the wild.

The birds are captured in South America, Africa and Asia and flown to the United States and Europe for sale as pets.

Conservation groups have been pressing KLM and other major airlines to halt the shipments in order to help protect dwindling populations of birds not yet classified as endangered. Environmentalists say that deaths during transit contribute to the extinction of many bird species.

Administration sees more red ink

■ Office of Management and Budget director predicts back-to-back record deficits.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration's mid-year budget review Monday forecast back-to-back record deficits this year and next, blaming the tidal wave of red ink on the bailout of bankrupt banks and savings and loans.

In a good news-bad news report to Congress, Office of Management and Budget Director Richard Darman said the deficit in fiscal year 1991 ending Sept. 30 will be $282.2 billion — $35.9 billion less than the administration projected in February.

But, the deficit will swell to $348.3 billion in 1992 — $67.4 billion more than forecast five months ago, the report said.

Both deficits, if realized, would surpass the previous yearly record of $221.1 billion set in 1986.

In a break with past practice, the report projects substantial budget deficits through 1996. Both the Bush and Reagan administrations repeatedly and incorrectly have forecast the deficit to disappear within a few years.

The new extended forecasts (and the now-outdated February projections) are: 1993, $245.7 billion ($201.5 billion); 1994, $132.1 billion ($61.8 billion); 1995, $73.6 billion ($2.9 billion), and 1996, $55.5 billion ($19.9 billion surplus).

Unlike last year, when the threat of automatic spending cuts under the Gramm-Rudman budget law loomed, the deficit projections are creating little stir.

An accord reached last fall between the administration and Congress for all practical purposes scrapped the targets. The agreement instead requires new spending be offset with either new taxes or offsetting cuts elsewhere in the budget.

"People seem to have some faith that Congress and the administration are a little different now. In some sense they seem to be writing the current deficit off, saying, 'That was a horrible year, but it'll get better,'" said economist Paul Getman of Regional Financial Associates in West Chester, Pa.

Darman, in an accompanying letter to House Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., pinned much of the revision in 1991 and 1992 on unexpected swings in spending for the Persian Gulf War and financial institution rescues.

In the current year, the war will actually prove to be a moneymaker for the government, which expects to collect $48.2 billion from its allies and spend only $24.2 billion, the report said.

The total cost of the war should total $61.1 billion, including spending of $16.8 billion in 1992 and $6.2 billion in 1993.

Meanwhile, a delay by Congress in funding S&L bailouts will reduce the cost of that program this year but push up the cost next year. Total financial institution bailout spending, including the continuing cost of assistance agreements to S&Ls rescued before 1989, should be $83.5 billion this year and $118 billion in 1992.

That also includes bank rescues, which are financed by banks through insurance premiums but nevertheless count as spending for budget purposes.

In another contribution to the deficit, tax collections during the recession will be down compared with the February projections — $22.8 billion lower in 1991 and $19.5 billion less in 1992.

The administration's economic assumptions underlying the budget were adjusted only slightly and still are in line with the forecasts of most private economists.

The economy, as measured by the gross national product, will shrink a slight 0.2 percent this year but grow a relatively robust 3.2 percent in 1992, the administration said. Both projections are slightly more favorable than in February when the administration forecast a 0.3 percent decline in economic output in 1991 followed by 3.1 percent growth.

The administration is close to the consensus of 51 top private economists reported by Blue Chip Economic Indicators of Sedona, Ariz. Earlier this month, they predicted a decline of 0.1 percent this year and growth of 2.7 percent next year.

"The Bush administration generally has been very consistent with the private sector view instead of the rose-colored, optimistic forecasts you would get out of the Reagan administration," said economist David Jones of Aubrey G. Lanston & Co. in New York.

CDC stops short of mandatory AIDS testing

ATLANTA (AP) — Federal officials recommended Monday that doctors and dentists who do surgery or pull teeth take AIDS tests and stop such procedures if they're infected.

The recommendations could affect tens of thousands of dentists and surgeons nationwide.

The guidelines, drafted by the federal Centers for Disease Control, urge infected doctors and dentists to refrain from invasive procedures involving blood exposure unless an expert panel concurs and patients are informed.

High-risk procedures are defined as those in which a health worker could be injured — perhaps with a knife or needle — and bleed into an opening in a patient, not just on skin.

Examples include abdominal, gynecological or heart surgeries, tooth extractions and root canals. Health workers limited to performing simple tasks such as cleaning teeth or giving injections are not included in the proposal.

The CDC stopped short of recommending mandatory AIDS testing for health-care workers, saying, "The current assessment of the risk ... does not support the diversion of resources that would be required to implement mandatory testing."

"The risk for doctor-to-patient infection is low. For most procedures, it's absolutely zero," said Dr. William Roper, director of the CDC. "If all these precautions are followed, the American public can be confident in the safety of its medical care system."

In Congress, Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said Monday that he and Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, would introduce legislation Thursday requiring states to adopt the CDC's recommendations. Under the measure, states not doing so would be barred from receiving federal health grants.

"It is not some sort of witch-hunt, nor an overreaction," Dole said of his proposal. "All of us have a responsibility to take reasonable actions to prevent the spread of AIDS."

In Illinois, a bill was sent to the governor requiring that patients be notified about AIDS-infected doctors or dentists who had performed invasive procedures on them. If enacted, it would be the first such law in the nation.

The CDC has reported just one case of AIDS transmission from doctor to patients: a Florida dentist, now dead of AIDS, who is believed to have infected five patients with the virus.

Voluntary compliance was criticized by the mother of Kimberly Bergalis, one of the Florida patients who is now near death from AIDS.

Doctors "should have been getting themselves testing right along, but they haven't," said Anna Bergalis. "This, it sounds to me, is the same old policy."

Expecting infected workers to quit on their own was naive, she said. "I don't know what dentist in their right mind or what doctor in their right mind is going to voluntarily give up a $200,000 practice," she said.

The Florida cases heightened concern over the risk of doctor-to-patient transmission and prompted the guidelines, as well as efforts in several cities to notify thousands of patients that their surgeons or dentists had AIDS.

For instance, in Seattle, officials said nearly 8,000 people have called the county Health Department's AIDS Prevention Hotline in the past three months, many fearing their doctor or dentist might be carrying the virus.

"Patients deserve accurate information, and they deserve the best measures to protect them from disease transmission," Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan said in a statement Monday.

The guidelines do not have the force of law, since states regulate the practice of medicine. But CDC officials said they expect the guidelines to strongly influence professional standards and requirements.

The American Medical Association and the American Dental Association, the nation's largest physicians' and dentists' groups, already recommend that AIDS-infected doctors refrain from invasive procedures unless their patients are informed and approve. Those policies helped the CDC form its official recommendations, Roper said.

CDC researchers continue to believe the risk of AIDS transmission from doctor to patient is quite small.

Earlier this year, CDC statisticians estimated that the nation has about 300 infected surgeons and 1,200 infected dentists — and that the chances of patient infection range from one in 41,667 to one in 2.6 million.

The CDC recommendations also apply to a virulent, potentially fatal form of hepatitis B virus, which is up to 100 times as infectious as the AIDS virus and can be transmitted by blood.

The hepatitis B recommendations could affect more practitioners than the AIDS guidelines, Roper said. But a vaccine is available to guard against hepatitis B, and the CDC recommends it for health care workers.

In addition to the infected patients of the Florida dentist, patients of several other doctors infected with the AIDS virus have been warned or tested.

And in West Virginia, a heart surgeon, apparently infected by a patient, urged other physicians to have themselves tested.

"My message may not be a popular one with some doctors, but an HIV-positive surgeon has got no business operating on people," said Dr. G. Edward Rozar.

Bush can't kiss Saddam's hand

An old Arab proverb says that, if you can't cut off the hand of your enemy, you must kiss it. The Bush administration is learning that it can't kiss the hand of Saddam Hussein so the hand may have to be cut off.

The president thought he could live with the Iraqi dictator since most of Saddam's military power, especially his nuclear capability, was reported destroyed. He now finds that Saddam not only maintained nuclear weapons programs but lied about them. Iraq admits running these secret programs to produce enriched uranium, which could be used as explosives in atomic bombs.

Iraq made the admission amid mounting international pressure, including implied military threats from Washington and others. The United Nations commission charged with destroying Iraq's most dangerous weapons suggests that even now Baghdad may not be telling the entire truth. So does Washington.

The president and his national security advisers have now returned to the question they faced at the end of the Persian Gulf war: Should Saddam be allowed to retain power and help stabilize the region, or will he again try to intimidate it?

The fact that Saddam handed over to the U.N. his ballistic missiles as well as chemical and biological weapons arsenal but avoided giving up his nuclear capability has deeply troubled the West. They see this as proof that Saddam still wishes to rise again militarily and politically in the Arab world.

Bush and other Western leaders are now reassessing their policies toward Iraq. It's possible that the latest admissions of duplicity by Iraq may placate them. However, don't count on it. More and more, Bush and the West are leaning toward teaching Saddam another lesson — air strikes against nuclear and other military sites. These may not cut off Hussein's hand but they may bloody him enough so that military officers may launch another attempted coup. They are the force that should oust him.

Texaco's donation helped League of Women voters

The League of Women Voters of Midland would like to take this opportunity to publicly thank Texaco, Inc. for its very generous contribution to the League. Texaco has a long history of supporting the League, which is a nonpartisan political organization. The League of Women Voters does not support any political party or candidate but does take a stand on issues. Generous donors like Texaco enable us to serve the voters of Midland to an even greater extent than we would otherwise.

Tax-deductible donations go into our Texas Education Fund, which provides for voter information and education projects. Our projects for this year will include a continuation of our water quality study, additional study on childcare issues, and the establishment of environmental shopping tours.

Our purpose is to provide services to the voter, and Texaco has helped us to be effective.

In-depth investigation of city travel costs needed

I read with great interest your article in the Sunday Reporter-Telegram (June 30, 1991) regarding official travel of our city officials, employees and guests.

Although it is not possible at this time to surmise that such travel is excessive, one can't help but be suspicious when our city officials' travel expenses are compared with those of surrounding West Texas communities.

In addition, one can't help but wonder what happens to all of the bonus travel benefits or points that accrue when a city official or employee travels by air. Are these benefits returned to the city, or are they accumulated for their own use, which would be private use of public funds? It is my understanding that many agencies of the federal and state governments as well as most public corporations require their travelers to return these benefits for official travel to the agency or company involved. Is this done by the City of Midland?

Frankly, I consider my local taxes to be an abomination, and when reports of such possible extravagance or abuse are revealed I think it is high time for appropriate action to be taken. I would like to suggest that we have a formal investigation of just what's going on these days down at City Hall and reveal the findings to the taxpayers.

Grandmother won't take son back to the ballgame

I'm one of the 4,000-plus who were at the Angels Baseball game last night (Tuesday, July 2). I would like to say it went great except one incident — a drunk woman fell on my little grandson! So we will not take him back to an Angel game.

The beer was everywhere, and we do not like that.

The stadium was actually pushing drugs, because that is what beer is, isn't it?.

Thousands hang out helping Congress

WASHINGTON — The late Rep. Silvio Conte, R-Mass., was fond of saying that he wished he could pass a law renaming the U.S. Capitol as the Empire State Building, because it housed a huge empire — thousands of aides waiting on only 535 lawmakers.

Anderson

It now costs $2.3 billion a year to support Congress and its ancillary agencies populated with worker bees who hum around the lawmakers responding to their every command. In 1960, the legislative budget was $130 million. Today it is roughly 20 times bigger. In 1960, there were 6,791 employees serving Congress. Today there are about 20,000.

Some agencies that support Congress have so many people, they don't know what to do with them. This year, the General Accounting on 172 extra staffers and loaned them to congressional committees. There are so many people working in the Capitol Building that their desks spill out into waiting areas and cubbyholes.

Newcomers to Congress might have to scrape and beg for enough staffers to run their offices, but the established members accumulate bigger staffs — big enough to do personal errands. As one staffer put it, "You do what you're asked to do. If that means walking the dogs, dropping off laundry or driving to the airport, then you do it." Many of the more menial jobs are foisted off on interns, just one step up from the congressional pages at the bottom of the ladder.

Down in the parking garage, there is a small army of attendants to guide members every morning to the same parking spaces they have occupied for years. All that help doesn't come cheap. The budget for staffing the parking garage will be $1.6 million next year.

"It's a joke," one Capitol Hill staffer told our associate Melinda Maas. "They have nothing to do. When I drive in in the morning there are three guys just sitting around twiddling their fingers." Some pass the time reading newspapers or playing cards.

In addition to the parking attendants, uniformed officers from the Capitol Police force stand in the garages checking identification cards before turning the cars over to parking lot attendants. It is one of the many menial tasks performed by well-paid cops.

Few will argue against the need for a police force on Capitol Hill. But a close look at how the Capitol Police spend their time raises questions. Why should the taxpayers pay to train and arm a uniformed police officer so he or she can spend hours every day checking ID cards at a congressional cafeteria, or writing parking tickets around the building?

Three decades ago, there were 216 Capitol Police officers. Now there are six times that many — two cops for every member of Congress — with an annual budget of more than $60 million. Even the police themselves want many of the jobs to be assumed by civilians so the cops can devote themselves to serious police work. The Capitol Police estimate that as much as $4.3 million could be saved over the next five years if 100 positions were turned over to non-uniformed civilians who cost less to train and keep.

There are people on top of people in the Capitol building. But when Congress spends money on the building, it rarely goes toward better accommodations for the little people. Instead, Congress will spend $350,000 to redo the congressional beauty salon, or $25,000 to study the need for a new House gym, or $6 million to upgrade the Senate subway that shuttles the two blocks between the Senate offices and the Capitol, or $50,000 in travel expenses for the full-time Capitol architect.

Silvio Conte once wore a "Miss Piggy" mask on the House floor to denounce the rampant, selfish spending habits of Congress. Today, when there are 35 million Americans without health insurance and 12.6 million hungry children in the country, we wish Conte had left the mask to someone in his will.

Pearl Harbor anniversary is for survivors

The 50th anniversary of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor will be commemorated without the embarrassment of officially invited Japanese guests. The Bush administration at least decided that issue.

In fact, of course, the only Japanese who wanted to come were peace advocates. Over the years a number of Japanese have visited the memorial of the sunken battleship, Arizona, and drop wreaths into the water.

Reese

There's no reason for anyone to commemorate Pearl Harbor except the survivors. It was not a U.S. victory or a great battle. It was just an air raid that provided Franklin Roosevelt the excuse to do what he had been scheming to do for two years — get into World War II and save Great Britain's bacon. He knew the Japanese were going to attack somewhere — that's documented — because he had put them into an untenable position.

After the attack, Roosevelt excoriated the Japanese, but, once war was declared, he sent most of our resources to Europe to the detriment of American forces scattered around the Pacific in such places as the Philippines.

Whenever we look at a large event like war, we have to remember there were many different wars. To those born after World War II, it's a historical event. To those, like me, who were children during the war years, it's part of our experience but in a very distant, benign way. To those who actually fought it, it is a deeply personal event, probably the most powerfully influential event in their lives except for those who went on to fight in Korea, too.

Pearl Harbor belongs to the survivors and they alone should determine how the attack will be commemorated. To them, it is a personal matter, not a historical or national event. Those still entombed in the sea and those buried on land were their comrades and loved ones, not statistics. The rest of us should stand aside and let them handle it as they see fit.

Keep in mind, too, it is not a celebration but a memorial service. There is nothing to celebrate. Our enemy caught us off guard and handed us a defeat. As far as the leadership goes, both political and military, it was far from our finest hour. The ground commander, fearing sabotage, had bunched the airplanes so they would be easier to guard (and easier to bomb) and stored most of the antiaircraft ammunition in bunkers where it was more easily guarded but not easily gotten to in a sudden attack.

Thus it was not for want of courage or determination on the part of the men and women in the service that so little damage was inflicted on the attackers. What saved us was pure dumb luck — the aircraft carriers weren't there. As the Japanese had just demonstrated, it was going to be the carriers, not the battleships, which would be the decisive weapons in the fight for the Pacific.

So let us leave the dead to be mourned by their survivors, though the rest of us should pay homage to them, as to all the others who have died in the service of our country.

As for the Japanese, most of us should bear them no grudge. Like Americans, they were led by their government into a war and fought for their country just as Americans were fighting for theirs. But again those who actually fought in the war may hold a grudge and are entitled to it.

One of the poignant things about human life is that events which seem of such immense and eternal importance fade with time, like an island seen from a ship which slowly recedes and then vanishes. After awhile, only those who were on the island remember what it was really like or care about it. So they carry their memories like a family heirloom that has no meaning for strangers. After more time passes, they themselves feel like strangers.

New Age evangelism is on collision course

PHOENIX — What would late 20th century Americans rather talk about than anything else? Sex, what else?

Christians are people, and Episcopalians are Christians (sort of, the wiseacres snicker), so when the Episcopal Church convenes in solemn and official array, the topic of the day is — sex.

Murchison

The Episcopal Church has declared the 1990s the "Decade of Evangelism." Evangelism means preaching the gospel of Jesus Christ to the unconverted. Preaching the gospel is what churches are, well, in the business to do.

However, this gets sticky because of — sex. The Christian gospel takes a dire view of sexual license. Its model is heterosexual monogamy. This strictness on the favorite topic of the 20th century does not sit well with the non-heterosexual and the non-monogamous — or with their well-wishers. To various Episcopalians — the same could be said of various Methodists, Roman Catholics, Presbyterians and the like — the old, strict approach to evangelism no longer works. What're we gonna do if people don't respond to the old gospel? At a minimum, the old gospel makes evangelism a challenging enterprise.

That's where the Episcopal Church's 70th General Convention comes in. As the church gathers in scalding Phoenix, sex and evangelism are interwoven in the tapestry of concerns. You can't tell where one thread leaves off and its neighbor takes up.

A few months ago, the church's human affairs commission figured it had found a clever way to deal with the issue of whether to ordain practicing homosexuals as priests. (In traditional Christian morality, the practice of homosexuality is sinful; it indicates the need for repentance.) The commission said, why not let individual bishops decide what to do?

Traditionalists thought this not quite a nifty idea. What about morality? What about the gospel? A countervailing proposal before the General Convention would require of all priests abstinence from "sexual relations outside of Holy Matrimony."

Fearful of losing the whole shooting match, supporters of relaxed standards have begun talking of postponing the whole issue. Maybe a three-year study, hmmmm? Maybe more testimony — or even a whole new way of thinking about theology, a new "process."

What this process would consist of is unclear; what is clear is the befuddlement of the modernizers, who have been taught never, never to say no to anybody — except maybe traditionalists and other fuddy-duddies.

The Presbyterians probably shook up the Episcopalians when the former failed by a 14-1 margin to adopt a rewrite of the moral code, including approval of homosexual relations.

The Episcopalians aren't now and never were planning anything so drastic, but they're wondering how much they can truly get away with. Less than they had thought, maybe.

Meanwhile the Church Relevant marches on. At the opening eucharist, a Navajo shaman blessed the altar in the name of the four winds, rather than the Holy and Undivided Trinity.

Subsequently a portion of the service devoted to Dr. Martin Luther King's memory equated Dr. King's martyrdom and prophetic dreams with Jesus' passion and promise of the Spirit's gifts.

A post-communion hymn was touchingly addressed to "Blessed Martin, holy Martyr."

Black protesters, dissatisfied even so, made known vocally their distinct unhappiness that the church was meeting in a state whose voters had rejected a paid holiday in Dr. King's honor.

Gays braced for the struggle to make the church take an up-or-down vote on homosexual ordination.

Episcopalians of all stamps mopped their brows, and not just because of the broiling sun.

Evangelism, like a lot else, ain't what it used to be.

■ Bush-Gorbachev summit put on hold again

LONDON — U.S. officials said Monday that President Bush's long-delayed Moscow summit with Mikhail S. Gorbachev will remain on hold until American and Soviet negotiators can clear the last hurdle to a strategic missile-reduction treaty.

Privately, U.S. officials were skeptical that the summit, set initially for last February, could take place this month. They said the complicated final issue, which Bush called an important matter, bore on the way the Soviet missile program is carried out.

Bush will be talking to Gorbachev here on Wednesday about the Soviet president's appeal for Western assistance for his faltering economy.

In the meantime, U.S. and Soviet negotiators in Geneva will have another whack at the Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty, and Secretary of State James A. Baker III and Soviet Foreign Minister Alexander A. Bessmertnykh also could tackle it during the summit here of seven industrialized democracies.

Baker and Bessmertnykh, over four days in Washington, settled all but one issue. They could not, however, agree on throw-weight standards for new missiles before quitting Sunday night.

■ Israel pressed to review Bush peace plan

JERUSALEM — Apparently surprised by Syria's acceptance of a U.S. proposal to start Middle East peace talks, Israeli officials on Monday began gearing up to reconsider Washington's plan that Jerusalem rejected five weeks ago.

The Israeli press emphasized that Syria's acceptance of points outlined in a letter from President Bush to Syrian President Hafez Assad would mean added U.S. pressure on Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir to accept the same conditions.

Shamir issued a statement giving a guarded welcome to the Syrian move. "If the Syrian response will allow the opening of direct negotiations with us, we will see this in a positive manner," he said. But Shamir added that Israel would "stand strong on all its positions and principles" as expressed in a response Shamir sent last month to Bush's peace plan.

The exact contents of Assad's Sunday reply to Bush haven't been made public. But U.S. officials have made it clear Syria's response was positive, while it is well known that Shamir's answer, delivered quickly in early June, was not.

Shamir rejected Bush's proposed compromise that would permit a United Nations observer to attend a peace conference that would meet periodically, with Israel's approval, to report on the progress of bilateral talks between Israel and several Arab states and the Palestinians.

■ Allies end occupation of Northern Iraq

ZAKHO, Iraq — Allied troops ended their three-month occupation of northern Iraq on Monday but promised to return if necessary to protect the Kurds from Saddam Hussein's government.

"We're just a phone call away," said U.S. Maj. Gen. Jay Garner, commander of the allied forces in northern Iraq and the last man to cross the Habur River bridge into Turkey.

American F-16 and A-10 warplanes screeched overhead as the last 3,170 allied troops left in long convoys. As the soldiers left, a grass fire set off mines in a nearby field, loud reminders of the dangers faced by the allied troops and the Kurdish refugees who remain.

The allies moved into northern Iraq on April 18 to help and protect hundreds of thousands of Kurdish refugees who fled their homes after Saddam crushed a Kurdish rebellion at the end of the Persian Gulf War.

■ U.N. team: Ease sanctions against Iraq

GENEVA — A United Nations team recommended Monday that sanctions against Iraq be eased so Baghdad can raise cash to buy essential supplies and prevent a rapid deterioration in living conditions.

The report said Iraq needs to import food, fertilizer, medicine, vehicles for the health service, spare parts for sanitation systems and equipment for the electric power and communication sectors.

Bush orders Baker back to Mideast

LONDON (AP) — President Bush, declaring he had reached a "breakthrough" in Mideast peace making, directed Secretary of State James A. Baker III on Monday to return to the region in a renewed drive to set up Arab-Israeli peace talks.

Bush said he was prompted by a "good response" from Syrian President Hafez Assad on arranging a Mideast peace conference. Now, Bush said, Israel will be tested.

"They've made statements to us of wanting to do these thing, and now here will be a good test," the president told reporters after he had dinner with the leaders of six other industrialized democracies attending an economic summit meeting.

Bush provided no details of Syria's latest position, especially whether it still was demanding U.N. participation in peace talks over Israel's objections.

But, he said, "it's a very important step that has taken place."

Referring to Assad, a hard-line Arab leader whose country has participated in every Middle East war against Israel, the president said; "He's just agreed now to come forward to the kinds of meetings that are necessary to get this process going. And that is a major step if it proves to be correct."

Putting pressure on Israel to fall in line, Bush said: "I would like to think that when they say that they want peace they would get on board naturally. They've been wanting talks with people in the area, and if all goes well here that's exactly what will happen."

Bush said of the Assad response: "We're not suggesting everything is fine and that there couldn't be some last-minute hitch to it. But we're approaching this very positively."

The trip will be Baker's fifth to the region this year. He returned empty-handed from all the others, so the mission that begins on Thursday in Syria contains risk of failure again.

But Bush waxed optimistic. "I have asked Jim Baker to go back to the area to immediately follow up what we would term a breakthrough from what we know about it," he said.

And yet, there is no guarantee he can bridge the gap between the hard-line Arab leader and Israelis dubious that Syria is ready for peace after more than four decades of enmity between the two neighbors.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Baker would leave here after Bush concludes an economic summit and listens to Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev make his case for Western assistance. Baker is to leave for his first stop in Syria on Thursday.

Besides Syria and Israel, Baker will make stops in Egypt, Jordan and Saudi Arabia and then go on to Malaysia for a meeting with foreign ministers of six Asian nations.

The Mideast assignment will require Baker to skip the next stops on Bush's journey: Greece on Thursday and Turkey on Saturday.

Bush and Baker "are hopeful that progress can be made and feel that it could be very useful for the secretary to meet again with the leaders in the region," Fitzwater said.

Fitzwater said the letter Assad sent U.S. officials on Sunday "represents real movement in the search for peace."

Asked if it increased pressure on Israel to agree to a conference, Fitzwater said, "It opens some possibilities, but each country has to judge those opportunities for themselves."

Baker's role is to see if there are any lingering conditions in Damascus to negotiations with Israel and whether they can be reconciled with the Israeli government.

The two sides have disagreed over whether the United Nations should have a role in a Mideast peace conference.

Syria wants to involve the United Nations, while Israel, stung by decades of setbacks at the world organization, is resisting.

In 1975, the General Assembly equated zionism, the philosophical underpinning of the Jewish state, with racism. Only U.S. vetoes in the Security Council prevented further damage to Israel's standing in the world.

A peace conference would deal with the 44-year dispute over Israel's existence in a predominantly Arab part of the world and its control over Palestinian Arabs who live on the West Bank and in Gaza.

The Bush administration stepped up its diplomacy in the region after the Persian Gulf war ended last February. The theory was that attitudes had changed. Baker spoke repeatedly of a "window of opportunity."

His accomplishments were minimal, however, and the U.S. drive slowed down.

Experts: Iraqi nuclear program was months away from bomb

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — U.N. nuclear experts said Monday that despite Baghdad's vigorous efforts to produce enriched uranium, it was many months away from being able to make bomb-grade material when the Gulf War broke out.

At a news conference after briefing the Security Council, the experts also reported the discovery of a hitherto unknown enrichment plant near the village of Ash Sharqat, between Tikrit and Mosul in northern Iraq.

But "we believe no industrial production of enriched uranium had started" at the plant before the war started in January, said Maurizio Zifferero, the International Atomic Energy Agency official in charge of the inspection teams in Iraq.

He and other officials said that prior to the Gulf War, it would have taken six to 18 months for Iraq to begin industrial production of enriched uranium that could have been used to manufacture a nuclear weapon. Officials said other factors made it impossible to say how long it would have taken Iraq to make an actual bomb.

Iraq was employing an expensive technology that was used in the development of the first U.S. atomic bomb, but abandoned because of its expense, the experts said.

Jay Davis, an inspector from the Lawrence Livermore Laboratory in California, said Iraq's massive electromagetic isotope separation facilities probably cost $4 billion to $8 billion to construct.

The experts said they were not satisfied with Iraq's declarations on its program and said inspections of Iraqi nuclear sites would continue.

"We have to continue searching because we don't feel at this time that everything is according to the resolutions," said Rolf Ekeus, head of the U.N. commission charged with eliminating Iraq's nuclear capability.

Under the April 3 Security Council cease-fire resolution, Iraq is obliged to catalogue and destroy all its weapons of mass destruction.

U.S., French and British officials say economic sanctions on Iraq will not be lifted until it complies fully with the resolution.

DEAR ABBY

Mom wants mistake locked up for good

DEAR ABBY: I am a 31-year-old married (with children) woman. I have an embarrassing secret.

Van Buren

When I was 20, I was arrested on a felony charge — transportation of pot into a prison. The charge was dropped to a misdemeanor, and I was given a one-year probation since I had never been in trouble before as an adult. I haven't been in any trouble since then.

I have noticed that on job applications certain questions are asked about "any arrests." I don't want to lie on a job application and risk being caught and later being fired — or even being sent to jail because of lying on the application. So, my question is this: Since my arrest was so long ago, is there a way for me to have it sealed so that I can put that part of my life behind me and not worry about it following me for the rest of my life?

Please don't print my name or address. — GOING STRAIGHT

DEAR GOING STRAIGHT: In some states, if the offender was under 21 years of age when the crime was committed and has subsequently proved to be of good character, the record can be expunged (destroyed). Consult a lawyer. It may cost a few hundred dollars, but the peace of mind would be well worth the price.

DEAR ABBY: In a recent letter from "Heartbroken in Lakewood, N.J.," the writer was distressed over the death of her pet from ingesting antifreeze left on the driveway, and cautioned your readers to hose down their driveways so that their pets are not poisoned.

Abby, unintentional acts of pollution are not only dangerous to residents and their pets, but have similar impacts on the fish and wildlife who are on the receiving end of our storm (drain) water. Most liquid substances washed into storm drains get dumped, untreated, into our rivers and lakes — where one pint of oil will produce a one-acre oil slick.

The Congress and states are attempting to clean up storm drainage as part of the Clean Water Act. Disposing of oil, antifreeze, paint or paint thinner, household cleansers and other substances by dumping them into gutters and storm drains not only damages the environment but is also a crime.

So, Abby, urge your readers to call their local public works department and find out where to dump used oil and how to properly dispose of other toxic liquids. Remember, for most of us, the water you wash away could be someone else's water supply! Please don't put anything down a gutter or storm drain that you wouldn't want to drink or swim in. — BERT McCOLLAM, DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC WORKS, SACRAMENTO, CALIF.

DEAR MR. McCOLLAM: Consider it done! Read on:

DEAR ABBY: In reference to Fluffy, the sweet little dog who lapped up the antifreeze her owner left in the driveway, it isn't clear whether the Sunday mechanic collected most of the antifreeze and spilled a little, or just drained it on the driveway.

Abby, if the antifreeze killed Fluffy, just imagine what it would do to the environment.

Please, tell your readers that ALL antifreeze (as well as oils) should be collected and disposed of properly. Shops that change oil must, by law, accept used oil. — J.H.K., HEMPSTEAD, N.Y.

AT WIT'S END

Thumbs always up for kids who love movies

Are critics losing their clout? Does anyone care anymore whether Siskel's and Ebert's thumbs are up or down? Will drama reviewer Frank Rich die poor?

Bombeck

I have three kids who could not care less what critics say about a film. They liked "Robin Hood." They liked "Batman." They saw "Ishtar" twice. They considered "Heaven's Gate" a classic. The point is they would pay $7 to watch nail polish dry if the nails belong to Julia Roberts.

Obviously, they are not alone. Movies that have consistently received advance bad reviews open up to millions of dollars in box office revenue. I don't know if this is because moviegoers have no taste or have no place else to go on weekends. It seems as though their lives are just one series of "run the tapes" after another.

To my kids, a week without seeing a movie is like a week without air. I've never known a generation so geared to film. If it doesn't have a plot, they don't care. If the character has no integrity, they don't care. If the director casts his 14-year-old daughter as "the other woman," they don't care. If the length outlasts the substance by two hours, that's OK too. Bring on "Caddy Shack IV."

I personally like to read or to hear what critics have to say about a film. Maybe it's my age, but I tend to be like my husband who, before we go to a party, asks, "Am I going to have a good time? Will there be interesting people there? Will they talk to me? What are they having for dinner? Do we sit down or eat off our laps? What time will all of this be over?" You arrive at a time of your life when you no longer have the luxury of time or risk-taking. Every minute has to count.

Today's movie groupies don't seem to look for the same things the critics look for. They don't question if this is a departure for Woody Allen and does it measure up to "Annie Hall" or "Manhattan." It isn't important that Kevin Costner talks funny or that close-ups are unkind to Redford. They don't take the time to dissect what is going on with the sexes in "Thelma and Louise" and they don't sit around looking for technical flaws.

They just look for a place to hang out for a couple of hours — away from a job they hate, a family that nags, a world that is brutally real to watch — and for a little while watch other people on the screen try to survive.

"Bonfire of the Vanities" may seem like a big price to pay for escape, but what the heck.

Verbal sparring has moved to morning TV news shows

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dan Aykroyd used to dismiss Jane Curtin's opinions in a popular "Saturday Night Live" parody with a terse "Jane, you ignorant slut." And that was one of the nicest things he called her.

Dueling political pundits have moved to the morning shows since then, and their more civilized insults are tailored to the breakfast bunch.

"You are the only spin doctor in Washington who could be sued for malpractice," began one recent exchange. "Talk about spinning, I'm getting dizzy," came the retort.

"We try not to be too obnoxious," said Republican admaker Mike Murphy, the malpractice accuser. "We don't want anyone to lose their cereal," added is sparring partner, Democratic pollster Mark Mellman.

They are the newest example of a genre that goes back to the Aykroyd-Curtin match-up and the commentators they were spoofing — James Kilpatrick and Shana Alexander of Point-Counterpoint, which ran in the late 1970s on CBS's "60 Minutes."

The explosion of group slugfests like CNN's "Crossfire" and the syndicated "McLaughlin Group" has meant new employment opportunities for political consultants and columnists across the ideological spectrum. But the morning shows, serving up banter over easy for sleep-fogged viewers, have opted for the less obstreperous pairs.

At the moment viewers in some markets can see Mellman and Murphy in a syndicated weekly segment of the Fox Morning News. NBC's "Today Show," meanwhile, has a lock on the two toughest media men in political circles — Democrat Bob Squier and Republican Roger Ailes, who did President Bush's 1988 commercials.

"We started working against each other in 1988," said Squier. "The electric moment was the night before the election. He did the telethon for Nixon, I did the telethon for Humphrey. We've been going after each other ever since."

Ailes' ads ridiculed Michael Dukakis' ill-fated visit to a tank manufacturer and showed inmates exiting prison through a revolving door. But morning viewers aren't seeing that side of Ailes.

At his most cutting, he's been relatively mild — branding the Democratic Leadership Conference an oxymoron, for example, and calling Dan Quayle "the Democrats' last great hope."

On the whole, Squier's been even more amiable than Ailes — to the point of giving free advice to the GOP from time to time. He once explained how the Republicans were handling the recession all wrong.

"I said they were crazy to keep denying a recession that everybody knows we're in," Squier said. "The idea was to declare it started so they can announce that they're solving it. Five days later they admitted there was a recession. I don't know if there's any connection but it gave me pause about giving them good advice."

Mellman and Murphy, the new kids on the block, stick to gentle wisecracks.

Mosbacher's census ruling stings

■ 'Texas will see you in court!' Attorney General Morales vows.

By Laura Tolley
Associated Press writer

HOUSTON — Hispanic activists were angered and stunned Monday by U.S. Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher's refusal to adjust the 1990 census that missed millions of people, and the state attorney general vowed to fight the decision.

"Mr. Mosbacher, the state of Texas will see you in court!" Attorney General Dan Morales proclaimed shortly after learning of the decision.

Morales' announcement received a standing ovation from several thousand Hispanics attending the National Council of La Raza's annual convention here, where he was the guest speaker at a Monday afternoon luncheon.

Mosbacher's decision will have a "devastatingly negative impact" on millions of minorities in the United States if it stands, Morales said.

The decision not to correct the 1990 census that overlooked more than 5 million people could likely cost big cities and states millions of federal dollars over the next decade.

Census numbers are used to determine where billions of dollars in federal money will go and how many representatives each state sends to Congress. Many of those missed in the count were blacks and Hispanics living in large urban areas.

In Texas, where the U.S. Census Bureau estimates it missed more than half a million residents, the ruling could cost the state at least $1 billion in federal aid, Morales said.

Morales, who previously has said his office was prepared to sue the federal government if it didn't adjust the census figures, said he expects to announce his battle plans within the next few days.

Although Morales said he could not explain Mosbacher's decision, some Hispanic activists at the convention blamed politics. The National Council of La Raza is a Hispanic civil rights umbrella group for 130 "affiliates," or formal community-based organizations.

"I can't help but feel that politics is behind this," said Andy Hernandez, president of the Southwest Voter Registration Education Project in San Antonio.

Hernandez called the decision "totally unacceptable," and warned that Hispanics will remember who decided to leave them out.

"I don't think the way you win Hispanic votes is by telling them that they don't count. If we don't count in the census,

Hartman masters fine arts and stars

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

A caption under a sketch of Albert Einstein reads: "I know you're busy Mark, but could I get you to help me with this ... "

The sketch hangs in Mark Hartman's office in the Marian Blakemore Planetarium. And even though the planetarium director laughs off any association between himself and the scientific genius, he does share Einstein's fascination with science.

Hartman's enthusiasm for astronomy and the sciences is matched by his zeal for art.

"Ultimately, I consider myself an artist, art is a way of life," he said.

Hartman, who earned his masters of fine arts degree from Texas Tech University, said he primarily honed his skills in glass blowing and ceramics. He also worked as an illustrator and sculptor and created dioramas for a natural history museum in Hastings, Neb.

When not using his creativity to fashion works of art, Hartman chalked up college hours and planetarium work to acquire a strong background in astronomy.

Now he plans to combine his expertise in several fields to create multi-media planetarium shows.

"It's no longer a matter of just using a pointer and some stars to produce a show," Hartman said. "Now we write the scripts, narration, do all the artwork, incorporate slides, mask photographs, air brush art onto black backboards, use slide animation systems, imaging computers, videos, dub in original music and, finally, program the computer to present

Devenport spends more than other council candidates

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

District 1 Councilman James Devenport spent almost twice as much on his campaign than the six other candidates combined, spending records due Monday show.

Devenport, who won by 82 votes and faced a recount, spent $15,762.71 leading up to the May 4 race, while expenditures of the six other candidates totaled $8,619.36. His spending was almost 13 times that of opponent Steve Scott, who spent only $1,238.79.

Contributions to the Devenport campaign also were almost double the combined donations to the other six candidates.

Devenport amassed $19,285 in contributions, while the six others' donations totaled only $9,824.26. Scott, who publicly criticized his opponent's financial campaign, received $1,238.79 in contributions.

Whether Devenport's spending and contributions were unprecedented was not available.

Scott was unavailable for comment, but Devenport, a 33-year Midlander, defended his spending and contributions, which he said resulted from his high community profile.

"I just followed my campaign objectives set by my advisers. We made a strategy to raise money and stuck to it,"

'I just followed my campaign objectives set by my advisers. We made a strategy to raise money and stuck to it.'

— James Devenport, District 1 councilman

Devenport said. "And I think that I am better known in the community than Steve Scott. My wife and I have been very active in charitable organizations."

At-large Councilman John Castro was the closest to Devenport in spending and contributions, spending $3,108.87 and receiving $4,223.23.

District 2 candidate Jose Alfredo "Beau" Zertuche, whom the Rev. Michael De Vaughn beat by only 15 votes, spent $2,668.90 while receiving $3,006.74. De Vaughn's expenditures totaled $1,046.28, while his contributions were $1,566.50.

At-large Councilman J.D. Faircloth spent only $431.52 and received $1,850 before going on to capture 44 percent of the votes.

Part of ex-fireman's lawsuit dismissed

By David Morris
Staff Writer

A state district court judge on Monday dismissed part of former Midland firefighter Mark Wallace's wrongful termination lawsuit against the city.

During a hearing Monday, 318th District Court Judge Dean Rucker threw out a section of the lawsuit in which Wallace claimed that the city unfairly withheld some $15,000 in worker's compensation benefits from him.

Rucker said the city has sovereign immunity from such claims.

Monday's decision does not apply to the sections of the lawsuit in which Wallace claims he was wrongfully discharged from the fire department and that the city broke its contract with him.

Wallace's attorney, A.J. Pope, argued during the hearing that the city should be accountable for its decisions regarding Wallace's worker's compensation claims. He said the city is liable for "breach of duty of good faith and fair dealing."

But attorney Clark Lea, representing the city, successfully argued that the city is legally immune from claims arising from the dispensation of worker's compensation benefits.

Now, the success of Wallace's lawsuit hinges on his wrongful-discharge and breach-of-contract claims.

Wallace, 35, filed the lawsuit in September 1990, claiming he was dismissed in October 1989 because he told supervisors he'd been injured on the job and could no longer fight fires.

According to the lawsuit, Wallace was injured while fighting fires in May and August 1989.

Fire department officials fired Wallace after he showed them a doctor's letter that said the injuries would prevent him from working "in places where there is smoke and dust present," the lawsuit states.

The lawsuit implies that Wallace was willing to accept a non-firefighting assignment but was terminated nevertheless.

City officials, for their part, maintain that Wallace quit and was not fired.

A trial date for the lawsuit has not been set.

Barbara Jordan expects Thomas' confirmation

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Former U.S. Rep. Barbara Jordan said Monday race should be a factor in selecting Supreme Court nominees and President Bush was wrong to deny that he selected Clarence Thomas because he was black.

"Race had everything to do with it," she said. "It is not credible for the president of the United States to say to the American people that race had nothing to do with it."

But Jordan, speaking to a luncheon at The Forum Club, said it was imperative that a black person be nominated to fill the spot of Marshall, the only black justice, because blacks have always looked to the Supreme Court as "the protector and defender of their rights."

"President Bush should say 'Because that is fact, I believe that it would be a disgrace for me not to have another black person in that position not representing that significant point of view in our country,' " said Jordan, who was the first black woman elected to the Texas Senate. "What's wrong with that?"

She said if the Senate rejected Thomas, a judge on the U.S. Court of Appeals in the District of Columbia, she would like Bush to nominate another black person to fill the court's vacant seat.

$50,000 Abell-Hanger Foundation grant finances new Civil Air Patrol quarters

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Mostly, it's routine up in the air.

The Civil Air Patrol (CAP) spends the majority of its time flying practice runs and carrying out searches that turn out to be "wolf cries" — false alarms.

But when the alert is sounded for what turns out to be a real search-and-rescue mission for a missing aircraft or lost people, that's when the excitement kicks in and makes the routine worthwhile.

Real danger or not, all CAP missions are taken seriously, Midland Composite Squadron Commander Larry O'Mahoney said.

When the alert is sounded, CAP pilots and observers must "be prepared for it and ready to go," he said.

To help the squadron better carry out its mission, the Abell-Hanger Foundation of Midland recently financed a new 1,400-square-foot, radio-equipped CAP headquarters at Midland Air Park with a $50,000 grant.

The foundation's directors opted to fund the CAP building because of the importance of the CAP mission and as encouragement to CAP volunteers, the foundation's executive director David Smith said.

The CAP, which is fast approaching its 50th anniversary, was founded as part of the United States Office of Civil Defense on Dec. 1, 1941, when the United States was on the threshold of World War II.

During the war, CAP crews flew 86,685 missions, logging 244,600 hours and 24 million miles while patrolling coastal waters to assist the Navy and Coast Guard.

In its current role, the CAP flies about 80 percent of the search-and-rescue missions in the United States, as well as working with disaster-relief programs.

Twenty senior members, including civilian-trained private pilots and ex-military pilots, and about a dozen teen-age cadets participate in the 1969-chartered Midland squadron.

"We will always take pilots, but we need plenty of people to help with administration, people who want to do observer or scanner roles in the aircraft, to help with ground-team leaders, and radio operators," O'Mahoney said.

"We can use just about anybody who cares to volunteer and put in their time in this organization."

then I don't think those votes are going to be able to be counted with them on election day," he said.

"I don't think it helps this administration. I don't think it helps the Republican Party when their party is identified with that kind of decision," he added.

Hernandez said he believed the decision would serve as a rallying point for Hispanics across the nation who are seeking a greater political voice.

"I think you're going to see a great maturity and sophistication on the part of the Hispanics. When people come and ask us for our vote, the Hispanic vote, we're going to ask how they voted for us when they had the opportunity," he said.

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Assault

Staff Report

ODESSA — A 26-year-old man remained in custody Monday on bonds totaling $15,000 after reportedly attempting to take a gun away from a police officer Sunday night, the Odessa Police Department reported.

Officers arrested Ricardo Salazar Garcia after being called to the scene of a disturbance in the 2900 block of Park Boulevard around 8:25 p.m. Sunday, reports show.

According to the reports, a man at the scene told officers he'd been assaulted by some men in a house on Park. When one of the officers attempted to enter the house, Garcia attacked him and reportedly tried to take away his gun, the reports state.

However, the officer was able to get away from Garcia and summon help. The first officer then re-entered the house with another patrolman and subdued Garcia, according to reports.

Garcia, who is being held at the Odessa city jail, has been charged with two counts of aggravated assault on a police officer and one count of attempting to take a weapon from a police officer. Municipal Court Judge Jud Weatherly set bond at $5,000 on each count.

Arson suspected

ODESSA — Arson is suspected in a blaze that caused moderate damage to a house on Monday morning, an Odessa Fire Department spokesman said.

The spokesman said the fire, at 2208 Salinas, was reported at 10:06 a.m. Monday. He said investigators suspect arson because the fire evidently began in several places in the house, occupied by a woman named Lisa Farris.

Eleven firefighters took about 30 minutes to extinguish the blaze, the spokesman said. No one was at home when the fire started and no one was reported injured, he said.

Car accident

A Hobbs, N.M., man remained in the critical care unit at Midland Memorial Hospital Monday evening following an early morning car accident, police and hospital officials confirmed.

Valentine Alvarez, 21, was injured when the 1982 Oldsmobile he was driving struck a utility pole around 2:30 a.m. Monday, Midland Police Department reports show.

According to reports, Alvarez was westbound in the 1600 block of West Florida Avenue when he lost control of the car, which flipped onto its roof before sliding into the pole.

Police charged Alvarez, who was wearing a seatbelt, with driving while intoxicated.

NEW: Midland Civil Air Patrol chartered in 1969

(From 1B)

CAP Capt. Ralph Lang, a Midland pilot and geological engineer said, "We need the strength of youth and the wisdom of age" to make the patrol work.

Lang, who has been flying since 1980, joined the CAP in 1984.

"I wanted to continue flying," he said, "and I wanted to do some charitable work. The Civil Air Patrol looked to me like the best combination."

2nd Lt. Jeff Olson, a sales engineer who is the squadron's public affairs and flight officer, said the CAP offered him "a good way ... to continue and further my aviation education" while associating with people in aviation and in public service.

2nd Lt. Ginny Basinger, a former DC-3 airline flight attendant, is an CAP observer.

"I love flying," she said. "Because I do enjoy flying, it's comforting to know that if something happens, someone is out there looking for you."

Each year, the Midland CAP members conduct about three search-and-rescue missions for lost aircraft, including those that flew into turbulent weather and either broke up in midair or went out of control and crashed.

"The most serious accidents we see are associated with thunderstorms," Lang said.

CAP crews go aloft when emergency-locator transmitters (ELTs) in aircraft are set off. ELTs are designed to transmit a downed aircraft's location in the event of a crash.

However, they may be set of by a "hard" landing or by someone accidentally triggering the ELT or jarring it inside or outside the airplane.

Nationwide, 97 percent of ELT alarms are no more than a "wolf cry," O'Mahoney said. "We get calls in the middle of the night quite often."

In West Texas, "wolf cries" make up 80 percent of the alarms.

"The problem is, we don't know if it's the 97 percent or the 3 percent" that are real alarms, O'Mahoney said. "We have to assume it's the 3 percent, and we have to go look."

To locate missing aircraft, CAP members fly grids, usually about 500 feet above the terrain, using either the CAP-owned T-41 (Cessna 172 Hawk) or a privately-owned airplane.

If there is no emergency-locator transmitter signal from a downed aircraft to help search-and-rescue crews find the aircraft, crews fly to the location of the last known radar contact of the aircraft or fly the missing aircraft's intended route.

To prepare for those missions, CAP members undergo training both on the ground and in the air. Crews fly practice search-and-rescue missions several times a year.

In a search over a wide area, the CAP sometimes will dispatch 50 airplanes, O'Mahoney said. "Trying to coordinate that is an incredible job."

"The bigger the mission, the more important the training," Lang said.

"But it's important even in the tiniest of missions."

From his experience on CAP missions, Lang said that "most of the people we end up looking for needed to plan their flight better and to pay attention to weather."

The CAP meets at 7 p.m. each Thursday at the CAP headquarters at Midland Air Park.

EXPECTS: Thomas' 'race had everything to do with it,' Jordan says

(From 1B)

Jordan said she expects Thomas to be confirmed as a Supreme Court justice, but she has not decided whether she will support him.

Jordan said she is studying his background and will announce her decision as soon as next week.

"Unless there is some extraordinary, egregious revelation, that nomination will be confirmed," Jordan said. "I will let you know via the media whether I add my voice pro or con. I have to be very careful with what I say because it may make a difference to somebody."

She said she would be willing to testify at his Senate confirmation hearing. In 1987, Jordan spoke against nominee Robert Bork, who was denied.

Jordan, who was in South Africa when she heard about Justice Thurgood Marshall's retirement, said she and a colleague immediately knew appellate court Judge Thomas would be President Bush's nominee.

"It was just given," said Jordan, now ethics adviser to Gov. Ann Richards. "It should have surprised no one that the first tap went to Clarence Thomas."

Although Jordan said she has no plans to meet with Thomas, she said someone who knows both her and Thomas asked her if she would be interested in speaking to Thomas. She said she "certainly" would, especially, "if he's on the wrong side. I might be able to change his mind."

Lifetime Siding & Window offers sizzling summer specials

Neil Letkeman, owner of Lifetime Siding and Window Co., stands in front of the Thomason Street home of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Dawson. The home was updated with vinyl siding and storm windows. For a free estimate on quality siding, soffit, fascia or other home improvements, please call Lifetime Siding and Window at 689-0307.

Don't miss out on the money saving specials offered by Neil Letkeman and Lifetime Siding and Window Co. Through the end of August, take advantage of 20 percent off vinyl siding and soffit and fascia systems. Storm windows installed, up to 90 united inches, are priced at just $75.00 each. Storm doors are $180 each installed, for full view or operators (standard sizes). All prices good until August 31.

"Our superior installation methods contribute largely to the success of Lifetime Siding and Window Co.," says Lifetime owner Neil Letkeman. "Today's homeowners are looking for the highest quality products at the lowest prices."

However, in order to keep costs down, many siding companies are resorting to lower quality materials and faster installation methods such as stapling and nailing. These methods are standard in the industry. But are they the best? Lifetime Siding and Window doesn't think so!

"We start by replacing any rotten and warped boards," explained Letkeman, "and we refasten loose boards. We make sure that all the wood on the house is in good shape before we start installing our siding."

When installing siding, Lifetime Siding specialists use screws and rivets in all critical areas of installation. It does not take an engineer to figure out that screws and rivets secure siding better than staples and nails.

These installation methods, together with highest quality lifetime warrantied steel or vinyl siding, will give you a permanent solution to your painting problems. Just call Lifetime Siding and Window Co. at 689-0307 for a free, money-saving estimate.

That's what Mr. and Mrs. Roger Robinson of 4616 Ric did, and Lifetime Siding and Window Co. installed steel siding, soffit, fascia, storm windows and a storm door. "Neil did some excellent work. We have no complaints," said Robinson. "He was prompt and did really good work for us. We took the advice of some of my co-workers and we also looked over some of Neil's work in the neighborhood."

Lifetime Siding and Window Co. did an excellent job for us," said Mrs. Johnson. "We recommend Neil and his company to anyone."

Furthermore, the residents of the home in today's photo, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Dawson, added, "We got two estimates and Neil's prices were much lower. Our neighbors recommended him also. The work was fantastic, and Neil is friendly and dependable."

For energy efficiency, protection for your home and family, noise and dust reduction as well as overall savings, Letkeman also recommends storm and replacement windows for your home. Storm windows, which are great for insulation, can come with tinted glass. And replacement dual glass thermal break windows are solid investments for the long term.

If you've ever considered siding your home or installing new windows, this is the best time of the year to get a free, no obligation estimate. Call Lifetime Siding and Window Company at 689-0307.

"We would like to thank all of our customers for putting their trust in us and making our success possible! Thank you!" said Letkeman.

Midland's Vacuum Cleaner City keeps up with changing times

Times are changing. And, by the year 2000, there will be some revolutionary changes in home care products.

No one cleaning system will be able to keep pace with the changes in the flooring industry, said Jeanie Shafer, owner of Vacuum Cleaner City, located in Midland at 3304 West Illinois.

"But we plan to stay abreast of the changes by keeping up with the new products that all the companies will put out," said Mrs. Shafer.

She said that Vacuum Cleaner City's three locations will continue to feature sales, service and repairs on all Hoover, Eureka, Royal, Panasonic, Riccar, Filter Queen, Kirby, Rainbow, Regina, Oreck, Electrolux, Singer, Tri-Star and other lesser-known brands.

That diversity underlines Vacuum Cleaner City's commitment to serve its valued customers.

"We give more value for our customers' dollar by offering free extended warranties, in-house service after the sale, providing top quality models not found in discount or department stores," noted Mrs. Shafer, "and we have a good trade-in allowance for their old vacuum cleaners."

She and her trained service staff guarantee their service clinic work for a year. And the regular $34.95 service special — when they repair and completely service your vacuum — is on special for just $22.95, plus parts, if needed.

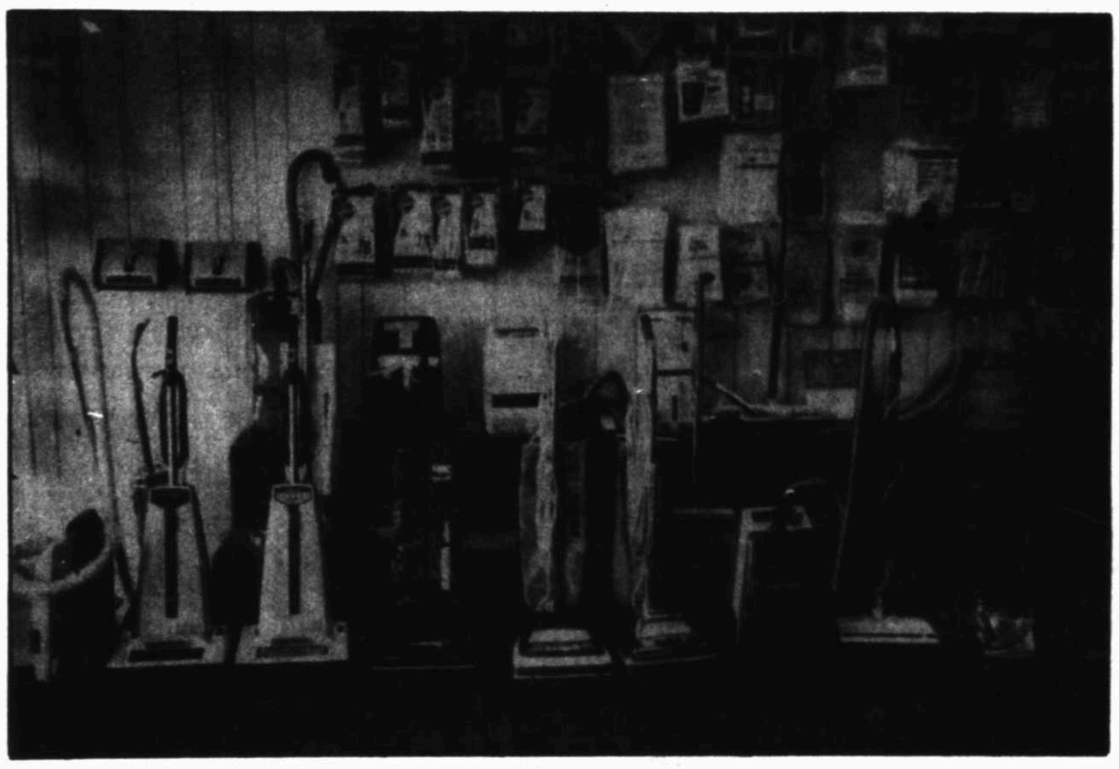
Genuine bags, belts, parts and accessories are critical to keep equipment working the way it did when it was new, said Mrs. Shafer.

Vacuum Cleaner City also is Midland's best source for information on the water vacuum, a vacuum that uses water as a filter.

"Before you decide to buy one," she added, "call us at 699-6505 and we will give you all of the facts to help you make the right choice."

Advice like that will be more important than ever if the expected dramatic improvement in cleaning industry products takes place during this decade.

Vacuum Cleaner City has three convenient locations — Vacuum Cleaner City at 3304 W. Illinois, Vacuum Cleaner City at 3612 N. Dixie in Odessa and Broadmoor Vacuum at 2606 N. Grandview in Odessa. The stores are open 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturdays.



Since no one cleaning system can keep pace with the rapid changes in the flooring industry, Vacuum Cleaner City rises to the challenge by stocking and servicing an extensive collection of cleaning systems.

J&S Commercial Electric: Total resources plugged into firm base

Odds are good that, at this very moment, someone in Midland or Odessa is picking up that telephone to call an electrician — to repair a faulty light switch, install a ceiling fan, rewire a home or wire a control system for a swimming pool.

So, who are they calling?

Today, more and more people are dialing a new number — J&S Commercial Electric at 563-2209.

If the name J&S sounds familiar, it should. J&S Commercial Electric is a new division of J&S Oilfield Electric — a Permian Basin firm that has since 1975 built its reputation as the Oil Patch's electrician.

That tie-in is the reason why homeowners are discovering that J&S Commercial can match or beat most of their competitors' prices.

"A lot of other companies are just one- or two-man operations," said Charles Cunningham, one of J&S's three senior partners.

"Where we have the edge on them," said Cunningham, "is that when we need to we can call on our own equipment — whether it's a bucket or boom truck, a hole digger or a ditcher — instead of having to add on the cost of renting a unit."

J&S Commercial Electric also is tapped into the parent company's buying base, he said.

"Our prices are considerably cheaper than most because we probably buy $40,000 worth of electrical materials every month," said Cunningham. "That gives us a volume discount and we pass the savings along to the customer."

All work is fully insured — again, an advantage of J&S Commercial's ties with its parent firm, J&S Oilfield Electric. The company has a $3 million liability coverage.

"Most small one-man outfits can't afford to carry the amount of liability insurance that we do," said Cunningham, adding that jobs which require bonds are a specialty.

Terry Shipman, the licensed electrician who manages J&S Commercial Electric, is a specialist in commercial and residential electric service.

Shipman can call on J&S's state of the art technology to solve the difficult wiring problems that prompt other electricians to throw up their hands in frustration. The firm's computer technician can access their extensive computer facilities to solve the toughest wiring and control problems. It is not surprising that one of Shipman's specialties is installing sophisticated controls.

J&S Commercial Electric Company is located at 7007 County Road 1284 South, in the Warfield Industrial Complex area. It offers competitive pricing on all services.

For knowledgeable electrical field service installations (with or without construction equipment) and troubleshooting, call 563-2209, 1-800-749-2209 or FAX 563-5422. J&S Commercial Electric also has a 24 hour answering service for your convenience.

Whether installing a simple box or wiring a complex electrical control system, Terry Shipman of J&S Commercial Electric knows he can call on the varied resources of the parent firm — J&S Oilfield Electric.

STARS: Hartman lends creativity to planetarium's star shows

the show."

Hartman will be the conceptual artist behind the scenes of the planetarium's future star shows.

"It requires an element of entertainment and some bells and whistles," he said. "But the purpose of the planetarium is to educate first. We can't let the bells and whistles get in the way of that."

Bells and whistles or no, Hartman plans to produce a multi-media show that will honor the opening of the Confederate Air Force Museum in a big way.

One of Hartman's office walls, currently serving as a storyboard, is covered with an array of Leonardo Da Vinci's sketches, script notes and other sketches of early airplanes.

The storyboard displays the initial stages of the program "On Wings," which will celebrate the history of flight.

"We (the planetarium and its owner and operator, the Museum of the Southwest) are not officially involved with the CAF opening," Hartman said. "But 'On Wings' will be our informal welcoming for the CAF Museum."

Hartman said 'On Wings' will be ready in September.

"There is so much to do — if I think about it — it is overwhelming. We are riding a thin line to get this ready."

The planetarium director said getting original music for the show — to avoid copyright fees — is one of the most difficult aspects of pulling the show together. "That and getting enough volunteers to help with the production," he said. "You just put it all together and pray."

Hartman said he has spent months composing the script.

When not using his creativity to fashion works of art, Hartman chalked up college hours and planetarium work to acquire a strong background in astronomy.

"There have been a few interruptions — like the eclipse (last Thursday)," he said. "The turnout exceeded all our expectations. Our security guard counted 1,300 people and everyone had a good time."

Before pursuing his MFA and coming to Midland, Hartman was employed as a planetarium assistant, and later, as director of the J.M. McDonald Planetarium in Hastings. He said he decided to do his graduate work at Texas Tech because of its "exceptional art faculty."

His journey from Nebraska through Lubbock to Midland was a matter of happenstance, he said.

"I was really looking for a professorship in art," he said.

Of course he did have a background that included presenting more than 300 programs on astronomy to groups, working in a planetarium, winning art awards in national exhibits for paintings and producing several planetarium shows.

"My interest in science actually goes back farther," he said. "My older brother started science clubs in the third and fourth grade."

All those years of exploring science and art will culminate in planetarium presentations "specific to Midland" and some shows that will coordinate with curriculum used in Midland public schools, Hartman said.

The director eventually hopes to distribute Marian Blakemore Planetarium presentations to other planetariums.

"Then we also are kicking around other ideas like producing laser light shows," he said.

When not star gazing or visualizing star shows, Hartman likes to pursue his interests in bicycling, reading, camping, watercolor painting and Tae Kwon Do. (He holds a black belt in Tae Kwon Do from the U.S. Karate Association.)

The 30-year-old director also has three sons who live in Austin with their mother.

"I also try to find time for my sons," he said.

Much of Hartman's time is spent being creative, however. "And it overlaps into my job," he said. "Sometimes I do so many creative things here that I don't even want to pick up a paintbrush when I get home.

"It's great."

Dravecky

A new career

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Former San Francisco Giants pitcher Dave Dravecky's new career is public speaking, at least during his recovery from the amputation of his throwing arm and shoulder in a struggle against cancer.

Looking fit and rested, Dravecky said Monday he views last month's surgery as only a temporary setback.

"There's adjustments that I have to make, but there's nothing out there that I don't want to do," the 35-year-old Dravecky said at his first news conference since his release from Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York on June 24.

Although his future won't include baseball, Dravecky said he will swim, play golf and tennis, and engage in other sports he was unable to enjoy in the past because of his baseball contract.

He also has a full schedule of speaking engagements.

Cancer was diagnosed in September 1988, and Dravecky underwent surgery to remove a tumor and nearly half of the deltoid muscle in his left arm. He made a dramatic comeback to the major leagues on Aug. 10, 1989, at Candlestick Park. But five days later, he broke his arm while pitching in Montreal.

He broke the arm again in October 1989.

Tulsa pair three-hits Angels

■ Midland and San Antonio share division lead, still no word on Valenzuela's starting date.

By Joe Wyatt
Staff Writer

The thrill-filled, comeback-oriented series between the Drillers and the Angels climaxed rather quietly Monday night at Angels Stadium, where Tulsa right-handers David Perez and Bobby Reed combined on a three-hit, 4-2 victory over the hosts.

Perez, Tulsa's leader in innings pitched this year with 95, gave up two runs on two hits through seven innings to up his record to 3-10.

Reed, in his first outing since going on the disabled list May 3, checked the Angels on one hit over the last two innings to record his first save, and the Drillers — who dropped the first three games of the series — departed with a 3-2 deficit.

Midland ace Don Vidmar (8-3) got off to a rocky start, allowing three runs in the first inning and another tally in the third. But Vidmar, who entered the game with a 4-0 record against Eastern Division teams, regained his form and gave up just five hits and did not walk a batter after the third.

It was Vidmar's second complete game this year.

"I thought Vidmar, except for the first inning, pitched pretty well," said Midland manager Don Long, whose Angels fell back into a first-place tie with San Antonio with a 12-11 second-half mark. "He wasn't hit hard, he completed the game and he gave out bullpen a rest.

"We played real well in this series," Long added. "We had to comeback to win two or theee games and we did that.

"We just didn't hit the ball real well tonight, but you have to give them (Drillers) some credit for that."

Midland scored both its runs in the third inning. Larry Gonzales drew a lead-off walk, moved to second on Reggie Williams' single to center and scored on Kevin Flora's double to left-centerfield.

Williams reached home when Perez missed the bag for an error at first base on Mark Howie's ground ball, but Perez gunned down Flora trying to score on the play from second.

Some Texas schools eye 'pay-to-play'

■ While three school districts in the Fort Worth area consider charging a fee to play high school sports, nothing of the sort is being looked at in Midland.

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

Despite the possibility in other parts of the state, Midland high school students will not be asked to pay a fee to be allowed to participate in athletics, according to Midland Independent School District athletic director Jack Tayrien.

In an effort to make up lost money under the state's new school funding formula, some Texas schools, including three districts in the Fort Worth area, have the matter under consideration.

"I haven't heard anything about that. I really don't see that happening here. Of course, things could change," Tayrien said Monday. "I have heard of it happening in other parts of the country, but this is the first time I've heard it mentioned in connection with a Texas school."

In an attempt to even out the distribution of state funds to local districts, school districts with higher revenues from local property taxes will receive less money from the state.

MISD, which may stand to increase its funding under the new system, has not resorted to "pay-to-play" fees, at least for now. But others have.

The fee is being mulled by the Arlington, Grapevine-Colleyville and Southlake Carroll school systems, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported on Monday, and could include other extracurricular activities such as band.

Bill Farney, athletic director of the University Interscholastic League, which governs academic and athletic competition among the state's public schools, said the concept is under consideration all across the state.

Students who want to play high school football might be asked to pay a fee of up to $50 to cover the cost of his uniform, shoes, etc.

American wins Senior title

■ Midland American overcomes a defeat in the first game of the District 3 Senior League championship to win the 'if' game and advance to regionals.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Midland National was a major thorn, but Midland American is headed to the Senior League Sectional tournament in Abilene after winning the District 3 baseball tournament title Monday at Simon Field.

The scrappy Midland National team pushed the American squad to the limit, winning the first game of the championship series by a 9-5 margin. However, Midland American won the forced "if" game rather easily, 13-5.

When American arrives at the Senior League Sectionals in Abilene Monday, it will face an Arlington team at 5 p.m. at T-Bone Winters Field in the first round of the double elimination tournament.

Midland American, playing somewhat dead-headed in the first game with four critical errors, got a major spark in the second game from third baseman David Romero, who knocked in four runs in the first three innings of play as the Americans jumped to a quick 12-0 lead.

"I think everybody was down in that first game. Our dugout was dead," noted Romero of the first game loss. "But we came back determined and we're on our way to Abilene.

"We took a little rest and told each other between games that we couldn't get beat again now."

American manager Gary Jordan agreed, "First of all, that National team doesn't know when to quit. I have the greatest respect for every one of them. But we did lose our intensity level. This team can be as good as it wants to be and will be a good representative for Midland."

Brian Cordova went the distance for the Americans in the second game. He had a one-hitter going into

Seles emerges from seclusion

World's top-ranked woman reveals much-debated injury

Associated Press

MAHWAH, N.J. — Monica Seles, the Greta Garbo of tennis, ended her self-imposed silence and seclusion on Monday.

In a statement issued by her Cleveland-based agent, International Management Group, Seles revealed that the celebrated injury which led to her withdrawal from Wimbledon last month was "shin splints and a slight stress fracture in my left leg."

Seles, whose whereabouts and health have been a mystery, is scheduled to reemerge this week for an exhibition event in northern New Jersey.

Her brother and manager, Zoltan, confirmed Monday that the world's top-ranked player will play in the Pathmark Tennis Classic at Ramapo College. Although Seles was scheduled to play in the hardcourt event, tournament director John Korff wasn't absolutely certain she was coming until he got the word from Zoltan in a phone call from Seles' home in Sarasota, Fla.

"He said Monica is fine, that she's practicing and playing great," Korff said. "He said she's looking forward to playing here."

Seles, yet to speak publicly about her withdrawal from Wimbledon, will hold a news conference at Ramapo on Wednesday, the day before she plays her opening match in the tournament.

In the statement issued Monday by IMG, Seles said she might have gone public earlier, "but I did not want to make a statement with contradicting facts in it because I might have misled my fans and the public. Now that I have a clear idea of what my injury is and how to prevent it from happening in the future, I feel comfortable speaking about it. I do not know the exact medical terms, but the doctor who has worked with me diagnosed shin splints and a slight stress fracture in my left leg. The injury first occurred in March 1991, and at the French Open during practice I hit my left leg with my racket on the same spot and reinjured the leg."

Seles, 17, hasn't played a match since beating Arantxa Sanchez Vicario in the French Open final on June 8. Citing an unspecified injury caused by a "minor accident," she withdrew from Wimbledon three days before the tournament started on June 24 and then dropped out of sight.

Since then, there have been Seles sightings in Colorado and Florida and rampant rumors about her physical status, including reports that she was pregnant, suffering from shin splints and recovering from an auto accident.

"I would also like to take this opportunity to clarify and clear up all the speculation and rumors," Seles' statement said. "Without dignifying any of the specific rumors, I would like to definitively state that I have had absolutely no problems other than a leg injury.

"My leg is now feeling fine, and I am very excited about playing tennis again. I look forward to strengthening my No. 1 ranking and most importantly having fun and enjoying myself."

Because of the mystery surrounding Seles, her appearance in Mahwah could turn into a media circus. The tournament has issued 141 press credentials, three times more than last year when Steffi Graf and Jennifer Capriati were the main attractions.

"The media mob will include reporters from England, Italy, Germany, Spain and Australia.

LeMond remains in front

Associated Press

QUIMPER, France — Greg LeMond's nearest rival in the Tour de France was slowed by a fever Monday, allowing the American to retain his overall lead in the Tour de France for the third straight stage.

An unexplained illness swept through Dutch rider Erik Breukink's PDM team, forcing five of his eight teammates to quit the 10th stage. Breukink himself rode with a 100 degree fever and struggled to finish the stage. He dropped to third, 73 seconds behind LeMond.

"It's too bad that Breukink left this morning feeling bad and so did the others," said Jaw Gisber, the PDM team manager. "I hope that by tomorrow they won't be too weak so that they can carry on the race."

The situation is bad enough that the remaining three members of the team are considering dropping out.

Ranger relievers blow it again

Associated Press

DETROIT — Tony Phillips led off the ninth inning with Detroit's fourth home run of the game, lifting the Tigers to an 8-7 victory over the Texas Rangers Monday night.

AL

Phillips hit a full count pitch from Mike Jeffcoat (3-2) into the second deck in left field for his eighth homer of the season.

Mike Henneman (6-2), now 31-6 in Tiger Stadium, pitched a perfect ninth inning. Jeffcoat retired three batters in the eighth.

Lloyd Moseby, Mickey Tettleton and Lou Whitaker also homered as the Tigers increased their major league-leading total to 114. Ruben Sierra and Jeff Huson homered for the Rangers.

Sierra hit a three-run homer in the Texas first before there were any outs. Rusty Meacham walked Julio Franco on four pitches, Rafael Palmeiro followed with a single and Sierra hit his 13th home run.

Alan Trammell singled home a run in the Detroit first and Moseby hit a two-run homer that tied it in the second.

Trammell started the third with a single off Gerald Alexander, Cecil Fielder reached on an error by Palmeiro at first base and Tettleton hit his 17th home run for a 6-3 lead.

The Rangers narrowed it to 6-5 in the fourth when Ivan Rodriguez singled with two outs and Huson hit his second career homer, his first ever on the road.

Twins 11, Brewers 7

MILWAUKEE — Scott Erickson struggled in his return from the disabled list, but Minnesota survived on home runs by Greg Gagne and Shane Mack to beat Milwaukee.

Erickson gave up four hits, four walks and a hit batter in four innings, and left with an 8-5 lead. Greg Vaughn hit a solo home run in the third inning and Franklin Stubbs hit a grand slam in the fourth.

Erickson went into the game with a 12-3 record and a major league-leading 1.83 ERA. He was sidelined with a sore elbow, and activated earlier Monday. He lost his previous start June 29 to Chicago, ending his 12-game winning streak.

Mark Guthrie (6-5) pitched two innings for the victory and Steve Bedrosian got his fourth save. The Twins won for the fourth time in five games since the All-Star break.

A' 6, Indians 1

OAKLAND, Calif. — Andy Hawkins pitched a four-hitter and Mike Gallego homered and doubled as Oakland beat Cleveland.

Hawkins (4-5) struck out three and walked three in his first complete game since last July 27. He improved to 4-3 since joining the Athletics on May 18, and has not allowed more than three earned runs in any of his last seven starts.

Mariners 5, Yankees 1

SEATTLE — Edgar Martinez tripled, singled and doubled in his first three at-bats and Seattle exploited two New York Yankees errors for its first three runs.

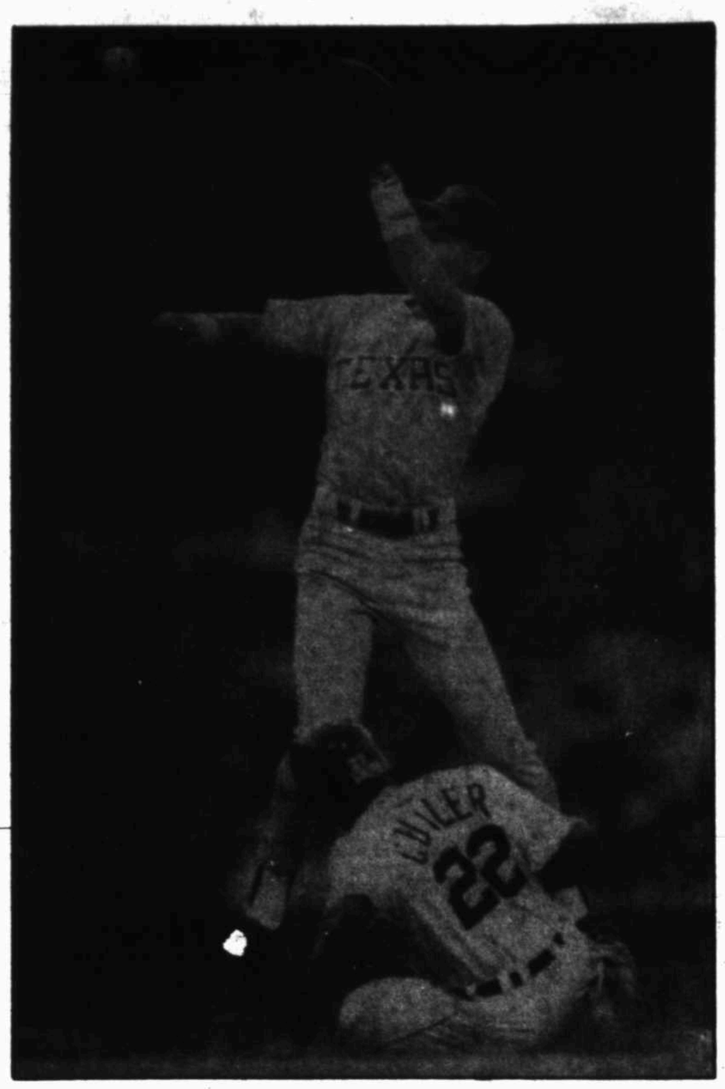
Bill Krueger (6-3) lost his shutout bid in the seventh when Bernie Williams homered over the centerfield fence, his second homer of the season.

For the second straight game, Martinez had a chance to become the first Mariners player in history to hit for the cycle but, after seven consecutive hits in two games, lined out to center in the eighth.

Blue Jays 5, Royals 3

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Kelly Gruber lined a single over a drawn-in infield with the bases loaded in the 12th inning, sending Toronto past Kansas City.

After the Blue Jays escaped a bases-loaded, no-out jam in the 11th without allowing a run.



AP Laserphoto

Texas shortstop Jeff Huson, here hauling a throw as Detroit's Milt Cuyler steals second, had three hits with a home run.

White Sox 7, Red Sox 1

CHICAGO — Frank Thomas hit two home runs and Carlton Fisk capped a five-run sixth inning with a two-run double, leading Ramon Garcia and the Chicago White Sox to a 7-1 victory over Boston.

The win was the second straight for the White Sox, who boosted their record to 46-39.

Daulton hits grand slam, Dykstra returns

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Darren Daulton had his first career grand slam and five RBIs as the Philadelphia Phillies overcame a five-run deficit Monday night to beat Los Angeles 9-8, handing the Dodgers their fifth straight defeat.

NL

Lenny Dykstra, back after missing 61 games with injuries sustained in an automobile accident, hit the second of his two singles to start the seventh inning, stole second and scored on Dale Murphy's RBI single to break a 7-7 tie.

Steve Searcy (1-0), a minor league free agent signed Monday, pitched two innings to earn the victory. Reliever Tim Crews (2-2) worked 1 1-3 innings and was charged with the loss. Mitch Williams pitched the ninth for his 16th save, although he gave up a run on a double by Dave Hansen and an infield out by Chris Gwynn.

Pirates 8, Astros 0

PITTSBURGH — Randy Tomlin had his first career shutout, and Andy Van Slyke and Bobby Bonilla combined to drive in seven runs as the Pittsburgh Pirates won their sixth straight game, beating the Houston Astros.

Tomlin (4-3), given a 6-0 lead after two innings, pitched a five-hitter for his first victory since May 7 and the Pirates' 13th in 17 games. Tomlin struck out six and walked four in handing Houston its fourth straight loss.

Van Slyke had four RBIs to tie his career high.

Giants 4, Mets 3

NEW YORK — Don Robinson won at Shea Stadium for the first time in nine years and Matt Williams hit his third home run in two games as San Francisco beat the New York Mets.

Robinson (5-6) allowed one run and four hits in seven innings and won for the fourth time in six starts. He struck out five and walked three as he sent New York to its second straight loss after a 10-game winning streak.

Robinson had gone 0-2 in 15 appearances at Shea Stadium since July 29, 1982.

Cardinals 5, Reds 2

CINCINNATI — Geronimo Pena led a 12-hit attack with a homer and an RBI double as St. Louis beat Cincinnati in a matchup of teams that hadn't won since the All-Star break.

Gerald Perry and Ray Lankford had three hits each — Perry had a solo homer, Lankford an RBI triple — to help St. Louis snap a four-game losing streak. The Reds sustained their season-high seventh straight loss.

Omar Olivares (3-1) allowed six hits in six innings to end a slump by St. Louis starters, who hadn't won since July 3. The Cardinals' rotation had gone eight games without a victory since Olivares beat Philadelphia.

Lee Smith gave up an RBI-single to Glenn Braggs in the eighth before closing the game for his National League-leading 24th save in 27 chances.

Cubs 6, Braves 4

ATLANTA — Greg Maddux won his first game since June 9, and Chico Walker had three RBIs and scored twice as the surging Chicago Cubs cooled off Atlanta.

Walker scored a run and had a two-run double, and Luis Salazar homered as the Cubs chased Pete Smith (1-3), who failed to record an out in the second inning. Walker, who had three hits, also singled in a run in the sixth, and later scored when Andre Dawson drew a bases-loaded walk from Rick Mahler.

Maddux (7-6) gave up a two-out double to Terry Pendleton in the first, and retired the next 12 batters before Brian Hunter's single in the fifth.

Expos 3, Padres 0

MONTREAL — Rookie Chris Haney got his first major league victory, and Larry Walker hit a two-run homer as Montreal won its fifth straight game, beating slump-ridden San Diego.

The victory was Montreal's seventh in eight games and continued its domination of National League West clubs. The Expos, who swept front-running Los Angeles in a four-game weekend series, are 30-13 against the West for the best inter-division record in the majors.

Haney, (1-3), who started the season in Class AA, allowed seven hits in 6 1-3 innings, striking out two and walking two. Jeff Fassero worked 2 2-3 innings, for his third save.

Andy Benes (4-10) gave up six hits in six innings for his fourth straight loss. It also was the sixth loss in seven games and 13th in 17 for the Padres.

Mets get Expos' Burke for Darling

NEW YORK (AP) — Ron Darling, the senior player on the New York Mets, was traded to the Montreal Expos with a minor-league pitcher on Monday for reliever Tim Burke.

Darling, a 30-year-old right-hander, knew for weeks that a trade was coming, but said he was surprised that he was going to Montreal. He was about to be dropped from the Mets' starting rotation in favor of Sid Fernandez, who is scheduled to come off the disabled list Friday.

"It's better for me to have a chance to pitch every fifth day rather than not pitch and mop up," Darling said. "I was not going to play a significant role down the stretch. I didn't want to play a mopup role."

The Mets called Boston last week about a trade, and a scout from the Red Sox came down Sunday to watch Darling pitch. The Mets and Red Sox had talked in the past about a deal for Darling, but Boston was unwilling to offer much this time.

Majic back; Bavaro, Quick out

NFL

Associated Press

Don Majkowski's back in camp, Zeke Mowatt has a new job and Mark Bavaro and Mike Quick are out of the NFL.

Majkowski, Green Bay's quarterback who held out for 45 days last season and then injured his shoulder, signed a one-year deal worth at least $1.7 million with the Packers on Monday in time to attend the first day of training camp.

Mowatt, a tight end with New England who was fined $14,500 last season for his part in the sexual harassment of sportswriter Lisa Olson, signed with the Super Bowl champion New York Giants.

Meanwhile, the NFL lost two top receivers in Bavaro, the Giants tight end placed on the waived-injured list with a knee injury, and Quick, the Philadelphia Eagles wide receiver who retired because of a series of leg injuries.

Last season, Majkowski signed a $1.5 million contract a week before the start of the season. But on Nov. 18, he suffered a torn rotator cuff in a game against Phoenix. The Packers were 5-5 at the time, but finished 6-10 after Majkowski went out of the lineup.

"I missed playing a lot. I missed being a part of the team," Majkowski said. "When you're injured it's a lonely feeling. So I was just real excited to get back in right away and take this team as far as it could go."

Bavaro was waived three days after doctors examined his knee, which was operated on Feb. 18 for avascual necrosis. The condition is caused by a lack of blood flow to the knee and causes the bone to begin rotting.

Giants coach Ray Handley said team doctors have advised Bavaro not to play again.

The decision to waive Bavaro cancels the team's obligation to pay him his reported $750,000 salary, which was not guaranteed. Bavaro will now receive $65,000 as an injury settlement.

Bavaro was the Giants second-leading receiver with 33 receptions last year.

Tall City thinclads reach Jr. Olympics

Staff Report

DALLAS — Four members of the Tall City Christian Track Club qualified over the weekend for the 1991 National T.A.C. Junior Olympics, which will be held at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, July 23-28.

Qualifying at the University of Texas at Arlington were Cynthia Redic in the shot put and triple jumpers Tekeira Strambler, Everett Searuggs and Wesley Davis.

Davis used a 39-8 and Searuggs sailed 40-8 to take first places in their respective age groups.

Strambler turned in a second-place effort of 33-6, while Redic heaved the shot 36-8, also good for a second-place finish.

FEES: Arlington costs high already kid," Arlington Sam Houston football coach Ken Ozee said. "I think your more affluent schools, it may not. At Highland Park (an affluent district in Dallas County), if you have a participation fee, big deal. But we don't have that."

Arlington district figures indicate that a $10 fee per activity or sport would generate $94,060, or 10.4 percent of the athletic department maintenance and operational budget. A $95 fee would generate $896,155, or 100 percent of the budget, based upon the number of participants during 1989-90.

In Arlington, students already pay for such things as towel laundering, uniform cleaning, extra uniforms and training camps. But under the user-fee system, students might be charged for almost every activity that is not part of the regular curriculum.

At Southlake Carroll, school board members are considering charging fees for science labs, band instruments and art, Superintendent Annette Griffin said.

"You hate to see it happen," Farney said.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

SENIORS: American heads for Abilene

(From 1C)

the fifth inning, but got tagged for five runs as the Nationals made a brief run at a comeback. Cordova struckout only three Nationals, but his major problem was with walks, putting six batters on base with the walk, including four walks in the five-run fifth.

But he had plenty of help as the American bats produced 11 hits. Alex Hale drove in two runs and Jeff Pursley another. American scored seven runs in the second and four in the third.

The Nationals, who dropped a 5-2 decision to the Americans earlier in the tournament, jumped to an 8-0 lead in the third inning of the first game, scoring five of them in the third.

Johno Summers went the distance for the victory while Raymond Martinez and Ryan Bradberry each had two RBIs. The Nationals scored nine runs on only six hits. Felix Gonzalez also had an RBI.

The Nationals got 10 hits off Summers, but couldn't put together any key hits until late in the game. David Galvan drove in two runs while Joseph, who had three hits, drove in another as did reserve Billy Medina with two hits.

LITTLE LEAGUE

Jason Rogers was 4-for-4 with 7 RBI for Midland Mid-City in a 19-2 win over Odessa Salinas in the winners bracket. Eric Eschberger checked Odessa on three hits. George Llantz took the loss.

Midland North Central won its winner's bracket game over Odessa Jim Parker, 8-4, behind the pitching of Stephen Westphal, who also turned in a double. Rory Couch was the losing hurler.

In the loser's bracket, Big Spring International downed Odessa Sherwood 6-4 as Robert Valencia homered to back Gilbert Morales' pitching. And El Paso defeated Midland Eastern despite Rudy Esquivel's homer.

The tourney continues at 6 p.m. today.

JUNIOR LEAGUE

Ryan Elder doubled to back Keith Lant's pitching as Midland National downed Lamesa 5-2 in the loser's bracket. Bobby Mendoza lost for Lamesa.

And Midland American defeated Odessa Salinas 11-7 as Clay Johnston doubled and Britt Hopper won on the mound. Conrad Cortez was the losing pitcher.

Midland National and Odessa Salinas square off at 8 p.m. tonight, with the championship game set for 5 p.m. Wednesday.

ANGELS: Fernando likely to pitch near end of the week

(From 1C)

Tulsa banged out its three first-inning runs on Jeff Frye's lead-off homer to left field and David Green's two-RBI double just inside the first-base bag.

Kevin Belcher upped Tulsa's lead to 4-2 in the third inning when he scored on one of three Midland's three double plays.

ANGEL DUST: Don Long said it remained uncertain as to when former Cy Young award winner Fernando Valenzuela would take the mound for Midland.

"He threw yesterday on the side and he'll throw again tomorrow (Tuesday) and see how he feels. He won't start for the next couple of games," Long said. "It'll probably be more toward the end of the week."

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

TUESDAY, JULY 16, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Good luck and new monetary gains are coming your way! Get your financial act together in October. Prime investment opportunities arise in November. Travel for business or pleasure as the winter holidays approach. The business contacts you make in January of 1992 could lead to new emotional ties. Next March and April feature exciting entrepreneurial possibilities. Choose partners whose talents complement your own.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actresses Barbara Stanwyck and Ginger Rogers, violinist Pinchas Zukerman, actor Ruben Blades.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Unexpected changes in business may leave you feeling perplexed. Be patient. Your financial fortunes are on the upswing. Although an interesting job offer is tempting, it might be better to stay put.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You radiate confidence and charm today. A health problem or emotional situation deserves your immediate attention. Promote greater harmony at home and a close relationship will thrive. Forget past omissions and mistakes.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Sparks could fly today. You send a non-verbal signal that hits its target. The right person responds. A change of scenery will boost your spirits this evening. Discuss your plans with mate.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Increase your participation in a work or community project. You could come up with the ideal plan! Postpone buying a pet unless sure you have enough time to keep it happy and healthy.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): It is important that your work be consistently good now. Higher-ups are keeping a close watch while deciding who should move up. Good eating habits pay off handsomely where your health is concerned.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A professional appearance is important to your customers. Study an investment scheme very carefully. If you spend a lot of time on household tasks, purchase something that will make your chores easier.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Romance is a source of delight. Give more thought to putting down roots. Discuss the future with your loved ones. A drastic budget revision may be necessary to make your dream come true.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Being too direct could rub someone the wrong way. Be subtle. A real estate investment will prove especially profitable if you take an expert's advice. All is fair in love and romance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You should be feeling more optimistic now. That restless feeling disappears. Public opinion will influence what you do later today. Make your vacation plans now to get a lower rate on tickets.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Someone loves you more than you think. People react strongly to what you do and say. Curb your temper. A startling development could result in new financial benefits. Play a waiting game.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Seize an exciting opportunity to expand your horizons today. Changes in your lifestyle and relationships are indicative of how far you are ready to go. Travel may be necessary.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your career moves into high gear this month. Many people will be making demands on your time and, perhaps, even your money. Guard against scattering your energies. Focus on developing positive new ideas.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are both highly imaginative and tender-hearted. Brilliant thinking and originality make these Cancerians natural leaders despite their innate shyness. They will even force themselves to be the life of the party if the occasion demands it. Count on these sentimental youngsters to treasure the past and family traditions. Although they would rather give advice than follow it, they usually listen respectfully to the advice of their elders. They are eager to make their parents proud!

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ◇

The language of mathematics is precise—you should not confuse probability with certainty. If the odds in favor of something happening are 4-to-1, it still means that, in 20 of a 100 cases, it will not occur.

Frankly, we do not like North's raise to two spades. Playing four- or five-card majors, we would respond with one-no-trump. Actually, North's misbid worked well. South would have raised a one-no-trump response to game and, had East found a diamond lead, that contract would have gone the way of all flesh.

West started by cashing three high diamonds, East discarding a club, then shifted to the deuce of hearts. Declarer won in hand, drew trumps in four rounds as West let go of two diamonds, and then was faced with the prospect of finding a parking-place for the club loser. Obviously, the heart suit offered the only hope.

When South continued by cashing the king of hearts, East quite naturally followed with the ten. For those of us who have the benefit of looking at all four hands, the rest is easy. Play a heart to the ace and, when everyone follows, the 13th heart provides a discard for the club loser.

However, the percentages favor a 4-2 break of six missing cards over a 3-3 split. A further confirmation of the odds is that East is far more likely to have been dealt a doubleton 10 9 of hearts than specifically J 10 9. Then there was West's shift to a low heart to be considered.

Taking all these factors into account, declarer adopted what we consider to be an entirely reasonable line. South led a heart and finessed the eight! It was just one of those days that went against the percentages. We have all experienced them!

Fatherhood in the cards, finally, for Warren Beatty

LOS ANGELES — Warren Beatty and his co-star in the upcoming film "Bugsy," Annette Bening, announced Monday that they're having a baby.

Beatty

"We are happy to confirm that we are looking forward to the birth of a child early next year," the couple said in a statement issued by the actor's publicist, Andrea Jaffe.

Beatty, 54, has been linked romantically over the years with some of the world's most prominent women, including Madonna, Diane Keaton and Joan Collins.

But he has never before had a child, Jaffe said.

Bening, 33, earned an Oscar nomination for "The Grifters" and appears in the current release "Regarding Henry," starring Harrison Ford. She also was in "Postcards from the Edge" and "The Great Outdoors."

Some of the films Beatty appeared in included "Dick Tracy," "Shampoo," "Heaven Can Wait" and "Reds."

Asked about marriage plans, Jaffe said no further details would be released. Bening's publicist, Nancy Seltzer, confirmed that the statement was genuine but had no further comment.

DURHAM, N.C. — Choreographer Anna Sokolow was honored for her lifetime achievement in modern dance.

Sokolow

Ms. Sokolow, 80, received the 1991 Samuel H. Scripps-American Dance Festival Award at a Sunday night ceremony at Duke University. The $25,000 award was established in 1981 to honor modern dance choreographers.

"This evening is special to me and I can't thank you enough," Ms. Sokolow said.

The tribute included a 1979 videotaped conversation with Ms. Sokolow and footage of the choreographer rehearsing a dancer for a performance of her 1955 "Rooms." "Rooms" was based on her own experience as a Russian emigre living with her parents, brother and sisters in an apartment in New York City's Lower East Side.

Ms. Sokolow, who began her dance training with Martha Graham and Louis Horst at the Neighborhood Playhouse in New York City, was a member of the Graham company during the 1930s, when she founded her own dance company.

NEW YORK — Was it too good to be true — the thought that Donald Trump would marry Marla Maples without a prenuptial agreement?

Maybe.

Despite earlier indications, it appears Trump may yet get his fiancee to sign on the dotted line before he says "I do."

The matter is discussed in the last line of an article in the July 22 issue of People magazine. Asked if she would sign a prenuptial like the first Mrs. Trump, Maples told People:

"I don't think we're doing it that way" and "This relationship is going to be built on trust — and that's it."

But Maples backed off a bit in a statement issued Monday, after the People comments ran under large headlines in the New York tabloids.

"My statement in People was not conclusive as to the issue of prenuptials, nor at this time is it of any great significance and rates little thought," Maples said.

Trump and first-wife Ivana were divorced in December after she challenged a prenuptial agreement. Ultimately, she settled with the financially ailing developer for $10 million, ownership of homes in Manhattan and Connecticut, use of their Florida mansion one month a year, and $300,000 annually in child support.

DETROIT — A painting by Chrysler Corp. Chairman Lee Iacocca raised $1,100 for the Detroit Institute of Arts, which held a celebrity auction to help offset cuts in state aid.

Iacocca

Iacocca painted the word Detroit and dotted the "i" with a Chrysler logo. The work drew a winning bid of $1,100 from Cal Odom. It also was the highest bid for any of the 54 items sold Sunday at Riverfront Towers.

"I'm a big Iacocca fan," Odom said. "He stands for what American business should be."

A Detroit Red Wings jersey signed by star Steve Yzerman sold for $435 and a drawing of baseballs by Detroit Tigers broadcaster Ernie Harwell drew a $225 bid. About 100 people paid $75 to $125 to attend the event, which raised about $23,000 for the art institute.

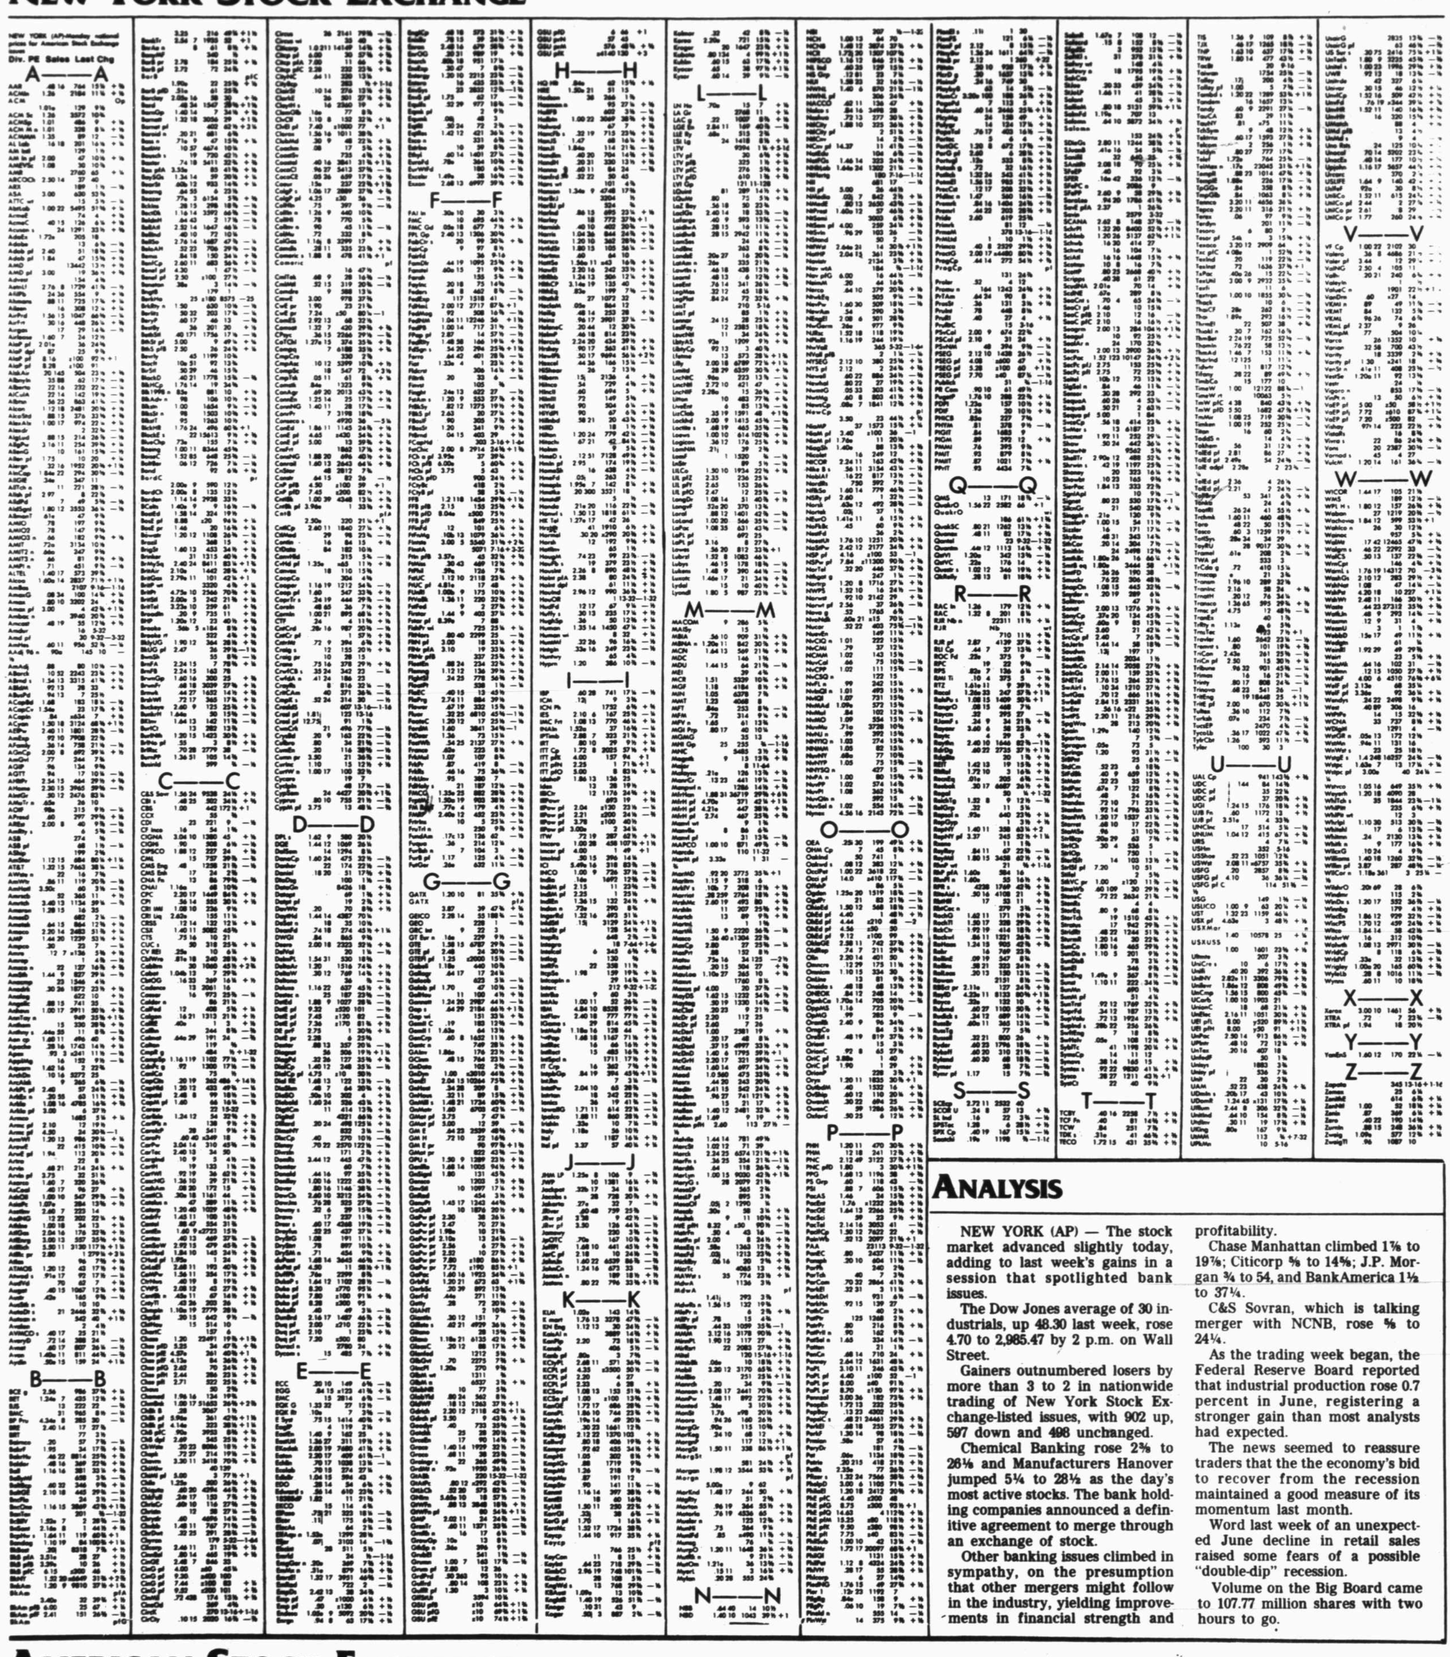
NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE



ANALYSIS

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market advanced slightly today, adding to last week's gains in a session that spotlighted bank issues.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 48.30 last week, rose 4.70 to 2,985.47 by 2 p.m. on Wall Street.

Gainers outnumbered losers by more than 3 to 2 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 902 up, 597 down and 498 unchanged.

Chemical Banking rose 2⅜ to 26¼ and Manufacturers Hanover jumped 5¼ to 28¼ as the day's most active stocks. The bank holding companies announced a definitive agreement to merge through an exchange of stock.

Other banking issues climbed in sympathy, on the presumption that other mergers might follow in the industry, yielding improvements in financial strength and profitability.

Chase Manhattan climbed 1⅞ to 19⅞; Citicorp ⅝ to 14⅝; J.P. Morgan ¾ to 54, and BankAmerica 1⅛ to 37¼.

C&S Sovran, which is talking merger with NCNB, rose ⅝ to 24¼.

As the trading week began, the Federal Reserve Board reported that industrial production rose 0.7 percent in June, registering a stronger gain than most analysts had expected.

The news seemed to reassure traders that the the economy's bid to recover from the recession maintained a good measure of its momentum last month.

Word last week of an unexpected June decline in retail sales raised some fears of a possible "double-dip" recession.

Volume on the Big Board came to 107.77 million shares with two hours to go.

THE REAL VALUE OF LEASING AN S-CLASS SEDAN TODAY.

The rewards of driving a Mercedes-Benz. Of course you covet the magnificent S-Class sedan. But you wonder: Is leasing a Mercedes right for the times? Yes. Because right now, leasing can help make what may have been slightly beyond your reach within your means.

Higher resale value – Lower monthly payment. Since two factors that determine monthly payments are interest rate and resale value, and since the cars of Mercedes-Benz, as a line, have consistently had the highest resale value in America,* it could actually cost less to lease a 1991 Mercedes than you thought possible.

Like no other dealers in the world.

Take advantage of our special leasing program.† For a limited time only.

BRITT IMPORTS
1004 South Midkiff Midland • 563-3095 • 699-7993

*Cars sold continuously, 1979–88. †Available exclusively from Mercedes-Benz Credit Corp. Excludes Coupe and SL models. © 1991 Authorized Mercedes-Benz Dealers.

Prices retreat

After climbing 43 cents to reach two-month highs Friday, oil prices retreated on the New York Mercantile Exchange Monday.

West Texas Intermediate for August delivery dropped 25 cents to close at $21.47 per barrel.

The move prompted local crude puchasers such as Scurlock Permian Corp. and Texaco Trading and Transportation to drop their posted price 25 cents to $20.25.

August contracts for natural gas rose 0.04 cents to close at $1.169 per Mcf.

NCNB earnings

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — NCNB Corp., in the midst of merger talks with C&S/Sovran Corp. that would make it one of the nation's largest banks, Monday reported a modest increase in second-quarter earnings.

The Charlotte-based bank holding company said its profits for the period ended June 30 were $142.2 million, up from $137 million in the same quarter last year. Earnings per common share were down in the quarter, to $1.25, from $1.30 in the same three months in 1990.

Suit settled

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — Polaroid Corp. on Monday said it will receive $925 million to settle an infringement lawsuit against Eastman Kodak Co. over Polaroid's instant photography patent. The settlement of the 15-year dispute was slightly above the $909.5 million originally awarded last fall. This was believed to be the largest such award in history.

Colombian well gives Triton boost

■ Partners in field say find is a 'world-class' prospect, one that could produce 1 billion barrels of oil or more.

Associated Press

DALLAS — Triton Energy Corp. has become a hit on Wall Street since last week's announcement of the company's role in a big oil find in Colombia.

Triton closed up $1.50 at $25 Monday, a record high. Volume was 1.83 million shares, ninth most-active on the New York Stock Exchange, compared to average daily volume of about 310,000.

The stock traded about $20 earlier this month and was as low as $4 late last year.

Triton last Tuesday said a well in northeast Colombia tested at a production rate of 6,680 barrels of oil and 22.1 cubic feet of natural gas per day.

Triton's partners in the field say it is a "world class" prospect, one that could produce 1 billion barrels of oil or more.

If so, Triton, which had $256 million of revenue in its 1990 fiscal year, could at least double its reserves through its 20 percent stake. Some reports have said the field could hold 2 billion to 3 billion barrels of oil.

On Monday, Morgan Stanley & Co. added Triton to its model portfolio of stocks. The company's energy analyst, Monroe Helm, has had a "buy" recommendation for the stock since it was at $17 a share.

He said the stock could rise to $30 a share on near-term expectations of the additional oil the find will give Triton's reserves. Other analysts have targeted Triton's stock for $26 to $28.

"The stock is going to move on the asset value of the find," Helm said. "This is a major discovery."

The well has "exceeded people's expectations," he said. "The market's coming to realize you don't find world class oilfields everyday."

The discovery seals a remarkable turnaround for the company. Triton stock traded around $4 a share late last year. Triton has since finished a restructuring to help its balance sheet, including selling $166 million in assets.

Company officials did not return phone calls for comment Monday.

More tests will be needed to precisely gauge the size of the field, in a remote region called the Llanos Basin.

British Petroleum and Total C.F.P. of France, each have a 40 percent interest in the field.

BP, operator of the well that produced last week's test results, gave an upbeat assessment of it at a meeting with analysts Friday.

The biggest winner from the find could be Colombia's state-run oil company, Ecopetrol, which has an option to take 50 percent interest in the discovery and thus halve the stake of the other companies.

Funds frozen

Mehmet Hassan and his wife, Elsie, of Manalapan, N.J., were among depositors not able to withdraw funds from the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co. in Newark Monday. The company's board of directors has voted to allow state insurance officials to take over the financially troubled life insurer.

Industrial production up, inventories down

WASHINGTON (AP) — Industrial production rose 0.7 percent in June, its third straight advance, the government said Monday. Analysts cited a second report, showing further inventory shrinkage in May, as suggesting room for continued output — and more jobs.

Together, the reports show the industrial economy, which had slumped for two years, continued a moderate recovery from the recession.

"As long as demand is up, producers are going to have to pick up production because inventories are just not available," said economist Evelina Tainer of the First National Bank of Chicago.

"Production gains will promote income growth and that's good news for consumers," she added.

In addition to the robust industrial performance in June, the Federal Reserve report showed output even stronger in April and May than first thought. It revised the April figure to 0.5 percent from 0.3 percent, and the May number to 0.7 percent from 0.5 percent.

"These data support the view that the economy has indeed come out of recession," said economist Marilyn Schaja of Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette Securities in New York.

Ms. Tainer and Thomas F. Carpenter, an economist with ASB Capital Management in Washington, noted that automakers have announced plans to boost production by 25 percent in the third quarter.

"So, there's no reason to believe the pace will slack off very much," Carpenter contended.

The Fed report said production of motor vehicles posted another sizable increase in June. Excluding this category, overall output still rose 0.6 percent.

Other consumer durables, including appliances, furniture and carpeting, "also rose noticeably for the fourth successive month," the report continued. "By contrast, output of non-durable consumer goods excluding residential utilities has risen only slightly in recent months."

"Production of business equipment other than motor vehicles, which declined over the fall and winter months, rose a bit in April and was unchanged in May and June. Production of construction supplies advanced substantially in June, after appreciable gains in April and May ... output of steel, textiles and paper increased sharply," it said.

In Monday's second report, the Commerce Department said business inventories shrank 0.5 percent in May, to a seasonally adjusted $812.5 billion. It was the fourth straight decline.

The lean inventory level suggests that any growth in consumer spending could quickly spur production to keep up with demand and thus create new jobs.

The report also suggested that demand may be on the rise. Business sales, it said, were up 1.0 percent to a seasonally adjusted $536.4 billion. That followed a revised 1.5 percent gain in April.

The Fed said its industrial production index in June stood at 106.9 percent of its 1987 base of 100.

Japanese steel firm plans LTV investment

■ Announcement gives creditors broader picture of what LTV Corp. will look like after emerging from bankruptcy.

DALLAS (AP) — A Japanese steel producer, Sumitomo Metal Industries Ltd., would invest $200 million in LTV Corp. when the U.S. company ends its long-running bankruptcy reorganization, LTV said today.

The investment is conditioned on LTV settling a dispute with a federal agency over $3 billion in underfunded pension plans, reaching a new contract with steel workers and achieving confirmation of its Chapter 11 plan, LTV said.

"It's simply an expression of interest by them and a plan to invest provided all these conditions are met," said Charles Palmer, spokesman for LTV, the nation's third-largest steel producer.

The companies are talking to reach a detailed agreement.

Sumitomo's investment would give LTV badly needed cash when it emerges from bankruptcy. The announcement gives creditors a broader picture of what the company will look like at that time.

Creditors have filed many motions to U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Burton Lifland in preparation for a hearing in New York today. Some creditors have asked for a court-appointed examiner to speed up the $6 billion reorganization, which enters its sixth year Wednesday.

One group asked for a trustee to oversee the company's aerospace and defense unit, which LTV plans to sell to raise money to reimburse the underfunded pension plans of its steel unit. Aerospace and Defense accounted for one-third of LTV's $6 billion in revenue last year.

The pension fund reimbursement, occurring after LTV lost a Supreme Court decision to the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corp., is the key part of the reorganization.

The PBGC, a federal agency that insures the pensions of U.S. workers, and LTV had disputed the liability for the funds since the company's Chapter 11 filing.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Buyer usually comes out ahead paying cash

By Bill Doyle

Q. I have $15,000 from a law suit settlement and plan to purchase a new car. I wish to pay cash but a friend advises me not to do so. He tells me to put the $15,000 in a certificate of deposit, then take out a $15,000 home equity loan and use that money to buy the car. He says this will give me a tax deduction and also save money, compared to purchasing the car with cash.

Doyle

What is your opinion on this?

A. You are correct, of course. Pay cash for the car. When you have money available to make a purchase, you come out ahead by obtaining a loan only if the interest rate on the money you borrow is lower than the interest you collect on your money. It's a cinch home equity loan interest would be higher than CD interest.

Your friend, no doubt, is suggesting a home equity loan because, along with home mortgage interest, it would be deductible on your income tax return. Beginning this year, no part of so-called "personal interest" on auto loans, credit cards, student loans, charge accounts and such is deductible.

Even with a home equity loan, you would come out a loser. There now are three federal income tax brackets — 15, 28 and 31 percent. So a tax deduction for an interest payment or anything else shaves your tax bill only by the applicable percentage.

If you pay $2,000 annual interest on a home equity loan, the $2,000 tax deduction will reduce your income tax by either $300, $560 or $620, depending on your tax bracket. Your net cost for that year would be either $1,700, $1,440 or $1,380.

Q. An automobile salesman gave me a chart showing I would actually make money by putting into a CD the money I have to buy a car, rather than paying cash.

The numbers are all there, in black and white. What do you say to that?

A. I've seen lots of similar charts. Rather than black and white, call the numbers shades of grey — for distortion of facts — the darkest of which is that you would have to come up with money to make loan payments. And that would more than offset the interest you would get from a CD.

Q. Interest on virtually all loans, except those obtained to buy municipal bonds paying tax-free interest, used to be tax deductible. What changed that?

A. The Tax Reform Act of 1986. One provision of that very complicated piece of federal legislation phased out those deductions.

You were allowed to deduct 65 percent of your personal interest in 1987, 40 percent in 1988, 20 percent in 1989, 10 percent in 1990 and zero as of 1991.

Q. Is all home mortgage and home equity loan interest deductible on federal income tax returns?

A. Not all. In general, you may not take a deduction for interest paid on the portion of mortgage and/or home equity loan that at the time the debt is incurred exceeds the home purchase price plus the cost of additions and improvements. You lose the deduction if the total of the mortgage and/or home equity loan tops the home's market value when you obtain the loan. And interest deductions are limited to mortgages no higher than $1 million and home equity loans no higher than $100,000.

These regulations apply to a first and second home, such as your principal residence and a vacation place.

There are exceptions to the rules. You're still entitled to a tax deduction for interest on that part of a mortgage or home equity loan that exceeds the limits mentioned above, if you use the excess loan proceeds to pay educational or medical expenses.

This gives you an out, if you obtain an over-the-limit home equity loan to send a child to college or if serious illness runs up family medical bills.
